Updated Municipal Courthouse project at $14M

Cost increase attributed to inflation; grand opening expected late 2015, early 2016

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

The city unveiled an updated design for its new Municipal Courthouse on Friday during the City Council's annual retreat. The initial cost estimate has jumped from $8 million to $14 million.

The new two-story courthouse, to be built downtown on North Baird Street between East Illinois Avenue and East Texas Avenue, will include more office space and parking than the current courthouse, which the city has outgrown. The design calls for closing a block of Baird Street in front of the courthouse entrance for parking spaces.

The city is in the process of selecting a contractor and is hoping to break ground later this year. Construction would then take a year, which puts the completion date sometime in late 2015 or early 2016.

Municipal Court Judge Robin Smith said the courthouse will have several features not typically found in municipal courthouses, such as a prosecutor's office and magistrate facilities. It is designed to last 50 years, compared to the 32 years and counting that the current building has been in operation.

Smith began his design presentation to the council and city staff by saying that the 10-year project is now in its 13th year. Inflation and failed negotiations for a location caused delays through the years.

Lack of progress prompted the city to replace the last architectural design concept, which was completed in 2010. At that time, the courthouse was going to be $8 million.

The new $14 million design, by Brinkley Sargent Architects, is an 81 percent increase in cost. Hal Sargent, president and CEO, said the original design study did not include estimates of square footage for the elevators and stairs for the second floor and budgetary estimates such as professional fees.

And inflation, one of the reasons why the project has been delayed through the Midland fire personnel respond to a fire Friday afternoon at Warrior Energy Services off Interstate 20.

Equipment catches fire at Warrior Energy

By Cale Ottens
cottens@mrt.com

A machine used in the oil field caught fire Friday morning when workers at Warrior Energy Services were cleaning it inside an industrial building on Interstate 20.

The equipment — a "gas separator," which is used to separate gas, oil and water from the ground — burst into flames around 11:30 a.m. while crews were using high-pressure water to clean it inside the building.

The building, off the north service road in the 8200 block of West I-20, is less than four miles from Midland International Airport.

Firefighters had extinguished the flames before noon, said Midland County Fire Marshal Dale Little.

Employees can work in the building, he said, but there was significant heat, smoke and water damage. There was no major structural damage or any injuries because of the fire, Little said.

All of the employees evacuated the building after the equipment caught fire. None of the surrounding industrial buildings were impacted by the fire, he said.

There isn't a lot of grass in the area, so Little said there wasn't too much concern about a wildfire breaking out, even though wildfire season is just getting started.

Midland employment declines in January

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Midland's labor market developed a case of the winter blahs, according to figures released Friday by the Texas Workforce Commission.

In its report — delayed several weeks as labor market figures were updated — the commission said Midland had an unemployment rate of 2.9 percent in January, unchanged from December and down from 3.6 percent last January. The Tall City continued its run of posting the lowest rate in Texas, followed by Odessa at 3.6 percent.

However, the commission reported that Midland lost 1,200 jobs from December to January, bringing nonfarm employment to 86,700 from 87,900 in December, but above the 82,700 reported last January.

The trade, transportation and utilities sector was the hardest hit, losing 600 jobs from December to January, followed by leisure and hospitality, with a loss of 300 jobs, and education and health services losing 200 jobs. Mining, logging and construction, which includes oil- and gas-industry-related jobs, and the professional and business services sectors lost 100 jobs each. The only industrial sector to gain jobs was government, adding 100 jobs.

For the 12 months between January 2013 and January 2014, the picture was brighter as the city added 4,000 jobs for a growth rate of 4.8 percent. Mining, logging and construction led the way with 1,900 new jobs, followed by trade, transportation and utilities with 1,200 jobs, government with 400, and financial activities and leisure and hospitality 300 jobs each. Manufacturing and other services each added 100 jobs. Education and

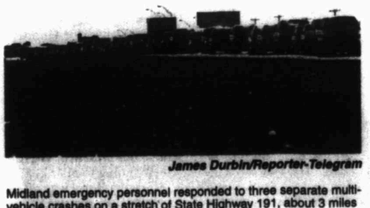
Trio of wrecks on Highway 191 snarls traffic



James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Midland emergency personnel responded to three separate multi-vehicle crashes on a stretch of State Highway 191, about 3 miles west of Loop 250, on Friday.

By Cale Ottens
cottens@mrt.com

Three separate collisions on State Highway 191 backed up dozens of vehicles Friday evening during rush hour.

Each of the three wrecks happened because drivers weren't paying attention to the flow of traffic, according to a Midland Police Department officer on the scene.

Each crash happened within about a mile of each other. The first one occurred about 3 miles west of Loop 250.

Two cars were involved in the first collision, three cars collided in the second crash and two more cars wrecked in the third crash, the officer said.

One person was transported to a local hospital with injuries that were not life-threatening, he said.

Several vehicles drove off the highway and crossed the dirt medians onto the side service roads to avoid the standstill traffic.

The officer said he doesn't encourage drivers to do that because it can cause even more accidents. A DPS trooper on the scene said that he believed the second accident, involving three vehicles, was caused because of the stop-and-go traffic and drivers trying to cross the median.

It is against the law to cross the medians on the highways. The MPD officer said there is a fine of up to $500 if a driver is caught crossing the median illegally.

Multiple cars were pulled over on the side of the service road near the scenes of each wreck. It appeared the drivers were receiving tickets from DPS troopers, but neither the DPS trooper on the scene nor the MPD officer could confirm.

Sports medicine pioneer Jobe dies at 88

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dr. Frank Jobe, a pioneering orthopedic surgeon who was the first to perform an elbow procedure that became known as Tommy John surgery and saved the careers of countless major league pitchers, died Thursday. He was 88.

Jobe died in Santa Monica after being hospitalized recently with an undisclosed illness, according to a spokesman for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Jobe performed groundbreaking elbow surgery on John, a Dodgers pitcher who had a ruptured medial collateral ligament in his left elbow. The injury previously had no solution until Jobe removed a tendon from John's forearm and repaired his elbow. John went on to pitch 14 years after the operation on Sept. 25, 1974, compiling 164 more victories without ever missing a start because of an elbow problem.

"Today I lost a GREAT friend," John tweeted.

Last year, the initial surgery and the relationship between John and Jobe was the subject of an ESPN documentary.

"When he did come back, I thought maybe we could do it on somebody else," Jobe told The Associated Press in 2010. "I waited two years to try it on somebody else, but we had no idea we could do it again."

Jobe initially estimated John's chances of returning to the majors at less than 5 percent. He later said 92 to 95 percent of patients return as good, if not better, than before the surgery.

Dr. Frank Jobe, known for the development of the historic elbow procedure known as Tommy John surgery, speaks in July 2013 as he is honored during a ceremony at Doubleday Field in Cooperstown, N.Y. Jobe, a pioneer in the field of sports medicine, died Thursday.

The surgery has since become common practice for pitchers and players at every level of baseball, including New York Mets pitcher Matt Harvey, Washington star Stephen Strasburg, San Francisco's Tim Hudson and Minnesota's Francisco Liriano.

Some pitchers have signed multiyear contracts just months after they have the surgery in expectation of a high-level return.

Typically, full rehabilitation takes about a year for pitchers and about six months for position players. The procedure initially required four hours; now it takes about an hour.

"I had no idea it would do this," Jobe told the AP. "It startles me even today that it has done that. The doctors are recognizing the condition early enough to fix it and they are learning how to do the surgery so well. They rehab it so not just the arm, but the whole body gets better."

Jobe believed the advancements would continue.

"You never want to say in medicine this is the end. You're always coming up with something a little bit different," he said. "Even with Tommy John, there's people doing things slightly different. In their minds they're getting better."

Jobe had served the Dodgers' organization for 50 years, most recently as special adviser to the chairman. The courtly Southerner attended the team's games as recently as last season, with someone on either arm escorting him.

Sixteen years after saving John's career, Jobe reconstructed the right shoulder of former Cy Young Award winner Orel Hershiser, another procedure that had never been successfully performed on a major league pitcher.

"He change my life!! Gave me back my career!!" tweeted Hershiser, a former Dodgers great. "I will miss him and I am eternally grateful!!!"

Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig saluted Jobe for revolutionizing sports medicine.

"His wisdom elevated not only the Dodgers, the franchise he served proudly for a half-century, but all of our clubs," Selig said in a statement. "Dr. Jobe's expertise, as well as his enthusiasm to mentor his peers, made the national pastime stronger."

Since 1974, Jobe had performed hundreds of Tommy John surgeries on pitchers. Jobe co-founded the Kerlan-Jobe Orthopedic Clinic along with the late Dr. Robert Kerlan in 1965. They supervised the medical treatment for the Dodgers and Angels, Los Angeles Lakers, Los Angeles Rams, the Los Angeles Kings, and Anaheim Ducks, as well as other pro and amateur athletes around the country.

Wife of longtime Yankee Yogi Berra dies at 85

NEWARK — Carmen Berra, the wife of New York Yankees great Yogi Berra, has died. She was 85.

The Yankees confirmed that she died Thursday night in New Jersey's Essex County. The team didn't say how she died.

The Berras were married in January 1949 and recently celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary.

Yogi Berra, 88, was a 10-time World Series champion with the Yankees as a catcher, had two stints as their manager and now is an unofficial team ambassador, making frequent appearances at games and other events.

"On behalf of the entire New York Yankees organization, we offer our deepest condolences to the Berra family," Yankees managing general partner Hal Steinbrenner said Friday. "Having known Yogi and Carmen for so long, it is almost impossible to imagine two people who complemented each other better than they did. We will always remember Carmen's smile and sense of humor, and her kindness and generosity will be dearly missed."

A moment of silence was held before the Yankees' spring training game Thursday night against Detroit.

"Really, really sad," Yankees manager Joe Girardi said. "Carmen happened to be the wife of one of the greatest baseball players ever. Probably the nicest lady you could ever be around. She was a sweetheart. So nice always to be in her presence. We're really going to miss her."

Carmen Berra was often seen at events at the Yogi Berra Museum & Learning Center on the campus of Montclair State University. The museum opened in the late 1990s and offers children's educational programs that focus on sportsmanship and social justice in addition to showcasing memorabilia from Yogi Berra's career.

Jobs

health services lost 200 jobs during that period and information lost 100 jobs.

"Though we've seen some job losses, they will be absorbed back into the workforce," said Willie Taylor, executive director of the Permian Basin Workforce Development Board. "You don't stay unemployed very long in the Permian Basin."

He noted that the employment trends were consistent across the 17 West Texas counties his board serves. There hasn't been a jump in first-time unemployment claims filed, he reported.

Midland's labor picture remains steady, with the mining, logging and construction and the trade, transportation and utilities sectors comprising about 50 percent of Midland's industrial composition and wages remaining stable, he said.

"We're still seeing gradual growth," Taylor said. "We know we can't continue this white-hot growth forever." He said residents may be relieved to see some moderation in the growth, giving the area the chance to update its infrastructure.

He said it appears housing is catching up with demand and growing to accommodate new residents.

"People are coming into the area," he said, praising Midland and Odessa leaders for their efforts to adopt long-range plans to handle population growth. The Midland City Council, at its annual retreat this week, said it expects Midland's population will hit 200,000 in about 14 years.

Workforce Development offices in West Texas are seeing people coming into their offices either looking for better jobs or new jobs, Taylor said.

With area schools closed for spring break, Taylor said his organization will be readying programs to help high school and college students find jobs, either summer jobs or permanent jobs while they're in school.

His agency will also be working closely with local schools and colleges on workforce training programs, he said, because it's important to "grow our own workforce."

Those efforts are beginning to take root, he said.

Growing those training programs and providing a good quality of life will help keep the area's labor market strong, Taylor said.

Across the state

Statewide, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate fell to 5.7 percent from 6 percent in December and the lowest since November 2008. The state added 33,900 seasonally adjusted nonfarm jobs for a total of 322,400 jobs added over the past 12 months.

The trade, transportation and utilities industry added the greatest number of jobs in January — 7,600 positions. This industry also reported the highest number of jobs added over the last 12 months, 77,300.

The mining and logging industry added 3,200 jobs in January, for a total of 15,800 jobs over the year and an annual growth rate of 5.6 percent — the highest among the 11 major industries in Texas.

While Midland reported the state's lowest unemployment, the highest was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission at 10.5 percent.

Police chase pregnant woman suspected of endangering a child

From staff reports

A pregnant woman who was driving with a young girl in the back seat of an SUV was arrested Thursday on suspicion of evading arrest and endangering a child.

Elishia Porshay Holloway, 22, was driving in the 300 block of Lee Street around 4:15 p.m. when Midland police officers attempted to pull her over because they recognized her from an incident on Wednesday.

Holloway

Holloway doesn't have a valid driver's license or insurance but a car-impounding company mistakenly released the vehicle on Wednesday, according to an arrest affidavit.

The officer activated his emergency lights but Holloway reportedly kept driving to avoid arrest, the report said.

Holloway didn't pull over until she reached the 300 block of Lincoln Street. She had passed through a school zone near the 1700 block of Indiana Avenue, the affidavit said.

The officer said he remembered the woman from the previous day when Holloway had mentioned she was pregnant with twins. A 1-year-old girl was sitting on the left side of the middle row of seats in the SUV, according to the document. Holloway reportedly wouldn't tell police who the little girl was.

The affidavit did not say whether the young girl was sitting in a car seat.

Holloway was arrested and charged with evading arrest, a state felony, and endangering a child, a second-degree felony. She is being held on a $25,000 bond.

If convicted Holloway could face up to two years in prison for evading arrest and an additional 20 years for endangering a child.

Fort Hood sergeant charged in prostitution ring case

Associated Press

FORT HOOD — A Fort Hood sergeant who was a coordinator of the post's sexual assault and harassment prevention program faces multiple charges after he was accused of setting up a prostitution ring involving cash-strapped female soldiers.

Sgt. 1st Class Gregory McQueen was charged Friday with 21 counts related to pandering, conspiracy, maltreatment of a subordinate, abusive sexual contact, and adultery and conduct of a nature to bring discredit to the armed forces, according to a Fort Hood statement.

An Article 32 hearing, the military equivalent of a civilian grand jury proceeding, is scheduled for March 20 and 21 at Fort Hood.

It was not clear if McQueen had an attorney Friday, Fort Hood spokesman Christopher Haug said. A home number for McQueen could not be found.

Last May, the Army said a sergeant first class was being investigated on allegations of sexual assault and possibly arranging for at least one woman to have sex for money. The Army said he was one of the coordinators of the program at Fort Hood, about 125 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

Army officials declined to release his name at the time, but two officials speaking anonymously to The Associated Press because they were not authorized to speak publicly about the case identified that soldier as McQueen, who was assigned as a coordinator of a battalion-level sexual assault prevention program at the Central Texas Army post.

years, was also a big factor of the cost increase.

"(The cost) is higher than normal because Midland's inflation rate is the highest rate in the state," Sargent said. "Midland is just experiencing an incredible boom."

Scott Dufford, at-large councilman, said he does not see the cost going down any further, because construction costs are increasing between 8 percent and 10 percent annually.

The council, upon hearing the cost, was surprised at the new figure but was supportive of funding the remaining amount from the unappropriated fund balance. The cost estimate from the 2010 design has already been allocated.

"We have to look at the future," Dufford said. "The current courthouse that we have now was designed for a population of 70,000. If we believe that we are going to continue to grow at 3 to 5 percent per year, we have to have a courthouse that is designed to handle that trend."

The site of the new courthouse is across Illinois Avenue from the Reporter-Telegram offices.

Empty house in west Midland catches fire

By Cale Ottens
cottens@mrt.com

An unoccupied house in the 3800 block of Cedar Spring Drive — near Midland Drive and Illinois Avenue — caught fire around 6:40 p.m. Friday.

It took firefighters about 15 minutes to put out the flames, according to a battalion chief at the scene.

An investigation into the cause of the fire is still ongoing, he said, but there were no utilities connected to the house, ruling out the possibility of an electrical fire.

The house had neither gas nor electricity meters connected, the battalion chief said.

The building was already in poor shape, he said. Parts of the roof were sagging, and firefighters had to lay ladders across the top of the roof for added support.

It was possible that the whole roof could have completely collapsed, he said.

There were no injuries because of the fire, and none of the surrounding homes caught fire.

Head of white supremacist gang admits guilt

The head of the white supremacist Aryan Brotherhood of Texas has pleaded guilty to a racketeering conspiracy that included murder, kidnapping and drug trafficking.

Larry Max Bryan pleaded guilty Friday before U.S. District Judge Sim Lake in Houston.

Under federal law, Bryan could be sentenced to up to life in prison. The plea agreement calls for prosecutors to recommend the 52-year-old be sentenced to no more than 25. Sentencing is set for Oct. 7.

Bryan was among nearly three dozen people allegedly affiliated with the Aryan Brotherhood who were charged in a sweeping indictment unsealed in 2012.

Dozens of defendants have been convicted in an ongoing federal investigation of the military-style gang founded in Texas prisons in the 1980s to offer protection to white inmates.

State redesigns road to save ancient oak trees

A highway bypass in Central Texas will be rerouted to save a stand of ancient oaks that were under threat of being cut down, according to state transportation officials.

The stand south of College Station includes a 500-year-old oak considered one of the oldest trees in Texas. Plans did not call for that oak to be razed, but there were concerns the development would harm it.

The Texas Department of Transportation this week decided to redesign the road, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

"This is one of those textbook examples that we are going to teach our upcoming engineers around the state that doesn't compromise safety, enables us to have an environmentally friendly solution we came to with the community and gets done in a cost-effective manner," TxDOT Deputy Director John Barton said. "This is an urban design in a rural setting, but it's the solution that works for this area."

Democrat Davis releases public-sector clients

AUSTIN — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wendy Davis has revealed her law firm's public-sector clients, which include the Fort Worth school district and Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The public-sector clients released Friday are represented by Newby Davis in Fort Worth. Davis started the firm with Brian Newby, Gov. Rick Perry's former chief of staff.

The Fort Worth state senator has been asked about her firm's clients since launching her campaign in October. She's said she needed client permission to make the list public.

It includes the Tarrant Regional Water District, the Benbrook Water Authority and North Texas Tollway Authority.

Davis spokesman Bo Delp says she's releasing the list because she believes it's the right thing to do.

The list was first obtained by the San Antonio Express-News and Houston Chronicle.

Hilderbran concedes GOP comptroller race to Hegar

Katy Sen. Glenn Hegar captured the GOP nomination for Texas comptroller on Friday when state Rep. Harvey Hilderbran conceded the race, ending the need for a runoff.

Hilderbran's decision means Hegar is now favored to become the state's chief financial officer in the November general elections. Hegar was just a few votes shy of winning more than 50 percent of the vote, and barring a victory from absentee and provisional ballots, would have faced Hilderbran again on May 27.

"Texans owe Harvey Hilderbran a great deal of gratitude for his years of public service to the state of Texas," Hegar said in a statement after Hilderbran spoke to him by phone. "Our campaign will now shift focus toward the general election."

Details emerge about Texas man charged with killing teacher

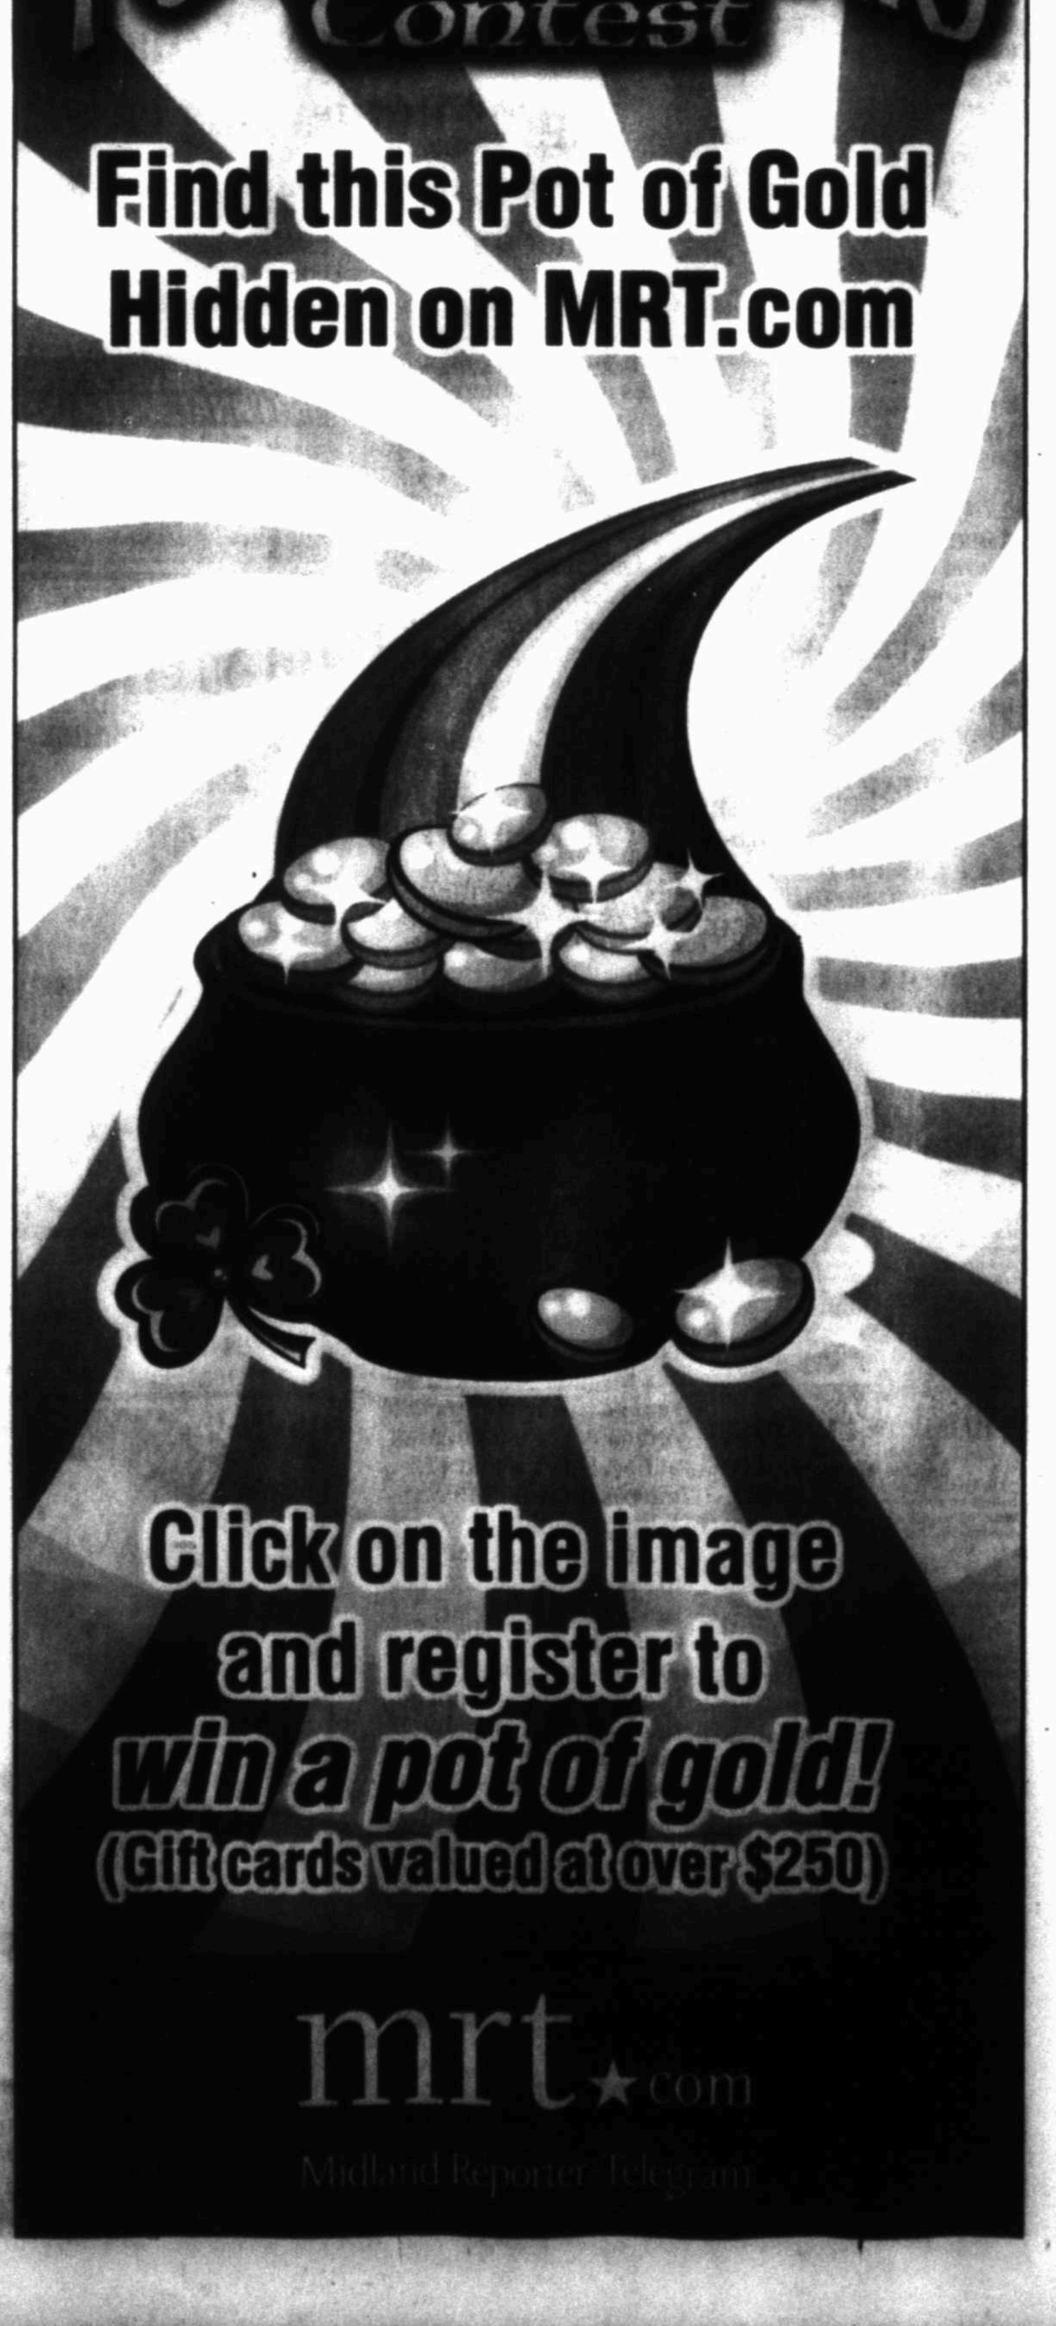
CARLSBAD — A Texas man facing charges of killing his Dallas-area teacher girlfriend in New Mexico initially claimed she disappeared after threatening to leave with a man who "treated her right," according to a newly released 911 call.

The recording released Thursday reveals that Robert Glenn Earley, 33, of Euless, initially claimed Emily Rebecca Lambert vanished when they parted at a Carlsbad bar on Sunday morning following an argument.

"She was like, 'Well this guy right here has been hitting on me, telling me you aren't treating me right and that he'll treat me right,' so I said, 'If that's what you really want,'" he tells a dispatcher.

He also told the dispatcher the 30-year-old Lambert was drunk, dressed in high heels and a "really cute" dress and didn't have her phone, ID or purse with her.

Lambert was visiting Earley, an oilfield worker, when the two argued and then got into a physical fight in a Carlsbad motel room, a police detective said in an affidavit.



Global ho-hum greets hubbub over bitcoin's creator

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Who is bitcoin's real creator? The bitcoin community is reacting to that burning question with a collective ho-hum.

Developers and bitcoin enthusiasts are downplaying the media frenzy that occurred Thursday after Newsweek identified the digital currency's creator as a Japanese American living in California, only to have the man vehemently deny it to The Associated Press.

The furor, they say, means little to bitcoin's future and whether it becomes officially recognized by the governments and the financial community as a viable form of money.

The written computer code that underpins bitcoin has changed dramatically since its inception in 2009, spawning a generation of entrepreneurs seeking to ride its growing popularity to newfound wealth.

And while most bitcoin users and investors maintain a healthy interest in learning the true identity of the person behind the cryptocurrency, they say the financial platform's maintenance and growth depends on the many creators who are working on it now.

"From an engineering perspective, Satoshi gave up control on Jan. 5, 2009, when he birthed the first bitcoin transaction," said Jeff Garzik, a member of the seven member Bitcoin Core Development Team that controls what happens to the currency's central code today. "He created an organism and he gave it life and he released it into the wild for it to do as it does."

Garzik doesn't believe Dorian Prentice Satoshi Nakamoto — the man who denied the Newsweek story — is the same "Satoshi Nakamoto" who posted the original written bitcoin proposal in 2008 and followed it up with code the following year.

Gregory Maxwell, another bitcoin core developer based in Mountain View, Calif., said he has "immense respect" for the bitcoin creator but doesn't care who it is, or what the person's motivation was.

The genius of bitcoin is it doesn't require trusting anyone at all.

"If the creator of bitcoin mattered to our ability to use it, then bitcoin has failed in its technological goals," he said.

Some bitcoin supporters are upset by the quest to identify the currency's creator because they say the sleuthing and stalking represents a blatant invasion into the privacy of a person or group that clearly wants to remain anonymous.

"Whoever created bitcoin sent it out into the wild and dropped off the face of the earth," said Will Yager, 18, a bitcoin developer who attends the University of Texas. "They always intended bitcoin to be something that transcended them. Bitcoin's function as a system does not depend on its creator's function as a person."

Thomas Grainger, a Web developer involved in the bitcoin community, said he is curious about who really created the currency but concedes that knowledge won't affect how the system works. "It will take away the mythology around him though," Grainger, 23, said.

The publicity surrounding whether the Nakamoto living in California created the currency also is likely to help raise awareness about bitcoin and prod more people to take the time to learn how it works, Grainger believes. "It's nice that a mathematical curiosity makes international news," he said.

Texas rig count up 20 this week to 864

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in Texas increased 20 this week to 864, according to a report released Friday by Houston-based oilfield services Baker Hughes. At this time last year there were 835 rigs in Texas.

The Permian Basin added 13 rigs for a total of 506. A year ago this week there were 476 rigs in the Permian Basin.

There were 222 rigs in the Eagle Ford, up one; 50 in the Granite Wash, down one; and 29 in the Barnett, down one.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. increased 23 this week to 1,792.

There were 1,443 rigs listed as searching for oil, up 13; 345 as searching for natural gas, up 10; and four as miscellaneous, unchanged.

By trajectory, there were 392 vertical drilling rigs, up one; 1,202 horizontal drilling rigs, up 21; and 198 directional drilling rigs, up one.

The top five states by rig count this week were Texas; Oklahoma with 182, up one; North Dakota with 170, up two; Louisiana with 103, up one; and New Mexico with 81, down one.

The top five basins by rig count were the Permian; the Eagle Ford; the Williston with 177, up one; the Marcellus with 77, down one; and the Mississippian with 72, up two.

In the U.S. there were 1,719 rigs listed as on land, up 23; 18 as in inland waters, unchanged; and 55 as offshore, unchanged.

The Gulf of Mexico was unchanged at 53 rigs. A year ago this week there were 1,752 rigs in the U.S.

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in Canada decreased 39 this week to 587. There were 389 rigs listed as searching for oil, down 34; 198 for natural gas, down five; and zero as miscellaneous, unchanged. At this time last year there were 580 rigs in Canada.

The total number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in North America — which includes the U.S. and Canada — dropped 16 this week to 2,379. A year ago this week there were 2,332 rigs in North America.

NEW YORK

Oil rises on solid gain in US hiring; gasoline up

The price of oil crept up to near $102 a barrel Friday after a solid increase in U.S. employment and a decline in the dollar.

Benchmark U.S. crude for April delivery rose $1.02 to close at $102.58 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. After a swing in prices earlier in the week due to the situation in Ukraine, oil ended the week with a loss of 1 cent.

Brent crude, used to set prices for international varieties of crude, gained 90 cents to $109 a barrel on the ICE Futures exchange in London.

The brutal winter weather didn't faze U.S. employers, who added 175,000 jobs, far more than the two previous months. The Labor Department said the unemployment rate rose to 6.7 percent from a five-year low of 6.6 percent, but that was because more people grew optimistic about their job prospects and began seeking work.

The dollar fell against other currencies, helping oil. A weak dollar encourages holders of other currencies to buy dollar-denominated assets such as oil.

At the gas pump, the average price for a gallon of gas across the U.S. rose 1 cent to $3.48. That's 21 cents higher than a month ago, but still 24 cents cheaper than at this time last year.

In other energy futures trading on Nymex:

- Wholesale gasoline rose 3 cents to $2.97 per gallon.
- Heating oil added 3 cents to $3.01 per gallon.
- Natural gas fell 4 cents to $4.62 per 1,000 cubic feet.

PENNSYLVANIA

Chevron pizza 'scandal' isn't one in small town

BOBTOWN — Critics are raging after an energy giant offered pizza coupons to a community near a natural gas well that exploded last month, killing a worker.

News stories, TV shows and blogs — many sarcastic or outright scornful — spread the word far and wide. "Shame on you," one person wrote about the offer by Chevron Corp. "How insulting!" said another. Comedy Central's satirical "The Colbert Report" skewered it.

But the 750 or so residents of the hamlet of Bobtown? Not one has signed an online petition demanding an apology for the pizza offer. In fact, during a recent visit, The Associated Press found the talk of the town is more the furious response by outsiders.

"We feel it was something outside groups generated," said Pete Novak, a co-director of the Polish American Club, a local gathering spot. None of the patrons has voiced outrage, he said, and residents laughed about how people who have never set foot in Bobtown claim to speak for its citizens.

Several people noted that Chevron's pizza offer was made to apologize for traffic after the fire, not to downplay the loss of life.

"I thought it was pretty decent of them," said Ray Elli, 54, who noted that the fire was about a mile outside town, on a ridge, and that people in town didn't feel threatened.

Bill Sowden, co-owner of Bobtown Pizza, the area's only restaurant, said 12 people have redeemed the coupons distributed by Chevron. The whole issue, he said, was blown out of proportion.

"We're just a food place," he said.

The outsized reaction from people not directly affected by the accident illustrates the larger passions surrounding the fracking debate. Many critics seek stricter regulations or bans to protect air and water from pollution, while supporters speak of the economic benefits for an energy-hungry nation. Each side claims the high moral ground.

About 12,000 people have signed an online petition demanding Chevron apologize, according to petition organizer Karen Feridun.

"There are a few from nearby communities, but none right from Bobtown," Feridun wrote in emails this week to the AP. She lives about 250 miles away, at the other end of Pennsylvania. The petition isn't even on public display in Bobtown, about 2 miles from the West Virginia border.

GOP pushes social issues at showcase

Associated Press

OXON HILL, Md. — Some of the GOP's most prominent conservatives insisted Friday that Republicans should emphasize hot-button social issues like abortion and gay marriage in this year's midterm elections, exposing an ideological divide within a party trying to capture the Senate and then the White House.

Former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee, a Southern Baptist pastor, set the tone early in the second day of the Conservative Political Action Conference.

"If this nation forgets our God, then God will have every right to forget us," Huckabee said to cheers. "It's time for government to scale back, not for people of faith to scale back."

The day also featured Gov. Rick Perry and former Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, who, like Huckabee, have run presidential campaigns fueled in part by support from religious voters.

But Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul, one of the final speakers of the day, represents a new generation of libertarian-minded Republicans less likely to oppose gay marriage or embrace laws allowing the government to affect people's private lives.

"There's a great battle going on. It's for the heart and soul of America," Paul told a swelling crowd, focusing on civil liberties instead of social issues.

"You may think I'm talking about electing Republicans. I'm not," he said. "I'm talking about electing lovers of liberty."

The ideological tug-of-war played out a few miles from Washington at the nation's largest annual gathering of conservative activists, where most of the prospective 2016 Republican presidential field will have taken the stage by Saturday's end of the three-day gathering.

It was an early presidential audition for a party optimistic about its chances in the November congressional elections and eager to snap its two-election mini-losing streak in presidential contests. National Republican leaders are working to expand the GOP's appeal following a disappointing 2012 election season.

The political debate over abortion shows no signs of being resolved, more than 40 years after the Supreme Court legalized the procedure in the case of Roe v. Wade. Young people today are somewhat more conservative on the issue than middle-aged Americans, but the nation is split on the deeply personal issue.

The politics of gay marriage are different. A growing number of high-profile Republicans — including Ohio Sen. Rob Portman and former Vice President Dick Cheney — have announced personal support for same-sex unions, despite a national party platform that does not. And a series of recent court rulings have found state laws that outlaw the practice may be unconstitutional.

Polls suggest that young people solidly support gay marriage, while opposition is strongest among the oldest Americans.

Last week, Republican Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer vetoed a bill adopted by the state's GOP-led Legislature that would have allowed businesses to refuse service to gays.

The 2012 elections illustrated the risks for Republican candidates who focus on social issues.

Republican Missouri Senate candidate Todd Aiken said pregnancies in cases of "legitimate rape" are rare. In Indiana, Republican Senate candidate Richard Mourdock said "even when life begins in that horrible situation of rape, that it is something that God intended to happen."

Both candidates lost, hurting the GOP's most recent drive for the Senate majority.

Santorum insisted that Republicans not abandon conservative values.

"We're told we have to put aside what we believe is in the best interests of the country so a Republican candidate can win," Santorum said. But victory on those terms would be "a devastating loss for America," he said.

Perry avoided social issues in his remarks, instead criticizing Democratic governors for leading states with higher taxes, more regulations and fewer jobs. He also suggested that Washington politicians in both parties have seized too much power and it's time to elect "the right kind of leaders."

MC rallies late but can't avoid sweep by NMJC

Midland College's Josh Narvaiz makes a throw for a double play over a sliding Preston Marsh, of New Mexico Junior College, on Friday at Christensen Stadium.

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

The Midland College baseball team hasn't gotten many breaks so far during the Western Junior College Athletic Conference portion of its schedule.

The Chaparrals finally caught one in the ninth inning of Friday's second game against New Mexico Junior College at Christensen Stadium.

A dropped third strike to begin the frame, ignited a four-run rally by MC, but it wasn't enough as the Thunderbirds held on for a 11-9 victory. That win gave NMJC a doubleheader sweep on the day as it rolled to a 9-1 victory in the first game.

With the doubleheader loss, the Chaps (9-10 overall) dropped to 0-6 in WJCAC play, while NMJC improved to 9-7 overall and 6-0 in league play.

Thunderbirds	11-9
Chaparrals	9-1

The fact that the Chaps rallied back from an 11-3 deficit in the second game encouraged MC coach David Coleman, whose team tries to salvage at least a split when the series switches to Hobbs, N.M., at 2 p.m. (CST) today.

"We needed something like that to happen," Coleman said. "We needed some tangible proof, you can only talk to them about confidence so much. I really do think making a run there in the bottom of the ninth and getting a big pinch-hit double and a grand slam — all those things are momentum boosters and builders."

The Chaps didn't make it easy on themselves in that second game as the Thunderbirds pounded out 15 hits and took an eight-run lead into the bottom of the eighth.

But MC battled back and cut it to 11-5 in the eighth when Chris Shaw hit a two-run home run to left.

Then in the bottom of the ninth, Blaine Prescott reached on a dropped third strike to leadoff the inning. The Chaps eventually loaded the bases before Caleb Koedyker (2 for 5) connected for the grand slam over the left-center field fence to cut it to 11-9 with two outs.

"I told the team that (the dropped third strike) was the first break we've

Lady Bulldogs can't get key hits in loss

Lubbock Coronado made sure Midland High was playing behind as early as possible on Friday afternoon.

The No. 2-ranked Lady Mustangs scored two runs in the top of the first inning, and from that point on the Lady Bulldogs were forced to play catch up against one of District 2-5A's best pitchers in Monique Garcia, and couldn't come up with the runs needed in a 4-1 loss on at the Audrey Gill Sports Complex.

The Lady Bulldogs managed eight hits against Garcia, but also stranded eight runners, and also couldn't score a run in the fourth when they loaded the bases with one out.

It was that kind of day for Midland High, who has now lost two straight heading into today's rivalry game with Lee at 2 p.m. at Audrey Gill.

"We had opportunities, but we didn't pull through when we needed them," Midland High coach Shawnda Vines said. "We left too many people on the base paths."

The Lady Mustangs (16-2, 3-0 in District 2-5A) struck in the opening inning when Kaitlynn Dawson slapped a two-run double to right-center field with no outs. That gave Coronado a 2-0 lead, but more importantly it gave Garcia some added confidence in the circle on the road.

Garcia scattered eight hits over seven innings, and the lone run she allowed came in the fifth when Midland High's Brittany Baggett drove in Brooke Ryan with a single to center. Ryan reached on a two-out triple to deep center field. Garcia had nine strikeouts and no walks.

"It's always stress relieving when you get a lead on a team, especially in the first inning," Garcia said. "Jumping out on them was good."

The Lady Bulldogs' best chance to put multiple runs on the board came in the fifth. Sydney Betcher and Shelby Neatherlin hit back-to-back one-out singles, and then Aubrie Elliott was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

But on the same pitch that Garcia

Greenwod's Victor Urias looks to connect for a hit Friday against Forsan at Security Bank Ballpark

Greenwood to play for 5th place

From staff reports

The Greenwood baseball team couldn't put together a comeback during its game with Forsan on Friday afternoon, and will play for fifth place in this year's West Texas March Classic.

The Rangers dropped a 4-3 decision to the Buffaloes at Security Bank Ballpark, as Greenwood (11-4) scored a pair of runs in the bottom of the seventh but couldn't pull of the victory.

Cole Dickie drove in a run with a double to left-center field in the bottom of the seventh, and then Brandon Cowan's infield single brought in Dickey. But all of that was with two outs and the Rangers couldn't keep up the momentum.

Forsan pitcher Clayton Galloway struck out Jonathan Shaw to end the game.

"The defense again gave up some runs, but the bats were asleep and that guy pitched really well," Greenwood coach Stephen Rodriguez said. "But they fought. I was proud of the way they fought back."

Rodriguez said he was pleased with his team's approach at the plate in the final inning, which helped the Rangers put some runs on the board.

Golfers struggle to find par at Doral

By Doug Ferguson
Associates Press

DORAL, Fla. — The new Doral in raging wind looked a lot like an old U.S. Open on Friday.

Matt Kuchar played out of the rough to tap-in range for birdie on the 18th hole for a 2-over 74 that allowed him to join an exclusive group at the Cadillac Championship — one of only four survivors to par.

The Blue Monster gobbled up just about everyone else.

Dustin Johnson bogeyed three of his last six holes for a 74. Patrick Reed made only two birdies in his round of 75. Hunter Mahan atoned for a triple bogey with a 4-iron into 5 feet for eagle on the eighth hole, giving him a 74. They joined Kuchar atop the leaderboard at 1-under 143.

"I felt stressed all day, because I knew every shot had 'big penalty' written all over it," Mahan said. "It was a really tough day. There wasn't an easy shot out there. One of those rounds where it could go south pretty fast, so you've got to grind it out and find a way to get a number up there and get to the weekend."

Inside

See Cadillac Championship scores.

Page 2B

Only three players broke par in the second round. No one shot in the 60s. The average score was a fraction under 76.

"I don't think I've played in conditions this difficult in the U.S.," Graeme McDowell of Northern Ireland said after a 71 that left him one shot behind. "It's an Open Championship day. It's a real Friday afternoon at St. Andrews in 2010 before they called it. It was hard out there — really, really hard."

Rory McIlroy (74), Francesco Molinari (75) and Jamie Donaldson of Wales (70) also were one behind at even-par 144.

Tiger Woods hit three balls in the water and scraped out a 73, thanks in part to a 90-foot birdie putt on the par-3 fourth hole. Phil Mickelson made back-to-back double bogeys, and then laid on his back along the bank of the fourth tee during a long wait. He got up, hit into the water and made another double bogey. Lefty shot 75.

Both were still in the mix, only six shots behind.

"It's a tough golf course as it is," Reed said. "And with how hard the wind is blowing, it made it even tougher. Almost felt like we were playing at a major today."

At times, it looked even worse.

Fist pumps were replaced by players stretching out their arm to take a penalty drop from the water — 113 balls in the water, which is everywhere on the course that Gil Hanse redesigned under the direction of new owner Donald Trump.

Trump described it as bold. It turned out to be brutal.

And just like a U.S. Open, there were plenty of complaints.

Lady Chaps get doubleheader sweep

From staff reports

Lady Chaparrals 10-6
Lady Bulldogs 0-6

CLARENDON — The Midland College softball team completed its trip to the Panhandle with a sweep of Clarendon College on Friday afternoon.

The Lady Chaps beat the Lady Bulldogs, 10-0, in a six-inning run-rule victory, and then held off Clarendon for an 8-6 victory in the second game.

Midland College improved to 14-8 overall and 3-1 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play.

In the first game, the Lady Chaps scored three runs in the first inning and then one in the fourth, but then broke the game open with six runs in the sixth.

Taylor Daniels, who drove in five runs in the two games, was 3 for 5 with three RBI, while Piliani Smith-Keopuhiwa was 2 for 2 with three of her six RBI on the day. Melissa Zuniga and Danielle Bottley each added two hits.

Shelby Weissenbach kept the Lady Bulldogs in check for the game, not only pitching the shutout but also allowing only three hits with three strikeouts and one walk.

The Lady Chaps needed to come back to win the second game. Midland College jumped out to a 4-0 lead after the first inning, but then fell behind 5-4 after the Lady Bulldogs scored a pair of runs in the third inning, and then again in the fourth inning. They took the lead with a single run in the fifth.

But in the top of the sixth, Midland College responded with four runs in the sixth to help clinch the victory.

Smith-Keopuhiwa hit a three-run home run in the win, while Daniels was 2 for 5 with two RBI. Zuniga was 3 for 5 with two RBI, and Amy Anderson finished with two hits.

Weissenbach came on in relief for the pitching victory.

Midland College will have a few days off before heading to Arizona next week for the Central Arizona Classic.

CHAPARRALS

really gotten," Coleman said. "Beginning with Frank Phillips last week and New Mexico today, I've seen some unbelievable defensive plays against us."

For the first time on the day, the Chaps' dugout came to life after the slam and it became more excited when JoJo Collazo followed with a pinch-hit double. The T-birds then went to the bullpen for Lance Cullum, who proceeded to strike out Shaw on three pitches with his sidewinder approach to end the game.

Coleman said he was a bit more pleased with the Chaps' offense, which had 13 hits in the second game, compared to the first game when they had trouble against freshman right-hander Mark Simon.

Simon allowed one run on four hits, struck out six and did not walk a batter in his complete-game victory.

"I thought he was pretty good," said Coleman of Simon. "We saw him this fall and I thought his breaking ball and slider have gotten a lot better. As much as we want to blame our team because we've lost six in a row (to start conference), to me that's the best guy we've seen this year."

Meanwhile, the NMJC offense was clicking on all cylinders on Friday afternoon as the Thunderbirds had 16 hits in the first game to go with the 15 they had in the nightcap. The T-birds also chased MC starter Thomas McIlraith after just two innings in the opening game.

"I thought their hitters were pretty good," Coleman said. "They didn't try to do too much and they didn't try to pull balls. They just had a really good plan of attack on McIlraith. They didn't chase the splitter he was getting swings on."

The Chaps will look to get their first WJCAC win today and hope that they catch a few more breaks.

"We just got to stay positive, energetic and enthusiastic," Coleman said. "We'll get out of it and the game owes some breaks down the road. If we keep playing hard and doing things right, we'll get out of it."

Olivas picks up 13 Ks in shutout win

From staff reports

SAN ANGELO — Lee pitcher Kylee Olivas recorded 13 strikeouts and the Lady Rebels pounded out 11 hits in an 8-0 District 2-5A victory against San Angelo Central on Friday afternoon.

Olivas, a senior who did not pitch last season but played in the outfield, also gave up two hits along with the shutout. Plus, she was 1-for-4 at the plate as the Lady Rebels' leadoff hitter.

"She did a great job and we had to have that here," Lee coach Wes Overton said. "This is always a tough place to play."

The Lady Rebels (9-6, 2-0 in District 2-5A) will take a two-game district winning streak into today's game at Midland High, which is scheduled for a 2 p.m. start at the Audrey Gill Sports Complex.

Lee scored a single run in the third inning to take the lead, but then broke the game open with four runs in the fifth and three in the seventh.

Ciara Sheppard was 2-for-5 with an RBI, and Kylie Herring also was 2-for-5 with an RBI. Kersten Jones was 1-for-4 with two RBI on the day. Destiny Reyes and Rosie Marquez also drove in runs for the Lady Rebels.

San Angelo Central (6-3, 2-1) will take on Amarillo Tascosa at 2 p.m. today in Amarillo.

struck out Stefani Baeza one batter later, Coronado catcher Taegan Kirk threw out Betcher at third for the final out of the inning.

Coronado added two more runs in the fifth, providing all the offense it needed.

"I didn't think we played with a whole lot of intensity and energy, but a win is a win, especially down here because it's hard to play down here," Lady Mustang coach J.J. Johnson said. "We'll certainly take it."

Baggett and Neatherlin each had two hits, while Dawson was 3 for 4 with two RBI for the Lubbock Coronado. Midland High starting pitcher Stefani Baeza gave up four runs on nine hits with two strikeouts and two walks.

Today, the Lady Bulldogs will try to break their losing streak against rival Lee, who won, 8-0, against San Angelo Central on Friday.

"We are always confident, and we always believe if there is a ballgame and we are on the field we have a chance to win," Vines said.

The William Chris Vineyard in Hye is one of more than two dozen stops on Wine Road 290 east of Fredericksburg, making the area a competitor to the Napa Valley for wine lovers. Take a few bottles home, rent a limo tour, or just grab a couple of glasses to enjoy on the property's picnic tables with the vineyards in the distance.

Taste of Texas: 5 places to eat and drink in the Texas Hill Country

By Matthew Odam
Cox Newspapers

AUSTIN — From the fertile river valley of Junction to the lakes of Marble Falls and the quiet beauty of Vanderpool, the Texas Hill Country spreads across a vast expanse that encompasses thousands of square miles.

With a swath of land so great and diverse, it's hard to pin a culinary identity to the region. When you think of the dining options in many of the small towns scattered throughout, you think of local cafes that serve coffee and pie and act as de facto community centers. You probably also think of barbecue, burger joints and fried food.

The wine country and German restaurants near Fredericksburg have helped shape some people's perceptions of the Hill County's dining and drinking scene. But the Hill Country, with its twisting roads, sparkling rivers, craggy facades and friendly faces, might surprise you with its gustatory diversity. You just have to know where to look.

I recently spent a few days tasting some of the best the Hill Country has to offer, from a brewery in Dripping Springs to a food trailer in Albert and a rare gem in Utopia that only serves meals on Saturdays. And, of course, I had to have some German food and wine.

Albert Ice House
5435 S. RM 1623. Albert. 830-644-2042, AlbertTexas.com

Stay alert as you drive to Albert. Otherwise there's a good chance you'll fly right by it. You'd be forgiven if you have to make a U-turn and circle back to the town. Calling it a town actually might be a bit misleading. Albert is basically an ice house, dance hall and home to one of my favorite food trailers.

It appears as a speck on a map, but Albert bursts with colorful character and rich history. Albert Luckenbach, whose other burg down the road gets all the attention, moved to what was then Martinsburg in the late 19th century and renamed the town Albert. Lyndon Baines Johnson attended elementary school for a year in the schoolhouse across from the dance hall.

A sign inside the dance hall, built in 1922, quotes John Steinbeck: "Texas is a state of mind. Texas is an obsession," it reads in part.

The state of mind inside the Albert Ice House is relaxed and convivial, strangers sharing cold beers and casual conversation with the familiarity and warmth on which Texans pride themselves.

Dallas native Brandon Easley bought the property in 2009. After purchasing a food truck he named the Pig Pen, Easley posted an ad on Craigslist looking for a cook. El Paso native Joseph Moreno decided the 60-plus mile drive from Austin was worth the chance to call the shots in the kitchen.

Moreno previously worked at Cherry Street and Peche in Austin. When Easley mentioned dropping bagged, frozen French fries in a fryer, Moreno balked.

"If you want someone to do that, it's not gonna be me," Moreno told Easley.

The affable Moreno brings a from-scratch ethic to his tiny trailer kitchen. Those bags of fresh russet potatoes — he slices them, fries them and buries them under local peppers and goat cheese. He quarters and roasts them to serve with a New York strip ($24) with spicy corn.

The food has become such a hit that Easley is building a bigger kitchen and making an open-air restaurant on the property.

The Laurel Tree

18956 N. FM 187. Utopia. 830-966-5444, UtopiaGourmet.com

Laurel Waters calls her once-a-week restaurant in Utopia a "guest table." She takes the term from the French phrase "table d'hote," and she comes by the name honestly.

The University of North Texas graduate, who split her childhood between Houston and Utopia, moved to Paris in 1998 to take basic cuisine classes. She left a few years later with Le Grand Diplome from the prestigious Le Cordon Bleu in Paris, and subsequently worked in three celebrated Provence restaurants.

While in France, Waters dreamed of opening a restaurant in the small town in which her parents purchased property in 1972. She built the stone house in 2004 and added an extra dining room and a greenhouse over the next several years.

The stone structure featuring a circular dovecote at one end resembles a farmhouse in Provence, but the vintage red Ford pickup out front puffs its chest in true Texan fashion.

The property behind the restaurant is home to an herb and vegetable garden, from which chef Waters culls much of the day's meal.

Waters serves a seasonal menu that changes each Saturday, and what she does not grow, she purchases each week. She doesn't worry with turning her tables at lunch or dinner, so she conforms the dining room each meal to suit the crowd that day.

Dinner recently blended Hill Country comfort (plump quail stuffed with sausage and cranberries in a seductive onion glaze) with French style (striped bass in a white wine sauce smothered in tart oranges, briny olives and the licorice snap of fennel from Waters' garden). Both entrees arrived with one of the dinner's highlights: mashed sweet potatoes packed with pungent roasted garlic and sumptuous butter.

Another stunner was a satiny and lightly curried mushroom and artichoke soup flecked with small fibrous bits of artichoke leaves.

Otto's

316 E. Austin St. Fredericksburg. 830-307-3336, OttosFBG.com

Otto's nods to the area's German settlers with a menu of contemporary takes on traditional dishes. You'll always find a variation of schnitzel at the quaint and elegant bistro one block from the shuffle and bustle of the main drag in Fredericksburg. A recent variation featured a large cut of lightly breaded and fried duck served with the slightly bitter cherry notes of a demi-glace made with kirsch (a brandy often found in fondue).

The restaurant, named after co-owner John Washburne's pet duck (don't tell Otto about that excellent schnitzel), opened in July across from the National Museum of the Pacific War. It fills up early on weekends, with a mixture of locals and wobbly folks refueling after vineyard tours.

Chef Adam Yoho (formerly of Fredericksburg's popular Navajo Grill) weds Germany and the Hill Country with cosmopolitan style. A recent charcuterie plate ($14) was highlighted by smoky venison sausage tarted with cherry mustard and paired with a dry Riesling ($11) from Ravines Wine Cellars in upstate New York. The wine, which made Wine Spectator's list of the world's top 100, is one of the few American bottles on sommelier Adem Ehmer's largely European list.

Flammkuchen, a German take on baked flat bread, makes for a perfect complement for a day of wine drinking. The flatbread was topped with buttery cambozola, nutty gruyere, garlic green pesto, sweet caramelized onions and nobs of sauteed porcini mushrooms. The joyful wine trippers I saw one night called it pizza. But it's more fun to say flammkuchen.

Twisted X Brewery

23455 W. RM 150. Dripping Springs. 512-393-9224, TexMexBeer.com

Twisted X Brewery rises from a broad expanse of land at the foot of the Texas Hill Country near Dripping Springs. The large, rust-colored structure looks like a barn. But instead of livestock, you'll find brewing and fermentation inside the 10,000-square-foot facility that will crank out 5,000 barrels of beer this year.

Out front is a covered, open-air patio populated with picnic benches cooled by a Hill Country breeze. The brewery, which opened in November, specializes in beers with a Mexican spirit and Texas soul. Partners Jim Sampson, Shane Bordeau and Ted Stewart brew four production beers that are always on tap.

The signature Twisted X lager is my favorite of the bunch, crisp with a touch of corn and a clean finish, perfect for a mellow day in the sun. The Fuego singes with the vegetal heat of jalapeno, and the Cow Creek dark lager will remind drinkers of Negra Modelo. In addition to their four regular production beers, Twisted X rotates specialty brews. Recently, they were pouring Senor Viejo, a strong imperial black lager aged in tequila barrels. You can order pints or flights ranging from four to six beers in the tasting room.

Twisted X recently expanded its hours of operation to seven days a week. Fitting the Tex-Mex theme, the brewery serves chips with its own bottled salsa. They will introduce food trucks to the property this summer and currently serve slices of pizza from nearby Hill Country Pizzeria on Friday and Saturday.

William Chris Vineyards

10352 U.S. 290, Hye. 830-998-7654, WilliamChrisWines.com

About 20 years ago there were fewer than a dozen wineries in the Hill Country. Fall Creek Vineyards in Tow and Wimberley Valley Winery helped establish the area's wine reputation in the '80s, one that grew in the '90s with the arrival of places like Becker Vineyards in Fredericksburg.

But the past decade has seen an explosion. There are more wineries in the Hill Country today — more than three dozen — than there were in the entire state just 18 years ago.

The diversity of the Hill Country soil means a variety of flavors and style.

Chris Brundrett of William Chris Vineyards speaks with the fervor of a priest and the precision of a scientist when talking about the area and its "ancient rivers lapping up against granite."

Spend a few minutes with the former high school football player and he'll tell you about river-bottom soil in Hye and the decomposed granite and sandstone found at Granite Hill Vineyards in Willow City.

That vineyard is one of many that Brundrett and his partner, William Blackmon, harvest for the dozen wines they make at their Hye winery.

"Gypsy vineyard managers," Brundrett half-jokingly calls himself and Blackmon.

The two met in 2006 through their mutual passion for wine and viticulture. They started William Chris in 2008 and opened their tasting room in an old house in 2010. They added onto the 100-year-old house last year, building a modern tasting room with a bank of windows that offers a view of their vineyard and oak grove.

Though the wine is not organic, Brundrett said they strive to manipulate it as little as possible — no synthetic tannins, no coloring. That means wine that represents the land from which it comes, and flavors that change from year to year.

"It's like tasting a little slice of Texas," Brundrett said.

Crowds fill Sixth Street during last year's South by Southwest in Austin.

Watch your party etiquette at SXSW

By Omar L. Gallaga
Cox Newspapers

AUSTIN — It's time to act right, people.

Every year, the growing number of people crowding downtown during South by Southwest Interactive brings a challenge: Can this many people mind their manners even in the face of long lines, sudden weather changes and free-flowing alcohol?

On a recent episode of the "Statesman Shots" podcast, co-host Tolly Moseley and I invited Austin American-Statesman social writer Michael Barnes to educate us on party etiquette as it applies to SXSW.

Michael, who attends backyard barbecues and exclusive galas alike on the job, often seven days a week, has seen some bad behavior. Here are some of the basics:

Don't bring your uninvited entourage. It's not OK to show up with extra people at a party when they aren't on the RSVP list. "You need to let the host know so they can plan for it," Michael said.

Things happen — sometimes a spouse or friend tags along at the last minute. If you can take the host aside or call ahead and request permission, that's one thing, but showing up at the door with your uninvited crew? Don't do it.

Don't dine and dash. During SXSW, there's an abundance of free food and drink, but it's bad form to show up, raid the buffet table and bar and leave without engaging with other guests. Even worse: Don't grab food and take it to go.

"You may not do this," Michael said. "That is foul."

Don't keep your nose in your phone and ignore everyone around you. This is a common sight at SXSW Interactive, a plague among introverts, but ignoring someone in the middle of a conversation to check Facebook (even if you're posting on Facebook about that person) is rude.

Michael, who often has to document names and take photos at parties with his phone, has an elegant solution. "There's a way around it," he said. "I ask their permission and I apologize in advance. I tell them, 'Every once in a while you say something so interesting I have to write it down.'"

As Michael said, flattery gets you everywhere.

Do RSVP, but don't feel too guilty for missing a party. This is a rule that only applies during SXSW. Ordinarily, RSVPing for a party then not showing up is bad form, but during the festival, with hundreds of events competing for attention, it's less of an issue.

"I don't feel bad saying I intend to come and not showing up" during SXSW, Michael said. "The hosts know what they're getting into."

The rest of the year, Michael tells hosts, "I hope to drop by," a good invite reply that doesn't put pressure on hosts to save a seat or dinner.

Other tips for SXSW etiquette from my own experience at Interactive:

Networking is fine, but don't be too pushy with business cards or pushing a product at parties. Talking about work is fine, but if you're not doing business, sales pitches need to be short.

Throwing your name or company affiliation around during SXSW doesn't get you very far. Yelling, "Do you know who I am?!" in any situation will only get you ridiculed on Twitter.

Ask before posting a photo or out-of-context quote from someone you're talking to on social media.

Be open and friendly to out-of-towners. Don't roll your eyes when they ask where to get cowboy boots or good barbecue.

To that end, the last word belongs to Michael, who has advice that applies to parties all year 'round: "You need to be genuinely interested in other people."

experience," said Katie Molak, whose dad, Pat Molak, bought Gruene Hall in 1975 with partner Mary Jane Nalley. "When Gruene Hall was built in 1878, it was built more as a community center, where people could come and celebrate everything from birthdays to graduations. In the interest of really continuing that legacy of a community center, we have always wanted to have all ages welcome."

On a recent Saturday afternoon at the hall, located about 45 minutes from Austin, music drifted from inside to the outdoor garden, where teenagers shot hoops and toddlers laboriously toted horseshoes across the dirt. Ice cream purchased from the general store across the street sat abandoned on picnic tables, melting into small pools of cookie dough and chocolate chip.

The 6,000-square-foot Gruene Hall hosts music every night of the week as well as throughout the day on weekends. Many of the artists who performed early at Gruene Hall went on to become major names, including George Strait, Hal Ketchum, the Eli Young Band and Gary Clark Jr.

Molak, who is 23, remembers spending weekends at the hall passing around tip jars for the bands. Some of her favorite concerts have been Willie Nelson and Ryan Bingham, and she even got to meet John Travolta when he was there filming the movie "Michael."

"It's unlike a huge concert venue in so many ways. You're right there with the artist," Molak said. "It's really an intimate experience when you see someone you really love at Gruene Hall, because you can almost interact with them. So little about the hall has changed over the past 100 years."

Another Hill Country institution that seems untouched by time is Luckenbach, which was established as a trading post in 1849 and gained popularity in part thanks to the song "Back to the Basics of Love," aka "Luckenbach, Texas," which was released in 1977 and features Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson. Trust me when I say that that song speaks to people — I once met a pair of friends at Luckenbach from Kansas who had heard the song on the radio at 6 a.m. and hopped in the car to make the 12-hour drive there, just to see it.

The good news is that Luckenbach — which also welcomes all ages at all times — doesn't disappoint. It hosts some of the most important names in Texas and country music in a laid-back, Shiner-swigging, tree-shaded atmosphere.

"I feel like it's home," said singer/songwriter Stephanie Urbina Jones, who describes her style of music as "Texicana country." "They say, 'Everybody is somebody in Luckenbach,' and they've been able to maintain that joy and that fun and that simple life out there. It's a crossroads for all great music, from the blues to folk artists to country artists to rockabilly. For me, it's a world's stage."

As a child, Jones, who grew up in Fredericksburg, spent most weekends 20 minutes away at Luckenbach. While her parents two-stepped, Jones would collect chicken eggs or camp by the cotton gin by the creek.

"My favorite things are just sitting under the tree out there and picking songs," she said. "It's that simple, laid-back, kick-off-your-boots-you're-home kind of feeling. Everybody is welcome. Everybody."

It only made sense that in 2010 when Jones released her album "The Texicana Sessions," she decided to have the release party at Luckenbach. She again returned to the Luckenbach stage recently.

"It's always been a safe and fun environment to have your kids out there all day. Kids can run around and have fun," she said. "It's like a tradition. Like some people bake Christmas cookies with their kids every year for 50 years, this is a piece of Texas heritage that we all get to pass on."

Girl is cruising for a bruising with daredevil antics

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: What can I do about a child I see in an automobile who is hanging out the window when she passes my house? The child is around 4 years oid.

Today when I saw the little girl, the only parts of her in the car were her lower legs and feet. Her mother, father and grandmother allow her to do this. It scares me because when I was a child, I fell out of a moving car, and I still have scars on my arms because of it.

I am not close to these neighbors, so can you help me with some advice? — SCARED FOR HER IN FLORIDA

DEAR SCARED FOR HER: Seat belt laws have been enacted to protect children from this kind of ignorance or negligence. Children (and adults) who fall from moving vehicles can die of their injuries, or be crippled for life.

You should report your concerns about this to the police to ensure the little girl's safety. The next time you see her hanging out the car window, immediately call 911. The dispatcher will determine which agency should be notified.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife, "Kristy," and I have been divorced for five years and she has since remarried. We have a 15-year-old daughter, "Taryn."

When it's Kristy's birthday, Mother's Day, etc., Taryn looks to me to help out with gifts for her mother. I have asked my daughter if she talks to her stepfather about this, and she says no.

I feel it isn't my duty to do this. It should be the current husband who is assigned this task. I want Taryn to be happy giving her mother a gift, but I am not comfortable with this. Am I thinking right? If so, what should I say to my daughter? — UNCERTAIN IN KENTUCKY

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Explain this to your daughter just as you have written it to me. Taryn isn't a little girl. I presume she has chores to do and earns an allowance. If she wants to give her mother a gift or a card, she should pay for it. But if she wants to spend more money for it than she has, she should ask her stepdad to chip in.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl. I find it very hard to be a teenager where I live. It seems most of my friends have boyfriends, but most of my friends have gone very far with their boyfriends. I'm too scared to. I don't feel ready for something like that.

I kind of want a boyfriend, but it's hard to find one because most guys want to go too far. I don't want to talk about this kind of stuff with my mom. I hope you get the chance to answer. — TEEN OUT WEST

DEAR TEEN: I'm sorry you can't discuss this with your mother because if you did, she could share her experience with you, and that's a valuable asset to have.

I have always advised that when people start dating, they do it in groups, which takes away a lot of the pressure of feeling you have to do anything you don't want to do. If that ever happens to you, you have the right to say "no," "stop!" "I'm not ready for that," etc. Some girls are reluctant to say it loudly and clearly, which is a big mistake. Most men understand that no means no — but if a girl doesn't state it clearly, they think it's OK to continue. If you follow this advice, your problems will be greatly minimized.

DEAR READERS: If you live in a state that observes daylight saving time, don't forget to turn your clocks forward one hour before going to bed tonight. Daylight saving time begins at 2 a.m. tomorrow.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 8, 2014:

This year you will want to spend more time at home than you have in the past. You might consider changing your home in some way, too. It is possible that you could add a home office and combine these two facets of your life. Variety appeals to you more than usual. If you are single, this trait could be reflected in your dating life. You will be ambivalent about committing. Do not force yourself to make a decision. If you are attached, add more excitement to your relationship through travel and by being more childlike. Resist making situations more complicated than they need to be. GEMINI knows how to keep life lively.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ You will be witness to a situation that suddenly allows more flexibility, as someone seems to be giving up his or her stubbornness. Be diplomatic as the pathways of communication open up. Know that they also could slam shut at any given moment. Tonight: Celebrate quietly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Be aware of your innate possessiveness, and attempt to make a situation work. You will remain on top of the matter if you can let go of the green-eyed monster. The reaction you might be drawing could become more positive as a result. Tonight: Make it your night to treat.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Remain upbeat and grab a unique opportunity. A younger person might be involved as well. Throw yourself completely into the event or happening. As a result, you will distance yourself from any immediate stresses. Tonight: Continue as you have.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★ Read between the lines. Understand what is happening with a dear friend. If this person acts enraged, it probably is because his or her feelings have been hurt. Maintain a neutral position, and be as kind as possible. Tonight: Keep the peace. How about heading to a movie?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Wherever you are, don't count on having any solitude. Being among the crowds helps you get distance from your own life. Sharp words could be expressed, but not without a basis or reason. Tonight: Only where the action is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ You might want to take the opportunity to clear the air with an older person. If he or she keeps slamming the door to this conversation, understand that you will have no choice but to accept it. Handle your funds with care. Tonight: Go off and join a loved one or friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Reach out to someone you care about who might not be readily accessible. In most situations, especially in social matters, you will have to be the proactive person and not the easygoing Libra. Use your high energy well. Tonight: Go for what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ You could be taken aback by someone's persona. This person might be coy, yet his or her actions are direct. Decide if this behavior is OK with you before you respond. Setting boundaries could be important here. Tonight: Visit a loved one at a distance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Be less fiery and more receptive in order to get the results you desire. You could experience an element of discomfort, as you tend to express yourself in a more forceful manner. You'll want the other party to feel as you do. Tonight: Let the fun begin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Someone who can pressure you effectively could be doing just that. Until you handle the issue behind this tense interaction, you will not be able to really enjoy yourself. Do what you must here. Tonight: Hang out without having expectations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You might want to understand how a situation works, but you could be so playful right now that you won't be able to get a clear indication. You might need more time than you realize to make a judgment. A call could bring out your mischievousness. Tonight: Time for some fun.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Make plans with a family member you don't often see. You could find this person more assertive than usual. Be open and aware of this part of his or her personality. A conversation might be surprising and enlightening. Tonight: Invite friends over for dessert.

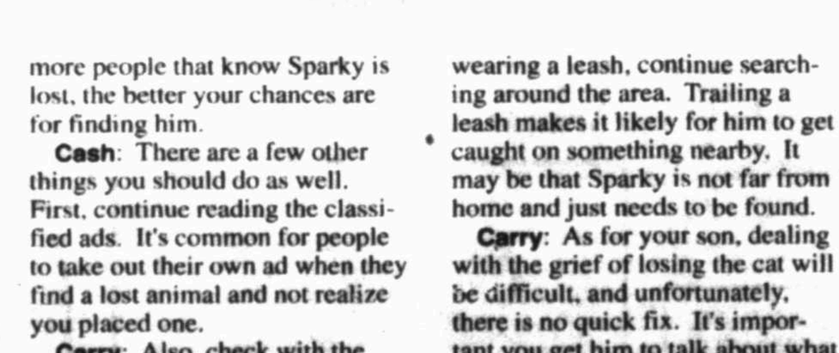
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
My husband and I are both dog lovers, but our son took to liking cats. Despite our best efforts to convert him, he always wanted a feline friend. Last year for his birthday, we broke down and gave him a cat named Sparky as a gift. Immediately, they were buddies. Although Sparky lived inside, my son would take him outside for a walk on a leash. One day while out, my son tripped on the curb and fell, accidentally letting go of the leash. By the time he picked himself up, Sparky had run off. I thought a neighbor or someone would have spotted the cat running with a leash in tow, but no one saw him. I've taken out several classified ads and posted signs around town, but no luck. This is totally devastating to our son and I'm a wreck seeing him so sad. Is there anything else you can suggest to locate Sparky or help my son cope. He's feeling very guilty about dropping the leash.

Carry: It's tragic anytime a pet is lost from its owners. You're on the right track by posting signs in the area, talking with neighbors and taking out a classified ad. The more people that know Sparky is lost, the better your chances are for finding him.

Cash: There are a few other things you should do as well. First, continue reading the classified ads. It's common for people to take out their own ad when they find a lost animal and not realize you placed one.

Carry: Also, check with the animal shelters in the area and leave them one of your flyers. Sometimes lost animals are found and brought to them. And be sure to check back frequently as they can get busy and may not recognize your cat.

Cash: Since Sparky was lost wearing a leash, continue searching around the area. Trailing a leash makes it likely for him to get caught on something nearby. It may be that Sparky is not far from home and just needs to be found.

Carry: As for your son, dealing with the grief of losing the cat will be difficult, and unfortunately, there is no quick fix. It's important you get him to talk about what happened. He needs to express his grief. Eventually, he may come to understand that accidents can happen.

Cash: And remember to never give up hope. Sometimes cats have a unique way of showing up when you least expect them.

Fast Facts

Weather Conditions

Most cat lovers agree that having a feline friend can enhance your household. However, there's much debate on whether cats should live inside or outside. According to leading animal associations, the average lifespan of an indoor cat is about 14 to 18 years. Keeping them indoors protects the animal from many diseases and dangers from other predatory animals. Although an outdoor cat can help with controlling mice, rats or other rodents, their life span averages only 3 to 5 years.

Dare to Compare

Cats and people have a lot in common. We each have a distinct look and personality. And let's face it, who doesn't enjoy a good nap in the sun? But those traits are just the beginning. We each have a unique fingerprint as well. However, a cat's "fingerprint" is on their nose! That's right. Each of the more than 75 million cats around today have ridges on their nose that make them completely unique from every other cat. The only question is: how do you get their noseprint?

Packed Tight

My friends often make fun of me for how much I keep in my purse, but I'm absolutely lost without it. That's why I was devastated when I left it on the train the other day. Fortunately, a young man called to tell me he found it.

When I went to his house, he handed me a plastic garbage bag. I could see it had my empty purse and all of it's contents loosely tossed about inside it.

Realizing I was rather upset, he quickly tried to explain, "I had to empty your purse to find your phone number." Sounding desperate, he continued, "And no matter how hard I tried, I couldn't get all of your stuff to fit back in!"

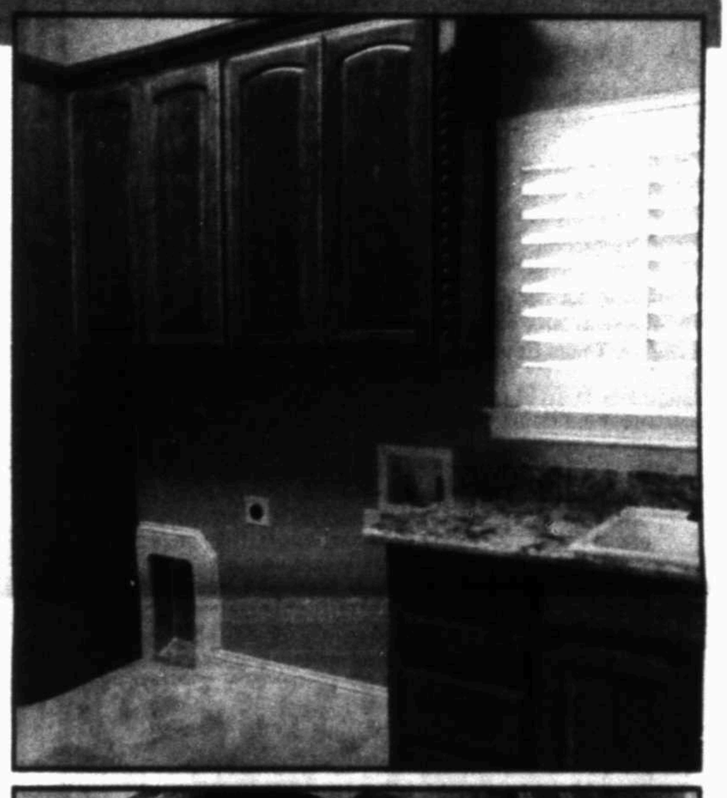
29 La Promesa Circle, Odessa, TX

Open House Sat. from 2-4

Gorgeous custom construction by Keith Antilley Homes with all the details you would expect in a fine home! Tall ceilings, architectural features for interest, oversized crown molding and baseboards, Plantation shutters, sparkling tile, carpet and wood flooring. Located just off of South Faudree Road in Vista Del Norte Subdivision, this exclusive residence is ready and waiting for you! 29 La Promesa Circle features 4,350 square feet (per plan) with five bedrooms, five full baths, two living areas, two dining areas and a four car garage. Children living here may attend Johnson Elementary School, Nimitz Jr. High and Permian High School.

The exterior is reddish-toned brick with stone accents and black trim, which combine with the iron front door for great curb appeal. As the doors open, the list of details begin. Overhead, the barrel ceiling is covered in beautiful glass tiles. A modern decorative chandelier hangs here as well as in the dining room which is to the right of the entry. Straight ahead is the formal living area with a view of the spacious covered back porch. As you entertain guests outdoors, enjoy the stone fireplace and granite hearth during the cold evenings. A slated wood ceiling adds ambiance to this space.

Arched doorways lead to each living area. To the right of the formal living area is the gourmet kitchen you have always wanted! Stunning rich cabinetry, granite countertops with a tile backsplash, stainless appliances and a corner pantry with an abundance of storage makes the perfect workspace. Overhead, a glass recessed dome ceiling is covered in glass tiles and a beautiful chandelier hangs over the center island. This is truly a dream kitchen! Dine at the nearby breakfast nook with a view of the back porch. The kitchen is open to the den where another stone fireplace add warmth to the area



This home features several sequestered bedrooms in addition to the master suite. On one side of the den is a hallway with a full bath, linen closet and a bedroom facing the front yard. All the bathrooms feature granite countertops, modern fixtures and gorgeous unique mirrors. On the other side of the den is the laundry room with a sink, granite countertop and matching cabinetry as in the kitchen. Three large closets in the hall add to the abundance of storage. Also down the hall is a full bath, as well as yet another sequestered bedroom with walk-in closet, which is perfect for in-laws or guests. Access to the four-car garage is here as well.

Your new sequestered master suite is located on the other side of the formal living area. The spacious bedroom in combination with the luxurious bathroom makes this a room to look forward to at the end of the day! The bathroom cabinetry has been built to resemble fine furniture; dual sinks and dressing areas in addition to a step-up jetted tub creates a relaxing getaway. The walk-in closet is amazing with three layers of hanging space up to the ceiling as well as built-in shelving. Two more large bedrooms with walk-in closets and two full bathrooms are located on the other side of the formal living area.

Additional amenities to this home include: reverse osmosis system, water softener, two fireplaces, sequestered bedrooms, gourmet kitchen, large living spaces and jetted tub.
