Vernon, Turkey, Paducah Areas Report Storm Damage

ENTIRE AREA SOAKED BY HEAVY RAINS

Cyclone Wrecks Station At Ginsite; Two Hurt At Vernon

RAIN TOTAL 2.13 HERE

Showers Over Northwest Texas Worth Thousands to Farmers

Special to The Record News.

CHILDRESS, Texas, June 13. (AP) The railroad station at Ginsite, eight miles from Paducah, was destroyed and wheat fields were torn up by a cyclone which struck there shortly after 8 o'clock Monday morning. No one was hurt. The residential and business districts of the town escaped.

Rains which totalled 2.13 inches at Wichita Falls and soaked all Northwest Texas and much of Oklahoma will be worth thousands of dollars to crops, according to reports received here Monday night. Slight damage was caused by lightning and high winds, but no hail was reported.

Heavy Rain Here

Heavy clouds and small showers were reported by the M-K-T dispatcher Monday night. Weather conditions were clearing up in some sections traversed by the Fort Worth and Denver, but additional rains were expected during the night. Precipitation continued at intervals throughout Monday, and continued Monday night in Wichita Falls.

Two persons were injured and one house and barn burned as a result of lightning bolts at Vernon Sunday night. A large quantity of feed and an automobile stored in the barn were destroyed, with fire in the residence brought under control.

Battle Dye, 24, son of W. A. Dye, was struck by lightning in the yard of his home at Vernon at 10:20 o'clock Sunday night, but will recover, according to physicians. Two other men standing near were not shocked by the bolt, and no sign could be found on Battle's body, it was said.

Two and one-half inches of rain was reported at Vernon which increased to as much as four inches in sections of Hall county, accompanied by a severe wind storm at Turkey which unroofed several barns and houses, and blew down telephone wires.

Aid to Crops

Crops in Wichita county will be greatly benefitted by the rains, according to O. K. Barnes, manager of the agricultural department of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce. No damage to any farm products has been reported, and the halt to threshing and potato digging will be ended shortly in case no additional rains fall, it was learned.

Especial benefit will accrue to the cattle ranges of Northwest Texas, and a dreuth of 18 months

Rangers To Probe Flogging Of East Texans By Mob

AUSTIN, June 13. (AP)—Three Texas rangers tonight were ordered out on two missions—one to proceed to Marshall to help conduct an investigation of recent floggings near that place and the others to Crane county, where they will attempt to check a possibly growing lawless situation in the oil fields.

Gov. Dan Moody suggested to Adjt. Gen. R. L. Robertson that the rangers be sent.

Private Joe Osaba left for Marshall where he will join another ranger already stationed there and local officers in a probe of the whipping of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Richardson and Mrs. Richardson's son, W. A. Straps and Mrs. Straps, D. Osborne, tenant farmer, is out on bond in connection with the affair.

Two rangers from company B, stationed at Fort Worth, were directed to Crane county by Adjutant General Robertson because "investigation shows they might be helpful in checking a situation which might become very lawless."

TWO OF FLOGGING VICTIMS DISAPPEAR

MARSHALL, June 13. (AP)—While federal, state and local law enforcement machinery was moving against the persons who flogged five persons here last week, excitement here was brought to a high pitch tonight by the disappearance of two of the victims, W. A. Straps and his wife. J. R. Richardson and his wife, the latter the mother of Straps, were in a serious condition from their injuries. Mrs. Hester Lee Mills, a sister of Straps and fifth member of the family outraged, has returned to Dallas where she is employed.

An investigation by federal authorities has been promised by Randolph Bryant, federal district attorney at Sherman, to whom the matter was referred by Judge W. L. Estes of Taxarkana, appealed to by citizens of Marshall. Texas rangers have been put on the case by Adjutant General R. L. Robertson on the suggestion of Gov. Dan Moody. Private Joe Osaba leaving Austin tonight for Marshall where a ranger is already on duty. County Attorney John E. Taylor has announced that he will ask a special session of the grand jury as soon as sufficient information is in hand.

Citizens of Marshall have become aroused over the case. Various church organizations have adopted resolutions of condemnation and leading business men have issued statements for publication, urging officers to make a thorough investigation into every possible angle of the case.

D. Osborne, under arrest in the case on two charges of aggravated assault and one of violating the anti-mask law, made bond today. He is employed by Cain Anderson, on whose place the flogging victims formerly lived.

GEORGIA WOMAN BEATEN BY MASKED FLOGGERS

GAINESVILLE, Ga., June 13 (AP) Brutally beaten by a hoded band, Mrs. Ansley of Toccoa, Stephens county, was in a hospital here today for treatment for "serious injuries."

LAUGH AT DEATH

Boy Drowns as Parents Think His Antics Just Prank

BEAUMONT, June 13. (AP)—The ancient fable of the boy who cried, "Wolf, wolf," was reacted in a tragic manner at Pine Island bayou near here, Sunday when a 21-year-old negro boy, feigning drowning and calling for help only in fun, was finally seized with cramps and sank to his death while his parents looked on and laughed.

Jewell Twiggs, the boy, had gone into the water for an afternoon swim and had called for help several times, struggling as though he were about to drown. His parents, who had been watching him, ignored his calls after the first one proved to be in fun and the boy went to his death with no one attempting to rescue him.

COUNCIL VOTES TRAFFIC LAW

$200 Fine Provided In Collision Cases

Despite the protest of a representative of the Wichita Falls Automobile Dealers association to the enactment of the negligent collision ordinance in the form in which it was drafted, the law was adopted Monday night by the city council.

Opposes Section.

Charles McDonald, attorney, appeared on behalf of the association and voiced objection to the inclusion of section No. 4 in the ordinance, which prescribes a maximum penalty of $200 for those convicted of negligence in the causing of a collision.

Section No. 4 sets out that "negligence is prima facie from the fact of collision." Mr. McDonald pointed out that the driver of car in a collision was, according to the provisions of the ordinance, guilty before he entered the courtroom and that it was necessary to prove his innocence, instead of the city having to prove his guilt.

Small Car Owners Careless.

Roy Carter, police and fire commissioner, declared himself in favor of the inclusion of section No. 4. He said that with this clause in the ordinance that owners of automobiles only worth a small amount of money would be more careful in operating the cars. Mr. Carter pointed out that the owner of car of small value did not sustain a heavy loss if his car was damaged in a collision and therefore, was more careless in the operation of an automobile.

Lester Jones, president of the safety council, which presented the ordinance to the council asserted that the provisions in the ordinance were exactly the same as contained in a San Antonio law of similar kind.

W. T. C-C NAMES HAMILTON TO HEAD OIL WORK

Gas and Oil Bureau To Operate On $10,000 Yearly Fund

TO NAME MANAGER

Bureau Will Co-Operate For Development Of Oil Industry

BRECKENRIDGE, June 13. (AP) Between 150 and 200 oil men and officials of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce gathered here today to form an oil and gas department of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

The first business session began at 4 o'clock with President R. W. Haynie of Abilene presiding.

A feature on the program was a banquet at the Country club Monday evening for which 150 plates were laid. Among the scheduled speakers were J. D. Collett, president of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association; W. H. Holmes, president of the Panhandle Oil and Gas association; W. B. Hamilton, Wichita Falls, and J. L. Goggan, Breckenridge attorney.

W. B. Hamilton of Wichita Falls was chosen chairman of the oil and gas bureau of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. The division will be manned by an assistant manager yet to be chosen. The bureau will operate on a budget of $10,000 per year and will co-operate in the development and welfare of the oil industry.

CISCO, June 9. (AP)—Setting the date of the 1928 convention at Fort Worth for June 11-13, setting aside $10,000 for the operation of an oil and gas bureau to be created immediately and adoption of a resolution calling on the state to validate all sales of state lands carrying one-half the mineral rights were among the most important acts of the directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in session here Monday. Homer D. Wade, manager of the chamber, was given a $2,500 salary raise which he agreed to take only if the organization's finances warrant at the end of the year.

President R. W. Haynie of Abilene, opening the meeting, declared that the West Texas Chamber of Commerce each year saves West Texas more money than it would take to operate the organization for a century.

Reports Are Filed.

Reports of the manager and staff members for the last 12 months were given, with emphasis on the prevention of an increase in railroad and insurance rates, the winning of the exhibit prize at the sesqui-centennial exposition at Philadelphia and widespread favorable publicity given the region.

Resolutions protesting against dedication of water rights on Texas rivers for development of hydo-electric power at the expense of agriculture and calling on the state to protect wild life also were adopted. The board recommended that the "my-home-town" oratorical contest be opened to the state at large and that an emblem given by T. N. Carswell of Abilene be awarded as symbolical of the state high school oratorical championship.

Another resolution adopted invited the citizenship of West Texas to assist the West Texas chamber in officially opening the new amusement resort at Lake Cisco on July 22.

Body of Missing Man Found With Arms Tied

PIKEVILLE, Ky., June 13. (AP)—The body of Billy Partin, who had been missing since March 28, was found today behind a log at the foot of Great Cliff, on Pine mountain. The hands and feet had been tied and a wire bound around the body. Partin had been shot five times.

Biggerstaff Given 5-Year Term In Trial Here On Robbery Charge

Victim Tells of Giving Man $500 and His Car When Accused of Riding With Another's Wife

Arraigned on a charge of robbery by threats in connection with the alleged obtaining of money from P. P. Robertson of Cuthand, Texas, George Biggerstaff was adjudged guilty Monday in the 89th district court, before Judge P. A. Martin, and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. The jury refused to grant Biggerstaff's plea for a suspended sentence.

Robertson, during his testimony, stated that in the early part of 1926 he was in Altus, Okla., where he met Alberta Hill. The woman said she desired to go to Wichita Falls and, according to Robertson, he invited her to ride in his car which he was going to drive to his home in East Texas.

When Robertson and the woman were near Burkburnett, Robertson testified Biggerstaff and another man approached his car and after drawing guns commanded Robertson to stop.

Agreed Not to Shoot.

When he stopped, according to Robertson, Biggerstaff asserted that Robertson was riding with Biggerstaff's wife but that if he would give him a large sum of money that Biggerstaff would not shoot him or prefer charges of transporting a woman across a state line.

Robertson testified that he gave Biggerstaff his car, $500 and a note for $500. After giving the money and the car, Robertson reported the affair to the district attorney's office in Wichita Falls.

The state, represented by E. F. Fruechte and Sam Spence, assistant district attorneys, contested Biggerstaff's plea for a suspended sentence.

Alberta Hill, according to Mr. Fruechte and Mr. Spence, will be arraigned on a charge of robbery by threats during the latter part of this week.

LAST TOWN CRIER

Massachusetts Loses Its Last Dispenser Of Verbal News

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., June 13. (AP)—The last town crier has resigned.

A modest notice in local weekly paper tells the story.

"Notice. Walter T. Smith, town crier for 27 years, has retired from the town crying business on account of his lameness. Mr. Smith is now 78 years old."

Smith's resignation probably marks the passing of the quaint office in this country. It is the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitants that Provincetown has been without its crier and his clanging bell.

PRESIDENT ON VACATION TRIP

Coolidge Off to Dakota For Summer Rest

WASHINGTON, June 13. (AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge left tonight to spend the summer in the South Dakota Black Hills.

They are scheduled to reach the state game lodge, which has been placed at their disposal, Wednesday night. They will detrain at Rapid City and cover the last 32 miles of their 1909-mile journey by motor.

Accompanied by an unusually large party, which included an office staff, servants, secret service men, newspaper reporters, and photographers, the president and Mrs. Colidge departed at 9:05 o'clock from Washington on an eight-car special train. It is scheduled to make only one extended stop, that a Hammond, Ind., where the president will deliver an address tomorrow afternoon.

SPECIAL ELECTION

DAIRY AIDS MILK-ICE FUND

Gift Helps Score of Needy Families Here

One of the most generous gifts to The Record News Milk and Ice fund was announced Monday when the Producer's Creamery of Wichita Falls donated 50 gallons of skim milk daily to the needy families of the city. Distribution was begun at 10 o'clock at the Travis school annex.

Increase Amount.

W. D. Curtis, manager of the Creamery, told The Record News that he would furnish milk as needed up to 100 gallons daily through the summer.

Over 20 members of destitute families called for the milk Monday, and the amount will be increased to 40 gallons Tuesday morning. Miss Myrle Neely, chairman of the Welfare Board, said.

Miss Neely and two representatives of the Red Cross were in charge of the distribution, and restricted the donations to those families who are in immediate necessity. Only those who have sickness in their homes, or babies and old people who are unable to care for themselves can be supplied, the general need is so great.

139 Families On List.

The generous donation of the milk does not mean that the milk and ice fund work is done, however—for each day urgent calls for help that can be afforded only through this fund are received. There are over 150 families now in Wichita Falls to whom the fund is a question of life and death—to whom each donation means tragedy or joy.

Mrs. Charles Hartsook has volunteered to secure a corps of capable young women to aid in the distribution of the milk at the Travis school station each day. These will direct the sanitation and apportionment of the milk while Miss Neely ascertains whether each case is one where help is so vitally needed.

It is hoped that the generosity shown by the Producer's Creamery will be matched by the individual donations of Wichita Falls citizens each day through the summer so that no child nor old person will suffer want.

GOTHAM GIVES GREAT OVATION FOR LINDBERGH

Million Voices Cheer In Hero Worship For Ocean Flier

HE IS DECORATED

New York Medal of Valor Pinned On Daring Aviator

By DAMON RUNYON
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1927, By Universal Service

NEW YORK, June 13.—Out of the sky in which he disappeared just a few short weeks ago, he came back to us again today—Lindy, the lone rider of the mysterious roads of the gods.

Back again, as he left, in a spidery little buggy of the breeze, something like the one he jockeyed across the Atlantic to his trysting spot with Destiny in France.

Million Voices Cheer

The mumble of voices rose in clamor at his return, louder than the loudest winds above, or the waves below. The track he traveled through the long night of his flight—"Twas the mighty beat, perhaps, the pinions of fame" on which Lindy wings his way through history.

Ah, say—

Are those young eyes that stare at the tall towers of the town, and the roaring crowd, about to shed tears! See! His throat is working spasmodically, as if he were trying to swallow something, his face is drawn—

Well, let him cry, let him cry—the boy is entitled to a few tears! He has held in long enough, heaven knows. A million others are already weeping, because their emotions call for some sort of outlet.

Close to Tears

But Lindy didn't cry, at least not so you could see the tears, though brave men often cry inwardly. He was undoubtedly close to it several times, however, and especially when he came to what you might call the water gate of the city, which is the battery, after moving through a wild demonstration of welcome on the river and heard, like the sound of distant surf, the gathering roar of Manhattan.

He looked around, half bewildered. He gasped. The blue eyes filled up for a moment, and the expression of the cameo-like features was most serious. Then Lindy apparently took as firm a hold on his feelings as he maintained on the stick of the Spirit of St. Louis during that epic flight to France, and the Lindy smile spread over his face, and presently lighted up the entire town.

Perhaps he suddenly remembered that he was Colonel Charles Augustus Lindbergh, no less, and that this was no place for a colonel to cry. Still, he would have plenty of company.

His Plane Fails

The Spirit of St. Louis, the silent partner of the famous firm of "we," went back on Lindy at the last moment. He had intended flying the monoplane from Washington to New York, but the Spirit got very fussy and balky, and Lindy had to borrow a plane from the army to get here in time for the celebration.

Possibly the Spirit of St. Louis was satisfying a personal grudge. You know Lindy has endowed that monoplane with a definite personality that is almost human. Maybe the spirit wasn't altogether pleased with the treatment accorded "We" by New York which showed scant courtesy to them when they first arrived here unheralded and unsung, and didn't propose helping the ungrateful city in its Roman holiday, now that "we" are somebodies.

He Leaves Ship.

Not though multi-millionaires sweated for a mere peek at them, and would give at least half a million of their multi-millions for the privilege of entertaining them. Not though social swells fairly ached for the chance to invite them out to dinner and have them occupy the best room in the house. Not though the most important officials of the great city and state of New York waited under the highest of high hats. The Spirit of St. Louis was really obstinate about the matter. It developed all sorts of symptoms and complaints as Lindy tried to get it tuned up this morning. So he left it flat.

"Be sure and check up on the gas feed of that plane before anyone else flies it," said Lindy to Captain H. L. McClelland, as he hopped out of the borrowed buggy at Mitchel field two hours and four minutes after he left Washington, or 11:58 our daylight saving time.

Then it developed that the regular gas feed of the plane had failed during the flight, and he had been obliged to use the auxiliary feed, thus adding the element in Dalhart area was broken just in time to prevent the necessity of removing thousands of cattle for pasturage and water. Two inches and over were noted in this section of the state.

Rain General

Crops and cattle ranges around Childress will also be greatly helped by slow rains which fell Sunday afternoon, night and Monday. Memphis reports cotton and feed that was up to a good stand is aided by the precipitation. Some cotton has already been plowed and chopped in the southwest part of Hall county.

Approximately two and one-half inches of rain was reported at Seymour and Crowell and over three inches at Byers, Texas. Towns receiving between one and two inches incuded Burkburnett, Haskell, Electra and others in the western part of Wichita and the eastern part of Wilbarger counties.

General rains were reported all through Oklahoma, New Mexico and northwest Texas.

VERNON BOY STRUCK BY LIGHTNING BOLT

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, June 13—Battle Dye 24, son of W. A. Dye, was struck by lightning in the yard of his home here at 10:30 o'clock Sunday night. He will recover, physicians say. No sign could be found on his body, and two other men standing near were not shocked by the bolt. Two and one-half inches of rain, accompanied by wind and lightning, fell here Sunday night. Lightning injured two persons and damaged one house. Fire from lightning burned a barn, large quantity of feed and an automobile. No hail and but little damage to crops was reported.

GOOD RAIN REPORTED IN CROWELL SECTION

Special to The Record News.

CROWELL, June 13.—Two and one-half inches of rain fell in Crowell Sunday night and continued falling Monday morning. Reports show rain general over Foard county and more than three inches fell in some sections. Planting that has been held up due to dry weather will start within a few days.

HALL COUNTY REPORTS GOOD RAIN MONDAY

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, June 13—Hall county was covered with rain ranging from one-half inch to four inches beginning Sunday evening at five and lasting until Monday afternoon. A four-inch rain is reported at Turkey, accompanied by a severe wind storm which unroofed several barns and houses. But no hail is reported anywhere in the county. Telephone wires are reported blown down in the Turkey community. The rain will prove beneficial to growing crops, and will permit others to plant where it was too dry. Much cotton and feed was up to a good stand even in the dry sections of the country and some cotton was plowed and chopped out in the southeast part of the county. Most of the rain today has fallen slowly, all going into the ground.

SOAKING RAIN FALLS IN ELECTRA DISTRICT

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, June 13.—A soaking rain fell in this section of the county beginning about 12 o'clock Sunday night and is of much benefit to the farmers. Although many showers have fallen in the last few months none have fallen in the area of the north and northwest farming district.

The rain came too late to assure good grain crops for hot winds of the past week have damaged the corn at least 25 per cent, however, sudan and other feed crops were helped wonderfully and it is believed a large acreage of late grain crops will be planted as soon as the farmers can get into the fields.

No damage has been done to grain in the shock.

Due to the dryness of the area the City lake from which Electra gets its water supply, the lake has not been added to materially, the heavy rains soaking into the ground and filling up small creeks, tributaries to the lake.

At 7:45 Monday one and three-quarter inches of rain had fallen with rain continuing until noon.

Mission Study Class Holds Meet at Church

"Womanhood and Mohammedianism" and "Womanhood and Christianity," two topics found in the textbook, "Moslem Women," formed the topic of the Floral Heights Methodist mission study class Monday afternoon at the church, with Austin F. Leach, mission study superintendent, in charge.

The following topics were discussed: "The Teachings of the Koran About Women," Mrs. W. B. Guthrie; "Living Pictures of Moslem Women," Mrs. T. A. Newell; "Child Marriage and Ignorance," Mrs. C. M. Beaty; "Superstition and Sorcery and Living in Fear," Mrs. W. E. Bell, and "Polygamy and Divorce," Mrs. Charles Kilpatrick. Mrs. A. L. Lane Jr., told the life story of a Persian girl.

The song service was led by Mrs. C. M. Goodwin, with Mrs. Lester Jones at the piano. Mrs. C. R. Boone, president, anounced that 110 women of the society now have their names on the honor roll for having pledged to do daily Bible reading. Circle Three led in attendance.

Among those present were Mesdames O. F. Coleman, John Payne, F. J. Schaeffer, J. B. Patrick, Will Ellis, W. B. Guthrie, T. J. Lee, C. M. Beaty, Luella B. Thompson, A. S. Lane Jr., Ray Howard, W. H. Gaskin, L. L. Albritton, J. J. Deberry, S. A. Barnes, W. A. McGee, J. A. Gardner, T. R. Boone, T. F. McFall, Paul Colvert, Lester Jones, H. H. Davidson, R. J. Claypool, C. J. Waggoner, W. H. Barton, G. E. Lasky, A. F. Leach, Hugh Parks, W. B. Chauncey, T. A. Newall, C. M. Goodwin, A. A. Spencer, W. E. Bell, Paul Kilpatrick and Jewell Childress.

BEG YOUR PARDON.

Through error, The Record News Monday morning reported the address to the Kay Bible class Sunday as having been delivered by Judge John C. Kay, regular teacher of the class. The address was given by Rep. Roy J. Daniel, assistant teacher of the class and not by Judge Kay.

State Agrees To Bail For Wilkins, Held After Slaying Here Sunday

Although no efforts to release Joe Wilkins, charged with murder, from the county jail on bond were expected Monday, nevertheless the state will not contest his release if the defendant posts satisfactory bail, E. F. Fruechte, assistant district attorney said Monday. Wilkins is accused of shooting and killing Everett Horn Sunday.

As Wilkins has set up a plea of self defense, alleging that Horn attacked him with a knife before he shot him, Mr. Fruechte said that, according to the state law, he will be entitled to make bond for his release pending the action of the grand jury.

The court of criminal appeals has held in many instances, according to Mr. Fruechte, that where the accused sets up a plea of self defense that he shall have the right to his release from jail on bond.

Horn was shot and killed in the Maryland hotel, Eighth and Ohio streets. Wilkins surrendered to Chief of Police Frank Burns following the slaying and stated that he had shot Horn after the alleged knife attack was made.

Horn died instantly from the effects of a bullet that pierced his heart. Funeral arrangements for Horn will be made Tuesday, following the arrival here of his father from Oklahoma.

City Council To Consider Ordinance Licensing Boats at Lake Wichita

An ordinance to license boats and camp sites at Lake Wichita is now in the process of formation, P. B. Curd, water commissioner, advised the city council Monday night.

Mr. Curd was selected by the commissioners as acting mayor to preside at the council meeting in the absence from the city of Mayor R. E. Shepherd.

Mr. Curd stated that it was his intention to use the funds derived from license fees to pay a watchman to stay at the lake during the summer months to supervise sanitary conditions.

Paving Petitions

A hearing on the project of paving Hollywood street, from Hays to Garfield, was deferred two weeks by the council after several objections to the paving had been presented to the council by property owners on Hollywood street. Bluff street, from 13th to 16th was ordered paved.

Petitions for the paving of Sherman avenue, from York to Lexington; Bluff street, from 13th to 14th and Blonde street, from Holliday to Bridwell, were presented to the council.

A petition from the Safety council requesting the city to investigate a growth of bushes and trees, between the sidewalk and the curb, at 10th and Buchanan, was referred to J. W. Hunt, street commissioner for action.

A contract for the paving of Indiana, from Front to Sixth street was awarded to the L. E. Whitham Construction company.

Chief Given Leave

An ordinance for the closing of Colorado street, from Pecan to Oak, was passed on its first reading. Another ordinance prohibiting camping on streets or alleys, or on private property without the consent of the owner, was passed on its second reading.

Mr. Curd was authorized to sell two pumps which were used to pump water to the city pumping plant before the construction of the Lake Kemp dam. Mr. Curd advised the council that he had an inquiry from a Rio Grande valley concern that desired to purchase the pumps.

The council granted Chief of Police Frank Burns a leave of absence to attend a meeting of Oklahoma chiefs of police and marshals at Lawton. The city will pay Chief Burns' expenses to the meeting.

Industrial Magazine Tells of C-C Convention

The June issue of "The Manufacturer's Record," industrial and commercial magazine published in Baltimore, Md., carries a four-page story of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention, recently held in Wichita Falls. Pictures of the parade, floats, and several favorites of the convention are included with the story.

"The Worlds Largest Regional Chamber of Commerce celebrates in West Texas," is the title of the article, as written by E. H. Whitehead, publicity secretary of the organization. The local chamber of commerce received a copy of the magazine.

Deaths

B. M. ELKINS.

Funeral services for B. M. Elkins, 31, 2509 Avenue Q, will be held at McDade, Texas, Tuesday, following shipment of the body to that point by the Hines Mortuary Sunday night.

Mr. Elkins died at a local hospital early Sunday morning from tetanus which resulted from a nail wound received in the foot about a week ago. Mr. Elkins was working on the First Methodist church when he accidentally stepped on the nail. He is survived by his widow and two children.

BYRD TO TAKE RADIO DEVICE

Trans-Atlantic Plane To "Keep in Touch"

NEW YORK, June 13.—A last-minute check-up on weights and equipment on the Wanamaker plane, "America" made by T. H. (Doc) Kinkade, chief mechanic for the Wright aeronautical corporation, proved no extra hazard would be involved by the added weight of a radio sending set.

A radio, with an unstated sending radius was installed on the "America" today, Kingade did not supervise its installation. He is in Washington reassembling Lindy's "Spirit of St. Louis," but is to return to Roosevelt field before the "America" takes off.

Commander Richard E. Byrd was also in Washington for the Lindbergh reception.

The "America," if present plans hold, may take off for Paris within a few days, it was said.

Everything is now in readiness for its departure. Unlike Lindy's plane and the "Columbia," the latter pilioted by Clarence Chamberlin, Commander Byrd will be able to flash radio messages from the "America" while it is en route to the other side of the Atlantic.

Moody Revokes Parole of Prisoner Who Gets Liberty Through Fake Plea

By Universal Service.

AUSTIN, June 13.—Gov. Dan Moody today acted promptly when he discovered that some one had "slipped something over on him" when he granted a 30-day furlough to H. Woodfin, serving five years in the penitentiary for murder in Shackelford county.

It was represented to the governor that Woodfin was "an engineer and geologist" and had made extensive geological surveys in certain sections of East Texas and that his services were "indispensable" in the drilling of an oil well for the Carter Oil company.

On these representations the furlough was granted and Woodfin was sent to the oil field accompanied by a guard.

Today the governor learned that Woodfin was neither an engineer nor a geologist and ordered the furlough revoked and Woodfin returned to the penitentiary.

Woodfin was a "promoter" and not even a practical oil well driller, the governor's proclamation set forth.

Another conditional pardon granted by former Miriam A. Ferguson was revoked and cancelled today by Gov. Moody when he learned that Bouchie Wallace, convicted of burglary and theft in Dallas county and sentenced to 12 years in prison, and pardoned on Sept. 30, 1926, by Mrs. Ferguson, had been indicted in Travis county on a charg of burglary.

I. O. O. F. SMOKER.

Over 100 Odd Fellows attended the "old time smoker" given by the lodge at the rooms at Travis and Ninth streets, Monday night. A dutch lunch and general discussion of the new building featured the program for the evening. J. R. Ogle was chairman of the committee in charge of the smoker, with Ralph Dix and B. D. Sartin as members.

Spudder Players to Be Chicken Dinner Guests

The Floral Heights Methodist church will be the host of the Spudders tonight at 7:30 at a chicken dinner. Rev. S. A. Barnes and John Bland are the two leading members of the church in the dinner and through their efforts the dinner was arranged.

All of the Spudders are expected to be on hand for the occasion. The dinner will be at the church.

FACES MURDER CHARGE

FORT WORTH, June 13. (AP)—Floyd Hawkins, negro, was charged with murder and released on $5000 bond today following the fatal shooting of Jimy Lacy, negro, Sunday. Hawkins said he shot Lacy in self defense.

Notices to owners of automobiles in Wichita Falls who have neglected to render the cars for taxation that unless the rendition were made that the owners would have to accept the values as set by the city tax equalization board, were mailed Monday by Ralph Hyer, city tax assessor and collector. A large number of cars owners in the city have failed to render their cars for assessment, Mr. Hyer said.

Gain Pounds of Weight and Strength in 3 Weeks With New YEAST and IRON—or Pay Nothing

Daily the letters pour in telling how Ironized Yeast has put on 5 to 15 pounds of good solid flesh in 3 weeks. Has built up strength in nervous, tired people. Has cleared skins of ugly pimples and boils.

What Is the Magic in Ironized Yeast? Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one—weight-building Yeast and strengthening Iron. The yeast is the same used in making malt, and which makes malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured yeast, concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value.

This yeast is treated with pure, vegetable iron, the same as in spinach, lettuce and celery. In this form Iron is easily assimilated by the body, making rich, red blood and toning up nerves and muscles.

Only when Yeast is Ironized in this way is it more effective—for Iron is needed to bring out the weight-building values of Yeast. By this special formula Ironized Yeast gives you results in half the time required by yeast or iron taken separately.

Don't have a skinny, weak body. Don't go around with an ugly skin. Go to your druggist. Get a handy bottle of Ironized Yeast. 60 tasty tablets. They do not upset the stomach or cause gas or bloating. Safe for everybody.

Try It on "Money-Back" Offer

Go today to your druggist. Get a full size treatment of Ironized Yeast. If you are not delighted with the quick results, get your money back. If inconvenient to buy from the druggist, send $1.00 direct to the IRONIZED YEAST CO. Atlanta, Ga., Deck 84K.

SHE WENT FROM BAD TO WORSE

Down to 98 Pounds—Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."—Mrs. M. RISSINGER, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear, and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose? Wealth? Happiness?

Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you better health.

LINDY VISITS 'ETERNAL FIRE'

Air Ace Lays Wreath On World War Shrine

of some danger to his journey. The old Spirit would never have treated him like that.

Comes Out of Sky.

Lindy came out of the sky again heading an escort of 21 pursuit planes, and hit the earth within a few hundred yards of the runway at Roosevelt field over which the wheels of the Spirit of St. Louis trundled a little over three weeks back in the gray of the early morning when "we" took off for France.

History tells us that in the more gallus days of Rome and Carthage and all those old time towns, they gave their conquering heroes some mighty blasts of welcome when they came home from their conquering jobs abroad, but I doubt if history will ever record a demonstration for an individual such as the big town gave Lindy today.

His head was bare as he rode in an automobile in a great parade through the great canon of steel and stone that they call Broadway, and then up Fifth avenue. The sun of a pleasant June day seemed to sparkle in his blonde hair, always much rumpled, as if some one had run their fingers through it. His mother was at his side.

Enormous Parade.

The asphalt resounded to the shuffle of marching feet and the rattle of military accoutrements, and the blaring of bands. The tall buildings on either side were hanging gardens of humanity. The curbs were lined with sweltering men and women and little children, who almost fought the burly policemen stationed along the right of way like the pickets of a fence.

"Oh, please, mister officers, just let me get one look at him!" begged a little old lady at Madison Square, who was all crumpled up in the close packed crowd. "I once had a boy like that—he died in France."

"Here, you!" bawled the cop promptly, pulling and hauling at the front ranks. "Make room there for this lady!"

So they made room, and she stood there where she could see the young hero of peace pass, and as she gazed at his boyish face, she sobbed.

The Lindy smile swept over the crowd time and again, bathed it, drenched it, in the dew of his appealing youth and friendliness, and made every heart tighten. If you see the Lindy smile once, you will never forget it. It is a smile that seems to gather you, personally, up and brighten your soul. I mean to say that when Lindy smiles at everybody you somehow get the impression that he is smiling only at you.

He's "Some Boy."

"God, what a boy!" muttered a stern looking, grayish man with a white carnation in his lapel.

He said it!

The very buildings seemed to bend over Lindy smilingly, as if rocking pleasantly to the roar of the crowd. The streets through which he passed are almost dented with the heel-prints of the millions of feet that has walked them in parades in the past, soldiers going to and from their wars, civilians, presidents, governors, mayors, foreign potentates and whatnot, but they never before held the echo of a name as long—"Lindy! Lindy! Lindy!"

It was like a refrain.

It struck me that he looked frightened in that big parade in Washington, his first realization of what the people of his homeland think of him, and of his exploit.

His Poise Is Calm

Today he was self-possessed, though the demonstration was greater in the proportions of millions as against thousands of those making it. The poise that was the wonder of France and England but that trembled ever so slightly before the president of the United States, and his immediate following had returned to Lindy in some measure, but it was plain that he felt it in his heart.

The buildings of the big town were draped with flags and bunting that blew outward in the gentle breeze until in places they almost formed a canopy of red, white and blue over the head of the young man. Many of the people along the streets bore flags, which they waved at Lindy.

For hours the walls of the city gave back the echo of thunderous shouts. It took a long time for Lindy to traverse the entire route of the March, what with delays here and there. The thing did not move with the precision of the Washington arrangements.

Lindy himself steps very rapidly. He was in the air again a few minutes after he landed at Mitchell field, though he pasued to shake hands with a job lot of officials who were standing around. The wheels of his borrowed plane had scarcely stopped rolling before Lindy was out on the ground, and into an automobile which took him to a waiting Amphibian plane done in black and gold and called the San Francisco.

He Wears No Hat

Captain Ira E. Eaker, a Pan-American flier, was at the controls and he started his motor whirring as soon as Lindy's plane with its escorting planes were sighted. Lindy stepped into the cockpit of the San Francisco, yanked a pair of goggles down over his eyes, and Captain Eaker had him in the air in a jiffy. Lindy wore no hat, and his blonde hair was flying in the breeze as he waved and smiled at the cheering crowd.

Twenty minutes after leaving Mitchell field, or at 12:21, Captain Eaker settled the San Francisco on the waters of the narrows off Fort Lafayette, like some great black and gold water bug. He had to look around a bit for a landing place, because the water was crowded with craft of one kind and another loaded with people eager to see Lindy. The boats broke out their whistles as the San Francisco settled down.

Then the Macom, the mayor's committee boat, carrying Grover Whalen, the chairman, and many notables, had reached the landing spot a few minutes previously. A sky-writer soaring high over the battery formed the greeting, "our Lindy" against the sky and that started the whistles going all over again. There was so much excitement out on the water that a lot of vessels had narrow escapes from collision.

He Boards Vessel

Lindy went aboard the Macom, and all the other boats formed an aisle through which the committee boat passed on the way to the battery, the din increasing every second. Lindy's escort of 21 planes flew high overhead. The moment he stepped aboard the Macom, the parade of 10,000 soldiers, sailors and marines got under way from the battery headed for the city hall with an advance guard of motorcycle police.

Gives Interview

Lindy submitted to an interview at the hands of the reporters on the Macom during the journey to the battery, but they got very little out of him, at least nothing of what you could call of great importance, He was almost laconic in his answers.

He explained that the trouble with the "Spirit of St. Louis" was that salt water got into her valves while roosting on the barge in the Potomac river.

"What do you think of this reception?" he was asked.

"I hardly expected it," he answered, quietly.

"What gave you the first idea of the Paris flight, the Orteig prize?" was another question.

"The Orteig prize suddenly centered the interest of fliers in it," he said.

He didn't know exactly what he would do about the balky "Spirit of St. Louis," but he rather gave the impression that he will not go to Washington after it.

His Collar Rumpled

He wore the same blue suit with the vague pin stripe that was his garb in Washington. His collar was somewhat rumpled, indicating that he had merely pulled his flying clothes on over his "cits" for the flight from Washington. Lindy does not seem to care a great deal about his sartorial array, anyway.

Before he stepped ashore from the Macom at the battery, Lindy gave his greeting to New York. It was what you might call quite informal, but none the less hearty.

"Hello, New York," he said into a microphone.

He got his first glimpse of his mother from the deck of the Macom since she left Washington last night. She was standing on pier A, and his hand went up in a military salute. She waved in greeting.

As he passed through the lower part of Broadway from the battery, the Wall streeters gave him their customary salute. From the windows of the tall buildings fell giant festoons of ticket tape, that writhed and floated in the air like little white serpents. The jam at the battery itself was terrific, but Lindy's military escort kept an opening for him. Lindy kept looking up at the buildings, and waving his hand.

He reached the city hall about 2 o'clock and here was a tremendous gathering. The wonder is how the people got themselves untangled afterwards, so closely were they jammed together. A huge temporary stand had been erected there, and Mayor James J. Walker, impeccable of attire, and smiling, was waiting for Lindy, attended by other city officials.

Official Welcome

The mayor gave Lindy official welcome to the city, handing him a scroll of welcome, and making an address in which he spoke of Lindy as America's ambassador of the air, a title not entirely new to Lindy now. He extolled the young man's heroism, and his modesty, and said if he had any letters of introduction to anyone in New York, he didn't need them. This reference by the mayor to the celebrated letters that Lindy took with him to France tickled the crowd.

Mayor Walker also pinned a medal of valor awarded by the city on Lindy's coat, beside the distinguished flying cross, and the ribbon of the French Legion of Honor, the only decorations Lindy wore when he started out from Washington this morning.

Mayor Walker and Grover Whalen rode with Lindy in an open car as the parade started on up town from the city hall.

The next stop was in Madison Square at the eternal light, the beacon that burns to the memory of New York City's 14,114 dead on the battle fields of the World war.

He Places Wreath

Lindy got out of his automobile, and blanked by the mayor and Whalen he marched to the light. He was introduced by Whalen to Miss Clara Feichter of Philadelphia, a war-time nurse, who handed him a beautiful wreath of laurel and roses. Lindy placed this wreath at the base of the monument, which is inscribed:

"In memory of those who have made the supreme sacrifice for the triumph of the free people of the world."

Lindy returned to his car, waving his hand at his mother in the car behind, and the parade started again, but quickly halted once more. Lindy had seen a motor car standing at the curb on the west side of Fifth avenue near the grandstand, and had seen sitting in the car a former buddy, Floyd Bennett, who was a victim of the accident preceding the flight of Commander Eyrd over the North Pole.

He Greets Buddy.

Lindy leaped from his car as it came to a stop and went over and took Bennett's hand in a warm clasp. Bennett has a leg in a cast, and can not move around very well. The crowd became almost hysterical over Lindy's action, women pressing against the horses of the mounted police as they tried to get closer to Lindy, and taking alarming chances.

From Bennett's car stepped a man in aviation uniform followed by two little girls who carried a huge bouquet of roses between them. Rex Reno was the man, and he had brought the flowers down from Connecticutt as the contribution of the immortal LaFayette escadrille. Mayor Walker got out of Lindy's car and took the roses.

Meantime the cops were gradually shoving the crowd back into line, but not without a struggle. From the Metropolitan tower way up almost in the very eye of the sun, men and women looked down on the amazing scene. On the wall of No. 354 Fourth avenue, a portrait of Lindy four stories high had been painted and above it were the words "Our Hero."

On up Fifth Avenue, past the great department stores and fashionable shops, all of them closed, and most of them with the windows walled off by hastily improvised pine barriers from the press of the crowds, went the long parade. Past the huge new hotels that tower over the upper end of the avenue and always through that aisle of humanity that seemed unending.

70,000 in Mass.

Perhaps the biggest gathering of all was in Central park. It was not until 4:15 that Lindy got there, and he had been moving in the line of march since noon. There must have been close to 70,000 people massed about the grand stand in the park, and the stand itself seated about 10,000. The great green stretches of the park seemed to take Lindy's eye. Perhaps he felt he might find it quieter here than in the streets, but the cheers fairly rattled the leafy trees at his approach.

It was here that Governor Alfred E. Smith presented Lindy with New York State's highest award, the Medal of Valor. True, mere state and city awards may not seem of vast importance alongside the Legion of Honor and the Distinguished Flying Cross, but they are the highest gifts in the power of an admiring people, and Lindy accepted Governor Smith's offering with blushing appreciation.

"New York is proud to bestow upon you her medal of valor," said Governor Smith, as he pinned it on Lindy's coat. "Not only for your achievement, but in admiration of the personality which your exploit and your daring has painted for us. You are hailed in the empire state as an ideal and an example for the youth of America."

The governor then shook hands with Lindy and said with a broad smile:

Wishes Him Luck.

"We call you captain on that medal. I know you're a colonel. I hope you're a general the next time we meet."

Now the crowd broke into another tremendous uproar that lasted for some time. The women screamed and tried to shove forward closer to the stand, but the police held them back. Then Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, the mild manner mother of the boy, who has meticulously dodged the limelight since his flight, was brought forward and introduced.

Side by side they stood together before the cheering crowd, the most modest mother of the most modest boy that this world has ever seen, and they smiled together at the people. The parade passed in review before Lindy, taking up fully another hour and finally he was whisked away for a little rest.

MANY INJURED IN LINDBERGH CROWD.

NEW YORK, June 13. (AP)—One young woman dropped dead, a score of persons were injured in traffic accidents, nearly 100 adults and children were overcome by heat, and at least 1,000 others required restorative treatment of a minor but emergency nature, in the great mass of humanity that jammed the streets when Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was welcomed to New York today.

More than 13,000 police and reserves were called on to stem the tide of the pressing mob and oftentimes were compelled to use force.

Miss Millie Smitti, 23 years old, succumbed to heart disease induced by the excitement of the celebration while watching the parade from the roof of an office building.

As the parade moved from the Battery to City Hall, 18 women, five men, and six children fainted. Many of them had been standing along the curb for several hours in the scorching sun.

During the demonstration at city hall park, eight persons were overcome by heat and seven injured in minor traffic accidents when the throng pressed closer for a view of the returning hero. On the steps of the public library where thousands of school children had assembled to greet the returned flyer, eight girls and two boys were overcome by heat and exhaustion.

NAME TOWN FOR LINDY

BROWNSVILLE, June 13. (AP) Lindbergh, Texas, is the name of a new town in Starr county, just west of Rio Grande City on the Rio Grande river.

A large tract of land was purchased several months ago by St. Louis capitalists, who now are are developing it. The town will be in the center of a large cotton, truck, and fruit farming area.

Shall We Close At 7 P. M. on Saturday

—It would make working hours more pleasant on hot Saturdays for our employes this summer.

—What do you think? Phone us, write a note, or drop in personally so that we can act to please you.

—Heretofore, one group of salespeople have come from 8 o'clock to 6 o'clock, and another group from 10 in the morning to 8 at night. But as most people prefer shopping in the cool morning hours, we can supply the full sales force from 8 in the morning to 7 at night, and thus give better service.

FOR Sour Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle.

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Earlier Saturday Closing Contemplated

To arrange more pleasant working hours for store employes we are contemplating closing at 7 p. m. on Saturdays.

It is our opinion that store service will be bettered by this new arrangement.

WE WANT YOUR OPINION

We will welcome an expression of your opinion on this plan either by phone, letter or in person.

Wichita Boys Making Success With Kiwanis Club Pigs, Members Told

The lives of 18 fortunate pigs were told to members of the Wichita Falls Kiwanis club at the noon luncheon Monday, by 18 Kiwanians who head committees sponsoring the rearing of the swine. The meeting for "farmer day" was devoted to reports on the success of boys of Wichita county who were given pigs by the club in May.

According to the reports, every boy is taking a commendable interest in the welfare of his pig, now grown to the hog age, and is receiving the support of his family in rearing it in "prize fashion." Plenty of good food, water and shade is afforded, and provisions are being made by the club for the vaccination of the hogs against disease. There are already 35 young pigs in the several litters in the group, it was learned.

Barnes Gives Talk

Included in the committee reports were statements concerning the crops raised on the farms habitated by the Kiwanis hogs, an investigation which was highly complimented by O. K. Barnes, head of the agricultural department of the local chamber of commerce in a short address following the reports.

"There is no alfalfa nor sweet clover raised on any of these farms and the farmers and the boys must realize that they can make 25 per cent more profit on hogs if they raise sweet clover," Mr. Barnes affirmed.

"A hog can live on green pasture all his life, from the time he is born until he is shipped, in this country, and it will have a good effect for you men to suggest the raising of more leguminous pasturage on every farm." Mr. Barnes stated that alfalfa contained 14 per cent protein, which is "just what the hog needs."

Musical Program

Frank McMordie, dairy expert of the chamber of commerce, was introduced to the club and told of club work being done by the chamber of commerce. He congratulated the Kiwanis on their selection of boys for the experiment, and stated that the hogs were all doing exceedingly well, as he had found on trips to the various farms.

Miss Josephine Fisk, well-known in Wichita Falls for her interpretations of Spanish songs, entertained the club with three selections, playing her own accompaniment on the Hawaiian guitar.

Find Six Keys to the Popularity of Coca-Cola

THIRST

The only real drink is a thirst-quenching drink. Coca-Cola, a pure drink of natural flavors, quenches thirst as nothing else can.

Another of the "six keys"—six outstanding reasons why everybody likes Coca-Cola—is illustrated and presented in the Coca-Cola story above. All "six keys" are being illustrated and presented in Coca-Cola advertising between the first week in May and the middle of August—in the following weeklies, one key to each advertisement: The Saturday Evening Post, Literary Digest, Liberty, Collier's Weekly, and Life, and in posters, outdoor signs; in the show windows and at the stores and stands of the many thousands of places that serve Coca-Cola.

For the correct naming of the "six keys" and the best answers to two simple questions, 635 cash prizes totaling $30,000 will be awarded by The Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Ga. The first prize will be $10,000. Contest closes August 25, 1927. Visit our plant and we'll be glad to help you get started if you have not already entered this contest.

The One Perfect Malt Syrup!

HERE is a real achievement in the development of a perfect Malt Syrup. It represents the experience of over three-quarters of a century in the production of Malt products. It is just as fine as scientific skill, modern methods and quality ingredients can produce. The name "Schlitz" on the label represents the same standard of quality as the name "Sterling" on silver.

Schlitz Malt Syrup is made according to a secret formula developed and tested over a long period of time in the great Schlitz Laboratories. It is perfectly filtered and doubly pasteurized. This is your guarantee that Schlitz Malt Syrup is just as pure and full flavored when you open the can as when it was packed.

And it costs no more than common Malt Syrup.

20 TO ENTER PACIFIC HOP

Hongkong Flight Is Given Aid By National Air

DALLAS, June 13.(AP)—The National Agronautic association will co-operate with officials directing the Dallas-Hongkong flight, William Easterwood Jr., promoter of the flight, said Monday.

Requests for 20 entry blanks for nationally-known fliers who have asked the association for information concerning the long distance flight, has been made in a letter received here Monday from Charles Schory, chairman of the contest committee of the Washington organization.

A. J. Dixon, Dallas policeman, has requested to be a passenger with Bill Erwin, American ace, who was the first entry in the flight.

LINDY URGES FLIERS TO USE EXTRA CARE

WASHINGTON, June 13.(AP)—A San Francisco to Hawaii flight is practical and will be made in a short time, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh said today, but he warned that the use of accurate navigation methods was highly important.

The New York to Paris aviator, in an address at the National Aeronautic association breakfast given in his honor expressed the hope that the methods of navigation he used on his trans-Atlantic flight would not be adopted for the Pacific trip.

He pointed out that if he had wandered far off his course on his Atlantic crossing he could have landed in the British Isles or as far south as Spain, but declared such land protection is not afforded in the Pacific.

"If by dead reckoning," he added, "an attempt is made to reach the Hawaiian islands and the plane drifts even a few miles off the course there are thousands of miles of water beyond the islands which would make it improbable that an aviator would be picked up.

Must Use Radio

He declared the Pacific flight should not be attempted without radio navigation facilities or an experienced celestial navigator or boats.

Referring to aviation in general Colonel Lindbergh said it was very important at this time to combat any tendency to develop aviation on a "wildcat basis" and added that aviation was not on a sound basis and must continue to be developed along those lines.

He reiterated that trans-Atlantic passenger and commercial service is inevitable, but that it will not come for many years and until careful investigation and scientific research had been carried out.

"Whatever is done for aeronauties in the future," he concluded, "it should be on a firm, sound basis."

Sister Ship To Lindbergh's Plane Flown To New York To Welcome Him

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Unheralded and unknown to the east, another conqueror of the air flew from Washington to New York today in the rear of Lindy.

It was the "Pride of San Deigo" an exact duplicate of the "Spirit of St. Louis," made by the same manufacturers in California and to have been used by Lindy in the event that his own ship got damaged on the eastern trip to New York preparatory to his flight to Paris.

The "Pride of San Deigo" was piloted today by Captain Frank M. Hawkes, who flew it from San Deigo to Washington last week, arriving in time for Lindbergh's reception, and had as a passenger Mrs. Hawkes, who made the flight from Houston, Texas, to Washington. Another passenger, D. W. Campbell, representing the City of San Deigo tarried here to be presented to President Coolidge this morning by Rep. Phil Swing.

In the place of the huge gas tank on the "Spirit of St. Louis," it's sister ship had a tonneau fitted up like an auto and capable of carying five passengers. There were five upholstered chairs, electric light and heavy plate glass windows to break the wind. Mesdames Hawkes and Campbell rode in their "civies" the same as they would have worn on a Pullman car.

On their eastern flight they had breakfast one morning in Muskogee, Okla., lunch in St. Louis and Dinner that night in Indianapolis.

And This Is Texas

DALLAS is a Texas city. In 1887 it was a Texas village. In that year the late L. A. Pires purchased a lot fronting 25 feet on Main street for $4000. He erected a three-story building at a cost of $11,000. His entire investment cost him $15,000. The same property was sold the other day for $150,000 cash, the highest price ever paid for Main street real estate in that city.

These early pioneers of Texas that is of the year 1887 can be considered an early period planted small savings in real estate in the cities of Texas and realized fortunes. Speaking of L. A. Pires, he accumulated a fortune of more than a million dollars. After he had passed away his will was offered for probate.

He had divided his accumulations into four parts. He gave all he had acumulated to charity, or to be used for charitable purposes. A quarter of a million dollars was handed to St. Paul sanitarium for the poverty-stricken, who were disabled in body; another quarter of a million dollars was handed over to a Protestant orphan asylum; another quarter of a million dollars was bequeathed to a great Masonic body for benevolent or welfare purposes and another quarter of a million to another charity which appealed to him.

Had he lived in vain? He was a Portugese. He came to Texas when very young. He never married. He provided handsomely for his blood kin, but the bulk of his accumulations passed on to those interested in the uplift of their fellows.

Consumption of Cotton

JOHN A. TODD is said to be a world famous British cotton authority. He is in Texas again and he travelled all the way from Liverpool, England. He was here in 1921 and conducted cotton investigations in Texas. This is what he said to the reporter of a North Texas newspaper: "Why should not the world use up the 18,000,000 bale American cotton crop at an attractive price?" This in answer to a question. According to the same authority Expert Todd believes that a crop of 16,000,000 or 17,000,000 bales, if raised this year, might be absorbed in the regular channels of commerce.

It may be absorved in the regular channels of commerce at an attractive price, but will the vast army of tenants, white and brown and black, be paid a price above the cost of production. All appears to be well in the textile world. Expert Todd, in answer to another question said:

"No, I do not find any evidence of spinners stocking up for 18 months or two years ahead, because of cheap cotton. The American mills are showing unusual activity and so are the English and European mills." Well, the vast bulk of the crop of 1926 has been shifted from the fields to the warehouses of America and Europe. Who owns it? Not the little producers.

Brewster County Leads

THERE is a Davis Mountain section of Texas. Senator Thomas B. Love got away with an appropriation of $10,000 to make a survey for scenic highway around the mountain. There are Texans who insist that it is the coming vacation ground of the people. Furthermore, the largest single holding of land in Texas is in Brewster county and amounts to 287,606 acres. Apple growers from the northern states have made the discovery that in this Davis mountain section is an ideal apple producing country and they are planting the trees.

Purchase of the McCardle Pictures

PURCHASE of the McArdle battle scene pictures by order of the 40th legislature was an admirable act, although delayed recognition of the artist and the creations of his brush.

For more than a quarter of a century these pictures have been on the walls of the senate chamber. They were not the property of the people of Texas. They were the property of the heirs of the dead artist.

They were pronounced of high historical value on account of their accuracy if not rare works of art. They tell the story, as McArdle dreamed it, of the Alamo and San Jacinto and the rich heritage which came to a free people when the Mexicans were driven from the soil of that which became a republic and later by annexation a proud state of the American Union.

From beginning to end the story of McArdle and his work is of rare human interest and now long after he passed away lawmakers of Texas have recognized, officially made his conceptions on canvas of what the battles of the Alamo and San Jacinto meant to all the people who came after the statesmen and the heroes who won their freedom with the rifle and the sword.

Moral—Get a License

CHARLES A. LEVINE was not a licensed postal carrier. When he flew across he carried his letters with him and mailed the same on the other side. Now he is asked to contribute $25,000 to the treasury of the postoffice department. Charles blundered, but if he has to pay what of it? He received publicity in the value of millions and he is in the game for commercial purposes. He is a builder of planes. He is the only builder that ever jumped by way of an aircraft bridge from New York to Berlin.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, June 13.—Probably not many persons who read that Judge Robert Grant had been appointed one of the advisers to Governor Fuller of Massachusetts in the disposition of the Sacco-Vanzetti case will recall that Judge Grant is a novelist. Yet Theodore Dreiser told me the other afternoon that Judge Grant was one of the fore-runners of realism in America, and that the Judge's "Unleavened Bread," published 27 years ago, is one of the best of American realistic novels.

The list of publications Judge Grant sets down under his name in "Who's Who" tells the history of a man's life in titles. They are (with some omitted): "Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," "An Average Man," "Reflections of a Married Man," "The Opinions of a Philosopher," "The Art of Living," "The Convictions of a Grandfather," and "The Bishop's Granddaughter."

Here and there: At the Algonquin the other day I saw Robert Benchley, the humorist, eating alone at the Roudd Table and reading a book. The book was "The Colby Essays," by the late F. M. Colby, editor of the International Encyclopedia, who was one of the finest essayists America ever produced. He wrote but rarely, because of the pressure of his editorial work, and for that reason never achieved a wide reputation. One time he told me that reputation is built upon repetition, and that people whose names were often enough repeated became famous or well-known, whereas those whose names are rarely seen in print are known only to a small circle, no matter how good their writings were. It was true of Colby himself; but it seems that since his death his fame is growing. . . John Jay Chapman begins a book on Dante with these curious words: "Today we live in a sort of furore about Dante, in a kind of Dante-whirl." Robert Sherwood says that Mr. Chapman must have Dante confused with Lindbergh. . . . Harry Hansen, the critic, is going abroad for a few weeks. He told me that he had reserved his seat for the Wagner festival in Beyreuth through an agency in New York which provides the best seats for American tourists . . . E. E. Cummins, the poet, came to see me and told me how he had to re-write a story for a magazine no less than 10 times and that after the tenth time the manuscript did not quite suit the editor, who took a whack at revising the piece himself. As a result Cummings did not recognize the piece when it came out in the magazine . . . George Gershwin, the young composer who used to be a good shoe salesman, has made nearly a million out of "The Rhapsody in Blue" alone, and he has written a great many other musical hits . . . Deems Ttylor, who is probably the most versatile of New York's intelligentsia, is planning a new American opera for which he will write both the music and the libretto. Edna St. Vincent Millay wrote the libretto for his opera, "The King's Henchman." . . . Donald Ogden Stewart, who said he was going to Scotland to investigate a report that in that country was be seen an authentic bottle of Scotch, has been laid up in the hospital with erysipelas. . . . The best recognition of genius I have heard of recently is that in the will of Payne Whitney, who left to Peter Finley Dunne, the author of the "Mister Dooley" stories, $500,000. . . . The use of futuristic or modernistic art in show-card and display advertising is growing. There is a shoe store on Forty-fourth street in which the window display is unusually attractive because of modernistic designs. . . . The questionnaire craze is waning, at least to the extent that you may go to a party now with some assurance that you will not be asked a lot of questions to which you do not know the answer. . . . Frank Swinnerton, in an interview, says that American writers have more vitality than English writers and that the future of American literature is more promising than the future of English literature. . . . It seems that most men have put away their evening dress clothes for the summer and the black coats and white shirts are not so numerous any more at the theaters. . . . Harry Kemp gets more and more personal in his autobiographical volumes, and it is a wonder that he hasn't been shot after all the stuff he has spilled. . . . When this sort of weather comes along I wish I could get out of this darn town and out in the western prairies, or up in the hills of the Dakotas, or under the trees of a Kentucky countryside, or just anywhere away from city noises and hot pavements and stuffy offices.

MODISH MITZI — Ask Him Another? No! — By JAY V. JAY

"You see," said Polly to Mitzi, "this guide will take us around Versailles and answer all our questions." At least that is what he said he would do. What Mitzi wants to know at once is whether the dress ahead is a Worth or a Poiret design? And is that really a knee braclet worn by the lady ahead? She'd like to ask him of course, if he likes the tier treatment of her georgette dress? And doesn't a chiffon dress and a lightweight coat make a convenient traveling costume? Well, Polly thinks it does and she ought to know. Hers has a turn-over collar in a demure school girl fashion.

The guide holds forth upon historical facts. No guide book could be more complete. Mitzi is usually about ten paces behind because she insists upon seeing the styles ahead of her. How else could she know that the bolero effect of this costume really does extend around the back? The skirt is pleated. She wears with it a felt hat which matches the shade of the dress—as all correct French costumes do. No trimming on the hat at all! Only an earrings shows. She can't think of a question to ask the guide that he can answer. He knows nothing. Absolutely nothing at all! His rating is zero as far as Mitzi's questions are concerned.

"I'm so glad I found you."

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

The entrance of America into the World war finds Phillip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this, he and Natlee Jones, who has the daughter of the Tracys' milkman, had had a childish engagement which was objected to by both Mr. Jones and Mrs. Tracy.

Phillip becomes interested in Lyra Hilliard, an old friend of his mother's He takes her to luncheon and shortly finds he is falling in love. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared.

Rod and Phillip start for the barracks. Natlee goes to the depot to see them off and in her anxiety to see Phil she ignores Rod entirely. This nearly breaks his heart.

Phillip writes his mother and asks her to be good to Natlee.

Phillip finds he must leave for the southern training camp before seeing his mother again. Here he has a most unusual experience with a nameless girl.

Here the story further unfolds:

CHAPTER XXIX.

ON KITCHEN POLICE

The girl, still coughing, stood for a moment while Phil waited uncomfortably for the paroxysm to pass.

As soon as it became a little less she moved toward the window and pulled down the shade. Then she came back and sat down on the side of the bed.

"Gee, you have a terrible cough," said Phil.

"Yes, isn't it?" she answered, looking him, for the first time, straight in the face.

"When I saw you through that screen door, you looked as miserable as I feel," he volunteered.

"Why, what have you go to be unhappy about?"

"Plenty," answered Phil, laconically. "I have just had some terrible news from home. Everything has gone to smash in my family."

The girl laughed.

Phil thought that the sound was worse than a sob.

"Don't you know you're in luck if you even have a family? Can the self-pity, kid, for if you get me started, God help us both."

"You don't mean to tell me that you think you're really unhappy," and she took him in slowly from the top of his sleek brown hair to the tip of his shiny shoes with an appraising eye.

What she found there she evidently found good to look at, for a look of tenderness came into her eyes that no man had probably seen there for many years.

Then because it takes only a look of sympathy and understanding to unlock the lips of a boy, Phillip Wynne Tracy IV, in that sordid crib down there by the border, opened his heart and told this poor, half-starved, flung aside morsel of humanity, the story of his first passion—the story of Lyra Hilliard.

His words came with a rush. The girl sat so still he was not sure she was listening, and finally to cover his own display of feeling to a comparative stranger he stopped in the middle of a sentence. "Gee, I don't even know your name," he exclaimed, "and you're nice, too."

At this the girl raised her face again. Two large tears welled up in her eyes and ran unheeded down her cheeks.

Seeing them, Phillip knew she had heard everything and understood all.

"I am Phillip Wynne Tracy IV," he announced, as though he had made her one of his friends then and there.

"I'm going to send you a doctor."

"Oh, I'm all right. I'll get better or die soon—either one won't make any difference to the world, anyway."

"I'll stop on my way back to camp," he continued, as though she had not spoken.

She turned away her head and he heard her mutter as though to herself: "I have no money to pay a doctor." Then quickly she spoke as though she were afraid he had heard her.

"It is late, Wynne. You should on your way back to camp."

Phil looked at his watch rather ostentatiously. It gave him a chance to recover from the sound of the name of "Wynne" from the lips of this girl—it was later than he thought. He realized he had to hurry.

Still sticking in the back of his head, however, was that muttered sentence, "I have no money to pay a doctor."

Almost turning his back upon her in that little room, he awkwardly took $10 from his pocket and carelessly tried to leave it on the chest of drawers beside the bed without her seeing him doing it.

The girl, who had not missed a move he had made, looked up at him gratefully from the bed where she was sitting, but said nothing.

Phil walked over and picked up one of her hands which, pale and quite beautiful, were lying relaxed in her lap among the folds of her red kimono. He patted it bashfully with the same gentle movement that he had used when he was trying to comfort his mother.

"Good-bye," he said, I—I—I'd like to stay and talk with you longer, but I'll be late if I don't hurry, and I'd hate them to put me out of the army."

At this the girl smiled. With a little catch in her breath she exclaimed:

"Don't worry, kid. They wouldn't put anybody as nice as you out of any place."

Phil grabbed his hat and opening the door he rushed for the jitney.

The girl sat for a moment looking through the open doorway where he had vanished. Then she got up wearily, picked up the bill and dropped it in the upper drawer of the chest, walked over to the window and pulled up the shade.

Phil managed to get past the guard, although he was aware that it was about a minute after twelve and he congratulated himself that everything was all right.

He had forgotten, however, about the encounter with Lieutenant Andrews.

Soon he was lying on his camp cot, his eyes wide open in the darkness, wondering how such a "lady" could have come down so low.

The next morning at reveille he was told to report immediately after breakfast to the first sergeant.

He was mystified but he understood when Top Sergeant Muldoon said: "Lieutenant Andrews has reported that you were not in your quarters at midnight. Military discipline must be upheld, Tracy, Lieutenant Andrews has instructed that you be detailed to kitchen police for three days and that your passes to town be withheld for that time."

Phil started for the camp kitchen, passing Rod on the way.

"Where are you going, Wynne?"

Phil saluted formally: "I have been detailed to kitchen police and am on my way, corporal."

"Damn corporal," said Rod. "Wait a minute."

"Yes, sir," said Phil, snappily, saluting again the coming to "attention," his eyes fairly dancing, for he knew he was getting Rod's goat.

"What were you detailed for, Wynne? You haven't been doing anything, have you?"

"That scurvy shave-tail Andrews caught be flirting with the girl he was at the hotel with last night night and he reported I was not in at midnight. I had passed the guard at that time, however, and was on my way to my tent, but, of course, I couldn't say anything.

"The guard may have given me a little leeway, but some one reported I was not in my tent right at the instant of twelve. My passes are revoked for three days, but if Andrews thinks he is going to keep me in camp, damn him—he's got another think coming."

All the morning Phillip Wynne Tracy IV peeled potatoes and onions until he couldn't see out of his eyes, but in the afternoon he had his reward. In cleaning up things he found a fine porterhouse steak that had been laid aside for the officers' mess, and he beat the dog robbers to it.

Having toasted some bread on the top of the camp stove and after having broiled the steak he was enjoying the best meal he had ever had in camp, when about four o'clock Lieutenant Andrews strolled around to see how that upstart of a Tracy was getting along.

"I'll just show him he can't play any tricks on me," he said to himself.

He found "the upstart" playing another trick, however. He was eating a gorgeous hot porterhouse sandwich and seeming to be enjoying himself very much. Phil came to attention as the lieutenant came up and, of course, the luscious sandwich dropped to the ground. He was happy that there was only a little of it left, however, and he was glad he didn't have to say anything, for his mouth was full. As it was, it was hard work for him to laugh in the face of his superior officer.

That night he rolled up a blanket with some of his clothes and arranged it in his cot so it would look to the guard passing like a man sleeping with his face to the wall. Then he stole out.

He had planned to go back and see the girl on the narrow street again.

But as he was going down the main street he heard his name called and turning saw an outstretched hand from an automobile. Above it there was the radiant face of Marta Tennis.

Phillip stepped from the curb and grasped the girl's hand.

"I'm so glad I found you," Marta Tennis exclaimed. "I've been driving up and down this street for an hour hoping to do so. I'm just going back home now to pick up mother.

"She is all pepped up with the though of meeting the son of Anne Tracy, as she calls your mother. We are going out to the country, club. Would you like to go with us?"

"I'll be very glad to go, Miss Tennis."

"It's 'Marta' to you, you know," said the girl, smiling. "Come on, get in and we'll find mother, and

"Pure Bunk" This Business of Maid Being Man's Reformer, Says Dix

Why Women Seldom Influence Men for Better or Worse—the Disillusioned Husband Who Can't Stand His Wife's Table Manners.

Dear Miss Dix—Is it true that God created women with an influence over men that gives them the power to draw men spiritually up to all that is divine and beautiful or to drag them down to sin and perdition? J. L. X.

Answer—Certainly not. There is no other one thing in the world about which so much tommyrot has been written as about "woman's sacred influence."

Poets have sung it. Novelists have made it the theme of romances. The plots of plays have turned upon it. Men have offered it as an excuse for their shortcomings ever since Adam laid the blame for his apple-eating upon Eve. But in real life none of us has ever known any of these women who possess the miracle-working power of making a man do anything he didn't want to do or to keep him from doing anything he did not want to do.

We have seen hundreds of misguided girls marry drunkards in the optimistic belief that their influence would reform their sottish husbands, but we could count on the fingers of one hand and have most of the fingers left the cases in which the wife's influence was stronger than the man's love of drink. We have seen girls marry lazy ne'er-do-wells thinking that their influence was all that was needed to turn a loafer into a go-getter and we have seen the wife go to work to support her shiftless husband.

We have seen girls marry brutes and bullies thinking that a wife's tender influence would make them kind and gentle, and we have seen the poor creatures going around with blackened eyes telling lies about how they bumped into the door or accidentally bruised themselves on the bedpost.

The most that woman's influence ever does is to be a sort of accelerator to man. A woman's influence helps a man on the way he is going anyway. It speeds him up and makes him go the faster, but it seldom, if ever, changes his course.

If an ambitious man marries an ambitious woman she is a potent factor in his success. She prods him on and helps him to achieve things the quicker. But no matter how ambitious a woman is she can not make anything out of an unambitious man. There is no surgery by which she can supply his lack of backbone with her own, by which she can inject her pep into him; no magic by which she can light in his soul the flame that burns in hers.

Nothing is more overrated than woman's influence over man. As a matter of fact, men's influence is far stronger over women than woman's influence is over man, because men have had the power to set up certain standards of conduct for women to live by and force them to conform to them, but women have never had the influence to make men anything but what they are.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have been happily married for years to one of the best wives a man ever had—self-sacrificing, generous, kind and loyal to the core. Yet I am not happy, because my wife has such terrible table manners that she makes every meal an ordeal to be dreaded. She makes the most abominable noises with her mouth. She snaps at her food and gobbles it as if she were starving and sbis has got on my nerves until I can bear it no longer. I am so ashamed of her that I never ask people to the house or take her to a restaurant. Is there no way she can be cured?

DISILLUSIONED HUSBAND.

Answer—Heavens, man, why didn't you find this out before you were married? In your courting days didn't you ever take your girl out for a meal? If you didn't, you deserve what you got. And if you saw and heard her eat and were not warned, perhaps you also deserve it.

Certainly our table manners are a big factor in our success or failure in life. I personally know two men who have failed in achieving their ambitions merely because they ate soup audibly and didn't know how to handle a fork. Their superiors could not advance them to the positions for which they were fitted because they ate like pigs. And certainly I can think of nothing more disgusting to a refined man or woman than to have to sit across a table 365 days a year and have his or her sensibilities outraged by the table manners of a boor.

In your individual case, Mr. Husband, it seems to me that the only remedy is frankness. Realize that your wife sins through ignorance and not through intention, and that she does not know that she commits the crimes against table etiquette that she does.

People who gargle their soup and their tea and coffee are blissfully unconscious of the noises they make. Those who hold a fork as if they were about to toss a load of hay with it have never had their attention called to the fact that they were not expected to do manual labor at the able. Those who eat with theier knives are unaware that their sword-swallowing act makes every one about them nervous.

So, if I were you, I should simply have a heart-to-heart talk with my wife and tell her how much I loved her and admired her, and then I'd tell her that she was ruining it all by her uncouth table manners.

Perhaps she would be hurt at first, but no woman wants to disillusion her husband, nor does she want him to be ashamed of her. And my word for it, she will reform.

DOROTHY DIX.

RUNYON SAYS

"Fat" Arbuckle's Club Once Owned Vernon Anger Was His Partner They Havea Reunion Sold Long Bob Muesel

BY DAMON RUNYON.

(Copyright 1927 by International Features Service.)

Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle, largely known as "Fatty," and Mr. Lou Anger had a small reunion in Mr. Will LaHiff's tavern in the Roaring Forties the other evening, and revived fond memories of the days when they were baseball magnates.

They make proud claim to the distinction of being among the few men who had any money out of a minor league ball club. They bought the Vernon franchise of the Pacific Coast league a few years ago when thé club was in the cellar, and wound up winning the pennant on the last day of the season. Their books showed a profit of $35,000. Then they sold out.

Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle in those days had fame as a screen comedian equal to that of Mr. Charley Chaplin. He was one of the cinema's big men of the period. He is still big, take him all around like a manhold. He measures several yards from north to south, and east to west, but his picture fame perished with that unfortunate incident in San Francisco that I need not recount here.

I always thought Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle was a victim of cruel circumstances, and that his punishment was far too extreme. He was unfortunate that he was not connected with sport, which always give a man another chance. The world was very unkind to Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle.

However, that has nothing to do with his reunion with Mr. Lou Anger, and their baseball venture.

Mr. Anger is one of the executives of the United Artists corporation, of which Mr. Joe Schenck is the boss. Years ago Mr. Anger was a member of the vaudeville team of Anger and Dixon the other member being Mr. Henry Dixon.

Mr. Dixon is sometimes known as "Whispering Hank." When he opens his mouth the windows all through the Roaring Forties rattle, and strong men flee, their hands over their ears to protect the drums. Mr. Dixon speaks very loudly, indeed.

Mr. Anger comes from Philadelphia, and was a devoted admirer of Mr. Joe Grim, Mr. Philadelphia Jack Obrien, Mr. Unk Russell, and the old time Athletics. You will see that he is Philadelphian to the very narrow. It was a severe wrench at his heart strings when the moving picture racket moved him out to California quite some years ago.

The racing game at Tia Juana solaced him for a spell. He owned a stable of horses up to a few months ago, such noble steeds as Buster Keaton and La Jolla galloping around in his colors. Then he was attracted to baseball as it was played on the Pacific Coast. It wasn't the baseball of the old Athletics, but stil it was baseball.

Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle, then in his heyday, and pulling down plenty of jack, was a red hot Coast league enthusiast. He used to occupy four seats every day at the baseball arbor. Their mutual despondency over the status of the Vernon club which was trying to fall right out of the old league is what drew Mr. Arbuckle and Mr. Anger together, and before they knew what they were doing they had purchased the franchise.

"We didn't make many pictures that season, but we had a lot of fun," sighed Mr. Anger.

They got hold of Mr. William Essick, sometimes known as "Vinegar Bill," an old time pitcher, and said to him as follows:

"William, you're the manager. How many players do you need?"

Mr. Essick didn't know at the moment. In fact, it wasn't numbers that he wanted, but quality. However, the attitude of the new owners enthused Mr. Essick to such degree that he began prodding his ball club to great activity. Presently he was winning ball games.

The Anger-Arbuckle federation sold Long Robert Meusel to the New York Yankees. You will find Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle's signature on the bill of sale as president of the Vernon club if you delve into the archives of the Yanks. Long Robert was a combination outfielder-third baseman at that time. If you remember it was as a third baseman that h ecame to the Yanks.

Now Mr. Anger has advanced to matters of such importance in the United Artists that he has to live in New York, and Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle has been trying to retrieve his fallen fortunes as a movie director. He has recently been on the Pantages time doing a vaudeville act, and came to New York to tackle the speaking stage with a part in "Baby Mine."

He still takes some interest in baseball, and says if he had the money he would probably buy another franchise. But it seems that Mr. Roscoe Arbuckle's yearning for baseball ownership is now directed toward the big leagues.

"Lou and I once tried to buy the St. Louis club of the National league," se mused. "We couldn't get it for a price that we thought was right. What we thought was a right price then would be cheap now. It would have been a nice investment. I could use a few nice investments at this time.

"I got plenty of kick out of the old game,' 'he continued. "I can tell you right now every play in every important game the Vernon club was in the year Lou and I owned it. Say, Lou, do you remember in that last game when—."

It was time for me to depart. The conversation was getting too technical.

Brooklyn Robins at Short End of Tally

PITTSBURGH, June 13. (AP)—Paul Waner's home run in the sixth inning with Rhyne on base gave Pittsburgh a 4 to 3 victory over Brooklyn today. Kremer pitched seven innings for the National league leaders and then gave way to Hill in the eighth with one out and two on bases. It was Kremer's first start on the mound since being injured a month ago in Brooklyn. The score:

Jack Dempsey To Meet Mr. Sharkey

LOS ANGELES, June 13.—After frantic hours of telephonic negotiations between Jack Dempsey in behalf of Jack Dempsey, Johnny Buckley in behalf of Jack Sharkey on this end and Tex Rickard batting for himself on the New York end, a match between Dempsey and Sharkey was practically clinched late today.

Rickard and Buckley want the fight for July 21. Dempsey will hold out for August 3 as the date and after a conference today at the Barbara hotel, both Dempsey and Buckley announced that Rickard has no cinch to get the bout if any other eastern promoter came through with a better offer.

"I am ready for the test," Dempsey told Buckley. "When I talked to Rickard on Saturday I told him that July 21 would be okay for me but since then I've decided to ask two weeks more for training in order that there will be no possibility of my not being in the very best of condition."

Buckley, it is understood, is in no way pledged to Rickard and is not adverse to taking the fight elsewhere. Sharkey wants the fight to be a 15-round affair so New York is about a cinch to get it.

"I am convinced that Dempsey is sincere," said Buckley. "We had quite a talk and he looked to me to be in splendid physical shape. We didn't talk terms. But he knows that I will demand just as much as he does for the fight. I will insist on no less than 30 per cent for our end of the fight. I believe Sharkey will stop Dempsey inside of five rounds."

In New York dispatches Rickard is said to be willing to give up only 50 per cent of the gross and says the fight can't go over the million mark. When the taxes are out and all other deductions made the fighters will be lucky to wind up with a quarter million each.

Dempsey told Buckley he would train in New York state and probably have his camp in full swing within 10 days after signing articles with the promoter. It is very definitely understood that the winner will getthe Tunney shot in late September.

SPORTS 2, BUFFS 1.

SHREVEPORT, June 13. (AP)—After the teams had battled on even terms until the eighth, the Sports got a good break and scored a run to beat the Buffs, 2 to 1 in a pitching duel between Grabowski of the visitors and Dick Robertson of the home club. German Girl Swimmer Sets Record For Speed

BERLIN, June 13. (AP)—Fraulein Edith Jensen swam around the Island of Heligoland yesterday, in three hours, 47 minutes. The water was cold and she was forced to fight a strong current. Otto Kemmerich, well known long distance swimmer, started with her, but was obliged to give up owing to a leg cramp.

Cobb's Ability To Star For 20 Years Continues Mystery of Baseball

By GEORGE MORIARTY.

Ty Cobb's ability to last more than 20 seasons has been one of the mysteries of baseball.

When Cobb became a player of the first rank, soon after the year of his debut, ball players agreed that he could not last more than five years, if that long.

"He'll burn himself out," they said. "Nobody can last, going at that clip."

But Cobb did not burn himself out and tousy, during his twenty-third campaign in the major leagues, he is still able to cut loose, taking long chances in running bases, stealing sacks and doing the unexpected.

Cobb lasted because he learned, at an early age, how to relax. He taught himself to save himself, wherever the opportunity offered. Although he seemed to be taking many unnecessary chances, running all sorts of risks, wasting nervous and physical energy, Cobb always had uppermost in mind the idea of relaxation.

If you have ever watched Cobb steal bases you will have probably noticed how he goes into a bag. When he starts the slide every muscle is relaxed. There is no tension, no strain of any kind.

At the start of his career Cobb was a poor base runner. He had speed but knew nothing about pace or rhythm. These things he had to teach himself. The process of self-teaching was long and arduous but Cobb stuck to it. Each day he would place a base sack in one corner of the outfield and there he would practice sliding.

"I kept hitting the dirt, fully relaxed. I learned how to slide so that there would be absolutely no strain. I practiced sliding for two hours at a time on some days. And then, during games, I slid whether or not a slide was called for. I kept this up so that I would slide automatically, slide without ever thinking about sliding," explained Cobb one day.

I presume that Cobb has pulled twice as many slides as any man that ever played baseball. And sliding, while it seemed a terrific strain, was no strain at all. The strain was removed by Cobb's perfect relaxation. Also, this relaxation saved him from injury. I remember Cobb being out of the game but twice in 20 seasons because of strains or sprains and his injuries were caused then not on the skillfully constructed diamonds of the major leagues but in exhibition games, played on roughly made infields, where loose earth, or stones, tripped him.

If other ball players took a leaf from Cobb's excellent book they would be able to last longer.

A ball player's career depends upon his legs. If they start going back then he must go back. He can not outlast his legs.

TY COBB.

Hans Wagner, Napoleon Lajoie, Samuel Crawford and a number of other great players would still be in the game today if their legs had held out. I believe that Wagner, Crawford or Lajoie would be able today to outbat more than one-half the players in the big leagues. The batting eye lasts for many years, but the legs do not.

Legs go early sometimes because the player puts too much strain upon them. He has not learned to relax. He slides only when he absolutely has to.

Nothing so wears and tears legs as pulling up suddenly. When you come to a sudden stop while running, you throw the entire weight of the body on the ankles. The sudden stopping causes a strain and a shock. It does not require much imagination to figure out what eventually happens when the habit of suddenly stopping is repeated season after season.

Many players dislike sliding. They do not care to hit the dirt. They sidestep the slide wherever possible and as a result do themselves gerat harm. And many players, even when hitting the dirt, do it in a half-hearted manner and are therefore not relaxed. They have to think about sliding. Cobb never thought about it. He practiced until he did it automatically. To many others it never becomes second nature and they strain themselves when sliding. Their careers are shortened as a result.

Juvenile Golf Stars To Meet In Muny Links Tourney June 24-25

A golf tournament for boys and girls in Wichita Falls under the age of 15 will be held June 24 and 25 on the municipal golf links, according to an announcement Monday by Will Ward, department of recreation director.

Entries in the tournament will be received by Mr. Ward until June 22.

Prizes for the contest have been donated by Wichita Falls merchants. For the winner of the low medal qualifying round a steel shaft driver, donated by Landon and Hill, will be awarded. First prize in the low score qualifying round will be a combination belt and watch, donated by Sauls. The Zale Jewelry company donated a silver trophy for the winner of the tournament and to the runner-up a dozen golf balls, given by Bailey-Moline Hardware company will be awarded. The Hubb company, donated a straw hat and the Art Jewelry company a stick pin, for consolation prizes.

WITH GEORGE MORIARTY MANAGER DETROIT TIGERS

My attention was attracted recently to the British amateur golf championship. Among those who had qualified were John Ball and Harry Hilton. True, neither won, but both of them went beyond the first round and there are many thousand golfers who will never be able to that.

What interested me was the age at which these two men qualified. Ball won his first championship at Prestwick, I believe, 40 years ago. He has, during his career, won eight British amateur championships and one British open title. Hilton won his first championship 27 years ago.

Here, then, are two men who played competitive golf before most of the present day golfers were born and who are still able to qualify for national and international honors.

I have often been asked why ball players are not able to last like golfers. The average age of retirement from the major leagues is less than 35. Some go beyond that, but not so very many. Tyrus Cobb, Tristram Speaker, Honus Wagner, Denton T. (Cy) Young, Adrain Constantine Anson, Samuel (Wahoo) Crawford, Babe Adams, Napoleon Lajoie and a few others did some brilliant work after they were 36, but they are exceptions that prove the rule. The average player is done as a big leaguer when he reaches the age of 35.

The answer for this difference between golf and baseball is, to my mind, simple. Golf does not exact nearly so much from the player as baseball. There is none of the strenuous, tearing action in golf that there is in baseball. The only real exertion in golf is mental, as some of our leading golfers have observed on numerous occasions. The actual physical exercise that is demanded of a man playing 36 holes a day for four or five days, is nothing; it is the mental strain that tires out the system. Since there is little physical exertion, compared to a game like baseball, it is evident then why a golfer should last a few decades longer than a ball player. The golfer never does anything physically that will burn out his system.

Golf is moderate exercise and that is the beauty of the game. It gives fresh air and the sun and this, above all else, recommends the game.

It will not burn out its followers. That is why, in British competition you find Braid, Taylor and Herd, three great golfers, who are more than 60 years of age; Ray and Mitchell, who have passed the half-century mark, and Duncan, who has more than 40 years of life behind him. Bob Harris, who won the British amateur championship two years ago, is is more than 50 years of age.

What I said about baseball can be applied in stronger manner than other sports.

Consider boxing, Robert Fitzsimmons was world's heavyweight champion at the age of 37 and he will always be famous for that. At the age of 37 nearly every man that ever fought in championship competition was already on the retired list. Fitzsimmons was able to hol da title at the age of 37 because he started boxing at an age when most of the boxers quit. He was well set physically before he entered the game.

In tennis few of the world's leading players have ever been successful in tournament play after they reached the age of 35. Most of them are out before then. As the game increases in popularity we will see fewer and fewer stars beyond the age of 30. Tennis is a strenuous game and most of our stars of the future will be men who started playing the game before they owned their first pair of long trousers. Starting that early in life they consequently quit early in life; the game burns them out.

I have heard many people express surprise over the ages of marathon runners. Few of the great distance runners are men under 30; most of them are older than 35.

But, their success lies in the fact that they did not start when they were school boys. They waited until their bodies were developed. Then they went about the matter slowly and systematically. They did not burn themselves out.

Golf competition in the United States shows a different age condition than in Great Britain. In our own country most of the golfing leaders are young men. Flaming youth has its fling on the links of our republic.

Bobby Jones, Jesse Sweetser, Gene Sarazen, Francis Quimet, Chick Evans and several others among the ranking golfers of the United States are young men.

You may ask why the youngsters in this country are on top while in England the veterans hold the power in competition. The answer is not difficult to find. Golf is a young game in the United States. In Great Britain they played golf several decades before the game was introduced on this side. When we finally took hold of golf the youngsters and men of middle age all started together and the advantage was in favor of the youngsters who could give more time to practice and play.

I predict that in 20 and 30 years from now Jones, Sweetser, Sarazen, Evans and these other youngsters who have been our golf leaders in recent years, will be qualifying for national championships, just as Ball, Hilton, Harris, Vardon, Ray, Mitchell, Braid, Taylor, Herd, Duncan and others are doing on the other side, and 20 and 30 years from now, the youngsters of today will still be cutting into the championship awards each year. They are playing a game that does not burn men out.

SPORT a la CARTE
BY ROY GROVE

The greatest golfing classic the world will ever know, the national open, is to be payed this year over the Oakmont course, at Pittsburgh. It was just 33 years ago when the world first heard of an open event. That was played at St. Andrews, N. Y., as a minor sport. The British open at that time was the leading golfing event.

The national open, back those many years ago, was started at match play with no field worth mentioning. Since that time it has grown to startling proportions until now the U. S. G. A. books close to 650 contestants. The national open has far surpassed the British event.

The first of the medal play contests was fought out at Myopia, in 1898, 25 years ago, when Fred Herd finished at the top with a score of 328. That's an average of 82.

In those days there were only three or four men ruling the golfing world, while today any where from 20 to 25 men have an even chance to win the major crown.

Today the darkest of horses may topple over the champion. Sarazen was hardly known when he won at Skokie, Walker finished in front by three stokes at Oakland Hills and Will McFarlane was not included in the first 20 when he won from Jones at Worcester. Jones is the only favorite to ever break through in golf, and he is due to repeat his work, even as fickle as the game as the game has turned to be.

The national open is the surest and the soundest test of golfing skill. Walter Hagen, although as consistent as he is rated, must get his share of the breaks and be at the top of his game to lead the pack that is continually following at his heels.

The following official record of all past open championships shows how the scoring has improved in the last few years.

FIGHT CARD TO AID MILK FUND

Half of Net Proceeds To Go Into Coffer

Fifty per cent of the net proceeds of the 40-round fight bill scheduled here June 23 will be turned over to the Record News Milk and Ice fund, Promoter Alec B. Ross announced Monday.

A committee to act on behalf of the Milk and Ice fund was named Monday as Dr. J. H. Fletcher, T. O. Shappell, J. Wilkie Talbert, Rotary club; James King, Lions club; Solon Featherston, Optimist club; Frank Queisser, Kiwanis club.

A pair of middleweights, Frankie Wine of Montana, and Speedy Sparks of Lawton, Okla., will step 12 rounds was the main event on the benefit program. Wine claims 26 or more knockouts in his last 35 battles, while Sparks is well known to fight fans here already. The bout is expected to furnish plenty of fight and excitement.

Pete Charley, hailed as the welterweight champion of Canada, and Pug Humphries of Wichita Falls will meet in a 10-round semi-final. Soldier Ray Willis and Jack Matlock are booked for eight rounds and Leo Voss and Dale Bolen for six stanzas. Olin Hearn is on with an unnamed opponent for four rounds.

Kastanos Will Meet Zarynoff

Andreas Kastanos versus the Russian count, Zarynoff. That's the big saucerful to be served tonight at Promoter Alec B. Ross' mat banquet in the Ross stadium at Tenth and Indiana at 8:30 o'clock.

[illegible] an appetizer, Ross has card[illegible] serving of fast preliminary [illegible] matches to be inaugurated [illegible] with a [illegible] "grudge" scrap between Fighting Sam [illegible] and Black Dummy, a couple of local mat-swingers who are none too friendly toward each other when they meet up in the ring.

The main bout, that which brings Kastanos against Zarynoff, promises to be a right nifty affair, in fact Promoter Ross believes it will be the best mat match ever staged in Wichita Falls. Kastanos, one time idol of the Spanish bull fighting arena, has to his credit victories over Daviscourt, Paul Jones and Zbyszko! On this coming July 4, he is matched to meet Joe Stecher, claimant of the world's heavyweight title. That gives an idea of the ability of this 210-pounder.

Count Zarynoff, who has appeared here in several matches is not quite as bulky as Kastanos, he tips the beams at 195 pounds, but he is declared the fastest heavyweight in the country. Both are now on deck for the match tonight.

CUB-SPUDDER PLAYERS REST

Wet Grounds Causes Game To Be Postponed

The second game of the Wichita Falls-Waco series was postponed until the next trip north of the Pratt clan on account of wet grounds and threatening rain Monday afternoon.

The club announced at the same time that a double header will be played on Thursday afternoon with the San Antonio Bears. The first game will be called at three bells. On the first trip north of the clubs, one of the San Antonio games was rained out.

With the lay off giving the team plenty of rest it will be hard to pick the starting pitcher for the third and final game of the Waco series. Williams has Kiefer, Fussell and himself ready to go. Waco will probably use Oscar Tuero, the spitball artist, in the game.

WORK FOR CONVALESCENTS

Ideal Conditions Necessary for Tuberculars

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

UP in Cambridgeshire, Eng., is the Papworth Tuberculosis Colony and Village Settlement, conducted under the wise management of Dr. P. C. Varrier.

CHARLES A.L. REED, M.D.

This colony and village settlement is not essentially different in principle to many that have been developed and now exist in the United States. It however exemplifies certain features that cannot but be of both interest and importance to hundreds of my tuberculous readers.

Papworth attempts to deal with the cases whom treatment in a sanatorium has not cured sufficiently to allow them to take up their old jobs. In actual fact, hardly any tuberculous patient has his disease arrested for good in a sanatorium. The process of recovery is a very long one. The malady fluctuates between temporary arrest and reappearance. A long period of sheltered life is consequently necessary before any patient can completely recover. This idea existed in the old system which aimed to build a bridge between pure treatment and a return to ordinary life, to give patients an opportunity to "harden off." The idea itself was sound, but the execution was faulty. Patients were given work and rightly, for creative effort and restored usefulness are of profound importance in their treatment. But the work was only of one kind; light open-air farm work. It was monotonous. Patients naturally got tired of it and left it too early, relapsing soon after they resumed their ordinary jobs. Many patients did not progress satisfactorily in it. Farm work does not suit everyone and for some it is definitely harmful.

The old system had no regard to the permanent employment of the consumptive, but only to carry on sanatorium treatment in a less expensive and correspondingly more monotonous way.

The village settlement, exemplified at Papworth, on the other hand, is an attempt to employ consumptives as far as possible at their own trades, under constant medical supervision. The village must grow up round the sanatorium. Patients and their families, therefore, have the benefit of constant and skilled medical advice and workers are fitted to their work and the work modified to suit them. Many patients are quite able to earn their living at their proper vocations if the conditions are right. The employment of consumptives should not be a charity but a business project. This, however, can only be realized in a village settlement. In the ordinary printing office, for example, the reason for the large number of consumptives is not the work itself but the darkness, the vitiated air, and above all the pace. It is the pace that kills; the rush hours and the overtime. All this can be avoided in a special settlement with expert medical supervision, and the work can still be made profitable.

The light treatment of Rollier, valuable as it is in selected cases, is too indiscriminately employed and is therefore overdone. As technically employed it has no place outside a sanatorium regimen.

"Open air" has been too much of a fetish. Fresh and wholesome air can be had in nearly any factory which is properly ventilated and the consumptive can do factory work under ideal conditions while he would break down at heavy outdoor work. Most factory jobs do not entail overmuch physical exertion.

The sanatorium is essential as the centre of a village settlement and that is its right place, for only there can it completely cure the consumptive worker.

It would be a matter not only of high philanthropy but of wise economics for every populous manufacturing county to develop a village settlement on the plan of Papworth. The principles exemplified at Papworth are largely applicable in private practice.

BEAUTY HELPS MAKE THE WORLD GO 'ROUND

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

THE beauty of women is only a part of the beauty in the world, without which life wouldn't be worth living to most of us.

"Beauty was born of the world's desire
For the wandering water, the wandering fire
Under the arch of her hurrying feet
She has trodden a world of bitter-sweet."

Someone in love with beauty himself wrote that. I should tell you who it was. But long ago I forgot, though the words have rung in my head since I was, perhaps, in school.

Philosophers have tried to tell the world and themselves what beauty really was. Scientists have tried to pin it down before your eyes, like a poor, golden butterfly on a card. Artists and writers have had less to say about it; they seem more gayly indifferent as to what, just what, its body is made of. Because they already know her the best. They have helped to MAKE her. Part of the beauty of the world has come from their own hands.

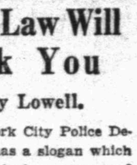

Beauty of women is only a part of the world beauty. But to MOST OF US it is one of the most engaging parts. And it isn't always "skin-deep." When it IS, however, there is no permanent joy in living with it. That kind is for the passerby to LOOK at and delight in.

But a plain woman, thanks be, can be very, very beautiful when the mind and heart inside her is. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Transgress Laws and the Law Will Break You

By Lucy Lowell.

THE New York City Police Department has a slogan which tells a whole long story and tells it truly: "You Can't Get Away with It!"

LUCY LOWELL

The deed without the law; the action opposed to the aims and rights and best interests of society—you can't get away with it.

The shady deal, the one planned and carried out with unscrupulous intent—crime. You can't get away with it!

Those who give their trained intelligence to raveling the dark warp and woof of the patterns crime weaves tell you there is always a loose thread left somewhere. Be the thing ever so carefully studied out, every end caught up and fastened into the semblance of innocence, every seemingly possible contingency gone over and taken care of, there always will be the some one thing dangling—the thing which human intelligence, and especially criminal human intelligence, overlooks.

It is only truth which never slips up, for truth has nothing to conceal. Truth is a straightforward thing, full of light; it is the force which works in darkness that stumbles.

You can't get away with it!

In the smaller transgressions there may be the look of success. Not much imagination is required for these; they are stupid things, infinitely sordid.

But in the long run you can't get away with them.

It may be that no one will point the finger of conviction at you and say, "You did a thing not straight and square and aboveboard." No intelligence outside of your own may find you out.

But your own mind will accuse you. You will be tried and convicted and condemned by a force which lives in every one of us, however ignored and denied—a thing you may know as Better Self.

Remember that you cannot break the law. You transgress the law and the law breaks you.

You can't get away with it!

Teach Your Child the Lesson of Restraint

By L. Lamar Matthews.

MARY BLAINE has just reached the perturbing age of sixteen. There was a time when it was called "sweet sixteen"; but that was back in the calm times when a Sunday school picnic was an event and a new dress was sufficient to bring smiles and sunshine that lasted for days.

But Mary has lived in a whirl for several years, and the longer she lives the more she whirls. Now she has reached the state where she is either riding on a wave of excitement and hilarious good humor or she is depressed and gloomy and disolate.

Anything that detracts from her appearance or interferes with her popularity is to her the most atrocious and unpardonable thing that could possibly happen. She simply can't see beyond the horizon of her own small problems.

It never occurs to Mary to remember that the affairs of the other members of the household are of importance. She has never been required to consider the wants nor the rights of other people. Her thoughts, her plans, her entire programme has centered around her own immediate needs.

Because she was headstrong and ingenious she managed to have her way when she was little; and as she grew older she pushed aside everything and everybody that blocked her pathway. Not because her parents were particularly keen about humoring their daughter's whims, but because it was easier to yield than to fight against her willfulness they have allowed her to grow up without the control she needed.

Now, what is the result? She is standing on the brink of womanhood, surrounded by influences that threaten her safety and she is without the anchor of self-restraint and dutifulness that might serve to check foolish impulses.

Too many parents indulge in an attitude of easy drifting in regard to the conduct of their children. Little breaches of behavior don't seem to matter very much until it is discovered that the child has developed a bad habit or an ugly disposition. When mother or nurse has yielded to the clamorous outcry of a youngster about three times, he decides that clamoring is a very good weapon.

The time to start implanting the idea of self-restraint in a child is infancy. From the very time that a baby can make his wishes known, he should be disciplined—which doesn't mean spanked. As he grows older he should be required to perform certain duties and definite services; and he should be made to consider other people's comfort and rights.

When Manners Are Correct

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Reception

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Who furnishes the reception after the ceremony?

2. Who sends the invitations to the wedding to the friends of the bridegroom? F. A. B.

THE reception after the ceremony is the obligation of the parents of the bride, who issue the invitations for the reception.

2. The groom gives the bride the list of the names and addresses of his relatives and friends to whom he wishes invitations sent, and he gives her another list for his relatives and friends to whom he wishes announcements sent.

Use of Paper Napkins

MY Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it ever correct to use paper napkins, except on most informal occasions?

W. L.

NO. For picnics, children's parties and other such informal occasions, one may use paper napkins, but not for even ordinary informal occasions.

It is good to see, speaking of paper napkins, that they are now being made of such interesting clothlike texture. This texture makes them much more serviceable than the former too thin paper napkin. But, even with this texture, we cannot correctly use them for the usual occasion.

Early Dinner Hour.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for the hostess to request evening clothes at a dinner given on Sunday at five-thirty in the dining room of a small family hotel?

A READER.

NO, it is not correct to wear evening clothes before six o'clock at the earliest, and better six-thirty or seven. When a hostess designates five-thirty, she does a very unkind thing for her guests. To begin with, five-thirty is not a good dinner-hour, and guests invited to a five-thirty dinner would certainly be perplexed as to what kind of attire to wear. Why doesn't the hostess nominate the usual dinner-hour—seven-thirty or eight o'clock? Then her guests will know what they are expected to wear.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

Folly's Daughter

A Thrilling New Mystery of New York Night Life

By Ann Lisle

Folly Goes Shopping

WHEN Folly Duane came out of the telephone booth, her little kitten face looked pleased—as if she were contemplating a saucer of cream. She had a dinner-engagement with Sam Kerby, the theatrical producer she had met the night before.

ANN LISLE

Sam Kerby was the kind of a theatre manager Folly had for years dreamed of meeting. And she had not been wrong when she felt that he liked her. He had been delighted to hear from her. He had fallen for her little old ruse of asking:

"Did you phone me? I've been out all morning, and when I called up my hotel to get my messages they gave me a number that sounded a little like yours—and I—hated to miss you."

"You got my wireless," he had replied. "I was just wondering what I could do tonight that would be as thrilling as the dinner was from the minute you appeared at the party last night."

"I'd break twenty dates to see you again," she had laughed.

That was true enough. She came out of the telephone booth smiling, radiant, as if her total capital were not fifty-five dollars and eighty cents garnered from Jill's takings of the evening before. Jill hadn't a job now. Folly had been out of work for months. There wasn't a cent to fall back on but a mysterious fifty dollars a month which came to Folly from a western town. . . . But there was Sam Kerby.

"Suppose he liked me enough to give me a real chance," Folly mused. "A few lines to speak. Something to do. I could manage to look as sweet and young as Marilyn Miller—and I could learn to act. The trouble is that I can't dance like a flapper, and that's all they think a girl with blue eyes and a baby stare is good for."

Folly sighed. She felt that life was pretty hard on her. If she had ever had the breaks—

Briskly she shook off her depression and marched over to Sixth avenue and a certain little shop where they sold models for about one-tenth of what they were claimed to be worth—on Fifth avenue.

"If I'm going to hold Sam's interest, I've got to look well," she told herself. "If I look like a charity patient, he may pet me, but he certainly won't think of putting me out in the middle of the stage to give his audiences an eyeful. If I look like ready money I may get a chance to earn some!"

When Folly got to the "Outlet," she was feeling rather noble. She wasn't lazy. She was willing, actually eager to work. She wasn't leaving the burden of support to Jill. She was taking care of the girl, wasn't she? That gave her some rights?

What those rights were appeared when Folly came home at five, newly manicured, marcelled and showing the rejuvenating effects of a Flower Facial. She dumped her packages down on the bed and turned to Jill with shining eyes. Her little kitten face looked as bland and sweet as if she could only purr—never scratch.

"Undo the wrappings, Jilly-girl, and see what I've brought home," she said. "I'll rest and look on while you lay out my things. I'm dining out."

"I'm glad you knew in plenty of time to get all dolled up," Jill said so innocently that Folly wondered if she was getting altogether too wise and consequently disrespectful.

"It is a nuisance to be so popular that you can't be sure of a quiet evening at home half the time," Folly sighed. "But this time I'm not going out as a favor to somebody who needs me to make a fourth. I'm going to dine with an important theatrical manager whose friendship is likely to mean a great deal to you as well as to me, Jilly-flower."

"You mean you're going to ask him to give me a start in some of his plays?" Jill asked.

"No." Folly's little kitten face was stern and hard. "I'm not going to have you in the theatre or the movies as long as I can manage to eke out a living for us both."

"Why not? I'd love to. Other girls make such lots of money. I'd like to work. I don't want to be a burden to you, Folly."

"I won't have you where everyone can see you—on exhibition. Your mother would not approve."

Jill's parted lips closed. Her shining eyes misted over. That was the formula with which Folly could always control her, could always still her young eagerness. Jill's unknown mother was the girl's ideal. She was always dreaming of meeting her mother some day, of feeling the benediction of her mother's smile, of meeting her mother's clear eyes and being worthy of the great love that was waiting to reward her for all her young years of lonely longing.

So whenever Folly said that Jill's mother would not approve of some question under discussion, Jill accepted the verdict. It was her gospel, her high aim to be worthy of her mother.... Nothing else counted like that. And Folly took amused advantage of it.

The boxes Jill unpacked contained a flowered chiffon dress in soft blue and green, a filmy coat of blue, blue kid shoes and a handful of forget-me-nots with a piece of blue straw and a mass of green leaves.

"That's to make me a hat, Jilly-flower," she said lazily. "Hurry I've only a couple of hours."

"That isn't enough time," Jill objected. "And your blue turban isn't the right shade. Why didn't you buy a hat all ready to wear, Folly?"

Folly looked at the girl oddly. Sometimes Jill's bland innocence infuriated her beyond all caution. Now she asked with stinging sarcasm:

"Do you think I should have managed a string of pearls out of fifty dollars or so?"

There was a breathless moment. Then Jill asked quietly:

"Did you buy those things out of MY FIFTY DOLLARS?"

To Be Continued.

WITH the coming of the Summer, when the days are growing long, every bough decked out in blossoms, every bird a-thrill with song, what a sweetness, what a rapture stirs the currents of the blood with each hour filled with gladness and the tides of life at flood! Earth dons beauty like a garment in these early Summer days, stars the fields and vales with flowers, strews with bloom the woodland ways. Like a spendthrift wasting treasure she has scattered daffodils, tossed her jasmines and her daisies over all the sun-sweet hills. Rainbow-tinted, steeped in fragrance, kissed with perfumed breezes' wine, with the dawning of the Summer earth becomes a sphere divine. Hope's bright banners beckon onward, promise glows from every bud...ah, what ecstasy in living with the tides of life at flood!

COUNTY DELAYS BOND ACTION

Francis to Auetin For Road Conference

An election called for June 25 by the county commissioners court for the purpose of voting on a proposed bond issue for the improvement of Wichita county roads still remains as an order on the court records. No efforts were made at the Monday meeting to cancel the election in view of an opinion from the attorney general's office that the bonds could not be voted legally in the present form.

Following the court session, County Judge E. W. Nicholson said that the commissioners had decided to await the outcome of a conference to be held Tuesday in Austin between Charles I. Francis, attorney, representing the chamber of commerce, which sponsored the bond issue, and Attorney General Claude Pollard.

Mr. Francis left Wichita Falls Monday for Austin. While conferring with the attorney general Mr. Francis will endeavor to straighten out the misunderstandings relative to the opinion, which was given to E. P. Walsh, county auditor, by Assistant Attorney General Whitehurst.

Judge Nicholson asserted that until the attorney general concurs with Mr. Whitehurst in the opinion that the county commissioners court will take no action relative to cancelling the election.

Majestic: "Resurrection," with Rod LaRocque and Dolores Del Rio, comedy, Topics of the Day and Pathe News.

Olympic: Florence Vidor in "The World At Her Feet," comedy and Fox News.

Mission: "Casey At the Bat," with Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, also comedy.

Gem: Milton Sills in "Making of O'Malley," also Harold Lloyd comedy.

Garden: Bebe Daniels in "The Campus Flirt," western picture and comedy.

Widely read as Leo Tolstoy's classic novel, "Resurrection," has been in the past thirty years, Edwin Carewe, director and co-producer of the picturization which opens today at the Majestic theater, discovered innumerable film fans in rural districts and even in bigger cities of America who believed any film or novel entitled "Resurrection" must be a tale of the Christ. Carewe wrote more than three thousand letters in reply to filmgoers who queried him while he was directing Rod La Rocque and Dolores del Rio in the film, made in California. To each he explained that "Resurrection" is not a religious story, not a biblical tale—and that Leo Tolstoy's flesh-and-blood drama makes splendid reading in any language.

Carewe said that "Resurrection" is simply a very human study of bared souls under the lash of selfish passions, and of great sacrifice to which a higher, cleaner love of man for woman and woman for man lifted prince and peasant. He told his unenlightened correspondents that the title "Resurrection" referred to the spiritual and moral rebirth of the souls of Prince Dmitri and Katusha Maslova, deadened in sin. The American director declared that he had faithfully preserved the spirit and letter of Tolstoy's great novel and that the ending of the picture is the logical ending of the novel, with the moral to be found in the story itself.

Rod La Rocque plays the role of Prince Dmitri and Dolores del Rio is Katusha Maslova, the peasant girl, who is the victim of profaned love. La Rocque's work in "The Ten Commandments" and "Gigolo," remained in Carewe's mind until the hour when he needed an actor of sufficient power and fineness to play Dmitri. Miss del Rio is under personal contract to Carewe, who discovered her in Mexico City in 1925, so that he did not have far to seek for his Katusha. Miss del Rio's last character was that of Charmaine in the screen version of "What Price Glory."

the ideal home canning fuel

QUICK CLEAN CHEAP COOL

YOUR HOME canned fruits and vegetables ---as they come to your table months after canning season---could there be anything finer, more appetizing, more delicious, more satisfying to you and your family?

And just think how much easier it is to do your own canning now than before gas was available for fuel!

Gas saves all of the time and labor of making wood or coal fires---you get instant heat merely by striking a match!

Gas gives even, easily controlled heat---heat that is "cool" because it does not radiate throughout the whole house. Gas supplies the heat needed for canning, but enables you to remain cool in the midst of your canning work.

Gas is clean---no ashes or soot to dirty up your home, your walls, curtains, rugs, furniture. And there is no time like summer time to appreciate the cleanliness of gas---when no one wants to do any more work that they just have to!

And, gas is cheap---it makes home canning a real economy, as the cost of gas necessary for home canning is very small.

"Can all you can" this summer---give the family (and yourself) a real treat next fall, winter and spring---enjoy the goodness and wholesomeness of home canned fruits and vegetables until fresh products are plentiful again. Remember that gas---the ideal home canning fuel---is here to aid you---to make your canning a pleasure!

MOORE TEST IS LOOKING GOOD

No Rush For Acreage Near Northern Strike

AMARILLO, June 13.—The Panhandle field's most important wildcat test today, the Morton and company's No. 1 Reeder, in section 191, block 3T of T. & N. O. survey, some 55 miles due north of Amarillo, in northeastern Moore county, looks better and better as producer.

The swab was run in the hole and 30 barrels of oil was recovered, the operation indicating that the oil content was better than 2,000 feet and that it was slowly increasing.

The showing satisfied operating officials of the Morton and company and the well was immediately shut down for orders.

Tankage has been erected and it may be tested out during the coming week.

Selling Is Slow.

Acreage near the Morton well is not selling as readily as many imagined it would, due possibly to some fee owners asking too high prices for a lease. The first deal to be made after the Morton showing was found was to the Phillips Petroleum company, which bought a 320-acre lease, the east half of section 113, some miles due north.

With the Morton well estimated as possibly good for 300 barrels a day, when completed, and the entire area looming big in the estimation of the Panhandle operators, attention was turning to the Hagy & Harrington and Marland Oil company's No. 1 Flores, in section 64, block 3T of T. & N. O. survey, and some nine miles due north in southeastern Sherman county. It seems to be also on the 2000-foot contour line, and is now getting started again at 200 feet after some drilling difficulties.

Hansford County Active.

T. F. Caldwell, independent operator of Amarillo, reports that the Morton show has activated interest in southwestern Hansford and his No. 1 Sealey in section 21, block 3 of G. H. & H. survey, which has been shut down at 512 feet for some weeks, will be started up shortly.

Perhaps the biggest "pepping up" that the Morton show gave was to the Prairie Oil and Gas company No. 2 Goober, in section 16, block M-1 of G. & M. survey, now starting to drill. The Goober ranch looks very promising in a structural manner. The Panfield Royalty company of Amarillo, owns a fourth of O. F. Goober's royalty. Mr. Goober is the nestor of the settlers in Moore county.

Much Red Shale In New Mexico

More than 1000 feet of red shale has been found by the Midwest Refining company in No. 1 Rhodes in the southwest of the northwest of 30-8n-31e, in the Tucumcari area of Quay county, eastern New Mexico. At last reports it was still drilling in this horizon at 3675 feet.

Gibson Oil corporation No. 1 State, in the southeast of the northwest of 25-8n-32e, was also in the red shale at 3110 feet.

Ohio Oil company in No. 1 Wells, in the southwest corner of the southeast of 24-7n-29e, is fishing at 1560 feet in a sandy lime for a lost 10-inch bit.

In the Clovis area of Curry county, central-eastern New Mexico, all of the wildcats are idle.

Frio Oil company in No. 2 Saunders, in the center of the northwest of 11-5n-35e, is shut down at 1230 feet, and waiting for fishing tools. This test had a show of oil in a water sand at 1213 to 1225 feet.

Steinberger and others in the old Clovis Gas and Oil company No. 1 state in the center of the northeast of 21-3n-36e, is still shut down for 10-inch pipe at 1125 feet.

Bellevue Oil and Gas company in No. 1 Laird, in the southwest of of the southeast of 22-8n-36e, has spudded and shut down.

Gasoline Business Good, N. Texas Refiners Say

A lull in gasoline buying in Group three, Oklahoma, during the past week, which brought spot prices down one-eighth of a cent, was not reflected in North Texas and the Panhandle refinery areas, investigation disclosed.

North Texas spot prices for U. S. motor grade of gasoline—the 58-60 gravity material—ran off from 6 1-2 to 7 cents, with the average around 6 5-8 to 6 7-8 cents, and Panhandle refiners were getting two cents above that at their plants. North Texas and Panhandle refineries report business good and all of their gasoline moving.

One of the Panhandle refineries is selling almost all of its gasoline to a major independent and that firm is having the motor fuel shipped to its distributing units in Wisconsin and Minnesota. It is obtaining a slight premium over Group 3 prices.

Watchorn-Williams Well Is Flowing At Regular Intervals and Drilling

Special to The Record News.

JACKSBORO, June 13.—Jack county's famous old well the Roxana-Williams No. 1, B. S. & F. Co. survey, abstract 88, celebrated its fifth birthday Wednesday, June 8, being five years since it was completed and it has faithfully produced oil at the rate of 25 barrels daily during that time. From all indications this old well is likely to produce oil for many more years to come as no noticeable change in production has been made for some time.

The Watchorn-Williams No. 1, B. S. & F. Co. survey, abstract 88, is drilling at 4610 feet with no noticeable increase in either oil or gas, but there is some noticeable change in the flows as they are coming at more regular intervals.

The most extensive activity in the oil activity of Jack county is around the Leidecker-Holman No. 1, P. H. Rice survey, abstract 1442. Leidecker has spudded his No. 2 offsetting No. 1 on the northwest. Buttram Petroleum corporation have finished the derrick and are now rigging up their J. A. Jones No. 1, S. P. R. R. Co. survey, abstract 550, offsetting the Leidecker-Holman No. 1 on the east. Nash & Winfor-J. A. Jones No. 1, S. P. R. R. Co. survey, abstract 550, offsetting Leidecker Holman No. 1 on the northeast, is digging slush pit. Shaw & Rathke, J. W. Cullers No. 1, J. R. Cullers survey, abstract 2188, south offset to the Leidecker-Holman No. 1, have spudded in and now drilling at 221 feet.

Cotton

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, June 13. (AP)—Reports of rains in the drouth sections of West Texas were followed by a break of about 50 to 60 points in the cotton market today. October contracts sold off to 16.96 or 69 points below the closing price Saturday, and closed at 16.63, the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 48 to 57 points.

The market opened easy at a decline of 19 to 29 points in response to weak Liverpool cables and private reports of rains in West Texas over the week-end. Selling was extremely brisk and active months showed net losses of 47 to 55 points. There was trading buying and covering on scale down orders and with the first lull in the pressure; prices rallied a few points, but the forenoon market weakened under renewed liquidation.

July sold off to 16.27, December to 16.79, and January to 16.90, net declines of 55 to 62 points on the general list. The close was within a few points of the lowest on most positions. The selling brought in by the private rain news was probably made more urgent by the fact that the market closed at midday, or before publication of the detailed weather reports. There may have been some uncertainty as to whether the latter would indicate that the West Texas drouth had been completely broken, but the private advices received here report considerable rain in that section and local map readers seemed to expect further showers or rain over the belt.

Private cables said the relatively easy showing of Liverpool was due to local and continental liquidation on the Texas rain reports.

Exports for the day were 15,891, making 10,556,010 so far this season. Port receipts 9376; U. S. port stocks 1,431,455.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, June 13. (AP)—Corn prices ran up fast today as a result of heavy rains which halted field work. Wheat was helped upward by corn, closing quotation for corn were strong, 3¼ to 4⅝c net higher, with wheat unsettled at 1 to 1½c gain, oats showing ⅜ to ⅝c advance, and provisions a rise of 7 to 20c.

Both wheat and oats owed their upturns to corn strength. An advance in hog values gave strength to the provision market.

THE FAIRBANKS COMPANY

Five-Year Record.

During the 40 years of the life of the Fairbanks company, it has been closely identified with E. and T. Fairbanks and company, pioneer manufacturers of scales. The business of the Fairbanks company consists of the manufacture of valves, trucks and wheelbarrows and the sale of scales and Dart unions. It is exclusive sales agents for Fairbanks scales in the eastern part of the United States and the rest of the world except Canada and Alaska.

The company owns and operates two factories, one at Binghampton, N. Y., and one at Rome, Ga. The former has a capacity of 400 brass valves and 350 iron valves a day. The Rome plant builds wheelbarrows. The company handles its sales from New York headquarters through branch houses in the principal domestic and foreign cities.

The concern has no funded debt but Dec. 31, 1926 bank loans amounted to $2,548,868. Capital stock outstanding includes $1,000,000 in 8 per cent cumulative first preferred shares of $100 par, $2,000,000 in 8 per cent cumulative preferred of $100 par and $1,500,000 in common shares of $25 par. First preferred stock has voting power in event of default of dividends for one year. No dividends have been paid on the first preferred since May 1, 1921 or on the preferred since April 1, 1921. None has been paid on the common since 1918. On Feb. 1, 1927, accumulated dividends amounted to 46 per cent on the first preferred and 48 per cent on the second preferred.

Net income in 1926 was $294,566. As of Dec. 31, 1926 current assets totalled $2,136,912, current liabilities $2,903,389 and excess of current liabilities over current assets 0766,477. Book value of the first preferred was $141.23 a share.

GRANDFIELD NOTES

GRANDFIELD, June 13.—The Camp Fire Girls of the local group have opened a library in their camp fire room on Simpson street. Seventy-five books were borrowed from the Oklahoma library commission and a number have been loaned by various Camp Fire Girls.

These books may be obtained each Friday afternoon, between the hours 2:30 to 4:00 p. m. for a period of two weeks. Two girls will be in charge of the library each Friday.

Mrs. C. M. Crawford, local guardian will be in charge of the library.

Lois Patterson, member of the Grandfield Order of Rainbow, attending the grand lodge organization held at Enid, Tuesday and Wednesday, was elected grand charity and was installed along with the other grand officers Wednesday night.

Lois and Louise Patterson were sent to the grand lodge to take part in the grand choir and it was through Mr. and Mrs. Fred Comstock and others that she received the third highest honor in the grand lodge.

Mrs. Earl Hines gave a birthday party in honor of her daughter, Beatrice 11th birthday on Tuesday, June 7, and Pauline Lawson's 10th birthday on Monday, June 6. The table was decorated with two cakes, one having 10 candles and the other 11.

The afternoon was spent in playing games and contests. Ice cream and cake was served to the following: Opal Brown, Martha Huff, Marjorie Mae Hubbard, Marie Gasaway, Imogene Totter, Pauline Lawson, Lorene Lawson, Christine Lawson, Bernard Hines, Marjorie Hines, Junior Hines and Beatrice Hines.

COMET RACING TOWARD EARTH

Celestial Body Soon to Be Visible to Eye

By BEN FROST
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Last night in the big dome of the Yerkes observatory it was my privilege for the first time to see the long-awaited Pons-Winnecke comet.

Still invisible to the untrained naked eye, the soft warm glow of the comet was clearly outlined in the eye-piece of the 40-inch refracting telescope, the largest of its kind in the world.

Pointing almost to the zenith, the huge steel tube was guided with the utmost accuracy to the appointed spot where the comet was supposed to have been.

Switch Moves Dome

With the moving of a switch, the outer shell of the dome moved on its wheels until the slit appeared opposite the lens of the telescope.

The stage was set. The receiving committee was ready. A group of invited guests were standing near by on the floor, which incidentally is the largest elevator in the world. In fact, it moved down a few feet, permitting the tall astronomer to look into the eyepiece.

"It is there, all right," said the astronomer, and when it came my turn it was hard to realize that the little fuzzy haze was an object three times the size of the moon and coming straight at me at a speed of a little less than a million miles a day.

"A million miles a day?" gasped some one in the darkness.

"Yes," said the astronomer, "That, to us, is a very slow speed, but it is food for considerable thought."

Later Professor Bobrobnikoff, who has been studying the composition of the comet, told me that it was chiefly composed of a combination of hydrogen and carbon.

Moon Hides Comet

Although reports have stated that the comet has been seen by the naked eye, it is almost certain that they have been incorrect. Professor George Van Beisbroeck of the Yerkes staff stated that he thought he saw it last night, but was not quite sure because of the brilliance of the moon.

However, it was advised that the comet would be clearly seen after the moon has passed its most brilliant period, which will be some time within the next week.

U. S. Marines Arrive At Shanghai Monday

SHANGHAI, June 13. (AP)—The United States transport Chaumont arrived here today from Manila with 1150 marines, 20 tanks and an aviation unit, Colonel Davis commanding. The marines were billetted on Socony wharf, which previously had been occupied by the Sixth regiment.

IN HALL OF FAME

Portrait of "Ma" Placed In Rotunda Of Texas Capitol

AUSTIN, Texas, June 13. (AP) A portrait of Former Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was placed without ceremony on the third flood rotunda wall of the capitol during the closing day of the legislature session just ended.

The picture is two spaces removed from that of Mrs. Ferguson's husband, former Governor James E. Ferguson.

Mrs. Ferguson chose the portrait from those submitted. Penelope Ligghan of Houston executed it and will receive $500 provided in a senate resolution passed by the 40th legislature.

Editors Assemble For National Convention

OMAHA, Neb., June 13. (AP)—Omaha today became the capital of newspaperdom as editors and publishers of the nation poured in for the convention of the National Editorial association which will be followed by a tour through western Nebraska and the Black Hills. The trip will include a visit to President Coolidge's summer White House.

Slayer of Red Envoy Will Pay With His Life

WARSAW, Poland, June 13. (AP) An official inquiry has been completed into the assassination in Warsaw last week of Peter Volkoff, soviet minister to Poland, and it was decided that the assassin, a young Russian monarchist student, Boris Kowceda, shall be placed on trial quickly before a special court. The general opinion is that he will be sentenced to death.

Chinese Nationalists Capture Two Towns

LONDON, June 13. (AP)—General Chiang Kai-Shek, leader of the Nanking or moderate Chinese nationalists, is reported in an Exchange elegraph Shanghai dispatch to have captured Haichow and Skyang, in northern Kiankau province. He is said to be advancing on Shudlien with the fall of the most important cities along the Grand canal imminent.

Indians Will Compete In Run of 480 Miles

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13. (AP) Ready for the 480 miles run to Grant pass, Oregon, 11 Indians awaited today the firing of the starting gun by Al Jennings, former train bandit and present mayor of Crescent City, Cal.

Jennings' shot tomorrow will speed away Karook and Zuni tribesmen of Oregon and New Mexico, respectively.

5 BANDITS ROB BANK OF $1000

Kimes-Terrell Band Raids Oklahoma Bank

OILTON, Okla., June 13. (AP)—Five bandits, believed to have been armed with machine guns, today robbed the Oilton State bank of nearly $1000 and escaped, after locking bank employes and customers in the vault.

Local officials were investigating the possibility that Matthew Kimes and Ray Terrell, notorious bank robbers, participated.

The report that the motor car they used was armed with two machine guns was verified by a barber who said he saw the weapons.

"Has this bank ever been robbed before?" one of the robbers inquired of R. H. Odell, cashier.

"It has," the robbers were told.

"Stick up your hands, you are being robbed again," they ordered Odell and two other employes who were in the bank at the time.

One of the men kept his gun on the employes and three customers while the other gathered up all money in sight.

Those in the bank were herded into the vault and locked in, the robbers then fled.

The cashier opened the bank vault from the inside and notified officers in Oilton and other towns of the robbery.

The robbers, speeding along the paved highway toward Tulsa, fired at a motorist. A bullet punctured the radiator of his automobile.

POULTRY MEN MEET TONIGHT

Raisers Planning Heavy Increase in '28

All poultry raisers of Wichita county are asked to meet with members of the North Texas Poultry association Tuesday night at the courthouse at 8 o'clock. Special matters of interest to all poultry men are to be discussed, with emphasis on summer egg production.

Permanent organization of poultry raisers of the county for cooperative marketing purposes will also be discussed at the meeting.

Concerning the feasibility of this plan, O. K. Barnes, manager of the agricultural department of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, affirmed that there would be "three or four hens next year to every one this year." Mr. Barnes, investigating the poultry industry of this section, has learned that many more raisers are planning to enter the business on a much larger scale in the fall, and that some marketing plan will be almost a necessity to control the price of eggs.

There are three poultry men between Wichita Falls and Iowa Park who will have approximately 5000 chickens in 1928, who have only about 500 this year. Raisers are finding the business profitable and all are increasing their droves, and many new chicken farms are being started, Mr. Barnes said.

Wichita Falls Folks, Facts, Fancies

A charge of theft of chickens was filed Monday against T. F. Monroe, who is accused of having in his possession six chickens alleged to have been stolen, when he was arrested Saturday by city officers. The charge was filed by E. F. Fruechte, assistant district attorney.

F. C. Carter Jr., returned Friday from Boston where he has been attending the graduate school of business of Harvard university.

W. P. Ferguson, prominent Wichita Falls oil operator, is recovering at the General hospital where he was operated on Sunday afternoon for appendicitis.

Rev. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, left Sunday afternoon for Leesville, La., to conduct a 10-day revival meeting.

Dick Hobson of the Francis-Hobson Drug store, is in Roosevelt, Okla., where he went on business.

School Board to Ask Bids On $25,000 Bonds

Bids on the $250,000 school bond issue approved by the voters of Wichita Falls independent school district June 7 will be called for during this week following a meeting of the city board of education, W. B. Chauncey, president of the board, announced Monday. W. W. Brown, secretary of the board, notified Mr. Chauncey Monday that transcript of the bonds was approved in Austin by the attorney general's department. Mr. Brown is expected to return from Austin Tuesday.

Following the printing of the bonds and the receipt of bids, they will be sold as soon as possible in order to accelerate construction on improvements which they provide, it was indicated. No definite building program will be drafted until after the sale of the bonds.

Stores Ask Expression On New Closing Hour

The P. B. M. company and McClurkan's are asking residents of Wichita Falls for expressions on shorter hours for their employes during the summer months. Managements of the two stores point out that such a concession during the summer would mean no small amount of pleasure to workers.

The time of closing would be one hour earlier than that previously complied with, making the closing time 7 p. m. instead of 8 p. m. A written note or telephone call is asked from friends and patrons of the two stores.

Mother's Right To Child First, Says Judge

Holding that a mother, where her reputation is found to be satisfactory, is entitled to the custody of her child, Judge W. W. Cook gave a 10-year-old girl to her mother Monday. The order giving the mother custody of the child was included in a decree allowing the mother a divorce.

The case was tried two weeks ago in the 78th district court. The husband and father of the child filed a counter suit for divorce against his wife and asked for the custody of the child.

Potato Growers Meet At C of C Today at 10

A marketing contract between the potato growers and shippers of Wichita Falls will be formally drawn up and accepted at the Tuesday morning meeting of the Wichita county association in the agricultural department of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce at 10 o'clock, according to announcement. The contract was first read to the growers Saturday morning, and was unofficially approved at that time.

Election of permanent officers for the association will be held at the Tuesday meeting. All growers are urged to be present.

GLASGOW, Scotland, June 13. (AP)—Mrs. Louise Traynor, whose home was in the United States, and two sailors who heroically tried to rescue her were drowned shortly after noon Saturday 600 miles from Ireland when Mrs. Traynor fell overboard from the steamship, California. Details of the tragedy were told only meagerly in a wireless dispatch.

Amateur Ball Player Killed By Wild Pitch

WICHITA, Kan., June 13. (AP)—Walter Carey, 31, amateur baseball player for 16 years, who was hit on the head by a pitched ball in a game between Woodward, Okla., and Vici, Okla., teams last Decoration Day, died in a hospital here early today, a victim of spinal meningitis. Carey was a player on the Woodward team.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon Thomas L. McDowell by making publication of this citation once each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear at the next regular term of the 89th district court of Wichita county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Wichita Falls, on the first Monday in July A. D., 1927, the same being the 4th day of July, A. D. 1927; then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 4th day of June, A. D. 1927, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 19930-C wherein, Jannie Mae McDowell is plaintiff and Thomas L. McDowell is defendant, and said petition prays for a divorce upon the grounds of harsh and cruel treatment, in that defendant severely whipped the minor children there having been born to said inter-marriage seven children and just prior to their separation on or about Feb. 15, 1925, the defendant did so unmercifully, severely whip one of their minor children, then about seven years of age and when plaintiff asked defendant to stop whipping said child, he, the said defendant, in an angry insolent manner struck the plaintiff with a stick on the arm and during the month of December, 1926, when said defendant visited with his children and stayed in the home of plaintiff, though said plaintiff and defendant did not live together as husband and wife, he, while in an angry fit of temper, all without cause or provocation struck said plaintiff and then left said plaintiff and neither plaintiff nor her three minor children have since heard of his whereabouts nor has has he contributed to them anything since Dec. 12, 1926 to said minor childrens' support which said minor children living with plaintiff are Mildred McDowell, 14 years of age, Gwendolyne McDowell, 12 years of age and J. W. McDowell, 9 years of age, that said other children are of mature age and supporting themselves but said three minor children have for years last past been been wholly supported, clothed and educated by said plaintiff and the grown children of the parties hereto, wherefore plaintiff prays for divorce and for the care, custody and control and education of said minor children, and for costs of suit, etc.

Herein fail not, but have before said court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this the 4th day of June, A. D. 1927.

TAYLOR CASE SET JULY 2

Appeals Court Advances Electra Injunction

Motion to advance the case of James T. Taylor versus the city of Electra on the appellate court docket was granted Monday by the second court of civil appeals, which set the hearing for July 2, according to information received Monday morning by Raymond Allred, attorney, who represents the city of Electra.

Taylor recently obtained an injunction in the 78th district court, Judge W. W. Cook presiding, enjoining the city of Electra from ousting him as chief of police and fire marshal.

The city council by a vote of three to two removed Taylor.

Taylor contended in his petition for injunction that a law in the city charter prescribed that no officer could be removed during his term of office without a unanimous vote of the council.

The city of Electra in its petition filed with the appellate court set out that the law referred to only applies to officers discharged for disorderly conduct in office and that there is another law which allows the removal of an officer by a majority vote of the council when no charges of disorderly conduct have been preferred. No charges were filed against Taylor when the order for his removal was issued.

Mr. Allred said Monday that either he or his brother, James Allred, would go to Fort Worth July 2 to argue the case before the appellate court.

P. B. M. Employes Pay Tribute to Barnard

Jack Barnard, manager of P. B. M. company was honored Monday noon by the presentation of a beautiful floral offering from employes of the store terminating his 15 year's association with the company.

Mr. Barnard started working for P. B. M. company when its location was that of the present site of the Hub Clothiers. His meager compensation of $8 a week was his first salary, then, to him of large proportions. The growth of the department store under the management of Mr. Barnard has been marked, and has now brought the firm to a place among the leading stores of Northwest Texas. The following inscription was presented with the flowers:

"These flowers we send you while you live,
—Not wait until you die.
For fifteen years you've been our "boss,"
—Now that's the reason why."

Memorial Services Held By Odd Fellows

A large crowd attended the impressive memorial services held in memory of departed Rebekahs and Odd Fellows at the I. O. O. F. hall Sunday evening. Judge P. A. Martin gave the address, taking the place of Judge Chancellor of Bowie, past grand master, who was unable to be present. Judge B. D. Sartin was master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Riley Carter and Miss Kate Ricks sang a duet, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. C. Thurman, and during the ceremony, carnations were placed on an altar in memory of the dead. They were afterwards taken to the hospital and distributed to sick members.

Opening and closing odes were sung with Mrs. D. Dellis playing accompaniments.

Medical Society to Hear Expert On Diagnosis

Dr. John W. Potts of Fort Worth, one of the outstanding diagnostitians in the south, will address the monthly meeting of the Wichita County Medical association Tuesday evening at the Wichita club rooms, Dr. Potts will speak on "Some Suggestions in the Diagnosis of Early, Curable Tuberculosis."

Dr. C. R. Hartsook of Wichita Falls will speak on "Eye Conditions Commonly Seen by the General Practitioner."

This will probably be the last meeting until fall, according to Dr. A. F. Leach, and all members in the county are urged to attend.

Wichita Boys Inspect Vernon Egg Collection

Twenty-four Wichita Falls boys were taken Sunday by Will Ward, department of recreation director, to Vernon to inspect a bird egg collection owned by Bob More, general manager for the W. T. Waggoner interests.

The collection is rated as one of the largest and most complete in the United States. There are 11,000 eggs in the collection and 600 different kinds.

Mr. More, according to Mr. Ward, started his collection on March 14, 1888.

22 CASES QUARANTINED

Twenty-two contagious disease cases in Wichita Falls were quarantined during the past week, according to a report issued Monday by the city health department.

Smallpox cases numbered 11; measles, eight; chickenpox, one; diptheria, one, and mumps, one. There were 10 deaths reported.

The Heart Of The Nation

Wichita Falls Woman Gives History Of Flag, Honored Over Nation Today

(Written by Mrs. A. R. Bleakley, custodian of flags of the Major Grice chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution for "Flag Day," June 14.)

The flag of the United States of America is the third oldest of the national standards of the world; older than the Union Jack of Great Britain, or the tri-color of France. It is the oldest flag in continuous form in the world, although the United States is counted a young nation. Dynastic and territorial changes have altered the flags of other nations but this flag holds the same form adopted at the beginning, with changes only in the number of stars to correspond to the number of states in the union—and for some years in the number of stripes. The original form of the arrangement of the stars was a circle of 13, but this was succeeded by rows as states came into the union. The first two being for Vermont and Kentucky. There are now 48 stars arranged in six horizontal rows with eight to the row. The original 13 states are sympolized in the 13 stripes of seven red and six white, alternating. The stars are white with five points in each with one point upward on a blue field.

Indian Flag.

The first native American flag was carried on a pole covered with wing feathers, by the American Indians, and during the next century following the discovery of America by Columbus, various flags were unfuried by the different colonies. When these colonies went to battle for independence from England, each section carried its own banner. A committee was appointed in 1775 to adopt one flag to represent all the colonies. This committee was composed of General George Washington, Robert Morris and George Ross, who submitted a flag composed of stars and stripes and made by Mrs. Betsy Ross, a needle woman of unusual ability. The flag was adopted by Continental Congress in 1777—June 14, 1777. This day is now observed as Flag Day throughout the United States. It was flown first from Fort Stanwix on the site of the present city of Rome, N. Y., on Aug. 3, 1777. It was first under fire three days, later in the battle of Oriskany, Aug. 6, 1777. It was first carried in the Battle of Brandywine, September, 1777.

It is interesting to note that the flag has been carried through six memorable conflicts and has always gone into battle for the cause of liberty. It was stamped with 13 stars in the Revolutionary war; in the war of 1812, with 15; in the Mexican war with 29; in the Civil war with 35; in the Spanish-American war with 45; in the World war with 48. In all these six, there has been victory for the flag.

Our flag is truly a national flag and belongs to the whole people, not only collectiveiy but individually, and every citizen feels that it is his flag, while the flags of many other countries are personal emblems of some royal line of kings.

Duty On Bunting.

A good piece of history connected with the flag of our country is that relating to the material out of which they are made. It is a strange fact that for 89 years after the adoption of the stars and stripes, they were made out of foreign material. All through the war of 1812 and through the Civil war, no American soldier fought under a yard of American bunting. The reasons for this were that there was no protection duty on flag bunting and no enterprise could compete with England. In 1865 Congress put a duty of 40 per cent of bunting and a man was sent to England to learn the process of making. Twelve looms were started at Lowell, Mass., and rapidly increased. It is worthy of special note that the first American flag made of American bunting was hoisted over the capital at Washington in February, 1866.

It was 21x12 feet and the gift of General Benjamin F. Butler.

The salute to the flag is by placing the right hand over the heart for women; men not in uniform, by removing the hat with the right hand and holding it to the left shoulder, the hand being directly over the heart, uniform men, the right hand salute.

"The Star Spangled Banner," the national anthem, should be saluted by all present by standing and facing the music, the men removing the hats.

"Star Spangled Banner."

Few know why this song was written. Francis Scott Key, an American lawyer and poet, was a prisoner on board a British man of war in position to watch the attack of the British upon the city of Baltimore in 1814. The British on the vessel watched intently the flag floating over Fort McHenry, every moment hoping to see the British emblem take the place of the American flag, but Old Glory continued to float over the Fort. Mr. Key wrote the words of the Star Spangled Banner, commencing with the words "Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light."

The dimensions of the flag are fixed by an executive order issued May 16, 1916. Its length should be 1.9 times its height. The part of the flag in which the stars appear should be seven stripes high and its length 0.76 of the height of the flag.

The pledge to the flag is the following: "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

These few simple direct words embody all the principles of true Americanism, and when they are uttered in sincerity and faith, there is nothing left to be said, for the story of life is written therein, the history of the republic and the prophesy of its future.

"I pledge allegiance." In that phrase is the meaning of the endowment of the object with absolute loyalty, with service if needed, and with one's worldly goods when demanded.

When the object is "the flag of the United States and the republic for which it stands," the oath is doubly sacred for there is but one flag and one country to which Americans may pledge allegiance, according to the conception of the continental congress. The blue field of our flag symbolized a new constitution which represented a free people under their own government. Upon this field of blue were implanted 13 white stars significant of the 13 colonies, dauntless spirit without which freedom could not have been won. "One nation indivisible," these words are typified by the red stripes of liberty and the white stripes of faith and purity, guarded by the 48 stars in unity. "With liberty and justice for all"—liberty, yes, but not unbridled license—but liberty which realizes a stewardship in a citizenship and justice is so closely interwoven with personal liberty that its demands are of equal importance.

When to Display.

The flag should only be displayed from sunrise to sunset. It should be displayed on all holidays. It should be hoisted briskly and lowered slowly. When it is displayed stretched horizontally the union should be uppermost to the flag's own right. It should always be displayed behind the speaker on a platform. It should always take the uppermost place when displayed with other flags as it embodies the essence of patriotism and bears witness to the splendid structure of our civilization to the immense expansion if our national boundaries. It prophecies the triumph of popular government, of civil and religious liberty, and of national righteousness throughout the world.

Let us accord our flag honor and loyalty. The constitution is the basis of all law and the flag is its symbol. The American flag, the emblem of our country, represents liberty, and liberty means obedience to law. It is the free people that stand for government. Our flag means all that our fathers meant it to mean. It means all that our constitution, organized for justice, for liberty and for happiness, meant. Every color, red for valor; white for hope, faith, truth and purity; blue for loyalty, sincerity and justice; and its stars, high aspiration and unity, means liberty, not lawlessness, not license but organized constitutional liberty. Our flag is not a painted rag, it is a national history, a constitution, a government, and above all we should thank our God that we are Americans.
