Texas National Guard Commander Off For Borger Seventy Are Marooned As Rio Grande Sweeps Town

Torrent Of Flood Waters Inundates San Marcial, N.M.

Man Made Barriers Prove Insufficient To Withhold
Raging Streams; Dykes
Near City Washed Out

Heavy Rains Fall

Hundreds Of Feet Of Railway Track Destroyed By Rapidly Rising Waters;
Communication Halted

(By Associated Press)
ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Sept. 24.—Man made barriers were insufficient to withhold the torrent of flood water flowing down the Rio Grande river and late today dykes went out at San Marcial, inundating the town and marooning 70 persons.

The seventy persons were in the harvest house which was surrounded by four feet of water and the Santa Fe depot, also in about four feet of water. These buildings, of frame construction, are on the highest ground in town.

The country around here the last few days has had heavy rains, all springing into the Rio Grande and two large tributaries—the Rio Salado and the Rio Puerco. The water in the Rio Grande rose steadily all day until about noon when a break appeared in one of the dykes at San Marcial. Water succeeded in stemming the flow until about 3:30 when a 150 foot section of the dyke went out and carried with it the tracks of the Santa Fe railroad from that hour on to six o'clock the dyke continued to crumble and night when last communication with the town was possible, it was found the entire barrier was gone, hundreds of feet of railroad track was washed out.

The marooned 70 were awaiting train from El Paso to carry them out of the flood. Late this afternoon the train was halted about 12 miles north of Socorro, N. M., these persons will wait until morning and then make an effort to leave by boat. Less the water should rise to unexpected heights and move the entire structure. Provisions and water for last for two days are available.

CLARENDON, Sept. 24. (AP)—Buster Gray, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gray, was found late yesterday on the banks of Whitefish creek after being lost 26 hours.

The lad was found digging his heels in the loose sand of the stream's bank, hungry and tired, but unhurt. He was found by the left wing of a searching party of 300 that had been organized to look for the child. An airplane, piloted by Bobby Dewell and Dee Graham of Amarillo, also was used.

The child wandered away from his home Sunday while playing with other children.

Two-Day Fair At Levelland Opens Tuesday Morning

Exhibits Excellent And Of Educational Value For Annual Hockley County
Exposition This Year

(Special To The Avalanche)
LEVELLAND, Sept. 24.—The Hockley county fair got under way here this morning and exhibits, while not as large as had been expected, are excellent and of educational value. The fair is the annual Hockley county exposition and is held here every year. Exhibits include agricultural, livestock, poultry, club work, etc., are on the grounds and a great deal of interest is being manifested by those attending the two-day affair.

Crowds began arriving early this morning and late in the afternoon several hundred visitors were present with indications that the last day would be the greatest of all in the way of attendance. There are several entertainment features being offered, according to C. H. Tubbs, secretary of the Levelland chamber of commerce, and manager of the fair. The night entertainment is mainly composed of carnival attractions.

Hockley county is preparing to send an excellent exhibit to the Panhandle-South Plains fair, to be held in Lubbock.

Tech Classes To Begin Thursday

Classes for the 1929-30 school year at Texas Technological college will open Thursday morning at 8 o'clock, following a lively three days of registration.

Officials of the college announce that the large registration activities of the first two days predict a greater enrollment than that recorded during the first two days last year.

Freshmen who failed to register Monday continued enrollment proceedings, together with registration of former students and transfers from other colleges yesterday and activities in the registrar's office were too numerous to make a reasonable estimate of enrollment.

Other first year students and members of the football squad will register this morning.

Situation Grows More Serious In Chinese Section

Reports Of Troops Moving Up River Are Heard In Spite Of Denial By Head
Of Nationalists

Steamers Captured

Troops Aboard Ships Are Heavily Shelled By Shore
Batteries, According To Meager Reports Received

(By Associated Press)
SHANGHAI, Sept. 24.—Despite continued denials of the nationalist government of disorders in Ichang and the defection of General Chang Kai Wei, apparently authentic dispatches received here tonight indicated that the situation was serious.

While Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the Nationalist government, denied that the government had moved troops up the Yangtze river, authentic information from Hanchow stated that a Chinese commercial steamer had limped into port, bringing news of a serious blow inflicted on Nationalist troops by Chang Kai Wei's "Ironside."

According to this information the Nationalist group, commanded by three steamers and loaded them with troops which were dispatched up the river. As the ships neared Ichang on September 19 they were heavily shelled by shore batteries. Fifty soldiers aboard the vessels were killed and several hundred wounded while the "Ironside" captured 3,000 men in addition to supplies and ammunition.

San Angelo Well Sets New Record

Yates Pool In East Pecos
Flows 204,696 Barrels
Daily To Establish High
Production Mark

(By Associated Press)
SAN ANGELO, Sept. 24. (AP)—Flowing 3,529 barrels in one hour, or at the rate of 204,696 barrels daily, the Mts-Kansas and Transcontinental companies No. 30-A Yates oil well in eastern Pecos county yesterday set what was believed to have been a record for initial flow on the North American continent and perhaps in the world.

The record was made through four 6 5/8 inch lines and two 4 inch lines, with 160 pounds of working pressure, from a total depth of 1,070 feet, 90 feet below the level where oil first was struck. The well became the biggest initial gusher in the famous Yates pool on Sept. 14 when it flowed 3,088 barrels of oil in 30 minutes through one four-inch and two six-inch lines with 240 pounds of working pressure. It was shut in to allow the laying of additional flow lines and operators at the time estimated the well should make between seven and eight thousand barrels hourly.

The Yates field in mid September has an average daily potential production of 4,970,220 barrels by 332 wells, compared with the daily average production in the United States of slightly more than 3,000,000 barrels. The No. 30-A Yates, will swell the total.

While it was not believed the new gusher would maintain its high production rate for any considerable length of time, its flow was said to have indicated an enormous petroleum reserve in the area. The field under production is limited to producing 18,000 barrels daily.

"Every Girl Simply Has To Love Or She Will Explode," Says Lupe Velez

Lupe Velez . . . "when I kiss a man, he stays kissed."

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The average girl has simply got to love somebody — or something — and if there isn't a suitable male handy she'd better find herself some sort of job on which she can pour all her emotional firework.

Because if she doesn't she's apt to explode.

These are the studied conclusions of none other than Lupe Velez, the impetuous, diminutive, black-haired Mexican movie actress, voiced as she paused in New Orleans between trains while en route to a picture location in Florida.

Let there be a misunderstanding, Miss Velez hastened to add that as for herself, she loves only—her job.

"No man," she said emphatically, "has ever touched my soul. I love my work. It gives me all the outlet in the world. It keeps me from making a fool of myself over some man."

The interviewer, recalling one of the nation's great traditions, suggested that surely one or another of Hollywood's marveled army of film lovers must have been able to kindle some faint kind of spark in the breast of the intense little actress.

"No!" she said quickly, her eyes flashing. "Not one. They are fine boys. I like them. But love?—no. Not even in the love scenes?" persisted the reporter. "When you are supposed to kiss them in the love scenes, don't you really kiss them?"

"Lupe-Velez smiled.

"When I kiss, he stays kissed."

Fourth Good Will Trip Meets With Success Tuesday

Delegation 125 Lubbockites
Advertises Panhandle-
South Plains Fair Over
1,000 Mile Area In Trips

Following a visit to northern neighbors of the South Plains, the delegations of 125 Lubbock good will trippers and boosters for the Panhandle-South Plains fair, returned last evening completing the fourth and final trade trip of the year, covering 38 towns and approximately 1,000 miles.

"The trip to the north was one of the most successful that we have ever staged," stated C. J. Meyers, chairman of the delegation. "We feel that it was entirely worth every effort made by those who were included and believe the fair association will reap benefit as a result of all of the trips."

Expect Big Attendance
Practically every neighbor of Lubbock has been paid a visit this fall and Lubbock next week will expect to have these visits repaid when it will strive to entertain wholeheartedly the thousands of fair visitors expected in the city.

Everything is set, Lubbock citizens have shaken hands with neighbors, the Lubbock high school band has played, a great amount of pep

Four Derby Fliers Reach Brownsville

BROWNFIELD, Tex., Sept. 24. (AP)—Three of four Mexican fliers competing in the Mexico City-Kansas City international air race had arrived here at 8:25 P. M. tonight, but the fourth has not appeared and some concern for him was felt.

Captain Luis Vendeja sailed down the field here at 6:48:30 P. M. Lt. Carlos Robirosa at 7:11 and Capt. Feliciano Flores at 8:16:20. Lt. Col. Fernando Prola's plane had not been heard from and it was believed his gasoline supply was running very short. Some attendants at the field estimated it would be exhausted before 9 P. M.

Vendeja, Robirosa and Flores reported that flying conditions from Tampico had been "fine" and that they encountered no difficulty.

Art Goebel, American, and Col. Roberto Piro, the only other entrants in the race, already had arrived here. Goebel got here yesterday and Piro came in at 2:43:30 P. M. today. The start over American soil was scheduled for 9 A. M. tomorrow.

The Russian plane, which is en route to New York from Moscow, landed at Attu last Saturday. And has been delayed by unfavorable weather.

The Russians braved bad weather conditions in venturing forth on the flight today as the sky was reported heavily overcast with low lying clouds, in addition to adverse winds.

DALLAS, Sept. 24. (AP)—At least one of four National guard cavalry companies here was called together tonight and ordered to be ready to move quickly. Full equipment, with the exception of firearms and ammunition, was issued Company B.

Moody calls out the militia and takes over control of affairs there. Governor Moody will receive a report from General Walters tomorrow or Thursday.

Asked By Citizens
He has been importuned by citizens of Borger to declare martial law in an effort to "clean up" the situation there, the Governor stated.

He said he would be guided ultimately by a report from his personal representative now en route there. While he refused to divulge the identity of his agent, it is generally understood that General Walters, who was so successful in his direction of the cleanup of Mexico some months ago, is the man.

PRAYER MEETING TONIGHT

Future Fate For Becky Rogers Is Not Determined

Husband Of Famous Co-Ed "Bandit" Not To Place Her In Insane Asylum; Now Under Treatment

FORT WORTH, Sept. 24. (P)—Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers will receive treatment in Fort Worth, and if any attempt is made to have her confined in an insane asylum, it will not be by her husband, Otto Rogers, he stated today.

He and Mrs. Rogers had just returned from New Braunfels where an attorney, he defended her on a charge of robbery with firearms. A hung jury resulted.

Empty Gesture
"It would be an empty gesture for me or any one else to file an insanity case against her," Rogers said. "It is a fact that under the laws of Texas any person, adjudged insane, must be released when as many as two persons post a bond with the court. If she were convicted of insanity there are persons all over the state who would make this bond."

"In Fort Worth she is receiving and will continue to receive as good if not better treatment than she would in a state hospital. And certainly she would be more happy here."

Rogers said he had not been informed whether or not the case will be tried again but added:

"We will be ready for trial any time if the case is ever set again."

Fair Park Plans Memorial Stadium

DALLAS, Sept. 24. (P)—A mammoth concrete and steel memorial stadium with a seating capacity of 80,000 will be erected at Fair park here within the next year. T. E. Jackson, president of the State Fair association, announced today in revealing tentative plans for the structure.

The stadium, as planned, will cost approximately $600,000 and will be financed by the fair association. The structure at first will consist only of bare steel and concrete, but it is planned later to install ornamental walls at an additional cost of $400,000.

The present stadium, a wooden structure, will seat about 17,000. The ancient office of bell ringer of Mill port, Scotland, is to be continued, and Robert Hunter has succeeded the late James Hunter, who made the public announcements for many years.

Former Governor Of Cuban Province Denies Freedom Of Press Existence

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (P)—Dr. Rafael Irujo, former governor of the Cuban province of Matanzas and secretary of war and navy in the Machado administration in Cuba, issued a statement today controverting the assertion of Havana editors that there is freedom of the press in Cuba. His communication follows:

"In response to a statement concerning Cuban affairs signed by three editors of Cuban dailies which you circulated I beg to say there has been no freedom of the press during the entire Machado administration. Four chief editors of Cuban papers have been assassinated during that period under mysterious circumstances after campaigns unfavorable to the government. These were: Major Armando Andre, director of El Dia; Bartholome Sacaro, director of La Voz Del Maestro; Julián Antonio Melia, director of Cuban Libre,

Holmes Assassination Marks Another Turbulent Chapter Of Borger History

BORGER, Sept. 24. (P)—The tumult of special investigations and charges of official conspiracy which has followed the assassination here a little more than a week ago of District Attorney John A. Holmes is merely an unusually turbulent chapter in the brief history of Borger, perhaps Texas' most picturesque oil boom town.

Records show that since the town was founded three years ago there have been nearly two score murders and that the perpetrators of but two of them have been punished.

Settled To Steady Growth
A mushroom oil town in its infancy the city now has settled down to a steady growth depending largely upon the carbon black industry which now is bringing a monthly payroll of $150,000 to its coffers.

In 1926 when oil was discovered thousands of seekers of the black gold moved to Borger. The situation was turbulent and Texas rangers were called in. For a time they made between 75 and 100 arrests daily.

When drilling had been finished the oil wells outlined a field about 40 miles wide and 60 miles long. J. A. Whittenburg, who had bought the land for a few dollars an acre owned the heart of the field and refused to sell land for buildings unless he retained the mineral rights. As a result the main street of Borger, two miles long, runs between two lines of oil wells 330 feet apart, the distance specified by law. Little permanent building has been done away from the main street.

Surrounded By Plants
The two mile-long town has been surrounded by carbon black plants and Captain Aguilar, director of La Campana.

Paper Suppressed
"Only two weeks ago La Semana, a Cuban weekly was suppressed, and three of its reporters deported, while the chief editor, Sergio Carbo, was compelled to flee by aeroplane to the United States. Numerous other newspapers have been violently suppressed, including El Nacional, Union Nacionalista, El Cubano Libre, La Prensa and Hater.

"As to political conditions in Cuba, no one can deny that Machado reflected himself without opposition, that no election has been held for congressmen now holding office, and that hundreds of citizens have been murdered while widespread terrorism prevails. The reports of the American Federation of Labor and Foreign Policy association are definitely conclusive on these points."

Must Serve Term Skirts Fail To Pro-test Man

REVAL, Estonia, Sept. 24. (P)—After spending most of his 20 years in woman's dress for the sole purpose of escaping military service, Albert Cinasel has been discovered here by the police. He will have two years to serve with the army in addition to the fifteen he has already served in the bondage of skirts.

Officers of the organization have been chosen, as follows: D. T. Worley, president; Miss Frances Adams, play director; Pauline Sanders, business manager; Josephine Adams, secretary; and Flora Mae Cook, reporter.

Mexican Peons Wage Too Small For Bare Living; Ranges Below Quarter

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24. (P)—Publication of the industrial survey made by the Department of Industry, Commerce and Labor showed that the daily average wage of peons in more than 400 sections of the country ranged from 12 to 25 cents in American money.

Furthermore the report showed that about 35 per cent of the laboring class was required to toil beyond the legal limit of working hours daily and that it was those who worked longest that received the least.

The investigators report stated flatly that the small pay given to workers was insufficient for bare living under present conditions in Mexico, even though food which the peons eat is usually cheap.

Labor conditions were found to be worst in the mountainous mining regions and in some isolated agricultural sections. In the somewhat more advanced industrial sections it was revealed that workers received slightly more pay, though barely enough for existence.

MOTOR PLAYS VIOLIN

PARIS, Sept. 24.—Two French engineers have perfected a mechanical violin which plays without human aid. It has a number of keys which press the strings like the left hand of a player. A revolving bow, driven by a motor, scrapes the strings to produce the various tones. Two motors are employed in the operation, one to imitate the motion of the arm and the other the swift movement of the wrist.

From The Mountains of Central America

Come Coffees Unlike Any Known Before!

Never "thin" or "flat"—Experts agree that this rare flavor is not duplicated anywhere else in the world

EVERYWHERE women are talking of a rare, full-flavored coffee that is never "thin" or "flat." A coffee utterly unlike any they had known before.

It comes from the high volcanic mountains of Central America, a region that produces coffees with a rare tang and mellow, full-bodied flavor that, experts agree, is different from any other known.

Unlike All Others

Ordinarily when you change from one brand of coffee to another, you note little difference in taste. That is because 70% of all coffee sold in the United States today (regardless of brand name) is of one common flavor, grown in the same general region. So-called "blending" and special roasting processes (in spite of advertising talk) can not change it. For roasting coffee merely brings out whatever flavor Nature has already put in.

It is a different type of coffee that makes Folger's flavor different—the rare mountain coffees of Central America. The instant you break the seal of the vacuum can, there is a rush of rich fragrance unlike any coffee you have ever tried before. And when you pour the clear amber coffee in the cup, you'll find it has a rare tang and mellow richness beyond compare.

Testing Coffee Flavor

Get a pound of Folger's Coffee from your grocer today. Drink it tomorrow morning. The next morning drink the coffee you have been using. The third morning drink Folger's again. Then decide which you like best. If, for any reason, you do not choose Folger's, your grocer will gladly refund the full purchase price. We will pay him. That's fair, isn't it? You risk nothing—so why not order Folger's now for the test?

Trans-Atlantic Conversation Is Cheap For Hello Gilrs

Telephone Operators Get Thrill From Long Exchanges

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. — "Hello, London, how's the fog today?" "Cheerio, New York. Fog nothing; it's quite beastly hot here. What did you do last night, New York? Another party?"

"Had a swell time. We went to a brand new place and danced till all hours. And the most gorgeous man, my dear; he was absolutely—extra, L. n. d. n. Waiting on your serial 142 call . . . Mr. Smith . . . Hello, Mr. Smith . . . Ready on your call to Paris . . . Go ahead, please."

Voices across the sea. Thirty-two hundred miles of wire and high-powered and high-priced radio telephony carries the daily chatter of the new queens of the "hello girls."

All Talk Isn't Cheap. Statesmen may confer on world issues, financial princes may give verbal instructions to their brokers, lavish millionaires may call their wives in Paris to brag about their latest golf scores, at the rate of $15 a minute and up. But between these pay calls, the trans-Atlantic operators gossip about boy-friends, new styles, the best movies and the weather—all with the wholehearted approval of their supervisors.

The reason lies in the fact that the line between New York and London is always "set up." To establish communication, a New York operator need only say "Hello, London," and the reply is "Hello, New York." To be sure that the

is kept constantly in tune, it is necessary to test it with conversation. So while waiting to connect calls from anywhere between the Pacific Coast of the United States to almost any city in Europe, the girls get in plenty of light gossip.

They Give Each Other a Line. The girls in New York and London get to know each other very well, said Miss Ella Mae Higgins, superintendent in charge of the trans-Atlantic operators. "When the trunks are clear of business, we must constantly test the availability of the lines. That's no task for a bunch of lively girls—they easily find something to talk about."

"They discuss the weather. What they did the night before. Current plays in London and New York. Yes, sometimes they compare notes on their boy friends. The English telephone company is run by the government and because of civil service regulations, the operators are much older than our girls, and are more sedate and settled."

"London uses men operators at night. They go on about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, New York time, and our girls give them a merry chase. The men must be rather oldish and dignified persons, for they soon find themselves out-talked."

The London operators have gradually adopted American call expressions, Miss Higgins says. When the line first opened they responded to the call with the stilted British expression: "Are you there, New York?" Now they say "Hello."

The line is still "available" in London, for they refuse to say "O. K." but America has adopted their "Waiting" instead of "Your call is ready." Other compromises have been made on several call expressions, using the shortest of the two systems.

Real friends have been made across those 3,000 miles of space. Many of the girls exchange letters and gifts with others whom they never have seen.

A Famous Bit of Talk. The job is "awfully thrilling," they'll tell you. What girl would not be proud of having talked to John Gilbert, Gene Tunney, his wife Polly Lauder, Gloria Swanson, William Leeds and Sir Thomas Lipton—all within a few months? Pretty Margaret Lang has those and many another celebrity on her list.

"Every week or so, I have a new celebrity to tell the folks at home about," she said. "Gene Tunney was calling from Paris recently and he was very nice. He joked with me while I was getting his party."

"Just before Sir Thomas Lipton came over here, he was calling America. While waiting for the connection he asked, 'With whom am I talking?'"

"You're talking to the operator in New York," I told him. "What's this me," he said. "I thought you were in the next room!" When Sir Thomas arrived in the United States, he came up here to see the trans-Atlantic system and I met him in person.

"The operators in London can't seem to understand our American ways. I told a London operator the other day that we had been down in Greenwich Village on a party and didn't get home until after midnight. She was terribly shocked."

"Their idea of a good time is to go to a movie and go home. They are very much interested in America and often express the desire to come over here."

"The big hit in London now is Al Jolson in the picture, 'The Singing Fool,' and the girls over there rave about it every day. We snugly tell them that we saw it months ago, and give them a line on the best films that will be shown there soon."

International sports give the girls plenty to talk about. Miss Betty Nuthall and other members of the English Wightman cup tennis team were visitors to the New York trans-Atlantic switchboard a few weeks ago and listened in to their own London operators.

"When the United States won the matches you can bet we kidded the life out of the London operators, and bragged on our own Helen Wills," laughed Miss Lang.

In addition to the regular operators on the three trunks across the ocean, linguists who speak nine different tongues and who can translate "hello" through the various exchanges in Europe, are employed as "observers" on all calls. The city of these girls is to "listen in" to conversations and make sure at the call is going through without interference. Should trouble develop, they credit the interrupter to the call charge and report the "channel" operator who re-establishes the circuit.

There is a list of the linguists now typed in the New York office: ch. 4; German, 9; Spanish, 8; Lithuanian, 1; Italian, 1; Polish, 1; Austrian, 1.

These girls are allowed to listen only to the babble of foreign tongues and cannot talk to the operators in Europe. The call is set up by the London operators and the American observers can only report difficulties to London, where the necessary mechanical adjustments are made.

Stock Market In Break On Tuesday

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (AP)—The stock market broke badly in the last hour of trading today under a flood of selling orders in the high priced industrials and public utility stocks, many of which dropped $5 to $25 a share below the day's high level.

The selling was influenced by fears that an increase in the Bank of England discount rate on Thursday would result in withdrawal of foreign funds from New York, public opinion of a report that steel mill operations had fallen below the level of a year ago and the testimony of Alexander Legge, former head of the International Harvester company, that the stock of which he is a heavy holder, was selling too high.

The Governor was asked either to have the attorney general's department make the investigation or ask the legislature to appoint a committee to do so.

FORMULA PROTESTED

Mathematical System Used In Estimate Flayed

DALLAS, Sept. 24. (AP)—A special dispatch from Washington to the Times-Herald today says: "A protest against the methods and mathematical formula adopted by the United States crop reporting board in estimating the cotton crop Sept. 9 has been made to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde by Senators Connally and Sheppard of Texas on the ground that the formula used for that estimate inflated the forecast anywhere from 300,000 to 500,000 bales."

"It is asserted in the protest that the board seems to have changed its methods of predicting the crop without public notice, and is now attempting to anticipate future weather and other developments that may affect the final yield in its monthly forecast."

No More Night Practice, Avers Coast Morrison

DALLAS, Sept. 24 (P)—The weak showing of Southern Methodist University against Denton in the opening game last Saturday has convinced Coach Ray Morrison that night practice has no place on the grid-iron.

Although the Mustang candidates had almost two weeks of practice under the lights at Ownby Stadium, they apparently derived little benefit. Only a few members of the squad took off any weight.

The last two days have seen the Mustangs put over the bumpy, and Morrison announced he planned to pour on more work every day until Saturday when the Howard Payne Yellow Jackets will be encountered here.

Littlefield Men Show Improving

AUSTIN, Sept. 24 (P)—The backfield which Coach Clyde Littlefield will send against St. Edwards' university Saturday in the Longhorns' first actual game of the season likely will consist of Perkins, Rees, Shelly, Beard and Beulah.

His "B" team which will be sent to Abilene to meet the scrappy Simmons University Cowboys will rely on Meadows, former Waco high school athlete, as field general, and Laughlin, Brown, Elkins and Baldrige as ball carriers.

Linemen who constantly were outcharged Saturday in a practice tilt with the Southwest Texas State Teachers College Bobcats today revealed noticeable improvement in blocking and tackling. So marked was the showing that the Steer mentor was scratching his head to determine which men would face their home town enemy, the Saints, and which would make the trip to Abilene.

Home Demonstration Club Member Of Hardy Stores Up Winter Provisions

Human beings at times have the wisdom of the thrifty ant.

Mrs. C. F. Hedges of the Hardy home demonstration club has stored up provisions for the winter season, enough to last her and her family for several months. At the beginning she made a budget which included everything she thought would be necessary for her family of four. This budget included 252 quarts of fruit and 254 quarts of vegetables. During the past summer she has canned according to this budget and has, at this time, 70 quarts of fruit, 204 quarts of vegetables, 74 quarts pickles, jellies, etc. and she plans to have at least 100 cans of meat when the weather becomes cool enough to preserve it.

Came From Garden

Mrs. Hedges canned these vegetables from a good producing garden which included 28 varieties of vegetables. She has wonderberries and garden huckleberries also.

"I plan to plant some winter spinach as soon as I can get the seed," she stated. "I want green fresh vegetables to supplement those I have canned. Canning equipment is one thing we do not mind to buy for we realize the financial and health value of a cellar full of canned goods through the winter."

The resolution said the session was called to deal principally with farm relief, and that press reports indicated this purpose was being ignored.

PECULIAR INSANITY
YOU'LL remember Charlie Waggoner. He's the Telluride Colo. banker who outsmarted some of the wisest financial institutions in the world and "went south" with almost half a million dollars in funds which did not belong to him. Incidentally Charlie Waggoner, small town banker and certainly not impressive to look upon, got away with the swag without reverting to guns or nitro-glycerine. He merely "used his head" and admits he "pulled a job" which has interested the whole business world.

Now Charlie is going to trial—that is he will go to trial some time in the more or less near future as is the custom under the traditions of American jurisprudence. At any rate he's going to trial some day, and his defense plea will be "insanity."

It will be interesting to watch that trial. The old insanity standby has been a marvelous aid in many murder cases, but dragging it into a swindling case, all dressed up in a new suit, so to speak, is a little outside the usual run of events. The Morning Avalanche at least expects to get a big kick out of the dicker which is likely to be called in federal court when the Colorado man is called before a jury of his peers.

The editor of The Morning Avalanche is by no means an expert on insanity. Of course, anyone in the newspaper business is likely more or less to run into considerable of it. But from the editorial sanctum in the South Plains Hub viewing an occurrence a couple of thousand miles away, it doesn't appear that there could be very much wrong with the brains and ingenuity of Charlie Waggoner.

Any man who can operate like Charlie operated and can flick a half million of the coin of the realm merely by utilizing the most kind of telegrams, isn't crazy. No, sir. He's smart—smart as a whip. So smart in fact that he'd better be put away somewhere so he can't make monkeys out of any more sane folk.

And that's that.

CAN THE LIBERALS UNITE?
Formation of a liberal party is said to be the aim of Professor John Dewey of Columbia University. The distinguished philosopher and many of his followers are not hopeful in regard to the progressiveness of other major parties and they plan to launch a movement comparable to that of British labor. For the time being attention will be focused upon local, state and national political campaigns.

Desirable as this movement is, the fact remains that third-party programs have not been successful in the United States. Not even Theodore Roosevelt and Robert M. La Follette, two national figures with immense popularity, were able to lay progressive foundations capable of withstanding the onslaughts of time.

Professor Dewey's greatest difficulty will be that of procuring unity of outlook and action. In contrast with Great Britain economic radicalism has never made great headway in America. The liberal forces of this country are split into numerous schools of thought and their common lack is that of a common point of view.

Unless the new liberal partisans can find some acceptable set of policies designed to fuse progressive sentiment into a coordinated undertaking like that headed by Premier Ramsay MacDonald, their work will be in vain. Personal leadership has been tried and found wanting. Unity of purpose offers the only hope.

AN AIR-TRAFFIC CODE
It is difficult to attain anything like perfection in aviation legislation, but because the new industry changes so rapidly and because its activities are not readily brought within the usual limitations of jurisdiction, the aeronautical branch of the chamber of commerce is doing admirable work in meeting this problem. It embodies in recommendations those regulations which cannot be made a matter of federal legislation. Federal rules, for example, can control aircraft as common carriers or when engaged in interstate business, and these terms include practically all planes which serve the public. But flying field operation and airport conduct must be regulated in less direct fashion.

An airport code which embodies the experience of many successful fields will shortly be distributed to all operators. It is likely that its recommendations will be generally accepted and welcomed. When the business was young the managers of airports were compelled to learn their business by experience or exchange of ideas with others, and this was sometimes an expensive road to efficiency. The department of commerce now offers its services as efficient expert to airports and thereby hopes to bring about uniformity in ground rules and flying field operations. When this is in effect, the pilot will know what to expect when he lands in a strange field on business or in emergency.

RACE FOR AIR SUPREMACY
Statistics on air transit recently made public by the department of commerce at Washington show that the United States now leads in number of aircraft. The figures offer rather convincing evidence that this country has taken a position in the front ranks of the air-minded nations of the world.

It is a striking comparison which finds the United States with 6,320 civil aircraft, Italy with 1,000, France with 860, Germany with 535, Great Britain with 353 and Canada with 327. America, it will be noted, has more than six times as many as its nearest competitor.

In miles of air lines in operation, however, the United States takes second place. The figures are: Germany 13,540; United States 15,967; France 11,343; Russia 7,022; Italy 3,150. Germany also ranks first in number of passengers carried; Canada second and the United States third.

A conservative is one who never found himself in a worse hole, broke and in need of a shave.

INDUSTRIAL EFFICIENCY IS HIGHER AS OF PROHIBITION LAW, THOUGH IT IS IMMORAL—COUZENS

BY CHARLES F. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Considering the resources with which nature endowed their land, have Americans made the most of their opportunities?

Senator James Couzens thoughtfully repeated the question raised by Prof. T. E. Gregory, the English economist, who answers his own question in the negative—who, while admitting that we fairly roll in wealth, argues that we would be a far greater people if we had developed our country more intelligently.

Senator Couzens ought to be able to qualify as an authority on this subject, if any American can.

For whatever our national development may be worth, the Detroit multimillionaire certainly has had a hand in it—from the day when a young man, he invested his first few thousands of savings to finance Henry Ford; through the years which he spent in nursing the filver industry to a billion-dollar rating, until the present find him at the head of the senate's powerful inter-state commerce committee and the richest member of either house of congress.

"It all depends," said the senator, "on our ideal. In a strictly material sense, and nationally speaking, it seems to me that we are in a position to give a pretty good account of our stewardship of America's natural resources.

"True, undoubtedly we have wasted a great deal—for which we are blame-worthy.

"Still, we have not buried our talents. On the contrary, we have dug them up at a great rate and put them into circulation. If we have not invariably expended it to the best advantage, at least we have broken all records. Perhaps other folk are entitled to say that we might have accomplished more, but they are not entitled to say that any of them have accomplished so much.

"Material success, however," continued the Michigan lawmaker, "is not the only essential to national greatness. We are the most prosperous people in history, as a whole people, but not all our people are individually prosperous.

"Unemployment is a blot on our civilization. Capitalism, to which we seem to be committed, makes the worker dependent on employment—for wages. Thus capitalism itself, by creating such a situation, assumes responsibility for providing well-paid employment—not underpaid or merely periodic.

"If it shirks this responsibility, my opinion is that it cannot survive as a system.

"I would feel deeply discouraged if I did not believe that we have made a start in the right direction, and I consider it the greatest triumph of the Ford industries that they took the initiative.

To what extent has prohibition added to American efficiency?

"To a marked extent," replied the Wolverine legislator promptly—and unexpectedly, for Senator Couzens is a wet.

Indeed, in the next breath, he said so.

"Although I am against prohibition," he observed, "there is no doubt that it has reduced drinking.

"I learned that as police commissioner of Detroit.

"If only I could have kept that job!" added the senator wistfully. "I never enjoyed a job so much as I enjoyed being police commissioner. I quit, not because I wanted to quit, but because the candidate for mayor on the opposition ticket was determined to oust me, and I had to run against him to prevent it—thereby losing the commissioner-ship anyway.

"At all events," went on the Michigan solon, "prohibition did reduce drinking and correspondingly increased industrial efficiency.

That was where I differed from many of my friends.

"They said prohibition was an economic issue. I said it was a moral issue—and so it is, whatever they said.

"Whether or not prohibition increases my efficiency is my business. As a moral proposition, no one has a right to tell me what I can or cannot do, in a matter which concerns me exclusively.

"Yes, prohibition has increased industrial efficiency—but it is very immoral."

HERE'S ADVICE ON CARING FOR AN INVALID IN HIS OWN HOME

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Miss Norma Seibert, assistant professor of public health of the College of Medicine of Ohio State University, has just made available in the form of a small book a guide to the home care of the sick.

The person who lies in bed suffering from some disorder and who is suffering just about as much with the misguided attention of members of the family will do well to invest in this volume as a gift for those who take care of him.

Miss Seibert points out that the ideal home in which to be sick is one in which there are no weeds or rubbish in the yard, a sufficient number of swings, benches and chairs on the porch to keep the visitors outdoors, a scraper and mat outside the door for removal of mud from the shoes, and a place for depositing umbrellas, galoshes, rubbers and slickers before the invalid enters the bedroom.

The windows should be screened so that flies and other insect pests cannot enter. There should be a thermometer in the room to make sure that the temperature is kept between 60 and 70 degrees F. The windows should be opened for ventilation and screens arranged so that drafts will not blow directly on the bed.

If the windows rattle, that may be controlled with small wedges of wood and the grooves in which the windows move should be greased with vasoline or with grease so that they will slide easily. The doors should be noiseless and should be kept so by using a pad or folded cloth to prevent a rattle. The hinges should be oiled.

There should be sufficient daylight for reading in the daytime and there should be a night reading light suitably arranged to prevent glare and provide good illumination.

The floor in the sick room should be preferably hard wood with a small rug, since this is easily cleaned.

A poet, with 28 trunks, arrived in New York from Europe the other day. And port authorities didn't even investigate.

Home is a place where you make your own peanut butter sandwiches.

SIGHTS PACIFIC OCEAN

On Sept. 25, 1513, Vasco Nunez de Balboa, a Spanish explorer, sighted the Pacific ocean, the first European to do so from American shores.

Confused accounts of a great western ocean which reached Balboa in the Darien territories, of which he was in supreme command, impelled him to go in search of it in 1513.

On September 25, he obtained his first view of the Pacific ocean from a mountain top in the Isthmus of Panama.

Four days later, he reached the water at a point which is still known by the name he gave it, the Gulf of Miguel. He took formal possession for Spain, naming the ocean the Mar del Sur, or South Sea, the coast at this point trending nearly east and west.

The educated men of his time shared his great enthusiasm at this great discovery and the contemporary writers may still be read with much interest.

Governors of the territories conquered by Balboa, and known as Darien, was obtained some time later by Pedro Arias (Pedrarias) Davila, through intrigues at the Spanish court, and Balboa resigned the command into the hands of the governor.

Balboa was beheaded in 1517 after a dispute with Pedrarias.

Germany's purchases of American agricultural implements this year is expected to exceed $2,500,000.

Canada is buying an average of more than 2,000 tractors a month from the United States.

THE WIDOW'S MITE

A widow—she had only one!
A puny and decrepit son;
But day and night,
Though fretful oft, and weak and small,
A loving child, he was her all—
The Widow's Mite.

The Widow's Mite! ay, so sustained,
That, though resigned and cheerful, she
Has sorrowed much:
She has. He gave it tenderly.
Much faith; and, carefully laid by,
A little crutch.

PUBLIC OPINION

To the Editor of The Lubbock Avalanche:

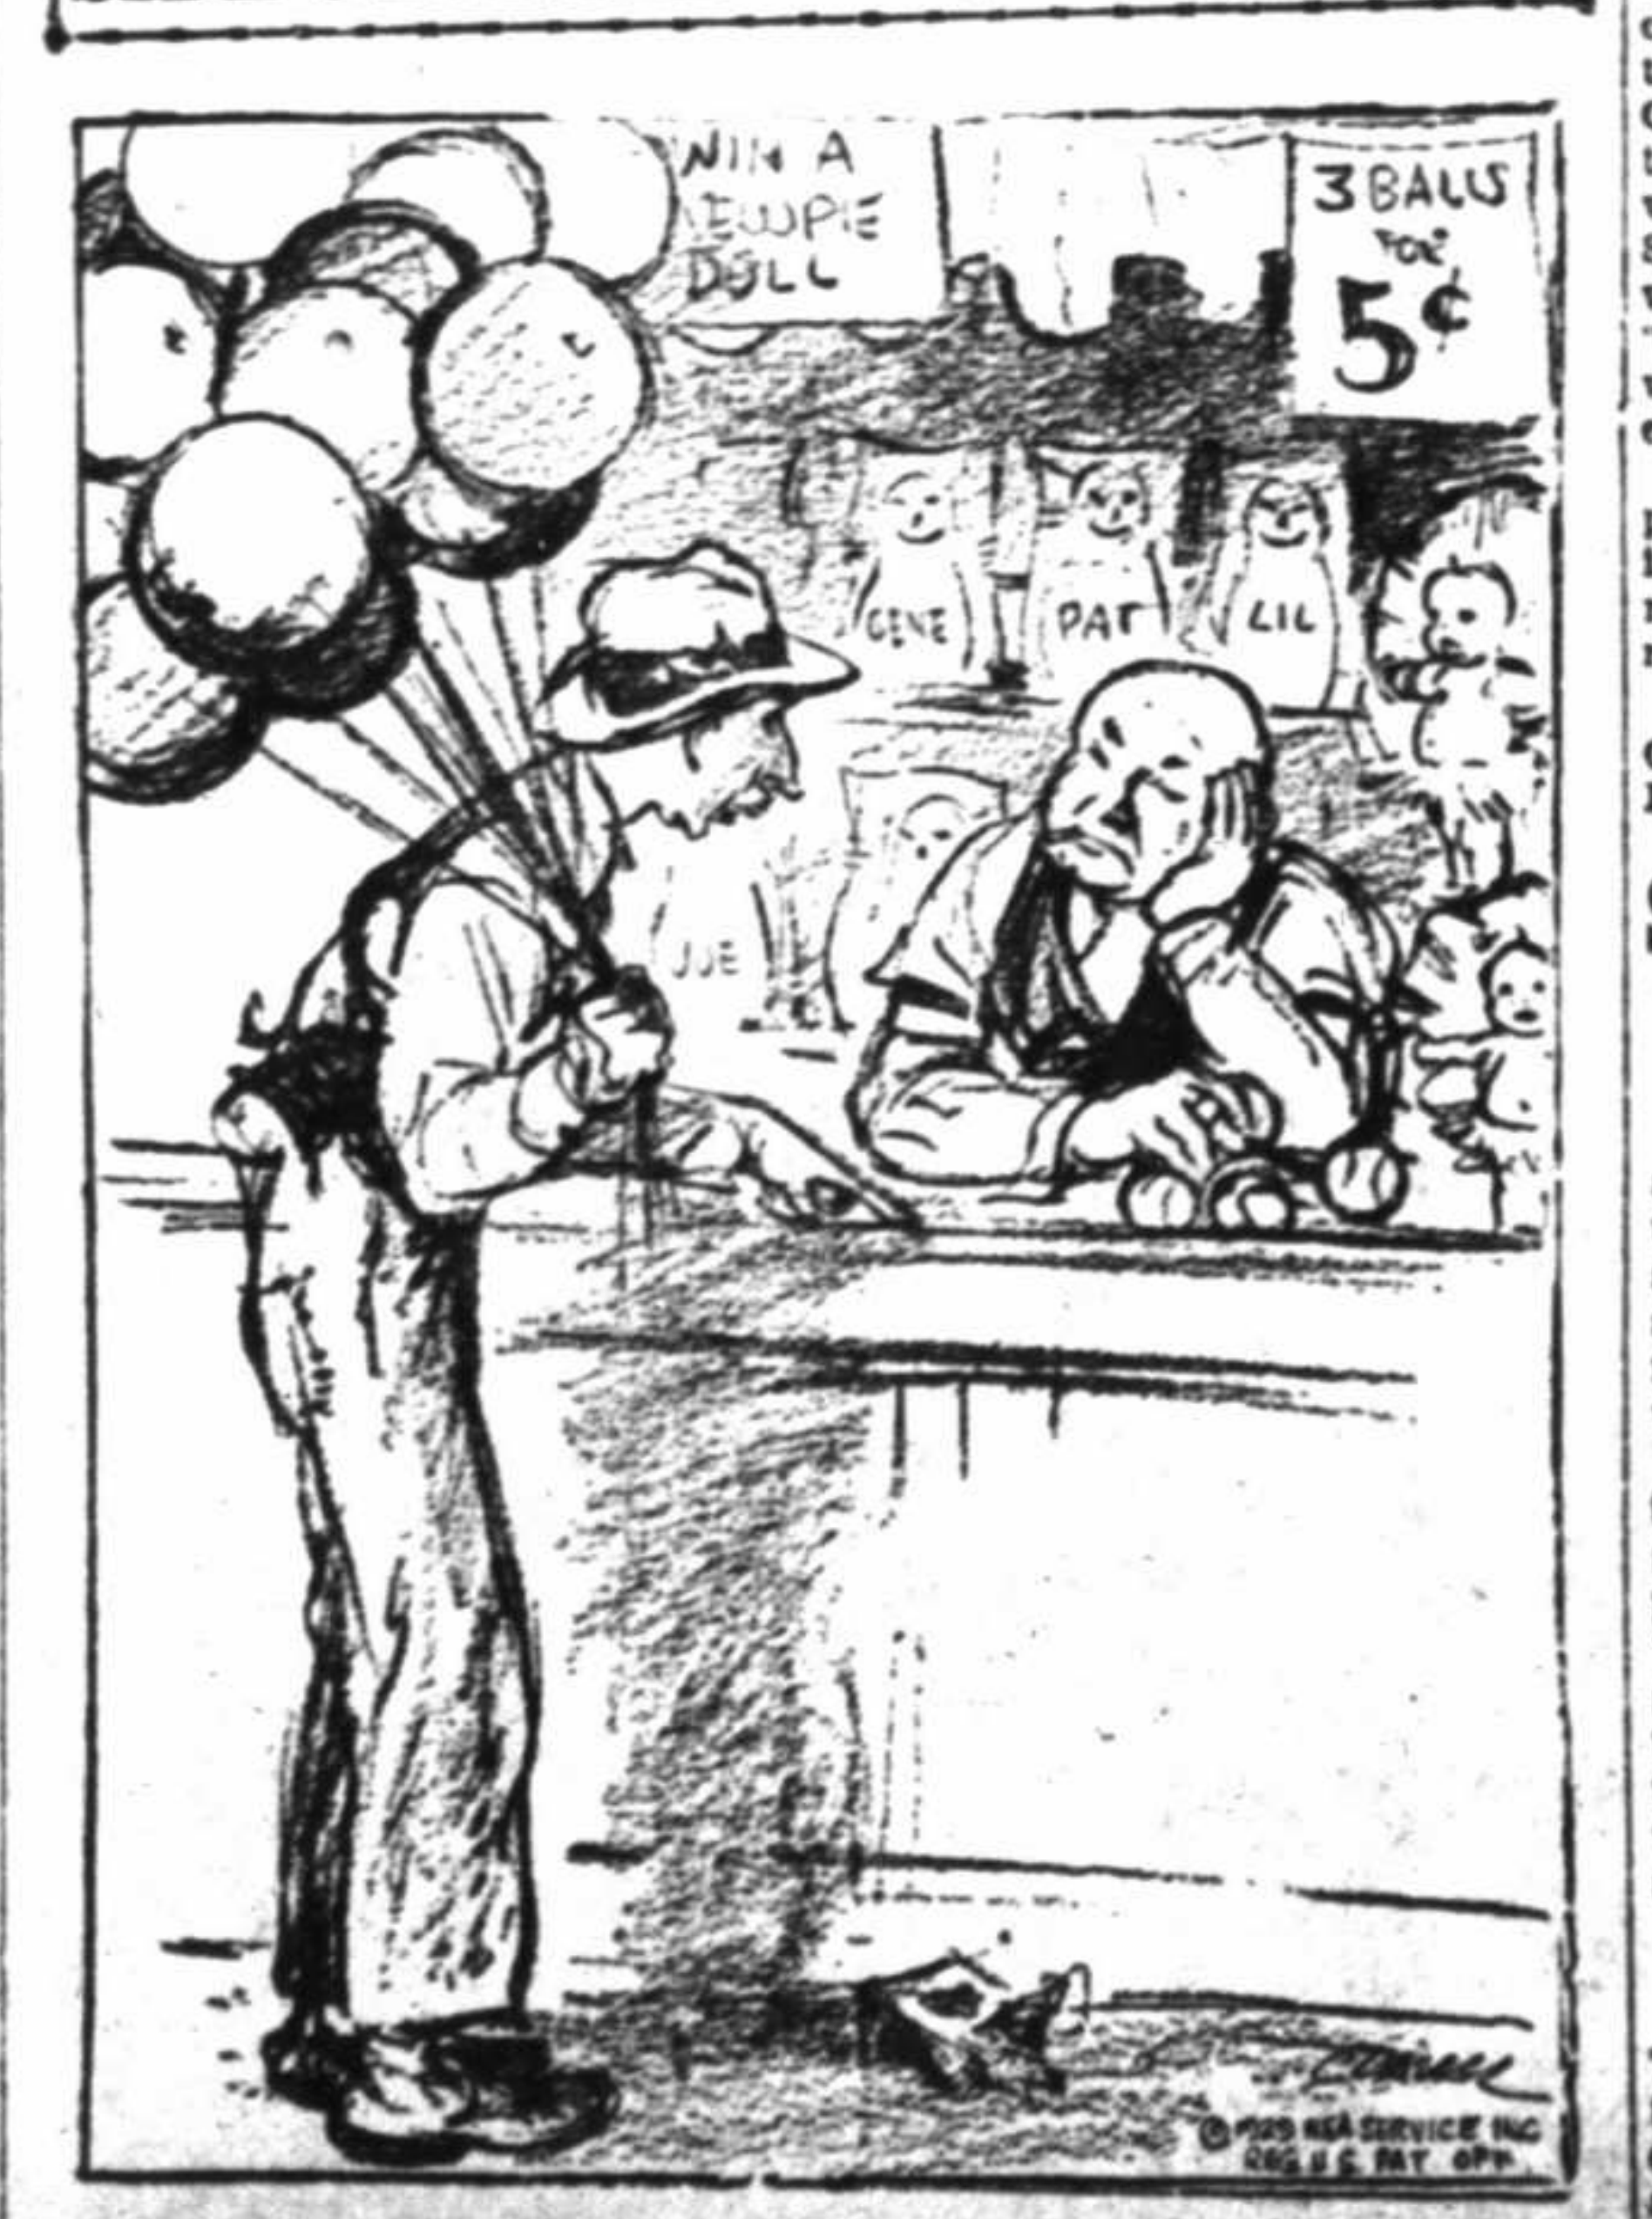

On July 23 you carried a syndicated account of the slaying of a Michigan woman in which it was stated that both the slain woman and those accused of the crime "upheld the tenets of Christian Science."

Investigation of this shocking affair develops the fact that the accused never were Christian Scientists in any sense. They attended Christian Science services a few times with the slain woman, who was a member of a Christian Science church for many years and was, as your account stated, a "kindly, serious-minded woman," wholly innocent of any occult, wicked mental powers.

Linking "witchcraft" with the purely spiritual, Christ-like teachings of Christian Science is an error that most informed persons now readily recognize.

Innocent Cheat

By Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL," "POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
HELEN PAGE felt unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, LEONARD BRENT. But he represents all that she knows of home and family even though he refuses to clear up the mystery of her birth until after her graduation.

However, a chance meeting with a dying beggar, CHARLES OWENS NELLIN, causes Brent to change all his plans regarding Helen's future. Before the man dies, Brent secures facts and evidences which he is able to corroborate to some extent by a visit to Yonkers.

On graduating, Helen reminds her guardian of his promise to tell her about her parents, and is amazed when he informs her that she is heiress of a millionaire CYRIL K. CUNNINGHAM, and that he promised her parents to take her to her grandfather when she was 18. Brent takes her to Yonkers and introduces her to Cunningham as his granddaughter.

He tells the story and offers as proof the pocket containing a picture of her mother, EVELINE CUNNINGHAM NELLIN, which he had taken from the dying beggar.

Cunningham and his lawyer request that Helen remain at Bramblewood until an investigation is made. Brent favors this, but the girl objects, resenting the fact that she is under suspicion until the old man gains her favor by the gift of a beautiful new car. The girl drives everywhere alone and one day accidentally strikes a young woman who has to be taken to a hospital.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV

"What'd you hit?" The traffic officer rapped out the question abruptly when he again reached Helen's car. "Any one hurt besides that girl?"

"No," Helen said faintly. "I ran up a bank and broke through a fence."

Helen fumbled in her bag and got out the slip of paper. The officer examined it and made a note of the number of the license plates on her car.

He asked a few more questions and Helen answered them as accurately as she could in her overwrought condition.

Suddenly, while he jotted down some notes, she had given him, she burst out with an appeal to be allowed to go on to the hospital. "We'll be takin' a trip to the station first," he replied curtly.

"But I want to do something for that girl," Helen protested. "Twenty minutes for that," he told her and stepped on the running board. "Can you drive all right?" Helen nodded and started the motor.

"It's only a few blocks," the officer said, softening a trifle over her courageous effort to face the music without whimpering.

Helen went through the next half an hour in a daze. Questions, questions. Questions. They wore her mind. Where was the girl she had hurt? Where was she now? On the operating table? Dead?

"Please," she begged at last, without answering the latest question put to her. "call up the hospital and find out how she is."

"We'll have to do that," the sergeant at the desk informed her, "before we can decide what to do about you. By your own admission, Miss Brent, you are guilty of reckless driving."

"Then please do it at once," Helen entreated.

A few minutes later she breathed more freely. Word had come back from the hospital that the injured girl was not fatally hurt.

"Let me go to see her," Helen pleaded.

This time she was not refused, though an officer was sent to accompany her lest she be unable to drive safely.

At the hospital they were admitted into a ward where the girl, whose name they were told was Eva Ennis, lay unconscious upon a narrow cot.

Helen felt remorse as painful as she felt at her heart when she beheld that white, drawn face again. It seemed so small and pitiful—like a suffering child's—and the brown hair lay in a babyish way on the pallid forehead that added to the impression of youthfulness.

Helen's eyes sought the nurse's glance in mute appeal.

"She regained consciousness for a few minutes," the nurse told her. "Is she badly hurt?"

"We cannot know until Dr. Parkley arrives. There are some broken bones. Our examination found no external injuries except a few bruises."

Helen tore here gaze away from the girl's face and looked about her. "Haven't you a private room?" she asked.

"There will be one available at four o'clock."

"I'd like to engage it," Helen said. "For Miss Ennis."

"You can make arrangements for it with Miss Sibley at the desk in the reception room," the nurse told her.

Helen hurried away to see about it. And when Dr. Parkley had finished re-examining the patient Eva was moved into one of the best rooms in the hospital.

She was conscious now, though bewildered with her surroundings. She had yet fully grasped the fact that she'd been hit and brought to a hospital.

She moaned feebly and called for her mother. Her helplessness wrung scalding hot tears from Helen's eyes when they wheeled her into the private room and put her on the bed.

... Helen had waited there in an agony of suspense to hear Dr. Parkley's verdict. She had received it as soon as possible but there had been a period in which she felt forgotten. That feeling was swept away when the verdict came. It was favorable and Helen was relieved of the greatest fear she'd ever known—the fear of having caused the death of another human being.

She was eager to show her relief and gratitude to a kind fate, in every way she could. She engaged two private nurses for Eva and instructed that no expense be spared to assure her comfort.

The hospital authorities called up Bramblewood at Helen's request and received Mr. Cunningham's approval of what Helen had done. He asked to speak with Helen and she told him briefly what had happened.

"You're quite right, my dear, to do everything you can for the unfortunate girl," her grandfather assured her.

"I had to have your authorization for the expenses," Helen explained, "because I haven't any credit here." She tried to laugh but her grandfather understood by the catch in her voice that she was highly unstrung.

"I have established your credit," he said hastily.

"Oh, but I'll repay you," Helen promised; "Leonard..."

"Never mind Brent," Mr. Cunningham snapped. "Are you able to drive home or shall I send for you?"

"I'm all right," Helen assured him, but I won't be home just yet. I'm going to Miss Ennis' mother and tell her what has happened.

"Nonsense; we will send someone else."

"No, no," Helen objected. "I must go myself."

"Very well, but I shall worry until you return."

Helen left the telephone to go back and sit beside Eva's bed until the girl was able to talk rationally to her. Her eyes searched the pain-swept face for any gleam of signs of an end to the girl's suffering.

Her presence puzzled Eva until Helen, reaching out and placing a hand lightly on one of hers, said with a real anguish of remorse, "I hurt you, you know. And I'll be sorry all my life."

Eva ceased to smile.

"I'm afraid you can't go home for a while yet," Helen hurried on; "but I'm going to fetch your mother, if you will tell me where you live."

Eva's eyes filled with grateful tears. She forgot that Helen had caused her trouble. She wanted the comforting arms of her mother.

She gave Helen the address and Helen promised to be back as soon as possible.

... Brent did not accompany Helen in her thoughts on the drive to the Ennis house. She resolutely put him aside to face the realization of having brought harm to an innocent person because of her indifference and selfish feelings for her mother.

Her sense of guilt made her specially considerate when she was admitted by Mrs. Ennis into an old-fashioned house.

Helen was instantly impressed with the pleasant mannerliness of Eva's mother. And with the odor of apple cooking that permeated the house.

"How am I going to tell her?" Helen asked herself in suddenly deepening reluctance to break her news.

"My name is Helen... Brent," she said when Mrs. Ennis moved forward a chair for her. "I have come on an unhappy errand."

Mrs. Ennis looked worried.

"You sit down," Helen said impulsively, motioning to the chair that was offered her.

Mrs. Ennis mechanically seated herself, feeling a premonition of trouble. "What is it?" she said quaveringly.

"It's about your daughter," Helen answered gently.

"Eva!" Mrs. Ennis cried: "what has happened to her? Oh, tell me, tell me!"

Helen could not stop to think of a way to soften the blow in the face of the mother's suspense.

"She's met with an accident," she said slowly. "She isn't badly hurt, but she wants you."

"Where is she? Take me to her!"

"She's in the Good Shepherd Hospital," Helen replied. "I'll take you there at once, in my car."

"I'll get my things," Mrs. Ennis cried, turning toward the door to the hall.

Just as she reached it Helen heard the front door open and close again and Mrs. Ennis, cry: "Bob! Bob! Eva's been hurt!"

"Mom!" It was a heartfelt protest, and it came straight to Helen's ears. There was a conscience like a demon. She saw the mother gliding into a pair of masculine arms and clinging there for a moment, sobbing uncontrollably.

"Tell me about it," she heard the man called Bob say.

"I don't know how it happened. I'm going to the hospital. There's a young lady in the sitting room who came for me. You'll go with us?"

Helen saw Mrs. Ennis release her self and hurry up the stairs.

A moment later she was facing Bob. He came across the room and stood quite close to her. "What happened?" he said quietly, tensely, "to my sister?"

Arson, Blackmail Plot Is Cause Of Family's Tragedy

Mother and Daughter Take Own Lives And Father, Son Face Sentences In Prison For Alleged Plot

WABASH, Ind., Sept. 24. (AP)—An arson and blackmail plot in which an entire family is alleged to have participated has culminated in the suicide of the mother and a daughter and prison sentences for the father and son.

Mrs. Charles Keaffaber, 47, and her daughter, Helen, 24, were found dead in their farm home near Roann yesterday. They had taken poison. The daughter had confessed to county officers last week she was the writer of unsigned letters to several persons in this vicinity threatening destruction of their property unless restitution was made for fancied wrongs. The husband and father of the family, Charles Keaffaber, 46, and the son, Roy, 25, are held in jail here under prison sentences of one to ten years each. The father and son have pleaded guilty to setting fire to a sawmill at Akron, Ind., last month and a farm building near there two years ago.

Mrs. Keaffaber was not implicated in the plot, but authorities believe she had knowledge of their actions.

Attacker Begins Long Prison Term

LANING, Kans., Sept. 24. (AP)—Gordon W. Frost, United States army deserter and confessed attacker of two Concordia, Kansas, women motorists, was brought to the state prison here yesterday and began serving an indeterminate sentence, the minimum of which is 40 years.

His women victims, Miss Leda Beauregard and Mrs. Beatrice Walsh, were robbed of their motor car after they were robbed, slashed with razors and left tightly bound a short distance from a highway near Hoxie.

Wayne C. Aldrich, another youth arrested with Frost at Denver, has offered to plead guilty of robbery of the motor car.

Rebellious Natures Of Perfect Crime Thrill Slayers Softened By Prisons

BY WALTER T. BROWN
(AP Feature Service Writer.)
JOLIET, Ill., Sept. 24. (P)—The old clock in the warden's office has ticked away the years of the life-time that Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb must pay for the "perfect crime" that was so imperfect.

In May 1934, the wealthy college youth, outstanding student, and son of well established Chicago families, killed 14-year-old Bobby Franks, also of a wealthy family.

It was the tragedy that the tragedy with the reason that they had sought a thrill. On September 12, Leopold and Loeb were "dressed in" at state prison here.

Loeb, now 21, is a messenger—an errand boy—in the yards of the old prison. Leopold, 24, works the superior intelligence that was his undoing in the library of the new prison. Occasionally he checks the records of the shoe factory. The two never see each other.

Proposed Measure Will Protect Land Owners On Border

Texas, New Mexico Commission Agrees Both Of States Along Rio Grande Would Protect Owners

EL PASO, Sept. 24. (P)—Having agreed Texas and New Mexico should pass reciprocal legislation to protect land owners whose title may be endangered by relocation of the boundary between states along the shifting Rio Grande the Texas-New Mexico claims commission met again today to determine just what state and federal laws would be necessary to accomplish that object.

In putting the boundary between the states back to where the center of the river was in 1850, many land owners who bought their parcels from the public domain of Texas have discovered the land was really a part of the national domain and should have been obtained from the federal government. Approximately 15,000 acres of the richest farming land along the Rio Grande is involved in changes from one state to the other which the relocation of the boundary has made.

In conversations yesterday the commissioners agreed the present holders of land should have an opportunity to repurchase their land at about $1 an acre if the change in the boundary threatens their title. Some federal legislation will be necessary, however, since all lands shifted back into Texas by the new boundary will become part of the state domain, while lands shifted from Texas to New Mexico by the same process will become part of the federal domain. This difference is due to the fact that Texas joined the Union as a republic, and the state owned the lands, while New Mexico joined as a territory of the United States, and the federal government owned the lands.
