Children quickly learn that if they raise their parents' tempers they may get paddled. Fortunately for Kathy Follett, only temperatures were raised this weekend and dog paddling was the only activity she shared with her mother, Jennifer, at the Doug Russell Pool.

Air France hijackers free two hostages

Associated Press

The Arabic-speaking hijackers of an Air France jetliner carrying 63 people today released two hostages, an ailing mother and daughter, at Tehran airport, the official Iranian news agency IRNA reported.

The agency said the two were led to a medical unit at Mehrabad Airport for treatment. Their identities and conditions were not given.

The Boeing 737 landed in the Iranian capital after the hijackers reportedly threatened to blow it up if the Iranian government refused to allow an emergency landing.

There were believed to be three hijackers. There was no confirmed word on their weapons or nationalities.

Iran's state-run media did not report a possible motive for the hijacking.

But the French news agency Agence France-Presse received two telephone calls at its Tehran office claiming responsibility on behalf of Islamic groups opposed to French policies.

IRNA, in reports monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, also said Iranian war planes escorted the hijacked aircraft from over the northwestern city of Tabriz to Tehran. After landing, it was surrounded by Iranian security forces, and the engines were kept running.

"We had no desire to have them land here. But we were forced to accept," said a spokesman at Iran's foreign ministry, reached by telephone from Beirut, Lebanon. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The spokesman said foreign ministry officials were at the airport, and that the hijackers had not issued any demands or ultimatums. "We will not open negotiations until they ask for it," he said.

At the hijackers' request, an Arabic translator had been provided, he said. The language of Iran is Farsi.

"They asked for food, water, beverages and fuel," the spokesman said. Food and refreshments were sent aboard, he said. It was unclear whether the Boeing 737 was refueled.

An official at the airport control tower told The AP there had been no contacts with the hijackers since the food was sent aboard.

The Iranian capital was the Boeing 737's fourth stop since hijackers took over the plane Tuesday during a flight from Frankfurt, West Germany, to Paris and demanded it be flown to Tehran. Earlier stops were in Geneva, Switzerland; Beirut, Lebanon; and Larnaca, Cyprus.

IRNA said the hijackers were "Arabic speaking persons" who most likely were Lebanese. But Swiss government officials said earlier the hijackers appeared to be Iranian, noting that they spoke heavily accented English and "poor Arabic."

One of the plane's stewards escaped from the craft Tuesday night while it was being refueled at Larnaca, and Air France headquarters in Paris identified him as Deniel Egea, about 30.

In a telephone interview in Cyprus with a French reporter, Egea said he believed there were three hijackers.

Iran's revolutionary Islamic government had said upon word of the hijacking that the plane would not be allowed to land in Tehran. However, Tehran radio said that despite repeated warnings by the Iranian air force and civil aviation authorities, the airliner entered Iranian airspace early today intending to land at the airport in Tabriz, about 330 miles northwest of Tehran.

The Tabriz airport was closed, forcing the plane to continue to Tehran, the radio said. The pilot then contacted the Tehran air traffic control tower and appealed for emergency landing rights, saying the hijackers had threatened to blow up the aircraft if permission was again denied, the radio said.

"The Iranian authorities, concerned about saving the lives of the passengers, allowed the aircraft to land and the aircraft landed," the radio reported.

Agence France-Presse said the first anonymous caller in Tehran demanded that French authorities release five people held in connection with the 1980 assassination attempt on Bakhtiar, who now lives in exile in Paris.

Hospital district lowering tax rate

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Effective tax rates for the Midland County Hospital District, set at 7 cents per $100 valuation in 1983, will be lowered for fiscal year 1984, it was announced at a news conference this morning.

The rate will be set at .0606, or 6.6 cents per $100 valuation, according to Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson. "The tax funds are used to reimburse the hospital for caring for indigent patients and the remainder then goes to pay for the principle and interest expenses of the 1978 ($10 million construction) bond issue," he said.

Indigent care expenses, budgeted at $1.8 million, are expected to climb to $2.2 million in fiscal year 1984, which ends Sept. 31. Indigent care expenses totaled $1.43 million in fiscal year 1983.

The Midland County tax base rate expanded about 21.5 percent from the previous year, according to the Midland County Tax Appraisal Board. The lowered effective tax rate should bring about the same amount of taxes to the hospital district as last year, Branson said.

In other items discussed at the news conference, Branson noted MMH had been awarded the maximum three-year accreditation from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH). The survey, completed in May, is a voluntary study in which the hospital entered for a fee of between $8,000 and $9,000.

"It's the standard of excellence in the hospital community," Branson said, congratulating MMH Vice President of Quality Assurance John Holt and Coordinator of Quality Assurance/Risk Management Lyn Story.

The survey resulted in only 27 recommendations for improvement compared to 53 recommendations in the 1981 JCAH survey. In 1980, the hospital received 101 recommendations for improvement, 27 of which were "major enough to negatively impact the decision," according to Branson.

Paul Johnson, one of the three-member accreditation team, told Branson during the summation conference that the number of recommendations he would recommend was the lowest he had ever recommended for a hospital, Branson said.

The recommendations "had to do in good part with documentation," he said, adding the JCAH feels that if a procedure isn't documented, it wasn't done.

Hospitals which receive accreditation from the JCAH, a private, not-for-profit agency based in Chicago, are not surveyed by the federal government, he said.

Branson also said a request to transfer the $3.4 million certficate of need (CON) for the chemical dependency facility project has been submitted to the Texas Health Facilities Agency (THFC) by Davis and Davis, CON attorneys in Austin. Camelback Hospitals and Samaritan Health Service, both of Phoenix, Ariz., will develop the project in a joint venture. MMH received approval from the THFC for the drug and alcohol treatment center in July 1982.

Despite special parole, man may not see his dying son

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Mass. — A 2-year-old boy dying of cancer and too weak to speak may not live long enough to share a few minutes with his father, a convicted burglar being granted a special parole to be with him, a family member said.

"I'm sorry. Matthew is failing right now. He's dying. I can't answer any more questions," his weeping aunt and guardian, Linda Mello, said Tuesday at the door of her Westport home, where the child is spending his last days.

"It's just minute by minute," Mrs. Mello said.

Matthew's father, David Hutchins, was granted parole Tuesday with release scheduled for Thursday at the earliest, said James J. McCarthy, spokesman for the state Parole Board.

He did not say whether release could come sooner if the boy's health deteriorated more quickly than predicted by doctors, who had said the child had several weeks to live.

Joseph Landolfi, a prisons spokesman, said the state has arranged for emergency furloughs in similar cases, but he knew of no such request by Hutchins.

"The Department of Correction is treating this very humanely," said Carol Pepi, a pastoral minister in the chaplain's service at Norfolk. "They want to see it come to a decent conclusion."

Hutchins asked the parole board for time with Matthew to "share some of his pain" during the child's final battle with cancer.

The last time Hutchins saw his son, on Friday in the Norfolk state prison conference room, the boy was confined to a small wheelchair, too weak to speak.

"It was a very sad, sad scene," prison Capt. Nobert Flores said.

Officials on Tuesday declined to allow Hutchins to be interviewed.

In a letter to the parole board supporting Hutchins' parole request, Ms. Pepi said, "The burden he has already experienced with his son's terminal illness is beyond anything that the state could impose.

"For most of the past year, Dave and I have talked about little else. Before last Friday, the last time he saw Matthew, the boy was still able to walk and to laugh. But I understand from one of the other chaplains on duty that Friday's meeting was very touching and very sad. Every part of this tragic story has been gnawing away at this man.

"We're talking about a decent man who knows about the mistakes he has made in his life. And that is nothing compared to the sense of powerlessness he feels at not being able to come to the aid of his own son. It's tearing him to pieces."

Mondale, Ferraro bring campaign to three Texas cities in two days

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — With a new poll showing them trailing President Reagan in Texas, the Democratic presidential ticket of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro today were scheduled to make their first appearance in the state.

Mondale and Rep. Ferraro, chosen as his running mate two weeks ago, were to visit Austin, Houston and San Antonio in the two-day swing as they seek support in a state Democratic leaders consider crucial to the presidential election.

In Austin, the two planned to speak to a late-afternoon rally on the Capitol steps. In Houston, they will answer questions from community college students Thursday morning, then travel to San Antonio for another rally.

The Texas tour is part of a campaign through the South, an area where many Democrats say President Reagan is ahead.

GOP pollster Lance Tarrance of Houston on Tuesday released a new survey which he said showed Reagan with "a substantial lead in Texas."

Tarrance said the poll, commissioned by the Reagan campaign, surveyed 600 registered voters.

It showed that if the election where held now, Reagan would beat Mondale by a 59 percent to 32 percent margin in the state. When the complete ticket of Reagan and Vice President George Bush was pitted against Mondale and Ms. Ferraro, the GOP margin widened slightly to 60 percent to 32 percent.

"The solid lead that President Reagan holds over Walter Mondale shows that the president continues to enjoy the widespread support he has earned among Texans," said Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of Reagan's Texas campaign.

"Walter Mondale certainly did not help himself with Texans by naming as his running mate a member of Congress from New York City. I am confident that President Reagan and Vice President Bush will carry Texas in 1984 just as they did in 1980," Tower said.

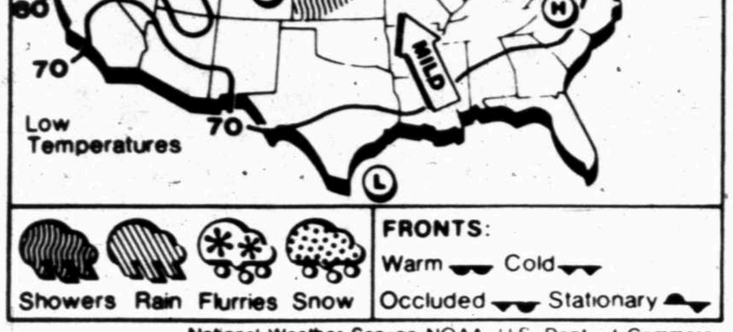

No Democrat has become president without carrying Texas, the nation's third-largest state, and Democratic officials have said they expect Mondale and Ms. Ferraro to campaign extensively in the state.

The National Weather Service forecasts sunny, mild weather for most of the nation through Thursday. Cool weather is expected in the West; showers are predicted for the eastern Plains.

Partly cloudy skies due in Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports.

Skies over the Permian Basin will be partly cloudy tonight and Thursday, and there's even a chance for some rain, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight's low will be in the upper 60s, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and winds from the southeast at 5-10 mph. For Thursday, isolated late afternoon thunderstorms are predicted. The high will be in the low 90s, and winds will be from the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Tuesday's high of 89 was 16 degrees below the record for the date of 105, set in 1944, while the overnight low of 72 was 16 degrees above the 1936 record low of 56.

STATE

Showers and isolated thunderstorms were dampening portions of the state early today in conjuction with a weak stationary frontal system in Texas.

Rain activity dotted northern portions of the Panhandle, areas of the South Plains and the Permian Basin. Other showers were also ocurring near the Galveston coast.

Elsewhere across the state, skies were fair to partly cloudy as a surface high pressure system dominated the weather picture.

Winds were light at 5 to 10 mph.

Temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s, except in the 50s over the mountains. Early morning extremes ranged from 58 degrees at Marfa to 80 degrees near Corpus Christi.

The forecast called for widely scattered showers or thunderstorms over portions of east and northwest Texas. Otherwise, fair to partly cloudy in most sections. Highs will again be in the 80s and 90s today through Thursday.

NATION

August began with a boom over parts of the nation today, with thunderstorms packing up to an inch of rain drenching the South, the Plains and the Pacific Northwest.

In Southern California, meanwhile, another sunny day with temperatures in the low 90s was expected to grace the Summer Olympics.

Macon, Ga., received more than an inch of rain overnight, bringing the city's official rainfall total for July to 13.59 inches and breaking the month's rainfall record of 13.4 inches set in 1916.

Several families were forced from their homes near Rome, Ga., by the rising waters of the Oostanaula River, officials said, but no injuries were reported.

Hugh Atkins, emergency management director in Floyd County, Ga., said the area has received up to 8 inches of rain since Sunday.

Crews work to protect coastline

Associated Press

LAKE CHARLES, La. — Cleanup crews strung a U-shaped floating boom around the thickest part of an oil slick Tuesday and began sucking the crude into barges, trying to protect fragile coastal marshes that could be threatened by the spill from a grounded British tanker.

The slick was about two blocks wide and 12-14 miles long Tuesday night. The booms were strung to cup the oil about 3 miles shoreward of the ship.

"It (the oil slick) thins out too much after about 3 miles," said Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Jim Kosch.

He said the booms were being moved toward the ship gradually, and the oil vacuumed up as the booms moved.

The cleanup operation was expected to go on through the night, but at a slower pace, he said. "You wouldn't want to miss anything in the dark," he said.

The tanker Alvenus was loaded with almost 15 million gallons of crude oil when it strayed out of the deep water of the Calcasieu Ship Channel and ran aground Monday afternoon about 10 miles offshore. The collision opened a seam in three of the ship's seven compartments.

The initial gush of oil had slowed to an ooze by Tuesday evening, the Coast Guard said. The estimate was that at least 840,000 gallons — possibly as much as 1.2 million gallons — spewed into the Gulf during the initial hours.

Winds and currents kept the slick drifting westward roughly parallel to the coastline, Coast Guard spokesmen said.

No plans had been made for moving the 690-foot Alvenus or offloading the remaining cargo, said Lt. Kathleen Donohoe, a Coast Guard spokeswoman.

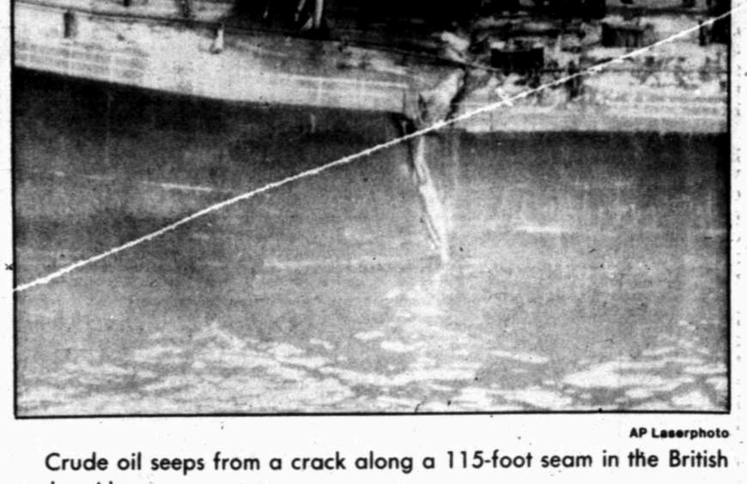

The Alvenus was headed for the Conoco refinery here when it hit the side of the dredged-out channel leading to the coast below Lake Charles, a major petroleum refining port.

She said there was no immediate danger to the shoreline — including two wildlife refuges within 40 miles of tanker.

"If it is not going to impact on land, we'd just let it stay out in the Gulf and dissipate," she said.

The Coast Guard said at first that the spill was estimated at 1.7 million gallons, but that was later revised downward.

The Lake Charles shipping agent for Alvenus Shipping said oil was no longer pouring from the 115-foot-long seam running up both sides of the tanker and across the deck.

Democrats concentrating on South

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. — Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro were kicking off a campaign through the South today, touting "a better future" with a drumbeat of patriotism, family values and equal opportunity.

In stop after stop, Mondale, the Democratic presidential nominee, points to his running mate, Ms. Ferraro, as evidence of how those qualities can add up to the American dream.

The pair planned appearances today at a cotton and soybean farm near Jackson, Miss., and the governor's mansion in Jackson before flying on to campaign in Texas through Thursday.

Mondale has indicated he considers the South so critical to his effort to win the White House that he is billing the stops in Mississippi and Texas as the kickoff of the campaign.

"We're trying to tell the South they're important," said Maxine Isaacs, Mondale's spokeswoman.

In 1980, Ronald Reagan won Mississippi with 49.4 percent of the popular vote to Jimmy Carter's 48.1 percent. In Texas, Reagan's margin over Carter was 55.3 percent to 41.4 percent.

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro opened their first swing since the Democratic National Convention nominated them with a rally of about 4,000 people Tuesday in Ms. Ferraro's New York congressional district of urban Queens. Addresses to about 1,500 at the National Urban League's annual meeting in Cleveland followed.

Mondale told the Urban League that the Democrats "have one national message to take everywhere, a message of hope, of opportunity, of opening doors."

In New York, Mondale ticked off Ms. Ferraro's rise from being the daughter of Italian immigrants, to becoming a prosecutor, to Congress.

"I'm not asking the American people to support us because there's a woman on the ticket," Mondale said. "I want your support because Geraldine Ferraro is on the ticket and deserves to be vice president of the United States."

In Cleveland, Ms. Ferraro said, "As a woman, I am honored that Fritz Mondale has chosen me to make history. But I also know something else. Until every American can dream of growing up to be president, the American dream will not be fulfilled for any of us."

Pollster Louis Harris, meanwhile, said Tuesday his latest survey indicated that the selection of Ms. Ferraro helped Mondale pull within two points of Reagan. The survey found Reagan ahead 51-46 when people were asked about the presidential contenders alone, but the gap narrowed to 50-48 when voters were asked to chose between Reagan-George Bush and Mondale-Ferraro.

Neither Mondale nor Ferraro mentioned President Reagan or Vice President Bush by name all day Tuesday.

But they still assailed the Reagan administration's economic program, and Mondale repeated his contention that higher taxes will be needed to combat the flood of federal red ink.

"The truth about the future is this: no matter who is elected in November, these deficits will be on the next president's desk," Mondale said. "And they must be cut."

He said, "The question is not whether taxes will be raised in 1985 — but how they'll be raised, and who will pay what. I want those choices known today — not after the election."

Reagan, in an interview with Atlanta television station WAGA taped last Friday and broadcast Tuesday, indicated he might agree to one or two debates with Mondale although he rejected Mondale's invitation for six sessions.

"I support the idea of a debate, debated in the last election and would do so in this next one," Reagan said. "I did not accept that statement of Vice President Mondale that ... we should have half a dozen or more debates," he said.

Poll shows Texans favor Reagan re-election

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas voters prefer President Reagan over Democratic challenger Walter Mondale by 59 percent to 32 percent, according to poll results released by U.S. Sen. John Tower, the Reagan-Bush Texas campaign chairman.

The poll results widened to 60-32 when the vice presidential nominees were added to the preference question, suggesting that Mondale's running mate, U.S. Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, is not helping the Democratic ticket in Texas, Tower told a Tuesday news conference on Capitol Hill.

"I don't think Mrs. Ferraro's gender has anything to do with it," said Tower, R-Texas. "I don't think anybody can tell you with great precision what either the positive or negative impact is of having a woman on the ticket."

Tower said Mondale and Ms. Ferraro, who is from New York, are considered "too liberal" by voters, who prefer Reagan's "right of center disposition."

"I think the fact that he (Reagan) has a Texan as a vice presidential candidate is significant in Texas," Tower said. "The fact that the Mondale people considered two Texans and rejected them, both of whom could be regarded as eminently qualified, and have elected instead to choose a liberal from the New York state, indicates that their ticket is neither geographically balanced nor philosophically balanced."

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros went to Mondale's Minnesota home before the Democratic convention to be interviewed as potential running mates for the former vice president.

The poll of 600 registered Texas voters was conducted by V. Lance Tarrance and Associates of Houston on July 27 and 28, shortly after Reagan and Vice President George Bush visited the state. Tower said the poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 4½ percent.

Tower said he had no geographical breakdown of the poll results, but that the Reagan-Bush ticket was "strong" in big cities like Houston and Dallas, in West Texas cities and in some rural West Texas areas.

Tower's news conference followed pollster Louis Harris' announcement that his latest survey, taken after the Democratic National Convention, showed Reagan-Bush with only a two-point lead, 50-48, over Mondale-Ferraro nationally.

Harris said at a breakfast meeting with reporters that the poll showed Mondale five points behind Reagan when voters were asked to chose between Reagan and Mondale alone, but the gap narrowed to two points when voters were asked to chose between the Reagan-Bush ticket and Mondale-Ferraro.

Reagan considers altering Polish sanctions

By MAUREEN SANTINI
AP White House Correspondent

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan is interrupting his secluded vacation to seek advice from the Vatican as he moves toward removing some of the economic sanctions he imposed against Poland to protest martial law.

The president and his national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, were conferring over lunch today with Archbishop Pio Laghi, the Vatican's ambassador to the United States.

With the ethnic Catholic vote one of the keys to the president's re-election strategy, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes stressed how important Reagan considers the views of the Roman Catholic Church about Poland, as well as such other issues as Central America and arms control.

Speakes' emphasis on the close consultations between Reagan and Pope John Paul II and his representatives on a variety of international issues was unusual.

It was also rare for the president to interrupt his 18-day vacation at his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains for such a meeting, especially since a White House aide said privately that Reagan already has decided to lift some of the sanctions.

Although Reagan is not Catholic, he is courting some of the same ethnic Catholic voters likely to be attracted to the Democratic vice presidential nominee, Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro, an Italian Catholic.

Speakes said Reagan was interested in the views of the pope because Poland is his native land and "he has a special insight into it."

Additionally, Speakes said, "The church is a strong force within the Polish community. It is one we have relied on to advocate the principles of freedom in the country."

Speakes, briefing reporters who accompanied the president to California, stressed that Reagan consults often with the pope.

"The president has valued the views of the Holy Father, Pope John Paul II, on a wide range of matters and particularly looks forward to having the benefit of his thinking on the current status of events in Poland," Speakes said.

A White House official, speaking on the condition that he remain anonymous, said, "You can expect the relief of some of the sanctions," with an announcement likely later this week.

The U.S. sanctions have cost Poland an estimated $10 billion to $12.5 billion. While some of the sanctions were eased in January, Poland's recent decision to grant amnesty to 632 political prisoners has enabled the administration to favorably consider easing still others.

"If you wish no harm to come to the hijacked Air France plane, you must release the five people in France who participated in the attack against Bakhtiar," the caller reportedly said. He said he belonged to a group called the Guardians of Islam.

Two people were killed in the failed attempt on Bakhtiar, last prime minister under deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi. Four of the five people involved in the attack were sentenced on March 10, 1982, to life in prison. The fifth received a 20-year sentence.

The news agecny said the second caller claimed to represent the Indian Branch of the Islamic Struggle and said the hijacking was to protest French support of Iraq and France's granting of political asylum to "terrorists."

The caller, speaking heavily accented English, claimed a Pakistani was aong the three hijackers aboard Flight 747.

There was no confirmed word on what weapons the hijackers might have, although Swiss officials said the pilot told them they apparently were carrying hand grenades, and Cypriot authorities mentioned knives and possibly unspecified explosives.

There had been a report during a refueling stop in Geneva that one of the passengers might have been shot, but Egea said the passengers and crew members were "remaining calm and there have been no health problems for them."

Airport sources in Larnaca said the steward escaped by pretending he wanted to help with the refueling.

Air France said the plane had 58 passengers, including the hijackers, and a crew of three men and three women when it was seized.

Ten injured when deputy's car hits bus

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A deputy who fell asleep at the wheel after working a night shift struck a church bus carrying 36 day-care students on an outing to a skating rink, slightly injuring 10, authorities say.

Travis County deputy Daniel Trevino, 27, had fallen asleep before the Tuesday afternoon collision, which injured 10 students, two teachers and Trevino.

None of the injuries were serious. All of the victims, including Trevino, were discharged after being treated at the Brackenridge Hospital emergency room.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Cedric Hudson said Trevino told investigators he had worked the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift at the Travis County Jail, and fell asleep at the wheel as he headed home.

There was no evidence the accident was alcohol-related, Hudson said.

The bus from the Manchaca Baptist Church Day Care was taking the 36 students, most of them between 6-to-10-year-olds, and five teachers to the Skate Ranch in Oak Hill. The bus was heading north on Manchaca Road when Trevino's southbound car crossed the center stripe in front of them.

Milton Otto, a Menchaca dentist who was two cars behind Trevino, saw the crash, which he said "sounded like an explosion."

"I skidded around and thought I was going to run into the bus, too. But I stopped just before I hit it. Then the kids started filing out of the bus one by one. Most of them were holding their mouths or something," Otto told the Austin-American Statesman.

Three crews of emergency medical technicians, a supervisor from Austin Emergency Medical Services and fire department volunteers treated the injured at the scene.

Gasoline prices go up today

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas motorists, who for many years paid the lowest gasoline tax in the nation, saw a 5-cent increase at the pumps today as state taxes went up to repair roads that officials say have gone to potholes.

The doubling of the gasoline tax is part of a triple-hike that hits the wallets of most Texans. The sales tax on cars went up from 4 percent to 5 percent and the annual motor vehicle registration fee was raised — as much as 200 percent for owners of new, small cars.

Gallon by gallon, car by car and license plate by license plate, Texans are paying to patch the highway system. The Legislature in July approved an overall $4.6 billion tax hike to pay for highway and school improvements.

The higher taxes for education funds — including a one-eighth percent hike in the state sales tax — are effective Oct. 2.

"I think you're going to find some people who will be disgruntled" with the higher tax at the gas pumps, said House Speaker Gib Lewis, who presided over the first tax hike in 13 years.

"I think they are only going to have to sit and think for one second about where the funds are going. They're going to the highways, so they can get to their jobs quicker and they can cut down on repairs to their cars from hitting the chuckholes," said the speaker.

The director of the Texas Service Station Association offers another way to live with higher taxes.

"There's nothing you can do about it. There's no use complaining about it. It's going to be there," Bill Ligon said of the gasoline tax hike.

The nickel-a-gallon gasoline tax rise will bring in $1.34 billion over the next three years — the single largest increase.

For car registration fees, lawmakers changed the whole system, scrapping the weight-based tax for a levy based on age on car.

Owners of new cars under 3,500 pounds paid $15.80 a year under the old system. Today it costs $46.30 a year to register any car — regardless of weight — made since 1981.

"Ecology-minded people who complied with the request from environmental and government leaders to get smaller cars are now going to pay more for license plates," said Bill Aleshire, Travis County tax assessor-collector.

Motorists whose registrations come up in August are the first facing the new fees.

Aleshire said the usual end-of-the-month crush for license plates and stickers was about 25 percent worse this week as motorists with July registrations tried to beat the hike.

Many drivers with August registrations tried to beat the hike by paying in July. For many, it was a worthless effort because of a highway department ruling that the new fees would be charged for August registrations.

"We had people showing up for the past two weeks for August plates who were upset that we were charging the new fees," said Aleshire, who has asked for an attorney general's opinion concerning when the new fees should have gone into effect.

Mayor of Jacinto City, arrested in topless bar, says he won't resign

HOUSTON (AP) — A suburban mayor who was arrested in a topless bar where employees said he harassed them while posing as a vice officer has vowed he will not resign because the city would lose a "damned good mayor."

"I'm not going to quit," Jacinto City Mayor Mike Blasingame said at a press conference Tuesday. "I've worked too darn hard. There have been too many major projects completed and too many on the drawing board for me to sit by and let them go."

Blasingame, Jacinto City Public Works Director John Lee Cooper II and restaurant worker George Edward Tracy were arrested last Friday at The Peppermint Place in east Houston.

Employees said the three men entered the nude bar at 2 a.m. and harassed patrons. The men were arrested after a club representative became suspicious and called police to confirm their identities.

Blasingame, 32, was not charged in the incident. Cooper, 33, was charged with impersonating a police officer and Tracy, 20, was charged with carrying a weapon.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Millin said Blasingame escaped charges because, as a mayor, he might be considered a magistrate.

"He is off the hook," Millin said. "There is nothing to charge him with. Our appeals section thinks the courts probably would decide he's a peace officer."

Blasingame said he will not talk about the incident until he testifies in Cooper's trial, which is expected to begin in three to four months.

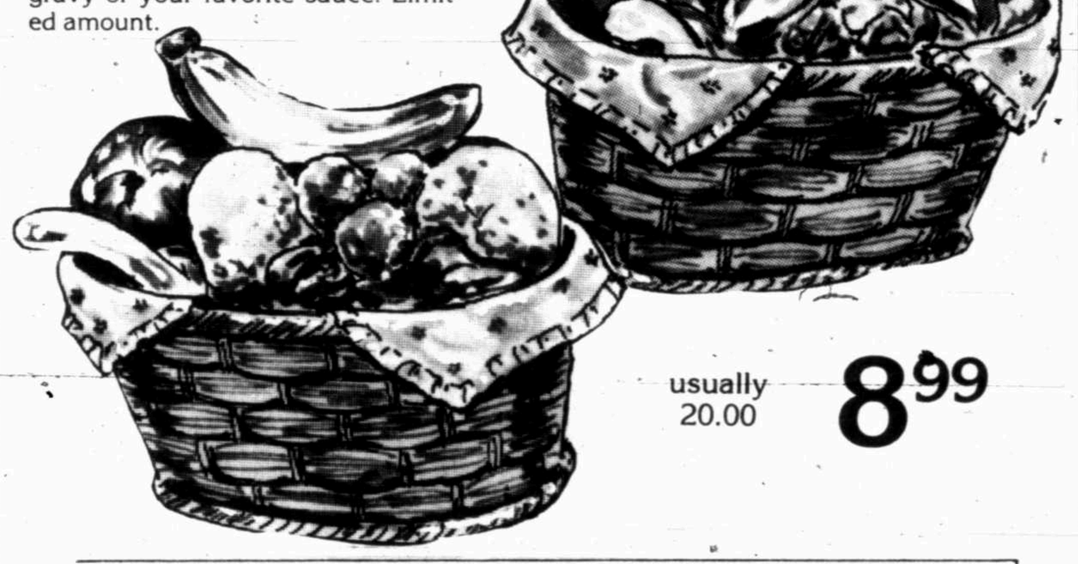

"Only then will I talk and tell the truth and tell the episode," he said.

Governors to unite to fight deficit

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The new chairman of the National Governors' Association acknowledges his colleagues are badly split along partisan lines on economic policy, but says they will unite after the Nov. 6 general election to work toward slashing the federal deficit.

Kansas Gov. John Carlin pledged the governors will be ready to talk about tax hikes and spending cuts with whoever wins the White House. He set up a bipartisan task force about various tax proposals to prepare.

Partisan rhetoric and resolutions about the deficit and taxes dominated the final day of the conference on Tuesday, with both President Reagan and Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale making their cases to the group in long-distance telephone calls.

"Come November, we're going to be ready to be active partners in all the discussions on the deficit," Carlin told a closing news conference after succeeding to the chairmanship. "Whatever queasiness exists now will disappear after the election."

But partisanship was the order of the day on Tuesday.

The Democratic governors passed a resolution praising Mondale for his admission that taxes will have to be raised next year and also taking a swipe at Reagan.

The Republicans adopted a two-line statement in line with the Reagan campaign themes.

"The Republican Party believes spending should be cut before taxes are raised. President Reagan will raise taxes as a last resort; Mr. Mondale can't wait to," said the entire GOP resolution.

Neither resolution was presented to the final session and remained strictly statements of each party's governors.

Neither Reagan nor Mondale actually attended the meeting, but Reagan telephoned from his ranch in California, while Mondale talked from Minneapolis to a closed Democratic governors' breakfast.

In Mondale's 15-minute telephone discussion, Robb said Mondale told the governors he appreciated their support and their stand behind his call for big reductions in the deficit.

The deficit was not on the agenda for this conference, but the governors had called in February for tax hikes and spending cuts to slice at least $200 billion out of the cumulative deficit.

At the final session, the governors formally adopted a policy calling for pay equity for all public employees, backing elmination of lower pay for job categories traditionally dominated by women.

The Democratic governors did not specifically endorse Mondale's deficit-slashing plan, but praised his courage and condemned Reagan. They did, however, support moves generally similar to Mondale's ideas.

Five whites charged in alleged racial attacks

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Five white men have been ordered to stand trial on felony charges after allegedly shooting at and firebombing the houses of two black families to drive them from a mostly white neighborhood.

A black man riding a bicycle also was shot and wounded during the series of attacks that took place July 10 and 11, authorities said.

Judge James M. Shaker on Tuesday ordered the five to stand trial on a variety of felony charges.

Witnesses, including a 16-year-old youth arrested with the defendants, testified that the men fired shots and hurled firebombs at the houses because they wanted to drive the black families from the neighborhood.

Sanctions threatened against unsafe mental health institutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is threatening to cut off money to some institutions for the mentally retarded if "appalling" conditions found during recent inspections are not corrected, says Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler.

Mrs. Heckler told the Senate subcommittee on mental health Tuesday that the department recently inspected 17 intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded and found all were substandard, with nine having major health and safety deficiencies.

"I assure you, Mr. Chairman, that I find this situation appalling," Mrs. Heckler told the subcommittee chairman, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn. "And I find it unacceptable."

She said that where substandard conditions were found, state Medicaid directors were given 30 days "to give us a firm, detailed plan for correcting those deficiencies within 180 days. Failure to deliver an acceptable plan or inadequate implementation of that plan will result in termination of the facilities from the Medicaid program."

Mrs. Heckler said HHS inspectors found many facilities had filthy kitchens, poor menu planning, inadequate training of patients to feed themselves and lengthy delays in serving meals.

Some were not meeting sanitation and physical environment standards, with heating, ventilation, cleanliness and general maintenance deficiencies common, she said.

"In some places we found very high usage of major tranquilizers, usually in the absence of effective behavior management programs designed to reduce dependency on these chemical restraints," Mrs. Heckler said. "One facility was found to use major tranquilizers with 36 percent of the clients; we normally become alarmed with a 20 percent rate of usage."

Some facilities had fire protection deficiencies such as improper fire walls and doors. "In one case, we found large numbers of clients who were not capable of self-preservation living in residences that could not protect the clients in the event of fire," Mrs. Heckler said.

"We decided this condition constituted an immediate threat to the clients' safety, and we terminated the facility's Medicaid agreement. The action has prompted the state to take immediate action to correct this life-threatening situation."

The federal government, through Medicaid, contributes about $16,000 per year for a patient in an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded, Mrs. Heckler said. In most cases, the state contributes an equal amount. Medicaid is the federal-state health care program.

Weicker noted that HHS sent a telegram July 27 to an intermediate care facility in Mystic, Conn., threatening a funds cutoff in 10 days unless conditions there are corrected. He said there had been 12 reported cases of rape and sexual abuse at the institution.

Burford swearing-in set despite congressional complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite lopsided votes against her in both houses of Congress, former Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne M. Burford is scheduled to be sworn in Thursday morning as head of an advisory panel on ocean and atmospheric policy.

The House on Tuesday voted 363-51 to register its opposition to Mrs. Burford's presidential appointment as chairwoman of the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere. The Senate voted 74-19 against Mrs. Burford last week.

But the votes were not binding, and President Reagan said last week he had no intention of honoring the request that he withdraw Mrs. Burford's name.

So early Thursday, Mrs. Burford is scheduled to be sworn in as the committee's leader. After the brief ceremony at the committee's headquarters, she will preside over her first meeting of the advisory committee she last weekend described as "a joke" and "a nothingburger."

The appointment outraged many Democrats and Republicans in Congress. But during the House debate on its resolution Tuesday, some Republicans charged the Democrats were out for a political lynching. And others said simply the Burford appointment wasn't that big a deal.

"Was this appointment dumb? It was dumb," said Rep. Guy Molinari, R-N.Y., who last year voted for a resolution citing Mrs. Burford for contempt of Congress.

"Was it insensitive? Sure, it was insensitive," he added.

"Now, having said that ... we're dealing with an advisory committee," he said, noting the panel sets no real policy. "Today, we're getting the political relish for that nothingburger," he said.

Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, Mrs. Burford's chief defender in Tuesday's debate, called the resolution "a Democratic football brought to the floor for political reasons."

Young noted the resolution referred to Mrs. Burford's tenure as flawed, and remarked: "Flawed? It's flawed in their minds only."

"If you stand for fairness and you stand for justice you'll vote this resolution down," Young said.

But Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., called the Burford appointment "an abomination. It is clearly intended as a payoff for what the president sees as a political debt."

Rep. Norman E. D'Amours, D-N.H., who sponsored the resolution as chairman of the House Merchant Marine subcommittee on oceanography, said Mrs. Burford's appointment "is totally unsupportable by anyone who cares about protecting our fragile environment."

He said the resolution "sends a clear message to the administration that the House feels Anne Burford is absolutely unfit" to head the panel.

And Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., chairman of one of the subcommittees involved in last year's EPA investigation, said Mrs. Burford's tenure "was wracked by scandal, mismanagement and an inappropriateness of activity unprecedented in the 13 years of the agency's existence. ..."

"Was it a national hallucination that under Mrs. Burford's ministrations the Environmental Protection Agency was abused, debased, degraded and very nearly dismantled?" he asked.

In Tuesday's vote, 254 Democrats and 109 Republicans voted for the resolution opposing Mrs. Burford's appointment. Two Democrats and 49 Republicans voted against the resolution.

McDonald's, others sued over massacre

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — A $2.5 million wrongful death suit was filed Tuesday on behalf of two of three surviving children of a woman killed in the San Ysidro massacre two weeks ago.

The lawsuit — filed on behalf of Christian Toscano Lopez and Jose German Toscano Lopez through their guardian, Anacleto Toscano Perez — was the first suit filed in the aftermath of the July 18 tragedy at the San Ysidro McDonald's restaurant. It left 22 people, including the gunman, James Oliver Huberty, dead.

The children's mother, Gloria Lopez-Gonzalez, 24, of Rosarito, Mexico, had been shopping in San Ysidro for a water bed and stopped at McDonald's for a snack. She and a friend were killed.

Named as defendants in the suit are the estate of Huberty; the McDonald's Corp.; its franchisee, Robert Colvin; Pacific Bell; and Juan Francisco Munoz Lopez, another surviving son of Gloria Lopez-Gonzalez.

Attorney James P. Frantz, who filed the lawsuit, said in the suit the surviving son was named a defendant because he was unable to give consent to join in the suit. The lawsuit said he is a minor and not represented by a guardian.

The suit claims that Pacific Bell, through its information operator, failed to give San Diego police the correct address of the shootings, creating what they claim was "unreasonable risk of injury or death by delaying rescue and treatment."

The suit says the information operator reported to police the shooting was taking place at 424 San Ysidro Blvd., when the correct address was 522 West San Ysidro Blvd.

When told of the suit, Pacific Bell spokesman Tom McNaghten said he could not comment extensively "until we determine how this took place. When we talk about an information operator, why would a person (in this instance) call an information operator? I don't understand how an information operator could have supposedly been involved."

The plaintiffs allege that McDonald's and Colvin owed the victims the duty to make the premises safe and failed to adequately warn customers of the risk and dangerous conditions that existed in the high-crime area.

Lance reported quitting job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Carter administration Budget Director Bert Lance is considering quitting as chairman of Walter Mondale's presidential campaign because he feels ignored, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified sources, said Lance was dejected by the limited role he has played in the campaign so far and by the continuing controversy over his appointment by Mondale two weeks ago.

Many in the Democratic Party criticized the appointment of Lance, saying a federal probe into his banking activities that led to his resignation from the Carter administration would taint the Mondale campaign, even though Lance was acquitted of any wrongdoing.

He is now trying to allay fears of some Mondale supporters that his tangled finances might eventually embarass the candidate, the Times said.

Lance has received an estimated $2 million in loans from Tennessee banker Jake Butcher, who is the subject of a continuing federal investigation. The Times reported unnamed sources close to that probe have said there is no evidence Lance will be implicated, but he is likely to figure in any negative publicity about Butcher because of the loans.

Lance has not accompanied Mondale and his running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York, on campaign trips, and was not even consulted about the current swing through the South, a Mondale aide told the newspaper.

Opposition Labor Party Leader Shimon Peres talks to reporters outside the Israeli president's residence in Jerusalem Tuesday.

Labor, Likud leaders talk about forming government

JERUSALEM (AP) — Labor Party leader Shimon Peres and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir met today for the first time since Israel's elections July 23 to discuss forming a bipartisan national unity government.

The meeting took place in Jerusalem's King David Hotel and came at the urging of President Chaim Herzog, who has the duty of selecting a prime minister-designate within the next two weeks to try to form a new government.

The Labor Party won 44 seats to Likud's 41 in the general elections. But neither party has been able to round up enough firm support from 13 smaller parties to obtain a majority of 61 seats in Israel's 120-member Knesset, or parliament, and Herzog has the option of picking either party to have first crack at forming a government.

The two party leaders, accompanied by other top party officials, met at a rectangular table covered with sandwiches and soft drinks in a hotel conference room. Shamir and Peres began the meeting by shaking hands across the table.

"I am always optimistic," Shamir, head of the governing Likud bloc, told reporters at the outset of the talks.

The idea of a bipartisan government was met with skepticism by a number of Israeli newspaper commentators and by Peres himself, who noted in a television interview Tuesday night that Labor and Likud failed to form a national unity government in the fall of 1983 because of policy differences.

Peres, in a television interview, said he agreed to meet his rival "in response to the people's will" but doubted the talks would succeed.

So far, neither Likud nor Labor has been able to line up enough support to form a coalition government without the help of each other.

One news report said the two men were considering alternating the premiership.

Peres pointed out that similar talks between Labor and Shamir's Likud bloc 10 months ago ended in a deadlock over foreign policy.

Dividing the two sides now are such vital questions as who would be the next prime minister in a joint government and what course to take on the future of the West Bank and its Palestinian population.

Said Peres: "There is the matter of priorities...How much to invest in the West Bank, what to do about Lebanon," which Israel partially occupies after invading it two years ago.

Paris building new opera house

Paris's new opera house, its first in more than a hundred years and its fourth since 1669, is expected to be completed in 1988 at a cost of $250 million. Called the Opera de la Bastille, it will occupy a working-class district site where the 1789 French Revolution began.

Superpowers still negotiating in Bonn classroom

BONN, West Germany (AP) — In the real world, the Soviet Union walked out of the Geneva nuclear arms talks with the United States last winter. In the land of make-believe, the talks resumed this summer in a Bonn university classroom.

Across the street from a park where thousands of anti-missile protesters demonstrated last fall, a class of 15 West German students split into a "U.S." team and a "Soviet" team in a scholarly effort to achieve what the superpowers have not — a comprehensive agreement limiting medium and long-range nuclear weapons.

In the three-week course, the students intensively researched previous arms agreements and the weapons arsenals of both superpowers, then met for negotiations that sometimes ran into the early hours of the morning.

And although the United States and the Soviet Union aren't talking to each other in Geneva, their embassies in Bonn advised the West German students on how to negotiate.

"They asked for advice, so we gave it," said a spokesman for the Soviet Embassy, Timor Lachonin. "We were glad to share our viewpoint with them."

It is the third year that the summertime course, called U.S.-Soviet Arms Control Simulation, has been taught in Bonn by Professor William Potter, 37, an American who is executive director of the Center for International and Strategic Affairs at the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA).

But this year was the first time the Soviet Embassy gave advice to the students on the Soviet team. The embassy went so far as to suggest that the Soviet team agree to on-site verification of any agreement, something that real-world Moscow has not done.

The U.S. Embassy, which has advised students for the last three years, found the Soviet participation this year particularly interesting, said a U.S. diplomat, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified.

"I can only applaud it, even though the motives may not be that noble. One can accuse us both of pushing a propaganda line," he added.

"The Soviets seem to be aware of the fact that it would not be seen as good politics to say around Western students, 'We are not for verification.'" This year, the American team agreed to withdraw the U.S.-built Pershing 2 missile force now in West Germany, while the Soviet side agreed to sharp reductions in large, land-based intercontinental missiles.

At the negotiating sessions, students sought to be diplomatic, but strong words sometimes flew.

Just a thought

That old, faithful Lincoln penny at the bottom of your purse or pocket may not purchase much any longer, having succumbed to the ravages of the inflation rate in recent years, but go ahead and keep stuffing them into your child's piggy bank or tossing them in your dresser drawer.

Like they say: A penny saved is, that's right, a penny earned!

The Lincoln penny passed something of a milestone in August. As of Thursday, they have have been minted for 75 years. They replaced the old Indian Head cents, which had been issued for the previous 50 years, and were distributed to commemorate the centenary of Lincoln's birth. And although their value may continue to diminish, chances are Lincoln pennies will be around for awhile.

Popularity of the Lincoln penny wasn't always astounding. In fact when it was introduced, the New York Times attacked the new design in an editorial, asserting that "Lincoln does not need the immortality of a copper cent, and the precedent would assuredly be bad in the case of some of his successors."

Despite the Times' warning, the Lincoln penny did make its mark on the American public. Because of their low face value, Lincoln pennies encouraged literally thousands of youngsters to become coin collectors. And more than a few million of the coins were fed to gumball and candy machines in days gone by. A few were even tossed against walls and into wells and fountains in pursuit of recreation.

But the effects of inflation have made the pennies practically worthless as coins of currency. That may continue to lead their decline in popularity until they become practically obsolete.

Someday in the future, though, someone may be rummaging through the relics of our civilization and come across ... you guessed it ... a Lincoln penny. They'll think about our civilization and at that moment the true value of the Lincoln penny will be recognized: A penny for your thoughts!

An offer of peace

The State Department lost no time in rejecting the Soviet Union's call for an international conference on the Middle East. The suggestion from Moscow was that the participants in such a conclave would be the United States, the U.S.S.R., Israel, Syria, Jordan, Egypt, Lebanon and the PLO. The State Department responded by saying it "has always been opposed" to proposals of this kind and does not believe Soviet participation "would be helpful." The spokesman could have added that if Moscow really wants peace, it can show it by deeds rather than calling for conferences.

Far more promising was the latest peace talk to come from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. He urged the United States and Israel to join him in reviving the peace effort initiated by his predecessor, Anwar Sadat, and in which Prime Minister Begin and President Carter participated. On the timing of such a revival he said:

"I hope there is a strong push to the peace process in the region after an Israeli government is formed and after the American elections are finished." Mr. Mubarak added that he stands ready to deal "with any government which the Israeli people choose, whether it's Likud or Labor or any other party."

Mr. Mubarak has added momentum to the peace movement. While there is talk like this we know the spirit of Camp David is not dead.

End our violence

Something is rotten in the United States.

We have one of the world's highest standards of living. We have one of the best systems of justice. Our education level is high. Our medical facilities are excellent. We provide our people with greater economic security than do most societies.

But something is rotten in the United States.

— Recently a man went berserk and killed more than 20 total strangers in a restaurant.

— A couple of weeks ago a woman was kidnapped off a city street, was held captive for more than 24 hours in an apartment, and was raped by 20 or so men.

— Two mountain men kidnapped a young woman recently whom they planned to use as the wife of one of them. When questioned by two hikers, they shot the woman and killed one of her would-be rescuers.

— Last year a woman was gang-raped in a bar while other patrons watched and cheered.

The list goes on and on. Violent crimes against women are reaching an epidemic point. Mass killings are no longer unusual.

Before the Vietnam War, such crimes were virtually unknown in the United States. Today they are common. What has happened to our society that has made it so violent?

Part of the blame can be placed on the increased tensions of society. Some of the blame rests with the treatment of violence and the attitude toward women in movies and television. Increased use of drugs also must be blamed.

These are superficial and easy answers. But the problem of increased violence is complex and it cannot be ignored or dismissed.

The sickness is so serious that it must be faced as a nation. In order to find answers, the president should appoint a non-partisan, blue-ribbon commission of psychiatrists, scientists, social workers, law enforcement officials, educators and religious leaders to try to find causes and cures. We cannot allow the disease of violence to get any worse.

— Scottsdale, Ariz. Daily Progress

ART BUCHWALD

Protesters! Head for Dallas

The stage managers in charge of the Republican National Convention in Dallas are in a tizzy. How do you keep the TV public's attention for four days when the nominations of the President and his Vice President are a sure thing?

I went over to Republican campaign headquarters to see what was going on.

Art Buchwald

One of the people producing the show was screaming at his assistant. "The only thng that will set this convention on fire are angry demonstrators on the outside of the hall."

"No one wants to demonstrate against Reagan in Dallas," the assistant said. "I've been talking to the gay community in San Francisco and they turned me down flat."

"Did you tell them we'd pay their way if they'd throw stones and block streets?"

"Of course I did. But they said they would rather go to the beach in August."

"How about the environmental groups? Surely they have reason to protest this administration."

"The Sierra Club is going to be in the Sierras, the Audubon Society told me they'd rather be birdwatching, and the Friends of the Earth are holding their own convention in the Grand Tetons in Wyoming. I couldn't even get a handful of anti-nuke demonstrators to come in from New Hampshire."

"What about the peaceniks who want us to pull out of Central America?"

"They were afraid to come because of Texas' reputation for police brutality."

The stage manager was frustrated. "They all scream about the Reagan administration, but where are they when we need them? I told the party honchos Dallas was a lousy place to hold our show."

"Why do you need demonstrators?" I asked him.

"Because we have to show some contrast between what's going on inside the hall and what's going on outside. How can our speakers attack the people demonstrating outside when there is nobody there? Couldn't you find any hardcore secular humanists willing to demonstrate against prayers in school?" the manager asked.

"Most secular humanists are on vacation in August."

"What about the National Organization for Women? Can't we get them to come to Dallas?"

"They said they were thinking about demonstrating at our convention, but concluded it would be waste of time. They'd rather spend their energies making T-shirts for Gerry Ferraro."

"I promised ABC, CBS and NBC there would be riots outside of the convention hall and the National Guard would be standing by. We haven't even come up with one Hispanic to protest the Simpson- Mazzoli bill."

"If you want my opinion," the assistant said, "I think there is a conspiracy amongst all the organizations who are against Reagan to boycott our convention. They figure if there is no turmoil everyone will watch an old movie on an independent channel, and no one will even see our candidates on the air."

"That very thought dawned on me," the stage manager said. "Well, if they don't want to play that game we'll play it ourselves. Get me the Dallas chief of police."

The assistant dialed and handed the phone to the manager. "Chief, this is the convention planner. Listen, there is going to be a bearded guy outside the convention hall with a big Mondale button on his shirt holding a 'Get Out of El Salvador' sign. When the TV cameras show up he's going to set fire to an American flag. You can arrest him, but tell your people not to beat up on him too much, because he's really my assistant and I'm going to need him to organize the show inside the hall."

JACK ANDERSON

Grace could save tax hike

WASHINGTON — The presidential rivals have raised an issue that could decide the election: Should the government boost taxes or cut spending to stop the federal deficit from exploding?

Walter Mondale would raise taxes. He wants to reduce the deficit by two-thirds, without giving up social programs so dear to Democrats. This will take more revenue, he admits, with a candor he calls the "new realism."

Jack Anderson

President Reagan would rather slash government spending. Collecting more taxes, he argues, will simply encourage the bureaucrats to spend more money. Not until he is convinced that no more savings can be squeezed out of the budget will he consider a tax increase, he says.

There has been an ingrained nonchalance about deficits in Washington. Yet clearly, the public debt cannot go on ballooning without causing economic chaos. Already, economists are having nightmares over the crushing interest payments, which have a dismaying habit of compounding.

Just the slight increase in interest rates since last January will cost the taxpayers more than $12 billion during the next fiscal year. And this staggering amount will cover only the increase, not the interest which will run another $110 billion or so.

Yet the interest, after it's all paid, won't reduce the national debt one penny. And the debt is absolutely mind-boggling: $1.5 trillion — and growing. But you haven't heard the worst. By the miracle of government bookkeeping, the official debt figure doesn't include another $3.1 trillion in federal liabilities.

Unlike corporations which must disclose to stockholders all their financial obligations, the federal accountants blithely omit from the public ledger the multi-trillion-dollar social security payments, military and civil service pensions and other liabilities that the government has guaranteed to pay.

"If the general public were fully aware of their liability as taxpayers for extravagant promises made over the years by their elected leaders, they might be very upset," congressional auditors warned last year in a report that their bosses ignored.

The total public indebtedness, if it were calculated the same way that the rest of us must keep books, would be $4.6 trillion, not $1.5 trillion. Half of this monstrous and menacing iceburg is hidden, thus doubling the threat to the ship of state. The Titanic could go down if it doesn't change course.

The good news is that government spending can be drastically yet safely slashed. This has been discovered by the Grace Commission, which spent 18 months prying into the dark corners of government and found 2,478 ways to cut costs.

The White House has reviewed 20 of the commission's 48 reports and has already figured out how to save $103.5 billion over the next three years. The General Accounting Office and Congressional Budget Office, both bipartisan, have concluded a similar review and found $98 billion that can be cut.

Confronted with these possible savings, members of Congress have rallied around the Grace Commission with a great clanking of the crusaders' armor. Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., introduced a bill — which the Senate passed almost unanimously — calling for the $98 billion budget trimming.

The bill, however, has one shortcoming: It's not mandatory. "These specific recommendations," it says in small print, "are not binding."

All it will take is one small change to save $98 billion and make a tax increase unnecessary. Just remove the word "not" from the Kasten bill and ask Congress to pass it, with this wording: "These specific recommendations ARE binding."

Footnote: The Grace Commission is headed by Peter Grace, a crusty, no-nonsense industrialist, who happens to be a Democrat but is nonpartisan in his crusade against government squandering. We are working together on a way to enlist all Americans in this battle. If you're tired of the appalling waste of your tax money by those who are entrusted to spend it, watch the column for an announcement.

HALF-BILLION BUNGLE?: Two years ago, amid charges that pension and disability checks were being sent out late and in wrong amounts, the Social Security Administration embarked on an ambitious, $500 million plan to solve its chronic computer problems. Now a House committee chaired by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., is looking into charges of fraud in a $100 million SSA computer contract with the Florida-based Paradyne Corp. And my sources tell me the FBI and two federal grand juries are keeping an eye on the situation to see if criminal prosecution is warranted.

Cocaine-producing area put under military rule

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia's main cocaine-producing region has been declared a military zone in preparation for a government attempt to shut down the country's billion-dollar cocaine industry.

But armed peasants have set up roadblocks in the Chapare region to prevent an influx of troops, witnesses reported.

A presidential decree issued Tuesday said the lush tropical area — about the size of New Jersey — was declared a military zone "to protect the life and tranquility of the inhabitants of the area, which has been converted by foreign and national elements into the principal center for the elaboration of cocaine in the country."

The government says army, navy, air force and police troops will be sent in to dismantle cocaine factories, confiscate weapons and restore the rule of law. Drug enforcement sources say it could be several days before military operations in the Chapare begin.

Peasants who produce coca leaves, the main ingredient in cocaine, have set up roadblocks in the Chapare and taken over a police outpost that was to be used to coordinate police and troop movements, witnesses reported.

The decree was signed a day before the U.S. Senate subcommittee on alcohol and drug abuse was to receive a State Department report on Bolivia's drug eradication program.

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., who heads the subcommittee, visited Bolivia earlier this month and said if progress on ridding the poor South American nation of cocaine was not evident, the country would stand to lose U.S. aid.

This year's U.S. aid package was $225 million, but U.S. officials said it was undetermined what aid would be affected by a cut-off.

Should troops move into the Chapare, located 180 miles to the east of La Paz, it will be the government's first serious effort to combat Bolivia's lucrative cocaine business.

Bolivian and U.S. officials say corruption and inefficiency have delayed the drug enforcement program in the past, enabling cocaine exports to surpass the level under military officers who ran Bolivia from 1980 to 1982 and were involved in trafficking themselves.

This landlocked country of 5.8 million people supplies about half the illegal cocaine consumed in the world. About 75 percent of it enters U.S. markets, U.S. officials have estimated.

Vice President Jaime Paz said in a recent interview that cocaine exports had doubled under the current civilian government.

Daring raid sends message to terrorists, officials say

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao (AP) — The daring raid that killed two hijackers and freed 79 people aboard a Venezuelan jetliner was a message to terrorists to expect death, not deals, say officials who planned the assault.

"With all due and necessary concern for the safety of the passengers, we couldn't give in to their demands. If Curacao gave in, it would encourage other terrorists to do the same thing," Netherlands Antilles Prime Minister Don Martina said Tuesday.

The leader of the Dutch island chain in the southern Caribbean approved an assault on the aircraft by black-clad Venezuelan commandos in Tuesday's early-morning hours. The attack ended an ordeal that took the Aeropostal DC-9 aircraft to three Caribbean islands over 36 hours.

"Unfortunately at this time and in the area we live in, things like these can happen for a number of reasons, political and criminal. The basic message has always been that nobody is going to get away with it," Martina said.

"The policy of our government is not to enter into negotiations with sky pirates or hijackers; at no time" was it proposed that the hijackers be taken alive, said Henry Lopez, head of the elite Venezuelan Division of Security, Intelligence and Prevention unit that staged the raid with support from Dutch Antilles police and U.S. military "technical advisers."

Freed passengers had no doubts about the assault, which was carried off without any passengers being wounded. There were 12 men in the Venezuelan anti-terrorist squad and they used Israeli-made Uzi submachine guns, according to government sources.

"I have no remorse for the hijackers," said Lillian Jong of Aruba. She called them "degenerates who might have done the same thing again."

The hijackers variously demanded $2 million to $5 million, an escape helicopter and weapons.

Several passengers said the hijackers "terrorized them," during the ordeal, often threatening to begin killing them one at a time. Three Curacao passengers said the hijackers threatened to begin killing the seven children aboard until their demands for an escape helicopter, millions in cash and weapons were met.

The raid began while one of the hijackers, former Haitian army captain Hilertaut Dominique, was in the cockpit talking to his wife over the radio. His wife had been flown from nearby Venezuela and was begging him to "stop this adventure."

Dominique was in tears as he spoke to her and at first didn't seem to notice the start of the assault, in which security agents used a "stun bomb" and shot out the plane's tires, passengers said. Earlier, a technician for the regional ALM airline secretly disabled the plane by letting air out of the front tire and removing some fuses.

The other hijacker, a Dominican national listed on the plane's manifest as Felix Segundo, reacted to the commandos' approach by splashing gasoline down the aisle in order to set the aircraft ablaze.

"Everyone started to scream and run," Maritza Pardo of Curacao said. "Then the Haitian said: 'Let's kill them.'"

Panamanian leader threatens to take control of U.S. school

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — President Jorge Illueca, accusing the United States of violating the Panama Canal treaties, says his government will take control of Fort Gulick, home of the U.S. Army's School of the Americas.

Illueca announced his decision to take over the facilities on Oct. 1 during an emotional speech Tuesday commemorating the death three years ago of former Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos.

The treaties, signed in 1977, give Panama full control over the canal by the year 2000 and stipulate that Fort Gulick and the training school revert to Panama's control this October.

However, Panama had the option of letting the United States continue operating the fort and school, and Illueca's speech indicated that negotiations on that point — under way for several months — had collapsed.

In other Central American developments Tuesday, a railway source said rail service was halted throughout El Salvador after security forces stopped guarding trains because of attacks by leftist guerrillas. In Nicaragua, the leftist Sandinista regime placed a priest it accuses of aiding rebels under house arrest.

The School of the Americas, run by the U.S. military in Panama since 1940, is currently training some 1,900 soldiers from various Latin American nations.

Panama's decision to take sole charge of the fort and school appeared to be in reprisal for the recent decision of the U.S.-controlled Panama Canal Commission to try to keep 1,000 of the 1,700 U.S. workers on the canal by approving compensation that will cost about $4 million yearly. Those funds, from canal revenues, normally would go to the Panamanian government.

Illueca called the commission's decision "a flagrant violation of what was agreed upon in thetreaties."

In September 1977, then President Jimmy Carter and Torrijos signed the treaties which gradually turn the canal over to Panama.

Torrijos, the national guard commander who seized control of the government in 1968, died in a plane crash on July 31, 1981.

U.S. Ambassador to Panama Everett Briggs could not be reached for comment on Illeuca's speech because he was on vacation, and an embassy spokesman, Jim Palmer, declined to comment.

U.S. military officials had prepared for the eventual loss of the School of the Americas by opening a military training center at Puerto Castilla, Honduras, last year. More than 4,000 Honduran and Salvadoran troopers have been trained at Puerto Castilla.

In El Salvador, suspension of rail service affected transportation of the country's principal exports — cotton, coffee, and sugar — to the ports of Cutuco in the east and Acajutla in the west.

Service was halted last week after rebels derailed a 12-car train, burned the engine and five carloads of cotton, said the railway source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Attacks on the trains have been part of rebel sabotage aimed at wrecking the nation's economy during the war against the U.S.-supported government.

WORLD in brief

Soviet official rejects talks on space weapons

MOSCOW (AP) — A high-ranking Soviet official said today that Washington's latest proposal on holding talks to limit weapons in space makes no change in the U.S. position and "does not open up prospects for holding the talks."

Alexander A. Bessmertnykh, head of the Foreign Ministry's United States Department, also accused the Reagan administration of taking steps to militarize space.

Bessmertnykh briefed Soviet and foreign reporters on a U.S. State Department message reportedly delivered Saturday to the Soviet government.

In that message the State Department expressed willingness to engage in talks on weapons in outer space, including the subject of anti-satellite weapons, according to diplomatic sources in Moscow who spoke on condition of anonymity.

However, Bessmertnykh said the United States "proposed talks on the militarization of outer space, rather than the prevention of the militarization of outer space."

Little Mermaid 'rearmed'

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — The Little Mermaid, Denmark's most famous statue, was back at its harborside perch today after a foundry replaced an arm sawed off by vandals.

Police said two 18-year-oldsremoved the statue's right arm with a hacksaw as a prank July 22. The youths turned themselves in the next day and were charged with vandalizing public property.

On Tuesday, Denmark's largest floating crane, Herkules, plucked the four-ton, rock-mounted statue from a truck at dockside and place it at the water's edge 200 yards away.

Credit card ban lifted

PARIS (AP) — Starting today, French tourists can once again use their credit cards outside France.

Finance Minister Pierre Beregevoy announced Tuesday that the government is lifting a ban imposed on tourists' use of credit cards abroad. French businessmen overseas were exempt from the ban.

The credit card restrictions were linked to the Socialist government's austerity program following the devaluation of the franc in March 1983.

Cubs rally in ninth to dump Jackson, 5-4

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Cub third baseman Tony Woods prepares to bat as the sun provides a West Texas backdrop. Woods and the Cubs face the Jackson Mets tonight in the final game of the homestand.

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Jackson pitcher Calvin Schiraldi, the 1983 College World Series Most Valuable Player for the champion Texas Longhorns, spotted the Mets a 4-2 lead going into the bottom of the fourth inning. With the way Midland had been playing of late, it figured to be enough.

It wasn't and Schiraldi was no longer around to do anything about it.

Giving way to pinch hitter Darryl Denby in the top of the ninth and reliever Jeff Innis, Schiraldi had to sit on the bench and watch what could have been his 15th victory of the season turn into a 5-4 Jackson loss.

Innis wasted little time before pitching the Mets into serious ninth inning trouble: One out and basses loaded.

Catcher Don Hyman stroked a one-out single up the middle, moved to second on Antonio Cordova's single to right and to third when pinch hitter Mike Brumley walked to load the bases, bringing up the top of the Cub batting order.

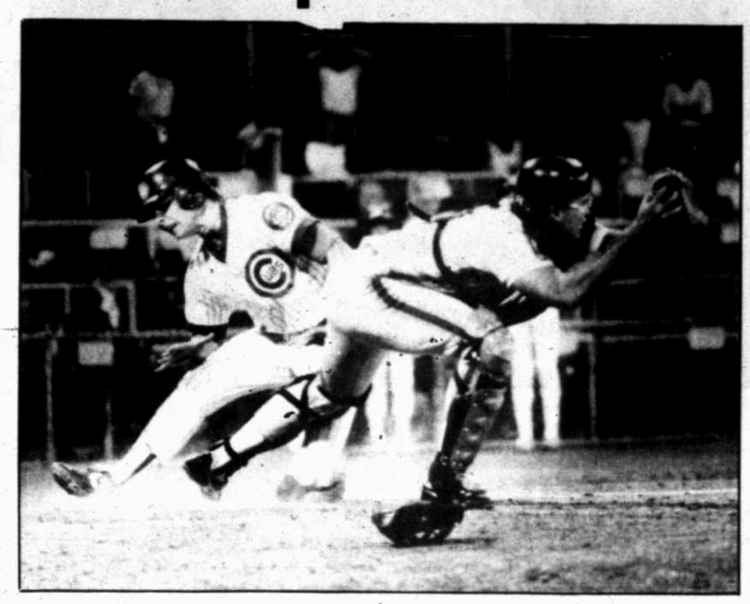

Hyman, who passed up a chance to go home on a wild pitch, jogged down the third base line to the plate when Innis gave up a walk to Darrin Jackson to pull the Cubs within one run, 4-3. Met manager Sam Perlozzo opted for reliever Reggie Jackson and he was met with a high-hopping infield single that brought home Cordova with the tying run, leaving the bases loaded.

Tony Woods missed his chance for heroics on the next play when he grounded to Met shortstop Al Pedrique who threw home to get the force out on Brumley. Like Innis, Jackson was having problems throwing strikes and it cost them the game as he walked Danny Norman, bringing home Jackson with the winning run. Like Hyman before him, Jackson had passed up a chance to score on a wild pitch and, again, holding third proved to be the right decision.

"On a ball in the dirt it's the runner's judgement. It's up to him to determine if he should go," said Manager George Enright. "I don't think Jackson could have scored on the wild pitch.

"Hyman, when the ball went back to the screen, had a chance to score but I'm not sure if he would have been safe. The catcher (Ed Hearns) recovered quickly and got to the ball. With one out in the ninth, you only have two outs to work with to score two runs. If he is thrown out the plate, then you only have one out left. It's best to let the batter do it, especially when you have the meat of the order coming up."

"I was glad I didn't have to swing the bat," said Jackson about his game-winning RBI walk. "I hurt my wrist on that dive in the outfield (in the seventh inning)."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Cub Mike Brumley tries for the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning, but is forced out at the plate by Jackson catcher Ed Hearn. However, the Cubs had one out left to work with and the bases were still loaded for Danny Norman's walk for a 5-4 victory.

It turned out to be a key defensive play in the game for the Cubs. With one, runners on first and second, Jackson's full-speed, diving catch of Lenny Dykstra's pop up to shallow center field, kept the Mets from a bases-loaded situation. It may also have saved a run because Mark Carreon followed with an RBI single to right field to score Pedrique from second. Without the catch, more may have come in.

THE METS opened the scoring in the first inning when Carreon led off with a single, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored one out later on Hearn's single to left field.

Jackson increased the lead to 3-0 in the third inning when Hearn led off with a walk, went to second on Bill Max' single to center and to third on Steve Springer's single up the middle. Pedrique, who was 2-for-4 i the game, followed with a two-RBI single to center field.

Midland countered in the bottom of the fourth with a single by Tony Woods and went to second on Norman's ground out to third. Joe Henderson followed with a single to left for a 3-1 score.

Tom Veryzer, down from Chicago for some rehabilitation playing time, led off the seventh with a double, moved to third on Steve Lake's (another Cub down from Chicago) ground out. Veryzer scored on Cordova's single up the middle, countering Jackson's lone tally in the top of the inning, to bring the score to 4-2. Veryzer was 2-for-4 with the only extra base hit in the game.

The Cubs, who have had pitching problems the past few nights, got exceptionally strong relief pitching to keep Midland in the ball game. When starter Larry Hrynko got into trouble in the seventh inning, David Rosenhaun came in to strike out Billy Beane, the only batter he faced, to end the inning.

In the eighth and ninth frames, Ron Kaufman, who took the victory to improve to 4-2 on the year, allowed only one hit while striking out five. Innis took the loss in relief.

"They did a good job for us tonight," said Enright. "The bull pen came in and got the job done, something we haven't been doing the last four nights. Rosenhaun came in and got a big out and Kaufman looked like the pitcher I've seen the past two years."

CUB NOTES: The victory snapped Midland's three-game losing streak and also ended Jackson six-game domination of the Cubs this season. Midland is now 3-6 against the Mets. In tonight's final game of the home stand, Midland will throw Joe Housey, 4-5, while Jackson will counter with DeWayne Vaughn, 4-1...The San Diego Chicken will be at Cubs Stadium tonight.

Gymnasts have golden moment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mitch Gaylord, Bart Conner, Peter Vidmar, Scott Johnson, Jim Hartung and Tim Daggett — these are the Golden Boys of Summer. They brought the United States its first Olympic team gymnastics victory in 80 years.

The swimmers — Rowdy Gaines, Tiffany Cohen, Theresa Andrews, Rick Carey and the American women's 400-meter freestyle relay team? Well, they were supposed to win. Sometimes that's all they seem to do. That's all they did on Tuesday, sweeping the five gold medals up for grabs.

But U.S. gymnasts hadn't won a team medal of any kind since 1904, and when they won the gold in St. Louis, those Summer Games were nothing more than a disorganized sideshow to a World's Fair.

The American teams back then literally had no opposition, coming to those Olympics from various amateur clubs and dueling only each other. This time they faced China, the defending world champion.

During Sunday's compulsory exercises, Li Ning of China became the first male Olympic gymnast to record a perfect 10, doing it on the rings. Also that day, Gaylord, from Van Nuys, Calif., and Conner, from Norman, Okla., each scored 10, Gaylord on the rings and Conner on the parallel bars.

And on Tuesday night, with the outcome in the balance, Daggett, the last American competitor, was equally perfect on the high bar, giving the United States a final point total of 591.40 to China's 590.80 and bronze-medalist Japan's 586.70. "I just knew I had to do it for the guys," the perfectionist from West Springfield, Mass., said.

Pat Spurgin of Billings, Mont., won the gold in women's air-rifle competition; Detroit boxers Steve McCrory, at 112 pounds, and Frank Tate, at 156, won their first bouts,

Gaines gets Rowdy

Tate by default when his opponent failed to make the weight; the U.S. men's basketball team rode Michael Jordan's 20 points to an 89-68 victory over Canada, and Cheryl Miller scored 20 as the American women routed Australia 81-47.

Also, John Marzano of Philadelphia hit a home run and John Hoover of Fresno, Calif., pitched a four-hitter to lead the United States past Taiwan 2-1 in baseball's debut as an Olympic demonstration sport, and the American men's volleyball team pounded Tunisia 15-3, 15-2, 15-3.

But the U.S. men's field hockey team lost 4-0 to West Germany; the soccer team was beaten 1-0 by Italy and the American men's handball team was defeated 21-19 by West Germany.

Of the three other gold medals won Tuesday, two went to China, to Chen Weiqiang in the 132-pound weightlift and Li Yuwei in men's running-game target shooting. The third went to Luciano Giovannetti of Italy, who won a shootoff with Dan Carlisle of Fort Benning, Ga., and Francisco Bozain of Peru in the men's trapshoot.

After three days of competition, the United States has 24 medals, 16 of them gold. China is second both in total medals with 11 and in gold with five.

What Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci did for the little girls of the world in the 1970s, Vidmar, a Los Angeles native, hopes he and his teammates, including Johnson, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Hartung, of Omaha, Neb., will do for the future boys of summers.

"I just hope there's a lot of kids out there that saw us do this and want to run out and be gymnasts because we have the ability to be a world power for a long time, and I hope it happens now," Vidmar said. "This is the greatest thing for USA gymnastics ever! .We made history today."

Gaylord was the leading performer in the optionals with 59.35 of a possible 60 points on the rings, horizontal bar, vault, parallel bars, pommel horse and floor exercises. Vidmar, with a score of 118.55 points following the compulsories and optionals, leads the all-around competition going into Thursday's individuals. Li is second at 118.45.

When the final team score was flashed on the Pauley Pavilion scoreboard at UCLA, the scene was reminiscent of the one four years ago at Lake Placid, N.Y., when the unheralded U.S. hockey team shocked the powerful Soviet Union and eventually won the gold medal.

Again, the chant "USA! USA! USA!" and the blizzard of American flags bombarded the nation's newest heroes as they received their medals from Yuri Titov of the Soviet Union, the president of the International Gymnastics Federation.

Gaines, from Winter Haven, Fla., figured he was history four years ago, when the United States boycotted the Moscow Olympics. He had achieved every goal, save for Olympic gold. And when dream evaporated along with those Summer Games, he retired from competitive swimming.

But the dream never died, he came out of retirement and, at 25, as the old man of the U.S. swim team, won the 100-meter freestyle in an Olympic-record 49.80 seconds. "My grandmother back in Florida dreamed I would win," he said. "Grandma, from now on I'm sticking with you!"

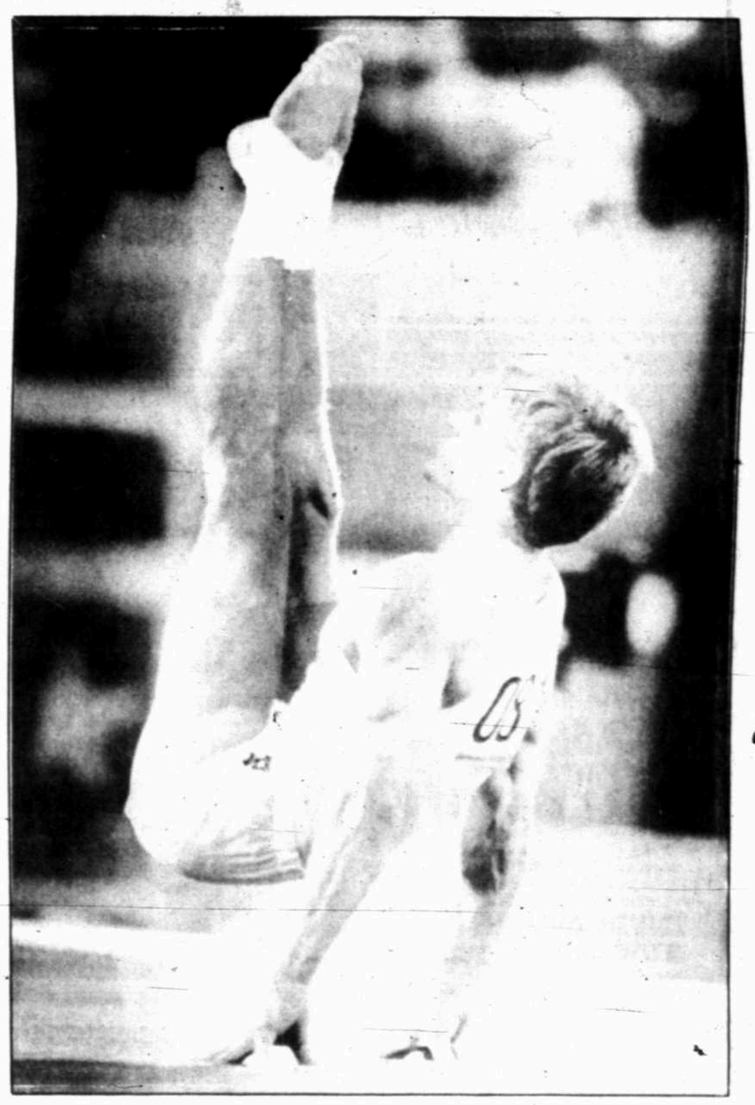

Cohen, from Mission Viejo, Calif., won the women's 400 freestyle in 4 minutes, 7.10 seconds, breaking the American and Olympic marks. "I heard the crowd and thatgot me going because I was pretty tired at the end," she said. "I kicked as hard as I could the last 50 and gave it all I had."

Andrews, of Annapolis, Md., took the women's 100 backstroke in 1:02.55, barely beating teammate Betsy Mitchell, and Carey, of Mount Kisco, N.Y., won the 200 backstroke, in 2:00.23.

Jenna Johnson of Santa Rosa, Calif., Carrie Steinseifer of Saratoga, Calif., Dara Torres of Mission Viejo, Calif., and Nancy Hogshead of Jacksonville, Fla., won their relay in 3:43.43, equalling the American record set in 1978. Steinseifer and Hogshead now have two golds apiece

There was the first public mention Tuesday of a potential terrorist at the Games — but it came from a continent away, in Buffalo, N.Y., where a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization spokeseman said a Syrian was prevented from boarding a Los Angeles-bound plane in Toronto because of passport irregularities.

Los Angeles police reported the first Olympics-related robbery at the Summer Games, the mugging of two Swedes who were stranded after boarding the wrong bus

Gymnast Peter Vidmar of the United States exhibits the balance, poise and precision that spurred the USA men's gymnastic team to a narrow win over defending world champion China. The gold medal was the first for a U.S. gymnastic team since 1932.

Minnesota mangles Mariners, 9-2

Associated Press

The Minnesota Twins got off on the right foot for their new owner...and at the same time gave pitcher Ken Schrom an unexpected leg-up.

Playing their first official game Tuesday night under Minneapolis banker Carl Pohlad, who took over the team from Clark Griffith, the Twins routed the Seattle Mariners 9-2.

And in doing so, the Twins supported their hard-luck right-hander with a 14-hit power show that included a 7-0 lead after three innings.

"All those runs sure take a lot of the pressure off," said Schrom, who pitched a five-hitter. "It's a situation I haven't been in."

Schrom, 3-5, had pitched well lately, but the Twins' quiet bats turned those strong performances into defeats. The right-hander had allowed two runs during his last 16 2-3 innings, but lost two games.

"I figured I'd have to shut out the other team to win," Schrom said.

American League

Schrom allowed one hit — a second inning infield single to Larry Milbourne — during the first six innings. He pitched shutout ball until the ninth, when he gave up two runs on a run-scoring single by Al Cowens and a sacrifice fly by Bob Kearney.

Kent Hrbek went 2-for-3, driving in four runs with a three-run homer in the first inning and an RBI single in the third before leaving with a slight muscle pull after five innings.

"When Hrbek hit it (the homer) I felt like jumping up for joy," Schrom said. "But I had to stay at an even keel because I didn't want to let down like some pitchers do when they get early leads."

The Twins have now won eight of their last 10 games and lead California by 1½ games in the AL West.

Tigers 5-4, Indians 1-6

Detroit's Doug Baker hit a bases-loaded triple and Ruppert Jones homered to back the combined four-hit pitching of Juan Berenguer and Doug Bair in the first game.

A five-run second inning helped Berenguer, 5-7, snap a three-game personal losing streak and record his first victory since June 16. Bair pitched the final 2 2-3 innings.

Cleveland's Pat Tabler hit a three-run homer in the first inning of the second game. Both Julio Franco and Mel Hall were safe on one-out infield hits and scored ahead of Tabler's fifth homer of the season, on a 3-2 pitch from Dave Rozema, 7-3.

Winner Neal Heaton, 8-10, gave up nine hits in five innings. Tom Waddell earned his fifth save.

Blue Jays 6, Royals 5

Hot-hitting Rance Mulliniks drove in two runs with a double and a single to lead Toronto over Kansas City.

Mulliniks, who has hit safely in 14 of his past 15 games for a .432 average, doubled home a run in Toronto's three-run second inning and singled in another in the third.

Doyle Alexander scattered seven hits in 6 1-3 innings to boost his record to 9-5.

Mulliniks double was hit high off the wall in right-center at Exhibition Stadium.

"I thought it was out, especially with the way the wind was blowing out the way it was," he said. "But I've been swinging the bat pretty good. It seems that right now everything I hit falls in for me. I feel good at the plate, feel confident."

Rangers 7, Orioles 6

Curtis Wilkerson scored the tie-breaking run on a bases-loaded wild pitch by Tippy Martinez in the eighth inning as Texas defeated Baltimore.

With the score tied 5-5, the Rangers loaded the bases in the eighth on singles by Wilkerson and Gary Ward and a walk to Buddy Bell before the wild pitch by Martinez, 4-7. After Larry Parrish was walked intentionally, Ward scored as Pete O'Brien bounced out for a 7-5 Ranger lead.

Erck lures tempting bass

By TODD WOODARD
Outdoors Writer

Outdoors

Midlander Charles Erck has a local variation on an old theme.

Rather than tying caddis nymphs for the persnickety trout, Erck fashions tightly wound spinnerbaits and buzzbaits for the voracious black bass.

"It's unbelievably satisfying for a fisherman in the High Sky Bass Club to tell me he's caught a fish on one of my lures," Erck said. "It's almost as good as catching a fish myself."

Erck said he initially chose to make the spinnerbaits and buzzbaits because he couldn't find a quality topwater lure for fishing West Texas water. Most of the commercial lures were flawed by ragged lead on the heads of the bait, or skirts that fell apart after one vicious hit by a bass, or blades that turned inconsistently.

"I knew I could make a bait that would be beautiful, effective and long-lived," he said. "It was a simple matter of sitting down to do it."

Erck, one of the charter members of the High Sky Bass Club, uses the same pattern in building each bait. First, he wraps a wire around a hook, which extends forward of the hook's eye. About an inch in front of the eye, he bends the wire back toward the hook's barb – it's on that wire the spinners flash.

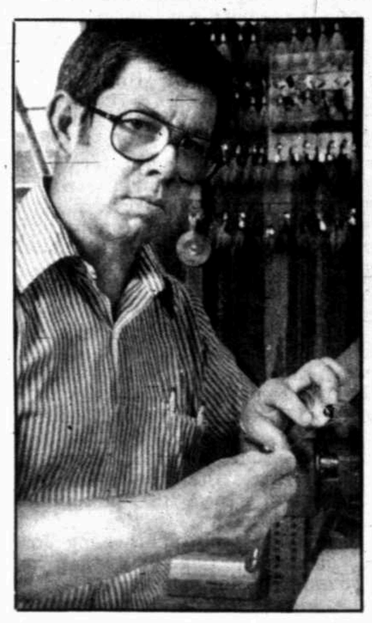

Then he places the bent wire and hook in a mold and pours in molten lead, which after cooling forms the head of the spinnerbait. After the head is formed, he wraps a deer-hair skirt behind it and ties it securely. Then he paints the head, adds the blades and tries them out.

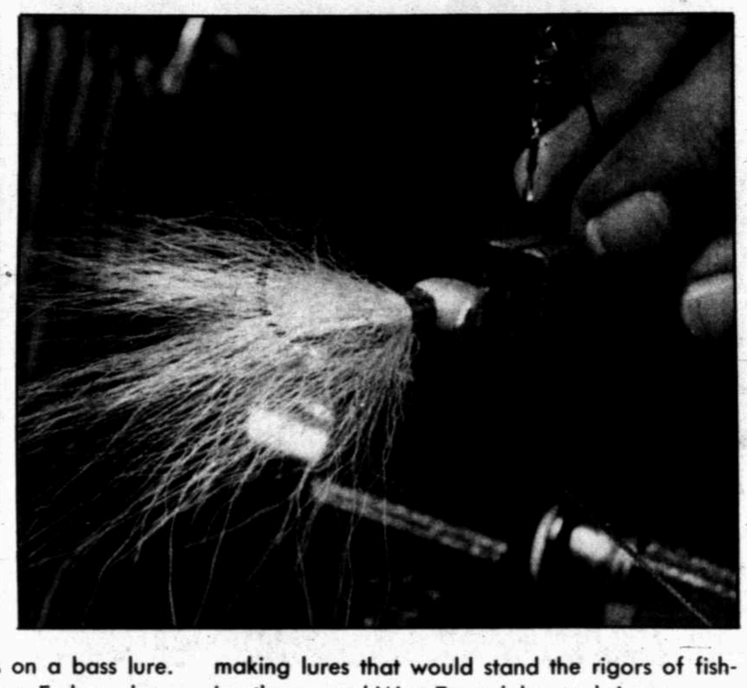

Spinnerbaits are surface lures. When a fisherman finds a likely looking bass hole, he places the bait past the strike zone (where he expects the fish to be), and retrieves it. The blades flash as the bait eases on or just under the surface of the water, attracting the attention and (hopefully) arousing a waiting bass. A buzzbait works similarly, the main difference being the noise, the buzzing, the blades on the bait produce.

Erck's baits differ from their commercial counterparts in more than construction tightness. The draftsman chooses bright colors for his baits, believing that a successful bass lure can also be beautiful.

The baits throw well and are practically weedless, since Erck bends the blade arm well over the hook's barb.

"I'm much more critical about what I'll buy for my tackle box now," Erck said. I can see an uneven lopp in a wire, I can see a poorly tied skirt. I work to make my baits look nice as well as cstch fish."

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

State establishes hunting zones

AUSTIN (AP) — Three dove hunting zones have been established for the state again this year, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission announced.

A special white-winged dove hunting season will be included.

The mourning dove season for the north zone is Sept. 1-Nov 9; for the central zone Sept. 1-Oct. 30 and Jan. 5-14, and for the south zone Sept. 20-Nov. 12 and Jan. 5-20.

The white-winged dove season in a part of the south zone is Sept. 1-2 and 8-9.

Shooting hours for mourning doves are one half hour before sunrise to sunset. The daily bag limit is 12 mourning, white-winged and white-tipped including no more than two-white-winged and two white-tipped doves per day, with 24 in possession.

For the white-wing dove season the shooting hours are noon to sunset with a bag limit of 10, including no more than two mourning doves and two white-tipped doves per day, with 20 in possession.

Grimm search for trout endures

PHOENECIA, N.Y. (AP) — Kay Stromberg thought Emil Grimm was joking when he told her — as he proposed marriage 41 years ago — that she'd have to play second fiddle to a trout.

He wasn't.

Grimm has fished with flies for trout from Vermont to California. He has tied his own flies for 52 of his 65 years and has migrated to where the trout are.

"I had to get it out of my system to go fish in Montana and Idaho and California and Wyoming," he said.

The Grimms finally moved back East in 1972 and for the past four years they have taught newcomers to the sport how to do it right.

They live a fly cast or two away from Esopus Creek, a 12-mile-long Catskill Mountain stream. They run Esopus Fly Fisher, where they teach no more than eight people a weekend from April through August everything they can learn about fly fishing for trout.

An increasing number are women who, Mrs. Grimm said, learn casting much faster than men.

Esopus Creek is the only stream in the Northeast, Grimm said, where wild rainbow trout are born, live and spawn. "If you catch a rainbow in the Esopus," 35-year-old instructor Bob Sills said, "you know it was born there," rather than in a state hatchery.

The river feeds into Ashokan Reservoir, built in 1915, where the fish spawn. "Just the physical nature of the Esopus is conducive to the rainbow trout," said Sills, who noted they prefer fast-moving, aerated water and deep pools.

There are European-native brown trout and Eastern-native brook trout. But the rainbow, native to the West, is the thriller among trout when caught on a fly.

"The minute they're hooked they're out of the water," Grimm said.

"They walk on top of the water. A rainbow's my favorite fish," Sills added.

Grimm called the sport "an all-consuming type of thing. There is more to fly fishing than just catching fish. And he estimated that 70 percent of all fly fishermen release their trout so they can spawn and be caught again.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tuesday's highlights of the Summer Olympics:

MEDALS

The United States won seven more gold medals, giving it 16 in the first three days — four more than all other countries combined. The total U.S. medal count is 24, more than twice the 11 by second-place China.

GYMNASTICS

U.S. men won the team event for the first time in 80 years, beating world champion China by just six-tenths of a point. The only other gold gymnastics medal for the United States was in 1904, when no other country entered the event.

SWIMMING

The U.S. swimming team swept five events, running its totals to 10 golds, five silvers, five world records and one Olympic record. The Olympic record is 16 golds, by the United States in 1968, and 15 events remain this year.

Tuesday's winners were Tiffany Cohen of Mission Viejo, Calif., in the women's 400-meter freestyle, Rowdy Gaines of Winter Haven, Fla., in the men's 100-meter freestyle, Theresa Andrews of Annapolis, Md., in the women's 100-meter backstroke, Rick Carey of Mount Kisko, N.Y., in the men's 200-meter backstroke, and the women's 400-meter freestyle relay team.

BOXING

Detroit boxers Steve McCrory, a leading contender for gold in the 112-pound class, and Frank Tate, the world champion at 156 pounds, won their first matches. All six U.S. fighters who have fought so far have been winners.

BASKETBALL

Cheryl Miller scored 20 points, including 14 of 15 free throws, and the U.S. women's team forced 31 turnovers in an 81-47 victory over Australia.

Michael Jordan, with 20 points, and Steve Alford, with 13, paced the U.S. men's team over Canada, 89-68.

WEDNESDAY'S EVENTS

Competition is scheduled in 19 Olympic events, with eight gold medals awarded. The highlights

The U.S. men play Uruguay. The women are off.

BOXING

Mark Breland of New York has a second-round match against South Korea's Young Su in the 147-pound class.

The United States has a good shot at another gold medal, this time in the 4,000-meter individual pursuit, where Steve Hegg of Dana Point, Calif., was the fastest qualifier.

GYMNASTICS

The team gold in women's gymnastics is decided. After some controversial judging, The United States was second in compulsories, but still seems in line for its first-ever women's gymnastics medal.

San Diego Chargers sold to Spanos by Klein

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Alex Spanos, a self-made multimillionaire who began his career preparing cakes, pies and doughnuts in his father's bakery, has exercised his option to acquire the controlling interest in the San Diego Chargers from Eugene V. Klein, and will become the football team's majority owner within 30 days.

Neither Spanos nor Klein would reveal Tuesday how much Spanos has agreed to pay for the 56 percent of the team's stock held by the Klein family. "It's very complicated, and impossible to put an exact figure on it at this time," said Klein.

But a source close to the transaction said the price was $40 million, and Spanos, contacted last night, did not dispute that.

Spanos, a Stockton, Calif., developer with diversified holdings, said he intends to be an active owner, even though his other business interests require a great deal of his time and energy.

"I plan to establish a residence in San Diego in the next few months," he said. "I'll also have one in Stockton, but I can't tell you how happy I am to own a team in San Diego."

Cincinnati calls him Mr. Tibbs

Associated Press

The Mets' organization has produced some fine young pitchers, but not all of them are throwing in New York.

One of them, 22-year-old Jay Tibbs, was traded by the Mets to Cincinnati in June for veteran Bruce Berenyi. Tibbs hurled a three-hitter Tuesday in his fourth major league start as the Reds subdued the San Francisco Giants 3-0.

"I think the Mets weren't high on me as a prospect," Tibbs said. "They do have a lot of young arms in the organization. But they were moving other guys (up) before me."

The Reds have definitely become high on Tibbs since promoting him from the Texas League Jackson Mets earlier in July.

"He's got poise on the mound," said Reds catcher Brad Gulden. "He's the type of pitcher who goes after hitters. He makes a good pitch at the right time.

"He's got that little cockiness that a player needs out there. He's going to help this ballclub."

The right-handed Tibbs, 2-0, lowered his earned run average to 1.71.

Cincinnati Manager Vern Rapp not only admired Tibbs' arm, but praised his digestive tract.

"He reminds me of Mel Stottlemyre," Rapp said. "He doesn't overpower anybody. He just goes out there and gets the job done in a hurry and lets his defense help out. That's the way Stottlemyre was — he'd walk one, strike out five and get three double plays.

"He's got the same kind of poise, the same kind of intestinal fortitude."

All three of the Giants' hits were singles. Tibbs struck out four and walked four, and the Reds turned three double plays to keep him out of serious trouble.

Sloppy fielding helped sink San Francisco starter Jeff Robinson, 6-12, who took the loss while allowing six hits and two earned runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Dave Parker hit a soft double to left the lead off the bottom of the second and eventually scored when right fielder Chili Davis muffed Gulden's two-out fly ball.

Gulden also singled home a run in the fourth, after Nick Esasky walked and moved to second on an infield out. Cincinnati tacked on its final run in the sixth, as Ron Oester scored on Esasky's grounder.

Phillies 2, Cubs 1

Juan Samuel, who tied the game with a two-out homer in the ninth inning, singled in the 12th and scored the tie-breaking run on Von Hayes' sacrifice fly.

Samuel beat out an infield grounder leading off the 12th, stole his league- leading 49th base, and advanced to third on a wild pitch by loser Tim Stoddard, 7-3, before scoring to make Al Holland, 5-5, a winner. It was Philadelphia's first extra-inning victory after seven setbacks while home-standing Chicago suffered its first overtime loss after seven victories.

Samuel's ninth homer ended starter Rich Bordi's bid for a one-hit shutout.

"Bordi pitched a good game," said Samuel. "He had been throwing me breaking balls and making me chase pitches all day. So I waited on a breaking ball. He hung it, I hit it."

Cardinals 6, Mets 3

St. Louis won its fifth straight and New York lost its fifth. George Hendrick doubled home two runs and David Green tripled home two more.

Rookie Kurt Kepshire, 3-2, allowed four hits over seven innings and Bruce Sutter allowed one while gaining his league-leading 27th save.

From the first to seventh innings, Kepshire set down 16 of 17 batters he faced. He retired nine in a row before a Keith Hernandez single and Darryl Strawberry's 17th home run.

Padres 1, Dodgers 0

Mark Thurmond and Rich Gossage pitched San Diego to a fourth consecutive shutout as the Padres ran their shutout inning streak to 39 2-3, extending a club record. The Dodgers have not scored an earned run for 51 consecutive innings.

San Diego Manager Dick Williams had a third pitching hero — catcher Terry Kennedy.

"Kennedy's calling the pitches, setting up the hitters, and going to the mound to settle down the pitchers," Williams said. "He's doing a heck of a job."

"Kennedy did a great job back there," agreed Thurmond. "He keeps me mentally in the game."

Dodger starter Rick Honeycutt, 8-6, walked Carmelo Martinez in the bottom of the fourth inning and balked him to second. One out later, Kevin McReynolds lined an run-scoring single to right.

Pirates 5, Expos 3

Bill Madlock doubled home two runs in a four-run first inning as Pittsburgh broke its five-game losing streak. Montreal's Steve Rogers, 3-11, extended his streak of losing starts to six. He is 1-10 in his last 14 starts.

Marvell Wynne walked in the first, Lee Mazzilli singled and both scored on Madlock's double. Jason Thompson followed with a double to score Madlock. Lee Lacy doubled with two out to score the fourth run of the inning.

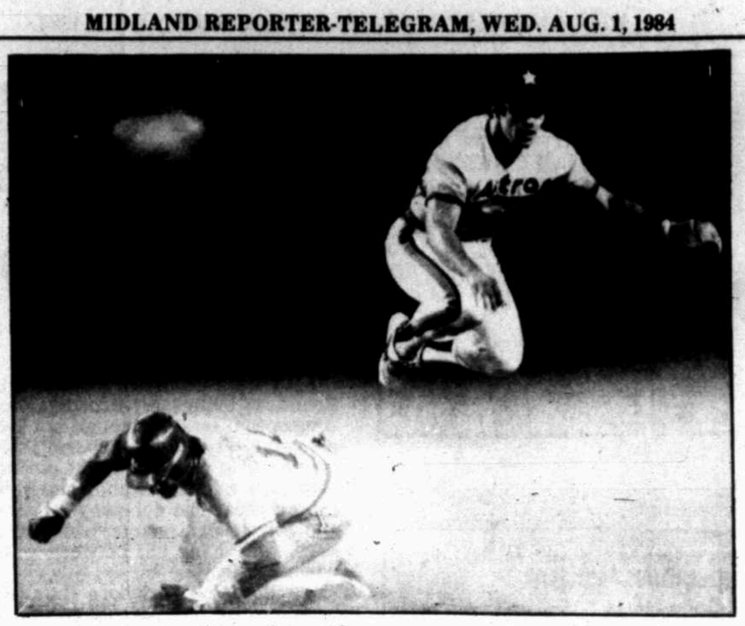

John Tudor, 6-8, picked up the win for the home club.

Braves 6, Astros 3

Claudell Washington's bases-loaded, two-run single keyed a three-run ninth inning. Chris Chambliss' pinch single drove in Washington with the third run of the inning.

Four of Tuesday's seven NL homers were hit in the Astrodome. Atlanta's Randy Johnson belted his third of the season in the third and Houston's Enos Cabell responded with one in the fourth. In the sixth, consecutive blasts by Dale Murphy, his 25th, and Bob Watson, his second, tied the game at 3-3.

White continues holdout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — All-Pro tackle Randy White has told friends that he is giving the Dallas Cowboys until Aug. 25 to offer him a bigger contract, the Dallas Times Herald reported Tuesday.

White has been fishing in East Texas instead of training at summer camp.

He reportedly wants his $330,000 salary bumped up to at least $800,000 next year — a salary equal to that of New York Jets defensive end Marvin Gastineau.

The Times Herald quotes White's friends as saying that White told them that he'll come back on Aug. 25 to play out his option if he doesn't get an acceptable contract offer.

The friends said White, 31, may sign with the United States Football League after his option is up.

White's holdout will soon become the longest in Cowboy's history.

American brings off-Broadway to Amsterdam

By ANDY NIEUWENHOF

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Raphael Brandow brings off-Broadway plays to the Amsterdam masses, though not too many people can crowd into the 65-seat theater he runs over a bar in the heart of the old city.

On slow nights, the audience is outnumbered by the theatrical company of about 20 actors and actresses, directors, technicians and stage hands who hang out between walk-ons in the downstairs cafe.

But the New York-born Brandow sees their between-the-acts patronage of his cafe as a reflection on the scant dressing room space he provides rather than a lack of artistic dedication. Besides, his American Repertory Theater is subsidized by the income from his bar.

"Even if we had a full house every night we wouldn't break even," the 42-year-old Brandow said. He also doubles as artistic director and ticket seller.

"Only the performers get paid and that depends on the night's takings. The others work as house cleaners or wash dishes during the day to pay their rent."

Building a stage in a 17th century house only 20 feet wide has forced Brandow to improvise on theater design.

Seating is nine rows of tiered bleachers, leaving just enough space for a lighting and sound effects technician perched in a tiny booth at the rear.

Brandow estimates that three-fourths of his audience is Dutch, and since English is the unofficial second language here, few of the patrons have any difficulty with the sophisticated dialogue of a contemporary American play.

Amsterdam has only one other professional company presenting English-language theater, specializing in contemporary works by lesser-known English, Irish and Australian playwrights.

"The audience loves the intimate atmosphere and even in the back stalls you're always close to the action," Brandow said. "And from the front row you can literally touch the actors."

For its production of James Kirkwood's comedy, "P.S. Your Cat Is Dead," the stage set is jammed with parts of a kitchen, bedroom, bathroom and living room, and all four of the play's characters must crowd onstage at the same time.

"You're always worrying about taking too many steps and ending up in the audience," said Letitia Redding of Fresno, Calif., the female lead.

Since opening last fall, his company has also presented "Sexual Perversity in Chicago," by David Mamet, Glynn O'Malley's "Waking Up" and Judy Engles' "The Powder Room."

During his high school days in New York, Brandow said he "played hooky and hung around" Broadway stage doors, waiting for the right moment to sneak in at intermission.

"I got to see the second half of just about every major Broadway production for four years," he said.

He formed his own troupe in 1976, when major American theater companies were touring Europe to mark the American bicentennial.

"I decided to form my own small company from some of the hundreds of out-of-work American actors in Europe," he said.

He began with a troupe of nine actors in London, but admits that "bringing theater to the theater capital of the world" wasn't a great success.

In 1979, the company came to Amsterdam and stayed.

"The Dutch conception of the American way of life is founded on TV shows such as 'Dynasty' and 'Dallas,' he said."What we are trying to do is close the cultural gap."

Why does this chicken cross road? To lay eggs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — And now, the latest chicken-crossing-the-road joke. Why'd she do it?

To lay eggs at the Riverside County Courthouse, according to a custodian who regularly breakfasts on the hen's work.

The chicken was dumped 1½ years ago across the street from the courthouse, but flew across the road and landed in a tree, custodian Louie Lanca said.

"She flies," Lanca said. "I've never seen a chicken fly like that."

The bird has endured at the courthouse despite the noise of nearby construction, summer heat and the long arm of the law, which once captured her and put her into a police locker, Lanca says.

He said he and his sons stopped by recently, pulled six eggs through a chain-link fence with a wire coathanger and took them home, as he has done for more than a year.

"We had them for breakfast on Sunday," Lanca said, adding that he sometimes pickles them.

"I always leave one (egg)," he said, to encourage the hen to return to that nest.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♡.

We have often said aces were made to capture kings—a player who refuses to do so might later be held accountable for his actions. But there s a time when holding back an ace might not only be wise; it might be vital to a successful campaign.

North had just enough to raise to game. His partner, at this vulnerability, promised seven tricks, and he had three, in addition to trump support.

West led the king of hearts, captured by the ace in dummy. Declarer sluffed a heart on the king of clubs, and a case could be made for an immediate diamond finesse. However, declarer feared the possibility of a diamond ruff, and he could afford to lose two diamond tricks as long as trump split 2-1. So he led a trump, and East dealt him a mortal blow by sluffing a diamond.

Fortunately, West came to declarer's aid by capturing the king of trumps with the ace. Now he found he had no safe return. (If West led a diamond and got a ruff, he would sacrifice his trump trick; a heart would set up the 10 for a later discard.) His only exit card was a club, but declarer, reading the hand perfectly, took full advantage of this unexpected entry to dummy.

He led the jack of diamonds. East did the best he could by rising with the ace and forcing declarer with a club. Declarer countered neatly by exiting with a low trump, conceding a trick to the jack. After ruffing the club return high, declarer got back to the board with the eight of trumps and successfully finessed East for the queen of diamonds. Making four-odd.

See the difference if West holds up the ace of trumps. Declarer can throw him in with a trump, but West can cash the last trump and exit with the queen of hearts or a club. Now declarer must lose two diamond tricks for down one.

Actor passes up sheik's money for art

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Nick Colasanto hadn't stopped in New York to see a few Broadway plays he might now be adding up the oil profits of some sheik — instead of tending bar at "Cheers."

Colasanto got sidetracked 30 years ago on his way to a job as an accountant in Saudi Arabia and ended up enrolling in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

He stars in NBC's hit comedy "Cheers" as Coach Ernie Pantusso, a man who can pass a baseball between his ears without hitting gray matter.

Actually, on that too he was sidelined. Colasanto had all but given up acting as he became one of the busiest directors in television.

"I'd done the picture 'Raging Bull,' playing the Mafia chief, and when 'Cheers' came along my agent suggested me to the producers," he said. "It was a long stretch from that to the coach. But I read for them a few times and connected.

"I've done three pictures, about three TV movies and a couple of TV shows. But I much prefer directing to acting. It's a lot more active. It's tedious waiting around when you're an actor. Directing is more physically active and less emotionally demanding. We tape before a live audience so when Friday night comes around you really have to whip yourself into emotional shape. And when you get a roar or a burst of applause it's worth it."

"Cheers," entering its third year on NBC, is the first comedy Colasanto's done. And he's only directed one comedy piece.

"Is comedy hard?" Colasanto considers the question. "None of it's easy. The writing on this show is so good that I'm sure if I'd gone to another show where the writing wasn't as good the whole thing wouldn't have come to me as fast.

"Coach is a component of many people. Once the central idea clicks so many things come out of your consciousness. Once you find the red thread it seems as though the fabric weaves itself. I have great faith in the director, Jim Burrows, and we have a great climate of freedom and that's especially important in comedy."

Colasanto said he considers Coach as innocent and sweet and doesn't play him as dumb. "I think back to 'Columbo,'" said Colasanto, who directed some of the shows. "Peter Falk was a very smart cop who played it dumb.

"Coach is not a worldly man. He's not well-read. He comes from the dugouts. He may be intelligent but he's not worldly wise. He's so positive. That's what makes him funny. He'll say the most absurd thing but if someone corrects him he immediately capitulates because he doesn't want to offend anyone."

He has not done any directing since he started "Cheers," although he had an offer to do a picture in the Philippines. "The year before I had pneumonia and the flu three or four times," he said. "So I was just downright afraid of getting some exotic Asian bug I couldn't handle. It was a movie about drug dealers in the jungle."

Flinty author doesn't mind screen treatment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Authors from Ernest Hemingway to Norman Mailer have complained about how their novels have been brought to the screen, so you might expect the same of Gregory Mcdonald, the flinty New Englander who is the father of "Fletch."

Mcdonald — small d, please — turns out to be a pussycat.

Well, not entirely. When he first read the script for "Fletch," now being filmed by Universal Pictures, he fired off his objections. He describes his actions at that time as "just being ornery, since the studio had no contractual commitment to listen to me."

The author came here from Boston to meet director Michael Ritchie, as well as Chevy Chase, who is playing reporter-sleuth I.M. Fletcher.

"Despite filming all day, Ritchie found the time to take me out to dinner," Mcdonald recounted. "He is a great man. Point by point, he showed me where I was wrong. I was beautifully chewed out."

Mcdonald waxes hyperbolic about Chase: "If a national election were held today, he should be elected president."

He also paid tribute to Peter Douglas, son of Kirk, co-producer (with Alan Greisman) of "Fletch."

"From 1975-6 he has been bird-dogging this project," Mcdonald said of Douglas. "He's a Hollywood kid, but he hasn't fallen into the usual traps. He had the guts and persistence to put the deal together."

Mcdonald describes himself as an uptight northeastern Scottish guy, a journalist and son of a journalist. He looks typecast — long, lean face, straight nose, skeptical blue eyes.

Son of a pioneering CBS radio reporter, Mcdonald went from Harvard into journalism, becoming critic and arts editor of the Boston Globe. At 27 he produced his first book, "Running Scared," a chilling tale of a college student who declined to interfere with his roommate's suicide. David Hemmings made a film version in England, but for legal reasons it never was released in the United States.

THE BETTER HALF

"Uncle Stanley, if they want to relieve international tension, why don't they export tranquilizers instead of guns?"

Your horoscope

Thursday, August 2, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Myrna Loy, writer James Baldwin, Senator Paul Laxalt (R-Nev.), actors Peter O'Toole and Carroll O'Connor and Kansas City Royals' Derek Botelho share your birthday. Also born on this date: architect Pierre L'Enfant. Let go of the past and plan for the future. The outlook is bright for those who approach their work with a positive attitude. You receive a helping hand from an unexpected quarter. Family relationships improve. Romance looks especially rewarding in December and again in April '85. Your flair for the dramatic helps you attract the attention of someone who can boost your career. A cherished dream becomes reality.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Active participation in a professional or social organization will open new doors. Make the most of every opportunity to expand your sphere of influence. An indirect approach works best in business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Dress your best today. You could get an introduction you have wanted for a long time. Tackle any complex detail work early in the day. A phone call could set off romantic fireworks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be careful not to rush into a lawsuit. Negotiate with someone face-to-face and you could walk away friends. A romantic attraction is very strong. Do not interfere with a business success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be less headstrong. Listen to other people's ideas and suggestions. A friend's investment proposal has not been throughly researched. A hunch helps you solve a romantic mystery. Keep a secret.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your pursuit of a new business may be a bit too intense. Slow down to avoid appearing pushy. A financial tangle can be straightened out if you act immediately. A picnic brings delight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Continue to develop a project on your own. With patience, you will eventually get it approved. You are very vulnerable emotionally right now. Do not rush into a new romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Resist friends who try to involve you in risky schemes. You need to participate more in community activities. New doors open to you. Make the most of your opportunities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relax. Tension can stand in the way of progress. Romance becomes more meaningful when you learn to adapt to loved one's moods. A great period for marriages, partnerships and financial dealings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Taking dynamic action will put extra cash in your pocket. You must have respect to win big. Greater self-confidence will reassure your colleagues. You score a major triumph.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There is no need to be apprehensive. Your supporters are ready to follow you almost anywhere. Co-workers become more cooperative. You need to come to a financial agreement with mate quickly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be careful not to take on too many things at once. If you are uncomfortable with your workload, your productivity could fall. Romance leads you in new directions. A commitment is expected.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Act with conviction and there will be no limit to what you can achieve. An amazing idea proves practical. Financial decisions cannot be postponed. Let romance develop at its own pace.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dry skin due to various causes

Dear Dr. Solomon: What causes dry skin? My husband is in the Army and we have lived in places where the humidity was high, low and in-between. But regardless of the location, my skin has always tended to be dry. Is there anything I can do about it? — Mrs. Y.B., Aberdeen, Md.

Dear Mrs. B.: Some of the causes of dry skin are within a person's control, but others are not. For example, the very process of growing older is accompanied by changes that tend to dry the skin and make it less flexible, and there's nothing we can do about growing older. However, other conditions are within our power to influence.

Excessive bathing in warm water can cause the skin to lose moisture, and soap removes the natural skin oils. In addition, extended exposure to low humidity as the result of air conditioning during the summer months and force-air heating during the winter months can lead to dryness. If this is part of the problem, the use of a humidifier might be helpful.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 71 years of age and I find that my hearing is not what it used to be. Before I go to a doctor about this, I would first like to make certain that something can be done about it. Can loss of hearing in someone my age be corrected? — Herman, Tampa, Fla.

Dear Herman: Whether or not your hearing loss can be corrected depends on its cause, and this is something a doctor will have to determine. There is little that can be done about central hearing loss, which stems from changes in the brain; however, hearing loss due to changes in the external, middle, or inner ear may be subject to treatment.

Dr. Noel L. Cohen, of the New York University Post-Graduate Medical School, says that amplification with a hearing aid can correct a good deal of the hearing impairment that accompanies growing older. A visit to your doctor may be very worthwhile.

For Phyllis, St. Paul, Minn.: Scientists in London report that the results of a study involving more than 400 infants show that German measles is greatest risk to the fetus during the first four months of pregnancy. Heart disease and deafness were the most common congenital rubella defects.

Lutherans pick president from Soviet bloc

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The Lutheran World Federation has for the first time chosen someone from the Soviet bloc as its president, electing Bishop Zoltan Kaldy of Hungary in a secret ballot.

Federation spokesman Roger Kahle said Kaldy, presiding bishop of Hungary's 430,000-member Lutheran community, received 173 votes in Tuesday's election.

Second with 124 votes was Bodil Soelling, associate general secretary of the Danish Lutheran Church's relief and development agency, Kahle said. He said 15 ballots were invalid.

Kaldy replaces Bishop Josiah Kibira of Tanzania and will serve until the next general assembly, planned for 1991. His duties will include chairing the federation's executive committee, its senior decision-making body, between full conferences.

The federation, with 99 member churches, indirectly represents about 54 million of the world's 6 million Lutherans. About 60 percent of Hungary's approximately 10 million people are Roman Catholic, while 4 percent are Lutheran.

Tradition dictates that the president come from the host country and Kaldy was the frontrunner even before the opening session July 23 of the seventh assembly, the first in a Communist country. But Kahle said the choice had been opposed "off the floor."

A letter written by Zoltan Doka, a Hungarian Lutheran pastor, and circulated among delegates, charged that Kaldy "ran the church autocratically and did not allow much discussion," Kahle said.

Some Scandinavian Lutherans and articles in the West German religious press have charged Kaldy with being overly cooperative with the Hungary's Communist government and not critical enough of communist ideology.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reward offered for girl's return

NEW YORK (AP) — A security firm offered $10,000 for the safe return of a 12-year-old girl missing since July 16, doubling the reward as authorities widened their search.

John Mallon, vice chairman of IBI Security Service Inc., said Tuesday his company's 75 armored trucks and patrol vehicles will distribute posters of 90-pound, brown-eyed Antonella Mattina.

"We want to keep the case alive and before the public, and I think money talks," said Mallon, the father of three children.

The girl was last seen near a bank four blocks from her home after she made a deposit for her parents. Detective William Clark said police suspect foul play.

Tentative pact may be approved

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Union officials say it could be Saturday before a vote is taken on a tentative settlement that averted a strike by 65,000 Southern California supermarket clerks.

Despite "significant opposition" among the rank-and-file to the tentative pact, it appears it will be approved, Dan Swinton, a spokesman for the United Food and Commercial Workers, said Tuesday.

The union postponed its Wednesday strike deadline until a vote can be held, Swinton said. Details of the agreement weren't immediately available.

The negotiations affected workers at 1,334 supermarkets.

Prosecutor to seek death penalty

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A prosecutor said she will seek the death penalty for two men convicted of murder and criminal conspiracy in the 1980 killing of a union leader who was organizing New Jersey casino workers.

The jury that convicted Raymond "Long John" Martorano and Albert Daidone on Tuesday will return to court Thursday to recommend a sentence.

A witness testified he was paid to kill John McCullough in Philadelphia because McCullough tried to organize Atlantic City workers. Authorites said Martorano is an organized crime figure.

Scientists await analysis of metal

FAIRBORN, Ohio (AP) — Scientists say it could be two weeks before they know whether a pancake-size piece of metal is part of a Soviet satellite that burned up while re-entering the atmosphere.

A landscaper found the disc, about the size of a small dinner plate, near Lebanon, in southwestern Ohio, after a rocket that carried a Soviet satellite into orbit fell to earth Friday.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo., is interested in the chunk, said spokesman Kay Cormier. She said it would be highly unusual for a rocket part to survive re-entry.

Space shuttle crew reassigned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The crew that was to have flown space shuttle Discovery's second mission has been reassigned to a February trip after the craft's aborted maiden voyage was combined with another flight.

Riding with astronaut Karol Bobko and his four man crew on the Feb. 12 flight will be French astronaut Patrick Baudry, NASA said Tuesday.

The crew was to have flown on the second flight of the shuttle Discovery, which had been set for an Aug. 29 liftoff.

Engine troubles forced postponement of Discovery's maiden flight on June 25 and 26. Shuttle managers then combined the ship's first two missions.

Workers to assist in layoffs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Workers at Levi Strauss & Co.'s San Francisco headquarters and regional offices will help the company choose several hundred of nearly 3,600 employees who will be laid off.

About 2,000 executive, sales and other professional staff members will participate in the company's "Objective Judgment Quotient," the name given for the system used to appraise work performance.

Under the system, workers will not be rated by supervisors alone, but also by up to nine fellow employees to be named by the person under review.

Some of Levi's layoffs to date have been blamed on a decline in the popularity of denim jeans, company officials said.

Cyclamate may go to market

WASHINGTON (AP) — The artificial sweetener cyclamate, banned in the United States 15 years ago because of feared cancer risks, could go back on the market if a new review helps clears its name, industry spokesmen say.

New studies of the banned sweetener indicate it probably doesn't cause cancer, but the data will be reassessed by a National Academy of Sciences committee to make sure.

MISD board proposes increased tax rate

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

Midland school trustees during a special meeting Tuesday approved salary increases and proposed a 71-cent tax per $100 valuation to finance its $54 million budget.

Because the proposed rate exceeds the effective tax rate by more than 3 percent, a public hearing was called for 4 p.m. Aug. 8 to hear community comment.

The district's effective tax rate was 65.99 cents. (The effective tax rate is the rate needed to raise the same amount of revenues as was raised the previous year.) The proposed rate is a 7.59 percent increase. Had it been more than 8 percent, the district may have been subject to a rollback election such as Ector County schools suffered earlier this year.

Last year's actual tax rate was 77 cents. A decrease in the rate will still raise more revenues because the tax base (total value of property within the district) increased about 20 percent this year.

Payroll costs are up about 6.3 percent from last year. Beginning teachers' salary went from $14,665 to $17,000, and most teachers will get a $1,300 raise. The maximum salary went up only $400, to $34,072. That is 45 percent above state base pay. The district's average salary is nearly 25 percent above base. Other employees are expected to receive a 6 percent raise.

The 1984-85 budget totals $53,964,257 — up nearly $3.3 million, or 6.4 percent, from last year. Although the proposed tax rate is 7.6 percent higher, the budget will increase only 6.4 percent because state funding was cut by more than half a million dollars.

The board granted a 10 percent homestead exemption this year to help offset the increase in valuation most homeowners experienced. According to the Midland County Tax Appraisal District, appraised values of homes in the Midland school district increased an average of 30 percent.

A person owning a $100,000 home paid $731.50 in school taxes last year. If that same home appreciated 30 percent this year, and is now valued at $130,000, taxes due will be $795.20 after the exemption and based on the new rate. That represents an 8.7 percent increase, or $63.70.

Most homeowners whose property value increased 20 percent or less will pay approximately the same or less taxes this year. In addition, assessed values of homes owned by senior citizens is frozen, so their taxes should be less.

Trustees cut the original budget by nearly $700,000. About $457,000 was trimmed from the "things" budget — mainly capital outlay, travel and repairs. Another $180,000 was saved by not filling vacant 8½ positions.

By reducing annuity benefits, the district can save another $150,000, Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi estimated. He suggested reducing the district's matching contribution into a tax-sheltered annuity from 3 to 2½ percent of an employee's salary. Baressi predicted the district will pay $750,000 in annuity benefits next year. This will be the first year of the plan, which has received verbal approval from the Internal Revenue Service.

Trustees also increased their expected tax collection rate from 93 to 94 percent, which accounts for an additional $300,000.

Report: Schools spent $9 billion

From Staff Reports

Texans spent $9 billion on 2.7 million public school children last year, an increase of $552 million over the previous year.

These and other figures are compiled annually by the Texas Research League, an Austin-based educational corporation engaged in governmental research.

Local TRL statistics show the average Midland teacher's salary was $22,587 in 1982-83. That figure is 40.8 percent above state base pay and 16 percent higher than the state average. The average Texas teacher's salary was $19,500, and in Region 18 it was slightly below $21,900.

Defendant found not guilty of drug possession

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The defendant viewed the "not guilty" verdict as "fair."

His Odessa attorney said Midlanders are "good people" and make just jurors.

And the co-prosecutor said the defense attorney "did a real good job" in defending his client.

Moments earlier, the 10-woman, two-man jury returned a "not guilty" verdict against 47-year-old Adulciano "Al" Hamilton. He had been charged with possession of a gram of cocaine after he was stopped on a traffic violation April 4 by a Midland police officer.

The moving traffic offense later was dismissed by Municipal Court Judge James Fitz-Gerald III.

"It was a fair verdict, really," said Hamilton, a Plano swimming pool builder who formerly lived in Midland. "And it only proves they have justice everywhere, no matter what the odds are."

HAMILTON was arrested in affluent northwest Midland at Midland Drive and Wadley Avenue by Midland Police Patrolman Manuel Beltran after Hamilton turned left on a traffic signal's green arrow. Beltran subsequently arrested Hamilton for possession of a gram of cocaine.

The officer claimed Hamilton turned from the wrong lane. Hamilton said he did not, that he turned from the left-turn lane, as he had done many times before. But markings on the street were not visible. Fitz-Gerald later dismissed the traffic charge.

The officer claimed he saw a piece of plastic containing a dab of a white powder fall from Hamilton's hands after he had stopped Hamilton about 4:50 a.m. Testimony indicated Hamilton had gotten out of his car to see why the policeman had stopped him but got back into the car after being ordered to by the officer. That's when the officer said he spotted the cocaine.

Hamilton said he discarded nothing and that he, for the first time, was driving his younger brother's car since his truck was not running. Hamilton, who was in northwest Midland to pick up an employee for a job in Crane, said his brother, about 23, often loaned his car to girl friends and other friends.

THE OFFICER said he had picked up the small plastic wrap of cocaine from the ground next to Hamilton's car.

Hamilton's lawyer, John W. Smith of Odessa, had told the jurors that there was enough "reasonable doubt" on the possession issue to free his client.

"Al may not be telling the exact truth," he suggested. Smith tendered three possible situations:

—Hamilton was a "big enough idiot" to discard the cocaine.

—His brother or one of his brother's girl friends left the cocaine on the car's sun visor or in the seat.

—Or "maybe" Hamilton "did try to get rid of it" after he spotted the cocaine, as he was looking for proof of insurance coverage in the glove compartment of his brother's car.

"The smart thing would be for him to close the glove compartment" had Hamilton in fact seen the cocaine there, Smith said.

The defense attorney said Hamilton immediately realized, "I'm in a Mississippi car at 4:50 a.m., and I'm on the wrong side of town."

Smith said Hamilton was black, was in the "wrong place" at the "wrong time" in the "wrong car."

The prosecution contended Hamilton by innuendo was suggesting that Beltran had planted the cocaine. Smith denied that.

AFTER THE JURORS returned their verdict, Smith immediately congratulated his client. The jurors solemnly filed out of the courtroom without incident. Co-prosecutor Jack Connors offered Smith a congratulatory handshake, and Smith slightly bowed before presiding Judge Vann Culp of Midland's 238th State District Court, and flipped a casual salute.

"Your Honor," he told Culp, "it's been a pleasure."

"When you win, it usually is," Culp said calmly."

Later, in the corridor just outside the courtroom, Smith complimented Midland jurors.

"I know Midland jurors will listen, and they will inspect everything," Smith said. "They are good people, and they are not about to be stampeded to a verdict. They weigh the evidence."

Connors, who joined Janet Copeland, another assistant district attorney in prosecuting the case, credited the "not guilty" verdict to the defense attorney's tactics.

"I think he did a real good job in creating a 'reasonable doubt' defense to the jury. He offered plausible explanations as to how it (the cocaine) might have got there...You really don't know what happened."

Connors dismissed any notion that Beltran, 24, might have "planted" the cocaine just to enhance his career.

"He'd never do that," Connors said. "If he did do something like that, I'd be absolutely shocked...I think he (Hamilton) did throw it out or it fell out of the car."

DPS investigator testifies at trial

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A DPS narcotics investigator told jurors today how he had taken a suspect into custody, when shooting broke out during a planned cocaine arrest in an Odessa motel Dec. 9, 1983.

DPS investigator Gary Hilton testified he was holding Gerald Leon Hardin at a truck Hardin used to escape when he moved to the aid of two officers shot when the plan went askew. When he moved toward the motel room, Hardin drove off the curb and away from the scene, according to testimony.

Another narcotics officer recalled for jurors Tuesday afternoon the planned "buy-bust" which erupted into gunplay at the motel. One man was killed and two officers were wounded in the exchange.

Steve Frederick of the Odessa Police Department testified in the 70th District Court that he had set up the cocaine sale earlier in the day with Jana Denise Matheny, 22, who is on trial for attempted capital murder. She also has been indicted for delivery of cocaine.

Frederick said he was studying the contents of four clear bags of white powder he believed to be cocaine, when he noticed the defendant rise from her chair, cross the room and secure the deadbolt.

The officer said he had signaled officers in an adjoining room through a hidden microphone to enter the room when the deal had been made, according to a pre-arranged plan. Ms. Matheny spotted the undercover officers at the door through the room's window and warned her husband, 33-year-old Michael Grant Matheny, said Frederick.

MATHENY FIRED through the door at the plain-clothed officers, said Frederick, who fired three times at Matheny. While Frederick escaped injury, two officers attempting to enter the room suffered abdominal wounds. Matheny died at the scene from gunshot wounds.

The bust was to occur when Frederick said, "The stuff looks good to me," but the two officers attempting to enter the room about 3 p.m. found the door deadbolted shut when they had made their way around to an adjoining room.

The officer told jurors that he and the defendant had sat down in chairs on either side of a small table, with her husband checking the door between the two rooms, then taking a seat facing them on one of the beds.

He said Ms. Matheny had passed him the baggies of cocaine after her husband asked him if he'd ever made any drug deals with "a Royce out of Midland."

As the defendant moved to the door and secured the deadbolt, Frederick said he reached between the mattresses of the nearest bed for his "flash roll," (money used to make drug dealers think the officers have the full amount needed to make the sale) in an attempt to stall for time until the officers outside had gained entrance to the room.

MATHENY RAN from the door into the bathroom after Frederick fired three rounds at him, according to testimony, with the officer firing two more rounds at Matheny through the wall of the bathroom.

Ms. Matheny was screaming hysterically on the floor, said Frederick, when he ordered her to crawl out of the bathroom. After several attempts to get the husband to come out of the bathroom, Frederick said he sent her in to get the gun or bring her husband out.

When the defendant exited the bathroom with the gun, Frederick said a Department of Public Safety narcotics officer who had checked on the husband's condition said to him, "It's all over with."

Frederick explained another signal, "What's the gun for," was to have been used if he thought his life was in danger or the transaction was an "obvious rip-off," in which the dealers would take the money and keep what he valued as about $8,000 in cocaine. The plan also had Frederick being arrested along with the Mathenys to protect the identity of the informant who made the deal possible.

Under questioning by Andrews attorney Dan Sullivan, Frederick admitted the entire operation had been staged to trick the Mathenys into thinking he wanted to buy the narcotics and that seven of the eight officers at the scene were not wearing police uniforms.

SULLIVAN EMPHASIZED the Mathenys had no way of knowing Frederick or the officers at the door were policemen until after Matheny had begun firing. Dealers can also be victims of a "rip-off," said Frederick.

The attorney suggested Frederick's first three shots, fired as Matheny stood by the door, could have struck the officers outside. "I would probably be dead along with some other officers outside that room," said the officer, if he had not fired at Matheny.

One of the wounded officers, Phil Harrold of the police department, testified he had known Matheny for several years. Harrold was released from the hospital the day following the shooting after being treated for a hip wound, but missed seven weeks of work.

Grocer sentenced for possessing cocaine

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Miami, Fla., grocer who doesn't want to tell his 12-year-old son he's a "cocaine" criminal and a Mexican national who, for hire, transported three illegal aliens from Mexico to Texas were sentenced to prison terms Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

The grocer, Pablo Enrique Toll, 37, was sentenced to 10 years in prison for conspiracy to haul four pounds of almost pure Colombian cocaine from California to Miami last May 4.

He was caught by federal agents at a check point at Sierra Blanca and was jailed in Pecos. In addition to the cocaine, valued at about $50,000, agents uncovered about $80,000 in cash in the car Toll was driving.

Toll, a Cuban native who operates the San Jose Supermarket and Coffee Shop in Miami, told Bunton prior to sentencing, "I've always been working. I've always taken care of my family. I've had no trouble before." Toll said he could hardly bear to tell his son of the trouble Toll and his attorney, Allan Zambren, had sought a probated sentence.

"He is remorseful," Zambren said. He said his client "had no knowledge of what was in the automobile" he was driving and did not own the car.

"He is not a career criminal. He has brought shame and embarrassment to his family and emotional problems...He is very remorseful."

The judge considered the pleadings.

"You're not a kid," he told Toll. "You knew if you got caught, you would have to pay the piper."

The judge noted that eventually Toll would have to tell his son, who is "supposed to look up to you." That cocaine, Bunton added, "might well have caused the death" of children and untold harm.

"I think you were just a 'mule' (courier of the contraband)," Bunton said, "but you were a pretty big mule."

Peter Espero, Jr., also known as Fernando Flores, pleaded guilty to transporting an illegal alien from Boquillas, Mexico, to Texas and was prison. He was caught by a federal agent in the Midland area, as he was driving three aliens to Dallas.

"You're not a kid. You knew if you got caught, you would have to pay the piper... I think you were just a 'mule' (courier of the contraband)," but you were a pretty big mule."

— Judge Lucius D. Bunton to defendant Pablo Toll

Though Espero, 27, was indicted for transporting three illegal aliens into this country, he pleaded guilty to bringing in only one. Two other counts in the indictment were dismissed.

The prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike McDonald, noted that Espero was to have been paid $500 each by the three aliens after they had found jobs in Dallas.

Espero was caught in the Midland area, as he was driving the three aliens along Interstate 20. The three Mexicans, who were sitting in the back seat, ducked when they saw a "Once they ducked down, he (the agent) suspected they were in fact illegal aliens," McDonald said. The agents stopped Espero's car, investigated the driver and passengers, and made arrests.

Espero previously had been placed on probation by Bunton for illegal re-entry into the United States. Bunton revoked Espero's probation, sentenced him to 4½ years in prison for violation of probation and said that sentence and the 4½-year sentence for transporting the illegal alien would run concurrently.

Espero claimed his mother told him he was born in California but he had no documentation to prove his

Escaped Odessa jail prisoner recaptured

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A city jail prisoner escaped for two hours Tuesday from a detective division interview room, but was recaptured without a battle about one mile from the police station.

Curry Wallace, 18, of Odessa reportedly crawled through the false ceiling in the interview room, dropped down to an open room next door and walked out of the police station about 10:20 a.m. Tuesday. He had been arrested July 26 for a June 26 home burglary in which $3,635 in merchandise was reported missing.

Detectives, who had been questioning him about other local burglaries, left him alone in the room. When they returned, Wallace had disappeared, according to reports.

Already facing a sentence range of five years to life imprisonment for the burglary and up to a $10,000 fine, Wallace is now facing escape charges.

"It's not uncommon at all" for a prisoner to be left alone in an interview room, said Lt. Rusty Baker. He explained that, despite security precautions calling for anyone on the second floor to be wearing identification badges, a person could pass unnoticed down to the ground floor and escape because of constant commotion in the building.

Wallace was spotted east of Dixie Blvd. on Lindy Drive, just south of U.S. Highwayb 80, said Baker, and offered no resistance when officers surrounded him.

This was the second escape from the new police buiding. Both escapees were recaptured.

Family receives $10,000 for aiding Continental

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Instinct prompted Marilyn Ritthaler and her 14-year-old daughter to pick up a paper sack full of unexploded pipe bombs and turn them over to police investigating two striking Continental Airline pilots, the woman said.

The pilots were carrying maps and pictures of homes of non-striking pilots. The were convicted of conspiracy and possession of explosives and sentenced to eight years in prison.

Continental, which said the assistance of the Ritthalers helped convict the pilots, Tuesday rewarded Mrs. Ritthaler and her daughter Amy with a $10,000 check.

"It's not often that citizens get involved in a law enforcement incident," said Don Breeding, vice president of flight operations for Continental.

"In this case, Amy and her mother's involvement was instrumental in the conviction of the two striking ALPA (Air Line Pilots Association) members," Breeding said at a special ceremony at the San Antonio airport.

"This conviction was essential in protecting our employees from additional violence and life-threatening acts by striking union members," Breeding said.

Mrs. Ritthaler, 32, and her daughter were driving through their neighborhood last November when they saw a paper bag being tossed from a car.

The car was being chased by police because it had eluded a Department of Public Safety driver's license checkpoint. After officers stopped the car, Mrs. Ritthaler drove up and turned over the pipe bombs.

"It was instinctive what we did," she said after Tuesday's ceremony. "Obviously something wrong was going on. Obviously, it was evidence that needed to be turned in."

Mrs. Ritthaler said she and her daughter did not find out until later that the pipe bombs could have exploded with as little as a spark to ignite them.

Amy Ritthaler said the money would be shared among family members and her part would go into a savings account for college.

The striking pilots, Charles Weldon Hall, 48, of Humble and Francis Calvin Early, 43, of Houston, were fired after they were charged.

Authorities said they found a wig, a hat, maps and pictures of non-striking workers in a search of the car the men were driving. Hall and Early are appealing their convictions, claiming they were the victims of an illegal search.

Continental pilots have been on strike since October 1983. Spokesman Mike Cinelli said 1,100 pilots were working Tuesday. An additional 850 to 900 others still are on strike, he said.

The major source of contention at this point, he said, is seniority.

Midland Center winning logo incorporates railroad

From Staff Reports

The official logo has been chosen for the Midland Centennial. The logo was the winning entry of Susan Condor in the Centennial Logo Contest. It will be used on stationary, T-shirts, bumper stickers, flags, and any other items and symbols dealing with the centennial.

The logo contest was held in May and June, and over 40 entries were received. Ms. Condor was the finalist in the adult division, as well as being the overall winner.

The two other finalists were Gabriel Lewis, who was a fifth-grader at Fannin when he entered the contest, and Jason Dean, who was a student at Lee Freshman. Lewis won in the first-grade through sixth-grade division, while Dean won in the seventh-grade through 12th-grade division.

Condor's red, white and blue logo shows the 100 years of Midland's history, starting with the railroad and progressing to the "Tall City."

All entries were judged on historical, social, cultural, economic or patriotic significance to the city and county. They were also judged on identification through words or symbolism with Midland and its centennial. Finally, all entries were judged on reproductive quality. The logo is now the property of the Centennial Commission, and any use of it must be approved through the Commission.

Judges for the logo contest were Stan Jacobs, an art instructor at Midland College; Rosindo Reyes, an art teacher at Alamo Junior High; and Mike Rhoden of Qualified Printers.

The runners-up for each division were:

— Adult: Sherri Bassett, Roy Fitzwater, Mary Rasmussen, Billee Tully, Andy Waits and Dana Williams.

— Seventh through 12th Grades: John Eberly, a ninth-grader at Lee Freshman; Sharon Graham, a 10th-grader at Midland High; Marty Skaggs of San Jacinto Junior High; David Stringer, a ninth-grader at Lee Freshman; and Tess Walden, another ninth-grader at Lee Freshman.

— First through Sixth Grades: Neiba Gabaldon, a first-grader at DeZavala Elementary; Jason Ogden, a fourth-grader at Burnett; Mark Seidenberger, a fourth-grader at Burnett, Geoff Simmons, a fourth-grader at Burnett; and Mike Taylor, a third-grader at Fannin.

Also, Saturday hours have been added with the department open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

All donors and potential donors are asked to call the blood bank at 685-1636 for further information or to schedule an appointment to donate a pint of blood.

SCHOOLS

Of the 50 largest school districts in the state, only one paid higher wages than MISD, but six districts in oil-rich Region 18 topped Midland's average salary.

Greenwood teachers averaged $18,880 (34 percent over the state minimum) and Ector paid $22,400 per teacher (39 percent above base).

Midland spent about $2,780 per student last year. Most of that money — $2,320 — went toward salaries. ECISD budgeted slightly more than $3,000 per child and Greenwood spent $2,730. The statewide average was about $2,700, but the regional average totaled nearly $3,300.

MISD had a higher percentage of superintendents, principals and assistants than the typical Texas school district. There were five administrators per 1,000 students. The state-wide average was 4.7, Ector had 3.5 and Greenwood 3.7. Region 18 averaged 5.1.

(These per-student figures were based on average daily attendance, which was 15,973 for Midland. ECISD had about 23,200 and GISD 1,090.)

Midland budgeted much less per student on extracurricular activities than nearby school districts or the average regionally and statewide. While GISD spent $90 and Ector $66 per pupil on such activities, Midland spent $49. The average spent in Region 18 was nearly $110, and in Texas $61.

MISD also spent less on busing than its neighbors. While Midland paid $76 per student for transportation, Ector spent $181 and GISD $130.

To fund all this, Midland increased tax revenues by 11 percent last year, even though the actual tax rate decreased one-half cent. Greenwood levied 19 percent more last year and Ector 12 percent more. The average state increase was 10 percent.

Greenwood's tax rate last year was $1.22 per $100 valuation, compared to Midland's 77 cents and ECISD's 77½ cents. The typical Texas district levied nearly 73 cents, and in Region 18 the average was 54 cents. But actual taxes paid varied from district to district because some offer exemptions that others do not.

The pupil/teacher ratio in Midland schools was 17 to 1. Greenwood had 20.4 and Ector 16 students per teacher. The state average was 16.4 and the region averaged 15.

TRIAL

Sullivan also questioned why neither Harrold's nor Frederick's report included any mention of the officers outside the door identifying themselves. A statement from the other wounded officer did refer to him and Harrold saying they were police before attempting to enter.

"You can't count on anyone hearing you or not," said Harrold.

MS. MATHENY is free on $25,000 bond. Hardin, arrested after a high-speed chase from the scene, is free on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond. Both suspects' bonds were orginally set at $100,000.

Hardin, 31, who reportedly lived with the Mathenys in Odessa, allegedly exchanged fire with a DPS officer before escaping the scene. He has also been indicted for attempted capital murder and delivery of cocaine.

If convicted, the maximum sentence for either charge is life imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

DRUG

Connors said the prosecution had offered Hamilton a probated sentence in exchange for a guilty plea but that Hamilton declined the offer.

The prosecution contended Hamilton had discarded the cocaine, Connors said, "but apparently we didn't convince the jury of that."

Panel to submit nominees to White for appointed Board of Education

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White will get a list of 45 nominees for the revamped State Board of Education by Sept. 1, according to the legislative panel that will pick the candidates.

Speaker Gib Lewis, chairman of the new 10-member Legislative Education Board, said Tuesday that "well over 100" applications for the 15 spots on the new State Board of Education have been submitted.

The new education law scraps the 27-member elected Board of Education and sets up a 15-member panel picked by the governor. The board reverts to an elected one in four years.

White will select from among the three nominees recommended for each of the 15 districts.

"If anyone has a desire to serve (on the new board) they need to get their applications in right away," said Lewis.

Secretary of State John Fainter told the LEB that the U.S. Department of Justice, which must approve all election-related changes, will rule on the new plan within 60 days.

Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, told the LEB he wants current board member Mary Helen Berlanga of Corpus Christi appointed to the new panel.

Berlanga called his cousin's wife "the pride of South Texas and the Hispanic community."

Also Tuesday, the LEB was told that an apparent legislative oversight may have left the state responsible for funding full-day kindergarten in districts that want the state money to do it.

LEB member Bill Haley, House public education committee chairman, said lawmakers meant to pay only for half-day kindergarten. But Lewis said the Texas Education Agency's interpretation of the education reform package includes state money for full-day kindergarten.

If all eligible districts opt to take the money, it could cost the state $90 million, officials said.

Haley said the 1985 Legislature probably would correct the error. He warned districts not to take the money unless they are willing to pick up the costs if the 1985 Legislature does rework the bill.

Board members also sought to allay fears of school superintendents who have seen computer printouts indicating the new legislation would give their schools less money than previous printouts showed.

"My office has received some concerns from superintendents calling in saying this is going to hurt us and we are going to lose a great deal more money than we previously anticipated," said Lewis.

Girl with rabies remains in critical condition

HOUSTON (AP) — A comatose 12-year-old girl stricken with rabies remained in critical condition as doctors exhausted efforts to try to determine the source of the disease.

The youngster, suffering the nation's first case of rabies this year, continued to receive the experimental drug ribavirin and was being kept on life support systems at Texas Children's Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Joan London said Tuesday night.

Ms. London said the girl's pediatrician, Dr. Dixie Swanson, "called it a deep coma," but she said the child was not brain dead.

Dr. Ralph Feigin, the hospital's physician in chief, said the child has been receiving ribavirin, an experimental anti-viral agent "effective in the test tube" against the rabies virus.

"We do not believe this will alter her course, but there is no other treatment," Feigin said. He said tests would continue to isolate the rabies virus to "give us a clue of the source."

Since the diagnosis was only established Saturday, Feigin said it is unlikely the patient will survive.

The girl first was hospitalized July 11 after complaining of a sore throat and headache, Feigin said. She was transferred to Texas Children's Hospital on July 16.

Teen not arrested in death; Police thought she was witness

HOUSTON (AP) — Police failed to arrest a teen-age girl who was later charged in the slaying of a 2-year-old boy she had used as a shield because officers thought she was a witness, said Police Chief Lee Brown.

Edna Denise Cole, 15, who police say was a prostitute, has been charged with injury to a child and involuntary manslaughter in the death of Shaun Givens.

The boy was fatally shot on July 9 when Miss Cole held him as a shield against her gun-wielding boyfriend, authorities said.

Police officers were criticized for failing to detain Miss Cole, who remained at the scene for several minutes after police arrived. But Brown told city council members Tuesday his officers followed standard police practice.

Brown said officers originally thought Miss Cole was only a witness to the incident and did not realize until after she left the scene that she was involved.

"It would not be a normal procedure to put a witness into custody," Brown said.

Miss Cole's boyfriend, Lloyd Daniel Reece, has been charged with the murder of Shaun. Reece allegedly fired at Cole and the bullet grazed her hand, striking the toddler in the side and piercing his heart.

Snake hides out in police car

BEAUMONT (AP) — They're trained to combat criminals and respond to dangerous situations. But when it comes to tracking down snakes, the Beaumont Police Department is baffled.

As a result, a new Beaumont police car was declared out of service this week "due to snake bite." Nobody has figured out what to do about it.

The mystery began on Monday when Officer Dennis Murray was on patrol and stopped to issue a traffic citation and left the door slightly open.

When he returned and sat down, he looked down to see a copperhead snake crawling out from under him.

Murray leaped from the car and looked for the snake. He called for help but others were also unable to find the snake. Nobody offered to drive the car.

A wrecker was called and the car was hauled to the city garage.

COOLING TROPICAL CONFECTIONS
Enhance Summertime Magic

A balmy breeze, fireflies amidst the trees, the sweet scent of honeysuckle in the air... it's another idyllic midsummer night's eve.

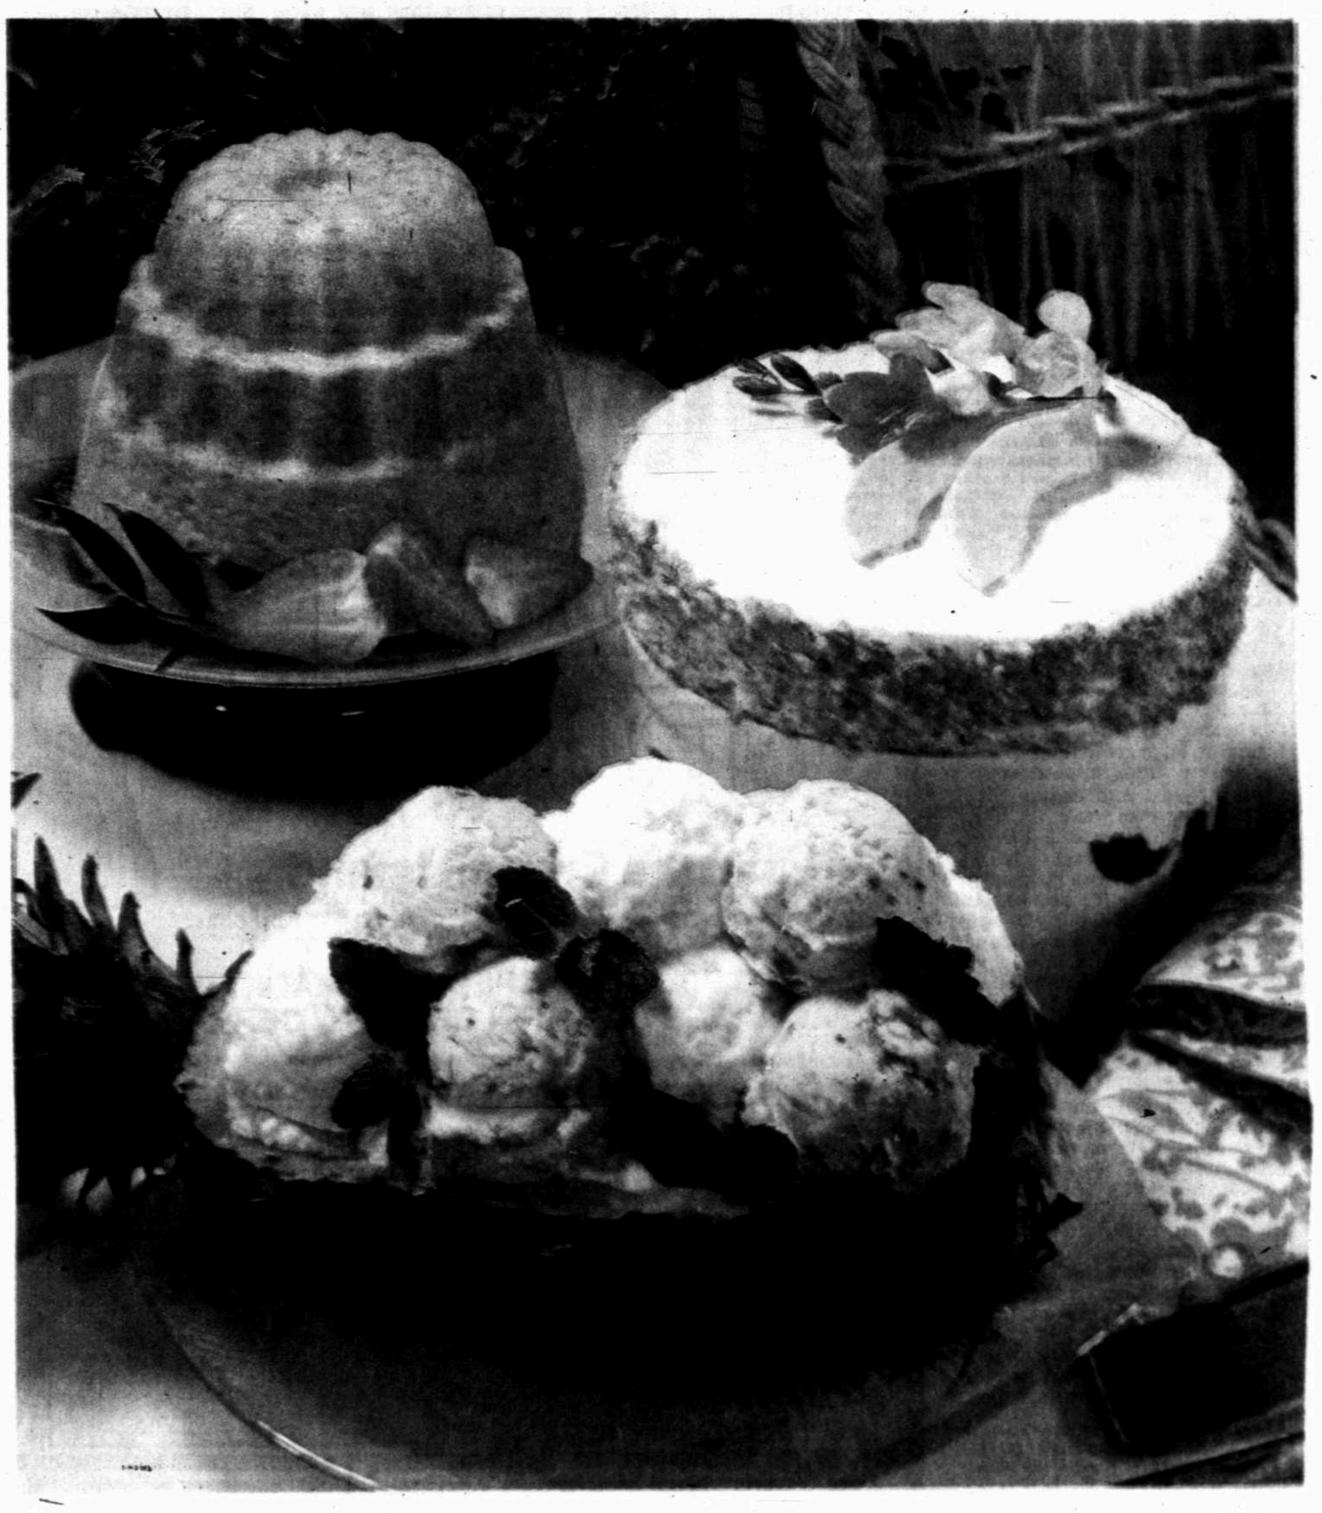

But even paradise can be enhanced by a thoughtful hostess.

Embellish summer's magic with cooling tropical confections—frozen desserts and sparkling, slushy drink potions. These summer treats come in pretty pastels and lilting flavors like pineapple, papaya, strawberry. And, for extra flavor impact, CocoRibe coconut rum has been added. The exotic combination of rum and natural coconut brings appetizing new dimensions to these recipes.

They are refreshing to the taste and dazzling to the eye—and, surprisingly, almost as quick and easy as opening a half gallon of sherbet. Each dish or drink can be prepared ahead of time, to emerge fresh and frosty from the freezer hours later. Made with natural ingredients like yogurt and fruit, they're a healthy alternative to ice cream and perfect for light summer eating.

Double the appeal of these frozen desserts or drinks by presenting them as prettily and colorfully as possible. Scoops of frozen yogurt, for instance, are quite dramatic nestled in a hollowed-out pineapple. The souffle can be garnished with wedges of fresh papaya and a sprig of flowers to add sunny color.

Take a minute to whip up... and then luxuriate in... one of these delicious creations. And enjoy a truly enchanted summer evening.

FROZEN COLADA YOGURT

2 cups vanilla flavored yogurt
3/4 cup CocoRibe coconut rum
*1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple, drained
3 egg whites
Pinch cream of tartar

In medium bowl combine yogurt, coconut rum and pineapple; mix well. Pour mixture into a metal freezer tray. Freeze until partially frozen. In a medium bowl beat egg whites with cream of tartar until stiff but not dry. In a large bowl beat pineapple mixture until smooth but icy. Fold in egg whites. Return to freezer tray; freeze overnight or until firm. Serve scoops in pineapple shell or dessert dishes. YIELD: 8 to 10 servings.

*Note: 1 cup chopped, fresh strawberries may be substituted for canned pineapple.

FROZEN TROPICAL SOUFFLE

1/2 cup water
1/2 cup sugar
7 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 medium papaya, peeled, pureed (1-1/4 cups)
3/4 cup CocoRibe coconut rum
3/4 cup finely chopped walnuts, almonds or pecans

In top of double boiler combine water and sugar. Cook over direct heat 5 minutes until mixture is slightly syrupy. Cool 5 minutes. In small mixer bowl beat egg yolks until thick. Gradually add warm syrup, beating constantly. Return mixture to double boiler. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Place double boiler in bowl of ice water; beat mixture with electric mixer or egg beater until cold and thick. Fold in whipped cream, pureed fruit and coconut rum. Attach a 3-inch wide strip of waxed paper or aluminum foil around a 1-quart souffle dish to form a collar. Pour mixture into prepared dish and freeze overnight or until firm. Before serving, carefully remove collar. Press chopped nuts around side of souffle. Garnish top with papaya slices, if desired. YIELD: 8 servings.

COCONUT STRAWBERRY FREEZE

2/3 cup orange juice
1 pint strawberries, pureed (about 1-1/2 cups)
3/4 cup CocoRibe coconut rum
2 egg whites
1/4 cup sugar

In a small saucepan combine gelatin and orange juice. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over medium heat until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in strawberry puree and coconut rum. Transfer mixture to a freezer tray. Place in freezer until partially frozen. In small bowl beat egg whites until foamy; gradually add sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. In large bowl beat strawberry mixture until smooth but icy. Fold in egg whites. Pour into a 5-cup mold; return to freezer. Freeze overnight or until firm. Before serving, place in refrigerator 20 minutes or until tempered enough to serve. Unmold onto serving dish. Garnish with sliced strawberries, if desired. YIELD: 8 to 10 servings.

When ready to serve, remove container from freezer; let stand at room temperature 5 minutes. Turn mixture into mixer bowl; beat until smooth but still icy. Spoon into coupe glasses. Garnish with orange and lime slices, if desired. Serve with short straw. YIELD: 6 servings.

Snappy suggestions spice up straw season sipping

By PHYLLIS C. RICHMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

This is the season of the straw, the tumbler, the mug. Forks and knives go on half rations.

Chewing holds less appeal than it did in January, and what seems most delicious on a muggy evening is anything that slides icily over the tongue all by itself, preferably after it has clinked around with ice cubes for a while.

Here are heat-induced thoughts on cool and delicious things to sip in summer:

Iced tea is as common as salt shakers on the tables of the South, but in summer it spreads a tidal wave north as well. Brew it strong so the ice doesn't turn it to mere tannin-water, and garnish it with a sprig of mint from your back yard (or your neighbor's). Then, for a change, slip in a slice of orange rather than lemon.

Save that lemon for lemonade. Homemade need not take longer than instant. Keep in the refrigerator a jar of sugar syrup — just heat some sugar in water until it dissolves — and when the thirst hits, squeeze a lemon (preferably room temperature or rendered more juicy by 10 seconds in the microwave) into a glass, fill with water and ice and pour in that sugar syrup to taste, with no worry about having to dissolve sugar granules in icy liquid.

Most like it hot when it comes to coffee, but those who don't like it cold may never have tasted proper — that is, strong — iced coffee. Brew it double strength, or even triple. You can store the brewed concentrate in the refrigerator if absolutely necessary. Or freeze leftover coffee in ice cube trays so water doesn't dilute the brew when it is being iced down.

You can add a fillip to your iced coffee with a dash of vanilla, a sprinkle of cinnamon or a dollop of whipped cream and a shaving of chocolate.

Ice isn't all that can cool a drink. Ice cream is just as efficient and far more delicious. First, there is the all-American and incomparable root beer float. Just scoop vanilla into a tall glass of root beer, or perch it on the edge of the glass. The same vanilla ice cream can enhance iced coffee as well. And once you have the idea, you can mix and match: lemon sherbet with ginger ale, orange or peppermint with iced tea, the best cassis sherbet you can find with champagne.

Maybe you never sat down to think through the possibilities, but the most versatile beverage of all is champagne. A dash of raspberry liqueur or Grand Marnier turns it brighter, a spoonful of pureed fresh peach renders it sensational, a half-and-half mixture with orange juice or with a dark British stout changes the character of each for the better.

Of course seltzer or club soda can do much the same, but you'd want to add more flavor to it. Seltzer can cut the richness of orange juice and make it more refreshing. Or dilute your lemonade concentrate with fizzy rather than still water. Stir sherbet into seltzer; or syrup (fruit or chocolate), then a scoop of ice cream. It takes some getting used to, but people have been known to grow fond of iced coffee made with seltzer. And it will spoil you for bottled sodas forever, but whirl some really ripe fruit — strawberries, raspberries, peaches, nectarines, sweetened to taste — in the blender, then stir into seltzer, and use a big, fat straw so the bits of fruit don't stop it up. It could spell the end of cola.

In summer the milkshake needs a lighter touch. Save the vanilla ice cream and bananas for winter. July calls for raspberry sherbet instead, whipped in the blender with bananas and enough milk so you don't need to use a spoon.

Who should know more about thirst-quenchers than East Indians? And they drink yogurt, stirred or beaten so it turns to liquid, thinned with water if necessary and sweetened with honey if you like. It can be flavored with orange flower water, cardamom, lime peel or rose water for a sweet drink. Or leave out the honey and add cumin and salt for a savory drink.

At the Smithsonian Folklife Festival in July the crowds were keeping cool with a more American yogurt drink: Yogurt with cranberry juice.

In California just plain orange juice isn't good enough for breakfast. Those who care enough squeeze blood oranges and honey tangerines, just before serving, of course, for the ultimate o.j.

Beer is about as instant a drink as you can find, but if you want to add your own touch, mix it as the British do: half-and-half with stout or ginger ale or lemonade.

There is more to stirring a drink than a spoon. You can use a cucumber spear as a swizzle stick, or a cinnamon stick. Try a candy cane or a spear of pineapple. Or whittle one of sugar cane.

Ice cubes, too, can be more than meets the eye. They can dress up the glass when you have imbedded blueberries or raspberries in them before freezing, or a leaf of mint. Flavored ice cubes — made of coffee, tea, orange juice or any juice — can intensify or contrast with their beverage. And for party-size drinks, ice can be frozen in molds or rings, decorated with fruits and herbs before frozen (try basil or rosemary for a mysterious touch) and floated in a punch bowl to serve dual purpose as beautifier as well as cooler.

A drink can refresh the eye as well as the tongue when you perch a slice of fruit on the rim of its glass. Even a strawberry can be cut not-quite-through, and thus fastened onto the edge of the glass.

Hot chocolate has a summer counterpart. In New York it would be an egg cream — a bit of chocolate syrup and a dash of milk stirred with seltzer. But old-fashioned chocolate milk can be updated in the blender: cocoa, milk, ice cubes, sweetened to taste and spiked with a dash of coffee liqueur if you like, or a banana if you insist. A dollop of orange juice concentrate wouldn't be a bad idea, either, or the tiniest droplet of mint extract.

Fresh nectarines make summer bread special

Summertime bread can make breakfast a special time. This unique recipe uses three ripe nectarines, skin and all.

WHOLE WHEAT NECTARINE BREAD

1 cake compressed yeast
¼ C. sugar
3 medium fresh nectarines
1 tsp. grated lemon peel
1 tblsp. lemon juice
1 egg
2 tblsp. vegetable oil
1 tsp. salt
2 C. whole wheat flour
3 C. (aprox.) all-purpose flour
1 egg, beaten with 1 tblsp. water

Crumble yeast into mixing bowl. Sprinkle sugar over yeast; let stand five minutes until yeast is melted. Dice nectarines to measure 2½ C. Combine all but ½ cup nectarines with lemon peel, juice and egg in blender. Whirl until pureed. Stir into yeast along with oil, salt and whole wheat flour; Mix in enough all-purpose flour to form stiff dough. Turn out onto lightly floured surface and knead five minutes until smooth and elastic. Place in lightly oiled bowl, turning to coat all sides with oil. Cover with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm place until doubled in size, about 1½ to 2 hours. Turn dough onto lightly floured surface. Pat or roll out to 13x9-inch rectangle. Spoon remaining ½ C. nectarines over all. Roll up, starting with 9-inch edge, to enclose nectarines. Place in greased 9x5-inch loaf pan. Brush to with egg-water mixture. Let rise until doubled, about 1 hour. Bake in 375-F. oven 35 minutes, covering top with foil if loaf begins to get too brown. Cool 10 minutes in pan; turn out onto wire rack to cool completely before wrapping. Makes one loaf.

Nectarines used in cookie recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

For many years American cooks have been using a recipe for layered cookie bars which are said to come from Scandinavian cuisine. It is so good that each season we find new versions of it.

NECTARINE DESSERT

3 or 4 nectarines (about 1 pound)
BOTTOM LAYER:
¼-lb. stick butter
¼ C. firmly packed light brown sugar
2 large eggs
¾ C. unbleached all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
COCONUT LAYER:
1 large egg
¾ C. firmly packed light brown sugar
¼ C. unbleached all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla
½ C. flaked coconut
TOPPING:
1 C. confectioners' sugar
1 to 2 tblsp. lemon juice
Mint sprigs if desired

Coarsely dice (¼ to ½-inch) enough nectarines to make 1 cup; reserve this and remaining nectarines.

For the Bottom Layer; cream butter and sugar; beat in eggs until blended; beat in the flour and baking powder until soft and smooth. Spread over bottom of a buttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 10 minutes. Leave oven control at 350-F.

Meanwhile make up Coconut Layer: beat egg and brown sugar until blended. Beat in flour, baking powder, salt and vanilla; fold in the coconut and the reserved diced nectarines. Spread mixture over hot bottom layer. Return to 350-F. oven and bake until golden brown — 30 minutes. Cool in pan on rack.

For Topping: beat enough lemon juice into the confectioners' sugar to make a spreading consistency; spread over Coconut Layer and let set.

At serving time cut into bars and remove from pan. Slice remaining nectarines and use as a garnish with the mint sprigs. Serve this dessert the same day it is made.

DEAR ABBY

Family's grapevine gives sister sour mood

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For a living, I deliver singing telegrams dressed like Dolly Parton. I love show business, and a person has to start somewhere, right? This job has me driving all over Chicago and into the suburbs, so in between jobs I've always felt free to drop in on friends and relatives when I'm in the area.

Recently I was hurt to the core when my mother informed me that my sister, who lives in Lake Forest, told her that she doesn't want me stopping by in my Dolly Parton costume anymore because she's embarrassed by what her neighbors might think.

I wasn't too surprised because my sister had already dictated how other people should dress when they come to Lake Forest. She never tells people to their face — she makes my mother do her dirty work.

Well, I called my sister and told her off for not telling me to my face that she didn't want me stopping by in my Dolly Parton costume. Then my sister called my mother and laid her out for having told me. Then my mother called me and gave me heck for confronting my sister.

Who was in the wrong here, Abby? I hate these family fights. — DOLLY'S LOOK-ALIKE IN CHICAGO

DEAR LOOK-ALIKE: First, nobody can "make" your mother do anything she doesn't want to do, so it's unfair to say your sister "makes" your mother do her dirty work.

Carrying tales is immature. If your sister doesn't want you to come to Lake Forest in your Dolly Parton costume anymore, she should have told you instead of telling your mother. And your mother should NOT have told you what your sister said.

You showed more maturity than both your mother and your sister by telling them what was on your mind.

If you hate family fights, take a lesson from Dolly Parton: Be upfront with everything, and let it all hang out.

DEAR ABBY: I recently noticed an item in your column instructing readers who bake your famous pecan pie to add 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time if they have electric ovens!

Why? A 350-degree oven should be 350 degrees whether it's gas, electric, coal or wood.

I am a former home economist, and this made no sense to me, so I checked with several of my colleagues and they couldn't understand it either. Please explain. — CHERYL C. BAKER, TULSA, OKLA.

DEAR MS. BAKER: (What a coincidence!) You are right: 350 degrees is 350 degrees regardless of how the temperature is achieved.

However, after receiving a number of complaints about "runny and undercooked" pies, I checked back with the complainers and learned that they all had electric ovens.

Of course, all ovens should be checked and regulated if the baking time seems incorrect, but knowing that most people tend to procrastinate, I suggested adding 15 to 20 minutes to the baking time for electric ovens. Witness the following testimonial:

DEAR ABBY: I tried your pecan pie again, and thanks to your recent addendum regarding baking in electric ovens, mine was a huge success. I wish to say thank you. — POLLY C. RANLETT, SANTA ROSA, CALIF.

Brulee combines caramel custard, nectarines

NECTARINE CREME BRULEE
1½ cups milk
3 tblsp. cornstarch
⅓ cup sugar
4 egg yolks
⅓ cup brandy
2 fresh nectarines, sliced
⅓ cup brown sugar, packed

Combine milk and cornstarch in saucepan, beating with wire whisk until smooth. Whisk in sugar, yolks and brandy. Cook over medium heat four to five minutes, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to boil; pour into bowl. Cover surface of custard with plastic wrap to prevent skim from forming; chill. Place half sliced nectarines in bottom of 1½-quart souffle or baking dish. Cover with custard and top with remaining nectarines. Sprinkle top evenly with brown sugar. Place under broiler, about four inches below heat source. Broil two to three minutes until sugar is melted and browned. Serve immediately. Makes four servings.

Nectarine Creme Brulee uses nectarines in a rich caramel custard inspired by the French.

Sauce summer fruits for dessert

Los Angeles Times-
Wahington Post News Service

The summer fruit season is so short that it tends to bring about out and out binges. One indulges in fruit desserts.

Making a fruit sauce is truly one of the easiest things a cook can do. Some are cooked, but most are not. All you do is puree or mash the fruit of your choice, then turn your creative juices loose.

The accompanying recipes may call for a specific fruit, but most will be equally successful if a different fruit or a combination of fruits is substituted.

PINA COLADA SAUCE
½ pineapple, peeled and cut up
1 C. coconut milk
¼ C. sugar
2 tblsp. rum

Blend pineapple, coconut milk, sugar and rum in food processor until smooth. Spoon over sherbet or ice cream. Makes about 2¾ cups.

PLUM SAUCE
1 tblsp. oil
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tblsp. finely chopped onion
¾ C. plum puree (4 to 5 plums)
1 tblsp. vinegar
¼ C. sugar
Salt
2 tsp. cornstarch
⅓ cup water
Few drops sesame oil, optional

Remove jars from water at once and let stand until cool before storing. Makes 3 (½-pint) jars.

Potato salad recipes vary

Many Americans have strong feelings about potato salad.

Some want the potatoes cubed, not sliced.

And some, especially Southerners, want sweet pickles in their potato salad. This is ideal for this group.

POTATO SALAD
6 to 8 medium (2 pounds) potatoes
1 cup thinly sliced celery
1 medium (4 ounces) sweet red pepper, seeded and slivered (¾ cup)
4 small scallions, thinly sliced (¼ cup)
¾ cup drained sweet pickle slices, halved
¾ cup mayonnaise
3 tablespoons sweet pickle liquid
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
Pepper to taste

Scrub potatoes and cut each in half; do not peel. In a saucepan barely cover potatoes with boiling water; boil until tender when pierced in center with a fork — about 25 minutes. Drain at once. Cool slightly. With the help of a small knife, strip off skins and discard. Cut potatoes into ½ to 1-inch cubes; turn into a large bowl; add celery, red pepper, scallion and pickles; toss together.

In a small bowl whisk together mayonnaise, pickle liquid, salt, mustard and pepper; pour over potato mixture and stir lightly to coat. Cover and chill for at least a few hours to allow flavors to blend.

Makes about 2 quarts. —(AP)

"I feel like a whole new person since the Self-Improvement course I took at Ms. A's."
I learned how to walk, talk, sit, stand, and go in and out of doors properly. We learned how to handle job interviews and even studied manners. Those are things I never would have thought important but what a difference they've made! A lot of people encouraged me to take the course—and I guess if I had known how great I'd feel about it I would have done it even sooner.

Prize puddings compete in Big Apple

By BARBARA HANSEN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The only loser in "The First Ever Great Rice Pudding Tasting" held recently in New York was Los Angeles.

The "I Love NY" enthusiasts had not planned to trounce their West Coast rival. They had even made an exception so that Los Angeles could participate, as the event was limited to New York restaurants, hotels, caterers and delis.

The dessert so honored was the rice tart from Chinois on Main in Santa Monica. The Chinois tart, developed by pastry chef Nancy Silverton, appeared in a Los Angeles Times Food section rundown on Los Angeles' best rice puddings in December, 1983. That article inspired the New Yorkers to hold their own tasting, and when Silverton's tart went on to greater fame as one of The Times' best recipes for 1983, the New Yorkers decided to have a taste.

If "most colorful pudding" had been a category, there would have been two contenders, both adorned with almost the same shade of pinky-red topping. The Quilted Giraffe's brilliant coverage was a mixture of strawberries, raspberries and slivered candied orange peel marinated with honey and lemon juice. This went over a pudding flavored with fresh ginger, more candied orange peel, lemon juice and a dozen egg yolks.

Jean-Claude Nedelec of Glorious Food, a catering firm, spread a grenadine glaze over his pudding and decorated it with whipped cream, orange segments and mint. However, something made the topping bitter, which earned the dish poor marks.

Fruit also played a role in an entry by the Silver Palate. Chopped pears poached in white wine were stirred into the rice; whipped cream flavored with pear liqueur added fluffiness, and blackberries and lime slices were scattered over the top. Ellen Gibson, Silver Palate chef, said she created the recipe for the contest.

While New York deli diners accompany their rice pudding with coffee, the contest organizers thought nothing less than Champagne — Korbel's Blanc de Noirs — was suitable. Maxwell's Plum, the contest site, does not serve rice pudding, which avoided any charge of favoritism.

AMERICAN HARVEST'S HAZEL NUT RICE PUDDING

1 C. wild rice
1 C. long grain rice
1 qt. whipping cream
1 C. hazelnut jam or hazelnut paste
1 C. raisins
½ C. sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
Whipped cream
Peeled whole hazelnuts for garnish

Place wild rice in saucepan. Cover with boiling water and simmer, uncovered, over medium heat until tender, 35 to 40 minutes. Over low heat, simmer long grain rice in whipping cream, uncovered, until tender, 20 to 25 minutes. Add hazelnut jam, raisins, sugar, salt and cooked wild rice. Cook 5 minutes longer. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Spoon cooled pudding into serving dish. Decorate with whipped cream and hazelnuts. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Note: Hazelnut jam, imported from France, can be purchased in jars at some gourmet shops. Hazel nut paste is a German product.

5 eggs
1 C. whipping cream
1 tsp. vanilla

Add to remaining rice mixture and cook over medium heat about 15 minutes or until mixture coats wooden spoon. Do not overcook. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla. Turn mixture into 13x9-inch baking dish or other large, shallow serving dish. Cool 10 minutes, then refrigerate. Top chilled pudding with layer of pista chios, then with Brittle Topping. Before serving, crack topping all over with back of large spoon. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Brittle Topping

1 lb. butter
2½ C. sugar

Outdoor barbecues can be family affairs

By LOUISE LAGUE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

In this season we move our joint kiddie-and-grown-up bashes outdoors, which is a great relief for everyone.

The kids can run hog wild, the swings never stop, the sandbox occupies the littlest ones, the parents can give chase or not as they see fit, but mostly they hang back in a mellowed-out summer way, sipping a beer or a gin and tonic, and letting the mosquitoes do the punishment.

We like to use the barbecue for these events because it keeps us from overheating the kitchen with an oven, it eliminates the pot-and-pan problem, and also, for reasons buried deep in our culture's history, the men tend to do the cooking.

Every item done on the barbecue, then, saves wear and tear on the family cook. The object of the game becomes to do as many items as possible on the grill, with the rest cold and uncooked.

My friend Barbara and I rose to this challenge with a recent kiddie-adult barbecue, making the game trickier by adding the stipulation that the food be impressive-looking as well as edible by all age groups. (Hot dogs and hamburgers are just too easy.)

We started with a Mexican Mound dip that Barbara builds on a wooden board. (No bowls to wash!) The base is bean dip shaped in a sort of inch-high dish, topped by shredded lettuce, then onion, then chopped tomatoes, then guacamole.

This is topped with taco sauce and dolloped with sour cream, then surrounded by taco chips. It looks a little like a pistachio ice cream sundae, which was not lost on the kids.

They dove into it with the chips, finding something yummy there, though not ice cream, and demolished it in no time. We had a hard time keeping ourselves from pointing out that they were eating vegetables, which they usually loathe.

After the mound was flattened, the kids ran off to play while the men built the fire (this always takes three men and six beers) and the women loaded up the kebabs and had another drink.

We'd chosen easy and novel hot dog kebabs for the kids, and elegant and outrageously wonderful swordfish kebabs, with vegetable accompaniments, for the grown-ups.

I had loaded the vegetables into their foil wrappers at home; these only needed to be lined up on the fire with the kebabs.

First we grilled and served the kiddie kebabs, which drew great sighs of admiration followed by bafflement — what on earth do you do with the stick? One 4-year-old burst into tears, claiming he would not eat "that thing."

Once the sticks were pulled out, the kebabs became a beneficent plate of hot dogs, pineapple and familiar looking vegetable pieces; when garnished with a puddle of ketchup the whole thing took on an altogether acceptable look.

Dessert was popsicles, eaten outdoors.

The order of grilling for the grown-up dinner: first put on the zucchini, then the swordfish 5 minutes later, and the mushrooms 5 minutes after that. Dinner should be ready in another 10 minutes.

Turn zucchini and the swordfish once; you may have to open the packet containing the zucchini to check for doneness.

Barbara accompanied this meal with a cold pasta salad, generously spiked with purple onions, yellow zucchini strips and red pimento, and a spinach salad vinaigrette.

For dessert, she served a commercial ice-cream cake that everybody loved; purists might go for molded ice cream trimmed with fresh fruit.

After dinner we tucked all the plates and glasses in the dishwasher, congratulated ourselves on the absence of greasy pots and pans, scooped the children off the floor and went home. We're ready to do it all again next week.

KIDDIE HOT DOG KEBABS
(4 child-size servings)

1 pound cocktail franks
8 fresh pearl onions or quarter sections of whole onions
2 green peppers, cut into squares
4 pineapple slices, quartered
8 cherry tomatoes
1 cup pineapple juice
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ cup prepared mustard

Alternately spear the frankfurters, onions, pepper pieces, pineapple quarters and tomatoes on skewers. Mix the juice, brown sugar and mustard. Brush mixture on the skewers.

Place kebabs on grill 8 inches above gray coals for 10 to 12 minutes, turning and brushing with sauce every 2 to 3 minutes.

—Adapted from "32 Better Barbecues"by Helen Feingold; Barrons

BARBECUED SWORDFISH KEBABS
(6 servings)

2 pounds swordfish steak, cubed
1 cup teriyaki sauce
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, chopped
3 medium onions, quartered
1 green pepper, cut in strips
12 cherry tomatoes

Marinate swordfish cubes in a marinade made of teriyaki sauce, oil and garlic for about 4 hours, turning once. Load up skewers, alternating fish with onions, peppers and tomatoes. Grill 8 to 10 minutes on one side, turn and grill 8 to 10 minutes on the other side. Fish is done when it flakes easily.

GRILLED SQUASH PARMESAN
(6 servings)

3 zucchini, sliced
2 diced tomatoes
½ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons butter

Place all ingredients except butter on a large square of heavy duty alumunium foil (two squares if it doesn't fit) and dot with butter. Fold foil into a packet, seal and grill for 20 to 25 minutes, turning once.

—Adapted from "32 Better Barbecues"by Helen Feingold; Barrons

STUFFED MUSHROOMS
(6 servings)

2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese
¼ cup bacon bits
½ cup fresh bread crumbs
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
24 mushroom caps

Combine all ingredients except mushrooms. Stuff each mushroom with cheese mixture and place four mushrooms on each of six squares of foil, fold into a packet, seal. Grill for 12 to 15 minutes. Do not turn. (These are very, very good, and the filling can also be used in green pepper halves with great results.)

THE BUTCHER

Thin steaks once seldom seen

By MERLE ELLIS

There are a few great steaks for the barbecue that are beginning to appear in meat cases. They haven't been there long. It's not that they're new — steers haven't come up with any new steaks. But, because the way beef is marketed today is so different from what it was just a few years ago, there now are some cuts that used to be seen only rarely, if at all.

Beef used to come to market in carcass form. When a butcher ordered a carcass of beef he got two front quarters, which yielded several chuck roasts, a rib roast or two, a few rib steaks and several pounds of ground beef. The two hind quarters that made up the rest of the carcass provided most of the steaks. There were quite a few Porterhouse, T-bone and club steaks to be cut from the short loin.

The sirloin section yielded a variety of different sirloin steaks — pin bone, flat bone, wedge bone, etc. And parts of the hind leg (the round) were cut into steaks, but most was cut for pot roasts, stew, and ground round. That was about it from a carcass of beef in those days.

Several great steak cuts never made it into the meat case — there just weren't enough of them to make a display. Flank steaks, for example, used to be ground for hamburger. There are only two per carcass and unless a market was handling a lot of beef each week, there weren't enough flanks to put in the case. The same was true of skirt steaks and hanging tenders and a number of other cuts.

Today's beef comes to market in a different form — boxed. The carcass is divided into small, often boneless, sub-primal cuts at the packing plant and is shipped to the market in boxes. Today's butcher can order just the cuts he needs — boneless top loins, sirloin tips, under blade chuck rolls, etc. He also can, if he wants, order a variety of what have come to be called "thin meats."

These are all those little cuts that came only one or two to the carcass and were seldom seen in the case. Today's butcher can order them by the box and put out a nice display of flanks, skirts, tri-tips, ball-tips, etc., all of which do wonderfully well on the barbecue.

So that you won't pass up a great steak buy because you are unfamiliar with the cut, here is a listing and brief description of some of the thin meats you may encounter at today's meat counters. If you don't find them, ask for them. They are available.

Flank steak probably is the most familiar thin meat. It certainly is one of the most popular, largely due to the increase in the popularity of Chinese cooking.Most recipes for Chinese stir-fry call for flank steak. It also is the cut called for in the classic recipe for London Broil.

The flank is a single lean flat muscle with a coarse grain that runs the length of the steak. For best results, it needs to be cooked quickly over high heat, then carved across the grain on a slant into thin slices.

There are two different skirt steaks in the thin meat category; the outside skirt and the inside skirt. The outside skirt is the diaphragm muscle of the beef animal. There is one outside skirt on each side of the animal's rib cage. The inside skirt is a solid lean muscle cut from between two layers of fat on the plate (lower chest) portion of the carcass.

Both skirt steaks have a full beefy flavor that stands up beautifully to the rich smokey flavor that a barbecue grill provides. Like the flank, the skirts are thin cuts that need quick cooking over high heat.

The butcher's steak probably is the rarest of the thin meats. It is so named because it was traditionally taken home by the butcher. There is only one per carcass, never enough to display but far too good a steak to grind for hamburger. It also is called the hanging tender, which gives you a little clue to the quality of the cut.

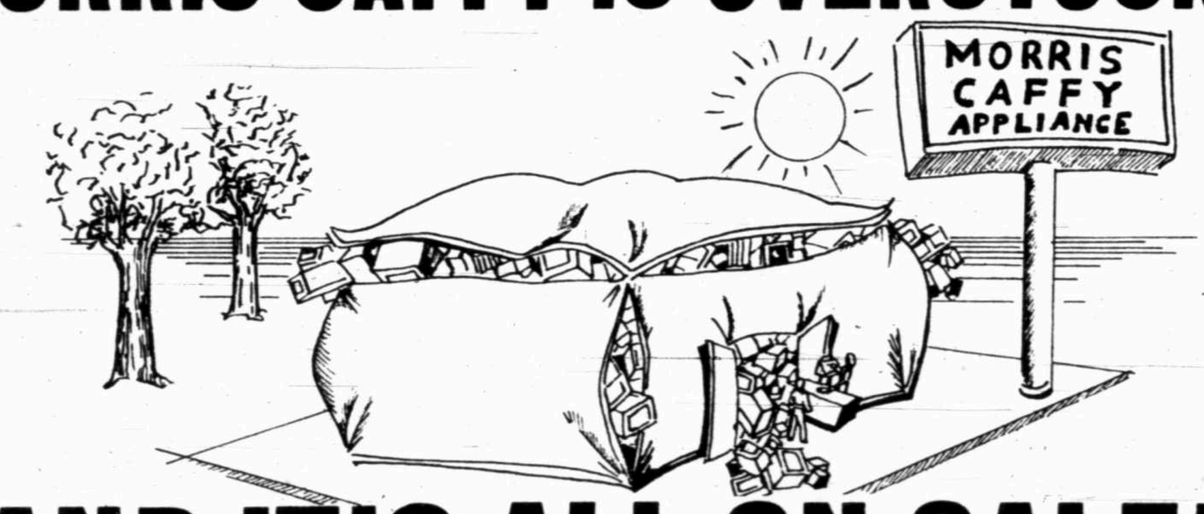

It is the pillar of the diaphragm, the muscle to which the two outside skirts are anchored. It has marvelous flavor, so don't pass it up if you should see one.

Two other thin meats available to your butcher these days are tri-tips and ball-tips. Both of these are muscles from the sirloin section of the carcass and make excellent steaks for the barbecue grill.

Herbal teas escape caffeine

Copley News Service

What beverage do Americans consume more than any other? You guessed it — coffee. Several years ago it was estimated that nearly one-fourth of all Americans drank five or more cups a day. Nearly 10 percent drank seven or more cups.

More recently, the coffee craze has been on the decline, and even many confirmed coffee drinkers have turned to decaffeinated. Caffeine is a powerful stimulant, and too much of it can cause extreme nervousness, heart palpitations, heartburn and diarrhea. There is also evidence that caffeine may aggravate cystic disease of the breast.

People are more concerned with caffeine consumption today (witness the new rage in no-caffeine colas), and decaf may seem to be the answer for coffeeholics. But health-conscious people should be aware that the extracting solvents used in the decaffeinating process could have harmful long-term effects.

A surprising number of people think that they can simply switch to drinking tea. But a tea bag of black, green or oolong will brew a cup containing from 70 to 100 milligrams of caffeine. A cup of freshly brewed regular coffee has from 90 to 125 milligrams — so there's not really much difference at all.

Coffee substitutes, made from ground cereals or legumes, are a good caffeine-free alternative for those who must pretend that they are still drinking coffee.

But the favorite with most vegetarians and other healthwise people is still herbal tea. A surprising number of herbs can yield a steamy cup or icy glass of caffeine-free refreshment.

Herbal teas, also called "tisanes," generally may be prepared by added ¼ to ½ teaspoon dried leaves or flowers to 6 ounces boiling water. Steep for five to 10 minutes and strain.

Try your own combinations, and experiment by adding fruit slices or juice, spices and honey to taste, if desired.

BULGUR COFFEE

Toast ¼ cup cracked wheat in heavy pan over medium-low heat. Stir frequently. Grind wheat in grain grinder or coffee mill until fine. Place 1 teaspoon ground bulgur in cup and cover with boiling water. Stir. The "grounds" are edible, too — and quite good.

SPICE TEA NEW DELHI

2 cups water
4 whole peppercorns, ground
6 whole cardamom seeds
1 tbsp. freshly grated ginger
1 cinnamon stick
¼ tsp. ground nutmeg
6 whole cloves

Bring water to boil and stir in remaining ingredients. Let simmer over low eat 10 minutes; strain. Serve with milk and honey to taste.

Serves 1 to 3.

Salad dressing good to have on hand

PANTRY DRESSING
¼ cup red wine vinegar
¼ cup chili sauce
3 teaspoons sugar
1½ teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 cup vegetable oil
Salt and pepper to taste

Beat together vinegar, chili sauce, sugar, Worcestershire, oil and salt and pepper. Cover tightly and refrigerate. Serve over tossed salad. Makes 1¼ cups. —(AP)

Desserts

frozen

Keeping cool in hot weather with frozen treats is a tradition. Frozen concoctions can be made ahead of time and stored in the freezer for summer gatherings.

Try easy-to-make Frozen Chocolate Banana Dessert or Mint Tarts for summer parties. Or Frozen Cookies and Cream Loaf for dessert for family and friends.

Frozen desserts are convenient and cool in summer.

FROZEN CHOCOLATE BANANA DESSERT

(Makes 10-12 servings)

2-1/2 cups finely crushed chocolate sandwich cookies (24 cookies)
1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
1 can (14 oz.) sweetened condensed milk (NOT evaporated milk)
2/3 cup chocolate flavored syrup
2 small ripe bananas, mashed (3/4 cup)
2 cups (1 pint) whipping cream, whipped (NOT non-dairy whipped topping)
Additional sliced bananas, optional
Chocolate fudge ice cream topping, optional

Combine crumbs and margarine; press firmly on bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Chill. Meanwhile, in large mixing bowl combine sweetened condensed milk, syrup and bananas. Fold in whipped cream. Pour into prepared pan. Freeze six hours or overnight. Just before serving garnish each serving with banana slices and ice cream topping if desired. Return leftovers to freezer.

MINT TARTS

1/2 cup margarine or butter, melted
3 cups finely crushed chocolate sandwich cookie crumbs (34 cookies)
3 egg yolks (use only Grade A clean, uncracked eggs)

1/4 cup green creme de menthe OR 1/2 teaspoon peppermint extract
2 tablespoons white creme de cacao
3/4 cup coarsely crushed chocolate sandwich cookies (8 cookies)
2 cups (1 pint) whipping cream (NOT non-dairy whipped topping)

In medium bowl combine margarine and 3 cups crumbs. Using back of spoon evenly press 2 rounded tablespoons crumb mixture onto bottom and sides of 24 (2-1/2-inch) paper lined muffin cups; chill. Meanwhile in large mixer bowl beat egg yolks; stir in sweetened condensed milk and liqueurs. Fold in 3/4 cup coarsely crushed cookies and whipped cream. Spoon mixture into prepared shells. Freeze six hours or overnight. To serve, remove paper liners. Return leftovers to freezer.

FROZEN COOKIES AND CREAM LOAF

(Makes eight to 10 servings)

32 chocolate sandwich cookies
3 tablespoons margarine or butter, melted
1 can (14 oz.) sweetened condensed milk (NOT evaporated milk)

Line 9x5-inch loaf pan with aluminum foil, extending foil above sides of pan. In blender or food processor container finely crush 20 cookies. Combine crumbs with margarine. Press firmly on bottom and halfway up sides of prepared pan. Coarsely crush remaining 12 cookies; set aside. In large mixing bowl beat sweetened condensed milk, egg yolks and vanilla until well blended. Fold in coarsely crushed cookies and whipped cream. Pour into prepared pan; cover. Freeze six hours or overnight. Garnish as desired. To serve, remove from pan; peel off foil and slice. Return leftovers to freezer.

Kiwifruit livens spritzers

Looks can be deceiving, especially when it comes to kiwifruit. While its fuzzy brown outer skin may not be particularly appealing, its succulent and colorful interior is.

Kiwifruit is generally sold while still firm, so it often requires ripening at home. Simply place the fruit in a plastic bag with an apple or banana, seel and hold at room temperature for a couple of days. A ripe kiwifruit will yield to gentle pressure.

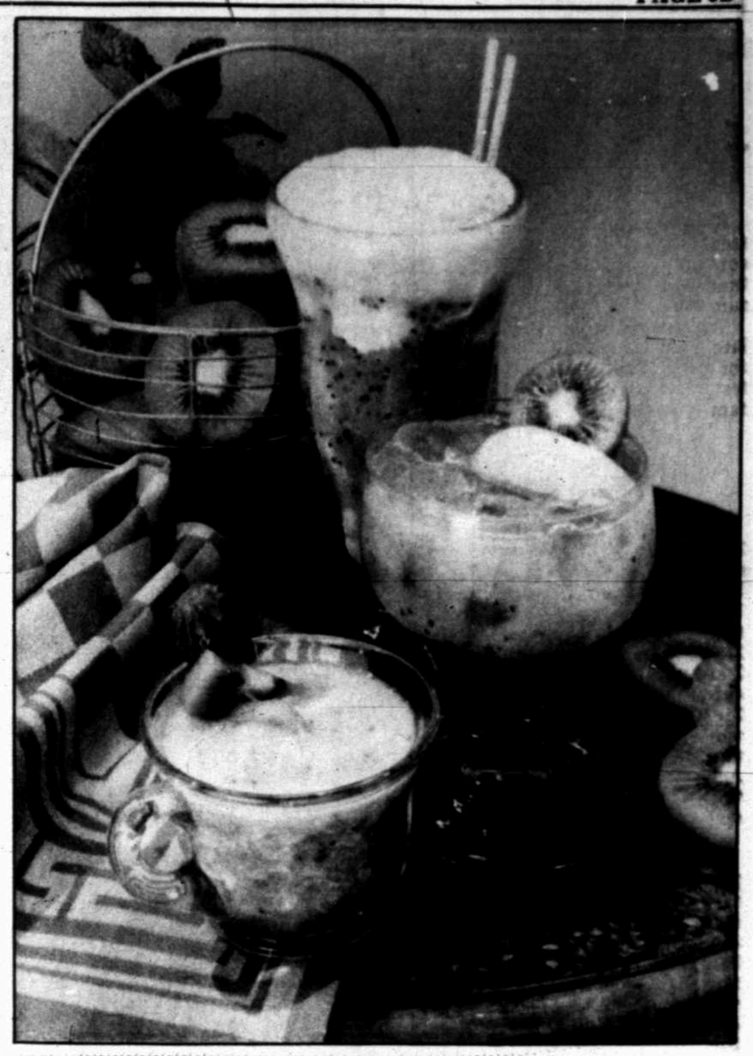

For summertime refreshment, try this trio of icy beverages made with kiwifruit.

KIWIFRUIT ICE CREAM SODA
2 large kiwifruit, peeled (½ lb.)
1 tblsp. sugar
½ C. cracked ice
Vanilla ice cream
Club soda

Combine kiwifruit, sugar and ice in elecric blender. Whirl smooth. Combine ⅓ cup kiwifruit puree in tall (10-12 oz.) glass. Top with scoops of ice cream and fill glass with ⅓ cup soda. Trim glass with kiwifruit slices and maraschino cherries if desired. Makes three sodas.

KIWIFRUIT SPRITZER
3 kiwifruit, peeled (¾ pound)
2 tblsp. sugar
½ cup orange juice
Club soda

Combine kiwifruit, sugar and orange juice in electric blender. Whirl until smooth. Pour ½ cup into tall (12 oz.) glass. Add ice and pour in ½ cup club soda. Stir to combine. Garnish with kiwifruit slices, lemon wedges or mint if desired. Makes three spritzers.

How to unstick your rice pilaf

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Restaurants often bake their rice pilaf because it is a good way to make it in quantity, and the rice does not get as sticky as when cooked on top of the stove. Long-grain rice will produce the separate, distinct grains desirable in pilaf.

The Chart House restaurant in Santa Barbara, Calif., uses converted rice with soy sauce, other seasonings, water or broth and fat. The restaurant then bakes it, covered, in large metal pans. When cooked, diced raw vegetables are mixed into the rice (this step also separates the rice grains), and the whole mixture is kept warm in steam tables. A smaller-serving recipe may be baked, covered, for about 30 minutes. For drier rice, it may be uncovered and baked five minutes longer.

Brown rice may be used, but it will take longer to bake because of the fiber and oil in the outer bran layer of the grain, which acts as a barrier to heat and moisture. It also requires a little more liquid. Here is a recipe for Brown Rice Pilaf.

BROWN RICE PILAF

¼ C. butter or margarine
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 C. chopped onions
1 C. brown rice
2 C. boiling broth or consomme
Salt, pepper
⅓ chopped parsley or green onions
2 to 4 tblsp. diced red or green pepper, optional

Melt butter in large skillet over medium heat. Saute garlic and onions until tender. Add rice and saute 3 to 4 minutes. Turn into greased shallow 2½-quart casserole. Add boiling broth and season to taste with salt and pepper. Stir well. Cover and bake at 350-F. 1 to 1 1-4 hours or until rice is tender. Stir in parsley and red pepper. Fluff mixture with fork. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Variation: At end of baking, mix in any of the following. sauteed sliced mushrooms, chopped carrot, apple or avocado, raisins, pine nuts.

Salt and pepper to taste

Pare and thinly slice cucumbers. Seed peppers and remove white membranes; cut into thin strips. In a 10-inch skillet bring cucumbers, peppers and water to a boil; cover and boil gently, stirring often, until cucumber is transparent and pepper is tender-crisp — about 10 minutes. Drain. Stir in butter, salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.

Ethnic-inspired ideas brighten brown bag lunch

Banana Bulgur Salad and Banana African Peanut Cake are two ethnic-inspired creations that make a nutritious and delectable brown bag lunch.

For the 60 million Americans who "brown bag it" every day, here a few tips and recipes designed to make lunchbreak easier:

— When making any portable meal, choose foods that travel well.

— Fresh fruits like bananas are ideal for brown bag lunches.

— When packing a salad choose a colorful container with a tight seal to brighten the mood and ensure safe transport.

— Wrapping a thermos in napkins or sealing the cap with masking tape is wise if there is any possibility of leaking.

— For a change, lay all the luncheon goodies on an oversized cloth napkin, bring the corners together on top and knot them like a Japanese "furoshiki" carrying cloth. When spread open it will make an attractive placement for the lunch.

BANANA BULGUR SALAD

1 C. uncooked bulgur wheat
½ C. raisins
¾ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. ground cardamom
⅛ tsp. cayenne pepper
1¼ C. boiling water
1 C. plain yogurt
2 tblsp. fresh lemon juice
1 tblsp. honey
3 bananas, peeled and sliced
½ cup toasted almonds

In large bowl combine bulgur, raisins, salt, cardamom and cayenne. Stir in boiling water; cover, let stand 30 minutes at room temperature, stirring occasionally. In small bowl combine yogurt, lemon juice and honey; stir into bulgur mixture. Gently stir in bananas and almonds. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

BANANA AFRICAN PEANUT CAKE

2 C. all-purpose flour
2 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. baking soda
⅔ C. butter or margarine, softened
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs
4 ripe bananas, peeled and mashed (about 2 C.)
½ C. plus 6 tblsp. coarsely chopped, salted peanuts, divided

In large bowl stir together flour, baking powder, salt and baking soda. In medium bowl cream butter and sugar together until light and fluffy; beat in eggs. Alternately beat in dry ingredients and bananas just until well combined; stir in ½ cup peanuts. Scrape batter into greased 9x5-inch loaf pan; sprinkle top evenly with remaining 6 tblsp. peanuts. Bake at 350-F. for 60-65 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; turn out of pan and cool completely. Wrap with plastic wrap or aluminum foil.

The 'pain de mie' sandwiches experiment sets eastward

Los Angeles Times-
Wahington Post News Service

California sets the trends for the rest of us, and Chez Panisse of Berkeley is at the epicenter of California cuisine.

So you can assume that the following sandwiches, devised by the Chez Panisse for its Cafe Fanny, will eventually find their way your way. Or you can experiment with them right now:

— Puree of sun-dried tomatoes combined with mayonnaise and spread on slices of pain de mie — the closely grained French sandwich bread — topped with sliced cucumbers.

— Grilled Italian peasant bread topped with slices of yellow and red tomatoes, with a small pitcher of vinaigrette to pour on at the table.

— Slices of bread are toasted, spread with olive oil and rubbed with cut cloves of garlic. Then they are topped with salami or summer sausage, next with roasted peppers in as many colors as you find them, then with roquette. (Another spicy salad green could be used instead.)

Leading economic indicators fall

Associated Press

In a signal of slower economic growth to come, the Commerce Department said its main gauge of future economic activity fell 0.9 percent in June — the first decline in nearly two years.

But many economists viewed the drop in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators as portending a welcome slowdown rather than a new recession. And the government on Tuesday issued two other reports indicating further business gains.

Non-farm productivity, the measure of workplace efficiency, increased 3.3 percent in the second quarter, the best showing in a year, the Labor Department said.

And sales of new single-family homes rose 0.6 percent in June, to an annual rate of 620,000 units, after three months of declines, the Commerce Department said.

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department said prices paid to farmers for raw products fell 1 percent in July but remained 9.2 percent ahead of last year. Prices dropped for soybeans, wheat, peaches, hay and grapefruit, but rose for for hogs, oranges, broilers, apples and milk.

The prices farmers paid to meet their expenses fell 0.6 percent from June, the department said.

The decline in the index of leading indicators was "just a normal cool-down after a very bullish spring," said Robert Wescott of Wharton Econometrics, a private forecasting firm.

"We are in the midst of a very strong expansion. I don't interpret a single negative number as any indication we are seeing the economy head into a recession," he said.

The index figure was "expected by most economists," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in Santa Barbara, Calif. "The announcement ... should reduce the pressures on interest rates and move the economy into a position of sustainable growth."

The drop was the first since a 0.1 percent decrease in August 1982 — just as the country was nearing the depth of the 1981-82 recession. Since then, it has recorded 21 straight monthly increases — the longest string of gains since the end of World War II.

In recent months, however, the index has been teetering on the edge of setbacks. Originally, both March and May figures were reported as declines. Both were later revised upward.

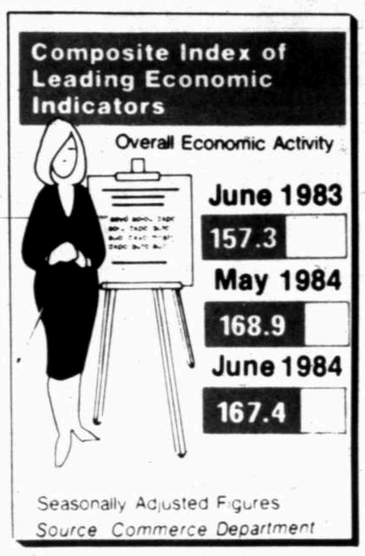

Productivity growth in the first quarter rose at an annual rate of 2.9 percent, and not since the figure fell 0.3 percent in the second quarter of 1982 has America recorded a drop in productivity, the measure of the volume of goods and services generated by the private economy in an hour of paid working time.

Economists consider strong productivity to be essential if U.S. businesses are to compete successfully with overseas rivals.

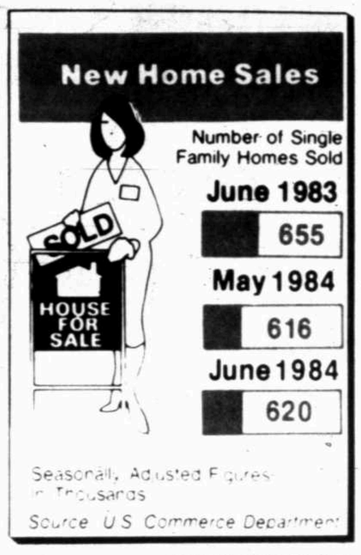

But experts have warned that productivity growth figures typically rise in periods of recovery following recessions. The rise occurs as companies boost production by increasing hours of available workers before hiring new employees.

The latest rise in home sales also drew caution from the housing industry.

"It is clear that housing markets are continuing to soften under the weight of high interest rates," said Jack Carlson, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors. "There is little hope at this point that interest rates will fall to affordable levels because federal deficit spending remains high."

—Texaco Inc., Ashland Petroleum Co. and Quaker State Oil Refining Corp. followed several other refiners by announcing they would lower the price they will pay for certain grades of crude oil, effective today. No major company has cut the price it pays for the the nation's most important crude, West Texas Intermediate.

—Chrysler Corp. said it liquidated the entire $450 million common stock portfolio of its pension fund and invested the money in the bond market, where it can get higher fixed yields. Chrysler said the stock holdings represented about a third of the fund's investments. The pension fund covers 120,000 active and retired workers.

—U.S. Steel Corp. reported a second-quarter profit of $140 million. The nation's largest steelmaker recoreded a $112 million loss for the period a year ago. For the first half of the year, U.S. Steel reported a net income of $311 million, compared with a $230 million loss a year earlier.

—St. Regis Corp., facing a takeover threat by publisher Rupert Murdoch, said it agreed to a $2 billion merger with another leading forest-products firm, Champion International Corp. The publisher had no comment on the deal.

PBPA says OSHA drilling rules too costly

According to Permian Basin Petroleum Association, the petroleum industry is telling the Occupational Safety and Health Administration that their cost estimates to comply with the proposed drilling safety rules are way too low. Osha says it will cost about $2,700 per drilling rig and $3,100 per service rig to meet the safety standards. The International Association of Drilling contractors pegs the cost at between $25 to $150 thousand dollars per drilling rig. And, the American Petroleum Institute predicts it will cost ten times what Osha is estimating. I.A.D.C. puts the start up cost for the drilling industry at $150 million to $588 million if all segments of the industry are brought under the rules.

Noble Drilling estimates it will cost them $340,000 for each of its rigs.

Report says federal loan board neglected evidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Home Loan Bank Board neglected increasing evidence of financial misdealings at Empire Savings and Loan Association of Mesquite for a year before finally taking action, says a report released by the House Government Operations Committee.

The report, prepared by the Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer and Monetary Affairs and released Tuesday, said the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. estimates that it will end up paying $163.8 million in insured deposits from Empire, the "largest direct payout in (FSLIC's) 50-year history."

If the bank board had stepped in sooner, the losses could have been reduced, the report said. It called the bank board's supervision of Empire "an instance of significant regulatory neglect."

"We're reserving any comment until we have had an opportunity to study the committee's report in depth," said FHLBB spokesman Bob Moore.

The subcommittee concluded that the bank board does not have an effective system of evaluating real estate appraisals such as those used to back the loans made by Empire. But more basically, the report said, the board does not know how to deal with "the exceptional case of the financial outlaw."

"The agencies have examination and supervisory structures which function effectively when an institution is making a good faith effort to adhere to the law and to the rules," the report said. "But when there is a determined effort to deceive, the agencies are too often helpless."

The subcommittee recommended that the bank board take real estate appraisers who purposely inflate land values to court. (A bank board official, William Schilling, said in a July 10 letter to subcommittee chairman Doug Bernard Jr. that alleged inflated appraisals of condominium developments in the Lake Ray Hubbard area have been referred to U.S. Attorney James Rolfe in Dallas.)

Nuclear firm sues Journal

HOUSTON (AP) — The former president of a company that manufactures radioactive products has sued The Wall Street Journal for $17.7 million, claiming a "malicious" article forced him to resign from his $150,000-a-year job.

Walter Peeples Jr., former president of Gulf Nuclear Inc., filed the suit in federal court Tuesday against the Journal and reporter Bryan Burrough. The suit claimed that an article published Aug. 1, 1983, contained false and defamatory statements about Peeples.

The article centered on alleged violations of state radiation regulations by the company, which makes radioactive products in the Houston suburb of Webster, in Odessa, Texas, and Signal Hill, Calif., for use in the medical and petroleum industries.

"It was a very one-sided story about a very minor infraction," said William E. Wright, attorney for Peeples.

Peeples, now working as a consultant, also lost $750,000 worth of stock in the wake of the Journal article, Wright said.

New pump jack moves high fluid volumes with longer downhole stroke

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Lamesa Pump Jack Sales Inc. has introduced a new pump jack (LMI) said to increase pump stroke and move larger volumes of fluid.

The firm claims that the pump jack is able to deliver 100 percent effeciency as opposed to conventional pump jacks which deliver 80 percent, as the result of a unique direct linkage to the sucker rod string using a strong-as-steel rubber belt and a geometric configueration that replaces the walking beam and horse head.

This arrangement, says the manufacturer, will pull more fluid out of the hole for less money.

The LMI pumping unit was used recently on a 10,000 ft. well, which was becoming uneconomical because of a high water-oil cut. The manufacturer reports that a conventional pump jack on the well provided 144 in. of stroke at the surface and 110 in. of pump movement at the bottom of the well, and delivered 207 barrels of fluid.

The LMI unit provided 200 in. of downhole travel and delivered 377 barrels of fluid to the tanks to make the well economical. The LMI unit to produce the increased fluid movement was $43,000, compared to $55,000 for a conventioal pump jack, says LMI.

"The LMI units have been tested on wells since 1982, and are expected to be utilized in waterflood and tertiary projects where fluid movement is critical," said Andy Wilkins, president Lamesa Pump Jack Sales of Lamesa, Texas.

The LMI pump jack offers a unique geometrical configueration and a direct link to the rod string to provide longer downhole travel and to move more fluid in wells where operators choose to opt for conventional pump jacks over electric downhole pumps.

Dowell offers new pressure control fluid

Dowell-Schlumberger has developed a unique new treatment (Heviwater) for the purpose of controlling pressures in waterflood and carbon dioxide injection wells during workovers.

The treatment which utilizes high density, formation compatible brines to control pressures, eliminates the need for costly hauling and disposal of back flow water and reduces downtime and loss of production, according to Dowell.

Dowell claims that the need to recharge formation drive pressures is removed by using the system as a hydrostatic plug or pressure control fluid, and feels the primary application will be for workover of carbon dioxide and waterflood injectors and as a drilling fluid in water sensitive and salt zones.

The Heviwater system has been field-tested in six Conoco wells in Lea County , New Mexico and is slated for use in injection wells in the Denver City area.

Dowell claims the system is a "simple solution to the complex problem of formation damage by heavy brines."

The new treatment is said to eliminate formation damaging precipitation and enhance injectivity.

Synfuel budget could be slashed by only $5 billion

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — It appears likely that the House of Representatives will approve a $5 billion reduction in the budget of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. rather than the $9 billion cut sought by the Reagan administration, Rep. Don Fuqua (D-Fla.) said here Monday.

Fuqua was a speaker at the 1984 Southern California Conference on Technology and the Economy. He is also one of the men most responsible for the establishment in 1980 of the Synthetic Fuels Corp. (SFC) — an agency rocked by controversy in recent months.

"Members of Congress I've talked to are disgusted with the way the SFC has been operated," said Fuqua, who said it was clear the Reagan administration was opposed to the SFC and was attempting to make it powerless.

The SFC was created during the Carter administration, and given a budget of $19 billion, with a charter to wean the nation from its dependence on foreign fuel. The corporation was to use the money to give price guarantees, loans and subsidies to firms showing they could recover oil and natural gas from tar sands, coal and shale.

On Wednesday,July 25, the House moved to strip the now-crippled SFC of most of what's left of its budget. The House overruled its Rules Committee and demanded a floor vote on amendments that could take as much as $10.25 billion back from the agency.

Fuqua said the "Rules Committee would not permit any amendments that would cause a reduction in the Synfuels fund," but opponents of the SFC were able to muster a 261-148 vote in an Interior Department appropriations bill demanding a floor vote on the amendments.

However, Fuqua said supporters of the SFC are "attempting to work out a compromise with the administration, and they have said they would approve a reduction of $5 billion."

The SFC was ravaged by controversy last April when five members of its seven-member board resigned amid charges of cronyism, mismanagement, conflict of interest and unethical conduct. Since then, with only two members remaining on the board, the SFC has been two persons shy of even being able to vote on issues. The White House has refused to submit names to fill the vacant seats, which irks Fuqua.

Fuqua said he still believes in the necessity of the SFC.

"But if a company is being mismanaged, you don't abolish it, you correct it, and...we feel we're close to an accommodation about nominees to the board." He said that as a condition of accepting a $5 billion cut in the agency's budget, those backing the SFC have been told the administration has agreed to submit to the Senate a list of nominees for the SFC board.

Fuqua said that in the last few years, SFC opponents have used "guerrilla warfare" to attack it.

"There has been a general philosophy in this administration to let George do it, and in this case George is private industry," but he said that when oil is selling for $25 or $30 a barrel, there is no incentive for private industry to solve the nation's oil dependency problems.

Sub minimum wage would increase jobs

CLEVELAND (AP) — Slightly more than half the nation's private employers believe that paying young workers less than the minimum wage will mean more jobs for them, a study by the National Urban League concludes.

The study, based on a survey of 535 businesses nationwide, said 57 percent of the employers felt a subminium wage would increase jobs, 40 percent said it would not, and 3 percent said it would have no effect.

The study was released during the league's 1984 national conference here.

The study also determined that half the employers would hire more minority youths if the wages were federally subsidized. The study said it didn't matter how large or small the wage subsidy was.

"It's really based upon their commitment to increase job opportunities for disadvantaged youth," said Regina Nixon, one of the researchers who did the study.

Ms. Nixon and fellow researcher Robert B. Hill also found that 87 percent of the businesses do not expect a drop in the number of unskilled, entry-level jobs over the next five years.

That finding prompted the researchers to conclude that special educational and training programs are needed to keep young workers from being largely confined to those jobs.

The study was financed by the U.S. Department of Labor and was conducted during the winter of 1981-1982. About 10 percent of the businesses that were surveyed responded. The study considered youths in general and minority youths in particular.

Silicon Valley sweat shops get high turnovers

Every totem pole has its low men.

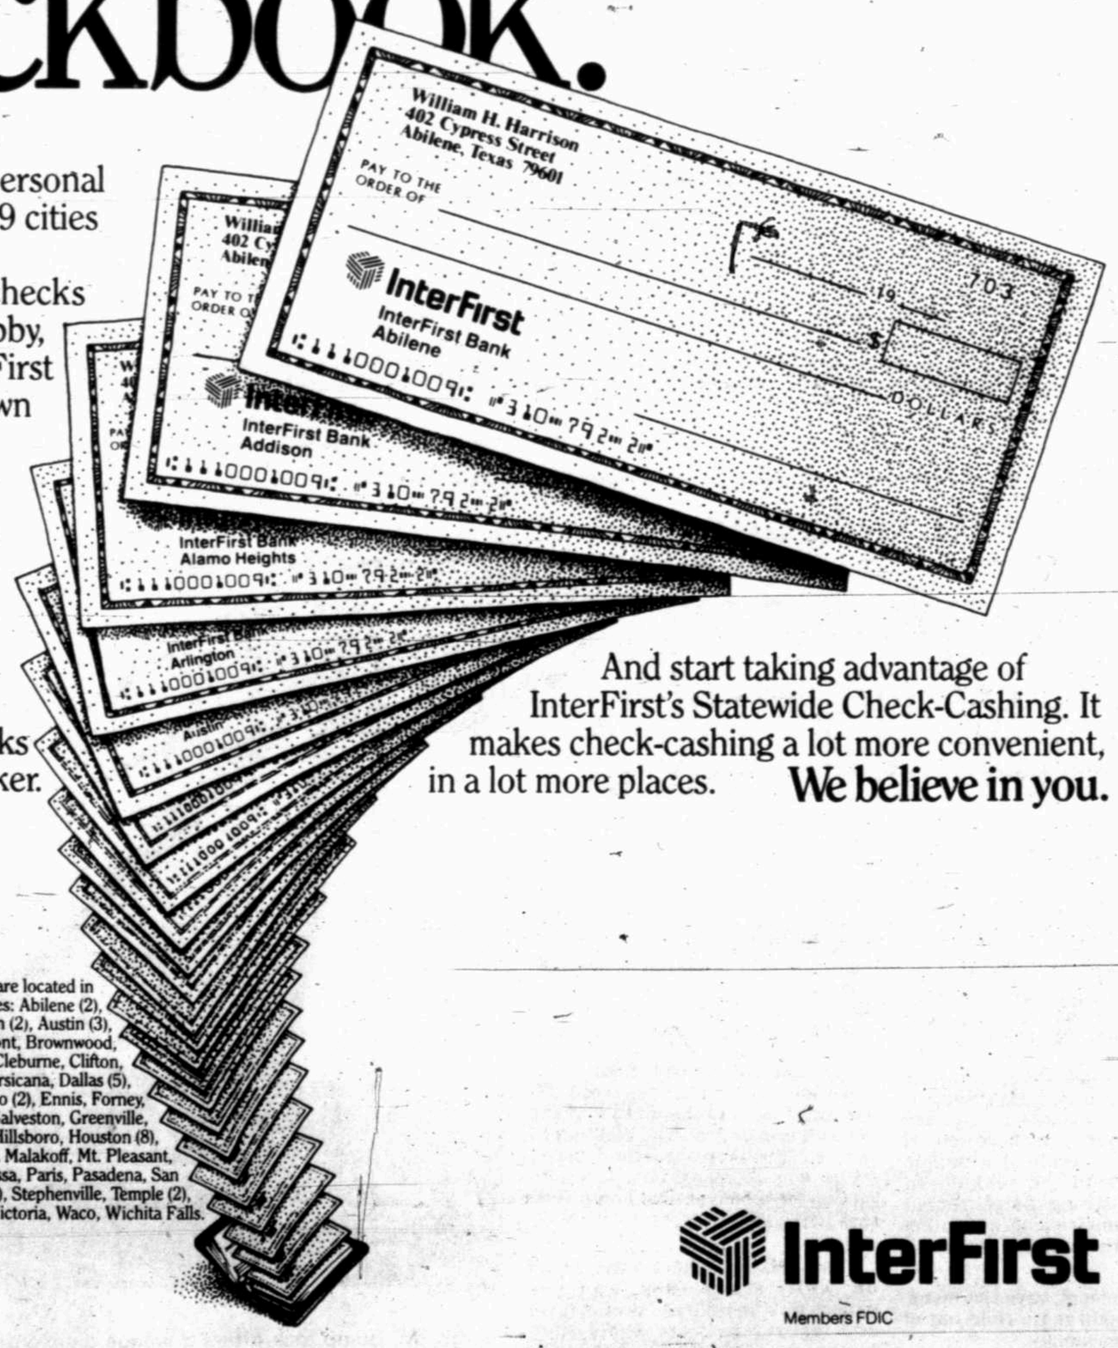

In Silicon Valley this is the work force that does the repetitive, dull labor of "stuffing" circuit boards with wiring and processing microchips in clean rooms. Pay is low, turnover high. Rolm Corp., one of the most generous employers in the Valley, starts assembly workers at $5.50 an hour. Pay scales in underground "sweat shops" is considerably lower. Many of the workers there reportedly are illegal aliens.

With established companies and the many new ones just starting up, promotion can be rapid. If not, a skilled worker can leave and find a new job with a company down the street.

This climate of raised expectations has made unions scarce. Unions have been turned down in the last 12 elections in the Valley.

$100 million pipeline proposed by Northern

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Construction should begin in early 1985 on a $100 million pipeline designed to carry carbon dioxide to oil fields in four West Texas counties, a spokesman for Northern Natural Resources Co. said.

The 135-mile Central Basin CO2 Pipeline will carry excess gas from the pipelines in Yoakum and Gaines counties for oil recovery projects in Gaines, Andrews, Ector and Crane counties, said Doug Krenz, Northern's manager of transportation services.

Northern Natural Resources of Omaha, a division of InterNorth Inc., announced last week that it plans to build and operate the pipeline at a cost estimated to approach $100 million.

Northern also may build extensions off the main pipeline to carry the gas directly to injection sites in oil fields, Krenz said Monday.

"We are trying to provide a transportation service both for users and those parties looking to sell CO2," he said. "We hope to make it available to everybody that is considering CO2 floods in the Central Permian Basin area."

Savers, investors need to be wary of tempting shelters

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — With the new tax law that was signed by President Reagan last month, savers and investors have more cause than ever to be wary of many tempting tax-shelter deals.

That's the conclusion reached by experts in personal finance after studying the sometimes bewilderingly complicated Tax Reform Act of 1984.

The law by no means abolishes tax-sheltered investments — vehicles that are designed to produce writeoffs against current income and eventually to yield profits at attractive long-term capital gains rates.

The relatively conservative forms of tax-shelter investments, such as public limited partnership packages that are registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, are expected to remain highly popular, even among Americans who consider themselves far fromXrich.

"For most partnership investments, the Tax Reform Act of 1984 is a non-event," says Robert Stanger, Shrewsbury, N.J., publisher of Stanger Report, a newsletter on tax-shelter investing. "But, for the abusive shelter boys and aggressive tax-oriented real estate transactions, the game is over."

Jay Goldinger, a broker with the firm of Cantor, Fitzgerald & Co. in Beverly Hills, Calif., says that "creative tax planning is very much alive."

But he adds: "As I see it, some of the dramatic changes in the overhauled tax code are signals to all of us that now, more than ever before, investment opportunities must have a strong economic base and a real potential for appreciation. The go-go guys...have just been gunned down."

For most real estate investments, the law lengthens the minimum period over which property may be depreciated from 15 to 18 years. This means that a somewhat smaller percentage of the purchase value of, say, an apartment house, can be written off each year.

"Holders of real estate partnerships will experience a small one-shot reduction in existing values because cutting allowable depreciation deductions lowers economic benefits to buyers," Sanger said.

"For new investors, partnerships will acquire properties at these slightly lower prices, compensating for reduced tax deductions from depreciation. Across the board in publicly registered deals, the impact is slight."

The new law comes down much harder, however, on what the government considers "abusive" shelters — exotic deals based on transactions conducted solely for tax purposes or based on arbitrarily high valuations of some item that is subsequently disposed of to create a large tax-deductible "loss."

Stanger says provisions of the act "should bring to a screeching halt tax shelters for energy equipment, video and audio tapes, computer software and medical equipment — most of which are 'abusive' shelters anyway."

Some of the tax shelters that have received the most attention in the past have been those that offered their investors tax writeoffs of twice, three or four times their original investment. It is now time, says Stanger, to "wave goodbye" to most of these.

Don't set sail unless you're willing to pay

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are retired and were in about the 20 percent federal income tax bracket until last year, when my husband reached age 70½ and had to start making withdrawals from his $200,000 rollover individual retirement account. That put us in a higher tax bracket. We need some sort of tax write-off.

I read that attending a seminar aboard a cruise ship can be deductible up to $2,000 a person — $4,000 for the two of us. Does this have to be a business deduction? Or, can it be personal? My husband does sell real estate part time, but we would prefer to take the $4,000 as a personal deduction on our income tax return.

Doyle

A. Don't book that cruise, unless you're willing to pay the total cost out of pocket and not lay any of it off on Uncle Sam as an income tax deduction.

The rather complicated rules on taking a tax deduction for travel and entertainment are spelled out in Internal Revenue Service Publication 462, which has a section on cruise ship conventions and seminars. Get a copy from your nearest IRS office and study it.

You'll learn that a trip has to be primarily for business purposes in order to take a tax deduction. If it is primarily a vacation trip, no deduction is allowed. If it's part business and part vacation, only the cost of the business portion can be deducted.

As a retired person who sells real estate part time, it's unlikely your husband could make a deduction for a cruise's expenses stand up to IRS scrutiny — even if a seminar about real estate was held on shipboard. As his spouse who has no business reason for taking the cruise, not even a part of your cost would be a legitimate deduction.

Program helping foreign students remove accents

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Ella Friedman studied English for nine years in her native Soviet Union and was sure she'd be able to speak the language like an American when she came to the United States.

Instead, she found Americans thought she was from Great Britain.

"It was a such a shock," the 28-year-old immigrant said. "I really got tired of people asking me where I was from."

Ms. Friedman, a physician from Moscow who enrolled at the University of Texas Medical School in March to study neuroscience, went to the school's Speech and Hearing Institute for help. She signed up for a 24-week course designed to help foreign medical students lose their accents.

"I wanted to talk just like everybody else," said Ms. Friedman, who left the Soviet Union almost three years ago because of its anti-Semitic policies. "I wanted to sound like an American."

But for many of the 1,000 international students at the medical school, their concern is more than just blending in with native-born Americans. Their careers depend on their ability to effectively communicate in English.

Words as simple as "chocolate shake" are difficult for Spanish-speaking students. Pronouncing "lollipop" and other words with Ls give Oriental students problems, while Germans often struggle with "very well," "last week" and other words with Vs and Ws, said Juliet Hubbel, a speech pathologist working in the Foreign Accent Retraining program.

"People who learn English as their second language in a foreign country may know their English grammar, verb conjugations and spelling better than someone born and bred in Kansas City or San Francisco," Ms. Hubbel said.

"But pronunciation is more difficult for them because most were taught by people whose first language is not English. It's the same way for Americans trying to learn French, German or Russian," she said.

The idea for the program surfaced earlier this year when medical school officials asked the institute to help an Arab student. He was passing all classes except interviewing — the course that prepares future physicians to do initial interviews and take a patient's medical history.

Until students pass interviewing, they cannot continue their education, Ms. Hubbel said.

"In the most severe cases, it's like a person who is deaf and mute trying to communicate. These students often are brilliant and can pass any written test. But when they have to say it, they can't," said Ms. Hubbel, who holds a degree in linguistics.

Less red tape, more funds for heart research foreseen

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The only surgeon authorized to implant artificial hearts in humans says there will be less red tape and more money for research when he leaves the University of Utah Medical Center for a new private institute.

DeVries

University of Utah officials, meanwhile, said Dr. William C. DeVries' decision to join a unit of a billion-dollar hospital chain in Louisville underscores the obstacles faced by medical researchers dependent on public funding.

Utah had been searching for a second artificial heart recipient, but the search came to a standstill with word of DeVries' departure.

DeVries, who implanted the first artifical heart in retired dentist Barney Clark in 1982, cited frustration over delays in approving implant operations and a lack of equipment and personnel as he announced Tuesday that he will join Humana Inc.'s Heart Institute International.

Dr. Robert Jarvik, inventor of the plastic heart and president of Symbion Inc., which markets the device, said the focus of the artificial heart project will move to Louisville with DeVries.

Humana Inc., with $2.3 billion in annual revenues, is a hospital-industry giant. It owns 89 for-profit hospitals with 17,000 beds in the United States and three foreign countries.

The company's heart institute has performed more than 12,000 open-heart procedures since opening last year. DeVries' arrival means the institute will have the world's only "heart replacement program," performing both implants and transplants, company officials said.

DeVries, 40, said he was leaving Utah because "the opportunities are greater and there is less red tape. I will have more time for research in a field I love.

"I was very frustrated in Utah," he added. "I don't like to see people die while I wait for the red tape to be cleaned up."

DeVries said he does not have a timetable for when an implant might be performed in Louisville, noting that several agencies, including the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, must give their approval.

In Utah, DeVries had to help raise funds to pay for the surgery, estimated at $250,000. In Louisville, Humana will contribute toward bills that patients cannot pay, company officials said.

On Dec. 2, 1982, DeVries implanted the Jarvik-7 artificial heart in Clark, who survived on the device for 112 days.

David Jones, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Humana, said his company has not bought DeVries's services. "He doesn't get a penny from Humana. He'll be in private practice," Jones said.

But Humana did make a "multimillion-dollar commitment" to the institute and will underwrite the cost of up to 100 artificial-heart implants, Jones said.

Humana's facilities were a factor that attracted him, said DeVries. "It has more equipment and more people than I did at Utah."

Dr. Don E. Detmer, vice president for health services at the University of Utah, said DeVries's move was a setback for Utah's artificial heart program.

"Dr. DeVries's leaving the University of Utah illustrates a phenomenom taking place in academic medical centers across the country, especially those dependent on public funds," Detmer said.

The university "simply does not have the resources available to support many of our research programs to the extent we believe they should be," he said.

DeVries also had chaffed at the university's Institutional Review Board, which deliberated nine months before approving his proposed guidelines for a second transplant. The FDA then took 51 days before giving its approval.

His impending departure surprised university officials in Salt Lake City, where potential recipients for a second implant were already being screened.

Nurses examine the progress of Hollie Raffey, the world's youngest heart transplant patient.

Outlook hopeful for tiny, 'active' transplant patient

LONDON (AP) — Twelve-day-old Hollie Roffey, the world's youngest heart transplant patient, was "quite active" today, wriggling in her germ-free incubator despite a battery of tapes attached to her body, a hospital spokesman said.

"We are very hopeful about her progress," said Tom Cosgrove, chief administrator at London's National Heart Hospital, where Hollie received the heart of a three-day-old Dutch baby who died from brain damage. The 5½-hour surgery on Hollie was performed Monday by an Egyptian-born specialist.

"She's still fine, still moving," Cosgrove told The Associated Press after visiting the infant, who was born without the left side of her heart.

British newspapers today published pictures of the dark-haired baby lying in the incubator. Her eyes were open and her head swathed in a white cloth to hold the monitoring instruments in place.

"Miracle Baby," declared the tabloid Daily Express. The mass-circulation Sun said, "All Britain is praying for Hollie," while the Daily Mirror bannered, "Alive and Kicking."

Parents of other Siamese twins stress 'trust in God'

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Parents of Siamese twins will do well to trust God and take one day at a time to cope with the overwhelming experiences the unique siblings will face, a mother and a father of different twins say.

Neither Patricia Hansen of Clinton, Utah, nor Ken Hasner of Neenah, Wis., regrets the decision to have their children surgically separated.

Recent attention has focused on Siamese twins because of the separation of twin Burmese boys last weekend in Toronto. Dr. Robert M. Filler, who headed a 43-member team, said he believed the operation was the most complicated separation ever because so many organs had to be separated.

Because of a shared set of male genitals, doctors also had to choose one twin to become a girl, which is unusual.

Siamese twins result from an embryo that has not split fully. Some 70 percent of them are female, and nearly three quarters are joined at the chest or midsection. They occur in about every 50,000 births.

In telephone interviews Tuesday, Ms. Hansen and Hasner said they never doubted that their children should be surgically separated.

"We felt we kind of needed to give them the best chance," said Ms. Hansen, whose 6-year-old daughters were separated about five years ago.

Hasner said that one day his daughters, separated June 24 only 12 days after birth, are "going to look like any other 5-year-old girls, they're going to function like any other 5-year-old girls."

Hasner said parents of Siamese twins should trust in God and try to avoid the news media, which have taken up to 20 or 30 hours of time a week. But he and his wife decided to spend substantial time with reporters in hopes of reducing the load on some other parents of Siamese twins, he said.

Ms. Hansen said the experience of Siamese twins can get overwhelming if a parent worries about what will happen in a month or year. "The best advice I could give anybody is just take each day at a time," she said.

She said her daughters, Lisa and Elisa, wear protective helmets and will need skull surgery to repair where they were joined. Lisa is unable to walk.

But both attend school and get along well with the neighborhood kids, even getting into fights with them like other children, she said.

When they hear about other Siamese twins, they ask, "That's us, huh?" Ms. Hansen said.

Hasner's daughters, Amy and Emily, will be told about their once being joined at the abdomen, Hasner said.

"We will relate to them how the Lord has used them to let other people know about our faith in God and how the Lord has supplied so many miracles," said Hasner.

Gene Kelly praises 'spontaneity'

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Gene Kelly, the 72-year-old hoofer who still seems as fit as when he danced through puddles in "Singin' In The Rain," says he likes break dancing because it's "spontaneous."

Kelly, living in a rented house built by Greta Garbo until his burned-down Beverly Hills residence can be restored, said in an interview published today that he isn't missing any of the Olympics.

"The big difference between competitive sports and the dance is that athletics are completely unrehearsed," Kelly said. "Like break dancing, it's spontaneous. I love break dancing. The athleticism is inherent in it."

Somewhat of an athlete himself, Kelly said his dancing days are over, but he stays light on his feet by playing "a pretty mean game of tennis."

Spielberg

NEW YORK (AP) — Steven Spielberg, the creative genius behind such big screen blockbusters as "E.T., the Extra-Terrestrial" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," is bringing his movie magic to the small screen in a deal with NBC.

The television network announced Monday that it has signed a deal with Spielberg, 36, to be executive producer of a weekly half-hour science fiction fantasy series called "Amazing Stories" for the 1985-86 season.

Spielberg, who also directed the box office smashes "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," and his Amblin Entertainment company will produce a minimum of 44 episodes, or two full seasons of shows, with Universal Television.

Some of the stories have been written or conceived by Spielberg. Others will be based on fantasy and adventure tales from the magazine Amazing Stories, which began publication in 1928. Spielberg and Universal own the rights to 518 Amazing issues.

Spielberg began his directorial career as a 21-year-old on NBC's "Night Gallery." That series, which lasted from 1970-73, was a weekly collection of supernatural vignettes, with the late Rod Serling as host.

"I feel good returning to the medium tpat gave me my first opportunity to direct," Spielberg said through a statement released by NBC.

Rivers

WASHINGTON (AP) — No restrictions have been placed on acid-tongued comedian Joan Rivers when she addresses the luncheon of the National Federation of Republican Women at the GOP's national convention in Dallas.

Ms. Rivers, whose sometimes caustic material often is aimed at other women, was invited to perform a comedy routine at the luncheon by first lady Nancy Reagan, according to Betsy Koons, a spokeswoman for Mrs. Reagan.

About 1,700 guests are expected when the luncheon pays tribute to 100 Republican women leaders from the Eisenhower, Nixon, Ford and Reagan administrations on Aug. 22.

Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate, said the first lady has put no conditions on Ms. Rivers' performance.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A gala performance at the Kennedy Center will salute entertainers Lena Horne and Danny Kaye, composer Gian Carlo Menotti, playwright Arthur Miller and violinist Isaac Stern, recipients of the center's Honors of 1984.

The artists, who will be feted at the Kennedy Center's Opera House the evening of Dec. 2, were selected for distinguished achievements and career contributions to American culture, the center announced Tuesday.

Prior to that event, President and Mrs. Reagan will conduct a reception for the artists at the White House, said Roger L. Stevens, chairman of the Kennedy Center Board.

"The five distinguished artists we are honoring this year confirm once again the tremendously vital and varied performing arts traditions of our nation," Stevens said.

The honors program, created in 1978 by the center's trustees, will be taped for broadcast by the CBS television network as a two-hour special to be broadcast after Dec. 2.

Past recipients of the award include composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein, actor Cary Grant, singer Frank Sinatra, entertainer Gene Kelly, and conductor Eugene Ormandy.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC appeared on its way to a two-week rout in the Nielsen ratings after scoring two huge victories with the kickoff of coverage of the 1984 Summer Olympics.

Sunday's start of competition was first in the prime-time ratings for the week ended July 29 and ABC's coverage of the opening extravaganza Saturday was a close second. The next highest program trailed far behind.

ABC estimated that 80 million people saw the first meeting of the athletes Sunday and that 75 million people saw some or all of the opening, a record audience for an Olympics opening.

ABC handily took the week as it nearly doubled its network average from its third-place finish the previous week. NBC fell from first to second place and CBS was third. Overall, viewership made an enormous leap after a summer low the previous week during the time of the Democratic National Convention.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Woodrow Parfrey, an actor whose time in a German war camp during Wovld War II helped him create rough-hewn characters in films such as "Papillion," died Sunday of a heart attack. He was 61.

Parfrey began his acting career on Broadway and was featured on stage in "Advise and Consent," "Room Service," "The Rehearsal" and "The Tiger and the Typist." Parfrey's films included "Dirty Harry," "Planet of the Apes" and "Bronco Billy." He also appeared in more than 100 television shows, including "Flamingo Road."
