Oil firms recalling some workers

DALLAS (AP) — Oilfield service companies quietly are calling back employees furloughed when oil prices slid below $10 per barrel.

Executives said although a full-fledged recovery isn't under way, they're encouraged by crude selling for more than $21 a barrel.

In recent weeks, many energy company stocks have traded at 52-week highs; domestic drilling activity has increased by more than 250 rigs from last year's low of 663.

If the trend continues, the industry will improve, industry leaders say.

"Last year all the news was bad," said Guy Marcus, a spokesman for Halliburton Co. "Now you pick up the phone and it is good news."

Companies have responded cautiously.

Last month, Halliburton, an international oil services company based in Dallas, recalled 50 workers at its oil field services division in Oklahoma. Halliburton cut 18,000 jobs last year because of the collapse in drilling activity.

Lone Star Technologies, the Dallas-based parent of Lone Star Steel Co., a manufacturer of drill pipe, quietly has called back 300 workers in recent months. Lone Star lost $9.3 million in the first quarter of 1987 and laid off about two-thirds of its 4,000 employees in 1986.

There is also hope for a Wall Street turnaround as stocks of oil exploration and production companies have risen in response to improved earnings and higher crude oil prices.

Prices firmed after OPEC agreed on production quotas and rose on continuing fears of disruption of world oil markets from the Iran-Iraq war.

When crude prices fell about 60 percent last year, the oil services industry bore the brunt of the collapse. Total spending on oil rigs, tools, drill pipe and related products and services fell to $9 billion in 1986 from $40 billion in 1982.

Only recently has Halliburton, which has seen its worldwide employment decline by 68,000 since 1980, discontinued on a trial basis a furlough procedure in which its oil service employees take one week off without pay every two months.

"Bringing people back full time gives an indication of our expectations," Marcus said.

The manufacturers, distributors and processors of oil tubular products also were devastated by the downturn. Prices for pipe and tube, used in drilling wells, declined more sharply than other kinds of oil field equipment.

At Lone Star Technologies, the company is producing pipe at about 20 to 30 percent of its capacity, up about 5 percent from a year ago, said Judi Murrell, vice president of corporate relations.

The most important market indicator for pipe manufacturers, Murrell said, is the amount of footage drilled, a measurement of productivity of working oil rigs. Total footage drilled in the United States last year was 171 million feet compared with 320 million feet in 1985.

Lone Star expects this year's total footage drilled to be about the same as last year's, she added.

But the trend still appears positive.

"Half of the wells were drilled in the first few months of 1986 and then it went straight down," Ms. Murrell said. "This year it started low and will probably increase as the year goes on. So even though

How's That?
Food

Q. How many hours pass before most produce is commercially canned after being picked from the field?

A. Less than six hours, according to the Canned Food Information Council.

Calendar

TODAY

• Vacation Bible School begins today and continues through Aug. 7 at three local churches. Iglesia Bautista Central, 2105 Lancaster St., and Westside United Methodist Church, 600 Goliad St., will have evening classes from 6:30 to 9. Baptist Temple, 11th Place and Goliad, will conduct morning classes from 8:30 to 11:30.

Items for the Spring board calendar should be community-wide events to be included and will be listed no more than one week in advance. Send such notices to: Spring board, Big Spring Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring. Club notices will be printed in the "Bulletin Board" section of the Sunday Herald.

Julie phones, tells parents that she's OK

Community efforts to locate 16-year-old runaway Julie Sosa have been successful.

Julie phoned her parents Sunday, her father, Joe Sosa, 3704 Parkway Road, said this morning.

He said Julie informed them that she is all right but is not yet ready to return home. She told him she needs more time to think about problems, Sosa added.

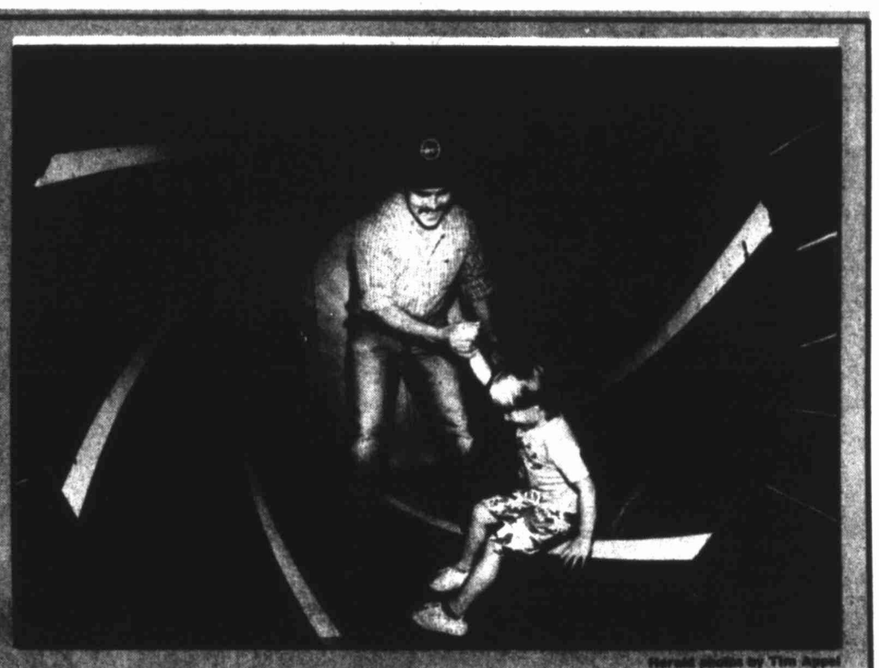

She said she will phone home again, he said.

Julie, who will be a junior at Big Spring High School this fall, reported she is in town, her father said, but she would not tell her parents where.

"We're just sitting tight; giving her a few more days," her father said.

Julie left home July 18, leaving a note stating she was angry at parental rules she believed were too strict.

FTC acts to block selling of Safeways

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission moved today to block the purchase of Safeway food stores in Texas and New Mexico by Furr's.

The Commission directed its staff to seek a preliminary court injunction to block the purchase, contending that the acquisition could substantially reduce competition among grocery stores in those states.

In question is a proposal by Supermarket Development Co., known as Furr's, to buy Safeway's El Paso division, which includes 59 grocery stores, a milk plant, an ice plant, a warehouse, administrative offices and inventory.

Furr's has offered $94 million for the assets and about $50 million for the inventory, the FTC said.

The action does not effect the Big Spring Furr's in College Park, recently purchased from Safeway, said Debby Spears, spokeswoman for the FTC Dallas regional office.

Furr's already operates 105 stores in south and west Texas and New Mexico under the names Furr's, Sack N Save, Food Emporium, Box, Bag N Save, and Save N Gain.

Furr's is based in Lubbock while Safeway's headquarters is in Oakland, Caklif.

The commission said it will ask a federal court to block the purchase pending an administrative review of the acquisition.

Smaller hospitals face struggle

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Area hospital administrators agree that rural and small-city hospitals face a tough struggle to survive in the future, but differ on the causes of the problem.

The administrators, Andy Gramlich, Scenic Mountain Medical Center; Charles Wigg, Hall-Bennett Hospital; Larry Elliott, Martin County Hospital, Stanton; and Ray Mason, Mitchell County Hospital, Colorado City, responded to the results of a recent survey.

The results were announced this past week by the American College of Healthcare Executives, which claimed that 10 percent of the country's hospitals will be forced to close by 1995.

Gramlich said there "are probably going to be more hospital closings," but added "its very hard to kill a hospital."

He said one factor that keeps many facilities open is citizen's demand for their services. Hospitals that are tax-supported had a better chance of survival, he added.

Gramlich stressed that the more dependent on Medicare payments a hospital was, the harder it is to cover the cost of providing care.

Elliot claimed that shrinking Medicare subsidies particularly hurt his hospital, which is very dependent on those payments.

"If they (the federal government) keep reducing the reimbursements, and don't allow you to recoup the costs, you're doomed," he said, explaining that 50 percent of his patients are under Medicare — making his hospital vulnerable to any changes in regulations.

"The potential (for closures) is there," said Mason, adding that the location of some hospitals could work to their disadvantage.

"Some rural hospitals may not be able to get staff members to come to their area," he said. "That's a problem all over the country — not just here."

Wigg agreed that small hospitals are closing all across the U.S., and blamed Medicare and the economy as the main culprits.

He said Medicare regulations are emphasizing out-patient care, thereby decreasing hospital admissions. The end result, he added, is decreasing revenues.

He also cited the poor economy, saying that as it improved, so would small hospitals' chances for survival.

The four administrators also agreed that health care costs were likely to increase in the future.

"Based on the past few years, I don't see any end to it," Wigg said. He added that rural hospitals — which are not as subsidized as larger facilities — will be forced to pass cost increases on to patients.

Mason said Mitchell County's

VA center reports patients increase

Herald staff report

The number of patients at the Veterans Administration Medical Center during the first half of 1987 is as much as 18 percent higher than what officials had predicted.

Tom Balderach, assistant to the director, reported that in- patient numbers are 18 percent higher than forecast while out-patient numbers are 13 percent higher than expected.

Despite the increase, the center has an adequate number of staff and has no plans to hire additional employees, Balderach said.

He attributed the increased patient load to the hospital's public awareness program and the economy.

"We are getting the word out (about our services)," Balderach said.

"The economy is so bad — folks that had access to insurance have lost that capability," he said, explaining that more are turning to the Veterans Administration for assistance.

During July, the hospital had an average of 156 acute care patients — 26 more than predicted.

The hospital also has 100 percent occupancy in its 40-bed nursing home care unit, he said.

The VA center has had a daily census of 195 to 210 patients, and Balderach said he expected the number to rise by about 10 more during the remainder of 1987.

Poverty rate appears lower than expected

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 13.6 percent national poverty rate reported last week was an improvement, but the actual share of Americans living in poverty may be even lower than indicated.

The official statistics are based on family income. But many government programs provide assistance that isn't in the form of cash, and therefore isn't counted when poverty is calculated.

If benefits such as as food stamps, Medicare and subsidized housing were included, the national poverty rate could drop as low as 9 percent, according to alternative, "experimental" calculations by the Census Bureau.

"We are now in a position where almost two-thirds of all means-tested benefits are in non-cash form, and yet they are not included in the official estimates of poverty," reported Gordon W. Green Jr., the bureau's assistant chief for socioeconomic statistics.

These means-tested benefits, which are distributed to people based on their income, totaled a little more than $59 billion last year, based on what it would have cost to purchase those goods and services in the marketplace.

By comparison, government cash benefits for individuals and families totaled about $32 billion. These included Aid to Families with Dependent Children, general assistance, Supplemental Security Income and some veterans programs.

The means-tested, non-cash benefits include food stamps, free and reduced-price school lunches, public and subsidized housing programs and Medicaid. In addition, Medicare contributed nearly $76 billion, although it is not means-tested.

Green cautioned that these estimates are experimental, however. He said attempts to set a value on non-cash benefits and use that figure in calculating poverty rates have drawn criticism in recent years.

"While the non-cash poverty measures are useful in providing consistent measures of poverty trends since 1979, the measures are of questionable value in determining the number of people who are poor," commented Robert Greenstein, director of the private Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

While Congress directed the bureau to find ways to calculate the value of non-cash benefits, no proposal has been made to change the official poverty estimates and Green stressed that this work is expected to remain exploratory for several years.

He noted that the calculations have been modified this year, after a conference of statistical experts

Congress turns to savings and loan problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress this week will try to agree on a multibillion-dollar bailout for the embattled federal agency that insures deposits at savings and loan associations.

The House began action today on legislation to pump $10.85 billion into the bankrupt Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which is more than $6 billion in the red.

The House and Senate are expected to act quickly on the comprehensive banking bill containing the FSLIC bailout. They are considering a compromise with the White House.

Reagan dropped his threat of a veto in exchange for an increase in the money the bill would generate for the insolvent FSLIC, from the $8.5 billion Congress had been offering to $10.85 billion. The administration had requested $15 billion and, in negotiations last week, sought $12 billion.

With the congressional summer recess scheduled to begin Friday, the House and Senate also will begin negotiations on a plan to restore strength to the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

The law has been toothless since the Supreme Court ruled last year that its enforcement mechanism, automatic spending cuts, was flawed. The Senate last week passed a new version that supporters say will pass court muster.

But House Democratic leaders say the new plan, largely Republican drafted, gives too much power to the White House.

Teen uses humor to battle pain of shark attack

By GRACE LIM
Austin American-Statesman

DENTON, Texas (AP) — When people marvel at April Dawn Voglino's artwork and ask, "You did this with your left hand?" the 16-year-old Kingsland teenager grins mischievously and says, "It's the only one I have."

April, who lost her right arm in a shark attack three months ago, was once an aspiring right-handed artist. She had won several art awards, but after she lost her arm, she began drawing with her other hand.

She's also doing the other things most teen-agers do, like going to the prom and enrolling in driver's education for the summer.

She doesn't consider herself handicapped, different or special.

"Well, maybe special," April said, grinning, showing her dimples. "I like to think I'm a little special. But definitely not handicapped."

April, wearing bright orange high-top sneakers and a matching orange and white striped T-shirt, is not unlike many other teen-age girls who think actor Tom Cruise is a hunk and pizza is food for all times.

"I'm just a normal 16-year-old girl," said the blue-eyed teen who will be a junior at Llano High School this fall.

But before she starts school, April will be fitted for an artificial arm.

"I'm going to have so much fun with that arm," she said, laughing. "I'm going to put it in somebody's locker, probably a freshman's. Can you see it? They're going to open that locker and an arm falls out. It's going to be funny."

Her aunt Vicky Pruett joins in and says, "They are going to rewrite the school policy and say, 'Please leave your arms at the door.'"

"Or do not put your arm in the teachers' drawers. It's going to be a riot. I can't wait," April said.

Since the shark attack April 18 at Mustang Island, April has been using humor to cope. She recalls an incident when she was trying to crawl on three limbs for the first time.

"I was trying to get my shirt that was laying on the double bed. I was sitting there trying to figure out how to crawl and finally I did. I got over there, grabbed my shirt and I went plop right on my face. My hiney was sticking up in the air. I was sitting there on my face, thinking, 'Good job, April, real good,' because after I grabbed the shirt, I figured out there's nothing holding me up."

Another time, when she filled out an application for a driving learner's permit, the instructor said to specify whether she was right or left-handed. April didn't skip a beat. "Right," she joked.

April is staying with the Pruetts in Denton while completing a three-week driver's education course at North Texas State University. A swivel knob attached to the steering wheel allows her to manipulate a motor vehicle easily.

"That's the car I want. A '65 Mustang," she said, pointing to a passing car. "I'm driving an automatic now, but I'm going to learn how to drive a standard, too."

While April is eager to talk about what she's accomplished and what she's going to do, she avoids talking about the attack.

She carries an article describing the shark attack for the curious.

"When people ask me, 'How did you lose your arm?' and I say, 'A shark bit it off,' they usually say, 'Nah ...' This way I can just say, 'Here, read this.'"

"I don't mind them asking how my arm is doing or if it hurts but I don't like them asking me anything about that day.

"I'm trying to deal with it the best that I can and the way I'm doing that is try not to think about it as much as possible. Some people think that's not good, but that's how I choose to deal with it right now. If I change my mind about it, I will."

Her father, Robert Voglino, said his first-born now sleeps with the lights on. "Once or twice, she'll get up in the middle of the night and say, 'Daddy, I'm scared.'"

Sometimes her family will joke about the accident, April said. The Voglinos watched the movie Jaws III the night before the shark attack.

"We were screaming (during the movie), my sisters and I," she said, adding that her father jokingly told the girls never to scream upon seeing a shark.

But after the real thing, April reminded her father, "Well, Dad. I didn't scream."

But her father gets misty-eyed and has trouble finding the words when talking about the day he and his wife, Beth, almost lost their daughter.

Voglino was in shoulder-deep water near April when he heard his daughter call out.

"It (the shark) first bumped into her. By the time I got to her, it bit her here and moved up to here," he said, pointing first to the elbow then to the upper arm.

"I grabbed her and put my arm around her so it wouldn't drag her away from me and just began to beat it with my fist, trying to knock it off her arm. Didn't seem to do any good, but what else could I do?" he asked, wiping the tears.

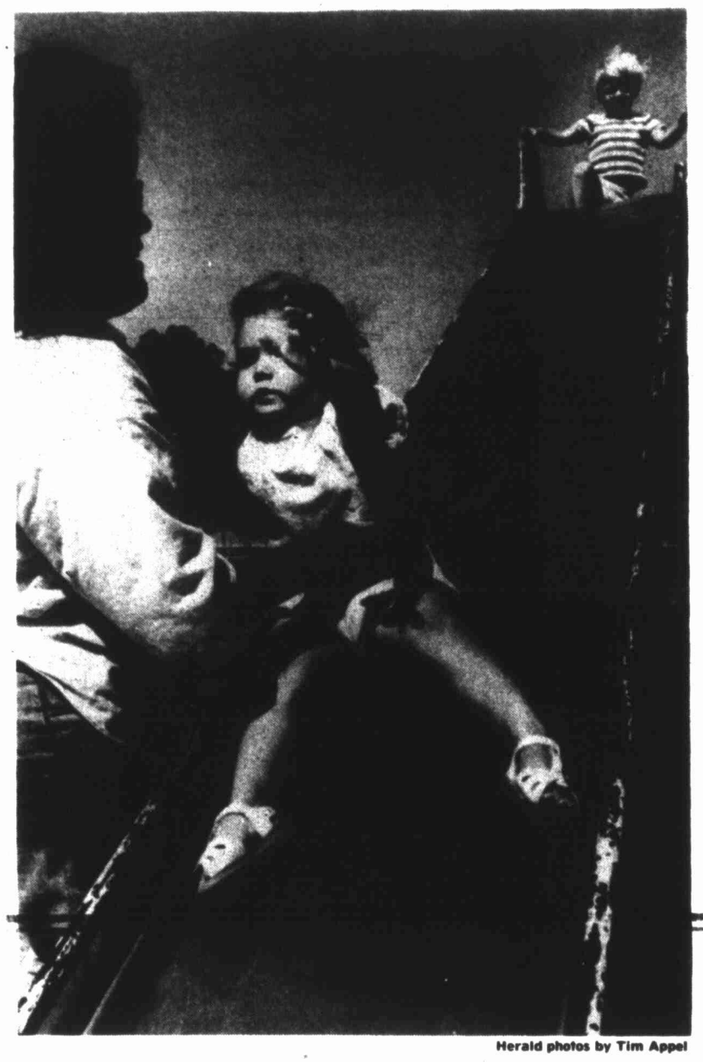

After struggling with the shark for 20 or 30 seconds, father and daughter headed toward the shores, where Mrs. Voglino began administering first-aid.

"I didn't want her to go into shock, so we kept talking to her," Mrs. Voglino said.

April remembers the day. "I got so tired of them asking what my name was that I started to sing. I sang Home, Home on the Range and some John Denver songs," she said.

"I started singing 'Country Roads' because I thought I was going to die. I thought one way to make sure I wasn't going to die was to sing."

Pola Negri, vamp of '20s silent screen dies of brain tumor

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Pola Negri, the dark-haired seductress of the silent screen and real-life lover of Rudolph Valentino whose career went into decline with Valentino's death and the advent of the talkies, is dead.

The tempestuous, Polish-born actress died Saturday at Northeast Baptist Hospital, where she was being treated for a brain tumor complicated by pneumonia.

She was 88 years old by her own account, although other sources gave her year of birth as 1894 or 1897, which would have made her older.

An exotic, green-eyed beauty, Miss Negri already was playing the vamp in films in Poland and Germany when she came to the United States in 1923 and quickly became an American star.

She appeared in about 20 U.S. films before the advent of talkies in the late 1920s, which made her thick accent a handicap and forced her to return to Europe.

POLA NEGRI

A trend-setter for fashion-conscious women of the time, she popularized painted toenails, turbans and high boots, and in her limited public appearances draped herself with diamonds and pearls that once belonged to Europe's royal families.

She had highly publicized affairs with Valentino and Charlie Chaplin and was living openly with Valentino when the heartthrob actor died in 1926.

Hospitals

hospital cost probably will increase, but stressed the increase would be minimal.

He predicted increases at his hospital will come mainly from higher costs for supplies.

Elliot claimed his hospital's location — between Midland and Big Spring — contributes to its higher costs.

"I have to compete salary-wise (with those towns) or I'll lose my people," he said, explaining salaries comprise 60 percent of operating costs at the hospital. He added that technological advances usually result in higher costs.

"I'm a firm believer that you either progress or digress," he said. "Any time you try to progress, the cost goes up."

The administrators also agreed with another of the survey's predictions — that AIDS testing will become mandatory by 1995.

"AIDS is a very real, serious threat. I can see the potential for that (mandatory testing)," Gramlich said, adding that it is not unusual for Scenic Mountain to treat people with the disease.

"It wouldn't surprise me," Wigg said. "In many instances, its a good thing. It's in the public's best interest to do so."

Mason and Elliott both said the mandatory testing probably will become a fact of life by 1995 — "if not sooner," Mason added.

Wigg, Elliott and Mason all said that their hospitals weren't equipped to fully treat persons with the disease. Aside from preliminary care, they said they probably would send those patients to a larger facility.

Hispanic AIDS awareness low

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Officials must beef up awareness among Hispanic groups particularly susceptible to contracting the deadly AIDS virus, a doctor says.

Dr. Julio Melo, an assistant clinical professor at the University of Louisville Medical School, was among the speakers at the U.S.-Colombian Medical Association meeting.

"Gays have become very sophisticated on this disease; they do not lack knowledge about the disease and its modes of transmission," said Melo, who came from Colombia 13 years ago to study infectious diseases.

"I haven't found that type of knowledge in Hispanics who are at risk for AIDS," he said.

Poverty rate

who were critical of some of the figures reported in the past.

For 1986, counting non-cash benefits as income reduces the share of Americans in poverty from 13.6 percent to between 9 percent and 12.5 percent depending on how the cost of the benefits is calculated, Green reported.

That means that instead of 32.4 million people living below the poverty line, the estimate would range from 21.4 million to 29.8 million.

Including the value of these benefits as income has much greater effect on the elderly than on the general polpulation, Green added, reducing their poverty rate from 12.4 percent to only 3 percent.

"This is a controversial figure, since much of the reduction comes from the way medical benefits are counted," he said.

Medical benefits provided through Medicare and Medicaid are valued at what it would cost to replace them with private insurance programs, he explained. But the insurance cost of these benefits would be so high that "in some states they raise all elderly people above the poverty line, even if they have no additional money for food, clothing, housing and other necessities."

Deleting the medical portion of the non-cash benefits and just counting the help provided by food and housing assistance to the elderly reduced their poverty rate from 12.4 percent to about 11 percent, the Census study showed.

Counting non-cash benefits as income has significant effects on poverty rates for other groups as well.

For example, youngsters under age 6 have the highest official poverty rate at 22.1 percent. That would be cut to between 16.1 percent and 21.4 percent under the non-cash calculations.

For youths aged 6 to 17 the rate would fall from 19.6 percent to between 12.6 and 17.5 percent.

Fire damages 50 to 100 acres

Herald staff report

Fire trucks from seven local communities were called to battle a grass fire Sunday that damaged between 50 and 100 acres, officials said.

The fire was reported at Jeffrey and Kyle roads at 4:45 p.m. Sunday, according to the sheriff's log.

Two Big Spring fire trucks, plus trucks from Silver Heels, Coahoma, Sand Springs, Lomax, Jonesboro and Forsan, responded.

The fire was brought under control at about 7:30 p.m., the sheriff's log said, and the Silver Heels unit remained on standby to watch smoldering spots.

Approximately 1,250 gallons of water were used to quell the blaze, according to city fire department reports.

- A Dallas man was arrested Sunday morning on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Pete Vouras, 50, Dallas, was arrested at 12:50 a.m. Sunday on Highway 87 in front of the Brass Nail. He was later released on a $1,000 bond.

- The sheriff's office reports that six large hogs have been running loose for several days on Andrews Highway approximately two miles west of Steere tank lines, and sheriff's deputies haven't been able to determine who they belong to. Anyone having information should call Sheriff A.N. Standard at 263-7654, 267-8162 or 267-5601.

the numbers are the same, the picture is prettier."

Another aspect of improving oil prices is the effect they may have on major oil producers' exploration budgets during the second half of the year. Industry analysts say many major oil companies underspent during the first six months, so expenditures for the second half of the year could be almost doubled.

Douglas Yadon, publisher of the Preston Pipe Report based in Tulsa., Okla., said he expects the number of active rigs, now at 917, to climb to 1,300 to 1,600 by the end of the year.

From a 1981 peak of 4,530 active drilling rigs in the United States, the count dropped to a low of 663 in July of 1986, according to the Baker-Hughes Rotary Rig Count, a widely followed index of domestic drilling activity.

Despite the positive signs, the energy industry has a long climb back.

Odeco Chairman Hugh Kelly said his company is still losing money and the recovery has a long way to go before it will produce profits. But he expects utilization rates for offshore rigs in the Gulf of Mexico will climb to 70 percent levels by the end of this year.

Deaths

Andres Caraveo

Andres Caraveo, 66, Midland, died Saturday evening, August 1, 1987 at Midland Memorial Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Rosary will be at 8 p.m. today at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Stanton. Funeral Mass will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the church, with the Rev. Frank Colacicco officiating. Burial will be at St. Joseph's Cemetery, directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

He was born Oct. 15, 1920 in San Benito. He married the late Maria Estella Saldania.

He moved to Midland in 1980 from Big Spring and was a retired roofer.

He is survived by two step-sons, Juan Francisco Flores, Midland and Reyes Martinez, Childress; three sisters, Maria Gonzales and Juana Ventragul both of Rio Hondo, and Hermenia Cortez, San Benito; four brothers, Manuel Caraveo, San Benito; Pedro Caraveo, Rio Hondo; Ignacio Caraveo, Port Isabel and Natividad Caraveo, McAllen; 14 grandchildren; and 11 great-grandchildren.

Vernie Barrett

Vernie "Cookie" Barrett, 42, 1110 Owens St., died Saturday, August 1, 1987, at Scenic Mountain Medical Center after a short illness.

Graveside services will be 10 a.m. Tuesday at Mount Olive Memorial Park with the Rev. Kenneth Patrick, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiating, directed by Myers & Smith Funeral Home.

She was born May 28, 1945, in Canadian, Okla., and had lived in Big Spring since 1974.

She is survived by two sons, Troy and Freddy Barrett, both of Big Spring; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Brown, Avondale, Ariz.; one sister, Mrs. Georgia Williams, Fort Worth; three brothers, Lonnie Brown, Florence, Ariz.; R.L. Brown, Washington state; Everett Brown, Avondale, Ariz.; and one granddaughter.

Pari-mutuel battle out of the gate

DALLAS (AP) — Proponents of racetrack gambling are mounting an advertising blitz to promote the Nov. 3 binding referendum on legalizaing pari-mutuel wagering.

Officials of the Texas Horse Racing Association say the Austin-based group plans to spend $1.6 million to counter opposition from religious leaders and prominent Texans — whose group includes Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

"I'm 99 percent sure it will pass," said Ricky Knox, executive director of the Austin-based Horse Racing Association, of the proposition to allow betting at horse and dog race tracks.

As of last month, the association had collected the names and addresses of 485,000 supporters to be targeted in get-out-the-vote efforts, he said. Consultants have been on board for months, and more than 40,000 pro-racing pamphlets have been distributed statewide.

Staffing has been arranged for phone banks that will become operational in about two weeks, several fund-raisers have been held, and bumper stickers have been passed out at horse shows that say: "Don't mess with taxes. Race horses in Texas."

Oil fire compensation sought

ODESSA (AP) — American Petrofina is considering a $55,000 bill submitted by the Odessa Fire Department for putting out a blazing crude oil pipeline.

"I felt justified in presenting them the bill. Our budget is tight," said Assistant Fire Chief James Wiggs.

Mark Palmer, Fina's director of public relations in Dallas, said the invoice, submitted in April, would be considered.

Firefighters from the Odessa Fire Department, the South Ector County Volunteer Fire Department, the West Odessa Volunteer Fire Department, and employees from Halliburton Services and El Paso Products battled the April 18 fire for more than four hours.

One fireman suffered a shoulder injury and four others were treated for smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion after the fire that destroyed nine trailers and two cars.

The leaking oil apparently ignited under a mobile home when a water heater or other household appliance somehow shorted or sparked out, fire reports said.

Crowd protests Justice nomination

DALLAS (AP) — A spirited rally opposing the nomination of federal appellate Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court drew jeers from a group of anti-abortion advocates who tried to disrupt the gathering.

About 300 people attended the protest at a Dallas park Sunday to hear speakers who vowed to block Bork's nomination, including the woman whose lawsuit spawned the landmark decision that legalized abortion.

"The nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court represents a threat to our personal privacy. It is an insult to every woman who has had to face the decision about an abortion — and especially to every woman who had to seek a back-alley abortion," said Norma McCorvey, reading from a prepared statement.

Ms. McCorvey was "Jane Roe," in the lawsuit that resulted in the 1973 Roe. vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

Members of the Abortion Abolition Society clashed briefly with the protesters. Winston Wilder, leader of the group, was arrested for using a bullhorn without a permit.

Man killed trying to help victims

RICHARDSON (AP) — A former college gymnast who was shot and killed after he chased down two purse-snatchers was the type of person who often stood up for others, his friends and family say.

Glenn Michael Sims, 25, a former University of Oklahoma gymnast, was shot in the heart Saturday after he drove three miles along a highway, chasing two women who had snatched a purse in a suburban shopping center parking lot.

Sims was responding to a woman's yells for help when he made the chase, Richardson police said. Friends said Sims actions were characteristic.

"Mike is the kind of kid where, if something wasn't right, he'd speak up and say so," said Mark Williams, assistant gymnastics coach at OU. "If he thought someone was getting a raw deal, he'd do something about it."

Two women, aged 23 and 17, were being held on investigative charges of murder and burglary, a spokeswoman for the Richardson police department said Sunday. The 17-year-old also was booked on an investigative charge of attempted murder for allegedly trying to shoot a police officer.

Police said Sims, who lived in Garland, a Dallas suburb that borders Richardson, was "attempting to be a Good Samaritan."

Friends said Sims was spending time with his parents in Garland after having received his master's degree in sports administration from OU.

Greg Buwick, head gymnastics coach at OU, said he had planned to talk to Sims this week about a job.

Buwick said Sims' death shocked him, but he wasn't surprised at the circumstances.

"I'm sure he thought it was a couple of young girls and he could get the purse back and joke about it later," Buwick said. "He had such a good sense of humor," he told the Dallas Morning News.

Patricia Collins, 27, told officers she was placing her two children in the back seat of her car Saturday when she turned around and saw a woman walking away with her purse.

The thief fled the scene in a 1980 Plymouth driven by another woman.

Sims gave chase for three miles down a highway. When the Plymouth pulled off the highway, Sims followed, got out of his car and confronted the women.

One of the women pulled out a gun and shot Sims point-blank, police said.

Two policemen who were directing traffic at a nearby intersection ran toward the vehicles and were about 15 feet to 25 feet away when Sims was shot, police said.

The officers arrested the women.

Sims, a three-time Big Eight champion gymnast, always helped a woman in trouble, said his father, Glenn F. Sims.

"It was typical of him," said the senior Sims.

Scott Wright, a fellow gymnast and good friend, said he believed his friend's death was "an honorable way to go."

"But I really wouldn't consider him a hero," he said. "He was just being Mike."

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinions from around the state.

Says tax bill best for circumstances

It took the largest tax increase ever enacted by any state in United States history, but the Texas Legislature has solved our state's budget-balancing problem for the foreseeable future.

At least that's what Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Gib Lewis and Comptroller Bob Bullock tell us. We thought we had heard that before from former Gov. Mark White after another special legislative session. Let us fervently pray that the statement is more accurate this time.

Somehow we doubt that Texas legislators will be wearing T-shirts and lapel buttons or sporting bumper stickers boasting of the new record. But it should be recognized that, facing the type of fiscal problems they faced, they did what they had to do.

Gov. Clements, on signing approval, remarked that no one was happy with the result but "the fact we're all so unhappy about it ... is a pretty good sign that we did what we had to do."

Many Texas taxpayers and businessmen no doubt echo that sentiment.

... The compromise on taxes and spending looks about as logical as could be expected, given the state's huge loss of revenue from the petroleum industry.

An ugly side to the special session surfaced in partisan battles between Republicans and Democrats seeking to embarrass one another on tax voting. They sounded like the U.S. Congress there for awhile.

Kerrville Daily Times

Calls Texas judge good pick for FBI

Federal Judge William Sessions of San Antonio, named by President Reagan to lead the FBI, is a tough law-and-order type, a no-nonsense judge "who doesn't allow men without blazers to sit in the gallery," as one lawyer described him.

President Reagan made a good choice.

The bureau just lost an excellent director when William Webster moved over to head the CIA. Webster also was appointed from the ranks of the federal judiciary.

Sessions, like Webster before him, has a reputation for integrity, intelligence and common sense.

The appointment of an FBI director takes on greater importance than usual. The Justice Department, of which the FBI is a part, has been under one cloud or another since the president picked his long-time friend, Edwin Meese III, to be attorney general.

Meese is now under investigation in connection with the Wedtech payoff scandal. This makes it doubly important for the bureau to get a director of independent mind and sound judgment. And Sessions has those credentials. ...

Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Believes Hobby is best in history

It's difficult to imagine Texas state government without Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who announced Monday he will not run for governor — or any office — in 1990.

... For 14 years, Mr. Hobby has championed education, reasonable state services and a healthy business climate in Texas. He has insisted on higher taxes when others have preferred demagoguery.

Without Mr. Hobby, the agreement on spending and revenues that got the Legislature through the last traumatic special session might never have been reached.

Leaders from every segment of the state — business, universities, minorities, professional groups, local governments — have felt that Bill Hobby was their friend. He has been willing to listen to everybody, act with restraint when called for, with forcefulness when necessary.

He has worked successfully with three governors — Dolph Briscoe, Bill Clements and Mark White — and it was always believed that he would run for governor someday. ...

He will remembered as a man of conviction and fair play — and perhaps the most effective lieutenant governor in Texas history.

Lauds Navy's decision for officers

The May 17 attack on the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf that killed 37 sailors was a sad day for this country, but Navy officials did the right thing in deciding not to court-martial the Stark's skipper and top officers.

The skipper, Capt. Glenn Brindel, and the weapons officer, Lt. Basil Moncrief, have accepted responsibility for the frigate's failure to defend itself against an Iraqi warplane, and as a result, will be allowed to resign rather than face a court-martial.

They also received letters of reprimand for not taking more effective steps to prevent the attack, and lesser discipline is pending against a third officer.

The key element in these officers' favor is that the attack was completely unexpected and came from an Iraqi aircraft not considered hostile. The officers also maintain that the ship's radar did not pick up the Exocet missiles fired by the fighter.

The nation does not need a scapegoat to close the books on the Stark attack. That would serve no purpose, and it ignores the tremendous personal pain that Capt. Brindel and the officers of the Stark will bear for the rest of their lives.

Texas beaches need cooperation

Texas beaches are becoming a world garbage dump while an international treaty to ban ocean dumping of trash, drafted in the 1970s, drifts aimlessly, awaiting ratification by the United States and many other nations.

In two cleanups, in April and last September, volunteers picked up a startling 263 tons — 526,000 pounds — of debris from Gulf Coast beaches. Another cleanup is scheduled for Sept. 19.

This year's cleanup will focus on foreign trash, litter that can be identified by labels or otherwise as international in origin. State officials estimate that 80 to 90 percent of the trash that accumulates on Texas beaches comes from ships and offshore oil rigs.

The "Don't Mess with Texas" campaign has a nice ring to it, but it will take more than residents of the Lone Star state to clean up our beaches. Texas officials at the highest level ought to press for both federal and international cooperation immediately.

CIA director Casey lived in shadowy secret world

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — The person who probably would give the most revealing testimony about the Iran-Contra operation, if he were alive, would be the late CIA director, William Casey. He operated a secret government-within-the-government, which bypassed the traditional structure of checks and balances. This has been the most important finding of the investigation.

We described Casey in 1983 as "a loner who operates out of his hat; who lives in a continuous state of crisis; whose mind is encased in a Republican hard shell; who talks of Soviet-American relations in terms of 'showdown.'"

It was his style to withhold information from anyone who might be unsympathetic toward his goals. In fact, he reported only the bare bones of sensitive matters to his own CIA subordinates.

Thus he routinely short-circuited the system that was supposed to alert the Oval Office and Congress to any dubious schemes or operations. Intimates say he did not look upon himself as above the law, but constantly looked for loopholes that would allow him to evade the law.

The CIA's covert operations, for example, are restricted by law. No longer can the CIA sponsor coups and carry out assassinations around the world. So Casey simply recruited outside organizations to do the dirty work that the CIA is now prohibited from doing.

As early as August 1981, we reported that Casey was forming secret alliances "with totalitarian regimes and anti-communist factions in the conduct of covert operations around the world." We warned this "could throw us into an uncomfortable embrace with extremists who are morally objectionable, with dictators who oppose U.S. principles, even with terrorists whom we claim to abhor."

Jack Anderson

We could "wind up supporting revolutionary forces and exile groups," we wrote, "with no control over what these groups do."

No one believes that Casey actually formed a separate, rogue government-within-the-government to do his bidding. Rather, they say, he operated through an informal, underground clique of hard-liners who were strategically placed throughout the government.

They shared the same conspiratorial view of the world, the same combative attitude. They believed the United States is losing the world power struggle because liberal policymakers are softheaded and have developed a schoolboy's crush on radicals.

Lt. Col. Oliver North was a pivotal member of this unofficial, unorganized underground. We described his unique relationship with the CIA director last January. "North and Casey huddled frequently to discuss details of the Iran-Contra operation. They left no memos or notes of their conversations.' ... Sensitive details were never discussed at meetings where anyone they distrusted was present."

In the same report, we stated that the Iran-Contra conspirators "not only withheld from (President Reagan) information that might have embarrassed him, but intercepted documents that might have tipped him off."

That's why the president could say truthfully, as he did to us earlier this month, that he not only hadn't been told about the illegal diversion of arms profits to the contras, but that he was still trying to find out who raised the price. The U.S. government was paid the full market price for the arms; the president wondered aloud who had overcharged the Iranians.

We can report it was the Israelis, with the connivance of Bill Casey. As far back as April 1986, we reported that the first arms shipments were delivered by Israel "with the tacit approval of the CIA." Then the White House decided to ship the arms directly to Iran, we wrote, "instead of going through Israel."

It was the Israelis, we have learned, who first put the squeeze on the Iranians. With Casey's secret approval, the Israeli intelligence service, Mossad, kept the excess profits to help finance its intelligence operations.

Casey agreed to the diversion because Mossad had undertaken sensitive intelligence jobs for the CIA on request — clandestine operations that Casey didn't have congressional approval to conduct.

Later the Iranian middleman used by the Israelis, Ghorbanifar, suggested overcharging the Iranians for the direct U.S. arms shipments in order to raise money for the Contras.

Still other fascinating details of the Iran-Contra scandal were buried last May with the enigmatic William Casey.

Technology asks new questions

By SPENCER SANDOW
Staff Writer

"Someone very close to you is in pain, paralyzed and will die within a month. He begs you to give him poison so that he can die. Would you?"

"Should it be illegal to help a terminally ill person die? If someone is not dying but has chronic pain, should he be allowed to commit suicide? What if the person were in emotional, rather than physical, pain?"

Those questions are among more than 200 absorbing conversational topics in "The Book of Questions" by Dr. Gregory Stock. They illustrate a variety of controversial and ethical dilemmas.

I decided I'd probably accede to my loved one's wishes and give him or her the poison — if there were no chance I'd be prosecuted for doing it.

That seems the more compassionate response.

It's also easy to say that when I'm not actually faced with such a dilemma. If the chips were down my response could be different.

How would you answer? And would you answer the same if:

- The loved one was not in pain, but knew he would die soon and wanted to spare his family the astronomical medical expenses his prolonged life otherwise would incur?
- The loved one was brain-dead, surviving indefinitely on life support systems, with no chance of recovery?

I believe my response would be the same under those circumstances.

Many people have considered these or similar questions during the past decade or so, but few seem to have found satisfactory answers.

Euthanasia continues to be a controversial, emotion-ridden subject — especially because it involves religious dos and don'ts.

Our system of morals and ethics, as slow to change as it has been throughout history, has failed to keep pace with the technology explosion.

Around the rim

A generation ago the question would not have been asked. Science then was largely incapable of artificially prolonging life in such circumstances.

I suppose society just assumed when discovering the technology that it automatically would be to everyone's good, not anticipating the suffering such "advances" could cause.

But when needs become widespread they eventually come to society's attention. In this case, the "living will" was invented.

The living will is a legal document giving your approval to let you die in certain circumstances.

The living will in many states is just as legally binding as a conventional will. In some states, including Texas, a living will can be overriden by family wishes.

With the living will, society has taken a baby-step toward resolving the euthanasia issue. For compassion's sake, I hope the trend continues.

New home turns into money pit

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

The first thing that happened when I moved into my present house a couple of years ago is the pipe to the washing machine burst and water flooded one of the downstairs rooms where my office is located.

I knew something was wrong when I was typing one day and my desk started sinking.

The water had saturated the carpet under my desk and rotted the wood under the carpet.

I called the repairman.

"What's the problem?" he asked.

"Let me put it this way," I said. "Ever try to type in a rice paddy?"

He came over and repaired the damage. I forget the exact amount. Six hundred and change.

What happened next was the air conditioner quit. It was August.

The guy came and said my "what's-it" was no longer doing something or other.

Three big ones.

The next crisis was when I came home one winter night and the house was locked and I couldn't find my key.

After an hour of trying to pry open a window or sliding-glass door, I decided I would have to sleep outside with my dog, Catfish, the black Lab.

We cuddled together in some nice pine straw. Five minutes later Catfish had left to chase through the woods after, I was certain, an escaped mental patient with one of those dangerous-looking garden weasels.

I had to get inside my house at any cost, so I found a rock and threw it through what I considered the least expensive window in my house.

A week later, after my heating bill had skyrocketed to new heights, I finally found a guy to come over and replace the window. That was another hundred and a half.

I have a Jacuzzi in my backyard. I didn't have it put in. It came with the house. I don't like Jacuzzis. I always feel like I'm being boiled when I get into one.

Regardless, something clogged up the drain in my Jacuzzi and it overflowed with a couple of guests inside it, including my neighbor, Melvin Spinderman.

I called the Jacuzzi man. Neither of us was ever sure what it was he pulled out of the Jacuzzi drain, but it was either a drowned squirrel or somebody's fur-lined underpants.

I don't think any of my friends wear fur-lined underpants, but squirrels aren't known for much in the way of aquatics, and Melvin Spinderman recently divorced his wife and joined a macrame class, so you never know.

Anyway, it cost me another couple of hundred to fix the Jacuzzi.

Last week the floor in my shower collapsed. Luckily, I was unharmed. I grabbed the soap rope.

A guy came to my house and repaired the damage. He charged me four big ones.

Melvin Spinderman, I understand, is looking for someone to share his new apartment.

It's just a thought. Just a thought.

No class for AIDS kids

ARCADIA, Fla. — A judge holds the key to the schoolhouse door for three young, hemophiliac brothers barred from class because they carry the AIDS virus.

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich is scheduled to rule whether the Ray brothers — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9 and Randy, 8 — should go back to DeSoto County's public schools when school begins on Aug. 24.

The controversy has left the Rays isolated and turned them into outcasts.

It has also caused many town residents to worry about the health of their schoolgoing children despite evidence that the AIDS virus is transmitted sexually, in the womb or through sharing tainted needles, not by casual contact.

NASA takes first step

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA said it would begin readying a space shuttle today for the first launching since the Challenger tragedy.

Switching on the electrical power of the shuttle Discovery was planned as the first step in a long process leading up to a mission scheduled for June 2, 1988, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said.

"The power-up of Discovery to ready it for launch will be a major milestone," said launch operations director Bob Sieck.

Discovery is one of NASA's three shuttles, which have been grounded since Challenger exploded 73 seconds after launch on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the seven crew members.

NASA engineers have been working on modifications to Discovery for months here. Some of the modifications were planned before the Challenger disaster, but many resulted from the inquiry into the accident.

Heart recipient dies

MILWAUKEE — A 53-year-old man said to be the second-longest surviving heart transplant patient has died after nearly 16 years with his transplanted heart.

Richard W. Mueller died Saturday at his home in suburban Greenfield of a heart-related illness.

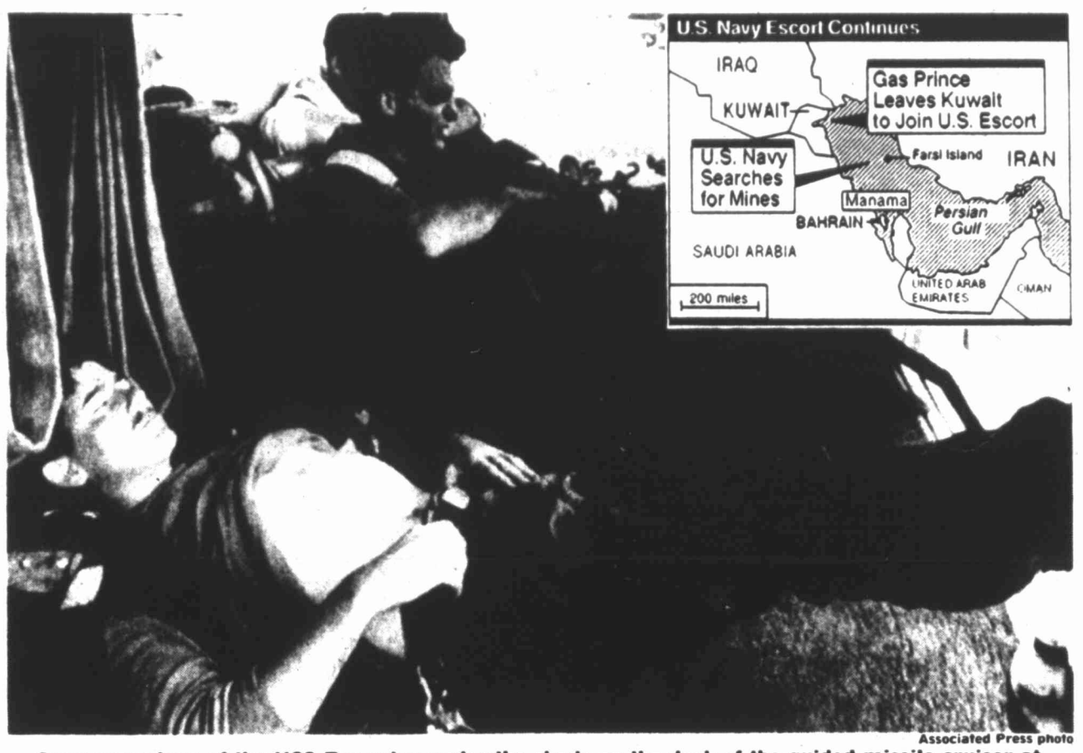

Mueller received his new heart Nov. 8, 1971, in an operation performed at the Stanford University Medical Center in Palo Alto, Calif., by heart surgeon Norman E. Shumway.

A spokesman for the medical center said records showed Mueller to be the second-longest surviving heart transplant recipient.

According to another Stanford spokeswoman, Mary Nelson Campbell, the longest surviving recipient is William Van Buren of San Raphael, Calif., who received a new heart Jan. 2, 1970.

A Frenchman who received a heart transplant in November 1968 was for many years the longest-living recipient. He died this May.

Mueller retired in August 1985 as a foreman of the paper and ink department at Journal-Sentinel Inc.

Crew memebers of the USS Fox relax under the shade on the deck of the guided missile cruiser at temperatures that climbed into the 100s Sunday in the Persian Gulf. Inset, the USS Fox is one of three U.S. Navy ships escorting the reflagged Kuwati tanker Gas Prince, loaded with volatile liquid petroleum gas, sailed unscathed through the Gulf where the threat of Iranian mines had been judged high.

Iran warning

Tells U.S. ships to stay away

KUWAIT (AP) — Iran announced today the beginning of naval maneuvers in the Strait of Hormuz, warning ships and aircraft to stay away of territorial waters as a U.S.-flag Kuwaiti tanker escorted by American warships steamed toward the gulf's only gateway.

Tehran radio said preliminary operations for the maneuvers, codenamed "Martyrdom," have begun in the Strait of Hormuz by the Revolutionary Guards. In a Tehran radio report monitored in Nicosia, Iran warned all ships and aircraft to avoid its territorial waters for three days starting at midnight. Iran had announced earlier that the maneuvers would begin Tuesday.

The Iranian announcement came as a U.S.-flag Kuwaiti tanker, the Gas Prince, escorted by two American warships, steamed toward the Strait of Hormuz on a return voyage through the Persian Gulf after loading liquefied petroleum gas from Kuwait, a shipping source in Kuwait said.

The exact location of the convoy was not known, but a U.S. Navy officer said Sunday that the convoy had sailed half of its 550-mile, 2½-day journey through the gulf.

Meanwhile, an Iranian official claimed the casualty toll from clashes between Iranian pilgrims and Saudi security forces in Islam's holy city of Mecca last Friday had risen to at least 600 Iranians dead and some 4,500 wounded. The Saudis say 402 people, 275 of them Iranian, were killed and 649 injured.

Also today, Iranian President Ali Khamenei was quoted as telling navy graduates in Tehran that the United States yields only to force and would be addressed that way.

Tehran radio said the Iranian military "has issued a serious request to all shipping centers and military and civilian aircraft to halt all their air and sea traffic in the regional waters of the Islamic Republic of Iran in the Persian Gulf and Oman Sea for three days starting from 2400 hours tonight (8:30 p.m. EDT)."

A U.S. Navy official said Sunday that three more Kuwaiti tankers will hoist U.S. flags within the next 10 days, entitling them to Navy warship escort through the Persian Gulf.

Rear Adm. Harold J. Bernsen said Sunday the Gas Prince and its escorts passed without incident the halfway point of their voyage out of the Strait of Hormuz.

"Escorting ships is a peaceful job, not a warlike job," Bernsen said. "It is just unfortunate that the Iranians have chosen to term it provocative. I'd say it's not provocative at all."

On July 24, an underwater mine damaged another Kuwaiti tanker, the Bridgeton, which was sailing with the Gas Prince. The Pentagon said it suspected Iran had planted the mine.

Iran, which accuses Kuwait of aiding its war enemy Iraq, has often attacked Kuwaiti tankers and ships that stop at Kuwaiti ports.

The Reagan administration agreed to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect the flow of oil through the gulf.

Cabinet member killed

MANILA, Philippines — Police set up roadblocks and searched hospitals today after the first assassination of a Cabinet member in the Philippines.

Witnesses told police three to five gunmen riddled Local Governments Secretary Jaime Ferrer's car with automatic weapons fire Sunday evening about a block from his home in suburban Paranaque. One gunman may have been wounded.

Ferrer, 70, a staunch anti-Communist, and his driver died of multiple gunshot wounds. No group immediately claimed responsibility for the killings.

Ferrer's brother, Wally, said the secretary had been receiving death threats but refused a military offer of bodyguards. Ferrer, a guerrilla fighter against the Japanese in World War II, had boasted to reporters that he never traveled with bodyguards and that his enemies "know where to find me."

Five Americans dead

ALEXIS CREEK, British Columbia — Five people, all believed to be American advertising executives, were killed when the whitewater raft they were riding hit a stretch of wild water in the surging Chilko River, police said Sunday.

The inflatable raft turned over about 35 miles west of here on Saturday and tossled 11 of 12 rafters into the rapids, police said.

Police identified two of the dead as Robert V. Goldstein, 50, of Cincinnati, who was corporate vice president of advertising for Procter and Gamble Co., of Cincinnati, and James Fasules, 63, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., a former senior vice president of Needham.

Also killed were Richard T. O'Reilly, 65, director of the New York-based Media Advertising Partnership for a Drug-Free America Inc.; and Stuart Sharpe, 37, and Gene Yovetich, 41, both Chicago residents and senior vice presidents of account management at DDB Needham, Needham said.

Germany has Yuppies

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Every evening West Germany's well-paid young professionals crowd into the "yuppie" cafes of Hamburg, Munich and Frankfurt, showing off the designer clothes that help make the new generation a hot consumer market.

Taking their cue from the American yuppies who brought their dual incomes to fashionable city apartments and suburban homes, many Germans in their 20s and early 30s ignore social protests to pursue money instead.

"The yuppies are everywhere in West Germany," says Cyril N. Kuhn, publisher of Maenner Vogue (Vogue for Men) magazine in Munich. "Our whole advertising campaign is based on that."

Many are bankers, stockbrokers, lawyers and doctors. A growing number of young entrepreneurs also are breaking into the rigid German business environment.

Mom throws wet blanket on nudist wedding plans

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 and getting married in September to a wonderful young lady named Julie. She and I are nudists, as in her whole family. We have always wanted an outdoor wedding, and want to have the ceremonies at the nudist camp where we met three years ago.

So far, all our invitations have been accepted — except one. You guessed it — the reluctant one is my mother. The non-nudists understand that they will not be required to be nude. My 23-year-old sister and I have tried unsuccessfully to persuade Mother to attend. She refuses to budge, saying if we want her to attend, we will have to change our plans.

Shall we give her an ultimatum and stick with what we want? At this point, I feel like telling my mother we will miss her. What do you say?

BOBBY IN NASHVILLE

DEAR BOBBY: It appears that your mother has already given you an ultimatum — either have a conventional wedding or count her out. Knowing how your mother feels about nudity, if you stick with your plans, it will clearly show her that you don't give a fig (leaf) about whether she attends or not.

P.S. Where will your best man carry the ring? I hope this covers everything.

DEAR ABBY: I'm considering changing my name. It's not that I'm ashamed of my name, but it's very long, hard to spell and hard to remember, which could be a disadvantage for a young man hoping to make it in the business world. What do you think?

C.J. IN BUFFALO

DEAR C.J.: I'm reminded of a very bright, ambitious young man who faced the same dilemma. He concluded: "The harder a name is to remember, the harder it will be to forget." Thank you, Arnold Schwarzenegger.

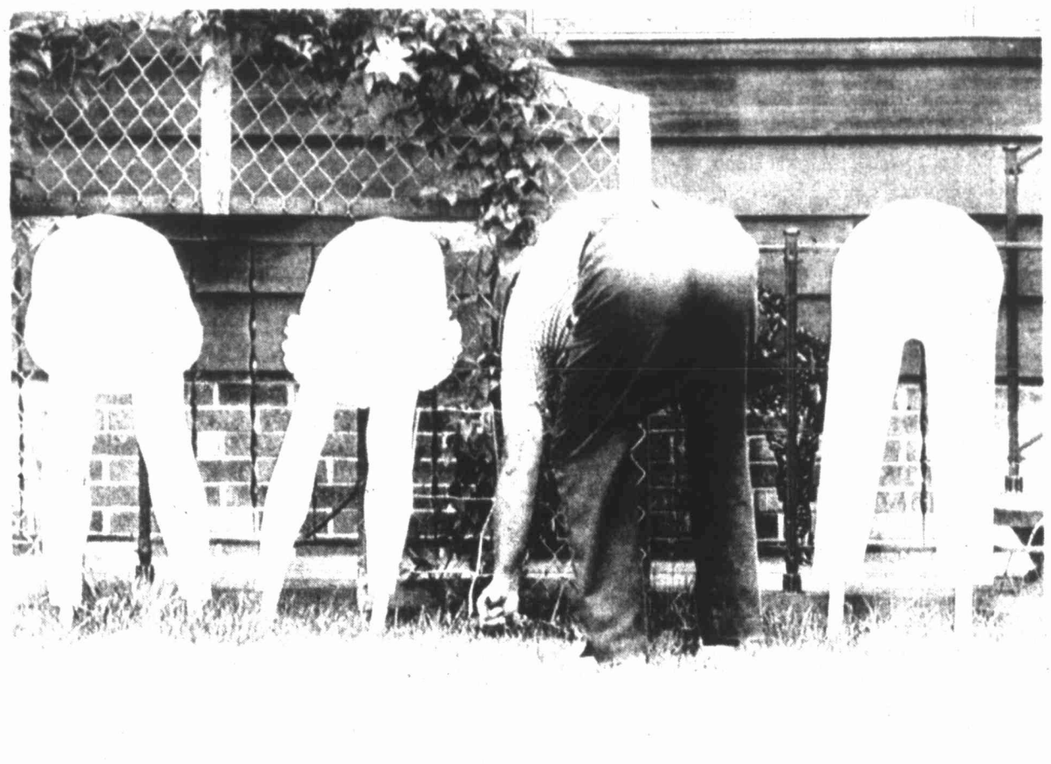

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised at the number of men who tell me dirty jokes, then act annoyed when I don't react with a giggle, smirk or wink.

Frankly, I find this kind of talk embarrassing. Am I a prude? If you say I should loosen up, I'll try, but I was taught to be...

A LADY

DEAR LADY: Loosen up? No way! Let the offenders know you don't appreciate that kind of talk. If you don't object at the onset, the "jokes" will get dirtier and dirtier.

Which one is Bob?

Baseball cap America's most popular headgear

By ESQUIRE
A Hearst Magazine

America's most popular hat is the baseball cap — 300 million or more are sold in the United States every year.

It isn't much of a hat, according to an article in the current issue of Esquire, just a duckbill visor attached to a skullcap.

It isn't even flattering — it throws the face into shadow and makes the head look disproportionately small.

While scores of manufacturers make baseball caps, New Era Cap of Derby, N.Y., makes several million a year, including caps for 23 of the 26 major league teams.

Baseball headgear has changed a lot since the New York Knickerbockers — America's first uniformed baseball club — took the field in 1851 wearing straw hats.

Visored baseball caps, similar to the caps jockeys wear, first appeared after the Civil War and were inspired to some extent by the caps worn by Union and Confederate soldiers.

Caps varied considerably over the next 40 years. The Chicago White Stockings wore a flat topped cap while the Boston Red Stockings wore a round top model. In 1876, White Stockings manager A.G. Spalding assigned a different color cap to each of his players so the fans could identify them on the field.

The color-coded caps never caught on, but Spalding quit baseball to make his fortune in sporting goods.

The Boston-style round cap won over the Chicago flat-top after the turn of the century.

The design of the baseball cap has remained basically unchanged over the last 75 years, although the bill is slightly longer now than it was before World War II and in the past 20 years the crown has been stiffened and raised a bit in front, which reduces the skullcap effect and improves the profile.

Today, the official major league baseball cap has six pieces in the crown, each with an eyelet for ventilation, and a visor.

The cap sells for about $15, depending on details. The St. Louis Cardinals cap is slightly more expensive than the Boston Red Sox cap because it takes more time to stitch "STL" than "B."

One recent change, for some clubs, began in the 1970s.

John Nash Ott, a retired banker who is president of Light Research Foundation in Sarasota, Fla., advised the Cincinnati Reds to change the color of the underside of the cap visors from green to gray.

Ott claimed colors have an effect on the pituitary gland and the central nervous system. He said the team's batting and fielding could be improved by changing the color of the visor linings.

Cincinnati followed his advice and won the pennant.

Super promoter Don King had a simple reaction. "Hallelujah."

After 16 months, 10 fights and a bellyful of bickering, HBO's heavyweight title unification series is over, with all three championship belts around the waist of 21-year-old Mike Tyson.

Not since 1978, when Leon Spinks beat Muhammad Ali, has there been just one heavyweight champion.

Problem is, there still are those who feel Tyson has company at the top of the division, and this could affect the heavyweight picture over the next year.

Michael Spinks, who was stripped of his International Boxing Federation version of the heavyweight title, calls himself the people's champion, and his promoter, Butch Lewis, feels Spinks' victory over Gerry Cooney last June 15 has made him more popular than Tyson.

"He won the title and all," Spinks said of Tyson. "I mean, he's got all the belts, but he hasn't beat me. He's a champion because he's got the belts."

Tyson, who already held the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association titles, captured the third belt Saturday night with a unanimous 12-round decision over IBF champion Tony Tucker.

Spinks was stripped for refusing to fight Tucker as part of the HBO series. Nows Spinks would like to fight Tyson.

Spinks was among the 7,800 spectators at the Las Vegas Hilton for the Tyson-Tucker fight. He sat in the very last row, the cheap seats. Nothing could have been more appropriate. He feels shunted aside by Tyson.

"I want to get the fight signed," Spinks said. And Lewis added: "It could be the biggest box office in our industry's history."

Mike Tyson holds up two of the three heavyweight championship belts after defeating Tony Tucker Saturday night in the Las Vegas in the fight for the undisputed heavyweight championship fight. Tyson won by a unanimous decision.

Such a fight, however, is not expected to take place until the fall of 1988, at the earliest, after Tyson fulfills several commitments. Tyson, 31-0 with 27 knockouts, is scheduled to face Olympic champion Tyrell Biggs on Oct. 16, perhaps in Atlantic City.

After that fight, plans call for Tyson to meet undetermined opponents, the first in December or January, the other at Tokyo on March 21. After that, he is supposed to fight in June or July at London, perhaps against British heavyweight Frank Bruno.

"He's not the champion," Tyson has said of Spinks. "I'm the champion. He's not running the show. He used the excuse that he didn't lose the title in the ring. That's a bunch of baloney. How can you call yourself champion when you give it up?"

Biggs, ranked as the No. 1 contender by all three governing bodies, tuned up for the October fight by stopping journeyman Lorenzo Boyd in the third round last Friday night at Corpus Christi, Texas. The victory gave Biggs a record of 15-0 since turning professional after the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

Biggs, considered by some a legitimate threat to Tyson, looked a little sluggish against Boyd, although he knocked Boyd down four times before the fight was stopped. Biggs admitted he wasn't in the kind of shape he would like to be in against Tyson.

"I may have looked slow, but I'm weighing 235 pounds right now," Biggs said. "That's not my fighting weight."

Spinks' refusal to fight Tucker was not the only hitch in the $22 million HBO series.

Trevor Berbick, who held the WBC title when the series began, threatened to pull out and fight Cooney because he wasn't getting enough money. Tyson took the WBC title by beating Berbick on Nov. 22, 1986.

Last December, Tony Tubbs, the WBA title-holder, said he hurt his shoulder, delaying a fight with James "Bonecrusher" Smith. King, who promotes Tyson, accused Tubbs of holding out for more money, and litigation followed. Smith replaced Tubbs in the series and knocked out Tim Witherspoon in one round for the WBA title. Tyson took that belt away with a 12-round unanimous decision over Smith last March 7.

With all this and the Tyson-Tucker fight finally out of the way, there still was a faint whistling in the wind. It seems everyone wants a piece of Mike Tyson now.

"I think I have taken some of his indestructability away," Tucker said of Tyson after the fight. Tucker had said before the bout that a loss to Tyson would probably force him into retirement.

Ali admits he's sick

CHICAGO (AP) — Muhammad Ali, boxing's only three-time heavyweight champion, says he will probably have surgery to help relieve Parkinson's Syndrome, a mild form of a degenerative brain disorder.

"I know I'm sick and I know it's getting worse," Ali said in an interview published today in the Chicago Sun-Times. "I can't talk when I want to. Can't talk as fast and often as I like.

"My mind is still sharp. I am aware of everything around me," he said. "My body just moves slow and feels drained a lot."

Still, he says he doesn't want sympathy.

"But I do appreciate prayers," Ali said.

Ali made his comments during an interview with the Sun-Times in Las Vegas where, he attended Saturday's heavyweight title bout between Mike Tyson and Tony Tucker.

Last month, Ali was in Mexico for a sports medicine conference when he met Dr. Ignacio Madrazo, a neurosurgeon, who is experienced in taking cells from the adrenal glands, which produce dopamine, and placing them in the brain.

Dopamine is deficient in Ali's condition, and he reportedly has been taking a form of the drug, L-dopa, as treatment.

"I know that sooner or later I will have to have surgery if my condition keeps getting worse," Ali said. "I was about to have that operation in Mexico, but some members of my family and my doctor have persuaded me to wait.

"Basically, I feel great, except for fatigue. I do get tired a lot, but I feel no pain. I don't feel any pain.

Frierson, Standefer grab top AJRA titles

Herald staff report

A Paris cowboy and an Oklahoma cowgirl won the McDonald's All-around trophies at the American Junior Rodeo Association's rodeo that concluded Saturday night in Big Spring.

Matt Frierson from Paris won the 12-and-under boys barrel racing and the breakaway roping to earn the boys' all-around title.

Caryn Standefer, from Colbert, Ok., finished second in both the 12-and-under girls' poles and breakaway roping to capture the girls' title.

Local contestants who won their events were Colorado City cowboy Ted Cooley, who won the bull riding; and Gail cowgirl Kelly Jo Ogden, who raced around the barrels in a winning time of 17.03.

Here are Saturday's final results from the AJRA rodeo in Big Spring.

13-15 boys

Breakaway roping — Leddy Lewis, Snyder, 2.48; Cliff Marlow, Kilgore, 2.55.

Tiedown — Marty Yates, Corsicana, 10.58; Andy Boyd, Rowlett, 11.06.

Ribbon Roping — Jonathan Davis, Alto, 7.33; J. Paul Williams, 7.35.

Pokes deal for burner

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Wide receiver Rod Barksdale, the newest Dallas Cowboy, never played high school or college football but has world class speed that gives defensive backs migraine headaches.

To get Barksdale from the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday night, Dallas signed holdout cornerback Ron Fellows then traded him to Coach Tom Flores' team 19 miles down the road at Oxnard.

It was the first player-for-player trade the Cowboys have made since 1984 when they traded Butch Johnson to the Houston Oilers for Mike Renfro.

Fellows, who had no contract and refused to report to the Cowboys' training camp, shopped his talents around the NFL and decided he preferred playing for the Raiders.

Fellows, a former seventh round draft choice from Missouri, was under the gun after Dallas drafted Baylor's Ron Francis in the second round. The rookie has been impressive in training camp.

"I'm delighted I'm going to the Raiders. I didn't want to go to Green Bay or somewhere like that," Fellows said from Dallas.

Coach Tom Landry said "Francis has so much talent he could start for us at right cornerback."

Landry had said before training camp that Fellows was "our best pure cover man because of his speed and quickness."

However, Landry was critical of Fellows' inability "to finish off more plays."

Fellows had 67 tackles and five interceptions in 1986.

Barksdale, starting his third season in the NFL, joined the Raiders as a free agent in 1985 and spent a year on the injured resrve.

His biggest NFL day was 179 yards on six receptions against the

ROD BARKSDALE

Indianapolis Colts. Barksdale caught 18 passes for 434 yards.

He has run a 10.2 in the 100 meters at Arizona. He was sixth in the 1984 NCAA championships in the 200 meters.

"He can burn it," said club President Tex Schramm. "With the speed he has, he has real value."

Schramm said Fellows had been on the market from the start of training camp.

"We're interested in doing anything we can to try to improve the club," Schramm said.

Asked if he thought he had been traded fairly by the Cowboys, Fellows said "not exactly. I'll be more appreciated by the Raiders."

Schramm said the Cowboys looked at offensive tackles but couldn't work a deal.

Still missing from camp is holdout linebacker Jeff Rohrer, who is being fined $1,000 per day until he shows, and first round draft pick Danny Noonan of Nebraska.

Rohrer has threatened to retire if he doesn't get a big increase over the $192,000 he was scheduled to make this season.

Rozier knows he needs to get it going

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Like so many other Heisman Trophy winners, Houston running back Mike Rozier has yet to live up to his pro potential.

But he's retained his relaxed sense of humor.

"I'd like to be a role model, but I guess that's out of the question," Rozier said. "I like to joke around too much. That keeps me going.

"If I didn't do that, I think I'd be mad at the world."

Going into this third season with the Oilers, Rozier is only angry with his lack of production.

"I haven't done anything yet," Rozier said at the end of a long day of preseason workouts. "When you win the Heisman, they expect you to come out and be Superman."

In his two seasons with the Oilers, Rozier hasn't produced super stats.

He rushed 462 yards in 14 games in 1985 after playing his first two pro seasons in the United States Football League.

Last year, Rozier rushed 662 yards in an injury-shortened season, catching 24 passes for another 180 yards for 842 yards in total offense.

But he wants more.

"I just want 1,000 yards and I'll be happy, that would be a beginning," Rozier said. "I think I would have gotten 1,000 yards last season but I got hurt."

Rozier missed the final three games of the season with a knee injury that required off-season surgery.

Now he's back for the 1987 season and he'll likely have to share the ball with first-round choice Alonzo Highsmith, who is still unsigned.

"I'd like to get the ball more, if I do, I can accomplish more," Rozier said. "As long as I don't get the ball, things aren't going to come together for me."

Houston Oilers' running back Mike Rozier glances over to the sidelines during the team's summer camp in San Angelo. Rozier, a former Heisman Trophy winner with Nebraska, will be starting his fourth year with the Oilers.

The Oilers also intend to utilize Warren Moon's passing skills more than last season, when the Oilers had to win four of their final seven games to finish with a 5-11 record.

Rozier would like to be a part of that passing attack.

"I don't care if I catch the ball one time or run the ball one time," he said. "I just want to win. Everybody loves winners."

Rozier led the nation with 2,148 rushing yards his senior season at Nebraska and tied an NCAA record with 11 100-yard performances. He hasn't had a 100-yard game since joining the Oilers.

Rozier accepts his share of the blame for the Oilers' lack of offensive production. To get his 1,000 yards last season, Rozier would have had to average 112 yards in his final three games.

"I've had some injuries and mental mistakes," Rozier said. "Sometimes the line didn't block and sometimes the team didn't play as well as it should.

"But this is a growing team and everyone is going to make mistakes. You cut out the mistakes and everybody concentrates, and we'll be all right."

Rangers ready for Howe

DALLAS (AP) — With Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine wanting pitcher Steve Howe moved up to the American League team immediately, club president Mike Stone says he thinks something will happen this week.

Howe was suspended by the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, which governs the minor leagues, in 1986, but the drug-related suspension was lifted last month and the former Los Angeles Dodger reliever signed a contract and joined the Oklahoma City 89ers.

He also agreed to participate in a drug-rehabilitation after-care program with the 89ers, a Rangers farm club.

Howe's progress with the 89ers prompted the Rangers to inform baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's office last week that the club was ready to bring him up, but the Rangers were told that Ueberroth was on the West Coast on personal business and would not be available until later this week.

Valentine said Sunday he thought Howe was ready to join the Rangers.

"He could help us right now," Valentine said. "I think he could have helped us four days ago.

"He's throwing with consistent velocity; he's throwing with consistent control. Reports on everything he has done off the field have been exemplary," Valentine said.

Valentine said if Howe pitched well in relief Sunday for Oklahoma City — Howe pitched one inning, retiring the side on five pitches but hitting one batter — he would like to have him called up today.

"We didn't sign Steve Howe with the intention of him being in the minor leagues," Valentine said.

Howe saved 50 games with Los Angeles from 1980 until he was released in 1985 because of cocaine dependency. He later was signed by the Minnesota Twins but again was released because of drug problems.

Pelluer battles to rebuild shaken confidence

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Young Steve Pelluer is rebuilding his spirit at this 27th Dallas Cowboys' training camp.

His confidence was badly shaken last year when he became the starter after Danny White suffered a broken wrist.

With Pelluer at quarterback, Dallas went 1-7.

"It was a tough and trying time, but I got some great experience and I feel it will help me immensely down the road," Pelluer said.

"I started pressing and put a lot of pressure on myself, and I hope I won't ever do that again."

Pelluer had trouble reading the confusing maze of NFL defenses and was sacked 47 times. He was battered and bruised from the experience.

"I had some lower back problems from it, but I'm fine now," Pelluer said. "I just have to make sure I stretch and warmup properly."

Pelluer has a reputation of being a great scrambler, but the Cowboys' coaches didn't want him to do that last year.

"I started out scrambling away from the pursuit, but the coaches discouraged doing that," he said. "I thought my scrambling could be a positive tool for the offense. However, the coaches didn't want me flying out of there at the first sign of trouble."

Pelluer hasn't conceded the starting job to White although he realizes it will be tough edging out the veteran.

"I'm No. 2, but I don't feel I'm out of the race for No. 1," Pelluer said. "I have to be prepared to start every game this year."

Davis enters 30-30 club; Scott masters Padres

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The door to baseball's elite 30-30 club must be located in the upper left field stands at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium because that's where Eric Davis knocked to enter.

The 25-year-old outfielder became only the seventh player in history to hit 30 home runs and steal 30 bases in the same season when he knocked a towering drive off the facade of the upper deck leading off the bottom of the 11th inning Sunday.

Davis' 30th homer — he also stole his 38th and 39th bases — gave the Cincinnati Reds a 5-4 victory over San Francisco that stretched their National League West lead over the second-place Giants to three games.

Davis said he wasn't really concerned about joining Willie Mays (1956, 1957), Hank Aaron (1963), Bobby Bonds (1969, 1973, 1975, 1977, 1978), Dale Murphy (1983), Tommy Harper (1970) and Ken Williams (1922) as the only players in the 30-30 club.

"I was just looking to hit the ball somewhere and get on and score a run," Davis said. "I knew he (reliever Jeff Robinson) was going to give me a pitch to hit."

With two months left in the season, Davis has a solid chance to become the first player with 40 homers and 40 stolen bases in a single season.

Meanwhile, St. Louis beat Pittsburgh 9-1 for its third victory in a row after a seven-game losing streak and upped its lead in the NL East to six games over Montreal, which lost to New York 7-4. Elsewhere, it was Houston 6, San Diego 0; Chicago 3, Philadelphia 2 in 10 innings; and Atlanta 10, Los Angeles 5.

The San Diego Padres' John Kruk tries to disrupt a double play during sixth-inning action Sunday against the Astros in the Astrodome. Despite the effort, Houston's Bill Doran was able to throw out Benito Santiago at first.

Dave Concepcion's first homer of the season had given the Reds a 3-2 lead in the sixth. The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Chili Davis' two-run homer.

Astros 6, Padres 0

Mike Scott pitched a three-hitter over eight innings and Alan Ashby homered, doubled and singled and drove in three runs. Scott, 12-7, who has won all of his nine decisions against San Diego in Houston, held the Padres hitless until Tony Gwynn singled with two outs in the fifth.

The Astros took a 3-0 lead off Mark Grant in the first inning. Gerald Young led off with a single and went to third on Grant's wild pickoff throw. Billy Hatcher walked and when Grant again threw the ball away on a pickoff attempt, Young scored and Hatcher took third. One out later, Ashby hit his 10th home run.

Cardinals 9, Pirates 1

Joe Magrane pitched an 11-hit complete game in 103-degree St. Louis heat and Terry Pendleton drove in four runs with a homer and double. The Cardinals, who had lost seven straight before the Pirates came to town, swept three games from Pittsburgh, which has dropped seven in a row.

"I just went into the game telling myself I wanted to go nine innings," Magrane said. "I come from the University of Arizona, where it's hot, too — in fact, it's scorching. It's not quite like it was out there today, but it's not like I'd never pitched when it's hot before, either."

Mets 7, Expos 4

Ron Darling and Roger McDowell combined on a four-hitter and Keith Hernandez drove in New York's first three runs with a pair of doubles and a grounder as the Mets climbed within one-half game of the second-place Expos in the NL East.

Darling gave up two singles in 6 2-3 innings but walked eight. McDowell allowed a two-run single to Tim Wallach in the seventh after Darling walked the bases loaded before earning his 16th save.

Hernandez hit RBI doubles in the first and fifth innings off Bob Sebra and had a run-scoring grounder in the third. Kevin McReynolds had a two-run single in the fifth.

Cubs 3, Phillies 2

Chicago second baseman Ryne Sandberg ended a Philadelphia threat with a slick fielding play and then drove in two runs, including the game-winner with a single over a pulled-in outfield in the 10th inning.

After the Cubs tied the score with single runs in the eighth and ninth innings off Philadelphia relief ace Steve Bedrosian — Manny Trillo homered with two out in the ninth — Leon Durham drew a walk off Jeff Calhoun to open the 10th and and was sacrificed to second.

Luis Quinones also walked and the fourth ball was a wild pitch. Durham took third and scored when Sandberg singled over the right fielder's head.

It was only the fifth time this season that Bedrosian, who leads the majors with 30 saves, had failed in a save situation.

Bedrosian relieved Shane Rawley to start the eighth after the Phillies scored twice off Rick Sutcliffe in the top of the inning on Milt Thompson's homer and Glenn Wilson's RBI single.

With two out in the Phillies' third and Steve Jeltz on second, Thompson singled throught the box. Sandberg gloved the ball and caught Jeltz in a rundown between home and third.

Braves 10, Dodgers 5

Paul Runge's second major-league homer ignited a six-run fourth inning that also included a three-run double by Ted Simmons. Winner Zane Smith pitched shutout ball for six innings before the Dodgers scored all their runs in the seventh.

Strange collects $130,328

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — With the PGA Championship starting on Thursday, Curtis Strange can't spare himself the luxury of enjoying his victory in the $742,043 St. Jude Classic golf tournament.

"What I'm going to have to do is get myself ready. I have never played particularly well after winning a tournament," Strange said after Sunday's one-stroke victory over Russ Cochran, Tom Kite, Denis Watson and Mike Donald.

"Rest is probably the key," said Strange, an 11-time winner since joining the PGA Tour in 1977. "This tournament (played in 98-degree temperatures) takes a lot out of you."

Strange's second title of the year wasn't assured until the 72nd hole. He came to final hole tied with five players at 12 under par, and figured he'd need a birdie to earn a spot in a playoff.

When he learned that both Russ Cochran and Mike Donald, playing in the group immediately ahead of him, had parred the par-5 548-yard finishing hole, Strange knew he had the tournament in his grasp.

Strange, in fact, got it up and down from 93 yards, sinking a six-foot birdie putt to cap a round of 69 for a four-day score of 275 over the 7,282-yard, par-72 Colonial Country Club course.

In collecting a winner's check for $130,328, Strange moved into second place on the money-winning list with $530,885. There were checks of $47,787 for the players who shared second at 276. Watson closed with a 66, Kite shot 67and Donald and Cochran had 69s.

Fuzzy Zoeller had a 70 on Sunday to finish alone at 277 and Bob Tway, the defending PGA champion, was at 278 after a 69.

Willie Wood and Gil Morgan each had 66s to finish at 279, a figure achieve by Curt Byrum and Ronnie Black after 67s.

Andy Dillard, who shared the 54-hole lead with Strange, was in the title chase until he double-bogeyed the 12th and 16th holes. He finished at 280 after a 74.

Royals' rookie has a perfect day

By The Associated Press

Rookie Kevin Seitzer had a royal feeling after going 6-for-6, hitting two homers, driving in seven runs and scoring four times.

"I'll probably never have a feeling like I had today," said Seitzer, who tied or broke several team records Sunday in leading host Kansas City over Boston 13-5. "Everything was just perfect today. I caught every break I could possibly catch."

Seitzer's play this season has allowed the Royals to shift perennial All-Star George Brett to first base. Seitzer, selected in the 11th round of the 1983 June free agent draft, hit .319 in 129 games for Class AAA Omaha last season.

Seitzer hit his eighth homer leading off the third inning against starter Bob Stanley, 3-11. He had an RBI single in the fourth, a three-run homer in the fifth, giving the Royals an 8-3 lead, and added a two-run double in the eighth.

"I was telling my wife last night that things have gone so well and I haven't had a four-hit game in the big leagues. I've had three and couldn't go any further," Seitzer said. "Today, when I got that fourth one, that was the perfect day right there, especially after I had just talked to her about this last night."

His 13 total bases tied a team record set by Brett, and the seven RBI also matched the club record. Seitzer is now batting .324 with 55 runs batted in, both tops on the team.

Seitzer is only the second Kansas City player to have six hits in a game. Bob Oliver, also a rookie, had six hits on May 4, 1969, against California.

He's the first player to have six hits this season and the eighth to drive in seven runs in one game. The last player to go 6-for-6 was Cleveland's Jorge Orta on June 15, 1980. Rennie Stennett of Pittsburgh set the modern major-league record for a nine-inning game when he had seven hits on Sept. 16, 1975.

"I wanted to have a perfect day and I thought if I got that sixth at-bat, maybe it wouldn't happen for me," Seitzer said. Up to now, I had brutal Sundays. I hate playing Sundays because I never seem to do any good. I guess today kind of turned it around."

Seitzer played with tape around his left wrist due to an injury sustained during the Royals' visit to New York earlier in the week.

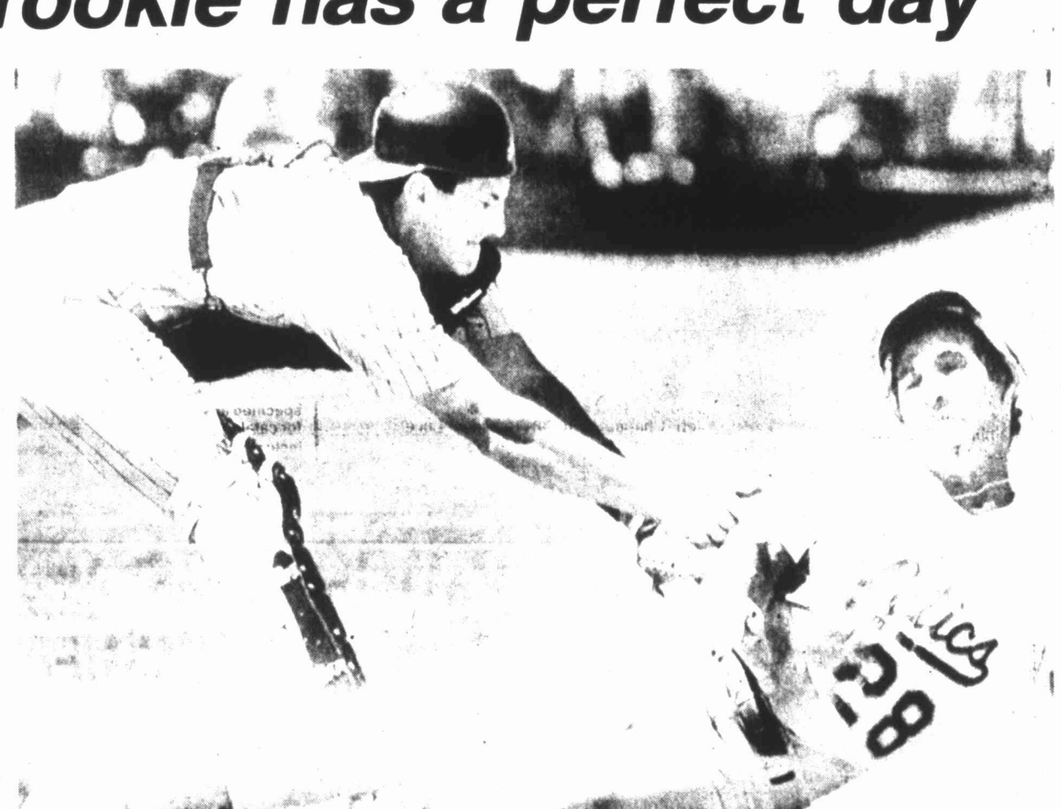

Mark Gubicza, 9-10, allowed eight hits, including Dwight Evans' 21st and 22nd homers, in 8 1-3 innings. Jerry Don Gleaton got the final two outs.

Rangers 5, Orioles 2

Bobby tt pitched five-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings and tied a major-league record by striking out four batters in one inning as Texas beat visiting Baltimore.

Witt, 5-5, struck out a season-high 11 batters and was backed by home runs by Geno Petralli and Pete Incaviglia.

Witt became the 18th pitcher in major-league history to strike out four batters in an inning when he fanned Ray Knight, Terry Kennedy, Mike Young and Gerhart in the second. The last pitcher to strike out four in an inning was Houston's Mike Scott last Sept. 3.

Yankees 8, Tigers 5

Before 46,212 at Yankee Stadium, Dan Pasqua singled three times and drove in two runs and Mike Pagliarulo hit a two-run homer, leading New York over Detroit.

The Yankees won twice in the three-game series and increased their AL East lead to three games over the Tigers.

Don Mattingly, and Dave Winfield also had three hits in a 17-hit attack as New York won for the sixth time in seven games.

Rick Rhoden, 14-6, allowed five runs on 12 hits in eight-plus innings and Dave Righetti got his 20th save.

Mariners 5, Angels 4

John Moses scored Dave Valle in the ninth inning with a suicide squeeze bunt to lift visiting Seattle over California.

Valle led off the inning with a single against reliever Greg Minton, 3-2. He advanced on a chopper by Domingo Ramos, and moved to third when third baseman Doug DeCinces' late throw to second sailed into right field for an error. One out later, Moses laid down a bunt up the first-base line and Minton's only play was to first, allowing Moses to score.

Mike Kingery gave Seattle the early lead with a grand slam in the first inning.

Blue Jays 11, Indians 5

Ernie Whitt drove in four runs with a homer and a bases-loaded triple and Lloyd Moseby drove in three runs to lead host Toronto over Cleveland. The start of the game was delayed three hours, 45 minutes by rain.

Toronto got off to a fast start with homers by Moseby and Whitt in the first inning off Darrell Akerfelds, 0-2.

Jesse Barfield singled to open the second and Rance Mulliniks followed with a walk. Willie Upshaw singled, scoring Barfield for a 3-0 lead, and two outs later, Moseby walked to load the bases.

Whitt then lined a triple that skidded under the glove of right fielder Cory Snyder for a 6-0 lead.

Athletics 6, Twins 5

Jose Canseco singled to score the winning run with two out in the 11th inning as Oakland edged Minnesota.

Oakland's second consecutive victory in the three-game series moved the Athletics into second place, a half-game ahead of California and a game behind the AL West-leading Twins.

Canseco's hit off reliever Jeff Reardon, 5-6, scored Luis Polonia, who had singled and taken second on a throw home that nailed Alfredo Griffin at the plate. Griffin had opened the inning by reaching on an error by second baseman Al Newman, then stole second.

White Sox 7, Brewers 3

Bill Long and Bobby Thigpen combined on a five-hitter and Steve Lyons hit a two-run homer as Chicago took 3-of-4 at Milwaukee.

Texas Leaguers set to meet

Texas Little League managers and coaches are urged to attend an important meeting at 7:30 Wednesday night at the Spanish Inn.

Volleyball practice starts Monday

All girls who plan to play volleyball for Big Spring this year should be at the gym next Monday at 9 a.m. Coach Elaine Stone said two-a-day practices will begin then.

Stone also reminded all players to remember to bring all filled out forms to her before Monday.

Aldridges win Country Club golf

Ronnie and Sherri Aldridge finished with a two-day total of 128 to win the championship flight of the couples tournament Sunday at the Big Spring Country Club. The team of Johnny and LaNell Guelker finished second at 132; and Mike Weaver and Glenadine Williams teamed for third at 133.

John and Carolyn Freeman won the first flight with a 141, one stroke ahead of second place finishers James Ballous and Mary Ruth Robertson. Bob and Dee Rogers shot a 145 for third place in the flight.

Ron Scott and Bernice Jordan won the second flight with at 147; and the teams of Jay and Esher Guelker and Sam and Carolyn Farmer finished second and third.

Andretti Jr. whips Andretti Sr.

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Michael Andretti took advantage of his father's continuing hard luck to win the Marlboro 500 Sunday at Michigan International Speedway, the fastest 500-mile race in Indy-car history.

The younger Andretti inherited the lead when Mario Andretti fell out of the race with an engine failure after building a two-lap lead over his son just past the halfway point of the 250-lap event.

Denver cruises to first arena title

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Whit Taylor passed for four touchdowns, including three to Gary Mullen, as the Denver Dynamite defeated the Pittsburgh Gladiators 45-16 to win the first Arena Football League championship game Saturday.

Denver never trailed in the contest, one of the lowest scoring games in the league's first season, and the Gladiators were shut out until 3:43 into the fourth quarter.

Mullen, 24, out of West Virginia University, was named the game's most valuable player after his second and third touchdown receptions put the game well out of reach early in the final quarter.

German women dethrone U.S.

WEST VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Steffi Graf led the West Germans to their first Federation Cup title by keying a stirring comeback in the doubles final, dethroning the United States for the women's world team tennis championship.

Graf and Claudia Kohde-Kilsch combined to win the deciding doubles 1-6, 7-5, 6-4 over Chris Evert and Pam Shriver of the United States after a split of the earlier singles.

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR OIL AND GAS WASTE
DISPOSAL WELL PERMIT
Chevron U.S.A. Inc., P.O. Box 1150, Midland, Texas 79702 has applied to the Railroad Commission of Texas for a permit to dispose of produced salt water or other oil and gas waste by well injection into a porous formation not productive of oil or gas.
The applicant proposes to dispose of oil and gas waste into the San Andres formation of the Lillian Spalding, et al #2. The proposed disposal well is in the Knott, West Field, located 15 miles northwest of Big Spring in Howard County.
The waste water will be injected into the strata in the subsurface depth interval from 2300 to 2450 feet.
LEGAL AUTHORITY:
Chapter 27 of the Texas Water Code, as amended, Title 3 of the Natural Resources Code, as amended, and the Statewide Rules of the Oil and Gas Division of the Railroad Commission of Texas.
Requests for a public hearing from persons who can show they are adversely affected, or requests for further information concerning any aspect of the application should be submitted in writing, within fifteen days of publication, to the Underground Injection Control Section, Oil and Gas Division, Railroad Commission of Texas, Drawer 12967, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711 (Telephone 512/445-1373).

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1987

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Make it your mission today to make as many new contacts and acquaintances as possible. If you can, sidestep a legal matter which could have adverse effects.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A meeting with an outside business contact to work out deals, etc., will be a great boon to your future success.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to use your creative side to lighten up your daily routines. If you wish, you can delight an important co-worker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Buy a fine gift for your mate, and make time to visit relatives together, preferably in the afternoon.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) This is a banner evening for entertaining interesting persons at your home and showing your skill as a host.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Let your allies know how much you appreciate them, but be short and succinct. Attend a group affair this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Have a private discussion with your kin and find out what's expected of you. Use your social skills more effectively.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Avoid a person who has an eye on your assets and could cause trouble — possibly a broker of some kind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact the most influential and highly principled person you know for help with one of your private interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Let yourself go! It's time to get out of that rut you've been in for so long and unwind — get a new lease on life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have been angry with your mate for some time. Quietly discuss it tonight and restore harmony.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Look to the experience of older friends to make your group amusements much more enjoyable.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look around your house for an easy project which will not only beautify it, but add to the value as well.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have tremendous beauty, so be careful not to spoil him or her. While still young, teach your progeny that "beauty is only skin deep," and the importance of being useful and self-sufficient. Your child may have that restless, star-struck tendency.

Local VA installs clinic at air base

ABILENE — The first VA follow-up clinic held at the Dyess U.S. Air Force Hospital on July 23, 1987 was very successful, according to Conrad Alexander, Director, Big Spring VA Medical Center.

He said that the clinic's success at Dyess was because of veterans support, adding that the assistance from volunteers from several service organizations was extremely helpful in the clinic.

Clinic dates for August will be Aug. 13 and 27, from 8 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. The clinic will continue to be scheduled on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month thereafter, Alexander said.

To enter Dyess Air Force Base, it is preferred for the veteran to use the VA shuttle which is located at the old entrance on Military Drive, where parking will be available.

Rehab center named best of 1986

LINDALE — The New Medico Rehabilitation Center of Texas, as part of The New Medico Head Injury System has recently been honored by the National Association of Rehabilitaiton Proffesionals in the Private Sector.

The award, 1986 Rehabilitation Facility of the Year, was awarded to the New Medico system in recognition of its leadership role as a private sector provider of thefull range of head injury rehabilitation services, according to Linda Beheler, Public Information officer of the company.

The New Medico Rehabilitation Center of Texas, located 70 miles east of Dallas, serves the four-state region of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico.

The state's largest head injury rehab center specializes in behavioral, cognitive and occupational therapy to help head-injured clients reach their fullest degree of independence, Beheler said.

"It's an honor to be given such an award," said Dr. Barry Rath, Clinical Director of the Center. "We're very committed to our work and pleased to be recognized for our efforts."

Specialists and their fields listed

LUBBOCK — Some people procrastinate about finding a physician until an emergency arises, thus leaving the decision to chance. Linda Russell, medical staff affairs director at Methodist Hospital, recently listed specialists and definitions of their field.

She noted that, while some specialists may take patients without a physician's referral, others require referral from the doctor the patient usually sees.

Some specialists and their fields include:

- Allergist/Immunologist — treatment and diagnosis of disorders of the immune system.
- Anesthesiologist — pain relief and maintenance or restoration of a stable condition during an operation or obstectric or diagnostic procedure.
- Cardiologist — diseases and disorders of the heart.
- Family Practice Physician — diagnosis and treatment of illnesses and disorders of all age groups.
- Gastroenterologist — diseases or disorders of the digestive system.
- General Surgeon — surgical procedures.
- Internist — diagnosis and treatment of disorders and diseases in adults.
- Nephrologist — diseases or disorders of the kidneys.
- Obstetrician/Gynecologist — pregnancy and childbirth and/or disorders or diseases of the female reproductive system.
- Oncologist — diagnosis and treatment of all types of cancer and benign tumors.
- Pediatrician — diseases and disorders in children.
- Rheumatologist — arthritis or rheumatic diseases.
- Urologist — diseases or disorders of the urinary tract or male reproductive system.

Sports medicine seminar planned

MIDLAND — Midland Memorial Hospital's Sports Medicine Program will sponsor "Coaches and Trainers: Sports Medicine Update '87," Tuesday August 4, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Country Villa in Midland, according to Lisa Ball, director of public relations.

Participants will learn how to facilitate early intervention of prevention and treatment, how to evaluate and diagnose injuries, how to identify current management of injuries and how to analyze the impact of cost containment measures in sports medicine, Ball said.

The seminar is accredited with six contact hours from Midland Memorial Hospital and Advanced Academic Training and 0.6 continuing education units from Midland College, she added.

For more information about the seminar, contact Maudie Rains, Director of Education, at 685-1638.

Basin touted as retirement location

MIDLAND — The Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce, in connection with the Private Industry Council, have formed an independent organization for the purpose of promoting the Permian Basin as a retirement community.

The Midland/Odessa Health and Retirement Endeavor was officialy established when Lois Wetendorf was named as Project Coordinator of the group, she said.

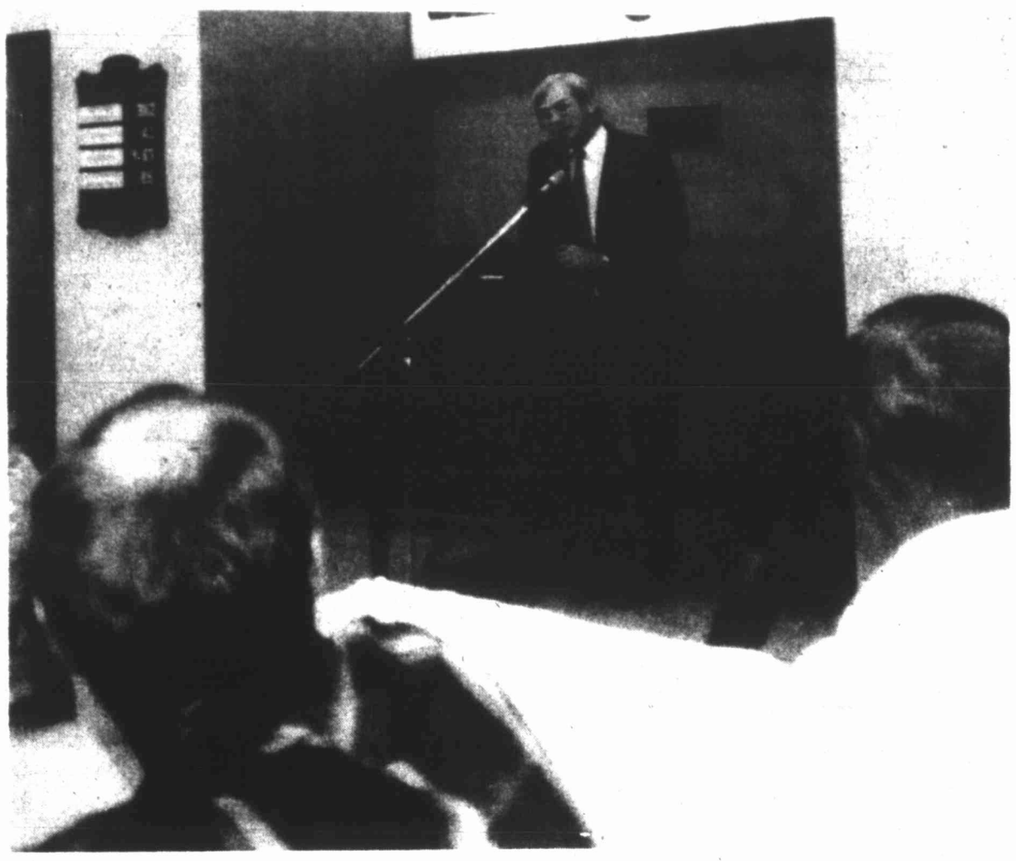

Wetendorf attended the University of Texas and has been active in numerous civic organizations in Midland prior to joining the Endeavor.

The program is a joint economic development project of the Chambers and will stimulate economic diversification through the establishment of an expanded market base, Wetendorf said.

Money will be generated into the area to enhance the development of services for retirees which will create additional job opportunities in the Basin, she added.

Specific target areas for the program are those parents nearing retirement ages whose children currently live in the area, residents who are retiring ranging from ages 55 and up and company retirees who are temporarily Basin residents or who do business in the area, she said.

Climate, sedcurity, affordable housing, quality health care and medical facilities, convenient shopping and recreation are all Basin assets which are attractive to the 55+ age groups, Wetendorf said.

Sobriety celebration

Conrad Alexander, director of the Big Spring Veteran's Administration Medical Center, recently hosted a Sobriety Celebration at the Salvation Army chapel. More than 150 veterans and their families attended the reunion of persons who had completed the VA Alcohol and Drug Treatment Program during its 13-year existence.

Mice hold key to heart attacks

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) — Studies of blood cholesterol in mice have led to the discovery of genes that appear to govern susceptibility to heart disease, a researcher has found.

Similar genes might one day be found in humans, possibly enabling the identification of people at especially high or low risk of atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, said Beverly Paigen of Oakland Children's Hospital in Oakland, Calif. She spoke Wednesday at a gathering of geneticists at Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor.

Paigen studied mice with different blood levels of high-density lipoproteins, sometimes called "good cholesterol" because it protects against heart disease.

Mice with high levels of HDLs are much less susceptible to hardening of the arteries than are mice with low levels of the substance, Paigen found.

She said the two new genes, called Ath-1 and Ath-2, are related to levels of the HDLs. Mice that are highly susceptible to atherosclerosis when fed a high-fat diet have low levels of protective HDL cholesterol. They also have a form of the Ath genes that is different from the form found in two strains of mice that are resistant to the development of atherosclerosis.

The resistant strains of mice have correspondingly high levels of HDL cholesterol, Paigen said.

Many studies in recent years have suggested that HDL cholesterol protects against heart disease, and thus prolongs life. Heart disease is the nation's leading killer, and atherosclerosis, marked by the build-up of fats and cholesterol in arteries, is one of the most important causes of heart disease.

When atherosclerosis blocks the flow of blood in the coronary arteries that nourish the heart, a heart attack can result. Similar clogging of the arteries that supply the brain can lead to a stroke.

Paigen thinks the genes she has identified in mice may also exist in humans.

Experts criticize 'dumping'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government could reduce "patient dumping" by enforcing its own laws, medical experts told a House panel, but they stressed that hospitals will keep turning away the poor until someone pays for their care.

"The real problem is that people have no insurance," Judith Waxman, an attorney with the National Health Law Program, said Wednesday at a hearing called by the House Government Operations subcommittee on human resources and intergovernmental relations.

No matter how many loopholes are closed, she said, "many hospitals will go to great lengths to avoid treating people who have no insurance... Unfortunately, horror stories will continue to occur until there is some kind of universal coverage."

Dumping occurs when a hospital emergency room refuses to treat a sick or injured patient, transfers the patient to another hospital, or subjects a patient to such a long delay that he finally leaves.

One witness said 250,000 emergency patients are transferred each year for economic reasons. Others noted that 37 million people in the United States lack medical insurance and that hospitals provided charity care worth $7 billion last year.

They said the federal government should either help those hospitals or make sure individuals are covered.

Among the horror stories presented to the panel:

- Zettie Mae Hill of Somerville, Tenn., a retired textile worker, said her diabetic neighbor, a young carpenter, was physically removed from an emergency room and left in the hospital parking lot after an ambulance had brought him there on doctor's orders. She called the hospital and was told the man wasn't admitted because he had unpaid medical bills. He died the next day.
- Jesse Green of Brooklyn, N.Y., said his roommate, Iva Boyce, a TWA flight attendant, became ill while on strike and had no insurance. Green took Boyce to a hospital built under a federal program guaranteeing care to the poor. But the hospital refused to admit Boyce, although his temperature was 105.8 degrees, until lawyers intervened. Boyce had advanced tuberculosis. He is much better now.

In a statement distributed at the hearing, Jack W. Owen, executive vice president of the American Hospital Association, said inappropriate patient transfers are "signs of a health care system under financial stress."

But he said some transfers are justifiable and in fact necessary to get patients the best care.

Several witnesses criticized the Health Care Financing Administration for dragging its feet on a 1986 law that bars the transfer of medically unstable patients.

Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., the moving force behind the law, said HCFA hasn't proposed any regulations and has received only a handful of complaints.

"With 6,000 hospitals in the United States, it just boggles my mind," he told the subcommittee.

Poll: AIDS changing sexual behavior

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nearly one in five Americans say they have changed their sexual behavior out of fear of contracting the deadly disease AIDS, according to a poll published today.

One in 10 Americans now personally know someone who has either tested positive for the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus, contracted AIDS or died of the disease, says a nationwide poll conducted for the Los Angeles Times.

The 2,095 poll respondents were about equally divided on how they would react to people who have tested positive for AIDS. Forty-two percent said they'd befriend such patients, up from 35 percent in the last poll conducted 19 months ago.

The number of people who said they'd avoid AIDS patients "as a health precaution" decreased from 47 percent to 41 percent, the newspaper reported.

The July 24-28 survey found the number of people in the general public who have changed their sexual behavior because of AIDS has tripled during the past 19 months, from 6 percent to 18 percent.

The poll showed a substantial increase of knowledge and concern about AIDS since a similar Times poll in December 1985, said poll director I.A. Lewis.

The percentage of Americans who ranked AIDS as the disease they fear most more than doubled, from 12 percent to 30 percent, the poll found.

Anxiety about the disease was highest among blacks and single people under age 30.

Doctor surrenders license, vanishes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Board of Medical Examiners has voted to accept the medical license surrendered by Dr. Harold L. Wood, who earlier reached a $2 million settlement with relatives of a woman who died of untreated cervical cancer.

After a hearing in November, the board placed the Killeen physician on probation for 10 years and allowed him to continue practicing medicine in Texas. Wood reached a $2 million settlement in 1985 with the survivors of Shilla Wheat, a Killeen woman who died of cervical cancer several years after the disease was discovered but not treated.

Last month, the board voted not to discipline Wood after receiving complaints about the treatment of two female patients, including a woman whose infant died three days after birth.

Before the June meeting, the board received a letter from Wood notifying them that he was surrendering his license. It did not act on the letter then.

Dr. G. Valter Brindley Jr., executive director of the medical board, told the Austin American-Statesman that the board voted to accept Wood's license Friday because the doctor apparently has left the state.

"He's written to us and said he no longer wants to practice medicine in Texas," Brindley said.

The board has written and tried to call Wood, and a board investigator who visited Wood's office in Killeen reported it was closed, he said.
