El Salvador reassigns suspected officers

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two former Salvadoran intelligence chiefs linked with death squads have been reassigned abroad following U.S. demands for the exile of officers suspected of involvement with the right-wing terrorist groups.

A government official, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night that Lt. Col. Aristides Alfonso Marquez, former National Police intelligence chief, and Maj. Jose Ricardo Pozo, former Treasury Police intelligence chief, were transferred out of the country.

In another development, U.S. special envoy Richard Stone arrived in San Salvador on Wednesday to meet with President Alvaro Magana and other government officials. Stone was to travel today to Nicaragua to meet officials of the leftist Sandinista government.

As Stone continued his peace-seeking mission, Salvadoran air force planes Wednesday bombed guerrillas positions in northern El Salvador and CIA-backed anti-Sandinista rebels pressed attacks in northern Nicaragua.

The Salvadoran official said Pozo

Kissinger Commission expected to recommend aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kissinger Commission on Central America is expected to recommend that the United States spend $1 billion in economic and military aid over the next several years to help resolve development and security problems in the region, U.S. officials say.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the recommendation will be included in a report the commission will submit to President Reagan next week.

They said the panel, known formally as the National Bipartisan Commission on Central America, is not expected to call for significant departures from the present administration policy toward the region.

The commission, which has a Jan. 10 deadline for completing the report, will suggest that the bulk of the suggested aid package be earmarked for economic assistance, consistent with current policy.

Alluding to the $1 billion aid recommendation, one official said that figure is comparable to what the United States has spent in the region over the past several years.

President Reagan formed the panel last summer, hoping to forge a consensus among liberals and conservatives on policy recommendations that would have broad public and congressional support.

Headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the 12-member commission encompasses a wide range of political opinion. Its members include the former Republican governor of Texas, William P. Clements; San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, a Democrat; former Democratic National Committee chairman Robert Strauss; and AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland.

In gathering information for the report, the panel made two trips to the region and heard testimony from dozens of expert witnesses, including all former presidents and secretaries of state still living.

if action was not taken against the death squads.

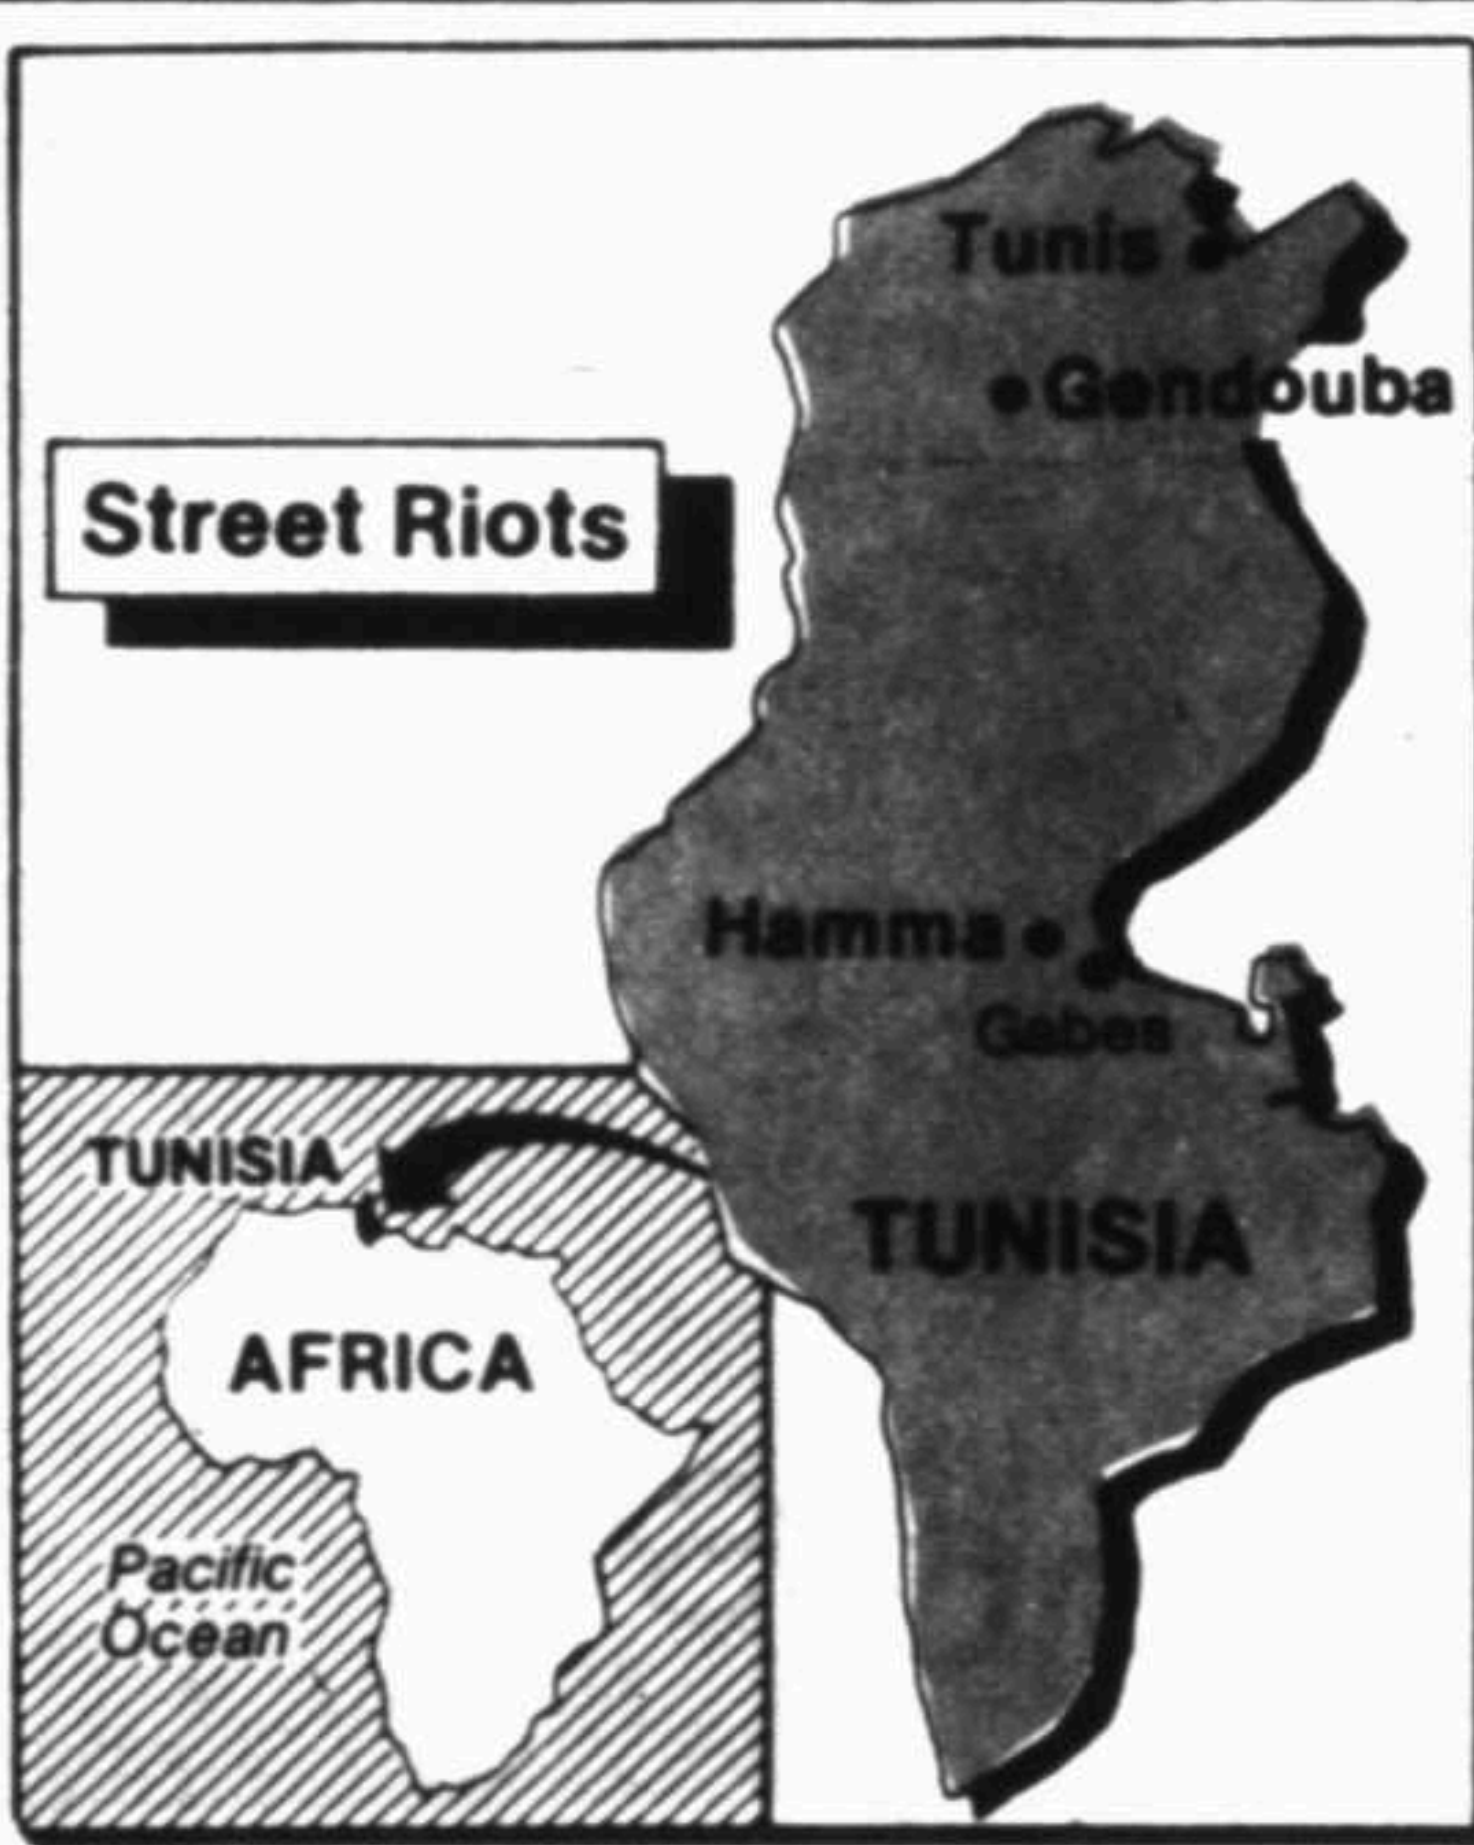

In Washington, the State Department on Wednesday praised El Salvador for recent steps to curb extremist violence within its borders, a move officials described as an attempt to prepare public opinion for an administration request to increase U.S. aid to that country.

Stone, in Honduras earlier Wednesday, said he was hopeful a high-level diplomatic meeting beginning Saturday in Panama may produce concrete steps toward peace in Central America.

Stone praised year-old peace efforts by foreign ministers of the Contadora group — made up of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama — and said Reagan's support for the initiative answers critics who claim Reagan seeks a military solution in the region.

"The situation in Central America is very delicate, very difficult and very risky," he said.

But he said "things may change" after the meeting between the Contadora foreign ministers and their five Central American counterparts.

Tunisian troops, policemen fire as riots resume

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Army troops and police opened fire on rioters in Tunis today as a crowd tried to set fire to one of the city's largest stores. At least three people were wounded.

It was the first report of major violence in Tunisia since Tuesday. Rioting erupted in the southern part of the north African country Dec. 29 after the government announced it was doubling the price of bread and increasing the cost of other basic staples. The violence spread to Tunis on Monday.

Unofficial reports put the death toll from the violence at about 25. The government confirmed four deaths.

The shooting erupted today around the Magasin General, located at the entrance to the old city of Tunis, a labyrinth of narrow streets and stalls that starts at the end of the capital's main street, Avenue Habib Bourguiba.

The security forces used automatic weapons, tear gas grenades and pistols to drive the crowd away from the store. Within minutes, the city center was practically deserted.

Soldiers took up positions on the roofs of buildings in the old city and in neighboring streets. Army helicopters later arrived with more troops and machine-gun vehicles took up positions in the area.

Shopkeepers closed their metal shutters, although some let in people frightened by the shooting.

President Habib Bourguiba declared a state of emergency and a dusk-to-dawn curfew Tuesday, and after army troops moved in to back up police, calm was restored in most areas.

On Wednesday night, the government said widows, orphans, retired people and invalids — those most affected by the price hikes — would receive increased welfare benefits. The amount of the increase was not announced.

Habib Achour, secretary-general of the General Union of Tunisian Workers, the only legal labor organization in Tunisia, said a general strike was possible if the government did not grant "sufficient" compensations for the 115 percent rise in the price of bread and for price hikes affecting other staples.

"It is not excluded that the workers will decide on a general strike," Achour said in an interview with French radio. "The union as an organization did not participate in these riots. To the contrary, it held back its troops waiting for a denouement between the government and the union."

Syrians, Israelis favor Lebanese security plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese officials reported today that Syria and Israel have endorsed a proposal to separate Lebanon's civil war combatants but they said U.S. Marines should stay in Beirut even if the security plan takes effect.

If the plan is implemented, President Amin Gemayel will ask the nations in the multinational force — the United States, France, Italy and Britain — to keep troops in Lebanon in support of the effort to stabilize Lebanon's cease-fire and extend government control, the officials said.

Neither the Syrian nor Israeli governments had immediate comment on the report they had approved the plan.

In southern Lebanon, Israeli occupation forces were attacked three times today, a day after Israel staged its largest air bombardment since it invaded Lebanon in June 1982.

Military sources in Tel Aviv said a grenade was hurled at an Israeli convoy, flattening a tire on one truck but causing no injuries. Earlier, reporters in Sidon said two Israeli soldiers were believed slightly hurt in the attack.

The Tel Aviv military command said a Lebanese man was injured when a mine exploded as an Israeli patrol walked by. And Israeli soldiers safely detonated a grenade that was thrown at them, the military sources said.

Shiite Moslems had vowed retaliation not only against Israel but against the United States in response for Wednesday's Israeli attack, aimed at pro-Iranian guerrilla bases in central Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley.

The state radio said more than 100 were killed and 400 injured in the raid, including many civilians. Searchers hunted today for more victims in the rubble, and residents throughout the area staged a general strike to protest the attack.

"I swear by God that we shall pay back the bill plus interest to Israel and to the American enemies of God who support Israel," said Sheikh Mohammed Mehdi Shamseddin, the acting president of the Higher Shiite Religious Council.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli army spokesman, Lt. Col. Raanan Gissin, said the two targets outside Baalbek were bases for Shiite Moslems who were believed to have launched the suicide attacks on the U.S., French and Israeli army posts last fall.

Jackson capitalizes on success in Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — With applause still ringing in his ears, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is working to transform his personal foreign policy triumph into votes and money for his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The civil rights leader met with supporters Wednesday to plot strategy, planning the next step to follow his successful mission to Syria to free a captive U.S. aviator.

"It's a bit early to evaluate the impact on the campaign," Jackson said of his trip that led to the freeing of U.S. Navy Lt. Robert Goodman Jr. from Syrian captivity. "Obviously, there is an even greater interest in the campaign and by a broader cross-section of people."

Overall, he said, the Syrian mission is a plus for his White House aspirations.

"The war in the Middle East threatens all of America. And so to have a successful mission — that has attached to it national honor and attached to it some reasonable display of skill and acumen — certainly does have some positive effects."

Midlanders killed in mishaps

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Two local residents died in one-vehicle accidents an hour apart early this morning, becoming Midland's first traffic fatalities of the new year.

Killed shortly after 1 a.m. was 23-year-old Guy Alan Schoolcraft of Rt. 7, Midland, an employee of Watts Hot Oil Service on the Garden City Highway.

According to city police, Schoolcraft was driving a 1979 Ford Ranger pickup truck along the south service road of Interstate-20 near the overpass at Cottonflat Road when he lost control of the vehicle.

The truck skidded sideways into a guardrail and became airborne before hitting a concrete pillar of the overpass, shearing off the roof of the vehicle.

It came to rest on the driver's side of Schoolcraft still inside, police said. He suffered head and internal injuries and was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. Schoolcraft's body was taken to Ellis Funeral Home.

An hour after that accident, 21-year-old Suzanne Marie Eaves of 2313 Neely was killed after she lost control of her 1982 Datsun on Highway 80 about seven miles west of town.

Nigerian military government labels democracy 'failure'

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — A radio broadcast by Nigeria's new military government said four years of "experimenting" with democracy was a dismal failure and indicated there will be no quick return to civilian rule.

State-controlled Lagos Radio said "the people themselves have heaved a sigh of relief which in itself is a sign of approval" of the coup Saturday led by 41-year-old Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari.

The radio accused the government of deposed President Shehu Shagari, 58, of using dwindling oil revenues in this petroleum-rich West African nation, the continent's most populous, as an excuse to conceal its own economic mismanagement.

No concessions anticipated

MOSCOW (AP) — With the Soviet Union and United States making no visible progress toward resuming arms control talks, the Kremlin is warning the West not to expect Soviet concessions at the upcoming European security conference.

The conference in Stockholm will include a Jan. 18 meeting between Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Secretary of State George P. Shultz — the first such encounter since the Soviets broke off the Geneva talks on medium-range nuclear arms in November.

But from the first announcement that Gromyko would meet Shultz in Stockholm, the Soviets have been playing down prospects of the talks leading to a significant lessening of tension — unless the NATO allies make conciliatory moves toward the Eastern Bloc.

Five charged in kidnapping

ROME (AP) — Police have arrested and charged five men, including four Sardinian shepherds, with the kidnap of a jewelry company heiress and a teen-age son whose ear was cut off to terrify relatives into paying a ransom.

The fifth man was from the southern region of Puglia, authorities said. A police spokesman said investigations were continuing and two more people could be involved in the abduction.

The five men arrested Wednesday were accused in the Nov. 19 abduction of Anna Bulgari Calisani, 56, of the Bulgari jewelry family, and 16-year-old son Giorgio, who were released Christmas Eve after the ransom demand was met.

The suspects were also charged with illegal possession of arms causing serious bodily harm and theft.

Filipino woman changes story

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Filipino reporter testified today that a woman who initially claimed she saw opposition leader Benigno Aquino being shot retracted her statement after a military officer talked to her.

Rector Mercene of the English-language newspaper Times Journal said the woman, whose name he could not recall, "was sobbing and shaking" at the time she was retracting her statement.

Mercene was among 14 Filipino journalists kept by the military in a section of the Manila airport where they could not see Aquino being taken off the plane upon returning from exile in the United States on Aug. 21.

He was cuffed down while under military custody seconds after he got off the plane. Troopers then killed Rolando Galian, described by the government as a hired gun ordered by communists to kill Aquino.

Burglary charge against Odessan may be dismissed

ODESSA (AP) — A burglary charge pending against John David Dutchover may be dismissed because of leniency extended him by a jury that convicted him of manslaughter last year, a prosecutor says.

Dutchover, 19, is accused of burglarizing a grocery store and taking two cases of beer hours before Juan Carlos Bates was shot to death in October 1982.

A district court jury last September convicted Dutchover and set his punishment at 10 years probation. Several members of the jury then offered to give Dutchover their jury duty pay to help pay his court costs, a move court officials termed "highly unusual."

It was Dutchover's second trial for Bates' slaying. An earlier conviction and 20-year prison term were set aside after District Judge Joe Con-

According to the Department of Public Safety, Ms. Eaves was eastbound about 2:05 a.m. when her vehicle left the highway, struck a sign post, skidded across the westbound lane and burst into flames after overturning in the median between the south service road and the highway.

She was thrown from the vehicle and was pronounced dead of severe head injuries at 3:18 a.m. in Midland Memorial Hospital. Her body also was taken to Ellis Funeral Home.

nally learned jurors during deliberations had considered inadmissible evidence, including statements from witnesses concerning Dutchover's alleged participation in the grocery store burglary.

Ector County Assistant District Attorney Ken Cowling Jr. said Tuesday the burglary charge will likely never reach the courtroom because of the leniency shown Dutchover by the jury.

"We have to have a little respect for what that jury said," Cowling said. "That jury obviously believed in their hearts that probation was best for that young man. And perhaps our office should go ahead and give him the chance to live out the terms of that probation."

The prosecutor said he would either agree to a lenient plea bargain on the burglary charge or dismiss it altogether, contending that prosecuting Dutchover for the burglary "would be an exercise in futility."

"Perhaps it would be a waste of time, effort and money to go ahead and try him and that might give us the appearance of being vindictive. And we don't want to appear that way at all," Cowling said.

Defense lawyer John Smith, says he agrees with the decision not to prosecute.

"The jury has spoken and I think they need to respect that jury's opinion," Smith said.

Testimony in the trial concerning the Bates slaying showed that Dutchover, Bates and another man were arguing at the time Bates was shot. Dutchover said Bates lunged at him before the shot was fired.

Flooding follows melting snow

By The Associated Press

Flooding from heavy rains and runoff from snow melted by record warm weather chased hundreds of people from their homes and isolated some towns in the Pacific Northwest today as volunteers filled sandbags to hold back the cascading rivers.

Washington Gov. John Spellman declared a state of emergency throughout the state late Wednesday as floodwaters washed through some homes waist deep.

Across the Canadian border in British Columbia, where 6 inches of rain fell in 24 hours, about 300 to 400 people were evacuated along the Similkameen River and rockslides and washouts closed two major highways leading to Vancouver.

Flood warnings were in effect today for seven western Washington rivers and for a creek near Spokane.

In Whatcom County, the Lummi Indian Reservation north of Bellingham was cut off from overland access Wednesday and water ran a foot deep down the main street in Everson, on the Nooksack River. County Department of Emergency Services coordinator Bill Bennett estimated that several hundred county residents had moved to higher ground by early today.

Bennett said about 35 sandbaggers worked overnight to beef up a levee on the Nooksack in the Ferndale-Marietta area, near where the river enters Bellingham Bay. He said officials were concerned because the river was forecast to crest today.

Bennett said there was 2 to 3 feet of water in several homes in the area.

In adjacent Skagit County to the south, about 40 people were evacuated in and around the town of Concrete.

Washington shivered under record cold temperatures during the week before Christmas, but that gave way earlier this week to a warm chinook wind that melted Cascade and Olympic mountain snowfields.

In British Columbia, Vancouver was cut off from the interior of the province when the high water and slides closed the Trans-Canada Highway and Highway 7 west of Hope, and Highway 3 east of Hope on the Fraser River.

Helicopters rescued several people stranded near Hope, and a truck drove through water almost 3 feet deep to pick up an elderly woman and her possessions. Officials said six homes were destroyed or heavily damaged in the Hope area.

In Washington, floodwaters from the Nooksack closed Washington 542 at Black Mountain Road, isolating the towns of Glacier and Maple Falls. Also closed were Washington 9 at Acme, Washington 540 near Bellingham and Washington 544 near Everson.

Neil Clement of the Whatcom County Department of Emergency Services said 6 1/2 inches of rain fell at Deming in a 24-hour period ending Wednesday.

Interstate 5 was reopened to normal traffic Wednesday night at Alger in Skagit County after high water resulted in a temporary detour, state Transportation Department officials said.

Washington 20, the North Cascades Highway, was closed by rockslides and high water in Skagit and Whatcom counties. However, officials said emergency vehicles were able to get past the blockages early today.

A rockslide about 50 feet deep and 300 feet long blocked the road two miles east of Newhalem, stranding about 50 people in the Seattle City Light company village of Diablo.

High water closed nine roads in low-lying areas of the Snoqualmie Valley in King County east of Seattle.

At 6 a.m. Wednesday, the 60-degree temperature in Seattle was the highest in the nation, the National Weather Service said. Seattle's reading also was a local record for the date, beating 55 set in 1969, and Olympia's 59 surpassed the old high of 53 for the day in 1958.

In eastern Washington, high water closed Washington 127 to all vehicles except semi-trailer rigs between Dusty and Dodge in the southeast corner of the state.

High water and mud also closed numerous secondary roads in Whitman County.

Long freeze may damage Texas lawns

DALLAS (AP) — Get out your garden hoses and leave the pruning shears in the garage.

That's the advice from Texas A&M University specialists are giving to homeowners across North Texas who fear their lawns, shrubs and ornamental plants may have been damaged by the prolonged period of sub-freezing temperatures during late December.

Dr. William Knoop said some grass, mainly St. Augustine, may have to be replaced.

Knoop said he believes most Bermuda grass probably survived, but said the prolonged periods of sub-freezing temperatures may have killed much of the St. Augustine grass.

Homeowners should start watering their grass as soon as the ground is thawed, he said.

"Take a screwdriver and punch it into the ground to be sure the ground is thawed. If it is thawed, give the lawn a good watering," he said. "It doesn't make sense to water frozen soil."

Additional damage can result if the soil moisture level is not good, he added.

Persons with lawn irrigation systems that are not buried deep enough, at least 6-8 inches, may discover that their pipes were frozen and the systems were severely damaged and may have to be replaced, Knoop said.

The systems would probably not be damaged, he said, if the owners were able to drain them before the onset of freezing weather. Some systems, he noted, do not have such drains.

Dr. Marty Baker, an extension horticultural specialist for Texas A&M, says homeowners should immediately start watering shrubs, trees and ornamental plants.

Cold weather in the Columbia River Gorge leaves a veil of ice around Latourell Falls near Bridal Veil, Ore. The Columbia River Gorge Scenic Highway, cleared of snow slides, is now open to traffic.

Only one county heeds warning

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Just one county responded with sirens and alerted police when an emergency attack warning was transmitted accidentally, but at least 12 others called in and were told the message was a mistake, a spokesman said.

Lehigh County apparently was the only one to trigger its blaring sirens and notify police, fire and ambulance companies, said Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency spokesman John Comey.

"I frankly question why the others didn't do the same thing," said County Civil Defense Director Jerry Duckett.

"We're not going to spend 15 minutes trying to verify something in Harrisburg when, in this day and age, you only get 15-20 minutes warning before a nuclear attack. There is no procedure for verifying it with Harrisburg."

Duckett said he received no calls from Lehigh County residents about the sirens and complained that "apathy is such, even when the public hears the sirens, I don't know what percentage would take cover anyway."

Comey said his agency's regional office "called some counties to tell them it was a mistake. There was a lot of information coming and going, so we won't know until the end of the week how each county reacted."

"These people have had a lot of training. We don't think they just set aside a message like that," he said.

The attack warning was sent by mistake as technicians for American Telephone & Telegraph were working on the new computer system used by the emergency agency and trying to copy the warning message in the system to give it to the state police. Comey said the technicians sent out a "disregard" message a couple of minutes after the original warning.

"There was definitely no excitement. No equipment was dispatched. It just didn't get to that point," said a spokesman who identified himself only as police dispatcher 2 in Allentown, a city of 103,000 in eastern Pennsylvania.

Charles McGill, director of emergency management in Bucks County, was one of those who called to verify the attack warning. "When I saw it on the new computer system but not on the old teletype, I had a hunch something was wrong," he said.

"Under the circumstances, with the new system going in, we took (the warning) with a grain of salt," said Nick Tyland, coordinator for emergency management in Northampton County, which borders Lehigh. "We got right on the horn to Harrisburg."

The message went to 44 county civil defense offices. The other 23 counties did not receive the warning because they are not yet connected to the new computerized system.

Man's 'Goldilocks' story no fairy tale

CAPE CORAL, Fla. (AP) — Frank Steiner says someone has been sitting in his chair.

And someone has been eating his food, wearing his clothes and using his shower for the past nine weeks.

But the strange Goldilocks story hasn't had a fairy-tale ending. In fact, Steiner says, it's getting to be more than he can bear.

Since November, an unknown intruder has been making as many as three uninvited visits a week to Steiner's apartment, entering when Steiner is at work and leaving the place a mess, he said.

Steiner said he's reported the intrusions to a somewhat baffled police department and has requested routine patrols past the apartment.

"It's real weird," Lt. Richard Brown of the Cape Coral police said today. He admitted that officials were "a little bit skeptical at first," but added they now believe Steiner's report.

Brown said police weren't sure if the goings-on were harassment or merely a prank.

"It's gotten to the point where I don't keep food in the house," Steiner said. "I'm trying to starve them out."

The strategy could be working. Steiner says the rate of visits has dropped to about one a week.

Each of the intrusions has taken place between 4 p.m. and midnight while Steiner, a corrections counselor, is at work at the Fort Myers Correctional Center.

"They came in through the front door last night," he said Wednesday. "When I got home my key got stuck in the door (lock)."

During one break-in, he said, the intruder cooked a pair of steaks left out on the kitchen counter to thaw, and "left the kitchen a disaster."

On other occasions the intruder has settled for canned or frozen food, Steiner said.

The intruder frequently has used his shower and then changed into Steiner's clean clothes, leaving dirty clothing behind in a heap. Wet towels often are discarded on the bathroom floor, and soap and shampoo spilled in the shower, he said.

"At first I thought the clothes were stolen," he said. "But they would turn up a week later."

"I have a stereo and a VCR ... they never touch money, the quarters or pennies that are on the table," he said.

Hearing today in Mobil Oil suit

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Attorneys representing Mobil Oil, Exxon Corp., millionaire rancher Clinton Manges and the State of Texas faced a hearing today on a $1.7 billion lawsuit.

Visiting Judge George Miller set today's hearing for 10 a.m. after rescheduling the hearing five times Wednesday on the suit filed by Manges against Mobil.

The state, Manges and Mobil had reached an agreement by 9 a.m. Wednesday, the hearing time originally set by the judge, who must approve a settlement. But throughout the day, attorneys emerged from meetings to ask the judge for more time to work out a deal.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, at an impromptu noon news conference in the lobby of the hotel where the meetings were taking place, told reporters that the agreement was being held up by Exxon Corp.

Eight hours later, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro admitted "we have come to an impasse. We will now pull apart and try to figure out what Exxon wants."

Mauro said Exxon was "flying down a decision maker," possibly the company's chief counsel, before this morning's hearing to assist in the negotiations.

"We expect to be ready" for the hearing, Mauro said.

But Cleo Haston, one of two attorneys representing Exxon, wasn't quite so optimistic.

"We're going to be spending a lot of time tonight in hopes of meeting the judge's time schedule before he gets away tomorrow," Haston said. "But it's going to be a long night. We have a lot of work to do."

Haston declined to provide details on the stumbling blocks preventing a settlement from being reached.

1984's horror

Yes, it is 1984, but watching over one's shoulder for signs that George Orwell's vision of the future is coming to pass may only shield one from the true "Big Brother" danger.

What is that danger? A fall back into old economic ways and a return to the tax and spend tendency of past administrations.

Oh, the economic picture isn't rosy by any means. Not with a forecast economic slowdown in the nation and looming federal deficits which are bound to further undermine the country's economic strength.

But look at what Fortune magazine said recently about the economic future:

"So the U.S. economy is headed for a slowdown. The Reagan Administration and all the forecasters say so. But it still has a lot of kick left. After a hot first year of recovery that exceeded expectations, Fortune looks for growth to cool down from 6.5% to 4.7% — still a full percentage point faster than usual in a recovery's second year."

The article goes on to note that "Since World War II, peacetime expansions have lasted an average of 34 months. If that pattern is repeated, the next recession would begin in 1985."

But, says the magazine, a recession isn't inevitable. It can be avoided or postponed "but not without political courage in Washington."

"At least until something is done to cut the budget deficit, and perhaps even after such a long-awaited action, interest rates would move up. The Fed would try to avoid a crunching rise in short-term rates, but a bad case of nerves could push up long-term rates rapidly. Adept action on the budget early in 1985 could prevent a recession-inducing bulge in rates, but it is also possible that 1985 will be too late."

Yes, we know Big Brother is watching. But is he listening?

Stepping backward

Longview Christian Academy — a Baptist school in East Texas — isn't going to let its basketball team play the team from Cistercian Preparatory School in Irving anymore.

Stan Kiefer, the Longview school's basketball coach, explained why:

"We didn't know they were Catholic. We played them when we had a broader philosophy. Now we are just going to play Baptist schools."

Well. We were always under the impression that mankind was charged with seeking ways to increase understanding of his fellow man and to look for methods of drawing people closer together instead of pushing them further apart. The sports arena has long been recognized as a place wherein individuals can lay aside their prejudices and differences, and improve their understanding of one another.

There have been centuries of progress at reducing the gap between the denominations. This latest incident shows how far some individuals have progressed.

Another View:

Can you top this?

The Department of Agriculture, not previously known for its enthusiasm for consumer regulation, has gone to bat on behalf of — are you ready? — pizza aficionados.

Until now, manufacturers of pizzas made with meat could — and, judging from the taste, sometimes did — package anything that wasn't 100 percent cardboard and call it pizza, provided only that the meat passed USDA inspection. Meat pizzas can be left untopped, and if any topping is used, only 10 percent must be real or artificial cheese. (As the bureaucratic lines are drawn, meatless pizzas fall in the domain of the Food and Drug Administration, which requires only that cheese substitutes be clearly labeled.)

The USDA has recently decided to get tough. It has proposed a requirement that every frozen pizza made with meat have at least 12 percent cheese topping; what's more, half of that topping must be real cheese.

Pizzas seem a dubious candidate for federal intervention, the taste buds of consumers being a fairly reliable guide in such gustatory matters, but what really motivates the administration is pork-barrel politics, not pizza. Dairy farmers have pushed this policy, for it creates a new market for their product and so would ease the dairy overproduction problem.

But the dairymen aren't the only ones with a stake in the issue. Pizza-makers are hollering "foul," claiming that the rule would cost them millions and sabotage the imitation cheese industry. The USDA, barraged with more than 2,000 cards and letters, has postponed a final decision. Can the great pizza controversy be settled in an election year? Stay tuned.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Pentagon peddling half-truths

WASHINGTON — In their insatiable hunger for fancy hardware and ever bigger budgets, the Pentagon's people are not above juggling the facts and figures when they testify behind closed doors on Capitol Hill.

A favorite tactic is to give key members of Congress secret, selective intelligence on new Soviet weapons, intended to scare the lawmakers into signing a blank check for matching U.S. weapons. The weapons "gaps" thus revealed can only be bridged by the expenditure of billions of dollars.

It's an axiom of this technique that Congress should rarely be told anything that makes the Soviets seem less than 10 feet tall. Reversing the words of an old song, the Pentagon fund-seekers accentuate the negative and eliminate the positive.

My associates Dale Van Atta and Donald Goldberg have uncovered a classic example of this misleading Pentagon practice, involving the Russians' new Alfa class attack submarine. From secret documents and intelligence sources, it appears that the Alfa is a most formidable sub. But without actually lying — simply by not telling the whole truth — the admirals have greatly inflated the Alfa's actual danger.

For example: — The Alfa is the fastest submarine ever made, with a maximum speed of 42 knots on the surface and 45 knots underwater. It can outrun not only the fastest U.S. subs, but the Navy's surface ships as well. The Pentagon doom merchants cite an ultra-secret intelligence report that tells how an Alfa sub showed off once doing figure-eights behind a Navy battle group.

But what the Pentagon experts conveniently play down is the fact that, while our fastest subs are as quiet as sharks, the Soviet Alfa is one of the noisiest vessels ever to churn through the ocean. It's the underwater equivalent of a hot rod without a muffler. In fact, the Alfa can be detected acoustically more than 1,000 miles away, which means it could hardly sneak up on an enemy target.

Furthermore, at anything over 20 knots, the Alfa's own engine noise would drown out the target's noise. Submerged subs are blind; a submerged Alfa is also deaf at high speed. And though it could outrun U.S. attack vessels, it couldn't escape the Navy's anti-submarine planes and helicopters.

The Alfa can dive down to 3,200 feet, compared to the U.S. Los Angeles-class subs' maximum depth of less than 2,000 feet. But the reason for running deep is to avoid detection, and here again the Alfa's hot-rod noise betrays it. In addition, the Alfa can't go as far or stay out of port as long as U.S. subs can.

The Alfa's lighter, stronger titanium-alloy hull is what enables it to go faster and dive deeper. The Soviets were first to develop the technology of welding titanium hulls — reportedly at the cost of several workers' lives. Besides being lighter and stronger than steel, titanium is also non-magnetic, which means the Alfa is virtually invisible to magnetic detection devices. But it can still be easily picked up by acoustical detectors.

Though select congressmen are told in ominous, whispered detail of the Alfa's success, they are not told that the sub was a colossal flop when the first one was launched in 1969. After sea trials in 1971, the first Alfa was scrapped. It wasn't until 1978 that the supposed super-sub achieved operational capability. And technical difficulties still plague the Alfa.

Footnote: Significantly, for all their purported alarm over the Alfa submarine, the admirals have never suggested that the United States build one like it.

CONFLICT OF THE WEEK: Former President Nixon's son-in-law, Edward Cox, left his job as general counsel to the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. last July to join the law firm of Reid and Priest in New York. One of his new employer's clients is Middle South Utilities, which has applied to the Synfuels Corp. for a subsidy on a co-generation facility that will use natural gas derived from coal.

And guess who one of the attorneys is working on Middle South's application to Synfuels? Right: former Synfuels general counsel Cox. He should have a certain expertise on the legal niceties of a Synfuels application.

Is this a conflict of interest? You or I might think so. Federal regulations forbid a former government employee to represent a client on matters with which he was directly involved while working for Uncle Sam.

But the key word is "represent," and the regulations define this narrowly to mean actually appearing before or communicating with the federal agency involved. And Cox has scrupulously avoided this direct contact. Behind-the-scenes work for his law firm's client doesn't count, so technically he's in the clear.

IMELDA AND THE GRINCH: The Philippines' straitened financial situation put a damper on first lady Imelda Marcos's Christmas. In the past, her extravagant yuletide shopping sprees in New York enriched the most fashionable couturiers and boutiques on Fifth Avenue. But with her country begging for handouts from the International Monetary Fund and other credit sources, Mrs. Marcos was obliged to restrain her conspicuous-consumption impulses this year and forgo the New York shopping expedition. She might have run into a nosy reporter — or an international banker's wife.

GEORGE F. WILL

Afghan winter of pain lingers

WASHINGTON — The small, torn fragment of dull-green plastic does not arrest the eye or arouse the imagination — until it is explained. Then it is mesmerizing evidence of the Soviet regime's essence: unfettered brutality.

The plastic is from the casing of an anti-personnel mine used in Afghanistan. But the term "anti-personnel" suggests traditional usages of war: It suggests that the personnel against whom the mines are used are military. Actually, the intended victims are civilians, and often children. The mines are especially dreadful because they are not meant to kill, at least not instantaneously.

They are scattered by the hundreds of thousands — greenish vegetation, brown in arid areas, white in snow — near villages. They are designed to blow off a foot or lower leg. Occasionally they do more: One man's foot was blown off and as he fell his hand hit another.

These weapons of indiscriminate yet limited violence express a military strategy of unlimited war by the world's largest army against an entire population. The mines are designed to maim — or to kill lingeringly. Soviet tacticians know that wounded persons are a drain on the community because of the constant care they require. Lethal infections often result, so the Soviet tactic demoralizes everyone exposed to the hideous suffering of victims, and especially children, dying from gangrene, staphylococcus or gram-negative septicemia.

Such savageries are the subject of an article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs. The author, Dr. Claude Malhuret, is executive director of Medecins sans Frontiers (Doctors Without Borders) and has been one of the 162 physicians and nurses rotated in and out of Afghanistan, managing hospitals. Because the MSF people are among the few foreign witnesses of the war that world journalism has largely forgotten, their hospitals have been bombed by Soviet planes. But MSF people have seen enough to substantiate Malhuret's thesis, which is:

The Soviet regime has analyzed various failures, including America's, in counter-guerrilla warfare and has concluded that the key to success is a kind of ruthlessness that only a totalitarian regime will practice. Guerrillas succeed, as Mao said, with the aid of the local population, in which they live like fish in water. American, British and French strategies were aimed at winning the allegiance of the water — the population. Soviet strategy is to kill the fish by draining the water.

Reprisals, exterminations and other tortures are so unrelenting that much of the population leaves and that which remains is immobilized by physical and emotional traumas. Twenty-five percent of the Afghan population of 1979 is now in Pakistan and Iran. Hundreds of thousands are refugees within Afghanistan.

As Malhuret says, this ocean of suffering is not the intended consequence of a war's unavoidable collateral effects. It is the bitter fruit cultivated by Soviet strategy. "This does not involve a warm bath cold shower tactic, but the exclusive use of boiling water — again and again and again, until both the guerrilla fighters and the population ask for mercy."

Today the United States should be supplying Afghanistan's freedom fighters with as many hand-held rockets as they can use — the kind that can bring down helicopters. Soviet forces, having declared all Afghans of all ages to be enemies, live by helicopters that supply their isolated garrisons — and sow the landscape with mines.

The sowing is so thick that it is common to see goats and cows wearing bamboo splints tied with wires. Not content with causing random suffering among those who do not watch their step, Soviet forces booby-trap household artifacts, such as clocks, in villages they sweep through. They also scatter booby traps made to resemble pens or red toy trucks. "Their main targets," says Malhuret, "are children, whose hands and arms are blown off."

Malhuret denounces the "negligence" of the news media. He says that if organizations like MSF can maintain a constant presence in four provinces, in spite of violent Soviet opposition, the world's powerful news organizations could do as much.

The Red Army has now been engaged against the freedom fighters longer than it was against the German Wehrmacht. But what is being done in Afghanistan in 1984 is more akin to the Ukrainian genocide of 1933. Then, as now, Soviet ruthlessness prevailed, and the West's denial reflex kept the unpleasant business out of most minds.

But one mind understood. George Orwell said that if you want to imagine the future, imagine a boot in your face — forever. The future came to Afghanistan four winters ago.

Commission report not hot air!

Because of all the publicity concerning the hunger problem in the United States, little attention has been paid to the freezing temperatures that have engulfed the nation.

The Safety Net Task Force on Cold Weather has just issued its report on this year's winter. The commission was set up because there was no statistical information as to how many needy cold people there were in America, and whether present administration policies were adequate to take care of those who were really freezing, as opposed to free-loaders who could afford to stay out of the cold.

Commission members, all from Southern California, said that the cold weather problem in the United States has been "exaggerated by the media, and that television in particular had played a role in making this year's winter much colder than it really is."

There are cold pockets in the United States," the report said, "but there is no evidence to conclude that it is nationwide and that freezing temperatures are affecting the poor. Most people suffering from frigid weather are those who can't afford to pay their fuel bills or are homeless. The Reagan administration cuts have not affected them, and the majority of these people are warmer today than they were in 1980."

The task force report went on to say: "There has been a constant drumbeat in the press and on television pointing out that temperatures in this country have been the lowest since 1872. Most of the reports on television have shown people suffering in Montana, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Duluth, to the exclusion of those in Key West, Fla., and San Diego, Calif., where the weather has been glorious. By only reporting where the weather is bad, and not where it is good, the impression left in the TV viewers' minds is of the entire country suffering from an extraordinarily harsh winter."

In a chapter devoted to wind chill figures, the report states that "When Mr. Reagan took over from President Carter the wind chill factor in the United States was plus 18 degrees. The Reagan administration has reduced it to minus one, and in some parts of the country minus 25, the lowest in almost a century."

By lowering the wind chill rate, the president has provided more jobs for everyone. Anybody who wants to shovel snow can now get work. Auto body repair shops are hiring people once again, gas companies report their best season ever, road salt sales have quadrupled, and people slipping on ice have pushed medical and hospital profits to record levels. The trickle-down effect from the cold weather will give the economy the best boost it has had in years. Every segment of the population stands to gain by freezing temperatures."

The task force report went on to say: "We found in our investigation that most complaints about the winter were politically motivated by people opposed to President Reagan's weather policies, or whose pipes had burst because of the freeze. There is no hard and fast evidence that the extreme cold weather has any relation to mass sheltering in the United States. Government programs now in place are sufficient to provide every person who really needs it with heat."

Therefore we are making the following proposals to see that the heat cheaters are taken off the government rolls:

Applicants for supplemental fuel must prove they have burned all the furniture in their house before becoming eligible for federal fuel allowances.

"People sleeping on grates who are getting their heat for free from subway systems will no longer be admitted to government temporary shelters."

Workfare programs should be set up for those people who apply for free outerwear and gloves to get them through the winter.

"A surcharge should be placed on soup kitchens, and the revenues from them should be used to pay for research on why poor people are colder in the winter than they are at any other time of the year."

The task force concluded that "freezing weather is not a serious problem in the United States and there are a lot less icicles in peoples' homes than the American people were led to believe."

Mobile home salesman identified as member of radical group

FORT WORTH (AP) — Until the FBI arrested him a few days ago, his neighbors either didn't know him at all or thought he was Shamus McKillip, a mobile home salesman.

But the FBI says he is James William Barrett, 45, whom they identified as a suspect in the 1975 robbery of a Maine bank and a member of a radical group responsible for several bombings in Boston and New York in the 1960s and 1970s.

U.S. Magistrate Alex McGlinchey on Wednesday denied bond for Barrett and ordered him to remain in federal custody in the Tarrant County Jail until an extradition hearing Jan. 11.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Sheehan said he asked the magistrate to deny bail because of Barrett's eight-year history of eluding authorities.

Barrett, along with Raymond Luc Levasseur and Thomas William Manning, who also have been linked to ## state

the same radical group, were indicted in 1977 on charges of robbing Northeast Bank of Westbrook in Portland, Maine, on Oct. 4, 1975.

said James W. Greenleaf, FBI agent in charge of the bureau's Boston division.

Levasseur and Manning are on the FBI's 10 most-wanted list and also are suspects in the robbery of an Augusta, Maine, bank on Dec. 12, 1975.

Greenleaf said Manning has been indicted in the Dec. 21, 1981, killing of a New Jersey state trooper, and Levasseur is wanted for questioning in the killing.

Barrett was arrested Sunday without incident as he walked his dog near his apartment. LaDonna Hughes, manager of the apartment complex where Barrett was living, said the FBI had asked her not to comment about her tenant.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram said most of the neighbors it contacted said they didn't know McKillip or Barrett.

Barrett, alias McKillip, had lived in Fort Worth since September and was working as a mobile home salesman, Greenleaf said.

Houston police officer appeals his firing

HOUSTON (AP) — An officer, who is accused of pointing a gun at a handcuffed woman and pulling the trigger on an empty chamber, has appealed his firing.

Monroe H. Gage, 28, asked the Houston Civil Service Commission Wednesday to review his dismissal after the June 28 incident.

Gage denies pointing the gun at the woman. But Police Chief Lee P. Brown wrote the commission that an Internal Affairs investigation found that Gage's account differed from that of four fellow officers.

Brown's letter said Gage and his partner were called to a northeast Houston address to help other officers find a revolver a woman had fired, then discarded.

The woman, Dorothy Mathes, was handcuffed and put in a patrol car. An officer found the gun in bushes and handed it to Gage, who unloaded it.

Brown wrote that when Ms. Mathes denied that the gun was hers, Gage said, "Here's how you make the bitch talk" and "Wonder if it's loaded."

He then pulled the trigger, causing the gun to click, Brown wrote.

Gage's attorney, D. Reid Walker, said his client maintains he did not point the gun at Ms. Mathes nor refer to her with an obscenity.

Woman testifies she found 'best friend's' body

HOUSTON (AP) — A university student told a jury she knew her best friend was dead as soon as she and a deliveryman found the bodies of three other arcade employees early July 1. Naghmeh Naghavi, 18, took the witness stand Wednesday, the first day of the trial of Richard James Wilkerson, 19. Wilkerson is charged with capital murder in the stabbing death of 18-year-old Anil Varughese, whom Miss Naghavi called her best friend.

Miss Naghavi, a pre-med student at the University of Houston, testified she went to the building because she saw Varughese's car outside long after he should have been gone.

She said she asked a deliveryman who arrived about the same time to check the men's room of the Malibu Grand Prix arcade and miniature car race track.

"He opened the door just a little bit and said there was blood on the floor and a body," Miss Naghavi said. She said she went in to look.

"I saw three bodies instead of one," she said, and her friend was not among them. The three, all young men who worked at the business, had been stabbed to death.

Miss Naghavi said she told police "Anil had to be dead because his car had been there all night."

Just as she expected, she said, Varughese's body lay inside his office. "I could only see from his toes up to his waist. And then one of the policemen took me outside so I wouldn't see his body," she testified.

Jurors also heard a six-page statement which Wilkerson gave to detectives after his arrest.

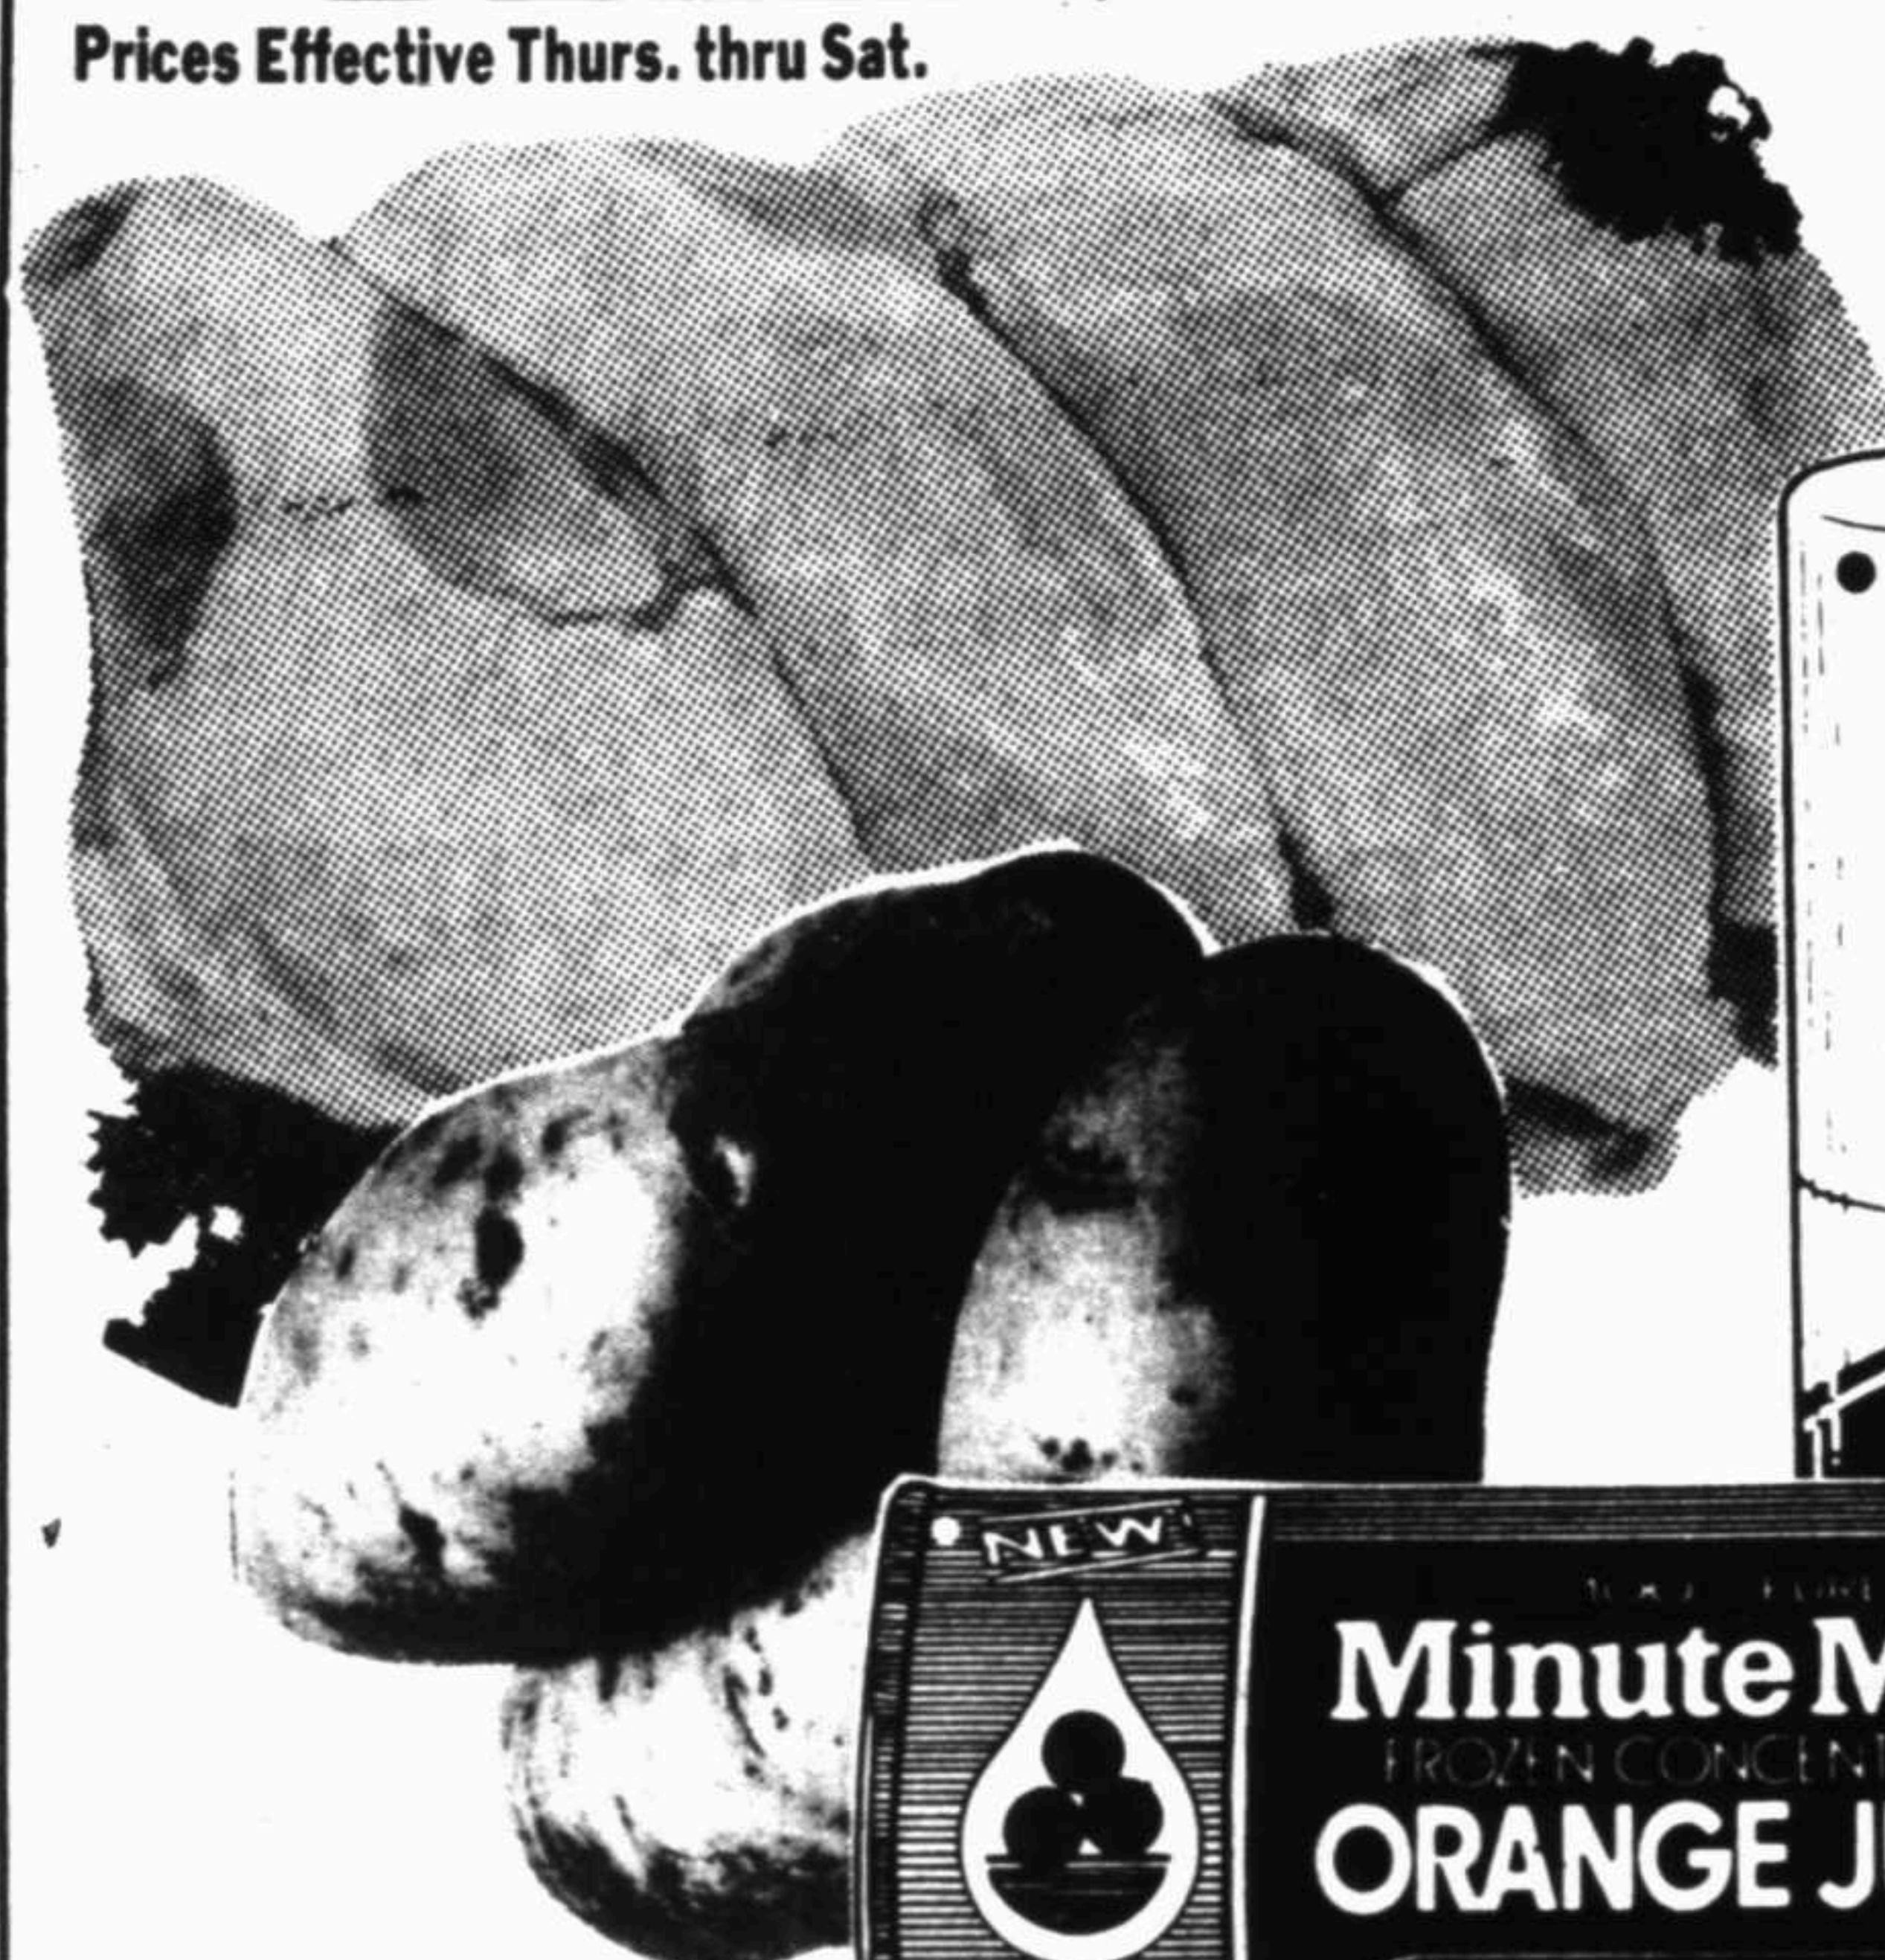

Wilkerson, who had been fired from the arcade about a week before the killings, told police he killed Varughese after friends came to tell him they had slain the other three workers.

Jackson wins hearts, probably not votes

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — New Hampshire Democrats are delighted that Jesse Jackson got the Syrians to release U.S. flier Robert Goodman, a former state resident, but say it probably won't win him many votes in the earliest presidential primary.

"Their hearts are warmed appreciably by what he did, but they aren't going to vote for him — except maybe his (Goodman's) mother-in-law, and she's probably a Republican," said former state Sen. Mary Louise Hancock.

Goodman, 27, grew up in Portsmouth and met his wife there. Her mother, Louise Bryant, still lives in Portsmouth.

Other Democrats interviewed Wednesday generally agreed with Ms. Hancock.

"After the initial pleasure, I don't think it will have much lasting impact here," said Robert Craig, a University of New Hampshire political scientist.

Craig said studies of the political effects of similar triumphs, usually decisive acts by presidents, indicate that the popularity surge is temporary.

But some state Democrats believe Jackson will get a lasting boost from the Goodman episode in the Feb. 28 primary, traditionally the key early test for candidates of both parties.

"Jesse Jackson will be looked at from a different perspective between now and Election Day by all of the people in the United States," said state Rep. Chris Spirou.

Students hurt in lab blast

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Two students mixing chemicals in a laboratory at California Institute of Technology were injured Wednesday night when a solution exploded, rocking the building and sending shards of glass flying, police said.

Glass from a beaker severed the carotid artery of one of the students, injuring him critically, said Lt. Don Burwell.

Ramsey Bittar, 23, was in critical condition at Huntington Memorial Hospital after the blast, which occurred about 8:45 p.m., Burwell said.

Another Caltech student, Allan Van Asselt, 25, was treated for chemical exposure on his upper torso but was not hospitalized, Burwell said.

The two were experimenting with Tetramethyldiphosphane Disulfide, Burwell said, when an apparent overmixture of water set off a chemical reaction.

"The beaker that he (Bittar) was using to mix the solution blew up in his hands," Burwell said.

Schools ranked nationwide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell, in a bid to dramatize the shortcomings of American schools, today released statistics ranking all 50 states on their dropout rates, test scores, teacher salaries and other measures.

Bell scheduled a news conference today to discuss the state rankings.

The figures showed that among 28 states where college-bound students customarily take the American College Test, the best average was compiled by students in Wisconsin, followed by Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado.

Among 22 states where students usually take the Scholastic Aptitude Test, the leaders were: New Hampshire, Oregon, Vermont, California and Delaware.

The states with the worst ACT average were from the bottom: Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, West Virginia and, in a tie for the fifth lowest, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Those with the lowest SAT average were: South Carolina, District of Columbia, Georgia, North Carolina and Hawaii.

From 1972 to 1982, college entrance exam scores fell in every state; only the District of Columbia registered an increase.

Some of the figures Bell spotlighted have been publicized previously, but some were being released for the first time from data culled from his National Center on Education Statistics and other sources.

New statistics showed that the high school dropout rate got worse from 1972 to 1982. Only 72.8 percent of ninth graders now stay to get their high school diploma, down from 77.2 percent a decade earlier.

The District of Columbia had the worst dropout rate in 1982, followed by Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida. The dropout rate that year was not available for Georgia, which ranked 49th out of 51 in 1972.

The states with the highest percentage of graduates were: Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Hawaii and South Dakota.

In 1972, Delaware ranked 29th for the percentage of students who graduated from high school. It jumped to ninth in 1982. Montana rose from 27th to eighth. Maine fell from 18th to 34th and California plummeted from 22nd to 39th. Rhode Island slid from 16th to 31st, while Vermont improved from 41st to 18th.

On pupil-teacher ratios, Georgia jumped from 50th to a tie for 31st, while Massachusetts improved from 20th to a tie for eighth. New York fell from fourth to 21st, while Oregon dropped from 16th to 41st. South Carolina tumbled from a tie for 11th to 33rd, while West Virginia climbed from a tie for 40th to a tie for 19th. Utah pulled up the rear in both years.

On teacher salaries, Alaska remained far out in front with an average salary of $29,000 in 1980-81, up from its pace-setting $14,124 a decade earlier. Wyoming went from 22nd to sixth and Washington from 13th to fifth, while Vermont tumbled from 28th to 50th.

The Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., first disclosed state-by-state SAT scores two years ago. The American College Testing Co. of Iowa City, Iowa, does not make its figures public and Bell said he had to go to state education officials to obtain the averages.

The testing service in Princeton has cautioned the public about misinterpreting the figures. The average scores are usually highest in states where the lowest percentage of students take the exam.

In a written explanation accompanying the figures, Education Department analysts said, "Some educators claim that they are not very accurate measures of student achievement. But most college and university officials find that they are useful sources of projecting student preparation to do college-level work."

The statistics included figures on the number of children and teen-agers living in poverty in each state, the percentage of minority and handicapped students and per capita income.

Hopes dim for reducing deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new election-year budget President Reagan is tailoring will reflect both his reluctance to support big tax increases and congressional opposition to domestic spending cuts. The result is a spending plan with a projected deficit of more than $180 billion.

Republican leaders who control the legislative agenda in the Senate are privately acknowledging that Reagan's continued public opposition to tax increases before 1986 has all but killed hope of enacting a large package of tax increases this year to trim budget deficits.

"The feeling is that a big thing (large package of tax increases and spending cuts) is not going through here this year," said a Senate GOP source who asked not to be quoted by name.

Administration officials and Republican members of Congress briefed on budget decisions the president made as of late last month say Reagan has tentatively decided on between $8 billion and $9 billion in domestic spending reductions for the 1985 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 — less than half the $21 billion he had requested for the current fiscal year.

Although the president apparently has lowered his sights on domestic spending cuts, his proposals still would focus on reductions in major programs such as student aid and welfare.

Some sources say the administration also will try again to get Congress to enact Medicare savings. In preliminary budget briefings for Republican House members, White House budget director David A. Stockman has indicated the administration would settle for savings of about $2 billion in fiscal 1985 and $27 billion in the health program over the next five years.

Reagan received a reminder earlier this week of Congress' election-year mood about further domestic spending cuts when three senior Republican senators met with the president at the White House.

One of them, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said he told Reagan "that while we have to reduce the deficits in future years there are a number of programs that have been reduced enough. ... It's very difficult to reduce them much more."

Even Reagan's reduced goal for spending cuts is unlikely to win much support in Congress.

"Some of the budget cuts they (the Reagan administration) are proposing will never see the light of day in an election year," said a House Republican source who attended a briefing by Stockman on the administration's tentative spending decisions.

Reagan, meanwhile, appears to be maintaining his opposition to the enactment of any major deficit-reduction package that includes significant tax increases.

Tank explodes during rush hour

DENVER (AP) — A 250-gallon propane tank being towed by a truck on busy Interstate 25 during rush hour Wednesday afternoon came loose, ruptured and ignited, engulfing a passing van in flames and injuring one person, authorities said.

The accident closed the major north-south commuting route in the metropolitan Denver area for about an hour and half, officials said.

Gregorio Rodriguez, 42, the driver of the van, suffered first- and second-degree burns from the fireball, said Police Sgt. Roy Klem. Rodriguez was taken to the intensive care unit of Porter Memorial Hospital, officials said.

The driver of the truck was identified as Clarence Wollman of Adams County. Wollman works for United Materials Inc., Klem said, and was towing the tank from a construction site.

When the tank came loose from the north-bound truck, it traveled across three lanes of traffic and rolled over at the median, then ignited as Rodriguez was driving by, Klem said.

Fire crews extinguished the blaze soon after the 4:30 p.m. accident, said Chris Adams of the Denver Office of Emergency Preparedness, but the danger of further explosions in the area kept part of the freeway closed until shortly after 6 p.m.

Propane is heavier than air, and officials said pockets of the gas could linger and be exploded by a spark.

It was the second accident involving propane this week in Denver.

On Sunday, a propane tank stored in the basement of the Wells Fargo building exploded, destroying 75 percent of a $2 million building. A cleaning woman working in that building was thrown from the building by the blast and remained hospitalized in critical condition Wednesday.

Lee girls face stern test

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

It didn't take very long for the District 4-5A girls basketball title chase to heat up in 1984.

In fact, things have gotten interesting early, especially after a pre-Christmas, 52-42, Lee win over Midland High. That game established the defending champion Rebels as the team to beat again in the district. Tonight both local schools head into action in district showdowns.

Next up for Lee (144 overall, 30 in district) is an 8:00 p.m. start on the road tonight against San Angelo. The Bobcats are a team that has been figured to play a part in the race for supremacy this season, and San Angelo has responded with a fast start. Angelo is 9-6 on the year, but are also unbeaten in the district at 3-0. Consequently, tonight's game determines the district leader. The winner will be the final unbeaten team in the 4-5A, and should have a tremendous advantage.

ESPECIALLY IF Lee wins. The Rebels then would have the good fortune to have their toughest road trip over and a win to boot. Lee's other toughest encounters usually have come from Midland High, and the trip to MHS is much easier than the trek to Angelo.

The Bobcats are led in scoring by Bonnie Smith (15.7) and Monica Bradley (11.7). Lee coach Shirley Stephenson has looked for San Angelo to be a contender all year. "They're a good team and have some good players," she said. "We've seen them play, and when you get to district everybody has you scouted out pretty good."

Which doesn't bother Lee a bit. The Rebels have a balanced attack that can turn anyone loose, as evidenced by Tunya Mayberry's 21-point outburst in Lee's last game, a 74-32 blowout of Odessa High. Mayberry has notched an average of 11.8 points, but Felicia Farias is the big gun for Lee. Farias has averaged 17.0 on the year, and has five 20-point efforts in 15 games. Only twice has she been held to less than a dozen points.

But Farias and Stephenson can look to others for production. Stacy Harmon has overcome an early season slump to average 10.8, with a high game of 21. That effort came in a narrow 64-60 Tall City Tournament win over none other than the San Angelo Bobcats.

Another player for Lee to be aware of is the Bobcat addition of Shawn Sweeten. Sweeten, a transfer from Plains, is a passing guard that has just broken into the Bobcat lineup. The new look could cause Stephenson's Rebels to make some adjustments.

AT MHS coach Jane Young's Bulldogs have entered 1984 with a pair of tough district setbacks.

First came the 10-point loss at Lee. MHS resumed action last Monday with a heart-breaking 58-53 loss at Permian in overtime. Now the Bulldogs (10-7) face a tough challenge with a 1-2 district mark. The Lady Dogs tip off at home (Chaparral Center) tonight against Big Spring at 8:00 p.m.

Big Spring has had a good year thus far at 9-7, 2-1 in district. MHS is badly in need of a win after the tough losses to Lee and Permian. Should the Bulldogs survive, they could pull into a tie for third and level their district record. A loss, conversely, puts MHS in a bad way this early in the state.

If Denise Lanz shows up, MHS will have a chance, and Lanz hasn't missed too many. The top scorer for MHS, just a junior, is averaging 14.1 points a contest. But in three district games, Lanz has averaged 18.7. Orvetta "O.J." Johnson has averaged 12.3, but the scoring drops after that. Several MHS players, especially Deidra Knapp and Terez Robinson, have shown an ability to put the ball in the basket. But only Lanz and Johnson have been consistent. Shooting has plagued MHS, but the Bulldogs need only a little help from a player or two a night to make things happen.

Regardless, both Lee and Midland have miles to go before they sleep. In tonight's case, Lee just has a little farther to go in mileage and in play.

Well, those dirty Dogs

AUSTIN (AP) — What appeared in television film sequences to be a flagrant holding violation by Georgia tackle Guy McIntyre may have cost Texas the national college football championship.

TV sequences shown on two Austin stations Tuesday night showed McIntyre apparently reaching out and grabbing Texas linebacker Mark Lang by the left ankle, causing Lang to fall on the seat of his pants.

No penalty was called. With Lang on the ground,

Georgia quarterback John Lanning raced past him for 17 yards and the winning touchdown with 3:22 to play in Georgia's 10-9 Cotton Bowl victory over the Longhorns.

The loss destroyed Texas' chances for a national title. The Longhorns were ranked No. 2 and top-ranked Nebraska lost to Miami 31-30, with Miami jumping to first. Texas finished fifth.

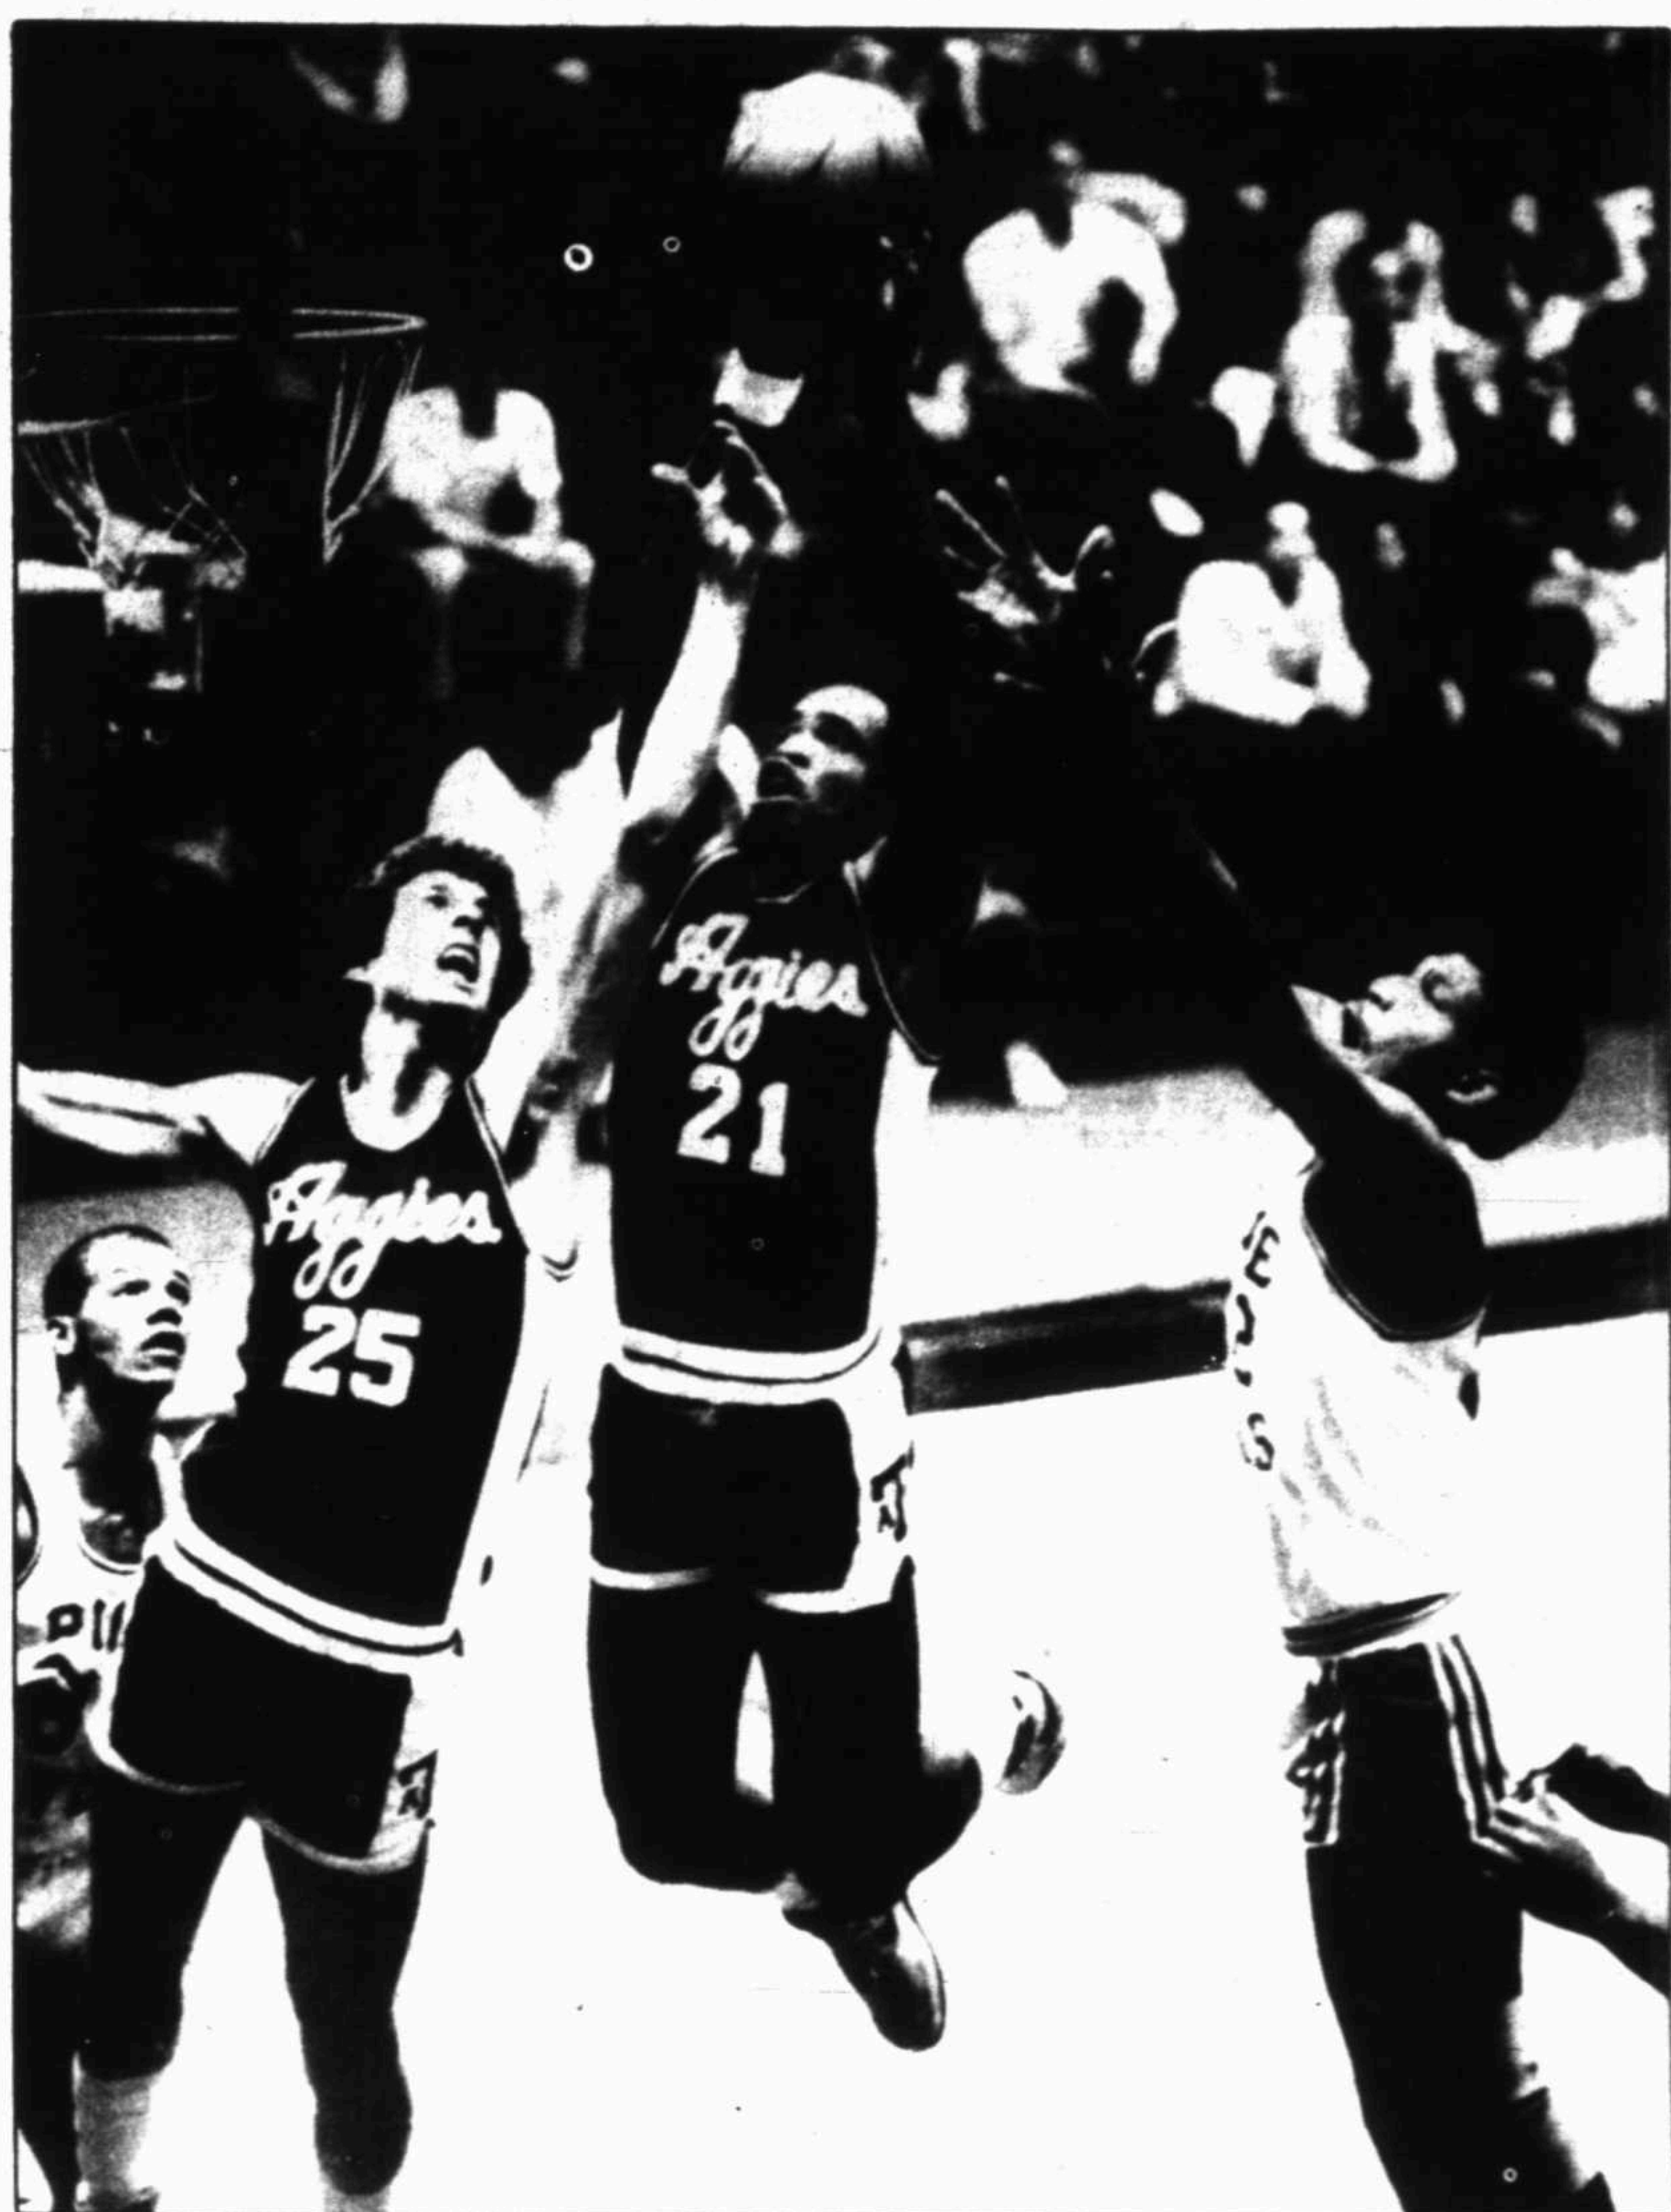

Lang, reached at his home in Iraan, Texas, said, "I was reading the tackle (McIntyre), and I was going to scrape off to the outside and the tackle grabbed ahold of my leg and I fell down and failed to get outside."

Lang said, however, "You can't make excuses. It is one of those things. They didn't see it and it isn't holding if they don't see it."

Texas defensive coordinator David McWilliams said the TV replay he saw showed that McIntyre grabbed Lang's ankle, which would have been a holding infraction.

The TV films were shown on KVUE and KTVV.

Texas A&M's Winston Crite (21) comes up with rebound as teammate Mike Clifford (25) reaches for ball in game against Rice Wednesday night. The Aggies defeated Rice in the SWC opener.

Tech, Hogs, A&M off and running

By The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference's first major battle doesn't tip off until tonight, but some challengers to the league throne have made quick starts.

Both Arkansas and Texas Tech, two teams that fared well in non-conference action, won games Wednesday as the league race opened for six schools.

ARKANSAS DEFEATED Baylor 57-50 behind center Joe Kleine's 18 points and Texas Tech routed Texas Christian 79-60. In other action, Texas A&M held off Rice 52-47 and Texas lost a non-conference game to Kansas State 64-54.

Tonight in Dallas, the two league's leaders in non-conference play, defending champion Houston and Southern Methodist, open play. SMU brings a 12-2 record into the game. Houston, 10-2, is a 5 1/2-point favorite.

Razorback coach Eddie Sutton, whose team raised its season record to 10-2 Wednesday night, was just happy to get out of Waco's Heart O' Texas Coliseum with the win over Baylor, 48.

"As long as I've been at Arkansas, it seems we've never played very well here," Sutton said.

"It's something about this place that brings out the worst in us. We've had trouble winning here in the past and about the only good thing you can say tonight is that we came away with a victory. But we didn't look very good doing it."

ALVIN ROBERTSON, added 17 points for the Razorbacks, keyed a 10-0 Arkansas outburst at the start of the game with three quick baskets, and the Razorbacks never trailed although Baylor made a run at the end of the game.

Arkansas led by as many as 13 points at 48-35 with 7:11 to play before the Bears rallied behind James Stern and DeWayne Brown.

Stern scored 18 points while Brown, a freshman from Dallas, popped in 10, mostly on driving layups against the Arkansas pressing defense.

Arkansas shot 50 per cent from the field to just 38 per cent for the cold-shooting Bears.

The Razorbacks were hurt by 19 turnovers, and both teams were even in rebounds with 33.

"We played well for the first three or four minutes," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "We jumped to a 10-0 lead and from that point we had several opportunities to break the game open but we never did."

"Give Baylor credit for that. They hung in there and played tough."

In Lubbock, Tech, 7-5, broke open a tight contest with a 20-7 surge midway through the second half.

Junior forward Vince Taylor, who led the Red Raiders with 10 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots, was at the center of the rally, scoring 4 points, hauling in four rebounds, swatting away a pair of TCU shots and dishing out two assists.

TEXAS TECH coach Gerald Myers credited the surge and several transition goals for his team's success against the Frogs.

"The success that we have had this year has come as a result of team effort," Myers said. "I thought the turning point was when we got a couple of transition baskets that opened an eight-point lead to 12."

TCU, 7-5, played without freshman standout Carven Holcombe, who fractured a foot last week.

"Obviously, our not having Carven was a big difference. Still, we've got to learn to play with the people we have available," Killingsworth said.

"It was a good victory for us because it was our conference opener at home. Everyone played well. The guys came in off the bench and played hard for us," Myers said.

In Houston, Winston Crite scored eight of his team-high 10 points in the closing minutes of the first half to spark A&M, 6-4, to its victory over Rice, 46.

During Crite's scoring spree, the Aggies increased their lead from three to 10 points and outscored Rice 15-8. The Owls did not get closer until Tony Barnett hit two baskets late in the game to pull them within five at the closing buzzer.

Texas A&M led 33-23 at the half. Rice coach Tommy Suits laid blame for the loss squarely on his team.

"It was really disappointing. We didn't play well in any phase of the game," he said. "I don't know why a team plays that way."

But Aggie coach Shelby Metcalf wasn't thrilled with his players' performance either.

"We had good shot selection, but entirely too many turnovers," he said. "On defense, Williams came off the bench and really helped us. He was the catalyst for us tonight on defense."

KANSAS STATE forward Ben Mitchell scored 16 points and the Wildcats held off a late rally to knock off Texas.

Texas, 4-6, hit only 7 of 13 shots from the field in the first half but stayed in the game by hitting 15 of 18 free throws. Kansas State, 6-4, led at halftime 35-29.

Carlton Cooper of Texas led all scorers with 18 points.

The Longhorns never got closer than four points to the Wildcats in the second half.

Texas trailed 59-54 with 2:52 remaining, but Eddie Elder of Kansas State scored five points in the final 1:05 to seal the Wildcats' victory.

Texas Tech center Ray Irvin (52) fights for a loose ball against TCU's Tom Mortimer Wednesday in SWC opener for both teams.

Give Orwell another chance

Maybe George Orwell would like to take another crack at writing "1984." After all, he never mentioned college football even once the first time around in 1948.

College football is a world turned upside down. Fans are torn. Coaches are catching flak. Odds makers are dealing out big bucks. And Miami football fans aren't talking about the Dolphins. They're praying for the Hurricanes. It's all very weird.

MIAMI IS the mythical national champion. And that's all they will ever be since you will never convince all the people of that fact. Miami, the football team and not the beach, should be the major incentive of some kind of playoff structure. What's happening in college football is insane.

Only Midland's Jack Eitelborg is happy. He's a Miami grad, who admitted that fact for the first time since 1960 on January 3. "I'm coming out of the closet," was the way Eitelborg put it. "When I went to school, Miami was so bad that they were lucky to even win a game. But beating Nebraska was incredible."

Incredible is the correct word for college football. Just look at the facts.

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne didn't want a tainted title and went for two points against Miami. He didn't get either and helped design a championship ring for Miami in the process. An extra point would have given the Huskers a tainted national title and a ring. The Miami title is still tainted for many, proving that gutsy and ringless guys from Nebraska sometimes finish second. It's part of the college world.

TEXAS' FRED Akers also had his shot before he forgot the name of Midland's Michael Feldt, who should have been handling the punt catching chores for the Longhorns against Georgia in the Cotton Bowl. They may get reacquainted before this summer is over.

The War Eagle of Auburn is off sulking and taking courses on how to run up scores against opponents. He is also learning a banquet routine from Rodney Dangerfield.

Illinois forgot to pack the roses for the Rose Bowl. They're still trying to figure out what an Illini is.

The Mustangs of SMU are still doing a term paper on the sights of Juarez, entitled "How to Escape El Paso Without Feeling the Pain." It was a forced assignment, of course.

But college football isn't made up of just bowl teams. Arkansas didn't play in a bowl game. Coach Lou Holtz took to politics in North Carolina and ended up in Minnesota. We're still trying to figure out what "Soovie Pig" in Arkansas has to do with Jesse Helms in North Carolina. As far as Holtz is concerned, it means "Gopher" another team up north.

AND COLLEGE football even hit Midland. Spike Dykes, who guided Midland Lee's Rebels to its first ever berth in the state finals and best record in 23 years of football, shunned security for a position on the Texas Tech coaching staff. That seems strange too since word has it that Tech coach Jerry Moore has one year to turn things around for the Red Raiders. For Spike it's a gamble that could turn into gold with the right combination.

And from what we've seen in the past few weeks in college football, it could happen. Strange things are happening.

Still, it makes one wonder why anyone would be a college football fan. The empty feeling remains even after the glitter of a New Year. As Orwell would say if he had another chance, "Spirit is Deceit."

There is always hope that 1985 will be better.

New Oiler coach sets playoff goal

HOUSTON (AP) — New Houston Oilers coach Hugh Campbell is hoping his club can be in the National Football League playoff picture next season, even though the team went 2-14 in its most recent season.

"I would hope that for the sake of my stomach and my peace of mind, we would improve upon this record rapidly and I would like to see us win more than we lose, if we can," Campbell said at a news conference Wednesday.

Campbell, 42, named Tuesday to coach the Oilers, spoke to reporters in Houston via a telephone conference call from San Francisco, where he is scouting college players at the East-West Shrine all-star game.

He conceded his goal of a better than 500 mark in 1984 "is a guess." But a 9-7 mark in 1983 would have equaled Denver and Seattle, which qualified for the NFL playoffs as wild-card teams.

Campbell came to Houston after one year as coach of the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League. In the six years before that, his Edmonton Eskimos won five straight Grey Cups, the Canadian Football League's equivalent of the Super Bowl.

He takes over for Chuck Studley, who went 2-8 as interim Oiler coach, then left to become defensive coordinator for the Miami Dolphins. Ed Biles began the year directing the Oilers, but quit after failing to post a victory in six outings.

Campbell told reporters he didn't see his presence as clearing the way for Houston's signing of coveted CFL free-agent quarterback Warren

Moon, who played for him at Edmonton.

"I would think our chances of getting Warren Moon would be somewhat less than 50-50, but still relative to everyone else, pretty good," he said. And while Moon would be a "big plus," Campbell said the signing was not imperative to the success of the Oilers.

"We need help everywhere," he said, adding that the draft would provide a source of filling gaps in the Houston lineup. The Oilers, who tied Tampa Bay for the worst record in the NFL, have the second pick overall among college players.

First on Campbell's list is assembling a coaching staff, a task he hopes to complete in a few days.

Then he wants to meet Earl Campbell, Houston's All-Pro running back who has asked to be traded.

"If it's best for Earl to have something happen other than play for the Oilers, then I'll be there rooting and hoping it will happen," the new coach said. "If it's best for him to stay with the Oilers, then I'm going to be hammering away to keep him."

Campbell said he was convinced to come to Houston after getting a "very good feeling" in discussions with top club officials.

"This last year was not a waste year," he said. "Recordwise, from a distance, you're not too enthusiastic about taking over a team that won only two games."

But he said the team gained "hidden strength" in 1983, thanks to good coaching and a great amount of playing time given to young players.

Houston rookie Ralph Sampson intimidates Utah's leading scorer Adrian Dantley on this shot, but alas, the Rockets lost again.

'Magic' returns as Lakers roll

By The Associated Press

A bit of "Magic" has returned to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who had been sidelined since Dec. 2 with a dislocated right index finger, unexpectedly came off the bench Wednesday night to play a big role in the Lakers' 106-99 National Basketball Association victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The do-everything guard, sorely missed by the Lakers in their heated Pacific Division battle with the Portland Trail Blazers, scored 11 of his team-high 23 points in the fourth quarter to help Los Angeles end a two-game losing string.

Johnson was activated late last week by the Lakers, but was not expected to play until later in the week. He came off the bench to score 10 first-half points before really heating up in the final period.

"I'm tired of watching," said the happy Johnson. "I came here (to the Coliseum) to work out earlier in the day and I felt ready. So I had our trainer call back to the doctor (in Los Angeles) and get his okay."

Laker coach Pat Riley was as relieved by Johnson's return as he was happy.

"Magic makes a world of difference out there," Riley enthused. "He's going to create a lot of things out there for us. And, tonight, that's what he did. That's what we've been missing."

"When the other teams are making their run, he takes charge and really makes things happen."

Cleveland, which lost for the ninth time in 10 games, never seriously threatened after trailing 67-51 at the half. Los Angeles built a 106-88 lead with 2:15 remaining and the Cavs scored the last 11 points to make it appear closer than it really was.

Lonnie Shelton had a game-high 24 points for the Cavaliers, while Jamaal Wilkes and Mike McGee each chipped in with 18 for the Lakers.

Mavericks 105, Sonics 102

Dallas got 29 points from Mark Aguirre and held off a late Seattle rally to defeat the SuperSonics and raise its home record to a glossy 14-2.

The Mavs trailed 87-86 with 8:57 to play. But they went ahead to stay by hitting four straight baskets over the next 3:21, while Seattle was missing all five of its shots.

Al Wood led the Sonics with a season-high 25 points.

Jazz 116, Rockets 111

Adrian Dantley scored 46 points and again tied the NBA's record for free throws in a game as Utah prevailed in a game played in Las Vegas, Nev.

Dantley hit 28 of 29 free-throw attempts, including nine-of-nine in the final 5:10.

record in 1962 when he hit 28 of 32 in the game in which he scored a league-record 100 points.

Dantley tied the free-throw mark in 1980.

Celtics 113, Bullets 104

In Boston, Larry Bird led the Celtics to a 23-point lead then held off a Washington comeback.

Bird, held to two points in the first period and three in the final quarter, topped Boston with 23 points. The Celtics averaged a 100-93 loss at home to Washington Dec. 16 while posting their third straight victory, seventh in the last eight games and 17th in the last 20.

The Bullets led 32-25 early in the second quarter. Boston then ran off 14 straight points, including six by Bird, and the Celtics went on to outscore Washington 24-6 before the Bullets crawled back to within 52-43 at the half.

Nets 91, Hawks 88

Reserve guard Darwin Cook scored 10 points in the fourth quarter as the Nets overcame the Hawks in Atlanta.

Cook, who had 17 points, hit three straight field goals to give New Jersey a 79-78 lead with 5:32 remaining. Another Cook jumper put the Nets on top for good at 84-82 with 3:04 left.

Otis Birdsong scored 19 points for New Jersey, while Wayne "Tree" Rollins and Dominique Wilkins each scored 22 for Atlanta.

Pacers 102, Bulls 89

Clark Kellogg, leading a third-quarter Indiana rally, and Herb Williams, taking charge in the final period, combined for 44 points for the host Pacers.

Kellogg, who contributed 12 rebounds and four steals, had eight of his 20 points in the third quarter as Indiana overcame a four-point halftime deficit. Then Williams scored 14 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter as the Pacers, winners of four of their last five, pulled away.

Chicago was topped by Orlando Woolridge with 22 points and Quintin Dailey with 18.

Pistons 128, Suns 114

At Pontiac, Mich., Kelly Tripucka and John Long each scored 28 points and Tripucka made two key steals in the final two minutes to spark the Pistons.

Phoenix was led by Walter Davis with 23 points.

Clippers 122, Kings 121

Norm Nixon banked in an eight-foot jump shot with 20 seconds left for San Diego to deal visiting Kansas City its fifth straight loss.

Michael Brooks led San Diego with 31 points and eight rebounds, while Nixon finished with 20 points.

Players on hold after USFL draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Now the waiting begins — for undrafted players and drafting teams.

For some players, the wait could be over at the completion today of the United States Football League's second college draft.

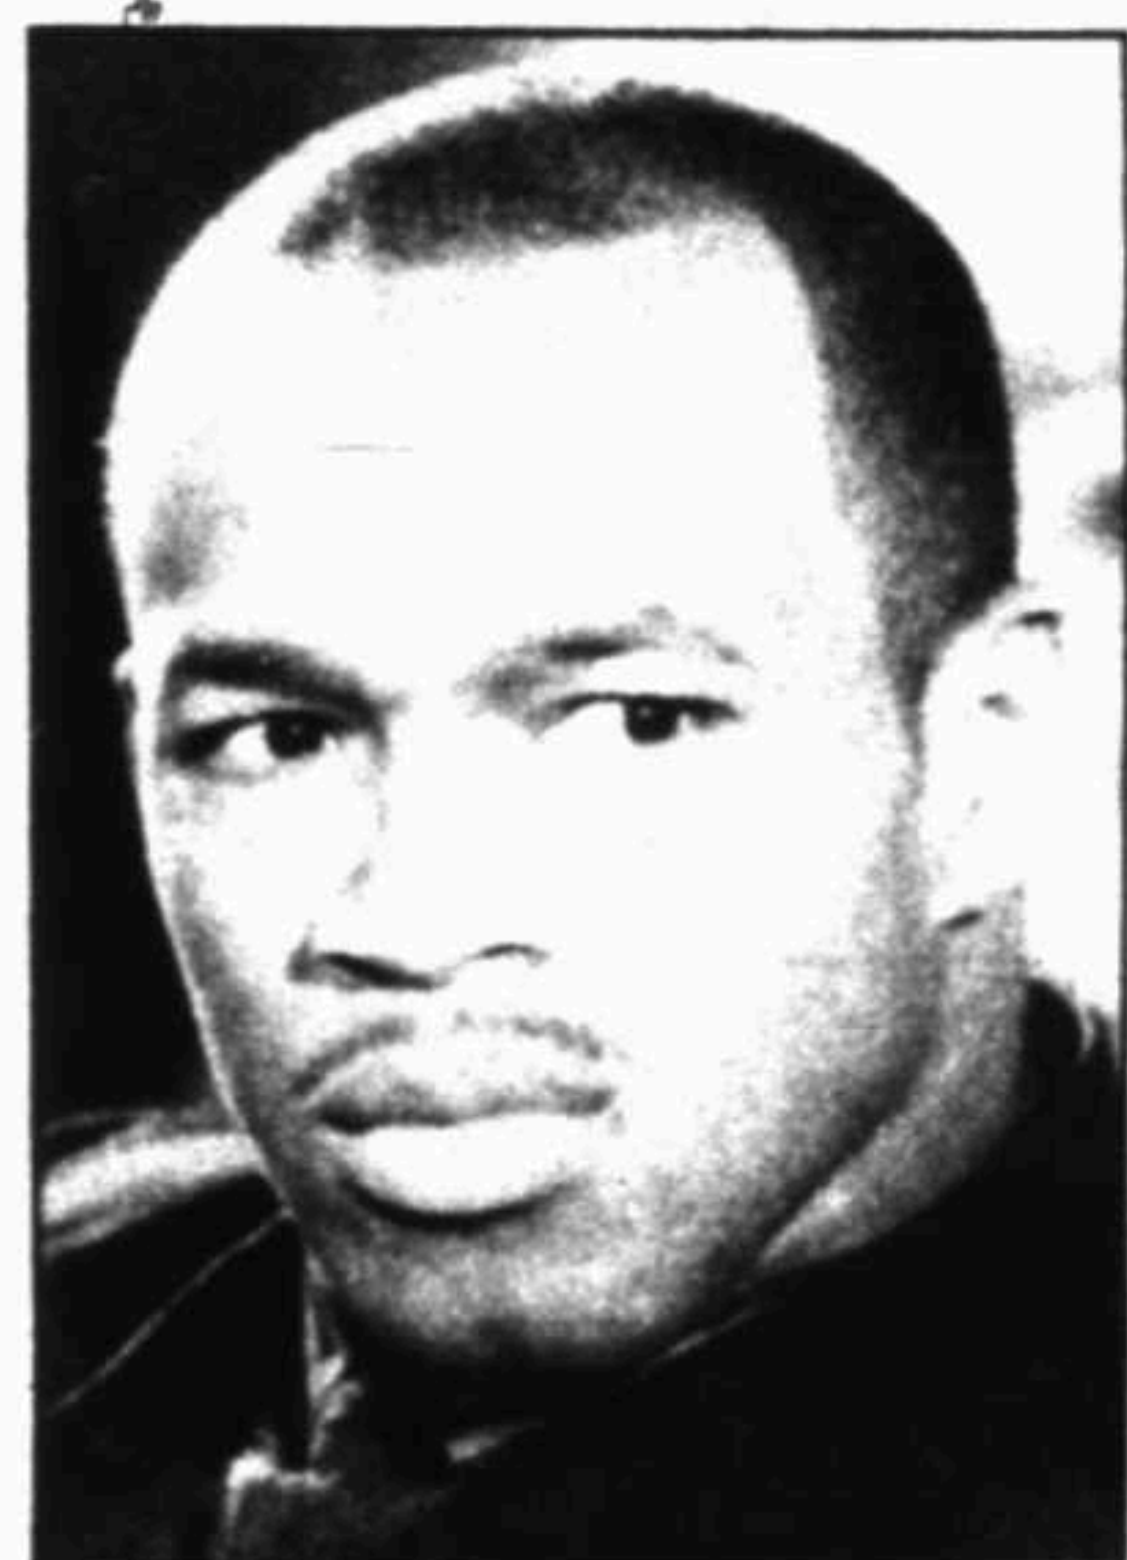

For some teams, the wait could run weeks or months, perhaps half-way into the USFL season, into May, when the National Football League conducts its draft — when some potentially high-priced rookies do some comparison shopping.

Mike Rozier, Nebraska's Heisman Trophy-winning running back, and Steve Young, the record-breaking quarterback from Brigham Young, are certain to be among those playing the waiting game. Each is considered to be a guaranteed high first-round pick in the NFL draft.

Each was a first-round pick Wednesday, when the USFL conducted 11 of its 19 scheduled rounds and also announced its teams' territorial selections.

Some of Rozier's Cornhusker teammates, who fell a two-point conversion short of a national championship last Monday night in the Orange Bowl, had to wait a while before being selected.

Irving Fryar, the wide receiver whose last-minute dropped pass surely gained him as much national attention as any reception he ever made, was the No. 3 pick in the first round, by the Chicago Blitz.

Nebraska's Mike Rozier

"That'll cost him a couple of million bucks," Dr. James Hoffman, the owner of the Blitz, said of the drop. Presumably, it was a joke.

Nebraska tackle Raridon Scott was picked 17th in the opening round, by the Philadelphia Stars; running back Mark Schellen went to the New Orleans Breakers in the third round, wide receiver Ricky Simmons was selected by the Washington Federals in the fourth, quarterback Turner Gill was picked by the Houston Gamblers in the fifth, guard Dean Steinkuhler, the Oakland and Lombardi Trophy winner, was chosen in the sixth round by the Arizona Wranglers, and defensive tackle Doug Herrmann by the Memphis Showboats.

Rozier, advised during a stopover in Lincoln, Neb., that he was the top choice, said he wouldn't give much thought to his pro career until he'd played in the East-West Shrine Game in Stanford, Calif., next Saturday and the Japan Bowl on Jan. 15.

But he made it clear he knows his worth.

"It's going to take some money," he said. "I think I'm worth something. I gave a lot. They're going to have to give a little bit."

If nothing else, he gave Pittsburgh's pro football fans something to talk about besides Terry Bradshaw and the Steelers. The Maulers reported that after the announcement they had drafted him, there were ticket lines, a first for the club.

George Heddlston, the Maulers' general manager, called Rozier "the most talented college athlete in the country. We're confident and optimistic we can sign him ... We picked him because we think we have a legitimate chance of signing him."

If the Maulers can sign him, it'll give the USFL the past two Heisman Trophy winners (New Jersey signed Herschel Walker after the Georgia campus a year ago, forfeiting their first-round choice this year), two of college football's biggest guns in the war with the NFL — a war which USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons has repeatedly denied. "Selective skirmishes" he likes to call it. He was saying it again Wednesday.

"We're going to go after the big guys," Simmons said. "Selectively, we want to sign some very big and attractive players. What we're not doing is saying we're going to go after every player that exists. That's crazy."

The Chicago Blitz spent some of its draft choices on NFL bloodlines, selecting in the third round Missouri linebacker Bobby Bell, the son of the Kansas City Chiefs' great linebacker, and taking in the territorial play Illinois defensive tackle Mark Butkus, nephew of the Chicago Bears' super linebacker, Dick Butkus. Oklahoma, too, went for a branch of a family tree, selecting Miami running back Keith Griffin, Archie's brother, in the 11th round.

In addition to the 19 "open" rounds, the league also announced those "territorial" selections, 20 for the 12 original teams, 30 for the six new ones. Those picks were made before the start of the draft.

Other players picked in that phase of the auction included quarterbacks Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia (by Pittsburgh), Ben Bennett of Alabama (by Birmingham), Blair Keil of Notre Dame (by Chicago) and Bogomer Eslason of Maryland (by Washington); linebackers Keith Browner of Southern Cal (by Los Angeles) and Carl Banks of Michigan State (by Michigan), wide receiver Thad Jemison of Ohio State (by New Jersey), defensive end Robert Smith of Grambling (by New Orleans), and defensive tackle Rick Bryan of Oklahoma (by Oklahoma).

playground, and one guy would get down in the dirt with a stick and say: 'You cut over toward the oak tree, and I'm gonna do this?'" says guard Reggie McKenzie. "Dave Krieg is one of those kind of quarterbacks. It's never over with him. He reminds me a lot of Billy Kilmer. If he had to throw it sideways, or underhand, he'd do it. I like his moxie."

The Seahawks have plenty of moxie, a quality not associated with their first seven NFL seasons. Opponents used to openly question their guts. Think back and what comes to mind is a team with a southpaw quarterback, Jim Zorn, and a left-handed personality.

Under Jack Patera — head coach until he was fired, with fitting zaniness, in the middle of last season's player strike — the Seahawks led the NFL in fake field goals, passes to the quarterback and other trickery. Also in erratic results. Their most consistent pattern was Jekyll to Hyde.

In 1981, they lost at home to the Giants 32-0 and the next week beat the Jets in New York 19-3. Later that season they thumped the Chargers 44-23 and lost the next Sunday in Kansas City 40-13.

"We didn't deserve a lot of respect in those days, and we didn't get any," says fullback Dan Doornink. "We went 9-7 two years in a row (1978-79). We had a fairly good team. We had an excellent passing game and a pretty raunchy running game. ... But this is a different group of guys now."

The changes started at the top when Mike McCormack became director of football operations in March 1982. He fired Patera, was interim coach for seven games as the Seahawks finished the strike-torn season 4-5, then was named president and general manager a year ago this week.

He hired Chuck Knox — 100-58-1, with eight playoff appearances in 11 seasons as an NFL head coach — who is to Patera as Ronald Reagan is to George McGovern. A believer in the conservative values of blocking, tackling and running the football, Knox has this theory for prosperity: If you hog the ball and don't make mistakes, victories will trickle down.

"He's just the opposite of the other guy that was here," says McKenzie, who played 11 seasons in Buffalo, the last five under Knox. "He patted guys on the back and said, 'Players win, coaches coach.' If he's not your coach of the year, he's mine."

Krieg fits 'Ugly Duckling' image

By BARRY LORGE
Copley News Service

It is difficult to envision the Seattle Seahawks in Sunday's American Football Conference Championship, one game away from the Super Bowl.

The other three teams left in the playoffs — the Raiders, Redskins and 49ers — have won championships. They have name quarterbacks from prominent schools: Jim Plunkett from Stanford, Joe Theismann and Joe Montana from Notre Dame.

Seattle has never been in the playoffs before. Quarterback Dave Krieg is a free agent from Milton College, which went out of business in 1982. "Nobody else wanted me," says Krieg, whose "big games" as a collegian were against Ripon, Lawrence and Lakeland, before 400-odd spectators. He is the only Milton grad in the National Football League. "There won't be any more, either," he says. "They've boarded up the windows. I drove through the campus a couple of times. It looks pretty desolate."

Obviously the perfect QB for the NFL's Ugly Ducklings.

"You know how you used to play football in the North Carolina State's Lorenzo Charles looks for help as Maryland's Ben Coleman, left, and Adrian Branch box him in during key ACC contest Wednesday.

Free throws sink national champs

By The Associated Press

College Roundup

Jim Valvano guided North Carolina State to the national college basketball championship last season, often relying on missed foul shots by the opposition in the final minutes to help rally his team.

So when fifth-ranked Maryland faced Valvano's 12th-ranked Wolfpack in their Atlantic Coast Conference opener Wednesday night, the Terrapins were ready.

Adrian Branch and Herman Veal each made a pair of free throws in the final 63 seconds to give Maryland a 59-55 victory in Raleigh, N.C.

"We knew if we got a lead, he'd tell them to foul us and force us to hit the free throws," said Branch, who leads Maryland with 81-percent shooting from the line. "We've shot a lot of free throws in practice and we take a lot of pride in them."

In other games involving ranked teams, fourth-ranked Georgetown downed Connecticut 81-69. No. 8 Wake Forest crushed Richmond 82-57. 17th-ranked Boston College got by Pittsburgh 81-77. No. 19 Memphis State romped past Cincinnati 85-62 and No. 20 Virginia nipped Virginia Tech 74-64.

Valvano said that once his team fell behind late in the game, he planned on fouling.

"We made an error in fouling Veal immediately, but we didn't have the luxury of a timeout to explain everything," Valvano said. "But there were a number of factors why we lost. We didn't hit the outside shots and we made mental errors."

Veal, a 57 percent free-throw shooter, made his two foul throws with 1:03 left to give Maryland a 55-53 lead. After a Wolfpack turnover, Branch hit his two free throws with 19 seconds left as Maryland improved to 9-1.

Veal led Maryland with 18 points while N.C. State, 10-3, got 18 points from Lorenzo Charles.

Landry to keep promise

DALLAS (AP)—Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry said he would abide by a promise he made last September to wide receiver Butch Johnson that he would trade him at the end of the season.

Landry made the pledge in a Sept. 21 meeting with Johnson after the outspoken backup to Drew Pearson returned from an impromptu, season-2 day "vacation" to Mexico.

Landry also confirmed that backup quarterback Gary Hogeboom had come to him this week asking for a trade. Landry did not indicate he was inclined to grant that request. Hogeboom still has one year plus an option year left on his contract.

Landry said his promise to Johnson, an eight-year backup, was made in return for Johnson's pledge he would keep his complaints to himself for the rest of the season.

"He did his part, and now I will do my part," Landry told the Dallas Morning News. "Butch is at the point right now that a trade is what he needs as a person. It's in the best interest of everyone."

Landry added, "If I tell a guy I will trade him, I will trade him if that's what he wants. I told him he would be traded at the end of the year, and we will trade him."

However, Johnson balked Wednesday, after reading of Landry's remarks in the newspaper. "I will refuse to report to any

First match tourney labeled as 'success'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Three days of competition remain and golf's leading players are two days from their first match but PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman didn't hesitate to label the $1 million Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship "already a great success."

"I think it will be very well received," Beman said Wednesday during second round play in the new event that offers more than $1 million in prizes in two brackets.

"But," Beman added, "that doesn't mean that some players don't feel things should be a little different here and there."

That, of course, was in response to player criticism of the format which provided eight golfers with byes into the second round and gave passes to eight others — the leaders of the 1983 Seiko Grand Prix list — into the fifth round Saturday morning.

Those leaders — Fuzzy Zoeller, Larry Wadkins, Gil Morgan, Hal Sutton, Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite, Cal Peete and Tom Watson — are assured of $15,000.

Bob Glider charged that amounts to "appearance money."

"He's wrong," Beman said. "They won that off their performance last year."

"The format answers some of the age-old problems and liabilities of match play."

And, the commissioner said, match play, making its first appearance on the American Tour in more than a decade, will remain on the schedule but added that he did not anticipate "a large number of match play events."

Thompson's 'dying wish' followed

By KATHRYN BAKER

DALLAS (AP) — Tommy Thompson died of cancer before he could turn his best-selling novel, "Celebrity," into a screenplay.

Thompson's friend Roslyn Heller, chosen to produce the movie, hired veteran screenwriter William Hanley, then brought the cast and crew of the NBC miniseries to Texas for shooting, "because," she said, "it was one of Tommy's dying wishes."

"He said, 'Ros, we've got to go to Texas to do "Celebrity." So that's why we're here,'" Ms. Heller told reporters visiting the set near Dallas.

But she said a local union dispute "made it uncomfortable" to film in Thompson's home town of Fort Worth, where much of the novel is set.

The cast for the six-and-one-half-hour film, scheduled for broadcast in three nightly installments, Feb. 12-14, includes several up-and-coming young actors, along with veterans Glenn Ford, Mickey Rooney, Hal Holbrook and James Whitmore in supporting roles.

Thompson's saga follows the lives of three high school "most likely to succeed" types who find celebrity — one as an actor, one as a journalist, and one as an evangelist — though haunted by the night of their graduation, when they raped a 16-year-old girl while drunk.

The story culminates decades later in a mysterious shooting.

"What we don't want anyone to know is who is shot and who does the shooting," said Ms. Heller.

Ben Masters, whose film credits include supporting roles in "All That Jazz" and "Mandingo," plays the journalist. He said he was aware the character was a rough self-portrait by Thompson and that he talked to Ms. Heller about her friend. But, Masters said, "I'm not playing him."

"Celebrity" was a term that Thompson never quite dealt with in his own life, Ms. Heller said.

Tommy was a person in great conflict about it," she said. "He was embarrassed about loving it."

Joseph Bottoms, whose "Wishman" television pilot was not picked up as a series, plays Mack Crawford, who becomes a matinee idol.

Michael Beck, who appeared with Bottoms in the television miniseries "Holocaust," won the meaty role of T.J. Luther, the evangelist.

"He's an opportunist," Beck said of T.J. "He's a manipulator of people, charismatic and charming in a certain way."

Co-producer Dick O'Connor said the filmmakers expected "some very strong scenes" involving Mack's homosexuality to slide by the censors. But Ms. Heller said T.J.'s evangelism was toned down, and he will be referred to as a "faith healer."

Among the modern methods of signaling, one of the most popular is reverse signals — the play of a high card in a suit denotes a lack of interest, while a low card is encouraging. The theory is that you cannot always afford a high card in the suit you want led or continued, but you can usually spare it in a suit in which you have no interest.

However, this agreement is not necessarily an unmixed blessing, as this hand from the Hungary-Britain encounter in the 1983 European Championship graphically demonstrates. The auction shown is from the room where Great Britain held the North-South cards. South's decision to pull the double is open to question. Observe that the contract will make unless East leads a heart.

Against four spades West led the king of hearts. The Hungarians were using old-fashioned signaling methods, so when East played the ten, West continued with ace of hearts and another for East to ruff. East gave his partner a diamond ruff and West still had to score the ace of trumps for down two.

In the other room the Hungarians also reached four spades, and here, too, the opening lead was the king of hearts. But the British East-West pair, who were using reverse signals, went awry when East followed with the ten and declarer falsecarded with the jack. Now West read his partner for 10-8-2 in hearts, in which case the ten was a discouraging card — East would have played the two to encourage.

After some thought, West decided that his partner probably held two spades, three hearts, eight diamonds and a void in clubs. So at trick two he shifted to a low club. Declarer won and led a trump, and ten tricks sailed home.

If you don't like normal ring, try phone that quacks

Stacy Smith displays different novelty phones — some are antique and others are like pets.

They range in price from $50 to $400. They come in different colors, different styles, different materials.

Some look good in the kid's room; others should be situated under the surveillance of glass-eyed mounted heads of deer in the den. Some are for the kitchen, some are for the study and many of them can be hidden in any room, blended into the decor.

Novelty phones were big sellers during Christmas, according to Midland merchants. While the cordless ones were the most popular, other styles seemed to saturate the market due to their displays on television shows.

"You'll see them on different soaps," said Brenda Kirby, of T.I.M.E. sales and service company, 1308 S. Midkiff.

The leather one is on "Dallas," that Rendez-Vous is seen on "Three's Company," the Diplomat is on "Soap."

And people are no longer referring to them by their shape — no more rounds ones, square ones, flat ones.

"They're becoming like your stereos and TVs," Ms. Kirby said. "People are calling them by their brand names."

The ITT phones, Panasonic, American Telecommunication, the Nomad 200, Nomad 400, Nomad 600, 700, and 1000.

Some ring, some beep and some reportedly even gurgle.

At The Telephone Store, 4410 N. Midkiff, a football phone that whistles was sold during Christmas. But a duck that quacks still sits on the shelf, only one of several that was stuck in the store after the season.

"There are even fish that you can mount on the wall and it's supposed to gurgle," said Stacy Smith. "We didn't have any orders, but they are available."

If you aren't a hunter, perhaps you'd prefer a pay phone. Some people are building phone booths around them for their homes.

For the bar area, you can choose between a gigantic Coors or Budweiser can, phone attached to the side. Or a wooden case with a Bar light on top.

An airplane phone, in two shades of orange, can whirl as you dial. An Adam and Eve phone, the receiver and base in erotically shaped wood fit perfectly. Or you can choose the Erica style, a one-piece phallic-shaped phone.

You can hide them in boxes: large plastic shells, painted wood, natural wood. Designer phones are available: Pierre Cardin's Ambiance, or the more extravagant Oleg Cassini signature phone — solid gold and costing $20,000, according to Ms. Smith, who added there wasn't one at the Midland store.

The ominous Darth Vader phone, dark and tall, stands next to the fold-up PacMan, small, round and yellow. And don't forget Mickey Mouse, Kermit the Frog, Snoopy and Winnie the Pooh.

The real antique phones that have been renovated are cheaper and less marketable than the fake antique phones — complete with the new circular touch tone dial.

Some have built-in clock-radios, some have re-dialing features. Others have an answering machine, burglar and fire alarm and can automatically call the police station when triggered by a noise like a breaking window.

The Genie phone, round and sleek, was a popular Christmas gift this year, according to Pier Moreno, manager of the AT&T Phone Center at Midland Park Mall.

These peach and blue Genies, probably every girl at Midland High and Lee have one of these in their bedroom.

Retrial set to start for deputy, jailer

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The retrial of an Ector County deputy sheriff and a jailer who used "excessive force" in subduing 27-year-old Larry Ortega Lozano in a padded jail cell in 1978 is to start at 9 a.m. Jan. 30 in federal court in Midland.

A new trial was ordered by the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, which held that the trial court judge, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton, had erred in the 1981 civil rights trial. In that trial, Lozano's widow, Rufina, and her two sons, Randy Rene, now about 9, and Lawrence Derek, about 10, were seeking compensation for alleged violations of their father's constitutional rights.

Lozano died of suffocation, according to one pathologist. Another said he died of "trauma — injury to the neck."

Lozano, who was jailed Jan. 10, 1978, after he allegedly assaulted two deputy sheriffs after his pickup truck ran off a road near Odessa, died on Jan. 22, at several deputies and jailers tried to contain a "berserk" Lozano.

Testimony in the 1981 civil rights trial indicated Lozano suffered 115 wounds during the 12 days he was an inmate.

Initially, then-Sheriff Elton Fought said Lozano's wounds were self-inflicted — that he repeatedly had rammed his head and body into the cell's door, walls and glass port-hole.

No state or federal criminal indictments were returned in the case.

LOZANO, characterized as "emotionally disturbed," had been hospitalized for several weeks in a state hospital in Austin in 1977 for a nervous breakdown and later had undergone group therapy in Pecos, his hometown.

Although he and the deputies he had struggled with on the night of Jan. 10 were treated for injuries in a hospital emergency room, Lozano was not admitted as a patient.

A counselor for Mental Health-Mental Retardation (MHMR) in Odessa had testified that Lozano on Jan. 12 "was in terrible physical condition. His face was black and blue and so swollen his eyes were shut. He kept lifting his eyelids with his fingers so he could look at me." Lozano's face looked like "raw hamburger," counselor, Elva Hurst, testified.

MHMR advised the sheriff that Lozano should be committed to a mental institution and also told the district attorney, then John Green, and an assistant county attorney.

On Sunday, Jan. 22, Lozano created a disturbance among other inmates and was transferred to the "east green room," a padded isolation cell, where he went "berserk." A deputy sheriff contacted a MHMR psychiatrist, who committed Lozano to a fifth-floor room in Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. However, the hospital would not admit the inmate unless the sheriff furnished a deputy to stand guard over Lozano. The sheriff said he couldn't spare a deputy. Lozano could not be transferred to Big Spring State Hospital until the felony charges of aggravated assault on a peace officer were dropped. So, he was sedated, removed from the hospital and returned to the "green room" in the Ector County Jail.

He died later that day.

IN REVERSING in part the trial court's ruling, the Fifth Circuit noted that Bunton had found that Deputy Sheriff Randy Tenney and Jailer Jackie Perkins "had used excessive force in restraining the prisoner but acted in good faith and that there was no evidence to support the jury finding that (the) sheriff had failed to supervise his facilities and personnel, thereby rendering take-nothing judgment."

U.S. Fifth Circuit Judge Will Garwood held there was insufficient evidence that the sheriff was guilty of any wrongful failure to supervise his facilities and personnel and was not liable for Lozano's death.

However, Garwood held that although there was sufficient evidence to support findings that the deputy and jailer acted in "good faith," that finding "was in irreconcilable conflict with earlier findings that they had used excessive force in restraining and subduing" Lozano.

Judge Thomas M. Reavley concurred.

Judge Renaldo Garza did not.

However, he agreed to the "irreconcilable conflict" in regard to the deputy and the jailer.

However, he disagreed that there was insufficient evidence to support the jury findings that the sheriff failed to supervise the jail and his deputies.

"TEXAS LAW is clear that a sheriff is fully responsible for the care of those placed in his custody," Garza wrote. "Lozano's condition was such that he should not have been kept in a Texas county jail but in a mental institution."

Lozano was not transferred to the mental institution, Garza noted, since the felony charges were still pending against Lozano and since the sheriff could not spare a deputy to guard him were Lozano to be hospitalized under care of MHMR.

"The evidence tends to show that it was the district attorney who refused to dismiss the felony charges," Garza wrote, "and he unfortunately was not a party to this lawsuit. Further, Garza noted that there was no evidence that the sheriff had intervened to have the charges dismissed."

He was critical of the majority decision.

"The trouble with the majority opinion is that it focuses on what happened on the fatal night of January 22 and the actions of the sheriff himself on that occasion. I firmly believe that what happened on January 22 would never have happened if the sheriff had taken the necessary steps to have Lozano put in a mental institution where he could have been kept under medication to avoid the necessity of having to subdue him because of his condition."

Former deputy making bid for sheriff's job

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — After 20 years as a law enforcement officer, Lee Roy Murphy is ready to move up.

One of the six deputies dropped from the force following budget cutbacks approved by Ector County Commissioners, Murphy said he voluntarily resigned, simplifying his bid for the job of his former boss, Sheriff Bob Brookshire.

"I was sitting home trying to figure out how I was going to write the (resignation) letter," said Murphy when he heard that six men would have to be cut — one from his division, which serves civil papers.

Murphy said he had spoken with Brookshire before about running for the job. "He and I talked for awhile before I really and truly decided to do it."

"He's still a good friend of mine. Of course, I know he doesn't like what I'm doing."

Murphy and Kenneth Turner have filed to oppose Brookshire in the November election.

"It's something I want too," said Murphy of the elected position, noting he is also friends with Turner, his other opponent and a former deputy.

While county officials insist that cutbacks were necessary to bring the county back to financial stability, Murphy suggested that citizens feel the government took the measures to show them the consequences of approving the proposed tax rollback, with the election set for Jan. 21.

"They're trying to get back at the people for the rollback," said Murphy. The candidate pointed out the cuts will be felt in visible departments — parks and recreation, law enforcement and roads.

The outlying parts of the county will suffer because of the cutbacks, suggested Murphy. "The territory you've got to cover is what hurts the most."

One deputy per shift covers the rural areas west of Odessa, up to Crane County. While one officer can handle some calls alone, others require back-up which must come from another part of the county.

Brookshire has insisted that calls will be made despite the cutbacks. He plans to cut other services, rather than the patrols.

During his career, Murphy recalled working for four sheriffs during his 11 years with the force and nine years with the Odessa police.

He has worked on and off for the sheriff's department and Odessa Police Department since 1964.

Operating a family business hauling trash and garbage on the side, Murphy was with the sheriff's department from 1969-74 and from 1977-80. Brookshire hired Murphy back onto the force the last time in October 1982 when the sanitation business was failing.

"When things fell off, the sheriff asked me to come back to work," said Murphy. "It's worked out pretty good, things have fallen in place."

"Lee Roy's a good man," said Brookshire. "If I'm sheriff, he's got a job with me."

Murphy said he might return the favor, should he be elected in November. Questioning the legality of promising a position, he said "I would if he wanted it. I'd find a place for him."

Appeal of obscenity conviction still pending

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Steve Groh

ODESSA — The appeal of an Odessa man's conviction on a commercial obscenity charge is still pending in the Eighth Judicial District Court of Appeals in El Paso while local prosecutors are refining and consolidating other obscenity cases.

A final decision on Jimmy Wayne Wright's obscenity conviction appeal may not come until the end of the year or later, said his attorney, John Cliff. An Ector County Court jury on July 20, 1983 found Wright guilty of selling a magazine it deemed obscene from an adult bookstore he owned through a corporation. He was assessed six months in jail and a fine of $2,000.

"We're still at one of the first stages of the appellate process," said County Attorney Steve Groh, who served as prosecutor. "One of the first things that has to happen is the court reporter has to prepare the record. He's been so swamped he requested additional time to prepare the record, and that was granted by the court of appeals."

Cliff said he expected to file a defense brief by March or April, the initial step, he believes, in what will lead to a reversal of Wright's conviction.

"I think there's a number of errors in the charge; the complaint itself was defective," he said. "I don't think they properly alleged an offense, which is one of those deals we held back as a tactical decision. There's some technical errors sometimes that you don't have to raise prior to trial. And then there were some errors, we think, in the trial, and frankly I don't think the evidence sufficiently supported a finding that he was in control or custody of the premises. So we feel we've got a number of grounds on which we're going to get it reversed."

Cowboy ends up as drifter on hitchhiking trail

Old Buck didn't aim to be a drifter, but that's what he became.

He started out as a cowpuncher in the Panhandle and wound up on the hitchhiking trail.

"That was a rough life," he said, then reflected: "No, it wasn't that so much. Didn't pay too good. Too much wetback labor in West Texas."

He cowboied 'til he was an old, graying man. "I'll never go back."

After each round-up, he'd hit the rodeo circuit. He did that from age 15 'til 45. "People ask me why I quit rodeoing," he said. "I tell 'em it's because the ground gets harder each year."

In World War II, he served aboard a battleship in the Pacific Theater. Once, a kamikaze pilot bore down on the ship; the sun was behind him. The plane headed for the bridge, took on lots of lead from the ship's anti-aircraft guns, missed the bridge and rammed some gun stations. "We found his goggles and bits of the airplane," he said. More than a 100 sailors aboard the ship were killed then. "We even shot down one of our own planes. The pilot came in too close to see what was going on. Our spotter wasn't too sharp on aircraft identification, I guess."

After the war, Buck returned to Silverton and to cowboying.

About five years ago, he turned in his spurs and started driving a truck.

Today, he's without a horse to ride and a truck to drive.

Instead, he was sitting on a guard-rail just outside of Seymour. He was wearing a big, black cowboy hat, boots, jeans, jacket — all garb befitting a traveling man — and was carrying a nylon tote bag. He looked foreboding and dejected. He had no family to worry about. "I'm getting to be an old man," he said. "Jobs don't come easy like they used to."

He lost his last job after another truck driver turned him in for picking up a hitchhiker. "That's against company policy, and I knew it. Voids the insurance. But most all the drivers do it."

Another trucker up at Throckmorton promised him a job after the first of the year. Buck took him at his word. But after the old cowboy had hitchhiked up there, there was no job.

"I thought you'd either be out of the country or working by now," the trucker told Buck.

He cursed the trucker out for not keeping his word. The old cowboy was aching to get back to the Panhandle. He said he wasn't going to punch cattle anymore.

It was just outside of Seymour where he hopped a ride to a Midland truckstop in his quest for his old stomping grounds.

"I haven't had a bath for three days," he said. "Forget me if I stink. I can hardly stand myself."

He ate a salami sandwich, compliments of the ride — the house — and stuffed a can of sardines into his tote bag. There was a Bible in there. He had picked it up when he "cleaned out a rest room" not long ago.

Just to get by between cowboying and truck driving, Buck said he had "done every dirty job you can think of. The worst was cleaning out a slum pit. Ever done that?"

From his coat pocket, the toothless cowboy pulled out a pack of Winston cigarettes. He prefers the Marlboro brand. He lit up.

"The last fellow who picked me up gave me these," he said. "Now I know why. They're rank. I shouldn't complain. They're better than nothing."

Old Buck talked about his past, but he really didn't reminisce. He wasn't sentimental, except when he mentioned his mother and father. "I had a good education, and my parents taught me right from wrong."

Northwest of Abilene, somewhere between Anson and Snyder, old Buck told about the time he picked up a long-haired hippie on a cold day back when he was truck driving.

The hippie was obviously famished, Buck recalled. "You hungry?" he asked the young man. "Sure, but you're not going to feed me — a hippie?"

"Why not? You're hungry."

As they walked into the cafe, Buck said, the hippie turned to him. "Won't it look strange, a cowboy and a hippie eating together?"

"A man's a man," old Buck said. "And a hungry man is still hungry."

They ate and parted company.

"That young fellow was down and out," Buck said. "Didn't have a job. Didn't know where he was going. Then, I told the young fellow something I'll never say again: 'That'll never happen to me. Look at me now.'"

Appeal of obscenity conviction pending

Even should the conviction be upheld, Cliff said he would continue the appeal process. "If we lose in El Paso, we'll definitely seek review in the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin, but I don't expect to lose," he said. "If we win it in El Paso, the state has a limited right to seek a review of that decision if it's based on constitutional grounds or holds that a law is void."

Possible recourses for overturning convictions on technicalities has prompted the county attorney's office to refile the remainder of its obscenity cases.

"The defense attorneys filed a barrage of defensive motions and rather than go ahead with the cases and take the risks of having them turned over on appeal," said Groh, "we've gone back and tried to satisfy the defense attorneys on each point so that they have no objections to the actual legal instruments that charge the clients with the offense...We're consolidating cases so each defendant will probably have one or two consolidated cases filed against him — we had some pressure from the courts to reduce the number of pending cases."

Groh said he expects preliminary motions on the new petitions "probably within a month, and I would think probably within a couple of months we should be trying some."

Both Groh and Cliff acknowledge the difficulties in combating obscenity through the courts.

"I don't know that we ever claimed that we would be able to clean up Odessa," said county attorney Groh. "There's a lot of problems in getting the job done with the statutes we have and with the court's interpretation of those statutes. It's extremely difficult to get a conviction; it's extremely difficult to get a conviction upheld; and if you do get the conviction, it may be two years later that you might be seeing someone spending some time in jail."

Groh said that in the past it was possible to shut down a business once a conviction was obtained. "That's no longer the case, so you're left with having to nibble them to death...When they've got a very lucrative business, it's hard to put them out of business just by filing a series of misdemeanor cases."

"If there's one area of the law that the appellate courts have a tendency to be very technical and very nit-picky," said defense attorney Cliff, "it's in obscenity prosecutions. I think the appellate courts are not as reluctant to reverse the case on technical grounds in an obscenity case because it's basically a victimless crime. The fact that the conviction is reversed and they've either got to throw it out or re-try it doesn't really hurt anybody."

"If you've got a murder case where you've got a dead person, the appellate court has this in the back of their mind: 'If we reverse this on a technicality, this guy's getting off the hook and he killed somebody.' Whereas in an obscenity case they'd say, 'well, we reverse on a technicality; he's getting off the hook. What's he getting off the hook for? For selling dirty books — big deal.'"

Cliff explained that the appellate courts do not look for ways to reverse a case, but rather view obscenity cases differently than those involving violent crime.

Even should the courts ultimately uphold Wright's conviction, Cliff does not believe it will drastically alter the adult bookstore businesses in Odessa and Ector County.

"They realize that if they're convicted and their convictions are upheld that they might have to do jail time, pay a fine," he said, "but that's really one of the risks, costs, of being in that kind of business. That's frankly one reason why their prices of their products are so high. If they didn't have to have attorneys on retainer and worry about fines...they could probably charge a more reasonable price."

Five Midland police officers take step up

From Staff Reports

Five police officers have been promoted and two others are retiring from the force. Chief of Police Wayne Gideon announced Wednesday.

Leaving the department is 66-year-old O.W. "Preacher" Roberts. Roberts, a sergeant, hired on in 1946 and worked in the traffic and patrol divisions during his 37-year tenure.

"I'm not going to do anything for a while," Roberts said during ceremonies at the police station Wednesday afternoon. "Then I'm going to take it one day at a time."

Present during the ceremonies was City Manager James Brown. Leaving after 30 years' service is Capt. Victor Kuykendall, 62. He came to the department in July 1953 and for the past five years has headed up the patrol division. He will assume the position of chief security officer for First City National Bank.

In commenting on the departure of Kuykendall and Roberts, Chief Gideon said: "I and the citizens of the community appreciate their long, dedicated service and wish them well."

Promoted from lieutenant to captain and replacing Kuykendall as head of the patrol division is 60-year-old Herman Wicker, a 23-year veteran of the force who was in charge of the traffic division until his promotion. He started with the department as a patrolman in November 1960.

Promoted from the training division to head of the new computerized communications system was Lt. Jim Colburn, 46. He hired on as a patrolman in July 1960 and worked in several divisions — including juvenile and detective — during his 23-year tenure on the force.

Moving from the records and identification division to head up the new computerized data processing division is 43-year-old Lt. Hank Norton, an 18-year veteran of the department who was a sergeant prior to his promotion. He started as a patrolman in February 1965.

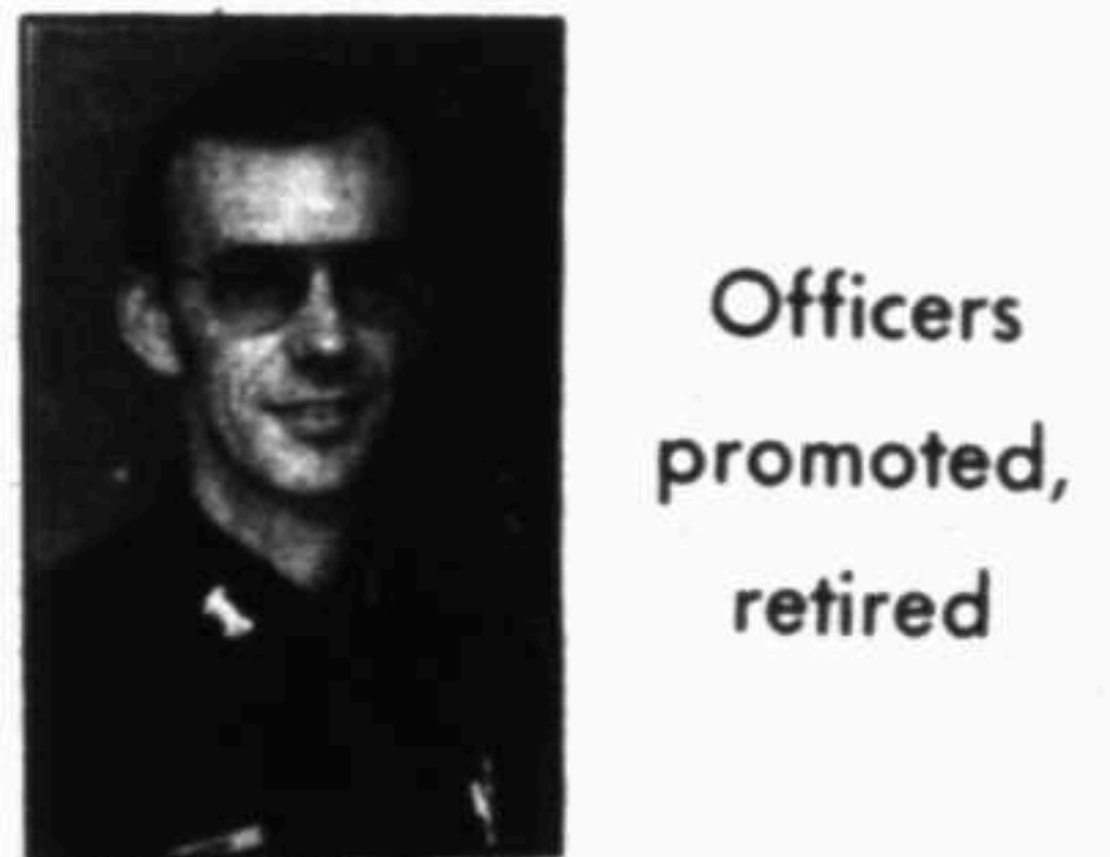

Thirty-eight-year-old Tom Hyde will maintain the rank of sergeant but will move from the detective division to head of the internal affairs division. Hyde, a 12-year veteran of the force, will replace George Foster, who resigned to become an investigator for District Attorney Vern Martin. Hyde hired on in November 1971.

The openings created by the promotions will be filled on the basis of competitive examinations tentatively scheduled for later this month, according to Gideon.

Report confirms plane stalled

From Staff Reports

A preliminary report on the Nov. 28, 1983, plane crash that killed eight persons at Midland Regional Airport reiterated a statement made earlier by a federal investigator that the plane stalled on a go-around and crashed.

The Beechcraft King Air 100 was carrying six KOSA-TV news crew members and another passenger from covering high school football games in Wichita Falls and Fort Worth when it crashed about 1:50 a.m. Nov. 28.

The report issued by the National Transportation Safety Board earlier this week noted the aircraft was approaching Runway 16-R and about 15 to 50 feet above touchdown it "initiated what appeared to be a go-around. During the go-around...the aircraft stalled."

Cold costs Odessa overtime pay

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — December's relentless cold ended up costing the city more than $11,000 in overtime and could mean the water department will have to cut back on repair services, the utilities director said.

He said overtime, normally anywhere from $900 to $1,000 a month, is 900 percent more," Director of Utilities Bob Derrington said. He said the December cold snap forced the city to pay the huge amount of overtime to repair about 55 mains and 238 customer service lines that burst because of the sub-freezing temperatures.

"We spent about $11,200 in overtime during the last two weeks and we're probably going to be spending more," Derrington said.

Because the overtime pay exceeds the water distribution department's budget, Derrington speculated that services may be cut back.

Man predicts weather with bear fat

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

WEED, N.M. — It was a big day at the tiny isolated mountain school. Gordon "Bear Fat" Wimsatt had come to address the student body.

Wimsatt, 68, is one of the most colorful characters in New Mexico's Sacramento Mountains. For 50 years he has been predicting weather by studying bear fat in glass bottles.

Local citizens in the area — in Cloudercroft, Mountain Park, Elk, Weed, Mayhill and Elk Silver — swear by his forecasts.

He has 150 bottles filled with bear grease occupying every window sill in his home — bear fat in pickle jars, fruit jars, baby food jars, cosmetic jars.

"Mr. Wimsatt is seldom off the mark," Principal Edward Kline, 36, told the student body of 83 kindergarten through 12th grade, at Weed School.

The boys and girls come to the school from as far away as 30 miles. The town of Weed, at an elevation of 7,018 feet, has a population of only 34.

Wimsatt first spent an hour talking about predicting weather with bear fat to the 30 kindergarten and grade school boys and girls. Then he spent another hour talking to the 53 high school students.

"I know what the weather's gonna do by studying the patterns in the grease," explained Wimsatt. He had brought along 14 jars of the fat.

It's a lost art I learned from an Apache Indian friend, the late George Hightower, a respected New Gordon Wimsatt demonstrates his method of weather prediction.

Mexico state game warden in these parts for many years.

Wimsatt told the students that he is always on the lookout for more bear grease. "It's bear hunting season now, as you all know," said the bear fat man. "If you hear of anyone getting a bear, tell him to save the fat for the old weather man."

He said the more fat he has the easier it is to figure out what the weather is going to be.

"All you need is one jar of fat. But if you have 150 jars like I have and you look, and hear, all of them have the same pattern, you can make your forecast a lot more accurate."

Wimsatt said if the fat in a jar is on the bottom of the jar, it will be no change in the weather for the next two or three days.

"When the fat is in the middle of the jar, it means a storm is on the way. If the fat is on the sides of the jar, it means a fat mean, and if the fat is on the top of the jar, it means a light breeze, and if the fat is on the bottom of the jar, it means a wind."

For years TV weather forecasters have been predicting the weather from 14 jars of fat. Wimsatt said he has been predicting the weather from 14 jars of fat for 50 years.

The jars are filled with bear grease, and Wimsatt said he has been predicting the weather from 14 jars of fat for 50 years.

Shrimp inhabit odd lake

By The Los Angeles Times—
Washington Post News Service

MONO LAKE, Calif. — There is something about this lake that is strange, something you sense but cannot put your finger on. But as you stand by the shore in the warm, dry air, you gradually begin to notice the little things, the natural nuances of twigs and pebbles and leaves that betray the secrets of a place, and suddenly you realize that there are no reeds here, no lily pads, no moss, none of the lush green life that normally thrives around a freshwater lake.

Around the edge there are no frogs, no minnows, no fish of any sort — only swarms of a curious creature that at first glance looks like a downy feather suspended in water. They are everywhere. About 24-inch long, they slowly and deliberately stroke the water with two rows of delicate fins that branch, finer and finer like the antennae of a moth. In places they have gathered into dense clouds over lake-bottom springs, and the water welling up from below carries them billowing to the surface like smoke. There they turn and flutter down into the depths again.

The water itself is clear as air along the shore. Still, you can see the strangeness in it. There is something heavy, almost oily in the way it moves. The ripples are sluggish, instead of tossing off little droplets and wrinkling into fine little ridges as they scurry before the breeze, they glide along in relative slow-motion. When the breeze stops, the surface smooths into a mirror of incomparable sheen. The reflections of the Sierra Nevada standing just to the west seem to tower down as clearly as the real granite towers up.

This is Mono Lake, located a few miles east of Yosemite National Park, and its water is indeed different. It is 2 1/2 times saltier than the ocean and 80 times more alkaline, with an incredible Ph of 10. It will rot good leather boots in three months. It is said to attack nylon rope, turning it into a stiff brittle shaft that will break like a rotten twig. It is so dense that a diver cannot remain under the surface even if he wears 30 pounds of lead weights. And it is so vile that one swallow will cause violent retching.

Only a very few creatures can live entirely in its emulsion. One of the exceptions are the feathery creatures floating everywhere, brine shrimp, so called because they have evolved a unique physiology to cope with this caustic, salty habitat.

Other creatures are occasional visitors. A small, gray-brown bird skims along the surface and settles onto the rim of the mountains. It begins swimming erratically, veering left, then right, circling, slowing down, speeding up, always moving. It is about the size of a robin, but with its long, slender bill looks like a sandpiper. A Wilson's phalarope, it is staying over at Mono Lake along with 100,000 of its kind in order to molt and to add fat for a 2 1/2-day non-stop flight over the Pacific to its wintering grounds in Argentina.

On the glassy surface the bird's reflection appears to be another bird, a Siamese twin fused along the stomach and swimming along in upside-down lock step. The pair glide across the reflected wall of snow-capped Sierras, miniature ripples fanning out behind and rocking the mountains with the elastic contractions of water.

You raise your binoculars to watch more closely, and the bird transforms into a creature the size of a dog. Its little brown eyes glint back at you. It paddles with short, pumping strokes as it chases some sort of insect that peppers the surface all around.

DEAR ABBY

Wife 'other woman' for own husband

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, my husband of 23 years (we're both in our mid-40s) left me to move in with a 23-year-old girl he picked up in a bar. Until then we had a good and loving relationship. Then his business failed, which was more than he could handle, so he left.

He didn't leave completely. He keeps many of his personal belongings here, still pays all the household expenses and comes to see me two or three nights a week. (We usually end up in bed.) Of course, we can't see any of our old friends anymore or go out in public because he doesn't want his girlfriend to know about our continuing relationship.

My question: Am I doing the right thing by continuing to see my husband? I think he needs all the love and support I can give him. I'm sure that when he gets things figured out he will want to come back home again. But until then, what about the girl?

I don't want to hurt anyone, but I still love my husband and don't want to let him down when he needs me. What do you advise? — THE OTHER WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: You are to be commended for your loyalty, devotion, understanding and support of a husband who left you to live with another woman. But what kind of man would live with one woman and sneak out to be with another two or three times a week? Take a closer look at this deceitful and mixed-up character. What assurance have you that he will return and be a decent husband again? You are being more a forgiving mother to him than a wife, but if you are happy in that role, 'tis folly to be wise.

DEAR ABBY: I recently announced my engagement, so everywhere I go people congratulate me, then they say, "I'm looking for my invitation." Or they ask the wedding date, and when I tell them, they say, "Oh, great, I can make it!" I am furious at myself for not saying something on the spot to let them know I had not planned on inviting them. These people who are not my close friends try to bribe me by saying, "If you invite me, I'll bring a nice present." That is not the point. I can't invite the whole blasted community to my wedding!

My parents are retired and can't afford to pay for my wedding, so my fiancé and I are footing the bill, and we are limited because of the cost.

How should I handle these people who invite themselves? I hate to hurt their feelings, but I need to let them know they shouldn't expect an invitation. — SPEECHLESS AND FUMING

DEAR S. AND F.: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you are planning to have a very small wedding because that's all you can afford.

DEAR ABBY: A New York reader wrote that a relative who had died on a trip to Poland was buried there because it would have been too expensive ($7,500) to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. I wondered why cremation wasn't considered. It would have cost much less to have his remains (ashes) flown home.

I had always wondered why, with Europe's long history, some of those countries weren't crowded with cemeteries. On my first visit there I learned that as long as someone pays rent on a burial plot, the remains are left undisturbed. But if payments cease, the grave is emptied in preparation for the next occupant. — MINNEAPOLIS M.D.

AT WORK

Teacher wants career change

By ADELE SCHEELLE, Ph.D.

Q. As a teacher considering a career change, I find myself facing the possibility that I may not be marketable for anything other than education. As I look at the want ads in the newspaper and trade magazines, it becomes clear that I do not have the sales or technical experience that most companies are looking for.

I believe, however, that my experience in instruction and curriculum development has prepared me for positions that require creativity as well as the ability to work under stress. I have also been nominated as "teacher of the year."

Could you please tell me how to promote my qualifications within the business community?

A. Because you are switching not only careers but sectors — from the public to the private — I doubt that you will find any ads that would directly apply to you.

Therefore, plan to take several months exploring that most difficult and intense form of learning — connecting. You are obviously talented and articulate. Therefore you could be an asset in any labor relations, communications or training department.

Most large organizations (i.e., manufacturers or service — banks, insurance companies, unions) have specialists in telecommunications, public affairs, and in publishing itself. For example, because you can write curricula and instructional material, then you're a natural for translating or redesigning educational software packages to lay audiences, or technical writing for manuals, or directly for house organs.

Do some homework on companies, their divisions, and future growth plans, then find people to introduce you. Then it's up to you to demonstrate your capability, including your writing samples, to show your value.

If that doesn't work at first, write a few articles about how industry needs educators for exactly these purposes and show the stories around. You must develop another side to yourself — salesmanship — which includes persuasiveness and persistence — to make the switch.

Q. I am an interior decorator who would like to find clients with budgets large enough to include art in the Architectural Digest! How do I do this?

A. Go back to your previous clients who fit the bill and ask for referrals. If you don't have such clients, then approach a likely one and offer a discount or trade if he or she will agree to some publicity when the job is complete.

Dr. Scheele answers letters from readers in her column. Sorry, she cannot make individual replies.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Ailing African violets need definite change

By ELVIN McDONALD

The other day I suggested getting rid of any African violet that hasn't bloomed in six months. The alternatives are to go on hoping — or to make some definite change that is likely to induce a profusion of bloom.

Reinhold Holtkamp, whose Optimara violets have become the world's standard, says the hybrids his family is producing already yield two flowering stems per leaf and soon they will habitually throw off three. Instead of the usual fertilizer for flowering plants, such as 5-10-5 or 15-30-15, use 14-12-14, which is sold at retail under the Optiflora name.

Another reason violets don't bloom is that they have insufficient light. Move plants from a dim spot or north window to one facing east or west. Increase the amount of fluorescent light by cleaning the tubes, replacing with fresh or increasing the wattage.

At the dawn of light gardening in the 1950s, I saw African violets grown to perfection under two 40-watt fluorescent tubes placed about 12-18 inches above the plants. Lately I notice that light setups are more likely to be maxi — either four tubes where two were used before, or VHO, for

Cold water causes spots on violet leaves.

Very High Output.

One more tip: Use only water warmed to room temperature. Cold showers cause ugly spots on violet leaves.

Extraordinary African violets are grown by many amateurs in both window and electric light. When I said throw out the nonbloomers, I meant only to take positive action. The genus Saintpaulia has in fact never been more exciting nor filled with so many new hybrids.

After the holidays is a good time to visit your local garden center. Look for items to improve your indoor garden. Today, for instance, I brought home a palm-size plastic greenhouse filled with an African violet collector's garden. It cost only a few dollars and offers everything needed to grow as many as 50 new hybrids.

Sowing seeds is an act of faith, of optimism, of hope in the future. The minute we commit the seed to the growing medium and set about providing the moisture and temperature needed to trigger sprouting — we have something to look forward to, a reason to get out of bed, to think about the welfare of life that is dependent on us.

AT WIT'S END

Batteries herald winter

By ERMA BOMBECK

For months now, weather forecasters have been saying this is going to be a record-breaking winter for snow . . . 5.149 inches of it, to be exact.

On what do they base these predictions? Caterpillars. They have thin brown bands across their middles and are moving fast. Squirrels. They're laying in an extra supply of acorns. Onions. They have thick skins and anyone knows thick-skinned onions can mean only one thing. Snow.

I could have told you long before this that the winter was going to be a bruiser. Only my premises are more scientific.

Car batteries with a warranty that has run out. Nothing heralds the arrival of a fierce winter like a temperamental battery. The colder it gets, the more independent it becomes. On a blustery morning when you are running late, it will groan and sputter and then go dead. It is only a matter of time before it will demand an audience before it performs — like a man from AAA three or four times a week.

Shortage of firewood. Count on record-breaking snows when you see a few branches of twigs at the supermarket being sold for $20 a bundle.

Snow shovel. You know you're in for at least 130 inches of snow when you discover your wife has loaned your snow shovel to the Bingham who took it with them when they moved to Florida last April.

Dogs' kidneys. There is a strong correlation between snowy winters and dogs' resistance to go out of doors to relieve themselves. Some dogs start as early as September to avoid any traffic patterns around doors leading to the outside. Even owners who stand with the door wide open in the winter and who beg, plead and grovel are faced with dogs with better sense than they have.

People can control their thermal destiny, if they want to. Mild winters can be calculated and planned like everything else. You want sunshine in January, February and March? Buy a new pair of skis. Get a pair of new boots for each one of the kids. Get your furnace cleaned. Stockpile food and supplies. Have rock salt in a handy container outside your front door. And then sit back and watch the sun shine.

I read somewhere where the coldest temperature ever registered on the planet earth was at a Soviet Union Antarctic station at Vostok. The temperature was 128 degrees below zero on July 21 of last year.

They probably asked for it. Some husband probably said, "Look, Anna, I know 200 people are a lot to invite for a party, but we'll cook out and keep the mess outside!"

Tips can cut heating bills

Here are some suggested easy methods to conserve on home heating:

- Set thermostats as low as comfort permits.
- When retiring, turn the heat down at least five degrees.
- Wear warm clothing indoors as well as out.

- Keep all windows and doors shut.
- Use nature by opening window shades to let in the sun's heat.
- Turn the thermostat down to at least 60 degrees if you take a vacation or a weekend trip.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

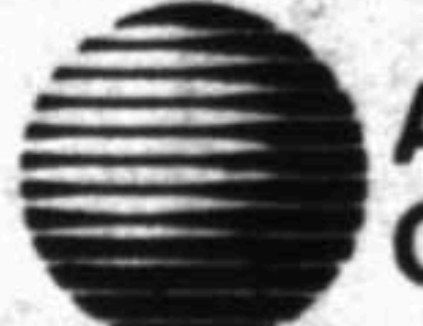

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas.

Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 1984, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates.

If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Credits getting 'silly,' studio head says

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nearly 20 names are crammed into ads for the movie "Christine," and some film industry executives say the cascade of credits is as out of control as the movie's murderous Plymouth sedan.

The "Christine" ad's prolific print includes three mentions each for director John Carpenter and producer Richard Kobritz; two credits for Stephen King, who wrote the book about the car with lethal urges; and the names of the associate producer, two executive producers, one co-producer and the director of photography.

For all those moviemakers, credits represent recognition their colleagues can't miss as well as fatter future contracts. But ego is what prompts many to fight for their credit line.

"I know my mother will be thrilled when my name appears as producer of 'Electric Guitar,'" Arnold Stiefel says of his upcoming concert film. "Since this business is populated by overachievers who had less than wonderful childhoods, it's nice to get a paid-ad credit to make up for that terrible year in the fifth grade."

The studios, which negotiated many of the credits into contracts as a form of non-monetary compensation, are now complaining about swelling advertising bills, the biggest factor in a recent push by some executives to restrict the fine print.

"In most places in the United States, these names mean little or nothing to the public," says Paramount Pictures Chairman Barry Diller. "They don't sell any tickets. It's getting a little silly."

Diller and other members of the Joint Creative Rights Committee of the studios and Directors Guild of America concede the studios are partly at fault.

But that didn't stop a group of studio executives from placing a recent trade-journal ad urging a reduction in "the cascade of credits" — a call likely to generate hot debate at next year's negotiations with writers' and directors' unions.

"This is like Detroit, where management didn't do its job and now is screaming," says Naomi Gurian, executive director of the Writers Guild of America, West. "They give away these credits in negotiations with lawyers and agents and packagers, and now they're complaining about it."

For example, Burt Reynolds' contract for "The Man Who Loved Women" specifies that his name must appear on any ad that credits the film's director, co-producer and co-writer, Blake Edwards.

So must the names of co-producer Tony Adams, executive producer Jonathan Krane and co-writers Milton Wexler and Geoffrey Edwards.

"It's essentially a chain reaction," says Columbia Pictures' director of contract administration Ivy Orta. "If one is mentioned, they all have to be mentioned."

Producer Marvin Mirisch believes reducing the number of credits would be "beneficial for the entire industry...You can't read the names anyway on our billboards on Sunset Boulevard. If you try to read that small type, you'll end up in a car accident."

But the Producers Guild of America, an unofficial bargaining group, says the real problem is that studios are crediting people who don't deserve them.

"What you see more often than not are people taking producer credits who don't deserve them," guild executive director Charles B. Fitzsimmons says.

"These are usually promoters, agents and packagers, not actual producers. We believe the person who actually made the picture is entitled to credit."

Diller says his committee isn't trying to withhold deserved honors, "but what is the sense of running a group of names to which audiences have no point of reference? The purpose of ads is to sell the movie, not the egos."

Linkletter's 'House Party' comes to computer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I don't know what mom and pop talk about at night; their door is always locked!"

Such juvenile candor, which often made audiences blush when uttered by children on Art Linkletter's old "House Party" radio and television show, is scheduled to enter American living rooms again by means of microcomputers.

Linkletter plans an electronic version of his best-selling book, "Kids Say the Darndest Things."

Academy has task of awarding stars in movies without stars

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When a movie has eight supporting players and no stars, whom do the supporting players support?

That is the absurdity facing members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as they start considering their nominations for best achievements of 1983. Two major films have "ensemble" casts, that is, several players with more or less equal roles.

"The Big Chill," the tale of 1960s collegiates who gather for a bitter-sweet reunion, features Tom Berenger, Glenn Close, Jeff Goldblum, William Hurt, Kevin Kline, Mary Kay Place, Meg Tilly, JoBeth Williams.

Who are the stars of "The Big Chill"? None of the above, says Columbia Pictures. In trade paper ads Columbia lists all eight as supporting players.

"The Right Stuff" features

another ensemble cast, with Charles Frank, Scott Glenn, Ed Harris, Lance Henriksen, Scott Paulin, Dennis Quaid and Fred Ward playing the original U.S. astronauts. There's also Sam Shepard as test pilot Chuck Yeager. The Ladd Company has proposed Shepard for best actor, the others as supporting actors.

Logic may not be on the side of the studios, but history is. Jack Albertson ("The Subject Was Roses") and George Burns ("The Sunshine Boys") won Oscars as supporting actors in roles that seemed to be starring. On the other hand, Paramount last year promoted Susan Sarandon as supporting actress for "Atlantic City," but she was nominated for best actress.

The Academy voters themselves make the final decision as to who stars and who supports. This year they will have a harder choice.

"Terms of Endearment" appears to be the leading contender, because of its dominance of the year-end honors from critics' organizations and individual reviewers.

Here is one reporter's view of the probable nominees, more or less in order:

Best Picture — "Terms of Endearment," "The Big Chill," "The Right Stuff," "Educating Rita," "The Dresser," "Yentl," "Tender Mercies"
Best Actor — Tom Courtenay and Albert Finney, "The Dresser," Robert Duvall, "Tender Mercies," Michael Caine, "Educating Rita," Tom Conti, "Reuben, Reuben," Richard Farnsworth, "The Grey Fox," Eric Roberts, "Star 80," Ben Kingsley, "The Betrayal," Sam Shepard, "The Right Stuff"
Best Actress — Shirley MacLaine and Debra Winger, "Terms of Endearment," Meryl Streep, "Silkwood," Jane Alexander, "Testament," Barbra Streisand, "Yentl," Bonnie Bedelia, "Heart Like a Wheel," "The Big Chill," "The Right Stuff," "Educating Rita," "The Dresser," "Yentl," "Tender Mercies," "The Twilight Zone," Scott Glenn, Ed Harris and Dennis Quaid, "The Right Stuff," William Hurt and Jeff Goldblum, "The Big Chill," Charles Durning, "To Be or Not To Be," Rip Torn, "Cross Creek," Beau Bridges, "Heart Like a Wheel," Best Supporting Actor — Glenn Close and JoBeth Williams, "The Big Chill," Dana Hill and Alfre Woodard, "Cross Creek," Cher, "Silkwood," Eileen Atkins, "The Dresser," Tess Harper, "Tender Mercies," Amy Irving, "Yentl,"

Some child actors troubled as adults

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shirley Temple had few problems making the transition from child superstar to responsible and enterprising adult. Judy Garland, though an entertainment success, spent her adult years filled with misery. Why do some child stars make it and others don't?

"A lot has to do with the parents," says Andrea Darvi, a former child actress who has made a study of young performers. "If the parents instill their children with a self-worth that hinges solely on acting, then the children will have trouble adjusting to adult life."

"Some parents have been able to give their performing children other values. But the vast majority of child actors have a rocky road ahead of them."

Ms. Darvi is the author of "Pretty Babies," a new McGraw-Hill book subtitled "An Insider's Look at the World of the Hollywood Child Star." She was no star, but she had an active career in TV dramas and commercials from the ages of 6 to 14. With her dark, waifish looks, she often was cast as a war orphan or refugee.

"Every former child actor finds it difficult to adjust to adult life after the fame, glamour and glory of their youth," she said in a telephone interview. "If you are cute, you receive a lot of adulation for that reason alone."

"You find yourself thrust into an adult world, having to try out before Rod Serling and George Cukor, as I did. The bitterness of the competition is intense, not only from the mothers, but the agents as well. They're the worst of all. It's a high stakes world you're in, at an age when most children are out playing. No wonder you become cynical and distrustful."

Miss Darvi admits that she feels scarred. "At the age of 31, I feel like 60, because I've lived two lives," she said.

For "Pretty Babies," Miss Darvi interviewed former child performers from Baby Peggy — Diana Serra Cary, who has also written a book about child actors — to Kristy McNichol.

There were varied comments from her subjects. Linda Blair, who rose to fame as the possessed youngster in "The Exorcist," said: "You have to grow up early. I've been working and supporting myself since I was 6 years old...I competed with kids whose parents supported them. It was very hard. I paid my dues. I was never carefree."

Dwayne Hickman of TV's "Dobie Gillis" said: "It's an unnatural way of life for a child. It's like asking him to come over to CBS and be an executive like I am now. It has no advantages. I don't know why kids or parents do it."

Mickey Rooney, who as a child played in the "Andy Hardy" movies, commented: "Up to 'Sugar Babies' I was a famous has-been. In the '60s and '70s, nobody wanted Mickey Rooney."

Peggy Ann Garner, who starred in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," said: "When I walk on a set today, people say, 'Why aren't you working more?' I should be more aggressive. But if you're used to the studio and the agent taking care of you, it's hard to pick up a phone and say, 'Hi, here I am.' It shakes me, tears me apart. It's a fear of rejection."
