TWO AMARILLO FLIERS DIE IN 3,000 FOOT DROP

Pete McKenzie Must Stand Second Sanity Trial To Escape Death In Chair

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

This newspaper lost a faithful contributor Friday in the death of J. A. (Jack) Fernandez, its Austin correspondent. Thousands of people scattered all over the state of Texas feel that in his death they have lost a friend—one who was fine and lovable and who upheld the best traditions of news reporting.

Governor Moody did a fine thing in ordering the flag at the capitol building lowered to half mast. It is customary to do this upon the death of some state official or of some great and prominent citizen. Jack Fernandez lived too gently to achieve prominence or what is commonly called greatness and it was doubtless in appreciation of these fine qualities within him that caused Governor Moody to order such a mark of respect.

Complaint has been filed with the federal radio commission against radio station KWKH of Shreveport alleging profanity by its announcer and owner, W. K. Henderson. An investigation is to be made of the complaint.

Henderson has used rather strong language in his announcements and has certainly offended good taste if he has done nothing worse. Doggone seems to be his favorite expression and "damn" and "hell" have not been unheard through his radio station. The question has been raised as to whether these expressions are profane in the light of present day usage. If you have read the newspapers many years you can remember a few years back these expletives were always printed h— and d—. Now here we are spelling them right out without a dash or asterisk.

Talker would say, however, that the language used by the announcer does detract from the enjoyment of the programs over KWKH. It is in fact so offensive to many people that they tune out that station.

One of the modern philosophers has said that morality is a matter of taste. That sounds shocking but, on second thought, it isn't so very. That might raise morals. Of course, the question is way beyond talker's depth.

Anyway, for most of us the Ten Commandments, the statutes, the conventions and all the accepted rules of behavior are required, and for some, jails and prisons and all the discipline of the punitive and reformatory measures and methods of organized society are necessary.

Talker suggests to some of our philantrophists that they send a self-pronouncing dictionary to every radio announcer in the country.

Former Gov. Henry S. Johnston of Oklahoma gives notice that he will seek the Democratic nomination for United States senator. His is likely to be a campaign seeking vindication. Candidates who have been removed from office are always dangerous as experience in Texas has shown.

Fortunately here in Texas we have no candidates seeking vindication unless it is Farmer Jim and he's been "vindicated" once or maybe twice and that ought to make him less dangerous. Vindication is a good issue but it can be overworked.

Of course, Ray Nichols who writes Home Town Stuff in Vernon Record made a good speech at the chamber of commerce banquet here Friday night—talker wrote it for him.

Talking about Ray Nichols and his Home Town Stuff column here's one picked from it out of Friday's paper: "There is one thing nice about today's near-zero temperature, however, and that is that one is not bothered with gnats."

Anyway we are proud of "Nick"—his speech, his column, his newspeper and every thing.

Governor Moody and Texas senators and representatives and the state department at Washington are redoubling their efforts to bring

MOODY HEARS DOCTOR CALL SLAYER SANE

Governor Has McKenzie Removed From Hospital To Dallas Jail

DISPLAYS VIOLENCE

Firearms Taken From Person of 'Patient' Twice Since Commitment

AUSTIN, Jan. 12. (AP)—John M. (Pete) McKenzie, given death for the murder of Sam Street, chief of San Antonio detectives, and who subsequently escaped the electric chair when a jury found him insane, must face another jury on a sanity test.

Governor Moody announced today that Dr. George Powell, superintendent of the Terrell state hospital for the insane, where McKenzie had been confined for the past several months, had made an affidavit that in his belief McKenzie is now sane. He said the affidavit would be filed tomorrow or next day in the court of Judge W. W. McCrory of San Antonio, where McKenzie was tried on the murder charge and subsequently given a sanity hearing.

Moved to Dallas

The governor announced McKenzie had been removed by Texas rangers to the Dallas county jail, after he had been found with a pistol and a dagger on his person at the Terrell hospital.

"It required several men to take the gun and knife from him," Governor Moody stated.

Governor Moody revealed also that while McKenzie was in the San Antonio state hospital, Dr. W. J. Johnson, superintendent of that institution, detected a pistol strapped to one of McKenzie's legs and that it had to be taken from him by force.

The governor said McKenzie had cut one of the hip pockets from his trousers so he could reach for the gun easily.

McKenzie Called Dangerous

McKenzie was moved from the San Antonio institution a few weeks after he had escaped the electric chair by the verdict of a jury that held him insane, because it was feared he was planning an effort to escape.

DOCKET FILLED

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 12. (AP)—A second sanity hearing for J. M. (Pete) McKenzie cannot be held before next month, it was declared Sunday night by Judge W. W. McCrory of the 94th district court. Judge McCrory said he had not heard of plans to file an affidavit in his court that McKenzie is sane, but said that if one is filed, he would set the case for trial.

Snow Continues To Menace Springfield, Mo.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 12. (AP)—Springfield today was still menaced by snow and ice. Two persons had been killed in motor car accidents and a dozen persons were in hospitals with broken bones suffered in falls. Yards and streets were littered with broken trees and fallen wires and some streets were blocked by debris.

Several warehouses and garages collapsed under the weight of snow. Many persons last night were driven from their homes to hotels when electric power failed and oil furnaces were put out of commission. Virtually every long distance telephone line was severed due to falling poles and wires.

Greek to Meet Italian In Wrestling Match

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (UP)—Jim Londos, Greek champion, and Joe Stecher, star Italian wrestler, will meet in a finish wrestling match here Monday evening. The winner will be matched with Richard Shikat, a claimant of the world's title, in a bout three weeks hence.

Latest 'Farm Relief' Has Red Hair

The latest farm relief, ladies and gentlemen, doesn't have debentures. She has pretty red hair. Bernadine Hayes, blues singer, has partially forsaken the stage for the radio, to "relieve" farmers—or any others who may tune in on the stations of the CBS farm community network—with her gaiety.

Hoover to Submit to Congress First Report of Law Commission Monday

Added Fuel for Raging Dry Law Controversy Expected to Result From Preliminary Survey

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. (AP)—President Hoover will submit to congress tomorrow the first preliminary report of the law enforcement commission dealing with prohibition. House leaders said prompt steps would be taken to deal promptly with the recommendations for legislation.

Republican Leader Tilson said two or three separate bills would be necessary to cover recommendations the commission had prepared and that these would be given early consideration by several committees of the house.

With the senate engaged in the tariff controversy, the expectation was that the house would act first on whatever measures may be deemed necessary in the light of the commission's report. Consideration and perhaps hearings before senate committees would follow in the usual course.

Anticipating the report of the commission, Senator King, Democrat, Utah, a member of the senate judiciary committee, prepared a bill proposing transfer of the prohibi-

Stinnett Bank Robbery Trial Opens Today

BORGER, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—The trial of four men charged with robbery of the First State bank at Stinnett last Nov. 22 was scheduled to begin Monday at Panhandle, where the cases were transferred.

The quartet was arrested shortly after the robbery following a purported confession from one of the men. The four charged were Bert Smith, Lelia Lake gin operator; Reuben A. Franks, former assistant of the bank; J. W. Adams, Amarillo; and Torrance A. Popejoy, Stinnett.

Theodore Hammerstein Engaged to Marry

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (US)—Announcement was made today of the engagement of Theodore Hammerstein, of the famous theatrical family, and Dorothy Underhill Storms of Dobbs Ferry. Mr. Hammerstein, grandson of Oscar and nephew of Arthur Hammerstein, is stage manager for "A Wonderful Night." Miss Storms, a graduate of Savage college, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Storms.

C.-C. CAMPAIGN OPENS TODAY

Directors to Select New Officers Tonight

Launching of the drive for new members and for the budget of $55,000, and election of new officers by the board of directors, will feature Monday's activities by the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce.

Approximately 100 citizens have been enlisted as team workers under the general direction of J. Wilkie Talbert in the membership and budget campaign, the first used by the local chamber of commerce in three years. This group will meet at the Kemp hotel at noon Monday for luncheon, and will begin work at about 1 o'clock, it was said.

With J. S. Bridwell, J. Wilkie Talbert, Roy B. Jones, Ed Howard and Pat H. Simmons present to become directors in place of C. F. McCutchen, C. H. Clark, Dr. Q. B. Lee, Ed Peterson and J. J. Perkins, the board of directors will meet at the Wichita club Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock. Officers for 1930 will be elected.

Second Waybourne Trial Scheduled for Jan. 20

GEORGETOWN, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—Mrs. Rosa Waybourne's trial on a charge of murder in connection with the death of her husband, W. W. Waybourne, has been set for Jan. 20 in district court here. Mrs. Waybourne was given 45 years in the penitentiary on a former trial, but the court of criminal appeals reversed and remanded the case.

HOBART YOUTH SHOT TO DEATH IN GUN MISHAP

Lowell Aday Killed by Shot While Crossing Over Fence

PALS SUMMON HELP

Discharge of Shotgun Goes Into Heart of Hunter as Clothing Snags

Special to The Record News

HOBART, Okla., Jan. 12.—Lowell Aday, 15, was instantly killed late today when his gun caught in a fence through which he was climbing, discharging at close range directly into the heart.

The youth and two companions were hunting about one mile west of here. They had been out all afternoon seeking small game. While climbing through a barbed wire fence, the youth's clothing caught and in the attempt to extricate himself, the gun discharged. His body slumped over the lower strands of the wire, a gaping hole in his chest where the shotgun had sent its charge. The verdict of an inquest held soon after the tragedy was accidental death.

The other two boys ran to a nearby house and called frantically for help. An ambulance from the Gish Funeral home here was sent to bring the body to town.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed Sunday night. The boy is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Aday of this city; one sister, Mrs. Delia Chapman, and four brothers, Ben, Clarence, Jess and Emmett Aday, all of Hobart.

Unpaid Members Of 'Miracle' Cast Stage Minor Riot

DALLAS, Jan. 12. (AP)—Members of the cast of Morris Gest's production, "The Miracle," tonight either were en route home or were hunting jobs, following the closing performance of the show's run of several years which was featured last night by a mild riot by unpaid extras and singers.

Police reserves were called out to disperse a crowd of 300 members of the cast when they stormed the manager's office at the auditorium where the production was shown. Most of those who failed to receive their salaries since last Thursday were local persons, it was said. New York actors left on a special train at noon today, their salaries paid and with hotel bills settled, Milton Stifel, company manager, announced. Musicians, stage hands and electricians went out on strike after the first act last night and were paid. Only $800 is owed actors, and will be paid, Stifel said.

The company's properties were left here under writs of attachment issued for organ installation and lumber bills incurred by the company in St. Paul and Milwaukee.

The demonstration last night could have been avoided if Gest, ill in New York, could have been reached, Stifel asserted.

Efforts to Reopen Consulate Cheer Laredo

LAREDO, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—This city, its business disrupted by the closing of the Mexican consulate, today waited developments with renewed assurance, following statements from Washington that the state department was doing all possible to hasten reopening of the consulate and that President Hoover had taken personal note of the situation.

It was reported here, but not officially confirmed, that a federal official in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from here, received a telegram form Pedro Gonsales, Mexican senator from Tamaulipas, now in Mexico City, advising customs brokers in Nuevo Laredo not to move their offices to other cities, and expressing the belief the controversy would be ended shortly.

Bankers Plan to Stop Off at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 12. (AP)—Members of the executive council of the American Institute of Banking, en route to San Antonio, Texas, for their annual meeting, will arrive here early tomorrow and will spend the day here before proceeding to Texas. They will be tendered a luncheon by local bankers.

Attempt to Bomb Italian Consulate Fails

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 12. (UP)—Police today frustrated an attempt to bomb the Italian consulate at Corboda, the newspaper Critica reported, but one policeman and a pedestrian were injured when the bomb exploded.

STORM WARNING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. (AP)—The weather bureau today issued the following warning: "Advisory storm warning: disturbance now of slight intensity, with center near and west of Nassau, moving toward Florida straits. No strong winds indicated."

Two Men Sealed In Mine To Die While Flames Defy Efforts Of Mountaineers

HENDERSON, Ky., Jan. 12. (AP)—Far back in the Kentucky hills Aaron Bridewell, 33, and Dorris Woods, 38, today were sealed tight in a blazing mine—a mine that will be their tomb.

The two men were working 300 feet back in a slope mine, one that goes into a hillside, late yesterday when fire broke out in the entrance, trapping them. Gasoline from an engine pulling the mine car became ignited, spread, and in a few minutes the mine entrance was a blazing inferno.

Rescue Crews Called

Carl Melton, owner of the mine, Emory Dixon and Pat Cates were working on the outside as the fire started. They attempted to reach the miners but could not get through the flames. Calls for mine rescue crews were sent to Evansville, Ind., Madisonville and Sturgis, Ky., but it was late at night before aid arrived on horseback and muleback. The roads in the vicinity are impassable for automobiles.

The volunteer workers labored heroically to stem the flames, but could make no headway. About an hour after the fire had started a signal bell, which is operated by a cable from within the mine, rang once, feebly. Watchers on the outside immediately dispatched the mine car into the flames but it came out empty. It was thought that falling timbers from the roof probably rang the bell.

Mine Ordered Sealed

At midnight last night G. P. Powell, Evansville, U. S. mine bureau inspector, announced that there was no chance for the men to be alive and ordered the mine sealed to smother the fire. The sealing of the mine was completed today. Inspector Powell said it probably would be at least four or five weeks before the mine could be opened, as the fire was expected to burn that long.

Approximately 350 persons, most of them on horses and mules, were at the scene early today to offer aid, including 28 members of mine rescue crews.

Both of the victims were married, and lived in this vicinity. Bridewell is survived by his widow and a four-year-old son and Woods by his widow and an eight-year-old son.

Five Men Injured In Shreveport Gas Blast

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 12. (UP)—Five men were injured, three of them seriously, when an accumulation of gas exploded in the basement of the Hawkins Drug store in the downtown district today, caused damage of more than $10,000. The blast caused a near-panic in the third floor of the city hall building, across the street, where a Bible class was in session. Those present thought the blast was in the city hall, and a near-stampede resulted.

Police Raid New York's Theatrical District

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (US)—Night clubs and cafes in the theatrical district were raided by prohibition agents and detectives early today. Seventeen waiters and clerks were arrested in 10 resorts. All were charged with unlawful possession of liquor. The raids were made on search warrants signed by Federal Commissioner Garret Cotter.

Little Hope Held For Record-Seeking Fliers

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (US)—More than 60 hours missing, little hope was held out this evening for William Kirkpatrick and Daniel Marra, who hopped off Friday at Farmington, Long Island, in quest of the altitude record. Fog, rain and snow over the entire area in which the plane might have made a forced landing today halted the search by air.

Coleman Poultry Company Building Lost in Fire

COLEMAN, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—Fire of undetermined origin last night destroyed a large sheet-iron building in the wholesale district occupied by the Coleman Poultry & Egg company and the Jarecki Manufacturing company. Damage to the building and contents was set at $20,000.

Two Girls Killed As Train Strikes Auto Near Dallas

DALLAS, Jan. 12. (AP)—Two young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Fletcher were killed and the parents injured at Lisbon, near here, tonight when their automobile was struck by an outbound Missouri-Kansas-Texas passenger train. A heavy fog obscured vision.

The Fletchers live in Dallas.

Parts of the automobile were strewn for some distance along the track, and the bare frame of the machine clung to the cow-catcher of the engine when it finally stopped.

The train was in charge of Engineer A. L. Ford and Conductor Joe Cain, both of Denison, Texas.

SNOW TRICKLES INTO GROUND

But Disagreeable Slush Irks City Dweller

Mother Nature's white apron of sleet and snow was fast becoming more like dust in the coal bin Sunday as melting snow pitter-pattered from rooftops and slushy puddles of mud, snow and ice marked the weather's gradual return from blizzardry to normalcy.

Temperatures all over Northwest Texas and Southwestern Oklahoma followed the upward trend of thermometers all over the Southwest, dispelling danger to livestock and comforting the wheat farmer, whose winter crops the melting snow will provide with much needed nourishment.

Though roads and streets were perhaps doubly dangerous, being more slippery than the icy coverings provided by the recent sleet and snow storms, no accidents of a serious nature had been reported Sunday night.

Sun shone for the first time in a week at Fort Worth Sunday, but in most other portions of Texas warmer weather was accompanied by rain or clouds, the Associated Press reported.

Fort Worth was reported free of ice. The streets of Dallas still retained some slush and scattered bits of ice as a fine mist fell. It was much warmer in both cities.

San Antonio was misty and warm. Rising temperature at Beaumont came hand in hand with a drizzling rain. It was warm and cloudy at Galveston.

TWO MEN DIE IN ARIZONA STORM

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 12. (AP)—Reports were received here tonight that two men were frozen to death and several others were missing on the Jerome-Prescott highway today as the result of one of the worst snow storms in the history of Yavapai county. The dead are Timothy Kirkpatrick, 35, manager of a stage company at Jerome, and David King, 32, truck driver. They were found three miles from their stalled motor car near the summit of Mingus mountain.

Princeton Acquires Newly Found Painting

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (US)—Princeton university has just acquired for its museum of art a newly discovered painting, "Wolf Attacking a Shepherd," by the great 16th century Flemish artist, Pieter Brueghel the elder.

News of the sale was confirmed today by Prof. Frank Jewett Mather, of Princeton, who said the picture had been purchased from the collections of Corona Mundi, international art center, Roerich museum, New York.

Long lost to the world, the panel was recently found in a private French collection and identified by the French expert, Fexal. As part of its pedigree it bears on the back the seal of the guild of St. Lucas and the coat-of-arms of the city of Antwerp.

HURTLING SHIP CARRIES STUNT ACES TO DEATH

Emmett Myers and L. P. Wheeler Killed in Second Recent Crash

VICTIM HAD 'QUIT'

Pilot Abandoned Wings When Gray's Plane Fell Short Time Ago

AMARILLO, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—Emmett Myers, 27, pilot who couldn't give up his wings, and L. P. Wheeler, 34, airplane salesman, both of Amarillo, were killed here today when their ship crashed in a 3,000-foot fall. The cause was not determined.

Myers, barnstormer for most of his four years in the air, "quit the game" about two weeks ago when a friend and four other persons died in a crackup here. But he wasn't satisfied on the ground and resumed flying.

Crash in Field

The ship, one of six giving flying exhibitions over the city, was circling about three miles from the English airport, to which both victims were attached. It went into a nose dive for 1,500 feet. The dive turned to a spin and the plane, a cabin monoplane, crashed in a wheat field.

There were three eye-witnesses. Art Smith, piloting another plane in the formation about a mile and a half away, saw the entire tragedy. Harold W. English, manager of the field and also in the flight, saw the last few turns of the ship as did Mrs. Joe Cannon, sitting in an automobile at the field.

Year's Toll at 10

Today's crash brought the death list for airplane accidents to 10 during the last year. Lieut. Robert H. Gray, the friend whose death caused Myers to stop flying for a short time, took his wife and three business men to their deaths Dec. 30 in a crash at the Hillcrest country club. Neither crash has been explained except as possibly due to structural failures, although both planes were regularly inspected and the ship involved today was operated under a special 10-hour inspection system.

Myers is survived by his widow and four children, ranging in age from eight to a baby, three brothers and a mother here, and several sisters. Wheeler is survived by his divorced wife in Tulsa and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Wheeler, Shawnee, Okla.

Wheeler had been with the field two months.

The formation was en route to the field after an exhibition eight miles west when the accident occurred. Smith, seeing the fatal spin, landed and rushed to the scene. English landed and then took off again. English found the bodies mangled in the wreckage. He reported both safety belts were fastened.

A total of 195,000 telephones and a population of 20,000,000 are in the new area.

Corsicana Darkened As Ice-Laden Wires Break

CORSICANA, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—Almost the entire city was in darkness for a short time Saturday night when ice-laden electric light wires gave way. Repairs were completed early today, after temporary service was arranged during the night.

Showers of rain and rising temperatures today removed final traces of the ice blanket which covered Corsicana for several days.

Dallas Man Kills Child and Self As Victrola Plays Yodel Lullaby

DALLAS, Jan. 12. (AP)—While a phonograph played a farewell lullaby, an Arlington, Texas, man, depressed by estrangement from his wife, today slashed the throats of his 2-year-old son and himself at the home of his sister here. Brice L. Adams, 28, and Billy, his son, died en route to a hospital.

The tragedy was witnessed by Doris Graves, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Graves. Mrs. Graves is Adams' sister. Adams, Billy and Doris were in the front room of the home while Mrs. Graves prepared dinner in the kitchen, the girl told police.

Adams placed a record, "Lullaby Yodel," on the phonograph, walked to a divan and sat down. Billy climbed to his knee. Adams drew a razor and cut his son's throat. The boy fell to the floor; Adams turned the weapon on himself, and as he fell, gathered the boy's body in his arms, [illegible]

Doris ran screaming to her mother. The phonograph still ground out its crooning melody as Mr. and Mrs. Graves entered the front room.

Graves told officers Adams had been depressed as a result of a separation with his wife two weeks ago. The family of five was divided when Adams brought Billy here and his wife kept two young daughters, Juanita and Florence. Adams and his son came here a week ago.

Justice of the Peace Robert Ogden conducted a coroner's inquest and returned verdicts of death from throat wounds inflicted by Adams in the case of the boy and death from throat wounds suicidal in the case of the father.

Adams is survived by his wife, Mrs. Gladys Wooten Adams; his two daughters; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Adams, Arlington, and a brother, Clyde Adams, Dallas.

Slayer of Detective to Face Sanity Jury

the Dallas county jail, because a man of his caliber is dangerous," Governor Moody said. "He is apt to kill several people with one of these pistols and daggers he seems to be able to obtain so easily."

At the time McKenzie killed Chief Street he was a fugitive, having a short time previously escaped from the Texas penitentiary, where he was serving a 99-year sentence for the murder of an El Paso policeman.

Street was shot to death as he approached McKenzie, who was loitering near a store. There had been a series of hold-ups and McKenzie's presence caused some one who was suspicious of him to call the police.

Found Hiding

As Street approached, McKenzie, the escaped convict, began shooting. Street fell mortally wounded. After an all-night search, deputy sheriffs found McKenzie hiding in an attic of a house near the scene of the shooting. He had been slightly wounded in one leg as he fled from the scene after shooting Street down, several detectives who accompanied Street on the call having sent a fusillade of shots after him.

A group of San Antonio citizens, including Rev. Rolfe P. Crum, pastor of St. Mark's Episcopal church, interested themselves in McKenzie after he had been convicted and sentenced to death. After they failed to influence the governor to commute the death sentence they got the condemned man before the court that tried him on an affidavit that expressed belief he was insane.

He was tried on this point before a jury and found insane. He was committed to the state hospital at San Antonio.

Governor Moody explained that under the law, a man who escapes a sentence imposed by a jury in a criminal trial because he is subsequently found insane can be given another sanity test when the superintendent of the institution where he is confined makes affidavit to the belief he is sane.

Dry Law Report Scheduled Today

tion enforcement unit from the treasury to the justice department.

Representative Andrew, Republican, Massachusetts, announced he would introduce a bill tomorrow to increase the scope and powers of the law enforcement commission, authorizing and directing the commission to inquire into and report to congress what changes, if any, are necessary or desirable in dealing with intoxicating liquors or in the laws relating thereto.

The bill would authorize an expenditure of $1,000,000 and would allow a period of two years for the commission to conduct the inquiry. The commission would have authority to employ experts and assistants, examine witnesses under oath and carry on investigation wherever it saw fit, whether in the United States or abroad.

In transmitting the commission's first report to congress, President Hoover planned to accompany the voluminous document with a comparatively brief message embodying his views on the recommendations which were drafted several months ago.

Submission of the report was delayed awaiting final determination by congressional leaders as to whether there should be a special joint committee to handle this subject or the recommendations should go to regular committees of the two houses.

For two years, before the marriage Tom has been jealous of Steve Ogelbay, rich and handsome bachelor. Downtown with her friend, Norrie Shane, Lovejoy meets Steve. Although Norrie refuses Lovejoy goes alone to lunch with him. She sees Tom. Frightened she starts to leave. Tom's eyes are on her. Norrie Shane's arrival saves Lovejoy. In September Tom and Lovejoy move to a suburb. When Thomas Jr. is born, a neighbor, Mrs. Aline Alderson, calls. Lovejoy is impressed by her smart appearance, but Norrie Shane, now the baby's nurse, thinks she is a fake and a four-flusher.

Happiness and love have remained steadfastly with Tom and Lovejoy Nicholson during their first year of married life. The arrival of Tom Jr. brought more joy to the little green bungalow. Then comes Mrs. Aline Alderson, rich but childless neighbor to sow the first seeds of discontent. When Tom refuses to go to the Aldersons' New Year's party, Lovejoy is incensed.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER VIII

The quarrel had been coming on for weeks.

It had been coming on like a gathering storm, ever since the first day that Mrs. Alderson had set foot in the little house. . . . Mrs. Alderson, with her clothes and her diamonds. With her light-hearted freedom and her pity for poor stay-at-home Lovejoy.

And now—like a storm—the quarrel broke over them.

They had been having their early supper. Lovejoy had only a mouthful or two.

But she had all she wanted.

She pushed her plate violently away from her, upsetting her glass of water, and stood up.

"Yes, and you can sit there, trying to look surprised, all you want to!" she rapped out. "But you know perfectly well that I lead the dullest, rottenest, gloomiest life that anybody leads anywhere, Tom Nicholson."

Tom's face didn't change. It kept its look of amazement and hurt and helplessness—the helplessness that a man always feels when the woman he loves suddenly turns on him.

"Good lord, Lovejoy," he said, and there was no anger in his voice. "I'm giving you every nickel I make. I'm doing everything that I can do to make you happy—"

"The dickens you are," Lovejoy snapped him up. "The first thing I've asked you to do for me in months—to go to this party with me—you calmly refuse to do. You can't afford to give me any amusement yourself, and you won't let me have any when it's offered free. . . . You're away from the house all day, seeing people and having a good time . . . and you never think of me here with nobody to talk to but the baby and the grocer and the man who comes for the rubbish—"

She turned from the table, pulling the cloth with her, as she turned. A plate crashed to the floor.

At the sound of it, she jumped and then burst into a storm of sobbing. She stood against the wall, laid her face on it and cried like an angry child.

"Lovejoy, you know I don't have a good time all day. You know I work like a horse all day and every day," Tom's voice came to her through the noise she was making. "And you know things aren't always going to be this way with us, sweetheart."

He came from his side of the untidy little table that had been so pretty three minutes before, and put his arms around her.

"We aren't always going to be poor," he whispered into her hair, his lean hard cheek against his wife's wet quivering one. "In another six or seven years we'll be sitting pretty. . . ."

"Six or seven years," sobbed Lovejoy, pushing him away from her. "Six or seven years. . . What good will that do me? I'll be 30 in six or seven years. . . . I want some fun now. Now, now, now! Do you hear me?"

"I'd be deaf as a post if I didn't," Tom answered, angry now, himself. "Do you realize that you're screaming like a fish-wife? Lovejoy what's really the matter with you? You're not raving like this just because of one party. There must be some other reason."

She raised her wet flaming face to him.

"Oh, I've told you I'm sick and tired of all this!" she told him, her sobs sinking lower and lower. "Look at this place! Look at these tiny rooms that other people have lived in . . . people as poor as we are, I suppose. Even the furniture isn't ours. . . . Not even those dishes on the table. . . . And here I'm stuck . . . in this hole."

She stopped crying and looked around the humble little place with eyes that seemed to see it for the first time. . . . There was a grease spot on the dining room table that had been there before they took the house. The cretonne cover of one of the chairs was worn into a big hole. The cord was gone from one of the window shades.

"This is a fine place for me to wind up my career," she said bitterly. "I'd always imagined that when I got married I'd have a decent house and a car of my own and know some nice people. And now the very first chance we have to make some decent friends, you refuse to take it. . . . Well, I'm going to that party tomorrow afternoon with or without you. . . ."

She broke off, all at once, her face working again and tears coming into her eyes.

"Oh, Tom, why are you so mean to me?" she wept, sinking to the floor.

"Mean to you? . . . Oh, my Aunt Maggie!" said Tom.

He leaned over her, pulled her to her feet and into his arms.

"Mean to you?" he repeated. "Why I'd lay my life down for you. . . . I'll even go to the doggoned party with you tomorrow.

He held her close to him until her sobs stopped, her face buried in his neck and her arms around him.

And so they made up their first quarrel.

Lovejoy, in her old black broadcloth suit and her year-old black velvet hat, felt very shabby when she and Tom rang the Alderson's front door-bell that next afternoon.

It was a cold gray day with a sky that looked like steel plate, and a high wind that made the dead leaves and bits of paper dance like elves along the gutters.

Lights twinkled behind all the windows of the Alderson's house. And the minute Lovejoy stepped into the big white-paneled hall the warmth and fragrance of summer seemed to fill her nostrils.

Through a doorway at the left of the hall she could see a wood fire burning in a big grate, and the room itself seemed to be filled with pink roses.

"Oh, there you are! Happy New Year!" Mrs. Alderson's voice greeted her as she and Tom stood uncertainly in the door-way.

She was standing just inside the crowded room, slim and blond in a black velvet dress. Beside her, towering above her, was a very tall broad man with gray hair and humorous kind gray eyes.

"Mrs. Nicholson, my husband," said Mrs. Alderson, "introducing him.

But her blue childlike gaze on Tom's face as she spoke.

"I feel as if I know you," she said to him. "I've seen you so many times in your backyard. . . . Why haven't you and your wife ever come over to play bridge with us. I've invited her time and time again."

Tom smiled his crooked boyish smile at her.

"Oh, we're stay-at-homes. We've a baby, you know, that keeps us tied down," Lovejoy heard him say as she shook hands with Mrs. Alderson's husband.

She found herself wondering how a girl as pretty and as young as she could have married this middle-aged man.

"For money, I suppose," she decided.

But what was money compared to the love of a man like Tom . . . a man who was young and good looking and heaps of fun? Why, just living with him was an adventure in itself!

"I wouldn't exchange Tom for all the money in the world," she told herself, when she stood beside him at the table in the dining room where a wonderful sea of sandwiches and cakes and punch was laid out.

She took in the gold-etched plates, the cut glass tumblers with an "A" etched on them . . . the solid silver forks and the lace-edged napkins . . . and the well dressed prosperous crowd of strange people who moved in and out of the luxurious rooms.

"Tom," she said solemnly, when the two of them were out in the twilight, on their way back to the little Stallings lane house once more. "Tom, truly I'm not sorry we're poor. I'd rather have you and the baby and all the debts in the world than change places with Mrs. Alderson. She has everything—but that husband of hers looks so old. She couldn't be happy with him!"

"Why, she looks perfectly happy to me." Tom answered evenly. "And her husband's a fine fellow. I thought, I had quite a long talk with him, and I liked him. We'll go over there some night, and play them a hand of bridge or two, if you'd like to."

It was only a week later that Tom heard from Mrs. Alderson's husband.

He came home from the office early in the afternoon—an unheard of thing—and the instant Lovejoy saw him she knew that some good fortune had come to him.

Boy Scouts to Hold Week's Program In Observance of 20th Anniversary

Boy Scouts of America in Wichita Falls will begin one of the most extensive programs ever staged by the organization here Friday night, Feb. 7, the 20th anniversary of the scout movement, when programs and various activities will be presented each night for a week, culminating in the three-county jamboree to be held Friday night, Feb. 14, at the Memorial auditorium.

The celebrations will open with all scouts renewing the oath and laws of the organization in a number of special parents' night programs. Saturday night, Feb. 8, there will be a hike with games and cooking and a special scout radio broadcast. Preachers at the various churches have been asked to deliver scout sermons on Sunday of the anniversary week.

On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the week talks will be given at the city schools and many of the luncheon clubs. A public court of honor and a scout rally will be held Monday night, a father and son party and banquet Tuesday night, a meeting of all troop committeemen of the city Wednesday night and a party in which the executive board of Wichita Falls Boy Scouts will be hosts to the scoutmasters of the city Thursday night.

The climaxing event of the celebration will come Friday night with the quarterly three-county jamboree at the auditorium. Scores of interesting events and contests have been planned for scouts of Archer, Clay and Wichita counties, all of whom have been invited to participate in the jamboree.

Search for Missing Flier to Continue

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12. (US)—Plans were complete today for an airplane search for Maurice Graham, Western Air Express mail flier who has been missing since Friday between Las Vegas, Nev., and Salt Lake City, Utah, when the violent blizzard now sweeping the region abates.

Company officials believe the veteran pilot landed safely at one of the 50 emergency fields and has not been able to make his whereabouts known because telephone and telegraph lines in the storm area are down.

Graham, who is 35, was one of America's foremost fliers during world war. He was leader of the air squadron which located the famous "lost battalion."

Rubio Still Undecided When He Will Head Home

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 12. (AP)—Telephone communication was established today with the party of Pascual Ortiz Rubio, president-elect of Mexico, which is stopping at the Grand canyon, Arizona.

Speaking for the president-elect, his secretary, Eduardo F. Chasaro, said no announcement has been made by Rubio as to when the party will leave for Mexico City. Jan. 15 was set yesterday as a tentative date.

The canyon was not isolated, he said. Trains were maintaining their regular schedules, although yesterday the worst snowstorm in 18 years disabled telegraph and telephone lines.

Rapid Strides Made In Americanization of Indian

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. (US)—Rapid strides in the "Americanization of the original Americans"—the Indians—is being made by the Indian service by the gradual elimination of Indian schools and the placing of the children, now attending them, in public institutions, the interior department announced today.

TWO HIGHWAY MEETINGS HERE

Wichita to Entertain Visitors This Week

Two important meetings marking highway improvement in this section of the state are to be held in Wichita Falls on Thursday and Friday of this week, according to chamber of commerce officials.

Delegates from Abilene, Breckenridge, Graham, Olney, Newcastle, Archer City and other cities south of Wichita Falls are expected here Thursday in a motorcade now being arranged by the Graham Chamber of Commerce in celebartion of the opening of the paved highways through that city from Wichita Falls to Breckenridge. Members of the visiting group will be entertained with luncheon here by the chamber of commerce. One of the principal speakers will be Judge W. R. Ely of Abilene, member of the state highway commission, and there is a possibility that R. S. Sterling, chairman of the state highway commission, also will be present, it was said.

On Friday, the highway committee of the local chamber of commerce, headed by R. L. Underwood, will entertain a meeting of representatives of cities between Wichita Falls and Texarkana with reference to furthering plans for improving highway No. 5. A temporary organization was effected last month at Bonham, and it is planned to adopt definite plans Thursday to the hard-surfacing of the Texarkana-Amarillo route through this city.

HOME-TOWN TALK

By B. D. D.

about the reopening of the Mexican consulate at Laredo and the reopening of the port of entry into Mexico there. In the meantime goods destined for Mexico and routed through Laredo are being rerouted through Brownsville and Matamoras.

We expect to see the Mexican government relent in its reprisal against Laredo sooner or later, likely sooner. Mexico will do this when urged strongly enough by the state department. In the meantime a lot of Mexican interests at Neuvo Laredo and elsewhere are probably being as badly hurt as the business interests of Laredo. These interests are doubtless also appealing to the Mexican government.

We read in the Sunday fashion page that cotton is popular in the new costumes for women for spring. To our way of thinking there is nothing more attractive than cotton in its various forms of woven goods. A good deal of our silk is now made from cotton so that the change in the mode isn't going to mean any big increase in the consumption of raw cotton. Farmers will do well to read the figures on the cotton carryover and stick to that resolution to reduce the acreage for the spring planting.

Unless there is at least a desire on the part the two factions within the Democratic party in Texas to forget past differences and come together for the sole purpose of making the party the vehicle for good government in Texas the effort to bring them together to vote in the same conventions and primaries might as well be dropped.

"Necktie parties," reprisals and discriminations can only to serve to make permanent what it is hoped has been ouly a temporary aberration.

For 15 years or more the fight between prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists hindered political progress in Texas and cast a blight over public affairs. What a man had said or voted about prohibition some time or other was made the test by which we chose our public officials and governer our support or opposition to measures. Under this condition a lot of political charlatans got into office and rode the necks of the people. Both prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists were to blame.

We had just about gotten over this obsession in our political progress, or maybe retrogression, and we would like to be spared a similar experience over the record of the 1928 campaign. But maybe it's hoping too much and maybe we have just got to have a political cat and dog fight.

Government Warns Of New $10 Counterfeit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. (US)—Warning against a new $10 bill counterfeit bearing the name of the federal reserve bank of Chicago, was made today by the postoffice department.

The bill has many mistakes, the warning says, and should not deceive the careful handler of currency.

The counterfeit is printed from photo-engraved plates on one sheet of poor paper, and plates being about a fifth of an inch short. Both face and back lack the luster of the genuine, and the treasury seal, which should appear in green, appears partly in black. The back of the bill is a drab green, decidedly off color.

Rabbit Breeders Plan Opening of Display

Members of the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association in this community will hold a meeting Tuesday night, Jan. 14, at 7:30 o'clock in the basement of the courthouse for the purpose of completing final arrangements for the three-day rabbit show to be held at 320 Ohio avenue Jan. 16-18 inclusive, according to W. L. Smith, corresponding secretary of the organization.

Reports of all committees which have been at work on preparations for the exhibit will be heard at the meeting Tuesday night, Mr. Smith said. The public is invited to attend meetings of the association, it was announced.

Officers Arrest Man On Jury Indictment

L. E. Johnson, indicted by the 30th district grand jury last week on charges of swindling, is under arrest at Big Spring, according to information given Sunday by Sheriff W. G. Bradley who requested authorities to make the arrest. Dick Morris, deputy, left Sunday for Big Spring, expecting to bring his prisoner back on Monday. Johnson is accused of giving a hot check for an amount exceeding $50 to Duke Martin at Electra.

'Underworld War' in Texas Town Reopens Probe of 'Cemetery Murder'

MARSHALL, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—An intensive search was under way today for two suspects in the unsolved "cemetery slaying" of H. B. Alston here 11 months ago. The suspects were implicated yesterday by a man placed in jail under a peace bond after he was said to have threatened the lives of the other two men.

The pair were arrested at the time of the original investigation after Alston was found in a cemetery with his head crushed, but were released for lack of evidence. Warrants for their rearrest were issued by County Attorney John E. Taylor late yesterday. The case has been reopened, Taylor said, and District Judge Reuben A. Hall likely will decide with the opening of court Monday whether a special grand jury investigation will be made.

The new delevopments in the case, officers said, were brought about by "warring factions in the underworld of Marshall," revealed through investigations of the theft of automobile casings. Both suspects were in Marshall yesterday but fled when the warrants were issued.

The man held in jail said he saw the others carry Alston's body into the cemetery on the night of Feb. 15, 1929, and said a blood-stained pipe found near the body was made by him. The killing occurred in his room in a hotel near the cemetery, he asserted.

Veteran of Lee's Last Stand Sees Filming of Historic Event

By DUANE HENNESSY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 12. (UP)—William H. Hazel stood outside a farmhouse in the little town of Appomattox, Va., on April 9, 1865, a half-starved and ragged veteran of the army of the Confederacy.

Inside the house Gens. Ulysses S. Grant and Robert E. Lee were making history. They were drawing up the terms of Lee's surrender, which marked the ending of the Confederacy's secession from the union.

Hazel, at the age of 82, was called from the cabinet ship in a Hollywood film studio to see the historical event re-enacted before the cameras and microphones in "Only the Brave."

Memories of those April days of almost 65 years ago still are vividly clear in his memory and as the film surrender was portrayed by two men almost exact duplicates of Grant and Lee in facial characteristics, tears came to Hazel's eyes.

Tells of Event

"We were trying to cut our way through the encircling enemy lines," he recalled. "We knew that it was hopeless and felt that the end was near. On the morning of surrender, we saw the Yankess had cut us off.

"I can see, as plainly as if it were yesterday, a blue-coated officer come riding out of the enemy lines. He carried a flag of truce, but some of our sharp-shooters did not see the banner and fired at him. He waved the flag again.

"There was no more firing and he rode up to where General Lee sat, dismounted, under a big apple tree. I was close enough to the general to see his face as he sat there dejectedly. The union officer and General Lee shook hands and talked for a time.

"A few moments later the two, accompanied by some of Lee's staff rode away together. Immediately afterward, we were ordered to stack arms and not to touch our rifles again under any circumstances."

In Sorry Plight

Hazel said they knew what was happening and, in a way, were glad. The Confederate troops' position was hopeless and growing worse. Except for one daily issue of hard tack and a tiny piece of pork, they had been without rations for five days.

"That evening, General Grant issued us half rations," he said. "He had his own men divide their food with us."

"It was evening when the two commanders met in the McLean house where the surrender actually took place. I was among those who wandered about and waited outside, knowing what was going on. I shall never forget the mixed sensations of those moments. Black despair mingled with relief that it was all over and that I was still alive."

Hazel enlisted in the Sixth North Carolina volunteers in April of 1864 at the age of 16. He was with General Jubal early on his famous raid through the Shenandoah valley, which ended on the outskirts of Washington, and participated in the battle of Cedar creek.

"The talkies will make this the most vivid of all civil war pictures," Hazel said of the film in production. "The soldiers can show the feeling that was ours during the momentous surrender."

'Parrot Fever' Kills Pittsburgh Woman

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 12. (AP)—A death, believed to have been caused by "parrot fever," occurred today at Freeport, near here.

The victim was Mrs. William Shields, 51. Dr. C. A. Rogers, who performed a postmortem examination, said her ailment had every symptom of the tropical disease. A 14-year-old daughter of Mrs. Shields is seriously ill. Mrs. Shields was said to have been stricken Jan. 1, two days after a parrot, given her by a relative at Christmas time, died.

Business Man Denies Complicity in Slaying

Guzzardo was shot down on the street by shotgun fire from an automobile last night. He died at a hospital from 30 slug wounds, murmuring the name "Sam."

Parole Hearing For Doctor Cook Scheduled Today

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Jan. 12. (AP)—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, arctic explorer and oil promoter, again is to be the subject of a deliberate body, and its findings may result in his freedom from the federal penitentiary here. The prison parole board at a session beginning tomorrow, is to take up his application for a parole.

The explorer has served almost five years of a sentence of 14 years and 9 months, imposed on him in federal court at Fort Worth, Texas, for fraudulent use of the mails in oil promotion activities.

Fitts to Hear Hefner's Tale

'All-Talkie' Witness to Give Prosecutor 'Facts'

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12. (US)—Otis Hefner, the all-talkie sensation of the William Desmond Taylor murder case, left here tonight for Los Angeles to tell District Attorney Buron Fitts that maybe after all, he doesn't know much, if anything about the historic mystery.

He is accompanied by Capt. Eddie King, Mr. Fitt's investigator, Ed H. Whyte, state parole officer and a strong hunch that somebody has been "talking out of turn."

Hefner is the young man whose twice-told tales of what he claimed to know about the murder of the movie director created a big stew when former Gov. Friend W. Richardson threw it into the political pot several weeks ago.

He did most of his talking in 1926 and was rewarded with a parole from Folsom. Now that he has been uprooted from his job and attempts to stage a come-back and support his little family, he would just as soon be left alone. But if Fitts must have the facts, here is what Hefner says he will tell the Los Angeles district attorney:

That most, if not all, he ever said about the case was hearsay with him; that he never stated to anybody he could identify a woman he once said he saw leave the Taylor bungalow on the night of the murder; that he does not know where Edward F. Sands, Taylor's old valet and now suspect in the case, is at the present time, and that the story he told Governor Richardson and saw published in San Francisco newspapers in the last few days is the old tale which the Los Angeles authorities discarded as unworthy of consideration.

And just to make the plot thicker —with contradictions—Hefner today told King and Whyte that the Sands he knew is not the man whose photograph and description have been sent out all over the world in the search for the Taylor case solution.

"That's not Sands in that picture," he said today at the office of Whyte. "That looks just like a man now at Folsom—a fellow who 'fell' from Los Angeles for robbin' women of valuables."

Pressed for some details of his story, Hefner asked to be excused. Such trifles as the description of the automobile he said Sands borrowed from Taylor on the night of the murder or a detailed account of his movements on that night appeared to distress him.

"I didn't think much of this story when I told it, and I don't think any more of it now," he reluctantly admitted.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER DIE

Houston Shooting Results In Two Deaths

HOUSTON, Jan. 12. (AP)—Glen Turner and his 12-year-old daughter, Edna, whom he shot before turning the pistol upon himself, died within two hours of each other in a hospital here Sunday.

Friday afternoon Turner went to the school his daughter, Edna, and his son, Archer, attended, invited them to an automobile ride and carried them to the home of his estranged wife, where he fired bullets into their heads. Then he shot himself.

The two bodies were to be taken to El Campo for burial, according to tentative plans outlined to the two undertaking firms.

In the kitchen of his wife's little home Friday afternoon, torn by domestic strife, Turner felled his two children, and then, thinking them in the throes of death, turned the pistol upon himself.

The girl, Edna, was shot through the forehead. Archer was shot twice, one bullet entering his head behind the left ear and emerging below the chin, the other grazing his forehead. His condition Sunday was regarded as critical.

All three victims underwent operations Friday night, but the lives of father and daughter could not be saved, despite desperate efforts of surgeons.

Plane's Condition To Dictate Plans For Eielson Hunt

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 12. (AP)—Immediate plans for renewing the Eielson-Borland search depends upon the serviceability of the cabin plane in which Capt. Pat Reid and his two mechanics, William Hughes and Jim Hutchinson, landed yesterday at Unalakleet, Alaska, after being out of contact with the outside world for a week, Maj. H. G. Deckard, in charge of the rescue expedition, announced from Nulato today.

Major Deckard said he and Pilot Matt Niemenen would take off for Unalakleet, when weather conditions permitted, to examine the plane and decide whether it should be returned to Fairbanks for repairs. The plane was forced down at the mouth of Ungalik river in the Norton sound district Jan. 4 when Reid, accompanied by Niemenen in a sister plane, attempted to fly from Fairbanks to Nome to engage in the search for Pilot Carl Ben Eielson and Mechanic Earl Borland, who were lost last Nov. 9 while flying to the fur trading shin Nanuk, icebound at North Cape, Siberia. Reid was forced down in a storm, while Niemenen returned to Nulato.

Reid's plane was slightly damaged in the landing and temporary repairs were soon made, but the aviators remained at Ungalik river until last Saturday because of adverse weather.

Six Die as Home Of Ohioan Burns

FINDLAY, Ohio, Jan. 12. (AP)—Six persons, including five members of the same family, burned to death early today when fire destroyed the home of Wilson Long, 12 miles east of here.

The dead: Wilson Long, 46, his mother, Nancy Long, 78, his sister, Laura, 52; a daughter, Helen, 17; a son Leroy, 4; and a friend, Leona Ewing, 14.

The fire started on the first floor of the home where Nancy and Laura Long, and the two girls were sleeping. It was the theory of authorities that a kerosene lamp had been upset.

Two Texas Pioneers Succumb at Luling

LULING, Texas, Jan. 12. (AP)—Two pioneer residents, neighbors, died here last night, and 10 minutes later the sister of one of them died in Fresno, Calif.

The dead: Louis Buerger Sr., Mrs. Tom Watson, both of Luling; Mrs. Mary Ure, Mrs. Watson's sister.

"Port Work" Program Given At Floral Heights League

An interesting program on settlement work among foreign people featured the Sunday evening meeting of the Floral Heights Methodist Epworth Young People, with Will McKenney as leader.

After the song service opening the meeting, the leader took charge of the program, entitled "Port Work," the first lesson on the home special which is "Settlement Work Among Foreign Speaking People." The Bible lesson was followed by prayer concluding with the Lord's prayer.

Dan Cox reviewed for the society the immigration laws of the United States. He said that there was no immigration law concerning the coming into the United States of Mexicans, but there were certain regulations which had to be observed before they could legally remain in this country.

Dick Mallard told about the work of the Rev. J. E. Reifschneider, port missionary for the Woman's Missionary organization of the Methodist church, south, at Galveston. Rev. Mr. Reifschneider occupies a unique place of service, speaks seven different languages and because of his great ability, has been made a government immigration official. During the year 1928, 696 persons were deported from Galveston. In cases of deportation, Mr. Reifschneider has a special service to render.

Mary Lou Johnson read a very interesting story, "Sneakers," a story of a Mexican family that came into the United States without observing the regulations necessary.

After the program, Thomas C. Scott, president, took charge of the business meeting. Minutes were read by the secretary, Mildred Johnson. A report was given by Emmaline Lewis, treasurer, of the number of membership dues paid. A cabinet meeting was called for the coming week, the date to be announced later.

Mrs. J. C. McCormick was a visitor.

The meeting was dismissed with a song and the benediction, about 45 members being present.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Sparrows are being fed at our back door even though they are summer pests. They must be more cautious of danger than the early settlers of America. They take a peck at a crumb, dart a quick look up for a threatening enemy, another peck and flash into the air at the first alarm.

◇ ◇ ◇

We have talked about the cold. Yet in Peking, 208 beggars died in the street in the cold and snow and in Honan 700 Nationalist troops were frozen to death.

◇ ◇ ◇

We learned by inquiry Saturday that the plumbers were all "dated up." This is the season they are popular as debutantes. Yet winter has its charms if one will forget cold feet and ears and plumbers' bills.

◇ ◇ ◇

We might, however, eliminate the cold ears for women. Hats may have purposely had flaps this season.

◇ ◇ ◇

Outdoor frolickers keep warm by moving. We saw shockheaded boys without hats pushing one another in boxes Saturday. And on the hill beside the auditorium, crowds were gathered, coasting down the sixth street.

◇ ◇ ◇

There's a steep and slippery in-cline from the Clinic hospital to Seventh street and we held our breath, fearing some ambitious lad might dive into traffic on Seventh from that incline.

◇ ◇ ◇

But it was fun in company on the auditorium slope of the street. There were sleds of all kinds, more home-made than "store bought." We remembered one such snow in our girlhood when everyone coasted down what was known as "College Hill"—not minding the gully at the foot of the incline. There were swell "ladder" parties and one man who had been warmed with a drink, went down on a spade and was warmed with a spade.

◇ ◇ ◇

We said outdoor frolickers kept warm by moving. Yet Saturday morning we heard a "chug, chug, chug," and there passing our house was a little motor pulling a sleigh, chugging along at the rate of perhaps a mile an hour. But the boy riding and guiding it was gloriously happy.

◇ ◇ ◇

Out in Country Club Estates, the little lake in front of the Perkins' home was covered thick with ice on Friday. They were breaking holes in it and trying to flood the top with water so the ice would make a smoother skating surface for Saturday.

There's no more beautiful sport than ice skating—when one knows how to use them. But they're hard to get around on; we speak from experience.

We are afraid the hens will be next to complain of the weather. We fancy them walking to the doors of the henhouses and taking a look at the wide expanse of white and saying to themselves, "Uh-uh, what's the use of working when there's nothing green to eat?"

◇ ◇ ◇

We think "pond" sounds much prettier than "tank" and in spite of the colloquial "tank," we will continue to call small bodies of water (those smaller than lakes) "ponds." This is brought to our mind because so many people speak of the "tanks" being frozen.

Musicians Club Will Present Real Artist

Each season Reinald Werrenrath, who will sing in a concert at the Memorial auditorium Monday evening, Jan. 27, under the auspices of the Musicians club, gives at least two New York recitals. On the occasion of the last given at Carnegie hall, the Times headlined that "Reinald Werrenrath Stirs Large Audience."

This seemed to be the concensus of opinion of the New York papers. The World said, "Werrenrath never renders—he sings—something that everyone realized during an afternoon of arias, recent English ballads and a handful of current impressions."

Mr. Werrenrath, who seldom sings less than 70 concerts during a season and often more than 80, will be heard in Wichita Falls in several new songs as well as the old favorites that are so much associated with him they are always demanded.

45,000 Dressmakers Await Strike Order

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (US)—All conferences with manufacturers having failed to effect a peaceful settlement 45,000 New York dressmakers are awaiting the order to strike. The walkout is expected by the end of this month. Elimination of the sweat shop is the chief aim of the unionists.

Mothers-in-Law Usually to Blame For Marital Rifts

"When the Newlyweds Fail to Hit It Off and Get Along Together It Is Nearly Always Because His Mother or Her Mother Is Standing on the Sidelines Promoting a Fight," Says Dorothy Dix.

A Daniel, a second Daniel come to judgment. A Canadian judge has done something that even the most optimistic believed could not be done. He has found a way to stop a meddling family from interferring in the affairs of a young married couple. A boy husband was arrested for beating his girl wife. At the trial it was shown that most of the trouble between the two was fomented by the man's mother, and in passing sentence the magistrate said: "I sentence you to two years in the reformatory with 10 lashes twice during imprisonment, but I will suspend sentence on condition that you receive no advice or interference from your family. All that your own family has to do to send you to jail and give you the lash is to interfere in your affairs. If they do, back you come for sentence."

Doubtless this concrete picture of the disaster that she will bring upon her son by stirring up trouble between him and his wife will hold this mother for a while and make her refrain from telling him what she thinks about his wife and what a poor, imperfect creature she is and what he ought to do about it.

She will not like to visualize her darling boy languishing behind prison bars and having his tender flesh raw and bleeding from the merciless cut of a whip. Rather than have that happen to him, she will forego the pleasure of criticizing her daughter-in-law, but it takes an object lesson like that to make a mother see the harm she is doing and that in alienating her son from his wife and sowing discord between them and breaking up his home, she is doing him just as great a wrong and ruining his life just as much as if she sent him to a prison cell to suffer the shame of the punishment of the wife-beater.

According to statistics, mothers-in-law are the champion home-wreckers and are at the bottom of more divorces than all other causes combined, and common observation shows that when the newlyweds fail to hit it off and get along together, it is nearly always because his mother or her mother is standing on the sidelines promoting a fight.

Left to themselves, Angelina and Augustus view each other through the rosy mists of love and never find out what a mistake they have made in picking each other out for husband and wife, and when they spat it as children do and the next minute they kiss and make up and forget it, and all is well.

But it is mother, who is far from being in love with her in-law, who pulls the scales from Angelina's eyes and makes her see what a poor family worm of the dust Augustus is or who awakens Augustus to the fact that Angelina has a million defects that he had not previously perceived. It is mother who wills Angelina and Augustus with suspicions of each other and who, when they quarrel, urges Angelina not to let herself be trampled upon and bids Augustus stand firm and show that he is master of the house.

It is not too much to say that the favorite indoor sport of millions of mothers is picking on their in-laws. They take a fiendish and malicious joy in pointing out to their children every fault of those to whom they are married. It is mother who darkly wonders if Augustus really has to work at night during an emergency, as he says he did. It is mother who reminds Angelina that Augustus forgot to bring her flowers on her anniversary day. It is mother who opines that Augustus must be lacking in ambition, for he gets along so slowly. It is mother who criticises Augustus' table manners and his grammar and the way he has of laughing at his own stories.

Angelina may know that Augustus is good and kind and honest and industrious and thought herself lucky enough to get him for a husband before mother began pointing out his shortcomings, but after mother has kept up long enough she only sees his blemishes and wonders why she married him.

And it is the same way with Augustus. He doesn't know much about women nor how much their clothes should cost nor how many hours a day a wife should put in at hard labor at home, and he never would have found out that Angelina was extravagant and that she played bridge when she should have been sitting in the kitchen watching the stock pot and that she gadded too much if mother hadn't told him all about it.

But by the time mother gets through pulling out all of Angelina's angel feathers he feels that she is a total loss as a wife and that he has drawn a blank in the matrimonial lottery.

Nor can mother keep her fingers out of her children's matrimonial pies and let them cook them up their own way and according to their own taste. She is bound to tell them how to do it and to try to force them to use her own recipe, with the result that "mother says" is the fighting word in thousands of households.

For there is nothing else on earth that infuriates a young wife like having her mother-in-law dictate to her about how she shall run her house and whether she shall use doilies or tablecloths or use her best china every day. And there is nothing that makes the young husband say things that bring on a family row like having his wife's mother back-seat chauffeur his home and to have mother's opinion flung continually in his teeth.

And the pitiful thing about these mothers who break up their children's homes and drive them to divorce is that they don't do it with deliberate malice. They are not trying to separate their children from their husbands and wives. They don't desire to see their grandchildren half-orphaned. When they criticise their in-laws they don't realize that they are doing their best to make them dissatisfied with their bargains. They don't even stop to think that when they kill their children's love for their husbands and wives they are bringing misery upon them.

What makes them interfere, then, in their children's matrimonial affairs? Jealousy, because they can't bear for their children to love any one else better than they do them and because a mother just can't ever realize that her children grow up and she feels she has a right to run their lives for them as long as they live and because women just naturally like to meddle in other people's business anyway.

EXQUISITE AFTERNOON FROCK

Pattern 1821

By ANNE ADAMS

A frock that has all the feminine qualities to make a smart afternoon costume, is this model of silk crepe. The front panel, the raised line of the skirt flare and the dip-in-back are new features of importance. A bit of dainty lace, for color and cuffs, adds interest.

Design 1821 would be equally lovely if fashioned of sheer velvet, crepe de chine or satin. Black, wine, dalhia, brown, bottle green and rust are outstanding shades for the coming spring season. Cream or ecrue lace should be chosen.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 4⅛ yards of 40-inch material.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model. The pattern has ample and exact instructions. Yardage is given for every size. A perfect fit is guaranteed.

Patterns will be delivered upon receipt of fifteen cents (15c) in coins carefully wrapped or stamps. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size wanted.

The new winter fashion book is 15 cents, but only 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and order to Record News Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Fellowship Group Has Interesting Sunday Meeting

An interested audience heard the program given at the Senior Fellowship of the Church of the Good Shepherd in the parish house Sunday evening at 6:30.

Helen Green, chairman of membership and fellowship, was leader for the evening and gave the devotional. Kay Cason followed with a short talk.

Fannie and Laura Godfrey sang several pretty duets, accompanying themselves with the uke, after which another interesting talk was made by Florence Cole.

The "dope sheet," a bright feature of the Fellowship meetings, equivalent to a peppy news sheet, was read by Sally Bancroft. After the closing song, the regular singsong of humorous numbers was held and the group of about 35 were served apples and gingersnaps.

Little Theater Group To Be Entertained

Mrs. Gose Waggoner, said to be the only harpist in Wichita Falls, one of the few in Texas and probably one of the youngest in the United States, will give a program of harp music preceding the one-act play to be presented to members only of the Little Theater organization, Monday evening at the Little Theater playhouse on Polk and Avenue H.

The presentation of "The Valiant," by several Little Theater members will constitute the regular monthly program. Frederick Newth will play the lead and other members of the cast include several of those who were prominent in "White Collars," the recent triumph of the organization.

DAIRY TALKS START TONIGHT

Electra C-C Secures Experts For Meetings

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Jan. 12.—Several dairy experts have been secured by the chamber of commerce to give advice on various dairy subjects at the series of meetings to be held by the chamber of commerce next week, in cooperation with G. C. McGown, Wichita county agricultural agent.

The speakers and their subjects include R. L. Pou, Dallas, production manager, Southwest Dairy Products company, "Feeds and Feeding of Dairy Cattle" and "Marketing"; D. T. Simons, Fort Worth, field man, American Jersey Cattle club, "Breeding" and "The Value of Bull Circles"; M. B. Oates, Fort Worth, agricultural agent for Fort Worth and Denver, "Pasture Crops and Permanent Pastures"; J. L. Mizell, Wichita county dairy agent, "The Value of Testing Cows Regularly" and "The Cow Testing Association"; O. K. Barnes, agricultural department, Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, "Care of Milk on the Farm and Transportation of Dairy Products."

The programs will be held at the following places: Friberg school house, Monday night, Jan. 13; Valley View school house, Tuesday night, Jan. 14; Enterprise school, Wednesday night, Jan. 15; Clara school, Thursday night, Jan. 16. The group of experts will spend each day in the community where the program is to be given that night and will inspect dairy herds and discuss practical production at the farms and dairies where the farmers are interested in the dairy industry.

Methodists Form Broad Program Of Dry Legislation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. (AP)—A broad legislative program, including provision of whatever legislation, money or men might be necessary to enforce prohibition, was laid down today in a statement of policy of the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The statement, issued jointly by Bishop James Cannon Jr., chairman, and Dr. E. L. Crawford, secretary of the board, advocated administration of the law by its friends; enactment of the Sheppard bill to make the purchaser of liquor equally guilty with the seller; passage of such legislation as may be recommended by the law enforcement commission, and the extensive development of an educational policy in support of the 18th amendment.

Coming on the eve of the submission to the house by its appropriations committee of the treasury-postoffice supply bill, which carries funds for prohibition enforcement, the statement called for money to "meet the need for adequate enforcement, whatever the amount may be."

Motor Ills Halt Army Air Tourists

MINOT, N. D., Jan. 12. (AP)—The army's midwinter air tourists on a cross-country flight were kept at Minot today by motor trouble. They had been scheduled to hop off for Great Falls, Mont., the next overnight stop.

Seventeen of the 22 starters from Selfridge field, Michigan, arrived late yesterday. Decision to remain here until tomorrow was due in part to hopes that the other ships would catch up to the main body so all could proceed together again.

The five stragglers were forced down yesterday in Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota. Weather conditions, motor trouble and ski mishaps caused the delays.

Maj. Ralph Royce is in command of the flight, the western terminus of which is Spokane, Wash. From Spokane the ships will return to Selfridge field over a route slightly to the south of that being followed now.

BEES DISRUPT CHURCH RITES

Stinging Pests Offer Serious Problem to Worshippers

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

PARK RIDGE, Ill., Jan. 12. (UP)—Kneeling quietly and without fidgeting while praying in church upon a Sunday morning is difficult at best.

If a bee with a sharp stinger sinks that stinger into an exposed portion of the kneeler's anatomy, the business of kneeling quietly becomes very difficult indeed.

That, in brief, is a resume of the troubles which faced parishoners of St. Mary's Episcopal church in this fashionable suburb of Chicago tonight.

To the casual reader, perhaps, such a situation sounds ludicrous. In reality it is serious; frought with danger. If the casual reader still is inclined to snicker over what is facing unwary worshippers at St. Mary's, it can be suggested merely that he attend a service at the church.

Embarrassing and Painful

While the Rev. R. Everett Carr is leading the prayer and all the congregation is immersed in silence, it is not unlikely that the casual reader will feel a sudden sharp pain. He will yelp, the Rev. Mr. Carr will stop reading the prayer. And the ensuing confusion will be embarrassing as well as painful.

It will be the nefarious work of another of those pesky bees, which have been harrassing the long suffering congregation on and off for some 15 years.

Sixteen years ago the edifice was erected. A year later a swarm of bees took up their residence somewhere in the walls of the building. Church annals recount many and unpleasant experiences with them. Visiting notables, pretty women, ministers—all have been attacked and routed effectively at one time or another by the bees of St. Mary's church.

Bees Repulsed

The bees finally became so generous with their stinging two years ago that the Rev. Mr. Carr called in all able-bodied men in the parish to wield trowels and hammers. Cracks were caulked and holes were filled.

At last the bees were repulsed, thought the Rev. Mr. Carr. He sighed in relief. For two years affairs of the church went along sedately and calmly enough. But it was not to last.

While the congregation was singing a hymn the other night, the organ boomed out a particularly robust crescendo. The walls of the church vibrated. In swarmed the long absent bees, presumably by then very hungry.

Whether they were or not, they created havoc in the auditorium, stung several parishoners vigorously and sent the rest scurrying to comparative safety in the darkness outside.

Members of the congregation since have spent their spare hours tapping the walls in a vain effort to find the hive.

"We simply must find it," the Rev. Mr. Carr told the United Press tonight, "else we shall not be able to worship in safety. I have called in the services of several bee experts, however, and I hope to be able to give out a reassuring report on the bee situation soon."

Senate to Settle Rate on Cuban Sugar This Week

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. (AP)—A decision, expected to have some influence on the final vote on the tariff bill in the senate, will be reached early this week when that body determines whether there shall be a higher duty on Cuban sugar or the rate left as in existing law.

Three days of debate on the proposal of the finance committee majority to raise the levy from 1.76 to 2.20 cents a pound as against 2.40 cents in the house measure have developed four different viewpoints, and the general feeling of observers tonight was that the votes of eastern Republicans would decide the issue.

Chairman Smoot of the finance committee has championed the cause of those advocating the 2.20 cent duty; Senators Ransdell and Broussard, Louisiana Democrats, have come out for the house increase; Senators Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, and LaFollette, Republican independent, Wisconsin, have opposed any raise at all, and Senator Borah, Republican independent, Idaho, and Copeland, Democrat, New York, have suggested a bounty to continental producers in place of a higher levy.

Soviet Executes 13 More Rebels

MOSCOW, Jan. 12. (US)—Continuing to mete out the death penalty to enemies of the union of Socialist Soviet republics, the government today reported 23 additional death sentences and executions.

The victims were all charged with various forms of counter-revolution. They are the first to be sentenced this year. During 1928 the widespread internal disorders caused by the grain tax and the confiscation of the lands of wealthy peasants were marked by almost weekly executions, the death sentences running well into the hundreds.

Thirteen persons, charged with plotting against the Soviet government under the leadership of a former imperial army officer, were shot to death at Berditchev today.

CATTY

Dallas Judge Bars Use of Feline Language in His Court

DALLAS, Jan. 12. (UP)—Tomcat talk is inadmissable in Judge Towne Young's district court, that jurist ruled during a lively tilt that arose during the trial of the J. P. Burgess vs. city and county levee improvement district case.

The ruling particularly affected John J. Simmons, millionaire landowner and levee improvement advocate, who was taking an active interest in the case. During a rift between lawyers, Simmons stormed a single word at one of the barristers that riled the court.

"Skat!" said Simmons in a loud voice.

"Please pay the clerk $10 for contempt of court," the judge schoed.

Simmons paid off without a word.

FREEMAN TRIAL SET MONDAY

State Seeks Conviction as Habitual Criminal

Earl Kuntz, defense attorney for Earl Freeman, alias Franks, charged with burglary under the habitual criminal act, announced Sunday afternoon that he would be ready for trial when the case is called in the 89th district court Monday morning. Freeman is accused of taking several hundred dollars' worth of goods from the Loma Walker store in Electra last April. He was arrested in Fort Worth several months later. None of the goods has been recovered.

Mr. Kuntz announced that his client would plead not guilty and would base his defense on an alibi. The goods were taken from the store after a lodger in the hotel room above sawed a hole through the floor of his room and slipped down into the shop, the state alleges. It is the state's contention that Freeman was the lodger, Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney explained. The arrest was made in Fort Worth after a signature on the hotel register was compared with Freeman's handwriting, the attorney asserted.

The indictment against Freeman specifically alleges two former convictions; one on a federal narcotic charge in Abilene; the second on a burglary indictment in Weatherford, Mr. Anglin said.

A conviction under the habitual criminal clause of the present charge involves a 99-year prison sentence, the attorney explained. The jury in the case will be asked to answer the question of the immediate guilt or innocence separately from the third offense issue, it was pointed out.

The week's criminal docket also includes the second trial of C. A. Wright, charged with burglary and recently given a new trial after a 10-year sentence, and of Roy Grundy, accused of the murder of June Hilburn here last October. A special venire has been summoned for the Grundy trial. In an earlier hearing last November, which resulted in a hung jury, Grundy pleaded temporary insanity.

ENDED COLD CAUSED BY RIDE IN NIGHT AIR

Relief Began Quickly When Doctor Advised Home Use of Pleasant Method

An entirely new method of ending colds is now proving itself quickest and most dependable in hundreds of Wichita Falls homes.

Miss Eva Flinn, for example, caught a severe cold when she left her coat at home and the air became damp and chilly later in the evening. As a result, her breathing passages became badly congested, her throat was inflamed by constant coughing and her voice was so hoarse it was embarrassing to try to talk.

Acting on the advice of her doctor, then, she started taking double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Relief began quickly and that night her nose passages were less congested, the "feverish," "achy" feeling was gone and she was able to sleep without coughing but once or twice during the night. Next day she was able to return to work and in another day or so, the doctor reports, an examination showed that all trace of the cold was gone.

Note: Two other cases being reported daily in this paper—all certified by the attending physicians.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was launched, certified as the best of different widely used methods tested for head colds, coughs and chest colds because it gave the quickest, surest relief—with absolute safety. It is now featured by all leading druggists.

STOP THIEF

Daily Editorial

JUSTICE occasionally nods on the job, but the balance sheet always nabs its man.

The Big Boss hasn't found your number yet, but the adding machine grows more and more suspicious as its detecting figures close in on the sneak-thief, steadily robbing the firm of valuable opportunities.

The record is bound to testify why the concern annually finds less energetic and bright-minded young men coming up from the ranks.

Your destructive jealousy and insatiate appetite for personal credit has corrupted the organization.

You're obsessed with the same fatuous notion that has undermined efficiency ever since cunning learned to hamstring potential superiors—you actually believe it possible to remain in power by sidetracking competitive ability.

What you can't do, you won't have done.

You've passed a little tariff act of your own, and while in charge of the port, all suggestions of foreign origin will be disbarred from entry.

Like many another infant industry, you aspire to too much protection.

But there's one essential form of "duty" which you overlook—the duty which every square-shooter owes his paymaster.

To insure your own security, you deliberately discourage the expression of enterprise and originality in your assistants.

You suspect a successor in every ambitious subordinate, and select only commonplace and inferior helpers, under the delusion that, by contrast with second-rate underlings, you'll stand out like a giant.

DAVID BRANCH'S DAILY FILOSOFY

"He who would explain, should explain to himself."

To understand and master self is the challenge of life to each of us. Our friends do not ask us to explain our mistakes and our enemies will not believe us anyway: so why explain?

The wind is tempered to the shorn lamb, according to the proverb. Thus, after the recent stock crash, you probably couldn't lose any more money because you had no more to lose.

Why Women Take Jobs

IF YOU still cling to the old maxim that woman's place is in the home, you might read over the recent bulletin from the United States Women's bureau.

This bulletin reveals that women in increasing numbers are being called on to support their families.

Out of 30,000 families investigated, for instance, 27 per cent were supported entirely by the wages of their women members.

Of 17,000 unmarried women studied, one in five was supporting a family unaided.

An enormous proportion of city families is depending wholly or in part on the money earned by wives and daughters. In certain industries which employ women, 65 per cent of the women workers are married.

Evidently the woman who marries for economic security stands a fair chance of getting badly stung. Instead of being freed from the necessity of supporting herself, she may have to pitch in and help support, not only herself but her husband as well.

It would seem that there are several things back of this recent influx of women into the realm of jobs. It isn't, apparently, the outgrowth of a sudden desire, on the part of womankind, for freedom. The marriage-or-career stories written by our popular fiction producers—how idiotic they sound, now that the real facts are coming out! Most working women, one concludes, are working because they have to, not because they want to. The modern world is giving them, not a new freedom, but a new duty.

Stuart Chase, in his recent book, "Prosperity: Fact or Myth," sheds a bit of light on the subject.

One out of every 13 male wage-earners in the United States, he estimates, is always out of a job. The "technological unemployment" that our engineers talk about—the replacement of workers by labor-saving machinery—is giving us an army of jobless men that averages around 3,000,000.

Yet we have had no breadlines, no unrest, no nation-wide exhibit of suffering, despite the fact that we are continually harboring this enormous number of men who cannot get work. Why? Well, Mr. Chase suspects that the woman worker has a good bit to do with it. Many and many a family in which the breadwinner has lost his job has been saved from starvation by the fact that the breadwinner's wife has gone to work as a salesgirl or telephone operator.

We won't know what the remedy for all of this is until competent economists have studied the whole thing more carefully. Meanwhile, however, it is obvious that something is wrong somewhere. Our prosperity can't be quite all it is cracked up to be if it is placing a constantly-increasing economic burden on the women.

Coolidge and Smith

THE recent announcement of the manner in which the $6,000,000 estate of the late Conrad Hubert is to be divided among various charitable organizations brings to a close an episode that has made extremely pleasant reading.

Former President Calvin Coolidge and former Governor Alfred E. Smith were two of the committee of three named to settle on the method of dividing the estate. For a number of months they worked together; and there was something very refreshing about the manner in which these two distinguished men—utterly unlike one another in birth, breeding and outlook—pitched in together to perform a public service.

Calvin Coolidge and Al Smith—a strange pair to work in harness together, surely! It was pleasant to read about their joint activities, pleasant to speculate on the contrast which their presence on the same committee kept emphasizing. We are sorry that their work has been brought to a close.

Shearer Must Stay Away

DISPATCHES from Washington indicate that William B. Shearer will be barred from Great Britain if he attempts to horn his way into the forthcoming naval disarmament conference at London.

This is very good news. There seems to be a good deal of haziness about the exact nature of Shearer's activities at the last conference, but there is little reason to doubt that he was sent there to toss a monkey wrench into the proceedings if he could, and he did his blatant best to fulfill his mission.

How much influence the man may have had is another question. However, there is no use in taking any chances. His sole role at such an affair seems to be that of troublemaker. Both the United States and Great Britain will be much better off if Shearer is kept at least 2,000 miles away from London while the conference is in session.

Drinking the Evidence

THE South Carolina supreme court has ruled that a jury in a prohibition law trial may drink the evidence in order to satisfy itself whether it is intoxicating.

This sounds like common sense. Yet it seems to us that it might, just conceivably, open the way for queer doings.

The supreme court made its ruling in denying the appeal of an Aiken county bootleggers, who wanted his conviction thrown out because the jury that convicted him drank 49 bottles of seized beer during its deliberations.

Offhand, one would think that the man had grounds for complaint. It would hardly seem that a jury would need to drink four dozen bottles of beer in order to learn whether the stuff had an illegal kick. Still, the jurors may have figured that it's best to be thorough.

Marriage for Two--By Arthur Somers Roche

"Can It Be Love?"

She was out of the room before he could even make an effort to detain her. For a long time after she had gone he sat still, miserable, unhappy. The incomprehensibility of women! A moment ago, and she had praised him because he had not ranted like an actor in a third-rate melodrama because Valdemagara had loved her. A moment later and she denounced him because he had accepted money from his aunt, money which was destined for his possession at some future date.

Why? And again why?

The vaguely reproachful voice of Hogan informed him that Mrs. Tracy was not feeling well, and she would dine in her room tonight.

"Very well," said Larry dully.

But Hogan lingered. "Mr. Larry."

"Well?" Larry looked up.

"In a manner of speaking, sir, you and me, sir, we've been together practically all our lives," said Hogan. "Not all my life, because I was born so long before you, but working for your father before you, and with you since you were born and feeling, if you don't mind, Mr. Larry, more like a father than a servant—"

"What's it all about, Hogan," interrupted Larry. "Have you, in your prime of middle life, forged my name to a couple of checks? If so, take my forgiveness away with you."

Hogan grinned. "Not that, sir." His face became grave again. "It's the young lady, sir, Mrs. Tracy."

"Well?" Larry's voice was forbidding.

"Knowing all about how you met her, sir, and thinking at the time that it wasn't exactly right to marry a young girl like her—"

"Are you insinuating something against Mrs. Tracy?" asked Larry.

"God forbid!" cried Hogan. "As sweet and fine a lady as ever breathed. But you—letting her break her heart—"

"What are you talking about?" cried Larry.

"Ain't it my own niece, Nora White, that's her maid, and don't she be after telling me that the dear young lady is weeping her eyes out every night, and what for would she be doing that except for your neglect and shabby treatment—"

Hogan dropped his voice. The habit of years was stronger than his momentary courage.

"That will be all, Hogan," said Larry. "And—er—thank you, Hogan."

At the door he paused.

"I think I'll dine with Mrs. Tracy in her room," he said.

"A Wise Man"

A knock on Joyce's door was answered by an invitation to enter. She was lying in bed propped up with pillows, and beside her was a table set out with dishes.

"May I dine here with you?" he asked.

A vivid blush appeared on her cheeks.

"Why, of course," she said.

"Aunt Martha had no right to give me all that money," he said.

"No?" She was unaccountably embarrassed.

"A self-respecting man should take money from only one woman —his wife. Joyce, will you give me back what I gave you?"

"And what I made besides!" she cried.

"Thank you," he said gravely.

Nora, followed by Hogan, entered at this moment. There was a readjustment of the dishes and food was served. Hogan, a beaming smile upon his rubicund face, offered this and pressed that upon them, and highly recommended the other, and found fault with the wine and sent for more. . . .

The dishes were removed and the servants were finally gone.

"So you told Billy that you were in love with me?" said Larry.

Apprehension leaped into her eyes.

"Yes," she admitted.

"And he believed you?"

"Naturally."

She avoided his eyes.

"A wise man, Valdemagara," he commented.

"What do you mean by that?" she inquired.

He shrugged. "Oh, nothing much. Except that Billy is supposed to be quite familiar with the ways of women. Jeanne Mazell once told me that she found it impossible even to fib to Billy, he knew so much about her sex. Odd, that you could deceive him."

"He couldn't very well argue the point," said Joyce.

"Did he try to?" asked Larry.

Joyce made no answer.

"Sorry I made you hate me—about that Aunt Martha business?" he went on.

"I—I think—if you don't mind, I'm tired," she said.

"Amazing old girl, Aunt Martha." He ignored her remark. "Always butting into other people's business. Got going about you today. The old girl thinks you're dead in love with me."

"Ridiculous!" snapped Joyce.

But a certain alarm was in her eyes now.

"Can't We Be Friends?"

"That's what I thought. Glad you're not. Especially after today."

"I don't understand you," she said.

"Simple enough. You know—Helen Wilson—killed my chances with you. Well, this Valdemagara business—oh, I'm not saying anything wrong about it. Know you too well. But sort of—well, a man doesn't care for that sort of thing, you know. And if I hadn't worn out my love for you sooner or later why I think that that business with him—"

She sat upright. "Oh—you—you—I hate you!" she cried.

He raised his eyebrows. "Really? Oh, Joyce, that's too silly. I don't hate you. I mean to say—why can't we continue good friends and all that? I mean, I've been silly. Unfair. Tried to take advantage and read into the bargain clauses that weren't there. But that's all over now. I'm sane. You're a bully girl, a great companion. Now that I've quit asking for more than friendship, can't we be friends?"

"So—so you wan't no more than that?" she asked.

Her voice was curiously stifled.

"Not a thing." His voice was amazingly cheerful. "I feel so much better. Like a child crying for the moon. When it definitely learns that the moon isn't obtainable, life becomes a more comfortable thing, eh?"

"You like comfort?" Her voice was a sneer.

"Of course. Don't you?"

"We're talking of what you like," she reminded him.

"And I want to go to sleep," she added.

"And weep?" he asked.

Her eyes blazed.

"Weep? Why should I weep?" she cried.

"God knows," he made reply. "I can imagine only one thing that would make a girl like you weep. Love might do it. But it can't be that, can it, Joyce? Or can it?"

He was on his knees beside the bed now, his hands groping for her, finding her. . . .

"B-but you've got over your love for m-me!" she whimpered.

Now his groping hands had found her, and she was within the embrace of his arms.

"Please, please," she gasped. "Nora—"

He laughed. "I don't think Nora will come in tonight, dear. You see—I locked the door."

"A Little Girl in Maine"

Larry was going over some possessions treasured since childhood. He called to his wife. Joyce came to his side. "I knew," he said, "that I'd find it. That picture of a little girl that reminded me so much of you. Here it is. See the resemblance?"

"I've got over the snub nose, haven't I?" she commented.

"You have'? Why, this was a little girl in Maine—"

"Don't you remember I said—to the newspaper men—I'd know you a long time? Well, I remember you as a little boy, sailing your boat—did you think I lied?"

"Yes," grinned Larry.

"Did you care if I was a liar?"

"Not a bit," he cheerfully replied. She kissed him.

The Once Over

Here Comes Lizzie the Third

Henry Ford announces the birth of a new girl, Elizabeth III. Father and child are doing nicely.

◇ ◇ ◇

◇ ◇ ◇

Elizabeth II, has gone the way of Lizzie I, and the collosus of Detroit now gives the world an opportunity to startle traffic cops in a new model. She's better looking than Elizabeth II, and compared to the Model T Lizzie she is as Senator Brookhart beside the maharajah of India and as Topsy beside Queen Marie of Rumania.

PHILLIPS

Gone are the days when it was possible to tell a Ford by a fleeting glance over the shoulder. Lizzie has developed.

◇ ◇ ◇

It seems only yesterday that a Ford was something that made a traffic roar when it backed out of a garage and sounded like a tractor filled with kitchen utensils when it bounded down the street in a series of short leaps.

◇

All a car had to be to be a Ford was black, loud, funny and tough.

◇ ◇ ◇

It gave service and was faithful but from an artistic standpoint it ranked with the first steam boat, the old-fashioned parlor stove and our early American battle monuments.

◇ ◇ ◇

When Henry Ford, deciding to reform and lead a better life, scrapped Lizzie, it was the most sweeping step against ugliness ever taken in America.

◇ ◇ ◇

Two years ago Hank brought out a car that could look pleasant and now he brings out a successor that is even swankier. She has a longer body and more room inside, making it possible for an owner to get in without a prayer and out without a jimmy.

◇ ◇ ◇

Fancy a Ford that you can't rust. Now anything can happen.

◇ ◇ ◇

Hank is reported at work on even more refinements. The 1931 car, the Sunday picknickers delight, may have a banana-peeling attachment and an incinerator for bread crusts, eggshells and apple cores.

◇ ◇ ◇

Ultimately—who can tell—he may even supply an electric cigar-lighter.

Too Old to Fly? Man of 62 Says He's Just Right

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 12. (US)—When they make something that goes faster than an airplane, B. A. Siggins is going to get one and learn to run it.

He's only 62 years old now and he's just learned to fly, so he doesn't see any reason why he shouldn't try whatever comes along next.

The only hard part about flying, said Siggins today, was convincing people that he wasn't too old to learn. He tried at several airports and instructors insisted that flying was a young man's game.

Finally Siggins found an instructor who couldn't see any reason why he couldn't at least try. So they went up.

After less than four hours of instruction, Siggins soloed. He has had an hour and 40 minutes alone in the air since then; getting along perfectly well. He flies his own plane and is his own mechanic.

"They said I was too old, but I fooled 'em," he chuckled. "I'm just old enough not to be reckless, that's all."

Siggins plans to use his ship for pleasure flying—just visiting around and seeing the country.

Health and Diet Advice

Paleness May Not Mean Anemia

There once was a time when any young girl who was both thin and pale, was certain that she had anemia. But now we know that not all thin people are anemic, and not all pale people are suffering from this disease. The day of taking pink pills for pale people is over. As a matter of fact, the type of anemia, which used to be frequently found among young girls, called "green sickness," has nearly disappeared in America. Curiously enough, the best cure for green sickness is to eat plenty of green vegetables.

It is imposible to determine whether anemia is present or not by merely looking at the patient. The only way to tell is to examine some of the blood under a microscope. When blood is healthy it has over 5,000,000 red blood cells and about 7,500 white blood cells per cubic millimeter, and the blood should have a definite amount of redness caused by the hemeglobin in the red blood corpuscles. The redness of the hemoglobin is caused by iron pigments. You can realize how important this hemoglobin is to the health when you understand that it carries the oxygen from the lungs to all parts of the body. When the percentage of hemoglobin falls below 90, the body can not obtain enough oxygen.

A lot of people think that since hemoglobin is made from an iron compound, all that is necessary to increase the amount of hemoglobin is to eat more iron. As a matter of fact, foods which contain iron are very numerous, and most of them are common foods found in an ordinary diet. In those who do not have enough hemoglobin it seems that something has happened to the body's ability to use the iron that is present in the food. Only about .002 of an ounce of iron is required by the body daily and as iron is abundant in lettuce, spinach, orange juice, milk, bran flakes, eggs, dried apricots, prunes, beef, almonds, figs, dates, raisins, and nearly all fruit and vegetables, you will see that the average diet contains a sufficient amount of this valuable mineral.

The body's ability to assimilate the iron in food can be greatly increased by a fruit fast accompanied by such health building measures as fresh air, sunbaths and exercise. If one follows this method, a great improvement in both the number of red blood cells and the color of hemoglobin can be noticed. In fact, the various forms of anemia, including pernicious and secondary, usually yield in a spectacular manner to a simple commonsense form of treatment. Sometimes the rate of recovery is almost unbelievable. For example, with an orange juice fast it is often possible to see an immediate improvement in the red blood cells. It seems that the toxins which were responsible for the anemic condition are absorbed and eliminated, and as the blood becomes cleaner and healthier it is able to increase both in the number of red blood cells and the percentage of color. I have yet to see a case where this improvement did not take place.

In cases of secondary anemia, where there is a larger number of white blood cells than there should be, these are usually reduced to normal during the fast, and at the same time, the red blood cells are increasing, thus bringing about a normal balance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Birthmarks)

Question—Mrs. J. M. S. writes: "My baby has a birthmark on the side of her face. I have been asked several times if I could not account for it. Well, I can't, so I would be glad if you could tell me how these marks are caused."

Answer—The exact cause of birthmarks is not known. They are usually an impairment or dilatation of the capillaries of the skin. The best treatment is to have them removed by carbon dioxid snow or some electrical treatment. It is better to have this done before the child grows up, as there is less chance of the scar being prominent.

(Sugar and Fruit)

Question—Mrs. W. B. writes: "In one of your breakfasts in your weekly menus you recommend a dish of berries, canned without sugar. Can sugar be added when eaten, and does this rule cover all fruits? Should all fruits be canned without sugar? If so, can sugar be added when served?"

Answer—If fruit is canned when ripe, it is never necessary to improve the taste by adding sugar. You can now purchase many canned fruits which are put up without sugar. You can also can the same fruits at home without using any more sugar than that contained in the fruit. It is never advisable to add sugar to any kind of fruit, whether fresh or canned.

Eating Moth Balls

Question—W. J. K. asks: "What are moth balls made of? I know a woman who eats them. Will they harm her? She has stomach trouble and says they relieve her."

Answer—Moth balls are composed principally of camphor which is a powerful irritant and stimulant and which is poisonous in overdoses, but having a sedative effect in small quantities. I would not advise its use internally.

Bank Conditions In Floyd County Good

Special to The Record News

LOCKNEY, Texas, Jan. 11.—The economic condition of Floyd county is reported as very healthy, according to the statements rendered by the four banks of the county at the last call Dec. 31.

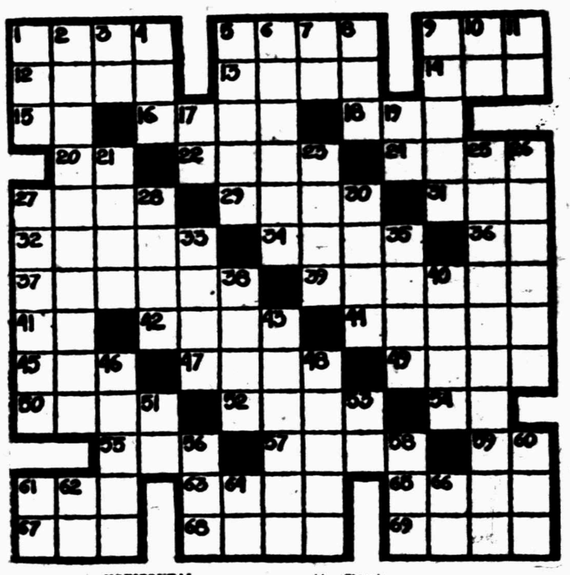

According to the statements rendered, bank loans of the four Floyd county institutions totaled $1,003,400; their deposits were $1,648,971; and their available cash was $729,900. The total capital, surplus and undivided profits of the banks amounted to $255,617, an increase of practically $30,000 over last year.

Local bankers say that agricultural prospects are bright for 1930 due to the general reduction of farm loans during 1929 coupled with the presence of an abundance of moisture to promote the early growth of the small grains.

IOWA PARK CAGERS LOOM AS STRONG TITLE CONTENDERS

VALLEY VIEW GAME TUESDAY

Hawks in Fine Shape for County Race

By PAT WILEY
Record News Correspondent

IOWA PARK, Texas, Jan. 12.—The Iowa Park High school quintet opened their season with a victory over the Seymour Roadsters last Wednesday night on the local court, and they will meet the Valley View Harvesters Tuesday night on the court of their opponents.

The Hawks have built a strong team, under the careful grooming of Coach "Bull" Bishop, and loom as one of the strong contenders for the title in the tournament which is to be held on Feb. 14 and 15.

Good Material Out

A large amount of excellent material is on hand this year and under the capable instruction of the Hawk mentor the squad is rounding into shape at a fast rate and they are prepared for their future clashes. Five veterans are back this year and hold practically the same position that each filled the preceding year. They are Monroe and Golden, forwards, Burney and Cobb, guards, and Williamson, center.

Several others are making the grade at a fast rate and will be giving the regulars a scrap to maintain their positions, although they are somewhat inexperienced.

Few practice games have been played this season by the Green and White aggregation with two victories and two losses. After the holidays the squad settled down to some real work in an effort to get into the prime of condition as soon as possible.

Their Main Worry

The county tournament is the main worry of the Hawk quintet at the present time. In the last four years the Hawk basketeers have won the county tournament and lost one year to the Electra Tigers. At this time they show a promise of giving someone a hard fight for the honors.

Coach Bishop pronounces his men ready for their next fray with the Valley View Travelers and he is anxious to see how his men act under fire.

Schedule for Iowa Park:
Jan. 14—Valley View at Valley View.
Jan. 22—Burkburnett at Burkburnett.
Jan. 24—Burkburnett at Iowa Park.
Feb. 1—Electra at Electra.

Cardinals Expect Much of Hurlers

This is another in a series of stories on 1930 prospects of major baseball clubs.

REX T. NEWMAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 12.—When the St. Louis Cardinals go into the 1930 National league pennant fray they will be relying chiefly upon a comeback by their pitching staff—minus Grover Cleveland Alexander—an increased infield reserve strength and the leadership of another manager to make them a title threat.

Changing managers has become almost a habit with the Cardinals This year finds them with their sixth in about as many seasons in the grizzled old veteran Charles "Gabby" Street, coach of the 1929 Red Birds and successor to Bill McKechnie.

Street expects to present much the same outfit of front line troops who went through the 1929 battle and ended up in a fourth place retreat after a brilliant start. Gabby, former major league catcher and somewhat of an expert in handling moundsmen, is reposing much faith in recovery of his pitchers. His particular reliance is in Bill Hallahan, young left hander who waited until September last year to win his first game and then won four in impressive form. He also believes the veterans Jess Haines and Wee Willie Sherdel will return to their best form, backed up by Sylvester Johnson, Harold Hald and Fred Frankhouse, all regulars.

And then there is Flint Rhem, former Cardinal ace, who went awry and who is to be given another chance this year after an impressive 1929 season at Houston, Texas. Street also has a trio of promising youngsters in Al Grabowski of Danville, who came up to do some showy pitching at the tail end of last season; Jim Lindsey of Houston, and "Kill" Carlton of Rochester. In addition, there will be a flock of young hopefuls at spring camp from the Houston and Rochester farms.

Alexander is the only regular pitcher lost. This old hero of the 1926 world series went to the Phillies in a trade.

Jean Pirates Win Off Graham, 21-15

Special to The Record News

JEAN, Texas, Jan. 12.—Jean High school Pirates won their first game played against the Graham High school Steers Friday night by the score of 21 to 15. It was played on the Memorial building court at Graham. Swaim, Bush and Pratt were the stellar players of the game. Jean will engage in the county tournament Jan. 31 and Feb. 10.

Jean boasts of one of the best teams in the county, having won the last five or six straight games played against the different high schools and rural schools of the county.

Pratt at center has been a mainstay on defense as well as offense all season. He is captain. Boyles, Swaim, and Bush have all proven valuable forwards this season. Simmons, Bigers, Allen, and Griffith at guards have held all opposition from making many field goals this season, while Allen has been a great help on offense as he and Pratt are the best long-shot goal shooters on the team. Any time Jean strikes a team that it cannot get through on offense they leave it to Pratt and Allen to win on long shots, and they generally put the game on ice for the Jean team. Also their defense has held practically all teams to a small score as is attested by the few points any opponent has made against them. H. Christopher is coach of the team.

Jean will have most of this year's players back for another season, losing only Allen and Boyles.

TEXAS LEAGUE CLUB OWNERS OUTLINE SCHEDULE

Fanny Flips Mean Fin—Her Team Is Champion

In this business of swimming, they don't come much faster than Chicago's Fanny Homar, member of the national 400-yard relay team of the Illinois Women's Athletic club. Fanny and her girl friends are getting ready for the national A. A. U. meet in Florida in March.

By LEO RYAN
Associated Press Feature Service Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—"Look out below!"

That is the challenge swimming stars of the Illinois Women's Athletic club is sending ringing down through Dixie to Florida where the national A. A. U. meet will be held in March.

The I. W. A. C. coaches try to be modest, but they leave no doubt in one's mind that they plan to win the meet, in which the nation's amateur stars will compete.

To begin with, they will bring to Florida the present national champion and world record-holding 400-yard relay team. The members of this team are: Dagny van Maarth, Emma Shematis, Isabel Smith and Mary Lou Quinn, each of them an individual star of some consequential magnitude. These four girls are showing better form than ever this year, it is said, and will make a strong bid to win the national title again and perhaps to break their present world's record.

In Fanny Homan, member of the I. W. A. C. national champion medley team and central A. A. U. backstroke champion, and in Jane Faunce, national low board diving champion and national backstroke champion, the club hopes to enter two individual stars who will carry away some of the coveted points.

Mary Lou Quinn, now holder of all the central A. A. U. titles from 50 to 500 yards, may break into the ranks of the national champions this year.

The strength of the club's relay teams is the chief support of the hopes for winning the meet. Both the 400-yard relay team and the medley team are national champions already, and these events count 10 points each in the meet, a considerable portion of all the available points.

1930 SEASON OPENS APRIL 9

Spudder Opener to Be Here With Shreveport

HOUSTON, Jan. 12. (AP)—Texas league club owners, meeting here Sunday, adopted a schedule calling for 154 games in 152 days. The season will open April 9, and close Sept. 7, with double-headers carded for only two days, July 4, and Labor day.

On April 9, Houston will play at San Antonio; Dallas at Fort Worth; Shreveport at Wichita Falls; and Waco at Beaumont.

Dallas will open its home season April 10, entertaining Fort Worth.

Houston will play its first home game April 11, entertaining Beaumont; while on the same date Waco will play San Antonio at Waco.

Shreveport will open its home season April 15 with Wichita Falls.

The July 4 schedule follows:
Wichita Falls at Fort Worth.
Shreveport at Dallas.
Beaumont at San Antonio.
Waco at Houston.
The Labor day card:
Wichita Falls at Dallas.
Waco at Houston.
Beaumont at San Antonio.
Shreveport at Fort Worth.

Each club will play 11 Saturday and 11 Sunday games at home, and, of course, the same number on the road.

The complete schedule March 2 will be made available to newspapers.

President Fred Ankenman of the Houston club sought to have Houston open its home season against some club other than Beaumont, but was out-voted.

For the past several years Houston has opened against Beaumont.

The club owners adjourned Sunday. It was the concensus that the meeting was one of the most harmonious and constructive in the history of the league.

Dempsey Believes Sharkey Is Champ

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (AP)—Jack Dempsey, who should know something of heavyweight fighters, believes that Jack Sharkey, the Boston sailor who once wilted under the old man mauler's fists, is today the heavyweight champion of the world.

This and other interesting things the battle king of other years proclaims in ranking the boxers of the world for 1929 in a copyright story for The Ring, a fistic magazine. Dempsey's rankings replace those the late Tex Rickard prepared in past years for this publication.

"First I want to make my bow to Jack Sharkey and say that he is the best American heavyweight, and in my opinion the accredited world's heavyweight champion," says the article under Dempsey's name. "At Miami Beach he easily beat the outstanding contender at the time, Young Stribling, and in New York he knocked out Tommy Loughran, a really great fighter."

CUBS TO HIT ROAD TODAY

Estelline to Meet Three Strong Teams

Special to The Record News

ESTELLINE, Texas, Jan. 12.—Coach Parrish and his high school Bear Cub basket ball team will leave Monday for a road trip to Fort Worth, Dallas, Denton, Denison and other points.

He is taking eight men with him on the trip who will see service in the games. R. H. Whaley, president of the school board and the manager, H. R. Gowan will also accompany the team.

The first stop will be in Fort Worth where the boys will have a workout on the T. C. U. gymnasium floor.

The first game will be with Denton High school five Tuesday night Jan. 14. They will also play the same team Wednesday night. Thursday night the boys go to Dallas where they meet the Highland Park High school quintet.

Friday and Saturday, Jan. 17 and 18 the Cubs will battle the fast team at Denison High.

They are making the trip by auto and will return home Sunday Jan. 19.

The following boys will make the trip: Centers, McCollum and W. L. Curtis; forwards, Baccus, F. Curtis and Phillips; guards, Richburg, Cox and Campbell.

The Bear Cubs have an excellent record having won every game played, including some of the best teams in the state. Athens, state and national champions in 1929 in the high school class were defeated in two games here. Terrill prep school, Dallas, was given a like defeat in two fast games. Harrold, the last of the strong teams to be played, lost two games to the Cubs, the last being an overwhelming defeat by a score of 54 to 24. The Estelline Bear Cubs are favorites to win the state championship this year. Coach Lowell Parrish expects to give his men some valuable training on the road trip this week.

Fonseca Is New Batting Champion

CHICAGO, Jan. 12. (AP)—Lewis Fonseca, discarded to the minors four years ago by the Philadelphia Nationals, won the 1929 American league batting championship with the lowest average since Tyrus Raymond Cobb turned the trick back in 1914.

The veteran Cleveland first baseman, official averages revealed tonight, batted 566 times in 148 games and collected 209 hits for a .369 average, which was 10 points lower than the championship average made by Leon "Goose" Goslin of Washington in 1928 and one more than Cobb's low mark in 1914. Al Simmons of the champion Philadelphia Athletics was second with a .365 mark while Henry Manush of St. Louis, runner-up to Goslin in 1928, finished third with .355. Goslin was far down the list of leaders for the season, his average dropping 91 points to .288.

Seven South Plains Cities Accept Invitations to Floydada Tourney

Basket Ball Teams of Many Other Towns Expected to Clash In Two-Day Event, Feb. 7-8

By S. W. ROSS
Record News Correspondent

FLOYDADA, Texas, Jan. 12.—With definite acceptances to attend and participate in the fourth annual South Plains Invitation basket ball tournament to be held in Floydada on Feb. 7 and 8, from seven high schools from as many South Plains cities, present indications point to a very large and successful invitation tournament. It is expected that probably 20 teams will enter the two-day event and the competition between the teams is expected to be stronger than ever before.

The tournament was inaugurated four years ago by athletic officials of the Floydada high school. It is strictly a practice meet, with the strongest teams over the South Plains invited to participate. The invitation tournament idea has grown by leaps and bounds since its initiation in Floydada in 1926, and the idea has been adopted by many towns over this section. Since the one in Floydada was the first of its kind, and since the majority of stronger teams over this section are represented here each year, the tournament in Floydada is looked on by cage fans as being the most important of the season.

Winners of the tournament are presented with gold basket ball watch charms for each member of the winning team. It is the plan of the officials to follow the same plan this year as last and to present a set of silver basket ball watch charms to the members of the runner-up team.

All games will be played at the Andrews Ward gymnasium. A system of elimination will be worked out at the first preliminaries beginning the morning of Feb. 7 and the final championship game on the evening of Saturday, Feb. 8.

Definite acceptances to the invitation mailed recently have been received from the school at Turkey, Plainview, Olton, Post, Dickens, Lamesa and Lorenzo. Acceptances are expected to be received from 10 or 12 more teams by the latter part of the month.

Garden Leases Yankee Stadium And Polo Grounds

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (AP)—William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden corporation, today announced the acquisition of the Yankee stadium and Polo grounds for boxing purposes during the summer season.

Carey said the Garden also was given an option of both stadiums for the 1931 season.

The Garden's action in acquiring both baseball parks gives it a virtual monopoly on the big outdoor battles of the coming season and spikes reports that Jack Dempsey, now promoting bouts from the Chicago coliseum, would obtain the Polo grounds for several outdoor shows this summer. The only large arena now available to Dempsey would be Ebbets field, home of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Memphis Cagers Win From Carey, 31-16

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Jan. 12.—The Memphis high school basket ball boys again met with victory when they played the Carey high school with a score of 31 and 16, last Friday night. This is one of the many victories Memphis expects of their boys as the team is in excellent shape for harder games during the basket ball season of 1930. The Carey boys are also in good shape and are expected to report some very good games during the season.

Italian Heavyweight Fights at Garden Jan. 24

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (UP)—Primo Carnera, 280-pound Italian heavyweight, will make his first appearance in this country against Big Boy Peterson of New Orleans at Madison Square garden, Jan. 24. The New York state athletic commission approved a 10-round bout between them.

A 15-round light-heavyweight title match also was approved between Jimmy Slattery and Lou Scozza at Buffalo, Feb. 15.

Walker Cup Golfers Who Will Meet Britishers Next May Named

By LESTER RICE

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (US)—Eight of the 10 players who were seeded in the 1929 amateur championship at Pebble Beach were selected by the United States Golf association yesterday to compose the Walker cup team it will send to Sandwich next May to oppose the British in the bi-annual international matches.

The team, representative of all the larger golfing sectors of the country, and probably as strong as any that could have been chosen, follows:

Bobby Jones, Atlanta, captain.
Harrison R. Johnson, Minneapolis.
George Von Elm, Detroit.
Francis Ouimet, Boston.
Dr. O. F. Willing, Portland, Ore.
George Voigt, New York.
Jesse Sweetser, New York.
Donald K. Moe, Portland, Ore.

Save for the boyish Moe, who is still a year or two below 20 years of age, the members of the squad are all veteran campaigners, highly seasoned and thoroughly reliable. Five of the octet saw service in the triumph over the Britons two summers ago at Chicago.

The members of that team who were redesignated are Chick Evans, Watts Gunn and Roland Mackenzie. In their stead are Moe and Voigt and Dr. Willing, the golfing dentist who was runner-up to Johnston at Pebble Beach.

Again Spit is a horrid word, but it is worse on the end of your cigar

. . . the war against Spitting is a crusade of decency . . . join it. Smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!

The strong arm of the law halts the spitter whose vile and vicious habit menaces his fellow citizens. But for every spitter caught hundreds escape . . . hundreds who still work in filthy shops rolling cigars with dirty fingers and spitting on the ends!

Certified Cremo protects you against this abomination! Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods developed by the United States Government during the war. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the possibility of spit!

Try a Certified Cremo—see how wonderfully good it is! Made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, we claim Certified Cremo's quality is tastier than that of any other cigar. Don't let its 5c price stand in your way. Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar your physician has in mind when he recommends a mild smoke in place of heavy brands.

Crush-proof . . . immaculate . . . foil-wrapped . . . Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly had in mind when he said, "What this country needs is a good 5c cigar!"

CLUB HONORS 4-H WORKERS

Members Give Addresses To Lamesans

Special to The Record News.

LAMESA, Texas, Jan. 12.—Business men of Lamesa were given an insight into the 4-H club farm boys' work in Dawson county during a recent meeting of the Lamesa Luncheon club under the direction of the Rev. J. D. Boren and County Agent W. W. Evans. The members attending the meeting stated that the program was one of the most educational of any given for several months. Eight of the club boys were guests of the club and each rendered a short speech. Their addresses showed a familiarity with their subjects.

All Hold Honors

The eight club boys were introduced as "young farmers who had excelled in their agricultural projects and won distinctions in district, state and nation."

Olgee Gowen, one of the eight boys, and a winner of a free trip to the National Livestock exposition in Chicago, made a profit of $453.26 during last year with an average of 189 laying hens. The free trip was awarded Gowen by the Texas Cottonseed Crushers' association through their educational service. He attended the national 4-H club boys' council while in Chicago.

Luther Peterson won similar honors with one dairy calf from which he developed a $200 animal, not counting show earnings. By meeting the requirements of the contest he made a record which is highly appreciated locally.

W. C. Wright inspired the members present with an interesting address of facts he had gained from three years' club work. He demonstrated his speech with a beef roast, ham, one dozen eggs and a bottle of milk. By the side of each exhibit was a farm grown ration showing a required amount to produce beef, pork, eggs and milk. He has been the recipient of two free national trips for his excellent record in 4-H work.

Olen Peterson, a pig and calf club boy, represented Dawson county at the A. & M. college short course recently. Peterson was among the eight boys present during the luncheon. Others were L. H. Hohn, who represented the county at the Panhandle and South Plains Dairy show; Howell Merrick, who won a gold medal for his outstanding sheep growing record; Doyle Ranson, who represented the county in a recent livestock judging team. Another club boy, Fred Rainey, illustrated a short talk with one and a half pounds of line-bred bagged yellow milo which produced 2,100 pounds of milo seed from the planting.

Their Efforts Praised

In addition to the boys mentioned above who have represented the county in state, district and national trips are a number who have won local awards. The business men were warm in their praise of the club work and excellent showing made by the young 4-H farmers.

More than 100 of the 150 club boys in Dawson county show substantial profits from their projects in 1929, according to the county agent. Some of the beginners have turned out excellent showings.

W. H. McCulloch, a beginner, realized a profit above feed and labor of $103.63 with one purebred sow. Verney Towns realized an amount just four cents less with a purebred Jersey calf. Other club members who made substantial profits during their first year are Fred and Roy Hughes and Travis Van Zandt. The Hughes brothers cleared over $50 with hogs while Van Zandt made a profit from hogs and milo.

MANY WOULD ENTER JUNGLES

Sheep Herder, Convict and Actress Want to Travel

By H. ALLEN SMITH

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. (UP)—This rumor that business is basically sound may be true, but conditions in general are not so hot in San Quentin prison, in the movie factories of Hollywood and on the wind-swept, sheep-infested plains of Arizona, one would judge from a cursory examination into Professor Ernest W. Shaw's correspondence.

Professor Shaw is the meek-mannered little fellow who hit upon the idea of sallying forth to the jungles ripping off his garters, shouting the cannibalistic equivalent of "whoopee!" and renouncing civilization in its entirety.

Modernities Barred

Radios, alarm clocks, technicolor, zipper galoshes, telegraph companies that won't let you say hell, subway conductors who sass all the customers, transatlantic flights, and all the rest of the fixtures and appurtenances of civilized man would be taboo.

Shaw organized his primitive colony club with the idea of penetrating the Belgian Congo, settling down in houses of mud-and-wattle, trading goats and chewing tobacco for native women, and leading the life of an African Reilly.

Since he first announced the idea he has simply been overwhelmed with letters. Today he told the United Press that a prisoner in San Quentin, serving a life term, has written expressing deep interest.

Sheep-Herder Interested

From Arizona, out where the hand clasps at little freer, an aged sheep-herder, who says he is tired of the battle of life and who intimates that he has counted so many sheep in his life that he can't stay awake more than 30 minutes at a stretch, has penned a crude note to Shaw. He'd like to get away from all this cactus and chaparral and sand and wool.

Still another message comes from Hollywood—a young woman, an extra in the cinema industry. She wants to array herself in a breech clout, lie back under a catawba, eucalytus, catalpa or whatever kind of tree exists in the Belgian Congo, free from the tribulations of life, the worry over where the next inch of lipstick is coming from.

Professor Shaw revealed today that his colony probably won't go to Africa after all. The chances are he will lead his followers to Guatemala, or to Santo Domingo. His negotiations with the Belgian government didn't pan out so well, he said. Prince Henry de Ligne, the ambassador at Washington, failed to register glee when the subject of an Adam-and-Eve-and-a-jug colony was broached.

Lockney Man Profits From Diversified Farm

Special to The Record News.

LOCKNEY, Texas, Jan. 12.—Small scale, diversified farming paid dividends to Alva Raper, who lives one and one-half miles southwest of Lockney, according to his records.

The farm owned and operated by Raper consists of 96 acres, with 75 acres in cultivation. Besides the feed consumed on the farm, he sold grain sorghums amounting to $220.50; however, this crop was only a sideline in his farming operations. His major money crop came from the produce from his seven dairy cows. Eighteen hundred and nineteen pounds of butter sold during the year netted him $818.55; he sold $37.50 worth of milk; $6.12 was realized from the sale of cream; his eggs produced him $154.81, and he sold $6.80 worth of chickens. His total produce sales amounted to $1,023.18 besides the doubling of his dairy herd from seven to 14 head. He retained enough feed to furnish his herd during 1930.

New Committee Named By Electra Lions

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Jan. 12.—"America" was the opening number at the weekly Lions club luncheon. The invocation was led by F. M. Baker, and visitors introduced were J. D. Still and D. M. Mebame, Vernon Lions, and Misses Doris Comstock and Claire McNay, and Mrs. Paul Brush, all of Electra. Neal Sparks introduced the entertainers. Misses Comstock and McNay gave two duets accompanied by Mrs. Brush at the piano.

G. J. Gillis, vice president, presided in the absence of the president, W. A. Asbill. A letter was read from the Lions international headquarters at Chicago adding another committee to the club. The new committee is known as the nondrop committee. Mr. Gillis appointed G. R. Davidson, chairman, E. V. Haltom, and H. A. Decker to serve on the committee.

400 TO ATTEND VERNON FETE

C.-C. Dinner to Eclipse Previous Affairs

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 12.—With ticket sales bearing out plans for a record attendance, the annual Vernon Chamber of Commerce banquet and membership meeting will be held here Tuesday night in the gymnasium of the new high school. Arrangements are being made for 400 people at the fete.

Election of five new directors, a resume of the accomplishments of the past year and announcement of the program for the coming year will be the chief features of the business part of the program. J. J. Taylor, "State Press" of the Dallas News, will be the principal speaker. Judge W. N. Stokes of the 46th district court, will also speak.

Directors whose terms expire this year are: Hub Colley, J. B. Martin, R. M. Fielder, Myatt Napier and B. A. Williams. Other directors who will remain in office are: U. S. Davis, A. M. Bourland, C. M. Ladd, E. O. Youngblood, J. L. Showers, F. L. Massie, George H. Wilson, J. B. Lawson, Fred Russell and M. K. Berry.

This year's banquet is to eclipse any previous events of the kind in Vernon by far. Heretofore attendance totals have been only slightly in excess of 200. This year's program will be held in the gymnasium of the new high school, providing ample accommodations for the increased number.

Incidentally the new high school erected at a cost of $160,000, was one of the public building projects completed during the year. Others which will be listed in the annual report are: $175,000 courthouse; $100,000 city hall; $12,000 ward school; $40,000 structure to house water and power plant, airport hangar erected at a cost of $5,000. Completion of more than 20 miles of pavement on the highways of the county will also be included.

Major projects that will occupy the civic leaders during this year include completion of hard-surfacing of highway 23 north and south across the county, and construction of the Frisco railway extension from Vernon to Seymour.

Amusement numbers of the banquet program will include music by the Bluebirds of Wichita Falls through the courtesy of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, vocal selections by Miss Edith Crownover of Grandview, former Vernon voice instructor, and numbers by a local quartet.

Capt. Brennan Endorses Orgatone

Well Known Plainview Salvation Army Leader Makes Strong Statement

One of the most noteworthy features in connection with the introduction of Orgatone throughout the south and west has been the large number of ministers of the gospel who have unhesitatingly and voluntarily given this wonderful medicine their unqualified endorsement.

Capt. Chas. Brennan, well known leader of the Salvation Army at Plainview, Texas, and residing at 1403 Nassau street, is one of the latest to come forward and add his testimony to the thousands of others who have been restored to health by its use. Captain Brennan has been in charge of the Plainview Salvatoin Army for the past two months, having been transferred from Childress, Texas, and is not only held in the highest esteem by the hundreds of his church followers, but is exceedingly prominnt as a man and citizen. In describing his troubles and failures to heretofore find relief, Captain Brennan said:

"I suffered from a general rundown condition and nervousness more or less for the past year. I could not sleep soundly and for the past several months I suffered from attacks of indigestion. The pains in my head would sometimes seem like they were going to put my eyes out they were so severe, and the relief I got from them was only temporary. I had to diet myself with great care, and I couldn't get any restful sleep at night. I had practically no appetite at all and what I did eat always caused that gas to form and bother me for hours at a time. I not only suffered a great deal of pain, but became so weak and run down that I would tire quickly in trying to do my work.

"After hearing of the good work Orgatone was doing I decided to give it a trial, and the results I have gotten have been most satisfactory. I sleep well at night now, eat anything I like, and relish every meal. I'm not nervous any more, and feel full of life and vigor. My headaches are a thing of the past. Orgatone has proven to be the right thing for me and I am glad to recommend it as the best medicine I have ever tried."

Commenting on the above statement, Harvey Martin, the Orgatone representative said:

"I distinctly recall a number of other members of this high calling who have publicly expressed their indebtedness to this medicine and who felt it their duty to tell suffering humanity of the great benefit they had derived from its use and not a day passes but what the Orgatone drug stores over the country receive dozens of statements from people in all walks of life who have been relieved after suffering for years."

Genuine Orgatone is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison Drug Store.—Adv.

Lack of Real Leadership for Modern World Deplored in Sunday Talk

Martin Predicts Coming of New Prophet to Lead Civilization Back to Worship of Christ

Describing modern times as an "age of testing" for the nations of the world and for civilization itself, Judge P. A. Martin in his address before the men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning declared that America is even now trying to make a choice between right and wrong.

"It is an age ripe for some change in the order of things, and the worst feature is that there is a lamentable want of real leadership" the speaker declared, adding his prediction of the coming of a prophet who shall lead the world back to a united worship of Christ and to a new era of peace on earth.

A synopsis of the discourse is given below:

"There is a testing time in the life of every individual in the world. The Creator endowed all men with the power to make choice between the good and the evil. While Christ was a son of God, he was also a man 'tempted in all things like we are and yet without sin.' The example he set for the conduct of men would not have been complete, had he not suffered the strongest temptations and obtained the mastery over them.

His Testing Time

"It is difficult to account for the particular temptations of the son of man by a literal construction of the language used describing it in either of the two gospels in which it is recorded, but when we indulge in the usual freedom of Oriental symbolism, we can come very much nearer to at least a dim comprehension of what it means. After submitting himself to the baptism of John for the purpose of 'fulfilling all righteousness' he was to begin his ministry. It was his call, his ordination, if you please, his consecration 'to the work he was to do in the world. His testing time had arrived.

"The evil spirit in the world took him away into the wilderness; that wild country in the hills that border closely upon the valley of the Jordan, and for 40 days and nights he was without food. The Book says 'and afterwards he was an hungered.' This indicates to me that during all these 40 days he was too busy thinking, praying and contemplating his ministry to even be aware of the demands of the human body. We are told something of his suffering in Gethsemine, but we can only conjecture what was suffered by the Savior during this 40 days in the wilderness of Judea. Then humanly weak from starvation the evil one appealed to his gnawing hunger and said, 'command these stones that they be made bread.' He answered with a scriptural quotation. The evil one then made an appeal to his vanity, inviting him to spring down from the highest pinnacle of the temple and thus show his supernatural power to the world. Again he was answered by a scriptural quotation and seeing that he had so far utterly failed the devil made his final appeal, this time it was to his ambition. 'Worship me and I will make you ruler over all the kingdoms of the earth,' said he, and again he was met by an unerring text of scripture and the terse command 'get thee behind me Satan' and the victory was won. The evil one left him and the angels came and ministered unto him. His testing time was over. He was ready and prepared for the ministry.

"I said every man has his testing time. Sooner or later, however guarded the life may be, the spirit of evil will find in your life and in mine a day of weakness and hunger and appeal to our appetites or passions, imbedded in what we call human nature, likewise the same dark messenger will whisper to us to make a show of our religion and indulge the folly of a public trial of the providence of God; but the trump card of Satan is and always has been to hold out to a man the promise that he will get more out of life serving him than in serving God. There never was a greater lie told by the father of falsehood than this and yet there are millions of men who believe him.

Cause of Failures

"I am convinced that most of the failures of life are due to a failure to stand this test. Many a man is now practicing law or medicine or in the pursuits of trade, who ought to be preaching the gospel. I have known personally two lawyers who have confessed to me that their lives were failures because they did not have the nerve to preach the gospel, after knowing that they were called to do so. Pitiful wrecks they were indeed. To be specially called to a great work, then weighed in the balances and found wanting is pitiful indeed.

"Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage and we say he was cheated; but you and I have known hundreds of men who sold theirs for less than that.

"As I studied this lesson the thought came to me that we are living in an age of testing, a trying out of men and women of commonwealths and kingdoms, of the church as well as the state and even of civilization itself. In America we are trying to determine whether right or wrong, law or crime shall prevail. In other countries similar problems demand solution. It is an age of social unrest and dissatisfaction, an age ripe for some change in the order of things. And the worst feature of it is that there is a lamentable want of real leadership.

Faith Being Tried

"The cynics are saying that all men have their price and that there is no real virtue, no real patriotism, no real religion, no real 'honest-to-God goodness' in the world. The spirit of evil is making a strong appeal to the hungry world today saying to the weak 'fall down and worship me and the kingdoms of the world shall be yours.' 'Come go with the crowd and you will have a good time. Get wealth; get power.' The faith of men in the holy things of the kingdom is being tested and tried as in no other age of the world. And when I think of these conditions I would despair were it not for the fact that I feel in my heart that in His own good time God will raise up a prophet somewhere and somehow, who will cry aloud and spare not; upon the walls of our Zion; a prophet who will lead us all to see the wondrous beauty of the life we are studying these six months and to an effort to pattern our lives and conduct after His, and to an era of 'peace on earth and good will to men.'"

Hazardous Roads Cause Postponement of Meeting

Special to The Record News.

MANGUM, Okla., Jan. 12.—Due to the heavy snowfall which made motor travel impossible over many roads throughout the county, the annual meeting of the Greer County Teachers association was postponed until Jan. 23-24, according to announcement by Charles B. Overbey, county superintendent.

Another postponement in school circles was that of the first conference basket ball game of the season which was to have been played betwen Mangum and Carnegie Friday night. The game will be played next Thursday night, Jan. 16, as will the preliminary game of the Mangum and Vinson girls.

Radio Wires Cause Fire at Memphis

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Jan. 12.—The home of Mrs. Emma Ray was totally destroyed by fire Friday night. When the place was reached the fire had practically consumed the front of the house and a large part of the back but was soon under the control of the volunteer fire department. No one knows just how the fire was started but it is supposed that a shortage in the wiring of a radio just being installed was the cause. Mrs. Ray carried some insurance but not enough to cover the loss of her home. This is the first call for the fire department of the year.

MUSIC MARS DANCE SKIT

Hard-Boiled Critic Finds Bill Pleasing, But—

By W. L. UNDERWOOD
The Record News Staff

Since this inventory of current vaudeville entertainment at the Majestic must of necessity be based upon the first Sunday afternoon performance, it were much more fitting that flaxen-haired and iron-toed Miss Loretta Gray, premier danseuse of the fourth act on this bill, be given the assignment.

In the Pit

Conditions in the orchestra pit may have changed before the second show began, of course. But it may be safely ventured that on the subject of the first performance, Miss Gray could deliver critical analysis and pointed descriptive phrases much more highly colored than can be mustered by one more remotely connected with the situation. After the act had twice been halted with a jolt through impossible tempo in the orchestra, the finale was defeated with what appeared to the naked eye to be a complete bogging down of orchestral accompaniment. The blond danseuse doesn't lack energy if you saw her draw those curtains together.

This weekly review has been far from reticent during the current season to ask of the visiting vaudeville talent better entertainment, week in and week out, than it has produced. In this case our turn of heart amounts to a handspring. Our sympathies are with Loretta and her imposing ensemble of dancers. Sufficient of their act survived to prove it one of the best bits of the winter showing. Even without Miss Gray's remarkable toes, her "Stop, Look and Listen" abounded in that type of grace and ingenious foot synchrony which furnished the largest dancing hits in "The Hollywood Revue."

Four Good Voices

But to get back to beginning of things, in reverse order. "The Texas Four" presents four good voices housed in as many fully grown-up, active bodies. Just how three prospective white hopes chance to be grouped in a vaudeville quartet may bother Jack Muldoon, but the litho and normally statured first tenor topped the combination with undisturbed equipoise. All of their music is distinctly in the lighter vein, however. Snappy enactment of popular and humorous numbers was further rarified by generous insertion of loose-jointed comedy action. But there were other acts coming up, and they had to quit.

Wheeler and Morton, appearing in second position with a singing and dancing skit called "Take It or Leave It," doubtless would offer a word or two for Miss Gray's review of the afternoon. Their performance is billed by their employers as singing, talking and dancing, but under the license accorded by its title, we leave the talking.

Carr Lynn's "Something Original," which opened the bill, contained much of that titular quality in reproductions of all those farmyard sounds heroically utilized in one of America's foremost musical compositions, "Old MacDonald Had a Farm." From the farm, he passed to the menagerie for amazing vocal imitations of its inmates in playful moments. There were hits of connecting monologue; but there's English humor, and American wise-cracking, and some one has said that they are not the same.

Billie Dove lends her beauty to the screen version of "Her Private Life," to supplement the vaudeville show.

Vernon Fire Losses Decreased by Half

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 12.—Fire losses in Vernon for 1929 totaled less than half the damage reported for the previous year, or $41,645 as compared with $84,435 in 1928, according to the combined report of Chief Engineer John D. Huntley and Fire Marshal J. D. Key. The 1929 loss was also less than in 1927 when damages totaling $52,822 were reported.

The report prepared by Mr. Key covers the past three years and shows an increase in the number of fires with 73 alarms answered in 1927; 78 in 1928, and 80 in 1929.

Services Monday For F. Fluhmann

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 12.—Funeral services for Fritz Fluhmann, 77, a native of Switzerland and a long-time resident of Wilbarger county, who died suddenly from a heart attack at his home near Vernon Friday, will be held here Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Underwood Funeral home. Rev. Richard Scultze, pastor of the Lutheran Lockett church, will officiate. Interment will be in East View cemetery, near Vernon.

Mr. Fluhmann had lived in Wilbarger county for the past 23 years and was one of the largest land owners of the county. The Fluhmann oil field was developed on his property in 1926. Mr. Fluhmann came to America from Switzerland in 1888, settling in Georgetown, Texas, where he lived until moving to this county.

Surviving him are three sons, Fred Fluhmann of Dallas, and Robert and John Fluhmann, who live near Vernon; 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

SERVICES HELD FOR T. G. LOMAX

Last Rites Said Sunday for Wichitan

Funeral services for T. G. Lomax Sr., 58, well known Wichita Falls business man who died suddenly late Friday night at his home 1906 Huff avenue, were held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the Floral Heights Methodist church with Dr. C. M. Simpson, pastor, officiating. Members of Faith lodge, A. F. & A. M., of which Mr. Lomax was a member, assisted in the funeral ritual.

Interment was in Riverside under the direction of the Merkle Undertaking company.

Active pallbearers were Eli Morgan, T. R. Wynn, Everett McCullough, Peery Hancock, P. B. Curd and W. E. Bristol. Honorary pallbearers were Dr. G. T. Singleton, Dr. J. B. Casey, Dr. C. W. Stephenson, C. E. Naylor, H. J. Naylor, C. E. Basham, G. W. Massie, J. L. McElreath, G. C. McGowan, G. C. Johnson, Charles Nolen, A. V. Moller, Al Ellis and W. H. Caldwell.

Mr. Lomax had suffered from heart trouble for the past two years but was thought to have been in good health a few minutes prior to the attack which claimed his life. He had been a resident of this city for seven years, having come here from Sherman to enter into the oil business with his sons.

Scientist Victim Of 'Parrot Fever'

BERLIN, Jan. 12. (US)—The dread "parrot fever" that already has caused six deaths throughout Germany and Austria today claimed as its victim a man of science who was stricken while conducting experiments into the causes of the malady.

Professor Honl, director of the bacteriological institute of the farfamed University of Prague in Czechoslovakia was today reported seriously ill from the disease so baffling to physicians.

Professor Honl contracted the disease from a parrot that he was employing in his clinical experiments. His is the first case reported south of Austria. At least 30 others persons are ill throughout the latter country and Germany.

Find Mummy Art

BERLIN.—Several Berlin undertakers have announced that they have rediscovered the ancient Egyptian art of mummyfying bodies. One company announces that it will preserve a body that will look as good 1,000 years from now as it appeared the day of death. Prices on a sliding scale run about $100 for a period of mummification extending 100 years.

Not So Sure

"Tom," said Bill, "are the rest of the chaps out of the woods yet?"

"Yes."

"And are the six of them quite safe?"

"Yes."

"Then," said Bill, his chest swelling, "I've shot a deer."—Tit-Bits.

Sunday Attendance Drops 50 Per Cent

Should the Sunday schools of Wichita Falls provide any award of recognition for achievement under adverse conditions, that award probably would be made to the Scotland Methodist Sunday school for registering the only attendance gain recorded on Jan. 12 while the other 29 schools in the city were reporting a total loss of 3,325 in comparison with Jan. 5.

With the most severe winter experienced in this section in several years breaking into a heavy thaw Sunday morning, a cut of almost 50 per cent in normal attendance was distributed among all but one of the churches which report regularly.

Comparative positions near the top of the list, placed according to total attendance, changed but little. The First Baptist school remained in the lead, though having but 768 pupils present. The reports follow:

This is No. 3 of a series of ads depicting the various processes of advertising production. The dimension of the layout appeared in ad No. 2 No. 4 will appear in an early issue.

"we'll need a PICTURE"

Following the general idea of our layout, we must have a capable artist draw a sketch of our "Roseanne Dresses" as they actually appear on the wearer. For the best effect this sketch should be drawn from a living model. After we okeh this drawing we must have an etching made.

Through our exclusive franchise for the Meyer Both General Newspaper Service we are able to eliminate these drawings and engravings from Times and Record News advertiser's cost sheets by supplying a vast new selection of appropriate illustrations each month. We urge our advertisers to make unlimited use of this service at no additional cost.
