The American Creed

I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a soverign Nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principals of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey it laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against al enemies. William Tyler Page

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cook, who farm south of Loraine, have a few pear trees at their home which have produced several bushels of the fruit this year. They canned all they cared to and sold a few bushels.

Tom Finley reports that he has out three bales of cotton, maybe another one by this time. I think Tom did most of the picking himself. He says some days between meals he can gather as much as 40 pounds. I wouldn't mind picking cotton with a picker like that—he must eat a lot.

Gins have beeen busier the past two weeks than they have any time since 1932 when the biggest crop in history was produced here. This years crop is just about as good as the 1932 crop but of course the acreage is not as large. If the weather continues fair another week after this one the biggest rush will be over until the late boils open.

Loraine merchants the past two Saturdays have been the busiest they have been in a long time. This year quite a lot of white people from other sections of Texas are here picking cotton and they spend more money for groceries, clothes and other necessities than the usual run of cotton pickers, mostly Mexicans.

We are glad to welcome to our reader list this week several families who have become new subscribers. One man told me Saturday that he had been wanting to take his home paper for quite a while but it looked like every time he got adollar he needed it so badly for something else he just never got around to it. Most farmers will be able to get around to it this fall. We know everyone wants his home paper and we would like to send the paper to everybody, and we would like for everyone to take advantage of the present price of $1.00 a year which will remain in effect until November 1. After that date the price will be $1.50. The raise is made because of necessity not just because we want to raise the price, althought we do believe a paper such as we publish is worth $1.50 any time.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

Census report shows that 3,756 bales of cotton were ginned in Mitchell County from the crop of 1941 prior to October 1, as compared with 6,182 bales from the crop of 1940.

Bulldogs Lost To Merkel Badgers Friday

The mighty Merkel Badgers who are on their way to a district championship throttled the Loraine Bulldogs at Merkel last Friday night 44 to 13. It was the second conference game for each team. The Badgers had defeated Roscoe 53 to 0 and the Bulldogs had lost to Baird 20 to 0.

The Badgers outplayed the Bulldogs in every department of the game. Jack Melton, Badger back, did most of the scoring for the Badgers. He is mighty good back but we give most of the credit to the Badger line whic h opened the holes in the Bulldog line that a freight train could have gone through.

Three fifteen yard penalties in the first quarter against the Bulldogs placed the Badgers on Loraine's 1 yard line and set up the first score for the Badgers which came in the first play of the second quarter. The Badgers scored twice more in the second quarter, twice in the third and twice in the final period.

Harold Johnson scored for the Bulldogs and Coffe kicked goal in the third quarter. Allbright scored again in the final period after Coffee had carried the ball from his own 10 to Merkel's two where he tripped over a fellow back. Harold Johnson showed considerable taient in the backfield in this game. In fact Johnson, Allbright and Coffee would go places if the balance of the team would block.

First downs Friday night were 13 to four in favor of Merkel.

The Bulldogs this week will be hosts to the Snyder Tigers for their third conference game. The Bulldogs should be able to whip the Tigers since they have shown up poorly in all of their games. The Bulldogs have had an unusually hard schedule thus far. Every team they have played was tough except Hehmleigh.

BAPTIST CHURCH NOTES

The Primary, Beginner and Junior Departments were almost one hundred per cent Sunday. What we are lacking in the adults. Parents don't forget Christianity must begin in the home. Recently in a program we heard quoting "The parents of to-day are letting the schools educate the child, the picture show entertain them and the church teach them the Christian way of living, and the home is only a place to eat and sleep." It is almost true whether we want to admit it or not.

The Lord has blessed us with bountiful crops in the perilous time let us not forget the Sabbath he has set apart for us to worship. We must forget our earthly duties for they are perishable.

Rev. Taggart of Abilene filled the pulpit Sunday bringing two wonderful messages that stirred our hearts with emotion. The themes were "His Word Shal Not Return Void." And Our Prayer Life."

Come Sunday we are expecting our pastor, Rev. Polnac to he here.

Dairymen Save Your Steps

College Station, October 13.—There's a lot of work in the dairy business and unecessary steps make a tired dairyman with no outstanding results to show for his efforts.

Therefore, says G. G. Gibson, assistant dairyman of the A. & M. College Extension Service, dairymen should not delay in looking to improvements which will save steps. They should check whether fences are located for convenient handling of cattle; gates placed where they should be, and whether barns are arranged so cows can be turned in and out easily. They should also decide whether the feed room is conveniently located and whether the floor for mixing feed is satisfactory.

Gibson suggests that the check should extend to determining whether properly balanced grain mixture which is well suited to available roughage is being fed. "See that each cow is being fed according to production," he adds. "With the present demand for additional dairy products it is good business to feed heavier on concentrates than under normal conditions."

Roscoe Child Killed When Hit By Truck

Roscoe.—The five-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Snyder of Roscoe was killed instantly here Friday morning when a cotton truck ran over him on the main stree (highway 80).

The child's mother had parked her car across the stree from a movie theatre and while she was taking a younger child from the car the older child ran across the street. Driver of the truck was not aware that his vehicle had struck the child until boys riding on a trailer the truck was pulling shouted at him. Name of the truck driver was not known late tonight at Adams funeral home where the body was being held.

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Snyder attended the funeral services Saturday in Roscoe. The little boy was Tony's nephew.

Destroy Cotton Stalks & Kill Weevils

College Station October 13.—Destruction of 1941 cotton plants two weeks before the first frost will be the most valuable contribution to reducing boll weevil damage to the 1942 crop.

When it can be practiced, plants should be destroyed on as large an area as possible in order that the results may be of the greatest value, says Cameron Siddall, entomologist of the A. & M. College Extension Service. The objective of plant destruction is to deprive the weevils supply of food and force them into hibernation in a weakened starved condition. Many immature weevils remaining in late maturing bolls and squares also would be destroyed.

Under the most favorable conditions of feed and temperature only five to six per cent of hibernating weevils survive the winter, Siddall explains.

For thorough destruction of the plants it is necessary to plow them up or cut them below the surface. This will prevent fall sprouting and fruiting of the cotton roots and thus deprive the weevils of their only food supply up to the time they hibernate.

"Unlike some other cotton pests," Siddall says, "the weevil has no other host plant than cotton, which attempts to fruit as long as there is life in it. Sprouting and late fruiting sustain the mature weevils and a second group which develops in the squares and bolls of the late crop until the two classes go into hibernation. Emerging in the spring they seeek the host plant and lay the eggs which produce the season's first generation of weevil's."

Destroy the host plants in the fall for three successive years and the weevil problem would be about solved, the entomologist believes.

He cautions, however that destruction of plants will be of little value to one farmer unless a considerable number of neighboring farmers also destroy the plants on their land. This is easily done in one-variety communities, like the Victoria area, because the crop matures and is gathered at approximately the same time.

In 1940 and 1941 Victoria Voluntarily destroyed the plants two weeks after picking.

In the area from the Rio Grande Valley north to Jim Wells and San Patricio counties, affected by the pink boll worm, growers are required to delay planting until a certain date and to destroy plants by October 10. As a result, farmers note a vearly decrease in infestation.

High School Carnival Set For October 25th

Time Drawing Near For Annual Roscoe Fall Fair

Third annual Roscoe Fall Free Fair, to be held in Roscoe on October 24th and 25th, is dedicated to the task of presenting favorably the products, produce, hobbies, arts, and crafts of the people of the Roscoe, Highland, Pyron, Brownlee, Blackland, Wastella, Champion, and Mesquite communities.

An unusual feature of the Roscoe Fair is that all exhibits possible are placed in the show windows of stores throughout the town, and other exhibits located conveniently downtown, so that visitors to Roscoe and the fair may proceed from one exhibit to another in comfort and at their leisure, visiting meanwhile with friends and neighbors.

Clubs and organizations from Roscoe and the communities listed above operate the entertainment concessions at the "hometown" carnival that annually attracts large crowds of fun-seekers. No commercial or transient concessionsaires are allowed to set up and operate during the fair. The money spent at the booths remains at home—the organization operating the booth keeps 60 per cent of the net for its own treasury, and pays 40 per cent into the far association fund for the purchase of ribbons, awarding of prize monies, and other expenses incident to the operation of the fair.

Methodist Church

J. E. Shewbert, Pastor

This is a very busy season with everyone. Many of our people were worn out physically last Sunday due to the cotton rush but a fairly good crowd was out for all services and we appreciated the presence of each one. We are thankful for this good crop this year and the good price. Howeve, let us remember the Lord in these days.

We are practically out on our benevolences but if you have not paid yours or all that you expect to pay then may we do itSunday.

From here on let us bring a good offering for our budget. You realize that our stewards are very busy right now and can't get out to see their list. Will you bring your offering to church these next few Sundays so we can meet every obligation in full by conference time? You may mail it to myself or Kirk Taylor and you will receive credit. I know we can count on you to help us. Only two more Sundays until we have our fourth quarterly conference and we want to report as much out on every item as possible.

We are proud of the start our new teachers and officers are making and also the members. Let us keep our attendance up during the ginning season and not let our spiritual lives drag. It is just as needful for us to worship when we are busy as it is any other time.

Be with us next Sunday for all services. We need you and you need the Lord.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Nazis Claim Smashing of Soviet Army In Terrific Attack on Eastern Front; Pro-Nazi Panama President Is Ousted By Regime Friendly to United States

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

GAMBLE:
On Eastern Front

Hitler's dramatic announcement that "events of enormous importance" would take place on the eastern front was followed closely by what many observers and analysts of military tactics called the greatest gamble in the history of warfare.

Then from the Nazi high command came the word that in their opinion the last effective Russian forces on the central front had been smashed and "last army groups are being wiped out."

An initial campaign which had been planned for a month or less to yield Leningrad, Kiev and Moscow had been going on for more than 17 weeks, and the yield had been Kiev.

Though knocking on the doors of Leningrad, entry had been denied, and there were many reports that this new plan of Hitler's to storm Moscow from a beginning distance of between 150 and 200 miles would call for the abandonment, for the present, of attempts to take the northern metropolis.

The observers, at the same time that they questioned the good sense of the all-out campaign for Moscow, admitted that if Hitler was to throw all his available forces into a blitz on the central front, Timoshenko's men would have to fall back, but whether Hitler could count on driving all the Russians out of western Russia before winter they believed to be dubious in the extreme.

There was a general feeling in Moscow that the attack was spurred on by desperation, that Hitler was feeling the effects of the unrest back of the eastern front, and believed he would have to have a big Russian victory before winter so that his front-line forces could be relieved to clean up the mess in occupied Europe, steadily becoming worse as winter approached.

As usual whenever a German drive was announced there were those who believed it might be a cloak for something else.

Some suggested that the first spearhead to be driven forward, north of the Sea of Azov, might be a cloak for a water-borne attack on the Caucasus oil fields.

If this were true, however, the Reds on the fighting lines were badly fooled, for they reported a general central German attack of greater ferocity than any so far experienced.

TWO BITES:
Or Just One?

Just as many papers were asking editorially why it was that congress was following the plan of what they called A-B-C legislation or the program of voting for or against Bill A, when everybody concerned knew that Bill B and Bill C, two other steps, were in the offing, the White House brought them a new sample to chew over.

Sen. Tom Connally (left) and Rep. Charles Eaton of New Jersey are shown before entering the White House as members of a bipartisan delegation from Capitol Hill summoned to discuss with the President his plans for congressional changes in the nation's neutrality law. Both men are members of the foreign relations committee in their respective branches of congress.

This was the question of the alteration of the neutrality act.

The press was informed that the first congressional-White House conference on the bill was whether it would be advisable to take two bites out of the cherry or only one.

Would it, they discussed, be advisable to settle the question of arming merchantmen and extending the right to American merchant ships to go to British ports separately, or both at once.

Were the question decided in the first method, congressmen asked to vote on Question A, whether merchantmen should be armed, would know full well that this question would be indissolubly linked with Question B, of whether they should allow merchant ships to sail into British ports—but this question would not be before them.

PANAMA:
Coup d'etat

Three presidents within the space of a few hours was the news from the republic of Panama as political elements favorable to the democracies ousted Arnulfo Arias, pro-Nazi president and set up their new government.

In the bloodless coup d'etat, Ernesto Jaen Guardia, former minister to Mexico, took over the duties of president as Arias fled to Cuba by airplane. A cabinet was then formed, Guardia resigned as president and Ricado Adolfo de La Guardia, former minister of government and justice, was elected president by the new cabinet.

Reports were that the coup was precipitated by the recent action of the Arias regime in ruling that Panama-registered ships could not carry arms for protection against submarine attacks. A cabinet ruling, this regulation was ordered as the U. S. was considering arming its own cargo ships.

RED AID:
Wins Support

Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, is pictured entering the White House upon his return from Rome. Before leaving the Vatican, Taylor is said to have had a lengthy interview with the pope and it was reported that this was the subject of his discussion with the President.

Russia and religion, the house of representatives, even while the press battle over the subject was raging, put its O.K. on a plan to give cash aid to Russia in addition to material help.

This had been regarded as indicative of the tenor of house thought on the subject of helping the Reds in their defense of their homeland, an attitude that had been echoed in the American Federation of Labor convention.

This group, while assailing Communism as such, completely endorsed the sending of aid to Russia in increasing quantities.

The house action came when, in discussion of a bill which would increase the RFC lending power to a billion and a half, Representative Smith of Ohio said he understood Russia wasn't going to get any of it but he wanted to make doubly sure, so offered a prohibitive amendment.

ALUMINUM:
A Decision

In an opinion that required 8½ courtroom days to dictate, Judge Francis Caffey of a New York federal court ruled that the government had failed to prove its charges of violations under the Sherman Anti-Trust act by the Aluminum Company of America. Thus ended one of the longest trials in U. S. history with ALCOA the apparent winner on all points. Inasmuch as the government failed to prove its case, Judge Caffey said that it would be contrary to the public interest to dissolve or enjoin ALCOA.

An interesting part of the court's opinion was the statement that it appears that there exists in this country adequate supplies of bauxite (ore of aluminum) and water power available to anyone. Therefore, he said, anyone is and has been able to go into production of virgin aluminum since the last of ALCOA'S patents ran out in 1909.

By the time these words are printed the farmer ordering a tractor or a dairy machine is going to be able to line up at the counter right beside the generals and the admirals making their purchases of tanks and ships.

This is the interpretation that can be put on the remark made by Donald Nelson, head of the priorities division of the OPM, to the effect that he is going to make the agricultural implement industry a guinea pig in an experiment to remove the bottleneck which is preventing non-defense industries from getting the raw materials they need to operate.

Nelson admits that "priority lists" are not worth the paper they are written on in many cases and that a system of "allocation" is to be tried out.

"Priorities"—"allocation"—wars always create new words as well as new meanings for old ones. In this case the word "priorities" covers, if not a multitude of sins and headaches, at least a new meaning. When it became evident that there were not enough raw materials to supply defense needs and civilian needs both, the priority system was devised.

The priority division of the Office of Production Management was set up to decide which order for which raw material should be delivered to what manufacturer. The materials most essential to defense production were rated with an A, and graded in that category with numbers according to their importance. For example, A-1 material topped the list. The highest rating for civilian defense materials was B-1, while others were fitted into alphabetical classifications and numbered in line with their significance in the defense program.

This was the priority system. But it did not always work. For instance, the manufacturer of a dairy machine requiring some essential product like aluminum or rubber might have the highest civilian rating, but when he tried to get delivery for that product he found that all he had was the letter "B" and the number "1" on a sheet of paper, and you can't make dairy machines out of paper.

In Civilian Industries Also

This was happening in many civilian industries. It was also happening in defense industries. In the latter cases the system was changed so that certain defense manufacturers could get certain raw products (aluminum, copper, synthetic rubber, etc.) regardless of priority rating but by "allocation." In other words, the government ordered a specific amount of steel or copper delivered directly to the manufacturer.

And now the farm implement industry is to get its raw materials by the same method—allocation—if the plan being prepared by the priorities division at this writing is carried out.

The priorities division explains that this is to be an experiment and that it is being tried so that experience will be gained for applying the same method of providing raw materials for other civilian industries. This is, of course, a vital problem since thousands are being thrown out of work because non-defense industries are closing for want of supplies.

However, there is another story behind the story of the guinea pig. It probably began with a terse remark by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of the Office of Agricultural Defense Relations. He said:

"The priority system works as well as writing a check on a bank with no funds in it."

He was referring to the priority lists in general but he was thinking specifically about the farm implement industry and thinking about it in connection with the new goals set for farm production. For what can the poor farmer do when he is asked to produce more with less labor—if he can't buy the machines he is willing to pay for—if the manufacturer can't get the essential materials to build those machines? Donald Nelson admitted that priority lists were not worth the paper they were written on.

Before Mr. Nelson made his admission, Dr. Townsend and a few other officials—a few hundred before long—in the department of agriculture got busy. The inter-bureau committees made a survey of the mechanical requirements of farm production as set forth in the new goals in the food for freedom campaign. This was in July.

Survey of Requirements

The department surveyed the needs in packaging and processing machinery—machines to take care of the products after they were raised. And the county agents went right to the farmer himself and asked him what he would need to take care of the extra production—bearing in mind that he would be short of human hands.

A farmer with sons and hired help in the army or working in defense industries might make up for their loss if he substituted another tractor for a four-horse hitch. Self-feeders help, too, and machines for handling the products, like hay-hoists—and, since the accent in the farm program is now on dairy products, dairy machines are important. The latter take a lot of defense-precious aluminum, nickeled steel and rubber.

The poultry business was not so much concerned, for human hands have to do almost everything for the hens that the hens won't do for themselves.

But how to get the machines? The manufacturers were all tooled up and ready to go. They were at the top of the priority lists—but there were no priorities.

The matter was laid before defense officials.

Next Donald Nelson, in charge of priorities and once dependent largely on the farmer for a living (he has been loaned to the government by Sears, Roebuck), started in to make good that "check on a bank with no funds in it." He began to plan allocations instead of priorities.

Washington's Preview Of Winter

For a while the other day, Washington drew a gray curtain over its bright autumn skies and gave us a preview of winter.

It started with that painful moment which, I daresay, you, too, have experienced oft in the chilly night when after dreaming you were stranded on an ice cake in the Polar sea in your shorts or something even shorter, you awake to find that the unfaithful blanket has left your bed. That happened to me. And when I had finally curled up to dream of warmer climes the alarm went off. It was still dark. So I let the clock buzz and tried to go back to sleep. It ought not to be dark, I reasoned. It hadn't been dark at that hour for months . . .

When I reached the street I found a thick gray sky above, there was a chill in the air that set even Washington's leisurely pedestrians scurrying—myself included. It did feel like winter. And when I had passed my second boarding-house cat, I was sure. These cats take their early outdoor loaf while the basement dining rooms are full. I suppose some of the boarders are subject to catalepsy or catallergy or whatever it is that makes people squeal and wiggle when a persistent pussy rubs their leg. Anyhow, these two particular cats are always loafing in the same spot in front of their respective boarding houses as I pass. Usually they merely look bored. This time they looked cold and bored. They were hunched up, like tight accordions—a chilly cat always looks as though it were trying to pull its chin into its own fur collar.

Another sign of the false winter was an empty bench in front of the Masonic Temple. Usually it is full of girls waiting for the pal who picks them up and takes them to work, or at worst a late bus. It is a convenient resting (place in the summer under the shadow of a great sphinx. This time there was only one sitter. She may have had something on her mind—or elsewhere—that warmed her soul and prevented the cold stone from affecting the, shall we say, situation.

There was one more sign—the evergreens preened their needles with a look of satisfaction that they cannot muster when they have to compete with maple and magnolia.

DOTTED LINE Honeymoon

INSTALLMENT THREE

THE STORY SO FAR: Larry Cutter fell in love with Jacqueline Anthony, public stenographer at the Hotel Raynear, by watching her from the lobby. In an effort to meet Jack—as Jacqueline was called—he dictated an imaginary letter to a noted archeologist. When she told him about her great longing for travel, he casually replied that she could realize her dreams by marrying him. Another man entered the office before she could answer. Larry returned when he left, to find Jacqueline greatly depressed. He offered a marriage contract permitting her to retain her mode of living and to cancel the marriage after six months. "I'll do it," she agreed. Now continue with the story.

Jacqueline was positive that she had declined Larry's dinner invitation. But she did recall admitting that she frequently dined down in the Raynear cafeteria and might do so tonight. Mr. Cutter had accepted that as a promise and taken himself off with a smiling, "I'll see you this evening. Thanks."

Just like that.

Jacqueline Anthony had been entirely truthful when she told Larrimore Cutter that she didn't know why she had listened to him in the first place. As she recalled it, she had been more amused than angry at his startling proposal. She was intensely interested in his remarks about travel. She had been attracted by him as well. There was something in his direct, assertive manner that appealed to her, especially his forthright assurance that she would some day realize her greatest ambition. Of course he interested her.

His casual solution for a trip to the Orient stunned her for the moment. Left her almost speechless. Then he had gone away without giving her a chance to reply. When, and if, he returned, she would put a stop to any further conversation on that topic.

But the call from Mr. Dennison had changed everything. Everything in the world. How could he have picked that very moment to come in? To put the finishing touch to an unbelievable situation? Why?

There was no answer . . . unless it was fate. Mr. Cutter said it was fate.

Grant Dennison was a partner in the brokerage firm of Falk and Dennison. Jacqueline had made two modest investments with them and her contacts always had been with the junior partner.

He was a sharp-visaged little man who managed in some way to give an impression that anyone who played the market was more or less a fool. But if the fool was determined to part with his money, Messrs. Falk and Dennison might as well have the commissions.

This morning, Dennison had come directly to the point of his errand in the Raynear.

"I found a memorandum on my desk yesterday, Miss Anthony, that you had called."

Jacqueline nodded apprehensively.

"I don't know where you got your tip to buy that stock in the first place. But you have plenty of company. When it started going up the way it did, we were a little suspicious of inside manipulation. We couldn't see any logical reason. It looks now as though we might have been correct."

"You mean . . . ?"

"I'm afraid so. If you remember, I suggested that you clear your original investment before buying that second lot. I don't blame you for not doing it . . . the way it was moving up. But you may have held on too long. Of course you've been following it."

"Oh, yes."

"Your loss would be heavy at the last quotation. It might be wiser to hold it for a time . . . But whatever you say. Let us know at any time. Was there anything else?"

"Oh, no. Thank you very much, Mr. Dennison for your trouble."

"No trouble at all, Miss Anthony." And Mr. Dennison had hurried out with his hands thrust deep into the pockets of his flapping raincoat.

With him went all of Jacqueline Anthony's dreams of the future. All security. And in a state somewhere between inertia and panic, she had listened to a renewal of Larry Cutter's amazing proposal. In a moment of sheer and unreasoning desperation, she had said she would marry him. She was sure by this time she had promised.

Her decision was a gamble, nothing more or less. It was the sort of thing her father would have done, Jacqueline reflected. Promise first, think afterwards.

Perhaps she was more like her father than she suspected.

Vincent Anthony, loving and irresponsible failure that he was, had been his daughter's outstanding trial during her more mature years. She accepted him as her particular charge when she was seventeen, the year that frail little Madge Anthony had laid down the same burden. Jacqueline was the pair's only child.

Vincent always was in quest of and about to overtake "big money." Steady work and systematic saving held no appeal for him. Let others plod if they cared to. Anthony knew he would strike it rich some day and had a ready excuse for each succeeding failure. With the fading of one dream, he was off in fresh pursuit.

It was the mother who was forced to provide most of the necessary income for herself and Jacqueline, and for Vincent when he chose to favor the small home with his presence.

"Vince"—that was the name Jacqueline bestowed upon her parent almost as soon as she was able to talk—was quite the most charming companion a child could know.

At the time the wife and mother passed unobtrusively from the family picture, Jacqueline had managed to complete a business course and was happy in her first position. Vince, harboring an idea that the motherless girl needed his care and protection, took time out to give the world some needed inventions. He always had intended to do that when he got around it. The Anthonys' living room promptly became a workshop, housing an amazing miscellany of gadgets financed from Jacqueline's meager salary.

Several years passed in this unusual situation. Jacqueline prospered, and finances became less of a problem.

The girl lived two separate lives.

One was in the world of business where she exhibited unusual proficiency, appreciated by employers.

The other life was almost entirely between the four walls of that living room where she listened with patient enthusiasm to Vince as he puttered with his contraptions.

One of his favorite pursuits was to outline a world trip they would take as a first celebration. Vince would produce an old atlas and, with Jacqueline's shining head close to his, map out routes and ports of call. This was one recreation in which the girl always was ready to join.

Vince assumed a politely injured air.

Outsiders almost never intruded in this life. The Anthony home had no room for guests. Nobody else would understand Vince. And so, all her acquaintances were made in the workaday world and remained there.

With the building of the twenty-story Raynear had come a change in the life of Jacqueline Anthony. A former employer arranged an opportunity for her to become the new hotel's public stenographer. She was highly delighted; it meant being in business for herself at last.

At that time, the serious little stenographer with the shining cinnamon-brown hair had reached the age of twenty-two. And looked eighteen.

Days in the busy and fashionable Raynear opened an entirely new vista to Jacqueline Anthony's blue eyes. Here was a small world in itself, the inhabitants of which she came to know in a quietly friendly fashion.

It was much like that round-the-world trip.

Yet it all exerted a strange and steadily growing influence; it planted seeds of revolt. Jacqueline Anthony began to appreciate more and more what her mother had endured for so many years. Growing fears assailed her. She was following the same path. Already she had missed the life enjoyed by most girls her age. A home, intimate friends, social contacts. Men had no part in her existence, save as she encountered them in business.

It was all wrong.

Then one day Vince announced blithely that one of his pet schemes had been adopted previously by a fellow inventor. He was dropping it for another project that offered infinitely greater returns and . .

"It won't be long now," he assured his daughter airily. "In six months, we'll be sailing."

"Vince . . . I've got to tell you something." And Jacqueline found herself hurriedly reciting her Declaration of Independence.

Vincent Anthony had been on trial in his own house for a quarter century. Hereafter, he might find bed and board there, but not one cent for dry batteries. The family must and would have a growing savings account. Jacqueline managed to keep her voice steady.

There was no answering outburst. Vince assumed a politely injured air. If Jacqueline wished to throw aside the leisure and riches he was about to give her . . . After all, it was about what a father might expect these days. It wasn't the first time that a genius' family had proved a stumbling block.

It was a hard task for the girl to steel her heart against this martyr complex, but she knew instinctively that she was doing the right thing. For the two of them. It was doubly hard to witness his hurt air, going about like a small boy waiting for solacing negotiations.

Three days of the new order, then Vince was missing when Jacqueline came home to prepare dinner. She was almost ready to "give in," had her father known.

On the table was a note, a note the girl deciphered through blinding tears. Vince was very sorry, but he must conduct his work in a more congenial atmosphere.

Following her first season of depression and anxiety, Jacqueline was rather ashamed to find a certain feeling of relief taking possession of her. She found a modern one-room apartment in a much more attractive part of the city and established herself there.

She planned to start life over. To really live.

A great mental uplift came from that Courtland street home. Very different from Jones street.

And business at the hotel was satisfactory, for the most part. Miss Anthony, public stenographer, gained the reputation for rapid and accurate work. Slowly but surely, she built up a local trade in addition to the hotel's transients.

Dreams seemed to be coming true at last. Even the great dream of them all was slowly taking shape. Jacqueline was saving her money with calculating intent. First, there must be something against a rainy day. And Vince. When that was attended to . . .

The crossing!

It might be the one and only trip of her life. She might spend the rest of her days paying for it. But it would be glorious and daring.

There was but one trouble. If only there were some way to speed that cash reserve in the savings bank. It was a chance remark from old Martin Jacobs that showed her the way.

Jacqueline knew very little about Mr. Jacobs, save that his occasional dictations revealed the fact that he lived somewhere out of the city. He must be wealthy.

"How would you like to make some money?" had been his unexpected question to the stenographer. "You could use it, I dare say?"

"Of course," was Jacqueline's cautious reply.

"Do you ever invest in stocks, my dear?"

"No, sir."

"I'm amazed! You're probably the only girl in the city who doesn't." Mr. Jacobs lowered his voice. "Let me give you an inside tip. Watch an industrial called Southern Furnace. Something nice is going to happen to it. Buy some shares and hold them. You'll thank me, my dear girl."

Jacqueline pondered the information; she ventured some discreet questions to Archibald Potter the first time she had an opportunity.

"So the fever has caught you, Miss Anthony?" Mr. Potter was tolerantly amused. Yes, he recalled hearing Southern Furnace mentioned favorably. It might be good for a flier. Why didn't Miss Anthony talk to Falk and Dennison. She might tell Grant Dennison that Potter sent her.

Miss Anthony did. In a spirit of grand recklessness, Jacqueline invested a goodly share of her bank account in Southern Furnace.

Mr. Jacobs was right. Southern Furnace forged slowly but surely up in price.

She purchased another modest block against Grant Dennison's lukewarm advice. It was evident that Mr. Dennison wasn't much of a gambler.

Then something happened. The whole list grew erratic. Some stocks fell sharply and Southern Furnace showed an ambition to lead the retreat.

Almost in desperation she decided to have a talk with Dennison and learn the worst. He was not in when she called.

Today, he called upon her!

The great dream suddenly had vanished into oblivion. Reduced to ash in the devouring maw of Southern Furnace.

And now, Jacqueline Anthony had gambled her future. On a wild and unheard-of throw. For what? A snatched-at security? Paying for it with herself.

Things of that sort never happened in real life. When she saw Mr. Cutter again she would find that it all had been a hoax. If only she never had to see him. She couldn't run away, though. She needed the Raynear worse than ever. She would tell Mr. Cutter . . .

What?

In some fashion, the day dragged to an end.

Feathered Fighters for U. S.

Falconry, one of the oldest of the world's sports, is to be given a try-out as a military weapon of the United States. There is little doubt that peregrine falcons, properly trained, could be used as ideal interceptors for carrier pigeons used by the enemy. To handle these feathered draftees a number of soldiers are being trained as falconers, under Lieut. Thos. MacClure. These photos were made during a falconry demonstration at the Bronx Zoo, New York.

Lieut. MacClure "gentles" (gets it accustomed to being handled) "Thunderbolt," the first falcon to join the U. S. army signal corps. Falcons are found in big cities roosting on ledges.

A keeper at the Bronx zoo is about to hood a golden eagle. The leather hood is to keep it from seeing until the falconer wants it to see. Then it is taken off.

Each day the falconer must spend an hour or so with the hooded bird on his wrist. Stout leather thongs called "Jesses" are attached to the bird's legs.

Above: Hood removed, the zoo eagle is shown in flight here. The bird is returning to the keeper's wrist. The light rope attached to the "Jesses" is to keep the bird from going after pigeons and sea gulls. Right: A closeup view of the hooded eagle. The plume in front is just an ornament.

The eagle has made his perch and is about to rest. It would be difficult to train enough eagles, even if there were enough.

RADIO BROADCAST

FROM HYDE PARK.—We drove down to New York city after lunch one day and I had a visit from Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr and Dr. James Loeb Jr., who came to ask me to speak at a meeting. They allowed me a choice of dates in October or early December. October is already so filled with obligations and December is filling up so rapidly, that I had a very hard time deciding. I finally agreed that I would try to go, if certain conditions can be met, and if no one can be found who will do a better job than I.

Then I went over to the broadcasting station and went through the usual preliminaries of photographs and rehearsals. I wish my reading time would be the same at least twice, it would save the poor people who run these programs a great deal of trouble. As a result of the broadcast, I had a most entertaining telegram which reads: "Face the fact that Communism and Democracy are not the same and see where that leaves you." It was signed: "An Isolationist."

DEFINITION OF DEMOCRACY

I must be very dull, because I thought I had made crystal clear that Communism and Democracy are not the same. I thought that I had given a fair definition of what Democracy really is! However, I am delighted to have an opportunity to say here that it seems to me that Democracy has one great advantage over Communism—it really requires the participation of every citizen in the choice of the people to fill government office.

Of course, it would be impossible to have a real democracy in a country which has not so far had, for at least two generations, free public school education and laws which protected people in their right to exercise fundamental freedoms of thought, of speech and of assembly.

Mr. and Mrs. "Isolationist," whoever you may be, facing the fact of this difference between Communism and Democracy, leaves me in just the position I was in when I made my radio speech.

ANOTHER NEW YORK TRIP

One day we caught the six o'clock plane for New York city and worked on my personal mail during an extremely smooth flight. I went home first, where I had a glimpse of Jimmie and Rommie, who were just starting out in their best bibs and tuckers to dine very gaily in celebration of her birthday.

Miss Thompson and I dined in a little restaurant on Sixtieth street near Fifth avenue, which we both like, and had a very leisurely and pleasant meal by ourselves.

The meeting called the next day by the Co-ordinator of Federal Security Services, Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, was a most inspiring occasion. It brings together not only the different agencies under that bureau, but all the other government agencies working in the area. Here were government representatives on a regional level, working out the problems which affected all their different agencies. Thereby, they accomplished results, which, if they had not met together once a month, probably would have taken weeks of correspondence finally to clear up.

In the afternoon, all the state officials joined the meeting. This meant that purely state responsibilities, and the points at which the state officials touch the federal government officials, could also become clarified because of personal contact.

In addition, Lieutenant-Governor Poletti of New York state, state co-ordinator of civilian defense activities, and Maj. Gen. Irving J. Phillipson, representing the military interests of the area, were present. It seemed to me that this was as good a co-ordinating job as I had seen accomplished anywhere in the government.

SOUTH AMERICAN FILMS

One evening the President and I, with our dinner guests, had the pleasure of seeing some new films. One is made from pictures taken during Mr. Julian Bryan's last trip to South America, and his voice gives the running comment.

Life is full of little coincidences, and I smiled when I thought that, only that morning I had read a letter which a young friend wrote from Bogota. She told most interestingly of the country and the life there and casually mentioned that they had been spending some very pleasant hours with Mr. Julian Bryan. Here I was looking at the picture made on his last trip, while he was out making pictures for a future film!

The other picture shown was done under the direction of Mr. Joseph Losey. It is a very charming picture of a nursery school in a rural area. Children are shown in all the activities that are possible in country surroundings. We see them at work and at play. The children range in age from two to seven years. It has no great significance, except that it brings the people who see it a realization of the value of the nursery school. This educational experiment is fairly new in our country. In Europe it has long been known.

Introducing The Seniors

Mary Frances Cope is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Cope. She was born in 1925 at South Champion. Mary Frances is 5 feet and 4 inches tall an weigh 125 pounds. She has blond hair and blue eyes.

Mary Frances acclaimed her nick name "Sassy" when she was very young. She is called "Sassy" almost exclusively now.

Mary Frances started to school here and attended only the first half, then she moved to California where she finished the first grade. She re-entered in the second grade. She won first place in tiny tot story telling at Colorado in the second and third grades. And she has been there for the last ten years.

When we graduated from the 7th grade Mary Frances was salutorian. She has always been an excellent student. During her ten school years here she has been awarded 8 A Honor Roll Certificates and 6 perfect attendance certificates.

During her high school career Mary Frances has rated very high socially. When she was a freshman she was treasurer. She was elected Dutchess of the FFA from her junior class. As a senior she is editor in Chief of the school paper. Mary Frances has been a member of the Choral club, two years, and is now a member of the Senior Choral Graup.

"Sassy" has been a snare drum mer in the band for five years Last year she was named as one of the five leaders of the band. Year before last she was reporter of the band, last year she was secretary and this year she is secretary and treasurer. She was a member of the pep squad one year.

Mary Frances plays base ball and basket ball. She plays guard in basketball. She is a good tennis player. She has gone to Colorado three years and Sweetwater once. We might class "Sassy" as the atheletic type because she also likes to skate swim, and dance. Her favorite sport as a spectator is football.

She has been a member of the F. H. I. three years, secretary last year and parlimentarian this year.

The Sub Deb Club of Loraine is proud to say that "Sassy" was our first president. In 1940 she was secretary of the Sub Deb Club.

Some of "Sassy's" favorites are: dish, fried chicken: day, Saturday: sport, basketball, subject, English and band, actor, George Murphy, Actress, Pricilla Lane, Movie, "I Wanted Wings", Song, "Be Honest With Me Love" (sung by Bing Crosby), Orchestra, Sammy Kay. She says she likes good swing music.

Some of her dislikes are: People who talk too much, and Bob Wells orchestra.

One of the outstanding things in Sassy's high school career was her leading role of Pamela in "Damsels in Distress" our Jr. play. She proved to be quiet an actress.

Sassy says her most embrassing moment was about three years ago a Magacian told Royal James he was thinking a bout her. Her happiest moment was when she received her senior ring.

When Mary Frances graduates from high school she plans to spend one year in Texas Tech and then enter Baylor for nurses training. We say good luck to you Mary Frances and know you will be a success, because of your sweet personality and determination.

Band News

The band sweetheart contest is well under way. Everyone is busy collecting votes for their favorite candidate. The band knows the contest will be a big success and we hope to make a lot of money, for that new bass horn is pretty expensive.

The band has a new set of bells. Nelda Jo Yarbrough has bought a set and is learning to play them. The other set of bells owned by the school is played by Melba Mahon.

The band formed a football at the Merkel game. This is the first maneuver the band has performed. We hope to learn several more by the time football season is over.

Tuesday night of last week several members of the Roscoe Plowboy band came to Loraine and attended band practice. Everyone enjoyed the practice and the two bands exchanged ideas. Mr. Don Terry directed several numbers.

JUNIOR NEWS

Well here are the Juniors again. We are all studing hard and are really dreading the six weeks test.

We elected our sweetheart candidate for the band. She is Eula Fae Anders. "Good luck to Eula Fae. We all "Know" she is going to win so everyone vote for her and help the band out. It is just a penny a vote.

The Junior Class is going to be well represented at the carnival October 25. We haven't selected our king and queen, but we have in mind who we want. There isn't much use in other classes entering because the Juniors are sure they are going to win.

The Juniors were well represented in Merkel Friday although we lost the game we enjoyed it. We are proud of Harold Johnson, a Junior making a touchdown, but he couldn't have made it without the help of the team.

We play Snyder next Friday night. We know we are going to beat them. We play the game in Loraine. Everyone come and see the "Bulldogs", beat the "Tigers".

Well, goodby, until next week.

COLORADO CITIES FACE GAS SHORTAGE AS FLOOD CUTS LINE

Denver, September 23 (A.P.)—The pressure in a gas main supplying several principal Colorado cities sank lower and lower today as workmen strove to repair a pipe line running from Northern Texas that was broken near Clayton, New Mexico, by a flood.

Homes using natural gas for heating and cooking faced the prospect of a completely exhausted supply if the workmen fail to overcome the still-flowing flood waters by noon today, Public Service Company officials said in Denver.

Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo and other cities are served by the pipe line. Industrial gas users in the three ceased operation yesterday to conserve the fuel for home consumption.

The flood severed the 22-inch main line yesterday morning when it swirled down Seneca Creek, usually a dry bed of sand, between Clayton and Mount Dora, New Mexico.

Stringing lifelines and working in tossing rowboats, repair crews began work on a six-inch auxiliary bypass around the main pipe. Its capacity, officials said, if it is possible to lay it, would suffice only if temperatures rise from the 30s and 40s, where they have hovered for two days beneath widespread rain clouds.

A standby plant, producing artificial gas, was in operation in Denver, but its capacity will not be sufficient without much warmer weather, they said.

An "Interconnected" System — the vital key to unfaltering service!

Our customers are not handicapped by the hazards of a one-line supply.

From 60 separate gas fields natural gas is moved through over 4,800 miles of INTERCONNECTED pipe line system to meet our customers' requirements. From north, east, south and west — we bring the supply through!

Modern facilities, including our many powerful compressor stations located at strategic points on the system plus an abundant supply developed through many years play an important part in meeting emergencies. But of all the facilities maintained 365 days of the year, the greatest single factor in our dependable and unfaltering service is Lone Star Gas Company's INTERCONNECTED PIPE LINE SYSTEM CAPABLE OF BRINGING GAS TO OUR CUSTOMERS FROM SIXTY SEPARATE GAS FIELDS, ACCORDING TO THE EMERGENCY.

OUR CUSTOMERS HAVE THE SECURITY OF AN INTERCONNECTED NATURAL GAS SYSTEM!

One day my uncle come riding down the road on his mule. Looking just like he had stepped out of a band box. He had on his new straw hat andhis new polka dot shirt and new suit of big smith work duds. He had even washed his feet and trimed his toe nails. Uncle hitched his mule to the fence slid off and kicked just as our dog made a grab at the seat of his pants; If uncle hadn't been so tall there sure would a been some ripping going on.

Uncle made it into the house about two inches ahead of the dog. Uncle sole purpose in his visit was to get me to go to town with him, to help him bring back his fall supply of sugar (I think, as well as I remember, that my Aunt tended the STILL for Uncle that day) Now uncle was a very wise still operator for you see he never would drink any of his own product.

After sending my little brother over to get the loan of our neighbors pants for me and two hours of hard work getting my shoes on Uncle and me were ready to start.

(Fadeout.)

About two hours later we hitched our mule in front of the court house in Walnut Ridge Arkansas.

Uncle turned to me and says. Now Joe don't you go stray off and get lost for you know that if I don't get drunk I don't know anybody around here and I can't get on that mule all by myself.

Uncle says I, don't see any use in you getting drunk. Son, says uncle, they ain't, but it ain't always what a man needs that does him good nohow Uncle hadn't been gone 30 min--utes 'till a man dressed in a conductors suit walked up to me and said that he was a law officer and that I had to move the mule out from in front of the court house.

I had heard some one make that crack about being a tax peyer and having rights, so I told him my dad was a tax payer and I had my rights.

He said, so does everyone else in the country pay taxes and no one has any rights. I told him that I knew that, then he threw in with me and sit down on the side walk with me. He told me about his nephew getting ready to run for congress, he ain't politician but he is a good inventor, you see it so happened that his nephew had invented a new device that congress claimed would increase taxes to over so many dollars per year, so seeing possibilities in the boy they suggested that he run for congress.

The boy had invented a meter device that the tax collector locks on your head two tubes connected to the meter runs to your mouth and nose there is an automatic cut off on the inside of the meter that cuts off your breath ever five hours unless you put a dime in the slot box on the meter. . . . if you run out of dimes, WELL . . . Once a week the tax collector comes around and takes the dimes out and tells you that you had better buy some new batteries for your meter. About that time I looked up the street and Uncle leaning against a lamp post and he looked like he need me to put him on the mule. So I took the mule and drove up along side uncle.

The law feller was still telling me something about his nephew and uncle was saying something about falling in a hog pen some place, the mule stepped on uncles barefoot (such language) and the cop took uncle to jail. I didn't get all that was said so me and the mule went home. I really hope that cops nephew don't get elected.

I still want some players for my next movie.

yours,
Joe (Walter Windmill) Judkins

TEXAS UNIVERSITY OFFERS SPECIAL COURESE

Austin, Texas.—To meet increased demands for Army camp surveyors, a new University of Texas defense engineering short course will be offered in surveying and map making, it was announced today.

The course will start about October 27 and run eight weeks Phil Ferguson, professor of civil engineering announced.

High school graduates with algebra and geometry credit are eligible for the course, which will qualify students for government and private defense surveying positions.

Surveying, topographic mapping, and general drafting will be included, to qualify men for both field and office work, Ferguson said.

After similar courses offered last summer at the University, A. and M. College, S. M. U., and College of Arts Industries, there was 100 per cent employment of students who finished, and this did not fill the demand, he pointed out.

Twenty enrollees will be accepted for the course, to be supervised by Leland Barclay of the University engineering faculty. To insure acceptance for the course, men interested should mail preliminary applications to the University dean of engineering at once, Ferguson said.

Three Loraine boys left Monday for El Paso to report for Army duty. The boys are Roy Lee Hock, Truman Walker and Sidney Roy Minitra.

Memzer of the Baptist Church have been repairing the parsonage getting it ready for their new pastor, Rev. Huron Polnac of Fort Worth, who will move here this week.

Mrs. R. K. Thornhill left Monday night for Dallas to buy merchandise for the store.

Ray Burns of Midland visited friends here last week end.

YOU BUY INOCULATION ON FAITH

Field tests have shown a big difference in the quality of inoculator brands on the market. You cannot see the legume bacteria you purchase. Immediate demonstration is impossible. What is the reputation and experience behind the inoculation you buy?

- NITRAGIN is the ORIGINAL LEGUME INOCULATOR, having served the farmers for over forty years. It won a GOLD MEDAL at the World's Fair, St. Louis, 1904.
- NITRAGIN is made in the most complete and modern laboratory of its kind in the world.
- NITRAGIN is the leader in its field by a big margin, NITRAGIN demand in the South has rapidly increased year after year. During the fall of 1940 the Southern shipments of NITRAGIN were for more than 45 million pounds of VETCH and WINTER PEAS. This large demand is due to many field tests carried on year after year. We prove by these tests that NITRAGIN is a good product.

Send for our booklet "Plant Legumes to Prosper," showing pictures of field tests and how NITRAGIN is made. The booklet also gives you valuable information regarding the inoculation of legumes.

If your dealer does not have NITRAGIN in stock, have him get it for you. Insist on NITRAGIN inoculation.

History in the News

Camp Cavalcade

SHADOWY figures in a cavalcade of American history—such are the men behind the names of the great army cantonments scattered all over the United States, where young Americans are learning to be soldiers in order to defend their country when the need arises.

Today thousands of soldiers from the state which sent U. S. Grant into the conflict of 1861-65 are training at a camp near Tullahoma, Tenn., which bears the name of another American military genius. Nathan Bedford Forrest (1821-1877) is remembered by most Americans as the man whose recipe for victory was "Git thar fustest with the mostest men" but more than one Union general remembered him as a "wizard of the saddle" who repeatedly outrode, outwitted or outfought them whether he had the "mostest men" or not. Despite the fact that he was uneducated and had no formal military training, his deeds won from a West Pointer and another great leader this tribute: "the most remarkable man the Civil war produced on either side."

N. B. Forrest

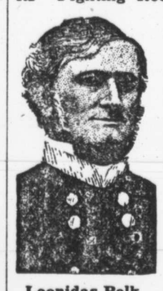

The man who paid that tribute to Forrest was William Tecumseh Sherman (1870-1891) for whom Camp Sherman near Chillicothe, Ohio, is named. It was Ohio which sent "Cump" Sherman to West Point where he learned the art and science of making war. Years later he uttered the phrase by which he is best remembered by most Americans—"War is hell!" He knew that from experience—in Mexico in 1846-47, but more particularly from 1861-65 when he was Grant's right-hand man in dealing the death blows to the Confederacy.

W. T. Sherman

One of Lee's commissioners of surrender at Appomattox was a fellow-Virginian and a militant churchman — William Nelson Pendleton (1809-1883). A graduate of West Point in the class of 1831, he resigned two years later to teach mathematics in colleges in Pennsylvania and Delaware. Then he joined the Protestant Episcopal church, was ordained a priest and was serving as rector of a church in Lexington, Va., at the outbreak of the War Between the States. Putting off his church robes to don the Confederate gray, he rose to the rank of brigadier-general and chief of artillery of the Army of Northern Virginia and at the end of the war returned to his pastoral duties in Lexington. A camp at Virginia Beach, Va., bears his name.

Virginia gave to the Confederacy its "Fighting Rector" of the Protestant Episcopal church— William Nelson Pendleton, Louisiana gave to the same cause its Protestant Episcopal bishop— Leonidas Polk (1806-1864). Born in Raleigh, N. C., Polk, who was a cousin of President James K. Polk, was graduated from West Point in 1827 and served as a second lieutenant of artillery for five months before resigning from the army to study theology. Eleven years later he became the missionary bishop of the Southwest and in 1841 he was consecrated bishop of Louisiana, a position he held for 20 years. At the outbreak of the War Between the States he was commissioned a major-general in the Confederate army. Promoted to lieutenant-general in 1862, he commanded the Department of Alabama, Mississippi and Eastern Louisiana from January to May, 1864. The next month he was killed by a cannon ball at the Battle of Pine Mountain, Ga. Because of his prominence in the religious, educational and military life of Louisiana, it was singularly appropriate that one of the largest camps, near Leesville, in that state should bear his name.

Leonidas Polk

A Pioneer in Physiology

In 1822 William Beaumont, an army surgeon, began what was to be the most important contribution to the physiology of digestion in centuries. For eight years he made a study of Alexis St. Martin, a French Canadian, who had the misfortune to have a permanent opening in his stomach due to a gunshot wound. In 1833 Beaumont published his "Experiments and Observations on the Gastric Juice and the Physiology of Digestion," which was the foundation of modern dietetics.

½ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups cornflakes

Blend shortening and sugar thoroughly. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add alternately with water and flavoring to first mixture. Stir in coarsely rolled corn flakes. Chill. Roll dough to ⅛ inch thickness. Cut with cookie cutter. Spread one round with filling, put on a second round and press edges together with a fork. Bake on a greased baking sheet in a hot (425 degrees) oven about 12 minutes.

Filling.

1½ cups chopped dates
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon orange rind

Combine all ingredients together and cook until soft paste is formed. Cool before filling cookies.

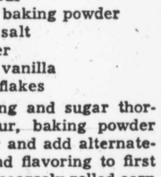

These little butter balls make good nibbling and smart additions to your teatime table. Made with butter, their flavor will be something you'll long cherish and remember.

Butter Balls.

(Makes 7 dozen small cookies)

¾ cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
1 egg
2 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup granulated sugar
½ cup finely chopped nuts

Cream brown sugar and shortening. Add beaten eggs and vanilla. Add flour and baking powder. Roll into balls the size of marbles. Mix the granulated sugar and nuts and roll the balls in the mixture. Place on a greased baking sheet and bake in a hot (400 degrees) oven 10 minutes. These cookies will flatten slightly.

LYNN SAYS:

An assortment of cookies, freshly baked and packed in tins with waxed paper between layers makes a delightful present for youngsters away at school and for friends you seldom see. When your own cookie jar has been filled to bulging, pack a few boxes from what you have and spread cheer to others, too.

Careful packing in tins with waxed paper will keep even small dainty cookies fresh for a long time. Some flavors like chocolate improve after they stand for some time. Chewy, nutty cookies are the more chewy and delicious after several days. Spicy cookies become moist and well flavored after standing.

Your cookie jar problem can be solved very neatly with toothsome oatmeal cookies with flecks of chocolate in them:

Oatmeal Cookies.

(Makes 4 dozen)

½ cup butter or shortening
1 cup brown sugar
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 egg, unbeaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sifted flour
1½ cups fine rolled oats
7 ounces chocolate pieces

Cream butter and sugar. Add orange rind, egg, vanilla and beat well. Add salt and flour which has been mixed with the oats. Add chocolate pieces and work into batter. Drop by spoonfuls on greased cookie sheet. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a moderate (375 degrees) oven.

Recommendations are in for the old favorites of which you never tire. If you want to make a pretty and at the same time, a very successful platter, you might try alternate rows of both these Ginger Cookies and Brownies:

Soft Ginger Cookies.

(Makes 5 dozen)

1 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup molasses
¾ cup evaporated milk
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon each, ginger, cinnamon

Cream sugar and shortening, add egg and molasses. Beat well, add milk and blend well. Mix dry ingredients and add to batter. Last add soda, dissolved in 2 tablespoons warm water. Drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes in a hot (375 degrees) oven.

Brownies.

(Makes 2 dozen)

½ cup butter or shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
¾ cup flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ cup chopped nuts
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat eggs and sugar together. Add to this melted butter and chocolate and blend. Add flour, baking powder, nuts, and beat well. Pour into a greased pan and bake 30 minutes in a 350-degree oven. Cool and cut in squares.

For a delicious variation of the brownie recipe, you'll like the addition of ¾ cups of bran cereal in place of the chopped nutmeats. They'll give you a slightly different flavored cookie, but guaranteed to please you, just as well.

Meat-Macaroni Casserole.

1 package macaroni
½ cup salad oil
1 pound hamburger
1 dry onion, minced
1 green pepper, minced
1 clove garlic, if desired
1 can tomato soup
2 cups peas
2 cups corn
Salt and pepper

Cook the macaroni in plenty of boiling salted water and when tender, put in a sieve and rinse with cold water. Meanwhile fry the hamburger in the heated oil, stirring it occasionally to separate it. Skim out the meat and in the same fat cook onion, pepper and garlic till tender, but not browned. Garlic may be omitted entirely, and it is usually removed after the onion and pepper are cooked. Combine all ingredients and simmer 20 to 30 minutes to heat thoroughly and blend flavors, then serve.

Lesson for October 19

THE HOLY SPIRIT OUR HELPER

LESSON TEXT—John 3:5-8; Acts 1:8; Romans 8:26-28; Galatians 5:22-26.

GOLDEN TEXT—As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.—Romans 8:14.

Nothing could be more practical or blessed for and in the life and service of the believer than an understanding of the person and work of the Holy Spirit; yet it is a subject concerning which most Christians are woefully ignorant.

Before taking up the work of the Spirit as it appears in our lesson, we should understand that the Holy Spirit is a person, not an influence which may exert itself upon a service, or a power which a man may obtain and use. He—the Spirit—is one of the Trinity, with the attributes of a person, doing the work of a person and always referred to as a person in Scripture. (When "it" is used of the Holy Spirit in the A.V. it will be found to be corrected to "him" in the R.V.)

What then does this divine person do? The work of creation was His as one of the Godhead. He regenerates, He teaches, He comforts, He leads, He calls and qualifies Christian workers, He is the divine author of the Bible. These and many other things He does, this One who indwells the believer as the ever-present Guide and Counselor. The Christian is

I. Born of the Spirit (John 3:5-8).

The new birth is indispensable to entrance into the kingdom of God. We either enter that way or we do not enter at all. Let's be clear about that. "Ye must be born again," is not the edict of a church or the plea of a preacher; it is the plain statement of our Lord Himself (v. 5).

The Holy Spirit is indispensable to regeneration. We must be born of the Spirit. How it takes place we can no more explain than the coming or going of the wind, but just as the power of the wind is known to us by clear evidence, so the regenerating power of the Spirit, mysterious though it be in operation, is known to us by the evidences of redeeming grace in a man's life.

II. Empowered by the Spirit (Acts 1:8).

Spiritual birth calls for service for Christ. For that we must have the power of the Holy Spirit. A man may do many ordinary things in the strength of his own body and mind (although even these ought always to be under the Spirit's control), but when he comes to witnessing for Christ, teaching or preaching God's Word, he must have Holy Spirit power or he is utterly ineffective.

III. Directed by the Spirit (Rom. 8:26-28).

The guidance of the Holy Spirit, especially in the matter of prayer, is stressed in these verses, but they are a part of a longer passage dealing with the indwelling, enabling, and guiding power of the Holy Spirit (read vv. 9-14). Every detail of life in the home, at business, or in social relations should be in conscious submission to His leading.

It is in the realm of the spiritual, however, that we find ourselves peculiarly infirm (v. 26), and this shows itself especially in prayer—"we know not how to pray as we ought." Then the Spirit in the Christian makes intercession. How blessed! "The practical meaning of these profound words seems to be that the divine Spirit, by His immediate influence in the saint's soul, which becomes as it were the organ of his own address to the Father, secures the rightness of the essence of the saint's prayer. To our understandings such intercessions with groanings which cannot be uttered, take the form of desires of ours, inspired and secured by Him. In any special case of prayer, the saint may or may not use words; but anywise the root-desires that underlie the prayer, being the Holy Spirit's promptings, are unutterable to the full. In the heart the Father sees below the surface of our ignorance the sacred longings which are the expression of the Spirit's influence" (H. C. G. Moule).

IV. Walking in the Spirit (Gal. 5: 22-26).

Being born again of the Spirit, living daily by the Spirit, it is right that (as v. 25 puts it) "if we live by the Spirit, let us also walk by the Spirit." The works of the flesh, horrible in their wickedness and lust, are listed in the verses preceding (vv. 19-21), and then by striking contrast we have the fruit of the Spirit in the life of the Christian. Note the distinction: Work is something we produce; fruit is something that grows.

Walking in the Spirit the Christian finds in his life the inward graces of love, joy, and peace. These then express themselves outwardly in longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and self-control. The Spirit-filled man is not only a good man; he lives a good life.

Having pulled the son Mike out of the fish pond three times in one day; dragged him twice, screaming and on fire, from a red ant bed that lures him like molasses draws flies; dug a sackful of smoking tobacco out of his mouth; picked up and carried out the litter from three new and unread magazines he'd happily reduced to confetti; watered him at midnight; changed him before daylight; and endured his ear splitting shrieks of protest to the insufferable hardships of this life.—I gradually come to understand what Papa was talking about when he used to say: "Son, you'll never pay for your raising until you've raised a young'un of your own!"

Doc McCollum claims he's learned by experience that when a man's girth reaches such proportions that its cuts off his breath to bend over and lace a shoe, it's time to quit beer and go light on your breakfast.

Just this week, I learn that the long-standing feud between Charlie Wiley and Jess Maker was settled way last November.

Bone of contention between these two hunters was the merits of their respective instruments for calling wild turkeys within gun range.

Charlie is a turkey bone man. He takes a hollow bone out of a turkeys wing, shapes it like a pipe-stem and sucks it to reproduce the gathering call of wild trukeys.

Jess, on the other hand, uses a briar leaf, cut in a rectangel and placed on the tip of his tongue in such a manner that when he blows it vibrates with the most convincing of turkey yelps.

Each claimed his caller was best. Each was loud in deriding the caller of the other.

Last November the argument had taken on such a proportions and the men such heat that they got up a $10 bet. The two were to go into the same strip of turkey haunted woods the same day and the man who came back with a turkey first was to take the pot.

They went. They hid in the brush. They called with their respective callers. They got answers to their calls. They sneaked and called and called and sneaked.

And when Charlie eased around a clump of brush, his shotgun raised to blow down a gobler, what should he see but Jess sneaking around the other side of the brush, his shotgun ready to blast a gobbler. They'd called each other up!

The two just squatted there in the brush and stared at each other for a long time, their jaws hanging open, then they came back out of the woods together and turkeyless, agreeing that they best keep silent about the whole thing.

"But it's just too good to keep any longer," Charlie explained slapping his thigh and roaring with laughter.

And I agreed with him.

Grandma Black ran right square over me yesterday morning as she rushed out of the postoffice waving a package and shouting: "I've got 'em. Praise the Lord, I've got 'em;"

"Sorry," she apoligized, after bumping into me. "Guess I'm a little excited. I've been gumming my grub and waiting for this set of teeth for over three months. Would stop and visit longer, but I'm heading for the house where I aim to scorch up a steak thick as a nigger's foot!"

Mr. T. G. Fuller, who lives south of town, was knocked unconscious by a calf a few days ago while doctoring it.
