Bill Angel Files For Office Of Lamb County Judge

Bill Angel of Littlefield announced this week that he is seeking the office of Lamb County judge.

Angel made his public announcement after filing with Democratic Chairman Glenn Batson. Angel was a Texas highway patrolman for 19 years, and has been ranching the past year after resigning his position with the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Schools To Begin Classes Later; Choir Teacher Is Employed

Daylight savings time goes into effect throughout the nation Sunday, Jan. 6 (today) and because of that, school will begin at 8:55 each morning, beginning Monday, Jan. 7 according to an announcement by Supt. Joe Turner.

Kindergarten classes will dismiss at 3 p.m.; first and second grades at 3:15 p.m.

and all others at 4:10 p.m.

Decision to change times was made by the board of trustees in a called meeting at 1 p.m. Monday, Dec. 31.

Other action taken by the board was the employment of Allen Lomax as choir teacher to replace Viki Turner, who resigned last month.

Birthday Calendars To Be Re-Printed

The community birthday calendars which are usually distributed at this time of year have arrived, but will not be distributed due to poor quality of printing.

The calendars are being returned for corrections and should be ready to be handed out the first of March.

A 12 month calendar, beginning with March is being planned, in order to get all birthdays and events that had been turned in.

A spokesman for the group expressed their regrets at the delay, and their thanks for the support of the community.

A letter from the parents appears on page 2 of this issue of the Enterprise.

Write-In Campaign Elects Raymond Powers

A write-in campaign changed the certainty of the one candidate winning the city council election as voters went to the polls in scare numbers here Thursday, Jan. 3.

Gene Gee, the only announced candidate for the vacancy created by the resignation of Walter Struve, was defeated in a write-in campaign for Raymond Powers. Gee received a total of 11 votes, while Powers garnered 27 total votes.

Other write-in votes included one each for Freddie Mae Hysinger, Mrs. C. S. Silcott, Leon Noack and Phil Hughes. Charles Sullivan received three votes by virtue of write-ins.

Electric Service Began In 1928

Electric service was provided for the city of Olton in the early part of 1928 by the Texas Utilities Company. A generating station and a distribution system was built and the equipment included a 75 horsepower Fairbanks-Morse engine and belted generator that had been removed from a plant at Littlefield.

In the spring of 1929, a 1,000 volt transmission system was extended southward from Dimmitt via Hart. A substation was then built and Olton was connected to the transmission line. Two years later, the Tuco plant, north of Abilene, was put on the line and this plant provided electric service for Olton through the 22,000 volt transmission line.

On January 5, 1931, the city of Olton granted the Texas Utilities Company a long-term franchise to provide electric service for that community.

In 1936, the Texas Utilities Company became the Texas-New Mexico Utilities Company and Olton was a part of the Plainview district. J. B. McAdams was a district representative for the company and traveled to Olton to read meters and service electric appliances. He moved to Olton October 1, 1941, and became the manager.

In September of 1942 the properties of the Texas-New Mexico Utilities Company, including those in Olton, were purchased by the Southwestern Public Service Company. McAdams remained in Olton as the manager until September, 1950, and M. O. Blackshire, who is now with SPS in Levelland, served as manager from September, 1950, until February 15, 1952. Max Hauk was then made manager and he stayed until May 1, 1956, when he was transferred to Plant X near Earth. Orville Overstreet followed Hauk as Olton Manager and in October 1956, Ralph Glover took over the duties. Glover served until April 1, 1968 when Melvin Rape, the present manager, was appointed.

Modernization of the electric facilities for Olton started in February of 1962 when Southwestern Public Service Company built a new 69-12 KVA substation with a capacity of 7500 KVA. In November of that year, the Olton distribution system was changed from 2400 volts to 12,470 volts for more dependable service.

In 1965, the Castro County interchange was built (7 miles west of Dimmitt) and the old 69,000 volt line from the interchange to Hart was rebuilt. In 1968, the continuation of this line from Hart to Olton was rebuilt with modern H-frame construction.

Street lighting in Olton has been constantly improved over the years. In 1963, the community had a total of 99 street lights, 71 incandescent and 28 mercury vapor. Today, all the street lighting units are mercury vapor and the total number has been increased to 164 units.

Melvin Rape started with Southwestern Public Service Company in 1948 as a groundman. He progressed from apprentice lineman to Journeyman lineman and in 1956 was named manager for SPS at Earth. In 1957 he was transferred to Abilene and in 1968 was made the manager at Olton. Rape and his wife, Lillian, have two daughters, Marion Durham and Margaret Susan and are the proud

South African Visitor Finds Notable Differences In U.S. Tour

There's a little bit of a South African look to the area about Olton says Lions Club exchange visitor Mike Lavin who's been a guest here in the home of Lion Boss Leon Noack.

Speaking fluent English, young Lavin is one of 14 South Africans participating in the exchange program sponsored by South African Lions Clubs. Three young Brazilians are visiting in Olton homes in a separate exchange program, one sponsored by Lions International.

Jose Fernanda Andriana is a guest also in the Noack home; Claudia Carvalha is visiting in the Wayne Cole home and Paulo Roberto Rebello is guest of the Billy Rays. The Brazilian students have been in Olton since Dec. 22 and will be here until Feb. 21. Lavin arrived in Olton Dec. 29 and will leave today for a week's visit in Houston.

Almost 18, Lavin has just completed his matric year in school, equivalent to our senior year, and has been accepted for medical study at the University of Witwatersrand (translated in Afrikaans as "hills with white water"). The University is located in Lavin's home city, Germiston.

Germiston, Lavin says, is a city of almost a million and a half and is about three-quarters of an hour's drive from "Jo-Burg" or Johannesburg.

Mike's father is an accountant and auditor. He has two younger sisters. Asked if his father is member of the Lions Club, Mike answers "No, he's a Rotarian but my uncle is a Lion."

Citing the most notable differences he's encountered in his American visit and his homeland, Mike first mentions education. Students attend 12 years in South Africa but receive much more intensive instruction. School terms begin in January and conclude in November with a summer break about a month and a half. Right now, it is the summer break with their summer coming during November, December and January.

About three months prior to the end of the school year, Mike explains, newspapers begin publishing "cram" helps and hints for the matric exams. Exams are "very stiff" with students writing some 12 to 14 exams.

A minimum of six subjects are studied and the number of exams per subject varies. Mike says he wrote two three-hour exams in math and three in English.

English is studied throughout school he says, explaining that South Africa is bi-lingual. Language has been no problem during the tour which began with a visit to Amsterdam, Holland.

"If folks couldn't understand English, I just spoke Dutch Afrikaans and made myself understood," he said.

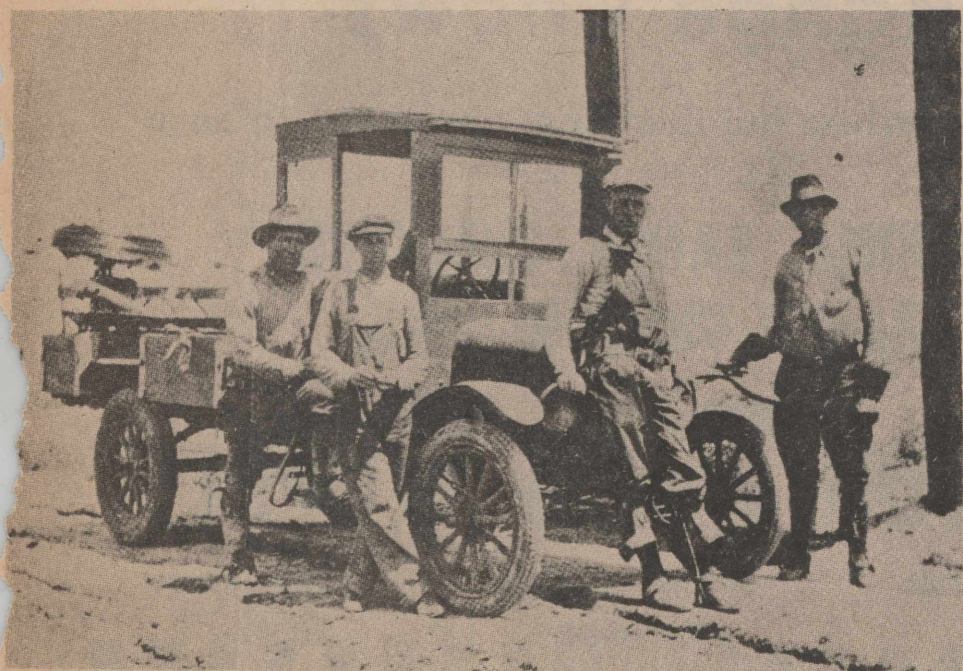

Politically, young Lavin also notes a marked difference in America and South Africa. Television has not come to South Africa and radio stations are government owned, he says.

"A conservative American would be a middle of the road South African," he explains. "And a middle of the road American would be a liberal South African."

"Current Affairs," is a radio program presumably designed to keep the South African abreast of the news. "But it's basic propaganda," he says.

Racial problems are a bigger problem in South Africa than in America, Lavin says, explaining that there are about 18 million blacks who are little more than a captive labor force.

"The blacks are used in politics." They are incredibly underpaid, he says, and are not allowed to own property nor live in the cities.

"Those who work in the cities are not paid equally with whites doing the same work. Black doctors are not paid as much as white doctors regardless of their training and abilities. And blacks must commute to the city to work from townships."

Back home, Lavin says, people have flocked to the coasts for the summer months. Coastal people he says, move into the city during the influx.

Although it does get "wintery weather" at his home, Mike found the American winter "incredible." Confiding that the temperature gets to freezing about 10 times a year at his home, Mike described his arrival in Chicago as an unforgettable experience.

Blizzard conditions forced their plane to fly to Montreal for fuel so that they might circle O'Hare Airport until conditions were favorable for landing.

The young doctor-to-be was accepted for medical study because of the grades he made during his public schooling. He explains they have no "pre-med" studies in South Africa but that students who qualify begin medical study which continues for six years.

After the six years, those who qualify to become general practitioners have an additional year of internship. Those who qualify for further study to become specialists may train an additional four or five years. Right now, Lavin thinks he would like to specialize in neurology.

Young people come of age at 18 in South Africa, too, he says. "At 18 you can drive, vote, drink but at 16 you can die for the country," explaining that all 16-year-olds must register and two years service is compulsory, with "pitiful pay."

Editor's note: Mike Lavin left today for the next step of his tour but the three visiting young Brazilians will be here for several weeks and would appreciate visits from local youth.

MARSHA ANDERSON

Cook Of The Week

Sharing recipes with Enterprise cooks is a young woman who's at home in the kitchen or at work at the "Computewriter" setting news for the Enterprise, Hart Beat and Kress Chronicle. Marsha Anderson, our Cook of the Week, joined the feminine multi-newspaper staff in September.

Born in Plainview, Marsha came to Olton with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Anderson, when she was only five years old. She is a graduate of Olton High School and Southwestern Business College in Plainview.

Marsha has a sister, Michelle, and a married brother, Mike, who lives in Plainview. Along with the rest of her family, Marsha helps love and spoil Mike's year and a half old son, Scott.

Cooking is fun for Marsha and she especially enjoys preparing gourmet dishes and "love French cooking." She like to "try to paint"—her own originals or to copy some pretty picture she sees.

Marsha likes all kinds of sports but especially football and is an avid Dallas Cowboy fan. Disappointed at their defeat just short of the Super Bowl, she's looking forward to "next year."

The Andersons are members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church and worship in Plainview.

Fun-Time, Hobby Classes Offer 'Break In Routine'

Readin, 'ritin and 'rithmetic moved over long ago to make room for algebra, science and other subjects of study but today's students at Olton Junior High are also offered "fun" courses.

New this year and set up on the quarter system, are a series of relaxing, enjoyable hobby courses. Mid-way in the second quarter, 15 different "subjects" were offered to junior high students with eighth graders getting first choice.

Students enjoy the break in routine that comes with their 1:30 p.m. class in crafts or hobbies. Most popular this quarter-the one chosen by more than 70 students-is candlemaking. Photography, woodworking and leathercraft were also popular selections.

The 15 subjects also include drama, table games, ready writing or journalism, spelling, Spanish, stitchery, Bible stories, number sense, lifetime sports, rock hounding and pottery making.

Junior high teachers and school administrators worked together before school began in setting up the pilot program. Teachers were allowed to "teach" the subject they were most interested in for the 45 minute afternoon class. Students then registered for the subject of their choosing and, preferably, will select a different class each succeeding quarter of their junior high work.

Students in the drama class will compete in UIL poetry reading; students in spelling, ready writing and number sense will compete in those categories.

"One of the benefits of the new program is the opportunity for young people to learn new hobbies which might lead to fulfilling, lifetime interests," says Carl McClure, OJHS principal.

FROM IRVING

Visiting Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Ball were their grandson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Don Loveless, Andra and Terry of Irving.

There is a tiny spark hidden somewhere inside of you which cannot die. Against all odds this spark speaks to you of beauty, of human warmth and kindness,
of goodness, of greatness, of heroism ...
and it speaks to you of love.

You see, Jito, THAT'S what makes me care!

Sugar, Spice, And Sage

By Jan Sherman

I'm not going to begin my column in this paper by offering the same old, tired salutation of "Happy New Year" (but have one, just the same!) I'd like to explain my column title, "Sugar, Spice, and Sage". Maybe in the time that you meet with me here, you'll find something sweet, something interesting, and every now and again—something wise. Anyway, I hope you enjoy it, 'cause I enjoy writing it for you.

"January! Bleah! It has to be the longest month of the year. What a let-down. Christmas is over and now all I have to look forward to is exchanging this horrible orangey-purple sweater and green sneakers for something I wanted. Aunt Beulah's taste cannot be matched!"

"I will not be caught again without stuff for Christmas in that last week. Don't know why, but it somehow takes the joy out of giving. I know for a fact that Auntie didn't like that authentic, antique pin I bought her. She sure twisted her face out of joint trying to look pleased. I paid nearly $1.95 for it. Now I have to worry about what to get her next Christmas. What a pain."

"Well, we did it again. We spent way too much money. I never did like your brother-in-law, Bert. Now I have to pay for his gift. I sure thought we'd get some taken off the price with that hole in the pocket."

Have you ever heard these glad sons of Christmas past? The joys of the season remembered? Most of us have good things to say—my congratulations to you who fall into that category. To the others I have a few suggestions. When are we going to learn how much easier it is on the budget, nerves, and Christmas spirit to do our Christmas shopping early? By early I don't mean two weeks before Christmas...how about September? "Oh, I couldn't begin to think about Christmas that early." Doesn't sound like we thought of Christmas when we rushed down to the store at the last minute and bought whatever we could find, either.

Try keeping your ears open for things the family wants beginning the early part of the year. That might take some clever tricks to keep that person from buying it before you get a chance, I know, but it can be done. Then you don't go through the Christmas routine of, "What do you want?" "It doesn't matter." Bleah! How can you possibly enjoy giving when it's on that basis?

If there's a financial strain around that time (did I say "if"?), try saving change. You won't miss it and it surely will help with the little things that make us all so happy. It might help if you keep it in a little cup out of sight so you won't be tempted to spend it for something else. Buy small items all year through for family members. If you have a sharp eye you can detect the little bitty desires of their hearts—and won't they be surprised that you listened and noticed.

Expense isn't always the key to a happy Christmas, either. Something we rarely think of in the way of happiness is to tell someone how much we care for them: express our true feelings (only if they're good). If money is as scarce as eyebrows on an egg at that time, next Christmas, buy them a less expensive item and tuck in a little note of love. Isn't that what the season is all about?

If you had started in September, there would be no Christmas crowd, rush, or feeling just a little guilty because you bought whatever you could grab—under $2.98 of course—because since you waited so late, you can't afford to spend over that amount.

Wise up, group, and put a little joy into your Christmas giving so you'll have a peaceful mind to remember what we celebrate Christmas for in the first place.

IN BLOSSOM

Mr. and Mrs. Buster Nicholas and Sharla and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Houston, Dana and Denise visited last weekend in Blossom in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dennis, Danny and Donna. The Nicholas family also visited in Oklahoma City, Okla., in the Douglas Lawyer home.
