Anyone happen to remember what the film was?

MIAMI (AP) — National Airlines Flight 51 was high above the plains of Texas when a vision, of sorts, appeared in the aisle. Passengers gasped. Flight attendants stared.

Before them was a young woman. Blonde, lovely, very happy — and nude.

"She had a beautiful body," said a woman passenger who declined to give her name. "She perched on top of Row 27, guzzling champagne, and the passengers started laughing and clapping. She said she had just inherited $5 million and that's why she was doing it."

The DC-10 was midway on its trip from Miami to Los Angeles last Thursday night when the woman, described as — among other things — about 25, streaked down the aisle of the "no frills" tourist section from first-class.

Passengers told the Miami News the woman climbed over six rows of seats in the wide-body jet, whooping and waving a champagne bottle.

The woman's traveling companion, a young man, "just crawled under the seat," said a passenger. "He didn't ever go after her or anything."

The chief stewardess grabbed a blanket and went after the streaker, but the blonde eluded capture. Passengers applauded as the chase wound up and down the aisles.

After 15 minutes, the stewardess and blanket won out and the young woman was taken back to a seat, where crew members helped dress her. The pilot, Capt. Ed Mitchell, came out and tried to restore decorum. The blonde slept peacefully the rest of the way to Los Angeles.

The rest of the passengers?

"I never saw so many grins in my life," said one woman. "For the rest of the flight we just sat there and smiled."

National declined to identify the young woman but said no charges would be pressed.

"It did happen," said National spokesman Mike Clark. "It's just not part of our standard in-flight entertainment. We intend to stick to movies and stereo."

Schlesinger tells standby gasoline rationing plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A standby gasoline rationing plan that would distribute coupons on the basis of the number of cars a family or business owned was announced today by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Schlesinger told a news conference the plan would be used only in the event of a major supply disruption like the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

The standby plan, on the drawing boards for several months, was required by a 1975 law passed by Congress to deal with an energy emergency.

Under the plan, which Schlesinger said he anticipated would be sent to Congress early next year, the government would mail ration checks to motor vehicle owners every three months.

These checks, in turn, could be cashed in at banks and other financial institutions for actual ration coupons, Schlesinger said.

He said the coupons would then be required to purchase gas at service stations.

The decision on how much fuel would be allocated for each vehicle would depend on how serious the supply shortage is, the energy secretary said.

However, Schlesinger said that a cutback in petroleum products of 25 percent — which he anticipated might be the effect of another Arab embargo — would probably mean that the average automobile would be permitted two gallons per day.

Schlesinger said the plan would also permit a so-called "white market" under which motorists could obtain additional supplies of coupons by finding someone willing to sell them.

The energy secretary called the program "a form of insurance. It is not intended to be utilized except in the event of a major supply disruption."

Former President Gerald R. Ford, in one of his last acts before leaving office in January 1976, proposed a rationing plan that would allocate fuel based on the number of licensed drivers in a family.

However, that standby plan was withdrawn when President Carter took office.

Schlesinger said the new proposal would be easier to enforce than the Ford plan and would provide less opportunity for fraud.

Schlesinger said that plates are already being made to print new gas rationing coupons. He said some 5 billion coupons printed several years ago will not be used and ultimately will be destroyed.

Midlander dies in wreck

GARDEN CITY — A Midland woman and a Seminole man, both 27, were killed instantly about 4 a.m. today when their eastbound car collided head-on with a truck-tractor nine miles east of Garden City on Texas Highway 158.

Killed were Delma Ramirez, of 313 Fiesta Ave. in Midland, driver of the car, and Crecencio Hernandez of Seminole, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman said today.

They were pronounced dead by Garden City Peace Justice J.E. Wooten about two hours after the mishap.

Marvin Alfred Brown Jr., 45, of San Angelo, driver of the truck-tractor, was not injured, the spokesman said.

The car driven by Ms. Ramirez crossed into the westbound lane after she apparently fell asleep at the wheel, the spokesman said.

Both victims were thrown from the vehicle, he said.

DPS Trooper Ben Lockhart of Big Spring investigated the accident.

LATE NEWS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nissan Motor Corporation is voluntarily recalling 140,000 1977 Datsuns to repair a defective emission control component, the Environmental Protection Agency said. The defective part is the same that prompted American Motors to recall virtually its entire 1976 line and Ford Motor Co. to recall about 1.4 million cars.

Amendment to test House resolve in probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Democratic leadership decided today to turn votes on next year's appropriations for the Agriculture Department into a test of the chamber's resolve to force South Korea to cooperate with the investigation of payments to House members.

Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, told reporters he would offer an amendment to prohibit the spending of $56 million earmarked for aid to the Asian ally under the Food for Peace program.

If successful, that would be the first action and aid cut since the House passed a resolution last month to take stronger steps if South Korea continued to refuse to make available for ethics-committee questioning former ambassador Kim Dong Jo.

The former ambassador is accused of trying to pass envelopes stuffed with $100 bills to members of Congress.

The $18-billion spending bill was the first item taken up by the House today.

Less directly, another amendment will further test relations between Congress and President Carter.

Through what Secretary Bob Bergland calls "an accounting gimmick," the measure appears to be below Carter's budget requests but actually is $400 million above it for the Agriculture Department, the Food and Drug Administration and related agencies.

Carter for weeks has been telling congressional leaders and appropriations committee chairmen he intends to have "veto" on his mind when he receives spending bills above the targets he proposed, which themselves are slightly above congressional budget goals.

Rep. Clarence E. Miller, R-Ohio, had an amendment prepared to cut the appropriations across the board by 2 percent. However, even if the bill's apparent total is accepted, that would only reduce it by $364 million.

The spending authority in the bill is about $5.5 billion more than USDA has this fiscal year. Much of the increase is to pay for higher support programs enacted last fall.

Contaminated pair counting the days

WASHINGTON (AP) — A station wagon pulled up near a gleaming white jet at a Georgia Air Force base and two young men stepped out onto the tarmac. Slipping into hospital gowns and masks, they lay down on military stretchers to be carried up the ramp to the plane.

Neither man looked sick.

Aboard the Air Force hospital plane, they were placed in a special section and the air they breathed was electronically filtered before leaving the plane. When the aircraft landed an hour later, the men donned respirators and shoe covers, were loaded into an Army ambulance and whisked to a small military hospital at Fort Detrick, Md., that few people even knew existed.

They have been there for nearly two weeks.

The men live locked in separate rooms with individual changing rooms and showers, their little suites connected only by a common anteroom occupied at all times by a gowned and masked attendant.

They can't see each other but share a party-line phone and a "squawk box" they can use to communicate with their keepers and the world outside.

The two men, who work on the frontier of modern medicine, were experimenting with a deadly African virus when the top of a test tube accidentally came off and exposed the pair to lassa fever, a little-understood disease for which there is no sure treatment or cure.

On Wednesday, the 16th day after the accident, neither man had developed any of the symptoms of the disease.

They can see — but not touch — visitors through windows of darkened glass with venetian blinds.

There are color televisions in the rooms. "It's nothing but a wasteland of reruns," said one.

And they have typewriters and books, but they don't get much done. "The atmosphere isn't really conducive to work."

The telephone is their most important asset. They can talk to friends, who try to keep their spirits up.

Their food — steak, hamburger, whatever they ask for — is delivered through specially designed chambers that disinfect the empty plates and utensils as they are returned to the outside.

"In our work, we talk about risk factors, probabilities and infection rates," said one of the men, whose names were withheld at their request. "When you get infected yourself, it's difficult to think that way.

"But the constant support from friends calling on the telephone helps, so the anxieties are reduced to a minimum. They come and go during the day, but we eat well and sleep well.

"Of course, we're concerned about being sick and how it will be when it comes. Will it be severe or mild? Will it be modified by the immune plasma we

Terror suspects caught

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Four suspected West German terrorists have been captured in Bulgaria and flown to West Germany, the government said today.

It said they included escaped prisoner Till Meyer, 34, and Gabriele Rollnick, 28, suspected of taking part in Meyer's daring rescue from a West Berlin prison May 27. The two others were not immediately named.

The four were seized Tuesday by Bulgarian security forces cooperating with a special "target detection commando" of West German police, Interior Minister Gerhard Baum said.

He said they were flown to West Germany Wednesday night.

Target detection commandos are small units that track down suspects in a string of Red Army Faction assassinations, kidnappings and other violence that culminated in the slaying of top industrialist Hanns Martin Schleyer Oct. 18.

It was the third major arrest of West German terrorist suspects in recent weeks, and the second time that the arrest took place with the cooperation of Communist East European authorities.

Basin's solar types hot to trot

ODESSA — The struggle to conserve energy is expanding and getting hotter.

In at least one niche in the economy, it's a tug o' war between Odessa's hot air and Midland's hot water. And it all has to do with the sun.

It's a race to sell solar-heating systems.

"I'm a promoter. I hustle every way I can," said Odessa's Tim Rudd, who is marketing a Sol-Tra forced-air collector for Solar Southwest of Odessa.

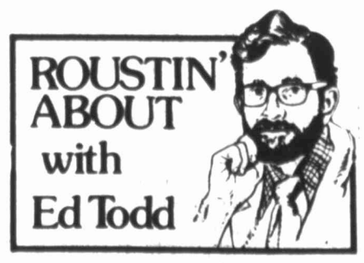

He also is peddling a hot-water plumbing system, which, in principle, goes straight to the hearts of his rivals over in Midland.

"I'd promote a dead horse if I had to," said the enthusiastic Rudd, who seemed convinced that he's got at hand the alternative heating system of the future.

Kim Huffman and Michael Milloway of Solar Innovations in Midland figure that they do, too.

"We heat water, and he (Rudd) heats air," said Milloway, a draftsman by training, and vice president of the newly-born Solar Innovations. Rudd's outfit has a 2½-year edge on SI.

Both systems use solar panels to "collect" — tap — the sun's energy.

The rivalry between the two systems probably is more imagined than real.

What promoters of both companies say they're after right now is merely educating the public to the feasibility of solar systems.

During the first part of the week, the two systems were on display in Winwood Mall in Odessa. For the rest of the week, they'll be set up in Midland's Dellwood Shopping Mall.

"The major thrust of this (exhibit) is education, to educate the public on the validity of the (solar) industry," said Milloway.

Rudd, Solar Southwest's solar adviser, said the same thing in his own way. In another century, Rudd likely would have been a top-notch drumbeater in the Old West.

One purpose of the side-by-side exhibit, he said, is to tell people that the "shyster" solar-system peddlers are being culled out of the market and that there are some credible solar drummers, such as himself, Milloway, Huffman, SI's president, and others around who just didn't "take the initiative" to get their wares on exhibit like these three did.

And Rudd, contrary to the anti-bureaucracy trend, had some kind things to say about the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD, he said, is on the side of legitimate solar-system manufacturers, sellers and installers.

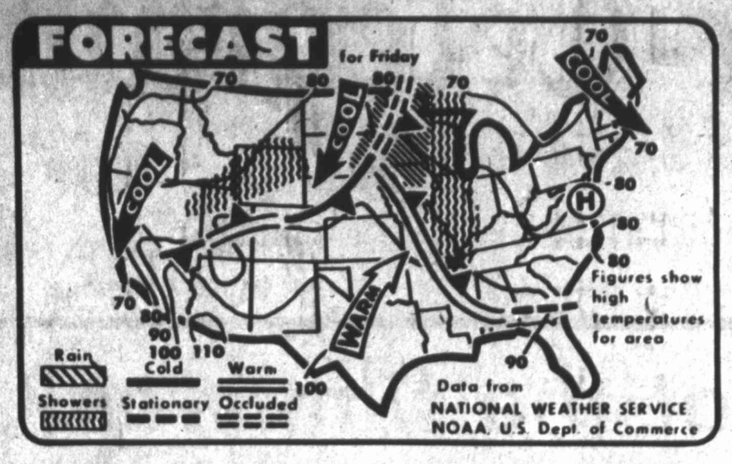

"The only good thing that HUD did was to standarize the solar industry and get all the kinks out of it," said Rudd, who basks in HUD approval. "They eliminated the fly-by-night companies."

HUD, from Rudd's viewpoint, is helping solar systems gain a trustworthy name.

"They're a pain . . . in most everything they do," said Rudd, who was decked in a pin-stripe suit that seemed to spell success, "but this

Hospital parking motion approved

By KAY HORD

The Board of Trustees of the Midland Hospital District Wednesday approved a motion that would allow the hospital to proceed with planning, financing and taking bids on the construction of a multi-level parking facility.

John Dorn, head of the building committee, told trustees a certificate of need would be necessary and that discussions Wednesday with officials in Austin indicated the certificate would be issued for a three-story building.

The facility might be of precast concrete, Dorn said. A local contractor had given the board an estimate of $850 on the parking facility, which would be located east of the hospital, Dorn said.

Dorn said that, according to a national survey, an average of 3.3 parking spaces are needed for every occupied bed. Using this average, Midland Memorial Hospital needs an additional 305 spaces to bring the present parking up to the national average, he said. Some parking will be provided if the hospital receives permission to close off Ohio Street between Garfield and N streets, Dorn said.

Dorn estimated that the parking might be available by June 1979, but trustees board President Mickey Capadonna estimated that bids would not be taken before March 1979.

Revenue bonds have been suggested as one means of paying for the multi-level parking facility, but the Finance Committee still is studying the matter, Capadonna said.

"They are confident that we can finance it without another election, but if an election is necessary, then I think we ought to face our people with it. Parking is one of the most serious problems facing this hospital," he said.

In other business, the board discussed past shortages in personnel, especially in the operating room.

Capadonna told trustees that, in the near future, they might be asked to approve six operating teams, rather than the four now available. "We might need to go ahead and begin training these people," he said.

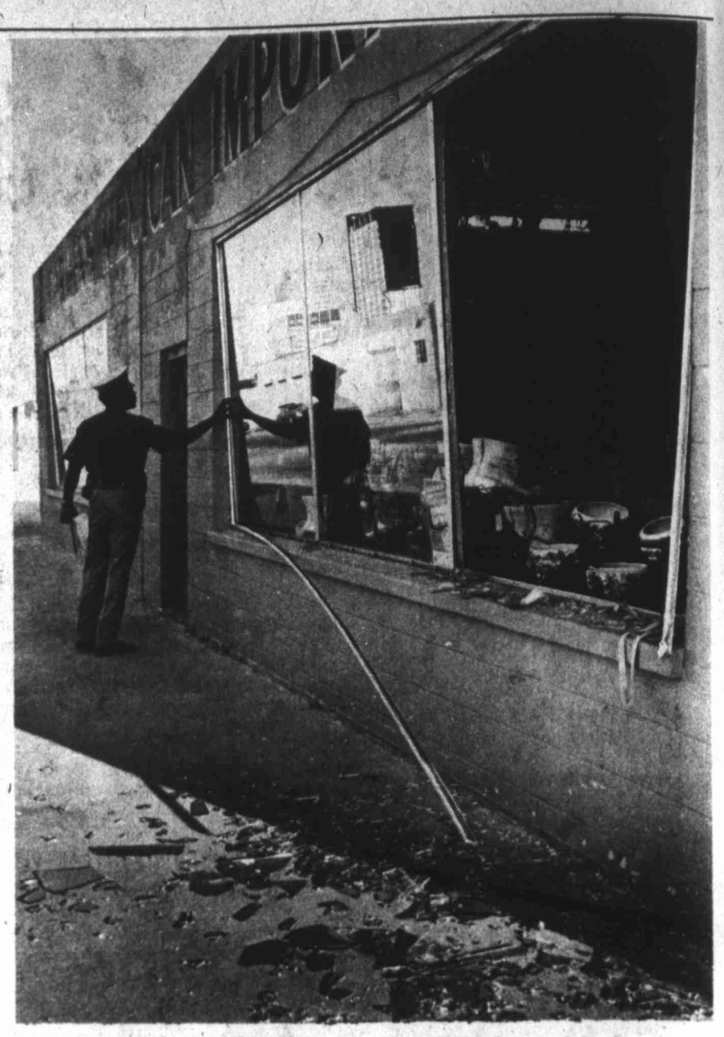

Other efforts to avoid future personnel shortages include six-month estimates of personnel and services needed and a survey of hospital department heads on personnel projections when construction on the hospital is completed.

Trustees also discussed the purchase of monitoring equipment to be used in the critical care unit. A spokesman for the hospital said the equipment will be purchased with a gift from an anonymous donor.

The operations committee offered a recommendation to the board that the hospital pharmacy remain on its established hours. It had been suggested earlier that the pharmacy remain open 24 hours a day, but Tevis Herd, chairman of the operations committee, said a survey of local pharmacies had been conducted.

"All of the pharmacies contacted but one indicated they would provide emergency pharmaceutical services on a 24-hour basis, and it was their opinion that customers would continue to use their usual pharmacy," he said.

Other discussion by the trustees included purchasing plaques recognizing donors to the hospital.

Cargo of gold, silver found intact

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (AP) — After abandoning an all-night stakeout, state police opened a hijacked tractor-trailer today and found its cargo of $1.6 million in gold and silver intact.

Two armed, masked men hijacked the truck early Wednesday on I-95 in North Stonington, chaining the driver to a tree. The driver, who was alone, was not injured. The truck was found about seven hours after the hijacking.

Hoping the hijackers would return for the loot, police kept the truck under surveillance until early this morning. The stakeout was abandoned after word leaked out that the truck had been found.

There was no explanation why the hijackers apparently made no attempt to open the truck. A seal on the door had not been broken.

With a massive air and land search, police located the truck at 1 p.m. about 10 miles from the hijack site Wednesday. It was partially hidden in a heavily overgrown area, State Trooper John McLeod said.

The hijack occurred at 6 a.m. Wednesday when the truck driver, George A. Smith, had stopped to check an unspecified possible defect. Two masked men armed with guns forced him out of the truck and tied him to a tree, police said. He freed himself and called police after 15 minutes, officials said.

TheQhaul of unrefined gold and silver was traveling from a Handy & Harmon plant in Fairfield to the company's refinery in Attleboro, Mass.

Handy & Harman makes daily shipments of precious metals between the two locations, said Richard Daniel, company vice president. The firm is the largest single producer of silver in the United States and the primary fabricator of silver and gold, heTsaid.

There was no security guard traveling with the 4,000-pound shipment, authorities said. But Stephen Mudd, the treasurer of Handy & Harman, said the company has an extensive security system that had "been circumvented in some manner."

Joseph Yablonski, an assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Boston office, said "The mechanics involved (in the hijack) are no slicker than taking a truckload of Coca-Cola."

Daniel said if it became clear that security procedures for the daily shipment have been compromised, they will be revised.

Hospital district director part of 'corporation'

By LINDA HILL

Midland County Hospital District Director Dr. Michael Burleson is one of five physicians seeking to purchase Parkview Hospital, The Reporter-Telegram has learned.

The hospital district is the governing body for Midland Memorial Hospital.

Burleson said Wednesday he joined four other physicians in January to form a corporation which is seeking to purchase the 60-bed private hospital.

The other four physicians, all officers of the corporation are Dr. Ernest F. Vernezobre, Dr. Viola Coleman, Dr. Jack Walton and Dr. Albert Courtney. Vernezobre said he expects the number of physicians who are shareholders to increase to 10 eventually.

The corporation, named "Gaddisons" after the doctor in Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, is seeking Securities and Exchange Commission approval to buy the facility from Pell Industries, headquartered in New York.

Vernezobre said Wednesday approval of the sale is expected in July.

Burleson told The Reporter-Telegram that the five doctors agreed to try to buy the hospital in an effort to save the 60 hospital beds for the community. "A lot of us were afraid last winter that the thing would go under and we would lose those 60 beds," he said.

But, Burleson said, since becoming a hospital district director in April, he is "staying out of the action" at Parkview. He said he is not directly involved in management decisions concerning the private facility.

That the sale is pending would make it difficult for him to withdraw financially from the hospital corporation, Burleson said. "The situation is in limbo, and I'm just trying to stay out of the limelight, in the background, and tend to the other (hospital district) business."

"I can't be involved in both of them (the hospitals) directly," he said. But, he added, "I really can't afford to withdraw my financial support from that group under the circumstances."

Burleson declined to say how much money he has invested in the private corporation. "I don't think that would be right. That's kind of a personal thing," he said.

Asked whether he intends to sell his stock if the opportunity arises, Burleson said, "I haven't really thought about it."

The physician said he does not consider his investment in Gaddisons as a conflict of interest. "Everybody knows about it. The only way it could have any adverse effect on my involvement in the district board is if I'm a small and petty person and I have small and petty motives."

He said he has discussed his involvement with Parkview with the other district directors.

"I know that I have some political adversaries that would like to make hay over this," he said. But, it would be "a shame" to have the situation decrease chances of cooperation between the two hospitals, he said.

Hospital District Director Frank Cowden Jr.today said he was aware of Burleson's involvement with Parkview.

"I think we will just have to wait and see (if the interest in the two hospitals creates a conflict of interest). I think it can work out fine for him to do that if he handles his business like he should, but I think we will just have to wait and see," Cowden said.

Burleson said Wednesday his motivation is to provide Midland with as much hospital service as possible. His hope, he said, is to have Parkview develop "really good quality" facilities.

were given (from patients who recovered)?

"But we can be more objective because we know the disease. We're not filled with a blind terror."

Officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, where the accident occurred, said they have reason to hope the danger is over.

"They're past the usual incubation period," said Dr. John H. Richardson, the center's safety officer. "They're probably out of the woods."

But the disease was discovered only recently, leaving scientists wondering just how much they know about its behavior. So they're taking no chances.

This weekend, officials said, they'll decide when to open the doors.

Doctors discover spleen capable of regeneration

BOSTON (AP) — In what researchers say is the only known instance of the body regenerating a major organ, doctors have found that the spleen will often grow back after it has been removed from children who suffered internal injuries.

Until now, researchers had thought that regrowth of the spleen, a bacteria-fighting organ, was extremely rare.

In a study at Yale University Medical School in New Haven, Conn., doctors examined 22 children whose spleens had been removed because of damage suffered in car accidents and other mishaps. Blood tests showed that 13 of the youngsters had grown new, miniature spleens.

The researchers theorized that the new organs were performing their primary function of filtering bacteria from the blood. This is especially important in young children, who have not built up immunity to many diseases.

Short courses slated Monday

Three short courses of special interest to women will be offered by Midland College starting Monday, according to a spokesman for the college. Pre-registration is on Monday and Tuesday from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A Typing Brush-Up class will meet Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays to teach typing techniques and tabulation. This class also will work to familiarize students with electric machines, keyboards and machine parts, the spokesman said.

The basics of cake decorating, including flowers, borders and pipings will be explained in Cake Decorating I. Students will not be required to bake cakes for the class, which will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays. The course is limited to 25 students.

Powder Puff Mechanics, an introductory course in "getting to know your car," will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays. While the subject is geared mainly toward women, it also is useful for teenagers, the spokesman said. A full range of car terminology, routines for care and maintenance, and instruction on minor repairs will be taught.

More information may be obtained by telephoning 684-7851, extension 147.

Sidewalk parade slated July 4

The Col. Theunis Dey Chapter of the Daughters of American Revolution is sponsoring the 16th annual sidewalk parade July 4 in Wadley-Barron Park at Cuthbert Avenue and North A Street.

Each participant must be on a pedal-driven vehicle or pulling a sidewalk vehicle with a person in it, according to Mrs. James "Doc" Dodson, with the organization.

Four categories are open for children, and they will register in the age group they were in when school was out in May. The categories are pre-school, ages 0-5 and includes kindergartners; grades 1-3; grades 4-6, and a miscellaneous group which will include children past the sixth grade and family groups.

Mrs. Dodson said ribbons will be given in each category for first, second, third place and honorable mention. Judging will be based on originality, work and effort, colorfulness, decoration and how it represents July 4.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. July 4 at the corner of Harvard Avenue and North A Street, Mrs. Dodson said. The parade will start at 10 a.m., and the winners will be announced shortly after the parade has ended, she said.

Jaycee group ends national, state ties

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Jaycees have withdrawn from the United States Jaycees because the national organization will not admit women members.

The 350-member Chicago chapter severed its national and state ties Wednesday after delegates to the national Jaycees convention in Atlantic City, N.J., voted to keep male-only membership rules.

A proposed change in Jaycee bylaws which would have permitted women members at the option of state Jaycee chapters was defeated in a voice vote of some 7,000 delegates at the convention.

"The United States Jaycees has shown itself to be an organization that preaches humanity while practicing hypocrisy," said Chicago Jaycee President Joseph K. Lunn in a letter to U.S. Jaycee President Robert Rushton of Tulsa, Okla.

The proposal defeated at the national convention would have allowed state Jaycee organizations to decide whether to allow women as members.

Members of the Chicago chapter voted 115-8 more than a month ago to withdraw from the U.S. Jaycees if the national convention turned down the proposed bylaw change. About 100 of the Chicago Jaycees are women, according to Yvette M. LeGrand, chapter vice president

Wednesday's vote in Atlantic City was the second veto of women's membership. The first was at the 1975 convention in Miami.

The U.S. Jaycees are one of six national Jaycee groups that retain a male-only rule. Women are allowed in Jaycees in 78 countries, Ms. Le Grand said Wednesday.

In his withdrawal letter, Lunn said, "Without the efforts of men and women working together, our ability to serve Chicago and to train the city's future leaders would be severely diminished."

Temperatures near 100 expected again Friday

Friday is expected to once again bring temperatures nearing 100 degrees, with hot, dry winds continuing to blow, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said.

The weatherman said it should be fair and hot this afternoon and Friday and fair and hot tonight. The low tonight should be near 70. Winds tonight should be 15 to 20 mph, calming from 15 to 25 mph and gusty today.

Area towns reported clear and hot weather this morning.

Wednesday's high temperature was 96 degrees, the weatherman said. The overnight low was 71. The record high for June 21 is 107 degrees set in 1934. The record low for today is 60 degrees set in 1973.

Widely scattered thundershowers were expected in extreme Southeast Texas today, but most of the state expected continued mostly clear skies and hot temperatures.

Some isolated thunderstorms erupted during the night in West Texas and along the Red River in Northeast Texas, but the remainder of the state had clear skies. The thunderstorm activity died out before dawn.

Forecasts called for mostly clear skies and continued hot temperature readings statewide.

(HUD) is the only thing that has taken the solar industry and made it legitimate."

Both rival company spokesmen agreed that their systems are, depending on the situation and viewpoint, either the mainstay of a house-and-building heating system or the back-up system in a dwelling heated by gas-, electricity- or fuel oil-fed system.

At any rate, a solar system can cut down on utility costs by as much as 60 percent or more, said Rudd.

"It can be higher, and it can be lower."

Milloway said about the same.

"If you know how to use it, it can be 'free' during the day."

Still, Rudd, always the promoter, said his system is best, basically because it's more efficient to heat air than water.

Anyway, he said, "The water in Odessa will eat the fool out of anything; it'll eat the pipes out."

Milloway, who's not yet so aggressive and admittedly is an apprentice in selling and marketing, is more of a technician.

"I install this thing (the system). I'm not a seller."

Help for facially disfigured patients may come from Hollywood makeup artist

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Researchers looking for more lifelike artificial facial parts for disfigured patients have turned to Hollywood's Dick Smith, the makeup maestro who transformed Dustin Hoffman into a 121-year-old man in the movie "Little Big Man."

"We just don't have the perfect prosthesis. I hope that by exposure to someone who has created the perfect disguise, we might be able to develop something," said Dr. Steve Parel.

Parel, head of the Division of Maxillofacial Prosthetics at The University of Texas Health Science Center, invited Smith to the center here, where he is conducting a two-day symposium on his makeup techniques.

Artificial facial parts are created for patients disfigured by birth defects, accident or cancer and who cannot undergo plastic surgery to rebuild their features with living tissue.

But these devices, usually constructed from rigid, silicone-based material, do not blend well with surrounding skin, seldom produce an exact color match and are not pliable enough to appear truly fleshlike.

"The drawback of the traditional approach is that by trying to attain durability, you limit the realism," said Smith, who created the makeup for "The Godfather," "The Exorcist" and other movies and television shows.

"I can do it very easily with foam latex, but it would last only a day," he added. "The crazy thought I have is that maybe in some of the extreme and difficult cases, the individual himself might be taught to make his own applications daily or that they might be mass-produced so that they could be worn one day and thrown away."

For "Little Big Man," Smith molded foam latex into realistic facial portions that covered Hoffman's entire head, tranforming the actor into a stooped, bald, wrinkled old man.

That makeup took three months to develop, Smith said, and required five hours to apply each day.

But Smith said he thinks the application of one facial part — a nose, for example — could be simplified to where the disfigured patient could do it himself in about an hour.

"I don't honestly know if what I'm proposing would be practical. I'm thinking more of a young patient who has been terribly disfigured, but who would still have the dexterity and desire to apply it," said Smith. "All of this is just in the very beginning thinking stage. It would take a lot of work to develop it."

Parel, however, is encouraged by the idea. He thought of inviting Smith to the symposium after his 9-year-old son bought a Smith-designed gorilla makeup kit with molded facial parts simple enough for a child to apply.

"Just from what I've seen today, I intend to try some of this on a trial basis," remarked Parel. "It has realistic possibilities for the right patients. It's a little far afield, but it has some definite applications."

School district ordered to provide education for handicapped youth

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An emotionally handicapped child has a right to a free and appropriate education that allows him as much contact as possible with his non-handicapped peers, according to a ruling by a federal judge which is expected to have far-reaching effects.

In a preliminary injunction Wednesday U.S. District Court Judge Finis Cowan ordered the Friendswood Independent School District to provide an education for a 16-year-old youth expelled from school for behavioral problems in 1977. In their suit against the district, the youth's parents claimed his behavior was attributable to his emotional disorder.

In keeping with recent federal legislation on the rights of handicapped persons, Cowan ordered the district to evaluate the youth, named only as Douglas S. in the suit, immediately and draw up a plan for his education. Cowan said the district could take no responsibility for Douglas' education or pay someone else to provide it.

The judge also said the district has to pay the $2,400 a month it costs to keep Douglas in a private institution in Austin until his new educational program is underway. In addition, Cowan said the district is responsible for the cost of Douglas' education since he was expelled in January 1977.

Douglas' parents brought suit against the Galveston County district when the private institution threatened to discharge him because they could no longer pay the tuition.

Patrick Wiseman, attorney for Douglas S., said the youth has normal intelligence but suffers from minimal brain damage which affects his attention span and makes it difficult for him to follow instructions.

Wiseman had argued the school district and state education agency had failed to implement provisions of recently adopted federal legislation guaranteeing all handicapped students a free and appropriate education.

"There are about half a dozen to a dozen cases like this around the nation," Wiseman said. "This case is most significant because it protects a particular child. It has collateral benefit of putting school districts on notice to stop obstructing the law," he said.

Cowan said the district's program for Douglas must provide him with "contact with non-handicapped children in a normal setting to the maximum extent possible."

Ruling that the district had denied Douglas an impartial due process hearing when he was expelled, Cowan ordered the FISD to establish a procedure for such hearings in compliance with federal law.

Cowan also ordered the state education agency to begin enforcing legislation concerning handicapped students.

Oklahoma escapee killed in gun battle

HYDRO, Okla. (AP) — An Oklahoma escapee who vowed he would not be taken alive was killed in a gunfight Wednesday with two law officers who trailed him to a rugged canyon near this western Oklahoma town.

Caddo County Sheriff Walter Brown said Jackie Lee Colston, 24, was shot in the head and died at the scene after being pinned in a gulch by Custer County Sheriff Richard Mueller and Washita County Undersheriff Ron Mazurek.

Colston fled custody Monday when he overpowered Deputy Wade Stovall while being transferred to Granite from Sequoyah County. He told Stovall he would not be captured alive.

It was the third gun battle between authorities and Oklahoma escapees within the last 30 days. Two state prison escapees and three Oklahoma Highway Patrol troopers were killed in gunfights at Caddo, Okla., in eastern Oklahoma on May 26. Two escapees from the Granite Reformatory were captured after the stolen vehicle they were in was riddled by police bullets Tuesday in Dodge City, Kan.

Sheriff Brown said two relatives of Colston were taken into custody for questioning about possibly aiding the fugitive.

Brown said the law officers ordered Colston to come out of his hiding place and fired a warning shot into the air.

He said Colston fired on the officers and they returned the fire. Eleven shots were fired in all, including five from the .357-caliber Mangum Colston took from Deputy Stovall, Brown said.

"I saw him peek around the corner," Mueller said. "I fired a warning shot and told him it was a warning shot and to come out.

"Then he opened fire with that .357. I fired my 30-30 and Ron fired with a .12 gauge."

Lions hear plan for Levi plant

Levi Strauss' future plans for Midland call for a super plant to be erected here somewhere down the line, members of the Downtown Lions Club were told Wednesday noon at their meeting in the Midland Hilton.

Ned Abraham, manager of the Levi Strauss & Co. operations here, was the speaker. He was introduced by Lion Fred Baker, program chairman.

Abraham said a super plant is one which employs 600 operators, with an additional 400 supporting workers.

The company's Midland plants now employ a total of 300 operators, he said, with a payroll of $2,112,600 annually.

A total of 2,057,900 pants have been produced here since the firm launched its Midland operation in 1970.

The speaker reviewed briefly the history of the company since its founding by Levi Strauss 120 years ago. Since that time the company has turned out 800 million pants, he said. The firm has 60 plants in the United States. It also operates in several foreign countries.

He said the growth and overall success of the firm from scratch to what it is today truly is the success story of free enterprise in America.

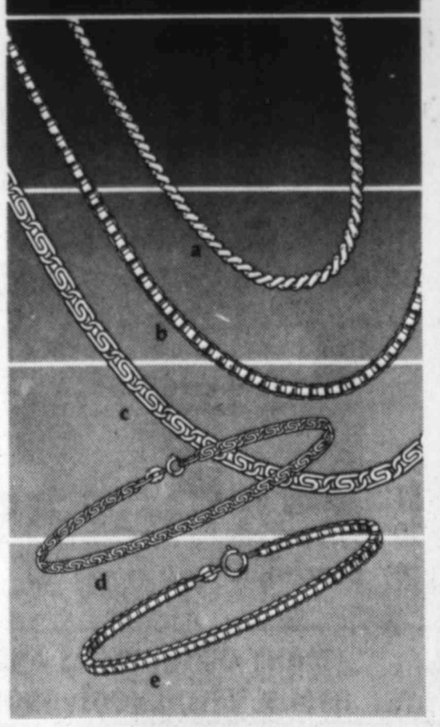

Eighteen new members were inducted into the club by Deputy Distict Gov. T.L. "Happy" Bond, a member of the Southside Lions Club.

Reusch attorney says client didn't do deed

MASON, Mich. (AP) — It was "somebody out there" and not biochemist Rosetta Reusch who dumped noxious chemicals in homes and cars of prominent music instructors and their pupils, Mrs. Reusch's attorney says.

Mrs. Reusch, 47, is accused of breaking and entering the home of Duane Smith with the intent to commit a felony — causing physical harm to the Lansing School District music coordinator and his family.

Following a two-day preliminary examination, Ingham County District Judge Robert H. Bell said Wednesday he was taking the case under advisement, and would decide in about 10 days whether Mrs. Reusch should stand trial. She has not entered a plea in the case.

The Smiths and about 20 other families in the university town of Okemos have been victimized since 1976 by someone sprinkling their property with chemicals that made their eyes water and stomachs churn.

Lab analysts testifying Wednesday said powder found in air vents of Smith's car contained mercury, arsenic, lead and zinc. All are toxic, especially with repeated exposure, said Dr. Edgar W. Kivela, chief toxicologist for the Michigan State Police.

Smith, who reported almost a dozen chemical incidents to police, said mercury levels in his blood are too high, and he still suffers from nausea.

According to testimony, Mrs. Reuseh had access to and knowledge of noxious chemicals used in the attacks. She holds a doctorate in chemistry and is employed as a biochemical researcher at Michigan State University.

She was acquainted with all the victims through recitals, and through her sons.

But her attorney, George Tesseris, said while his client stands accused, "somebody out there" is the true culprit.

Patrol to pay alien's medical bill?

By CAROL KEHL ENGLER
Yuma Daily Sun

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — An illegal alien sufering from dehydration is found unconscious in the desert by the local Border Patrol.

An ambulance is called, and the alien is transported to Yuma Regional Medical Center for treatment. The patient is indigent and cannot pay his bill.

The question is: Who is responsible for this unpaid medical bill?

Local hospitals say the Border Patrol should pick up the tab. The Border Patrol says it is not responsible.

So in the meantime, the hospital's paying patients are the ones taking care of the illegal aliens' medical bills through increase hospital rates. And hospital officials are calling it unfair.

"Our patients shouldn't have to pay for this," says Charles McConnell, hospital administrator. "Some other agency should be paying."

Speaking before the Yuma County Board of Supervisors this week, McConnell and members of the hospital board said the laws that require medical treatment of indigent illegal aliens should make some provision for payment of those services.

Claiming that there's no equity in the law, McConnell said the government passes bill requiring treatment and "they don't pass grants with money to go along with the bills."

McConnell explained that the Border Patrol is not responsible for the hospital bill of an indigent alien unless that person is in custody at the time of hospitalization.

But McConnell pointed out that the aliens are not taken into custody until after they leave the hospital. He said the Border Patrol should make that determination of custody before the patient leaves the hospital.

"Based on the information we've received, what we see is a lack of border officials placing (indigent aliens) in custody before transportating them to the hospital for medical attention," said Supervisor Chairman Bob Kennerly. "They're placing them in custody after the medical bill has occurred."

Kennerly added that the Border Patrol was "evading what the real responsibility is."

But Harry Surface, chief patrol agent in the Yuma sector for the Border Patrol, said, "In order for us to assume custody, we have to determine three things: that the person is an alien, that the person is in the United States in violation of law and whether there is a likelihood they will escape prior to obtaining a warrant for arrest."

Surface explained that if a person is found unconscious on the desert, the Border Patrol is not able to determine whether that person is deportable.

Asked Kennerly: "Why wait until they walk out the door (of the hospital)? Why not determine if they're illegal aliens and take them into custody while they're still in the hospital?"

Surface said an alien who is hospitalized is not likely to escape, therefore he cannot be taken into custody.

"We might very well take them into custody when they're ambulatory and free to travel," he said. "But the question is at what point do we go down to the hospital and take custody of someone under a doctor's care. We can't, as long as they're in the hospital."

Authorities say shooting victim was lawyer for narcotics figure

NOGALES, Ariz. (AP) — A Mexico City lawyer, one of two men shot to death in a gangland-style shooting near here, was an attorney for a prominent figure in Mexico's illicit drug world, authorities said.

Authorities said Wednesday, however, they could not determine if the slayings were connected to any drug trafficking.

The decomposed bodies of the lawyer, Francisco Ornelas-Ibanez, 60, who reportedly was also a legal advisor for the Mexican police, and Mexico City Police Capt. Guillerm Gomez Sosa, 38, were found June 14 in a remote area about 10 miles east of here and two miles north of the border.

Authorities said both men had been shot several times.

The two reportedly came to Nogales, Sonora, April 2 and disappeared April 14.

Santa Cruz County sheriff's deputies said they were told by Gomez' sister-in-law, Maria Sotelo of Mexico City that Ornelas-Ibanez called his home on the day he disappeared.

Mrs. Sotelo said the attorney told his family he was on his way to Nogales, Ariz., to meet a man who owed $150,000 to his client, Jose Contreras.

Contreras, authorities on both sides of the border said, is one of the top figures in the illicit drug market. He reportedly lives part of the time in Nogales, Sonora.

No cash was involved in the debt, Mrs. Sotelo said, but a transfer of property, including a ranch and some heavy equipment, was to have been made.

Deputies said they were also told by another source that Ornelas-Ibanez was being paid 2 million pesos to Contreras to obtain the release from custody of two of his brothers, Daniel and Benjamin.

The two were arrested by Mexican federal police in a roundup of 25 suspects after a series of gangland-style killings in Nogales, Sonora, in March.

Truck located; paintings missing

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — A truck stolen with 13 Impressionist paintings aboard worth $3.5 million was found abandoned on the Nice-Marseille highway today with only one of the 13 canvases left, police said.

The rest of the cargo had disappeared, presumably carted off by thieves who took the truck early Wednesday while its driver said he was in a Marseille cafe asking directions.

The paintings — including Gaugin's "Portrait of Madelaine Bernard" and two Sisleys — were heading back to provincial museums after their return from a Foreign Ministry-sponsored exhibit of 19th-century French works in Peking and Seoul.

The canvas remaining in the truck, a little known painting worth about $35,000, measures 1.5 by 2.8 yards and police speculated the thieves may have left it because of its size.

Carter tax compromise now in offing

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, trying to pry some form of tax- cut legislation from a congressional committee, is offering a compromise which, for the time being, scuttles his campaign pledge for tax reform.

Administration sources said the Carter plan, presented to House Democratic leaders on Wednesday, calls for a "no frills" $15 billion to $20 billion tax reduction for next year.

Although the compromise is a retreat from Carter's earlier demands for tax reform legislation, the administration source said Carter was not abandoning the effort and would seek changes in the tax code later.

As part of the agreement with the Democratic congressional leaders, the administration received assurances that there would be separate floor votes on some of the "reform" proposals, congressional sources said.

These sources, who asked not to be identified, saw Carter as apparently trying to trade off the reform proposals for a chance to get the tax cut bill out of the House Ways and Means Committee, where it has languished for months amid a dispute over cutting capital gains taxes.

The administration source, who also asked to remain unnamed, said that Carter remains firm in his opposition to a cut in capital gains taxes on profits from the sale of such items as homes and stocks.

"That's the sticking point in all of this — the capital gains tax," said a committee source Wednesday night. He said the administration is gambling that the offer to leave the reform package out of the bill may sway enough Democratic votes in the committee.

A spokesman for Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said the House speaker was ready to push for the Carter compromise. But a Ways and Means source said committee chairman, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., was going to "wait and see" how the proposal was greeted by committee members.

The source noted that there are still a number of other compromise proposals before the committee including one offered by Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., which would include a partial cut in capital gains taxes.

Carter, who first asked Congress to cut taxes by $25 billion, later reduced that figure to $20 billion and in the latest proposal appeared ready to accept $15 billion.

From the first, the reform proposals in Carter's tax package have been the focus of controversy.

Among the changes Carter had wanted were sharp reductions in tax writeoffs for business entertainment — the so-called "three martini lunches" — and elimination of deductions for club dues, yachts, hunting lodges and tickets for sporting events.

The president also sought a number of changes involving tax sheltering devices and sought to eliminate deductions for state and local sales taxes, state and local gasoline taxes and personal property taxes that are not business related.

OAS meeting expected to be model of diplomatic civility

WASHINGTON (AP) — In contrast to past years, when anti-American posturing was common, the current annual meeting of the foreign ministers of the Organization of American States is expected to be a model of diplomatic civility.

As the delegates got down to substantive business today after a ceremonial opening Wednesday, the U.S. team looked ahead to the next nine days of meetings in a relaxed mood.

They are aware that, with the exception of Cuba's military activities in Africa, the last major irritant in U.S.-Latin American relations was removed with the resolution of the Panama Canal conflict.

Earlier in this decade, the United States invariably was on the defensive at these meetings as one Latin country after another accused Washington of seeing the region only in terms of protecting U.S. security and economic interests.

In addition to the Panama Canal, there were bitter confrontations over the American-backed OAS embargo on Cuba and the U.S. refusal to recognize the 200-mile fisheries limit of many member countries. There were vigorous Latin complaints over U.S. trade policy and over U.S. penalties for uncompensated expropriation of American business interests.

One by one, these sources of friction have disappeared, as have the left-of-center regimes — in Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Mexico, which had raised them at OAS meetings.

But the agenda at the 1978 conference is not entirely clear of controversial issues.

More often than not, the Latin Americans now are finding themselves responding to U.S. criticisms.

This was evident Wednesday when President Carter told the delegates that in most of Latin America, despite some improvement, political repression is still widespread. He warned of U.S. retaliatory action in cases of "flagrant disregard" for internationally accepted human rights standards.

The reduction in anti-American politics is also attributable to a new format at these meetings.

Public speechmaking, a fixture in earlier years, was used by Latin American delegates to make political points back home — often at U.S. expense.

That aspect of OAS meetings has been virtually eliminated as the delegates now carry out most of their debate in private.

At the current meeting, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and his colleagues have set aside today and Friday for a closed-door dialogue.

The Latin Americans still have a list of grievances against the United States.

Brazil and the United States, for example, are at odds over proper safeguards for Brazil's ambitious nuclear power program.

West not invited to Soviet show

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Soviet Union has not invited Western observers to air and ground military maneuvers next month in East Germany, offering no explanation for its decision, NATO sources said today.

Since the 1975 Helsinki agreements were signed, NATO and Warsaw Pact countries have been required to notify each other of large-scale military exercises and in several cases have invited observers from the other side to watch maneuvers in the field.

NATO sources said they had expected some countries in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to be invited to send observers to the maneuvers in East Germany, set for July 3-8 with 30,000 Soviet troops participating.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Soviet officials had confirmed that no invitations, even last-minute ones, would be forthcoming.

One NATO official speculated that the lack of invitations "is a little hint that they're unhappy with some aspect of U.S. or NATO policy."

The Soviet Union invited observers from the United States, the Netherlands, West Germany, France and other nations to its "Berezina" maneuvers last winter in Byelorussia, and Soviet officers have visited NATO maneuvers in Norway and West Germany in the past year.

Easing of tension Angola trip aim

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior U.S. diplomat, dispatched to Angola for two days of talks with its Marxist leaders, is searching for common ground to ease political and military tensions in central and southern Africa, administration officials say.

The mission to Luanda by Donald McHenry, U.S. deputy permanent representative to the United Nations, also underscores the Carter administration's new policy of increasing diplomatic contacts with Angola, considered a major Soviet and Cuban ally in central Africa.

McHenry, a top assistant to Ambassador Andrew Young and a specialist in African affairs, flew to Luanda on Wednesday, only one day after Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance announced plans to deal with Angola in "more normal ways."

Vance's statement stopped short of announcing plans for full diplomatic recognition with Angola. No formal ties exist between Washington and Luanda.

The McHenry talks are expected to include discussion of a U.S. proposal that Angola and western-oriented Zaire agree not to interfere in each other's internal affairs.

Last month, Angola-based Katangan rebels invaded Zaire's mineral-rich Shaba province and were driven back by a combined force of French, Belgian and Zairian troops.

Perhaps the most prominent disagreement is the perception in some military regimes that the United States pays too much attention to human rights violations and not enough to terrorist activities by leftist extremists.

American officials believe, however, that the Latin American foreign ministers who raise this issue will do so as discretely as possible — behind closed doors.

Special glasses enable near-blind man to see

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jaki Stefanovski squinted through glasses bearing two-inch long miniature camera lenses, read the tiny numbers in a newspaper baseball box score and exalted that the first thing he would do upon his return to Yugoslavia was learn to drive.

It was the first time the 32-year-old petroleum plant worker had been able to see anything so small since age 6, when a disease known as optic atrophy left him with less than 5 percent vision.

"I'm so very happy," Stefanovski said after Dr. William Feinbloom adjusted his invention, which he claims can improve the vision of every legally blind person who is neither totally blind nor suffers from shadow vision.

Feinbloom, a New York City optometrist who is on the faculty of the Pennsylvania College of Optometry, said his device could help more than 1.5 million people alone in the United States.

"He could see faces and colorations and movements but couldn't make out details," said Feinbloom.

The device is actually a miniaturized camera lens — his first model was 14 inches long — that magnifies an image 36 times the size seen by a normal eye.

It is made of nine lenses and two prisms, and Feinbloom said it takes a photograph of what the patient is looking at.

Carter's water policy would likely cause hardships for Texans in industry, farming

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—President Carter's national water policy would likely lower the quality of life for Texans, raise Texas' cost of living, and reduce productivity of industry and agriculture, a report by the Department of Water Resources contends.

That report, presented to the Water Development Board by DWR planning head Dr. Herbert Grubb, is strongly critical of many of the proposals contained in the proposals released earlier this month by the Carter Administration.

"On the one hand," the report says, "the President appears to be attempting to reduce the annual investment in water resources development by effectuating 'water conservation' programs, including public education and increasing the price of water to consumers.

"On the other hand, the President's objections to non-structural development, in many ways, may limit the use of lands within regions where water suplies are presently available, by making it impossible to locate homes and business properties in areas that are subject to flooding by prohibiting development of structural flood protection measures such as levies and flood storage in water supply projects."

Those two elements, the report continues, "seem to be in conflict" and "will make it difficult, if not impossible, to develop potential surface water supplies for use in many parts of eastern Texas."

Much of the criticism of the report is directed at the "water conservation" aspects of the proposals, which include calls for legislation to allow states to charge higher prices on municipal and industrial water suplies from Federal projects, "provided that state revenues in excess of Federal costs would be returned to municipalities or other public water supply entities for use in water conservation or rehabilitation of water supply systems."

It appears, the report contends, "that 'water conservation' means that specific statewide actions must be taken to reduce the quantity of water to be used both from existing water supplies as well as from proposed new projects."

Something fishy about bass contest ban?

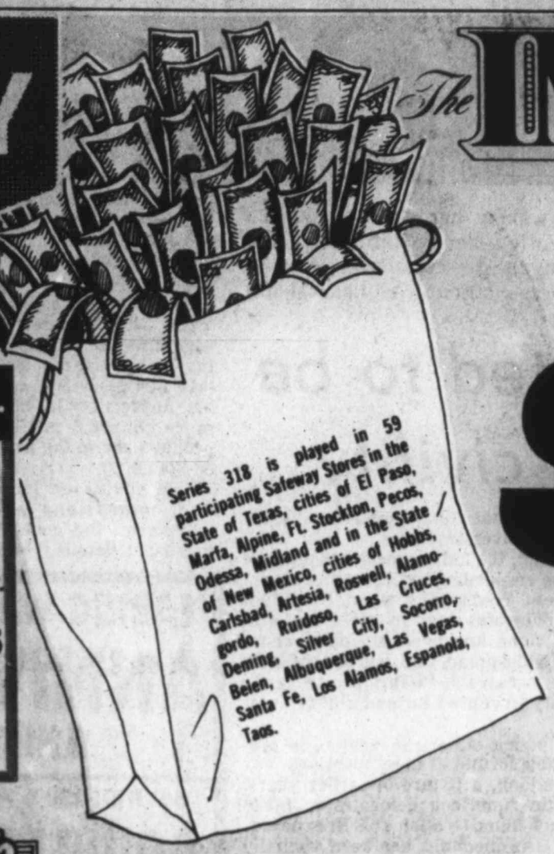

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Davena Babcock says that when she tried to enter a bass fishing tournament she was turned down and told it would be "embarrassing to have a man and a women in a boat together in case one of them had to go to the bathroom."

"I've always fished with men," remarked Mrs. Babcock, 33, of suburban Hilton. "I've never had any problem. The decent thing to do is turn your back."

Mrs. Babcock filed a lawsuit late last week, charging that sexual discrimination prevented her from competing in a three-day bass fishing tourney at Alexandria Bay sponsored by the Bass Anglers Sportsmen's Society of America.

She asked the court to issue an injunction requiring that she be allowed to compete or an order to halt the tournament.

Judge awards property to Episcopal denomination

By CLAUDIA LUTHER
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Four California parishes that broke away from the Episcopal Church over a dispute in which the key issue was the ordination of women as priests were told Wednesday the churches they worshiped in do not belong to them.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge J. Wesley Reed, ruling in four cases brought by the Los Angeles Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church in a dispute over property rights, said the parishes' property was "impressed with an implied charitable trust" requiring its use for the benefit of members or congregations of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Reed said the parishes are "members of a much larger and more important religious organization" and are bound by its orders and judgments.

The ruling meant that the buildings, art objects and other property acquired by parishioners through the years cannot be taken by the parishes in the split, but must remain with the parent church.

The four churches involved are Church of St. Mary of the Angels, Hollywood; Church of Our Savior, Los Angeles; St. Matthias Church, Sun Valley, and Church of the Holy Apostles, Glendale.

Bishop Robert C. Rusack, spiritual leader of the diocese, said he was "gratified" by the court's ruling.

He said it was "extremely difficult" for the diocese to go into court to settle the matter of property ownership, but added it had "no other choice" given its responsibilities for the church's resources.

"When there is a schism, all suffer and neither side can rejoice," Rusack said. "Each party has failed to some degree and all are called to repentance."

Reed's decision, which came in the form of an intended ruling to be entered as a final judgment at a later date, may be the first of similar cases across the nation establishing the law of the "implied charitable trust." If it stands on appeal, it could have an influence on how other cases involving the same issues are decided.

The Rev. George H. Clendenin, rector of Holy Apostles, expressed disappointment with the ruling, but said the churches will appeal.

"This has to be decided by a higher court because it is a national test case, I would say," Clendenin said. He said that although there have been rulings in favor of breakaway parishes in other states, the California case affords the "clearest delineation of the issues" because there are no specific laws to interfere with a broader legal ruling.

Attorney Robert B. Leck, who represented the parishes in a 10-day trial, argued that the property belonged to them because their congregations donated the money for the churches and other property.

But Reed agreed with Episcopal Church attorney John G. Niles that the probable intent of the many donors over the years was that the assets acquired by the parishes would remain in the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The parishes were among several across the nation that voted to pull out of the three-million-member denomination after the 1976 General Convention of the church narrowly approved the ordination of women priests. The issue had been hotly debated for six years.

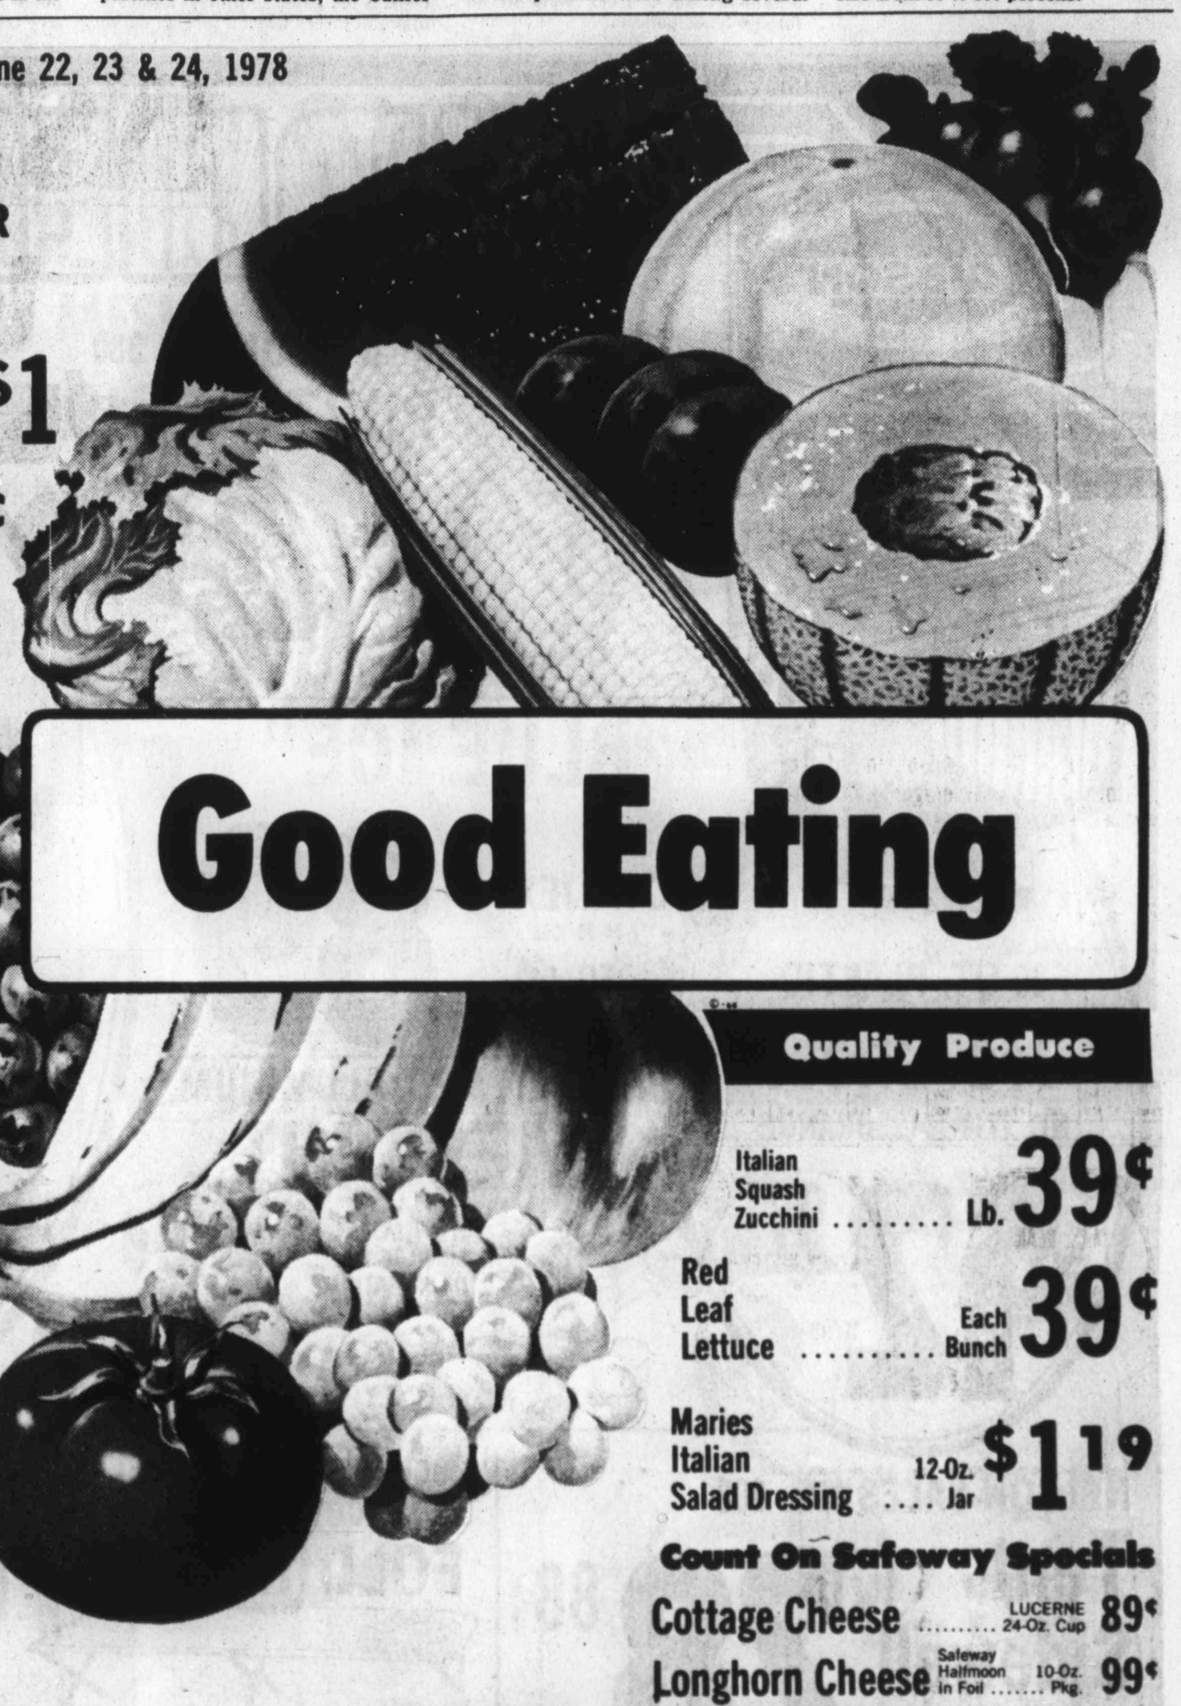

The parishes accused the church of "tampering with Christian doctrine" on the question of women's ordination and other issues, such as the use of a new form of church service.

Three of the local congregations voted unanimously to split from the parent church; the fourth, St. Mary's, had the support of 80 percent of the members. The congregations range in size from 90 to 300 persons.

Court holds for importers

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American manufacturers of electronic products cannot force the federal government to help them stave off competition from Japan, the Supreme Court said Wednesday.

The court unanimously rejected a Zenith Radio Corp. attempt to make Japanese televisions, radios and record players sold in the United States more expensive by increasing the import tariffs.

Americans probably would have had to pay higher prices for such items if the court had agreed with Zenith.

But more significantly, the decision could affect government action on numerous other goods imported from foreign nations and gives the Carter administration a freer hand in its foreign trade policies.

At issue was whether tax breaks that Japanese manufacturers receive in Japan when exporting electronics goods to the United States should trigger the U.S. government's imposition of offsetting tariffs — called "countervailing duties."

Zenith asked the government to do just that in 1970, claiming that Japanese manufacturers were enjoying an unfair trade advantage.

Japanese manufacturers of electronic products must pay a commodity tax to their government on items sold in Japan. But the tax is not imposed on exported items.

Zenith claimed that the tax break allows Japanese manufacturers to charge 15 percent to 20 percent less for televisions in the United States than they charge for the same items in Japan.

Under an 1897 law, the U.S. government is obligated to protect domestic manufacturers when a foreign nation "shall pay or bestow directly or indirectly any bounty or grant" on exports to the United States.

The law provides for the U.S. government's imposition of a "duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant."

Wednesday's decision, written by Justice Thurgood Marshall, said that the kind of tax break given by the Japanese government does not trigger higher U.S. tariffs because it legally is not a "bounty or grant."

Marshall's opinion upheld the Carter administration's interpretation of the 1897 law.

Had the court ruled otherwise, U.S. interests in the current international trade negotiations under way in Geneva could have suffered.

It had been feared that a victory for Zenith could spark a wave of protectionist reaction worldwide, and that other nations would impose restrictive tariffs on imports.

While numerous American industries in competition with foreign manufacturers may be affected by the court's reading of the Tariff Act of 1897, Zenith perhaps will feel the pinch worst.

The Chicago-based firm, facing declining business, has announced its plans to lay off about 25 percent of its U.S. workforce of 21,000.

Zenith's chairman, John J. Nevin, said that in light of the court's decision being unanimous, the company had no immediate comment.

The ruling, if not altered by some future act by Congress, also carries impact for the nation's steel industry.

Two steel-manufacturing giants, U.S. Steel and Bethlehem, sided with Zenith in friend-of-the-court briefs submitted to the justices.

They complained of similar tax breaks given to steel manufacturers by the governments of Japan, Sweden, Norway, Brazil and several European Common Market nations.

In other decisions Wednesday, the Supreme Court:

— Ruled unanimously that police may not make an extensive search of a murder scene without a search warrant. The ruling overturned the narcotics conviction of a Tucson, Ariz., man whose apartment was the target of a four-day police search after the shooting death of a police detective.

— Split 5 to 4 in ruling that labor unions may not discipline — or threaten to discipline — members who cross a strike picket line to perform their usual supervisory duties after being requested to do so by their employers.

That ruling grew out of a 1973 strike by the Writers Guild against the three television networks and film producers.

Blue Oyster Cult has nothing to do with food, cults

By BILL PETERSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Caution: the Blue Oyster Cult may have been dangerous to your health.

That was the latest drum roll coming out of the Food and Drug Administration, that bunch of spoil sports that already has scared us silly with warnings about hair dye, Laetrile and No Hunger Bread.

The trouble with the Blue Oyster Cult, ironically, has nothing to do with food and drugs. Or oysters. Or cults.

The Blue Oyster Cult, for the uninformed, is a rock band. It's very big on what's called the heavy metal circuit, with outlandish outfits, leather trousers and Maltese Crosses.

The FDA thinks the Blue Oyster Cult should clean up its act — not the skin-tight jeans, but, specifically, the laser beams the band uses for light shows during concerts. And the band apparently agrees, and says it is making changes that are acceptable to the FDA.

The light shows which are also popular in art shows and in discos are one of the rock world's adaptations of space age technology. They're all harmless enough, provided the beams are low-powered ones.

At rock shows, lasers are beamed onto walls covered with mirrors or specially made vinyl screens. They explode into fantastic colors and make triangles and circles that dance, pop, dart and plunge through space like electronic Ping-Pong balls.

The FDA's Bureau of Radiological Health, which enforces laws dealing with radiation exposure, fears that careless use of the powerful lasers might cause burns or eye damage to concert goers.

No one has ever been injured by such lasers, according to FDA spokesmen. But with a host of big name groups — including "Led Zeplin," "Pink Floyd," "War," "Wings," "Yes" and "Earth, Wind and Fire" — using them, the agency doesn't want to take any chances.

So Uncle Sam has started sending sleuths to rock concerts, seeking the answer to the same question that parents have been asking for a generation: Are rock groups dangerous to your health?

The conclusion: Their laser light shows can be.

Lasers can produce dangerous light radiation, for performers and those they perform for, one FDA spokesman said. "Some of the rock groups have laser lights which flash over the heads of the audiences. If someone held up a hand, for instance, and the beam of light bounced off a watch crystal or something it could bounce into someone's eye.

"It could damage the eye even before you had time to blink away from it, and the result would be a temporary blind spot in the eye. That's most likely the most serious thing that would happen."

The FDA notified rock groups and laser manufacturers of the potential dangers of light shows last November, informing them of minimum standards it had set.

Rock stars were understandably miffed. "It never occurred to most rock groups that they'd ever have to worry about radiation, let alone the Food and Drug Administration," one FDA spokesman said.

The Blue Oyster Cult's problems began when the FDA paid a visit to one of its concerts in Dayton, Ohio, in late March. It was revisited a month later in Atlanta.

Then in May, the agency notified the band that it was in violation of a number of FDA standards. Many of the complaints were minor: Its laser equipment wasn't properly housed, or labeled, for instance.

But the FDA also came up with a major violation: The way the Blue Oyster Cult was running its light show made it possible for laser beams to come into contact with people in the audience.

It was told to either decrease the power of its laser system or design a new system to insure the beams would not come into contact with humans.

The band has agreed to correct the problem, the FDA spokesman said Tuesday. "They've talked to people here and they've worked things out. Most of the groups get pretty cooperative when they find we might shut down one of their concerts."

China may want U.S. trade

PEKING — Ford Motors president Henry Ford II left China this week with assurances from Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping that Sino-American trade exchanges would be facilitated once relations between Peking and Washington were normalized.

The American industrialist left for Tokyo after saying that his 48-hour stay in China had been to make contacts and to evaluate long-term prospects of the Chinese market.

Ford, accompanied by four associates, including the company's international automobile-sector vice president, Donald E. Petersen, had a half-hour meeting with Teng Tuesday.

Ford explained to Teng what the company could offer China in terms of automobile and industrial equipment to help with its the country's modernization.

Ford, who was the guest of the China Travel Service, also met with foreign trade minister Li Chiang and Wang Yao-ting, chairman of the China Committee for the Promotion of International Trade.

Carter administration approves merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, in a major decision affecting the steel industry, today approved the merger of the LTV Corp. and Lykes Corp.

Rejecting advice from the Justice Department's antitrust staff, Attorney General Griffin B. Bell ruled that the merger is acceptable because Lykes Corp. is a failing company that can be exempted from part of the antitrust laws.

Bell acknowledged that the merger would eliminate competition between Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., a subsidiary of LTV, and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., a subsidiary of Lykes.

However, Bell said Lykes could completely run out of money in the second half of 1978.

The decision was the Carter administration's first major antitrust case and was acted upon by Bell himself.

LTV sought Justice Department approval because the company is precluded under a previous court case from acquiring more than 1 percent of the securities of a large company without court permission.

The decision was important to the steel industry because Youngstown is the eighth-largest U.S. steel producer, while Jones & Laughlin is the seventh-largest. The combination of the two would create either the third- or fourth-largest steel producer in the country.

The proposed merger of Lykes into LTV would involve an exchange of securities valued as high as $200 million.

Groups from steel communities have favored the merger, saying it could help the industry, which is suffering from reduced demand and rising imports.

In his statement, Bell said that by March 1979, the Lykes Corp. could have a deficit of $130 million or perhaps twice that amount.

"Youngstown Steel operations are primarily responsible for Lykes losing money," he said, adding:

"The losses at the Indiana Harbor plant, Youngstown's major steel facility, continue to be significant — around $4 million to $5 million a month, despite favorable market conditions and a high rate of capacity utilization.

"There does not appear to be hope for any significant improvement in the situation and the company's relationships with its suppliers are deteriorating. In addition, its lines of bank credit have been canceled.

"Thus, in order to avoid running out of cash in the very near future and in an effort to generate enough capital to make Indiana Harbor profitable, the company would have no alternative but to dispose of substantial assets."

Bell added: "With some exceptions, the Antitrust Division staff recommended against approval and Assistant Attorney General John Shenefield agreed. Nevertheless, those concerned with the matter in the department agreed it was a very close question."

Current wave of war movies strains relationships

By LAWRENCE SUID
Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The current wave of movies about the Vietnam War and its aftermath has again focused attention on the long-standing relationship between the film industry and the armed forces.

Within the Pentagon itself, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs Thomas Ross has asked the individual services to consider whether the Pentagon should stop making judgments altogether on whether scripts are in the best interest of the Department of Defense.

Of the movies so far released that touch on the Vietnam experience, only "Heroes", a light comedy about a disturbed veteran who sets out across America to find himself, received even limited Pentagon assistance.

Perhaps realizing the Marines would have nothing to do with a movie that would advertise itself, "To keep their sanity in an insane war, they had to be crazy," the producers of "The Boys in Company C" did not even submit a script to the Defense Department. Instead, they made the movie in the Philippines, ending up with a story that marine officials insist bears almost no resemblance to their procedures, activities or experiences in Vietnam.

The producer of "Rolling Thunder," a story about a returned prisoner of war, did request Air Force assistance. However, the service refused to cooperate on the grounds that there were "no known cases of Air Force officers becoming schizophrenic" as portrayed in the story. While the service conceded that some POWs came home to marital problems, it said there was "nothing beneficial for DoD in the dramatization of this situation."

Over the years the armed services have based their decisions to cooperate on a script on whether assistance would benefit the military by aiding in recruitment or by providing informational value to the public about a service's activities and procedures. Occasionally the military has provided help on a movie that might not render such benefits, if assistance seemed to be in a service's best interest.

By agreeing to work with a filmmaker on a less-than-desirable script, the armed forces feel they can improve the completed movie's accuracy and the portrayal of the military itself. In all situations, however, regulations have rquired that assistance be at no cost to the taxpayer.

Before the Vietnam War spawned anti-war sentiment in the country, most Hollywood films about the armed forces helped create an image of the American military as all-conquering, invincible and infallible. Vietnam, and more specifically the Tet offensive, destroyed this image.

The controversial nature of the war and its daily appearance on the evening news also eroded the market for movies about the conflict, both during the fighting and in the years immediately afterward.

Beginning with the release of "Midway" in 1976, however, Hollywood has once again turned to the military as a subject. Walter Mirisch's film about the battle that turned the tide in the Pacific, "A Bridge Too Far" and "MacArthur" focused on a "safe" war, one from which the United States emerged victorious.

Concurrently the peacetime military also became the subject for filmmakers when Mirisch produced "Gray Lady Down," the story of a stricken nuclear submarine. Even though the completed film resembled a service-produced documentary, the Navy provided cooperation reluctantly and only after rejecting at least four scripts.

To the Navy, the story of submarine disaster offered little benefit to the service's recruitment campaign. What the Navy found worse in the early scripts, however was the rescue of the trapped American sailors by a Russian submarine and diving equipment.

Delma Ramirez, 27, of 313 Fiesta Ave. died today of injuries received in an automobile accident near Garden City.

Services are pending with Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ramirez was born April 19, 1951, in Midland. She attended Midland public schools. She was employed at Bob's Better Burger in Midland. She was a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Survivors include a son, Fabian Espinoza of Midland; a daughter, Belinda Ann Espinoza of Midland; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Ramirez of Midland; a brother, Chon Ramirez of Midland, and two sisters, Mary Frances Ramirez and Sally Ramirez, both of Midland.

Woman reports abduction, rape

A 23-year-old Midland woman, discovered missing early this morning from a Midland convenience store, reportedly was abducted at gunpoint and raped, police said today.

At approximately 4:26 a.m., an Odessa man reported an open door at the 7-Eleven Store at Midland Drive and Camarie Avenue to Midland police. On arrival, officers said, they found the clerk missing.

The woman called police at 5:51 a.m. from 4805 Andrews Highway. She told officers that a white male in his early 20s, about 6-feet tall, thin build, small mustache and driving a dark green vehicle forced her to leave the store and later attacked her.

The man allegedly threatened the clerk with a revolver.

Foundation chooses head

A new president of the Midland College Foundation Board was elected at a recent meeting of board members.

Harvey Herd, former vice president of the board, was named and will fill the vacancy left as a result of the recent death of Veda Hodge. He has been a member of the Foundation since its formation soon after Midland College was established. He is an independent oil operator who is active in the Midland community and petroleum activities.

William F. (Bill) Marshall, a Foundation Board member, will replace Herd as vice president. Marshall is president of Marshall & Winston. The secretary-treasurer of the Foundation is Murray Fasken, chairman of the board of Midland National Bank and president of the Midland College Board of Trustees.

The Foundation is a non-profit, tax-exempt foundation which can accept gifts of money, stocks, real estate, bonds, or other items of value for the benefit of Midland College.

Midland man out on bond

A Midland man was out of jail today in lieu of $10,000 bond after being charged with theft in connection with the alleged embezzlement of approximately $20,000 from Sambo's Restaurant in Midland.

Steve Allen Meeker, 23, former manager of the restaurant, was arrested Tuesday after the restaurant chain's area manager and auditor reportedly examined the books and filed a complaint concerning the allegedly missing money.

Bond was set by Peace Justice Robert Pine.

Odessa gas station robbed, attendant reports assault

ODESSA — An Exxon station at Interstate 20 and South Grant Street here was robbed early today by two men armed with guns, according to a spokesman with the Odessa Police Department.

The two men stopped at the station about 4 a.m., purchased some transmission fluid and talked to the attendant about going to Corpus Christi, police were told. When the attendant opened the cash register for the men to pay for the fluid, the two men produced weapons, the attendant told police. They reportedly took money from the register and hit the attendant over the head before leaving, according to the spokesman.

The attendant was treated and released at Odessa Medical Center.

Police were told by the attendant that the two black men had their hair in braids. One man was described as 6 feet tall, weighing about 150 to 160 pounds. The other man was described as 5 feet 8 and weighing about 140 pounds. One man carried a blue, steel revolver and the other man carried a chrome-plated revolver, the attendant said.

The spokesman said the case still is under investigation.

Timely broadcast takes trophy

A KNFM radio public service announcement won a trophy Sunday at the annual convention of American Advertisers Federation held in San Francisco, Calif. The announcement was a promotion reminding people to set their clocks back, said station manager Wayne Weekes.

Mike McLaren, the writer-producer of the winning announcement, and Mike Fitzgerald, general manager at KNFM, were at the convention to accept the award. Weekes said "it is quite an honor. This is the academy award in advertising."

Exhibit reveals female secrets

LUBBOCK—Secrets women kept for the centuries are on exhibit at the Museum of Texas Tech University in a display called "The Great American Coverup."

The exhibition reveals women's undergarments of handmade lace, eyelet and other intricate white embroidery, drawn work, ribbons and bows. The museum's collection of this type of garment is considered among the finest in the nation.

The breath-taking corsets are there, too, and hoops. Even knit stockings, sometimes with ribbed design and sometimes embroidered, are on display.

The shapely images created by corsets, hoops and bustles were not achieved lightly, exhibit material explains. A women's total ensemble could weigh as much as 40 pounds.

On one hooped model, the wiring is revealed. On another, 1850s tiered black silk gown provides the silhouette of the full hoop. The revealed hoops relate to the 1860s and 1870s when the skirt fullness was moved to the back and shaped with a bustle. The hoops are fitted over two handmade petticoats over a knee-length chemise. This embroidered top has "puffing," similar to shirring, but made to stand out slightly to give fullness to the bust and shoulder lines.

Another model of the 19th century wears a pale blue hand embroidered chemise and shows each of her four petticoats, one with borders of machine lace, one with hand made eyelet in a deep band, one with machine eyelet but with tucks designed to give flair at the hemline, and all lifted to show the ruffled pantaloons.

Exhibited also is a petticoat with drawn work forming a lattice effect in the ornate trim. Wave braid lace made with a fine rickrack type braid which was applied to a paper before being crocheted into a lace, decorates another petticoat.

One model, dressed as m'lady's maid, wears a white apron trimmed in hand-knitted lace. In the exhibit, the maid is assisting a turn-of-the-century high fashion woman with her coiffure, the final step in preparation for an important social event.

Mrs. Betty Mills, curator of historic costumes and textiles at the museum, said that the exhibit is particularly appropriate this season when high fashion stores are selling garments patterned after those of the late nineteenth century.

"One great difference, of course," she said, "is that the modern garments are all machine made while the earlier garments demonstrate perfection of constant work with the needle.

Days, weeks and months of constant work with the needle were required to produce the garments on exhibit.

"Women didn't know idle moments," Mills said. "The mark of a well brought up young lady was refinement in work with the needle.

"Deft fingers were supposed to produce a serene mind, and daughters were introduced to the needle early and maintained their skills into old age."

Needle work experts will recognize in the exhibit examples of punchwork, Broiderie Anglaise, white work, wave brain lace, insertion, beading, drawnwork done with muslin, linen and lawn, hand hemstitching, bobbing or handmade lace, intricate tucking, puffing and handmade eyelet.

The display will be exhibited approximately six weeks.

"The Great American Coverup" is being exhibited at the Museum of Texas Tech University, revealing women's undergarments of the past, from days when some of the finest needlework accomplished by women was hidden under layer upon layer of clothing. The exhibit includes examples of punchwork, handmade eyelet, whitework, drawnwork done with muslin, linen and lawn, handmade lace and Broiderie Anglaise. (Tech Photo)

Vegetarian ranks grow

NEW YORK (AP) — Both young people and the elderly have been swelling the number of vegetarians from 3 million to 10 million in the last five years, but for different reasons, says the author of a vegetarian cookbook.

"Peer pressure as well as moral considerations are turning young people to vegetarianism," says William Manners, author with his sister-in-law, Ruth Ann Manners, of "The Quick and Easy Vegetarian Cookbook." "Environmental concerns, increased interest in Eastern religions and natural living are also factors.

"The principal reasons for older people going vegetarian are health and economics," he adds. "Protein that costs $2.50 as beef, or $1.25 as fish, costs only 50 cents in vegetable form."

There's no such thing as obligatory social gift

By JUDITH MARTIN
The Washington Post

When bridal couples invite those who are dearest to share the public solemnization of their happiness, they may be sure all their cherished friends and relatives are having the same thoughts:

Do we owe them a present? How much do you think we have to spend? Can't we get away with less? How much did they spend for us?

In a society that uses the terms "free gift" and "mandatory donation," it is not surprising that the exchange of presents is treated as an unpleasant commercial transaction, while impersonal fees are disguised as voluntarily given presents.

Miss Manners once tried to step into the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York after having discovered there was no admission charge — only to be detained by an employee who admitted one could enter "free," but explained that that could only be done after one made a voluntary donation to the museum.

Miss Manners naturally inquired as to the meaning of such a voluntary donation.

"What do you want to give?" this person countered.

"A wing," replied Miss Manners, who was explaining that unfortunately she had not yet saved up the cash to carry out this wish, when she was interrupted with the information that intentions aside, she must give $2 on the spot or vacate the premises.

That is voluntary gift-giving in commercial life. In social life, however, there is no such thing as an obligatory present. You do not owe your friends $2 or anything else just because they are getting married.

Nevertheless, it is customary that when one values people enough to want to participate in occasions that are important to them, one is moved to express this emotion in some tangible form.

Get that? In other words, if you do not attend a wedding to which you have been invited, or attend only the ceremony and not the reception, you are not considered involved to the extent of, say, a silver bud vase. However, if you want to partake in the couple's bliss, and also their champagne, this restraint would be inappropriate.

The same principle may be applied to other occasions. You must care enough about people to want to gladden their hearts with a token of their esteem if you accept their overnight hospitality, celebrate their birthdays, graduations or Christmas with them, or expect a large inheritance from them.

Miss Manners Responds

Q: My husband and I sleep in a double bed at home, and would like to do so when we travel. We always seem to be put in rooms that either have two single beds, or two double beds. The single beds are too small, and I get embarrassed to have the maid see that we use only one of the double beds, so I've even taken to messing the other one up to make it look slept in, which my husband says is silly. How can I get the kind of accommodations we want?

A: By requsting them. If you find that this embarrasses the room clerk, you might introduce him to the hotel maid you think is also capable of embarrassment, and suggest that they both take up another line of work.

Q: Is there any correct form associated with the chewing of bubble gum?

A: Yes. One must remove pink bits of burst bubble from one's nose quietly and quickly.

Q: What are the rules for how to administer recreational drugs at parties? Should the host and hostess provide the materials? Should they be passed about in the living room or should the guests retire to a small bedroom? Our 14-year-old daughter is a dealer. She says that her friends' parents are buying enough for the whole party.

A: Miss Manners is not amused. — — —

DEAR ABBY

Male egos take beating from her athletic talents

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive girl who likes sports, and I'm exceptionally good at them. When I compete with a man I usually win, but it's a bitter victory because from then on, the fellow I beat promptly loses interest in me — romantically.

It happens every time, Abby. When a man competes with me and loses, his ego takes a beating, and no man is inclined to get turned on by a woman who's athletically superior to him.

I would like a romance, but I also like to win. Will romance ever bloom if I keep winning? To lose a game or lose a boyfriend—that's the choice. What do you say? — LIKES TO WIN

DEAR LIKES: Always play to win. A real man will enjoy the challenge. And those who would lose interest in you romantically because they lost aren't men, they're crybabies.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 3-year-old daughter whom we adore. We were unable to have more children, so we adopted "A"—a 2-year-old girl who had been in several foster homes before we got her.

The problem is that we honestly don't feel the same about "A" as we do our own child. "A" whines constantly and seems generally dissatisfied and contrary. (When I'm holding her she wants "down," and when she's down she whines until I pick her up.)

Our own child is always cooperative and lovable. My husband and I feel guilty for our thoughts. Is it natural for parents to favor their own child over one who's adopted? And can parents be blamed for favoring the child who's more cooperative and lovable?

I can't sign this for obvious reasons, but I need to know if other adoptive parents feel as we do? And what can be done about it.— FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Whether the child is your own flesh and blood or adopted, the least lovable child is the one who needs your love the most. Don't feel guilty for honest emotions. Ask the agency from which you received the adopted child if they provide counseling for this problem. (It's not uncommon.) Or write to Parents Anonymous. 2810 Artesia Blvd., Redondo Beach, Calif. 90278 for the address of a chapter near you.

Sharing your experiences and feelings with other parents who have learned how to deal with "unlovable children" can bring a blessed relief. And please let me know the outcome. Lcare.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at the neighborhood beauty shop which I have patronized for years, I was irked by the new operator who did my hair. She did a good job, but when she finished, she said, "That will be $10, plus $2 for the tip."

Is it accepted procedure in some areas to state the tip expected? I have never encountered this before and it annoyed me. Unless you tell me that I am off center here, I plan to speak to the manager about this. Perhaps it's a new policy. — PHILADELPHIAN

DEAR PHILADELPHIAN: Although customs may differ in different areas, I know of no area where it's "accepted procedure" to ask fo a tip for ANY service.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal unpublished reply, write: ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Waste watchers report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cities are spared an additional 10 million tons of solid waste each year because of the commercial processing of fruits and vegetables, says the National Food Processor Association.

More than 8 million tons of raw skins, peels, cores and cobs removed before canning and freezing are utilized as animal feed. The remainder is returned to the soil as fertilizer or recycled, as in the case of certain fruit pits which are burned to make charcoal.

Designer enjoys craft in Paris

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — Paris is providing the finishing touches in the training of a hot young American fashion designer whose life sounds like any young American girl's dream.

Sue Ekahn, a striking, ebullient 6-footer, is only 22, but already has her unique place in the fashion world.

Last year Sue, from Merrick, N.Y., and four other American girls won a French government competition for $5,000 scholarships to study fashion at the Chambre Syndicale de la Couture.

On Sue's first day at school she was appalled to find that she was supposed to cut out a "toile," or linen prototype for a blouse.

"Like, that's not what I came for." She transferred to a professional class.

She had already designed professionally for Seventh Avenue manufacturers, and wears her own models around Paris.

Her clothes are much like herself — big, modern and well-made. She often wears her Paris prize-winning white full dress with matching shawl. "But this is my eye-stopper," she said, hauling out a long caramel mohair coat, which she donned over a ruffled red tiered skirt, checked blouse and knit tie, trendy Mary Jane pumps and bobby sox.

"I came to Paris to be inspired," said Sue, who looks continually carried away. She has been soaking up inspiration in her oak-beamed Left Bank studio, liberally decorated with her own things: a Marilyn Monroe poster, a collection of antique shoes, piles of fashion magazines, and a dummy-mannequin of her size.

Sue sometimes played hooky from school in Paris, but not to gossip in cafes, as most students do; she did it for work, and turned out most of a collection for Chantal Thomass, a young ready-to-wear designer.

Raised in New York and Long Island, Sue habitually collects prizes. False modesty is not one of her faults.

"I was Miss High School," she smiled. "An A student, varsity volleyball and so on."

She worked hard for success at Rhode Island School of Design. "I had dates every night with my sewing machine, and made friends with the nightwatchman so that I could work after hours."

She won the "Mademoiselle" magazine guest editorship, a Capezio shoe design award, the Next Great Designer Award given by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (ILGWYU), and a prize from the American Velvet Company.

Sue was destined for fashion. Her father, a buyer, escorted her as a little girl on tours of the garment district. "And I was always well-dressed," she remembers.

"I designed my first garment line in the fifth grade, and earned a profit of $5.86 making doll clothes for my friends."

Paris was her dream world. "French women are fantastically chic. Take the Metro: look at the girls in the bank; even my bakery girl dresses in the latest thing."

Misti Sparks of Krum, niece of the bride, escorted by Matt Sparks, nephew of the bride, was the flower girl. Ring bearer was Tyson Murphy.

Mark Huddle of Roswell was the best man. The groomsmen were Steve Sparks of Krum, Don Murphy and Lloyd McMahon of Midland and Mark Ernest of Roswell. Randy Cole of Amarillo, brother of the bride, and Tony Inman of Hobbs, cousin of the bride, were the ushers.

Mr. Cole presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a candlelight gown of gunny sack material with pearl buttons down the bodice, which had long sheer sleeves. The skirt was tied in back with an apron effect and fell in ruffles to the floor. She carried yellow and white daisies.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

Children misconstrue phrases

By ERMA BOMBECK

It is rare when adults and children share the same interpretation of a word or phrase.

Thus, water pollution to adults may mean harmful bodies that threaten existence, but to a boy it means "girls simming in the pool at the same time I do."

Invasion of privacy to kids is "assigned homework on weekends."

Parental brutality is "making me wash my face when I'm not going anywhere."

And incarceration in a penal colony without the advantages of due process of law comes out "summer school."

We've always had a rule in our family. You either get a job or go to summer school. We initiated this ruling when I spent three years with my son one summer listening to him whine, "There's nothing to do."

We don't care why they take so long as they get out of bed, get dressed, leave the house, and get a credit for it.

Our son appeared at breakfast yesterday morning en route to his first day at summer session.

"Want breakfast..."

"Do I have time?" he snarled. "Or do you want me to get there early and help set up chairs and check the people in?"

"Why are you so angry?"

"Hey, am I hostile?" believe me, I'm going to do the same things when I have kids...roust 'em out at the break of ten in the morning all summer long and send them off to a military compound where they're experimenting with solar heat in the classroom.

There they'll load them down with homework so they can't hear a newborn baby cry, or touch a leaf, or see the sky..."

"Then I'll know why I believe," I said, finishing the song. "It'll never make the top ten."

C'mon," he said, "I don't know what is is with you and Dad. I thought you wanted happy children out of your marriage. All you've got is a sweaty, irritable kid without affection who goes through every summer having anxiety attacks.

"I just finished up an entire year of study, study, study, term papers, notes, quizzes, tests, finals, research, bibliographies, orals, lack of sleep, dates, places, I don't know how much longer I can go without cracking!"

If he hadn't been taking a summer class in party guitar, he might have gotten through to me.

Weight control being urged for U.S. babies

Copley News Service

New concepts in infant feeding in the United States are now being introduced by a major U.S. baby food manufacturer.

Beginning some 10 years ago in West Germany, the nutritionally balanced and calorie controlled product has become the leading infant food in many parts of Europe, and now is available in America.

When solid food first is introduced to the baby, cereals mixed with milk, formula, honey, sugar and fruits usually are added to induce the baby to accept other foods. The new mother must guess at the quantities to add to her baby's diet, and often the mixture becomes far too high in calories for the child's needs.

The need to prevent overweight in babies, even very young ones, is becoming more apparent as adult America continues to fight the battle of the bulge. The time has come to control obesity from the cradle. Training a child in proper eating habits, with controlled calorie intake yet high nutrition foods, probaby is one of the best legacies that parents can provide. And it must begin in infancy.

Much of the problem stems from the confusion of what to add to the diet and when to do it. Transition foods from breast feeding and infant formulas to cereals and strained foods often are a "hit and miss" procedure of inaccurate nutritional and caloric levels. Baby formula companies have not produced strained baby foods and cereals, and the formulas often have a pharmaceutical connotation.

Baby food manufacturers, similarly, have not produced infant formulas. Neither seemingly has the technology to provide both.

The new products, however, bridge the obvious gap by providing total calorie-controlled infant formula cereals and fruits in one package. A new convenience for both pediatricians and new mothers, that meet the child's needs.

So. Africa discussed

Lola Igou, a resident of Midland and native of South Africa, described the economic, cultural and natural assets, as well as the development of the country at the southern tip of Africa, when Texas Zeta Mu Chapter of Phi Sigma Alpha met in the clubroom of Golden Crest Apartments. Nina Tharp was hostess.

Programs and social events for the coming year were planned.

The new president, Christine Broxson, appointed committee chairmen.

Chair stays with family

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)-A little high chair at the home of Mrs. R. W. Fogarty has seen six generations of babies grow up in it.

Mrs. Fogarty's great-grandfather made it in 1850s, before the Civil War, for his first child.

The chair is made of native maple and hickory, with the posts turned on a foot-powered lathe and the rounds slicked out with a drawing knife.

Oil, gas operators stake 150 projects in Basin areas

The weekly tabulation of planned exploration and development in the Permian Basin showed 150 applications submitted to the regulatory bodies governing the oil and gas industry.

Included in the count were 27 wildcats, a decrease of two from the 29 planned two weeks ago, while 123 development tests were scheduled.

The overall count rose 56 from the 94 projects planned in the previous week.

Railroad Commission District 8-A, headquarted at Lubbock, topped all districts in wildcat projects, with 10 sites staked, while District 7-C, San Angelo, recorded eight and District 8, Midland, had six.

District 8-A reported 43 field tests; District 8 had 32 and District 7-C showed 25.

Clements says room for blacks on his staff

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements told a group of black professionals Wednesday he has yet to find a qualified black to serve on the board of his oil drilling and pipeline corporation but said he was sure there are "ample blacks to take on major responsibility in my administration."

Following a speech at the Houston Business and Professional Men's Association, someone asked Clements, millionaire chairman of the board of Sedeco, Inc., whether there were any blacks on his board of directors.

"There are no blacks on my board...we do have blacks on our middle level management," Clements said.

Clements said he was "against racial quotas of any kind" to ensure fair employment opportunities but added his record on minority promotion while a deputy defense secretary in the Nixon and Ford administrations "is absolutely the best...better than HEW, Labor, State or any other department."

Clements told his audience there wasn't "anybody in the room that's been poorer than I have" and said he wanted to give minorities the same opportunity to rise to wealth as he had.

One way to do that, he said, would be to create an agency in the governor's office to help small businesses get state-backed loans and to link small firms with larger businesses in the same field to provide advice.

Clements said the Democrats and his opponent, Attorney General John Hill, were to blame for creating "a bloated bureaucracy" that resulted in a "burden of excess taxes."

And Clements told his audience they had been used by the Democrats.

$75 billion held by OPEC

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Total financial reserves of the 13 oil exporting states of OPEC climbed to $75 billion at the end of last year, the Credit Suisse bank said Wednesday.

It said the amount was five times the reserves the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had at the end of 1973 when sharp oil price increases began.

The OPEC oil ministers ended a semi-annual meeting Monday with a decision to leave crude oil prices frozen at $12.70 a barrel.

The bank, one of Switzerland's top three, said total accumulated foreign assets of the group were estimated at $155 billion at the end of 1977.

Eighty per cent of total was held by the sparsely populated states of the Saudi Peninsula — Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Saudi Arabia

Damages awarded

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Survivors of two men killed in a tank explosion have been awarded a total of $5 million in punitive damages. The Circuit Court jury handed down the verdict Tuesday against Union Oil Co. of California in the deaths of Chester Bagby, 22, and Herman Robertson, 43.

The two men were welders working on a storage tank at the Union Oil depot at Birmingport when the tank exploded Nov. 2, 1976.

Exception granted

Deepwater authority to evaluate big offer

HOUSTON (AP) — In a move to proceed with building an offshore deepwater port, the Texas Deepwater Port Authority has instructed its general manager to evaluate a $14 million offer for engineering data developed by the defunct Seadock Inc.

Seadock, a consortium of oil companies, is reported to have spent more than $20 million during five years of preparation before losing 52 percent of its financial backing. Exxon, Mobil and Gulf Oil withdrew from the group because they said federal regulations in the required Department of Transportation license were too restricting.

TDPA board chairman Bob Casey said Wednesday the authority will acquire the original plans from Seadock and file an amended application in early August with the DOT to build the facility in the Gulf of Mexico 25 miles off Freeport.

The authority also directed general manager Gerald A. Jackson to return with recommendations after evaluating the offer for the engineering plans.

Casey said the estimated cost of building the port has been revised upward to $1 billion. He said he hoped the authority will be able to sell its first $300 million increment in revenue bonds in the next 18 months.

All professional services to the authority, appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe after Seadock folded March 31, are being made available on a contractual basis, Casey said, and will be paid off when bond revenues are available.

Casey said Brown & Root Inc., which has already designed 40 percent of the offshore portion of the port, will act as project manager to push the amended application through the DOT.

Combustion Engineering Inc.'s Crest and Lummus subsidiaries have designed 40 percent of the onshore portion of the proposed port.

Saudis okay 750-mile peninsula oil carrier

The Washington Post

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — The Saudi government gave the final go-ahead Wednesday for construction of a 750-mile pipeline that will cut cross the entire Arabian peninsula to link Persian Gulf oil wells with the Red Sea and establish a major alternate oil transportation route.

The strategic significance of the $400 million project, scheduled for completion by 1980, is that it will free Saudi Arabia from its complete dependence on the Persian Gulf routes and thus diminish Saudi concern about security in the Gulf area.

"Saudi Arabia has only one export outlet," said Sheikh Zaki Yamani, the Saudi minister of petroleum and mineral resources. And this outlet, the Gulf, "can be blockaded," he added.

Petromin, the Saudi national oil company, was awarded the contract for construction of the pipeline from the eastern oil field terminal of Abqaiq to the Red Sea village of Yanbu. When completed, it will be able to feed tankers bound primarily for Europe with as much oil as is now flowing through the Trans-Alaska pipeline from the North Slope oil fields.

Yamani, in a speech last April at the University of Riyadh, warned that the Soviet Union was following a strategy designed to secure a supply of Middle East oil for the future. The coup d'etat in Afghanistan by the leftist Khalaq (Masses) Party heightened tensions in the Gulf region.

Yambu, today a sleepy fishing village of about 20,000 residents, is located 220 miles north of Jeddah across the Red Sea from the sourthern tip of Egypt. Current plans are to utilize the port for oil shipments to Europe via an expanded Suez Canal and the recently completed SUMED pipeline that parallels the canal route along its western side. Saudi Arabia exports 40 percent of its oil to Europe.

The troubled Horn of Africa lies well south of Yanbu.

Under Saudi Arabia's current planning, Yanbu will become one of the largest petroleum complexes in the Middle East by the end of the century. A liquid natural gas pipeline will run alongside the oil line to feed a $1 billion gas fractionation plant. The crude oil line will feed two refineries with a capacity of 670,000 barrels per day as well as providing 1.6 million barrels a day of crude for export. A giant $1 billion petrochemicals factory is also planned.

Petromin awarded construction contracts for the pipeline to SAIPEM,

'Park-barrel' bill includes most states' projects

By MARY RUSSELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The biggest parks bill ever drafted, a $1.4 billion piece of legislation with 150 projects in 44 states, cleared the House Rules Committee in five minutes Wednesday.

"Notice how quiet we are. We all got something in there," Rules Committee member Trent Lott, R-Miss., said after the meeting.

In fact, the bill affects so many House members — about 200, or nearly half the House — that it is being called the "park-barrel" bill and hailed as a new variation in the old politics of pork that may make environmentalists as popular as the dam-building Army Corps of Engineers.

The bill is a product of the legislative ingenuity of Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., one of the House's political masterminds, who just took over the chairmanship of the Interior Committee's parks subcommittee last year.

Burton ran two years ago for majority leader, and lost by one vote to Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas. He is considering running again in the next Congress, and some members have suggested privately that his ambitions and his generous parks bill are not unrelated.

The bill would increase development funds for 34 parks, historical sites and seashores, make 12 additions to wilderness areas, create 11 new national parks, historic sites and national seashores, add additional segments of eight rivers to the Wild and Scenic River class and designate four new national trails. Studies for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic River class would be authorized for another 18 rivers.

For the White House, the bill would include 85 to 90 percent of President Carter's environmental program, including $750 million for his urban parks program over the next five years.

"If it had a blade of grass and a squirrel, it got in the bill," said one member.

But Burton says the park-barrel talk "offends me," and points out that the bill also contains some very controversial items, that have made some members mad.

Burton admits that he originally conceived the idea for an omnibus parks bill as a vehicle for his own project — saving the redwoods in California by adding a large amount of acreage to the Redwoods National Park.

The redwoods bill breezed on its own, but Burton decided to keep the omnibus parks plan. "It just takes care of a hell of a lot of things that needed doing for a long time," he said.

"Time is running out on people. There is just not going to be that much open space left," Burton said.

Texas women lead fight

ATLANTA (AP) — Members of the U.S. Conference of Mayors' ERA task force said Wednesday they will begin a campaign to secure an extension of the ratification period for the Equal Rights Amendment.

"We, as mayors, recognize that the ERA is not a woman's issue or a man's issue but concerns the equality of all persons under the law," said San Antonio, Texas, Mayor Lila Cockrell, who heads the task force.

She said members of the task force plan to write letters to all members of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees to seek a seven-year extension of the deadline.

She said they also plan to contact all the mayors who belong to the conference and urge them "to participate actively for the extension of the ratification period," she said.'

She said the task force also plans to work in states that have not ratified the ERA "to lend assistance to the efforts to achieve ratification.

"We will contact mayors in those states and urge them to work for passage, and we will urge mayors to use every opportunity to educate the public regarding ERA ratification," she said.

She commented in a news conference during the mayors' conference here.

Georgia has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment, and the mayors' group had come under criticism from the National Organization for Women for meeting in a non-ERA state.

About a dozen mayors boycotted the session because of that issue, a spokesman for the mayors' association said.

At the closing session Wednesday, Mayor Carole McClellan of Austin, Texas, was elected to the group's advisory board, joining Mrs. Cockrell as the only two women on the board.

Other members of the task force are mayors: David Vann of Birmingham; Michael Bilandic of Chicago; Helen Boosalis of Lincoln, Neb.; Richard Carver of Peoria; Maynard Jackson of Atlanta; Frank Logue of New Haven; Henry Maier of Milwaukee; Carole McClellan of Austin; Thomas Moody of Columbus; Charles Royer of Seattle and Coleman Young of Detroit.

He's just old softie

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — So you think the Marines are tough. Maybe they are, but at least one commanding officer is an old softie when it comes to children.

The kindergarten pupils at St. Mary's School here wanted their Marine friend, Lance Cpl. Donald Milan, 20, to attend their graduation.

Milan, the uncle of Kimberly Ann Gostomski, one of the children in the class, made friends with the children when he visited the class in January.

The 21 five-year-olds wrote letters to Milan's commanding officer at the Cherry Point, N.C., base asking him to spring their friend from duty for the weekend. And he did.

"My lieutenant came up to me and said the colonel had received some ...information ...from St. Mary's requesting I be back there," Milan said. "The colonel just told the lieutenant his hands were tied. I guess the kids got to him."

Cubs split with Diablos

EL PASO — The Midland Cubs got to the El Paso Diablos for a 6-2 victory in the first game of a Texas League doubleheader here Wednesday night, but then they ran into Chuck Porter in the second contest and lost 8-2.

Porter is becoming a big gun for the El Paso pitching staff. His victory over the Cubs in the second game was his fourth in four starts. No one, including the Cubs, has solved him yet.

Porter had a lot of help, however, as the Diablos ran to a quick 7-0 lead before Midland got to Porter for two runs in the fifth inning on RBI singles by Steve Macko and Joe Hernandez.

The big inning for El Paso, which maintained a tie for first place in the Texas League West with San Antonio with the split, was a four-run second inning when the Diablos erupted for four straight singles and a sacrifice fly off loser Tom Butler.

Randy Martz (7-4) had a good outing for the Cubs in the first contest, giving up only two runs in his seven inning, 9-hit stint. He was in trouble a lot, but pitched out of bases loaded jams on three different occassions to go the distance.

Martz gave up a solo homer to Danny Goodwin, his 16th of the season, in the third. Goodwin also drove in a run in the seventh to be the only real thorn to Martz.

Greg Keatley drove in two runs in the Midland fourth with a big single and Hernandez, who had a good night in the twinbill, hit his third homer of the year in the fifth. Midland got two unearned runs in the seventh, and Kevin Drury had a run scoring hit in that frame. Eric Grandy accounted for Midland's other run in the first when he walked, stole second, went to third on a grounder and scored on a wild pitch.

The two clubs meet again tonight when El Paso sends Dave Steck (7-5) against Midland's Jack Ledbetter (2-4). El Paso leads the current six-game series by a 2-1 margin.

Tag along Lopez seeks sixth win

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — When Nancy Lopez was 8, her Mexican-born father, Domingo, placed a little white ball on the ground and said, "Let 'er fly!"

She did, and so began the Cinderella career of the best rookie ever to hit the women's professional golf tour.

"As a little girl, I used to tag along behind my parents on a public course in Roswell, New Mexico," Lopez said at a news conference Wednesday, her almond eyes twinkling over all the fuss stirred up by her LPGA record-smashing spree of the last few weeks.

"Daddy was a pretty good golfer," she said. "He just put the ball on the ground and told me to hit it in the hole. I've never had any formal lessons."

At age 9, she won her first tournament — by 110 strokes! At age 11, she beat her father, an auto body shop operator with a handicap of 3.

She played on the boys' golf team at Goddard High School in Roswell, helping it win the state championship, and took the girls' national junior title in 1972 and 1974.

On Friday, Lopez, now 21, tees off in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open, hoping to extend her all-time women's professional golf record to six straight victories and close in on the men's record — 11 in a row by Byron Nelson in 1945.

Since turning pro last July 29, she has won seven tournaments and earned $153,336, making her the all-time rookie money winner in golf, including the men.

Her fifth straight win at Rochester, N.Y., last weekend broke a LPGA mark held by, among others, Mickey Wright, who did it twice, and all-time money leader Kathy Whitworth.

Wright, among the 74 golfers entered at Hershey, has won 81 tournaments. Her 13 wins in one year is a record within Lopez's grasp.

On Wednesday, Lopez played in a pro-am and practiced. And everywhere she went, she was followed by sports writers and photographers.

She never stopped smiling, her pearl-white teeth flashing against a deep tan as she answered every question. A few:

Q. Do you detect jealously among the other players on the tour?
A. None at all, and I thought I would.

Q. Where do you get your power?
A. I'm regarded as one of the long hitters. It's timing, I think, and I used to drink a lot of milk when I was young.

Q. How do you account for your hot streak?
A. I don't know if you can call it that. I just think I am playing really well.

Q. How do you relax?
A. I like to lie in the sun.

After the 45-minute news conference she granted one-on-one interviews, always gracious, always patient.

As she put it in an interview the other day: "If I'm asleep, I hope I never wake up."

Brandts shakes goat role

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — For a man who makes a monkey of himself, it's always nice to come back and be the hero — especially when the whole world is watching.

Ernie Brandts, the Dutch soccer star, made one of the blunders of his career Wednesday and thought he had cost his team its chance of winning the World Cup. But later he made one of the plays that sent Holland into next Sunday's final against Argentina.

In a vital game against Italy, Brandts tried to stop ace forward Roberto Bettega from scoring and accidentally sent the ball rolling into his own net.

In scoring against his own team he crashed into his goalkeeper, Pieter Schrijvers, and put him out of the match. Schrijvers was carried off and a substitute took his place.

"This kind of thing doesn't usually happen to me," Brandts said. "I only looked at the ball and didn't realize Schrijvers had come out of his goal so far. I was shocked by what happened."

In the 49th minute the world suddenly looked a bright place again for Brandts. With an Italian challenging him on either side, he took aim from about 100 feet and sent a wonder-shot flashing into the top corner of Italy's net.

Arend Haan completed the good work for Holland by firing one in from 120 feet and the Dutch downed Italy 2-1.

In the other Group A match, Austria downed West Germany 3-2, and in Group B, Argentina swamped Peru 6-0, and Brazil beat Poland 3-1.

The two spectacular Dutch goals were as good as anything seen in the 3-week-old tournament.

But for Argentine soccer fans — and at this feverish time that means the whole nation — the goals that mattered most were the six scored by Argentina over Peru.

Under the complicated scoring rules of the tournament, Argentina needed to win by at least 4-0 to overhaul Brazil and reach the final.

As each goal went in, Argentines watching the game on television throughout the land became more frenzied. The center of Buenos Aires became a seething mass of noisy revellers.

Brazil, three-time winner of the trophy, was the only team among the 16 starters that went through six games without being defeated — and yet it didn't make the final.

Brazil beat Sweden 1-1, was 0-0 against Spain and downed Austria 1-0 in the first round, and in the second round defeated Peru 3-0, tied Argentina 0-0 and was 3-1 against Poland.

It was goals that counted in the end. Brazil and Argentina were even in points, and it was a matter of which team scored most. Leopoldo Luque and Mario Kempes, the Argentine goal aces, each claimed two in the night's triumph.

Texas Leaguers run to wire

By The Associated Press

Gerald Hannahf struck out ten and gave up only four hits Wednesday night in pitching San Antonio to a 4-2 Texas League baseball victory over Amarillo.

The victory moved San Antonio into a first place tie with El Paso in the Western Division of the Texas League.

In other Texas League action, Tulsa edged Shreveport, 10-9, Midland and El Paso split a doubleheader with Midland taking the opener, 6-2 and El Paso winning the nightcap by an 8-2 margin, and Jackson and Arkansas split a twin bill. Jackson took the opening game, 5-0 and Arkansas bounced back for a 4-1 victory in the second game.

Hannahf, who pitched seven and two-thirds of an inning, boosted his season record to 2-1. Gary Lucas, now 3-8, took the loss for Amarillo.

Marty Scott slammed a home run in the top of the ninth inning to give the Tulsa Drillers a 10-9 victory over Shreveport. Murry Littleton drove in four runs for Shreveport with a homer and a triple and Juan DeLiza added a home run for the Captains.

NHL may absorb WHA

TORONTO (AP) — The Toronto Globe and Mail says it has learned that the 17 National Hockey League governors will be asked to vote soon on a proposal to absorb four World Hockey Association clubs in an NHL expansion.

The newspaper said in a copyright story in Thursday's editions that the vote probably will be taken within two weeks.

The Globe and Mail said the proposal to be put to the NHL will be that three WHA clubs — the New England Whalers, Quebec Nordiques and Edmonton Oilers — join the NHL for the 1978-79 season, and that the Winnipeg Jets would join two years later.

The newspaper quoted a WHA source as saying the junior league has negotiated all the legal releases needed to make sure the proposal will avoid antitrust suits or other legal snags.

The report said the fact that a merger package is being put together has been known only to a handful of NHL governers and to John Ziegler, NHL president.

Dave Machemer wastes no time

By The Associated Press

It took Dave Machemer seven years to reach the major leagues and more than a week to get in a game, but when he finally did it was well worth the wait.

California's 27-year-old rookie third baseman, called up from the minors early last week when Carney Lansford was injured, was the first batter of the game Wednesday night.

He lined a 3-2 pitch from Minnesota's Geoff Zahn just inside the left field foul pole, becoming the 46th player in major league history to homer in his first at-bat. Don Baylor added a two-run homer in the first inning, his 17th, and the Angels went on to defeat the Twins 5-2.

"It's a great thrill," Machemer said. "I was really happy running those bases, as you could probably tell. I was just looking for a pitch to hit and luckily I got a fast ball up. I hit it good. I was just hoping that it would stay fair."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Cleveland Indians beat Kansas City 4-2, slicing the Royals' lead over California in the AL West to one-half game; the Boston Red Sox crushed the New York Yankees 9-2, the Milwaukee Brewers cooled off the Baltimore Orioles 5-3 and the Detroit Tigers outlasted the Toronto Blue Jays 10-8.

After the Angels grabbed a quick 3-0 lead, Minnesota's Roy Smalley countered with a two-run blow in the bottom of the first. Don Aase settled down after that and pitched his first complete game in 13 starts, scattering five hits. Rick Miller drove in the Angels' final two runs with a seventh-inning triple.

The last player before Machemer to homer on his first major league at-bat was Toronto's Al Woods on April 7, 1977.

"Actually," said Machemer, "I'm mostly a line drive hitter. I'd only had two home runs at Salt Lake City before being called up. I spent seven years in the minors, so it's taken me a while to get here. Now I just want to stay here."

Indians 4, Royals 2

Paul Dade's checked-swing grounder scored Jim Norris with the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and newly acquired Dan Spillner hurled three innings of one-hit relief. Spillner, acquired last week from San Diego, replaced Don Hood with the bases loaded and two out in the fourth, retired Pete LaCock on a fly ball and did not give up a hit until Fred Patek's one-out single in the seventh.

The Indians scored the go-ahead run without getting a ball out of the infield. Norris walked, Duane Kuiper bunted safely, Tom Veryzer forced Kuiper, with Norris taking third, and Dade followed with his grounder to short. The Indians, who tied the score in the fourth on John Grubb's two-run triple, added an insurance run in the ninth on singles by Norris and Kuiper and Veryzer's grounder.

Red Sox 9, Yankees 2

Carl Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk keyed a six-run third inning with consecutive doubles and Butch Hobson, Fred Lynn and George Scott homered as the Red Sox whipped the Yankees behind the six-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley.

The victory, Boston's 11th in the last 13 games and 21st in 27, enabled the Red Sox to take the rubber match of a three-game series in their first 1978 showdown with New York's defending world champions, who are in third place in the AL East, eight games behind Boston.

The Red Sox picked up a run in the second inning on a single by Lynn, a walk, a sacrifice and a Hobson's sacrifice fly. They nailed down the victory while shelling New York starter Jim Beattie and Dick Tidrow in the big third, which Hobson capped with a two-run homer. Lynn and Scott hit consecutive homers in the ninth off Catfish Hunter, just off the disabled list and making his first appearance since May 9.

"We usually don't play these type of games with the Yankees," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "We won two games easy and they won one easy."

Brewers 5, Orioles 3

Larry Hisle slapped a two-run single in the third inning and Buck Martinez drove in the decisive run with a sixth-inning sacrifice fly as Milwaukee ended Baltimore's four-game winning streak. Winner Lary Sorensen took a 5-0 lead and a three-hitter into the eighth but was chased when the Orioles scored three times on five consecutive singles and a sacrifice fly.

Paul Molitor singled, stole second and scored on a single by Sal Bando in the first inning and the Brewers scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth on a double by Robin Yount, a sacrifice and Martinez's sacrifice fly.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 8

Alan Trammell's solo homer triggered a five-run sixth inning for Detroit that erased a 6-5 Toronto lead. After Trammell's homer, consecutive singles by Lou Whitaker — his third hit — and Ron LeFlore plus a double by Steve Kemp chased Don Kirkwood, who had taken over in the fifth from starter Tom Underwood. Jim Crawford got the win in relief of starter Jack Billingham, who gave up four runs on six hits in the first inning. Jason Thompson also homered for Detroit while Otto Velez connected for the Blue Jays.

Boxing card features Tate

NEW YORK (AP) — Big John Tate, seeking the recognition needed to get a championship fight, and Vito Antuofermo, trying to stay sharp until he gets a title bid, headline a boxing card tonight at Madison Square Garden.

Tate, a 1976 Olympic bronze medalist who is unbeaten as a pro, meets Bernardo Mercado of Colombia, also undefeated, in a 10-round heavyweight fight which should draw attention to Tate's career if he wins.

Tate, 23, of Knoxville, Tenn., has a 12-0-0 record, with 10 knockouts, but as a pro he has fought in virtual obscurity compared with such Olympic gold medalists as heavyweight champion Leon Spinks, welterweight Sugar Ray Leonard and lightweight Howard Davis.

Mercado is 20-0-0, with 17 knockouts, and is ranked seventh by the World Boxing Association.

Antuofermo of New York risks being upset in order to stay sharp should he get the call for a title shot. He is 41-3-1, with 19 knockouts, and is ranked No. 2 by the WBC and fourth by the WBA. He faces Willie Warren of Sweetwater, Texas, who is 38-34-3.

Odessa's Steding loses big match

BELLEVILLE, Mich. (AP) — Top-ranked Shannon Wright of Las Vegas, Nev., defeated ninth-ranked Rita Hoff of St. Louis on Wednesday to advance to the women's semifinals of the U.S. Racquetball Association National Championships.

Wright will meet third-ranked Janell Mariott of Salt Lake City in one semifinal Friday night, while No. 4 Jennifer Harding of Portland, Ore., takes on eighth-ranked Karin Walton of San Clemente, Calif.

Mariott ousted seventh-ranked Martha McDonald of Gainsville, Fla., in the quarterfinals. Harding eliminated No. 6 Kathy Williams of Denver, while Walton pulled the upset of the night by defeating second-ranked Peggy Steding of Odessa, Texas.

Leon Spinks is wheeling again

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For the third time this year, heavyweight boxer Leon Spinks has been fined for driving without a license.

Spinks, who holds the World Boxing Association version of the heavyweight crown, paid a fine and court costs totaling $52 Wednesday after he was stopped by a Jacksonville policeman.

The officer said he pulled Spinks over about 2:50 a.m. Wednesday after noticing the car he was driving had expired license plates. Spinks was charged with driving without a license and operating a vehicle with an expired registration.

The 24-year-old boxer was arrested at St. Louis in April and charged with possession of one hundredth of a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana and driving without a license. The drug charges were dismissed later and he was fined $50 plus court costs on the traffic charge.

He was charged in March with driving without a license and driving the wrong way on a one-way street in St. Louis. A judge fined him $60.

Spinks defeated Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight title Feb. 15 in a split decision. He has agreed to a return match Sept. 15 in New Orleans.

Ali, who returned to the United States from the Soviet Union Wednesday, said in New York Spinks was only trying to get publicity before the rematch. "I can talk to presidents," Ali said, referring to his talks with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. "He's (Spinks) gotta get locked up," to get into the news.

Highway 80 tennis moves to town

The expanded Highway 80 tennis tour stops in Midland Friday for a three-day run as over 250 of the area's best net stars take to three courts across town.

Competition will begin at 8:30 a.m. Friday on the Midland High, Lee High and Midland College courts. Over 20 divisions of competition will be held through Sunday's finals at the three court sites.

For the first time, competition will be held in the Men's and Women's division, plus a 35-over Men's competition has been added. As usual, the tournament will feature action in age groups from 12 years and under to 18 years and under.

All divisions will feature action in both boy's and girl's singles and doubles. In all, there are over 500 entries in the draw since many of the competitors can enter more than one division.

Friday's first day action is not expected to end until dark. Saturday and Sunday's rounds will begin at 8:30 a.m. also. Sunday's finals are expected to end by mid-afternoon.

The tournament is open to the public, and there is no charge.

Auburn may choose coach

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn University is narrowing the search for a new basketball coach and the decision may be less than two weeks away, Sports Information Director Buddy Davidson said Wednesday.

Davidson told The Atlanta Constitution that the search committee will narrow the list of candidates next week and a new coach may be named soon afterwards.

The school is searching for someone to succeed Paul Lambert, who died June 6 in a motel fire in Columbus, Ga., while attending a coaching clinic. Lambert, a successful coach at Southern Illinois, was hired in April to build Auburn's program after Bob Davis was fired.

School officials have conducted on-campus interviews with assistant coaches Pat Foster of Arkansas and Murray Arnold of Mississippi State in the last week, Davidson said. Foster was considered for the post when Lambert was hired, while Arnold, who was head coach at Birmingham Southern last year, is a new candidate.

"I'm not sure who the committee has talked to in addition to Arnold and Foster," said Davidson. "I do know that some of the people who contacted us earlier have since either found new positions or have been satisfied where they are now.

"I don't think we've had too many new applications since Coach Lambert died," said Davidson. "The search committee has more or less reopened talks with earlier applicants.

"This isn't exactly the basketball-coach hiring season," he said. "A lot of people have already made plans, but the committee should get to the point late next week where it will be close to making a decision."

The search committee is made up of two persons each from the athletic board, faculty, student body and at-large alumni. Athletic Director Lee Hayley is chairman of the committee.

Bird's high priced arm fails in Florida sun

DETROIT (AP) — Apparently the palm trees, warm weather and relaxed living in Florida don't agree with Mark Fidrych.

Just as he fled Detroit several weeks ago for the easier pace of Lakeland, Fla., the prize Tiger pitcher has fled again — back to the Motor City — with his right arm still ailing, despite the ministrations of special trainer Jack Homel.

"If there's any improvement in his arm, it's very slight," said Hal Middleswotrth, Tiger public relations director. "He came back because he wasn't making any progress in Florida and he just got tired of being down there.

"If there's an improvement, it's slight. Plans for his future are very uncertain."

Fidrych has been lobbing the ball, rather than really throwing it, Middlesworth said. "He has no velocity and he has pain."

"The Bird," colorful 1976 American League Rookie of the Year, missed most of last season — first with a knee injury and then with tendinitis. He was sharp in spring training and in his first two starts this year before the arm pain returned.

A shot of cortisone didn't help.

Middlesworth said Fidrych will continue the exercise program he had in Florida, where he was treated by Homel and was under the supervision of Jim Leyland, manager of Detroit's Class A farm club at Lakeland.

Homel, trainer for the Los Angeles Dodgers for eight years and for the Tigers for 21, disagrees with doctors' contention that Fidrych has tendinitis.

Instead, Fidrych has a spasm in the deltoid muscle, Homel said, "the part that would touch the door" if one leaned his shoulder against it.

Two weeks ago Homel said, "We should have this under control in another week."

He had been giving The Bird "heavy massage — which hurts," and he said Fidrych's muscles had been loosening up a bit, indicating he was on the right track for recovery.

Fidrych seemed to be getting down on himself in Lakeland.

"Look at me," he said one day. "I had one good year and haven't done nothin' since. Who knows? I might have to go back to pumpin' gas."

But Homel was optimistic about the slender right-hander's future.

"I think he will pitch again, but he will have to have some pain with his pitching when he extends himself during games," he said.

Trevino eyes third golf sweep

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino, the happy collector of national titles, would like to start a third sweep this week in the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I've won two Canadian Opens, two U.S. Opens, two British Opens, two Mexican Opens," Trevino said before teeing off today as the defending champion in the Canadian National championship. "This would be as good a place as any to start a third time around."

And, he said, his chances are very good.

"It's a long course. There aren't all those lay-up holes like last week (in the U.S. Open). They won't be standing up there with irons in their hands. They're going to have to pull the driver out of the bag.

"And they're looking at a lot of rough. If they get in the rough, they're going to lose a shot. That's fine. That's the way it's supposed to be. And that gives me an advantage, 'cause I can hit it as straight as anybody.

"I'm hitting the ball as good as I ever have, both with my irons and off the tee. I'm just a little concerned about my putting. It's not as sharp as it could be, but I've been working on it a lot — hell, working on it for hours a day, on the golf course, putting on shag carpets in the hotel room, everything. It's coming around."

Trevino won the Colonial National Invitation, has been a runner-up four times, has collected $166,570 in earnings this season and comes off a strong performance in last week's American National Open.

Most of the same field of Americans are on hand, along with George Knudson heading a 21-man Canadian contingent.

In addition to Trevino, the top entrants are Jack Nicklaus, who designed the 7,096-yard, par-71 Glen Abbey course that will serve as a permanent site for this national championship, plus two-time Canadian champ Tom Weiskopf, South African Gary Player, newly-crowned U.S. Open champion Andy North, and J.C. Snead, who chased him to the title last week in Denver.

Strangely, neither Nicklaus nor Player has ever won the Canadian Open, though Nicklaus has finished second four times and third once.

King wants to break Wimbledon title record

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Billie Jean King wants to break the record she shares with Elizabeth Ryan. Both won 19 Wimbledon titles.

Ryan won hers — all in doubles — between 1914 and 1934. Billie Jean started her collection in 1961 and has won six singles titles, nine in women's double and four in mixed doubles.

Earlier this week she said she would "evaluate things" in September to see if she wants to keep playing.

"That extra title means a lot to me," she said. "It may be a long, long time before it is beaten if I don't do it."

A couple of years ago King, who's undergone three knee operations, decided she had had enough of singles play, but this year she is as competitive as ever, although slower at age 34 than in her heyday.

She has just recovered from a respiratory ailment that lasted several months — but that was a good thing, she maintains.

"Eventually it forced me to rest and the result is that I'm feeling as fit as ever now."

King dropped a third round set — the first she has lost in the tournament so far — to the Swedish youngster Elisabeth Ekblom — but it was only a momentary lapse. She came back to win 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

The two top seeds, Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova, won their third-round matches easily. Evert defeated American Lea Antonopolis 6-3, 6-1 and Navratilova beat American JoAnne Russell 6-1, 6-4.

But for little Tracy Austin, the 15-year-old from Rolling Hills, Calif., the day was a disaster.

She lost to Michelle Tyler of Britain 7-6, 0-6, 7-5.

Another British girl, 18-year-old Ann Hobbs, advanced to the quarterfinals by defeating seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

All the other seeds made it to the last eight except for Dianne Fromholtz, who was beaten by another seed.

Seaver's victory string runs out

By The Associated Press

Tom Seaver's winning streak finally came to an end — only because Ed Halicki started a mean streak.

"I just decided to go out there with hate," said Halicki after pitching the San Francisco Giants to a 3-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and their ace pitcher Wednesday night. "I decided no more buddy-buddy stuff."

Of course, the spindly Halicki was in the right frame of mind for the Reds after the kind of sorry work he's done against them in the past — a 1-7 lifetime record and inauspicious 6.53 earned run average.

Plus, he had the added incentive of facing Seaver, an illustrious pitcher who had won seven straight games, including a no-hit beauty his last time out against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Another classic performance was not in the cards this time for the fancy right-hander. Seaver gave up a second-inning single to Jack Clark to break up any no-hit intentions he might have had, then he allowed three runs in the fourth.

It might have been a 1-0 game had not a fourth-inning drive by Roger Metzger gone between center fielder Cesar Geronimo and right fielder Ken Griffey.

"When the ball went up I thought it would be caught," said Seaver.

So did the two outfielders, but each thought the other would make the catch.

"I looked at him and thought he would catch it and he looked at me and thought I would get it. No one called for it. It was just a lack of communication," said Griffey.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1; the Montreal Expos defeated the New York Mets 2-1 in a game shortened by rain in the seventh inning; the Atlanta Braves blanked the San Diego Padres 2-0 and the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the Houston Astros 5-4 in 11 innings. The Philadelphia-St. Louis game was postponed by rain.

Halicki allowed leadoff batters to reach base in four innings, but no Cincinnati baserunner got past second. He walked just one batter and struck out four.

With one out in the Giants' fourth, Seaver walked Willie McCovey and Clark followed with a double into the left field corner. An intentional walk to Jim Dwyer filled the bases. Metzger then got his double between Griffey and Geronimo for two runs and Marc Hill knocked in the Giants' third run with a grounder.

The victory increased the Giants' National League West lead to two games over Cincinnati.

Pirates 2, Cubs 1

Frank Taveras hit a tie-breaking, two-out single in the ninth inning to back the six-hit pitching of John Candelaria and lead Pittsburgh over Chicago.

Loser Ray Burris was locked in a 1-1 tie with Candelaria going into the Pirate ninth. But with one out, Phil Garner singled. Candelaria followed with a sacrifice bunt and Garner raced all the way to third as nobody covered the base. Taveras, batting near .400 the past 10 days, lined his single to left to bring Garner home.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the third on an RBI single by Gene Clines. The Pirates tied the game in the bottom of the third on Omar Moreno's RBI single.

Expos 2, Mets 1

Steve Rogers, weakly supported by Montreal bats the last eight times he has pitched, drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning single to lead the Expos over New York.

The game was held up three times, the last in the bottom of the seventh inning after a delay of one hour and 21 minutes. There were Mets on first and second with one out in the seventh when the game was called.

Rogers has allowed just 12 earned runs in his last 62 1-3 innings and has given up just four in his last 22⅓ innings. But the eight-hit victory snapped a personal two-game losing streak because of paltry offensive support.

Braves 2, Padres 0

Gary Matthews collected three hits and drove in two runs and Adrian Devine and Gene Garber combined on an eight-hitter to lead Atlanta over San Diego. Devine gave up six hits, struck out five and walked one before needing relief help from Garber in the eighth. Bob Shirley absorbed the loss.

Devine and Shirley had a scoreless pitching duel going through the first four innings, but the Braves took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Matthews' RBI single. In the seventh, Royster doubled for his second hit of the game and Matthews knocked him in again with his third straight single.

Dodgers 5, Astros 4

Pinch-hitter Steve Yeager singled home Bill North from third base with one out in the 11th inning to boost Los Angeles over Houston.

North led off the inning with a double off loser Joe Sambito, took third on a sacrifice bunt by Jerry Grote and came home on Yeager's single.

Bob Welch, the fourth Dodger pitcher, earned his first major league victory as he pitched two innings, giving up one hit and striking out four.

Jim Rice denies magazine article

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox slugger Jim Rice, appearing at a promotional luncheon Monday, issued a prepared statement regarding a Sport magazine article in which he was quoted as saying race has been a factor in the way he has been used by the club.

"I would like to make one statement which will be my final statement relevent to the recent Sport magazine article," Rice said. "I have not read this article. Even though certain quotes have been attributed to me, my position is as follows. Presently my only concern is that the Boston Red Sox win the pennant and bring the World Series to Boston. I have the highest regard for Don Zimmer, Haywood Sullivan, and the entire Red Sox organization.

Near the end of the lengthy article in Sport, Rice was quoted as saying, "I think race has been a factor in the way I have been used because the front office lets it be a factor. Race has to be a factor when Fred Lynn can hit .240 in the minors and I can hit .340 and he gets a starting job before I do. It's not Don Zimmer who decides who plays and where. It's the people upstairs."

Rice, who is black, and Lynn, who is white, both came to the majors with the Red Sox in 1975 and helped Boston to the American League pennant. Lynn was installed as the center fielder and won Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player honors. Rice split his time between left field and designated hitter.

"I have always been treated fairly by this organization," Rice said in his statement. "There certainly was a time when it bothered me to be solely a designiated hitter. Of course, I would like to be the regular left fielder, but I also realize that Don Zimmer has a job to do. I respect his judgment.

"There may have been a time through the years when race was an issue on this team — it certainly does not exist today.

"This team is comprised of many educated players and our only goal is to bring the World Series to Boston. I consider all my teammates friends, but that does not mean we have to socialize every minute of the day and during our free time away from the ball park. I am deeply hurt by the alleged quote that says, 'I associate with (Luis) Tiant and (Butch) Hobson, but I wouldn't call them friends.' There are men on this team such as Don Zimmer, Johnny Pesky, Carl Yastrzemski, and Walt Hriniak, whom I respect as much as anyone I have ever met.

"Fans of New England have been very gracious to me and my family. My wife and I have developed many fine friendships outside of baseball in New England and we hope to spend more time in Boston during the offseason. Hopefully, I will spend the rest of my career with the Boston Red Sox."

Rick Waits not unsung

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rick Waits has trouble winning games for the Cleveland Indians, despite an earned run average that is fourth best in the American League.

But after Sunday, nobody will be able to call the left-handed pitcher an unsung member of the Indians pitching staff.

The 25-year-old Atlanta native will sing the national anthem before a Sunday doubleheader with the Toronto Blue Jays.

Paper route helps teen buy home

GREENWOOD, Ind. (AP) — Pam Moulder, soon to be 14, is just about to become a landlady.

The eighth-grader has written a personal check for $3,700 to make the down payment on the purchase of the $18,000 house. About half the down payment was from her savings from a paper route. The remainder was a loan by her mother, Mary Moulder, who suggested the idea of buying a house.

Her mother and father, J. Stephen Moulder, a builder, obtained a mortgage on the balance in all three of their names because of Miss Moulder's age.

Her school classmates "at first did think I was crazy. But now they think it's a real neat idea," Miss Moulder said.

Her first tenants are expected to move into the house on her 14th birthday.

Jews from Arab countries still 'forgotten people'

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — They were the largest group of refugees in the Middle East. They were oppressed and financially victimized.

They are the Jews from Arab countries, who number 1.5 million in Israel, nearly half the population.

And while many of them would like to forget their troubled past, the government wants to dramatize their sufferings and losses as a balance to the widely publicized claims of the Palestinian refugees.

Their sufferings were real, their losses immense. But, in the midst of the Jewish-Arab population shift which accompanied the birth of the Israeli state, their cause was forgotten.

The government and the World Organization of Jews from Arab Countries contend that:

—Since Israel was created in 1948, 590,000 Palestinian Arabs (by Israeli count) have left Israeli territory and the occupied areas and become refugees. In the same period, Israelis say, 635,000 Jews have come to Israel as refugees from Arab countries.

—The Palestinians were not ordered out of Israeli territory (another point that is disputed), but nearly all the Jews were expelled as a matter of government policy.

—The Palestinians were nearly all working-class people or small-scale merchants. The Jews expelled from Arab countries included similar elements, but also included millionaires, families that controlled financial empires. Jewish financial losses greatly exceed those of the Arabs.

Still, the Israeli argument cannot change the fact that the Jewish refugees found their homeland, while the Arab refugees are denied theirs.

Palestinians moved into refugee camps, where they have stayed and increased. By 1974 the U.N. relief and welfare agency had 1.5 million of them on its relief rolls. A refugee mentality was born and nurtured.

A Palestinian Arab who left a Jerusalem suburb 30 years ago still considers himself a refugee — along with his children and perhaps his grandchildren. A Jew who left Bagdad at the same time considers himself an Israeli, and only in embittered memory a refugee.

In the 1950s, when most of the influx of Jews from Arab countries took place, the refugees were looked on officially not as refugees but as new citizens. They assimilated, slowly and painfully in many cases, but Israelis they became. They had, after all, reached the Israel for which they had longed for centuries.

In the Arab countries many Palestinian refugees were restricted to camps as hostages to the fortunes of Middle East politics. Others became successful businessmen in their new home. Still others turned to careers of international terrorism.

Palestinian rights became a war cry and a potent weapon in the Arab campaign against Israel.

Last October Mosue Dayan, making a bid to counter Palestinian claims with those of Jews from Arab countries, told the U.N. General Assembly:

"Security Council Resolution 242 refers to refugees, not Arab refugees. It covers both Jewish and Arab refugees. When the resolution was being drafted, a Soviet attempt to restrict it to Arab refugees failed.

"...Refugees in other parts of the world have been successfully integrated in the national community to which they belong. The only exception to the general rule is the situation of Arab refugees.

"The Arab states have refused to absorb or integrate their brethren into their respective societies. The Arab states have made the restoration of the legitimate rights of these refugees — the central demand.

"This demand constitutes a serious distortion of the realities of the refugee problem. We do not intend to send b ck Jews to Kran, Syria, Egypt, Morocco, Yemen and other countries, to be hanged in the public squares of Bagdad, and to be deprived of their human rights ad become third-class citizens, imprisoned in ghettos, as in Syria today.

"We will not send them back, in order to take Arab refugees in their place. The fact is that an exchange of population has taken place between Israel and the Arab countries."

That exchange of population began with Israel's birth as a nation in May, 1948.

Jordan's Arab legion drove Israeli forces and residents from the Jewish quarter of the Old City of Jerusalem. The Israeli underground bombed the Arabs out of Arab sections of the city.

"One evening, right after Israel declared independence, we heard a tremendous explosion," Haim Sharono a middle-aged laboratory technician, recalled. "From the roof of our house, we saw the underground explode the house of the muktar (head man) of the Sheik Badr quarter.

"The next morning, the whole quarter was filled with people loading carts with their belongings. A few days later, their abandoned houses were taken over by Jews from the Old City."

The Arabs who fled ended up as refugees. Those who stayed became part of Israel's half-million Israeli Arabs, many of whom still live in the homes they refused to leave in 1948. Israeli government policy was to encourage the Arabs to remain in areas not militarily sensitive.

In Arab countries, meanwhile, there were pogroms, killings, arrests, the public hanging of "Zionist spies" (Zionism in some countries was a capital offense), the seizure of property and bank accounts, and often mass deportations. Only in Morocco and Lebanon could the departure of th Jews be considered voluntary.

If many of the Jewish refugees avoid talking about it today, it is because of the wrenching upheaval in their lives. They had to make their way to Israel as best they could, and once here live in refugee camps while they sought ways to earn a livelihood in a new country. The Palestinians were not the only victims of the population shift.

"Every family paid a price," said Norma Balass, 32, executive director of the World Organization of Jews from Arab Countries. "For many it was a time of degradation. The fathers lost status. Many could find no jobs when they got here. The mothers, most of whom had not worked before, had to take menial jobs."

About 1.75 million Jews from Arab countries and their descendants are scattered about the world, but only a few hundred belong to the World Organization of Jews from Arab Countries. It was formed in 1975 in Paris to dramatize the plight of the Jewish refugees.

One of its aims is to get the refugees to register claims for losses. Even in Israel few have done so. Miss Balass, who came here in 1960 from Iraq, spent most of last year in the United States, trying to persuade U.S. government leaders to recognize the cause of Arab Jews. But she has not fileld a claim for her family's losses in Bagdad.

"It's the principle of the thing," she said, "not the money. I want to show that this so-called Palestinian problem was a hoax, that we have to be considered, too."

Israel did little for the Jewish refugees' cause under the Labor government that brought them here. Some blame it on the benign neglect of a government in the hands of European Jews.

"They had been through the Holocaust," one refugee from an Arab country said. "And to them there could be no comparable problem."

Then, as the time for peace talks with the Arabs came, Israel realized it was neglecting a propaganda card. The government began helping the World Oroganization of Jews from Arab Countries. The Foreign Ministry printed the organization's press statements, and sent Mordechai Ben Porat, the organization's chairman, to New York as a member of the Israeli delegations to the United Nations.

Pamphlets began to appear, emphasizing the cost of maintaining Palestinians as refugees — almost $1 billion in U.N. aid by 1974, but only $31 million from the Arab oil countries.

Still, it is hard to find an Israeli from an Arab country who knows that he could file a claim for what he lost decades ago. Those who know doubt that their claims would ever be resolved in an Israeli-Arab peace conference.

"It was so long ago," said a young woman who saw her father's shop burned by a mob in Casablanca in 1965. "My father doesn't want me to talk about it. He's an Israeli, now, and he doesn't want to be reminded."

St. Thomas choristers continue with musical tradition of Bach

LEIPZIG, East Germany (AP) — The 750-year-old St. Thomas choir made famous by Johann Sebastian Bach is flourishing under Communist rule and singing great church works as a musical ambassador for East Germany.

When Bach was cantor, or choir leader, of Leipzig's St. Thomas church school, the underpaid, disgruntled composer complained that many of his boy choristers were unfit to sing.

"Of the 54 members, 17 are usable, 20 could be usable later and 17 are incapable," he wrote in a 1730 letter to Leipzig city fathers.

Professor Hans-Joachim Rotzsch, 49, the 15th St. Thomas cantor to hold the city-paid position since Bach, has few of his illustrious predecessor's worries.

St. Thomas choir today wins rave reviews in frequent tours of Soviet bloc and Western countries including Japan, Belgium, Italy, Latin America and West Germany.

Acclaimed as being among the world's best exponents of the Bach choral tradition, the boy singers have been described in Western newspapers as East Germany's "ambassadors in concert dress."

The 92 choristers, age 9 to 18, are a hand-picked, professionally trained elite of East Germany's finest young voices whose grueling daily school routine ends just before dinner with three hours of choir and instrumental practice.

"The boys really don't have an easy life," Rotzsch said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Yet, East German boys are so keen to join the choir that the school is able to select only the very best, he said.

There were 140 applicants for 13 vacancies last year and only seven new choristers were selected from among 80 applicants this year.

Teachers throughout East Germany keep their eyes open for possible St. Thomas choristers, and any boy with enough talent can join the choir school.

But it tries to limit its intake to the Leipzig area because there is too little free time to allow boys from more remote parts of the country to travel home over weekends, Rotzsch said.

Bach was the most famous in a long line of St. Thomas cantors. The choir goes back to the 13th century, and is believed to have been formed when the original St. Thomas monastery was founded in 1212.

Bach's 27 years in Leipzig, until his death in 1750, were unhappy, marked by poor pay and constant friction with both his pupils and city employers.

Yet the choir gave the first performances of some of Bach's great works, including the St. John and St. Matthew Passions, the six cantatas forming the Christmas Oratorio and a host of other cantatas and church motets.

A key reason for the continuing prestige of the St. Thomas choir is that it has remained true to its proud musical traditions, resisting even Nazi-era attempts to turn it into a Third Reich propaganda instrument, said Rotzsch.

"Our culture minister has made me personally responsible for seeing that it remains that way," he said.

The present-day St. Thomas cantor says he is careful not to let the dust gather on his choir's laurels — especially since he feels that Bach's music remains very much alive more than three centuries after his death.

"It is no museum. Notes must be filled with life," said Rotzsch.

"We aren't just making music for intellectuals, but for all people, for the people of today."

Concert quick sell-out

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A Rolling Stones concert in the 1,800-seat Myrtle Beach Convention Center was sold out less than two hours after it was announced.

"We put it on the radio at 8:15 a.m. (Monday) and two minutes less than two hours later, we were sold out," said center director Steve Camp. Tickets for the Thursday night concert were $10 apiece.

The British musicians began their latest American tour earlier this month and have appeared in relatively small auditoriums in Atlanta, New York and several other cities.

West took the king of clubs and switched to a trump. South could take the diamond finesse, but he would surely lose one diamond trick (and his slam) even if the finesse worked.

Deciding that he might as well be hanged for a sheep as for a lamb, South led all seven trumps, discarding the three low diamonds from dummy.

East threw four clubs and a spade. Then, unwilling to part with another spade, East at la:t threw a diamond.

Now South took the diamond finesse, cashed the ace of diamonds, returned with a spade finesse, cashed the ace of spades and took the last trick with the eight of diamonds.

COULD SPARE SPADES

South's play would not have worked against an expert since South couldn't need spade tricks when dummy had a singleton spade and several trumps. East could surely afford to throw all of his spades if need be.

West criticized himself for the defense. "I knew," he said "that declarer must be trying to avoid the loss of a diamond trick. I should have thrown away the king and jack of diamonds to warn my partner to hold his."

Flynt discusses assassin's aims

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt says he harbors no ill will toward the person who fired the shot last March that left him partially paralyzed.

In an interview filmed Saturday in Columbus and broadcast Wednesday on NBC's "Today" program, Flynt said his faith in God remains unshaken by the attempt on his life.

Previously Flynt said Hustler magazine's investigation of the assassination of John F. Kennedy might have been behind his shooting, but in the NBC interview, he said, "I don't know what the reason was behind it. I'd like to know who did it."

The interview was filmed in Flynt's suburban Columbus home. He returns to the University Hospitals at Ohio State daily for therapy.

"Of course, we're hopeful that I'll be able to walk again," he said.

Will military defense spending become civilization's end?

UNITED NATIONS — While most advocates of disarmament have emphasized the danger of nuclear holocaust, the director of a Swedish research group says the death of Western civilization is more likely to come through inflation fed by defense spending.

That is the view of Frank Barnaby, director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, an independent disarmament organization created by the Swedish government to study and publicize the cost of the global arms race.

In the 12 years of the Swedish institute's existence, world military spending has grown from $218.5 billion a year to roughly $400 billion a year.

"It's obvious to most of us that increased military spending threatens the very existence of Western society," Barnaby, who is British said in a recent interview.

"There's absolutely no sign of restraint," Barnaby said, citing "the $50 billion MX (mobile missile) program in the United States, what may be tens of billions of dollars in expenditures by the North Atlantic Treaty nations over the next few years and many billions of dollars spent by the Soviet Union for defense against the cruise missile."

"If we continue to do what we are doing, unemployment is going to be much greater because of inflation," Barnaby said. "If you look at industrial investment in the United States and compare it with the possible $50 billion cost of the MX, you will see that a private enterprise system can't go on.

"You'll have to move to Draconian controls and eventually to something like the Soviet system."

The institute was one of six research organizations invited to participate in the U.N. General Assembly's special session on disarmament, which began May 23.

Barnaby objects to the amount of money spent in the arms race but he also believes that the time devoted to military projects by scientists could be put to better use.

More than 400,000 research and development scientists are working for military programs, Barnaby said, adding that that number represents more than half of the world's graduate physicists and research and development engineers.

"So in addition to the classic military-industrial complex, the academic community is adding to the pressure for continuing arms development," he said. "If you count in the tremendous bureaucracies that have built up in governments since World War II, what we really have is a military-industrial-academic-bureaucratic complex."

Against all this, Barnaby said, the resources devoted to disarmament are pitiful.

Per capita, 8.2 million Swedes may be doing the most with the $1.25 million their government provides for the institute annually, compared with the $16.5 million budget of the U.S. Disarmament and Arms Control Agency, which functions within the State Department. But this figure is dwafed by the 1977 Swedish defense expenditure of $1.7 billion, the highest figure in Western Europe aside from the NATO powers.

Asked if he sees the situation as hopeless, Barnaby replied:

"I personally believe in the common sense of the man in the street. If people know that the world's nuclear arsenals contain a million Hiroshimas and that the use of even a small part of them would reduce the Northern Hemisphere to a radioactive desert, if they know the facts about inflation, they will demand disarmament."

Barnaby said he believes that Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Jimmy Carter are both convinced of the need to reverse the arms buildup, and that the public will give them the necessary support to do it.

"Almost instinctively, man realizes when things are going too far," Barnaby said.

Housing worries young couples

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Young people, especially the near-to-wed, are more concerned with housing and the high cost of furnishings than one might suspect. They want it all settled early.

"We have enough money to put a small down payment on a house that is not your average mansion, but would make a very nice starter house near my husband's business," says one bride-to-be.

"If we use our cash for the down payment, we will have little left to furnish the house. Would it make more sense to rent one of the new apartments near his work and put the savings money and mortgage money difference into furnishing the apartment?"

If a couple can grin and bear it for a while, the house, even one sparsely furnished, is the best choice. It would give a young couple a great start for the future. It is difficult to find a house that one can afford, and if prices continue upward you may not raise a down payment for many years. You could perhaps use your own talents and have fun doing it yourself — with braided rugs, plywood furniture, crisp curtains, some tag sale items. Study some of the new do-it-yourself books for ideas and directions.

You might be happier, however, in an attractively furnished apartment that has all the finishing touches, if you have had your heart set on a perfectly decorated environment.

Another young fiancee has a personal problem.

"I've chosen lovely furniture, most of which is paid for by my own savings. I have worked from a plan of the rooms so that everything would fit properly and I've chosen color schemes and fabrics all with my boy friend's knowledge and approval.

"Now suddenly he tells me that he wants to move his "junk" into our new home. This includes a ratty looking book case, a gauche ceramic elephant, a battered, small, round table and a number of other eyesores. We have had quite a number of discussions, but he is insistent."

Refinished, these things may be an asset. Try to work them into your decorating scheme if you can. The elephant might make an interesting end table or can be used in the entranceway with flowers; the bookcase in a bright color might be ideal in a kitchen for cookbooks, magazines or perhaps even to hold small appliances for which you may not have space.

The small table can be draped with a suitable fabric and used in living room, bedroom or den.

You don't want everything to look shiny clean anyway, like a store showroom setting. One or two old things might improve the appearance. The old touch is almost necessary to give your decorating an appearance of depth, of roots.

Newlyweds should remember that their house or apartment will really take on charm as they go along injecting their own personalities into it. In the beginning, the starter pieces will be necessary — the bed, chairs, sofa and a few tables. But you must be ready to tie it all together with good color schemes, fabric, small decorative objects and the like. Slipcovering even the new pieces may do it.

High court puts limits on police

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, generally a friend to the cop on the beat in its decisions of the 1970s, has drawn a definite line on how far it will go to help law enforcement efforts.

Police must obtain search warrants before conducting an extensive search of a murder scene, a unanimous court said Wednesday. And statements taken by police from physically wounded criminal suspects may not be used as evidence against them, the justices said.

"The mere fact that law enforcement may be made more efficient can never by itself justify disregard of the Fourth Amendment," Justice Potter Stewart wrote for the court in requiring police to obtain search warrants for murder scene investigations.

The court said Tucson, Ariz., police violated the constitutional rights of Rufus Mincey Jr. after conducting a 1974 raid on Mincey's Tucson apartment.

"A four-day search that included opening dresser drawers and ripping up carpets can hardly be rationalized in terms of the legitimate concerns that justify an emergency search," Stewart said in overturning Mincey's narcotics conviction.

A new trial now must be held if Arizona officials do not wish to set Mincey free.

A police undercover narcotics agent was shot to death during the 1974 raid, and Mincey was critically wounded in the shootout.

Police questioned Mincey in the intensive care unit of a hospital, and prosecutors used his statements at his trial. Wednesday's decision said Mincey was in no condition to voluntarily waive his constitutional right not to talk to police without a lawyer's help.

What he told police from his hospital bed should not have been admitted as evidence, the justices said.

In other decisions, the court:

—Ruled unanimously that the federal government does not have to come to the aid of American manufacturers of electronic consumer products such as televisions and radios by imposing higher import tariffs on Japanese-made products.

—Ruled by a 5-4 vote that labor unions cannot legally discipline, or even threaten with disciplinary action, members who cross a strike picket line to perform their ususal supervisory duties after being requested to do so by employers.

—In separate cases from Pittsburgh and Florida, limited power of appeals courts to override trial judges in deciding how broad a group of individuals may be represented in one lawsuit.

Earthquake toll rising in Greece

SALONIKA, Greece (AP) — The death toll from the powerful earthquake that hit Salonika rose to 20 as six more bodies were found in the rubble of a collapsed eight-story apartment house, police said today.

Police and army searchers said they expected to uncover more bodies. The stench of decomposition permeated the air as temperatures rose to 95 degrees.

Light tremors kept most of Salonika's 600,000 inhabitants outdoors for the second consecutive night.

Early today, some residents returned home to claim personal belongings while others went to buy food and supplies. Many downtown businesses opened briefly before their owners boarded up smashed windows to return to parks on the outskirts of this industrial city.

Authorities warned that more aftershocks were expected and told residents to remain outdoors and away from high buildings.

Civil engineers toured the old city where buildings built prior to World War II took the brunt of Tuesday's quake. The engineers declared at least five apartment houses unsafe for occupancy because of dangerous cracks.

The government of Premier Constantine Caramanlis continued to airlift tents and medical supplies from military airbases around the country. It said there were no plans to seek foreign aid.

Only a handful of Salonika's public buses were on the road as were taxis. Most hotels were reported near empty as an estimated 50,000 tourists left the city in fear of a stronger tremor.

Of the dead, police said only one was a foreigner, a Yugoslav.

Some residents chose to remain, among them John and Margaret Gaskill of Fort Collins, Colo., who have been in a Salonika hotel since May 9.

Gaskill, 70, is a consultant to the Greek sugar industry and is under contract until July 8 as a member of the New York-based International Executive Service Corps.

Mrs. Gaskill, 68, said he went to work as usual today.

She said the earthquake had hit just as they prepared to go to bed.

"Everything began to shake. We've had many tremors but this was by far the worst. Plaster from the ceiling fell, walls in our room cracked and tiles fell in the bathroom but nothing hit us," she said. "We rushed out of our hotel and remained in an open area for several hours before returning to our room to sleep."

Budget deficit of $20 billion expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director James McIntyre Jr. now expects an estimated deficit of $20 billion in 1981 — the year President Carter wanted to balance the budget.

According to an aide, the budget official told a meeting that Carter's goal must be pushed back at least a year.

The budget deficit in the current financial year should be about $50 billion, down from the $62 billion originally estimated, McIntyre said. The deficit for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 could fall below $50 billion instead of the $61 billion estimated previously, he said.

The lower deficit for the current year will result from government agencies spending less than the amount budgeted.

Husband, wife make living designing unique costumes

By BURT BERLINER

NEW YORK (AP) — The monster that ate Detroit.

A glass and bottle that bat their eyelashes and dance to the tune of an orchestra of oranges.

Bugs Bunny.

A tunafish sandwich.

"We thrive on the variety," say Frederick Nihda and Janet Harper, the husband-and-wife team whose creative costume and prop-making bring life to scores of characters in Broadway plays and television commercials.

Able to meet the most unusual design demands under deadline pressure, the two have established themselves among a handful of freelance "character" costume and prop-makers in New York.

"Much of our work is subcontracted from costume houses. Other jobs come directly from the designer," says Nihda, formerly of Toronto. "Every job has a different challenge."

Nihda does most of the TV commercial work while Ms. Harper has concentrated on theater, opera and film-related assignments here and in London, where she headed the art department at Bermans & Nathans Ltd. costume house.

Operating out of their workshop in lower Manhattan, the two steer clear of large repetitious jobs, opting instead for more stimulating one-of-a-kind assignments.

The list includes the Tin Man outfit in the Broadway musical, "The Wiz," (made of fiberglass pieces fastened by leather straps) and Bugs Bunny and other Warner Bros. cartoon characters featured in ice-skating shows.

"New York offers the variety and individuality we crave," says Ms. Harper.

For example, the monster that ate Detroit was a smoke-blowing, bug-eyed but appealing horror for a PowerHouse candy bar commercial.

The glass-and-bottle dance team, stars of a Canada Dry commercial, featured carved foam faces with Betty Boop-type eyes and a jiggling bottle cap.

Then there was Chicken Big, sporting 4,000 hand-sewn feathers, for Colonel Saunders Southern Fried Chicken; a tunafish sandwich costume promoting Nabisco's "Tuna Twist" sandwich and salad seasoning mix; and 10 dancing oranges wearing sunglasses for a Tropicana orange juice ad.

"One of the funniest jobs was an apple, two bunches of grapes and a pile of leaves for a Fruit of the Loom commercial in which the fruit on the label comes to life," Nihda says.

His credits also include 36 rattan horses' heads for the New York, Boston, San Francisco and national touring companies of "Equus" and rubber armor for the dancers in Bob Fosse's "Pippin."

"There aren't many people who consider costume and prop-making a career in America," Ms. Harper says. "Often aspiring stage designers will do it as a substitute until something better comes along."

'Othello' to open 10th season

ODESSA — Final rehearsals are under way for the Globe theater's first production of its 10th annual Shakespeare Summer Festival.

The production is "Othello," Shakespeare's monumental dramatic tragedy, and it will open Saturday night to initiate the summer festival which continues through late August.

Also to be offered in the 1978 festival are performances of a Shakespearean comedy, "Love's Labour's Lost," and a new play, "The House of Saul," by Agnes Sanford. These two productions will enter the festival repertory in July.

Charles David McCally, the Globe's producer and managing director since 1968, is directing "Othello" and also will stage the other two productions. McCally recently returned to Odessa following a year's leave of absence to complete work on a doctoral degree at Florida State University.

The "Othello" cast is headed by Joe Blankenship in the title role. J. David Weddington will be seen as the evil Iago, with Jillian Eklund taking the role of Desdemona.

Others in featured roles in the large cast include Patrick Skelton as Cassio, Raynor Nicholson as Roderigo, James Botton as Brabantio, Melissa Hatfield as Biana, and Vincent Niemann who portrays both Lodovico and the Duke of Venice.

Other professional players in the cast are David Minton, Jack Coleman, Jerry Dickey, Frederick Chrislip, Stephen Riggs, Rhonda Clark, Gail Felps and Craig Campbell. Locals performing in the production include James Cunningham, Terry Lister and Jimmie Hogan.

Tickets for the opening performance of "Othello," and subsequent performances of the drama, are now on sale at the Globe box office, priced $4 for adults, $2 for students. A special 25 per cent discount on admissions is offered to groups of 20 or more. Additional information on the group rate is obtainable from the Globe business office, 332-1586.

Jim and Anne Weaver, Dallas-based singers, are among featured entertainers in the pair of musical programs scheduled here Saturday under auspices of the Tall City Lions Club. Weaver is a former Midland resident.

Concert pair slated

Jim 'n' Anne, a Dallas-based singing team, will headline a pair of musical programs scheduled here Saturday.

Uniformity in law

Much of the debate in the House Criminal Justice subcommittee over a massive revision of the federal criminal code is focused on the length of time violators of federal law will spend in prison.

But the most persuasive argument in favor of passage of the legislation is the equity it will bring to the federal judicial system.

Under the version approved by the Senate, according to the research division of the Library of Congress, guidelines would be established which could increase total time in prison, although maximum sentences would be reduced. Less generous provisions for parole and time off for good behavior would be offsetting factors.

The study indicated that the proposed changes could add as much as 93 percent to the time prisoners would spend behind bars.

House critics complain that the Senate bill is unnecessarily severe and weighted in favor of prosecutors. Supporters of the stiffer penalties, however, are more attuned to the public dismay over lenient treatment in the federal courts.

No matter which faction prevails in the House and in the ultimate conference to reconcile House and Senate versions, the long-awaited recodification will eliminate the glaring differences in penalties assessed nationwide for similar crimes.

Previous drafts of the legislation outraged publishers and broadcasters with their versions of heavy penalties for revelation of "secret" government information, which triggered charges of press repression, and rightly so.

Revisions have tightened up the requirements for the secret designation and have adopted a more reasonable approach to press access.

The concessions have not satisfied all of the publishing and broadcasting industries' representatives.

The overdue move to uniform justice and standardization of procedures, however, seems to make the legislation more acceptable. Refinements can be made as the need develops.

Tax revolt stampede

James Roberts, writing in his front-page column, "Drifting Sands," in the Andrews County News, says that since passage of California Proposition 13, there has been a virtual stampede nationwide as politicians rushed to become identified with the tax revolt.

He says the mark of a successful politician is in recognizing a trend .... and getting out in front of it as a leader.

Roberts also points out that some of those who have rushed to be identified as leaders of a tax revolt were leaders of the tax-spenders — until California passed Proposition 13.

"Take for example, John Hill, Democratic candidate for governor," Roberts wrote.

"Hill has spent most of his adult life as either a claims lawyer or an Austin bureaucrat," the Andrews publisher continued. "He has now jumped on the bandwagon to rush to save us taxpayers in Texas money in the future.

"Youll pardon us if we don't swallow the line complete with hook and sinker.

"Before Hill took office in 1972, the attorney general's office employed about 150 people and operated on a budget of $2,500,000. In the six years brother Hill has been in office the personnel has jumped to 345 people .... and the budget is set at $18.1 million for this fiscal year."

"It's what you call a savings in reverse," Roberts concluded.

James Roberts believes in telling it like it is — and he knows the score.

CHARLEY REESE

If peace in Mideast, it will be in spite of U.S.

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — If there is peace in the Middle East, it will be in spite of President Carter and current U.S. policy which there, as elsewhere, seems designed to inflict the maximum damage to American interests.

According to Israeli sources, Egypt and Israel were on the verge of peace agreement until Egyptian President Anwar Sadat met with President Carter. After that meeting, Sadat upped his demands and the negotiations have been stalemated.

What took place nobody but Carter and Sadat knows. I can make a good guess, though. Sadat, who had been frightened by the election of Prime Minister Menachem Begin into seeking peace, realized upon meeting Carter that the U.S. president was a simpleton who could be easily manipulated.

Examine the situation. Sadat faced an economy in Egypt that is literally turning to dust; on his western border is the Libyan madman, Qaddafi; on his eastern flank, a militarily powerful Israel now led by a very tough man indeed who Sadat knows will not play by the same rules other politicians do.

Sadat needed U.S. aid so badly that he expected to pay the price of a separate peace with Israel. Once he met Carter, however, Sadat realized that he could very likely get what he wants from the U.S. without a separate peace. And that is exactly what is happening.

Instead of pressuring Egypt to sign a peace treaty, the Carter administration is pressuring Israel to make further concessions. The Israelis will not do this and so, frankly, there is little hope for peace.

My sources tell me that Begin made a maximum offer the first time to Egypt and has no intention of giving any more of any substance. In fact, Begin's offer was so generous that he was criticized by even some of the more dovish Israelis.

Furthermore no Israeli government, including Begin's opposition, will tolerate an independent Palestinian state on the West Bank. The western border of the West Bank is only 12 miles from the Mediterranean. An independent Palestinian state armed, as it would be by Moscow, and ruled by the terrorists from the Palestinian Liberation Organization, would be like a loaded pistol with barrel already in Israel's mouth.

What's more King Hussein of Jordan does not want a Palestinian state on the West Bank which is why he is avoiding the negotiating process. A Palestinian state would be as much of a threat to his country as it would be to Israel. The Palestinians tried in 1970 to overthrow his regime and his Bedouin army killed a stack of them.

Hussein, who is nobody's fool, hit upon a clever ploy to keep himself out of the negotiations. He has said he will not talk unless Jerusalem is on the agenda and since, as he knew in advance, Israel will not even discuss returning Jerusalem, he says there is no point in talking about the West Bank. In short, Hussein is quite happy with Israeli occupation of the West Bank. But now he is getting pressure from the Carter administration.

Why is Carter suddenly enamored of the idea of a homeland for the Palestinians? Well, the first point to understand is that Carter knows no more about the Middle East than he does about Africa, Asia or Latin America, which is to say nothing. The second point to understand is Carter belongs to the Rockefellers. The third point to understand is that Aramco, the Arabian-American Oil Co. which markets Saudi Arabian oil, belongs to the Rockefellers.

Now two million Palestinian Arabs live in other countries including Saudi Arabia and all of these Palestinians who are generally very bright and often very restless and passionate make rulers nervous. Neither stability nor longevity has been a characteristic of Arab rule in recent decades.

My belief is that U.S. policy on the Middle East is coming out of Riyadh via Aramco. This is both stupid and dangerous. Stupid because the Saudi Arabian government, one ruling family, is shaky and subject to be replaced by a coup and dangerous because we may well push Israel into another war.

I can assure you that if Israel is pushed to the wall, she will push the button. The Israelis are determined that if there is to be another Holocaust, the Jews will have lots and lots of company.

Too bad there isn't a Nobel Prize for foul-ups. Carter would win it hands down.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

California Watergate? Could be

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It is the nature of politics that an occasional putrefying odor will bubble up from below to foul the atmosphere. Such an emanation, with a strong smell of Watergate, has now been detected in California. It could create a huge political stink.

It has all the unsavory ingredients of Watergate— illegal campaign contributions, laundered cash, secret manipulations, influence peddling. There has even been a cover-up.

The evidence is contained in a stack of affidavits, investigative reports and other documents that we have obtained. A Senate committee has been digging into the case. The FBI and the Federal Election Commission (FEC) are also investigating.

The case revolves around Earl Brian, a staunch conservative with an imperious air, who was a top aide and political protege of ex-Gov. Ronald Reagan. Brian ran California's giant Health and Welfare Agency and then, with Reagan's active support, tried to gain the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Before he left the welfare agency in 1974 to run for the Senate, Brian made two moves that investigators are now reviewing. He granted an increase in Medicaid payments to the state's nursing homes. He also considered a pilot project to pay nursing homes to care for severely impaired patients.

The California Association of Nursing Homes, whose clients would benefit, wanted the pilot project so badly that the association formed a special committee to lobby for it in Sacramento. The committee was headed by Robert Glenn Olels, owner of the Glenhaven chain of seven nursing homes. Another prominent member was William Bauer, who owns seven Casa Blanca nursing homes.

Shortly after Brian resigned from the welfare agency, two nursing homes owned by Olels and Bauer were mysteriously selected for the project. Also chosen were two other facilities owned by association members who had been lobbying for the project.

The fact that Brian had formally cut his ties, apparently, did not diminish his influence inside the agency. As Reagan's favored Senate candidate, he continued to pack a wallop. This was impressed upon nursing home owners who were quietly pressured to contribute to Brian's Senate campaign.

Olels and Bauer, presumably grateful for their state blessings, began soliciting contributions from other owners.

Yet all this cash, plus Reagan's political boosting, did not save Brian from an ignominious defeat in the 1974 Republican primary. The wounded political warhorse was also left saddled with $50,000 in campaign debts.

His financial need coincided with a decline in the fortunes of the pilot project. State health officials were muttering that the project was illegal, and it looked as if the whole program would expire. All the elements were present for a political fix.

The message was communicated to the nursing home owners that they would be expected to help make up Brian's campaign deficit if they wanted the program extended.

Although Brian was out of office, the memo adds, "he was perceived as having tremendous influence" in the Reagan administration. They thought he had life-or-death power over the lucrative program. This "is alleged to have provided Brian with great leverage over the nursing home owners," the memo relates.

Olels and Bauer delivered the message to their fellow nursing home owners at a secret meeting on July 12, 1974, at the Velvet Turtle restaurant in Long Beach, Calif. One nursing home owner, Robert H. Brown, swore in an affidavit: "Olels and Bauer invited us to contribute a minimum of $5,000 each to pay off Brian's campaign debts."

The affidavit also charged that "Olels and Bauer made us aware of Brian's demands ... that if we contributed, we could expect Brian to take action quickly ... that Brian had this kind of authority and power even though he was no longer head of the Health and Welfare Agency." Brown said he had agreed to kick in $5,000 in three checks.

Another nursing home owner who attended the secret meetings, Victor Backus, told his story to an investigator for the Senate Committee on Aging. He confirmed that "we were told by Bauer and Olels that we would be expected to contribute a minimum of $5,000 to help Brian pay off his campaign debt."

Backus confided that Olels "instructed me to obtain a cashier's check for $5,000" because "personal checks would not be acceptable." Added Backus: "I thought the payment of money was a good investment."

Just two months after the secret meeting, the contributions had been collected and the campaign debt reduced. Then Brian's former colleagues at the health department came through. They declared an emergency and extended the pilot program, without bothering to hold public hearings.

Footnote: Olels told our associate Howie Kurtz that "there are no facts in these allegeations." Brian and Bauer did not return our calls.

INSIDE REPORT:

Dinner, evening with Joe Califano for a mere $500

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Health industry lobbyists unable to gain the briefest audience with Joseph Califano, the secretary of health, education and welfare, can spend a whole evening with him here June 27 — by shelling out a mere $500.

That money would enrich the campaign war chest of Rep. Andrew Maguire, a gravely liberal Democrat from New Jersey whose views collide with the lobbyists' clients. For that $500, the lobbyists not only get "an intimate dinner" with Califano but also cocktails with the secretary of transportation, the speaker of the House and assorted congressional grandees playing key roles in health legislation.

The annual lobbyist shakedown is clearly alive and well in Washington, almost undiminished by post-Watergate morality. Pressure for campaign contributions from lobbyists is traditionally applied by Republicans and Democrats alike, though most heavily by the party in power; it can always order up cabinet members. Jimmy Carter's non-imperial presidency and the advent of reform congressmen such as Andy Maguire have changed nothing.

What is billed as "an evening with two members of the president's cabinet" to help Maguire's "campaign fund" is in the grand tradition. The evening begins at 5:30 p.m. with "cocktails" at the Folger Shakespeare Library. Rep. Paul Rogers of Florida, chairman of the House subcommittee considering health cost containment (which includes Maguire), will be present. So will two other senior members of the parent Commerce committee: Reps. John Moss of California and John Dingell of Michigan.

Evans Novak

For lobbyists outside the health field, the pickings are joyful: Transportation Seretary Brock Adams; Sen. Harrison Williams of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee; Rep. Thomas Ashley of Ohio, chairman of the House Special Energy Committee — even Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

That costs $100. For another $400, says the invitation, "an intimate dinner with Secretary Califano will follow the reception" at a private home nearby. Since lobbyists seldom penetrate the HEW secretary's inner sanctum, this provides a golden opportunity for a lobbyist to pay his fee and make his case and, more important, report juicy details to his client about dinner with Joe ("So, sir, I told Joe that...").

Califano is becoming legend for cavalier treatment of businessmen. He recently kept one health insurance executive waiting 60 minutes beyond the appointed hour, then announced he was too busy to see him. But the secretary has no idea who his dining partners will be June 27. "The guest list is the congressman's responsibility," a Califano aide solemnly told us.

If Califano does not know who is invited, Maguire is not telling. "Are you serious?" cracked the congressman when we requested the names solicited. Maguire is the beau ideal of the famous Watergate class of 1974 elected following Richard Nixon's disgrace, advocating open government and candor. But when we questioned him, he displayed some of the testiness and secrecy of the bad old days.

Did he solicit a list of lobbyists? "We have simply mailed to people I know or to people known by people I know or to lists provided by them," he answered. But does that include lists of lobbyists? "I've answered your question," he snapped.

Actually, Maguire probably could not supply the list. One health industry lobbyist who has never met Maguire was invited by a mutual friend to a recent planning session for the $500 affair over coffee and Danish at a Washington law firm's conference room attended by business lobbyists. Each agreed, in chain-letter style, to produce 20 new prospects. The health lobbyist soon received from Maguire 20 blank invitations, which he mailed to his own list of 20 lobbyists.

Every health insurance lobbyist we checked had received an invitation, though few had ever met Maguire. "I wouldn't know him if he walked through my door," said one who has been prodded by telephone on three occasions since receiving his invitation.

There are signs, however, that the old lobbyist shakedown may not be quite as alive and well as it used to be. One health insurance lobbyist, with a good record of Democratic party activism, has been unable to gain an audience with Califano. "I'll be damned if I'll be blackmailed or allow clients to be extorted to sit down and have dinner with Joe Califano," he told us. Another lobbyist, also a faithful Democrat, said: "It's shameful, it's outrageous and it's been going on forever."

Our spot check showed no acceptances yet by health insurance lobbyists, a large part of the health lobby. Only one — representing Nationwide Insurance — indicated a clear desire to go if he could get home office clearance. The telephone prodders have their work cut out for them.

Apologists say such shabby methods are necessary for electing outstanding congressmen against tough opposition. But Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Rpublican on the House Ways and Means Committee, never has solicited Washington lobbyists, nor accepted more than $50 from anybody, even when facing a strong challenge from Democrat Constanza in 1974. So maybe there is a decent alternative to the old-fashioned Washington shakedown.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched upward today in moderate trading following two days of declines.

At noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks had climbed 1.56 to 826.49.

Among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, advancing issues outnumbered those dropping by a 6-5 margin.

Volume on the Big Board came to 12.19 million shares in the first two hours, against 13.69 million in same period the day before.

After the Dow Jones slipped by as much as 6 points before Wednesday's closing, analysts began to detect a slight late turnaround. The slight upswing continued into today as the troubled dollar began to recover some lost ground on foreign exchange markets, apparently on reports President Carter may raise oil-import fees to discourage petroleum consumption unless Congress enacts his oil-tax plan.

But analysts also were waiting for the Federal Reserve's weekly money supply report, scheduled for release after the 4 p.m. NYSE close, to see if new credit-tightening moves might be indicated. Stock prices fell Tuesday and Wednesday partly on fears of higher interest rates; a possible ¼-point jump in the prime rate to 9 percent was anticipated for Friday.

As has been the case in recent days, speculative activity in gambling-related issues provided most of the excitement on Wall Street.

Ramada Inns, which owns 7 percent of cesino operator Del E. Webb, moved ahead ¼ to 8⅝. Del E. Webb was up ¾ at 22¼ and Playboy Enterprises added 1⅝ to 22⅝. Harrah's rose 1¼ to 28¼. On the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International class A was among the most-actives at 73, up 4.

Among actively traded NYSE issues, Sony was up ¼ at 8. Arlen Realty advanced ⅛ to 4⅛ after announcing a $110.9 million fiscal-year loss, against a loss of $48.7 million the year before. Federal National Mortgage was unchanged at 17½.

Retailing issues were mixed, with Jewel Companies unchanged at 20½, Sears Roebuck down ⅛ at 23 and Woolworth up ⅛ at 18¾. Woolworth projected an improvement in second-quarter earnings over the 32 cents a share net in the first three months of the year.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added .08 to 53.99.

Decision gives union rights on company land

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today approved the right of labor unions to hand out on company property pamphlets containing political material.

In a 7 to 2 decision, the court rejected arguments by Eastex Inc., a paper products company in Silsbee, Texas, which claimed its property rights were violated by the union's distribution of the political leaflets.

Justice Lewis F. Powell said for the majority that the company's claim to a property right in this case was "largely misplaced."

Powell said the company must show that the union activities posed a threat to management of the company or were disruptive in order to justify a ban on distribution of literature "during non-working time in non-working areas" of the company's property.

"In our view any incremental intrusion on petitioner's (the company's) property rights...would be minimal," he said.

Justice William Rehnquist, who was joined in a dissent by Chief Justice Warren Burger, said, "Congress never intended to require the opening of company property to the sort of political advocacy in this case. Thus, the employees' effort to distribute their leaflet in defiance of petitioner's wishes would clearly be a trespass."

In 1974, workers at Eastex sought to distribute leaflets that urged workers to oppose a proposed "right to work" provision in the Texas state constitution, and attacked then-President Richard M. Nixon for vetoing a minimum wage bill.

Two other sections of the circular pertained directly to union organizing activities and were not in dispute in today's court case.

The Supreme Court noted today that Texas already had right-to-work legislation. However, it said that a proposal to incorporate it in the state constitution would make it that much more difficult to repeal and thus affected workers' interests.

The court also noted that Nixon's veto of a proposal to raise the federal minimum wage to $2 an hour could affect the plant workers even though their own minimum wage at Eastex was already $3.86 at the time because federal minimum wage law provides a floor for wages throughout the country.

Consequently, the Supreme Court said the National Labor Relations Board was justified in ruling that the disputed sections of the pamphlet dealt with matters of "mutual aid or protection."

As such, the court said, the union had a right to distribute its views on such matters on company grounds.

The ruling upheld a decision by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Neill takes Carter's side on veto rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill agreed today with President Carter that Congress has gone too far in seeking veto rights over executive branch actions. O'Neill's comments may help to defuse a potential contitutional fight.

In a special message to Congress, Carter said Wednesday he believes such vetoes are unconstitutional. And he served notice that generally he will no longer feel legally bound by legislative vetoes "over the execution of programs."

Without specifically endorsing Carter's message, O'Neill told reporters, "I personally think in some instances we have overstepped our rights."

He referred especially to provisions written into some authorizing legislation that would submit to possible congressional veto the regulations an administrative agency might issue in carrying out the authorized program.

O'Neill said such procedures result in delay and paperwork "and nobody (in Congress) reads the regulations anyway except some legislative aide."

He said that beginning about 15 years ago, Congress and the public became conscious that presidential power has grown to the point of upsetting the balance between the executive and legislative branches.

But he said this has been largely corrected through legislation trimming the president's power to impound funds voted by Congress, limiting his war powers and establishing a congressional budget procedure.

The legislative veto is a device built into laws affecting the operation and financing of the executive branch. It enables Congress to reject presidential proposals without giving him an opportunity to override the lawmakers. Congress, on the other hand — through constitutional authority — can override a presidential veto on a two-thirds vote by both houses.

The president's message cited situations in which Congress insists that "each decision or regulation under a program" be delayed for a specified period, during which time "a majority of both houses, or either house, or even a single committee is authorized to veto the action."

Passman's threats of suicide revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A physician who has been treating Otto Passman testified today that even during his current competency hearing the former congressman has threatened to commit suicide.

"Early this morning he indicated he would do away with himself rather than stand trial," said Dr. Christian Ulrich, an internal medicine specialist from Monroe, La., Passman's hometown.

The hearing is being held to enable U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker to decide whether Passman — who will be 78 next week — has the mental capacity to undergo trial on bribery and conspiracy charges in a Korean influence-buying case.

Trident missile crashes during land-based tests

CAPE CANAVARAL, Fla. (AP) — A Trident missile crashed into the South Atlantic today when an undiclosed problem developed in the missile's second stage during a land-based test launch here, the Navy said.

The Trident missile launch, part of a $21 billion program to upgrade the nation's fleet of ballistic missiles and an integral part of the new Trident class nuclear submarines, went off at 7:50 a.m. EDT at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

Navy officials said the first stage of the rocket worked successfully, but a problem with the second stage caused the mission to end prematurely about an hour after liftoff.

Freshman senator mounting expensive campaign to beat back competition, stress canal opinion

By GLENN STEPHENS

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Republican Sen. Jesse A. Helms, a conservative freshman still fighting the Panama Canal treaties, has mounted what may be the highest-priced campaign in North Carolina history to beat back a Democratic challenge in November.

Although Helms says he won't be disturbed even if he loses, the former Raleigh broadcaster already has raised — and spent — an estimated $3.5 million. He had no Republican primary opposition.

Much of the money raised on Helms' behalf has gone for overhead, including computer mailing lists to raise more money. Nationwide mailings have included appeals by former President Gerald Ford and others to help Helms beat back the challenge of more liberal Democrats.

His Democratic opponent, state Insurance Commissioner John R. Ingram, has promised to make an issue of Helms' campaign spending, a tactic he used to help engineer a stunning upset of former bank executive Luther Hodges Jr. of Charlotte in last Tuesday's Democratic primary runoff.

Ingram, who trailed Hodges by about 14 percent in the first primary, waged a hard-hitting campaign in which he depicted himself as the defender of "the people" against insurance companies, banks and other special interests. He said he'll use the same issue against Helms.

"Every candidate tries to project himself as the people's candidate," Helms said last week. "And I remember my friend, Sen. (Hubert) Humphrey, once told me that every Russian leader, as well as Fidel Castro, always claimed to be the people's candidate.

"We're all for the people, but to say you're the people's candidate is a good way to avoid discussing the issues and avoid really representing the people," he added.

A leader of the unsuccessful fight to block Senate ratification of the Panama Canal treaties, Helms has said he plans to raise the canal issue as an issue in the campaign, reminding voters it was the Democratic majority that spearheaded the pro-canal drive.

Ingram spent about $60,000 compared to more than $1 million by Hodges, son of popular former governor and U.S. Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges Sr., during the Democratic primary.

But he is expecting help from the national and state party organizations in the race against Helms, the state's first GOP senator in seven decades. "Helms is vulnerable," said Betty McCain, the state Democratic leader. "The whole key is getting out the vote."

"The thinking on our part is there wasn't much interest in either one of them," Reece said, pointing to the small turnout in the primary. "Twenty-five percent doesn't look too good for the Democratic nominee, whoever he is."

Whatever the outcome, Helms says he will be satisfied. "I figure I can't lose," he said. "If I win the election, I get six more years in the Senate. If I lose, I get to come home to my grandchildren."

Funding increase proposed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN--A $5 million increase in funding for the Texas Department of Water Resources has been proposed by the Texas Water Development Board.

The agency—which oversees all matters dealing with water development, rights and quality—is submitting a request to the Legislative Budget Board for the 1980-81 biennium totalling about $47.5 million which compares to the agency's 1978-79 biennium budget of $42.7 million.

The chief item showing an increase a 6.8 percent salary boost per year across-the-board for these state employes.

The so-called exempt salaries of agency's top bureaucrats apparently are not included in the across-the-board 13.6 percent biennial pay hike. However, executive director Harvey Davis current annual $45,200 salary is proposed for an increase to $48,300 in 1980 and $51,600 in 1981.

The agency justifies the 6.8 percent proposal for classified personnel by tying it to the rate of inflation, while salary boosts for top agency officials, including the three members of the Texas Water Commission, "have been made consistent with an analysis of cost of living increases..."

Other significant budget increases are proposed in the following areas:

•The Texas Water Commission, including program administration and the office of hearing examiners—$790,513 in 1980 and $840,087 in 1981, compared with $744,096 in 1979.

•Office of General Counsel, including significant increases for water rights adjudications and permitting—$681,086 in 1980, $714,914, 1981, compared with $579,270 in 1979.

•Water resources planning and development, including estuarine and environmental planning and weather modification—$2,217,291 in 1980, $2,325, 892, 1981, compared with $1,815,426 in 1979.

Areas of the agency's programs receiving minimum increases or decreases include: Field operations from $2,880,523 in 1979 to $2,589,203 and $2.725,454 in 1981.

•Water quality planning, from $1,001,608 in 1979 to $1,098,973 in 1980 and $1,150,760 in 1981.

The agency is proposing increases in its graphic arts budget from $940,601 in 1979 to $1,005,416 in 1980 and $1,066,268 in 1981.

Bottom line totals are $23,197,031 in 1980 and $24,388,506, 1981, compared with the current year's budget of $20,939,195 and the 1979 appropriation of $21,772,907.

Device helps deaf hear clearly

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Elena Beadles' parents learned when she was 18 months old that she had been deaf since birth and would be fortunate to ever learn to use the English language on the adult level.

That prospect spurred her father, Robert, an electronics expert, to become involved in development of a system that uses minicomputers to help the deaf understand the spoken word.

Authorities say few children stricken with deafness before age 3 ever learn their native language fully. Often the result is intellectual retardation and a profound alienation from others.

Although reading is a window open to those who become deaf in later life, those who are deaf before they learn to speak seldom learn to read beyond the elementary school level.

But Elena, who is now 11 years old, has used the "cued speech" method to learn to clearly understand spoken English, to read and otherwise to communicate effectively.

Cued speech is a hand code that is used along with lip reading to make spoken English clearer to a deaf child. Since most people don't use hand cues, it would normally be of limited use to a child.

However, Beadles and Dr. Orin Cornett of Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., the world's only college for the deaf, are developing a computer device that would automatically analyze speech and produce the cues necessary for a deaf person to understand the words as clearly as a person with normal hearing.

Some experts believe the development of an automatic cuer, small enough to be worn like a hearing aid and capable of flashing the "cues" on the lenses of a pair of glasses, would be a breakthrough in communication for the deaf and could lead to a revolution in the way the deaf relate to people with normal hearing.

Besides helping the deaf to understand the spoken word of others, the automatic cuer would have the additional advantage of producing cues to a deaf person's own speech — helping the wearer to learn to speak normally.

After seeing a television report on experiments with sign language several years ago, Beadles and his family learned to use cued speech with Elena.

"Within a few months, it was clear Elena was learning language much more rapidly than before," said Beadles.

But educators of the deaf are divided on the issue. There are the oralists, who believe the deaf should use only lip reading, and the manualists, who maintain that only sign language can bring early communication.

Although the oralists and manualists have been feuding for a century, cued speech offers a middle ground, the advantages of both philosophies.

Cued speech consists of eight hand shapes held at four different positions near the face. The cues help distinguish between the syllables and words that look alike to lip readers — for instance, there are 60 words that look like "met" to a lip reader.

The automatic cuer converts the cues to visual symbols that can be electronically shown on the special eyeglasses.

Chairman at disadvantage

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. David C. Jones, the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, faces from the start a crisis of confidence among other top military commanders.

Not since the Kennedy years have senior military officers been so critical of their boss, the country's highest-ranking military officer. Without their support, success would be difficult to achieve.

His critics, spread among all the services, argue that he didn't fight hard enough for the B-1 bomber and that he bent too easily to his civilian superiors during the four years he was Air Force chief of staff. Jones disputes them and says time will prove them wrong.

Jones has been acting chairman for four months, since Gen. George S. Brown was found to have cancer. Without ceremony, he formally became chairman on Wednesday, a day after Brown retired.

So the military jury isn't in on Jones' performance as the nation's highest ranking officer. But the officer-critics aren't waiting.

Much of the grumbling centers on the debate before President Carter's decision to cancel production of the advanced B-1 bomber.

Detractors say Jones did not stand up for the B-1; that as Joint Chiefs chairman, he must show them that he will stand up steadfastly for the military on important issues affecting national security.

Responding to the criticism in a recent interview, Jones said he knows of the "innuendoes," but is undisturbed. "I believe that time will show that I will be forceful in expressing my own views and advancing the views of my colleagues in a way that will influence events," Jones said.

"I've been called a team player. I agree with that description. That is the best way to get things done and to have influence within the administration."

On the B-1 issue, Jones said: "We fought hard; we made our case. But the decision went against us ... It is really not our role to try to get a decision overruled" by going back-door to Congress — "unless we decide we can serve better out of uniform."

One Air Force general defended the new chairman but said many officers turned on Jones because "he refused to go around the president and the secretary of defense and fight for the B-1 through powerful senators, and he wouldn't let the Air Force do it."

"He did the only thing an honorable military officer can do," said the general, who did not want to be identified. "When a decision is made, you salute and carry it out to the best of your ability."

Jones became Air Force staff chief in 1974, and was a hard driver. This may have bruised some feelings.

Said one general: "He keeps the staff pretty well shaken up, to make them examine things. Nobody can outwork Dave Jones. He's quite a reader and student of contemporary literature on management."

But this general, displaying mixed feelings, also said Jones lacks warmth. "He doesn't engender great personal affection," he said. That appraisal was echoed by other officers who now work for Jones and who, like him, asked anonymity.

Jones, an intense man, concedes the point: "I find that the way to persuade is to really know every issue. I ask an awful lot of questions" and that, he says, might grate on some staff officers.

There are admirers who say Jones' quest for excellence probably traces to his sensitivity about having no college degree in an era when diplomas counted heavily toward high military rank.

Jones links his work habits to growing up in North Dakota as "a child of the Depression." His weekday workday is 12 hours. He spends much of Saturday in his Pentagon office, and then takes home a full briefcase for Sunday reading.

He says he's "a little or a health nut," that he runs three to five miles a day and plays tennis in the evenings with son David — "my best friend." He and his wife, Lois, also have two daughters, Susan and Kathy.

Approaching 57, Jones looks 10 years younger. He is slim. His hair is full and brown, without a trace of gray. He still flies when there is time. As a bomber pilot, he flew 29 combat missions in the Korean War and his medals include the Distinguished Flying Cross.

While senior officers outside the Air Force have less at stake with the B-1, they seem to be disturbed by what Jones' role in that dispute could bode for them.

They all refused to be quoted by name, but their views were reflected in a recent newspaper column by retired admirals Elmo L. Zumwalt and Worth Bagley.

"The story is current among Jones' military peers that he has been known to alter his military advice to conform to the perceived views of his civilian superiors," they wrote.

However, Zumwalt and Bagley said, "Other military leaders consider Jones to be a fine officer with an excellent operational record."

The two retired admirals said they watched Jones as deputy Air Force commander in Vietnam and later as Air Force commander in Europe: "His performance in both jobs was superb."

The last such grumbling in the officer corps was in 1962 when President John F. Kennedy gave the top job to Army Gen. Maxwell Taylor.

Taylor was Kennedy's White House military adviser and many officers considered Taylor a "political general."

Judge will not consider letters

WHITE PLAINS (AP) — The judge who must sentence killer Richard Herrin for manslaughter has said he will not be influenced by the letter-writing campaign started by parents of the killer's victim.

After Herrin was found guilty of manslaughter instead of second-degree murder last Sunday, the parents of Bonnie Garland urged Westchester County residents to write the judge and ask him to give Herrin a stiff penalty.

The parents protested that the trial jury had taken the easy way, voting for manslaughter instead of second-degree murder.

Herrin admitted that he killed the Yale coed in her Scarsdale home, on July 7, 1977, beating her repeatedly on the head with a hammer. But he pleaded that he was temporarily insane.

County Judge Richard Daronco said he will not be swayed by any letters he receives.

He said that he must act as "the conscience of the community to a certain degree," and he said the sentence will reflect that.

He said he will decide on a punishment on the basis of the facts is the case.

Meanwhile, one of the 12 jurors has denied Miss Garland's parents' assertion that the jury gave special treatment instead of justice to Herrin.

The juror, who asked not be identified, said, "We considered the evidence and the law involved. There was never any consideration given to the man's background."

The juror said the 12 jurors viewed their task as seeking a balance between a finding of insanity, which they didn't believe the evidence and testimony sustained, and a murder verdict, which they said seemed to harsh for someone in Herrin's emotional state at the time of the slaying.

The 24-year-old Herrin was convicted of manslaughter Sunday afternoon after the jury deliberated 23 hours over a period of four days.

The juror said the majority never leaned toward a second-degree murder conviction.

Dollar's value improved, stabilized after decline

LONON (AP) — The dollar looked better on the money markets in Japan and Western Europe today after declining the first three days of the week.

The U.S. currency came under some pressure late in the day in Tokyo but closed at 209.85 yen, slightly above Wednesday's record closing low of 209.525.

In early trading in Europe, the dollar improved against the West German mark, the Swiss franc and the British pound but was marginally lower against the French franc and the lira.

A London dealer said the dollar was helped by the Federal Reserve's moves to tighten credit and by the expectation that major U.S. ba8nk: would soon raise their prime rate to 9 percent.

Here are morning dollar quotes in European financial centers:

Frankfurt — 2.0765 marks, up from 2.0732 at the close of trading Tuesday.

Zurich — 1.8660 Swiss francs, up from 1.8635.

Paris — 4.5737 French francs, down from 4.5770.

Amsterdam — 2.230 guilders, up from 2.2265.

Milan — 855.90 lire, down from 856.10.

In London, the pound sold for $1.8475, down from $1.8499.

Gold was quoted on the London market during early trading at $185.75 an ounce, down from Wednesday's close of $187. In Zurich, Europe's other major bullion market, the price was $185.375, down from $186.625.

Foreign exchange traders in Tokyo said "panic" selling of the dollar has ended there, at least for a week or so, but some predicted the rate might drop below 200 yen by the end of the summer.

Venue change allowed in Manpower fund case

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three of eight defendants named in federal indictments alleging misuse of federal Manpower funds will not be tried here.

U.S. District Judge Reynaldo Garza Wednesday approved change of venue motions sought on behalf of Harlingen brothers Don and Clarence Gray and Cruz Castillo, also of Harlingen.

But the judge delayed selection of a site for the trials. He said he would pick a location after talking with other federal judges in Texas. Garza said the cases will probably go to Victoria, Houston or Dallas.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Smith told Garza the prosecution prefers Galveston for the trials. Defense attorney Tom Upchurch said the Grays and Miss Castillo want to be tried in Houston.

The three defendants have been named in multiple federal indictments charging misapplication of federal funds. Don Gray is business manager of a Harlingen-based plumbers and pipefitters union. Clarence Gray ran a trade school associated with the union. Miss Castillo was a program director there.

Garza also said defendants named with the Grays and Miss Castillo in the federal indictments — but not seeking venue change — will be tried here separately.

Those not seeking venue change were: Eliseo Sandoval, director of the Associated City County Economic Development Corp., of Edinburg; Ed Romeros, former ACCEDC auditor; Nick Ramirez, former Hidalgo County Manpower director; A.M. Fernandez, director of the South Texas Enterprises of Jim Hogg County; and Fernando Salinas, director of the South Texas Economic Program of Jim Hogg County.

Sandoval is on leave from his ACCEDC post and has agreed to testify for the prosecution. Smith has said all but two federal charges against Sandoval will be dismissed in exchange for his testimony.

Wednesday's hearing drew a courtroom-full of reporters who had been subpoenaed. However, the newsmen were not called to testify.

Garza said his ruling was based on change of venue granted in state courts. A pair of Brownsville state district judges have ordered that state charges against 19 persons will be tried in Corpus Christi.

Those indictments were returned after a state court of inquiry investigated the Manpower program.

Garza also denied several motions seeking dismissal of indictments.

The judge further decided that all the federal cases will be heard by a single judge. The cases had been divided between Garza and U.S. District Judge Owen Cox. Garza said a random draw will decide who will preside at the trials.

Chinese dictatorship moving on human rights

HONG KONG (AP) — China's new leadership is reviving legal institutions and talking favorably of "human rights" in what one American legal expert says is a campaign to convince millions of Chinese that speaking out won't mean arrest and torture as before.

Professor Jerome A. Cohen, associate dean of the Harvard Law School, said the campaign's ultimate aim is to get all China's people to participate in making the country a modern power by the year 2000.

Cohen, director of Harvard's East Asian legal studies department, just returned from China, where he met officials of the new institute of law of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences and saw a criminal trial in Shanghai.

In an interview with The Associated Press, he said China's leaders realize that to get the enthusiastic participation of the masses, they must develop a legal system "with some kind of minimum security and order so that people will have confidence that they will not be subjected to arbitrary deprivations or sanctions by the state."

Modern China's 29-year history has witnessed vast pendulum swings with periods of relative freedom followed by periods of severe repression.

Cohen said the country's intellectuals, scientists, educators and professionals — desperately needed now in China's modernization plans — were the hardest hit by these "pendulum swings" and are most wary about speaking out again.

"People aren't taking part in the current movement to speak out," he said. "They're just waiting because previously, people who did speak out regretted it later.

"They feel a deep resentment against the state and how it acted to them and their families. They feel they're really being asked to build an unjust society — that they may be arrested, dragged away at any time, held indefinitely, not know the charges against them, be subjected to torture," he added.

"They feel they can't put forth any ideas, make any innovations, articulate any genuine criticism without a month or a year later suffering severe consequences for what they were asked to do."

To overcome this, Cohen said, the Chinese leadership has recognized that the country needs a complex legal system to ensure that there is "a population of specialized and talented people who feel good enough about the state to enthusiastically participate in its development.

"For this reason, they're using the term human rights again and they're using it in precisely the terms we mean it. Now they're talking about political and legal rights — not economic and social rights."

He said the People's Republic of China is still a Communist dictatorship but it "is trying to moderate the worst excesses and go back to the degree of freedom that existed in the 1950s."

Medieval medallion sold for record $2.22 million

LONDON (AP) — A medieval medallion depicting the Angel of Charity was sold for a stunning $2.22 million at the von Hirsch auction today, setting a record price for any work of art other than a painting.

There were gasps in the crowded showroom and side galleries at the Sotheby Parke Bernet auction house when the bid went up. The sale was completed in 80 seconds.

It was the most sensational purchase so far in the six-day sale of the Robert von Hirsch collection, which is being talked of in art circles as the biggest art auction of all time.

The sum was paid by West German dealer Reiner Zietz of Hannover, who was buying for the Staatliche Museum of Berlin, according to a spokeswoman for Sotheby's.

The medallion, nearly six inches in diameter, is made of blue, green and white enamel with a gilt background. It dates from around 1150 and is attributed to the Belgian goldsmith Godefroid de Claire.

The piece was made for the Abbot Wibald of the Benedictine abbey in Stavelot, Belgium, and shows the winged angel Operatio, or Charity, with his right hand over his heart. The medallion is one of a pair, the other being in the Kunsthandwerk Museum in Frankfurt.

Since the auction began on Tuesday, Sotheby's has taken in $8,063,040 for 98 drawings, watercolors, medieval miniatures and paintings. It ends next Tuesday.

Sotheby's chairman, Peter Wilson, has upped his original estimate of the total to be realized from $14.8 million to $22.2 million.

The estimate is nearly double the previous record of $11.8 million paid in at the auction last year of a Rothschild collection at Mentmore Towers, in Buckinghamshire.

Wednesday's sales totaled $2,925,405 and included a record $925,000 which the Norton Simon Foundation of Los Angeles paid for the 15th century "Branchini Madonna" by Giovanni di Paolo.

Robert von Hirsch was a German Jewish leather magnate who fled from the Nazis in 1933 and settled in Basel, Switzerland. He died in November at the age of 94.

Just minutes before the medallion went on the block, the old record auction price for a work of art other than a painting was broken when the London dealer Agnew's paid $2 million for an enamel arm ornament.

Carter inflation battlers admit game plan not total success

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's top inflation battlers say their progress has not lived up to expectations, but they plan no change in their reliance on voluntary wage and price restraints.

Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said Wednesday much of the current increase in inflation stems from relatively uncontrollable food prices. Food will be an estimated 8 to 10 percent higher this year than last, he said.

Bosworth said the inflation rate for 1978 as a whole will probably approach 7 percent — "not a sanguine forecast, but neither is it a disaster."

But since the first of this year, inflation has been running about 10 percent.

Bosworth testified before a House Banking subcommittee, as did presidential inflation counsel Robert Strauss.

Strauss commented, "We have...won a few battles which make me hopeful that our program is gaining the momentum it will need."

Strauss said that major automobile firms and some aluminum companies have agreed to measures designed to hold down price increases. He also predicted that several major corporations will hold their executive pay raises below 5 percent, though he declined to identify the firms.

Both men, however, said they were firmly opposed to substituting mandatory wage and price controls for their voluntary program.

THE CREW THAT CARES

Buying a used car is no joke.

There have probably been more jokes told about used cars and used-car salesmen than practically any other subject. But when you buy a used car, it's no joke!

In fact, it's serious business!

Used cars are a very important part of our business. We maintain an excellent selection of hand-picked used cars. Then we price each one competitively. Finally, our reputation for service comes with every car at no extra cost. Here are some examples:

1977 CAPRICE CLASSIC 4-DOOR V8, automatic, power steering and brakes, tinted glass, WSW tires, AM-FM radio, rally mirrors, vinyl top. $4895	1977 CHEVROLET IMPALA 4-DOOR V8, automatic, power steering/brakes, factory air, vinyl top, body side moldings, new WSW tires, full wheel covers. $4242	1975 TOYOTA HILUX PICKUP 4 cylinder, 4-speed economy pickup. Radio, WSW tires, wheel covers and Super sharp. $2888
1977 CHEVROLET MONTE CARLOS V8, automatic, power steering/brakes factory air, vinyl top, radio, body side molding, sport mirrors, vinyl interior WSW tires, rally wheels. Choice of 3. $5353	1975 FORD PICKUP HALF TON Automatic, factory air, power steering/brakes, headache rack, mag wheels, short wide bed. $3595	1975 CHEVROLET BLAZER 4 WHEEL DRIVE. Automatic, air, power steering/brakes, radio. 2-tone paint, WSW tires, rally wheels. $5387
1974 CHEVROLET NOVA 2-DOOR V8, automatic, power steering/brakes factory air, radio, body side molding, vinyl top, WSW tires, wheel covers. $2195	1975 CHEVROLET SUBURBAN Automatic, air, power steering, power brakes, radio, wheel covers, body side molding, 3/4 ton unit. $4695	1974 CHEV. CAPRICE CLASSIC 4-DOOR V8, automatic, power steering/brakes, air, tilt, cruise, vinyl top, radio, WSW tires and wheel covers. $2395

You know, when we sell a new car, the factory stands behind it. But when we sell a guaranteed used car, we stand behind it. That's a comforting feeling for you when you buy a used car from us.

Jeep J-10 Honcho Pickup

MONEY SPECIALS SAVINGS

There are 4-wheel drive pickups and there is the 4-wheel drive Jeep J-10 Pickup. If you think they're the same, you're in for an education. Jeep Pickup has 4-wheel drive that's built-in, not added on like an option — that's the only way we make them. Jeep Pickup is the only pickup to offer optional Quadra-Trac, Jeep's exclusive automatic 4-wheel drive, the system that's unsurpassed by the competition — to give you super traction. Jeep's load capacity is 2199 lbs. Jeep has a higher ground clearance than all its competitors so rocks won't stop you. Jeep Pickup does not have to recalibrate its springs like the competition to gain greater ground cleanance, so you get a more stable ride without that "on-stilts" look. Jeep Pickup has a long wheelbase for a smoother ride on road or off. It has a lower tailgate loading height for convenience and a short hood for better visibility. Jeep Pickup has more engine choices than the competition. You pick the size you need. Face the facts — the 4-wheel drive Jeep Pickup has no competition!

Kovic: 'Al Pacino is playing me'

By KENNETH FANUCCHI
The Los Angeles Times

VENICE, Calif. — Ron Kovic, the crippled veteran of the Vietnam war and haunting symbol of protest against it, was restless.

He had just picked a fight with his girlfriend by suggesting she go swimming "or something." She went swimming.

Now, in the second of two days of interviews and in the midst of recounting some of the more agonizing parts of his rehabilitation, he needed a physical and emotional break from his ocean view apartment in Santa Monica.

"Let's get out of here," he snapped. "I've got to get out of here. I have a routine I follow and don't like to break it up. Let's continue this at the cafe."

Kovic was referring to the Sidwalk Cafe on the Venice boardwalk, where, more or less daily when he's in town, Kovic revels in his celebrity.

Over the course of two lengthy sessions there, various movie and television personalities, former comrades in the protest movement and just plain well-wishers stopped to talk to him, mostly about the film about to be made on his book, "Born on the Fourth of July."

Kovic is almost overwhelmed by the good fortune that is flowing to him from the book, the movie being made of it ("Al Pacino is playing me") and the changes they are bringing into what was previously a completely tortured existence.

"You catch the paradoxes, don't you?" he said while maneuvering his new, $7,000, fire-engine red Mustang toward the cafe.

"Here I am, the crippled war veteran who fought with everybody to bring the war to an end and get justice for the servicemen who were cheated out of their youth and their bodies, living the American dream.

"I have a nice apartment, a girlfriend, a new car, a best-selling book, and now Al Pacino is going to do my story on the screen. I mean, who wouldn't want to have Al Pacino play his life in a movie? Incredible."

He's painfully aware that all of this resulted directly from the bullet wound that shattered his spinal cord in 1968 and left him permanently paralyzed from the chest down. He was a marine sergeant in South Vietnam.

Had it not been for that, he believes, he would have returned to the working class life of Massapequa, N.Y., and followed in the footsteps of his father who worked in the A and P food store.

"Of course," he said, "I'd give everything I have now to get my legs and sexual capacity back. Oh, yeah, I'd even go to work for the A and P."

Kovic, 31, who attended California's Pasadena City College six years ago, is in the process of reducing his activist role in whatever is left of the anti-war movement. This has not been easy because he was so inextricably a part of it.

He and two other crippled veterans first burst onto the national scene in 1972 when they "invaded" the Republican Convention and interrupted President Nixon's acceptance speech with shouts of "Stop the bombing! Stop the Killing!"

Other audacious activities included sit-ins in the offices of Sens. Alan Cranston and John Tunney, California Democrats, a brief sit-in in the East Wing of the White House, a "takeover" of the Washington Monument.

"For 10 years, I've been running myself ragged," he said, "In one year, I made 62 airplane flights across the country, speaking out against the war and the shabby treatment of veterans.

"I'd had this terrible fire within me and was directing all of my energies into seeking justice for those young men whose good intentions were wasted in a worthless cause.

"I'm glad I fought back against the people who brought on that war, then tried to put the disabled veterans in a corner, to forget about them. I feel vindicated by the book. It was a true catharsis for me.

"It made me accept my body and freed me of guilt, anxiety and self-hate. It made me honestly believe in myself, who I was, what I'd been through, I'd fought back, felt pride and faith in myself, triumphed through the worst ordeal."

Now, he said, he is "just starting in live," concentrating on being a normal human being.

"I deserve it," he said. "I'm still maintaining my political ties to the movement and am not stopping my activities on behalf of veterans, but I see a different role for me.

"I'm going to be more of an adviser, rather than a direct participant. I want to influence people through my writing. I feel I've been given a national forum. If war comes, then I'll be the first one in the streets.

"But now is a time for me to rest, to write another book, to live simply and show that I and others like me can live a goodlife free from anxiety. If I can do that, I will represent a symbol of hope to others.

"You know, the last two years have been so incredibly good that you can forget how bad it was and how bad it still is for veterans whose bodies were destroyed like mine but who have not gotten the acclaim I have received.

"A lot of my friends killed themselves, either through alcohol or drugs, and I went through many suicidal periods. For a long time, the worst thing in my life was to wake up, the best thing was to go to sleep.

"I remember going back to Massapequa after I got out of the Bronx VA hospital. I went to Arthur's Bar to try and pick up a woman. I was so lonely for the warmth of a woman and, of course, I wasn't accepting the fact I couldn't have sex.

"Well, I got rejected and then drunk, so I went home and put on my braces to stand up for the last time. I wanted to see what was happening to my body. We had a statue of Christ on the wall, and I remember praying to Him to bring my body back."

Spinach not 'super' food

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: People used to talk so much about how fabulous spinach was for you—I grew up on the whole Popeye bit. Do we eat it these days or isn't it all that good?—Maureen G.

DEAR MAUREEN: Spinach used to be hailed as a very special source of iron. As it happens, however, iron is widely distributed among the foods you eat—liver, meat, eggs, whole grains, beans, and leafy green vegetables are excellent source of it. So spinach simply isn't the wonder vegetable we once thought it was.

That's not saying it isn't a very fine food. It is. But it is one of many. Try spinach raw in a salad, with lemon juice and oil dressing—and some green onions chopped and tossed in the bowl, too.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: How do you feel about this new sweetener they xylitol? Does it really prevent cavities? I'm not sure this stuff is safe.—Sophie K.

DEAR SOPHIE: Xylitol is a substance that is present in small amounts in some fruits and vegetables. It is about as sweet as sugar and has approximately the same number of calories. And it has already been used for a number of years as a food additive.

The only adverse effect you get from eating xylitol, according to the authoritative "Medical Letter," is a transient about of diarrhea—but you would have to consume an awful lot for this to happen.

Studies done in Finland have shown that when xylitol is substituted for sucrose, (sugar), there is quite an impressive reduction in cavities. This may be due to the fact that a germ called streptococcus mutans, which has been linked to dental plaque and cavities, cannot live on xylitol—whereas it does thrive on sugar.

However, the "Medical Letter" says, the Finnish studies did not show that xylitol actually prevents cavities. In one year-long test, a group of people chewed three to seven sticks of gum with sugar in it every day, while another group chewed the same number of sticks of gum with an equal amount of xylitol in it.

The xylitol group ended up with significantly fewer cavities. But, as yet, there is no evidence that xylitol gum leads to fewer cavities than not chewing gum in the first place.

Man operates 'reading' service

GAMBIER, Ohio (AP) — E. A. Daneman is a neurologist, physician, psychiatrist, psychotherapist, scientist, inventor, businessman, lecturer and philanthropist, who works at home.

Hospitals across the country, from Florida to Oregon, telephone patient brain waves — readings from electroencephalographs — to his home for deciphering.

The measurements, called EEGs, are used to determine such disorders as epilepsy, brain tumors, brain hemorrhages, clots and mental illness. Daneman said 51 hospitals around the nation sent him EEG readings for analysis. He said he usually offered a diagnosis within an hour.

Daneman is co-inventor of portable transmitting equipment used to send EEG readings via telephone to decoding equipment in his home. Assistants monitor the telephones and assist with the work.

Each of the 51 hospitals has a portable transmitter, which weighs 14 pounds. It can be packed in a suitcase and taken to accident scenes.

Up to 100 transmissions — wavy lines on graph paper — are received daily by Daneman's staff.

The physician says 85 percent of the EEGs are normal, but when a disorder does appear the diagnosis he sends back includes a precise description of the problem and a prescription for treatment.

Daneman began specializing in EEGs at a Georgia hospital 22 years ago. He moved to Gambier in 1974 into a house he had admired while he was a freshman at Kenyon College.
