Webb cancer unit studied

The Webb Steering Committee today heard a proposal to make Big Spring the site of one of five cancer treatment clinics in Texas.

Dr. P.W. Malone asked the committee to consider using the base hospital as a modern cancer treatment clinic, serving a regional area. According to Malone, the facility could be established under the Malone-Hogan Foundation as a non-profit institution, not financially affiliated with Malone-Hogan Hospital or Clinic.

Said Malone, "We have a $3.6 million facility filled with $500,000 worth of equipment here. If funded through bequests and donations, we could have one of five cancer treatment centers in Texas." Others are in Dallas, Houston, El Paso, and McAllen.

Malone appealed to the civic pride of the committee telling them that he had informed a Midland physician "that I'd support him if he started one there, and that I'd expect his support if we started one here." He further stressed that the facility would require "a few hundred thousand dollars worth of additional equipment," such as a linear accelerator and cobalt treatment equipment. He said some funds might be available through the D.W. Anderson Clinic in Houston.

Malone also stressed that the clinic would be able to complement the program considered by Texas Tech to establish an extension for med students through Big Spring hospitals. "There is enough room in the facility for both," he said.

The only serious problem Malone faced, according to the committee, was that the federal government is unlikely to simply grant the facility to his foundation. However, they agreed to contact the government on the possibilities offered to implement Malone's plan.

In other action, the committee made its final changes in the base re-use plan which will be sent to Washington today. The plan will be studied by the federal agencies concerned with the dispersal of Webb AFB.

Although the committee was unclear about exactly how the re-use plan might prove to be binding, they took action to indicate their independence from the rigid procedures of the plan.

The plan, which is over 200 pages long, begins with nine recommendations. The committee, in sending off its final version, recommended significant deletions and corrections in the basic recommendations of the report. The committee seemed concerned that by allowing something they were not in complete agreement with to remain in the re-use plan, they might later be held in an unfavorable position by federal authorities looking to the plan as the blueprint of Big Spring's intentions.

Several of the corrections were recommended by Winston Wrinkle, KBST president, in connection with Capehart housing. According to Wrinkle, even the mention of a "target date" for the release of the housing onto the market might force the sudden dropping of too much inexpensive housing into the Big Spring market with potentially disastrous results.

Finally, the committee again went into closed session to discuss progress in industrial prospects. No industrial prospect has yet committed itself seriously enough to be mentioned publicly.

Bus hijacker caught, two hostages dead

NEW YORK (AP) — An embittered 26-year-old seaman charged with initiating a siege of terror that left two dead aboard a hijacked bus and nearly paralyzed a giant airport told police today he took over the bus because he was broke.

Sources close to the investigation told The Associated Press that Luis Robinson told them he was headed back to his ship, the USS Detroit, based in Bath, Maine, but only had enough money for bus fare to Hartford, Conn.

Robinson was booked today on charges that he hijacked the bus, shot two people to death, injured three others, then held authorities at bay during the siege for about nine hours at holiday-crowded John F. Kennedy International Airport.

He surrendered shortly before midnight after unsuccessfully demanding $6 million and a plane to fly him to Cuba.

Alert okayed by state panel

Alert Ambulances were checked again in June by the Texas Department of Health Resources and found to be in compliance with all state requirements.

A spokesman from the Emergency Medical Service Division of the TDHR in Public Health Region 2 in Lubbock said today that the ambulances were checked again in late June and were approved.

Earlier, they had fallen short of some of the state requirements. State requirements are that attendants have had first aid training and that a list of splints and bandages set by the state be in all ambulances at all times.

Action/reaction: Coliseum delay

Q. What is the delay on the building of the coliseum and when is the designated completion date? There has not been a worker on the outside in some of this beautiful weather.

A. A spokesman at the college said that the contractor met recently with Dr. Charles Hays, president; Mike Bruner, business manager and Dr. Charles Warren, board chairman, and told them they are waiting for steel which had to be reordered. Work is continuing inside and the completion date is still set at Nov. 1.

Offbeat: Passenger survey

DALLAS (AP) — A drunk passenger or the choking smoke from tobacco-using travelers doesn't bother airline passengers near as much as a crying infant does, a recently released survey shows.

The survey, released by the Airline Passengers Association (APA), showed that 57.2 per cent of more than 10,000 respondents would rather sit near passengers who smoked or drank than near a crying infant.

The APA said the survey showed that frequent air travelers feel airlines should provide separate seating for passengers with infants.

An average APA member takes 40 flights each year, the group says. More than 70 per cent of those polled favored keeping present smoking-non-smoking seating arrangements on airlines. Some, however, said cigar and pipe smokers should be further segregated.

The Civil Aeronautics Board has proposed regulations that would ban all smoking on all flights. Only 28.9 per cent of the APA respondents agreed.

Asked if passengers who consume alcoholic beverages should have a section of their own, 81.5 per cent voted no.

Army seizes Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The army seized control of Pakistan today after four months of political unrest and the threat of new violence between Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto's supporters and foes. Radio Pakistan said Bhutto and leaders of both his Pakistan People's party and the opposition Pakistan National Alliance were placed in "temporary protective custody," but only the prime minister was identified.

Gas pipeline talked

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — Canada's National Energy Board says a pipeline to carry natural gas from Alaska's North Slope and the Mackenzie River delta to markets in the United States and Canada should be built along the Alaska Highway. The board's recommendation now goes to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, whose cabinet is expected to approve the $8 billion project in late August.

New Turkey government

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Former Premier Suleyman Demirel began trying to form a new conservative coalition government today following Premier Bulent Ecevit's defeat on his first vote of confidence in the National Assembly. Demirel said he hopes to have a new government within 10 days. Political observers said he probably will wind up duplicating the ineffective coalition he headed for the past two years.

Underwater record set

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Charles Roberts and Gary Grooms are claiming a new underwater swimming record — two and two-thirds miles.

The mark was set Monday as they made eight trips around Rattlesnake Island in Lake Travis northwest of Austin. Originally the pair planned to swim four miles underwater.

Sponsors of the swim said it netted about $500 for the local Athletes vs. MS (multiple sclerosis) drive. "The main reason we did it was to publicize scuba diving as a sport," said Roberts. The actual swimming time was a little less than five hours.

Roberts said the two and two-thirds miles apparently qualified for record because there was no previous record listed in the Guinness Book of World Records.

The divers wore wet suits throughout the swim. Houston diver Mike O'Rourke shuttled full tanks of air to the pair six different times.

And what was their first wish at the end of the swim?

"Bring beer," they shouted in unison.

ON THE MARKET — Former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell said "It's nice to be back in Alabama" when he arrived at a federal prison in Montgomery to begin serving a term on Watergate-related charges. Now, his quote and caricature are on T-shirts being marketed in Alabama. The model is Cheryl Slomkowski of Middlefield, Conn.

Alaska flow halted

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The trans-Alaska oil pipeline was shut down Monday night because of a nitrogen-leaking drain plug buried beneath 20 feet of "gravel as hard as concrete," said an Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. spokesman.

He said it was expected to take 11 to 13 hours to repair the 1½-inch plug. On that schedule, oil would start moving again at mid-morning Tuesday.

The malfunctioning plug allowed nitrogen to leak under Pump Station No. 8, which is at milepost 488 on the 800-mile long line.

The oil flow was stopped 15 miles away, and no oil was leaked. Nitrogen is sent ahead of the oil to prevent the possibility of combustion.

JFK film called 'really haunting'

DALLAS (AP) — For a few brief moments, it was Nov. 22, 1963 again.

High-powered rifle shots rang out. Crowds screamed and scattered. The "President" was shot.

And "Lee Harvey Oswald" leaned out of the Texas Schoolbook Depository Building, a rifle cradled in his shoulder.

The scene at Dealy Plaza Sunday and Monday was the recreation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy for an ABC television movie, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald."

Hundreds of tourists were attracted by the sight of actor John Pleshette, who portrays Oswald in the fictional account of the trial of the man the Warren Commission identified as Kennedy's assassin.

"It was really haunting," said Pleshette, who bears a striking resemblance to Oswald.

Earlier, a police marksman had "fired" the shots at the Presidential limousine six floors below in a scene that was to be shown to the fictional jury.

Oswald never went to trial. He was shot to death by Dallas nightclub manager Jack Ruby two days after the Kennedy assassination while he was being transferred from the police department to the county jail.

On Sunday, the recreation of the shooting had taken place before hundreds of tourists and with a cast of several hundred extras who scattered and "panicked" as the shots were "fired" into the Presidential motorcade.

Women wearing bobbysocks and men in thin ties fell over each other in mock hysteria under the direction of supervising producer Larry Schiller who shouted:

"Bang. You hear it, but don't have time to react."

Bang. Now you go down running that way. You realize now it's not a backfire.

Bang. The motorcade's

moving now and you run as if to catch it."

A few in the crowd seemed

perurbed. Fermin Garcia

said the assassination should not have been recreated.

"God would have wanted it that way."

Police beat

Accused 'hot-checker' checked

After some top flight police investigation, and quick action, a local man is now in custody, charged with passing two forged checks Saturday.

Detective Curtis P. Ward and I.D. Officer David Spilman picked up Ronnie Paul Huff, an 18-year-old in Balch Springs Monday just under 48 hours after a $146.95 forged check was passed to Western Kawasaki, and another to the City Pawn Shop for $47.25.

The checks were signed in the name of Gilbert Franco, another local man who reported the theft of some of his checks Sunday.

According to Detective Ward, the forger got the checks from an acquaintance of his and used them freely to buy a bicycle from the motorcycle shop and to redeem a stereo from the pawn shop.

Ward said that after talking to Gilbert Franco and a detective from the Balch Springs Police Department they put the cuffs on Huff.

According to reports Huff was picked up by Balch Springs police for hitchhiking.

After putting the finger on Huff, Detective Ward recovered both bicycle and stereo Sunday.

Huff was charged in Justice of the Peace Gus Ochotorena's office today, for forgery.

Compared to the more than 47 reports of fireworks noise during the evening, things were relatively quiet in Big Spring on the Fourth of July.

Police are investigating burglary of the residence of Johnny Rawls, 1702 W. First, which happened either Saturday or Monday between 5 and 8:30 p.m.

According to reports, burglars entered the residence through the front door, and left with a CB radio, a 30-30 rifle "22-caliber" rifle with a scope, an eight-track stereo tape player, a 32-piece silverware set, a camera and a carton of cigarettes.

Value of the items stolen is estimated at $726, but no description of the intruders is available at this time.

Lamberto Lindley, 1104 E. 6th, is now without music because burglars broke into his residence between 12:30 and 1:30 a.m. Monday and stole all his stereo components.

According to reports the burglars made off with a amplifier, turntable and speakers all worth about $480.

Burglars broke through the back door of the home of Rene Valdez, 632 NW 3rd, and stole a portable black and white television set between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 9 a.m. Monday.

According to reports the set is worth approximately $351.

Someone stole a hanging plant from the front porch of the residence of Mrs. Donna Fish, 2805 Coronado, sometime between Friday and Monday.

According to reports the hanging foliage was worth $47.

Miss Debbie Statham

reported to police that someone had stolen her wallet with $150 cash in it from her car, around 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Emilio Gonzales, 506 NW 7th, reported that one of the windows in his residence was shattered by a flying firework at about 11:15 p.m. Monday.

Someone, apparently unhappy over not having any fireworks to throw, threw a rock through the rear window of a car driven by Ben Dill, 2911 W. Highway 80.

According to reports, the rock was thrown as Dill was cruising down the 1000 Block of Wood at around 10:10 Monday. Damage to the window was $200.

At 8:34 p.m. Monday, cars driven by Perry L. Weaver, Perryton and Charlotte Tingley, 1607 Canary, collided at 1607 Canary.

Krueger takes on Tower

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., aimed his brand-new campaign for U.S. Senate today directly at incumbent Sen. John Tower, R-Tex.

"The question I am asked most is why I am leaving a Congressional district where I just got re-elected by 72 per cent," Krueger told a news conference in Austin where he started a four-day campaign swing across the state.

"The answer is simple. I am running for the Senate because I think the people of Texas need a voice not just a vote in the Senate."

He said Tower has been there 16 years and has little to show as for results. "People are looking for leadership, not just negative votes," the 41-year-old former university professor and Shakespearean scholar said.

Krueger said he was speaking out solely against Tower because none of his expected Democratic opponents have announced yet.

"But this may be a pretty good theme for the campaign."

Krueger officially announced Monday at a July 4th picnic in his home town of New Braunfels.

The second-term Congressman from the widespread 21st District scheduled other appearances today at the Dallas-Fort Worth regional airport and in Houston. He will spend the night in Corpus Christi and go on Wednesday to McAllen, Laredo, Victoria and College Station.

The New Braunfels announcement unveiled one of Texas' worst-kept political secrets.

State Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie, former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough and former senatorial candidate Barefoot Sanders have also been mentioned as possible Democratic challengers in the 1978 primary.

Visitors outnumber residents

Fly-In produces fun

By MARJ CARPENTER

Visitors flew in and drove into Colorado City over the weekend with more visitors in the county over the holiday than residents.

At the third annual Fly-In breakfast, there were close to 2,000 people attending, a record for this event which is held on the morning of the Fourth of July.

There were over 70 planes flew in and the pilots and passengers were guests of honor at the breakfast served in the Mitchell County hangar by the Chamber of Commerce.

Sefton Pickens, executive director of the chamber, said "We didn't have much time to look up from cooking."

Visitors parked on every available space at the airport and on the roads leading to the airport.

Among pilots who flew in from Big Spring were R.G. McClure, Ricky Rickanbauch, Bob Duggan, J.D. Carter, Joanna Wilson, Tooter Whitmore, and Linda Barnett.

Persons attending the Fly-In could take a flight over the city and Lake Colorado City and Lake Champion for $4 each.

Jim Bodine, 90, was awarded a free ride as the oldest person present but he refused to go up. "I got to be 90 by staying on the ground," quipped Bodine.

A booth selling the tickets was operated by Mrs. Geneva Findley and Mrs.

Joy Morris.

Airplanes were flown by volunteer pilots including J.O. Dockrey Jr., chamber president and S.L. Morris, W.A. Findley, and Don and Jimmy Brown.

Findley was fly-in chairman and Loyd Ledbetter and Kenneth Rogers were chief cook and chamber representative.

The crowd at the airport was a drop in the bucket to the crowd at the lake over the weekend, even though the lake crowd was less than expected on Monday.

Over the weekend, the Colorado Lake State Park handled around 15,000 visitors, most of whom arrived on Sunday. Monday's crowd was light compared to other Fourth's.

One spokesman said that the jet-boats crowd had taken off for Lake Spence.

There was quite a bit of controversy about jet boats on Lake Colorado City last year. Sunday's crowd at Lake Colorado City, however, was huge.

A first aid station was operated over the weekend in the park through the cooperation of the Mitchell County Ambulance Service, the Colorado City Police Department and the Emergency Medical Technicians as well as an Explorer Scout post.

There were no serious injuries over the weekend or any major criminal activities.

Black Panther seeks freedom

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Black Panther cofounder Huey Newton, his 2½-year self-imposed exile behind him, will begin his effort to win freedom on bail while awaiting trial on murder and assault charges.

Newton, 35, was scheduled to be arraigned today in Oakland Municipal Court. His attorney, Sheldon Otis, said he would try to get Newton out of jail on bail.

"We're looking forward to having him out," said Otis, adding that there were "a few things to counter with," such as Alameda County Deputy Dist. Atty. Tom Orloff arguing that bail be denied.

Newton, who fled to Cuba in 1974, spent the Fourth of July in an Oakland jail cell nursing a slight cold.

He arrived at San Francisco International Airport on Sunday night and was greeted by some 500 enthusiastic supporters who chanted "Justice for Huey."

Alameda County authorities said Newton faces a murder charge stemming from the Aug. 6, 1974, shooting of a 17-year-old girl who died after he fled the country.

Newton forfeited $42,000 bail when he failed to appear at a hearing on those charges Aug. 23, 1974.

He has said he is innocent of the charges, contending they were part of a government conspiracy to "murder me and to destroy the Black Panther party."

Summer heat peppers state

By the Associated Press
Showers too sparse to relieve the current siege of summer heat peppered parts of West Texas and a few East Texas areas during the night.

By this morning they dried up and the only moisture came in occasional showers around Palacios on the coast.

Low clouds hovered from Austin to San Antonio in the south central part of the state and around El Paso in the extreme west. Skies were crystal clear elsewhere.

Monday's top temperatures hit a peak of 100 degrees at Presidio in the Big Bend country. Near dawn today the range was from 80 at Galveston on the coast down to 67 at Dalhart in the Panhandle and in El Paso.

No break in the warm weather was indicated. Forecasts promised another round of scattered thunderstorms on both the east and west sides of the state.

Fourth of July low-keyed

By the Associated Press
July 4, 1977: Bicentennial plus one. For most Americans, this Fourth of July was a return to low-key normalcy.

In most places the spirit was light-hearted. Billy Carter, the President's brother, appeared at a World Champion Pole-Climbing Contest and played softball in Lexington, Tenn. There were fireworks and rallies, picnics and concerts, regattas and parades throughout the land. And few dissenters anywhere.

Racial turmoil, Vietnam, Watergate seemed echoes of the past. And most people weren't listening.

Instead, Air Force demonstration jets screamed over the Statue of Liberty and tiny racing sailboats slapped the waters of New York Harbor. Under sunny skies in Tuscaloosa, Ala., there were arts and crafts, games for all ages, softball, rock music and bluegrass.

Night skies exploded with fireworks over the Hudson River in New York, the Charles River in Boston, the Mall in Washington, D.C. — and over Muscle Shoals, Ala., and countless small towns.

Persons wishing to donate to the swimming pool project can do so by making checks payable to the Volunteer Council, Big Spring State Hospital, Box 231, with "swimming pool project" specified on the check.

Actor John Collum did the traditional reading of the Declaration of Independence at Federal Hall on Wall Street in New York. Four or five thousand people stood — intent, respectful.

In Washington, health consultant Larry Peaco relaxed against a tree in West Potomac Park and said he felt a "collective relief. All the bad stuff is over ... Maybe the last of the Watergate ghosts have been exorcised."

The day was not entirely harmonious, but the discord was scattered.

At John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York, a gunman seized a bus and held its passengers hostage for nine hours before being captured. Two people were killed.

In Skokie, Ill., anti-Nazi demonstrators rallied against the threat that courts will allow an American Nazi group to march through the town, where 7,000 survivors of Nazi concentration camps live.

In Columbus, Ohio, state highway patrolmen quickly broke up a fracas between rallying Ku Klux Klansmen and counter-protestors who used clubs and fists to try to prevent the rally.

In Oakland, Calif., where Black Panther leader Huey Newton was in jail pending efforts to release him on bail while he awaits trial, a march and rally for "jobs and justice" was scheduled — but its political tone made it unusual for this year.

In nearby Berkeley, a Fantasy Costume Parade was staged, and across the bay in San Francisco, the main event was a fireworks display at Candlestick Park baseball stadium, preceded by music by the Golden Gate Park Band and a daytime Giants' baseball game.

In Washington, the National Archives sealed a time capsule filled with memorabilia from the Bicentennial to be uncapped in 2076.

In Boston, the fireworks display included a huge aerial bomb, designed to create a quarter-mile wide red, white and green chrysanthemum across the sky.

School credit to base and town

The NCO Leadership School at Webb Air Force Base has done its last civic project.

Each class at the school made it a point to do something for the community before it graduated.

TAKEN INDIVIDUALLY, the projects were each worthwhile, but taken collectively, we realize that the NCO Leadership School put a lot of effort back into the town.

For example, the 1976 projects were:

- Furnished labor (252 man hours) to repair walls in the West Side

Community Day Care Center.

- Conducted a bike inspection and Crime-Stop Program for the youth of Webb and Big Spring.
- Worked to solicit $600 worth of food, prizes and cash from local merchants for a picnic for underprivileged children.
- Collected money and goods for the Northside Day Care Center. Enough money was collected to purchase a washing machine and dryer.
- Held a clean-up of the Historic Big Spring.
- Ran a fund drive to send 20 handicapped and retarded children to the Special Olympics in Odessa.

- Conducted a fund-raising party for Big Spring Nursing Home and fixed up house for the chaplain at the Veterans Administration and Big Spring State Hospital.
- Sponsored a Christmas relief drive for Big Spring's needy families.
- Gave a Halloween Party for children at Big Spring State Hospital, and put on a static display of model aircraft at Heritage Museum.
- Organized a tour of Webb for the Big Spring Boys Club with meals and treats included.

In 1977, the NCO Leadership School

had:

- Collected articles for the Salvation Army.
- Held a bingo party attended by 90 patients of Big Spring State Hospital.
- Cleaned up area around the base.
- Painted and cleaned up the Boy Scout Center at Webb.
- Gave Park View Manor Nursing Home residents a tour of the base.
- Held a party for the children's ward at Malone-Hogan Hospital.
- At Webb's NCO Leadership School, the students demonstrated to us that good citizenship is good citizenship.

Summertime wouldn't be the same without cicadas, (locusts), but wouldn't it be nice to get along without them.

The cicadas are the creatures which while their lives away sitting in trees making loud whirring sounds — sounds which are, at best, depressing.

DEPRESSING, I guess, because they seem to be at their best when the day is the hottest. Real scorches seem to give them a mournful sound.

I think most of the cicadas around here are the 17-year kind, so the ones buzzing in the trees today were hatched from eggs laid in the ground by other cicadas in 1960 and the offspring of this year's generation will hatch in 1974.

The insect is not without its persecutions, though. Years ago, kids on my block would catch the critters and lash and a firecracker to their bodies (this didn't happen much because the only time firecrackers and cicadas were both handy was around July 4th). Then the firecrackers is lighted and the cicada thrown in the air to fly away.

If the firecracker was a dud, the cicada escaped with his life. If not, then boom. No more cicada. (The kid who dreamed this up and actually carried out all the executions is the same one who would sit for an hour frying ants with a magnifying glass).

IN MANY parts of Asia, Australia and the many Pacific islands, is used medicinally to raise blisters in the same parts of the world.

But here, where French fries seem to be more popular as a food and blisters are all to easily formed by the sun or outdoor cookouts, the cicada hasn't much use.

In fact, about the only use I have for them is to use them as column fodder — to see me through until I can find something better to write about.

Another use for the critters is as a conversational ice-breaker — at your next party. Just walk up to the red-head and say "Did you know that it took God 17 years to make a locust, but I was finished in nine months?" on Second thought.

Sore losers

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Anyone who has had to deal with large companies is aware that they are paying their bills later and later. This is no accident. The longer they can defer paying you, the more money they can keep in their bank accruing interest. It is known as the "float."

There is an art to not paying someone when the bill is due, and it is getting more sophisticated as time goes on.

In fact, universities are now offering masters degrees in "check stalling" for students who want to be comptrollers and bookkeepers.

I ATTENDED a graduate class the other day at one of our leading business schools and watched in awe as a professor conducted a course entitled "Stalling Creditors, Contractors and Individuals 1A."

"All right," the professor opened up his lecture. "Last week we discussed what to say to an irate person who calls up your company and wants to know where his or her check is. Let's review it."

"Stevens, you're the irate caller. Joseph, you're the person in charge of the comptroller's office."

Stevens picked up the white phone on the professor's desk, and Joseph picked up the one in the back of the classroom.

Stevens spoke first. "This is David Stevens, and I want to know why I haven't received a check for the work I did for your office."

"I'll look into it," Joseph said.

"NO, YOU DUMBBELL," the professor yelled. "You won't look into it. You will find someone else to look into it. You don't want to make friends with Stevens, or he'll know whom to call about the check next time."

You could see Joseph was upset. "We'll look into it, Mr. Stevens. I'm sure it's been sent out. Where can we reach you?"

Stevens gave his number and hung up. "All right," the professor said. "It's two weeks later. Joseph hasn't called you back, so Stevens, call him again."

"Where the hell is my check? It was due months ago," Stevens cried.

Joseph said, "I told the accounting department about it. It should have been sent the day after you spoke to me."

The professor nodded his head. Stevens shouted, "But I didn't get it!"

"The mails are terrible these days. Let me get back to you."

"Let me speak to the comptroller."

Joseph looked blankly at the professor. "What am I supposed to do now?"

THE PROFESSOR SAID, "Give the phone to anyone, dummy. Stevens doesn't know who the comptroller is."

Joseph handed the phone to Radcliffe.

"Look," said Stevens, "I have to pay my bills, I have to pay my labor. When I'm late paying, you people charge me 8 per cent interest. Why can't you pay me?"

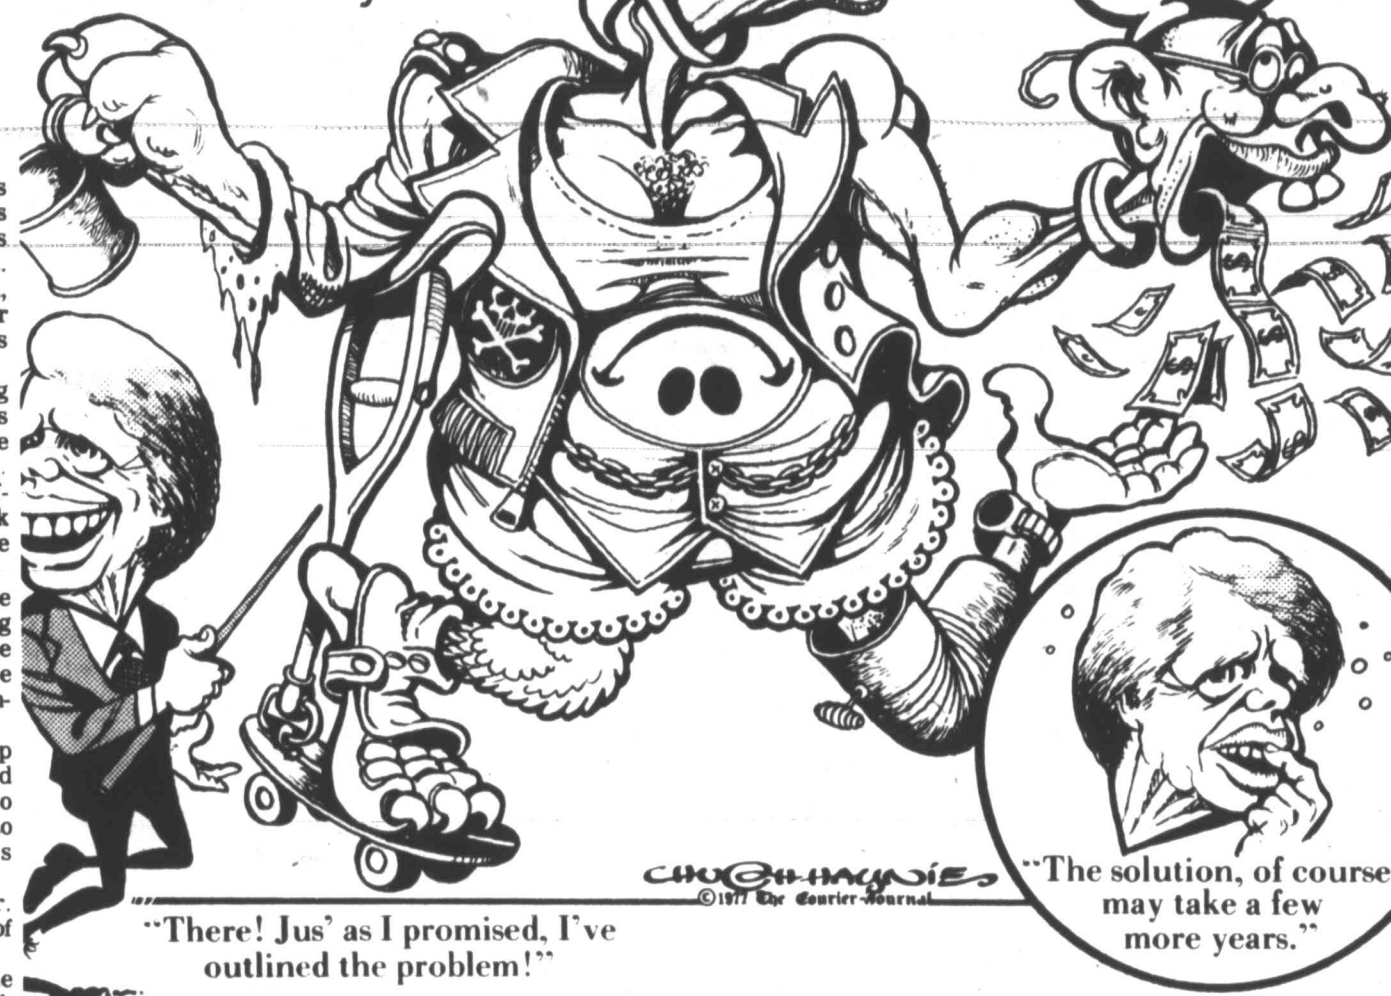

Radcliffe said, "I've been checking the invoice, Mr. Stevens. There was a clerical error somewhere in the pipeline, and we should have it straightened out in a couple of days. You should get a check from us as soon as our treasurer, who is now in Japan, returns."

Stevens played his part to the hilt. "If I don't get my check in the mail tomorrow, I'm going to sue you people!"

"Oh," said Radcliffe, "you want the legal department. If you'll just hold on I'll transfer you."

"Excellent, Radcliffe, excellent!" the professor said. "You learned last week's lesson well. Today we will discuss how to blame the computer for late payments."

Drug information scares patient

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you give me some information on the drug I complained of feeling depressed at times, and my doctor gave me some of these pills. I am afraid to take them for fear of a bad reaction, such as those listed in the pamphlet that came with the pills. I enclose it.

I have high blood pressure, am allergic to aspirin, penicillin, and sulfa drugs. I will watch for your reply in the paper. I am 64. — Mrs. D.T.

I presume you want me to tell you to take the drug or not take it.

I cannot help you in this. I print your letter in entirety because it is the first one of its kind I've received since the controversy over informing patients about potential drug side effects arose.

Discussing this in a recent column, I said that informing the patient of each and every effect takes everyone off the hook "but the doctor." I might better have said "patient" instead of doctor. While the drug you mention (no need to name it) has been in use for years among millions of patients, I can understand your concern on reading the list of possible side effects and contraindications to its use. One thing to remember is that those effects are usually rare. Some of them, as indicated, have not even been reported with the drug, but only with drugs of similar composition.

Your doctor has apparently decided that, in his judgment, prescribing the drug over the years has not caused any undue problems among his patients. Now you are the one to decide, based on your faith in him.

Don't get me wrong. The printed enclosure in the package of pills contains much good information, such as which drugs not to take with them, also warnings about its use under certain circumstances. What makes me a bit skeptical about the general idea of this patient information is that others, like yourself, might fear to use a medication when it might be the only means available for curing or controlling an illness. In some instances the fear might be worse than the potential bite.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What do you recommend for athlete's feet? I seem to be bothered with it more in the summer time than in winter. — G.E.

The drugstore remedies (medicated powders) are usually effective in curing athlete's foot, which is a fungus problem. But you must continue use of such powders for some time after the symptoms disappear. I emphasize this because so many sufferers use the products for only a few days, then have a recurrence.

Some people have the problem more in the winter than in summer, when lighter socks and shoes allow better ventilation of the feet. Moisture, as from perspiration, is an invitation to the fungus. But many people get into summertime activities that promote fungus growth, such as using bathing houses at beaches. They should wear sandals in such areas.

I never heard of a case that could not be controlled with sensible treatment. Left untreated, however, serious and even incapacitating conditions can develop. You might find my newest booklet "Relief and Care of Your Feet" helpful. For a copy, send a quarter to me in care of the Big Spring Herald, including a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have started the menopause. How long should it be before I can feel free of the danger of becoming pregnant? — Mrs. L.H.C.

The possibility of pregnancy can be discounted after a woman has ceased menstruation for one year. It could be less time than that, of course, but a year is a safe time span to use. By the time a woman approaches menopause, the likelihood of pregnancy diminishes, then gradually reaches the impossibility stage.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a woman finds lumps in her breast, what are the chances of her needing a mastectomy? — Mrs. W.W.

Recent statistics I've heard indicate that for every 14 lump detections one mastectomy is necessary.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you explain for me a term I saw on one of my medical reports. It was "corpus luteum." — Mrs. G.Q.

The term is "corpus luteum."

As you know, the ovaries contain millions of tiny "nests" (follicles). Each month one matures to deposit an egg (an ovum) into one of the fallopian tubes. If the egg is subsequently impregnated by a male sperm, the emptied follicle develops and becomes a gland (corpus luteum) producing hormones (progesterone). This helps prepare things for the new human being. The whole process is triggered by the remarkable network of the glands involved in pregnancy.

To find out what causes high blood pressure and what can be done to treat it, send for a copy of "Controlling Your Blood Pressure (Hypertension)" by Dr. Thosteson. Write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I love to sing, and really want to sing in the choir of another church. However, the church I am in (which doesn't have much of a music program) has a lot more spiritual depth to it and I know I will grow more spiritually in it. Do you think I should stay in this church? — C.H.C.

DEAR C.H.C.: If you are a Christian, the real question is not what you want to do, but what God wants you to do. Furthermore, I believe we are only really happy when we are doing His will.

From what you say about the two churches, my personal advice is to go to the one that will help you more spiritually. After all, what is it that God wants to do in your life? He wants you "to be conformed to the image of his Son" (Romans 8:29). That is, God wants to remold you and make you like Himself. You need to ask yourself in which of the two churches is this kind of spiritual growth more likely to take place.

If you decide to stay in your present church, I suggest you begin to pray for it, and pray especially about the kind of ministry you could have in it. If there is not an effective music program, perhaps God could use you to start one, or at least help get one started. God has given you your interest in music, and we are called to "Sing unto God, sing praises to his name." (Psalm 68:4)

The time may come when you would feel led by God to join another church which might not be as alive spiritually, but where you could have a ministry of helping the church become more Christ-centered. Whatever you do, do it prayerfully and from the right motives.

Learned lesson

Jack Anderson, Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Two generals have been blistered for offering President Carter their unsolicited advice on military strategy. The president was "stomping mad," according to one report, over their use of the newspapers to present their dissenting views.

Now the Army, properly chastened, has cautioned the brass to keep their mouths shut. General Bernard Rogers, the Army chief, has made this suggestion in an emphatic memo to his fellow generals. He entitled the memo: "Speaking Up-Speaking Out."

BLUNTLY, HE warned that the "unfounded publicity about muzzling the military" could turn into "a self-fulfilling prophecy" if the generals didn't learn to hold their tongues.

"Intellectual honesty demands," he conceded, "that frank views be privately expressed." But he put the emphasis on the word "privately." The "last thing that should be done," he warned, "is to carry any arguments and disagreements to the public media."

This has aroused the ghost of the departed General Douglas MacArthur. Throughout the Korean War, he had been an incendiary catalyst among the powder kegs. First, he called for expanding the war into Manchuria. Then he wanted to use Chiang Kai-shek's armies to open a second front on the Chinese mainland.

He insisted that the Korean War was "the key to the world situation," scornfully repudiating the doctrine of limited war and compromise peace. He shouted from the houseposts the catch phrase that became his anthem: "In war there is no substitute for victory."

Finally, on April 11, 1951, President Harry Truman boiled over and fired MacArthur, setting off a daily heightening typhoon of national emotion. It found visible expression in the fervent crowds that surged forth in record numbers to hail the returned martyr.

Many Americans angrily demanded whether a politician-president should be permitted to silence a hero-general. Was it not MacArthur's bounden duty, the cry went up, to express his convictions?

These questions, if somewhat more subdued, have been raised again across the nation. Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, lean and crewcut, spoke out against President Carter's plan to withdraw American troops from South Korea. Three weeks later, Lt. Gen. Donn Starry suggested pointedly that the United States will likely become embroiled in a future war between the Soviet Union and Communist China.

Both generals were brought home, post haste, for a chewing out. But many sympathizers wanted to know why a general didn't have the same right as United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young to air his honest, if controversial beliefs.

In the case of MacArthur, the institutional defenses of the republic eventually contained the public uproar. The majority came to recognize that Truman, not MacArthur, had been elected to make U.S. policy. Indeed, the general had been guilty of an insubordination that he would never have tolerated from his own subordinates. So MacArthur faded away almost as quietly as his oratory had prophesied.

Clearly, the Army now understands the lesson of the MacArthur episode. General Rogers stressed in his memo that officers should give "their honest and candid opinions and recommendations during the planning and discussion phases."

But "once a decision has been made," he reminded his subordinates, "we then have the responsibility to give our wholehearted support to that decision."

Footnote: For his part, President Carter has assured Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, in a private letter that "we will not stifle dissent."

PERCY'S PROBLEM — The boyishly handsome Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., was once one of Israel's staunchest supporters. But somewhere on the road to Damascus, he saw a new light and, overnight, became one of the Arabs' biggest boosters.

HIS DRAMATIC turnabout followed a visit to the Middle East, where he was wine and dined by the Arab potentates. The Senator was royally treated, for example, by Egypt's President Anwar Sadat. Thereafter, Percy emerged as a hero in the Arab world for changing his pro-Israeli stand.

Now the Illinois Senator, professing his concern over America's increasing thirst for oil, has formed a non-profit, educational organization that he calls Alliance to Save Energy. He has persuaded such luminaries as Gerald Ford, Henry Kissinger and Vice President Walter Mondale to lend their names to the Alliance.

Celebs present

Liz Smith

Keep on trucking: At a party given for Rex Reed by Bobby Zarem at Elaine's restaurant, I suppose you think a lot of Rotarians showed up and members of the DAR? Well, of course, they didn't — it was wall-to-wall celebrities presided over by a weary Elaine who had already been up all night with wall-to-wall celebrities left over from the Halston-Liza Minnelli party for "New York, New York," the movie.

Rex's party was to celebrate his book for Delacorte titled "Valentines & Vitriol," which has what the editors call "a spicy intro" by an old friend of Rex's. The intro is only so-so but the book will tell you things about Liz Taylor, Soph Loren, Auda Hepburn, Hildy Knef, Pearlre Mae Bailey, George Burns, Lil Hellman, Val Perrine, Mary Hamlich, Kate Ross, Mad Kahn, Bobby Redford, B. Davis, Bill Holden, and the Andrews Sisters and Alexis Smith (they defy abbreviation) that you will relish.

Love this book and loved doing the intro, too, because I think — honestly — it says things about Rex Taylor Reed that nobody ever said before. How can you hate a boy with talent, green eyes and pouty lips?

Uncle Sam wants wine data on labels

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The federal government is trying to help the growing number of wine drinkers across the country learn more about the beverages they buy.

Industry statistics show that wine consumption has risen 90 per cent from 1966 to the present and some sources predict that by 1980, Americans will drink more wine than liquor.

Many consumers, however, are confused by the variety of wines available. Government efforts to simplify things by providing more information about the contents of American wines have been under way for some time, but they have bogged down in debate and discussion. Earlier this month, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Washington, D.C., 20226.

A key section of the bureau regulations would involve standards for wine which is labeled to show where it comes from.

The bureau proposed three "appellation of origin" designations: the United States, a state or a county. Seventy-five per cent of the grapes used to make wine that listed an appellation of origin would have to come from the place named.

The agency also proposed two "controlled appellation" designations for individual, named vineyards and specific locations distinguished by a particular geographic feature, known as viticultural areas, such as "Napa Valley."

Eighty-five per cent of the grapes used in a wine labeled with a viticultural area and 95 per cent of those in a vineyard-labeled wine would have to come from the place named.

The proposed regulations would set new standards for varietal wines made from specific grape types, requiring that a varietal wine such as cabernet sauvignon derive at least 75 per cent of its volume from the type listed on the label. If more than one grape type is used, the percentage of each would have to be shown. (Concord-type grapes which have a very distinctive and dominant flavor would be exempt from this provision. These varietals would be allowed to contain only 51 per cent of the Concord-type grape.)

Wines labeled with a vintage would have to be derived from grapes harvested during the year shown and grown in the labeled area of origin. The bureau rejected an industry proposal to lower from 95 to 75 per cent the volume of grapes used in vintage wine which must come from the labeled area of origin.

Supreme Court shows concern for officers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil liberties groups and feminists lost more than they gained, law enforcement authorities gained more than they lost and Richard M. Nixon lost during the Supreme Court's just-completed term.

The nation's highest court reached 176 decisions during a nine-month period in which it decided almost 5,000 cases. Generally, the justices continued the conservative trend which began seven years ago under Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Led by Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist, the court again came down heavy on the side of law enforcement officials in cases involving individual rights claimed by criminal suspects and defendants.

The court's majority also frustrated the efforts of women's rights groups by deciding that states have no legal duty to pay for medically unnecessary abortions and that health insurance plans do not have to include disability payments for pregnancies.

In one of the court's most publicized decisions, the justices, with only Burger and Rehnquist dissenting, ruled that Nixon cannot control the 880 White House tapes and 42 million pages of documents he left behind when resigning from the presidency.

Byron R. White was the justice joining most often with Burger and Rehnquist in a dozen criminal cases in which the court retreated from more liberal holdings of the court under the late Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Another so-called swing vote, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., generally could be counted on to join the conservatives in showing deference to the powers of state legislatures and the two other branches of the federal government.

Justices Potter Stewart and John Paul Stevens most often joined White and Powell as swing votes. But Stevens, serving in his first full term since being appointed to the court by former President Gerald R. Ford, established himself as one of the court's most prolific writers and sharpest thinkers.

Stevens often joined the court's two consistently liberal justices, William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, in voting to strengthen the rights afforded criminal suspects.

The court's ninth member, Justice Harry A. Blackmun, again sided with the Burger-Rehnquist block more often than not. But Blackmun, in the past disparagingly called "the Minnesota twin" in references to what court aides saw as his undue dependence on the ideology of Burger, his lifelong friend and fellow Minnesotan, showed new independence in voting on numerous key decisions.

Of the court's 126 signed decisions, a unanimous vote was gained 45 times and more than half were decided by at least seven-member majorities.

JAZZ FESTIVAL A BLAST — The Newport Jazz Festival has come to a successful conclusion after 11 days of performances by such jazz greats as: trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie, top, and singers Joe Williams and Sarah Vaughan. The festival was the most successful since the concerts moved to New York from Newport, R.I., according to promoter George Wein who also announced the event will have a new name next year: "The Big Apple Festival."

Fingerprints link cons to crime spree

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — Fingerprints of two Oklahoma prison escapees were found in a car belonging to one of two fishermen missing for a week, linking the convicts to a series of killings and abductions in three states.

The link was based on fingerprints found Monday in a car that belonged to one of the two Louisiana fishermen who have not been seen since June 28, five days after the convicts escaped from the maximum security prison at McAlester.

The convicts were identified as Earl Van Denton, 27, and Paul Ruiz, 29. Charges of flight to avoid prosecution were filed Monday in Hugo, Okla., against Denton, who was serving a life term for murder, and against Ruiz, who was serving life for armed robbery.

The last reported sighting of the two suspects in the crime spree was Saturday night in nearby Wayne, Okla., the FBI reported. Two men were reportedly seen driving the maroon taxi they stole here Friday from cab driver James M. Short, 40. Short has not been seen since and McClain County Sheriff Don Smith said he feared the cab driver may have been killed.

Authorities say the two, may also be responsible for two known killings and the wounding of another man.

Authorities believe the sequence of events to be as follows:

On June 28, five days after Denton and Ruiz escaped, Ray Jones Sr., 65, of Franklinton, La., and a fishing companion, Art Wilson, 66, also of Franklinton, disappeared.

The next day Wilson's car was found 500 miles away in Magazine, Ark. Magazine town Marshal Marvin E. Ritchie, 42, was found shot to death in the trunk of his patrol car.

David Small, a ranger with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, was found beside Ritchie's body. Small had been shot in the shoulder and apparently left for dead. One of his fellow rangers, Opal James, 58, was abducted.

James' body was found Friday, about 40 miles north of Magazine. Short disappeared from Purcell, 300 miles west of Magazine, the same day.

Most Texans enjoy quiet 'holiday'

By the Associated Press

Most Texans made their Fourth of July holiday just that—a holiday.

It seemed only U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, Anita Bryant and state troopers were busy, as Texas quietly celebrated the nation's 201st birthday in contrast to last year's Bicentennial pomp and pageantry.

Krueger, a congressman from New Braunfels and former university English literature professor, used a July 4th picnic at his home to officially begin his campaign for the U.S. Senate against Sen. John Tower, R-Tex.

Miss Bryant shrugged off a full-page ad in the Brownwood Bulletin attacking her anti-gay rights campaign and highlighted Brownwood's "Freedom Night" celebration Sunday.

The rally, which highlighted "Freedom Week," packed 12,000 persons into the stadium at Brownwood, a city of only 18,000.

A Dallas gay rights organization paid for the ad, but no protestors appeared for Miss Bryant's performance.

Meanwhile, state troopers patrolled Texas highways at maximum strength over the holiday weekend. However, at least 31 persons had died on Texas roads and highways by late Monday.

Elsewhere, there were only scattered reports of a few parades and very few speeches.

"It is the quietest celebration we have had in years," said one Midland resident.

Texas took advantage of fair and hot weather to pack Gulf Coast resort areas, parks and lakes. A record crowd of 45,596 crowded into Six Flags Over Texas at Arlington.

Most big cities had little or no organized citywide events. In Dallas there were art shows, fairs and square dancing.

About 75,000 gathered at Keist Park in Dallas for a giant picnic.

In San Antonio, there was mariachi and military march music.

Most of the parades were in smaller cities. Arlington sponsored its annual parade with clowns, marching bands and mounted units.

But mostly it was a time for family fun. Among the attractions in different parks in the Dallas area, for example, were belly dancing, Polish cello music, Chinese line dancing, Jewish parties, taco eating, sack racing, tobacco-spitting, cake walking, pea shelling and washer throwing.

Making whoopee

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Man, worried about his trees, has put one over on the gypsy moth caterpillar that eats them.

He's developed a love potion that drives the caterpillar's father to distraction. That's okay, because man wants to keep him away from the caterpillar's mother.

The idea is to stymie reproduction, and thus eventually stunt the growth of the gypsy moth's family tree.

"What we're trying to do is short circuit their sex life," says Dr. E. Alan Cameron, a Pennsylvania State University entomologist who is working with the potion.

"If we're successful, it's conceivable we could prevent the female from being fertilized."

The potion is a synthetic reproduction of the pheromone, or sex attractant, given off by the female moth after she emerges from her cocoon. It's this pheromone that attracts and stimulates the males. Once together, he fertilizes her eggs. Come spring, they hatch into the leaf-munching caterpillars.

The idea is to keep the male moth on a wild goose chase from the time he emerges from the cocoon until he dies, usually in about seven days.

So Dr. Cameron and federal agriculture agents have sprayed the woods with their love potion and from time to time peek in to see if any moths are making whoopee.

"The results are encouraging," he reports. "But we have not been able to demonstrate that we have totally eliminated mating."

Water skiing selection offered at Gibson's

The hot summer days are good for swimmers and water skiers, if nothing else. And Gibson's has the water skiing equipment which you need for this sport.

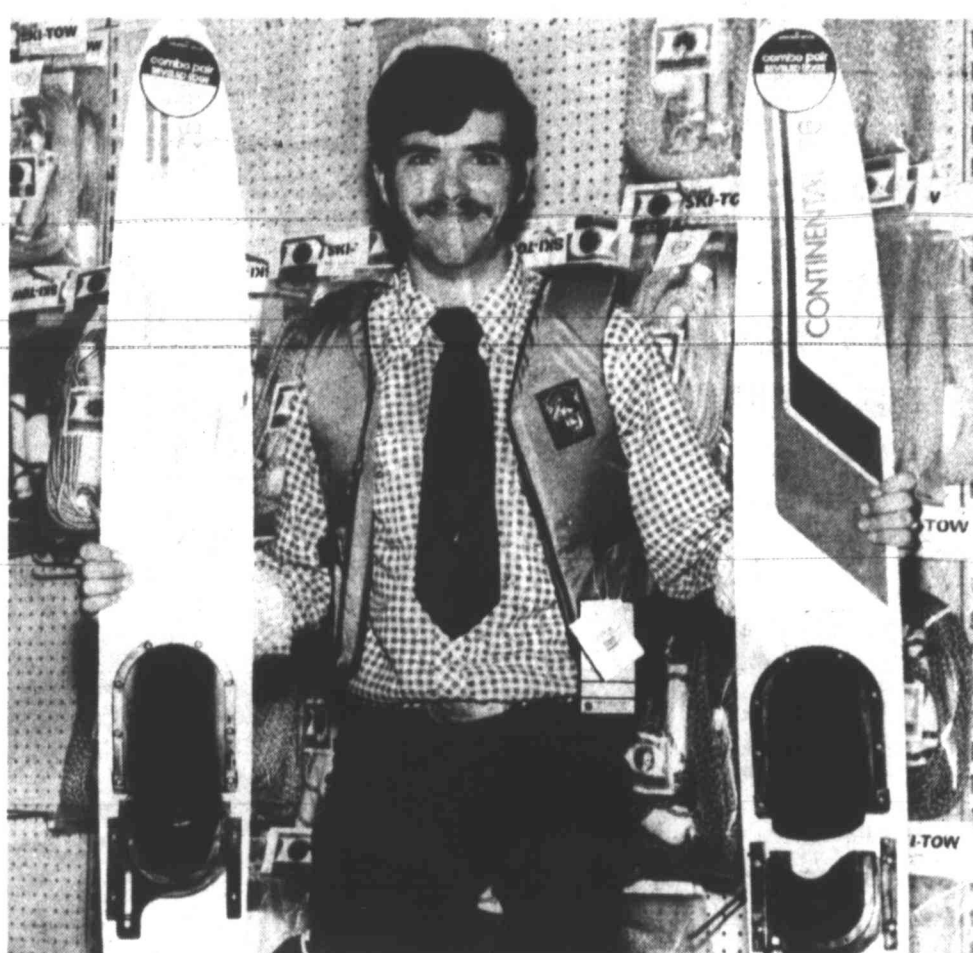

They have water skis, towlines and the life jacket which you ought to be wearing if you're involved in the sport.

But they have all kinds of summer camping needs. Look at Gibson's for tents, Coleman lanterns, Coleman stoves, coolers, flashlights, fishing rods, and the many other items which help make it a pleasant summer.

These are all found in the sporting goods department in the northeast corner of the store. Bill Steagald heads this department.

Al Stephens, store manager, urges you while you are in there to look over pot plants, family needs, clothing, gift items, household appliances and the many other items offered at Gibson's.

"If you didn't get it at Gibson's you paid too much" is a store slogan and a good one. There are a lot of dollars to be saved by shopping at Gibson's, out on Scurry Street.

FOR WATER SKIING ask Kerry Denson at Gibson's.

West Texas Carpet will rejuvenate your carpets

If you want to completely rejuvenate your beautiful carpet, call West Texas Carpet Cleaning service.

Richard Wright will be glad to give you a free estimate on cleaning your carpets with the Von Schrader Method. It is dry-foaming and harmless to the finest rugs.

The soft nylon brush used in this system is made of the same gentle bristles as your hair brush. It is harmless to the finest rug.

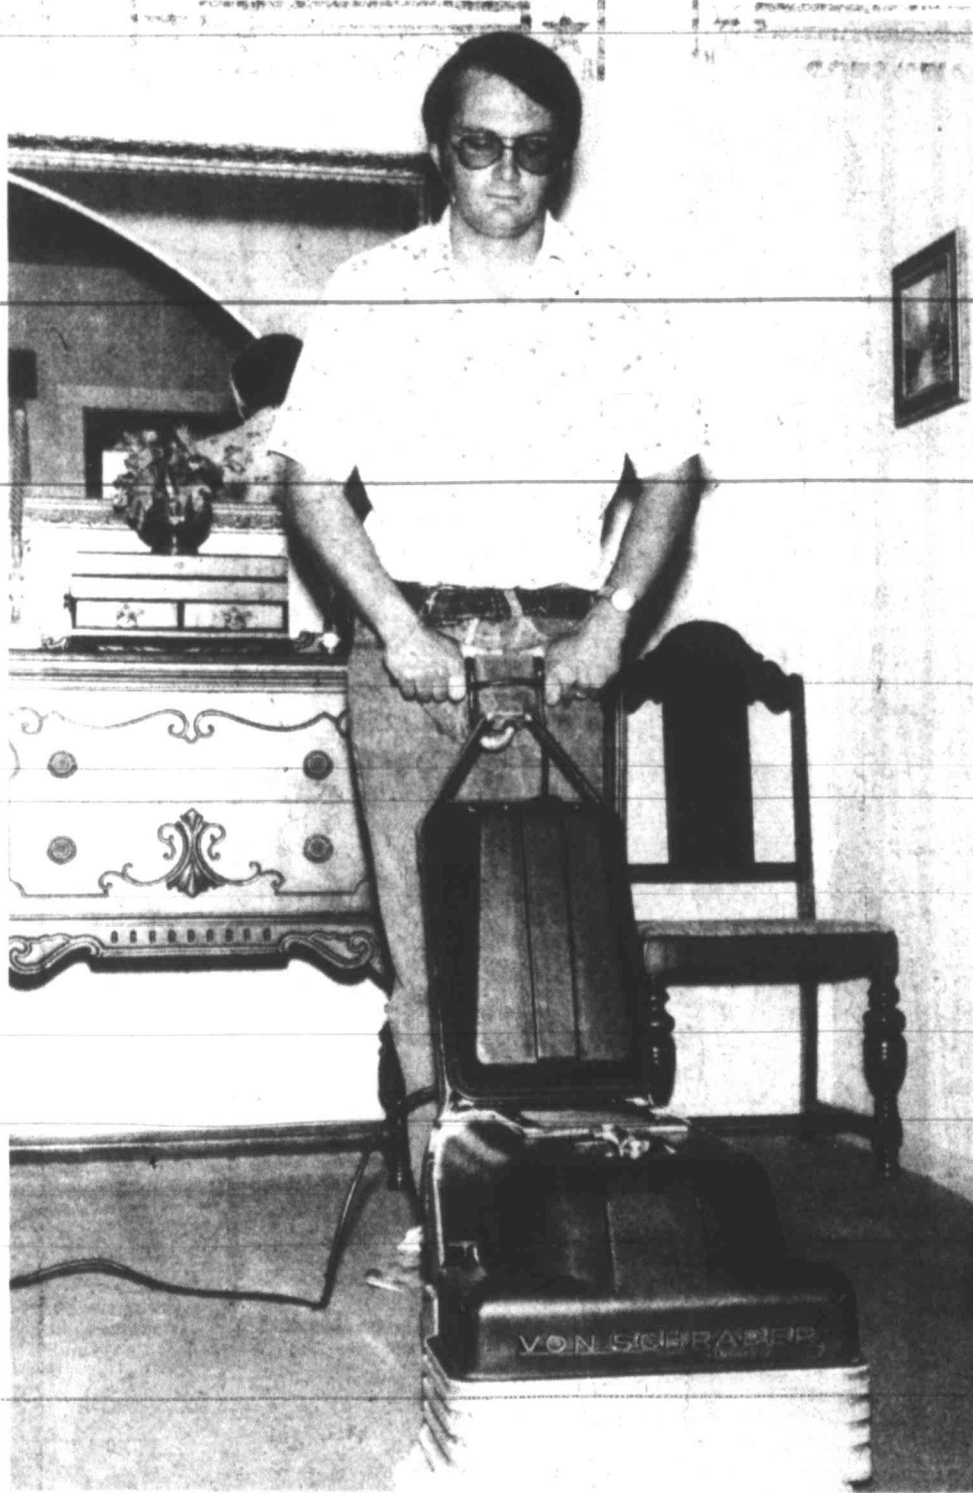

The method has been thoroughly tested and proved in thousands of homes, according to the operator here. The dry aerated foam, gentle but thorough brushing and complete removal of dirt combine to make the method completely safe.

It is an excellent method for loose or wall-to-wall carpets made of wool, the newest man-made fibers, shag or the finest Oriental.

Wright reminds persons to beware of steam methods. This method also quickly dries. Wright also has a wetback equipment which will take up water in homes where there has been a broken pipe, frozen air conditioning system or a washing machine has run over.

Telephone him at 267-6565 for free estimates and an appointment.

OUR FRIENDS & NEIGHBORS

SERVING YOU FOR A BETTER HOWARD COUNTY

Arvin N. Henry has been with the Big Spring Police force for five years. Henry was born in Mill County, and attended Monahans High School. He furthered his education at the University of Maryland, the University of Texas, and Sul Ross University. Henry was in the Air Force, and still enjoys flying as a hobby. He used to work in the oil fields, but became a police officer because of the challenge, and different experiences which a policeman is exposed to everyday. Henry is a Methodist, and attends church with his wife Colleen. He enjoys hunting, fishing and camping when he not actively working toward the welfare of the citizens of Big Spring.

Jimmy Wallace is one of the better known of the city patrolman. Wallace is a naturally friendly guy and is "even smiling when he writes out the traffic tickets," according to one of his superiors. He has been on the local force for six years. He is 29 years old, coming to Big Spring from Roscoe. He graduated from high school in Roscoe and attended Angelo State University. Prior to working for the police force, he was an elementary coach. "I have always wanted to be involved in law enforcement," Wallace stated. Wallace and his wife, Carolyn have a daughter, Tania. They are Baptist. Wallace is involved in the Police Association and other law enforcement activities. His favorite hobby is motorcycle riding, but his real hobby, in addition to family recreation, is law enforcement work itself. Enthusiasm about his job, his enthusiasm is contagious and he never appears to work as if it is a dull routine.

Sgt. G.E. (Ed) Kissinger has been with the force for eight years. Kissinger made the switch to law enforcement work from a career as news director for radio and television. He brings this experience to bare in his work as head of the department's crime prevention division. He is the man to contact when you are interested in "crime proofing" your home. Kissinger is also known to most kids in the community through his lectures and presentations at local schools. The sergeant was born in Vandergrift, Pa., and spent most of his earlier years up north in Kentucky. He spent a year at the University of Louisville (Ky.) and later attended Clark's Business College, also in Louisville. He has a wife, Francis; a son, Dan, a patrolman on the force; twin daughters, Jean and Joan; and 12 grandchildren. He is a member of the Methodist Church. His hobbies include fishing and bowling.

TOM SAWYER WINNER — Stan Ehrhardt, 10, of Hannibal, Mo., displays form that made him a winner in the national fence-painting contest, a highlight of Tom Sawyer Days, held annually near the boyhood home of Mark Twain. The competition among boys from states bordering the Mississippi River, was based on speed, neatness and costume authenticity.

Texas violent deaths

By the Associated Press
A four-fatality accident near Alpine and a three-fatality crash near Wilmer contributed to a holiday traffic death toll that threw a shroud over Fourth of July festivities.

By late Monday, the Texas Department of Public Safety had recorded 31 deaths on Texas roads and highways — shy of the 51 the DPS predicted would die in traffic mishaps. The total violence toll, including drownings and shootings, reached 48.

The holiday death count was started Friday evening and ended at midnight Monday.

The violent tone of the weekend was heightened early Monday by three shooting deaths in Sweetwater.

The shooting spree, which apparently grew out of a domestic quarrel, took the lives of Danny Garcia, Tony Gonzalez and Garcia's wife, Linda. Policewoman Edyth Brothers was wounded by Garcia as she entered his home, police said.

Four motorists were killed early Saturday in a collision

16 miles east of Alpine in far West Texas.

Officers said Ricardo Olivas of Alpine, being pursued by Alpine police for investigation, reversed directions and crashed head-on with a car driven by Elizabeth Land, 34, of Alamo. Olivas, 16, Miss Land, Edna Land, 54, of Pharr and Lowell Farris, 14, of Alamo were all killed.

Webb Eugene Bradford Jr., 72, of Paris was killed when his auto slammed into a car carrying John Sumner Booth, 21, of Dallas and Jeffery Keith Collins, 23, of Denton on Interstate 45 near Wilmer. All three died.

Among the other victims were:

Gregory Browning Zant, 20, of Weatherford, killed early Monday in a one-car rollover on Interstate 45 near Ferris.

Melvin Wayne Norwood Jr., 19, killed Sunday night when the car in which he was riding overturned on a dirt road near Slaton in West Texas.

Maurice Laverne Steen, 35, who died in Brazoria when he was hit by a car early Monday.

James Eason of Silsbee, who drowned in the Neches River while trying to retrieve some food that had fallen in the water.

Juan Pena, 20, of Houston, who died when the car in which he was riding collided with another vehicle near Richmond.

Bill Goodman, 52, of Lindale, who drowned Sunday evening when his fishing boat upset in an American Legion-owned lake east of town.

Sotello Salis Garza, 28, of Charlotte, who was shot and killed Sunday near that South Texas community. Sheriff Tommy Williams arrested three men and lodged them in the Atascosa County jail at Jourdanton. They were held in lieu of $10,000 bond each on a charge of aggravated assault.

Odin Massey, 60, of Mission died in a three-car pileup Sunday at a highway intersection in Mission.

Johnny Ray Cook, 18, a Dallas newspaper carrier, was shot and fatally wounded Sunday, police said, by a woman who told questioners he tried to enter her home after an argument over past due pay for papers.

Saudi-UAE

oil prices

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates have announced they are raising their oil prices 5 per cent to end the split in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Saudi-UAE increase was reported unofficially last week when nine of the other 11 OPEC members announced they were abandoning plans for a price increase on July 1 as their contribution to unity. Iraq and Libya did not participate in the decision to give up the increase, but they are expected to go along with the majority.

Analysts in New York said then that the Saudi-UAE increase should raise prices in the United States by less than half a cent per gallon of gasoline or heating oil.

Whitewashing can be fun

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Proving that whitewashing can be fun even if you do it yourself, an exuberant Stan Ehrhardt, 10, won the national fence-painting contest, highlight of the annual Tom Sawyer Days near the boyhood home of Mark Twain.

In other competition Monday, Jenny Viorel, 11, of Hannibal won the Tom Sawyer contest for girls with the combined best score in shoe scrambling, minnow catching, bubble gum blowing, can kicking and watermelon seed spitting.

Stan is the second in his family to win the title. His older brother, Steve, won in 1975.

Judging for the competition, open to boys representing states which border the Mississippi River, was based on speed, neatness and costume. A Plainville, Ill., youth, Brad Hoskins, edged the winner to the finish line. Craig Breeland of Bay Saint Louis, Miss., was the other finalist.

"Steve helped me out a lot," said Stan, a Hannibal boy. "He taught me a lot of the things he knew, especially how to get all the board covered and do it real fast. We used to practice together on a fence in the back yard."

Scott Ehrhardt, 9, described by brother Stan as "pretty good," will try to sustain the budding dynasty next year.

Additional contests included a 120-entry frog-jumping contest from which Jody Wilson, 6, of Hannibal emerged the repeat winner.

Young Jody's entry leaped 16 feet, 4 inches. A distant third was Bill Stead of Sacramento, Calif.

Stead is president of what is believed to be the world's only finishing school for frogs, Croaker College, where contestants are trained for the famed Calaveras County jumping contest, also connected to a Mark Twain yarn.

Violence ends Klan rally

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Flagstaffs, signboards, eggs and fists were thrown as about 100 young demonstrators broke up a Ku Klux Klan antibusing rally on the steps of the Statehouse.

State police restored order quickly, and Ku Klux Klan Imperial Wizard Dale Reusch, 38, vowed to return in September. He said he would "meet violence with violence."

The July 4th melee here was the second Klan rally broken up violently over the holiday weekend.

In Plains, Ga., President Carter's hometown, Saturday night, Buddy Cochran injured 30 persons, 19 of whom were admitted to hospital, when he drove his sports car through a crowd of 250 persons into a platform on which Bill Wilkinson, imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan, was speaking.

The 30-year-old auto mechanic from Americus, Ga., about 10 miles west of Plains, was charged with aggravated assault and held on $190,000 bond.

Some 300 persons protesting the Columbus rally paraded on the outskirts of the state capitol grounds Monday, but when Reusch began his speech, about 100 protesters moved up the steps.

"You talk sick," one man told Reusch.

"We will go on with the rally regardless of the agitation," replied Reusch.

Holding a can of chemical skin irritant for self defense in one hand and a microphone in the other, and flanked by about 20 supporters, Reusch resumed his speech.

The protesters pressed forward, knocking Reusch to the ground. Klansmen, who wielded flagstaffs like baseball bats, took advantage of their higher ground atop the steps.

The protesters smashed the public address system and peppered Reusch and Klansmen with eggs, chanting "Ku Klux Klan, scum of the land."

Reusch was spat upon and stripped of his hooded purple Klan robe. He was cut in the face during the fracas. A television cameraman also was injured slightly.

Posse nabs ostrich

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — A maverick ostrich roamed the Texas prairie around here — at least until Wichita Falls dog catcher Jim Ray Goodner and a posse of vigilantes cornered it.

But no one has any idea where the 5-foot, 100-pound ostrich came from. For the moment, the bird is in the dog pound, caged next to two mutts who were also nabbed Monday by Goodner.

"We've never caught an ostrich before," said Goodner, who took nearly an hour to run down the bird. "I have no idea what the thing eats."

Goodner was spending a leisurely July 4 at the city's animal control center until he got a call to pick an animal on the outskirts of Wichita Falls.

The animal turned out to be the ostrich. Goodner and five bystanders chased the bird for an hour, until it tired in the 95-degree afternoon heat.

"It took six of us to catch him and he sure didn't want to be caught," said Goodner. "We never would have caught him if he hadn't been tucked out from the heat."

Goodner then managed to cram the bird into his dog catcher truck.

City officials, completely mystified about where the bird came from, said if no one claims it in three or four days, they will turn it over to the humane society. The society will probably donate the ostrich to a zoo.

MUNY FLAG TOURNEY — Numerous local golfers took advantage of the clear skies and stiff breezes during the Fourth of July to participate in a golf tournament at Comanche Trail Golf Course. Seen left to right, trying for their share in prizes, are Jerry Barron, Robert Caffey, David Howell, Jim Roger and Joe Sharpnack.

Lusk wins Muny Flag

Fifty stay-at-home golfers celebrated their holiday Monday by playing in the 4th of July Flag Tournament held by Pro Bobby Howell at Comanche Trail Golf Course.

Men and women golfers participated throughout the day to see how many holes they could play with their allotted strokes of par plus their handicap. As the day progressed, American flags began popping up over the course, designating where a player had finished his round of golf. Number 18 green and number one green were surrounded by flags. However, two local golfers breezed by the 18th green and number one again and proceeded to number two (their 20th hole.)

Mrs. Debra Lusk took top honors by using her last stroke to put her ball in the hole on the number two green. Mr. Paul Soldan Sr. came in second, having placed his flag 10 feet from the hole on number two green. Third place was won by Gary Phillips, who finished about 100 yards away from the number two green.

Gift certificates and/or merchandise ranging from $30 value for first place, to $4 for 17th place, were awarded the winners.

Other winners were: 4th — Debbie Felts; 5th — Charles Burdette; 6th — Nile Cole; 7th — Jack Bowers; 8th — J.T. Morgan; 9th — John Arrick; 10th — Carl Small; 11th — Abe Gonzales; 12th — Dorothy Hooper; 13th — Jim Rogers; 14th — Dave Brazel; 15th — Jim Felts; 16th — Gary Howell; 17th — Bill Crane; 18th — Glenedene Williams.

Nicklaus favored in British Open

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, superstar of the British open golf championships for 15 years, is heavily favored to win it again over one of Scotland's wildest and windiest courses.

The bookies rated him an 11-2 shot for the tournament starting Wednesday over Turnberry's 6,875-yard Ailsa course beside the Firth of Clyde.

Since 1962, Nicklaus has won the British Open twice, been runnerup five times and placed third three times.

The 117-year-old tournament, which is alternated among eight of Britain's ancient courses, is being played at Turnberry for the first time. If the wind blows, it could turn into a nightmare.

"I played here once in a tournament in 1973," said Johnny Miller, the defending champion. "It was horrendous weather, even by Scottish standards."

The ninth tee, out on a windswept promontory beside a lighthouse, is the most notorious on any British links. The players have to drive from a tiny patch of ground, with waves breaking over the rocks right beneath them.

"On a course like this you have to use imagination," Miller said. "By comparison, on American courses it's like shooting darts."

"At Turnberry the game is more like it was intended to be when the British invented it."

Miller won his title last year on the comparatively tame layout at Lytham, in northwest England.

He started this year badly but his form has been picking up lately.

"I won't pretend I'm optimistic," Miller said. "But in fact I'm playing better now than at this time last year. I was not playing well going into last year's British Open."

Next after Nicklaus in the bookies' list are Tom Weiskopf 10-1; Tom Watson, winner of his last two tournaments, 12-1; and Ben Crenshaw 14-1. Miller is rated a 16-1 shot, along with Hale Irwin and Hubert Green, winner of the U.S. Open.

Local team takes 2nd in tournament

The Second Annual Big Spring Evening Lions' Club Class A Fastpitch Softball Tournament was considered a "growing success" by those in attendance.

Laughlin AFB took top honors in the tourney, with the Big Spring Merchants capturing the first runner-up position. The Lamesa Merchants finished in the second runner-up category.

Most Valuable Player of the tourney was Jerry Thames of Laughlin AFB. He led his team through the loser's bracket with pinpoint pitching and four home runs.

Debbie "Jackrabbit" Scott won the Base Running award for her fastest time of 12 seconds.

Big Spring took four places in the All Tournament team: Sam Kerby as pitcher, Elmer McMahan (outfield), Fred Koontz as second sacker and Jim Roger (outfield).

Other all tourney members included: Steve Beinke (Laughlin, catcher); Joe Noya (Laughlin, first base); Bill Mills (Laughlin, third base); Al White (Lamesa, shortstop); Al Oldfather (Webb, utility infielder); Richard Winfred (Lamesa, outfielder); Willie Cobb (Laughlin, utility outfielder).

Astros capture pitch-off, 12-7

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Houston's Jose Cruz is a .267 hitter against National League pitching. But against the San Diego Padres, Cruz is hitting .442 this season.

"I have to have some kind of luck against some club," the Astros' right fielder said Monday night after driving in four runs with a single and two homers to spark the Astros' 12-7 victory over the Padres.

"I've always hit well against San Diego," he said, "and especially in this park. I'm lucky here, I guess, but you have to have some luck in this game."

Cruz started his night with an RBI single during a third-inning burst in which Houston sent 11 men to the plate and took a 7-0 lead.

The Padres battled back to 7-6 after four innings, but Cruz belted a two-run homer in the sixth and a solo homer in the seventh to keep the Astros in control.

"Cruz got off to a slow start this season," said Astros Manager Bill Virdon, "but he's been hitting much better the past six weeks."

Houston shortstop Roger Metzger also had three hits, including two triples, and drove in three runs. Joe Ferguson added his 11th homer to help lead the Astros' 13-hit assault on five Padres pitchers.

San Diego, having lost 11 of its last 13, was led by Mike Ivie, who had two hits, including a three-run homer.

The Astros also got solid relief pitching from Joe Niekro, 3-2, who blanked the Padres over the final 31-3 innings.

"Niekro isn't as steady as I'd like," said Virdon, "but that isn't the final answer. The final answer is the result and he got the right results tonight."

Niekro's toughest moment arrived in the sixth when he was called in with the bases loaded, two outs and newly-signed Padre slugger Dave Winfield at the plate with Houston leading, 9-7.

"I knew he had just signed a multi-year contract and I could just picture him hitting a grand slam homer to celebrate in front of that big crowd (35,735)," said Niekro.

Instead, Niekro struck out Winfield with a knuckle ball to end the Padres threat and get the Astros out of the jam. Niekro stopped San Diego on two hits the rest of the way.

"Any time Winfield is up at the plate," said Virdon, "you have to figure he's capable of hitting one out. Those kind of games are nice to win."

The Padres managed 10 hits against Houston pitching with rookie shortstop Bill Almon showing the way with three singles but they again were hurt by poor pitching.

Starter Tom Griffin took the loss to fall to 5-6, giving up six runs in the first three innings before being knocked from the box.

The Padres battled back to 7-6 after four innings, but Cruz belted a two-run homer in the sixth and a solo homer in the seventh to keep the Astros in control.

"Cruz got off to a slow start this season," said Astros Manager Bill Virdon, "but he's been hitting much better the past six weeks."

Houston shortstop Roger Metzger also had three hits, including two triples, and drove in three runs. Joe Ferguson added his 11th homer to help lead the Astros' 13-hit assault on five Padres pitchers.

San Diego, having lost 11 of its last 13, was led by Mike Ivie, who had two hits, including a three-run homer.

The Astros also got solid relief pitching from Joe Niekro, 3-2, who blanked the Padres over the final 31-3 innings.

Corbett can't stand it

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Brad Corbett, the free-wheeling, big-spending majority owner of the Texas Rangers, has had it with big league baseball players "who don't give a damn" and put his stock on sale today for about $6 million.

Corbett, who runs a multi-million dollar plastic pipe business, said, "I'm selling the team. I just can't stand it anymore. It's killing me."

His emotional remarks came after the Rangers suffered a 1-0 defeat to the Kansas City Royals before a standing-room holiday crowd of 34,660.

"I've got players that I put complete confidence and faith in and I've found that those players just don't give a damn," stormed Corbett.

(AP WIREPHOTO)

SAYS HE WANTS OUT — Brad Corbett, majority stock holder in the Texas Rangers baseball team, says he can't take the team's losing streak any longer and wants to sell his stock. Corbett made the announcement Monday night following the team's 1-0 defeat by the Kansas City Royals at Arlington. Corbett says about $6 million would buy him out.

"They don't care about anything but drawing a paycheck. They are (expletive deleted) on the field and (expletive deleted) off the field."

Corbett said that his actions were "keyed on an article in the Fort Worth Star Telegram. . . it said I was bringing shame on the city of Fort Worth. This is not a

UCLA post to be filled

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville basketball Coach Denny Crum was expected to announce today whether he will accept an offer to become head coach at UCLA, his alma mater.

The 40-year-old California native, once an assistant to former Bruins Coach John Wooden, was expected to reveal his decision after meeting this morning with Louisville Athletic Director Dave Hart.

The Newark Star-Ledger, in its Tuesday edition, quoted a highly-placed source as saying that Crum would accept the position. But Crum, reached at home by the paper, said "I have not made my decision yet."

Rangers nudged by Colborn, 1-0

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — If Jim Colborn could pitch against the Texas Rangers every fourth night, the Kansas City righthander might be a 30-game winner.

Colborn, who no-hit Texas on May 14, scattered seven hits and received relief help from Mark Littell to nudge the Rangers 1-0 Monday night before the season's largest crowd of 34,660.

"I don't know what it is I have on the Rangers," said Colborn, shaking his head. "I've just been sitting here trying to figure it out."

"I always seem motivated against them. I was determined out there because I knew I couldn't give up one run against them with Gaylord Perry pitching against me."

Colborn has now pitched 17 and one-third consecutive innings of shutout ball against Texas. He has a 10-3 lifetime record against the Rangers.

Manager Whitey Herzog of the Royals said, "It's funny how a pitcher gets a whammy on a team. Now, Bert Blyleven, who goes against us Tuesday night, is 19-11 lifetime against us."

Herzog said although the Royals were 8-3 on their current road trip, "We're not quite ready to make our move yet without George Brett in the lineup. That's nothing against Cookie Rojas, it's just that Brett means so much to this team."

Brett has an infected left elbow. But Herzog said, "We expect him to come back this week."

Tom Poquette's two-out single in the fifth inning scored Frank White, who had doubled, to hand Perry his seventh loss against as many victories.

Littell earned his 10th save of the year as he chopped the Rangers down after two ninth-inning singles.

Colborn is 10-8 and thinking of 20 victories.

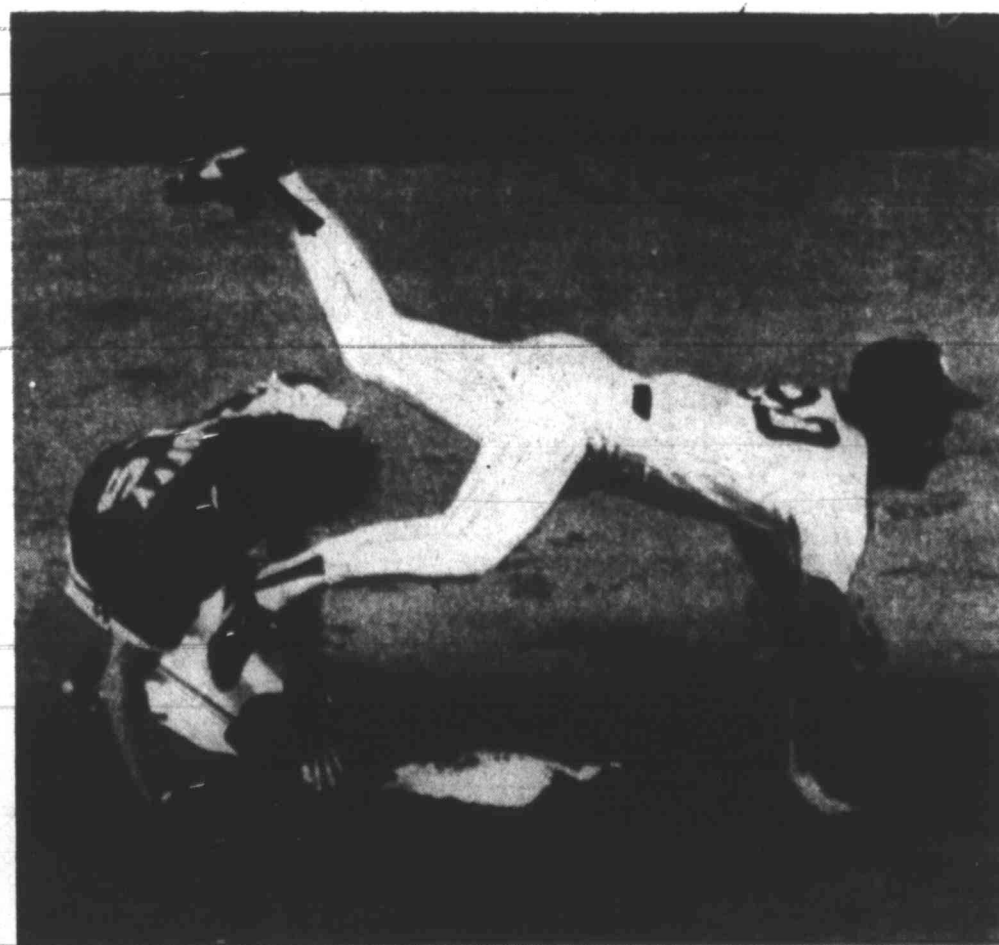

"I'm much more consistent than I was last year," said Colborn. Someone mentioned especially against the Rangers and Colborn laughed. "Yeah, how do you figure that?"

Paul Splittorf will go against Blyleven in Tuesday night's game.

Corbett spent big money in the off season to land such free agent stars as Bert Campaneris, Doyle Alexander and Darold Knowles and Paul Lindblad.

He also shelled out hard cash for designated hitter Willie Horton and had one of the major leagues' biggest payrolls, which included $250,000-a-year pitchers Bert Blyleven and Gaylord Perry.

Former Oakland star Claudell Washington was snapped up by Corbett's money and recently pitcher Dock Ellis was quoted as saying "The only reason I've done so well for the Rangers is because the man (Corbett) shelled out the money to make me feel welcome."

OVER AND OUT — New York Yankees shortstop Bucky Dent flips after Cleveland Indians Frank Duffy breaks up an attempted double play with a collision. Duffy was forced at second on Jim Norris' grounder to first baseman Chris Chambliss. Dent had to leave the game. Yankees won Monday night's game 7-5.

Cubs see pennant shadow on 4th

By the Associated Press

It often is said that the whoever is in first place on July 4 will win the pennant. That may have been the only comfort the Chicago Cubs got on Independence Day.

The Cubs dropped a doubleheader to the Montreal Expos Monday, 19-3 and 7-6, and saw their first-place lead shrink to four games over Philadelphia in the National League's East Division. The Cubs have lost six of their last seven games.

Montreal's first-game explosion was led by Ellis Valentine and Andre Dawson, each of whom drove in five runs. Meanwhile, Warren Cromartie had five hits, including three doubles.

Chicago outfielder-first baseman Larry Blittner made his major league pitching debut in the eighth inning of the game. Blittner came on with two men on base and was bombed for three homers, six runs and five hits in 11-3 innings.

"I was as surprised as anyone," said Blittner of Cubs Manager Herman Franks' decision to bring him on to pitch, even though Chicago trailed 11-2 at the time. "But I'll do it again if they want me to."

"I used him because I didn't have anyone else," said Franks, who was thrown out of the game in the ninth when he argued with plate umpire Terry Tata about an alleged beanball thrown by Blittner to Del Unser. "We have nine games in seven days. What did you expect me to do in a spot like that, bring in Bruce Sutter?"

Sutter is the Cubs' ace reliever.

Montreal captured the nightcap as Sam Mejias doubled, tripled and homered, driving in two runs and scoring three.

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia beat New York 3-1; Pittsburgh swept a pair from St. Louis, 5-2 and 4-3; Los Angeles blanked San Francisco 4-0, handing the Giants their seventh consecutive loss; Atlanta edged Cincinnati 5-4, and Houston outscored San Diego, 12-7.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "Old blue was flying, said Darrell Waltrip. "I was running after him, but there was no way anybody was gonna catch him."

Old Blue is Richard Petty, winner for the seventh time in major stock car races at Daytona International Speedway when he beat Waltrip by 17.7 seconds in the rain-interrupted Firecracker 400-mile Monday.

"We weren't the fastest, but we were the quickest," Petty said. "I mean the quickest getting back to the finish line. Some of those cars that go fast down the straights don't do as well in the corners."

The money incentive is still there for the six-time national champion on the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) grand national circuit.

It wasn't only the $23,075 Petty won in the race, but the fact that it pulled him within 17 points of defending national champion Cale Yarborough in this year's race. Yarborough had mechanical trouble and had to settle for 24th place.

Fans keep Pacers sovernt

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana Pacers' fans, young and old, voted "yes" during a unique telethon Sunday which apparently will keep the National Basketball Association team operating for another season.

On June 6, the team's owners indicated the team would be sold and probably moved elsewhere if 8,000 season tickets weren't sold by the end of the month.

John Jewett, president of Market Square Inc., which operates the arena where the Pacers play their home games, took that as a challenge and began working with the team to reach the goal.

Although the goal wasn't reached, Jewett urged the owners to wait a few more days as he organized a last-ditch telethon to reach the goal.

Monday, there was a special celebration here as the goal was topped just as the 16½-hour telethon ended with some 8,028 season tickets sold. And calls for more tickets were still coming in 30 minutes after the telethon ended.

"The agony of thinking the team was going to move was more than I could stand," said Freddie Lewis, a star on the team when it won three American Basketball Association championships.

"Having the club reach its goal and knowing it will stay is just as exciting to me as winning a championship."

Lewis joined other former and current members who participated in the show, which was carried into four states by three Indianapolis television stations.

"I've seen teams leave cities before due to financial trouble and there was never any effort like the one put forth here," said Lewis.

"The fans certainly showed they wanted a team."

"Those fans backed us to the bitter end," said Bob Leonard, the team's coach and general manager. "I spent 10 years here with the Pacers and I hated to even think in my mind that the club wouldn't be playing in Indiana. There are so many people I want to thank that I don't know where to start."

Eichelberger, who also won the Milwaukee tournament in 1971, had been tied for second place entering Sunday's 36-hole final of this year's event. The tourney had been delayed a day by rain last Thursday and was temporarily stalled by rain Sunday morning.

However, the 33-year-old Eichelberger, recovering from biceps on his 25th and 26th holes, used three birdies in his last nine holes to notch a closing 70. That was two under par over the windy, wet Tuckaway Country Club course.

He finished with a 10 under, 278 total, two strokes ahead of Morris Hatafsky, Gary McCord and Mike Morley.

The $300,000 Milwaukee tournament was skipped, as usual, by most of the tour's top names who elected instead to prepare for this week's British Open.

century.

"I am not scared any more," Borg said after beating Connors here. "I am more mentally tough. Now I know I can come back. I have confidence I can win."

Borg lost to Connors in the finals of the U.S. Open at Forest Hills last fall. If he wins there this year, the Swede will be the third man in the past decade to win the Wimbledon and Forest Hills titles the same year. Laver won both in 1969 and Connors in 1974.

The only American to win at the century Wimbledon tourney was JoAnne Russell of Miami Beach, Fla., who captured a share of the women's doubles crown with Australian Helen Gourlay Cawley.

Borg's hunger increases

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg, the blond tennis ace from Sweden, has set his sights on becoming the fourth man to win more than two men's singles titles at historic Wimbledon.

But first he wants another crack at Jimmy Connors at the U.S. Open in September.

Borg beat Connors, the Belleville, Ill., whiz who has been considered the No. 1-ranking player in the world, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 Saturday to win his second straight Wimbledon crown.

"I want to win Wimbledon again," said the broad-shouldered 21-year-old Scandinavian with the 80-pound tension in his racket strings.

If he does win again next year, he would be only the second man to capture three consecutive Wimbledon singles titles in the last 50 years. Fred Perry of England did it in the 1930s.

Australian John Newcome also has three Wimbledon singles titles, but only two in succession.

Rod Laver of Australia is the only man to win four singles championships at Wimbledon in the past half-

Various techniques used for hypertension control

SEATTLE (AP) — Exercise, weight control and salt restriction to control high blood pressure were advocated by Dr. George N. Aagaard at a medical symposium on high blood pressure here.

"Exercise provides a daily mechanism for working off some of the nervous tensions which people generate at home, work and in social life," said Dr. Aagaard, Professor of Medicine and Pharmacology, University of Washington School of Medicine, Seattle. Exercise "helps to control weight and enhance a sense of well being if done appropriately."

The physician recommended walking, which he said should be "gradually increased to 30 minutes and sustained at a brisk pace." Swimming, dancing, exercising to music, tennis, golf, squash or other sports "make exercise fun," he observed.

Dr. Aagaard stressed the importance of weight control in the treatment of elevated blood pressure. He also recommended mild salt restriction for anyone who has ever had an elevated blood pressure on a single or on repeated readings, and especially if the family history is positive for hypertension high blood pressure.

"This means no grossly salted foods such as nuts, potato chips, pickles, ham, bacon, and most commercial cold meats, no salt shaker at the table, and limited use of salt in cooking," he explained.

Dr. Aagaard served as chairman for a two-day symposium sponsored by the University of Washington School of Medicine and by CIBA Pharmaceutical Co. as part of its postgraduate education series for physicians called Medical Horizons.

Drug therapy, an established treatment for patients with high blood pressure, and a relatively new approach, psychological techniques such as the relaxation response and biofeedback, were discussed by some of the country's leading authorities on hypertension.

Man in house not always head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concluding that the man in the house is not necessarily the head of the household, the government is changing the way it collects statistics. The result may change the way Americans look on paper to future policy-makers, officials say.

Although the government's statistical profile of its population should reflect reality, it does not, says economist Janet L. Norwood, deputy commissioner for data analysis at the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Requiring census-takers to label the man in the house as the "head" of the household not only is anachronistic but also can mislead policy-makers by giving a distorted view of society, said Ms. Norwood, who prefers that designation.

New insights about the relationship of persons within families are needed, she said.

The Census Bureau will drop its "head of household" label with the 1980 census, after successfully testing a form that can yield needed data about the family without making members say who is boss, she said.

Ms. Norwood said too many policy-makers talk about the "average" family as a husband who supports his wife and two children, a profile matched by only 6 percent of all American families.

She said that in more than half of the husband-wife marriages, both spouses work, and wives are not "fitting about" as some policy-makers still contend but instead have serious career interests.

Policy-makers shaping child care legislation should know, for instance, that more than half the nation's young children have mothers either working or looking for work and that a soaring divorce rate means many new single-parent families, she said.

They need to take into account the fact that in increasing numbers, married couples opt to have no children and adults decide to live together without marriage, she said.

Starting later this month, the BLS will inaugurate a quarterly analysis of workers and their relationship within the family they live in, she said in an interview elaborating on an article in July's Monthly Labor Review.

The Census Bureau and the BLS now designate one person in a family as the head in their surveys. The Census Bureau says "the head is usually the person regarded as the head by the members of the household; however, married women are not classified as heads if their husbands are living with them at the time of the survey."

Critics say this "implies an unrealistic authority structure in the family, is ambiguous and of questionable validity and is demeaning and offensive to a large group of the population," Ms. Norwood said.

Family Says Fiance Beneath Her Station

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old widow contemplating marriage to a widower. He is affectionate, trustworthy, and thoughtful. He loves his children and they love him. He is a wonderful father to his own children. He cooks, cleans, washes, irons and never complains. We couldn't help but have smooth sailing, and I do love him, but my problem is the strong objections my family has to this man. They don't like him because our backgrounds are so different. My parents are culture-conscious and somewhat snobbish. My friend is the eldest of 15 children of a struggling immigrant family. His English is not very good because he hasn't had the educational advantages I've had. If left alone, I'm sure we could overcome these differences, but I am very close to my family, and they could make life unbearable for me if I were to marry this man. I've told him yes, but wonder if perhaps I should reverse my decision. Do you consider my parents' objection too great a stumbling block?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Yes, because apparently you do. When you are able to say, "I intend to live my own life with a man of my choice, and if my parents don't like it, they can lump it," I'll reverse my answer.

DEAR ABBY: I don't know what I am writing to you for. My problem is money, and you can't help me unless you get big-hearted and send me a check for $50,000. I own my own business and make good money, but my wife spends it faster than I can make it. To make matters worse, I have four daughters who are exactly like their mother. I am drowning in bills every month, and there doesn't seem to be any end to it. Will you please tell my wife and daughters to quit being extravagant?

OWES PLENTY

DEAR OWES: No, that's YOUR JOB. It's bad enough to have spoiled your wife, but you are guilty of perpetuating the crime by raising four more females in her image. Turn off those charge accounts, Dad, and put your wife on an allowance.

DEAR ABBY: A girl I work with is getting married soon, and she wants to borrow my wedding gown and veil. She's not even a close friend, but she's seen pictures of my wedding and says that's exactly the kind of gown and veil she's always wanted. Unfortunately, we're the same size, too.

Abby, I'm saving my wedding gown for my two younger sisters to wear—and someday I will have daughters who will want to wear it. So many of my friends have told me they let someone wear their wedding gowns and they were returned in terrible condition that I hate to take the chance. What story can I tell this girl so I won't have to let her wear it? I hate to have her mad at me, as we work together every day.

SIZE TEN

DEAR TEN: Why make up a story? Tell her the truth. CONFIDENTIAL TO R. IN ST. PAUL: You must be kidding! It is highly improper for Sue and her boyfriend and her boyfriend's mother to sleep in the same bed. I don't care WHO sleeps in the middle!

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Mrs. Richie Tubb honoree at recent baby shower

Mrs. Richie Tubb was the honoree at a baby shower recently in the home of the J.E. Feughs.

Mrs. Tubb was presented with a corsage of white lace edged baby socks tied with green ribbons.

A green and white color theme was carried out on the table with a green dotted ruffled cloth. Crystal appointments were used, and favors of candy pacifiers and napkins folded in the shape of diapers completed the decorations.

The honoree's mother and mother-in-law, Mrs. Bob Hunt and Mrs. Horace Tubb, assisted the honoree with the gifts. Other special guests were the honoree's sisters, Mrs. Johnny Peugh and Ms. Kay Hunt.

Other special guests were Mrs. Hunt, Lamesa, the honoree's grandmother; Mrs. O.C. Moore, Big Spring; Mrs. Mary Bagley and Ms. Rhonda Bagley, Albuquerque, N.M., aunt and cousin of the honoree.

Hostesses included Mrs. Peugh, Mrs. Jack Hopper, Mrs. Jerry Hall, Mrs. Kenneth Schuelke, Mrs. Rex Zant, Mrs. Clarence Ditto Jr., Mrs. Rickie Hughes, Mrs. Calvin Hughes, Mrs. Robert Nichols, and Mrs. Bob Hill.

Need basic 'know-how'

COLLEGE STATION — Charcoal grilled meats are unbeatable — especially when outdoor chefs know the basic "how-to's."

Cooking is ready to begin once the fire is a bed of rosy coals covered with grey ash, says Marilyn Haggard, a foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

GRILLING GUIDELINES
Place meats on the hot grill, allow them to sear on one side, baste with sauce or butter, cook half of total cooking time — and then turn them over once. Turning meat only once retains more moisture.

In turning meats, always use tongs — as forks leave holes that allow tasty juices to escape, the specialist says.

If fire flames up as fat drips on the coals, sprinkle flames lightly with water or a little baking soda.

To slow down cooking, remove a few coals — or raise the rack. To speed cooking, add coals along the fire edge and transfer to the center once grey ash covers them.

Don't try to live your sister's life

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Doctor Wallace:
My older sister is very beautiful and popular with both boys and girls. She is a cheerleader and is in the honor society.

Unfortunately for me, I am not beautiful and popular and did not make the cheerleading squad. My only saving grace is that I too am a member of the honor society. My problem is while I love my sister, there are times when I feel good when she has a problem. I know this is wrong, but what can I do to stop feeling this way?

Maggie, Little Rock, AR
Dear Maggie:
Stop fantasizing about your sister's life and start living your own.

The correct hairstyle, use of cosmetics, and the right type of clothing can do wonders for the ordinary girl. Try to look for the good traits in people (I know it's hard sometimes), and watch your popularity grow.

Doctor Wallace:
Recently I worked for a nationally known restaurant. After working for two weeks, I had to quit because the bosses constantly harassed me and made dirty gestures. Even when I return as a customer, I still get smart remarks and gestures. I'm a minor and this was my first job and I don't believe I received fair treatment.

Is there anyplace I can go to get this stopped? I believe in standing up for my rights because soon I will be working full time and I do not plan on having every place of business doing this to me.

L.W., Piqua, OH

Dear L.W.:
Have your parents escort you into the restaurant and meet with the culprits. No one, teen or adult, should be subjected to this type of behavior.

Be assured that this type of behavior is not common with employers. Why not find a more friendly restaurant to frequent?

If you prefer, you might contact your local Labor Relations Board and share your experience with them.

Doctor Wallace:
I have a friend that really makes me mad.

She acts like she knows everything. She always has to be right. She debates everything I say. She always has to have the last word.

What do you think I should say to her next time she says, "I know that?"

Kay, Santa Ana, CA

Dear Kay:
Smile and tell her that that's why you are her friend — because she is so smart.

Jack L. Key, who was at one time a Big Spring resident when his father was a major at Webb Air Force Base, has been written up in the Grand Prairie newspaper as claiming that the drug laetrile has saved his life.

The article, written by Floyce Korsak, says that the young man claims that he is alive and not supposed to be. He says he spends $66 weekly for laetrile which is saving his life.

The controversial Vitamin B 17 which is derived from the pits of apricots and other fruits, is said by some medical authorities to temporarily halt tumors but not help in the long run.

The Food and Drug Administration has not approved the drug, which is available in Mexico.

Keys tells his story this way, "Early last year I took what I thought was a cold and treated myself with common cold remedies. Finally I went to a doctor who treated me for pneumonia.

"I then went to see a specialist in July and he took X rays and tests. I saw the X rays and the huge mass in my chest. I entered the hospital and the doctor took a biopsy and told me I had cancer — Hodgkins Disease.

"Later that morning, they recommended surgery. Another doctor recommended I go to M.D. Anderson. I got the feeling that they were debating about my life and didn't think I had a chance anyway.

"This was on Friday. On Sunday I asked my regular doctor to release me to go to M.D. Anderson. I went home on Sunday, my family and I decided to try laetrile. My wife and I flew to Tijuana, Mexico. I was terribly ill and coughing every breath. The tumor which was attached to the trachea must have been the size of a football. It covered my heart and liver and pushed out my lungs.

"Later that Tuesday I went straight to Dr. Soto de Leon. On Thursday I got my first shot of laetrile. My wife and I stayed in a motel room across the border. I made daily trips to the clinic.

"He was glad to have me because I had not had cobalt or chemotherapy and was what he called a virgin patient. He said he would be able to see how laetrile would affect someone who had not received other kinds of cancer treatment.

"The results with me were dramatic. Within three days, I began to feel like a new person. In two weeks, my tumor was reduced 60 per cent and at the end of three weeks, it was 90 per cent gone.

"We came home after three weeks. I am doing fine. I went to work and am holding down two jobs. Down there, there was hope. Here the hospitals are depressing. One week of tests in the hospital here cost me between $1,200 and $1,500.

"My bill in Tijuana, including everything came to $765 for three weeks. There are yet unanswered questions, but I have faith."

I have no knowledge of this subject whatsoever. A friend of Jack's brought in the story and asked that we tell his Big Spring friends about it.

There's the story.

I do not know, nor understand either side of the laetrile issue.

If I was given the same set of circumstances, I do not know what I would do. At this point, I think I would probably rely upon the advice of my family doctor. But I have not faced these circumstances. So I do not know.

But it is a story of something that has happened to a former Big Spring citizen — who used to live here — where I ride fence.

Catholic schools necessary?

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican urged Roman Catholic bishops today to seek government funds to support their parochial school systems. It said Catholic schools are a necessary counterbalance to modern secularism and a guarantee of religious freedom.

The Sacred Congregation for Catholic Education issued a 10,000-word document which also criticized Catholic school systems that cater mostly to the rich; urged priests, brothers and nuns not to abandon teaching, and insisted that the church's schools must meet high professional standards.

The document noted that some governments already provide financial support to Catholic schools and "guarantee both the preservation of the special status of the Catholic school and its ability to perform its function adequately."

"Catholic schools are thereby more or less closely associated with the national system," the document continued, "and are assured an economic and juridical status similar to state schools. These solutions are an encouragement to those responsible for Catholic schools in countries where the Catholic community must still shoulder a very heavy burden of cost to maintain an often highly important network of Catholic schools."

The document said the church must "mobilize her educational resources in the face of the materialism, pragmatism and technocracy of contemporary society." It said Catholic schools help "promote that freedom of teaching which champions and guarantees freedom of conscience and the parental right to choose the school best suited to a parent's educational purposes."

The document set forth answers to a number of criticisms of Catholic schools:

—Those who argue they are out of step with the lay character of the modern secular state ignore the need for institutional witness;

—Religious schools are not intended as instruments of proselytism but take into account the religious dimension of every man;

—Catholic schools have not outlived their usefulness but may be more important today because of the tendency of the modern state to establish monolithic systems of education;

—If Catholic schools seem to serve only the wealthy in some countries, that is because of the state's lack of appreciation of their benefit to society and its failure to support them financially;

—Schools which seem to fall short of top professional standards may be just isolated cases and may actually provide more long-range values for the child.

The document warned against schools that cater primarily to the rich, even though lack of government financial support may be a cause of this.

"Since education is an important means of improving the social and economic condition of the individual and of peoples," it said, "if the Catholic school were to turn its attention exclusively or predominantly to those from the wealthier social classes, it could be contributing toward maintaining their privileged position, and could thereby continue to favor a society which is unjust."

Municipal bonds volume soars

NEW YORK (AP) — The return to health of the municipal bond market, devastated by this city's financial collapse and attempt at renegotiating on payments, is one of the most encouraging financial stories in years.

The contrast is one of stability evolving out of chaos, of confidence arising out of despair. It is the story of the return to financial integrity of municipalities that had been on untenable spending sprees.

Three years ago there were widespread fears that many municipalities, not just New York City, would be able to borrow, if at all, only by paying interest rates so high that they meant curtailment of city services.

Nothing highlights the new stability more than the recent $250 million issue of 18-year bonds by the New York Municipal Assistance Corp. The state-city agency paid 7.5 per cent. In late 1975 it had paid 11.

It isn't only New York that is floating bonds. In each of the first five months of 1977 a new volume record was set, with May reaching a new high for any month, with $4.2 billion of financing arranged.

And as volume soars, interest rates have been falling. Some measures of the market now show rates averaging close to 5.5 per cent, down nearly 1.5 per cent in three years.

Behind the recovery, of course, is a new confidence on the part of those who traditionally buy such bonds, the attractiveness of which is enhanced by the fact that income is free of federal income tax liability.

But even without the tax-free feature, municipalities had some endearing characteristics, chief of which was safety. Next to an investment in the federal government itself, nothing was thought to be safer than a municipal.

Then came the New York City financial mess, accompanied by an attempt to sidestep the obligation to repay as promised. Holders of the bonds were told they would have to accept new repayment terms or nothing at all.

Having believed that municipals were backed by the full faith and credit of the municipality — that bondholders had first call on the municipality's assets — investors were shocked. They withdrew from the market.

Municipalities need to borrow in order to exist. Faced with a shutoff, they began getting their finances under control. Taxpayers insisted that spending be cut and that credit ratings be improved.

The courts contributed. Outraged investors sought justice, and the courts agreed, stating that local governments could not unilaterally invalidate their contracts with bond buyers.

The industry itself recognized that it could not continue to sell bonds of municipalities about which it knew little. Bond dealers now insist on more specifics about the financial condition of municipalities.

As confidence and order returned, interest rates began to fall. And as they did, voters began to approve bond issues they would have denied two years earlier. Volume built.

It's a gratifying story, and an amazing one too, as you can appreciate if you recall the despair that pervaded the market not long ago when bondholders were told that the municipalities were breaking faith with them.

Americans goofing off?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andrew Rooney, whose film essays on Washington bureaucracy and dining out have added a nice light touch to CBS News wares the last two years, has a new special arriving tonight.

It's called "Mr. Rooney Goes to Work," an inquiry into how hard Americans do or do not work these days.

The project is ambitious, considering the lack of, say, a U.S. Department of Work to tout alarms when sloth spreads, or fire sirens that indicate all workers just became busier than a beaver.

Rooney candidly admits at the start of his show the thing originally began with the idea that nobody's working very hard, "and we were thinking of calling it 'Goofing Off in America.'"

To see if this is so, he says, he and a film crew traveled the country and visited 100 factories and other places of business.

He also talked to a wide range of folks, nearly 40 of whom appear on-camera tonight — workers, union and business chiefs, two handymen, even a young Florida beachcomber with a gold ring in his ear.

Alas, this show, which accents the positive, virtually eliminates the negative and doesn't mess with Mr. In-Between, lacks the zip of Rooney's sharp, often funny earlier dissections of bureaucracy and outside-the-home eats.

Early on, Rooney's touch for good-humored irony shows up when he recalls that a board chairman, Stanford Noll, had "said that the trouble with the American worker is that he's making so much money, he takes off on vacation whenever he feels like it."

"Well, that was sort of a catchy remark, so we called Sanford Noll's office in Cleveland to see if we could come there and talk to him," Rooney adds.

"His secretary told us he'd taken off for Fort Lauderdale and wouldn't be back for six weeks."

So Rooney & Co. decamp to Fort Lauderdale, and a pretty interesting interview with Mr. Noll ensues.

Woe, sag sets in with repetitive claims from various workers, a stray street-painter, even a man who's put shoes together for 42 years, that they all like their jobs and like to work.

It aids Rooney's conclusion that Americans do work hard, do enjoy their labors, but there's gotta be another way.

"Work" rallies in a talk with handyman George LaPelle and in an interesting trip to a Cleveland plant where workers participate heavily in both profits and management decisions.

To file rights suit on behalf of blind

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Edwin Myers says he will file a civil rights suit on behalf of all blind people against the night spot that refused him admission because he was accompanied by his guide dog.

The 29-year-old Myers, who has been blind since an automobile accident 12 years ago, spent four hours in jail Sunday morning after being charged with disobeying a police order to stay out of the Starving Artist, a restaurant-night club in the basement of Actors Theater of Louisville, which owns the club.

The incident began early Sunday morning when Gloria Donaldson, manager of the restaurant, barred Myers and his German shepherd guide dog from the club.

Ms. Donaldson, who prefers that designation, said that she suggested Myers leave the dog in a friend's car and allow his two companions to help him around the restaurant. She said that the club was busy and that she was concerned that the dog might get nervous because of the crowd.

Myers said he refused the offer, citing a Kentucky statute prohibiting any restaurant, hotel or "public places of amusements" from denying admittance to a blind person or his guide dog.

Myers, of Lexington, Ky., said he told Ms. Donaldson, "Miss, you don't understand that seeing eye dogs have a right to go any places their masters go."

"He kept insisting that he had the right to have his dog and didn't know the law — and I didn't," said Ms. Donaldson. "It was my first experience with one (a guide dog) anyway."

Myers and Ms. Donaldson agreed that police should be called.

Mickey Howard, Texas Electric lineman.

"All of us at Texas Electric get electric bills too, and they're up. That's why I'm trying to use less"

"My electric bills have gone up like everyone's."

Of course, working for Texas Electric, I'm more aware of how expensive new plants are and how high fuel is. But that won't solve my problem at home.

That's why I'm checking the weatherstripping around all my doors and the caulking around the windows.

I mean I could feel air under the door and I'm paying for it. So I put storm doors on and that really made a difference.

Gives me four inches of dead air. And that's a lot better than nothing."

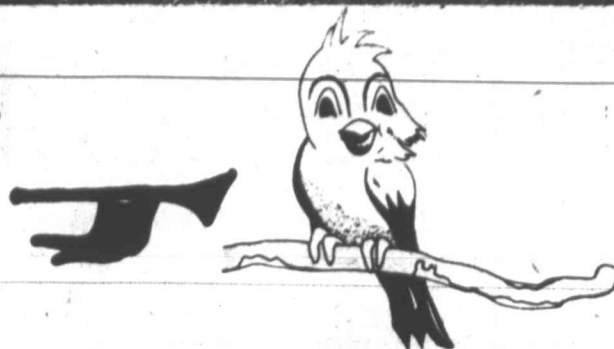

Electricity. You count on it today. We're working to keep it that way.

ANTI-NAZI DEMONSTRATE — Clad in para-military gear and helmets, members of the Jewish Defense League arrive in Chicago suburb of Skokie for an anti-Nazi demonstration Monday. They were one of three groups that rallied in Chicago Monday, opposing a planned March by Nazis in the predominantly Jewish suburb. More than 200 people attended the Skokie demonstration.

Disabled pensioners rake in loot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal civil servant retired on grounds that he was disabled, yet earned a total of $117,560 in a new job in 1974 and 1975, an internal Civil Service Commission report shows.

Another disability pensioner held a job that paid him a total of $100,943 in the same two years.

Yet another supposedly disabled federal pensioner earned $76,793 in a single year, and still another earned $66,444 in one year.

At the same time, the four were drawing disability pensions ranging from $404 to $1,793 per month, paid mostly by the taxpayers.

The pensioners, whose names were not listed, are among the commission's "Top 20" — persons who earned the most in new jobs while drawing pension checks granted because they could not perform their old government jobs efficiently.

These 20 get the most from the system that grants disability pensions to federal workers who in many cases still are able to work.

On the average, the 20 earned more than $29,000 a year in 1974 and 1975, while drawing disability pensions of $9,284 per year. And most of the pension was considered tax-free "sick pay."

The 20 are a small minority among the more than 279,000 disability pensioners drawing more than $1.5 billion a year. Yet they illustrate dramatically features of the system that have drawn criticism.

Under the system:

—The definition of disability is so broad and vague that virtually any ailment, including those that are relatively easy to fake, is grounds for a pension. Nearly 98 per cent of those who apply for a disability retirement get one.

—Monitoring whether disabled pensioners have recovered their earning power depends almost entirely on unverified earnings reports by the pensioners themselves. Officials admit that fraud usually goes undetected, and when it is discovered, the pensioner is prosecuted.

—Government agencies, according to the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, often are unwilling to find light-duty assignments for employees with medical problems, instead pushing them onto the retirement rolls.

The system also is relatively stingy when it comes to those who need help the most: young, low-paid federal workers who become totally unable to work. Many of these workers would receive more money if they were covered by Social Security rather than Civil Service, a report by the General Accounting Office said.

To receive a disability pension a federal civil servant need only be declared medically unable to perform one or more parts of his job efficiently.

In contrast, the Social Security disability system and most disability programs in private industry pay only when a person is unable to work.

Friendship Force hailed

By the Associated Press

Nearly 400 travel-weary Georgians, delayed by heavy fog for almost three hours, arrived in Newcastle, England, today to begin a grass-roots program to acquaint Americans with people of other lands.

Back in Atlanta, meanwhile, about 380 Newcastle residents were getting acquainted with their American hosts after arriving Monday aboard the same jet that brought the Georgians here.

The two flights are the first contingents in the Friendship Force, a brainchild of President Carter. The program is financed by private donations and is not officially affiliated with any government.

After a detour to Prestwick, Scotland, because of the fog, today's flight touched down at Newcastle Airport, and the Georgians emerged in bright morning sunshine to cheers from about 300 people on the observation deck.

Some of the Americans said their welcome was almost as warm as that given to fellow-Georgian Carter when the President visited this northeast England industrial city May 6.

The Georgians were taken by bus to the Newcastle Civic Center to meet their hosts, the "Geordies," as the people of Newcastle are called.

On Monday, Georgia Gov. George Busbee and about 800 persons greeted the Georgians at the airport at an Air Force band played "God Save the Queen" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Strength of Nazism in U.S. grows

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — American Nazis, barred by court order from marching here on Independence Day, were outmanned 40-to-1 by militant Jews. But both Nazi and anti-Nazi leaders believe the strength of Nazism in America has grown.

Besides an injunction, three village ordinances blocked members of the National Socialist Congress from demonstrating at the Skokie Village Hall.

But leaders of the militant Jewish Defense League said the law eventually will allow the Nazis to march in this community where 7,000 survivors of World War II Nazi concentration camps live.

"Laws have never protected Jews. They are just used to lull us into a false sense of security," Ralph Locher, chairman of the JDL's Chicago chapter, told an anti-Nazi rally here.

Locher said the JDL warned of a Nazi threat three years ago. "Now you see that it is real and will spread from the streets of Skokie to New York, Los Angeles and Chicago unless we stop it."

JDL founder Rabbi Meir Kahane told the rally that the courts eventually would give the Nazis "the freedom to end freedom."

He said "only Jews standing shoulder to shoulder" will stop Nazis from marching in Skokie.

The Nazi threat won't end, he said, until "the obnoxious sitting in their office in Chicago are removed... And I pledge that there will not long be a Nazi office in Chicago."

Nazi leader Frank Collin said American Civil Liberties Union attorneys had assured him that the Illinois Appellate Court would vacate the injunction after a hearing on Friday.

The ACLU has said the ordinances, barring political marches in military uniform, "are patently unconstitutional" and will be struck down by a court challenge.

'Human Sexuality' study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the United Church of Christ are calling for denomination-wide consideration of whether declared homosexuals should be ordained to the ministry.

The decision was made late Monday by the church's general synod, which also accepted a lengthy, much-debated new study, "Human Sexuality," commending it to local congregations for their response. The study says sexual acts require a "single standard" rather than a double standard for males and females, heterosexuals and homosexuals, and that concern for another, not just rigid rules, determines morality.

"We can surely say that sexual acts which are characterized by loving motives and intentions will exclude all sexual act which are coercive, debasing, harmful or cruel to another," says the 127-page analysis.

After three hours of debate, delegates voted 409-210 to accept the recommendations. The size of the opposition was sufficient to allow a minority report, still in preparation, to be distributed along with the majority study.

The study recognizes diverse viewpoints in the church about sexual conduct.

Concerning differing sexual orientations, the study says that to God "we are totally accepted in all dimensions of our sexuality — in our masculinity and in our femininity, in our homosexuality and in our homosexuality."

Battered body of queen found

BANGOR, Mich. (AP) — Just hours after she presided over holiday activities, the nude, battered body of Terri Wilson, 18, Bangor's centennial queen, was found stuffed in the trunk of her car about three miles west of town.

After discovering the body early Monday, police arrested one of the young woman's former schoolmates, Carl Lee Johnson, 19, on an open charge of murder. He was being held in the South Haven City Jail.

Sgt. Robert Berghuis of the South Haven state police post said Johnson would be arraigned today in the slaying.

"I can't believe this happened," said one of Miss Wilson's friends, echoing the sentiments of many Bangor residents.

City officials immediately canceled a fashion show and other events the dead woman was to have presided over Monday.

Police, checking on a report from three youths who said they heard a woman screaming when they were driving past on their way to Lake Michigan sand dunes, found Miss Wilson's body in the bloody trunk of her car near Michigan Route 43.

Investigators said it appeared she had been stabbed and beaten around the head. An autopsy was ordered.

The youths told police they were stopped by a man who warned them to turn back, and then they heard a woman screaming.

Police said the boys recognized the man who ordered them away and identified Johnson by his picture in a high school yearbook. They notified police.

Miss Wilson's parents reported her missing about the same time.

Troopers found Miss Wilson's car about three miles away from the site where the youths said they heard screams.
