Memphis Restaurant Proprietor Killed By Blow In Face

VICTIM HIT AS HE OFFERS TO SHAKE HANDS

Sam Boyd Killed After Deal to Buy Cafe Is Cancelled

BROTHERS ACCUSED

C. W. and A. D. Knick Held In Jail; Third Man Is Quizzed

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 18. — As he extended his hand to settle difficulties said to have arisen between him and a prospective buyer of his establishment, Sam Boyd, 39 years old, proprietor of the Boyd cafe on the south side of the square here, was struck in the head and instantly killed today.

The fatal altercation occurred about 2:30 p. m., shortly after C. W. Knick, of Itasca, Hill county, and his brother, A. D. Knick, Hall county farmer living near Newlin, entered the cafe and engaged Boyd in conversation. Both of the Knicks were held tonight on charges of murder which were filed Sunday, and a third man, who was said to be in their company, was being held for investigation.

Brother Eye Witness

C. W. Knick, according to Claud Boyd, brother of the victim, a cook in the cafe and an eye witness to the affair, reached an agreement to purchase the establishment after a talk with the cafe owner. After Boyd had given assent and considered the agreement closed, Claud Boyd said," Knick withdrew from the deal. Boyd then requested Knick to leave, the witness said.

Knick complied, and started to leave the place. But, reaching the door, he called for Boyd, saying "Let's forget it, and shake," according to Boyd's testimony. Claud Boyd further told police that as his brother reached out to shake hands an altercation ensued, and his brother was struck in the face by a man's fist.

Boyd fell to the sidewalk, striking his head on the concrete. A physician, Dr. C. V. Stidham, and an ambulance were called but before either arrived Boyd died.

Investigation Ordered

An examination by Dr. Stidham revealed that Boyd's head was badly injured by the impact of the fall, but that the neck was not broken. Police ordered a corner's investigation into the direct cause of the death. The investigation, held tonight by a group of physicians in the presence of John Beaver, county attorney, revealed that death was

Fort Worth Attorney Dies Playing Golf

FORT WORTH, Nov. 18. (AP)—P. G. Dedmon, 45, attorney, dropped dead today while playing golf at Meadowbrook Country club. Dedmon had complained to Federal Judge James C. Wilson, one of a foursome, of a pain in his side but walked along with the others as the game progressed. At a bench on one of the tees he sat down and swooned.

Garden Variety Booze Found in Beaumont

BEAUMONT, Texas, Nov. 18. (AP)—A small truck farm near Beaumont was made to yield about 424 one-gallon jugs of rye and corn whisky today.

Five federal prohibition agents, headed by Bee Cowan deputy administrator, dug it out of patches covered with squash vines, late onions and peppers. The farmer, a white man, was arrested.

Hambone's Meditations

She Wore The Good Captain's Pajamas But That Was The Least Of Her Story

A shock of flaming red hair showed above the crowded gangplank of the French tanker Myriam the other day when she docked at New York, and two apprehensive young people became the happiest pair in New York.

Why? Well, it meant to Conrad S. Slaughter that his Texas bride was still alive after being the last woman to leave the ill fated steamer Vestris. And it meant to Mrs. Cline Slaughter, lately of San Antonio, that her husband was safe, for it was only a split second until he was at her side.

They had been separated by the confusion attending the exodus of the sinking liner. Slaughter was rescued by the American Shipper from a lifeboat which he entered shortly after the Vestris sank and was brought to New York.

But Mrs. Slaughter's story was more unusual. Placed in the last lifeboat lowered from the tilting deck of the doomed ship, the auburn haired Texas girl soon found herself floundering in the choppy seas, the emergency craft having been swamped as soon as it left the liner.

"I was thrown into the water in the midst of a lot of wreckage and there was so much confusion and excitment that I do not know what happened for a moment or two," she told reporters after she had been returned to New York.

After some time in the water, she was picked up by a lifeboat containing principally negroes of the Vestris crew.

But here's the way she told the rest of her story:

"We were in the lifeboat from about 3:30 Monday afternoon until 4:30 Tuesday morning, when we were picked up by the Myriam. I was carried aboard, I guess. There was a heavy sea run. The Myriam's crew assisted the Vestris's crew up the Jacob's ladder and treated them very hospitably.

"After we were picked up I can't say what happened for a considerable time because I was so exhausted. I woke in the captain's bed and was treated wonderfully by all of the officers and crew. No American officer or crew could have been more wonderful."

"I forgot to tell you that the French commander of the Myriam treated me like a father, and he not only turned over his cabin and clothing to me, but insisted that I sleep in his bed. He was a gentleman and hero. Of course, I was a little uncomfortable in his pajamas, as he is a little stout and wears woolens, which scratch a little.

The gown she was wearing having been ruined, she was given a sailor's complete attire and that's the way she is dressed in the accompanying picture. Slaughter is shown at right.

Bells Toll Dirge for Radio Hero While Quizzers Hunt New Facts

NEW YORK, Nov. 18. (US)—While the muffled bells of Trinity church tolled their solemn dirge for Michael J. O'Loughlin, hero of the Vestris, Federal Attorney Tuttle today prepared to press his probe into charges that cowardice and incompetence nullified the supreme sacrifice of the radio man.

As the radio antennae, the cross upon which O'Loughlin laid down his life, carried the hollow moaning of the bells into a million homes, Tuttle and his staff were busy assembling new and startling evidence which may strike hardest at the martyr's two aids on the sunken liner, Charles Verchere and James MacDonald.

Evidence Not Disclosed

Just what this evidence is could not be determined today, but it was understood that the new facts may have some bearing upon the report that Capt. William J. Carey wirelessed his owners for orders long before he allowed O'Loughlin to

DEAD GIRL'S LOVERS SOUGHT

Mystery Shrouds Murder Of Young Woman

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 18. (US)—Mystery tonight enshrouded the death of Miss Emma Alley, 16, while police sought several of her boy adorers. The girl was found with her skull crushed and her clothing torn face down in a small creek about 300 or 400 yards from her home.

Her brother, Fred, stated that Friday night when she was last seen alive at her home, she appeared extremely nervous. She told him she was waiting for someone to call. Later her mother heard an automobile horn honk outside. The girl ran to the door and climbed into a sedan.

The next morning her body was found. Her face and neck had been scratched. Miss Alley, an attractive brunette, was of Syrian extraction. Her father, Samuel Alley, is a truck farmer. He is a Mohammedan.

Four Hurt When Cars Of Train Are Derailed

BECKET, Mass., Nov. 18. (AP)—Four persons were slightly injured when eight cars of the Wolverine Express, eastbound from Chicago and carrying 137 passengers, were derailed near here today. The derailment occurred when the express sideswiped one car of a freight train which had become derailed just as the express was passing.

Electra Widow's Million Dollar Balm Suit Slated for Trial at Panhandle

PANHANDLE, Texas, Nov. 18. (UP)—Hearing of the breach of promise suit for a million dollars damages, brought by Mrs. Donie Vandever of Electra, Texas, against J. A. Whittenberg, wealthy Hutchinson county rancher and reputed to be a multimillionaire, is to be heard in the Carson county district court at the term of the 84th district Monday, Judge Newton P. Willis announces.

"The case will be given preference and priority over any other case that may come up at that time," the judge told A. D. Paynes and W. A. Hart, Amarillo attorneys, who represent the plaintiff.

Mrs. Vandever claims that the wealthy Hutchinson rancher who made his fortune out of the discovery of oil in the Borger field promised to marry her. She was his housekeeper for years, she claims.

Wittenberg lived at Plemons, the former county seat of Hutchinson county for many years. He had a ranch and from the sale of leases and the production of oil, is said to have made enough to put him in the mutli-millionaire class.

The case has been postponed three times, the last time being in July, 1928.

HOOVER OFF TO PAN-AMERICA

Takes Train to Port For Boarding Ship

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., Nov. 18. (AP)—Bearing the parting prayer of the chaplain of his alma mater for a blessing on his "pilgrimage of peace and good-will," Herbert Hoover faced the bottom of the world tonight to mingle with the peoples of Latin-America.

Leaving Palo Alto at 7:30 o'clock tonight, the first stage of the journey of the president-elect was to carry him to San Pedro where he will go aboard the battleship Maryland for the voyage to Corinto, first stop on his tentative itinerary.

Quiet Worship

Today Mr. Hoover worshipped in his customary quiet fashion, sitting in the memorial chapel at Stanford university while the chapiain, Dr. D. Charles Gardner, conducted a typically college service. In it there was little to give notice that the next chief executive of the nation was sitting but a few pews removed from the pastor. Only twice was there any reference to Mr. Hoover.

Along with various other San Franciscans and Californians who had come to say goodbye to Mr. Hoover, came Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco, who planned to board the train and accompany the party as far as San Jose. Moving down the California mainland tonight, the president-elect will make but one stop before reaching San Pedro. At Wilmington, Calif., in the vicinity of the port of Los Angeles, his train will stop in order that the school children of that place may get a glimpse of their next president.

Departure Today

Then the train will move to San Pedro where he will be met at the dock by Admiral Pratt of the Pacific fleet and escorted aboard the battleship. The train is scheduled to arrive at 9:45 o'clock Monday morning and the ship will hoist anchor as soon as possible thereafter.

Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, who will accompany Mr. Hoover in the capacity of a special representative of the state department, arrived in Los Angeles today and will spend tonight aboard the battleship California, joining the party tomorrow upon its arrival there. The definite itinerary for the trip will not be completed until after Mr. Hoover has conferred aboard the ship with Ambassador Fletcher.

Body of California Man Held At Memphis

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 18.—The body of C. L. Patchin, traveling salesman who died Saturday night in an Estelline hotel, was being held in a mortuary here tonight as officials sought to get in contact with the man's relatives, thought to live in California.

Patchin was identified by papers found on his person, and the car he was driving bore a license issued in Manhattan Beach, Calif.

Physicians said he died of diabetis.

SPECIAL TRAIN HERE TODAY FOR TRIPPERS

Booster Enthusiasm Boils Over Despite Cold Weather Here

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS

Berths and Advertising Material To Be Given Out By Chatham

The cold spell which sent shivering Wichitans to the windows to peer anxiously for snowflakes Sunday will serve to put added "gusto" into plans for the departure early Tuesday morning of the South Plains special, and will not by any means hinder the slightest phase of the celebration, J. W. Chatham, traffic and industrial manager of the chamber of commerce said, Sunday night.

"I talked to Plainview officials thi safternoon," he continued, "and they say it is cold there too, but that they are planning one of the biggest receptions for this special train ever staged there."

Reservations Taken

Virtually all of the reservations for the trip have been taken, Mr. Chatham said. Receipts for the reservations are to serve in the drawing for berths, which is to occur Monday afternoon at the chamber of commerce. The drawing is to start at 3 o'clock, with those presenting receipts entitled to draw for their places on the train.

At this drawing, final instructions for those to take the trip will be announced, and literature, hatbands and other booster accountrements will be distributed.

Five Pullmans

The train, consisting of five Pullman cars and a baggage car, is to arrive here Monday from Fort Worth, and the baggage car, for those desiring its use for advertisement equipment, will be open at the end of Ninth street, near the Wichita Ice Company, at 9 a. m. A guard will be stationed at the car throughout the day, Mr. Chatham said.

Wichita Falls' efforts in the formal opening of the new Denver South Plains road are being matched by similar plans conceived by other towns in this section of the state, namely, Fort Worth, Dallas, Childress, Amarillo and Memphis. Each of these towns will have a special train to carry its boosters over the new route, which, with this formal opening, introduces West Texans to a larger trade territory than ever before anticipated.

Each town on the routes of the special trains has planned a welcome for their guests. In some, dinners and dances are planned, in others, old fashioned barbecues, speechmaking, and other events designed to reflect the hospitality, and feeling of good will of the citizens towards its visitors from larger trade centers.

'Protective Legislation' Seen As Workers' Aid

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (US)—"Protective legislation," laws that regulate women's work in industry, benefit definitely working women and raise the standards of working conditions of their male fellow employes, according to a new bulletin put out by the women's bureau of the U. S. department of labor.

The bulletin records the results of a survey begun two years ago by the women's bureau at the request of feminist groups both for and against such protective legislation.

Stewart Trial Enters Second Week Today

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (AP)—With a ruling pending on a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty, the trial of Robert W. Stewart on charges of perjury arising from testimony given before the senate Teapot Dome committee tomorrow will enter its second week.

The motion was entered Friday by Frank J. Hogan, chief of counsel for Stewart, who is chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil company of Indiana.

Methodist Heads Move To "Save Our Schools'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (AP)—Formal organization of the save-our-schools committee whose purpose is "to help awaken the nation to the grave danger that threatens our schools and colleges by reason of the attempt now being made to use them for propaganda" was announced here today.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal church, of New York City, is national chairman of the organization and John Dewey, professor at Columbia university vice-chairman.

Schoolboy Meets Death In Speakeasy For Kids

'Ice Cream Parlors' Are Really Gambling and Booze Dives for Youngsters, Police Learn

CHICAGO, Nov. 18 (UP)—Gambling and drinking by young school children in ice cream parlors in the Armour school district was revealed today when William Adomytis, 17, was shot and killed in an argument over a dice game.

Anthony Junkus, proprietor of a confectionary store, police said, admitted he shot young Adomaytis when the boy attempted to attack him. The boy was shot through the heart.

Detectives found four gallons of alcoholic drinks concealed in ice cream freezers in the store.

John Adomaytis, father of the boy, was restrained from striking Junkus when the two met at the Deering street police station following the shooting.

SPEAKEASIES FLOURISH IN CAPITAL CITY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (UP) Speakeasies flourish here almost under the eyes of Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt and other high officals engaged in prohibition enforcement according to the report made by investigator of the Washington Post, appearing with photographs in today's edition.

The article mentioned specific localities where liquor is being sold over the bar, a condition, according to the Post, which has arisen during the past year.

Ten Lives Believed Lost In Flood Covering Kansas-Missouri Area

Streams Continue to Swell After Rains Cease, Ruining Crops and Crippling Communication

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 18. (AP)—After a fearful night of anxious vigilance over encroaching flood waters along the river basins of eastern Kansas and western Missouri, residents of the lowlands in the inundated areas began today to figure the toll—around ten lives and collossal property damage.

Farmers suffered heaviest, in the loss of livestock and crops and damage to farm buildings and equipment. Damage to city municipal plants and flood prevention construction work also was heavy.

Rainfall Ceases

Rainfall had ceased yesterday and today flood crests were rushing from the uplands, while receding waters revealed the extent of damage to farms and municipalities in their wake.

Refugees were being cared for today by the hundreds at various points where the inundation caused evacuation of homes. Many localities were obliged to send out calls for shipment of drinking water, as water, light, power and communication facilities were put out of commission generally.

As rain ceased to fall in the two states, the temperature began to drop steadily, adding to the discomfort of the refugees and relief workers. Snow was reported at several points in both states.

Winfield, Kan., today was in the grip of the worst flood in the city's history, with part of the city under water. Although rumors of several deaths in that vicinity came today it was impossible to corroborate any of the reports. A Missouri Pacific railroad foreman was reported to have been swept to his death and a woman was said to have perished when water invaded her home. Communication between various parts of the city even was not possible. Property loss there was large.

River Hits Record

The Verdigris river at Neodesha, Kan., at mid-afternoon had equalled its record of 28 feet and was still rising. Railroad tracks for miles east of the city were submerged, and partly washed out.

Property damage at Augusta, Kan., was estimated at $500,000 as the Walnut and Whitewater rivers began to recede there today. Charles Waterman, who plunged into the water when fire drove him from the Santa Fe pump house Saturday, was still missing today.

Cop's Slayer Given Second Death Sentence

PRINCETON, Ind., Nov. 18. (UP)—Death in the electric chair was recommended by a jury in Gibson county circuit court today in finding Dreyfus Rhoades guilty of the murder of Simon Carie, Vincennes policeman, in April, 1926.

It was the second time Rhoades had been sentenced to death. A jury in Knox county passed the first sentence. Rhoades was taken to death row at the state prison but an appeal was taken.

Slight Drop In Price Of Food Is Reported

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (US)—Retail food prices dropped about one half of one per cent between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15, the labor department announced today. They were about four-tenths of one per cent higher on Oct. 15 than a year ago.

TEXAS DENTIST WINS FREEDOM

Palestine Man Acquitted Of Slaying Father

RUSHVILLE, Neb., Nov. 18. (AP)—Glen Rye, a Palestine, Texas, dentist, was acquitted by a jury in district court here last night of the charge of killing his stepfather, Frank Celik, of Gordon, Neb., last summer.

Rye was accused of shooting to death the man who married his mother several years ago, and who, he said, forced him to leave home at the time of the marrage. Celik was shot during an altercation between Rye and Celik in the garage of Mrs. Hattie Meyer, to whom Celik was accused of having paid attentions.

Thursday defense counsel produced in court several character depositions to bear out Rye's reputation in his home state, including one from Governor Dan Moody of Texas. Rye's wife returned to Rushville with her husband at the opening of the trial, but did not appear as a witness. Rye had been free on $10,000 bond following preliminary hearing.

The state sought to show that Rye killed Celik because of the attentions he paid another woman and alleged mistreatment of his mother. Rye, in testifying in his own behalf, said he shot in self defense when his stepfather attempted to choke him.

German Minister To Ask Confidence Vote Today

PARIS, Nov. 18. (UP)—Attention of former allied powers will be directed to Berlin Monday when Foreign Minister Gustave Stresseman will appeal to the reichstag for a vote of confidence on his war reparations policy.

Recovery of Recalcitrant Leper Hailed As Medical Triumph

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18 (AP)—The United States Public Health service today announced John Early, 54, North Carolina mountaineer, whose many escapes from leper colonies caused consternation among health officials, had "recovered" from leprosy.

"In scientific pariance his leprosy is arrested," said a statement issued by the health service.

The announcement hailed Early's cast as "another triumph in modern medicine," and credited the mountaineer's "eccentricities" with having contributed much to the passage of the law placing lepers under care of the public health service and to awakening public interest in the leprosy problem of this country.

Early, who once resisted with a rifle, efforts to confine him in the national leper home at Carville, La., where he recovered, will return this month to his home in the mountains near Tyron, S. C., free from the disease but carrying its scars.

Early shocked the national capital in 1923, when he registered at a downtown hotel following an escape from Carville. Again in 1927, he hid himself at his North Carolina home and resisted efforts to capture him until he surrendered May 4, 1927, to the federal authorities, and returned to the leper home where he subsequently submitted to treatment.

SIX INCH FALL COVERS NORTH PART OF STATE

Amarillo Reports Mercury Below Freezing And Still Falling

WICHITA COLDER

Rain Falls South of Childress But Snow May Be Coming

The thermometer in Wichita Falls dropped from 42 degrees above zero at 5 o'clock in the afternoon to 33 above at 1 o'clock Monday morning. The mercury held close to 40 until 9 o'clock when the gradual drop toward the freezing point started at the rate of about 2 degrees an hour.

Texas' first snow of the season was scurrying down to a white blanketed terrain in the Panhandle Sunday night while the temperature throughout North Texas was falling toward or below the freezing mark. South of Childress the precipitation was in the form of a drizzling rain but in view of the lowering mercury a snowfall in Wichita Falls Monday would not surprise weather observers.

A few flakes of snow were reported seen late Sunday evening mixed in with the rain which fell here.

Snows that called for the use of snow plows along the Fort Worth and Denver railroad between Texline and Dalhart fell in diminishing proportions just ahead of freezing weather as far south as Childress late Sunday. From Childress to Fort Worth the snow changed to drizzling rain all through the day, with temperatures everywhere dropping. At 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon the thermometer in Wichita Falls had reached 42 degrees and was still falling.

Seven Inches Fall

Between seven and eight inches of snow covered the ground between Dalhart and Texline before sundown. At Amarillo, where the temperature was below freezing by mid-afternoon, four inches of snow were being increased by a steady fall. At Memphis and Childress it melted as it fell through the afternoon, with temperatures on the downward trend. Childress, at 33 degrees, was only eight degrees above the temperature reported from Amarillo.

Below the snow line on the Fort Worth and Denver, in Wichita Falls, and between this city and Elk City on the Katy drizzling rains fell most of Sunday, as thermometers went down. The precipitation here totaled .03 of an inch at 5 o'clock. Between Elk City and Forgan on the Katy snow fell most of the day, and a three-inch accu-

VISITORS GIVE KGKO PROGRAM

Electra Pastor and Graham Booster Talk

Listeners to KGKO Sunday afternoon were entertained with two programs given by visiting delegations from nearby cities. The First Christian church of Electra, represented by its pastor, Rev. C. C. Klingman, and its choir, broadcast from 3 to 4 o'clock, followed by a two hour program from 4 to 6 o'clock given by the Graham Chamber of Commerce.

The Electra program consisted of a sermon delivered by Rev. Klingman and several musical numbers by the mixed chorus of 15 voices, directed and accompanied by Miss Mary Ellen Scott, teacher of piano in the public schools of Electra.

T. E. Campe, secretary of the Graham Chamber of Commerce, occupied several minutes in making the Southwest at large better acquainted with the city of Graham and its surrounding community. The following program, arranged and directed by Miss Jean Fisher, teacher of piano, and Mrs. H. L. McKaig, president of the Music club at Graham, was given:

Negro spirituals—C. A. Russell, C. C. Hampton, C. P. Hutchinson and H. L. Thornton.

Reading—Miss Alvis Calvin.

Popular numbers—Hardy Price, Donnell Johnson, James Bowron.

Special numbers given by Miss Lois Johnson, Mrs. W. B. Fultz, Mrs. H. L. McKaig, Miss Jean Fisher, Miss Maud Gruby, M. D. Smith.

Numerous messages were received commending the afternoon's programs.

Definite arrangement of Monday's programs had not been completed Sunday night, with the exception of definite engagement of the Little Rovers orchestra for an hour's program beginning at 7 o'clock.

MAJESTIC: "Ramona" with Dolores del Rio. Paramount news. Football novelty. Comedy.
STRAND: Audrey Ferris and William Collier in "Beware of Bachelors," a talkie. Two vitaphone shorts. Pathe news.
OLYMPIC: Lillian Murry and Elmer Wright in musical comedy.
On the screen: "Grip of the Yukon." Fox news. Comedy.
MISSION: Leo Maloney in "Yellow Contraband." Newlywed comedy.
GARDEN: "Kit Carson." Comedy.

Those who enjoy their comedy broad, yea, good and broad and even a little fast and furious and spiced up, will get a kick out of the little old show "Beware of Bachelors" starring Audrey Ferris, William Collier Jr., Clyde Cook and Margaret Livingston. The play is opening at the Stand Monday and it is a sound picture.

Audrey Ferris is never hard to look at; in fact she is quite easy. And in "Beware of Bachelors" one sees more of her. Willie Collier Jr. is getting better all the time, and is said to receive more love notes from flappers than any other young star on the silversheet.

"The Perfect Crime" is gone. May in rest in peace. As a picture it was well done and it was interesting. Clive Brook's character work was something to be remembered. But is it a dead certain fact that there have been too consarned many crime pictures in the past year.

Three new chorines for the Zippity Zip musical comedy company at the Olympic theater. Charlie Moorehead did not name them, but that's immaterial as the show is the thing. Fat Wiles stops the show and sets the fans wild at almost every performance. Lillian Murry and Elmer Wright are the consolidated backbone of the troupe which is getting over like a million dollars.

From the sublime to the ridiculous. Francis Macmillen, violinist, is due to saw his strings at the Memorial auditorium Friday night. He is a good artist and deserves Wichita's support.

"Ramona" at the Majestic comes as near to being a perfect picture from the point of picture artistry and the public viewpoint as well as we have seen in Wichita Falls for a long time. It is at the Majestic. The play is clean, dramatic and interesting all the way. It is also the kind of a play in which we heartily approve the use of foreign actors and actresses. Dolores del Rio, a Mexican girl, is ideally cast as Ramona, a Spanish girl of old California.

Negroes Pay Fines After Gambling Raid

Nine black boys shooting craps with a pair of black dice scattered from their shelter in an Ohio street barbershop Sunday when Constable Frank Morgan approached. He was successful in capturing five of them.

When taken before R. V. Gwinn, justice of the peace, the five negroes astonished the court by their immediate ability to pay their fines and costs which totaled $11.50 each.

"I don't believe such a thing has ever happened before," Mr. Morgan said.

HUNTING DOGS HUNTED

Three birds dogs, all setters, are being sought by the Wichita Falls police at the request of the Quanah authorities.

Two of the animals are females, and all are of high quality, according to the report.

Zoo Alligators Hit Hay And Distontinue Their Meals

Four residents of Wichita Falls have been asleep and have not eaten for two weeks.

This fact was revealed Sunday evening by C. C. Bunnenberg, superintendent of parks, when he ordered the water removed from the alligator tanks in Scotland park and the animals bedded in hay as protection against the cold. They are hibernating.

The alligators became inactive about two weeks ago, Mr. Bunnenberg said, and were easy to handle Sunday night when the water was removed and the hay placed around them for protection.

due to a skull fracture at the base of the brain, which physicians said, caused a hemorrhage.

Claud Boyd told officers that when he saw his brother fall he rushed to pick him up, but was warned to leave him alone. He was attacked he said, and after warding his assailant off and attempting to give aid to his brother, he was attacked a second time.

Chief Makes Arrest

As this second attack ended, Claud Boyd said, the men ran to their car by the curb, in which waited a third man. Arrests in the case were made by Chief of Police Bill Huddleston.

The three men being held are in the Hall county jail here. Date of examining trial for the Knick brothers was not set Sunday. The third man is held merely for investigation and probably will be released after an inquiry is held, said officers.

Sam Boyd had operated his restaurant here for a number of years, and was known and well liked in the community. He is survived by his widow and two children, a son, 15, and a daughter, 16. Arrangements for the funeral were not completed Sunday.

TWO THEFTS REPORTED

Two minor thefts were reported to the police Sunday.

Mrs. C. Stripling, 2216 Holliday, reported a 38 caliber Colt and a box of shells missing.

The Lightsey garage reported the theft of a Federal and a General tire, both 32x6.20, from a Magnon coupe parked on Tilden street.

LOCKNEY HOTEL CONTRACT LET

$50,000 Building to Be Thoroughly Modern

Special to The Record News.

LOCKNEY, Nov. 18.—A contract calling for the erection of a $50,000 modern hotel at the corner of Main and Locust streets was awarded to Thurman and Stephenson, contractors, by the directors of the Lockney Hotel company, Thursday.

Seven stores, a coffee shop, dining room, lobby and kitchen will occupy the ground floor of the building and 30 guest rooms will comprise the second floor. The building will be of brick construction and modern in every respect.

More than 100 citizens are stockholders in the hotel company organized through the local chamber of commerce.

Vestris Inquiry Hunts New Facts

flash the belated SOS. This report both Verchere and MacDonald have half-heartedly denied upon the stand.

Actuated by the information which has been brought him, Tuttle has advanced to Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock the continuance of the hearing which originally had been scheduled for Tuesday.

Although the United States attorney would not reveal the names of witnesses whom he proposes to call tomorrow, beyond saying that they would be mostly ship's officers, it was considered likely that Joseph Finzimer, operator at the Tuckerton, N. J., station of the Radiomarine corporation, would be among those to take the stand.

Message Not Found

Up to the time the inquiry adjourned Saturday afternoon, search of the files of the wireless station which received the Vestris' call for help had not revealed a message rumored to have been sent to the local offices of Lamport and Holt an hour before the SOS went out. It is believed that Finzimer may save much time in establishing definitely whether or not Carey informed his owners an hour before the distress signal.

"We may need aid."

The mystery with which Verchere and MacDonald have surrounded the communications which went out of the sinking liner's radio shack that fateful morning a week ago may also be dispelled by a file which has been dispatched to Tuttle by the navy department at Washington.

Although it was announced in Washington that the file contained all radio messages picked up by naval stations and by naval vessels at sea, the contents of the communications was not divulged.

Radio messages exchanged with the Vestris by her sister ship, the Voltaire, flagship of the Lamport and Holt line, also have been subpoenaed and it is possible that they will be read into the record of the sea's most sordid story tomorrow.

Moose Order To Present Tableau

A tableau, "Our Flag," was announced Sunday as the grand finale act of "Stars of the Future," a review to be presented by 250 Wichita Falls children, which will be presented at the Memorial auditorium Wednesday night. The tableau is in 18 acts.

The Loyal Order of Moose is presenting the attractions as a benefit performance for the orphans of Mooseheart, the Moose national home, near Chicago. Alec Ross is in charge of the arrangements for the Wednesday night show, and Mrs. Beatrice Fleming is directing "Our Flag."

The acts of the review are being directed by the music and dancing school teachers of the city, and will include all kinds of musical, and dancing acts.

The Lions club boys band under the direction of Leo Underwood will be presented, with Jackie Speigel, cornetist, as soloist.

Annual Wichita County Red Cross Roll Call Drive to Begin Today

Inaugurating the annual roll call of the Wichita county chapter of the American Red Cross, an army of 40 campaigners will meet for organization at the Wichita club at noon Monday. Under the leadership of Tarleton Morrow, roll call chairman, the group will be given final instructions for the solicitation of subscriptions in a canvass of the business district.

The chapter is seeking $7,000 in subscriptions and asking the enrollment, at $1 a membership, of the entire population of Wichita Falls. The solicitation of the subscriptions will begin Monday afternoon. By Wednesday the organization being perfected by the Parent-Teacher association, will be under way. W. O. Beeman is in charge of the enrollment phase of the campaign.

"Annual memberships are divided into four classes," the chairman explained. "Every man, woman, and child is sought for the roll. Memberships at $5, $10, and $25 are termed 'contributing,' 'sustaining,' and 'supporting' respectively. These are to be sought by the group of business men who are to meet Monday. Out of each gift, only 50 cents goes to National headquarters. The remainder is kept here for the relief of local distress."

Mr. Morrow explained Sunday that the chapter depends entirely on roll call funds for the support of its educational and health work. Special funds provided for relief in the Florida and Porto Rican disasters have been used according to the specific purposes for which they were collected, he said.

Snow Blankets Texas Panhandle

mulation was reported from Forgan at 6 o'clock.

Clear Skies South

South of Stamford on the Wichita Valley stiff winds left the sky clear and the weather cold. Between Wichita Falls and Stamford, light misty rain fell throughout the day.

Everywhere temperatures were reported dropping and freezing weather anticipated. Detailed reports were:

CHILLICOTHE—Light rains Saturday night and Sunday. Temperature going down.

QUANAH—Drizzling rains. Temperature almost freezing.

CHILDRESS—Snow melting as it falls. Temperature 38 degrees.

MEMPHIS—Melting snow. Getting colder.

AMARILLO—Four inches of snow and more coming. Temperature 30 degrees.

PADUCAH—Melting snow after 5 o'clock; mercury dropping.

HASKELL—Norther at 4 o'clock, clearing skies after a misty day.

CROWELL—Rain that turned to sleet. Getting colder.

FREDERICK, OKLA.—Rain and cold wind. Freezing weather expected.

ALTUS, OKLA.—Drizzling rain with prospects of freeze.

GRANDFIELD, OKLA.—Raining all day with temperature slightly above freezing.

CLARENDON—Snowing all through the day with temperature slightly above freezing.

DALHART—Six inches of snow had fallen early Sunday night. Rain Friday and Saturday amounted to 98 inch.

FLOYDADA—With freezing weather prevailing, snow flurries throughout Sunday evening followed a quarter inch rain in the morning.

Autos Stolen At Church Services

Auto thieves were busy at Wichita Falls churches Sunday, two machines being reported stolen during the morning services. A seven passenger Hudson sedan was taken from in front of the First Methodist church. It was reported by Mack Thomas, 1615 Tenth street.

Mr. Thomas said he would pay a reward for recovery of his car. The auto carries two spare tires, is of light tan color and bears license 971-663.

Ross Saye, 1701 Collins street, reported the theft of his 1924 model Ford coupe from in front of the First Baptist church Sunday morning.

Sunday Schools List Decrease

Sunday school attendance which showed a slight decrease generally due probably to a decided drop in temperature Saturday night, failed to halt the increasing enrollment at the First Baptist church, which reported an increase of 53 over last Sunday, with a total of 1285 present. The complete attendance for the city showed 7126 present on Nov. 18, or 115 less than on the preceding Sunday.

Following is the report of various churches:

Zoo Animals To Be Moved Today

Regardless of the weather or the gifts of the proposed permanent winter quarters for the Lions club municipal zoo now in Scotland park, the animals will be moved to the old city hall annex on Ohio avenue Monday, according to Charlie Bunnenberg, superintendent of parks.

"We have worried too much over the animals, and do not intend to take any chance on the freezing weather catching them suddenly," he said. "This will apply to the tropical animals and as many of the small animals as can be accommodated in the building.

"Miss Sugar, the elephant, has a nice house which should protect her in good shape where she is. That means she won't be moved.

"The tiger, lions, all the cat family, and all of the animals which are not naturally used to cold weather will be moved Monday."

Homeless Given Beds By Salvation Army

Sleeping quarters for the down and outers have been opened in the old city hall annex and the beds are being occupied nightly, according to an announcement made Sunday by Capt. Z. H. Parker of the Salvation army.

"We need quilts, blankets and linens badly," Captain Parker said. "We want to thank the public for the beds and the mattresses which have been received, and the city for the lights, heat, water and space given."

Hurricane Relief Head Arrives in Porto Rico

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Nov. 18 (US)—United States Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut who is preparing hurricane relief legislation for Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands, to be presented for the urgent consideration of congress, arrived at Saint Croix at noon today.

Prince's Motor Van Delayed By Rains

NAIROBI, Africa, Nov. 18 (UP)—The Prince of Wales' motor caravan was considerably delayed en route to Arusha by heavy rains which converted roads throughout East Africa into gum-like morasses.

Boy Faces Second Auto Theft Charge

Charges of theft over $50 have been filed in district court against J. J. Southerland, alias Raymond George Scott, in connection with the theft of an automobile here several days ago belonging to E. S. Carey.

The boy was given a suspended sentence of five years in the penitentiary last week by Judge P. A. Martin at the suggestion of the jury which tried him on a similar charge in connection with the theft of an automobile belonging to T. S. Thompson, 1001 Tenth street, a month ago.

A Childress youth also named Southerland was given a suspended sentence by Judge Martin in the 89th district court here last week.

$100,000 Loss in Fire At Mitchel Field

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 18 (UP)—More than $100,000 damage was done by a fire which swept through two metal frame buildings housing the engineering department at the Mitchel field aviation post today.

No planes were damaged, but a number of valuable motors and a quantity of balloon silk were relieved destroyed, Col. Henry C. Pratt, commandant of the field, said.

Archer County Road Work Up

AUSTIN, Nov. 18. (UP)—Bids are to be opened by the State Highway commission at its session beginning Monday for state road work approximating $1,500,000 estimated cost. The work is scattered on a score of counties.

Proposed opening of bides of 12 miles of grading and building of drainage structure on state highway No. 9 in Sterling county has been postponed and the original call for the bids cancelled.

Work upon which bids are to be opened includes eight miles of grading and drainage structures on highway 24 through Archer county from Baylor county to Young county. Similar work has been advertised for five miles of the same highway in Young county extending to Olney and in Knox county from Benjamin to the Baylor line, a distance of more than 19 miles.

COLORADO DAM

COLORADO, Texas, Nov. 18. (AP)—Contract has been awarded by the Colorado Country club for a dam across Lone Wolf creek which is expected to impound water for a lake more than one mile long. The dam, to be 15 feet high and 109 feet in length, is to cost about $9,400.

Fly Fishing for Whales

But the most fun is whale fishing up in Hudson bay.

"No," said the pilot, "life up here isn't so dull as you might think. The winters are long of course, and it gets pretty cold now and then. But they keep us pretty busy with these photographing stunts, and now and then we have a little fun with eagles and moose, as I told you before. But the most fun is whale fishing up in Hudson bay. Stick around here till my next day off and I'll show you some real sport."

I looked at him closely, but he returned my gaze solemnly, the while he lighted his pipe. Outside the hangar the wind was blowing a gale, and fine, hard, frozen snow drummed on the panes of the little window, each flake making a musical tinkle. There would be no flying for the next week, for the gale came straight down from Greenland, and when such a wind gets started it takes a long time to slow it up. I was glad to be entertained, for life is none too lively in a big hangar, with furs piled over you to keep you from freezing to death, and your hands, even in mittens too numb to hold cards.

The pilot continued: "I never knew about whale fishing till last summer when some of the ice began to go out of the bay, and the big fish came in looking for the schools of little fish that stay frozen in the bergs all winter and only come out when they begin to melt. Then they are in a great hurry to get out to pick up some food, and the whales, which seem to know instinctively when they are going to be free slide into the shallow water and scoop them up by the barrel full.

"Up to the time I discovered by the merest accident that you can take a whale with a rod and line if you have a plane to work from I had supposed that the only way to catch one was to harpoon him or shoot a bomb into him, and then wait till he dies and tow him ashore. I used to read a lot of whale stories when I was a kid, 'Moby Dick' and 'The Cruise of the Cachelot' and other books by real whale fishers, and I was always interested in them. Never in those days did I dream that I would invent a new way of catching the big fellows, and open a new and exciting pastime for sportsmen of the future.

"Thanks to me, whale fishing with rod and line will be the big game up here of these days. I am at work on a little book called 'Fly Fishing for Whales.' The name, as you can see, is a sort of a pun, you fish for them on the fly-see? But I think it is a good title. Pretty soon there will be parties made up in New York and Boston and London to come over here and enjoy the fun, and then I will get a lot of credit, and maybe be able to take parties out instead of sailing over this country counting the trees of a lumber company like I am doing now."

"You've actually caught whales that way yourself?" I inquired as he snuggled a little deeper down into his fur coverings, and began to show signs of drowsiness.

"Me? of course I have. Didn't I tell you I was going to write a book about it—have begun it, in fact. I'm the only living authority on that kind of whale catching, and I mean to make the most of it."

"When did you begin it?"

"As I told you it was along last summer some time. I was working up around James bay on some timber and topographical photographing, carrying a camera man along with me. We cleaned up our sector for the day pretty early, and having nothing to do I just throttled the engine down and drifted around watching the big bergs blowing loose from the shore ice, and drifting out to sea. They had come down from Greenland where they broke off the ice cap the winter before, got caught in backwaters and stayed there till they froze in. There had been a warm wind blowing for a week and now they were coming loose again.

"Well as I was watching them I saw some funny looking black things which seemed to be squirming around among them, and dropped down to where I could get a look at them. They were whales all right, and they seemed to be cruising around in circles, and acting as if they were chasing something. I spiraled down almost to the edge of the water, and then I could see that they were following little silver trails that were made by small fish in schools. Now and then one of the whales would dip a little into the waves, scoop up about a million of the little fellows, and then stand straight up in the water with his mouth open to let them trickle down his throat.

"I watched them till I got tired, and was just about to fly back to the station when I felt a terrible pull on the tail of the plane and had to get busy to keep from going into a spin. What had happened was that one of the big fish had got hold of the end of a landing line that some fool had forgot to coil, and was gnawing it. I gave her all the power she had, and the line broke and we came away clean.

"But that put an idea into my head. The next day I got a piece of steel and hammered it into a hook with a barb, and bent it on the line with a few feet of wire cable. Then I put a hunk of meat on the hook, coiled the whole thing in the cabin and set out for the bay again. There were a lot of whales there, so I turned the controls over to the photographer who had learned to pilot pretty well and lowered the line.

"I got a bite almost as soon as the hook touched the water, but I missed that one. Pretty soon another whale—20 or 30 feet long, I should say, took a hack at the bait, and with a quick jerk I got the hook fixed in his jaws. Then I paid out a lot of slack line, called the pilot back to handle it, and took the controls myself.

"Well there was fun after that. The line soon paid out its full length and the photographer had bent it around one of the seats. Then came my job, which was to keep a firm but light strain on it, and follow with the plane every turn the whale made. He kept us stepping pretty lively, and often we had to pay out line to keep from getting upset. Once he sounded, and I thought he was never coming up, spouted, and was off again going north. I must have followed him for 50 miles, and by that time I had begun to tire him out. He grew more and more feeble with his yanks and at last gave it up altogether, and just paddled along lazy like at the end of the line while I turned the head of the ship for shore and towed him home.

"Of course the best I could do was to get him into shallow water, but as luck would have it there was a bunch of fishing Indians there, and when they saw what was going on they got out their harpoons and finished him. It was a great day for me. I have caught about 60 whales since then, and now I arrange to have people in boats in the shallow water to make the kill when I tow the fish in. But I never will get such a thrill as I did with my first catch. There's his jaw bone there in the corner, if you want proof."

I looked at the jaw bone. It was indubitably the jaw bone of a whale. What more proof than that could I ask?

A YEAR OF PROGRESS

IT HAS been just a year since the new Ford was introduced. At this first anniversary, it is interesting to review the record of the months just passed and see what has been accomplished.

Since December 2, 1927, nearly 750,000 new Ford cars have been built. Production has been gradually increased from a few hundred a day to 6000 a day. We expect to make 2,000,000 automobiles in 1929.

These are impressive figures. But they are only that. Figures of themselves are unimportant.

The big thing is that the new Ford has delivered a service beyond all expectations. The promise of a year ago is now an accomplished fact.

New Ford is the expression of an ideal

Our policy has always been to regard ourselves as charged with making the best automobile it is possible to make at a low price. That is our mission. We have done it for more than twenty years. The public expects us to keep on doing it.

That obligation includes good design as well as good materials. We hold it our duty to permit nothing to stand in the way of progress, yet we do not make changes simply for the sake of making them. First, it must be demonstrated that what seems like an improvement in theory is an improvement in practice.

THE new Ford has made a high place for itself because it is built on sound principles. There is nothing of an experiment about it.

The whole effort has been toward simplicity—to give you outstanding service with as little machinery as possible. That is where experience counts. Built into the new Ford is everything we have learned in the making of fifteen million automobiles.

The motor has made a remarkable record

Take the motor. It has made a remarkable record because it combines every essential feature of good performance—power, acceleration, smoothness, speed, reliability, economy and long life.

Not just acceleration. Not just smoothness. Not just speed. But the most of all of these features that can be built into a low-priced car without cutting corners or sacrificing quality anywhere along the line.

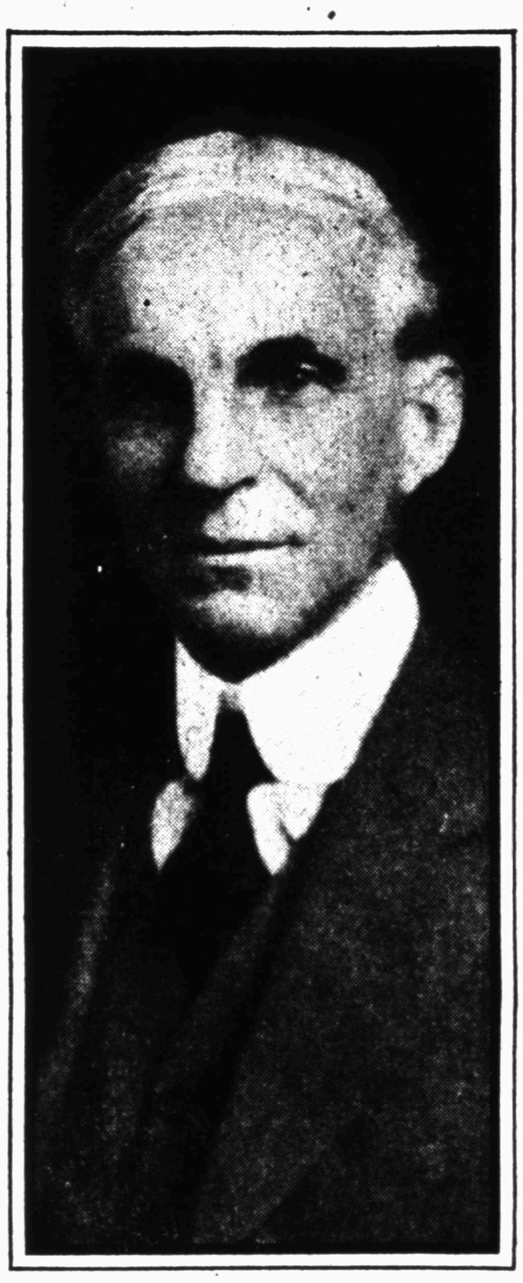

We were building more than a motor when we did this. We were fulfilling the public's trust in us to make the best selection for their use. Had any other type been better, we would have chosen that.

Value of simplicity shown in performance

Daily, in the performance of the new Ford, you can see the value of its sound simplicity of design, its balance, the care with which it is made, and the quality that has been put into it.

It will do 55 to 65 miles an hour, which is fast enough for anyone. You know how quickly it accelerates. You have seen how it climbs the hills on high. If you drive a new Ford you know its economy of operation and low cost of up-keep.

From every part of the world come reports of its reliability and endurance. Many of the new Fords have been driven 50,000 miles in the past year. Some more than 100,000 miles. There is no telling how far they will go. The average life of the Model T was seven years. We believe this new car will do even better.

THE engine is the heart of the motor car, of course. Yet there are other features almost as important. We refer particularly to the safety of the fully enclosed six-brake system of the new Ford. To its really remarkable smoothness and stability at all speeds and its easy-riding comfort. To the beauty of its lines and colors. To the ease of control. To the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield. To the electric welding that makes it such a strong and sturdy car.

"The new Ford car embodies the best results of our experience in making 15,000,000 automobiles. We consider it our most important contribution to the progress and prosperity of the country, and to the daily welfare of millions of people."

Henry Ford

In a word, the quality of the new Ford goes clear through. Nothing has been done for show. No one part has been given undue prominence at the expense of another.

Constantly making a better automobile

The new Ford was a good car when it was first introduced. We made sure of that before we asked you to buy it. It is a better car today.

Constantly we are finding new and better ways of doing things. As soon as we are sure of them we put them into the car. There is no such thing as a yearly model. Why should there be? As we make improvements, they are so planned that owners of previously built cars may take immediate advantage of them.

EVERYTHING that has been done has been done with one purpose—to bring the benefits of modern, economical transportation to all the people.

Our mission is to make the best automobile that can be made to sell at a low price. In ever-increasing measure, the new Ford is the expression of that ideal.

Miss Wilson Weds Glenn Apple At Pretty Ceremony Sunday Morning

Of interest to the many friends of Miss Francis Shirley Wilson and Glenn Apple will be the announcement of their marriage at the First Baptist church at 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

The church was beautifull decorated with cathedral candles, palms, and chrysanthemums. Rev. O. L. Powers, pastor, read the marriage vows in the presence of a number of friends and relatives.

The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, M. J. Lowery, and the groom was attended by his brother in law, E. E. Wallace. Mrs. E. E. Wallace acted as Miss Wilson's bridesmaid and little Mary Helen Perkins was ringbearer.

Mrs. George Thorburn, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. F. R. Collard, sang "I Love You Truly," and Mrs. Collard played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin."

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lowery entertained the guests and the bridegroom with a reception at their home, where the bride cut and served her wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Apple left immediately following the reception for a honeymoon trip to Dallas.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Warner and sons, Mrs. John R. Mitchell, Dallas, and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Apple of Iowa Park.

NEW STYLE IN HATS FOUND

New Parisian Creator Is Working Marvels

By GEORRE W. HINMAN JR.
(Copyr't, 1928, by Universal Service)

PARIS, Nov. 18.—Something subtly new in hats is what practically everyone in Paris has been hunting for the past six weeks. There has been need of a new note in millinery and now at last it seems apparently to have been found.

Madame Basualdo, formerly Eleanora Hughes, American danseuse, always has been known for her hats. Her appearance at fashionable places the past week showed a succession of creations.

Came also in similarly attractive headgear Mrs. D. Gibson Brulatour, and Mrs. Hewitt Harriman, who was formerly Mrs. Oliver C. Harriman, of New York.

Famous Creator

Today it is known that the creator of these hats was Madame Suzy-Delmaet, who is becoming famous overnight as a moulder of hats most suitable for various heads.

Of course there are only a few models at Madame Suzy's shop and they are not for sale—only to look at. A prospective customer is led past them to a seat in a special chair in a special booth where the study work really begins. While she sits quietly a hat suiting her personality and style is built from unfinished materials.

So Madame Suzy's hats are now running neck and neck in Paris with the creations of Agnes and Reboux. They are intensely individual and never the same for two persons, but are designed suitably for blondes like Madame Basualdo and Mrs Brualtour or a brunette like Mrs Harriman. They accent the line of the eye, while shaped close to the neck behind. The effect is a youthful one—something like a child peering up from beneath a sun bonnet.

In addition to her hats, Mrs. Harriman also attracted attention this week while dining at Ciro's in a red velvet frock cut close around the hips with a knot on the shoulder and a huge bow on the side that depended clear to the ground. Her opera cloak from Thomas was an indescribable color mixture of silver, white, beige and grey. It was lined with brown velvet and had a huge marten collar and cuffs.

Stylish Parade

There were also at Ciro's Mrs. Philip R. Plant, formerly Constance Bennett, in a Chanel red chiffon gown; Commodore Beaumont's wife in green; the Marquise de San Carlo, in black

In the afternoon gatherings of the week the Countess Mejorado was noted in the latest coat from Vionnet, which is different in that its astrakhan collar is separate from the coat itself, being tied in place with beige velvet ribbons.

Meanwhile, although Paris is wet and chilly, the run on beach pyjama suits continues for those fortunate enough to look forward to sunnier climes.

Mrs. William B. Leeds, who was Princess Xenia, is taking with her to Honolulu from Chantal, several of the two color type pyjama suits made popular by her cousin, the Marchioness of Milfordhaven. She is also taking sports dresses with the increasingly popular leather coats.

Sibyl Blair Has Birthday Party

Observing the ninth birthday of their daughter, Sibyl, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Blair entertained with a birthday party at their home, 2212 Jones street, Saturday afternoon when the house was decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. The table decorations aided in carrying out the yellow and white color scheme. Favors were tiny baskets filled with candy.

Guests included Benjamin Blair, Wren Ella White, Betty Lee Burton, Bonnie Jean Albee, Lelia Bulkey, Rosa Mary Tennyson, Wilma Windham, Polly Bulkey, LeGrice Hunter, Leon Blair, Anita Burton, Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. W. W. Windham, Mrs. H. V. Burton, Mrs. H. J. Albee.

Difficult Road Leads to Success On Opera Stage

By LEONARD LIEBLING
Universal Service Musical Critic

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—A brilliant stage. A darkened auditorium Row upon row, tier upon tier, of hushed listeners, fashionables and mere music-lovers.

A beautiful soprano voice sends out tones vibrant and wondrous. The curtain falls. Lights up. Applause. Roars. "Bis." "Bravo." "Bravo." "Bis." Bows. Recalls. Flowers. More bows. More recalls. The last act. Home.

Next morning's news—

Papers. Headlines. Praise. Glory Fame. Concert engagement. Royalty checks from the phonograph companies. Clothes. Jewels. Pictures in the newspaper. Interviews Career a triumph.

Example and Warning

There is another side. Again Rosa Ponselle is acclaimed in "Norma" after demonstrating anew her right to be included in the ranks of the foremost operatic sopranos who have been heard at the Metropolitan.

In manipulation and moodal expression of voice, finish of singing style, and mastery of classical pose, gesture, and action, this deeply accomplished young artist proves what may be achieved in a decade—and no less—of intelligent study, self-criticism, and intensive experience. (Granted, of course, the foundational possession of unusual talent and aptitude.)

Rosa Ponselle is a shining example and an eloquent warning to those lyrical aspirants who assume that enthusiastic ambition, a voice, and a short course of work under a recognized teacher are enough of preparation to guarantee quick success on the operatic stage. The Ponselle training and its application have been lengthy and rigid and that singer will tell you herself that both are still going on unremittingly.

Hard to Discourage

History teaches that only the fittest survive in the profession of opera as in other walks of life. But will that discourage the multitude of eager neophytes in their ardent hope of catapulating from the studio to star roles at the Metropolitan Opera house? Hardly.

Many a girl who cannot sing even a perfect scale or cross the stage properly, or raise and lower her arms gracefully in the style required in opera, hears Ponselle's matchless delivery of the "Casta Diva" aria, matches for magnificent acting as Norma, and probably thinks to herself:

"I could do it, too, if they would only give me the chance."

"They" gave several young American sopranos a chance at the Metropolitan of recent seasons but none of the appearances marked achievements of any outstanding artistic value.

Those confident newcomers may all be Ponselles; but not yet.

Meanwhile hope springs eternal in the breast of every young operatic beginner with a yearning eye on the roles of Rosa.

LOVERS NEED PARENTS' HELP

Family's Attitude Toward Love Cowardly

Parents Who Disclaim All Responsibility for Their Children's Marriages Forget That Boys and Girls Can Choose as Life Partners Only Those With Whom They Are Allowed to Come in Contact

There is nothing more curious and inexplicable than the attitude that most parents take toward their children's marriages. They know that nearly all young people fall in love and get married. They know that marriage is the turning point in the life of a man and woman, and that it either makes them or mars them. They know that the whole happiness and well-being of their sons and daughters depands upon the kind of wives and husbands they get.

Yet they act as if this momentous thing could never happen to their children, and that if it does, it is a mysterious dispensation of Providence, like being struck by lightning with which they have nothing to do.

They accept no responsibility. They wash their hands of the whole matter and seem to consider that they have nothing to do with helping their children to make good marriages, or preventing them from making bad ones. This is a cowardly shirking of a most important duty for parents are under just as much obligation to help their children get well settled in matrimony as they are to help them get well settled in business.

In the older civilizations this fact is recognized and fathers and mothers help their children select their life partners. It is only in this country that a callow girl and boy, whose judgment would not be trusted in any other matter in the world, are permitted to make the biggest decision of all without a word of advice from their parents.

Apparently the whole subject of their children's marriage throws parents into a panic, in which they take leave of their senses and do the stupidest things imaginable. They seem to forget all about their own youth, and the thousand and one influences that led them into making the choice they did of husband or wife.

They forget, for instance, that propinquity is the great matchmaker, and that if you throw any girl and boy together constantly it is almost a certainty that they will fall in love with each other. Or, at any rate, that they will think they are in love with each other long enough to get married.

Yet, ignoring this almost basic matrimonial fact, mothers will invite pretty girl relatives, or girls of different social strata, or girls of different religious faith, to pay them long visits, though they would rather see their sons dead than married to them. Or they will give some handsome, hopeless derelict the run of the house, and then be perjectly horrified when John and Sally or Mary and Bob appear before them and ask for their blessing.

Only the other day a woman told me with tears that her heart was broken because her cherished only daughter persisted in marrying a man who was not only her first cousin, but a semi-invalid and a shiftless ne'er-do-well to whom she had given a home.

Yet what else did she expect when she threw an impressionable and romantic young girl into daily contact with a good-looking and interesting man who appeared to her sympathies by his very weakness.

The mother's alibi when John wants to marry the pretty chambermaid, or Mary elopes with the stunning chauffeur, or Sally casts in her lot with the impecunious student to whom father is giving board to help him through college, is that she never dreamed that they would fall in love with each other. But they nearly always do, and the safe rule is never to allow any young person in your home that you wouldn't be willing to have your child marry.

There are the equally stupid parents who want their children to marry, and who especially want their daughters to marry, but who never give them a chance. There are parents who never give their girls any pretty clothes, and who never take them to any place where they will have the chance of meeting desirable men.

There are even parents who will not permit their daughters to receive their visitors at home, and who, when boys do call, make it so unpleasant for them that they never come back again. There are parents who drive young men away by out-sitting the caller and boring him to tears by monopolizing the conversation and telling him all about their rheumatism, or what they said to the butcher and what the butcher said to them.

Right here is where parents either queer a girl's chances of matrimony or boost them. They can give young men the glad hand. They can make their house gay and cheerful so that boys like to come to it. They can cast sandwiches on the water that will return to them in wedding cake. Many an eligible suitor, who was taken with Maud, never returns after the first call because of the gruff reception father gave him. Many a plain girl catches a good husband because mother made everything so pleasant for him that he was lured into thoughts of matrimony.

Can you think of a more criminal thing than that half of the feathers don't even know the young men whom their daughters are going to marry by sight until Mary or Sally appears holding a sheepish youth by the hand and says: "Father, here is your future son-in-law." Why father ought to be on the job from the time Mary or Sally has her first date and have an accurate line on the morals and manners and business ability of every lad who comes to the house.

If he did this before the girls fell in love, he could get in his work and tell them just what boys were petticoat-chasers, which drank too much, which played the races, and which were shiftless and lazy and many a miserable match would be prevented.

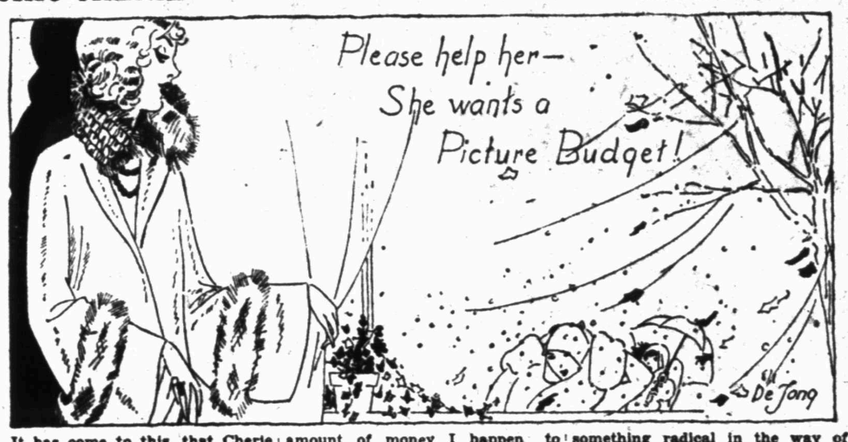

But fathers don't do it. Oh, dear, no. Very often he doesn't even take the trouble to make a single inquiry as to who or what the young man is, or whether there are any mortgages on his past or not. He wouldn't sell a man a hundred-dollar bill of goods without finding out his rating, but he will let his daughter marry a man without knowing a single thing about him.

And when parents try to break off a match, look how stupidly they do it, with what a lack of finesse. Their only weapon seems to be violent opposition, which serves only to hurry up the wedding, whereas by the use of a little diplomacy they could break off every marriage that isn't a real love marriage and that should be broken off.

Of course, in this country, we scorn matchmaking parents, but believe me, we need them.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

It has come to this, that Cherie is going to change her ways. She's going to be economical. Emily is saying. "You've no system. What you need is a budget." Cherie is declaring, "I can dress on any amount of money I happen to have!" "How much have you?" asks Dina. "Two hundred dollars," says Cherie. "If you can buy your winter clothes on $200," says Emily, "I'll double your allowance or do something radical in the way of Christmas presents." We hasten to mention that during this conversation Cherie has been wearing a gray velvet frock with molded tailored lines. Emily a dress of crepe satin and Dina a new satin broche.

Two hundred dollars for winter clothes! Certainly Cherie needs a budget! Of course, that needn't include her underwear—she has plenty of underwear. But dresses, coats, shoes, hats, gloves, purses—how many of these can she buy for $200? She needs help. What's a single, lone female's idea about a budget worth anyway? Expert opinion and friendly help is what she wants. Here, as she stands looking at a wintry landscape, the Great Idea originates. (Her costume? Oh, yes, it's coral velvet trimmed with gray fox). Here begins the picture budget contest! Prizes! Budgets! Pictures! Help Cherie budget and win a prize! Details tomorrow.

American Girl, Heir to Millions, To Wed Young British Peer

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Staff

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Another prominent American girl—member of a notable New York family—will enter the peerage ranks via matrimonial route.

I refer to pretty Ruth Brady, daughter of the late James Cox Brady, who died last year, leaving an estate of more than $75,000,000 to his widow and children.

Mrs. Brady has announced Ruth's betrothal to the Hon. Michael Simon Scott, son of the Viscountess Encombe of Stowell Park, Chedworth, Gloucestshire, and No. 48 Portman Square, London.

The young Britisher, who has been devoted to the Brady heiress for several years, is a grandson of the third earl of Eldon and on his mother's side, is a grandson of the 15th Lord Lovat. His elder brother now is the earl of Eldon.

Other Wedding

Ruth made her formal debut in society at a dance given last December at Pierre's. She is a granddaughter of the late Anthony N Brady, who amassed a fortune of more than $200,000,000 in public utilities, and she is one of the most popular members of the jeunesse doree. Her mother, the first wife of the late James Cox Brady, was before her marriage Elizabeth Jane Hamilyton of Albany. She met a tragic death in a railroad wreck in 1912.

The alliance with the family of the early of Eldon will mark the second time the James Cox Brady clan has been affiliated with the English peerage. Two years after the first Mrs. Brady's death the father of the young woman who has murmured "yes" to the handsome young Britisher married Lady Victoria May Pery, daughter of the earl and countess of Limerick.

As Mrs. Brady, Lady Victoria took a prominent part in the Gotham social activities and her death in 1918 during the influenza epidemic was a great shock to her friends. The third Mrs. Brady, who announced Ruth's engagement, was Miss Helen MacMahon. Since Mrs. Brady's death she has been a devoted mother to her numerous step-children, and is adored by Ruth and her sisters and brothers, Mrs. Frederick Strong Moseley, James Cox Brady Jr., Genevieve and Victoria May Pery Brady.

Ruth has passed much of her time at her late father's extensive estate, Hamilton farms, at Gladstone, N. J. She is adept in the handling of the prize-winning horses owned by the late Mr. Brady and is a devotee of out-of-doors sports. Of course she is a member of the Junior league.

Young Scott is 28 years old and has served in the Scots guards.

The wedding of Miss Brady and the young man whose family is descended from William Scott, a celebrated merchant of Newcastle-on-the-Tyne, will be solemnized on the afternoon of Dec. 31 at Gladstone, N. J.

Star Returns

So quietly did the Countess Dentice di Frasco arrive in New York that only her most intimate friends were aware of her presence on this side of the great pond until the one-time Dorothy Taylor put in an appearance at the opening performance of "This Year of Grace" at the Selwyn theater.

Everyone who is anyone or who pretends to be anyone was in the audience at the premiere of the English musical review, and, of course, Dorothy, arrayed in a shimmering gown of black sequins, held an impromptu reception, both at the play and later at the Conde Nast dance

I fear Dorothy is not watching her calories, Italian viands are undeniably luscious. But what havoc they can work with the waistline of those who refuse to practice girth control!

Dorothy comes to us saddened by the death of one of her closest friends, a young Italian who lost his life in a recent Italian horse show, when his mount crushed him to death before the horrified eyes of Roman society. I fully expect, however, the gaiety that now is reigning in Dorothy's former set to eradicate her sorrow as the weeks go by.

In Rome Dorothy presides over the historic Villa Madama, upon which she has expended a large fortune. The villa, today, ranks with the most palatial residences in the Eternal city an dthere is whisper to the effect that Dorothy, as the result of such a lavish expenditure on the rehabilitation of the place, is in line for the leadership of the smartest Roman dancing set.

I could not help but note at "This Year of Grace" that only three rows of seats separated Dorothy (once the wife of Claude Graham-White, now married to Ethel Levey, ex-wife of George M. Cohan) from Otto H. Kahn.

Wichita's Oil Derricks Given Place At Luncheon For Club President

Oil derricks in glistening and brilliant array will shine forth from a display of silver and white to add a realistic atmosphere to the occasion when members of the Woman's Forum will entertain with a luncheon in honor of Mrs. John F. Sipple, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, at the Woman's Forum clubhouse Tuesday.

When Mrs. Sippel comes to Wichita Falls she will make her initial visit to North Texas. She has been generous with her time and is now making her third trip to Texas within a year. The previous trips, however have taken her to the western and southern parts and it remains for Tuesday's trip to take her into the northen part of Texas. In recognition of this fact, members of the committee are bending their efforts to make the luncheon typical of this section.

Mrs. Sippel comes to Wichita Falls after a busy time in many Texas cities. Following the meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs in Denton, Mrs. Sippel was the guest of the city federation of San Antonio; Saturday she was the honor guest of the clubs of Tyler; Saturday evening a brilliant dinner was given in Dallas honoring the distinguished federation head; Monday noon the Woman's club of Fort Worth will be hostess at luncheon honoring Mrs. Sippel and Mrs. W. R. Potter, state president; Monday evening Mrs. Sippel will be entertained at Bowie with a dinner, followed by a program at which Mrs. Sippel will address the citizens of Bowie. Tuesday morning she will be entertained at breakfast by Mrs. W. R. Potter and will immediately after leave for Wichita Falls to be the guest of the Woman's Forum at luncheon.

The luncheon to be held at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday is open to all members of the Forum and their out-of-town guests. Reservations may be made by calling either Mrs. L. A. Mytinger, 4692, or Mrs. W. P. Lowery at 3861. No reservations will be taken later than 6 o'clock Monday.

Mrs. Potter and Mrs. Sippel will later address the guests.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Nov. 18. (US)—A Los Angeles woman and her husband were divorced just before election, because she told him Herbert Hoover was the better man for president.

Now that he knows how many she has on her side a reconciliation might be brought about. No man should want a quarrel with THAT many people.

In order to wear real diamonds at the opera, Chicago ladies are followed by detectives. Now if the ladies who are obliged to wear paste jewelry would have detectives follow them, no one could tell the difference.

Women who ride in dirigibles are informing other women via the press, how to dress for such trips. Lady Hay told it, in one word "Warm."

A Los Angeles man, suing for divorce, says that his wife was "sunshine and roses" on some days, and "tornadoes and cyclones" on others.

What does he expect to find? He HAD everything.

There are 25 wives in this country paying alimony to husbands whom the courts deemed worthy of it.

Now is the time for all women to come to the aid of all women. If you don't watch a diabolical thing like that, it is likely to become an 18th amendment before we women know it. And you know what you can do about a thing that has become an 18th amendment!

A woman in Chicago buried what she thought was her husband. When he came home, very lively, the undertaker refused to refund her money. He said it was a perfectly good funeral, nothing the matter with it from his viewpoint and no money refunded.

According to her point of view, if a man doesn't stay buried it is NOT a good funeral.

An 18-year-old girl got a movie contract which said that if the producers asked her to do anything that "shocked her senses," she didn't have to do it.

Endless possibilities! All she has to do to have her own way is to be shocked. Not as easy as it sounds.

Foreign women are so much less self conscious and so much more earnest than American women. In a Russian cafe in New York, all the women who eat there are so deadly in earnest. They are almost never silly, and are always so wholeheartedly interested in whoever they happen to be with.

The Russian women say: "You Americans want fairy stories with happy endings, and life isn't like that. It is real—and tragic!"

That's what you don't know, not hurting you. Aren't we the lucky Hoydens!

Iowa Park Class Gives Program

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Nov. 18.—The Pollyanna class of the Methodist Sunday school met with Mrs. Tom W. Carpenter Friday evening.

The first part of the evening was spent in guessing the identity of those present, as all came dressed "tacky" and remained masked until after a visit to the Methodist young people's entertainment, which was in progress at the home of Tom L. Burnett. Judges selected the three most attractive ones in the parade and pinned blue, red and white ribbons on them. Mrs. S. L. Denny was given the blue ribbon. Mrs. Dalton Hill received the red ribbon and was the second to unmask. Mrs. J. L. Cooper was given the white ribbon and was the third to unmask. The judges were R. E. Brewster, J. C. Murphree and Tom L. Burnett.

After returning to Mrs. Carpenter's, plans were made for a Christmas party to be given at the home of Mrs. Will George. Mrs. Dalton Hill, Mrs. R. O. White and Mrs. Will George were appointed as a committee to select the date for the party.

The singing of old songs, playing of games, and making plans for increasing class attendance followed.

Refreshments were served to Mesdames Will George, Hill Anglin, R. O. White, Dalton Hill, M. L. Holt, J. C. Thurber, S. L. Denney, J. H. Hatton, J. L. Cooper, M. L. Smith, Tom W. Carpenter, and Mrs. Elsie Rhea Orr.

WOOER'S THEFT OF GIRL FATAL

Parents Pursue Lovers; One Is Slain

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Nov. 18. (AP)—Wife stealing, still a practice among lovesick swains in the remoter parts of Jugoslavia, has led to a tragedy which stirred the whole nation.

From time immemorial, it was the custom in rural districts, when parents refused to give their consent to marriage of their daughter for the woover to come at night with a party of his friends and forcibly carry off the girl.

Such was the case with Dragomir Filipopovitch, who was madly in love with Milka Jovanovitch of the village of Mislodjina near Obrenavatz.

Meeting with opposition from Milika's father, a rich peasant, Dragomir and his friends went to Jovanovitch's house this week under cover of night, seized the girl and spirted her off the Dragomir's house in a neighboring village. There an elaborate wedding feast had been prepared and many friends gathered to celebrate the elopement.

Milka's father, however, soon discovered the theft of his favorite daughter and, forming a rescue party, set out with his sons and friends to recover the girl. Breaking in on the merriment of the wedding celebration at Dragomir's house, he demanded the return of his daughter.

A free for all battle ensued in which revolvers flashed and knives were drawn. In the melee Bogoljub Jovanovitch, the girl's brother fell dead and six others were badly wounded.

Gin At Hedley Now Rebuilt

Special to The Record News

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 18.—Nail and Beaty, ginners of Memphis, had the misfortune of losing their gin plant at Hedley by fire two weeks ago, but expect to be ginning cotton again Monday morning. The entire plant with the exception of the engine room was a total loss, and the plant has been rebuilt and machinery received and placed within two weeks time, which is a record for erecting a gin plant in this section.

This plant is one of the largest plants in this section, having six 70-saw stands. It is estimated that a little more than half of this year's crop is ginned at this time.

Pope Objects To Women Athletic

ROME, Nov. 18. (US)—Plans for the staging of feminine athletic contests in Rome next winter again have drawn fire from the Vatican.

Details of the forthcoming contests were no sooner made public by Signor Turati, secretary of the Fascist party, than the Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican, has come out attacking the contests.

The church journal, in a strong statement this afternoon, declared: "These contests provide an offense to the Christian manners of our civilization, and to the customs of our people."

The Pope's opposition to feminine participation in competitive games is well known.

Nobody Will Ever Know How Much Wichita Woman Suffered

Is Unable to Describe Experience, She Says Orgatone Brought Her Relief From Gall Bladder Trouble

"Nobody will ever know how I suffered before I got relief by taking Orgatone, because I just can't describe it," said Mrs. I. D. Ritchie, who lives at 100 Second St., Wichita Falls, Texas, and is the wife of the 'finishing man' for the Falls Sash & Door Co., where he has been employed for the last ten years.

"I would not hesitate to recommend Orgatone to anybody who suffers from stomach or gall bladder trouble," continued Mrs. Ritchie, "for I know from my own experience just what it will do in cases of that kind. For several years I suffered terribly after meals on account of gas forming and giving me terrible headaches and dizzy spells. Then, too, I suffered from a severe pain in the region of my gall bladder. I was in such bad shape I could not even eat crackers without them hurting me. I finally got so run down that it was all I could do to keep going. I was so nervous that I never got a good night's rest, and was tired and worn out every morning. I tried many different kinds of medicines and was under treatment, but I just got worse all the time.

"Then I heard about Orgatone and read about people getting such good results from it, so I decided to give it a trial myself. I began to see improvement from the third or fourth day after I started taking it and before I had finished my first bottle I knew that I had found the right medicine at last, for I commenced to feel better rapidly, and I just continued to improve until I am now as well and strong as I ever was in my life. My gall bladder trouble has been completely overcome, and I never suffer the least bit from gas, my nerves seem to be in perfect condition and I sleep just fine every night. In fact, I am enjoying better health than I have for a long time and I give Orgatone sole credit for it all."

Genuine Orgatone is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store, 716 Indiana Ave., under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative who is meeting the public daily and charges nothing to explain his theories on health and hygiene.—Adv.

Parties to Marriage Should Be Chosen By Committee, Says Doctor

LONDON, Nov. 18. (US)—Scientific marriage through selection of the participants to the matrimonial contract by a committee of marital experts, was the sensational proposition put forth by Dr. Bernard Hollander, president of the ethological society, as a means of making marriage less of a lottery.

"Shall the cold voice of science strive to dictate to the old passion of love?" Dr. Hollander asked in an address on "the psychology of matrimony" before the Royal Sanitary institute here. And in his next breath, he answered his own question:

"Assuredly, yes!"

The noted medico argued:

"Marriage is not a question of a lovers' evening out. It is a steady and intimate association day in and day out, which only compatibles can face without disaster."

Success Not Assured

Dr. Hollander admitted that success in marriage could not be guaranteed if selections were made by experts, but added:

"Still, we know enough at least to rob this most popular of all lotteries of its worst lottery characteristics."

Nature, the speaker stated, sets the lead for man in most fields. He explained that modern civilization was merely the development by man of these leads furnished by nature. Only in the matter of marriage did man still allow his primeval instincts to hold sway. Dr. Hollander pointed out:

"That men are not guided in choosing a wife by reason, appropriateness, common-sense, good judgment, or any of the other evidences of sanity that they display in deciding the other problems of life is illustrated daily by the unsuitable matches all about us.

Lily White Fingers

"A man may praise domesticity and economy in theory, yet in practice it is not the girl able to manage a household who gets her hand held, but the idle maiden who has kept her fingers soft and white.

"Everybody is more or less led by the delusion that he can avoid the blunders of other people, and so the stream flows steadily on.

"Even the most perfect man and the loveliest good woman have their defects; but sensible husbands and wives look the other way. Where they remain lovers through life, their conjugal good fortune owes much to a cultivated and happy blindness on both sides."

Marriage Not Divine

Dr. Hollander attacked the theory that marriage was a divine institution, and declared that in practice it was one of the most human institutions in existence. He added that the contracting parties to matrimony were not demi-gods, but thoroughly human beings. He advocated a change in the laws governing matrimony, saying:

"There is much opposition to making divorce easier, but none to the present system of allowing anybody capable of asking for a license, in person or by proxy, to marry. Until marriage is made more difficult and properly regulated, altruism would appear to lie in the direction of making divorce easier.

"If we were to stop the marriage of persons whose family records show a history of serious bodily or mental disease, few people would be allowed to marry. On the other hand, by allowing as we do, chronic lunatics, imbeciles, epileptics and habitual drunkards to get married the contamination of the race has become so great, and the care of the useless off-spring so heavy a charge upon the community, that some effort would be made to stay this curse on the land."

Council Tackles Three Ordinances

An appropriation ordinance, a construction ordinance and an opinion by the city attorney are scheduled for the Monday night meeting of the city council in the Memorial auditorium.

The appropriation ordinance that would benefit the plumbers and also provide for proceedings funds for the recently voted $250,000 issue of municipal bonds. This ordinance came up for first reading last week with an emergency clause on it so that it could be passed on all three readings at that time and thus be made effective at once. Due to the absence of Alderman J. H. Patton this was impossible, however, as no ordinance can be passed on an emergency reading without the full council present. If all the councilmen are present this week, it will be possible to finally pass the bill. Otherwise it can be passed on second reading, and the third and final reading set up for the following week.

A routine ordinance dealing with the construction to be placed on certain words and expressions in existing city ordinances will come up for third reading.

Thelbert Martin, city attorney, will give an opinion to the effect that under present Texas state laws and the charter, lodges are not exempt from taxes.

BISHOP HAY IN SERMON HERE

Evidences of Christianity Theme of Address

"Christianity in not a creed. It is a life, and the evidence of Christianity is found in its fruits of righteousness, peace and joy," declared Bishop Sam R. Hay, D. D., of Houston, in his sermon Sunday morning at the First Methodist Episcopal church.

The speaker took the seventh verse of the twenty-first chapter of Matthew for his text: "Not everyone that sayeth unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the the will of my Father is in Heaven." In those words, he declared, a man should find the motive power for a life which would develop Christian character to its fullest fruition.

Four Great Influences

Four great influences dominated the world, Bishop Hay declared, when Christ came. Severest rule of religious law was exemplified in the Jewish peoples; the energies and intelligence of the Greeks were given to culture; political power was the life of the Romans, and the Phoenicians devoted themselves to world dominance in commerce. Christ brushed aside all these known principles and founded His kingdom upon character, the speaker said.

Bishop Hay arrived in Wichita Falls Saturday afternoon for his first visit to this field since 1926. He was made a bishop in 1922, and since that time the territory over which he presides has been increased to include practically all of the eastern half of Texas, North Texas, and the Pacific states.

Meeting Today

Bishop Hay assisted Dr. Ed R. Barcus, pastor, in the evening services at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday, and will preside in place of Dr. Walter F. Johnson, who is ill, at a meeting of the pastors and stewards of the Wichita Falls district Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the old church building at Tenth street and Lamar avenue. He will leave the city Monday evening for Dallas, where on Tuesday he will preside over a meeting of the presiding elders of the North Texas conference districts.

While in Wichita Falls Bishop Hay has been the guest of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. McKenney and other friends here.

Coolidge's Annual Message to Be Guarded Before Delivery

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18. (US)—Secret service and other agencies of the government will take every precaution to prevent President Coolidge's annual message to congress falling into the hands of brokers and lobbyists before delivery, it was learned at the White House today.

It was revealed that his last message, prepared several days in advance, found its way into unauthorized hands and that Wall street, numerous brokers and lobbyists were thoroughly familiar with its contents long before any member of congress was.

The speech is to be available for distribution several days in advance this year, but every effort made to carefully guard its contents until the president actually begins to speak.

Missions of 21 Baptist Churches Open Cooperative Study Tonight

A co-ordinated plan calling for one week of foreign mission study in each of the 21 Baptist churches comprising the Wichita - Archer counties Baptist association will be inaugurated in Wichita Falls Monday night at 7:30 o'clock, when mission schools for the entire congregations will open in the Southside Baptist, Highland Heights and Lory Memorial Baptist churches.

Classes will meet at the same hour each evening throughout the week, it was said, and will be conducted in each church through teachers selected from its own membership. The movement is under the direction of the Women's Missionary union, with Mrs. T. J. Furniss supervising the local schools, Rev. E. M. McGee, Archer county Baptist missionary in charge of the schools in that county, and Mrs. J. M. Tanner of Electra directing the work in all of Wichita county outside of Wichita Falls.

Not all of the 21 members are beginning their mission study classes this week, it was said, but will do so within a few weeks.

CLUBS TO HEAR CHEST TALKS

16 Speakers to Address Service Groups

Sixteen business men and ministers of Wichita Falls will carry a message of the Community chest drive to all service clubs in four-minute talks this week.

Speakers will appear at the Kiwanis club meeting Monday, at the Advertising and Altrusa clubs Tuesday, at the Lions and Optimist clubs Wednesday, at the Rotary club Thursday, and the Business council Friday.

The list compiled by Sam Spence, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Community chest, includes Luther Hoffman, John Kilgore, Joe Carrigan, Bert King, John B. King, C. C. McDonald, Roy E. Carter, Wayne Holmes, Fred Weeks, Dr. F. A. Bash, Dr. S. S. McKenney, Dr. O. L. Powers, Dr. Nat Grafton, Rabbi S. J. Schwab, Rev. L. S. White, and Rev. W. H. Townsend.

Orange Muskrat Trappers Call Up Pioneer Days

ORANGE, Texas, Nov. 12. (AP)—One of the queerest band of men in the United States has just gone out from here to spend the winter trapping muskrats.

The trappers outfit themselves as did trappers in days of old, for a winter's stay, and are entirely cut off from civilization until the season ends, except for what they take along with them and periodical visits of a tugboat takes supplies to a base.

A tract of 200,000 acres is being trapped by the Orange-Cameron Land company, and a network of canals has been bdiit over the entire tract, and hunting lodges constructed throughout the area.

Scot Journalist And Houston Girl Reporter Clash

HOUSTON, Nov. 18. (AP)—A young woman reporter's enterprise in "covering" the stopover of ten leading British editors in Houston aroused the ire of P. B. M. Roberts, editor of the Scotsman Telegraph, one of their number who expressed strong convictions of the place of women in journalism.

The beauty and charm of the feminine writers seems only to add fuel to the flame as far as the outspoken Scotchman was concerned.

"You have no business here," he burst forth. "I don't believe young women have any place in journalism. You ought to be home minding your children."

"But suppose I don't have any children to mind," was the retort.

"You ought to have," the editor asserted emphatically.

"But suppose again that I'm not married," the reporter countered.

"Well, you ought to be married," the Scotchman persisted.

The demure young woman, still not completely squelched, asked one more question. "Mr. Roberts, don't you have any women on your newspaper?"

"Yes, I have one writing a woman's column; that's all any newspaper ought to have," was the quick response.

U. D. C. Board To Meet On Dec. 3

WACO, Texas, Nov. 18. (AP)—The executive board, Texas chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, has been called to meet here Dec. 3 preliminary to the state convention of the organization, Dec. 4-6.

Senator-elect Tom Connally has accepted an invitation to address the Daughters' meeting at which time he will be given a cross of military service by the Mary West chapter of Waco. Dr. Zachery Thompson Scott of Austin also will be given a cross, which signifies that as a descendant of a Confederate veteran the recipient saw service in the world war.

Memorial services during the convention will be observed for Felix H. Robertson, last surviving general of the Confederate army, who died recently and for the late Gen. J. C. Foster of Houston.

MOTHER FINDS LONG LOST SON

Pair Were Neighbors And Didn't Know It

FALLS CITY, Neb., Nov. 18. (AP)—A mother's love for her son, enduring through two decades since she left him, has revealed here that the two for several months have been living within a mile of each other.

Pierce Hoppe had for years believed his mother dead. But Wednesday night a telephone call came to Mrs. Ella Hoppe of this city the operator told her Los Angeles was calling.

Later a voice asked: "Is Grandma Hoppe still alive?"

"Yes," Mrs. Hoppe replied.

"She was an old lady when I left Falls City 20 years ago. May I speak to her?"

"She is in Los Angeles. Who is this?"

"This is Mrs. Frank Hoppe. Is my son, Pierce, still alive?"

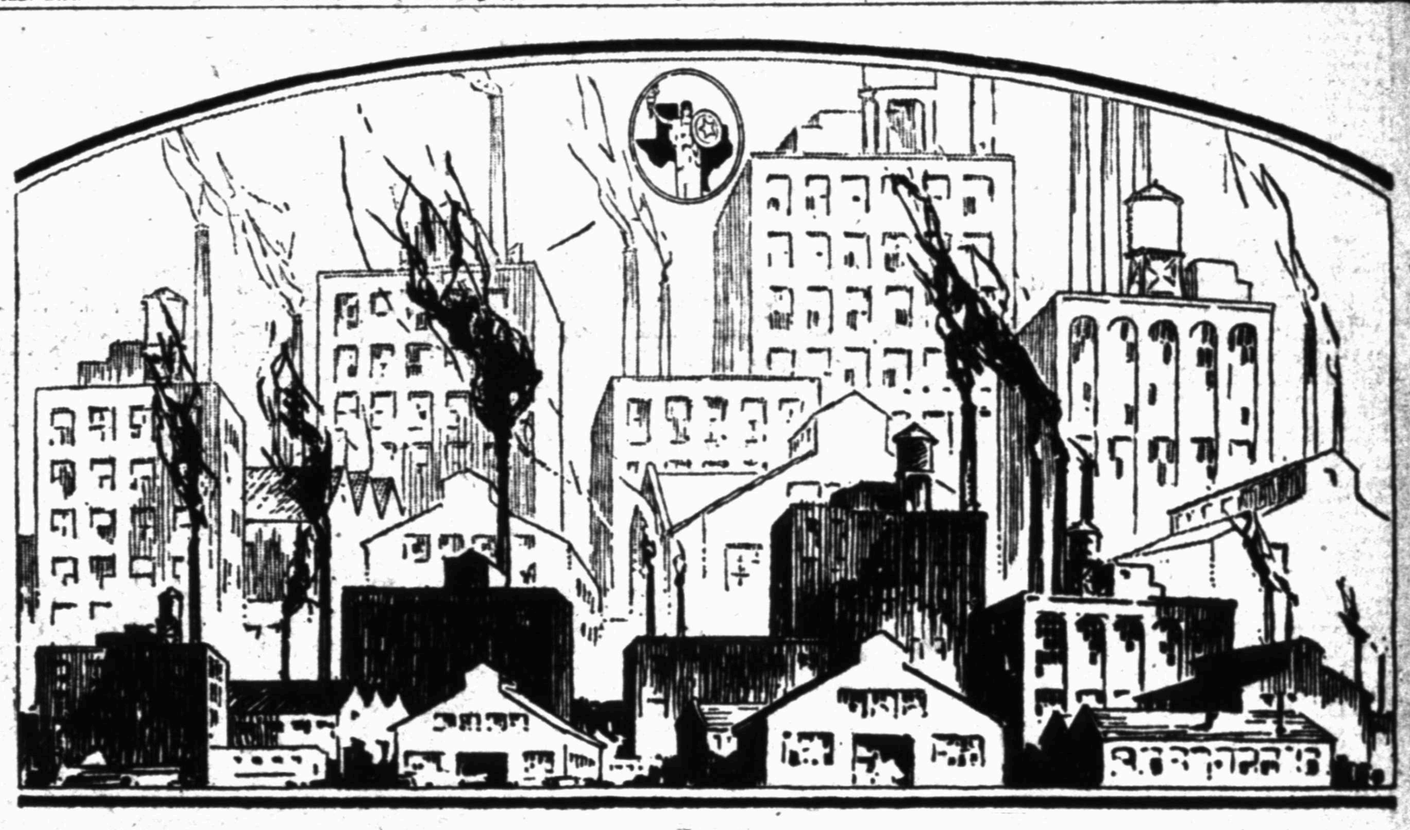

"But Pierce's mother has been dead for more than 20 years," said Mrs. Ella Hoppe.

But the caller on the western coast was positive. She was told that her son, too, was in Los Angeles, having gone there three months ago. And she was given the address.

And so it developed that mother and son were not so far apart. Pierce was born here 22 years ago. His mother deserted home when he was an infant, and later he was taken into his grandmother's home where he grew to manhood. He is an artist. The husband of the Los Angeles woman, Frank Hoppe, still lives here. Grandmother Hoppe, in California for the winter, is 87.

TEXAS LIFE INSURANCE HELPS TEXAS INDUSTRIES TO GROW

For a quarter century, Industry has grown twice as fast in Texas as in the rest of the United States. This is a significant fact, for Texas Insurance has grown fast, too. (From $137,355,134 in force in 1900 to $2,164,923,430 in 1927.) So the two have grown hand in hand, Insurance helping Industry by providing funds, and Industry helping Insurance by attracting population and policy holders.

At the beginning of the twentieth century, the value of Texas manufactured products was only 92 million dollars.

Now, Texas industry makes a billion dollars worth of goods every year!

What is back of this? Good management—hard work—sound judgment—yes. But one of the most important factors in the growth of Texas industry is adequate financing—the providing of new money for expansion.

Here the Texas Life Insurance Companies are playing a leading part, for these companies invest practically all of their funds in Texas. The Robertson law requires them only to invest 75% of their legal reserves on business written in Texas. But the Texas companies do far more than this. These companies are Of, By and For Texas! They are interested in its growth, and we all know that as the community and its industries progress, individuals prosper.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—One of the unique sights upon Fifth avenue, is the Wendell house at Thirty-ninth street. A plain structure with a Spartan simplicity about it, the casual passer-by wonders what old building it might be. And the vacant lot adjoining it. How did that remain unoccupied? Look over the top of the high board fence, and see a grass-grown lot with a tree or two and—yes, even a wash line. You might see the same thing in thousands of cities throughout the country. But this yard, as it is called, has the reputation of being one of the most expensive of its kind on record. Old Gottlieb Wendell, descendent of those other Wendells, who bought Fifth avenue property, years ago—along with other clever New Yorkers, refused to sell it, because he needed the ground for his dog to skip around in. Pretty fine piece of ground to keep for such purposes, don't you think? Mr. Wendell is dead now, but his sisters live on, in the red brick house—undisturbed by the roar of traffic and clanging noise of riveters, always going on about their corner place. Two descendents of the early house of Wendell, having married into the English aristocracy, are respectively—the Countess of Carnarvon—the Carnarvons having taken part in the finding of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen—and the Countess of Galloway.

Rainy Nights on the Streets

Have you ever walked down the Bowery, upon a cold, rainy night? Have you noticed the murky stream of water, dripping from old leaders, and broken caves of rickety buildings? Heard the splashing of water from motor cars, rushing through street puddles, and spattering the frayed and tattered clothing of some unfortunate wayfarer? Have you turned to Second avenue, and there watched the rumbling trains, rushing overhead, while water seems to rain, brown and dirty, from the tracks of the "L." Have you watched a woman shabbily gotten up, tugging some tiny youngster by the hand, trying to escape a too severe dreching, by standing in the doorway of some shop? It may be an empty store, with its windows hung with old posters. They advertise some motion picture production of several months past. Emptiness—personified. Or maybe it's a plumber's shop. Old brass faucets, a cracked wash basin—once smooth and white, some old bits of pipe, and a rusty old charcoal burner, may be lying loose about the place—now locked for the night. Maybe a bluecoat, bundled in a great raincoat, with cap drawn down over his eyes, stands within the shadow of the shop. The woman shivers, with the cold, while her little child huddles closer to her. They scan the sky—still darkly clouded. Not a friendly star in sight. Even the moon man has taken refuge behind the hazy atmosphere. At the corner, there may be a drug store. Its green and red lighted vials of immense size, cast a reflection upon the wet pavement and walk. Along comes a man—staggeringly he makes his way along the street. Rambling to himself, he pierces his half-audible remarks with a violent oath or two. Now he shakes a first—at some imaginary adversary. The rain keeps up. How it beats against the windows of the shops! An old woman, with a shawl, drawn over her head, disappears in to a hallway. Now the young mother and child try their luck at skipping between the raindrops. They must be drenched! Finally the clanging of an ambulance bell is heard. Rushing by, the car leaves us the sight of a white-clad interne, sitting upon its rear end. What a night—for a suicide!

The woman who waits long beyond the point agreed upon for an appointment is less patient with one of her own sex than she is with a man, and the anger manifested at such times (to the amusement of those who stand near) always is vented upon another woman.

"They never scold the men," is the cynical observation of a man who has operated a newsstand in the subway for many years, "unless they are married to them, but on the contrary, if a man has to wait very long he gives vent to his wrath, if married or single. He is the more impatient of the two, walking back and forth, like a caged lion, and growing more irritated with every passing moment. Women are always more patient. They will find something to pass the time in the display of magazines, in watching other passengers and in reading the subway advertisements.

"Occasionally I feel as if I would like to punch a man's head. It is when he scolds his wife for being late and I overhear her excuse that she couldn't come till the babies had been put to bed. I find New Yorkers are more patient when delayed by a crowd than when delayed by one individual."

Wants American Wife

Paavo Nurmi, who says he is through with the track, plans a business trip to America soon and says he hopes to get an American wife on this jaunt.

Youth's Foolishness

A GIRL and a boy, students at Oberlin college, were sauntering along a railroad track on the edge of their college town the other evening. A train appeared in the distance. The boy suggested that they sit on the track in front of the approaching train and see who dared stay there the longest before jumping out of the way. The girl agreed.

It ended just as you would suppose. The girl, eager to prove her daring, stayed too long—and got hit. She is now in a hospital with a broken collar bone, several broken ribs and some severe bruises. And she and the young man, possibly, feel that they have learned something.

A college freshman is more or less expected to be somewhat silly. As a general thing, the freshman lives up to this expectation admirably. But a stunt like this one at Oberlin, where a boy and girl out of sheer bravado undertook a nonsensical prank that nearly cost the girl her life, seems a bit more than we have any right to risk.

However, nothing in particular is to be gained by meditating that young people are foolish. They are, always have been and always will be. This foolishness does not arise from any mental incapacity; it is simply the inevitable result of high spirits and excess energy confronting a world that is unknown, testing it and trying to see how far fortune can be pushed.

Very often this experimentation takes ludicrous, even tragic forms. But the spirit back of it, for all that, is never ludicrous. A girl who sits on a railroad track to see how long she dare wait before jumping out out of the way of a train may be risking her life and behaving like a simpleton; nevertheless, that same girl, actuated by the same sort of restless curiosity and love of excitement, is one of the reasons why we older ones look on the world's future with hope.

Suppose that you set out to recruit a host of daring souls to join you in some dangerous enterprise—a "lost hope" revolution, a desperate attack on entrenched injustice and wrong. Would you seek your recruits from the sensible, mature people? Never in the world! You would go to the youngsters—to the foolish, cracked-brained kids who get into trouble because they don't know how to dodge world's pitfalls.

And they would follow you! The same eagerness and lack of balance that drives them to do laughable, silly things would make them follow to any kind of death you directed, if only you gave them a flag and a slogan. The battlefields of the world have been littered with their bodies since wars began.

Youngsters do foolish things, as in this case at Oberlin. But the tragedy of the whole thing is that they eventually get sensible, mature—and very, very cautious.

Eternal Vigilance

ETERNAL vigilance, according to the old proverb, is the price of safety. The modern business man has recast that proverb to say that eternal improvement is the price of business and inustrial prosperity.

Few industries in the country are more settled and established than the great steel industry. Yet W. M. Wood, president of the American Institute of Steel Construction, told that organization, in its recent convention at Biloxi, Miss., that it must not be satisfied with its position, but must constantly seek progress and improvement.

"The steel industry," he said, "is looked upon as an essential industry and as such its leaders have for years felt that no action for the development of the industry need be taken; but little if any effort need be exerted by them for the development of the industry, with the exception of that taken along mechanical lines. In the vital problems of sales and distribution and publicity, the industry as a whole has seemed to be where it was a generation ago."

The Vote in Nicaragua

POSSIBLY you didn't notice it, what with the news of our own election filling the papers; but that much talked-of Nicaraguan election was finally held, and Moncada, the liberal candidate, was overwhelmingly elected.

If you will let your memory roam back over a little period, you may recall that Moncada was the man whom the revolutionists sought to make president by force of arms. We sent our marines down there, squelched the revolution, saw a number of our young men killed, killed a larger number of Nicaraguans, spent a good deal of money, incurred considerable ill will in various places—and Moncada gets the presidency anyway. Diaz, whose regime was preserved by our intervention, goes out.

Someone doubtless feels very proud of this bit of statesmanship. But we can't imagine just who it is.

COLLIN TO HAVE RECORD CROP

More than 59,000 bales of cotton have already been ginned of the 1928 crop. This is according to figures released by the government through I. R. Dillow, local federal crop production reporter. With less than 11,000 bales to go, it appears pretty certain that Collin county will produce 70,000 bales this year. This is an estimate of many cotton men and others familiar with local farming conditions.

TALK OF REORGANIZATION

There are lots of folks telling these days how they are going to reorganize the Democratic party, including some who were very active in fighting the party during the recent election. The Leader is not one of those who believe in keeping election issues alive after they have been settled by a vote of the people, nor in seeking to estrange those who still want to be considered members of the party. But it is one of those who believe that it is not the province of bolters to "reorganize" the party they have deserted and sought to destroy.

GOOD TIME FOR TRADE TRIP

The time of year for the celebration of the opening of the Denver South Plains railway could not have been more fortunate.

A trip by automobile paralleling the new line made yesterday left a most favorable impression of rich fields at harvest time. On every hand was seen the fruit of a season of toil, and in the towns there was bustling activity and reports of good returns from farm lands.

The picture, as a whole, is that of a happy, prosperous region, which now awaits but the actual operation of its new railroad outlet to touch off the spark which will start a period of expansion unequalled in the history of Texas or the Southwest.

The INN of the HAWK and RAVEN

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

(Copyright, 1927, Dodd Mead & Co.) (Copyright, 1928, Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York)

During the summer, Jonifer takes Gerane and his nephew, Peter, to Edelweiss on a pleasure jaunt. They are disguised as gypsies. While there, they see Starcourt acting as the escort of the princess, on her return to the palace. One look at Gerane's face, when she sees Starcourt, tells Jonifer that she loves him. Peter arrives at the same conclusion, and is none too pleased, for he secretly loves Gerane. However he knows he can never marry her, for not only was his father, Jonifer's half-brother, of illegitimate birth, but he himself was born out of wedlock. Jonifer, being the legitimate descendant of the Duke of Droon, who was made an outlaw, many, many years ago, after his attempt to seize the throne, exercises his prerogatives as head of the family in a way that the son of his deceased illegitimate half-brother often finds distasteful. Peter instantly becomes jealous of Starcourt, who, according to a spectator, is about to undertake the extermination of the bandits in the Forest of Droon and has been made a colonel, for he has voluntarily undertaken the task.

The next morning they left the city shortly after daybreak, joining a small troop of real gypsies encamped across the river from the West Gate. An hour or two later the whole party was on the road, moving northward in their gaudy caravans.

And now it was Jonifer who was gloomy and preoccupied. Gerane was gay and sprightly. She sat beside Peter, who drove the wagon, and chatted brightly with him, notwithstanding his brief, surly responses to her comments on the glory of the morning, the beauty of the spring landscape, the welcome freshness of the air, after the stuffy night in the lodging-house, and all manner of things that did not in the least interest him.

Jonifer, on horseback, was riding a short distance ahead of their van, which was well to the front of the little cavalcade of eight or ten wagons. Abruptly and out of a clear sky, as it were, Peter turned to Gerane and said:

"I may as well tell you, Gerane, that I am going to kill that fellow Starcourt the next time we meet on the Highway."

She uttered a silvery little laugh. He scowled. Then she cried, ironically:

"Do! We will then make a knight of you for ridding the King's Highway of its most dangerous character."

"It is nothing to laugh about," he grumbled.

"Indeed, it isn't," she agreed, affecting penitence. "I laughed, because it struck me as funny, that's all. Pray forgive me."

"Funny?"

"Well, wouldn't it be funny, if he were to go mooning about the Highway without a gun of his own, especially when he is supposed to be looking for deadly enemies?"

"Nevertheless, I shall kill him," said Peter, baring his teeth in a snarling grin.

"Brave Peter!" she exclaimed, much too airily for him to feel complimented.

He muttered something under his breath and then spat disgustedly over the wheel.

On the second night the three adventurers returned to the valley, having parted company with their gypsy friends near Ganlook, where they took to their horses and rode off into the depths of the forest. As soon as Jonifer was alone with Matilda he announced:

"It is all as clear as day to me now. She is in love."

"And why not, Jonifer? She is of an age when girls experience very little difficulty in falling in love. Are you surprised?"

He reached with nervous finger for the end of his mustache, searched the air vainly, for a second or two, and then remembered. He rubbed his chin, instead.

"But you would never guess who it is that—"

"The young captain you tied to a tree on her last birthday and left for the wolves to devour."

"Now, by all the—" began Jonifer, astonished. His brow grew black and thunderous. "So she has told you all this, has she? She made a confidante of you, instead of coming to me with—"

"Calm yourself, Jonifer. She has told me nothing. I have a woman's eyes. You are the first person she has told, so console yourself."

"But—but, she has not told me," he blurted out. "As a matter of fact, she—ah—so far as I know, she hasn't told anybody."

"Ah, then you may be wrong."

"I am not wrong," he exclaimed. "She is in love and with that—that dragoon."

"Then why should you worry? Nothing can come of it. He does not know that she exists. He never will know. So there is the end of it, Jonifer. She will have to content herself—and you, too, I've no doubt—with one of her own kind. I mean one of your excellent young robbers."

Jonifer's eyes bulged. "I should see her dead before anything like that—".

"Worse things could happen to her than being a spinster," broke in Matilde, drily.

"... It is high time you showed yo urself to be a man. No wonder Gerane looks past you and sees only this sweetfaced officer...."

"My—my Gerane a spinster? It—why, woman, it would not be natural. Providence would never allow such a thing to happen to so beautiful a girl. It is impossible!"

"What do you intend to do about it? That is the question."

Gerane's father seemed, for a moment or so, to be choking. Then he said:

"Do about it? Do about it? Why confound me, woman, there is but one thing for me to do about it. If she has set her heart on having this young man for a husband—I—why, she shall have him,—and that is all there is to be said on the question."

She smiled. "The young man has nothing to say about it, I perceive."

"That remains to be seen," said he, setting his jaw.

"For all you know, he may be married."

"He is not married. I made inquiries 'Tis true, there is some talk of his being interested in the daughter of a nobleman in Edelweiss, but that is of small consequence, once he has been thrown with Gerane. There is not a man alive who can resist her charms. But that is not what is troubling me. The time has come for my regular pilgrimage to Moscow. I shall be absent for a fortnight or three weeks, which means that nothing can be done in Gerane's case until late in June. I hate delays."

"What is it that you contemplate?"

He eyed her darkly. "You will have an answer to that question in good time, Matilde," was his reply.

Meanwhile, Peter was discussing the situation with his mother and brothers, but from an entirely different angle. Their house lay some distance apart from the huddle of cots that, for want of a better name, might be described as a village. It was located on the slope at the head of the valley. Jonifer's father had seen fit to establish his lowly mistress in a house remote from the other homes. Not only was his illegitimate son born in that poor habitation, but he was compelled to abide therein with his mother, up to the time of her death, and it was here that he took his own woodland maid to live. His three sons were born there. When the eldest, Peter, was about seven years of age, he was killed by the soldiers. Since that time, the little family of four had continued to make their home in this isolated house, presided over by the slatternly, shrewish, and, at all times, malevolent woman, known by the name of Ranya Brutz, mother of the sons of Joseph, who himself had been denied a surname by his own father.

"You are as much entitled to call yourself the descendant of a royal duke as is this girl of Jonifer's," she was saying fiercely to Peter, who, having recounted his experiences of the past four days, was glowering at his untouched food on the supper table. His younger brother's, eating voraciously, were scowling.

"Have done, mother," blurted out young Matthew.

"We are mongrels," said Joseph succinctly.

"Silence! Speak when you are spoken to—and, mind you, have a care how you put shame upon your mother. Have I not—"

"Shame? Ha! And who first put shame upon you and—all of us?" sneered Joseph, banging the board with his first. "The thrice accursed grandson of your royal duke. I am sorry to have his blood in my veins."

"It is as good as the blood in Gerane's—" began Ranya Brutz shrilly.

"Leave Gerane out of this," snarled Peter, looking up.

"Oh! So yelps another mongrel, eh? You were barking, and snapping, a while ago, now you are whining. By my soul, you are a mongrel cur, too—"

"She is as far above us as the stars above the earth," said Peter. "You cannot draw her down to our level by charging that we have the same grandfather."

For ten minutes Ranya Brutz reviled and excoriated her three sons, who took it all without a murmur, merely glowering as they puffed at their pipes.

"And you, Peter Davos, what kind of a man are—"

"My name is not Davos," interrupted Peter harshly.

"What kind of a man are you," she went on, "to sit back and let this Jonifer braggart wipe his feet on you? It is high time you showed yourself to be a man. No wonder Gerane looks past you and sees only this sweet-faced officer. Prove to her that you are a man. Show her that you are her master. She will come to heel in no time at all, if you—"

Peter laughed outright, but bitterly.

"Oh, she would, eh? Little you know about her. There is only one way for me to get Gerane, and that is to take her against her will and break her and—"

"And you cannot do that while Uncle Jonifer is lord and master here," broke in Joseph. "You will have to tear down the house of Davos, just as our common great-great grandsire tried to tear down the house of Ganlook—and he failed."

"He did not have two strong, healthy brothers to help him," said Peter, meaningly, after a long silence.

"The worm has started to turn," said Ranya Brutz.

STOCK-A-DAY

INDEPENDENT OIL & GAS CO.

Five-Year Record

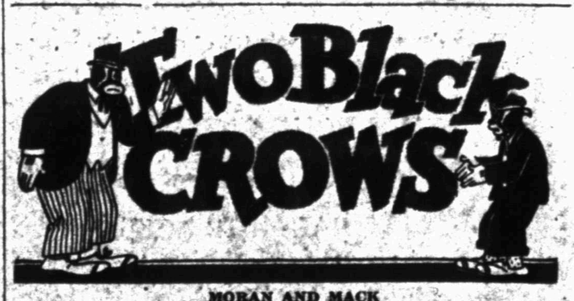

The Independent Oil and Gas company was formed in 1919 and owns a number of subsidaries among which is the Manhattan Oil company which it controls through stock holdings. The acquisition of Manhattan strengthened the Independent's position as it gave it additional pipelines, refineries and retail marketing facilities.

Independent before the acquisition of Manhattan owned 158 producing leases covering 14,672 acres and 1,695 undeveloped leases on 249,583 acres of oil land in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. Crude production is estimated at 47,000 barrels daily. Control of Manhattan carried with it a 7,000-barrel skimming plant at Kansas City and two natural gasoline plants. The Independent company also has a refinery at Okmulgee, Okla., and it now controls 493 miles of pipeline, with tank cars and other equipment.

Gross revenues have increased each year since 1923 to a gross for 1927 of $12,938,559. Net for 1927 amounted to $2,313,432 or $4.56 a share. This compared with $2,975,044 or $5.95 a share in 1926. In the first quarter of 1928 there was a loss of $419,000 but a net of $112,000 in the second quarter.

Funded debt totals $9,628,650. Capital stock outstanding consists of 957,000 shares of no par common. On the old capitalization, dividends were paid at varying rates in cash or stock or both. On the no par shares 25 cents a quarter was paid from 1924 to July, 1928 when the rate was raised to 37½ cents. As of June 30, 1928 the consolidated balance sheet revealed current assets totaling $8,922,166, current liabilities of $3,525,198 and net working capital of $3,396,968. Book value of the stock amounted to $16.47 a share.

MORAN AND MACK

Moran: Say, Big Boy, how come Mr. Hoovah visits South America on a BATTLESHIP?
Mack: He's gonna show 'em how PEACEFUL we is.
Moran: Does he HAVE to take a battleship along?
Mack: ALL them diplomats is got battleboats. Things is changed considerable.
Mack: Well, in them good old days, the diplomats straightened out the trouble what the gunboats started. Now, the diplomats START the fuss and the navy brings them back.
Moran: Is Mr. Hoovah gonna have turkey on that boat?
Mack: Say, Silly, I wish you'd stop talking turkey. You's got the most aggravated case of unrequited affection I ever SEE. I don't hear them turkeys talking about you.
Moran: What's this unrequited affliction business?
Mack: Well, you meet a girl and she's PRETTY. Do you FOLLOW me?
Moran: Go ahead. I'm FOLLOWING you.
Mack: She's winking at you and she's got a very pretty figure. Do you FOLLOW me?
Moran: No, sir. I'm following the girl now.
Mack: Well, THAT'S unrequited affection. Because she's gotta date with ME.

Brownwood Center Of Pecan Growers' Ass'n

BROWNWOOD, Texas, Nov. 18. (UP)—Brownwood became the birthplace of a new organization when pecan growers from all over West Texas voted to formulate the West Texas Pecan Growers association.

A board of directors consisting of H. G. Lucas, Brownwood, president of the Texas Farm bureau; E. H. Norris, San Saba; Brown F. Lee, San Angelo; L. E. Creswell, Coleman; D. F. Moore, Bend; Olam Simms, Paint Rock, and Greenwelge of Castwell, has been selected.

In a meeting to be held in the near future members of the board are to select the offices of president, vice president and secretary-treasurer from among themselves, according to A. W. Woodruff, San Saba, leader in the organization.

THE REASON WHY

Indifferent world, of icy eye,
You never ask the reason why
We err; it seems you only seek
To ostracize, condemn, and eke
An icy vengeance called contempt,
From which no mortal is exempt.

Whene'er the story is unfuried,
I'm part of what I call the world,
And I presume I give my share
Of ridicule, and icy stare.

The size of errors humans make
Could be diminished, would we take
The time to warm our icy eye,
And time to find the "reason why."

Fractures and Broken Bones

Fractures of broken bones should always be treated by a doctor or surgeon, but as usually neither is at hand at the time of the accident, it is important that the layman know how to recognize a broken bone and how to set it that the injured person may be transported safely.

A broken bone may be recognized by the presence of severe pain and deformity of the part from its normal shape, being sometimes bent where no bend should be. The muscles about a broken bone usually contract, making it hard or impossible for the injured person to move the part. In addition there may be a grating, crepitous sound as the result of the two ends of the broken bone rubbing together, or a broken piece of bone may actually appear through the skin.

Unless the doctor has the necessary x-ray equipment, he has to trust to his sense of touch for restoring the bones to the proper position, but because the shape of some of the bones is not always easily distinguished, and because some patients have so much flesh the latter is not always an accurate method. Whenever it is possible doctors employ the x-ray. With this method the exact position and shape of the break can be easily ascertained. It is even possible to observe cracks or splits in the bone that could not possibly be determined with the fingers. With the use of the x-ray, too, the doctor can see if he has succeeded in restoring the bone to its proper place.

There are five general types of fractures: the incomplete or "greenstick" fracture, where some of the bone fibres have been broken but most of them merely bent; the complete fracture, where the bone is broken in two; the compound fracture where the bone is not only broken but a part sticks out through the skin; the impacted fracture where the two ends of the bone are driven into each other, and the comminuted fracture where the bone is shattered into small pieces.

The first handling of the injured person is most important because if one is not careful a simple fracture may become a very serious compound fracture which is much more dangerous and hard to heal.

The broken ends of bones are sharp and the muscles being contracted, tend to pull them past each other so that arteries, veins or nerves may be cut by any movement.

A splint should be applied as soon as possible to the sides of the fracture lengthwise of the injured bone. This will prevent a movement of the break during the transportation of the injured person to a place where he can be cared for.

Splints may consist of any stiff material such as strips of wood, small branches or bundles of twigs, umbrellas, rolled up cardboard, etc. The splints should extend for some distance above and below the broken bone to make a good support. The type of splint varies according to the position of the fracture and one has to exercise one's ingenuity in most cases. For instance, in the rib fractures the best splint consists of long stripe of adhesive applied to the skin running parallel to the ribs, and in a fracture of the foot, the best splint is to place the foot on a pillow and tie the pillow around the foot with rope or heavy cord.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sweating Feet

Question: Vexed Reader asks—"What causes sweating of the feet at the least exertion and dryness of the mouth immediately after lunch and dinner?"

Answer: Excessive sweating of the feet may be caused from tight fitting shoes or from not washing the feet often enough. Those who are toxic are liable to sweat excessively at times. The shoes should be changed frequently and allowed to dry out thoroughly before being used again. Dryness of the mouth come from some inflammatory condition present in your alimentary canal.

Whisky and Diabetes

Question: Mrs. W. E. B. writes—"We have a friend who is suffering from diabetes. He has been told to drink whisky as it destroys the sugar. I have no faith in whisky so would like your opinion on this subject."

Answer: I consider the whisky treatment for diabetes to be fundamentally unsound in principle although it is used by a great many diabetic specialists. Liquor undoubtedly stimulates the flow of digestive juice with some people and this may have an effect upon the secretion of pancreatic fluid which the body uses in the digestion of starchy foods, but as I have demonstrated conclusively that starches and sugars are unnecessary for the human body, it is the height of folly for any diabetic to use any drug or remedy to promote the digestion of the carbohydrates when the best and the simplest plan is to live mostly on proteins, non-starchy vegetables and fruits. Of course, all vegetables contain some starch, and all fruits contain sugar, but the diabetic can usually convert this small amount of starch and sugar with the need of drugs or stimulates.

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By SOPHIE TUCKER

Sophie Tucker's right name is Sophie Abuza. She was born in Hartford, Conn., where her mother ran a boarding house. Started her career as a backroom canary, knocking thirty frolics per evening and as many bucks per week. She married a local, was divorced, and later, after she was a success in a big way, married Mr. Frank Westphal, piano player. Soph staked him to a garage business, which she still has left over, though she lost Frank, who is now a master-of-couvert-charge in a Broadway whoopee place.

Sophie Tucker

"One day," she told me, "I went to visit a friend who has a little girl. The youngster was sobbing as if her tender heart would break.

"'What's the matter, sweetheart?' I inquired. 'You mustn't cry like that—it'll make your eyes ugly.'

"'But the doctor said I had to go to the hospital,' she wailed.

"'She's going to have her tonsils out,' her mother whispered to me.

"I turned to the child. 'Why, it's going to be all right, dear—every one goes to the hospital sometimes in his life. It's an awfully nice place to go; really it is!'

"The kid continued her crying. Finally she sobbed, 'The old hospital may be all right, but I don't want a baby—I want a Shetland pony!'"

Alarm Bell at T. C. U. Is As Old As School

FORT WORTH, Nov. 18. (UP)—The bell that rings to awaken the girls at Texas Christian university is as old as the school itself. The bell was used back in the '70s and '80s at Thorp Spring, taken to Waco when the school was moved there in 1895, and was brought to Fort Worth in 1910 when the school was moved again.

One Halloween afternoon a few years ago the bell disappeared. Search as she might, Mrs. Sadie Beckham, supervisor of girls at T. C. U., could not find the bell. About 30 or 40 of the girls had been invited to a Halloween party in Fort Worth, and Mrs. Beckham calmly announced that no one would go to the party until the bell was returned. By the time every one was ready to go to the party the bell was standing it its place on my desk," Mrs. Beckham relates.

"One of the reasons why the bell is disliked by some of the girls," explains Mrs. Beckham, "is because it brings them in from their dates to study hour each evening. It is so hard for them to leave."

Girls who have finished at T. C. U. and return for a visit invariably ask about the bell. One girl, recently back at T. C. U. for a visit, told Mrs. Beckham, "I didn't think I would ever live to see the day when I would be glad to hear that bell ringing, but I am now."

AGGIES ONLY OBSTACLE BETWEEN TEXAS AND CHAMPIONSHIP

ARKANSAS HAS TITLE CHANCE

Steer Defeat Would Give Honors to Porkers

(By The Associated Press)

Texas university probably sewed up the Southwest conference flag Saturday by whipping the Texas Christian Horned Frogs, 6 to 9, while the Baylor Bears were slamming the door in the collective faces of the bewildered Southern Methodist university Mustangs, 2 to 0.

All the big Orange eleven has to do now is conquer the Texas Aggies in their annual Thanksgiving day setto at Austin. Barring an upset they are favored to do that little thing. The unforseen shifting of fortunes in the last fortnight that has plunged the intrepid Southern Methodists from the top of the conference ladder down into the company of less favored teams has cast a pall of gloom over the Dallas institution. Thirteen regulars of this year's Mustang machine will get their portfolios next spring. They thought they were "due."

The determined climb of Coach Clyde Littlefield's Longhorns to the conference leadership, however, was richly deserved, even if they were helped along by the Baylor Bears. As in previous victories this year, there was nothing spectacular about the Steers' win over the Horned Frogs Saturday. It was a bitter struggle, with Captain Rufus King of the Longhorns barging over from the one-foot line for what proved to be the winning touchdown in the second quarter. The Christians flared brilliantly in the early stages but soon were beat down and routed by the powerful Orange machine. Grubbs, Frog sopohomore back, flashed sporadically.

Reed Is S. M. U. "Goat"

Many lines will be written anent the play that enabled the scrapping Baylor team to beat out the Mustangs by the smallest of margins. It happened shortly before the final gun, after a scoreless tie had seemed almost a certainty. Sammy Reed, Pony quarterback, crippled and desperate of purpose, tried to pass from behind his own goal line on first down and the play was smeared by a swarm of Bear linesmen. Two points.

Reed doubtless will be taken to task by many critics for bungling the play, or for calling it in the first place. The penalty for failure.

Statistics of the game tended to show the Mustangs had something the best of it outside that final and fatal play. They chalked up 14 first downs, mostly by the aerial route, to four for the Bears.

In addition to marking the passing of the Mustangs from the conference race, the game probably saw the final appearance of Redman Hume, greatest of southwest backfielders, on the gridiron. Vexed at the inability of his team to score against the Bears, Coach Morrison took a chance and sent in his crippled ace. Hume lasted two plays and collapsed. There was slight chance, they said, of his ankle healing sufficiently to let him play against the Texas Christians Thanksgiving day.

Aggies Out of Cellar

The Aggies climbed out of the conference cellar by knocking over the Rice Owls, 19 to 0, at College Station. A dozen accurately thrown passes provided the Aggies' punch. They couldn't do much at penetrating the Owl forward wall. The Farmers' newly developed aerial attack might give the favored Longhorns trouble Thanksgiving day.

Arknasas enjoyed a fine large afternoon against the Missouri Miners at Fayetteville. With their giant ram, Bevo Beavers, leading the way through the mud, they ran up 45 points to six for the Miners. Although the Razorbacks have not played a conference opponent in almost a month they find themselves occupying second position. Should Texas and S. M. U. both meet defeat Turkey day the Porkers would win the championship. Strange things have happened. Southwest conference standing:

Team—	Won	Lost	Tied
Texas	4	1	0
Arkansas	3	1	0
S. M. U.	2	2	1
T. C. U.	2	2	0
Baylor	2	2	0
Texas A. & M.	1	2	1
Rice	0	4	0

Bare Facts

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The Democrats have still a chance left for the next administration.

Inauguration day is four months away.

By that time Mr. Hoover is liable to forget that he was elected.

He is a very busy man. He intends to go around the world on a battleboat.

He is not only busy. But also smart. He knows the only chance a president has of enjoying the job is before he takes it.

Cruising on an American thunderboat is also a good plan.

When he tags a foreign land the natives will think:

If that's the president's yacht what does a real battleship look like?

This will inspire respect for our congressional investigations and cause Europe to fear our subsidiary corporations.

The president is an admiral in the navy and a general in the army. He is also custodian of the vice president until that dignified stowaway reaches the legal age. If Mr. Hoover desired, he could make the army give him a salute of 21 guns for breakfast. Which is only five less than the mayor of Chicago gets every morning.

When the League of Nations sees our head salesman on a high powered wagon, it will be very respectful for Mr. Hoover is famous for distributing samples.

We would like to take that trip provided that Herbert requires an assistant tourist with a dollar kodak.

What we would like to know is whether or not Herbie is going to send back souvenir postcards?

Suppose Raskob gets one showing a humorous view of Waterloo or a group picture of Napoleon's tomb?

Another thing is the laundry problem.

The congressional franking privilege does not extend as far as Madagascar or Peru.

The touchest part of the journey will be that Curtis only rates a rowboat.

Profession of Football Coaching Becoming Stabilized in Colleges

Grid Mentors Placed On Par With Other Faculty Members, Some at Lower Salaries, But With Jobs Secure

By JOHN V. HEISMAN

Football Tactician and Former Coach

NEW YORK, Nov. 18. (US)—Many people do not know that practically all the colleges and universities of the country are banded together into organized associations—similar to the way their athletic organizations are associated. Thus there is one for the entire East, one for the entire South, etc. The North Central Association of Colleges has a membership of more than 300 educational institutions located in 22 states.

These associations formerly concerned themselves, at their annual meetings, with academic matters almost entirely; but of late years they are finding time to scrutinize athletic affairs within their ranks and to take a strong hand in the management and control thereof.

A year or two ago, for instance, the Southern association decreed that its member colleges should not allow their football teams to practice more than two hours daily. About the same time the Pacific association ruled that thereafter cocahes must be regarded as faculty members and must have all-year-around connection with their institutions, not merely seasonal jobs.

Now comes the North Central association and rules that hereafter all its member colleges must see to it that its athletic coaches are to be ranked the same as other of its faculty members, and they will be salaried according to their ranking professionally. Incidentally this means that competitive bidding for coaches by many colleges at a time will have to cease.

To boil it down, the new decree seems to aim at high salaries for coaching, as the association will not permit its members to bid any higher for an athletic coach than his professional ranking, as a faculty member, would permit to pay for any other teacher or instructor of the same rank.

While this may result in a lowering of salaries of some high priced coaches it will also result in a stabilization of the profession of coaching, for, if they thus limit the coach's salary, they will feel they have no right to fire him whenever the team happens to lose a football game, provided the coach has done his best. Dunces and loafers fail to pass exam in Latin and math, every year in every college, but it is never hinted that the teacher is at fault—so why should the football coach be held responsible for the inability of his team to win always against any and all kinds of conditions and opposition? If they pay him as a faculty teacher they'll have to treat him as one.

Another factor that will rapidly tend to stabilize the profession of coaching henceforth, is the way the biggest and supposedly best teams are overthrown from Saturday to Saturday. No matter what a college's athletic traditions, no matter how many students it has, how big a stadium, how much money it takes in at the gate, it is also seen that any little college MAY enroll 20 students big and athletic enough to compose a tip-top football eleven. Furthermore, the small college may also engage excellent coaches; and the bunch of them can work as hard, and to as good purpose, as any other squad. In a word, it is now seen that there are many factors that make for victory or defeat with every football team besides how the coach handles the team.

Today it is the common lot of all teams to take one or more lickings every season from somebody. If coaches have shown they know their business, have worked energetically and coached painstakingly if they have conducted themselves properly and have won the respect of their players and fellow faculty members, they will be much surer to retain their positions than they have been in the past.

This is as it should be—and it is as most coaches would prefer to have matters stand. A few may have their salaries lopped a bit, but most of them would be willing to submit to that in return for some assurance that the best efforts of the best years of their lives will not be forgotten as soon as a defeat or two comes along and they relegated, as heretofore, to oblivion by shunting them off to a minor job or none at all.

Secure in his position and profession the future coach will be able to think, to teach, to act with greater sportsmanship, with his eye on high ideals, and his mind fixed on lofty principles.

Here's A Knotty Problem in Golf

Dog Eats Ball—Does Player Lose Match

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 18. (US)—This probably is one of the dog-gonedest golf stories ever written. Not that the dog is gone—thanks to the veterinarian's skill, the dog's life was saved. But the golf is gone, bepond repair, at least.

Mr. A. Frank, of the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles, pitched his ball up to the pin on the 18th green at the Rancho Golf club. The dog in the case scampered out and ate the ball. The veterinarian, Dr. C. A. White, performed a major operation, removing all that was left of the ball and saving the life of a very sick dog.

What Mr. A. Frank wants to know is this:

Was the ball out of bounds?

Was it an unplayable lie?

Was it a lost ball?

Was it a "rub of the green?"

How many strokes penalty, if any, should be inflicted—not on the dog, but on Mr. A. Frank's scoreboard?

Did Mr. A. Frank win or lose his match with Mr. B. K. Wardell, secretary of the Rancho Golf club?

St Andrews, Scotland, has been asked for a ruling?

(By The Associated Press)

While Redman Hume, the galloping gazelle of S. M. U. appears a cinch to capture premier individual scoring honors in the Southwest conference despite an injured ankle that has kept him out of all but one quarter of his team's last three games, four players are waging a merry battle for runnerup honors. Only four points separate Burgess and Beavers, in second place, from King and Griffith, tied for third.

Zarafonetis of A. & M. and Dale of Arkansas lead the flock in scoring points after touchdown, each with 10 to his credit. Potter of Baylor remains the sole performer to achieve a field goal this season, which is indicative of something or other.

By scoring 19 points against the Rice Owls, the Aggies went into second place in team scoring with 205 points. Every team in the conference except Rice has more than 100 points to its credit. Team scoring records for the conference, including all games played this season, follow:

School	Won	Lost	Tied	Pts	Op. Pts.
S. M. U.	6	2	1	221	63
A. & M.	5	3	1	205	58

St. Mary Beats DePaul, 16 to 13

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 18. (AP)—St. Mary's university "Rattlers," displaying fight, took the measure of the invading DePaul university "Blue Demons" of Chicago today at League park before a crowd estimated at 4,000. The score was 16 to 13. It was the Rattlers' big intersectional game of the year.

Rinsinger and Adams were outstanding figures in the Rattler offense. Phelan, hard driving DePaul back, registered frequent long gains for the visitors. He was the only man the Rattlers were unable to stop consistently.

U. S.-German Pair Win Six-Day Race

CHICAGO, Nov. 18. (US)—Jimmy Walthour, of New York, and Franz Deulberg, of Germany, were the winners of the 20th International Six-Day Bicycle race which finished last night at the coliseum.

The team of Alfred Le Tourner and Paul Brocardo were second and France Georgetti and Tony Beckman third.

It was the most successful race that has ever been staged in Chicago. It started with a field of 15 teams, eight of which went into the final hour. The original cast represented the class of the bike world. The best riders of Germany, France, Italy and Belgium were contenders.

State College Women Athletic Heads Meet

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 18. (AP)—Seven colleges have accepted the invitation sent out by the Woman's Athletic association of Texas Christian university to attend the Texas athletic conference of college women to be held here Dec. 6, 7, 8.

The colleges are: East Texas State Teachers college, Commerce; Southwest Texas Teachers college, San Marcos; West Texas State Teachers college, Canyon; Baylor college, Belton; Marshall Junior college, Marshall; South Texas State Teachers college, Kingsville; and Texas Woman's college at Fort Worth.

Invitations have been sent to 48 schools.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

MORE THAN THE imprint of cleats and faces was left on muddy gridirons last Saturday. When they finished playing, the colors of several contenders for sectional titles and of a few which sought high national ranking, were trailing in the grey gloom of a sombre November afternoon. The S. M. U. Ponies tumbled off the crest of the Southwestern conference by defeat at the hands of an astonishing young Baylor team, and as a result, the big Orange machine of Texas went into the league lead. The defeat of the Ponies, while something of an upset, was presaged the previous week when it was unimpressive in its 19-19 tie with Texas Aggies. Baylor was anything but a setup, the youthful Bears showing a splendid record this season. It was the second game won by Baylor by a slim margin, their 2-0 victory over S. M. U. being a point less than the margin by which they beat T. C. U. earlier in the season.

◆ ◆ ◆

With S. M. U. beaten and tied once, Texas Longhorns, with one defeat to mar their record, slipped into the conference lead by beating Texas Christian university 6 to 0. The Steers, as in a majority of games this season, showed just enough offensive power to gain the up on their rivals and a strong defense that repelled desperate attempts of the of the Frogs to score. Texas Aggies won a third conference game, beating Rice, 19 to 0. The Owls have not won a loop tilt this year and probably won't. Arkansas, its conference schedule completed, crushed Missouri Mines, 49 to 0. The Razorbacks are second in the conference, with three victories and one defeat, and should Texas Aggies beat Texas Thanksgiving day the Porkers would win the title.

◆ ◆ ◆

THREE UNBEATEN teams maintained their clean records down south and stayed in the race for consideration as claimants to the national championship — which never will be definitely won. Georgia Tech overwhelmed Alabama, 33 to 13, and the Tornado is rated generally as foremost in the South, in view of playing a harder schedule than undertaken by Tennessee and Florida, other unbeaten teams in that section. Tennessee showed some class on its own account by beating Vanderbilt, 6 to 0. Florida defeated Clemson handily.

◆ ◆ ◆

LOUISIANA STATE outscored Georgia by the margin of a point after touchdown. Kentucky bested Virginia Military and Virginia Poly was victor over Washington and Lee in close games. Tulane ran up the expected high score on Sewanee.

◆ ◆ ◆

OKLAHOMA RALLIED from its crushing defeat by Nebraska the previous week to score a somewhat surprising 7-0 win over Kansas. Iowa State beat Kansas Aggies in the other outstanding tussle in the Missouri valley sector.

MIDDLE WESTERN gridirons bristled with important games. Carnegie Tech became a leading contender for eastern and national honors by routing Notre Dame at South Bend, 27 to 7. The Skibos are among the few elevens unbeaten and untied. Their victory also was noteworthy in that few teams have beaten the Irish on their own gridiron at Cartier field. It also became the first season since Rockne became coach of the Ramblers more than a decade ago that his team has lost three games in one campaign. Pittsburgh spoiled Nebraska's record, in holding the Cornhuskers to a scoreless tie, the first game the Nebraskans have failed to win this year.

Wisconsin practically won the Western conference championship by defeating Iowa, hitherto undefeated, 13-0. Wisconsin is the only team that has not been beaten, though the Badgers have a 19-19 tie with Purdue early in the Fall. Chicago, which failed to win a Big Ten or any other important game this season, and indeed won only one and that against a secondary foe, lost its last tilt of the year to Illinois, a rout of 40 to 0. Indiana beat Northwestern, 6 to 0, the expected hard game of the Hoosiers and Purple materializing.

FOUR BIG TEN elevens won conference games, though one was hard-pressed. The margin of a field goal gave Michigan a 3-0 triumph over Michigan State in the Wolverine championship battle. Purdue beat Wabash, 14-0. Ohio State ran up a 39-0 count on Muskingum and Minnesota trounced the Haskell Indians, 52-0.

THE DOPE HELD true, for one of the few times in their meetings of more than half a century, when Princeton vanquished Yale, 12 to 2. Princeton thus maintained its undefeated record in winning this historical game, though two ties have been recorded against the Tigers. New York university's tremendously strong team upset Missouri, 27 to 6, an intersectional combat.

◆ ◆ ◆

HOLY CROSS fought Harvard to a 0 to 0 tie. The service elevens had little trouble winning their games, Army from Carleton and Navy from Loyola of Baltimore.

◆ ◆ ◆

Meetings of traditional rivals marked other games in the eastern area. Dartmouth's Green juggernaut finally got under way to crush Cornell. Columbia won an unexpected victory from Pennsylvania. Syracuse beat Colgate. Williams defeated Amherst and captured the "Little Three" title for the second straight year. Brown bested New Hampshire. Lafayette upset Penn State. Bucknell and Washington and Jefferson tied. Wesleyan was victor over Bowdoin. West Virginia, coming along at a rapid clip in recent weeks, was halted by Georgetown.

◆ ◆ ◆

UTAH RETAINED its standing as Rocky Mountain conference leader but was held to a tie by Brigham Young. Out in the Pacific Coast conference, the Southern California Trojans whipped Washington State and remain in the race with California. Stanford turned back Washington.

SANDIES NEAR GRID PENNANT

Coyotes Only Barrier To Amarillo Victory

Amarillo is almost "in" with the district No. 1, class A prep grid championship. The only hurdle confronting the Golden Sandstorm is Wichita Falls, and in the light of their season records Amarillo should have no difficulty in beating the Coyotes when they meet here Thanksgiving day.

The Sandies established another heavy score last Saturday in beating Electra, 34 to 0. Electra showed unexpected fight and good football by holding the Sandies scoreless in the first half. But the powerful Sandstorm machine got under way at full steam in the third period and ran up the score on their light and exhausted opponents.

Lubbock, which has been defeated only by Amarillo, and incidentally held the Sandies to their lowest score this year, 32 to 6, conquered Wichita Falls by the decisive score of 21 to 0. Lubbock showed a smashing and resourceful attack against an uncertain Coyote offensive and weak line. Numerous Wichita Falls forward passes were grounded or thrown directly into enemy hands in an indiscriminate misuse of the overhead game and there was no sustained power in the straight football of the Coyotes.

Amarillo, sole unbeaten team of the district, has won five games. Lubbock, with four victories and one defeat, a mark of .800, is second and Vernon, with three wins and one loss, is third with .750. Wichita Falls fell from a three-cornered tie with Lubbock and Vernon for second place down to fourth, with three victories and two defeats, an average of .600. Vernon is fifth with one win and four losses, for .200.

'Planting' of Sleuths in Federal Pens Arouses Congressman's Ire

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 18. (AP)—Rep. Thomas M. Bell, of Georgia announced today that Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general in charge of prisons, has written a letter to all wardens of federal penitentiaries telling them that justice department agents will be placed in prisons in the future "as regular routine."

"I intend to resist such a procedure and will call on every member of congress to frown on such a policy," Congressman Bell said.

Representative Bell last night said two department of justice agents who have been investigating at the prison here "virtually admitted" before executive sessions of the congressional committee investigating federal prisons that a prisoner known as "Peter Hanson" had been "planted" in the Atlanta institution. It was said that Hanson really was William Larson, a justice department agent.

Mrs. Willebrandt's letter, the congressman said, "further states that failure to notify wardens of the decision at an earlier date 'has resulted in a misunderstanidng on the part of one of the wardens.'"

Health Clinic At Iowa Park Busy

Special to The Record News

IOWA PARK, Nov. 18—The Iowa Park P.-T. A. Health clinic completed the examination of the first three grades Thursday with a total of 176 examinations, with 52 mothers present.

The examining physicians stated that the group, as a whole, was well nourished and cared for.

The mothers who were not present and had a child examined in whom any deficiency was noted will be visited by a member of the health committee.

Mrs. R. E. Brewster, chairman of the committee, states that the children will be weighed each month by the teachers of the various rooms, and that the first three grades will be reexamined in the spring.

Dusky Talent For Talking Pictures

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 18. (UP)—Twenty-six members of the first all-negro motion picture company in the history of the industry arrived in Los Angeles with King Vidor, who has been directing location episodes of the story in Memphis, Tenn., and who will now film the final scenes at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Among the players are Daniel Hynes, Honey Brown, Victoria Spivey, "blues" singer, Harry Gray, Fannie Belle de Knight, who appeared in "Lulu Belle," and others.

A negro chorus will sing "blues" and spirituals for the synchronized sound effect that will accompany the picture.

SCHUBERT FOUR SINGS TONIGHT

Quartet Announces Change In Personnel

With the arrival in the city Sunday evening of the Schubert Male quartet, which appears Monday night at 8 o'clock in Junior college auditorium, all is in readiness for their local concert, it was announced by A. K. Presson of the High school-Junior college Teachers' association which is sponsoring the event.

Correction of the personnel of the organization as first announced was made by George O. Miner, director, upon his arrival here. The literature forwarded when the engagement was made last week contained some of the 1927 pamplets, one of which was uesd in giving the quartet's personnel. Mr. Miner, basso, remains as director of the organization, but the three remaining positions, as well as that of accompanist are filled by artists different from those named last Friday. Erwin - Dillon, first tenor, is also a violinist, and contributes a group of solo violin numbers to the program. Second tenor position has been filled by Harry Cole, while Charles Pottier sings baritone. Accompaniments are played by Miss Aileen Russell, pianist.

Mr. Miner emphasized the fact the present personnel of the quartet is the same that has sung together throughout the year, and declared it the strongest from a standpoint of artistry which the Schubert organization has boasted since its beginning.

The Schubert singers have proven themselves among the most popular entertainers in the country, a fact proven by the extensive bookings with numerous return engagements which they enjoy, as well as by commendation accorded them by the press following their appearances.

Prices of 50c to adults and 25c to children have been made by the teachers' association.

Tickets are on sale at Renfro Drug store, Eighth street and Scott avenue.

J. N. McManus Of Electra Dies Here

J. N. McManus, 75, retired Electra contractor, died at a local hospital Sunday afternoon. Funeral services will be held from the First Church of Christ at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon with Rev. L. S. White in charge. Burial will be in Riverside cemetery.

Mr. McManus and his wife have been making their homes at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. C. L. Wilkinson, 1519 Keeler.

Survivors, in addition to Mrs. McManus and Mrs. Wilkinson include a daughter, Mrs. George Hodges of Lawton, Okla.; a son, Charles McManus of Houston, and stepson, W. A. Bell of Ryan, Okla.

Traffic Law Changes Agreed in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 18. (UP)—With an agreement reached between city authorities and the Bexar County Safety council on the matter of financing a complete traffic survey in San Antonio, a rejuvenation of local traffic laws and a change in traffic conditions generally may result in the near future.

According to Fire and Police Commissioner Phil Wright, the city has agreed to furnish a large part of the personnel and of the clerical work necessary for the survey, which will be made by a national safety council engineer.

A conference recently held between Commissioner Wright, Ralph Durkee and Ernest Laubscher, president of the local council, resulted in the appropriation by the Bexar county council of $1,000 for the survey.

Fort Worth Considered As New Mill Site

FORT WORTH, Nov. (UP)—Fort Worth is being considered as a possible site for one of two textile mills to be built in Texas, according to Roscoe Ady, industrial commissioner of the Association of Commerce.

A representative of the Textile corporation, recently formed in the East with a capital of $5,000,000, was in the city last week conferring with association officials.

According to the corporation representatives, two large mills are contemplated somewhere in the state. He has included other large cities of the state in his survey of possibilities. The proposed mills would have a capacity of 25,000 spindles and each would employ 800 men.

The Fable of the Father Who Jumped In

Once there was a leading Citizen with only one Daughter, but she was a Large Consignment.

Bernice was chief Expense Account and Crown Jewel of a Real Estate Juggler who had done so well that all the Strap-Hangers regarded him as an Enemy to Society.

Papa was foolish, even as a Weasel.

He was what you might call Honest, which signified that all of his Low Work had been done by Agents.

A Person of rare judgment, withal. He never copped a piece of bulky Swag unless he had a Wheelbarrow with him at the time.

He had been going East with the Green Goods ever since the Party in Power precipitated the first Panic.

He had stacks of the Needful, and his Rating was AA Plus 1, to say nothing of a Reserve cached in the little Tin Box. Daughter alone could induce him to unbuckle, and melt, and jar loose, and come across, and kick in, and sting the Check Book-Book.

One day Bernice was a Little Girl, and the Debutantes, with a pack of Society Hounds pursuing in Full Cry, each willing to help count the Bank Roll.

Father was sick when he sized up the Field.

Sometimes he would dream that he had been pushed into a Mausoleum and that a slender Cyril with a Lady's Watch strapped to his Wrist was spending all that Money for Signed Etchings.

Whereupon he would awake in a Cold Sweat and try to think of a safe Recipe for poisoning all of the Beautiful bounding Bernies.

One day Bernice went out into the sunshine and found Something and brought it home with her and put it on a Rug in the Elizabethan Room.

Father came in and took one look and said: "Not for Mine! I won't stand for any Pussy Willow being grafted on to our Family Tree."

His name was Kenneth, and he reduced his Percentage on the first day by Having a hem-stitched Mouchoir tucked inside of the Cuff.

Also, it was rumored that he put oil on his Eye-Brows and rubbed Perfumery on the backs of his Hands.

An Insect Too Large for Powder

Father walked around the He-Canary twice, looking at him over the Specs, and then he rushed to the Library and kicked the Upholstery out of an $80 chair.

For he could see the love-light in the Eyes of Bernice. She had fallen for the Flukes.

Kenneth was installed as Steady.

When Bernice saw him turn the Corner and approach the House, he looked to her like Rupert, the long lost Heir—while Father discerned only an Insect too large to be treated with Powder.

If Kenneth's private Estate had been converted into Pig Iron, he could have carried it in his Watch Pocket.

He was re-fined and had lovely Teeth, but those who knew him well believed the Story that when he was a Babe in Arms, the Nurse had let him fall and strike on the Head.

He wore his hair straight back and used Patent Leather dressing.

When you passed through the Archway of his Intellectual Domain you found yourself in the Next Block.

But—he could go into a Parlor and sprinkle Soothing Syrup all over the Rugs.

He had a Vaudeville Education and a small Tenor Voice, with the result that many a fluttering Birdie regarded him as the bona-fide Ketchup.

Bernice thought she was lucky to have snared him away from the others, and she had slipped him the whispered Promise—come Weal, come Woe.

No wonder Father was stepping sideways.

He would come home in the evening and find the Mush perched on a Throne in the Spot Light, shooting an azure-blue Line of dessicated Drool, with Bernice sitting out in front and Encoring.

Then Father would retire to the back part of the House to bark at the Butler and act as if he had been eating Red Meat.

Father Fixes a Plot

He knew that if he elbowed in and tried to break up the Clinch, it would mean a Rope Ladder, a piece in the Papers, and a final Reconciliation, with Parent playing the usual role of Goat.

The problem was to get shut of the rodent without resorting to any Rough Stuff.

Father never had heard tell of the Perils of Proninquity, and he though Psychology had something to do with Fish

Just the same, he remembered about a Quail a day for 30 days, and he knew that the most agreeable Perfumery would not smell right if applied with a Garden Hose.

Likewise, he suspected that many a Quarter mile Horse would blow if put into a two-mile Handicap.

So he blocked out a Program which proved that Solomon had nothing on him.

Instead of grilling young Kenneth and holding him up to Contumely and forbidding him the use of Cozy Corner, he started in to boost the Love Match.

Kenneth all but moved in his trunk.

Daughter had a chance to weigh him down to the last ounce, and study the simple Mechanism of his transparent Personality.

Kenneth would sit right up close to old Cash-in-Hand, who would egg him on to tell Dialect Stories and, after that, show how to make a Salad.

The Salad Maker's Brief Triumph

After Bernice had heard these Almanac Wheezes 26 or 28 times, she would sit still and look at the Center-Piece while Lover was performing.

The Gags didn't sound as killing as they had at first, and sometimes she wished the Dear Boy would chop on them.

No chance. Father had him kidded into believing that all the old ham-fat Riddles were simply Immense.

As for that Salad Specialty, the poor Gink who calls loudly for English Mustard and thinks he is a Genius because he can rub a Bowl with a sprig of Garlic, may have his brief Hour of Triumph, but no man ever really got anywhere by doping Salad, when you stop to add it up.

If any Guests were present, then Father would play Introducer and tell them beforehand how good Kenneth was.

When given the Cue, the Lad would swell up and spring a hot One about the Swede and the Irishman, while Bernice would fuss with the Salt and wonder dimly if the Future had aught in store for her except Dialect Stuff.

Father had read on a Blotter somewhere that Absence makes the Heart grow fonder, so he played his System wit hthe Reverse English.

He arranged a nice long trip by Land and Water and took the male Sweetheart along, so that the Doting Pair could be together at Breakfast.

His cunning had now become diabolical. He was getting ready to apply the Supreme Test.

A Discrepancy in His Ears

Every morning, when Bernice looked over Baked Apple she saw nothing in this wide World except Kenneth, still reeking with Witch Hazel and spotted with Talcum Powder, and not very long on Sparkling Conversation.

When he was propped up in the cold Dawn, with his eyes partly open, he did not resemble a Royal Personage nearly as much as he had in some of his earlier Photographs.

Father would order soft-boiled Eggs to be Eaten from the Shell. When Kenneth got around to these, he would cease to be a Romantic Figure for at least a few Minutes. Bernice would turn away in Dread and look out at the swaying Trees and long to see some of her Girl Friends back home.

After Kenneth had been served to her three meals a day, and they had ridden together for Ages, in Pullman Compartments, she made certain horrible Discoveries.

One of his Ears was larger than the other.

He made a funny noise with his Adam's Apple when drinking Hot Coffee.

When he was annoyed, he bit his Nails.

When suffering from a Cold, he was Sniffy.

The first time she became aware of the slight discrepancy in Ears, she suffered only a slight Annoyance. It handed her a tiny Pang to find a Flaw in a Piece of Work that she had regarded as Perfect.

After she had seen nothing else but those Ears for many, many Days, it became evident to her that if Kenneth truly loved her, he would go and have them fixed.

Likewise, every time her Heart's Delight lifted the Cup to his Ruby Lips, she would grip the Table Cloth with both Hands, and whisper to herself, "Now we get the Funny Noise."

Kenneth Gets Fed Up Too

Kenneth, in the mean while, had found out that her Hair did not always look the same, but one who is striving to get a Meal Ticket for Life cannot be over-fastidious.

He was Game and stood ready to obey all Orders in order to pull down the Capital Prize.

He had been such a Hit in the Maple-Sundae Set that he could not conceive the possibility of any Female becoming satiated with his Society.

The poor Loon never stopped to figure out that the only way to keep a Girl sitting up and interested is to stay away once in a while and give her a Vacation.

Father was right on the Job to see that Bernice had no Vacation. He framed it up to give her a Foretaste of Matrimony every Day in the Week.

If the Future Husband wandered more than thirty feet from her side, Father would nail him and sic him on to her again.

She would look up and say: "Oh, Fury! Look who's here once again!"

This was no way for a true-hearted Maiden to speak of her Soul Mate.

Father put the Cap Sheaf on his big Experiment by accepting an invitation to go Yachting

He put them side by side on Deck and told them to comfort each other, in case anything happened.

They never could have been quite the same to each other after that Day.

Bernice wanted to get back on Shore and hunt her Room and peel down to Kimono and refuse any Callers for a Month.

Even the accepted Swain was beginning to slow up. He could demember the time when he used to sit around with members of his own Sex.

Father had no Mercy. He took the two Invalids back to Land and rounded them up for Breakfast next morning.

When Kenneth appeared, he was slightly greenish in Color.

One Ear was three times as large as the other. He had caught a Sniffy Cold.

In partaking of his Coffee he made Sounds similar to those coming through the Partition when the People in the adjoining Flat have trouble with Plumbing.

The Crisis

He saw Bernice glaring at him and bit his Nails in Embarrassment.

Father felt the Crisis impending and laid on the last Straw.

"I was trying to recall that Story," said he—"The One about the German and the Dog."

Bernice gave one Shriek and then dashed from the Room, making hysterical Outcries along the Corridor.

Father told Kenith to check all Trunks for Home and then catch an early Train.

Bernice was squirming about on the Hotel Sofa when Father entered the Room.

She threw herself into his Arms and passionately demanded, "Why oh, why are you trying to force me into marrying that Creature?"

NUDE BATHING MORE THAN FAD

Sculpture Aided By Practice, Claims Artist

By GEORGE W. HINMAN JR.

PARIS, Nov. 18. (US)—Prudery as an outrage imposed upon the world by the "flat-chested and spindly-legged" and the nude bathing craze as responsible for the present world-wide "amazing interest" in sculpture, were the ideas put forward today by Roy Van Anken Sheldon, youthful American sculptor with headquarters in Paris.

The sun-bath fad that started in Germany and swept through the fashionable resort centers of France and Spain, Mr. Sheldon said, has taught the civilized European world the beauties of the human figure. He continued:

"This fad for nude bathing is going to sweep the world. If you don't believe it, look at the unprecedented bookings of Egypt. Flocks of people are going down there so they can take off their clothes and have real beauty baths in the sun.

Sensation at Resorts

"Parties of this sort were the sensation of last summer at such resorts as Juan Les Pins, Biarrits, Saint Jean de Luz, Royan and La Baule. But people soon got used to seeing men and women naked. They began to admire the human figure. For only men and women with beautiful bodies dare to go without clothes.

"Seeing how beautiful the body really is, people began taking a renewed interest in sculpture. They began buying it. And at high prices! Right now, prices are hitting the sky, with everything good being snapped up.

"Take my own case, for example. I became interested in sculpture when I was on the swimming team at Amherst. We all did our practicing naked. In no other way can one become more familiar with the possible combinations of beauty into which the human figure can fall.

"An experience of this sort is enough to interest anyone in sculpture. So I am glad to see the new mode of bathing—water and sun—come into fashion. I am glad, too, that the end of the reign of prudery is definitely in sight. It was neither moral nor healthful. It was begun by the flat-chested and the spindly-legged.

Spain Leads Way

"Strangely enough, the first reaction against it came from Spain, where the women are reputed to be the most modest in the world. The Spanish women always used one-piece bathing suits. They had no shame about it. Why should they? There is nothing secret about the formation and curves of the female form devine.

"Now, from the other end of the continent, Germany, comes the latest attack on prudery—the nude sun-bath. I think it has come to stay, no matter how it may affect the mayor of Atlantic City and like-minded, self-appointed superintendents of American morals and manners."

One of the first works to win fame for Mr. Sheldon was his bust of Hazel Guggenheim Waldman, whose two children recently died so tragically before her very eyes. He recently has been at work on busts for members of the Vanderbilt family and others.

Rat Traps Offer New Worry For State Heads

AUSTIN, Nov. 18. (AP)—State officials need to watch their step even though all elections are behind them for another two years.

The capitol is alive with rat traps. The annual war on rodents in all state departments has started. The board of control placed an emergency order for 100 traps and a quantity of cheese. It is a difficult task to keep the traps baited, so expert are the statehouse rats at deftly removing the cheese and leaving the traps unsprung.

Plane For Dallas-Wichita Line Expected At Home Port Monday

Already half way on its journey to the home field Sunday night, the new four-passenger Stinson monoplane to be used for the coming Wichita Falls-Dallas passenger service of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company, is expected to land at the company field on the Henrietta road by noon Monday.

The big monoplane spent Sunday night at Denton, Ill., 90 miles from St. Louis, where it landed after an initial hop from Detroit. It is being brought to the Wichita Falls field by Fulcher Armstrong and J. E. Hall, officers in the company. Dudley Rider is piloting. Earl Stilley, local geologist, is a passenger.

Unless bad weather intervenes the trip will be completed by noon Monday, according to J. G. Anthony Jr., who was in telegraphic communication with the flyers. The ship is a new type on the local field. It carries a Warner motor and its cabin will accommodate four passengers.

Officials of the Air Transport company hoped to initiate passenger service between Wichita Falls and Dallas on Nov. 20, but delays in the delivery of the ship make a change in plans probably, Mr. Anthony said Sunday. Although the schedules have not been arranged, the tentative plans call for a round trip each day. They trip can be made in one hour and 20 minutes each way, according to estimates of the company.

FEDERAL COURT FACES TASKS

Atwell To Impanel Juries For Work Today

Both grand and petit juries will be impanelled at the opening session of federal district court at the Wichita county court house Monday morning.

Immediately after his charge to the grand jury, Judge W. H. Atwell of Dallas will impanel the petit jury and proceed with the civil settings, C. Crippen, assistant United States district attorney, said Sunday. No felony cases will be presented before the report of the grand jury, he said.

Thirty-six veniremen from the 16 counties which make up the Wichita Falls division of the northern district of Texas have been summoned for service on the grand jury. A venire of 48 has been called to appear for petit jury service.

Judge Atwell was expected to arrive from Dallas late Sunday night. Mr. Crippen was in Wichita Falls Sunday. Mrs. Sarah C. Menezes of Dallas, assistant U. S. district attorney, was also expected Monday.

John J. Bartlett, deputy United States marshal, expects the arrival here Monday of three prisoners from Fort Worth to be held in the county jail pending the grand jury investigation of a $53,000 mail robbery from a Texas and Pacific train.

The tentative criminal docket includes more than 250 cases. All but 30 of the number are concerned with violations of the prohibition laws. The docket is the heaviest faced since the establishment of the court here seven years ago.

Bad Omen to Sing At One's Wedding

GALESBURG, Ill., Nov. 18. (US)—Mrs. Lavonne Field Elder is convinced that singing at one's own wedding is bad luck.

Two years ago Lavonne Field, daughter of a widely known and wealthy family gave up an operatic career to marry mild-mannered Lucius W. Elder, professor of English and youngest member of the Knox college faculty. Against the advice of friends she sang "I Love You Truly" at her own wedding.

Now Mrs. Elder has filed suit for divorce alleging that her husband beat her.

McLendon Rites At Fort Worth

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Nov. 18.—Funeral services for Mrs. Leroy McLendon, 28, wife of the principal of the high school here, who died Sunday morning in a Wichita Falls hospital, are to be held Monday in Fort Worth, the home of a sister, it was announced today.

The body was brought here today and was to be forwarded late tonight by the Tanner Undertaking company to Fort Worth. Services will be held there at 3 p. m., Monday, at the Mulkey Memorial Methodist church.

The body is to be accompanied by Mr. McLendon, and R. E. Brewster, city superintendent of schools, and the latter's family.

Schools will be dismissed here Monday.

Mrs. McLendon in addition to her sister in Fort Worth, is survived by her husband, and an infant child.

Smith Settles Down As Winter Vacationist

EDGEWATER GULF HOTEL, Miss., Nov. 18. (AP)—Alfred E. Smith settled down today to the life of a winter vacationist determined to rebuild his campaign worn body.

Residents along the gulf have taken him at his word that he wished to be let alone. They are leaving him in peace. Even the hotel guests, after the first blush of his arrival, have treated him as an ordinary guest.

Parachute Saves Flier When Plane Falls

BROOKVILLE, Pa., Nov. 17. (AP)—Paul Collins, air mail pilot for The National Air Transport, Inc., on the Cleveland-New York route, made a successful parachute landing near here this morning when one wing of his biplane collapsed and the ship fell. Collins, who escaped injury, was flying from Cleveland to New York at the time.

The plane was wrecked. Collins brought his cargo of mail to Brookville.

BUSINESS HUMS AT MEMPHIS

Streets Crowded With Rural Shoppers

Special to The Record News

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 18.—According to traffic officers of Memphis the largest crowd to be in Memphis this fall was here Saturday and although the traffic was congested, only one accident was reported to officers. Some estimate that there were 10,000 people in Memphis shopping Saturday afternoon.

The larger part of the week was too bad for the gathering of cotton, especially the latter part, and most of the cotton pickers had nothing to do but come to town, and they came. All kinds of business were reported good. This is said to be the best fall for business this section has seeen since 1919, and business men expect it to be good for several months to come, at least until the cotton is all gathered.

Up to this time there has been approximately 45,000 bales of cotton ginned in this county. The past two weeks the farmers have been hindered considerably by rain, but as yet very little damage has resulted, as very little of the staple is on the ground, and most of rain has fallen slowly and without wind. There are some farmers who say they have just started, while some are almost through gathering, but taking it on an average it is estimated that about two-thirds of the crop is gathered.

Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly

Tanlac has a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years' standing.

Mr. James F. Campbell, of 1012 W. Fifth St., Little Rock, Ark., says: "I had bloating after eating. My rheumatism was so bad I could hardly raise my arms. Now I can eat anything and do a good day's work."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. It is good pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and barks. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you.
