Production, value alter state rankings

The following rankings indicate how Scurry County compared to Texas' other Top 10 oil producing counties during 1983.

Figures provided by the Texas Railroad Commission indicate the number of barrels produced while information from Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas ranks counties based upon the value of oil and gas production.

1983 Oil and Gas Value	1983 Barrels of Oil Produced
1. Pecos, $2 billion.	1. Pecos, 50.2 million barrels.
2. Ector, $1.5 billion.	2. Ector, 44.3 million barrels.
3. Gaines, $1.4 billion.	3. Yoakum, 44 million barrels.
4. Yoakum, $1.3 billion.	4. Gaines, 43.9 million barrels.
5. Andrews, $1.2 billion.	5. Hockley, 37.9 million barrels.
6. Gregg, $1.2 billion.	6. Andrews, 37.8 million barrels.
7. Hockley, $1.2 billion.	7. Gregg, 37.8 million barrels.
8. Crane, $1.1 billion.	8. Scurry, 30.3 million barrels.
9. Scurry, $1 billion.	9. Crane, 25.9 million barrels.
10. Refugio, $840 million.	10. Refugio, 22.5 million barrels.

3,611 wells worth $1 billion

Statistics related to the production of oil and gas in Scurry County during 1983 are now complete — a year which saw the county rank 8th in Texas for overall oil production and 9th when the value of both oil and gas produced was figured.

The most current information comes the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, which ranks Texas counties based upon oil patch values.

The indication was that during 1983, crude oil and natural gas from Scurry County wells accounted for $1 billion of the $38.3 billion wellhead value of Texas petroleum production.

This total was sufficient to rank Scurry as the 9th ranked county among Texas' 254. These figures include condensate and casinghead gas.

The production value estimates use $2.25 times mcf. for gas and $29 per barrel for crude oil.

The ranking for actual barrels produced was released last March by the Texas Railroad Commission.

The county's wells produced 30.4 million barrels of crude oil valued at $887 million and 55.8 billion cubic feet of natural gas, valued at $125.6 million. Owners of royalty in the county received $126.6 million as their share of the output.

In addition to paying property taxes to cities, counties and school districts, producers in the county supported state government through production tax payments estimated at $50.2 million. Crude oil taxes amounted to $40.8 million while natural gas levies totaled $9.4 million.

Based on Texas Employment Commission figures, some 1,972 oil and gas industry employees in the county received wages of about $45.6 million during 1983.

In the search for new petroleum reserves in the county, oil and gas producers reported $58.7 million in the drilling of 159 wells, including three wildcat or exploratory wells.

This effort resulted in the successful completion of 142 oil wells, although some $6.3 million was lost in the drilling of 17 dry holes.

As of last April 1, there were 3,611 oil producing wells in the county.

Petroleum processing also contributed to the county economy, with four natural gasoline processing plants, having a total daily capacity of 250.9 million cubic feet of natural gas.

Grease opens Friday

Combined theatre and choral departments of Snyder High School will open production of the rock-n-roll musical "Grease" at 8 p.m. Friday in the Worsham Auditorium.

The show — based on 1950's happenings at and around the senior prom at mythical Rydell High School and featuring a fast-paced sequence of song and dance numbers intertwined with a "typical" high school tough guy meets nice girl love story — represents a departure from productions like "South Pacific" and "My Fair Lady" which have been a staple of school productions in recent years.

According to theatre director Jerry Worsham, he and choir director Bill Lyon had been considering staging "Grease" for several years but this year is the first time the right combination of student talent has been available to make the unconventional show a natural for the students involved.

By established tradition, the theatre and choral departments have only staged major musical productions in the fall of every other year — alternating with full length dramas in the off years.

The combination of individual student talents this year prompted the staging of musicals in consecutive years.

According to Worsham, not only is the material of "Grease" different from the previous productions but due to budgetary considerations and the higher than usual royalty fees charged for producing the show — which still ranks as one of the all-time long running shows on Broadway — this show features sets and costuming significantly scaled down from the opulance associated with previous productions.

Student performers featured in "Grease" include John Hamlett as tough guy Danny Zuko along

Snow, cold still in forecast

Bitter cold gripped Scurry County and the rest of the state Saturday. Although the local area received only traces of snow and sleet, forecasts indicated the worst was yet to come.

Much of the state was under snow, but Scurry County received just enough flakes Friday night and early Saturday to realize it had fallen. Temperatures, however, were frigid with a 7 a.m. reading of 16 degrees and the chill factor dipping to minus four at times.

Snyder firemen braved the chilling weather to extinguish a residential fire on the Bullard Ranch, 13 miles west of Snyder, about 9 a.m. Saturday.

By the time firemen reached the scene, the roof to the structure had caved in. The house was occuppied by the Faustino Ramirez family, but no injuries were reported. Firemen had not determined the cause of the fire.

The weather service said "the complex of upper air patterns show promise of additional snow, possibly heavy at times through Sunday." Another large disturbance was developing over the Rockies and heading south, placing it in a position to trigger significant snow for most of West Texas.

Absentee light on annexation ballot

Only 11 ballots had been cast absentee as of Friday for the city election Jan. 19 to decide an annexation question for property located just south of the current city limits.

The property which the city had sought to annex is land required to extend the city limits south to the proposed Houston Parkway street.

Three property owners in this area have refused to voluntarily agree to have their property annexed into the city limits.

A petition circulated by the property owners prompted the calling of next Saturday's vote.

On the ballot, city residents are asked to vote either "for" or "against" the annexation of property described on the ballot.

The deadline to vote absentee is by 5 p.m. Tuesday.

WTC spring term to begin Monday

The spring semester at Western Texas College — a time when traditionally more students enroll than the fall — is due to begin.

Registration at WTC starts at at 1 p.m. Monday and continues through Tuesday. Classes will begin Wednesday.

The full list of classes for the new term is included in Section B of of today's SDN.

One change has been made in registration procedures this semester, notes Dr. Duane Hood, dean of student services.

Students who have a grade report from the fall semester or the recently completed mid-winter session may take this report to the WTC Student Center to fill out their class schedules.

Those registering who do not have this report should first go to the Learning Resource Center to verify an admissions form on file.

Once the admission form is verified or filled out, individuals will proceed to the student center to complete registration.

In addition, some courses have been added since the spring schedule was originally printed. Additions include Beginning Swimming and Advanced Activities in the physical education department; Philosophy 132; Business 232; and Sociology 232. Courses deleted are Art 139 and Real Estate 132.

Sophomore students are asked to register between 1 and 5 p.m. Monday according to the surname schedule printed on the class schedule.

Freshmen will register from 9 a.m. until noon Tuesday. They are asked also to observe the surname schedule.

Evening students may register between 6:30 and 8 p.m. Monday. Any student not registered by Tuesday afternoon may do so between 1 and 5 p.m. that day.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Money can't buy you love, but it can make you more likeable."

We thought we had already incurred our "life's most embarrassing moment."

After last Saturday, we can now count three times that we have really done one of those stupid things that you just won't forget.

All three have involved an automobile. The first incident came only days after we had been discharged from the U.S. Army. While working for Uncle Sam, you automatically salute when a staff car passes by. You don't care if anyone is inside, you just salute to be safe.

We had only been back in civilian life a few days when we walked out of a downtown office just as a police car drove by–and we gave it a crisp salute.

A second incident occurred just in front of the Scurry County Courthouse. We were in a hurry to drive away and in our haste we climbed into the back seat and hunted for the ignition.

But the worst incident came last Saturday. We pulled into one of those cramped parking spots meant only for sports cars. The car on the driver's side was so close we just had room to squeeze out the door.

We were standing too close to our door however, and when we shut the door, we slammed the door on our nose.

Tears came to our family's eyes. I was in pain and ole-what's-her-name was laughing hysterically.

Life is full of embarrassing moments and we'd like to hear some from you. During the next two months, this column will run a contest seeking the best of "Life's Most Embarrassing Moments."

The story must be in writing and it will likely be published in this column. We'll award $50 to the first place winner and $25 each to the second and third place winners.

Send them in and let's have some fun.

In Brief

Blackouts

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Air traffic control radar was blanked out and about 65,000 utility customers were without electricity after the Navy fired tiny metal particles into the air during a radar test, authorities said Friday.

The particles drifted from Mirimar Naval Air Station on Thursday and caused electrical short-circuits that lasted from 2 p.m. to about 6 p.m., said San Diego Gas & Electric Co. officials.

SDG&E spokesman Maurice Luque said several transformers and power poles caught fire and officials at Lindbergh Field reported that radar operations at the international airport were affected for about 30 minutes.

Scurry County Commissioners will face a lengthy agenda when the court convenes at 10 a.m. Monday.

Among items to be considered are appointment of a grievance committee and appointments of members to various county boards.

Also under consideration will be designation of county holidays and approval of bonds. The court also will consider an order to the state comptroller concerning payment of officials under fee or salary basis.

Commissioners will also inspect the county jail and approve monthly bills.

Set to meet

Both the Western Texas College board of trustees and the Snyder ISD School board will conduct regular January meetings Monday.

Economics 231 slated Tuesdays

Did you completly comprehend all the economic "jargon" used during the recent presidential debate?

Do terms such as "crowding out", "GNP," "monetarists," "supply-side economics," "Keynesian economics," "Ratiomal Expectations Theory" leave you confused?

Then you're a perfect candidate for Economics 231, principles of economics" to be taught on Tuesday evenings this spring at Western Texas College.

Dr. Jim Palmer will be the instructor for the course, which deals with the headline-making topics of economics. "This is the area of economics that economists call "macro economics," Palmer said. "We'll be looking at inflation, recession, unemployment, cost of living, economic outlook and related topics during this course."

WTC will hold rgistration for the spring semester on Jan. 14-15 and will begin classes on Jan. 16. Information about registration can be obtained by calling the college at 573-8511.

Army awards Ford contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has awarded a $4.7 million contract to Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp. for a final series of tests of the trouble-plagued Sgt. York air-defense gun.

The tests, ordered by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, will decide whether the Army buys more Sgt. York units, the Pentagon said Friday. Ford Aerospace and Communications is the manufacturer.

The $4.5 billion project is designed to provide a radar-controlled, twin-cannon gun mounted on a tank chassis to protect troops from enemy planes.

Detection system project is 'alive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — After announcing two weeks ago it was canceling an effort to develop a new submarine detection system, the Navy announced that the project is alive after all.

"The Navy's announcement of a decision to cancel the Rapidly Deployable Surveillance System program on Dec. 26 was premature and in error," the Navy said Friday. "The program has not been cancelled."

U.S. nun accuses rebels of killing civilians

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An American Roman Catholic nun held by anti-Sandinista rebels for nine hours has accused the rebels of killing thousands of civilians and charged such attacks are on the rise.

Speaking at a news conference in Managua, Sister Nancy Donovan, 52, a Maryknoll nun from Waterbuy, Conn., said the killings of "thousands of innocent people" have taken place over the past four years.

"The attacks have been made on civilian, not military targets, and they are increasing," said the small, gray-haired nun.

In Washington, her charges were denied by Adolfo Calero, president of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, who said in a statement the Maryknoll order has a history of supporting the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

The force has an estimated 12,000 guerrillas fighting the government in northern Nicaragua.

"We question the authenticity of the reports, given the history of open Maryknoll Order support for" the Sandinistas, the statement said.

The U.S. Congress voted last summer to end funding for the guerrillas, but the rebels say they have received millions of dollars in donations from private sources and other governments.

Sister Donovan said she was neither harmed nor mistreated during her captivity last Tuesday by the guerrillas, also known as "contras," and would return to her pastorage in San Juan de Limay, a village about 95 miles north of Managua.

She has been a Maryknoll nun for 30 years, and has spent 29 years in Central America and the last five in Nicaragua.

The nun said she heard reports after her release that the rebels who held her had killed 14 civilians in ambushes along the road where she was detained Tuesday. But she said she didn't see anyone killed and she didn't say where she heard about the killings.

She said the dead reportedly included nine construction workers, two employees of the Natural Resources Ministry, two coffee pickers and a truck driver.

Some coffee pickers and construction workers in Nicaragua's war zones are members of the Sandinista militia and frequently carry arms on the job.

In a recent interview, Calero was quoted as saying:

"There is no line at all, not even a fine line, between a civilian farm owned by the government and a Sandinista military outpost. What they call a cooperative is also a troop concentration full of armed people."

The nun said she was first detained when the pickup truck in which she was riding with a refugee family and an 18-year-old youth was stopped a few miles out of San Juan de Limay by five armed members of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force.

After 10 minutes she said, they were all allowed to go on their way.

But she said she became "fearful" for other people being held along the road and got out of the truck and walked back toward San Juan de Limay on a narrow back road, where she was stopped again by other rebels.

She said she was held there for about three hours with "three or four peasants and a woman and child," and during that period she heard gunfire in the area.

She said she was separated shortly afterwards from the others and marched about four miles "over rough terrain" to a village called Los Encuentros, where she was held for about an hour before she was set free.

"During that time some of the men were boasting about the success they had had in the ambushes on the road," she said.

"They showed me their new knapsacks and told me they had received new equipment recently. They told me their supplies were dropped by planes which 'fly very quietly at night,'" she said.

Ten-year plan for prisons is proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — A 10-year plan for operating Texas prisons will be developed in hopes of closing out a federal lawsuit, say two elected officials who have met with Gov. Mark White on the issue.

The prison reform trial in U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's court is scheduled to resume Feb. 4, but Attorney General Jim Mattox said Friday the state would seek a delay.

Mattox and Speaker Gib Lewis mentioned a 10-year plan after a private meeting in White's office Friday.

"The Legislature will be passing a resolution on that matter, I think," Mattox said.

State prison officials, aides to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and legislators also attended the two-hour meeting, which was called by the governor.

Lewis was asked if lawyers appearing before Justice had expressed "displeasure with any of your comments,' and the speaker replied, "No, no, none of my comments were even brought up — matter of fact we dealt with nothing but serious facts and some things we needed to do and changes that needed to be made ... "

Lewis said in a speech to House members on Tuesday that Texas and other states "have been too prone to throw up our hands and saying there's nothing we can do about it but accept the edicts of a judge.

AARP officers to be installed

New officers for the Snyder chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons will be installed at a meeting Tuesday afternoon in the Senior Citizens Center.

The meeting is to begin at 1 p.m. and all persons 55 years of age and older who would like to join are invited to attend.

Officers to be installed are C. J. Smith, president; Ray Summers, vice president; Pete Glass, secretary; Bernice Hale, treasurer; Virgil Mott, publicity chairman; and Chick Hale, door prize chairman.

Dr. Ben Brock, executive vice president at Western Texas College, will be the guest speaker.

Anyone interested in information about AARP is invited to contact any of the new officers or Jean Smith, assistant director of the Senior Citizens Center.

Volunteers are needed for home delivered meals

The Senior Center is in need of volunteer workers to help with its home meal delivery program, Jean Smith, assistant director of the center, said.

Delivering meals to the homes of those who cannot go to the center for the noon meal requires at least two persons per delivery vehicle. One person drives while the other carries the food to the dwelling. This involves getting in and out of the van at each stop, assembling the items to be delivered and sometimes going up and down to get to the house. Because of the activity involved, the "hoppers" rotate so no one volunteer has to work every day.

"Persons who would like to work with the meals program as "hoppers" do not have to be senior citizen age," Mrs. Smith said. "We now have two "hoppers" under senior citizen age but we will be losing one of those due to a move. Our home delivered meals are so important to the people who receive them that we don't want to have to cut back on the program. We would like to hear from anyone who is interested in working with meal delivery. We would like them to come by the center or call the office at 573-4035.

The senior center is located at 2603 Avenue M and is open each weekday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

'Phone Me' program offers daily assurance to elderly

"Phone Me," the telephone reassurance program of the Senior Citizens Center, is in the process of adding new names to its list of callers and persons to be called, Billie Smith, volunteer services coordinator for the center, announced.

"The purpose of this program is to provide a daily telephone call to persons 60 years of age and older who live alone and would gain assurance from knowing that someone would be checking with them by telephone," Mrs. Smith explained.

"VIVA volunteers at the center do the calling, and we would like to have more workers in the "Phone Me" project.

"Anyone who would like to be put on our calling list or who would like to give volunteer time to 'Phone Me' is invited to call me at the senior center, 573-4035. If I am not in, someone else can take the message and I will return the call as quickly as I can," Mrs. Smith added.

There is no charge for enrolling in "Phone Me." The senior center has had the project in operation for some time and feel it can be especially valuable to persons who have health problems. Persons wishing more information about "Phone Me" are invited to call the senior center, which is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each weekday.

Judge denies Skillern stay

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Doyle Edward Skillern's attorney says the death row inmate will probably be executed Wednesday, even though his accomplice said he was the one who pulled the trigger in a trooper's slaying.

U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. on Friday denied a request that Skillern be allowed to live until the U.S. Supreme Court rules on another case in which Skillern is a party.

Earlier Friday, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused to halt the execution and the state parole board refused to recommend that the governor commute Skillern's sentence.

Skillern is a plaintiff in a civil suit claiming that death by injection, the method of execution in Texas, is cruel and unusual because the drugs used have not been certified by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The Supreme Court has agreed to hear the case.

"I'd like to see Mr. Skillern get his day in the Supreme Court before he's executed," said Shannon Salyer, Skillern's attorney.

But Salyer admitted that Skillern is near the end of his appeal possibilities. He said it's possible that the death penalty case could go to the 5th U.S. Ciruit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and another petition could be brought before Head.

But Salyer said, "I think he's going to die next Wednesday morning."

Skillern's accomplice, who claims to have fired the shot that killed an undercover narcotics officer, was given a life prison sentence.

The pardon and paroles board voted 3-2 against recommending that Gov. Mark White commute the sentence to life in prison. The criminal appeals court, in an 8-1 vote, denied the Death Row inmate's request to postpone the execution.

"The law is very clear," said parole board Chairman Neal Pfeiffer.

"The evidence is overwhelming that Skillern participated in the murder. He was a very active participant," he said.

Skillern, 48, was convicted in the 1974 shooting of state narcotics officer Pat Randel.

Testimony during the trial showed that accomplice Charles Sanne — who is serving a life sentence — actually pulled the trigger.

Iranian kills himself after bride dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An Iranian man told his roommate he had "lost everything," then killed himself after finding his bride had suffocated in a suitcase during an attempt to smuggle her into the United States, authorities and the roommate said.

The 5-foot-tall woman's bruised body was discovered Monday in a large suitcase that revolved around a luggage carousel at Los Angeles International Airport so long customs agents finally inspected it, authorities said.

"I lost everything," Majmoud Ayazi, 31, told his roommate the day he bought the gun authorities say he used to kill himself in a car parked outside his apartment near California State University in Sacramento.

The woman was identified Friday as Kataun Safaie, 20, of Iran, said Los Angeles County coroner's spokesman Bill Gold.

Ayazi, her husband of three weeks, was found dead Thursday of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, said Bob Bowers, chief deputy for the Sacramento County coroner's office."As we put it together, it appears he decided to try to smuggle her over here in a suitcase," Bowers said.

"The Romeo and Juliet story has come back in all this," said Ayazi's roommate, who goes by the single name of Hadi. "It was the devotion that his wife had for him that they wanted to go to the United States in this kind of situation," he said Friday night in a telephone interview.

The discovery of Ayazi's body and information from his friends helped officials identify the young woman.

Ayazi had been on leave from Campbell Soup Co. in Sacramento since October, when he went to Iran. Three weeks ago, he married Ms. Safaie.

The couple flew to Frankfurt, West Germany, where Ayazi, who had studied and worked in the United States for eight years, tried to get his wife a visa from the U.S. Embassy. He apparently was told it could take a year, so they decided to smuggle her in a huge suitcase, Bowers said.

When Ayazi went to get Ms. Safaie at Los Angeles International on Monday, "he said he opened the suitcase and she was dead," Hadi said.

"He removed all identifying labels from the baggage and returned to Sacramento," Bowers said.

Ayazi told friends at the Sacramento airport that his wife was still in Germany, but they saw he was "in shock. ... He was obviously not the same guy we knew. We asked him and asked him, and all he said was, 'I'm just dead. I lost everything,'" Hadi said.

"He told me what happened about four or five hours before he killed himself. He asked me if I promised and swear not to tell anyone for a couple more hours until he made up his mind and decided some action.

"He was crying. He said, 'I don't know what to do. I'm afraid. I'm ashamed. What do I say to my wife's family?'

"I was giving him hope. I said do not think about suicide. Think about positive things. ... You just made a mistake. It's going to be all right after a couple of years."

Hadi said Ayazi had agreed to turn himself in to the police. Ayazi left no note, Bowers said.

Graduate level course offered

Texas Tech University will offer a three-hour graduate level course at Western Texas College in the spring semester.

The course will be taught on Tuesday evenings.

Dr. Jim Tully, dean of learning resources and financial aid director at Western Texas College, will be the instructor. Tully is a past president of the Texas Association of Educational Technology and organized the media center for the Region X Service Center. He has also served as president of the Area Ten Association of Educational Technology.

Patrice McKinney to teach various aerobics classes

Patrice McKinney, aerobic fitness specialist, will once again teach several classes through the HPE department at Western Texas College in the spring semester.

For the individual who is interested in beginning a program but whose schedule does not permit a structured time, the individualized fitness assessment is an exercise option. Mrs. Mckinney meets one-on-one with each registrant and does a fitness assessment, then writes an exercise prescription based on the assessment. Exercise logs are turned in every two weeks, and the semester concludes with reassessments including the Cooper Test.

For individuals who cannot or should not participate in weight bearing aerobics activities, Mrs. McKinney will teach a Women's Aquarobics (MWF 4-5 p.m.) and a (men's aquarobics MWF 5-6 p.m.) This class develops aerobic capacity without the risk of injury to joints and muscle-tendon units. The same locomotor movements performed in "land aerobics" are executed in the water but the 90 percent bouyancy provided by the water buffers the muscle-tendon units as well as delicate joints and weak backs, Mrs. McKinney points out.

Lo-level aerobics are designed for the individual who wants to shape up and has no risk factors. This class is designed to train the muscle-tendon unit and prepare the muscles for the stress of exercise. Small muscle group conditioning will also be emphasized.

The hi-level aerobic class requires instructor approval and is designed for the individual who is presently aerobically fit.

Mrs. McKinney is a member of the Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness. She holds numerous certifications including the Exercise Specialist and Group Exercise Leader cetifications from the prestigious Aerobics Institute in Dallas where she scored above the 90th percentile on all written exams and practicums.

She is a clinician with LIFE, International, an organization which trains and certifies aerobic instructors worldwide. She holds professional memberships in the American College of Sports Medicine, TAHPERD, the International Dance Exercise Association, the Aerobic Fitness Association of America, the National Running and Fitness Association and TJCTA. A true proponent of total fitness, she enjoys distance running and training for triathlons.

Says Kennedy...

America losing patience with Reagan policy

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says Americans are losing patience with South Africa's racial policies and will not long support President Reagan's use of quiet diplomacy to promote change in South Africa.

The Massachusetts Democrat, visiting South Africa at the invitation of Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, made his comments Friday night at a rally in the mixed-race township of Athlone, near Cape Town.

Saturday, he flew to the disputed territory of South-West Africa, or Namibia, to meet church and nationalist leaders.

In the South-West African capital Windhoek, Kennedy was expected to confer with leaders of the South-West Africa People's Organization. The civilian wing of SWAPO operates as a political party although South African forces conduct a bush war against SWAPO guerrillas based in neighboring Angola.

He flies to Johannesburg, where he began his South African tour eight days ago, later Saturday.

Kennedy said Americans will not long support "constructive engagement," the policy of political and economic contacts with South Africa seen by the Reagan administration as the best way to promote peaceful change in this country where a white minority of 5 million rules over 22 million voteless blacks.

"One reason for my trip here is to signal that the vast majority of my fellow citizens oppose apartheid and we will not accept endless delay and empty excuses for it," Kennedy said, referring to apartheid, South Africa's official system of racial separation.

Kennedy's visit is billed as a fact-finding tour in advance of debate in the U.S. Congress of the idea of using economic sanctions to promote change in South Africa.

South Africans who took comfort from official U.S. policy statements concerning the white minority government's practices have "surprising and painful days ahead of them," Kennedy said.

"For my nation will not long continue a policy of so-called constructive engagement with a social order so entirely destructive of human rights."

Kennedy told the rally it was "preposterous" for South African propagandists to see Reagan's election victory as endorsement of his policy toward South Africa.

"That was not a major issue in the past campaign but it is a major issue in America now," he said."Only a very few extremists in my country still defend the government of South Africa. Patience is running out across the whole political spectrum."

Kennedy said Americans "are saying that attention must be paid, they are marching ahead of the government again, and they will not permit it to turn back to business as usual with a regime of repression."

The senator said critics who viewed his South African tour as an early step toward seeking the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988 were missing the point.

"The real question is not whether I will ever seek the presidency of the United States but whether and when a black man will be able to seek and win the state presidency of South Africa," he said.

On Sunday, the senator speaks at a Roman Catholic church in Soweto, Johannesburg's black satellite city. He travels to Lusaka Sunday to meet Zambian leaders including President Kenneth Kaunda, a peacemaker in southern African affairs, and then flies to London en route home.

South Africa invaded German-ruled Namibia on behalf of the Allies in World War I and later controlled the territory under a League of Nations mandate. South Africa continues to govern Namibia in defiance of United Nations calls forimmediate independence.

The United States has led U.N.-sponsored negotiations toward Namibian independence but the talks have made only limited progress during six years because of complex issues involving several nations in the region. The main obstacle is American and South African insistence that Cuban soldiers supporting Angola's Marxist government leave Angola before Namibia becomes independent.

Court confrontation may be provoked

DALLAS (AP) — The state's failure to improve care of the mentally ill could provoke a confrontation with the federal courts, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said.

"The last thing I'm interested in is any kind of confrontation," the judge said Friday. "That would overshadow what needs to be done for the mentally ill people in this state."

The judge's comments came in a hearing called to brief him on efforts of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to comply with his June reform orders.

Although Sanders hopes to avoid a showdown, he made it clear he will do whatever necessary to see that the reforms are carried out.

"The Court has noted previously that it possesses a broad range of powers to enforce and effectuate its orders," the order Sanders issued Friday said. "The Court has no desire whatsover to invoke any of these powers but will do so if necessary."

Sanders said he will schedule another hearing in late February or early March on whether patients are being improperly discharged from mental health hospitals.

"It is time — indeed it is past time — for the state to realize that it has voluntarily made a solemn and binding commitment to improve mental health care and to conduct its affairs accordingly," Sanders said.

Sanders said his concern over discharges was sparked by news reports and of complaints to him that MHMR "is discharging patients who should not be released or who have no place to go."

One of the most startling accounts described how patients released from the state hospital in Austin were driven to Houston in an MHMR van, dropped off at downtown bus station and left to fend for themselves.

"Why did they ever take them to a bus station?" Sanders asked the attorney for MHMR at Friday's hearing.

"I don't know," attorney Phillip Durst responded. "But it's stopped."

Critics of MHMR say the agency is "dumping" patients instead of hiring more mental health workers in its attempt to meet court-ordered staff-to-patient ratios.

Sanders also said Friday that he will closely monitor the legislature's action on the MHMR's request for money to pay for the court-ordered reforms.

MHMR officials say they need $151 million in the next two years. But legislative leaders, who are beginning work on a new state budget, made an initial offer of only $18.2 million. In particular, House Speaker Gib Lewis has been critical of the costly changes.

The Texas State Employees Union, which represents hundreds of mental health workers, is urging Sanders to override the Legislature and force the state to pay for improvements.

Government class set on Mondays

Have you ever wondered how the Prime Minister of England is selected or what the role of the queen is in the modern Great Britain?

What about the organization of government in the Soviet Union?

"Take a trip to England, France, West Germany, the Soviet Union and Mexico to study the government of each of these nations along with its history, culture and heritage as it relates to its development as a nation," invites John Forshee, government instructor at Western Texas College. "The trip takes place each Monday evening from 6:30-9:20 starting Jan. 21 as our government 236 class gets underway."

WTC's government department has developed a series of courses in comparative government, international relations and political theory with each of the courses offered on a rotating basis. Comparative government is offered this spring and Forshee will be the instructor.

Although no textbook is required, there will be assigned readings from class hand-outs and library materials. Much of the class will be discussion and sharing of ideas.

For more information on the class, call Forshee at extension 296 at WTC or at home, 573-7662.

Psychology 231 offered at WTC

An evening class in general psychology is being offered on Tuesdays in the spring semester at Western Texan College. The class will meet from 6:30-9:20 on Tuesdays beginning Jan. 22.

General psychology will deal with a different subject area every week, according to Dr. Joe Reaves, instructor. Subject areas include child development, learning and memory, intelligence, motivation, emotions, personality development, adjustment, abnormal behavior, social psychology and therapies.

Classwork and lectures are designed for practical application with a great deal of the material drawn from current research and "here and now" happenings in the field, Reaves said. As a result of the practical approach, many individuals, particularly older adults, have taken the course for personal enrichment. The average age of a typical evening class in this course will be middle age, with women outnumbering men about two to one.

Out-of-class work is kept to a minimum in this course. Aside from studying for exams, the work is done in class as a rule.

Psychology 231 is required for majors in many field such as education, law enforcement, and nursing and is an excellent elective for almost any major, Reaves said. This course is transferrable to any four-year college or university.

Widespread ignorance of geographical facts growing national problem

When the Dallas Times Herald adminsitered tests in geography to a group of 12-year-olds in 1983, more than 20 percent could not locate the United States on a world map and over 20 percent incorrectly identified Brazil as the United States.

College students fare little better, said Dr. Jim Palmer, professor of history and geography at Western Texas College. In a recent survey of global understanding by the Educational Testing Service among more than 3,000 undergraduates in 185 two-and-four-year institutions, the average score for all students was less than 43 out of a possible 101.

"It is a serious problem when our students fail to achieve a minimum standard of competency in global understanding," Palmer said.

"Americans ignorance of their own country and the world will have dire consequences for our nation's welfare, strength, global interdependence and for the effects we have on people in other nations. Geographic education is vital to correct this ignorance and can give future generations the knowledge and understanding to manage the earth's resources wisely," he added.

World geography (GEO 123) offered at 11:15 a.m. MWF this spring at Western Texas College is a place to begin for persons who feel their knowledge of the world is not as strong as they would like," Palmer said. He especially recommends it for all elementary education majors and most secondary education majors. For more information call 573-8511, ext. 238.

Evening classes in aerobics slated

Two evening classes in aerobics and body conditioning will be taught by Jervia Reaves in the Western Texas College spring semester starting Wednesday.

HPE 112 454 (body conditioning) will be offered from 5:30-7 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Students will participate in exercises to tone and strengthen the large muscle groups in addition to increasing flexibility. In this class, walking or jogging in the gym is substituted for aerobic routines.

HPE 112 456 (low level aerobics) will be offered from 7-8 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Three times weekly is recommended for maintaining aerobic conditioning. Students who wish to enroll in this class but who have a conflict on Monday or Tuesday evenings may contact the instructor to make special arrangements to make up the class time. This class is recommended for students who are taking their first aerobics class, or who do not feel they are ready for advanced aerobics conditioning. In addition to aerobic conditioning, the class format will include toning and flexibility exercises targeting large muscle groups.

Mrs. Reaves points out that exercising the large muscle groups burns the greatest number of calories while providing the desired toning, strengthening and flexibility. Student comments from previous classes indicate that they have appreciated the thorough, complete workout and increased muscle tone and energy level provided by the exercises. For more information call 573-3215, after 5 p.m.

Evening students may register from 6:30-9 p.m. on Monday.

New Caledonia riots continue despite decree

NOUMEA, New Caledonia (AP) — Rioting continued in this French island territory in the South Pacific Saturday despite a curfew and state of emergency imposed after French police killed two native Melanesian independence leaders.

French police and armored personnel carriers were positioned around the French High Commission building in the city center, where police fired tear gas and stun grenades and some 300 rioters, mainly whites of European descent, responded with bottles and rocks.

The new violence followed 16 hours of rioting and arson by 1,500 white settlers that broke out Friday after a white farm boy was killed. Police said 26 people were injured in the battles in the capital Friday, and 26 policemen were hurt today.

The dark-skinned Melanesians, or Kanaks, are a 40 percent minority of the approximately 142,500 residents of the New Caledonian islands east of Australia. The islands were claimed by France in 1853. The majority of the population is made of descendants of white European settlers, Polynesians and Asian immigrants. They generally oppose the Kanak demand for independence.

The state of emergency — which permits police searches of homes, forbids gatherings by more than five people and imposes a dawn-to-dusk curfew — was declared today after the killing of two militant leaders by French paramilitary police.

Officials said Elio Machoro, 40, and his lieutenant, Marcel Nonaro, were killed in a shootout outside the capital between a group of militants and French police and soldiers backed by armored personnel carriers.

Officials said the two separatist leaders were among a group of militants who refused a demand that they surrender, and then fired at police first. Police said 34 militants were arrested in the incident.

Machoro was security minister of a provisional government declared last November by leftist, native-dominated independence movement known as the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front.

He commanded forces that seized and held the European town of Thio for almost three weeks last month. Machoro was reported to have visited Libya twice within the past two years. About 20 native independence leaders have visited the radical African nation in recent years for "training," local government officials said.

The Europeans, who favor continued French territorial status for the volcanic island chain, protested Friday in the capital over the death of Yves Tual, 17, who was killed by a gunshot from the surrounding jungle as he patrolled his father's cattle farm in central New Caledonia. His father said three Melanesians were seen fleeing the area of the shooting.

Police arrested 15 Melanesians for questioning in connection with the shooting.

Jean-Marie Tjibaou, leader of the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front, said after the death of the two leaders that a French proposal for a referendum next July on "independence in association with France" was no longer acceptable.

Texas agencies warned to trim costs

AUSTIN (AP) — In their sternest warning yet to state agency directors, House leaders are telling them to trim spending and immediately stop hiring new employees.

Speaker Gib Lewis and Rep. Jim Rudd, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, issued the warnings in a letter mailed to all agency and university bosses this week.

Lewis said earlier budget warnings were not always taken seriously.

"The word's got back to me that state agency heads say, 'Aw, they're not going to do that.' Well, we are going to do that. It's not a bluff by any means," the speaker said.

"We're telling them, 'You're accountable, and if we think you're wrong, be prepared to pay the church,'" Rudd said.

The letter calls for a moratorium on hiring and the elimination of "the less important programs" run by state agencies and universities.

Similar warnings were sent to agency leaders in March and August, but state officials and employee leaders are fearful that agency chiefs have ignored the budget crisis so severe it could cause layoffs in September when the new government budget year begins.

State revenue is projected to fall $1.1 billion short of current spending needs, and most top lawmakers oppose raising taxes. They boosted taxes by $4.8 billion last summer to fund school reforms and road repairs.

As chief budget writer for the House, Rudd said that when budget hearings begin next week, agency chiefs will be held accountable for their lack of action.

"It's not our intention for any state employee to lose his job," Rudd said. But he said he would not hesitate to write a budget that caused layoffs if the agencies fail to respond to the warning.

The Texas Public Employees Association has said six months of attrition would be needed for the state to avoid layoffs under an "austere" budget.

The moratorium request is not absolute. Rudd said critical jobs, including those in agencies under federal court order to improve services, must be refilled.

Thais lay down barbed wire along frontier border area

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Thai troops constructed a wall of barbed wire along the Thai-Cambodian border and a key frontier commander said today that Vietnamese troops might strike another Cambodian rebel base soon.

Maj. Gen. Salya Sriphen told reported Thai soldiers Saturday completed laying three to four miles of barbed wire to demarcate the frontier at Ampil, a Cambodian resistance base recently overrun by the Vietnamese.

The capture of Ampil Jan. 7 was the latest Vietnamese conquest in its current dry season offensive. The Vietnamese have attacked or overrun all major bases of the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front, one of three guerrilla groups battling them.

Following seizure of Ampil, Vietnamese and Thai officers met and agreed to a clear border demarcation to avoid hostilities between Thailand and Vietnam.

Salya, who commands Thailand's eastern task force, said the Vietnamese might continue their most successful offensive of the six-year war by attacking San Ro Changan, a camp of the non-communist Khmer group.

The camp is about four miles north of Ampil, which had served as headquarters for the resistance group since 1979. All its civilians were evacuated into Thai territory last week.

The defenders of Ampil, estimated at 5,000 men, retreated to Dong Ruk, a settlement near San Ro Changan. Dong Ruk has a civilian population of 17,500 Cambodians and 4,300 Vietnamese refugees. Thai officials have said it might be assaulted if the Vietnamese attack San Ro Changan.

The Thai military near Aranyaprathet also showed reporters five of six Vietnamese soldiers they said had crossed the frontier and surrendered to the Thais since Jan. 8. Two of the five were identified as officers and all said they were tired of the war in Cambodia and wished to be resettled in other countries.

Fighting the Vietnamese, who invaded Cambodia in late 1978, are the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, the communist Khmer Rouge and a third group loyal to one-time Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Psychiatric evaluation ordered

HOUSTON (AP) — A psychiatric evaluation has been ordered for a former mental patient charged with murder in the death of a 9-year-old boy who was fatally stabbed as he stood at a school bus stop.

Huy Nguong Duong, 25, was charged with murder in the death of Shane Smith, a fourth-grade student who was burned with a cigarette and stabbed 22 times Thursday.

Duong, an immigrant from Vietnam, was jailed in lieu of a $500,000 bond. During a preliminary hearing Friday, a judge ordered a psychiatric evaluation.

Two accidents termed minor

Two minor traffic accidents were reported in Snyder Friday.

Involved in the day's first mishap in the 1000 Block of 24th St. at 7:56 a.m. were a 1980 Ford driven by James Estes Cody of 1011 24th St. and a 1981 AMC driven by Rebecca Nance Black of 2900 Ave. G.

The second accident was reported at 9:17 p.m. in the 3500 Block of College Ave.

Involved in it were a 1978 Ford driven by Terry Don Steelman of Rt. 2, Snyder and a 1978 Pontiac driven by Danny Courtney of 3100 Ave. G.

No injuries were reported in either accident.

Shoplifting arrest made

Snyder police officers arrested a shoplifting suspect and reported clearing a recent vehicle burglary with the arrest of a suspect Friday evening.

City officers were called to the Varsity Square Shopping Center at 4:58 p.m. Friday by employees of TG&Y who reported that their store manager was pursuing a shoplifting suspect who left the store on foot.

A 24-year-old man was arrested along Deep Creek — southeast of the shopping center — at 5:08 p.m. following a short chase down the creek bed and charged with one count of misdemeanor theft.

Police detectives arrested a 14-year-old male at 10:26 p.m. Friday in connection with the Jan. 5 theft of stereo equipment from a car owned by Arnold Waid of 400 29th St.

All of the items reported stolen from the Waid vehicle were recovered with the arrest and the suspect was released to the custody of his parents pending possible action in juvenile court.

In other action Friday night, city police arrested two men for public intoxication and one for driving while intoxicated and driving on a suspended license.

Your CPA asks...

Should you be keeping A Mileage Log?

"Adequate contemporaneous records." If you are a businessperson who uses an automobile in your trade or business, you should familiarize yourself with these words. For, starting in 1985, no income-tax deduction or credit (including deductions for business-related automobile expenses and depreciation and the investment tax credit) is allowed with respect to the use of an automobile (or other vehicle) for business unless the taxpayer substantiates that business use through adequate contemporaneous records. In other words, if no proper records are kept, no deduction or credit may be claimed.

And, if your employer provides you with a car for business purposes, you may be treated as receiving substantial additional income in the absence of such adequate contemporaneous records.

The new requirement applies to all automobiles used for business regardless of when a vehicle was purchased or leased. It is expected that, for post 1984 tax returns, a taxpayer will be required to directly indicate on the return whether the required records have been kept. Claiming a deduction or credit without having adequate contemporaneous records will subject the taxpayer to a possible negligence penalty.

And what constitutes adequate contemporaneous records? Geneally speaking, such records include a log, journal, diary, or other similar record in which entries are made at or near the time an automobile is actually used in business. A taxpayer is required to make a separate entry in the log, etc., for each use of the vehicle. Each entry must include: (1) the date of use; (2) the name of the user; (3) the number of miles driven; and (4) the purpose of the use of the automobile (e.g., "to make a sales presentation to XYZ Inc."). A round trip may be considered a single use and, thus, may be accounted for by a single entry.

If records are kept of the automobile's odometer readings at the beginning and end of the tax year, only the business use of the vehicle need be recorded for tax purposes. Absent the beginning or ending odometer readings, however, nonbusiness mileage has to be recorded as well to allow the determination of the business percentage of the automobile's use.

To help you satisfy the "adequate contemporaneous records" requirement with respect to your business use of an automobile, it is recommended that you see your tax adviser. He will have for you (or recommend to you) an Automobile Mileage and Expense Log.

Army trying to find cause of missile blaze

HEILBRONN, West Germany (AP) — The U.S. Army was trying today to find out what ignited a fire on a Pershing 2 missile that killed three U.S. soldiers and injured at least seven during a routine training exercise.

"It appears like it was just an accident," said Maj. Michael Griffon, a spokesman for the 56th Field Artillery Brigade. "The reason for the fire is still unknown."

He said "there was no explosion and no nuclear weapons involved" in the fire at the "Red Leg" missile site outside Heilbronn in the south of the country.

Brig. Gen. Raymond Haddock, the unit commander, told a news conference that it was the first time such an accident had happened and he had ordered an investigation.

The fire broke out in a missile parts storage area while an equipment training exercise was being conducted under the supervision of a captain, Haddock said. The missiles are stored separately from their warheads and Griffon said, "there are no warheads in the area" of the fire.

Haddock said the engine of the missile's first stage had ignited without warning. Earlier, Griffon had said the missile's solid fuel propellant had ignited and burned.

There were conflicting reports on the number injured.

"Three American soldiers were killed and seven others taken to hospitals for treatment. Five have been released and two remain hospitalized. Several others suffered superficial injuries," Griffon said Friday night.

But Lt. Col. Joe Hollis, an Army spokesman at the Pentagon, said early today that nine people were hospitalized and seven others were treated and released.

Griffon first reported that two of the soldiers had burned to death, but later he said he could not give the exact cause of death.

The Pentagon identified the three dead today as Sgt. Todd A. Zephier of Wagner, S.D.; Staff Sgt. John Everett D. Leach, of Salem, Mo.; and Pvt. 1st Class Darryl Shirley of Irving, Texas.

The 35-foot missiles weigh 7 tons and measure 40 inches in diameter. Like the Pershing 1-A missiles they replaced, the Pershing 2s are propelled by a two-stage solid fuel rocket. The missiles are transported on large flatbed trucks, which would serve as their launchers in wartime. Griffon said a truck and a maintenance tent had also been burned in the fire.

In Washington, White House deputy press secretary Bob Sims said President Reagan "is aware of the incident. He is distressed and expressed sorrow at the loss of life.'

Sims said Reagan received updates on the accident but said he wanted those on the scene to "describe what's happened." The president said the mishap would have no impact on continued deployment of the weapons.

The 572 medium-range Pershing 2s and cruise missiles being deployed by NATO are designed to counter Soviet SS-20 nuclear missiles aimed at Western Europe.

Haddock said the missile involved in the accident was one of those "recently delivered from the United States."

"The accident occurred within a small U.S.-controlled area. At no time was there any danger to the German civilian population," said Griffon.

A fence surrounds the missile site, and only American soldiers were in the area at the time, said Rex Gribble, spokesman of the U.S. Army Europe headquarters in Heidelberg.

The missile base outside Heilbronn is one of three Army installations in south Germany where Pershing 2s are being deployed. The other sites are at Mutlangen, near Schwaebisch Gmuend, and Neu Ulm.

Since late 1983, West Germany has received 45 of the 108 Pershing 2s it is to deploy under NATO plan, a NATO spokesman disclosed last November.

The Pershing 2s are stored at the heavily guarded bases and taken into the field in guarded convoys for periodic training without nuclear warheads.

The West German government press office in Bonn declined comment on the fire. "While all details of what happened are not yet clear, we will not be giving an immediate comment," a government press officer said.

Texas electric supply looks 'good'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas utility companies will produce more than enough electricity to keep the lights on through 1993, according to a Public Utility Commission report.

But the report approved Friday does not talk about how much Texans might have to pay for the power.

"Cost is awfully hard to predict," said PUC Chairman Phil Ricketts.

The 1983 Legislature ordered the PUC to take a look at Texas' 10-year electricity needs. The report prepared by the staff offers an optimistic picture.

"The state's utility industry does plan to add enough capacity to meet future needs," said Lou Pompi, the commission's director of economic research. "The question of the lights going out in Texas is kind of a moot point, assuming utilities are able to follow through on their plans."

Ricketts agreed, saying, "This does show that in Texas we do have a very sound energy future with respect to adequacy and reliability of supply of electricity." He also said it rebuts critics who say the commission has hurt future power supplies by ordering rate cuts or by reducing rate hike requests in recent months.

The commission this week granted Houston Lighting & Power Co. an increase of $173.7 million. The company wanted $554 million.

"Those suggesting that the lights might go out because of the Public Utility Commission are wrong," said Ricketts.

Projections in the report show nuclear-produced electricity growing while natural gas declines in importance as a power plant fuel. In 1983, gas was used to produce 50.1 percent of Texas electricity. In 1993, it will account for only 33.4 percent, according to the report.

There is currently no electricity produced in nuclear plants in Texas. In 1993, 12.9 percent of the power will come from nuclear plants, the report said.

Electric supplies will increase by about 4 percent a year through 1993, enough to meet needs, Pompi said. The largest peak demand growth through 1993 will be in Austin and the Central Texas area served by he Lower Colorado River Authority, the report predicts.

Pompi said one of the unresolved "key issues" is whether utility companies will be able to finance planned construction. There should be "significantly less" construction over the next 10 years, but Pompi also said rising building costs could mean "the fewer facilities may cost more money."

Overall, however, he said there is "pretty strong evidence" that Texas utility companies enjoy "relatively sound financial health."

Attorneys for several utility companies testified Friday. None offered major criticisms of the report.

Anthropology 232 classes offered

You must meet Lucy, says J. M. Kayser, instructor for anthropology 232 at Western Texas College in the spring semester.

"She was some gal in her day," Kayser continued. "Her grandmother would say, 'Lucy, when you travel about, put at least one hand to the ground with your fingers bent in. Let your knuckles touch the ground. They will soon get tough. Carry things in your mouth or your other hand. You are going to fall and hurt yourself. No one walks on his hind legs. You frighten me!' But Lucy walked bipedal and so did her children. That was a million or so years B. P. (Before Present)."

In this introduction to anthropology, Kayser will encourage students to study a West Coast potlatch, join a cargo cult, do the Sun Dance that will banish the Europeans from North America and again blacken the Plains with bison, see a lowly "digger" Indian become a meat eater and dominate the "Great American Desert" because of the horse, watch Incan and Mayan empires arise because of the corn, beans, and squash, or see a pueblo woman decorate a pot that must be killed when she dies.

"Learning of them teaches us," Kayser explains.

Anthropology 232 classes will meet from 6:30-9:20 p.m. on Mondays, with the first class meeting on Jan. 21. Evening students may register from 6:30-8 p.m. Monday.

Home economics course planned

Western Texas College will offer home economics 231 in evening classes in the coming spring semester.

The new course is consumer economics and home management and will be taught by Virginia Forshee. She holds the bachelor of science degree in home economics from North Texas State University and has taught in public schools for 16 years. She is presently teaching in Rotan.

Classes will meet from 6:30-9:20 p.m. Thursdays.

HE 231 will transfer to most four-year colleges and universities as a home economics course.

Content for the course will include home budgets, coupon spending (does it really save money) comparative shopping for foods, furniture and fixtures, investments in stocks, bonds and other securities, and some attention to home planning, design and redecorating.

Field trips to furniture stores, a special "grocery shopping" trip, and an examination of various ready made clothes to evaluate quality and price are among the activities planned for the class.

For more information call 573-7662 or 573-8511, ext. 296.

Gymnastics classes offered

Saturday gymnastics classes will be offered by the Continuing Education department of Western Texas College starting Jan. 19.

Johnny Hickman will teach the classes. Beginners will meet from 1-2:30 p.m., intermediate students from 2:30-4 p.m. and advanced students from 4-5:30 p.m. There will be no class on April 6 due to the Easter holiday.

Fees will be $39 per student for the 23-hour course. Enrollment will be limited to 15 students per class. Classes will meet in the WTC gym.

To reserve space in the class call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Oil production techniques class offered by WTC

Oil production techniques will be studied in a lease production seminar scheduled by Western Texas College for the nights o. Jan. 28-31.

Topics to be covered are LACT units, separation of gas, free water knockout, treatment of oilfield emulsions, separators, and other topics of special interest to members of the class.

Instructor for the course will be George Stewart, a self-employed consultant. Stewart retired from CE NATCO with 38 years service and now conducts seminars throughout oil producing areas of the continental US. He is approved by the Texas Education Agency as an instructor in the petroleum area.

Classes will meet from 6:30-10:30 p.m. each night. Fees are $125 per person which includes the cost of a specially prepared manual and various handouts.

To pre-register call (915) 573-8511.

Games postponed with Ft. Stockton

Saturday's District 2-4A basketball games between Snyder and Fort Stockton have been postponed due to adverse weather conditions.

The Monahans-Sweetwater games, also scheduled to be played Saturday, were postponed as well.

Snyder boy's coach Larry Scott said that school officials will make contact Monday to reschedule Snyder's games with Fort Stockton. He said that rain and snow, coupled with sub-freezing temperature, had left hazardous driving conditions near Fort Stockton.

Four 2-4A games were played Friday night. District boy's leader Lamesa stayed undefeated in loop play by downing Pecos 80-58 while Andrews took sole possession of second place by a half-game with its 85-41 win over San Angelo Lake View.

Lamesa is now 4-0, Andrews 3-1 and Snyder and Sweetwater both 2-1.

In girl's play, Pecos ripped Lamesa 48-27. No. 5 ranked Andrews was to have played Lake View. However, no score was available.

SMU Ponies push past Aggies, 73-60

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Jon Koncak, Southern Methodist's 7-foot Olympian, ignited a late rally as the fourth-ranked Mustangs ran off 12 unanswered points to break open a tight game on their way to a 73-60 victory over Texas A&M in a Southwest Conference basketball game Friday night.

SMU was nursing a 56-54 lead with 5:56 remaining when Koncak scored a field goal and two free throws. Kevin Lewis and Koncak hit field goals, Butch Moore canned two free throws, and Carl Wright hit from outside to put the Mustangs ahead 68-56 with 1:17 remaining.

Wright led the Ponies to their 13th victory in 14 games and fourth straight in SWC play this season with 17 points while Koncak added 16 and Moore 14.

Kennie Brown scored 15 of his game-high 21 points in the second half to keep the Aggies in the contest until Koncak took over.

Don Marbury had 12 and Jimmie Gilbert 10 for A&M, 9-5 overall and 1-2 in SWC play.

As Celtics nip Bullets...

Bird scores 10,000th point

by The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics almost took too much time congratulating Larry Bird for scoring the 10,000th point of his National Basketball Association career.

Bird, in his sixth pro season, went over the magic figure by scoring 14 points in the first quarter of Friday's game with the Washington Bullets. While the Celtics patted Bird on the back, Washington regrouped from a 19-point deficit and gave Boston a battle before falling 103-101.

In other NBA action Friday night, it was Detroit 120, Indiana 109; New Jersey 122, Atlanta 103; Philadelphia 115, Houston 108; Chicago 113, New York 97; the Los Angeles Lakers 121, Dallas 102; Portland 123, San Antonio 103; Milwaukee 130, Cleveland 117; Denver 143, Kansas City 121; and the Los Angeles Clippers 98, Phoenix 84.

"Larry Bird was just sensational," said Washington Coach Gene Shue, and Celtic Coach K.C. Jones heartily agreed.

"He came up with the big plays when they needed them," Shue said of Bird, who finished with 33 points.

Pistons 120, Pacers 109

Reserve forward Terry Tyler scored 21 of his season-high 27 points in the fourth quarter to help Detroit pull away from the Pacers.

The Pistons turned a five-point halftime lead into an 87-75 bulge after three quarters, then romped ahead by as many as 18 points in the final period.

Nets 122, Hawks 103

Buck Williams scored 21 points and grabbed 17 rebounds and Albert King also tallied 21 points as New Jersey rolled past Atlanta in the second half.

Atlanta came within 59-53 early in the third period, but the Nets took control with an 8-2 spurt that featured four points by Mike Gminski. Later in the third, New Jersey used a 17-6 run to open an 89-65 bulge.

76ers 115, Rockets 108

Moses Malone scored 28 points and Julius Erving added 21 in Philadelphia's 10th consecutive victory, equalling the highest win streak in the NBA this season. The 76ers led only 94-92 with 8:06 to play, but used a 10-1 spurt to take control.

Ralph Sampson led the Rockets with 31 points.

Bulls 113, Knicks 97

Michael Jordan scored 23 points and Quintin Dailey added 22 as Chicago romped over injury-riddled New York.

Already suffering the loss of two starters, the Knicks were dealt a further blow in the first quarter when forward Bernard King sprained his right ankle. King, the NBA's leading scorer with a 32.2 average, didn't return and finished with nine points, snapping a streak of 85 consecutive double-figure scoring games.

Darrell Walker led the Knicks with 16 points.

Lakers 121, Mavericks 102

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit 12 of his first 13 shots on the way to a 30-point, 11-rebound performance that helped Los Angeles snap Dallas' four-game win streak. The 37-year-old Jabbar canned eight of nine shots in taking the Lakers to a 60-45 halftime lead and Los Angeles wasn't challenged in the second half.

Stadler boasts 3-stroke lead in annual Bob Hope Classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) - Craig Stadler kept himself golf-sharp over the offseason and had his game in shape when he set out for the Bob Hope Classic, the kickoff event on the 10-month PGA Tour.

"During the winter, I played every two or three weeks, so I was in a position where I could get it back in a couple of days instead of the usual week or so," the former Masters champion said Friday.

"I'm still hitting two or three funny shots a day - but I've been getting away with them," Stadler said.

And he had rounds of 66, 68 and 64 - the latter matching the course record at Bermuda Dunes - through the first 54 holes of the Hope Classic to testify to his statements.

His 198 total, 18 under par with two rounds to go in this 90-hole, five-day tournament, gave Stadler a 3-shot lead that, he said, could have been even better.

He 3-putted for par-5 on the 18th hole of Friday's round and, he said, "missed three makeable putts on the front side."

Stadler, who scored the first of his eight Tour victories in this event five years ago, will play his fourth round at Tamarisk and, with the other survivors of the 72-hole cut, complete the tournament at Indian Wells on Sunday.

The pros are required to play one round on each of four desert courses, each day with a different set of amateurs, before the field is trimmed for the pros-only finish Sunday.

Ron Streck, with a third-round 66 at Indian Wells, was second at 201. Lanny Wadkins, a former PGA titleholder, was another stroke back at 202 after a 68 in the bright, warm sunshine at La Quinta.

Mark O'Meara, the No. 2 money-winner last season, and Larry Mize were next at 203. O'Meara had a 69 at La Quinta, Mize 67 at Bermuda Dunes.

Fred Couples, with a 68 at Indian Wells, and Doug Tewell, with a 70 at Bermuda Dunes, followed at 204.

Tim Simpson, the second-round leader, slipped to a 74 at La Quinta and was nine shots off the pace at 207.

Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus matched rounds of par 72 at La Quinta and were tied at 212, 4 under par.

Bell claims pole vault at Ottowa track event

OTTAWA, Ontario (AP) - American Earl Bell won the pole vault at 18 feet, one-half inch and Ray Flynn of Ireland won the 3000-meter run in a slow 8 minutes, 6.28 seconds Friday night at the Ottawa International Indoor Games, the first event of the North American indoor track season.

Bell, who won a bronze medal at the Summer Games, had to sit and watch through most of the pole vault event while fellow American Billy Olson - who set the world best mark at 19-0¼ here two years ago and then raised it the following week in Toronto - tried three times at 18-4½. But Olson missed three times and Bell backed into first place.

Flynn grabbed the lead with two laps to go from Dave Reid of Toronto and stretched his winning margin to about 20 metres on the final lap.

Special teams strength for 'Niners

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) - The special teams of the San Francisco 49ers were strictly ordinary, at best, three years ago when they played in Super Bowl XVI.

Going into Super Bowl XIX, next Sunday's meeting with the Miami Dolphins at Stanford Stadium, Coach Bill Walsh should feel very good about the 49ers' special teams play. It has been a very good year for the guys who take the field in kicking situations.

"The main reason is Fred vonAppen. He's done a fantastic job," says Bill Ring, one of the few special teams players from three years ago who's still on the job. "He gets us enthused and prepared to play every game."

Walsh named vonAppen, who coached under him at Stanford in 1977-78, the 49ers' special teams coach in 1983. In his two seasons with the 49ers, there have been no kickoff or punt returns for touchdowns by opponents, only two San Francisco punts have been blocked, and there's been improvement in the 49ers' kick return yardage.

"He's gotten us working as a cohesive unit," says Ring, whose contributions to the team's 15-1 record during the 1984 National Football League season included 16 tackles and a blocked punt in special teams assignments and 162 yards on 38 carries as a reserve running back.

In the Super Bowl game at Pontiac, Mich., three years ago, the 49ers won the coin toss and elected to receive, but Amos Lawrence fumbled away the ball on the opening kickoff.

Safety Dwight Hicks' interception of a Ken Anderson pass near the goal line was the first of the 49ers' big defensive plays which helped them beat the Bengals 26-21.

Punter Jim Miller averaged 46.3 yards on four kicks, but the Bengals averaged nine yards per return and had one of 17 yards.

In the 1981 regular season, 49ers' opponents averaged 11.6 yards per punt return. This season, they averaged 6.3 yards.

In Super Bowl XVI, the 49ers were successful with their strategy of having Ray Wersching make bouncing, squib kicks instead of booting long on kickoffs. This was partly because of their respect for Bengals' returner David Verser and partly because Wersching did not get the ball high and deep on kickoffs.

Wersching has improved on distance since then. Opponents averaged only 19.2 yards per kickoff return this season.

"I won't be making any squib kicks this time unless I do it by accident," he says.

Sports in summary

FOOTBALL

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) - Senior running back Napoleon McCallum, only 84 yards away from a Navy career rushing record when he broke his ankle in the second game of the 1984 season, will be allowed to play another year of football, the Naval Academy announced.

This is the first time the academy has allowed an athlete to compete after his scheduled graduation date. It is a common practice, called "redshirting," at civilian colleges, where athletes frequently sit out one season of competition to extend their playing careers for a year.

McCallum was scheduled to graduate in May, but had asked to stay on at the academy for the fall semester so he could play one more year of college football.

GENERAL

MISSION, Kan. (AP) - Alcohol is the most widely used drug among college athletes, according to preliminary results of an NCAA-sponsored study that also shows 37 percent of the sampled athletes had used marijuana in the past year.

Preliminary results published in The NCAA News showed that 88 percent of the 2,048 athletes who completed questionnaires had used alcohol in the year prior to the start of the fall term, but 6 percent said they had stopped using alcohol at the time of the survey.

SKIING

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (AP) - All-round skier Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland upset a field of downhill specialists on the world's toughest course and took the lead in the World Cup standings.

Zurbriggen, averaging 98.21 kilometers per hour (61 mph), barreled down the icy Hahnenkamm course in a time of 2 minutes, 0.98 seconds to win the first downhill of his career. Second was Switzerland's Franz Heinzer (2:08.98). Austria's Peter Wirnsberger finished third with 2:09.33.

BAD KLEINKIRCHHEIM, Austria (AP) - Christelle Guignard of France upset many of the world's elite women skiiers today in winning a World Cup slalom race.

Guignard, who posted best time of 42.49 seconds in the first heat, clocked 43.68 in the second for a winning total of 1:26.17.

Maria Rosa Quario was second in 1:26.49 and third was Swiss ace Erika Hess in 1:27.48.

No-name players will profit from Super Bowl XIX too

MIAMI (AP) - Sanders Shiver will never be a media darling. Steve Clark won't be besieged for autographs. Bud Brown hasn't been approached by national advertising companies.

But those three nearly anonymous players stand to gain just as much as superstar quarterback Dan Marino if the Miami Dolphins win Super Bowl XIX.

Shiver, Clark and Brown play sparingly. At some point during the season, they all worried about their future in professional football. But if the Dolphins can stop the San Francisco 49ers Jan. 20 in Palo Alto, Calif, they will be $64,000 richer, just like every other player on the winning team in the National Football League championship game.

Shiver and Brown were among the last group of players cut by the Dolphins before the season, while Clark was placed on injured reserve with an ankle injury. But as injuries began to take their toll, they were all added to the active roster during the season.

Shiver, a nine-year veteran who was released by the Baltimore Colts after the 1983 season, said the money is important, but the satisfaction of reaching the ultimate in your profession is more important.

"It's the ultimate," said Shiver.

"I knew it (reaching the Super Bowl) was a possibility because with the Dolphins it's always a possibility," he added.

While the Dolphins making the Super Bowl is hardly shocking, Bud Brown making the Dolphins certainly was. Brown, an 11th-round draft choice from Southern Mississippi, came into training camp this season trying to earn a spot at Miami's strongest position, defensive back.

"When the Dolphins' scout came to Southern (Mississippi), he told me about all of the (defensive backs) here and I didn't really think there was much of a chance of making the team," Brown recalls. "But I worked my tail off before coming to camp and I guess it paid off."

Clark, a backup offensive lineman who joins Shiver and Brown on the special teams, has been through this all before. In three barely noteworthy seasons in the NFL, he has played in two Super Bowls.

"I feel real lucky," Clark said. "I've been here three years and we've been in the Super Bowl two of them. Some guys play 14 or 15 years, make All-Pro, and never get a chance to play in the Super Bowl. I just hope I can contribute."

USFL permitted to play Saturday

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department told the United States Football League on Tuesday it would not challenge network telecasts of USFL games on Saturday afternoons - traditionally reserved for college contests - when the fledgling league switches to a fall schedule next year.

The league, in a letter from Commissioner Chester R. Simmons, had asked the department last November if a prospective network contract for Saturday games would be challenged under the antitrust laws.

The current statutory antitrust exemptions for broadcast deals with professional football do not apply to Saturday contests during the college season.

J. Paul McGrath, assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division, replied that under the terms outlined by Simmons, the government "has no present intention to institute enforcement proceedings challenging" the proposed broadcasts.

The terms include a guarantee that no network games would be blacked out to the home audience, and that only one game would be broadcast nationally on any given Saturday afternoon. A network could carry up to four games regionally, however.

All other USFL games would be played on Saturday nights or on other days, under the league's proposal. The league already has a deal with a cable outlet, the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network - ESPN - to carry night games. Another prospective agreement would be for ESPN to carry Sunday contests.

The league did not specify a particular network for the Saturday afternoon package. ABC has carried USFL games in the past.

The league began play in the spring of 1983, sticking to the spring-summer format again last year and in its 1985 schedule. It said USFL teams lost an average $3.5 million last year, and hopes a switch to a fall schedule and a more attractive television package will reverse those losses.

Television revenues totaled only $1.3 million per team last year, compared to $14 million per team in the National Football League.

"We believe that the USFL's television proposal is procompetitive, in that it is likely over time to increase output of professional football broadcasts," McGrath wrote. "The USFL, as a new and struggling venture ... is trying to compete with a well-established professional football league."

McGrath made no direct reference in his return letter to the USFL to the potential conflict with college games. Just last year, the NCAA lost a Supreme Court fight to retain control over which, and how many, college broadcasts are televised. That freed the way for a coalition of college football powers to negotiate their own deals.

Trail Blazers 123, Spurs 103

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 25 points and Jim Paxson 24 for Portland, which pulled away in the late going after San Antonio had cut the deficit to 75-73.

George Gervin had 23 points and Artis Gilmore added 21 for the Spurs.

Bucks 130, Cavaliers 117

Sidney Moncrief scored 35 points and Paul Pressey added 20 as Milwaukee snapped Cleveland's three-game winning streak. Alton Lister hit consecutive dunk shots and Kevin Grevey, Pressey and Charles Davis each had baskets in a 10-1 spurt that gave Milwaukee a 96-82 advantage with 1:04 left in the third period. Cleveland got no closer than five points after that.

World B. Free and Roy Hinson scored 26 points apiece for the Cavaliers.

Nuggets 143, Kings 121

Calvin Natt, coming back after missing two games with an injured knee, touched off a 39-14 third-quarter Denver spree that turned a close game into a rout. Kansas City led 74-72 in the early minutes of the period when Natt tied the score with two free throws. After a free throw by Mark Olberding gave the Kings their last lead at 75-74, Natt had two free throws and a pair of layups as Denver rolled to a 113-94 lead after three quarters.

Connors squeezes out Volvo victory

NEW YORK (AP) - Second-seeded Jimmy Connors sputtered his way into the semifinals, defeating Eliot Teltscher 6-2, 6-4 Friday night in the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis championships at Madison Square Garden.

Earlier in the day, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the No. 3 seed, ousted Joakim Nystrom 6-4, 7-6 (7-3) in the quarterfinals of this 12-player, season-ending event.

In Saturday's semifinals, top-seeded John McEnroe will take on No. 4 Mats Wilander of Sweden, followed by Connors against Lendl.

The winner on the indoor carpet here will pocket $100,000, with the runnerup collecting $60,000. Both Saturday's semifinals and Sunday's title match will be televised nationally by NBC.

The Lendl-Connors clash will continue their confrontations in the U.S. Open championship match in both 1982 and 1983. Connors won both, but Lendl captured his first Grand Slam tournament title in 1984 when he came from two sets down to stop McEnroe in the final of the French Open.

Against Teltscher, Connors captured a topsy-turvy opening set that saw four service breaks, three by the left-hander from Sanibel Harbor, Fla.

After Teltscher moved ahead 40-30 on his own serve in the seventh game, Connors, who has won 105 career titles, ripped off the next 11 points, breaking Teltscher in the seventh game, serving a love game, then breaking his opponent again, this time at love.

Although Teltscher pulled to deuce in the 10th game, Connors, whose hustling, fighting style has made him a crowd favorite around the world, took the next two points to advance to his semifinal battle against Lendl.

Special thanks to Dr. Robert Pierce & the Nurses on Medical I for their loving & professional care during her years of sickness. Also, our thanks to her Sitters & Special Nurses & the Pallbearers. The beautiful flowers, memorials, cards, phone calls, scholarship and the abundance of food were appreciated more than you will ever know. To my Sorority Sisters of Iota Psi who served & brought food, we thank you so much. Most of all we want to thank all of our dear friends for their prayers offered in our behalf.

SATURDAY MORNING FIRE — The Faustino Ramirez residence — located on the Bullard Ranch about 13 miles west of Snyder — sustained extensive damage from a fire which broke out shortly before 9 a.m. Saturday. Snyder firemen were called to the scene of the blaze but reported that the roof of the frame structure had fallen in before they arrived. All occupants of the residence escaped the fire without injury. The cause of the blaze remains under investigation.(SDN Staff Photo)

Almost 9-10ths of Arkansas' original hardwood swamps have been drained, denying vital wetlands to migrating ducks, says National Geographic. In the contiguous 48 states, about 458,000 acres of wetlands are lost to farming and other development every year.

G&G burglarized again

G&G Grocery at the intersection of Huffman Ave. and the Clairemont Highway was victimized by burglars Friday night for the second time in less than a week.

Reports filed by Snyder police officers and investigators with the Scurry County sheriff's office indicated that city police driving by the store at 11 p.m. discovered a front window broken out.

Sheriff's investigators were called to the scene and reported that the store had apparently been entered and a money bag containing an undetermined amount of cash taken.

Back door to the store was found open and investigators think that the burglar entered the building through the front window and then exited through the back door sometime between the store's closing around 9:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday.

The store was also burglarized last Wednesday night by a thief who apparently entered by breaking a front window and then exited throught the back door after taking two money bags containing checks and cash.

That burgalry was discovered around 11:30 p.m. Wednesday by a passing motorist who noticed the broken window.

Judge won't go easy on sheriff

DALLAS (AP) — Saying he wanted to deter other lawmen from abusing their office, a federal judge ordered Kaufman County Sheriff Roy Brockway to give up his badge as punishment for beating and kicking a confession out of a suspect.

"I know this man has done a good job," U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer said Friday as he sentenced the veteran sheriff to five years probation. "But I also know he has abused his office."

The judge also ordered Brockway, who has been sheriff for 20 years, not to serve as a law enforcement officer or work with lawmen for the duration of his probation.

Brockway, 53, was convicted by a federal jury Dec. 7 of violating the civil rights of Timothy Barrickman, 24, in October 1983, by beating him in order to obtain a confession in a theft case. Charges against Barrickman were later dropped.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown SDN Society Editor

Once again Scurry County Girl Scouts begin their annual cookie sales to area residents. From now until Jan. 30, the girls will take orders for the seven cookie flavors — Pecan Chocolate Chip, Carmel deLite, Thin Mint, Shortbread, Peanut Pattie, Peanut Butter Sandwich and the newest, Lemon Pastry Creme.

Most people are familiar with the green- or brown-clad young ladies representing 23 troops. Even though Girl Scouting has existed in Snyder since 1930, people may not be aware of the activities provided by the organization.

Mrs. Lemons, a local teacher, began with 14 girls. This year the organization has grown to include 260 girls and 75 adults.

Scurry County scouts celebrated their 50th year in 1980 by burying a time capsule to be opened in 1990. Three members of the original troop participated in the activities.

Dr. Ed Barkowsky, chairman of the communications and letters division at Western Texas College, said, "I think Girls Scouts is one of the finest organizations for girls to develop a sense of civic pride, to develop social skills, citizenship and leadership."

Dr. Barkowsky became involved in Girl Scouts when his oldest daughter, Lisa, first joined. People are sometimes surprised that a man can participate in the organization, but he said that many opportunities exist for fathers as well. "Men can be assistant troop leaders, or troop leaders for that matter," he said. "There are no men in those positions here, but I know some serve this way on the national level."

Besides troop leaders, the West Texas Girl Scout Council is always looking for men to serve on various council committees, especially the camp committee. "We need men to help with maintenance, to help put up tents and help in other ways at Camp Boothe Oaks in Sweetwater," he added.

The program is now offered to girls from first grade through senior high school. According to Dr. Barkowsky, Girl Scouts hope to establish Daisy Troops for kindergarten girls beginning next fall. Even though a girl actually completes the program during her senior year, she is encouraged to continue to participate by staying involved as a leader or to help with projects.

Besides enjoying regular meetings, girls have the opportunity to be involved in many local activities including the fair booth, family picnics and parades.

Camping too is emphasized by the organization which offers a Brownie/Dad camping trip, day camps, troop camping and a city-wide camp.

In addition to fellowship activities, Girl Scouting offers girls the opportunity to serve their community in a variety of ways. The "Adopt-a-Grandparent" program involved over half the membership in 1983. Nearly all the girls made tray favors for hospital patients during the year as well. Serving as rodeo ushers and doing yard work for the elderly were also major projects.

In addition to 1983 programs, last year the girls helped the police department with its bicy-

GEARING UP FOR COOKIE SALES — Girl Scouts across the county will be knocking on residents' doors taking orders for Girl Scout cookies through Jan. 30. Jenny Valdez (on the left), Aleesha Sales and Misty Clem are shown taking an order from Zadie Mae Miller, former district president in this area. Jenny is the daughter of Toni and Reuben Valdez. Gilbert, Parham exchange vows in First Baptist Church

Mella Dee Gilbert and Gary Glenn Parham exchanged wedding vows on Saturday, Dec. 29, at 11 a.m. in the First Baptist Church with Tom Holcomb, minister of the East Side Church of Christ, officiating.

An arrangement of princess pine and white poinsettias flanked by two seven-light candelabra with votive candles centered the church. The rails were lined with princess pine, holly and white poinsettias. Votive candles, white poinsettias, greenery and hunter green satin ribbon adorned the aisles. An ecru lace runner covered the registry table centered with an arrangement of red poinsettias, white starburst mums and princess pine. Becky Harrell registered guests as they entered.

Mrs. [illegible]ne Bethel, pianist, and Mrs. Randy Perkins, organist, play[illegible] selected love songs as the guests, grandmothers and mothers were seated. At 11 a.m., a chorus, including Dana Parham, Jeanna Fox, Teka Eicke and Mickey Broach, sang "Law of the Lord." "The Bridal Chorus" by Wagner was played as the bridesmaids entered the auditorium. The bride and her father entered to "The Wedding March" by Mendelssohn.

MRS. GARY GLENN PARHAM
Harley Bynum Photography

As the couple stood at the altar, Parham and Broach sang "Endless Love" by Lionel Ritche. After the wedding vows were repeated and a prayer was said, Parham sang "The Lord's Prayer." Ending the ceremony, the chorus sang "May God Bless You and Keep You." The couple left to the "Processional March."

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a candlelight peaudesoie gown featuring a high illusion neckline adorned with Alecon lace over the bodice and below the elbow of the leg-of-mutton sleeves. Tiny seed pearls outlined the lace motifs on the neckline, bodice and sleeves.

The bride's headpiece, was fashioned from a Battenburg lace baby cap belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. J.T. Hughes. The cap had been worn by the bride's mother in her own wedding. Mrs. Mal Galloway outlined the lace design with tiny seed pearls and added silk flowers across the front. The veil of imported bridal illusion featured scattered lace motifs and was also fashioned by Galloway.

The bride carried a tear-shaped, cascading bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, podacorpus, ming fern and baby's breath attached to a Bible which had also been carried by her mother and sister-in-law in their weddings. Inside the Bible was a baby cap given to the groom's mother before his birth.

Maid of honor Sharmon Briggs of Austin and bridesmaids Lisa West and Cathey Cypert of Snyder, Jenny Eiland of San Angelo and Karen Campbell of Sugarland wore identical tea-length dresses of iridescent forest green taffeta. The dresses were fashioned with full skirts, fitted bodices and short, puff sleeves. The necklines featured large ecru lace collars forming a "V" and highlighted by a large bow in the back. Each wore matching forest green satin pumps. The bridesmaids' cascading bouquets featured red poinsettias, ming fern, holly and baby's breath with satin picot ribbon streamers in red, candelight and hunter green. Their hairpieces were rings of holly and berries.

Melina Kay Gilbert, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a short, forest green velvet dress with long sleeves, full skirt and an ecru lace collar. A holly and berry halo adorned her hair and she carried a small white basket.

Ring bearer Wesley Zane Gilbert, the bride's nephew, wore gray slacks, a forest green velvet jacket and a red bow tie. He carried a candelight satin pillow.

The groom and his attendants were attired in gray morning suits. Mark Lyon of Snyder served as best man with groomsmen Russell Johnson of Waco, Gary Martin of Abilene, Stephen Ham of Abilene and Calvin Wimmer of Snyder. Ushers were Ken Kitchens of Lovington, N.M., Whit Parks of Snyder, Brad Davis of Keller and Yancy Spivey of San Angelo.

The bride's mother wore a forest green velvet skirt and an ecru linen blouse embellished with lace and embroidery. The groom's mother chose a cranberry chemise in silk jacquard. Each wore a gardenia corsage.

The bride's headpiece served as something old and her dress was something new. For something borrowed, she chose a pair of pearl earrings belonging to her mother. A garter made and given to her by Peggy English was something blue. She also had pennies minted in the years of the couple's births in her shoe.

A buffet reception followed at the Snyder Country Club. The buffet table held arrangements of stacked glass bubbles filled with fruit and berries. Dark green ribbon swags and bows completed the table decorations.

The bride's table featured an off-white cloth with appliqued red poinsettias purchased by the bride in Europe. The table was centered with an arrangement of red poinsettias, white starburst mums, princess pine and leatherleaf fern in a silver epern. Poinsettias, white starburst mums, leatherleaf fern, baby's breath and red berries decorated the five-tiered cake. Becky Harrell and Pam Smith of Snyder and D'Lynn Briggs of Lubbock served punch from a silver punch bowl. Mints and nuts completed the table.

The groom's round table featured a floor-length, forest green cloth and held a centerpiece of white poinsettias, princess pine and red berries in a tall brass container. The chocolate cake and coffee from a brass urn were served by Marca Boyd of Arlington, the groom's sister, Jennifer Ham of Abilene and Kim Spivey of San Angelo. Nuts and mints also complimented the table.

Lynn Bethel performed piano selections. Mrs. Mark Duke made the reception arrangements.

A luncheon hosted by Mrs. N.R. Clements, Mrs. Glenn Patterson and Mrs. Steve Allen was held for the bride at the Snyder Country Club on Nov. 24. A lingerie party in Lubbock on Dec. 6 was hosted by Angela West, Cindy Raymond, Janice Jordan, Courtney Longcope and Dana Leonard, Chi Omega sisters.

On Dec. 28, Jan Harrell, Kaye Cypert, Durelle Gorman, Mary Eiland, Patsy Williams, Lynn Bethel, Jenny Eiland, Elwanda Nall, Vera McSpadden and Carolyn Jackson hosted a bridesmaids' luncheon in the Martha Ann Woman's Club.

The groom's parents held a dinner at The Shack Restaurant on Dec. 28. A slide presentation of the lives of both the bride and groom to the present was shown by Harley Bynum. The groom and a group of his long-time friends, Mark Lyon, Gary Martin, Stephen Ham, Rick Martin and Calvin Wimmer, sang a medley of their old favorites.

An early morning breakfast was held on Dec. 29 for the groom and his attendants in the home of Mrs. Rex Miller. Barbara McCormick, Joann Ham, Wanda Hudgins, Sue Lyon, Janet Wesson and Fran Bowden served as hostesses.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding came from Austin, Arlington, Abilene, Big Spring, DeLeon, Gail, Keller, Houston, Fort Worth, Lubbock, San Marcos, Grand Prairie, San Angelo, Odessa, Sanger, Sherman, Sugarland, Malcolm, Neb. and Lovington, N.M.

The bride and groom are 1983 graduates of Snyder High School. Following a wedding trip to Banff, Alberta, Canada, they will make their home in Lubbock where both are students.

Day-to-Day Money Management

Where does all the money go? You'll never have a good answer to this question, or a grasp of your family finances unless you have a method for keeping financial records.

Keeping good records may not be the most desirable task, but it is necessary one for effective money management.

Record-keeping should be a cooperative effort among all members of the household, although the person best qualified should assume major responsibility for the task.

The first step is to organize a work space, which includes a table surface and adequate facilities for storing records.

Then you will need to develop a workable record-keeping system. This is simply a procedure for forecasting expected income, estimating money you need, making spending plans, keeping a record of how money was used and reviewing family money management.

Develop a system to get started, but don't feel like you're locked into it. It's better to make changes in your system than to abandon it because it's too difficult to follow.

Here are the home economist's suggestions for starting a basic family record-keeping system.

—Keep all cash register tapes and receipts for bills paid in one place — like a box or drawer — until they can be filed or recorded in a monthly record-keeping book. Be sure that each tape or receipt identifies the amount of money spent and what it was spent for.

—Have each family member record the money they spend and its use, then give it to the person who is keeping the monthly bills.

—Decide who will pay the bills and record the spending plans and expenditures. Also decide whether the recording will be done weekly, every two weeks or monthly.

—Set a specific time, like once a month, for a family council to evaluate goals, spending plans and records of how money was used and to make spending plans for the next month.

It's important that accurate records and plans are kept for all money.

cle identification program and fingerprinting children project.

Last year the girls sold approximately 14,070 cases of cookies with $8,241 remaining with the troops. The money is used for badge books, badges, tee shirts, uniforms and field trips.

In addition to the money for troop activities, cookie sales net each cadet and senior level girl (those in sixth grade through senior high school) "cookie currency." For each case she sells, a girl receives $5 credit to be used for camp or for the council's "wider opportunity program."

Through this program last year, two girls and an adult sponsor were able to spend 10 days in Cuernavaca, Mexico. This year girls will be able to participate in a Texas tour.

Girls with high sales will be able to take their fathers on an overnight camping trip to Camp Boothe Oak.

According to troop leaders, this year's cookies are scheduled to be delivered March 1-16.

Individual troops also raise money through calendar sales in the fall. As a United Way agency, Girl Scouts will also receive some $8,000 in funds during 1985.

'Quiet hour' gets work done

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — The telephone keeps ringing; other workers keep asking questions; the boss schedules another meeting.

It's hard to work or think efficiently surrounded by such normal but distracting interruptions, so a "quiet hour" has been set aside for accounting workers at Contel Service Corp., Western region headquarters for Continental Telephone Co.

They reserve 8 to 9 a.m. to work on long-term projects, research, reports or other creative work that requires concentration.

The "quiet hour," officially called "Achieving Maximum Potential," was started this fall because the accounting department staff works in a large open area, making it hard to sneak into a quiet corner to concentrate.

"It's like an invisible force field we can create to allow us one hour of quiet time," said Ted Carrier, Contel's staff manager for general accounting.

"The managers can close their doors to get a quiet moment," added Carrier, chief architect of the project. "The rest of us don't have offices and don't have doors we can close."

The Bakersfield office is Contel's headquarters for 10 Western states, and employees throughout the region are accepting the idea that they can't telephone the accounting department between 8 and 9 a.m., Carrier said.

"During AMP hour, employees aren't involved in meetings, errands, running printers or other distracting activity," Carrier said. "So far, we're in unanimous agreement that the program has been extremely successful.

"Most people outside the department run hot or cold on AMP hour," he added. "Some felt it was an inconvenience, but most thought it was very favorable."

He added that the staff is "flexible. If there's an emergency during that hour, we will respond."

Donna Miller, who processes the regional payroll, said she had received just one emergency call between 8 and 9 a.m. during the first month.

"We've just informed personnel that this hour is not a time to contact us," she said. "And most people think this is a good idea and wish they could have a similar program."

Dan Speidel, a general accounting supervisor, said he had never had time "to get the important things done" before the advent of AMP. "I used to spend my time doing urgent things instead of important things."

Patty Ross, a general accounting supervisor, said workers made a game of seeing "how much we can get done during the hour. I had one project on the back burner for several months, and I was able to complete it in seven AMP hours."

And Carrier says he's more willing to delegate more projects to the staff because "I know they have AMP hours to get the work done."

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

In the middle-50s, Elvis Presley played in Lubbock — appearing, if memory serves, at the grand opening of either a shopping center or super market.

We were too young to go, but a sister 10-years older made the trip. On her return, we asked her what she thought, and she described the soon-to-be famous Presley as "vulgar."

We were reminded of that remark last week as a bunch of ink and paper was used up in speculation why the "legend" of Elvis Presley "lives on."

This story likely generated more copy than the nuclear arms limitation talks between us and the Ruskies — a event which occurred simultaneously with what would have been Elvis' 50th birthday Tuesday.

So while a large share of this country pondered Elvis instead of relief from a nuclear Armageddon, some high brow dudes were speculating in print why an "inarticulate hillbilly" continues to fascinate some folks.

Our question is, how long can you hold a string of terrifically awful movies against some one?

That plus the fact he wound up fat instead of gorgeous — a word another sister continues to use when describing the so-called King of Rock and Roll.

His critics point out the lousy way he treated his buddies in the privacy of the Graceland mansion; his slavish devotion to his mamma; his affection for Cadillacs and sideburns; and his overexposure — and ultimately killing affection — for Fudgcicles.

There were also the drugs, of course — alleged or otherwise.

So Elvis was 1. unable to identify who his true friends were; 2. basically shy and insecure; 3. paranoid in his last years due to fame and no doubt a dependence on mood-modifying chemicals.

We've always believed there's business and there's personal, and the end result of all that stuff sounds more like the latter.

Trying to make entertainers as good off-stage as they are on is a useless exercise. And if making the two comparisons is foolish, holding it against them because their "personal" life doesn't measure up to their "business" image is only a double-dip of the same.

As for Elvis' failure to "talk good," calling him "inarticulate" should have the same sting as saying William F. Buckley can't sing worth a hoot.

Elvis was what he was. A kid from Memphis who was different.

He dressed different, combed his hair different and sang different. People recognized it and because he had the luck, brains or guts not to change, it made him a zillionaire.

We were reading an article about comedian Eddie Murphy, who called Elvis "still his hero." We also noticed Murphy's affection for leather suits like old Elvis used to wear.

And punk singers on those music videos seems to gyrate like old Elvis did in the 50s and comb their hair like old Elvis did in the 60s. Not to mention all of those lounge singers in Las Vegas who sing and move and kiss the women at ringside like old Elvis did in the 70s.

He probably was vulgar. But he was also the best and the first.

John Dunnam

Life is full of cruel little ironies for those cold-hearted enough to recognize and appreciate them. They're everywhere, you just have to look.

I'm reminded of the lady here whose car was hit by an uninsured driver shortly before the mandatory liability insurance law went into effect. She was sponging rides everywhere while still making payments on her heavily damaged car, and trying to save enough to get it fixed. The guy who ran the stop sign to hit her was cruising around town showing off the new car he had to buy after the unfortunate incident with the woman driver.

I tried to console the lady. I explained that the payments on the man's new car were bound to be higher than hers.

I'd never make it as a counselor. I don't know why I even bother.

Do you sometimes feel that life comes down unnecessarily hard on you while others practically get away with murder? Don't expect any sympathy from Doyle Edward Skillern of Houston. He was sentenced to death for the 1974 slaying of a DPS trooper. He didn't actually pull the trigger, but was waiting in the car for his partner who says he did. His partner is scheduled to be parolled in June. Mr. Skillern is scheduled to be electrocuted this Wednesday.

Mothers, instruct your children to choose their friends and lawyers very carefully.

If the law is too lenient on some wrongdoers and too hard on others, see if you can tell in which group Edward Bradford belongs. Last Wednesday he was sentenced to 25 years in prison for the crime of diverting $150 worth of electricity from a Dallas Power & Light Co. pole to his home.

The irony here is that Eddie is also 25 years old.

Lest you think the world is totally warped, I should point out that no one intended for Eddie to get such a stiff sentence. It seems that this conviction rendered him an "habitual criminal" and 25 years was the least he could get. His lawyer is appealing.

Now on to something less shocking.

I see where a judge has decreed that farm workers are also entitled to unemployment benefits. That sounds fair, but determining who is eligible and who is somebody's no good, cheating brother-in-law is going to be like trying to nail down water.

In another story, I see where a farm group is organizing an attack on Washington. Don't worry, it is peaceful. The group says the elimination of a farm bill would force up to one-half of the nation's farmers to quit. The irony here is, if the farmers quit, do we have to pay them unemployment? And if so, who will pay their ex-hands unemployment?

I might also ask, what are we going to eat? At what price?

The farm group spokesman was quoted as saying, "All we want is the opportunity to make a minimum wage like the rest of the people enjoy." The story about the farm workers said the average weekly salary for a farm worker is $58. Will the farmers settle for this? That would be enough to change the oil on one of those big rigs every year, but wouldn't leave much for unemployment benefits for their employees.

I'd like to leave this problem to the hired help we elected for the job, but I fear their perspective of financial problems is as dim as my own.

I read where Gib Lewis of our own legislature bought a canopy bed with some of our money for the housing we furnish him. He has to sleep too, but over $3000 for a bed? The irony here is that is more than the average farm worker makes in a year, if one is to believe everything he reads in the paper. (I don't even believe everything I write in the paper.)

I suppose the moral of this column is: Life isn't fair, but try to cope anyway, because if you break the rules, you may get burned. Ask Eddie Bradford or Doyle Skillern. Unless he is granted another stay, you'll have to ask Doyle by Wednesday.

"I hope you're hungry — it would take six bowls of this to equal one bowl of your old favorite."

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
January 6

The future of Snyder's fledgling industry — King's Highway Mobile Industries — has been officially placed on hold by its Dallas-based owners First Tarent Corp., it was reported Sunday.

The decision to move the King's Highway "Class A" motor home manufacturing facility from Snyder back to Southern Californian was confirmed Friday by a company spokesman.

Purchase of the Owens Department Store building on College Ave. was revealed Sunday by Snyder Publishing Co. Inc.

The new facility will house the operations of the Snyder Daily News and its affiliated offset press facility.

MONDAY
January 7

The operation of the local Montgomery Ward catalogue store will change effective Feb. 28 — a switch that will see the closing of the outlet location at 1923 25th St.

It was reported Monday that catalogue orders for Montgomery Wards will still be honored locally, however.

A $66,950 cost estimate was approved as the low bid Monday for renovation to the Towle Park swimming pool.

The bid was awarded by Scurry County commissioners to Fielder Pools Inc. of San Angelo.

The Scurry County grand jury returned four felony indictments against four defendants during their regular January session Monday.

City council members Monday agreed to further pursue options regarding an Interstate 20 sign leased by the city which advertises Snyder and U.S. Hwy. 180 as a route to Carlsbad Caverns.

This reversed a decision made at the December council meeting, when they opted to discontinue a lease agreement with Big Country Bulletin, Inc. of Abilene — which maintains the sign just west of Sweetwater for a monthly lease amount of $165.

Snyder gained a new city attorney Monday with the appointment of Mike Line, a Scurry County native who returned to practice law here six years ago.

He will accept the post effective Feb. 1 and during January will continue to serve as a temporary municipal judge for the city.

TUESDAY
January 8

Services were conducted Tuesday for Willie Bigham — a key city staffer in charge of operations for the water distribution system, water treatment plant and sewage treatment plant.

He died Sunday morning in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital after a lengthy illness. He was 57.

The first county blood drive effort for 1985 Tuesday was called a success as 142 individuals registered to give with 122 blood units eventually drawn.

WEDNESDAY
January 9

The search for an adult and juvenile probation officer here will likely continue for at least two more weeks, according to District Judge Gene Dulaney.

It was reported Wednesday that he had received 10 applications for the position to date.

THURSDAY
January 10

The rate charged Snyder for water during 1985 by the Colorado River Municipal Water District will increase only slightly — a rate held down in part by action taken Thursday morning by the CRMWD board.

Directors applied $925,000 of non-municipal revenues in order to hold water rates at approximately 1984 levels. The Snyder rate will be 44.75 cents per thousand gallons of water, an increase of .08 of a cent.

Thursday was "Tony Degrate Day" in Snyder — activities which ended with a recognition banquet at the Snyder Country Club.

In addition to Degrate — this year's Lombardi Award winner and a 1981 graduate of SHS — University of Texas Football Coach Fred Akers was the special guest.

FRIDAY
January 11

Recent state sales tax returns indicate Snyder is behind for the first monthly payment of the new 12-month period, it was reported Friday.

The first payment to Snyder in 1984 equaled some $43,000, while this year's payment lagged behind this amount some $6,000 — creating a difference of minus 14.1 percent.

Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Estrogen and menstruation.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 51. At 42, I had a miscarriage and my doctor put me on birth-control pills. I stopped them at 50, and a month later I started having hot flashes (which weren't bad), a very dry vagina, sleepless nights and numbness in my fingers. My doctor put me on Premarin, which I take for 21 days each month. During the seven days I'm off Premarin, I have cramps, but I have not had a period since I stopped taking the Pill at 50.

My doctor said I may have gone through the menopause while I was on birth-control pills and that the Pill was causing me to have a period. Does Premarin usually cause women to have periods?

I have heard many women talk about how bad they felt during menopause, and it makes me wonder if I was lucky enough to have gone through it without any problems.

DEAR READER — Oral contraceptives provide the same hormones that the ovaries produce during the normal cycle. This inhibits ovulation and the ovaries' normal hormone functions. The ovaries literally rest while the hormones in the Pill do the job, so there is no ovulation. When a woman is off birth-control pills, she menstruates because she is no longer taking estrogen during those days. The hormones do not cause menstruation. Rather, when you stop them or switch from estrogen to progestins, the lining of the uterus — developed under the influence of estrogen — is shed, causing menstruation.

Whether there will be actual bleeding or not depends on how fully developed the lining of the uterus became under the influence of estrogen. Small doses may not have a major effect.

Many women who take birth-control pills think they are menstruating, but they are simply shedding because the estrogen is stopped. A similar situation develops when a woman ovulates but doesn't get pregnant. The decrease in hormones results in shedding or menstruation.

You will understand all of this better after reading the Health Letter, Special Report 22, Understanding the Menopause, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can pressure from a plane ride damage the ears? On my last flight, my ears kept popping and I experienced a sharp pain in my left ear.

DEAR READER — Yes. As the cabin pressure changes, it affects the eardrums. If you have good airflow to the back of the throat and from the throat to the inside of the ear, the pressure on both sides of the eardrum will be equal and you won't have a problem. Otherwise, the eardrum will be pushed in as the cabin pressure increases, as on descent, or pushed out at higher altitudes. Chewing gum, yawning and breathing with your mouth open help to prevent this by equalizing the pressure inside and outside the eardrum.

After the flight, the eustachian tube that connects the throat to the inner surface of the eardrum may remain blocked. In turn, the eardrum may not assume its normal position, which can lead to discomfort or decreased hearing.

In severe cases, fluid may accumulate inside the ear, and if you have a respiratory infection, you are apt to get an infected ear. That is why it is not wise to fly when you have a cold.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is gas and distention of the stomach area. It seems worse when I eat and get busy working. If I rest for 45 minutes to an hour after I eat, it doesn't seem to bother me.

I love fruits, such as cherries, apples and bananas, but they seen to give me the most trouble unless I eat them on an an empty stomach. I have a hiatal hernia but do not think that this causes the gas, since I eat small meals, elevate my bed and keep my weight down. I weigh 184 and am 6 feet 4.

My doctor has not been able to help me with this. I eat bran each morning and eat whole-wheat breads and a lot of high-fiber food. I thought that exercise after eating was good, but it causes a lot of gas and pain in my upper stomach area, just above my navel. I'm 51.

DEAR READER — I'm disturbed by your description of pain just above the navel that occurs after eating and is made worse by exertion. Ask your doctor to do an electrocardiogram under these conditions to evaluate your heart status. You may just have gas, but sometimes "indigestion" turns out to be caused by heart pain, which can be in the pit of the stomach.

If you just have gas, think about the foods that cause gas. Many people find that bran, roughage and fibers cause gas. Bulk helps to improve bowel function for many, but others find that the gas it causes is worse than the help it provides. Fruits certainly do cause gas in some people.

In most people, gas is caused by intolerance to food. Usually the food is not digested properly, and the undigested food is then fermented by bacteria in the colon. If one eliminates gas easily, it may not build up and cause distention. In that case, gas might not be a big problem. However, in some people, the colon goes into a spasm, trapping the gas and causing the distention.

I'm sending you The Health Letter, Special Report 23, Avoiding Gas and Distention, to give you guidance on treating your diet to help solve your problem. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newpaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As you develop gaseous distention, the pressure inside your abdomen may cause your stomach to herniate through your diaphragm, since you have a hiatal hernia. In that way, the gas can affect your hiatal hernia and may contribute to some of your discomfort.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Which is the best exercise for one's overall health, swimming or jogging?

DEAR READER — There is no best exercise for everybody. The best exercise depends upon you and your goals. Swimming is great for people who have joint problems; I think it helps to prevent joint injury for those people. Because the water supports body, these people can exercise to develop their heart and lung capacity and to use calories.

However, swimming will not protect a person from osteoporosis (dissolving bones), for exactly the same reason. To build strong bones, one needs to do exercises that involve the body weight. For this purpose, jogging is far superior to swimming. Many people don't realize that as good an exercise as swimming is, it doesn't help to prevent softening bones, while jogging and other activities that subject the skeleton to the stress of body weight will.

No idea where sliver of glass came from

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky, who underwent emergency surgery in November after swallowing a sliver of glass, says she still has no idea where the piece of glass came from.

"Right now we don't have any idea," she said Thursday on NBC's "Today Show." "The main thing we're concerned with is that it doesn't happen to anyone else."

Mrs. Collins said the experience has made her aware that accidentally swallowing foreign objects is not all that uncommon.

"I have found that since I had my bout with glass that I get cards and letters and phone calls, and people have told me they've swallowed many different things," she said. "So I think it's not as uncommon as we're led to believe. I do not know where it came from, but I just urge everyone to examine their food carefully and chew slowly."

Pioneer's home vandalized

By STANLEY BAILEY
Delaware County Daily Times

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — A sense of nostalgia haunts many passersby who pause to look at the ravaged grandeur of the empty, three-story building at 129 E. 5th St.

Cracked pavement and ragged shrubbery hide the significant symbols of the house's legend: black musical notes etched in the sidewalk cement that follow a pattern to a dingy red star that marks the entrance to a now abandoned basement recording studio.

Smashed windows, a gutted interior, rusted locks on warped wooden doors and a ragged, rusted iron fire escape are found at the house that once belonged to the man who was considered by many as the "Father of Rock 'n' Roll."

The house is a shameful memory to Chester's famous resident, Bill Haley Jr.

"It's a shame what they did to the house," said an elderly woman passing by. "They went in there and tore out the copper pipes, broke all the windows and smashed walls," she said of the vandals who have stripped the property.

The edifice, located in a neighborhood with streets now lined with abandoned homes, was the headquarters for Haley and the Comets, who rocketed into the rock 'n' roll scene with their 1954 recording of "Rock Around the Clock."

The property was purchased in 1956 by Haley and transformed into a combination recording studio, business office and publishing house for Haley.

The recording studio was located in the basement. The first floor was the business office, which included a switchboard and back room that handled the fan mail.

Upstairs, on the second floor, was the publishing house where original tunes were put on sheet music and where Haley also published a newsletter for fans. On the third floor was Haley's office, along with the living quarters.

William John Clifton Haley Jr. was born on July 6, 1925, in Detroit. Haley came from a musical family. His mother was a church organist and his father played the banjo.

Both parents encouraged Bill to learn the guitar. At 15, Bill left home to travel with a group called the "Down Homers" and later found himself in Chester as musical director and head of his own band, "The Saddlemen," for the now defunct WQIQ radio station.

In 1952, Haley changed the name of the band to The Comets and recorded a couple of moderate hits: "Dance with the Dolly" and "Patty Cake."

During this time, he also recorded a song, "Rock-a-Beaten' Boogie," that intrigued Alan Freed, the controversial disc jockey for WJW radio in Cleveland. From the lyrics to the song — "Rock, rock, rock everybody, roll, roll, roll everybody," Freed coined the phrase "rock 'n' roll."

Haley had always said that he developed rock 'n' roll, while Freed only named it and exploited it.

What made Haley a pioneer on the rock 'n' roll scene was that his band, the Saddlemen, was originally a country band, but later became what had to be the first white instrumental rhythm and blues band.

Haley, with his trademark of a spit curl that always tumbled over his forehead, was probably the first white face on what was still, in 1954, a basically black rock 'n' roll scene.

When Haley's 1955 hit, "Rock Around the Clock," (the song was recorded in 1954 but did not become popular until a year later) turned up as the theme song for the film "The Blackboard Jungle" starring Glenn Ford and the new-to-Hollywood Sidney Poitier, Haley soared to fame.

Haley, basically a down-home person, had opened a Pandora's box of teen-age emotions. Haley found himself always apologizing for the social monster he had created.

But musically, Haley was proud. Proud that, as far back as 1951, with songs like "Crazy Mama," he had combined rhythm and blues, country and western and pop in what has become one of the basic rock 'n' roll sounds.

But just as quickly as Haley's comet exploded, it fizzled and would only smolder again briefly in the rock 'n' roll revival period of the late '60s and early '70s. Haley made a 1974 rerecording of "Rock Around the Clock."

Haley sold the dwelling in 1962, and left Chester in the wake of a dispute with the IRS concerning unpaid taxes.

Records show Avgitas Nazeredis of Upper Darby purchased the house on Oct. 11, 1962, and still owns it. He could not be reached for comment.

The Comets disbanded and Haley went into seclusion.

Bill Haley died in Harlingen, Texas, in 1981, but he left behind the roots of rock 'n' roll and very fond memories from the people of Chester.

Pearl Bailey chairwoman

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Entertainer Pearl Bailey is taking her role as Christmas Seals chairwoman seriously, using the 21st anniversary of the Surgeon General's report that first warned of the dangers of smoking to call for a smokeless society by 1986.

The present surgeon general, Dr. C. Everett Koop, "has challenged all of us in the health care fields to make ours a smoke-free society by the year 2000," Dr. William Figueroa, a board member of the American Lung Association of Pennsylvania, said at a news conference on Thursday.

Prison economic mainstay for Attica, N.Y.

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Life in this village on the pastoral flatlands to the lee of Lake Erie proceeds in a gentle seasonal rhythm, much as it does in any rural American town.

In the Agway store, where the air is redolent with the spicy sweetness of molasseslaced grain, a grey cat darts furtively among burlap sacks to avoid the boots of farmers picking up winter stocks of feed.

Along Main Street, a mother tows a toddler and a sack of groceries in a wooden red wagon, past gingerbread-trimmed Victorian homes and gnarled, spreading maples.

A few blocks away, the scene is starkly different. Within a clay-gray wall 60 feet high and as deep underground in places is another community nearly as large as the village outside. It has a gate of heavy scrolled steel and red-tile turreted towers like those of a medieval castle.

In contrast to the overwhelmingly white, rural folks who inhabit the village, the nearly 2,000 residents of the 53-acre Attica State Correctional Facility are mostly black, mostly urban. Many are violent criminals.

While other towns vigorously fight proposals to build such a place nearby, fearing for the safety of their children and the character of their community, this village, whose name is inevitably linked to the nation's bloodiest prison riot 13 years ago, welcomed plans for the new 500-cell prison that's going up next to the 50-year-old facility.

"It's a shot in the arm for the economy," says Dale Slocum, the part-time mayor. "This town sat dormant for a while; now it seems to be growing."

Slocum, the son of a retired guard and uncle of two guards, adds, "A Rochester outfit wants to put in a housing complex; and there's a new 30-unit motel (Attica's first) going up across from the Super Duper."

The payroll of nearly 1,000 employees at the prison helps village businesses, says Slocum. "The prison also buys water from the village, and the state's helping to build a new sewage plant."

Inside the Yester Year co-op, with its crates of apples and potatoes and barrels of Granola and brown rice, Sally June smoothes her white apron and leans against the rough wood counter. "People basically forget it's there," she says, referring to the prison. "It's a place of employment, that's all."

"I grew up outside Rochester, and I'd much rather raise my kids here," says her coworker, Judy Wood. "There's less crime and drugs here — it's all inside that wall." Her husband works in the prison metal shop.

"It's a friendly town — I guess all rural towns are," says Mrs. Wood. "Maybe there's more prejudice, although less so than at the time of the riot. Still, I don't think a black family would feel comfortable living here."

The women vividly recall the 1971 riot, which ended with 43 lives lost, including 11 prison employees, after state police armed with tear gas and bullets ended a four-day inmate takeover in D Yard.

Do people worry that another riot could erupt?

"People don't admit it, but I think it's in the backs of their minds," says Mrs. June.

A commission cited overcrowding as a major problem leading to the uprising. Today, officials say, there are about 2,100 inmates at Attica — 1,500 of them black or Hispanic. The maximum capacity, says counselor Dave Mangus, is 2,211, "if every bed is used, including the infirmary."

"It's dangerous work, you can't get around that," says William McAnulty, Attica's deputy superintendent for programs. While once rare, assaults on guards — who are unarmed unless they choose to carry a baton — now average eight to 10 a year. "But the pay is good — a guard can make $30,000 to $40,000 a year with overtime. More young people are getting into it."

At the junior-senior high school, a low, modern building near the prison work farm, Assistant Principal Ernest Lusky says at least a third of the students have parents working at the prison.

"We find they come from very traditional homes, very conservative, regimental," he says. "Consequently, we have very few disciplinary problems. These kids really value their education."

There has been only one escape from behind the prison wall, but numerous trustees — non-violent criminals — have walked away from the prison farm over the years.

"I remember only one who was apprehended in the village," says Dan Norcross, village police chief in a department of four full-time and five part-time officers. "He was hiding in a boxcar on the railroad siding. They don't usually stay around town, with all the guards living here."

Norcross also noted that the number of drunk driving arrests is on the increase, partly because of an increasing number of younger prison guards.

"There's more drinking per capita here than anywhere in the United States," asserts Francis Paul Patti, who, at age 59, has lived in town for 31 years. "The guards, when they get off work, they like to socialize, and the taverns downtown is where they do it. Like any small town."

Pausing from his work on the loading dock at the Agway, Patti leans on a stack of salt licks and wraps his calloused hands around a coffee mug. "My son was a police officer in the village, but when you're married and have two kids, $13,000 doesn't go far. Now he's a guard, makes over $20,000 plus benefits. But I told him he was crazy to go inside the wall."

"The town's leery of the young guards," says Stan Maslowski, hustling beers at Ye Olde Stage House, down the street from the prison. "But look, working inside the wall, the tension builds up. They come in here to let off steam. As far as I'm concerned, these guys can do no wrong."

The Stage House is a Wild West-style saloon with a splintered front porch, cracked, smeared window panes, a backroom pool table obscured by smoky haze. Over the crowded bar a sign in fluorescent paint reads: "Welcome to Oblivion" — a reference to a magazine article relating how the guards get off work and "drink themselves into oblivion."

Maslowski, the proprietor, was a guard for five years — until he was carried out, unconscious and bleeding, on May 13, 1977. He bears a long scar down one hollow cheek from the makeshift blade of one of the inmates who jumped him. But he wants to go back inside, he says.

"I love it," he says. "There's a sense of comradeship. It gets in your blood. I'd go back tomorrow if they'd take me."

Woman Fears Every Lump Is the First Sign of Cancer

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Cancer, cancer, cancer! Every time I feel a lump, a bump or something that seems to have appeared out of the blue, I go running to the doctor to find out if it's cancer. Then I feel like a fool when I'm told it's a normal part of my anatomy. Am I crazy?

I'm 25 years old and in good physical condition. I don't smoke, don't take birth control pills, and I drink only on occasion.

Maybe I wouldn't be so paranoid if somebody told me I was not a "high-risk" candidate for cancer.

Abby, what are the odds of someone like me developing cancer at my age? When should I go to the doctor? How long should I wait after noticing a lump, a bump, etc.?

The American Cancer Society stresses the importance of early cancer detection. Yet how can a person distinguish between possible early cancer and something that's not serious without looking like a hypochondriac? Please ease my mind.

CANCERPHOBIC

DEAR CANCERPHOBIC: As a 25-year-old woman, you have a 98 percent chance of NOT developing cancer in the next 10 years. (The risk is slightly higher in black women.)

Cancers of the lung, head and neck are strongly linked to smoking, so since you don't smoke, you are less likely to develop cancer. And keeping your alcohol consumption low reduces your risk of liver and esophageal cancer.

Don't worry about appearing to be a hypochondriac. Early detection of cancer saves many lives and may reduce the extent of treatment needed. For women, regular breast self-examination is essential. It's a simple technique you can learn from your doctor or your local American Cancer Society.

For a free leaflet, "Cancer-Related Checkups," which also lists cancer's "Seven Warning Signals," write to your local office of the American Cancer Society. It contains the answers to your questions, is easy to understand and is free.

DEAR ABBY: A while back you had something in your column about dogs that was framed and hanging in a hotel lobby. The gist of it was that dogs were more welcome than people.

Can you find it? I work in a hotel, and it would come in handy here.

NIGHT MAN

DEAR NIGHT MAN: Is this it?

DEAR ABBY: When I travel, I like to take my dog with me, which presents a problem because not all hotels allow dogs.

I recently stopped at a hotel where I was made welcome with my pet, and I saw this framed "notice" hanging in the lobby. It tickled me, and if it tickles you, maybe you'll run it in your column:

"Dogs are welcome in this hotel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

DOG LOVER

• • •

DEAR ABBY: You've heard from the Jacks and the Chucks, and then you said, "Now let's hear from the Johns."

Haven't you heard? Johnny can't read. Johnny can't write. Johnny can't seem to do anything.

Maybe that's why they say, "Let George do it."

Academy aims at cuisine

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis may bill itself as a barbecue capital, but Joseph and Elaine Carey want to make it known, as well, for such goodies as roast duckling with raspberry sauce and kiwi mousse in canteloupe shells.

The Careys run the the Memphis Culinary Academy, a small school aimed at producing professional providers of haute cuisine.

"We took a little bit of a chance in coming here and opening the school, but we've been very well received," Carey said in an interview.

He and his wife opened the school last July after leaving San Francisco, where he had worked at various restaurants since 1968.

The Memphis Culinary Academy, or the La Maison Meridien as it is also called, graduated its first five students in September.

Carey, who uses the title executive chef, offers a 10-week course costing $2,900 for students wanting to cook in classy restaurants. He says his students may also want to open catering services or get into restaurant management.

And for amateur cooks who simply want to sharpen their skills, the school offers a variety of shorter, evening courses costing $80 to $300.

Mrs. Carey is a pastry specialist, and Carey said he had been a lead chef for several well-known restaurants in California.

Carey said he planned to expand his course for professional cooks to 40 weeks in the next two years, hoping to one day have a school that could be compared in the quality of its students with the much bigger Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., and the California Culinary Academy in San Francisco.

"They have hundreds of students, but they began small too," he said.

Carey said he had moved to Memphis because the region did not have any established cooking schools.

"We felt if we went to virgin territory the school would establish itself much more quickly," he said.

Also, Mrs. Carey grew up in Memphis, and Carey was born in New Orleans, 400 miles to the south.

The school is headquartered in the 60-year-old, white-columned house which is also the Careys' home in mid-town Memphis.

Carey said his class for professional cooks was limited to 10 students, who would get 350 hours of instruction in the 10-week course, including 40 hours of pastry work.

Carey said the course was broken down into five weeks of technical training and five weeks of "art."

"We try to teach techniques rather than individual recipes or rote learning," he said.

Carey said four of the students in his first class had found jobs right away and the fifth wasn't looking for one.

The training, he said, prepares a student to work as an assistant chef in a good restaurant.

Not much time remains to save wilderness

BY MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

Almost to a man, biologists, ecologists and naturalists in the West and East predict catastrophe if the world's wild habitats are not better protected. They differ only on degree.

Typical is George Schaller, director of the New York Zoological Society's Animal Research and Conservation Center, who edges on despair at the prospect of humans crowding out wild animals forever.

And, like others, he warns that more than animals are in danger: Such calamities as African famine result largely from degraded land and a buffeting of ecological systems.

In the highlands of Ethiopia, where a catastrophic famine is killing thousands of people, trees that covered 30 percent of the area in 1935 cover only three percent today. Officials concede that 500,000 acres of forest are cut away each year in Ethiopia and 150,000 acres of land are lost to erosion.

Schaller's camp presses for large preserves set aside from farmers, loggers, poachers and developers to allow nature to restore a balance man has upset. The problem is money.

Schaller argues that corporations and industrialized nations which take resources from the Third World have a vital interest in protecting environments. If not, the alternatives will be vastly more expensive.

Ian Parker, a specialist in Kenya, maintains:

"You've got to find out what local people want from the animals and the land and find a way to meet all needs in a balanced way. Otherwise, they will never protect the wildlife."

The first goal, most agree, is to fix priorities and then persuade authorities to see the ultimate threats.

"When African leaders meet, they talk about what is important to them: food production, national debt," says Don Allan of the World Wildlife Fund. "But they don't make the link between these problems and conservation."

Habitat destruction by government and entrepreneurs is serious in North America and Europe, scientists say. But it is most acute in areas that still have a lot to develop — and a lot to lose: the Amazon, Southeast Asia, Africa, islands scattered around the globe.

Not long before her death, Indira Gandhi criticized what she called short-sighted national pride — or greed — which sacrificed conservation for development.

Burgeoning human populations need food and land to grow it on. Domestic stock takes precedence over wildlife, despite the ecological damage it causes. Herds are often kept as wealth, not as food.

Preserves alone are not enough, many argue. Huge bordering areas must also be protected since animals range widely when food and water grow scarce.

"We did not know enough about migration patterns when preserves were first set up," says Richard Faust, director of the Frankfurt Zoological Society. "The ecosystems are bigger than we thought."

Enforcement requires more than international accords and national legislation.

At one extreme, Nepal's King Birendra protects his country's remaining 400 rhinoceroses with 500 soldiers and 200 rangers.

But in Zaire, salaries were not paid to the wardens charged with protecting the world's last northern white rhinos. A dozen were poached last year, leaving a total of 12 to 15, Faust says.

Rigorous control in India has allowed the tiger population to double to 4,000. But an official study notes adults are indifferent to wildlife, and those living near the preserves are often hostile. It urged energetic campaigns to sensitize school children.

Experts say education campaigns are vital not only for people living near wild habitats but also for urban consumers of animal and plant products.

Tom Milliken, director in Japan of the monitoring agency, TRAFFIC, says he stopped a woman on a Tokyo street and asked if she knew her leopard coat was made from a seriously endangered species.

"Oh yes, she told me," he says, "and she said she was treating it very carefully."

Much of the ivory hacked from elephants left to rot ends up in Japan as carved personal seals. Milliken hopes the Japanese can be persuaded that rubber stamps, if less traditional, serve the purpose.

Across Asia, traditional doctors are being persuaded to prescribe deer antler velvet, rather than rhino horn, to lower fevers.

TRAFFIC monitors the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, signed by 87 countries. Most countries attempt to control illegal trade, but few have enough trained agents for strict enforcement.

Japan, for example, has 100 ports of entry, and few customs officers are specialists in wildlife. U.S. customs agents, worried also about drug traffic, are often short-handed.

A large array of conservation groups lobbies for new laws and works in threatened areas. The largest is the World Wildlife Fund, headquartered in Switzerland with 24 national affiliates, which has spent $85 million in 130 countries over the last 22 years.

New approaches to conserve wildlife produce varying results.

The Asian musk deer provides an essence used in medicines and perfumes. Poaching endangers not only the deer but also giant pandas who stumble into the snares. The Chinese now farm the deer, removing the musk without killing the animal, but poaching continues.

Natural elephant deaths — or controlled culling — could supply a large ivory market, lowering the return for poachers and smugglers, naturalists argue.

Wildlife ranching has had some success in South Africa where ranchers cull from wild herds.

Some species are being reintroduced into the wild. The ungainly Pere David's deer, named for the French priestzoologist who studied it in China, has long been extinct in the wild. But a herd has been bred at Woburn Abbey in Britain, since the 1920s, and deer are being brought back to China.

Zoos are improving breeding methods to limit the need for capturing animals from the wild.

Optimists point to some encouraging progress. New parks are open in Latin America, Asia and Africa. Customs seizures are increasing.

Prince Philip of Britain, WWF president, noted in a recent published interview that population growth and demand on resources made conservation work difficult. He sums it up:

"There are some very significant successes...But you are always one hop ahead of the undertaker."

Children visit Princess Margaret

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II, was visited by her children in London's Brompton hospital for the first time since weekend surgery, a hospital bulletin said.

Viscount Linley, 23, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 20, spent nearly an hour at their mother's bedside on Thursday, the bulletin said.

The 54-year-old princess, who has been given a clean bill of health since tissue from her left lung was removed on Saturday, had until Thursday requested that she should have no visitors, hospital officials said.

The royal children made no comment to reporters when they left the hospital.

Coyotes creating many problems

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Their natural environment has gradually diminished, but coyotes continue to prowl across east-central Illinois — and their population is apparently increasing.

The dog-like creatures are clever, adaptable and hungry — characteristics that can spell nighttime trouble for farmers.

According to Glen Sanderson, head of the Illinois Natural History Survey's wildlife division, coyotes prey on flocks of sheep or young pigs in areas where herds roam in the pasture.

Hungry coyotes usually work in pairs. They single out stragglers and devour the animals where they fall.

George Hubert, an Illinois Department of Conservation wild mammal specialist, said coyote populations were increasing throughout Illinois, Indiana and Missouri for reasons conservationists didn't completely understand.

Experts speculate that the increase may be related to the corresponding decline in the number of red foxes, he said. "They compete for the same environment. And coyotes are pretty adjustable animals."

Coyotes, foxes and dogs all belong to the same family. Coyotes and dogs belong to the same genus, so they can successfully interbreed, Hubert said.

"We're seeing some hybridization, but not often," he said. The hybrids are known as coydogs.

Piatt County Animal Control officer Sonny Dodd said he'd also spotted a few coydogs as he had investigated complaints in the country, where woodlands are abundant.

"They frequently return to the wild," Dodd said.

John Reed, a cash grain farmer who also raises sheep, solved his coyote problem four years ago by calling in a trapper recommended by the Department of Conservation. The trapper quickly caught three coyotes on Reed's farm south of Mansfield.

"I haven't had any problems since then," Reed said. "Part of the reason is because a neighbor to the north bulldozed a timber area that adjoins my fields."

He said coyotes hung around farms where there were sheep because animals were "dumb, easy prey."

But the proliferation of coyotes may be related to a different prey, he said.

"I think the reason populations are increasing is because coyotes follow deer, and as the deer population increases, so does the coyote population," Reed said.

INSECTICIDES

During the past 20 years, fruit growers and farmers have more than doubled their use of insecticides and have increasingly suffered from aplastic anemia and leukemia. Although no proof of cause and effect, LANCET suggests that many of these bone marrow disorders result from exposure to insecticide mist or fog. Children, it seems, are more susceptible than adults, and insecticide inhalation is more dangerous for them than skin contact. Exposure to insecticide mist or fog for only a few hours can produce symptoms weeks later.
