Day One: Closing in

U.S., allies push to Kuwait City's gates

■ Forces advance faster than expected, taking nearly 10,000 prisoners; allied casualties 'extremely light.'

N.Y. Times News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Allied troops drove into Iraqi-occupied Kuwait on Sunday, reaching the outskirts of Kuwait City before nightfall, according to senior officers. To the west, powerful armored columns and a huge fleet of helicopters stormed into Iraq, heading northeast toward Basra in an effort to isolate Iraq's elite Republican Guards.

Schwarzkopf

It was the biggest American-led assault since World War II, and it touched off one of the largest battles in decades, spread across a front 300 miles wide, involving more than a million combatants and support troops.

Allied forces advanced faster than expected, meeting only scattered resistance from the Iraqis, surprising President Bush, among others. His spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, described Bush as "quite gratified."

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the American commander, said more than 5,500 Iraqi prisoners had been taken in the first 10 hours of the long-awaited ground offensive and reported that onrushing allied columns could see "many hundreds more" of enemy soldiers waving white surrender flags. After 22 hours, the total number of prisoners was reportedly nearing 10,000.

Iraq's Republican Guard gave its first sign of life early today. About 80 tanks from the elite force, rousted from their positions by attacks deep inside Iraq, rumbled south toward advancing coalition forces, pilots flying over the battlefield said.

Assault fleet sweeps deep into Iraq

N.Y. Times News Service

IN IRAQ — More than 2,000 American air assault troops plunged more than 50 miles into Iraq at first light on Sunday in the largest helicopter-borne operation in military history.

The attack by the 101st Airborne Division, north of Iraq's troop concentrations, established what is essentially a giant, fortified, gas station to fuel attack and troop-carrying helicopters for assaults into the strategic Euphrates River valley to cut the main highway between Baghdad and Basra.

"We own this piece of desert," grinned 1st Lt. Phil Johnson, a Ranger, as his Huey helicopter settled into the landing zone in a cloud of sand dust.

By nightfall, a supporting ground column of more than 700 trucks had reached Cobra Base, bringing the number of troops here to 4,000. As American planners accelerated their operations ahead of schedule because of crumbling Iraqi resistance, another brigade from the 101st was to fly into Cobra Base on Sunday night.

French light armor attacking from the ground on the 101st's left flank was moving faster than anticipated, ranking officers said, while on the right flank the American 24th Mechanized Infantry Division and the VII Armored Corps, equipped with heavy M-1A1 tanks jumped off their invasion north of the border on Sunday afternoon, nearly a day ahead of schedule.

News flash: Iraq 'winning'

N.Y. Times News Service

AMMAN, Jordan — News flash: Iraq is winning the ground battle, destroying hundreds of allied tanks, inflicting heavy casualties upon American, British and French forces and repulsing wave after wave of coalition assault troops.

That, at least, is the message being broadcast over Radio Baghdad, the official mouthpiece of the Iraqi government.

The assessment is almost precisely the opposite of the reports coming out of allied command headquarters in Riyadh, where U.S. Army Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf described Iraqi resistance as "light," during an allied blitz into Kuwait combining forces and firepower from land, sea and air.

But Radio Baghdad, now named "Mother of Battles" radio, continued Sunday to assure the Iraqi people that their army is prevailing.

Between patriotic songs, it broadcast a grim message for the U.S.-led allies — "by God we will send you back to your kinsfolk as lifeless corpses. Your death

Saddam or Kuwait?

United Nations sanction No. 660 calls for the immediate withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait. As the war has unfolded, many U.S. strategists and citizens have concluded that nothing short of removing Saddam Hussein will resolve the current Middle East crisis.

Do you think the allied war effort should make ousting Saddam its ultimate goal? Or is the liberation of Kuwait enough?

Early reports from war front please Bush, administration

WASHINGTON (NYT) — With a furious ground and air battle in its early stages, President Bush almost dropped out of sight Sunday. The commander in chief, who gave the order to launch the offensive, made it clear that the rest was up to his generals.

Bush made only one brief appearance, attending a nearby church service where the gathering joined in prayers for U.S. and allied troops and for the Iraqi people.

Later, the president was said by aides to be in good spirits following early reports from the war front.

Bush and First Lady Barbara Bush traveled in their bulletproof limousine the two blocks to St. Johns Episcopal Church for the solemn 35-minute service.

As the president arrived, a small group of anti-war protestors met him, beating a drum, whose unceasing beat has become the hallmark of demonstrations against the Persian Gulf war.

One woman yelled "Stop the War," and several people were arrested by police.

As clock ticked past noon, another countdown began

■ Invasion hour had been selected two weeks earlier by Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf.

By Christopher Connell

Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — As the clock ticked down toward noon — high noon — Saturday, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev made one final appeal by telephone to President Bush at Camp David. Gorbachev wanted 48 more hours for Saddam Hussein to get out of Kuwait.

Bush had something else in mind.

Indeed, by then Bush already had begun making his own calls to other allied leaders, setting into motion the countdown toward another, secret deadline: 8 o'clock EST Saturday night.

That was the hour selected almost two weeks earlier by Bush's field commander, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, to launch the counter-invasion to drive the Iraqi army back over its own border.

After 5½ weeks of unrelenting aerial warfare against the world's fourth largest army, the time had come for ground forces to finish the job.

Bush did not tell Gorbachev that. He did not reveal that the ground war would start that night. He told the Soviet leader the coalition was "firm and united" behind the ultimatum.

The decision had been made. The only question was whether — as military people put it — the American troops and the allies were "good to go."

They were, and they did.

Bush, in a flurry of phone calls he made from Camp David, was more forth-

War update

■ More than 300 helicopters blasted deep into Iraq. Officers called it the largest helicopter assault in military history. It was aimed at cutting Saddam Hussein's supply lines.

■ The attack on Sunday marked the first time the army has put into practice its new doctrine that focuses on destroying enemy troops rather than taking or holding territory.

■ The huge Desert Storm offensive extended along a 300-mile front, at times under pounding rain and through greasy black smoke from 200 oilfield fires. It also swept up into southern Iraq in the largest American-led invasion since World War II.

■ By day's end, U.S. paratroopers were reported holding outer edges of Kuwait City. Initial reports of the conquest of Kuwait City were wrong, sources said.

■ A U.S. military official cautioned that despite the early reports of success, more than a week of tough combat — including street-to-street fighting for Kuwait City — may lay ahead.

■ So far, coalition casualties were "extremely light," said the U.S. command chief. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said 5,500 Iraqi POWs were taken.

■ French forces surged 30 miles into Iraq, destroying significant Iraqi military equipment and taking 1,000 prisoners, the French military commander said Sunday.

■ The Iraqi military reported attacks on many of its positions but said the offensive was being contained. "The enemy is still wallowing in his blood," said a military communique about 10 hours after the start.

■ The ground assault promised to be the biggest land battle since Vietnam.

LOS ANGELES — Crew-cut comedian George Gobel, whose deadpan humor and guitar playing earned him an Emmy and a spot on "Hollywood Squares," died Sunday. He was 71. He died at Encino Hospital of complications after bypass surgery to the major artery in his left leg, said Sam Honigberg, a longtime friend.

PHILADELPHIA — A high-rise inferno that burned for almost 19 hours was brought under control Sunday after killing three firefighters and gutting nine floors of a 38-story skyscraper across from City Hall. The 12-alarm blaze raged from 8:30 p.m. Saturday until 3 p.m., when it reached a floor with automatic sprinkers and firefighters were able to direct a stream of water into windows, Fire Commissioner Roger M. Ulshafer said.

Get set for cold winds

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for cloudy skies, with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-40s. Winds will be from the northeast at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight will be partly cloudy, with a low in the upper 20s.

Tuesday is expected to remain partly cloudy, with a high in the low 50s.

Sunday's high was 59, compared to the date's record of 84 set in 1956. Sunday's low was 32. The record low for today's date is 11 degrees, set in 1960.

STATE

Mostly clear and sunny skies swept across Texas Sunday as a cold front moved into North and South Texas from the west.

Statewide temperatures ranged from the 70s in the far west region to 40s in the Panhandle.

In West Texas, mostly sunny skies were reported in the Panhandle and south plains as clouds moved elsewhere in the region.

The cold front eased its way through the Concho Valley and into the Dallas area and South Texas by late Sunday.

Low clouds prevailed in South Texas with afternoon readings ranging from upper 50s in Central Texas to the 70s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Snow fell Sunday throughout the Midwest, dumping up to a foot on northern Minnesota.

A storm producing heavy snow moved eastward and out of the upper Mississippi Valley. The storm left up to a foot of snow at Little Falls, Minn., and 9 inches at Cumberland, Wis.

Snow showers continued into Sunday afternoon over much of Michigan, southwest Missouri, northern and central Oklahoma, northeast Colorado, southeast Wyoming, eastern Montana and much of Nebraska and the Dakotas.

Some people in southeast Oklahoma were surprised by the snow Sunday. Forecasts had predicted only a chance of light snow.

PUSH: Allied leaders warn of tough days ahead

(From 1A)

"They're finally flushing," said Lt. Col. Steve Turner, an F-15E fighter-bomber squadron commander. "They've got to do something — either that, or get killed in their holes."

The general described allied casualties as "extremely light, in fact, remarkable light," and American officers said that fewer than 20 United States servicemen, mostly Marines, had been confirmed killed in the initial fighting. Infantry and armored forces from the United States, western Europe, and Arab countries were "moving north at great speed," Schwarzkopf said at an upbeat 10-minute briefing in Riyadh, the Saudi capital.

"So far, we're delighted with the progress of the campaign," he said, and some of his subordinates, including divisional commanders in the field, reported that Iraqi resistance was crumbling quickly in many areas.

But allied officers and political leaders warned that tougher days may lie ahead. The British defense minister, Tom King, said the first Iraqi defenses were manned by the least capable troops, "the ones with the most dubious morale." Taking on the guards and house-to-house combat in Kuwait City, if it develops, "may be different matters, so euphoria is unwise," an American colonel cautioned.

An Iraqi military communique, read on the Baghdad radio, confirmed that the country's army was under heavy assault. But it said that "the enemy attack has failed utterly, and the scoundrels of aggressors are crying for help and swimming in their own blood." It added: "Victory is sweet."

President Saddam Hussein also broadcast on the Baghdad radio, telling his troops at the front to "fight them and show them no mercy." His government claimed to have inflicted heavy casualties on the allies.

News blackouts were ordered by most coalition governments shortly after the attack, and the plan included numerous tactical feints and other devices designed to fool Saddam and his top generals, but its general outlines were clear enough.

"I can't fathom the size of this operation," said Lt. Col. Randy Bigum, an Air Force F-15C pilot who flew missions in support of the armored columns' thrust northward. "I can't grasp it. It's enormous."

President Francois Mitterrand of France said in a television interview that Foreign Legionnaires and other French troops, teamed with British Desert Rats and three American tank divisions in an armored thrust that involved more than 1,250 tanks, ate up more than 30 miles of Iraqi desert in six hours.

U.S. Marines, initial pool reports from the battlefield said, drove north along the coastal highway toward Kuwait City, accompanied by Saudi armor. Wearing chemical suits as they moved forward in a heavy rainstorm, the Marines took heavy artillery fire from Iraqi defenders and were delayed by dense mine fields, barbed wire, trenches, and other obstacles.

Two columns of the 2nd Marine Division broke through the Iraqi lines, the reports said, in two and a half hours. They reportedly met no barricades of flaming oil, few if any chemical weapons, and only one counterattack. A 2,000-man Marine task force inside Kuwait was jumped by an Iraqi armored battalion but beat off the attack with the help of their own armor and artillery and close air support from carriers and airstrips, officials reported.

Columns of the 1st Marine Division also crossed into Kuwait, other sources said, attacking from positions slightly farther to the west.

American special forces were involved, Schwarzkopf confirmed. And two of the nation's most storied outfits, the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions, also joined the battle, dropping by helicopter or parachute far behind enemy lines in Iraq or Iraqi-occupied Kuwait, according to the accounts of U.S. officers and reports from correspondents in the field.

An American general, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that by late Sunday night, Marines and others were approaching Kuwait City from the south and southwest and that airborne elements were in the city's outskirts. Kuwaiti exiles said that numerous fires had been set in the city.

Exiles accused the Iraqi occupying forces in Kuwait City of blowing up such key buildings as the Parliament, the Bayan Conference Palace, and the Saif Palace.

DROP: French light armor attacks on left flank

(From 1A)

As the early sun broke over the desolate sands, long columns of giant black Chinook helicopters, many carrying field artillery, trucks, boxes of ammunition, and aviation fuel swept over the horizon barely 40 feet above the ground. Cobra and Apache attack helicopters had been blasting the area, an ancient lake bed, for days to clear out any possible resistance.

By late Sunday morning, a small hill had sprouted radio antennas at the makeshift command post and soldiers were already beginning to dig into the sandy, rock-strewn soil with entrenching tools, and filling sandbags.

"There's not another division in the army that could have done this," exulted Col. Tom Hill, the commander of the 1st Brigade, which carried out the attack, as he stood atop the hill at midday with radio men crouched around him frantically calling out map coordinates. It was the 101st Airborne, nicknamed the Screaming Eagles, which, in World War II, parachuted behind Utah Beach to pave the way for the D-day invasion of Normandy.

"Hoo-ah, Hoo-ah," soldiers and officers shouted, in this war's expression of approval, as they tumbled off the helicopters and scrambled into position.

The first combat trial of the Army's new AirLand battle doctrine went almost like clockwork and virtually without opposition.

The doctrine calls for massive use of air power and the leap-frogging of mobile troops over enemy concentrations to attack from a position of advantage.

The helicopters that flew on operations from the base met only light, scattered resistance. By midday, roughly 15 prisoners had been taken, including an Iraqi battalion commander who was persuaded to urge other remaining troops to surrender.

"The prisoners we've gotten say 'this is Saddam's war, we don't want any part of it' " said Lt. Col. Gary Bridges whose 3rd Battalion flushed a small group of Iraqis out of a bunker.

By midday Sunday, Cobra and Apache attack helicopters were refueling for attacks further north. They drew up to the giant black nozzled rubber bladder fuel holders that had been brought here to form a field refueling station dispensing the 100,000 gallons of aviation fuel ferried in by the Chinook helicopters.

"This is a way station for future operations," said Hill. "That's why we're here. We've put in here, in the last three-plus hours, 2,000 soldiers, and 50 TOW anti-tank systems. We're starting to pump gas. It's going according to schedule. We got here. That's the first step on the road."

Briefing several journalists who accompanied the division on the assault during the final days of planning, the 101st division commander, Maj. Gen. J.H. Binford Peay III, said:

"What we hope, is we've got him by surprise. He doesn't know we're coming in."

COUNTDOWN: Bush's decision had been made

(From 1A)

coming with leaders of other countries allied with the U.S. forces in the Saudi desert and Gulf waters.

As the day wore into evening, he also called the four past American presidents and leaders of Congress to inform them that the hour for the ground war against Iraq had come.

Six-and-a-half months after Saddam's tanks overran Iraq's rich oil emirate neighbor, there would be no more delays for diplomacy.

On Friday, Bush had laid down his ultimatum: Iraq must start moving out by noon Saturday EST.

An Iraqi official had ridiculed Bush's tactic, accusing the president of rushing it out so as not to intrude on his weekend at the mountaintop retreat.

Bush knew all along that he would be returning to the White House Saturday night to announce that the ground war was under way and to ask Americans to drop whatever they were doing and to pray.

At Bush's side at Camp David's Laurel Lodge, on this sunny day that seemed more autumn than winter, was Secretary of State James A. Baker III, an old friend and confidant from Houston. Bush began his workday there at 7 a.m. reading written intelligence briefings.

Brent Scowcroft, Bush's national security adviser, was back at the White House, monitoring the onrushing preparations for full-scale war.

Gorbachev's call came at 11:15 a.m. EST. The two spoke for half an hour.

Afterwards, as the fateful noon deadline passed, Bush walked along the forested paths of his Catoctin Mountain retreat with Baker by his side.

The ultimatum had been Gen. Colin Powell's idea.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, at a meeting of Bush's war council Thursday, suggested giving Saddam one last chance, and the commander-in-chief readily agreed.

"That way, his (Powell's) forces would know how to plan for it," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "It would be a precise yardstick to use in gauging (the Iraqis') movements."

A fortnight earlier, Powell and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney had returned from Saudi Arabia and presented Bush with "a general plan for the conduct of the ground war," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. It had been in the works for months.

The air war had gone on "a little longer than they anticipated," Fitzwater said, because of the raids devoting to wiping out the Scud missiles that Saddam used to terrorize cities in Israel and Saudi Arabia.

But neither the last-minute shuttle diplomacy between Baghdad and Moscow nor the fresh reports of executions and the torching of oil wells in Kuwait changed the timetable.

Bush, after listening to Cheney and Powell on Feb. 11, had given Schwarzkopf the leeway to set the final time for the offensive within a window of dates.

On Saturday, Bush spoke several times by telephone with Cheney at the Pentagon and Scowcroft at the White House, "and made it clear that there was no reason not to go ahead," said Fitzwater.

BAGHDAD: 'Mother of Battles' radio broadcasts

will be by our hands."

A radio commentary addressed to "Arabs everywhere" said: "Strike at foreign interests ... the interests of the infidel Americans and those of the (ruling Saudi) Saud family and others aligned against the Arab nation."

In a speech full of the bombastic invective that has characterized his propaganda campaign for months, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein implored his heavily battered army to be "merciless, merciless, merciless," in its fight against the allied forces.

"This is how Allah wishes the faithful to fight the infidel," Saddam said over Radio Baghdad, which is the sole source of news for most Iraqis.

Saddam portrayed the ground war as a desperate fight for Iraq's survival, a battle which, if lost, would result in a long and vicious occupation by allied troops.

With God on their side, Saddam said, presumably from a location hundreds of miles from the fierce ground fighting, Iraq's troops would successfully defend "every free and honorable woman and every innocent child, and ... the values of manhood and the military honor which you shoulder."

If the Iraqi army fails, Saddam warned in his broadcast monitored here, "a lengthy period of darkness will prevail over Iraq."

If Iraq's military does collapse in the days or weeks ahead, the Iraqi people appear certain to be among the last to find out about it.

"We are winning the war," a young Iraqi woman asserted here Sunday at an anti-American protest during which raucous cheering broke out when one demonstrator announced that thousands of British troops had been killed by Iraqi soldiers. The source cited for that report: Radio Baghdad.

Iraq military communiques on the battle for Kuwait expressed confidence. They said the 545,000-strong Iraqi forces had courageously repulsed the offensive, destroying hundreds of tanks, and were well in control.

It said Iraqi troops had annihilated an airborne allied force that landed behind its lines.

And it denied allied claims that thousands of Iraqi forces had been taken prisoner.

DOWNFALL: Officials speak with increasing candor

(From 1A)

States is not actively seeking to remove Saddam from power, although the president has indicated he would welcome the Iraqi leader's ouster.

Administration officials say they will be satisfied if the ground offensive only evicts Iraq from Kuwait and seriously damages the Iraqi armed forces.

But administration officials have been speaking with increasing candor about their desire to see Saddam deposed and about ways of applying pressure to accomplish that.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser, and Robert M. Gates, Scowcroft's deputy, all suggested in television appearances on Sunday that if Saddam remained in power, Washington and its allies would keep United Nations sanctions against Iraq in place longer than they might otherwise.

They also indicated that the American naval and air presence in the Persian Gulf would probably grow after the war.

"We're not making it an objective of the war that he goes," a senior State Department official said. "But we're trying to create an environment that either insures that the people of Iraq understand it's not in their interest to keep him around or that insures that he cannot be a threat to any other country."

There seems to be a tension between the administration's official position that it can accept Saddam's presence in Baghdad and its objective of securing peace and stability in the Persian Gulf.

Tolerating Saddam's presence also fails to mesh with the case that Washington has been making against Saddam: that he is a modern-day Hitler, executing huge numbers of Kuwaiti civilians, setting fire to the country's oil production installations and, according to Gates, now setting fire to large segments of Kuwait City.

As the onset of ground combat brought the United States closer to being able to dictate the terms of the end of the war, senior officials acknowledged publicly Sunday that American political goals exceed the simple military objective of liberating Kuwait.

When asked if the United States intended to carry out the modern-day equivalent of the de-Nazification of Germany after World War II, Baker said that was a "political aim" of Washington.

If Saddam remains in power, administration officials said, Mr. Bush is calculating that his military will be so badly damaged that it will no longer be a threat and that he himself will no longer be a political factor in the region.

But Baker said Sunday on the ABC News program "This Week" that the 12 United Nations resolutions on Kuwait "imply that the restoration of peace and stability in the gulf would be a heck of a lot easier if he and that leadership were not in power in Iraq."

This political approach fits into the allied military strategy for ending the war as it has unfolded in the first day of ground combat.

REPORTS: Bush pleased

very real sense, we are praying for the nations at war, for Iraq, for our own nation, for the coalition, and for the nations of the Middle East."

With Bush were children Marvin Bush and Dorothy LeBlond. Vice President Dan Quayle, his wife Marilyn and their three children joined the Bushes in the front pew. Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and Secretary of State James A. Baker III also attended the special presidential service.

The president returned home, where he received good news from Cheney and later from Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"Our overall conclusion is that the whole operation so far has been very successful," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters.

Bush and his top aides met for a 45-minute briefing on the progress of the assault from Powell.

"The general's conclusion essentially was that the initial thrusts have been steady, according to plan and very successful," said Fitzwater, who attended the session.

Bush is "quite gratified with the pace and the effectiveness of the operation," said the spokesman. "He's very proud of his commanders and service personnel. They have performed in truly admirable fashion."

Allied strategy: Surround Iraqis, then cut them off

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Allied troops, surging into Iraq and occupied Kuwait Sunday, raced to cut off the dug-in Iraqi army in hopes of forcing Saddam Hussein to quickly sue for peace.

The allied blitzkrieg closed in on a weary, unpredictable Iraqi army from three sides supported by punishing close-air support and continued bombardment of Iraqi positions by B-52s and smaller allied bombers.

Army paratroopers, helicopter-borne assault troops and commandos dropped behind Iraqi lines to seize forward bases such as airfields. Army and Marine tank units, some with troops wearing chemical weapons protection suits, poured across the Saudi border into Iraq and Kuwait.

Marines aboard amphibious assault ships were positioned to seize Failaka island at the mouth of the harbor at Kuwait City to serve as a stepping stone for helping to retake that capital city, possibly on Monday, symbolically Kuwait's national day of independence.

"We're going to go around, over, through, on top, underneath –any other way we can," said Army Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of Operation Desert Shield, in describing a no-holds-barred, multi-pronged attack involving a 33-nation coalition of 732,000 armed forces arrayed against an Iraqi army that at one time numbered 545,000 in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

Schwarzkopf said the coordinated offensive, with armored units "moving north with great speed," progressed "with dramatic success." Front-line Iraqi units offered "light" resistance, the four-star general said.

As a result, preliminary reports showed allied casualties were "remarkably light," Schwarzkopf said.

At least 5,500 Iraqi soldiers were captured in the opening 10 hours of the offensive, the commander said, with reports coming in of "many hundreds more north of our positions with white surrender flags."

The development confirmed an assessment Saturday by a senior U.S. officer familiar with intelligence reports on vulnerable units packed into a 4,000-square mile area. Some U.S. officers likened the readiness of Iraqi troops to surrender to the 100,000 German soldiers who surrendered to Patton's army in a single day at the end of World War II.

Israel reports hit by Scud missile

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel said an Iraqi Scud missile landed in the southern part of the Jewish state early Monday, but caused no casualties and apparently no damage. It gave no further details.

"There has been one fall," the army spokesman, Brig. Gen. Nachman Shai, said on Israel radio.

He said the Scud was launched from western Iraq, but gave no details.

It was the first attack on Israel since the U.S.-led ground offensive against Iraq began Sunday morning. The last Scud attack on Israel was launched Saturday.

At about 3:50 a.m., 20 minutes after the first alert, Shai said Israelis in the south could remove their gas masks but should remain in their sealed rooms. A previous Iraqi missile fired toward southern Israel, which also caused no damage or injury, was aimed at Israel's nuclear reactor in the town of Dimona. Monday's Scud was the 38th fired by Iraq at Israel since Jan. 18. Earlier missiles killed two people, wounded 230 and damaged about 11,000 homes.

A total of 32 Scuds have been fired at Saudi Arabia, killing one person and injuring about 85.

All the missiles had conventional warheads. But chemical readiness persists in light of Iraq's repeated threats to use such weapons against Israel and the U.S.-allied forces.

Iraq seems stunned by coalition attack

By Ruth Sinai
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq's best offense has always been a strong defense. But initial reports here and in Saudi Arabia indicate that Iraq's front-line defenses were stunned Sunday by the 11 allied nations applying a lethal combination of ground and air power.

"Everything's now on course," said Capt. Ahmad al-Sabah, a royal family member who flies a Mirage F-1 for Kuwait's air force. He said he encountered little anti-aircraft fire on his sortie Sunday, and no Iraqi warplanes.

An Iraqi military communique told quite a different story, one of heroism and success against allied forces. While several Pentagon officials acknowledged that some "sharp engagements" had taken place, they said resistance was weak enough to prompt the Desert Storm commander to speed up his attack schedule.

Iraq has a proven and simple way of fighting, honed in its recent eight-year war with Iran. It digs in, waits for the enemy to approach, then slows him down with barbed wire and an array of mines. When the enemy gets close, Iraqi gunners unleash massive barrages of cannon.

But in the initial hours of the allied plunge into Kuwait and Iraq, the Iraqis put up surprisingly little resistance, according to U.S. commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf. "Contact with the enemy can best be described as light," he said.

The French said their forces surged 30 miles into Iraq.

Smoke, weather slow bombing runs, not troops

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Smoke pouring from blazing Kuwaiti oil fields and rain over the war zone hampered allied bombing missions Sunday but didn't slow troops on the ground, according to reports from the field.

"They can see well enough to shoot at us, and we can see well enough to shoot at them," Lt. Col. Jan Huly said as his 2nd Marines Division surged into Kuwait.

An unexpected rainstorm that pelted the desert just before the Marines launched their invasion and dozens of Iraqi-set fires at Kuwait's Umm-Qadir oil field had little impact on the ground offensive.

But pilots were ordered not to drop any bombs if weather or smoke caused any doubt about their targets, said F-16 pilot Lt. Col. George Patrick.

"The black smoke up there from the fires was unbelievable," said an F-15C pilot, Lt. Lou Defidelto of Ridley Park, Penn. "You couldn't see through it.

"I was up at about 10,000 feet. I would say you couldn't see the ground, except for a few individual places you could see the ground. You couldn't see any troops, though."

The Kuwaitis have already begun plans to extinguish the fires. Renowned oil-firefighter Red Adair of Houston said Sunday he has contracted with Kuwait to put out the blazes.

Adair, speaking on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said he will leave for Saudi Arabia on Monday but couldn't begin fighting the fires until the war ends.

Adair didn't disclose how much it would cost to extinguish the fires or how much he was being paid. He did say each fire could consume $1,000 worth of oil a minute and would take four to five days apiece to extinguish.

He warned that soldiers won't be able to get close to the fires.

"That ground is going to be awful hot, it's going to turn that sand into glass," Adair said. "The other thing that concerns me is ... how close they laid those mines to those wells."

Sunday, the Marines advanced into Kuwait under supporting artillery and missile fire that sent muffled thuds reverberating off the heavy cover of gray clouds, according to pool reports.

Pentagon loosens blackout for good news

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Pentagon's highly restrictive news policy announced by the secretary of defense Saturday night was loosened Sunday when allied field commanders came forward with glowing reports of early success in the war zone.

But many American news executives contended that the curbs were the latest, and possibly most troubling, example of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's efforts to control the flow of information from Washington.

More than two hours after the ground assault began, Cheney summoned reporters to the Pentagon on Saturday night to announce that to protect the troops, regular briefings in Washington and in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, would be suspended until further notice.

"Even the most innocent-sounding information," he declared, "could be used directly against the men and women whose lives are on the line carrying out these operations."

The policy changed Sunday morning when Pentagon officials said the secretary gave permission for the American commander in the gulf, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, to deliver what was an upbeat briefing to reporters in Riyadh.

"Good news defeats a blackout," said Jonathan P. Wolman, Washington bureau chief of the Associated Press. "The military apparently has a good story to tell, and they are abandoning their blackout to let it be told."

Although Schwarzkopf's briefing lacked detail, it seemed to have had the effect of signaling to other military officials in Riyadh and in Washington that they could at least speak anonymously to reporters.

As the day wore on, news organizations began to receive dispatches from pool reporters.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Focusing on your communications skills now will help you land a splendid job or assignment. A reconciliation in June puts you on the road to happy romance. Home equity could provide unforeseen benefits in early fall. You find the answer to a recurring personal dilemma. Stick close to home next Christmas. A luxury vacation is best postponed until early 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tenor Enrico Caruso, TV host Sally Jessy Raphael, basketball's Kurt Rambis, Beatle George Harrison.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unusual support comes from a former employer. Do not close out your career options; they may look more enticing later on! Play it smart; hide your ambition when around your coworkers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance is lively. Let friends and family know how much they mean to you. Using impractical sales techniques could prove costly. Choose business confidants with greater care.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will make powerful contacts today; use them judiciously. Career demands could collide with social engagements. Your recent efforts will be royally rewarded with a bonus or promotion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Staying busy while you are on the sidelines will produce handsome profits. Be more money-minded than usual. Although traveling on impulse can be fun, it could also prove expensive. Use common sense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to catch up on paying your bills and balancing your checkbook. Certain domestic arrangements could need an overhaul. Seek family members' cooperation. A platonic relationship intensifies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take care of any financial problems early in the day. Seek expert advice. Get your priorities right; do not let underlying conflicts interfere with what must be done. Romance has to wait.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not try to escape from your responsibilities. By focusing on one project at a time, you will accomplish more. Team effort can boost profits. A job offer sounds attractive; investigate!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): A new admirer may not be all you hope. Do not wear your heart on your sleeve. Socially, your life is opening up in all kinds of ways. Be especially attentive to family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Call in your markers, collect an old debt and demand the best from your associates. Influential people see you in a different light. If you know your fuse is short, lie low.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You feel tempted to veer off in several directions. Take your work hour-by-hour. Shake off your insecurity. Go to a party and be pleasant. Concentrate on putting others at ease.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Step back from the rat race and look objectively at those who have supported you. Treat them with respect and they will give even more. Recycle old projects to earn new profits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Handle financial matters adroitly. Personnel questions also demand finesse. Do not go overboard in romance until you have tested the emotional waters! Music or art could be a second source of income.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are happiest when playing with other youngsters. Honest and outgoing, they take charge in the sandbox and at the playground. Wise parents will let these Pisces know that there is more to school than socializing. Encourage them to hit the books and live up to their potential. As adults, they will be excellent judges of character and have a good head for business. Urge them to smile more instead of worrying over trifles.

Opening lead: King of ♡ Expert declarers study a hand carefully and try to arrange the play to guard against unforeseen circumstances. Less skilled players are often unaware of the stormclouds looming on the horizon. This hand illustrates our point.

With a sound opening bid and two honors in responder's suit, South had no qualms about raising to three diamonds—modern theory does not require extra values for that action. North showed spade support and the major-suit game was reached in quick time.

The defenders started with three rounds of hearts, declarer ruffing the third. An expert sitting in the South seat would make short shrift of this hand—it's a textbook situation. Declarer cashes the king and queen of spades and, if both defenders follow, draws the remaining trump and claims 11 tricks.

If either defender shows out, declarer abandons trumps and starts to run diamonds. The defender with the long trumps can ruff whenever it pleases, but declarer wins any return, draws the remaining trump, ending in dummy, and takes 10 tricks—four diamonds, five trumps and the ace of clubs.

An ingenuous South might overlook the danger posed by a 4-1 trump break and tackle the hand too casually. After ruffing the third heart, suppose declarer draws two rounds of trumps by cashing the king and ace. When trumps don't break well, there's no way to recover. If declarer cashes the queen of spades and then goes after diamonds, West ruffs the third diamond and leads another heart. The best declarer can do is conceded the trump immediately, but the defenders will then cash a third heart for down one.

Abandoning trumps to strat running diamonds is no better. West ruffs the third round and exits with a trump. Declarer now has to lead clubs from hand, and the result is down two!

Violinist gives solo presentation in Israel during air raid warning

NEW YORK (AP) — When air-raid sirens screeched outside, the Israel Philharmonic left the stage and the audience pulled on gas masks. An imperturbable Isaac Stern, meanwhile, picked up his violin and played.

Stern

"There was such restlessness and obvious uncertainty in the hall that I thought it would be helpful to go out and play something," the 70-year-old virtuoso said in an interview Sunday in New York on his return from Jerusalem.

Stern kept his own gas mask nearby during the Iraqi Scud missile attack on Israel as he performed a saraband for solo violin by Bach.

"They all stood up and yelled, which was nice," he said. "It was something very special to be useful and needed. It doesn't happen very often in life."

The Russian-born Stern, who lives in New York, was in the middle of a Mozart concerto with the orchestra when the sirens sounded. "A man came on stage to tell everybody to get their gas masks on," he said.

Many orchestra members tried frantically to call their families in Tel Aviv, the target of previous Iraqi missile assaults. The missile landed in central Israel and caused little damage.

Stern said the solo was one of the strangest he'd ever performed.

"It was a very eerie sensation to look out in the hall with the audience covered with gas masks," he said.

He said he didn't put on his mask because he doubted Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's forces would fire missiles at Jerusalem with its many Muslim holy sites and large Palestinian population.

"Some of us figured that we'd have enough warning if we needed to get a gas mask on," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Scott Glenn, who plays a bull rider in his latest movie "My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys," spurns animal-rights activists who say the bulls are cruelly treated.

"These animals are well-treated and well-fed," Glenn said in an interview published Sunday in The Tennessean. "They spend their entire working career in the ring doing what they love to do best — trying to kill human beings."

The actor said the riders are more in danger than the bulls.

"And when that career is over, he (a bull) is put out to stud for the rest of life. I expect he might enjoy that even more than pushing cowboys around," Glenn said.

Glenn's first ride, in the movie "Urban Cowboy," left him with stitches and a cracked hip and collarbone.

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Gloria Estefan, who broke her back in a bus accident nearly a year ago, begins her comeback on the national tour circuit with a concert Friday in Miami.

Estefan

The Cuban-born singer was on the last part of a world tour when her tour bus was rear-ended by a truck on a snowy Pennsylvania highway last March 20. She suffered a broken back when she was hurled out of her bunk, but surgery and months of exercise got her back on her feet.

Ms. Estefan, 33, who burst into prominence with the Miami Sound Machine in 1985, will undergo full-scale rehearsals through Wednesday at the Lakeland Civic Center in Lakeland, east of Tampa. The tour will promote her new album, "Into The Light."

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Beetle Bailey's creator, Mort Walker, has designed a bronze sculpture of the comic-strip character that will go on display at his alma mater, the University of Missouri.

Walker, who graduated in 1948, has kept close ties with the school. The sculpture shows Beetle sitting in a graffiti-covered booth at the Shack, a dingy campus bar Walker used to frequent. It burned down in 1988.

At a seminar this weekend, Walker said the inspiration for Beetle, a skinny, dimwitted Army private, came from the Shack and from his basic training at Fort Leonard Wood.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Webb Pierce, a high-pitched singer who dominated country music in the 1950s with such hit records as "In the Jailhouse Now," "Honky Tonk Song" and "Wondering," died Sunday at age 65.

Pierce

Pierce cultivated a reputation as country music's P.T. Barnum, a flamboyant showman who built a guitar-shaped swimming pool and drove a car decorated with silver dollars.

He was voted No. 1 country music male vocalist in 1952, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956, 1961, 1962 and 1963 by Cash Box Magazine, a music industry weekly.

Pierce died at his home, apparently of congestive heart failure due to other illnesses, said family spokesman Max Powell.

Did you hear the one about ...

The discipline of mathematics has produced some of the greatest intellects the world has ever known, from Pythagoras and Ptolemy to Isaac Newton and Albert Einstein. Yet none of these redoubtable figures was ever able to solve a seemingly simple mathematics puzzle — the so-called traveling salesman problem.

Now, according to the latest issue of Science magazine, two mathematicians at Du Pont Co. and Purdue University, Donald L. Miller and Joseph F. Penky, have succeeded where others before them have failed. The two have produced a new algorithm that solves this classic puzzle. (An algorithm is a set of instructions for solving a specific problem in a limited number of steps.)

The problem is to determine the shortest, or least costly, route for a salesman to travel to a specified number of cities. The salesman must visit each city only once, never retrace his steps and must return to the city from which he started. The greater the number of cities included, the more difficult the problem is to solve.

The traveling salesman problem is so complex, in fact, that a relatively simple version involving 2,392 cities of equal distance from each other required a supercomputer more than a day to develop a solution. Supercomputers are the world's fastest and most powerful computers.

The algorithm developed by Miller and Penky, however, can solve far more complicated traveling salesman problems, involving more cities at varying distances from each other, in only a matter of hours.

This mathematical breakthrough is significant because the algorithm has a number of practical applications. It may be used, for instance, to chart the most efficient and least costly schedule of processing chemicals or scheduling the overhaul of jet engines. In the real world, these efficiencies can yield millions of dollars in savings to industry.

The discovery of a solution to the classic traveling salesman problem may not rank with Ptolemy's development of trigonometry or Newton's invention of calculus or Einstein's creation of the theory of relativity. But it nonetheless amounts to an extraordinary contribution to the field of mathematics — even if Miller and Penky never become household names.

Elderly clients deserve respect

Caring for nursing home clients is a physically and mentally demanding, often thankless, often low-paying job. Nevertheless, nursing home clients should be treated with care and respect. Good care and respect are not always given.

I've recently been made aware of certain practices in a Midland nursing home which make me wonder about the care the people who reside there are getting. Following is a list of "problems" I've heard about:

- More than once, visitors have seen members of the nursing home staff eat from the clients' trays before the clients are served.
- Gifts of food brought to the clients have been taken and eaten by some of the staff.
- Medications are not always given as prescribed, e.g. not given with meals or not given the correct number of times per day.
- Clients have had to wear dirty clothes or make do with hospital gowns because no one changed their clothes or their laundry was not returned to them in a timely fashion.
- The clients' rooms are not always cleaned regularly and spills are not wiped up quickly.

No one expects a nursing home to look like something out of Better Homes and Gardens, but clients should have clean clothes and clean rooms whenever possible.

Most nursing home clients, given the choice and different life circumstances, likely would choose to live autonomously and not be forced to rely on others for their needs. This cannot always be the case.

It is difficult to continually care for those who cannot care for themselves and who often can give no evidence that the care they receive is appreciated. Still, one can find many nursing home employees who are very dedicated to their jobs and the people they serve. One can also find nursing home employees who feel overworked and underpaid and see their work only as "a job."

Significant improvements in the quality of nursing home life in Midland and elsewhere will been seen only when all employees of these facilities adopt the attitude that any job worth doing is worth doing well, and realize the clients are fellow human beings who should be treated with dignity and respect.

Exchange program fraught with ills

WASHINGTON — An obscure White House program that President Bush once likened to "a hallmark of democracy" may also be a hallmark of government sleight of hand.

Anderson

The President's Executive Exchange Commission recruits corporate hot shots to work in top federal posts for a year, and government bureaucrats are placed in temporary jobs with private companies. The goal is mutual understanding, but the result has sometimes been to place corporate representatives in government agencies when their companies do business with those agencies.

Many of the participating corporations over the past two decades have been big campaign contributors to the party in power. The executives' temporary duty with the government sometimes allows them to infiltrate agencies that regulate their industries and dole out contracts to their own companies.

The loaned executives enjoy perks, like last year's three-week, all-expenses-paid trip to Europe. Their mission was to talk to foreign trade and government officials.

This is the government revolving door at its most blatant. Our associate Scott Sleek looked into the executive exchange program and found that some of the job placements have pushed the limits of ethics. Officials from drug companies have gone to work for the Health and Human Services Administration. One executive with an aircraft manufacturer worked for the Federal Aviation Administration. And farm pesticide makers have set up offices in the Agriculture Department.

An executive with a major defense contractor even got a sensitive job at the Pentagon. Andrew Phelps of Bechtel Corp., an engineering and construction firm, joined the exchange in 1989. He got a senior post in the Pentagon and his job was to carry out studies and confidential projects involving research and technology in engineering — Bechtel's bread and butter. Bechtel did about $136 million worth of business for the Pentagon that year. Government lawyers check each assignment for conflicts of interest, and they cleared Phelps for the job.

Last year the federal Office of Personnel Management reviewed the exchange program and recommended that the commission pay closer attention to the ethics question. OPM cited one questionable case: John Healy, a Chicago public relations executive, was initially assigned to the Energy Department, but when that job didn't work out, he was given another post. The salary was $12,000 lower, but Healy got the higher salary and did some extra duties to earn it, like setting up photos on the European trip.

While on the government payroll, Healy was responsible for producing a brochure for the exchange commission, and he recommended that the contract go to a Chicago firm that he knew. OPM warned that the case could be interpreted as favoritism.

The commission, run by Elizabeth Heitman, has an annual budget of $1.4 million, with about one-third of that paid by participating companies.

The commission made the mistake of thinking that it didn't have to obey all federal spending rules because some of its money was private. Commission staffers were flying business class instead of coach and broke other federal spending rules. But OPM set the record straight, saying the commission got bad legal advice.

The OPM review is not the last the commission will see of scrutiny. The General Accounting Office is also looking at the commission, and so is a congressional committee headed by Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif.

Lantos is particularly interested in a whistleblower on the commission staff, Gordon Hamel. He is the commission's director of placement, and Heitman tried to fire him after he complained to government investigators about the way the agency was being managed.

UNSAFE SKIES — Overseas travelers have less to fear from terrorists than from the air traffic control system. The Federal Aviation Administration has no reliable automatic system for tracking overseas flights. For the last 35 years, air traffic controllers have had to monitor sporadic radio reports filed by pilots. The situation is becoming increasingly dangerous. Since 1969 the FAA has been trying to develop a system to monitor transoceanic flights, but bureaucratic bumblings and costs concerns have thwarted their efforts.

Roadblocks to the nation's health care

Probably within the next five years or so we will adopt some form of universal health care in this country. This is so because the so-called free market approach isn't working.

Reese

One reason, naturally, is that our system is a hybrid variety of free market at best. There is government-paid health care for the government-defined poor (Medicaid) and government-paid health care for the elderly (Medicare).

For a variety of reasons health care costs have risen so high that almost anyone but a millionaire can become medically "indigent" if they have the misfortune to have certain critical medical problems. A colleague of mine recently had an $11,000 appendectomy with no complications — an operation that use to cost $125.

The people most at risk today are the lower middle class who don't have the good fortune to work for large corporations which can afford to subsidize their health insurance. They can be wiped out financially by a gallstone. Even large corporations, however, are being squeezed by astronomical health care costs. Those who are ideologically opposed to what they like to call socialized medicine will find fewer and fewer allies in the corporate executive suites.

It seems clear to me we ought not to waste a lot of time trying to play pin the blame on somebody and just set about fixing the problem. The goal should be a reasonable level of health care available to every citizen at a reasonable cost.

In looking for ways to reach this goal, there are some mental roadblocks we ought to clear away. One is the panacea approach. There just is no perfect solution to this problem that is going to somehow provide ideal health care.

The other is the free market approach. There is no way in our society at this time in our history that a true free market can be attained since that would involve Congress abolishing both Medicaid and Medicare. If you think that is going to happen, please don't waste my time. Go find some other like-minded souls who enjoy sitting in a room debating the kind of government needed for the first Martian colony.

No matter what system we devise it will have limitations. Health care will be rationed. The free market, if it existed, would ration it on the basis of ability to pay. Every government-subsidized system in the world today also rations health care based on different criteria. Every government-subsidized system in the world today, including Canada's which is a favorite among a lot of people, is being squeezed by rising costs.

In our own country, private health insurance companies are being squeezed and are themselves rationing their policies by one device or another.

One approach we might consider would be to go with a government-paid system of basic health care for all citizens, paid for by a health care tax; and reserve, for private insurance, catastrophic-type health care. For example, relatively few enough people will ever need a kidney transplant, so transplant insurance ought to be financially feasible at a fairly low cost — low enough to attract people who wish to pay for peace of mind.

All of us might as well begin to think about this because the present hodge-podge system is fast approaching the line of political and social intolerance. Hardly any class of people is happy with it and if it is allowed to just drift on with patches here and there, it will collapse.

Let's try to fix this problem with a minimum of hysteria, demagoguery, and ideological claptrap. In the meantime, try to stay healthy.

Cleared by censors, notes from homefront

I was standing at the counter of a convenience store waiting to pay for my coffee. On the counter was a box of condoms.

The picture on the front of the box was of a woman holding a baby. The baby had the face of Saddam Hussein.

Grizzard

Underneath the picture it read: "Don't take a chance on bringing another Saddam Hussein into the world."

My favorite name in the war: CNN's Wolf Blitzer. If only he were a linebacker.

Has anybody else noticed how much Gen. Swathmore looks like he was separated at birth from Jonathan Winters and Willard Scott?

Read Lee Montville's piece on sports and war in Sports Illustrated. You won't be nearly as concerned about the fact that Isiah Thomas is out for the Detroit Pistons.

I want to see a headline that reads: "U.S. Bombs Iraq Around the Clock."

Media complaints about military secrecy are sort of stupid. There are lives at stake.

Did Eisenhower call a press conference before D-Day and advise the press corps, "Our plans are to hit the beach at Normandy but don't tell Hitler. He thinks we're landing at Calais."

Catch your Pulitzer covering another story.

I heard two older guys talking. One said to the other, "They ought to bring those young boys back from over there so they can produce some babies. They ought to send dried-up folks like us over there. We're going to die soon anyway."

The other guy listened and then replied, "You're crazy."

Why is it cheaper for Iraq to train its pilots than it is for us to train ours? They don't have to teach theirs to land.

First verse of a song I'm writing about the war for Hank Williams Jr.:

"Saddam Husseiiiin/You're so damned insaaaane/You spilt our blood and you spilt the oil/and this here ol' boy is about to boil....."

A fighter pilot from the Vietnam era was telling me "pilot fatigue in a war comes from hearing too much and thinking too much about statistics and laws of average.

"'What's my chances of coming back today?' That's what fatigues you, not the actual hours you're in your airplane."

Is there any chance Dan Quayle's National Guard unit could be called up.

Worst war song so far: The one that begins, "Bomb, bomb, bomb, bomb, bomb Iraq," sung to the tune of "Bah-bah-bah-bah bah berAnn..."

I have a friend who made plans last summer to go to Europe for the first time later this month. "There were 28 of us who signed up," she explained. "But because of the war there's just six of us left. Think we should go?"

I wouldn't. There will be lots of times later to see museums and cathedrals and get left by the last train to Milan.

Read President Bush's lips: "This is no Vietnam."

It certainly isn't. Jane Fonda hasn't gone to Baghdad yet.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Feb. 25, the 56th day of 1991. There are 309 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 25, 1913, the 16th Amendment to the United States Constitution, giving Congress the power to levy and collect income taxes, was declared in effect.

On this date:

In 1570, Pope Pius V excommunicated England's Queen Elizabeth I.

In 1793, the various department heads of the U.S. government met with President Washington at his home for the first Cabinet meeting on record.

In 1836, inventor Samuel Colt patented his revolver.

In 1870, Hiram R. Revels, R-Miss., became the first black to serve in the U.S. Senate. He was sworn in to serve out the unexpired term of Jefferson Davis.

In 1873, opera singer Enrico Caruso was born in Naples, Italy.

In 1901, United States Steel Corporation was incorporated by J.P. Morgan.

In 1919, Oregon became the first state to tax gasoline.

In 1940, a hockey game was televised for the first time, by New York City station W2XBS, as the New York Rangers defeated the Montreal Canadiens, 6-2, at Madison Square Garden.

In 1948, Communists seized power in Czechoslovakia.

Three firefighters die in skyscraper

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A high-rise inferno that burned for almost 19 hours was brought under control Sunday after killing three firefighters and gutting nine floors of a 38-story skyscraper across from City Hall.

The 12-alarm blaze raged from 8:30 p.m. Saturday until 3 p.m., when it reached a floor with automatic sprinkers and firefighters were able to direct a stream of water into windows, Fire Commissioner Roger M. Ulshafer said.

Hours earlier, fire crews stopped fighting the blaze from inside the building after engineers warned that the charred and soot-covered high rise could collapse.

The city's main downtown intersection, the traffic circle where Philadelphia's two major arteries loop around City Hall, was closed.

At least 12 firefighters were injured. Two were hospitalized in stable condition.

The fire at One Meridian Plaza started on the 22nd floor and spread to the 30th floor, where sprinklers kicked in. The building was only partially equipped with sprinklers, with none on the 22nd through the 29th floors, Ulshafer said.

The battle was complicated by failures in the building's electrical system, backup generators and water pumping system, Ulshafer said. Elevators couldn't be used, so firefighters had to stretch six 5-inch hoses by hand to the 22nd floor, he said.

"By the time we got them up there and got enough water, the fire was three floors above our heads," Ulshafer said.

During the late morning, flames were visible from the 27th through the 29th floors as firefighters sprayed three jets of water from a nearby office tower. All or portions of the 22nd through the 30th floors were gutted.

No adjoining buildings caught fire, Ulshafer said.

Police kept a crowd of onlookers more than a block away because windows occasionally popped from the intense heat, sending debris clattering more than 250 feet to the street. Smoke billowed from the upper stories and an acrid odor spread throughout the city.

The dead were identified as fire Capt. David P. Holcombe, 52, and firefighters Phyllis McAllister, 44, and James A. Chappell, 29.

They apparently became disoriented in heavy smoke and ran out of oxygen from their portable tanks, Ulshafer said.

"We found them next to a window which they had broken," Ulshafer said.

Ulshafer said firefighters battled the blaze for about 11 hours before a structural engineer warned the top 20 floors of the building could collapse.

Most of the firefighters then left the building; a few stayed on the 15th floor to watch for any signs of the fire burning downward, he said.

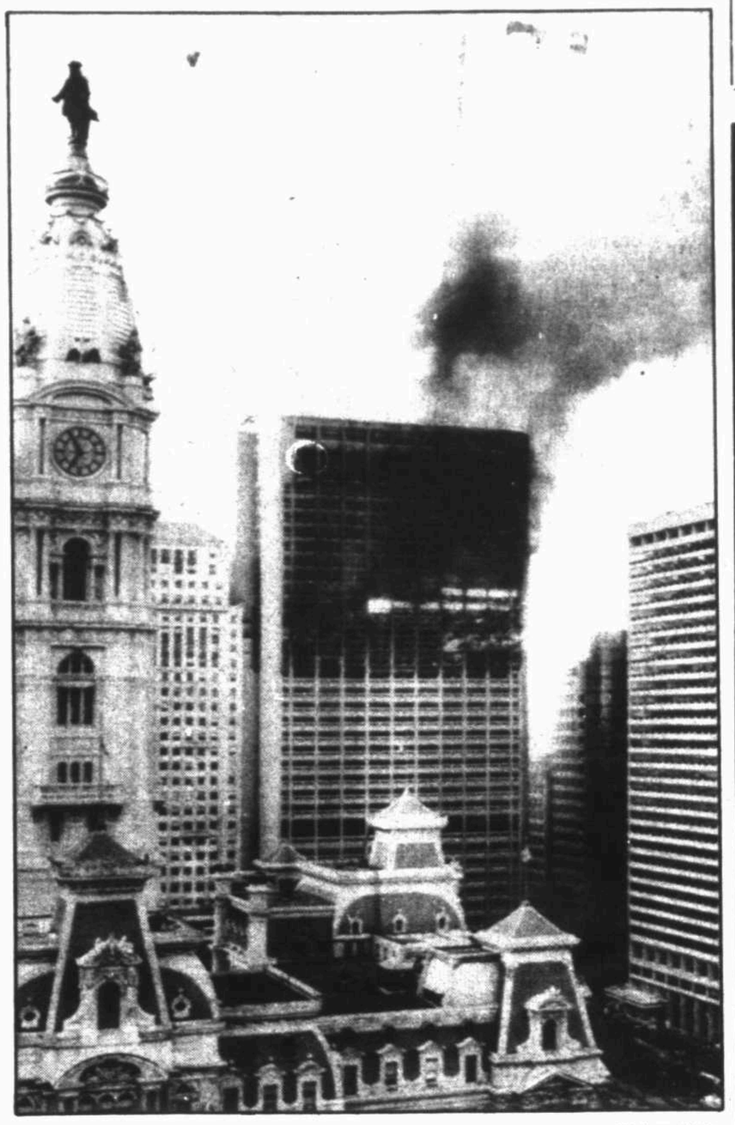

Ulshafer said firefighters will let the building cool naturally before trying to enter, probably Monday.

The building houses the Philadelphia regional headquarters of Reading-based Meridian Bancorp Inc. and several other offices.

The cause of the fire was under investigation. Officials said they knew of no one in the building when the fire began.

The building is managed by Richard I. Rubin & Co. Judy Morse, a spokeswoman for Rubin, said she did not know who owned the building.

Ulshafer was not sure of when the building was constructed but said it was built before 1981, when stricter requirements for sprinkler systems were enacted for new high rises.

George Gobel dies in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Crew-cut comedian George Gobel, whose deadpan humor and guitar playing earned him an Emmy and a spot on "Hollywood Squares," died Sunday. He was 71.

He died at Encino Hospital of complications after bypass surgery to the major artery in his left leg, said Sam Honigberg, a longtime friend.

Gobel had been in the hospital periodically for five weeks since the operation, Honigberg said.

"His body was just too weak," he said.

Gobel made his debut at age 11, singing on the WLS Barn Dance radio revue in his native Chicago. He continued to sing and play the guitar on radio and at county fairs and appeared regularly on "The Tom Mix Show."

He joined the Army Air Corps during World War II and served as a B-26 pilot instructor, entertaining his Army buddies with humor he began to introduce into his singing and guitar act, Honigberg said.

"The George Gobel Show" premiered on NBC in 1954 and became an instant hit. It was at the top of the ratings for three years. After the show's demise in 1960, he had numerous other television appearances.

Gobel is survived by his wife of 40 years, who he fondly referred to as "spooky old Alice;" a son, Gregg; two daughters, Georgia Bryan and Leslie McIntosh; and three grandchildren.

Thousands demand resignation of Gorbachev

■ Citizens rallied on a cold windy day in Moscow Sunday to show support for Boris N. Yeltsin, leader of the Russian republic, reflecting concern that he has been targeted by the Kremlin for a political fall.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Reflecting growing concern that Boris N. Yeltsin, the leader of the Russian republic, is being targeted by the Kremlin for a political fall, tens of thousands of people took to the streets on Sunday to voice support for him and demand the resignation of his rival, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

They rallied on a cold, windy day outside the Kremlin, carrying signs that read, "Boris, you're right" — an endorsement of Yeltsin's withering criticism of President Gorbachev that has been met by a torrent of official denunciation and warning.

"We think Yeltsin is in a dangerous situation right now," said Valentina Vasilyovna, standing in the crowd of about 40,000 people who marched from several points in the city in a mixed spirit of outing and anxiety over the fate of the nation's single most popular insurgent politician.

"If we can protect Yeltsin he will make it," the woman said, bundled against the cold as Czarist Russian flags snapped in the wind raking the rally. "Gorbachev tells the people lies," she said, referring to the assault on state-controlled television that has denounced Yeltsin as a promoter of civil war, presumably because of his call last Monday for Gorbachev to resign.

Yeltsin, who was purged from the communist hierarchy in 1987 for having complained then about the slow pace of Gorbachev's promised national reform program, appeared to break fully with the Soviet leader last Monday.

He accused Gorbachev of deceiving the nation and amassing the personal power for a new dictatorship.

He urged that the Soviet president step down and hand over Kremlin authority to the Federation Council, a new presidential consultative body, created by Gorbachev, that allows more national voice to the sovereignty-minded republics.

The communist opposition in the Parliament of the Russian republic quickly began a campaign to have Yeltsin removed as Russian president by the republic parliament, which chose him last year after his election to the body.

KGB investigators have also been dispatched to look into joint-venture business deals invited by the free-market-minded Yeltsin government, accompanied by newspaper charges of corruption intended to malign that government.

Yeltsin supporters charge the Russian leader is being targeted by the Kremlin at the behest of his old rival, Gorbachev, in an old-fashioned anti-capitalist witch-hunt.

The crowd applauded when a speaker contrasted Yeltsin's bold, sometimes brash candor with the heavy anti-Yeltsin propaganda fashioned lately on the Gorbachev government's news outlets. "Yeltsin carries out his duty honestly in front of the people," the speaker declared.

"Gorbachev resign!" the crowd shouted only a short distance from Red Square, which was, as usual, cordoned off from demonstrations.

On Sunday night, the government controllers of the main television news program, Vremya, showed no videotape report on the pro-Yeltsin rally. Instead, film of a smaller anti-Yeltsin rally on Saturday was shown as a special report following the news, with the size of the crowd exaggerated 10-fold and other facts distorted.

The crowd's animus toward Gorbachev was such that there was no kind note for his recent diplomatic peace initiative in the Persian Gulf war.

"It is easier for Gorbachev to go off and deal with the problems of other nations than to face the crisis here at home," said Ilya Merkin, a bearded man huddled contentedly amid the rally.

"He put all that effort into the Iraq war in order to restore some of the credibility he lost when he used tanks in Lithuania," he added, referring to the army attack last month in Vilnius in which at least 15 civilians died in peaceful defense of the pro-independence government there.

"Gorbachev's policy has brought us hunger," said Tatyana Aleksandrovna, "And now he is afraid of his losing his power. Why doesn't the West understand this?"

The long-running contest between Gorbachev and Yeltsin will gather further energy next month.

Not only will the Communists' anti-Yeltsin campaign come to a head in the Russian Parliament, but Gorbachev's increasingly shaky referendum will be put to the nation.

It is a simply-designed question, whether the people want to continue the current Soviet Union with Gorbachev's promised improvements, but the politics are becoming complicated.

Some republics are threatening not to join in the referendum. Yeltsin's Russian Parliament already has added a question to the March 17 ballot on whether to have popular election of the republic president. This could provide a stronger power base to Yeltsin and quash the Communists' hopes of stripping him of office.

Yeltsin, an openly ambitious apostate Communist, says he does not covet Gorbachev's office. He argues, to Gorbachev's dismay, that the true decentralization of power the republics are urging would make his present post the most important in the land, since Russia already has the nation's majority of people and economic wealth.

Rally speakers noted that the Communists were still the reigning power even though their explicit power to dictate political and governmental policies was removed from the Constitution last year. "Here we are, a year later, at the same point, if not worse," lamented one speaker of the insurgent opposition's troubled political infancy.

Even more, the rally was energized by the sense of personal combat underlying the struggle over Gorbachev's turn lately toward greater reliance on Kremlin central authority and Yeltsin's campaign for greater decentralized power for the republics to pursue more democracy and free-market economics.

"We are tired of the caprice and envy being directed at Yeltsin," one speaker said of the Kremlin's continuing campaign against Yeltsin as a selfish proponent of national chaos.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Officials close PLO-run center

JERUSALEM (AP) — Police on Sunday welded shut the doors of two branches of a research institute run by Jerusalem's leading Palestinian Liberation Organization member.

Jerusalem police spokeswoman Anat Granit said the offices of the Arab Studies Society were being closed for six months because they were used for PLO business and not for research.

Police confiscated some papers and said they welded the doors shut to prevent the computers and other equipment from being used.

The society's main office in Arab east Jerusalem has been closed since July 1988 after police charged it was funded by the PLO and was "an instrument to advance the aims of the (Palestinian) uprising."

But society Director Faisal Husseini on Sunday denied the offices were used for political purposes.

Tentative accord set

WARSAW, Poland (NYT) — Poland said on Sunday that it had reached a tentative accord on a crucial three-year pact with the International Monetary Fund, and its prime minister asked members of the Solidarity trade union for their help in maintaining "social peace."

The prime minister, Jan Krzystof Bielecki, bluntly told Solidarity members gathered for their annual convention in the northern city of Gdansk that Poland's transition to capitalism stood no chance without Western aid, which depends on maintaining fiscal austerity.

Bielecki called for Solidarity's help in obtaining "social peace" and rejected its recent campaign to eliminate wage restraints at state-run industries. He said his government would consider raising the minimum wage not subject to the pay caps.

The accord with the monetary fund, announced in Warsaw, must still be approved formally by both Poland and the management of the fund. It means at least $2 billion in aid to Poland from the Washington-based international lending agency.

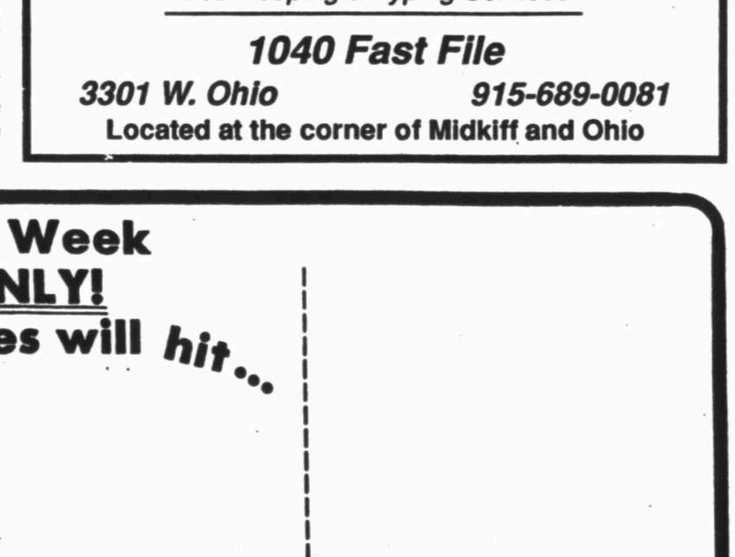

More important, it clears the way for billions in other Western aid and possible reduction of Poland's $46 billion debt. Bielecki said on Sunday that he hoped such an agreement could be reached by April, with Poland becoming an associate member of the European Community soon after.

Campaign turns violent

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Supporters of two rival political parties contesting next week's national elections fought with guns and knives Sunday, killing at least two people and injuring 25, police said.

The violence between supporters of the Awami League and the National Democratic Party occurred in the southeastern port city of Chittagong, said city police, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Police said two people died of bullet wounds in the clash. Police did not specify which party the victims represented.

Pam Smith, a licensed masseuse, massages Luis Valdez. Smith, who works at the Midlander health club, believes in the power of massage.

HEALING HANDS

Right, Smith works on Valdez's shoulder blades. Below, Smith uses her elbows to kneed Valdez's spinal cord. According to Smith, this technique is helpful, but be careful not to apply too much pressure with the elbows.

MIDLAND -Luis Valdez, a 34-year-old Midland businessman and tennis player, lies draped in towels on the massage table in Pam Smith's office.

As soft music plays in the background, she moistens her palms with a water-based cream and goes to work.

With an open-handed, sweeping caress, she rubs his back from the base of the spine to the base of the skull, slowly increasing the pressure on the muscles.

Soon, she is pressing into his spine with her elbows, dragging her forearms across his back and lingering on tense areas.

"I think you can give a person a good, deep massage without a lot of pain if you know what you're doing," she said, digging her thumbs slowly into the soft flesh between Valdez' shoulder blade and ribs.

"The first massage, I really don't go in too deep. I want the person to become familiar with my hands."

Those hands have been rubbing down clients since 1988, when Ms. Smith received her massage therapist's registration from the state.

MASSAGE: It's gaining legitimacy

(From 1B)

Texas, the Department of Health in Austin reported. All of them have received at least 250 hours of training in massage from certified instructors.

A registered nurse with a master's degree in psychology, Ms. Smith already had several of the required courses out of the way when she embarked on the road to certification nearly three years ago.

Although the Milwaukee native had been practicing massage as a hobby since the late 1970s, she didn't begin to think of it as a possible profession until the stress of her nursing career began to affect her health.

"I knew it was time for a dramatic change in lifestyle if I wanted to stay healthy mentally and physically," said Ms. Smith, who came to Midland from Milwaukee in 1986 to accept a position at Clearview Hospital.

After receiving her massage therapist's registration, however, she continued to work full time as a nurse at another Midland hospital while doing massage on the side. It was not until her massage business began burgeoning that she finally dropped nursing altogether.

"It was a trauma giving up a career that I had put a decade or more of effort into," she said. She was ridden with guilt about letting her years of nursing training go to waste.

"Now I laugh at those fears," she said. "I'm glad I'm able to to do what nurses were originally intended to do, which is to be nurturing."

She said that as a massage therapist, she is able to address people's problems on a level that she rarely could as a harried nurse.

"They're trying to balance career advancement and the pressures of raising a family and, many of them, the transition to a new community," she said. "Their normal coping mechanisms just aren't working. Massage is kind of a time-out experience for them."

For $35 to $40 an hour, Ms. Smith will squeeze, knead and rub the lactic acid and tension from aching muscles. Music is provided at no extra charge, and privacy is ensured.

"I insist on drapery," she said, referring to the towels and sheets under which her clients recline. "It's there for psychological protection if for no other reason. One of the things about massage is that the person has got to feel safe."

Although often associated with seedy hotels and red-light districts, massage is enjoying greater acceptance in this country as a legitimate stress-relief tool.

Ms. Smith, who gives five to six hour-long massages a day at The Midlander health club, said this mainstream acceptance is reflected by her clientele.

"The individuals who come to me are professional individuals," she said, adding that she also does on-site massage therapy for corporations such as Exxon. "They are sophisticated."

Valdez, who is the sales and marketing director at The Midlander, said he's received nothing but glowing reviews from Ms. Smith's clients.

After his own massage at Ms. Smith's hands, Valdez was convinced that the therapy should become part of his regular health regimen.

"It was very relaxing and soothing," he said. "It relaxed a lot of the tense spots that I had, and she was able to tell where the tense spots were."

Although giving a massage to a male customer is nothing new for Ms. Smith, she was at first hesitant about including men on her client list.

She said her first massage service — based at a now-defunct hair salon — was for women only because she didn't want to deal with males out for more than a therapeutic rub-down.

But many of her clients requested that she give massages to their husbands, boyfriends and male bosses, and soon she was serving a co-ed clientele. Now, she said, about 60 percent of her clients are men.

"When they walk into me for a massage, they are expecting a therapeutic massage and nothing else," she said.

"I think in our country, in our culture, there's a a lot of myths about massage. Up until recently, I think, it's been associated with prostitution. I think that's in sharp contrast to the way massage is viewed in Europe."

Touch taboos are related to sexual taboos, she said, which makes it difficult for some people to understand that a massage does not necessarily equal foreplay.

"I think that sometimes in our culture we have a tendency to confuse a sensual experience with a sexual one," Ms. Smith said. "That is a central part of what the fear of touch and massage is about."

Thus massage can be used not only as a stress-relief tool, but as a means of overcoming fears of touch and intimacy. Rape victims and abuse victims are often referred to her by local pyschotherapists, Ms. Smith said.

The therapeutic advantages of massage make it worth bringing into wider acceptance, she said.

"The Orient has benefited from...touch for thousands of years. In India, mothers massage their infants from birth on. Unfortunately, in the United States we're kind of touch-phobic. Out touch is pretty much relegated to the formal handshake or a pat on the back.

"I'd like to see massage just part of family culture."

To better spread the massage message, she has applied to the Texas Department of Health for her massage instructor's license. She said the therapists she trains not only will relieve some of her workload, but will also increase the availability of massage therapy.

"There's nothing mysterious or complicated about massage," she said. "It's one of the few things that feels good and is really good for us.

Report: Drilling threatens refuges

By Jennifer Dixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spit of sand in the Texas Gulf Coast where endangered whooping cranes spend the winter is threatened by military aircraft exercises, boating, and oil and gas operations, according to a draft government report.

The Defenders of Wildlife, which obtained the report after filing a Freedom of Information Act request, said oil and gas drilling or exploration are identified as harmful on 10 national wildlife refuges in Texas, more than in any other state.

"This is especially noteworthy in light of the fact that oil and gas operations are identified as one of the activities producing the greatest amount of harm to refuges nationwide," said Robert Dewey, refuge program associate at the Defenders of Wildlife.

In Texas, oil and gas operations are disturbing the wintering habitat of the whooping crane on Matagorda Island and Aransas National Wildlife Refuge, according to the survey by the Fish and Wildlife Service, which oversees national wildlife refuges.

In Texas, the threats to wildlife and habitat include airboats; grazing; oil and gas exploration or extraction; mining; pipeline leaks...and mosquito control.

Oil drilling is also considered harmful to a wildlife corridor of thorny brushlands along the Rio Grande that is home to such endangered species as the ocelot, jaguarundi, bald eagle, brown pelican and peregrine falcon, the report said.

But the wildlife service said negative impacts from drilling and exploration at refuges in Texas were being kept to a minimum through cooperation with oil and gas operators.

The draft report, in which refuge managers identified threats to wildlife, found incompatible activities were occurring at five refuges in Texas, including Aransas and Matagorda Island. Harmful activities were reported at a total of 12 refuges.

Matagorda Island and the San Bernard National Wildlife Refuge on the Texas Gulf Coast south of Houston, reported the greatest number of harmful uses.

Craig Rieben, a spokesman for the Fish and Wildlife Service, called the report "a bunch of draft data" and said he could not comment further until the agency releases a final report.

"Our conclusion is that the report indicates serious problems on federal wildlife refuges and the Fish and Wildlife Service should delay no longer in releasing the report and getting on with the needed reforms," Dewey said Friday.

Some changes, however, would require legislation, he said.

In Texas, the threats to wildlife and habitat include airboats; grazing; oil and gas exploration or extraction; mining; pipeline leaks; power lines that birds may strike in the dark or in fog, breaking their wings; military or civilian aircraft; and mosquito control.

Also facing several problems is the Lower Rio Grande National Wildlife Refuge, a ribbon of thorny subtropical forest ranging from Falcon Dam to the mouth of the Rio Grande.

The report said those problems include a gravel pit, which is supposed to be rehabilitated, oil and gas drilling, potential or realized problems from pipeline leaks or power lines.

Demand for new Big Bend tour is overwhelming

LAJITAS (AP) — The newly opened Big Bend State Natural Area is already so popular that tours are booked for months, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reports.

"We have simply been overwhelmed with requests from all over the state and from other parts of the country," said Jim Carrico of the Texas parks department.

"All tours are booked up months in advance. What do you tell (callers) without making them mad?"

Carrico said biweekly tours to the 336-square-mile ranch are booked past April, and state officials are asking that more tours be added.

"Frankly, we're surprised at having this kind of problem," Carrico told the San Angelo Standard-Times. "We never thought it would take off so soon."

When the ranch that spans two counties and 215,000 acres was purchased from Humble Oil and Gas Co. in 1988, it almost doubled the size of the Texas park system, which at that time had a total of 220,000 acres.

The wilderness area includes two mountain ranges, an extinct volcano and Madrid Falls, the state's second highest waterfall. At least 11 rare species of plants and animals live on the ranch, which also has 90 major archaeological sites, including ancient Indian camps and cliff dwellings.

Tours are conducted from both Lajitas and Fort Leaton State Park near Presidio on the natural area, located in south Presidio and Brewster counties.

Sheriff's deputy, teen-ager wounded in bloody shootout

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Bexar County sheriff's deputy investigating reports of gang activity was critically wounded Sunday in a gun battle that also wounded a teen-ager, authorities said.

Deputy Leo G. Gomez, 35, was in critical condition Sunday afternoon at the Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center's intensive care unit, said Tech. Sgt. Charles Soule.

Seventeen-year-old Enrique C. Lopez was at Wilford Hall in fair condition, the hospital spokesman said. The sheriff's department said Lopez was booked by proxy and charged with attempted capital murder.

Sheriff Harlon Copeland issued a brief statement on the 2:30 a.m. shootings, which he said occurred as Gomez investigated reports of gang-related activity on the county's west side. Gomez, who was in a marked sheriff's car, is assigned to the department's gang unit.

The statement said Gomez radioed a sheriff's department dispatcher to say he was questioning a young man who appeared intoxicated. Several minutes later, Gomez radioed that he had been shot, Copeland said in the statement.

"Deputies arriving at the scene discovered Gomez lying on the street next to the patrol unit bleeding from gunshot wounds to the upper body," the statement said.

Fire breaks out at Plaza hotel

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Fire broke out Sunday at a downtown hotel, forcing the evacuation of dozens of guests and causing smoke and water damage to two floors of the building.

No injuries were reported.

The blaze started about 11 a.m. in a room of the fourth floor of the Plaza San Antonio hotel, District Fire Chief Reyes Lopez said.

Hotel manager John Esgate said many guests already had checked out for the weekend. The remaining guests and hotel employees were evacuated from the building and waited along a nearby street while firefighters brought the blaze under control.

Dallas' Allen dies

DALLAS (AP) — George Allen, Dallas' first black City Council member and veteran of five decades of racial struggle, has died at age 82 of complications related to surgery.

Allen died Friday. He had suffered a stroke about a year ago and had been ill since.

"He leaves a very rich legacy," said Al Lipscomb, one of two black city council members.

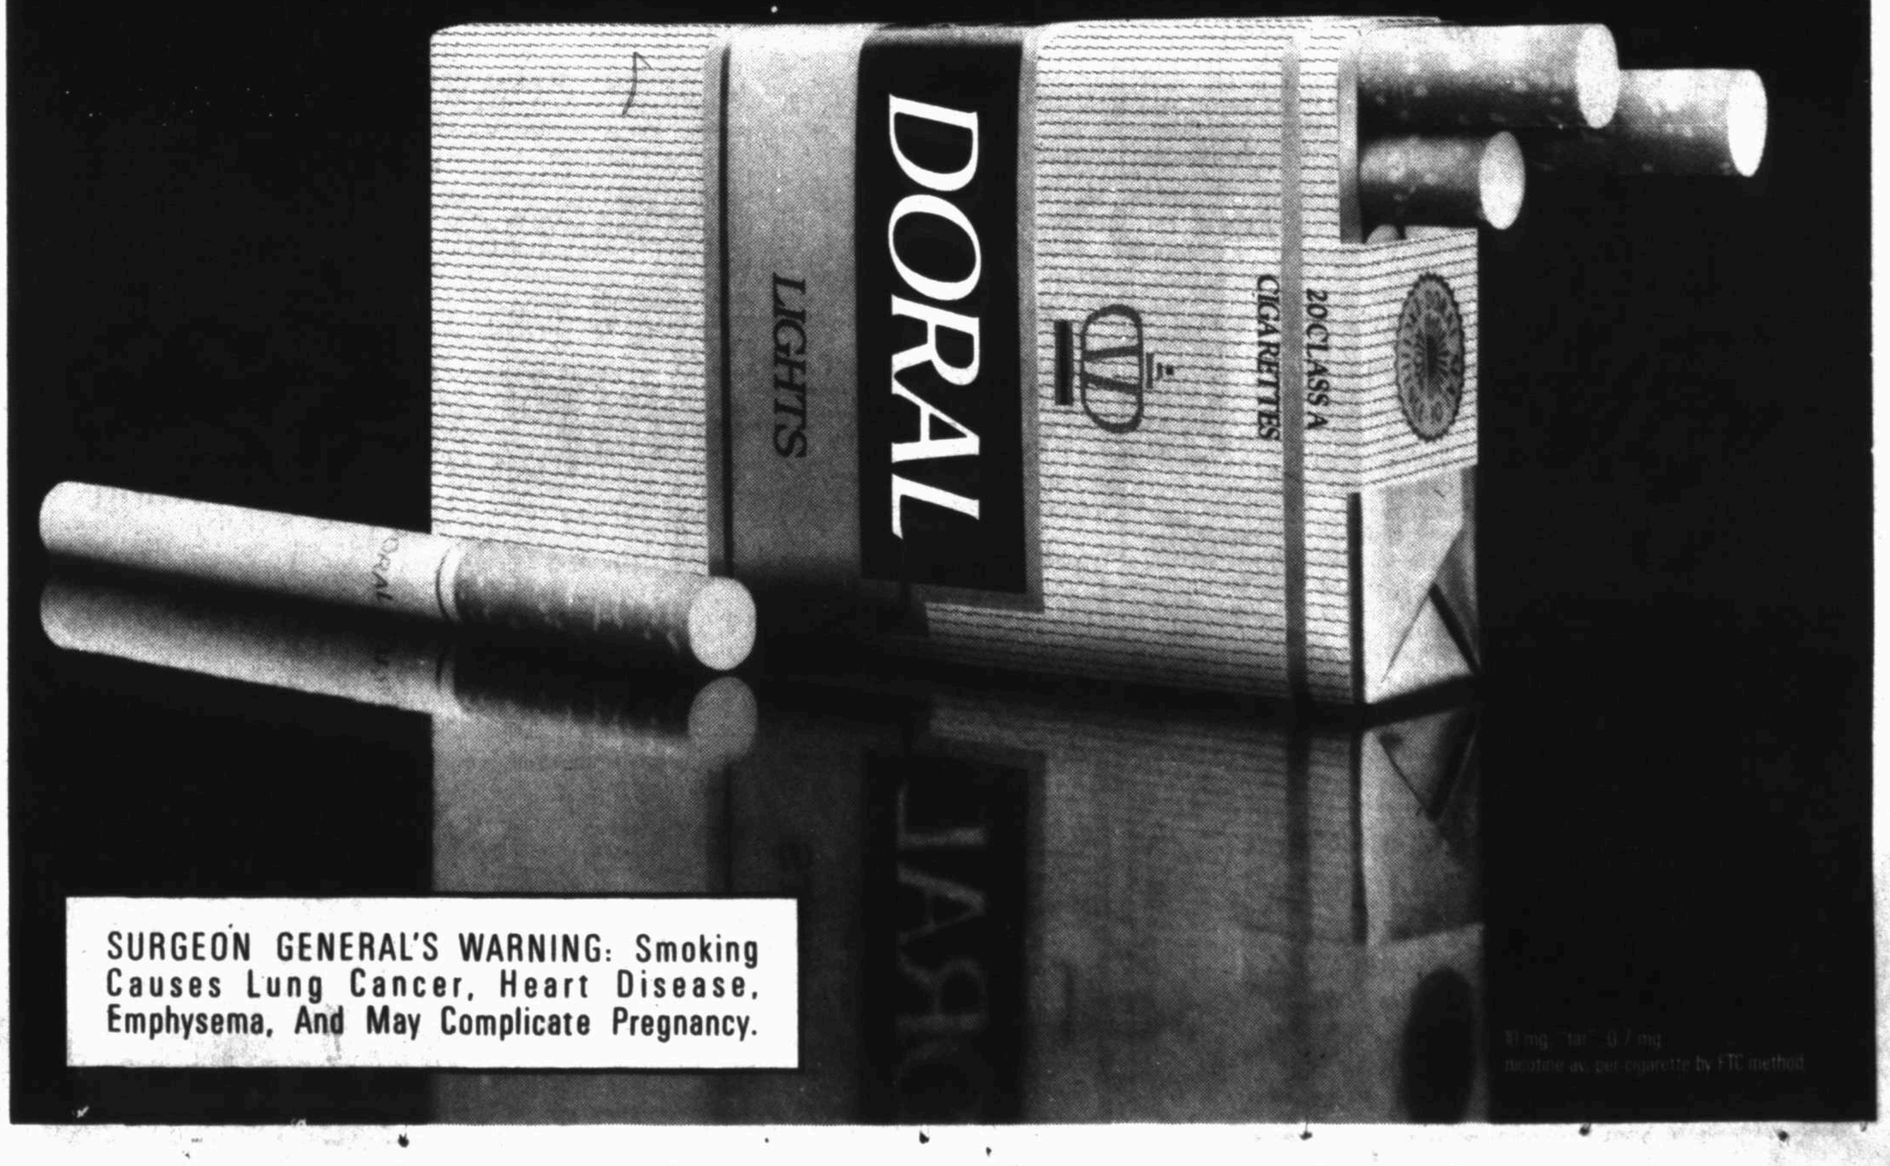

Allen's public career began in 1968 when he was appointed to the council after new voting boundaries were drawn. He was elected to the council the following year and served until his 1975 resignation, including a term as mayor pro-tem.

It was at the University of Texas where Allen played a landmark role. He was among the first blacks who tried to eliminate segregation in Texas. In 1938, he enrolled at the University of Texas at Austin and attended classes for 10 days before university officials rescinded his registration. University administrators had thought Allen was white.

Allen received honorary degrees from Bishop College in Dallas and Texas Southern University in Houston, where he served as a regent for 25 years.

Transportation museum saves piece of history

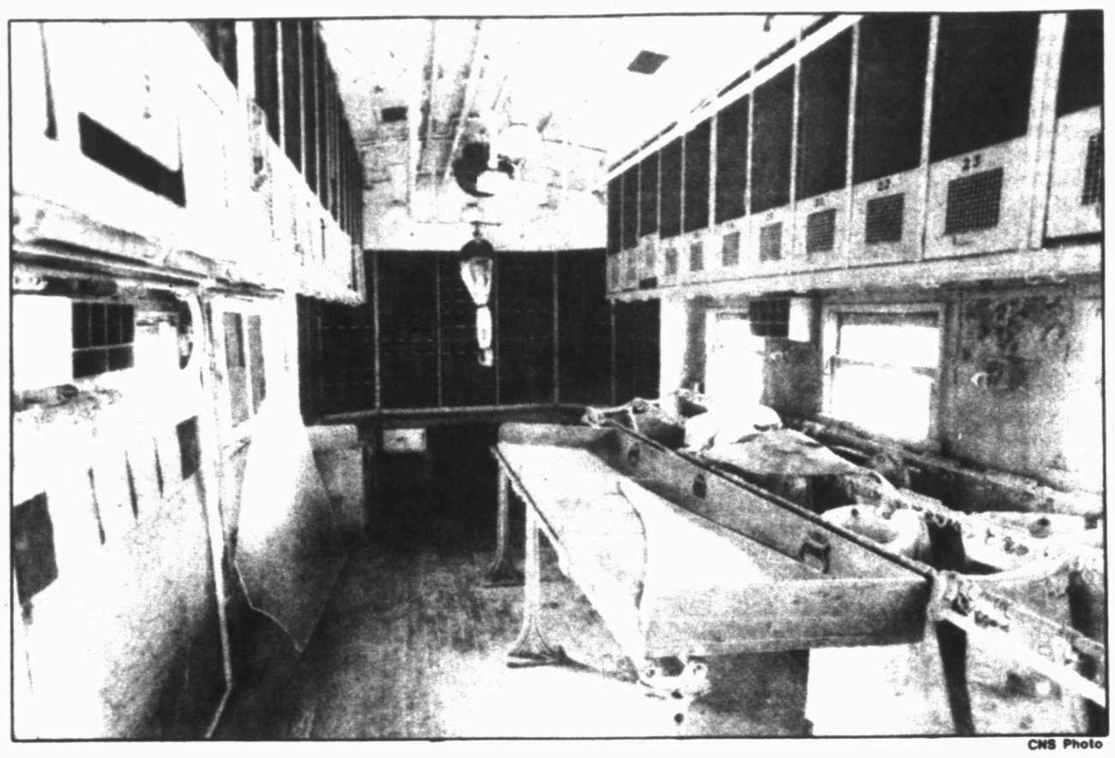

By Bernard Schoenburg
Copley News Service

ST. LOUIS — Its driving wheels are almost seven feet tall. Built in 1900, it was the first locomotive assigned to pull the "Overland Limited" cross-country passenger trains in the link from Chicago to Omaha. Its operating weight was more than 300,000 pounds, and it last served on Chicago-area commuter lines.

It is the Chicago and Northwestern 1015 — the first of more than 70 past-their-prime locomotives brought to the National Museum of Transport during a nearly 50-year effort to salvage a big chunk of Midwestern, and American, history.

But a close look at the steam-powered relic brought to the then fledgling museum in 1946 shows why those fighting to preserve the workhorses of the century at this St. Louis landmark are worried. Wood that forms part of the cab is rotting away, and eruptions of rust mar the protective coating that the most recent paint job was supposed to provide.

And the 1015 is not alone.

CNS Photo

Visitors to the National Museum of Transportation in St. Louis can see, on their tours, how mail was once processed on a Pullman-Standard mail car.

OTHER ENGINES, streetcars and buses — a few restored but most in various states of decay — cover the core area of the museum. Rust and graffiti grace the outside of passenger cars that once set standards of travel. A futuristic "Aerotrain" locomotive, built by General Motors in 1955 and purchased by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific for Chicago-to-Joliet service in 1958, provides only a hint of its Flash Gordon features. A tarp covers its top — a temporary means to try to fend off rapid deterioration.

"It's an attack at the heart and the soul," says Don Anderson Jr., a St. Louis lawyer and president of the Transport Museum Association, of the decay afflicting some of the exhibits.

"It's our history rotting."

The association is a 1,300-member non-profit group working to help preserve and show off the pieces at the county-owned museum. St. Louis County officials also are seeking the best method of protection. New structures to provide roofs over collection pieces are planned, and St. Louis city and county voters may in coming years be asked if the museum should become part of a taxing district.

Already in a 1970 building on the grounds is a collection of cars, from a 1901 steam-powered model to late singer Bobby Darin's custom-made "dream car," a rocket ship of an auto with a hand-formed aluminum body and giant tail fins, for which he paid $93,647 in 1964. Open-air exhibits that mark the entrance to the museum include a C-47A transport — the military equivalent of the Douglas DC-3 twin-engine airplane — and the first steel-welded hull tugboat ever built.

BUT THE BIG machines aren't the only things collected since Dr. John P. Roberts, considered the chief founder of the museum, acted with a small group of acquaintances to acquire the first piece — a mule-drawn streetcar disgarded by the St. Louis transit system — in 1944.

"There's just thousands of small items — buttons and caps and decks (of) playing cards, anything you can imagine that was ever used on a railroad or in transportation," said Robert J. Hall, superintendent of recreation and cultural services for the St. Louis County Department of Parks and Recreation, which has run the museum since 1979 and owned it since 1984.

"No matter how small it is, we've got it around here someplace."

Much of it also remains uncataloged.

"You could literally have a librarian come in here and spend their life," said Eugene Hanses, director of education for the museum.

While disturbing, the signs of age on the major exhibits don't steal the impact of the collection — thousands of tons of machinery that represent the power and style of more than a century of movement of people and goods across the country.

There's the brightly painted black-and-red Daniel Nason, a wood-burning steam engine built in 1858 and used to pull passenger cars on the Boston & Providence Railroad. Its cone-shaped smokestack is much larger than those on most later coal-burning models, and was designed to keep sparks from flying into the cab or tender car — where wood was carried.

THERE'S THE Illinois Terminal Railroad engine 1575, built in Decatur, Ill., in 1918 and later used to do switching work until the early 1960s by the St. Louis Car Co. It was donated to the museum in 1963.

And there's Union Pacific 4006, one of 25 "Big Boy" locomotives built that were the largest railroad engines ever used in regular service in the world. Constructed in 1941, the nearly 133-foot-long 4006 weighs 500 tons, had a top speed of 80 mph, and hauled heavy freight trains through the Rocky Mountains between Green River, Wyo., and Ogden, Utah. It was retired in 1958.

Just off the road leading to the "station," where visitors can buy daily admission tickets and souvenirs, four engines stand side by side, including the "Silver Charger," or Chicago, Burlington and Quincy 9908 — a 1939 diesel with a rounded front that makes it look more like a submarine than a locomotive.

Tracks on a hill overlooking the entrance hold lines of other locomotives and rail cars.

"This is one of the few museums where you can take a 3-year-old and he feels like he's seeing something," Hanses said.

"It seems like 3- and 2-year-olds know this is a locomotive before they know anything else."

But older visitors often show their concern for the rolling stock sitting on open-air tracks, vulnerable to attack from rain and snow, Hall said.

In his opinion, they have good reason.

"If we don't cover the collection within the next 10 or 15 years, probably what isn't covered will be lost," he said.

St. Louis is one of the transportation centers of the country — a fact that did not go unnoticed by a group of enthusiasts in the city who for years before the founding of the museum had collected photos, documents, and small relics like whistles and bells, said Roberts, 71, who still has an active internal medical practice.

What helped turn attention to saving out-of-use machines was contact from a public relations man with the St. Louis Public Service Co. — a forerunner of the Bi-State Development Agency — about a new boss's order to get rid of the mule-drawn streetcar, the Bellefontaine.

It was the early 1940s, and big changes were under way in the country and world.

"The revolution in the railroad industry was tremendous," with the conversion from steam to diesel power going on, Roberts said. And World War II also provided some inadvertent help, as the need for more secure trackage led to abandonment of two railroad tunnels built in the 1850s, in favor of a new, double-track main line. The Missouri Pacific railroad donated 39 acres of land including parts of the tunnels to Roberts' non-profit group, and the museum was started.

The president of Missouri Pacific at the time donated "an old derrick wrecker," and acquisitions then "just started to snowball," Roberts said.

Tax laws helped, because they allowed companies to make money by donating relics. "It made it very attractive to give things," he said.

AND THERE were good connections. The late Arthur Atkinson, president of the old Wabash railroad, was among those who worked hard to build the collection.

"He knew everyone in the transportation industry," Roberts said.

"Art Atkinson could call one of his buddies and say, 'Look, we need such and such,' and the equipment would often show up."

Museum visitors can enter some of the rail cars and locomotives — taking a walk through history as they go.

The Burlington "Silver Spoon" dining car, built in 1938 by the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co. and donated to the museum in 1969, still shines on the outside and provides a look at not only a specially built kitchen on wheels, but a timeless food service list of do's and don'ts still on the wall.

"Keep the premises spotlessly clean," says one instruction.

"Protect food from flies, rats, roaches and other vermin," says another.

Passengers got instructions of their own in the next car on the line, a Pullman sleeper made in 1948 that served on the Northern Pacific's "North Coast Limited" between Chicago and Seattle. Among amenities: commodes that fold out of drawers underneath private suite sinks.

"Kindly flush toilet after each use except when train is standing in station," says a sign inside one cabinet door.

A mail car comes complete with a swinging metal hook on the outside, designed to snag mail bags, and a patchwork of large and small mail compartments on the inside.

IT'S HARD TO imagine being at the controls of the massive Union Pacific 6944 Centennial model diesel, built about 1970 and obtained by the museum in 1985. Its packs about twice the power of most diesel locomotives, Roberts said.

"Union Pacific always built big power" in the "Big Boy" tradition because of mountainous terrain it covered in the west, Roberts said. But in the case of the Centennial — which looks to be in almost pristine condition — he said the railroad decided that it might be more efficient to have more, smaller engines so power wouldn't be wasted on relatively light loads.

DEAR ABBY

American way of death is costly, complicated

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your correspondent, "Unfinished Business," attended a friend's funeral and was "dismayed to learn that the family had decided to have a closed-coffin burial," thereby denying a visual farewell and the opportunity to better cope with reality. As you rightly pointed out, the next-of-kin have the final say in such matters.

Van Buren

A word of amplification: The open-casket funeral is unique to the United States and Canada. In no other country is the bizarre ritual of "viewing" the deceased a part of any funeral service.

In the 1920s, a public relations spokesman for the funeral industry coined the phrase "Beautiful Memory Picture" to describe the embalmed and prettified cadaver in a suitably costly casket.

The funeral industry has long tried to convince the public that "viewing" is essential to what they are pleased to call "grief therapy," swallowed whole by the likes of "Unfinished Business." If that is so, how come it isn't practiced in England, France, Germany, etc.?

To the contrary, an English jurist wrote that a public exhibition of an embalmed body, as that of Lenin in Moscow, would in England be considered a revolting spectacle and therefore a public nuisance.

Readers looking for a simple and inexpensive funeral should write to the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, an educational non-profit organization with affiliates in most major cities. The organization can provide information on dignified low-cost funerals. The address: 7910 Woodmont Ave., Bethesda, Md. 20814. — JESSICA MITFORD (AUTHOR OF "THE AMERICAN WAY OF DEATH")

DEAR JESSICA MITFORD: How well I remember the bombshell your book created in 1963. "The American Way of Death" rode the best-seller list for a year. And in its wake (no pun intended) was spawned a new generation of Americans who would bury their loved ones with dignified low-cost funerals, without feelings of guilt or embarrassment.

Previously, too many poor people went into debt for lavish, expensive funerals because they were emotionally stressed at the time, and felt that the amount of money they spent on their final farewell was an indication of how much they valued the deceased. Utter balderdash!

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago when I moved to Arizona, a clerk in a small business establishment asked, "What is your name?"

"Springer," I responded.

"No, no. I mean, like what should I call you?" she asked.

"MRS. Springer," I replied succinctly.

Not two weeks later, I received a telephone call from our priest. He said, "Hello, Sherri, this is Father (so-and-so)."

Abby, am I super-sensitive to be bothered by this rudeness? I think not; I believe I am entitled to a little courtesy. My solution is to patronize no establishment where this rudeness occurs, whether the product is cheeseburgers or religion. Am I wrong? — MRS. SPRINGER IN MESA

DEAR MRS. SPRINGER: Yes. It's your privilege to patronize whomever you choose for your own reasons, but don't write off your priest as "rude" because he addressed you by your given name. You could be denying yourself a superior spiritual leader.

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed your column for many years. Thanks for keeping such a great conversation going.

I write poetry now and then. For example:

FORGET HAPPINESS!
It will not be found, like a lost purse;
It will find you, like a lost person!
If you would be found,
Be little to be seen,
Be silent to be heard,
Be simple to be known.
Be heartful to be loved,
Be giving to be strong,
Be empty to be filled,
Be rooted to be grown!

Bomb scare enlivens UTEP loss

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico will long remember its game against Texas-El Paso. Not so much for the victory it got, but for the two phone calls.

"The events of the day supersede a great win," Lobos coach Dave Bliss said.

The Lobos beat UTEP 80-74 Saturday night in a Western Athletic Conference game delayed for an hour by two telephoned bomb threats that forced the evacuation of the standing room-only crowd of 18,100 from University Arena.

Authorities said there was no indication the Persian Gulf war was in any way linked to the bomb threats, made in telephone calls shortly after the game began to the University of New Mexico police headquarters and Albuquerque police.

New Mexico athletic director Gary Ness said the caller made no reference to the war.

University police Capt. Alex Roybal said both calls apparently were placed by the same man. Albuquerque police were able to trace the second call to a telephone booth, but no arrests were made.

Basketball

"It was an unknown male caller who said, 'There's a bomb set to go off in The Pit (University Arena) 10 minutes into the second half,'" Roybal said. "Obviously it was the same person because the guy said he had called UNM, and he didn't think UNM was taking him seriously, so he called APD."

The game, televised nationally by ESPN, did not start until 10 p.m. MDT. Within seconds after the halftime buzzer sounded, the capacity crowd was advised to evacuate the building, and some 50 police officers moved in to search.

A search of the arena, whose playing floor is 37 feet below ground level, failed to turn up any trace of an explosive, and the game resumed shortly after midnight.

"We tried to stay mentally tough," Bliss said of the long halftime. "I know it's a cliche, but we had to keep the focus on what our focus was." He added that Lobo forward Vladimir McCrary remarked, "only the Orange Bowl had a longer halftime than ours."

"Certainly it was a distraction, a monumental distraction."

New Mexico, which led 40-31 at halftime, got 16 points from 7-foot-2 center Luc Longley in the final 20 minutes to stave off the Miners.

Longley finished with 21 points and Rob Robbins added 19. Robbins scored 16 points in the first half, including three straight 3-pointers.

New Mexico (18-8, 8-6 in the WAC) hit 8 of its first 11 shots in building a lead of as many as 10 points in the first half.

UTEP (16-10, 7-7 WAC) was led by guard Henry Hall's 18 points. David Van Dyke added 14 and Marlon Maxey 12.

ABILENE (AP) — Leigh Ann Fetter, a top swimmer at the University of Texas, has been named Texas female athlete of the year by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Fetter won two individual events and anchored the Texas 400-meter freestyle relay team to victory in 1990 as the Lady Longhorns won their sixth NCAA title in seven years.

She won the honor over Carlette Guidry, a University of Texas sprinter and UT golfer Michiko Hattori. Fetter had 16 first-place votes to 12 for Guidry and 11 for Hattori. Lori Norwood of Bryan, who won the world modern pentathlon title, had 10 votes.

Bavaro injured

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Bavaro, the New York Giants' starting tight end, will undergo surgery Tuesday on the same knee on which he had an operation 10 months ago.

The 27-year-old Bavaro, a former All-Pro who has started in two Super Bowls, will undergo a procedure to replace bone in his left knee, where two ligaments were reconstructed last year.

That is one of the reasons the Giants left Bavaro, scheduled to make $750,000 next year, was left unprotected under Plan B.

While Orel Hershiser was throwing fastballs and changeups on Sunday, Dwight Gooden was changing his mind.

Hershiser, making a careful comeback from shoulder surgery, threw batting practice for the Los Angeles Dodgers at Vero Beach, Fla., and reported no pain. A few miles south in Port St. Lucie, Gooden said he had reconsidered his self-imposed contract deadline.

"It felt really good," said Hershiser, the NL Cy Young Award winner in 1988. "I threw the ball properly. I didn't have any pain or stiffness. I thought my mechanics were good. I threw a lot of strikes."

Hershiser hurt his shoulder last April and missed the rest of the season.

"Orel had a lot of pop on the ball today," catcher Mike Scioscia said. "I was very impressed with the way he threw the ball. He's looking like the Orel of old."

Hershiser has set a goal of being ready by opening day, but admits he still has some work to do before he can even pitch in exhibition games.

"It's reassuring that I've been able to get to this point and everything has been positive," Hershier said, "but I still have a ways to go."

Meanwhile, Gooden changed his strategy and decided his agent could continue contract talks with the New York Mets.

Gooden, seeking a deal to match the four-year, $21.4 million contract Roger Clemens received from Boston, had set a Friday deadline on the talks and rejected a three-year, $13 million offer from the Mets. He has one year remaining on his current contract and will earn $2.25 million for 1991.

"I did a lot of thinking after Friday," Gooden said, 19-7 last season. "I really wasn't comfortable the way things sat. When I came to the ballpark Saturday, everyone was around my locker, wanting to talk and rehash the contract. I didn't want to have to go through that anymore.

"I read some of the papers and it didn't seem like me. I decided to take the pressure off and do away with the deadline."

Gooden said he advised his agent, Jim Neader, that he could continue talks with the Mets during the season.

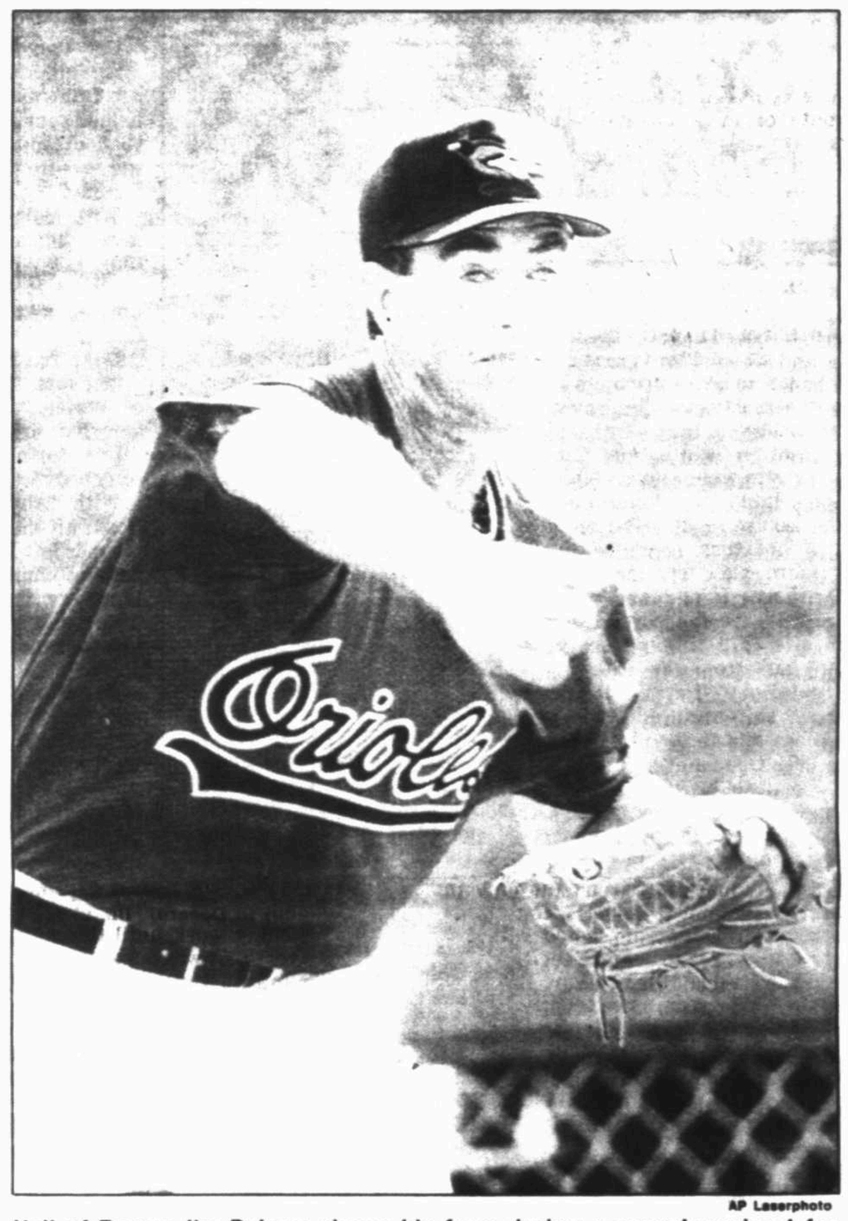

Danny Darwin already has his money, but the Boston Red Sox were waiting to see him in action.

Darwin, guaranteed $11.8 million on a multiyear contract signed as a free agent, remained a no show Sunday at the Red Sox' camp in Winter Haven, Fla.

"Darwin said he'd be here today, so we'll see what happens," manager Joe Morgan said after the 2½-hour practice at Chain O'Lakes Park.

Hogs near another cage crown

Associated Press

The third-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks are only one victory away from achieving the second of four goals they had set out to obtain this Southwest Conference basketball season.

SWC

The Hogs, who ran Texas A&M University ragged in a 111-72 victory on Saturday, accomplished goal No. 1 by setting a school record with its 27th regular season victory.

Arkansas can nail down goal No. 2 by defeating the Baylor Bears on Tuesday night in Fayetteville, clinching a third consecutive SWC title. No SWC team has won three straight conference crowns since the late E.O. "Doc" Hayes guided Southern Methodist to the trophies in 1955-57.

Goal No. 3 for Arkansas is winning the SWC post-season tournament in Dallas and the fourth goal is returning to the NCAA Final Four and winning a first ever national title.

Should Baylor upset Arkansas, the Hogs would face Texas on national television March 3 for the outright SWC title.

Texas clinched at least the second seed in the tournament with a 96-79 victory over Texas Tech on Saturday.

"We looked fresh and hopefully we're ready to finish out the season strong," said Texas coach Tom Penders.

Texas (18-6) upset Georgia and Purdue to reach the NCAA Midwest regional finals against Arkansas last year with a strong run in the second half of the season.

In other games on Saturday, Texas Christian stayed in the torrid battle for the third seed with a controversial 75-74 victory over the Houston Cougars.

Rice stayed in the thick of the third place chase with a 61-59 triumph over SMU, and Baylor downed Southeastern Louisiana 96-45 in a non-conference game.

A&M suffered its worst defeat in the 144-game series with Arkansas.

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson, who had been worried about his team after a devastating nationally televised loss to Nevada-Las Vegas, was pleased to see such a dominating performance by his team.

"It will be great to have a chance to cut down the nets in your home arena," Richardson said. "This was our seventh consecutive road win, the most since we've been here."

Houston is 8-6 and TCU and Rice at 7-7 each in the battle for third place.

Houston's loss to TCU could have severely damaged the Cougars hopes for an NCAA tournament bid.

Clock ticks for Chaps

■ The Midland College basketball team must win tonight's game at New Mexico Junior College to keep its playoff hopes alive.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Once again, Midland College finds itself in that familiar 'must-win situation' if it hopes to land a spot in the Texas state junior college tournament, March 9-13, in Waco.

Tonight's game with New Mexico Junior College not only represents a chance for MC to keep alive its post-season chances, but it also serves as a chance for revenge.

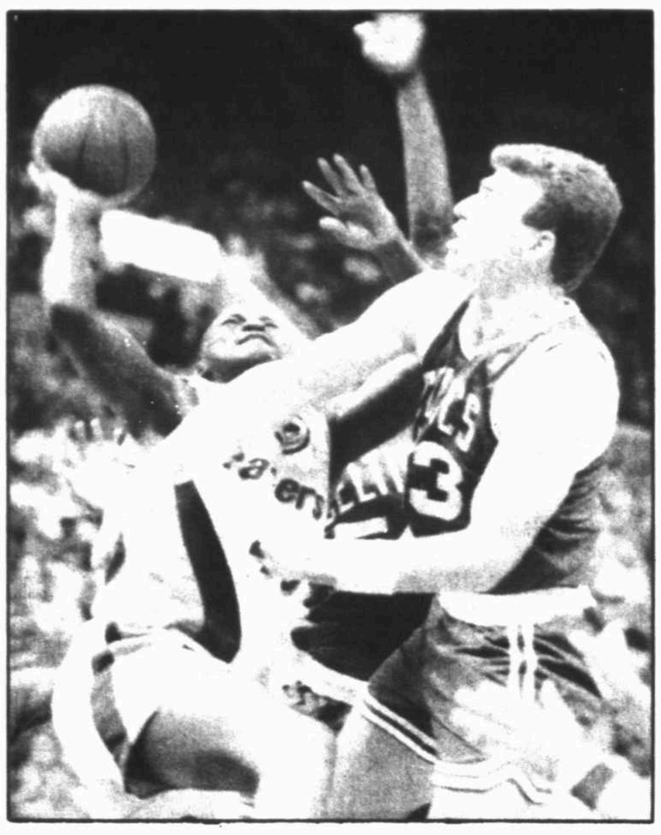

In January, NMJC defeated MC at Chap Center, 91-88, after connecting on four second-half free-throws as a result of technical foul calls against MC.

The process of sorting out who will make the Region V tournament is a tad confusing, save for one fact: If the Chaps win their final two, they are in the tournament, regardless of what NMJC does at Frank Phillips Thursday.

With two games remaining, MC, NMJC and FPC all have mathematical chances of making the tournament.

The Region V titlist will face the Region 14 champion Wed., Mar. 13, to decide the Texas state JUCO championship. The winner receives a bid to the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament in Hutchinson, Kan.

Smith bangs boards in win

NBA

MINNEAPOLIS — Larry Smith had 23 rebounds, his fourth 20-board game in the last five, and Sleepy Floyd came off the bench to score 21 points as the Houston Rockets improved to 14-10 without injured Akeem Olajuwon by beating the Minnesota Timberwolves 100-91 Sunday night.

Vernon Maxwell and Kenny Smith added 18 points apiece for the Rockets, who have won 11 of their last 14 games, their best 14-game streak since 1988.

Pooh Richardson scored 21 points for Minnesota, which is 1-8 since Feb. 7. The Timberwolves, who shot only 35.8 percent, are 0-4 against Houston this year — including 0-3 with Olajuwon out of the lineup.

Olajuwon went on the disabled list Jan. 4 with a facial injury. Houston's leader in scoring, rebounding, blocked shots and steals is due back this week. Larry Smith was averaging 4.9 rebounds before Olajuwon's injury; he's pulling down 14.5 per game since then.

In the last 18 games, he has eight games of at least 20 rebounds and has failed to get double-digit rebounds only three times since Olajuwon left the lineup.

Spurs 95, Blazers 88

PORTLAND, Ore. — Willie Anderson scored 25 points and David Robinson added 20 as the Spurs used a tight defense to hand Portland its their third homecourt defeat in 31 games this season.

San Antonio's victory was its first in Memorial Coliseum since Jan. 19, 1986. The Blazers had beaten the Spurs 14 straight times in Portland.

The victory, coupled with Utah's loss at Seattle, moved San Antonio into a virtual tie with the Jazz for first place in the Midwest Division. Portland, which had won 13 in a row at home, had its Pacific Division lead over the Los Angeles Lakers narrowed to 3½ games.

The Spurs, who snapped a four-game losing streak, never trailed in the second half after taking a 46-42 halftime lead.

San Antonio led by as many as 10 in the third quarter and nine in the fourth.

Clippers 129, Nuggets 112

LOS ANGELES — Ron Harper scored 22 points and newly acquired Olden Polynice and Danny Manning each had 19 to lead the Clippers.

Polynice, obtained from Seattle last week, also had 12 rebounds. Charles Smith added 18 points and 13 rebounds for the Clippers.

Lakers 102, Pistons 96

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — A.C. Green scored four his 14 points in overtime, as the Lakers swept their two-game season series with the defending NBA champions.

The Lakers have won 10 of their last 12 games on the road.

It was the Pistons' first loss in five overtime games this season, but they fell to 0-4 in nationally televised games on NBC.

Pacers 115, Celtics 109

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller led Indiana on a 29-14 run that erased a 15-point lead Boston held at the start of the fourth quarter, and the Pacers went on for their sixth straight victory.

SuperSonics 103, Jazz 91

SEATTLE — Sedale Threatt tied his season-high with 30 points and Benoit Benjamin sparked a fourth-quarter burst for the Sonics.

Magic 120, Kings 90

ORLANDO, Fla. — Jerry Reynolds scored 23 points and the Magic extended the Kings' road losing streak to 23 games.

The Magic has won seven of its last 11 games and are one victory short of last season's total of 18 wins.

Knicks 108, Heat 92

MIAMI — Gerald Wilkins scored 21 points, Kiki Vandeweghe had 20 and Patrick Ewing 18 as the New York Knicks beat the Heat.

Rebels have a score to settle

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian took some time to reflect on the final home game for his seniors.

"We'll never have one like this again, I know that," Tarkanian said, referring to senior stars such as Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon and Greg Anthony.

Tarkanian's top-ranked Runnin' Rebels (25-0) closed out their home season Saturday night with a resounding 114-86 win over UC Irvine for their 36th consecutive victory. A crowd of nearly 20,000 stood and cheered for the Rebels as they coasted to another easy victory.

But Tarkanian won't dwell on the past, not with a game Monday night at No. 15 New Mexico State. UNLV lost five games in last year's national championship season and one of the defeats was against the Aggies at Las Cruces.

The Aggies (21-3 overall, 13-2 in the Big West) and Cal State-Fullerton are the only teams standing in the way of an unbeaten regular season for UNLV.

The Rebels beat New Mexico State, 86-74, in Las Vegas on Feb. 16. But the game wasn't as close as the score indicated. The Rebels held the Aggies to a single basket in the first seven minutes, and that was on a goaltending call.

Top 25

Tarkanian fretted at the time that it might be a different story at Las Cruces, where the Aggies always play the Rebels tough. New Mexico State coach Neil McCarthy promised it would be.

Against Irvine, Augmon scored 27 points and Johnson 19. Anthony, who scored 11 points, had 16 assists to set a Big West career mark of 758, 14 more than the previous record. Anderson Hunt added 23 points.

Saturday night's game with Irvine provided an emotional peak for Rebel fans, particularly pre-game ceremonies honoring six seniors, and again midway through the half when Augmon, Johnson and Anthony were pulled from the lineup.

"This was a tough night for all of us," Tarkanian said. "You don't get kids like that very often. Most coaches never get them. I'm just fortunate. You get a group like that once in a lifetime."

Coach Bill Mulligan, retiring at the end of the season after 11 years with the Anteaters, has seen once-in-a-lifetime teams before. He was an assistant at Southern Cal at the start of the UCLA dynasty.

"Some of those players at UCLA couldn't play with these guys," Mulligan said.

He said he doesn't know of a college team that can beat UNLV if the Rebels play up to their potential.

"Ohio State can't, Duke can't either," Mulligan said.

The Rebels led 60-43 at halftime, then went on a 35-7 run early in the second half. UNLV's biggest lead was 103-55 with 8:51 remaining.

Tarkanian drew an intentional technical foul by putting his six seniors on the floor for the opening tip. Other seniors were Chris Jeter, Dave Rice and George Ackles.

Wildcats slip past Blue Devils

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — At the end of regulation, "It looked as though we were in big-time trouble," Arizona coach Lute Olson said.

But two key steals, including Matt Othick's deflection of a pass by Duke's Christian Laettner, helped spur No. 9 Arizona to a 103-96 double overtime victory over the seventh-ranked Blue Devils on Sunday.

With Matt Muehlebach scoring seven points in the second overtime, the Wildcats (22-5) extended their nation-leading home winning streak to 61 games at McKale Center.

Duke fell to 23-6.

"I'd sure like to meet the ghost of McKale," said Brian Williams, who led Arizona with 24 points. "He's definitely got a jinx on somebody."

With Othick's pass deflection, Rooks hit a spinning layup with 3.8 seconds left in regulation for a 78-78 tie, and Chris Mills' 10-foot jumper with 13 seconds in overtime tied it 88-88. Mills missed a 12-footer at the buzzer and the teams played a second extra period.

Rooks, who hit a similar shot to beat UCLA here earlier this season, said, "I wouldn't say that I'm Mr. Clutch. It was a matter of position. I was just fortunate enough to get the ball and score in that situation.

"When we were down at the end of regulation, you're definitely looking at the streak ending. You start to wonder. The way we were shooting free throws, I thought they would catch up with us."

Mills' shot, meanwhile, was a carbon of one he made earlier this season that led to an overtime win at UCLA.

Duke's Grant Hill hit two free throws with 29 seconds left in overtime to put the Blue Devils (23-6) ahead 88-86.

Hill, who scored all but two of his 19 points after halftime, had broken a 65-65 tie with a dunk, then hit consecutive layups, forced a turnover and hit two free throws, and Duke led 76-72 with 47 seconds left in regulation.

Layups by Williams and Wayne Womack tied it at 76-all with 26 seconds left.

Laettner's two free throws gave Duke the edge 78-76 before Rooks' shot forced the first overtime.

The lead see-sawed throughout regulation and the first overtime, with Bobby Hurley's 3-pointer tying it for Duke 86-86 with 1:14 left. Hill's two free throws and Mills' jumper followed.

But in the second overtime, Muehlebach hit a 3-pointer and Arizona never again trailed.

That shot, Hurley said, "was a key basket for them. It gave them the momentum they needed. We weren't able to come up with the crucial play to get us over the hump."

"We have an experienced team," Olson said. "The players did a nice job of keeping their poise. We've won a lot of close games, and it doesn't all come down to luck.

"This was a great game played by two very intense teams. The effort by Duke is what you expect from a great program. It was our court and we had the advantage," Olson said.

"Our guys played really well ... well enough to win," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "The game could have been won by each team a number of different times. It was just a terrific basketball game."

Two of Muehlebach's free throws made it 95-90, and a jam by Rooks put the Wildcats ahead 99-91 with 1:23 to go. Muehlebach's last two free throws with less than 23 seconds left put Arizona ahead 103-93. He finished with 14 points.

Mills added 21 points for Arizona, while Laettner had 26 for Duke.

The Wildcats converted eight of 10 free throws in the second overtime after hitting only 22 of 41 through the first 45 minutes.

Four Duke and three Arizona players fouled out, and Arizona broke its McKale Center record of 48 free throws attempted, set in 1988 against Washington.

In a game rife with postseason seeding implications, Duke's defense nearly proved the difference, causing 16 first-half Arizona turnovers, 21 during regulation and 24 for the game.

But Arizona shot 53 percent, hitting 35 of 66 attempts, while holding the Blue Devils to 40.3 percent shooting (31 of 77).

Michigan's Michael Talley tries to drive past Indiana's Calbert Cheaney during Big Ten action Sunday.

despite playing its reserves for most of the final six minutes with the outcome clearly decided.

Demitrius Calip scored 28 to lead Michigan and Eric Riley had 15.

Indiana, which had lost its last two conference games in double overtime and overtime, never trailed as it capitalized on early mistakes by the Wolverines.

Indiana (23-4 overall, 11-3 Big Ten) led 9-2 as Michigan turned the ball over six times in its first seven possession. Michigan (13-12, 6-8) managed to pull to within three points once but trailed 48-35 by halftime.

Syracuse 89, Pittsburgh 68

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Billy Owens scored 33 points as fifth-ranked Syracuse clinched at least a share of the Big East regular season title.

Syracuse (24-4, 10-4) stormed to a quick 19-5 lead and No. 25 Pitt never came closer than nine points.

A win Tuesday at Villanova or Sunday against No. 25 Georgetown would assure the Orangemen, who have tied for the Big East title four times, their first outright championship. The Panthers (19-9, 8-6) won four of their previous five games.

Oklahoma St. 79, Colorado 67

STILLWATER, Okla. — Byron Houston scored 31 points Sunday, including 10 straight in the second half when No. 16 Oklahoma State pulled away to beat Colorado and move into a tie for first in the Big Eight.

The victory gave Oklahoma State (20-5 overall, 9-3) its first 20-victory season since 1982-83 and only its second in the past 26 years. The Cowboys are tied with Kansas for the conference lead.

It also allowed Eddie Sutton to join Bill Foster as the only coach to win 20 games with four schools. Sutton also did it at Creighton, Arkansas and Kentucky.

Oklahoma State led by 13 at halftime, but the Cowboys went more than six minutes without scoring as Colorado (15-10, 5-7) pulled within 45-43 with 12:39 to play.

Indiana 112, Michigan 79

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Sophomore Calbert Chaney scored 30 points, matching a season high, as No. 4 Indiana kept its Big Ten title hopes alive.

Indiana's 112 points was an offensive high for the Hoosiers this season and the highest yield by Michigan.

Damon Bailey, relegated to reserve status, scored 16 points, Eric Anderson had 15 and Pat Graham 14 as Indiana reached the century mark for the sixth time this season

SPRING: Red relievers still out of training camp

(From 1C)

been given an OK to report one day late in order to fulfill a commitment made before signing with the Red Sox.

In other spring training news on Sunday:

At Sarasota, Fla., Hall of Famer Jim Palmer felt his workout for the Baltimore Orioles went a little better even though he developed a blister.

Palmer displayed increased velocity with his fastball as compared to Saturday, partly because he is working his arm into better shape and partly because of a change in the way he is holding the ball.

"I'm holding it farther out in my hand," Palmer said. "Yesterday, I was gripping it too hard. Now I've got the ball out on my fingertips."

The change was made because of a small blister on Palmer's right thumb. By repositioning the ball, he was able to avoid the blister and continue throwing.

"I can't sustain an injury and make this ballclub so I would go home in a hurry," Palmer said. "But I'm not talking about a blister."

At Plant City, Fla., Cincinnati's Rob Dibble was back at camp, a day after he was sent home for treatment of an upper respiratory problem.

Dibble asked for a new contract or to be traded during the NL playoffs last fall.

Rankin, Hadden win net titles

Johnson loses to Cuban star

KARLSRUHE, Germany (AP) — Ben Johnson was fast, just not fast enough.

Joel Isassi of Cuba eked out a win against the Canadian star as both were clocked in 6.54 seconds in the 60 meters at an indoor meet Sunday.

Officials at the meet in Karlsruhe's Europahalle Sports Center gave Isassi first place after studying photos of the race. The time was announced at 6.49, which would have been only .01 seconds off the indoor record set by American Leroy Burrell in Madrid last weekend.

But the accuracy of the clock used to time the race was questioned and officials revised the time to 6.54 after a long delay.

The surprisingly fast time is Johnson's best since coming off a two-year suspension for use of performance-enhancing drugs that cost him his Olympic gold medal and world record for 100 meters.

The quick race surprised the sellout crowd since Johnson last ran the 60 on Feb. 16 in Toronto in 6.65 seconds.

Johnson has run six races since coming off the two-year supension after he tested postitive for taking drugs at the Seoul Olympics. He has won half of them since starting his comeback in November.

In other results Sunday, world record holder Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union easily won the pole vault, clearing 19 feet, ½ inch.

Earnhardt wins duel

NASCAR

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt and Ricky Rudd had been in this position before.

It was September 1989 at North Wilkesboro Speedway, and the drivers were door-to-door in their battle for the lead on the final lap. But instead of giving each other room and letting engine power and driving skills determine the outcome, they banged together, spun out and handed Geoff Bodine the victory.

The conduct of Earnhardt and Rudd earned the two a private scolding from NASCAR Winston Cup officials.

On Sunday, Earnhardt and Rudd once again were side-by-side as they crossed the start-finish line for the final lap of the Pontiac 400 at Richmond International Raceway.

The talk with NASCAR officials must have worked.

"We had a good last lap of racing," Earnhardt said after holding off Rudd — cleanly — to win the race in a record-shattering pace. "Ricky and I have had some problems on the race track before. Maybe this will set a precedent."

Rudd could remain on his best behavior only so long. When he went to Victory Lane to congratulate Earnhardt, he playfully splashed some Gatorade on the winner.

"I couldn't hit him on the track because he would have hit me back," Rudd said. "So I figured I'd get him like this."

Thanks in large part to just six caution flags that led to only 23 of the race's 400 laps being run under yellow, Earnhardt averaged 104.378 mph in a Chevrolet Lumina. The previous record for a Winston Cup event on Richmond's .75-mile, D-shaped layout was 95.770 mph, by Davey Allison in September 1988.

Earnhardt's victory, the 49th of the defending Winston Cup champion's career, was worth $67,950.

Harry Gant was third, followed by Rusty Wallace, Alan Kulwicki, Mark Martin and Darrell Waltrip, the last driver on the lead lap.

Earnhardt passed Rudd for the lead on lap 255 and gradually built an advantage of more than four seconds.

The four-time Winston Cup champion gave up the top spot briefly when the entire field went through its third and final round of green-flag pit stops. By lap 324, everyone had gotten fuel and fresh tires for the run to the finish and Earnhardt was back up front, this time to stay.

Earnhardt enjoyed a lead of more than three seconds before Brett Bodine brought out the final caution flag when he slammed into the second-turn retaining wall on lap 393.

"It's something that happens in racing. You can't really worry about it," Earnhardt said of having his comanding lead stripped by a caution flag.

When the race went back to green with three laps left, Earnhardt quickly moved about three car-lengths ahead of Rudd's Chevrolet and stayed there for almost two laps.

But as Earnhardt came out of the fourth turn to take the white flag, his car appeared to slide slightly toward the outside and Rudd tapped the rear of the Lumina and jumped down to take the preferred low groove. Rudd pulled even as the cars crossed the start-finish line for the final lap, and he edged the front of his car slightly into the lead.

However, Earnhardt held his line through the first and second turns, and pulled past Rudd as they went down the 860-foot backstretch. Rudd was unable to draw even again, and Earnhardt won by a single car-length.

Yanks take charge to win Chrysler Cup

Seniors

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The U.S. team's lineup was deeper and its scores were lower in the final round of the Chrysler Cup.

Led by Charles Coody's course-record 63, the Americans won 5 of 8 matches Sunday to beat the International team for the fourth consecutive year in the Senior Tour tournament.

"Our guys shot some great scores today," U.S. captain Miller Barber said. "They shot probably some of the best scores that have ever been shot in this competition."

The United States, which had a five-point lead after the first two rounds, won 58.5-41.5. Each match in the final round was worth six points.

The average U.S. victory margin the past four years has been 23 points. International captain Gary Player said his eight-man team has been dominated because of the Americans' superior depth.

"America has too many players to choose from every year," he said. "If we cut it down to a six-man match, we'd have a good chance."

Foreigners Roberto DeVicenzo and Bruce Devlin failed to break par in losing Sunday and were beaten in all three rounds.

The Americans won $50,000 apiece. The Internationals, who have won the cup only once since the tournament began six years ago, each received $25,000.

Coody took home a new car for posting the low score in the final round at the Tournament Players Club at Prestancia. He made seven birdies and an eagle with a 12-foot putt at the par-5 sixth hole on his way to a 9-under-par score.

"Whatever shot you need to play, on a day like I had today, you feel like you can play it," Coody said. "It's a day you don't have very often.

Schulz hopes struggle over after win

PGA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Schulz, who has struggled for most of his pro golf career, believes those hard times are over.

"This tells me I can really play with these guys out here and I have the confidence to go on and have a long career," Schulz said Sunday after winning the Los Angeles Open.

Schulz shot a 3-under-par 68 to beat Jeff Sluman by one stroke.

After parring the final hole to finish the tournament with a 12-under-par 272 total, Schulz watched as Sluman, in the last threesome, missed an 8-foot try for birdie that would have forced a playoff.

Sluman shot a closing 70 at Riviera County Club.

Schulz said he had received a helping hand — or helping hands — from three people en route to his second PGA victory.

He credited Chip Beck, his playing partner the first two days of the tournament, with "changing my attitude."

"I learned a lot from Chip Beck; to put any negative thoughts behind me and to remain positive and just go and hit the next shot," Schulz said.

Schulz said that fellow pro Larry Mize and Bill Tindall, a friend of Schulz's, helped work out the putting kinks.

"I had a good feeling the whole day that I was going to win," Schulz said, adding with a smile, "I'm a little overwhelmed right now."

Sluman, whose only tour victory came in the 1988 PGA Championship, was disappointed with his final round at Riviera.

"I guess I made it a heck of a finish," he said. "I wasn't as sharp as I was the past three days."

Sluman, who watched Bruce Lietzke putt on almost the same line before he tried his birdie putt on the final hole, said he still misread the break.

"I thought I was going to get a read on it, but I was on a slightly different angle than Bruce and I hit it right-center. ... It broke a mile."

Lietzke, Craig Stadler and Davis Love III tied for third, a shot back of Sluman at 274.

Schulz, who needed two years to earn a tour card then lost it after a disappointing rookie season in 1987, was two shots behind Sluman at the turn, as Sluman went to 13-under with nine holes remaining.

But Sluman, beginning the day tied for the lead with Lietzke, shot a 2-over-par 38 on the back nine, including three bogeys.

Schulz, steady if unspectacular, had eight pars and one birdie — on No. 11.

Lietzke shot a 71, including three-putting No. 18, as he slid back into a tie for third. Stadler, starting the round five shots off the pace, trimmed four shots off par on the front nine but cooled down the stretch, including bogeying the final hole. Love shot a 70 to share third place.

Schulz had rounds of 69, 66, 69 and 68 in winning for the second time.

A native of Louisville, Ky., who played one year at the University of Louisville, Schulz turned pro in the fall of 1984, but he didn't make it though the PGA tour qualifying school until 1986.

He earned only $17,838 in 29 events on the tour in 1987 and had to relinquish his playing card. Schulz spent 1988 on the Asian tour, where he found conditions less than comfortable — and also found a new determination to play on the American tour.

Tax policy blamed for rich-poor gap

■ Experts told a Senate committee last week that tax breaks caused the gap between the rich and poor to grow, while others said wage differences between skilled and unskilled labor were more to blame.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal tax policy contributed to the widening gap between the wealth of rich and poor Americans in the 1980s, a group of experts told the Senate Budget Committee on Friday, but they disagreed on how great a role other economic factors played in the inequity.

There was near unanimity that, as the committee chairman, Jim Sasser of Tennessee, put it, the '80s were "the decade when the rich got richer and the poor got poorer."

Robert McIntyre, director of Citizens for Tax Justice, a coalition of labor, public interest and community groups, said "huge tax breaks" for wealthy Americans had stimulated "gross overconsumption" by that sector of society.

At the same time, he said, lower-income families were facing increased tax burdens because Social Security taxes were raised and because states had to raise sales taxes and other taxes to make up for reduced federal aid.

A contrary view was expressed by Marvin H. Kosters, an economist with the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative research and policy group here.

Kosters said tax policy might have had some effect on the distribution of income, but it was a relatively minor element.

The chief factor for the change, he said, was the widening gap between the wages paid to skilled, educated workers and their unskilled, uneducated counterparts.

An important way to close the gap, he said, would be to improve the education and training of unskilled workers.

Tax policies that aim at redistributing income, he said, "are more likely to impair human-capital investment and income growth."

Gary Burtless, a senior fellow of the Brookings Institution, said economic and demographic developments, including the declining demand for unskilled labor and the growing number of single-parent families, "were far more important than direct government policy in explaining the swelling incomes of the affluent and the shrinking wages of the less skilled."

But he added, "Even if the role of government was smaller than sometimes suggested in the press or Congress, I regard it as scandalous that government policy should have played any role at all

Oil continues drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell below $18 per barrel on the futures market Friday to set new lows for the Persian Gulf crisis amid speculation that the fighting was close to an end.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $17.91 per barrel, down 59 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. That was a record-low close for the crisis that began with the invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2. At one point during the trading session oil fell as low as $17.61 a barrel, the cheapest it's been during the crisis.

For the week, crude for next-month delivery lost $2.97 per barrel.

Home heating oil for delivery in March settled at 60.14 cents a gallon, down 1.26 cents for the day and 2.28 cents for the week. Unleaded gasoline for March delivery settled at 59.33 cents a gallon, down .36 cent for the day but up .34 cent for the week.

Natural gas for next-month delivery settled at $1.345 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1.1 cents for the day but down 4 cents for the week.

Catalogue's end?

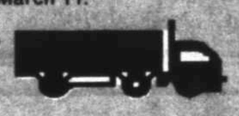

(NYT) — Sears, Roebuck & Co., which recently denied that it had planned to sell or close its catalogue, is "very optimistic" about the operation, but conceded it could be eliminated. The catalogue, the nation's biggest, has been unprofitable since 1985.

Edward A. Brennan, the retailer's chairman and chief executive, said in an interview in The Wall Street Journal Thursday that he did not believe there was anything "fundamentally wrong" with the company's $4 billion catalogue business. But he acknowledged that the catalogue could be closed if efforts to turn it around were unsuccessful.

He declined to say how much time the Chicago-based company was giving the catalogue.

Denton layoff

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Peterbilt Motors Co. said it will lay off 141 workers at its Denton plant by March 11.

The company is slowing production of heavy-duty trucks at the plant. Work will occur there only three days a week until March 8, said manager Bill Doig.

"The order book is so weak right now for Peterbilt products," said spokesman Jack McRae. "It's a reflection of the whole economy."

Peterbilt laid off 195 workers in January. The plant will employ 825 workers when the latest action is complete.

Tool orders off sharply

N.Y. Times News Service

New orders for American-made machine tools plunged 32.4 percent in January from an unusually high level in December, according to a report to be released Monday by the industry's trade association.

Industry analysts said that in addition to being skewed by a year-end surge in orders, the sharp decline stemmed from the weak demand that is typical in the winter months.

The level of orders for new machine tools fell to $199.9 million in January, from the December level of $295.8 million, according to the Association for Manufacturing Technology. The December figure was the highest monthly level for last year.

The level of orders in January was virtually unchanged from January 1990.

"At first glance, January orders look low when compared to the robust December figure," said Albert W. Moore, president of the association, which is based in McLean, Va. "But take a look at January a year ago, and you see a nearly identical first-of-the-year total. In spite of the uncertainty created by the current economy and the war in the Persian Gulf, machine tool orders remained firm."

Machine tools are power-driven devices that cut or shape metal parts used in products ranging from appliances and cars to aircraft and construction materials.

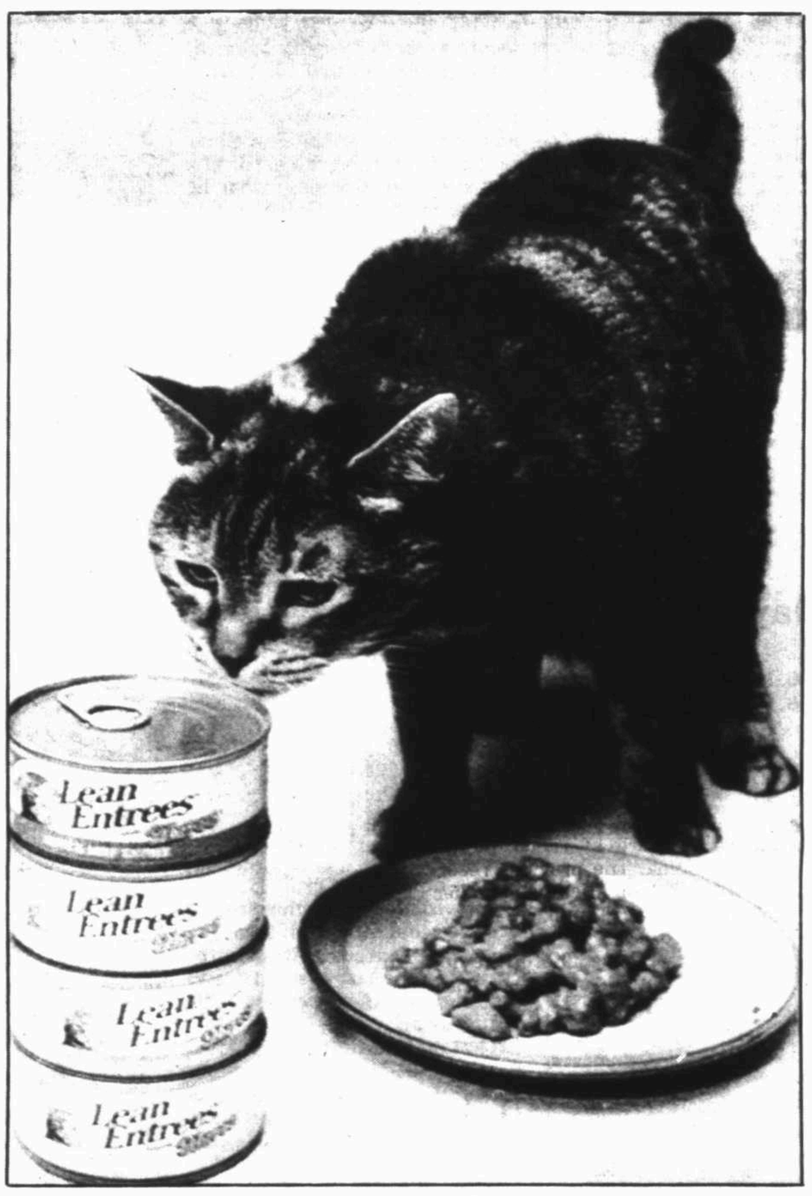

The strength of tool orders generally reflects the strength of industrial production, and economists consider patterns of machine tool sales to be important indicators of capital spending by manufacturers.

Machine tool orders had risen 43.7 percent in December. Analysts attributed that big jump to increased demand from automakers as they began to produce redesigned engines and other auto parts.

"The January decline does not mean too much because December was inordinately strong as a result of new designs being released in Detroit," said William G. Copeland, president of Copeland Economic Group, an economic consulting firm in Stamford, Conn.

"Also, there was so much uncertainty in the marketplace due to expectations about the war in the Persian Gulf, which caused people to hold off on their purchase of new machine tools. People wanted to wait to see how the economy would shape up."

Orders from foreign customers were particularly strong last year, as the depressed value of the U.S. dollar made the prices of American machine tools very attractive in overseas markets.

NCR creates ESOP to fend off AT&T

■ In an effort to muster employee loyalty and help fend off a hostile AT&T bid, NCR has created an employee stock ownership plan that would give control of 8 percent of the stock to employees.

N.Y. Times News Service

In its first tactical step to fend off a hostile takeover attempt by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., NCR Corp. moved Thursday to muster the loyalty of its employees.

It announced it had created a $500 million employee stock ownership plan that could effectively control 8 percent of the company's stock.

The NCR board also approved a special $1 dividend payment to shareholders and set March 28 as the date for the special meeting called for by AT&T to try to remove NCR's entire 13-member board. NCR will also hold its annual meeting on the same day.

The employee stock ownership plan will buy a new issue of 5.5 million shares of preferred stock that will be convertible into about 8 percent of NCR's common stock. NCR said paying for the newly issued stock would not require outside financing.

The establishment of the employee plan will likely prevent AT&T from removing NCR's entire 13-member board at the special meeting, where a vote of 80 percent of the shareholders is needed to replace directors.

While the employees are not required to support management, NCR hopes that by placing more shares in friendly hands, it will receive more votes in favor of retaining its board.

On Wednesday, 24,000 NCR employees were each issued one share of convertible preferred stock. Absent a court order, the employees will be able to vote those shares at the coming shareholder

COMPUTER NOTES

A newer, easier to use DOS hits the market

By Paul H. Pause'

DOS is the disk operating system everybody loves to hate. And yet, most of us depend upon it daily to manage our computing sessions in a productive, efficient manner.

Pause'

DOS version 4.0 was introduced about a year and a half ago, and was immediately replaced by version 4.01. Why? Because the original offering had bugs - programming conflicts - mistakes - that prevented it from working properly.

People stayed away from DOS 4 in droves, for several reasons. First, the 'improvements' it offered over earlier versions (e.g., DOS 3.3), were limited and of little interest to most users. One of the most noticeable changes was the introduction of the DOS Shell.

By now, you've surely heard of one of the latest computer industry buzz phrases - graphical user interface, or GUI (affectionately pronounced 'gooey'). The DOS shell is a rather crude GUI, really nothing more than a simple menu system. The shell supposedly makes it easier to use DOS and run your other programs. It also provides some useful, but limited, file management capabilities.

Personally, I found it too much trouble to set up the shell properly, and much easier, in fact, to just stick with running DOS commands and other programs from the good ol' C: prompt. And for managing files, directories, etc., I stick with programs such as Norton Utilities or PC Tools, which are much more powerful and easier to use than the DOS shell.

Perhaps the single most useful improvement that DOS 4 offered was the ability to manage large hard disks more efficiently. Earlier versions of DOS limited the size of a single hard disk partition to 32Mb. This partition was simply the largest single chunk of hard disk storage space that DOS could access. So, if you had a 40Mb hard drive you had to pretend that you had TWO different drives. You might designate the C: drive as 20Mb and a D: drive for the other 20Mb, for example.

In DOS 4, that restriction was removed. Now, you could have a single C: drive partition up to 512Mb - essentially not a limit at all to those of us with normal hard drives. However, people found that there were other good reasons for partitioning their disks, anyway - file management and security. But, still, it was nice to be able to have a single 40Mb hard disk, or even a 40Mb C: drive and a 40Mb D: drive.

Another reason DOS 4 never became too widely used was the manner in which the program was distributed. Or, rather, how it wasn't distributed. Theoretically, you could only get earlier versions of DOS from computer manufacturers when you bought a new system. (Try to think if you've ever seen DOS, by itself, for sale in your favorite store?). So, 30 million or so people who were using DOS 3 never bothered to upgrade to DOS 4 because to do so would have meant buying a new computer!

Now, we've been starting to see news leaked about DOS version 5. From early reports, this DOS may be worth switching to. For one thing, Microsoft Corp. (that's what the MS in MS-DOS stands for) will apparently begin to sell DOS 5 on the open market, making it readily available to anyone and everyone who wants to upgrade.

DOS 5 will also include some improvements over past versions that are more than just cosmetic. Installing it will be very much easier, almost automatic (hooray!). DOS 5 will be able to use memory above the current 640K limit, at least for some applications. We will probably be able to load part of DOS itself above 640K, thus freeing more conventional memory for use by our other programs.

Another interesting development is that DOS 5 will finally include features that should have been part of the operating system 10 years ago. DOS 5 will probably include an undelete command to recover from accidental file erasures; a move command to save us from the two-step process of copying and then deleting a file just to move it to another disk or directory; and a real full-page text editor so we can finally kiss EDLIN (ugh)

■ Vertical turbine pumps, split casing pumps — A firm in India is interested in purchasing vertical turbine pumps, horizontal split casing pumps and vertical medium and large engineered pumps for thermal power plants, irrigation, water supply and sewerage; fertilizer, cement, sugar, steel, textile, paper, ash handling, chemicals, petroleum industries, oil exploration, mining and dewatering pumps, single phase domestic pumps and four inches submersible pumps. Product specifications: verticle turbine pumps 6 to 33 inches, monoblock pumpsets half hp to 20 hp, submersible pumpsets 6 to 10 inches, vertical hollow shaft motor 10 to 250 hp. Users would be power plants, steel mills, coal mines, textile mills, fertilizerplants, sugar mills, cement mills, paper mills, chemical factories and petroleum refineries, irrigation and water supply and sewerage undertakings. Estimated annual value of 15 million per annum.

Texaco, Oryx plan South Texas pipeline

DALLAS (AP) — Texaco Pipeline Inc. and Oryx Energy Co. have joined together to build a pipeline from the Pearsall Field in South Texas.

The field between Laredo and San Antonio has undergone a resurgence during the past two years with more oil being recovered through the use of horizontal drilling.

"There has been a crying need for an additional pipeline," said Tom Sullivan, a spokesman for Dallas-based Oryx, the nation's largest independent producer.

He said Oryx fields have large storage tanks and employ a "steady string of tank trucks taking oil to refineries" in Corpus Christi, Lytle and Alice.

"We feel there is enough product available to justify another pipeline" in South Texas, said Wayne Donelson of Texaco Trading and Transportation Inc. in Denver.

The companies are now acquiring right-of-way for the $26 million pipeline system, which will eventually be 120 miles long. The first 53 miles of 12-inch mainline will go from the Pearsall Field to Lytle and begin moving oil in June.

The pipeline will be able to carry 90,000 barrels of oil a day. Oryx will move about 20,000 barrels a day, Sullivan said.

NCR: ESOP may bar AT&T removal of board meetings. The unallocated shares in the plan would then be voted in the same percentage as the employee votes cast.

Four NCR directors, including Charles E. Exley Jr., the company's chairman and chief executive, and Gilbert P. Williamson, NCR's president, must stand for re-election at NCR's annual meeting, where only a majority of votes is needed to unseat directors.

In response to AT&T's tender offer, 66 percent of NCR shareholders voted to accept AT&T's offer of $90 a share, making it likely that AT&T will be able to take control of four seats on NCR's board at the annual meeting.

While the stock plan is likely to secure a block of pro-management votes, it also angered some large shareholders who felt NCR had interferred with the coming shareholder votes by issuing new stock.

"This whole thing is a big disgrace," said Alan Greene, managing partner of David J. Greene & Co., an investment firm that owns several hundred thousand shares of NCR stock. "It is an 11th-hour ploy designed to thwart a legitimate merger proposal from AT&T."

AT&T said in a statement that it was going to "press forward" with its takeover attempt. AT&T is expected to challenge the validity of the stock plan in court.

NCR's stock closed up $1.25 a share on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday, to $93.125, indicating that traders expect AT&T to be pressed into making a higher bid for NCR. a computer maker based in Dayton, Ohio. AT&T closed down 62.5 cents to $33.25.

With the dates for NCR's meetings now set for March, stock traders said they felt that a resolution of the takeover battle, which began in December, might be approaching.

"We are playing out the final throes here," said Martin D. Sass, the president of M.D. Sass Investors Services Inc., a large holder of NCR shares.

In an interview earlier this week, Williamson, NCR's president, seemed prepared to be voted off the board. "That is sort of a technicality, frankly," he said. "It won't change the way we run our business one bit."

NCR Thursday asked a federal court in Ohio to declare that the stock plan was "valid and enforceable."

The use of an employee stock plan helped the Polaroid Corporation fend off a hostile takeover offer from Shamrock Holdings several years ago. In a decision in March 1989 supporting the plan's validity, Carolyn Berger, vice chancellor of the Delaware Chancery Court, wrote:

"I remain unpersuaded that the employee stockholders constitute a monolithic block of voters, who, for one reason or another, are constrained to vote with management."

NCR, which is incorporated in Maryland, said it had been contemplating an employee stock plan for several years, a statement that is likely to be challenged in court by AT&T.

Sass, of M.D. Sass Investors, said he expected AT&T to increase its bid shortly and added that the latest defensive measures would not deter the takeover attempt. Sass called the special dividend payment, which will cost NCR about $64.4 million, "a slight, symbolic gesture that does not mean a great deal in the scheme of things."

The cost of the employee stock plan will dilute NCR's per-share earnings by spreading its income over additional shares of stock.

NOTES: Rumors of new version of DOS fly about goodbye!

The evolution of PC operating systems has been fascinating, if frustrating, to watch. DOS 5 will begin to look more like Windows, while Windows begins to look more like OS/2. Some folks think Windows should have been called DOS 5 in the first place. Anyhow, we're seeing a convergence of standards that will apparently see a Windows-like GUI, with the power and features of OS/2, become the operating system of choice for newer, top-end PCs.

DOS 5 may be out in just a couple of months, or sooner. Stay tuned.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

High yield mutuals big investment risk

By Bill Doyle

Q. I placed my individual retirement account money in a "high-yield" mutual fund, at $2.75 per share. Because I reinvested my dividends and capital gains distributions, I eventually owned 18,000 shares. But the price dropped and I redeemed my shares at $2.40.

Doyle

In accordance with your advice, I bailed out and switched my IRA into insured certificates of deposit. I am past age 70 1/2 and am making the required IRA withdrawals.

That mutual fund is now down to about $2 per share, but my broker keeps trying to get me back into it. He keeps insisting it will "come back." I refuse, because I cannot take that risk.

Now, the broker wants my wife, who is 60, to switch her holding into that fund. He says, at her age, she can take the risk. Do you agree?

A. Not unless your wife is wealthy and attuned to gambling. Because high-yield mutual funds hold "junk" bonds with ratings below investment grade or with no ratings at all, those funds carry risks akin to the gaming tables in Atlantic City and Las Vegas.

Unfortunately, junk bonds and high-yield mutual fund shares were peddled to many unsuspecting investors who were happy in blissful ignorance while those bonds paid their promised high interest rates.

Then, as junk bond defaults piled up and interest payments began to dry up, reality set in. Market prices of junk bonds plunged, taking share values of high-yield mutual funds down. As your experience shows, you were lucky to get out of that fund when you did.

Predictions that junk bonds and high-yield mutual funds will come back have been bouncing around for a couple of years. Those forecasts come from brokers and others who have financial axes to grind. They all have been wrong to date and there is no good reason to believe they will be right in the future.

I'm not about to change my long-held opinion that junk bonds and high-yield mutual funds are strictly for speculators and should be avoided like the plague by average investors.

Q. It is my feeling that the large commission on the initial offering of a closed-end bond fund's shares is greedily scooped up by the issuing company and, from then on, they can't lose — no matter what happens to the share price on the open market.

Am I correct?

A. You have things a bit out of whack. A closed-end fund — technically a closed-end investment company — issues shares only once. A group of brokerage firms, acting as investment banks, sells the shares to the public. The commissions — actually "markups" — go to the brokerages, not the issuing company.

From that point on, the brokerages have no direct interest in the closed-end fund's operations.

The management people who run the company collect salaries or fees out of the company's assets. If they don't do their jobs well, they might get fired by the board of directors. But the per share market price of most closed-end funds usually falls below "net asset value" — the actual dollars and cents behind each share.

Q. While closed-end funds are quite risky, no-load open-end funds seem to be better performers. The two in which I own shares rise and fall with interest rates and right now, I could sell them at a profit.

May I have your comments?

A. My feelings are in line with yours. Because true no-load mutual funds have no commission charges and keep operating expenses low, they are natural choices for astute investors.

Just don't get the notion that any mutual fund — load or no-load — holding stocks and/or bonds as investments is free from risk.

TAXES: Worker training would help close gap

(From 5C)

in making the matter worse."

Burtless, too, urged that unskilled workers get more and better training and that schools provide more help to students who are not bound for college.

He also said he thought the issue of income distribution should be directly addressed by reducing government transfers of income to the wealthy, like Social Security and Medicare payments.

He proposed taxing such benefits once they exceeded the payroll contributions made by the recipient.

Sasser said the net worth of the average American family, adjusted for inflation, declined by 3.4 percent between 1984 and 1988, while the richest 20 percent of households saw a 14 percent increase in wealth during the period.

He also cited data showing that the real hourly earnings of the average worker had declined 4 percent since 1982. He added, "That's 4 percent below the low point of the 1982 recession — the deepest postwar recession we've seen."

Sasser said the income disparity was reflected in tax trends during the decade.

The wealthiest 1 percent of Americans, he said, pay a tax rate that is 9 percent below the rate paid 10 years ago because of "the supply-side tax cuts of the 1980s."

"By contrast," he said, "tax rates for 60 percent of Americans have increased."

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., expressed skepticism about the disparity of wealth in the United States, saying that the 1980s had been a time of general prosperity for the nation.

"If you torture numbers long enough they will tell you anything," he said, challenging the statistics.

NATION IN BRIEF

Two towns vie for FBI prize

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — The FBI, armed with 2,000 jobs, is on the most-wanted list of two towns that share their water, their dogcatcher and even a page in the telephone directory.

Clarksburg and nearby Bridgeport are waging a legal battle for the right to annex the FBI's Fingerprint Identification Center, planned for 997 acres of rolling hills that lie between them. There's more than just town pride at stake: There's $3 million in taxes from contractors that will build the center.

"The city of Bridgeport has refused to meet with Clarksburg representatives. The cutoff of communications is regrettable," Clarksburg City Manager Dan Boroff said.

But he added: "The plain fact is the average citizen doesn't give a hoot if the FBI center is in Clarksburg or Bridgeport. They're just glad it's coming to Harrison County."

The issue goes to court Tuesday, when Bridgeport, the smaller of the two towns, will try to block the county commission's expected vote in favor of Clarksburg.

The FBI center, now located in downtown Washington, D.C., is a $200 million prize for Harrison County, a prize won with the help of Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of Senate Appropriations Committee.

'Most Wanted' captured

NEW YORK (NYT) — A 22-year-old man arrested in Brooklyn on Saturday faces charges of killing three police officers in the Caribbean and has been linked to six other slayings, including the killing of a jewelry store manager found in a closet in the Bushwick section, the police said Sunday.

A detective called him the "most wanted" man in Puerto Rico.

The police said the man, Adam Jorge Beniquez, was a "strong suspect" in a total of nine slayings — three in Puerto Rico, four in the Virgin Islands and two in Brooklyn — as well as two attempted murders in Puerto Rico.

A spokesman for the New York City police, Officer Scott Bloch, said, "We're very glad this person has been taken off the street."

When Beniquez was picked up Saturday night in a grocery store in Bushwick, he was carrying a 9-milimeter Uzi semiautomatic weapon loaded with a 30-round clip, Bloch said.

Detectives in Brooklyn began looking last week for Beniquez, a Puerto Rican native, after the authorities in Puerto Rico called to say they had received tips that he was in a particular area of Bushwick.

Sgt. Nick Vreeland, another police spokesman, said officers began stakeouts there.

A police detective in Puerto Rico, Jose Rodriguez, said Beniquez had become the "most wanted man in Puerto Rico today."

Skydiver falls to death

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — A skydiver fell to his death Sunday when his parachute malfunctioned during an attempt to link a world record 160 skydivers in a single jump, police said.

The skydiver, a 27-year-old Tampa man, fell about 5,000 feet, hitting ground in a pasture north of the Deland Municipal Airport about 2:30 p.m., said police Sgt. Tim Mattingly.

The victim, whose name was not immediately released, was among skydivers from Europe, Canada and the United States trying to break the record of 144 jumpers who linked in Illinois in 1988.

It wasn't clear what caused the accident. There was no answer Sunday at the office of Skydive Deland, which organized the event.

The skydivers had about a minute in free-fall from two planes to get in formation and had to hold the formation for three seconds to set the record, said the Federation Aeronautique International, which monitored the attempt.

Abortion clinic damaged

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A clinic that performs abortions was firebombed about two weeks after another clinic was damaged in a similar attack, police said Sunday.

The bomb was thrown Saturday night through a window of Capital Care Women's Center, said police Sgt. Thaddeus Alexander.

One room was gutted by fire and other parts of the building also sustained damage.

The clinic was closed at the time and no injuries were reported.

There was no answer at the center Sunday.

On Feb. 14, the Central Ohio Women's Clinic, which is operated by Planned Parenthood, was firebombed.

Police said they have no suspects in either incident.
