Nixon To Make Pitch For His Top Projects

Times Accused Of Misleading Readers With Uneven Reports

AUSTIN (AP) — Walt Rostow, former aide to Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, has acused the New York Times of misleading readers with its analysis of the controversial Pentagon papers, says the Daily Texan.

The student newspaper at the University of Texas where Rostow is now a professor of economics and history said the comments were made in an interview.

The Texan quoted Rostow as saying "The Pentagon report itself is an uneven report based on partial evidence lacking the most critical evidence, that is, the president's mind, his consultations with his leading advisers and his consultation with the congressional leadership.

"But the worst of it, in my judgment, is what the New York Times did in its first three articles. It proceeded from this limited evidence to draw conclusions which are in no way warranted by the evidence itself," Rostow said.

Rostow says the newspaper stories charge that in 1964 President Johnson planned to increase U.S. troops in Vietnam to enlarge the American role in the war but concealed his plans.

"But the evidence itself shows that what happened in 1964 was simply that normal contingency planning was conducted," Rostow said.

He said another charge in the newspaper stories was that Johnson concealed his decision to put major troop units in Vietnam in 1965.

"The decision in April was to enlarge the protection of the Danang Air Base by putting in two Marine battalions plus some logistical forces. This was not announced for security reasons until the troops were in place, when a routine announcement was made," Rostow said.

Venezuelan Horse Malady Hits Texas

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — Symptoms of a dread horse disease considered a possible threat to the horse industry in the United States have been "clinically observed" in two horses near Brownsville, a U.S. Agriculture Department spokesman said today.

The spokesman said this was the first time the disease, Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis (VEE' has been clinically observed in the United States.

The disease, spread by mosquitos, has killed thousands of horses as it has spread northward out of South America during the past two years.

The spokesman said four USDA foreign disease diagnosticians have been dispatched to examine the two sick horses. He said blood samples have been flown to the animal disease laboratory in Denver and the Public Health Service center in Atlanta. Conclusive laboratory findings required to distinguish VEE from other strains of encephalitis are not expected before this weekend.

The two unidentified owners reported the sick horses to veterinarians Monday. The veterinarians reported the sick horses to officials of a state and federal task force sent to Harlingen to attempt to halt the northward spread of the disease. The disease can spread from horses to humans, officials say.

The spokesman said one of the horses had been vaccinated June 28 with an experimental vaccine against VEE, but officials said the incubation period for the disease had begun before the vaccination.

The other horse had not been vaccinated against VEE, but had been vaccinated Sunday against western and eastern encephalomyelitis.

The spokesman said the horses exhibited symptoms of VEE in that they had a high fever, disorientation and circling.

612 Persons Killed In Traffic During Holiday Weekend

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic accidents during the Fourth of July weekend claimed 612 lives—a record for a three-day observance of the holiday.

The toll compared with a previous high of 611 in 1969 and 540 last year. In all three cases, the holiday period ran 78 hours, roughly three days.

The National Safety Council had estimated that between 520 and 620 might die in traffic during this year's second warm-weather holiday weekend.

82 Texans Die During Holiday

Experts in the Texas Department of Public Safety figured in advance, and only too well, what the state's tragic toll in traffic accidents would be during the long July 4 weekend.

They put the total at 48 deaths on streets and highways, and that was the precise number as the holiday period ended, subject to upward revision, however, in event of tardy reports.

Altogether, violence claimed 82 lives in the Lone Star State. There also were 17 drownings and 11 homicides, plus fatalities from assorted other causes.

The grim tally was tabulated by The Associated Press between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday.

These were among the latest victims:

An off-duty police traffic investigator, Carl W. Rancher, 42 and Carter J. Keeter, 65 both of Fort Worth, were killed late Monday as two cars collided at Forest Hill. Four other persons suffered injuries.

Dandran D. Hawkins, 2, of Sherman was hurled through the windshield of his mother's car and killed Monday in accident at Sherman.

Gunfire killed Roosevelt Farrow, 66, at a Galveston cafe Monday. Officers said the shooting occured as he was refused admittance to the place. They held a man for questioning.

LIFE-SAVING ACTION — William Cotts, 10, holds the sparkler which ignited the poncho his sister, Cindy, 7, is wearing and showing to their aunt, Mrs. Alvie French, of 1921 N. Banks. During a home fireworks show, Cindy's poncho caught on fire from a sparkler, but the quick action of William, a Webelo scout from Newberry Park, Calif., saved her life. The children are guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. French this Summer. (Staff Photo)

Scout Saves Sister's Life With Fire-Fighting Method

A flaming July 4th sparkler and a fuzzy poncho almost cost the life of seven-year old Cindy Cotts Sunday night, but the quick action of her older brother, William Cotts, saved her life and earned the youth a life saving badge.

The children, a niece and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Alvie French, 1921 N. Banks, had returned to the French home after watching the traditional July 4th fireworks display here, and had started their own home fireworks show.

When sparks from a flaming sparkler she was holding caught Cindy's fuzzy poncho on fire, she started to run, but was caught within two feet by her 10-year-old brother, William.

The poncho had flamed up to her chin, but William threw her to the ground face down. When the flames weren't immediately extinguished, he rolled over her, smothering the fire.

"Cindy was only burned on her little finger," Mrs. French said, "but William wasn't burned at all. He was the closest one to her and tackled her so quickly, we asked him how he knew what to do. He said he learned how to put out fires in scouting."

The boy will receive a life saving medal when the children return home to Newberry Park, Calif., to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Cotts. William has been in scouting two years and started as a Cub Scout at the age of eight.

Veep To Seek Arab Support For US. Mideast Efforts

SINGAPORE (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew left Singapore for the Middle East today, seeking support from leaders in two of the less militant Arab states for President Nixon's efforts to achieve an Arab-Israeli settlement.

After an 8½-hour flight broken by a refueling stop in Bombay, Agnew was to spend nearly two days in the oil-rich little Persian gulf Kingdom of Kuwait, the highest ranking American official ever to visit there. On Thursday he crosses the Arabian peninsula to Jidda, on the west coast of Saudi Arabia.

The vice president carried to Kuwait and Saudi Arabia a message that the U.S. government seeks a balance of power that will assure the security of all nations.

He told newsmen in Singapore Monday that in the Middle East the Nixon administration has tried to counter the increased Soviet naval presence in the Mediterranean and Moscow's aid to Egypt by keeping "the Israeli government supplied with sufficient disincentive to anyone to attack them" while at the same time "attempting to maintain a non-hostile posture toward the Arab republics."

Plans To Be Explained At Kansas News Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the ringup on the congressional register at "no sale," President Nixon is off to Missouri today to make another regional pitch for his top domestic proposals.

The President and Mrs. Nixon were to depart the White House about noon for a 4 p.m. (EDT) meeting in Kansas City with news executives from 13 states.

The hour-long conclave, as have such meetings elsewhere, was expected to focus on the administration's schemes revenue sharing, welfare reform and government reorganization.

Although Nixon recently told a similar group of media officials in Rochester, N.Y., that Congress is going to pass each of those proposals because of the pressure of a "taxpayers' revolt," prospects remain dim.

A White House advance man said the President also would discuss family-health problems, growing drug addiction, and pollution.

The Nixons were to fly on to San Clemente, Calif., later in the day for a two-week stay at the Western White House.

Several administration officials preceded the chief executive into Kansas City for advance briefings, including a midday news conference by Herbert Klein, director of communications; Donald Rumsfeld, assistant for domestic programs; Clark MacGregor, congressional liaion chief, and William Ruckelshaus, head of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Invitations were extended to editors and other communications leaders from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Contrary to Nixon's continued expressions of optimism for his top three domestic recommendations to the 92nd Congress, only welfare reform is seen as having much of a chance in the coming year.

A welfare bill acceptable to the administration cleared the House last month and in about two weeks will undergo hearings in the Senate Finance Committee, which balked last year.

Nixon's $5-billion general revenue-sharing plan, meanwhile, is tied up in the House Ways and Means Committee, with both Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., and senior Republican John W. Byrnes of Wisconsin opposing it. The panel will discuss Wednesday whether to try to develop some sort of alternative to revenue sharing, such as federal credits for state taxes.

Boy Hospitalized For Stab Wounds Suffered In Fight

A fifteen-year-old Pampa boy remained in Highland General Hospital today as a result of knife injuries sustained around 2 a.m. when he was allegedly in a fracas with another boy, believed by police to be 14 or 15 years old.

The victim was admitted to the hospital after a 10-year-old companion alerted his parents that he was bleeding.

The victim underwent surgery early today for a stab wound in the abdomen. Another wound on his thigh was reported to be less serious. Hospital authorities said today the youth was in good condition.

The 16-year-old companion of the victim told officers the stabbing suspect and the victim had engaged in a fight outside the victim's home. The suspect reportedly ran from the scene chased by the 16-year-old. The victim was then discovered to be bleeding, and his parents were alerted.

Police are looking for the suspect, reported to be a resident of Pampa.

Louis Armstrong, Legendary Jazz Trumpeter, Passes Away At 71

NEW YORK (AP) — Louis Armstrong, the satchelmouthed, eye-rolling one-time waif who learned to love the trumpet in a Louisiana school and blew and sang his way into the hearts of millions the world over, 'died today. He was 71 Sunday.

Armstrong spent 10 weeks in Beth Israel Hospital after winding up a two-week engagement at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in late February.

That was a long way from the waif's home in New Orleans where a 13-year-old boy got his first coronet. He was sent to the home for shooting off a revolver on New Year's Eve.

On his 71st birthday, Sunday, Armstrong had friends visit and apparently felt well.

His hospitalization was primarily for liver and kidney troubles which had weakened his heart.

On June 23, Armstrong gave an interview at his home, to thank all the people who had sent him get-well wishes at the hospital and to tell them he was feeling fine. He looked good and he played four tunes on his trumpet, including the long version of one of his greatest hits, "Sleepy Time Down South."

Armstrong said that his legs were weak from being in a hospital bed so long, but his lip was in good shape. He saiad, "I'm going back to work when my treaders get in as good shape as my chops."

Along the way, "Satchmo" went from one-night stands in little towns all across the country to jazz concerts in most of the worlds capitals. He made countless recordings, appeared in many movies and lately, has been a favorite guest on television specials and talk shows.

Armstrong won acclaim all his life, from kings and savages, from intellectual jazz buffs and kids on the street. He mopped his sweaty brow, rolled his eyes, sang in that growling voice and most of all—played his horn.

On his 70th birthday in 1970, Armstrong played a recording of one of his early trumpet solos and had this to say:

"Ain't nobody played nothing like it since, and can't nobody play nothing like it now."

That could be his epitaph, and as long as those old records are around to be played, nob.dy is going to argue with him.

Daniel Louis Armstrong was born on the fourth of July, 1900, and by the time he was 5 his parents had separated and Louis was roaming the New Orleans streets. After an ill-fated New Year celebration when he shot a revolver he claimed was only loaded with blanks—he was sent to the New Orleans Waifs Home.

Louis had already been taught to blow on a cornet a little by the great Bunk Johnson, and in the school's brass band.

After he left the home, Louis kept on playing the cornet—in New Orleans' famed houses of ill repute that gave jazz its name, and in pick-up bands playing at funerals—dirges on the way to the cemetery and a rousing "Didn't He Ramble" on the way back.

"Cats died like flies," he recalled recently, "so I got a lot of nice little gigs out of that. It's business. They going to enjoy blowing over me, ain't they?"

Louis was 22 when King Oliver called him up to Chicago to join his Creole Jazz Band.

Pianist Lil Hardin, who two years later was to become the first of Louis' four wives, recalled a few years ago that Oliver told her he was going to keep Louis playing second cornet behind him because otherwise King Oliver wouldn't remain king.

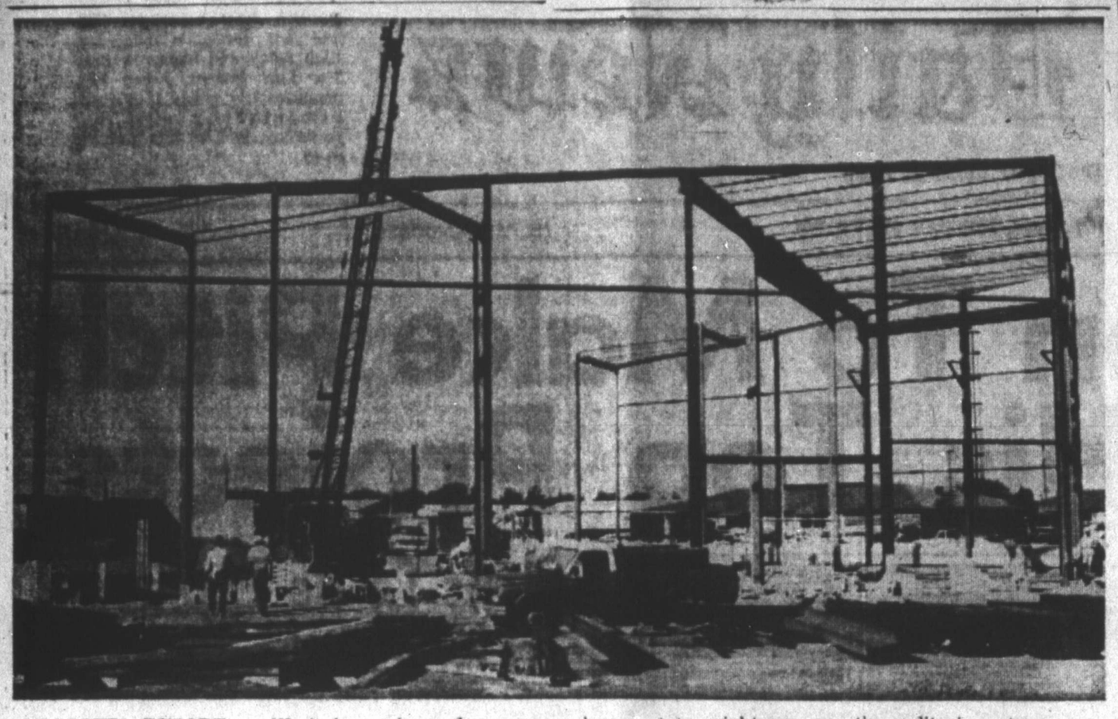

Louis left Oliver to play with Fletcher Henderson's band in New York, but went back to Chicago to lead a small group at the Dreamland Cafe.

His billing for that engagement was prophetic—"The World's Greatest Trumpet Player"—and his pay astronomical for the times—$75 a week.

Recordings from the Chicago small-band days are most prized by collectors, but Armstrong won a new audience with his big bands in the 1930s and developed the showmanship and singing style that kept him in demand for dance dates, records and movie spots.

With no pretense at trying to be an actor, or anything but Ol' Satchmo, he cropped up with his wide, toothy grin in countless song-and-dance numbers in movies like "Goin' Places," "Cabin in the Sky" and "Dr. Rhythm."

In the 1950s, still blowing strong, Louis won new success with a small band that included the incomparable Jack Teagarden and singer Velma Middleton. This group played all over the world.

PROGRESS REPORT — Work is moving along on schedule at the construction site of Pampa's new civic auditorium. Steelwork was going ahead today. The beams at top right are over the auditorium stage area. The $1.2 million structure is scheduled for completion in late March of 1972. (Staff Photo)

Officials Of Teamsters, UAW Dash Cold Water On Speculation

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — High officials of the Teamsters and the United Auto Workers, the nation's two largest unions, have dashed cold water on speculation that they may soon return to the main body of American labor—the AFL-CIO.

The department explained that within the next two weeks most of the farmers participating in the 1971 programs will have received preliminary payments boosting the advances to $2.5 billion.

More than 2 million farms are enrolled in the set-aside system. Feed-grain producers ultimately will get about $1.1 billion this year, cotton growers around $800 million and wheat producers about the same amount.

Under the 1970 law, preliminary payments to wheat producers are limited to 75 per cent of final payments. Feed-grain and cotton farmers may or may not receive a final amount, depending on market conditions.

The department estimates this year's total payments for grain and cotton will be about $2.7 billion, some $600 million less than they received last year under a system that was replaced by the set-aside program.

Although officials close to AFL-CIO President George Meany have indicated interest in taking back the two unions, which would swell the labor federation's ranks to more than 17 million, the Teamsters and Auto Workers appear in no hurry to pick up the welcoming bid.

SEC To Seek Criminal Complaints Against Defendants In Stock Suit

DALLAS (AP) — A Securities Exchange Commission spokesman says the SEC intends to seek criminal complaints defendants in its civil suit alleging stock fraud and manipulation.

He made the statement as investigators headed into another round of taking sworn statements from political figures and others about quick-profit deals in insurance stocks on loans from the now-defunct Sharpstown State Bank in Houston.

Depositions are being taken in preparation for the Aug. 30 start of the SEC's suit for an injunction against activities attributed to 15 individuals and 13 corporations.

"We intend to conduct further investigations after the hearing (Aug. 30), including some matters we haven't had time to go into," the SEC official said. "Each of those civil violations, if found to be willful, is a criminal violation, as opposed to something done illegally but inadvertently."

It was explained that a federal grand jury probe at Houston into operations of promoter Frank W. Sharp and his associates would not conflict with the SEC's criminal investigation because they seek to enforce different statutes.

Sharp, one of the 15 individuals named in the civil suit, already has pleaded guilty to criminal charges of violating stock and banking laws. He drew a three-year probated term in return for agreeing to testify before federal grand juries.

Indians Protest Visit By Henry Kissinger

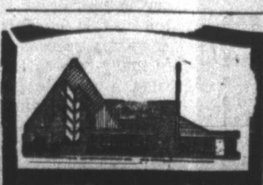

NEW DELHI (AP)—White House adviser Henry Kissinger arrived in New Delhi today amid small-scale demonstrations protesting the two-day visit by President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser.

Police kept the demonstrators away from Kissinger. But he was certain to run into vigorous criticism from Indian officials outraged because the United States is continuing to ship arms to the Pakistani army despite its bloody suppression of the independence movement in East Pakistan.

Hanoi Raps U. S. Reaction To Peace Plan

HONG KONG (AP) North Vietnam said today that the Nixon administration is maintaining an "obdurate stand" toward the Viet Cong's new proposal for ending the Vietnam War.

Radio Hanoi was referring to the seven-point proposal calling for simultaneous withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam and the release of all prisoners by the end of this year, which the Viet Cong presented at the Paris talks last Thursday.

Texas Solons Believe Arrests, Heavier Punishments Best Weapons Against Drug Abuse

Editor's Note: The last of the Texas Legislature was in no mood to soften anti-drug laws as some vocal persons have demanded. Instead, all moves were aimed at strengthening the laws and increasing enforcement. A summary.

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Legislature showed this year that it believes lost of arrests and heavier punishments are the best weapons against drug abuse.

Lawmakers raised penalities possessing LSD and other hallucination-causing drugs, voted funds for 25 more state narcotics agents and refused to cut the punishment for marijuana possession.

They made it easier, however, for teen-agers to get medical treatment for drug problems and set up state controls over methadone programs which help cure heroin addiction.

The legislature also approved some badly drafted changes in the Dangerous Drug Act, which might create difficulties for the police and the courts and might even have knocked out penalties for possessing LSD.

For years, critics of Texas' drug laws have said it's unjust that you can go to prison the first time you're caught with marijuana, while possessing mind-shattering LSD was just a misdemeanor on first conviction.

The legislature evened things up a little making first-offense possession of LSD and 21 other "hallucinogenics" a felony, or penitentiary offense.

Punishment for possessing hallucinogenics was set at 2 to 10 years in prison.

Legislators who wanted to equalize the situation from the other direction—reducing marijuana possession to a misdemeanor—were narrowly defeated in the House.

A watered-down bill that benefit only minors with a clean record who were just "experimenting" with marijuana was rejected, 51-63.

Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, who came out strongly for marking first offense marijuana possession a misdemeanor last year, didn't push for a change in the marijuana law during the session.

"I told (Rep. Raul) Longoria (sponsor of the House bill) that I would give it a run in the Senate if he could get it out of the House," Barnes said.

Sponsors said in many cases teen-agers weren't seeking treatment for drug problems because they were afraid to til their parents, whose consent was needed.

A drug research acvisory panel was established to review proposed research projects. Once approved, a researcher and his subjects would have legal immunity from prosectuion under the drug laws and could get drugs—when available—from Public Safety Department.

"We are crying for information on the marijuana dilemma one scientist-physician told a Senate committee.

The legislature failed to provide funds for required drug abuse classes in the public schools, leaving the Texas Education Agency dependent on federal funds as it was in 1969 and 1970.

But it set up procedures for Methadone maintenance programs, which many see as the best approach yet devised to end heroin addiction. All methadone treatment programs would have to be approved by the State Health Department.

The bill that made LSD possession a felony contained some contradictions that indicated it was badly written.

Possession of the basic form of "speed," methamphetamine, remains a misdemeanor on first offense, although the drug is so dangerous that most "heads" steer clear of it.

But possession of methylamine and phenylacetone at the same time to manufacture "speed" is a felony, punishable by one to five years in the penitentiary.

The new law also makes it a felony to possess several other hallucination-causing amphetamine compounds.

A more serious confict could throw out all penalities for possession of LSD and other hallucinatory drugs.

The penalties for offering to sell dangerous drugs were set out as Section 15B of hte Dangerous Drug Act. The same section number, however, was used in a separate bill for penalties for possessing hallucinogents. Since the "offering to sell" bill was approved last, it may have knocked out the LSD penalties.

Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin probably will be asked for an opinion. Walter Richeter, head of the state's drug abuse program, said Gov. Preston Smith might submit the matter at the nex special legislative session next special legislative session if Martin holds that Texas now has no penalties for LSD possession.

After the session Barnes said he believes marijuana possession should remain a felony but with judges having discreation to reduce it to a misdemeanor in individual cases.

Marijuana possession remains punishmable by prison sentences of from two years to life.

Legislators provided the Department of Public Safety with money to hire 25 additional narcotics agents at starting salaries of $9,840 a year for a total anti-drug force of 100 men.

For the first time, habitual drug users—as well as persons tempoarily under the influence of drugs—are forbidden to drive automobiles. Violation carries a penalty of 10 days to two years in jail and—or fine of $100 to $1,000 on first conviction.

Subsequence offenses are punishaelb by a jail sentence of 90 days to two years and a fine of up to $1,000.

For many years it has been a crime, punishable by up to life imprisonment, to sell narcotics.

The legislature "created" a new crime—offering to sell or buy a narcotic, including marijuana, with the same punishment as for sale itself.

Lawmakers also made it a felony to offer to sell or deliver a "dangerous drug," such as barbiturates and amphetamines, with punishment of 2 to 10 years in prison.

In both naroctics and dangerous drugs cases, the offer to sell would have to be corroborated by testimony by someone other than the person to whom the drug

Legislators weren't entirely punitive in their approach to the the person to whom the drug was offered.

Legislators weren't entirely punitive in their approach to the drug problem.

They passed a law allowing youngsters 13 and older to go to doctors without their parents' consent for treatment of drug addition, drug dependency or any condition directly related to drug use.

Retired Admiral Hart Dies At 94

SHARON, Conn. (AP) — Retired Adm. Thomas C. Hart, who commanded U.S. naval forces in the Philippines when war broke out with Japan in 1941 and later served for two years as U.S. senator from Connecticut, has died at 94.

Hart who suffered a stroke last week, died at his home here early Sunday. The funeral will be held here Wednesday and burial will be at Arlington National Cemetery.

Hart was in charge of the U.S. Asiatic Fleet when Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, and naval men later creditied him with brilliant handling of the evacuation of the Navy's base at Cavite, on Manila Bay.

From Jan. 17 to Feb. 11, 1942, Hart held command of all Allied naval forces in the Southwest Pacific—British Dutch and Australian as well as American.

In the summer of 1942, when he was 65, he was placed on the Navy's retired list but was immediately recalled to active service as a member of the Navy's General Board. His job was to gather testimony from Navy personnel concerning the attack on Pearl Harbor and the months leading up to it.

A citation presented by President Franklin D. Roosevelt said Hart had "exercised sound judgement and marked resourcefulness in dealing with the difficult military and diplomatic situation" before Pearl Harbor, and at the time of the attack had "disposed and handled the Asiatic Fleet in a manner which left nothing to be desired." With the citation was a Gold Star equivalent of a second Distinguished Service Medal.

Hart was superintendent of the U.S. Naval Academy from 1931 to 1934, and was chairman of the General Board, the Navy's top policy-advisory agency, when he was appointed commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet two years before Pearl Harbor.

In February, 1945, Hart was appointed as a Republican to fill a Senate vacancy caused by the death of Francis T. Maloney of Connecticut.

He served two years, but declined to run for election of the office in 1946 because of age.

Hart was married in 1910 to Caroline Brownson. They had five children, and his widow and four of the children survive.

The Women's Page

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My boy friend is very sweet and nice to me as a rule. But when he's drinking he gets very mean. He finds fault with me and picks fights over nothing. He also wants to pick fights with everybody else.

He's not an alcoholic, Abby. He can take it or leave it alone, but he gets so ugly and mean when he's tight, I wonder which side of him is the real him. I would like your opinion.

DIXIE

DEAR DIXIE: Alcohol doesn't change one's personality. It merely amplifies it. A mean person gets meaner and a sweet person gets sweeter. If your boy friend can take it or let it alone, he's ahead to let it alone. (And you'd be wise to let him alone.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a truck driver and he is gone from home sometimes a week to 10 days. What makes me mad is he tells me he will call me at a certain time. We don't have a phone so he calls me at a neighbor's home. So I go there and wait from 7 to 10 in the evening because that's the time he says he'll call.

Well, about half the time he doesn't call, so I go to my neighbor's house again on the next night, and sometimes even a third and fourth night hoping he'll call. Sometimes he calls and sometimes he doesn't. When I ask him why he didn't call when he said he would, he says he either fell asleep, near a phone, he got his days mixed up, or he forgot.

Abby, I can understand his falling asleep or not being near a phone, but how can he get his days mixed up when he has a daily log to fill out? And how can a man forget his wife and children? I just can't understand it. I am tempted not to be there when he does call, but what would that solve?

ALONE BY THE PHONE

DEAR ALONE: Nothing. Go to your neighbor's to wait for his call on the night he has said he'll call, and don't try to second guess him. Truck drivers on the whole are a reliable lot. You picked a lemon.

DEAR ABBY: About two years ago our then 19-year-old unmarried daughter became involved with a married man while visiting her older married sister across the country from us. The man and his wife were best friends of our oldest daughter and her husband.

The man left his wife and two children, and he and our young daughter lived together in an apartment awaiting his divorce.

Needless to say, this caused many hurt feelings and many harsh words were said by all concerned. The man's divorce became final last Winter and he and our daughter were married in a church ceremony shortly after. They are now apparently very happy.

Since this is the case, and while I do not condone or approve of their earlier conduct, I still love my daughter and want to have a good relationship with her and her husband. Others in the family disagree violently with me. I think life is too short to harbor bitter feelings. Am I wrong?

DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: No.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "C.J.J.": Herbert put it this way, "He who cannot forgive others, breaks the bridge over which he himself must pass, if he is to ever reach heaven, for everyone has the need to be forgiven." Try a little harder.

Hawking Hot Dogs Helps Opera Voice

NEW YORK (UPI)—"Getcha red hots" doesn't appear in any vocal exercise book for young ladies aiming for an operatic career.

But Sandra Warfield, operatic mezzo married to James McCracken, operatic tenor, said screaming this sales pitch while hawking hot dogs as a teenager probably helped develop her voice.

It happened in Kansas City, Mo., when Miss Warfield worked for her father's food concession in an amusement park.

Yelling in public also gave Miss Warfield a certain amount of stage presence—and a lot of faith in herself. The faith in some measure had something to do with what her father, Sam Bornstein, thought a dumb thing in 1957 when Miss Warfield and her husband both had $10,000 a year contracts with the Metropolitan Opera Co.

The thing: talking her husband into turning his back on the Met while she did the same thing. They both first wanted to establish themselves as operatic greats in Europe.

"I could see Jim was destined for bit parts forever at the Met," Miss Warfield said. "He had a great talent and it never was going to come through in bit parts."

They had a modest nest egg and spent some of it for tickets in steerage on a ship to the other side of the Atlantic and vast fortunes—they thought.

But life in Europe was a series of hardtimes, slight ups and a great many downs. Miss Warfield became pregnant and when the stork delivered they were candidates for poverty row.

They had lived in a converted chicken coop in Bonn, Germany. But now they were in Milan. And it was Bornstein to the rescue—with a stake in the future his daughter declared was just around the corner for herself and her talented husband.

They moved into an apartment in Milan, the baby slept in a buggy, they cooked on a two-burner hotplate. There was garden furniture in the living room and other furniture made from packing crates which Miss Warfield painted decoratively.

Bornstein visited them, saw their poverty but decided to continue his stake. "The Europeans were having nothing to do with American singers," Miss Warfield said. "But we knew our luck had changed. Meanwhile we had those precious times together with our new daughter, Ahna (who is now 12)."

After his visit Bornstein would write from the states and suggest that the two singers look behind a mirror or on the underside of a piece of the crate furniture. "If you find anything go out and have a good time," he wrote. They looked and they found money he had hidden all around the apartment when he visited.

At times the couple existed on potatoes—three times a day. Their mainstay was pasta.

"The success we have today wouldn't be so sweet if not for those days." Miss Warfield said. "To this day, any time we celebrate we have spaghetti."

MIX LAWN SEED

Scientists stress the advantage of mixing several varieties of grass together, rather than depending upon a single variety that might by itself suffer epidemic set-back.

There is a hot dog stand on Coney Island in New York that sells more hot dogs than any other such stand in the world.

CONSIDER THE TEMPERITURE

Flowers and vegetables have different temperature likes and dislikes. For instance, such vegetables as lettuce, spinach and such flowers as sweet pea and larkspur grow best when the weather is cool to cold. Thats the reason why seeds of these are sown as soon as the soil can be worked in early spring.

HOG BUTCHER OF THE WORLD

. . . then and now. In the heyday of the Chicago stockyards, right, cattle, hogs and sheep in the hundreds of thousands daily passed through the acres of pens on the way to market. In recent years the flood slowed to a trickle, finally coming to a stop, and the pens are acres of emptiness, below. Succumbing to refrigeration, and decentralized marketing, the stockyards close forever July 31, 1971.

Jack Robinson Jr. Cited As 'Beautiful, Brave Warrior'

By BOB JOHNSON
Asociated Press Sports Editor

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Like a lot of boys, Jack thought life was bad deal. He dropped out. He turned on. He became a drug addict. But finally, as the kids say, he got his head together.

He was like a lot of boys—except that his father was Jackie Robinson, college football star, first black player in major league baseball, successful business executive.

Like a lot of fathers, Jackie Robinson found that his success was useless in dealing with his son—it even hurt.

Those are among the things Robinson reflects on now that his son is dead.

"You know, you just don't lose a boy after finding him, lose him again and not really feel it," Robinson says.

But there are other memories of Jack Robinson Jr. that hurt less. There is the letter from the 40-year-old addict who wrote that Jack Jr. helped him find a new perspective of life. There was the visit from the 33-year-old addict who said that, in trying to help him, Jack Jr. often seemed to be the 33-year-old and he, the addict, only 24.

"You know," Robinson said, "it kind of took some of the pain away to see the contributions he had made."

Young Jack died on June 17 when his car hit a parkway railing. He was working with the drug organization that had saved him. He counseled addicts and his big current project was organizing a benefit jazz concert at his parents' home.

The Robinsons thought it over and going ahead with the concert seemed to be the right thing to do.

At the concert just five days after the funeral, Robinson looked past the crowd and reflected about how he lost a son, found him and lost him again.

"I think it started a long, long time ago," Robinson said, "when he resented people talking to him about his father. He was very young, you know, and it built up something in him, I think, and all of a sudden he rebelled against it, and it come about after he developed some potential as a Little Leaguer."

Branch Rickey, boss of the old Brooklyn Dodgers, had hand picked Jackie to integrate baseball, and Jackie used to tell his son "that I thought he had the kind of ability that Mr. Rickey talked about."

But the kids on the ball teams razzed him, and the adults kept comparing him to his dad.

"There was always that comparison," Jackie said, "and even through at that time there was a great deal of warmth and a great deal of love between us, the pressure started to get real hard on him and all of a suden he, you know, just kind of started to pull away.

"He was always out, not happy at home, very sullen, very quiet. And the next thing you know he wanted to go into the service."

One day he came home from New York and boasted that he and a friend had smoked marijuana.

"We questioned him about it," Robinson said, "and like many young kids today he kept saying: 'I don't care what you say, I like the taste of it, I know it's not going to affect me, I'm strong, I'm not going to go on heroin.'"

Jackie dropped out of high school at 17, enlisted in the Army and was wounded in Vietnam while serving in the 1st Infantry Division.

"I don't think he took heroin over there, but he knew how accessible it was and how easily the kids got it," Robinson said.

But there was no question that Jack Jr. smoked pot in Vietnam and was still on it when he came home at 19. And he was still obsessed by the desire to excel. This time he chose crime. With a gang of Stamford boys he tried everything from stealing hub caps to burglary.

"You name it," his father said, "They were doing it."

The Robinsons knew things weren't right, but they didn't know what was wrong. "We really didn't recognize the kind of problems that he had," Robinson said.

Among things Jackie did not tell his parents was that now he had started using heroin.

His father thinks it happened when pot lost his kick for him. 'You go to a party and you're on marijuana and everybody's having so much fun and the marijuana does nothing to you and you want to join in—and you're on the heroin kick."

Jackie ran away to Colorado, where he had been stationed for a while in the Army. He worked the dice table in a gambling joint. The Robinsons found him and made several trips to talk to him. He began to drift back and forth between Stamford and Colorado.

Fort Worth-Dallas Airport Regional Names Discounted

By ROBERT E. FORD
Associated Press Writer

That airport they're building between Fort Worth and Dallas is going to be a great succes. This is because somebody out there is using good sense.

This became evident the other day when its official name simply became Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

The possibilities of creating a really impressive name were many. Just one example would be the Dallas-Fort Worth North Texas Regional Interantional Jet Airport.

And if the airport people really wanted to be truly outstanding, they could have dropped into this name such additions as Denton, Decatur, Forney, Josephine and enough others to get a truly inspiring designation.

By the time the control tower finished identified itself to the pilots, a dozen planes would have crashed.

Such a name really could have been expected the way things are being done.

For this is the age of the acronym and the status name. Presumably there are acronymists on full salary just to coin acronyms and to develop longer titles.

Acronyms are formed by taking the first letter of each word of a phrase and coming up with a words which can be pronounced.

Try the possible airport name. You would DFWNTRIJA. Pronounce that!

Military men once were the worst offenders. It seems that they must not simply name something. They must completely describe it.

Once in a while the military did come up with something useful in the old days. Ever hear a WAC called a Women's Army Corpswoman?

Or radar identified with its true name, Radio Detection and Ranging device?

WAVE was fine for Navy women. The acronym for Marine Corps women as created unofficially by men who didn't want women in the Corps is unprintable.

The federal civilian agencies now are trying to top the military with complex names—apparently in a scramble for more status.

The theory seems to be that if you aren't as important as Treasury, Defense, State and the like, get an endless name so people will notice you.

Even some of the old, powerful, gilt-edged agencies are trying to step up a notch.

One example, not the full list, is the old Agriculture Department. You can't call it that now. It is Department of Agriculture.

Make an acronym of that and you come up with DA. Pronounce that in one sound.

The old line departments often come up with such gutteral noises. Or try UT for University of Texas. A. and M. had a better position. "I'm going to AM this season" sounds all right even if it is not very understandable.

The Weather Bureau tok a different approach. It could have gained importance by switching the order and coming up with Bureau of the Weather, which would become BETH.

It went all the way, though, and renamed itself National Weather Service, a status type name. But NWS is a poor acronym to pronounce.

The sub-agencies created by departments take on the longest names they can conceive, seeming to reach for instant recognition.

Texas seems a little backward about acronyms. Perhaps there should be some new agency called Texas State Board To Determine How to Confuse the Public with Acronyms (TSBTDHTCTPWA).

But Texas is right in there trying.

Higher education agencies, as expected of groups of literate people, have come up with more words than anyone else, with the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System an example.

One of the better names on a recent list of Texas boards and agencies if you go for distance is Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education.

Those who would like to see al this ended by simpler names will be pleased to know that the Board To Sell Judgments Which Cannot Pe Collected (BTSJWCBC) is listed as now inactive.

A tieup with the federal government can inject new inspiration for long names. Like the Texas Education Desegregation Technical Assistance Center, a new agency in Austin.

A lot of people believe the longer acronyms just cause readers to stop reading. Who is going to search back through the column of a paper to find out what the acronym means?

But not so far a new private racial organization dedicated to spreading information.

Reporters are writing the acronym, presumably in frustration at having to write the full name time after time in a story.

It's written DFWCFFFI.

NEW YORK (AP) — The administration's series of negative statements regarding possible steps that might be taken to strengthen the economy is causing a lot of perplexity in political and economic circles.

It isn't so much the economic thinking that causes the consternation. A good many private economists agree with the administration that the ingredients for a recovery could indeed be there, even if not clearly visible as yet.

The concern is perhaps more with the manner.

These are the President's decisions, as relayed by Treasury Secretary John B. Connally:

"He is not going to institute a wage and price review board. He is not going to institute mandatory wage and price controls. He is not going to seek tax reductions. He is not going to increase fiscal spending."

Place those statements in this context:

More Americans are jobless than at any time in a decade. There are well over 5 million of them, and perhaps 25 million are directly affected by wage-earners' idleness. Millions more such idle wage-earners' co-workers and neighbors are frightened that the same could happen to them.

Seldom in recent years have people been more reluctant to buy when they had the capacity to buy, the main reason being their fear of their immediate future. Unemployment, interest rates and prices are rising.

It is widely believed by economists that if consumer confidence were strengthened, the economy would immediately start moving ahead again, although not without problems. As it is, retail sales are far behind purchasing power.

Why, then the administration's emphasis on the negative, especially when it is a tenet of politics that a wise administrator or candidate refrains from saying what he won't do, if only to avoid being tagged a do-nothing?

Among those most perplexed by the statements is Albert Sindlinger, whose constantly updated surveys of consumer attitudes make him sensitive to the fears and hopes of ordinary Americans rich and poor, coast to coast.

"It is quite clear that whoever is running that show in Washington doesn't understand the consumer," he said. "This is going to knock down the consumer confidence index 10 points."

It has been shown that the lower the confidence the less there is a tendency for people and businesses to make plans. Once it was thought that if you put money into the hands of the consumer he would spend it. This belief is now known to be false.

Made insecure by war, inflation, recession, discord, joblessness and what not, he may bank his money or simply stuff it into a shoebox instead of purchasing appliances and furniture.

Sindlinger maintains that the most recent statements, while the most damaging to confidence, mrely follow a series of earlier pronouncements that have served only to make Americans more insecure.

Turkish Town Looks For New Identity With Opium Banned

By NICK LUDINGTON

AFYONKARAHISAR, Turkey (AP) — In English this town's name means "the black castle of opium."

"If nothing else think of the indignity," said a shopkeeper. "Now we'll be called 'the black castle of alfalfa' or the 'black castle of beets.' "

He referred to the Turkish government's decision to ban opium poppies, a traditional crop in this area of west Turkey for more than 400 years. Alfalfa and sugar beets have been suggested as substitutes.

The government has promised to compensate farmers for their income from opium poppies and to help them find substitute income.

The United States has agreed to help pay this compensation and give technical aid for new crops and jobs for an estimated 50,000 farmers whose livelihood, or part of it, will be wiped out by the ban, effective next year.

American officials estimate that 80 per cent of the heroin reaching U.S. addicts originates in Turkish poppy fields.

The ban is a shock to farmers here.

They point out that the poppy produces more than raw opium gum. Its seeds are crushed for a high-grade vegetable oil used in cooking. The crushed residue makes a nourishing supplement to animal feed.

There is no addiction problem in Turkey, but many opium-farm families keep a little of the raw opium back each year as a home remedy for colds and as a mild sedative for children.

"They ban opium, they cut off our hands and feet," said Adem Kock, a farmer in the village of Fethiyekoy.

Turkish newspaper comments generally back the government's decision. Columnists say it was necessary to avoid accusations that Turkey is contributing to the growing international drug menace, and note that the United States is repaying Turkey for money it has made annually from legal opium exports for medicinal purposes.

But they doubt the ban will solve America's problem.

"Those who are degenerating America's youth, its people, even its soldiers will continue running around loose," wrote a resident of the neighboring province of Usak in the daily Aksam.

"But the poor opium farmer of Usak, blamed for a crime he never dreamed of, is deprived of his traditional income."

YOUR BIRTHDAY WEDNESDAY: Your life comes into sharper, clearer focus this year. Many questions are outgrown or settled by definite answers from resources you've never used before. Wednesday's natives talk less than they act, are gifted in uneven directions which do not often bring much material surplus.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Status depends on things beyond your immediate control, not on how tough your job may be. Give others a chance to be tranquil.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel, even errands, are likely vexations. Friends get in the way, thwart you through misunderstanding. Keep your plans simple.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your sense of humor is worth a thousand times more than anything material you have free to spend. In the ripples and nuissances of Wednesday's events you can learn much for future application.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Practical issues take most of your time and attention. Reflect, realize your procastination has caused much inconvenience; get busy and set things right.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An ordinary day spiced with minor incidents and perhaps a practical joke is topped off nicely by lively social doings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stand up and claim your own — bright and early. Know your facts and be ready to assert them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Close associates take you for granted, rely on your habits — check changes to avoid confusion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your own readiness to take action is not widely shared. Wait for others to see your point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good questions are more in season than ever. Have the courage to inquire — even where it's awkward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Temptations involve hopeful waiting, little clearcut effort. Make up your mind what you want, a list of what seems within reach, then go get some of them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be venturesome, announce the spacious outlines of your main plans.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Patience tolerance if not acceptance mean all the difference during curious local upheavals. Expect a long day.

AP Television-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Groucho Marx spied the kitchen set from his front row seat in the audience and said to the director, "Im hungry. Do you mind if I fix myself a sandwich?"

The director, Jerry Paris, did mind. He was about to film the first "Odd Couple" program before an audience using the three-camera technique.

The stars, Jack Klugman and Tony Randall, both veteran stage actors, had become fed up with the mechanical laugh track and persuaded ABC and Paramount Television to try one show in the spring without the track.

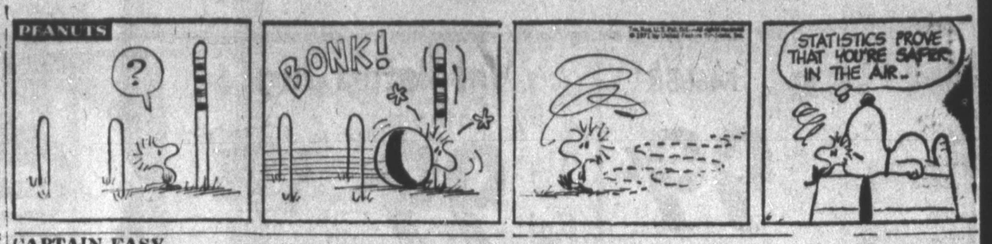

The audience response was good and for the fall season the show is switching from convention filming to the three-camera technique.

The laughs will all come from the audience reacting to the scene. In a warmup session for the first show Garry Marshall, one of the producers, told the audience, "You don't have to laugh, folks, but remember we're all veterans."

Some of the biggest laughs never made it to the sound track. Those were the ones produced by the salty exchanges between Groucho and Paris, who used to play the neighbor on the old Dick Van Dyke show.

Groucho never made it to the kitchen either, but Paris did bring him a banana and a canned soft drink to satisfy his hunger pangs. At one point between scenes, Paris stuck patches of black electricians tape on his eyebrows and under his nose and did Groucho's famous slouched-over walk around the stage.

ollege Football Wash nds John Winesberry

W YORK (AP)—Hanging some off-season college ll wash:

ch John Ralston of ord's Pacific -8 and Rose champions got to see a part of the United States week.

m Lubbock, Tex., where elped coach the West in American Football Coaches ciation's All-America e, to the New York City to Baltimore, and finally home to Palo Alto, Calif.

most off-handedly, Ralston ped a real bombshell. With memories of Jim Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy winner and a record-setting quarterback, still fresh on campus, Ralston said that John Winesberry, who will be a sophomore come fall, "may be the best football player ever at Stanford."

Winesberry is a 6-foot-2, 190-pound running back from Tulsa, Okla. He led the Stanford frosh last fall with 298 yards in 78 carries. He also caught 15 passes for 170 yards and three touchdowns.

Stanford won out over Missouri and Kansas in the recruiting race for Winesberry, who'll be a flanker this season — the Indians have a pair of veteran running backs — but likely will go back to lugging the ball in 1972.

Plunkett, by the way, is rumored to be awfully close to signing with the New England patriots and Ralston has no doubts he will make it big in the pros. . . eventually.

"I hate to see him start the opener and break right in," Ralston said.

Plunkett got a big break at Stanford because the offensive backfield coach, Jack Christiansen, was a star defensive back in the pros and later spent nine years on the staff of the San Francisco 49ers, the last five as head coach.

Ralston thinks the Pac-8 is the toughest conference in the country "with the Big Eight close." That ought to raise some howls from the South.

"The quality is fantastic," he said. "There were seven good teams last year. UCLA gave Texas a helluva game and Southern Cal, which had an offyear, beat the tar out of Alabama."

Neal Harvey Thinks Trevino

MONTREAL (AP)—As far as Neal Harvey is concerned Lee Trevino is the greatest golfer who ever lifted a club.

The 33-year-old Harvey is Trevino's personal caddy and working with Trevino "is like caddying for myself. I know his game and I know his attitudes."

Harvey commented on his association with the U.S. Open champion after Trevino had won the $150,000 Canadian Open Sunday with a birdie on the first hole of a sudden death playoff with Art Wall Jr. They had tied at 275 for the regulation 72 holes.

Harvey, who now lives in Los Angeles, said he thought the turning point came on the 16th hole, when Trevino from 115 yards out, hit a nine-iron shot six feet to the right of the pin and putted in for a birdie. That tied him with Wall.

Harvey has been with Trevino for 3½ years, but he said their association goes back to their boyhood days in Dallas, Tex., where they grew up.

Harvey said he is paid a salary and also receives a percentage of Trevino's earnings. "Then there's the bonuses," he added. "Lee's been very good to me that way."

After Trevino won the $30,000 first prize he kidded Harvey. "I had to win here to be able to keep you going for the next few weeks."

That was a reference to the fact Harvey will be on vacation while Trevino is competing in the British Open. Personal caddies are not permitted in the British Open.

New Caution-Flag System

BS SPTS 2-24 New

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP)—Mark Donohue says the new caution flag system used at the inaugural Schaefer 500-mile automobile race could have cost him a heartbreaking defeat, but he likes it.

The 34-year-old Donohue won the Schaefer Saturday at the 2.5-mile Pocono International Raceway in one of the closest 500-mile finishes in U. S. Auto Club history.

Donohue, a baby-faced blond from Media, Pa., won by 1.2 seconds over Joe Leonard of San Jose, Calif. A. J. Foyt was third, Mario Andretti fourth and Bill Vokuvich Jr. fifth. The previous closest 500 finish was two-tenths of a second between first and second last September at Ontario, Calif.

The new caution flag system — for a 500-mile race — works this way. When the yellow flag goes up, the pace car comes out and leads the field around th track until the danger is over. This allows the cars to bunch behind the leader. Ordinarily when a yellow flag is raised the cars maintain their positions at their own pace.

"I don't think that racing this way is as tiring as it is to race at Indianapolis where you don't bunch up under the yellow behind the pace car," said Donohue. This allows everybody to rest. Instead of one big race it's like 10 little races.

Where he believed the new system hurt was in losing a 10 and 12 second lead when the cars bunched behind the pace car under yellow conditions.

Donohue completed a spectacular weekend, winning the GBX Trans-American sedan race in Brainerd, Minn., Sunday. After winning the Schaefer 500, he boarded team manager Roger Penske's jet for the 1,000-mile flight to Brainerd, arriving at 2 a.m., won the pole position in a morning qualifying run, then streaked to an 85.1 second victory over Peter Revson of New York in the 210-mile race at Donybrooke.

Firecracker King By Eighth-Inch

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Bobby Isaac's pimento-red Dodge and three other rejuvenated Chrysler products ran away with Sunday's Firecracker 400 race. . . by an eighth of an inch.

Ford's two-month domination of superspeedways came to a thudding halt as the Dodge-Plymouth team finished 1-2-3-4. Donnie and Bobby Allison, Ford's finest, settled for a 5-6 windup.

"Those Ford people have been happy for a couple of months," said Firecracker king Isaac. "I hope they're still happy."

Filing home behind Isaac in the 160-lapper at Daytona International Speedway were Richard Petty in a Plymouth, Buddy Baker a Dodge and Pete Hamilton in another Plymouth.

Isaac averaged 161.943 miles an hour to ship the 40-car field, earning the Oatawaba, N.C., veteran the largest paycheck—$10,440—of his 10-year Grand National career.

"I sorta backed in to my only other major victory in the 1969 Texas 500," he recalled. "Baker had it won, but ran into another car during a caution lap."

But, on Sunday, Isaac had the eighth-of-an-inch advantage on his side and the Chrysler boys were unstoppable.

Canadian Open Tip Off Brings 'Super Mex' Fame

SOUTHPORT, England (AP)—The tip-off came last week in the Canadian Open.

Arnold Palmer — The King, pro golf's all-time leading money winner, its most dynamic performer, the greatest drawing card the game has ever known — was making the turn and was about to hit his tee shot on No. 10.

An announcement was made on the adjacent first tee, first in French, then English.

"Now on the tee, the U.S. Open champion, Lee Trevino."

The vast gallery surrounding Palmer began to melt away. A dozen, a few score, began to amble away from Palmer toward Trevino's already huge gathering.

More fans joined them, the walk became a trot — and then it was a full-scale stampede, literally hundreds of people running pell-mell away from Palmer to watch the brash and cocky Trevino do his thing, play the game of golf as well as any man alive today.

He may not yet be king, or even aspire to the purple. His fire-engine red regalia of payday Sunday and money-green are more his colors.

"If the money's there, I'll play on a gravel road," he once said.

He's not Palmer. He's no Gary Player, the deadly-intense, dedicated little South African.

Still Prospect For Gold

There's no more gold in them thar hills, or hardly any. Yet judging by inquiries received each year by the U.S. Geological Survey, prospecting for gold offers a special excitement as a summer vacation diversion for many people.

A sort of old-fashioned gold fever seems to strike in the late spring and summer, says William L. Newman, geologist with the Survey's Washington, D.C., office. Requests for maps and reports that describe the known deposits of gold in the country mount markedly.

While not wishing to discourage prospectors totally, the bureau tries to point out some of the difficulties and disappointments related to amateur prospecting for gold.

What many people do not realize is that most placer deposits have been thoroughly reworked at least twice—first by those who entered the areas immediately after the initial boom periods of the 19th century to glean the lower-grade deposits and tailings, and later by prospectors during the Depression of the 1930s.

Geologists and engineers whose field work has led them into the more remote parts of the country believe that few, if any, recognizable surface indications of gold-bearing deposits have been overlooked.

"However," says Newman, "a chance of some degree of success may still remain for those choosing favorable areas after a careful study of the mining record and the geology of the mining districts.

"If the prospective gold seeker is prepared to undergo a certain amount of hardship, possesses a car capable of traveling the roughest and steepest roads and is not discouraged by repeated disappointments, a prospecting trip may prove to be an interesting adventure, profitable to him in other ways, if not financially.

"The search itself is often its own reward, but the would-be prospector hoping for financial gain should carefully consider all the facts before deciding to set out on a prospecting expedition."

Not very encouraging. But then there's always that one chance in a million.

Anyway, the Lost Dutchman mine is still lost, isn't it?

'Jesus People' Movement

In a classic example of damning with faint praise, the reaction of many people to the latest youth kick, the "Jesus People" movement, has been: "At least it's better than drugs."

It may be better than drugs in the same way that diabetes is better than cancer.

The latter is progressive and irreversible, though it may be "cured" through surgery. In advanced cases, the prognosis is gloomy.

The other is a disability which, if properly controlled with regular medication, need present no serious problems during an entire and otherwise normal lifetime.

The point is that though one is preferable to the other, neither one is particularly to be desired.

Or since so many "Jesus People" or "Jesus Freaks" come from backgrounds of drug use, it may be more accurate to compare them with drug addicts being maintained on the heroin substitute, Methadone.

Before rejoicing in this apparent revival of religion among the young, religious leaders might ask themselves to what extent and for how many this enthusiasm is a form of mental Methadone, with as uncertain a prospect of effecting permanent cures to whatever personality problems led the young people to drugs in the first place.

Religious conversion is probably the most personal thing in the world. No one but the individual undergoing the experience can judge whether or not it is genuine.

But for great numbers of young people to go abruptly from an absence of commitment to or belief in anything beyond the sensations of the moment to a situation of total commitment and unquestioning belief suggests that great caution should be employed in evaluating the phenomenon.

Behavior in both states is highly emotional, highly self-centered and highly irrational in the sense that there is involved a minimum of objective analysis of oneself or of one's spiritual or intellectual allegiance.

Both are "trips" in the sense that they involve a rejection of the worldly, of the here-and-how, of what most people would understand as reality.

No doubt the lives of many of the Jesus People have been permanently changed by their conversions. Whichever direction the world takes in the future, they have found theirs.

But just as surely, for many others the Jesus movement just happens to where the action is—for the time being.

It's better than drugs.

But so is almost everything else.

What Population Explosion?

The scare of a population "explosion" is as old as Malthus. There would be standing room only on this earth, he predicted, by the year 1890. Needless to say, the population increase he predicted for western Europe did not take place. Urbanization led to smaller families. Meanwhile, food supply kept on doubling, contrary to his predictions.

Half of the counties in America had a decline in population in the last few years. More than half of the farmers in our country have had to abandon farming in the past 30 years because there was no use for the food they were producing. One of the larger items on the Federal budget each year is paying farmers not to produce too much food. Our birth rate has fallen to an all-time low. So what is all the scare talk about?

The increase in the world's population is not due to a rising birth rate. It is because the advances in medicine cause less people to die as soon as they used to. In past centuries the birth rate has adjusted itself with remarkable practicality and consistency.

The notion that less people means more prosperity is false. In the last 100 years, for example, the earth's population increased about 40 per cent, while the U.S. population increased 600 per cent. During the same period, our national wealth increased 4,000 per cent. Our increase in population was one of the main causes of our increase in per capita wealth.

Special Interests??

With the liberation movement rampant everywhere, it was bound to happen.

The Boy Scouts have started accepting girls. As yet on a limited basis only, however. The change involves only the Exploring Division, for Scouts over 15 with special interests.

It figures.

Sensing The News

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

LEGAL HARASSMENT

Harassment of reputable businesses is increasing year by year. Enemies of free enterprise are demanding that concepts of criminality that have been applied to individuals should be extended to corporations. Efforts also are being made in the Congress to obtain legislative approval for class action lawsuits whereby the claims of thousands of plaintiffs could be pooled. If such suits are permitted, unscrupulous attorneys would be in a position to file massive claims in hope of collecting large settlements and fees.

Less publicized but very significant is another harassing action — the product liability suit.

Plaintiffs' lawyers have discovered a lucrative activity in the filing of actions against manufacturers after workmen's compensation and personal injury avenues have been exhausted. Claims are based on allegedly inadequate instructions published by manufacturers, allegedly misleading sales literature, and actual failure of the product — without regard to the time it has been in service or misuse of the equipment.

The increase in the number of product liability suits has led to major hikes in product liability insurance premiums. In some cases, the cost of insurance has been multiplied twelve times. Suits have been filed covering products in service as much as nine years and not under the manufacturer's control or maintenance.

Reputable manufacturers stand behind their products and equipment. Obviously, however, there has to be some time limit on performance guarantees. The purchaser has rights. But the manufacturer also has to have protection, as in the case where a purchaser has ignored instructions or abused equipment.

In today's anti-business atmosphere, the manufacturer is increasingly vulnerable. There is a growing bias in favor of the "consumer" that inevitably damages the manufacturer's position when he comes into court.

Recognizing the emotional strength of "consumerism," the unscrupulous attorney is quick to take questionable cases into court — believing that he can make the worse appear the better cause. The difficulty facing the small company is especially heavy, for it can't afford to spend large sums on legal assistance. In some cases, companies have to combat "consumer protection" agencies that are supported by taxpayer funds. Such agencies are in a position to select a greup of companies as targets and sustain a heavy legal assault over a lengthy period. These companies can be made to appear "bad guys" in the public eye.

At the moment, manufacturers of industrial equipment are the primary targets. But is likely that the attack will be broadened to cover a wide range of commercial activities. For example, the more radical of the "consumer protection" types most probably will zero-in on advertisers and newpapers and magazines.

In this connection, Battle Line recently reported that self-proclaimed consumer advocate Ralph Nader is suing a bread company, alleging that its advertisements deceive parents into thinking their children will become healthy if they eat the company's products.

No manufacturer would say that he should be exempt from legal action. But the manufacturer does believe he is entitled to equal justice under the law. Fair-minded citizens no doubt believe that the law should not be distorted into an instrument of harassment.

The successful working of our society and economic system depends on an intricate network of rights and responsibilities. The excessive emphasis on "consumer protection," with consequent downgrading of "producer protection," is extremely disruptive. One effect will be to increase the cost of products available to the public. More than that, the legal harassment will inhibit manufacturing, an activity on which the economic well-being of the American people depends.

Fiery Footstep

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

.. Note how I was given the handshake and initiated into the fraternity of American go-getters! And heed the shrewd advice of Dr. Pollard, medical professor at the University of Michigan. Learn to lay your worries down at night and on the Sabbath! I also use the "Agenda" method and relax when I cross off my day's output.

CASE R-502: About 20 years ago I was the banquet speaker for the employes of the U.S. Slicing Machine Co. Its President came in a few minutes early. As soon as he sat down, he started drumming on the table with his fingers.

"Waiter, waiter!" he abruptly called. In a moment a waiter arrived.

"Please bring me a glass of milk at once!" ordered the President. So I smiled and told him we had a lot in common, for my ulcer had goaded me into production for several years.

"So you have an ulcer, too, do you, Dr. Crane?" he asked.

"Did anybody ever give you the ulcerite's handshake and thus initiate you into the fraternity?"

When I shook my head, he smiled and stood up. Then with his left hand pressing over his stomach, he bent forward slightly at the waist and shook hands with his right.

Ulcer patients often grow snarlish in the middle of the morning and at mid afternoon.

But instead of drinking coffee or caffein beverages, they should take milk or an antacid tablet or a glass of hot jello. Beware, for caffeine seems to stimulate extra hydrochloric acid in the stomach and it is this acid that burns the raw spot (ulcer).

You wives of high pressure executives should have learned long ago not to keep such a man waiting for his meals!

If you must add frills and delay dinner while you scallop the edges of the grapefruit, at least have a platter of cheese and crackers beside your hubby's easy chair so he can chomp on some protein to neutralize the burning acid of his stomach!

An ideal pre-dinner cocktail for peptic ulcer patients is a glass of hot jello! In fact, that is also a superb drink for old folks and those with gastroenteritis. The jello is chiefly protein with a little sugar, plus flavoring.

It is thus easily digested, with no raw vegetable fibers to scratch the ulcer or irritate your intestines.

My preference is hot cherry jello, for it seems to retain its distinctive flavor better than lemon, raspberry or the other varieties.

Cold jello is also an excellent food to give you quick strength and avoid gastric irritation.

But millions apparently haven't thought about the hot jello drink, though we doctors prescribe it routinely.

Since go-getters are necessarily keyed up, and this tension extends to their glands (thus producing more secretions), that explains why executives are more likely to complain of peptic ulcer.

But members of the "society of Ulcerites' make superior workers.

Dr. H. M. Pollard, medical professor at the University of Michigan, thus advises:

"If you want a good associate, pick a man with an ulcer!"

Many negative emotions, such as fear, anger, hate and jealousy, can also predispose you to peptic ulcer, so learn to team-up with God Almighty and thus leave business worries at the office!

Also, join my "Compliment Club," which will soon make you less fearful in meeting people. Send for that booklet, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents. Write to Dr. Crane in care of The Pampa News, Hopkins Bldg., Mellott, Indiana 47958.

RED TRUCKS

Mass movement of materials is paramount in mounting modern offensive warfare whether on the plains of Europe or the jungles of Indochina. North Vietnam's forces and the Viet Cong have been supplied in the field with guns, rockets and other weapons by Russian trucks that haul them from the ports. These weapons have taken a high toll of our servicemen who have battled bravely to block a takeover of Southeast Asia by the communists.

Mack Truck Co., Inc., of the United States, has negotiated a deal to build or supply to serve as consultants in a $700 million venture to construct a plant for the Russians. "Made in Russia by Americans" could be the slogan for the products of the plant, a phrase that would hardly strike the fancy of our soldiers, sailors and airmen who would bear the brunt of the missiles the vehicles would carry. Our fighting men might think the war they are suffering through had a dollar sign put on it.

Mack signed a letter of intent with the Russians to build the truck facilities. The consummation of the agreement was contingent upon the issuance of permits by the U.S. Commerce Department. The deal may have been forged by the time this column reaches print.

It should be remembered that Henry Ford II had proposed a similar agreement for truck facilities in Russia in 1970, but no permit was granted. Daimler-Benze, a firm in West Germany, where Russian atrocities of World War II are well remembered, wisely turned down a Russian truck proposal.

We have enough trouble with communist sympathizers inside this country. It is to be hoped that we don't enter business covenants with communist nations and provide them the weapons for our own destruction.

Carbon Monoxide Can Harm Brain

..Dear Dr. Lamb—Is it possible for a person to get epilepsy from a bad case of carbon monoxide poisoning? There were never signs of epilepsy until after the poisoning.

..Dear Reader—In a word, yes. One might argue about the meaning of the word epilepsy but to the extent that it means convulsive episodes like those seen in epilepsy, it is true.

Any form of brain damage can cause recurrent convulsive episodes. Carbon monoxide can cause brain damage by interfering with adequate delivery of oxygen to the brain. Carbon monoxide combines with the iron pigment, hemoglobin, in the red blood cells, and makes it impossible for the cells to carry oxygen.

The brain is the organ in the body most easily damaged by lack of oxygen. If the brain is damaged a person's threshold to have convulsions may be lowered and then the convulsions start occurring. There may be, and usually are, other manifestations of brain damage. In its most severe form the individual may be incapable of normal thought process.

There are other ways the brain can be damaged to cause convulsive episodes. Loss of oxygen, during high altitude flights, is one example. A more common cause is inadequate circulation to the brain. A person may have a sudden irregularity of the heart or it may stop beating. If some means is not quickly devised to restore the heart's pumping capacity the brain may be damaged.

We see this in people with "heart attacks." The pumping action of the heart must be restored within four minutes to prevent brain damage. External artificial heart massage is often life saving in such situations. By compressing the chest in a rhythmic manner (pressing down on the sternum, breast bone) the heart is artificially compressed and then relaxes. This may force enough blood to the brain and other vital organs to prevent serious damage. If the equipment is immediately available the normal pumping action of the heart may be restored by electrical means.

The real problem is the ever-present possibility that the replacement of the circulation will be too late and the brain may be permanently damaged. The patient may live but the end result may still be a major tragedy. These events provide some very dramatic moments, not only as a race against death, but a race to save a life worth living. The same is true of loss of oxygen to the brain.

Many people think all they have to fear from heart attacks or strokes is death. There is always that other possibility, permanent incapacity and brain damage.

Too Stiff For Staff?— High Muskie Turnover

WASHINGTON — Senator Edmund Muskie is placing high in the political polls, but it's a very different story where his staff is concerned.

There his rating drags bottom.

In the past six months, Muskie's staff has undergone an almost complete turnover.

During that short period, the "front running" Democratic presidential aspirant has replaced the following — his administrative assistant (top member of the staff); office manager; several legislative assistants; two press aides; and some 15 lesser employes (researchassistants, secretaries, clerks).

Inquiry produced a mixed bag of reasons for this unusual wholesale headlopping.

Former staff members cited Muskie's "terrible temper"; aloofness and indifference to his help; and intense preoccupation with his presidential ambitions. Most frequent were harsh comments about the Maine senator's trigger-temper, as follows:

"Around the office we called him 'El Groucho' "; he terrorizes his staff, they're scared to death of him"; "he has a really bad temper."

New staff workers shrug off these complaints.

They don't directly deny the allegations about Muskie's short-fused temper. They just don't discuss it. Instead, they talk about the new staff being "aggressive and sophisticated" — strongly inferring their predecessors were not.

Also brushed off as unfounded are backstage reports that key members of the staff were axed because of sour political advice.

One instance was Muskie's participation in a Providence, R.I., antiwar rally prominently featuring two highly controversial leaders of the "dump Nixon" agitation — Rep. "Pete" McCloskey, R-Calif., and former Rep. Allard Lowenstein, D-N.Y., spearhead of the "dump Johnson" drive and now head of the New Left-controlled Americans for Democratic Action.

Another was Muskie's speech assailing FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Both episodes boomeranged. They produced a flood of highly critical mail and other jarring reactions, notably among laborites and local Democratic leaders. Muskie definitely was singed, and the staff firings shortly ensued.

TWO STAFFS — On the explosive temper charge, Muskie is aware that is going the rounds and on occasion takes the trouble to explain it, as follows:

"I have been criticized for being brusque and irritable with my staff people, and being indifferent to them. Certainly that is not because I don't want to see them. It's simply a matter of just not having enough time to personally see and talk to everyone in the organization. I would like very much to do that, but there are just so many hours in the day and so many days in the week. First things come first and people working for me just have to understand that."

One difficulty may well be that Muskie has two staffs — his senatorial staff functioning on Capitol Hill, and a far larger presidential campaign staff in a private office building in downtown Washington.

Indicative of the difference in size and in the importance Muskie attaches to the two staffs are the following:

He spends relatively little time in his Senate office. He is said to visit it only several times a week. In contrast, his campaign office gets most of his attention.

Six college interns are working in his Senate office this summer, as against 40 in the campaign office.

The six students on the Senate staff are women, from Mount Holyoke; Sweet Briar; Beaver College, Pa.; Bates College, Me.; Washington College; St. Louis, Mo.; and Allegheny College, Pa. Three male interns are clerks on the staff of the Intergovernmental Relations Subcommittee, headed by Muskie; and another male student from Harvard is an intern with the Air and Water Pollution Subcommittee.

The 40 interns in the campaign headquarters, both men and women, come from a wide range of colleges — from Massachusetts to Georgia and South Carolina, to Iowa, Illinois and Michigan, to Berkeley and San Diego. Two black men students are from Morehouse College, Atlanta.

Muskie has m ore interns than any other member of Congress. Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, also a presidential hopeful, is next with 23.

For staffing his official office, Muskie has an annual allowance of $210,940 — which he can divide among as many employes as he can hire. The interns come free. They get no salary or expenses. They are supported by grants from their schools. In the Senate, Muskie is not known for paying high salaries. His administrative assistant gets around $15,000; press secretary a little more than $10,000.

The interns are very eager to have a personal meeting with Muskie before they leave in late August. Some haven't even seen him. Others have seen him, but virtually none have talked with him. The students have proposed a lunch or dinner gathering.

One of Muskie's secretaries shook her head emphatically and said, "Your chances are zilch."

But John McEvoy, new administrative assistant, was more hopeful. He told them, "Maybe. I'll try to work it out. I'm sure the Senator will be glad to meet with you if it can possibly be fitted in with his extremely busy schedule. I'm sure you know how occupied he is. But I'll do my best to arrange this."

The interns are still optimistic, but time is passing.

ANOTHER STAFF AXER — The House also has a champion staff hatchet wielder — Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y.

The militant New Left activist has been in Congress only six months. But in that brief period, she has already equalled Sen. Muskie's remarkable record in staff turnover.

Of Mrs. Abzug's original 13-member staff, only two are still on the job.

They are Mrs. Miriam Kelber, $22,300 administrative assistant, and Sharon Oper, $10,000 legislative assistant. Mrs. Kelber and Mrs. Abzug were Hunter College classmates and close friends. Mrs. Kelber was editor of the school's paper; Mrs. Abzug was class president.

As in Muskie's case, abrasive personal temperament apparently played a large part in the staff departures. Following are what Mrs. Abzug's former employes are saying of her:

"She's a very difficult person, downright disagreeable and unappreciative"... "Her office is as chaotic and disorganized as her logic and thinking; she never plans anything; she'll read something in the paper and expect her staff to snap it up and make headlines out of it".. "She was not brought up to be gentlewomanly, or to be thoughtful and considerate to people working for her"..."She still owes me $353 for a fund-raising cocktail party I threw for her during her campaign; I have no idea whether I'll get the money or not"... "She is frankly abusive and rude, and constantly asks you to do a lot more than you can."

Although a strident Women's Lib champion, Mrs. Abzug admits undergoing a change of mind on having men on her staff. Originally, she excluded them; now she has four.

Explains Mrs. Abzug, "Women should be upgraded and given a chance to be administrative and legislative assistants. So originally I had a policy of hiring only women. But I've changed my mind, and now have some men on my staff."

Staff members say Mrs. Abzug's primary interest is her official office in her district. She spends much time there, working hard to establish political ties. She'll need them in her re-election campaigning next year.

New York is slated to lose two House seats as a result of the 1970 census. One of these losses involves Mrs. Abzug's 19th district and 17th district of Rep. Howard Koch, who lists himself as Democrat-Liberal. Serving his second term, he is as vociferous a far-outer as Mrs. Abzug.

Robinson . . .

At least he was arrested and charged with possession of narcotics and a pistol. The judge ordered him to undergo treatment for drug addiction.

He went to Daytop Inc., a rehabilitation center at Seymour, Conn. Daytop is headed by a reformed addict, Kenneth Williams, and his assistants are other addicts who have kicked the habit.

Because they have been through the agony of going off dope, the Daytop people are tough. They make certain the addicts want to be cured. They strip them to essentials and then try to rebuild them. They discovered the only thing Jackie still liked about himself was his beard and mustache. They made him shave.

But six months after entering Daytop, Jackie was arrested in a Stamford hotel room and charged with using a female for immoral purposes. This time the court sentenced him to two to four years — but suspended the sentence and ordered him back to Daytop.

"It was always our contention that Jackie wanted to be arrested," Robinson said. "or why else would he keep on going back to the same place where he was broken the first time . . . the same hotel, the same thing, where the police knew him, and everybody else."

But Jackie made it through the Daytop program. Williams became a second father to him. Jackie became assistant regional director of Daytop and his goal was to establish his own center in Stamford.

"From 21 or so until 24 he began to find himself, and we had him back for just a year where, you know, we were a family," his father said.

And that's the way it was at 2:20 a.m. on June 17 when Jackie's car hit a guard rail of the Merritt Parkway at a speed that threw the engine 200 feet from the frame.

BERLIN (AP) — American movie director Stanley Kramer, whose film "Judgment at Nurenberg" depicted the Nazi war crimes trial, says he will make a film on the court-martial of Lt. William L. Calley Jr.

Kramer said the film will probe why Calley, convicted of killing 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, participated in the massacre.

Kramer was in West Berlin to attend the 21st annual Berlin Film Festival.

Radio & TV

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rupert Crosse is a difficult man to typecast, and that has been both good and bad for his acting career.

A few years ago, when roles began opening in the movies and television for black actors, Crosse was out of work for 13 months.

"I didn't fit the producers' image," said Crosse, a lanky man with a face equally adaptable to villain, rascal or hero.

"But I did end up getting the special roles."

One was his picture-stealing part in "The Reivers," the turning point in his career. "The time was right, the story was right and I was ready," he said. "I've been an actor for 14 years."

He was nominated for an Academy Award and that led to a number of guest shots on television and finally to a co-starring role with Don Adams in the new NBC comedy-adventure "The Partners."

Crosse and Adams play two squad car detectives, who, according to executive producer Arne Sultan, "do the logical thing. It just doesn't always work for them. Rupert is the balance. He says you can't do that, but Don explains it to him with enough logic that he gets pulled in."

A native of the island of Nevis in the British West Indies, Crosse said, "My comedy will not be in the jokes but in the situations and my reaction to them. It won't be on my mind to play comedy. That's not my way."

An integral part of his reactions will be his face and soft voice. He said, "The voice is becoming more of an asset now. Sometimes playing meanies or weirdoes, you get the creepy thing in the voice. I think the fact that it's not too loud helps. My voice doesn't jump out at people."

HAMMOCK HIGHRISE is the work of spectators at Hockenheim race course in West Germany, all for a better view of the Jochen Rindt Formula-I Memorial Race, named for an Austrian racing ace killed last year.

EDA Okays Funds To Study Indian Economic Growth

WASHINGTON — Approval of a $56,689 grant to help conduct a study of industrial development activities on Indian reservations throughout the United States was announced today by Robert A. Podesta, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development.

The funds from the Economic Development Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce, will go the Center for the Study of Man, the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

The research project will include a review of the various methods used to initiate programs of economic growth on reservations. Factors to be considered include tribal social and institutional structures.

The study will relate tribal values of ownership to long-range economic development planning and resource management.

A selected number of reservations will be included in the study to help the researchers identify traditional Indian institutions and mores.

The Smithsonian Institution will provide $5,841 to complete the $62,530 total cost of the study. The grant period is one year.

The project is being conducted as a part of EDA's economic research program, and results of the study are expected to benefit Indian officials as they work to improve economic and social conditions on the reservations.
