Ruling on Haitians

NEW YORK — More than 150 Haitian refugees held at a U.S. Naval base in Cuba after testing positive for the AIDS virus were ordered released Tuesday by a judge who criticized the federal government's handling of the case. The 158 refugees, including many who spent nearly 20 months at Guantanamo Bay, were victims of "outrageous, callous and reprehensible" behavior by the Bush and Clinton administrations, U.S. District Judge Sterling Johnson said. "The Haitians plight is a tragedy of immense proportion, and their continued detainment is totally unacceptable to this court," Johnson wrote in his decision./7C

Search for E.T.

BERKELEY, Calif. — A search for aliens in outer space has detected 164 mysterious radio signals that must be studied to learn if they come from natural causes or from E.T. trying to phone Earth, scientists said Tuesday. "At this point, we have no concrete evidence for signals from intelligent aliens. We have some possibilities we're going to investigate further," said Stuart Bowyer, head of the search and an astronomer at the University of California, Berkeley.

Border crossings

WASHINGTON — Visitors to Mexico have long endured hours waiting in line at border crossing stations to be processed for traveling by car. The cars often overheated and tempers flared before visitors got their Mexican tourist cards and temporary automobile permits. Beginning July 1, Mexican officials hope waits at border crossings will be cut to 15 minutes or less because U.S. visitors then will be able to get their Mexican tourist cards and auto permits from the American Automobile Association before leaving home.

Helmsley out?

NEW YORK — A federal judge said Tuesday he will probably reduce Leona Helmsley's prison sentence by a year because she was refused parole. U.S. District Court Judge Thomas P. Griesa said he has a "disagreement with the parole board and I'm not powerless to remedy it." The U.S. Parole Commission has twice denied Helmsley parole since she began serving her sentence April 1, 1992, at a prison in Danbury, Conn.

Group moves to resurrect community's spirit award

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

A leadership development group announced plans this week to revive the defunct Midland Community Spirit Award, nine months after city officials canceled the program.

Leadership Midland Alumni Association is currently soliciting nominations for the award from communities across the United States. The deadline for applications is July 31 and the group tentatively plans to honor the winner with a local reception in October.

"This is really simply going to be a rehash of how the city handled it," said Iris Foster, director of the award committee. "We hope to focus on the unity of a community and how they react when something goes horribly wrong. At the same time, it doesn't always

Clinton axes heat-content tax proposal

Associated Press

No alternative emerges as leading contender. Possibilities include levies based on price of energy or amount consumed.

WASHINGTON — President Clinton retreated Tuesday from an unpopular energy tax based on the heat content of fuels with his chief economic spokesman agreeing that the so-called "Btu tax" was dead.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said that the administration had decided to substitute a "broad energy tax" for the administration's original proposal that passed the House last month.

Bentsen, interviewed on the PBS "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour," said the administration had decided to "put aside" the Btu tax, so named because it would have taxed different fuels according to their heat content as measured in British thermal units.

Whatever tax proposal emerges based on negotiations between the administration and the Senate, Bentsen said, "I am confident that it will not be based on British thermal units. It will not be the so-called Btu tax."

Bentsen said the administration would insist that the substitute energy tax be broadbased and encourage energy conservation as well as contribute to lowering the federal budget deficit.

Any energy tax is expected to hit coal, oil, gasoline, natural gas and electricity and be paid by consumers.

The most widely discussed alternative to the Btu tax would be an "ad valorem" tax — a levy based on the dollar value of each type of fuel. A flat 5 percent tax would raise about the same amount of revenue as Clinton's Btu tax but with different effects — and there would be no incentive to switch from a "dirty" fuel to a cleaner one.

Bentsen refused to confirm that the 5 percent levy was being considered, insisting that the administration and lawmakers were "right at the very beginning of that process of achieving some kind of compromise."

Earlier in the day as he opened discussions with Senate leaders, Clinton had appeared in a conciliatory mood, saying, "There will be some changes in the Senate, and that is fine."

As originally proposed, the heat-content tax would have raised a typical home electric bill by about $2.25 a month and a gallon of gasoline by 8 cents.

Now, the administration is talking about reducing the overall tax bite by a quarter to a third. Yet, since no formula had been devised on how a new tax would be applied, there was no immediate way to tell how that might affect individual consumers of specific fuels.

The energy tax was one of the most controversial elements of Clinton's $500 billion, five-year deficit reduction package, opposed by farmers and business-

City cites contract clause, increases TU Electric tax

City leaders hope to take advantage of a clause in a contract with TU Electric that could deposit an additional $600,000 into city coffers.

The "Favored Nations Clause" will allow cities within the electric company's domain the chance to reap 4 percent of the company's gross local receipts, instead of the current 3 percent share.

City manager Mike McGregor said the money is part of a franchise tax the company pays to use local streets and alleys.

"The majority of their poles and transformers are in the alleys and streets," he said. "Most of the extra money we get from them will go toward street and alley repairs and general maintenance. A small-

Prince, commoner marriage bridges tradition, new Japan

By David E. Sanger
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — In a Shinto ritual deep in the woods of the Imperial Palace, Crown Prince Naruhito and Masako Owada married Wednesday morning with a mix of mystical tradition and a new internationalist air for the world's oldest monarchy.

The wedding marks the fourth time in this century that a future emperor and empress have stepped into the simple wooden shrine behind the palace's high stone walls to sip sake in a national yet private gesture of union.

But for Japan the ritual also marks a striking departure from the past, for the first time bringing into the royal family a

United Way unveils Pevehouse bronze bust

Staff report

"Quiet, generous, warm heart," were the words used to describe B.J., "Joe" Pevehouse, of whom a bronze bust was dedicated at the United Way office Tuesday.

The bust was a gift from a group of the late community leader's friends and was designed by Midland artist Mary Griffith. The inscription reads: "1925-1992, In appreciation for his dedication, determination and lifetime services to the community."

Pevehouse was a strong supporter of the United Way of Midland and, in 1988, helped establish the local chapter of the Alexis de Tocqueville Society, which recognizes citizens who have rendered oustanding service and to foster voluntary community service.

In 1992, Pevehouse was named the first recipient of The Alexis de Tocqueville Society Award in Midland. It is the United Way's highest honor, representing many years of dedicated service and voluteerism at its best.

The bust of Pevehouse was given by Joaquin Horton, Roland Biancalana, Bernie Feshbach, Roy Simpkin, Fred Higbee and Bill Tichy, all of San Francisco. In a statement, they explained the reason behind their gift: "Joe Pevehouse was to us an open-handed man of good deeds and a warm heart. We all had better lives because Joe, in his wonderful way, touched our lives."

In his opening remarks, United Way board member Deane Stoltz said "The dedication of the Joe Pe-

Mr. Weather sees sun, 90

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 90 and southeast winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should see increased cloudiness with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 68, Tuesday's high reached 95, compared to the record high for that date of 105 set in 1988. The record low was 55 set in 1955.

STATE

Strong storms developed across North and Central Texas on Tuesday, with at least one funnel cloud spotted and the National Weather Service posting a warning for several counties.

The weather service said radar indicated a large, severe thunderstorm Tuesday evening near Bridgeport in western Wise County and in southwestern Cooke County.

The storm was moving easterly to northeasterly at 25 to 30 mph. A watch was posted for counties just northeast of the Dallas-Fort Worth area, extending to the Texas-Oklahoma border.

A funnel cloud was spotted near Tioga, about 50 miles north of Dallas. No damage or injuries were reported, but softball-size hail fell in the area.

The weather service warned of possible urban and stream flooding after an estimated 2 to 3 inches of rain fell in some areas.

Scattered thunderstorms were still possible over the Hill Country through today.

But strong storms were not expected to move into South Texas, the weather service said.

A surface low-pressure trough from near Wichita Falls to Del Rio was separating moist, gulf air from dry, hot desert air.

Winds were strong over eastern and southern sections of North Texas but diminished in the Hill Country. Winds were generally southwesterly to westerly elsewhere at 15 to 25 mph with some gusts.

Afternoon highs ranged from the 80s to well over 90 degrees along the Rio Grande.

Skies were expected to remain mostly cloudy over most sections of South Texas through today.

Forecasters predicted a chance of thunderstorms Wednesday over the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau.

Fair to partly cloudy skies were expected in far West Texas and the Big Bend tonight with a chance of thunderstorms over the rest of the area.

Winds should remain strong along the coastal plains but diminish by early Wednesday.

Overnight lows were expected to range from the 40s to near 80 degrees along the middle and lower coast and Rio Grande, with highs from the 70s to 90s.

NATION

Georgia sizzled from a heat wave Tuesday and thunderstorms raked the Midwest.

Temperatures were in the 90s or higher across Georgia during the day.

"It's hot in the shade," said heavy equipment operator Terry Hart as he cooled off over lunch at an air-conditioned restaurant in Albany, Ga.

The National Weather Service said the heat was likely to continue through the week as a high pressure system over the northern Gulf of Mexico drifts slowly eastward.

Augusta, Ga., topped its record high of 99 for the date with a reading of 103.

The high of 98 in Jacksonville, Fla., tied the record for the date.

Elsewhere, rain and thunderstorms were spread over the lower Great Lakes region, the lower Ohio Valley, portions of the Mississippi Valley and the Plains. The central Rockies also had rain.

Dozens of residents at a low-income housing complex were evacuated when winds ripped off part of a roof in northeast Oklahoma near Tulsa. No injuries were reported. Nearly 90 elderly people, some in wheelchairs, were evacuated.

Heavy winds also knocked down barns, trees and power lines in southern and western Wisconsin, but no one was hurt. In Vernon County, south of La Crosse, two tornadoes were seen moving across the Mississippi River on Tuesday afternoon, Sheriff Geoffrey Banta said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SPIRIT: Group tries to revive city's award

have to be a crisis — but simply something that pulls a town together."

The award was the brainstorm of former Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, who intended to honor the citizens of a community in the same way Midland volunteers were recognized by the nation after the rescue of Jessica McClure in 1987.

Last October, the City Council opted to discontinue the award and Mayor J.D. Faircloth said he believed the city had benefited unfairly at the McClure family's expense.

"I didn't think it was quite right to bring Jessica out every year and remind her that she fell in a well. It was best to dissolve it," he said.

But Ms. Foster said she believes the award is a bonus for the city.

"It focuses positive national attention on us while reinforcing the positive aspects of another community. It shows that a lot of positive good will can be generated from a tragedy," she said.

She said the McClure family had not been notified of Leadership Midland's plan to continue the award.

"Obviously, our best pull for the program is to tie it in with the baby who fell in the well," she said. "We'll see what happens. This award transcends race and religion and all the bad elements of a society."

In September 1989, Thomas wrote a letter to "Dear Abby" asking for help in seeking nominations for the award. The subsequent letter in her daily column generated responses from 35 cities and communities across the nation.

Residents of Sioux City, Iowa, won the award that year for their response and the outpouring of support to the victims of a DC-10 crash near the Sioux City airport on July 19, 1989. One hundred twelve people died in the crash; 189 survived.

President Bush commended Sioux City officials at the White House that year in a presentation attended by Jessica McClure and her parents.

The next year, Yakima, Wash., was chosen from a field of 108 nominations. More than 100 Yakima residents marched through a drug-infested neighborhood and placed anti-drug signs throughout the area. Consequently, the drug problem subsided and drug arrests in the area decreased by 28 percent.

The 1990 award was announced in July 1991.

Last March, officials from Bangor, Maine, visited Midland to accept the third Community Spirit Award.

Resident there were honored for greeting 204 flights and 65,000 troops returning from Operation Desert Storm at Bangor International Airport.

Residents reportedly often arrived at 3 a.m. with baked goods and gifts to greet the soldiers.

TAX: Clinton drops heat content-based levy es that consume large amounts of energy. As passed by the House, it would have raised $72 billion over five years.

Clinton is prepared to reduce the energy tax by about $20 billion in order to win the votes of oil-state and conservative senators, according to congressional officials and administration sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the landslide Republican victory in the Texas Senate race Saturday was a warning bell for Clinton.

"If you don't get the message, you'd better get a hearing aid because it was pretty loud and clear that people want to cut spending first and they don't want more taxes," Dole said after meeting with Clinton.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., a key player in the budget talks, said he met with a dozen moderate Democratic senators and discussed "50 different options" for spending cuts and revenue. "We're looking, obviously, at options to the (heat-content) tax, which I think is unworkable," he said.

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., another central figure, said the heat-content tax had not been droppedy but, "There are a lot of alternatives under discussion." Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said, "There are going to be a lot of curves on this road before it gets to its destination."

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., predicted the heat-content fuel would survive in some form, but it would be reworked "with a few more exemptions."

Lawmakers said Clinton was prepared to accept an energy tax perhaps based on the value of different fuels rather than on the energy content as measured in British Thermal Units. Senators variously described the options as sales taxes on fuels or an undefined transportation tax.

"That Btu thing, I think, has been dropped," said Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss.

"It seems that they're now beginning to shift from a tax on the heat content to a tax on the value of the energy, the value paid somewhere along the distribution line," Cochran said.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said Clinton's plan would be rewritten with fewer tax increases, more spending cuts and a scaled-down energy tax. "We haven't reached an agreement with the senators so we have nothing to report to you," Mitchell said.

Told about Cochran's remark that the Btu tax was dead, Mitchell said, "It wasn't even discussed" at the meeting with Clinton.

"Obviously there's not going to be much, if any, Republican support unless there are changes that we're not aware of," Dole said.

Whereas the White House once stoutly defended the Btu tax, it had no visible support on Tuesday.

Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton merely wants a broad-based tax that is fair to all regions of the country, will encourage conservation, and will let the president achieve his $500 billion deficit-reduction goal.

She said it was up to the Senate Finance Committee to determine how to do it.

Distancing itself from the Btu tax, the White House turned over the shape of the new energy levy to the Senate Finance Committee. "It is now up to the members of the Senate Finance Committee, to the full Senate to work out the details of that to pass something," Myers said.

Asked if he was insisting on a Btu tax, Clinton said, "I don't want to get into the name game here. I'm interested in the principles of the program."

HONOR: United Way chapter dedicates bust

vehouse bronze bust recognizes Joe for what he did for Midland and the entire area. He was a quiet, generous man who shared his resources and talents with the entire community."

The Rev. Russell Parchman, minister of the First United Methodist Church of Midland, added, "He was one of the most unselfish benefactors I've ever known in terms of giving without exercising any control or desires over how the gift was to be used. That was a most unusual quality in a person."

Pevehouse came to Midland in 1948 and worked for Bay Petroleum and The Permian Corp. before founding Adobe Oil Co. In 1985, that firm merged with Madison Resources of New York. He then served as vice chairman of the board of Adobe Resources Corp.

A believer in community service, Pevehouse lead the United Way in 1978-'79 as president of the board and he remained as a board member through 1980.

He and his wife, Beverly, were involved in numerous community endeavors for more than 30 years. Pevehouse served on the board of trustees of the First United Methodist Church, the Midland College Foundation Board and as its first president, the Texas Tech President's Council and as president of Texas Tech Board of Regents and on the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Board of Executors. He was a member of the Midland Wildcat Committee, TIPRO Explorers Club and was named All-American Wildcatter in 1982.

CLAUSE: TU's tax rate goes to 4 percent

er portion of the funds will be directed into other city accounts.

Council members approved the plan on first reading Tuesday.

LuAnn Morgan, Midland's District Manager for TU Electric, said the change will benefit participating cities. All Texas cities serviced by TU Electric have the option of receiving 4 percent of the company's local gross receipts.

"This, obviously, will bring more revenue and tax dollars for the cities," Ms. Morgan said. "If all the cities sign up, we will pay $29 million in additial taxes a year but it won't be coming out of the ratepayer's pockets."

Instead, the money will be absorbed into the company's operating costs, she said.

Specifically, the "Favored Nations Clause" relates to a settlement last month between TU Electric and the city of Dallas — where a 4 percent franchise tax was established.

That rate had been in effect for nearly 50 years, but had not been officially set since a contract expired in 1992.

"Under terms of the contract, it says if you give one city this, you have to give the same to another. Or at least afford the opportunity," Ms. Morgan said. "That is what we have done."

BRIDGES: Crown prince, commoner marry

(From 1A)

princess who had a thriving career. Educated at Harvard and Oxford, Crown Princess Masako has also come to personify a new generation of Japanese women deeply engaged in the workings of the world's second-largest industrial economy.

At exactly 10 a.m., Crown Prince Naruhito, 33, who also was educated at Oxford, joined Miss Owada, 29, before millions of television viewers like reincarnations of a noble couple from Japan's feudal past.

Five months after she left a high-powered job at the North America affairs section of the Foreign Ministry, Miss Owada stepped slowly along the periphery of the shrine in a 30-pound silk kimono in the style of the 8th-century Heian period.

This morning, her body purified in an ancient ritual, court ladies had dressed Miss Owada in the formal bridal array, or juni-hitoe — literally "12-layered garment," though modern versions have only five layers of silk. The kimono reportedly cost more than $300,000. Her hair was coifed in classic style, with long, artificial strands added down her back.

Then she and Prince Naruhito, dressed in a brilliant orange kimono representing a rising sun, appeared at the shrine, the Kashikodokoro, which is believed to contain the spirit of Amaterasu the Sun Goddess, who, according to legend, created the Japanese isles.

There, in an inner sanctuary, the marriage ceremony began in a light rain. In the innermost sanctuaries, there were only a few attendants: the palace's white-robed chief ritualist, Fusatada Koide; a chamberlain bearing the centuries-old sword representing the crown prince; a court lady; an unwed priestess, a symbol of purity.

The crown prince was presented with a sacred sprig and read a pledge of loyalty and love to Miss Owada. In the hushed silence, out of view of television cameras, the two drank the sacred sake, and the commoner became the Crown Princess.

At the shrine, 800 Japanese dignitaries gathered to catch a glimpse of the couple as they appeared and disappeared at the entrance of the sanctuary, called the Shrine of Graciousness. The guests included Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, cabinet ministers, business leaders and relatives of the royal family, but no foreigners.

By custom, Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko were not present. But Miss Owada's parents, Hisashi and Yumiko Owada, sat solemnly in the first row and watched as their daughter entered a forbidding world.

"I only told her to have a happy life," Owada, the chief architect of Japan's foreign policy, told reporters shortly after the ceremony. Mrs. Owada said she told her daughter this morning, "Please take care of yourself, and do your utmost for your country."

Wednesday was a national holiday, and with factories and offices closed, millions tuned in to the ceremonies, some hovering around high-definition television sets set up outside train stations. For a country still struggling to pull out of a surprisingly stubborn economic downturn, the ceremony was a welcome moment of relief.

This evening, after the heir to the Chrysanthemum Throne and his bride take a 30-minute ride through Tokyo to take up residence at the Prince's palace, three days of banquets begin.

For all the celebrations, though, many Japanese have expressed mixed emotions about Miss Owada.

For months, Japanese have debated how the young woman, who staved off the prince's wedding proposals while she pursued her career, will settle into a palace still ruled by rigid hierarchy, where royalty are revered symbols but politically powerless.

Many have said that her cosmopolitan image and familiarity with the United States and Europe will further soften the image of a monarchy struggling with the shadows of World War II, when millions died in the name of Emperor Hirohito, who was Naruhito's grandfather.

Some feminists have cheered her decision, saying that it will forever change both the monarchy and Japan's perception of women in a male-dominated society. But others would have preferred to see Miss Owada continue as a pioneer in Japan's diplomatic world, rather than quit her job to get married.

For many older Japanese and for imperial traditionalists, she is far too Americanized and too outspoken, even with her recent public transformation to the subdued clothes and deferential bearing of a Japanese princess. Harvard, Class of '85

Without question, she is unlike any crown princess in the 1,600-year history of the monarchy. With the Owada family serving in diplomatic posts around the world, Miss Owada has lived half her life abroad. And while she does not come from the nobility — from which every royal bride was drawn until Michiko entered the imperial family — she is most definitely a member of Japan's new elite.

Her family is well known in Washington, where many have dealt with her father and, more recently, with the future empress herself as she negotiated over semiconductors and the rules governing American lawyers practicing in Japan.

A 1985 graduate of Harvard, she studied Japanese-American relations and wrote a thesis on the effects of fluctuations of the yen in trade imbalances. She spent two years at Oxford, speaks four langages and has a resume that many Japanese men say they find a bit intimidating.

The imperial court offers a life that many Japanese women say they would not enter willingly.

Japanese bash Americans for human rights fixation

TOKYO (AP) — Washington must stop pressing its "excessive human rights diplomacy" in Asia, a group of prominent Japanese leaders said Tuesday in a report that reflects Asian resentment of what many see as U.S. high-handedness.

The Clinton administration has placed a high priority on human rights in its diplomatic dealings, particularly with China. President Clinton recently said future renewal of China's favorable trade status would depend on improvement in human rights.

The Japan International Forum's report to Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa isn't official policy. But it reflects a backlash in Asia against what is seen as heavy-handed U.S. attitudes on trade and human rights issues.

Tokyo feels uncomfortable taking up the human rights banner in a region in which it has huge economic interests.

The forum includes prominent intellectuals and former high trade officials with strong ties to the government and business community.

"We think Americans are too hasty," said Kenichi Ito, president of the group. He said opposition to American diplomatic tactics "is growing not only among Japanese but among many East Asians."

Ito said Japan wants human rights reforms in Asia but economic development should come first to avoid the chaos experienced in the former socialist countries in Eastern Europe.

Japan has expressed support for human rights principles, but has refrained from firm measures against Asian human rights violators such as Burma and China. Tokyo feels uncomfortable taking up the human rights banner in a region in which it has huge economic interests.

A Foreign Ministry official declined to comment directly on the report.

Haitian prime minister resigns, army reacts

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (NYT) Defacto Haitian Prime Minister Marc L. Bazin resigned Tuesday after losing a power struggle with his cabinet and being stripped of his military backing.

No successor was named by Haiti's parliament or its army.

The unexpected resignation left the military firmly in control of the impoverished Caribbean nation. The power vacuum created by Bazin's departure added yet another obstacle to efforts to resolve the country's political and economic crisis, which began with the September 1991 coup that ousted Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely-elected president.

In Nicaragua, where he was attending a meeting of the Organization of American States, Aristide expressed optimism that Bazin's resignation would lead to his return to Haiti. He said that could come within the next few weeks, "possibly days."

In the past, however, the military has opposed Aristide's return.

Aristide said he had asked OAS chief Joao Baena Soares to go to Haiti as soon as possible with the United Nations and U.S. special envoys — Dante Caputo and Lawrence Pezzullo respectively — to seek a constitutional solution to the crisis.

Most political analysts here expect the de facto authorities to install a new civilian leader who will resist Aristide's return.

There were no reports of politically-inspired violence following Bazin's resignation.

Canadian judge acquits marines in child rape case

QUEBEC (AP) — A judge acquitted four U.S. Marines of sexually assaulting a 12-year-old girl, ruling Tuesday that there wasn't enough evidence to prove it.

Quebec Court Judge Maximilien Polak said he believed the girl's story that she was assaulted by four men, but he ruled her identification of the accused wasn't enough for a conviction.

"At one time or another she identified nine individuals in a crime that was committed by four people," Polak said.

The four Marines — Sgt. Leonard Permell of Stafford, Conn., and Lance Cpl.s Terry Cobb of Wilson, N.C.; Mark Cunningham of Camp Lejeune, N.C.; and Clarence Morris of Elizabeth City, N.C., were charged with sexual assault and sexual interference involving a person under the age of 14.

Their ship, the USS Guam, was visiting Quebec on a goodwill visit

New caffeine facts

If you are older, you may get a bigger kick from caffeine than you did when you were younger. That's the conclusion of new British studies. Researchers studied the impact of caffeine on the mental performance of 9,000 adults. Caffeine boosted reaction times and verbal memory of the subjects, and the improvement was more pronounced in older people. Interestingly, the researchers found that habitual tea or coffee drinkers did not develop a tolerance to the performance-boosting effects of caffeine. In fact, generally, the more caffeine, the better performances.

However, other research confirms that very low doses of caffeine, as in a single cup of coffee or a 12-ounce cola, also improve mental functioning, such as attention span and reaction times.

But caffeine has its down side, and here again, older people are more susceptible. Caffeine is more apt to impair the sleep of older than of younger persons, Dutch researchers report.

Bottom line: It's OK to use caffeine to perk up your brain, but too much caffeine is a common cause of anxiety, headaches and insomnia. Be aware that both caffeine's good and bad effects on your brain may increase as you age. — Jean Carper

Beer hazard

Smokers who are also heavy drinkers are well-known to be the most likely victims of oral cancer. But if you are a man who drinks lots of beer, you should be especially worried, according to new research from the American Health Foundation.

In order to find out the threat of alcohol alone, researchers studied 173 men and women with oral cancer who were non-users of tobacco. Surprisingly, they detected little threat from either wine or liquor, leading them to suspect that alcohol itself may not be the cancer-inducing agent.

However, beer drinking dramatically boosted the chances of oral cancer among men. Those who drank between one and three beers a day had two and a half times the risk compared with non-beer drinkers. Men who drank more than three beers daily were five times more apt to have oral cancer.

Drinking alcohol seemed unrelated to oral cancer among women in the study. However, thinner women were at greater risk.

Beer's probable cancer agent is not alcohol, but contaminants such as nitrosamines, polycyclic hydrocarbons and other well-established cancer-causing chemicals, say researchers. — Jean Carper

Rare garlic powers

A liver transplant would have corrected the problem, but the woman rejected it. And conventional drugs were ineffective. So she tried garlic, recommended by a pharmacist. She ground up numerous garlic cloves every day and ate them.

To the great surprise of her doctors, her rare pulmonary-liver condition improved. After 18 months of garlic-self-medication, she could breathe better and tests showed her pulmonary functions had improved.

"She was not back to normal," explains Stephen Caldwell, a hepatologist at the University of Virginia Health Sciences Center. But her improvement was sufficient to intrigue Dr. Caldwell. He is now testing odorless garlic preparations on other patients with so-called hepatopulmonary syndrome, which strikes about 3 percent of persons with cirrhosis of the liver.

Dr. Caldwell speculates that garlic might improve lung function by promoting dilation of the bronchial passages in a very unique way.

It's too early to say garlic is a treatment for this rare disease, but the ancient remedy is worth exploring, especially since the only sure alternative is a costly liver transplant, says Dr. Caldwell. — Jean Carper

Sinus, allergy or cold? Your nose knows

By Beth McLeod
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Are you breathing? Of course you are. But are you breathing easily? In South Florida, where pollen and mold aggravate allergies 12 months a year, chances are you're not.

So what's really the problem — a common cold, allergies or a sinus infection?

Sometimes it's hard to know. But we sure try hard to alleviate the symptoms. Americans annually spend $1.5 billion on so-called sinus medicines, according to the American Academy of Otolaryngology.

"In some cases all they need is some patience," says Dr. Roy Casiano, otolaryngologist (an ear, nose and throat specialist) at the University of Miami school of medicine. "They just have a common cold that takes five to seven days to clear up no matter what. But people get so impatient. They rush off to the doctor instead of waiting until it goes away."

If your problem is rooted in allergies, however, those over-the-counter nose sprays and decongestants won't help. In fact, they could add to your misery, experts say.

IF YOU HAVE MORE than two or three annual bouts with a stopped-up nose and excess mucous, if your cold symptoms are accompanied by headaches, full ears, loss of smell and taste, you probably have allergies that are causing sinus infections. And you do need to see a doctor — your family doctor or an allergist.

Fourteen million Americans suffer from allergic rhinitis, the medical term for the swelling of the nasal passages due to allergies. When your narrow nasal passages are blocked due to swelling caused by allergies, bacteria thrive and infect your sinuses. Treated with antibiotics the sinuses usually clear, but if you are repeatedly exposed to what you're allergic to — and that's probably pollen, house dust, mold or animal dander — the problems recur. In extreme cases you may need surgery. More likely you'll need prescription antihistamines and steroid nasal sprays or shots that desensitize you to whatever's irritating your membranes.

If you use an over-the-counter nasal spray for more than three days, you're probably addicted and need a doctor's help to withdraw.

Clearing the air

- A SUMMER COLD is usually an allergic inflammation of the nose.
- THE MOST COMMON allergies involve pollen, mold, dust and animal dander. In South Florida, pollens are a problem most of the year. Melaleuca is especially noxious. Molds grow year-round.
- ALLERGIES tend to be inherited and can develop into asthma.
- SLEEPING with the upper part of the bed elevated 2 or 4 inches promotes sinus drainage.
- A STUFFY NOSE is one symptom caused by a remarkable array of disorders. Best advice for prolonged stuffiness: Consult a doctor.

ENVIRONMENTAL POLLUTION and its effects are growing concerns.

"It's an area that's very poorly understood," Casiano says. "But there's a lot of firm evidence that aside from the fact that patients may be allergic to certain things in buildings, such as molds and various toxic powders, they can also be exposed to pollutants and certain chemicals in buildings that cause problems.

"Nobody really understands why that happens. Is it due to the environment — the construction materials? Or is it something going around because of poor filtration of the air?"

Experts also suggest that allergies are increasing because American homes are not as free of dust as they once were.

To promote healthier breathing at home, doctors recommend you wear a pollen mask (sold in most drug stores) when mowing grass or house cleaning, change air filters once a month, close windows during peak pollen seasons, install an air purifier, enclose mattress and box springs in plastic barrier cloth. People with allergies should exercise regularly, eat well, take vitamin C and avoid cigarette smoke.

Latex can cause severe effects for allergy-prone

By Dr. Eugenia Hawrylko
Associated Press

Certain things, like the sting of a bee or contact with poison ivy, have long been known to rub some people the wrong way, sometimes with severe effects.

Now you can add rubber latex to the list of substances that hold potential dangers for certain people.

For those who are allergic to latex, contact with this substance has been found to produce reactions ranging from a minor skin irritation to life-threatening emergencies.

To make raw latex resilient and durable for commercial use, manufacturers add various chemicals to the substance to help prevent it from disintegrating.

Now, medical scientists are trying to learn why these chemicals, along with agents used to cure latex during processing — and even proteins in the latex sap itself — may be causing allergic reactions.

Three kinds of reactions from latex exposure have been found to occur in allergy-prone people.

The classic reaction is contact dermatitis in which a rash develops on skin directly in contact with latex and peaks about 48 hours after contact. In the second type of reaction, individuals may develop hives at the contact site within 30 to 60 minutes after using a latex product.

Thirdly, a rare but serious allergic reaction to latex is anaphylaxis, a severe medical emergency that can involve all of the body's major organ systems. This

Youth gushes from vitamins

By Paul McHugh
N.Y. Times News Service

Searching for the Fountain of Youth took explorer Juan Ponce de Leon all over the Caribbean in the 16th century. His search might've been shorter had he known this: the fountain gushes a mix of orange and carrot juice, and is surrounded by steaming heaps of broccoli and spinach.

Also, a few vitamin pills may lie around its periphery.

Amateur and pro athletes should take heed. Surprisingly, much of what they do actually accelerates parts of the aging process.

Scientists suspect aging begins on the microcellular level of the body. On a daily basis, cell membranes and structures are damaged by highly reactive molecules called "free radicals."

Unfortunately, heavy exercise increases the number of free radicals, and — correspondingly — the damage from them.

"The so-called 'free radicals' are actually unstable molecules of many different types," says Glen Winkel, a Phd in anatomy who runs a consulting firm called Optimal Nutritrion. "They can arrive in rancid food we ingest, or polluted air we breathe. And there are many made right inside the body by our normal, metabolic process.

"A free radical is a molecule that is electrically unbalanced. It seeks to combine with almost anything. That's how it does damage. Many radicals are oxygen molecules. These become unstable when cells remove electrons from sugars and add them to oxygen. Our cells do this all the time in order to generate energy.

"A new study suggests that the DNA in a single cell may take 10,000 hits from free radicals each day. Just sitting around, we burn oxygen and sugar and make radicals. When we exercise, our production of radicals may go up by two or three times," Winkel says.

The good news is that nature also has a means of de-activating free radicals: the vitamins that naturally occur in whole grains, beans and nuts, and fresh fruits and vegetables.

These are also available as manufactured food supplements and vitamin pills.

Vitamin C — This vitamin is water-soluble, which means it circulates in the blood. It's the body's first line of defense against free radicals. But the body cannot store Vitamin C, so it's best to take small doses through the day, especially when exercising.

Natural sources of Vitamin C include citrus, and more unusual fruits like kiwi and papaya.

Vitamin E — This vitamin is oil or lipid-soluble, which makes it the body's second line of defense. It goes where Vitamin C can't go, into actual cell membranes. The body can store Vitamin E; it is revitalized by contact with Vitamin C.

Natural sources of Vitamin E include sunflower seeds, almonds, walnuts and wheat germ. People who avoid nuts because they have fats should remember mind that some fats are highly beneficial.

Beta Carotene — Beta Carotene is not a vitamin, but the body will turn it into Vitamin A on an as-needed basis. There are many types of "carotenoids" in whole foods, Beta is just one of them. Even before they are turned into Vitamin A, carotenoids act as effective bodyguards, absorbing

Vitamin E mystique has Americans downing doses

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

Myths about vitamin E have flourished since its recognition as an essential nutrient in 1922, with the discovery that rats could not reproduce without it.

Within a decade after the discovery by Dr. H.M. Evans and Dr. K.S. Bishop, vitamin E acquired a mystique as an enhancer and restorer of sexual and reproductive function, an image reflected in its chemical name, tocopherol, from the Greek for "to bring forth in childbirth" or, more colloquially, "oil of fertility."

But while the belief that vitamin E enhanced sexual performance never achieved much credibility, a host of other claims have since kept it in the food-faddist limelight.

Vitamin E has been hailed as an antidote to cellular aging and air pollution, a healer and beautifier of skin, a promoter of athletic prowess, a preserver of visual functions and treatment for vaginal dryness, premenstrual syndrome, breast cysts, circulatory disorders in the legs and the heart pains of angina pectoris.

Such claims have led at least 15 percent of adult Americans to down daily megadoses, from 100 to as much as 3,200 International Units, or hundreds and sometimes thousands of units more than are needed to prevent vitamin E deficiency symptoms.

Vitamin E's very status as a supposed panacea has for decades kept many reputable researchers from exploring its actual benefits in well-designed clinical studies. Through the years, there have been only a few good studies documenting real benefits of vitamin E megadoses.

They include protecting the eyes of premature babies against retrolental fibroplasia, a disorder caused by too much oxygen; increasing exercise tolerance in people with the crippling circulatory disorder called intermittent claudication, and countering heart muscle damage during bypass surgery.

But now an emerging scientific respectability for various nutrients known to function as antioxidants has elevated the status of vitamin E and prompted some doctors to prescribe it even in the absence of ironclad proof of its preventive or curative potential.

Thus, it is sometimes recommended to help

DOSES: Vitamin E earns respectability

counter the lung damage caused by smoking, the tendency to form benign breast cysts and the progress of the retinal disorder macular degeneration.

A few weeks ago, two new reports from leading researchers in Boston thrust vitamin E into a new orbit of medical respectability. The studies, involving more than 120,000 men and women, linked daily supplements of 100 or more units of vitamin E with about a 40 percent reduction in "major coronary events," including heart attacks, the need for bypass surgery and deaths from coronary disease.

The researchers, from the Harvard School of Public Health and Brigham and Women's Hospital, stopped short of recommending vitamin E supplements even for those at high risk of heart disease, since only an association, not a cause-and-effect relationship, has been established between megadoses of vitamin E and coronary protection. The risks of taking vitamin E supplements for decades have yet to be properly investigated.

To date, only anecdotal reports, not scientific study, have highlighted vague side effects like undue fatigue among those taking drug-dose supplements of around 600 to 800 units a day. Meanwhile, millions of people have been dosing themselves with vitamin E for years without apparent harm.

Vitamin E's possible benefits to the heart were among the earliest claims made for megadoses of this essential nutrient. Starting in the 1930s, vitamin E was said to counter the chest pains of angina. It was promoted as an anti-thrombotic agent that could prevent the blood clots that precipitate most heart attacks.

In the 1970s, two Canadian physicians, Drs. Wilfred and Evan Shute, popularized vitamin E as a heart treatment and protector in a best-selling book, "Vitamin E for Ailing and Healthy Hearts," which most cardiologists condemned as a collection of untested and extravagant claims and anecdotes. Independent attempts to verify the Shutes' claims failed.

Now it turns out that the Shute brothers may have been right about vitamin E and the heart, but for the wrong reasons. It is not tocopherol's minimal anti-clotting talents but its potent anti-oxidant activity that appears critical to all its established and suspected benefits.

Anti-oxidants block cellular damage and chemical changes wrought by highly reactive forms of oxygen that cause oxidation of fatty acids in cell membranes and in the low-density lipoprotein (LDL) that is the main carrier of cholesterol in the blood.

Recent studies have strongly suggested that it is only oxidized LDL that triggers the gradual accumulation of fatty deposits in coronary arteries, the disease called atherosclerosis that is the primary cause of heart attacks and coronary deaths.

And consistent with this proposed mechanism of heart disease, the two new studies revealed that adults who took supplements of 100 units or more of vitamin E daily for at least two years had significantly fewer heart attacks and coronary deaths than those who got much smaller amounts of the vitamin from foods or from multivitamin supplements.

Relying only on foods, most Americans do not come close to meeting the U.S. recommended daily allowance (USRDA) of 30 units a day.

Vitamin E, which is soluble only in fats, not in water, is most prominent in vegetable oils, wheat germ and wheat germ oil, sunflower and other seeds, fortified wholegrain cereals and to a lesser extent in nuts and dried beans. The typical daily intake for adults who do not take supplements is less than 10 units.

Thus, without supplements, few Americans would even come close to the 100 units found protective in the new studies.

Those who decide not to wait for definitive studies before leaping on the supplement bandwagon should keep several facts in mind.

One is that without careful studies of thousands of people taking vitamin E supplements for many years, it is not possible to know whether drug doses of it are safe for everyone.

Second, there is no known advantage to taking the more costly "natural" forms of vitamin E, so long as what you buy is measured in international units (IU).

Third and most important, vitamin E is not a substitute for making health-promoting changes in one's living habits like stopping smoking, exercising regularly and eating a low-fat diet.

Value of gene testing doubted

By Eric Adler
N.Y. Times News Service

Although DNA testing one day may offer everyone the opportunity to know his or her genetic future, not even the experts who study the area would necessarily take advantage of that ability.

Here are the opinions of three.

■ Bioethicist Philip Boyle of the Hastings Center in New York: "If there was a whole set of tests out there, a set of 1,000, would I get them? No, probably not, because I would fear how that information would be used because of discrimination.

"Whatever hand I've been dealt, I've been dealt. I would probably not do (the tests) just to know."

Boyle said he didn't need a DNA test to know, for example, that in using alcohol he should consider that his father was an alcoholic.

"You don't need to be a rocket scientist," he said. "I know my relatives had drinking problems, and that knowledge is sufficient to know that I have to be careful. Genetic testing is not the magic bullet people think it's going to be."

■ Genetic counselor Debra Collins of the University of Kansas Medical Center: "That's a big question. It depends on so many things — what the test is for, whether I have a family history of it, how severe the disease is, how I am in my life style, whether I have brothers and sisters who might find the information valuable, the kind of job I have and whether I have health insurance.

"Right now there aren't very many treatments for the diseases we can test for, so I wouldn't want to know. I don't think some of them I would take advantage of.

"But still, it depends."

■ Cell biologist Stuart Newman of New York Medical College in Valhalla, N.Y., and a board member of the Council for Responsible Genetics in Cambridge, Mass.:

"Everyone is an individual. There are people who probably have intrinsic athletic ability who aren't interested in athletics, so knowing about it genetically, what conceivable difference could it make?

"If a child has genes that predisposes him to artistic talent, should his parents pressure him to be an artist whether he likes it or not?"

Newman argues that much of what will be discovered in the future will not be genes that cause or do not cause a certain disease or trait but genes that make one susceptible to one illness or another.

For example, scientists might find genes that indicate that a person is 20 percent prone to cardiovascular disease or 30 percent prone to lung cancer. Newman questions life decisions being made based on odds alone.

"I think DNA testing starts to reduce people to modules and does not look at human uniqueness and individuality."

Roasted chicken good hot, cold

By Linda Anderson

Know how nice it is to be wandering around the supermarket, wondering what you are going to fix for supper, when some nice person asks if you'd like a sample of some new product and your dinner-dilemma is solved?

Anderson

That's what happened to me the other day as I was drifting through the aisles with my mind somewhere else — this nice lady asked me if I wanted to sample Tyson Roasted Chicken, fully cooked and ready to eat. Of course I said yes.

Tyson/Holly Farms makes a lot of chicken-based products. This particular one is just that — chicken. It's a whole chicken seasoned, roasted, refrigerated and ready to be eaten as is or heated and served warm. What could be easier to fix than that?

Like many other meat products, Tyson Roasted Chicken is priced by the pound. The one I bought was $1.69 per pound or $4.24 for the 2.51-pound chicken.

Unlike most other chickens you can buy at the meat counter, this one comes with label advertising: "This delicious fresh, young chicken has been slow roasted with delicate seasonings to create a tender juicy taste. It's perfect cold, right from the package or served hot with your favorite side dish.

"This product is ready to eat cold, right from the package. It's ideal for salads, picnics, camping and tailgate parties. Enjoy it just about anywhere for a 'ready-when-you-are' snack."

Then the label lists directions for heating the chicken in the microwave or the conventional oven, and the ingredients list. The label also lists a toll-free number for consumers to call with questions or comments: 1-800-233-6332.

The chicken really did prove to be tasty. Since the outside temperature that day was climbing, we decided to leave the oven off and just eat the chicken cold. It was wonderful. When compared with fast-food chicken-by-the-piece, and considering we got more than one meal from one chicken, it wasn't too overly expensive either.

One word of warning, though: the lady who was distributing samples at the supermarket told me that the Tyson Roasted Chicken didn't have much fat on it. Fat-free chickens are very difficult to find — and probably very difficult to eat too — so just take that statement with a grain or two of salt.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Clinton moderation should help nation

Finally there are indications that Bill Clinton is realizing — after five months of alienating many people in Washington, D.C., and elsewhere — that the new kid on the block can't dictate which game will be played or even who can play.

Bill Clinton and his crew obviously thought they could bulldoze their way through the nation's capital, but the clumsy effort shredded much of Clinton's support and left his administration teetering on the brink of ineffectiveness. It even looked as though his economic plan, which got through the House, would not pass the Senate.

Now Clinton's starting to learn what most new presidents must: That to be effective a president and his administration much work within the framework of the government.

Ronald Reagan had to learn that lesson, although his immense personal popularity helped him overcome his administrative deficit. So did George Bush, even though he was well versed in the workings of international diplomacy and the American bureaucracy.

Clinton, however, lacks Reagan's personal appeal and Bush's rapport with world leaders. That, when combined with his bulldozing tendency, adds up to political trouble.

In recent days, several of Clinton's moves have indicated he is willing to moderate his liberal approach to government. One was bringing David Gergen, a Republican operative, on board as presidential counselor. Another was Clinton's announced intention to trim his proposed energy tax by $20 billion and to make additional cuts in spending.

Those changes are good. More needs to be done to 1) make Clinton's economic plan realistic and to 2) show the American people that he is in synch with basic values.

At this point, however, his long-awaited moderation is sorely needed.

USDA program develops new markets

WASHINGTON — Funding advertisements for Japanese-made underwear is not how the Agriculture Department usually promotes American farm products abroad.

Anderson

But ever since USDA created the Market Promotion Program in 1986, it has given scores of private companies — foreign and domestic — a total of $400 million to, quite literally, advertise their "wares" overseas. In particular, the program provided $1.6 million to a leading Japanese underwear manufacturer last year so the company could advertise its briefs in Japan.

USDA has justified the underwear subsidy, which caught the eye of Sen. Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., as an incentive for the Japanese company to use American-grown cotton in its underwear. Daschle calls the entire MPP an "international corporate slush fund" that helps pay the advertising budget of some enormously profitable corporations but does virtually nothing for farmers.

More galling to Daschle, however, is the fact that over the last three decades, on average, USDA has paid farmers to stop farming 40 million acres of productive land per year. During the 1980s, it cost taxpayers an average of $13 billion per year to idle that land, according to USDA figures. Last year, those costs reached $12 billion.

Daschle, chairman of the Senate's Subcommittee on Agricultural Research, is pushing for a slice of those costs to be plowed into a revolutionary new program at USDA that's commercializing agricultural products for new industrial uses. The problem is that the Alternative Agricultural Research and Commercialization Center, an independent entity within the USDA running the program, had only $10 million to spend on developing new uses for crops with diminished markets this year.

So on one hand USDA is pouring billions of dollars into idling these crops, and millions more promoting odd products like Japanese-made underwear. But on the other hand, it's short-changing a program that has serious potential to develop new markets for struggling farmers.

"It makes more sense to find new uses for farm crops that will increase demand and price for that crop, than to grow the crop for a market that no longer exists and pay a subsidy to store the surplus," Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., told our associate Ed Henry. Penny sponsored the legislation to create AARC, and his congressional district is home to what many observers consider to be the most innovative "new use" for farm products.

It's called "NewStone," a unique composite material that looks like marble but cuts like wood and is four times harder than oak. It meets all specified conditions for interior applications and meets most requirements for exterior application, and can be used to make furniture, flooring, wall paneling and picture frames — at half the price.

Most importantly, it is made from soybeans and recycled newsprint. Fifty pounds of paper and one bushel of soybeans is needed to make 22 board feet of NewStone material. So, besides the benefits to farmers, consumers and businesses, the new uses will also be very friendly to the environment. For example, 40 percent of all garbage dumped in landfills consists of waste paper that could be used to make NewStone.

Other new industrial uses that have been found for struggling crops run the gamut: from soybean ink, to diesel fuel made from vegetable oils, and golf tees made from corn starch. But besides the novelty of these products, they have intriguing long-term economic possibilities. One USDA-sponsored task force commissioned in the mid-1980s estimated that creating new uses for at least 150 million acres of farmland would generate 750,000 new jobs, increase farm income by $30 billion a year and pump $100 billion into the national economy.

More than 400 companies from across the country applied late last year for grants from AARC to support new use products, but only 20 products have been given seed money because of AARC's limited budget.

Another "new use" product being funded by AARC is windshield washer fluid made from ethanol, which is a fuel derived from corn. The ethanol-based fluid is being developed by a company that now sells a petroleum-based washer fluid. The petroleum-based fluid is toxic and can cause blindness if squirted in a human eye, while the ethanol-based fluid is nontoxic

Media questions choice for jogging secretary

The recent firestorm over the president's decision to withdraw my name as his secretary for jogging has Washington aghast.

"How," the town is asking, "could the White House have selected Buchwald for this Cabinet post in the first place?"

Buchwald

I hate jogging, and I hate people who jog. I think that it's a silly way for anyone to spend his time, and all you get out of it is pain.

My views have been published in such learned journals as Athlete's Foot, Vanity Heel and Broken Knee Magazine.

Why the White House hadn't read them before offering me the job is something I'll never know.

I recall vividly the first meeting I had with the White House personnel committee.

"Does the president know how much I hate jogging?" I asked a 23-year-old aide.

"The president just wants the best man for the job and the only thing he feels bad about is that you are not a woman. He's willing to make an exception for you because you come so highly recommended by Barbra Streisand. We don't think that we'll have any trouble from the FBI about you because of all the gold medals you have won in the Olympics."

"I've never won any gold medals in the Olympics."

"Well, someone in your family has or it wouldn't be in your file."

I agreed to allow my name to be submitted for the job assuming that once the White House recommended you for a position, it would be a shoe-in.

It didn't turn out to be that way. The Reebok sneaker people were the first to discover where I stood on the jogging issue and launched a full-scale advertising campaign against the appointment. Nike followed with a television attack showing hidden video footage of me as a fat, listless person who couldn't see his shoelaces to tie them.

The media began to question President Clinton's judgment in selecting someone as controversial as myself to such a vital post.

Finally, at 3 o'clock in the morning the president called me to the White House and said, "You're dead."

"Does this mean that you're not going to back me as your jogging chief?"

"I made a mistake. I didn't know that you hated jogging as much as you do."

"I have good reason. People who jog always look as if they need a bath."

"Nevertheless, there are too many joggers in the Senate who could block your nomination. I can't defend the articles that you have written ridiculing their favorite pastime."

"I can understand that, Mr. President, but there are a lot of people out there who hate jogging as much as I do. Shouldn't they have a voice in this administration?"

"Of course, but I have to think of my budget first and I can't afford to go to battle for someone who considers that running is dumb."

"Why are you doing this, sir?"

"It's very simple. I can't stand the heat so I'm getting out of the kitchen."

Art Buchwald's column is distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

MISD board should consider safety of students who walk

I am writing to inform Midland of action that our school board has taken, and to implore the community to call the school board to reconsider their decision.

On May 11th, the board tabled the recommendation to eliminate ineligible bus routes, pending input from the city of Midland on safety issues. In order to save a total of $66,000, (approximately $3,400 per route) the school board members voted in their May 25th meeting to eliminate all but one "ineligible" route, the Fairway addition, because of extreme flooding in the area. While I applaud the board for retaining this route, they have made a mistake in not retaining the busing for the children of Crestgate and Briarwood who will be attending Greathouse Elementary.

I am appalled at the insensitivity of the board to the safety of these children. The children will have to walk on Midland Drive and Briarwood Drive (speed 45 mph). Briarwood Drive is the route that the buses take to get to and from the bus barn. There are absolutely no houses, street lights, or shoulders to walk on, only the road itself and overgrown open fields. Also, Walmart has purchased adjacent land, which will add construction trucks and increased traffic.

I am not opposed to children walking to school. I only ask that it be safe for them. On May 11th, I invited each board member to walk on these roads to experience what they are asking 5-, 6-, and 7-year-olds to walk. None accepted my invitation.

I called the city of Midland to see what input they had provided on safety issues. They will be looking into putting school zone signs on Northgate Road and lowering the speed limit. This is great, providing the children make it safely over Midland and Briarwood drives to get to that area.

Please call the school administration at 689-1000 and ask the school board to reinstate the busing for these children until a safe walking route can be provided. A savings of $3,400 is not worth the life of a child.

The board needs to hear that the community cares about the safety of these children. The children cannot speak out for themselves. Please contact the school board.

Slogan 'Buy the Basin' totally misses the point

The current slogan Midland and Odessa are trying to push on their citizens, "Buy the Basin," totally misses the point. This indicates the guilt lies with the consumers and it is their responsibility to the community and shifts the attention from the true culprits — the merchants.

I can give you as many examples as you want why good civic-minded people don't buy in the Permian Basin. Some merchants are either ignorant or refuse to acknowledge the fact that their competition is also outside the Permian Basin (Lubbock, Dallas/Fort Worth, San Antonio). I would prefer buying in Midland but why should I pay a premium to local merchants.

A spiffy slogan and clever advertising campaign is not the answer. The answer is availability and PRICE.

Mexico eases automobile border crossing regulations

WASHINGTON (HNS) Visitors to Mexico have long endured hours waiting in line at border crossing stations to be processed for traveling by car. The cars often overheated and tempers flared before visitors got their Mexican tourist cards and temporary automobile permits.

Beginning July 1, Mexican officials hope waits at border crossings will be cut to 15 minutes or less because U.S. visitors then will be able to get their Mexican tourist cards and auto permits from the American Automobile Association before leaving home.

Although the paperwork speedup will save travelers from the long waits in line associated with processing, it will not mean a detour from the time-consuming searches by customs inspectors.

Pedro Joaquin Coldwell, Mexico's minister of tourism, and Paul R. Verkuil, president of AAA, signed an agreement here Tuesday that allows AAA to issue tourist cards and temporary automobile permits to motorists planning trips south of the border.

Beginning July 1, U.S. travelers will be able to get Mexican tourist cards and auto permits from American AAA affiliates.

AAA-affiliated clubs in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California have been authorized to issue all immigration and customs forms to motorists planning to visit Mexico. Clubs in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona will provide the service to AAA members free of charge and non-members for $20, Verkuil said.

Northern California AAA clubs will provide the service to members for free but will not initially offer it to non-members. In Southern California, non-members will not be offered the service and members will be charged $10.

The difference in the availability of service is because each AAA club is independently owned and operated and has made its own decision on how to offer the services with the Mexican government, said Jerry Cheske, a AAA spokesman.

"Mexico is a vibrant and thriving country whose economy is improving, along with its desire to improve relationships with the United States and Canada," Verkuil said in a news conference

Nazi collaborator shot by 'God's agent' in Paris

PARIS (AP) — Rene Bousquet, the Vichy police chief who sent thousands of Jews to their deaths in World War II, was shot to death in his apartment Tuesday. Police arrested a man who said he acted as "an agent of God."

The assassination occurred on the verge of an expected trial for the 84-year-old Bousquet, accused of persecuting Jews as an agent of Marshal Philippe Petain's collaborationist regime.

The self-professed gunman said he feared Bousquet would never be brought to trial. At a news conference he called shortly before his arrest, Christian Didier compared Bousquet to "a cockroach, a serpent."

Police officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, named Didier as the killer, saying his gun fired the bullets that killed Bousquet and that he was identified by workers in Bousquet's apartment building.

Didier, 49, had no reported connection to Bousquet. He served four months in jail for trying to smuggle a revolver into a Lyon prison in 1987 to kill Gestapo officer Klaus Barbie, the notorious "Butcher of Lyon."

Justice Minister Pierre Mehaignerie said a ruling was expected in a few days that could have led to prosecuting Bousquet for crimes against humanity.

Bomb wounds sightseers on excursion to pyramids

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A bomb apparently aimed at a tour bus exploded Tuesday on the road to the Giza Pyramids, killing an Egyptian and wounding 14 people, including five British tourists.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but the blast appeared to be the work of Muslim extremists who have targeted tourists and Egyptian officials in a 1½-year campaign against the secular government.

The attack occurred as a state security court held a second session in the retrial of radical Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman and 48 others on charges stemming from a 1989 demonstration that turned violent.

The cleric is the spiritual leader of al-Gamaa al-Islamiya, or Islamic Group, which has been blamed for much of the recent violence. He has been in the United States since 1990. Some of his followers there have been implicated in the Feb. 26 bombing of New York's World Trade Center.

Salah el-Derwy, a Tourism Ministry spokesman, quoted police as saying the dead Egyptian was in a car ahead of the bus, which authorities said was the apparent target. Both the bus and car were heavily damaged.

REACTION: Latex allergy can be severe reaction usually comes on rapidly without warning and requires immediate emergency treatment.

This reaction can include hives, swelling in the throat, trouble breathing and rapid heart rate. Nausea and diarrhea may occur, and blood pressure may drop, producing faintness, dizziness, or even loss of consciousness.

Less than 1 percent of the general population is believed to be at risk to latex allergy. Some people have a mild allergic reaction to latex for years, but eventually may become more highly sensitive after repeated exposure to the substance.

In any kind of allergic reaction, frequent contact with the offending substance increases the body's chances of reacting to it.

Latex gloves and devices containing latex are widely used in medical and dental offices, and in home or other settings where medical products are needed.

But latex also is present in many commonly used nonmedical items as well, including shower caps, waistbands, underwear, rubber gloves used around the kitchen, swimsuits, swimming goggles, and scuba and deep-sea diving equipment.

But whether you are a regular user of latex gloves, condoms, or any other latex items, it's important to be able to recognize the symptoms of a reaction.

If you suspect that you may have an allergic reaction to latex products, it's wise to seek medical evaluation to ascertain your allergic status and take appropriate precautions which may include medication for use in an emergency.

The drug epinephrine, for example, can provide immediate treatment in a life-threatening allergy emergency until you can get to a medical facility.

If you have had an anaphylactic reaction, it also is recommended that you wear a Medical Alert bracelet. And, when you go for medical or dental care, be sure to alert these health care professionals that you have a sensitivity to latex.

VITAMINS: Supplements gain favor

the bullets of free radicals.

Natural sources of carotenoids include the most colorful fruits and vegetables, like pink grapefruit, red bell peppers, cantalopes, watermelons, apricots, broccoli and brussel sprouts.

Folic Acid — This is a term for a whole class of B-complex vitamins. They may not have a big effect on free radicals, but are important to athletes because they have a key part to play in replacing muscle, blood and skin cells.

Natural sources of folic acid include asparagus, spinach, lentils, beans and black-eyed peas.

"Vitamin supplement pills are not magic bullets," Winkel cautions. "The very best source for vitamins lies in whole foods. Then you can derive added benefits from other molecules in these foods, and attributes like high fiber. Mom was right — you do need to eat your vegetables!

"But very few actually eat our recommended, five servings of fruits and vegetables each day. Probably fewer than 9 percent of the U.S. population. Also, if you exercise heavily, its hard to eat enough mass to get all the vitamins you can use. So, that's where the supplement pills come in."

Jenifer Peale, a nutritionist with a Berkeley firm called Body Composition, has used her infrared pen to analyze the body fat of the entire Golden State Warriors basketball team, and then make dietary recommendations.

Peale concurs with Winkel, that "Vitamin pills are no substitute for a healthy diet. You've still got to chew that carrot. The benefit is, you can really eat as much whole grain and fresh vegetables as you want! You'll never have to leave the table hungry, just to stay thin."

According to these nutritionists, and the federal Food and Drug Administration, the jury is still out on whether these "anti-oxidant" vitamins definitely postpone aging. But damage from free radicals is implicated as a cause of cancer and heart disease. And these vitamins do reduce the damage from free radicals.

"Think of consuming these vitamins as a life insurance policy," says Winkel. "A policy that pays off while you're still alive."

DEAR ABBY

Recycled presents make better stories than gifts

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widower for four years. Last Christmas, my daughter gave me a toaster-oven, brand-new, in its original box. When I removed it from the box, I found a card wishing my daughter and her husband "a long and happy marriage." They were married six years ago.

Van Buren

Abby, how do you and your readers feel about recycled gifts? — J.D.D., MONTGOMERY, ALA.

DEAR J.D.: If the gift has never been used, it should be accepted as a brand-new one. However, some are not. As to my readers' feelings on the subject, let me share the experiences of some whose letters I have saved for some time. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you received an electric coffeemaker for a wedding gift that not only looked as though it had been used, but didn't work? There was no warranty coupon with it, either. I took it to an electrical appliance repair shop and was informed that the model was so old there were no available parts for it. — STUCK IN HOLLISTER, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: For my 25th wedding anniversary, I was given a beautiful panty and bra set — pink satin trimmed in lace. I knew I would never wear it, so I took it to the store whose name was on the box, hoping to exchange it for something a little more practical. I was advised that the merchandise had not been purchased at that store. I tried another store. Same story. I finally gave up. (It's still in my drawer.) — HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR ABBY: I once received a handsome purse for my birthday. It bore a well-known label, but looked a little shopworn. The zipper was jammed, so I took it to a shoe repair shop where they got the zipper to work. There I found a coin purse with a dime and two pennies. — MRS. F.S.A., SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: I received a book for Christmas from a friend I'll call Louise. When I opened the book, out fell a note that read: "Louise, this best seller really is a waste of time. If you don't want it, give it to someone you don't care for." (Signed "Nellie.") My name is ... NANCY, HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR ABBY: I once received a pair of white kid gloves for my birthday. One looked a little soiled, but that wasn't so bad. When I started to try them on, I realized that I had two "lefts." — PHYLISS IN LITTLE ROCK

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

MISD to keep all bus routes

■ Buses to run on ineligible routes while district builds walkways and drop-off lanes at schools.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Buses will keep running for pupils on ineligible routes for the short term, while the school district attempts to construct walkways and drop-off lanes for the long term.

Midland school board trustees reconsidered providing buses to some ineligible routes Tuesday night, primarily in areas where new schools are located away from residences.

Trustees voted 6-1 (Adela Marmolejo opposed) to retain ineligible bus routes (located within two miles from schools) on early morning and late afternoon rural schedules.

The board approved a plan developed by the staff on its second reading. The motion included pursuing capital improvements including adding a temporary road or walkway in the Greathouse area (at a cost of about $20,000) adding a loop or a one-way turn lane above the school (at a cost of about $21,000) and adding a bus lane to Santa Rita (at a cost of $19,775) and expanding a lane at the school (for about $12,000).

The motion also included re-evaluating the ineligible routes in two years.

"With so many kids being dropped off all at once in (a span of) 15 minutes, congestion will never be eliminated," said Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services for Midland Independent School District.

"This is just a way to control and channel congestion," he said.

Heidelberg proposed expanding the current bus lanes at Santa Rita to be used for parents to drop off children. The bus lanes would be relocated to enter into the parking lot with a new exit developed north of the school.

The school currently faces a street that dead ends north of the school.

He proposed adding a temporary one-way loop or turning lane for Greathouse.

The only hitch in the Greathouse loop is that MISD does not own the property where it would be added.

"It would be a temporary lane, made with inexpensive asphalt, not curbing or guttering," Heidelberg

Energy meeting

AUSTIN — With 6.5 percent of the national population, Texas would bear 12.5 percent of a proposed Btu energy tax burden, according to state Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. For that reason, Parker is leading nine state lawmakers to Washington, D.C., to urge the Texas congressional delegation to oppose that portion of President Clinton's deficit reduction plan. Representatives from the House are Tom Uher, D-Bay City, Layton Black, D-Goldwaithe, Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, Tom Ramsey, D-Mount Vernon and Harold Dutton, D-Houston. The delegaton will meet with the Texas Democratic Congressional Caucus today and with Texas Republican members Thursday. The group also plans to meet with Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., and Sen. John Breaux, D-La., who are leading Senate negotiations to reduce or change the Btu tax.

Midland County Sheriff's officials identified a man who was killed after a telephone pole fell on him Monday. Little said either the brake on the pole didn't hold or the wrench slipped, causing the pole to strike Shook in the head. Shook was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Day camp is chance for girls to have a good time

■ Volunteers lead campers in games, crafts an other activities.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Singing, making crafts and playing games are just some of the fun-filled events keeping girls busy this week during the Permian Basin Girl Scout Day Camp.

The annual event, which started Monday and ends Friday, occurs each summer immediately after the school year concludes. The day camp was first held more than 30 years ago. One hunderd leaders and more than 400 girls will join this year's event.

Day Camp Director Darlene Jordan said the camp is completely run by volunteers, including moms and scout leaders.

Ms. Jordan said the leaders vary from new moms to women who have participated with Girl Scouts for 40 years. Plus, teen-age scouts are assisting leaders in the different games and crafts.

"It is a program that gives the girls a chance to do this at least once a year . . . a lot of these girls aren't scouts . . . we're hoping that they will enjoy this enough to make them want to come back and join Girl Scouts," Ms. Jordan said.

"It's girl-oriented," Ms. Jordan said of the reason for camp. "It's just so the girls can come out and have a good time. We try to teach them responsibility and how to get along with others."

MPD has new form of protection

■ Officers carry cans of 'OC spray,' a form of cayenne pepper that replaces the Mace they used to carry.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

It may not look powerful, but the small can of concentrated spray Midland police officers carry with them provides plenty of protection — more, sometimes, than their nightstick.

Since the spring of 1992, Midland officers have been trained in and carry OC spray, a concentrated form of cayenne pepper, which replaced Mace as a form of protection against potentially dangerous subjects.

"Mace doesn't work on all people," said Midland Police Lt. Jerry Compton. "Mace is an irritant and a lot depended on the person's tolerance for pain. However, OC spray will literally slam your eyes shut."

The spray, which Compton said was originally developed for the forest service to protect people against bears, causes an intense burning in the eyes and throat. The eyes will tear or shut and the throat will constrict. The effects last typically from 30-45 minutes.

"It doesn't stop you from breathing," said Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia. "But, if someone panics, they will feel like they are going to suffocate. But, they won't."

"They can breathe, but not enough to continue fighting," added Compton. "It takes the fight right out of them."

The department's SWAT team was trained to use the spray by a tactical supervisor from the Dallas Police Department. The team was trained to instruct the rest of the department.

Garcia said training includes a four-hour session of instruction, a written test and officers being sprayed with the concentrate themselves.

"Being sprayed yourself teaches you not to abuse it and gives you a healthy respect for the spray and what it can do," Compton said.

"You have a lot of confidence in the stuff once you have felt what it can do," Garcia said.

The OC spray not only is more reliable than Mace, it also settles better than Mace does.

"The OC spray clings to the target, settles and then eventually goes away," Compton said. "Mace would linger in the air. If you sprayed someone with

Capital-murder trial judge allows accused's statement

■ Attorney seeks to suppress client's explanation of how he and friend killed wealthy Fort Worth couple.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — A judge refused Tuesday to suppress a statement in which a defendant told how he and a companion bludgeoned a wealthy Fort Worth couple and slit their throats.

The ruling was critical to the state's capital murder case against Jeffery Dillingham, 20, who is accused of the savage slaying last year of Caren Koslow, 40.

Jack Koslow, 49, also was beaten and slashed but survived the attack in the early morning hours of March 12, 1992.

"I hit Mr. Koslow in the back of the head, on the neck with a prybar," Dillingham said in the recorded statement. "Then I hit Mrs. Koslow. I hit Mr. Koslow some more, and Mrs. Koslow started screaming.

"And then I hit Mrs. Koslow some more."

The state maintains that Dillingham and longtime friend Brian Salter, also 20, were part of a bizarre murder-for-hire scheme orchestrated by Jack Koslow's teen-age daughter Kristi.

"I was supposed to get, from what Brian said, $500,000 up front and . . . the rest of it through this company that we were going to start," Dillingham said.

Miss Koslow, now 18, told police two weeks after the slaying that she did, in fact, offer the two young men money she expected to receive from her slain parent's inheritance.

"I guess I meant it when I said it," the teen-ager told investigators. "But I didn't think it would actually happen."

Woman sues Southwestern Bell for $1 million

■ Midlander claims she was fired because of her age.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

A Midland woman has filed a $1 million civil rights lawsuit against Southwestern Bell for allegedly firing her because of her age and an Odessa woman has filed a lawsuit against the city of Odessa claiming that she was fired because of her gender and ethnicity.

Marilyn C. Cantrell, 57, filed a discrimination lawsuit against Southwestern Bell Telephone alleging the company fired her in June 1991 after she had worked for the company for more than 33 years.

According to the lawsuit, Ms. Cantrell was told by the operator services manager that she would be discharged or demoted for performance problems, but states that she followed all proper procedures in her duties.

Ms. Cantrell, in the lawsuit, accuses the phone company with "engaging in policies that denied her equal employment opportunities and violated the Age Discrimination Employment Act," as well as her civil rights and the 14th amendment.

The lawsuit said the defendant failed to train certain employees in respect to the "deliberate indifference" to the 14th amendment and equal protection.

Ms. Cantrell's lawsuit requests that she be reinstated and paid more than $1 million in damages.

A Southwestern Bell Telephone representative declined to comment on the pending litigation.

An Odessa woman, Gloria Ramirez, filed a lawsuit against the city asking for an undisclosed amount of damages after she was discharged from the city in 1991.

Ms. Ramirez alleges that she worked for the city since 1977 and worked her way up to operations supervisor when she was fired for failing to report a motor vehicle accident that she says never happened.

Ms. Ramirez said, in the lawsuit, that other employees, male and white, were allowed to actually commit infractions without being penalized or fired.

The lawsuit requests that the judge order an injunction to prevent the city from discriminating against gender and national origin; the city be ordered to pay appropriate back pay and reimburse her for lost pension and other benefits as well as reinstate her to her position.

The Odessa City Attorney was unavailable for comment.

Tribe breaks ground for 'superbingo'

EL PASO (AP) — Some expectations rose, others fell as a bulldozer crushed the adobe facade of the deserted pottery factory on the Tigua Indian reservation Tuesday.

The building's demolition was met by tribal leaders with visible glee. It was part of an unorthodox groundbreaking ceremony for a "superbingo" facility the tribe hopes will be the forerunner of a world-class casino.

For the Tiguas, the ceremony will possibly mean the beginning of a climb toward the self sufficiency other tribes have achieved through gambling operations.

"Today, we have accomplished a dream. Not only for us, but for our children and for future generations to come," said tribal Gov. Julian Granillo.

For El Paso's charitable institutions, the groundbreaking spurred the fear of declining operating funds, which they say will come as the superbingo facility forces charity bingo operations out of business.

"We kind of see the handwriting on the wall. We feel almost helpless," said Rita Kimball, executive director of the Learning Disabilities Association.

Assistant Chief Mike Pedraza began the ritualistic destruction on the Ysleta Del Sur Pueblo reservation by climbing aboard the yellow bulldozer to bring it to grumbling life.

A driver then smashed the machine into the building several times. The front wall gave way, crumbling inward amidst a cloud of rising dust.

There was some applause and one tribe member gave Tigua Gaming Commissioner Vince Munoz a hearty pat on the back, which by then was covered with a layer of dust.

The emotional displays validated what Munoz had said earlier: "I know there are a lot of tribe members who are very happy that this is happening today."

Munoz said the bingo facility, dubbed "Speaking Rock," will be operating by October, offering daily sessions.

The high-stakes jackpots are expected to run to a high of about $20,000 to $30,000, though facility officials say they can't yet nail down a figure.

Projections say Speaking Rock will generate $4 million to $6 million for the tribe each year. Seven Circle Resorts, the management company hired to run it, has guaranteed the tribe will receive at least $50,000 each month.

But the tribe is really banking on their bingo operation giving way to a casino.

The Tiguas had been negotiating with the state on a Class III gambling compact, which would allow them to operate table games and slot machines.

But Gov. Ann Richards said the state cannot authorize such a treaty, prompting the tribe to sue in federal court to force the negotiations.

A hearing on the lawsuit is scheduled in October.

Meantime, tribal leaders say bingo, which does not require state approval, will generate money for the largely impoverished tribe.

Charitable groups and the El Paso Bingo Association have protested, however, that the Tiguas will benefit at their expense.

Tom Kimball, a bingo association member, said service organizations heavily reliant on bingo for revenue won't be able to compete with a superbingo facility.

By law, they are limited to three sessions a week and can offer only $2,500 in prizes in bingo, $1,500 in pull-tab games each session.

"I just don't want to see us get wiped out," Tom Kimball said.

GOP chair blasts Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) — State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer is blasting Democrat leaders over the latest school funding plan, saying they either didn't know its real financial effect on school districts or didn't tell the public.

But House Public Education Committee Chairwoman Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca, said it was no secret that the Legislature — seeing no public support for a state tax increase — wasn't putting in enough state funding to keep up with anticipated enrollment growth.

Ms. Linebarger also noted that the measure had bipartisan support. She and Senate Education Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, were main sponsors of the bill.

Meyer said, "Eighty percent of the local school districts in Texas face either cuts in funding or local property tax increases as a result of the Legislature's latest school funding plan, and Democrat leaders who pushed the plan either didn't know its impact or failed to tell the truth to the public and legislators."

He said that's either "incompetence or a deliberate effort to hide the truth."

Ms. Linebarger responded, "It's never been a secret that the state did not have enough money to cover projected enrollment growth ... There's been no support in the state of Texas that I know of for the state Legislature to pass a tax bill to produce that extra money."

DAY: Camp teaches basic skills

(From 1B)

"Basically it is just for the girls to come out and have a good time," Ms. Jordan said.

One group of youngsters, who will be in the first grade this fall, explained why they liked the day camp.

Megan Bryant, 5, said she likes to sing songs and day camp is "funner" that staying at home.

Erica Huggins, also 5, said she likes making things, especially the earrings.

But, 6-year-old Natalie Boyce liked playing on the playground in the park the best.

Day camp leader Cathie Bane said the day camp is especially beneficial for the children in her group.

"They get to meet new kids and can decide if they'd like to join the Brownies next year," Ms. Bane said. "Plus they learn basic skills like knot-tying, taking care of the outdoors and how to build and handle a small campfire."

Plus, the camp is "just a lot of fun and gives them something to do in the summertime," Ms. Bane said.

Ms. Jordan said the younger girls, from kindergarten to third grade, for the most part stay at the Girl Scout facilities and participate in activities including singing, games and crafts.

She said the older girls, from fourth grade and up, get to do anything from canoeing to horseback riding and cycling.

And none of the girls go without eating good food.

"Girl Scouts eat very well," Ms. Jordan said with a laugh. "We have healthy appetites."

BUSES: MISD to try and deal with safety concerns

(From 1B)

said. "It could be torn up as development comes through."

The Santa Rita traffic improvements would be more permanent and would include curbs and guttering.

Trustees said funds to provide the capital improvements would come from district reserves.

"Let's try to solve the problem for the long term," said trustee Gary Willis. He noted that Santa Rita has had an ineligible bus route for a decade.

Heidelberg said the "prime driver" of the staff recommendations solve the safety problems," Willis said.

School board president Jack Hightower agreed. "We have to solve the safety concerns. If we stop the routes before we solve the safety concerns, whe haven't done anything," he said to resounding applause from a roomful of parents.

Several parents addressed the board and thanked trustees for was to eliminate waiting times on cluster routes. Retaining the ineligible bus routes will not increase waiting time for cluster connections.

"We will do the roadwork to their willingness to "reconsider the issue."

Some parents suggested buses be provided for Santa Rita pupils until Mockingbird becomes a through street.

Other parents complained about a lack of street lighting for the new schools, the new school campuses' isolation from residential areas, and lack of crossing guards and speed bumps.

In other action, trustees approved synchronizing beginning and ending times for the school day.

A report indicated that fourth-graders in the district's Gifted and Talented program have good spelling skills, and an analysis of the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) test for grades four, eight 10, was expected to be given.

Trustees voted unanimously in favor of a resolution supporting locating a new elementary school — when and if it is to be built — south of Interstate 20. Any such proposed facility would be announced prior to a bond issue that would be placed before voters in the district.

Trustees also voted to accept the retirement of MISD Assistant Superintendent Bill Denton, effective June 30.

OC: New spray subdues suspects

(From 1B)

Mace and then handled them, you would get it on yourself. Mace stays in the air and on a person for a much longer time. With the OC, you spray the person, wait a couple of seconds and then handle them and you don't get any on you."

The spray is a preferable means of dealing with suspects that are out-of-control, such as those who are drunk or on drugs, said Garcia.

"You can beat on a guy who is drunk or high all day long and he won't feel it," he said. "And, those are the ones who will fight you at every turn. It usually takes several officers and that looks really bad, like six or so officers are beating up on one guy. And, if you try to hit them in the leg or arm, they don't feel it. With the spray, the effect is instant. They can't go anywhere."

"It is definitely a more humane way of controlling someone than hitting them," Garcia continued. "It is more effective, more humane, and, in my opinion, a better weapon, than a nightstick."

KOSLOW: Two defendants' statements differ

by the intruders interrupted the attack and frightened them away before they could kill Jack Koslow. The three suspects have been jailed in lieu of bond since their arrest two weeks after the bloody assault at the Koslow's home in Rivercrest, an area of stately mansions occupied by some of the city's oldest and richest families.

Dillingham, who police believe killed Caren Koslow, is the first of the three to stand trial on capital murder charges.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin next week in Wichita Falls where the case was transferred on a change of venue.

After a daylong hearing Tuesday, State District Judge Bob Gill denied the motion to suppress Dillingham's statement.

Defense lawyers claim it was obtained illegally and was not "freely and voluntarily" given to police.

"The defense further contends that any and all evidence, of whatever nature derived from the involuntary statement is likewise inadmissible as fruit of the poisonous tree," attorney Jack Strickland argued in the motion.

Dillingham, tall, dark-haired and soft-spoken took the stand to say he would not have given the statement had he known it was a capital offense and thereby punishable by death.

In response, chief prosecutor Alan Levy played the entire taped statement for the judge and then quizzed Dillingham extensively about his responses to homicide detective C.D. Brannan.

"You didn't know a murder committed during a robbery, burglary or for remuneration was capital murder?" Levy asked.

"No sir," Dillingham replied.

"You didn't have any idea it was capital murder?" Levy continued.

"No sir," he repeated.

"Did he ever call you a thug ... a murderer ... or a cutthroat?" Levy asked.

"No sir."

In his statement, Dillingham said he and Salter were ransacking a closet looking for money when his companion found a knife.

"I don't remember if the gun went off before Brian cut their throats or afterwards ... I saw him slit Mrs. Koslow's throat, but I turned around and didn't see exactly what he did to Mr. Koslow."

The young men's statements differed significantly on who wielded the knife. Salter said he did not know the Koslows' throats were slashed until Dillingham told him after they left the house.

"He told me that he had cut them," Salter told police. "He did not specify where, but he said he had used the knife on them."

Counsel hopes to bar extra utility costs

AUSTIN (AP) — The state advocate for utility customers says Texas Utilities Electric Co. should be barred from billing ratepayers for at least $455 million in building costs for Unit 2 of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant.

The Office of Public Utility Counsel contended in a Tuesday report that at least $455 million of the plant's cost since mid-1989 was due to unreasonable actions by TU Electric. The report was filed with the Public Utility Commission in a TU Electric rate case.

A spokeswoman for TU Electric, Kathi Miller, said, "I don't know what they are talking about. Certainly, we don't think any of our actions were unreasonable."

The $455 million is in addition to $133 million of Comanche Peak Unit 2 costs that the PUC found to be imprudent in an earlier rate case, said the public counsel's office, which represents residential and small commercial ratepayers. Those costs were incurred before mid-1989.

Lawmakers pledge to ax SSC

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Congressional opponents of the superconducting super collider vowed Tuesday to kill any further funding for the $10 billion project, saying the nation can't afford the atom smasher now under construction in Texas.

A bipartisan coalition of lawmakers pledged to work harder this year to deny federal money for the project, a goal they nearly reached a year ago when the House voted 232-181 to shelve construction. That decision was reversed only after intense lobbying from the Senate, with the help of Lloyd Bentsen, the former Democratic senator from Texas who is now treasury secretary.

This year saving the embattled collider will be even more difficult, given the bitter battle over the budget and the fact that Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison is taking Bentsen's seat. These developments have emboldened the atom smasher's critics.

"This time we have them (collider backers) on the run already," asserted Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., at a Capitol Hill news conference. "It should be harder than ever to vote for this low-priority project."

Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., said, "Hopefully, this is the beginning of the end for the super collider. The bottom line is, do we have the money to pay for this sort of an exotic project?" he asked. "I concluded three years ago that we didn't have the money then, and we darn sure don't have the money now."

The Clinton administration has requested $640 million for the project in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, a 19 percent increase over this year's allocation. But the White House has expressed only lukewarm support for the collider.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., a leading Senate foe of the collider, said he was confident that Congress will ax the project this year.

Bumpers called the collider a "massive public works program for one state," He added: "We're going to give (Texas Republican Sen.) Phil Gramm a chance at those spending cuts he's been clamoring about." Gramm has been a consistent advocate of deeper federal spending cuts, but has also been a staunch ally of the super collider.

The collider is envisioned as a 54-mile oval tunnel in which subatomic particles would be accelerated to nearly the speed of light and smashed together. Scientists foresee it as a major key to future understanding of the origin of matter. The project, under construction south of Dallas, is expected to be completed in 2002 at a total cost of $10 billion.

Critics have long said the collider is an expensive white elephant that drains research dollars away from more basic science, but its supporters claim the facility is essential to keep the United States a leader in scientific research.

A bipartisan group of Texas lawmakers, in a separate news conference, defended the collider and scoffed at the critics' predictions of victory in killing the project.

Rep. Joe Barton, a Texas Republican in whose district much of the collider would be built, said that saving the project "is going to be an educational challenge, but I'm optimistic we can do it."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Welcome an opportunity to improve your finances through part-time activities. An inspirational book or video helps you stay motivated in the fall. A complete business turnaround is possible by December. Early in 1994, patch up any differences with a longtime ally. Romance will be unpredictable as spring approaches. Avoid overreacting. You gain a significant advantage by remaining calm when others blow off steam.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Johnny Depp and Michael J. Fox, composer Cole Porter, newscaster Marvin Kalb.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Change your plans to accommodate others. Your kindness will be richly rewarded. An excellent day to tackle a project requiring intense concentration.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put your energy into new projects. Protect an original idea with a copyright or patent. Important papers surface in a mysterious way. You might be better off not finding out how.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lower profits or earnings could cause concern now. Look for new ways to reduce costs. Do not let impatience drive you into acting impulsively. Traveling salespeople find many new customers.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Act purposefully with new clients and they will give you more business. Computers can save you a lot of effort. Spend some time alone with each of your children.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Not a good day for seeking publicity. Evening hours are the best time to display your know-how. Take special pains with your appearance. Discuss a recurring problem with a loyal friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be prepared to sign an important agreement. The benefits could be great for you and your heirs. Accepting a social invitation could lead to a sparkling new romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day to tie up loose financial ends. An investment deserves closer scrutiny. Defer to an expert. Good luck and romance will come your way if you play your cards carefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Jealousy could harm a personal relationship. Reduce your workload before your health suffers. Good eating habits and daily exercise will improve your mental outlook. Unwind tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let go of those unnecessary worries crowding your life. Mate needs to know your real needs. Being more assertive could improve your marriage. Sort out a financial or bookkeeping problem without further delay.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Not a good time to change the direction of your career. Making a quick buck now could cost you dearly later on. If tired of scenes, look for an even-tempered romantic partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Arrange your work or school schedule so that you feel more comfortable about what you are doing. Writers and artists should persevere. A lucky break is likely! Nurture an important relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A strong sense of self will carry you past any obstacles you encounter today. Observe all safety rules and open new lines of communication with a co-worker. Romance takes a backseat to career.

Opening lead: Four of ♠

On many hands, success or failure depends on trump control. To illustrate what we mean, here's an object lesson in the art of declarer play.

The bidding is not without interest. South had no good bid on the third round of the auction. While two spades might have been a suit, the main inference that could be drawn from that call was that South was unable to bid no trump. After cue-bidding to show slam interest, North could not do more than bid five diamonds because there was no guarantee that South held good trumps. With a reasonable suit, South proceeded to slam.

Declarer won the spade lead in dummy and led the jack of diamonds, covered by the queen and king. Since 12 tricks were assured if trumps broke 3-2, declarer drew a second trump. When East showed out, the contract was in grave danger. Declarer ruffed a spade on the table and started to run clubs. Although South could discard a spade when East ruffed the third club, there was no way to get to the board to cash the good clubs. Declarer received a slice of luck when the king of hearts was onside, so the contract went down only one trick.

Let's go back to trick two, when East covered the jack of diamonds lead from dummy, and see what would happen if South allowed East to hold the trick! When West follows, the contract is virtually assured. Best is for East to shift to a heart. Declarer rises with the ace, ruffs a spade in dummy and then daws trumps and runs clubs. In all, South scores four trumps, a ruff, the major-suit aces and five clubs—12 in all.

Prince marks 35th by breaking with band, changing his name

MINNEAPOLIS — A song on Prince's last album declared, "My name is Prince." Now it isn't. But what is it?

Prince

The Minneapolis-born pop star celebrated his 35th birthday Monday by changing his name and announcing he's breaking from his band.

From now on, Prince wants to be referred to with the symbol that combines the symbols for male and female, his publicist said. The same combination symbol serves as the title for his latest album.

The symbol has appeared in Prince videos, on his concert stages and on his clothing and guitar. Apparently there's no spoken word for it.

"This is not a joke. This is very serious," said Karen Lee, vice president of publicity for Prince's Paisley Park Records in Los Angeles. The musician has not revealed a pronunciation for the name. Lee said he was signing the symbol at a recent autograph session at a record store in Atlanta.

What's his name also announced he's separating from the New Power Generation, although the band will open for and play with him on his European tour. No reason was given for either change.

He has recorded and toured with the NPG since 1990. The band recently completed a solo recording project and is expected to reunite with him on future projects, publicist Michael Pagnotta said.

The former Prince opens a five-week European tour July 26 in Sheffield, England. Other stops include Sweden, Norway, Holland, Spain, Portugal, Austria, Germany, France and Belgium.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — It's reunion time at Beverly Hills High School.

The reunion this weekend will celebrate the school's 65th anniversary. It's the first time graduates from every class have been invited back at one time.

Richard Dreyfuss, Betty White, Rob Reiner, Shaun Cassidy, Jackie Cooper, Corbin Bernsen, Nicholas Cage and Richard Chamberlain are some of the graduates expected at the "Back to Beverly" party.

Two days of activities at the school will include an alumni basketball tournament, sock hops and a celebrity parade.

Organizers weren't sure how many of the 30,000 graduates would show up.

NEW YORK — The Man in Black has joined forces with Bono.

Johnny Cash has teamed with U2 for a track on the Irish band's album, "Zooropa." He sings lead on "The Wanderer," a song that U2 lead singer Bono says was written with the country music legend in mind.

"He arrived in Dublin, and I wrote a song for him the same day," Bono said. "It's one of the best things we've ever recorded, and I'm not even on it."

Cash also is changing record labels — and what a change it is. Def American Records, home of gangster rappers The Geto Boys and speed metal band Danzig, has lured Cash away from Mercury Polygram Nashville.

Label owner Rick Rubin, who produced recent albums by Mick Jagger and the Red Hot Chili Peppers, will produce Cash's next record.

"I'll be expanding my scope of activity while experiencing the excitement of today's contemporary music," Cash said.

OXFORD, England — Prince Charles, who will head the Church of England when he becomes king, has agreed to become patron of a center for Islamic studies.

The Oxford Center for Islamic Studies, which is affiliated with Oxford University, promotes research and education on Islamic tradition and Muslim societies.

The center issued a statement welcoming Charles's decision as "an endorsement of the aims of the center and as a symbol of the contribution it seeks to make toward greater international understanding and toleration."

There are about 2 million Muslims in Britain, where the Church of England is the state church.

Members of the royal family are frequently asked to become patrons of charities and cultural groups.

President Clinton was on the Washington end of a speaker phone Sunday evening as 50 friends of Virginia Kelley sang "Happy Birthday" at her 70th-birthday celebration in the Las Vegas home of Dr. Elias Ghanem. Ghanem raised funds for the Clinton campaign last year.

Among the guests were Wayne Newton and Col. Tom Parker, formerly Elvis Presley's manager.

Wishing his mother well, the president said that she seemed to be having a good time in Las Vegas. Mrs. Kelley spent last week at the Mirage Hotel there with her husband, Richard Kelley. She is planning to be in Washington this week for eighth-grade graduation of her granddaughter, Chelsea.

The president's mother seemed undaunted by the barrage of criticism directed at her son lately. "He's going to be OK," she said. "Anytime you want to implement change, you're going to have a tough uphill battle. He knew that."

Prosecutors drop charges against screaming mother

■ DA says he won't pursue case because media portrayed teens as rapists.

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — Prosecutors dropped misdemeanor charges Tuesday against a woman accused of assault and disorderly conduct at a bus-stop confrontation with a group of teen-age boys.

Reiko Phillips maintains that the boy she initially confronted had raped her daughter last summer, then taunted the girl about the rape. Ms. Phillips says she grabbed his collar, shook him and warned him to cut out the harassment.

Ms. Phillips, 33, was charged with Class C misdemeanor assault against the boy, who she believed raped her daughter. She also was charged with disorderly conduct for screaming threats and curses at three other boys at the bus stop.

Her trial was set for Tuesday.

Lubbock County District Attorney Travis Ware said he dropped the charges because of news coverage he says branded the bystanders as rapists.

Neither of the two boys who pressed charges was a rape suspect, Ware said. He refused to confirm whether the boy initially confronted was the boy accused in the rape.

Parents of the two who pressed charges had "concerns that it would not be in their children's best interest to proceed with this criminal charge due to the fact that their kids had been erroneously labeled rapists," Ware said.

Ms. Phillips says she intended to confront only the alleged rapist. She said she began screaming at the other teens when they screamed at her.

Her emotions were mixed Tuesday.

"I am ecstatic," she said. "But he (Ware) is making me out to look like I did something wrong."

Three women protested outside the Lubbock County Courthouse with signs including, "If a Father Attacked the Attackers, He Would Be a Hero," and "Punish the Rapists, Not the Victim's Mother."

Ware said the boys accused of raping Ms. Phillips' 13-year-old daughter were not prosecuted because Ms. Phillips would not allow the girl to cooperate with authorities.

Cult called 911 after raid started, panel says

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Members of the Branch Davidian cult reacted to a Feb. 28 federal raid on their compound near Waco, by calling the local 911 emergency number, a congressional source said Tuesday.

A tape recording of the 911 call, which is scheduled for public release today, could help buttress cult members' assertions that they considered themselves under attack by agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

ATF officials have said that federal agents walked into an unprovoked ambush by cult leader David Koresh and his followers. The resulting shootout left four ATF agents dead and 16 wounded.

A tape of the 30-minute phone call from cult members to the McClennan County Sheriff's Office, which includes conversations with Koresh, is scheduled for release by a House Appropriations subcommittee.

The panel, which oversees the ATF, will examine the agency's role in the cult standoff in a two-day hearing. Subcommittee aides and officials with the sheriff's office declined to discuss details of the taped phone call.

"I can't talk about that until they release it," said Lt. Larry Lynch, who is scheduled to testify at today's congressional hearing on behalf of the sheriff's department.

The congressional panel also intends to hear today from seven ATF officials, including director Stephen Higgins and David Troy, head of the agency's intelligence division. Assistant Treasury Secretary Ronald Noble, who is heading a separate Treasury Department investigation into the ATF raid, will also appear at the hearing.

Among other questions, lawmakers examining ATF's role in the cult standoff hope to determine whether federal agents knew or should have known that they would come under fire from cult members. The congressional investigation will also examine whether ATF officials endangered the raiding agents by notifying reporters in advance of the raid.

Media crews trailed more than 100 federal agents to the cult compound for the Sunday morning raid.

Gunman shoots bystander in failed robbery

AUSTIN (AP) — A gun battle at a bank during a failed robbery attempt "was like a war," says a woman wounded in the confrontation.

"It was just shot after shot after shot," said Annette Jenkins, 37, a Frost Bank customer. She was wounded when one of two masked gunmen exchanged fire Monday with an off-duty Austin police officer working as a bank security guard, Austin Police Sgt. James Kortan said.

"When I was down (one of the gunmen) was hollering at the security guard to put down his gun or he was going to shoot me," said Ms. Jenkins, who was hit in the leg. She was released Tuesday from Brackenridge Hospital.

The gunmen fled the bank, and there had been no arrests in the case as of Tuesday, according to the Austin Police Department. Robert Huthnance, president of Frost Bank-Austin, said the two left with no money.

The 18-year-old Bell, also a third baseman, led Cincinnati Moeller to the Ohio state championship this year, hitting .407 with 4 homers and 22 RBIs during the regular season. The 6-2, 185-pound right-handed hitter stole 23 bases and scored 30 runs.

Garrison honored

OKLAHOMA CITY — Former football greats Joe Washington and Walt Garrison are among the six newest members of the Oklahoma Sports Hall of Fame, it was announced Tuesday.

The Jim Thorpe Association announced that Bobby Murcer, Marques Haynes, the late Freckles Brown and the late Bloomer Sullivan also will be inducted during ceremonies Aug. 20 in Oklahoma City.

Garrison, a native of Lewisville, was a star at Oklahoma State from 1963-65 before going on to a long career with the Dallas Cowboys of the NFL. He played in two Super Bowls with the Cowboys and retired as the team's third-leading rusher.

Pitino signs pact

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The University of Kentucky on Tuesday extended coach Rick Pitino's contract through the 1999-2000 season.

The announcement was made at a meeting of the Athletics Association Board of Directors meeting. Pitino will receive a $1 million bonus if he fulfills the contract.

Pitino's base salary of $131,000 will remain the same for the next three years. His salary will jump to $150,000 beginning in 1996.

Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton said the bonus clause was an incentive for Pitino to stay the length of the contract.

Michael Jordan will try to guard against outside distractions...

■ Jordan and Barkley — olympians, golfing buddies — square off for NBA championship.

By Bill Barnard
Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley heard from Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson last summer about what it means to have your private life under constant scrutiny.

Tonight, Barkley and the Phoenix Suns get their first lesson from Jordan and the Chicago Bulls about the NBA Finals.

"This was the first year I've had the limelight like Michael and Magic," Barkley said after practice Tuesday for the series opener. "I talked to them last summer about what it was like. This is the first time I've really experienced it. Basically, it was because the Phoenix Suns were winning."

■ NBA Finals: Chicago at Phoenix, 8 p.m., NBC.

Barkley, for years one of the NBA's best and most outspoken players, got a taste of what Jordan's life outside of basketball is like when reports linked him with rock star Madonna. Jordan has stopped talking to the media in the wake of what he believes is unfair reporting of his gambling habits.

"That stuff doesn't bother me, although it bothers my in-laws to be called at home and asked about Madonna," Barkley said. "I have more pressing matters to worry about."

Jordan has proved time and again he can put aside distractions and play at a championship level. Bark-

OMAHA, Neb. — Cobi Cradle drove in two runs and Jeff Liefer homered in support of Daniel Choi as Long Beach State stayed alive in the College World Series by eliminating top-seeded Texas A&M 6-2 on Tuesday.

Cradle singled in runs in the third and seventh innings, the latter sparking a four-run uprising by the 49ers (45-18). Liefer's homer in the fourth put Long Beach State ahead for good at 2-1.

Choi (17-2), pitching with only three days of rest, found himself in immediate trouble when Texas A&M (53-11) loaded the bases with one out in the first. Choi got catcher Robert Lewis on a foul pop and Rob Trimble on a grounder to get out of the inning.

MC third in NJCAA golf race

Staff report

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Midland College's chances of repeating as the National Junior College golf champion is in another uphill climb, but the hill to climb isn't nearly as steep as it was a year ago.

The Chaparrals stand in fourth place after the first round at the McCormick Ranch Resort course with a seven over par 295, six strokes behind tournament host Scottsdale Community College, the team the Chaps rallied to beat last year on the final day of the tournament.

"I thought the team played well, but they need to play a lot better down the stretch," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss.

MC was hot at the start of the day, completing nine holes at three under par as a team, but the Chaps were 10-over on the back nine.

Tied for second place are the teams of Broward County, Fla., and George Wallace, Ala., both at 291.

Shawn Savage led the Chaparrals with an even par 72 while Steve Dundas, who played in the Memorial PGA tournament over the weekend, carded a 73. Darren Summers added a 74 while Chad Campbell came in at 76. Guy Redford had a 77, making the whole Chap team under 80 for the first round.

Savage's 72 is good for fifth place in the medalist race while Gary Christian of George Wallace leads the field with a 68. Other medalist leaders are Charlie Harrelson, Broward County, 69; Mike Tompkins, Scottsdale, 70.

MC fell in the standings as far as seventh place last year before the miracle finish gave them the title by two strokes over Scottsdale. The tournament is 72 holes with three rounds left to play.

The teams tee off at 7:45 a.m. (MST) today.

Baker passes on UT for Expos

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland Lee pitching star Jason Baker signed a pro baseball contract with the Montreal Expos Tuesday, passing up a college career at the University of Texas, which had signed him to a baseball scholarship last month.

Baker was picked last week in the third round of the baseball draft by the Expos and the two came to terms Tuesday.

The pitcher, who can throw in the 90 m.p.h. range, was a heavily sought high school player by the college ranks and the Longhorns had apparently won that war, but couldn't win against the lure of professional baseball.

Baker declined to say Tuesday night just how much he will receive from the Expos, but did say, "I can say that it was a six-figure signing bonus and they will pay college expenses at any school up to $30,000. I'll be making $850 a month to play."

Baker will leave Midland Monday for West Palm Beach, the Expos' rookie league team. He will begin playing almost immediately.

Baker's father, Bill, said the day of

T. Jones resigns after eight years with Texas Tech.

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — T. Jones, saying the time is right and his department is running well, resigned Tuesday as Texas Tech's athletic director, effective Aug. 31.

Jones, whose contract expires Sept. 1, 1994, said he made up his mind last weekend.

Jones, 62, has headed Tech's athletic program since 1985, when he left his job as assistant and associate athletic director at Texas.

"I don't know that you can ever pick a right time to leave," Jones said. "The facilities are in good shape, we've got a good staff and good coaches. Why not leave with a smile on your face and feel good?"

The school has not named Jones' successor. Texas Tech president Robert Lawless did not immediately return a telephone call.

Jones oversaw the merging of the men's and women's departments shortly after his arrival. He hired several coaches, including football coach Spike Dykes, basketball coach James Dickey and baseball coach Larry Hays.

He said his most significant accomplishments were improvements to the football and baseball fields and better recruiting of athletes. Jones also said more Tech athletes are graduating.

The Red Raiders have racked up a string of recent athletic successes, including the Lady Raiders' NCAA basketball championship. The men's team won the Southwest Conference tournament and the football team tied for second in the conference for the second consecutive year.

James Carroll Jones, who got his nickname "T" growing up in Childress, earned All-SWC honors as quarterback for Texas, the 1952 SWC champions. He returned to Texas as an assistant coach for eight years under Ed Price and Darrell Royal.

After 11 years as an executive at an Austin bank, he worked for five years as Texas' assistant and associate athletic director.

Accident kills Nets' Petrovic

By Nesha Starcevic

FRANKFURT, Germany — Drazen Petrovic, a raw European talent who became one of the NBA's top shooting guards, was killed instantly when the car he was riding in swerved out of control on a rain-slicked road and slammed into a truck. He was 28.

Police said the New Jersey Nets star was killed at 5:20 p.m. Monday on a highway 15 miles from Ingolstadt, in southeastern Germany. He was traveling in a Volkswagen Golf with two women and was sitting in the front passenger seat.

with a homer in the third and a run-scoring single in the seventh. Gabe Gonzalez took over for Choi with one out in the eighth and, with the bases loaded and two down, got John Curl on a grounder to finish Texas A&M's last threat.

Long Beach State advanced to a game tonight against LSU (51-16-1).

Oklahoma St. 7, Texas 6

Sean Hugo homered to tie the game in the eighth and Hunter Triplett doubled in the go-ahead run in the ninth as Oklahoma State beat Texas to eliminate the Longhorns from the College World Series.

Texas (51-16) built a 5-0 lead in the early innings, but Oklahoma State (45-16) drew even at 5-5 by scoring four times in the seventh.

Texas regained the lead in the eighth when Steve Heinrich scored from third on a balk called against Oklahoma State pitcher Rob Gaiko. Oklahoma State coach Gary Ward was furious over the call and argued with third-base umpire Tom Jenkins as fans booed.

Hugo got that run back in the ninth when he lined a shot into the netting on the right-field foul pole. Triplett got the winning run home when he doubled to the 408-foot sign in center field.

the draft that "it's doubtful he'll go to Texas. I really think his choice under these circumstances would be to make a commitment with the pros.

"Before being drafted by Montreal, it was his dream to pitch for the University of Texas, but he feels he'll get more instruction and become a better pitcher faster by going to the pros."

The Dallas Morning News rated Baker the fourth best overall pitching prospect in the state of Texas and the top rated high schooler. The top three were Jeff Granger of Texas A&M, Texas' Brooks Kieschnick and A&M's Kelly Wunsch.

Young sets Mets record in futility with 5-1 loss to Cubs

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Anthony Young lost his 20th straight decision Tuesday night to set a Mets club record as Mike Morgan pitched six-hit ball over 8 2-3 innings to help Chicago beat New York 5-1.

Young (0-6) had been tied with Craig Anderson (1962-1964) for most consecutive losses by a Mets pitcher. The all-time record is 23 in a row by Cliff Curtis of the 1910-1911 Boston Braves.

Morgan (4-7) retired 13 straight batters until Joe Orsulak and Howard Johnson hit consecutive singles in the fifth inning before a double play ended the threat.

Rick Wilkins had an RBI single in the second inning and added a solo homer in the sixth, his ninth. Last week, Wilkins called Young "the best 0-19 pitcher I've seen."

Mark Grace added an RBI double in the third inning for the Cubs and added a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

Young, 2-14 last season, pitched six innings and gave up four runs and nine hits. It was his first loss as a starter this year.

Cardinals 4, San Francisco 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Lee Smith's 371st career save didn't come easy.

The major league's all-time saves leader gave up four ninth-inning hits, including Barry Bonds' two-run homer but came back to record the final out as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Francisco Giants 4-3 Tuesday.

Smith was the last of four Cardinals pitchers, and in the end preserved the win for unbeaten Rene Arocha (5-0), who pitched for Cuba's national team before defecting to the United States in 1991. St. Louis won his rights in a lottery.

Matt Williams started the ninth inning with a ground-rule double and Bonds followed with a homer, his 15th, that barely cleared the left-field wall.

The Cardinals trailed most of the game but took the lead with a four-run eighth-inning as pinch-hitter Rod Brewer hit a two-run double and Ozzie Smith added a two-run triple.

John Burkett (8-2), who failed in his bid to become the major league's first nine-game winner this season, took a three-hitter into the eighth.

Expos 4, Reds 2

MONTREAL — Marquis Grissom had two hits, stole three bases and scored two runs as Montreal beat Cincinnati 4-2 Tuesday night.

Dennis Martinez (5-5) won his third straight decision, allowing two runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings en route to his 198th career victory.

The Expos took a 1-0 lead in the first off Tim Pugh (3-7) when Grissom singled, stole second and third and scored on Moises Alou's single.

The Reds tied the score 1-1 in the second when Cecil Espy drew a walk, took third on Jeff Branson's single and came home when Dan Wilson hit into a double play.

The Expos took a 3-1 lead in the fourth on John Vander Wal's RBI single and a run-scoring groundout by Greg Colbrunn.

Rockies 4, Pirates 1

PITTSBURGH — Andres Galarraga continued swinging the hottest bat in the majors by going 2 for 3 with a homer and a triple Tuesday night, leading Colorado to a rain-delayed 4-1 victory over Pittsburgh.

Bruce Ruffin and Keith Shepherd combined on a four-hitter, the low-hit game for the Rockies this season.

Ruffin, 4-7 lifetime against the Pirates prior to the start, allowed only Jeff King's RBI single in the first while striking out four and walking one before leaving after a rain delay in the sixth.

Astros 6, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Eric Anthony hit a two-run triple in the first inning Tuesday night, and Houston went on to beat Philadelphia, 6-3, in a game delayed 1 hour and 51 minutes by rain in the bottom of the sixth.

The win was the ninth in 12 games for the Astros. Philadelphia lost for only the fourth time in 15 games.

Darryl Kile (5-1) allowed six hits, struck out five, walked two and hit two batters in 5 1-3 innings as he won his third straight decision. He was replaced by Al Osuna after the rain delay and Doug Jones pitched the final two innings for his 13th save.

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the first off Ben Rivera (4-3) on Craig Biggio's double, a walk to Jeff Bagwell and Anthony's triple.

Padres 5, Braves 4

SAN DIEGO — Pinch-hitter Craig Shipley delivered a two-out, bases-loaded single to score the game-winning run in the ninth inning as San Diego rallied from a four-run deficit to beat Atlanta.

Reliever Mike Stanton (1-2) loaded the bases on two singles and an intentional walk before Shipley hit a soft single to end the Padres' four-game losing streak. Stanton allowed four hits and two runs in 1 2-3 innings.

Gene Harris (4-0) worked a perfect ninth inning for the victory after the Padres scored four runs in the eighth.

10th inning home run lifts Minnesota past Rangers, 3-2

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Pedro Munoz hit a solo home run with one out in the 10th inning Tuesday night and Minnesota beat Texas 3-2.

Munoz, in a 1-for-10 slump, hit the first pitch from Matt Whiteside (1-1) into the right-field seats for his fifth homer of the season.

Carl Willis (1-0), the third Minnesota pitcher, gave up one hit in 1 2-3 innings. Rick Aguilera pitched the 10th for his 17th save.

Doug Strange's solo home run with two outs in the sixth gave Texas a 2-1 lead. The Twins tied it in the seventh when Dave Winfield led off with a triple under center fielder David Hulse's glove and scored on Brian Harper's sacrifice fly.

The Rangers threatened in the seventh, loading the bases with one out against starter Willie Banks. Reliever Larry Casian struck out pinch hitter Julio Franco to end the threat.

Juan Gonzalez hit his 16th homer, a 448-foot blast leading off the fifth, to give Texas a 1-0 lead.

Blue Jays 14, Angels 6

TORONTO — Joe Carter hit a grand slam and John Olerud hit a three-run homer, and Toronto routed California 14-6 Tuesday night for its ninth win in 10 games.

Darrin Jackson added a two-run homer and Roberto Alomar hit a solo shot for Toronto. The Blue Jays broke open the game with five runs in the fourth inning and five more in the fifth.

Chili Davis homered, doubled and drove in three runs for the Angels. California has lost four in a row and seven of eight.

Blue Jays starter Pat Hentgen was hit on the right forearm by a line drive off the bat of Gary DiSarcina in the fourth. Hentgen recovered and threw out DiSarcina to end the inning, but did not return to pitch the fifth. Hentgen sustained a bruise.

Woody Williams (2-0) got the victory. He relieved Hentgen and gave up two runs in two innings.

Indians 5, Red Sox 4

CLEVELAND — Jeff Treadway singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning Tuesday night as Cleveland overcame an early four-run deficit against Roger Clemens and beat Boston 5-4.

Clemens, who has an 18-3 lifetime record against Cleveland, let the Indians back into the game in the sixth, when they tied it with four runs capped by Carlos Baerga's three-run homer. Clemens left after the seventh.

In the ninth, Cleveland's Albert Belle reached first on a wild throw by shortstop Luis Rivera — just inserted for defensive purposes — and went to third on Reggie Jefferson's two-out single off Greg Harris (2-1).

Treadway then hit Jeff Russell's first pitch through the hole between first and second, scoring Belle.

Yankees 9, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Pat Kelly homered, doubled twice and singled home the go-ahead run in the ninth inning Tuesday night, leading New York past Kansas City 9-4.

Kelly had the first four-hit game of his career and drove in three runs. He and Matt Nokes hit consecutive home runs in the fifth inning, and Paul O'Neill also hit a solo home run for the Yankees.

Steve Howe (2-1) pitched 1 1-3 innings for the victory. Billy Brewer (1-1) began the ninth by walking pinch hitter Spike Owen, and took the loss.

Orioles 6, Athletics 4

BALTIMORE — Chris Hoiles homered and tied his career high with four RBIs as Baltimore stretched its winning streak to six games.

Hoiles went 3-for-3 with a walk. He hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and hit a two-run double in the seventh that broke a 4-4 tie.

Cohick does it all for M-Angels

Staff report

WICHITA, Kan. — You can't ask a baseball player to do much more than what Emmitt Cohick did for the Midland Angels here Tuesday night.

Cohick hit a three-run home run in the first inning and then made a game saving catch in the outfield on what would have been a homer off of Wichita's Duane Hosey in the eighth to preserve Midland's 4-3 Texas League victory.

Cohick, who now has seven homers on the year, has hit five of them in the last 13 games. He also has 29 RBIs to tie Chris Pritchett and Mark Brakebill for the club lead. Brakebill got his 29th RBI in the sixth inning on a bases loaded grounder and that proved to be the winning run.

Midland starter Shad Williams (3-4) had a strong outing. He worked into the eighth inning, giving up solo homers to Ray McDavid and Tracy Sanders. Jose Musset got his eighth save. He came into the game with a 14.40 ERA over his last six outings, but pitched an inning of scoreless relief.

"BUY THE BASIN" Makes Hospital Rounds

Laurie Johnson, Director of Public Relations, Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, and Ron Schwisow, president of Teraco, Inc. Photos by Curtis Wilcott.

Memorial Hospital and Medical Center has made a commitment to BUY THE BASIN and has ordered 25,000 plastic cards from local manufacturing company Teraco, Inc.

According to Director of Public Relations Laurie Johnson, this is the first time the local company has produced custom-made items for the hospital.

Ms. Johnson says: "Teraco is one of the few companies in the country that makes these plastic cards. Most people don't even know what a great company Teraco is, right here in our community. It's one of the few companies that can do this kind of work. Our local advertising agency, Admarc, designed the cards.

Whenever possible we try to buy locally. If we can do it in a cost effective manner we will buy here. With health care supplies and health care providers there are times we can't buy locally. With the construction project there has been a lot of concern that we had a contractor who is not local. However, the subcontractor is local, and by mid-summer we will have 250 local workers out there.

The hospital is a large part of the community and we feel it is necessary to support the local economy. We have to look at the problems but each of us has to make a commitment to be a part of the solution. We can do that by purchasing locally whenever we can."

Left, Clara Piel, district manager, Connie's Midland-Odessa area, and assistant manager Cherrie Wilson, plan their city-county employee appreciation day.

Thanks for Shopping at Home

Cherrie Wilson, assistant manager, Connie's in Midland Plaza Shopping Center, is planning her own BUY THE BASIN activity: "On June 10 we're going to have an appreciation day all day long for city and county employees and their families. We'll be open extra hours and we'll give them discounts. We think it's real important that people know there are companies here that appreciate them shopping at home. This is one way to say thanks to them."

Other goals scored in the tournament for Eclipse came from Jamie Welch, Nikki Smetzer, Jacque Ketter and Lesley Keel. Eclipse outscored opponents by an 11-7 margin with a win over Wichita Pride and two ties against the Dallas Genesis and Broken Arrow, Okla.

Four Midlanders eye regional slots

Four Midlanders were named to the sub-regional soccer team over the Memorial Weekend Tournament in Austin under tryouts by the Olympic Development Program.

They were Christi Johnson, Jamie Welch, Jacque Ketter and Tina Richardson. All four girls were named to the ODP under-16 state team last February in Dallas.

NETS: Automobile accident kills Petrovic

(From 1C)

The car slammed into a trailer truck that had skidded in heavy rain on the slippery road. The 23-year-old driver apparently had to brake suddenly and lost control, slamming through a median rail and hitting the truck.

Police identified the driver as Klara Szalantzy and the other woman as Hilal Haene. Both live in Munich, but police said said this morning they did not yet known their nationalities.

Police were still still investigating the cause of the accident.

In East Rutherford, N.J., Nets general manager Willis Reed broke down and cried today when he tried to describe Petrovic's work ethic.

"He left no stones unturned trying to make himself the best player he could be," Reed said, recalling how Petrovic would go to health clubs in hotels where the team was staying to work out. "We don't have enough players in this game that care that much about it."

In Zagreb in Petrovic's native Croatia, friends met in his coffee bar, Amadeus, early today after learning of his death.

"What can I tell you ... we all lost today, this is an incredible loss," said Stojko Vrankovic, a former Boston Celtics player who now plays in Greece.

"This is the worst shock in my life," said Neven Spahija, coach of Cibona Zagreb, Petrovic's former team. "We are all here now, watching each other, not believing, weeping.

"Drazen's mother, Biserka, was especially close to Drazen and she was the hardest hit by news. Drazen's brother, Aco, took the parents somewhere out of town to be in peace.

"Aco is trying to look strong because of the parents, hiding his emotions. He and Drazen were terribly close."

Aco, whose full name is Aleksandar, is also a coach with Cibona and played alongside his younger brother in the 1980s.

FINALS: Suns, Bulls open series in Phoenix

(From 1C)

ley will be put to that test starting with Wednesday night's opener.

Barkley said the Bulls' status as two-time defending champions is not an advantage against Phoenix, which is making its first appearance in the finals since 1976.

"We don't believe that we're underdogs," Barkley said. "Whoever says we're underdogs or whoever picks the betting line hasn't played basketball. We had the best record in the NBA. We're confident in our ability. Being in the finals for the first time doesn't mean anything. The Bulls won it the first time they went to the finals. It didn't bother them."

The Bulls and Suns split their two regular-season games, each winning on the other's home court.

"We're good, and they're good, and we'll see who's better," Barkley said.

Jordan and Barkley share more than stardom. They have a common interest in golf, played on the Olympic team together and endorse some of the same products.

"Of course, people are making this out to be a Michael vs. Charles series," Barkley said. "He's my friend, but it's not special to me that he's here. I'm just glad that I'm here. I've waited a long time to be here."

Barkley said most of the NBA players are "good guys, except for the Pistons. There are no teams that you really hate. But you don't have to hate your opponent. I think all that's important is that you have better players."

Suns coach Paul Westphal agrees.

"Some of the toughest, most intense games I ever played in were in my back yard against my brother," he said. "I loved him, but I hated him on the court."

The Bulls are coming off a 4-2 victory over New York in the Eastern Conference finals, with the series having ended Friday.

"The time we had away from basketball on Saturday and Sunday was a good break for us," coach Phil Jackson said. "It takes away some of the tension of that series."

The Suns have been off since Saturday and have played five more playoff games than Chicago.

"Each game you play is a strain," Jackson said. "But now they've had some days off too, and it takes away from the effects."

Barkley, who had 44 points and 24 rebounds in the Suns' victory over Seattle that put them into the finals, said that with a 2-3-2 homecourt format in this series, it's important the team with the first two games at home protect its advantage before going on the road for three games.

"You don't want them thinking they can finish off the series at home," he said.

Will OPEC 'fess up to cheating?

Strategists: Members must nail down starting point to set quota

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

GENEVA — Deciding how much crude to sell this summer could be the least of OPEC's worries as it looks this week for ways to ease the queasy oil market.

The pricklier problem on today's agenda of OPEC's summer conference is getting members to 'fess up to their springtime cheating. While they reported to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that they peddled only 23.88 million barrels a day in May, independent tanker counters set sales at closer to 24.2 million.

Unless they can nail down a reliable starting point, OPEC strategists lament it will be near impossible to set a new quota that will convince already skeptical oil traders they are serious about boosting crude prices.

The OPEC conference opened Tuesday, and oil futures prices rebounded in what oil experts here described as a correction to Monday's whopping 26 cents-a-barrel slide. Light, sweet U.S. crude for July delivery settled 11 cents higher at $19.65 a barrel.

While OPEC ministers don't agree on what the limit should be this fall, most concur that the market can handle as much as 24.2 million barrels a day this summer.

Setting a ceiling is one thing. Getting the 12 members to stick to it is much trickier, since several countries badly want a raise.

Iran, which ironically is believed to be one of the most flagrant quota flouters in the bunch, favors extending the current 23.6 million barrel-a-day quota another three months in hopes of increasing prices.

Qatar's oil minister, Abdullah bin Hamad Al-Attiyah, said after formal meetings Tuesday he also prefers that total.

But senior OPEC officials, delegates and traders say the group is still going to produce well over 24.2 million barrels a day this summer even if it extends its second-quarter ceiling into the summer period.

It appears more likely that the group will set a new higher quota at somewhere between 23.8 million and 24.2 million barrels a day, two Arab OPEC delegates said. That would make room for Kuwait to receive at least part of the raise it demands and also leave some for needy Nigeria.

Nigerian oil minister Philip Chikwuedo Asiodu Tuesday said he believed the summer market can handle about 24.2 million barrels a day and still manage a price rebound.

Kuwait wants a 400,000 barrel-a-day raise to help it finance its rebuilding, and Nigeria wants an extra 100,000 barrels a day.

How much less Kuwait will accept is yet to be seen, although Nigeria would likely count itself lucky to get an extra 50,000 barrels a day, one informed OPEC source said.

Some OPEC officials argue that raising the ceiling could boost oil prices by legalizing extra barrels that will be produced with or without the organization's blessing. Others fear a high ceiling would only encourage cheating, something OPEC can ill afford during this season of price weakness.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose in early futures trading Tuesday, but fell from their highs after indications that Kuwait would not be as flexible in OPEC negotiations as many had thought.

July delivery of West Texas Intermediate rose 45 cents per barrel to $19.90 after Kuwait's oil minister told reporters he would be "flexible" in bargaining for a third-quarter production quota.

But crude fell from its high on the New York Mercantile Exchange early Tuesday afternoon after a senior Kuwaiti delegate insisted the country would seek a higher quota for the summer.

Crude settled 11 cents higher at $19.65 per barrel on the Nymex at the end of the day.

Kuwait has been pushing for quota increase of 400,000 barrels per day — about the entire amount of extra demand expected for OPEC crude this summer. Other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are also expected to seek higher quotas for themselves.

Dollar versus yen

NEW YORK — The dollar set another record against the Japanese yen Tuesday, losing ground despite central bank efforts to support the U.S. currency.

Still, the dollar gained ground against several other leading currencies as traders sold European denominations to buy up more yen.

In New York, the dollar fell further, settling at 106.40 yen against 107.25 yen on Monday.

In New York it cost $1.5201 to buy one pound, less expensive than Monday's $1.5220.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates included: 1.6250 German marks, up from 1.6205; 1.4607 Swiss francs, up from 1.4545; 5.4710 French francs, up from 5.4590; 1,476.00 Italian lire, down from 1,481.00, and 1.2836 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2821.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK — The stock market fell Tuesday amid concern that inflation and higher interest rates were on the horizon, and might hurt corporate profits.

Gaming, technology and some financial stocks fell for a second day.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 21.59 points to 3,510.54.

Microsoft, partners unveil venture to unite machines

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

Microsoft Corp., the software giant, is trying to extend its powerful reach beyond the computer to the rest of office machinery — the copier, the printer, the fax, even the phone.

For more than a year, William H. Gates, 37, the company's chairman, has circled the globe, signing up equipment makers to become part of his vision of an office in which machines can pass work from one to another seamlessly, thanks to Microsoft software.

Since Microsoft succeeded in setting the dominant standard in personal computer operating software, Gates gets a hearng when he presents a vision of another standard software architecture.

His case, and Microsoft's market power, has proved persuasive. Roughly 50 companies — including Xerox, Hewlett-Packard, Northern Telecom, Canon, Ricoh, Ericsson, NEC and Compaq — will join Microsoft on Wednesday in New York to announce that they are working on parts of Microsoft's version of the so-called digital office.

"All these pieces of equipment grew up independently," Gates said Tuesday. "Nobody was thinking too much about how they worked together. Nobody's really tried to bridge the gap. I figured there had to be an opportunity for somebody smart."

Today's office is like an electronic Tower of Babel, separate machines that do not communicate with one another. Microsoft's new offering, called Microsoft at Work, is intended as the technological interpreter, allowing the various machines to work together.

Take a simple example: A worker has written a report on an office personal computer to be printed and distributed to 20 clients or colleagues. At present, the report is probably printed out on a computer printer, then taken to a photocopy machine, where 20 copies are made. But in a few years, the worker will be able to tap a key on the personal computer and the 20 copies will be printed, copied and collated on one machine.

"These systems will allow for the first time the integration of the paper and electronic mediums," said Paul Ricci, president of Xerox Corp.'s advanced office products and document services division.

Airlines, manufacturers swap tales of woe at Paris Air Show

By Karen West
Hearst News Service

PARIS — Although Boeing is bracing for the worst by slashing commercial jet output by 35 percent, the crippled airline industry still faces more turbulence and production could drop further, a company executive said Tuesday.

"We think we are there, but we certainly can't guarantee anything," Robert Dryden, Boeing Commercial Airplane Group's executive vice president, said at the Financial Times' aerospace conference before the Paris Air Show.

"The production rates could fall again, but we just don't know," Dryden said. "I wish I had a crystal ball."

Boeing has announced it will cut its work force by 28,000 employees in 1993 and the first half of 1994 due to the production slowdowns on all its jetliners.

Dryden's comments came after nearly a dozen international airline executives lamented the high costs of commercial airplanes, inadequate financing and cut-throat competition — all of which have contributed to $11 billion in losses for airlines in the last three years, including $4.8 billion in 1992.

The world's airlines, airplane makers and suppliers — many of whom have gathered in Paris for the world's largest air show beginning Thursday — are still waiting to recover from what has been described as the worst cyclical tailspin in decades.

Working to cut costs, airlines have been forced to curtail new aircraft orders and cancel existing orders.

Merrill Lynch names new chairman

NEW YORK (NYT) — Merrill Lynch & Co. said Monday that it had named Daniel P. Tully, the brokerage firm's president and chief executive, to the additional post of chairman.

Tully, 61, who has been president and chief operating officer at Merrill since 1985, succeeds William A. Schreyer, 65, who is retiring after eight years as chairman of the nation's largest securities firm. The announcement came at Merrill's regular board meeting, which was held in Berlin.

The elevation of Tully leaves unanswered the question of which younger Merrill executive will be promoted

Harrison expects to offer a summer program until July, followed by full-day sessions, and the regular fall session will mirror the Midland Independent School District schedule.

She is planning a training course beginning June 21 that will be three nights a week for three weeks and designed for anyone interested in the Montessori method or interested in being a teacher or assistant.

Judge orders release of detained Haitians

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday ordered 158 HIV-positive Haitians released immediately from the U.S. Navy base in Cuba. He called their incarceration by the Bush and Clinton administrations "outrageous, callous and reprehensible."

Haitians at the dilapidated camp at Guantanamo Bay cheered and danced when they heard the news. Many of them have been there for nearly 20 months.

"The detained Haitians are neither criminals nor national security risks," U.S. District Judge Sterling Johnson wrote. "Some are pregnant mothers and others are children. Simply put, they are merely the unfortunate victims of a fatal disease."

He ordered that they "be immediately released (to anywhere but Haiti)."

The camp could be closed within a few weeks if the government doesn't appeal Johnson's ruling, said Michael Ratner of the Center for Constitutional Rights, one of the groups representing the Haitians.

White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers declined to comment on the ruling, which came on the same day that Haiti's latest prime minister was stripped of power by military forces there.

Johnson gave a grim description of the Haitians' living conditions at the U.S. naval base:

"They live in camps surrounded by razor barbed wire. They tie plastic garbage bags to the sides of the building to keep the rain out. ... The Haitian detainees have been subjected to predawn military sweeps as they sleep by as many as 400 soldiers in full riot gear. They are confined like prisoners."

He said the government had also failed to provide adequate medical care for them, and he called their handling by both the Bush and Clinton administrations "outrageous, callous and reprehensible."

The refugees fled their homeland and its political upheaval by boat, but they were intercepted at sea. They have been held at Guantanamo because of a U.S. immigration policy banning the entry of HIV-positive immigrants. Some relatives who have not tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS are with them.

If the camp is shut down, Ratner said, the refugees would probably join relatives living in the United States or be helped to find living arrangements in the New York City area.

Johnson ruled on a lawsuit filed on the refugees' behalf in March 1992. The ruling followed a two-week trial in March of this year.

"We think the decision sends a wake-up call to the Clinton administration that it cannot continue to blindly follow the illegal policies of the Bush administration," said Lucas Guttentag of the American Civil Liberties Union Immigrants Rights Project, also representing the refugees.

The government's refusal to release the Haitians from detention is an abuse of Attorney General Janet Reno's discretion, Johnson wrote.

"Testimony revealed the Haitians were told that they could be at Guantanamo for 10-20 years or possibly until a cure for AIDS is found," he wrote.

He said health care at the base was inadequate and in violation of the Haitians' due process rights. "The facts disclose that it is nothing more than an HIV prison camp presenting potential public health risks to the Haitians held there," he wrote.

Johnson ruled that the government had violated the Haitians' statutory and constitutional rights, as well as the First Amendment rights of lawyers who weren't allowed to give them legal advice.

Johnson had previously ordered the government to release more than 50 Haitians with AIDS to the United States for treatment.

Camp helps heal mental scars of child burn victims

By David Wilkison
Associated Press Writer

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Nine-year-old Carly Wrubleski talks matter-of-factly about how she was severely burned when a young neighbor lighted a pool of gasoline as she was playing in a box.

Scars are still visible on her face, neck and arms, but the trauma and the painful weeks spent in a Pittsburgh burn center two years ago are not reflected in the fourth-grader's cheery demeanor.

Carly, of Washington, Pa., is among 23 burn victims ranging from preschoolers to teen-agers who are spending four days this week at a West Virginia camp learning to be children again. The program, open only to children treated at West Penn Hospital, is funded entirely by recycled aluminum cans.

Like any camper, Carly grouses good-naturedly about roughing it in a cabin with uncomfortable beds. But she likes the atmosphere.

"It was kind of hard because I didn't think anybody else would be burned on the face. There isn't anybody else, but I don't feel left out," she said as she sat on a cabin step awaiting an afternoon swim.

"All the counselors here are nice and they care," she said.

Most of the 20 counselors are taking vacations from their jobs as firefighters, nurses and doctors.

"It rips your heart out," said Kevin Maehling, 28, a firefighter from Mount Lebanon, Pa., who was on his first trip to the camp. "Any firefighter you talk to, the last thing they ever want to see is a child who's been burned. That's the ultimate loss in our minds."

Researcher: America is chock-full of bad bosses

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — And then there's the boss who made his female employees raise the flag in the pouring rain. And the one whose motto was "People are animals." Or the ex-military man who liked to "playfully" choke and bite his employees.

America is chock-full of bad bosses, but finding the worst of the worst is a daunting task. Jim Miller, an expert on managerial techniques, is hunting for the ultimate Mr. Wrong — and the stories he's heard have him shaking his head.

Take this:

"His management style was one of pure intimidation. ... If an office plant had a single brown leaf, he would pick it up and throw it out the front door," wrote the woman forced into flag duty during stormy weather.

And this:

"Mr. X's favorite lies are those that support his distorted view of himself as a world-renowned scholar," wrote another. Said boss insisted he had authored a book that one president faithfully kept on his White House desk. Unfortunately, the book in question was published two years AFTER the president's death.

From New Hampshire to Washington state, Miller is hearing from folks who'd like to fillet their supervisors. "I can't believe some of the things I'm reading," said Miller, whose demeanor is more jovial grandfather than corporate boss (he's actually both). He's the founder and CEO of Miller Business Systems, which manufactures office products in Arlington, Texas.

The names of the hard-hearted, two-faced weasels cited by their employees cannot be revealed here. There were also some problems with the parameters that Miller established: "The rule prohibiting discussion of criminal behavior, physical or sexual abuse does impose a significant restriction," wrote one employee.

Miller's search, which runs through Friday, was launched in connection with his how-to book on good management, "The Corporate Coach." The winner (loser?) with the Ultimate Bad Boss will claim a trip for two to Hawaii — and judging from the entries, they could use a vacation.

There are personal insults: "Mr. John T. is a short, pudgy man."

There are personality insults: "He is a master at lying, double-talking, and side-stepping issues."

There is talk of psychological scarring: "I have nightmares about this job and will never work in a plant nursery again because of the fear of such a boss!"

There is nepotism: "By the way, he got the position from his father hob-nobbing with the company elite."

And there are more personal insults: "His nickname is (obscenity)-head, and all warehouse and office personnel hate him!"

There's two sides to every coin, and for every bad boss — OK, for every three or four bad bosses — there's a good one. Miller is trying to find America's best boss, too — but who really wants to hear about that?

Now, there's a gas station owner — he's the one whose motto was "People are animals." This boss rewarded a worker who gave two weeks notice by firing him one week later.

Everybody can relate to that.

Dispute among family becomes boardroom battle at Dart Group

By Richard Ringer
N.Y. Times News Service

Feud centers on future direction of the company, which fell on hard times because of recession, increasing competition for its two big discount operations — books and auto parts.

The feud among members of the Haft family over the control of their holdings in the Dart Group could well be a plot for the kinds of books Robert M. Haft promotes in television and newspapers advertisements for Crown Books, one of Dart's companies.

Haft, 40, founded the Crown Books chain in 1977 and made it the nation's third-largest bookseller after Waldenbooks and Barnes & Noble, with reported sales of about $241 million. He was expected soon to succeed his 72-year-old father, Herbert H. Haft, as chairman and chief executive of the Dart Group.

Now, that may not happen. Upset by comments the younger Haft made in a recent newspaper article, the elder Haft no longer appears ready to turn over the company to his son.

In fact, Robert Haft could be ousted from his position as chairman of Crown Books if his father gets his way. In addition, Robert Haft could be forced out as a director of the Dart Group and another of its holdings, Trak Auto, which he co-founded with his father in 1979.

The feud turned public Monday when Dart, based in Landover, Md., announced steps to change the composition of its board as well as that of Crown Books. Separately, Trak Auto, a $315 million discount retailer of auto parts and accessories in the do-it-yourself market, on Monday filed proxy material concerning a board shake-up.

In each case, the boardroom make over leaves Herbert Haft as chairman. His wife, Gloria, Robert Haft and directors thought to be loyal to the son would be removed. Replacing them would be friends and business associates with close ties to the elder Haft.

Officials of the Dart Group and its subsidiaries would not comment Monday.

The dispute centers on the future direction of the Dart Group, which fell on hard times because of the recession and increasing competition for its two big discount operations — books and auto parts. The feud began to fester after an article in the Wall Street Journal in April said Robert Haft was the Dart Group's "de facto chief executive for the last two years."

The article also said that Herbert Haft, a native of Ukraine, spends much of his time in the former Soviet Union and advises Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin on ways to distribute food. The article also said that the elder Haft runs the company with a tight rein and shuns publicity.

Robert Haft, is more flamboyant, even serving as the pitchman for Crown Books in advertisements. Typically, he is pictured with his sleeves rolled up. In another striking difference from his father's management style, the younger Haft said in the newspaper article that he was willing to "let people make mistakes" while he began plans to double the Dart Group's earnings to about $15 million over the next four years. Now those who side with the younger Haft wonder if his mistake was that he had spoken too soon.

Among the other directors, Claudine M. Malone, an incumbent outside director of Crown Books and Dart Group, Charles M. Farkas, a director of Dart, and James G. Leonard, a director of Crown, have opted not to seek re-election, Dart said in a statement.

The company said the outside directors decided not to stand for re-election because of "a lack of agreement between them and the majority stockholders over the future direction and management of Dart Group and Crown Books."

At Trak Auto, Ms. Malone and Leonard opted not to seek re-election, according to the proxy material. The directors not seeking re-election all favor Robert Haft, a person with knowledge of the company said.

Babbitt catches share of political flak

By Dan Freedman
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — As the leading contender for nomination to the Supreme Court by President Clinton, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt already is catching his share of the national capital's considerable reservoir of political flak.

First, Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the senior Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, gave his dim view of Babbitt as a high court justice, telling an interviewer Tuesday that the 54-year-old former Arizona governor is "a political figure" who might "substitute his or her own visceral or personal beliefs for the law."

Second, a Washington-based conservative organization, Coalitions for America, accused Babbitt of flunking Constitution 101. The group said Babbitt's statements at his confirmation hearing for Interior Secretary last January showed he was unfamiliar with property rights protection built into the Constitution's Fifth Amendment.

And third, the Washington Times, a conservative newspaper, ran a front-page story saying that in 1977 while serving as Arizona state attorney general, Babbitt had been investigated by the FBI for allegedly running up gambling debts at Las Vegas casinos and accepting payoffs from mobsters.

After an eight-week investigation, agents "failed to substantiate the allegations," the newspaper said, quoting a July 15, 1977 FBI report.

None of the flak appeared to diminish Babbitt's standing as the front runner in the Supreme Court sweepstakes, a process that has dragged on since March 19 when Justice Byron White announced his plans to retire when the court ends its current term, later this month or in July. White has been on the high court for 31 years.

Clinton is reported to be likely to make his announcement this week. In telephone calls Monday, President Clinton discussed possible nominees with Hatch and Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., spokesmen for the senators said.

Babbitt's chances may be hurt because the White House is particularly nervous about any hint of controversy in the aftermath of the embarrassing withdrawal of Justice Department nominee Lani Guinier last week.

Further, Clinton faces a difficult period on Capitol Hill as he tries to negotiate a compromise on gays in the military and push his deficit reduction package.

Administration officials say they want to avoid a protracted Supreme Court confirmation controversy at all costs. They say they find Babbitt attractive because, said one such official, his nomination could be "a good story and a short story."

Nevertheless, the drumbeat of negative publicity could lead Clinton to fall back on one of the federal judges currently on the White House short list.

Judge Stephen Breyer of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals is widely considered to be in second place. He is recuperating in a Boston hospital with two broken ribs suffered in a bicycle accident Friday.

The other name said to be the list is Judge Gilbert Merritt of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit, who resides in Nashville.

Hatch and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole have praised Breyer as a moderate judge who could be easily confirmed. Breyer served on Capitol Hill as the Senate Judiciary Committee's chief counsel in 1979 and 1980, and was recommended to the appeals court by the committee's chairman at the time, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

By contrast, Republican enthusiasm for Babbitt is muted. In addition to Hatch's comments, Dole on Tuesday said Republicans were "checking right now on what he may have said or he may have written, anything from when he was attorney general."

Judge gives life sentence in Sudafed-deaths case

SEATTLE (AP) — A man was sentenced to life in prison without parole Tuesday for the Sudafed-tampering deaths of two people and a failed attempt to kill his wife for $700,000 in insurance money. He angrily maintained his innocence.

U.S. District Judge Barbara Rothstein rejected defense arguments for a 21- to 27-year term for Joseph Meling. The defense argued that the deaths weren't caused knowingly or intentionally.

Rothstein said Meling, 31, knew death was likely to result when he laced 12-hour cold capsules with cyanide and placed them on store shelves. She agreed Meling "didn't know who would be killed," but called it a "crime calculated to take advantage of society's trust."

"The degree of planning and preparation was extraordinary, detailed and elaborate," she said.

Rothstein also ordered Meling, a former insurance salesman from Tumwater, to pay $3.5 million in restitution to Sudafed's manufacturer and other claimants should he be paid for telling his story.

Defense attorney Cyrus Vance Jr. said an appeal is planned.

Reading from a handwritten statement before sentencing, Meling said, "I am angry and I have every reason to be angry. . . . I'm innocent of the crimes of which I've been convicted."

While he understands the anger of the victims' families, "it's misplaced," Meling said. "I didn't do this."

"The case against me is full of holes and internal contradictions," he said.

Assistant U.S. attorney Joanne Maida cited Meling's own statement in urging a life term. "There can be no rehabilitation for a defendant as unremorseful and unrepentant as the one standing before the court today," she said.

Executives: Hollywood to act against TV violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hollywood will act against gratuitous TV violence with the same social conscience that took cigarettes away from TV characters and put seat belts on them, television production executives said Tuesday.

But the industry executives testifying before a Senate panel refused to accept TV violence as a leading cause of actual violence and said television is less violent than some people choose to believe.

One organization, for example, named "The Young Indiana Jones Chronicles" as the most violent primetime show last fall, said Kerry McCluggage, chairman of Paramount Television Group, the co-producer.

"This, quite frankly, stunned us and is flatly wrong," he told the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on the Constitution.

He said the show has been praised for historical depictions of the early 20th century by institutions ranging from the Boy Scouts and Children's Television Workshop to the University of South Carolina and United Federation of Teachers in New York.

Some studies of TV violence "simplistically and mechanically add up the number of allegedly violent acts without reference to the overall context of the program or the nature of the acts themselves," McCluggage said.

"None of the top 25 most popular prime time TV shows can be described as violent, although the self-annointed experts would label them so," said Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

Ned Nalle, executive vice president of University Television, said his company has produced three top dramatic shows whose leading characters have never fired a gun: "Columbo," "Murder She Wrote," and "Law and Order."

The industry knows viewers often turns the channel away from violence, the executives said.

"There's far more money to be made from sitcoms," said Leslie Moonves, president of Lorimar Television, supplier of more TV shows than any other company.

Industry executives said they are working with writers, directors and producers to make sure TV violence is handled with sensitivity.

They said Hollywood consciously reduced the incidence of cigarette smoking in the 1980s and recently began deglamorizing alcohol and drug use.

"From seat belts to the wearing of helmets by motorcyclists, the television industry recognizes its potential impact on society and the positive social obligations that creates," McCluggage said.

To help families choose suitable programs, Lorimar's parent company, Warner Bros. has created a new "family entertainment" logo that will appear on film, video, television, animation, recorded music, consumer products, theme parks, live entertainment and interactive media, Moonves said.

But calming real violence is more complex than developing more wholesome shows, he said.

"How on earth is violence in the real society to be expunged, or at the very least brought to tolerable levels, when there is no limit to guns of every size, muzzle velocity and killing qualities?" Valenti asked.

Foreign investment falls to 9-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign investment in American companies shrank last year, discouraged by the sluggish U.S. recovery and lured away by more attractive opportunities in Eastern Europe and Asia, the government said Tuesday.

Spending by foreigners to acquire or establish businesses in the United States dropped 47 percent in 1992 to a nine-year low of $13.5 billion, the Commerce Department said.

The reasons for the drop cited in the report include:

—"The unprofitability of many of (foreign investors') earlier U.S. investments and by slow economic recovery in the United States."

—The slowness of "the countries that are the largest sources of investment — European countries and Japan ... to emerge from recession."

Economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa., said the pullback by foreigners has contributed to economic sluggishness in the United States.

DELIVERY
MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

Often Asked ?????
Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth.

Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have F/T jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly!
Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers'papers.
Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment.
However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
$100.00 deposit temporary discontinues.
