King takes witness stand

Beaten motorist testifies of 'attack'

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Rodney King took the witness stand Tuesday for the first time since his videotaped beating and said he was "attacked" by police officers, including one who screamed racial insults and told him, "We're going to kill you."

King, speaking in a soft voice, said he never attacked the officers accused of violating his civil rights.

"I was trying to stay alive," King told the jury. "They never gave me a chance to stay still."

'I was just trying to stay alive. They never gave me a chance to stay still.'

King's testimony was his first detailed public account of the night the black motorist's speeding car was pursued by police officers and he was beaten after finally coming to a stop.

In cross-examination, two defense attorneys challenged King's truthfulness in previous statements about the beating. King acknowledged he had lied to his parole officer, denying he was drunk and speeding when police chased him down.

"I was scared of going back to prison," he explained repeatedly.

He also said that when he led police on a

FBI: Koresh displays dual personalities

■ Cult leader might be succumbing to duress, agents say.

WACO — The leader of a radical religious cult is displaying dual personalities — spouting profanity and talking peace — in the 10th day of his standoff with hundreds of lawmen, the FBI said Tuesday.

"We have two irreconcilable tracks on which we are dealing," FBI spokesman Bob Ricks said. "We go from discussions of belligerency to one where he wants to be a peacemaker and send his peace message throughout the world."

FBI negotiations continue with cult leader David Koresh, whose Branch Davidian followers killed four Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents and wounded 16 in a firefight Feb. 28 at his 77-acre compound east of Waco.

Since then, the compound has been surrounded by hundreds of law enforcement officers armed with everything from pistols to Army main battle tanks.

Temperatures to plummet, pull curtain on warm spell

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Although Tuesday's high came within one degree of the record high for the date of 85, temperatures will take a 20-degree drop today as an Arctic cold front moves into area.

The area's summer-like weather of clear skies and highs in the 80s will be replaced by cloudy skies, low temperatures and the possibility of light rain as the front moves in from the Rocky Mountains.

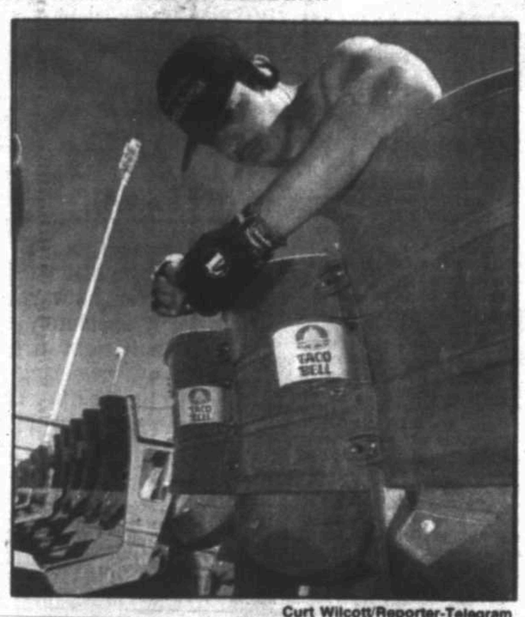

After a high in the lower 60s today, the temperatures will continue to drop over the next several days, with Friday's high reaching only into the 30s.

Saturday's high is expected to crawl back into the 40s or 50s but Sunday will bring warmer air back into the area with a high returning to the 60s.

Although the Arctic front will bring snow to the Panhandle and snow mixed with rain as close as Lubbock, the Permian Basin will have just a slight chance of rain. Today will see increased cloudiness, with a 30 percent chance of light rain on Thursday. There is only a small possibility of rain on Friday.

Clinton backs quick aid for Russia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton said Tuesday he will try to mobilize swift Western help for Russia in an effort to keep its endangered political and economic reforms on track. He said the crisis cannot wait until a seven-nation summit in July.

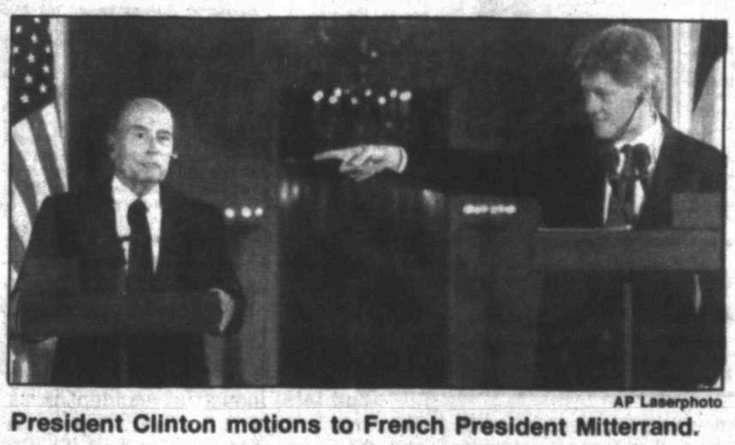

Adding his support for a proposed emergency meeting of the Group of Seven major industrialized nations, Clinton said it was "important for us to try to move aggressively to give the Russians the means to restore some economic growth and opportunity and preserve political liberty."

French President Francois Mitterrand, joining Clinton at a press conference after an introductory meeting, voiced his own support for an emergency G-7 summit.

"There are problems, specifically in Eastern Europe and in Russia, that are urgent," Mitterrand said.

Former President Nixon, who met Monday evening with Clinton to discuss Russia, met separately Tuesday with Republican and Democratic senators to urge more U.S. aid to Russia and other states of the former Soviet Union. Congressional sources said Nixon made the

Oil-field storage tank crushes man

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A 44-year-old man using a welding torch to cut up an oil-field storage tank was killed when the massive tank crushed him about 3 p.m. Tuesday in the 7800 block of West Highway 80.

"He was cutting the tank and apparently it just fell over on him. The tank either blew over or fell over" from being cut, Midland County Fire Marshal Dale Little said at the scene.

Roger Williams, who was staying at the Crown Inn in Odessa, was an independent contractor who was salvaging the approximately 5,000-barrel tank for scrap metal, officials said.

"There was no one else out here at the time. A partner out here had gone to get a Coke," Little said.

"We don't know if he was cutting it from the inside or the outside," he said. "It looked like he tried to get out from under it," Little added.

A later report indicated Williams was inside the tank when it began to fall and he attempted to crawl out.

tween winter and spring in West Texas. Until spring and summer officially make their entrance into the area, temperatures and precipitation could fluxate wildly from day to day.

Today's temperatures will be noticeably lower than Tuesday's high of 84, with the day's high reaching into the lower 60s. Winds will be northwest at 10-20 mph, becoming northeast by noon.

Tonight should be cloudy with a low in the upper 30s.

Thursday should have a 30 percent chance of light rain and a high in the upper 40s.

STATE

Old Man Winter still has some business to do in Texas, and the sunny conditions that have persisted for days may soon give way to lower temperatures and increasing clouds.

Skies over South Texas were mostly sunny with only a few high clouds in some spots. Mild south and southwesterly winds accompanied temperatures that went up to 90 degrees in Del Rio.

The forecast for the region calls for increasing cloudiness with highs in the 80s and evening lows in the 40s and 50s.

Sunny skies and high temperatures prevailed across West Texas as temperatures rose into the 70s and 80s.

NATION

Snow was scattered from the northern Plains to New England on Tuesday, and melting snow caused scattered flooding in the Midwest.

At midday, snow fell over parts of North Dakota, the upper Mississippi Valley, upper Ohio Valley, and into northeastern New York state and northern New England.

Snow changed to rain over eastern and southern New England.

In South Dakota, wind gusted to 51 mph at Rapid City and to 68 mph at Buffalo.

A new surge of cold weather brought winter storm watches in effect for Wednesday over extreme northern Illinois, central and southern Wisconsin, and the southern half of Lower Michigan.

The colder weather could slow the melting of snow and allow some flooded streams to slowly recede.

Along the Platte River in eastern Nebraska, about two dozen families were flown to safety by National Guard helicopter after water burst through a dike in the Thomas Lake area and flooded recreational cabins.

Ice jams and snowmelt along the Platte have caused flooding in eastern Nebraska for several days, mostly inundating low-lying fields but also closing some highways.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CRUSHES: One man dies

(From 1A)

An emergency crew had to jack up the cylindrical structure to free the body, situated face down.

Assisting the Sheriff's Office were the Midland Fire Department and the Department of Public Safety.

After being pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, the body was taken to Thomas Funeral Home. Next of kin in Lubbock were notified.

The tank accident was the second fatal industrial accident in as many days in Midland County. A 32-year-old Midlander died shortly after midnight Tuesday from burns sustained in a well fire southeast of Midland, according to officials at Lubbock's University Center Burn Unit.

Omar Montenez suffered burns over about 95 percent of his body Monday after a leak from the well he was working on caught fire, officials said.

long chase, refusing to stop, "I was hoping the problem would go away. . . . I stopped at all the stop lights and stop signs and when I saw the problem wouldn't go away, I pulled over."

Attorney Michael Stone, who was cross-examining King when court recessed for the day, said King's testimony "hurt us a lot."

He promised to undermine the testimony when he resumes questioning King on Wednesday.

The testimony in the federal trial of four white policemen came two years after the March 3, 1991, beating, which led to a state trial, acquittals and three days of deadly rioting.

King, 27, said the officers asked at one point how he felt. "I said I felt fine. I didn't want them to know what they were doing to me was really getting to me. I didn't want them to have the satisfaction."

Under questioning by prosecutor Barry Kowalski, King insisted he never resisted arrest and suggested that a woman state Highway Patrol officer who first tracked him down for speeding could have handcuffed him if Los Angeles police had not intervened.

He said he was lying face down, trying to cooperate when officers leaped on him and "one of them applied pressure like he was trying to snap my wrist in half." He said he screamed in pain, and then heard someone shout "Back!"

"They all backed away from me and I'm still on the ground waiting to be handcuffed and shortly after that I was shocked by a Taser."

Asked what the stun-gun darts felt like when they hit him, he said, "I got shocked and it felt like my blood was boiling inside of me."

Moments later, as he was on the ground, he said, he heard the shout: "'We're going to kill you nigger, run!'"

"I ran closer to the Hyundai (his car) and I was struck across the right side of the face again," King said pointing to his temple. "To this day there is a bump right here."

Kowalski asked what King heard while being clubbed and kicked.

"I'm not exactly sure but I heard while they were hitting me chants of 'killer, nigger, how do you feel killer?'"

He was asked whether he truly remembered the officers say "nigger" or "killer." King said he wasn't sure.

Outside court, defense attorney Harland Braun noted that no other witness had reported hearing racial epithets, so King couldn't be believed.

"His case will rest and fall on the question of whether there were any racial epithets," Braun said.

King directed most of his comments to the jury, using his hands for emphasis. At first he seemed nervous, licking his lips, but as his narrative continued he appeared to grow calm.

He recalled being taken to a hospital, then being transferred to yet another hospital in a police car. He said an officer, previously identified as defendant Timothy Wind, sat in the back seat with him.

"I was bent over in the back seat of the police car from the pain. He kept snatching me by the collar of the shirt and saying, 'Stay with me now, stay with me.' . . . It was very painful from the injuries and I wanted to curl up."

Upon arrival, he said, "We were walking into the hospital and one of the police who walked me in said, 'Oh, he's on PCP.' I said, 'Why do you keep saying that?'"

King admitted he had too much to drink that night but said he has never taken PCP and had not used marijuana for some time before the beating.

He recalled the next morning as painful and confusing after he awakened in the jail ward

"I was having trouble remembering exactly what went on but I know for sure I was attacked by police officers," he said.

King acknowledged that the night of the beating he had been drinking while watching a basketball game on television, and admitted to speeding — going about 75 mph to 80 mph.

A convicted robber who served jail time, King said he didn't pull over because he was afraid he would be going back to prison.

Before King's testimony, two defense lawyers disclosed outside the jury's presence that King tested positive for cocaine and heroin use in the months after his beating and asked to question him and his doctors about it.

But when doctors took the stand, drug questions were not asked.

However on cross-examination, two defense attorneys opened the door to damaging testimony from a doctor who said King's injuries were caused by baton blows to the head.

RUSSIA: Crisis cannot wait, president says trip to Capitol Hill because Clinton asked him to make a special appeal to GOP senators.

(From 1A)

In a brief corridor interview, Nixon said he believes U.S. aid can decide "whether political and economic freedom survive" in Russia and the other former Soviet republics.

The idea of an early G-7 summit has drawn opposition from Tokyo, host for the next scheduled annual meeting of the United States, Canada, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Japan. Tokyo does not want anything to steal the thunder from its July summit, and it also has a longstanding territorial dispute with Russia over four islands.

"The important point I'd like to make is I don't believe we can wait until July for the major countries of the world who care about what happens in Russia and who would like very much to keep political and economic reform on track there, to move," Clinton said.

Still, Clinton left open the possibility that aid for Russia could be dealt with at a lower level, such as finance or foreign ministers. G-7 finance ministers and central bank presidents are to meet in Washington in late April, and Russia's struggle is expected to be at the top of their agenda.

White House communications director George Stephanopoulos said a heads-of-state meeting was possible but was not the only way the issue could be dealt with.

Clinton and Mitterrand held talks in the Oval Office and met again over lunch. In between, they appeared at a joint news conference in which Clinton said the West needs France's leadership. Mitterrand said Clinton's "fame has already encompassed the world several times."

On topics other than Russia:

■ Clinton said they agreed it would be a mistake for France to increase its troops in Bosnia or for the United States "to introduce troops to become embroiled in the conflict" in the absence of a peace accord. However, he said the United States would be interested "in being part of a United Nations effort to secure the agreement."

■ Clinton said that despite his criticism of French and other European subsidies to Airbus, the European commercial jetliner company, he has no plans to try to renounce a U.S.-European agreement negotiated by the Bush administration that confers U.S. support for the planes. "The ement must be honored and tly adhered to," he said.

VOTES: Council approves code of ethics

(From 1A)

trict 1 council member James Devenport abstaining.

The code of ethics will regulate and set standards on numerous council activities including the acceptance of private gifts in excess of $100 within a year and limiting the influence a council member can have on a venture in which they are indirectly involved.

The ethics policy was adopted only after council members agreed to delete a section that would have banned council members from endorsing political candidates — including fellow council members — and participating in other candidates' political campaigns.

"Several people indicated that the political section was beyond what we originally intended to do — which was to regulate ourselves," Morrow said. "Therefore, we cut it out."

Morrow, who drafted the policy, received help from District 4 council member Claudia Egan, Assistant City Attorney Chad Weaver and former Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe.

The ethics guidelines also will regulate the confidentiality of executive session matters including personnel concerns, real estate issues and pending litigation.

Faircloth, who declined to vote on a council item for the first time in four years, said the measure was too vague. He would not elaborate on which issues he didn't support.

"There were clearly some things I didn't want to vote for . . . clearly items that are objectionable to me," he said. "But I also did not want to vote against the good things. They did a good job with it."

The policy will be implemented immediately upon second-reading approval and will apply to all council-appointed board members beginning in March 1994, if passed.

Board members — such as the airport board and planning and zoning board — would be subject to removal from their position pending the outcome of a council vote.

Council members found in violation of the policy would be subject to a "reprimand" from the council but could only be removed from office by the voters.

"Board members could be removed because they are appointed by us," he said. "But council members are put in office by the voters. Therefore, only the voters can take them out."

Other regulations set forth in the code of ethics include:

■ Public officials, in the discharge of their duties, should be independent, impartial and responsible only to the people of the city.

■ Public office may not be used for personal gain.

■ Council members should not participate or make decisions on issues in which they have a direct financial interest or engage in any business transaction which could be considered a conflict of interest.

■ Council members should not give special treatment to a person or group beyond what is available to every person or group.

STANDOFF: Negotiations with cult continue

(From 1A)

Ricks said the FBI still hopes to resolve the standoff peacefully.

However, he warned, "I want to make it absolutely clear that we have sufficient firepower to respond overpoweringly."

"We have sufficient firepower, if we choose, to completely neutralize this situation at any moment," he said. "We do not choose to do that."

Ricks said that during telephone conversations with Koresh, the 33-year-old cult leader is showing signs of increased irritability.

"There is . . . the use of profanities on their side," he said. "It's probably duress and stress on their part."

Ricks said Koresh also appears to indicate some interest in ending the standoff.

"He reiterated that he intends to come out but is still waiting for a message from God," Ricks said.

He said at least two cult members were killed in the Feb. 28 gunfire, and additional cult members reportedly may have been slain. The FBI allowed cult members to bury one of their dead on Monday, about 50 yards outside the compound.

Ricks also said that McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell had been enlisted to participate in some talks with Koresh.

"The sheriff has had numerous contacts with David Koresh" and developed trust with the cult leader in the past, he said.

Shortly after noon Tuesday, a white flag with the Star of David symbol upon it, was hung from a window of the compound. It hung for about 30 minutes before apparently being blown down by the wind.

Authorities said they weren't immediately sure of its meaning.

"We're trying to determine the significance of it now," said an ATF spokeswoman who declined to give her name.

In Dallas, radio station KGBS said the white sheet appeared after radio show host Ron Engelman suggested that a white flag be displayed if Koresh wanted the station's legal and medical help.

Julie Van Dielen, producer of the show, said the station believed the sheet was a response to that message. She said the station earlier suggested Koresh move the compound's satellite dish.

"The appeal was made to Koresh that if Koresh wanted our help and could hear us, to indicate in a more obvious, more public way, because the media wasn't picking up on his moving the satellite dish," Ms. Van Dielen said.

As the compound remained under siege Tuesday, there were these other developments:

■ In Washington, ATF director Stephen Higgins told the NBC-TV "Today" show that federal agents are prepared to wait out Koresh for as long as necessary.

"We're prepared to stay there for a long time. Indefinitely," Higgins said.

■ Ricks said no one else has been freed from the compound.

Serb offensive strands U.N. relief convoy

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serb troops blasted their way across mountainous terrain toward a Muslim enclave Tuesday. The latest offensive stranded a relief convoy before it even left Serbia.

In New York, U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Sadako Ogata said Serbian "ethnic cleansing" continued to leave a trail of "murder, torture, mutilation and rape" across Bosnia.

Fighting held up a U.N. convoy heading to the eastern Konjevic Polje region Tuesday to evacuate 70 to 75 sick and wounded Muslims. The eight trucks — also carrying mattresses and blankets and medical aid — stopped before crossing into Bosnia from Serbia, UNHCR officials said.

Muslims have been trapped in Konjevic Polje since Serbs routed them last week from nearby Cerska.

The Bosnian Serb commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, agreed Monday elderly, women and children could be evacuated from Konjevic Polje. But he said wounded soldiers could not leave.

UNHCR officials were negotiating with Serbs to secure passage for the trucks and an aid convoy planned for Thursday to Srebrenica, where a Worl Health Organization doctor reported up to 30 people were dying each day and 100 people were close to death.

A Bosnian Serb military statement carried by the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said Serb forces were moving on Srebrenica, a town of about 60,000 people and thousands of refugees about 45 miles northeast of Sarajevo.

Murat Efendic, an eastern Bosnian official in Sarajevo, quoted a Srebrenica ham radio operator as saying the town was under heavy Serbian shelling. Two people were killed and 10 badly wounded.

Serbian troops seized two strategic hills west and south of Bratunac, a Serb-held Bosnian town of the Drina River, the statement said. Srebrenica is six miles south of Bratunac.

There was no word from the Bosnian government command. Its chief, Sefer Halilovic, ordered a counterattack in the region Monday.

More than 130,000 people are reported dead or missing in nearly a year of fighting since Serbs rebelled against Muslim and Croat plans to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia and seized 70 percent of Bosnia.

International mediators have been trying for months to negotiate an end to the fighting. Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic is to meet Thursday in Paris with U.N. and European Community mediators and with French President Francois Mitterrand, said U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance.

Eastern regions of Bosnia have seen some of the fiercest fighting and most brutal atrocities. Serb militias first grabbed territory there last spring. Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic says 1,200 Serbs have perished in a Muslim offensive begun two months ago.

Israeli general warns settlers to stop attacks

JERUSALEM — The Israeli army's chief of staff warned Jewish settlers Tuesday to stop vigilante attacks in the occupied territories after one of them shot and killed an Arab on Monday while returning from the funeral of an Israeli farmer who had been stabbed by Palestinians in the Gaza Strip.

Settlers are up in arms following the killing of four Israelis in a week by Palestinians from the Gaza Strip, and army officers are concerned that Jewish-Arab violence in the area might spin out of control.

"We expect full self-control from the settlers and their leaders," said Lt. Gen. Ehud Barak. "No one may take the law into his own hands, and whoever does so will be dealt with accordingly."

After an Israeli motorist was stoned and shot to death last week in the Gaza Strip, the Council of Jewish Communities in Judea, Samaria and Gaza, a settlement umbrella group, called on settlers to open fire in response to any stone-throwing. According to army regulations, settlers may shoot only when their lives are in danger.

Danger of rabies calls for caution

The fact that a Midland veterinarian was exposed to rabies while treating a horse last week should serve as an alert to animal owners in Midland and the surrounding area to exercise above average caution in dealing with animals during the next several weeks.

One such report, of course, is not indicative of even unusual prevalence of the deadly disease among the local animal population. What it should indicate is that at least one rabid animal is in the animal population in this area, said Everett Newman, a veterinarian for the Texas Department of Health in El Paso.

Rabid animals act unusual and, thus, people should avoid dogs, cats or other animals that are not acting normally. While domestic animals can transmit the rabies virus to humans, wild animals are a particular threat and people are cautioned to be especially careful around skunks, foxes and raccoons.

Fortunately, the Permian Basin has a low incidence of rabies and even with this one notable case there is no cause for panic, according to Newman. Rather, there is a need for the public to be aware that a rabies danger exists locally — not only currently but all the time — and to take steps to reduce the danger as much as possible.

With warmer weather, skunks, foxes and other animals are beginning to emerge from their dens and mix among domesticated animals. Outbreaks of rabies are virtually certain to occur. The chances of such outbreaks can be minimized, however.

Ways to do that include staying aware of wild or domesticated animals that you are around, avoiding ones acting strangely and being certain to have your pets vaccinated for rabies that have not been.

Newman calls rabies shots for pets "the cheapest form of life insurance you can get" and with the rabies danger on the increase, it's time for Midlanders to buy some insurance.

North Korea's ambitions concern U.S.

WASHINGTON — The most serious threat to nuclear non-proliferation is not Iraq's Saddam Hussein or Iran's Hashemi Rafsanjani, whose nuclear programs in the Middle East are well-publicized. It's Kim Chong Il, son of North Korean leader Kim Il Sung, and he's well on his way to reaching his goal of building a nuclear weapon.

Anderson

When we first wrote about Kim Chong Il last March, speculation centered around when he would finally take over his father's title as "supreme commander" of North Korea. The 80-year-old Kim Il Sung is reportedly gravely ill, and his 50-year-old son has been running the day-to-day operations of government for at least the past year. As the commander in chief of the armed forces, Kim Chong Il, who North Koreans are taught to refer to as the "Dear Leader," is also reportedly leading his country's quest for a nuclear bomb.

The news about Kim Chong Il is all bad. While his father has ruled North Korea with an iron fist for more than 40 years, the son has lived a life of isolation and ignorance. He has never met a foreign diplomat and has never granted an interview to a journalist. The only known trips he has made out of North Korea were two brief visits to China.

North Korea's nuclear ambitions have Western intelligence analysts gravely concerned. With only one superpower left after the collapse of the Soviet Union, the No. 1 issue confronting the national security establishment is proliferation. On this issue, no country has a worse track record than North Korea.

"North Korea appears to be a highly unstable government, highly repressive, and it's run by someone whose sanity is seriously in doubt with a propensity to use weapons for destructive purposes," says Brad Roberts, a research fellow with the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington think tank.

James Woolsey, who was recently confirmed as CIA director, echoed these same sentiments during his confirmation hearings before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

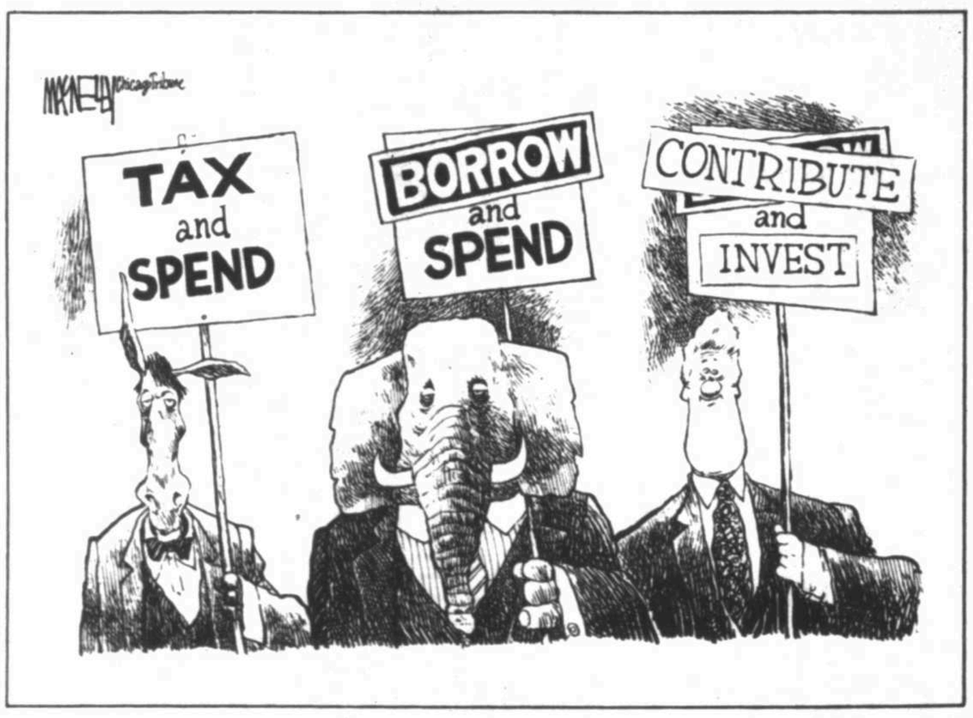

"North Korea is probably our most grave current concern," Woolsey said, adding that they might already have all the necessary components for a nuclear bomb.

Further complicating the issue is North Korea's persistent refusal to allow the International Atomic Energy Agency to inspect the facilities where intelligence agencies suspect nuclear arms are being built. Though North Korea has signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, nobody knows for sure if North Korea it telling the truth about its nuclear program. Some sources expect the IAEA to take up the matter with the United Nations Security Council in the near future. If North Korea continues to refuse international demands, it could escalate to the point of an embargo, one source predicts.

The prospect for increased international intervention in North Korea's weapons development is heightened by the west's embarrassment over Iraq. Before Iraq invaded Kuwait, the IAEA estimated Iraq had one nuclear facility and was at least five years away from developing a bomb. When inspectors took a closer look after the Gulf War, they found Iraq had at least five installations working to develop nuclear weapons and was only about one year away.

Lately, North Korea has been pulling out all the stops. Last December, Russian special forces stormed a North Korea-bound jet as it was about to leave Moscow and apprehended 36 senior weapons scientists. The scientists were allegedly being offered between $1,500 and $3,000 per month — a fortune by Russian standards — to lend their expertise to North Korea's nuclear ambitions.

Country can't afford national service

In the warm, woozy Clinton vision, thousands of young Americans are pounding police beats, teaching mathematics to the poor and feeding the hungry. Our new president hopes by 1997 to have 100,000 fresh-faced kids engaged in "national service." He might. There is broad sentiment in Congress and at the backyard-hibachi level to go ahead with this idea that has kicked around Washington for two decades.

Murchison

I rise like the Grinch at Christmas to say, what a lot of malarkey! This lame idea exists only because it sounds so good — like dietetic pizza. The country neither needs nor can afford national service but may get it anyway. This is one time we can be thankful for the deficit, without which national service might become a bureaucratic monster of Great Society dimensions. Maybe it will anyway, given the human emotions it seems to arouse.

What's wrong with serving one's country? Nothing whatever, in time of war. We pull together as one people to frustrate the opposed designs of another people. Yet to equate wartime service, a national function, with peacetime service, a local or private function, makes no sense. For one thing, there already is peacetime service. It happens every time Joe or Jane Doe reports for work. Making a living is national service — that and paying the taxes that make it possible for presidents and congressmen to devise national-service programs.

There are still other kinds of service, normally uncompensated. Volunteers of all ages and races go into hospital rooms, homeless shelters, museum gift shops — wherever there is need for service. America's volunteer corps is the largest in the world.

I emphasize the private and local nature of these forms of service. Congress has not said, do these things (though the tax code provides a small deduction for charitable driving). These things are in the nature of things. The beauty of it is, no government bureaucracy — yet — coordinates the hundreds of millions of private service actions that take place daily.

Now comes Clinton, trying to muscle in on this mostly uncontrolled sphere of human endeavor. The Clinton tax hikes — not to mention the efflorescence of regulation we may expect in the next few years — narrow further the scope for making a living; and national service would be just the first step toward federalizing the concept of volunteerism. If 100,000 volunteers are good, aren't 1,000,000 better? What about 10,000,000?

We need to remember something about this country. It is a country, but one made up of discrete parts as large as Texas and as tiny as 79 Wistful Vista.

The national government's missions include, theoretically, the things we can't usefully do as smaller communities. That's why "national service" doesn't apply — because not only can we do it, we are doing it. Maybe not precisely the way Bill and Hillary Clinton, looking down from Mt. Olympus, would prefer we do it, but since when did the small things of life become the bailiwick of government?

Cellular phones may be royal family's problem

Scientists are finding out more and more about the dangers of cellular phones. In England they have recently discovered that the phone can even affect members of the royal family.

Buchwald

Sir Burton Katzen confirmed this in studies he conducted on the M-1 motorway where he listened in on one member of the royal family talking to a commoner friend.

Transcripts of these conversations made available by members of the vigilant British press indicate that the car phone created a lot of static for the users.

While delivering a paper he had written for the British Cellular Medical News, Sir Burton said, "Holding the phone too close to the royal ear can cause severe giddiness and make the palms sweat."

"Is this only true of members of the royal family?" Sir Burton was asked.

"We're not sure because they were the only ones we could experiment on. We do know that both Prince Charles and Princess Diana have palpitations when they talk to their loyal subjects."

"What makes them utter so much gibberish?"

"It could be the cellular battery. If you hold the phone right up against your ear lobe, it seems to do odd things to you while you are driving."

"How did you arrive at your conclusions?"

"I noticed that something strange was going on in the royal household. Nobody made any calls from the palace, but as soon as they jumped into their cars they began chattering away. I asked myself, why was all the communication reserved for their cars?

"Then it dawned on me that the royals had become addicted to cellular and found that using a phone was more exciting than riding a polo pony."

Another questioner asked Sir Burton if he considered cellular phones security risks.

He responded, "They might be for the average person, but hardly for the royal family. Who in England would dare reveal private regal conversations with family friends?"

"But are you saying that a cellular phone can cause damage to the monarchy?"

"Only if Prince Charles or Princess Diana is put on hold."

"What would you advise the royals to do?"

"I'd suggest that if they have to place a personal call they should stop at a service station and use a pay phone."

"That would solve a lot of problems, but you are going to need more evidence to prove that cellular phones are breaking up British royalty."

"My problem is that Buckingham Palace is not cooperating. I wanted Fergie, the Duchess of York, and her husband Andrew to take a spin around Wales and see how the cellular phone affected them. Unfortunately, Queen Elizabeth has ordered all phones taken out of the palace cars because they have been causing her a royal pain in the neck."

The British Cellular Telephone Association denied that car phones were responsible for the chaos at Buckingham Palace. A BCTA spokesman said, "Cellular phones don't kill monarchies — heirs to the throne do."

Parents should teach children right, wrong

Regarding the youth problem in this area, just remember: "Kids could do a better job of keeping on the straight and narrow if they were given the information by someone who has already traveled the route."

If right and wrong concepts are not taught in the home, don't expect the schools, churches, law enforcement or anyone else to instill them in your kids.

I'd like for someone to convince me that it is right for a parent to buy a keg of beer for young people to consume. I'd even like to be convinced that it's right to have liquor in the home for adults to consume — is that an example for your kids? I'm of the opinion that the first drink makes a person a candidate for alcoholism.

Parents should not be so defensive, but be willing to really look at what is happening. They certainly can't deny there is a huge problem — not just in this city, but all over America. Wake up and work with the schools, churches and law enforcement officials before your son or daughter becomes a statistic.

Grammy Awards show was 'Freaks' program

In my own defense I would point out that I am not a prude or even an artistic snob. But when I tried to watch the Grammy Awards program recently I had the following thought and would like to share.

The thought: Isn't it too bad that director Tod Browning, who is credited with the 1992 movie "Freaks," could not have witnessed the performance by "Red Hot Chili Peppers" on the Grammy Awards? He might have been inspired to make a 1990's sequel to the movie that could be equally as bad as the original and saved today's high production costs by being at the right place at the right time.

Paper needs to focus on tax, spend budget

Surely you jest (Reporter-Telegram editorial, "Result of plan can benefit Americans," Feb. 19)! I'm curious to know where the $7 billion more in spending cuts than the revenues it would generate came from? On page 5a the article headlined, "Figures show a smaller trim in deficit," indicates that although gross spending cuts are projected at $253 billion, spending increases are $169 billion, leaving a true spending cut of $84 billion. This is $162 billion less than the $247 billion in increased taxes. That's assuming Congress will ever enact these spending cuts, which is a real stretch.

Was it haste in writing this editorial that led you to these conclusions that this Clinton budget concept is basically sound? The cuts, if ever passed at all, are to be phased in over a four-year period. While taxes will go up as soon as this budget is enacted. My question is this, "Will these spending cuts be the same as what happened after the 1990 tax increase?" The spending cuts that Congress promised President Bush materialized as ever-bigger expenditures. It seems to me you would have served your reading public more by focusing on what is really going on in Clinton's tax and spend budget.

I believe we need to make some drastic changes in how our hard-earned tax dollars are being spent, and we need to get rid of the deficit. A good start would be the following: 1. Seriously look at the Grace Commission recommendations, which Congress has never done, 2. Tax reduction and regulatory policies that favor private entrepreneurial capitalism. It's the only way to create new, long-lasting jobs, 3. Realistic procedures to eventually limit expenditures to something less than tax receipts, 4. Effective methods to control pork barrel spending and to let die frivolous our now useless government programs (sunset laws).

None of these were mentioned in President Clinton's speech to Congress. Why not? Because the Democrats don't believe in fiscal responsibility . . . never have, never will.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 10, the 69th day of 1993. There are 296 days left in the year.

Officials arrest chairman of oil conglomerate in corruption scandal

ROME (AP) — Italy's anti-corruption juggernaut bruised one of the country's largest state conglomerates Tuesday and pushed former Premier Bettino Craxi a step closer to prosecution.

Amid plunging financial markets and growing public outcry, the Cabinet scrapped plans to decriminalize violations of party financing laws. These violations are at the heart of the yearlong scandal.

One by one the most important men in commerce and politics are being yanked from power as investigators uncover the bribery payoffs that grease the interlocking gears of business and politics in Italy.

Day by day, uncertainty grows over when and how the government can restore credibility and who will remain at the helm when so many captains of power and industry have been arrested or accused.

There is a growing sense that drastic changes are needed in the way Italy governs itself.

The latest big fish to flop on the deck was Gabriele Cagliari, chairman of Italy's state energy conglomerate ENI, who offered to resign Tuesday after his arrest the night before.

Police also arrested Franco Ciatti, head of ENI's engineering unit Nuovo Pignone — a prime candidate for the privatization campaign Italy is undertaking to raise money for drained government coffers and make industries more efficient.

Prosecutors reportedly suspect Cagliari and Ciatti of authorizing some $2.5 million in kickbacks to ENEL, the state electrical company, in Nuova Pignone's contract to supply gas turbines to the company, the news agency ANSA reported.

That would mean one state-controlled company was making payoffs to another.

ENI, a $30 billion company, is considered the bailiwick of Socialists. A subsidiary, the petroleum company AGIP, has gas stations around Europe and oil ventures with Libya and other countries.

Markets plunged on the news, further eroding Italy's watery credibility in financial markets. The Milan stock index dropped 3.18 percent from Monday and the lira slipped to a seven-year-low against the dollar, fixed at 1,601.37.

"In a phase like the current one, a crisis without solution risks causing disastrous effects on our public and private financial system," said Liberal Party leader Renato Altissimo.

The foreign trade minister, Claudio Vitalone, said the government would not resign. But its failed effort to decriminalize corruption laws was widely seen as an attempt by the powers-that-be to save their own skins.

Students booed Premier Giuliano Amato in Milan, and whitewash-wary citizens pelted the justice minister with soap and sponges in Turin.

"The people only want saints, not devils" in government, said former President Francesco Cossigo.

A parliamentary committee recommended that legislative immunity be lifted for Craxi, a former Socialist leader and ex-premier.

China prepares to appoint new government leaders

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese legislator Huang Shunxing tried to give a dissenting speech last year at the National People's Congress. His microphone was turned off.

Small wonder that few Chinese are paying much attention to preparations for this year's congressional session, which opens Monday.

On the face of it, the session will be an important one because all the top government officials are ending their five-year terms, and the congress must elect replacements.

But as Premier Li Peng told visiting Olympic officials on Monday — without any embarrassment — the Communist Party leadership already has decided in a closed session who will fill the posts.

"This means that the political situation in China will become stable for a long period," Li said, making a pitch for Beijing to be chosen as the site of the 2000 Summer Olympics.

Stability, not democracy, will be the byword when the congress' 2,977 delegates gather in the Great Hall of the People for nearly two weeks of government reports, perfunctory discussions in small groups and formal ratification of the new state leadership.

Rumor has it that a smooth generational transition is the main concern of senior leaders.

President Yang Shangkun, 85, and congress chairman Wan Li, 77, might not live to complete new five-year terms. Another octogenarian, Li Xiannian, died last year and still has no successor as chairman of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference.

The party is also said to be worried about what will happen upon the death of Deng Xiaoping, who is 88. Although he holds no formal posts, Deng leads China, and jostling among ambitious men following his death could destabilize the party.

The party's solution, according to Chinese sources, is to limit the contenders by parceling key government posts among party leaders.

Under this scenario, party Secretary-General Jiang Zemin will become president and also head the State Military Commission; Li Peng will stay on as premier; Qiao Shi will become chairman of the National People's Congress; Li Ruihuan will head the advisory conference; Liu Huaqing will become No. 2 in the military commission.

Aside from enhancing stability, there are other advantages to the "cross-leadership" scheme. As president, Jiang could travel more abroad — there are few other Communist Party bosses left to invite him in that capacity.

Would-be reformers are reported to be unhappy with the arrangement because it marks a step backward from efforts in the 1980s to separate party and government.

Attorney general nominee coasts through judiciary hearing

By Larry Lipman
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With members of both parties heaping praise on her nomination, Miami prosecutor Janet Reno breezed through her Judiciary Committee hearing Tuesday and appeared headed for quick confirmation, possibly by Friday.

Members of both parties appeared relieved to have a nominee they could agree on, particularly after the strident and emotional hearings that resulted in the withdrawal of President Clinton's first nominee, Zoe E. Baird, in January because she hired an illegal alien as a nanny.

"You have no idea how happy we are to see you here," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the committee chairman, setting the tone for the daylong televised hearing, which is scheduled to conclude Wednesday.

If confirmed, Reno would be the nation's first female attorney general.

Reno, 54, the Dade County state attorney for 15 years, was greeted with a standing ovation — a rarity for confirmation hearings — as she entered the packed hearing room through the public entrance, another rarity.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., who has known Reno since their days at Harvard Law School in the early 1960s, said she is "superbly qualified to be our nation's lawyer. She is an innovative, straightforward and brilliant prosecutor — tough, firm and honest."

For her part, Reno outlined her views as a tough crime fighter with no tolerance for violence, career criminals or drug traffickers. At the same time, she found merit in alternative justice programs and efforts to reach neglected children.

She also came across as a straight-talking prosecutor with little interest in politics.

"I didn't get into this business for votes. I got in it to do what was right based on the evidence and the law," she said.

Reno, who was appointed prosecutor in 1978 and has been re-elected five times, said she adhered to the political adage: "Don't pussyfoot, don't equivocate, don't talk out of both sides of your mouth."

The founder of a domestic violence unit, Reno pledged her support for a Biden bill making violence against women a violation of federal civil rights law.

"The reason I think domestic violence is so important is I have the feeling that that is where violence is starting in America," Reno said. "I think it's imperative that we not only address the violence of strangers on our streets, but that we address violence in the home."

Reno deftly handled two potentially troubling areas of questioning from members: her record as a prosecutor and her personal opposition to the death penalty.

Critics have questioned her apparent reluctance to prosecute public corruption cases. Reno defended her decision to allow federal prosecutors to take the lead on public corruption cases, with assistance from her office, on the grounds that federal rules make such prosecutions easier than state rules.

Asked about statistics that seemed to indicate her office has a lower prosecution rate than other Florida counties, Reno said that was because she has advocated alternative sentencing programs such as drug treatment.

Regarding the death penalty, Reno said her office vigorously sought the death penalty in numerous cases. She also said she agreed that there were too many delays in carrying out death sentences.

With committee members peppering her for an endorsement of their pet bills, Reno pledged her support for a waiting period on handgun purchases, a ban on the manufacture and distribution of military-style automatic weapons, stiff enforcement of child pornography laws and a continuation of both drug treatment and drug interdiction efforts.

Reno also said she would not be influenced by appeals from members of Congress if they attempted to convince the Justice Department to move a case to another community.

The only other cloud on Reno's confirmation has been a spate of rumors about her personal life, which Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said had been thoroughly investigated by the FBI and the committee staff and found to be "scurrilous" and "unfounded."

Deadly bacteria emerges

ATLANTA (NYT) — A deadly bacterial organism is appearing with increasing frequency in the food chain.

The virulent bug, known by the scientific name Escherichia coli O157:H7, appears to be a relatively new kind of bacteria, itself perhaps the result of a viral infection or microbial gene transfer. And its increasing presence in meat and a few other foods may be ominous, health experts say.

For more than a month, the organism has grabbed headlines across the nation as nearly 500 people in Washington state have become ill and three toddlers have died as a result of infection with the E. coli strain. The outbreak, traced to undercooked Jack in the Box hamburgers contaminated with the organism, also sickened dozens of people in Nevada, Idaho, Oregon and possibly California.

January's outbreak is the worst on record, but it is not the first. More than a dozen such outbreaks of disease have been reported, and health authorities say many more go unreported.

"We are seeing new pathogens, emerging pathogens, more and more in our food supply," said Dr. Robert Tauxe, chief of the enteric division for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Tauxe and others theorize the organism indicates that a new "window" exists somewhere out there at the microbiological level, improving the traffic of bugs and serving as a possible breeding ground for new diseases.

A number of factors have changed the conditions under which cattle are raised and meat is processed, and they could serve as windows for the more rapid spread of E. coli contamination, Tauxe and others say.

Ranchers in the northern states and Canada have stopped vaccinating cattle against another bacterial infection, and some believe this vaccination may have offered some protection against E. coli.

In addition, modern processing methods mean that meat from dozens of sources can be combined in one lot of hamburger, increasing the odds that one infected cow can contaminate as much as 10,000 pounds of meat.

The first signs that E. coli O157 could cause serious illness were in 1982 in Oregon and Michigan.

Citizens settle outstanding warrants

■ Municipal Court receives $75,000 in fines, expects to be paid an additional $235,000.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

When given a choice, two thousand local residents preferred a lighter wallet to a jail sentence.

Consequently, Midland Municipal Court employees have an additional $75,000 in the bank from fines collected on warrants and expect to collect at least another $235,000 as a result of time payment plans.

"We feel good about how things worked out. We had about a 20 to 30 percent clearance rate," said Municipal Court Presiding Judge Robin D. Smith. "We'll study ways to keep compliance and figure out ways to get those people who didn't come in."

Court officials announced on Jan. 25 plans to contact about 4,300 Midland residents about paying nearly $1 million in traffic offenses, public intoxication fines, animal control violations and disorderly conduct fines. Since then, the court has cleared 2,004 warrants.

Smith said the intensive warrant drive was helped by publicity before the campaign.

After learning about the court's intensive warrant drive, many people contacted the court about arranging payment plans. But others were arrested after officers decided the offenders were simply avoiding the law.

Fines on most moving-traffic offenses — such as running stop signs, red lights and speeding — may range from $1 to $200. Others may be much higher. In some cases, multiple warrants were issued to offenders who had more than one unpaid offense.

Court officials contact(ed) ... residents about paying nearly $1 million in ... fines.

The warrant drive was handled by three full-time warrant officers. Smith said the success of the drive will allow the officers more time to manage their work.

Overall, about 75 percent of ticketed people pay their fines right away, resulting in about $900,000 a year for the court.

Citizens who have not paid their outstanding warrants can go to the court between 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday and from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Thursday. Citizens may telephone the Municipal Court at 685-7315 for more information.

Club offers foods that are 'Heart Healthy'

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

ODESSA — Corporate America, obviously impressed by the results of healthy lifestyles of individuals across the country, is adopting wellness programs because of the healthy payoffs.

Part of the impetus is the coercion of rising health-care costs.

"Poor health habits are the direct link to the incredibly high health-care costs," said Dr. Sue Stainbrook, American Heart Association (AHA) regional director based in Midland.

Working on the theory that health begets health, the Dallas-based Club Corporation of America (CCA) has designed Heart Healthy Life Enhancement programs, which the AHA uses in its Heart At Work program.

"Many Americans pursued good health on their own during the fitness craze of the '80s," said Jay Guthrie, manager of The Club at Mission Dorado, which like the Plaza Club in Midland, is a CCA club. "Now, in the '90s, corporations faced with rising health-care insurance costs, increased absenteeism, and the need for increased productivity are starting to recognize the benefits of promoting employee wellness in the work place."

The AHA-CCA agreement permits CCA's participating private clubs to offer AHA Heart At Work program to their corporate members.

The AHA's Heart At Work program, through educational material and guidance, provides employees with the foundation to make lasting lifestyle changes, such as controlling blood pressure and cholesterol levels, exercising regularly, and quitting smoking tobacco products.

Ms. Stainbrook said the "four major risk factors" contributing to heart disease are smoking — which she identified as the No. 1 risk — high-blood pressure, high cholesterol, and lack of exercise.

"The first thing you should do, if you are a smoker, is to stop smoking," Ms. Stainbrook said. "Second, eat a diet low in fat, and there's a third thing to do: get on an exercise regime."

The AHA recommends that a person exercise three to five days a week in at least 20-minute periods to build up the heart's stamina and the rest of the cardiovascular system.

Additional exercising is "your best source for reduction of stress," which can adversely affect health.

While Ms. Stainbrook noted that eating habits are learned behavior, habits can change.

"So many people who are overweight eat for reasons other than nutrition," Ms. Stainbrook said. "They are lonely. They are tired. People eat because they are happy or depressed."

"A lot of people eat because food is their friend," she said.

For people consciously trying to maintain a nutritional diet and ideal body weight, whether breakfast, dinner or supper is their major meal is an individual's preference.

"But what they need to watch out for are the fast foods, fats in meats and dairy products," Ms. Stainbrook said.

Heart and blood-vessel diseases, including strokes, are the leading causes of death among Americans, according to the AHA, and kill almost 1 million people a year.

Since its inception in 1985, the AHA's Heart At Work program has been implemented in more than 3,000 companies and reached approximately 2.7 million people.

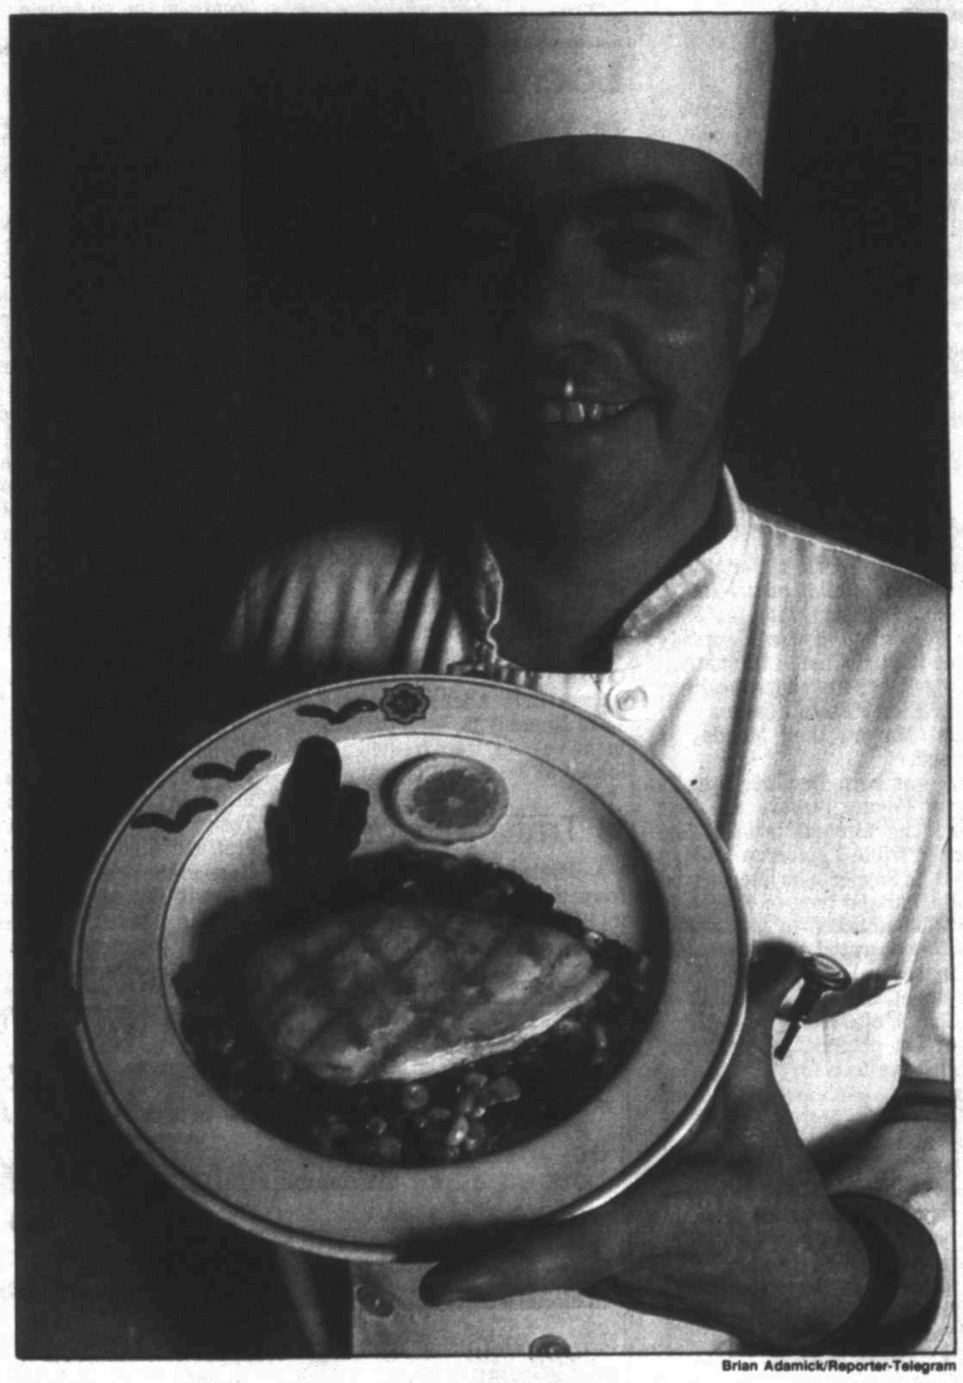

"Studies indicate that corporate health promotion programs do help combat health-care costs and absenteeism, as well as boost employee morale and productivity," Guthrie said.

Heart Healthy clubs encourage healthy lifestyles and have developed menus that include low-salt, low-fat, and low-cholesterol foods. Those foods are marked by the heart symbol on menus.

"That way, it takes all of the guess work out of it," said Jerod Becton, food and beverage director for The Club at Mission Dorado. If there is sauce on the entree that is keyed with a heart symbol,, Becton said, it will be low in fats and salts.

"As little or as hungry as you are, you can enjoy something at the club without having to say, well, 'I guess I'll have to go home (after playing golf or tennis) for my yogurt,'" Becton said. "You not only need the food, you need the workout."

Minors could attend alcohol awarness class

■ Completion of course would erase minor-in-possession charges from youths' records.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A substance abuse agency has offered city and county judges the option of sending youths charged with possession of alcohol to an alcohol awareness class.

Completion of the program would erase a minor-in-possession charge from a first offender's record, and hopefully prevent further alcohol troubles through education.

"The purpose of this class is education, information and possibly changing their attitudes of drinking," said Mary Helen Smith, program director for the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

"We believe education and good information will make young people make better decisions," Ms. Smith said. "We think knowledge is real good prevention."

Currently no educational program for minor-in-possession offenders is available in Midland County, she said.

Implementation of the certified state program would benefit the community, especially in light of recent reports of widespread alcohol abuse by minors, Ms. Smith said.

"Apparently, we do have a lot of MIPs here ... It's almost a badge of belonging. We hear these kids brag about it," she said.

Nevertheless, local judges haven't been receptive to initial contacts to implement the program by the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, Ms. Smith said.

When asked, Municipal Court Judge Robin Smith and Justice of the Peace Robert Pine expressed interest in the alternative punishmen'.

Currently, classes are being offered in Ector, Howard, Taylor, Scurry and Winkler counties, and are being planned for Dawson and Nolan counties.

The program — made available by law in 1991 — can be applied at a judge's discretion to offenders 10 to 21 years old at a cost of $25.

The course consists of an interview to assess a youth's problem, two three-hour classes, a test and final interview to review the assessment and make recommendations.

Teachings include social values, advertising and the alcohol industry, psychological and physiological effects of drinking, reaction times, laws for minors and adults, decision-making, and gains and losses connected to drinking.

Police to look for drivers not wearing seatbelts

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Local police believe the seatbelt law may be the most abused law in Midland.

Still, Midland motorists are a bit more restrained than the average Texan, officials say.

"Putting on my seatbelt is second nature to me. It's like an involuntary reflex. It's like breathing," said a buckled-up motorist while sitting in his idle car at the post office Tuesday.

But to help persuade local drivers who are not complying with the law, Midland police are planning to put in $15,000 worth of overtime until October. Those extra hours will be used specifically to enforce the seatbelt law.

The overtime will be subsidized by a federally funded grant from the Federal Transportation Department through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

"There is a national goal set to get 70 percent of all drivers to wear their seatbelts," said Midland Police Chief Richard Czech. "We're close to that number, but we could certainly go higher."

The starting date for the Selective Traffic Enforcement Program is unspecified, but officials expect to end the effort in October. The campaign will not use any local tax money.

The seatbelt violation — a Class C misdemeanor — carries a fine of up to $200.

In 1991, a survey conducted at the end of the program revealed a 90 percent compliance rate.

Superintendent: Education is prescription for saving children

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

"Education is the fundamental ingredient in the prescription for saving our children and our communities," according to George J. McKenna III, Ed. D.

McKenna, the superintendent of Inglewood Unified School District in California, will be the keynote speaker during a banquet that opens the two-day "Education Combination Forum."

The banquet is scheduled for 7 p.m. March 19 at the Petroleum Club.

The superintendent is nationally known for serving as a principal in the troubled George Washington Preparatory High School in Los Angeles. When McKenna took the helm of the school in South Central Los Angeles, it was riddled with gangs and drug problems that caused students to ask for transfers.

Now there is a waiting list for admission to the school, according to an article in Ebony magazine.

McKenna's trials and successes as principal of the school were depicted in the 1986 docudrama, "The George McKenna Story," starring Denzel Washington. It recently aired locally on Home Box Office.

"As we enter the 21st century, one of the greatest contradictions facing our nation is the extent to which we have advanced technologically yet continue to fall behind in our efforts to provide effective education and protection for our children," McKenna said in a recent magazine article.

Raised and educated in the segregated South of New Orleans, McKenna said, "I know that children of poverty can be effectively educated despite segregation and social injustices."

He said the solution to problems plaguing public education "lies in first having the infallible belief

Bivins introduces legislation to help promote energy industry

Staff report

AUSTIN — Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, introduced a package of energy bills Tuesday designed to promote the energy industry in Texas.

Senate Bill 733 would equalize the severance tax on all extractive minerals in Texas.

Currently, oil is taxed at 4.6 percent of value and natural gas is taxed at 7.5 percent of value. Under the bill, gas produced by wells completed after Sept. 1, 1993, would be taxed at 4.6 percent.

The bill would also create a tax on coal, which is not currently taxed. Coal produced after Sept. 1, 1993, would be taxed at a rate per short ton that would offset the funds to the state lost from the reduced tax on natural gas.

"The state should treat extractive minerals equally with regard to taxes," Bivins said in a statement released Tuesday. "These fuels often compete with each other and the state should make sure there is a level playing field."

Senate Bill 735 would exempt discovery wells in new oil or gas fields from taxation.

"We must encourage the development of natural resources in the state," he said. "This bill would not remove the tax from all new wells, only discovery wells. It's my hope this would encourage new exploration in Texas."

Senate Bill 734 would create guidelines for appraising oil and gas properties, removing subjectivity from the process. Specifically, the bill would require that information from the preceding 12 months be used to set value for the coming year.

"Currently, the appraisal process is unpredictable," he said. "It's not uncommon for different appraisal districts to assign vastly different values to the same mineral property."

Senate Bill 737 would create a fund in the Railroad Commission with oil overcharge monies that would fund conversion projects for compressed natural gas and other alternative fuels. Oil overchange revenues are derived from lawsuit settlements against oil companies accused of overcharging comsumers. Settlement money from the lawsuits are collected by the

FOOD: Club offers 'Heart Healthy' menu

(From 1B)

CCA's Heart Healthy menus "hopefully, will start a trend" in the food business and in other private clubs, he said.

Raymond Billington, the club's service manager, noted that to eat fried or other fatty foods following a workout "is kind of defeating the purpose."

Becton said the club's members, who are generally older, often want to know the fat intake of foods before they order them.

"There still are members who want chicken-fried steak, French-fries and gravy," Becton said of high-fat consumers. "Go for it."

Chef David McCartney said low-fat nutritional foods are not bland like they used to be at the onset of fitness consciousness.

For example, he may prepare some foods in olive oil, which is "very good for you," and concoct desserts made from fresh berries and other fruits, which are "good for people who don't want to gorge.

"You want to stay away from the deep-fried stuff, stuff that has been breaded, stuff with heavy sauces, cream sauces," McCartney said. "You can eat lots of breads, cereals, pasta, potatoes, and fruit, fill up on that, and you'll be surprised how much you can eat. Instead of (traditional) desserts, we do desserts like poached pears with different berry sauces."

McCartney may prepare Mediterranean foods and pastas with sun-dried tomatoes. "It doesn't necessarily have to have meat in it to be good," he said. "We do a lot of stuff with chicken."

state.

"This legitimate use of oil overcharge funds would help the development of major new markets for Texas natural gas," he said.

The money would be available as loans and grants to public and private entities, including individuals, businesses, school districts and cities, and would be used to convert such things as vehicles and heating and air conditioning systems to compressed natural gas and other alternative fuels.

Finally, Senate Bill 736 would continue the oil-hedging pilot project created last session by Bivins. It also would expand the program to include natural gas as well as oil. Since the program began, the state has hedged more than 1.2 million barrels of oil at a cost of $68,000.

"Oil prices have been stable for the last two years so the program results were not dramatic," Bivins said. "But, just because my house didn't burn down last year, I'm not canceling my insurance. If we had hedged the same number of barrels in 1985, we could have saved taxpayers more than $16.8 million."

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

■ Teen-ager injured

Staff report

A Midland teen-ager was in stable condition Tuesday at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa after the vehicle she was driving flipped twice.

According to a police report, a 1976 Corvette, driven by Amy Lynn Johnson, 19, was westbound in the outside lane of 2100 Loop 250 at 2:16 a.m. Tuesday. The Corvette was racing an unknown vehicle. Miss Johnson lost control of her vehicle, which jumped the curb, struck a wood sign and then flipped twice in an open field, police said.

Miss Johnson was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and then later transported to Odessa.

Sean Eric Allen, 17, and Billy Luke Russell, 18, both passengers in the vehicle, were treated and released at Memorial Hospital.

■ Traffic accident

A Midland man was released from the hospital after receiving multiple injuries in a traffic accident Sunday evening.

According to a police report, a 1984 Chevrolet Caprice Classic, driven by Sherri Rene Thornley, 41, of Midland, and a 1989 Honda motorcycle, driven by Ben Edwards, 18, of Midland, were both headed east in the 2400 block of west Wadley at 6:18 p.m Sunday.

The Chevrolet was in the middle lane and attempted to move into the outside lane, where the motorcycle was located. The motorcycle swerved to avoid the vehicle and the driver lost control, according to the report.

The motorcycle collided with a tree and then with a parked 1989 Ford Escort in the driveway of 2401 Wadley. The motorcyclist then collided with a parked trailer at 2403 Wadley.

Edwards suffered cuts on his legs and feet and broken bones.

■ Lawsuit ruling

ODESSA — District Judge Tryon Lewis ruled Tuesday in favor of the attorney general's office in the lawsuit the Permian Basin Task Force and the attorney general had filed against the Sahara Hotel, 1423 E. Second St.

Lewis issued a permanent injunction against the hotel, ordering that the owners stop allowing the delivery, use or manufacture of controlled substances on the hotel premises.

Lewis ordered the owner and manager to post a $10,000 bond. If the injunction is violated, the motel could be shut down.

Savings and loans could become savings banks

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Texas-chartered savings and loans will be able to convert to state-chartered savings banks and save a lot of money in regulation costs if the House approves a bill that has cleared the Senate.

The bill, approved by the Senate Monday and sent to the House, would create state-chartered savings banks, which are hybrid financial institutions that emphasize home mortgages like thrifts but offer checking and savings accounts like banks.

The federal government charters banks, savings and loans and savings banks in Texas, but the state charters only banks and savings and loans.

State-chartered savings and loans, often called "thrifts," are regulated by three federal and state agencies, but only two agencies regulate all other financial institutions, federal- or state-chartered.

Thus, state-chartered savings and loans have to pay for three audits, the most expensive of which is by the federal Office of Thrift Supervision. One Houston-area thrift, for example, paid more than $275,000 for audits in 1992, and $200,000 of that was to OTS.

State-chartered thrifts can convert to federally-chartered savings banks, but OTS is one of the two agencies that regulate those institutions.

The bill, by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, would create state-chartered savings banks to be regulated by the Texas Savings and Loan Department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Rob Johnson, an Austin attorney and lobbyist who pushed the bill, said the number of thrifts in Texas has decreased from more than 300 to about 65, with 31 of them state-chartered.

If the Legislature doesn't approve state-chartered savings banks, most if not all of the 31 state-chartered thrifts will convert to federally chartered savings banks to avoid triple regulation, Johnson predicted.

That would mean Texas would not have a regulatory role with savings banks, he said.

"It is important to note that the industry's problems were caused, in large part, because of federal regulatory changes," Johnson said.

Also, Texas financial officials would have to "hop a plane to Washington instead of Austin and hire Washington attorneys instead of in Texas," Johnson said.

House committee approves immunization bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that means to ensure all Texas children are immunized against disease was approved by a House committee Tuesday after Gov. Ann Richards testified that it would prevent pain and save money.

"We ought to be investing our dollars in keeping people well, and in the long run it'll cost us a lot less than it will to treat them after they're sick," Richards said in testimony before the House Public Health Committee.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, committee chairman, said he expects the full House to consider the measure early next week. The committee voted 8-0 for the bill sponsored by Rep. Nancy McDonald, D-El Paso.

To implement the measure, Richards is asking lawmakers to approve a $50 million funding increase for immunizations over the next two years. That's on top of the $22 million a year that the Texas Department of Health said is currently being spent.

"By immunizing all our children against preventable diseases, we can save them needless suffering and we can save ourselves money," Richards said. "For every dollar spent on vaccines, $10 in the cost of treating serious illness is saved."

A recent Health Department survey revealed that only 10 percent of kindergarten children in Houston, 30 percent in Dallas, and 40 percent in El Paso had received the recommended number of doses of vaccine by age 2, according to a statement from Ms. McDonald's office.

In 1989, Texas reported the highest number of measles cases in the United States, with 3,313. It had the second highest number in 1992, with 4,409, the statement said.

Hospital costs for "uncomplicated" measles average $850 a day, according to the analysis from Ms. McDonald's office. About 15 percent of measles cases require hospitalization, it said. Between 1988 and 1990, Texas reported 23 measles-related deaths.

Ms. McDonald's bill would provide for immunizations for all children who are not covered by insurance or whose families can't afford the cost. Hospitals and doctors would be required to either immunize children or to refer them to clinics that would.

Health insurance policies also would be required to include coverage for immunizations under the bill. But that provision drew concern from Pam Beachley of the Business Insurance Consumers Association.

Ms. Beachley said her group supports the bill's goals, but that the measure would impose an additional mandate on companies that carry traditional, private insurance for employees. Companies with self-funded insurance plans wouldn't be covered by the requirement, she said.

She said there is a concern that the cost of a vaccination may be increased if health-care providers realize it is covered by insurance, and that there would be administrative costs for processing the claim.

Berlanga said lawmakers intend to address those concerns by making changes when the bill is before the full House.

Measure would outlaw weight discrimination

AUSTIN (AP) — It would be illegal for an employer to discriminate against workers because of their weight under a bill by a state lawmaker.

The measure by Rep. Sherri Greenberg, D-Austin, was prompted by an aide, Linda Hymans, who says she has encountered bias because of her size in the past.

Ms. Hymans said that corporate bosses at a previous job in New York gave her excellent performance reviews but denied her promotions. She blamed her weight, which was then almost 300 pounds, and filed a complaint with the business's human resources department.

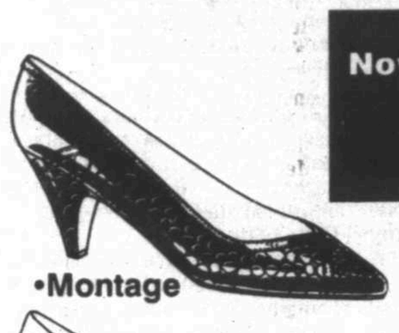

"Suddenly I had two (promotion) offers," said Ms. Hymans, 39. She said she believed the company wanted to avoid potential problems and noted, "Discrimination of any kind is always frowned upon."

Ms. Hymans subsequently enrolled at the University of Texas and finished a bachelor's degree in government, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Ms. Greenberg's bill, patterned after Ms. Hymans' research on weight bias, would make it illegal for a boss to discriminate against employees because of their weight.

If weight became an issue, the bill would require the worker and employee to agree on a doctor to perform a medical exam to determine if the employee's weight "is reasonably likely to prevent the employee from performing the employee's duties safely and efficiently."

Director: No 'wave of terrorism' looms

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "well-known terrorist group" is likely responsible for the bombing at New York's World Trade Center, an FBI official told Congress on Tuesday.

But law enforcement experts said there was no reason to fear a wave of such incidents.

"We're saying it's a group that knows what they're doing, and perhaps not an ad-hoc bunch of terrorists," said James Fox, head of the FBI's New York office.

Fox told a House Judiciary subcommittee that it was investigators' "gut feeling" that experienced terrorists were responsible for last month's blast that killed five, injured 1,000 and shut down the World Trade Center for several weeks.

"I don't have a specific group in mind," Fox told reporters later, adding that agents based the speculation on "30 years of this stuff."

FBI Director Williams Sessions cautioned against speculating who was behind the bombing, and noted it took years to conclude the investigation into the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

It was the first congressional hearing into the New York bombing as lawmakers began reviewing whether there was need to overhaul immigration laws or take other precautions against terrorism.

It was an all-star witness list, featuring Sessions and other high officials. But they offered few new details, saying they didn't want to jeopardize the case. One lawmaker questioned Congress' motive behind the hearing.

"I hesitate to see people who are elected to public office sort of elbowing their way in front of the cameras, when this is a law enforcement investigation that ought to be allowed to go on," said Rep. Craig Washington, D-Texas.

Sessions advised Americans that there's no reason to fear the bombing is the beginning of "a coming wave of terrorism."

"The American public should always be vigilant, but this suspected act of terrorism should not be viewed as the opening act in a coming wave of terrorism," Sessions said.

Several lawmakers grilled the FBI officials and others who testified on Immigration and Naturalization Service laws and the government's ability to keep unwanted aliens from entering the United States.

Authorities have described a Palestinian charged in the Feb. 26 bombing, Mohammed Salameh, as a Muslim fundamentalist who worshipped at a New Jersey mosque where a militant Islamic cleric, Omar Abdul-Rahman, preaches.

Abdul-Rahman has condemned the violence, but authorities in Cairo suspect the cleric is the spiritual leader of Egyptian radicals involved in dozens of murders.

Thomas McNamara, the State Department's counter-terrorism coordinator, said there are more than 1.5 million immigration visas that come through a year. Abdul-Rahman's green card was revoked last year, then he applied for political asylum.

"There are mistakes made and this was one of them," McNamara said.

Several lawmakers said they were concerned the U.S. government might crack down unfairly on foreigners.

Street violence haunts children

By Jeanne Cummings
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — When 10-year-old Crystal Harris fainted in her Atlanta classroom recently, doctors said she was still struggling to cope with the grief and fear lingering from the November murder of her older brother.

Crystal's twin sisters, who are 13, have simply gone numb, slipping into a dull silence when they learn of yet another killing near their apartment.

"I don't know if the fellows who killed Mike realize what it has done to the rest of us," said their mother, Gwen Harris.

The Harris girls are part of an exploding national population of children whose lives are haunted by violence, and whose plight will be the focus of tandem hearings in Washington this week.

On Wednesday, a joint hearing will be held before the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families and a subcommittee of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. On Thursday, the Children's Legal Defense Fund will kick off its three-day national conference.

Both events are expected to address the spectrum of problems related to children and street violence: the victims, the perpetrators, and the survivors.

"We now have incredible numbers of children with no safe harbor anywhere, not at school, not at home," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., chairwoman of the House committee. "We've got to figure out what in the world we're going to do."

Law enforcement experts differ over whether the overall violent crime rate among juveniles has increased in recent years, but there is no dispute when it comes to murder. Homicide has become the number one cause of death for black men between the ages of 14 and 40.

But the reasons for the murders offer the most chilling evidence of a deeply troubled society. Drugs, the tidy excuse for black-on-black crime offered in the 1980s, is now only part of the problem.

Boys are shot for flirting with girls. Elementary school children are slaughtered because they were unlucky enough to get caught in a crossfire. A baby is consumed by fire because hoodlums wanted to silence her sitter.

A computer analysis of national FBI statistics done by the Atlanta Journal-Constitution shows that between 1985 and 1991:

The total number of teenagers murdered between the ages of 15 and 19 increased 101 percent, from 1,347 to 2,702.

The increase in the number of black teenagers murdered jumped 146 percent, compared to a 58 percent increase for white youths in the same age bracket. In 1985, the number of black teens murdered was identical to the number of whites: 651 from each race group.

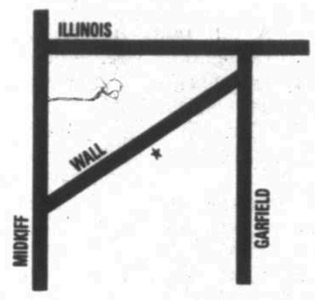

The number of teenagers arrested for murder doubled, from 1,311 to 2,626. A racial breakdown was not available.

The total number of teen murders committed by firearms jumped 154 percent, from 888 in 1985 to 2,252 in 1991.

While teenagers were the most likely population group to be killed by firearms, infants ranked second.

Pastry chef creates chocolate masterpieces

AP Laserphoto

Doug Ray, pastry chef at Dallas/Fort Worth airport, shows off one of his chocolate sculptures recently in Munday. Ray knows that his masterpieces are fit for only one thing — human consumption.

By Judith K. McGinnis

MUNDAY (AP) — Doug Ray is an artist who creates for the moment. He knows that his greatest masterpieces are fit for only one thing — human consumption.

As pastry chef at The Harvey Hotel at Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport, Ray is given limitless latitude when it comes to creating his flights of confectionery fancy. And according to Ray, chocolate is what his customers demand.

"I remember the first time I tried prickly pear cheesecake on them," he said, chuckling about some of the more "novelle" ideas he brought from culinary school. "Naturally we try to make dessert the real high point of the meal, and the chocolate gives you great opportunities for drama. Strawberries go in and out of season, but chocolate is forever."

Ray grew up in Knox City. He recently visited his sister, Judy Lowe of Munday, and present a one-session chocolate workshop of decorating and candy-making techniques.

Ray came by his interest in cooking relatively late. After spending four years at Southwest Texas State University, he explained with a wink that he "needed to find something to do to earn a living."

Since most of his prior work experience was in restaurants, Ray decided to try his hand in the kitchen. A few years later he graduated from the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., and took his first job at Country Epicures in New York City.

"We were producing 1,200 cakes a day," he said. "Some days it was like that episode of 'I Love Lucy,' where she's working on an assembly line decorating cakes. Sometimes I thought I was going to get covered up, but it taught me to be fast and accurate."

Ray has been with Harvey House for six years now and says he loves the creative freedom. To date, however, his greatest achievement in chocolate is the 2½-foot tall sculpture that earned the silver medal at the Culinary Olympics in Frankfort, Germany, last October.

Constructed of a special dough-like chocolate, Ray's pioneer woman braces herself and her quilt-swaddled baby against the West Texas wind. The detail in her dress, bonnet, hands, face — even the pattern of the quilt is more like what one would expect in highly coveted Southwestern bronzes.

"The Europeans love anything with a Western theme, and they really went for this," he said. "I was even surprised how well it turned out. The dusting of cocoa powder really gave the chocolate depth; it looks like suede. I just remembered all the stories I had heard as a kid about the pioneers who settled this part of Texas — the hardships they faced — and thought of her."

Ray says that with proper storage his creation will last about two years. The "clay" from which it is modeled is made from chocolate and corn syrup, but the artist admits, " it's beautiful to look at, but I'm afraid it wouldn't make very good eating."

'Naturally we try to make dessert the real high point of the meal, and the chocolate gives you great opportunities for drama. Strawberries go in and out of season, but chocolate is forever.'

Cereal choices just got more confusing

By Linda Anderson

Cruised down the cereal aisle at the supermarket lately? Mind-boggling, isn't it. Cereal comes in so many shapes, sizes, colors and personalities now that it's hard to decide what you want (or sometimes, decide if you want) in the way of breakfast food.

Anderson

Well, the cereal aisle just got more confusing. Post has introducaed Banana Nut Crunch, which, according to information from the company, is "An enticing new cereal with the wonderul taste of home-baked banana nut bread in every bite."

Always take adversing hype with at least a grain or two of salt. In a case like this, tasting is believing. The youngest taste-tester and I bought a box of Banana Nut Crunch (she wasn't to excited about it since the cereal isn't neon-colored and it doesn't have marshmallows) to check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

A 15.5-ounce box of Banana Nut Crunch cost $3.39, which I thought was pretty expensive for breakfast cereal, but what do I know — I'm just a consumer.

The information from the company explained the logic behind developing and marketing a cereal that's supposed to taste like banana nut bread: "For generations, Americans have enjoyed the delicious taste of home baked banana nut bread. ...

"Post uses America's favorite fruit and nut (bananas and walnuts) to create home-baked banana nut bread taste in cereal."

Then it goes on to discuss how bananas are "America's number one fruit and the favorite fruit eaten with cereal" and how walnuts "are America's #1 favorite recipe ingredient nut," and then continues: "Post Banana Nut Crunch has taken America's favorite fruit and nut — real banana and chopped walnuts — to create a special cereal unlike any other. Real Banana is baked right into crunchy clusters of rolled oats. These clusters are mixed with crispy whole wheat flakes, and plenty of chopped walnuts for a delicious taste and exciting texture. If you like the taste of home-baked banana nut bread, you'll love new Banana Nut Crunch."

Sometimes I wonder about the people who write all this advertising hype. When was the last time you described cold breakfast cereal as "exciting?"

Anyway, on to the taste-test. The young tester took one bite (a tiny bite too), curled up her lip and announced "I don't like it." So the box of Banana Nut Crunch came to the office with me, where the journalistic-types got to sample it — unfortunately, without milk, and to me, cereal is always better if eaten with milk. Some thought it was tasty, some thought it wasn't, all agreed that the banana scent certainly is definite — just open the box and you get a major whiff of banana.

I have to admit this kind of product puzzles me. Why make cereal that tastes like something else? I mean, we have cereal that tastes like cookies, cereal that tastes like donuts, cereal that tastes like s'mores and now cereal that tastes like banana nut bread.

If you want banana nut bread, why not just eat banana nut bread?

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Search to find best 'Granny Smith' starting

Staff report

WENATCHEE, Wash. — There are a few good grannies being sought.

To promote a bumper crop of Granny Smith apples, the Washington Apple Commission has started a nationwide search to find a grandmother whose lifestyle personifies the healthful attributes of the state's apple.

The first "Search For Granny Smith" will be coast-to-coast.

Vicky Scharlau, commission's vice president, said the success of the search depends totally on the children, grandchildren, spouse or friends of a noteworthy grandma. Those wishing to nominate someone for the Granny Smith search should write — in 100 words or less — why the nominee should be considered and enclose their photo. Nominations should be sent to Granny Smith, P.O. Box 18, Wenatchee, Wash. 98807, and received by April 16.

Seven grandmothers, and the person who nominated them, will be chosen to participate in the "Granny Finale," to be May 1 in Washington at the annual Apple Blossom Festival in Wenatchee. Finalists will be interviewed by a board of apple growers and celebrities to pick the national Granny Smith winner, who will be featured on grocery store posters and for the upcoming year. Airfare and trip expenses will be picked up by the Washington Apple Commission.

The guidelines include:

- Nominee must be a grandmother who's sweet to the core and the apple of someone's eye. They must be hand-picked by their children, grandchildren, spouse or friends to be a Granny Smith nominee.
- Nominee should have "a-peel," exemplifying health and fitness by being able to carry large volumes of grandkid photos wherever she goes.
- Nominations can include a picture of the nominee, but the photo must be in good taste.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Emphasize your strong administrative skills and you will climb to new heights in the business world. The level you eventually reach on the ladder of success depends almost entirely on how hard you work! In May, be willing to make temporary sacrifices in return for long-term gains. Domestic harmony is very important to you and you know how to maintain it. In late fall, romance will be filled with surprises and excitement. A family reunion in December will strengthen already strong ties.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: abolitionist Harriet Tubman, Britain's Prince Edward, journalist Bob Greene, playright David Rabe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be careful in whom you place your faith. A business offer could be "fools' gold"; make sure you are given the real thing. You get a second wind on the professional front.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A willingness to learn new skills will increase your earning power. Begin self-improvement projects. Proceed with caution when discussing delicate personal matters.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The workday passes quickly. Do not let outsiders intrude on your privacy. Check your bank balance before purchasing a luxury item. An absorbing hobby is a surefire antidote to boredom.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Use specialized knowledge to advance your career. A promotion or raise is inevitable. Believe in yourself and other people will follow suit. Spend the evening with close friends or family members.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try to be more generous with your time and assistance. Profits from financial transactions are greater than expected. Pay less attention to your mate's or partner's faults.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make better use of your time by reassessing your priorities. Give the boot to outdated procedures. Parting with an old friend may be painful. Work at widening your social circle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid trouble with business associates by working quietly behind the scenes. A conference may hold a special message regarding the future. Refuse to be trapped by the past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seek sage advice to avoid making the wrong decision. Rather than turn to a friend, talk with experts. Giving work your undivided attention will prevent mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): From start to finish, today promises to be highly memorable. Social invitations, short trips, meetings and errands leave you both exhausted and exhilarated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A confidential meeting with a VIP can greatly improve your prospects for business or financial success. You are on top of a family or property matter. The social whirl holds new appeal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An old friend could re-enter your life. It will seem as if you have never really been apart. If secretly planning certain home improvements, unveil your ideas at the right moment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those thinking of starting a new business should seek expert advice. An influential associate or banker can provide the backing you need. Be friendly to your co-workers.

If you're a perennial finesser, your chances of landing six hearts on this deal are about 75 percent. If you're a sound technician, you can increase those odds to almost 100 percent if trumps break 2-1, without destroying other chances if they're 3-0.

The auction shown is by French internationalists Michel Lebel and Michel Corn, sitting North and South, respectively. North's jump to three clubs showed a heart fit and asked partner to bid a singleton. Three hearts asked for aces and four hearts showed three of five, with the king of trumps counting as an ace.

West led a diamond and, after winning the ace, most players would take a losing finesse in trumps, then try to divine which defender held the queen of spades. On a good day they might even guess right. Corn did not have to rely on inspiration.

He won the diamond lead with the ace and ruffed a diamond. Next came the ace of hearts and, even though both defenders followed low, the slam was now a virtual lock. The king of clubs served as an entry for another diamond ruff and after cashing the ace of clubs, a club ruff was the link to the table to ruff the last diamond. With the minor suits eliminated, declarer simply exited with a trump. Whichever defender won would either have to break spades, picking up the queen for declarer, or yield a ruff-sluff.

What if trumps were 3-0? In that event Corn, like the rest, would have had to guess the location of the queen of spades or bet on the club finesse.

Donahue would be pleased to have execution televised

NEW YORK — Phil Donahue would broadcast an execution on his talk show but says parents shouldn't let children watch.

Donahue

"I would be pleased to have an execution on the 'Donahue' show," he said Monday on CNBC's "Talk Back America. "What's wrong with it? . . .

"Let's see future bad guys watch these people fry right here on television."

A televised execution would be a test of parental supervision, he said.

"It will be the parents' responsibility to see that their children are shielded from this kind of a thing," Donahue said.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Remember Spiro T. Agnew and moon rocks? What about a gift from Ferdinand Marcos?

Two decades after Agnew resigned as vice president, those and other tidbits were made public Monday in papers he donated to the University of Maryland.

The 56 boxes of documents cover Agnew's four years as Baltimore County executive, two years as governor and five years as President Nixon's vice president.

Most of Agnew's vice presidential papers won't be released for years.

"I don't think they have any bombshells," said George Callcott, a University of Maryland history professor who examined the papers. "If you want to know what Agnew said to the Rotary Club of Catonsville on a given day, you'll find it here."

The moon rocks?: Agnew handed them out to dignitaries in 11 countries on a tour of the Far East in 1969. Marcos' gift?: The late president of the Philippines once gave Agnew a set of giant gag golf clubs.

Agnew, 74, resigned as vice president on Oct. 10, 1973, after pleading no contest to a tax charge.

LONDON — Prince Philip was in the pilot's seat of his royal jet Tuesday as he left for a two-week official visit to the Caribbean. The trip has drawn complaints about the cost to taxpayers.

Buckingham Palace defended the tour as "very much a working trip." It said Queen Elizabeth II's husband will give receptions aboard the royal yacht Britannia and will visit schools and hospitals.

Philip plans to visit Dominica, Montserrat, St. Kitts-Nevis, Anguilla, Tortola and the Turks and Caicos islands.

NEW YORK — It was on March 16, 1968, that Robert F. Kennedy announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, and Tuesday night, memories of that campaign will be evoked at a dinner for 260 people — numerous friends and associates of the Kennedy family among them — at the Pierre Hotel.

Billed as a reunion, the dinner will raise the curtain on a series of 13 one-day conferences around the country entitled "A Vision for America." They start Wednesday at Columbia University, where his daughter Kerry Kennedy Cuomo along with Thomas F. McLarty III, White House chief of staff; former Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr.; and historican Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. will be among the speakers.

Robert F. Kennedy Jr., who plans to be both participant and observer at the Columbia conference, said he did not expect the events to be sad, even though his father was killed during the campaign.

"Clearly everyone in my family is touched by the idea that 25 years after his death, people still find resonance and relevance in the kind of vision he was trying to articulate," Kennedy said. "But this is not a sentimental gesture. My father was not the kind of person who spent a lot of time looking backward. I don't think that he would sanction an event looking back."

NEW YORK — Joe Clark, the high school principal who patrolled the halls with a bullhorn and baseball bat, wants to be New York's next schools chancellor, a newspaper said Tuesday.

Clark

Clark submitted his name for consideration Monday, the New York Post said.

"School officials must cease being feckless, pusillanimous dastards and stand up to the crisis at hand," Clark told the newspaper. "As a result of the proliferation of violence throughout our school systems across America and here in New York, I can sit on the sidelines no longer."

Morgan Freeman played Clark in the movie "Lean On Me," about Clark's no-nonsense style as principal of East Side High School in Paterson, N.J.

Clark spent eight years at the school, expelling about 400 students without School Board notification or approval. His methods led to his resignation in 1989.

The New York City Board of Education voted last month not to renew Chancellor Joseph Fernandez's contract, which expires in June.

Leprechaun party includes mint chocolate cake, pie

Associated Press

Celebrate the luck of the Irish with a St. Patrick's leprechaun party.

MINT CHOCOLATE CHIP CAKE
1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups mint-flavored semisweet chocolate morsels
¾ cup water
1 cup packed light brown sugar
6 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
2 eggs
Mint frosting (recipe below)
Chocolate drizzle (recipe below)

In a small bowl, combine flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. In a small saucepan over low heat, melt ¾ cup of the morsels with ¼ cup of the water, stirring frequently until smooth; remove from heat.

In a large mixer bowl, cream brown sugar and butter; add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in melted chocolate. Gradually beat in dry ingedients alternating with remaining ½ cup water. Stir in ½ cup of the remaining morsels. Spread into a greased and waxed paper-lined 9-by 9-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 40 to 45 minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool for 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool completely on wire rack. Frost with mint frosting; decorate with chocolate drizzle.

FOR THE MINT FROSTING: In a small mixer bowl, cream ¾ cup softened butter; gradually beat in 2 cups powdered sugar until fluffy. Beat in 1 tablespoon mint-flavored liqueur or 1 tablespoon milk plus 2 drops green food coloring.

FOR THE CHOCOLATE DRIZZLE: In a small, heavy saucepan, melt the remaining morsels over low heat, stirring frequently until smooth; remove from heat.

Recipe from Nestle Toll House Kitchens.

LEPRECHAUN'S DELIGHT CHOCOLATE MOUSSE PIE
1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
1 tablespoon cold water
2 tablespoons boiling water
½ cup sugar
⅓ cup dutch-processed (European-style) cocoa
1 cup (½ pint) cold whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 baked 8- or 9-inch pie crust, cooled
Mint cream topping (recipe below)

In a small cup, sprinkle gelatin over cold water; let stand 1 minute to soften. Add boiling water; stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Cool about 5 minutes. Meanwhile, in a small mixer bowl, stir together sugar and cocoa; add whipping cream and vanilla. Beat until stiff; pour in gelatin mixture and beat until well blended. Pour mixture into pie crust. Spread mint cream topping over chocolate. Refrigerate two hours.

FOR THE MINT CREAM TOPPING: In a small mixer bowl, beat 1 cup (½ pint) cold whipping cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, ¼ to ½ teaspoon mint extract and green food color until stiff. Recipe from Hershey's Cocoa.

DEAR ABBY
Wife says any policeman is an officer

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from Gordon Padwick, reminding us that not all the members of the police force are "officers," really got me mad! When are people going to quit picking on the police? Not only do they get blamed for everything under the sun, now Mr. Padwick declares they are not worthy of the title "officer" — after so many of them busted their tails to earn a badge. Get a life, Mr. Padwick!

My husband is a police officer — a damn good one! He puts his life on the line every time he walks out the door. Sure, he writes tickets and takes those who deserve it to jail, but he also helps pull people out of wrecked cars and holds wounded people in his arms until the ambulance gets there — and he comforts the loved ones of those who are critically injured or dead.

He works on Sundays and holidays, and has missed his own children's birthdays and our anniversaries. Furthermore, when he's off duty, when needed, he'll rush to assist other officers from whatever department may need help.

You bet my husband is an officer, and for your information, Mr. Padwick, my dictionary's definition is similar to Abby's — only hers says, "one charged with police duties," and mine says, "one PERFORMING police duties," which could mean if you called "911" in an emergency for which you needed an officer, they wouldn't send a "captain" to your house — they would probably send a plain, ordinary police officer. — A POLICE OFFICER'S WIFE IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR WIFE: Thanks for a great letter. I'm sure you voiced the sentiments of many police officers' wives. If Mr. Padwick ever goes to Oklahoma, HE may need police protection.

DEAR ABBY: My son is a 21-year-old senior at a college located about 1,000 miles from here. When "Jack" came home for Christmas vacation, he dated a girl nearly every night of his vacation, so he was obviously very fond of her. When it came time for Jack to drive back to his college, this girl decided to drive along with him — and fly home. (She took a week off from school to do this.) They were caught in a snowstorm and had to stay in a motel overnight. Then, she stayed at Jack's apartment at college for a few days.

The girl's mother approved of the trip, but I did not. And when I told Jack how I felt about it, he became very angry with me.

Please give me your opinion of this, as I respect your judgment. — WORRIED MOM

DEAR MOM: Your son is 21, and legally an adult, so he didn't need his mother's permission to allow his girlfriend to drive 1,000 miles with him and sleep over at his apartment. (You do not mention the girl's age, so I am assuming that she is close to your son's age, and therefore of age.)

Legalities aside, you should trust your son's judgment and common sense. If you are concerned about the possibility of this young couple sleeping together, I'd say you are typical of most mothers.

DEAR ABBY: You have just added fuel to a long-smoldering fire with your preference of the word "teaspoonsful." Baa-baa black sheep had wool — three bags full. However, if it had been three bagfuls, that would have merely indicated a quantity sufficient to fill three bags.

Now, if that sheep were to take a three-teaspoon dose of medicine, it could take either three teaspoonsful (using three individual teaspoons) or three teaspoonfuls (filling just one spoon three times). In my pharmacy practice, I have yet to see anyone use three separate teaspoons to take a dose of medicine.

Check the directions on almost any bottle of cough medicine, and you will see "teaspoonfuls." I give it my vote! — LEO J. HEGNER, BEAVER FALLS, PA.

This year the Midland Downtown Lions will "shoot for the stars" as it attempts to set a record never before achieved in the 37-year history of the Pancake Jamboree — to feed 10,000 hungry pancake eaters. The closest this record has come to being broken was in 1984 when 9,640 were served.
If all these pancakes were put into a single stack it would be as tall as a ten story building. This record breaking feast will require a ton of sausage, 1,400 pounds of buttermilk pancake mix, 300 pounds of butter and 750 quarts of syrup.

Iditarod update

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Jeff King and Rick Swenson passed the McGrath checkpoint Tuesday to lead the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race, with five mushers in pursuit.

Swenson, a five-time winner, was first into McGrath, followed 12 minutes later by King. But King was back on the trail to Takotna, 23 miles away, a few minutes before Swenson.

McGrath, a community of about 500 on the Kuskokwim River, is about 385 miles into the 1,100-mile race from Anchorage to Nome.

Dee Dee Jonrowe also was reported into McGrath, but she had yet to leave as of mid-afternoon Tuesday, the race's fourth day. Four others — Kathy Swenson, Vern Halter, Doug Swingley and Joe Runyan — were on the 48-mile stretch of trail between Nikolai and McGrath.

TOMORROW . . .

Officials with the Nike Golf Tour announce details for this summer's tour stop at Odessa's Club at Mission Dorado.

Hale to the Rebels

Lee smashes four HRs in 16-5 rout of MHS

By Bill Price
Staff writer

While the roofs on the homes across the alley from Johnson Field may now look like they have hail damage, the Midland High baseball Bulldogs suffered from Hale damage — and McIntosh damage and Urquidez damage — Tuesday.

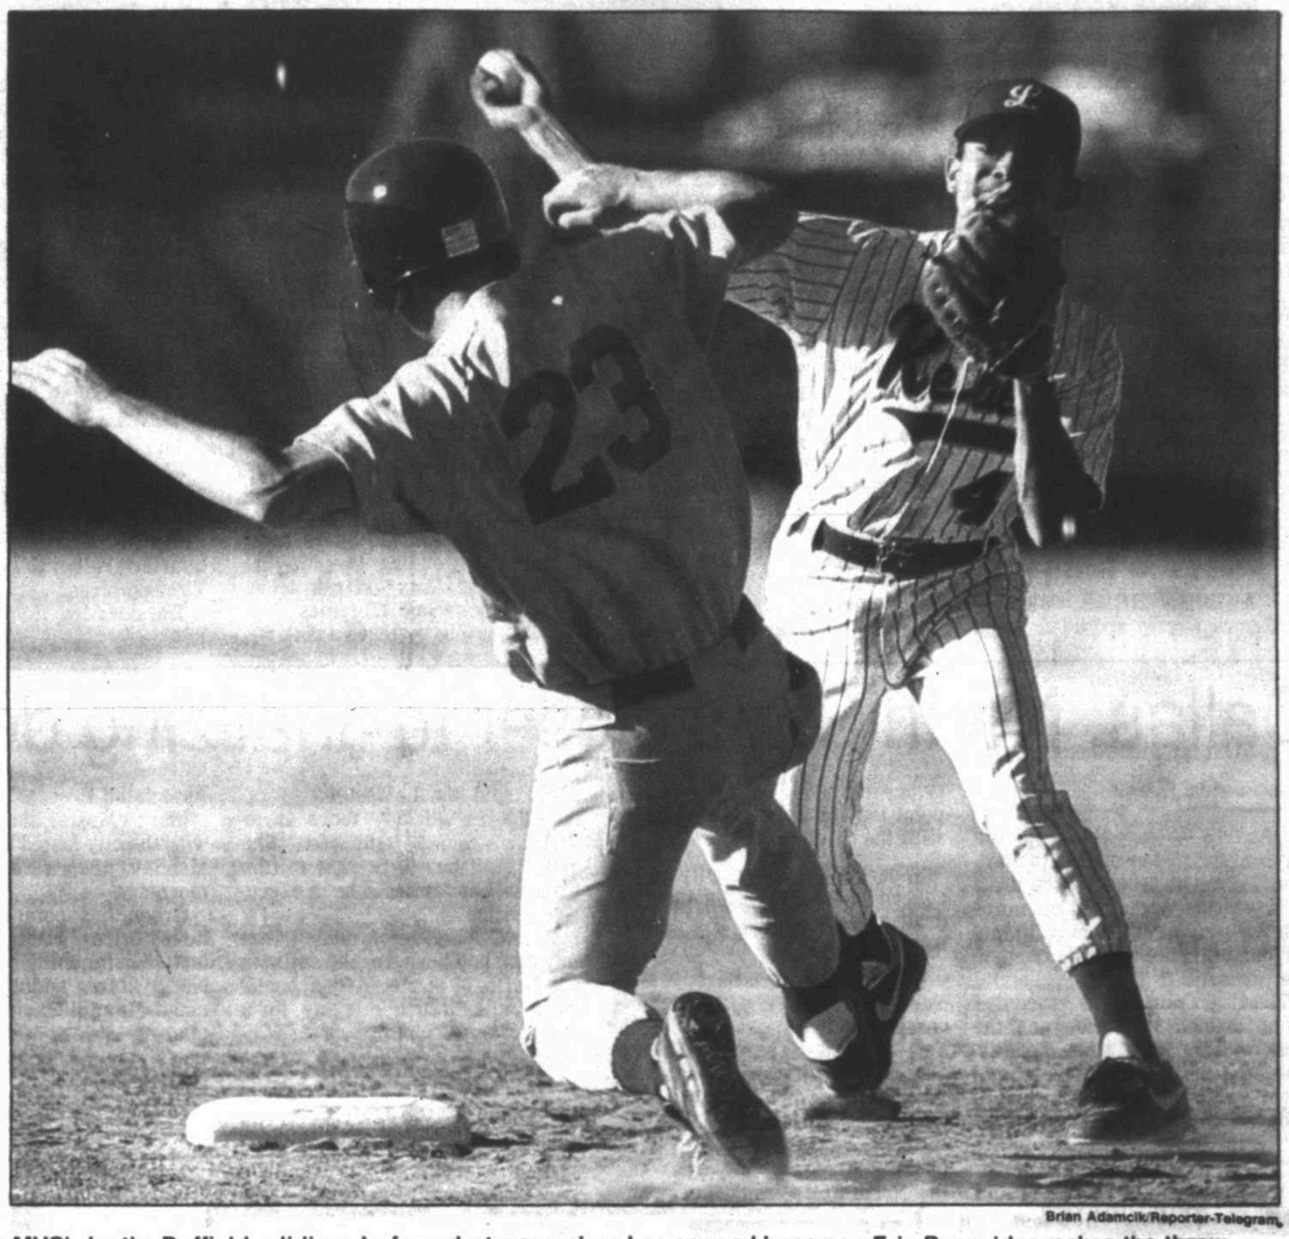

As a matter of fact, MHS was the victim of just plain Midland Lee damage in the two teams' District 4-5A opener at the Rebels' home field. The Rebs stroked four home runs among their 16 hits on the way to a 16-5, five-inning victory.

Lee's Alex Hale, a junior third baseman, homered twice while first baseman Sean McIntosh and designated hitter Julian Urquidez each recorded dingers of their own. Hale registered shots to right-center and left fields, while McIntosh's landed somewhere beyond the 390-foot sign in dead center. Urquidez' blast was stopped by the roof of former Lee baseball coach Ernie Johnson, who lives across the alley and just happens to be Hale's grandfather.

"I think everybody was pretty much in a groove. We hit the ball well and there wasn't much pressure after we got the big lead," said Hale, whose four RBI were matched by McIntosh. "That's the key to our team, our offense. We've got a strong pitching staff and we're confident in our offense. We don't get concerned about anybody getting a lead."

And that's exactly what MHS (3-5) did twice Tuesday. The Bulldogs went up 2-0 in the top of the first, as Mike Melzer doubled, then catcher Tim McLaughlin zinged his second home run of the season to right-center. But in the bottom of the first, three MHS errors (the Bulldogs committed six in the game) paved the way to four Rebel runs, as McIntosh drove in three with his homer and Hale followed with his solo shot to right-center.

Nolan Ryan, who plans to retire after the season, threw 79 pitches against the Minnesota Twins, allowing two runs and four hits in five innings of a 3-0 loss at Port Charlotte, Fla.

Ryan struck out three and walked two, giving up an RBI double to Brian Harper in the fourth and a home run to Scott Leius in the fifth.

Ryan, a 46-year-old right-hander, wasn't thinking about the final first start.

"It's also the last time I'll give up a home run in my first spring start," Ryan said. "But I don't think about anything being the last time I do something. I have to concentrate on what I do, day-to-day. I haven't given much thought to this last spring, I'm too preoccupied with getting ready for the season."

At Lakeland, Fla., Kirk Gibson hit his first home run in nearly a year. Gibson, who will turn 36 on May 28, walked his first at-bat for Detroit in a 6-3 victory

SMU's Shumate, Wilson grab top honors

Associated Press

DALLAS — Nobody needed a championship season more than John Shumate.

With his five-year contract running out, Shumate brought a salty band of Southern Methodist seniors their first

■ All SWC

20-victory season and Southwest Conference basketball title since 1988.

It earned him The Associated Press All-SWC Coach of the Year laurels in voting by his colleagues around the eight-team league.

Shumate changed going into the season. He installed a running game, let players make mistakes without benching them, and even grew a dashing mustache.

After four consecutive losing seasons, Shumate hit the magic formula.

"It was a great regular season," Shumate said. "It felt good to pay back all those people who had confidence in me."

After one victory, Shumate climbed into the stands to give athletic director Forrest Gregg a big hug. Gregg had stayed with Shumate after some critics had asked for the former Notre Dame star's dismissal.

"It was a sweet season," said Shumate, who takes a 20-6 overall record and a 12-2 conference mark into this weekend's tournament. "We do it the right way at SMU. We graduate players and we proved we can play at a championship level doing it."

Shumate was expected to get a brand new contract off his team's performance. The Mustangs play Texas Christian in the first round of the SWC tournament on Friday.

The champion Mustangs landed two players on The AP first team, including Mike Wilson, the SWC's most valuable player. Point guard Gerald Lewis, who ignited the SMU attack with over six assists per game and led the league in steals, also was on the first team.

Wilson averaged almost 19 points per game and help make Shumate's new running style effective. He was almost unstoppable in the Mustangs up-tempo game.

The other players on the coaches' first team included Charles "Bo" Outlaw of Houston, the SWC's top shotblocker and leading field goal shooter, Texas Tech's Will Flemons, the league's leading rebounder and scorer, and Rice guard Marvin Moore, who averaged 18 points for the second-place Owls.

Flemons was voted the offensive player of the year and Outlaw was named the defensive player of the year.

In the final superlatives department, Houston point guard Anthony Goldwire was named the SWC newcomer of the year for the third-place Cougars.

The second team included Rice's Brent Scott, Goldwire, Terrence Rencher of Texas and Alex Holcombe of Baylor. Houston's David Diaz, Texas' Michael Richardson, SMU's Tim Mason, and Texas A&M's David Edwards tied for the fifth and final spot.

The AP's All-Newcomer team included three players from Texas Tech: Jason Sasser, Koy Smith and Lenny Holly. Goldwire was also on the team, while Eric Dailey of TCU and Lance Broderson of Texas A&M tied for the fifth position.

Hornets set new win record

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Charlotte Hornets won a franchise-record 32nd game, beating Washington 124-104 behind Larry Johnson's 23 points and 13 rebounds.

The Hornets won their third straight game and ninth in 14 outings, improving their record to 32-26, the first time the Hornets have ever been six games over .500. The injury-plagued Bullets lost their eighth consecutive road game and for the 10th time in 11 games overall.

The Bullets sliced into Charlotte's 14-point halftime lead with an 18-6 run, closing to 64-62 on Buck Johnson's steal and dunk with 6:18 remaining in the third quarter.

Larry Johnson then scored seven points in a 14-4 run that put the Hornets back in control, 78-66. The Bullets trailed 84-72 heading into the fourth quarter.

The Hornets, who finished 31-51 last season, opened the final period with 7-for-8 shooting and a 21-6 run for a 105-78 advantage.

Reserve Dell Curry had 20 points and Alonzo Mourning 17 for Charlotte, which shot 57 percent for the game. Buck Johnson paced the Bullets with 19 points and rookie Don MacLean scored 17.

Lakers 123, Pistons 121

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — James Worthy scored 28 points and A.C. Green's free throw with 33 seconds left broke a tie as the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Detroit Pistons.

After Green hit 1 of 2 free throws for a 120-119 lead, Isiah Thomas turned the ball over, then fouled Vlade Divac with 18 seconds to go.

Divac also hit 1 of 2 free throws, and Terry Mills missed a layup that would have tied the score with five seconds to go. Divac got the rebound and was fouled, and his two free throws negated Thomas' last-second basket.

Sedale Threatt scored 27 points and Divac 25 for the Lakers. Joe Dumars scored 41 for the Pistons, while Mills had 24.

The Lakers led 65-60 after a wild first half, and both teams kept the scoring pace going in the second.

Hawks 117, Bucks 103

MILWAUKEE — Dominique Wilkins scored 37 points and set a franchise record with eight 3-point goals as Atlanta beat the Milwaukee Bucks.

Wilkins, who became the eighth player in NBA history to hit eight or more 3-pointers, made his first five shots of the game, including three 3-pointers, to help the Hawks build a 36-23 margin at the end of the first quarter. Wilkins finished the first period with 16 points and four 3-point baskets.

Rockets 104, Heat 94

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 18 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter as Houston won its 11th straight game and snapped Miami's franchise-record six-game winning streak.

The 11-game streak is the second-longest in Rockets history and gave them 24 victories in 29 games.

Olajuwon hit 8 of 11 shots in the fourth period and finished with 15 rebounds. Otis Thorpe scored 14 points for Houston, and Vernon Maxwell had 11 points and 10 assists.

Grant Long scored 22 points, Steve Smith 20 and Rony Seikaly 16 points and 12 rebounds for the Heat.

The Rockets, who led by three going into the fourth quarter, moved ahead 83-77 on a basket by Olajuwon with 7:28 left.

Miami closed to 88-84 with 6:33 remaining before a 5-0 run made it 93-84. Houston then moved ahead by nine after a basket by Olajuwon with 1:20 left.

Spurs 119, Mavericks 84

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 19 points and Sean Elliott 16 in his return to the lineup as the San Antonio Spurs beat Dallas, extending the Mavericks' road losing streak to a franchise-record 27 games.

Dallas also matched a club record with its 15th consecutive loss. The Mavericks got just four points from first-round draft draft pick Jim Jackson in his third pro game.

San Antonio, winning for the 16th time in its last 17 home games, is 4-0 against Dallas, winning each time by at least 21 points. The 35-point margin of victory was San Antonio's largest this season.

The Mavericks made just one basket in the final six minutes of the first quarter while the Spurs were on a 19-2 tear. With Dallas making only 4 of 23 first-quarter shots, San Antonio led 33-9 lead after one period.

Bulls 86, SuperSonics 83

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan, after missing two games with a foot infection, limped his way to 38 points, including 11 in the final 5:08, leading the Chicago Bulls over Seattle.

Jordan was questionable for the game because of a bacterial infection on his left foot, and he favored the injury noticeably. But he still managed to rally the Bulls from an 11-point deficit, accounting for 11 of their last 13 points.

Jazz 116, Timberwolves 107

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 27 points and Jeff Malone 24 and the Utah Jazz held off Minnesota's fourth-quarter rally to defeat the Timberwolves.

The Jazz led 103-85 with 7:18 left.

REBELS: Benavidez says Lee hasn't peaked

(From 1D)

Still, the Bulldogs tied the game in the second. Chad Benson singled and took second on Tim Beard's sacrifice bunt. After Brad Heidelberg's groundout moved Benson to third, the Bulldog left fielder scored on a wild pitch from Kirk Ulrich with Melzer at bat. Melzer drew a base on balls, stole second and also scored on another wild pitch to knot the score at 4-4.

Then in the top of the third, the Bulldogs went ahead again as Todd Tredaway reached on an error, advanced to second on Justin Duffield's single, then went home on another Lee error as the Rebels tried to turn a double play on Benson.

But behind 5-4 going into the bottom of the third, the Rebels (8-2) were about to launch their version of a blitzkrieg. Lee went through the batting order nearly twice on the way to 12 runs, as the inning was highlighted by Hale's second homer for three RBI, a two-run triple by David Galvan, a two-run single and the solo homer by Julian Urquidez, and RBI singles by Ulrich, Brian Cordova, Eric Benavidez and McIntosh.

When MHS went scoreless in the top of the fifth, the game was called because of the 10-run rule.

"We've got a lot of confidence in the way we play together now. We've always known we had a good team, but beating Monterey (a two-game sweep of Lubbock Monterey to win the Tournament of Champions Saturday) bonded us," Hale said.

Lee also beat MHS in the T of C Saturday, 16-8, but McIntosh said the Rebs had no trouble finding emotion against the Bulldogs.

"The rivalry has been there since the school (Lee) opened. Any time you play Midland High or Odessa Permian there's no question. It's just there," he said.

Ulrich (2-1) earned the pitching win for Lee, while MHS' Joe Urquidez (1-2) took the loss.

"We come out and get two runs in the first and we feel like we're going good when we get a strikeout on Galvan (who led off). We should have been out of the first with no runs. Even at that, we come back and score two more and I felt we were in a position to play well. But then we got in a hole so quick we couldn't even see the top," said MHS head coach Rick Wood.

What's even scarier for Lee's future opponents is that Rebel head coach Jesse Benavidez said his team has not yet peaked.

"There's a lot of talent on this team and sometimes you don't realize how much talent we have on the bench. They just don't realize how powerful they can be," Benavidez said.

Both teams return to action Thursday, as MHS travels to the Lubbock Tournament while Lee plays in the Del Rio Tournament.

Dallas, North Stars closer to finalizing deal

Associated Press

DALLAS — Negotiators for the city and the Minnesota North Stars Tuesday night produced the draft of a written agreement to move the team to North Texas, with municipal officials expected to review the proposal.

The City Council was scheduled to be briefed Wednesday on the first written plan since negotiations for the team's move began more than a week ago, said a spokeswoman for North Stars owner Norm Green in Dallas.

"It is an important step," spokeswoman Lisa LeMaster said Tuesday. "There are still some things left to do. But all road signs point toward a meeting tomorrow with the City Council.

"There is the opportunity for the council to be briefed on the final draft and an outline of an agreement," she said.

Work on the document was finished by 8 p.m. Tuesday after discussions between lawyers for the team and the city. Ms. LeMaster called the proposal "a final draft in writing that is acceptable to the city and to the Stars."

Green, who was expected to announce sometime this week that the North Stars would leave Minnesota, flew into Dallas Monday night, said Ms. LeMaster.

"All eyes will now focus on tomorrow's council," she said. "The (city) staff has to present it (the proposal) and it has to be in executive session."

But Ms. LeMaster denied that any deal had been worked out with the North Texas Ice Arena, located at Valley Ranch in Irving, for a team practice facility.

"It's not true," she said, adding that Green had met with the group more than a week ago. "Recently, there was a proposal on the table."

An official with the ice arena did not immediately return a telephone call Tuesday night from The Associated Press.

Ms. LeMaster said negotiations with the city lasted until 9:30 p.m. Monday, then resumed Tuesday morning.

Green has complained of low ticket prices, rising salaries and lack of community support for the North Stars, adding he has lost about $15 million since buying the team in 1990.

Meanwhile, Minneapolis business leaders have sweetened a deal to get the North Stars to move downtown to Target Center.

The North Stars have played in Minnesota since entering the NHL in 1967.

Longhorns defeat OU, 10-5

AUSTIN (AP) — Top-ranked Texas rallied with six runs in the bottom of the eighth inning and Brooks Kieschick won his seventh game in eight decisions as the Longhorns hammered Oklahoma 10-5 Tuesday night.

The win was the Longhorns' 15th straight and improved Texas to 21-2 on the season. It also handed head coach Cliff Gustafson his 1,270th career victory, which ties the 26-year Longhorns coach with former Miami head coach Ron Frasier for the No. 2 spot on the list for all-time winningest Division I coaches.

The Longhorns' trailed 5-4 entering the eighth before Stephen Larkin, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the sixth, started the Longhorns' rally when he rocketed a double down the left-field line. Second baseman Tony Vasut followed with an infield single and shortstop Tim Harkrider plated Larkin with another infield single.

The late rally made a winner out of Texas' Kieschnick (7-1), who scattered 10 hits and surrendered only one walk in eight innings of work.

Manhattan resurfaces after 35 year absence

Associated Press

■ NCAA Tournament

NEW YORK — Don't dismiss Manhattan College's first NCAA tournament berth in 35 years so fast.

The last time the Jaspers got there, in 1958, they sent Jerry West and No. 1 West Virginia home in a hurry, beating the No. 1 Mountaineers 89-84 in the first round at Madison Square Garden.

"It was one of the most disappointing times in my career," said West, a Hall of Famer and now general manager of the Los Angeles Lakers. He recalled the game vividly. "We were the No. 1 team in the nation. We had a great young team."

Jack Powers, who scored 29 points in the win, was Manhattan's senior captain that year. "When we won, we went to the regionals in Charlotte," he said. "When we got there, we found a lot of West Virginia fans. They had gone straight there from Morgantown, figuring they'd beat us easy in the first game."

That seemed reasonable. West Virginia was 26-1 with a 12-game winning streak, while Manhattan was 15-8 and unranked — not nearly as impressive as the 23-6 log this year's Jaspers take into the tournament.

A year ago, Manhattan came within a whisker of making the NCAAs, eliminated in the MAAC championship game on a buzzer-beater basket by La Salle. This time, it was the Jaspers who beat the buzzer, nipping Niagara 68-67 and sending first-year coach Fran Fraschilla's team to the tournament.

"All I ever talked about since I got here was the NCAAs," Fraschilla said. "To go is the culmination. The kids had some scars from last year. I never dwelled on that because I was not a part of it. I came in with a fresh outlook and I tried to sell them on it."

When the team arrived back on campus from Albany on Tuesday, Fraschilla sent the seniors off the bus first, carrying the MAAC championship trophy. "It was euphoric," the coach said, "an exciting time."

That goes for Powers, too. After the 1958 NCAAs, Manhattan made eight trips to the NIT and two others to the ECAC playoffs. Six of those came in the 10 years Powers coached the team.

Last year, the Jaspers went to NIT quarterfinals, cheered on by Powers, who is now executive director of the tournament. Moving to the NCAAs is a natural progression.

"We like to be a springboard for the NCAAs," Powers said. "We feel we get 32 teams who can move on the next year to the other tournament."

Fraschilla promised that the Jaspers do not intend to be first-round fodder.

"I don't think we'll be a 15th or 16th seed," he said. "I think we'll get a reasonable draw. I anticipate playing a No. 18 to 25 opponent and that's better than playing Carolina or Indiana. We've got a good team and we think we can sneak up on somebody."

That, of course, has happened before. Forgive Fraschilla for not remembering 1958 and the West Virginia upset. "If you want historic perspective," the coach said, "that was the year I was born."

49ers deny they'll let Montana look

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco 49ers denied a report Tuesday that they have given permission to Joe Montana's agent to shop the 36-year-old quarterback around the NFL.

In a telephone conference call, club president Carmen Policy said the team hopes Montana "remains a 49er until the end of his career."

The San Francisco Chronicle reported Tuesday that Montana's agent, Peter Johnson, has been given permission to talk to other teams. "That is not the case," Policy said.

"We have been talking to the agent and we have been discussing various options and alternatives," Policy said from Youngstown, Ohio, where he is meeting with team owner Ed DeBartolo Jr.

He had no comment on another Chronicle report that said Johnson has asked NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue to void the remaining year on Montana's contract and make him a free agent.

Reached by The Associated Press, Johnson said had no comment on the reports.

Gas surges

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell slightly on Tuesday as expectations for weekly inventory figures drove petroleum futures trading.

The numbers, released after the market closed, showed a larger than expected reduction in heating oil supplies.

Forecasts for a drop of up to 5 million barrels in supplies of distillates, which include heating oil, pushed the price of the fuel up 0.16 cent to 58.25 cents for delivery next month.

Natural gas prices surged, with contracts for delivery next month settling at $1.921 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 9.7 cents. Prices were helped higher by forecasts of cold weather in the Midwest and news that a Canadian pipeline operator announced a 10-day shutdown of its system that supplies about 1 percent of U.S. consumption.

West Texas Intermediate settled at $20.68 per barrel, down 3 cents.

The American Petroleum Institute released its domestic supply figures for last week early Tuesday evening. The supply of distillates fell 7.70 million barrels.

API said crude oil stocks rose 4.33 million barrels to 337.42 million. Gasoline inventories fell 1.16 million barrels to 238.13 million. Refinery operations were flat at 84.4 percent of capacity.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar advanced in moderate trading on world currency markets Tuesday.

In New York the dollar settled at 117.75 yen, up from 116.81 yen on Monday.

In New York it cost $1.4405 to buy one pound, less expensive than Monday's $1.4425.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates included: 1.6665 German marks, up from 1.6635; 1.5405 Swiss francs, unchanged; 5.6505 French francs, up from 5.6390; 1,607.00 Italian lire, up from 1,583.00, and 1.2457 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2438.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average and other market indexes on Tuesday again set new closing highs, helped by momentum from the previous day's sharp advance and by low interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average edged up 2.70 points to 3,472.12, eclipsing the previous mark of 3,469.42 set Monday.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Tuesday's gains were broad. The Nasdaq composite index gained 1.73 to 688.96, while the NYSE composite index rose 0.04 to 250.20. The American Stock Exchange market value index, meanwhile, rose 2.29 to close at a new high of 419.02, surpassing the previous record of 418.99 set on Feb. 12, 1992.

U.S. workers post productivity gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — American workers posted their biggest productivity gain in two decades in 1992, which ended with the largest quarterly advance in nearly seven years, the government said Tuesday.

"It's an extraordinarily impressive performance," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York.

"If we can come close to sustaining it — we won't see the fourth quarter performance too often — eventually we'll see our standard of living begin to rise again," he said.

The Labor Department said productivity — defined as output per number of hours worked — rose 2.8 percent last year, the best improvement since a 3.1 percent advance in 1972. The growth was even stronger than last month's 2.7 percent estimate for the year.

The year ended with a 4.8 percent surge at a seasonally adjusted annual rate from October through December, the largest quarterly increase since a 6.9 percent jump in the first three months of 1986.

The fourth quarter advance, originally said to have been 4.0 percent, was the seventh such increase in a row. Productivity fell 0.7 percent in the first quarter of 1991.

Analysts noted that labor costs per unit of output rose just 0.9 percent last year, down sharply from a 4.6 percent advance in 1991. This measure is a key gauge of future price inflation.

"It means the inflation rate is still coming down," Steinberg said.

The economy's output rose 2.2 percent in 1992 after a 2.2 percent loss a year earlier.

Despite the increase, the number of hours worked fell another 0.5 percent last year after a 2.6 percent decline in 1991.

"We're able to generate more goods and services ... with actually fewer people," observed Sung Won Sohn, an economist at the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "This is one of the reasons why the labor market, especially in manufacturing, has been very sluggish ... productivity is holding back job increases."

Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich also expressed concern over what he has called "job gridlock," or scant job creation.

"I am greatly encouraged by the rapid productivity growth," he said in a statement. "But only when productivity growth translates into sustained job growth can we be assured that the economy is fully back on track."

Over time, analysts agree, productivity growth will translate into increased competitiveness and a better standard of living, which has been stagnant since the mid-1980s.

"Continued robust growth in productivity will enhance the international competitiveness of U.S. companies, thus boosting exports and allowing producers to retain or recapture domestic market share," economists at Daiwa Securities in New York wrote in their weekly Economic Comment.

In addition to lower inflation, productivity changes will influence overall standards of living, the economists' report said, adding, "Ultimately, gains in real wages will be tied to improvements in productivity."

Total business productivity, including farming, rose 2.9 percent in 1992.

Manufacturing productivity rose 3.0 percent, including a similar 3.0 percent advance in the durable goods sector.

Productivity rose at an annual rate of less than 1 percent during the 1970s and 1980s, down sharply from an average annual rate of 2.5 percent during the prior two decades.

Futures market is big change to natural gas

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

America's natural gas industry is seeing a whole new world, members of the West Texas Geological Society were told Tuesday.

Lowell Catlett, Ph.D., professor in the agricultural economics and business department at New Mexico State University, told the gathering that "information today is driving this society like you never dreamed possible. Communication, too is driving this society like you never thought possible. And money is no longer the currency, time is, and speed is its base."

He said that the natural gas industry left a period of regulated prices to a world of spot prices that change daily. And in a world of information and speed, the industry had to change, and futures contracts were the vehicle for that change.

The natural gas futures market, he told WTGS members, is the greatest structural change to hit the natural gas market, other than open access. And the futures market is turning natural gas producers into margin managers.

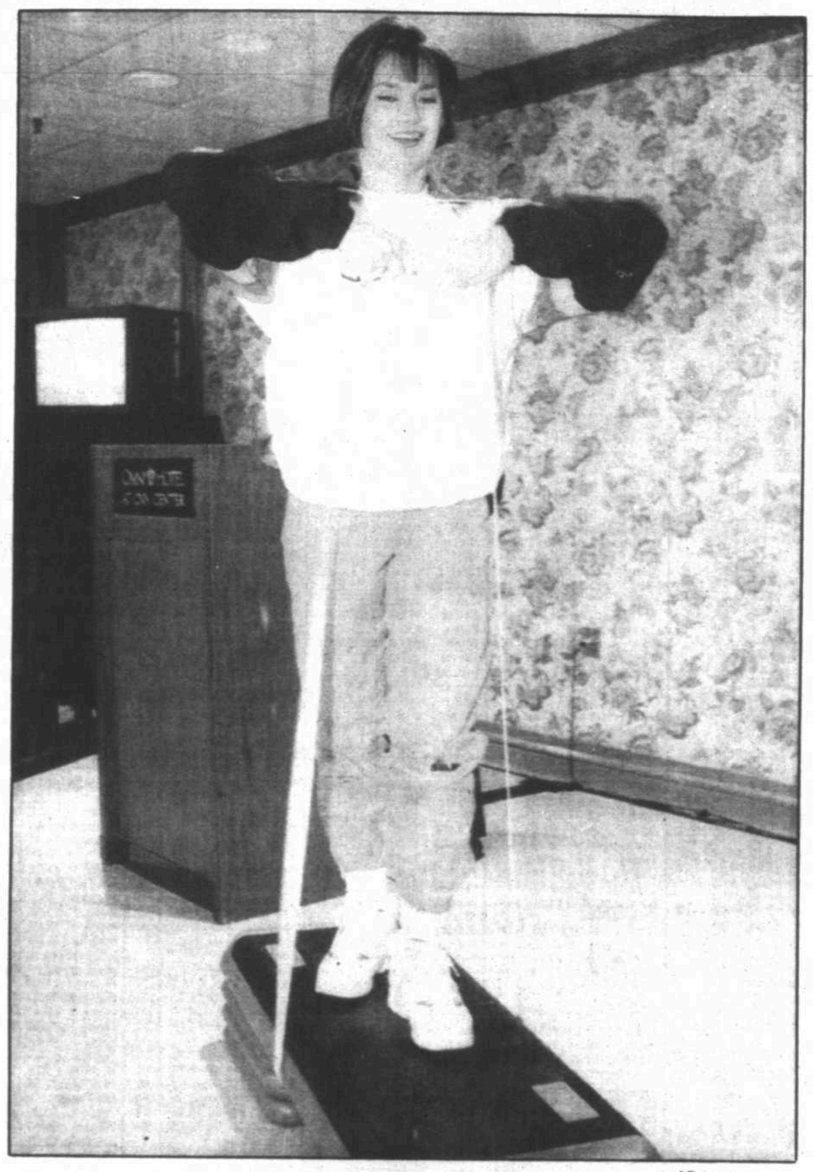

"I've studied futures in all industries," Catlett said, "and I've never seen an industry grab the concepts of futures faster than the natural gas industry. I've never seen an industry move toward margin management faster."

Controlling margins and thus managing risk, Catlett said, offers phenomenal opportunities. And those with access to the futures market are those who have access to information, he said.

Natural gas futures contracts, he said, are similar to other contracts, standardized in terms of delivery points and volume. But they are tradable, an asset that draws speculators. "And you want speculators," he said, "because they add liquidity to the market." Speculators are attracted because they can buy and sell contracts immediately, make money off the price movement and never take actual delivery of the commodity.

What flows into the futures markets, Catlett said, is a large amount of current information on natural gas markets. One draw of the futures market, he said, is its assurance that it guarantees every bit of information.

A critical test that the futures market is providing valuable information is if the cash and futures markets track together, and Catlett said that in the nearly three years since the gas futures market was launched, futures and cash prices have tracked almost perfectly. "We have a very fluid, active, open futures market," he said.

Interest rates help banks earn record profits in 1992

WASHINGTON (AP) — Low interest rates on deposits helped the nation's banks earn a record $32.2 billion last year, prompting regulators Tuesday to all but declare an end to the industry's crisis.

"1992 was an extraordinary year — extraordinarily good," said Andrew C. Hove Jr., acting chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. "... These developments mean it becomes more and more unlikely the public will have to pick up the bill for bank failures."

According to the FDIC, the country's 11,461 commercial banks earned $8.2 billion in the fourth quarter, pushing profits for the full year to $32.2 billion well past the old record of $24.8 billion, set in 1988. In 1991, banks earned $17.9 billion.

The earnings were largely the product of favorable interest rate conditions for banks — a wide gap between the rates they pay to depositors and rates they earn on loans and other investments.

But banks also had fewer loans go bad. For the first time since 1978, charge-offs — the amount of loans declared a loss — fell. They decreased by $7.3 billion from the year before to $25.5 billion.

The number of commercial and savings banks on the agency's problem list declined dramatically during the year, from 1,090 to 863, the lowest number since 1985. Hove said the agency's projection for 120 failures this year would be reduced.

The FDIC had expected banks with $76 billion in assets to fail this year, up from $44 billion last year. That probably will be revised down to between $25 billion and $40 billion.

Hove predicted that 1993 would be another good year for banks and private economists agreed, although they said earnings probably wouldn't surpass the 1992 record.

GTE encourages 26,000 to leave

DALLAS (AP) — GTE Telephone Operations, the largest subsidiary of GTE Corp., on Tuesday offered early retirement and severance incentives to 26,000 salaried employees nationwide.

The nation's second-largest phone company said it had no specific job reduction targets, however.

GTE Telephone Operations, based in suburban Dallas, has cut 19,000 jobs since 1988 and $1.5 billion in costs during the past three years. But GTE's costs remain among the highest in the industry and competition has increased in many of its businesses.

"We can do more with less and still maintain, or even improve, the value of our products and services," company spokesman Richard Jones said.

The company is negotiating with local unions around the country to offer similar buyout incentives to hourly employees. Agreements have been reached to offer early retirement benefits to 1,616 hourly workers in California and 941 hourly workers in Florida.

Midlander's businesses are home-oriented

By Mella McEwen

Midlander Janet Carlton has begun two new businesses.

McEwen

The first is HOME HEALTH HAIR CARE, specializing in hair care for those who are disabled or bedridden and unable to go to barber shops and beauty salons.

Carlton, a licensed cosmetologist, said HHHC offers shampoo/conditioning, haircuts, blowdry, styling, wet sets, permanents, wigs, shaving, facials, massages, manicures and pedicures. She has an inflatable sink that she can use to wash hair while the client is in bed.

She also has her nurses' assistant certification and, while attending nursing classes at Midland College worked for Nurses Unlimited and Hospice of Midland. After graduation she worked in the oncology department at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. But, she said, working with cancer patients — and losing her husband to cancer — "got a little much for me."

She decided to combine her two experiences into HHHC, she said, because she saw a need for the service. She charges by the visit, $25 for a maximum of two hours then $5 for each additional quarter hour.

Carlton's second business is COVER YOUR ASSETS, an inventory recording service.

Using videotape, photography, engraving and cataloging, she will inventory contents of a home such as televisions, stereos, answering machines and home computers, or the equipment in a commercial business. The client keeps all records.

She offers the service in Midland, Odessa, Stanton, Monahans, Iraan, Denver City, Seminole and Andrews.

The cost depends on how big a home or office and how much there is to inventory.

Carlton can be reached by calling 682-6826.

On the move is ELMS, FARIS & CO. certified public accountants.

The company has moved its Midland office to Suite 1550 of Independence Plaza, 400 W. Illinois. The company had been located at 1004 N. Big Spring, Suite 523.

Several employees of CONNIE'S FASHIONS location in Midland Plaza won awards at the company's annual banquet in San Angelo recently.

Stephanie Large, apparel manager and Cherri Wilson, assistant manager, were cited for low inventory shrinkage; Cherry Crisler won an award for high personal sales; and Bertie Tobin, shoe department manager, won awards for low inventory shrinkage, high personal sales and high boot sales.

The company has a second Midland location in Dellwood Mall.

CAP ROCK ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC.

NOTICE OF RATE CHANGE REQUEST

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., on the 12th day of April, 1993, and pursuant to Sections 16, 17, 37 and 43 of the Public Regulatory Act (Article 1446(c), V.A.S.C.) and the Public Utility Commission of Texas Substantive Rule 23.23(c) will file a Statement of Intent and Petition for Authority to Change Rates effective June 12, 1993, with the Public Utility Commission of Texas and all cities exercising original jurisdiction over its rates and tariffs.

Prior to filing, copies of the proposed revised tariffs and other pertinent data may be inspected at the office of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., P.O. Box 700, Loop 214, Stanton, Texas 79782, Telephone (915) 756-3381. Upon filing, copies of the proposed tariffs and supporting testimony and other pertinent data may be inspected in the office of the Cooperative.

A Member Rate Advisory Committee, made up of customer representatives of different rate categories are participating with the Cap Rock board in making this announcement. Cap Rock Electric has had no rate change since 1991 and the proposed 5% increase will align revenues more closely with rising inflation. Streamlining this rate filing process and addressing all intervening parties through the staff of Cap Rock will save you, the Cap Rock member, approximately $100,000, compared to traditional rate filing procedures.

All of Cap Rock's customers will be affected by the proposed change. The proposed change will increase Cap Rock's test year revenues for that class. The expected dollar increase by class is: General Service, $737,266; Small Commercial, $782,942; Irrigation, $121,947; Industrial Service, $123,266; Large Commercial, $6,735; Cotton Gins, $64,316; and Security Lights, $6,598.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify Cap Rock immediately at the above listed address and telephone number. Inquiries should be directed to Mr. John Parker.
