Shultz says he'll probe Castro's sincerity

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is telling congressional leaders he intends to probe the sincerity of Cuban President Fidel Castro's expressed willingness to help defuse Central America's escalating tensions.

Castro told U.S. television interviewers last week he can go along with any regional agreement which bars arms shipments to Central American nations and requires the withdrawal of foreign military advisers from such nations as Nicaragua and El Salvador.

"Given the fact that Castro has been the principal exporter of trouble down there, these apparent conciliatory statements ought to be pursued and I think will be pursued," Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., told reporters Wednesday as he and other congressional leaders emerged from a foreign policy briefing by Shultz.

Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Shultz "gave every indication" the administration will pursue Castro's overture "to see if there is real sincerity and some realism in what we have heard."

Baker said that while it might turn out that Castro is "showboating," it is probably wise to take his comments seriously on the chance he has had "a change of heart."

Shultz faced further questioning on the administration's Central American policies today in private meetings with members of the House Foreign Affairs committee.

Baker called the Castro gesture "remarkable," considering the Cuban leader's dispatch of 3,000 or more military advisers to the leftist government of Nicaragua and his alleged arms shipments to guerrillas battling the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador.

He said he saw "tentative progress" and cause for "preliminary and tentative optimism" in Castro's words, especially when they are coupled with the recent conciliatory statements by Nicaragua's Marxist leaders and the work of the so-called Contadora group of Latin American nations trying to weld a regional settlement.

But House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., who also heard Shultz, told reporters: "I don't feel any more optimistic. I don't see any change in our policy whatsoever."

Any regional agreement in Central America affecting arms shipments and advisers would touch on U.S. activities as well as Cuba's.

The United States has more than 50 military advisers in El Salvador and trains and helps arm the Salvadoran army and is heavily involved in promoting a democratic government in the country.

The House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations is considering a State Department request to earmark $3.4 million for election aid in El Salvador which subcommittee chairman Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., on Wednesday said should not be paid unless the Salvadoran government can guarantee the safety of all candidates.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon said as many as 5,675 U.S. military personnel in a dozen Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine and multi-service units would be involved in the six months of joint U.S.-Honduran military exercises ordered by President Reagan.

Pentagon sources said the aircraft carrier Coral Sea would leave the Mediterranean today for those exercises which open in September.

Baker and other congressional leaders complained to Reagan on Tuesday they had no advance word of recent U.S. military and diplomatic moves, notably the decision to hold the large-scale military maneuvers off the Pacific and Caribbean coasts of Honduras.

But they emerged from a breakfast meeting with Shultz on Wednesday saying they had nailed down new promises for close advance consultation and believed they would be kept.

In other developments, Reagan and Shultz met with special U.S. envoy Richard Stone, who reported on his "quite useful" recent meetings with Salvadoran guerrilla leaders and Nicaragua's top leaders.

And Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, launching his work as chairman of Reagan's new advisory commission on Central-American policy, met with the ambassadors of Colombia, Panama, Mexico and Venezuela, the four nations comprising the Contadora group which is seeking a regional peace settlement.

Bobby wouldn't wait

Police officers play stork for Pampa Motel 'rush job'

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Fifteen minutes before the end of his first night on patrol, Corporal Ron Howell of the Pampa Police Department helped deliver a baby who "just decided he wanted to come into the world."

Pampa Police Officer Rod Bishop and Howell arrived on the scene in time to help Dorothy Sanchez have her baby Wednesday morning. Bobby Sanchez was born about 6:45 a.m. at the Pampa Motel where his mother is the manager.

"They were so good. They should take it up as a profession," said Dorothy, from her hospital bed. "They didn't pull any punches. They knew what they were doing," said the mother of five.

"When we got there, she was trying to hold the baby back," Howell said. "We couldn't have that."

Howell, who has delivered two other babies, said he could tell the baby was "right there." He said he was afraid the baby would be hurt if the mother tried to prevent its birth any longer.

They could see the top of the baby's head and knew it would be born before the ambulance could arrive, Howell said. "It wouldn't get there for at least ten minutes," he said. As it worked out the ambulance arrived just after the baby was born.

"It was kind of scary but very exhilarating," Rod Bishop said after delivering a baby for the first time.

"I attended the birth of my own children, but I've never delivered a baby before," Bishop said. He said the real thing is very different from viewing a training film.

Dorothy said Howell and Bishop helped her with her breathing and told her when to push and when to relax.

"Howell was watching the mother and guiding her," Bishop said. "My main concern was the child. I knew to hold the head and clear the nose and throat, but there was that little bit of fear," he said.

"You'd have thought they'd had babies...I just can't describe how good they were," the mother said.

Dorothy said her baby wasn't due until August 20, but "he just decided he wanted to come into the world." Her first four children took about 11 - 12 hours to be born.

Bobby - "we pulled that name out of the hat; it was supposed to be a girl." - didn't wait that long. Dorothy said she went into light labor about 4:30 a.m., and by 6:15 she knew there wasn't much time to wait.

"I told Henry (her husband) to go get Sue," a friend who was going to stay with their one - year old. "He was gone about 10 minutes and when he came back, I told him it was time."

Henry Sanchez, the baby's father, tried to call the police, but according to his wife, he dropped the phone and became tangled in the cord. The friend called the police.

When Bishop heard the call, it was 6:37 a.m., he said he heard "birth", but knew it had to be "burglary." He had been up for over 26 hours and he only had about twenty minutes left before getting off shift.

"I asked the dispatcher to repeat. He said "birth." Bishop recalled.

Ten minutes later the baby was born.

Dorothy said this is her last child.

"If I can't make it to the hospital anymore....I'd better stop." Dorothy and her husband's other children range from 18 years to the one-year-old baby.

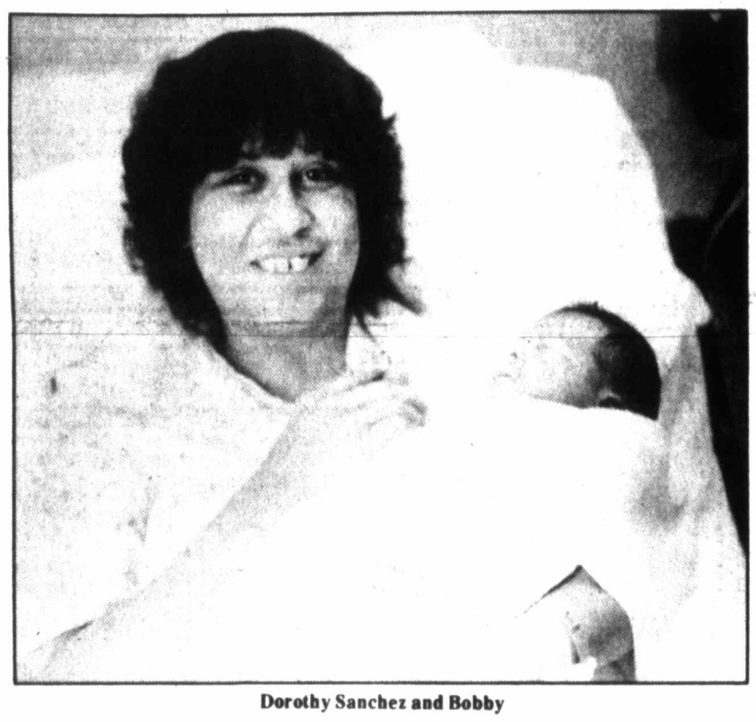

Reflecting on his job and the morning's events, Bishop said, unfortunately, an officer has to deal with so many negative situations; this "makes it all worth while...being able to help someone."

"It was some real excitement," laughed Howell of his first night back on the beat. He recently transferred from the criminal investigation division of the Pampa Police Department.

Bishop rode with the mother and child in the ambulance to the hospital. After they were taken to the maternity ward and nursery, he went into the cafeteria for a cup of coffee.

"When I came home, I felt - knew - I'd done a good job."

"Bishop did a real good job," said the more experienced Howell.

Schools buy two - way radios

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

The Pampa school board decided to spend $18,037.80 for FM radio equipment for the transportation and maintenance departments at its meeting Tuesday.

The Pampa Independent School District board of trustees holds regular meetings the first and third Tuesdays of each month at the Carver Educational Service Center in Pampa.

According to Paul Boswell, deputy superintendent of schools, the new FM radio equipment will have a range of about 40 miles. Should a break-down occur or a child become ill when the bus in enroute - away from the school - the bus driver can summon help more quickly, Boswell said. He also pointed out busses often travel in convoy when attending "away" sports and other events. The new equipment will make keeping track of all the vehicles easier. For instance, if the back one breaks down the driver only has to radio to the rest, and they can wait or give assistance, he said.

The $18,037.80 bid was submitted by Motorola and will pay for: 16 - two way or 32 channel UHF mobiles with installation; three - UHF portables, two-way with tone-coded squelch; one - UHF 75 watt, four-frequency capability, tone-control base with coded squelch repeater with duplexer; one - UHF desk set with paging encoder installed; five - UHF tone voice pagers; one 9.2 dB gain-base antenna; one - 170 foot length of ½-inch foam helix transmission line; and one 150-foot guyed tower installed.

The low bid for group health and life insurance, submitted by Corporate Risk Counselors for the Texas Association of Community Schools, was accepted. Under the plan the district will pick up the employee's insurance and the employee will pay for any dependent insurance.

The benefits will be: $10,000 life insurance, $1 million lifetime maximum, $100 individual deductible, three maximum deductibles, 80 percent plan benefit, $3,000 co-insurance amount, and $300 accident benefit (before deductible takes effect), and $2,500 outpatient mental benefit per year.

The costs per month will be: employee only (paid by district) $56.09; the rest paid by the employee: children - $35.63, spouse - $43.92, and children and spouse - $79.55.

The depository pledge contract bid for the next two years was awarded to First National Bank of Pampa. According to Boswell, First National was accepted because the bank pays higher interest rates on various kinds of certificates of deposit.

Tuition for students not living within PISD will be $1,239 for students who qualify for state and federal aid. James Trusty, superintendent of schools, said the non- resident students are mainly high school students from school districts like Grandview-Hopkins and Lefors.

Trustee Kenneth Fields presented the long-range planning committee report. The report says, the board, administrators and teachers of the district believe in homework as a part of the total educational process of the students. The board decided to take the report with its guidelines for implementing homework programs under advisement until the next meeting.

John English, assistant superintendent of schools, presented a progress report on the five-year accreditation plan. According to English the goal of the five-year plan is to bring the students mastery of the basic skills in reading, writing and mathematics up to and possibly beyond the minimum required by the state.

Handicapped fans moved

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Mentally handicapped baseball fans were humiliated when the "abrasive" general manager of a minor league team asked them to move from choice seats after other spectators complained, an advocacy group says.

The group of 27 mentally handicapped residents from Rainier School were forced to leave their seats behind home plate while at a Tacoma Tigers baseball game July 23, according to officials of Trouble Shooters for the Handicapped, an advocacy group for the disabled.

Job Hunter

"My wife and I moved here to make a new start," said Dan Armstrong. "We're trying to make Pampa our home."

Dan, 34, said he loves animals and has driven farm tractors. He is looking for farm or ranch work. The things he has done on a farm don't qualify him as a top hand-----yet, Dan said, "but there's nothing I can't learn to do."

Dan has a chauffeur's license and could work local hauling. He doesn't want to return to long-haul.

He has had experience painting houses, roofing and installing panelling. He has also been a plumber's helper and done electical work.

Dan can be reached at 665-0296.

The five-year plan was started in February, 1981 and will end the spring of 1986.

English said in the reading section fifth and ninth grade students are tested on their ability to understand what they read.

According to the tests the fifth grade students did 11 percent better than the goal set for this year and almost reached the five-year goal. The ninth grade students did seven percent better than this year's goal, also nearly reaching the 1986 goal.

In mathematics the students are not only supposed to memorize the math tables, but understand what they mean. For instance, understanding one-fourth of a pie means the pie is cut into four pieces and the four pieces come together to make a whole pie.

Fifth grade students did five percent better than this year's goal and the ninth graders did one percent better, coming only four percent short of the five-year goal.

Writing, the ability to communicate through the written word, is a priority area of learning. Students are tested on spelling, punctuation, grammar and so on. They must write a short composition for the test.

The five-year goal is for fifth graders to master 85 percent of the minimum requirements set by the state education agency in this area. After only two years, the fifth graders tested 94 percent, nine points above the five-year goal. The ninth graders showed the same improvement. Their five-year goal is 90 percent mastery of writing skills and they tested 98 percent, eight points higher.

In other business, the board approved the ammended 1982-83 budget, accepted two resignations and approved hiring six new teachers.

The resignations of Tiata Campbell, a Travis elementary fifth grade teacher, and Frances Palmer, a PHS English teacher, were accepted.

The following teachers were hired:

Loraine E. Patillo, PHS CVAE Homemaking instructor; Cynthia A. Brazda, Pampa Middle School reading teacher; Carol G. Dunham, PMS English teacher; Phillip L. Hall, PHS volleyball coach and Baker physical education teacher; Sheila F. Barnes, special education cooperative - Lefors; and Joyce B. Bowles, Mann special education teacher.

Recycling king Thomas Grange of Pampa unloads the 21,700 aluminum beverage cans he collected during the past couple of months.

Pampa's recycling king makes extra cash with others' trash

Thomas Grange could very well be the recycling champ of Pampa.

Grange, who lives at 1025 S. Farley, brought in a 904-pound load, or 21,700 aluminum cans, to Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company's Amarillo Service Center last week.

He was paid $244.08, or 27 cents per pound. Grange just missed out by a few minutes in being the persoh who recycled the seven-millionth-pound at the center.

Mrs. Lee Sims of Amarillo recycled 102 pounds just before Grange arrived and was given a $100 dollar bill and a plaque to commemorate the event. About every two months, Grange loads up his trailers with plastic bags full of aluminium beverage cans and heads for Amarillo.

He gathers the cans from clubs, restaurants and public areas. His normal load exceed 700 pounds and provides him a good source of supplemental income.

"Recycling activity in the Amarillo area has grown dramatically in the eight and a half years since the company opened it's plant here," said Ivan Schmid, manager of the facility.

In 1975, the first year the center at 3615 Tower St. operated, about 36,000 pounds were recycled. By the end of 1982, the total had climbed to almost 6.5 million pounds. The seven million pounds recycled to date are equal to approximately 168 million aluminum beverage cans.

Amarillo residents have been paid more than $1.6 million for the aluminum they have recycled. "This is money that would have been lost to the local economy if the aluminum had ended up in the trash," he added.

Recycling also helps the enviroment and conserves energy. Aluminum can be recycled again and again, each time saving 95 percent of the energy required to make it from ore.

All-aluminum beverage cans can be purchased for 27 cents per pound. Reynolds also purchases other clean household items such as foil, pie plates, frozen food and dinner trays, siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, lawm furniture tubing, power lawn mower housings and barbecue grills for ten cents per pound.

These items should be free of any non-aluminum materials, cut to lengths not exceeding three feet, bundled, and not mixed with cans. The center is open Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Food poisoning shouldn't be a summer picnic guest this year

Summer is the time for family outings and weekend picnics which are American as apple pie. However, that apple pie and other foods may spoil the summer fun if they are not properly refrigerated, warns Canyon paramedic Danny White, vice chairman of Panhandle Emergency Medical Service.

One of the most common types of food poisoning is caused by Staphylococcus bacteria which multiply rapidly when certain foods are stored at temperatures which are too warm.

All kinds of meats, dairy products, and certain baked goods are especially susceptible. In fact, any food left in an open container and unrefrigerated should be suspect, warns White.

The symptoms usually occur a few hours after eating and consist of vomiting, diarrhea, stomach cramps, and nausea. The person suffering from food poisoning feels like they are going to die, although death rarely occurs.

White, chairman of the PEMS Education Committee says that treatment is based on correcting dehydration which occurs from the vomiting and diarrhea. Relief of abdominal cramping and diarrhea can be obtained through the use of commercial preparations from the local pharmacy. Usually the symptoms last less than 24 hours.

There are other forms of food poisoning which can occur from eating contaminated or poisonous plants. If a child eats one of those plants Mr. White adivses that parents immediately call the Poison Control Number at 1 - 800 - 692 - 1331 in Amarillo. They can advise you on treatment and symptoms of most poisons.

White concluded if you have had any doubt about the seriousness or complications of food poisoning call your local physician, Emergency Medical Services number or the Panhandle Emergency Medical Services number 1 - 800 - 692 - 1331.

Astronaut to speak at reunion

Astronaut John M. Lounge will be the guest speaker on aviation at the annual reunion of the Pampa Army Air Field Association at 7 p.m., Aug. 12, in the Starlight Room of Pampa's Coronado Inn.

Lounge has been an astronaut candidate since 1980 and is in line for a future shuttle mission. He is from Burlington, Colorado.

His talk will highlight two days of activities for hundreds of former cadets and employees of the air field, which was located 12 miles east of Pampa during World War II.

For more information on the reunion, call 665-2526.

Pampa woman released on bond in arson case

The woman suspected of starting a fire in the house at 825 S. Barnes was arrested late Monday night and was released on bond Tuesday afternoon.

Nettie Nell Tucker was arrested on a warrant charging her with arson of a habitation by officers of the Pampa Police Department late Monday night, according to the record.

She was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge who set her bond at $10,000. According to the Gray County Sheriff's office, Tucker made bail Tuesday afternoon.

According to the fire department, the house sustained heavy fire damage in the living room where the fire is thought to have started. The rest of the house had heavy smoke and heat damage.

Home Country

He has corner on neighborhood market

By SKIP HOLLANDSWORTH
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — In the quiet of the afternoon, his hands still dirty from pulling weeds in the back alley, Joe Williams looks at his empire. He walks inside Joe's Barber Shop, his first business, which opened in 1969. A little black-and-white television flickers soundlessly in the corner, and William McKinley, who now runs the shop, wipes a bead of sweat off his cheek and says, "Lot of flies in here today, Joe."

Next door is Joe's Washateria, and around the corner is Joe's Beer and Wine. Right beside that is Joe's Liquor. In the back of Joe's Liquor, behind the chicken wire that Joe put up to keep people from leaning over the counter and stealing things, is Joe's Bail Bonds, and at the other end of the small strip of stores is Joe's Barbeque, where the kids like to hang out.

Joe's Grocery Store used to be there, but he closed it, along with Joe's Chicken and Joe's Cafe. In the parking lot is a big yellow truck and tractor, the machinery that makes up Joe's Construction. Across the street is a little house where Joe one day hopes to set up his latest venture, Joe's Insurance.

It is one of the more complete business monopolies in Dallas, servicing a closely knit, predominantly black neighborhood just east of Love Field and only a few blocks from two of the richest white areas in the city — University Park, to the east, and the million-dollar homes of Bluffview, just to the north.

Williams, 44, has made his stand in what is called the old Elm Thicket neighborhood, one of the few black areas in North Dallas.

Beginning in the 1930s, blacks moved into a small cluster of frame houses in the area. During the mid-'60s, when a black minister, the Rev. T.L. Young, bought one of the brick homes a couple of blocks east of ohe black section, others gradually followed.

Now, the middle-class neighborhood, where real estate agents say an average two-bedroom home sells for about $65,000, extends eastward. Among the prominent residents are state Rep. Sam Hudson, former state Rep. Zan Holmes, Terminal Cab Co. owner Ezell Randall, the Rev. I.B. Loud of St. Paul United Methodist Church and artist Willard Watson. Watson, known as "The Texas Kid," has put so many unusual animal sculptures in his front yard that the street is often blocked with people who have stopped their cars to gawk.

Significantly, one of the largest houses in the neighborhood has just been constructed by Williams. It has five bedrooms, 20-foot ceilings, and cost $500,000 to build. For Williams, married and the father of four daughters, a burly but soft-spoken man who wears plain, inexpensive work clothes and drives a beat-up 1973 red Oldsmobile, the house is the only sign that he has become wealthy from his storefront shops.

"My banker said to me one day, 'Joe, why are you spending so much money on that house?' And I said to her, 'Because I want a big house like white people.' She said most white people never get close to a house like that, and the sad thing is I've spent so much money on it that now I'm more or less broke."

But Williams never stops trying, in his words, "to figure out ways to make some money." After waking up at 5 a.m. to clean his stores ("I think it's still my duty to be the janitor"), he does construction or landscaping work besides overseeing the businesses on the dilapidated, concrete-wall shopping strip. Throughout the night, he takes calls placed to Joe's Bail Bonds from people wanting out of jail. He is always hustling.

"He never takes the time to act big," says Robert White, who frequents Williams' stores.

Says real estate agent Arnold Blair, whose family started one of the first black real estate companies in Dallas, "Joe is one of your basic entrepreneurs. He just sort of popped up as a small businessman, and he went from one business to the next. Everything he starts he sticks his name to, and it seems to get along."

After graduating from Prairie View A&M University, Williams taught high school math for two years, then came to Dallas. When he realized he could make more money cutting hair than working as a machinist at the LTV Corp., he moved to Elm Thicket and opened Joe's Barber Shop. Thus began what Williams now calls "the Joe stores."

Williams recently took his insurance test "because there are a lot of people around here who need automobile insurance." Willams even wanted to start a Joe's Day Care Center, "because all these kids are running around the neighborhood with their hair uncombed and nothing to do, waiting for their parents to get home from work."

But the city would not grant him the proper zoning. Blair, who sells many of the properties in the area and is representing the owner of the shopping center, says the property is for sale and several buyers have expressed interest. If it is sold, the last black enterprises in Elm Thicket, which, other than Williams' businesses, consist of a tavern and beer and wine store, might be torn down.

"Just as well," says Williams, looking at Joe's Beer. "A bulldozer could knock down this old shopping center in less than a minute."

Ironically, in the neighborhood around the shopping center, many homes have been refurbished and repainted. "People care about keeping Elm Thicket," says Blair. "There isn't any racial tension any more. The whites and blacks get along so easily because they have been living on the same streets since 1965. A young white family came into the edge of the neighborhood and bought one of the larger houses for $159,000, fixed it, and now it could sell for $265,000."

When the black residents started expanding from their little patch of wood-frame houses, white residents began selling out. "We would have 15 houses for sale on one block," remembers Blair. "And the blacks were right there ready to buy them."

Murdean Berry, a school teacher who is one of the leaders of the neighborhood service club that helps residents get low-interest loans to fix up their homes, named her child after a white neighbor who lives one street over. She says when Young, the minister, first moved into the white area, "there were bomb threats, his big picture window was broken out, and he finally moved to Oak Cliff. But another black man moved in right after, and those who stayed realized it was pointless to keep up the tension. So we all became friends."

"This area has been integrated for a long time," says Harry Taylor, "and I know all the people in University Park must think there is a lot of crime or unrest or something, but that's completely untrue."

Williams says his stores have been robbed once in 13 years. "And we caught him the next day," he says. "There's a lot of street life here, and it's not as quiet as the rich white areas, but that doesn't mean anything. People just like to stand around the shopping center here and talk."

Surrounded on two sides by neighborhoods of white wealth, Williams says he feels driven to prove he can be just as successful.

But he says, "I still loan people money. I don't buy fancy suits. I want to stay common. After all the money I spent on my house, I have to, for the time being."

Williams walks out of Joe's Liquor and stands in front of Joe's Beer. The two stores are separate because state law prohibits Williams from selling liquor before 10 a.m. and he says some of his customers like to buy beer when he opens at 7 a.m.

"I guess if they tear the building down, I'll give up the stores and just stick with bail bonds and insurance and the construction company," he says. "Oh, I guess I'll miss all the signs. But it's all right being just an average Joe."

Joe's place

Joe Williams takes time from a busy schedule to pose for a photograph in front of one of the stores he owns in Dallas. He has a barber shop, washateria, liquor and grocery store, not to mention the bail bond and construction company, and all are called Joe's. It is one of the more complete business monopolies in Dallas. (AP Laserphoto)

Baby deaths trial moved to Georgetown due to publicity

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — The trial of a nurse charged with murdering a 15-month-old girl with injections of a powerful drug has been moved about 100 miles away because of intense publicity.

State District Judge Murray Jordan granted the defense's change of venue motion Wednesday and set an Oct. 17 trial date in Georgetown for nurse Genene Jones.

Ms. Jones, 33, is charged with injecting seven Kerrville area children with a paralyzing muscle relaxant in August and September of 1982.

Her trial should last several weeks because Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton says he plans to call about 70 witnesses.

The nurse first will be tried for the Sept. 17 death of Chelsea Ann McClellan, who died after treatment in the Kerrville clinic where Ms. Jones was employed.

Jordan denied Wednesday the defense's request for psychiatric examinations of Petti McClellan, Chelsea's mother, and Gwen Granter, a former receptionist at the clinic.

Defense attorney William Chenault said Mrs. McClellan's "rage, hatred and bitterness" might have altered her "to the point where truth becomes irrevelant."

Both women are expected to testify for the prosecution in Ms. Jones' trial.

Jordan agreed to order a psychiatric evaluation of Ms. Jones' former live-in babysitter, Kathy Ferguson, but only if she is called by Sutton to testify.

Ms. Ferguson has been in the San Antonio State Hospital, a mental institution, for the past month.

A Bexar County grand jury is investigating a string of suspicious infant deaths at the pediatric intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital from 1978 to early 1982.

Ms. Jones worked at the hospital during the period being investigated, but has denied any wrongdoing.

Chenault and Ms. Jones' other court-appointed attorney, Joe Grady Tuck, introduced into evidence stacks of newspaper clippings and television footage to show the nurse could not receive a fair trial in Kerrville or anywhere in the vicinity of San Antonio, about 55 miles away.

Two local attorneys were called to testify about the "widespread prejudice" against the nurse.

"I don't think there are 32 people (in Kerrville) who don't think she's guilty," said James L. Elliott, a criminal attorney. "Everyone I talk to apparently believes in her guilt."

Strongly worded sign gets speeders' attention

HONDO, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Jerry Smith likes to watch the cars whizzing through Hondo on U.S. Highway 90 — whizzing, that is, until drivers spot a brightly colored sign by the roadside.

"THIS IS GOD'S COUNTRY," the sign proclaims in bold block letters. "PLEASE DON'T DRIVE THROUGH IT LIKE HELL."

"You can just sit there and watch people slow up or slam on their brakes," Smith said. "Especially if they haven't been through the area before. I guess you could say it's a tourist attraction."

The Lions Club printed up 100,000 postcards showing the eye-catching sign in 1968 and the local Chamber of Commerce already has gone through several more printings.

"People write to ask for them and local people come in to get a handful of them when they're going on vacation," said Lillian Porter, manager of the chamber. "We've even had some of the cards put up in places in Europe."

The first weather-beaten sign was erected at the westbound entrance to Hondo in the 1930s as a Lions Club project, but members of a local church weren't too thrilled about the use of the word "hell," Ms. Porter said.

"The sign was either covered up or taken down for several years," she said. "Then they put up a new sign and added the word 'please,' which seemed to make it all right.

"I don't see how anyone could be offended now, or at least they don't complain," she said. "We get enough requests for postcards."

Identical green-and-white wooden warning signs now mark both highway entrances to this Southwest Texas town of 6,000 — in conspicuous view of motorists driving the 40 miles east to San Antonio or continuing west to Uvalde and Del Rio.

The late W.N. Saathoff, a one-time Lions Club president, proposed the slogan to halt the speeders zooming through town in the roadsters that followed on the heels of Henry Ford's Model-T.

"This was about the time the Model-T went out of existence," Saathoff recalled in the 1950s. "Motorists were going too fast. Hence, the warning. It is still a warning to travelers."

Members of the Hondo Police Department sometimes hand out postcards of the strongly worded signs in lieu of speeding tickets, Smith said.

"Everybody has a bad day occasionally," the chief said. "Sometimes, the officer will just write a warning and give them the postcard instead of a ticket."

Tourists can pick up free postcards at a host of places around town. The souvenir cards were a big hit at the 1968 Hemisfair held in San Antonio, and a postcard dealer in Lund, Sweden, purchased some years ago to sell to card collectors all over the world.

Smith concedes the markers' popularity might have helped spread the word about Hondo, but doesn't think the signs are responsible for any marked reduction in the number of speeders.

Textbook committee deliberates on testimony

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Textbook Committee has retired to recommend schoolbooks after listening to critics complain for three days that some contained too much — or too little — sexual, political or religious references.

Under a new law, the committee allowed witnesses to testify in favor of books on the proposed lists. In the past, only those who wanted to complain about a book were allowed to speak.

Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum said the only surprise was that the hearings were over much sooner than expected — each day the committee completed its agenda before lunch, even though time had been allowed for afternoon sessions.

"We had scheduled much longer per day, but due to no-shows and a lack of questioning, we probably could have allowed more time" per person, he said. Each witness was allowed six mintues to talk.

On Wednesday, the last day of the opening round of hearings, one woman complained that an eighth grade English text reached too far in trying to show accomplishments of women, while "relegating men to passive roles."

Kathy Boyd of Houston, who said she spoke only for herself and her family, urged the panel to reject "Language for Daily Use."

The 27-member panel will deliberate pros and cons on dozens of proposed books and recommend a list Aug. 29 to Bynum. In November, the State Board of Education will make final decisions.

"I have nothing against women who fly airplanes, herd cattle, work on tractors, and mend roofs," said Mrs. Boyd, a medical receptionist and mother of four. "But the author of this book seems to have gotten so caught up in routing out all 'sexism,' she almost routed out all reality in the process."

She read exerpts of one chapter of the text, which included a long list of accomplishments through history by women aviators, doctors and others.

"Men and boys were relegated to passive roles such as cooking, being a secretary, baking apple tarts, making a costume and decorating for a party," Mrs. Boyd complained. "Women and girls were given roles such as vice president of a corporation, herding wild mustangs, and rounding up stray cattle."

She said the dominant theme of the book was "role reversal."

The publisher responded that all the information was factual, and besides that, the purpose was "to teach effective writing, not history."

"This historical information is factual and in keeping with the publisher's determination to provide cross-curricular material as required" by Texas' schoolbook standards, said Nicholas Falletta of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc.

Another textbook critic, Mel Gabler of Longview, complained that the teacher's guide accompanying the eighth grade book "Language 8," suggested students be referred to "The Inner City Mother Goose" for ideas on how to make up their own "modern versions" of well known poems in literature.

Gabler said "Inner City," a satire on Mother Goose poems written for adults, includes several offensive poems including a version of "Jack Be Nimble" that has Jack mugging a woman and stabbing her.

Another one that offended Gabler started out "Lucy Locket lost her pocket," and when "Kitty" found it empty, "Kitty got mad and cut Lucy up."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

Louise Fletcher, Publisher
Anthony Randles, Managing Editor

Now that it's all over...

There seems to be some confusion in the minds of many of our readers on the recent dispute between the Pampa News and the Pampa Police Department, and it's time we set the record straight.

There never has been any anger between the two entities. We took the action we did, cutting off coverage of the police department for two months, because we didn't want our readers to think we were withholding information from them.

Now, more than two months later, the Texas attorney general, Jim Mattox, has spelled out in black-and-white exactly which police documents are for public perusal and which are not. This is a relief, not only to us news types, but to law enforcement agencies across the state. There is no guesswork now. There is no cause for argument between the public and the various law enforcement agencies.

This reporter has had the opportunity to watch the Pampa Police Department in action, and on one long occasion, saw them use restraint in their actions when tempers and patience should have been running short.

We're glad we have the police department, and commend Chief J.J. Ryzman and his officers for making Pampa a comparatively safe community in which to live.

To our thinking, this recent attorney general's opinion on what constitutes the public's right to know says two things very clearly to our readers: 1. You will read more and more of the police department's activities, and 2. When someone is arrested, you will read about it in the paper.

Whether the omissions in the past were accidental or not, and frankly we don't care, the state law now says clearly they will not happen again. This takes a burden off the police officers, as they won't be hassled by people wanting to keep their names out of the reports, and it will also take a burden off us, as we won't be getting as many requests as we used to.

In this way, I believe we can speak for both The Pampa News and the Pampa Police Department by saying: "If you don't want to see your name in the police report or court report on page 2, don't commit any violations."

With this attorney general's opinion, there were no losers. There were, instead, three winners.

The public, which includes this newspaper, won the right to see certain documents down at the cop shop.

The readers of this newspaper won, by being assured of more complete and accurate coverage of law enforcement activities.

But to our thinking, the biggest winner of all was the Pampa Police Department and other law enforcement agencies around the state. Because now, there won't be as many rumors of deliberate cover-ups or deletions. Now, what they do with their time will be out in the open for perusal by the public that pays their salaries.

All in all, this opinion by the state's top law enforcement officer sweeps like a fresh breeze through emotions that tended to heat up from time to time. It should make life easier and more informative for everyone.

Shorts

One of our favorite episodes in American literature is Tom Sawyer's plan to whitewash the fence without whitewashing the fence. You know: Tom so captivates a number of his playmates with the idea that painting the fence is fun that they wind up not only doing it for him, but paying for the privilege. Peculiarly American, imaginative and pragmatic. No one is exploited, and everyone gets something he wants.

Sawyer's spirit lives on in Carlsbad, California School Superintendent Philip Grignon. Early this year, Grignon drew up a plan to have students paint both Valley and Jefferson elementary schools. The students had a summer job. And the school district had a fresh coat of paint for $10,000, instead of the $50,000 or more it would have cost to contract the job out. By June, the students were busy at work on the Valley school and were almost ready to move on to Jefferson.

Maybe we need a special medal for the kind of thinking Grignon used to make everyone happy in this situation, and still get a good job done.

Newspeak is alive and well in '83

By PAUL GREENBERG

Here's the latest rationale for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan: A Soviet official, interviewed in a Swedish newspaper, explains that the Russians entered Afghanistan because they feared an American invasion of neighboring Iran during the 1979 hostage crisis. That's the word from Henry Trofimenko, who is described as a member of his country's U.S. - Canada Institute. That is, he's an Americologist, the Russian equivalent of a Kremlinologist. One wonders if his view of America makes as little sense as his opinions on Afghanistan.

There is little to be derived from this latest piece of Newspeak except an idea of how much Soviet officials may expect Swedes to believe. If the Soviets moved into Afghanistan only to forestall an American invasion, then why have they remained, when even the remote likelihood of such an American invasion has passed? But to ask such an obvious question is to return to Oldspeak, with its respect for the obvious.

George Orwell, who invented the terms Newspeak and Oldspeak, had his anti - utopian state in 1984 brandish various slogans: War Is Peace, Freedom Is Slavery, and Ignorance Is Strength. Such concepts made "sense" only in Newspeak. As he predicted, and as Comrade Trofimenko's statement confirms: "A totalitarian society which succeeded in perpetuating itself would probably set up a schizophrenic system of thought in which the laws of common sense held good in everyday life and in certain exact sciences, but could be disregarded by the politican, the historian, and the sociologist." Not to mention the Americologist.

The Soviet proconsul in Warsaw, General Jaruzelski, erected a monument in Newspeak when he proclaimed: "At the request of the Military Council for National Salvation, the council of state has lifted martial law on the territory of the whole country..." Oh frabjous day! Callooh, callay.

What this means in plain Polish is that martial law has been re - enacted in civil law. A new constitutional amendment allows the government to impose a state of emergency, re - imprison dissidents quicker than you can say Wojciech Jaruzelski, and keep the principal leaders of Solidarity in camps.

Anyone arrested under the new civil law can now rest assured that he is not being held under martial law, for whatever comfort there may be in that. Solidarity's key leaders will remain as locked up under the new dispensation as they were under the old.

In addition to amending the Constitution in order to give martial law a new disguise, the parliament also adopted various Special Regulations that extend some parts of martial law for another 18 months and in general allow the government to crush any opposition.

The margin by which the Polish parliament passed this new body of civil law, with its uncanny resemblence to the old martial law, indicates how much opposition is now to be allowed in Poland. The vote on the constitutional amendment was 386 to 1 with 1 abstention.

Soon the parliament is due to consider additional bills that will impose tighter censorship and stiffen the penal code. The Military Council for National Salvation - that title is another triumph of Newspeak - will doubtless oversee these changes so smoothly that Poles will hardly be able to tell the difference between the current freedom and the old martial law, perhaps because there isn't much. Except in words. Newspeak marches on, cloudily.

Lest it be assumed that the principles of Newspeak are unknown outside the Iron Curtain, here is the latest justification from Inferior Secretary James Watt for his general policy of clear - cutting the American environment. Mr. Watt says he was been pushing the production of oil, coal, and gas on public lands as part of a grand plan to assure that future generations of Americans will "have the right and privilege of enjoying these lands."

Add another slogan to War Is Peace, Freedom Is Slavery, and Ignorance Is Strength: Exploitation Is Conservation.

It's not just the calendar that shows 1984 is approaching.

Americans can make good cars

By PAUL HARVEY

Americans can make good cars.

Indeed, all through the years when the Detroit product came off the line imperfect, a car dealer in Neenah - Menasha, Wis., was still turning out "good" ones.

John Bergstrom had managed to corral some craftsmen of "the old school" who would take each new car delivered and "re - do" it.

All that was required was to go through the vehicle and its drive train and its power plant adjusting, timing, tidying - up, aligning doors, re - setting headlights, balancing, tightening and his cars were then delivered to customers as reliable as new cars should be.

Now American workers are resuming craftsmanship on the automative assembly line.

The Christian Science Monitor has been re - evaluating the Detroit product; its findings are encouraging.

A new preoccupation with "quality" is everywhere apparent and apparently it's more than the usual periodic "jacking up"; this time it looks like "the real thing."

When Ford designed the new Tempo and Topaz cars it turned for suggestions to assembly line workers: "How can we make this car better?"

The company got more than 650 suggestions and adopted most all of them.

Even though these changes delayed the delivery date, quality was put ahead of any deadlines.

The quality gap between Japanese cars and Detroit cars was financially catastrophic - and embarrassing. It is narrowing.

David Cole, automative engineering, University of Michigan, says, "There's no comparison of today's Detroit cars with those of two years ago - even one year ago."

Car warranty expenses at Chrysler are down 44 percent from 1978 levels. Chrysler is experiencing another 24 percentage points improvement this year.

General Motors 1984 Corvette and the new "C - cars" were delivered to dealers tardily while the company solved "problems" it might previously have ignored.

The quality index for Ford cars has improved 59 percent since 1980.

Alex Mair, in charge of engineering for Ford, says, "Quality was not always our number one priority; since foreign competition it is."

Parts testing occurs now much earlier in the new product process. Competitors' cars are stripped down and analyzed more than ever before.

There is less allowable variance in parts and fit.

Chrysler conducts five - day workshops with suppliers to pass along whatever new has been learned about improving quality.

John Bergstrom is gratified to see Detroit taking over. He says it will take a while for the word to get around, for public confidence to be re - earned, but "the U.S. is now making the finest cars in the world."

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Aug. 4, the 216th day of 1983. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 4, 1892, Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., and charged with the hatchet deaths of her father and stepmother.

On this date:

In 1914, Britain declared war on Germany and the United States proclaimed its neutrality during World War I.

In 1916, the United States purchased the Danish Virgin Islands for $25 million.

In 1944, Nazi police captured 14-year-old Anne Frank and seven other Jews in hiding places in Amsterdam during World War II.

In 1972, Arthur Bremer was found guilty of shooting and crippling presidential candidate Gov. George Wallace of Alabama in Laurel, Md. Bremer received a 63-year prison term.

Ten years ago: Argentina's Peronist party nominated former dictator Juan Peron and his wife, Isabel, as candidates for president and vice president in a national election.

Five years ago: Secretary of State Cyrus Vance announced he would go to the Middle East in an effort to break the impasse in peace talks between Egypt and Israel.

'Opinions...even to the point of rudeness...'

Street repairs

In your editorial of July 12, 1983, Mr. Randles, you discussed the "latest move to improve Pampa's streets." You are privileged to your opinions even to the point of rudeness by the verbal haymakers you swing at the city commissioners. However, you lose credibility when you express mere opinions as fact. Items:

1. You write, "Pampa has one of the highest tax rates in Texas, and yet perform few duties for its residents than many other cities, including Odessa, Amarillo, and Lubbock." This is your opinion, Mr. Randles, based on your experience and knowledge. Is your experience and knowledge so great that you can state this opinion as fact? Do you suppose that others might disagree with you?

2. You write: "Also mentioned was widening Kentucky. Why? Because if the city improves the roads going out to Price Road, it will be much easier to annex that portion of Pampa when it wants to."

Perhaps, you are right, but how do you know? Have any of the city commissioners, publicly or privately, by either verbal or written statement, collectively or individually, purposely or inadvertently, expressed such an intention? Are you clairvoyant, Mr. Randles?

3. Regarding the city fathers, you ask, "Wouldn't it be refreshing to hear one of them finally say: 'We want you to see to it we build wider roads which you won't use to Price Road so we can annex those businesses and bring in even more tax money.'" My answer to your question is that it wouldn't be refreshing, for in my opinion Kentucky and 23rd Streets are not only heavily used but also inadequate for the amount of traffic; moreover, the possibility of annexing Price Road is merely speculative on your part and beside the point.

You and I share the opinion that our streets are bad. Since we have not saved the money for repairs over the years, the alternative appears to be a bond issue. If you have a better suggestion, I would be glad to hear it.

J. KIRK DUNCAN
Pampa

(Ed. note - If you owned a $50,000 home in Pampa, you would pay $300 per year in city property taxes. If you owned that same home in Amarillo, it would cost you $216; in Lubbock, $305 (without exemption); and in Odessa, only $207.50. Facts, not speculation.

As far as holding a bond election, it seems to me that a wiser use of the amount of money coming in to city hall now would take care of our streets, and it seems foolish to okay a bond election for $5.8 million that would end up costing us twice that in interest alone, and indebting our children for the next 20 years to improve a handful of streets that don't need it as badly as others.

On my "speculation" that the city fathers set a high priority on annexing the businesses on Price Road, my source of information was City Manager Mack Wofford.

- Anthony Randles)

Ambulance charge

I have recently had the misfortune of a heart attack and was taken by private car to the Coronado Community Hospital. Thereafter my doctor wished to have me transported to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo for observation by Dr. Gulde.

The Pampa Medical Services Ambulance was called, and before leaving the hospital my wife was told that she would have to pay a $343 advance payment. I have since received a bill for $539.91 which includes the advance payment made before leaving Pampa.

I am advised that the county as well as the city subsidizes the ambulance company to the tune of several thousand dollars per month. This exhorbitant ambulance charge is nothing less than a rip - off, and I think the Pampa people are entitled to know about how we're being robbed. I hope this letter will help to expose this outrageous practice carried on in our community.

Blood-stained scene described to jury

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Prosecution witness George Phillips told jurors in Linda May Burnett's capital murder trial that he found an empty, blood-stained house when he came home for a family reunion in 1978.

Mrs. Burnett is standing trial for the second time in connection with the deaths of Phillips' parents, his brother, and his brother's wife and 3-year-old son.

Phillips also testified Wednesday that his mother had once filed assault charges against Ovide Joe Dugas, who was convicted of capital murder in the killing of the child.

Dugas was killed two months ago during an escape attempt while being transferred from a court hearing in Beaumont back to Death Row in Huntsville.

Mrs. Burnett's conviction in the slaying of 3-year-old Jason Phillips was thrown out by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals which ruled a tape recording of a session she had with a hypnotist should not have been played for jurors.

She is now being tried for the death of Jason's mother, Martha Phillips, the wife of Elmer Phillips.

The bodies of the five were found in a mass grave. Investigators said they had been shot, execution style.

Admitted into evidence Wednesday were photos of blood-stained rooms and the actual aluminum screen door from the Phillips house. The door had been cut and showed signs of forced entry.

The trial, before State District Judge Larry Gist, was moved to San Antonio on a change of venue from Beaumont.

Gist said he had decided against sequestering the jury. Over the objections of defense attorneys, Gist also said he would allow testimony about all five victims, even though Mrs. Burnett is being tried in only one of the deaths.

George Phillips said that Elmer Phillips and his family had come down from Woodward, Okla., to visit him and his parents, Bishop and Esther Phillips, at their home near Winnie, 25 miles southwest of Beaumont in Southeast Texas.

He testified that before he left, his brother and family had been there for "a little family reunion" but when he returned about 12:30 a.m. on July 3 he found all five missing. He said he found bloodstains on the floor "by my mother's and father's bed" and some smeared on the doorfacing going into the kitchen.

Coffee was burning dry in a coffee pot, and a skillet with chicken in it was still turned on, he said.

About $1,200 that his mother had been saving to buy a pickup truck for his father was still in her purse, and his father's billfold was still in the house, Phillips testified.

Under questioning by District Attorney James McGrath of Beaumont, Phillips testified his parents would never have willingly gone off and left the money there.

In later testimony, Wade Broussard, of Fannett, a former Jefferson County sheriff's deputy, described his July 6, 1978 discovery of a burned out car which turned out to belong to Elmer Phillips.

Broussard said after the car was traced to Elmer Phillips, police began searching for the family. Another investigators, Robert Ogden, testified that after questioning Dugas on July 9, 1978, the mass grave was found.

Prosecutors said Mrs. Burnett and Dugas abducted the five family members, made them stand in a shallow pre-dug grave not far away, and then shot each in the back of the head.

Mrs. Burnett was willing to go along with Dugas because the two were having an affair, prosecutors said.

George Phillips testified later Wednesday that his mother had once filed assault charges against Dugas, who was at one time married to George's sister, Mary.

Phillips said his sister also had told him that while she was married to Dugas "he assaulted her a lot."

Sprinklers might do more damage than fire

AUSTIN (AP) — The $4 million restoration of the fire-damaged east wing of the Texas Capitol will include several fire safety measures, but there will be no sprinkler system.

Joe Lackey, an Austin architect working on the project, said Wednesday that the historical value of the Capitol makes sprinklers impractical.

"I personally would think a sprinkler system in a historical building like this would do almost as much damage as a fire itself," Lackey said during a tour of the area damaged in the Feb. 6 fire.

However, Lackey said the project would feature fire-retardant materials, a smoke detection system, and an air conditioning system designed to vent smoke.

The $4 million will pay for repairs that are "very close to a pure restoration" of the 19th century building, according to to Stan Graves of the Texas Historical Commission.

Some of the money will be used to make repairs and renovations in portions of the Senate side of the building not damaged in the blaze that killed one person.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches and chairman of the Senate Administration Committee, said it is "more economical" to make other needed repairs while the restoration project is underway.

Among the changes will be a $100,000 renovation in the men's Senate rest room. Blake said senators want a private portion in which they'll be protected from lobbyists.

"They'd just as soon not be lobbied in there," he said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the project would not interfere with a special session of the Legislature expected to be called later this year or early in 1984. A contract will be awarded next month, and the work should be done in a year, he said.

The fire started in the lieutenant governor's apartment, where a guest of the Hobby family was killed by the flames and smoke. Authorities have pegged a television set as the probable cause.

The 1,000 yards of blue-green carpet on the Senate floor will be replaced, if it can be done for $60,000, according to Blake. Texas mohair producers have agreed to donate fiber for the carpet, he said.

The 1983 Legislature appropriated $7 million for repairs to the fire-damaged areas and related costs, such as moving officials to other quarters.

Repairs will include replacement of the wing's air conditioning system, which was installed in the mid-1950s. The Senate floor carpet, installed in 1969, will be moved to the Senate gallery, Lackey said.

There are still areas where the smell of smoke lingers, Lackey said.

'Anchorwoman lacked 'comfortability,' researcher testifys during her trial

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Viewers just didn't feel "comfortable" watching Christine Craft on television, an audience researcher testified in the anchorwoman's sex discrimination suit, adding that audience response to her was the worst he'd ever seen.

Consultant Steve Meacham, testifying Wednesday in Ms. Craft's $1.2 million federal suit, said the results of viewer surveys showed that Ms. Craft, at that time co-anchor at KMBC-TV, lagged by large margins behind her prime competitor, KCTV anchorwoman Anne Peterson.

Viewers also rated Ms. Craft's performance the lowest among 15 newscasters in Kansas City, he said.

"Christine Craft, especially when compared with Anne Peterson, had some real problems in Kansas City," he said. "The intensity of the reaction to Ms. Craft on the negative side ... was the most intense I had ever seen. She was clearly not doing what we hoped she would do, which was make the Channel 9 newscast a more comfortable newscast to watch."

Meacham said he had worked on 200 similar research projects.

Defense attorneys hammered away at the validity of Meacham's surveys, claiming comments he had made in small "focus groups" of viewers had biased the results.

Under cross-examination, Meacham acknowledged that he had called anchorwomen "broads" during one session. Earlier, the jury heard tapes of sessions in which Meachem urged respondents to spend "30 seconds destroying Cristine Craft" and asked if she was a "mutt."

Ms. Craft's suit, against Metromedia Inc., the former owner of KMBC-TV, claims that her removal from the anchor desk was discrimination based on sex, that she received less pay than her male co-anchor for the same job and that the station misrepresented the anchor job.

Metromedia has based its defense largely on the validity of viewer surveys performed by Meacham and his former employer, Media Associates Inc., now known as Audience Research and Development.

The survey prompted the consultants' recommendation that Ms. Craft be removed from the anchor job immediately, Meacham said.

Ms. Craft, who began on the anchor desk in January 1981, was demoted to reporter on Aug. 14, 1981.

Bar shuttles autoworkers

Workers stream out of the Chrysler Corp. truck plant in Warren, Mich., Tuesday to board the old school bus that will take them to the Overtime Saloon, which offers the free shuttle service. The workers get a half-hour lunch break and say it takes to long to get to their cars in the parking lot to make the trip. The bar owner is planning to install a two-way radio to phone orders in from the bus and save more time. (AP Laserphoto)

Nuclear fuel plant is closing

BARNWELL, S.C. (AP) — George Stribling, public relations man, still takes the curious on tours of the imposing Barnwell Nuclear Fuels Plant.

He proudly points to the plutonium security system that reads voiceprints and measures fingertips.

What's happening to the plant, he says, is "a tragedy."

With a sophisticated computer room and hundreds of employees, Barnwell, a $250 million investment, was built to be the world's biggest and most sophisticated commercial plant for reprocessing nuclear fuel.

But there's no market for reprocessed nuclear fuel.

So the plant is shutting down and its untarnished and unscratched equipment, which hasn't reprocessed a single shipment of spent fuel from a commercial nuclear power plant, is being sold.

"One of the problems was that we got (too far) out in front in our thinking and perceived a more rapid implementation of nuclear energy than turned out to be necessary," said James A. Buckham, president of Allied-General Nuclear Services' reprocessing facility.

"There were grossly incorrect forecasts of the rate of growth of energy demand," he said.

If the Barnwell facility had been put into use, it would have been the nation's only commercial plant currently recycling spent nuclear fuel. When Buckham took on the job, the day Jimmy Carter was elected president, it looked like an exciting venture.

"I thought it would be nice to get out where you were doing this kind of business in a competitive market situation," said Buckham, who had previously managed a government fuel reprocessing plant. "We expected two or three other plants to be built right behind ours and we were going to be vying for business and making the most money."

At the time, the facility, a joint investment by Allied Corp., Gulf Oil Co. and Royal Dutch Shell, was only two years away from opening.

But in April 1977, Carter banned nuclear reprocessing by the private sector, out of fear that plutonium could be stolen and used to build nuclear weapons. The ban remained in effect until President Reagan lifted it in 1981.

The main problem since then has been the lack of a market for reprocessed plutonium, which isn't ready for use in a reactor. The Carter ban slowed development of facilities to convert reprocessed plutonium into fuel for commercial reactors.

In recent years, the nuclear industry has undergone a slowdown that left a glut of uranium: Prices dropped, and the urgent need for reprocessing dropped with them.

The owners have sued the federal government for $500 million, claiming they were seduced and abandoned by a government eager for nuclear progress, then frightened off by potential dangers.

Because the plutonium market would depend on federal decisions, plant officials say the federal government should be involved at Barnwell.

"Everybody realizes closing (the plant) is the wrong answer," Buckham said. "But our owners in good conscience cannot continue to pour money into the project."

The plant had 300 employees at the beginning of 1983 but has cut that number by a third and will terminate all but a few by the end of the year. The owners plan to sell any equipment that could be ruined or outmoded by the passage of time.

The basic structure, storage tanks and stainless steel reprocessing equipment will remain, just in case a buyer comes along.

The plant would have separated spent nuclear fuel into uranium, plutonium and worthless nuclear waste. The extracted plutonium and uranium would have been recycled for nuclear fuel.

Barnwell wasn't the first attempt to bring commercial reprocessing to this country. The first plant, in West Valley, N.Y., operated for five years after its start in 1966 but shut down when new federal regulations imposed prohibitive costs on the owner, W.R. Grace Corp. Another plant was built in Morris, Ill., but never opened because of problems that turned up in tests as it geared up to operate.

The Barnwell plant is the "only practical opportunity" for commercial reprocessing in the United States in the next 10 years, Energy Department official Kermit Laughon told industry representatives meeting recently in Vail, Colo.

US sends UN new evidence of illegal chemical weapon use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States today sent the United Nations what it says is evidence of four new illegal "yellow rain" attacks in Southeast Asia supported by the Soviet Union.

Blood samples drawn at refugee camps near Cambodia and Laos and sent to the U.N. show that chemical weapons banned by international treaties have been used, the State Department said.

For the past three years, the United States has charged that the Soviets have killed more than 10,000 people by using chemical weapons against resistance fighters in Afghanistan and using or supplying similar weapons against rebels fighting Communist governments in Cambodia and Laos.

"This just adds more weight to the total body of evidence," said a senior State Department official who declined to be further identified.

The blood samples came from Hmong people of Laos, three Cambodian women and a Lao resistance fighter. All the blood samples were taken at refugee camps in nearby Thailand.

The United States says the weapons are made from fungus-based toxins called tricothecenes. They are known as "yellow rain" because of their color when released as chemical clouds by planes or helicopters. They cause extensive bleeding, vomiting and nausea.

The Soviets have denied using the toxins. The 1925 Geneva Protocol outlaws the use in war of chemical weapons and a 1972 treaty bans biological weapons.

The most recent of the four attacks cited in the latest U.S. charges occurred last March 4 or 5, the State Department said.

While the toxin attacks are continuing, U.S. intelligence officials are trying to determine if they are decreasing in number, said a source who declined to be identified.

The U.S. charges were first raised in 1980, but were made again in the fall of 1981 by then-Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., whose only evidence was a single leaf he said was contaminated by mycotoxins.

4-H'ers to model at district

Gray County's 4-H sewing champions are to model apparel they have created at the annual Panhandle District Fashion Revue, Aug. 9, at the West Texas State University Activity Center in Canyon.

Representing Gray County are Tammy Lane — junior evening and specialty; Heather Kludt — junior active sportswear; Kelly Harris, junior daytime nontailored; Sarah Miller, intermediate daytime tailored; Stacie McDonald, intermediate evening and specialty; Sherrie McDonald, intermediate active sportwear; Gwen Hokit, intermediate daytime nontailored; Renee Alexander, senior evening and specialty; Cathy Jinks — senior daytime nontailored and Tanya Cummings, senior daytime tailored.

The 4-H'ers will model their creations in a public revue at 7 p.m. in the West Texas State University Activity Center in Canyon. Judging will begin at noon. Contestants, families and guests will have a dutch treat supper in the WTSU cafeteria.

Members from 4-H clubs in 20 counties will compete for honors and the right to represent their district in state competition next September in San Antonio.

This year's show theme is "Reflections of You." Contestants in the district event already have won county competition. They are judged on sewing and construction skills as well as overall appearance.

Each contestestant will compete in one of four categories of clothing: tailored daywear, nontailored daywear, active sportwear, or evening and specialty wear. There are three age divisions: senior, aged 14 - 19; intermediate, aged 12 - 13; and junior, aged 9 - 11. Only the senior winners advance to the state competition.

Special awards will be presented the senior displaying the best wool garment and the senior modeling the best cotton fashion. Best models in each age group will also be recognized.

Top beauties share their beauty secrets

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of America's "most beautiful" women — tall, short, teen - age, middle - age, brainy, brawny, and, of course, gorgeous — share their beauty secrets and give the inside — and outside — stories about their looks in the August issue of Harper's Bazaar.

"When I feel good, I look good, and have so much more for everyone, for everything I do. It's really that simple," said Victoria Principal, the star of the "Dallas" television series who appears on the cover.

But the 33 - year - old actress said, "There comes a moment when gravity and time win out. Then you call a plastic surgeon."

The others on the magazine's 10 - most - beautiful list also had comments about their best features.

Actress - model Jaclyn Smith said she liked her glossy chestnut hair, now layered for versatility.

Dancer - model Twiggy, tipping the scales at 112 pounds rather than the 91 pounds she weighed during her super - skinny days during the '60s, said she feels prettier now and keeps in shape with dancing. "My legs are the best part of my body," she said.

Shari Belafonte - Harper, the husky - voiced actress in Calvin Klein commercials and the daughter of singer Harry Belafonte, said she is proud of her skin, "which is a unique color — neither black nor white."

Karen Allen, who starred in the film "Raiders of the Lost Ark," plays up her expressive eyes with lots of eyeliner: "It makes them seem huge!"

Joan Collins, a 50 - year - old actress in the TV series "Dynasty," and the oldest of the 10, said: "There's no such thing as too much makeup if you wear it with elan!"

But Jennifer Beals, the 19 - year - old star of the movie "Flashdance," took a more casual view of her beauty and her finely textured skin: "I know I should be more conscientious about it. I guess it's just not a priority now."

Actress Jane Seymour said her green eyes are her best asset.

Loose Marbles

Singing the telephone blues

By LISA PATMAN

While visiting our state's capitol recently, I idled away some time by thumbing through the telephone book. (It's not nice to snicker. Sometimes looking through the telephone book is about as exciting as I get. Have a little sympathy, for Pete's sake.)

While looking under the d's for the local chapter of Dummies Anonymous, I ran across an intersting listing. It read: Fred Doe, office — 555 - 3921; home — 555 - 6032. No big thrill, you are thinking. Well, read on. Under this wonderful man's regular listings were two additions — children's telephone — 555 - 1234; and teenagers telephone — 555 - 0987.

What a man Fred Doe must be. What a peaceful household he must live in. No more "Get off the phone, Fred Jr., I'm expecting a call from an important client." Never again to say, "Listen, Fredette, I don't care if you are talking to the love of your life, I really need to call an ambulance." Not even a whimpering, "Please hang up now. I need to call the asylum to see if there's been a change in your mother's condition." Fred has it made.

I wonder why the rest of us haven't seen this solution to the communication flap before now. Just think, Old Fred had to spend only half his yearly salary for installation, phone upkeep, and long distance calls, and he insured himself against parental fits, apoplexy and imminent suicide.

I'll admit that my solution, while operable during my children's younger years, ceased to be effective when they grew into their dangerous teen years. When they were toddlers I told them that the phone was a spinach server, and that every time they picked it up they would be stuffed with Popeye's favorite dish. That held them for awhile. Later when they figured out that I might have stretched the truth a bit, I confessed that the instrument was in fact a telephone, but that ours was a direct line to the employment commission. That held them back for a tad longer. It wasn't until they go into high school that one of their mean friends told them that the holes in the dial were not for holding cigarettes. Needless to say, that squealer is not welcome in my house to this day.

After the boys learned that by dialing certain numbers they could talk to girls, the stereo shop, the pizza place and France, it was all over for me. My dialing finger got so rusty it wouldn't have done me any good if I'd had a chance at the phone. My telephone book was illegible, having been marked with stars by all the good talkers' numbers. And the bill was unpayable, especially after the hospital fees we incurred when Old Dad opened the first teenager - induced phone bill.

I wish that I had been as knowledgeable and brave as Fred, that I had hocked my wedding band, my blender and my support hose in order that I might have peace of mind through a teenagers' telephone. But I did the next best thing. I got a parents' telephone, and it works great. You can call me anytime, night or day, so long as the kids haven't found it yet. Just dial 555 - HELP! But hurry, I think the kids have caught the scent of my dial tone.

Dear Abby

Even kids from "fine" families suffer through sexual abuse

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the teen-age brother and sister who gave each other hickeys and did a lot of "playful" wrestling on the bed opened a lot of ugly wounds for me.

When I was 8, my 14-year-old brother started playing games with me like, "I bet I can pin you down on the bed," while he sexually relieved himself. Can you imagine my horror at finding my clothes stained? It was the beginning of a four-year nightmare that included two more brothers, and left me feeling used, bewildered, dirty, guilty and somehow responsible.

It took me many years to overcome my anger, restore my self-esteem and reconcile myself with not only the sexual abuse, but the physical and emotional abuse I also suffered.

My father caught my sister and two brothers together once, and he nearly killed them all. He went crazy, choking and beating them!

I notice that several times in the past you have warned parents and children about sexual abuse and how to prevent it.

Please continue to do so, Abby. We were not a trashy or low-down family. We were considered "nice" people, and if this could have happened in our family, it can happen in any family.

NO NAMES OR LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Thank you for giving me another opportunity to repeat this advice: Teach your children that their bodies are "private" — and if anyone tries to entice them into any kind of "play" involving their bodies, to report it to Mama and/or Papa at once.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Could you please advise me on a delicate situation? I am pregnant and have asked my sister to be the godmother of her first niece/nephew. Of course, she's ecstatic.

Yesterday I received a letter from an aunt whom I love dearly asking for the "honor and privilege" of being my child's godmother.

Is there any way I can handle this without hurting either party?

TORN

DEAR TORN: Probably not. Obviously your first choice was your sister, so having asked her, you must now tell your aunt that you have already asked your sister to be your child's godmother. In the meantime, pray for twins.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My mom and I did a little role-playing with a letter in your column from "D.," who wrote: "If they gave a prize for the most insensitive mother-in-law in the world, mine would win — hands down! When Harold (her son) introduced me to her, she said, 'How do you do? Is your complexion always that bad, or is it a temporary condition?'"

Mom and I tried to think of how we would have answered that woman on the spot (not four hours later), and we came up with this: "Are you always that rude, or is it a temporary condition?"

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

Projects in which you've already invested considerable time will yield returns this coming year. Skim the cream off the top before engaging in new enterprises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may have a chance today to put to practical use ideas suggested by a friend. What worked for him should work for you. Leo predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. They reveal romantic compatibilities for all signs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be reluctant to bargain for better terms in career or financial matters today. Even small benefits could prove to be profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Although it may cause you some inconvenience, make every effort to honor your promises today. This will win you the respect of others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If the roles were reversed, you'd probably be more generous than one doing a favor for you today. However, he's being as kind as conditions permit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A joint venture looks promising today, but it will take more than a handshake to make it work. Each party might have to make small sacrifices.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't try to sidestep difficult decisions today. Base your judgments upon what's best for all, then stand by your guns if you believe you're right.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Shoptalk with persons you know socially could lead to being able to help one another careerwise. Make known what you have to offer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Difficult situations will have a way of resolving themselves in surprisingly simple ways today. Don't allow yourself to be intimidated by paper dragons.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have a knack today for spotting advantageous propositions, especially if they benefit those you care for as well as yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Two opportunities to add to your resources may develop today. One will be through a usual channel; the other will be new.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll have a good rapport with cliques from every strata today. Be it a young group or an older one, you'll still fit in.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The ladder to success is mounted one rung at a time today, so don't be dismayed if rewards for your efforts come in small portions.

MDA benefit

Pampa softball teams played a recent tournament to benefit the Panhandle chapter of the Muscular Distrophy Association. The tournament was sponsored by the local Budweiser distributor, and most of the teams' entry fees and concessions from the games were donated to help fight the crippling and mysterious diseases called Muscular Distrophy. Benefit participants and the winners of the softball tourney and a huge trophy include (front row, left to right) Darold Haddican, 8, who suffers from MD, Cody Melton, batboy, Rex Harris, (second row, left to right) Kathy Williams, district director of the local MDA, Ross Taylor, team captain, Kyle Williams, (third row, left to right) Joe Marcum, Ken Wright, Jerry Melton (top row, left to right) James Hooker, Leon Payne, Kent Killian and Randy Legg. Ryan hurls one-hit shutout

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Nolan Ryan "is almost unhittable when he's getting his curve and changeup over for strikes," says Dick Williams, manager of the San Diego Padres.

Williams made the comment after the flamethrowing right-hander limited San Diego to just one hit as the Houston Astros scored a 1-0 victory over the Padres Wednesday night.

"The radar gun behind home plate was clocking Ryan's fastball at 93 to 94 mph," said Williams, who managed Ryan with the California Angels between 1974 and 1976.

"He's something, that son-of-a-gun," Williams added. "I don't see any difference between him now and then. He doesn't vary. He just stays strong."

Ryan, 10-5, struck out 10 batters as he ended a personal four-game losing streak with the win.

"I had as good a curve ball as I've had for several games and my changeup was as good as I've ever thrown," said the 36-year-old Ryan.

It was the ninth one-hitter of Ryan's 17-year major league career. Only Tim Flannery's clean single to right deprived him of his sixth no-hitter.

"On Flannery, I didn't make the pitch I wanted," Ryan said. "He didn't hit it well, but he hit it in the hole."

Ryan had to content himself with his 52nd lifetime shutout and 149th game in which he has struck out 10 or more batters.

"I've played against him twice, now, and he's pitched one-hitters both times," said Padres second-year man Tony Gwynn. "He threw me a changeup, and I was so far out in front on it I felt kind of foolish."

Ryan began the evening trailing the Philadelphia Phillies' Steve Carlton by 13 on the all-time strikeout list, but wound up behind by only three, 3,609 to 3,606.

Ryan's mastery over the Padres this year has been awesome.

Charlie Finley won't miss Kuhn

Charlie Finley, former owner of the Oakland A's and one of Bowie Kuhn's most ardent detractors, greeted the news of the baseball commissioner's decision to step down with the glee of a youngster on the last day of elementary school.

"It's the greatest day in the history of the game," Finley remarked by telephone from his farm in LaPorte, Ind., after Kuhn beat baseball's owners to the punch Wednesday by walking out before he could be ousted.

"It's like the old saying. A man that lives by the sword dies by the sword. And that's applicable to Bowie Kuhn," Finley said.

"I am definitely happy to see him out of baseball because Charlie Finley knew Bowie Kuhn like no other owner in baseball ever knew him."

And vice versa.

From the early 1970s on, Kuhn and Finley had crossed paths and swords on numerous occasions. In 1972, Kuhn fined and personally reprimanded Finley for uncomplimentary remarks the A's owner made about Kuhn's role in the signing of holdout pitcher Vida Blue.

The commissioner then fined Finley $2,500 after the 1972 World Series victory over Cincinnati for giving increased compensation of $5,000 each to Gene Tenace and Joe Rudi for their heroics in the Series.

Judge won't allow testimony about Cowboys' alleged drug connections

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge hearing a cocaine conspiracy trial told a defense attorney that his line of questioning regarding Dallas Cowboy Tony Hill "was a waste of time and somewhat prejudical."

Defense attorney William McGarvey on Wednesday asked prosecution witness Waldier Martins if he had ever sold drugs to Hill. But before Martins could answer, U.S. District Judge Robert W. Porter interjected, saying the question was "irrelevant."

"I don't want that gone into," Porter said.

The questioning came on the second drug conspiracy case against Brazilian Lauriberto Ignacio, a former soccer player who has been charged with conspiring to import and distribute South American cocaine in Dallas.

Seven people are charged in the case. Five have pleaded guilty and one remains at large in Brazil. Ignacio's case is the first to come to trial.

Hill and Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin were subpoenaed as defense witnesses, but the players' attorneys asked Porter on Monday to quash their subpoenas. Porter delayed a ruling, saying he first wanted to see if government witnesses implicated the players.

The judge called McGarvey's line of questioning "irrelevant" because the indictment against Ignacio doesn't mention Hill or Martin.

"To bring in matters like that is totally irrelevant ... and totally unnecessary," Porter told McGarvey.

From the Dallas Cowboys' training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., Hill called Murback's testimony "utterly ridiculous."

Teenager swims Channel both ways

DOVER, England (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Alison Streeter became the first British woman to swim the English Channel two ways non-stop Thursday.

As the channel swimming season entered full swing, Miss Streeter swam from Shakespeare Beach, Dover, to Cap Griz Nez, France, in nine hours, 22 minutes and then swam back to England in 11:54, landing at St. Margaret's Bay near Dover.

The Channel Swimming Association said that in its 108-year history, only one woman and four men have performed the feat previously.

Streeter's time of 21 hours 16 minutes compares with the record 19:12 set by Cindy Nicholas of Scarborough, Ontario, in 1979.

Human plague cases worry would-be visitors to New Mexico

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — With more cases of human plague reported here this year than in any state since 1925, would-be visitors are wondering: Is it safe to visit New Mexico?

The disease that wiped out a quarter of Europe's population in the Middle Ages has been contracted by at least 18 people in New Mexico since January, and one has died.

In addition, the 13-year-old daughter of a college president died Tuesday of plague in South Carolina, and officials believe she contracted the disease in New Mexico.

Many people considering visiting New Mexico or worried about the disease once known as the "Black Death" have been calling or writing state officials.

"We don't keep a record of the calls, but it's fair to say we're getting more than we've ever gotten," said Dr. Jonathan Mann, an epidemiologist with the state Health and Environment Department.

"They're all very basically the same question," he said, "a variant of 'Is it safe to come to New Mexico?' and 'Is the plague a big danger?'"

New Mexico's roadside welcome centers are getting the same questions.

A visitor from France told a welcome center employee his friends had warned him that if he caught the plague he couldn't return to his homeland.

But Mann said the answer to all the questions is still the same:

"Yes, it's safe and the risk is incredibly small."

Ever since the first case of human plague in the state was reported in 1949, New Mexico has led the nation in the number of cases. Officials speculate that the state's climate is good for fleas, which can act as carriers.

Mann said instances of people getting plague have been reported only in Western states. Other states with cases this year are Arizona with eight and Utah and Oregon with one each, according to the national Centers for Disease Control. Three of the Arizona cases and the Oregon case resulted in death.

A spokesman for Greenville Hospital System in Greenville, S.C., said bubonic plague, the most common form of the disease, had caused the death of Donna Delattre. Miss Delattre, the daughter of Edwin Delattre, president of St. John's College in Annapolis, Md., and Santa Fe, might have contracted the disease near her former home in New Mexico, officials said.

She was moving with her family from Santa Fe to Annapolis and became ill last Friday in South Carolina.

The number of New Mexico cases reported this year is the highest in one state in a single year since California had 38 cases reported in 1925, officials said.

A 56-year-old New Mexico woman who caught bubonic plague in 1980 said she didn't "feel that bad" when she was sick and didn't doubt she would survive.

But "my family was pretty upset, and friends, especially back East, they were really shook up," said the woman, who asked to remain anonymous.

"They have a misconception of what New Mexico is anyway," she said. "Half those people don't think we're part of the United States. So when they heard I had the plague, well, you can imagine what they thought."

A prolonged winter has been blamed for some of the cases this year.

Most people who come down with human plague get it from the bites of fleas that have bitten plague-infected animals, such as rats, officials say.

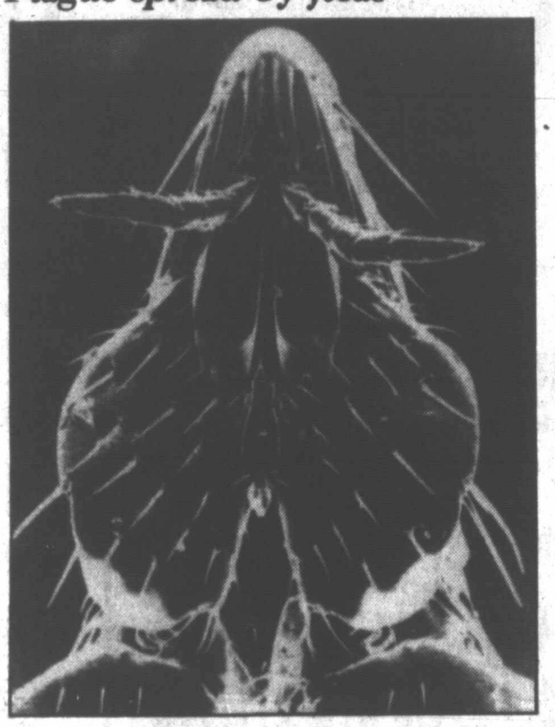

"The first half of the year, yes, we think the wet weather helped," Mann said. "But we're not sure how to explain the rest of the year. We don't know enough about the disease to explain why there have been so many cases."

Mann and tourist officials have predicted that tourism probably won't suffer. "We let (tourists) know what to do and what to avoid and then they're usually OK," Mann said.

Plague is only contagious if the bacteria that cause the disease go into the lungs. Then "if someone has it, you can get it if they cough on you," he said. "When it's spread from person to person, that's a public emergency."

About 25 percent of plague cases develop into the pneumonic form, but the last time the disease was known to have spread from one human to another was in 1924 in Los Angeles, Mann said.

Plague spread by fleas

To date, 18 people in New Mexico have contracted the human plague, once referred to as the "Black Death." This is the highest number reported in one state in a single year since 1925, according to the New Mexico Health and Environment Department. The most common carrier of the disease is the flea. Mental patient runs wild through hospital

DALLAS (AP) — A mental patient who had been arrested "for erratic behavior" went on a wild shooting spree through the halls of Parkland Memorial Hosptial before police shot him through the neck, authorities said.

The man was listed in fair condition today after undergoing exploratory surgery for the flesh wound Wednesday, a hospital spokesman said.

There were no other injuries.

The 19-year-old patient had been arrested for "erratic behavior," including running naked outside his home. He was lying down in a stretcher, awaiting treatment in the hospital's crowded emergency room about 1 a.m. Wednesday, officials said.

But when Dallas police officer Robert Ruttman walked by carrying some paperwork, the young man unsnapped the officer's holster and grabbed the pistol before the officer knew what was happening, said police Lt. Jerry Calame.

The man pointed the gun at the officer, who sought cover and then ran to the police office of the hospital, got his spare .45-caliber automatic pistol and called police for assistance, Calame said.

During an ensuing chase, dozens of hospital employees and patients scurried for cover while the armed man ran up and down the hall, aimlessly firing shots from the .357 Magnum revolver he had seized, Calame said.

"He was running wild in the hospital," Calame said. "I don't know what he had in his mind."

The man first ran down the hallway to the emergency room surgery area where two doctors were treating patients in a room with about 25 patients, hospital personnel said. When the doctors spotted him, they ducked into trauma rooms, and heard two shots fired, police said.

No energy price relief seen

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — To those itching for a collapse of energy prices, 1983 has given little relief. Even though the price of crude oil has dropped several dollars a barrel, U.S. gasoline prices are a nickel higher than in January.

Gasoline price increases this spring and summer made many people forget that prices fell about a dime a gallon last year — the first yearly drop since 1971.

Yet it's too early to give up hope for another big drop in prices. While the oil market seas are calm now, some analysts think another storm is in the offing.

The group to watch is the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which supplies 40 percent of the Free World's oil (including about 7 percent of U.S. suppplies.)

If OPEC makes a wrong move, the energy price outlook could change quickly. It has happened before.

While OPEC was going against the grain last year and holding its oil price at $34 a barrel, gasoline prices in the United States were falling. American refiners felt compelled, despite weak profits, to cut their prices to service stations because motorists just weren't buying the stuff the way they used to.
