U.S. advisers threatened

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A leftist terrorist group is threatening to "exterminate" 150 U.S. military advisers and the Salvadoran soldiers they are training in Honduras, a police chief said.

Maj. Manuel de Jesus Trejo, regional police chief, said Monday that special security steps are being taken to combat the threat, but he refused to specify the measures.

Elsewhere in Central America, U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels claimed Monday that their forces had laid mines in the waters off Puerto Sandino, Nicaragua's main fuel-unloading port. They warned shippers and their insurers against using any of Nicaragua's ports.

The rebels also claimed their "special troops" exploded a mine in those waters on Sunday and called the explosion a "warning to those who are providing arms and fuel to the communist regime." They seek to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

In Nicaragua, the foreign minister, Miguel D'Escoto, said U.S. military presence in Central America, especially in Honduras, threatens the future of a peace agreement adopted over the weekend by five Central American nations.

"In spite of the achievements, peace is still endangered in the region because of the presence of North American troops in Honduras," D'Escoto said Monday night.

Nicaragua, Honduras, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Guatemala agreed to the document, which seeks to end violence in the area with free elections and reduction of military and foreign advisers.

Forged out of a year-long effort by Mexico, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia — the so-called Contadora group — the document won praise Monday from Honduras' foreign minister, Edgardo Paz Barnica, who said it "sets up a practical mechanism to achieve short-term solutions to the crisis in the Central American isthmus."

The United States backs Honduras-based Nicaraguan rebels fighting the Sandinista government.

In northern Honduras, 150 U.S. military advisers are teaching 1,200 Salvadoran soldiers how to fight leftist guerrillas who have been battling El Salvador's government for more than four years.

Several thousand U.S. troops have been holding exercises in Honduras in a show of military strength which the Reagan administration hopes will pressure the Sandinistas to make changes in Nicaragua's political system.

Describing the threat to "exterminate" the U.S. advisers and Salvadoran soldiers, Maj. Trejo said a leftist group called the Peoples' Armed Forces set off low-power explosives Saturday night, scattering leaflets in two neighborhoods in Tegucigalpa, the capital. Such explosives are known as "propaganda bombs."

Trejo said he had not heard of the group before Saturday. He gave The Associated Press one of the leaflets.

Chinese, American leaders confer on trade, security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Premier Zhao Ziyang of China was conferring with President Reagan today in talks aimed at building good will after nearly a year of discord over the status of Taiwan, trade and security issues.

Zhao, China's head of government, is the highest ranking Chinese communist official ever to visit the United States. President Reagan is scheduled to return the visit by traveling to Peking in April, the first trip to China by a U.S. chief executive in nine years.

The Chinese premier announced in advance of his trip that he would not repeat Chinese insistence on an immediate halt of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, a step apparently intended to avoid unnecessary public disputes. But the Chinese government also made known that Zhao, maintaining China's independent and non-aligned stance, did not intend to "kowtow" to Reagan administration officials.

U.S. officials emphasized the positive elements of the relationship, citing heightened expectations for increased two-way trade and predicting that recent developments may result in new cooperation agreements by the time Reagan visits China.

They played down expectations of any major accomplishments or breakthroughs during the present meeting, calling it a building stone in a process aimed at placing relations on a solid and realistic basis.

"I would by no means want to say that ... differences have disappeared," a senior U.S. official told reporters at the White House. "But we will let the premier know that differences should not obscure the mutual benefits both nations have from this relationship."

The fact is, he said, "the United States has made good on the president's policy to treat China as a friendly, non-aligned country" and the two nations are in a period "which has restored momentum and a positive tone to our relationship."

U.S. officials, who spoke about the trip on the condition they not be identified by name, played down expectations that a potent strategic alliance can soon be forged between Peking and Washington to balance the military might of the Soviet Union.

However, "I won't deny that in dealing with the Soviet Union that it is helpful for them to see China and the United States cooperating, especially on the problem of Soviet expansionism," the senior U.S. official said.

These are some of the major issues and problems U.S. officials say are likely to be discussed during Zhao's visit.

—Taiwan: Administration officials make clear they will not renegotiate or further define how the United States intends to live up to an August 1982 agreement not to increase and "ultimately" to end arms shipments.

—High Technology: U.S. officials say the Chinese were "purring like kittens for awhile" over Washington's decision to remove many restrictions on high technology exports. Now the possible military applications of providing such technology are being thrashed out again by U.S. allies, worrying the Chinese.

—Nuclear Cooperation: China has edged significantly closer towards accepting non-proliferation safeguards and U.S. officials say an agreement is possible by April to permit the sale of U.S. nuclear reactors to spur China's production of energy.

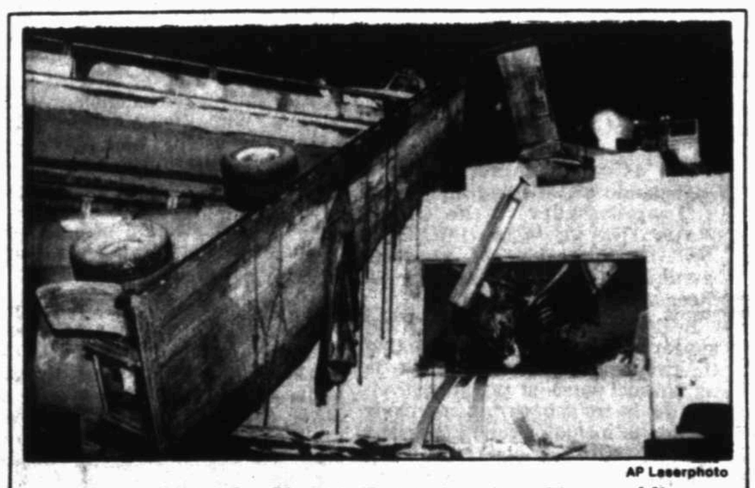

—Arms sales: No major sales predicted, although China is exploring U.S. anti-aircraft and anti-tank weapons. U.S. will seek to expand contacts with the Chinese military establishment.

—North Korea: The United States will ask Zhao to use China's influence to help make sure the "murderous and serious" behavior of communist North Korea, as seen in the bloody attempted assassination of South Korea's president in Rangoon, Burma, last October, does not spark a war in the Korean peninsula.

Meanwhile, some U.S. supporters of Taiwan told reporters they fear that Reagan may be forced into unwise compromises on the issue during his April visit to China.

And, officials of the Conservative Caucus accused the administration of jeopardizing U.S. security by treating communist China "as if it were a partner or ally."

A truck driven by Harold Knott, Lansing, Ill., straddles an overpass structure where he swerved to avoid hitting a car.

Trucker spends himself to save family of four

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Thirty-five years of experience on the road boiled down to a split-second decision and Harold Knott didn't hesitate. Four lives were saved, but his was lost.

The 61-year-old truck driver swerved off a snow-swept expressway Monday to avoid colliding with a station wagon carrying a mother and three children, but was killed when his rig went through a guardrail and fell 25 feet, police said.

The woman was arrested later in the day at her home after being charged with leaving the scene of the accident and changing lanes without due caution. She was identified as Leonide Acevedo, 33. Her children ranged in age from 5 to 9.

Tax rebate checks show rare increase

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The Permian Basin showed an upswing in its sales tax rebates when checks for November sales were mailed to Midland and Odessa.

The 1 cent city sales tax collected along with the state's four cents on the dollar was handed back to the cities this month.

For the first time in more than a year, Midland's check for $420,910.05 reflected a 15 percent increase over the same month last year. Then the check was for $365,635.36. The rebate checks each month have been for lesser amounts than the city received for the same month the previous year.

Odessa beat Midland in sales as the neighboring city received a check for $469,260.16, a 20 percent hike over last year's payment of P389,339.37.

"It looks like we're out of the bottom and headed up," said Midland's city finance director Troy Gifford.

However, he pointed out that the $513,000 check for October sales was higher than this payment and he had expected a check in the range of $450,000 this month.

Even so, "my three month average is progressing upward," he said. Gifford expects next month's payment to be in the range of $1.2 million to reflect Christmas sales in December.

"If it's not that much, we've got a problem," he said.

"My concern is we'll hit a slump in the spring with January and February receipts."

The checks have reflected a slight increase over what had been expected since August when the city received $977,000. September showed $406,115; October, $383,867; November, $914,080; and December, $513,283.

The sales tax for the state and city are collected at the same time by the State Comptroller's Office. The city's share is then given back to the municipal government. About a fourth of the revenue for Midland's general fund operating budget of $29 million this fiscal year comes from these sales tax rebates. Unlike the 1982-83 fiscal year when the city expected almost $11 million in sales tax checks, the council this year has budgeted $6.5 million. Gifford said if the economy improves, the city may receive $7 million by the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30.

Statewide, "checks are up a whopping 39.5 percent over last January's payment," said State Comptroller Bob Bullock. "A big part of that increase came because 15,000 taxpayers who previously only paid taxes four times a year started paying every month and we got their money back to these 980 city halls that much quicker. But some of the increase is due to the economic recovery we're seeing in Texas."

Wyoming nutritionist can't stand steady diet of new magazines

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Kem Blackmore receives Cuisine magazine at his office. Not so unusual for a nutritionist, you might think.

But he's also started getting about 100 other magazines, and the diet is more than he can stand.

The unsolicited mail began in early December. Among the titles are Playboy, Cat-Fancy, Motor Trend, Kit Car, Modern Photography, U.S. News and World Report, Ski and Guns.

As if the magazines weren't bad enough, Blackmore is being billed for them. He estimates it will cost $20 in postage just to reject them all.

The nutritionist suspects two practical jokers are behind the scheme, which also has resulted in reams of mail about investment funds, gold and land purchases and gemstone investments.

"One of them was a minimum $5,000 investment," Blackmore said. "Like I've got $5,000 lying around."

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST Wednesday, January 11
●Low Temperatures
Rain Snow Showers Flurries

Snow from the northern to eastern Plains and from New England to the Carolinas, turning to rain for the Atlantic Coast and Florida, is forecast through Wednesday by the National Weather Service. Cold weather is expected for the northern two-thirds of the country.

New warming trend anticipated

The Arctic blew its sharp breath through the Permian Basin Monday evening, dropping temperatures and a few drops of rain. But the frigid blast didn't stay and warmer temperatures are following.

The weatherman with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for clear skies tonight with a low in the mid-20s. Winds should be light and variable.

Wednesday will be on the upswing as the mercury is to rise into the middle 50s with southerly winds sliding through at 5-15 mph.

High on Monday was a warm 60 degrees, but not high enough to break the record of 79 recorded on that date in 1940. Overnight low was 30 degrees, a sizzling reading compared to the record low of 5 set in 1962.

The NWS recorded 0.05 of an inch of rain overnight, pushing the month and year total up to 0.39 of an inch.

Hunger panel issues final report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential task force says states should have the option of running food assistance programs, but an influential Republican senator dashed hopes for the plan before the panel even adopted its final report.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said in a statement Monday that Congress "is not likely to favor" the most far-reaching recommendation of the White House Task Force on Food Assistance.

His news release was delivered to the Labor Department auditorium while the task force was still meeting to approve its findings. The final report was adopted several hours later.

"We have not been able to substantiate allegations of rampant hunger," the 13-member panel found. And it said, "for the vast majority of low-income people," public and private food programs were "sufficient for those who take advantage of them."

These statements appeared to agree with comments by President Reagan and White House counselor Edwin Meese III that generated a firestorm of criticism.

Meese, when asked about hungry children in a Dec. 8 interview, said, "I've heard a lot of anecdotal stuff, but I haven't heard any authoritative figures."

Reagan told reporters Dec. 14, "We are doing more to feed the hungry in this country today than has ever been done by any administration."

The task force report recommended no new major programs, but contained proposals designed to prevent budget cuts in food assistance programs.

Among them were proposals to continue federal aid to private charities and keep the nutrition program for poor women and young children at current caseload levels. Other recommendations would increase slightly the amount of food stamps for recipients and make it easier to become eligible for the stamps.

Staff recommendations for new definitions of households, which anti-poverty groups said could have led to cutbacks, were scrapped.

But the recommendation with the greatest potential impact was the option for states to receive grants, allowing them to run the food programs and determine who qualifies for stamps and other food aid. They also could choose to remain under the federal program.

Food programs, currently administered by state and local governments operating under federal eligibility rules, total more than $15 billion a year — with some $12 billion going to food stamps. Other programs include school lunch subsidies and the nutrition programs.

In his statement predicting defeat of the option plan, Dole said of the federal food stamp program, "It's not perfect, but it has been very effective in addressing the nutrition needs of low-income Americans." Others were more harsh in their comments.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who favors increases in food aid, said, "In effect, this commission says to the hungry: 'Let them eat block grants.'"

Robert Greenstein, director of a public interest group called the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, said under state control, "You would see a transfer of school lunch money to middle class schools districts and away from pregnant mothers."

The state option passed 9-3, with one member absent, after backers said the grants to states would rise with a state's unemployment rate and increases in food prices.

County offical orders hotline, food for suburban needy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A local official is establishing a hunger hotline in an affluent county near Washington, saying he is appalled by a report that a record number of families in the area received emergency food supplies in 1983.

Montgomery County Executive Charles W. Gilchrist announced Monday that he has ordered creation of a telephone hot line and three additional government food depots to speed food deliveries to the poor in the Maryland suburban communities near Washington.

"It is an outrage that (hunger) exists ... in this affluent county and this affluent country," he said.

The county will also start distributing surplus food obtained through a federal program on a monthly basis, rather than every 60 or 120 days, Gilchrist said.

Gilchrist and his aides, who approved all of the report's major recommendations, said that the county government's general information number will double as a 24-hour food hot line by the end of this week.

His announcement of new food programs came less than a week after members of the Montgomery County Food Network, a coalition of volunteers, churches and county officials, disclosed details of a survey showing that public and private relief agencies gave food or financial assistance to 21,118 households last year. In 1980, only 7,878 households were assisted.

City police respond to shooting

Fireman Bob Wooten shoves a burned mattress out the window at 205 W. Humble, following a fire that broke out at about 8 p.m. Monday.

From Staff Reports

A shooting at a southside business and two house fires kept Midland police and firemen busy Monday.

The shooting at Glass and Mirror, 1207 S. Garfield, was reported at about 4:20 p.m. Victim Samuel Martinez, orginally thought to be shot, received a blow to the head, according to police reports. He was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital by ambulance, where he was treated and released, according to an MMH spokeswoman.

Police have a suspect in the case but no action will be taken unless charges are filed with the district attorney, according to a detective.

A fire believed to have been caused by a faulty wall heater caused heavy damage to a bathroom, bedroom and hall at 205 W. Humble at about 8 p.m. Smoke and heat damage also were reported throughout the house, which was occupied by Emma Cunningham and owned by Walter Lee Sutton. Nine firemen responded to the blaze, which took 300 gallons of water to extinguish.

No injuries were reported.

Eight firemen responded to an earlier blaze which was confined to a garage at a residence at 1108 W. Kentucky, occupied by Robert Herebia and owned by E.T. Owen. Reported at 10:30 a.m., the fire caused heavy damage to the garage and contents. Seventy-five gallons of water were used to extinguish it.

In other action Monday, police are investigating a burglary of a residence, reported by Albert Ward, 411 E. Maple, at 3:30 p.m. Five thousand dollars in gold, a kerosene lamp and other items were reported missing. Total value was placed at $5,500.

A microwave oven and eight fire extinguishers were reported missing by Carl Pirkle at 7:40 a.m. Monday, following an apparent burglary at South Elementary School, 201 W. Dakota. Total value was placed at $395.

Dennis Keith of 4100 Dyer Circle reported the theft of golf clubs and bag from his garage at 1 p.m. Monday. Total value was placed at $675.

A television set, calculator and cash box, valued at $299, were reported missing at 2:15 p.m. Monday by Nick Sanchez following an apparent burglary of a business at 110 E. New Jersey. Entry apparently was gained through a west-side door.

Premier Zhao's visit seems routine

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — The extraordinary thing about Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang's visit here this week — the first by a Chinese communist head of state — is how routine it all seems. There will be accords to expand trade, cultural and scientific exchanges as well as $80 million of high technology sales.

Negotiations on an agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation also will go forward so that President Reagan can sign it as well as a tax treaty, exempting American businessmen from double taxation, an investment code and a maritime pact when he pays a return visit to China in April.

The bitterness caused by the defection of Hu Na, China's leading female tennis star and two years of mistrust caused by Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign statements on Taiwan, and subsequent efforts to see that the Taiwan Relations Act is strictly enforced, seem to be a thing of the past.

Even conservative pro-Taiwan lobbyists are forced to admit "there is not a big Taiwan issue" anymore. "Relations are really not bad," conceded Dr. Harold Hinton, a right-wing China expert. "We are getting along with them (the Chinese) as sort of a friend and that's all we should expect."

Asked Monday what he would say if Premier Zhao demanded an end to U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, a high-ranking White House briefer told newsmen: "We certainly don't shrink from such a discussion. We will let him know that we abide by those commitments."

The most important of them, from China's point of view, is an Aug. 17, 1982 joint communique that pledged to "reduce gradually" U.S. arms sales to Taiwan over an unspecified period of time until those sales come to an end. The Chinese want a timetable to be set which the United States has refused to do.

Instead, Reagan has made clear such sales, chiefly 5FE fighter-bombers, will continue until there is a final peaceful resolution between Taiwan and the People's Republic of China.

"He (the president) pretty flatly reassured us that the communique means we will be as cooperative with the PRC as possible but not at the expense of the Republic of China," said Ray Cline, former deputy CIA director.

Cline added, "He has frequently declared, and we believe him, that 'we will not trade in an old friend for a new friend.'"

But Cline, who now is of the leaders of the Free Asia Foundation, is worried that in all the hoopla and goodwill generated in the next few days, Reagan may find himself trapped by the clever Chinese in ways that he has not even thought of.

"This is the opening gambit in a game that might be much more hardball by the time President Reagan visits the mainland in April," Cline predicted at a breakfast meeting with reporters here. Premier Zhao's goal is to have everything go swimmingly in Washington, Cline said.

This will help "set up" the President for the game of hardball when he gets to China, Cline said.

"This will be a media event, a constant photographer's opportunity," he said, "because for the most part that is what both sides want." Reagan will be treated similarly when he visits China. The Chinese are savy, he said. "It will be a very good campaign experience for him," Cline predicted.

"What a marvellous picture — Ronald Reagan can go to China and be treated as a honored guest. Just think of the television coverage of his visit to the Great Wall. That's when the Chinese will surprise him. It's a marvellous time for them to press for another concession on Taiwan," he predicted.

The Chinese may push for a terminal date for U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, he said. The Chinese position is that since the 1982 communique promised a "final resolution" of the issue, the U.S. is committed to provide a cutoff date so long as progress is being made towards "peaceful reunification."

Reagan's stand, Cline said, is that a final cutoff of arms will "not be considered except in the context of a deal between the PRC and Taiwan." And that's nowhere in sight, he added.

Since both sides have agreed that there will be no joint communicuqe at the end of either Zhao's trip or Reagan's, Cline fears that the Chinese will be able to subtly blackmail Reagan by the time he arrives in China. "They will have Reagan in a position where they can say (in their unilateral statement) that this (Reagan) trip is a failure," Cline said, unless he agrees to appropriate language on Taiwan.

"I can see half of the White House staff fainting at that and saying my God, say whatever is necessary so this will look like a big success back home. Their (the Chinese) experience with the August communique is that they can extract verbal concessions which play into their hands," Cline said.

He also recalled the diplomatic disaster that the Chinese handed to Vice Presidential candidate George Bush when he travelled to China in 1980. They read the riot act to Bush and denounced the trip as a complete failure.

That the Chinese would give such treatment to Bush, a purported 'friend" who was well known to them as one of America's first ambassadors to Peking and as the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is an indication, Cline believes, of the kind of "hardball" game they may be reserving for Reagan.

Reagan himself however does not appear to be worried. Aides said that the two men would meet Tuesday in an unusual one-hour private conversation before broadening their agenda to include Cabinet members such as Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The official Chinese delegation consists of thirteen senior Communist Party officials, the most high-ranking group ever to visit the United States. But the sheer numbers may indicate that Premier Zhao himself is not really in control, Cline said.

"He (Zhao) is not a first-rate figure," the former CIA official said. "He really is third-rate in terms of the communist party and a bad fourth in terms of power, a protege of (Vice Premier) Deng Xiaoping who probably will not survive the passage of his 80-year-old mentor."

Zhao's biggest challenge at home is the purging of three million members of the Communist party, which he is trying to do in order to rid China of its remaining Maoist ideologues and replace them with the new young technocrats who are China's only hope to catch up with the West.

Among Zhao's key aims in his visit here will be to expand the list of advanced technological items, such as computers and semi conductors, that China needs to enter the 21st century. Zhao arrived here Monday with a shopping list of 65 such items.

When Weinberger visited China in September, he promised the U.S. would grant licenses for 31 of them. Meanwhile, the administration will seek written assurances that there will be no re-transfer to third countries or loss of this technology if it is granted, White House sources said.

Just how useful China is as a card to play to restrain Soviet adventurism is a subject of hot dispute. "The Chinese themselves tell us," a senior administration official said, "that 'we're not playing cards and this isn't a card game.'"

But the fact that Zhao is visiting Washington on the eve of a new Reagan initiative to the Russians has not been lost sight of either. Reagan is due to deliver a major speech on Soviet-American relations on Friday or over the weekend setting the stage for a high-level U.S.-Soviet meeting.

Advisories are issued

By The Associated Press

Freezing rain mixed with snow prompted the National Weather Service to issue travelers advisories as snowshowers threatened to sweep areas from the Great Lakes and Ohio valley into western New England.

A winter storm watch was also posted for as far south as Virginia and a rain system extended from Ohio across Alabama into northeast Texas.

Patches of fog shrouded the Pacific coast states early today and gale warnings were posted for the Gulf coast of Texas.

Diplomatic relations established

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States established full diplomatic relations with the Vatican today, under President Reagan's belief that the importance of the ties outweighs lingering Protestant opposition.

The first announcement came from the Vatican in a brief statement:

"The Holy See and the United States, wishing to develop their already existing mutual, friendly relations, have decided in common accord to establish between them diplomatic relations," said the statement, read by the Rev. Romeo Panciroli said.

Reagan is expected to nominate William A. Wilson, as the nation's first ambassador to the Holy See. Wilson, 69, is a California real-estate developer who has long had close ties to Reagan.

Wilson was appointed by Reagan as his personal representative to the Vatican soon after taking office in 1981.

The Vatican will in turn appoint an ambassador, known as a papal nuncio, to Washington. It has been represented in Washington by an apostolic delegate.

State Department officials who confirmed the decision insisted on anonymity.

They said that in deciding to establish diplomatic ties, the administration takes the position that it won't violate the constitutional requirement for a separation of church and state because it doesn't confer special status on the Roman Catholic Church.

"It is not a religious issue but a public policy question. ..." commented Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the United States Catholic Conference.

"This decision reflects the role played so effectively by the Holy See, under the leadership of Pope John Paul II and his predecessors, on behalf of peace and justice in the world," Malone said in a statement for release today.

Judge turns down AT&T rate hike request

AUSTIN (AP) — AT&T, the biggest loser — so far — in the breakup of the phone system, has failed to persuade a state district judge that Texas long distance rates must immediately rise.

Nine days after the historic breakup of the nationwide Bell System, AT&T lawyers were in court late Monday to challenge the way the Public Utility Commission is handling the new order in the phone industry.

But State District Judge Harley Clark turned down AT&T's double request. The company wanted Clark to overrule a PUC hearing examiner and allow an immediate $115.4 million rate hike, or block a PUC order forcing AT&T to give Southwestern Bell $617 million.

"We're asking that you get us out of this box that we're in," AT&T lawyer Joyce Beasley told Clark, claiming company losses of $300,000 per day since Jan. 1.

But Assistant Attorney General Fernando Rodriguez, defending the PUC action, called Ms. Beasley's comments "the sky-is-falling language."

Under the federal court-ordered divestiture of American Telephone & Telegraph, Southwestern Bell and AT&T Communications are separate — and now opposing — entities. AT&T retained most of the intrastate long distance business, depriving Southwestern Bell of one of its most profitable services.

To replace some of the long distance money, the PUC ordered AT&T to pay so-called "access charges" to Southwestern Bell and other local phone companies in Texas. AT&T says its rates must go up to cover those charges.

The $115.4 million interim hike, which includes a 10.7 percent increase in intrastate long distance tolls, is part of a $301 million increase package filed by AT&T.

Last Friday, PUC examiner Phillip Holder turned down the immediate hike, saying it would be considered at a hearing to begin Jan. 24. AT&T appealed that decision to the full commission, and went to Clark.

After Clark turned down the AT&T request Monday night, Ron LeMay, an AT&T vice president, said the company must stop the $300,000 daily losses.

"I'm not screaming doomsday stuff, but over time utilities simply cannot afford to incur $300,000 a day in losses without affecting service," he said, adding, "I'm not telling you service is going to be affected immediately."

Ms. Beasley told Clark that despite the legal scramble to raise rates, "Our very real desire is to have lower long distance rates in the state of Texas."

AT&T's access payments to Southwestern Bell are up to five times higher than the similar charges paid by competing long distance companies, such as MCI and Sprint. But AT&T enjoys better connections with the Bell system.

Victim of gunshot wound to testify in handgun suit

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys for a man paralyzed by an accidental gunshot said he would testify from his wheelchair today in his $43 million lawsuit seeking to make handgun manufacturers and sellers responsible for handgun injuries.

David Clancy, 21, of Amarillo, was paralyzed from the shoulders down in 1977 when he was accidentally shot by a .22-caliber revolver in the parking lot of an Amarillo school.

Dorothy Clancy of Amarillo wept Monday as she testified about seeing her son after the shooting.

"He kept saying, 'I wish I could move my arms and legs,'" she told the state district court jury.

Clancy's attorney, Windle Turley, said he would call the last of his witnesses today, the sixth day of the trial, clearing the way for the Zale Corp., which owned the discount stores that sold the gun in 1971, to present its case.

On Monday, University of Wisconsin professor Leonard Berkowitz testified that the mere presence of a gun is enough to incite some people to violence.

"I firmly disagree with those people who maintain that guns do not kill people, that only people kill people," Berkowitz said.

Lawyers for Zale said handguns are safe and useful when handled properly.

Monday was the fifth day of the trial, in which Clancy seeks to recover $43 million in damages from Zale and two other companies involved in either the design, manufacture or sale of the gun.

Turley has filed several suits similar to Clancy's but this is the first to go to trial. Pro-gun groups have said a jury finding for Clancy would have a chilling effect on the small handgun industry.

Men electrocuted trying to get bird

WACO (AP) — A father and son were electrocuted when they tried to get their escaped exotic bird out of a tree with a metal pole that touched a power line, police said.

Boyce Corley, 52, and his 31-year-old son, Tom, were killed Monday night when they climbed on top of a garage to try to capture the blue and gold macaw, owned by Corley's other son, Randall.

The bird escaped Sunday and had perched 30 to 40 feet up in a tree behind a vacant house, said police officer Steve Dieterich.

The two men were trying to catch the bird using a metal pole with a net on one end when the wind apparently blew the pole against a power line, he said.

'National Geographic' season opens

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Goodall may know more about chimpanzees than any other human being, and film shot to document her research over two decades in the mountains of Tanzania is priceless.

Those elements — the dedicated scientist's knowledge and insight and a talented photographer's fascinating footage — are more than enough to make "Among the Wild Chimpanzees" Wednesday night a superior and thoroughly entertaining hour of television.

But Alexander Scourby's narration is that, and no more, and Miss Goodall herself lends too little emotion to some very dramatic film, though it is, indeed, interesting to know that she considers this "one of the proudest moments of my whole life," or that "among the darkest days of my life."

That weakness undoubtedly is the result of a script written and delivered years after the film was shot, and it's an inconsequential drawback at that. Watch "Among the Wild Chimpanzees" for the warming scene of a baby learning to walk, or for the harrowing look into the eyes of an apparently deranged mother who kills others' offspring.

It's the premiere program in the ninth season of "National Geographic Specials" on public TV. The schedule for this year includes "Love Those Trains" (Feb. 8), "Return to Everest" (March 7) and "Flight of the Whooping Crane" (April 4).

The National Geographic Society has been producing the series for television since the mid-1960s, first on CBS, then on ABC, and "Among the Wild Chimpanzees" is not the first show about Miss Goodall's research.

"Miss Goodall and the Wild Chimpanzees" was broadcast Dec. 22, 1965, when the series was on CBS. She appeared in another "Geographic Special," "Search for the Great Apes," Jan. 13, 1976.

The Gulf Oil Corp. has underwritten the entire public-TV run of the series.

Miss Goodall set up camp in the Gombe Stream Game Reserve, now national park, July 14, 1960. She was in her mid-20s.

Raised in Bournemouth on the south coast of England, Miss Goodall recalls a lifelong interest in wildlife. "I think I first dreamed of going to Africa," she said, "after reading 'Doctor Doolittle' and 'Tarzan' when I was about 8."

She was not much older when she visited Kenya for the first time, and on that occasion spoke with Dr. Louis Leakey, the noted anthropologist. ("Dr. Leakey and the Dawn of Man" and "The Legacy of L.S.D. Leakey," "National Geographic Specials," Nov. 5, 1966, and Jan. 9, 1978).

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	2 ♠	3 ♡
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

Look for any clue that will help you place the lie of the cards. The auction can be a fruitful place to begin your search.

Note North's raise to two spades. He acted as if the double did not exist and made the bid he would have made had West passed — that is modern expert practice. While South might be a couple of points short of a jump to four spades, the bidding had indicated that all his partner's high cards would be working.

West led a low heart. East won the ace and shifted to a diamond. West took the ace and continued with the queen, taken by dummy's king.

Obviously, if trumps are 2-2, declarer has no problem. However, both the probabilities and the auction suggest that trumps are more likely to be 3-1, with the short trump hand at declarer's left. That raised the possibility that declarer might be able to score his low trumps singly by ruffing hearts. But to score three heart ruffs, it was essential that declarer ruff a heart immediately, before testing trumps.

Declarer came to hand with a heart ruff and cashed the ace-king of trumps — it was essential that he retain the queen in dummy. When West showed out on the second trump, declarer turned his attention to making his trumps one at a time.

He cashed the ace-king of clubs and ruffed a club low. He returned to his hand with a heart ruff and ruffed his last club with the queen of trumps. (Observe that, had declarer used the queen of trumps to draw one round of trumps, East would now have been able to overuff and defeat the contract.) All that remained to do was to lead another heart from dummy to ruff with declarer's last trump. Declarer scored two high trumps, five ruffs, a diamond and two clubs.

Freedom's role

For a decade, a New York-based human rights organization has been conducting a grim survey — a rollcall of free nations. With frightening regularity the results of each Freedom House survey have shown how freedom is being gobbled up in the nations of the world.

This year's results, though, carried an extremely important message for all lovers of freedom. That message is clear. The members of a society must be willing to fight for the freedoms they gain.

The Freedom House survey indicated there are 1,665.9 million free people in the world, residing in 52 nations. But there are 1,914.4 million people living in the absence of freedom in 58 nations. The other 1,066.7 million people live in 56 countries and enjoy partial freedom.

It was in those partially free societies that progress was made this year in freedom's name. Poland, South Africa and Yugoslavia were upgraded to "partially free" from a previous rating of "not free."

Behind the categorizations that tend to dehumanize the freedom issue is a very human story. The three nations were upgraded to a "partly free" status not on the basis of additional liberties granted to their people by the governments. They were upgraded because of the political dissent by their freedom fighters — dissent against oppressive societies that all too frequently results in harsher treatment by totalitarian masters.

Said Raymond Gastil, director of the survey, "Although freedom remained at issue in a large number of states, there were no decisive shifts for or against political rights and civil liberties during 1983."

No, there were no "decisive" changes for freedom last year. But in at least three nations of the world people have bought and paid for additional liberties with their blood and their courage.

That is worth the gratitude of the free world.

Welcome new nation

We welcome Brunei as the world's newest nation, soon to become the 158th sovereign nation in the United Nations, with equal rights in the General Assembly.

Where's Brunei? It's way out there in the Pacific, on the island of Borneo. It's nestled in between the Malaysian states of Sarawak and Sabah, overlooking the southern reaches of the South China Sea.

On New Year's Day, Brunei received independence, ending a 96-year history as a British protectorate. Its ruler is Sultan Muda Hassanal Bolkiah. Appearing on state-owned television, he assigned himself three Cabinet posts — prime minister, home affairs minister and finance minister.

Brunei enters the world of nations with a big plus. Financially, Brunei is in excellent shape. It's income from oil, natural gas, rubber and hardwoods is more than $4 billion a year, the equivalent of $20,000 for each of the new nation's 205,000 citizens.

That makes it one of the world's richest nations, as well as one of the world's smallest. A British Army unit, the 6th Gurkha Rifles, will be on hand for a few years to help guard Brunei's wealth. That's good because there will be many envious eyes and grasping hands. It's risky for a Third World nation to be rich.

In addition to his other duties, perhaps the sultan should make himself defense minister.

Another View:

Honoring presidents

The United States has seven presidential libraries in place and two more in the developmental stage. An eighth one (for Ronald Reagan) is being discussed. This proliferation of monuments to the nation's chief executives makes no sense from the standpoint of public policy.

It wouldn't be a subject for public concern if ex-presidents or their heirs merely wanted to erect memorials with private funds and pay for the upkeep. Nor would it matter if former presidents' personal papers and mementos were deposited in the libraries. But that's not the way it works out.

Although ex-presidents or their relatives and friends make the key decisions about the size and design of presidential libraries, and official presidential papers are sequestered in them, the Treasury picks up a large part of the expense.

A bill now pending in the Senate, supported by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., and Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., seeks to set some standards for future presidential libraries. No building could be larger than 40,000 square feet, including museum space. That is substantially less than the average of existing presidential libraries. The bill also would require that structures be scaled to surroundings.

Such standards would be helpful, up to a point. At least, pharaonic ex-presidents would be prevented from building virtual pyramids at public expense.

A better idea was offered several years ago by the General Services Administration. It called for concentrating the official papers of the next six presidents at a single library. That would hold down the expense and also give students, historians and other researchers easier access to presidential papers.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Jackson cleared of agent charge

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Jesse Jackson has more than his Syrian coup and President Reagan's congratulations to be pleased about. The Justice Department has officially cleared him of any suspicion that he acted as an agent of the Libyan government four years ago.

Jack Anderson

The inquiry into Jackson's status began in September 1980, as a result of press reports that Jackson had taken money from Libya and was trying to negotiate a Libyan oil contract for a black-owned Alabama company. If Jackson had accepted money from Libya, he would have been required to register as a foreign agent.

The investigation came at a politically embarrassing time. Jackson was supporting President Carter for re-election, and charges that Jackson was a Libyan agent would have hurt Carter, particularly with Jewish voters. So Carter's people took steps to keep the lid on until after Election Day.

The Justice Department sent an initial inquiry to Jackson in September 1980, by registered mail. Jackson refused to accept the letter. A second letter was prepared in late October and was to be delivered by the FBI.

An internal Justice Department document seen by my associate Tony Capaccio states that Carter campaign aide Jack Watson and presidential counsel Lloyd Cutler "had indeed intervened and directed that the letter be delivered no sooner than next Wednesday, Nov. 5, 1980" — the day after the election.

It then took months of legal sparring between Justice Department attorneys and Jackson's lawyer, John Bustamente, before specific questions were posed to Jackson in August 1981. Meanwhile, another newspaper story reported that Libyan diplomat Ali El-Houderi had donated $10,000 to a benefit concert for Jackson's Operation PUSH Inc. in December 1979. The government wanted to know about this, too.

In March 1982, Jackson's attorney wrote the Justice Department that Jackson had received no broker's fee, bonus or commission from either the Libyans or the Alabama oil company. He confirmed El-Houderi's $10,000 contribution, but said it went to Operation PUSH, not to Jackson.

In June, Justice wrote to ask "what percentage of Operation PUSH Inc. receipts from the fund raiser are represented by the $10,000 contribution from Ali El-Houderi?"

In July, Bustamente promised a response "within the next 10 days."

In October, a Justice Department memo noted that although the specific information had not been received, "Jackson's attorneys have indicated that (El-Houderi's $10,000) was not a significant percentage of the organization's funding for that year." The memo added: "If true, the investigation could be concluded, for there would be no indication of foreign control. Unfortunately, Jackson's attorneys have neglected to provide any corroboration for this statement, in spite of numerous promises, both oral and written, to do so."

On July 7, 1983, Justice wrote Bustamente: "Your July 19, 1982, letter indicated that information could be expected 'within the next 10 days.' Nearly one year later it is still needed to conclude this inquiry."

On Nov. 15, an internal memo repeated this message and added: "The other information provided by Jackson's attorneys is consistent with the results of the FBI investigation, which has been unable to uncover any commercial undertakings involving Jackson and Libya. The possibility of proving such commercial ties is not promising, and cannot be further explored without grand jury authorization."

Finally, on Dec. 2, 1983, Bustamente, blaming the delay on "extensive travel," gave Justice the figure it had asked for 27 months before: The Libyan diplomat's $10,000 donation was part of $93,500 in total proceeds from the fund-raiser, and amounted to 3 or 4 percent of Operation PUSH's yearly operating budget.

On Dec. 14, the Justice Department wrote Jackson's lawyer that the inquiry was closed.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan enters uncharted terrain

WASHINGTON — When Soviet negotiators walked out of the Geneva medium-range nuclear arms talks, they triggered a fateful decision by President Reagan to send the Senate a precise list of alleged Soviet SALT violations — the first time the U.S. has ever accused the Russians of cheating on treaty obligations.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The president has informed top aides of his decision to comply with the Senate's request, voted overwhelmingly after the KAL 007 disaster. When the record arrives on Capitol Hill in January, it will end feuding among high-level Reaganites on the cheating issue. This has pitted senior presidential aides James A. Baker III and Michael K. Deaver against Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and, when he served as national security adviser, Interior Secretary William Clark. The president's decision to go public also overrides advice of his wife Nancy, not a common occurrence in the White House.

The decision follows the president's own inclinations so closely that he might eventually have blown the whistle on the Soviets even had they continued to negotiate in Geneva. But their walkout warmed the climate for Reagan to finally shrug off restraints.

Reagan's decision enhances the feeling here that, starting with the Korean Air Lines shoot-down, the Kremlin has been on the run. Backed into a politically-weak position by boycotting the Geneva talks, Moscow will be hard put to explain away the carefully-researched U.S. record of non-compliance with signed treaties.

That should mitigate anti-Reagan sentiment in the nuclear freeze movement. "We are going to push this thing hard and we have the evidence to do it," a key administration official told us. His words promise an all-out campaign to show citizens of the West where danger of nuclear war comes from: the Soviet nuclear buildup and violations of treaties designed to safeguard the balance of nuclear terror.

Boiled down, these are the violations the president will allege:

Discovery of a huge new radar in Southern Siberia. The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) calls this an indisputable violation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty, the heart of SALT I signed by President Nixon in 1972.

Continued testing of a second "new type" long-range ballistic missile. Only one is permitted by SALT II, the unratified agreement signed by President Carter in 1979 that both countries agreed to abide by.

The discovery by reconnaissance satellites, not yet publicly known, that Soviet Backfires are deployed as intercontinental bombers on the Kola Peninsula above Scandinavia. As part of SALT II, then Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev pledged in writing that the Backfire never would be used as an intercontinental bomber.

Wholesale encryption of data from missile test flights, a violation of SALT II. Encoding denies the U.S. its legal right to check on the new weapon being tested.

Beyond these allegations, Reagan may shock the Soviets with another accusation of an entirely different character: a charge of blatant refusal to abide by human rights pledges made at the 1975 Helsinki Conference on European Security. That would carry the president's attack beyond U.S.-Soviet bilateral relations to affect, perhaps profoundly, European signers of the Helsinki accords.

Two documents are now getting final editing touches on Soviet treaty violations. The one to be sent to Capitol Hill is under control of national security adviser Robert McFarlane. The other, written expressly and only for Reagan and a few top officials, is a 300-page document drafted by the General Advisory Committee to the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA).

The second document, kept under lock and key, is said to be an unprecedented examination of every foreign obligation entered into by the Soviets since 1917. It includes the first analysis of SALT violations by non-government, outside specialists, breaking the monopoly on such studies by a small bureaucracy assigned to a U.S.-Soviet commission that sits in Geneva.

Ever since taking office, Ronald Reagan has favored a frank, frontal approach to the Russians on SALT violations. But, like his predecessors, he was always advised: Wait, now is not the right time to move. That advice got muscle from the Nancy Reagan-Baker-Deaver trio worried that nuclear challenges to Moscow would smudge their dream of Reagan as 1984 peace candidate.

The president has ruled otherwise in a courageous, long-overdue decision, helped along by Soviet bullying in Geneva. His whistle-blowing leads the two superpowers into new, uncharted terrain.

CHARLEY REESE

Freezeniks hold false premise

I'm for peace. I'm against nuclear war. Well, kiss my Aunt Matilda's hound dog. What else are you for and against? How about child abuse? Are you against that? Good. Hunger? Against that too? Wow, what a moral person you are.

Charley Reese

Forgive my sarcasm, but the self-righteous attitude of some of today's peaceniks and freezeniks annoys me. They think that by declaring themselves opposed to obvious evils that they obtain some sort of moral superiority. They sustain this sense of moral superiority by using the old zealot's trick of believing that those who disagree with their thoughts on how to prevent war are tools of the devil. They ought to be in day care centers.

Let me tell you who is for peace and against nuclear war. It is the pilot of a B-52 with hydrogen bombs in the belly of his aging plane. It is the sailor on a Trident or Polaris submarine. It is the soldier with his rifle facing the Berlin Wall. It is a president, whatever his name and party, whose footsteps are dogged for four years by a man carrying a black box with the nuclear codes. It is the airman or Air Force officer sitting in a missile silo.

Those people are not only for peace; they are actually doing something to maintain it. They have prevented a nuclear war for 38 years. Thier method of avoiding war is the only proven method. All other methods are untried theories.

Anybody who says or implies that American military personnel or President Reagan or any member of his administration wants a nuclear war, is recklessly endangering peace, or is not doing everything in their power to prevent war, is a liar or an ignorant fool. I repeat, a liar or an ignorant fool.

If you read the arguements of the anti-nuclear crowd carefully, you will see for yourself that they are held together with an intellectually polluted cement. They claim or imply a moral equivalence between the Soviet Union and the United States. There is no way to sustain that premise. The facts contradict it. You might excuse a recently arrived Martian of believing it, but no literate person in America with access to a public library has any excuse for asserting it.

This false premise is necessary to rationalize their one-sided effort. It is a one-sided effort. No speech, demonstration, resolution, or act of civil disobedience in the United States will have one iota of influence on the Soviet Union. Yet it takes two to make war. It takes two to have an arms race. It takes two to reach an arms agreement. The only thing one side can do unilaterally is surrender.

When you push the anti-nuclear arguments to their logical conclusions, that's what you find: surrender. In fact, given the secretive, totalitarian, aggressive nature of the Soviet Union and the West's inability to influence it except by force or threat of force — no other conclusion is possible for the anti-nuclear crowd which exists only in the West.

Surrender doesn't sell well, however, so these freezeniks keep the public debate focused on the preliminary steps to surrender. And they play their moral superiority game: if you disagree, you are for nuclear war.

I think they have been treated too kindly. They are not just people with a different opinion. They are people who are: (a) hiding from the public their ultimate goal; and (b) engaging in disinformation.

For example, they base their horror scenario — the one which says civil defense is useless — on the Soviet Union firing 6,000 warheads of one megaton or larger at the United States. They only show their ignorance. Nuclear weapons have not changed the strategic objectives of warfare. Those objectives are still to defeat the opposing side's military forces and to cause the government to surrender with as many civilian assets intact as possible. There are not 6,000 targets in the United States worth a nuclear warhead. There are no scenarios in either the Kremlin or the Pentagon in which the Soviet Union would shoot its entire stock of warheads at the United States.

When these people try to prevent the modernization of America's strategic forces, when they try to discredit all efforts at civil defense, they go beyond passive dissent to active measures injurious to the American people.

The struggle for freedom in today's world is difficult enough without a chorus of self-righteous mental midgets trying to demoralize and weaken the cause of freedom while leaving totalitarianism free to pursue its aggressive aims.

Train's car could be part of 'Ol' Blue Eyes' Express

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A model-train collector who turned 10 today thinks his present, a Lionel lounge car, is pretty special — especially since it once belonged to Frank Sinatra.

Ty Woods' father, Maurice, bought the car for $170 at the yearly auction sponsored by the Central Oklahoma Railfan Club in Oklahoma City.

The car was donated by Sinatra, 68, and comes from the entertainer's collection at his Palm Springs, Calif. home.

Proof that it's from Sinatra: stenciled above the windows the words "Sinatra Express," and below that a reference to his friend Dean Martin — "Dino's Lounge."

Jagger

LONDON (AP) — Rolling Stone rock star Mick Jagger says he's no longer as interested in rock 'n' roll as when he was 25 and would like to do some film acting or producing.

But the problem is, Jagger said Monday, "No one ever asks me."

The 40-year-old Jagger said in an interview for Woman magazine, "You have to have your nose to the ground for what parts are going around the major studios, which are very few. They're mostly written with some guy in mind and you only get the part if he gets ill or something."

He said he's working on his own film project, in which he may take the leading role.

Looking back on his career, Jagger said, "I love rock 'n' roll, it's wonderful. But after the age of certainly 30 — if not 25 — I had ceased merely living for rock 'n' roll itself. That's something you do when you're a teen-ager. It'd be stupid to do it all the time."

Gould

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Actor Elliott Gould sees striking similarities between the character he plays in "Over the Brooklyn Bridge" and his own struggles as a Jewish boy growing up in a Jewish neighborhood.

The 45-year-old Gould, who grew up in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn, N.Y., where the picture was made, arrived in Israel on Monday for the movie's world premiere.

He stars as Albie, a struggling Jewish grocery store manager who falls in love with a gentile girl.

"It takes a long time to grow up and understand order, tradition and ritual," the actor told reporters in his Tel Aviv hotel suite, reflecting on his own years of youthful rebellion. "As Albie says in the picture, 'I have to make my own life.'"

'Thriller' favorite to win Grammy awards

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Thriller," the Michael Jackson album that has topped the national charts for almost half a year, is the clear betting favorite in next month's 1984 Grammy awards.

The album, by far 1983's best seller, was expected to turn up in multiple categories at today's scheduled announcement of nominations for the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences' 26th annual awards.

Since its release just over a year ago, "Thriller" has sold 20 million copies worldwide and has occupied the top slot on Billboard's LP chart for 24 weeks, including the last three.

With such diverse No. 1 singles as sultry "Billie Jean" and sizzling "Beat It," the album had potential for nominations in pop, rock and rhythm and blues categories as well as the general categories of album, new song, and record of the year.

Winners, determined by balloting among nearly 5,000 academy members in seven chapter cities nationwide, will be announced during a CBS telecast Feb. 28.

As usual, the record academy is awarding more Grammys than ever this year, with 67 categories compared to 62 last year. Reshufflings added two categories each in the gospel and Latin music fields, and in addition to the video LP award that made its debut two years ago there will be a new award for shortform videos no more than 20 minutes long.

The academy also changed the rules for its songwriting awards, which now can only go to writers of songs first recorded in the eligibility year, running from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

The "song of the year" award is now the "new song of the year," the country song is now the "new" country song and so forth.

Librarians award medal to author

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beverly Cleary's "Dear Mr. Henshaw," a story about a boy dealing with problems ranging from lunchbag thieves to his parents' divorce, has won the children's book of the year award from a librarians' group.

The author on Monday was named winner of the John Newbery Medal for the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children in 1983.

The Association for Library Service to Children also selected "The Glorious Flight: Across the Channel with Louis Bleriot."

Lebanese troops, Druse militia trade fire in hills

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese troops and anti-government Druse militiamen traded artillery fire in the hills east of Beirut today, police said, and France was reported ready to equip the Lebanese army with 100 helicopters.

Police said the army-Druse exchanges flared overnight and tapered off after dawn in the hills above the U.S. Marine base at Beirut's international airport. No casualties were reported.

The independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar said France has agreed to provide the Lebanese army with 100 helicopters "as part of a plan to upgrade the army's firepower."

The report came the morning after a rocket-propelled grenade was fired at a guard post at the headquarters of the French peace-keeping contingent in Beirut, killing one French paratrooper and wounding two others.

It was France's 83rd fatality in Beirut since the September 1982 deployment of the multinational force, which also includes troops from the United States, Italy and Britain.

An-Nahar, whose publisher Ghassan Tueini is a political adviser to Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, did not cite any source for its report.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack Monday on the French military headquarters, a building which formerly housed France's ambassadors.

The attack came a day after the U.S. contingent suffered its 258th death in a grenade and small-arms attack on Marines as they disembarked from a helicopter at a seafront landing pad in west Beirut.

The foreign ministers of Syria, Lebanon and Saudia Arabia broke off a two-day conference Monday in Riyadh without announcing the fate of the Saudi-mediated security plan to separate Lebanon's warring factions.

Abdul-Halim Khaddam of Syria said on his return to Damascus that the talks ended "with the possibility of reconvening the Geneva conference on a national dialogue" among Lebanon's factions. The Geneva talks began last November.

In southern Lebanon, gunmen armed with rocket-propelled grenades today attacked an Israeli headquarters in the town of Nabatiyeh.

Reporters in the area said two grenades missed the building but damaged nearby houses. Israeli troops sealed off the area and searched for the assailants, the reporters said.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Monday that the increase in guerrilla attacks on Israeli troops in southern Lebanon was delaying its departure. He told a World Zionist Organization convention that "Palestinian terrorist groups and their cohorts" were responsible for the upsurge in violence.

"If the initiators and the organizers of this activity intend that under the presure of these attacks Israel will hasten to leave Lebanon then they are making a bitter mistake," he said.

Reagan has 'open mind' on proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — After asserting that President Reagan has decided to oppose a key Kissinger commission proposal on El Salvador, an embarrassed presidential spokesman says Reagan will withhold judgment until he receives the panel's report on Wednesday.

Late Monday, spokesman Larry Speakes retracted a statement made earlier in the day saying the president would ignore a reported commission recommendation that insists future military aid to El Salvador be conditioned on improved human rights performance.

Speakes said Reagan will have an "open mind" on the panel's proposals. When the president reviews the report, "he will consider all aspects of every recommendation before making a final decision," Speakes said.

Until last summer, Congress had linked military aid for El Salvador to progress in curbing politically motivated civilian deaths and other factors. On Nov. 30, Reagan vetoed a congressional amendment aimed at renewing that condition.

Speakes said the president's position remains the same, but is subject to change pending review of the commission's report.

The Kissinger commission report is due for presentation to Reagan on Wednesday and is expected to endorse the underlying rationale for much of the administration's policy toward the region.

In his initial statement Monday, Speakes noted that the administration will voluntarily submit a report to Congress on the human rights situation in El Salvador next Monday.

When aid was tied to the certification, Speakes said, "We thought it didn't serve any purpose because each time one of these reports came due the right and the left rose up and tried to influence the report by intimidation."

Other administration officials, insisting on anonymity, said El Salvador appears more intent now on taking decisive action against right-wing death squads than it did when the certification process was in existence.

Beforehand, they said, Salvadoran authorities always assumed the Reagan administration was merely reflecting congressional concerns when it raised the human rights issue. Now, with the certification process ended, "the Salvadorans know we are serious when we talk about the need to get rid of the death squads," one official said.

Commission Chairman Henry A. Kissinger opposed the aid-human rights linkage, but was overridden by a majority on the panel. He is said to be planning a dissent attached to the report. Kissinger's position, reported Monday by the Washington Post, could not be confirmed independently.

American students return to class on Grenada

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Some of the American medical students evacuated nearly 2½ months ago by invading U.S. troops return to class today on a campus recently cleared of barbed wire and machine gun nests.

"We think it's pretty safe, but it feels good to have the American soldiers nearby," said Gina Puglisi, 19, of Tom's River, N.J., who, like the other returnees, received an orientation talk that included a warning to beware of live ammunition lying about the area.

President Reagan said the Oct. 25 invasion of Grenada was a rescue mission to save the 650 students, most of them Americans, at the St. George's University School of Medicine.

The invasion occurred a week after a coup by radicals that toppled the Marxist regime on the Caribbean island.

With a new government installed, the U.S. military presence has been cut to 260 military police and support troops. There also are about 440 soldiers from the Caribbean nations that requested and participated in the invasion.

Sgt. James Doute of the 18th Airborne Division said there have been no sniper attacks or other assaults on troops in nearly two months.

Fewer than half of the students who were evacuated by Army paratroopers have elected to return, the rest choosing to attend classes at a temporary campus in Barbados or in New York, school officials said.

But 99 of the 150 first-semester students chose Grenada.

The largest dropoff is among students starting the second of the nine semesters in the school's program, said Dr. Geoffrey Bourne, the school's vice chancellor. Of the 175 second-semester students, only seven — five of them Grenadians — chose to return.

"They were in the most intimidating situation," he said. "They were on the True Blue campus, just off the (Point Salines) airport where the first fighting was."

He said the second-semester students' reluctance to return to Grenada "is quite understandable. They were beginning students who had only been on the island six weeks to two months when this (the invasion) happened. It was not what they expected when they signed up."

About half of the students in the third and fourth semesters, 150 in each group, chose to return to Grenada, Bourne said.

Officials curb flight comments

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. reconnaissance planes have flown over Lebanon without interference from anti-aircraft fire since mid-December, but the Reagan administration has curbed official comments about the flights in an apparent effort to promote negotiations with Syria.

"It isn't particularly helpful to the overall relationship in the Mideast to highlight these flights," said an administration official, referring to relations with Syria.

This official, speaking only on condition he remain anonymous, said "we see indications that the Syrians would like to have tensions reduced." He did not elaborate.

The Syrians have protested the reconnaissance flights and some U.S. officials say Syrian leaders may regard public discussion of those flights over Syrian-controlled areas of Lebanon as provocative.

The administration has been trying to win Syrian cooperation in working out a political solution to the Lebanon problem so U.S. Marines and other contingents of a multinational peacekeeping force can be withdrawn.

In early December, the U.S. Navy sent 28 carrier-based bombers to hit what were described as Syrian anti-aircraft positions in the mountains overlooking Beirut after U.S. F-14 fighter planes on reconnaissance missions drew missile and gun fire. Two U.S. planes were downed in that raid.

Later in the month, U.S. warships, including the battleship New Jersey, bombarded similar targets and the Pentagon said this was in reaction to ground fire against U.S. reconnaissance flights.

General ignores summons

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A judge says he may order the arrest of Gen. Reynaldo Bignone, president of the former military government, who for a second time failed to appear in court to testify about the 1978 disappearance of a scientist.

The general failed to appear Monday despite a summons, and Federal Judge Luis Cordoba said he might issue an arrest order.

Bignone was president from July 1, 1982, until the inauguration last Dec. 10 of elected President Raul Alfonsin that ended nearly eight years of military rule.

Lawyers for the family of missing scientist Alfredo Giorgi said Cordoba declared Bignone a no-show 45 minutes after the appointed hour.

Giorgi was arrested by security forces in 1978 and has not been seen since. He is considered to be one of the thousands of people who disappeared during the military regime's crackdown against leftist guerrillas and their supporters in the late 1970s.

Pentecostalists reportedly ill

LONDON (AP) — Friends of two Soviet Pentecostalists, who they said are seriously ill in prison camps, have asked the International Red Cross to intervene and provide treatment, a London-based research group says.

Keston College, a Roman Catholic institute that investigates religious developments in Eastern Europe, said Monday that Vasily Barats, 37, had suffered a heart attack and Eduard Bulakh, 43, had a bleeding stomach ulcer.

Barats is serving a five-year sentence for crimes against the state. Bulakh, who had campaigned for the right to emigrate from the Soviet Union, is serving 2½ years for "slandering the Soviet state and social system."

De la Madrid's plan working

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A government report says an 80.8 percent rise in the cost of living during 1983 is a sign that President Miguel de la Madrid's austerity program is working.

The report Monday by the Bank of Mexico, which serves as the nation's federal reserve, said that if inflation had continued at the 1982 pace, it would have reached 250 percent last year. The consumer price index went up 98.8 percent in 1982, according to government statistics.

Rebels defeat Eagles, 61-42

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee girls gained sole possession of second place in the District 4-5A basketball race at Chaparral Center Monday night with a 61-42 victory over Abilene High's Eagles.

Lee, coming off a stunning loss to San Angelo Thursday, got back on the winning track, boosting its league record to 4-1 and its season mark to 15-5. For now the Lady Rebs will have to settle for second place since unbeaten San Angelo retained the top rung in the league standings with a 60-54 win over Odessa Permian.

The Lee victory, coupled with the Permian loss, gives the Rebels second place while Permian falls into a third place tie with Midland High and Big Spring, all 3-2.

CONSIDERING THE fact that Abilene High is now 0-5 in the league race this year, this was to be an easy outing for Lee — at least on paper. The final score even looked like an easy romp, but it took a full half for the Rebels to turn on the steam.

Lee led by a mere 29-24 margin at the half after both teams held leads five different times and the score was knotted on nine occassions. At that point, it didn't look like an easy contest for the Rebels.

"We're just happy to come out of this one with a victory," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "The loss to San Angelo kind of deflated us. We needed a win.

"It took a while to get our press going, but I thought we did a good job in the second half. We also started getting the rebounds in the second half and things just began to fall into place for us. Now we have a big one against Permian Thursday."

TUNYA MAYBERRY carried the Rebels through the first half slump, hitting seven of 12 shots for 14 points. She ended the game with 16 points, but one wonders where Lee would have been if she hadn't showed up in the first half.

Stacy Harmon hit only one of her first nine shots from the field, but ended the game with 11 points and leading scorer Felicia Farias had a quiet 17 to lead all Rebel scorers. Farias passed up a few shots in the first half and scored 11 second half points.

In all, eight Rebels figured in the scoring and blew open the game in the third period, outscoring the Eagles by a 15-6 margin.

Lee had trouble containing Abilene High's Trena Jackson, who led all scorers with 18 points. Jackson hit only seven of 17 shots from the field, but she was a force the Rebs had trouble with inside. Lisa Williams added 10 points to the Eagle cause.

THE GAME was knotted for the ninth time at 22-22 with two minutes left in the half. The Rebs were struggling with a poor shooting night. But Mayberry canned a layup to give Lee a 24-22 lead with 1:53 left in the half and the Rebs never looked back.

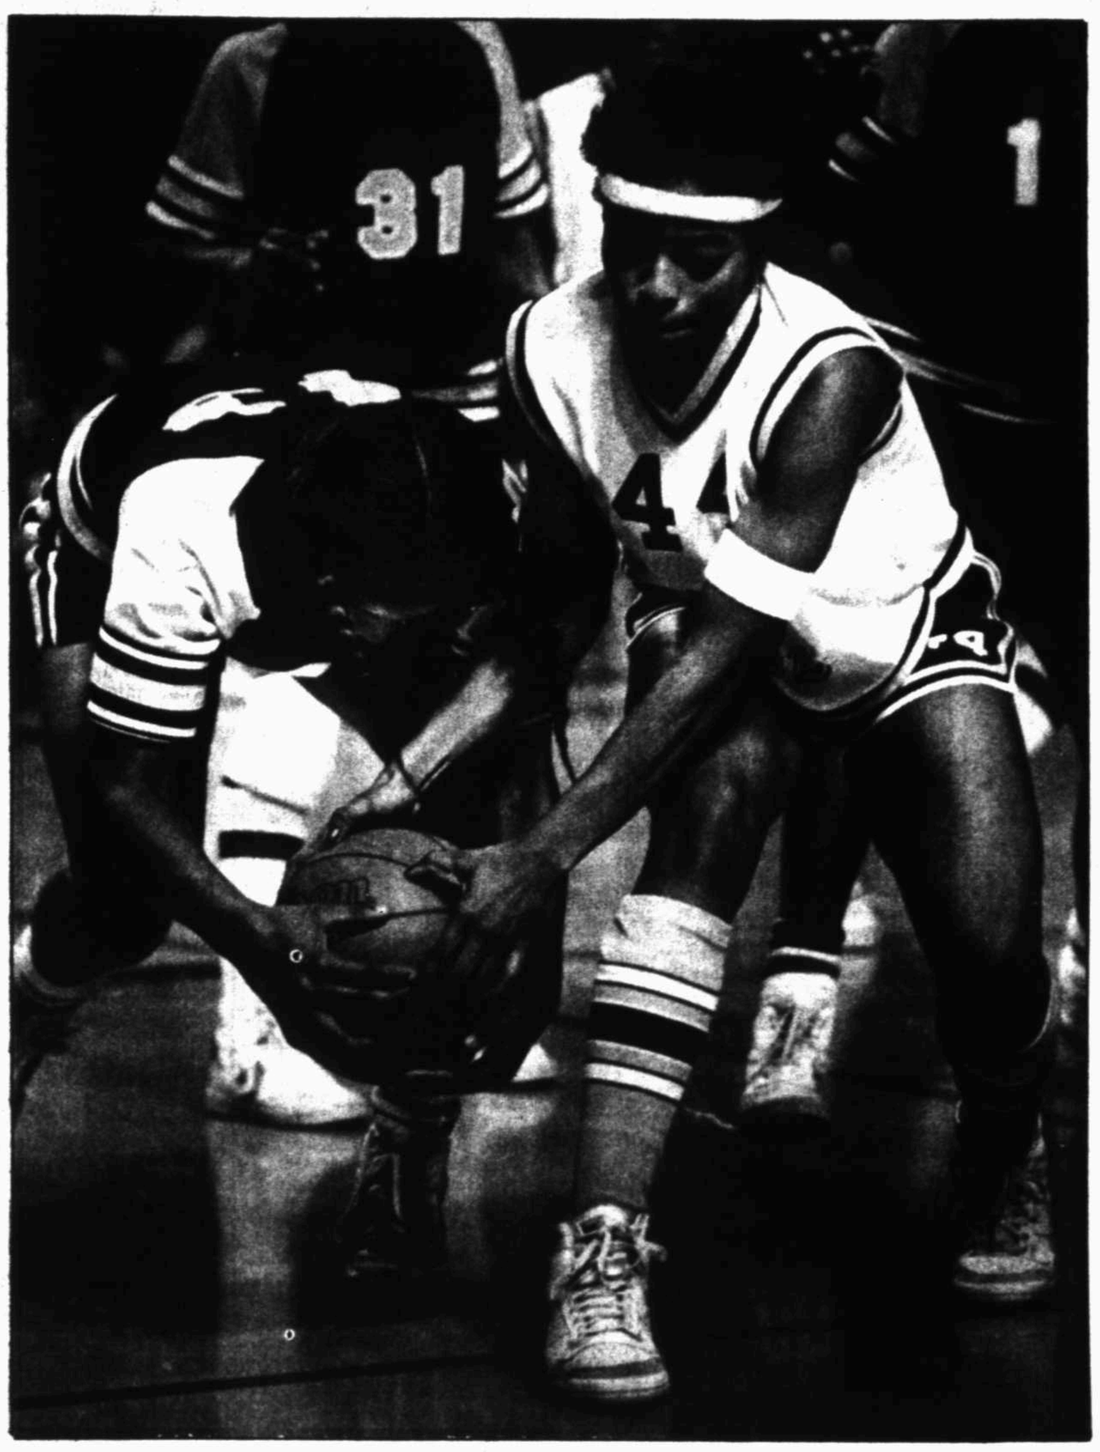

The Eagles hit a respectable 41 percent from the field, but took only 46 shots to Lee's 69. Lee hit only 38 percent from the field, but dominated the second half boards to run away with the victory.

The Lee junior varsity, trailing 20-10 at the half, came roaring back to pull out a squeaky 37-36 win over AHS' JV. Nancy DeWitt hit a layup with 50 seconds left in the game for the final margin. Candice Morney led Lee with 10 points. Lori Marshall had 13 for AHS and Racene Herrell had 10.

MHS stays in 4-5A hunt for playoffs

ABILENE — The Midland High Bulldogs stayed in the District 4-5A girls basketball hunt here Monday night with an important 45-41 victory over Abilene Cooper.

Both teams entered the game with identical 2-2 loop records. Now Midland High is in a three-way tie for third place with a 3-2 mark, the same as Odessa Permian and Big Spring.

Midland High will face winless Odessa High in Odessa Thursday in another effort to improve on that league record.

Again it was Denise Lanz who led the Bulldog attack. She scored 17 points, her 10th consecutive effort in double figures.

Terez Robinson had 12 points and Orvetta Johnson added 10 more in the low scoring contest. Cooper's Tracy Scott led all scorers with 18 points while Angela Riggins had 12.

The Bulldogs held a meager 25-21 lead at the half, but outscored Cooper by a 14-9 margin in the third period for a 39-30 edge. Cooper made a final run at pulling this one out with an 11-6 margin in the final quarter, but it was still four points short.

In other 4-5A action Monday night, San Angelo's Bobcats continued its torrid march through league waters with a 60-54 win over Odessa Permian. San Angelo now owns a perfect 5-0 start in league play while Permian lost its grip on second place to Midland Lee, a 61-42 winner over Abilene High.

Bonnie Smith canned 21 points to lead the Bobcats over Permian and Val Schlaudt added 13. Permian was paced by 14 points from both Laura Bartlett and Caroline Gibbs.

In the only other 4-5A game Monday, Big Spring stayed in the league fight with a 74-60 win over winless Odessa High. Paula Spears led Big Spring with 27 points and Monette Wise added 17 in two good outings. Zorina Saldana led Odessa High with 22 points in another good effort.

Panthers, Bobcats fighting for 4-5A lead

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There are four teams currently tied for third place in the District 4-5A standings and after tonight's games there will be three tied for second.

In the battle for first place, Odessa Permian (11-5 overall) and San Angelo (7-9) are both unbeaten in two outings. The first Panther or Bobcat blemish will be recorded tonight when the two teams meet in San Angelo for the undisputed lead.

That leaves Midland High (18-4), Abilene High (12-7), Midland Lee (11-8) and Abilene Cooper (8-9) in the fight for second at 1-1. All four are in action against each other tonight with the Bulldogs hosting Cooper at Chaparral Center and Lee traveling to Abilene to face the Eagles. All games are slated for 8 p.m.

The other game tonight will determine sole possession of last place in the 4-5A. Odessa High (12-9 overall), the defending district champion, travels to Big Spring (2-16) to take on the Steers. Both teams are looking for their first district victory.

MIDLAND HIGH rebounded from 4-5A opening night 59-54 loss to Permian with an 84-57 victory over Big Spring Friday.

Chris Rooker, who led the Bulldogs through the pre-district schedule with a 20-plus-points per game average, has fallen on hard times in 4-5A action. In the two district contests, his average has been 9.0 with his overall mark falling to 19.7.

However, Kenneth Johnson, Darrell Davis and Fred Franklin have spread out the scoring difference.

In both 4-5A games, Johnson has come up with 17-point performances to up his season average to 11.4 while Davis has had nights of eight and 25 points for 11.8 and 16.5 totals. Davis has also been dominate on the boards with 33 rebounds in the last two games.

Franklin, 8.6 for the year, is one-point shy of a double digit average for 4-5A play.

Cooper has a two-pronged scoring attack led by Joe Melson and Bob Estes with 16.5 district averages.

THE LEE Rebels have already made this season a considerably more successful one than last year. The Rebs are 1-1 in 4-5A play and have an 11-8 record.

Lee opened district play with a 41-35 upset victory over Odessa High but was knocked off Friday by San Angelo, 55-48.

Alvin Henry is leading the scoring way for Lee with a 13.7 overall average and 14.0 since district play got underway.

Junior Derek Westbrook has scored at a 12.1 click this year and is averaging 13.0 in district.

Providing scoring and rebounding has been a strong point for Anthony Dickens. Going into the league shootout, the sophomore was averaging 10.4 points per game but has had two off nights with a 4-5A average of 4.5.

The Abilene High scoring is led by Kirk Robinson and Tom Simmons at 15.5.

Oiler coach has double problem

Houston Oiler coach Hugh Campbell...
...USFL paying too much money.

HOUSTON (AP) — New Houston Oiler Coach Hugh Campbell had a double-barreled problem awaiting him when he arrived to accept the challenge of rebuilding one of the worst teams in the National Football League.

He must deal with an unhappy Earl Campbell and he must convince the masses that all is not lost if free agent quarterback Warren Moon doesn't sign with the Oilers.

"The whole franchise isn't dependent on signing Warren," Campbell said Monday after a barrage of questions about the 1983 Canadian Football League most valuable player. "There are other avenues such as trades and the draft and the development of the fine young quarterbacks that are here."

That doesn't mean that Campbell won't try to convince Moon that he should follow his former coach to the Oilers. The Campbell-Moon combination won five consecutive CFL championships for the Edmonton Eskimos.

"I would try to have Warren feel the same things that I feel and that is that there is a good nucleus of young players and there is the opportunity for the team to show signs of inmprovement and beyond that," Campbell said.

"I would try to tell him that there is no other place that he could go where the coach has more faith in him."

ONE OILER option would be to draft a quarterback in the 1984 collegiate draft. Houston, because of its 2-14 record in 1983, will get the No. 2 selection.

Campbell also said he hoped to get a face to face meeting with Earl Campbell.

"I'd like for all the communication that is really meaningful to be really direct rather than him reading tomorrow's paper about what I'm saying now and me read the next day's paper with him saying 'well, he didn't want to talk to me anyway,' or whatever.

"There are certain things he can do that we can't replace. Therefore, I think it's worth at least seeing what each of us think. We're talking now about two people who have never met."

THE NEW Oiler coach also sees a problem in the outrageous contracts being paid by the fledgling United States Football League.

"My position on those contracts is the same, that it is a very dangerous situation," said Campbell, who resigned last week as head coach of the USFL Los Angeles Express to jump to the NFL Oilers.

Rozier expected to be exception, not rule for USFL

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A stiff upper lip was the official face put on by the National Football League at news that Mike Rozier, Nebraska's All American running back, had signed with the Pittsburgh Maulers of the United States Football League.

"We are confident that the vast majority of the top collegiate seniors will sign with the NFL," Joe Browne, the NFL's director of public information, said Monday. He noted that 143 of the 150 top draft choices last year had signed with the established league.

Among those who did not was Georgia running back Herschel Walker, last year's Heisman Trophy winner. Thus, with Rozier's signing an estimated $3 million deal, the spring-summer league has grabbed two Heisman winners in its two years of existence.

THE CINCINNATI Bengals, who own the first pick in May's NFL draft, felt that what Rozier was asking exceeded the limits of generosity and reason.

"... we are willing to be generous, but we are not willing to go beyond what makes good sense," said Pete Brown, the Bengals' director of player personnel.

"Mike couldn't have gotten half" from the Bengals what he will earn from the reported three-year, fully guaranteed Maulers' deal, his agent, Mike Trope said.

"Mike would have been absolutely foolhardy to wait until the NFL draft. He didn't fool around and the money was there, so it didn't take a lot of time to make up his mind."

Maulers General Manager George Heddleston said at a news conference that Rozier agreed to the contract on Jan. 3, hours after the Cornhuskers' 31-30 upset loss to Miami in the Orange Bowl.

THE AGREEMENT followed a 16-hour bargaining session involving Heddleston, Maulers President Paul Martha and Trope that began minutes after the Orange Bowl ended. Details were finalized last weekend, Martha said.

Rozier will report to the Maulers' pre-season camp at Melbourne, Fla., on Jan. 22 or 23.

"This gives the franchise a chance to be competitive in our first year," said Maulers Coach Joe Pendry. "He is a great player, the best in college football. Our scouts rank him in the same class with a Billy Sims."

"It's unbelievable how much interest this has caused," Maulers' publicist Bill Keenist said Monday night. "Our phones rang off the hook all afternoon."

"My contract with Pittsburgh enables me to have financial security, which was very important to me and my representatives when we first began discussing a professional football contract," Rozier said in a statement issued by the Maulers.

Pulliam comes off bench to lead A&M past Angelo State

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Al Pulliam came off the bench to score a game-high 18 points while Jimmie Gilbert and Darnell Williams added 15 each to lead Texas A&M past Angelo State 77-67 Monday night in a non-conference basketball game.

Gilbert also pulled down 11 rebounds for A&M, which improved its record to 7-5. The Aggies controlled the boards, 38-29.

Kenny Smith led Angelo State with 12 points, with Scott Wisneiwski adding 11 and Dicky Winter 10. The Rams fell for only the second time in 11 outings.

It was a rough error-filled contest. The Aggies committed 25 turnovers and collected 24 fouls, while Angelo State was whistled down 35 times and had 22 turnovers. The Rams lost three players by fouls.

Texas A&M carved out a 38-29 halftime lead and stayed in front the rest of the way.

Cowboys beat NTSU

ABILENE (AP) — Guards Byron Strickland and Lenard Brooks sparked a second-half rally that carried Hardin-Simmons past North Texas State 73-64 Monday night in a non-conference basketball game.

Strickland scored 13 of his 21 points in the second half and Brooks made 12 of his 14 points in the period as the Cowboys raced away from a 30-27 halftime lead by canning 16 of 23 field goals and 11 of 13 free throws the rest of the way.

Willie Maree added 16 and Donald Johnson 14 for Hardin-Simmons, which recorded its first victory of the season over an NCAA Division I school.

Todd Warren scored 16 points and John Horrocks 15 for North Texas.

The Eagles twice closed to within two points early in the second half, but never got closer than seven after Hardin-Simmons opened up a 60-50 lead with 8:43 remaining.

H-SU raised its record to 4-9 while North Texas fell to 6-6.

Hornets sting Tigers

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Lewis Jackson hit 11 of 13 shots enroute to a 32-point performance as Alabama State raced to a 102-83 Southwestern Athletic Conference victory over Texas Southern in college basketball.

Jackson's scoring binge led four other Alabama State players in double figures, including Don Roper, who came off the bench to score 13 and Eddie Tanner, Melvin Armstrong and Mike Freeney, each with 11.

The victory Monday boosted Alabama State's record to 10-2, 3-0 in the conference. Texas Southern dropped to 4-7, 1-1 in the SWAC.

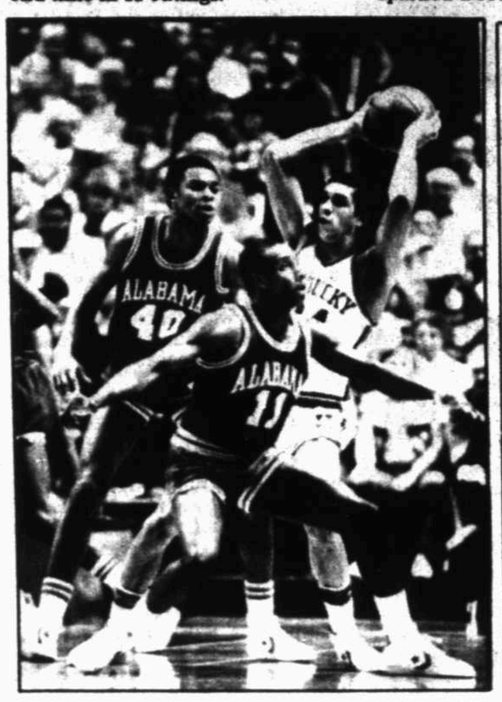

Andre Applewhite led Texas Southern with 24 points. Ed Hilliard scored 20 and Lester Brooks added 11.

Alabama State hit nine of its first 10 shots to build a 20-9 lead with 13:35 left in the first half.

The Hornets led 50-34 at halftime.

Texas Southern pulled within nine at 68-59 with 12:28 left on a layup by Brooks.

But Alabama State surged again to the final margin.

Wildcats beat 'Bama, 76-66

By The Associated Press

Alabama's Crimson Tide held the fort as long as they could, then the roof caved in at Rupp Arena.

"We played as hard and as intelligently as we can for 35 minutes," said Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson after Monday night's 76-66 loss to the second-ranked Kentucky Wildcats. "We then had five very poor minutes against the press and that took us out of the ballgame."

Alabama led 52-51 with 11:49 to go when the Wildcats put a trapping press on the Crimson Tide and ran off the next 15 points to virtually lock things up for Joe B. Hall's team.

College Basketball

"We didn't show up tonight until the second half," said Hall, " but I'm glad we did."

Top Ten

Kenny Walker and Winston Bennett scored 17 points apiece and powered a second-half scoring run that carried Kentucky past Alabama. Walker scored 15 of his points in the second half, including seven during a 23-4 surge that helped the undefeated Wildcats bury the Crimson Tide for their 11th victory.

Marty Embry scored two key baskets in the final 1½ minutes of the game, helping DePaul survive a scare and beat St. Mary's (Calif.), 76-64.

The Gaels, who lost their eighth straight game, led by as many as 12 points in the first half. They were ahead 70-69, but DePaul, 12-0, went ahead to stay on a layup by Embry with 1:27 left and took a 73-70 lead on two free throws by Raymond McCoy.

Patrick Ewing scored 19 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked seven shots to lead Georgetown over Monmouth. The 74-54 victory, Georgetown's eighth straight, raised the Hoyas' record to 13-1.

Ewing sat out the final nine minutes after taking an elbow to the head. Georgetown officials decided to rest the All-American center as a precautionary measure.

Second Ten

Frank James scored 23 points and Richie Adams had 15 points and 15 rebounds to lead Nevada-Las Vegas over UC-Irvine, 83-68.

The Rebels never trailed despite the absence of starting center Paul Brozovich, who was out with a sprained ankle. Adams took his place and hit seven of 12 field goal attempts and blocked two shots before fouling out with three minutes remaining.

Others

In other action, Marcus Reese tossed in six free throws in the last minute to give East Tennessee State an 81-76 victory over Western Carolina; John Salley and Bruce Dalrymple had 16 points each as the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets rolled past South Carolina State 90-65; John Harris' 23 points led the University of New Orleans past Georgia State 72-58, and Joe Jakubick scored 31 points as Akron rallied for an 84-63 victory over Maryland-Eastern Shore.

Keith Gray scored 21 points and added 10 assists to lead the University of Detroit to a 74-60 victory over Butler; Mike Schlegel scored 15 points as Virginia Commonwealth downed James Madison 72-49; John Newman scored 26 points and grabbed seven rebounds to lead Richmond to a 61-58 victory over VMI; Carvin Norman hit two free throws with four seconds remaining to lead St. Louis University to a 63-62 triumph over Oklahoma City.

USFL contracts getting dangerous

"My dad was a grocer and I was raised on the economics of a guy keeping a store running for 30 years and I know that you have to have as much money coming in as you do going out over a long period of time."

Campbell said the competition for players has gone beyond paying small amounts above market value.

"With all of those teams obviously working on a deficit budget, how long that can continue, I don't know," Campbell said. "But they are going to put us, the NFL, in the same situation with these unheard of contracts."

Lee defeats MHS in first soccer meeting

The first meeting of Midland Lee and Midland High on the soccer field ended up in a 1-0 Rebel victory on a penalty shot Saturday.

The two schools, sponsored by Midland Soccer Association, are made up of players from grades 9-12 (including their respective freshmen schools). Tryouts for the squads were held in December.

The teams were formed because of the growing interest in soccer in Midland with a long-term goal being the development of the program to provide an outlet for the players to advance their schools and become visible to colleges offering scholarships for the sport.

Midland Lee is coached by Joe Bryant and Jim Metz while MHS is guided by Paul Breitzman and Chris Williams. Mike Conaway is acting as liason between MSA and the Athletic Director's office.

MSA will hold registration for its regular season on Feb., 4, 11 and 18. Player fees are $20 with uniform provided.

NC State drops out of Top 20

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a bad week for North Carolina State, but a good one for the state of Oklahoma in college basketball.

After dropping games to both Maryland and top-ranked North Carolina, the defending national champion Wolfpack, ranked No. 12 last week, dropped completely out of the Top 20 on Monday.

Then, a few hours after the rankings were released, they lost to Clemson 63-61 for their third successive loss in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Virginia, another ACC team, was the poll's other casualty, dropping from 20th place after losing to Duke 78-72.

The state of Oklahoma, meanwhile, introduced two new teams to the rankings with Oklahoma and Tulsa. Oklahoma, 12-1, broke into the Top 20 at No. 17 after a week that included a big victory over Syracuse, while the Hurricane, 13-0, defeated three Missouri Valley Conference opponents to replace Virginia at No. 20.

OTHERWISE, THE AP poll represented few surprises, as No. 1 North Carolina and No. 2 Kentucky continued their torrid pace.

A panel of 60 writers and broadcasters gave 39 first-place votes to North Carolina for 1,179 points, while Kentucky received 21 and 1,161. The points system is based on 20 points for each first place vote, 19 for second, etc.

Both the Tar Heels and Wildcats had 10-0 records when the poll was released. Each was a convincing winner over Top 20 schools last week — North Carolina trounced North Carolina State 81-60, while Kentucky thrashed Louisiana State 96-80. Kentucky ran its streak to 11 games with a 76-66 victory Monday night over Alabama.

Meanwhile, there were no changes among the top seven teams. DePaul, Georgetown, Maryland, UCLA and Maryland kept pace, while undefeated Texas-El Paso moved up three notches to No. 8.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Illinois, which advanced five notches to No. 9, and St. John's, which advanced to No. 10 from 13th a week ago.

Louisiana State and Wake Forest each fell out of the Top 10 to rank at Nos. 11 and 12, respectively. The Deacons had been upset by Georgia Tech 68-58.

Fresno State and Nevada Las Vegas continued their rise in the weekly poll, advancing to 13 and 14, respectively.

Completing the Second Ten are Georgia, No. 15, Oregon State, No. 16, Boston College, No. 18, and Memphis State, No. 19.

Oilers keep on rolling, beat Wings

DETROIT (AP) — Wayne Gretzky and Mark Messier scored two goals each Monday night to lead the Edmonton Oilers to their seventh straight National Hockey League victory, a 7-3 triumph over the Detroit Red Wings.

Gretzky stole the puck from Detroit rookie Steve Yzerman behind the Red Wings net, skated in front and beat goaltender Greg Stefan for a short-handed goal to cap a four-goal first period.

After Detroit's Kelly Kisio scored twice to cut Edmonton's lead to 4-2, Messier scored his second of the night on a rebound at 12:19 of the second period, igniting a spurt that saw Edmonton tally three times in a 1:52 span.

Gretzky scored his second of the night and 52nd of the season at 13:42 and assisted on Willy Lindstrom's 14th goal 29 seconds later as the Oilers increased their advantage to 7-2.

Gretzky increased his consecutive game scoring streak to 52 games dating back to last season and added his ninth shorthanded goal of the season. Gretzky has scored in all 43 of the Oilers' games this season.

Defensemen Charlie Huddy and Paul Coffey sandwiched first-period goals around Messier's first as Edmonton built a 4-0 lead.

Reed Larson added his 12th of the season for Detroit late in the second period.

Knicks destroy Sixers, 111-73

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bernard King scored 25 points as the New York Knicks held the defending National Basketball Association champion Philadelphia 76ers to their lowest point total ever with a 111-73 rout Monday night.

The 76ers had lower point totals while the franchise was in Syracuse, N.Y., but their lowest point total since becoming the Philadelphia 76ers in the 1963-64 season was 75 on three occasions, the last time in 1981.

The Sixers, whose 101-89 loss to Denver on Dec. 29 marked their most one-sided loss and their lowest-scoring game of the season, led briefly early in the game, but were inept in the second half after the game was out of reach.

Using substitutes almost exclusively and already missing Julius Erving and Clint Richardson, they scored only 33 points in the second half and had only 62 with about four minutes left. Erving missed his third consecutive game with an arm injury, while Richardson was home with his wife, who gave birth to a girl earlier in the day.

Their 73 points tied for the low in the NBA this season. Washington lost 87-73 to Chicago two days ago.

Philadelphia jumped ahead 13-5 before two straight baskets by Ray Williams triggered a 12-1 Knicks streak that gave them a 17-14 advantage. The 76ers never led again, although they managed two ties, at 19-19 and 21-21.

King, who missed six of his first seven shots, scored six of his 13 second-quarter points during a 10-0 run that gave New York a 40-27 lead. The Knicks built their margin to as much as 19 points before settling for a 57-40 halftime lead.

Nets 107, Bullets 103

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Daryl Dawkins and Albert King scored 29 points apiece and each of them contributed key free throws in the final seconds as the New Jersey Nets held off a Washington rally for a 107-103 victory over the Bullets in the National Basketball Association Monday night.

King had 12 rebounds and Dawkins 11. Dawkins, the Nets' 6-foot-11 center, hit 11 of his 14 shots from the floor and sank seven of eight free throws.

The Nets held a 20-point lead early in the third period, but saw the Bullets rally behind Jeff Ruland. Ruland had nine of his 21 points in the fourth quarter as the Bullets pulled to within 102-101 with 55 seconds left to play.

With 40 seconds to play, Ruland fouled King on a driving layup. It was Ruland's sixth personal foul of the game and when he protested he was assessed a technical foul. King converted two free throws and the technical foul shot to give New Jersey a 105-101 edge.

Aparicio, Killebrew top candidates for Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Aparicio, who set the standard for modern-day shortstops, and slugger Harmon Killebrew were among the leading candidates for addition to baseball's Hall of Fame this week.

The newest Hall of Famers will be introduced at a news conference Wednesday morning.

Balloting for the Hall was done by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, who could vote for as many as 10 former players. In order to be eligible, a player must have been retired for five years, and, to be elected, he must be named on at least 75 percent of the ballots.

Formal inductions will be held Aug. 12 at the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y.

The 49-year-old Aparicio, a native of Venezuela, not only brought the art of fielding his position into a new age, but he also was a potent offensive weapon during his 18 major league seasons that ended in 1974.

He stole 506 bases during his career and had a lifetime batting average of .262. He played each of his 2,581 major league games at shortstop and, even as his career came to a close, never played in fewer than 110 games in a season.

Aparicio began his major league career in 1956 with the Chicago White Sox, with whom he played for seven years. He played five years with Baltimore, returned to the White Sox for three more seasons, and finished his career with the Boston Red Sox.

In 1960, with only four years' service in the major leagues, "Sports Illustrated" called Aparicio "the best shortstop in baseball." And, after winning MVP in the 1982 All-Star Game, Cincinnati Reds shortstop Dave Concepcion said he had tried to model his career after that of Aparicio.

Killebrew, 47, ended his 22 years in the major leagues with 573 home runs. He began his career in 1954 with the Washington Senators and accompanied them in their move to Minnesota. He played his final season, 1975, with the Kansas City Royals.

Lobos pounce on Mustangs, 77-58

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Forward Tim Garrett pumped in a season-high 25 points Monday night to lead New Mexico to a 77-58 victory over Western New Mexico for the Lobos' eighth straight triumph of the college basketball season.

Garrett, a 6-foot-7 senior, was unstoppable inside as he connected on 8 of 12 shots from the floor and 9 of 11 free throws.

New Mexico, now 12-3, led almost the entire game. Western stayed in the contest, however, until the Lobos rattled off 16 unanswered points in the second half to break from a 54-48 lead to a 70-48 advantage.

Western's Mustangs, dropping to 8-3, held their only leads at 2-0 and 4-2. The Lobos scored three quick buckets to go on top 8-4 and stayed in front the rest of the way.

New Mexico hit on 7 of its first 8 shots for a 14-6 edge and led by as much as 11 points at 41-30 before settling for a 43-32 halftime advantage.

Garrett scored 17 of his points in the first half while forward Alan Dolensky added 12 of his 17 points and point guard Phil Smith had 12 of his 16. Smith also had 10 assists for the game. Guard Nelson Franse, who was shut out in the opening 20 minutes, came back with 12 points in the second half for the Lobos' only other double figure scorer.

Forward Tim Price topped the NAIA Mustangs with 12 points and guard Tony Gower added 10.

Class of '70 quarterbacks square off in Super Bowl

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Joe Theismann and Jim Plunkett are members of football's class of '70 — a pair of quarterbacks widely different in personalities and style who followed a common, frustration-packed path to the Super Bowl.

Could either have imagined 13 years ago that they would be matched when the Washington Redskins defend their championship against the Los Angeles Raiders in the sport's premier spectacle Jan. 22 at Tampa, Fla.?

It almost didn't happen.

Each has suffered disappointment and punctured pride. Each hit the depths, watched his skills grow rusty on the bench and came close to quitting in despair. But each refused to give up.

Thus Super Bowl XVIII becomes a personal duel between the game's most celebrated "Comeback Kids."

THEISMANN'S FIRST disappointment came when he failed to win the Heisman Trophy in 1970. "As a kid, I had two ambitions," said the onetime star of Notre Dame's Fighting Irish. "One was to win the Heisman, the other to play football for the New York Giants."

He realized neither.

The 1970 Heisman Trophy went to Jim Plunkett of Stanford.

Theismann and Notre Dame were so eager that he win the Heisman that Roger Valdiserri, the school's public relations director, got him to change pronunciation of his name from "Theesman" to "Thighsman" to rhyme with Heisman.

Not only did Theismann fail to win the Heisman but, although chosen over Plunkett on The AP All-America, he was shunned by the Giants in the pro draft and received only passing interest from one team — the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I had dinner with one of the Eagles guys," Joe said. "First thing the man asked was how tall I was. I said, 'Six feet.' He said, 'You look 5-10.' 'How much do you weigh?' he asked. 'One seventy-five,' I said. 'You look 165,' the Eagle rep said. That ended the interview.

"I grew up in New Brunswick, N. J. My dad was a red hot Giants fan. I spent my youth watching the Giants and Jets."

Deemed too small and fragile for the pros, Theismann wasn't picked until the fourth round by Miami. Embittered, he chose to play with the Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian League.

MEANWHILE, PLUNKETT, who led Stanford to a victory over Ohio State in the Rose Bowl, was No. 1 in the NFL draft, selected by New England.

Plunkett was traded to the San Francisco 49ers in 1976, but his fortunes suddenly went sour. Critics said he was a poor passer, threw a wobbly ball and had no poise.

The 49ers dumped him. He put out feelers to other pro clubs. The phone never rang. Finally, he was picked by Al Davis, maverick owner of the Raiders, who was assembling a rag-tag bunch of outcasts.

"We were taking people nobody wanted," said Coach Tom Flores. "Why not Plunkett?"

Plunkett was a stand-in for veteran Ken Stabler. When Stabler was traded to Houston, the Raiders brought in hotshot Dan Pastorini. Plunkett didn't touch a football in 1978.

"I was really down," he recalled later. "A couple of times I said to myself, 'The hell with it, I'll try something else.' "

In the fifth game of the 1980 season, Pastorini broke his leg. The Raiders had to give Plunkett the ball. All he did was rally the Raiders to a nine victories in 11 starts and a sweep of the playoffs and Super Bowl.

AT THE start of the 1983 season, Plunkett returned to the bench, his job taken over by the young passing whiz from Brigham Young, Marc Wilson. When Wilson hurt his arm, Plunkett was recycled again. The result: the AFC Championship.

After three years in the Canadian League, Theismann was picked up by the Redskins in 1974. For four years he had to play in the shadow of Billy Kilmer and Sonny Jurgensen, reduced at times to the role of kick returner.

"It was very depressing," he said. "I was copying mannerisms of Joe Namath, Roger Staubach and Johnny Unitas to try to get attention.".

Joe didn't become a permanent starter until 1978. Then, in 1981, his job became shaky when he started 0-5.

Hobbs ranked No. 1

By Associated Press

There are few who doubt the Hobbs Eagles are the state's top high school basketball team in Class AAAA.

The Eagles have won 10 of their first 11 games this season and today were again ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press weekly ratings.

Hobbs received 13 of 14 first place votes and a total of 136 points. The Farmington Scorpions received the only first place vote that did not go to Hobbs.

Albuquerque Academy edged Goddard by a single point for the top spot in Class AAA. Academy picked up four first place votes and a total of 120 points while Goddard was named first on five ballots and accumulated 119 points.

Both Academy and Goddard are 9-1 thus far this season.

Clovis took the No. 2 spot in AAAA with its 10-1 record while Eldorado moved up to No. 3 on the strength of its 6-1 mark. Albuquerque High, 6-1, jumped two places to No. 4 with Los Alamos, 6-2, in the No. 5 spot.

The rest of the AAAA top 10 this week included No. 6 Sandia, No. 7 Farmington, No. 8 Del Norte, No. 9 Mayfield and No. 10 Alamogordo. Sandia dropped from a tie for No 2 to the sixth spot while Alamogordo moved into the top 10 for the first time this season.

Unbeaten Grants, 9-0, was ranked No. 3 in AAA and the Pirates received three first place votes. Albuquerque St. Pius, 6-2, was No. 4 and the Sartans were picked first on one ballot.

Portales, 7-3, was No. 5 followed by Cobre, 7-1; Tucumcari, 7-3; Lovington, 5-3; Taos, 6-2 and Tohatchi, 7-3. Lovington, the defending state champion in AAA, received onee first place vote from the state's sports writers and sportscasters.

Stenmark wins giant slalom

ADELBODEN, Switzerland (AP) - Ingemar Stenmark posted best times on both runs Tuesday to win the Adelboden giant slalom race and score his 75th World Cup victory.

Stenmark, a veteran of ten World Cup seasons, was clocked a combined 2:27.36 for the two runs featuring 50 and 51 gates with a drop of 1,006 feet.

The 27-year-old Swedish double Olympic gold medallist of 1980, who is barred from competing in next months Sarajevo winter games because of a semi-professional status, beat Austrian runner-up Hubert Stroiz by .68 second.

Texaco after Getty reserves

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A key motivation for Texaco Inc. in offering nearly $10 billion to make Getty Oil Co. the biggest takeover target in history lies in this statistic:

In the last five years, Texaco has replaced only 37 percent of its crude oil reserves and only 31 percent of its natural gas production.

By linking up with Getty, Texaco would double its oil reserves in one stroke.

Texaco by no means was near the bottom of the oil or gas barrel, and it continues to spend billions of dollars on new exploration projects around the world. But its dwindling reserves — a problem shared by many other oil companies — is a critical behind-the-scenes reason for a boom in oil "mega-mergers."

Here are some questions and answers to help explain why big oil companies in increasing numbers are turning to Wall Street in search of oil reserves:

Q. Who, besides Texaco, is going the merger route?

A. Texaco currently is alone. But its deal with Getty comes on the heels of several other oil buyouts and is expected to trigger more in the future. Merger fever in the oil business began in 1981 when Du Pont Co. outmaneuvered Mobil Corp. and others to buy Conoco Inc. for $7.6 billion. In 1982, U.S. Steel Corp. outbid Mobil for control of Marathon Oil Co. in a $6.3 billion merger, and last year Occidental Petroleum Corp. paid $4.2 billion for Cities Service Co.

Q. Who is next?

A. One of the most likely takeover candidates in Superior Oil Co., where Howard Keck, son of the company's founder and until recently one of its top executives, is inviting a takeover against the wishes of Superior's management. Among other major oil companies mentioned by Wall Street analysts as possible takeover targets are Sun Co. and Unocal Corp., formerly Union Oil Co. of California.

Q. Why are the oil companies having such trouble finding new oil fields?

A. Part of the answer is that the oil business has reached the point in geologic history when most, if not all, of the easy oil prospects have been exploited. That leaves such difficult and costly environs as the North Slope of Alaska as the best hope for discovering major new oil fields to replace dying ones.

Q. What has the success rate been?

A. The accounting firm Arthur Anderson said in a recent study that between 1980 and 1982, 300 of the world's publicly owned oil companies replaced only 59 percent of the oil they produced in those three years. What's more, the average finding cost for each barrel of oil in the United States jumped 50 percent, to $16.52 per barrel. Oil sells on the open market for about $29 a barrel.

Q. How does Texaco's discovery record compare with that of its competitors?

A. Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a New York consulting firm, estimates Texaco replaced 37 percent of its oil reserves between 1978 and 1982. That was one of the lowest rates among the major oil companies and compared with a 42.5 percent replacement rate for Mobil Corp., 53 percent for Standard Oil Co. of California, and 73 percent for Shell Oil Co.

Texaco replaced just 31 percent of its natural gas reserves in that period, compared with a 28 percent replacement rate for Mobil, 74 percent for Standard of California and 111 percent for Shell, according to Spriggs.

Cheap burgers bait bulls, bears

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Serivce

Wall Street choose to interpret it as an incipient fast-food price war, but the "combatants" insisted Monday that it was merely short-lived promotional campaigns.

Despite denials by both Burger King and McDonald's Corp. as well as various industry analysts, Wall Street investors treated news of price cuts as a possible depressant on McDonald's earnings and a boost for those of Pillsbury, Co., parent of Burger King.

As a result, shares of McDonald's closed at $69.75, off $2.50 with 347,400 shares changing hands on the New York Stock Exchange. Pillsbury gained 37.5 cents cents to close at $38.50 with 523,000 shares traded.

In Miami, a spokesman for Burger King insisted that the cut in price for its basic hamburger to 39 cents from 60 cents and its cheeseburger to 49 cents from 70 cents was merely "a four-to-six week promotion" being conducted in about 65 percent of Burger King's markets.

"It is being done in New York, for instance, and Southern California, but not in all cities. It is not going on in Miami or Chicago."

In Oak Brook, Ill., McDonald's said that it "had become the industry leader by value and service, not by responding to competitive activity" and it was not planning to match Burger King's move. A drop in price in New York to 39 cents for its basic hamburger was part of a local promotion by participating McDonald's outlets that had started running Dec. 26 and was scheduled to end Jan. 15, the company said.

"We are not responding to the competiton; they appear to be responding to us," spokeswoman Stephanie Skurdy said.

An official of the Southern California Association of McDonald's Franchisees pointed out that some members for months have been selling the basic McDonald hamburger at 29 cents and the cheeseburger at 39 cents. "These are independent business people and are free to charge what they like. If Burger King has now cut their price in Southern California then they have to be responding to us."

Meanwhile, securities analysts claimed that investors may have misinterpreted the cuts as the first salvos in a price war for control of the $15-billion hamburger market. They said that they saw no influence on earnings as a result of the latest move in the so-called "battle of the burgers." So far this fray, which started a year and a half ago, has consisted primarily of Burger King sniping at competitors McDonald's and Wendy's International with comparative and tongue-in-cheek advertising.

In Columbus, Ohio, Wendy's said Monday that it was not participating in the latest skirmish because it had "nothing comparable, nothing as small as the hamburgers they are cutting prices on."

Instead, Wendy's has launched an $8-million national ad campaign with the theme "Where's the beef?" in which it claims that its single hamburger actually contains more hamburger than "our competitors," which it does not name.

Ford building Japanese car plant in Mexico

By the Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Serivce

DETROIT — In a major strategic decision, Ford Motor Co. has decided to build an assembly plant in Mexico to manufacture Japanese-designed small cars for export to the United States, company sources said Monday.

Ford's plans are to be announced Tuesday by the auto company and the Mexican government at a news conference in Mexico City. The $500-million plant is scheduled to be completed in time to begin assembling cars in 1987, at a rate of 200,000 vehicles annually.

The decision, which could eliminate at least 10,000 jobs at U.S. auto plants, represents the latest salvo in the auto industry's search for lower-cost production and cooperative arrangements to compete with small cars from Japan.

The plant is to be built in Hermosillo in the northwestern Mexican state of Sonora, 137 miles from the Arizona border, by Ford's 60-year-old Mexican subsidiary. It is expected to assemble a small car designed by Toyo Kogyo Co. Ltd of Japan, which makes Mazda cars and is 25-percent owned by Ford. Major components would come from Japan.

Ford, which has roundly criticized General Motors Corp for its plan to begin importing large numbers of small cars from Japan and is a supporter of limits on auto imports from Japan, insists that the project was forced on it by the Mexican government.

The Mexican government last year announced more stringent export requirements for its auto industry, which has an auto trade deficit with this country because it imports U.S. components for use in locally sold cars and trucks.

But critics say those government restrictions provide Ford a ready-made explanation for a move it would have made anyway. Normally, one trade expert said, such dictums from the Mexican government are winked at or diluted through negotiation.

The U.S. auto companies, faced with a Japanese manufacturing cost advantage of up to $2,000 on a small car, are unable to turn a profit on domestically built subcompacts and have been searching for ways to slash costs.

That search was given new impetus by GM's two-pronged small car strategy of importing 300,000 autos a year from Japan and building 200,000 more in a joint venture with Toyota Motor Corp in Fremont, Calif.

Ford's importation of 200,000 cars a year would displace about 13 percent of its domestic car production, based on 1983 statistics. Thus Ford's move has a proportionately greater impact on its operations than the Fremont project will have on much larger GM. Auto and trade analysts say no accurate comparison of U.S. and Mexican auto manufacturing costs has been made. But Ford documents made public in 1979, when the company was planning a Mexican engine plant, said its labor costs in Mexico were about one-third those in the United States. The devaluation of the peso has presumably widened that gap, and wages are especially low in northern Mexico.

But U.S. auto executives say there are penalties for building cars in Mexico, including poor highways and railroads, shortages of skilled workers and an unsophisticated metals industry. That has resulted in major quality problems, and none of the U.S. auto companies has built cars in Mexico for the U.S. market.

An upgrading of Mexican industry has alleviated some of those problems, said one economist allied with the U.S. auto industry.

"Ford could never have conceived of this five years ago," this economist said. "There have been terrible experiences down there. I think they're interested in testing Mexico" as part of a possible long-term Latin American strategy for supplying autos and components for export.

It could not be learned which Mazda car a Ford Mexico vehicle would be based on, a decision that could await market developments without delaying the project. Mazda sells the GLC, a subcompact, and the 626, a highly acclaimed compact, through its own dealers in this country.

The United Auto Workers said an import that displaces 200,000 U.S. built cars costs 10,000 U.S. blue-collar jobs directly and another 20,000 supplier jobs.

UAW officials have had little say about Ford's move in Mexico, which has been under study for months. One union official noted that the UAW's support of the GM-Toyota project in Fremont, bitterly opposed by Ford, didn't win it any bargaining points.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Giving makes you feel good

By JOHN CUNNIFF
Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Give until it hurts? That doesn't say it quite right.

Americans give money, time and effort because they want to give, because they view it as a way to preserve their society, because they believe in self-help and mutual obligations, because their religions teach them to.

Eighty-six percent of Americans over age 16 are contributors to charities. The average annual contribution by families is about $360, and families with incomes under $20,000 provide one-half of all individual versus institutional giving.

Even families with incomes under $5,000, which almost certainly means their needs exceed their abilities, give an average of $230 a year, helping to swell the total of giving and volunteering to more than $100 billion a year.

Ninety percent of giving is by individuals, with corporations and foundations accounting for a mere 5 percent each. Oddly, when given the percentages many Americans believe they are reversed.

Some people also are inclined to disbelieve the pervasiveness of voluntary efforts, made up of donations and personal time, and some are inclined to think some of the figures might be exaggerated for income tax reasons.

Research, however, shows a "slippage" between claims and receipts of only 2 percent, says Brian O'Connell, president of the Independent Sector, a national coalition of voluntary organizations, foundations and corporations.

O'Connell, source of most of the figures used here, wants Americans to feel good about their voluntary performance, and so the Independent Sector and the Advertising Council have launched an upbeat ad campaign for 1984.

The focus, therefore, is not so much on exhortations as on congratulations to the ordinary people who volunteer, in person or through gifts, to help social organizations, environmental enterprises, the sick, the deprived.

Since you threw away the envelope carrying the latest charitable request you may feel guilty about accepting congratulations. "You shouldn't," says O'Connell. In fact, he suggests, you couldn't satisfy all the requests.

If an organization obtains a mere 1 percent response to a huge mailing it still might be considered a success. Mailings are searches, he explains. They are attempts to find kindred souls from among the millions of people out there.

Finding such souls is the base of the "pyramid of giving," which years later may reach an apex in bequests by the same individuals. In between, they might have become active volunteers and "special givers."

O'Connell maintains the independent sector — the third sector, lying between the public and private sectors — is extremely healthy today. Not, he says, that "organizations are well-to-do," but that the voluntary impulse is growing. "Giving is increasing. Volunteering is increasing."

Living individuals in 1982 contributed $48.69 billion, and left another $5.45 billion in bequests. Foundations gave $3.15 billion, and corporations $3.1 billion, for a total of $60.39 billion.

Giving, of course, is only part of the story, and perhaps not the larger part. Volunteers donated 8.4 billion hours of time and skills, which the Gallup organization estimated to be worth about $64.5 billion.

In the past 15 years, says O'Connell, the number of volunteer outlets has jumped, with the development of 6,000 to 7,000 hospices for the terminally ill, mutual help organizations for victims of diseases, conservation causes, women's rights, Hispanic rights, immigrant rights, nuclear power control.

So many organizations and causes that O'Connell observes that "people today are organized to deal with every conceivable human condition."

It is an old story that includes chapters on antislavery efforts, barn raisings, lending libraries, immigration, volunteer fire companies, sewing bees, schools, churches, hospitals, the Elks, the Grange. An endless list.

It's uniquely American, says O'Connell, a consequence of many factors, some of which he lists in "America's Voluntary Spirit," a volume just published.

The varied religious heritage of the country contributed. So also did the desire of oppressed Old World people to disperse power lest it oppress again. And the new situations created by a new country released people's creativity.

The old family hierachy, with its rules and disciplines, for example, were left behind. It forced immigrants to rebuild organizations to substitute for the old rules, and it allowed them to do so with greater freedoms than before.

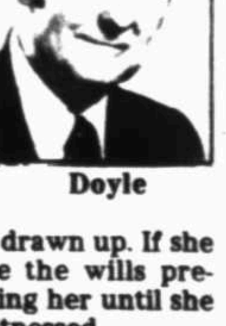

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Every adult should have will

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We have a house, other property, savings certificates, etc. However, I can't convince my wife to have a will made out. I believe the results of not having a will can be enormous. Can you explain this to her? If she sees it in your column, it might shake her up.

A. Every adult should have a will. The reasons are, as you put it, so "enormous" and the details so complicated that many books have been written on the subject.

Doyle

Summed up, a will saves money, time and grief for survivors. Assuming your wife cares about her family and her possessions while she's alive, she shouldn't leave problems behind by dying "intestate" — without a will.

My firm recommendation is that you both sit down with a competent lawyer and have wills drawn up. If she won't join in that session, have the wills prepared, anyway. Then keep pestering her until she agrees to sign hers and have it witnessed.

Wyoming producers investigated

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The U.S. Attorney's office and the Bureau of Land Management are investigating whether private companies are illegally draining millions of dollars in oil and gas from federal and state lands in Wyoming, the two agencies confirmed Monday.

"We are looking into it and trying to collect enough information to see if a full-fledged investigation is warranted," said U.S. Attorney Richard Stacy.

Stacy's office has been interested in the possibility of violations for several months and has requested additional information from the BLM, which administers the federal mining leases. About 50 percent of the land in Wyoming is owned by the federal government.

A memorandum Stacy sent to the BLM on Nov. 8 described the problem — wells next to federal or state land draining oil or gas that belongs to the government — as one of "potential enormity"

Documents from the BLM indicate the potential loss in federal royalties is substantial. Reports from the district offices in Casper, Rawlins, Rock Springs and Worland indicate if all potential cases were proven, the royalty loss per year would be approximately $2.5 million for oil leases and $1.7 million for gas leases.

Hilary Oden, state director of the BLM, issued a directive to his staff Dec. 23, asking for a full assessment of the situation by Jan. 23, BLM spokeswoman Pat Korp said Monday.

In his memo, Oden admitted, "Drainage is a complex and difficult task to successfully manage. It is realized ... you will have a difficult time in effectively pursuing drainage with the limited expertise and manpower the Districts currently possess."

Oden asked for information from the districts on "any serious, specific cases discovered such as ... deliberate drainage of federal or Indian leases."

The investigation is not the first time the BLM has looked into violations involving federal mineral leases in Wyoming.

In September, the federal agency fined two companies and a Gillette couple $230,000 for unauthorized coal exploration on public lands in northeastern Wyoming's Powder River Basin.

A special Interior Department commission also is probing whether the federal government sold coal leases in the Powder River Basin as less than fair market value two years ago. Remarks made by Interior Secretary James Watt about that commission led to his resignation.

Two years ago, another Interior Department commission recommended creation of a new minerals management agency within the department after an investigation into allegations of massive oil thefts on federal lands in the West, especially the Wind River Indian Reservation in Wyoming.

Two years before that, Wyoming was the focus of a nationwide inquiry into illegal practices in the federal oil and gas lease lottery. Several people and companies were convicted of criminal charges in that investigation, and the BLM revised its lease regulations.

New oil wealth worries Indian leaders

INDIAN VILLAGE, Texas (AP) — With the Alabama-Coushatta Indians of East Texas expecting the first installment this month on at least $6 million in oil and gas royalties, tribal leaders are worried about a spending spree.

"They're being very cautious," said Ray Apodaca, director of the Texas Indian Commission in El Paso. "Too many tribes have gone from near-starvation to being millionaires. They've gone crazy spending their money."

Two companies have struck oil and natural gas on the 4,351-acre reservation since April. The discovery is expected to bring at least $6 million in royalties and leasing fees to the tribe.

Some tribal members told the Dallas Times Herald they want their share of the energy bonanza in cash. Others favor a trust fund that would be spent on scholarships, health care and other tribal projects. The dispute will be aired this week at a tribal meeting.

"I don't know what direction we'll go in," said Clem Sylestine, 56, a member of the tribal council. "A lot of them want their money in individual shares."

Before the oil boom, the Alabama-Coushatta ranked among the poorest Indian tribes in the nation. Unemployment among the reservation's 550 residents is 44 percent, and 21 percent fall below the national poverty level, according to the Texas Indian Commission.

"Building a health clinic is one of our priorities," said Tony Byars, reservation superintendent.

If the money is divided in shares, tribal leaders fear it will be squandered and that the prosperity will be short-lived.

"The precedent is pretty well set on the problems of immediate wealth," Byars said. "I'm pretty confident the tribe will be capable of handling the funds properly."

Since 1965 the Alabama-Coushatta have relied on tourism and handicrafts for most of their income, but visitors to the tribal museum, gift shops and theater have dwindled from 250,000 in 1975 to 85,000 last year. The tribe earned $1 million from tourist attractions last year but ended the year with a deficit.

Questions and answers

Terry Arnold, general manager of Community Cablevision of Odessa, right photo, fielded a barrage of questions and charges from subscribers and council members. C.L. Gray, owner of Graco Operations in Odessa, above, gave cable company representatives some suggestions during Monday's city council hearing.

Odessa cable users air grievances

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Angry suscribers got their chance Monday morning to vent their frustrations at the local cable franchise in an open hearing held before the Odessa City Council.

Spurred by growing local unrest with Community Cablevision of Odessa, council members set the hearing as a means of bringing together everyone involved to work on a solution.

While no disciplinary action was taken by the city against the 2-year-old franchise, council instructed the city manager to contact an independent research firm to survey the Odessa situation. The cable company also promised to complete a proposal by late February outlining a timetable for improving the much-maligned local system.

Citizens took turns criticizing the service. While most of the comments were directed at Community Cablevision and its general manager, Terry Arnold, a few citizens aimed their claims at the council.

One outsider, employed by an RCA distributor from Lubbock, suggested a study of successful cable systems.

"They need to void the contract and get another one," said Ronald Preston after the hearing. "Make them put up or shut up."

Arnold fielded questions from a number of unhappy customers on a variety of issues.

Since obtaining the franchise two years ago, the company has been working toward installation of a new system. Much of his defense pointed to the problem of continuing service while installing a new cable on the same telephone poles as the old cable.

"We're trying to be the best cable company we can be," insisted Arnold. But Odessans in attendance took issue with the company's basic cable offerings, shoddy service and poor reception.

Councilwoman Melissa Hirsch was especially critical of the cable service, recalling a two-month delay before her service was restored. Noting the inconvenience and lack of customer relations, Ms. Hirsch wondered whether service routinely took this long.

Referring to repeated criticism of service, Ms. Hirsch said, "It sounds like a normal procedure." A vocal crowd offered "It is."

Midlander urges realignment of JP precincts

By ED TODD

Gerald Cox

A 22-year-old Midland fence builder, who once aspired to be a lawman and who has indicated he might run for county commissioner, on Monday urged the Midland County commissioners to realign the justice of the peace and constable precincts to conform with the commissioners' precincts.

"Out in the rural precincts, we don't have any law enforcement whatsoever," charged Gerald Cox. "Well, we do," he said, "but the response time is so long. By the time they (officers) get out there, it's too late. Somebody's out there trying to break into your house, and you have to more or less shoot them before they would be there."

Cox wants the commissioners to bring the JP-constable precincts under the same boundaries of the commissioners' precincts. Such realignment, in which the population would be equally divided among the four precincts, would then force the county to have four JPs — one in each precinct — and a constable in each.

Under the current setup, which went into effect in 1969, Midland's JP-constable Precinct 1 takes in 97 percent of Midland County, including the city. The other three precincts are in unpopulated rangeland south of Midland.

At present, Midland County has two JPs — Bob Pine and Charlie Sprayberry — in Precinct 1 and one constable, Tom McGinnis. who has four deputies.

Cox wants that changed.

"I'm going to run for county commissioner, more or less, if they don't realign the JP precincts," Cox said after he appeared before the five-member Commissioners' Court. The job pays about $23,000 a year.

Were he to file for candidacy, Cox would opposed Precinct 3 Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, 64, in the Democratic Party primary election on May 5. Davis has been in office since 1981.

In the meantime, Cox said he and his uncle, former constable Fred Coonce, 50, are planning to contact a Big Spring lawyer to draft a petition to pressure the commissioners to realign the JP-constable precincts and to test constitutionality of Midland County's JP-constable precinct lines.

His stance is that the present setup is illegal and unconstitutional, since the Texas Constitition calls for four to eight JP-constable precincts in a county the size of Midland and, presumably, at least one JP and one constable in each precinct.

Proposal would return parks to Odessa

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — In 1936, the city of Odessa was broke, so Ector County took over the park system now concentrated in Odessa, but spread across the county.

In 1983, the county experienced financial difficulties of its own. Facing the possibility of a rollback of their proposed tax rate that would force further cutbacks, the county is proposing returning the parks to the city.

Ector County Commissioners Monday morning discussed a proposal prepared by County Commissioner Willie Hammond that would begin a contract with the city. While the county would continue contributing to the financing of the parks, Odessa would manage the parks and equipment now owned by the county.

Actual agreement between the two entities is two to three months away. County Judge Jan Fisher suggested changes to the document presented by Hammond, with the final draft to be ready for the city within a month.

But both sides appear ready and willing to make the change, bringing all equipment and administration under the city.

According to the scheme proposed by Hammond, the county would fund the parks for the first year of the agreement at the level budgeted for 1984 — $1.5 million barring further cuts from a rollback.

Participation by the county would be reduced by 10 percent each year, down to half the budget for the sixth and all following years. Odessa would get all equipment, facilities and materials now used by the county in the parks, while taking over management of the 42-park, five-pool system.

One change called for by Ms. Fisher is that $244,000 in federal revenue sharing funds now allocated for the parks be kept by the county and paid out for park expenses as needed by the city. Hammond's agreement would have moved these funds to the city at once, losing interest benefit from holding the money.

A topic of discussion for many years, Ms. Fisher appointed Hammond in December to prepare a parks transfer proposal in the face of budget woes which forced the county to cut 46 positions.

"The judge just took the bull by the horns," said Hammond. The commissioner said he has met four times with Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant and City Manager John Harrison on the parks transfer.

"I think the city should help, just like I think the county should help," suggested Hammond. With the oil business in a lull, the county's tax base has been reduced, accentuating the money problems.

County management of a social service such as a park system is rare. "We are the only city in Texas I know of of any size that does not have a municipal park system," said Bryant.

"I just don't think all the social services for the citizens of Ector County should be provided by Ector County," said Hammond. The county offers a wide range of statutorily required services, which cities by nature are not required to provide.

Bryant stressed that the city is already entering the "parks business," so this is an ideal time to switch management of the present system to municipal control. Most of the parks in the system lie inside Odessa's city limits.

Inmate suing sheriff, doctor over toenail

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 30-year-old convict who complained of an ingrown toenail and that he was denied use of the Midland County law library and jail exercise area is suing Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith and the county's medical officer, Dr. Patrick Leung, for $25,000.

The inmate, Edward Eugene Peterson, in a federal court hearing before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Tuesday charged Leung with medical incompetency and said the sheriff denied him his constitutional rights. Bunton is to rule on the case.

Peterson is serving a 99-year prison sentence for aggravated robbery by use of a machine gun in Midland in 1980.

Peterson told the court he already was suffering from an ingrown toenail on the big toe of his left foot when he was transferred from the Lubbock County Jail to the Midland County Jail on Dec. 15, 1982.

He reported to sick bay and on Dec. 18, Leung examined him.

"He didn't examine it," Peterson said of his toe. "He just glanced (at the toe). He told me it wasn't bad enough for him to bother with," Peterson alleged, "and told me to cut it out myself with nail clippers."

Peterson said he requested clippers from the jailer and finally, two weeks later, got them.

By then, the toe was infected. The toe, foot and ankle were swollen, he said.

Peterson said Leung removed the toe nail and part of the flesh in January 1983. Since then, Peterson said he has undergone big-toe operations in the penitentiary hospital and may permanently lose the nail, he complained.

Peterson said Leung accused him of "picking at my toe."

Death of daughter from leukemia changed life of pastor

John Claypool

Through the darkest of nights his faith carried him into the morning light.

The Rev. John Claypool sat at a table for four in a restaurant in which he and his family long had patronized to share more than mere sustenance. On one side of him sat his 12-year-old son, on the other, his wife.

The fourth chair was empty — as Claypool's life had been for six months now, ever since leukemia and inexplicable evil had forever taken his 10-year-old daughter from him.

The chair was an awesome symbol that evening, one which racked him with memories, left him adrift in the loneliness born of bereavement. He stared at it, more intensely aware of his loss than ever before, and then looked at his son, that part of him he had left.

He could wallow in the past and dwell on what he didn't have or he could live again and focus on what he did have.

He chose to live.

"The thing that got me through the grief," said Claypool, co-pastor of Second Baptist Church in Lubbock and lecturer at the on-going School of Christian Living, "was realizing that everything I had, my life and the life of my daughter, were gifts to me. They were not possessions to which I was entitled, but gifts that I had been graciously given. So from that perspective...I chose to regard the event of her death as an occasion to give thanks for her life and to focus on the grace that had been mine. And I trusted that the one who had given me the gift of the past could be trusted for my future."

In doing so, Claypool recalled, he had to relax the ego desire which wanted only to keep his daughter, and "accept that my ego was not in charge of the universe, and instead of being bitter that she had died, be thankful that she had lived and then pick up the pieces and take what was left and try to make meaning of that...What got me through the night, kept me from becoming bitter, was gratitude for the whole mystery of life and hope that, since I was still breathing, God must still have had some purposes for me, delights for me."

It was a life-changing moment for Claypool, one which propelled him into his first Christian book: "Tracks of a Fellow Struggler" (Word, 1974), a collection of four sermons he preached during different stages of his daughter Laura Lue's fight with leukemia and ultimate demise.

"I'd never had much grief, had always had pretty much my way, succeeded, had taken a lot of things for granted," he said. "I think anytime we lose something that is of value to us, the first thing we have to do is to acknowledge the loss that we have sustained. If you love something or somebody, grief is the rescuer, and I think not to feel what you feel, is to deny the love you have."

Though he had learned to live again, it would be on a course through stormy waters that saw him the victim of a divorce — a failure especially tough on one who believes the Biblical admonition that "no man (should) put asunder."

But even while plummeting through a dark abyss again, Claypool once more found the light of faith and shared it.

His topic at the School of Christian Living, which continues tonight at 6:30 p.m. and Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. at Trinity Presbyterian Church at West Louisiana and Andrews Highway, is "Forgivness as a Creative Way of Coping with Failure."

It's a topic which Claypool discusses from the heart.

"We all face failure," he said. "None of us live up to everything that we want to be...A lot of my work in failure has grown out of my own attempt as a minister to face and assimilate (my divorce) and not let it wreck my life."

Americans, said Claypool, live in a society with a warped idea of success.

"I think what Heaven and Hell were to medieval Catholics, success and failure are to modern America. The biggest challenge is not to succumb to the massive cultural idea that success, as defined by achievement and wealth and fame, is the essence of life. The Gospel, it seems to me, says that...the joy of life comes from gratitude and generosity — gratitude for our existence, learning to really assess what we have been given, and trying to make generous creative use of our gifts for the rest of creation."

Improved PR could make Midland nation's hot spot

Some wisecracking cronies from Austin recently gave a co-worker a T-shirt which read "Midland is not the end of the world — but you can see it from there."

Before I came to the Tall City for the very first time I met a woman who had just moved from this area. I eagerly asked her what it was like.

She gave me a pitying look. "It's great if you like clean teeth. Just smile during a sandstorm."

I don't understand it. I had Midland thoroughly checked out before I moved here. I found it had the highest per capita income of any U.S. city as well as the highest percentage of millionaires. That had my mother sold on the place immediately.

I also discovered it had an incredibly large percentage of college graduates and a disproportionate number of young, single men earning good wages. Being a Minnesotan accustomed to living in subzero temperatures without sun nine months out of the year, I was especially impressed with the climate.

So if Midland is such a plum, why is it called the pits?

I've come to realize our city suffers from a poor PR image.

But there's no problem we can't overcome with the immense resources and talent available to us. All we have to do is convince a gullible public that Midland is the hot spot of the nation.

So we must offer the same things that attract people to other cities.

Ocean front property is always popular. No problem. We simply call the pond at Wadley-Barron Park Wadley Ocean and install a wave-making machine. We can host surfing competitions, plant a few bikini-clad lovelies on the beach and maybe throw in a shark for good measure.

At present, Midland's vast expanse of mesquite and tumbleweed just can't compete with the forests of my home state. A difficult, but not impossible, problem. I think we can rule out exposing the underbrush to radiation in an attempt to make it grow. Environmentalists frown on that sort of thing.

But the solution was right in our own living rooms. We can get the Chamber of Commerce to collect all the city's discarded Christmas trees and plant them at Hogan Park. Start calling it Hogan Forest and issue bear-hunting licenses and what can stop us?

So Las Vegas has gambling. Just in our break room alone there are dozens of Coke and snack machines you take a chance on anytime you drop a quarter in.

Can't compete with Yellowstone's hot springs and geysers? Improvise. The streets are filled with hundreds of potholes. Find a particularly large and recurring one, label it a natural formation and declare the street a national park. Not only will people flock to stare at it, they'll pay for the privilege. An enterprising city council could even sell them offspring: tourists can pay to fill a little pothole and take the hole home.

We have other natural phenomena as well. Just as predictable as the bat flight at Carlsbad Caverns, Wadley Avenue can be depended upon to flood during any rainfall. Wadley River can also serve white-water raftsmen who feel Colorado is no longer a challenge.

Cruises are becoming a popular vacation alternative. All we have to do is convert one of the newly-built but nearly-empty apartment complexes. Add a few decks and portholes and no one but an experienced seaman will realize he isn't really out to sea. It will be especially appreciated by those who suffer from seasickness.

We can even compete successfully with the tropics. It wouldn't take much to greet disembarking airplane passengers with leis, a glass of champagne, hula dancers and a midget ringing a bell.

Midland has it all — or can with a little work. All it takes is the right PR person with imagination, connections and enough hutzpah and blarney to put two nationalities to shame.

Midlander urges realignment of JP, constable precincts

The commissioners, however, maintain that the current arrangement is equitable, fiscally best for Midland, within the bounds of the law, and practical for the county, which has only one city and is largely rural. However, it does have several communities, including Greenwood, Warfield, Valley View, and Westview Estates and nudges Gardendale and Midkiff.

"In Odessa," said Cox, "they've got a constable for every precinct. And Midland is supposed to be one of the richest towns in the United States, and they ought to be able to afford it."

Ector County constables are paid $20 a month.

"It's a token deal," said Davis.

Ector County sheriff's deputies serve the JP courts in Odessa, while in Midland County, the constable and his four deputies serve the JP courts.

The Midland County constable is salaried at almost $30,000 in 1984, and his four deputies command salaries ranging from $21,432 to $26,172.

Cox said he wouldn't be opposed to dividing the constable's salary four ways if the JP-constable precincts were realigned and a constable were in each precinct.

"They could split that four ways, and see how devoted he (McGinnis) would be to his office," Cox said. "I would do it for that amount of money ($7,500 a year). I wouldn't complain."

"Ever since I was a little kid," Cox said in an earlier interview, "I've wanted to be a highway patrolman. But I never got a chance. I got married too quick."

Patrol by law-enforcement officers in rural Midland County should be upgraded, he said.

"If you live in the city, you're fine," said Cox. "But if you live in the county, you might as well, say, forget it."

County Judge Bill Ahders, however, noted that Midland's police sometimes have a slow response time, too.

"It depends how busy they are," the judge said. "You have to take your turn."

Convict suing sheriff, doctor over ingrown toenail

"I felt Dr. Leung did not have all his interest in the jail," Peterson said, adding that he felt Leung's attitude was "very, very lax and substandard."

Peterson also complained that sewer water covered the floor in his 10-by-16-foot cell and such condition was "very unclean." He mopped it up.

In addition, Peterson said he was denied use of the library. Although law books he requested were provided, he claimed he was denied a fair trial.

Further, he said his exercise was restricted over a four-month period to four 15-minute walks "down the hallway in shackles and chains." He complained about "lack of natural sunlight." He said only trusties had access to the jail's recreational area and weight-lifting equipment.

Under questioning of Mark H. Dettman, Midland County's counsel, Peterson conceded "I could understand" why he was in shackled and chained. Peterson, convicted earlier of theft and assault, had sawed his way out of the Lubbock County Jail and had been at large for four hours.

"I'm not sure it (the shackling) was for security or harassment," Peterson, said.

On the witness stand, Leung noted that he had examined and treated the prisoner. He said Peterson then did have an ingrown toe nail, varicose veins, a bad cold and "bad constipation."

"Your main problem at the time (initial examination) was complaining of a bad cold," Leung told Peterson, who was acting as his own counsel.

The physician said he prescribed antibiotics for the cold and toe.

Why then, asked Peterson, did the toe get infected.

"This is an extremely good question," the physician replied.

"All I saw was the nail was curling up," Leung said. "No puss, redness was present."

"I treat my prisoners like I treat my patients in the community," he said. The physician said Peterson has "a chronic re-occurring ingrown toenail problem."

Sheriff's Capt. Bennie Cureton described Peterson as a "very good con artist," an ex-Green Beret who was experienced in the martial arts, ordnances and explosives.

Odessa cable subscribers air grievances before council

"A lot of the problem with this company has been its attitude and service policy," said the councilwoman in her final remarks. She also suggested that the contract with Community Cablevision could be terminated because the company had failed to provided "first-class service" as promised in the contract.

Ms. Hirsch was the lone councilmember advocating the creation of a community cable board appointed by the council to oversee cable TV operations. Cable boards have been useful in Austin, Houston and Dallas in dealing with the cable companies, but the council failed to vote, and barely discussed, forming a citizen board in Odessa.

C.L. Gray asked Mayor Bob Bryant, "Bob, I'm not sure why you can't control their actions?" The city chose Community Cablevision for the franchise and have a contract with the company which sets responsibilities for the franchise.

"You guys are the ones that make the rules," suggested Gray.

Bryant noted that council had voted for Community Cablevision and stressed that the company has invested $20 million in capital improvements to the system which are supposed to be finished by early 1984.

One obstacle facing the council in taking action was the lack of any measurement to show that the franchise owners had not kept their part of the agreement.

"We need some help in determining what we can reasonably expect our local firm to provide," said City Manager John Harrison, because "specific performance indicators" were absent from the contract.

"I'm not saying we were negligent two years ago," said Councilman Dick Sivalls, "we just were not aware."

Terminating the contract would leave Odessa TV viewers without any cable option until a new company could be brought in and its system installed. "Then you wouldn't have anything," Sivalls cautioned the crowd, many of whom favored changing companies.

"You probably have not accepted that responsibility as well as you should have," said Councilman Vern Foreman, while agreeing with Sivalls that "it's better to work with what we've got."

Bryant refused to threaten or give the cable company any ultimatum. But Sivalls said "If the report is not satisfactory, they may well be on probation."

"You're not a public entity, but these people perceive you as a public entity," said Bryant, while reminding Arnold that his company is responsible to the city and council.

Compliments were few and far between for Arnold. One woman came forward and noted her good service. "I don't have a complaint," said Virginia Ruth Vickers in defense of the beleaguered company.

Bryant, while ordering the report from the company, noted that personally "in two years, I have never had to call Cablevision."

Commissioner Wright announces he will seek re-elction

Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright on Monday announced his candidacy for re-election to commissioner of Precinct 1.

"The rapid growth of Midland County over the past few years, followed by the current economic downturn, has created a serious need for experienced, fiscally conservative representation on Midland County's Commissioners' Court," Wright said.

Wright, a 52-year-old financial consultant, has been commissioner since 1969.

"I feel that my years of service in this office, combined with my business background and record of fiscal responsibility, amply qualify me for re-election," he said.

"If re-elected, I will continue to represent the best interest of the taxpayers of Midland County by opposing unnecessary expenditures while, at the same time, providing adequate services."

When he was initially elected in 1968, Wright campaigned under the slogan, "Do It Right, Elect Durward Wright."

"Once again," he said, "I am calling on my many friends and supporters in West Midland and Midland County to assist me in campaign for re-election."

Wright, a Democrat, is seeking the Democratic Party's nomination in the May 5 primary election. The general election is Nov. 6.

So far, he is unopposed in his bid for his fifth four-year term of office.

"I'm the youngest person on this court," Wright said, "but the eldest in terms of service."

Craddick announces he will seek re-election to house

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland announced today he will seek re-election to a ninth term in the Texas House of Representatives. Craddick will run in the 76th District, which consists of all of Midland County and part of Ector County.

Craddick has served as chairman of the Natural Resources Committee for the past 10 years, a position of particular importance to West Texans. He was the first Republican to be appointed to the chairmanship of a permanent House Committee. He also serves on the House Energy and Calendar Committees. He ranks fifth in seniority in the 150 member Texas House.

Craddick represents Texas on the Inter-State Oil Compact Commission, the Natural Resources Task Force of the National Conference of State Legislatures and the Energy Task Force of the Southern Legislative Conference. He also represents Texas as the vice chairman of the Joint House and Senate Committee on Water Resources.

Continuing issues in Texas, he said, will be the problem of developing a practical and economically feasible water plan for the state and maintaining fiscal restraint and responsibility in governmental spending so as avoid new taxes. Craddick believes that his experience in energy affairs will continue to be beneficial as the Legislature works to develop policies that will benefit all Texans.

Craddick and his wife, Nadine, live in Midland with their two children, Christi and Tommy, where he is a sales representative for Mustang Mud, Inc., and owns Craddick Properties.

Daughter's death changes pastor's life

Claypool, who grew up in Nashville and pastored in Kentucky, Georgia, Mississippi and Fort Worth before moving to Lubbock 1½ years ago, overcame his own failings to make an overview of life via the printed word in "Stages" (Word, 1977).

"It was four sermons I preached," said the silver-haired orator and author, "on the growth challenges of childhood, adolescence, adulthood and seniorhood, and then what the gospel resources are for them. Adolescence is the most vibrant, probably dramatic, time of our lives. But I think maybe adulthood is the most demanding, because it's the longest and we have the most different kinds of responsibilities."

A lectureship at Yale University resulted in a third book, "The Preaching Event" (Word, 1980), and then only last year the idea of self-esteem found fruition in Claypool's "The Light Within" (Word, 1983).

In the recently released "Opening Blind Eyes", Claypool details the spiritual odyssey that carried him through the 1960s and 1970s and considers what that growth in faith portends for the 1980s.

"I think the nuclear thing is a terrible cloud over us," he reflected. "I have a 16-year-old stepdaughter now and I see her really not planning much for life (because of it). I don't think she's right. But not only is the nuclear threat taking more of our money, it's covering us with a cloud of despair."

But this man who has faced the long, dark night before is optimistic that the 1980s will hold yet another morning for the faithful and caring.

"I hope," he said, "it's going to be the "we" decade versus the "I" decade of the '70s."

Parks could return to Odessa

Odessa is partially in Midland County. The region east of the downtown and north of the city's country club is undergoing extensive development and will soon be needing parks developed.

Difficulties would likely arise using Ector County equipment and materials to develop and maintain parks in the neighboring county. Developers will only need to deal with one government under the proposed set-up.

"With county participation, I think we can do at least as good a job for less money tha the county has," predicted Bryant.

Hammond had no reservations with giving up control of the system. "It doesn't bother me one bit," he said.

"There should be more cooperation between governmental entities," said the commissioner, "In the end, it will save money."

"I'm sure the county is always going to have some say," suggested Bryant. "If it's a reasonable and fair proposal," the mayor said the city would agree.

Yoga gives inner, outer beauty, actress says

Copley News Service

We all know that staying in shape, physically, is an important part of our overall appearance. And whether it be to keep weight off or to simply tone our bodies, a regular program of physical fitness is important.

But according to actress Ellen Bry (pronounced Bree), one of the new emerging stars of the Emmy Award-winning series "St. Elsewhere," staying in shape mentally is as important to good health and good looks as any diet or program of physical fitness you can try.

Her choice to accomplish this task is yoga — and she says it has changed her life!

"I first got involved in yoga when I was in college," says Ellen, "because I got tired of just taking modern dance classes. What I discovered then was that not only did it keep me limber and give me good muscle tone, but the mental benefits derived from regular practice were tremendous.

"I know this sounds kind of corny," she continues, "but yoga really did change my life. It makes you feel focused and centered and relaxed, yet so full of energy you can accomplish more and look better as well because you are so relaxed."

CNS Photo

Ellen Bry, who appears in "St. Elsewhere," is a student of yoga.

For Ellen, another attraction of the ritual of yoga (the art of achieving and maintaining certain positions with your body, one of the purposes of which is to free the spinal column and allow energy to flow through your body) is that it's highly personalized and very individual. Each yoga program can be tailored to suit your specific needs.

"I also like the fact that it involves slow movements," says this Super Beauty. "And you never have to strain. One of the greatest things about doing yoga is that it's noncompetitive and you can work at your own speed. It helps you to really get in touch with your body. I do it regularly every other day for about a half-hour. I can honestly say it makes a big difference in my life."

Although yoga does help Ellen to achieve ultimate relaxation and good muscle tone, as a self-confessed "food lover," she also incorporates running into her fitness program to help burn calories and keep weight down.

"Before I was a runner, I never believed people when they said how much it can do for you. But once I began doing it regularly, it completely changed the shape of my body, especially my backside and thighs.

"I didn't lose that much weight," adds Ellen, "but it redistributed my weight and toned and tightened so much of my body that I actually ended up wearing a smaller size."

Ellen now runs three miles every other day, but there was a time when she did seven to eight miles every day, which produced some unfortunate results. She now cautions other runners to beware of the addicting qualities of running and the damages that can result.

"I started running about three years ago. I loved it so much I just couldn't get enough of it.

"While I was running 60 miles a week, I tore a cartilage in my knee and ended up in a splint for a couple of months. It made me aware that I'm not invincible and if I'm going to run I had better do it sensibly."

Running is a great form of exercise, but do use your head about it and don't get carried away. Get a doctor's OK before you start and see a doctor at the first sign of any muscle strain or body pain.

Mascara tips given

Copley News Service

Tired of mascara that lumps and cakes on your lashes?

When the formula you use is a lash thickener or lengthener, or if your product is fresh and being used for the first time, too much mascara may adhere to the wand and give you lashes that are spiky and stuck together.

A simple remedy: before applying mascara, gently run the wand over a tissue, rotating it until the excess is removed.

The tissue will absorb the excess oil and mascara and should leave you with cleaner, fluffier lashes.

If your mascara has thickened due to cold weather or a loose cap, remove wand and run under warm water until brush is heated.

Shake excess moisture over a tissue, reinsert the wand into its container, turn several times and remove.

Woman does designs for royalty, rock stars

The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

The hair is short and shaggy. Eyelids, dusted purple. Tiny trapeze artists swing from her ear lobes. A sweatshirt branded with a leather dragon tops tight jeans tucked into white and silver boots. Marisa Martin wears London well.

She's had plenty of practice. Since combustible 1968, her lacy ballgowns and retro silks have been part of the fiber that makes the United Kingdom wild. Street urchins. Rockers. Royalty. The 38-year-old counselor of camp has left her mark on them all.

"I've made clothes for the Duchess of Kent, the group Abba, for Rod Stewart and his numerous girlfriends," she lists in a clipped, British brogue. "When these people have somewhere special to go, they like to wear my clothes."

SHE WAS ASKED to do up some blouses for Lady Di before her wedding to Prince Charles, but the designer had more pressing matters to attend to.

"It was right in the middle of my collection and I couldn't bear the aggrevation at the time," she relays. But she did reach for one royal plum. Marisa Martin was one of an exclusive crew of couturiers that submitted sketches for The Dress that accompanied Di down the aisle. "The Emanuels got the job, thank God." It's no shocker that Martin is recruited for fantasy affairs. In the spirit of Mother Goose, she sprinkles beads, sequins and bows on frocks that belong in never-never land.

SCOOP-NECK DRESSES with fluffy tuille skirts are cinched into hourglasses circa the 19th century. White and ivory silk wedding gowns with leg-of-mutton sleeves are sprayed silver at the hem. Some lacy confections painted in Easter Egg shades twinkle with matching pearls and rhinestones.

A more casual Marisa Martin — but no less enchanted — shines in her day wear. Accordion pleated silk dresses fan out to six feet of black, red and olive stripes. White charmeuse sheaths are randomly patterned with tomato red and curry crosses and splotches. Cotton dresses kissed with pastels fall off the shoulder a la French milkmaids.

GROWING UP WITH a grandma who sewed for the court of Spain set the creative juices in motion.

"When I first got interested in fashion I was 4," she recalls. "I used to draw princesses. My grandmother had all these beautiful things in trunks — beaded dresses, fur stoles. I used to dress up in them." At age 10, she moved with her mother to London. Martin's father died when she was a baby.

"She sent me to some boarding school in the Isle of Wight," she continues with a smirk. "It was really dreadful. Very regimented. An actual convent."

Martin broke loose from the all-girl "nunnery" at 14 to nurture her skills as a painter. First came a stint at an art school in Wimbledon followed by three years at the Royal College of Art in London, from which she graduated in 1968.

AN INTEREST in designing came to the surface during a showing of her works in a Liverpool gallery.

"I found a shop outside Liverpool that had beautiful, amazing antique fabrics," Martin says, her brown eyes glowing. "Printed silks from the '20s. Antique lace. I just had sold some paintings so I had some money for a change. So I bought all these fabrics. I just loved them because they reminded me of my grandma."

Inspired by those trunkfuls of old clothes she played with as a child, Martin whipped up "period costumes" and peddled them to stores. Countdown, an outre boutique in Chelsea, was her first customer with an order for 50 dresses.

"I WAS VERY frustrated by the whole thing," she says. "I was having problems getting my dresses manufactured the right way. People were into quick, cheap production. So I hired my own crew and opened my own shop in Knightsbridge and stopped wholesaling."

Stores sought her out anyway. Among them was Henri Bendel's, who in 1976 was the first American retailer to sell Marisa Martin dresses in America.

"They were all coming in to the shop — from Italy, from Holland, from France," she remembers. "Then I got fed up with everyone taking my clothes so I did a proper collection for the wholesale market."

AFTER A FORMAL showing in London, that "proper collection" was plucked by numerous stores in the States. Now she estimates that 60 of the 250 international retailers that carry her label are based in America.

Exercise program uses recliner

By The Associated Press

Holiday socializing — and eating — can and often should lead to New Year's resolutions to diet and exercise.

Such resolutions may not last through the first month of the new year, says Marianne Ronquillo, an exercise expert from Chicago.

"The single biggest reason that people don't stick to exercise programs is that they push themselves too hard, setting impossible goals and straining themselves at the first try," she remarked.

However, adds Ms. Ronquillo, it is possible to start a program that is not too taxing and that can be done in the privacy of your own home in an easy chair, building up to more strenuous efforts later on.

She has developed a series of easy exercises that can be done while watching television. She says that "using televised sports to spur you on provide a vent for emotions, lowers the blood pressure and tones the muscles at the same time." Even bad news for the home team can be used to advantage.

"Don't check an urge to jump up and yell. Instead, translate it into leg kicks," she advised. The exercises she has developed as a promotion for the La-Z-Boy Chair Co. can be done during lulls in a televised sports event or right along with the plays.

Warm up by sitting comfortably in an easy chair, back erect. Clasp the hands behind the head, arch back and then stretch forward, touching the head to the knees, or as close to the knees as possible. Repeat the exercise 10 times.

If you are trying these exercises in a recliner, put the chair in a slanted position. If you have no recliner, lie down on the floor.

Stretch the calves,lower spine and rib cage by raising the arms overhead, bending forward and grasping the toes or calves. Repeat the exercise 10 times.

"Keep at it and you'll get to your toes in no time," says Ms. Ronquillo.

Now lower the recliner to full length or remain on the floor. Lie on one side, bracing the body with the arms, and lift your upper leg as high as you can, then lower it slowly. Repeat the exercise 10 times,then roll over on the other side and repeat the exercise.

Isometric exercises can also be done in a chair. Simply relax, then clench a given set of muscles — stomach, buttocks, arms, legs, shoulders.

Wet furs can be salvaged

NEW YORK (AP) — If a fur jacket or coat gets wet, shake it out and hang it up to dry away from heat, in a place where air can circulate, advises the American Fur Industry.

After it is dry, shake it out again. If the fur is soaked through, however, take it immediately for proper treatment at the place it was bought.

AT WIT'S END

Centerfolds, charity can't coexist

By ERMA BOMBECK

I "hang out" at the needlepoint shop like a lot of men hang out at a bar or children in a candy store. It's a watering hole for discussing what our kids did last week, what aches this week, and how we'll all go into an aerobics class when there are enough calls for touching your elbow to your knees.

With regularity, the subject gets around to age. Given the options, most of us are for it, but last Wednesday was a day most of us will not forget for a long time.

I said Catherine Deneuve was getting on my nerves. People with foreign accents always have good skin. Look at Marlene Dietrich. If she had spoken English well, she'd have zits like the rest of us.

Someone else said it used to be fun growing old, and actually feeling relief that at last your body could give way to gravity and fall around your knees, but things have changed.

"You never know," said another one, "when your marriage will fail and you'll have to do battle again . . . like Linda Evans."

"I think she's overqualified," said another voice.

"Did anyone see Joan Collins in Playboy?"

Eight women stopped stitching, snipping, counting, browsing and breathing.

"Are you crazy?" said a 48-year-old woman. "My mother wouldn't let me have a copy in the house."

"It's trash," said another voice.

"Filth!" said another.

"Disgusting, worthless slime," I said.

"I bought a copy for my sister in Denver," said the owner.

We all jumped over the counter and spread the magazine out before us.

It was to be the longest silence in the history of the needlepoint shop. One woman cleared her throat as if to speak, but she was actually having trouble breathing.

There were a lot of judgments made that afternoon.

Middle-aged women think sexy underwear is the most crucial part of a new relationship. They're wrong.

There are some women . . . only a handful . . . who gave their children to someone else to carry to avoid stretch marks.

Some women were born with bodies that looked like you slammed the oven door on them . . . which a trip into space will not help.

Congeniality and charity do not coexist with centerfolds.

One matron summed it up. She said, "I could diet, jog, and exercise myself into a body like that, but if Harold would wake up next to that it would scare him half to death!"

We all agreed. It wasn't worth the risk.

DEAR ABBY

Cousins' marriage plans questioned

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A letter appeared recently in your column in the Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise from "Kathleen," whose son wanted to marry his first cousin. Kathleen's letter stated that first cousins could not marry in Massachusetts. Abby, for some strange reason, this is a common misconception among the citizens of this state; first cousins CAN marry in Massachusetts.

Kathleen asked if her son and his cousin went to another state to marry and returned to live in Massachusetts, would they be living in sin in Massachusetts? You replied that a valid marriage is valid in every state.

Wrong! Not in Massachusetts!

If Massachusetts' residents go to another state to contract a marriage that cannot be legally performed in Massachusetts, and said couple return to continue to reside in Massachusetts, their marriage would not be valid in the state of Massachusetts. — ELAINE TRUDEAU, REGISTRAR, REGISTRY OF VITAL RECORDS, BOSTON, MASS.

DEAR READERS: Mea culpa. Mea maxima culpa. I learned a lesson today. When it comes to the law, never assume anything.

My office phoned Elaine Trudeau in Boston to thank her for the above information, and to inquire, "What types of marriages would be legal in other states, but not in Massachusetts?"

We were told that a marriage between a man and his son's wife is one example. Another: Marriage between a couple who have not waited the required six months following a Massachusetts divorce, have gone elsewhere to be married and returned to live in Massachusetts.

So, dear readers, what seems logical is not necessarily legal.

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Kathleen," who was worried about the legality of the marriage of her son to his first cousin, missed the mark. Whether or not first-cousin marriages performed in one state are valid in another state is really of secondary importance when one considers the genetic implications of such marriages. Kathleen alluded to this problem when she wrote, "There is no insanity in our family, so we thought the marriage was OK."

Insanity is, perhaps, the least of the possible inheritable disorders experienced by offspring. Kathleen's son and his first cousin inherited similar genetic material from the common grandparent(s), and modern genetics have shown that there may be an increased risk of spontaneous miscarriage or, if there is a family history of some forms of inheritable disease, of occurrence of certain diseases in the offspring.

So, although their marriage may be legal, they should seek counseling from an M.D. and/or someone trained in genetic counseling prior to marrying or having children. —

J.G. SPANGLER, M.D., GEISINGER MEDICAL CENTER, DANVILLE, PA.

DEAR ABBY: A woman I work with told me that she and her husband have tried for years to have a child but she couldn't get pregnant, so they both went for physical examinations and found out that her husband was sterile. Then she told me they have applied to several adoption agencies and were told it will take between five and six years before they can get a child.

I asked her why they didn't try artificial insemination, and she told me that in the eyes of the church (Catholic) artificial insemination is the same as adultery. Abby, can this be true? — NO NAME IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR NO NAME: She informed you correctly.

Operation can curb snoring

Hearst Feature Service

When the comical "ZZZZ" of cartoons becomes buzz-saw loud in real life, snoring ceases to be a joke: It can be downright disruptive.

But silent nights are now being made possible by a surgical technique developed in Japan and recently introduced into this country.

According to F. Blair Simmons, professor of surgery at Stanford University School of Medicine, loud snorers are people whose soft palate (the back roof of the mouth) relaxes too much during sleep.

The limp tissue, he says, "acts like a ball valve in a police whistle — it just flaps back and forth as a person breathes."

In the new procedure, excess palate tissue is removed surgically and the rest is stretched to bridge the gap.

The operation has been successful 95 percent of the time — either banishing snoring entirely or dramatically decreasing its volume.

Rita Lavelle appealing sentence, $10,000 fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rita Lavelle says it has been an "unbelievable nightmare," but the judge who sentenced her to six months in prison says the former Environmental Protection Agency official violated a sacred public trust by lying to Congress.

Ms. Lavelle, who was convicted of lying about her handling of the government's $1.6 billion hazardous waste cleanup program, continues to claim innocence and says she will appeal. She was sentenced Monday to six months in prison and ordered to pay a fine of $10,000.

"This entire ordeal has been an unbelievable nightmare. I have been very, very disappointed and I intend to appeal," she told reporters.

U.S. District Judge Norma Johnson, who handed down the sentence, lamented that Ms. Lavelle "still cannot admit" the injury she caused.

The judge turned aside a defense request to spare Ms. Lavelle, 36, from prison and allow her to teach or do other volunteer work instead.

"You violated the public trust and your perjury strikes at the very core of the trust that has been conferred to you," Ms. Johnson told Ms. Lavelle. "You still cannot admit to yourself the injury you caused the federal government and the injury you caused to all of us as citizens."

She said Ms. Lavelle had "refused to set the record straight" about her dealings with Aerojet-General Corp.

The former assistant EPA administrator was convicted of lying about the date she first learned that Aerojet had dumped wastes at the Stringfellow Acid Pits in California. She maintained it was June 17, 1982, and not May 28 of that year, as various prosecution witnesses testified.

The government charged that Ms. Lavelle lied twice about Aerojet in congressional testimony last February and also in a sworn statement sent to Congress in order to cover up efforts she made to ingratiate herself with her former employer. She was also accused of obstructing a congressional investigation by sending the statement to Congress. She was found innocent of an unrelated count of lying when she denied using her office to help Republican candidates.

Ginny Foat sues ex-city employee

Ginny Foat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Feminist leader Ginny Foat, claiming her privacy was invaded by a probe of her past that led to her arrest and eventual acquittal on a 1965 murder charge, has filed a $5 million lawsuit against a woman who sparked the inquiry.

The Superior Court suit filed Monday alleges that Shelly Mandell, a Los Angeles city employee at the time, and 25 unnamed people committed "invasion of privacy, intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress and civil conspiracy" against Ms. Foat, former California president of the National Organization for Women.

Ms. Mandell was a member of NOW's national board as well as a member of City Councilman Marvin Braude's staff.

In addition to the $5 million in punitive damages, the suit seeks at least $15,000 in general damages to pay Ms. Foat's medical and legal expenses.

"I think that $5 million just about covers the humiliation that somebody goes through when she spends a weekend in Sybil Brand (Institute, the women's jail in Los Angeles) ...," said Ms. Foat's attorney, Kay Tsenin.

Although only Ms. Mandell is named in the suit, more names will be added later, Ms. Tsenin said.

"We have information that leads us to believe that there are other people involved," she said.

After Ms. Mandell wrote to Louisiana authorities to check Ms. Foat's background, Ms. Foat was arrested in Los Angeles on Jan. 11, 1983, in connection with the 1965 tire-iron slaying of Moises Chayo, a 62-year-old Argentine businessman, in New Orleans. Her former husband, John Sidote, had implicated her in the murder. A jury acquitted her last November.

Reagan may seek $140 million for Salvadoran army

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, worried about battlefield gains by leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, is likely to seek $140 million more in military aid for the Salvadoran army this year, officials say.

The new proposal would be the largest single military aid request for El Salvador and, if approved by Congress, would push total U.S. military support for the Salvadoran army to more than $200 million for 1984. Last year, the United States provided $81.3 million in military aid.

A Pentagon official said Monday that a substantial aid boost was needed to give the army a chance "to get out of the hole" and put the leftist guerrillas on the defensive in the four-year-old civil war.

Administration officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said senior policy-makers were in agreement on the $140 million request although President Reagan has not given the plan his formal approval.

The large aid hike would also face an uncertain future in Congress, where some critics contend that El Salvador's military problems stem from weaknesses in its leadership and will not be solved by more money.

Officials said the new aid would include additional troop-carrying helicopters to improve the army's mobility. Last week, leftist Salvadoran guerrillas destroyed a key bridge, limiting the army's ability to reach the eastern third of the country by truck.

"If you agree that they need more mobility, they can use it now, not two years from now," said one senior official.

While two officials said the package would include El Salvador's first large troop-carrying helicopters, a Defense Department official said it will contain only more UH-1H "Hueys" because the larger twin-rotor CH-47 "Chinook" helicopters are more difficult to maintain.

So far, the United States has supplied the Salvadoran army with 20 "Hueys" helicopters, which can carry 11 soldiers each. The "Chinook" carries 33 soldiers.

Officials said the aid package would also include increased training of El Salvador's 25,000-man army and high-quality communications gear.

In a December visit to El Salvador, Vice President George Bush told Salvadoran leaders that the administration was prepared to seek a substantial increase in aid if army officers linked to rightist death squads were expelled from the country. Bush set today as a deadline for action.

Last week, administration officials said they were pleased that three of officers cited by Bush have been transferred to posts outside El Salvador.

This week's report by a bipartisan commission headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is expected to propose massive long-term aid for Central America, including stepped-up military aid for El Salvador. But it likely will suggest, as well, that the assistance be conditioned on improvements in human rights.

Cargo plane crash injures crew members

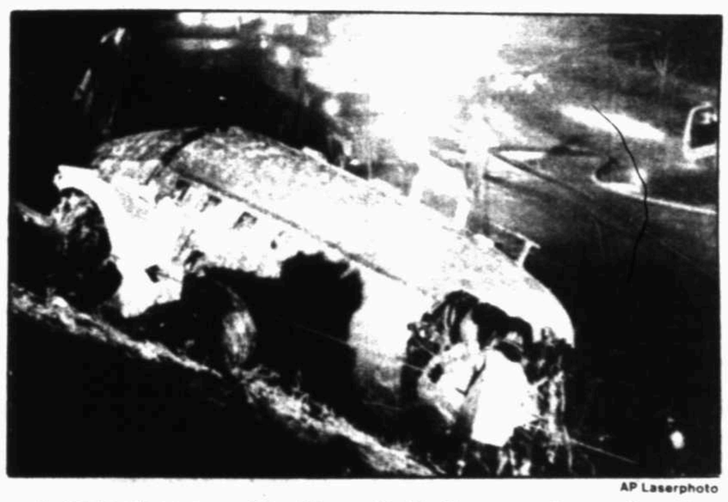

BRIDGETON, Mo. (AP) — A DC-3 cargo plane crashed and burned Monday night shortly after takeoff from Lambert St. Louis International Airport, seriously injuring both crew members, authorities said.

The plane crashed about 10:33 p.m. three miles west of the airport on a slope next to Interstate 70, missing a residential area in this St. Louis suburb, said an airport police spokesman. No injuries on the ground were reported.

Both crew members suffered multiple fractures and were in surgery at DePaul Hospital, a spokesman said. The pilot was listed in serious condition and the co-pilot was in critical condition.

Bridgeton Police Lt. Randy Harpole said a check with the Federal Aviation Administration and a search of the plane indicated there were only two people aboard the aircraft.

Cpl. Ralph Schmidt, of the Missouri Highway Patrol, identified the pilot as Gary Cox, 32, of Oshawa, Ontario. He said the plane, owned by Skycraft Air Transport Inc. of Oshawa, had unloaded its cargo at Lambert and was returning to Canada.

AP Laserphoto

A cargo plane owned by Skycraft Air Transport Inc., a Canadian firm, crashed along Interstate 70 near the St. Louis International Airport Monday night. Airport officials and the Missouri Highway Patrol indicated that the pilot and the co-pilot were the only persons aboard the DC-3. They were both seriously injured in the crash.

Schmidt said the plane brushed a hilltop near a subdivision shortly after takeoff, bounced and tumbled into a ravine along side the highway, shearing off the cockpit and one wing and cracking the fuselage.

"We were very fortunate that the plane missed these homes," said John Norris, fire chief of the Pattonville-Bridgeton Fire Protection District. "There are about 2,000 gallons of fuel still left in the plane which will require some watching but there is no need of any evacuation at this time."

"I heard a rumble and we ran to the window and I saw it come down," said Edith Wilson, whose home is directly behind the crash site. "It scared me to death — it was too close for comfort."

Her husband, Woodrow, said he and some friends found the crew members near a creek.

"We had to drag them out of the weeds — they'd been thrown completely out of the plane," he said. "We dragged them away from the plane because we were afraid it was going to explode."

The plane, whose propellors were driven straight into the ground, was "blazing pretty good at the time," Wilson said.

An airline pilot who lives in a nearby subdivision said the plane was headed in a southwesterly direction when it came down on the edge of Benedetta Court, bounced once and twisted around.

No buildings were damaged, although several trees were uprooted.

Beach Boys postpone winter tour

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The five surviving Beach Boys, announcing the postponement of a dozen winter concerts while they mourn the death of drummer Dennis Wilson, said they're not yet ready to resume singing their upbeat songs.

Wilson, 39, one of three brothers in the rock group, drowned Dec. 28 while diving at a Marina del Rey boat slip. The Los Angeles County coroner's office ruled the death accidental.

Although the band recently has performed with other drummers besides Wilson, "emotionally we wanted to wait a bit longer before we get up and sing 'Fun, Fun, Fun,'" lead singer Mike Love said Monday.

Airline shutdown cost over $1 million

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Air Illinois, which plans to resume some flights this weekend, said its voluntary shutdown during a federal probe of its maintenance procedures cost over $1 million.

Air Illinois President Roger Street told a news conference Monday that the airline would resume service Saturday with flights from Waterloo and Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to Chicago's O'Hare International Airport. But the Federal Aviation Administration declined to say if the agency would recertify the airline by then.

Air Illinois grounded its 13-plane fleet Dec. 15 after the FAA raised questions about possible safety deficiencies. One of the airline's planes crashed Oct. 11, killing all 10 people aboard.

Prosecutors ask for investigation

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Citing the "potential enormity" of the problem, prosecutors asked the Bureau of Land Management to help determine whether companies are illegally draining gas and oil worth millions of dollars from state and federal land in Wyoming.

"We are looking into it and trying to collect enough information to see if a full-fledged investigation is warranted," said U.S. Attorney Richard Stacy on Monday.

Feinstein wants to improve rail system

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Dianne Feinstein, sworn in to her second full term in office, told a City Hall audience of more than 1,500 people that her priorities are to improve service on the Municipal Railway and provide more affordable housing.

Ms. Feinstein, who became mayor following the November 1978 assassinations of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk by Milk's ex-colleague Dan White, took the oath of office on Monday from California Chief Justice Rose Bird.

Newspaper publisher wants to reconcile

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Saying he was "grateful" the St. Louis Globe-Democrat agreed to continue publication for another week, a publisher who had backed out of a deal to buy the paper said he hoped to "reconcile our differences."

"We think the announcement is positive," prospective buyer Jeffrey Gluck said Monday. "If we can reconcile our differences with the Newhouses, we'd be very pleased."

Negotiations had broken down Friday over the refusal by union employees of the paper to relieve the newspaper, owned by the Newhouse family, of financial liability for severance payments.

Authorities holding unemployed cook

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Authorities were holding without bail today an unemployed cook who pleaded innocent to charges of murder, kidnapping and robbery after he told a newspaper where to find the body of a missing female college student.

Attorney General James E. Tierney meanwhile said at least one more arrest is likely. "We have been under the assumption since the beginning of the investigation that more than one person was involved," Tierney said Monday.

David Willoughby, 27, was arrested Saturday, hours after leading newspaper reporters and police to the body of 21-year-old Paula Roberts. Willoughby said the murder was committed by two drinking partners who he said borrowed a car from him the night of the murder.

Script kept 'under lock and key'

John Landis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A production secretary for the movie "Twilight Zone" has testified that an associate producer wanted the final script kept "under lock and key" because he knew it involved children working under illegal conditions.

Videotape of a helicopter crash during filming that killed two child actors and star Vic Morrow was shown Monday as a preliminary hearing began on involuntary manslaughter charges against the associate producer and four others involved in making the film.

Director John Landis, associate producer George Folsey Jr., production manager Dan Allingham, special effects coordinator Paul Stewart and helicopter pilot Dorcey Wingo pleaded innocent as the hearing began before Municipal Court Judge Brian Crahan.

Morrow, Myca Dinh Le, 7, and Renee Chen, 6, were killed instantly when a helicopter crashed on them in the early morning hours of July 23, 1982, following a special-effects explosion.

Production secretary Donna G. Schuman, the first witness, said the rewritten version of the script had been carefully guarded and that Landis wanted a "huge" explosion for the scene.

MRS. SCHUMAN said that Folsey told her about the addition of children to the "Twilight Zone."

"He said 'we've got a little problem. John (Landis) has written two kids into the Vietnam segments and we're going to have to work them without permits and welfare workers and we don't want anyone to know in light of the explosives and everything else that's going on,'" Mrs. Schuman said.

As she spoke, there were gasps from the five defendants.

Deputy District Attorney Gary Kesselman told Crahan a scene similar to the one which killed the three was filmed less than three hours earlier. At that time the occupants of the helicopter "strenuously objected" to Landis that the craft had flown too low and the heat from the explosions was too great.

NEVERTHELESS, Kesselman said, Landis decided "to place children right in the middle of that highly dangerous situation."

Mrs. Schuman described hearing Landis planning the scene in which a Vietnamese village was to be blown up as Morrow carried the children to safety.

"What was said by Mr. Landis?" Kesselman asked.

"What I heard and I remember was that he wanted the explosion to be big. It was going to be huge," Mrs. Schuman said. "He emphasized that several times — 'I want it big; I want it big; I want it big.'"

Mrs. Schuman noted that because of the illegal working conditions, the producers sought the children they needed outside regular casting agencies.

A DOCUMENT filed Monday by lawyers for Landis, Allingham and Folsey admitted the three knew they were violating state work-permit requirements but said that was "immaterial" to the charges.

The document said the three had met their obligations for safety by employing experts Stewart and Wingo and should not be held accountable for the accident, which occurred near Valencia, 40 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

As he made his opening statement, defense attorney Harland Braun showed a videotape of the accident as filmed from several cameras.
