U.S. Terms OPEC Boost 'Unjustified'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told his energy advisers Tuesday to rework a series of "difficult and largely unpleasant options" for dealing with the nation's fuel supply problems, his chief spokesman said.

The move will delay announcement until early April of the administration's newest proposals for limiting the use of oil.

Congressional leaders had said following a March 20 White House breakfast meeting with Carter that the president planned to go on national television this Thursday to announce a new energy plan.

To Be Reworked

But after conferring with Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger and other aides Tuesday morning, Carter "indicated less-than-complete satisfaction with some of the proposals submitted to him and asked that they be reworked," said White House press secretary Jody Powell.

"We will be announcing, certainly in the next week or so, the actions we plan to take," Powell said at a White House press briefing.

Meanwhile, the State Department criticized a decision by Arab oil producers to raise the basic price of crude oil by 9 percent, effective April 1.

The department said the increase approved by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) was "untimely and unjustified." It also said the move stresses anew the need for strict conservation measures in the United States.

"Deep Regret" Expressed

Speaking for the administration, department spokesman Hodding Carter expressed "deep regret" that OPEC decided to "take advantage" of the present tight market conditions and raise the price of a barrel of crude oil to $14.54.

The oil cartel, meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, also authorized its members to impose an unlimited surcharge over that base price.

Spokesman Carter said the increase underscores the urgency of the need for Western industrialized countries to carry out their recent commitment to reduce their collective oil demand by 2 million barrels a day by the end of the year.

He added that the president will take into account the increease when he makes his final decisions on how to deal with current oil shortages. The president is said to be considering a series of mandatory conservation measures.

No Retaliation Seen

Spokesman Carter ruled out any measures against the OPEC countries in retaliation for the price increase. He said the United States has repeatedly explained to OPEC the U.S. view that price increases at a time of global economic instability would have a negative impact.

He said he did not foresee that the overall U.S. relationship with the OPEC countries would be changed significantly as a result of the price increase.

"Friends, after all, can have differences and still be friends," spokesman Carter said.

Powell said the OPEC action underscores two points the president has been making: the energy program approved by Congress last year fails to deal with oil imports and pricing, and the problems that two years ago appeared only on the horizon "have now become the problems of the present."

Jackson Hits "Greed"

In another development, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said the oil price decision by OPEC reflected "greed and a punitive doctrine."

"Obviously it's going to be bad news for Western institutions," Jackson said after he and several colleagues discussed energy matters with the president.

Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said the meeting Tuesday morning produced general agreement that the only options available for the United States to surmount problems caused by importing oil were to increase reliance on coal and nuclear energy.

He also said, however, that the president stuck to his decision not to proceed with development of a breeder reactor at Clinch River, Tenn., preferring continued use of conventional light water nuclear reactors.

Both Powell and Jackson indicated that the president's efforts to win enactment of new energy legislation may face easier going than they did during the first two years of his administration, when Congress took approximately 18 months to approve his initial energy program.

"There is a strong bipartisan base of support for the president to make us less dependent on imported oil," Jackson said.

Powell said some of the predicted new harmony with members of Congress may

Tributes Paid Firemen During Day Of Mourning

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LUBBOCK mourned Tuesday.

At three successive funeral services, hundreds of tearful family members, friends and firefighters quietly paid tribute to the three Lubbock firemen — Kenneth Haggard, Eddie Swafford and Larry Tucker — who died mysteriously while fighting a Sunday morning fire.

At each of the services, the huge crowd of mourners spilled out of the chapels and into nearby rooms. One funeral home played the service over a loudspeaker so the overflow crowd could hear it in the foyer.

Showing few overt signs of emotion, the mourners listened silently to the services.

Many of those in attendance were firemen, brought painfully face-to-face with the dangers of their profession by the freakish deaths of their colleagues.

"It could have been any one of us (who was killed)," one firefighter was overhead to say.

"Yes," replied another fireman. "But we have to live with that and do our job."

Flags flew at half-mast over state and city buildings in honor of the three men.

Many not attending the funeral services were acutely aware of the ceremonies as the funeral processions snarled traffic much of the afternoon.

About 100 uniformed Lubbock firemen attended the three services, after firemen from area towns volunteered to man city stations during the funerals.

Manning the fire stations Tuesday were firefighters from Littlefield, Ralls, Idalou, Abernathy, Slaton, Levelland, Wolfforth, Spur, Brownfield, and Clovis and Portales in New Mexico.

The Lubbock firefighters joined firemen from cities across the state in honoring their co-workers, including firemen from Midland, Austin, Abilene and San Angelo. The funerals also were attended by Howie McClendon of Washington, D.C., president of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

Lubbock City Council members and City Manager Larry Cunningham attended each of the three funeral services.

Eulogy Typifies Tributes

The eulogy for Haggard, given by the Rev. Jim Sutherlin at 2 p.m. services at the First Christian Church, typified the tributes to the three firemen.

Haggard, who had been with the fire department nearly 10 years, "would not have died any other way than the way he died," Sutherlin said.

"His job represented his whole personality. It was his way of saying who he was and how much he cared."

Haggard "did not fear death," Sutherlin said.

The minister noted the circumstances of the firemen's deaths and their young ages made the grief of their families and friends almost unbearable.

"There are times when death slips up on us and comes in the back door," he said. "It visits us when we're least expecting it.

"When the life of a young man like Ken comes to a sudden end, it sobers us, makes us sit up in our tracks and makes us ask why such things happen in life," he said.

However, the length of a person's life is not as important as the quality of that life, Sutherlin said, noting many beautiful flowers "last but for a single season."

"One of the best evidences" of the quality of Haggard's life, Sutherlin said, was his "willingness to risk his life for

Mennonites' Land To Go At Auction

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE TROUBLE-plauged chapter of Old Colony Mennonites near Seminole will be allowed to remain in the country but not on their ranch.

The Lamesa National Bank and Dennis Nix of Seminole officially have foreclosed on their note to the 10-section 70 Ranch southwest of Seminole, which the Mennonites have occupied since their arrival in West Texas two years ago. A public auction for the 6,400-acre spread will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Gaines County Courthouse in Seminole, said colony leader Peter Bergen.

"I sure hate to see this happen," Bergen said. "We worked long and hard for that land, but now there's just nothing we can do about it."

"The auction is the legal way for Mr. Nix to get his land back," John Shepherd, a Seminole attorney who has been handling the group's legal affairs, said Tuesday. "The deed of trust serves as a mortgage, and when a payment is missed, the note is accelerated. The bank can call in all the outstanding debt instead of just the one missed payment."

The Mennonites, a religious group who moved to Lubbock from Mexico and Canada, defaulted on a payment of $225,037.50 due Feb. 15. To keep the ranch, they would have to raise nearly ten times that amount by Tuesday's auction, according to terms laid out in the deed.

"Under Texas law, the trustee (Nix) must post a notice in the courthouse and two other places around the county," Shepherd said. "Then, on the first Tuesday of the next month, in this case April 3, the trustee can make the sale to the highest bidder."

If Nix wishes to get the land back for himself, he can pay the debt at the auction, Shepherd explained.

"It's customary that the trustee buy the land back this way," he said. "But I don't know if Mr. Nix will or not. I haven't spoken to him about it."

Nix could not be reached for comment Tuesday, but earlier had told The Avalanche-Journal he is interested in regaining possession of the ranch "as soon as possible."

Vernon Bratcher, a Lamesa insurance agent listed as substitute trustee on the notice, Tuesday told the A-J he does not know what Nix plans are, saying only, "I expect there will be an auction Tuesday."

Lose $2 Million

When the Mennonites officially forfeit the ranch at the auction, they also will lose nearly $2 million already invested in earlier land payments, farm equipment and housing, as well as two years of time and trouble.

Although the ranch will not be theirs, the colony of 666 persons will be allowed to remain in the United States by virtue of special congressional legislation and adherence to U.S. Labor Department regulations.

Even before the colony's money prob-

School 'Magnet' Plan Criticized As Costly

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE LUBBOCK Independent School District today goes public with its new college-prep "magnet" program for senior-high students. Educators laud the project, but critics say it's extravagant.

Coronado High's student newspaper criticized the program for its "high number of subjects and their cost, the low number of prospective students and the unnecessary quantity of field trips." The Crest predicted few youngsters will transfer into the program.

A tax revolt may be triggered because "students' parents may face paying higher taxes" to support a curriculum with a small enrollment, the paper's stinging editorial said.

Under-enrolled Lubbock High School, 2004 19th St., will house the magnet program, to be implemented in August. The program will be open to pupils throughout the city.

A team of school administrators is visiting all secondary campuses to explain to students and parents transfer procedures and other aspects of the Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program.

50 Specialty Courses

LEAP will feature about 50 "specialty courses," from Chinese and second-year physics to ballet and guitar. Some courses include district-paid field trips — the most talked-about, a summer excursion to Europe.

"Some people have been poking fun" at the more exotic courses and field trips, conceded Knox Williams, Lubbock High principal.

But he said he believes "every bit of it can be justified as educationally sound." LEAP is a "truly significant educational program" that will benefit the entire community, Williams said.

Harsh criticism of the magnet program has come from various quarters:

—Although the Lubbock Property Owners Association has not taken a formal stand, several association members privately are outraged at LEAP's expense. Excluding teachers' salaries, first-year costs are estimated at $258,000. Largely due to $85,000 for field trips, about half of the costs will be recurring.

Taxpayer Protest Planned

Taxpayers reportedly plan to protest during summer budget sessions and to ask the school board to scale down the program.

—Alice Barber, an officer in the local chapter of the National Association for Neighborhood Schools, an anti-busing group, charges that LEAP is stacked with "darling little courses" that lack educational value.

—The Crest, in an editorial page that struck a raw nerve with some central-office administrators, said the program's cost is "unjustified." The newspaper predicted that "the program will not lure many above-average participants from Coronado."

Coronado students are reluctant to transfer to LEAP because they will be required to attend Lubbock High as full-time students and they may lose out on University Interscholastic League competition, the Crest said.

LEAP was approved by the school board as an alternative to re-drawing high-school attendance zones to bolster

Nesting Mouse May Be Cause Of Fatal Fire

SUNDAY'S fire at Moris Kitchen and Ice Cream Parlor that claimed the lives of three Lubbock firemen may have been caused by an electrical short, according to Department of Public Safety laboratory workers here.

DPS chemist Jack Benton said Tuesday he found what appeared to be nesting material and a small mouse inside a circuit box removed from the restaurant's kitchen, where the fire apparently began.

Benton said that when he arrived at the scene Sunday, fire officials told him the fire appeared to have been caused by an electrical shortage and asked him to examine the kitchen fuse box.

"I can't say that it (Tuesday's findings) is the cause of the fire," Benton said, "but it does appear consistent with what fire officials originally felt was the cause."

Benton's findings will be turned over to the fire marshal's office today. Investigation by fire officials into the deaths of Larry Tucker, Kenneth Haggard and Eddie Swafford was halted temporarily Tuesday as city firemen took time to attend their colleagues' separate funerals.

Five-Month High Set By Stocks

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, buoyed by news of a smaller-than-expected increase in oil prices, rallied sharply Tuesday as the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose to a five-month high.

The Dow Jones average jumped 16.54 to 871.36, scoring its largest single-day advance since it climbed a record 35.34 points last Nov. 1.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-2 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where trading was active.

Big Board volume came to 32.94 million shares against 23.43 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .77 to 57.53.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 2.44 to 179.21, a new high since the index was introduced in 1973.

Time Sought To Settle Title Transfer

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Washington attorney Sylvan M. Marshall Tuesday requested a "bit more time" to settle the title transfer of the Lubbock home former Iranian Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi had occupied.

No dispute exists between Lubbock Realtor Stephen Von Phul, trustee of the property, and the Iranian government, said Von Phul's attorney, Elgin E. Connet Jr. However, Marshall wants to check several points of the proposed title agreement with the government in Tehran.

Marshall told The Avalanche-Journal, "We are very close to an agreement subject to a final word" from the Iranian government.

"My client has seen the document and no objection was raised," Marshall added.

"Hopefully, I will hear from him (Marshall) today," Conner said. "Then it will take about a week for the paperwork to be done and signed and (for) the physical transfer of the property."

Von Phul holds the $265,000 home in trust, and if the agreement is approved by the Iranian government, the property will be deeded "to the government of Iran."

The agreement wording means Von Phul would be released from any future disputes between the new Iranian government and deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi concerning the property, Conner said.

The agreement also provides for Von Phul to be paid approximately $32,000 by the Iranian government for unpaid utility bills, debts and trustee's fees.

Conner said his client has requested "opinion" letters from Marshall and the U.S. State Department, which would constitute a legal opinion that the Imperial Iranian Air Force (which originally bought the house) no longer exists and that the air force and the government now are the same.

"We down here are not in the position to make that decision," Conner said, adding that repesentatives of the shah have said neither the shah nor his son will attempt to claim ownership of the house.

Von Phul said that if possession of the residence is turned over to the new government "all indications are that they will sell it."

An attempt by the new Iranian regime to gain possession of the 21st Street house began March 13, when three representatives from the Islamic Republic consulate-general's office in Houston arrived at Von Phul's residence to claim ownership.

At that time a letter signed by the consulate-general said the trio was sent "to confiscate all property left by former Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi," said assistant police chief C.G. Bartley.

The prince left Lubbock to join his family in Morocco after receiving his pilot wings from Reese Air Force Base, where he had been in training since July 1978.

Warm, Cloudy, Windy Day Due

Temperatures in the lower 70s are expected today, along with a bit more sunshine than Lubbock area residents enjoyed throughout cloudy Tuesday.

At least three hours of sunshine are expected today, with an overnight low in the mid-40s. Thursday should be slightly cooler, with the high temperature dropping to the mid 60s.

Winds will gust to 25 mph today.

A dissipating cold front lingering Tuesday covered most of Texas with cloudy skies and brought scattered thundershowers to portions of North Texas.

Still another cold front predicted tonight will lower Thursday's temperature a few degrees from today. The front extends from Wisconsin through Missouri and into the Texas Panhandle and northwestern New Mexico.

Although the front is expected to bring some rain to the eastern part of the state, no precipitation is forecast for the South Plains.

Although Panhandle temperatures were in the relatively cool 50s Tuesday, most of the state enjoyed warm weather. Temperatures in the Lower Valley rose into the 80s and Laredo recorded 86 degrees.

The western half of the United States is expecting wet weather today, with rain along the West Coast and snow in the Rockies. Temperatures across the nation are expected to be relatively mild, with only the New England area still recording freezing temperatures.

Local Hospital Cited For Cost Controls

Methodist Hospital has been presented with the American Hospital Association's Certificate of Recognition, acknowledging its efforts to more effectively monitor costs and productivity.

Through participation in a management information program provided by Hospital Administrative Services, a division of AHA, Methodist Hospital is able to compare costs and productivity both internally and with other hospitals of comparable bed sizes.

Hospital Administrative Services is an organized effort of collecting, processing and distributing detailed data on operational performance of the participating health care institutions.

"Using the HAS program," hospital president George M. Brewer said, "we are able to gauge our own effectiveness and keep costs down. It also gives us a basis upon which future decisions can be made."

Methodist Hospital has been utilizing this program for the past 10 years, and regularly uses the information in its costs containment efforts.

In April 1979 Methodist Hospital will begin using a new HAS program called "Monitrent" for Hospitals, designed to provide effective management data.

Fee For Passport To Increase $1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting soon it will cost a buck more to get a passport.

The execution fee for a passport application will increase from $3 to $4 on May 1. The passport fee itself remains at $10, so the total will now be $14.

The execution fee is paid to the postal service, court clerk or other agency which handles the passport application locally, and increasing costs have led to some of these losing money and declining to accept applications, according to the State Department.

So the fee is being raised to cover the costs involved, as required by law.

Tribesmen, Iranian Forces Clash

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Fighting over land rights erupted between Turkoman tribesmen and government forces in northeastern Iran, leaving at least 30 people dead and 70 wounded, witnesses said Tuesday.

The fighting started when tribesmen trying to reclaim farmland from estates near the city of Gonbad-E-Qabous, 30 miles south of the Soviet border, were stopped Monday by police. Witnesses said disorder spread to the city where militiamen loyal to the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini fired on Turkomans demonstrating for autonomy under Iran's proposed Islamic republic.

The Turkomans, backed by leftist Fedayeen fighters, fired back, sparking citywide battles, reports from the city said. Violence and disorder flared again Tuesday before subsiding.

A doctor reached by telephone at a hospital said 10 dead and at least 30 wounded had been brought in. A teacher said 30 persons were killed.

Government troops sent to help police were reported held up by landslides set off by torrential rains. About 60 percent of Iran's 430,000-man army deserted during the revolution, and only a handful have returned.

Ill-trained civilian militias of the type that fired at the Turkoman demonstrators have replaced the army in many cities.

It was the second minority uprising in as many weeks to challenge the authority of Iran's new revolutionay government. Last week Kurdish tribesmen seeking autonomy for their region of Western Iran revolted. An estimated 200 persons died in four days of fighting in the Kurdish city of Sanandaj. The Kurds finally were promised increased autonomy.

Gonbad-E-Qabous is in the heart of Gorgan province and is home for about 500,000 Turkoman tribesmen famed for the sturdy and fast Turkoman horses they raise.

The fertile province contains huge estates of retired military and civil officials. Roving Turkoman tribes have tried to seize parts of the estates in the past but police have kept them at bay.

Meanwhile, the government provided a glimpse of Iran's proposed new constitution.

Interior Deputy Minister Sadegh Tabatabai, in an interview with a local paper, said the document, being drafted in secret, gives women equality with men and preserves minority rights.

He described it as "one of the most progressive constitutions in the world," calling for a president and a single-chamber parliament. The president will not be able to dissolve parliament without resigning himself, he said.

Tabatabai said the president will be elected by the people, not by parliament.

On Friday, 24 million of Iran's 34 million people, those aged 16 or over, will be eligible to vote on whether Iran becomes an Islamic republic.

Voters will cast a green ballot for "yes" and a red ballot for "no" on whether "to change the former regime to an Islamic republic for which a constitution is to be approved by the people."

Regulation Of Children's Advertising Debated

DALLAS (AP) — Television advertising has not been shown to influence children's requests for products, so there is no need to regulate advertising aimed at kids, a lawyer for the National Association of Broadcasters argued Tuesday.

"Some studies show a correlation between advertisement and the products requested by children, but none of them shows a causal relationship," said NAB counsel Brenda Fox in an exchange of personal opinions at the NAB convention here.

Her opponent in the debate was deputy director Tracy Westen of the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

"Children are different than adults, in particular with the maturity with which they make judgments. Perhaps that's why we don't let kids vote, marry, enter contracts, drive cars and purchase products with serious health consequences, such as alcohol and cigarettes," Westen said.

Miss Fox, though, said that a ban on broadcast cigarette ads did not change buying patterns.

"There's no evidence that an advertising ban would have an impact on behavior," she said. "Nor is there any evidence that advertising itself affects on behavior.

"Cigarette ads were taken off radio and television, but cigarette consumption did not go down; it's gone up. More importantly, cigarette consumption among young children has gone up, and they were never even exposed to advertisements on television at all," Miss Fox said.

Westen, pointing to sentiment for bans on advertising of highly-sugared foods, such as snacks and cereals, said tooth decay is the "major health problem" of children.

"Young children believe. . . that Tony the Tiger is their personal friend. . . and can be trusted to tell them what's good for them."

"There is not any evidence that sugared cereals lead to tooth decay," Miss Fox said, adding that any problem would not be on the same magnitude as smoking.

"There we were talking about the consumption of cigarettes leading to death. Here we are talking about the consumption of cereals which may or may not at some later time — 20 or 30 years from now — cause some sort of dental problems," she said.

Westen said children perhaps should be warned of the possible health hazards of sugared foods, but added that such disclosures might not be understood by preschoolers.

"What's at stake is whether pre-schoolers should be treated as mature consumers in our society and therefore appropriate recipients for fully sophisticated television advertising," he said.

"The parent is the mediator of the advertising message," Miss Fox countered, adding that if parents go along with requests to buy certain products "is it because the parents feel powerless? Or is it — as I believe — that the parents apparently agree with the products that the children want," she said.

Referring to parent complaints about temper tantrums thrown by children in supermarkets, Miss Fox said, "Should we blame television for children's tantrums? " adding that if commercials were found responsible for such outbursts, "then how do we explain the similar tantrum at bedtime?"

'Boulevard Nights' Blamed For Violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Boulevard Nights," another movie about brutal street gangs, has been blamed for violence that has left 10 persons injured in shootings and stabbings and forced theaters to hire armed guards to protect their patrons.

Although the film is a box office hit, it has sent some theater managers scurrying to lawyers to cancel contracts for the film.

It all sounds like a rerun of the events surrounding the showing of another film of the same genre, "The Warriors," which allegedly incited two gang-related shootings that resulted in at least two deaths a few weeks back.

A third street gang film, "Walk Proud," will be released in May.

The mayor of San Francisco, Dianne Feinstein, personally has asked that a theater in that city stop showing "Boulevard Nights." She also is seeking legal means to halt screenings of all films that could incite gang violence.

Warner Bros. Studios, "extraordinarily happy" at the box office success of "Boulevard Nights," disclaims any blame for the violence, although it is helping theaters hire armed guards.

The movie, about Mexican-American gangs in East Los Angeles, opened Friday at 103 theaters in California, the Southwest and New York City. In its first three days, it earned $832,384, said Warner Bros. spokesman Bill Stern.

"We are extraordinarily happy," Stern said. "The film earned approximately $6,500 per day at each theater, which in the industry is considered extremely strong."

Warner Bros. did not resist when theater managers in San Francisco and Montclair, a Los Angeles suburb, canceled contracts for the film.

The most serious violence occurred in San Francisco, where a clash between Mexican-American and Chinese gangs left four persons shot and one stabbed on Saturday.

In Southern California, one youth was shot and two were stabbed at a Montclair drive-in on the film's opening night, and two youths were stabbed at a San Juan Capistrano drive-in in what police said was a clash between two rival gangs.

The violence surrounding "Boulevard Nights" comes only a month after Paramount's film about New York street gangs, "The Warriors," was blamed for touching off a rash of incidents in which two Southern California youths were killed and New York City subway riders were assaulted by a gang of youths who had just seen the film.

Paramount said "The Warriors" — which some film critics praised as a work of art — earned $4.7 million in its first six weeks.

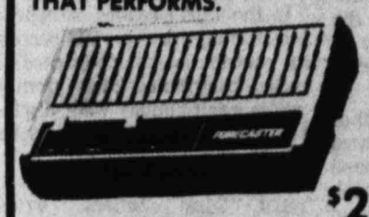

A third gang movie, "Walk Proud," is due to be released in May by Universal Studios and a spokesman said the producer is planning no special precautions because of the violence.

Universal spokesman Frank Wright said the studio considers its PG-rated film a love story with gang activity submerged in the background, not in the same category as "The Warriors" or "Boulevard Nights."

Simian Space Vet Uncertain About Prospective Mate

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — The sophisticated widow has been to the top of the world and back. Her suitor is a shy lad one-fourth her age. Can romance blossom?

Matchmakers at the Alabama Space and Rocket Center are hoping love will find a way for Miss Baker and her new next cage neighbor, Normal Norman.

Miss baker, 21, is a pioneer of the nation's space program. On May 28, 1958, she and fellow monkeynaut Able made a 10,000-mph space journey aboard a Huntsville-built Jupiter rocket that helped pave the way for manned space flight.

She has been spending a quiet retirement in a cage at the rocket center. Her last mate, Big George, died in January, and officials began the hunt for a new companion for Miss Baker, who is very particular about her mates, according to her keeper, David Gaines.

On Tuesday, Miss Baker was introduced to Normal Norman, a 5-year-old spider monkey brought from Atlanta's Yerkes Primate Center.

It wasn't love at first sight.

Miss Baker at first remained aloof when Normal Norman's cage was placed next to hers. But she soon changed her mind and "got over and tried to open the cage, she was shaking," said Scott Osborne, assistant director for exhibits.

"Normal was a little excited...he didn't quite know what to think about the whole affair because of the lights and the press," said Osborne.

Osborne believes Normal Norman made a fair first impression, despite his nervousness, but Miss Baker is not ready to plunge into romance. He said the monkeys would be kept in separate cages for about five days so they can grow accustomed to each other.

"She's not sure yet, she wants to check him over thoroughly," said Osborne. "As far as any real affection, that's certainly not there yet — but maybe it will come with time."

Solution Without A Problem

TAXPAYER financing of congressional campaigns still seems to have a conceptual allure to incumbent politicians, even though the taxpayers have rejected it again and again.

The Washington Post calls it "the politicians' welfare bill." Proponents describe the use of public money as a magic purifier of elections otherwise tainted by special interest contributions.

And others, including the distinguished Heritage Foundation public policy research foundation, believe that H.R. 1, a proposal to finance Congressional elections with public funds, "amounts to an almost certain guarantee that incumbents will enjoy an even greater immunity against defeat."

But five-term U.S. Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., says before we spend more of the taxpayer's money, we ought to be assured:

- A REAL problem has been identified;
- The plan will give a desired result; and
- It will not harm the electoral process.

"I am persuaded," Frenzel told a Heritage seminar last week, "that public financing attacks no problem, adds no additional benefit, and to the contrary, carries serious risks."

Spending limits can only aid incumbents, since challengers need to spend more to win. Heavy expenditures are almost mandatory if a challenger is to have any chance at all, considering all of the built-in advantages of incumbency.

At a time of raging inflation and raging taxpayer demands for less spending, no one should seriously consider wasting $80 million of the people's money when it's not needed.

In the 1978 elections, so-called special interest groups gave only 17 percent of the total contributions made to candidates. Every nickel contributed came from individuals, whose contributions were disclosed exactly as if they had been direct contributions.

ELECTION LAW, already is too complicated. "Most elections," writes Frenzel, "are run by volunteers who are being scared out by over-regulation and fear of violating the law."

The Federal Election Commission already costs $8 million annually. It would need up to $6 million more and 200 new bureaucrats to run taxpayer financing for the House alone. Worse, the FEC would have to expand its bureaucratic administration, regulation and enforcement.

Elections are all the people have left. The people, not the bureaucrats, should keep them.

Why then, public financing? Answer: It would never be seriously considered if it did not serve the special needs of incumbent legislators. Nobody else, particularly the taxpayers, wants it. It is a solution in search of a problem.

Economic Tug-Of-War Due

ALTHOUGH THE Carter administration won its first go-around on holding the line on wages in union negotiations, the next battle may be a different story.

Back in January, the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union agreed on a two-year pact which provided for a 13 percent wage boost, 8 percent the first year, 5 percent the second.

On average, this was below the President's 7 percent a year guideline over the life of new contracts. The whole concept faces a new test in the next few days, however, as the Teamsters, one of the more militant and powerful, come up to a contract deadline.

THE UNION OF truck drivers and warehouse workers has been negotiating since December with truck industry representatives to replace the one that expires March 31.

As of now the two groups are far apart. The Teamsters are demanding wage and fringe-benefit increases of from 35 to 38 percent over three years, almost exactly the same percentage the union won after its last national bargaining session in 1976.

If the new demand is granted, it is almost certain to become a benchmark for other big unions scheduled for contract talks during the year.

About 3.7 million workers are covered by expiring major agreements, including those in such key fields as auto, rubber and electrical machinery.

IN AN EFFORT to put pressure on the Teamsters, the Carter administration has held out the threat of deregulation of the trucking industry.

Unionized route carriers already are losing traffic to predominantly non-union irregular carriers and owner-drivers.

Deregulation would open the door to even more competition, a prospect that alarms both the Teamsters and trucking companies.

The deregulation threat gained credibility because it came from Alfred E. Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

It was Kahn who, as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, pressed for and got a law which will phase out federal controls over the airline industry over a seven-year period.

The showdown test should be a "biggie." Its results will go far past just the immediate people involved.

Carter Just Downplays Stuff That's Important

PRESIDENT CARTER puts SALT-II on the front burner. But for at least 900 years Russia has had the constant goal of world domination. None are so blind as those who will not see.

President Carter obscures the changes in world temperature. The Kremlin blows hot or cold, talkative or surly, aggressive or placating, but always determined to dominate the world.

President Carter, often misled by these shifts, apparently is convinced that the Soviet is changing if it turns friendly. But he grossly misreads history.

Soviet goals never change. It becomes most dangerous when it is most friendly. Moreover, the Kremlin shifts are deliberate.

THE USSR makes the changes to gain maximum advantage in world politics. To fit the Soviet needs, it simply raises or lowers the pressure. This is especially true regarding the U.S., the only nation Russia really is worried about.

Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev is now in a "friendly" phase. The Kremlin wants many things: the SALT-II arms agreement, an agreement not to aid Red China, an agreement not to resist Soviet influence in Afghanistan, Iran, the Middle East, Africa, etc., and permission to buy more U.S. technology.

SALT-II is the most vital agreement and perhaps—from the Kremlin viewpoint—this phase will last for some time. Using "friendliness" as the means of obtaining SALT-II, the Soviet finds it worthwhile to press for it.

ALSO, PRESIDENT Carter wants a SALT-II agreement. But he does not know how to get it if U.S.-Soviet relations are bad. Accordingly, there is a secret undisclosed agreement between the President and Brezhnev.

In a bamboozle against the American people and Congress, they have agreed to cool things and postpone the hard issues until the U.S. Senate ratifies the SALT-II treaty.

You will find flareups from time to time, but President Carter keeps them under wraps. For example, the Defense Department admits the Soviet now has placed Russian MIGs in Cuba.

Brezhnev's warning that the U.S. not get involved in Iran means a gross repudiation of President Carter. But he plays all these important things down.

The Soviet's two most fundamental problems are economic despite its vast size. Most of its territory is an undesirable wasteland with uninhabitable areas.

ABOUT 152 million Russians live on farms; 100 million in towns and cities. The Soviet is 60 percent rural, whereas in the U.S. only a few live on 3.5 farms. And the harsh climate makes food production questionable.

Moreover, the cost of extracting the Soviet's inaccessible resources of untapped reserves of oil, minerals, metals, etc., is very high.

Not enough skilled workes satisfy the demands of a major industrial country. Many lack the Communist spirit; they are much more interested in themselves and their families. Nor do they produce enough offspring to sufficiently expand the population.

The technology, limiting the scope of Kremlin-publicized advances, concentrates on military and space developments. This leads to the downgrading of civilian output.

IN ADDITION, the Soviet is wary and distrustful, even of close "allies" whose riots, revolts and mayhem chaff under Kremlin domination. Like Yugoslavia, they may break away or, like Red China, become an enemy.

This fosters the Soviet emphasis on military power; brute force. For civilian benefit, manpower and resources are further restricted. Both living conditions and productivity go downhill.

With peaceful competition impossible, you find a tendency to push Brezhnev and the Kremlin to seek a military solution.

President Carter has a great deal to learn about the USSR. We Americans can only hope that in SALT-II he begins to learn it.

All of those health signs warning us about this and that make it a 50-50 bet that one of these days you'll look up and see a sign: "Feeling great? That's the worst symptom of all."

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Explain Then Attack

EVANS

SACRAMENTO—Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., far from flinching at the ridicule of Jimmy Carter's Washington over his demand for a constitutionally-imposed balanced federal budget, is convinced the U.S. is on the verge of fundamental, inflation-connected political changes that he intends to shape and lead.

In the short time of his second term, Brown has already wrought political change here that has split him from conventional party leaders and delivered stunning help from both elected Republicans and influential businessmen.

But it is the national Democratic party and the 1980 presidential nomination, which Brown clearly wants, that will feel the full force of Brown's political conversion.

Brown is hurling his challenge directly at President Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy and the party's traditional constituencies. As he told us in his office here:

"America is running on panic today"--and voters want basic fiscal changes to end the horror of inflation and make America competitive again.

Both Brown's principal legislative leader, Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, and the state's top Democrat in Washington, Sen. Alan Cranston, have publicly broken with Brown on his inaugural demand for a constitutional ban of federal red ink.

Indeed, Brown is probably the first just-elected governor to be booed by his own state party, as he was at the Democratic convention here Jan. 20 when he first appeared at the podium.

INSTEAD OF backing down with apologies, Brown carefully built his case in a tightly reasoned explanation of fiscal "reality," then attacked "experts," "the Ph.D.'s" and the "timid souls" who defend red-ink spending even at the peak of today's recovery cycle.

At the end, delegates in the nation's most liberal Democratic party gave him a standing ovation.

That is the quintessential Brown today: explain, then attack from what he feels is a secure position of political strength.

Brown, an original foe of California's Proposition 13, had his eyes opened to reality when voters here approved it by a huge majority last year. As one of his top aides told us:

"He feels he experienced something very personally about the voter mood today that few other politicians have felt."

LONG CONSIDERED a political oddball, Brown finds that his offensive has suddenly made him a fixture at podiums he used to shun.

He showed up somewhat unexpectedly at the San Francisco convention of the National Food Processors Jan. 23 and talked for 45 minutes, highly unusual for Brown.

Four days earlier he insisted on addressing the top brass of the Big Four auto companies (guests of the California Chamber of Commerce) at the Century Plaza Hotel. Out-of-state invitations for Brown are piling up in record numbers.

In his interview with us at the state capitol, Brown ridiculed opposition to his call for a constitutional convention to force an end of deficit spending and halt what he calls "this perverse government money machine."

THE DECLINE of the U.S., he told us, is directly tied to the decline of its currency which in turn is directly influenced by the immense red-ink spending of the past dozen years.

Politicians in Washington may have trouble understanding that, he says, but voters have no trouble at all.

Brown is acutely sensitive to charges that he is a political opportunist who has undergone frequent conversions—now from a liberal Democrat (who managed Eugene McCarthy's 1968 presidential campaign here) to a conservative Republican.

What has changed, he insists, are objective circumstances and the voters.

"Before Franklin Roosevelt, no one could imagine the New Deal," he told us. "Now what is coming in the '80s no one can begin to appreciate. We are moving into a new cycle"—a cycle that will change the map of today's politics in unpredictable ways.

TO REPUBLICANS and conservative Democrats, this is like catnip. Fred L. Hartley, chairman of Union Oil, refused to give Brown a nickel for his re-election campaign; he recently sent $20,000 to help liquidate Brown's $800,000 campaign debt.

Republican Assembly leader Paul Priolo, the No. 1 opposition legislator, has informed his party he will do nothing to blunt Brown's balanced budget campaign.

One of Speaker McCarthy's trusted Assembly leaders, a Democratic powerhouse on the Ways and Means Committee, warned McCarthy to expect no anti-Brown help from him, saying: "I'm sticking with Brown and the balanced budget right into the White House."

Brown himself is a man possessed of an idea and entirely convinced of his rectitude. If he can convince his party and his country, the world will be hearing more from Jerry Brown.

ANDREW TULLY:

Tex Will Not Flex

WASHINGTON—As usual, Bob Strauss is right when he stands up and tells President Carter the votes are here at home, not in Israel or Egypt or Iran.

Strauss, the administration's special trade negotiator, is not all that interested in getting Carter elected Prince of Peace. As a veteran inside politician, he's a pocketbook man. He keeps demanding that Carter "sit down and figure out how to make something cost less."

Strauss can badger Carter with impunity because he's a rich, tough, and independent Texan who'd rather be himself than President. He's a freebooter in an administration topheavy with officials of measured boldness.

Carter is lucky that this former Democratic National Committee chairman will join his re-election campaign team in the fall because Strauss peddles the unvarnished facts of political life.

THAT IS what Strauss is selling now. He has the guts to tell Carter that the anti-inflation program is a flop. Fortunately, he has great influence at the White House, mostly because he has passed the credibility test.

Even as this is written, Strauss reluctantly may have persuaded Carter that wage-price controls are the only solution to continued higher prices.

At any rate, a Strauss confidante puts it this way: "You can bet a buck or two that if Strauss wants rollbacks and controls Carter probably will buy the whole package."

Nobody, of course, can guarantee that controls will work. But Strauss' argument is that nothing else has done the job. And all the signs on the wage-price front are ominous.

WE'VE ALREADY got double-digit inflation, again. And the news is particularly bad for those of us who eat to live. The government has admitted that circumstances will boost family food bills by about 8½ percent this year.

That would be about three percentage points less than last year's increase, but Carter's men have been telling us that food price boosts would be held to 6 percent in 1979.

This latest dose of bad news came from William T. Boehm of the Agriculture Department.

He said his prediction is based on an assumption that prices paid to farmers will rise 10 to 11 percent this year, and marketing costs will go up 9 percent.

THEN THERE'S the energy crunch. Energy-related costs such as packaging and transportation account for about 20 percent of food marketing costs, which in turn account for a whopping 60 percent of the food dollar.

Barring the kind of miracle that rarely happens in this beleaguered country, the energy shortage is bound to get worse.

There is more trouble ahead. It's named George Meany. The AFL-CIO boss has gone to court to strip the anti-inflation program of its only penalties.

Meany says it's illegal for the government to deny federal contracts to firms that pay wages exceeding the 7 percent guideline. Meany complains that the penalty in effect is aimed exclusively at the working man.

So, thank God for Bob Strauss. If there's a way out of the mess, he just might succeed in finding hit.

Meanwhile, he has reminded Jimmy Carter that the issue in the 1980 election will be pocketbook one, not what's happening to foreign friends and foes.

JAY HARRIS:

A Choice To Make

IT WAS ABRAHAM Lincoln who once asked: "At what point shall we Americans expect the approach of danger?"

His answer, given as a young lawyer and state legislator Jan. 27, 1837, was: "If it ever reaches us, it must spring up amongst us; it cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of free men, we must live through all time or die by suicide."

Lincoln, no doubt, as R. K. Scott of America's Future recently noted, most likely was talking of the danger of an approaching Civil War. He could not have foreseen the nuclear age in which annihilation is but a missile flight away.

Yet, Abraham Lincoln's words apply to America today as surely as they did almost a century and a half ago. The danger amongst us, perhaps, is even greater because so many refuse to recognize or perceive it.

THESE THOUGHTS came back to us the past few days as we pondered again how the world has shrunk in so short a time, how events "far away," yet next door, can touch our lives from the gas pump to the missile sites.

While millions in the U.S. are obsessed with everything from sports events to how-to cohabitation, millions abroad still look to America for guidance and leadership, if not protection.

President Carter's Mideast gamble has paid off, for the moment, and to a degree allayed fears bordering on panic in some areas in the wake of Iran. But, the real test is still to come, at home and abroad.

In the final analysis, it will be the American people who will decide the fate of the Mideast, of Africa, Western Europe, the U.S. It is not alarmist to suggest that we may be at one of history's crossroads. For the moment, there is still a choice.

GETTING THAT message across in the social, economic and political climate prevalent in this nation today is not easy.

Many persons simply do not perceive Russia's massive military machine as a threat to the Free World. It is inconceivable to millions that any man or group of men would launch a "limited" war among the major powers, let alone an atomic conflict.

Yet, the fact remains that Moscow is building the greatest offensive military force the world has ever known, not only in conventional terms, but from a nuclear standpoint. Russia and Cuba today hold key spots in Africa and the Persian Gulf and are ready to exploit any weakness shown by the West and especially the U.S.

Influential liberals who have access to the media and public opinion, and some churches, preach a song of peace and understanding, of human rights and hope. It is a noble thought but perhaps fatal against an ideology that preaches the opposite and backs it with armed might.

TO UNDERSTAND where we are today, one has to go back in history, to other peace hopes, capitulations, slogans, defeats.

Recently, George F. Will, whose thoughts appear on these pages as well as in Newsweek magazine, came up with an analysis well worth every American's attention.

Will contends that one aspect of America's problem with its role in the world was born more than 40 years ago at Munich, and later by events in Europe and Southeast Asia. It was March 15, 1939, that German troops marched into Czechoslovakia. Munich and "peace in our time" was dead. And so were millions of people because men who failed to learn the lessons of history had again miscalculated.

When Harry S Truman ordered use of the Atomic Bomb to help end World War II, America and its Allies already had laid waste to much of Europe. The next chore was to help rebuild what had been torn asunder.

FOR THE NEXT few years, the United States stood head and shoulders above all. In effect, Uncle Sam had become the "world's policeman."

Then came Russia's theft of U.S. atomic secrets and Moscow's joining the "atomic club."

Korea became a new battleground. It was a war half won, but which was to set the stage for even greater debacles. The story of Vietnam is still too fresh to rehash, other than to note again that it was a war at the wrong time and wrong place and for the wrong reasons, but a war which could and should have been won.

Out of that conflict was born another one of those slogans: "No More Vietnams." It was to become a hallmark of those who would build a Fortress America and let the rest of the world go by default, or dismantle the fortress itself.

TODAY, THE nation again is engaged in another great debate.

Once again, confronted by the fact there are no fences in a nuclear world, and that we depend on others for some of our basic needs, the American people are being forced to ask themselves "where do we go from here?"

It serves little purpose to note that there never was "peace in our time," in 1939 or seldom later, or that Korea may have changed history in Asia or that Vietnam was a disaster. Or that Salt II may be America's epitaph. One should learn from the past.

Today, the choice is not whether we are going to exist in a semi-hostile world. The issue is how and under what circumstances.

Someone is going to make those decisions, in the Mideast, South Africa, Asia. Unles we are going to get off this globe, we had better help decide what those answers are going to be. Frankly, we have no other choice. Abraham Lincoln made that clear long ago.

Teamsters' Suit Fails In Attempt To Challenge Taft-Hartley Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday dismissed a Teamsters union suit challenging the Carter administration's right to halt a trucking strike, which the union may call this weekend.

U.S. District Judge George Hart denied the union's novel legal maneuver as Teamster and trucking industry bargainers remained far apart in their contract dispute.

The union went to court on the belief that President Carter would use the Taft-Hartley Act to order an end to a walkout should the union call a strike after the current contract expires at midnight Saturday.

To obtain a back-to-work order under the law, the government must show that a strike would pose a national emergency, and the union sought the right to question four government experts to prove that a strike would not create an emergency.

But the judge threw out the suit, saying that there is no "reasonable certainty" there will be a strike and therefore no certainty that the government would ever seek a back-to-work order.

Union attorneys said they would appeal the decision.

The giant union has not ruled out the possibility of reaching a peaceful settlement on a new contract covering the 300,000 drivers and warehouse workers by the weekend deadline.

Union attorney Roland P. Wilder Jr. acknowledged during the judge's questioning, "Whether or not there is going to be a strike, we don't know at this point."

Wilder said union officials planned to meet Friday to review the status of the contract negotiations and will decide "whether there will be a strike and what form the strike should take."

One possible action by the union would be selective strikes against certain industries or in certain regions of the country. In that way, it might be difficult for the government to seek a back-to-work order.

One high-ranking administration lawyer, asking not to be named, said the government is looking for selective walkouts rather than a national strike should negotiators fail to reach agreement. "You couldn't have a nationwide strike for any time without us getting a Taft-Hartley or congressional legislation" (to end a walkout), the lawyer said.

In its suit, the union said that because of persistent government interference in the talks and threats against the union, chances of reaching a settlement by midnight Saturday are unlikely, making a strike "a distinct possibility."

As bargainers resumed their negotiations at a suburban Virginia hotel, Teamsters Secretary-Treasurer Ray Schoessling said a settlement was still possible by Saturday and that a strike was not inevitable. He described the suit as "a precautionary measure."

Union spokesman Bernard Henderson said the rank-and-file voted overwhelmingly during the weekend to authorize the Teamsters leadership to call a strike. However, a final tally was not immediately available, Henderson said.

If bargainers are close to a settlement Saturday, the union may extend the old contract for a short time. Beyond that, there is speculation that the union would order selective strikes against a few major trucking firms rather than call a national walkout.

In anticipation of a strike, the administration is preparing the legal groundwork necessary for President Carter to seek a back-to-work order under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The law allows a federal judge to order workers back to their jobs for up to 80 days if the government can show that a strike would "imperil the national health or safety." Government officials are now preparing plans for swiftly collecting information on the impact of a strike.

The administration has made these talks a key test of President Carter's anti-inflation program, which calls for a 7 percent annual ceiling on wage and fringe benefit increases.

The Teamsters union has demanded pay boosts that are roughly double what would be acceptable under Carter's voluntary guidelines.

In an effort to win union compliance with Carter's program, the administration has threatened to push harder for deregulation of the trucking industry, and thus increasing non-union competition for Teamsters' jobs, if the union settlement exceeds the guidelines.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Americans More Romantic

SEATTLE (AP) — The man who writes sex advice for Playboy magazine says America is headed for a new blossoming of romance, with less emphasis on the physical aspects of getting together.

PETERSEN

"The next 10 years will see Playboy writing about the romantic lifestyle, about exciting places to be. We know what to do in the bedroom now, so what about the rest of our lives," says Jim Petersen, 31, the man behind the monthly "Playboy Advisor."

He says he receives about 700 letters a month from people telling him things they would never tell their lovers.

Petersen shrugs off accusations that he makes up some of the more outrageous or explicit letters.

"I don't have to invent them," he said. "Besides, I lead an interesting sex life, but it's not that interesting."

Petersen says he takes his work seriously and enjoys the research.

"If I were a baseball writer, I would become suicidal after just a few months," he said. "But for me, every weekend is the World Series."

Carter, Ohira To Meet

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira will leave for Washington on April 30 to meet with President Carter and other U.S. officials to try to ease mounting trade tension, Japanese officials said Tuesday.

OHIRA

It will be the first trip to the United States for Ohira, who became prime minister last December. A foreign ministry spokesman said he also will visit New York and Los Angeles before returning to Japan on May 7.

In talks with Carter on May 2, the two leaders will discuss the Tokyo economic summit this June, the world economy and bilateral trade issues.

Ohira will also try to ease the mounting tension over trade between the two countries, resulting mainly from American demands that Japan increase imports, continued high trade surpluses and Japan's failure to achieve the 7 percent economic growth it promised last summer at the Bonn economic summit.

Neighborhood Cooperates

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Somebody in Oklahoma City, with a lot of worn-out tires, believes in sharing.

Every spring Oklahoma City conducts a cleanup of the 640 square miles of the city, picking up bulk trash.

There are a few restrictions. For example, only four old tires will be picked up from any one residence.

When the cleanup crews reached one neighborhood, they found a total of 30 tires spread over a two-block area.

Executive Flies To School

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Las Vegas airport is the gateway to fortune or bankruptcy for a lot of people, but for Richard Westrich it is the threshold to a college degree.

While thousands are flying in on the weekends to try their luck at the gaming tables, Westrich is flying out, all the way to Cincinnati, to go to school.

The 33-year-old Westrich regularly flies from his home in Las Vegas to classes at Mount St. Joseph Weekend College, where he is studying for a degree in business.

Last fall, Westrich was a night student at Thomas More College and an employee of the Levi Strauss & Co. plant in Florence, Ky., when he discovered the Weekend College Program.

He had registered for classes at Mount St. Joseph when Levi Strauss offered to promote him to general manager of its Las Vegas plant.

He rejected a suggestion to finish his studies at the University of Nevada at Las Vegas. If he switched his credits to that school, it would have required more than two years to earn a degree, he said.

The company then offered to pick up the tab for plane fare, tuition and books, he said.

He decided to commute until he gets his degree in July.

Taxpayer Reaction Anticipated

BOISE (AP) — Idaho and Utah taxpayers happy because they're getting state income tax refunds are finding the tax form smiles back.

But if they owe money, a sad face frowns at them.

The smiles and frowns are a new feature on more than 800,000 tax forms issued by the states this year. The faces are designed to cut down a high rate of taxpayer errors.

In front of the refund line, a smiling face is printed on the form. On the tax due line, a frowning face was printed.

'Pa Walton' Ex-Boozer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Actor Ralph Waite, who plays John Walton on the television series "The Waltons," says he's a "recovering alcoholic" who missed a great deal of what life has to offer because of drinking.

WAITE

"If they had taken attendance for my life, I'd have been marked absent," he said.

The 50-year-old actor said he began drinking at age 17 "behind the gym at high school dances" and continued until age 44.

"I personally have nothing against people who want to drink," he said "I enjoyed myself drinking a lot of years, but in retrospect, not as much as I thought I did."

Waite made the comments at the opening of a two-week mental health festival last weekend.

"It's when that drinking becomes a pattern of avoidance — to avoid growing up and maturing — then you can find yourself in trouble," he said.

Waite said he missed 27 years of growing because of heavy drinking.

"One characteristic of the disease is that when you start drinking, you stop growing emotionally and spiritually. And when I stopped drinking at the age of 44, I was emotionally 17."

Ammunition Bunkers For Sale

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — Want to buy an ammunition bunker for a wine cellar or raising mushrooms? The city of Newport News has 20 for sale at $20,000, a bit more if they have a "lakeside view."

The concrete bunkers, 20 feet high and 80 feet long and resembling Quonset huts, were built by the Army to store ammunition during World War II and now belong to the city. Each has 2,100 feet of floor space.

Trouble is, they sit smack in the middle of 700 acres of choice industrial land, where sales have been booming.

The city decided to offer the bunkers, along with an acre of land/each, since they couldn't afford to tear them down.

Rooster, Hubcap Peck It Out

MOSCOW (UPI) — The moral of this story is either that you should never wash the winter mud off your car's hubcaps, or you should never purchase a stupid rooster.

The official Tass news agency Tuesday reported that Yevgeni Sanko of Vladivostok heard a clanging noise in his front yard recently and ran out to find one of his roosters slamming away at its image in his car's hubcap.

He chased the stupid bird away, but it returned and persisted almost to the point of exhaustion.

He chased it away again and the bird flew to a nearby fence post, where it fluffed itself up, issued a piercing cock-a-doddle-doo, and dropped dead.

Poles Tell Soviet Jokes

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Coupling the snow with recent Sino-Soviet saber rattling, the Poles are giggling over the fellow who tells his fellow shoveler: "This snow is all part of the plan. When the snow melts, we'll have floods. By the time the Chinese invade Poland the water level will be just right for planting rice."

Poles call the little yellow pennants stuck into the snow to signal the presence of sewer drains, "Chinese army assembly point markers."

Poles, well aware they are the freest people in the Soviet Bloc, break the monotony of long meat market lines by telling about the man who says to his dog, "Everyday I see you running back and forth across the border into Czechoslovakia."

Replies the dog, "I go to Czechoslovakia to eat meat and come back to Poland to bark."

Preservation Of Old Photos Endangered

ASHFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Time is running out on efforts to get more than $50,000 for preservation of an "awesome" collection of 17,000 turn-of-the-century photographic plates.

The Ashfield Historical Society has until April 1 to meet its agreement to match a $26,500 National Archives grant for the project by raising another $25,000. So far, it has gathered about $9,000.

Officials in this tiny Franklin County hill town want to provide a humidity-controlled storage area and other safeguards to protect deteriorating glass photographic negative plates made between 1880 and 1910 by a pair of itinerant photographers, the brothers Alvah and George Howe.

"This is the largest collection of its kind," said Alan B. Newman, a photographer and member of the historical society. He called the collection "awesome" and "invaluable to historians, scholars in the humanities and social sciences, and students of art and architecture."

The photos show life of the period in the Connecticut River Valley mill towns and rural areas of western Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire.

Vote Restoration Measure Advances

AUSTIN (AP) — Felons who have "paid their debt" suffer "taxation without representation" because they can't vote, Rep. Clay Smothers told the House on Tuesday.

House members voted 83-50 for his bill restoring an ex-convict's right to vote after serving his or her sentence, including any parole, probation or mandatory supervision.

A final vote that would send the bill to the Senate is expected today.

Under existing law, an ex-convict can regain the right to vote only by obtaining a pardon from the governor or a court order from a district judge restoring him or her to full citizenship.

"It is what I refer to as taxation without representation," said Smothers, D-Dallas. "Huntsville is turning out a new kind of prisoner, a prisoner who wants to take part when he gets out."

Smothers said ex-convicts who get jobs pay city taxes, state taxes and school district taxes. "But they can't vote after we've told them, 'Hey, you've paid your debt to society,'" he said.

Smothers urged the House to "do our part for those guys who are rehabilitated, those guys who have paid their debt to society."

He said a week he spent at Huntsville state prison "voluntarily" had "quite a bit to do with the introduction of this bill."

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Huntsville, reminded Smothers he had fought another "humane" proposal that would have allowed prisoners to have conjugal visits from their wives or husbands.

"There's no relationship, Mr. Berlanga. I'm talking about people who have paid their debt to society. But on conjugal visits, you're talking about people who are in the process of paying their debt to society," Smothers said.

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe vetoed a similar bill in 1977.

Smothers said he had discussed his bill with Gov. Bill Clements. He said Clements "implied at least that he thought it was a pretty good bill."

House members passed to the Senate, 124-0, a bill authorizing cities and counties to restrict the location of massage parlors, nude modeling studios, "love parlors" and similar businesses offering "sexual stimulation or sexual gratification for the customer."

While there was no debate on final passage, Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, warned Monday the bill could result in "combat zones" like Boston's in some Texas cities.

Also passed to the Senate, 127-2, was a bill changing license fees for farm labor recruiters from $150 per county where they operate to $50 statewide. It drops the category of "sub-agent," used by hundreds of recruiters to avoid the necessity of a license. The bill also requires a labor agent to tell farm workers in writing where they will work, how much they will earn and what their job conditions will be.

Legislation allowing the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation to condemn land for parking lots and roadside parks won House approval on voice vote and advanced to the Senate

The House voted tentative approval without discussion to a bill placing the state's 29 owned or leased airplanes into a central pool instead of leaving them in the hands of individual agencies.

Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, the sponsor, accepted an amendment giving agencies that owned or leased aircraft first priority for checking them out of the pool.

Also winning preliminary approval was a bill by Rep. Tony Polumbo, D-Houston, exempting special telephone equipment for the deaf from sales taxation.

Polumbo held up a piece of telephone equipment that prints out a message and said it cost $650. Similar devices range in price from $250 to $2,000, he said. The tax on a $1,000 device would be $50.

Senators passed and sent to the House on voice vote a bill allowing retired peace officers to carry handguns.

Also advancing to the House, 21-7, was a bill letting Tarrant, Bexar and El Paso counties issue certificates of obligation — a method of financing certain projects without going to the voters for a bond issue.

The Senate passed, 23-6, and sent to the House a bill setting a 5 percent limit on late charges on home mortgages.

Bill Would Triple Tuition Of Foreigners

AUSTIN (AP) — Tuition for foreign students at state colleges would triple on the average from $400 a year to $1,200 under legislation sent to the Senate Education Committee Tuesday.

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, authored the legislation aimed at requiring all foreign students to pay the same charge.

Out-of-state residents pay $40 per semester hour. However, some 85 to 90 percent of foreign students in Texas now pay $12 an hour.

The loophole results from a reciprocity agreement in which foreign countries charge Texas residents lower tuition in return for similar treatment for their citizens attending state colleges.

An education subcommittee also approved Mauzy's bill enabling students with permanent visas or classified as refugees to qualify for the same tuition paid by state residents — $4 a semester hour.

The subcommittee took no action on legislation that would raise foreign tuition to $75 per semester hour. The sponsors of that bill, Sens. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, and Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said they introduced it to stop colleges from recruiting foreign students.

"We feel it is punitive, very punitive toward foreign students," said Mary Nell Drummond of the International Hospitality Committees of Texas. "It would seem to many foreign countries a slap in the face," she said of the Moore-Blake bill.

Their bill also would raise graduate student tuition from $4 to $12 a semester hour.

Several graduate students from the University of Texas testified such an increase would be a heavy burden.

Bishop Of Juneau Appointee Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Monsignor Michael H. Kenny, chancellor of the Roman Catholic diocese of Santa Rosa, Calif., has been named bishop of Juneau, Alaska, it was announced Tuesday.

Kenny, 41, succeeds Archbishop Francis T. Hurley, who was transferred to Anchorage in May 1976 and also has served as apostolic administrator of Juneau since then.

Kenny's appointment by Pope John Paul II was announced here by Archbishop Jean Jadot, apostolic delegate to the United States.

Jury Unable To Agree On Sentence

Lubbock County juries Tuesday sentenced one burglar to 10 years in the penitentiary and stalemated considering the punishment of another.

Lorenzo D. Perez, 46, of Plainview was convicted of burglary of a vehicle Tuesday morning and received a 10-year sentence early Tuesday afternoon.

The jury took 30 minutes to find him guilty and about an hour to set his punishment for taking a tape player and three tapes from a car parked at 14th Street and Avenue J Oct. 14.

Introducing punishment phase evidence of a previous burglary conviction, prosecutor Hollis Browning asked a maximum sentence of 20 years for Perez.

Police testified during the 137th District Court trial that the defendant was arrested in the 800 block of Broadway with the tape player under his arm and tapes in his pockets.

Perez was defended by attorneys Joel Howard and Quinn Brackett.

In 237th District Court, a jury announced after an hour of deliberation early Tuesday afternoon that it was unalterably deadlocked on punishment for Leslie Malone, 17, of 2604 Teak St., who had pleaded guilty to burglary of a habitation and had gone to the jury for punishment.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Travis Ware asked a 35-year sentence, and defense lawyer Frank King asked probation for the Dunbar High School junior.

Malone was accused of breaking into a 1919 Ninth St. apartment Nov. 4 and stealing a television set, a pair of tennis shoes and two tickets to the Texas Tech University homecoming football game.

King asked probation on the basis of Malone not having previously been convicted of a felony.

Six jurors reportedly favored a penitentiary sentence, five favored probation and one was undecided.

In his final argument, Ware contended that Malone should be given a prison sentence regardless of his age in part because "more than half" of Lubbock County burglaries are committed by persons under 20 years of age.

Oil Conversion To Natural Gas Helps Fill Gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrial conversion from oil to natural gas is replacing some 160,000 barrels a day in lost Iranian oil imports, the Carter administration told Congress Tuesday.

Energy Department official David Bardin told a House subcommittee such fuel conversions have emerged as "the single most effective means" for dealing with shortages caused by the Iranian cutoff and unusually cold weather.

President Carter had said he would make a major speech on energy on Thursday that would outline other strategies for conserving oil. But that address has reportedly now been postponed, possibly until sometime next week.

Officials estimate the net current loss of oil imports in this country resulting from the turmoil in Iran at 500,000 to 600,000 barrels. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

Thus, fuel-switching away from oil — enabled by a current surplus of natural gas — has made up about one-third of this shortage.

The switches have all been voluntary, Bardin said, enabled by recent steps taken by the Energy Department in easing legal restrictions on the burning of natural gas by industries.

Bardin, who heads the Energy Department's Economic Regulatory Administration, testified that oil-to-gas switches are saving 100,000 barrels of oil a day in electric power plants and another 60,000 a day "in the industrial sector."

But witnesses representing various industries, testifying before the same panel, cautioned that the administration's steps may be wasting natural gas that could be used by the chemical industry or to heat homes.

Walter F. Allaire, energy director for Allied Chemical, expressed "considerable alarm" at the administration's steps, which he said allow low-priority gas users like power plants to get gas denied to higher-priority users like the chemical industry.

He said his firm is unable to get the natural gas it needs for its chemical plants in Virginia and Nebraska. He said burning gas under industrial boilers and in power plants is a the worst possible use of the clean-burning fuel.

And Thomas F. Ryan Jr., spokesman for the Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., said that while he wasn't specifically criticizing the admistration for promoting an "inferior use" of gas, he wanted officials to realize the "highest and most efficient use" of gas was in heating homes.

The testimony was before the House Commerce subcommittee on investigations and oversight.

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, the panel's chairman, accused the adminstration of giving conflicting signals on the nation's natural gas situation — claiming last year that there were severe shortages and now that there is a surplus.

But Bardin argued that the temporary surplus was just a large "bubble" of gas, perhaps of as much as 1 trillion cubic feet, made newly available to interstate pipelines by terms of the natural gas section of the president's 1978 energy bill.

There is no illusion on the part of the administration that the surplus is anything but temporary, Bardin said.

M. L. King Day Draws Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Is it too much," asks Coretta Scott King, "that one day be set aside to honor a black man who gave his life in the struggle for human decency?"

The Carter administration and at least one-fourth of the Congress think not. Already a bill to establish the Jan. 15 birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as a national holiday has drawn 26 cosponsors in the Senate, 118 in the House.

In testimony Tuesday to a joint Senate-House panel, Mrs. King said the aim "is to honor an idea far greater than any one man. It would be a day of reflection on the non-violent method for advancing justice throughout the world."

The widow of the civil rights leader was joined by U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and several other prominent black leaders, including Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., who has backed such legislation almost from the day King was slain in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

Their plea drew strong support from the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a member of the panel. Members of the House subcommittee on census and population also sat in on the hearing.

Young said he would have preferred not to testify, because of his close relationship with King in the civil rights struggles of the 1960s. But the administration requested that he personally express its support, he said.

"Through the Civil War and two great world wars, black Americans fought for freedom," Young said. "Yet it remained for Martin Luther King to translate the founding documents of this nation to give full freedom to all America's citizens."

Several states already have declared King's birthday a holiday. If the federal government follows suit, it would be the 10th official holiday for federal workers and the first new one since Columbus Day was added in 1968. Private employers would not be required to observe it.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., was the only outspoken detractor at the hearing. He said that "although a dynamic and charismatic personage of our time, Martin Luther King Jr.'s place in history has not been established, nor will it be so established until reviewed by future generations."

Thurmond said the holiday would cost the taxpayers $195 million from the federal payroll, a figure the senator said was based on a normal day's pay, $173 million, plus $22 million in premium pay for emergency employees who still would have to work.

Kennedy disputed that argument, saying the $173 million is money that would be paid whether the day is worked or not. Moreover, he said, several economic benefits could accrue, since "holidays are the best business times."

Mrs. King agreed, saying the day, like Washington's birthday, might be an occasion for heightened business activity. Any direct cost to the government, she said, would be offset by "the increase in government revenues due to increased economic activity of consumers."

Bayh, who introduced the bill on the first day of the 96th Congress, asked: "If we're going to think of cost, what is the cost of a little black boy not having the opportunity to celebrate a day in honor of someone who looks like him?"

"This year is significant because it is the 50th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther King," Kennedy said. "I hope that this will be the year in which we at last enact this legislation."

Death Vigil Slated For Condemned Man

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Protesters against the death penalty plan an all-night candlelight vigil near Holman Prison on the night John Louis Evans III is executed for murder — if that happens.

Evans, 29, is scheduled to die in the electric chair at Holman shortly after 12:01 a. m. April 6.

Jennifer Johnson, director of the Alabama Prison Project, says she expects about 100 members of her group to assemble near the prison, which is six miles north of the city. Vigils are also planned in front of the governor's mansion in Montgomery and others in each major Alabama city.

"The people who would be there are committed to non-violence," Miss Johnson said.

John Hale, information officer for the state prison board, said a mile-long access road from Alabama Highway 21 to Holman will be blocked, and no demonstrators will be allowed closer than that.

Clements Aide Confronted Over Appointee

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Chet Brooks heatedly questioned Tobin Armstrong of the governor's office Tuesday about his role in the Senate fight over a gubernatorial appointee.

The confrontation occurred at a subcommittee hearing, after Armstrong had strolled in to check on several noncontroversial appointments by Gov. Bill Clements.

Clements admitted Friday he had tried to persuade several senators to vote for his appointment of W.B. "Monk" Edwards, a former Gulf Oil lawyer, as a Houston district judge.

Needing 21 votes for confirmation, Edwards had received only 19 the previous day, with Brooks leading the opposition.

Brooks, D-Pasadena, said the governor's office had subjected him and others to "unbelievable pressure" to get Edwards confirmed. Brooks mentioned being contacted by his banker.

Armstrong was asked for comments last Thursday on Brooks' statement about pressure, and he talked with reporters in the press room for several minutes.

Brooks said, "You may have been misquoted," and then he read this partial newspaper account of Armstrong's interview:

"Tobin Armstrong, in charge of Clements' appointments, said, 'We ran the traps and the numbers were so close we couldn't withdraw (Edwards' nomination) ... we still think he is a quality appointment. You just don't pull the rug out from under him.'"

Brooks also read: "Armstrong said he was 'rather flattered' at comments that pressure was used to try to gain confirmation for Edwards. 'It means we are doing our job,' he said."

Brooks, obviously angry, asked, "Do you think it's your job to pressure the Senate, to arm-twist the Senate to get an appointment confirmed?"

"It's not my role to abuse anybody," replied Armstrong, "and I didn't abuse anybody."

"I'm not trying to embarrass you," said Brooks.

"Was my answer satisfactory?" asked Armstrong from his seat in the small committee room.

"I'll talk to you about it later," replied Brooks.

Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, interjected that no one had tried to "twist my arm," and Brooks said, "You were on the right side."

Brooks said he had known appointment secretaries under four governors, and added, "I've never had one quoted in that regard. I don't believe that has ever been the role (of an appointments secretary), of trying to push through an appointment or twist arms."

Brooks said any time he is "pressured like that, I will call it to the public's attention every opportunity I have."

Railroad Commission Name Change Asked

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. John Whitmire thinks the Texas Railroad Commission should get a name more in step with the times.

His bill to rename the agency the Texas Energy and Transportation Commission was sent Tuesday to a subcommittee of the House Committee on Energy Resources for further study.

The railroad commission began regulating transportation in Texas in 1891. It was given its first authority over the oil and gas industry in 1917.

County Adoption Agency Bill Stalled In Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Beset by accusations of "baby selling" and a lobbying effort by private adoption agencies, Rep. Bill Messer agreed Tuesday to a two-day delay in his county adoption bill.

Messer's bill would allow a county to place children for adoption and charge adoptive parents a fee to cover the cost.

The bill is necessary, he said, because a recent attorney general's opinion says counties cannot charge adoption fees.

"What Mr. Messer's bill would do is set up a baby-selling agency by statute in each of our counties," objected Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco.

She contended it would force families who want to adopt children to compete "on the basis of wealth."

Messer, D-Belton, said only Bell County was running a full-scale county adoption agency when Attorney General Mark White outlawed fees on March 16.

He said Bell County's fee was 7 percent of an adoptive family's annual income, with a minimum of $700 and a maximum of $2,100.

The county decided to run its own adoption service, for both "hard-to-place" children and those for whom it is easy to find parents, after finding private agencies were too expensive, Messer said.

The Edna Gladney Home in Fort Worth, he said, "wants only Anglo babies" and has a minimum fee of $2,500.

"Thirty percent of the babies placed (in Bell County) are from Fort Hood and are mixed-race babies," he said.

Messer accepted an amendment by Rep. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, authorizing a county to waive its fee for families that are qualified as adoptive parents but cannot afford to pay.

Messer's bill easily advanced Monday on a 70-57 vote but ran into determined opposition Tuesday.

"Edna Gladney and the large private adoption services don't want it. They are afraid other counties will do what Bell County is doing and create some competition for them," he said in an interview.

Barrientos said he "started getting some last minute calls from adoption agencies" Monday night.

Messer said he probably would accept an amendment when the bill comes up again Thursday that would allow county adoption services only in counties where there are no private agencies available.

"Some of the minorities wanted to be assured this would not be a system of selling babies to the highest bidder," he added.

He said he hoped to get a two-thirds vote in the House and Senate to put the bill into immediate effect because Bell County "has a waiting list (of parents) and a backlog of babies it can't place because of the attorney general's opinion."

Tanker Leaking Oil Following Collision

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A tanker was leaking about 60 gallons of crude oil an hour into the Mississippi River Tuesday after a collision with another tanker near Donaldsonville, the Coast Guard said.

Booms were being used to contain the spill, but some of it had already spread as far downstream as 50 miles to New Orleans, a spokesman said.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the tanker, the Baltimore Trader, has a capacity of 4,920 barrels — some 200,000 gallons.

He said the Baltimore Trader and the Greek-registered Thenohos collided Sunday, but the details were not known. The Thenohos leaked oil shortly after the collision, the Coast Guard said, but appeared to have stopped leaking.

Levity Accompanies Gun Bill's Approval

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill authorizing peace officers to carry handguns after their retirement cleared the Senate Tuesday after it was noted one senator had facetiously suggested an amendment — "once a gun toter, always a gun toter."

"For someone who really needs it, you ought to let members of the legislature carry pistols," joked Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said Sen. Bill Moore suggested the "gun toter" amendment, but "it didn't meet the technical standards of the Legislative Council."

The bill was sent to the House on a voice vote.

Workers Say Building Causes Varied Illnesses

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Research workers in a 27-story building at the University of Massachusetts say they have been suffering such health problems as headaches, dizzy spells and menstrual irregularities, and are threatening legal action against the school.

They insist their problems are directly related to the building, but school officials disagree — and point to two studies which have left the cause of the health complaints a mystery.

"The official line of the school is that there is not a problem and that we should supply evidence that there is," said Jeff Bonar, 23, a graduate student in computer science.

"I've had four colds in five weeks and I never used to get them. I need two extra hours of sleep each night. But when I was away from the office for four days, I felt a lot better," Bonar said.

Neither the complaining workers nor the school can say how many workers have experienced health problems.

But Liz Roman, a spokesman for the workers, estimates between 20 and 30 women have had menstrual problems. Bonar and others have collected signatures from 197 professors, researchers and students — nearly half of the workers at the building, according to Miss Roman — on petitions asking the university to either prove a problem doesn't exist, or admit it does and correct it.

Barry Averill, director of the school's health services, said there is no evidence of a hazard.

"Based on the investigation by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, there is no evidence that persons in the building are being exposed to a hazard. The report was critical of the building's ventilation system, but it was specific in that there is no evidence of exposure to toxic materials," he said.

That study began two months ago and the report was dated March 16.

Investigators found last May that workers' blood samples showed high levels of toluene, a solvent frequently used in chemistry labs. But the building, shut down for a week, was reopened after tests showed no correlation between illnesses and toluene levels.

Those affected believe the problem lies in the ventilation system — that fumes from a section housing chemistry and physics laboratories are circulating elsewhere. Averill says the ventilation system will be fixed, but it will take time.

Miss Roman, a 29-year-old radio astronomy technician, says she has suffered fatigue, headaches and an irregular menstrual cycle since January 1978. "I have to sleep two to four hours more a night and I have headaches and dizzy spells," she said. "I'm scared ... My health has degenerated a lot ...

"In the labs, they use carcinogens and very toxic materials. Those are being carried around in the building's ventilation system. The NIOSH report said only that the system was faulty. But I question the investigation. They never came into my lab, they concentrated on one floor, calling it typical of the entire building ...

"I've stayed here because of reassurances that it would be taken care of. But I'll be filing some sort of legal action this week. I've also given my notice," she said. She declined to say what legal action she might take.

Caxton Foster, a professor of computer sciences, says he works at home except for the three days he must use the building to teach.

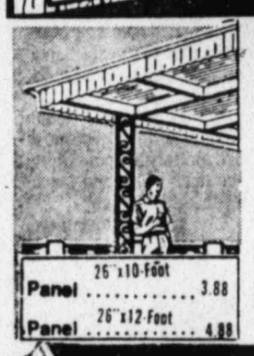

"I've had diarrhea for nine months now," he said. "It goes away in the summer when I'm not in the building ... The problem is that the school doesn't know what to do so they don't do anything."

Sadat, Begin Seek Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leaders of Israel and Egypt took different stands Tuesday on Palestinian autonomy but asked Congress nonetheless to give them the weapons of war and trust them to keep the peace.

Both warned of Soviet threats to freedom around the world.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat renewed a proposal for a combined municipal council of Arabs and Israelis in Jerusalem. But he declared flatly that "sovereignty in Arab Jerusalem should return to the Arabs."

Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin spoke separately to senators and congressmen assembled in meeting rooms on their respective sides of the Capitol. Sadat elaborated on his statements during a brief meeting with reporters.

Both leaders urged approval of President Carter's proposed $4.5 billion package of loans and grants for Israel and Egypt. The package is designed to bolster the new peace between the ancient enemies, formalized in a treaty signed Monday.

Letters of agreement made public by Defense Secretary Harold Brown show the package includes accelerated delivery of F-16 fighter planes to Israel and the extension of arms sales credits to Egypt for the first time.

House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas predicted Congress will approve the aid. "No doubt about it," he said. But Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said he had not decided whether to support the administration's package.

Carter met for lunch with Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil. White House spokesman Jody Powell said they discussed "the continuation of the peace process" and economic aid to Egypt, which will total $300 million over three years.

Begin traveled to New York in the late afternoon. He was to be joined there today by Vice President Walter F. Mondale. They were to appear at a luncheon of the Israel-U.S. Business Council.

Sadat denied an Israeli radio report that Begin's state visit to Cairo on Monday had been delayed for one week. "I don't know who invented this," Sadat told reporters. "Who invented this? It is a new invention."

Sadat had an afternoon meeting with Robert McNamara, head of the World Bank. The bank is considering an increase in development loans for Egypt. Sadat planned to leave for home later this week.

Begin Makes Appeal

"I have an appeal to make to you," Begin told members of the Senate. "Don't doubt us. Don't doubt our intentions. Don't doubt our resolve to live in peace with our neighbors."

"We want to solve in a humane way the problem of the Palestinian Arabs," he said.

But Sadat said Congress should try to persuade Begin to ease his stand on Palestinian Arabs. The Egyptian president did not repeat his long-stated position that the Palestinians should have a state of their own.

But he left no doubt that his goal differs widely from Begin's.

The Israeli prime minister has flatly ruled out Palestinian statehood. Instead, he has proposed a limited form of autonomy for the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip.

Sadat Asks Influence

Sadat told members of the House: "You can use your influence to moderate the position of the Israelis." He said Egypt intends to honor every word of its new treaty with Israel "and to fully implement the documents in good faith."

Pitching for military aid, Sadat acknowledged that "much has been said about the United States paying the price of peace.

"We do not view the matter in these terms," he said. "Peace is too precious to be an object of bargaining."

"You can have security and stability in the (Mideast) region if you cooperate with us in the military field," he told members of the Senate.

Begin, too, appealed for aid. He said it would be in American interests to provide it. "Security," he told the senators, means life itself to Israel.

The prime minister told House members that Israel faces Syria, Iraq, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and "an open storehouse" of Soviet weapons.

"You have in Israel a stable democracy," Begin said. "Let us all work together to safeguard liberty."

Warning of Soviet interference, Begin said the Russians "took over by proxy" the nations of Vietnam, Cambodia, South Yemen, Afghanistan, Ethiopia and Mozambique during the past two years. Saudi Arabia and its oil "can also become a victim," he said.

Without naming the Soviets, Sadat joined in the warning, saying Egypt must assume a special military responsibility for protecting the Arab world and much of Africa "from outside intrusion."

"Our concern," he said, "is that there are some who are interfering in our area from outside and we must protect ourselves. I think military cooperation would be very helpful.

"I'm not throwing the whole load on the United States — no. We have to depend on ourselves. But we need help ... We need lots from our friends here in the United States."

OPEC Heralds Gas Price Hike Of Three Cents

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Arab-dominated OPEC cartel raised crude oil prices by 9 percent Tuesday, which means Americans soon will be paying up to three cents a gallon more for gasoline.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries approved a new price of $14.54 a barrel and authorized members to tack on any surcharges the market might bear.

Analysts said the base price hike, to be imposed Sunday, would raise American retail gasoline prices by about two cents a gallon and increase the American bill for foreign oil by at least $4 billion over last year's total of $43 billion. Surcharges adopted by at least seven members of the 13-nation cartel could add another penny a gallon to the U.S. gasoline price.

Action Called "Greed"

In Washington, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, called the increase "greed and a punitive doctrine ... bad news for Western institutions."

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said it was "untimely and unjustified" and points up the need for strict conservation measures.

But on Wall Street, the stock market reacted by sweeping to a five-month high, mainly because the increase was less than half that demanded by some OPEC price hawks. The Dow Jones industial average rose 16.54 to 871.36.

Algeria, Venezuela, Libya, Iran, Qatar, Kuwait and Nigeria immediately said their countries would add surcharges to the basic rate ranging from 8 to 17 percent.

Enrichment Estimated

The base increase alone is expected to enrich OPEC nations by an additional $13.5 billion this year, analysts said.

OPEC President Saeed al Otaiba of the United Arab Emirates said the next OPEC meeting, scheduled here in June, could decide on yet another hike.

He said the UAE, Saudi Arabia and other Arab "moderates" opposed the even stiffer increases proposed by some countries and would continue to do so in the future. He said Ecuador joined the fight to keep the increase low.

Militant members such as Iraq, Iran and Libya lobbied hard for larger increases. Iran said it favored an increase of 29 percent in the base price.

Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi, subsequently joined by Ecuador, Gabon and Qater, wanted to leave intact the price system adopted by OPEC in December, insiders said. Under that plan, the base price was to rise in quarterly installments to $14.54 in October.

Most Add Surcharge

Most OPEC members added a surcharge of about $1.20 a barrel, roughly the amount of Tuesday's base price increase, onto the previous OPEC price of $13.35 when the revolution in Iran caused a shortage of crude on the world market.

The earlier surcharges were approved by OPEC as a response to what the cartel saw as profiteering by oil companies getting upwards of $20 a barrel on the short-term, or "spot' market because of the shortage caused by the temporary loss of Iranian production.

Tuesday, Algeria announced an increase of "about $4" per 42-gallon barrel over the base price, upping the price of Algerian crude by a total of more than 30 percent. Venezuela announced a surcharge of $1.20, and Libya said it would raise prices by $1.66.

Dependent On Surcharges

The effect of the surcharges on American retail prices will depend on which countries impose surcharges and on what size they are. American gasoline pump prices rise about a cent a gallon per overall 5 percent increase in the price of crude.

When OPEC was founded in 1960, crude sold for $1.80 a barrel. Prices started rising sharply in 1973, going from $2.59 at the first of that year to $11.46 a year later.

The two-day Geneva meeting, which ended Tuesday, was initially called to arrive at uniform pricing and production policies, and had not been expected to produce a price rise.

An economic adviser to the Iranian delegation, Cyrus Ebrahim Zadeh, said Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Kuwait and Nigeria agreed to cut back production as Iranian oil comes back on the market to avoid a surplus that might keep prices down.

Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Amhed Zaki Yamani confirmed his country, the world's largest oil exporter, would reduce its ceiling on oil production to 8.5 million barrels a day in the second quarter from 9.5 million now if Iran's production continues to rise.

He also said Saudi Arabia would not impose a surcharge.

Yamani said the Saudis prevented other members from committing OPEC to consider another boost in the base price at the June meeting in Geneva, but he added the warning:

"I don't see any serious signs of a willingness of consumer countries to reduce demand," he said. "Unless they do it very soon, they can expect another increase by June. That much is clear to me."

Zadeh said other nations will cut back by more than Iran puts on the market.

Iran now produces about 2 million barrels a day, a third of its pre-revolution output of 6 million barrels. Iranian production is expected to level off at about 4 million barrels a day.

The increases came a day after Egypt and Israel signed a peace treaty that was loudly denounced by the rest of the Arab world. But there was no indication that the treaty and the price hike were linked despite Jackson's reference to a "punitive" doctrine.

our safety and to lose it for our safety."

Haggard, "achieved heroism," Sutherlin said.

The Rev. James McGuire, pastor of the New Deal First Baptist Church, officiated at Tucker's 4 p.m. service at Sanders Memorial Chapel.

Speaking to the Lubbock firemen attending the funeral, McGuire said their work "requires a degree of courage and degree of bravery which is commendable."

The death of Tucker and his two colleagues is a tragic "exception," McGuire said, but "there is the potential for such tragedy every time there is such a call."

"On behalf of the community of Lubbock, I express deep gratitude to you who serve in the fire department," he said.

The three firemen buried Tuesday were the first killed in the line of duty in Lubbock in more than 20 years.

At Slaton services for Swafford, the Rev. Jim Wilkerson, pastor of the Westview Baptist Church in Slaton, said a fund in Swafford's name had been established to purchase equipment for the Slaton Emergency Medical Services unit.

Contributions to the fund can be made to the Citizen's Bank in Slaton. Swafford formerly worked for EMS in Slaton.

A Larry Tucker Memorial Fund also has been established at American State Bank in Lubbock by friends of his family.

Energy Plan Delay Seen

stem from the oil shortages caused by the upheaval in Iran and that nation's refusal to maintain oil shipments at pre-revolution levels.

"Maybe that will help wake us up," the press secretary said.

While the options the president is considering have not been revealed, they are known to range from retention of price controls on domestically produced oil to partial decontrol to lifting of all controls.

Under a congressional mandate, Carter must decide by May 31 whether to continue some form of oil price controls.

The National Coal Association joined the administration in voicing criticism of the OPEC decision to increase crude oil prices.

The industry group, in a statement released by its national headquarters here, said the cartel's move "is a serious blow to the economy of the United States, and the coal industry can take no comfort from a development which damages all Americans."

The association added, however, "For the longer term, if the OPEC action demonstrates anew the wisdom of using domestic energy resources — of which coal is the most abundant — it may be an ultimate advantage to our nation."

Jack Carlson, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said the OPEC increase was "certainly unjustified."

Carlson estimated that its effect would be to increase the U.S. inflation rate by about one quarter of 1 percent, and to slow economic growth by about one-tenth of 1 percent.

The American Petroleum Institute and the National Association of Manufacturers issued statements saying the price rise underscores the need to improve U.S. domestic coal production.

Schools To Unfold 'Magnet' Programs

Lubbock High enrollment.

Williams and other school administrators are prepared to answer point-by-point criticisms of LEAP.

They say, for example, that the program's cost is small compared with the school system's overall $40 million budget and in light of the opportunities LEAP will offer.

Focuses On Academics

Also, most of the LEAP courses focus on hardcore academics — science, math, social studies and language arts.

Although the program includes some less academic courses — such as dance and gymnastics — they are important in a well rounded education, administrators said.

Moreover, Williams said, "We're talking about students who are seriously interested in, say, ballet or competitive gymnastics." The courses will be taught by professionals, at a level comparable to what youngsters now get only in private lessons, he said.

Williams said it's too early to predict how many students may transfer into LEAP. "Personally, I'm optimistic," he said.

Complications with UIL competition have been mostly resolved by use of special transfer forms, Williams said. Students transferring to Lubbock High will be allowed to represent the school in athletic, music and academic competition, he added.

Williams stressed that LEAP "is a systemwide project, not just a Lubbock High School project."

Students, teachers, parents and even some principals have been playing on school loyalties to discourage transfers to LEAP, according to some Lubbock High teachers.

But Williams said he believes the "educational benefits of the program override certain loyalties."

Teams To Explain Plans

Explaining the magnet program to other schools will be a team made up of Williams; Jay Gordon, assistant superintendent for instruction; Bill Carter, Lubbock High vice principal; Nancy Phillips, Lubbock High counselor; and Gilbert Weaver, director of secondary education.

The team will visit Matthews and Wilson junior highs today; Mackenzie, Hutchinson and Evans junior highs Thursday; Thompson and O.L. Slaton junior highs and Monterey High on Friday; and Coronado High Monday. Visits to Estacado and Dunbar-Struggs high schools and Atkins and Alderson junior highs also are being scheduled, Williams said.

In addition, three sessions will be held for parents. They are set for Monday in the Lubbock High auditorium; Tuesday in the Monterey High auditorium; and April 5 in the Coronado auditorium. The sessions each begin at 7:30 p.m.

Students have until April 13 to apply for LEAP, Williams said. Application and transfer forms may be obtained from school counselors.

School officials are providing students and parents with brochures describing the magnet program.

The pamphlets note that LEAP will consist of regular courses, academic honors courses, pre-professional courses (engineering, medicine, law, etc.) and expanded elective courses.

Students who apply for honors programs will be notified of acceptance or rejection by May, Williams said.

Mennonites' Land Set For Auction

lems became pressing, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service notified the settlers they had overstayed their temporary visa stay and would face deportation if they did not leave the country voluntarily.

Bentsen, who had come to their aid in October 1977, by successfully lobbying for a bill allowing them to remain until Feb. 1, 1979, again stepped in.

In a letter to INS director Leonel Castillo, Bentsen asked the service to withhold action until he could re-introduce special legislation allowing the grrup to remain two more years.

Castillo agreed, and Bentsen submitted the bill last week. The measure is being considered by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Meet Qualifications

But even if Bentsen's bill fails, the Mennonites have earned the right to remain because they have met U.S. Labor Department qualifications for skilled labor jobs.

The primary reason the colonists missed the Feb. 1 deadline to leave the country was because they had failed on several occasions to acquire permanent alien status thorugh the department. But after last month's threat of deportation, all heads of households and single adults over 21 years of age left the ranch to seek what the immigration service considered proper jobs.

The search was not easy, and the Mennonites, because of their new occupations, were forced to give up farming and living on their ranch. But all now have acceptable jobs, Bergen said.

If the workers keep their new-found jobs long enough, they will become eligible to apply for citizenship.

Bergen said that, as far as he knows, all the Mennonites in the area plan to remain.

"They've got their jobs and seem content. Maybe now that all this is over, we can just settle down and live our lives," he said.

National Crime Rate Rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department reported Tuesday a 1 percent increase in the national crime rate in 1978, reversing a decline the previous year.

The crime statistics are compiled by the FBI based on reports from local police.

Attorney General Griffin B. Bell noted that crime decreased by 3 percent in 1977, according to the FBI figures.

Trial Over, Victim Says 'I'm Just Me Again'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — In an Andy Gibb T-shirt, faded dungarees and soiled tennis shoes, Mary Bell Vincent looks and acts every bit the bubbling teen-ager as she reaches across a table and playfully grabs a pen out of your hand — using the hook on one of her artificial limbs.

Her dark hair framing her pretty smiling face, she is home now and, two months away from her 16th birthday, is trying as best she can to "forget the past, the bad parts" and "be myself again."

Last September near Modesto, Calif., Miss Vincent became the victim of a nighmare rape and assault in which her attacker took an ax and hacked off her arms below the elbows. She had hitched a ride with a stranger, and was left for dead in a roadside culvert.

Last Friday a jury in San Diego found the lone suspect of the attack guilty. Lawrence Singleton, 51, a merchant seaman arrested in Sparks, Nev., nine days after the assault, was convicted of attemped murder, kidnapping, rape and other sex charges.

"During the trial I was a 15-year-old girl who was mutilated," said the youth. She paused, smiled and said, "Now, I'm just me again."

She said she gets depressed at times, but doesn't despair.

"I go into the bathroom or into another room and bawl my eyes out and say to myself, 'Boy, I'd do anything to have my hands just for a moment or two.' I see all these girls with pretty hands and pretty fingernails and it makes me feel like I don't belong with them.

"Then, I think again and say, 'Well, I'm not going to grow my hands back so I'll just have to make the best out of it.'"

Miss Vincent said she is closer to her family since the "accident."

"Right after it happened, I had a long talk with my parents and now I communicate a lot better — I fight less."

Before the attack, she said she was afraid to ask her parents "certain things because I was afraid they'd say, 'Go away, I'm busy right now.'"

It was the problem of communicating at home that contributed to her running away from home and hitchhiking in California, Miss Vincent said. "I was just a confused person, really, that needed a litte understanding and a bit of attention. I just decided to go to one of my relatives in California."

Miss Vincent said she is anxious to get the word out to teen-agers: don't every hitchhike.

Businessmen Report Hefty Cash Losses

Several Lubbock businessmen Tuesday reported hefty cash losses to burglars.

Michael Thompson told officers that between 4:30 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday, burglars forced open the back door of Western-Southern Life Insurance Co., 32 Briercroft Office Park, and took more than $1,000 in cash and checks from the safe.

Thompson said the bottom of the safe was pried and $508 cash and about $500 in checks were removed.

James M. Hamilton said intruders apparently took advantage of an unlocked front door at his 4001 48th St. residence Tuesday morning and made off with $830 in checks and cash belonging to United Fidelity Life Insurance Co. The insurance broker, who operates his office from his home, said the burglars took two checks made out to the company totaling $800 and $30 cash.

Mauricio Flores told police that almost $67 cash was stolen Monday night from the service station he manages. Flores said intruders pried the hasp from the front door of Godwin's No. 4 at 1526 E. 19th St. and took the cash which had been stored in a money box inside a desk.

A $5,000 parrot was reported stolen by Gregory B. Curry of 8618 Jordon Drive. Curry said the bird was removed from its steel cage in the den of his residence between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. Monday. He said he could find no sign of forced entry to the home.

Jim C. Todd, construction foreman for Revere Homes, told police an $866 microwave oven was stolen from a recently built home at No. 10 Brentwood Circle. Todd said the burglars also caused $90 damage to a window they apparently used as the point of entry for the break-in between 6 p.m. Monday and 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Daphne Elayne Brown told officers that $380 in jewelry apparently was stolen earlier this week while she was packing items for a move from her 2612 78th St. residence to Plano. She said two watches and a sapphire ring were missing.

A man traveling in a pickup truck apparently did not like a nasty gesture another motorist shot his way, so he chased the woman to the Lubbock International Airport, shook his fist at her and other occupants in her car, and then drove off.

The 21-year-old Texas Tech coed told police she made the gesture about 6:15 p.m. Monday when the man drove past her at a high rate of speed near North Avenue Q Drive and U.S. 87.

Reports show the man driving the pickup stopped and got out of his vehicle holding a hay hook. When he began to approach the car, the woman sped off.

Occupants in the student's car said the man chased them to the airport and at one point in the pursuit brandished a pistol. However, when all involved got to the airport, the man reportedly just shook his fist and drove off.

In other activity, a 45-year-old Lubbock man was taken to Methodist Hospital Monday afternoon after his wife, 41, allegedly shot him in the leg, according to police reports.

Police, who are classifying the incident as an attempted murder, were told that the wife shot her husband, who was treated and released at the hospital. The victim admitted he and his wife had been in an argument at their residence, but he reportedly refused to file charges.

Tires and wheel rims valued at $5,472 were reported stolen Tuesday morning in an apparent break-in at Scoggin-Dickey Buick Co., 1917 Texas Ave.

Business manager Wayne Brwn said the burglary apparently took place between 7 p.m. Monday and 2:45 a.m. Tuesday.

Virginia R. Wallace of 2518 Marshall St. said her residence was burglarized between 8 a.m. and noon Monday and $950 in jewelry stolen.

Old Army Landmines Detonated At Test Site

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) — The Army blew up 26 landmines believed to contain a liquid nerve agent on an isolated part of this desert testing post Tuesday, and the base commander declared: "There was no widespread contamination."

Gov. Scott Matheson, who expressed anger on learning of the plans last week, said through a spokesman that he was glad the destruction of the canisters went without incident — and he was glad it was over.

The operation involved destroying mines found in January by an Army patrol. The mines, which had evidently been discarded and forgotten during a period of open-air testing in 1963, were now deteriorating.

Their destruction was twice delayed by tricky winds before it finally was accomplished on Tuesday.

The mines were covered with several thousand pounds of plastic C4 explosives and blown up under what the Army described as ideal winds at 8:46 a.m.

Only military personnel and state and federal health officials were allowed to watch. Reporters were kept in the office of Col. James R. Klugh, post commander, at the main administration building 30 miles from where the mines were blown up.

He had set up communications with the blast site, and after the blast was set off, he announced with a smile:

"It has gone. The detonation is complete."

Thirty minutes later, base personnel flew over the site in a helicopter and reported that all 26 mines, each containing up to two gallons of the agent VX, had been destroyed. Klugh said it was not known for certain that each mine contained the agent, but he was fairly sure they did.

"We feel we've had a very successful operation and all the mines have been disposed of and we will encounter no problems," said Klugh. "There was no widespread contamination," Klugh said.

Although the Army felt the operation was successful, Klugh said, extensive decontamination procedures will be followed "to assure ourselves that what we predicted would be the outcome."

Soldiers and scientists in rubber suits and masks took soil samples to determine how far any nerve agents might have traveled.

The site was 30 miles from the nearest populated area in a remote sagebrush-filled area of the 850,000-acre testing center.

It was the first time in 10 years that the Army had released a chemical weapon into the atmosphere. Before 1969, though, Dugway was a center of open-air chemical and biological testing, and it was near the base in 1968 that 6,400 sheep died from nerve gas.

Matheson, who had opposed the Army's efforts to move more nerve agents into Utah from Colorado, said he went along with the demolition plans only because it was an emergency.

The Army said it was necessary to destroy the mines where they were found because they were already decaying.

U.S. Senator Labels Oil Price Increase As Greedy, Punitive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Tuesday the decision by Arab oil producers' to raise prices 9 percent on April 1 reflected "greed and a punitive doctrine."

"Obviously it's going to be bad news for Western institutions," Jackson said after he and several colleagues discussed energy matters for nearly an hour with President Carter at the White House.

Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said the meeting produced general agreement that the only option available for the United States to surmount problems caused by importing oil is to increase reliance on coal and nuclear energy.

He said Carter held fast to his decision not to proceed with development of a breeder reactor at Clinch River, Tenn., preferring continued use of conventional light water nuclear reactors.

Jacckson said that as a result of the price increase announced Tuesday in Geneva by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, "We're talking about $20 a barrel for oil."

Asked whether the decision was taken to punish the United States for it support for the Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement and for failing to cut its consumption of imported oil, the senator replied: "It's a combination of greed and punitive doctrine."

Supreme Court Prohibits Random License Checks By Police

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that police officers may not stop motorists' automobiles at random to check driver's licenses and car registration.

The justices said random stops of motorists who are not suspected of breaking any law violate the Constitution's protection from unreasonable search and seizure.

The 8-1 decision struck down a Delaware law that had given individual police officers broad discretion in choosing cars for the routine checks. Many states allow similar police practices, which will now have to be changed.

"An individual operating or traveling in an automobile does not lose all expectation of privacy simply because the automobile and its use are subject to government regulation," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the majority.

White stressed, however, that the ruling does not bar Delaware and other states from "developing methods for spot checks that involve less intrusion or that do not involve unconstrained exercise of discretion."

White suggested that questioning all oncoming traffic at roadblock-type stops could be an alternative. Two other justices, in a concurring opinion, suggested that police could make "not purely random stops such as every 10th car to pass a given point."

Civil rights lawyers had voiced concern last October when the justices agreed to review an appeal by Delaware authorities after their state's highest court had declared the random stop policy unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court under Chief Justice Warren E. Burger has been portrayed as a friend to law enforcement officers, but Burger joined the majority Tuesday.

The sole dissenter was the court's other leading conservative, Justice William H. Rehnquist.

Noting that the court is willing to allow police to stop groups of motorists but not a single car at random, Rehnquist said, "The court thus elevates the adage 'misery loves company' to a novel role in Fourth Amendment jurisprudence."

The Delaware police case stemmed from a 1976 stop which led to an arrest for marijuana possession.

The criminal defendant successfully barred police from introducing the seized marijuana as evidence at his trial when state courts ruled that the drug was seized during an unconstitutional detention.

In separate decisions Tuesday, the court also:

•Declined to decide, in what could have been a critically important race-relations case from Los Angeles, whether persons who sue under an 1866 civil rights law have to prove "discriminatory intent." That proof is necessary for bias suits based on the Constitution.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices ruled that the case involving hiring practices by the Los Angeles County Fire Department is no longer a live controversy.

The court's action leaves intact a court-ordered racial quota system requiring the recruiting of one black and one Hispanic for every three whites recruited.

Date Slated To Begin Crime Prevention Program

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council moved a step closer to implementing its crime-fighting program Tuesday by announcing a preliminary starting date for the plan, establishing a countywide phone number and beginning preparations for a May 3 crime symposium to help raise money for the project.

Council members discussed methods to get local citizens involved in marking their valuable merchandise and keeping an inventory of items marked, called Operation Identification, and set April 15 as the day to begin their efforts.

Mal Cleland, Better Business Bureau director and chairman of the business crimes committee, said inventory cards for homeowners could be designed and printed up in the next week for distribution. And the council adopted motions to get inventory cards printed and to purchase invisible ink pens for local manufacturers to mark their products.

An earlier plan to keep an inventory of all items marked in the city's computer fell through because council members said it was unnecessary and that it would be better if the homeowners themselves keep an inventory of their valuables.

Frank McGlaun, of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, said the council should publicize locations where the markers can be picked up instead of having workers call on private homes because he felt many people would reject the idea of persons coming into their homes to mark valuables.

"We should leave the markers with the owners and then go back and pick them up after a specified number of days."

The council also decided to use the crime hotline number, 763-1133, as a clearinghouse for information on crimes other than emergencies and for administrative purposes. The council also approved a logo that homeowners can attach to doors and windows warning burglars that valuables are marked.

Cleland told the council a crime symposium has been set up for May 3 at the Civic Center, with tickets priced at $10 each, to help raise money for the identification project.

He said the day-long session will include seminars on crime prevention techniques and films by the Small Business Administration touching such topics as bad checks, shoplifting and internal security for local merchants.

He called on council members to contact local service groups in efforts to raise money. He said the council could raise more than $20,000 if 2,800 people would come to the symposium.

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford said he has lined up several local speakers for the program and added he has spoken in the past two months to about nine civic groups who have told him they would donate money to the organization.

Cleland said he could set up a bank account in the next couple of days and that donations from local service groups would be better than borrowing money from the bank.

The council never got around to electing a board of directors but Cleland asked members to submit names, especially those of minorities, at the next meeting scheduled for 7 a.m. Tuesday in the Emergency Operations Center at City Hall.

LOOKING FOR LAUGHS — Faith Catlin, executive director of Manhattan Punch Line, holds a poster advertising the theater's attractions as Steve Kaplan and Mitch McGuire, rear, join her. (AP Laserphoto)

Manhattan Punch Line Serious Theater Dealing With Humor

NEW YORK (AP) — They may sound silly. They rented a big loft near seedy Times Square, liberated seats from a failed porn movie house and, $17,000 later, launched a theater strictly for laughs.

But Manhattan Punch Line is no joke, even though it officially opens here April Fool's Day — Sunday — in its 100-seat, 7th-floor aerie high above the beautiful mid-town Port Authority bus terminal.

MPL is the newest of Fun City's 100-plus off-off-Broadway emporiums. Where it differs from most is that it only serves humor; the only tragedians on stage are those whose gags are dead on arrival.

"There are companies that do only farce, satire or cabaret," says MPL's Steve Kaplan. "But we're the only place that explores humor in all its forms, from Moliere to stand-up comedy and even film."

Kaplan, 27, a bearded, Brooklyn-born director, acting teacher and "failed stand-up comic," is one of Manhattan Punch Line's three founders and El Supremos.

The others are Faith Catlin, 29, an actress, and Mitch McGuire, 42, an actor. All of them, says Mrs. Catlin, are off on "a 10-year blind date." 10 years being the length of lease for their loft.

MPL is more than a humor haven, notes the red-haired actress, a Troy, N.Y., native who is an understudy in Broadway's "Da" and a graduate of ABC's soap saga, "Ryan's Hope," class of '75.

It's also a showcase for comics, writers and actors, "a high-class one," she grins. "We're even paying our actors a little bit if we extend a run. And we've got good ones, with Broadway credits."

"In fact, they're so good we're worried they might get work and leave," sighs McGuire, attempting a straight face and failing.

He's from Chicago, does both TV commercials and stage work here that has varied from "King Lear" in tights to "Oh! Calcutta" in no tights. He's credited by his partners with making MPL a reality.

Kaplan had the idea of a comedy theater, Mrs. Catlin supplied the name, but McGuire — the most experienced in woes of theater-starting — actually got them committed to working on it.

"Had to. I've been in situations where I helped begin a theater and wound up doing it all myself," he said. Mrs. Catlin winked and added: "So now it's just the three of us doing it all by ourselves."

She spoke in jest and held up a file box. It contained names of theater pals who volunteered long hours to turn the loft from a 5,000-square-foot void into a many-styled home for laughter.

MPL lurks in an old building on West 41st Street. The street has seen better days and may see them again amid hints the Times Square area actually is reviving. Indeed, a few doors away is the just-refurbished Trafalgar, now a house for British plays.

MPL, a non-profit theater, initially will operate Thursdays through Sundays, but in time will be open seven days a week, McGuire said.

Its first epic Sunday is Donald Wollner's "Flagship," a satire that poses a question TV already may have answered: what if TV's ratings systems are replaced by an 11-year-old boy named Spike?

Why a theater for laughs now? Why not years earlier? McGuire, a thoughtful man, somehow forgot in his answer to cite the usual reasons — war, locusts, sunspots and generally bad karma.

"We didn't think of it earlier," is what he said.

Bank Teller's Energy Crush Views Hailed

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

While energy experts take turns disagreeing about the severity of and solution to the energy situation, a Lubbock bank teller has presented an assessment of the issue that won her kudos of bankers from a three-state area.

Marcia Shuman, exchange and collection teller at Texas Commerce Bank, won a public speaking contest for her presentation of the energy problem at a district banking convention conducted this past weekend in El Paso.

The American Institute of Banking sponsors a speaking contest every year "to further banking and banking principles," according to Miss Shuman.

She won $150 and a trophy for her efforts before bankers from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico and will compete in May at the national level in Philadelphia.

Miss Shuman spoke about the "criticalness of the energy situation" and presented a national energy plan. Her speech had to pertain to the government's responsibility within the topic of "America in a World of Declining Energy Resources."

"The main emphasis was that we the people make up our government and it's our responsibility as citizens to influence the government to get everything done," said Miss Shuman.

The four components of her energy plan consisted of research and development, conservation, education and emergency preparedness.

"We need to research existing supplies to develop long-range programs for the future and we need to research alternate sources," she said.

To promote conservation she proposed the gradual deregulation of oil, a change in the structure of utility rates and the development of tax incentives.

In respect to education, Miss Shuman said that the "government needs to educate consumers as to the criticalness of the problem and to provide the how and why of conservation."

She also urged that consumers become aware of the emergency preparedness plan that has been presented to Congress and find out "if the plan is feasible."

Miss Shuman, who said she was the only teller among the upper managment contestants, had never participated in public speaking before winning the contest at the local level.

WOMEN WHO KNEW JESUS

Jesus Defends Woman

By EDITH DEEN

(Fifth of eight parts)

"Women, where are your accusers? Has no man condemned you?" asked Jesus.

"No man, Lord," she answered. And Jesus said to her, "Neither do I condemn you; go and sin no more."

The scribes and Pharisees brought to Jesus a woman caught in the act of adultery, as if they were helping him. Smugly, they reminded Jesus that, according to the old law of Moses, the woman should be stoned to death. Thinking themselves better than she, they were ready to stone her.

The compassionate Jesus was silent at first. Then he stooped down and wrote on the ground, as if he had not heard them.

Finally he told them, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

Convicted of their sins by their own guilty consciences, they disappeared one by one as Jesus and the woman talked together.

The scribes and Pharisees had judged the woman according to the world. But Jesus, knowing that he would die for the sins of others like them, made it known for the first time that where he would go, they could not come.

Jesus possessed human and divine wisdom. His human wisdom is expressed in his knowledge of the scriptures and his power to interpret them; in his deep moral insight gained by actual temptation and suffering; in his capacity for learning in the synagogue when he was a boy; in his common sense, practical ability and skill at constructing parables, and in his capacity for asking the right questions.

In the case of the woman caught in adultery, he showed human wisdom by first remaining silent before the accusers, who could not refute what he finally said. Christ's divine wisdom came through the spirit of God, speaking to and through him.

Throughout history, women, too often referred to as the weaker sex, have suffered unjust accusals. In this instance, the man caught in adultery with her is not even mentioned; yet he was guilty too.

Bereaved and deprived women often suffer legal injustice, for it is easier to denounce than to show compassion, more popular to throw stones than to give a fair trial.

Jesus writes on the ground

Jesus scoffed at the holier-than-thou attitudes of which we all are guilty. Too often we practice a religion not of the heart but of ceremony, not of reason but of form, not of God but of creed.

This sinning woman may have had more real love and compassion of others than her accusers. Jesus knew this.

If we are to grow spiritually, we have to learn to be whole — not Christians in name only. Regardless of our status and our church affiliation, we must never forget we can all be one in Christ. In that is hope for the accuser and the accused.

Meteor Shower Forecast In April

WASHINGTON (AP) — A meteor shower, an occultation of Mercury resembling an eclipse and an old fashioned eyesight test highlight skywatching in April.

The Big Dipper, probably the most familiar group of stars in the sky, will be almost directly overhead during the month, according to the U.S. Naval Observatory.

Actually this isn't really a constellation at all, but part of the larger Ursa Major, or Great Bear, but the dipper is easy to pick out and well known.

If you face north the dipper will appear to be bottomside up and the handle will stretch off to your right.

Here's the chance to test your eyes the way it was done in the days before eyeglasses and eye doctors came onto the scene.

In the middle of the dipper's handle is the star Mizar. Right nearby is the faint star Alcor. In ancient times, people able to see Alcor were considered to have normal vision.

The two stars at the front of the dipper can help you locate the North Star. Draw an imaginary line through these stars and extend it beyond the top of the cup, and it will lead to the North Star. The same line, drawn in the opposite direction, will lead to the constellation Leo.

In England the Big Dipper is called the Plough, or Charles Wain, a corruption of churl's wagon.

On April 24, there will be an occultation of Mercury which should be visible in most of North America. An occultation is the same as an eclipse, except that the sun is not involved. In this case, the moon will pass in front of Mercury, but it will be very hard to observe because Mercury will be very low on the horizon and close to the sun.

The Lyrid meteor shower is expected April 22, and with a clear sky observers should be able to see as many as 15 meteors an hour.

Planet-watching will be somewhat limited in April. Besides Mercury, Mars and Venus will also be too close to the sun for easy observation.

Jupiter will be in the constellation Cancer, visible in the southern sky at sunset, and it will set about midnight.

Saturn will be in Leo, high in the southeast at sunset and visible nearly all night, setting just before sunrise.

The moon will be farthest from Earth on April 6 and closest on the 22nd.

Suit Charges Physician With Negligence

A Denver, Colo., man, formerly of Lubbock, has filed a $1,175,000 lawsuit against Dr. John W. Hays in connection with the March 31, 1978, death of his wife after a brief illness.

Bob May, widower of Stephanie May, 27, claims his wife died of pulmonary emboli or blood clots closing vascular passageways in the lungs because of negligent treatment by Dr. Hays four days before her death.

The suit, filed by Lubbock attorney Carroll Cobb, says Mrs. May had been violently nauseated since March 17, 1978, and developed her fatal condition from dehydration.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I am absolutely fascinated by the boy King Tutankhamon, whose tomb was uncovered 56 years ago revealing treasures never imagined.

The very idea of being buried in an apartment stocked with 5,000 dazzling works of art, sculptures, alabaster vases, perfumed boxes and gold chariots is beyond comprehension.

This country has never been big on taking it with them, but the other night as I was pondering the possibility it occurred to me that it wasn't a bad idea.

Unlike the woman who wanted to be buried with a phone "just in case she got a dial tone," I am inclined to be a little more practical. Not that I'm ready to go, but when I do, here's a list of things I want to take with me.

All the warranties — Why make it easy for the second wife? Let her try to anticipate whether the toaster has three days left, the TV has 22 days, or the thermostat in the dryer is covered only if it goes out during an eclipse.

The ultra-suede suit — This one holds a lot of memories for me. It took me three months to pay for it, only to board a plane and discover it had been chosen as the official uniform of Braniff Airlines.

My book of rare phone numbers — This includes all the biggies...plumbers who work Sundays, doctors who answer their own phones and cleaning women who are not allergic to excessive dust.

The formula for my hair color — Through conscientious experimentation and great expense (from grants and personal funding) we finally hit upon something that will cover the roots. I have no intention of leaving it to strangers.

My birth certificate — Some things you wouldn't want to fall into the wrong hands.

Timex watch — Do you have any idea what a commercial that will make in 2,000 years?

Scarsdale Diet — This could also be reproduced on my tombstone.

Charge cards — These could be displayed in six or seven urns throughout the tomb.

Granted, this isn't a bullion bonanza you'd expect to find, but who is to say that in years to come my mood ring on my third finger, right hand won't be considered a "treasure?"

BUSINESS TRIPS

BRUSSELS, Belgium (WNS) -Marriage specialist Marguerite Merck, 39, says that business executives who leave home for short trips throughout the European Common Market nations should limit their absences to 10 days a month. "Male or female, they return to a honeymoon atmosphere after short stays abroad," she said. But resentment frequently builds up between mates if business absences become too long or too frequent.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: May I respond to the man who said we should never try to save people who attempt suicide? You called him callous and unfeeling. Well, I guess that makes me callous and unfeeling, too. Furthermore, if you poll the medical personnel in hospitals, you'll discover the majority agree with me, not you.

I work in an emergency room of a large hospital. We see a lot of people who've tried to kill themselves. They O.D. on pills, shoot themselves in the head, or slash their wrists with razors. Most of them don't die. We spend a lot of time and energy and money saving those nuts.

Emergency rooms have enough patients — good people who want to live. Suicidal creeps cut into the quality of care for the emergency patients. In my opinion, the law should be changed. Would-be suicides should be given another dose of the same stuff they took when they came in. The world is crowded as it is. Why save a person who places no value on his own life? Whenever I read about a cop or a fireman who risks his neck crawling out on a window ledge to rescue some crock who threatens to jump, I do a slow burn. Screwy people just louse up the environment. Who needs 'em? — Not Cool, Just Honest

Dear Cool and Honest: You work in a hospital, Buddy? You should be working in a morgue where it doesn't matter whether or not you consider the people worth saving. Unfortunately, twisted characters like you can make a big difference. Obviously, your mind is not only closed, but nailed shut. I won't waste good advice on you.

• • •

Dear Ann: How much "understanding and patience" must a second wife have to prove she really loves her husband?

When I married Elmer he said his first wife was a liar, a cheat, and a lazy, no-good tramp. Everything rotten — she was it. Now I find he is meeting her after work to talk about the children. He is also taking her to lunch in little out-of-the-way places — again, to talk about the children. He takes off from work in the middle of the day to go to PTA meetings with her because he doesn't want to disappoint the children.

The children, incidentally, are 21, 20, 15 and 8 years of age. The three oldest are married. When I tell him I think he is handing me a line of garbage and that I am going to leave if he doesn't stop seeing his ex-wife, he begins to cry, falls to his knees and begs me to forgive him. Somebody has a screw loose and I'm beginning to think it's me. What do you think? — Suspicious

Dear Sus: Face it, lady. You are not going to win this one. Husbands who are unable to disconnect from ex-wives are incurable. You are fighting a losing battle.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I have a friend who begins every conversation with this — "I've been trying to get your line for an hour. Who've you been talking to?"

I always answer her question by naming the person and then I get mad at myself. After all, what business is it of hers? Also, it burns me up to think that she somehow has the notion that I should leave my line free in case she should decide to honor me with a call.

I'd like a suggestion from you as to what I should say when this nervy dame puts me on the spot like that. — Nonplussed

Dear Non: It is clearly none of that lady's business who you were talking to, and you should let her know it. The next time she asks, say the Queen of Sheba, Bobby Orr, or King Tut. She'll catch the drift.

• • •

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I must have caught my doctor on a bad day at my recent check-up. All I said was I thought my tongue was coated and suggested he look at it. He said, "Humph, all tongues are coated," and went on about his business. Don't doctors put stock in coated tongues anymore? — J.D.

The condition of the tongue surface can, indeed, indicate many problems — so many, in fact, that it becomes a poor gauge of general health. The surface is made up of many little elevations called "papillae" and the slightest irritation, perhaps from a recent heavily-spiced meal, can cause all sorts of irregularities and coatings. Cigarette smokers and mouth breathers have distinctive coatings. Lack of fluids, as with a fever, or excess perspiration or diarrhea can be reflected in tongue coatings. These coatings are much like one another.

The notion of the tongue as the universal indicator of health probably stems from the popular artist's conception of the physician with a tongue-depressor stuck in an apprehensive child's mouth. The depressor's chief purpose is to get the tongue out of the way to allow a better view of the tonsils, vocal chords and the mouth in general. The act of saying "ah" can help suppress the gagging instinct. The bright redness of the tongue, which occurs with serious anemia, is readily noted.

Notwithstanding it does appear that you may have caught your kindly physician on a bad day. We all have those.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have read of biofeedback being used to cure ear noises. Do you have any reoent information as to how worthwhile this is? I'm ready to try anything. — H.S.

Doctors who encounter this very common problem are usually as frustrated as the patients, because no treatment offers hope for significant results once specific causes (such as high blood pressure) are ruled out. So in a sense doctors, too, are ready to try any new method that cannot harm the patient. Biofeedback is one being investigated.

In a recent California study 41 patients with ear noises were treated with biofeedback. After 12 one-hour sessions, 4 reported their ear noises disappeared; 11 said they were much improved; 18 found slight improvement; only 8 reported no change. Most said they were able to sleep better and found they had to take less medicine for the ear noises.

But this is only one limited study, and no solid conclusions can be drawn from a single test. You might want to try it if you can locate a center using it. The value of the technique is still in the investigative stage and not widely used. I usually don't like to talk about treatments of uncertain results, particularly those which, like biofeedback, might not be available to people in their areas. But yours is not the first question I've gotten on the subject.

In biofeedback, the patient is electronically wired into a device that lets him try to consciously alter such physical symptoms as high blood pressure and headaches. Success or lack of success is usually displayed electronically as he does this.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 64 and eat an unpeeled apple a day. Since I started this I have had very good bowel movements. A friend told me this is too much, and that I will tear my bowels apart. Is this true? — H.G.

The roughage from the apple and peel will not tear your bowels. It might be just the bit of extra roughage you need for good bowel action. In any event, you are getting results so keep right on. Tell your misinformed friend to fly a kite.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have been advised to take 50,000 units of vitamin D for my arthritis. Is this daily dose wise? If not, why not? — Mrs. C.W.

I'm sure your doctor didn't tell you this. The daily requirement of vitamin D is 400 international units a day. Too much can produce a high level of blood calcium. This side effect can last for months after quitting the megadoses. One result of too much calcium is permanent kidney damage and stones.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: My problem isn't excessive perspiration. I'm a normal perspirer. Yet I have a terribly strong underarm odor. What can be done? — J.A.

• • •

Skin odor is caused by bacteria. Keep the bacteria away and the odors go away. Try a germicidal soap.

• • •

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Opening lead: ♣10

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

When this hand was over, West was certain declarer had seen his hand. How else could declarer know to avoid the finesse and drop his singleton king?

As good players know, the bidding can be very revealing. But so too can be a player's passes.

West's opening lead was excellent, and East took the first two tricks with the ace-king. At trick three East should have returned a trump, putting South in the position of having to make an uncomfortable guess. Instead East made a passive diamond return into dummy's ace-queen.

South won the trick in his hand with the king and led his jack of hearts, which he overtook with dummy's king. East won with the ace and returned a heart, which declarer won with the queen. Declarer then made the play that had West shaking his head, although it really was quite obvious.

Declarer led the ace of spades, dropping the king and claimed the contract. South knew West had to have the king of spades. East had passed in second position and had shown up with two aces and a king. He could not have the king of spades, nor a void in the suit. Odds favor a two-one split and happily for declarer, West held the singleton.

Women Break Barriers In Coal Mines

GILLETTE, Wyo. (AP) — They look tiny, perched in the cabs of huge earth movers towering several stories above the ground, but the women employed at the Cordero mine wheel their 170-ton loads with an ease Atlas might have envied.

"It doesn't take muscle, it takes skill," says Kathy Campbell, 27, one of five young women, two of them mothers, who operate giant machinery at the Sunoco Energy Development Co. facility a few miles south of Gillette.

At 127 pounds, her head barely reaching the middle of the giant tires on the mechanical monsters she operates, Mrs. Campbell doesn't fit the traditional picture of a hard-hat coal miner. As a matter of fact, she is the widowed mother of an 8-year-old son who is quite used to the notion that Mom is a professional driver of heavy equipment.

"Before I got this job I had never driven even a four-speed vehicle. I only drove an automatic shift," she says. "When I started on this big equipment, I had qualms. But there is a careful, thorough training program, and I did learn."

Mrs. Campbell's job sometimes affects her social life. On a recent date, her male companion asked the size of her paycheck.

"When he found out I was making more than he was, he was mad for the rest of the night," she recalls with a chuckle.

The starting wage for operators is $10 an hour. As the employee gains more experience and graduates to other equipment, the scale rises to more than $11 an hour. Both men and women operators work a 40-hour week and get the same pay.

Even a 5-foot-2 wisp of a woman finds size no handicap. Sue Lojek, 28, often has to have adjustments made so she can reach the pedals. But then she runs haulers, bulldozers or road graders with ease and assurance. Her supervisors report that she's so good at her work that she trains new operators, women and men.

"Men are more difficult to teach," she says, "because they feel they've done this kind of stuff before and a woman can't tell them anything. But they soon learn they don't know it all."

Mrs. Lojek, whose husband also works at the mine, has been working in the pit for two years. "I'm happy where I am," she says. "I'm happy I'm a coal miner."

"I don't think it's any harder on the women than on the men," she says. "The men get tired, too, by the end of the day. We all get the nasty jobs as well as the good jobs. Everybody takes a turn at each."

The Cordero mine is one of several tapping the vast energy source in the area. This almost treeless land in the Powder River Basin of northeastern Wyoming lies atop a coal seam that extends 100 to 125 miles, with a width of 3 to 4 miles. The surface earth can be removed to mine the coal and replaced later.

When SUNEDCO started digging dirt in July 1976, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Lojek and Ruth Ligget, 28, were among the first 30 persons to be hired.

As a senior operator, Mrs. Ligget drives haulers, scrapers, bulldozers and other heavy equipment. Mother of three boys, she says that what she is doing is "a normal job for a mother." She has worked alongside men in the coal pits for two years and sees nothing unusual about it any more.

Another operator, Kathy Hoffman, 22, was a secretary to Tim Richmond, the manager of reclamation and other environmental affairs at the mine. She advanced to computer operator and then took a whirl at driving the huge trucks. She feels at home inside the cab of her hauler, air-conditioned in summer, heated in winter.

"It doesn't feel like 170 tons at a clip," she confides. "It drives as if it held only 20 tons."

When she told a male friend she was going to tackle the big vehicles, he expressed doubt she could do it. This just gave her an extra incentive to succeed, she recalls.

The fifth woman working at Cordero is Carol Heidel, 27, who operates the huge trucks that move ore and earth from the mine. She is single, and before starting to work at the mine more than two years ago she worked in the engineering department of another coal mine nearby.

"There isn't any job that I can't handle here at the mine," Miss Heidel says. "Being a woman has little to do with whether you can handle one of these machines."

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Here's a hint for those of us who have a hard time scrubbing our backs while bathing.

Take an old nylon stocking and tie a knot near the center of it. Drop in a bar of soap and tie another knot on the other side of the soap.

Now just take hold of both ends of the stocking and kind of seesaw it across your back. Feels good! — Wayne

Does it ever! But for those of us who like a little more "scratch" to our scrubber, try taking a strip of nylon net and tie a bar of soap in the middle by simply folding the strip of net over the soap a couple of times and tying a knot on each side of the soap.

Nice, huh? — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
My husband and I put new springs on our garage door. After working a good part of the day adjusting the springs, trying to get the door to go all the way down, I called a salesman of garage doors.

He said to wax the wood frame that the door fits into.

Down went the door completely, as smooth as can be. — Margie Monroe

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
If you have a pet you'll certainly find my discovery helpful, especially since it's getting to be that time of year when pets shed their winter coats.

I found it almost impossible to sweep my kitchen floor as the cat hair blew from place to place.

I then found that if I wet the broom before sweeping, nothing blew around because it was all clinging to the broom! — W.J.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
Here is a helpful hint for those of you girls and women who wear eyeshadow.

If you lose your stick to put it on with, use a cotton swab. They work marvelously well.

If your eyeshadow box is too small for the lid to shut over the swab, cut it in half, or just throw it away and use a new one each time. — Karen Hansen, Age 10

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
I found a way to make my hanging basket or pots lighter in weight.

First, fill the pot one-fourth to one-half full of styrofoam pellets or styrofoam peanuts. Fill the rest of the way with potting soil and add your plant.

Now you have a lightweight plant and also good drainage. — Irene Krofcheck

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
I never throw away empty jars, such as pickles and mayonaise come in. I rinse them and set them aside.

When I have wet garbage or bones, I put them into one of the jars, screwing the lid on tightly and placing in my garbage can. No smell, no bugs and no cats or dogs digging into it. — Stephanie

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
Address envelopes to your away-from-home children and other relatives, and thumbtack the corner where the stamp will be placed onto your bulletin board.

When you find a clipping, snapshot, etc., you know would be of interest to that particular person, tuck it in the envelope.

When the moment arrives to write, you'll have several things of interest to send along. — Doris Tucker

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
With all the two-and three-piece outfits in style now, I found I needed to wash one piece of each set more than the other. This caused one piece to be more faded than the rest, thus not matching exactly.

My mother then suggested I always wash all pieces of the outfit each time I needed to wash one, whether they needed it or not.

Now all my outfits are evenly colored. — Linda

How true, especially for denim! — Heloise

Votes Of Area Representatives On Key Matters Recorded

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes March 8 through March 14. There were no Senate votes.

WAGE COUNCIL The House passed, 242 for and 175 against, a bill (HR 2283) extending the life of the Council of Wage and Price Stability for one year, increasing the council's annual budget to $8.48 million and expanding its staff from 39 to 233. The council, a White House adjunct, monitors President Carter's wage and price guidelines. It lacks authority to impose wage and price controls. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa., a supporter, said: "A vote against this bill amounts to throwing up your hands in despair — or else putting all your chips on a very restrictive fiscal and monetary policy with all of the accompanying risks or recession or worse. To me the choice seems very clear."

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent, said: "Only in the wonderland that is the Congress...could we possibly think we are addressing the problem of inflation by not only extending...an agency that is virtually useless and ought to be abolished, but by increasing its budget by 300 per cent...and its staff from 39 permanent employes to 233."

Members voting "yea" wanted to keep the Council on Wage and Price Stability in operation.

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, Rob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, James Wright, D-12, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Mickey Leland, D-18, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Phil Gramm, D-6, Bill Archer, R-7, Marvin Leath, D-11, Jack Hightower, D-13, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Kent Hance, D-19, Tome Loeffler, R-12, Manuel Lujan, R-1 (N.M.), Ron Paul, R-22, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "nay."

Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-20, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.) did not vote.

COMMITTEE OVERLAP The House voted, 208 for and 200 against, to create a "select committee" whose mission is to examine the House committee structure and recommend ways to make it less cumbersome. With an estimated annual budget of $500,000, the new panel will address the problem of overlapping jurisdictions that makes it difficult for the House to home in on national problems such as energy and inflation. In recent years the House has made similar attempts at streamlining itself, but with little success.

Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., a supporter, said "I hope" that as a result of the select committee's work "we have a more efficient committee structure."

Opponents generally throught this new committee itself an example of the bureaucratic overlapping it seeks to combat. "Why do we need to create a new committee to do exactly the same things we gave the Committee on Rules more money to do less than two weeks ago?" asked Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif.

Members voting "yea" favored creation of a special committee on committees.

Hall, Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Wright, Wyatt, de la Garza, Leland, Gonzalez, Kazen and Frost voted "yea."

Lujan, Collins, Roberts, Gramm, Archer, Pickle, Leath, Hightower, White, Stenholm, Hance, Loeffler and Paul voted "nay."

BALANCED BUDGET In a vote of 201 for and 199 against, the House decided to not allow a budget-balancing amendment to be offered to the debt ceiling bill. The effect of the vote was to turn away the proposed amendment, which sought to require Congress to balance the federal budget beginning in fiscal 1981, unless by a two-thirds majority Congress permitted a deficit in a given fiscal year. this vote came prior to passage of HR 2534, which raised the national debt ceiling to $830 billion through September. HR 2534 was sent to the Senate.

Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Wright, Gonzalez and Frost voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Gramm, Pickle, Leath, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White, Stenholm, Lujan, Runnels, Leland, Hance, Loeffler, Paul and Kazen voted "nay."

Brooks did not vote.

Texas AFL-CIO President Says Workers Bearing Inflation Cost

AUSTIN (AP) — Harry Hubbard, president of the Texas AFL-CIO, said Tuesday workers are bearing the brunt of inflation but cannot be expected to do so much longer.

He said corporations are rolling up excessive profits while workers "are the only ones losing" in the fight against inflation.

"At this time we are asking all labor councils to put into effect a price watch operation," Hubbard said at a Capitol news conference.

The 31 councils in Texas have been asked to report any notable inflationary increases, as well as suspected price gouging or fixing, he said. "All we're saying is that wage earners will not continue to see that happen and sit idly by," the labor leader said.

Hubbard said the recent Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers contract complied with the Carter Administration's voluntary 7 percent wage and price guideline, but energy profits are skyrocketing.

The current Teamsters union negotiations will probably "signal" whether labor is willing to continue voluntary compliance, he said.

"We certainly would like to see wage-price guidelines work," Hubbard said.

The union official added he would support mandatory guidelines if business and labor shared their effects equally.

"Everybody has a stake in this. It's not just labor," Hubbard said.

Since Carter announced his voluntary program last October, labor "has lost — in real after-tax wages for the average worker — almost 1.5 percent," Hubbard said.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I have been drawing my Social Security benefits for over two years now. I have arthritis and it is hard for me to get out to do my shopping, so I do a lot of purchasing by mail. I have never had any problems with any company that I have dealt with, but it will come some day. Are there any laws to protect people who order by mail or do you have any tips for us? — C.D.

Ordering merchandise through the mail can be great because it is very convenient and in some cases can save you money. Since you have never had a problem you are very lucky. Trying to straighten out a problem with a mail-order company can be very costly and time-consuming. However, the Federal Trade Commission has a rule that gives you some rights when you shop by mail.

First, you have the right to know when you can expect your merchandise to be shipped. If an ad or brochure says that the manufacturer will rush your item to you in less than one week, the manufacturer must do this. If no date has been set, you have the right to have your merchandise shipped within 30 days.

You have the right to cancel your order. If the seller can't ship the merchandise to you in the stated time or within 30 days, he must give you the chance to cancel your order and get all your money back. The seller must notify you of a delay and give you a free means to reply (for example, a postage-paid postcard).

If the shipping delay is 30 days or less, you have the right to cancel the order and get your money back, the right to agree to the new shipping date or the right not to answer. If you don't answer, the seller can assume you agree to the shipping delay. If the shipping delay is more than 30 days, you must give your express consent to the delay. Otherwise, the seller must return your money at the end of the first 30 days of the delay.

You have the right to get all your money back if you cancel. The seller must mail your refund to you within seven business days after you cancel your purchase. Where there is a credit sale, the seller has one billing cycle to adjust your account. The rule does not apply to services such as mail-order photo finishing, magazine subscriptions and other serial deliveries except for the initial shipment, mail-order seeds or growing plants, collection-delivery orders, credit orders where the buyer's account is not charged prior to shipment for merchandise and sales under negative option plans such as book clubs where you must notify the seller of your intent not to purchase.

If you receive merchandise through the mail which you did not order, federal law says you may consider it a gift and keep it without paying for it. There are only two kinds of merchandise that can be legally sent through the mail without a person's consent: free samples which are clearly marked as such and merchandise mailed by charitable organizations asking for contributions. In all other instances, it is illegal for a manufacturer to send you merchandise through the mail unless you have previously requested it.

Here are Heartline's tips for mail-order shopping:

1. Never send cash through the mail. Always use a check or money order so you can have a record of when you sent your order and when the company received it.

2. Make sure there is a guaranteed delivery date. If you are ordering for a special date, you want to make sure the item is received on time.

3. Find out the company's policy on returns. If it is not mentioned in the ad, write the company first and ask what it is.

4. Beware of exaggerated claims on the product or price. Look the ad over carefully. If it seems too good to be true, it probably is.

5. Check out the company. If you do not know anything about the company, do not hesitate to check it out with a Better Business Bureau.

6. Keep a record on your order. Make sure you also keep the name and address of the company with which you are dealing.

7. Do not rely solely on the picture. Note the description, size, weight, color and content. Be sure to include this along with the order number.

8. If you will not accept a substitute, indicate this on your order.

9. Make sure you give the company complete information. Be explicit. Make sure you include all information about your order.

10. Be sure to enclose shipping, handling and tax charges with your order.

RELEASE SOUGHT

NEW YORK (AP) — The lawyer for suspected West German terrorist Kristina Berster says that on Thursday he will ask an immigration appeals board in Washington to permit his client's release on bail. Miss Berster, 28, was charged in Burlington, Vt., with violating immigration laws by trying to enter this country illegally by walking across the border July 16 from Canada to the vicinity of Alburg, Vt. She was convicted last October of using a bogus passport.

London Strike Retards Mail Delivery

LONDON (AP) — Eight million letters piled up in London Tuesday because of an unofficial work slowdown by the capital's mailmen.

The Post Office asked Londoners, and their correspondents abroad, not to mail anything in or for London "unless it is absolutely essential."

Deliveries were already four or five days late, parcels were being held up even longer, mail from abroad was stalled at Heathrow Airport, and London's bulk second-class mail service was suspended.

The Post Office Workers Union wants a 24-percent increase, but has been offered 12 percent in talks that continue this week.

A London mailman's basic pay is about $119 a week, but overtime is heavy and earnings average more than $164.

Tax Investment Credit Studied In House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office said Tuesday that a large portion of the $19 billion-a-year investment tax credit is wasted because it does not stimulate productive new business investment.

The biggest share of that waste is attributable to the expectation that "many of the investments for which the credit is claimed would have been made anyway, and most likely in the same manner and at the same time," GAO analyst Harry S. Havens told a House panel.

In addition, he said, some of the tax credit is wasted because it is not confined to investments that produce income but to such items as office decorations, executive perquisites and beverage bars.

Despite these and other problems, Havens told the House Ways and Means subcommittee on oversight, the investment tax credit "compares favorably with its major alternatives."

The credit, first enacted in 1962, allows a business to cut its federal income taxes by 10 percent of the cost of new or used machinery and equipment. In effect, the treasury pays the first 10 percent of the price of such purchases.

The Carter administration estimates the investment tax credit will cost the treasury $19 billion in lost revenues in 1980. That figure does not take into account any additional taxes that likely would be generated by purchase of equipment that qualifies for the credit.

The $19 billion is as much as President Carter proposes to spend next year for all the nation's foreign aid and energy projects.

Havens told the subcommittee that the share of gross national product earmarked for private domestic investment has increased only slightly since the investment credit was enacted.

That evidence alone may not support a conclusion that the credit is of no benefit, Havens said. But it is "consistent with the view that the credit merely subsidizes investment which would have been undertaken in any event and, therefore, the credit has had no stimulating effect on investment spending."

Havens said any congressional review of the investment credit should include a study of alternatives. He listed three major substitutes and found problems with each:

—A direct government payment to business could ensure that the money goes only to those firms that purchase equipment that would benefit the economy.

But, he cautioned, "Official review and approval of investment decisions by private enterprise is more-overt government involvement than has normally been associated with the mixed economy in the United States."

—A general reduction in corporate income taxes would minimize government "interference" in business decision-making, Havens said. But some businesses might use the additional net income to increase dividends rather than buy new machinery.

—Liberalizing the depreciation allowance, which would permit businesses an even-faster recovery of money spent for machinery, would dilute the stimulation of an investment credit by spreading out the benefit over a period of several years. Depreciation is more beneficial to larger firms than to smaller businesses.

New Plant Construction Expected To Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the gloomy economic scene of recent months, ripe with news of oil price increases, inflation and talk of recession, business spending on new plants and equipment may be rising sharply soon, one economic consulting house suggests.

"The prevailing evidence continues to suggest that the preconditions for an acceleration in capital spending are firmly in place," says A. Gary Shilling Co. in a recent report.

Is a capital spending boom almost upon us, and why is capital spending worth watching? Here are some questions and answers about capital spending:

Q. Why is capital spending important?

A. When inflation hits the double-digit range, as it has recently, attention increasingly turns to worries over the future. That's where plant and equipment spending comes in. New, or renewed, industrial plants fight inflation by improving the nation's productivity. Industries which don't rebuild inefficient plants face the prospect of rising production costs and shrinking profits.

Q. What has been the spending trend in recent years?

A. According to the Conference Board, a business-sponsored research organization, 1978 capital spending by the nation's 1,000 largest manufacturers ran 11.8 percent ahead of 1977. The main exception was the steel industry, where "outlays lagged for the second year in a row, showing a 24 percent drop from their 1975-76 record."

Q. What's the outlook?

A. The Conference Board has predicted that capital spending will rise 8 percent in 1979, while capital appropriations — or authorizations to spend money in the future — will advance by a slim 1.3 percent. At Philadelphia's Provident National Bank, meanwhile, economists are predicting a slowdown in capital spending plans if the economy cools this year. Yet, no "broad-based capital spending decline" is in sight, and growth in business investment will be "outperforming the economy as a whole by a good margin" in 1979.

Shilling's analysts also are optimistic. Business has been "very cautious" since the 1974-1975 recession. But factories now are running at an estimated 87 percent of capacity, "well above the threshold rate of 85 percent that historically has fostered a change in business caution toward stepping up plant and equipment outlays."

"The need for new capacity is usually first recognized at the division level" of corporations, and "many of our industrial clients at this level have been screaming for added capacity," the Shilling report says. In addition, they say, rising labor costs have given "business the incentive to slow the rapid pace of hiring that has occurred over the last few years and (to) step up investment in new facilities and equipment."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are considering depositing about one-third of our stocks with a brokerage firm, for the purpose of buying stock options. By doing this, we can realize a 10 percent to 12 percent return on our investments, including dividends and option premiums. We have confidence in the gentleman who will manage our account.

But, because we are within a year of retirement and cannot afford to lose any of our assets, we would appreciate your opinion before we make this move.

A. The only way you should even think about dabbling in the option market is by "writing covered call options." Everything else in the option markets has to be counted as risky. That may be fine for people who can afford to take risks, in hopes of reaping big financial rewards. But it's obvious that is not for you.

You mention buying options and collecting premiums. You can't do both on the same deal. I urge you to study the groundrules of the option game, before you make any move into it.

You can collect a premium by selling a call option contract on 100 shares of a stock you own. That call gives the buyer of the contract the right to buy your 100 shares at a specified price within a specified period of time. The person who bought the call option hopes the stock's price will rise before the call expires and becomes worthless.

This is called a "covered" call option, because it involves stock you own. Selling "naked" call options, on stock you don't own, is really no different than rolling dice.

Q. My husband and I are semi-retired, on a combined income of $600 a month. We put our life savings of $40,000 in a six-month savings certificate. But we understand that those certificates could be terminated this year or next.

What would you suggest as an alternative to six-month certificates to supplement our income?

A. It has to be counted as most unlikely that insured six-month savings certificates will disappear in the foreseeable future. The interest rates on those certificates may come down. Just recently, the maximum rate on new six-month certificates was trimmed by about nine-tenths of 1 percent by edict of the federal regulators of banks and savings and loan associations.

But, as I put this through the typewriter, it's still possible to get about 9.7 percent on newly-issued certificates of that type.

So, until rates fall a whole lot further, those certificates should still appeal to many people. You can do as well with 26-week Treasury bills and a bit better with some money market mutual funds.

Realistically, you should wait until — maybe, "if" — interest rates do tumble and then shop around to see what's available at that time.

• • •

Q. My brokerage firm has recently started a "custodial service charge" for their customers who are not active in the market. Being a small investor, my charge is $18 a year. The dividends from the stocks I leave with the firm amount to $130 a year.

Should I continue to let the broker keep my stock and pay the charge? Or would I be better off holding the stock certificates myself?

A. You'll be $18 a year better off, after telling your broker to have your stock certificates registered in your name and delivered to you. You should then keep your certificates in a safe deposit box. Even if you have to rent a small lock box, the cost should be less than $18 a year.

Your brokerage firm — along with many others — seems determined to jettison small and medium-sized investors who don't do a lot of in-and-out trading in the market.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three loans totaling $80.5 million have been approved by the World Bank for development projects in South Korea, Paraguay and Tunisia.

A $29 million loan will support the development of South Korea's electronics industry and will specifically benefit the Korean Institute of Electronics Technology, the international lending institution said in a statement released here.

Forecast Sees Drastic Economic Growth Drop

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A sharp drop in the nation's economic growth through the next two years is predicted in the Wharton School's Econometric Forecast for 1979 and 1980.

The forecast, published this week in the Wharton Magazine by the University of Pennsylvania, said the nation's inflation rate is expected to ease somewhat after mid-year, but said the unemployment rate could climb to nearly 6.3 percent by the end of 1979.

"Reviewing the recent mixture of indications of weakness and strength in the economy, we feel compeled to conclude that a sharp falloff in growth is imminent," the six Wharton Econometric Forecasting associates wrote in their report.

They based their prediction on factors such as the burst of price increases during the past few months, developments in world petroleum markets following the events in Iran, and recent movement in monthly indicators.

"For 1980 the prospect of continued slow growth, high inflation and rising unemployment in a presidential election year poses major questions regarding the (Carter administration's) policy outlook.

"While the administration continues to maintain that it will not cut taxes until inflation subsides and will not resort to mandatory wage-price controls, neither of these options can be ruled out," the forecast said.

The Wharton forecasters' outlook for the remainder of 1979 and 1980 calls for the real gross national product to grow by 3.2 percent in 1979 despite the expectation of annual growth rates below 1 percent in the second and third quarters and below 2 percent in the fourth.

The analysis said slowing agricultural price increases, a decline in the growth rate of retail sales and a stable dollar are all expected to contribute to reduced inflation.

"Our forecast for 1979 is not a recession forecast. It appears that the growth rate will exceed 3 percent and that the price deflector of gross national product will be about 7.5 percent. Unemployment should rise roughly above 6 percent for most of the year, but not nearly as high as 6.5 percent," Dr. Lawrence R. Klein wrote in a separate Forecasters Assessment of (Carter) Administration Budget Proposals.

"But for 1980 the outlook is not very favorable, even if present policies are supplemented by another tax cut. The Wharton Forecast looks for a considerable weakening of activity in 1980, with growth between 1 and 2 percent, unemployment rising to 7 percent by year end, and inflation less than 7 percent," he said.

West Germany Notes Surplus In February Trade

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany registered a February trade surplus of 2.383 billion deutsche marks ($1.3 billion), up 16 percent from 2.05 billion mark ($1.1 billion) surplus in January but down 15 percent from a surplus of 2.828 billion marks ($1.5 billion) in February 1978, the federal statistics office reported Tuesday.

The February trade results had been expected in the foreign exchange market and didn't affect the dollar or deutsche mark, both being more oriented to results of the meeting of oil producers in Geneva, according to dealers.

Figures released by the statistics office showed that West German February exports rose 0.5 percent from the January level to 23.226 billion marks ($12.6 billion) and were 7.8 percent above the level in the same month of 1978.

February imports, at 20.843 billion marks ($11.3 billion), were off 0.5 percent from the January level but up 11.3 percent from February 1978.

Officials at the Economics Ministry in Bonn warned against drawing any conclusions from the still preliminary and seasonally unadjusted figures, but they said the numbers appeared to be within the government's target of boosting exports, in real terms, by 6 percent while imports rose 7 percent.

WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

There are lots of different investment vehicles out there competing for the investor's dollar but the least popular one has to be the stock market. It's understandable because almost everybody equated the stock market to the Dow Jones industrials and that indicator hasn't made any real progress in 14 years. Of course, this looks even worse relative to the success of all those collectibles and the fact that standing still with inflation going bananas means a steady loss of buying power.

To make our point, we will not belabor the fact that the Dow Industrials do not represent the stock market, that there have been lots of big winners since 1965, and that there are buyers for those winners which is not always true with many collectibles. Anyway, let's forget our market analyst defensive arguments against the "stock market stinks" school of thought. The point is, the stock market is unpopular and out of favor and thus holds very attractive opportunities long term.

The values available in the market have not gone unrecognized nor have the many and serious problems facing this nation. The improved action of the broad market the past several weeks reflects the fact that stocks are being supported by a vast sea of institutional cash. Some of this money has been willing to buy selected issues, particularly those which benefit from inflation for a while such as metals, chemicals, oils and other natural resource issues. Last week buying broadened into a few standard growth stocks and other blue chips but the performance overall had a mixed tone and both bulls and bears could claim victories.

We feel that money has been willing to buy either those companies which benefit from inflation or which have some special features, usually a unique product and good management, which allow them to thrive despite rampant inflation. The key fundamental question as to when we might see the start of a real bull market is tied to the economy, interest rates, and inflation.

If interest rates and inflation take another kick upward, which we believe to be the more likely scenario, additional churning at least or more likely another 780-800 test and base building would be needed. For traders, we are now in a hedged position as we believe there is enough momentum to carry the good actors up some more before stocks are overbought enough to bring another down leg. Long-term investors should continue to accumulate during weakness.

Teen Drinking Poses Problem Worldwide

LONDON (AP) — Some Soviet kids start hitting the vodka before they're 10. In Britain there are almost twice as many teen-age drunks as 12 years ago, and in West Germany laws banning booze sales to those under 16 are widely ignored.

An Associated Press survey shows many European countries are now deeply worried by the ravages of alcohol among their young people and are spending millions of dollars trying to do something about it.

The experience is similar to that of the United States where drinking ages were lowered at the time voting ages were several years ago, but many states have now raised drinking ages again.

Some European countries claim to be making progress in the battle against teen-age drunkenness and some say the problem is not as serious in their countries as elsewhere.

But others appear to have little success halting a trend that experts say is fueled by a diversity of factors.

These include increasing affluence among the young, an oft-found feeling that modern life is futile, a desire to ape adult drinking — itself on the rise in some places — and the false equation of alcohol with maturity and sophistication.

Here is a country-by-country report:

•AUSTRIA: The health ministry says the situation is not as bad as in other European countries or the United States. But it's bad enough for Austrian authorities periodically to run anti-drinking publicity campaigns that include trips to hospitals treating alcoholics.

•BRITAIN: Youngsters swigging cheap wine from the bottle are a common sight on London streets. The Royal College of Psychiatrists said last month that teen-age drunkenness has almost doubled in the last 12 years, to 4,805 convictions a year. It quoted teachers as saying alcohol is replacing drugs as a social problem and is believed to be behind the upsurge of pupils' attacks on teachers.

It also said the nation had 300,000 alcoholics of all ages in a population of 56 million and that Britons of all ages are drinking almost twice as much as 30 years ago. Dr. Griffith Edwards of the Institute of Psychiatry said major factors behind increased drinking were "less job satisfaction and more money."

The Church of Scotland said 98 percent of boys and 96 percent of girls in Glasgow, hard-drinking Scotland's largest city, regularly drink at age 17. The law, as throughout Britain, prohibits sale of alcohol to those under 18, but it is widely flouted.

Jenny Crick of the Independent Broadcasting Authority said law limits booze ads on British television. But an estimated $132 million is spent each year publicizing alcohol on TV and elsewhere.

•CZECHOSLOVAKIA: A law to be enacted shortly will ban advertising of alcohol and allow removal of drink displays from shop windows. It will also prohibit sales of all alcohol at youth-only events and allow only beer and wine to be served at mixed-age events, and only low-alcohol beer at sports events and in factories and office canteens. The present law bans sale of alcohol to persons under 18.

Prague has an anti-alcohol center for youths where doctors speak on the dangers of drink and primary schools run classes on the subject.

•DENMARK: The Danes have few restrictions on drinking except a ban on sales to those under 18. However, a police spokesman said violations of the law probably run to "thousands every day." The country runs an information campaign on alcohol problems.

•FRANCE: A government committee on alcoholism said drinking among youngsters declined in 1960-1968 but now appears to be increasing. But a spokesman commented: "Young people do not seem to be drinking more than in previous generations." The committee organizes lectures on alcoholism and has banned serving alcohol at school lunches to those under 15. The move raised eyebrows in wine-drinking France.

C NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal March 28, 1979

•IRELAND: Hard-drinking Ireland last year banned all advertising of alcoholic drinks on its state-run radio and television.

•NORWAY: From 1974 to 1975 the government spent $2 million on anti-alcohol campaigns, much of it in the form of newspaper ads.

•SOVIET UNION: Soviet officials have expressed concern in recent years about heavy drinking by teen-agers. The Education Ministry's newspaper said last year that 90 percent of Soviet alcoholics had their first drink before age 15 and one-third before age 10. It said a 5 percent rise in alcohol consumption was largely attributable to youngsters at schools and technical colleges. TV and newspapers regularly appeal to parents to set a good example by moderating their own drinking.

•SWITZERLAND: Education on the dangers of alcohol is part of the everyday curriculum in Swiss schools. Advertising for hard liquor is banned from television and radio.

•SWEDEN: Parliament decided in 1976 to lower the voting age from 20 to 18 but kept the age at which youngsters can buy hard liquor, wine and strong beer at 20. The state liquor monopoly runs a widespread publicity campaign warning of the dangers of drink. Stockholm schoolchildren interviewed in a poll this month said they had no difficulty getting older persons to buy them drink and the poll showed nine out of 10 15-year-olds drank regularly.

•WEST GERMANY: It is illegal to sell alcohol to those under 18 and those between 16 and 18 can be served drink in bars and restaurants only when with an adult. But the Ministry of Youth, Family and Health said the laws are widely disobeyed. The ministry has been running a TV and press campaign to reduce the social prestige youngsters attach to alcohol.

Americans Profess Ignorance On SALT Details, Distrust Soviets

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans overwhelmingly favor the idea of a new treaty limiting nuclear weapons, but most say they just don't know enough to have a position on the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now being negotiated, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

And they remain doubtful about whether the Soviet Union can be trusted to live up to the requirements of a new treaty.

Seventy-one percent of those questioned said they favor "a new agreement between the United States and Russia which would limit nuclear weapons." That's about the same level of support for the concept of a new SALT treaty — without reference to a particular pact — as was found in the October AP-NBC News survey and is down 10 points from last month's finding.

Eighteen percent were opposed to such an agreement and 11 percent were not sure.

But public opinion is much less certain on the proposed SALT II treaty now being negotiated by this country and the U.S.S.R. Officials have said that most of the pact has been worked out and that signing ceremonies could come within months.

Seventy-nine percent of those interviewed March 19-20 said they have not learned enough about the proposed SALT II pact to form an opinion on it.

Among those who have made up their minds, supporters outnumber opponents by a two-to-one margin. Thirteen percent support SALT II, 6 percent oppose it and 2 percent were not sure.

Contradictory currents run through public perceptions on SALT-related topics.

As has been true in the past, the public doesn't trust the Soviet Union. Nearly two-thirds — 64 percent — say Russia cannot be trusted to live up to agreements. Only 26 percent expect the Soviets to live up to international pacts. Ten percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed nationwide were not sure.

But Americans do think a new treaty limiting nuclear weapons — but not specifically SALT II — would strengthen U.S. security.

Fifty percent agree such limits would be beneficial, while 28 percent said they would weaken U.S. security. Twenty-two percent were not sure.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all persons with telephones across the country because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way simply because of sample error. That is, if one could talk to all adults in the country, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could vary from other polls because of differences in the wording of questions, timing of interviews or the method of interviewing.

Questions Asked By Pollsters

Here are some of the questions asked on the AP-NBC News poll:

1. Do you favor or oppose a new agreement between the United States and Russia which would limit nuclear weapons?
2. Do you think any such agreement limiting both sides' weapons would strengthen our national security or weaken it?
3. At the present time, the United States and the Soviet Union are close to reaching agreement on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, usually called SALT II. Have you already heard or read enough about it to have an opinion? (If yes) Do you favor or oppose this new SALT agreement?
4. For the past few years, the United States and Russia have had a policy of trying to reach agreements which will relax tensions between them. Do you think the Russians can be trusted to live up to such agreements or don't you think so?

ABC Takes Eight Of Top 10 Positions In Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — It looks as if everything, or nearly everything, that ABC tries succeeds; very little of what NBC offers the prime-time television viewer seems to work.

Item: Ten of ABC's 23 prime-time programs in the week ending March 25 were reruns, and seven of those 10 were among the 20 most-watched shows of the week.

Item: The premiere episode of "Harris and Company" on NBC, starring Bernie Casey, was the week's lowest-rated show, and four other programs introduced by NBC after the first of the year — "Sweepstakes," "Cliffhangers," "Mrs. Columbo" and "Turnabout," were among the dozen least-watched.

Item: ABC continued to score with new series. "13 Queens Boulevard" was seventh in the week's ratings, "Angie" ninth and "The Ropers" No. 11

Item: NBC failed to score despite critical acclaim for a couple of major productions. "Sooner or Later," a movie endorsed by the National Education Association, was No. 47 in the ratings, the concluding chapter of the "Studs Lonigan" miniseries No. 53.

Those developments contributed to another runaway for ABC in the networks' ratings competition, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

ABC listed eight of the week's Top 10 programs, and compiled a rating of 21.6. CBS was second at 19.2 and NBC third, for the sixth week in a row, at 14. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 21.6 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to ABC.

No. 1 among programs was a repeat of "Three's Company," followed by reruns of "Mork and Mindy" and "Laverne and Shirley." All three are from ABC.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 31.3. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 31.3 percent saw at least part of the program.

CBS' best for the week was "60 Minutes," fourth in the ratings, and "Little House in the Prairie," No. 16, was tops for NBC.

Three of the five lowest-rated programs were on NBC, No. 62 Big Event-"Superstunt II," No. 65 "Weekend" and No. 66 "Harris and Company." CBS' "Married: The First Year" was 63rd, and a rerun of "What's Happening" on ABC was 64th.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 31.3 representing 23.3 million homes, "Mork and Mindy," 30.6 or 22.8 million, "Laverne and Shirley," 29.2 or 21.8 million, all ABC; "60 Minutes," 28.7 or 21.4 million, CBS; "Happy Days," 27.7 or 20.6 million, Movie-"The Ten Commandments," 27.4 or 20.4 million, "13 Queens Boulevard," 26.6 or 19.8 million, "Eight is Enough," 26.6 or 19.7 million, and "Angie," 26.3 or 19.6 million, all ABC, and "All in the Family," 25.1 or 18.7 million.

The next 10 shows:

"The Ropers," ABC; "You're the Greatest, Charlie Brown," CBS; "Charlie's Angels," ABC; "Dallas" and "Alice," both CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC; "One Day at a Time," Movie-"The Wizard of Oz" and "WKRP in Cincinnati," all CBS, and "Barney Miller," ABC.

RETURN TO WORK

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cuyahoga County sheriff's deputies ended a sick-call job action Tuesday and returned to work after receiving pay raises averaging $600 a year. "It's not what we wanted, but we're getting more than anybody else who works for the county," said Robert J. Buehner, head of the Cuyahoga County Sheriff's Employees Association.

Michelle Marvin Denies Cheating On Lee

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin, winding up her rebuttal testimony, said Tuesday that during her six-year affair with actor Lee Marvin she never slept with another man.

"During that time, when you and Mr. Marvin were separated, was there any other man in your life?" asked her attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

"No," she answered firmly.

"Was there ever any sexual affair?" Mitchelson asked.

"No," Miss Marvin replied.

Marvin's attorney had implied throughout the case that the former showgirl may have had other affairs while Marvin was out of town making movies.

Miss Marvin is suing the actor for $1.8 million, claiming that's half the amount he earned during their six-year love affair that ended in 1970.

The judge in the case has said that all testimony in the long trial must end today.

Before concluding his direct examination of Miss Marvin, Mitchelson asked her about the actor's allegation that she offered to get out of his life if he would pay her $50,000 or, later, $100,000.

"I never offered to get out of his life for any reason," she said.

The lawyer asked about another claim — that she asked Marvin to give her $10,000 to $20,000 a month to leave him and go to Europe.

"I never offered to go anywhere, whether he would support me or not," she said.

"Did Mr. Marvin ever ask you to get out of his life?" asked Mitchelson.

"Yes," said Miss Marvin. "On a few occasions, when he would have a lot to drink." But not when he was sober, she said.

Mitchelson, attempting to impeach the testimony of Charley Wynn, wife of actor Keenan Wynn, had Miss Marvin describe an incident in which Wynn was arrested for drunken driving on the way home from Marvin's.

Mrs. Wynn had testified that her husband never got drunk to the point of losing control. Miss Marvin said Wynn left their house on a Christmas Eve and was stopped by a roadblock because of a landslide.

"Lee had asked him not to drive," she recalled. "There was a roadblock. He got out of his car, went over and stuck his head in a police car, and they put handcuffs on him."

She said she called Mrs. Wynn to report the incident and ask her to come and get her husband.

"She was furious and said, 'Let him stay in jail,'" Miss Marvin recalled. "She used profanity."

Actress Makes Best Of Small Role In Telecast Of 'Richard II'

NEW YORK (AP) — For Dame Wendy Hiller, playing the brief role of the Duchess of York in "Richard II" was "a fascinating bit to do" but "not very demanding except on the knee."

The duchess, who appears in two scenes near the end of the play, first quarrels violently with her husband, who wants to turn in their would-be traitor son. Then she bursts in on Bolingbroke — who has just deposed the king — and pleads with him on bended knee until he agrees to pardon her offspring.

"I found it quite fascinating, because as Sir John Gielgud has always said, when you play a Shakespearean role, it's so immediate, you plunge right in," Dame Wendy said in a telephone interview from her country home in Buckinghamshire, England.

"And you certainly plunge right in with the Duchess of York," she said. "Shakespeare has created a husband and wife who spend their time screaming at each other and are very happy doing so."

Her warm and energetic portrayal is just one in a series of outstanding performances that makes this "Richard II" easily the best production so far in the BBC-Time Life Television complete Shakespeare cycle. It will be shown at 7 p.m. today on Channel 5 in Lubbock.

DAME WENDY HILLER

Richard is played by Derek Jacobi, best known to American audiences as the title character in the British television series "I, Claudius." Jacobi's Richard starts as a preening, whimsical monarch who grows in tragic stature as he loses first his kingdom and ultimately his life.

He is pitted against a worthy adversary — the Bolingbroke of Jon Finch, who has appeared in such films as "Death On the Nile" and Alfred Hitchcock's "Frenzy." Finch will also be seen next season in the two other Shakespeare plays in which Bolingbroke figures, "Henry IV, Part One" and "Henry IV, Part Two."

Sir John Gielgud, in his youth a famous Richard, portrays the aged John of Gaunt. Before he dies in Act Two, he gets the play's most famous speech, the one describing England as "this blessed plot."

Dame Wendy's sparring partner, the Duke of York, is splendidly played by Charles Gray.

When she first appears, the duchess is sewing by her hearth — a sharp contrast to the scenes of fighting and political maneuvering that have preceded.

"Shakespeare knew what he was doing putting a domestic scene in among the war and strife to provide a let-up between intrigues," Dame Wendy said. "It's very telling, because it shows the effects of all the turmoil on one household.

"It also gives Richard and Henry a time offstage so they can build up again for the last scenes."

This marks the first time Dame Wendy has done Shakespeare on television, but she has been performing his works throughout her distinguished career — starting at age 14 when she directed "Macbeth" at her private school and also played the First Witch.

A star of the Old Vic in London, she took time out during World War II to tour munitions factories as Viola in "Twelfth Night."

In the United States, she is best known for her work in films. She was Eliza Doolittle to Leslie Howard's Henry Higgins in Shaw's "Pygmalion" and won a 1958 Oscar as best supporting actress for "Separate Tables."

The first season of the Shakespeare cycle continues in two weeks with "Measure for Measure."

BAIL DENIED TRIO

BOSTON (AP) — Three Boston men whose convictions for the slaying of Harvard football player Andrew Puopolo were overturned by the state Supreme Judicial Court have been ordered held without bail until a new trial. Richard S. Allen, 35, Leon Easterling, 43, and Edward J. Scares, 35, were denied bail Monday and ordered transferred from Walpole state prison to the Charles Street Jail by Suffolk Superior Court Judge Edward H. Bennett Jr.

Oglala Sioux Plan Indian TV Station

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Despite some problems with money and manpower, the Ogala Sioux Tribe still expects to launch the nation's first television station on an Indian reservation.

"The project may be on a backburner," said Jerry Matthews, an attorney for the tribe. "But it's not dead."

As proposed, Oglala Sioux Broadcasting Co. would broadcast programs in English and Lakota, the Sioux native tongue, for the 14,000 residents of Pine Ridge, the nation's second largest reservation.

The project had been headed by Tim Giago, a former television producer in Rapid City, who had predicted the station would be in operation by this September in Pine Ridge, the nation's second largest reservation.

Giago shepherded applications through the Federal Communications Commission, ordered equipment for the station, and began a training program for technicians and on-air personnel.

"We've had problems with our CETA funds and Tim decided to quit instead of waiting them out," Matthews said Tuesday.

"I think the crisis came when our tribal treasurer said we wouldn't put any more money into the program," he said. "He said our general fund just couldn't carry it."

Matthews said a $100,000 grant from the U.S. Labor Department is still being withheld because of what he called paperwork problems.

"We still expect to set the station up," he said. "We recently received a bunch of equipment here at the village."

But first, the tribe must find a new communications director.

"Anytime you have an organization run by only one person, you can expect the sort of problems we've had," Matthews said. "This is a recent development for us and we're still reacting.

"So now we're looking for qualified people to run the station for us," he said.

Ranchers' Libel Suit Voided

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Andrew Bogue was right in dismissing a $45 million libel suit against NBC stemming from the Wounded Knee takeover, an appeals court has ruled.

"The district court properly found no genuine issue of material fact exists," said the Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. The ruling was made Friday and attorneys for the network, Riter, Mayer, Hofer and Riter of Pierre, received it here Tuesday.

Forty-six ranchers joined the suit against NBC, contending that reporter Fred Briggs libeled them on the NBC Nightly News in an April 6, 1973, dispatch from Wounded Knee.

Briggs said more than 90 percent of the land on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation is leased primarily to non-Indian ranchers.

"The Indian lives his squalid reservation life wondering if any of this will come to pass," he said. "He lives on a sub-welfare level dole ... furnished partly by the collective rent from white ranchers using his land."

The ranchers argued that the report would cause millions of Americans to conclude that they were responsible for the Indians' sub-welfare standard of living by taking advantage of lease arrangements with the Oglala Sioux Tribe.

But Bogue called the statements unambiguous, non-defamatory and non-libelous. And he granted a motion for summary judgment, saying South Dakota law does not permit a suit in the absence of statements that are obviously libelous.

"The record contains no specific allegations of special damages," agreed the appeals court, "and we conclude that the appellants have failed to demonstrate a genuine issue of fact."

Bergland Urges Policy Change To Help Preserve Family Farm

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the view of Bob Bergland, a farmer and former congressman who is Jimmy Carter's secretary of agriculture, government farm policies and programs are not working well and never have.

Sure, he says, they have helped "create a food and fiber production system that is the envy of the world" and have added stability to global politics and the world economy.

The policies and programs over almost a half century also "by and large" have helped farmers get a fair return.

If the system is judged by those criteria, it still is "remarkably well-geared to the realities of this era."

What, then, is troubling Bergland?

His answer, in a speech March 12 in Kansas City, Mo., involved some of the most complex and far-reaching issues ever to confront American agriculture.

Associates of Bergland say his Kansas City speech, presented to the annual convention of the National Farmers Union, probably was the most important one since he became secretary more than two years ago.

It also was woven with portent: A warning about where he fears agriculture is heading if a better job isn't done designing policy to protect the family farm, an institution idealized by some as the finest this country ever produced.

Bergland said it is time to consider "where we are and where we seem to be going" and to ask what he called critically important questions:

—Are farm policies and programs creating or helping create "something we don't want" in U.S. agricugture?

—Do those account in whole or in part "for an unending trend toward larger and larger and fewer and fewer farms" that will "increasingly dominate and control" food production?

—Are farm policies and programs tending "to help most those farmers who need help the least and help least those farmers who need help the most?"

Bergland said in Kansas City he was not speaking "to present my judgments" and urged a "full-scale national dialogue on the future" of agriculture.

But according to some sources close to Bergland, the speech not only outlined some of his major worries about the state of agriculture but hinted strongly at some basic policy changes he thinks should be seriously considered.

If this is so, Bergland and the administration may be headed for some of the hottest legislative and political debate about agricultural policy in the last 20 years.

It was no whim that led Bergland to read his prepared speech in Kansas City. He frequently discards prepared texts and speaks off the cuff.

But some of his advisers, recognizing that the speech might be a watershed of sorts for future farm policy development, urged him to read it for the record.

"I am deeply concerned about what I see happening to the structure of agriculture. I am deeply concerned also about why it is happening," Bergland said.

"And I am concerned most of all with the desperate need to ask ourselves if what is happening is what we want...or what the nation truly needs."

Bergland said the truth, as he sees it, is "we don't now have a workable policy on the structure of agriculture."

To the extent such a policy is talked about, he said, "it's focus is always on the number of farms" and not on the structure of farms — what they are and who operates them.

"With the exception of a few large corporations, every farmer claims to be a family farmer," Bergland said.

One of Bergland's associates said the secretary shares a view of some students of agriculture that the threat to family farming is not so much from big corporations — which often get the most publicity — but from other family farmers who want more land.

In his speech, Bergland did not focus on big corporations and talked mostly about large farmers and smaller farmers. The 200,000 largest farms — mostly family operations — produce nearly two-thirds of all agricultural products, he said.

The remaining farms, about 2.5 million units, produce the rest.

These are of the most concern to Bergland.

Since modern federal programs began in the early 1930s, they have been production oriented. That is, subsidies and other benefits are based upon how many bushels, bales and pounds a farmer produces.

Thus, a farmer who has more land and produces more wheat than his neighbor stands to get larger federal benefits.

"I see the benefits of many of our farm programs going not to improve the incomes of those rural families needing help but contributing instead to higher and higher land prices," Bergland said.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures prices and most grain futures were lower on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Analysts blamed the daylong minus session on a decline in silver prices attributed to the less than expected raise in crude oil prices announced by the Oil Producing Export Countries.

Soybean and corn prices recovered some of the early losses on late buying to close only moderatly lower. Wheat recoved to close mostly higher.

Increased overnight cash sales of corn and soybeans also contributed to the weakness.

The only major supportive news was a favorable weekly export inspection report.

At the close soybeans were 1 to 6¾ cents lower, May $7.76; wheat was unchanged to 1¾ cents higher.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $3.85 to $6.00 a bale lower Tuesday.

The large amount of cotton approved for delivery against futures contracts continued to be a price depressing factor, brokers said.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL COTTON Council this week requested the House Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee to restore funding for important cotton research projects for fiscal 1980.

Hoke Leggett, Hobgood, N. C., producer, expressed deep concern over the administration's proposed $3.3 million cut in overall agricultural research and especially over the fact that more than half of the cut or $1.6 million would be in cotton research alone.

He commended the administration's effort to reduce the budget deficit but noted that research is one of the primary ways of improving productivity and holding down costs.

The administration apparently recognized this fact in other areas, he noted, because seven of 10 federal research agencies would receive increased funding in the proposed budget.

IN VIEW OF THE GROWTH IN WORLD population and evidence that yields of many crops in this country have reached upper limits, Leggett commented: "It is difficult to understand why, at the same time, agriculture and cotton are receiving severe cuts."

The council president said the cotton industry already has experienced "considerable sacrifice" in efforts to hold down the federal budget deficit.

Scientific man-years assigned to federal cotton research have dropped 20 percent in the last decade, he said. In addition, Leggett noted that the 1977 farm act actually called for substantial increases in research.

The council president also expressed concern that cotton was singled out for the heaviest research cuts at a time when it has a tremendous potential for greatly alleviating the nation's trade balance problems through expanded exports.

"WE NEED TO INCREASE OUR PRODUCTION efficiency in order to take advantage of our expanding opportunities in the export market," he said, "and we cannot do so over the long run unless research is adequate to keep production costs competitive."

Leggett listed a number of such projects which would be eliminated under the proposed cuts, including research essential to developing insect and disease-resistant cotton varieties and to minimizing the use of pesticides while fully protecting the crop.

He also stressed the importance of continued federal work in post-harvest research, pointing out that cotton faces "unprecedented problems" in the processing area due to cotton dust and flammability regulations.

More than half a million dollars would be taken out of cotton work at the USDA's New Orleans laboratory, where most of cotton's post-harvest research is conducted.

"THIS COULD SERIOUSLY HAMPER several absolutely vital areas of research, including cotton dust...which urgently needs to be stepped up, not only to save the cotton industry and the jobs and income it contributes to the economy, but also to eliminate a potential health problem for some people," he said.

Leggett pointed out that the cotton industry is composed of many producers and small processors who must compete with large and well-financed synthetic fiber corporations.

"While cotton producers themselves are financing some of the needed research and recently doubled their assessments," he said, "all cotton research taken together — both public and private — amounts to only a small fraction of synthetic fiber research expenditures."

For this reason, the council president said cotton is a classic case for government research.

U.S. Officials Attend Meeting On Irrigation

A three-man team of U. S. Department of Agriculture officials from Washington will be in Lubbock today for a technical meeting on water.

The meeting will open at 9 a.m. in the Memorial Civic Center and will adjourn at 4:10 p.m.

It is designed to "discuss the impact of irrigation on agricultural production and water supplies in water-short areas and the present and future role of agricultural policy in addressing water problems."

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rupert Cutler will head the USDA team and will present opening remarks.

Dr. Anson Bertrand, former dean of agriculture at Texas Tech and now director of the USDA's Science and Education Administration, will present a background paper on a national perspective and emerging issues.

Larry Meyers, deputy director of the USDA's office of congressional affairs, also will will participate in the meeting.

A background paper on a regional perspective will be presented by Dr. James Osborn of Oklahoma State University.

Respondents during the morning session to the opening talks will be A. L. Black of Friona, chairman of the Texas Department of Water Resources; Dayle Williamson, executive secretary of the Nebraska Resource Commission; Dr. William Lyle of Halfway, representing the Texas Water Resource Council; Don Anderson of Lubbock, chairman of the Texas High Plains Coordinating Council; and Lloyd Calhoun of Hobbs, N. M., first vice president of Water, Inc.

Afternoon speakers will include Dave Hale, New Mexico interstate stream engineer; James Mitchell, director, and Wayne Wyatt, manager, both of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District of Lubbock; Don King, director of the Oklahoma Water Resources Board; and J. W. Buchanan of Dumas, manager of the North Plains Underground Water District.

Duncan Ellison of Lubbock, executive director of Water, Inc., will be moderator.

Sheep Ranchers Decry Faint Image

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (UPI) — A sheep rancher operating in the heart of cattle country is like being the runt in a neighborhood populated by the likes of John Wayne, according to Chris Jouflas and Pete Clathis.

Jouflas and Clathis, who are the sons of Greek immigrant sheep herders, have built sizeable ranches in western Colorado. The terrain is known for cattle, but produces an equalivent percentage of the nation's lamb.

"Sheepmen have no image. They are always out there, somewhere, while cowboys are strutting around the streets," said Jouflas, discussing the public relations aspect of the business over a mid-morning cup of coffee.

Although sheep ranching provides Jouflas and Clathis with comfortable livings, occasionally the lack of prestige grates. Cattle outnumber sheep in the U.S. 10 to one and beef is the preferred meat in the western portion of the country.

"Sheep ranching is not a romantic industry, like cattle. John Wayne never played a sheep rancher. There are no movies about swashbuckling herders, like there are about cowboys," said Clathis, warming to the topic.

"Have you ever heard of Tom Mix, the sheepherder? Hell, no."

Fashion honors the cattle industy with jeans, cowboys boots, cowboy hats and the Marlboro man, Jouflas said.

However, little sets either man apart from the other pointy-toed, denim-jeaned inhabitants of Grand Junction, Colo. Jouflas' fleece-lined jacket provides the only clue.

Part of the problem is heritage.

"The cattlemen were all born in this country. The sheepmen were all born somewhere else and spoke another language," Clathis said. "Cowboys are Americans. Sheepmen are foreigners."

Despite the lack of esteem, Jouflas and Clathis are proud of their profession.

"It's not that I don't like cows," Jouflas said, "but you have to love the animal you raise. The cowboy loves cattle. Pigmen love pigs. And I love sheep."

Cattle Futures Close At Daily Limit Level

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed the daily limit level of 150 points lower in April and June to 95 higher in distant April. Sales totaled 13,024 cars Tuesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange with nearby contracts locked limit level lower most of the day.

Traders looked for further sharp losses in the nearby contracts today on the basis of heavy unsold offerings. Prices fell to six week lows. Deferreds rose on short coverings.

Wholesale beef was off 1 to 2 cents at 104½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash cattle were steady to off $1 with the best top $74 per hundredweight, which is a one-week low also at Omaha. Slaughter was 115,000 head. The major terminals are expecting about 16,600 head today.

Feeder cattle futures tumbled the daily limit of 150 with sellers over across the board at the close. Sales held to 1,739 contracts with heavy unsold offerings.

The limit was the second in a row and forced prices to two-week lows. Continued liquidation in the nearby as first delivery day approaches brought pressure as did weakness in beef and mostly lower cash feeders. The threat of a truck strike was also in the background.

There have been 662 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were up $2 to off $5 with the best top $136 per hundredweight at San Antonio. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 7,900 head.

Hog futures closed 5 to 12 lower led by April at the lowest since December. Earlier, prices were down 147 to up 67 in erratic trade. Volume was estimated at 8,765 lots. Selling continued from limit level losses Monday.

Back months were up at times on spread buying against cattle futures in a reversal of the recent pattern. Heavy hog runs and lower prices contributed to weakness.

Wholesale hams were of 2 to 3 cents at 80 to 87 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off 25 cents to $1.50 with the best top $47.50 per hundredweight at Peoria, which is the cheapest since July. Kill was 338,000 head. About 27,500 head are expected today at the major terminals.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 80 to 127 lower led by May after July fell the 200 limit. Sales totaled 5,663 cars. The limit was the fourth in a row and forced prices to the lowest since early January.

Prices fell more than 15 percent from last month on continued selling sparked by heavy hog kills and fresh weakness in cash bellies and fears of a trucker strike.

Deliveries total 63 thus far. Wholesale bacon was unchanged at 49¾ to 52A cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

In 1794, Eli Whitney patented the cotton gin, a machine which revolutionized the cotton industry.

Muppets Favored By Moppets - And By Adult Fans As Well

LONDON (UPI) — On a nearly empty sound stage outside London Miss Piggy tosses her long blonde curls, tilts her snout at a seductive angle and rasps coyly at Kermit. That green felt bundle of boyish frog vanishes as fast as Gonzo's safety net and the elderly, ill-tempered Statler and Waldorf cackle wildly.

The Muppets have begun another week.

The Muppets — a name chosen by creator Jim Henson more than 20 years ago to describe a combination of marionette and puppet — have nearly as many adult fans as children followers.

Although Henson is American, as are most of the puppeteers, filming for the Muppets series is done in England. An entire Muppets workshop with 300 puppets and their costumes has been constructed here.

To the casual visitor it looks a little like Santa's workroom at the North Pole — Muppet bodies, heads and costumes hung on the wall or are propped casually on the floor. Boxes bear such titles as "Miss Piggy Hats and Legs" or simply "Chickens." A large, green Muppet "M" decorates the wall.

Henson, 42, the show's producer as well as a key performer, perches on a stool in the workroom, a transistor jack in one ear as he watches a playback on a special monitor and simultaneously answers questions.

An unfailingly pleasant man with the bearded, lined face of a country singer, he obviously is the core of the show and is continually consulted about everything. Like Kermit, he takes each problem and interruption with equanimity.

At 24, Kermit is the first and oldest Muppet and also the most popular. Henson, whose hands and voice bring Kermit to life, acknowledges: "There's more of me in him than any of the other characters."

But he doesn't feel the fantasy aspect crosses into his personal life.

"You turn on on camera, when you walk across the stage," he said. "It's not a case of believing the puppets are real."

Almost as popular as Kermit, according to Henson, is Miss Piggy, a blond-wigged, porcine femme fatale convinced she is a torch singer, actress, and ideal mate for Kermit. Should anyone dare doubt her coquettish ways she fells them with a karate chop.

She is the creation of Frank Oz, the man Henson calls "probably the person most responsible for the Muppets being funny." At 35, he has been with Henson for 16 years and also "does" Fozzie Bear, Animal and Sam Eagle.

As is often the case, Henson explains, Miss Piggy began her Muppet career as something else — a little known singer in the glee club — "and she just grew from Frank more than anything else."

During the series Henson has introduced some penguins and "next season I'd like to do some new characters. One or two I want to build as special characters, and also a group of dogs."

The newcomers will join an ensemble of characters so distinct in name and personality they often develop their own cult followings.

These include Fozzie Bear, the earwiggling, insecure comic; the Great Gonzo, a hook-nosed daredevil; Rowlf, the philosophical piano-playing dog, and Sam, the American Eagle and defender of moral and cultural decency.

Other parodies of character types are Dr. Bunsen Honeydew, purveyor of useless inventions; Fleet Scribbler, photojournalist for an underground paper; and two more pigs, Captian Link Hogthrob and Dr. Julius Strangepork, who together with Miss Piggy pilot the spaceship Swinetrek on the weekly drama "Pigs in Space."

Behind all these characters is a surprisingly small number of puppeteers, many of whom have been with Henson a dozen years or more.

As the puppeteers — Henson says he prefers that tile to muppeteer, "which sounds a bit too much like Mouseketeer" — block out the scenes, Muppet voices ricochet around the stage, disconcerting the bystander who can see only grown men and women instead of the expected puppet faces.

Oz, a slight, bespectacled man, leans against a platform, switching effortlessly from Miss Padlibs in Kermit's voice. The director urges another puppeteer manipulating a pig to "put a lot of swine in that voice."

The performers then slip the puppets over their hands and, walking with their arms over their heads, rehearse the segment against a backdrop of scenery more than six feet off the ground.

Warsaw Not Breaking Up Laughing At U.S.'s Demeaning Polish Jokes

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The demeaning "Polish jokes" making the rounds in the United States are damaging America's relations with her closest friend in Eastern Europe.

Poland has "formally protested the circulation of these bad-taste jokes at the highest levels of the State Department and even higher," said one high-ranking Polish official, who asked not to be identified.

"These so-called jokes are the biggest thorn in our relations with the United States," he said. "They have nothing to do with Polish humor."

The official said Washington had responded "with understanding" to Warsaw's protests. "But we want more than understanding," he said. "We want these crude jokes eliminated."

Diplomats confirmed that formal protests over "Polish jokes" had been lodged both at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw and in Washington.

The diplomats said Warsaw angrily protested that the Burt Reynolds film "The End", set in an asylum, was replete with "Polish jokes."

"The Polish government has an ongoing sensitivity to the characterization of Poles as dolts," said one diplomat. "We can sympathize with their position but there's nothing we can do. We tell them that the U.S. government doesn't control the movie industry in America but they don't believe it.

"Since they keep a tight rein on their own movie industry, they can't understand that it isn't the same in America."

Most Poles have warm feelings toward the United States and are amazed that they are the object of such degrading humor.

"Why do Americans make fun of us like that?" American visitors are often asked.

With nearly 10 million Americans of Polish origin in the United States, Washington gives high priority to good relations with Warsaw.

The fact that Poland gets the highest grades in the Soviet Bloc on its human rights report card has helped cement the friendship.

"These horrible little jokes sure don't do anything for the cause of mutual understanding," said one diplomat. "In fact, they have hurt our efforts to promote good feeling."

Western diplomats said Polish officials often insinuate that the "Polish jokes" circulating in America are part of a Jewish conspiracy to besmirch Poles.

"They say the Jews control the media in the States and it is the media that presents a distorted image of Poland to Americans," one diplomat said.

Ironically, Jews are the butt of "Polish joke-style" ridicule in Poland and many Poles have a wide repertoire of "Jewish jokes."

Most Polish humor, however, tends toward political satire, so popular in Eastern Europe.

The blizzard that dropped four feet of snow on Poland virtually paralyzing the economy produced this:

"What's the difference between socialism and a dead body?"

Answer: "A dead body decays at room temperature and socialism at minus 10."

OPEC Price Increase To Complicate U.S. Anti-Inflation Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — The decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise crude oil prices by 9 percent April 1 will mean a retail gasoline price increase of at least 2 cents a gallon by mid-May and will further complicate the fight against inflation, analysts said Tuesday.

"There's no way we can handle the pressure" of the OPEC boost "without some pain," said Allan H. Meltzer, a Carnegie-Mellon University economist.

U.S. consumer prices rose 9 percent last year, and jumped 1.2 percent between January and February alone. But the future impact of the latest OPEC move on the American economy is hard to gauge because of the long distance between foreign oil pumps and U.S. industries and consumers.

According to Leon Taub, an economist at the consulting firm of Chase Econometrics Inc., the April OPEC increase could raise American inflation by 0.2 percent this year. If OPEC were to raise prices 5 percent in October, inflation would receive an 0.4 percent boost in 1979 and another 0.4 percent boost in 1980, he said.

Analysts said the OPEC boost also will increase the U.S. bill for foreign oil by at least $4 billion from 1978's $43 billion, possibly putting new pressure on the dollar on foreign exchange markets.

But the analysts said the import tally could go higher when producers' surcharges and possible additional OPEC increases are included.

"This year, we're going to go over $50 billion by a significant margin," said Theodore R. Eck, chief economist at Standard Oil Company of Indiana. Taub, meanwhile, estimated that another OPEC increase and surcharges could raise the 1979 import bill to as much as $53 billion.

The latest producers' action sets the price of Arabian light crude oil — the reference point for other grades of oil — at $14.54 a barrel, 708 percent above the base price for a 42-gallon barrel when OPEC was formed nearly 19 years ago.

But OPEC also is allowing members to continue adding surcharges to posted selling prices, meaning many customers may be paying substantially above "official" rates. The surcharges alone may add a penny to the price of a gallon of gasoline here.

The surcharges became widespread in the wake of a 69-day shutdown of petroleum production in Iran due to the revolution against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The Iranian shutdown helped to turn last year's crude oil glut into a shortage, with oil-hungry consumers scrambling for shrinking supplies and bidding up prices well above posted levels.

The crude oil squeeze, along with a change in federal price rules allowing refiners to pass increasing processing costs to customers, has been felt at the gasoline pump in recent months.

According to the Lundberg Letter, a newsletter that covers the industry, the average retail price of a gallon of regular gasoline at a full-service station jumped 3.68 cents between February and March to 73.25 cents.

Most major oil companies have limited deliveries to dealers because of tight crude oil supplies. The latest to announce a cutback was Texaco Inc., which said Tuesday that dealers next month will receive 85 percent of the gasoline they sold in April 1978. Texaco this month limited dealers to 90 percent of March 1978 deliveries.

The cutbacks have been ordered even though demand for gasoline has been running 5 percent over last year's levels. The Lundberg Letter has estimated that gasoline supplies this month are running 8.9 percent below projected demand.

In Chicago, Standard Oil of Indiana's Amoco Oil division said it fears its gasoline supplies will be 10 percent to 15 percent short of projected demand through the summer.

Amoco said it would limit deliveries of gasoline in April to the amounts dealers received a year ago. Buyers of unleaded premium gasoline would be hit harder, however.

Amoco said shipments of unleaded premium gasoline would be cut back to 90 percent of dealers' average monthly purchase in the first 10 months of 1978.

Many new cars will run only on unleaded gasoline because the leaded variety damages catalytic converters used to guard against air pollution. But many auto owners have reported their cars have performed poorly on unleaded regular fuel and have turned to premium brands as a solution.

Demand for unleaded gasoline, which is harder and more costly to refine than the leaded type, has soared since 1975, the year catalytic converters were introduced. According to a Citibank estimate, unleaded gasoline accounted for less than 20 percent of all gasoline sold at the beginning of 1976 but accounts now for 36 percent of gasoline demand.

Anti-Peace Treaty Terrorist Attacks Kill One, Injure 50

By The Associated Press

Bomb attacks in Israel and Paris killed one person and injured more than 50 others Tuesday in a terrorist campaign against the newly signed Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty.

Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat urged hardline Arab leaders gathered in Baghdad, Iraq, to support the PLO's war against the treaty by ending all trade with the United States. He also urged a new oil embargo.

Arafat said, "It is taken for granted that (Egyptian President Anwar) Sadat's regime will be punished, but don't just hit the tail of the snake, hit the head of the snake — the United States."

Arafat also said, "We should stop buying big American cars and other products" because the United States "pushed Egypt and Israel into signing this deal."

Iraqi Vice President Saddam Hussein Warnej backed Arafat, saying U.S. interests in the Middle East "cannot be spared reprisals ..."

There was no other immediate comment on Arafat's proposal from the foreign and economy ministers of 18 Arab nations who met in the Iraqi capital to decide how to sabotage the peace pact.

In the Israeli town of Lod, 15 miles east of Tel Aviv, a bomb exploded under a vegetable stand in an open air market. A 60-year-old woman was killed and 21 persons were injured. A vengeful Jewish mob reportedly beat up several Arab passerbys until police intervened.

On Monday, a grenade was tossed into a hostel in Arab East Jerusalem, wounding nine persons, two of them American tourists.

A bomb thrown into a hostel for Jewish students in the heart of the Paris Latin Quarter injured 32 occupants Tuesday, officials reported. Two of the injured were reported in very serious condition.

A PLO spokesman in Beirut said the two blasts in Israel were "part of a plan to escalate anti-Israel warfare in protest against the treaty of treason." He said guerrillas throughout Lebanon went on maximum alert against Israeli retaliation.

In Paris, an anonymous telephone caller said a group called the "Autonomous Joint Intervention Group Against the Zionist Presence in France and Against the Peace Treaty" was responsible for the blast. Authorities said they had never heard of the group before.

The French Division of the World Jewish Congress blamed "neo-Nazi and anti-Israeli" elements for the blast.

Jewish students, many wearing the traditional yamulka on their head, wandered around outside the ruined hostel talking to police and reporters. One angry group chanted: "PLO assassin!"

But the Paris office of the PLO denounced the attack as "a racist action of anti-Semitic elements" and expressed "its deep sadness and moral support" to the families of the injured.

Egypt sought to take the initiative against treaty opponents by announcing its suspension of membership in the Arab League. An Egyptian diplomat said, "This step shows we are determined to carry out the terms of the treaty."

The key issue in the Baghdad meeting was whether Saudi Arabia would reduce its annual $2 billion in aid to Egypt. Egypt believes the Saudis will continue the aid to avoid setting the stage for a takeover of Egypt by radicals who would threaten the conservative Saudi regime.

Saddam Hussein warned the Saudis and other royal rulers of the Persian Gulf oil states: "The Arab ruler who does not abide by the Baghdad summit resolutions should be considered a traitor, wherever he may come from."

In Libya, President Moammar Khadafy said of Sadat, "You are now before a traitor who has betrayed his side to join the enemy's."

In a statement addressed to all Arab leaders, Khadafy said Arab "hypocrites" were the "the real cause behind Sadat's treachery as they nurture treachery and finance it."

Saudi Arabia has been Sadat's main Arab financial backer.

"You are standing before hypocrites and chameleons," Khadafy's statement said. It called for an alliance of Syria, Libya, Algeria, the PLO and Jordan to fight the "Pharaonic-Hebrew-American alliance."

Thousands of banner-waving demonstrators marched through Baghdad and Damascus demanding death for Sadat. Much smaller demonstrations were reported outside the American Embassy in the Indian capital of New Delhi, and outside the Egyptian Embassy in Moscow.

Several hundred Arabs clashed with police outside the Egyptian Embassy in Madrid and authorities said 30 were arrested and could be expelled from Spain.

Iraq's ruling Baathist Party organized a big rally to kick off the a meeting of the Arab League session. Chants of "death to the traitor" and "down with the Sadat regime" rang through the Iraqi capital. Official Iraqi newspapers called for "concrete measures against Sadat on political, economic, informational and mass mobilization levels."

Egypt responded with an announcement in Cairo that it was suspending participation in the League — which it founded in 1945 — but would continue to uphold the Arab cause.

Sadat's government left the door open for future reconciliation by stopping short of quitting the 22-member organization permanently.

But officials said Egypt would no longer attend Arab League sessions, pay dues or honor decisions made by the organization which has been headquartered in Cairo since it was founded.

Mmes. Sadat, Begin Tour Child Museum

WASHINGTON (AP) — Celebrating the International Year of the Child, Mrs. Anwar Sadat and Mrs. Menachem Begin toured the Capital Children's Museum Tuesday.

"We hope we have done our best. We give the most precious gift to the world and to children, which is peace," said Jihan Sadat, wife of the Egyptian president, surrounded by city children. "A dream has become a reality. We hope to see a world without war, destruction and poverty. A bright future...where we love each other and live in peace."

Aliza Begin, wife of the Israeli prime minister, said, "Mrs. Sadat has said it all."

The two women had visited the museum, a learning laboratory with a variety of unusual exhibits, separately last year. But Tuesday they were together on a tour through the museum's Mexican presentations. Followed by a mob of reporters and television crews, holding hands with two children who were their special guides, they watched a movie about Mexico, saw children making tortillas and working on looms, looked at some fenced-in goats and made paper cut-outs, which they were permitted to keep.

The director of the museum, Ann Lewin, welcomed the two women and said, "You are here because your two countries have agreed to peace. I can't think of a more beautiful thing to happen at the beginning of the Internatioal Year of the Child...If adults present examples of harmony and peace, children will accept that as the norm and strive for it."

The two women were given books and children's drawings.

Mrs. Begin had an early morning meeting with Congressional Wives for Soviet Jewry that was also attended by two wives of Soviet dissidents.

"We must raise our voices with all those who are silenced...whose only crime is that they wanted to go and join their families in Israel. We must do all we can to help. We want our brethren out," said Mrs. Begin.

Mrs. Harrison Williams, wife of the Democratic senator from New Jersey, said, "Congressional wives will not be silent. We will continue our efforts however we can. We will do something for divided families."

Mrs. Williams, representing about 100 members of Congressional Wives for Soviet Jewry, said the group was planning to send petitions to all 50 states on behalf of Ida Nudel, who was recently sentenced to four years in exile in Siberia.

Sylva Zalmanson said she had spent four years in prison herself, had two brothers who were imprisoned, and was the wife of Eduard Kuznetsov, who has served nine years of a 15-year sentence for several charges, including "anti-Soviet propaganda."

Also at the meeting was Meri Knokh, the wife of Leib Knokh, who is serving a 10-year sentence. Her brother, Yosef Mendelevich, is also in a Soviet prison under a 10-year sentence.

Aircraft Product Plant Opens Doors

The Hydro-Chemical Engineering Co., makers of aircraft strut sealant, will have an open house of its plant facilities from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in Morton.

The public is invited to tour the plant, said owner Granville Lasseter. "Many aircraft owners and operators have expressed an interest in seeing our plant since we put our aircraft strut sealant on the market in January," he added.

The sealant has been approved by the Federal Aviation Administration for most makes of general aviation aircraft, Lasseter said.

PERES INVITED TO EGYPT

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt has invited Israeli opposition leader Shimon Peres to make an official visit to Cairo, Israel television reported Tuesday. Peres, who leads the Labor Party in Parliament, is a member of the Israeli delegation to the peace treaty signing in Washington. The broadcast did not say when the visit was planned.

Mexico's Press Favors Mideast Peace Treaty

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The city's largest daily newspaper, Excelsior, Tuesday called the peace treaty between Israel and Egypt "a jump over a wide trench bristling with dangers."

"Yes, it is only one step toward peace, the first after three decades of war, but it is far-reaching," the newspaper said in an editorial.

But Excelsior was quick to point out what it saw as President Carter's motives in negotiating the peace treaty.

"Is it that the White House is safeguarding its own interests in the agitated and dangerous Middle East? certainly.

"Isn't this trying to be an apostolic mission deprived of material incentives with the smell of oil? Of course; but that is not to put down the importance of the positive part of the treaty; that it is a landmark in the history of negotiations where powers intervene."

"Has the first step toward peace really been made?" asked an editorial in the more leftist Uno Mas Uno.

"The answer is affirmative if a U.S. peace for Israel and Egypt is thought of. But it is full of doubts and questions if the irate reactions of the majority of Arab countries, the new frustration that the Palestinians suffer and the absence of other guarantors like the Soviet Union and Western European powers are considered," the editorial said.

Novedades, another Mexico City daily, praised Carter's role as negotiator.

"The farmer from Georgia who became President of the most powerful nation in the world has resorted more to his personal charisma and his ability to negotiate, than to the force that he can have ready at any moment...," the editorial said.

El Nacional, Mexico's government-owned newspaper, said: "Mexico, lover of peace ... can only watch with approving eyes this encouraging episode of success in the Middle East.

But the editorial added, "It is necessary that the good intentions work to dissolve bitter selfinishness.... All parts have the obligation to preserve this peace which is aspired to with so much vehemence, but which suffers frequent threats."

Pipeline Principals, Others Exchange Blasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. accused Standard Oil of Ohio Tuesday of welching on a major West-East oil pipeline deal and he told Congress not to blame him or his state for the project's fate.

Efforts to revive the $1 billion project seemed near collapse as Sohio board chairman Alton W. Whitehouse Jr. said only "a miracle" could persuade his firm to reverse itself and proceed with the project.

Whitehouse and Brown traded accusations in an emotional four-hour meeting of the Senate Energy Committee during which Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger and Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said the California-Texas pipeline is vital to moving Alaskan oil to the nation's interior.

Whitehouse claimed regulatory delays in California and the threat of litigation forced his company to decide earlier this month to abandon the project after four years of trying. Those problems remain, despite a Sohio promise last week to the Carter administration to reconsider.

But Brown accused Sohio of wanting to pull out because its parent firm, British Petroleum, had decided more money could be made without the U.S. pipeline.

Whitehouse denied that charge, but Brown asserted he had no intentions of being "pushed around" by the London-based international oil company which owns 52 percent of Sohio.

Meanwhile, Schlesinger hinted that federal action removing California state and local jurisdiction from the case might be necessary.

And committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson of Washington gave a similar warning, noting that if remaining legal barriers aren't removed soon, "there will have to be federal action. There's no way out, gentlemen."

While fending off claims by Republican senators that he was engaging in presidential politics, Brown denied he or his state was seeking to block the pipeline project.

"They (Sohio) want to welch on a written contract. And if that's true, all your pre-emption laws aren't worth the paper they're written on because this company is not going to build this pipeline," Brown said.

He made the "welching" claim after the Sohio offical conceded his company "wants out" of a previous contract in which it had promised to spend $83 million for pollution-control equipment to help improve overall air quality in Long Beach, site of the proposed oil tanker terminal at the beginning of the pipeline.

Whitehouse said Sohio is willing to spend the money, it just doesn't want any involvement in an actual pollution clean-up. Brown charged that could scuttle any hopes of reviving the project.

At issue is Sohio's announcement last week that it was abandoning plans to build a $1 billion terminal for the pipeline in Long Beach because of years of court delays and the inability to obtain permits from California.

The project would ship Alaskan crude oil through an existing pipeline to Midland, Tex., for eventual distribution to markets in the East and Midwest.

After a meeting in Washington last week, Sohio officials indicated they would proceed with the project if necessary permits were granted and the threat of future litigation were removed within the next six months.

"It may be that all these things will be done, although based on our experience with the project, I am doubtful," Whitehouse testified. He denied Schlesinger's claim that Sohio committed itself to build the project if the needed legal barriers were removed.

But most of the session was consumed in barbs exchanged between Brown and Republican members of the panel.

Brown denied doing anything to delay the project, but reiterated his position that Sohio would have to pay not only for controlling its own pollution at the proposed terminal but also for reducing emissions from other industries in the area.

This is required by the federal clean air law, Brown said.

"There is no reason why the pipeline cannot be built," he said. "All we ask is a few pennies a barrel to clean up the garbage and toxic materials that will develop from the project."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, accused the California governor of engaging in "a kickoff of your presidential campaign.... This looks to me like presidential politics, governor, and I don't see why this oil should be subject to these tactics."

Other GOP senators also accused Brown of engaging in presidential politics, and Jackson himself attacked the Democratic governor when Brown asserted that Congress had passed a law prohibiting the building of a pipeline through Washington State.

Running Anchor

JOHN CONLEY LIKED the young man's speed. He liked the way he carried a football. Conley, during his days as an assistant football coach at Tech was just one of a long series of coaches who liked the way the young man ran.

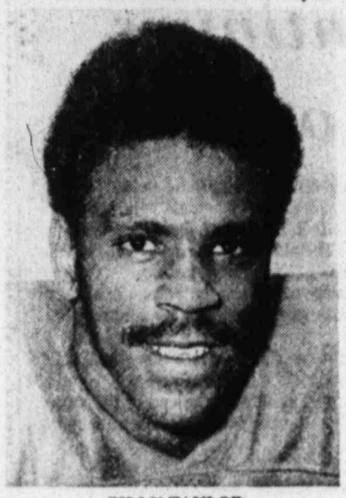

There was, in addition to Conley (who recruited him out of high school), Jim Carlen. . . Steve Sloan. . . Corky Oglesby.

Oglesby?

He's a track coach.

But, now, Billy Taylor is a track man. Professional football player, collegiate track man.

After helping Tech to a conference co-championship football season and a series of jack-knife-type toucdown dives. After his senior season in 1977, Taylor was drafted by the New York Giants and spent his idle minutes in the spring running track for Tech.

BILLY TAYLOR

He played for the Giants last fall and is back in school at Tech this spring. And again, he's running track.

It's all legal, too, since the NCAA has altere its rules to allow a professional athlete to compete in any other sport.

That's okay with the Giants, okay with Taylor and okay with Oglesby.

• • •

THIS WEEKEND, THE Raiders will be running at home in one of their two home meets. The Tech Invitational will bring in both senior colleges and juco teams, and Taylor will be running the 100-meter dash and running on the Raiders' sprint relay.

"I like it," Taylor said Tuesday. "It's a way to keep in shape. I don't think the Giants will mind."

Track definitely was secondary for Taylor as a collegian — even as a schoolboy. He ran in only two track meets in high school, his junior year at San Antonio Jay. And he never stepped on a track during his football-playing days at Tech.

He came out last year, his spring-training days at an end, and competed against some his former football adversaries, such as Curtis Dickey at A&M and Johnny Jones at Texas.

"Yes," Taylor grinned, "I ran against Dickey. Usually, on the relay, he got the stick before I did, so I got a chance to watch him run, study his form.'"

• • •

TAYLOR'S SPEED IN the sprints is "about 9.6 consistently in the hundred.

"I don't know if I'm any faster than was I was. But, it's a good way to stay in shape. I'm about the same size (weight) as when I was playing football) here."

But, even though he dons a pair of shorts and stays on the straight-and-narrow path (called a lane) every day, his mind isn't far from football. Not when it's paying for the bowl of Wheaties every morning, and the chicken-fried steak at night.

"I think the new coach (Ray Perkins) will be okay," Taylor remarked. "I talked to him the other day, an he seemed like a nice guy. He said he'd give me a chance. I don't think I got to play as much (last fall) as I'd have liked.

"I could have started some games, but I was hurt But, our main problem last year was our offense. We had a good defense, but we move the ball.

"Perkins said he wanted to look at our quarterbacks, but he might talk to (Kenny) Stabler."

Stabler, like Perkins, played at Alabama but it's the Snake's passing and signal-calling abilities, not the old-college tie which interest Perkins.

Now, however, the concentration is on classes, conditioning, and competition. And, for a change, the article for carrying is a baton, not a football.

Umps' Strike Still On

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — With the start of the major league baseball season just a week away, a federal judge Tuesday refused to order the game's umpires back to work saying he lacked the authority.

"There is no question in my mind they are entitled to bargain as individuals," ruled U.S. District Court Judge Joseph McGlynn, who has been trying to untangle a legal rhubarb between the umps and baseball which began last summer.

"I have no authority to order them back to work," he said. "They are no longer employees of baseball because they have not signed their contracts."

The judge had been asked by both the American and National leagues to find the 51 umpires in violation of a preliminary injunction issued last Sept. 25 preventing a work stoppage pending resolution of the dispute.

The umpires staged a one-day strike last Aug. 25, and they have not reported to spring training this season.

Substitute umpires from the minors and high school ranks have been officiating spring training games prior to the regular season which opens April 4.

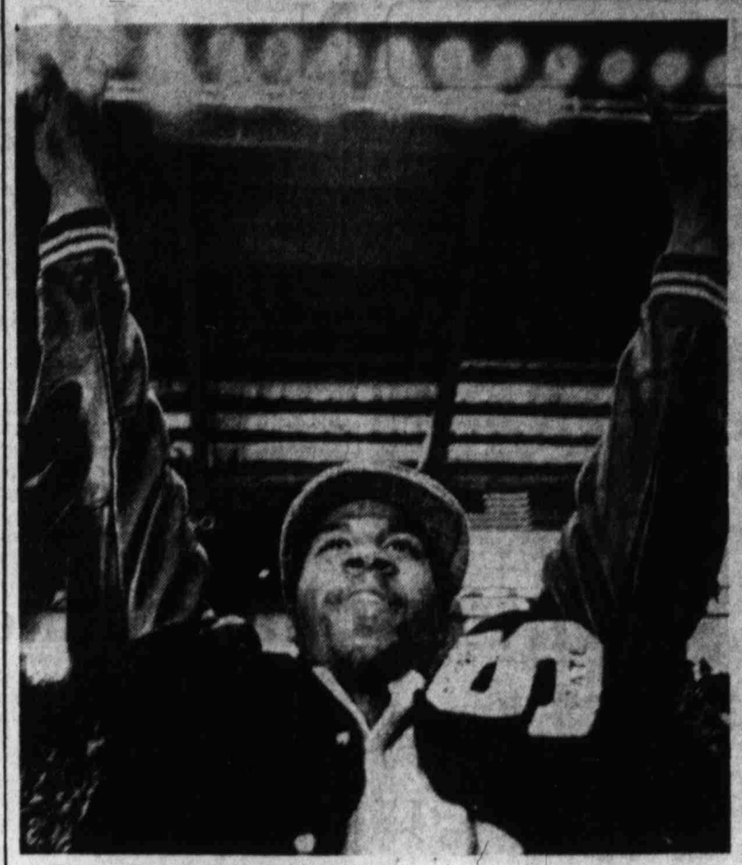

Asked what he thought of the judge's ruling, American League President Lee MacPhail said, "If these umpires don't want to work for us, we'll have to find umpires who do. The season will open on time and we'll have umpires when it starts."

The officials, members of the Major League Umpires Association, have an umbrella contract with baseball which contains such basic items as travel expenses, hospitalization and pensions. It expires in 1981.

In addition, each ump enters into an annual one-year pact that contains his salary — derived from minimum wage scales outlined in the umbrella contract plus any merit increases the two leagues may deem fit.

The umpires have balked at signing the individual contracts for 1979, contending major league baseball had refused to negotiate the merit pay issue in good faith.

They have retained Philadelphia attorney Richie Phillips to represent them and currently are asking for pay hikes ranging from $4,500 to $22,500.

Michigan State's Earvin "Magic" Johnson raises his arms responding to the cheering fans in Jenison Field House at MSU Tuesday evening at a victory celebration for the new NCAA basketball champions on their return from Salt Lake City, Utah. The team was met by a standing room only crowd that overflowed outside the the building— and most of them wanted to see "Magic." Johnson scored 29 points in the Spartans semifinal victory and then pumped in 24 against Indiana State in the finals. Michigan State is only the third team in history to win the NCAA after suffering as many as six losses in a season. Johnson was voted the tournament's Most Valuable Player. (AP Laserphoto)

Spring Ducats Go On Sale

Tickets will go on sale this morning for Texas Tech's spring football game. And with each ticket will go an opportunity to "coach" in that game.

Raider head football coach Rex Dockery has decided to let four fans act as honorary coaches in the spring game April 14. Persons 18 years of age and over that purchase tickets to the game will be eligible for selection.

Names of four purchasers will drawn the week of the game and then will be invited to work out with the team the day before the game.

Tickets are $2 each and may be obtained from Double-T Association members or at the Tech ticket office on the north side of Jones Stadium. As each ticket is purchased, the person signs his name to a portion of the ticket which is retained by Tech officials for the drawing.

New LCC Grid Boss Enthusiastic

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The old hangar stuck out behind Lubbock Christian College has seen some strange sights in its time as a gym. But this was a first.

This week LCC is holding its first-ever spring football practice sessions. The school just adopted the sport this year (for next fall) and new coach Jerry Don Sanders is properly enthusiastic.

"Things are going real good," he said. "We've got some kids out who are going to do us a good job. We had about 50 come out for Monday's workout: we were about five or six short though. I think we'll be up around 55 or 56 kids by the time everybody comes out."

Needless to say, you judge the football turnout at Lubbock Christian College somewhat differently than that at Texas Tech: or, for that matter, Slaton High School.

The Chaparrals next year will join the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association, a conference that allows a school to grant scholarships in only one sport. Not only do the LCC gridders not get scholarships for playing ball, they have to pay to play.

Another TIAA rule regarding football prohibits contact workouts during spring drills. For a coach with a squad full of players he's never seen before, this is inhibiting.

"Basically now we're just working on position techniques," Sanders said. "We're trying to get them acquainted with the various offensive sets we'll use and the different defenses. They all need to learn the terminology too.

"We can do just about everything we can do without pads except contact. I want to get them familiar with the systems we'll use.

"We'll work with them on technique n ow and then next fall we can come in and hit."

Anybody who's been around football very long will tell you that there's players who look great in the gym but just don't have the desire to have their bodies hurt. All the size in the world isn't any good if a player isn't willing to throw his body around.

But Sanders does have some size at his disposal. "We've got 16 or 18 kids over 200 pounds," he says. "And we've got some kids that have played ball at other schools. I think we've got some pretty good size and we've got quite a bit of speed in our backs and receivers. Some of our kids are running in the neighborhood of 4.5 or 4.6 in the 40."

Leading the list of battles is that between Robert McBride and Mike Ritchey for the quarterback spot.

McBride was a quarterback at Texas Tech as a freshman but transfered to LCC after he was switched to defense. Ritchey, out of Lubbock High, has "4.6 speed and a good strong arm," according to Sanders.

Practice will continue until April 29. After that the players are on their own until August 4, which is when Sanders hopes to get everybody together to start two-a-days —roughly three weeks before the start of school.

Chaps Take Three

WICHITA FALLS (Special) — A trio of singles hitters powered home runs Tuesday night as Midwestern State whipped Lubbock Christian 5-1 in the third game of their four-game series.

Earlier in the day, the Chaps used the four-hit pitching of Burkburnett freshman Kevin Burke to take a 3-1 victory.

Ironically, it was Dave Hanna — destined to be the loser in the third game — who drove in the winning run Tuesday.

The teams played their series late Tuesday night.

Dave Connacher, who came into this sieries hitting .491, blasted Hanna's fourth pitch of the game over the left-field fence for his first homer of the year.

With two outs in the second, Vince Nieswaidomy ripped the first pitch he saw over the left-field fence for his first homer of the year. With two outs in the fourth Steve Fancher blasted his first home of the year, a 2-run sh to to left.

LCC avoided its first shutout of the year in the sixth when Steve Brigante singled to left and continued third when the ball got past Rick Loesch and scored on Tim Leslie' sacrifice fly.

Brownfield Falters 3-1

Lubbock High and Brownfield packed all the scoring action in the first inning, then turned it over the pitchers, as the Westerners nipped Brownfield 3-1 Tuesday.

The win lefted the Westerners' record to 10-3 for the year. They will host Hobbs Friday in their next game.

Noel Jaime and Larry Walker walked for LHS in the first inning, then pulled a double steal before Thomas Romero drove then in with a single. Andy Vasquez then brought in Romero on a sacrifice fly.

Brownfield got its run from a Romero, as Ricky Romero drove in the Cubs' only run in the top of the first.

After that, LHS hurler Andy Vasquez held the Cubs in check. He allowed four hits for the game, walked three and struck out five.

Tech Continues Spring Workouts

It was only a drill: blocking dummies are not allowed on the field during a game.

Receiving is one of the areas where Texas Tech head coach Rex Dockery feels the Raiders must imp rove before next fall. They lost regulars Brian Nelson and Godfrey Turner, who combined for 48 or Tech's 89 receptions last fall.

But, in the drill, graduate aide Jerry Bomar tosses the football high, and as the receiver jumps to catch it, two teammates with small blocking dummies hit the receiver.

Tech has worked the drill the past two days as it moved into the second full week of spring drills.

"That's a good drill," commented Dockery Tuesday, at the end of the workout. "We made some catches (later) where the receivers learned from that drill.

"It teaches them to put the ball away quickly."

And teaching was one of the main factors in Tuesday' workout, heading into a controlled scrimmage today. The scrimmage today will be more of the situation type, settin up down-and-distance plays.

The Raiders'offense worked from the I-formation in Tuesday's session.

"It's just something we thought we'd try," commented Dockery. "Yesterday and today. And, also, it's for our defense to get a look at it; Southern Cal (Tech's opening opponent here next fall) will be running it, so our defense can get some looks at it."

Dockery had his offensive unit working on the goal against the defensive fronts, and the defensive unit had the better of it Tuesday.

"The defense dominated, but, of course, it waw set up that way. I thought the defense looked pretty good."

Johnny Quinney, who until Monday was a safety, worked withthe first unit as a linebacker

Quinney was one of the latest of a series of personnel moves that Dockery has made this spring in an effor to fill some vacancies created by graduation.

The Raiders will work daily this week and hold a scrimmage session Saturday.

Eagles Whip Panthers 6-2

Centerfielder Tim Williams went 3-for-4 and drove in 2 runs to lead the Lubbock Christian Eagles by the Dunbar Panthers 6-2 in a nondistrict baseball game at the LCHS field Tuesday.

Tim Perrin went the distance for the Eagles to record his second win of the season against only one setback. The victory raised Lubbock Christian's overall mark to 5-2, while the loss dropped Dunbar to 0-8.

Williams put the game away for the Eagles in the bottom of the second with two runners on base.

Dunbar will try and get that elusive first victory Thursday at Bovina. Lubbock Christian will not play again until Saturday in a doubleheader at Mackenzie field against Dunbar again.

Matadors Fall

HOBBS (Special)—Brett Parker and Hector Limon were picked apart by Hobbs batters as the Matadors fell in a non-district baseball game Tuesday afternoon 10-1.

The loss dropped the Matadors' record to 5-7.

Estacado will try to get back on the right track Friday when they play three games during the Snyder tournament.

Mustangs Defeat Tors 2-0

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

If it wasn't a no-hitter, it was close enough to be called one. Either way, Coronado defeated Lamesa baseballers 2-0 Tuesday.

Coronado hurler Gene Segrest threw seven innings for the Mustangs striking out 15, walking two and giving up — well, no hits.

But in the top of the fourth Lamesa pitcher Mando Morales bunted down the first base line and wound up safely on first. First baseman Jim Wellls charged in picked up the ball and turned to fire to Segrest, who was racing towards the bag.

Segrest caught the ball but Morales was safe.

After the game coach John Dudley asked his ace hurler if he could have made the play.

"Yeah, I had the ball in time," said Segrest. "I jus missed the bag."

"OK, then, that makes it an error," said Dudley. "So that's a no-hitter."

Really, it doesn't make that much difference. Segrest threw an excellent ball game either way. He completely dominated the Lamesa batters and only once did a Tornado runner get as far as second base.

"I felt pretty good today," said Segrest. "But my rythm was kind of off because of the layoff. They (lamesa) helped me some by going for some bad pitches too."

"I wasn't doing anything fancy," he added. "Just throwing fastballs."

And as far as the Lamesa coach was concerned, that was all that Segrest needed to do.

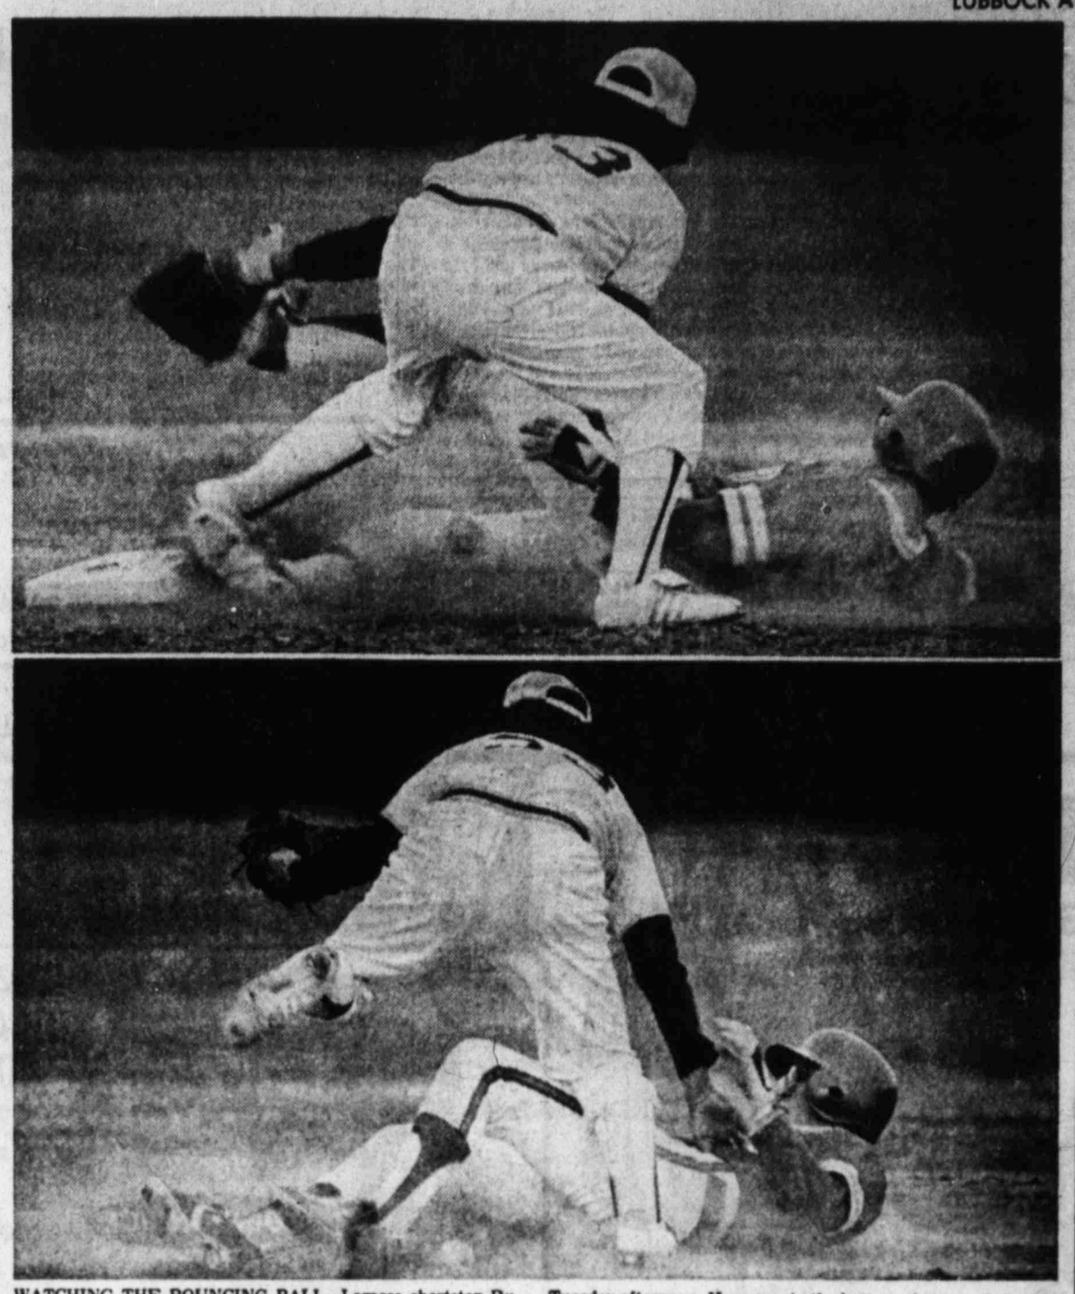

"He's definitely the best pitcher we've ever seen," said coach Jim Hill. "He's probably one of the best pitchers in the state."

The win raised Segrest's mark to 3-0 for the year and the Mustangs to 8-5. Lamesa fell to 5-7.

The way Segrest was playing Tuesday he needed very little help from his teammates. He got the only extra base hits of the game on a double and a run-scoring triple.

The Mustangs were held pretty well in check my Lamesa hurler Mando Morales, who went the distance, allowing only five hits and 1 earned run.

Coronado got that earned tally in the fifth frame. Segrest drillled a triple to the left field center wall that scored Donald Ewing, who had reached first on a fielder's choice.

WATCHING THE BOUNCING BALL—Lamesa shortstop Rudy Rodriquez seems to have the ball in plenty of time to tag out Coronado centerfielder Robert Ledbetter trying to steal second base during a non-district baseball game at Chaparral Field Tuesday afternoon. However, in the bottom photograph, Rodriquez lost control of the ball and Ledbetter was ruled safe. (Photo By Gary Davis)

"We didn't hit the ball very well," admitted Dudley. "But I think the layoff hurt us. Yesterday was our first practice in over a week. And we made some critical mistakes on the basepaths.

"But if you're going to make mistakes, now's the time to it," he added. "And Gene pitched very well for us."

The Mustangs got their other run in the first when Robert Ledbetter — the first man up — walked, stole second, went to third on a bad throw and scored on another bad toss. But after that things got a lot tougher for the Mustangs.

Monterey Jumps On Pecos

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As Pecos coach Steve Peters walked into the dugout after pregame warmups, the Eagle coach reached into his back pocket, pulled out a pouch of chewing tobacco and remarked, "Ah, good—lunch."

What Peters didn't realize then, was that he was going to have a lot of time to enjoy the flavor of the meal.

Monterey took control of the game early and went on to defeat Pecos 14-4 in a non-district contest that was called after five innings because of the 10-run rule.

"We were just not mentally prepared for this game," said Peters. "We had bad weather around our area last week and didn't get to workout much. That hurt our defense."

The Plainsmen took advantage of four Eagle errors in the bottom of the first inning to score seven runs, and gave winning pitcher Kent Potts (4-0) all the cushion he needed.

Monterey sent 12 batters to the plate during the inning with the first eight Plainsmen reaching base.

Also, centerfielder Andy Barron and first baseman Kelly Smith struck the only Plainsmen extra base hits of the game during the frame. Barron opened the game with a double to left center field, while Smith cracked a triple down the right field line, which drove in two runs.

Despite the easy victory, Monterey coach Bobby Moegle was not particularly happy with the performance of his team.

"We haven't played a game in two weeks," said Moegle. "We were awfully sluggish."

Moegle was referring to the top of the fifth inning, when three Plainsmen errors led to four Pecos runs.

"This game was not a good game to watch," said Moegle. "Of course we need to play someone like Pecos right now. We have five games this week and three more against them."

Kent Potts went the distance to record his fourth win against no setbacks. Monterey is now 7-3. Martin Arreguy (0-3) was charged with the loss. Pecos sports a 6-7 record.

Potts was working on a no-hitter into the fifth inning. Until then, the Plainsman junior righthander had struck out four batters and hadn't allowed an Eagle runner to advance further than first base.

A single to center by pitcher Arrgeuy sandwiched between two Plainsmen errors accounted for three of the Eagles' runs.

Monterey will travel to Midland Lee today for a single game and then face Pecos three times over the weekend. The two teams will play a single contest Friday with a doubleheader slated for Saturday.

Spartans Still Enjoying Win

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Michigan State basketball team will have a year to treasure its national championship and Earvin Johnson will have a lifetime to remember his magical moments in the NCAA tournament.

Heading home to East Lansing Tuesday, the NCAA trophy in their basket, the euphoric Spartans still were floating on air after their conclusive 75-64 victory over mighty Indiana State in the national finals Monday night.

"We are so elated, I can't describe my feelings," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote after the school's first national title. "Right now, it is a combination of relief and elation. Down the line I feel it was a great personal goal, but right now it's the players who have accomplished so much."

One of those players, of course, is Johnson, the flashy sophomore who was voted the tourney's outstanding player. The 6-foot-8 player called "Magic" by his peers wound up the season with a flourish, scoring 24 points in leading the Michigan State offense against the Syacmores.

He also led the defense Monday night, keying a ferocious zone that threw a net around the great Larry Bird, everyone's player of the year.

Bird, who led Indiana State to 33 straight victories coming into the championship game, scored a sub-par total of 19 points. He shot a poor 33 percent from the floor on seven of 21 shots and signifcantly as well, only had two assists.

Perhaps bothered somewhat by a broken left thumb, Bird obviously was bothered more by the Spartans' marvelous 2-3 zone which Heathcote calls a "matchup zone." The sturdy defense collapsed around Bird like an umbrella whenever he threatened to come near the basket and made him work extra hard for his shots.

"We would have a man and a half on him when he put the ball on the floor," said Heathcote. "We would have a forward on him and a guard come in to help. Our defense worked well. We wanted to force the action and get an uptempo game. We got the lead doing that and we lost the lead doing that. For a period of time, they took us out of the game. We were fortunate to come back."

Peach Bowl Changes Date

ATLANTA (AP) — The Peach Bowl, which almost lost its NCAA certification because of low ticket sales for the 1978 Christmas Day football contest, told CBS-TV Tuesday it will not play the 1979 game again on the holiday.

"We are saying no to Christmas Day, not CBS," said George Crumbley, executive director of the bowl. "We are very happy with our relationship with CBS, except for the playing date. We feel like it's extremely important that the game be played on another day, preferably Dec. 24 or 31. We especially like Dec. 31 at 3 p.m."

CBS, however, appears firm in maintaining the Christmas date.

Crumbley said Mizlou, an independent network which has televised the bowl in the past, has indicated it would like to have the game back.

Crowds Welcome Champs

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — East Lansing, swollen with boisterous students, rolled out the green carpet Tuesday for the Michigan State Spartans bringing home their first NCAA basketball championship.

Meanwhile, a few miles away in neighboring Lansing, Michigan State flags — the white letter "S" on a field of lime green — floated high above the state Capitol and just below the state's official standard.

Fans bubbled with anticipation as they waited for Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Greg "Special K" Kelser and other Spartan heroes returning from Salt Lake City and Monday night's 75-64 romp over Indiana State.

In an attempt to avert traffic jams at the tiny Lansing airport, fans were invited to a rally at Jenison Fieldhouse where the Spartans won all 13 home games this season before noisy sellout crowds.

Even lawmakers, who cancelled their Monday evening session to watch the final game, got into spirit of the celebration Tuesday with resolutions citing the Spartans for an outstanding season.

MSU fans waited in painful suspense through the final moments of the win over Indiana State, then did cartwheels in the street and blanketed the campus in toilet paper during an all-night celebration.

Giddy students poured down the beer and then poured into the streets to shoot off fireworks and shake their index fingers toward heaven until the Spartans' return.

Grand River Avenue, the four-lane boulevard that runs north of the 43,000-thousand student land-grant university, was virtually closed to traffic within an hour after the game-ending whistle.

A searchlight swept across the sky, accompanied by sparklers and Roman candles as students scampered across lawns and parking lots.

"I really thought all along we could do it, but I didn't stop sweating till (Terry) Donnelly broke into a grin with that last free throw," said William McCollough of Detroit, 21, one of about 400 screaming, hugging fans jammed into Coral Gables, an off-campus bar with a 7-foot television screen and a game-night special on beer.

An hour before the game, the establishment was out of beer pitchers. By game time, bartenders were too busy cheering alongside customers to worry about refills.

East Lansing Police, who could do little to control the good-natured crowds that clogged campus streets, were even treated to a serenade.

"They were really well-behaved," said East Lansing Police Chief Steve Naert. "At about 3:30, we talked to the crowd. They had built a bonfire in th median along Grand River Avenue.

"We told them we were just as happy as they were, but didn't they think it was time to go home? We called a fire truck in to put out the fire, and the crowd stood back and sang us the Spartan fight song."

Chiefs Sign Free Agents

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Pittsburgh Steelers linebacker Dave LaCrosse is among five free agents signed by the Kansas City Chiefs, the National Football League club announced Tuesday.

The 6-foot-3, 215-pound LaCrosse was a 10th-round Steelers draft choice in 1977 and played all that season. He was released in 1978.

Others agreeing to terms included Melvin Johnson, a wide receiver from Colorado, and Kirk Lamboy, a cornerback from Rhode Island who played minor league football last year with the Eastern Connecticut Sea Raiders.

Also signed were Art Phillips, former Jackson State running back who had a trial last year with the Los Angeles Rams, and Rick Fenton.

Schmidt Trying To Forget Poor '78 Campaign

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Mike Schmidt is a serious person. He's normally a quiet sort. He hardly ever laughs in a baseball environment. It's his profession and he approaches it that way.

He was asked how he felt about last season's .251 average, 21 home runs and 78 RBIs.

"Sure, for me it was a bad season," Schmidt replied at the Philadelphia Phillies' spring training camp.

"For me it wasn't very good," said the third baseman who led the major leagues in home runs 1974 through 1976.

Then, the different approach to things by the 29-year-old Schmidt came to the fore. He wasn't sarcastic or nasty. He merely wanted to express himself.

"I don't know why there has to be a discussion about last year," noted the player, who daily during the home season is booed by a large block of Phillies' fans because in their eyes he hasn't lived up to his playing potential.

"Even if it's (last season) good, pathetic, mediocre, I don't understand why people want to make issue of past seasons," Schmidt said.

"None of us — you, me, or anybody else in this room — can do anything about last season," Schmidt explained. "You can't bring it back, it's past history. It's a waste of mental energy discussing it.

"Each individual person in any field of life — all they can do with the past is take a little bit of it, the little bits of experiences, the ones they want to ... and use them to make themselves better people in the future."

Actually, his last observation reveals why sometimes you have to talk about the past to get an indication of the future. What Schmidt, perhaps subconsciously, does is try to forget something he'd prefer to forget.

Schmidt admits that in those years when he led the major leagues in home runs, batted in from 95 to 116 runs, he wanted to talk about the past. And he claimed reporters had a right to ask about things gone by.

"I had a different philosophy on life then, too," Schmidt explained. "That's why I don't answer that question the way I answer it now. Now I feel that a discussion of the past is a waste of time."

Schmidt said the important thing is not to let what happened in the past affect your future.

"I'm just willing to say about my past season that I had an average season. But there are a lot of people in baseball who would like to have had my statistics."

Schmidt then advised that he can't do anything about the future either.

"I feel that my future as an individual is not in my hands," Schmidt continued. "My future is in somebody else's hands. I don't like to brag about the future, brag about the things I'm going to do in the future. All I can do is prepare myself physically and mentally today."

He said his job is just to be ready, in condition and to be a better person to accept what happens.

"Basically what I'm saying is that I'm living my life for today. I'm not letting the past affect it, or what lays in the future affect it, because I don't have any control over that either."

Maybe it's a copout for the past and an alibi for the future. Maybe it's neither. Schmidt is a deep thinker and he appears to have resigned himself to accept whatever life has to offer him, and what already has been offered.

Schmidt even rejects the fact that the fans booed him last season, although the vibrations may still be echoing through the stadium.

"The fans were booing the Phillies' third baseman, the one with jersey number twenty on it," Schmidt said. "And they were booing what he did on the baseball field. I don't think they'd boo me if they got to meet me individually, got to know me as a person.

"... So I can't take personal offense at ... fans. I feel that I in my own hands have the ability to eliminate any negatives the fans might create for myself and the team, simply by playing my brand of baseball more consistently," Schmidt said.

Then, Schmidt reached the bottom line.

"The fans can start out anyway they want to," Schmidt said. "If you're going to start the year off against me, fine, but before the year is over I'll turn you on my side somehow."

Schmidt has come to the conclusion that 1979 is the year he proves his critics right or wrong.

"I have to face facts, the reality that it's time Mike Schmidt reached the potential everybody says he has the capability of reaching. And I'm prepared physically and mentally for that. It's my goal, no specific numbers, but a goal that at the end of the year I can say that 1979 was my best year to this point."

The defense rests.

Tech, WSU Gain Split

WICHITA, KAN. (Special)— Centerfielder John Keller ripped a pair of towering home runs here Friday, one in each game, to lead the Texas Tech baseball team to a split of their doubleheader with the Wichita State Shockers.

Wichita took a narrow 6-5 victory in the opener and then the Raiders came back to win the nightcap 11-8.

The Tech batters exploded for nine runs in the second inning of the nightcap, chasing Shocker starter, and loser, Smokey McCarthy from the game who gave up nine runs in 1 1/3 innings.

The Raider bats cooled off after that, however, and the only other scores came in the fifth, when they picked up a pair. WSU trailed 11-4 going into the final frame before picking up four more runs off starter, and winner, Steve Ibarguen. Mark Johnston had to come in and get the final out for Tech.

An earlier Keller blast brought Tech from behind in the opener. The Raider senior drilled a two-run shot that narrowed the WSU lead to 5-4 in the fourth.

Tech scored another run in the fifth to tie the game at five.

But Joe Carter took the first pitch from Tech hurler James Miller and whipped over the fence in left center in the bottom of the seventh to give WSU a 6-5 victory.

The two teams will a meet again today for another doubleheader.

Mart Posts Sharp Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — A smaller-than-expected increase in world oil prices provided the spark Tuesday as the stock market ran up its sharpest gain in nearly five months.

The advance swept all the leading market indicators to their best levels of the year.

International Business Machines, the No. 1 holding of investing institutions, contributed to the upbeat mood on Wall Street by surging to its highest point since 1973. The stock of the computer giant sported a 7-point gain at 319¼ as of the 4 p.m. close in New York.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 16.54 to 871.36, with about 7 points of its rise coming in the last half hour of trading.

That put the average at a new high since last October, and marked its strongest single-day showing since it posted a record gain of 35.34 points on Nov. 1.

"All we need now is more volume," said one exultant broker. Turnover on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 32.94 million shares, up from 23.43 million Monday, but still far short of the 40 million, 50 million and even 60 million totals that were common in market rallies last year.

New York (AP) — Tuesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.
