'Good news' on economy still 'mixed'

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

After weeks of dismal economic news, predictions of lower interest rates prompted the largest single-day surge of stocks in history, while the government reported that housing starts soared 33.7 percent in July.

But the new interest rate forecasts were made because of continued weakness in the economy and the failure of a business recovery to materialize, reducing demand for business credit.

And Tuesday's Commerce Department report on housing starts got a lukewarm reception because much of the gain was a result of an increase in government-subsidized programs.

Bad economic news continued, with announcements of steel plant closings in Texas and Pennsylvania, extended layoffs at an Oklahoma City General Motors Corp. plant, and closings at tire and molybdenum facilities.

The biggest surge in new housing was reported in starts of multifamily buildings — those with five units or more — which jumped 135.6 percent last month. Starts of single-family units fell to a seasonally adjusted rate of 614,000 in July, compared with the 616,000 rate of June.

Stock prices surged broadly, with 10 stocks gaining in price for every one declining on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks surged 38.81 points to close at 831.24, surpassing the previous record gain of 35.34 points on Nov. 1, 1977.

The government's 14 percent bellwether bond maturing in 2011 rose $45 per $1,000 face value. Bond prices tend to move inversely to interest rates.

Early in the day, Henry Kaufman, managing partner of the Salomon Brothers Inc. investment firm, abandoned earlier predictions that interest rates could near or match record highs by year's end.

Kaufman said long-term government bonds now yielding about 12.5 percent might fall into the 9 percent to 10 percent range within the next 12 months. He said the rate on federal funds, which are overnight loans among banks, could dip to 6 percent or 7 percent.

On Monday, another Wall Street economist, Albert Wojnilower at First Boston Corp., said he too expected short- and long-term rates to be "noticeably lower next year."

Kaufman said the primary reason for his "new outlook" is that "a smart business recovery in the second half of this year is now much less likely to materialize" than was thought a few months ago.

Many analysts had feared that heavy Treasury borrowing to finance huge federal budget deficits would keep interest rates high, but it is now felt the bad economy will probably shrink demand for business credit.

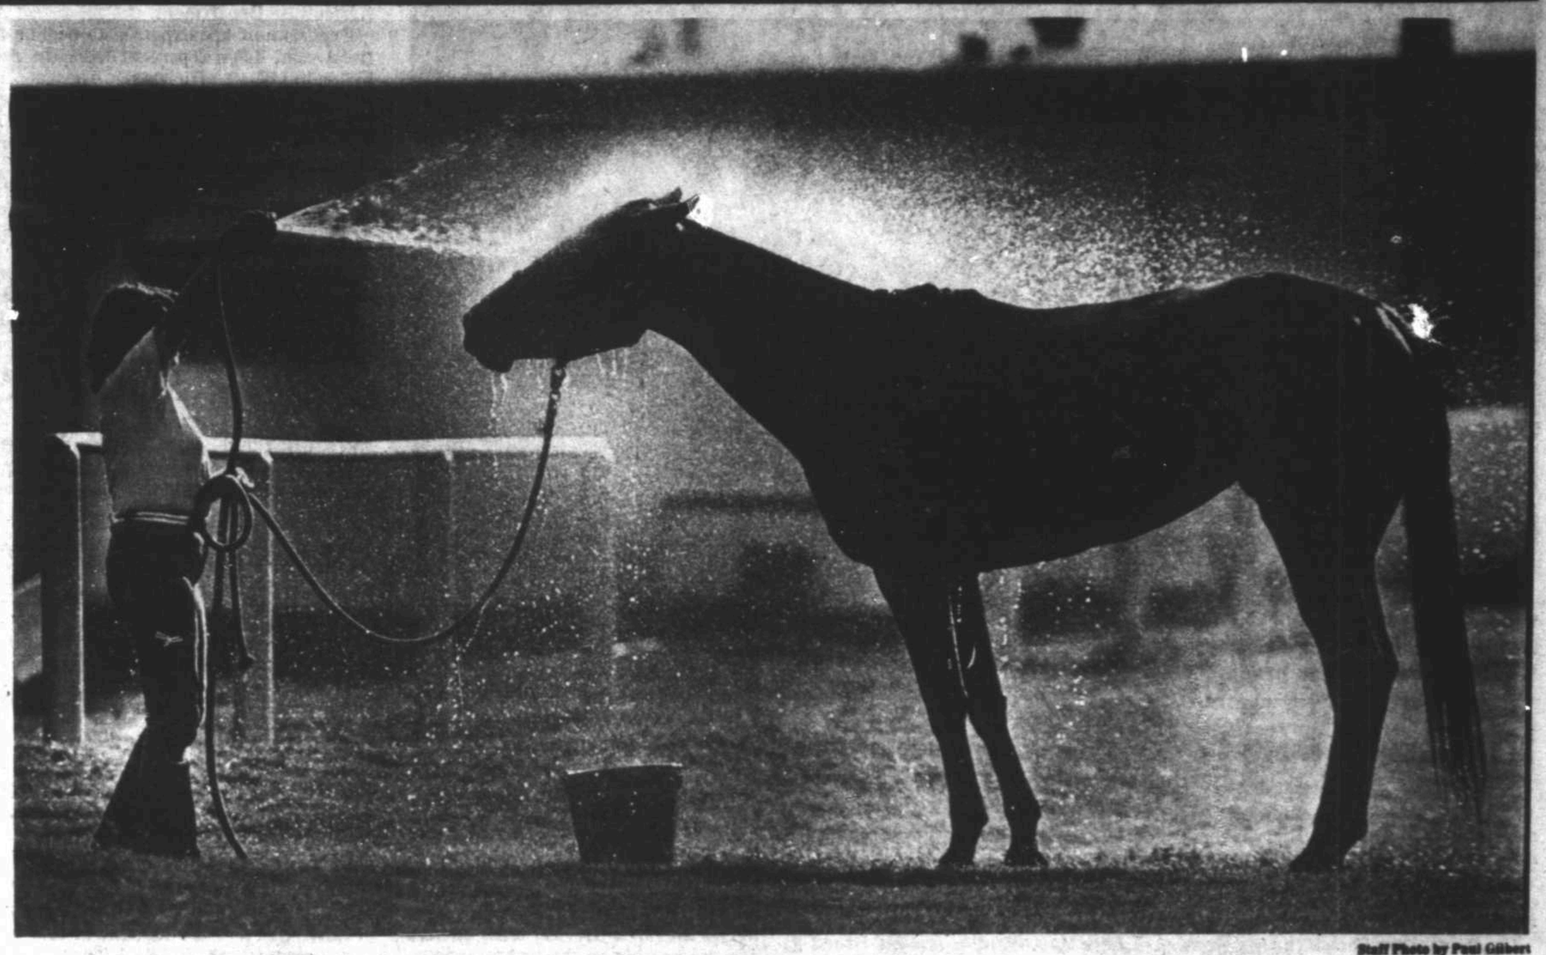

"The business outlook has deteriorated," Wojnilower said. "The risks of a flareup in interest rates have therefore diminished ..."

New York's Citibank and Chemical Bank cut a half percentage point from their prime lending rate for the second time in two days, bringing the rate to 14 percent. The prime, the rate used to calculate interest on loans to the most creditworthy corporate customers, has been dropping since July 19, when it was holding at 16.5 percent.

In other economic news:

—General Motors Corp. said its Cadillac Division planned to close its stamping plant and its metal plating plant in Detroit by autumn 1985 because the operations will be consolidated with similar activities elsewhere. About 1,600 workers will be affected. GM also blamed poor sales for extending by two weeks a two-week layoff for 29,000 workers at a GM plant in Oklahoma City.

—Colt Industries said it will close its Crucible Stainless and Alloy Division facility in Midland, Pa., Oct. 15. The Midland steelmaking facility is for sale. The plant once employed 4,500 steelworkers and now has a crew of only 50 union workers.

Commissioners name developer

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Following their philosophy of trying to get the best proposal for a county administration building and parking garage in exchange for allowing a developer to build a hotel on county land, Midland County Commissioners on Tuesday afternoon put an end to months of meetings by selecting Turner Development Corp. of Houston for the three-building complex.

The other two firms who ranked as finalists — Austin Lewis Co. and Murphree & Co. — weren't scooted out entirely during the special session held in the County Commissioners' Courtroom.

The commissioners decided to follow a path of "competitive negotiations" in which they will give Turner Development Corp. and its architectural partner of Charles Kober and Associates until the first of October to come up with a final plan agreeable to the commissioners. "Next week would be better," the commissioners said.

If the plan for the complex and financing of the package can't be arranged to suit the commissioners, they will turn to the second choice — Austin Lewis Co. And after that comes the final candidate — whose representative told the commissioners his firm can't get financing to build the hotel.

The decision in the special session culminated months of meetings during which the commissioners have sought various means to get the additional space needed through construction of a county administration building and nearby parking garage in the least expensive way to the taxpayers. The preliminary plan has called for a developer to build a hotel on county land in addition to constructing the county building and parking garage — which would be used by both buildings and the public.

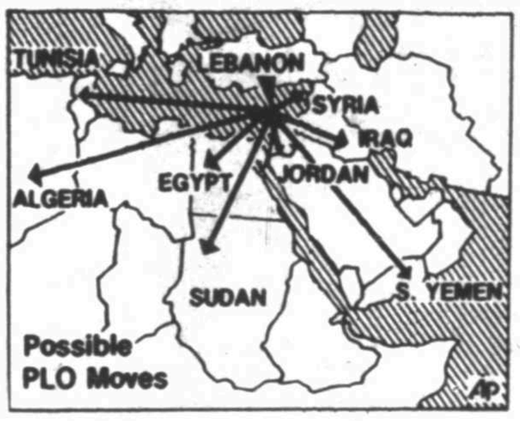

THE COMPLEX WOULD be located on the tract bordered by Illinois, Weatherford, Texas and Main streets with Baird Street closed to accommodate the structures. If the dreams turn into reality, the county hopes to see its complex turn the east side of downtown into a government-oriented center with two major hotels and a parking garage to serve the city, county and federal offices.

The plan submitted by Turner Development Corp. included a county building with 50,000 square feet of office space, a 350-room quality hotel with an additional building for office space and a parking garage.

Designing the three-building complex proved no problem to the three firms. Financing it, however, threw a wrench into the project.

Robert Frank Jungman, an attorney with the Houston firm of Foreman & Dyess, reported limitations in the law concerning use of industrial development bonds for such structures. Primarily, the developer could not own all

PLO's return of pilot clears way for evacuation

By The Associated Press

The Palestine Liberation Organization bowed to Israel's demand for the unconditional return of a captive Israeli pilot and the remains of five Israeli soldiers killed in Lebanon, removing the last obstacle to the withdrawal of the Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut, a Lebanese government spokesman announced today.

The spokesman said his government was making the formal request today to the United States, France and Italy to provide the 2,000-man multinational peacekeeping force that will oversee the evacuation of the Palestine Liberation Organization's fighters and Syrian troops from the besieged Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

The spokesman said the PLO agreed Tuesday night to hand over Israeli pilot Aharon Ahiaz, who was shot down on the first day of Israel's invasion June 6, to Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, and Wazzan would deliver him to U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib.

The PLO also agreed to hand over to Lebanese authorities the remains of five Israeli soldiers killed during this invasion and provided information locating the graves of four Israelis killed during the 1978 invasion of southern Lebanon, the spokesman said.

Previously the PLO demanded that guerrillas captured during the invasion be exchanged for the pilot and the bodies. But Israeli officials said there would be no exchange, and PLO official Jamil Hilal said his organization agreed to turn over Ahiaz and the bodies in return for a verbal promise from Israel to release an unspecified number of PLO prisoners at an unspecified future date.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told Israeli Television Tuesday night: "Not one terrorist will leave and not one member of the multinational force will enter until we receive the pilot."

Israel contends the 7,000 Palestinians it has taken prisoner are terrorists, not prisoners of war, and therefore subject to criminal prosecution.

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

What was expected to be the biggest item on the agenda for the Midland College Board of Trustee meeting turned out to be the shortest, according to President Dr. Jess H. Parrish.

Although trustees approved the final 1982-83 budget and set the tax rate Tuesday, the much debated subject of on-campus housing for students, which finally was aired in public during the last two board meetings in June, was expected to continue. Due to a delay on leasing agreements, it was not.

While trustees have previously maintained the community college's number one priority was to serve the community, they also admitted on-campus housing was somewhat of a responsibility owed to scholarship recipients.

During the last board meeting June 22, trustees unanimously agreed to consider plans for on-campus housing to be built by Midlanders Bill Williams and John H. Hendrix and later leased to the college.

Preliminary plans then called for a 40-occupant, on-campus facility for athletes.

Altered plans, never discussed during public board meetings Tuesday or previously, call for the 40 rooms to be jointly inhabited by not only student athletes, but also by those attending on academic scholarships.

"It will house 40 students, primarily scholarship students," Parrish told the Reporter-Telegram following the meeting. "About 24 to 26 will be athletes and the rest will be for those on academic scholarships."

Although physical plans of the facility have been completed, Parrish told trustees that the project would be delayed until a lease agreement had been reached.

"Fortunately, we projected it (completion) for January, anyway," Parrish said, adding that the agreement with the apartment complex which normally houses Midland College athletes was renewed for the semester.

Under the present agreement, the builders will finance cost of construction and building appliances, such as stoves and refrigerators, while the college will finance furnishings, utilities and maintenance, Parrish said.

In other action, trustees rubberstamped the $7,992,986 budget for the 1982-83 school year. Although no discussion preceded it, Vice President of Fiscal Affairs Bob Phillips explained amendments to the proposed budget before the final vote.

"The changes are minor," Phillips said, explaining that an increase in local contracts was requested because the Midland Independent School District has indicated they will participate in more classes at the college than was expected. That increase in income was leveled out by an increase in budgeted funds for the Adult Basic Education program.

"The only expenditure change was in the ABE programs," Phillips said, "and that was because we failed to put in the local part that is matched by the state."

Total amount of both the amended income and expenditures was $20,146, resulting in the same $7,992,986 budget proposed in previous hearings. The budget reflects a 9.1 percent increase over the 1981-82 budget.

Trustees also set the tax rate at 10.4 cents per $100 valuation, with 7.5 cents to be used for maintenance and operation and 2.9 cents for debt service. The tax rate for the 1981-82 year was 10.3 cents per $100 valuation.

Hospital has unique position in fast-growing city

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a four-part series examining the issue of administrative costs at Midland Memorial Hospital.

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

There is more of a demand on an administrative staff in a growing hospital. New projects require expertise in planning, building, finance and personnel.

Midland Memorial Hospital is one of these growing hospitals. And the pain that accompanies this growth is not new to businesses in Midland, where the economy, population and location are unique.

Because private businesses do not use tax dollars, they are not accountable to the public. In this sense they have an advantage over public operations when paying top dollars for trained specialists.

MMH, a 195-bed tax-supported hospital, will derive approximately $2.2 million in taxes for its tentative $25 million 1983 fiscal year budget.

Last year the MMH board of directors approved an $18.9 million budget of which 8 percent was derived from taxes.

medicine and management

part four

THE HOSPITAL, because it uses tax money, is accountable to Midland County taxpayers.

Although MMH officials claim that tax dollars are not used for operating expenses, a few taxpayers have charged that the hospital's administrative staff is "top-heavy," also questioning whether the administrative staff's salaries are too high.

Currently, MMH's administrative staff and governing boards are formulating the 1983 fiscal year budget.

In all probability, administrative salaries will be increased by 5 percent, according to Ray Branson, MMH president.

Administrative salaries for this year were budgeted at $245,136 for a president and four vice presidents.

Branson earns $84,000 a year. He will be evaluated and reviewed for compensation in November. Since October 1980 he has received a 20 percent increase in his salary.

AT PRESENT, THE four vice presidents' salaries amount to $161,136 annually.

Three of them reached the maximum point on their salary scale within two years.

Branson said his vice presidents are up for review in November, and it is likely that the salary scale will be adjusted.

Whether or not the staff — these five men and possibly a sixth, if needed — is too "top-heavy" for a 195-bed hospital is difficult to determine — unless MMH can be compared to a similar facility.

But that's not as easy as it sounds. MMH's services, which include a regional cancer center, a sophisticated blood bank and now an approved application for a chemical dependency facility, are unique in a populated area the size of Midland. Factors such as the

Declines sharper than early forecasts now expected in farm export values

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The decline in farm export values this year will be even sharper than government experts had been predicting, acccording to the latest estimates by the Agriculture Department.

Exports now are expected to decline to $40.5 billion this fiscal year, down 8 percent from the record level of $43.8 billion in 1980-81, officials said Tuesday.

Values rose annually for 12 consecutive years before their current decline. The new forecast also was $1.5 billion less than the $42 billion officials projected three months ago.

The actual tonnage of products, however, was estimated at a record 164.8 million metric tons for the year which will end Sept. 30, up 1.4 percent from 162.6 million in 1980-81.

But even that figure was below the 168.5 million metric tons forecast in May.

Lawerance V. Gray, chairman of the board of the Agricultural Council of America, called for action by Congress and the administration.

"Otherwise, there will be no economic recovery for the farm sector and the non-farm jobs dependent on it," the Nampa, Idaho, farmer said in a statement issued here.

A private, non-profit organization, the council has waged a long campaign to boost U.S. farm exports as a means of helping farmers out of their financial bind.

The USDA report said that "another bumper U.S. harvest" this year has put further pressure on commodity prices and that the situation is too uncertain to forecast what might happen to exports in 1982-83.

However, it said, the volume of exports next year is expected to rise again to more than 170 million metric tons. Prices, however, will continue to be weak.

AGRICULTURE

Study suggests cuts in ag program

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $140 million a year could be pruned out of Agriculture Department programs intended to curb plant and animal diseases, according to a private study.

The savings could be accomplished by shifting responsibility for some of the programs to states and the private industry, and by charging fees for some services which are now available free of charge.

But the report said it would be difficult to reduce the overall role of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service "if the nation is to continue to have an effective system" of protection for crops and livestock.

Among its duties, the APHIS — as the agency calls itself — helps guard against the introduction of foreign diseases that could devastate U.S. livestock and crops. Foot-and-mouth disease and last year's outbreak of Mediterranean fruit flies are examples.

The $58,200 study, which was released Tuesday, was conducted by Caro Luhrs Associates of Washington, D.C., between April and July of this year.

Interest, income affecting farm real estate values

WASHINGTON (AP) — High interest rates and the crunch on farm income are putting a further crimp in farm real estate values, including the possibility of another decline in prices this year, says the Agriculture Department.

Uncertainties about the nation's economy, interest rates and commodity prices make predictions "extremely tenuous" at this time, a new analysis said Monday.

"However, based on expected agricultural production and the performance of the international, U.S. and farm economies, land values at the U.S. level are likely to decline or stabilize" in 1982-83, the report said.

Prospects for farm income "are a major determinant of land value changes" from year to year, it said. Farm income dropped sharply since a near-record peak in 1979 and "is likely to remain at a reduced level in 1982."

Last May the department issued a report showing that farmland values nationally dropped in 1981-82 for the first time in 28 years.

The decline put the U.S. average price at $788 per acre, compared to $795 on Feb. 1, 1981. Two years before, in 1980, farmland averaged $725 per acre nationally.

According to the latest report, which was issued by the department's Economic Research Service, other factors also are bearing on the real estate situation.

For example, the rise in farm debt is taking its toll. As of Jan. 1, 1982, the preliminary ratio of debt to assets in the farm sector was 17.8 percent. That was an increase of 1.7 percentage points from the previous year and the highest it has been since 1941.

In other words, for every $100 in assets held by a farmer, the debt amounted to $17.80. On Jan. 1, 1980, the farmer's debt was only $15.80 for each $100 of assets.

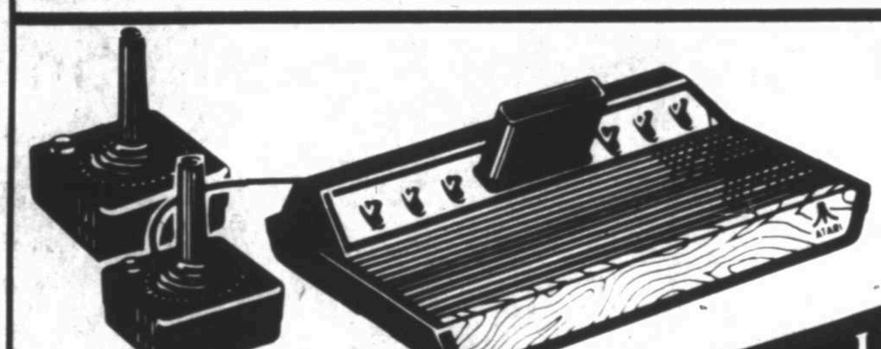

Moreover, when debt is stacked against equity — the amount farmers own outright — the ratio on Jan. 1 was 21.7 percent, up from 19.1 percent at the beginning of 1981.

"The sector's 1982 financial position could decline slightly, but if livestock and commodity prices strengthen, and interest rates decline, the second half of 1982 could stabilize the financial outlook, thereby adding support to land values," the report said.

U.S. films give Soviets glimpse of West

By DAVID MINTHORN

MOSCOW (AP) — When Robert Redford used an electronic gadget to tap a telephone in a recent showing here of the movie "Three Days of the Condor," excited murmurs swept through the audience.

Soviet citizens know telephones are tapped but few know how it's done. They found out from an American movie.

As much as to be entertained, Soviet audiences flock to American movies to see stylish clothing, automobiles, homes and gadgets not available in the Soviet Union.

Imported American movies, carefully selected by Kremlin authorities, are the Soviet public's window on the West for glimpses of a lifestyle only a few Russians ever see first-hand.

Over the last 15 months alone, more than 40 U.S. films were shown in Moscow theaters, ranging from children's stories such as "Lassie" to dramas like "The Deep," "Bobby Deerfield" and "Three Days of the Condor."

"KRAMER VS. KRAMER," "The China Syndrome" and several other "socially relevant" American films were also given favorable reviews during recent screenings in Moscow. Original sound tracks are dubbed into Russian.

The "Condor," with Redford in the role of a CIA analyst marked for assassination after stumbling on a U.S. plot to seize Middle East oil fields, was one of the biggest hits of the year here.

Despite its violence and frank love scenes — which are avoided in Soviet-made films — the movie was screened to big crowds for several months. During one week, the film was shown simultaneously at 17 Moscow theaters.

The film's theme — corruption in the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency — aptly fit a charge frequently aired in the government-run press here: The CIA orchestrates Washington's drive for world domination.

Soviet audiences seemed to accept the "Condor" as a realistic picture of life in America, without questioning in public why Soviet studios don't turn out similar sagas about the Soviet KGB, the secret police.

Although the Soviet press often reports on crime in the Soviet Union, films made by state-run studios are not permitted to deal with corruption in high places.

"IT'S JUST THE nature of things that American films can deal critically with the CIA, while Soviet films on security matters are limited to historic themes, such as the Cheka," said one Soviet, referring to an organization that was replaced with the KGB.

"Soviet studios have made numerous films with scenes of tortures and killing during the revolution and the war years," the Russian added.

Some Muscovites expressed surprise at the amount of violence in the "Condor," but agreed that audiences were fascinated by the story and its backdrop of American luxuries.

Crowds lined up to buy tickets for 50 kopecks (70 cents) before filing into Spartan movie houses to sit in straight-backed wooden seats. Even in the spring they had to wear coats and hats to ward off the chill.

Goskino, the Soviet agency that imports foreign films, refused to answer questions from The Associated Press about its criteria for selecting foreign films.

But Konstantin Chernenko, a member of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo, has said that about about 10 percent of all films shown each year in the Soviet Union are imported from the West. A survey of Moscow playbills showed that the majority of them are American productions.

"THE SOVIETS normally buy films that are at least three years old," said a Western diplomat who watches the Soviet film market. "They probably can't afford the latest hits. They wait until the prints can be bought for a song."

Chernenko wrote in a booklet circulated here that many Western films offered for sale to the Soviet distributing agency "glamorize violence, pornography, racism, acts of aggression, etc."

Goskino's censors screen the Western offerings and select tamer features for showing to the Soviet public. A number of films judged too risque for mass audiences are understood to be kept for special showings to audiences of Communist Party officials, artists and other members of the Soviet elite.

In spite of violent killings and sex, "Three Days of the Condor" was sanctioned for mass audiences presumably because it reinforced the picture of American society fostered by Soviet media — that of an undisciplined, even anarchic society which is manipulated by ruthless agents of the CIA.

The phone-tapping sequence illustrated a standard cliche about how private U.S. citizens can be monitored by the CIA, even in their own homes.

Although Soviets openly envy U.S. gadgets and conveniences, they also seem prone to accept the Communist Party line that U.S. society breeds crime and chaos of the kind shown in the film.

SOVIETSKY EKRAN (Soviet Screen), the national film magazine, this past spring singled out the "Condor" and two other American movies, "Capricorn One" and "The China Syndrome," for their realism.

The magazine said "thrillers" were an effective way to dramatize contemporary U.S. society, which it described as "overloaded with scenes of attempted killings, murders and unrevealed conspiracies."

Photographer capitalizes on innovations with NEWSNET

By SANDY COLTON

For the past three years I've been working on a log retirement home secluded in the woods atop Bleecher mountain in the Adirondack wilderness of New York.

It's my "Vagabond House," a dream home where I hope the wanderlust in me will sleep while I sit under a pine tree and let pine nuts hit me on the head.

As the walls go up all too slowly it has become all-consuming. I wish I had the money to make it go up faster. I wish it were finished so that I could move in. I wish that I could spend more time there than an occasional weekend between travels. I wish I could figure out a way to make a living there now, rather than wait for retirement.

For those reasons I can't help but admire and envy Ron Engh, a photographer-businessman who has been living on a farm in western Wisconsin since 1966.

"Editors and publishers don't really want to see me," he says, "they want to see my pictures.

"Once I discovered that, I tossed away my alarm clocks, appointment books, even my padlocks, and migrated from Maryland to the Midwest. Every morning my wife, Garry, I and our two boys wake up to blue skies, fresh air and quietude on our 120-acre farm-on-a-lake outside of Star Prairie, Wis."

Engh says he couldn't have accomplished this if it hadn't been for the electronic communications developments that have come down over the past decade. His barn, once the home of 20 milk cows, now houses a word processor, computer, telecommunications modem, telephone and photo copier.

In 1976, Engh capitalized on his marketing-by-mail innovations by starting a twice-monthly photo newsletter that now goes to some 1,500 photographers in 45 states and five foreign countries. He charges $75 per year for it. It's printed by the local county weekly newspaper.

Subscribers who have their own microcomputers can now get their newsletters instantly via a telecommunications network in Pennsylvania called NEWSNET.

Editors around the country let Engh know their current specific photo needs for their publishing projects via telephone, and he then lists them in both the electronic and printed newsletters. Engh also provides a database on who has what kind of photos and brings photographers up-to-date on happenings in the magazine industry.

Engh contends that electronic word processing has helped make communication between himself and fellow photographers "more friendly."

"Before word processing came along," he says, "because of the volume of mail, I had to answer everything with form letters or rubber stamps on postcards. Now I can call up detailed answers to frequently asked questions from the computer and share information more readily."

Full-time sheriff is part-time preacher

MAYO, Fla. (AP) — When Sheriff Bobby McCray goes out to enforce the law, he always takes a preacher with him.

"To me, they go hand in hand," says McCray, 42, the full-time Lafayette County sheriff who doubles as a part-time Baptist minister.

"He's been with us for five years and we wouldn't dream of getting another pastor," said church treasurer Minnie O. Thomas.

Despite a staff of four full-time deputies, McCray often works 16-hour days and can be found filling in on weekends and at the county jail. He was elected to the post in 1980 after more than a decade as a deputy.

"Usually I try to leave Sunday as much as possible to the church," McCray said.

With about 70 members who attend Sunday services regularly, Riverside Baptist is large enough to have a full-time pastor. But it lacks the money, so McCray is paid as a part-time preacher.

The sheriff says he makes use of his preaching talents while enforcing the law. "I have an opportunity here that anyone else would not have — to talk to people that other people would not take up time with," he said.

Thunderstorm chance wanes

The mostly-pleasant threat of summer thunderstorms was to be a mere 20 percent today but was to go on the wane tonight, when the weatherman has forecast partly cloudy skies and made no mention of nighttime rains.

The high temperature today was to be in the mid-90s, and easterly winds were to be 5 to 10 mph, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The nighttime low was to be near 70. Winds are to be southerly at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Thursday's high temperature is to be in the mid-90s.

Tuesday's peak temperature was 89 degrees, which fell far short of matching the record high of 106 degrees for the date set in 1969. The overnight low of 68 degrees wasn't too close to tying the record low of 56 degrees for the date set in 1967.

Convict's lethal injection death stayed

HOUSTON (AP) — Charles W. Bass came within seven hours of becoming the nation's first convict to be executed by lethal injection but now he can't be executed for at least 30 days.

An indefinite stay was issued by three judges of the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals less than seven hours before Bass was scheduled to be executed at 12:01 a.m. today for murdering a Houston city marshal in 1979.

The 26-year-old Houston man already had been transferred to a holding cell a few yards from the death room when the stay was issued after the judges met by telephone in an emergency session, officials said.

"It was close," said Bass' lawyer, Anthony Griffin. "It was also close because death is not appealable."

THE DRAMA continued for several more hours though, as Texas Attorney General Mark White asked the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn the appeals court stay.

Justice Byron White, who handles cases from the 5th Circuit, rejected White's request at 8 p.m. CDT. The request was resubmitted 45 minutes later to Justice William H. Rehnquist, who referred the question to the full court.

That blocked Texas officials from going to any other individual justices with their effort. It also meant that Bass could not be executed for 30 days, because the passing of the execution time meant another date would need to be set and Texas law requires execution dates be set 30 days in advance. The execution order had specified that Bass was to have been executed before dawn today.

The execution would have been the state's first since July 1964, when the execution was carried out in an electric chair nicknamed "Old Sparky." The chair was retired after the Texas Legislature changed the method of execution to lethal injection in 1977.

Rick Gray, executive assistant to Attorney General White, said Rehnquist's action was "a partial victory" because the case is now before the Supreme Court.

"It bypasses the 5th Circuit and quickly gets it to the ultimate body that eventually would consider it," said Gray, adding that he hoped the high court would not consider the matter immediately because he wants the state to have time to respond to arguments made by Bass' lawyers.

APPEALS COURT judges in Austin, Houston and Jackson, Miss., issued the indefinite stay after holding a hearing in a telephone conference call with Griffin.

Griffin appealed to the circuit court, seeking a writ of habeas corpus for Bass on grounds that one juror at Bass' trial should not have been seated.

Griffin said state District Judge Miron Love refused to excuse the juror, a woman who had been a robbery victim. Griffin said Bass' court-appointed attorney failed to raise an objection at the time.

The appeals court judges — John R. Brown in Houston, E. Grady Jolly in Mississippi and Thomas Reaveley in Austin — issued the stay a few minutes after 5 p.m. CDT. Earlier Tuesday, U.S. District Judge George Cire in Houston denied a motion for a stay.

Griffin, who said he was surprised by Cire's rejection, had scrambled to appeal to the circuit court, scribbling his petition longhand.

Griffin said he had tried to contact Bass after the stay was issued, but said prison officials did not allow them to talk.

The partner of the officer for whose death Bass was convicted and the officer's wife said they were upset by the stay.

"The jury sentenced him to death and I think he ought to get it," said R.A. McCammon, who said he shot at Bass five times and hit him once the night Houston Marshal Charles Baker was killed.

"I FEEL awfully hard about this," said Dorothy Baker of Conroe, the victim's wife. Of the causes cited by attorneys seeking the stay, she said, "Why didn't this come out in the trial? What did it take — way over a month — to select the jury."

Bass was convicted of killing Baker on Aug. 16, 1979, during an altercation in a Houston city park after Bass and a companion were stopped for questioning.

Prison officials said if the execution had taken place, Bass would have been given a last meal at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. He then would have showered and changed into clothes designed for use in lethal injection executions.

At midnight, he would have been taken to the chamber where the execution was to have taken place before a small group of official witnesses, including selected members of the press.

IN TEXAS, the governor is empowered to issued a one-time, 30-day stay of execution.

Gov. Bill Clements, in Taos, N.M., on vacation Tuesday, was going to fly back to Texas to decide whether to issue a stay in Bass' case, but the stay made the trip unnecessary, said his executive assistant, Hilary Doran.

His staff had said it was questionable whether he could have ordered a stay while he was out of state. The lieutenant governor is acting governor when the governor is out of state, but Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was in Seattle, Wash., on Tuesday. Next in line of authority is the president pro tem of the Senate, Walter H. Mengden.

Hospital has unique position in fast-growing city

economy, industry and location must be considered.

MMH IS preparing to expand its facility, applying with the Texas Health Facilities Commission for an additional 77 beds.

The hospital's average daily census (number of patients per day) is about 146, but, according to Roy Campbell, MMH chairman of the board of trustees, the projected census for 1983 is 161. MMH charges $114 for semi-private rooms and $130 for private rooms.

Out of all the hospitals in Texas, there are four hospitals, not counting MMH, ranging from 184 to 335 beds that are general hospital districts, or tax supported.

According to the Texas Hospital Association's report, Hospitals and Related Institutions in Texas 1982, they are: R.E. Thomason General Hospital in El Paso, Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, Lubbock County Hospital District in Lubbock and Memorial Hospital in Nacogdoches.

The following is a summary of three of these hospitals' administrative structures and their operational budgets:

—R.E. Thomason General's budget for its 335-bed facility is $25 million of which 42 percent is derived from taxes.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE staff consists of an administrator, an associate administrator of operations and three assistant administrators, including patient care services, material management and finance. The administrator's salary is in the $70,000 to $100,000 range.

—Lubbock County Hospital District's administrator is called the executive director. His annual salary is in the range of $60,000 to $100,000.

The hospital also has an associate executive director of finance, assistant hospital director of operations, assistant director of nursing and a controller, along with three administrative assistants, including two in operations and one in public relations.

The 273-bed facility operates on a $40 million budget of which $4 million comes from tax money.

—Memorial Hospital in Nacogdoches is budgeted for $22 million with 3.5 percent, or $760,000 derived from taxes. The 184-bed facility has seven publicly-elected board members.

ITS AVERAGE daily census is 160 patients per day and private room rates are $106.

The hospital recently completed a $7 million renovation. Also, Memorial received approval recently for a 20-bed freestanding alcohol abuse facility.

The hospital administrator has an executive board of six department heads that cover operations, emergency medical services, nursing, plant operations, personnel and a controller.

The administrator's salary ranks in the $40,000 to $50,000 range.

Although there are differences and similarities between MMH and these hospitals, Branson said it is "almost impossible to draw any kind of conclusion" because of the unique governing board structure and services offered at MMH.

"It all depends what kind of shape (financial and operational) the hospital is in," Branson said. "I know right now of a 160-bed hospital that is willing to pay $85,000 or more, if they can get the right guy to get the hospital turned around."

ACCORDING TO Director Tevis Herd, who was chairman of the board of trustees and sat on the committee that hired Branson, a business or a hospital must pay to get the type of person they are seeking.

"People in the corporate world realize you have to pay to get what you want," he said. "We went through a situation where we had only one administrator, who was paid $50,000, and things were not being controlled or supervised properly.

"We wanted somebody who had a broad base and the salary depended on the person, where he was and what he was making before," Herd said.

"Ray (Branson) came here for $70,000," he said. "We gave him an increase in his salary because we feel like he's done an excellent job since he's been here, especially in turning the administration around, the organization of the hospital and in hiring good people."

Midland selected as site of Women's Conference

Midland will be the site of the statewide Hispanic Women's Conference Sept. 17-18, it was announced this morning during a news conference at the Human Relations Council office.

"The Hispanic woman faces unique problems due to her culture when entering a career, maintaining a family and being an active participant in community events," said Chairperson Isabel Rey. "In order to address the needs of the Hispanic women in the petroplex and in the state of Texas, the Hispanic Women's State Conference this year is centering around education and careers."

Assisting Ms. Rey in announcing the conference were Mary Brito, Oralia Corrales and Carmen Lopez.

The fourth statewide conference, this biennial affair will be held in the Holidome, 4300 W. Highway 80, and is open to the public. The dates were selected to run in conjunction with the Hispanics' 16th of September celebration. The week of Sept. 12-18 will be declared Hispanic Week in Midland.

Highlighting the event will be two keynote speakers: Rosa Guerrero of El Paso and Lupe Anguiano of San Antonio.

Ms. Guerrero is a lecturer, writer, musician and dancer and has starred in a film production titled, "Tapestry," which is widely used as an educational tool by many businesses and civic and governmental agencies. She has received numerous local, state and national awards, including the Valley Forge Freedom Foundation Award.

Ms. Anguiano has worked on a national level in welfare reform and has written several publications pertaining to women and employment. In addition to receiving several national and state awards, she has been elected a Woman of the Year and is listed in Who's Who in American Women.

The two-day event will center around workshops dealing with women's job rights, political awareness, the family, leadership training, coping with stress, how to start a business, battered and abused women, legal rights, parents' rights and pursuance of traditional and non-traditional jobs.

Activities are being planned for husbands who accompany their wives. Friday evening will offer a get-acquainted session and the conference will end Saturday night with music and dancing at the Holidome.

The organizers have mailed out 1,900 registration forms and expect to get about 300 women to attend.

Ms. Corrales pointed out that the largest number of divorces can be found among Hispanic women.

"We want to teach the woman how to keep a career and the family in proper perspective. We would like to see more families staying together. As the economy gets worse, the extra income is needed. But it won't help if the job leads to divorce," she said.

Added Ms. Rey, "This is a problem of all women and that's why the conference is open to everyone. But the Hispanic woman was the last to go into the job market. The way she was brought up as a child, her family ties are very strong. She's not geared to go out and find a job. The culture has a lot to do with it."

Ms. Corrales said the conference will address the guilt feelings many of these women have from their culture.

In addition, she hopes to see more Hispanic women getting involved in the political process.

"I hope we can stir something in each person and encourage them to get more involved, whether politically or in the schools," said Ms. Rey.

For more information about the conference and for registration forms, call the Human Relations Council, 218 W. Illinois Ave., 684-5866.

Luncheon will honor Midlander

Midland Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a luncheon Tuesday in Midland Center for Charlie Green, who is retiring at the end of the month as Midland County extension agent. He has been in the position for 33 years.

The luncheon is scheduled for noon to 1 p.m.

Tickets are $5 each and reservations must be made by Friday by telephoning the chamber office, 683-3381.

Resignations from Charles Blalack, instructor of management, and Connie Mitchell, assistant director of community services department, previously had been accepted by Parrish on behalf of the board.

Theft reported

In theft complaints to city police, an employee of the Bunk House at 200 N. Lee St. told officers $325 in cash was stolen from the establishment sometime Monday.

Atlanta candidate badly injured in car bombing

ATLANTA (AP) — A car bombing that badly injured a candidate for Fulton County solicitor general may have been revenge for the lawyer's activities as a police undercover agent, authorities say.

Hirsch Friedman, 39, underwent three hours' surgery for "severe" wounds to both legs and his abdomen and "minor" wounds elsewhere from Tuesday's explosion, said his physician, Dr. Howard Yeager.

Friedman's left leg was amputated below the knee, he said, and the lawyer was reported in critical condition today at Northside Hospital.

Investigators hoped Friedman could provide the names of enemies who might have had a score to settle with him, and they wanted to interview him today at the hospital.

Friedman was getting into his car outside his home about 9 a.m. Tuesday when the explosion occurred. His wife and 14-year-old son were in the house and were unhurt.

"I think it was a professional job," said Fulton County Police Chief Clinton Chafin. "These people evidently didn't intend to intimidate, because they went quietly and professionally about their job."

Chafin said the bombing may have been linked to Friedman's undercover activities against vice operators and drug dealers. He noted Friedman has "been involved in undercover investigations responsible for putting some pretty big-time criminals behind bars."

Experts believed the bomb included dynamite "in some form," although further tests were needed, Chafin added.

Two weeks ago, Friedman announced he had received a call from an extortionist who claimed to represent gambling interest and threatened to spread false rumors about him unless he paid $20,000.

Commissioners choose developer for three buildings

three buildings and finance them through the revenue bond, interest-free program. Top amount that could be obtained in such bonds is $10 million, according to Jungman.

That rule for most developers would leave them seeking conventional financing for the hotel.

"THE COUNTY can't go out and fund a hotel (with the bonds)," Jungman told the commissioners. "You're not in the business of running a hotel. You need to start looking at financing each building individually."

The county office annex would have to be owned by the county to finance its construction with tax-exempt bonds, he said. And if the parking garage is used to some extent by the public it, too, can be constructed with the bonds.

With these restrictions, according to the attorney, "The bottom line is that it sounds rather grim. I don't think you're going to get quite the benefits you had thought. But it's going to be cheaper to you for them to enter into a deal with you than letting them go out and build a hotel themselves."

Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis pointed out that tax-exempt bonds may become extinct soon. "From what I've read, we had better get on with it because next year the Internal Revenue Service may do away with it."

Ken Easterwood, a vice president of Kober and speaking for Turner Development Corp., said there are several ways to arrange the financing package.

Asked when the commissioners wanted to begin work, Judge William Ahders replied, "I wanted to start yesterday."

"Turner is a strong enough company," said Easterwood. "There's no need to waltz anyone around. If we determine this can't be done, you'll be the first to know. The financial market right now is very strange. What kind of financing is the question."

HE SAID THE development company had been talking with the Ramada Renaissance people about the hotel. Later in the meeting, he told Ahders he had talked with the Ramada people one hour earlier and they had reconfirmed they want to build in Midland.

"Renaissance is a new concept of Ramada's," said Easterwood. "It's a European type of hotel, a high quality businessman's hotel."

Bill Darnall, a consultant to the Kober firm, said, "What we have to do now is spend some time and spend some money to test the Midland market and see how big the hotel will be." That information along with the financial package would be worked out with the underwriters and bond counsel, he added.

Austin Lewis, representing his firm, outlined a plan that included $10 million for the county building and parking garage and $16 million for the 10-story hotel. However, the firm proposed the county building to include 75,000 square feet of space and the commissioners said they needed only 33,000 to 35,000 square feet.

The developer's plans also proposed a four-story parking garage — three levels of it underground, although one of Lewis's representatives noted there might be a problem with underground water if they go that deep.

The Lewis firm had been consulting with Brock Hotel Corp. to operate the hotel. Formerly based in Kansas, the firm recently moved its headquarters to Dallas. It is proposing for Midland a suite-hotel.

"From what I paid at the (Midland) Hilton last night, I know there's a need for another hotel here," said Lewis. His sentiments were echoed later by the winning firm when Easterwood said his group of three would be staying overnight in Midland again where they are getting "a taste of New York prices."

AS THE DEVELOPER painted a picture of a government center designed for pedestrians, Gordon Marcum II mentioned the need for a 2,000-car parking garage. A member of the City Council and also the Auditorium in Midland committee, Marcum said the parking garage is critical to the auditorium. To build the garage that large, he suggested the city could "put its good name on a few bonds and sell them" on the industrial development bond market.

John Lloyd with Murphree & Company cast a shadow over the possibility of situating a hotel on the site. Noting that hotel financing "is the least favorable of construction funds," Lloyd said his firm had attempted to get financing since June on two major hotel projects and has failed.

"We've been flatly told that this hotel at this time is not financeable. It doesn't look like the hotel will materialize," he said.

What he proposed to do was to sign on as the project manager and oversee the construction of the county office building and parking garage with an option to have first shot at buying the property for the hotel.

"You're forthright and honest, and I appreciate that," remarked the judge.

In informing the Turner Development Corp. that it had first shot at a permanent proposal and financing package, Commissioner Durward Wright told the other two companies, "Don't draw any more pictures. We can't continue to ask you to put money and resources on the project when you've been ranked second and third."

Turner Development Corp. was given until Oct. 11 to design the project and financing.

Sessions says tapes valid for trial use

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge William Sessions has ruled that FBI wiretaps made in the investigation of the slaying of a federal judge can be used against one of the five defendants in his upcoming trial.

The wiretaps were made as federal agents conducted an intensive investigation into the 1979 shooting death of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Sessions made the ruling, one of several issued Tuesday, that FBI tape recordings made of conversations between Jimmy Chagra and his wife, Elizabeth, and brother and attorney, Joe Chagra can be used.

The wiretaps were of conversations both on the telephone and in the visiting room at the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan.

Sessions ruled that FBI agents acted reasonably in recording potentially privileged prison conversation.

Jimmy Chagra had sought to have the wiretaps ruled out on grounds that they violated the privilege between husband and wife and between attorney and client. He was joined in the motion by Joe and Elizabeth Chagra, who also sought to have the recordings ruled inadmissable as evidence.

The court-authorized recordings, made between Oct. 11, 1980, and Jan. 26, 1981, comprise the government's most crucial evidence against the Chagras.

In his ruling, Sessions said "the electronic surveillance as to minimization and interception of possibly privileged communications was reasonable under the circumstances" and that "the monitoring agents acted reasonably."

Other motions challenging the electronic surveillance have not been ruled on, but the judge's ruling in the one instance was believed to be a victory for federal prosecutors.

Sessions also rejected defense motions to have Sessions disqualify himself from presiding, to move the trial out of San Antonio on a change of venue, and to try key defendants Jimmy Chagra and Charles Harrelson separately.

Sessions ruled that he would entertain renewed motions for a change of venue if a jury could not be seated here, and to sever Chagra's case from the others if "antagonistic defenses" arose during the trial.

The defense motions were the first of about 45 heard by Sessions in a laborious 11-day pretrial hearing that ended last Saturday.

Defense lawyers argued for eight days against introduction of FBI telephone taps and visiting room visits of Chagra and Harrelson at their respective jails.

A grand jury charged that Jimmy Chagra, 39, paid Harrelson $250,000 to shoot Wood to prevent the federal judge, known as "Maximum John," from presiding at Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial. Sessions later presided and sentenced Chagra to 30 years without parole for continuing criminal enterprise.

Harrelson, 44, an ex-convict who previously served a 15-year state sentence for a hired killing, was convicted on state narcotics, weapons and bond-jumping charges and sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Charged with conspiracy and obstruction of justice in Wood's death are Joseph Chagra, 35, brother of Jimmy, and Jimmy's wife, Elizabeth, 28. Jo Ann Harrelson, 41, the alleged triggerman's wife, is accused of obstructing justice and perjury, and Leon Nichols, 51, Elizabeth Chagra's father, was indicted for income tax evasion.

Sessions rejected a motion asking him to disqualify himself because of an friendship with Wood, saying the defense "presented no evidence of any social relationship between this judge and Judge Wood. Rather, defendant simply established that this judge was a colleague of Judge Wood..."

Mosley may soon go free

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The prosecutor of a Galveston man apparently unjustly convicted of an assault to which a mass murderer has confessed says his faith in the law is not shaken.

"The system works, but it's not perfect," said Galveston County District Attorney James Hury Tuesday after he dropped charges against Howard W. Mosley.

Coral Eugene Watts, who has confessed to 11 slayings of women in Southeast Texas, admitted last week to a Jan. 30 attack in which the victim's throat was slashed. The woman, Patty Johnson of Wisconsin Rapids, Wisc., survived the assault.

But Mosley was not released immediately.

Hury said Mosley still faces another assault charge in an unrelated incident. He could again receive a life sentence because of two prior felony convictions. He also faces action by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles because of parole violations based on earlier convictions.

Watts, in a weeklong series of interrogations, has admitted killing 11 women and assaulting several more in the Houston area. He also gave detailed descriptions of assaults in which his victims escaped.

"As a result of a statement by Watts and additional evidence which we investigated, we have dropped the case (against Mosley)," Hury said. Watts was taken to the area of the assault and was able to tell officers details that police said only the assailant would know.

Mosley's attorney, Robert Hoskins of Galveston, filed a motion for a new trial before district judge Allen Lerner. The judge granted the motion after Hury said he would not contest it. The district attorney then immediately dismissed the charge against Mosely.

Mrs. Johnson had identified Mosley in a lineup before he was tried. Police said Watts and Mosley resemble each other, although Mosley is 9 inches taller.

Austin death may beWatt's doing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Austin Police Chief Frank Dyson says it will take about two weeks to figure out if Coral Eugene Watts, who has admitted to 11 murders, was involved in a local slaying.

Dyson said Tuesday that Watts, 28, has given a statement implicating himself in the death of a local woman, who was killed within the past 18 months. Dyson would release no other details of the case.

"There is a case that fits the general description of the one discussed, but there are a lot of unanwered question," Dyson said.

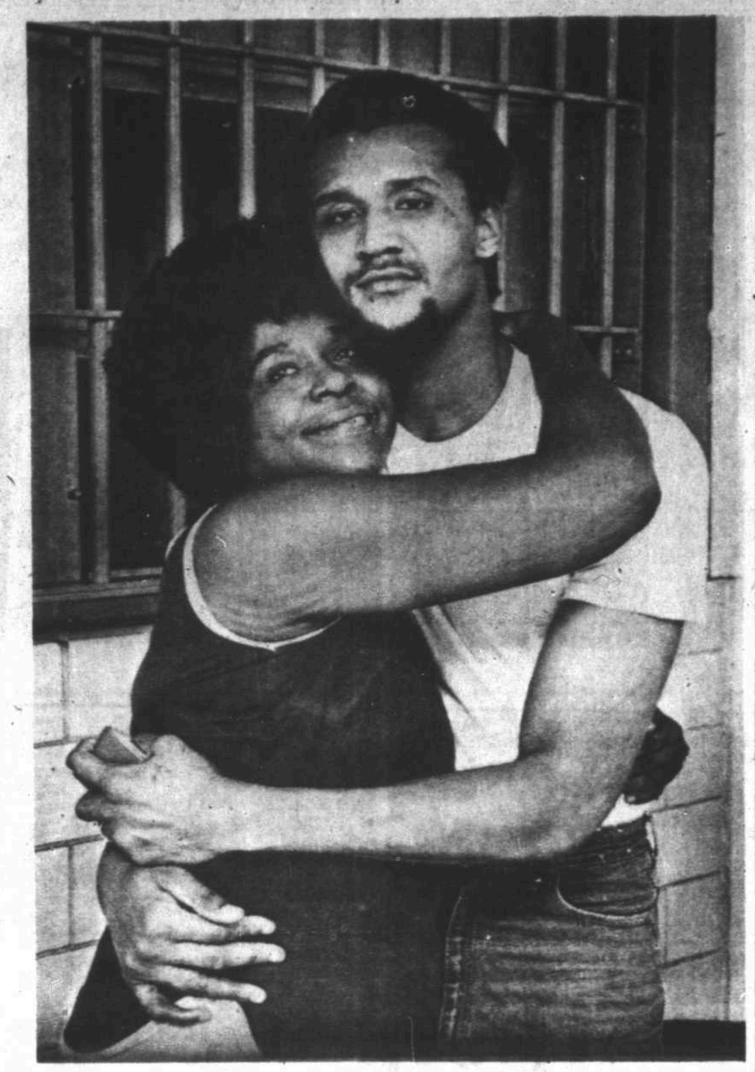

He said local prosecutors have offered immunity to Watts in exchange for his help in solving the case.

"It's an inconclusive situation," said Assistant Police Chief George Phifer Tuesday. "There is one case under consideration, but all the information didn't exactly fit right. Further investigation is going to be necessary."

Two Austin detectives went to Houston on Monday to talk to Watts about the case, which involves a woman previously believed to be a suicide or accident victim.

Lt. Robert Wisian refused to name the dead woman or talk about the details of the case.

Watts has admitted to nine killings in Houston, one in Galveston and one in Waller County. The confessions came as part of a plea bargain struck in Houston last week.

Lightning injures 20

FORT GORDON, Ga. (AP) — Lightning struck an Army training area during an exercise, injuring 20 soldiers, seven of whom were hospitalized in stable condition early today, authorities said.

Thirteen other soldiers, who also had set up camp at the training area at Fort Gordon, were treated for injuries.

Mosquito increase apparent

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — There appears to be an increase in the percentage of mosquitos carrying heartworm larvae, a parasite which can kill dogs and cause harmless lesions on the lungs of humans, in Rhode Island, a university expert says.

The disease is transmitted by a simple mosquito bite. Roger A. LeBrun, assistant professor of plant pathology and entomology at the University of Rhode Island, said a university sampling showed 30 percent of the mosquitoes carrying the heartworm larvae. He said that was 10 times higher than expected.

However, LeBrun said there is no way to gauge accurately the statewide intensity of the problem because no one is keeping track of the number of mosquitoes.

Although very rare, heartworms also can lodge in the lungs of humans, LeBrun said. When that happens, he added, the worms produce harmless lesions that are sometimes mistaken for tumors. He said records show four Rhode Islanders have undergone unnecessary surgery because the lesions were suspected of being tumors.

A.C. Parrillo, a public health veterinarian at the state Department of Environmental Management, said that, because it takes eight months for the disease to show up in dogs, evidence of any epidemic won't be found until next spring when most animals are tested for heartworms.

Parillo said whenever there is a wet spring, the mosquito population naturally increases.

"I would expect, with such a great number of mosquitoes, you'd see an increase in the incidence (of heartworms) next year," he said. "Whenever it's a wet year, you have an increase in mosquitoes and the diseases they carry."

The disease in dogs can be prevented with daily medication. However, the more mosquitoes carrying the disease, the greater the chances that untreated dogs will become infected, Parillo said.

Ex-Stanton student gets MC award

Donna Jean Dickenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dickenson of Stanton, is the recipient of a Midland College academic scholarship. The scholarship, which covers tuition, books and fees, may be renewed for a second year at Midland College.

Ms. Dickenson, who graduated from Stanton High School with a 94.8 grade point average in 1982, was a member of the National Honor Society, track, tennis and golf teams, Howard County Honor band, All Region Band and the State Solo Ensemble. She served as vice president of Future Teachers of America, FHA Area II president and was a recipient of the State UIL Typing Championship award for 1982. She also was active in the Midland-Odessa Youth Symphony.

Midlander awarded degree

COLLEGE STATION — Alisa H. Lane of Midland is among 74 persons receiving Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degrees from Texas A&M University this summer.

Ms. Lane graduated cum laude.

In order to accommodate the transition from a three-year course of professional study to a four-year program, the class, which was divided in half, was the smallest for the institution in many years.

Texas A&M, the nation's largest veterinary school, annually produces about 9 percent of the nation's veterinarians.

Chinese studies media

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — What the U.S. produces best is chaos, in the view of Lifang Zhou, a Chinese journalist who has been studying American business methods for the past year.

Zhou, a deputy editor in the overseas department of the Xin-hua News Agency (the People's Republic of China news service), has found his study of U.S. business perplexing, he admitted.

"Parts of your business world are well organized," he said, citing what he saw as the military precision of factory management. "But," he added, "the managers don't know what kinds of goods will sell or how much to produce."

Zhou said that during two visits to the U.S. he has puzzled over the paradoxes. As an example, he singled out "lite food."

"Americans enjoy good food," he observed, "but they also worry about their waistlines. So they eat 'lite' food, extracting and throwing away all the good things: sugar, calories. Then Americans worry that the lite foods are just junk, so they begin swallowing vitamins, probably produced from substances taken out of the lite food. It's a tremendous waste."

According to Zhou, the Chinese have no such problem. They eat grain, cereal, vegetables and "an appropriate amount of fat. Also Tofu, which is very nutritious."

While Zhou finds American eating habits incomprehensible, he had admiration for U.S. news-gathering, his primary study. A visiting scholar at the Columbia School of Journalism in New York, Zhou looked at Associated Press and United Press International services, concentrating on staff organization, news flow, technology and management.

Zhou said U.S. reporting methods differ from those in China, especially in regard to competitiveness and "great concern with service." Reliance on computers and video-display terminals also was at variance with Chinese methods.

"We still rely on metal type," he said. "As yet, we do not have word processers that employ Chinese characters, though we do use telegraphic codes and facsimile transmission." Chinese news stories may make use of 3,000 to 4,000 characters.

The Chinese, he said, are eager news consumers. Office workers in Beijing may start with a radio newscast at 6 a.m., read a newspaper at the office at 9 a.m., pick up another paper to read at home and conclude with TV news at 7 p.m.

Mexican tourism affected

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The latest devaluation of the peso has cut Mexican tourism outside the country by 85 percent but has not yet resulted in a surge in foreign tourists to Mexico, the president of the Mexican Association of Travel Agencies says.

Jose Mayora said the sharp cutback in travel by Mexicans is creating serious problems for the country's travel agents.

Mayora said "almost all" Mexican tourists with airline reservations for foreign travel canceled them after the devaluation.

The central bank set an exchange rate of 69.5 pesos to the dollar Friday after floating the Mexican currency a week before, the second devaluation of the year. The peso was pegged at 49 to the dollar before the latest devaluation.

The devaluation was expected to draw more tourists to Mexico to take advantage of cheaper goods and services while making it more expensive for Mexicans to travel outside the country.

Bill will curtail illegal-alien immigration

By JAMES H. RUBIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a sweeping overhaul of the nation's immigration laws, buoyed by the proposal's lopsided approval in the Senate, are predicting congressional approval of the measure this year.

The bill, the first comprehensive change in immigration law since 1952, would establish fines and prison terms for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. It also grants amnesty to untold millions of immigrants who live here illegally now.

The bill passed the Senate Tuesday, 81-18, and was hailed by the Reagan administration even though it has significant differences from a plan proposed by the president last year.

Attorney General William French Smith said the Senate bill "will enable the government at long last to sharply curtail the large number of illegal aliens coming to this country and permit us to once again control our borders. The administration applauds."

An aide to House Judiciary Chairman Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., said he expected the panel would act on the bill next month, clearing the way for a House floor vote later in the fall.

THE BILL'S chief Senate architect, Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., said the prospects for congressional passage this year are now very bright. He noted that in recent years the Senate has been the chief obstacle to similar proposals.

Despite the sweeping nature of the 166-page measure, Simpson described it modestly as "a small start, a very small stride forward." He said the bill "isn't perfect" and the issue "will be with us for the rest of our history."

The bill sets a quota of 425,000 immigrants per year, not counting refugees. No more than 20,000 could come from any one nation, except for Canada and Mexico, where the limit would be 40,000 each.

By contrast, there were 800,000 official immigrants in 1980, although that number included 125,000 refugees from Haiti and Cuba.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, the chief Democratic strategist on the bill, denounced it as "immigration restriction" instead of reform.

Kennedy joined with Hispanic groups in decrying the employers sanctions. They said the penalties could lead to additional discrimination by employers who would automatically reject Hispanic job applicants rather than risk a fine or imprisonment.

KENNEDY ALSO opposed the quota of 425,000 legal immigrants a year on the ground it may prevent some family members from being reunited here.

The American Friends Service Committee said the measure amounts to a "half-open door" for immigrants. The organization said the bill contained "traces of Hispanophobia."

The employer sanctions, the centerpiece of the bill, would impose fines of up to $2,000 for employers of illegal aliens. An employer who makes it a regular practice to hire undocumented immigrants would face a six-month jail term.

Employers of four or more workers would be required to examine identification forms, such as a passport, a driver's license and Social Security card, to determine if an applicant is a legal resident.

The bill also calls for development within three years of a system to reliably prove one's identity. It may include a national identity card and a computerized data bank.

THE AMNESTY provision would provide permanent legal status to anyone who came to this country before 1977. Temporary legal residence would be granted to anyone who arrived before 1980.

Immigrants who arrived after 1980 would still be subject to deportation if apprehended. If a reliable means of identifying them is eventually adopted, it would make it more difficult for them to obtain work and some might leave voluntarily.

Also, in a provision that has angered minority groups, newly legalized aliens would be barred for three years from eligibility for government assistance.

Hispanic groups have denounced the restriction as "taxation without representation."

In a another vote Tuesday, the Senate went on record, 78-21, favoring English as the official national language. But the amendment only has symbolic significance and would have no concrete impact.

U.S. ranks 41st in quality-of-life study

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Life is dandy in Denmark and the pits in Ethiopia, with the U.S. ranked 41st among nations in quality of life partly because it has bad luck with earthquakes and volcanos.

Richard Estes, research director at the University of Pennsylvania School of Social Work, ranked 107 nations in his quality of life index. Factors like health services, literacy, women's rights, political stability, inflation and economic growth were considered.

Denmark was in first place and Ethiopia was last.

Estes says the United States' ranking has improved in the past decade but things are getting worse in the Soviet Union. Behind the U.S. improvement was the end of the Vietnam War and the social unrest of the 1960s.

"The major difference between my index and others is that the others emphasize economic development as an indication of social progress," Estes said.

"That's why the United States always comes out on top. America generally produces wealth in spectacular dimensions," Estes said. "But in my index, only four of 44 factors were economic."

In Estes' analysis, the United States ranks 41st and the Soviet Union 43rd.

The study examined two periods, 1979-80 and 1969-70. It found that America's rank improved from 51st to 41st. The Soviet Union meanwhile dropped from 31st to 43rd.

Nine of the top countries in the index are European.

After Denmark, they top 11 countries were: Norway, Austria, the Netherlands, Sweden, New Zealand, Australia, Ireland, Belgium, Finland and West Germany. Japan was ranked 20th.

Court rules pollution standards not strict enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration improperly eased air pollution restrictions for important segments of American industry, a federal appeals court has ruled.

The three-judge panel on Tuesday overturned an administration decision that permitted widespread use of the "bubble concept" of controlling pollution from factories in about 600 counties nationwide, including some major urban areas.

The concept allows a company to meet standards for a plant as a whole as opposed to meeting standards for each source of pollution within the plant, such as a smokestack. Thus, a pollution reduction in one part of the plant can offset an increase in another part.

The bubble policy began in the Carter administration.

But last fall, the Environmental Protection Agency loosened the rules to permit the bubble concept to be used more often in areas that were not yet in compliance with federal air standards.

However, the Natural Resources Defense Council filed suit to block the change and accused the administration of "critically wounding the nation's program to clean up unhealthy air pollution in our major cities."

Man with sawed-off shotgun arrested

An off-duty police officer pursued and captured a man he saw running down a northside street armed with a sawed-off shotgun Tuesday night.

According to police, Officer Joey Heinemann saw a man running in an easterly direction along Neely Avenue near the intersection of A Street about 10 p.m. and ordered the man to stop after noticing he appeared to be carrying a firearm.

Instead of halting, the man ran across a private lot and started running south down A Street. Heinemann radioed for a backup unit and gave chase in his patrol car, stopping him without incident a block south of Neely, according to police reports.

Confiscated were a loaded .410 gauge shotgun, a leather glove and a nylon stocking. The 31-year-old man, who gave police a Shandon Avenue address, is expected to have felony charges of carrying a prohibited weapon filed against him sometime today.

DRAMA IN REAL LIFE

Day of deep-sea fishing ends in tragedy

By MICHAEL REILLY
Special from Reader's Digest

The boat was 45 minutes late, but the guys were taking it well — considering the fact that many of them had been on a night run and driven directly to Point Judith harbor without sleep. We were mostly truck drivers from Rhode Island, and we had chartered the Comet for a day of deep-sea fishing.

Joe Faria was taking a lot of kidding because the whole thing had been his idea. About a month ago he'd told me, "Mike, I ran into this old friend, Bill Jackson, and he's bought himself a boat that he'll charter for $10 a head if we guarantee 25 men. He'll supply crew, tackle and bait."

Soon the required 25 men had signed up, and the trip was on.

Early in the morning of the big day, we watched the Comet coming in. We were disappointed — her hull planking was battered, her deck seams needed calking — but a cheer went up and we all rushed aboard.

The day was clear, but a flood tide was bringing three- to five-foot waves, while a southwesterly wind was whipping them in the opposite direction, creating a bad chop. As the Comet moved into the open sea, the first wave heeled her sharply to starboard, lifted her as it ran beneath her, rolled her back to portside and then sent her plunging into the following trough. Everybody on deck staggered and clutched at the handrails.

We'd been out only an hour or so when I heard a shout from my friend Al Charron. He was pointing to the lunch pails we'd placed on the deck along the starboard railing. Each time the Comet dived into the trough between waves, water flooded part of the afterdeck and, as I watched, the water rushed up and set awash a lunch pail. It was coming higher and higher as the boat settled. The bilge was flooding!

AL RAN to the wheelhouse to tell the skipper, but the door wouldn't open. He pounded on the window, shouting, "She's taking on water! She's gonna swamp!" Jackson seemed not to hear.

Brian and I were beginning to toss life jackets to the men when the engine died. The Comet began to roll badly. Eerie creaks and groans came from the rolling ship's timbers as we scrambled from side to side, trying to keep her level.

At this moment, the Comet began her final plunge. There was a muffled report — the cabin was breaking off. Everyone was thrown free. Wreckage began to bob to the surface, and we survivors grabbed for it.

"Mike! Mike! Over here," I heard a voice calling. It was Walter Girczyc, who had shepherded his sons and nephews to a fairly large raft I had seen tied to the cabin's roof.

Soon 14 of us were clinging to the man-lines on the raft's sides. Our situation didn't seem too bad. Suddenly everyone felt optimistic and began talking at once: "I can see Block Island...the tides will take us there...freighters go through here all the time..."

Our immediate problem was the raft, which was covered with a sheet of slippery fiberglass. In these seas no man could stay on top of it. We all had to remain in the water and cling to the man-lines. I clamped my jaws on my chattering teeth and fought the leg cramps that jerked my heels up under me. As the cold penetrated, a sort of stupor came over us, sapping our will to survive.

AL SUDDENLY began to strike the water and yell. "No, by God, no! I'm not gonna die out here without doing something. I'll swim for help."

Thinking he was delirious, I grabbed his arm. He jerked it free and pointed to a wood bench that we'd salvaged and lashed to the raft. "I can keep afloat with that bench. We gotta do something or we'll all die anyway."

"I'm a better swimmer than you are, Al," I said. "And you've got a wife and kids. I'll go."

The bench was about eight feet long and two feet wide. When we got it free, I positioned my left arm over it — leaving my right arm and legs free for swimming.

I swam as hard as I could but was just an ant-like figure on a chip of wood. The sea would take me where it wanted to.

Suddenly I saw a triangle of white cloth nearby — a sail. I screamed and waved — or thought I did. The sail moved past. I gave up.

YACHTSMAN RICHARD Lemmerman was sailing his 40-foot sloop Decibel to her home port at Manchester, Mass. She was about in the middle of Block Island Sound when crewman Mark Standley called out, "There's something out there in the water. Looks like a damn-fool kid in a kayak. Let's see if he needs help."

When the sailboat came alongside, strong hands wrestled me onto the deck where I lay gasping. "Others out there," I whispered. "The Comet sank..."

The next thing I knew I was below deck in a bunk, wrapped in a blanket and being fed coffee. Over the next 45 minutes we heard the creak of rigging and the growl of the engine as the boat maneuvered, stopped and started. As each survivor was brought below, I said an inward prayer of thanks.

I began to hope all had been saved, but when the Decibel finally headed back toward Point Judith, I knew differently.

Later, the U.S. Coast Guard convened a Marine Board of Investigation. When the hearings ended, two stark facts were revealed: The Comet had no inspection certificate, because Jackson had never submitted his boat to a safety inspection. Nor did he have a personal license to skipper a boat for hire.

Now I wonder. Had I thought to go into the wheelhouse before we sailed and found no Coast Guard certificate, would I have tried to talk the men into walking off the boat? I'm not sure. I know I will next time!

Glenn suffers from lack of forensic skill

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — If John Glenn were a master of the kind of flamboyant oratory that can ignite an audience to passionate frenzy, he would be the frontrunner for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

As an authentic space age hero, a progressive senator from a major industrial state and winner in 1980 of the biggest political victory in Ohio's history, Glenn has all the qualifications to be number one in the presidential sweepstakes. But as a public speaker, he is something less than a spellbinder.

While conceding that he is not a rhetorical rafter ringer in the mode of Ted Kennedy or even Walter Mondale, Glenn rationalizes that forensic skill may not be the most important qualification for the presidency.

When you board an airliner, says Glenn, the person "who sounds nicest over the inter-com may not be the best pilot." He then suggests that being the "great communicator" has not made Ronald Reagan a great president.

As for demonstrating patriotic passion, the former astronaut and Marine fighter pilot believes that is something you do and not something you talk about. In a matter-of-fact manner, he recalls, "I felt very passionately about my country on that (rocket) booster and in two wars."

DEMONSTRATING HIS love of country in World War II and Korea and then in orbiting the earth, adds the Ohio Democrat, "wasn't political gobble-de-gook."

A politician without pretense, Glenn is preparing to establish his own political action commmittee (pac) to raise funds toward a 1984 presidenital race against Kennedy, Mondale and other Democratic White House aspirants. The money he collected for his 1980 re-election bid in Ohio has just about run out and he needs new funds if he is to pursue the presidency.

Glenn does not accept the theory of some professional politicians and journalists that he is getting too late a start. Instead, he points out that he has been running well in public opinion polls without exerting the kinds of efforts in which Kennedy and Mondale have been involved.

"If I'm coming as close to them in the polls as I am right now," says Glenn, "we're not doing badly."

If the 61-year-old Ohioan has a platform, it is to focus national attention and talent "on the three things that made this country great and that we're now fouling up royally."

An Analysis

The first among those "three things," he told a group of journalists the other day, is education, which Glenn believes needs much greater emphasis and assistance. The second is channeling a much greater share of the nation's gross national product into research and development.

UNTIL RECENTLY, the senator explains, the United States had concentrated more heavily on those areas than any nation in history and had, thus, produced tremendous breakthroughs in science and technology.

That concentration, in turn, led to the "third thing," an unprecedented of capital investment to take advantage of the achievements in education and research and development, claims Glenn.

Although he is not a politician given to hyperbole, he adds: "We're decimating them — those three things — right now." He is sharply critical of Reagan's three-year, 25 percent tax cut which is expected to take $750 billion out of the federal treasury.

The president, says Glenn, should have gone for a much smaller tax cut to provide incentive for business investment rather than the "mammoth, over-massive tax cut" enacted last year.

Pointing to Reagan's enormous federal deficit, he asserts that the president's sudden espousal of a Constitutional amendment to balance the budget "is one of the greatest exercises in political hyocrisy I've ever seen."

In his sixth decade, Glenn remains trim and vigorous. His sandy hair is much thinner than it was 20 years ago when he orbited the earth. But there still are traces in his smiling demeanor of the Huck Finn quality that made him the first real hero of the space age —and the most enduring one.

A man dedicated to excellence, his achievements in both war and peace have been remarkable. The question now is whether he can surmount the major obstacle in his political path — lack of oratorical excellence. end it.

Dome name causes uproar

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hoosier Dome it is and Hoosier Dome it stays, the Capital Improvements Board has ruled, despite criticism the name "lacks punch and class and it is too colloquial."

The board voted unanimously Monday not to change the name of the city's domed stadium under construction next to the Indiana Convention Center.

Councilman Gordan G. Gilmer had introduced the resolution asking the board, which controls the Convention Center, to rename the new sports facility to something more classy, like Indy Dome.

But two Indianapolis TV stations conducted polls indicating strong opposition. A restaurant chain polled 286 of its customers, with 75 voting for the status quo, 28 calling for Indy Dome and the rest offering 50 or 60 other names.

"This was a no-win situation," said board president P.E. McAllister, adding there probably would be as much controversy if the stadium became the Indy Dome. "I think it's time now to put this thing to bed and get on with promoting the stadium."

Dean H. Phillips, executive director of the Capital Improvements Board, said he hasn't heard any derogatory comments at trade shows about Hoosier Dome.

Now There's
The Stronghold

Q: What is The Stronghold?
A: The Stronghold is a private, secure safekeeping facility located in Midland's Western Park Plaza. It exists totally as a strictly confidential convenience for secure safekeeping of those irreplaceable jewelry, art objects, or other valuables you may not want to leave in your home while away from the city. Included will be specialized storage areas for computer records, classified maps and other documents. A secure and comfortable conference room will be available.
Q: When will The Stronghold be open for use?
A: Opening is planned for late summer of this year.
Q: Why are you soliciting memberships now?
A: Many of the safekeeping boxes will be custom designed to store items in the Art Vault, such as rare paintings or gun collections, and special accomodations will be made for unusual sizes. The Main Vault will be designed with bank standard boxes, two feet deep and ten inches wide, in three, five and ten inch heights. Larger sizes will be available at a later date.
Q: How much like a bank is The Stronghold?
A: From the standpoint of security, equal if not better. As for convenience, much better. The Main Vault is secured with a 7½" Diebold steel vault door with triple interlocks. The vault itself is constructed with a concrete floor and one-inch thick steel floor, walls and ceiling. The entire vault area conforms to the Bank Standards Act. Access to the area is obtained only with carefully checked authorization.
Q: How does The Stronghold differ from a bank?
A: Convenience. Operating hours at The Stronghold are 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. For example, a valuable necklace may be removed from the vault for a Saturday evening gala and returned later the same evening.
Q: You said that security at The Stronghold was comparable to banks'. How?
A: Twelve television cameras with recording equipment operate at all times, inside and outside The Stronghold. The Stronghold is as secure as modern day electronics can make it. A variety of sensing devices detect any unusual activity and report it immediately. Only the viewing booths are exempt from observation — for total privacy.
Q: Why do you also have a conference room?
A: For the convenience of examining art objects or jewelry and exchanging securities or valuable papers in comfortable surroundings, with the knowledge that total security is in effect at all times. Non-members may also reserve the conference room.
Q: If I need a custom-designed strongbox, how big can it be?
A: The Stronghold will accommodate anything you can carry through the door.
Q: I know my paintings will be safe — what about their condition?
A: The Art Vault is kept under constant temperature and humidity control. We want your art collection to remain valuable as well as secure.
Q: What about cost?
A: Strongbox rentals begin at $200 a year. Please feel free to call us if you need more information. Our number is 694-7754.

Californians to vote on therapy ban

By PHILIP HAGER
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BERKELEY — When a former nurse named Judy Carroll set out recently to gather signatures on a local initiative petition, she figured she would be lucky to get one of every two people she approached to sign up.

After all, her cause was a bit unusual, even by the standards of this liberal, politically active university community.

"But I was surprised," she recalled one afternoon last week. "Of the first 20 people I went up to, only one refused to sign...We needed 1,400 signatures to qualify for the November ballot. In all, we got almost 2,500."

As a result, Berkeley voters will be going to the polls to decide whether to ban electroshock therapy, a means of treating severe depression. In such treatment, patients receive electricity through electrodes attached to the forehead. Anesthetics and other medications are administered beforehand.

MEDICAL AUTHORITIES and state officials say the initiative is unprecedented in both California and the nation. Under its terms, the use of shock treatment — voluntary or involuntary — would be punishable as a misdemeanor with up to six months in jail or a $500 fine.

The measure is the brainchild of activists opposing what they see as abuses of mental patients' rights. Waving such signs as "Stop Shock" and "Revolt Against the Jolt," the activists have staged numerous protests. This is their first appeal to the voters, and they are confident of victory.

"This is a city where people are concerned about human rights, and we see this as a human rights issue," said Ted Chabasinski, spokesman for a coalition of organizations backing the initiative. "Some people used to look at us as just a bunch of nuts. They can't do that anymore."

The coalition includes the Network Against Psychiatric Assault, a protest group that began staging anti-shock therapy demonstrations in 1974. A local publication called Madness Network News ("All the Fits That's News to Print"), edited by Leonard Roy Frank, a longtime opponent of "involuntary psychiatry," is also campaigning for the shock ban.

"ELECTROSHOCK THERAPY causes pain, humiliation, brain damage, lethargy, apathy, memory loss and possibly death," Frank testified last April at a city-sponsored public hearing. "It is a stain on our social conscience and we must remove it."

Not surprisingly, the initiative is beginning to encounter opposition from doctors and other authorities who defend shock therapy as a valuable and widely accepted treatment.

Opponents of the measure, in arguments being prepared for publication in the local voters pamphlet, say shock therapy can be "lifesaving" for severely depressed patients, some of whom are suicidal or unable to eat because of emotional distress.

A report issued by the American Psychiatric Association in 1978 called shock therapy a "useful treatment" for severe depression, provided it is practiced with proper safeguards.

Some authorities say that while psychiatrists may differ over the extent to which shock therapy should be used, there is little, if any, sentiment in the profession for a flat ban on its use.

"A BAN WOULD BE an intrusion on the rights of citizens as well as the rights of professionals to exercise good, medical judgment," said Dr. Fred Gottlieb, associate professor of psychiatry at the University of California, Los Angeles, and director of the Family Therapy Institute of Southern California. "They are barking up the wrong tree in Berkeley."

If the initiative does pass, lawyers say there is a fair chance the measure will be struck down in the courts as conflicting with state laws that already regulate the practice.

"There are extensive, and very detailed regulations governing the use of shock therapy," said Carl Ehrlich, chief counsel for the California Department of Mental Health. "Patient consent is required — and in cases where a patient refuses to consent, there are very specific court procedures that must be followed before treatment is permitted."

According to state reports, electroshock treatments were administered to 2,700 people in California in 1978. Al Herrick, head of the only medical facility in Berkeley where the therapy is given, 45 people received treatments last year. The hospital defends the practice as a last resort for many patients and says it strictly adheres to state rules requiring informed consent from patients.

DESPITE ITS admittedly formidable opposition, the coalition backing the initiative is waging a vigorous campaign. Its leaders deny that the issue is too complex to be left to the voters.

"Just because doctors are involved in shock treatment doesn't mean this is a 'medical issue,'" Chabasinski said. "That's like saying that people shouldn't vote on prison bond issues because they're not criminologists. This is really no more complicated than a lot of other ballot measures."

Supporters of the ban liken the treatment to lobotomies and predict that future generations will look back in horror at its use.

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Jill St. John and Randi Oakes (TV's "CHiPS") celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date, Orville Wright, co-inventor of the airplane. The year ahead should be long remembered. Not only new partnerships, but one-person businesses do especially well. Financial help arrives from an unexpected source. Curb your occasionally arrogant attitude towards those in power. Romance is intense and exciting, but unlikely to last forever. Keep spending within reasonable limits. Cheerful and expansive, you are in great social demand. Those who know best place a high value on your friendship. Be careful to shield your loved ones from your quick temper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A surprise gift delights you. Seize an opportunity to make some extra money. Gossip will upset your loved ones even if they decide to ignore it. Think twice about a new romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be tactful when discussing job responsibilities with co-workers. In your view, a misunderstanding exists. Take steps to clarify the situation before it gets any worse.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Move slowly and avoid taking chances with your hard-earned money. A mail order deal could bring new profits. Group activities hold special appeal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day for intellectual pursuits. Your mental energies are running high. Indulge in recreational activities in late afternoon. Money worries lessen.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your candid approach to life wins you new friends. Talk over your differences with mate. Romantic partner's dashing personality impresses you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take your time when making important choices. The key is to keep sentiment separate from business. Express yourself clearly. You adjust quickly to changes in routine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Channel your energies wisely. A daydream can become reality if you are willing to change your attitude. Romantic partner makes it difficult for you to concentrate on work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let your co-workers pawn their work off on you. Guard against making snap decisions. If seeking a loan, be candid about your financial position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A domestic problem appears insurmountable until a phone call or letter brings welcome financial news. An antique could prove quite valuable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A shortage of funds could upset some travel arrangements. Look for attractive alternatives. Welcome suggestions from neighbors facing a similar situation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Real estate provides you with greater financial opportunities. Advertise in a local newspaper. Changing jobs may not be the best way to achieve security.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your social life picks up and romance flourishes. You are not in the mood to mediate family arguments. Make your position clear!

Renowned bridge clubs, such as New York's Cavendish Club, earn their reputations because of the famous players who live, or have been, members. But playing with the stars can have beneficial effects on the skill of the membership as well. Watch a former president of the club, Lee Koppel, at work during a rubber bridge game.

North-South were using a five-card major system, so North's bid of two hearts was not necessarily a true reverse. Koppel's bid of six no trump is typical of the dash that earned him the rank of major in the Israeli army before he settled in New York.

Declarer won the diamond lead in dummy and led a heart to his queen and West's king. West continued with a diamond, won in the closed hand. If hearts broke evenly, declarer would have twelve tricks, so he cashed the jack-ace in the suit. When that suit followed the percentages, Koppel had to look elsewhere for the fulfilling trick.

He thought of the spade finesse, and led the queen from the table. When East followed perhaps a trifle too smoothly with a low spade, declarer decided that that finesse was not going to work. So he elected to fall back on a squeeze. He rose with the ace of spades and ran his diamonds.

On the long diamonds declarer discarded the ten and jack of spades. West, who had sluffed a spade on the third heart, had no trouble parting with a spade on the fourth diamond. But the last diamond was the final turn of the screw. Since West had to keep the king of spades to guard against the nine in dummy, he was forced to sluff a club. Now declarer was able to reel off four club tricks to score his slam.

There are those who might think that the squeeze technique is the best part of this hand. But for our money we like the fact that declarer won the first diamond in dummy and immediately led a heart to his hand. If East had the king, or if the suit had divided 3-3, declarer would have had twelve tricks without having to resort to a finesse, much less a squeeze!

The overall picture

During recent weeks a number of stories have appeared in The Reporter-Telegram detailing new construction of high-rise buildings in downtown Midland, the economic strength of the Permian Basin and the outlook for the next few years.

While most of this news is of a highly positive nature that very fact tends to overshadow industries that are suffering here. And there are some such industries. They're hurting and they'll continue to hurt until the nation's overall economic picture improves because despite the strength of Midland's economy, the Tall City and the rest of Texas and the Southwest are not immune from national economic forces.

But from time to time, we, like many other Midlanders, find ourselves scratching our heads and wondering about new construction plans when so much already has been done in the past few years. The answer is a multi-faceted one.

If, for example, you suspect that Midland is populated with an independent breed of people who are more optimistic than most and who truly believe that there is no way for the Tall City to go but up, you're not all that far from the truth. But neither do you have the complete picture. From what our sources tell us — and they are leaders in the business and financial community — Midland is in an extremely enviable position for the next several years, at the very least.

What keeps Midland strong is what made Midland strong in the first place — petroleum. The importance of oil and gas in today's economy simply cannot be overlooked. Sure there currently is a world oil glut, pushing the price of a barrel of crude down and creating a degree of caution on the part of local drilling companies.

But there also is still an Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) and a very real fear of international blackmail via oil shipment curtailments. Thus, the importance of domestic oil production continues and, for the forseeable future at least, will continue.

That was reflected when the first half of 1982 saw a strong number of well completions nationwide — 44,726. That compares to the 35,581 completions for the first half of 1981, a record year for drilling activity. If the working rig count averages about 2,900 for the remainder of the year, according to Petroleum Information Corp., "an estimated 30,000 more completions could be expected. The 1982 total then would be about 74,000 wells, the second highest completion total in the history of domestic drilling." Only behind last year, which was the record, we would add.

All that oil activity translates into more strength for the Midland-Permian Basin economy because "production" is the name of the game in the oil business. Wells being completed successfully today typically will produce for a number of years and since a large amount of oil land in this area is in the hands of private investors that money is funneled back through the Tall City economy. We are all aware of what that means.

While the number of buildings now gracing Midland's skyline — and under construction — will lead some to speculate that the city is "overbuilding," that doesn't appear to be the case. In fact, some of the principals say they expect the current tight money situation to lead investors along conservative planning lines which will most probably result in demand pressures for more office space. The result of that economic cycle predictably will be another Midland "boom" in two, three, four or five years.

Midland's strength is based on a firm foundation now because of the world energy situation. That situation will fluctuate in coming months and years. But as long as there is an oil economy and as long as the technology for other forms of energy is not available nor cost-effective, Midland and the rest of the Permian Basin will enjoy an extremely favorable economic climate.

Another View:

Selling our heritage

The Reagan administration is having a fire sale — one that will burn Americans for generations to come. Sacrificing economics to ideology, the government is recklessly selling and leasing public properties in the name of private enterprise. It is irrevocably placing the nation's natural resources beyond the public's reach and into the hands of a few companies, mostly energy producers.

The administration, which inherited the stewardship of nothing less than the national heritage, intends to diminish the scope of that role. Operating with the explicit sanction of the White House — and the industries that would benefit thereby — Secretary of the Interior James G. Watt has declared that in the next five years he will sell up to 35 million acres of public lands (an area the size of Florida), lease 1 billion acres to offshore drilling, and double the rate of onshore energy leasing.

Selling so much so soon, all worth trillions of dollars, ensures a depressed market. It makes for a potential windfall of gigantic proportions to buyers and an equally great loss to sellers, who are, willing or not, the American people.

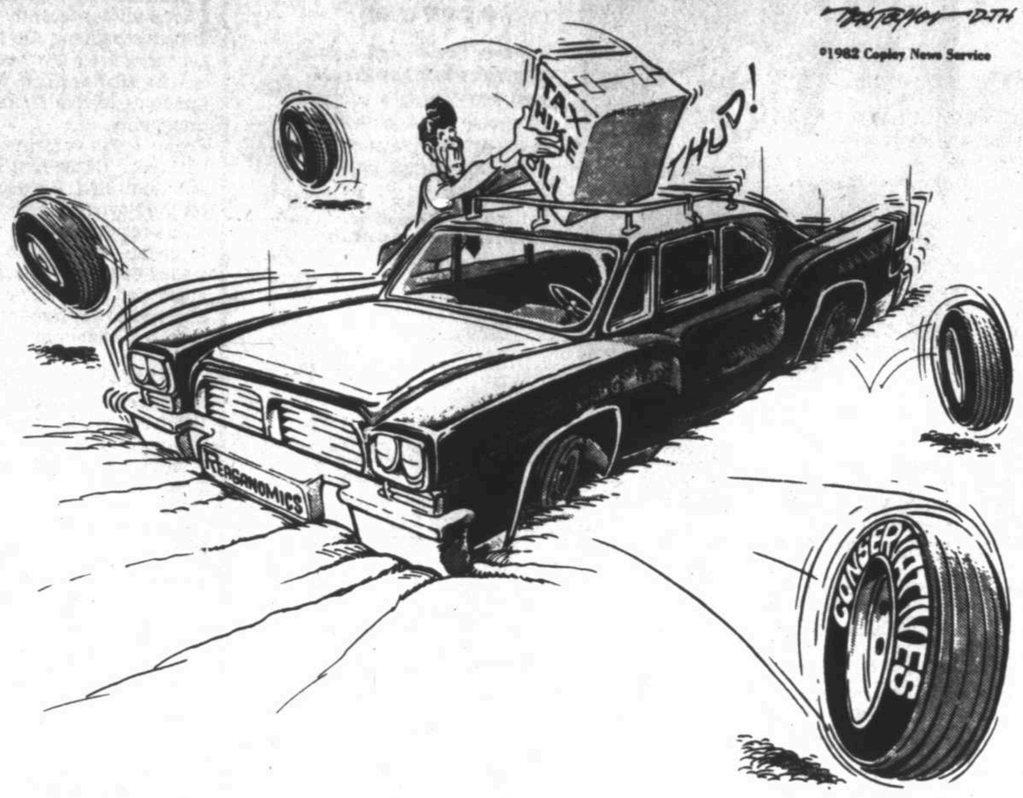

Leases on the vast National Petroleum Reserve on Alaska's North Slope, for example, were expected to bring at least a half-billion dollars this year. A total of $70 million was raised. And, in Wyoming's Powder River basin, one company is paying one-hundredth the going rate for coal by the ton. The competition that is supposed to surround the sales is non-existent because the demand is simply not there: An oil and coal glut is causing profits to drop for many energy companies, restricting their cash flow.

By the Department of the Interior's own admission, the current drive to "privatization" is not just an effort to increase federal revenues. It is a matter of political philosophy rather than economic necessity, reflecting the belief that government has no business managing natural resources for the common good. The sheer magnitude of the sales and leases precludes thoughtful economic planning. Without even the time to survey the land adequately, the government has left the crucial task of deciding which areas are to be developed to industry. The administration seems desperate to get rid of the public properties as quickly as it can.

Ostensibly, consumers will benefit as cheaper prices for resources are passed along. What will really happen is that, as industries obtain land and leases at artificially low rates, they will hold on to their gains until prices rise once more — perhaps well into the next century. In a recent article in the Los Angeles Times, Robert Jones quotes several industry sources to that effect. "Everybody understands the deal," one said. "Lease the coal now, as fast as possible, and hang on to it for as long as possible." The same principle applies to other resources.

There is no good reason to expect energy companies to saturate the market with cheap fuel. The only probability that arises from the entire scenario, in fact, is that the actions of the administration will bilk the nation of its natural wealth.

ART BUCHWALD

Your phobia is nothing to fear!

One of the things that an Air Force general said at a recent press conference was that Americans seem to have a phobia about nuclear weapons. This struck home because I have to admit I've had such a phobia for some time. But only after the general brought it up did I decide to do something about it. I went to see Dr. Adolph Strainedluff, a psychiatrist who specializes in nuclear weapon phobias.

Art Buchwald

"On the couch," he said. "Vat seems to be the trouble?"

"Doctor," I said, staring at the ceiling, "I have this fear of nuclear weapons. I know it's silly, but to me it's very real."

"Aha, very hinterasting. Ven did you first become aware of such a phobia?"

"I think it was around the time of Hiroshima or Nagasaki, I'm not sure which. I saw these photos of all these people killed and miles and miles of rubble, and suddenly I got this thing about atomic weapons."

Dr. Strainedluff tapped a pencil against his knee. "So tell me, how does this phobia manifest itself?"

"In peculiar ways, Doctor. I get the feeling if I ever see a mushroom cloud, I'm going to die."

"Very hinterasting, very hinterasting. You know it's all in the mind, don't you?"

"Of course. That's why I came to you. I don't want to do anything stupid."

Dr. Strainedluff said, "You are a very sick man. You think that just because an atomic bomb killed a few thousand people more than 20 years ago, you are threatened. You are manifesting infantile repressed hostility toward the weapons of war. In psychiatry we call this a military-industrial inferiority complex."

"I know I'm sick. You've got to help me," I begged.

"All right. First, you haff to get over this absurd fear of nuclear bombs. You must think of them as just another weapon in our vast defensive arsenal. Ve haff Bowie knives and H-bombs, and in a war, one is just as good as another. You're not afraid of a knife, are you?"

"Well, I don't think about it a lot."

"So vhy should you be afraid of an H-bomb? It's another form of a knife."

"I never thought of it like that."

"Okay, so now let's look at some facts straight in the eyes. In Bikini we blew up 20 bombs in an experiment. So ve thought everything vould be destroyed; that's how stupid ve were. Do you know that now after all the boom-boom, the place is flourishing and the rats are fatter than they ever vas before?"

"It's good to hear."

"The coconuts are hanging from the trees, the fish are svimming in the lagoon, and the voice of the turtle can be heard throughout the land. The only things that don't seem to be doing so good are the land crabs."

"I don't like land crabs," I said.

"So then you don't haff anything to vorry about."

Dr. Strainedluff started playing with the hand grenade which was attached to his watch fob. "If you're going to be a happy, normal human being," he shouted, "you're going to haff to stop with all these guilty peace feelings."

He was stomping around the room. "So get out of here with your lousy phobias and all this stuff about being afraid to die. If you're not villing to take a little fallout, go dig a hole in your backyard."

In spite of Dr. Strainedluff's final outburst, he did cure me of my phobia. I'm no longer afraid of nuclear weapons. Now I'm afraid of him.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Double chin costs GI newscaster his job

WASHINGTON — You'd think the Army would have enough to worry about these days, what with tanks that break down every few miles, gun crews that can't shoot straight and recruits who can barely read "Peter Rabbit." But the brass hats still found time to get all bent out of shape over Ralph Stinson's double chin.

Jack Anderson

The 29-year-old Stinson, of South Portland, Maine., was a television newscaster on the American Forces Network in Europe, bringing news of the world to U.S. troops each day. He was happy in his work.

Suddenly last November he was bounced from his newscasting job and relegated to unglamorous, off-the-air chores. When he asked why he had been demoted, the only reason given was that he was "too fat."

This outraged Stinson. He is, in fact, not overweight. But he does have a perceptible double chin — a family characteristic he unfortunately inherited.

On a subsequent stateside leave, Stinson — no dummy, he — contacted his senator, William Cohen, R-Maine. He pointed out that the Army had spent a lot of time and tax money training him as a newscaster. He also said he felt his abrupt demotion had been handled in an arbitrary and capricious manner.

Cohen's staff did a little checking around, and on Jan. 28, after learning that his unhappy constituent was still languishing in off-camera exile, the senator wrote a polite but pointed letter to Maj. Gen. Charles Franklin, the Army's congressional liaison chief. Cohen enclosed some pictures of Stinson, to show that, despite the double chin, he was not fat.

"The Assistant Surgeon General's office has advised my office that the inherited nature of an individual's facial structure can lend itself to the development of a double chin," Cohen wrote. He asked the two-star general to keep him abreast of developments in the case of the soldier's double chin.

Thirteen days later, Stinson was back before the cameras dispensing the evening news. Though Cohen is a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the Army stoutly denied that his letter to the general had anything to do with Stinson's reinstatement.

Indeed, in a letter to Cohen two weeks later, the Army insisted that weight had never been a factor in Stinson's disappearance from the air. It was his thick hair style and heavy mustache, the Army explained, plus a tight-fitting uniform that somehow enhanced television's tendency to make people look heavier than they are.

Stinson, the Army told Cohen, got his old job back only after "receiving professional assistance on how to improve his appearance by changing his hair style, reducing the size of his mustache and using different facial makeup techniques."

The Army couldn't explain why Stinson hadn't been given this professional guidance instead of the sack last November. An aide to Cohen speculated that "some general was probably visiting the base, went back to his room, popped a can of beer, saw Stinson on TV and arbitrarily decided he didn't like his looks."

Cohen told my associate Charles Bermant: "I find it difficult to believe that a matter like this is worth this much of the Army's time. Their efforts could be spent far more profitably."

Amen.

WATCH ON WASTE: Millions of dollars are going down the drain in the construction of federally financed sewage treatment plants, government auditors recently concluded. And it's all because of a technicality.

About $30 million could be saved if the Environmental Protection Agency's 1978 guidelines were followed in building 13 treatment plants begun after Sept. 30, 1978. The new guidelines were more cost-efficient than the old ones. But because funds for the 13 plants were approved before the Sept. 30 cutoff date, the old, wasteful guidelines prevailed — even though construction didn't begin till after that date.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: The Yugoslavs named a bridge after Gavrilo Princip, the terrorist whose assassination of a Hapsburg archduke ignited World War I. Now the Iranians under Ayatollah Khomeini have put out a postage stamp to the man who masterminded the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The stamp shows Khamed Ahmed al-Islambuli behind bars and shouting defiantly. A drop of blood drips from his shoulder. The message in Persian, Arabic and English honors Islambuli as "the revolutionary execution agent of Sadat."

— On a discussion panel with Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, at the World Future Society's convention here, actress Ellen Burstyn made an impassioned plea for curtailment of defense spending and using the money for social programs. In response, Bedell began by saying that he didn't see the matter the way Burstyn did. "You can't," she cut in sweetly. "You're a politician."

— Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., is the wealthiest member of the Senate and prides himself on maintaining his patrician cool at all times. But he slipped the other day at a news conference, when a reporter quoted him as saying his membership in the exclusive Club of Rome meant more to him than his membership in the Senate. "That's a lie!" Pell shot back. "I never said that, and I'd like to know your source." Pell subsequently regained his aplomb, and told the reporter, "Don't take it personally. I just hate to be misquoted."

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Mexicans questioning what peso is worth

William Giandoni

Mexicans keep asking themselves why, if the government oil monopoly, Petroleos Mexicanos, is exporting around 1.5 million barrels of oil a day, the country should find itself in economic difficulties.

Until August 1976, Mexico prided itself on the stability of the peso. Then, the government abandoned the fixed, 12.50 peso to the dollar rate of exchange that had been in effect since 1954. The peso has been "floating," as have most of the other currencies of the world, including the U.S. dollar, since that time.

Until 1981, nevertheless, the Mexican peso seemed to be one of the more stable monetary units, even though it was edging down a bit in its dollar value.

But then the side effects of President Jose Lopez Portillo's praiseworthy efforts to encourage the creation of enough new jobs to give employment to the nation's unemployed and underemployed caught up with Mexico.

The government found itself committed to high levels of public sector spending to keep the economy growing by the 8 percent a year necessary to increase job opportunities at home, and hopefully encourage documented and undocumented workers from migrating to the United States.

Sociologists and politicians applauded Lopez Portillo's efforts, but economists and bankers complained of record inflation rates, budget deficits, and the soaring external debt, all of which effect the peso's stability.

Estimates now are that Mexico's foreign debt ranges from $80 billion to $90 billion, and inflation is around an unprecedented 60 percent.

In any case, earlier this year the central Bank of Mexico announced that it was halting its efforts to slow the decline of the peso and would let it find its own exchange rate. The peso, then worth about 4 U.S. cents, started slipping at the rate of 4 centavos a day against the dollar. By early August, it was down to a shade over 2 cents when the Bank of Mexico again announced it was letting the Mexican monetary unit float freely.

By now, Mexican businessmen say, prices of most of the necessities of life, and all luxuries, have risen to levels charged in the United States.

There are a few exceptions. A telephone call from a phone booth here still costs 20 centavos, about four-tenths of a U.S. cent. It would cost too much to re-work the coin boxes, which accept only the old 20-centavo coins, and, what with the ever-changing coin sizes and values, probably be a waste of time and effort. Urban transport is another bargain. The fast-moving Metro subways charge only 1 peso, about 2 cents, and the new municipal buses, 3 pesos.

Until the beginning of August, tortillas and bread rolls were bargains. Gasoline also cost much less than in the United States. Nova, the leaded, 81 octane fuel for which most Mexicans "de-tune" their autos, was 6 pesos a liter, about 46 cents a gallon, and Extra, the 91 octane unleaded which is what U.S.-built vehicles should use, was priced at 10 pesos a liter, around 77 cents a gallon.

But, on Aug. 1, the government announced that the official subsidies on corn, wheat, gasoline, natural gas and electric power were costing it too much. The price of tortillas doubled, to the equivalent of 10 cents a pound. Gasoline soared to 77 cents for regular and $1.15 for unleaded. Other prices followed suit.

All of this caused considerable consternation, and fueled the fires of opposition politicians who pretend not to understand the cause of the phenomena.

Mexican cynics blame government corruption. Charitable Mexicans insist that the government has been spending the thousands of millions of dollars earned from petroleum exports on socially significant public works. The university-trained Mexican, whose argumentative technique is the Hegelian thesis-antithesis-synthesis, says that while there may have been considerable corruption in recent years, the tangible achievements of the Lopez Portillo administration are there for all to see and use.

Despite reported siphoning of public funds to private pockets, Mexicans are living more comfortably and longer, in great part because of the road, subway and bus services in the capital, and the water and sewage projects there and elsewhere that have eliminated threats to public health.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 18, the 230th day of 1982. There are 135 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 18, 1587, Virginia Dare, the first child born to European parents in the New World, was born at Roanoke Island, N.C.

On this date:

In 1227, the Mongol leader Genghis Kahn died.

In 1914, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed American neutrality in World War I — on the same day that Germany declared war on Russia.

In 1968, more than 100 women and children were killed when a landslide swept two sightseeing buses into a river on Japan's Honshu Island.

In 1975, U.S. maritime unions called a boycott against grain shipments to the Soviet Union.

Ten years ago: The U.S. Senate approved partial conversion of the United States to the metric system.

Five years ago: President Carter said his faith in Budget Director Bert Lance had not waivered, and that Lance would stay in office despite allegations of previous financial misconduct.

One year ago: Six people were indicted in Reno, Nev., in connection with the extortion-bombing of a Lake Tahoe casino one year earlier.

Mississippi state legislator wins legislative nomination

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — State Rep. Robert Clark, who was the first black since Reconstruction to become a state legislator, is one step closer to being Mississippi's first black congressman in a century.

The 52-year-old businessman from Ebenezer won 57 percent of the vote in Tuesday's Democratic primary to beat three white opponents in the 2nd Congressional District, which has a black majority.

Clark emphasized that he does not intend to make race an issue in his campaign for the general election on Nov. 2. "I got white votes in the primary election," he said, "and I will need white votes to win the general election."

Fifty-three percent of the district's population is black, although 52 percent of the voters eligible to cast ballots are white.

Clark will face Republican nominee Webb Franklin, 40, a Greenwood lawyer, in the Nov. 2 general election. He is trying to become Mississippi's first black congressman since Republican John R. Lynch, who served in the 1880-82 session.

Primary contests were held in three of the state's five districts.

In the 1st District, incumbent Rep. Jamie Whitten, 72, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and dean of the state's congressional delegation, won the Democratic race, while former television reporter Fran Fawcett, 32, of Oxford, won the GOP contest.

Incumbent G.V. Montgomery, 61, chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, won the Democratic race in the 3rd District.

There were no GOP candidates in the 3rd District and no primaries at all in the 4th and 5th.

Republican Rep. Trent Lott, House minority whip, was unopposed for renomination in the 5th, and Rep. Wayne Dowdy, a freshman Democrat, was unopposed for renomination in the 4th. Both have general election opposition.

The 2nd District attracted a big field after Democratic Rep. David Bowen announced he would not seek re-election.

In complete returns, Clark had 36,257 votes or 57 percent of the total; banker Pete Johnson, 34, of Clarksdale, a grandson of the late Gov. Paul B. Johnson Sr., drew 14,298 votes; state Sen. Ollie Mohamed, 57, of Belzoni, 8,802; and state Rep. Ed Jackson of Cleveland, 4,463.

Clark, a widower raising two young sons, was largely isolated when he broke the race barrier in the Legislature in 1968, but worked well with his colleagues in his first term. He advanced through the ranks to become chairman of the influential House Education Committee.

State party leaders have promised to back Clark's campaign. Gov. William Winter offered his "unqualified support," and state Democratic Party Chairman Danny Cupit noted that Clark "has a deep and broad base of support, making it easy for the party."

In the 1st District, Whitten beat Jim Richardson of Corinth by 21,000 to 3,933 in final returns. Ms. Fawcett beat Van East of Amory, 3,097 to 2,148, in the only real race outside the 2nd District.

AP Laserphoto

Mississippi state Rep. Robert Clark smiles as he carries his son, Wandrick, 7, through a crowd of supporters after his victory Tuesday in the state's 2nd District congressional Democratic primary. Clark beat three white challengers in a district in which 53 percent of the eligible voters are white to win a chance to become Mississippi's first black legislator in over a century. The 52-year-old widower says he doesn't want race to be a part of his campaign.

Foreign insects used in fight

Federal agricultural agents bring in a number of foreign insects from Europe, Asia and South America, mostly because they like to eat bad bugs. In 1981, 65 species from 17 countries were allowed in, and 38 varieties were released against 20 pests.

Nearly all pest insects have enemies; the gypsy moth, for instance, has over 100.

Medium-sized earthquake strikes San Francisco area

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A moderate earthquake struck northern California early today, swaying skyscrapers in San Francisco and awakening residents but causing only minor damage, authorities said. No injuries were reported.

The University of California's Seismographic Station in Berkeley said the quake registered 4.5 on the Richter scale. The station said the epicenter of the 1:45 a.m. PDT quake was 60 miles southeast of Berkeley and east of Santa Cruz.

It was felt from Santa Cruz County in the south to Marin County in the north, authorities said.

The tremor, which lasted about 15 seconds in some areas, gave the police station in Berkeley "a pretty good jolt," said dispatcher Karen Dewees.

Skyscrapers in San Francisco, including the building housing the offices of The Associated Press, swayed for five or six seconds.

Police in San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, San Jose and towns in between were deluged by telephone calls from residents.

Callers to all-night radio stations described the feeling variously as a jolt, a bang and a shake, but aside from broken dishes and windows, flickering lights and briefly interrupted telephone service, no serious damage was mentioned.

In San Jose, 45 miles south of the bay, the quake rattled windows and shook the walls of buildings, said Steve Walsh of KGO-TV.

More than 100 calls were received by police within minutes of the quake, said San Jose communications operator Rich McIntosh.

"One man said he woke up on the floor," McIntosh said. "A few other people said they were thrown out of bed, but we haven't heard of any injuries or real damage."

'Good possibility' volcano's erupted

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Scientists spotted glowing cracks on the lava dome of Mount St. Helens today and a scientist said there was "a good possibility" a mild eruption was under way.

As earthquakes continued to rumble through the southwest Washington volcano, scientists flying over the peak observed "some glowing cracks" on the 700-foot high dome, Willie Kimoshita, a U.S. Geological Survey geophysicist, said shortly after 5 a.m.

"I think it's fairly certain material is being added inside the dome," he said. "Whether this glowing they see is new material being extruded or not, we don't know."

Scientists were unsure if an eruption was in progress, although Kimoshita said "it's a good possibility."

A tape-recorded message at the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle said there had been "no significant changes" at the volcano in the 10 hours before 4 a.m.

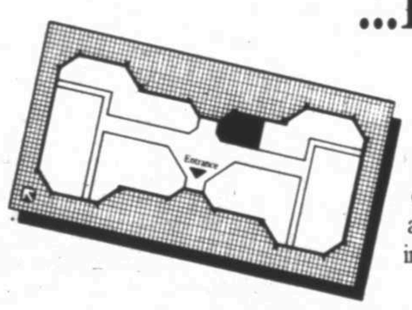

Christina Boyko of the geophysics center said late Tuesday night that while it was uncertain if an eruption was under way, "it's possible that it may have started in the last couple of hours."

"If they see a lot of that (glowing material), it may mean there's a new lobe on the dome," a definite indication of an eruption, she said.

She said the southwest Washington volcano may have entered a "transition phase" that usually signals the start of an eruption.

Comedian Youngman now promoting 'dumb' product

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're promoting a pill guaranteed to drop your IQ by 10 points, what better pitchman than Henny Youngman, who has a penchant for dumb jokes?

Youngman

Youngman is appearing at the New York Gift Show to promote Lo-Q, The Dumb Pill, which sells for $5 a bottle.

—"Two dumb guys showed up at Halloween with burnt faces. They'd been bobbing for french fries."

—Then there was the dumb pantomime team. "They talked."

Richard Basini smiled, at least. He should. He is the inventor of dumb pills, and is convinced they'll sell.

Basini, a New Yorker, said, "My mother always told me I was too smart for my own good, so I came up with these."

"These" are cherry-flavored jellybeans that come in the kind of bottle seen in a drug store. There's a book of instructions and a warning: "Keep out of reach of bosses, in-laws, insurance salesmen, roller disco freaks and people who reside in the state of New Jersey. Dispense with extreme caution in Southern California."

Baryshnikov

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov, who has been hobbled by a knee injury, made his first U.S. appearance in seven months, dancing the pas de deux from "Don Quixote."

Baryshnikov, artistic director of the American Ballet Theatre, performed for about 15 minutes Tuesday with Cheryl Yeager, a soloist with the company for the past two years. Afterward, he answered six curtain calls.

The performance by the 34-year-old Soviet-born dancer who defected to the West in 1974 was the first of eight the ABT is giving in a two-week engagement at Philadelphia's Mann Music Center. Baryshnikov will dance in Twyla Tharp's "Push Comes to Shove" tonight and again on Aug. 24, and the "Don Quixote" pas de deux again on Aug. 27.

It was his first appearance in the United States since he was sidelined by a knee injury and surgery last February.

Haig

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has joined a New York political research institute and has signed a Hollywood agency for publishing, television and public speaking ventures, his agent says.

Haig, who abruptly resigned June 25, will be a senior fellow working on public policy issues, including national security affairs, at the private Hudson Institute at Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., said Norman Brokaw, executive vice president of the William Morris Agency.

Broka said Haig, who now lives in Bethesda, Md., also will be a visiting statesman and executive this fall at the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University.

The agent, who also represents former President Ford and his wife, said Tuesday that Haig, 57, will write a book.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A special effects technician has testified he set a smaller explosive charge than the one detonated the day actor Vic Morrow and two children were killed by a falling helicopter, an investigator says.

Don Llorente, head of the National Transportation Safety Board investigation of the helicopter crash, said investigators are attempting to determine the size of the mortar bomb set by technician Jim Camomile, who worked on the "Twilight Zone" movie.

Llorente said Paul Stewart was in charge of special effects at the time of the July 23 crash on the movie set near Saugus. He said Camomile told investigators that he followed Stewart's instructions when he set a 12-inch circular mortar bomb beneath a hut, which was blown up just below the helicopter. The helicopter was carrying a film crew.

Incoming freshmen at Texas A&M University raise their hands during a yell session at the annual "fish camp" at Lakeview Methodist Assembly, near Palestine.

Aspiring Aggies learn to do it right at summer's madcap 'Fish Camp'

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — At this moment there are 576 young people in the backwoods of East Texas. They are screaming, sweating, meditating and mixing.

They are hissing, whah-whahing and hullabaloo-caneck-canecking.

They are learning to be Texas Aggies.

No joke.

It's a 29-year-old institution called Aggie Fish Camp. By the end of August, 2,300 young men and women will have experienced this rite of passage from high school seniors to college freshmen, from ordinary humans to Texas Aggies.

The "fish" don't learn school spirit. It's more like school frenzy.

When these kids get back home and back down to earth, they'll probably wonder if they really spent so much of their time screaming:

"Aggie Fish Camp '82. Lots of fun for me and you."

They've got yells for the Aggies, yells for the fish camp and yells for their individual camp groups.

A favorite among Camp Kimbrough Killer Bees: "Camp Kimbrough. We're so tired, it's so late. Let's go home and pollinate."

"Freshmen come here holding back, wondering what they've gotten into," said David Gillespie, a Bryan senior and director of this year's camp.

"But by the second day, all the walls are broken down.

"They find out whatever they were in in high school makes no difference. They're starting new, and they can be anything they want to be," he said.

The fish camp, sponsored by the Texas A&M YMCA, has evolved the past four years into a major event. The 2,300 freshmen attending the four camp sessions this year represent almost a third of A&M's incoming freshman class.

Applications are taken on a first-come, first-served basis, and this year the camp was filled by mid-July.

"We've been turning down five or six applications a day since then," Gillespie said.

The competition is even tougher among upper-classmen wanting to serve as counselors at camp. There were more than 1,000 applications for the 500 counseling positions this year.

The camp is held at Lakeview Methodist Assembly, a church encampment about 10 miles south of Palestine. Participants and counselors each pay $60 for the four days of supercharged craziness.

The camp's main thrust is to teach Aggie traditions, which can barely be done in four days.

A&M is crawling with traditions — like standing up all the way through football games, or kissing the nearest women any time the team scores.

They all learn the choreography that accompanies "The Aggie War Hymn" which begins with the inspiring line "Hullabaloo, Caneck, Caneck."

Serve 'baby beef' banquet

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Do you remember those sunny Sunday afternoons, driving through the countryside in the family station wagon and admiring those cute little calves nuzzled up to their mothers or frolicking in the fields.

These charming baby bovines may very well end up as veal before they know the pleasure of chewing a cud. Yet once the palate is introduced to the incredibly tender, melting quality of infant beef, one soon forgets the liquid brown eyes and pleasant smile of countryside calves.

Veal is defined as cattle which is too young to be marketed as beef. These pre-adolescents are divided into "vealers" and "calves." Calves are allowed to munch oats and conventional roughage, whereas vealers are suckled on milk up to 12 weeks of age. Because of this diet, there is a distinct difference in the texture of the flesh.

When vealers go to market, they are sold by weight and by federal government grades of meat, which run prime, choice, good, standard, utility and cull. Restaurants and hotels buy up much of the supply of prime cuts, leaving choice, good and standard grades for the supermarkets and meat markets. The commercial, utility and cull grades, along with cutter and canner grades for older beef, are processed into ground beef, bologna and frankfurters. Not a pleasant thing to remember when you crave a hot dog.

The average American consumes 95 pounds of beef per year, versus a mere 3 pounds of veal. Perhaps price is the reason for this, as veal is not as economical. Veal is quite lean, containing less fat and more water than beef. This renders it a good source of lower calorie protein.

WHEN INVESTING IN a cut of veal, choose one that is plump, ranging in color from light pink to light gray. The lower grades are more thin and watery.

It's a good idea to undercook when preparing veal in your microwave, keeping in mind carry-over cooking time. It's fine to rub the cut with garlic, pepper or herbs but avoid salting it before cooking. This will draw out the juices and toughen the surface of the meat.

ROAST VEAL WITH SOUBISE SAUCE

4 lb. (about) boned and tied leg of veal
Garlic powder, paprika and pepper
Water
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 cup finely chopped onion
3 tbsps. all-purpose flour
¼ tsp. ground nutmeg
¾ cup whipping cream
Salt

Lightly rub roast with garlic powder, paprika, salt and pepper. Place fat side down on non-metallic rack made for microwaves or on an inverted saucer in a 7x11-inch baking dish. Cook for 18 minutes. Turn dish and baste roast often with pan drippings. Turn roast over, fat side up and cook about 22 minutes, basting meat and turning dish several times.

Remove meat from oven and insert a standard meat thermometer. Let stand, covered, for about 10 minutes to register internal temperature. Thermometer should register 155 to 160 F; if not, remove thermometer and return roast to oven for about 5 minutes; then check internal temperature again.

When done, lift roast to a warm platter, drain pan drippings into a glass measuring cup and add water, if necessary, to make ¾ cup total. Set aside. In the dish, melt butter for 1½ minutes; stir to scrape up browned bits and then stir in onion. Cook, uncovered, 3 to 4 minutes until onion is limp, stirring often. Stir in flour and nutmeg, cook 1 minute or until bubbly. Stir in reserved drippings and cream. Cook 4 to 6 minutes or until thickened and bubbly. Season to taste with salt. Pass sauce in a separate bowl. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

SWISS JULIENNE OF VEAL

1 pound boneless veal cutlets, about ½ inch thick
Salt, pepper, paprika
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 tbsps. chopped green onions
¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
2 tbsps. all-purpose flour
¼ cup dry white wine
½ cup whipping cream
2 tbsps. brandy

Carefully trim away membrane from veal. Place one piece at a time between two pieces of wax paper and pound with a smooth-surfaced mallet to flatten evenly to about ¼ inch thickness. Sprinkle meat lightly on each side with pepper and paprika. Cut into strips ¼ inch wide and about 1½ inches long.

In a 7x11-inch baking dish, melt 2 tablespoons of the butter 1½ minutes. Stir in green onion and mushrooms. Cook 3 minutes, stirring once. Add veal strips and cook 5 minutes or until no longer pink throughout. Stir several times.

Lift meat and vegetables from drippings and set aside. Pour juices into a glass measuring cup (you should have about ½ cup liquid). Melt remaining tablespoon of butter in baking dish 1½ minute. Stir in flour and cook 1 minute. Stir in veal juices, wine and cream. Cook 3 minutes until smooth and thickened, stir twice.

To serve, add meat to hot sauce, season to taste with salt. Put brandy in a small ceramic container, heat 10 seconds or until warm to touch. Ignite brandy, pour over meat in sauce, stir until flames die down and serve. Serves 4.

Herman, sourdough starter, is legend

By BETSY BALSLEY
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post
News Service

Sourdough starters — and the foods that can be prepared with them — stay popular with a certain breed of cooks year in and year out. But whoever would have thought a sourdough starter could become so in demand it actually acquired its own name? But then, why not, for this particular sourdough starter is definitely offbeat. It's sweet. And it is wonderful for cakes, coffeecakes, cookies and all sorts of other baked goods that benefit from a touch of sweetness.

Sourdough starters are living yeast batters that, when cared for properly, will live happily in the refrigerator, providing their tangy flavor to whatever baked goods one wishes to prepare from time to time. The starters do require attention. Usually the recipes call for them to be stirred daily, fed with enough sugar, flour and milk to keep the yeast alive periodically and then, of course, they must be used or they'll take over the kitchen. When used, however, only one or two cups is needed at a time, so the remaining batter is fed again and goes on living, getting tangier and tangier as time goes by, until you're ready to bake again.

While we don't know where this sweet starter came from, we do know where it got its name.

About five years ago Louis Mahoney, food editor for the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, interviewed a Richmond woman named Gerrity who was doing all sorts of interesting things with the starter. Mrs. Gerrity's 2 1-2 -year-old-daughter, Amy, apparently had a real yen for the baked goods Mrs. Gerrity produced from the starter. The child began to view the starter as a friend who needed constant feeding and named it "Herman." Why Herman? Who knows. But reminding her mother to stir or feed Herman obviously was a lot more fun than urging her to attend to the starter. Thus a classic was born.

TODAY HERMAN PERMEATES the country. He has traveled, sometimes in the form of a pre-mixed cup of batter shared with a friend and other times in the form of a recipe, from coast to coast. And his fans are legion.

According to these Herman experts, the starter is happiest when stirred every day and fed every five days. You can, however, miss a day or so in the stirring and Herman won't spoil. But constant attention keeps this living batter working properly. If vacation looms or a busy schedule is going to keep you from stirring and feeding Herman properly for a while, not to worry. Just pop him in the freezer. Watland and Johanson suggest that to freeze Herman you place 1 1-2 cups of the batter in a pin jar with a tight lid, (this will allow Herman space to breathe), then place the jar in the freezer. The two women have frozen Herman for as long as three months with great success.

When ready to thaw Herman, remove him from the freezer and let him stand at room temperature five to six hours. As soon as he is thawed, mix 1-3 cup warm water, one tablespoon sugar and one package of dry yeast in a small bowl and set it aside to raise. Place Herman in a large glass or plastic container (don't use a metal bowl with Herman), add the raised yeast solution and stir well.

(5-Day)

1 cup sugar
1/3 cup warm water
2 packages dry yeast
2 cups milk
2 cups flour
5th-Day Feeding
10th-Day Feeding

Combine one tablespoon sugar and warm water. Sprinkle over yeast and let mixture stand in warm place until about doubled, about 10 minutes.

Combine milk, remaining sugar, flour and yeast mixture in non-metallic container (about five quarts). Stir using only wooden spoon as metal retards Herman's natural growth. Cover loosely. Let stand overnight in warm place.

Next day, stir and refrigerate, loosely covered, and stir once a day to the fifth day. On the fifth day, measure out two cups of starter to use in recipes or give away to a friend. To remaining starter stir in Fifth-Day Feeding. Cover loosely and store in refrigerator, stirring once a day. On the 10th day, measure out two cups to use and-or give away and stir in 10th-Day Feeding.

From here on, feed every five days and continue using for recipes. If you are not using the starter often, just add a teaspoon of sugar to feed the yeast every fifth day and continue indefinitely.

Note: If stirring is not done for several days, then Herman should be frozen. See instructions for freezing and thawing Herman on First Page.

Fifth-Day Feeding

1 cup flour
1 cup milk
1/2 cup sugar
Stir flour, milk and sugar into starter.

Tenth-Day Feeding

2 cups flour
2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
Stir flour, milk and sugar into starter.

HERMAN STARTER NO.2

4 cups milk
4 cups all-purpose or unbleached flour
2 cups sugar
2 packages of dry yeast

Stir together two cups milk, two cups flour, one cup sugar and yeast in large non-metallic container. Cover loosely and let stand overnight in warm place. Stir mixture the next day and refrigerate, loosely covered Stir at least once a day to the fifth day.

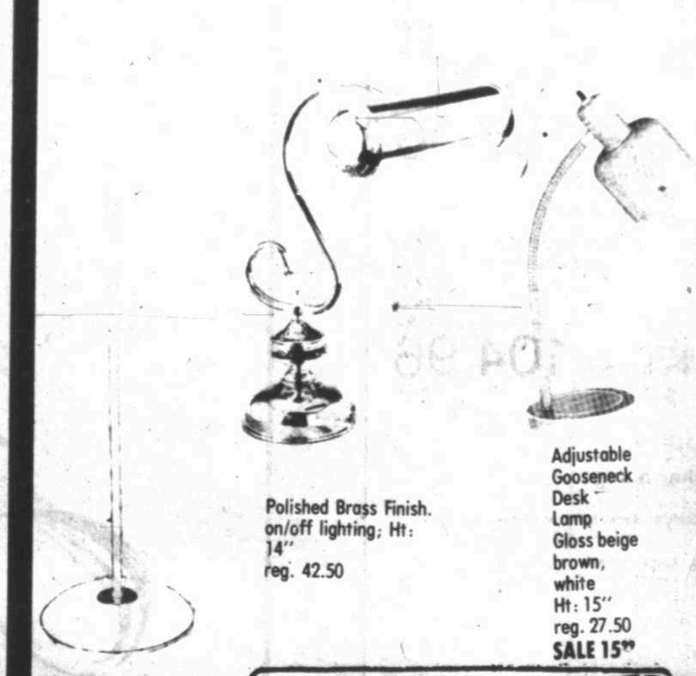

On the fifth day, add an additional two cups flour, two cups milk and one cup sugar. If necessary, transfer mixture to larger non-metallic container. Let stand in warm place one day then refrigerate and stir mixture every day for another five days.

On the 10th day, Herman may be used in recipes. (To continue another cycle of starter, remove one cup of the starter and add one cup milk, one cup flour and 1-2 cup sugar. Store in refrigerator, stirring daily and feeding again on the fifth day. On the 10th day repeat process, again removing one cup if desired. When counting, the first and 10th days are the same.)

If the starter is not used on the 10th day, feed it with one teaspoon sugar and repeat every 10 days until it is used.

THE BUTCHER

All that's ground need not be beef

By MERLE ELLIS

We eat more ground beef (hamburger) in this country than we do almost any other cuts of meat combined. Yet it remains one of the most misunderstood, misrepresented and often overpriced meats in the meatcase.

We have talked before about the mislabeling of ground beef — about all of that ground round, ground chuck and ground sirloin nonsense. I'll try not to mention that again for a while, except to note that if you still pay a premium for one of those fancy terms, you're beyond help.

Today, I would like to pass along the results of a USDA study that can save you money on the ground beef you buy. It has to do with regular ground beef (70 percent lean) versus extra-lean (85 percent lean). Which should you buy?

For years people have paid a premium for ground beef that was leaner because they were under the assumption that leaner was better — you know, fewer calories, more protein, not as much cooking loss, etc. Even a book published by the National Live Stock and Meat Board states "Consumers who spend more to buy extra-lean ground beef will have more cooked meat to place on the table than consumers who buy the most inexpensive ground beef." Not so, according to the USDA's study.

Researchers at the USDA compared weight losses in cooking, and the protein, fat and water content of more than 200 beef patties, and found little difference between regular ground beef and extra-lean ground beef.

Regular ground beef patties lost more fat during cooking, while the extra-lean patty did contain one gram less fat than the regular. However, because a gram of fat contains only about nine calories, the extra-lean patty represents "no significant calorie savings."

The protein content of patties made from the two types of ground beef was almost the same. Considering the often rather substantial differences in price between the two, you could spend an awful lot of money to eliminate nine calories from your hamburger.

The bottom line of the study seems to be: The only "extra" that you get when you buy extra-lean ground beef is extra price. It was even reported that the regular ground beef patties were considered more "juicy and flavorful" than the extra-lean. Therefore, when it comes to ground beef, your best buy is the best buy — "regular."

There are some other good ground meat buys available that are all too often overlooked in our national obsession for ground beef. If you have never tried a ground pork patty on a sesame seed bun with lettuce, tomato and "mayo," you're missing something. And if you're concerned about low fat, as well as economy, try ground turkey. Beef is not the only meat to grind.

Serve blueberry pie, Louisiana spread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

OLD-FASHIONED BLUEBERRY PIE

½ cup sugar
1/3rd cup all-purpose flour
4 cups blueberries
Flaky pastry for a 9-inch 2-crust pie
2 tablespoons butter

Stir together sugar and flour; fold in blueberries.

LOUISIANA SPREAD

A spicy concoction that tastes best when served shortly after chilling.

3-ounce package cream cheese, at room temperature

Beat together sardines and cream cheese until blended; stir in red pepper. Cover and chill. Serve with crackers. Makes 1 cup.

DEAR ABBY

Woman regrets extended youth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This problem will certainly be new to you. Twenty-five years ago, when I was 37, my family and I moved to the U.S. from a foreign country. When I made my application for a visa, I stated that I was 33 instead of 37 because I was told that it would be easier for me to get a good job if I were a few years younger.

What a big mistake! Now I am 62, not in the best of health and would like very much to have an early retirement, but I can't because I am officially 58 instead of 62. I am now an American citizen, and my naturalization papers are also made out with the wrong birth date.

Can I, without risking being expelled for fraud, use my real birth certificate to get retirement? I know I did wrong, but I didn't think much about it at the time. As a punishment for falsifying my age, must I work four more years unless I die first? — FOOLISH WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You're right. This problem IS new to me, but it's not new to the Social Security office. Call one near you.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the fact that my husband and my father hate each other. I realize that they both have good reasons for feeling the way they do, but I blame them for putting me in the middle.

This ridiculous, exhausting battle has been going on for 10 years. I am afraid to invite my father to my house or go to his house with my husband for fear one will say something to antagonize the other. I am tired of hearing complaints from one about the other.

This hopeless situation is ripping me apart, and one of these days I'll be forced to take sides. I'll probably have to side with my husband simply because I take my marriage vows seriously. Please help me. I don't want to lose either my husband or father. — AT A LOSS

DEAR AT: Just because you were placed in the middle doesn't mean you have to stay there.

Plan I: Tell both your father and your husband that their hostility toward each other is tearing you apart, and for your sake — as well as theirs — they should seek professional help from a competent, impartial third party who can help them get over their hatred.

Plan II: Lay down some ground rules. Tell your husband you do not want to hear any more complaints about your father. Then give your father the same message concerning your husband. If they "forget," walk away and leave them talking to themselves.

Choosing between your husband and your father should be absolutely the last resort!

DEAR ABBY: No names or cities, please, if you put this in the paper, which you will have to do because my husband sometimes gets the mail first and I wouldn't want him to see your answer.

A neighbor (married) comes over here nearly every day to use my phone. She has a phone of her own, but she uses mine to call her boyfriend. I am not a snoop, but I can tell from her end of the conversation that he is also married, and she meets him every chance she gets.

Her husband seems to be a decent guy, and I have no intention of telling him what I know, but I feel guilty letting this woman use my phone to set up these "round-day-vooz" (or however you spell it).

Should I pretend I don't know what's going on and continue to let her use my phone? Or should I tell her my phone is out of order? — FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Don't lie. If you don't want her to use your telephone, tell her the truth.

DEAR ABBY: My lover and I decided to live together before marriage, both having been married before. Although we love each other and get along well, there is one area that I find destructive to our relationship.

My lover insists on talking about his many sexual experiences over the last 20 years. He always includes names, places and all the graphic details. I have pleaded with him to spare me these stories because they upset me, but he tells me anyway. He has even related some of these experiences to dinner guests, who are shocked at his lack of discretion.

Some of his past "ladies" still live in our community, and I have to face them. He stills keeps their pictures, and I see him looking at them from time to time.

Since these affairs occurred while he was married, some involved abortions. There are also instances in which he was accused of fathering children. I want to believe him when he says he has changed, but I feel threatened.

Can Don Juans mature and become faithful? Or will I be sorry if I go through with plans to marry him? — ANGRY AND UPSET

DEAR ANGRY: Whether your lover will be faithful to you in the future is not the point. The fact is that he seems obsessed — indeed proud — of his numerous sleezy affairs of the past. Furthermore, knowing that it upsets you, he persists in talking about them. Will you be sorry if you marry him? Yes — unless he agrees never to mention his past again and keeps his promise, which seems highly unlikely.

A light chilled Mocha Mold becomes the perfect dessert for a hot weather meal. The rich velvety filling is poured into a spring form pan that has been lined with crisp coconut-flavored Zanzibar cookies which porvide a deliciously crisp contrast in flavor.

Sweet potato emissary from New World

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

It is called the sweet potato, but this cousin of the morning glory is no relation to the white spud, which is a starchy tuber of the nightshade family.

But both "potatoes" were among the best emissaries from the New World to the Old. One of the first native foods the Spanish explorers tasted after they landed in the tropical regions of the Americas was the sweet potato, which was soon being shipped back to Europe.

It is said that Henry VIII became so enamored of sweet potatoes when he came to power in England in 1509 that he had them shipped over from the continent and made into spicy pies.

Sweet potatoes went on to become a staple food in the islands of the Pacific, and in New Guinea they make up about 90 percent of the diet.

The sweet potato is often confused with the yam, which grows in Central and South America and Asia. Actually, they belong to different families, but the taste is so similar that they have become interchangeable in the kitchen, and even an expert would be hard put to tell the difference when they are cooked.

One unusual dish is "roesti," which comes from Switzerland. Best described as a vegetable pancake, it is a blend of shredded potatoes and chopped apples.

A hearty dinner side dish is sweet potato croquettes. This consists of mashed sweets and chopped tomatoes, combined with celery and onion and seasoned with fresh parsley and mace.

Sweet potatoes are as popular in the United States now as they were in colonial days and are available the year round. Here is the recipe.

3 fresh sweet potatoes
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup celery, finely diced
½ cup onion, finely diced
1 medium tomato, chopped fine
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon mace
1 cup dry packaged bread crumbs

Bake sweet potatoes in preheated 350-degree oven 40 minutes till soft. Cool, peel and mash. Melt ¼ cup butter or margarine in skillet; add celery and onion; cook till tender. Turn into mixing bowl. Add mashed sweets, tomato, parsley, salt and mace and mix well. Shape into 8 croquettes. Melt remaining ¼ cup butter or margarine, mix with bread crumbs. Dip croquettes in beaten egg, then roll in bread crumbs. Place on baking sheet and bake in preheated 350-degree oven for 25 minutes. Serves 8 as a side dish.

Mocha Mold cool dessert for hot Texas summers

A light chilled dessert makes the perfect finale for many a meal during the long hot summer. And because it can be made beforehand and left in the refrigerator, it's ideal for entertaining.

The blend of chocolate, cocoa and coffee that constitutes the mocha flavor in this dessert is the result of combining packaged chocolate pudding, instant cocoa and instant coffee.

MOCHA MOLD

2 packages (3 ounces each) chocolate pudding
3 tablespoons instant cocoa
3 tablespoons instant coffee granules
3 cups milk
32 marshmallows
2 eggs, separated
2 cups heavy cream, whipped
16 Zanzibar cookies
chocolate leaves (recipe below)

In large saucepan, combine pudding, cocoa ad coffee. Gradually blend in milk. Add marshmallows. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until marshmallows are melted and sauce is thickened. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemony in color.

Blend in 1/2 cup chocolate mixture. Return to mixture in saucepan and cook 2 minutes, stirring. Pour into bowl. Chill until thickened but not set. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold egg whites and 2 cups whipped cream into chilled chocolate mixture. Arrange cookies on bottom and around sides of buttered 8-inch spring form pan. Spoon filling into prepared pan. Chill several hours or overnight. To serve, remove pan and decorate with remaining whipped cream and chocolate leaves. Makes one 8-inch cake.

To make chocolate leaves, melt one ounce semi-sweet chocolate over hot water. Brush the backs of mint or lemon leaves with chocolate. Refrigerate until chocolate is firm. Peel off leaves and arrange on cake.

ZUCCHINI PUFFS

2 medium (½ pound) zucchini
1 large egg
2 tablespoons whole wheat flour
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
Butter for frying

Scrub zucchini with a vegetable brush under cold running water; do not pare; cut a thin slice from each end and discard.

Coarsely grate zucchini — there should be two cups slightly packed down.

In a medium bowl, beat the egg until thickened and lemon color; add zucchini, flour, salt and pepper; stir well.

In a large skillet heat a tablespoon or two of butter; drop rounded tablespoons of the zucchini mixture, well apart, into the skillet.

When bottoms are lightly brown, turn puffs and brown other sides. Add more butter as needed to fry remaining zucchini mixture.

Serve hot. Makes about 14.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Coffee, nightly insomnia relationship possible

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had trouble sleeping lately and I'm beginning to wonder if it's because of the coffee I have at night. Is there any way to tell? I would also like to know if it's as hard to give up coffee as to give up cigarettes. I've been drinking coffee for at least 40 years. — Frankie, Queens, N.Y.

Dear Frankie: There is an easy way to tell if the coffee is interfering with your ability to sleep — don't have any for a couple of days. If you find that you are able to sleep more soundly, you can conclude that the coffee was responsible for your former inability to sleep.

As to how addicted to coffee (or, rather, the caffeine in the coffee) you may be, this varies widely from one individual to another. Some people addicted to caffeine develop headaches. Other symptoms include drowsiness, an inability to concentrate, irritability, depression, nervousness, and nausea. These symptoms may last for a couple of weeks. Their severity can be lessened by giving up coffee gradually rather than trying to quit cold turkey.

If you find that you can't give up coffee completely, you might want to try a decaffeinated brand or switch to tea. Most teas contain less caffeine than coffee.

An advisable first step would be to check with your doctor to determine the extent to which caffeine disagrees with you. It is possible that you might only have to cut down on the amount you consume instead of eliminating it completely. Either way, it would give you a better idea of the task before you.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have played in a number of local tennis tournaments, and each time I get this dry feeling in my mouth during a match, but nothing seems to work. Could you suggest a diet that would do away with the dryness I described? — Randy, Princeton, N.J.

Dear Randy: The dryness or "cotton mouth" you describe is most likely the result of the tension you feel and the loss of fluid that occurs during a match. This possibility would become a probability if you do not experience the same feeling when you play a more relaxed, non-tournament type of game with friends. Additional intake of fluids might help but diet plays no part in this condition.

For F.S. (Cincinnati): I postulated Endorphins are released from my anti-smoking injection in the arm. These are the same Endorphins that are released when people smoke. I believe that smokers are not only addicted to nicotine, but also to the effects of the "feel good" hormones,' Endorphins. I believe that the Endorphins released from my anti-smoking injection substitute for the Endorphins released from smoking. Couple that with my behavioral modification and nicotine cleansing diet, and you too can kick the cigarette habit — if you are motivated.

Author links papal gunman, Soviets in plot

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who has written extensively on terrorism says last year's attempt to kill Pope John Paul II had Soviet backing in retaliation for the pontiff's support of Poland's independent trade union.

In an article in the September issue of Reader's Digest magazine, author Clare Sterling also said Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish gunman convicted of shooting the pope, has been wrongly pictured as a fanatic right-wing killer when in fact he was carrying out a Communist plot.

Agca is serving a life term for the May 1981 attack in St. Peter's Square in which the pope was wounded.

The pontiff was a Soviet target because he was "undeniably the spiritual father of Poland's Solidarity trade-union movement, which could never have been born without his blessing," the article said.

Mrs. Sterling, author of "The Terror Network," a book about international terrorism, said she traveled four months interviewing "key officials in every Western country concerned" to trace the gunman's trail.

Mrs. Sterling asserted the Soviet Union kept out of direct participation in the plot, using the Bulgarian secret service as a buffer.

Agca got his false papers and gun in Bulgaria and the Bulgarian secret service "ran" him through associates of a Sofia-based gunrunner they controlled, she said.

Besides wanting the pope killed, the article charged, the Soviets used a Turk as their instrument "to signal Christendom that Islamic Turkey was an alien and vaguely sinister country that did not belong in NATO," the article said.

"A Turk who happened also to carry the brand of a convicted fascist murderer was all the better for the part," it said.

Agca had been arrested in Turkey in early 1979 and condemned to death for killing the editor of a moderate leftist Turkish newspaper.

His escape in November 1979 past eight guarded doors of a military prison could not have succeeded "without high-level help," Mrs. Sterling said.

She said Agca, now 23, had been bankrolled secretly since 1977, with accounts opened in his name by others at various banks.

"From the time of his escape to his capture in Rome, he spent some $50,000 on plane fares and first-class hotels. Not once in his travels did Agca cash a check. Yet he was never short of cash," she said.

The article said Agca, raised in a remote, poor peasant village and using only halting English as a second language, "moved with apparent ease around urbane European capitals" en route to Rome.

"He shopped at Yves Saint Laurent boutiques, drank champagne at fashionable Biffi's in Milan and wintered elegantly in Tunisia and Palma de Mallorca," it said.

The article said Agca was set up for capture when two accomplices in the crowd at the square "ran away themselves, on orders" rather than create the diversion Agca was counting on to help him flee.

Over $300 million expected to be spent on school supplies

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Families will spend at least 23 billion pesos — $331 million — for uniforms, books and other school supplies before classes open Sept. 2, the Education Ministry says.

A ministry bulletin said the outlay is double what parents spent last year, the newspaper Excelsior reported Monday.

The ministry said that it planned to offer high school uniforms at prices 25 percent under those in stores, but it said it had only enough to cover 16 percent of the estimated demand.

The ministry said there will be 15.3 million elementary pupils, 4.3 million high school students and 1.4 million children in kindergartens.

Income figures changing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The income of married women is pushing family income figures steadily upward, the U.S. Census Bureau says.

And if the trend of married women entering the work force continues, family income levels will continue to climb, the bureau said in a study released earlier this week.

The study said that by March 1980, 51 percent of all married women were in the labor force, compared to 41 percent in 1970 and 24 percent in 1950.

A large share of the growth came among women with children under 6 years of age, with 48 percent of these women working or seeking jobs in 1980, up from 30 percent in 1970.

Participation of this age group allows women more time and experience on the job which, the bureau noted, "may widen career opportunities and advancement and could result in higher income levels for women."

The study, a more detailed version of a report issued a year ago, cited 1980 median household income as $21,020, up from 1979 but actually representing a net decline in real income because of inflation.

Another factor working to push family income upwards in the next few years is the aging of the "baby boom" generation, the bureau said.

This large group of young people — born between 1946 and 1965 — has been swarming into the labor force over the last 15 years, but primarily in lower-paying jobs because of the group's relative youth and inexperience.

Now, however, these young people will swell the 35-to-44 age group by 50 percent during the 1980s, increasing the average age and experience of the workforce.

There will also be factors tending to push down family income, in particular changes in the structure of the family, the report said.

For example, during the 1970s there was a 53 percent increase in the number of households maintained by women with no husband present. In fact, by 1980 they totaled 8.5 million, or 16 percent of all family households.

These households tend to have significantly lower incomes than those with male wage-earners; 50 percent of all poor families are headed by women.

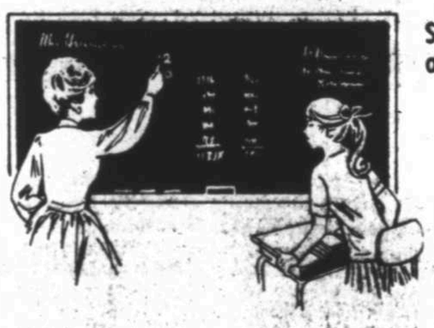

With the continuing growth of separation, divorce and children born out of wedlock, "increases in families maintained by women will likely have a dampening effect on the overall growth rate of household and family income," the bureau said.

Todays's so-called modern Mafia comes across as a shirt-sleeved bunch almost totally lacking in panache, says Associated Press veteran crime writer Arthur Everett. Anthony "Mr. Fish" Rabito, right, and Antonio "Boots" Tomasulo are seen outside federal court in New York, N.Y., where they are on trial for racketeering charges.

Modern mobsters are rag-tag bunch

By ARTHUR EVERETT

NEW YORK (AP) — In the old days, movieland mobsters like Edward G. Robinson and Humphrey Bogart had class, dressed in impeccably tailored three-piece suits and jaunty fedoras — only the best.

Today's so-called modern Mafia comes across as a shirt-sleeved organization, almost totally lacking in panache. Look at the five alleged members of the old Joseph Bonanno organized crime family currently on trial in Manhattan's federal court.

True, the defendants in the government's racketeering case are not alleged to be top dogs in their profession. Still, federal authorities say the men are members of the Cosa Nostra, which in Italian means "our thing."

Lawyers for the five defendants have said throughout the trial that if there is such a thing as the Cosa Nostra, their clients are not members of it.

The government says the highest in rank is Benjamin "Lefty" Ruggiero, pencil-thin and sallow-faced. It lists the 55-year-old Ruggiero as a capodecina, or crew chief, in the old Bonanno family now controlled by the imprisoned Philip "Rusty" Rastelli.

RUGGIERO IS the only one who wears a jacket in the downtown, third-floor courtroom where the trial began its fourth week Monday.

Rather than appearing as a free-spending big shot, Ruggiero milked an FBI undercover man for $42,000 with pleas for financial assistance, courtroom testimony has revealed.

The government says that in return for the money, it discovered a fountain of in-house information on organized crime.

Ruggiero was depicted as capable of drinking 10 to 15 spritzers — white wine and soda — at one sitting. He was described in trial testimony as being as much as eight months behind in his rent, delinquent in his telephone bills and reduced to begging for money to make a Florida business trip, after securing his wife's permission to go.

"Is there any other Mafioso you knew who ever had to check with his wife to go to Florida?" defense lawyer David Breitbart asked a government witness.

Stocky Nicholas Santora, at 39 the youngest of the defendants, arrives wearing a jacket, but quickly sheds it at the defense table.

NONE OF THE quintet has ever appeared wearing a necktie. Ruggiero and Santora may be excused, having become accustomed to life at the nearby Metropolitan Correctional Center, a federal institution where the wearing of a tie is forbidden because of its possible use in a suicide attempt.

Ruggiero and Santora failed to make bonds that ranged from $50,000 to $100,000 and have been in jail since their arrests nearly a year ago. Their three co-defendants are out on the street.

Trial testimony disclosed that "Mr. Fish" got his nickname because he once operated a restaurant that featured scungilli, the meat of the conch, a shellfish.

John "Boobie" Cerasani, 43, is the end man at the far left of the table. Balding, trimly muscular, he dresses better than the others, mostly in polo shirts but still without a jacket.

THE GOVERNMENT, in its indictment, described the five men as "a group of individuals associated, in fact, to commit various criminal activities including acts involving murder...as well as acts...relating to dealing in narcotic drugs and...relating to an illegal gambling business."

Ruggiero, Rabito and Santora are said to have dispatched three anti-Rastelli members of the family to the hereafter on May 5, 1981.

The three were identified as Alphonse "Sonny Red" Indelicato, Philip "Philly Lucky" Giaccone and Dominick "Big Trin" Trinchera. Only Indelicato's body has been recovered. It was unearthed May 24, 1981, in a vacant lot in Queens.

Absent from the defense table are two ranking members of the Rastelli Family — Dominick "Sonny Black" Napolitano and Joseph "Joey" Messina, described by the government as captains in the family. They were indicted as leading participants in the May 5 slayings and are listed on government documents as missing rather than dead.

Homes to have no frills

Copley News Service

No frills, plenty of color and attention to the "microenvironment" — that is Barry Berkus' prescription for the house of the future.

The 46-year-old Santa Barbara, Calif., architect said the redesigned house actually will cost about 10 percent more per foot than traditional units. But the area will be as much as 30 percent less, effecting an overall savings.

Berkus, featured in "Money" magazine, has designed projects in 27 states and is considered a leading innovator in residential architecture.

"When I began in 1958, there was just a handful of firms in the United States involved in homes at all," he said. "The marketplace wouldn't accept broadly contemporary architecture. All it was interested in was frills, 'Cinderella' homes."

HE EXPLAINED that builders typically mixed Tudor, Victorian and other architectural styles in subdivisions, because it was felt that something for every taste should be available.

"But the neighborhoods developed a tremendous amount of chaos," he said.

After the mid-1960s recession, designers tried new concepts, such as clustering houses to allow for more open space. But Berkus said the automobile tended to dominate neighborhood design. Into the '70s, he said, the house grew larger and larger, and a government program, "Operation Breakthrough," failed to stimulate the manufactured-housing business.

In the past 10 years, the trends have reversed in the wake of dramatic increases in prices and maturation of the post-World War II baby boom generation, which was living in smaller households, having fewer children and sharing quarters longer. The tendency also developed for local governments to attempt some form of growth control, but Berkus said this movement was a reaction to, not a cause of, increased prices and increased population.

THE COMING phase of housing development, he said, will stress proximity to employment centers and renewed interest in living downtown.

"I think redevelopment and changing employment patterns are creating a desire to live there again," he said.

While the traditional single-family home will remain a "limited part of the built environment," Berkus said the design will be quite different.

He has pioneered the concept of the "tandem home" in which large bedrooms flank a living room so that roommates can share common space and benefits of homeownership. Such a house need occupy only 1,160 square feet, Berkus said, as long as a feeling of openness and spaciousness is included by incorporating high ceilings and skylights.

Sylvia "Simone" Binder stands outside one of her two legal brothels in the red light district of Winnemucca, Nev. Mrs. Binder, a French citizen, faces deportation under federal law but is fighting to stay in this country.

Madam fighting immigration law

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. (AP) — Federal immigration law says foreigners running brothels — even where prostitution is legal — must be deported, and the U.S. Supreme Court has upheld the law. But French-born madam Sylvia "Simone" Binder is still hoping to stay here.

And although the people of this bustling ranching and mining town don't much care who runs its five brothels, Mrs. Binder's struggle has broken a cardinal rule about prostitution here: Keep a low profile.

In June, the high court agreed with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service deportation ruling against Mrs. Binder, giving her until Oct. 5 to sell her two brothels and leave the country.

After the high court ruling, Mrs. Binder took out an ad in the Humboldt Sun, a semi-weekly newspaper, in which readers were asked to fill out "support for Simone" coupons and send them to her lawyer, William McLaughlin of San Francisco, who said he would work to change the immigration law affecting his client.

She said more than 1,000 people have sent letters and signed a petition circulated at a Fourth of July picnic in her honor.

The attitude here toward the Supreme Court ruling is much like that toward prostitution: People may not like it, but they accept it.

"We all feel sorry for Simone, and it's too bad," says lumber dealer John Tallman, whose business is next to the "Bell Addition," as the red light district is known.

"We don't like outsiders coming in and telling us what to do," Tallman says. "But we realize we're dealing with something different here — the Immigration and Naturalization Service. I think we should let this thing die."

Tallman, like others, said he resents the attention Mrs. Binder's dispute has brought to Winnemucca. "One of the reasons (legalized prostitution) has been successful is that there hasn't been any fanfare," he said.

Tallman, 61, who has lived in Winnemucca nearly all his life, says, "We've always put up with the fact that there's going to be prostitution whether it's legal or not."

City Attorney Tom Perkins added, "It's kind of an old-fashioned ethic: People would rather have the cowboys (going to brothels) than chasing after their daughters."

Mrs. Binder, 60, operates two brothels in the center of the district: Simone de Paris, her first, and the fancier Villa Joy, which sports floor-to-ceiling mirrors and bidets.

Mrs. Binder said she bought Simone de Paris in July 1976 after spending a decade in Florida. Born in the Savoie region of France, near the Swiss border, she said she operated a brothel for 18 years in Geneva, and "introduced girls to gentlemen" in Florida.

Five years ago, she said, her purse was stolen. When she applied for a new alien "green card," immigration officials discovered her occupation and began deportation proceedings. Mrs. Binder said she has been fighting the INS ever since.

She insists she never realized she was endangering her stay in the United States by operating the brothels, and remains surprised at the problems her business caused.

Pizza Time entertains kids, investors

By C.W. MIRANKER

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The combination of pizza, Pac-Man and performing robots is fast making Chuck E. Cheese Pizza Time Theatres a fantasy come true for video-happy kids and Wall Street, too.

The company's second-quarter results included a 217 percent jump in revenues to $23.1 million from the same period of 1981 and a 453 percent increase in profit to nearly $2 million. And an out-of-court settlement with its closest competitor added $750,000 to Pizza Time's coffers, with more for years to come.

"It's a very high-revenue business...much higher than the average fast-food restaurant," says Mary Lisanti, an analyst with the L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin securities firm in New York.

Pizza Time is the brainchild of Nolan K. Bushnell, the man who launched Atari then sold what has proved to be a money machine for Warner Communications Inc.

For children, there are singing, wise-cracking robots performing from stages in the walls around the central dining area. And roaming the room, there is a "live" Chuck E. Cheese, the giant rat with a toothy grin who's mascot and master of ceremonies.

For older youngsters, there is skee ball in the amusement park tradition and, of course, video games — about 80 in most stores, 260 in the San Jose outlet.

"We're a kind of fantasy for kids," says Bob Coltrane, manager of the largest Pizza Time, which houses not only the restaurant but also Chuck E. Cheese University in a huge, turreted castle-like building that was once a toy store.

"Basically what we are is neighborhood amusement parks," he says. "We're neighborhood Disneylands."

While the children play, before eating and after, there is beer and wine for mom and dad, and attendents to supervise the chaos.

By the time a family partakes of the varied offerings of the controlled environment — which capitalizes on the addictive nature of video games and children's restlessness — $20 to $25 is gone.

"It's a leisure-time concept that I think people like," says Ms. Lisanti.

"In the Depression, they made all those splashy movies, and people went because they wanted to forget their economic troubles. People, if they're spending money on leisure time, are (still) spending it on pure escapism.

"It's noisy, lights whirl, things make noise, it's more dynamic than sitting in a movie theater," she adds. "It's less expensive than going bowling. It's easier than taking them (kids) to an amusement park, and to them it's the same sort of atmosphere, a carnival-type atmosphere."

There are now 132 Pizza Time Theatres around the country and overseas, more than triple the number of outlets there were last summer.

The Sunnyvale-based company has two principal rivals, Brock Hotel's ShowBiz Pizza places, with 75 outlets and Bally's Tom Foolery in Chicago, just getting off the ground with four.

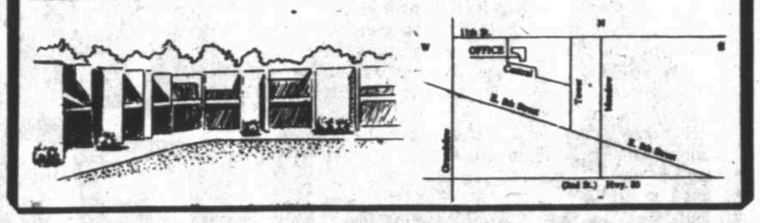

Brock, based in Tulsa, Okla., had contracted to be a franchisee of Pizza Time in 1979, but before the first outlet opened Brock decided to do business with another robot company. The breach-of-contract suit brought by Pizza Time was settled in June, with Brock paying a $750,000 lump sum plus a monthly percentage on gross sales of the first 160 ShowBiz outlets.

Mutinous soldiers demand removal of officers

By JAMES R. PEIPERT

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Mutinous soldiers in the Seychelles threatening to kill 239 hostages appealed today for government ministers to talk with them by telephone about their demand for removal of some of their officers, reports from the Indian Ocean archipelago said.

Diplomatic sources in Victoria, the Seychelles capital, reported by phone that machine-gun and small-arms fire and shelling could be heard during the night and after dawn today.

Albert Rene

The British Broadcasting Corp. in a telephoned report to London said throughout the night mutineers "appealed for government ministers to call on the telephone and discuss their demands. But all efforts to reach a peaceful settlement have failed, and the shelling has resumed."

The soldiers rebelled Tuesday morning, seized the government radio station and the airport, and warned that they had placed explosives at strategic locations around Mahe, the main island in the Indian Ocean archipelago, according to reports reaching Nairobi.

The mutineers, led by a man who identified himself as Sgt. George, said they were loyal to President France Albert Rene and wanted only the removal of certain officers, whom they did not identify. They said they had 239 hostages and would "blow them off" if the government tried to storm them or refused to grant their demands.

Several hundred foreign tourists were reported holidaying in the former British colony, but Maurice Root-Reed, the government's British public relations officer, reported in a cable to London that the guests at Mahe's Coral Strand Hotel were "marooned in a mini-paradise."

"We are cut off from the rest of the world. The bar is well-stocked, the beach is topless, and the weather is good. What more can one want?" he messaged.

Bernard Verlaque, an exile who ran a Seychelles newspaper until Rene closed it down in 1979, said in London that he had seen senior officers abusing the men under them for years.

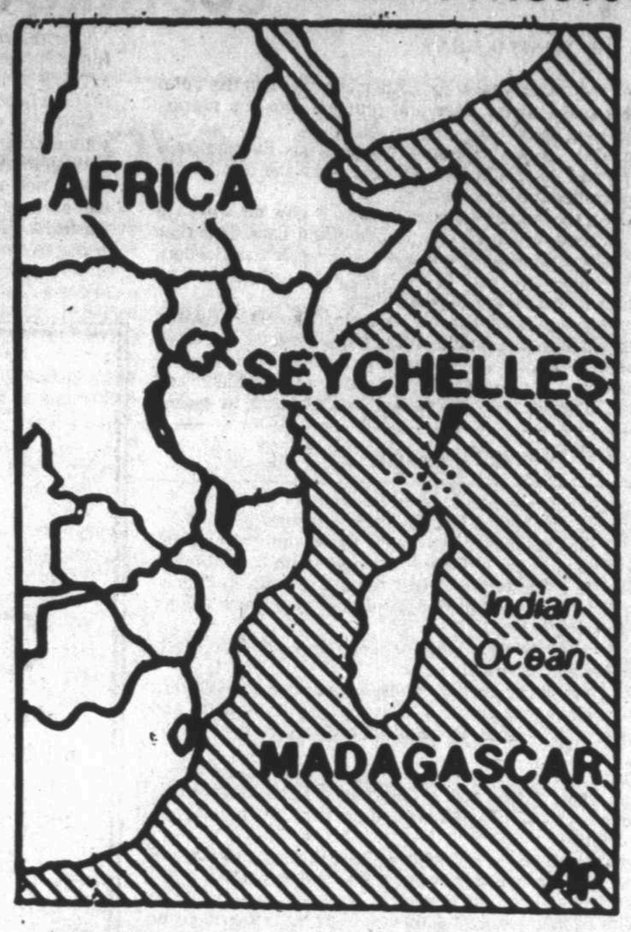

"These men hate their senior officers — and with good reason," he said. "I saw young soldiers forced through narrow pipes which were continually battered by hammers, men beaten unconscious and locked in solitary confinement for virtually no reason.

"What fueled their anger even further was that the senior officers who mistreated them were generally less educated than themselves."

But Nicholas Fairbairn, a Conservative member of the British Parliament who recently returned from the Seychelles, said the uprising was part of a power struggle.

"What appears to have happened is that there has been a pre-emptive strike by members of the army loyal to the president against the more extreme members of the army who would be loyal to the defense minister, Mr. (Ogilvy) Berlouis," he told the British Broadcasting Corp.

Communications with the islands off the coast of Africa were irregular throughout Tuesday. Diplomats in Nairobi said their consulates in Victoria, the island capital, were able to transmit sketchy accounts of scattered gunfire, military roadblocks, and "several military casualties."

Disgruntled soldiers seized parts of the capital and threatened to kill 200 hostages in the island nation of Seychelles. They rebelled in an effort to oust some senior officers.

Susan Tyzack, a British science teacher in Victoria, told the BBC the mutineers apparently were concentrated at the radio station.

"They say they can defend against any attack, and although they don't want bloodshed, they are ready to shoot" the hostages if attacked, she said.

Greece rewards communists' part in anti-Nazi fight

By KERIN HOPE

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - The Socialist government is enacting a law recognizing the communists' part in the anti-Nazi resistance nearly 40 years ago and rewarding communist resistance fighters with pensions.

"The main aim of this bill is national unity. And after so many years it is an obligation to show gratitude to all those who fought in this period of our history," Premier Andreas Papandreou told Parliament Tuesday as debate on the bill began.

"I feel proud to be fulfilling this duty of recognition," he said. "The fighters of the resistance years stand next to the heroes of our war of independence last century."

The law, to be voted later this week, recognizes a dozen left-wing resistance organizations, lays down guidelines for pensions to their members and designates a National Resistance Day holiday on Nov. 25, the anniversary of a 1942 attack on a railway bridge by communist and royalist guerrillas and British commandos. The attack cut the German supply line to North Africa for several months.

The new law is designed to help heal the rift in Greek political and social life caused by the civil war between the communists and the anti-communists in which 100,000 people died between 1944 and 1949. The communists lost, and only the non-communists' role in the anti-Nazi resistance was recognized officially with pensions and other honors in 1949.

The Socialist bill has been welcomed by many Greeks under the age of 40 but condemned by many older people who remember the civil war personally.

Opposition leader Evangelos Averoff spoke against the bill Tuesday before leading his New Democracy party out of the chamber in protest against it. He claimed the communist resistance fighters were more concerned with preparing to seize power than with fighting the Nazis.

"Thousands of people are still alive whose relatives died at the hands of communists," he said. "That is why New Democracy disagrees with this bill."

Harilaos Florakis, secretary of the Moscow-line Greek Communist Party (KKE) hailed the bill as the "recognition of historical truth."

One day, a young father pushed a heavily laden grocery cart came through my checkout stand. With him were two very active preschool-age children. He looked bewildered and uncomfortable.

Routinely, I asked, "Any coupons?"

"Uh, no," he stammered almost apologetically. Then he quickly added, as if in explanation, "I'm an amateur."

As supervisor of one wing in a nursing home, I tried to involve the residents in outdoor activities. On a particularly warm spring day, as the residents were preparing to go outside, I noticed that one elderly man was wearing his woolen cap, muffler and sweater. An artist who was just beginning his professional career moved into an apartment in New York City. For more than a year he devoted his spare time to transforming the spacious bathroom into a stunning underwater scene – seaweed, lovely shells, brilliantly colored fish. And on the ceiling he painted the bottom of a small boat resting on the surface of the water.

Something went wrong with the plumbing one day, and when the plumber arrived, the artist directed him to the bathroom and then returned to his own work. In a few minutes, the plumber emerged exclaiming, "Beautiful! Beautiful!"

"Why, thank you," said the artist, flattered.

"Do you realize," the plumber enthusiastically went on, "you don't have a single lead pipe in there? They're all copper."

Several years ago, my wife aspired to a career on the stage. She was advised to engage the services of a theatrical agent, but the prominent individual she sought proved to be inaccessible. To attract his interest, she had photographs taken of herself in various dramatic poses, and on the back of each she wrote a brief explanation of the scene — "Expressing fear," "Expressing dejection," "Expressing anxiety," and so on.

In preparing for a move to another house, my wife called the telephone company to arrange for transferring service. Despite my wife's complete disinterest in expanding our phone service, the enthusiastic sales representative went on for 15 minutes listing the variety of models and the spectrum of color possibilities. She ended by stressing the necessity of a phone in each living area. But still no sale.

My wife felt that she had won the argument when the woman began writing up the basic one-phone order, but the salesperson had the last word when she dryly inquired, "Now, which room do you want to run to when it rings?"

Man may be fined for being one cent short on taxes

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — An Internal Revenue Service computer made a mistake and informed George Wittmeier he had to pay a penalty of $159.78 for being a penny short on his 1981 income taxes.

Wittmeier, 61, who with his son, Terry, owns an auto repair store in Kirkland, figured he could pay the principal.

"Here it is," he said Monday, pinching a 1979 copper coin. "But I don't have the $159.78. My wife and I are criminals, I guess, so we'll go to jail. I suppose I should have taken the money and run."

A letter from the IRS to Wittmeier and his wife, Jane, was to the point: Pay the $159.78 by Aug. 26 or face further fines.

Film depicts daring escape into Thailand

By DENIS D. GRAY

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Four years ago, Australian journalist John Everingham strapped on his scuba diving gear and plunged into the murky, rain-swollen waters of the Mekong River.

Waiting on the opposite bank — in Communist Laos — was Everingham's Laotian girlfriend, whom he was determined to rescue despite the deadly currents and the soldiers who patrolled the river bank.

Today, Everingham and Keo, the woman he rescued who is now his wife, are again on the banks of the Mekong, which divides Thailand and Laos. This time they are accompanied by a Hollywood film crew headed by director Hall Bartlett, who says he was moved by media accounts of the 1978 swim-to-freedom and quickly contacted Everingham to discuss movie possibilities.

Bartlett, a zealously independent-minded director with films like "The Children of Sanchez" and "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" behind him, says "Comeback" will be a true-life, East-West love story set amidst the turbulence of Indochina.

Everingham is being played by Michael Landon, the star of "Bonanza" and "Little House on the Prairie." Bartlett says after a worldwide search, he picked

AP News Special

Elvis Presley's widow, Priscilla, is making her film debut in the movie.

"Hollywood does not make documentaries. It's stricly entertainment and dollars," says Everingham. "But Bartlett has a history of movies with special integrity." The handsome, 32-year-old Australian says that despite "a couple of Hollywood additions" the movie should give a "reasonable picture of the atmosphere of Laos and our lives at that period."

Everingham, a native of Brisbane, lived in Laos for more than a decade, working as a freelance photographer and reporter.

Two years after the 1975 Communist victory, when he was the last Western journalist left in Laos, Everingham was arrested, interrogated at gunpoint and expelled after being accused of serving as an agent of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Everingham was put aboard a ferry across the Mekong, leaving behind Keo, a 26-year-old medical student whose father was a Communist Party official and who had herself at one time urged a "people's revolution" against the corrupt, U.S.-backed regime in her country.

From Thailand, Everingham sent secret messages to Keo through friends and established a rendevouz time and place near Vientiane, the Laotian capital.

A powerful swimmer and scuba diver, the Australian struggled underwater to reach the Laotian bank. With Laotian patrols within easy sight and rifle range, he strapped Keo, who could not swim, to his body, put a breathing device into her mouth and let the currents sweep them toward Thailand.

Whatever extra dramatics the script may call for, the creators of "Comeback" cannot be faulted for lack of realism in choice of shooting locations.

One sequence was filmed on the Mekong River a day after Communist guards on the other side shot at three Laotian refugees swimming to Thailand. Filming was also done at a Laotian refugee camp where crew members were so moved by the children that they donated $2,000 to the camp and threw a party for the toddlers.

The entire population of one frontier village — some 6,500 people — were recruited to stage a Laotian Communist demonstration against "CIA agent Everingham." Enthusiasm ran so high that Landon was pelted with vegetables and had to parry kicks.

Everingham, who helped Bartlett with the script, stands to make money if the film is successful but says that his life style is unlikely to change.

"We'll continue as now, following plans made long ago during our difficult times in Laos: Living free lives in Asia, working in the media," he says.

Since the escape, Everingham's photography has appeared in top-flight magazines and he has opened a successful Indian restaurant in Bangkok in partnership with an Indian cook, another refugee from Laos.

Keo, now an Australian citizen, recently gave birth to a son. She was followed out of Laos by eight brothers, sisters or close relatives, all now resettled in Australia. Four others tried to escape but were shot and killed or drowned while trying to cross the Mekong by boat.

Students learn how to run business

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-six Charlotte area high-school students spent their summer learning how to run a business — and getting paid for their efforts.

The students were chosen to participate in an unusual economics program on the free-enterprise system. Each student in the six-week institute spent four days a week working with local companies and learning every aspect of the business.

Companies participating in the program donated $600 — $500 of that going to each student at the end of the course.

The students, 12 boys and 14 girls, are seniors this year at Mecklenburg and Union county public and private schools. They were recommended for the course by guidance counselors at their schools on the basis of leadership, scholarship and responsibility. Their average grades range from A's to C's.

"What we wanted were bright young people who were interested in finding out about the business world and getting an education to help them make business decisions in the future," said program director James Rutherford.

The economics institute is the only one of its kind offered in the Carolinas. There are only three such programs in operation in the country — one at the Collegiate School in Richmond, and two in Philadelphia.

Rutherford, 42, who has been a teacher for 15 years, believes the program will help bridge the gap between the business community and educators.

Jerry Armstrong, Assistant Vice President — Time Deposit Services; Sara Ames, Assistant Cashier and Time Deposit Officer; Carol Ray, Time Deposit Counselor; Vi Evans, Assistant Cashier and Time Deposit Officer; and Lana Cooley, Time Deposit Counselor.

You don't have to have a lot of money to get professional answers to your money management questions at Commercial Bank. Our Time Deposit Counselors will help you untangle the complex options you face in reaching your financial goals.

We know that savings and certificates of deposit are only part of a prudent financial program that includes your insurance, stocks and bonds, real estate, and collectibles. But a cash reserve is a most important part. Helping you build it is our business. Getting started is up to you.

The key to building a sizeable cash reserve is in getting started, and in having a systematic plan. When you've accumulated as little as $500 in a Commercial Bank savings account, you can begin the purchase of Small Saver Certificates. And you can start an Individual Retirement Account with as little as $100.

With $7,500 you can earn a good return on our 91–Day Certificate, tied to the average yield on U.S. Treasury bills.

The 182–Day Money Market Certificate is popular with those having $10,000 or more to invest.

You can also save several hundred federal tax dollars each year by depositing up to $2,000 ($4,000 if both husband and wife work) in an Individual Retirement Account. We offer both a Fixed Rate and a Variable Rate IRA. The All Savers Certificate is also a tax shelter for those in higher tax brackets.

Each depositor is insured up to $100,000 by the F.D.I.C. Joint depositors are insured separately, providing much greater coverage.

Our Time Deposit Counselors will show you how a combination of regular savings, certificates of deposit, automatic transfers from checking to savings, and retirement accounts can get you where you want to go, financially.

At Commercial Bank we're rich in people who care.

An AP News Analysis
By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The dramatic drop in interest rates of late is playing to rave notices on Wall Street, but whether it will prove cause for similar elation through the rest of the American economy in the months ahead remains to be seen.

On Tuesday, declining rates helped touch off the biggest single-day gain in New York Stock Exchange history — a 38.81-point rise, to 831.24, in the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks.

In the frenzy of trading activity, composite volume of all NYSE-listed stocks traded on the exchange floor and in other markets also set a record, with 105.67 million shares changing hands.

The bond markets, meanwhile, continued an explosive rally that has been running since last week.

Buyers scrambling after Treasury bills maturing in 30 days drove the interest rates on those government securities down close to 8 percent — about five percentage points below where they stood as recently as late June.

If rates keep dropping, they could relieve some of the serious strains in the economy caused by high borrowing costs over the past year — which have put home mortgages, auto loans and business credit beyond the reach of many people.

Two of Wall Street's most respected economists, both of whom have long been skeptical about the interest-rate outlook, think rates are indeed headed lower still.

The catch — and a big catch it is — is that both have grown more optimistic about interest-rate prospects precisely because they are more pessimistic about the chances for an improvement in economic activity.

Many analysts had feared that heavy Treasury borrowing to finance huge federal budget deficits would keep interest rates high, but the Wall Street economists decided the bad economy will probably shrink demand for business credit.

Henry Kaufman, economist at the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers, said Tuesday that long-term interest rates on government bonds could fall from 12½ percent to the 9-10 percent range within the next 12 months, largely because of the reduced demand.

The primary reason for his "new outlook," Kaufman said, is that "a smart business recovery in the second half of this year is now much less likely to materialize" than was thought a few months ago.

Stock-market analysts said Kaufman's reputation, and his wide following among money managers responsible for pension funds and other large pools of money, helped give those comments special weight.

A day earlier, Albert Wojnilower, economist at Wall Street's First Boston Corp., held a very similar view.

"The business outlook has deteriorated," he said. "The risks of a flareup in interest rates have therefore diminished, and the probability of later and lasting declines (in interest rates) has been enhanced."

Wojnilower said the persistent recession could hold inflation, as measured by the consumer price index, to about 4 percent or 5 percent next year. But he added, "it also is bad news for employment and profits, and heightens the risk of unforeseen bankruptcies and ripple effects."

The administration view of the situation, as often happens, differed greatly from Wall Street's. Late Tuesday, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the stock market's sharp rise was at least partly testimony to rising confidence in President Reagan's economic policies.

While the apparent reasons for their ups and downs at any given time are open to dispute, stock prices are widely considered a good advance indicator of trends in the economy.

They are, in fact, incorporated into the index of leading economic indicators published monthly by the government.

If the market's rise that began so impressively on Tuesday continues, analysts may well begin to interpret it as a signal that economic recovery, though delayed, is nevertheless on the way.

Stock prices soar in London

With falling interest rates spurring investors on both sides of the Atlantic, the Financial Times industrial index at noon British time was up 17.9 points at 576.1 — the equivalent of more than 25 points on the Dow Jones average index.

One London broker described a "mad scramble" for shares with big rises across the board. Britain's General Electric Co. rose 42 to 1092, Imperial Chemical Industries added 14 to 290 and British Aerospace was up 13 at 239.

British government bonds soared by up to 3 full points.

"Everybody's been buy, buy, buy," said one dealer.

The surge in London followed the biggest one-day gain in the history of the New York Stock Exchange on Tuesday. The Dow Jones industrial average jumped 38.81 points to 831.24, ending the recent slump on Wall Street.

Security National Bank opens doors to Midland

Covey

The third new financial institution to begin business in Midland this summer opened its doors Monday and will host its official grand opening Thursday from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Security National Bank is located on the southeast corner of Loop 250 and Midkiff Drive across from Midland Park Mall, on the site of a proposed office and retail center to be called The Courtyard at Midland Park.

David B. Covey has been named president and chief executive officer of the bank. Don Landers is vice president and Joyce Cowen is cashier.

Covey has been in the banking industry for 13 years. He was previously executive vice president of the Red River National Bank, Clarksville, Texas, and was active in community affairs there.

Like the presidents of the other new financial institutions recently opened here, at Midland American Bank and Petroplex Savings, Covey is young, aggressive, new to Midland, and welcomes the increased banking competition among local banks and savings and loans.

"I think the competition is fine — that's what our economy is based on, and that's what made Midland grow as it has."

Fred M. Allison, III is chairman of the 11-member board of directors. Other directors and organizers of the bank are: Ernest Angelo Jr., James M. Blakemore, Arlen L. Edgar, Donald L. Evans, Joseph A. Kloesel Jr., Jeffry D. Landua, C. Ronald Schwisow, William C. Thomas, Ray P. Moudy, and Covey.

Security National is operating from a new building, with three drive-up lanes, that will be its interim quarters; pending completion of a four-story, 80,000 square foot building to be built south and east of the motor bank site. Construction is scheduled to begin within the next 60 to 90 days and take about 12 to 14 months, Covey said.

"When we move into the main building, this facility will house the motor bank and Saturday banking operations in the lobby," for all bank transactions other than loans, Covey said.

The new bank, capitalized with $2.5 million, has been in the planning stage since November 1980. It received its charter in July of this year and its letter of authority to commence banking Aug. 9. Covey said he expects to see total assets of around $16 million at the end of Security National's first year of operations.

There are 61 stockholders in the new bank, with approximately 250,000 shares outstanding. No one stockholder owns more than 5 percent of the bank, Covey said. "This is one of the things the board of directors wanted. This makes our bank more of a community-oriented bank."

Security National was formed with the goal of becoming a consumer-oriented retail bank, "where employees treat the customer as if they were sitting on the other side of the table," Covey said.

"I've found that people don't like to be told how to use their money, but they like us to point out," the other side of possible transactions and to provide guidance.

The bank will handle real estate and consumer loans. "Our dollar bills have the same picture of George Washington on them as do the other banks," Covey said. "We feel the only difference will be in service and convenience to our customers. We want to know our people by name and handle their banking the way they want it done."

Security National has its own in-house computer and will make available a consolidated monthly statement of all a customer's accounts and loan balances once a month. It will be offering an automated teller machine, connected to the Pulse Network, available on a 24-hour basis in the bank building's foyer, starting in October.

The bank offers all types of accounts, including Checkmate and BanClub. Each has several special features.

Occidental may again attmept takeover of Cities Service

NEW YORK (AP) — As Cities Service Co. looks for a new merger partner, spurned suitor Occidental Petroleum Corp. says it may go directly to Cities Service shareholders with a bid for their stock.

Occidental withdrew its $3.8 billion offer to Cities Service directors Tuesday after the board rejected the bid as inadequate.

But shortly after ending its bid, Occidental said from its Los Angeles headquarters that it was studying possible courses of action. It said it might make a new takeover proposal to the Cities Service directors or a formal tender offer to Cities Service shareholders.

"No decision regarding any such possible course of action has been reached," Occidental said. It did not elaborate.

Cities Service responded by saying it was interested in discussing possible revisions in Occidental's original offer of last Friday.

On Monday, the Cities Service directors, meeting in an emergency session, unanimously rejected the offer, saying it did not meet their objective of maximizing value for the company's shareholders.

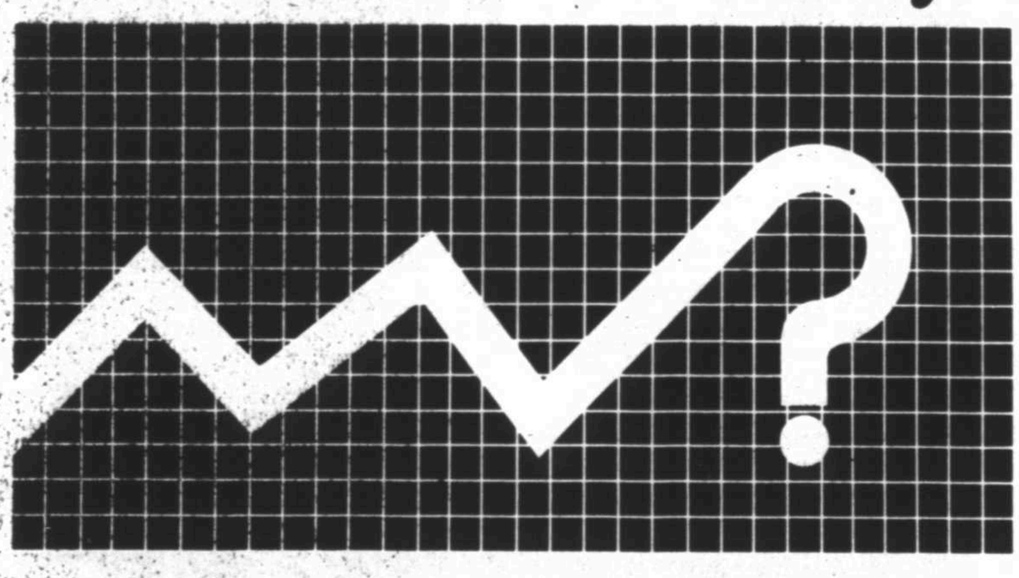

Occidental said it was disappointed at the board's action. But, in a last-ditch effort, Occidental dropped one of its demands and gave Cities Service directors until midnight Monday to accept the offer. Cities Service spokesman Kent Young said the directors were aware of such revisions when they voted to reject the offer.

Charles Waidelich, chairman of Cities Service, had said Monday night the company would "vigorously" pursue offers from other companies interested in buying all or part of Cities Service.

No new suitors came forward publicly Tuesday and Young said he knew of no new meetings scheduled.

The bid was a two-step proposal. Occidental offered to buy half of Cities Service's outstanding shares for $50 apiece and get the remaining 38.2 million shares by exchanging a bloc of securities.

Investment Uncertainty?

WITH A FIRST NATIONAL 6-MONTH CERTIFICATE, YOU CAN BE CERTAIN OF YOUR INVESTMENT.

The interest rates on money funds may appear higher going in, but there is no way to be certain what the rate may be at the end of the month, or even the next week!

At The First National Bank of Midland, the interest rate on a 6-Month Money Market Certificate of Deposit is assured for the entire 182 day term, as long as you maintain your deposit.

Current Rate

This is an annual rate and is subject to change at renewal. Federal regulations prohibit compounding of interest during the 182 day term and require that the penalty for early withdrawal be collected from the principal if the prescribed penalty period has not been met. The interest rate changes weekly and the current rate is in effect through August 23, 1982.

INSURED SECURITY.

An investment of $10,000 or more in a First National 6-month CD is secure in the hands of an experienced investment manager and is insured by the FDIC.

HOT OFF THE PRESS

Witherspoon blazes new trails in annual reports. We produced 15 during the past year — more than one a month — for energy companies, retailers and manufacturers, big and small, old and new. Careful planning plus award-winning writing and design helped pioneer a "new readability" in these important documents.

As a result, ADWEEK/Southwest magazine recently named Witherspoon one of only six "hot shops" in a five-state region. Now that we're all warmed up, bring us in on your next annual report.

Mexico's economy sinking

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Juarez businessmen stuck to their plan to close their stores today in protest of Mexico's monetary policies, despite a government official's plea for national unity.

Finance minister Jesus Silva Herzog explained the government's actions in a nationally televised speech Tuesday night.

In Reynosa, however, chamber of commerce members from the Mexican state of Tamaulipas said they would not participate in the one-day shutdown and would support the government attempts at recovery.

Juarez Chamber member Jose Arturo Ramos said earlier that businessmen in Tijuana, Nuevo Laredo, Ojinaga and Piedras Negras would join Juarez merchants in the protest, but he said he couldn't guarantee their solidarity.

The businessmen are protesting a recent government freeze on dollar accounts in Mexican banks, which they say has interfered with border trade. Tuesday night Silva upheld the ban on transferring dollars abroad.

Ramos said the ban has prevented merchants from paying their bills on the other side of the border and kept them from importing goods necessary in the border cities.

Chamber president Octavio Munoz Corral said the dollar shortage soon would result in shortages in goods that border cities import from the United States, rather than transport the long distances from Mexico City. He said Juarez, for example, imports 20 to 25 percent of its food.

Ramos said the chamber planned further actions if the government did not take steps to fix the dollar shortage and to set a firm rate of exchange. He said there could be protest marches, refusal to pay monthly sales taxes and a temporary withdrawal of merchant's money from Mexican banks.

Elias Solis Arroyo, head of the Mexican Commerce department's Juarez office, said he did not believe larger companies would join in the protest, despite the chamber's claims to the contrary.

He said it would be weeks, not days, before any shortages caused by the dollar freeze would be felt along the border.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, announcing a $1 billion advance on oil payments from the United States, prepared new foreign exchange regulations today in a further attempt to shore up its sinking economy.

Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog said Tuesday night that Mexico will reopen dollar trading on Thursday but will maintain a freeze on most transfers abroad. Rules for the renewed trading will be issued today, he said.

He said Mexico is negotiating to reschedule its $80 billion foreign debt, largest in the Third World, and expected to obtain a $1.5 billion line of credit this week from central banks in Germany, Italy, France, England, Canada, Switzerland, the United States, Japan and some other nations.

Also, the finance minister said Mexico had received a $1 billion credit line from an unidentified American bank to finance grain imports. Further, he said talks have begun toward possible financial aid from the International Monetary Fund.

Silva Herzog said total average oil exports to the United States in June and July reached an unprecedented 1.7 million barrels a day. The United States is Mexico's major market.

The finance minister also said loans would be granted to struggling businesses and that the government would cut individual income taxes as much as 35 percent over the next four months.

In a nationally televised speech, Silva Herzog appealed for calm as the government worked to solve what some have called the most serious economic crisis in the last 60 years. He said he expected some companies to fail and unemployment to climb.

Mexico suspended foreign exchange trading last Friday, freezing an estimated $13 billion in Mexican bank accounts. It later allowed banks to buy dollars and partially resumed foreign payments, but converting pesos into dollars still is banned.

The central bank withdrew support for Mexico's peso currency on Aug. 5 and the peso sank as low as 90 to the dollar. It was the second devaluation of the year and was followed by calls for wage increases and price controls. The peso opened the year at 27 to the dollar and sank to 49 before the latest devaluation.

Mexico doubled prices for corn tortillas and bread, and increased gasoline and electricty costs by 60 percent on Aug. 1 in an attempt to cut costly government subsidies.

Two government decrees will be issued today explaining the rules for the renewed currency trading.

One will establish a preferential exchange system that sets a special dollar rate for companies importing food and key industrial materials. The other will establish a method for purchasing dollars at a higher fixed rate.

For now, Mexico will observe an exchange rate of 69.5 pesos to the dollar for currency trading, the level at which trading closed last Thursday, Silva Herzog said. The freeze on transfer of dollar accounts and other foreign currencies abroad will remain in effect in most cases.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — It first took off in 1921, hauling payrolls to oil workers on Mexico's Gulf Coast, and soared to rare heights for a private airline in the Third World. Today, even while carrying the biggest passenger load in Latin America, Mexicana de Aviacion may be on a course to oblivion.

Deeply in debt and losing money for the first time in 15 years, the company faces the prospect of being absorbed by its smaller, less efficient competitor, the state-owned airline Aeromexico.

Last month, the government acquired 58 percent of Mexicana's stock to halt what it called "ruinous competition" between the two carriers and muster forces for route negotiations with the United States.

Enrique Loaeza Tovar, a political protege of President Jose Lopez Portillo and already director-general of Aeromexico, was named to the same post at Mexicana. He announced flight schedules and some other operations would be "coordinated" but no decision on a merger would be made until after Lopez Portillo's successor, Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado, takes office Dec. 1.

The takeover shocked many of Mexicana's 12,000 employees, who like to boast that theirs is the world's fourth oldest airline and that Charles Lindbergh made its first mail run — from Brownsville, Texas, to Tampico and Mexico City — in a Ford Tri-Motor in 1929.

Although some minority stockholders and Mexicana's 8,000-member ground workers union indicate they will resist a merger, few believe Mexicana's special identity will survive.

"It was like a great Mexican family," said a Mexicana marketing specialist. "People spent their entire careers here. The top executives moved up within the ranks. Now the leadership is imposed. A lot of people are demoralized. Most of the senior directors have applied for retirement."

Mexicana suffered when the Mexican economy faltered as oil prices fell, interest rates climbed and the peso was devalued.

But, it was not allowed to fail; the government, eager to save jobs and control key industries, came to the rescue, adding to its own soaring debt of nearly $80 billion. Mexicana joined the ranks of more than 400 state-controlled companies.

Some say Mexicana was doomed despite a reputation for better service, comfort, safety and on-time performance than Aeromexico, which was nationalized in 1959 and has lost money nearly every year since. Aeromexico has nearly the same number of employees and flies to the same number of cities in slightly larger jets.

In recent years, encouraged or ordered by the government, Mexicana sometimes switched passengers to Aeromexico jets if both were flying between the same cities at nearly the same hour.

"Mexicana was in a no-win situation because it was not allowed to drive the competition out of business," said Ingolf Otto of Mexico's Banking and Finance Institute. "Eventually, Aeromexico's inefficiency dragged Mexicana down. Then the government decided there was no point in having two inefficient airlines."

Last year the airline flew eight million passengers to 41 cities in the United States, Mexico and Central America and reported a $35.8 million profit. Aeromexico, with a similar fleet and routes, had three million fewer passengers.

Mexicana's troubles began in February, when a 43 percent devaluation of the peso offset January's 30 percent fare increase and nearly doubled the peso burden of its $437 million in foreign currency loans.

Even nature turned against the airline. Clouds from the Chichonal volcano forced it to cancel 221 flights in two weeks on profitable routes to southern Mexico's oilfields.

After Mexicana's 1982 losses passed $11 million at mid-year, the government announced it had acquired a majority of the company's stock from former board chairman Crecencio Ballesteros.

Ballesteros, a construction company owner, bought Mexicana in 1967 from Pan American World Airways, which had owned it since 1929.

With the current U.S.-Mexican aviation treaty expiring at year's end, Mexico hopes to get more routes for its carriers between the two countries. But many industry analysts, who believe Mexicana might have recovered its losses, say the extension of government control will hurt Mexico's competitiveness with U.S. airlines.

"Mexicana was one of the best run airlines in the world," said Roberto Otero of Pacific Southwest Airlines, which competes against both Mexican companies between Los Angeles and Puerto Vallarta. "Unfortunately for Mexico, the government is the worst administrator."

Mexican officials say the combination of Mexicana's Boeing 727s and Aeromexico's DC-9s and DC-10s will help them develop a charter fleet to bid for winter package tours among U.S. tourists, now attracted to Mexico by the weakening peso and low dollar prices.

Deregulation provides freedom to fail

NEW YORK (AP) — The bittersweet freedom of open competition in the marketplace means opportunities for the nimble but poses a new risk for some long-sheltered American industries: the freedom to fail.

Thanks to airline deregulation in 1978, People Express took to the air a little over a year ago offering discount fares for no-frills service in the Northeast and was able to report a profit 12 months later.

Braniff International tock advantage of deregulation to spread its route structure across the globe, it bought new planes and grew from the nation's ninth-largest airline to No. 7. But two recessions in two years, rising fuel costs and the air controllers strike sucked the life from Braniff and it shut down in mid-May as the eighth largest airline.

The two illustrate the changes wrought by the crushing of the regulatory cocoon that cushioned U.S. airlines for decades, and analysts are studying such examples for clues as to who will survive deregulation.

The stakes are high, and not just in the airline industry. Trucking was opened to competition in 1980, and deregulation is getting under way for banks and other providers of financial services. There are changes coming, too, in telephones, broadcasting and other communications fields.

McKINSEY & CO., a management consulting firm in New York, has studied deregulation's effects and found the affected companies basically break down into three types:

—Low-cost, no-frills operations, often using the newest technologies and techniques, non-union labor and a flexible approach. They are frequently those entering the field for the first time.

—Those serving the high end of the market such as Bankers Trust Co. of New York, which on the eve of deregulation has sold more than 100 retail, consumer branches and turned its sights on corporate, government and wealthy individual customers.

—Or, probably the hardest role, the universal, full-line companies offering something for everyone. Only the very biggest with the most vast resources has even a hope of succeeding here, McKinsey says.

Analysts say the advantage goes to companies nimble enough to exploit the rapid, and unexpected, developments that accompany deregulation.

McKinsey's analysis says signals that a change is coming in regulatory or legislative conditions are evident five to seven years before actual deregulation, and creative managements have used the time to plan.

THE ANALYSTS WARN that at companies without a new, or at least reconsidered, strategy in place, "management will find it difficult to make the necessary adjustment."

Tom Davis, traffic manager of St. Joseph Motor Lines, a regional truck company in Atlanta, says, "Historically, regulation has protected poorly run companies — Braniff is a great example."

Analysts contend Braniff was seduced by the freedom of deregulation. Free to overextend itself, it was flattened by events beyond its control: the back-to-back recessions and fuel prices quadrupling in three years.

TWA, on the other hand, is widely viewed as an airline that saw the writing on the wall early and started redefining itself.

TWA's vice president for planning, Neil Effman, can show off a big book, dating to 1977, that outlined TWA's strategy for operating in an environment "not under control of the corporation." The result, he says, is that TWA is now changed to take advantage of its strengths.

It is one of the strongest trans-Atlantic and transcontinental airlines, it established a regional "hub" operation in St. Louis for domestic operations, and cut back substantially in Chicago, dominated by United Airlines.

THE HUB CONCEPT involves feeding regional flights to a central location for connections to long-haul routes or other regional routes. It is best typified by Delta Air Lines, probably the strongest major airline and the dominant force in the Southeast with its Atlanta hub.

Eastern, in contrast, still dominates flights up and down the East Coast and carries the most passengers, but it has found itself vulnerable to low-cost competitors, for whom it is far easier to jump in on a lucrative point-to-point route than establish a hub operation.

As Eastern learned from People Express, Air Florida, New York Air and even the two-plane Northeast Air, suddenly there is competition, and it springs from unanticipated quarters, says Joel Bleeke at McKinsey & Co.

In the advent of deregulation, he says, companies should worry less about who their competitors are now, "but who they are likely to be."

And they are not likely to be established firms, he says, but rather small, non-union, low-cost operators, armed with the latest

TRUCKING COMPANIES ARE especially susceptible to new competition, with anyone owning a truck able to get into the business. The American Trucking Association says 5,000 trucking lines have sprung up since 1980, while about 150 old firms have gone out of business and at least 50 are in trouble. There were about 18,000 before deregulation.

J.D. Love, vice president of Rio Grande Industries, says the company closed its 55-year-old Rio Grande Motor Way trucking line in May because it was overwhelmed by the competition. Rio Grande found itself competing with up to 30 firms for business on routes that had two or three competitors before deregulation, he says.

"Suddenly," says Davis at St. Joseph Motor Lines, "a lot of the little guys are chewing up the big carriers and spitting them out."

An example of what innovation can mean after deregulation is Federal Express, McKinsey's Bleeke says.

That newcomer has soared to the top of the air freight business with its revolutionary approach to handling freight — using its own planes to carry packages and a central operation to sort them overnight. In a typical night, Federal Express flies in 125,000 packages to its Memphis, Tenn., hub, sorts them and flies them out again.

"Before Federal Express came along the people that were the big forces in the airline business just missed the forest for the trees," says Fred R. Smith, founder of Federal Express. "They were so steeped in their own rules about how you had to operate, they missed this entire revolution."

LAST YEAR, another big air freight handler, Emery, spent $50 million on its own sorting plant in Dayton, Ohio, and $77 million on two dozen Boeing 727s, becoming, Bleeke says, "an aggressive follower."

But not even the newcomers are immune from problems.

Air Florida, once the rising star of the industry, cut back operations sharply earlier this year because of losses from the fare wars it started when it began competing on the heavily traveled routes linking the Northeast and Florida. There has just not been enough traffic during the recession.

Steven Murphy, vice president of Yellow Freight System, one of the nation's biggest trucking companies, says companies must be cautious in approaching deregulation, especially against the temptation to cut rates or fares to attract limited business.

"Anybody who sells dollar bills for 99 cents eventually must go broke," he says.

One industry flourishing under deregulation is the railroads.

RAILROADS HAVE BEEN subject to regulations since their financial excesses and accidents in the 19th century brought about the federal government's entry into regulation. And their history in recent decades has been marked by widespread bankruptcies and mergers.

But the Staggers Rail Act of 1980 gave the railroads freedom to drop unprofitable lines and adjust rates somewhat without the time-consuming paperwork of previous times, allowing them to compete better with trucking and barge lines for freight. As a result, railroads are prospering as they haven't since World War II. Last year, they reported their biggest profits in three decades.

"We're out their competing," says James H. Evans, chairman of Union Pacific Corp., the railroad, energy and real estate giant. "In the future, as the economy comes back, the railroads are poised and ready to to serve."

Union Pacific, whhich earned $410 million last year on revenues of $66.3 billion, says it is spending $1.3 billion this year on railroad improvements, energy development and real estate.

One advantage the railroads have over the other deregulated industries is that they have no real competition from each other over many routes and there are few non-rail alternatives for hauling such commodities as coal, grain and chemicals.

And the railroads have little fear of small, upstart companies getting into the business — the cost of building a rail line is estimated at around $1 million a mile, and that does not include the equipment needed to run a railroad.

Michigan's unemployment tops all, report says

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michigan, hardest-hit by the depressed automotive industry, leads all states in unemployment with 14.3 percent of its labor force out of work in June, according to a government report.

Double-digit unemployment also plagued the states of Alabama, Indiana, Illinois, and Pennsylvania.

According to the seasonally unadjusted figures released Tuesday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Alabama had a 13.9 percent unemployment rate. Washington state, a timber center, suffered 12.4 percent joblessness, and Ohio, West Virginia, Illinois and Indiana followed close behind.

Eighty of 208 metropolitan areas showed jobless rates at double-digit levels. Hardest hit were Rockford, Ill., and Modesto, Calif., with unemployment rates of 19.1 percent and 19.0 percent respectively.

The lowest unemployment rate among metropolitan areas was registered by Stamford, Conn., with a June jobless rate of 3.4 percent.

Altogether, from June 1981 to June 1982, 47 states and the District of Columbia experienced rising unemployment, the bureau said.

Based on preliminary figures which were not adjusted for seasonal variations, North Dakota, with a jobless rate of 4.7 percent, was the only state with lower unemployment this June than in the same month a year ago, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Figures for two states — Iowa and Kentucky — were incomplete at the time the latest state-by-state survey was compiled, and these states were not included.

The national seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for July was 9.8 percent, setting a post-World War II record. The reporting of jobless figures for all but the 10 largest states lags about six weeks behind release of the national figures.

These state figures are based on a monthly survey of non-agricultural payrolls, and are not adjusted to take into account such seasonal variations as school closings and weather. The national unemployment rate and the rates for the 10 largest states are based in large part on the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey.

Five states, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania, experienced job losses of between 100,000 and 200,000 over the year, the bureau said.

By contrast, it said, employment grew by 145,000 in Texas and 35,000 in Florida, largely the result of job gains in trade and service industries.

In another development, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan announced that the agency will immediately distribute $7.5 million to 20 major cities and local government areas to pay for additional jobs and job training for disadvantaged youths.

The largest chunk of that money — $1 million — will go to New York. Some $700,000 was awarded to Chicago and $525,000 to Detroit. Another $425,000 will go to Wayne County, Dearborn and Livonia, areas surrounding Detroit. And $400,000 will be sent to Oakland, Calif., and $300,000 to Grand Rapids, Mich., Akron, Toledo, Canton and Cleveland, Ohio.

The department also said payments of $300,000 each were approved for the Birmingham and Mobile, Ala., areas, Fresno, Calif., Washington, D.C., Indianapolis, Ind., southwestern Pennsylvania (Southern Allegheny Consortium), and Newark, N.J.

Payments of $275,000 each were approved for St. Louis, Livingston County, Mich., and El Paso, Texas.

WTGS to hear of Pedregosa Basin

Sam Thompson III, of the New Mexico Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources, Socorro, New Mexico, will be the featured speaker at the West Texas Geological Society meeting Tuesday, Aug. 24, at the Midland Hilton.

He will speak on "Petroleum Exploration in the Pedregosa Basin, southwest New Mexico." The meeting begins at 11:30 a.m. Cost of the luncheon is $9.50.

Reservations should be made by calling the Society at 915-683-1573, before 4 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 19.

Thompson is a graduate of Southern Methodist University with a BS in geology and mathematics. He received a master of science in geology from the University of New Mexico in 1955.

He was employed as a geologist with Exxon Company from 1954 to 1974.

Since joing the New Mexico Bureau of mines and Mineral Resources he has worked on a regional study of the petroleum geology of southwestern new Mexico.

City OKs construction worth $3.5 million

The city of Midland issued 39 building permits for the week of August 9 through 13, for commercial and residential construction valued at $3.5 million. This brings the total for August to $7.55 million, and to $209.8 million for the year to date.

Individual commercial projects were again valued highest among the permits granted. Topping the list was Walter Thibeau Inc., given a permit for a two story office building at 4110 N. Big Spring, for $971,000. Other commercial permits were granted to: Bill Williams, 1500 S. Big Spring and 821 W. Taylor, $200,000 and $150,000; Brice Inc., 241 and 242 Spring Park Drive, two two-story office/warehouses, $300,000 each; and Claude Martin & Son, 505 N. Carrizo, a permit to demolish an apartment building and put in a 33,500 square-foot parking garage, $600,000. Commercial alteration permits were granted to: Greenwood Construction, 3100 W. Kentucky, $10,000; Area Builders, 3525 Andrews Highway, $26,000; Mike Jackson, 2103 W. Michigan, $5,000; and Roberts Remodeling, 1700 W. Texas, $4,200.

The remaining permits were granted for residential construction for homes ranging from $30,000 to $220,00 in value, and for residential alterations.

Rocky days ahead for home building industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Analysts still predict rocky days ahead for the troubled housing industry even though new figures show housing starts jumped a record 33.7 percent in July.

Robert Dederick, undersecretary of economic affairs at the Commerce Department, said July's pace "appears too high to be sustained at present," and he saw "irregular growth this year and next" in housing starts.

Other analysts welcomed the Commerce Department's July figures, but they cautioned the increase was almost entirely due to a huge 135.6 percent jump in construction of multi-family buildings that appeared to reflect a government push in subsidized housing programs.

Mark Riedy, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said Tuesday the government was providing a "temporary but welcome boost in apartment construction."

But Riedy, like other analysts, said the key to a prolonged recovery in the housing industry would be a pickup in construction of single-family units. That did not occur in July.

The new report said starts of single-family units declined a bit, from a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 616,000 in June to 614,000 last month.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders, said, "You're not going to have a housing recovery. Multiples won't make it."

Riedy said there was "no improvement in sight at all for the single-family housing market" because of the high interest rates prospective homebuyers must pay on home loans.

But Jayne Shontell, chief economist for the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., disagreed, saying the outlook for that market was "better than it has been in more than a year."

Noting recent declines in short-term interest rates, she said some relief in mortgage rates may occur by the end of the year. And that, she said, "should lead to higher single-family starts and home sales, albeit modest by historical standards."

Overall, starts of new privately owned housing units were at an annual rate of 1.2 million in July, which was the sharpest pace since the 1.3 million level of April 1981, the department said.

Last month's figure was up from the 906,000 rate of June and the 1.1 million of May, the report said.

The 33.7 percent increase last month was the largest since the government began keeping such records in 1959, department officials said.

When You Need Security... You Need Security National Bank!

Security means a lot of different things to different people.

Sometimes it's money in the bank. Sometimes it's our home and our family. It's not having to worry about retirement. And sometimes it's seeing a longtime, well-thought-out dream come true.

It seems like we spend our whole lives trying to find that elusive peace of mind.

Whatever security is to you, and whenever you need it, turn to us. We can help.

We're a banker who's a friend ... who knows you by name.

Broken bat hit by Diaz gives Cubs 4th straight

White has high hopes for Crane

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

CRANE — When the Crane Golden Cranes' football squad takes to the gridiron this season, opponents best not look back at last year's 0-10 record. Head football coach Rick White is a man unaccustomed to losing.

He knows what a winning tradition can do. After all he graduated from a high school with one of Texas' most successful football programs, Odessa Permian. And before going to Crane, his career record as a head football coach was an impressive 41-18.

What makes the 34-year-old mentor think his team will be in the thick of the District 6-AAA race are, among other things, three All-District returners, an offensive line that remains intact from last year and nine of 11 defensive returners.

ONE OF the All-District peformers is Gilbert Ramirez, who ranked second in the district in rushing last year. That kind of performance becomes more impressive when one considers the fact that the 140-pound tailback did it on a team that averaged passing more than 26 times per game.

In front of Ramirez will be the same offensive line that opened holes for him last year. It is this group of kids that most impresses White.

"These kids have worked hard during the off season on our weight program," he said. "They are 15 to 20 pounds heavier than last year."

Among those returning are Tooter Draper and Oscar Rosales at the tackle positions, and Trey Morgan and John Cavazos at guards. Last year's starting center, Clint Barrett, has moved to tight end and Wally Heredia will replace him in the middle.

DEFENSIVELY THE Cranes will get their leadership from two returning All-District performers. Draper will be back at his linebacker position and Robert Cadena will be at free safety. The Cranes work out of the traditional 4-3-4 defense.

A sign of Crane's strength can be seen in the choice of captains for this year's squad. Despite having three All-District players back, White has chosen Ben Blackwood, a fullback-linebacker, and Barrett, an end, as captains.

White got some unexpected help from two transfer students when Mark Angel, a starting defensive safety at Albany last year, and Eugene Morris, starting quarterback at Odessa Ector, moved to Crane. Both are expected to be starters with Angel seeing action at safety and Morris at cornerback.

WHITE HAS also been impressed by first year player Mark Velasquez. White describes him as "a super freshman," and expects to start him at defensive safety.

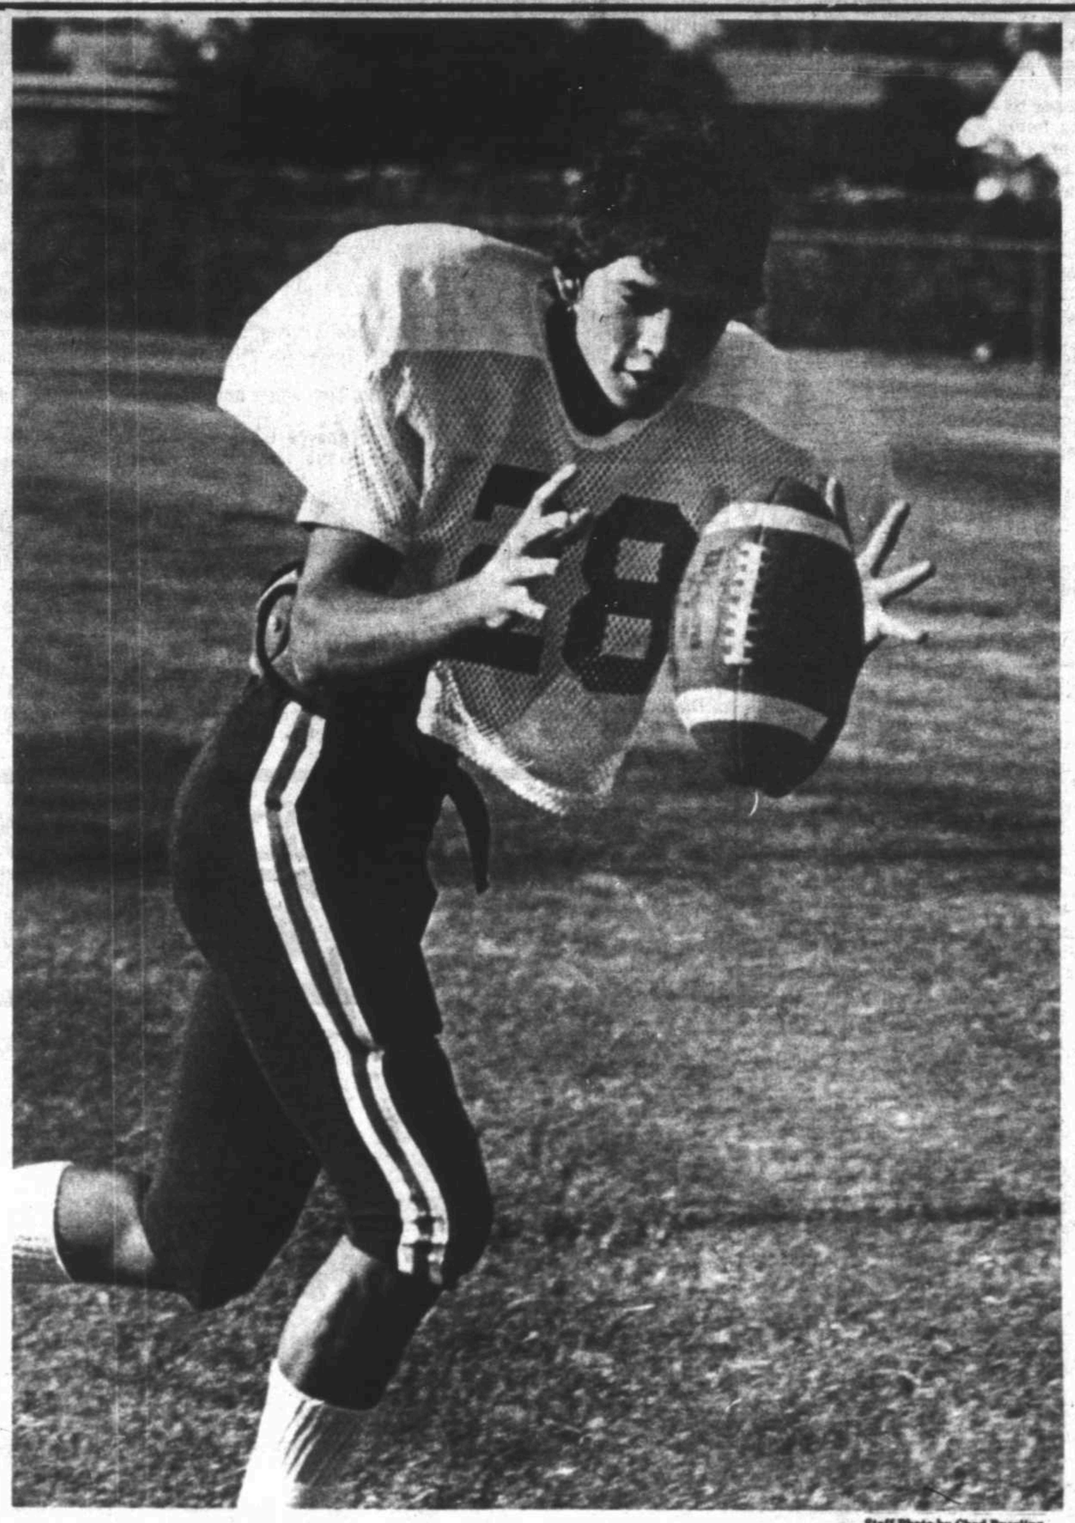

Even with with a winning percentage of 69 percent established at Shallowater, White said this year's Golden Crane squad has the best outlook he has seen on a football team.

"We tried to establish a good attitude during the winter. And these kids have the best attitude I've seen, including winners." he said. "They are hungry to win."

Crane will be helped by a district schedule that includes three home games, while only two will be on the road. Their pre-district schedule should give the coaching staff ample room to build a winning disposition as all five opponents are class AA schools. The only drawback might be the fatigue factor with eight players scheduled to play on both sides of the line.

But with a strong returning nucleus and a favorable schedule, 1982 should be a return to winning ways for the Crane Golden Cranes.

Cubs just half game out as G-Sox come to town

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The El Paso Diablos tried to knock down the fences at Cubs Stadium Tuesday night, but it was a broken bat single by Midland's Mike Diaz that moved the Cubs to within one game of the lead in the Texas League West.

The Diablos, who came into town threatening to move Midland out of the TL race with two straight victories, dropped their fourth in a row to the Cubs. In this, the last game of the series between the two teams, El Paso's Bill Foley brought out the heavy lumber against the Cubs with two homers and a scary ninth inning fly to the warning track in center, but all went for naught as Diaz' eighth inning, broken bat bloop to center off Jerry Jenkins scored Joe Carter with what proved to be the winning run. Carter had doubled off loser Derek Tatsuno (6-2) to open the inning.

"I had the label on the bat turned the wrong way," noted Diaz, who delivered his second game winning hit in this series. "I thought I hit it good, but with the label turned over too far, I was lucky to even get a hit. It was a big one though, wasn't it?"

THERE WERE a couple of moments in the ninth when Diaz' hit didn't look so big. With one out, Rob Blyth, who picked up his first win of the year, walked Eric Peyton and some more tough luck when Bruce Chaney booted what looked like a sure double play ball. Cub manager Brian Murphy then went to the bullpen again for Mike Thompson, who came on to get the save by getting pinch hitter Mark Corey and Foley on fly balls to the warning track in dead center where Henry Cotto was able to chase them down.

"I'm just glad the wind wasn't blowing out, or we would be out of this game," said Thompson. "The first ball hit (off the bat of Corey) really scared me. It sounded real good and I thought it was out. The second one went a long way, but it didn't sound as good off the bat. I needed a couple of those to be caught because there sure have been a lot that have gone out on me this year."

Even though catcher Diaz contributed the winning hit, he seemed more thrilled with the outing of his bullpen. "You have to give Blyth and Thompson credit. They came in and threw strikes and didn't give up a hit. I hope that is a good omen going into the last two weeks of the season because both have had some problems. It's hard to keep the ball in the yard when the wind is blowing out, but tonight Thompson used the yard to his advantage with those flies to center."

THE CONTEST started out as a pitching duel between El Paso's Weldon Swift and Midland's Doug Welenc, who was searching for his 11th victory. He deserved it, but ended up having to have help.

Both pitchers pitched five innings of scoreless ball before the Cubs got to Swift for five runs in the sixth on three hits. A single by Dave Owen got one run in, Cotto's double plated two, Kelley's single brought home another and a bases loaded walk to Carmelo Martinez ended it. The Cubs could have put the game away for Welenc in that inning, but they left the bases loaded for the second time in the game. In all, 14 Cubs were stranded on the base paths.

Welenc completed six shutout innings with only two hits to start the game, but Foley ripped him for a solo shot in the two-run seventh and Foley mashed him again with a three-run blast for his 21st homer of the year.

"Welenc was pitching his finest game of the year and was in complete command out there," noted Murphy. "But he got a couple of pitches up to Foley that tied the game and put the lead run on with a walk. I really hated to take him out because he deserved to win. The bullpen did a good job."

Hall of Famer Ernie Banks, who was busy signing autographs most of the night, went to the Cubs lockerroom after the game. "That sure beats losing, doesn't it?" he said. "I think the Midland Cubs want to win the title."

JUST LAST Saturday, the Cubs were five games behind the Diablos and heading for obscurity. A doubleheader sweep Sunday seemed to give the Cubs new life and Murphy could see the change in his club.

"I have to be honest and say that after losing those two first games to El Paso, I didn't think we had much of a chance. The doubleheader win seemed to turn things around for us," Murphy said. "This was a key one tonight because if we had lost it, we might have played excellent ball the rest of the way and not win the title. Now if we play well, I think we will be right there. It's hard to beat El Paso four in a row because that team has so much character. We had them down by five and they were still jumping around in the dugout. They won't quit on you."

CUB PAWS: The Cubs head into the final home series of the season with a 7:30 p.m. game against the Amarillo Gold Sox, a team that has also moved into contention in the TL West by defeating San Antonio again Tuesday. San Antonio has gone from first place to last in less than two weeks. The series with Amarillo will be the last time the Cubs will ever face Amarillo. The Gold Sox are moving to Beaumont next year. The series with El Paso drew 6,858 fans in five dates, an average of 1,715 per outing and one crowd was only 586.

Montreal sweeps Atlanta

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The management of the Atlanta Braves allowed Chief Noc-A-Homa to put his tepee up again at Atlanta Stadium in hopes of changing the team's bad luck of late.

It didn't help.

The staggering Braves continued to fumble away games left and right, dropping a doubleheader to the Montreal Expos, 13-7 and 3-2 in 10 innings Tuesday night. That spelled their 18th loss in their last 20 games, and dropped them 2½ games behind the National League West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Sure, you get concerned," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre. "It gets more frustrating. But I wasn't brought up quitting and I won't now."

It wasn't only that the Braves lost again, but the way that they lost their recent pair. In the first game, they made five errors, allowing the Expos eight unearned runs. In the nightcap, relief ace Gene Garber was unable to hold a 2-1 lead in the ninth.

"We've got a long way to go and we're still close in the race," said Atlanta first baseman Chris Chambliss. "I'm not disappointed. I thought we played hard in the second game. We're just not hitting the ball."

The Braves' doubleheader loss continued a streak of recent bad play at home that eventually led to their displacement in first place by the Dodgers. The Braves had forced their mascot, Chief Noc-A-Homa, to give up his tepee when the team was hot so more seats could be added for the surging crowds, but decided to put it up again for the Braves' homecoming from their recent road trip.

Meanwhile, the Dodgers played a 1-1 tie with the Chicago Cubs Tuesday in a 17-inning game at Wrigley Field that was called by darkness.

Dodgers 1, Cubs 1

Astros 2, Phillies 0

Vern Ruhle fired a five-hitter and Tony Scott and Ray Knight each drove in a run to lead Houston past Philadelphia. Ruhle, 7-8, struck out four and walked none.

Top contenders vie for Sanchez' vacated crown

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The World Boxing Council has announced that the three top contenders will battle for the WBC's featherweight crown left vacant by the death of Salvador Sanchez of Mexico.

The 23-year-old Sanchez was killed in an automobile accident last Thursday on a highway 165 miles north of Mexico City.

WBC President Jose Sulaiman said Tuesday in an interview with The Associated Press that the WBC's executive council was overwhelmingly in favor of the tournament.

Mario Miranda of Columbia is rated as the No. 1 contender in the division, with Americans Ruben Castillo and Juan Laporte ranked second and third.

Joliet favored

FARMINGTON (AP) — Unbeaten Joliet, Ill. takes on Memphis, Tenn., and Cincinnati, Ohio faces Flint, Mich., tonight in the Connie Mack baseball World Series.

Joliet assumed the role of favorite in the series by downing previously unbeaten Cincinnati 11-3 Tuesday while Flint eliminated the host Farmington team 4-0.

America's Team not alone in wilting in hot race

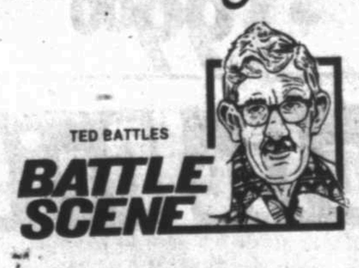

If it hadn't come so early, it would be decried as the greatest choke performance in baseball annals. It's a dreadful thing that has happened to America's Baseball Team.

The Atlanta Braves led the National League race by 10 games, just a blink ago, it seems. And now they are on the verge of plummeting into the abyss of also rans in the National League West.

A few weeks ago they were the darlings of the nation, thanks to Ted Turner. If things get much worse, they may send the Braves back to Boston, where they once belonged.

THE LOS Angeles Dodgers have taken over the lead in the NL West, where everyone figured they'd be when at this stage of the season when predictions were being made last spring, but they couldn't have done it without the full cooperation of the Braves, who have been playing like someone substituted Firewater for their Gatorade.

In losing 14 of 15 in one recent stretch, the Braves had no one to blame but themselves. Infielders let routine grounders roll through their legs. Outfielders, and infielders, muffed easy fly balls. Pitchers threw double play balls into centerfield. Catchers also played catch with Dale Murphy in center on stolen bases and let catchable pitches get by with runners on base. The usually reliable bullpen collapsed.

It was a choke job in the worse sense, but it happens to teams when the pressure of a pennant race begins to mount.

BUT THE Braves won't go down as the only team in baseball history to let a pennant get away after it had seemingly been sewed up.

The 1964 Phillies had a six-game lead with 14 days left and lost 10 in a row to blow the pennant to the St. Louis Cardinals. Gene Mauch was the manager and has never managed to live it down.

In 1969, the Chicago Cubs led the Mets by 9½ Aug. 14 and finished the

Wilson key to Cougars grid hopes

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — University of Houston football Coach Bill Yeoman says quarterback Lionel Wilson can expect more attention from opposing defenses this season.

Wilson was a virtual unknown early last season when he trotted onto the field against Miami while starting quarterback Audrey McMillian was helped off with a season-ending shoulder separation.

For the rest of the season, the UH offense hinged on Wilson's health.

WILSON RESPONDED with three school records and led the Cougars to a 7-4-1 record and a bowl date and has gained mention on most teams' most-wanted list.

"He came in when no one expected anything and everything was a plus," Yeoman aid. "But now some kids have probably been thinking about him over the summer. He probably will get bradded a little bit more than a year ago and the pressure will be a little more substantial."

And if Wilson should suffer another injury, it won't be the crisis of a year ago, because McMillian has recovered and is primed to challenge for playing time once again.

"We've got more than one who can play," Yeoman said. "Lionel is very gifted and so is Audrey. Gerry Dickens had an excellent spring, so we should be a little more stable than we have been at quarterback."

ADDED TO quarterback stability will be a fresh group of faster running backs. Dallas Wigginw and Ernie Wesley will return a speed threat to the UH backfield.

"We've got a little more speed than we've been used to and the young people coming in will help too," Yeoman said. "We are in hopes that that Wesley and Wiggins will give us more of the long running threat that we haven't had in two or three years."

The Cougars also will return speed at the receiver positions. Burner Lonell Phea is gone but David Roberson is his replacement and freshman Jeffrey Fields also provides an added deep threat.

"He (Roberson) has the same kind of speed as Lonell and maybe a little better change in direction," Yeoman said.

Offensive line coach Bill Willingham returns his offensive line intact from last season. Yeoman is expecting a superb final season for tackle Maceo Fifer.

"Maceo has had two good years and we feel it is time for him to have a great year," Yeoman said.

The Cougars must replace starters at both defensive end positions and fill a huge graduation loss for Terry Monroe at defensive tackle.

GREG HARMON and Victor Mitchell will plug the defensive end gaps and Simon Fletcher has moved from defensive end to play in Monroe's tackle spot. Greg McGallion at nose guard and DeWayne Calloway at the other tackle, lend experience to the defensive line.

Goose demands trade unless George reforms

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief ace Rick Gossage accused New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner of treating his players "like animals" and said he wants to be traded unless the situation improves, the New York Times reported in its Wednesday editions.

Gossage, who has saved 25 games this season, has been angry with Steinbrenner, the fans and the media lately because of what he terms their negativeness toward the team.

"If things don't change, I want out," Gossage told The Times. "I'm tired of the way Steinbrenner handles everything. I'm sick of the whole situation. I've had it up to here

"I'm through being patient. I'm through being quiet. I'll tell them to trade me or give me some assurance that things will change," said Gossage. "He's got to quit treating us like animals and start treating us like people."

Gossage, whose six-year contract with the Yankees expires next season, said he told his agent, Jerry Kapstein, to talk with Steinbrenner about the situation, perhaps arranging a meeting between the owner and the hard-throwing right-hander.

"I plan on telling him how I feel, what I feel and where I feel he's made his mistakes," said Gossage. "I don't care if he wants to talk to me or not. He'll know how I feel.

Monday night, after picking up saves in both ends of the Yanks' doubleheader sweep over Kansas City, Gossage lashed out at reporters, citing what he called negative press coverage as contributing to the Yankees' woes this season.

American League buys time for besieged Bowie

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — It was a matter of politics, the stuff of which novels are made.

It was a power play, and it came straight out of a Capitol Hill melodrama.

In a surprise move, the American League successfully delayed the culmination Tuesday of a debate that will determine the fate of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, high lord of the game for the past 14 years.

"Mystery has been pretty good for baseball over the years," said John McHale, president of the Montreal Expos and one of the men working behind the scenes to thwart the latest "Dump Bowie" campaign.

American League owners threw a filibuster into baseball's summer meetings Tuesday by backing Kuhn and buying some valuable time. They were trying to head off a National League threat to Kuhn's bid for a third term as commissioner of the nation's pastime.

"There's still some opposition. There's still a lot of different ways things could go," said Bill Giles, president of the Philadelphia Phillies.

On Tueday, the National League's 12 owners convened a special session at a seaside resort hotel in San Diego, called by three clubs in an effort drum up support for the ouster of Kuhn.

Their meeting came to a halt after almost two hours, however, some 15 minutes after the American League sent three representatives over to seek a recess.

The three AL representatives — league President Lee MacPhail, Oakland A's President Roy Eisenhardt and Baltimore Orioles chairman Edward Bennett Williams — requested a brief caucus with Los Angeles Dodgers' owner Peter O'Malley, a longtime Kuhn supporter.

After a two-minute discussion on a veranda overlooking a picturesque marina in San Diego Bay, O'Malley returned to the National League meeting

Are Razorbacks among the best?

Holtz admits it could be

By HARRY KING
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK — Predictions about the University of Arkansas football team run the gauntlet.

One publication says the Razorbacks should be among the best in the country. Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz says there is justification for that prognostication.

In other places, the Razorbacks are picked in the middle of the Southwest Conference. And, Holtz says there is a logic behind that guess.

"Our football team is very difficult to evaluate," he said. "There is good justification for both predictions.

"We do have some very strong points. And we have equally as many question marks with no immediate answers. That would lead you to believe we have an awful lot of problems. We can go from very good to very average."

ON THE plus side:

—A seasoned front four on defense, including All-American Billy Ray Smith and noseman Richard Richardson.

—Inexperience at linebacker and safety.

—Replacing departed tight end Darryl Mason and getting help on the left side of the offensive line.

Anderson, the Razorbacks' leading rusher last year with 616 yards, will start his senior year at wide receiver where he can stretch a defense. He will stay there if Clark, Darryl Bowles and Thomas Brown do the job at running back.

Jones, who missed three regular season games and the Gator Bowl with injuries last year, completed 44 of 71 passes for 654 yards and nine touchdowns in the Razorbacks' two spring games. Taylor, the Offensive Newcomer of the Year in the Southwest Conference last year even though he started only three games, missed spring practice after shoulder surgery.

"I think you have to have two quarterbacks to get through the season successfully in this conference," Holtz said. "In the past, when Tom Jones has been injured, it has caused the football team to digress. If he gets hurt this year, there will be no dropoff in either leadership or performance."

AT 270, Korte may be the strongest player in college football — he can bench press almost 600 pounds. Mohammed is 275 pounds.

"If we do not run to the right side a lot someone should psychoanalyze the play caller," said Holtz, who calls the plays.

Smith has the Arkansas career record for lost yardage plays — 48 tackles for a minus 258 yards. The other end will be Ron Faurot and Earl Buckingham, both considered starters last year. At tackle is Phillip Boren, another starter.

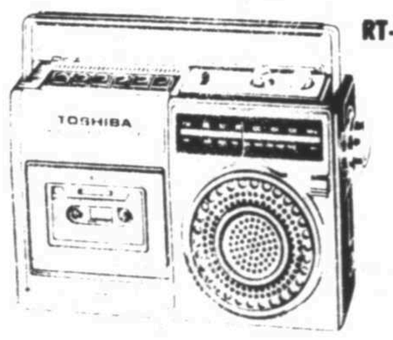

"RICHARDSON is so important to us," Holtz said. "If he can stay healthy, Richard could be as dominating a middle guard as we've ever had." The 5-foot-11, 260-pound Richardson has never gone through an injury-free season.

A complete player, Mason spoiled Arkansas at tight end. Eddie White has done all the right things, at one time or another, but all three of his pass receptions last year were in the first two games.

Tulsa seeks 3rd straight MVC title

Huskers, Sooners favored in Big 8

One of a Series

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Not since Nebraska beat Oklahoma last November have Cornhusker fans had so much to smile about. Turner Gill's unusual foot injury is responding to treatment.

Gill's recovery from the nerve damage which kept him out of Nebraska's finwl two games last season could be the pivotal development in this year's Big Eight football race.

THE INJURY caused partial paralysis in his right foot. He had feeling in the foot, but little control of it. But the news out of Lincoln, Neb., this summer is that the foot may be 100 percent healed by the time the season gets rolling.

Whoever lines up at quarterback will have the incumbent Outland Trophy winner snapping the ball to him. Dave Rimington, a remarkably quick, powerful senior, will have a go at repeating as Big Eight Offensive Player of the Year.

Nebraska is also blessed in the backfield, with Mike Rozier and Roger Craig. Rozier, a junior, won offensive newcomer-of-the-year laurels last year after rushing for 943 yards.

Nebraska returns only five starters on defense, but tackle Toby Williams and linebackers Steve Damkroger and Brent Evans are as good as anyone in the league.

THE TEAM with the most returning starters in the Big Eight is Kansas State, following a 2-9 season and a gamble by Coach Jim Dickey.

In theory, K-State returns 26 starters. Last year, effectively conceding the season, Dickey redshirted 10 lettermen, including eight seniors who had started in 1980.

But sportswriters in a summer poll conducted by the Big Eight office figured there would be no change at the top.

Oklahoma and Nebraska, according to the writers, will dominate the Big Eight again as they did throughout the '70s and so far in the '80s. The defending champion Huskers gathered 89 first-place votes to 35 for Oklahoma, which was picked second.

TULSA, with 45 returning lettermen, is generally favored to win a third consecutive Missouri Valley title. The Golden Hurricane, lost its top two quarterbacks and entire defensive line to graduation.

Skip Ast is the only scholarship quarterback who was available in spring practice. Promising sophomores on the defensive line include Kevin Lilly, Brian Bruner and Daniel Wallace.

Wichita State could have its first winning season in 10 years. At quarerback will be senior Prince McJunkins, the 1981 Missouri Valley Conference offensive player of the year. Coach Willie Jeffries has eight offensive and nine defensive starters back from last year's 4-6-1 team.

Third in the Big Eight poll was Missouri. Kansas got the other first-place vote and was forecast for a fourth-place finish. According to the poll, Oklahoma will run fifth, followed by Kansas State, Iowa State and Colorado.

Oklahoma would be in trouble if everything hinged on returning starters. On offense, the Sooners do not have anybody back who started all eleven games last fall.

"Right now, we have less talent, experience and strength on the offensive line than we ever had," said Coach Barry Switzer. "Hopefully, this year our defense will be able to carry our offense for a while.

THERE ARE eight defensive starters back, including all-league tackle Rick Bryan and linebackers Jackie Shipp and Thomas Benson. Switzer might ask for help from a pair of freshmen, running back Marcus Dupree and defensive end James Lee.

Kansas and Oklahoma State will field perhaps the best kickers in the conference, and maybe the country. Kansas punter Bucky Scribner led the league with an average of almost 44 yards a year ago, including 19 boots of more than 50 yards and 20 inside the enemy 20 yard-line. Oklahoma State's Larry Roach won two games outright for the Cowboys and set an NCAA freshman record by hitting 19 of 28 attempts.

NHL considers overtime in new basic agreement

TORONTO (AP) — There will be more free agency, better benefits for the "average player", at least four strike-free seasons and the possibility of overtime in the regular season as a result of a new basic agreement between the National Hockey League owners and players.

The NHL and its Players Association reached a new five-year agreement Tuesday, which NHLPA President Tony Esposito described as "not a greedy deal but a fair deal.

Esposito, NHLPA executive-director Alan Eagleson and league president John Ziegler were all smiles at a news conference following a players' meeting.

The contract is for five years, with the association and the league both holding an option to terminate at the end of the fourth year.

Eagleson said one of the main concerns of the association was the weaker teams in the league, such as the Washington Capitals.

"You might say all this is a catalyst to assist Washington," said Eagleson. 'We've done a lot for the average player, not for the stars or superstars."

The key to the months of wrangling was the question of equalization, the NHL's version of player compensation.

In a statement released following the meeting, Ziegler said:

"The cornerstone of this new agreement is a new system of equalization, which has been the subject of negotiations for the past three years. The highlights of the agreement show substantial changes in the present system, total free agency in many more situations, the elimination of a great deal of uncertainty in the system and a two-thirds guarantee for most contracts."

There are other items to be settled, but it is possible there will be overtime in the league this season.

Both Eagleson and Esposito said players have agreed to wave objections to overtime if agreement on other items such as increased meal money and training camp expenses can be reached.

Browns to defy NFL's shaking ban Thursday

MENTOR, Ohio (AP) — Despite the prospect of being fined, Cleveland Browns players voted Tuesday to shake hands with the Los Angeles Rams before the two teams play an exhibition game Thursday night in Cleveland.

The Browns met for 15 minutes on the practice field after Tuesday's afternoon workout at Lakeland Community College. By a show of hands, team members unanimously voted to make the handshake gesture as a show of solidarity for the players' union.

Browns owner Art Modell has said he will fine each player participating in the handshake $100. The Browns and Detroit Lions met at midfield and shook hands before an exhibition game last Saturday night won by the Browns 17-16.

"I am extremely encouraged that the team is in absolute, 100 percent agreement that we will make the handshake gesture Thursday night," quarterback Brian Sipe said. "I think our position as far as the union matter is quite clear. We support the Players' Association, and we are sincerely interested in having the Management Council meet us at the bargaining table."

Modell did not fine his players after the Lions game but warned that future handshakes would result in fines.

Ed Garvey threatens grid strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ed Garvey said Tuesday that selected strikes at this weekend's exhibition games might be called unless the National Football League reverses its decision to fine players for pregame handshakes.

Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, went to the National Labor Relations Board Tuesday to press for an injunction aganst fines levied last weekend.

The Washington Post and Los Angeles Times

Around the league, they say that, when Geoff Zahn gets ready to deliver the ball, first he puts a stamp on it. Fourth-class, because he doesn't really care when it gets there. Some nights, it's like dropping a note in a bottle and letting the tide take it.

Geoff doesn't exactly throw the ball, he just kind of lets go of it. It's like a letter addressed to "Occupant." It should have a note on it: "Please Forward in event addressee has moved."

"Some night," predicts ex-manager Bob Lemon, "He's gonna deliver the ball and, by the time it gets there, he's going to find the batter has been waived out of the league or traded." Someone wanted to know once if Zahn "doctored" the ball, and the batter said "I dunno. Are cobwebs legal?"

"It's like being bitten by a stuffed panda," a disgusted Lou Piniella once snapped after lunging for a third strike that hadn't gotten there yet but was due any moment. "Has he thrown it yet?" batters anxiously ask catcher Bob Boone. "Five minutes ago," Boone answers cheerfully. "It's just running a little late."

LATER THAN usual, that is. Costa Rican trains keep a better schedule than Geoff Zahn's pitches. His ball arrives with more backspin on it than a Nicklaus nine-iron to an elevated green. "I swear, the ball starts out, then backs up, then starts out again," a Red Sox slugger once complained.

Lots of pitchers throw change-ups. But you could hardly call what Geoff Zahn throws a "change-up." Because there's no change from the pitch before it. Except it may be even slower. The term "change-up" derives from the fact that most pitchers throw 99 percent hard curves and fastballs. For Zahn, it would be more accurate to call a fastball his "change." A batter may come into the dugout some night, throw his helmet and snarl, "He changed up on me, he threw me a fastball."

Some pitchers "change" off the fastball. Others "change" off the curve. Zahn changes off the change. "Some nights, I throw 10 straight changes in a row," he admits.

IF THERE'S anything a major league hitter hates it's a change-up, what we used to call in the schoolyards, a "slowball." "Every one of us gets here in the big leagues through our ability to hit the fastball," explains Bob Boone. "It's what separates us in the minds of the scouts. Not too many people in the world have the speed of bat and reflex to meet the good fastball. You have to be ready for it." So when a pitcher slows up on you, Boone explains, it's like a guy pushing against a door which suddenly gives way. You fall flat on your face.

"Most guys establish their fastballs and pitch off that," Zahn admits. "I establish the change-up and pitch off that." It infuriates the fooled hitters. "Throw the ball like a man!" they scream as they slam their bats into the ground in frustration after they pop it up or dribble it back to the pitcher's mound. Zahn smiles sweetly. "Lou Piniella has been screaming at me for four years now," he grins. "The more he screams, the slower I get."

That Geoffrey Clayton Zahn is throwing anything in the big leagues is a shocker to a lot of people. With his stuff, it's a little like being an officer in the Bank of England who can't add.

GEOFF, THE son of a Lutheran minister, was signed by the Dodgers originally. "They were looking for another Sandy Koufax at the time," ruefully explains Zahn. Zahn bore about as little resemblance to the grat Koufax as I do to Paul Newman. Koufax' idea of a change-up was anything under 100 miles-an-hour. "Mr. Campanis (Dodger vice president) told me I'd never have enough stuff to pitch in the big leagues," Zahn admits.

For a long while, Campanis looked like a shrewder career counselor than Zahn. Nine years after he had signed, Zahn had won exactly six Major League games, and had pitched exactly one complete game. It was like fighting a bull with a knife and a fork.

Zahn knew he needed a new pitch. He found it – Christianity. In 1972, in one of his (frequent) sojourns in the minor leagues, a roommate found him a book on how to pitch — the Bible. It didn't tell Geoff how to grip the ball, but how to grip his life. "Oh, I had the plastic smile, and I was good and kind and courteous to everyone. So long as I did that, God would say 'Nice going, Geoff.' But when I read the Bible, I saw that I was envious, rebellious, untruthful — I would say 'Nice game' to a fellow pitcher when I was really hoping he would get knocked out of the box – and not worthy of love at all."

Zahn's career hit rock bottom in 1976. He had an elbow operation, an ERA of 11.25 and his unconditional release when Gene Mauch, then of the Minnesota Twins, "phoned and took a chance on me."

ZAHN SHOWED up and went 12-14 at Minnesota. "Years and years of people telling me I couldn't pitch in the big leagues and here I was in a starting rotation," he marvels.

Geoff Zahn has been in double figures every year of his career since. He hasn't gotten any faster, just smarter. He's currently leading the California Angels' pitching staff with a 12-5 record, he is above .500 for his American League career (75-69), he has pitched eight complete games and two shutouts. He has hit several batters, but none of them knew it at the time, and he has struck out 56 batters. Striking out 56 batters with those floaters of his is, as I have said, like winning a U.S. Open with a bag without any woods or a one-iron in it, or winning a mile race with the gout.

The Angels might get to the World Series on a slow-boat to China, so to speak. Just don't ask Zahn to pass you the salt at dinner. Your food will get cold before it gets there.

G-Sox rip Dodgers as TL West tightens

By The Associated Press

Dave Stockstill drove home the eventual winning run with a solo homer, but it took a sterling defensive play by Tulsa outfielder Brett Benza for the Drillers to take a 5-4 Texas League baseball victory over the Shreveport Captains.

In other Texas League action Tuesday night, Midland edged El Paso, 6-5, Jackson slipped past Arkansas, 5-3, and Amarillo whipped San Antonio, 11-5.

The Amarillo Gold Sox clubbed 17 hits in an 11-5 victory over the San Antonio Dodgers.

Sid Bream had a two-run homer for San Antonio and teammate Tom Beyers had a solo homer.

Larry Brown, 4-7, was the winning pitcher. Dean Rennicke, 11-7, was the loser.

Stockstill's homer in the seventh gave Tulsa a 5-1 lead, but Shreveport rallied for three runs. The Drillers held a slim 5-4 lead when Benza made a sensational running catch of a long line drive at the wall for the final out in the eighth inning. Kelvin Torve's long line drive came with two men on base and Benza's catch prevented two and possibly three runs from scoring.

Hostetler homer nips Sox for Texas

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

On a hot August night, Dave Hostetler became a hero ... again.

The Rangers' rookie slugger continued his heroics this month by belting a 400-foot home run in the 11th inning Tuesday night, lifting Texas over the Chicago White Sox 4-3. It was the eighth homer in August and the 22nd of the season for Hostetler, who was promoted to the Rangers from the minors in June.

"That's the biggest thrill for me this season," said Hostetler, who sent a Dennis Lamp sinker "that didn't sink very far" over the centerfield wall. The loss was only the fourth in the last 19 games for Chicago.

"I was just trying to get the tying runs home," added the Texas first baseman. "But the ball jumped off my bat. All I wanted was a single."

There was only one way Hostetler could have been happier: if his hit had won the game for starter Dave Schmidt, who was married Monday and was within one pitch of his first major league shutout.

But not quite great enough as Mike Squires doubled home pinch-runner Ron LeFlore to tie it in the ninth.

The White Sox took the lead 3-1 in the top of the 11th when LeFlore singled home a run and Squires made good on a suicide squeeze bunt.

Angels 10, Red Sox 2

Luis Tiant pitched eight strong innings against his former teammates and was supported by five home runs — by Fred Lynn, Brian Downing, Don Baylor, Bobby Grich and Joe Ferguson.

A's 10, Brewers 6

Tony Armas' slammed a two-run homer after Rickey Henderson singled and stole his 110th base, eight off Lou Brock's major-league mark, to pace Oakland. Robin Yount had two homers for Milwaukee.

Royals 8, Yankees 4

Paul Splittorff earned his first win since June 20 and KC's Willies — Wilson and Aikens — each had three hits. Dave Winfield homered twice for New York.

Orioles 8, Twins 4

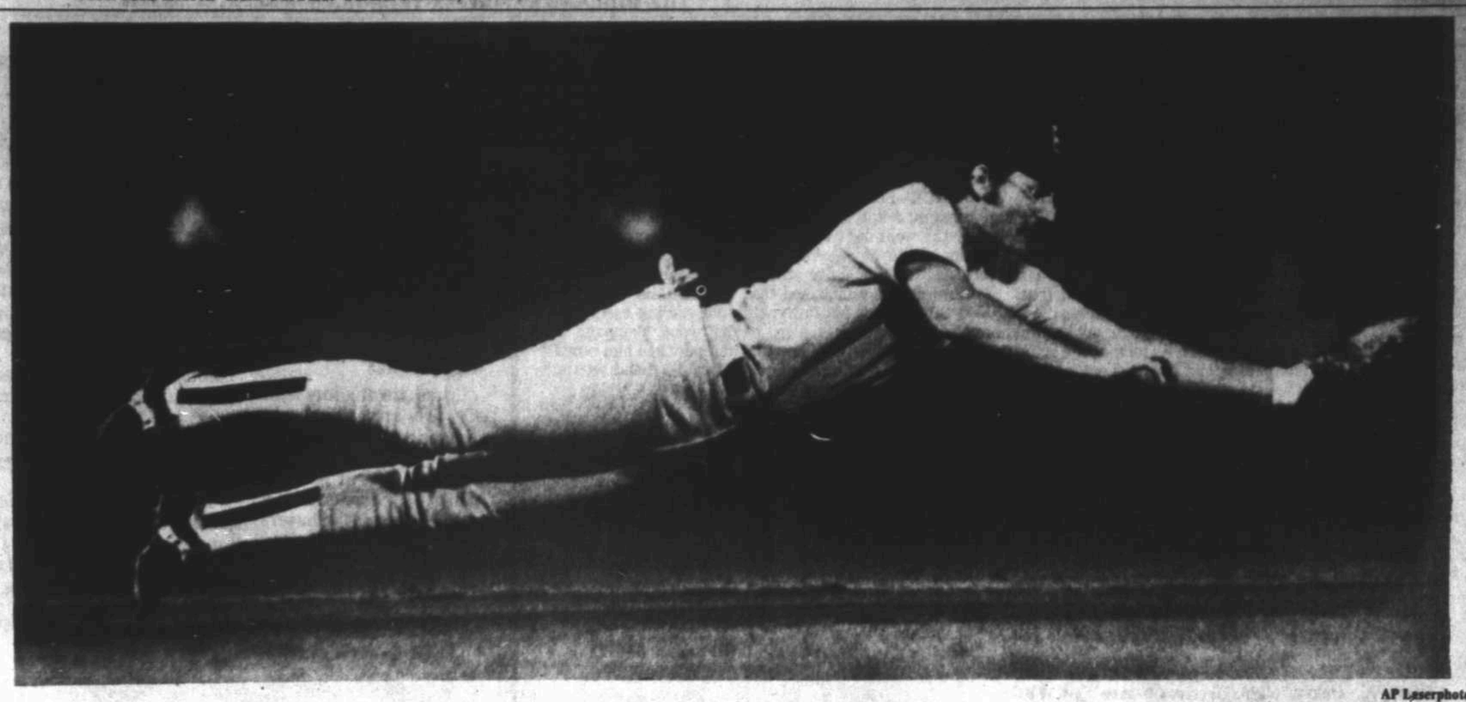

Eddie Murray, Cal Ripken Jr., Rich Dauer and Gary Roenicke homered — Rpken's went 440 feet — for Baltimore. Murray's three-run shot in the fifth put the Orioles on top to stay.

Indians 6-9, Blue Jays 5-5

Toronto's short stay out of the AL East cellar ended as Andre Thornton won the opener with an eighth-inning home run, then Chris Bando contibuted a three-run shot in the nightcap.

Mariners 5-2, Tigers 4-3

Dave Revering's three-run homer boosted Seattle to its victory, then Detroit came back as Chet Lemon homered twice.

Police seeking woman in Ayala case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Police want to question a woman in connection with a felony burglary charge filed against the World Boxing Association's No. 3-ranked junior middleweight contender, Tony Ayala Jr., a prosecutor says.

Assistant District Attorney Gail Dalrymple said Tuesday police had been unable to find the young woman who lived in the house where Ayala, who is scheduled to fight former champion Roberto Duran in November, was arrested late Sunday night.

Arresting officer Angel Coronado said in his offense report that the woman arrived after Ayala was taken into custody and "stated that arrested person (Ayala) had attempted to talk to her last Sunday as she was walking to the house and told her that he was the boxer and that he had just moved in the neighbordhood. (She) acknowledged and kept on walking."

Miss Dalrymple said the young woman referred to in the arrest report was one of two sisters of Jim Carpentier. Carpentier told officers he came home Sunday night, discovered someone had entered house through the garage, locked the garage door and notified police.

Carpentier had his telephone disconnected Tuesday and a robbery detective said he had been unable to locate the family for further questioning.

Coronado said that he found a plastic name tag with the name "Pam" on it in Ayala's right front pocket after spotting him coming from the bedroom area of the house.

The felony burglary charge against Ayala was followed Monday by a motion from the district attorney's office to revoke his probation and send him to prison for 10 years.

Ms. Dalrymple said that no date for a hearing had been set by State District Judge Mike Machado, but that Ayala had at least 10 days to prepare a defense.

Machado sentenced Ayala to 10 years probation in April 1980 after he pleaded guilty to beating up a girl. Ayala admitted attacking the 17-year-old girl in the women's restroom of a drive-in theater, striking her in the abdomen and rupturing her spleen.

Ayala claimed he was drunk at the time of the drive-in incident, and his attorney, Alan Brown, told reporters that Ayala was "drunk as hell" during the Sunday night incident.

Brown contends Ayala, 19, nicknamed "Torito (Little Bull)" because of his aggressive style, simply was intoxicated and wandered into the wrong house Sunday night. Ayala was free on $20,000 in bonds on the burglary and probation revocation charges.

season eight games behind the Mets, a case similar to the Braves. The Cubs, accustomed to unpressured second division finishes, simply folded under the humidity of the tepid pennant pace. Leo Durocher planned it beautifully. He played his regulars from the first game in the exhibition season and Chicago went into regular season at a full gallop. They never looked back until the Mets caught them in early September and then never caught up.

In 1978, the Boston Red Sox led the Yankees by 14½ at mid-season and the big debate on Boston talk shows was whether it would be better to play the Angels or Royals in the playoffs. The Yankees swept a four-game series in early September to grab first place, but before it was over, the Red Sox added a new wrinkle to pennant race collapses. They trailed by 3½ with two weeks to go, but rallied to tie the Yankees on the last day and force a playoff...which Boston lost.

HOWEVER, WHEN it comes to collapses, the granddaddy of them all is the 1951 National League pennant race, the Miracle of Coogan's Bluff, culminated by Bobby Thomson's Shot Heard Round the World.

The Brooklyn Dodgers won eight in a row to open an eight-game lead over the New York Giants in early July, prompting Dodger manager Charlie Dressen to announce, "We knocked them out, they'll never bother us again."

After a streak of 17 wins in 20 games, the Dodgers led by 13½ on Aug.11. The next day the Giants launched a 16-game winning streak and by late August the Dodgers' lead had dwindled to five. The Dodgers still led by 4½ with seven games to go, but Larry Jansen 5-hit the Braves, 3-2, while the Phils routed Preacher Roe, 6-1, on the final day of the season and the race ended in a tie, forcing the fabled playoff.

Broken hand won't stop Johnny

AUTO RACING—Johnny Rutherford, three-time Indianapolis 500 champion, plans to drive in the AirCal 500 later this month despite having to wear a splint on his broken right hand. Rutherford said the injury to his gear-shifting hand, suffered in a high-speed crash last Sunday at the Pocono 500, will not prevent him from driving in the Aug. 29 race at Riverside International Raceway. "I went to the doctor today and he put a splint on the right hand instead of a cast. As long as the splint protects the hand from being bumped, it shouldn't be a problem."

Looking back on the crash last weekend, when a tire burst and threw his car into the wall of the 2.5-mile trioval at Long Pond, Pa., Rutherford said, "All things considered, I'm pretty lucky." Car owner Jim Hall said he hasn't decided yet what to do about fielding a car for Rutherford in the Riverside race, since the Pennzoil March was destroyed in the crash at Pocono...

FOOTBALL—Mike Livingston, Kansas City quarterback for 11 years, became the first player to sign with the Boston USFL franchis. Livingston, 36, played college football with Southern Methodist University, was the club's choice to direct the offense, although there had been reports the team would sign Greg Landry...

BOXING—Heavyweight Gerrie Coetzee and WBC junior lightweight champion Rafael "Bazooka" Limon will headline boxing cards Sept. 11 and 18 respectively as part of ESPN's new big-name boxing series, "Saturday night at the Fights." Coetzee, 27-3, will meet Stan Ward, Sacramento, 15-3-2, and Limon, 45-11-2, faces Chung-Il Choi of Korea, who is 14-1 with 13 knockouts...

BASEBALL— Wayne Cage homered as the Hunkyu Tigers defeated the league-leading Nippon Ham Fighters 6-2 in Japanese League baseball...

TRACK—British track star Sebastian Coe and Ralph Baumann, a surfing instructor, who exchanged blows over the weekend have each given their versions of the wrangle and now have three months to lodge assault charges, a Swiss judge said in Interlocken. During the hearing it was established that Coe, thinking Baumann was threatening his father, hit the surfing instructor over the head with a piece of driftwood. Baumann in turn wrestled Coe to the ground and punched him repeatedly in the face. Baumann suffered a head wound requiring five stitches...

GENERAL—Bill Roeder, 60, former sports writer who became a senior editor at Newsweek, died of a heart attack. Roeder was highly regarded for his coverage of the Brooklyn Dodgers during his career at the New York World Telegram & Sun from 1944-1960. He later becoming a news feature columnist. Santamore decisions Shavers

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Walter Santamore used body punches against a tiring Earnie Shavers win a unanimous decision in their 10-round heavyweight fight.

"I was sticking him with the jab and the body punching wore him out," said a calm Santamore after the fight in Tuesday night. "I expected a brawl," he said, "Shavers did a lot of head-butting and holding."

Pitcher quits after whiff

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Mark Lee has struck a blow — or, rather, struck a man out — for former employees everywhere who blame their dismissals on the politics of the organizations that dismissed them.

Lee, a baseball pitcher for the minor-league Portland Beavers who was told he was no longer wanted, got back at his bosses Monday before they got rid of him.

After striking out Bob Skube of the Vancouver Canadians in a Pacific Coast League game in which Portland's 8-3 victory was assured, Lee called manager Tom Trebelhorn to the mound.

Moments later, he walked from the mound toward the Portland Civic Stadium exit down the right field line.

First he threw the ball back to the infield. Then he threw his cap. Finally, he took his uniform top off, heaving it high in the air.

"I chose the way I wanted to go out," a red-eyed Lee said after the game. "I always wanted to strike out the last man I faced in pro ball."

Lee, Portland's most successful reliever since Manny Sarmiento was called to the parent Pittsburgh Pirates early in the season, is a former San Diego Padre major leaguer. He led the Beavers in saves last season.

But he had been told he was being "designated for reassignment." Technically, that meant that the PCL team was trying to make a deal for him but that, if it couldn't, Lee would be released.

Lee was then given the option of sitting out the Canadians game or staying in uniform. He stayed.

Lee went into the game in the ninth inning, following pitchers Lee Tunnell and Dennis Miscik. Portland led by five runs. Lee retired the first man he faced on a fly to right field. Next came Skube. Then came retirement.

"I've always been known to do some crazy things," Lee said. "For so long in this game I've been told what I can't do. They always tell you that.

"I never told anyone I was going to do it. But I told Butch (reliever Butch Edge) to get ready in the bullpen. I wouldn't have done it in a close game but we had it won.

New Orleans Saints seek permission to go Snake hunting

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The New Orleans Saints have asked the National Football League for permission to talk to former Oakland and Houston quarterback Kenny Stabler, a Mississippi newspaper reported Tuesday.

The Sun of Biloxi-Gulfport said NFL public relations director Jim Heffernan confirmed Monday that Saints officials asked and got permission to talk to Stabler.

Rumors that the Saints are looking for an experienced quarterback have abounded since second-year pro Dave Wilson was lost to the team for the year after knee surgery earlier this week, the Sun said.

Most of the rumors centered on Stabler and Dan Pastorini, two veteran quarterbacks who played for Saints head coach Bum Phillips when he was at Houston.

Stabler, 36, did not report to the Oilers training camp this year and is in a bureaucractic limbo because of alleged relationships with known gamblers.

However, NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle has been investigating charges of Stabler's dealings with known gamblers and has not reached a decision on the player's eligibility to rejoin the league, the Sun reported.

"The commissioner has not reached a decision following a three week investigation of Stabler and the charges of his relationships with known gamblers," said Heffernan.

"And the commissioner will not approve a contract until he makes that decision."

Under league rules, Stabler could not report to the Saints until he has signed a contract.

The Sun said Pat Peppler, director of player negotiations for the Saints, acknowledged that the team has talked with Stabler and his agent, Henry Pitts.

"Yes, we have talked with Pitts and Bum talked with Kenny," Peppler said. "We have to make sure he's interested. Yes, he naturally wants to look into it."

Peppler added that everything was on hold awaiting a decision from the commissioner's office on Stabler's eligibility. "They told us he would make a decision as soon as possible," Peppler said. "They told us he was aware of the timeliness of the thing."

State law decimates fishermen

PORT MANSFIELD, Texas (AP) — A state law enacted to protect the dwindling populations of trout and redfish in the Gulf of Mexico has bolstered the number of fish, but shrunk the ranks of fishermen, state officials say.

Fishermen in Port Mansfield, many of whom have given up fishing for carpentry or painting, say the law approved by the Legislature in September was not needed.

"The law was passed for the fat cats, the sport fishermen," said Augie Monjaras, a local fisherman. Monjaras contends sport fishermen lobbied for the law so they would have exclusive fishing rights to redfish and trout.

"There wasn't a shortage of redfish. As far as I'm concerned, the bay was overrun with redfish and trout," Monjaras said. "But I don't think we will ever be allowed to catch redfish commercially again."

The law makes it a misdemeanor offense for restaurants and fish wholesalers to buy redfish and trout from Texas commercial fishermen, although they can buy redfish from out of state. Fishermen may not catch more than 10 redfish or 20 trout a day.

Supporters of the law say it has increased fish populations that were endangered by commercial catches.

Data from the wildlife commission shows that commercial fishermen caught about 2 million pounds of redfish in Texas waters in 1974 and 1975. By 1979, that figure dropped to just over 820,000 pounds.

Recent figures gathered by the commission show that redfish and trout populations have increased about 20 percent, based on the number of fish caught per hour, since the imposition of the ban, said Gary Matlock, assistant chief of coastal fisheries.

"There are a lot more redfish out there now. You can see them in the water," said Longview sport fisherman Victor Norman. "And we are catching a little bigger fish. I supported the ban, but the only thing I have against it is that it did throw a lot of commercial fishermen out of work."

"The only choices we have now are the drum, crabbing and flounder ing," said Ben Carrier, a Port Mansfield fisherman. "And you can't make much of a living doing that."

Carrier said his income fell from $700 a week to $200 or less since the ban was imposed. In Port Mansfield, the number of commercial fishermen has dropped from 40 to less than a dozen, Monjaras said.

"At first, some fishermen tried to sell the reds on the black market, but I don't think much of that goes on now," he said.

U.S. court upholds conviction

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court upheld the murder convictions of former Army Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald in the 1970 mutilation deaths of his wife and young daughters at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Monday there was insufficient evidence to support MacDonald's claim that drug-crazed hippies broke into his home and committed the murders while chanting, "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs." MacDonald's lawyer, Stephen Siegel, said he expects to try to get a rehearing.

MacDonald, 38, a former Green Beret doctor, was convicted in 1979 of killing his pregnant wife, Colette, 24, and daughters, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 3. He was sentenced to three life terms in prison.

In 1980 the 4th Circuit had voided the convictions, ruling that MacDonald had not received a speedy trial, but on March 31, 1982, the U.S. Supreme Court reversed that decision.

Viewers protest Snyder

NEW YORK (AP) — Protesting fans to take to the street as national television celebrity muscles aside local news favorites.

Film — and controversy — at 11.

That's the big television story in New York City, where the friends of local news anchors Ernie Anastos and Rose Ann Scamardella, dismayed by plans to replace their favorites with former "Tomorrow" show host Tom Snyder, say they will march on WABC studios.

"Snyder may be fine as a talk show host, but as a newsperson? Forget about it!" insisted Nick Patti, a 33-year-old nursing training supervisor and loyal viewer of Channel 7's "Eyewitness News," the city's top-rated local news.

"People can't believe it, they freak out," he said Monday. "They say, 'Isn't it terrible about Rose Ann? What's going to happen to Ernie?' We just call them Rose Ann and Ernie."

Patti was riding home in Queens on the subway train when he read of plans to replace Anastos and Mrs. Scamardella.

"I screamed out loud," he recalled. "I said to the guy next to me, 'They've got to be kidding!'"

But WABC confirmed that Snyder, who also has anchored evening news shows for NBC affiliates in New York and Los Angeles, would replace Anastos and Mrs. Scamardella on the 11 p.m. news later this month.

Although the station wants Mrs. Scamardella to remain on its 5 o'clock news, she has been out sick recently and unavailable for comment. Anastos, meanwhile, is vacationing in Massachusetts while his agent talks about a new contract.

WABC's offer is an opportunity for Snyder to return to TV regularly. His late-night "Tomorrow: Coast to Coast" was canceled eight months ago after ratings fell and he had a highly publicized feud with his co-host, Rona Barrett.

The TV host, whose cigarette puffing and elaborate gestures were lampooned on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," reportedly will be paid at least $700,000 a year in his new job.

"For a long time I've wanted to join the Eyewitness News team,...I look forward to a most rewarding and long-term relationship," Snyder said after the announcement earlier this month.

But fans of Anastos and Mrs. Scamardella hope otherwise.

A large part of the pair's appeal has rested in their identification with the city's ethnic families. Mrs. Scamardella is an Italian-American in her 40s who lives in Brooklyn and has one child; Anastos, a 36-year-old Greek-American, has two children.

Mrs. Scamardella won Patti's heart several years ago when Patti was trying unsuccessfully to block destruction of an ornate movie theater in the Astoria section of Queens, where he lives.

Magazine suspends publication

NEW YORK (AP) — The Saturday Review, a magazine of literature and the arts for most of its 58 years, has suspended publication and furloughed its staff, citing continuing financial losses.

The prestigious magazine, which fell on hard times and was brought back from bankruptcy in 1973, reportedly had been losing $1 million a year since 1979. Its last issue sold 480,000 copies.

The suspension was announced Monday by owner Robert I. Weingarten.

For more than half its life, the magazine was identified closely with Norman Cousins, who was named editor in 1940 and held that position for 36 of the next 38 years.

New cruiser too heavy to keep up with carriers

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has loaded down its new guided missile cruiser with so many weapons that it won't be able to move as fast as the aircraft carriers it's supposed to protect, House investigators say.

The Ticonderoga, the first of the Aegis-class cruisers, can do 30 knots, compared to the 34 knots that is standard cruising speed for carrier battle groups, the probe found.

"It's been loaded down with every imaginable system," said one congressional source who asked to remain anonymous. "There's an awful lot being tacked on."

The centerpiece of the Aegis cruisers is an air defense system, which is designed to defend simultaneously against several missiles.

As the Ticonderoga was built, the Navy added weapons systems, including several types of radar and sonar, torpedoes, depth charges, anti-submarine helicopters and guns, along with the necessary support equipment for each system.

That raised the weight from 8,900 tons to 9,600 tons, including the additional ballast that had to be added to the hull. The extra weight slows the ship down, the investigators found.

The Navy acknowledged Tuesday that the Ticonderoga is heavier than designed, but said it is happy with the vessel.

"Although the ship has grown in weight, it is not overweight and it is not unstable," said a Navy statement. It added the Ticonderoga, which is scheduled to be delivered next January, met "all its objectives, including speed" in recent sea trials.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, appearing before the House Appropriations defense subcommittee, also took issue with the critics, saying the complaints are "completely wrong."

But an investigation, done by Appropriations Committee staffers at the request of Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., said the addition of so many new weapons systems has slowed the vessel down and may have made it too top-heavy.

The Ticonderoga is the first of the 18 to 24 guided missile cruisers the Reagan administration and the Pentagon want to buy to protect aircraft carriers against new "smart" weapons like cruise missiles that are guided by computer maps.

But the Ticonderoga "will be ineffectual" in trying to perform its jobs unless the Navy eliminates some of the weapons systems, the House investigators found.

In the budget for the current fiscal year, there is $3 billion to buy three guided missile cruisers and another $3.1 billion is in next year's budget for three more.

AP Laserphoto

House Appropriations Committee investigators say the Ticonderoga, first of the Navy's Aegis class guided missile cruisers, is so overweight it cannot keep up with the carriers it is supposed to protect and carries so much extra equipment it is unstable. The Navy acknowledged that the Ticonderoga is heavier than designed, but says it is happy with the ship.

Senate gives go ahead for $178 billion defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $178 billion defense bill is approaching its final hurdle to enactment after surviving a challenge by senators who said it is too big and contains the wrong programs.

Disregarding those complaints Tuesday, the Senate passed the compromise measure, 77-21, and sent it to the House, where a vote could come as early as today. The legislation then would go to President Reagan for his signature.

The bill was completed Monday in a conference by members of the congressional Armed Services committees after the House and Senate passed different versions of the legislation.

It gives the go-ahead for virtually all of the programs the Pentagon sought for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. However, the appropriations committees that later will vote the actual money for those weapons and activities are not likely to match the authorized dollar amounts.

Last-minute arguments on the Senate floor were divided among opponents who complained of the high price of the bill at a time when other federal spending is being curtailed, those who dislike the emphasis on sophisticated hardware, and those with a grievance against a particular program.

Several said the measure exceeded congressionally set budget targets by up to $3 billion and that it should be sent back to conference for cutting.

But Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the Budget Committee chairman, praised the bill. Unlike some other authorization panels, he said, the Armed Services committees closely figure the costs of the policies and programs they oversee and "have not abdicated policy-making to the appropriators."

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., co-chairman of the congressional Military Reform Caucus and an advocate of cheaper, simpler armaments, contended that the bill "contains very little funding for ships, planes or weapons that will work in combat. It contains a great deal of funds for ships, planes and weapons that probably won't work."

Of the individual items in the bill, the MX inter-continental missile came in for the greatest criticism. Several speakers said it seemed senseless to commit nearly $1 billion to build five of the weapons when it has not been decided how to base them.

The Pentagon currently is leaning toward deploying the MX in a "dense pack" of underground silos that probably would be protected against enemy attack by a system of defensive missiles.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and other top Pentagon officials provided the House defense appropriations subcommittee with a closed-door briefing on the arrangement Tuesday.

Army proposal calls for increasing number of National Guard units

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is proposing the first increase in the number of National Guard divisions since the late 1960s as a way to strengthen its fighting ability early in a war.

The proposal, under study by senior Pentagon officials, calls for organizing two additional guard divisions in 1984-85 to provide what the Army terms "minimum essential reinforcements to sustain combat" until total mobilization, including a revived draft.

This would give the Army 10 guard divisions to back up the 16 regular divisions in the event of a war emergency.

In 1967, the Pentagon disbanded 15 understrength guard divisions. Since then, the National Guard has had only eight divisions, and even these had trouble maintaining their strength in the post-Vietnam period.

But the Army's latest move suggests a growing confidence in the ability of the guard to fulfill its wartime mission.

Army officials say they are not yet ready to decide where to locate the two additional guard divisions, if they are finally approved. They probably would be built around existing independent brigades.

The guard hit bottom in 1978 in part because many young men who joined during the Vietnam war to avoid active duty ended their enlistments and did not sign up again.

However, guard recruiting has been on the rise, spurred by bonuses and the economic slump.

Even during the guard's low period, some of its units managed to keep up their strength and were assigned important roles in conjunction with the regular Army.

Also, the National Guard has chronically lacked up-to-date equipment.

The Pentagon has been providing the guard with newer equipment in recent years, but it still trails the regular forces in the quality of its weapons and other gear.

According to the most recent Pentagon report, the Army guard totaled 402,500 men and women, about 50,500 below wartime levels. Guard officials say they can reach full wartime strength by fiscal 1986.

Army planners for some time also have hoped to increase the number of regular divisions, but the budget crunch has forced the Army to forgo such hopes for additional regular units for the next few years.

It costs a great deal more to maintain a regular Army division than a guard unit made up of part-time soldiers.

Brazilian president wants rigorous censorship

By BRYNA BRENNAN

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The recent restructuring of the Superior Censorship Council has raised fears that military-government censors may be carrying out their task with considerably more rigor.

It also is causing critics to question the promise of President Joao Figueiredo to restore civilian rule in Brazil for the first time since 1964.

Figueiredo signed a decree in June that ousted the liberal side of the censorship council, replacing it with more conservative government supporters.

Earlier in the year the president called for a crackdown on obscenity and pornography. The Federal Police banned the film "Pra Frente Brasil" (Onward Brazil), which depicts scenes of police torture in the early 1970s. Censors also cut television shows and edited music.

"They're trying to make the censorship more rigorous," said Roberto Pompeu de Souza, the council's representative from the Brazilian Press Association. "But we are tired of a dictatorship and this doesn't permit a return."

Pompeu de Souza added in an interview that Figueiredo changed the composition of the council because it had become "autonomous."

"The government doesn't want to lose power," he said.

Federal Police censors review all films, music, plays and television and radio programs. Under the old law, the Superior Censorship Council was the court of appeals, and in a sense the court of last resort.

Under the new law, anyone — including the Federal Police — can appeal the Superior Censorship Council's decision to the justice minister if the vote by the 16-member council is not unanimous.

"This is crazy," said Pompeu de Souza. Another journalist, who asked not to be identified, called the change "the end of the council."

Germans put heat on terrorists

Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Following an outbreak of terrorist violence in West Germany in 1978, the Bundes Kriminalant — the super police unit dealing with terrorism — used computers to analyze tens of thousands of electricity bills in several large cities.

The move, by pointing to dwellings where lights and cooking stoves were turned on only intermittently, led to the discovery of four terrorist hideouts and a dozen arrests.

The action formed one link in a chain of events that has allowed the German authorities successfully to dismantle the main leftist terror groups — the Baader-Meinhof gang, the Red Army Faction and the Revolutionary Cells — which only a few years ago appeared to threaten the country's stability.

The epicenter of international terrorism now seems to have switched to France. Following the past month's rash of terrorist outrages here, including the murders of six people in a Paris restaurant machine gun attack, the French government is closely studying German anti-terrorist tactics. It is expected to model its promised intensified crackdown on terrorists on the experience across the Rhine which, according to the Bundes Kriminalant's boss, Horst Herold, has resulted in the imprisonment or killing of 80 per cent of the terrorists operating there.

Arnie Huberman, who's in charge of The Entertainment Channel, a new cable television service, looks over an episode of "The Animal Express" in the service's New York offices earlier this week. The Rockefeller Center Cable Inc. and RCA Cable Inc. will use many British shows on their new channel, but the most familiar of the group, the British Broadcasting Corp., won't be the only supplier. The Entertainment Channel's programming will be a 24-hour-a-day mix of theater, TV drama, comedy, action-adventure, movies and family entertainment.

British shows mix well on new cable channel

'Entertainment Channel' offers BBC, more

NEW YORK (AP) — To many American television viewers, the British Broadcasting Corp. means prime-time soap opera played in a dignified setting — classic drama like "Vanity Fair," "The Golden Bowl" and "Pride and Prejudice" imported for the Public Broadcasting Service.

So there were those who suggested the Entertainment Channel had dealt public TV a staggering blow when the new pay-cable service bought an option on the entire BBC product — more than 5,000 hours of programming a year.

Indeed, PBS deals as frequently these days with independent British producers — Granada, London Weekend, Thames — as it does with the BBC. The "Masterpiece Theater" lineup for the 1982-83 season, in fact, includes four BBC productions and three miniseries from other British producers.

What's more important, the Entertainment Channel appears to be more interested in a variety of BBC productions, most of them wholly unfamiliar in content and character, though not necessarily style, to television audiences in this country. And that may be the best TV news in some time.

The Entertainment Channel, launched June 4, has begun distribution of four action-adventure serials new to the medium in this country.

A sampling of an episode from each of the series suggests a private-eye program, "Shoestring," may be the best of the lot, though two — "Bergerac" and "The Assassination Run" — are marvelously and uniquely atmospheric.

In short, subscribers to the Entertainment Channel, particularly those fond of American-made series like "The Rockford Files" and "Hawaii Five-0," are in for a treat.

Eddie Shoestring, played by Trevor Eve, is an appealing and not-too-tough detective with feelings and a sense of humor. "I used to be like you," he tells an adversary, "executive zombie...computers. I smashed one up and they hauled me off."

In the premiere episode, a well-told story with enough action and a twist at the end, Eddie is hired by the manager of Radio West to check on the background of a talk-show host, David Carn. It seems a young prostitute has driven Carn's Rolls to the beach and killed herself with a mix of pills and alcohol.

Eddie does what he's paid to do with "charm, panache and a bit of bribery" — his own words — leaving each person he interviews with a "lightning portrait," a quickly drawn caricature of the subject.

Jim Bergerac, meanwhile, is a reformed alcoholic who solves crimes for a living on the Channel Island of Jersey. The picturesque setting is particularly important to "Bergerac," a standard cop-and-robber show that stars John Nettles and Cecile Paoli.

In "The Assassination Run," Mark Fraser, played by Malcolm Stoddard, is trout fishing in Scotland when his wife is kidnapped by the Red Action Brigade. Fraser, once an "eliminator" for the British Secret Service, is ordered by the terrorists to Spain. The kidnappers want Fraser to kill a German publisher, and he wants his wife back — unharmed.

"The Assassination Run," unlike "Shoestring" and "Bergerac," which are shown in self-contained installments, is a continuing three-part series. The first episode ends with the British, the Russians and Fraser bumping into one another on the trail of the terrorists through the appealing Spanish countryside.

For those wondering when pay TV is going to offer something really new, the Entertainment Channel seems to have the right idea, at least in its selection of action shows from the BBC.

Soap star's sex symbol status more than looks

By DOROTHY TRELOAR
Hearst Feature Service

HOLLYWOOD — One of the main reasons NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives" has been between first and fourth in the ratings is the popularity of the handsome, multi-talented soaperstar Lane Caudell, who plays Woody King.

Caudell not only is required to act, but also writes and performs his own songs on the daytime drama. The response has set the network buzzing with so much excitement that they've set up his own fan club — to be featured in future episodes — to handle the influx of mail.

I stared at this young actor — he's 29, looks 25 — who is so good-looking, he's a cross between a young Tyrone Power and Robert Taylor, except he's taller. I mentioned his resemblance when we met for coffee.

"Strange you would say that," Caudell grinned with his sexy blue-green eyes. "When designer Michael Novarese was dressing me for a movie, 'The Archer and the Sorceress,' he told me that I reminded him of the many years he designed costumes for Tyrone's pictures. I was flattered, because actors like Power, Taylor, John Garfield and Gary Cooper are my idols. I would love to have been around during their time."

Though those were really glorious and glamorous times in Hollywood, they no longer exist. There are no Harry Cohns, L.B. Mayers and Irving Thalbergs featuring their big stars. Studios now throw a bash after the wrap of a picture and about once a year our industry honors one of its legends.

"I'm not into that type of Hollywood scene, anyway," says Caudell. "To get away from all the smog and traffic, I bought a home in 'Canyon Country,' but close enough to the city so that it's no problem getting to the studio."

Does he share his home with anyone?

What about lady friends? This beautiful hunk of man must have them standing in line.

"I have a girlfriend," he admits shyly. "She's a lovely actress and model and does a lot of commercials; she also helps with Chuck. But I'd rather not give her name. That's another part of my life."

His life began in Asheboro, N.C., and at an early age music became his goal. He taught himself to play the guitar, piano, bass and drums, became a member of a band and began writing songs at 16.

Caudell's first composition so impressed Dick Clark that he signed both singer and song for his production, "Killers Three." Caudell's musical talents then led him on an extensive tour of Europe with his own band. His credits as actor, composer, singer and film scorer are endless.

Skydiver sports extra feat — mile-high horseback mounting

MASON CITY, Iowa (AP) — Try mounting a horse from a mile high.

The skydiver jumped out of a small airplane Saturday and parachuted 5,500 feet onto a 13-year-old horse named Pinto Bean at the Wisky River Rodeo.

Some witnesses said it appeared the horse either moved, or Templeton was wide of the mark, and that he went tumbling off the animal.

But rodeo promoter Larry Wiskus insisted that Templeton came down on the horse's back, a feat which should land him in the Guinness Book of World Records.

About 3,000 spectators gave the skydiver a loud round of applause.

"They just went nuts," Wiskus said. "The announcer had asked for silence, and after he landed, I looked up and everyone's mouth was open. Then they all went crazy."

The idea for skydiving onto the back of the horse came from Jack Kingery of Monrose, whose Snowbird Rodeos Co. furnishes animals for rodeo events.

Show asks for blood

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A lot of blood has been shed on the hospital set of the hit CBS series "M*A*S*A" at 20th Century-Fox Studios, and now they're asking for even more.

The studio, in conjunction with the American Red Cross, is staging a blood drive on Saturday, Aug. 21.

Persons donating a pint of blood will be permitted to visit the set, which is normally closed to visitors. Donors must be over 17 years and weigh more than 110 pounds.

MISD trustees approve tax rate, $43 million budget

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A $43 million budget, up over $6 million from the previous year's budget, was approved Tuesday by trustees of the Midland Independent School District following final budget hearings during their regular board meeting.

Also approved during the meeting were the 1982-83 tax rate, revisions on procedures for teacher communication with parents of students with unsatifactory grades and on the board's policy for amending rules, and a request by the Midland High Booster Club to study renovation and possible additions to the athletic facilities at Memorial Stadium.

More than $1 million of the budget increase was directly related to the $9.475 million bond issue for construction of additional classrooms and two elementary schools, passed by voters April 4.

In addition, inflation, higher utility costs, record growth in student population and higher teacher salaries were attributed to the increase which resulted in a total budget of $43,157,569.

A PROPOSED TAX rate of 77.5 cents per $100 valuation, reflecting an increase of 10.7 percent or 7.5 cents over the tax rate for the 1981-82 year, also was approved. According to business manager Don Furgeson, about 65.25 cents is to be used for maintenance and operation costs, while the remaining 12.25 cents will be utilized for debt service.

A loss in mineral values on the tax rolls contributed to the increase in the tax rate which, by state law, remained within a 3 percent increase in the effective tax rate set the previous year.

According to Becky Ferguson, MISD communications coordinator, the owner of a house valued at $50,000 will pay an additional $34 in school taxes per year. To the owner of a $100,000 house, the increase will be $71 per year.

Mrs. Ferguson pointed out that percentages of state and federal contributions to the budget are down this year as they have been for the past five years. While 55.96 percent of the budget last year was locally funded, the 1982-83 budget requires 58.31 percent to be generated locally, she explained.

The total budget consists of a $37,841,605 operating budget, which includes $194,706 from the 1981-82 fund balances for operating expenditures not offset by the increase in the tax rate, plus $3,925,668 for debt service and $1,390,296 for federal funded programs.

According to the July 1982 report by the Texas Research League, while the MISD administrative cost per student is 23 percent below the state average, the total spent per pupil in average daily attendance is significantly higher, Mrs. Ferguson said. The district budget includes $2,848 per pupil.

Trustees also approved an amendment to the procedure for teacher communication with parents of students making unsatisfactory grades. According to the amended policy, teachers of students who are failing, whose achievement has dropped two letter grades or whose achievement has changed from passing to failing, shall preferably notify the parent by phone or conference. As a last resort, a letter may be sent to the parent.

THE PROCESS MUST be implemented as soon as the teacher is aware of the student's situation, and no later than at the end of the second six-week reporting period during each semester.

According to Dr. Duane H. Moore, assistant superintendent of instructional services, he and principals who studied the process decided on the two-letter drop in grades due to "a large number of students who drop back and forth between one letter."

While trustees agreed on the importance of personal communication between teachers and parents via the phone or conferences, Alma Marshall, a teacher at Goddard Junior High School, questioned a mandated policy pertaining to how the parents are notified.

"I think it should be left up to us at some degree whether we call them or contact them through letters," she told trustees. If a teacher has 12 students who fall under the unsatisfactory grades, which is more likely at secondary levels where instructors teach over 100 students a day than at the elementary grades, and with an average of five minutes for each phone call, an hour of the teacher's personal time will be spent, she said. She also pointed out that it could take several calls to reach the parent.

At Goddard, she said sheets indicating the students' grades are sent home on a regular basis. The sheets are signed by parents and returned to school. Miss Marshall requested that teachers and individual campuses be allowed to decide on specific communication procedures.

The administrative recommendation was approved by trustees with Ron Britton opposing. Britton said he felt that while calling parents should be done, all communication also should be conducted in writing so that a teacher can prove he or she made an effort to contact the parent.

A REVISION TO THE policy allowing trustees to amend policies, rules and regulations also was approved by trustees. Under the previous policy, trusteescould revise policies with a majority vote of the board at any meeting.

The revision calls for approval by a majority of four board members after a draft of the policy has appeared on the board's agenda for a first reading and has had a second and final reading at the next regularly scheduled meeting. In case of an emergency, the board may amend policies with a majority vote of four members.

A request by members of the Midland High Booster Club to build an additional room to the field house at Memorial Stadium to be used as a classroom area for football and a scratch room for track was met by a hesitant board.

Although the original request was for total construction cost of the 27x 30 foot building to be assumed by the booster club, the board was asked to consider footing bills for electrical lighting and roofing.

Trustees, unwilling to become involved in giving something to one high school and later having to reciprocate at the other school as they have in the past, asked MISD athletic director Gil Bartosh to comment on the need at the MHS facility.

According to Bartosh, Midland High and Lee High have similar dressing facilities although the MHS training room is about 1,300 square feet larger than Lee High's. Bartosh suggested possibly replacing the wooden lockers at MHS, which take up more room and run around the sides of the room and down the middle, with steel lockers, such as those at LHS, which are placed along the walls. This way, he explained, the center of the room could be used for films.

TRUSTEES ASKED representatives of the booster club to work with Bartosh and his assistants in studying the situation.

A formula for computing grade point averages of students who received grades under the quarter system and under the semester system, which was introduced in the 1980-81 school year, was adopted by the board. Students under the quarter system received three grades per course per nine-month year while those under the semester system received only two grades per course per nine-month year. Because grades received under the quarter system are graded more heavily, the averaging of five grades given in a two-year period covering both quarter and semester systems is not an accurate reflection of a student's performance. The board approved a formula for the averaging of grades earned under both systems which consists of multiplying the number of courses taken under the quarter system and the grade point average earned under the quarter system by two-thirds. That figure then is added to the semester courses for averaging.

Bids from 10 representatives for the purchase of 28 used district vehicles were accepted at a total cost of $12,711.98. Trustees also approved requests from St. Stephen's Catholic Church and Word of Life for use of school facilities for church services.

The appointment of Frank Marlow, Rusk Elementary School principal, to director of elementary education, was approved by the board. Five of six transfer request appeals also were approved.

Hubbub rages over Soviets' use of beaches

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department is attempting to smooth over a diplomatic hubbub involving the United States, the Soviet Union and another emerging superpower — the city of Glen Cove, N.Y.

At issue are Glen Cove's pristine beaches.

Under Secretary of State-designate William Schneider was to meet today with Mayor Alan Parente of Glen Cove in search of what the Reagan administration describes as an amicable solution to the three-way dispute.

The Glen Cove City Council, overriding State Department objections, recently reaffirmed a May decision to bar Soviet diplomats from using city recreational facilities.

It contended that the Soviets have been using a Russian-owned, 49-room mansion in Glen Cove to eavesdrop on telephone communications at Long Island defense industries.

The State Department opposed the City Council move, arguing that Glen Cove should not meddle in foreign affairs and warning that the Russians might take retaliatory action against Americans in Moscow.

That premonition was borne out two weeks ago when the Soviets barred U.S. diplomats from using a beach near Moscow which is frequented by foreign envoys.

Before the Soviet move, the State Department found itself in the unusual position of taking sides with the Soviet Union against Glen Cove, a community of 27,000 people.

But when Moscow retaliated, the department assailed the Soviets, declaring that Moscow's actions were uncalled for because, it said, the United States was making every effort to have the prohibition by Glen Cove authorities lifted.

At this point, two weeks after the State Department statement, each of the three parties to the conflict is angry with the two others.

Parente has said that the council's position is a matter of principle, but he has indicated that a dose of federal aid could prompt Glen Cove to back down.

This would come about if Washington were to agree to pick up the annual $100,000 tax bill on the tax-exempt property owned by the Russians, he and the council have said.

But the administration has other ideas. The Justice Department, at the request of the State Department, is considering taking legal action against Glen Cove for treaty or civil rights violations.

Reagan: Taiwan Relations Act will be obeyed

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, criticized by some lawmakers for his agreement with the Chinese to limit arms sales to Taiwan, says he is not backing away from the United States' moral obligation to Taipei.

But congressional critics of the joint U.S.-Chinese communique said the agreement hurts Taiwan and violates the Taiwan Relations Act.

The agreement is "full of double talk and false statements," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., one of Taiwan's strongest supporters in Congress.

Reagan, however, told CBS anchorman Dan Rather that he will honor and obey the Taiwan act.

Rather, who was called by Reagan on Tuesday night, said: "Mr. Reagan told me and I quote: 'There has been no retreat by me — no change whatsoever. We will continue to arm Taiwan. I am bound by and will obey the Taiwan Act...We have a moral obligation to Taiwan.'"

The president made his telephone call to the network during the evening news because he didn't like the characterization of his arms decision as a policy reversal, according to deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

MEANWHILE, JOHN H. Holdridge, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, said at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing that the agreement may have averted a "fatal deterioration" in relations between the United States and China.

Holdridge is testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee today.

As authorities in Peking and Washington gave differing interpretations of the joint communique, Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., observed, "The wonderful thing about language is its ability to mean whatever we want it to mean."

Hayakawa, who was a professional student of language before he went into politics, said there were "enough ambiguities in the agreement so that no one should be seriously offended, no one should feel sold out."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said the agreement is "creatively ambiguous, preserving our option to continue any necessary defensive arms sales to Taiwan while maintaining our steady course of improving our relations" with China.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., agreed that "a certain amount of ambiguity may be helpful" in the communique, but added that "there can be no ambiguity in implementing the Taiwan Relations Act."

THAT ACT, passed in 1979 after the United States recognized the communist government of China, commits the U.S. government to provide Taiwan with arms necessary for its self defense. The act also says the United States will decide what Taiwan's needs are.

China regards Taiwan, an island to which the Nationalist government fled after the communist takeover in 1947, as a renegade Chinese province.

The joint communique says the United States "does not seek to carry out a long-term policy of arms sales to Taiwan" and that "it intends to reduce gradually its sales of arms to Taiwan, leading over a period of time to a final resolution.

School volunteers here to stay

In Summer 1977, a city-wide school volunteer program with 450 members, known as the Midland Alliance, was established to ensure a safe and smooth transition to the then-new desegregation program.

Last year, the re-named program, VIPS (Volunteers in Public Schools), had over 2,300 participants.

This year they plan to have more.

President Gail Dodson expressed the importance of responsible recruitment to the more than 25 volunteer chairmen and PTA presidents who attended the morning VIPS workshop Tuesday. An evening workshop also was scheduled to outline duties and hints for a successful program.

"We are at a service to the MISD and you all are at a service to your individual schools," she said.

With funding from Western State Bank added to that from First National Bank of Midland, Midland National Bank, Commercial Bank and Trust and Texas National Bank this year, the program is off to a good start.

"VIPS isn't just the brainstorm of a few little ladies in tennis shoes that have disappeared," Molly Bedrich, of the VIPS coordinating team, added. "We're here and we're here to stay."

Last year, between 17,000 and 18,000 volunteer hours were recorded in Midland public schools. The program, which began in elementary schools, has expanded to include secondary schools and Carver Cultural Center. This year, Bunche Early Childhood and the GEM program will also be included in the service.

"VIPS is becoming a more understood and respected part of the school," Mrs. Bedrich said, adding that with the overcrowded district, "it is a viable program; there is a need for it."

Pledging his support and approval of the program, Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, said that there is a clear indication that students whose parents are involved in their education will benefit in school.

Man gets probation for refusing to register

By The Associated Press

An "honorable" young Virginian who said he was obeying God by not registering for the draft has been given three years' probation, and a Californian who once wrote the president to complain about registration is asking that similar charges against him be dropped.

Enten Eller, a 20-year-old Bridgewater (Va.) College student whose defense was his religious beliefs, was sentenced Tuesday by U.S. District Judge James Turk to three years' probation and ordered to register within 90 days or face a prison term.

But Eller declared that he won't register, citing his beliefs as a member of the pacifist Church of the Brethren.

To do so, he said, "would make a farce out of this. I think I made that clear to the judge in the courtroom. Right now, that's the way I feel. I'm always open to thinking about it."

Turk said Eller now may be considered already registered by the Selective Service System, because it now knows his name, age and address. Probation officials will make the final decision, he said.

The government has estimated that of the 8.5 million men eligible for draft registration since July 1980, when mandatory registration was reinstituted, 700,000 have failed to sign up.

Student Benjamin H. Sasway, 21, of Vista, Calif., the first person to be indicted on draft-related charges since the Vietnam War, faces trial Aug. 24 on a charge of failing to register. Three men besides Eller and Sasway also have been indicted.

The names of 160 men who have not registered have been sent to local U.S. attorneys' officies across the country. Federal officials say they expect the compliance rate will increase as the cases go to court.

Sasway's lawyer sought to have charges against Sasway dropped at a pretrial hearing in San Diego on Tuesday, arguing his client was unfairly singled out for opposing mandatory registration.

Charles T. Bumer filed written arguments with U.S. District Judge Gordon Thompson, Jr., saying the registration law is unconstitutional and those indicted so far are victims of selective prosecution.

But Sasway's outspokenness had nothing to do with the case, Kline said. "We wouldn't consider prosecuting people for exercising their First Amendment rights."

When you've arrived... Meadowpark

Meadowpark residents will enjoy a great deal of room and privacy because of the very low density of the development. The cluster arrangement of Meadowpark restricts traffic flow on residential streets. On-Street parking is prohibited, so that streets become areas for family activities.

Recreation facilities include park area, playgrounds, tennis courts and swimming pool with cabana, bath house and deck area.

- Privacy with enclosed patios-garden areas
- Fully landscaped with sprinkler system
- Bars with icemakers, wine racks, etc.
- Full compliment of quality appliances including Sub-Zero refrigerator
- Spas-saunas-redwood decks-gazebos
- Swimming pool,,cabana, tennis courts
- Beautiful custom cabinetry and moldings

$1450 Limited Closing Costs in Northgate only

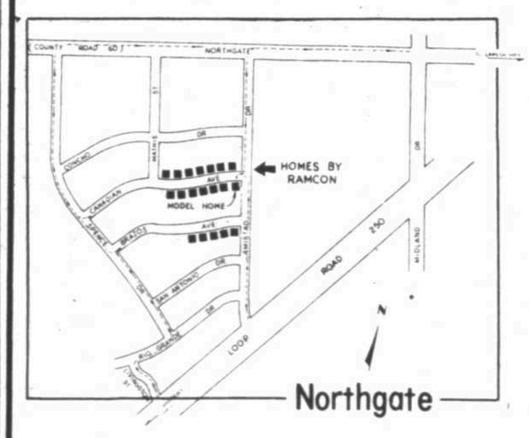

NORTHGATE $75,200

4909 Canadian

$673.30 Per Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivas lent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.

WOULD YOU LIKE AN INVESTMENT THAT:
1. Yields an AFTER TAX return of 25%
2. Generates a tax write off of 35% of your investment?
3. Returns entire investment through cash flow and tax benefits in about 3½ years?

A Midland Meadows duplex is an extremely safe investment and can give those returns. Ask for our brochure of financial projections. Your CPA will confirm the figures.
