CONGRESS VOTES HUGE POSTOFFICE FUND

Six Jurors Selected At Graham To Hear Robbery Trial Of Tom Shook

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

It has been a long time since we printed an item like this: We read in the Big Spring Herald that in order to accommodate holiday travelers the Texas and Pacific railway is extending its passenger trains Nos. 9 and 10 from Abilene to Big Spring.

Mostly when we read of passenger train service these days it is of discontinuance and curtailment. In a recent hearing on an application for discontinuance of a passenger train on the Wichita Valley between Wichita Falls and Abilene a railroad official testified that the train lacked 80 per cent of enough passengers of paying expenses. How long can we expect passenger trains to operate under such conditions?

One of the airlines operating through Wichita Falls announces a radical reduction in rates in the hope of encouraging a more general use of its service. We believe this was necessary to obtain patronage. The rates were too high for the general public, and too often ships flew the line without passengers. With the reduced rates we'll soon see whether the public is yet air minded enough to support air lines.

Texas ranks first among the states in the production of onions and second in cabbages. For the benefit of John Gould we are trying to learn its rank in spinach.

Did you know that civil service appointments in the departmental service of the federal government at Washington was apportioned among the states according to population? A bulletin from the United States civil service commission tells us so and furthermore that Texas is one of the states that has received less than its share of appointments.

Only three states, Maryland, Virginia and Vermont, and the District of Columbia have filled their quotas. One reason for the disparities is the failure of most states to supply a sufficient number of eligibles to keep their quotas filled. Another reason is the regulation providing that the apportionment law shall not be applied to those entitled to veteran preference.

The commission urges residents of Texas and other states to enter examination for departmental service at Washington for which they may be qualified. Full information regarding examinations may be obtained from the local board of civil service examiners at your postoffice.

A safety razor publicity agent sends out a blurb saying that all the great men of history have been smooth shaven. We don't like to knock the safety razor manufacturers but how about all those old boys who smote their beards? Who never read of any of them rubbing their chins. How about Aaron's beard? And how would Father Time look without his whiskers? That's something for the safety razor manufacturers to think about. Yes, and how about Cyclone Davis?

The present period of mild weather has brought forth the recurring observation that our winters are growing milder. Charles F. Marvin, chief of the United States weather bureau, says, in an interview in the American Magazine that "if the curve of daily weather fluctuations from Adam until now were averaged for the centuries it would approximate a straight line."

The thermometer is only about 2,000 years old and records covering a large area of the United States have been collected only since 1870. Those records seem to show that while there may be recurring seasons of mild weather or unusually hot weather in certain sections of the United States there are likely to be at the same time recurring seasons of unusually cold weather in winter or cool weather in summer in other extensive areas, and that the records do not indicate that there has been any permanent change anywhere.

We'll likely be having cold weather and hot summers as long as time lasts or at least as long as any of us care about anything.

We have said something about better building construction as a protection for lives in case of fire. The recent tragedy is an impressive reminder of the need of an aerial fire truck. With the present equipment of the fire department firemen must drag heavy fire hose up fire escapes and from floor to floor in burning buildings. Their work is hampered and they are placed in serious danger unnecessarily.

The department needs an aerial ladder badly for its own efficiency, the better protection of lives and property and for the safety of its members. With an aerial fire truck it is not likely that the two firemen would have lost their lives in the Antlers hotel fire the other morning.

Mere man has at last won recognition in the old home town. Wichita Falls merchants have set aside next Thursday night as man's night in all the stores of the city. On that night a man can go out shopping without any danger of being seen by the female inhabitants of the community, and if its dainty underthings or anything else he is buying he will be seen only by some other man doing the same thing.

This idea of a night especially for men is a bright one. We'll bet some woman thought of it.

In 1928 we read there were 100,000 emigrants from Italy, and in the same year 69,000 Italians from the United States were repatriated. If this keeps up we wonder what the broadcasting stations will do for accordion players.

Income Tax Cut Becomes Law After Hoover Writes Name on $160,000,000 Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—Income tax reduction of $160,000,000 was enacted into law today when President Hoover signed the joint congressional resolution.

The chief executive affixed his signature in the presence only of two of his secretaries, George Akerson and Lawrence Richey, using the pen with which he transacts routine business.

Thus, the American income tax paying public was assured a reduction of one per cent on normal personal and corporation levies to be paid next year.

The measure already had been sent to the treasury department where Secretary Mellon gave his approval.

Enactment of the legislation, which was the first to complete the congressional circuit in the regular session, was finished except for Mr. Hoover's signature when the senate gave its approval Saturday by a vote of 63 to 14.

The tax cut was advocated by the administration this fall and won speedy approval from both Republican and Democratic leaders, many of whom believed it would help to give assurances that business conditions were sound. In the senate, however, a number of western Republican Independents voted against the measure after assailing it as a gift to the rich.

Republican regular and domestic spokesmen supported the contention of administration officials that the tax cut would help the economic situation and would aid business conditions throughout the country.

Only meager opposition developed to the tax resolution in the house.

Here's How Slash In Income Taxes Will Lighten Load

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—A statement prepared by the treasury shows the rates of income made under the old law and under the new law, and the amount of reduction as follows:

Net Income	Present Rates	New Rates	Reduction
$ 4,000	$ 5.62	$ 1.88	$ 3.75
5,000	16.85	5.63	11.25
6,000	30.00	10.00	20.00
7,000	43.13	14.38	28.75
8,000	63.75	26.25	37.50
9,000	91.88	45.63	46.25
10,000	120.00	65.00	55.00
11,000	156.25	92.50	63.75
12,000	202.50	130.00	72.50
13,000	258.75	177.50	81.25
14,000	316.00	225.00	90.00
$15,000	$381.25	$282.50	$ 98.75

The figures were based upon the net income of a married man with no dependents. Net income up to $5,000 is considered as earned income. Over $5,000 half of the net income is considered as earned income.

Gin Press Crushes Floydada Man

Special to The Record News

FLOYDADA, Texas, Dec. 16.—Scott McGehee, manager of a local gin, narrowly escaped death today when his arm was caught in a round bale press at the gin. He sustained lacerations of the chest, a triple fracture of the arm, and severe body bruises. He was saved from being crushed to death in the press by an employe, who, hearing the manager's screams, ran to his assistance in time to grab his left arm, thus preventing him from falling in the press. Doctors at a local hospital are hopeful of saving the injured man's arm.

This is the third serious accident to happen at the gin. Two years ago Guy Nickles lost his right arm when it was caught in a saw at the gin. Thirty days later his brother, Hubert Nickles, lost his right arm in the same manner.

Confederate Daughters To Claim Bodies of Vets

AUSTIN, Dec. 16. (INS)—The legislative committee of the United Daughters of the Confederacy of Austin today announced through the state board of control that the organization will lay claim to the unclaimed bodies of Confederate veterans and their widows who die in state institutions.

The claim will be made, it was said, to preclude the bodies going to the University of Texas medical department for dissection and experimentation. Under a recent law passed by the state legislature, the medical students might have the unclaimed bodies of any person dying in a state institution.

OKLA. COUNTIES GIN BIG CROP

Six Produce Cotton Worth 20 Millions

Six southern Oklahoma counties in the Wichita Falls trade territory had ginned cotton and cottonseed on Dec. 1 worth nearly 20 million dollars, according to figures compiled here from the United States department of commerce report issued Monday through the bureau of census.

The report showed that 207,005 bales of cotton had been ginned in the six counties on Dec. 1, 1929, as compared with 166,674 bales on the same date in 1928. Tillman county showed the largest increase in ginnings, with a margin of nearly 25,000 bales over 1928. The entire territory showed an increase of 40,331 bales in 1929.

Based on the farm board's loan value of 16 cents a pound, the lint in the six Oklahoma counties was estimated to be worth approximately $16,560,400 on Dec. 1 and the seed worth $3,208,562 at an average price of $31 a ton. The total value of the production to the date of the report was $19,768,977.

The production figures for 1928 and 1929 and the approximate value for each county follow:

Calles Passes Through Laredo

LAREDO, Texas, Dec. 16. (AP)—Desiring to reach Mexico as soon as possible, Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles passed through Laredo tonight aboard a special train.

The general's arrival had been announced for tomorrow, and plans formulated to give Calles a warm welcome during his stop here. Members of the Mexican consulate and other officials learned of the change in plans and were at the railway station tonight to greet the former Mexican president. They were disappointed when the train sped across the Rio Grande to Nuevo Laredo without stopping.

The delegation then hurried to the Mexican city where they were greeted by General Calles; Mexican Ambassador Manuel Telles and other members of the party. The train was scheduled to remain in Nuevo Laredo but a short time, the general having expressed a desire to reach his home as soon as possible.

CONTINUANCE IN CASE DEPENDS ON WITNESSES

FARMERS CHOSEN

Judge Montgomery to Rule Today on Defense Plea to Wait

By MARJORIE MATHIS
The Record News Staff

GRAHAM, Texas, Dec. 16.—With the defense motion for continuance still held in abeyance while court officials scoured several North Texas counties for missing witnesses, attorneys proceeded Monday afternoon with the painstaking task of selection of six of the 12 jurors who are to try Tom Shook, former Electra police chief, on charges of robbery with fire arms.

All but one of the six men chosen from 26 special veniremen requested are Young county farmers. They are J. W. Cloud, M. D. Harrell of South Bend; J. E. Baley, who farms southwest of Olney, G. H. Martin and E. W. Harrison, both from South Bend and E. E. Boswell grain buyer from Jean.

Challenges Used

In the course of the selection, the defense exhausted 11 of 15 preemptory challenges, the state five. Three of the 26 were disqualified because of opinions already formed and one because he felt a former peace officer should draw a heavier penalty for law violation than a private citizen. The progress made between 1:30 and 5 o'clock Monday afternoon and the approaching exhaustion of the defense challenges lend attorneys to believe that the selection of the jury would be completed before noon Tuesday.

With the jurors ready to be sworn into service the question raised by the continuance motion of T. A. Hicks, bitterly contested by the state, will be forced to an issue. Judge Allan D. Montgomery Monday morning took the motion pleading the absence of all five of the defense witnesses and the illness of Shields Heyser, original defense attorney, under advisement in the hope that the witnesses could be brought into court by the time the jury was chosen.

Judge Montgomery announced tonight he would render a decision on the motion for continuance Tuesday morning and indicated that if the missing witnesses are not produced the trial will be continued.

State Is Ready

Sam Spence, district attorney, announced ready as soon as the case was called. Shortly after 9 o'clock Monday morning, Mr. Hicks asked to call his witnesses and got no response to any of the five names called although papers in his possession showed that each of them had been formally served with subpoenas. In his written motion prepared during a morning recess, Mr. Hicks set out that three of the men summoned would testify as to

TEXAN DENIES SELLING SHORT

W. L. Clayton of Houston Brands Charges

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—W. L. Clayton, whose name frequently has figured in discussion on Capitol Hill relating to the cotton markets, testified today before the senate committee investigating speculative activities on cotton exchanges that his world-wide firm never had speculated.

The Houston, Texas, dealer denied that Anderson, Clayton and company had exerted an undue influence on the cotton market—as had been charged. He informed the senate agriculture sub-committee that the company never had sold a "bale short."

Has No Motive

"We are not interested in breaking the price," he said. "We have no motive."

Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, member of the sub-committee, several days ago said the firm had held an "overshadowing" influence on the market.

While Clayton was on the stand at an all-day hearing the committee heard suggestions for legislation to aid the cotton farmer, a discussion of the effect of the tariff, and the effect a proposal to raise the farm board loan basis for cotton from 16 cents a pound, the present rate, to 20 cents a pound.

Clayton to Continue

At adjournment, the Texan still was on the stand. He will resume his testimony tomorrow. After tomorrow the sub-committee intends to recess over the holidays. It obtained permission of the senate to delay its report 30 days. Under the Heflin resolution ordering the investigation, a report was due Dec. 21.

NEED OF ZONING PLAN URGED AT C.-C. BANQUET

200 Attend Annual Dinner Of Junior Organization At Wichita Club

NOVEL PROGRAM

Election of Directors Announced; Results of Work Reviewed

Stressing the importance of a city adopting a zoning ordinance and plan for the future, Robert A. Stuart of Fort Worth, former Texas state senator and present district attorney, urged the Wichita Falls Junior chamber of commerce to back a move for the adoption of a city planning system in Wichita Falls in his speech at the annual banquet of the organization at the Wichita club Monday night.

Mr. Stuart recalled instances in Fort Worth and St. Louis where millions were now being spent for improving sections of these cities and widening of streets where thousands spent earlier would have done as much good and saved the cities a great expense.

St. Louis Spends Millions

"St. Louis could have widened Grand avenue for $5,000 in 1875 and today this thoroughfare is being widened at a cost of $50,000,000," said Mr. Stuart.

"A residential section is greatly depreciated in value by the erection of business buildings and filling stations and Wichita Falls should adopt measures immediately to guard against this," the speaker added.

He went further to state that a plan should also be adopted by the state for the highway system. He said that 80 per cent of the amount spent for highway improvement by the state went to East Texas while West Texas received only 20 per cent and said that such conditions would exist as long as the funds were handled by the highway commission.

Varied Program

The speaker was introduced by Ben G. Oneal.

About 200 attended the annual banquet. A varied and novel entertainment program was enjoyed. Frank Bird and his Bluebirds from KGKO furnished music for the guests while dinner was served.

The program was opened with a dance "Rhythmic Tap" by Misses Virginia Hampson and Helen Peters of the Knickerbocker School of Fine Arts.

J. Wilkie Talbert made a humorous talk on the subject "Modern Styles for Modern Ladies."

A soprano solo "Summer," by Chaminade, was sung by Miss Charlene Kinder accompanied by Miss Katherine Criswell of the Wichita Falls Conservatory of Music.

"Football as Was and Is" was the subject used by Barry Holton, football coach of the Wichita Falls high school, in his talk. Mr. Holton pointed out that football has undergone several radical changes in the

'Phone Company Forced to Help Catch 'Leggers

The principal use to which the information obtained is placed is in gathering data for search warrants, Walker said.

ANXIETY FELT FOR AVIATORS

Nothing Heard From Plane Over Atlantic

RIO JANEIRO, Dec. 16. (AP)—This city awaited with growing tenseness tonight word of the progress of Maj. Tadeo Larre-Borges and Lieutenant Challe in their attempted flight to South America at 7:50 tonight (5:50 p. m. eastern standard time). Brazilian stations had been trying for several hours to communicate by radio with the plane without success.

At 3:30 the aviators had asked Natal and Maceio for weather reports. Half an hour later reports were circulated at Fernando on Noronha island that the fliers had passed St. Paul rock. This was not definitely confirmed.

At 4:38 p. m., the naval radio station reported what was believed to be radio signals from the plane but no message was copied. Since then there has been no definite word from the fliers. Anxiety was beginning to be felt because it had been expected here that they would reach Natal by 4 p. m., on the basis of their earlier speed.

There was great interest here in the Uruguayan aviator because he studied aviation with the Brazilian army and married a Brazilian girl.

PERNAMBUCO FAILS TO OBTAIN NEWS

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, Dec. 16. (AP)—No news of Maj. Tadeo Larre-Borges, Uruguayan aviator flying across the south Atlantic, had been received here up to 3:25 p. m. (6:25 p. m., eastern standard time).

CRAFT REPORTED HALF ACROSS

PARIS, Dec. 16. (AP)—The French air ministry announced late tonight that the plane in which Maj. Tadeo Larre-Borges is flying across the south Atlantic had reached a point only a few miles northeast of Saint Paul rocks, more than half way to South America.

The exact position given in the announcement was 29.12 west and 3.50 north. The plane was said to be flying in the direction of the Fernando Noronha islands off the Brazilian coast. It was estimated here that the aviators had increased their speed to an average of 125 miles an hour.

The barren Saint Paul rocks, with a scanty area affording only a perch for birds, lie just north of the equator and about 340 miles northeast of Fernando Noronha.

500 MILLIONS TO BE SPENT ON STRUCTURES

200 Millions Added to Building Total Over Entire Country

LOCAL FUND VOTED

Leaders Here See Prospect Of New Wichita Office Soon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (US)—Forging another link in the administration's program for sustaining national prosperity, the house today passed the Elliott bill, adding $239,740,000 to the federal building program.

This huge sum will provide for hundreds of postoffices throughout the country, affording work for many thousands of persons and a market for building materials.

Increases Building Fund

It lifts the federal public building program to a total $553,000,000, spread over a number of years.

In line with the policy adopted by congress in 1926, abolishing "pork barrel" building bills in which votes were captured by liberal distribution of postoffices, the present measure leaves the selection of sites to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Postmaster General Brown.

The Elliott bill increases the authorization for buildings outside of the District of Columbia $115,000,000, and for construction in the national capital $115,000,000. Of the latter total, $15,000,000 is for acquisition of land.

Funds Divided

This makes the program for outside of the capital $363,000,000, and for executive departments within the district $190,000,000.

The bill also increases the amount of money to be spent annually from $35,000,000 to $50,000,000; $35,000,000 to be spent outside of the district, and $15,000,000 each year in the capital until the whole program is worked out.

CHILDRESS BILL IS INCLUDED

Special to The Record News.

CHILDRESS, Texas, Dec. 16.—Bill authorizing an appropriation to be made for the building of a federal building for Childress passed the house today, according to message received here from Representative Marvin Jones, author of the bill.

Mr. Jones met with local chamber of commerce last summer to discuss possibility of such a building. Jones promised his support at that time. The original bill called for $180,000 and the local organization asked the amount be raised to $225,000. Amount of the appropriation was not made known today.

WICHITA FUNDS VOTED IN BILL

Certainty that Wichita Falls will receive its allocation for $500,000 for the erection of a new federal building here sometime within the immediate future was seen by Orville Bullington, president of the chamber of commerce Monday night when he was informed of the action of the congress in passing the huge postoffice appropriation bill. The Wichita Falls fund, Mr. Bullington said, was included in the appropriation. He would not venture to predict when the money would be available, however.

Mr. Bullington was active in securing the assent of congress last February to the construction of a new postoffice here, and served on a committee which included Charles I. Francis, Walter Curlee, and O. P. Maricle, which recommended several sites for the building here. The site later will be selected by government authorities.

Gifts to Firemen's Relief Fund Should Be Made Now, Leaders Urge

Wichita Falls citizens who wish to contribute to the special firemen's relief fund, opened following the death of two firemen and the injury of five others in the Antlers hotel blaze, were urged Monday by the committee in charge to make their gifts at once in order that the campaign may be concluded. Late Monday the fund stood at $1,219.

The city of Wichita Falls is unable to make legal provision for any compensation for the widows of the two men killed in fighting the hotel fire, and is handicapped in the aid that can be given those injured in the battle. For this reason, a small group of representative Wichitans launched the fund following the fire in the belief that the city should make some provision for the dependents of those who were killed and injured in protecting the lives and property of other citizens. J. T. Harrell, Fire Chief J. L. McClure and City Manager George D. Fairtrace compose the committee in charge of the fund, while Lester Jones is treasurer. Contributions should be sent to The Record News and Daily Times.

The following contributions were received Monday:

with a statement in which he predicted a "gloomy Christmas for many children of the South whose fathers had been hard hit by the decline in the cotton market.

"With cotton selling below cost of production," the Alabaman said, "and debts hanging heavily over their fathers the outlook is indeed a gloomy one to the cotton producers and their families in the South."

Asked whether congress could help, Clayton said the farmer was "facing a world economic situation," and that legislation could do very little.

DISAGREEMENT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—The federal farm board and the United States Chamber of Commerce were revealed by Chairman Legge as being in disagreement over the cooperative marketing program of the board.

Referring to a resolution from the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce which said that the chamber "favored cooperative marketing only so far as it did not discriminate against other business enterprises," Legge said that the attitude was that the farm board "should hang its clothes on a hickory limb but not go near the water." He declared that the board intended to go ahead with its cooperative marketing program "even though it does trouble the business waters."

ALABAMA DEMOS "KICK OUT" HEFLIN

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 16. (UP)—Democracy of Alabama today read out of the party two of its leaders who bolted to the cause of Herbert Hoover in the last presidential election.

James Thomas Heflin, fiery senior United States senator and potential candidate to succeed himself, and Judge Hugh A. Locke of Birmingham, announced candidate for governor, were the two men.

The action came at the annual meeting of the state Democratic executive committee, which voted 27 to 21 in favor of the following resolution, submitted by S. A. Lynne of Albany:

"All persons who voted the Republican presidential ticket in November, 1928, and all persons who openly and publicly opposed the election of the Democratic nominee are declared ineligible to qualify for office on the Democratic ticket."

Nothing was done to affect the status of an estimated 120,000 Alabama Democrats who supported the Republican presidential nominee. The committee addressed itself strictly to prospective candidates who defected from the ranks a year ago.

Heflin, bitter anti-Smith campaigner of a year ago, was first elected to the federal house of representatives on May 10, 1904, and served until Nov. 1, 1920, when he resigned to obtain election to the upper house the next day. He has been there ever since.

He stumped the state for Hoover last year, but when asked how he voted said he "went fishing" on election day.

Not only may they look with no embarrassment caused by curious feminine gazing, but they may purchase whatever they wish on that night.

Saturday evening, Dec. 21, the stores will be open as usual; Monday night, they will be open until 8:30 and Christmas eve late shoppers as usual will be very late shopping.

SIX JURORS IN SHOOK'S TRIAL

Continuance of Case to Be Decided Today

the whereabouts of Shook on the night of the robbery indicating that the defense would attempt to establish an alibi against the charges.

Attachments Issued

While the questioning of the veniremen went on through the afternoon, the state continued its determined efforts to bring the missing witnesses into court and force the trial to completion. Writs of attachment against Earl Bridges, Will Sims, and Charlie Eason, all of Wilbarger county, issued by Judge Montgomery upon the motion of Sam Spence, district attorney, were rushed to Harrold, Texas, in the hands of Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, and Charlie Gant, deputy sheriff. Long distance lines and telegraph wires were kept busy throughout the day in efforts of the state's attorney to trace the movements of the three after they were served with subpoenas to appear in Shook's behalf. Jim Wofford and A. D. Cooper of Electra, the other two absent witnesses, were reported to the court as expecting to appear early Tuesday morning. No attachment writs were requested against them.

Shook, who is under two murder indictments and five other felony charges, is on trial this week on the first of three robbery with firearms indictments returned against him in connection with a series of holdups in Electra in June, 1928, a few months after his retirement as chief of police there. He is charged as principal, accessory and accomplice in the robbery of J. B. Early, clerk of the Jefferson hotel, on the night of June 19, 1928. The indictment specifically charges that he and Ed Pryor, then constable, encouraged and abetted Henry Shumate in the actual commission of the crime. Pryor, co-defendant with Shook, is under an eight-year prison sentence, now on appeal. Shumate, who has confessed on the stand to all three holdups, is one of the state's principal witnesses. He is at liberty under bond.

Shook Takes Part

Shook took an active part in the work of selecting the jury during the Monday afternoon session, holding frequent whispered conferences with his attorney and keeping his flashing blue eyes fixed on each venireman as he was questioned. Behind him, seated on the first row of benches, sat Mrs. Shook, with their 4-year-old daughter asleep in her arms, an older child by her side, and Andy Shook, aged father of the defendant, close by.

Mr. Spence early abandoned any close questioning of the prospective jurors, passing most of them after making sure that they were not personal acquaintances of the defendant. Mr. Hicks was chiefly concerned with opinions formed from reading newspaper reports but found few opportunities for objections, most of the veniremen professing themselves to have only hazy ideas of the case. The attorney questioned each man at length about his tendency to impose a more severe penalty upon a former peace officer than upon a private citizen, his questions disqualifying two jurors who admitted that they would judge an enforcement officer more harshly.

The defense counsel also wanted to know whether the employment of Fred Weeks, Wichita Falls attorney as special prosecutor, would prejudice the veniremen being questioned or whether the fact that the case was transferred from Wichita to Young county would influence the jurors. Mr. Weeks, who was not present Monday, is expected to join forces with the district attorney's staff Tuesday.

Mike Anglin and George Anderson assistants are also aiding in the conduct of the trial as is Chauncey E. Penix, county attorney of Young county.

The long afternoon gruelling questioning was relieved toward 5 o'clock when one member of the venire, another farmer said he would give a fair and impartial trial unless he became bumfuzzled. Asked if he would follow the law and the evidence in the case he replied that he'd try, but that he'd never served on a jury before and hadn't had much experience. He was excused by the state.

The crowded courtroom laughed again when yet another farmer, a tiller of the soil for 39 years, asked by Mr. Hicks if he had ever been robbed, replied quite seriously, "not with firearms."

At the adjournment of the afternoon session Shook was returned to the Young county jail under the guard of Sheriff W. G. Bralley and of J. P. Huddleston, Texas Ranger sent here from Dallas by Gov. Dan Moody at the request of the local officials and the district attorney.

NINE JURORS IN OZARK TRIAL

Special Panel Drawn for Questioning Today

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Ark., Dec. 16 (AP)—Into a court of law, an instrument of justice which harks back to early England, even as the ancestory of Ozark mountain folk near here is rooted in Anglo Saxon stock, today was taken the Connie Franklin mystery.

Judge H. M. Bone mounted the bench and rapped for order late in the day and did not recess court until after nightfall when the venire was exhausted and nine prospective jurors were in the box.

Forty-eight men had been examined. The judge announced a special panel of 12 would be on hand when the trial is resumed at 8 a. m. It was believed the jury would be completed before noon.

The men tentatively accepted were Stone county farmers, angular, middle-aged mountaineers. They are C. S. Zinn, J. M. Lee, Thomas Fox, Tom Copeland, Floyd Ramsey, T. E. Ward, L. E. Stewart, H. W. Branscomb and Rex Barnes.

The tiny Stone county courtroom was crowded. It was such a scene as would delight an artist whose interests are rooted in folk life.

Tall farmers and woodcutters were there, dressed in homespun that was damp from the day of monotonous rainfall, but whose faces revealed a deep inner excitement and consciousness of drama in the trial that was opening. Those faces of men, women and children, bore the marks of an environment, an isolated region of plateaus, hollows and thick forests and the severe struggle and labor such a region calls for from its dwellers in cabins and small homes.

The twisted skeins of evidence, testimony and gossip before the court revolve around a primary question. Was Connie Franklin, a stranger to the community, murdered in fire last March as the state charges, or is the man who recently returned here claiming to be Franklin a living refutation of the charges against five mountain men, four of whom now are on trial?

It was this puzzle of double identity more than the story of Tiller Ruminer, illiterate girl who was engaged to Franklin and who said she saw him brutally killed by nightriding ruffians, that brought to the courthouse today the throng of intrigued spectators.

At the time the trial was to open early today a grand jury was convened and the trial postponed while opposing counsel went before the jury with the "Ghost Franklin." It was not known what the grand jury did. Assistant Prosecutor William T. Thompson said a resolution was drawn up declaring the returned "Franklin" an imposter but that it was not voted upon.

Concurrently the maze was thickened by word that two women believed the "Franklin" here to be their son. Mrs. Lillie Baker, of Clarendon, Ark., was en route here to determine if he was a son by a former marriage. Mrs. Clarence Combs, of Oxford, Ark., likewise believed him her son by a first marriage and will attempt to identify him as such.

Tiller Ruminer, frightened by the tremendous outcome of her quiet mountain romance with Connie Franklin, was a figure of woe-begone appearance in the crowded court. The so-called Franklin, bulky, broad-shouldered towered in the foreground of the room.

The four men on trial for their lives—Joe White, Bill Younger, Hubert Hester and Herman Greenway—beamed upon him as their savior. The state, with asserted eye-witnesses to Franklin's slaying, with witnesses willing to testify this "Franklin" is a fraud, with Tiller herself, who says "this ain't my Connie," point to him as "a trick of the defense."

ALTUS JURY FREES DEPUTY

Second Officer Faces Murder Trial Today

Special to The Record News.

ALTUS, Okla., Dec. 16.—E. L. Burleson, deputy Jackson county sheriff, from Elmer, was acquitted of murder charges in district court today in connection with the death of Arnold Owens, who died in the city hospital here Nov. 11. The jury, after instruction given by District Judge Frank Mathews, returned a verdict of not guilty without secret deliberation.

The shooting for which Burleson was charged occurred on the Bill Williams farm, near Elmer, where Owens is reported to have drawn a knife on Burleson and resisted arrest Nov. 10. Burleson afterwards reported the shooting to Jackson county officers.

The trial of G. J. Price, deputy county sheriff, from Duke, on charger of murder of Millard Hollars, will be heard in district court Tuesday. The shooting occurred exactly two weeks after the one in which Burleson was charged, and happened on the farm of Jim Clements, near Duke, after Hollars is alleged to have attacked his employer, Clements, with a knife, wounded Mrs. Hollards and threatened Price's life.

CHORAL CLUB THRILLS CROWD

Carols Feature Program of Excellent Music

By The Record News Critic

Presenting with comprehensive artistry a three-part program which rose in each section to unusual heights, the Women's Choral club thrilled more than 300 persons at the First Presbyterian church Monday night with a concert which equalled any given by the organization in its seven years of endeavor.

Variety in a program which maintained an unusual degree of theme and mood unity throughout was of necessity introduced by a seemingly inspired rendition of particular numbers. Featuring almost without exception a restrained, meditative spirit, the selections chosen for Monday night's concert were beautiful in the sense that pictures painted in subdued colors often are more exquisite and enduring than bolder, contrasting combinations.

Christmas Carols

But there were outstanding tones in the picture. The deeply religious "Ave Maria," arranged by Speltier from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," was voiced with remarkably rich and expressive feeling. The Choral club presented this number at the Memorial auditorium on Nov. 10. They interpreted "Ave Maria" Monday night. Concluding the second group, Gabriel-Marie's "La Cinquantine" danced in the brightest mood displayed during the evening. It was spontaneous and brilliant. Climaxing the closing group of Christmas carols, and assisted by a chorus of eight male voices, the club gave, in an old Catalonian carol, what various critics in the audience termed the finest single number ever produced by the Women's Choral club.

With the exception of its singing of two numbers, the club was well nigh perfect Monday night in tonal balance, precision of attack and release, and pitch accuracy under the commanding direction of Mrs. Wayne J. Holmes. Quick but gradual crescendo on single notes, accomplished with commendable evenness and grace, attained an excellence not heretofore equalled locally by amateur singers.

Conversion of a number so warmly established with music lovers in piano score as Chopin's "Raindrop Prelude" is an exceedingly difficult task for any vocal ensemble. It was very well done, but narrowly failed by lack of conviction in the voices, and by slight faults in thematic attacks, to reach the general brilliance of the concert. Imperfect articulation of parts and the only loss of superb quality of which the lower voices were guilty during the evening robbed the German carol of its highest effectiveness.

Played with subdued but poignant feeling by Mrs. A. H. Mahaffey, organist, and Mrs. Helen Frohmer Olmsted, pianist, J. W. Clokey's "Symphonic Piece" comprised one of the program's most delightful numbers. The complete sympathy of feeling demanded by the two movements was reflected with exceptional finish. Wichita Falls has seldom heard as delicate voicing of piano scores as Mrs. Olmsted accomplished in the Clokey symphonic composition, and in her accompaniments.

Violin Ensemble

Accompaniments for violin ensemble in Scumann's "Moonlight" and the Barnby-Gow "Cradle Song" were played by Mrs. J. E. Hall, Misses Matilda Donnell, Bernice Ewing and Merrell Strong, and William Luther Donnell. Effective subordination of the instruments with richness in tone greatly enhanced the combined ensemble.

"Why the Chimes Rang" by McFadden, was read by Mrs. J. S. Pitman with a voice whose flexibility and admirable register endowed the story with unusual tenderness and appeal. She was supported by an unseen quartet composed of Mesdames Kenneth Bebb, W. L. Underwood, and Messrs. W. L. Underwood and A. H. Mahaffey.

Mrs. J. W. Akin, organist of the First Methodist church, played "Evensong," by Johnson, as the offertory, and also accompanied the club in the "Cradle Song." Members of the male chorus assisting in the concluding number were Messrs. A. H. Mahaffey, W. L. Underwood, F. P. McDougal, L. R. Thurman, W. E. Young, W. D. Lacey, Louis Bond and Norman P. Hines.

The church auditorium and choir loft were attractively decorated with red and white candles, and small illuminated Christmas trees.

Furniture Store Fire Draws Chief to Duty

Unable to resist the call when a second alarm was turned in Monday afternoon in the fire which destroyed a small portion of the storage room of the Popular Furniture company, Fire Chief J. L. McClure rushed from his home to the scene of the blaze although he had been released from the hospital only a few hours before.

Chief McClure had been in the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital since the destructive fire last Thursday which destroyed the Antlers hotel. The blaze at the furniture store caused damage of about $100, according to officials of the fire department. The flames were confined to a small portion of storage space in the upper rear portion of the building.

Proposed Gasoline Station At Tenth and Taylor Draws Protest

Vigorous protest was entered by a group of property owners at the meeting of the city council Monday night against the proposed erection of a filling station at the corner of Tenth and Taylor streets. A petition for a permit was presented to the aldermen by J. H. Alfison, local druggist, at the meeting last Monday night and at that time the council set a hearing for the meeting this week.

The absence of a written petition for the permit and the inability of the property owners to lodge a specific complaint due to lack of specifications for the station caused the continuance of the hearing until the meeting next Monday night. Neal Powers, attorney for the property owners, with a group of residents in the vicinity of the proposed station, appeared before the council Monday night alleging that the station would be a menace to the neighborhood and asking that the council refuse a permit. In order to ascertain the stand of all adjacent residents and to obtain a written application and a signed protest, the hearing was deferred another week.

A representative of the bond firm of C. Edgar Honnold of Oklahoma City appeared before the aldermen with a proposition for the refunding of $600,000 worth of waterworks bonds of the city. The bonds at present draw interest at the rate of 5 per cent and become optional Feb. 10, 1930. The proposition, claimed to effect a saving of about $1,500 annually to the city, offered to refund the bonds at the rate of 4¾ per cent. The matter was referred to City Manager George D. Fairtrace and City Clerk W. E. McBroom for consideration.

A proposed ordinance of the Fort Worth and Denver City railway for a right of way crossing on North Broadway street was referred by the aldermen to F. M. Rugely, city engineer, for consideration and a report. The railway proposes to construct a spur track to serve the Magnolia wholesale warehouse, according to the request.

A committee of investigation composed of Dr. Jack Fletcher, A. M. Miller and Walter Nelson Jr., to consider the claim of W. A. Pratt, said to have been injured while crossing the Burnett street bridge several weeks ago, was appointed by R. O. Harvey, mayor pro tem.

A. F. L. TO PUSH DIXIE UNIONS

Organization of Southern Workers Starts Soon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (UP)—Organized labor's campaign to unionize southern wage earners will start early in the new year, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced tonight.

A labor department report, issued simultaneously with Green's announcement, showed that women's wages in American cotton mills dropped 13 per cent in the last four years.

Green summoned union organizers to meet in Charlotte, N. C., on January 6 to formulate labor's plans for the southern campaign, which will extend to all trades and occupations.

"We hope to make a preliminary survey of the situation at this time to consider plans and policies, to appraise the situation as fully and completely as possible, to take into consideration all the problems with which we will be called upon to deal and to formulate our plans and policies to be followed in the organizing campaign in the South," Green said.

The southern campaign, Green said, would extend over several months and be the most extensive of its kind ever inaugurated by the federation. He plans to visit many southern cities in January and February, and address mass meetings of wage earners.

Green announced also that after the Charlotte conference the executive council of the federation would meet in St. Petersburg, Fla., to select a permanent southern headquarters for the organization during the campaign.

The labor department report said the average full time earnings per week of 38,000 women working in 158 cotton mills scattered throughout 11 states were $15.66. The states surveyed were Alabama, Connecticut, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia.

New Hampshire women cotton mills workers received the highest wages, averaging $20.31 per week, while Alabama workers receive the lowest with an earning of but $11.88 weekly, the report said.

The report showed that women in northern mills earn about 33 per cent more than those in southern plants but that the earnings in northern mills dropped much more than those in the other section during the four-year period.

last few years and today it is a game of brains.

Soft shoe and buck dances were rendered by Charles Doran who was accompanied by Miss Katherine Douglass, both of the Wichita Falls Academy of Fine Arts.

The Southern Methodist university male quartet rendered several selections.

Nelson Speaks

"I have great hopes for the future of the Junior chamber of commerce," declared Walter Nelson Jr., president of the organization, in his address.

"With the organization of this chamber a group of young men have been organized collectively to be of service to Wichita Falls.

"We can look back with pride on the activities of the Junior chamber of commerce since its organization last spring and a constructive program will be followed in 1930."

Maurice Cheek kept the guests in an proar of laughter from the time he took the floor until he sat down when he responded to the president's address.

The next number on the program was a vocal solo by David McPherson of the S. M. U. quartet who was accompanied by Charles Kiker, the quartet's accompanist. Mr. Kiker also played a piano solo.

A juggling act which was presented by the management of the Majestic theater scored a big hit.

"Dark Horse Stable" a play in two acts, composed by James V. Allred, closed the program. Jerry Moffett as Hubert Harrison, Henry Fenix Jr., as Harry Hines and Don Haynes as Walter Nelson Jr., were the characters. The "inside" of a chamber of commerce election was revealed in the comedy.

Grady Bell invited all those present at the banquet to attend the annual banquet of the Archer City Chamber of Commerce in the American Legion hall at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

Jerry Vinson reported on the activities of the program of work committee. Jimmy Randell reported on the activities of the budget committee.

Following the program it was announced that a dance in honor of Walter Nelson Jr., the retiring president, would be given at the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club, Dec. 30.

Mr. Nelson announced that Temple Shell, A. L. Hecht, Maurice Cheek, Paul W. Hines, Irvin J. Vogel and Overton Abernathy had been elected to the board of directors and that a meeting would be held Thursday night of this week.

MATADOR MAN GETS SENTENCE

Former Postmaster Given Year and Day

Special to The Record News

LUBBOCK, Texas, Dec. 16.—Thomas E. Williams, former Matador postmaster, was sentenced to one year and one day in the federal penitentiary on a charge of violation of postal laws and regulations in connection with embezzlement of approximately $3,334 from his own postoffice.

Williams was released on a $2,000 bond after he had dug up a tin box containing all of the money. The money was thought to have been stolen by burglars until Williams broke down during investigations of Postal Inspector L. C. Bragdon sent to check up on the case. Bragdon stated while filing the complaint here before United States Commissioner L. L. Pearson that Williams was not under suspicion until he went to get the money.

Williams was sentenced by Judge William H. Atwell who presided over the Lubbock division of federal court this session.

Wichitans Nabbed For Slaying Deer

Two Wichita Falls men Monday night pleaded guilty to killing a deer in the Wichita National forest, near Lawton, Okla., last Saturday morning and to transporting half of the animal across the state line into Texas, according to L. E. Crawford, Oklahoma state game ranger. The men were brought to police headquarters about midnight Monday and the pleas of guilty taken by Ranger Crawford, who had been authorized to accept the fine assessed.

Capt. L. S. Arnold, provost marshal of Fort Sill, and a federal plainclothes officer accompanied Ranger Crawford. It was thought at first that the deer had been killed on the military reservation and Captain Arnold aided in the investigation which led the officers across into Texas. A third member of the party, a Lawton man, pleaded guilty in Lawton and was also fined. The fine, according to Ranger Crawford, is $100 and costs when the accused person pleads guilty without the necessity of a court procedure.

A Modern Insurance City to Serve You

If all the People of the Texas Life Companies and Their Offices Were Brought Together a Modern City of Protection Would be Formed

ABOVE is pictured one of Texas' principal cities. Have you seen its sky-line before? You haven't. For this city is made up of buildings from seven big Texas towns. These are the Home Offices of Texas Life Insurance Companies, whose names appear below.

In this great city are 8 giant skyscrapers; combining 61 stories of height; with floors covering hundreds of acres of space. They house more than 5000 home office workers. They represent more than $15,000,000 of invested capital.

The agents of Texas Companies wear this Texas emblem; symbol of mercy, protection and progress and the mark of an honorable calling entitled to your esteem and respect.

"Insurance City's" annual pay rolls to 1500 employees, totals $580,000; and to agents, doctors and others throughout the State and Nation, $5,000,000 more.

And yet . . . greater by far, is the purpose that's behind it all. Through Life Insurance, Texas fathers and husbands realize the hopes and ambitions of life; endowing their children's education; providing against the needs of sickness and old age; guarding against the possibilities of death. Could anything be finer, nobler, and more worthy of a Texan's support?

SENATOR GRUNDY

Daily Editorial

IT WILL require several timber tracts to furnish paper for the news and editorial comment scheduled to follow Senator Grundy's addition to the "most august deliberative body on earth."

Controversy will rage as to the chamber's power to refuse the seating of Pennsylvania's chosen son. The Congressional Record will ululate with philippics, and the very flower of prairie oratory will indefinitely be woven into garlands to decorate the Grundian brow—garlands heavily interspersed with sprigs of poison ivy.

However his own state may regard Governor Fisher's appointment, majority opinion will define it as an impudent and indefensible political gesture—an insult to the group of commonwealths which Grundy has declared unfit for economic parity with the rest of the Union.

Mr. Grundy's confessed convictions hardly qualify him to interpret the majesty of the United States.

Mr. Grundy's views upon the constitution and the wisdom of its framers, render his presence offensive at the capitol.

Mr. Grundy is too fervent an advocate of special privilege, the prior rights of industrialized capital and the sacrosanctity of high tariff, to become a worthy trustee and responsible steward of national hopes.

Mr. Grundy is an admitted lobbyist—he concedes that he has more or less successfully swayed legislative action and endeavored to secure for an association of Keystone manufacturers, concessions and advantages, by exerting backstage influence upon congresses and assemblies.

Mr. Grundy regrets that Idaho, Arkansas, Montana and sundry other trans-Mississippi and Southern sovereignties are vested with full franchises, and enjoy unrestricted peerage with the populous and affluent East.

THERE is no such word as "sympathy" for agriculture's problems in Mr. Grundy's bright lexicon.

His entire career has been that of a biased pleader—an exponent of class welfare rather than mass progress.

He has consistently opposed the passage of child welfare laws and resisted the enlargement of workingmen's compensation grants.

His appointment is an affront to democracy, an affliction to his party, and embarrassment to the administration.

Of him, it can never be said, that "his errors were uniformly those of a grand and glorious intellect, scarce less splendid in failure than in triumph"—a tribute inspired by Edmund Burke's address to the electors of Bristol—of which speech, as a contemporary observes, "it were well if the people both of England and America, would read, mark, learn and inwardly digest the following passages:

"(Your representative) ought not to sacrifice his enlightened conscience to you, to any man or to any set of men living.

"It is a trust from Providence, for the abuse of which he is deeply answerable.

"Parliament is not a congress of ambassadors from different states and of hostile interests, which interests each must maintain as an agent against other agents; but parliament is a deliberate assembly of one nation, with one interest, and that, of the whole."

Substitute "senate" for "parliament," and the cap fits the situation to a hair.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who sings correctly enunciates distinctly."

A song is a very potent form of suggestion and the music is to the words as sugar coating to a pill. Some singers lose the best effect of their singing by failing to pronounce their words distinctly, thereby making their songs like the sugar coating with the pill left out.

The Chinese ask the nations that signed the Kellogg pact to pull Russia off China. The line forms to the right.

John D. Rockefeller is autographing some of the dimes he gives away. The Woolworth people ought to go into the souvenir business.

New York's mayor's name is Walker, but he seems to run pretty well.

The season of the year is at hand when a cow looks exactly like a squirrel, deer, rabbit or quail.

One of the Hollywood girls drives an automobile fitted up with a cocktail bar. Several people have been lucky enough to get hit.

If the boy cries for a horn for Christmas, maybe you'd better give him one to shut him up.

Scotland is a country where there are doctors at all the toll gates.

Kind-Hearted—But We Fail to Keep It Up

THE CHRISTAS SEASON is a funny time of year, when you stop to think about it. For a brief two or three weeks we seem to step out of our ordinary characters. We take on a generosity and a thoughtfulness that we don't exhibit very much at other times. We let other people's poverty and misery bother us, and we try to do what we can to help.

In every city in the land people are joining hands to bring happiness to the homes of the unfortunate.

Coal, flour, meat and clothing are being got together for families that stand to be cold and hungry this winter. Newspapers, luncheon clubs, charitable organizations and other groups are collecting toys, boxes of candy and so on for children who are looking forward to a barren holiday. There will be turkey dinners for folks who haven't had a good, square meal for weeks.

All in all, people are really going to a good deal of trouble to see that those who are less lucky, less well supplied with this world's goods get an even break on Christmas.

This is mighty encouraging. No one can look on this spectacle—this sudden flareup of generosity and kidness on the part of millions of people—without getting a new faith in human nature.

But we're a strange race, at that. For we tend to confine our generosity and our thoughtlessness to this one period of the year.

Around Christmas time we get so that we're bothered by the thought that there are people in our town who haven't got as much as we have. It makes us unhappy to think of them; so unhappy that we get busy and do something about it.

But during the rest of the year it doesn't worry us. We don't take time to think about it. The people that we help at Christmas time can fight their own battles—and lose them, too—from January to December.

Generosity is a beautiful thing. But why should we display it only on two weeks out of the whole year?

We don't, really, amount to quite as much as we think we do. We're not quite as good, or as kind, or as noble, as we suppose.

If we could only carry over, into everyday life, the sensitiveness and consideration that we display around Christmas, we could make this into a pretty fine sort of world. The job of building the city of God, right here on this trouble stained earth, isn't half as hard as it's cracked up to be. It would be dead easy if we'd start in the right place.

And where is that right place? Right in our own hearts, of course.

Put into your daily life the anxiety about your fellow man's welfare that you display on Christmas, and you'll have done your part.

That's all there is to it. Simple, isn't it? One of these days, won't we be able to do it?

We Do Resolve

WITH the world rapidly drawing near to another New Year's day, one who is highly sensitized socially and who retains his sense of obligation to humanity at large will feel compelled to make a few suggestions relative to resolutions to be adopted by certain of his fellowmen.

There are, perhaps, a few tones in the harmony of everyday life which self-appointed members of the annually organized self-improvement league could smooth up considerably by the adoption and observance of corrective resolutions. In order that they may have time to formulate such 1930 platforms, and by daily contemplation bring themselves into a mental attitude conducive to unfailing observance whereof, we suggest that members of the following groups begin at once:

Persons who ring your telephone vigorously, usually before you are out of the blankets, and bluntly demand "Who is this?" when you take down your receiver.

Other persons who upon discovering that they have dialed your number through carelessness ("by mistake"), angrily slam the receiver in your ear to punish you for having your own number.

And those who park their cars on the left side of the street at night, leaving the headlights on for self-protection because they know they are offside, but blinding all approaching drivers and endangering lives.

Those who entertain their hands at concerts by twisting and folding their programs into fantastic designs, with raucous synchronized sound.

Gum chewers of the free swinging variety who sit beside or behind you at the theater.

Now what changes do you want us to make?

A New Year's Inventory

On New Year's day I must, or should,
The moralists insist, take stock
Of all my sins and virtues—Good!
I will: let's go! I have a flock.

Of both: e. g., it is a sin
The way I worship pretty dames,
And Pol Roget, and terrapin,
And fancy ties, and gambling games.

My virtues? I have three or four,
i. e., I never beat my wife,
Or falsify my golfing score,
Or lead a really double life.

I cannot estimate the net
In profit or in loss: Oh, well!
It is a 50-50 bet
If I shall go to heaven or hell!
—WILFRED L. FUNK.

Tee-Hee

Under the title "Chiding," Lee Somers, in the Washington (D. C.) Herald, remarks: "Naturally a guy, that is to say, a bird or bozo who hears as much as Walter Winchell does, must hear part of it wrong. For instance. Mr. Winchell has discovered the word 'pediculus,' and likes it. He isn't to be blamed for that. But the word, Mr. Winchell, is pedicular. Pediculus is the noun."

All we know is what we see on page 1821 of Funk & Wagnall's Standard Dictionary, you big proofreader, you! "Pedicular" is listed in this manner: "Same as pediculus." Pediculus and Pediculous are variations but mean the same. The tome offers this quotation: "The fellows of either college are better scholars and honester men . . . than your pediculous friars.—Landor" Igaf. Couver. It is among the tales told in Park Row. A member of a feature department went on a gigglewater spree that lasted a month. Imagine, then, the irony of it—the boss ankled into the departmental head's office one day last week and said: "Say, that Blank guy is writing better stuff every day. Raise his salary $25."

Marriage for Two-- By Arthur Somers Roche

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Shortly after an interview in which Helen Wilson tells Larry Tracy that she wishes to break their engagement so that she can marry the wealthy, middle-aged Frank Burton, and Larry swears, in pique, to marry the first girl who will have him, he rescues from a park bench a starved but beautiful girl, Joyce Carroll.

A few days later they are married, agreeing that the marriage shall in reality be nothing more than a friendship.

Shortly they sail for Biarritz, where Joyce gains great popularity and where Larry finds himself falling in love with her despite evidence of her strange past. A man named Ratty Regan, in New York, tries unsuccessfully to tell Larry something of his wife and in Biarritz Joyce gives 40,000 francs to a woman of the demimonde and tells Larry she lost the money at the gambling tables.

During a party given by Billy Valdemagara, a red-headed Spaniard and Larry's best friend, Larry comes on Helen Wilson on a high cliff overlooking the sea, and, feeling all his old love for her revived, takes her in his arms. They are seen by Paul Weedon, who threatens to spread the story. Larry goes at once to tell Joyce and is suddenly overwhelmed by the realization that it is Joyce he loves, not Helen. Joyce, however, refuses to credit his love for her.

While Joyce is dancing with Burton, he declares that he will split Larry unless Joyce will promise to keep him from Helen.

A Warning

She stared at him. The shallow blue eyes took on opacity that made them hard to fathom.

"Then—what happened—out there—didn't mean—what we thought it meant?"

"How could it?" he asked. "Helen, you don't love me. If you did, our engagement would never have been broken. Your mother could never have made you do that. Not if you'd cared."

"Perhaps," she said, "you'd never have left me, if you'd really cared."

He stared at her. "That may be true," he admitted. "But—that's all ended now. What—just happened—I know you didn't mean it. The impulse—"

"Are you being chivalrous, Larry?" Her voice was mocking.

He shook his head. "I'm just trying to be truthful."

"Sometimes women prefer falsehoods," she reminded him.

"There's been enough of that between us," he retorted.

"You mean—on my side?"

He leaned forward and touched the hand that lay idly on the table edge.

"Helen, let's be friends."

"Why?" she asked.

"Well, why not?" he inquired.

"Do you think we can be?"

"We can try," he told her.

"Have you never heard of the woman scorned?" Her voice was light.

"If I thought you meant that, I'd feel badly," he rejoined. "But a moment—after what we'd been to each other—"

"Of course I don't mean it. And—you're right," she said. "The moon, the surf, the sight of each other—only—you had no right to tell your wife, Larry. What on earth does she think of me?"

He made no reply to this, for Mainwaring, one of the nondescript, but well-mannered members of the colony, bowed before her and begged for a dance.

Larry reached for a drink. He needed one, had earned one, he felt. In the short space of 30 minutes he had been spiritually unfaithful to his wife, had discovered that he loved her, had broken the chains—forever—of a previous love affair, had told his wife what he had done— O, it was too mixed up. He drank deeply of the champagne and refilled his glass.

Valdemagara.

He was lifting it to his lips when Jeanne Masell's bright voice rebuked him.

"Larry Tracy, put that down," she ordered.

"Why?" he mildly inquired.

"Because you're one American aboard who isn't going to drink too much," she told him.

"Seen signs of my approaching surrender to the demon?" he laughed.

She nodded. "A very beautiful sign."

"And that cryptic remark is, I suppose, perfectly clear?"

"Don't be silly, Larry. Every one here knows about you and Helen Wilson. But they needn't know that seeing her had upset you."

"Will a second glass of champagne inform them of that?" he sneered.

"Too many second glasses will," she replied. "I should think," she went on, "that ordinary good taste would have kept her away."

"Thinking aloud is sometimes rude, Jeanne," he warned her.

"And there are worse things, my silly friend, than rudeness," she retorted. "Larry, do you realize how lovely Joyce is?"

"I'm beginning to," he said.

"Other men don't need as long as you seem to," she said. "Billy Valdemagara has gone in at the deep end already."

"Billy always does, doesn't he?" he commented.

She shook her head.

"Not this way, Larry."

"Well you should know. He's been your pet particular private beau for—how long, Jeanne?"

"Not ever," she answered. "Billy hasn't ever been any woman's tame cat. Billy likes me, and I like Billy. I'm only fonder of two men, my husband and you, Larry."

"That's sweet of you, Jeanne," he told her.

"I'm not being sweet. I'm being honest. I like you, Larry. And I've fallen in love with your wife. Larry, no man can be blamed for being a fool once, but a second time. * * *" She shook her head.

"What was the first?" he asked.

"Kissing Helen Wilson where Weedon could see you," she answered.

His eyebrows raised. "So Paul has talked already, eh?"

"And will talk more. You struck him, Larry. He had to talk."

He studied her. "You girls all think alike—and correctly, don't you?"

"What does that mean?" she asked.

"Joyce warned me, too," he replied.

"Larry, you incredible child, do you mean that you told Joyce, yourself—"

"Why not? She'd have heard it rather soon, I think. Don't you?"

She ignored the question.

"You didn't tell her because you were afraid some one else would, Larry. Oh, Larry Tracy, don't you know that the time to tell a woman you love here is not when you've just discovered it?"

"You're not by any chance, given to this sort of thing, are you? It must be rather disconcerting to your intimates, Jeanne."

"Oh, I've not been reading your mind, my child," she laughed. "One doesn't do that sort of thing, Larry. One reads one's own mind, guesses that some one else has reacted in the same way—Larry, dear boy, I didn't know I loved Jim until—well, there was some one else. Jim—bless him—lets me do as I please. Always has. And—Jim's older and—understands. But I didn't understand. And some one else—yes, there was a kiss, too, Larry, and I ran straight to Jim, and told him what I'd just found out, that I adored him and no one else. Do you see?"

"Then you did exactly what I did."

"But with a woman it's different, Larry. But no man would understand. You should have waited—waited until Helen Wilson's gone—what did Joyce say? No, I didn't mean to ask that. It's none of my business. In fact, none of this is my business, but—your wife is sweet, Larry."

"I've discovered that," he said dryly.

"So have others, and so will more," she told him.

"You were, I believe, about to warn me about Billy—"

"Don't be silly. Billy's a gentleman. But breeding doesn't always protect a man from himself, you know, Larry, don't neglect—"

"Oh, my God, don't make me laugh, Jeanne," he interrupted.

"If there's neglect, it will be hers. Not that she won't be right about it—"

"I wish," sighed Jeanne, "that there were no such thing as sex loyalty. But there is, and I'm a slave to it. With which cryptic remark the beautiful young matron indicated her desire to be asked to dance, and the gentleman—"

"Rose to the occasion. Mrs. Mazell, will you do me the great honor to aid me in knocking a few Argentinians off this here, now, dancing floor?"

"Why Are You Offended?"

As they glided out upon the floor, the Marquis and Joyce returned to the table. The two women smiled at each other, but Valdemagara's nod to Larry was none too cordial.

As they sat down Joyce noted a cut on the knuckles of Billy's right hand.

"You're bleeding," she said.

He nodded carelessly. "Hit it against something."

Joyce eyed him.

"Not since we started dancing?" But of course not. When?"

He avoided her eyes. "Outside—on a rock."

She shifted the subject suddenly. "Why are you offended with Larry?"

His amazement was too great.

"Offended? With your husband? My dear Mrs. Tracy—"

"Why?" she flatly interrupted.

"I don't know what you are talking about," he protested. "Larry is one of my best friends—"

"Which always adds to the gravity of the offense," she said. "Why, Billy?"

"Aren't you being a bit serious without reason?" he asked.

"Perhaps you have been serious—without reason" she countered.

"Let's dance," he abruptly suggested.

"We've danced enough, Billy," she said gently. "So—Mr. Weedon has been talking already, eh?"

Valdemagara blushed deeply. "I don't know what you mean," he muttered.

"And you struck him. That was rather fine of you, Billy, even if it's the one thing that will make him talk the more. You see, Larry has already struck him, yet—he talked."

"Larry struck him?"

"Of course. Men are like that. They never realize that blows only have effect upon the brave, who are humiliated by them. The coward—and that's why you were cool to Larry. You expect too much of men, Billy, and being a man you should know that."

"I wasn't cool to Larry," he protested.

"Then you didn't believe Weedon?"

"What do you know about all this, anyway?" he asked.

"Only what Larry has already told me. You see, he kissed the lady. Weedon saw them, and—Larry came to me."

"The idiot," exclaimed Valdemagara.

"So another person—of my own sex—said. But I don't feel that way, I—after all, it was decent of him."

The Marquis' eyes met hers. "Then you've forgiven him? Joyce—you are my friend and I am your friend, and I shall always call you Joyce—you have forgiven him?"

"Ah, that is something else," she replied. "To respect a man for his honesty does not mean that one forgives him for—other matters. Now—shall we dance again?"

AL SMITH FINDS IT ALL SO CONFUSING

"Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith candidate for the presidency in the last campaign, and who has been an official of a trucking company and a builder of skyscrapers, has now become the head of a bank."—News item).

PHILLIPS

Depositor: Good morning.

Mr. Smith: Good morning. What can I do for you? We do trucking to all parts of the city, move you anywhere in the East, crate your piano or . . .

Depositor: Oh, I thought this was a bank.

Mr. Smith (realizing his mistake): So it is. Of course, it's a bank. I've had so many businesses, you know. Awfully sorry. You want to borrow some money, I assume.

Depositor: Not at all.

Mr. Smith: Good. You see I've been in politics so long I can't escape the notion that whenever people approach me they are looking for something.

Depositor: I wish to open an account.

Mr. Smith: Splendid; how tall?

Depositor: What?

Mr. Smith: How many stories? . . . beg pardon . . . there I go talking like a builder . . . I mean how big an account?

Depositor: About $1,000 to begin with.

Mr. Smith: That's a good foundation.

Depositor: This is a strong bank, is it not?

Mr. Smith: It's never been defeated. Last year it carried the state by . . . gosh! There I go getting all mixed up again.

Depositor: How many depositors have you.

Mr. Smith: Returns from 36 counties with 167 voting districts missing give us 18,573, and all the counties still to come in are strongly Democratic. Would you like to see the blue-prints?

Depositor: What blue-prints?

Mr. Smith: The blue-prints showing the new skyscraper in every detail. It is going to be one of the tallest buildings in the world, higher than the Woolworth building. I'm building it for the Saturday Evening Post in six installments. It will tell the story of my life and have 18 elevators and guarantee the American people a higher working wage. I yield to no man in my . . .

Depositor: I don't quite follow you, Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith: Well, I guess I'm a little confused myself.

Circles Of First Baptist Church Study Mission Book

Several circles of the First Baptist church Woman's Missionary society met Monday afternon to plan for Christmas service and to study the mission book, "Jerusalem to Jerusalem."

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

We wondered Sunday evening, if some modern Rip Van Winkle had gone to sleep 50 years ago and waked on the scene we saw, what would he think?

Myriads of twinkling red and green and blue lights woven in and out of garlands of spruce; "Merry Christmas" spelled in electric lights on one store and a tree shining on another. The name on the top of a tall building had put on Christmas colors and from the top of the hill on Eighth street, one could read the crimson letters spelling "Panhandle" as though it were on the sky.

And much more beautiful than the decorations, the blue, blue sky with a round moon in silver gilt.

But what would that Rip have thought of telephones and taxis and cars and airplanes and X-ray and radium—and all the other wonders the last half century has developed?

X-rays and radium make us think of things medical and we offer up a word of thanks that the flu demon is on its way to being conquered.

Being in and about a hospital makes one marvel over the wonders of surgery. To have a surgeon walk calmly into a room at about 10 in the morning and announce that he had performed four operations that morning already and that it didn't make him nervous; the thing that would make him nervous, he said, was sitting in his office and seeing patients during the afternoon.

It is a pity that a man gifted in surgery must ever become so inured to suffering that he does not feel something of the inner glow of the Divine Healer. That glow that comes to anyone who knows he or she can ease suffering and give happiness.

Speaking of giving happiness, we cannot help thinking of the toys the Camp Fire girls have made. We looked at the specimens they showed at the Kiwanis club and marveled over the workmanship. There were toys as well made as a child could wish. Little round tables; upholstered fireside chairs; mattresses worthy of a mattress factory, and life-like dogs and colts and cows on smooth rollers.

There'll be some happy children among the families where these things go. And bread cast upon the waters does come back—no matter what is said.

Children are such little sports. We looked in on the little Simpson boy, son of the Floral Heights minister, this morning as he lay bandaged and bundled on his bed. "Are you suffering?" we asked him. He smiled the sweetest little smile and said, "No, ma'am." That boy doesn't know it, but he's sleeping on his rights. A grown man would be suffering agony.

Music of Jazz Era Makes Poor Wedding March

Flaming Youth Wants to Know What's the matter With It That It's Tired of Petting—Is a Bad Woman Worse Than a Bad Man? —Grouchy Husband.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a product of the modern age. I have the looks of the average jazz queen. I am a good dresser and like my good times. Fellows ask for my phone number, but after the first date when they find I am Scotch with the kisses they beat it for good. I stick up for my generation when my grandparents run it down, but down in my heart I would like to meet a chap like those in the dark ages who considered it was a privilege when one was allowed to kiss his lady's hand and who did not step on the gas when he was slapped for getting fresh.

Guess I had better reserve my chair and knitting needles in the old maid's home, for I surely don't want to hook up with a guy who has been petting every girl he has ever met before he bestowed the great honor of asking me to share the future with him.

What is the matter with me?

BETTY.

Answer—There is nothing the matter with you, Betty, except that you have some brains under your boyish bob and they are beginning to stir and make you see that while jazz music is good enough to dance to, it makes a mighty poor wedding march.

It looks to me as if flaming youth is not nearly so flaming as it was two or three years ago and that its tinder of false ideals was burning down to ashes that will soon blow away and leave things pretty much as they were before this little flare up of rebellion against the conventions and moralities.

For I find that many boys and girls are thinking and feeling just as you are. They have begun to realize that promiscuous petting and wild parties and drinking hooch and staying out to all hours get them nowhere. At first it seemed very audacious to snap your fingers in Mrs. Grundy's face and tell her to go to, and you got a whale of a kick out of shocking grandma and grandpa, and you felt terribly sophisticated and man and woman of the worldly when you got drunk. But the trouble is you haven't been able to keep keyed up to the bold revolt motif.

The reaction has come and you find yourself gone dead. You do not thrill to the kiss of every Tom, Dick and Harry. It nauseates you. You are sick of the very smell of synthetic gin and stale cigaret smoke and most of you are sick and tired of the silly, purposeless girls and boys you have been playing around with and whose whole idea of life is making whoopee.

Somebody said once that we Americans could never really enjoy sinning because we had too many centuries of virtue behind us. That is true. Also we have behind us too many centuries of good, hard horse sense that makes us count the cost of what we are doing, and look forward to its consequences.

And that was bound in the end to swing the young generation back to sanity. Sooner or later the boys and girls were bound to see that the old decencies, the old moralities, the old restrictions, the old conventions by which their parents and their grandparents and their great grandparents had lived are not just moss-grown superstitions that should be knocked down and scrapped, but the very foundation stones of civilization that have been built up step by step out of the experience and wisdom of thousands of years.

And that is why you don't want to marry one of the boozey boys you have been playing around with. You don't want to give your life into the keeping of a man who has no settled purpose or principles, who is concerned only with having a good time, and who hasn't an ambition higher than owning the fastest sport car. You want to marry a man like father and grandfather, who is reliable and substantial and ambitious, and who is going to amount to something in the world.

And it is why all this talk about sex freedom doesn't sound so good when you come to apply it to your own case. It makes the shivers run down your spine when you think of marrying a man who will stick to you only so long as you are young and attractive and who would think that he had a perfect right to leave you and go to some other woman if you got sick and lost your looks.

And boys feel the same way. They like to date the necker and the petter, but when they think about marrying they would like to get wives like their mothers. Girls who haven't been pawed over by every man who has ever taken them out and who are emotionally shopworn. They want wives like their mothers, who are above suspicion and whom they can trust implicitly.—DOROTHY DIX.

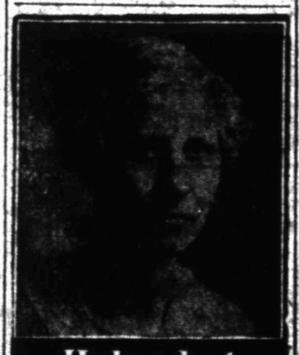

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband and I are always arguing about man and women. He says that a woman does not have the same rights that a man does. I say they do. He says once a woman is bad she is always bad, and that a bad woman is the worst thing on earth. I say a bad woman is no worse than a bad man. My blood boils when I hear a man talk about women. How can I overcome this, or should I try, since I believe that a woman should hold up for her sex?—BEE.

Answer—Why argue about a question that never can be settled, for there are no scales in which the relative goodness or badness of man and women can be weighed and we will never know how they are rated until we stand before the judgment bar of God.

Moreover, while it is fine and loyal for you to stand up for your sex, it isn't worth having a spat with your husband, for it produces no results. You will never convince him any more than he will convince you, so my earnest advice to you is to cut out the discussion and each of you believe what you please without making of it a bone of contention.

So far as the conventions go, certainly a man can do many things without losing caste that a woman cannot do. The girl who strays from the straight and narrow path is ostracized, while her fellow sinner is invited to dinner. Few men are willing to marry women who have led an immoral life, but if women demanded absolute purity in the men they marry there would be a lot of old maids.

DOROTHY DIX.

Helped at Change of Life

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine at the Change of Life. I would get blue spells and just walk the floor. I was nervous, could not sleep at night, and was not able to do my work. I know if it had not been for your medicine I would have been in bed most of this time and had a big doctor's bill. If women would only take your medicine they would be better."—Mrs. Anna Weaver, R. F. D. No. 2, Rose Hill, Iowa.

Then and Now

Looking back, there are at least three or four open golf championships in which I can recall Leo Diegel coming into the locker room dejectedly burying his face in his hands and saying everything about himself that a fellow might say about some enemy he hated:

It was usually about like this: "I'm no good. I'm yellow. I always blow up just when I have my chance. I'll never win anything in this game, any tournament worth winning."

The same Leo Diegel of the Agua Caliente course, in Mexico, is now P. G. A. champion for the second time in succession. To reach this peak he has won 10 successive matches against some of the best golfers in the world. He has beaten Walter Hagen twice. He has beaten Gene Sarazen twice. He has beaten Johnny Farrell and Al Espinoza. It takes a combination of golf skill and golf courage to scrap through a list of this sort and finish on top. With Diegel it was always a matter of overeagerness, overkeenness, that in turn keyed his nervous forces beyond control. The Diegel of today is an entirely different type from the Diegel of three or four years ago, from the Diegel who might have won the open in 1920 at Inverness, the Diegel who might have won at Worcester and one or two other places.

Great Match Player

Diegel has now challenged the supremacy of Hagen and Mitchell as the greatest match play golfer in the world. In the Ryder Cup matches Leo drew Abe Mitchell, the match play star of Great Britain, and opened the attack with a 65. Mitchell, with a 71, found himself 6 down after the first 18 holes. Diegel traveled along at the same burning pace to beat Mitchell something like 10 and 9, and Mitchell was playing first-class golf, while being slaughtered. In his last two years of match play Diegel has been moving at an even faster pace than Hagen used to show. He has broken 70 repeatedly. If he can hit the same clip at medal play he will be something for Jones, Hagen and Smith to watch next summer at Minneapolis.

An Old Grad Celebrates

The keen elation felt by a certain old grad, George Ade, Purdue, '87, over the result of the Western conference championship is now pretty well known.

Mr. Ade took his final fling in outlining his idea of how certain well-known writers would have handled the Purdue-Iowa game. It is with the permission of Indiana's favorite son that certain samples are entered in these dispatches from the Purdue Alumnus:

MILT GROSS—

"I esk you, should I not become egitate? Oy, oy, sooch pig Hockeyes! Tirty tousan' pipple at tree dollars itch. Vin or lose, it's a beezness! Such shoutinks! Such yellinks! I vait till it is the told hef an' den buy a bedge wich hez a 'P' on it. Bully for old Spadoo! Nize culledge!"

GOOD TALENT COMING HERE

Eleven States Represented On Roll

The Wichita Falls Spudder baseball management spilled the news Monday late that the 1930 club roster of baseball players had been practically filled out and was now ready for presentation to the public. The roster includes some forty odd baseball men, most of whom are young fellows but experienced and capable performers on the diamond.

Everything Fixed

Definite contracts, paper arrangements, and amicable understandings have all been arrived at and fixed upon for the players to come here in the spring and appear in Spudder uniforms. The list takes in what the club management hopes and has reason to believe will be the makings of a winning ball club. No expense of time, money or pains has been spared in procuring first rate talent. In fact President Huff and Guy Airey are both quite proud of some of the talent which the Spudders are bringing here to carry on in the coming season.

A few of the players are regular players who worked with the club last year; others are men who had been farmed out last year and are coming here for tryouts in Class B ball, and still others are new comers altogether.

States Represented

It is interesting to note the geographical sections of the country which are represented on the 1930 roster. Eleven states scattered from Maine to California and from Wisconsin to Georgia furnish the players. Texas and California supply the largest number by individual states, nine coming from the former and seven from the latter. New York state and Pennsylvania come next with four players each supplied. Three players hail from Oklahoma and two each from Illinois, Wisconsin and Georgia. Maine, Connecticut and North Carolina are repersented by one player each.

Sixteen pitchers and four catchers are enlisted upon the roll. In the infield there are 14 men on the list and seven players are signed for the outfield.

The players will start filtering into the city by the first of March and practice will begin March 7.

The club roster follows with players by order: Pitchers, Russell Cromer, Fort Worth, Texas; Edwin Ellis, Walden, N. Y.; Chick Galeria, Oakland, Calif.; Roland Flinn, Westbrook, Me.; R. W. Florrid, Atlanta, Ga.; Wm. E. Goff, Madison, Wis.; H. A. Hillin, Mt. Calm, Texas; Jimmie Parker, Wichita Falls, Texas; Cy Smith, Kernersville, N. C.; Milt Steengrafe, Oakland, Calif.; Fred Vincent, Binghampton, N. Y.; Les White, Long Beach, Calif.; Oran Oneal, Coalgate, Okla.; Eddie Lennon, Philadelphia, Pa.; Eull Moore, Tipton, Okla.; Hal Wiltse, Clay City, Ill. Catchers, Art Bradbury, Oakland, Calif.; Jack Crouch, St. Augusta, Ga.; Gaudy Guerra, El Paso, Texas; Ralph Butler, Philadelphia. Infielders, Franklin Allday, Atlanta, Texas; Ray Andrews, San Francisco, Calif.; Larry Bettencourt, Niles, Calif.; Debs Garms, Bangs, Texas; Duke Herman, Albany, N. Y.; Joe Luciano, Philadelphia, Pa.; Art Scharein, Decatur, Ill.; Frank Stapleton, Waterbury, Conn.; Carrol Burrows, Waxahachie, Texas; Felix Nevinski, Philadelphia, Pa.; Burns. Storti, Euller and Levey, infielders, were bought from Tulsa of the Western league and it has not been found out yet just what their home state is. Outfielders, H. C. Fitzgerald, Wichita Falls, Texas; Wm. Hooten, Daingerfield, Texas; Jack Kloza, Milwaukee, Wis.; Garland Orr, Lewisville, Texas; Alfred Anderson, Berkeley, Calif.; George Nebel, Glendale, N. Y.; and Clyde Pratt, Winters, Texas.

Barriers of Golf Traditions Are Being Changed by Modern Ideas

By NAN O'REILLY
International News Service Special Correspondent

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—One by one the barriers of golf tradition are being hurled by the circuit riders adown the golfing trails. A few days ago the ban on the steel shaft in Britain went the way of all flesh, and henceforth throughout the land where waves the flag that knows not the setting sun, golfers may wield the emblem of a machine age and not feel themselves in durance vile. The Americans have been 1 up on their British cousins for some time, for they have had the privilege of using steel-shafts for many years.

It's a good thing for golf in general that the ban has been lifted abroad, yet so far as championship golf goes, it is hardly of real moment. At first glance it appeared that the idea was opposed to the best traditions of the game and like the old Schenectady putter of the late Walter Travis, the steel-shaft would be a sure route to American victory of John Bull's preserves. But the years have disproved this idea if it ever existed in the minds of the British law-makers. The great Hagen, the American successor to Britain's illustrious triumvirate, never plays with steel-shafts. Jones, also a British golfing idol, swings only hickory. The Americans have won their British laurels with hickory weapons alone.

Stick to Hickory

The outstanding golfers of America, Hagen, Jones, Armour, Diegel, Horton Smith, Von Elm and many more stick to hickory. Horton Smith blazed his golden trail from coast to coast last winter with steel-shafts in his woods, today he plays only with hickory, using the same clubs as Hagen. It will be interesting to note in the British and open championships next spring how big a part steel will play.

American golfers find poor hickory in British-made clubs; master club-makers abroad find that their best clubs won't stand an ocean crossing. On the other hand, Americans going to Britain don't experience shaft trouble. But British clubs brought back home go soft very quickly. Club makers of this country claim there is plenty of good hickory to be had and the inroad of the steel-shaft has increased the supply of hickory so that today it is cured better than ever.

For Older Golfers

Does steel improve one's game? For older golfers, yes; those whose muscles are no longer supple and bursting with energy. It adds distance, and the absence of torque seems to help keep the ball down the middle. However, the steel lacks the feel and life of hickory. If a canvass were made of the great super-stars of the game, it is doubtful if more than a slight minority would hold out for steel.

Imagine a violin bow of steel! It just can't be done. Watch the stars of the open; they are always wagging and feeling the clubs in the other fellow's bag, and the hickory wins every time. The boys all say that when genius turns loose on the fairway and green you have only to look the clubs over and you find good old Tennessee hickory that has been turned from wood to a living, responsive weapon. The lifting of the ban abroad is a step toward progress and an open mind, and if only for that reason it is to me commended. Anything is good that will make the golfing moguls realize that 1929 is not 1457!

Had Experience

Judge: If, as you admit, you were three miles away digging potatoes when this man was arrested for speeding, how can you testify that the car was going at the most only 20 miles an hour?

Sambo: Jedge, Ah used to own that caah!—The Wheel.

COYOTE CAGE MEN PRACTICE

Holton Lectures Boys on Rules

With the high school cage practice season swinging into the second week of duration, the 50 aspirants for the Wichita Falls High school quintet are rounding into shape under the watchful eye of Coach Barry Holton. Daily practice sessions are fast ironing out the kinks and the cage season will be in full swing after the Christmas holidays.

Lectures concerning basket ball and how to play and understand it are delivered three days out of the week by the Coyote mentor. Each afternoon the future basketeers take a pencil workout in one of the class rooms, and notebooks are required for the player's benefit. These notebooks contain the rules of basket ball which Barry Holton is stressing in his early season training. After this brief session the squad takes another brief session on the court.

Three Vets Back

Only three veterans returned to form the nucleus of 1930 hoop team. Paul Dickey, Tom Beaty and Laverne Malone are the trio of veterans who returned. Goodwin Bray, captain-elect, moved to Dallas and will not be available. His going lessened the strength of the Coyote five considerably as he was one of the best guards in the district last year. Several youngsters are showing up well in practice and are expected to develop into regulars ere the season is long gone. Chief among these prospects is Mitchell Scarbrough, a brilliant, experienced lad from Oklahoma. Several others from last year's team are looking good, mainly Harlan Ray, Earl Hutchison and Leo Davis. Several stars from the Junior high teams of 1929 are on hand and lend much reserve strength to the squad.

Squad at Work

Coach Holton is bringing his squad up slowly but surely with well-balanced practice sessions passing and short shots occupying the majority of the evening. The new Coyote mentor has coached basket ball for eight seasons and is well versed in the principles and fundamentals of the cage sport.

To Enter League

The Red and Black will again enter a team in the city commercial league this year in order to gain the benefit of at least two games per week as well as learn the game more fully by playing against the former college stars, who play on the other teams of the City league. The first game this season was with Burk High in the Coyote gym. At the expiration of playing time the score stood at 17 all, but the extra five minutes for the playoff was not given. Ten selected members of the team made the trip to Fairview last night for the Coyote representation in the second game of the season for the fighting Pack.

Babe Herman Planning Early Start To Set Slugging Record Next Year

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. (INS)—Just like the other "big shots" in his league, Floyd (Babe) Herman of the Brooklyn Robins has no particular interest in all the fuss being stirred up at present over baseball congregations and possible swaps, for Babe Herman has become an "institution" in the outfield of the Dodgers, and there is not a chance in the world that that lanky blond will be involved in a trade this winter.

The Babe knows he is sitting pretty at the current moment and a substantial raise in the old pay envelope will bear him out in that belief. In the Babe's estimation, however, the pride of the Hermans won't be sitting as pretty next year if he doesn't succeed in copping that batting record. Herman's heart was set on it last season but after attaining his goal for most of the year he slumped atrociously during the latter part of the campaign and allowed the slugging fool of the Phils, "Lefty" O'Doul, to forge far ahead of him.

To Start Over

Beginning next April, though, Herman is going to open up again full blast with the hopes that a year from today may find him really at the top of the baseball world.

Reaching the pinnacle of the diamond realm was not always uppermost in the Babe's mind but he realizes that if he doesn't continue banging that onion for the next few years, especially, he probably will never fulfill his ambitions—ambitions that were almost ruthlessly jarred into oblivion in 1925 when the Babe was declared a total bust. It all happened when Brooklyn, rejoicing over their acquisition of one Johnny Butler, sent Herman, whom they had just hooked from Seattle, along as excess baggage with a party of six players to Minneapolis in full payment for the ailing third baseman.

Mike Kelly, the mentor of Minneapolis, evidently didn't think Herman capable of anything as he shipped him back to Brooklyn without even as much as a trial.

Switched to Outfield

When Del Bissonette became a member of the same team, Herman was switched from first to the outfield.

Today Babe Herman is being looked upon as the logical successor of Zach Wheat. Although Herman's fielding antics will never approach the brilliance with which old Zach executed his plays, Herman has enough color and is a strong enough walloper at bat to make the Brooklyn fans forget the Missouri farmer. After all, Wheat saw the day he could drive a horsehide much further than where Babe's usually go. And like the ball he so industriously slugs with a seeming one-armed swing, Herman is traveling along just as far and just as fast. Yessir, the Babe is not very interested in just who is swapped for whom.

Arizona Polo Team To Play Rice Four

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 16. (AP)—A. L. Slonaker, graduate manager of athletics at the University of Arizona, today announced the Wildcats will play two football games with Rice institute of Houston, Texas, in 1930.

The first game, he said, will be played in Houston, Oct. 11, and the second in Tucson, Oct. 24, 1930.

ART HUMBLED BEFORE CROWD

5,500 See "Mighty One" Get Licked

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

WHITE CITY STADIUM, Chicago, Dec. 16. (UP)—George Trafton, who calls himself a hard-boiled football player, was awarded the decision over Arthur Shires, who says he is "The Great," after five rounds of a bout which Jim Mullen, promoter, fondly called a boxing match.

When Trafton, who probably is a much better football player than he is a boxer, spit on his gloves, it was just too bad for Art, The Great.

Trafton knocked the White Sox first baseman all around the ring for some five rounds, blooded his nose, blackened his left eye and generally ruined the great Art's blond beauty.

Trafton, an elephantine young man who plays center on the Chicago Bears, a professional team, thereby blasted Shires' fistic aspirations as far as any professional career is concerned.

Did Good Job

"I did it for the good of Chicago," panted Trafton, after the fight. "This Shires is just a big noise. That's all he is, and I think I proved it."

About 5,500 fans attended the fight.

The crowd, apparently of the same opinion as Mullen concerning the fistic ability of the two battlers, paid approximately $15,000 to see the bout. They got stung, but they didn't seem to care. As a boxer Shires was no more popular than he was last summer as the Sox' battling first baseman.

Shires' Weight

Shires weighed 197¼ pounds while the ponderous Trafton tipped the scales at 218¾ pounds. The weight difference was no particular advantage to Trafton because he carried most of it around his middle.

The bay window of Trafton, encircled by an extra size pair of pretty purple trunks, made an excellent target for the Great Arthur, but the latter was too busy spitting blood through most of the fight to pay much attention to George The Terrible's bread basket.

Shires told everybody about his greatness, with a sign on his red robe which said, "Art, The Great Shires," in case anybody couldn't see that sign, The Great Art had similar notices on the backs of his two seconds.

But when art took off his bathrobe and rushed to the middle of the ring, the sign didn't do him any good.

Trafton Hard Socker

Trafton, totally unimpressed, socked him on the right, the left ear, both eyes and on the nose.

The Great Shires fell to his knees while the crowd booed. He jumped up again gamely enough but there was George to paste him again. Shires went down once more and only the bell saved him from a knockout in the first round.

The minute between rounds wasn't long enough for either of the gladiators, so they spent most of the second round resting. They both were too tired to do much but look at each other.

Shires happened to come near Trafton's gloves a couple of times and received for his carelessness some terrific wallops on the face. There really isn't much use to detail what happened in the other three rounds. It was more of the same.

The plan is to pair each professional with an amateur player for the two days of medal play.

SPORT Loose Ends

By W. G. CHAMBLESS

A major league club president is about to play the deuce (in more than one sense) and spoil some of the choicest sports entertainment ever scheduled for the thrill hungry fans of this country. The enigmatic offender is none other than William Veeck, better known as Hack Wilson's boss man. Jim Mullen, Chicago fight promoter and showman extraordinaire, had the good sense to see the sporting possibilities locked up in a boxing bout between the pugnacious Hack Wilson and "The Great" Arthur Shires and made the necessary arrangements that were to bring two of baseball's most colorful players face to face in the roped-off arena.

When word of the proposed match between Wilson and Shires reached President Veeck of the Cubs, he set up a squawk than which none has so stirred the fans since the famous Dempsey-Tunney long count fiasco back in 1927. Veeck got hot on the long distance telephone and pleaded and argued and finally threatened dire possibilities if Wilson didn't call off his end of the fight. Wilson half way promised not to fight, then Mullen raised the quotation for the four-round encounter from $10,000 to $15,000, thus throwing the hard hitting outfielder further into the arms of doubt. Whether to turn down that $15,000 pile of easy-looking glitter and hold on to the good graces of Veeck, or to grab off the money and take a chence on his boss' displeasure is the question with Wilson. He called back to Mullen and told him to hold everything, that he might change his mind one way or the other. And there the matter hangs, at this writing.

Most likely the will of Veeck will prevail and "the battle of the centuries" will be lost to the fans forever. The action of the Chicago Cub president is most lamentable. Nothing would please sports followers over the country better than to see the match between Shires and Wilson go over. These players are two petrels of the art of baseball comedy and pugnaciousness, and a battle between them in a boxing arena would provide a first rate show.

Veeck argues that the fight business is beneath the dignity of a ball player. Blah! Who is Mr. Veeck to belittle the manly art of the ages? We fear that he is presuming a trifle too fast with his public. If he does dissuade Wilson from this bout his decision will be anything but popular with hundreds of thousands who would like to have seen the fight gone through with.

GAME MEANS STATE TITLE

Lengthy Confab Is Held in Austin

AUSTIN, Dec. 16. (AP)—Breckenridge and Port Arthur, survivors in the state high school football race will clash in the Cotton Palace stadium at Waco Saturday for the schoolboy title.

Representatives of the two schools agreed on the battle site after a lengthy conference in the office of Roy B. Henderson, director of the state interscholastic league, here today. Neither school would consider playing on the other's home field.

"Home of Champions"

Selection of Waco for the crucial game took it to the "home of champions." The Waco Tigers have won the state title four times, more than any other school, and were defeated in the finals on two other occasions. Waco, in consequence, is densely populated with football fans, thousands of whom will turn out for the big game.

This, together with the fact that the McLennan county seat is centrally located, swayed officials of the rival schools in their decision. The city's altitude, it was figured, will not work a hardship on either team.

Both Coach P. E. Shotwell of Breckenridge and Coach Tom Dennis of Port Arthur appeared confident of the outcome of the championship bout. Dennis reported that his quarterback, Domingue, received a side injury in the Denton game that might handicap him against Breckenridge, but that otherwise his team was intact. Breckenridge emerged from its victory over Waco without additional injuries.

Babe Ruth Returns From Hunting Trip, Talks With Ruppert

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. (US)—While Broadway continues to conjecture about his salary, Babe Ruth arrived back in town today after a hunting trip in the Smokies, and, from all indications, he is not the least bit concerned over his coming parley with Col. Jake Ruppert and Ed Barrow of the Yanks, about the salary he will receive for next season.

Mr. Ruth's salary is just as important an item to the local citizenry as the color of Mayor Walker's shirt. The local boys like to speak of how much the Babe is getting, and feel that it is of greater personal interest to them, because they help to pay it.

THE BIG DIPLOMATICO SHAPE

Mapacubas are foil-wrapped . . . to keep them fresh and clean; to prevent pocket breakage; and to preserve their precious aroma.

10c
Other popular sizes: 10c and 2 for 25c

A DIME IS SMALL FOR SO MUCH ENJOYMENT

TWO nickels or a ten-cent piece is all you need to put yourself next to the finest-tasting cigar that ever captured your fancy: MAPACUBA. And how! . . . And why? Because It's Ripe Tobacco!—from bow to stern and heart to wrapper.

Flavor? Man, you'll never know what real flavor in a cigar is till you smoke one made of all ripe tobacco . . . MAPACUBA.

Ripe tobacco is tobacco at its best. Under-ripe leaves—at the top of the plant—are usually bitter. Nothing doing in Mapacuba with such leaves—they're thrown out. Same way with over-ripe leaves—they're generally "flat," insipid, flavor-lacking. . . . No sir, nothing but the fragrant, luscious, flavor-laden, mellow-mild middle leaves of choice tobacco plants are used in this humdinger cigar. Made by one of the largest manufacturers in the business.

Dig a dime out of your pocket. Try a Mapacuba this very day. Put one end into your mouth and the other into the flame of a match. Smoke so cool, clear, and true-tasting—so free from bite or flatness—you'll never let up till you've worked it down to the last available puff. At cigar counters most everywhere.

Gall Stones

Gall stones resemble small pebbles. They are lumps of solid bile substance. The number of gall stones may be from one to twenty or even more. They are not unusual after the age of 25, but are most common after 50. Three times as many women are afflicted as men.

One large gall stone is not as likely to cause distress as several small ones. The reason for this is that the large one stays in the gall bladder and is protected from injuring that organ by the bile which acts as a lubricant. The smaller ones cause the irritation by being able to escape from the gall bladder and make their way down the duct into the intestine. This passing of a gall stone produces what is known as gall stone colic, accompanied by violent pain. This colic does not always occur, even though there are gall stones, and although it is so intensely painful that to most patients it seems unbearable, it is rarely fatal.

The pain is due to the crowding of the stones through the very narrow bile duct. If the stone is stopped before it enters the intestine the condition is severe, as it brings about a backing up of bile into the liver instead of allowing it to pass into the intestines in the normal manner. From the liver the blood absorbs the bile and carries it to the tissues and we can see from the yellow coloring of the patient's face that he has jaundice, which is always a symptom of bile stoppage. Sometimes the gall bladder goes through an acute inflammatory process from the effect of numerous gall stones rubbing against it.

The formation of the gall stones is due to a stagnation of bile. It is significant that athletes who are in good training never have them. An over-supply of sugars and starches in the menu, with a lack of exercise, will in years bring on a stagnation of the gall bladder. Men, because they are more physically active than women, have only 25 per cent of the cases.

The symptoms of gall stones are such that the patient considers something wrong with his digestion. He loses his appetite and has a great deal of gas on his stomach. He may vomit occasionally, and his stomach and the region to the right of it are usually tender and sore. If he is troubled with jaundice and typical gall stone colic, he is reasonably sure of having gall stones as the seat of his trouble.

If he does not have the colic, and many cases do not, it is sometimes difficul to diagnose his trouble, as even the x-ray is not always reliable and it is difficult to distinguish whether the trouble is from gall stones or from inflammation of theh gall bladder.

Inflammation of the gall bladder may exist with or without gall stones. The diffferential diagnosis between the inflammation or catarrh of the gall bladder and gall stones is often quite different and even a Graham dye examination does not always show the difference between the inflammatory processes and the formation of caculus masses of stones. Dietitic treatment for the two conditions is similar, however, so that an exact diagnosis is the beginning of the treatment does not always seem necessary.

In tomorrow's article I will explain this method.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Chiropodist Needed

Question—A. M. writes: "I have been troubled for the last few months with the foot trouble known as papilloma. It has broken out in three places on the ball of my foot. Is this disease dangerous? Will it develop into something serious? What causes it, and can it be cured without operation. Also, is it contagious?"

Answer—Papilloma of the foot can usually be cured in a short time by treatment from a chiropodist. He uses certain medicinal preparations on the papilloma, and often resorts to surgery. Papilloma is not really dangerous, and most of its harm comes from preventing one from taking long walks, due to the discomfort produced. It is not contagious.

Too Much Sugar

Question—E. N. P. asks: "Is sugar harmful if taken excessively? A man 74 suffers with weak back. He takes during the day 24 spoonfuls of sugar in his tea or coffee—and then more sugar with porridge."

Answer—Any kind of food including sugar is harmful if taken excessively and the man you refer to is certainl ytaking entirely too much sugar. If he keeps this up he will surely develop worse trouble than a weak back, which is now a symptom of some disorder developing because of his injurious use of food of such high caloric value.

Blood Donors

Question—T. S. asks: "Will you please advise me how often a person could give blood transfusions in an ordinary state of health without its being injurious to physical conditions?"

Answer—Giving the blood for blood transfusions is not a healthful occupation and is liable to prove injurious at any time. Some strong people have been found who could do this for a considerable length of time but it is very weakening and is almost sure to lead to a weakening of the whole system.

PANHANDLE OIL OUTPUT DROPS

Gray County Curtailment Brings Decline

Special to The Record News.

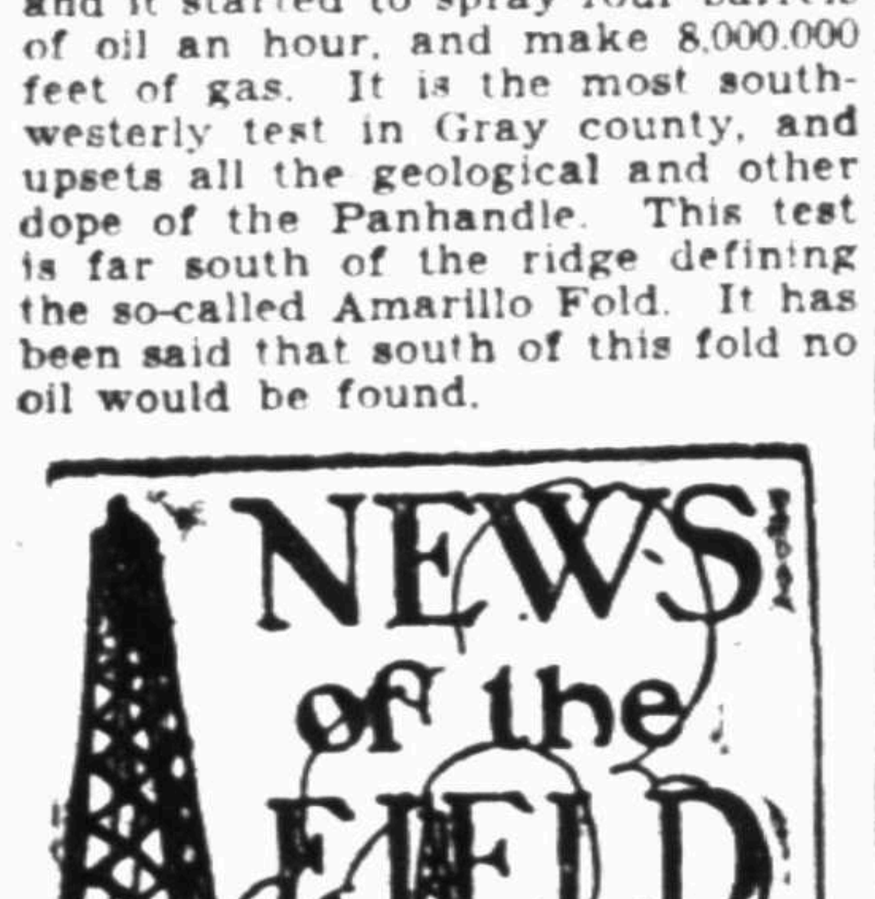

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 16.—A decline of 8,870 barrels a day was noted the week just ended in the Panhandle field of northwestern Texas, but a survey of Gray county, shows that it was a voluntary matter, due to the willingness of operators to restrict output.

The plains field by counties produced as follows:

County	Daily Output	Wells	Prev. Output	Wells
Carson	9,809	194	9,930	194
Gray	61,642	494	61,480	487
Hutchinson	27,222	984	27,820	982
Moore	747	19		1
Potter	112	1	770	38
Wheeler	458	38
Totals	101,790	1,730	110,660	1,721

Lou Stogner and Paul Meaders at No. 1 Holloway, in section 7, block H. A. W. Wallace survey, had 400 feet of oil in the hole, from a pay at 2995 to 3014 feet.

Dillard and others No. 1 Ferneaux, in section 202, block B2, of H. & G. N. survey, had an increase of both oil and gas at 3160 to 3163 feet, and it started to spray four barrels of oil an hour, and make 8,000,000 feet of gas. It is the most southwesterly test in Gray county, and upsets all the geological and other dope of the Panhandle. This test is far south of the ridge defining the so-called Amarillo Fold. It has been said that south of this fold no oil would be found.

NORTHWEST OF MEGARGEL

The Sell Petroleum corporation is drilling out the plug from the sand at 1421 to 1431 feet in its No. 1 Dupriest located 450 feet south and 450 feet west of the northeast corner of section 2490, T. E. L. survey, just northwest of Megargel in southwest Archer county.

E. B. LAWSON PURCHASE

E. B. Lawson Saturday purchased from C. C. Williams a 40-acre tract out of the J. A. Leberman farm in section 151, T. E. & L. survey. The tract is located just north of the Doctor Riggs well in the northwest corner of section 150, T. E. & L. survey, Young county.

SOUTHWEST ARCHER COUNTY

The Pandem Oil company is resetting and cementing pipe on the sand at 1403-11 feet in its No. 2 J. A. Young test located in section 2426, T. E. & L. survey, southwest Archer county. The well was bailing when the seat gave way.

NORTH YOUNG LOCATION

M. A. Anderson has spudded in on No. 1 J. L. Castleman 1518 feet west and 1584 feet south of the northeast corner of section 72, T. E. & L. survey, in Young county.

COOKE COUNTY TEST

Republic Production company No. 1 R. H. Hickman located in the Lewis Knight survey, abstract 548, in Cooke county is spudded in and drilling at 500 feet.

W. R. DUKE SALE

W. R. Duke sold to E. B. Lawson, local operator, a one-half interest in a tract of 120 acres out of the J. A. Young land section 2426, and W. T. Richardson tract in section 2425, T. E. L. survey, in the Duke pool southwest of Megargel in Archer county, for a consideration of $60,000. On the lease are three wells and a daily output of 200 barrels.

SOUTH ARCHER COUNTY

Clark-Douglass No. 1 W. J. McClure located in the south 70 of the east 140 acres of block 13, Crawford Pasture, south Archer county, is spudded and down 400 feet.

DUKE POOL EXTENSION

Wayne King No. 1 W. H. Portwood located in the northwest corner of section 2411, T. E. L. survey, is showing for a 75 barreler from the sand at 1420 feet. The well, which is located in the new field southwest of Megargel, is the means of an extension to the producing area of one-half mile to the southeast.

FOARD COUNTY PRODUCER

The Shell Petroleum corporation added another well to the number of producers in the Thalia field in Foard county by placing its No. 1 W. S. Tarver in G. C. & S. F. survey making 85 barrels per day from the sand at 2021-33 feet.

SOUTHEAST SIGLAR WELL

Atlantic-Siglar No. 6 W. T. Waggoner located in section 35, block 2, H. & T. C. R. R. survey, in the old Siglar district southwest of Vernon in Wilbarger county, is completed in the deep pay sandy lime at 2645-75 feet and is estimated at 800 barrels flowing.

'Andrews County Gets Oil Well

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Dec. 16. (AP)—The number one Ogden well, owned by the Deep Rock Oil company and others, 5¼ miles west and 1½ miles north of Andrews, Andrews county, flowed 192 barrels by heads during the 24 hours ended at 7 o'clock this morning, its operators reported. Oil men saw in this flow possible commercial production for the first time in Andrews county.

EDUCATION BOARD

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 16. (UP)—The curriculum committee of the state board of education will hold its second meeting Friday to discuss general objectives and hear reports of sub-committees. John Vaughn, state superintendent of public instruction, said today.

FALL CROPS NEEDING RAIN

Poultry Prices Advance on Local Market

Rain which fell in small quantities during the day Monday brought promise of much needed moisture for winter crops. The soil in this county is unusually dry for this season, according to O. K. Barnes, agricultural agent of the chamber of commerce, and will require heavy precipitation during the next few days to offer seed now in the ground a fair chance at good development.

Efforts are now being made by representatives of the Southwest Dairy Products company to promote a heavier production of whole milk in Wichita and surrounding counties, in order to facilitate capacity operation of the milk condensing and powdering plant recently completed in the former Kraft cheese factory. The new manufactory will be able to handle as much as 60,000 pounds of milk daily. Among the movements planned by the purchasing company will be provision of easy financing terms by which farmers and dairymen more easily may procure additional dairy stock for their herds.

Cotton ginnings continued to slump, slowly but gradually, during Saturday and Monday. The total bales reported from the two days was 119, with no report from Kemp City. Electra was heavy with 65 bales, but reported that the dampness would retard ginning during the next few days. The county's total is now 21,627.

Prices on hens moved up 2c per pound as listed by Armour creameries, and colored fryers advanced 1c.

World Court Lines Drawn

Senate Forces to Battle Over Protocol

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—Battle lines are being drawn for the impending senate fight over adherence to the world court.

Although a year may elapse before President Hoover submits the revised protocol, designed to meet objections of the senate as expressed in its famous fifth reservation, regardless of its size numerically, promises to be extremely determined.

Three ranking Republican members of the foreign relations committee, Chairman Borah, Johnson of California and Moses of New Hampshire, disapprove of the new proposal, and the administration is hopeful the forthcoming Republican reorganization of the senate may result in increased committee strength for friends of the project.

The senate's fifth reservation, on the basis of which American entry was rejected by the nations of the court, would have provided that the tribunal entertain no requests for advisory opinions on questions in which the United States might have or claim an interest without the consent of the Washington government.

Under the protocol, America could withdraw from the court without prejudice, in the event requests for advisory opinions should be pressed by other nations over the objection of the United States.

Former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, member of the foreign relations committee when entry to the world court was last before the senate, has addressed a letter to Chairman Borah staunchly opposing the new scheme. Although he approved of adherence with reservations three years ago, he does not see the demands of the fifth reservation have been satisfactorily met in the revised protocol.

Clay County Cotton Crop Shows Slump

Special to The Record News.

HENRIETTA, Texas, Dec. 16.—The Clay county cotton crop is practically all gathered and shows a decrease of 3,228 bales in 1929 as compared with the 1928 crop, which is reported by F. F. Langford, agent for the department of commerce for Clay county. Prior to Dec. 1, 1928, there were 20,043 bales ginned in Clay county, as compared with 16,815 bales ginned prior to Dec. 1, 1929.

There is very little cotton offered on the market in Henrietta as there is very little cotton held by farmers.

Iowa Park to Have Special Christmas Rite

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Dec. 16.—More than ordinary interest has been manifested here since the announcement of a Twilight Candlelight Christmas service to be given at the First Methodist church Sunday evening, Dec. 22 at 5:30 o'clock. According to the pastor, Rev. Paul E. Martin, the church will be lighted as in olden times, only by candles. The choir, under the direction of Mrs. C. W. Coppick, with Mrs. J. A. Sewell as pianist, will render a musical program appropriate to the occasion and the pastor will give as a sermon story, "The Other Wise Man" by Henry Van Dyke.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. (AP)—Cotton was more or less unsettled today with prices lower under southern selling combined with more or less commission house and local liquidation. Prices made new low ground for the present movement with January contracts selling off to 16.82 or just about a cent a pound below the high level of Nov. 30, and within 6 points of the low priced touched on the break during the middle of last month. January closed at 18.63. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 14 to 19 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 to 3 points in response to the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and reports of increased selling by the South. Prices held fairly steady during the early trading as there appeared to be a considerable trade demand on the basis of 17½ for May. This buying was gradually supplied. The lowest levels of the day were reached in the late trading when December sold at 16.79, March at 17.10 and May at 17.35 to 18.50, 20 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

Some traders were inclined to attribute the increased offerings reported in the South to preholiday liquidation, or selling of cotton to secure funds for holiday purposes.

Liverpool cables reported hedging and liquidation of near months in the market but said the continent had been buying distant positions. Only a limited cloth business was reported in Manchester where yarns were said to be pressed for sale.

Port receipts today, 51,928. U. S. port stocks, 2,684,111. Exports, 25,410, making 3,762,324 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 16. (AP)—Cotton here after a sluggish morning, became active in the afternoon with the trend of prices downward due to unfavorable cables, fears that Lancashire spinners would resort to short time and comparatively light exports for January liquidation on the approach of the first notices day for January.

Activity carried prices down 23 to 25 points in the early afternoon. The decline continued without setting new lows carrying January from the 16.98 close of Saturday to 16.74, low, followed by a slight rally which closed the month 16.76, or 22 points net lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 18 to 23 points.

Liverpool was 1 to 4 points off which influenced first trades in New Orleans at net losses of 1 to 4 points. January traded down to 16.93, March to 17.20 and May 17.43, or 5 to 7 points below yesterday's close at the end of the first hour.

Rumors forecasting reduction in spinners' hours and active trading under liquidation further undermined the prices and January went down to 16.64, March 17.02 and May 17.26, at 23 to 24 points below the previous close.

Late trading was easy with March at 17.05 and May at 17.28, registering 20 to 22 points net higher on active months.

MID-WESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 16. (AP) (U.S.D.A.)—Curtailed receipts of cattle around the 11-market circuit failed to stimulate the demand for killing classes to any marked extent. Demand at eastern dressed beef markets continued very slow. A few markets reported slight upturns on better light-weight steers and yearlings. Steers with weight were difficult to move at steady figures. One load of 1,040-pound Christmas specialty yearlings in St. Louis scored $17, while a load of choice quality realized $16.25. There was a fair demand for replacement stock at steady to slight higher rates. Kansas City had a liberal run of stockers for this season of the year, but at other centers supplies were light. Receipts 67,400 a decrease of 34,500 from a week ago but 13,000 heavier than a year ago.

Hog trade was slow, unevenly 10 to 25c lower, the river markets which were relatively high on Saturday showing the most decline. The top of $9.55 was paid in St. Louis. Offerings 178,200 as compared with 143,413 last Monday and 134,001 a year ago.

The sheep supply approximated 76,800 a decrease of 9,500 from a week ago but 26,500 heavier than a year ago. Considerable unevenness prevailed around the loop on fat lambs. Chicago was on a strong to 15c higher basis, but values at most other points were unevenly steady to 25c lower. Chicago secured $13.85 for closely sorted lambs, while bulk of choice natives and fed westerns went at $13.23@13.50.

BOSTON WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—A greater volume of business in wool is pending than has been reported for a long time. There is more confidence in the situation and prices are steadier, although members of the wool trade freely admit further readjustments in prices may take place before business gets definitely under way. The receipts of domestic wool during week ending Dec. 14, amounted to 4,504,680 pounds as compared with 793,500 the previous week.

Short Selling Again Depresses Prices on New York Stock Market

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Short selling again depressed the stock market today. Failure of the interstate commerce commission to announce merger plan over the week-end, as expected, proved a disappointment. It influenced a standoff policy on the part of most traders which professional bears were quick to take advantage of. U. S. Steel lost 7⅝, Radio 2¾, General Motors 2⅜, General Electric 7¾, Westinghouse 5, American Can 5¾, Fox 1⅛, New York Central 5⅛, Baltimore & Ohio 2½, Consolidated Gas 3, Columbia Gas 4⅜, Standard Gas 6⅞ and American & Foreign Power 6 points. The uncertainty of most traders was evidenced in the material falling off in volume of trading to 2,500,000 shares. Call money rate held at 4½ per cent throughout.

Everyone was waiting for announcement from the interstate commerce commission. One stock exchange firm that usually gets better information regarding railroad affairs than any other, advised clients that the "tentative consolidation plan was prepared and could be announced at any moment." While it is recognized that announcement of the tentative merger plan will have but psychological effect, it would be welcome as adding another influence to the campaign to build up sentiment so as to maintain Christmas trade at something like the level enjoyed last year. The commission's plan will be subject to rather long drawn out disputes so that the only good result to be expected is that it may hasten legislation that will give the roads more leeway in carrying through their own merger ideas. In that way at least one or two consolidations would be effected and the railroad and business conditions be benefitted to some extent. There is belief that the commission also is prepared to announce decision on the Northern Pacific consolidation. Such announcement, if favorable, would help at the northwestern carriers.

Most favorable development over the week-end was the announcement of General Motors sales for November. While they showed a slight decrease as compared with last year they were so near the level that prevailed in that month that all ideas of the actual condition in the motor industry were proved incorrect. Sales to consumers for the month of 90,871 were only 539 less than sold the year before, or in other words, business held up to the rather exceptionally favorable levels of 1929. When one remembers the dire forebodings as to the immediate results of the market crash on automobile sales, the General Motors figures gives reason to believe that other pessimistic views were exaggerated also.

It looked for a while as if those interested in Copper shares were going to make the shorts suffer. They never had a better technical position to work on and reports from the trade give increasing reason to expect maintenance of the price of copper metal for the immediate future at least. There was further explanation given for the quiet investment buying of Allis Chalmers in the letter sent to stockholders regarding recent dividend increase. It was pointed out that of $33,000,000 earnings since 1913 less than $13,000,000 has been paid to stockholders, leaving $20,000,000 added to surplus. Increase in dividend to $3 is not the last favorable development stockholders have to look forward to. With expenses of introducing tractor lines taken care of and the Pittsburgh strike settled much larger revenue from that department is in prospect for 1930. In addition the talked of utility expansion and building programs would result in additional demand for Allis Chalmers machinery.

Talking of the growing short interest an associate of one of the most powerful bankers declares:

"There can be no doubt there has been organized bear raiding in the past fortnight. Those most active believe that even if banking support is continued this month they will be able to cover profitably in January. Don't be surprised, therefore, if the stock market starts the new year with flying colors."

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Dec. 16. (AP)—Emphatic notice that the federal farm board is determined wheat prices must advance gave a touch of fire to wheat buying here today. The market jumped and closed strong at about the day's top level. It was officially announced that unlimited funds are to be available for loans to wheat growers organizations and that rates for such loans are not to be changed because prices in various localities have dropped below the standard of values fixed by the board.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were buoyant, 2⅛@2⅝c a bushel higher than Saturday's finish. Corn closed ¾@1⅛c advance; oats ⅛@⅝c up, and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 2c.

Before word came that the federal farm board was taking an aggressive stand in favor of higher prices for wheat, the market showed an upward trend at times, but was beginning to drop when dispatches from Washington were received outlining the board's position. The remainder of the day, wheat gained rapidly in strength, and this was the case in particular during the final half hour of trading. Activity of buying continued unabated in the face of news that the United States wheat visible supply again showed but a disappointingly small decrease, 512,000 bushels reduction for the week.

Contributing to the strength of wheat values was news that the amount of wheat on ocean passages had fallen off more than 2,500,000 bushels since a week ago, and is now 26,664,000 bushels, compared with 34,984,000 bushels in this time last year. world shipments for the week being only 10,674,000 bushels against 17,257,000 bushels at this time in 1928.

Corn and oats rose with wheat and as a result of mild damp weather unfavorable for the movement on the corn crop.

Provisions declined downward on account of setbacks in the value of hogs.

BUS EXPLOSION LAID TO FILMS

Transportation Officials Are Heard at Austin

AUSTIN, Dec. 16. (AP)—Joe Amberson of San Antonio, owner of the Union Bus company, and his attorney, Marshall Bell, of San Antonio, appeared before Mark Marshall, state motor transportation director, today to give him information concerning the recent explosion on the San Antonio-San Angelo line which resulted in three deaths.

Marshall said after the conference it was apparent there was no negligence on the part of representatives of the Union Bus company. He asserted a can containing motion picture films on a back seat exploded. The shock killed one person and gas fumes the others, he said.

Marshal announced the Union Bus company and the Southland Greyhound company, operating lines in all sections of the state, had banned the carrying of films in their buses until it had been determined whether or not such transportation was dangerous.

Humbert-Marie Marriage to Be Second in Quirinal

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI

ROME, Dec. 16. (US)—When Crown Prince Humbert and Princess Marie Jose of Belgium are married in the Paoline chapel of the quirinal on Jan. 8 it will be but the second time since the disestablishment of the Holy See in 1871 that a ceremony of a religious nature has been performed within its beautifully frescoed walls.

When King Victor Emanuel, grandfather of the present crown prince, took possession of the quirinal, up until that time the summer residence of the popes, he was placed under the ban of excommunication and religious functions of any kind within the palace were prohibited.

This ban was partially lifted later on and the king and Queen Margherita were allowed to have a small private chapel in another part of the building. The Paoline chapel, however, remained closed as a chapel in which no one but the pope could celebrate any religious rite. During the war it was used as a linen storehouse, when the quirinal was converted into an emergency hospital.

At the time of Princess Yolanda's wedding, the desire that it should be solemnized in the Paoline chapel was expressed to the pope, and, by means of a special bull, his holiness granted permission for its use as an ordinary chapel.

Now work is going on throughout the quirinal and particularly in the chapel in a feverish attempt to prepare it for the wedding. Vast tapestries are being hung on some parts of the walls, where the fresco work has been slightly disfigured by wartime activities.

Meanwhile, plans for the accommodation of the many royal guests expected are being hastened. And arrangements for the regal ceremonies that will mark the occasion are being hurried up.

Senate Approves Enforcement Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—A resolution to carry out President Hoover's request for appointment of a joint congressional committee to consider the reorganization and concentration of prohibition enforcement agencies was adopted today by the senate and sent to the house.

Approval was given the resolution sponsored by Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, without a word of debate. It was presented to the senate during the extra session after Mr. Hoover sent a special message to congress asking the creation of the commission.

Vice President Curtis would name the senate members of the commission and Speaker Longworth the members from the house. Hearings would be authorized and a report within this session of congress would be provided.

On the basis of this study, the administration hopes to carry out reorganization of the prohibition enforcement service. The president has proposed that most of the enforcement agencies be transferred from the treasury department to the department of justice.

RALEY FILES $38,000 FEE CLAIM WITH COUNTY COMMISSION

TAX COLLECTOR ASKS PAYMENT

Auditor Refuses Approval To Report

Guy C. Raley, county tax collector, Monday afternoon presented a claim against the county for $38,674.01 due him as fees for the collection of delinquent state and county taxes from 1923 to 1928, inclusive, and indicated that he would bring suit for that amount upon formal rejection of the claim by the county commissioners court.

Court Declines to Act

The petition was presented by Mr. Raley to Paul Barnett, county auditor, who rejected it. Mr. Raley then presented the claim, through his attorney, Dan Boone, to the commissioners court with a request for immediate rejection in order to allow for the filing of a suit. The court refused to reject the claim pending consideration, and turned the case over to Wayne Somerville, county attorney, for an opinion.

Mr. Barnett, when the petition was given to him, wrote across the face of it "Disapproved in toto" and affixed his signature.

County Attorney Somerville was instructed by the commissioners to render an opinion at the meeting of the court next Monday. No action will be taken until that time. It was indicated that the claim would be rejected.

Dan Boone, attorney for Mr. Raley, based his claim for the amount due on his construction of the limitations law, which states that a county tax collector may bring suit for all fees wrongfully paid over to the county while subject to the provisions of the maximum fee bill and according to the act of 1915. The contention was, it was said, that the law fails to state which maximum fee bill is meant, one having been declared unconstitutional and another substituted in its place since the enactment of the act of 1915.

$351,000 in Treasury

Mr. Raley's total fee was set forth in the petition as $41,487.72, from which a district court judgment of $2,813.71, returned last summer, was subtracted, leaving a claim of $38,674.01. The total state and county collections from 1923 until 1928 amounted to $829,754.33, according to the claim. A fee of 5 per cent on state collections totaled $16,916.77 and a like fee on county collections amounted to $24,570.95, the petition stated.

The court Monday afternoon granted a lease to Mrs. T. G. Brown on the Courthouse Cigar stand for another year. Paul Barnett, county auditor, gave his report for the month of November, showing a balance of $351,012.53 on hand in county funds.

Lubbock Man Says Trouble Is Over

Prominent Farmer Says No Other Medicine Ever Helped Him Like Orgatone Has

"Orgatone is the only medicine I have ever taken with entire satisfaction," was the statement made a few days ago by J. Pl Nash of 2418 Twenty-first street, Lubbock, Texas., in telling his wonderful recovery by the use of this medicine. Mr. Nash is one of the best known farmers in this section.

"I have been in poor health for about two years, troubled with indigestion, constipation and a general run down condition," he continued. "I had a poor appetite and what I did eat caused so much gas to form that I would bloat up something awful. Sometimes I was so miserable at night, that I could get only a few hours of restless, broken sleep. I was in an awful run down condition and felt weak and worn out all day long."

"I began to read about Orgatone in the papers and when a personal friend of mine recommended it so highly I knew right then that there was something to it and I got a bottle at once. I certainly was not disappointed for after the very first dose I started to feel better and now that I have taken it about three weeks all my troubles have left me entirely. My appetite has returned and it makes no difference what I eat I digest it without the least trouble. The constipation and bloating troubles have left me, so has the indigestion. My stomach is in splendid condition and all my pains have disappeared. I sleep all night long and when morning comes I am feeling rested and refreshed. I consider Orgatone a wonderful, powerful builder and I have never taken anything that gave such remarkable results."

STRAND: "Sweetie," with Helen Kane, Nancy Carroll and Jack Oakie. Contagious hilarity. Screen singsong. Paramount sound news.

MAJESTIC: "On With the Show," techni-color extravaganza. Sam Hardy and many more. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: "Lady of the Pavements," with Lupe Velez, Jetta Goudal and William Boyd. Comedy. Pathe news.

QUEEN: "My Aunt From Utah." Griffin melodramatic troupe.

Birds of a feather may flock together, but it does not follow that all creatures whose antecedents animated the African continent flock peaceably together upon meeting in a Wichita Falls show house. That succinct truth was demonstrated conspicuously at the Majestic theater Monday morning, when the dusky custodian known as R. B. reorganized the usual morning routine to keep plenty of space between himself and the Princess Pat cage. Princess Pat, Hollywood lioness, was one of the features of Sunday and Monday's vaudeville.

Daily house cleaning at the Majestic usually begins behind the stage early in the morning, and proceeds through the auditorium to the foyer and second floor offices. But so far as ArBee was concerned Monday morning, that part of the theater beyond the entrance just naturally didn't need brushing up. Furthermore, office employes arriving late in the morning found the house still brilliantly lighted throughout, as for a gala affair. Pressed for an explanation, R. B. furnished enlightenment: "How ah know dat lion's cage am strong? Ah ain't takin' no chances."

Appraised by the apprehensive porter of the presence of a fearsome lion in a fragile cage, a young lady who came in for pipe organ practice during the morning showed the benefits of pedal training by streaking through the entrance whence she had entered. Later, RR was called to the office to learn that a parade was to be staged on the downtown streets, and he was to be permitted to lead the noble lioness. Taking on more of the pale-faced hue of Princess Pat, the proposed honoree summoned all his persuasive talents: "Lissen heah, now, lissen heah, Miss Newman—much as ah just loves to wuk, ah ius' natchally nevah could lead a lion, no suh!"

Proposing to erase all memories of "Hollywood Revue" with its dimensions and extravagance, "On With the Show," the first technicolored talking and singing picture, opens at the Majestic Tuesday. The list of stars begins with Betty Compson and includes Sally O'Neil, Louise Fazenda, Sam Hardy, Arthur Lake, Joe E. Brown—and ever so many more.

First Transatlantic Sales Talk Made

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (UP)—A six-minute transatlantic sales talk, the first one in history, was made today by Julius H. Barnes, head of the executive committee of the national business survey conference.

His statement was made at the specific request of the London Daily Express and the United Press associations.

Equipment Installed For Condensed Milk

Installation of all equipment for the manufacture of condensed milk has been completed at the former Kraft cheese factory by the Southwest Dairy Products company and operation will begin before the first of January, according to P. R. Freeman, local manager.

Present production of whole milk, reduced by the oncoming cold weather, and decreased somewhat as a result of the discontinuance of manufacturing at the plant while it was being altered, is slightly below the amount desired for opening of the new process. Production engineers of the Southwest Dairy Products company are now here, and are engaged in stimulating production of milk and delivery to the condensing plant from this and surrounding counties.

Physician Urges Liberal Donations To County's Fight on Tuberculosis

With almost 600 persons in Wichita county infected with tuberculosis during the past year, according to national officials' statistics, citizens of this community can afford to contribute liberally to an organized fight against the disease by purchasing Christmas seals, according to Dr. A. F. Leach, who addressed the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Kemp hotel Monday noon.

Sixty-five persons died last year in this county from tuberculosis, the speaker said, and quoted national statistics as indicating that nine infected cases are found on the average for every death.

Toys prepared by the Camp Fire Girls for Christmas distribution were exhibited by Miss Mary McIlheran, executive secretary. About 150 playthings have been made by members of the organization, she said. They will be distributed along with Kiwanis Christmas baskets from headquarters which opens at the Art Jewelry store Wednesday, it was announced. Preparation and distribution of baskets will be done by members of the Junior Forum and the Camp Fire Girls.

Reports of other committees, working under the direction of Paul Hines, told of the 15 families for which the Kiwanis club will provide Christmas baskets.

Vocal numbers by Miss Harriett Bradley, contralto, accompanied by Mrs. J. W. Bradley, were included in the program, which was arranged by Jouette Bonner.

BLUE CURTAIN PLAY TONIGHT

Dolores Peavy Takes Lead In New Comedy

Dolores Peavy, former prominent Blue Curtain member and now returned to Wichita Falls from the University of Texas, takes the title role of "Oh Kay," three-act mystery comedy to be presented by the Blue Curtain players of Wichita Falls Junior college Tuesday night at the college auditorium at 8:15. Miss Peavy has been a leader in dramatics both in the Junior college and in local amateur plays and is looked upon as one of the city's best actors.

A cast of good talent has been assembled and prospects for the year are better than the average, according to Miss Juanita Kinsey, director of the Blue Curtain players and of "Oh Kay." Former club members in the play are Katherine Ashford, W. A. Johnson, now president of the club, Lela Belle Jenkins, William Jenne, Josephine Kelly and Dolores Peavy. Some excellent new talent has been recruited from last year's high school dramatics.

"Oh Kay" is the type of play which combines mystery and thrills with plenty of funny comedy.

Music is to be furnished as an introduction by the college violin trio. Proceeds are to go to the Wai-Kun, the college annual. Tickets are on sale at 35 and 50 cents as an experiment to see whether the lower prices will bring a sufficiently larger house to compensate for the reduction. Reports on sales indicate a satisfactory response, according to the Wai-Kun business staff in charge of sales.
