Christians claiming substantial gains

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christians claimed their forces were advancing all along the northern side of their 800-square-mile enclave north of Beirut today, driving back Lebanese leftists and Palestinians who pushed into the Christian territory two days ago.

The leftists were trying to ease the pressure on the Palestinians' besieged Tal Zaatar refugee camp.

The Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO — said Syrian forces attacked Palestinian refugee camps in northern Lebanon at dawn, "causing heavy losses among civilians," and shelled areas near the ports of Tripoli and Sidon.

The PLO said in a message to the International Red Cross in Geneva, Switzerland, that hundreds of Palestinians captured in Lebanon were imprisoned in Syria.

Daoud Barakat, the PLO's permanent observer to the United Nations office in Geneva, asked the Red Cross to pressure Syria to halt the attack and protect the lives of Palestinians in Syrian captivity.

PLO chief Yasir Arafat ordered the headquarters of his Palestine Liberation Army shifted today from Damascus to Beirut, leftist-controlled Beirut radio reported. Observers saw the move as an attempt to free the PLO from Syrian influence. The Palestinians say Syria has arrested a number of PLA officers and men.

The leftists charged that Syrian gunners and tanks shelled the southern outlets of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city 60 miles north of Beirut, to prevent the leftist-Palestinian command from moving reinforcements to the fighting with the Christians.

The leftists claimed that Syrian artillery also shelled the American oil refinery near Sidon, south of Beirut, during the night and set the plant afire. But persons on the scene said they could see no flames.

Hospital and security sources estimated that 500 persons have been killed in the last two days of fighting, pushing the estimated toll in nearly 15 months of civil war toward 31,000.

A Western newsman reporting from the northern front said he saw Christians riding to battle in new armored cars and others returning in jeeps dragging Palestinian bodies through jubilant Christian villages.

The newsman said the leftists had been pushed back about 10 miles from their southernmost advance in their surprise attack Monday.

State ruling to end courses from Sul Ross

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Approximately 150 area graduate students will have to make other arrangements for their degree or certification courses when Sul Ross State University discontinues its off-campus courses offered through the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

The university will offer no more courses through the graduate center after the end of the second summer session, Dr. L. Glenn Neswick, center executive director, said.

In announcing the discontinuation of courses, Sul Ross president C. R. Richardson cited Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System guidelines meant to eliminate duplicate services within geographical areas.

Sul Ross will continue to offer courses at Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring through the summer of 1977.

The Coordinating Board also has prohibited fees above regular tuition rates, Pat Beck, advisory consultant to the center, said. The center adds a surcharge to Sul Ross regular tuition to cover its operating cost, she said.

Neswick said the discontinuation was expected but was "more sudden than we anticipated."

"It (the discontinuation) will affect the scope of the things we do in education," he said, and "cut back on our broadness."

"I'm disappointed over losing the courses but I don't think it makes any difference in our role. We're still going to provide the graduate experience in this area," he said.

The center will continue to offer non-credit courses and a master's degree in geology from The University of Texas at Arlington in cooperation with The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, Miss Beck said.

About 15 area policemen are pursuing bachelor's degrees in law enforcement from Sul Ross and 155 persons registered for graduate education courses for the first summer session.

Of the 155 students registered for classes, taught at Midland, Odessa, Seminole and Midland Regional Air Terminal, 68 were from Midland, 36 from Odessa, 14 from Seminole and 10 from Andrews, Neswick said.

Students from Stanton, Monahans, Lamesa, Denver City, Iraan, Kermit, Big Spring, Seagraves, Ozona, Slayton, Crane, Rankin and Sweetwater were enrolled also, he said.

Most of these students are working toward a master's degree in education or working toward certification or endorsement in specialized areas of education, according to Neswick.

"All of them will have to make some sort of adjustment in their

Queen Elizabeth II and President Ford stand during playing of national anthems at White House.

Queen greeted by Ford at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain arrived here today to pay forgiving tribute to the nation which rebelled against the colonial rule of her royal ancestors 200 years ago.

At a White House welcoming ceremony, the queen emphasized that British-American relations have been friendly with only rare, brief exceptions over the past 3½ centuries.

"For nearly 170 years there was a formal constitutional link between us. Your Declaration of Independence broke that link but it did not for long break our friendship," she said.

The queen said the British and American peoples "are as close today as two peoples have ever been."

Accompanied by her husband, Prince Philip, an official party of 16 and an entourage of 52, the queen arrived her on the second and most important stop of a six-day Bicentennial visit.

The royal couple flew to Andrews Air Force Base here from Philadelphia and were received by the President and Mrs. Ford on a hot, humid and overcast morning. As the royal couple departed the base in a limousine for the short trip to Washington, a police car chasing a suspected bank robber sped through the gates in the opposite direction, according to Thomas Rogers, a cab driver who said he witnessed the incident.

Spokesman Doug Hill of the Prince George's, Md., police department, said that although the suspected bank robber was believed to be armed, no shots were fired. The robber remained at large.

"The sirens and squealing wheels were a surprise to the security around the motorcade," Hill said. "The queen was never interrupted and went on her way unharmed." The based was sealed off to the public.

The queen was greeted at the base by U.S. Chief of Protocol Henry Catto. As she departed from the plane, she received a formal military greeting by an Air Force honor guard which lined a red carpet at the steps of her plane.

In tribute to the country that rebelled against King George III, her great-great-great-greatgrandfather, the monarch told a gathering in Philadelphia on Tuesday that the American Revolution "should be celebrated as much in Britain as in the United States."

The "very valuable lesson" the British learned from their experience, she said, was that the rights of others to govern themselves in their own ways must be respected. The occasion for her remarks was the presentation of a Bicentennial gift, a bell cast in the same foundry as Philadelphia's famed, cracked Liberty Bell.

Elizabeth, whose blood line goes back nine centuries, is the last of nine European monarchs to visit the United States for the Bicentennial.

Israel ready for debate on rescue

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — African and Arab delegates prepared with some misgivings today for a Security Council debate on Israel's daring rescue of air hijack hostages from Uganda.

The Israelis appeared to relish the prospect and planned to accuse Ugandan President Idi Amin of complicity with the Palestinian and German hijackers.

"We believe the Ugandan government was part and parcel of this operation," Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said in an interview on the NBC "Today Show."

"It is quite clear they were accomplices ... We have a right and duty by international law to protect our citizens ... as long as we do not overstay our welcome" or use excessive force.

Herzog also said the rescue raid Sunday had produced considerable congratulations from African diplomats and predicted the operation "will raise Israel's prestige in the African world."

"It's a difficult situation for the Arabs and Africans," said an African diplomat after the Organization of African Unity asked the Security Council to take up a charge that Israel had committed aggression against Uganda.

In Paris, the French government made the captain of the hijacked plane a knight of the Legion of Honor and the other crew members knights of the Order of Merit, citing them for "courage, devotion and dignity."

African delegates asked that the start of the U.N. debate be held off until Thursday to give Ugandan Foreign Minister Juan Oris time to reach New York.

"If there is a Security Council meeting, we will participate," said

MCT drive passes mid-point

Midland Community Theatre's building fund campaign has passed the halfway mark.

According to Mrs. Frank K. Cahoon, president of the MCT Board of Governors, the theater now has $1,003,175 in cash and pledges toward its total goal of $1,750,000 for construction of a spacious new Theatre Centre on West Wadley Avenue.

Mrs. Cahoon made the announcement Tuesday following a meeting of the theater board.

The $1,003,175 thus far raised represents 57 per cent of the overall goal. Of this figure, $693,175 is from the advance and special gifts division of the campaign, while $310,000 comes from foundations contacted by the theater.

Chairman of the fund drive is Jim Allison, Jr. Martin L. Allday and Charles Priddy are co-chairmen of the advance gifts division while Charles Henderson and Jack Steele head the special gifts division.

Mrs. Cahoon said Tuesday that the building fund drive will continue through the remainder of 1976 and will

Kelley: COINTELPRO program discontinued

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — FBI Director Clarence Kelley, testifying at the murder trial of two American Indian Movement members, said the FBI counterintelligence program against domestic dissidents has been discontinued and no other program has replaced it.

Kelley is the first of a series of prominent personalities expected to testify in the trial of the men charged with 1975 slayings of two FBI agents on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota.

Actor Marlon Brando, an advocate of Indian rights, is expected to testify later.

Kelley was subpoenaed to testify Tuesday, but he did not show up. He arrived in Cedar Rapids Tuesday night after U.S. District Judge Edward J. McManus ordered him to appear in court today to explain why he should not be held in contempt.

Defense counsel William Kunstler questioned Kelley about the counterintelligence program — COINTELPRO — and whether it still existed.

"I have made repeated inquiries about it," Kelley replied. "Not, certainly, has anything of this type been revealed to me."

Kelley testified that COINTELPRO was started in the late 1950s and was discontinued later. He did not give an exact date.

"It was to still efforts toward violence and acts that might lead to violence in extremists and New Left organizations," Kelley said.

The FBI has said the two agents killed on the reservation near Oglala, S.D., were ambushed. The defense has sought to show that the FBI was responsible for the climate in which the slayings occurred.

Robert Robideau, 29, of Portland, Ore., and Darelle Butler, 34, of Rogue River, Ore., are charged with killing agents Jack Coler and Ronald Williams, both 28, on June 26, 1975. The FBI agents were on the reservation to serve arrest warrants.

The defense has sought the testimony of a number of Washington politicians and officials.

Uganda sees 'raiders'

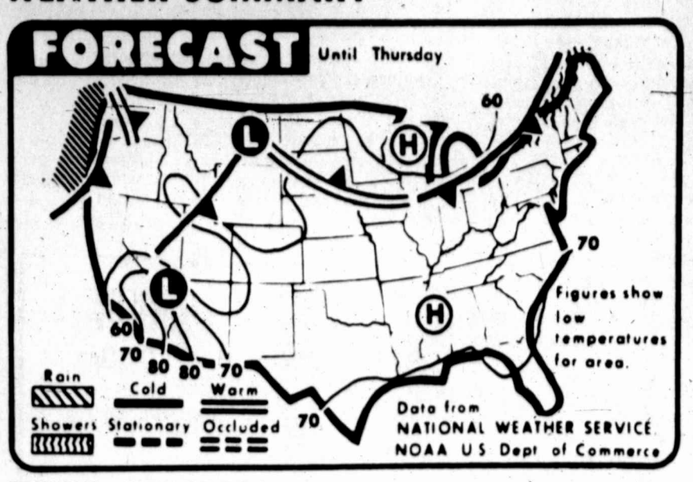

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The Uganda government radio reported today that 30 enemy planes were approaching from Kenya to invade Uganda. The broadcast said they were believed to be Israeli or American.

There was no confirmation of the claim, and half an hour after the broadcast no reports reached Kenya of unusual military activity in the neighboring East African country.

The broadcast appeared to be part of a continuing propaganda campaign by President Idi Amin in response to the Israeli commando raid Saturday night that freed more than 100 hostages from Uganda's Entebbe airport.

Kenya's leading newspapers today defended the Israeli commando raid against criticism from other African countries.

programs," he said.

Dr. J. E. Becht, UTPB vice president for academic affairs, said duplication of courses through off-campus offerings has been a problem throughout the state.

He said no student will be penalized in his degree program with the end of area-taught Sul Ross courses. Students who are more than half-way through their programs will be allowed to take the other necessary courses at UTPB and receive their degrees from Sul Ross if they desire to do so, he said.

UTPB will accept at face value courses taken at Sul Ross for credit at UTPB for students who are less than half through with their programs, Becht said.

He said UTPB had been concerned about duplication of its courses from Sul Ross "but we didn't take any particular action" with the Coordinating Board.

"We have been designated to offer off-campus courses for resident credit in our area within our scope (of courses)," Becht said.

He said Coordinating Board policy calls for the university to serve the area in a 75-mile radius plus other communities to which UTPB is the closest university.

Courses and programs not offered at UTPB, such as the UT-Arlington geology program, are not affected by the new policies, Becht said.

He said the university plans to expand its area off-campus course offerings with more courses taught in Midland, Big Spring, Lamesa and Andrews and courses in Seminole and Monahans beginning this fall.

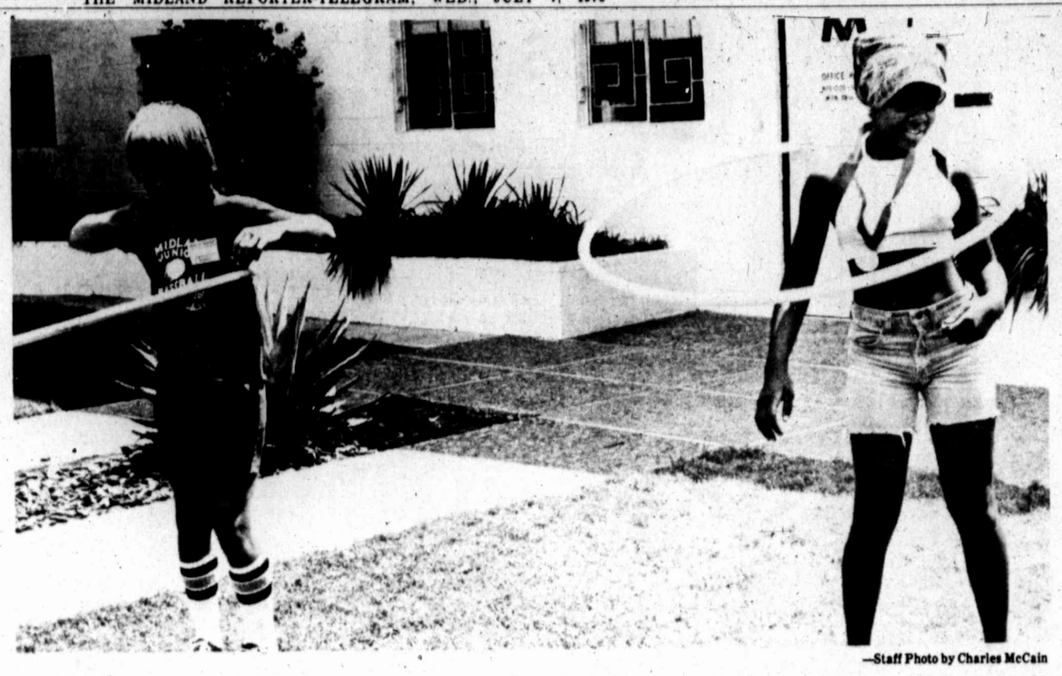

The additional courses in Midland are "a direct result of our trying to serve the area where we've been assigned," he said.

When asked whether the courses would be offered through the graduate center, Becht said he does not know how such a plan could be arranged "given state accounting procedures" which prohibit the university from adding extra charges for the center.

Since 1972 the total number of registrations, including multiple registrations for individual students at the graduatue center for Sul Ross courses has grown from 379 in 1972 to 625 in 1975. Thus far in 1976, 546 registrations have been recorded at the center.

Miss Beck said the center may actually serve more people with the end of Sul Ross courses, since non-credit courses take less time and require less record processing.

"I think it will strengthen our program as a whole, but the teachers (taking the Sul Ross courses) will be the ones who suffer," she said.

Commission urges zone change to accommodate shopping mall

By DEBBIE PIERCE

A 100-acre tract of land at Holiday Hill Road and U.S. 80 will be recommended to the city council for local retail zoning by the city Planning and Zoning Commission, the group agreed Tuesday.

The acreage will be used for development of a major regional shopping center — that is, if it is annexed next week by the city council.

Local counsel for the project, Martin L. Allday, told city planners Tuesday General Growth Properties Inc. of Des Moines, Iowa, will be the prime developer of the mall.

Richard Hennessy, director of planning, said the zoning commission had indicated approval of local retail zoning for the shopping mall area when the matter first arose, but the city planning staff had failed to send out the proper notices. This, he noted, was the reason the request was before the commission for zoning.

The request was approved unanimously.

City planners also discussed two zoning studies by the city planning staff and will recommend both for approval to the city council.

The first study recommended a zone change from multiple family to mobile home district at the Midland Heights Addition, Haley Heights Addition, Moore Addition and Lindsay Acres Addition.

Hennessy said the change was recommended because of the large amount of vacant land existing in that area and the likelihood those lots would not be used for single-family homes.

The second study recommended a zone change from office and single-family homes to commercial south of an existing commercial district on Cottonflat Road.

Hennessy said there was little likelihood this area would develop to office or single-family residential districts.

Robert Williams of 1410 Cottonflat Road appeared before the commission to protest the change, stating that he owns a home there and its value would decrease with commercial property nearby.

Hennessy said the area may be a place where someone would put single-family houses, but there probably would be no consistent development of single-family housing at that location.

In other action, the zoning commission:

— Recessed until the next meeting action on a request by William Hickey for an amended planned district from a planned district in the Wadley Heights Addition, as the city zoning staff had discovered Hickey needed an amended plat of the area;

— Approved the final plat of the Oasis North subdivision in the 2700 to 2800 blocks of Garfield Avenue;

— Approved the final plat of Bayou Bend subdivision in the 600 to 700 blocks of Scarbauer Drive; and,

— Approved, with chairman Mrs. Van Howbert breaking the 3 to 3 tie vote, a request by G. D. Dixon for a specific use permit for on-premises consumption of alcoholic beverages at 700 W. Missouri Ave.

Bodies of Morton pair found in plane wreckage

POST — The bodies of a Morton businessman and his six-year-old son were pulled from the wreckage of their private plane near Post late Tuesday afternoon.

James Dale White, 31, and his son Bradley White were found by a helicopter crew about 5:30 p.m. 25 miles east of Post near the Kent County line and one mile north of U.S. 380.

Discovery of the two bodies ends five days of intensive searching by approximately 200 volunteers.

White and his son were pronounced dead at the scene by Jayton Justice of the Peace Bill Harrison about 6 p.m., but the bodies could not be removed from the wreckage until two hours later.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators had not determined a cause for the crash, which apparently occurred between 7:30 and 8 p.m. Friday during a thunderstorm. They said, however, bad weather could have forced the single-engine aircraft into a tailspin, sending it to the earth nose first.

White and his son were en route to their home in Morton after a fishing trip near Pineland, officials said. White's wife Brenda reported the plane was behind schedule about 7 p.m. Friday.

More than 30 Civil Air Patrol aircraft from Lubbock, Lamesa, Waco and other South Texas towns searched the path reportedly taken by White but found no trace of the aircraft after it refueled in Cleburne about 6:30 p.m.

Volunteers from Kent, Cochran, Garza and Crosby counties searched the ground near Aspermont, Jayton, Crosbyton and Clairemont late Monday as reports of pilots hearing distress signals came into CAP offices.

Col. Eldon Moody of the Lamesa office of the CAP, however, said White had no time to issue such signals because of the sudden and unexpected nature of the crash. He said White had probably died instantly.

White was a former assistant administrator for Cochran Memorial Hospital in Morton was director of the Morton Chamber of Commerce at the time of his death. He was born in Whiteface and had lived in Morton about five years. He owned a restaurant in Morton.

Besides the wife, White's other survivor is another son, Douglas, 2.

Christian offensive from Al Batrun, 37 miles north of Beirut. He said his forces had driven the Moslems and Palestinians out of the deep-water port of Chekka, five miles north of Batrun, with a three-prong attack.

The leftists and Palestinians sliced south from northern Lebanon on Monday, moving along the coastal highway and capturing Chekka and several other villages in the area. But the assault had no visible effect on the Christian offensive - against Tal Zaatar, the Palestinian refugee camp on the southeast side of Beirut which has been under attack for two weeks.

A Christian spokesman said Tal Zaatar was "in death agony. It is literally finished." Western reporters at the edge of the camp said the Palestinian defenders were no longer firing mortars or antiaircraft weapons.

Heavy rains give birth to oil spill

WESTBROOK — Oil from a ruptured line along Morgan Creek in Mitchell County and long since buried was uncovered by a "gullywasher" Saturday night and was swept into the creek.

However, the relatively small spill poses no threat to wildlife or to the Lake Colorado City, into which Morgan Creek empties, Bill Watson, district director of the Texas Railroad Commission in Midland, said this morning.

"This is an old, old leak . . . from a ruptured line," he said.

He said the now "dead oil" in the spill amounted to five barrels or so.

"It doesn't take a whole lot (of oil) to make a devil of a show in water," Watson said.

The old rupture is about four miles north of the Colorado City Lake, Watson said, and the spill occurred at Texas 670 where it intersects Morgan Creek.

Damage, if any, caused by the spill will be borne by the independent oil company that owns the ruptured line. Watson said a second leak was spotted in recent days.

The creek crested as an aftermath of a recent heavy downpour (four to six inches) and subsequent runoff.

Closely monitoring the spill are agents of the Texas Railroad Commission, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Texas Water Quality Board.

Watson said he would be at the oil-spill site today.

Israel ready for debate on rescue

Israeli spokesman Tuvia Saar with evident satisfaction.

He disclosed that his government was preparing testimony from hostages and other sources to support the Israeli claim that Amin acted in complicity with the hijackers who seized an Air France jetliner between Tel Aviv and Paris and had it flown to Uganda.

Israel's U.N. mission also circulated a note that said the hijacking illustrated the terrorist aspect of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which has been gaining influence at the United Nations.

The note, titled "Again — the PLO shows its other face," ignored the PLO's condemnation of the hijacking and the hijackers' claim that they were from the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, an antiPLO guerrilla organization.

The council debate will force representatives of other African governments to defend Amin though many of them openly hold him in contempt.

"Many Africans privately hate Amin and have even wished him a speedy assassination," said an East European diplomat.

The debate will also put the spotlight on African disunity by opening the door to a confrontation between Uganda and neighboring Kenya. Amin charged in a message to the United Nations that the Kenyan government collaborated with the Israeli raiders before they landed in Uganda.

Jobs bill veto to draw heavy fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's veto of a job-creating public works bill is expected to draw heavy opposition from congressional Democrats and at least one key Republican, the Senate GOP whip.

Democratic leaders predicted the veto will be overridden.

Senate GOP Whip Robert Griffin, a leader last winter in the successful campaign to sustain Ford's veto of a bigger public works bill, cited a 9.7 per cent jobless rate in his home state of Michigan and 13.4 per cent in Detroit in declaring his support for the bill.

House and Senate leaders say they believe Congress will override Ford's veto Tuesday of the $3.95-billion bill, designed to create or preserve 400,000 jobs.

Rejecting bipartisan pleas to sign it, Ford said: "This bill will not create lasting jobs but instead will create more inflation."

The veto and rising unemployment have set up the jobs situation as a campaign issue. Ford and several Democrats traded salvos Tuesday.

Ford said Congress "clearly established the direction they would have our nation go — toward more federal spending, higher taxes, larger deficits, more people on the federal payroll and higher inflation."

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., predicted Congress will override "this shameless veto." He said Ford's move was "bad economic policy, callous social policy and an apparent attempt to woo conservative delegates to the Republican National Convention."

The bill is a scaled-down version of a $6.2-billion program Ford vetoed in February. The House voted to override that veto but the Senate vote fell three short of the required two-thirds.

House Democratic Whip John McFall of California said he is confident the House will again vote to override. Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill Jr. said when the bill was passed, "We are going to make this bill law, either with the President's signature or over his veto."

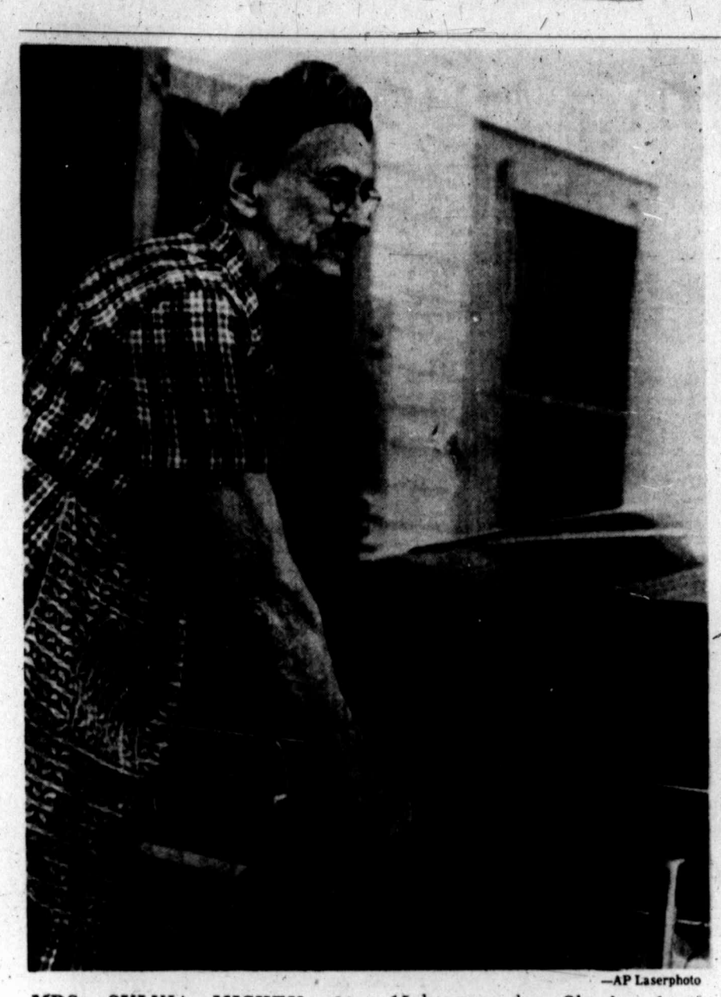

The override attempt is expected soon after Congress returns July 19 after the Democratic national convention.

Griffin, who worked hard to sustain the earlier veto, told the Senate that if Ford disapproved the scaled-down measure, he would vote to override because unemployment remained too high.

The nation's jobless rate rose slightly from 7.3 per cent in May to 7.5 per cent in June.

The bill would authorize $2 billion through Sept. 30, 1977, for public works projects run by state and local governments, $1.25 billion for grants to maintain essential state and local services during times of high unemployment. In addition, $700 million would be provided for construction of public-owned waste water treatment plants.

The veto was the 52nd since Ford became President in August 1974. He vetoed two others within the past four days, a $3.3-billion military construction bill that limited his authority to close military bases, and a measure that would have increased Western states' share of royalties from oil and coal leasing on public lands.

AMA chief praises doctors' countersuits

DALLAS (AP) — The move by physicians to file countersuits in some malpractice cases has been praised by the new president of the American Medical Associaton as proof that doctors "can have their day in court."

Dr. Richard Palmer of Alexandria, Va., said in a recent interview that the legal steps now being taken by doctors "are the greatest thing that has happened for us in some time.

"With the physicians ready to go to court, I think we may see an end to the many frivolous malpractice suits that are plaguing us now," he told The Associated Press.

In the past few months several physicians, Dr. Palmer said, have been successful in winning damages from former patients who had filed malpractice suits dismissed by either the courts or juries.

During the AMA convention in Dallas last week, the House of Delegates, policy-making arm of the organization, adopted a resolution calling on state medical associations to aid doctors who file countersuit in certain malpractice claims.

The malpractice suits have mushroomed during the past few years, sending insurance rates soaring, sparking doctor strikes in some metropolitan areas, and bringing the threat by many physicians to drop all malpractice coverage.

Palmer said the answer to the growing problem may be the countersuit, especially if more and more doctors are successful in collecting money from those who filed questionable malpractice suits.

The new AMA president also was concerned on another legal thorn in the side of the medical profession—the right to determine death.

Palmer said the decision of when life had ended must be made by a physician, "a person qualified and trained in medicine, and with the consultation of the family. Neither a state legislature nor a judge nor an attorney can make such a decision," he said.

The AMA delegates rejected a resolution calling for a firm stand that only physicians, after talking with the family, can say when an individual has died.

Instead, the AMA approved a weaker approach that reaffirmed its earlier stand that no legislation can be passed that determines legally the time of death.

The "dignity in death" controversy was put in the nation's spotlight when the family of Karen Quinlan of New Jersey went to the courts to gain approval for the removal of lifesustaining machines from the young woman who had been in a coma for more than one year.

Artificially flavored cigarette developed by scientific team

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists say they have developed an artificially flavored cigarette that is far lower in harmful ingredients than anything now on the market.

Using a technique employed to make chemically flavored foods, researchers said they came up with a cigarette that tastes good but is relatively harmless.

Arthur D. Little, Inc., a private research firm, is producing the artificial cigarette flavors under a $183,000 contract with the National Cancer Foundation.

In their study, the researchers said they are adding the flavors to a low-hazard — but low-tasting — cigarette that already has been produced for the federal government.

Before the flavors were added to those cigarettes "they were the ultimate reduced health hazard," said the project's director, John Angeline. "They were so bad nobody would smoke them."

So far, researchers have shown that it is possible to make an artifically flavored cigarette that actually tastes like a cigarette, Angeline said.

They have isolated several chemicals that resemble the various tastes that go into cigarette flavors, he said. And they have combined them — in relatively unsophisticated fashion — to produce some sample cigarettes.

"We're at the point now where you'd describe them as being cigarettes," Angeline said in an interview. "They may be lousy, but that's a long way from where we started."

The next step is to combine and recombine the chemicals until they produce something that tastes like unadulterated cigarette smoke, he said.

Angeline said he expects the finished product to taste better than the low tar and nicotine cigarettes now available on the market.

The researchers, he said, are adding the flavors to a cigarette made of equal parts of treated tobacco and an undisclosed inert filler. Angeline said it contains "an absolute minimum" of tar and nicotine and other harmful components of cigarette smoke, such as carbon monoxide.

The chemicals used in the flavoring are all listed by the government as safe to eat, said Angeline. But he said tests will be required to make sure they also are harmless to inhale.

Work on refining the taste should be finished by next fall, he said.

"THINKING" with ODOM

PHILIPPIANS 4:8

It is utter nonsense to define the "cup of blessing" so as to include the drinking vessel, as some well-meaning folks attempt to do. The consequences of such a doctrine makes it impossible to fulfill the command of God relative to the communion of our Lord.

Please turn and read from your New Testament Matthew 26:27; Luke 22:17-20;1 Corinthians 11:25-28. After reading these citations observe with me that the "cup" is that which is identified by "dividing," and "drinking." "Cup" is used in these passages in a figurative way whereby the container is named but the content is meant. This is called "metonymy." The very fact that such expressions as "This cup, that cup, the cup, a cup," appear in these references lends no strength whatsoever to the doctrine that the vessel is part of "the cup of the Lord." Such expressions show that there is but one cup, but adds force to the argument that there is but one drink element to be used in communion: that is the fruit of the vine is the one cup.

When people teach a doctrine and are not willing to accept the consequences of their teaching, something is wrong with their teaching, or the teacher—or maybe both. Should I contend that THE CUP OF THE LORD IS BOTH the CONTAINER and the CONTENT, then before I CAN DIVIDE and DRINK the cup I would be FORCED to DIVIDE and DRINK BOTH the CONTAINER and the CONTENT when fulfulling the command of Christ. Now, you can say within yourself as you read this, "That is foolish." And I agree! But the foolishness is not on the part of this scribe but rather on the part of those who contend that the vessel is just as sacred as the fruit of the vine. Friends, you are dead wrong in your contention!

Besides all of this, if the student will look with scrutiny at Luke 22:17-20 they will observe that the Lord took the Passover cup and told his desciples to DIVIDE it among them. In verse 18 He explains the Lord's Supper. In verse 19 gave thanks for the bread and gave it to the disciples instructing them to eat. Then in verse 20 He took the cup for them to drink. What cup was this in verse 20? It was the Passover cup which they DIVIDED in verse 17. The order was, they DIVIDED, THEY ATE, THEY DRANK. This necessarily proves that there were more than one drinking vessel when Christ instituted the Supper. If it was so then, why not now? Stop your contention over such foolishness.

Bit of fever doesn't hurt when visiting Hungary

By W.L. WEBB
The Manchester Guardian

It ought to have been a disaster. I arrived with some sort of instant bronchitis, saw Budapest through mists of fever, schnapps, and ephedrin, put a rusty nail through my foot near Miskolc, and limped around the Tokaj district in agony after minor surgery by a rural Chekhov who went to work like someone cutting an apple.

AND YET I REMEMBER most of my last trip to Hungary as pleasurable and even hilarious. Perhaps you need a bit of a temperature to bring you up to par with the local fantasy quotient, which after 30 years is roughly applied Marxism-Leninism is still high enough to explain why Hollywood was largely an invention of Hungarian emigres.

Some of the fantasy is simply of that order of things that seem too good, or too much themselves, to be true: the lights of Buda reflected in the Danube on a late night walk, with singing floating across the water from a cafe on the far bank; rustic trams like mobile cuckoo clocks, and the taxi-drivers who are either redundant Hortobagy cowboys, or operatic hypertensives, all wheel-thumping and forehead-tapping.

THEN THERE'S the language, most words (even "Cheers!") having five bristling syllables, except toothpaste, which is called fog cream (well, fog krem) — just what you need on many a Hungarian morning.

The second half of my stay took me deep into the old Hungary, though Gyongyos from where the wooded hills and vine terraces roll on up to the Slovak and Soviet borders to the northeast: great horse-breeding country, and the home of the best Hungarian wines, the rich Tokajs and the Egri Bikaver, (Bull's Blood) and heavy Pinot noir, grown around the shabby-handsome baroque town of Eger.

"EVERY AUTUMN a great market for grapes makes the town colorful and peculiar," says the official brochure. We missed the market, though squads of soldiers and schoolchildren were already helping with the harvest and there were huge horsedrawn vats on the roads.

But the trip wasn't lacking in colorful peculiarities. At Parad an old groom who had worked for the Karolys showed us around the family's Cifra stables, with its troop of Lipizzaners of the same handsome and intelligent breed as those that still do their stuff in the Spanische Reitschule in Vienna.

AT SZILVASVARAD (avenues of chestnuts softly bombing the car roof) we found the stud's stallions gone away for the autumn clean-out. "Wait," said the stable lad, and came back with a big grain and an apron full of walnuts: "Those who are unlucky get nuts."

But then we were lucky, and arrived at the main farm across the valley just in time for one of the sights of the season — a whole herd of mares and their foals thudding out of the yard in a flurry of dust and cracking stockwhips, on the way to grazing grounds higher up in the Bukk hills.

AND SO BACK to Budapest where the heady vein of the city's fantasy is its Jugendstil architecture, another source of particular pleasure its cuisine. Try to sample both in the Cafe Hungaria on a corner of the Lenin Korut.

The best of the rest of Budapest's Jugendstil could be taken in by a quick goggle at the entrance and majolica dome of Odon Lechner's Museum of Applied Arts, then a concert at the Academy of Music where Bartok taught and back across the river for an expensive night or two in the rare period elegance of the Hotel Gellert. (If you can't run to that, the Astoria has a touch of shabby old charm at just over half the price; but of the more modern places, avoid the Volga, built thoughtfully right beside the Crewe Junction of the city's extensive tram service).

GO TO THE GALLERT anyway, for a drink and a little quiet people-watching, and to introduce yourself to a whole new genre of pleasure in the turkish baths built into the same block.

Church holds Mass yearly

WARRENTON, Tex. (AP) — St. Martin's Catholic Church is open only once a year when Mass is celebrated on All Soul's Day.

On that day, parishioners sit on a few 4-foot-long wooden benches which serve as pews and listen to Father Ben Mazurliewicz of Fayetteville deliver his annual service.

The small church on cemetery grounds was built in 1915 out of lumber from a larger church torn down after area residents moved to the larger town of Fayetteville.

American Peace Corps inspires similar West European groups

BONN, West Germany (AP) — "The Peace Corps," says Hedwig Maurach of West Germany's Volunteer Service, "is our ancestral mother. It's a shame American volunteers have been made scapegoats for the Vietnam War and the CIA."

Inspired by the U.S. Peace Corps, West Germany and other western European countries have sent thousands of skilled volunteers overseas for grassroots aid projects in former colonies and emerging nations of Asia, Africa and South America.

The European aid workers keep low profiles and try to avoid the type of political controversies that forced the Peace Corps to leave eight countries in recent years.

West German volunteers must sign pledges that they won't involve themselves in host country politics while overseas. "We've never been asked to leave a host country. That's one of the advantages of not being a world power," said Miss Maurach.

France Britain, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Austria also sponsor volunter services like the U.S. Peace Corps, but they put more stress on experts — doctors and nurses, agronomists, engineers and craftsmen — rather than Americastyle generalists and classroom teachers.

At its peak in the mid-1960s, the U.S. agency had over 15,000 volunteers in 48 countries and a budget of $114 million. Now it has 6,690 volunteers in 68 countries and $67.1 million for fiscal 1977.

Michael P. Balzano Jr., director of Action, overseer of the American program, says the Peace Corps can only meet 70 per cent of host country requests for highly skilled volunteers.

West Germany's government sponsored service now has 850 volunteers overseas—mostly in Tanzania, Equador, Peru, Zambia and Cameroon — down from more than 1,000 at its peak in 1969.

Bonn has had a decline in acceptable candidates but tries to keep standards high. "Fewer than 1 per cent of our volunteers fail to complete their two-year contracts, and about one third extend for an extra year," Miss Maurach said.

DEAR CECILY: May I make a plea for rather more careful naming of recipes? Some weeks ago you gave one called Spanish Spoon Bread, adapted from a cookbook. Because there's nothing Spanish about the recipe, I think it's misnamed.

I've lived in Spain and am familiar with its Mediterranean cuisine. Among the ingredients called for in the Spanish Spoon Bread recipe is an abundance of hot green chilies, which are not used this way in Spain. I'm confused to find that, in the U.S., dishes fiery with chilies or chili powder are sometimes dubbed Spanish when they really come from Mexico, Texas or New Mexico. Wouldn't it be more interesting as well as more accurate to specify the country or region from which they really come?

Another American misnomer is calling an omelet served with a sauce of tomatoes, onions and green pepper a Spanish omelet. A traditional Spanish omelet is made of eggs, potatoes and onion.

Then there's the misunderstanding over the word "scampi." American restaurateurs often list Shrimp Scampi on their menus as if "scampi" meant a way of preparing shrimp. Scampi is the Italian word for a crustacean that is a close relative of shrimp, found only in Italian waters. Scampi may be cooked a number of ways.

NEEDLEPLAY

Needlework queries answered

By ERICA WILSON

DEAR ERICA: I want to transfer the signature on my personalized note paper to blue jean fabric. Is there a way to do this?—Penny Sulz, San Rafael, Calif.

DEAR PENNY: I made a marvelous discovery while doing my TV show this winter. I found that the lightweight "pellon" fabric known as "stitchwitchery" (used for adhering one fabric to another) works perfectly for transferring embroidery designs onto fabric!

First, lay a piece of this transparent "stitchwitchery" (available in most notions stores) over the notepaper and boldly trace the signature with black felt-tipped pen. Then stretch your background fabric into an embroidery frame, pin or baste the "stitchwitchery" in position, and embroider right through the two thicknesses. When you're through, tear the "stitchwitchery," from around your stitches, and it will disappear as though it had never been there? A reporter was so taken with this bit of "magic" that it appeared in the pages of Women's Wear Daily after I told her about it.

DEAR MISS WILSON: Please be the mediator in an argument I'm having with my daughter-in-law. She says that the stiffer a needlepoint canvas is, the better its quality. I say the opposite—that the stiffer it is, the poorer quality it is. Who's right?—Mrs. Raymond Brenner, Philadelphia, Pa.

DEAR MRS. BRENNER: You! The stiffer a canvas is, usually the poorer its quality. This stiffness is due to sizing, which a cheap canvas needs to hold its shape—but beware. It may disintegrate and never have the chance to graduate to "heirloom" status! Examine a canvas closely before buying. If the threads seem very hairy and rough, pass it by. If they're nice and rounded, proceed with buying.

The only exception to this would be interlocked canvas—that terrific weave that lets you work geometric patterns so easily because the mesh is absolutely square. A good quality interlocked canvas won't be thick and plump, but quite thin, as it's a flat, double-weave.

Once it's washed (after stitching) it becomes extremely soft and supple, and that makes it ideal for all sorts of clothing—vests, evening skirts, evening coats—even boots! If you're really inspired, you can be the first one on the block with a needlework wardrode.

DEAR ERICA: Last year a favorite piece of needlework I blocked became mildewed in the process of drying.

WOMEN'S NEWS

How do I prevent this next time? And this time around, is there any remedy to exorcise it from my canvas?—Ms. Susan Rainer, Des Moines, Iowa

DEAR MS. RAINER: Unfortunately for you and your canvas, mildew is permanent. But first, are you quite sure it is mildew? I've never known a piece of canvas to fall victim to it—and I was thinking that maybe it could have been your paint running.

Next time you block needlepoint, do it on an artist's stretcher frame. That way, your work will be open from the back, and the air can circulate through the canvas and dry nicely.

Party fetes mother-to-be

Mrs. Richard Prentice was honored with a baby shower in the home of Mrs. Alan Hewitt, 2102 Hughes St.

The co-hostesses were Mrs. Glen Gardner, Mrs. Brent Watson and Mrs. Dick Schmidt.

Out-of-city guests included Mrs. Prentice's mother, Mrs. Phil Sterrett of Amarillo, and Charlotte Goeth of Abernathy.

Pastel colors were used in the decorations. A hostess gift and corsage were presented to the honoree.

DEAR ABBY

Abby places bet on Philadelphia residence

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you stated that Anna Jarvis, the originator of Mother's Day, was from Philadelphia. Please retract your statement. She was from Grafton, W. Va.—PROUD WEST VIRGINIAN

DEAR PROUD: I've had an avalanche of protest from proud and irate West Virginians since the column appeared, and I offer the following:

Miss Anna M. Jarvis established Mother's Day to honor the memory of her mother, Mrs. Anna Reeves Jarvis, of Grafton, W. Va.

Over the years, Miss Anna M. Jarvis sent more than 10,000 carnations from Philadelphia where she lived to be placed on her mother's grave.

On May 10, 1908, the first Mother's Day service was held in Grafton at a little Methodist Church, which has since become a shrine.

Although Mother's Day was established to honor Mrs. Anna Reeves Jarvis, her daughter, who conceived the idea, was in fact from Philadelphia.

You may need a Philadelphia lawyer to determine whether Miss Jarvis's legal residence was Grafton or Philadelphia, but I'm betting on Philadelphia.

DEAR ABBY: Where did the absurd practice of tipping waiters begin? It is ridiculous to be expected to add between 15 and 20 per cent to the bill just to have the food brought from the kitchen to the table.

If the food is exceptionally good, the COOK should be given something extra, not the waiter. And then there's also the captain and the maitre d', who do nothing and expect a tip.

Employers should pay their help a living wage instead of relying on the generosity of their customers.

Tipping is a ripoff! Furthermore, it's demeaning for a person to have to put his hand out for an "offering."

SICK OF TIPPING

DEAR SICK: Since the word "tip" means: "To insure prompt service," it would make more sense to tip BEFORE the meal than after.

I agree, tipping has gotten out of hand—if you'll forgive the pun—but if most restaurants paid their waiters and waitresses what they needed to make ends meet, they couldn't stay in business.

Coeds Bonnie Ensign and Claudia Hulett, both 17, have joined the previously all-male Pirates baseball team. Miss Ensign is an outfielder and Miss Hulett plays second base.

Neither girl is a member of the starting team, but both had and will have equal chance with other team members to play for experience when the victory in a game is reasonably secure, according to coach Frank Buell.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Try to help friends more today and gain their goodwill and understanding for your problems, too. Some group affair is apt to be troublesome, so use tact.

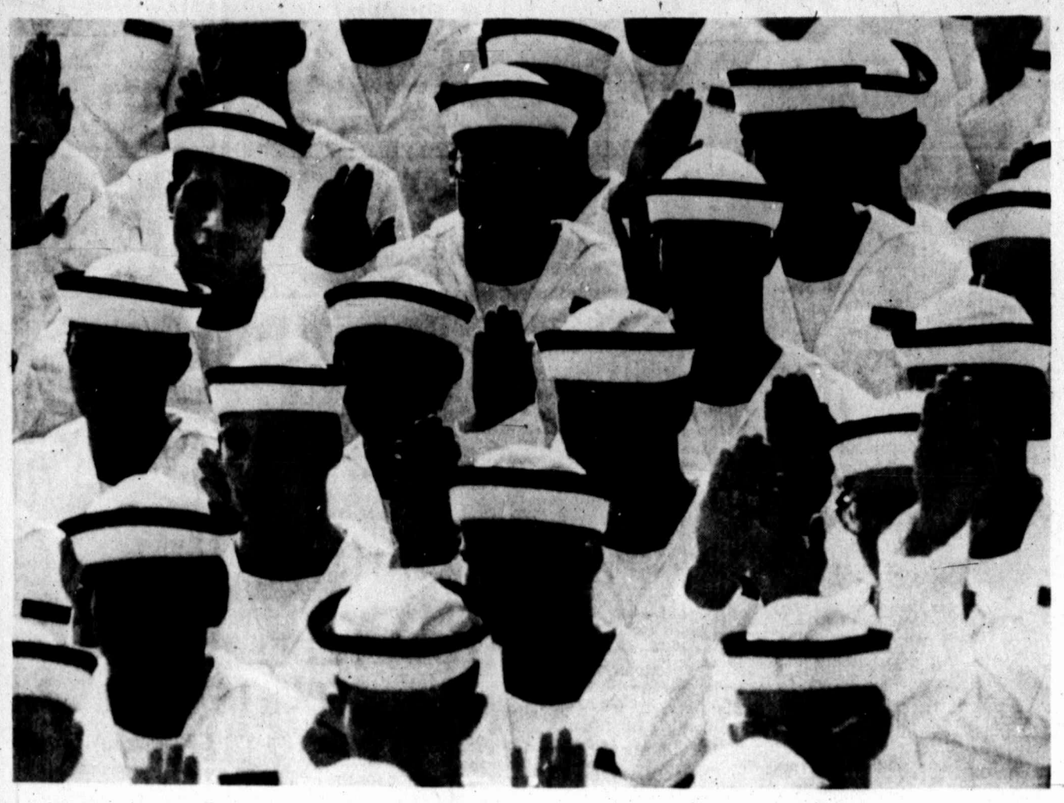

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your business interests and weed out those that are no longer useful. Try to understand what a bigwig suggests and follow his ideas and advice. Get good results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) There is no worse day than this to get into some new interest, so keep busy at whatever you are presently working on. Don't be forced into anything by an overly dynamic person.

Reagan appeals to voters to pick values over labels in November

By The Associated Press

Aiming beyond his battle for the Republican party's presidential nomination, Ronald Reagan has asked the nation to vote for "values and not for labels next November." Jimmy Carter, meanwhile, has won the endorsement of Democrats at the National Governors Conference.

Reagan, who is slightly behind President Ford in delegates in their race for the GOP nomination, made a pitch for the votes of Democrats in the general election in a speech televised nationwide Tuesday night.

He criticized Carter, the all-but-certain Democratic nominee, saying, "There are those whose approach to government combines soothing rhetoric, pleasant smiles and reorganization gimmicks."

Reagan did not name the Democratic contender, but aides confirmed that the former Georgia governor was his target.

Carter was the beneficiary of an impressive fence-mending operation engineered by party chairman Robert Strauss at the governors' conference in Hershey, Pa.

The presidential candidate won an almost-unanimous endorsement from Democrats there — including some old adversaries — then promised to give them influence in a Carter administration.

Carter also disclosed that Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota is on his list of potential running mates. He said he will meet with Mondale on Thursday, presumably at Carter's home in Plains, Ga. He has already met with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine.

House Republican leader John Rhodes said, meantime, he would like to see Reagan run for vice president under Ford. He said it would be the "best way, by far, to unite the party."

Rhodes said he believes Ford will win the presidential nomination, but he added, "I don't quite know why." He predicted that fewer then 10 delegate votes would separate Ford and Reagan at the Republican convention in August.

Ford now has 1,004 delegates to Reagan's 976, according to an Associated Press survey.

Reagan, who spent about $80,000 for the telecast, saved some of his criticism for Ford.

Again without naming his target, he said, "There are those who want to approach the nation's problems on a politics-as-usual basis. A little government help here, a shrewd political move there."

ABC News said Tuesday that Rogers Morton soon will be asked to leave his post as Ford's campaign manager because state and local party officials are displeased with Ford's primary campaign.

Those leaders are considered crucial to Ford's chances for the nomination, ABC said.

ABC said a possible successor is Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements.

Texan's body recovered

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The body of a Texas climber was recovered from Mt. McKinley today, according to a National Park Service spokeswoman.

Edward Guleke, 24, of Amarillo, Tex., died Thursday of pulmonary edema on the 20,320 foot peak in the Alaska Range, some 250 miles northwest of Anchorage. Guleke was with the 17-member Alaska Bicentennial Expedition.

The victim was an international trade economist for the Department of the Treasury, spokeswoman Judith Ayres said.

Miss Ayres said his body was recovered by helicopter early Tuesday at the 14,200-foot level of the Mountain. A fixed wing aircraft took over the operation at the 7,000-foot level, transporting Guleke's remains to Anchorage.

Heart pump taken out

HOUSTON (AP) — A mechanical heart pumping device that had kept a 44-year-old woman alive for six days was removed Tuesday by surgeons at Texas Heart Institute and she remained in critical condition.

The patient, whose identity was kept secret by institute officials, remained in the intensive care unit Tuesday night.

She is at least the fifth person to have an abdominal left ventricular assist decice (LVAD) implanted at the institute since last November.

Although the LVAD was removed, the woman's own heart still was being aided by an intra-aortic balloon assist pump, a hospital official said.

The woman underwent a triple coronary artery bypass operation last Wednesday, but when her surgeons had difficulty getting her own heart functioning the LVAD was implanted.

Requests for information about the patient or previous LVAD implants here have been referred to Dr. Peter Frommer, associate director of the cardiology program of the National Heart and Lung Institute.

Israel ponders death penalty

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli cabinet is reported considering the death penalty for convicted terrorists so their presence in prison won't lead to attempts to ransom them by hijacking or kidnaping.

"We should give serious thought to this," Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin reportedly told cabinet members who urged death for terrorists in the wake of the hijacking last week by Palestinians and West Germans who demanded the release of 40 prisoners from Israeli jails.

Rabin added, however, that he had not decided whether to advocate that terrorists be hanged.

Israel must "institute additional security measures for Israelis traveling abroad," the prime minister told other leaders of his ruling Labor party at a meeting Tuesday. Although the security screen at Israel's Ben-Gurion International Airport is considered the tightest in the non-Communist world, Rabin said security measures at many European airports are insufficient.

"Security measures in the United States are much more efficient," Rabin said.

The hijackers who took over the Air France jetliner June 27 on a flight from Tel Aviv to Paris boarded the plane in Athens, its first stop en route. Air France subsequently announced that its planes to and from Israel would make no intermediate stops, and the Israeli government told other foreign airlines they might lose their landing rights in Israel if they did not tighten security at other airports.

Rabin, President Ephraim Katzir and most other leaders of Israel were in the huge crowd Tuesday at the funeral of Lt. Col. Yonatan Netanyahu, the only Israeli commando killed during the raid that rescued more than 100 hostages from Uganda's Entebbe Airport last Saturday night.

Netanyahu, a native of the United States whose parents brought him to Israel when he was 2, was hailed as a modern Jonathan, the Biblical warrior. Wreaths were heaped on his coffin, and his commando comrades wept. His father, a Cornell University professor, said the prayer of mourning.

'Got Ya Again' prophetic name of police operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chicago Bob thought he was fencing stolen goods with crooked employes of a truck repair shop. But the guys behind the counter at H & H Trucking really were on the up and up.

H & H was a police subsidiary.

They're calling it "Got Ya Again." For the second time in four months, scores of persons have been arrested for allegedly fencing stolen goods at a dummy business set up here by local police and FBI agents posing as street toughs.

On Tuesday, authorities began rounding up 140 persons on charges that they sold $1.2 million worth of stolen checks, credit cards, guns, appliances and cars to the undercover officers at the fake garage, which began business seven months ago.

Last Feb. 28 the police and FBI arrested more than 100 suspected thieves who peddled their wares at a warehouse manned by officers who posed as Mafia-type gangsters with aliases like Rico Rigatone.

The first operation was dubbed "The Sting."

Tuesday's encore used the name of H & H's so-called parent company, G.Y.A. Inc. — police jargon for "Got Ya Again."

A series of raids netted 71 of the 140 persons named in the warrants, and authorities were seeking the rest. They got the home addresses of many customers a few weeks ago by selling $10 raffle tickets on a nonexistent Cadillac Eldorado.

The undercover agents at H & H were black. Officials said many customers were heroin addicts who stole to support their habits.

Women joining ranks today at West Point

WEST POINT, N.Y., (AP) — A tradition that began 174 years ago ended today as women prepared to join the ranks of the male cadets at the U.S. Military Academy.

West Point expected 118 women among the roughly 1,475 new cadets.

It surrendered its all-male tradition to an act of Congress last year which ordered the sexual integration of the service academies. West Point's compliance follows the Air Force Academy by a week and the Naval Academy by a day.

"I hope that in the years to come ...the girls who come after will appreciate what we will do," said Brynnen Sheets, 18, of Edmond, Okla. "I just hope that we can do a good job at it."

Kimberlyn Coffey, 17, of Hinton, Okla., added, "I think we definitely have a responsibility to do our very best for the classes behind us."

She predicted that women would have a lower "wash-out" rate and said, "It takes a special kind of woman to come here, and they're going to be more dedicated than the men actually are when they first get here."

The women are sharing the same floors of the barracks with the men. They are taking the same courses. They can take the same parachute, helicopter and jungle warfare training. They can compete in most varsity sports.

There are differences, however. They will take karate instead of boxing or wrestling. They will carry relatively light M16 rifles, not heavier M14s.

While many of the male cadets make no secret of their dislike of today's changes, one member of the new class of 1980 disagreed.

Governors rally behind Carter

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Jimmy Carter may not be just what his colleagues had in mind when they spent all those presidential campaign years futilely arguing that it was time to nominate a governor for the White House.

But he is what the Democrats are getting, and the party's governors made the most of it during the National Governors Conference here, pledging "our support and united efforts to our friend and former colleague from Georgia."

They praised the former Georgia governor as a man who can heal divisions and unify the party, and Carter showed them how Tuesday.

He worked to make his views on welfare reform mesh with theirs. And the governors politely didn't make Carter mention his opposition to one of their favorite programs, revenue-sharing.

Every four years, governors of both parties have suggested at their annual conferences that one of their number should be in the running for the presidential nomination, along with all those senators.

It was Carter who finally made it, and he had at least as many critics as friends among his state house contemporaries. Two of the critics, Govs. Marvin Mandel of Maryland and Reubin Askew of Florida, were among the engineers of his endorsement by the governors. They came around only when his nomination was inevitable.

Mandel drafted an endorsement statement that dealt only vaguely with issues: inflation, unemployment, adequate medical care, decent housing and "the well being of all men and women."

Askew, as chairman of the Democratic caucus, and party chairman Robert Strauss, as chief peacemaker, arranged the show. Over breakfast, Carter promised some 30 Democratic governors they will have a role in budget and legislative policymaking if he becomes president.

It all went smoothly, right down to the absence of two likely dissenters. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. skipped the conference, and Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards skipped the breakfast.

The endorsement makes no difference so far as the nomination is concerned. Carter already has the delegate votes to win at the party convention one week from tonight. But the peacemaking session could be helpful when the final campaign for the White House begins.

At its wind-up session, the governors' conference voted 24 to 11 to seek a welfare overhaul that would include a national minimum payment level, with variations to reflect cost-of-living differences, and with the federal government footing the bill.

The conference did not propose a specific level for the uniform welfare payments, nor did it estimate the cost to Washington.

Carter, who has said that a full federal takeover of welfare expenses would be too costly, noted that, like the governors, he has consistently supported a fairly uniform national payment level.

And he quickly took care of any question about financing it, "That kind of payment should be met by the federal government."

So his welfare guidelines and those set by the governors conference, which is dominated by the 37 Democratic governors, are in tune.

Birth control project needs healthy men

HOUSTON (AP) — Wanted:

Twenty men between the ages of 20 and 40 and in near perfect health.

Subject: To take 18 months of tests for a possible male birth control method.

Apply: To the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Dr. Glenn R. Cunningham, chief of endocrinology at the Veterans Administration Hospital and assistant professor of medicine at Baylor, said the research program will involve weekly injections of testosterone to determine if the male hormone is acceptable, feasible and low in toxicity as a male contraceptive.

The tests can begin as soon as the volunteers are selected.

It would appear an easy matter to find 20 such young men, but Cunningham said those chosen must be "in exceptionally good health" and willing to stay with the program for 18 months, including preshot checkups and final evaluations.

For years researchers have talked about the need for a completely reversible, effective and safe male birth control method, but to date only the condom has fit the criteria, and it often is unacceptable to men.

Cunningham said the need "for an acceptable, reversible and safe male contraceptive is especially apparent for younger men who may still wish to have children and are not willing to consider a vasectomy."

Testosterone has been recognized as a suppressor of testicular functions since the 1930s, but, Cunningham said, "scientists didn't follow through with those early leads as far as a male contraceptive."

Earlier research has shown, he said, that when given in certain controlled amounts, testosterone "has a low toxicity or few effects, and that is very important to us."

Joining Cunningham in the project is Dr. Peter O. Kohler, chief of endocrinology and professor of medicine and cell biology at Baylor. The work is being funded by a $100,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health.

Politics comes first for Carter

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter observed their 30th wedding anniversary today, but politicking takes precedence over nostalgic family celebration for the probable Democratic presidential nominee.

Carter and his wife planned to fly to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., tonight for a final fund-raising reception before the Democratic National Convention, which opens Monday in New York City.

Carter was expected to spend most of the day at his ranchstyle home in Plains, deciding which Democrat will nominate him at the convention, polishing his acceptance speech and working on the vice presidential question.

The former Georgia governor, who is all but assured of the nomination, said he will interview Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota on Thursday in his vice presidential search.

He was also expected to interview another prospective vice presidential nominee Thursday, and speculation centered on Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the former astronaut.

Viking gets shots of Marsquakes

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Signs of ancient Marsquakes in a long, steep-sided chasm that would dwarf our Grand Canyon have been photographed by the Viking 1 spacecraft circling the red planet.

The Martian temblors apparently were the triggers for massive landslides that shattered cliff walls and sent rock and soil thundering into the deep canyon system, scientists said Tuesday.

From Viking's point of view — 1,000 miles or more above the surface — the landslide debris closely resembled quake-caused avalanches on earth. Dr. Harold Masursky was reminded of the great earthquake that caused devastation in Alaska in 1964.

"We have some gorgeous aerial photographs and ground surveys of great debris flows (in Alaska) that are similar in size and shape to the ones we are seeing in these Viking photographs," said Masursky, of the U.S. Geological Survey.

He and other Viking scientists said they were delighted at the clarity with which the spacecraft photos showed the Vallis Marineris, a 3,000-mile long chain of canyons near the Martian equator.

It's easy to favor not mowing lawn

RICHARD COHEN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — I have finally found an organization I can wholeheartedly support. As luck would have it, the letter that announced the organization to me had no title on it, but it did have a nonprofit mailing permit — the sine qua non of all worthwhile organizations. This one is against the mowing of lawns.

At last. The letter came at the end of a dismal week. There was a story in the paper about a fellow in Fairfax County, Va., who had refused to mow his property and another a couple of days later about the dangers of mowing. The story said that mowing a lawn with a dull mower could injure the grass, leaving it weak during the "stress" months of July and August.

This was too much for me. I am something of a concrete buff anyway, a city boy raised to appreciate the virtues of cement and asphalt. We used to measure how far a ball traveled by the number of manhole covers it cleared. There was precision to all this, and records were kept. Some guys could hit a ball three sewers and some four. A four-sewer man was not what you would call effete. You measured your man by concrete.

Anyway, the letter listed lots of reasons for not mowing lawns, everything from preservation of little animals and insects to protection of the water table. By the time I finished reading the letter, I discovered there was real virtue in not mowing. A couple of weeks of not mowing and you would feel like Smokey the Bear. You could also get some reading done.

The letter was from Nellie Shriver. Nellie Shriver has knocked mowing into a cocked hat. In fact, this Arlington, Va., resident is to the not-mowing of lawns what Madalyn Murray O'Hair is to atheism. Shriver does not mow her lawn. In fact, she says her lease specifically states that she does not have to mow the lawn. Instead, she puts Bijou out on the lawn and lets her go to work. Bijou is a guinea pig, a cute guinea pig, actually, with a tan body, a collar of white fur around the neck — and a ferocious appetite.

Every day, Bijou goes through about four square feet of lawn. It's not hard to tell where Bijou has been. Bijou works within a green wire cage with some weights attached so she won't knock the thing over. Every day the cage is moved to a different patch of lawn and every day Bijou eats away. Bijou is no clock watcher. On the day I saw her at work, she was clearing what you might call the southwest quadrant, white teeth grinding away at the grass, nose twitching, taking no breaks.

"I wouldn't recommend that everyone use guinea pigs," said Shriver. "They are prey to dogs and cats when they are out of their environment." Bijou, it turns out, is out of her environment. She was "liberated" from a laboratory where she was about to play a central role in an experiment.

Echoing Shriver, I, too, would not wholeheartedly recommend guinea pigs to mow the lawn. Bijou does a fair to middling jobs, sometimes passing up blades of grass for no discernible resaon. Maybe it has something to do with the hormones. Anyway, she is not a perfectionist and Shriver's lawn, frankly, looks like a guinea pig has been nibbling on it.

But that is not the point. The point is that Shriver has beat mowing. She is rather recently arrived in the Washington area from Akron, Ohio, a city that was not sad to see her leave. While there, she owned a house where she rasied some dogs and grew some grass. She grew the grass so high, it looked like Kansas at harvest time.

Anti-crime package

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has disclosed a "package of anti-crime legislation" which he will send to the Legislature in January.

He solicited the support of lawyers in the matter last Saturday in addressing a State Bar general assembly at Austin.

The governor's proposals would get drunk drivers off the highways and put welfare chiselers behind bars.

Briscoe said he will recommend longer suspensions of the licenses of motorists convicted of drunk driving. He also will advocate legislation which would assure that they go to jail if they continue to drive after their licenses are suspended or canceled.

He said that many welfare chiselers, including some who pocketed thousands of dollars, have escaped with slap-on-the-wrist penalties. He termed them common theives and said that they "should be punished like all other theives are punished."

A report out of Austin said that some judges and lawyers in the audience applauded some of the governor's proposals, but others said they could not support his entire program.

The governor, however, is determined to do his best to curb the crime rate and he isn't likely to pull back any of his recommendations at this stage of the game. More power to him in his overall effort.

Briscoe said he is concerned especially about efforts of organized crime to get a foothold in Texas and the sale of narcotics throughout the state.

He plans to ask the Legislature to make "engaging in organized crime" a separate offense punishable by a long prison term. He explained that the proposal would let prosecutors try a defendant for all organized crime activities in a single trial.

Briscoe indicated he also will ask the Legislature to approve bills which would:

— Let judges and prosecutors tell juries how much time a defendant would spend in prison before becoming eligible for parole.

— Provide for the supervision by parole officers of all convicts released from prison.

— Require criminals to repay victims of their crimes.

— Prohibit the release of persons convicted of acts of violence and other aggravated crimes.

— Permit the use of oral confessions in trials.

— Allow law enforcement officers to obtain warrants and search property while seeking evidence during investigations.

— Authorize officers to engage in electronic surveillance, including wire-tapping, with the approval of judges.

— Force convicts to spend a longer period behind bars before becoming eligible for parole if their crimes involved use of firearms.

The governor said he also will recommend a constitutional amendment which would let judges deny bail to anyone accused of commiting a new felony while free on bond.

He said also that judges should get the power to deny bond to any defendant who is appealing a prison term.

Defendants now have the right to post appeal bonds if their sentences are not more than 15 years in prison.

Some of the proposals perhaps seem a bit strong, but remember, the governor is out to prevent crime for the protection of the public.

Both Gov. Briscoe and Atty. Gen. John L. Hill also have expressed the belief that the U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding Texas' death penalty will deter many brutal, senseless murders.

"I strongly support the reinstatement of capital punishnent as set forth in the Texas penal code," Briscoe said. "The ruling of the U.S. Supreme Court will, I believe, serve as a strong deterrent to those wanton, premeditated violent crimes in the future."

Hill, who personally defended Texas' statute in arguments before the Supreme Court, said he thinks the court made the correct decision.

AMERICANA:

Events in O'Leary barn are recounted

By SAM STEWART
Copley News Service

There's no question that Chicago had a big fire in the year 1871, that it burned for three days, caused damages estimated at $196 million or more and caused the death of 250 persons, possibly more.

The Chicago fire has become something of an historical landmark, like the Johnstown Flood, the San Francisco Earthquake or the Blizzard of 1888. It put the date of Oct. 8, 1871, into the history books.

But in spite of the generally accepted story about Mrs. O'Leary's cow, cautious chronologists preface every reference to bovine involvement with "Legend has it that..."

However, historians concede that a Mrs. O'Leary lived at 558 De Koven St. She owned a cow. It will be admitted that the cow required milking at regular intervals, with the evening harvest no doubt coming after sundown, since Chicago was not on daylight savings time in those days.

And, if Mrs. O'Leary had to milk her cow after dark, it is a safe bet that she toted a lantern with her when she went to the barn, Thomas Edison not yet having unveiled his incandescent lamp, electric variety.

She may have been a careless sort, or she would have placed the lantern at a safe distance, since cows being milked are notorious for (1) tail swishing, and (2) kicking when handled less than gently.

It seems possible that Mrs. O'Leary's cow took a swipe at Mrs. O'Leary with its tail, which, as anyone who ever has milked a cow knows, is a prime source of aggravation. So stung, it is further possible that Mrs. O'Leary gave an impulsive yank to the faucet then getting her direct attention.

This set off what has come to be known as a chain reaction, because Bossie would respond with a short kick of the right foot, and would not give an homogenized hoot if she contacted a lantern instead of the offending Mrs. O'Leary.

It is conceded that the O'Leary barn of 1871 was well carpeted with combustible material. So an overturned lantern would waste no time in setting fire to the premises.

You can imagine Mrs. O'Leary's reaction.

With no fire extinguisher at hand and not enough milk in the bucket to douse the blaze, she probably took off in full cry. She had no telephone and in 1871 neither did any of her neighbors, so the only alarm was the one she sounded personally.

But by the time the neighbors could rally around, the barn — and presumably Bossie — were engulfed in flames, and the fire was spreading.

It spread...and it spread. Chicago had built up fast in those days, with wooden structures slapped together in get-rich-quick fashion. The city itself was just as combustible as Mrs. O'Leary's barn.

And while no one could find anything pleasant in a fire as disastrous as that one, the fact remains that after it was over, Chicago rebuilt itself of steel and stone and brick, bigger and better than ever, an improvement which definitely was hastened by the unfortunate milking-time incident at the O'Leary home.

Legend it may be. There is a school of historians more concerned with doubting and attempting to disprove stories like this, and the one about George Washington flinging a dollar across the Rappahannock River, among others. But nobody can deny the dramatic possibilities of the O'Leary story.

For another thing, the debunking historians haven't come up with a better one.

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

Nepotism continues in Congress

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Under the spur of public opinion, Congress grudgingly approved a law in December 1967, barring any more relatives from the congressional payroll.

But a number of senators and congressmen have gotten around the law by placing one another's relatives on the payroll. This form of nepotism is practiced in the best of families.

Our associates Jack Cloherty and Bob Owens found dozens of famous names on the public payroll — the wives, children, uncles, cousins and in-laws of prominent legislators.

A few congressional relatives were holdovers, who had obtained their jobs before the 1967 law and, therefore, weren't affected by it. But most were hired by congressmen who were not their kin but who understood the ancient rules of political backscratching. This resulted in some fancy payroll juggling, which violated the spirit if not the letter of the anti-nepotism law.

In an earlier column, we identified some of the prominent congressmen who have wangled jobs for their relatives. Now here are a few of the senators who have relatives on the public payroll:

— Sen. Ted Stevens, R.-Alaska, formerly made a switch with ex-Sen. Marlow Cook, R.-Ky. Cook hired Stevens' kids to work in his office, and Stevens put Cook's children on his patronage. Now Stevens has given the daughter of Sen. Paul Laxalt, R.-Nev., a job on the Senate Republican Campaign Committee. She works on Capitol Hill but is paid out of campaign funds.

— Sen. Hiram Fong, R.-Hawaii, is a millionaire with ample funds to take care of his family. Yet he put his brother Herman on the congressional payroll at a generous $34,000 a year. Since Herman was hired before December 1967, he can go on collecting from the taxpayers.

— Sen. Milton Young, R.-N.D., married his executive secretary. It is perfectly legal, therefore, for her to remain on the senator's payroll. But after their marriage, he quietly gave her a generous raise. Her $20,000 annual salary helps to bolster the family finances.

— Sen. Harrison Williams, D.-N. J., married a member of his committee staff. She is still pulling down $27,000 a year to supplement the family income.

— Sen. Mike Gravel, D.-Alaska, arranged a job for his niece in the Senate folding room last summer and as a Senate elevator operator this summer. He has also planted his daughter on the Senate payroll as a page. Sen. Walter Huddleston, D.-Ky., also wangled a summer job for his son. Other senators like Gale McGee, D.-Wyo., and Frank Moss, D.-Utah, have found temporary employment for their kids on Capitol Hill.

None of these men has violated the 1967 law. All contend that their relatives work hard for the salaries they collect. But the law was written to outlaw nepotism. Those who hire one another's relatives don't let go of a government pay envelope easily.

Footnote: Most members of Congress, who make their way into this column, appear to be villains in the drama of government. It is necessary for us to remind our readers occasionally that the scalawags attract more attention than the conscientious congressmen.

For that matter, the sellout one day may be the holdout the next. Even the worst rascals on Capitol Hill have their moments of righteousness. Meanwhile, the good are sometimes damned along with the bad. Honest men in public life, who have made great personal sacrifices to serve the nation, can suffer from guilt by association.

REPUBLICAN SCRAMBLE: As the battle for the Republican presidential nomination approaches a showdown, strategists for both President Ford and Ronald Reagan are examining new ways to corral the dwindling number of GOP delegates.

One way to boost delegate totals, besides wooing the uncommitted and still-to-be-selected delegates, would be to contest the credentials of previously chosen delegates.

We have learned that both the Ford and Reagan camps are seriously considering challenging the credentials of rival delegates. Those states most likely to have challenges brought, our sources say, are Virginia, Louisiana, Arizona and Connecticut, also possibly the populous delegations of California and Texas.

Publicly, spokesmen for both campaigns deny that they have made any decision to challenge rival delegates. Neither group wants to appear divisive or bitter. Privately, however, both groups admit that they are actively contemplating delegate challenges.

If there should be any credentials challenges, they would likely not be made until after the end of the delegate selection process on July 12. Thereafter, campaign strategists would have a frantic five days in which to file credentials challenges in time for the July 17 deadline.

Mark Russell says

The Republicans are aware of their low voter registration. Let's face it, you know you're in trouble when you're outnumbered by Gladys Knight and the Pips.

•

Should Ford be Reagan's running mate? Why not? We need a vice president with experience.

•

Besides, the unified Republicans could then hold hands — and keep from punching each other.

•

Ford would then be the first Congressman appointed to both the vice presidency and the presidency, who then ran for the presidential nomination and wound up as vice president.

•

While chewing gum at the same time.

•

Ford doesn't have anywhere near the religious image of Carter. Jerry thinks Fire and Brimstone is a steak house.

•

And here's the latest from the sports world: Charley Finley just sold Barbara Walters to the Boston Red Sox.

INSIDE REPORT:

Sandbagging Uncle Sam: Stark testimony to truth

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — A dangerous last-minute hitch in plans to evacuate Americans from Beirut resulted directly from efforts by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) to sandbag Washington into using its power to accomplish the key PLO war aim of opening the Beirut airport.

With the PLO and the U.S. communicating indirectly through the British embassy in Beirut, the PLO's attempt to use the evacuation as a cover to enhance its military position finally failed. But the mere fact so blatant an attempt was made shows how far U.S. influence in the Middle East — particularly inside wartorn Lebanon — has declined in the past year.

The PLO's plot to strongarm a world superpower, understandable in terms of its desperate need for medical and other supplies for beseiged Beirut, contained these simple elements:

By declaring the overland route from Beirut to Damascus unsafe, the PLO could force the Americans to choose the air route as the only way to get out of Beirut. That would bring pressure from Washington on the Syrian government to let the airport (closed by Syrian troops) open for the evacuation.

Having then opened the airport on behalf of fleeing Americans, the PLO believed that the Syrians would not dare close it to medical supplies desperately needed by hundreds of gravely wounded Palestinian Arabs.

This plan required the U.S. to brush aside major contradictions. Even though the British and the French had sent land convoys safely to Damascus on the four days immediately preceding the planned June 20 American exodus, the PLO quietly notified the British embassy in Beirut to inform the U.S. that the route had suddenly become unsafe. Yet, on that very day, June 20, non-Arab civilians made their way with utter safety through the war-littered region surrounding Beirut, up the mountain passes and into Damascus.

Thus, the White House reacted with immediate suspicion to this PLO ploy for U.S. pressure on Syria for air evacuation. Even before the land-route option was closed off, President Ford had been criticized for using the evacuation to promote himself as presidential crisis-manager on the eve of the important Iowa Republican state convention.

Such criticism was deepened by the all-night White House meetings to find a new evacuation route (just after the overland evacuation of British and French nationals had worked without any trouble). Angered though they were by the PLO's sudden warning, Mr. Ford and his top military advisers could not prove the PLO was wrong and dared not risk finding out.

So, to avoid playing the obvious PLO game and taking to the air, Mr. Ford ordered evacuation by sea. Washington was determined to force the issue with the PLO, privately sending word through foreign embassies that a U.S. Marine assault battalion would be put on the ground in Lebanon if needed to safeguard the short land route from Beirut's Riviera Hotel to the docks.

Only then, threatened with U.S. force, did the embattled PLO admit it had lost the game to impose its will on Washington's crisis diplomacy. With the admission came fast and complete cooperation.

What is so disturbing about this sequence of events is its lessons for wider U.S. interests in the Middle East, as well as the immediate future course of this nation's diplomacy in Lebanon. The truth is that Washington has now become spectator to passions unleashed by the Mideast's bloodiest civil war in generations.

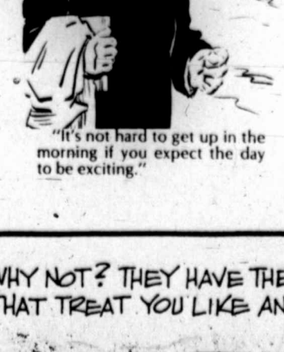

The U.S. has been unable even to tell the truth publicly about its private support for Syria's intervention in that civil war (first to help the PLO, then to save the beleaguered Christian Arab minority). Nor has the U.S. been able to impede the breakup of Arab unity, particularly between Syria and Egypt, that followed the second-stage Israeli withdrawal from Sinai and severely threatens Mideast settlement prospects.

Some experts here trace the tragedy of Lebanon's civil war directly back to U.S. refusal to insist that Israel start long-overdue negotiations with the Palestinians — or with Jordan — over the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River two years ago. Instead the U.S. allowed Israel to make a second-stage Sinai withdrawal agreement with Egypt, leaving the Palestinian problems both on the West Bank and in Lebanon ripe for exploding.

Washington's inability ten days ago to arrange a simple evacuation of its own citizens without being sandbagged by the relatively puny PLO is stark testimony to the truth. As of today, the U.S. seems to have no hand left to play in the bloody Middle East.

Jamaican political violence increases sharply

By COURTLAND MILLOY
The Washington Post

KINGSTON, Jamaica — John Fulton, 25, a mechanic was walking home from work when three men approached him and asked for a match.

"Your party, too," one of the men wanted to know. Fulton replied that he was a member of the People's National party. He was stabbed.

Fulton's death was avenged later than night. An apartment complex occupied mostly by persons belonging to the Jamaica Labor party was set afire. In what is now called the Orange Street Massacre, the political gang held firemen outside and tenants inside the burning building with sniper fire. Eight children and three adults were killed.

So far this year more than 100 persons, including 17 policemen, have been killed here in what is believed to be politically related violence.

Fighting among Jamaica's two political parties goes back to the 1940s, but the pressure of national elections, which must be held by next February, is apparently bringing it to ahead.

Prime Minister Michael Manley, who heads the People's National party and has been in office since 1972, is opposed by Edward Seaga, leader of the Jamaica Labor party.

The outcome of the elections will be influenced, however, by district boundaries that are being redrawn now to take into account the urban drift that, over the past six years, has brought nearly three-fourths of Kingston's population from the countryside into a 15-square-block area in the city.

The proposed boundary changes would put the strongholds of both the National party and the Labor party into a single election district.

Eight years ago, Fulton was a barefoot peasant, wandering the countryside seeking food to eat and a place to sleep. The day he was killed he had a small one-room apartment with running water and electric lights. His apartment had been built during the tenure of Manley and the People's National party, and all the residents of that apartment complex, as well as most of the people in the immediate area, are strong National party advocates.

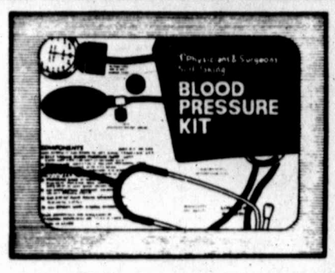

About a mile away from Fulton's apartment is a similar structure. It was built while the Labor party was in office, and most of its residents are strong Labor party supporters.

"At first, they were using propaganda to make the other party leave the area so the districts could be all one party here," said a store owner, who asked not to be identified for fear of arrest or retaliation. "Now they have turned to scaring each side away. The kids — it is the kids. They are restless, but mostly they are hungry. And a hungry man is an angry man," he said.

Researchers on Carter turn up interesting facts

By DAVID S. BRODER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — On Sept. 19, 1973, three weeks before his resignation, Vice President Spiro Agnew received a call from the governor of Georgia, Jimmy Carter.

As Carter recounted it at a press conference the next day, "I told him that I hoped that he would remain in office. I told him that I hoped that he would remain in office. I hoped he would not resign under pressure. And I told him there were a lot of Democratic governors and a lot of citizens in the states and in the nation that I thought would be disappointed if he resigned at this time. And he thanked me for my comments.

"I have said earlier," Carter told the reporters, "maybe too quickly, that I thought he was completely innocent. I don't have any way to know that, but I know him and I think he's been abused unnecessarily and too early in the press...and I don't think he's received adequate support from the President."

When reporters expresed surprise at Carter's comments, he said he had become a friend of Agnew's when the latter took over federal-state liaison for the Nixon administration, adding, "as a matter of fact, he and I have been very close."

That intriguing footnote to history is one of the little nuggets turned up by a squad of young men and women, working in the anonymity of the Republican National Committee offices, who are probably the world's leading experts on the history of Jimmy Carter.

Since late April, when the likelihood of Carter's winning the Democratic presidential nomination became clear, 25-year-old Don Dancer and 26-year-old Mike Poling and their half-dozen associates have been collecting every scrap of information they can find about James Earl Carter Jr.

Dancer, deputy director of research at the national committee, and Poling, head of the Carter task force, are anxious to stress that they have used no gumshoe methods or "dirty tricks" to track Carter.

"All we've tried to do is assemble as complete information on Carter we could from the available public records," Dancer said in a recent interview.

That search has netted a mass of data, trivial and significant, now collected on filing cards, spools of microfilm and in filing cases. News stories, speeches, official records — everything that would shed light on Jimmy Carter is there.

Very little of what has been learned is public. The research division has distributed to Republican party leaders only two mimeographed publications, totaling five pages. One is a series of quotations designed to show "Jimmy Carter's many faces on right-to-work," the issue of union shop contracts.

The other, called "Carter contradictions," lists some conflicting statements on the subjects of busing, capital punishment, defense, drugs, government, religion, revenue-sharing and zero-base budgeting. As the research team processes the data now on hand, they have found many "intriguing things," as Poling put it, about the probable Democratic nominee.

Busing controversy causing big White House-rights groups split

By JOHN M. GOSHKO
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — To Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, it was "a craven cowardly, despicable capitulation to lawlessness, ignorance and the forces of race."

He was referring to President Ford's action June 24 in asking Congress for legislation to restrict the use of busing as a remedy for school segregation.

The busing controversy has threatened the biggest split between the White House and the civil rights movement since the late 1960s when President Nixon was accused of employing thinly disguised racist policies to win white voters at the expense of minority progress.

Mr. Ford is not the only target of the bitterness being voiced by leaders like Wilkins. They also have criticized Attorney General Edward H. Levi and the Justice Department for articulating a legal rationale for restricted busing and making it the basis of the President's legislative proposals.

But, while Levi has been savaged in terms almost as harsh as those applied to the President, there so far has been no echo of another charge heard during the Nixon years — that the Justice Department is trying to turn back the clock on civil rights for partisan political reasons.

One reason is that Levi has run the Justice Department in a determinedly apolitical manner. Even more, the critics say they respect Assistant Attorney General J. Stanley Pottinger and the 156 lawyers he directs in the department's Civil Rights Division.

In fact, many of those now attacking Mr. Ford and Levi for their stance on busing are also quick to concede that Justice's current overall record of civil rights enforcement is one of the most activist and imaginative in the department's history.

Clarence M. Mitchell, Washington representative of the NAACP, says, "I think Pottinger and his associates in the Civil Rights Division are personally dedicated, effective and very creditable people."

Martin Sloane, general counsel for the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, adds: "I find the Attorney General's reactions about busing chilling. But I've no problems with Sam Pottinger and his people. They're very bright and well-intentioned; and their performance has been outstanding, given the limitations of their resources."

Even Joseph L. Rauh Jr., counsel for the Leadership Conference on Civil rights and perhaps the most outspoken critic of the Ford administration's civil rights record, coincides: "Their record in many areas is darn good. I think Pottinger has been an interesting and very useful figure within the department."

Pottinger, 36, has been wrestling with touchy civil rights problems since 1969, when as a young lawyer, he joined the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The following year, he became HEW's chief civil rights officer; and, in 1973, he moved to Justice to take charge of the Civil Rights Division.

Nixon, was still President, and according to many people who were in the Civil Rights Division then, its internal morale and external reputation were at a low ebb.

"We were getting some things done," recalls one. "But there's no question that a lot of things were taboo for political reasons. Our stock in the civil rights community was pretty low."

What changed the situation, veterans of the division say, was the arrival of Pottinger and then of Elliot L. Richardson as Attorney General. Within weeks, Pottinger had persuaded Richardson to reopen the investigation of the 1970 shooting of students at Kent State University by the Ohio National Guard — a subject that had been regarded as off-limits by the Nixon administration.

It was a signal both to the staff and the civil rights community that the political restraints had been removed from the division. And, its staff attorneys insist, that has continued to be the case through the tenure of Mr. Ford and Levi.

In the time since, Pottinger says proudly, "We've been more active than at any time in the division's history in terms of filing suits and breaking new ground."

This activity has ranged all over the civil rights map. In the housing field, the division's lawyers have vigorously pressed suits against some of the country's biggest real estate firms for discriminating against blacks, and against a Washington residential hotel that was "perpetuating sexual stereotypes" by requiring male tenants to pay for compulsory maid service, while exempting women residents.

Long-standing programs such as the monitoring of school districts under desegregation orders and the prodding of schools and universities to set up "affirmative action" hiring programs, have been maintained. And, the division has moved actively into new areas such as enforcing Voting Rights Act provisions for foreign-language ballots and trying to ensure that municipalities receiving federal funds don't shortchange minority neighborhoods in public works and services.

The division has not shown any fear about getting into potentially controversial actions against other departments of the federal government. At present, the division's criminal section is known to be conducting a secret, but far-reaching investigation of charges that FBI agents were involved in illegal burglaries against radical groups.

Similarly, the Civil Rights Division is expected to support some impending suits charging that government agencies like the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. have failed to take steps against discrimination in mortgage and personal bank loans. In addition, Pottinger has indicated that he will fight to prevent these agencies from being defended by the Justice Department's Civil Division.

That stance has reinforced a view held by many in the civil rights community that the division is a beleaguered island surrounded by what Rauh calls "the reactionary divisions of the Justice Department." Mitchell adds: "It's clear that there's a tug of war going on there about civil rights, and the two sides aren't always on the same wave length."

There is unquestionably some truth to these observations. It's known that Pottinger led the recent much-publicized fight to dissuade Levi from asking the Supreme Court to intervene in the Boston school busing case, and it's also known that the Civil Rights Division was so unenthusiastic about the administration's busing bill that the legislation was drafted principally by other sections of the department.

However, Pottinger insists that this talk of internal cleverages is overdrawn. Both the President and Levi have a strong commitment to civil rights progress, he insists, and any differences that exist involve questions of what is the best and most effective way to proceed.

"Civil rights enforcement is a very unpopular thing," he points out, "because it means protecting the rights of minorities against majority rule within a democratic society."

From its emphasis a decade ago on breaking down segregated school systems in the South, the federal government has expanded its civil rights concerns to include what Pottinger calls "a constantly increasing group of different constituencies whose common denominator is that they are citizens who do not share a deserved degree of power in our society."

These include Spanish-speaking Americans, Oriental Americans, American Indians and other racial minorities, women, the physically and mentally handicapped, inmates in prisons, and persons who have been the victims of political brutality or oppression.

Ancient Chinese leader dead at 90

TOKYO (AP) — Chu Teh, considered the grand old man of the Chinese Communist armed forces, died in Peking Tuesday, Peking radio reported. He was 90.

As chairman of the standing committee of China's National People's Congress, Chu had functioned since January 1975 as the equivalent of China's head of state.

In that capacity, he had met in Peking June 22 with Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser. He took over the job of meeting foreign dignitaries earlier in June after Communist party officials decided that 82- year-old Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung no longer would do so.

Chu also was a member of the inner ruling circle, the standing committee of the party Central Committee's Political Bureau.

Peking radio broadcast a joint announcement by the Central Committee, the Congress' standing committee and the state council, the equivalent of China's cabinet.

Chu was military commander of the 1934 Long March by Mao and 90,000 Communist followers, who marched 6,000 miles to avoid encirclement by Chiang Kai-shek's Kuomintang forces.

Chu, born in 1886 of a Szechuan peasant family, embarked on his long military career in 1909 by enrolling in the Yunan Military Academy, where he was exposed to the revolutionary ideas of Sun Yat-sen.

In August 1927, Chu and a band of followers participated in an abortive uprising in Nanchang organized by the late Chou En-lai.

In 1928, he joined forces with Mao in the Chingkangshan Mountains in South China, becoming commander of the Communists' 4th Army. Mao was political commissar.

While Mao was the dominating influence, Chu showed his fighting skill by five times breaking out of encirclement by Chiang Kai-shek's troops.

It was at this time that Chu formulated the rules that gave the Communist army a boost in the eyes of foreign observers in contact with the Communists.

First were the "three principles of discipline" — always obey orders, do not take a single needle or a single thread from the people, and hand over all captured property to the authorities.

The "eight rules of conduct" were be friendly in speech, be just in business transactions, always return anything borrowed, give compensation for damaged property, do not beat up or bully the people, be careful to protect the crops, do not flirt with women, do not torture prisoners of war.

Portrait presented

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Portrait Gallery says it has been presented a portrait of Sarah Porter which was painted in 1896 by Robert B. Brandegee.

Miss Porter was founder of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and "was a pioneer in the secondary schooling of young women in this country."

Israel once enjoyed excellent relationship with Ugandans

By YUVAL ELIZUR
Special to The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — When the Israeli commandos landed at Entebbe airport last weekend, it was not the first time that orders in Hebrew were given at Uganda's international airport and principal air base.

In fact, less than four and a half years ago Israeli officers were training the pilots of the fledgling air force that lost almost half its planes in Saturday night's raid during which the Israeli forces rescued about 100 hostages held there by Palestinian terrorists.

THE ISREALI AIR FORCE officers were among the 120 Israeli families who lived there during the days of Ugandan-Israeli friendship. Others were engaged as advisers by various Ugandan ministries or worked for joint Israel-Ugandan firms, including a construction company, an insecticide and pesticides plant and agencies of several Israeli manufacturing firms.

The relations between the two countries began shortly after Uganda won its independence in 1960. Uganda's first president, Apollo Milton Obote, invited the Israelis to instruct his army, especially his air force, and to help in housing schemes, agricultural development and in industrialization plans.

SOME OF THE AID was extended by Israel as part of its effort to come to the aid of developing countries, thereby winning friends and breaking the wall of isolation built around it by Israel's hostile Arab neighbors. Some of these efforts were strictly business ventures. Uganda, for example, was left with a full purse when the British colonial authorities departed. It was a rich country with good prospects for rapid economic growth.

Solel Boneh, Israel's largest construction company, which is owned by Histadrut (the general labor federation), won contracts totalling more than $32 million in its approximately 10 years of operations in Uganda. At the time the Israelis were expelled from Uganda, in March 1972, Solel Boneh had completed work for about $21 million.

THESE PROJECTS INCLUDED 700 housing units (of a total of 1,500 units) and army camps, as well as the extension of the Entebbe air base, where the Ugandan pilots were trained in jets manufactured in France and assembled in Israel.

The Israeli experts liked Uganda. The climate is pleasant, the people friendly and living comfortable. Many of the families who served there for two to four years returned home with considerable savings.

ALTHOUGH THE ISRAELIS had won the confidence of Milton Obote, their status in the country was not shaken even after the present ruler, Idi Amin, took over the government after a coup in January 1971. Amin, although a Moslem, was very friendly to Israel in those days. He had won his parachutist's wings in a course he completed in Israel, and after he came to office he visited the country several times.

Relations with Israel began to deteriorate during the second half of 1971. There are several explanations for this rift. The most obvious one is that Amin's commitments as a result of arms purchases in Israel were becoming too big for both countries. Israel was obliged to say "no" when additional orders were placed.

THE BREAKING POINT reportedly came when former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir and the then defense minister, Moshe Dayan, reportedly turned down Amin's request to sell him, on credit, 12 American-made Phantom jets. Promises of financial adi from Libya, which never materialized, also apparently convinced Amin to turn against the Israelis.

Federal team to check Alaska pipeline welds

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-level federal fact-finding team is being sent to Alaska to investigate a welding problem that threatens to delay completion of the oil pipeline under construction there.

President Ford ordered the study after reports that an auditing firm hired by the Interior Department found pipeline records so confused that it could not figure out which of 31,000 welds have been properly X rayed, as required, and which have not.

White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Tuesday that Ford directed Transportation Secretary William Coleman and Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe to give him a preliminary report on the problem today. A team headed by Deputy Transportation Secretary John Barnum was ordered to head for Alaska.

Nessen said the team will start its fact-finding trip early next week. He said Ford wants the team to find out whether the welding problem will delay completion of the giant pipeline, currently scheduled to start carrying about 1.2 million barrels of oil a day by mid1977.

He said Ford also wants to know if the problem threatens any additional cost or environmental impact.

The specter of serious delays arose from the apparent collapse of Interior Department efforts to narrow down the welding problem.

Late last year, Interior Department officials say, the Bechtel Corp., major contractor for Alyeska Pipe Line Service Co., a consortium of seven oil companies building the line, reported discrepancies in the records kept by a subcontractor responsible for X raying each weld joining the 60-to 80-foot segments of pipe.

The Interior Department's own stipulations in allowing construction of the 800-mile pipeline across its vast Alaska lands require an x-ray check of each weld before the department can approve the line.

Alyeska estimated that at least 3,000 of the 31,000 welds already completed were questionable — flawed or, more frequently, lacking valid proof that they were safe.

Interior Undersecretary Kent Frizzell said there were indications some X rays were improperly used to represent a number of different welds that actually had not been X rayed properly.

Interior officials hired the Arthur Andersen auditing firm to check Alyeska records to find which welds were not adequately X rayed.

It is projected to 7,400 feet, and spots 2,075 feet from north and 560 feet from west lines of section 444, block 97, H&TC survey, six miles north of Snyder.

It also is ½ mile north of the firm's No. 1 Lear-Western Reserves, which is preparing to take potential through perforations at 7,030-7,033 feet.

Reentry projects set in West Texas areas

Reentry projects are planned as wildcats in Fisher, Stonewall and Nolan counties.

R. L. Foree, Dallas, intends to deepen from 3,970 feet to 4,000 feet at No. 2 Beck Estate, one location east of the one-well Andy, South (Swastika) field of Fisher.

The project was abandoned in 1969.

It is 1,980 feet from south and 2,474 feet from east lines of section 11, HT&B survey, two miles east of Longworth.

The discovery was Foree No. 1 Beck Estate, which finaled in March, 1969, for 55 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 3,901-3,904 feet.

Amoco Production Co. will plug back to 5,100 feet for tests of the Canyon reef at No. 8-D T. A. Jean, former Ellenburger well, one mile northwest of the marginal Canyon reef discovery in the Frankirk field of Stonewall.

It was completed in September, 1975, at a total depth of 6,161 feet, making 138 barrels of oil daily, through perforations at 6,038-6,072 feet.

It is 1,787 feet from south and 2,200 feet from west lines of section 15, block U, T&P survey, eight miles southwest of Aspermont.

Exxon Corp. has filed application to plug back to 3,754 feet at No. 2 R. R. Petty, former dolomite and Cambrian producer in the E.A. field of Nolan, in a try to reopen Cook sand production in the area.

It was completed in 1954 from the dolomite pay and deepened and completed as a Cambrian well in 1962.

Location is 2,878 feet from south and 1,400 feet from west lines of section 6, block Z, T&P survey, 11 miles east of Maryneal.

Amoco finals Irion gasser

Amoco Production Co. has completed No. 6-G Ela Sugg as a Wolfcamp gas strike in Irion County, 12 miles north of Barnhart.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 9.1 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 7,814-8,017 feet. The pay had been acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 26,000 gallons and 52,000 pounds.

Tops reported were Spraberry, 5,300 feet, and Wolfcamp, 7,800 feet, under ground elevation of 2,407 feet.

Total depth is 8,300 feet, and it is plugged back to 8,253 feet, in 5½-inch production pipe set on bottom.

Wellsite is 1,120 feet from north and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 103, block 14, H&TC survey, surrounded by the Spraberry Trend Area. Operator has proposed field designation of Ela Sugg.

Sun gauges gas, crude

Sun Oil Co. No. 17-23-A M. J. Hill, Winkler County wildcat reentry, eight miles south of Kermit, flowed 2.6 million cubic feet of gas daily, along with four barrels of condensate and 136 barrels of load water in 24 hours from the Devonian.

The flow was through a 32-64-inch choke and perforations at 9,672-9,896 feet.

Testing continued.

The workover, a former Ellenburger oil producer in the Halley Northeast field, is ¾ mile east of Devonian gas production in the Halley field.

It originally was drilled by Sunray D-X Mid-Continent Oil Co., and completed in 1961 from the Devonian, Montoya and Ellenburger pays.

Location is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 23, block B-11, PSL survey.

Governors for removal of gas price controls

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The National Governors Conference has come out in favor of the removal of price controls on natural gas, saying prices would go up but consumers would benefit because of increased exploration and stricter conservation.

Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm, a Democrat, said Tuesday that deregulation would help consumers in the long run.

"Until you get consumers paying the real cost of energy you'll never get the kind of conservation you need, and you create false hopes that you can keep prices down," he said.

The conference adopted a policy which also urged completion of gas pipe lines connecting the Arctic with the U.S. and more uniform pricing of natural gas.

"It's about time this country moved toward equal energy pricing," said Gov. Thomas Salmon of Vermont.

Vermont does not buy interstate gas and pays $1.83 per 1,000 cubic feet. Other states can buy the same product for the regulated interstate price of 52 cents, he said.

"It's indefensible for a state to pay $1.83 through artificial mechanisms that no longer are in country's best interests," he told the general session of the conference.

Salmon, a Democrat who headed the committee which considered the policy, said gradual deregulation would increase prices about 20 per cent for residential users.

The gas would be deregulated as supply contracts expire. About 8 per cent of the contracts are renewed in any one year, he said.

Since the peak production year of 1973, natural gas production has dropped 12 per cent, Salmon said. Gas curtailments to industrial customers were 20 per cent of demand this year and could rise to 25 per cent next year, he said.

Gov. Hugh Carey of New York said the policy addresses itself "to the stalemate situation where the gas stays underground."

He referred to the widely held belief that gas producers are holding up production while awaiting an eventual deregulation or increase in prices.

"A system where the gas stays in the ground is unacceptable to me," he said. New York state desperately needs gas for fertilizer and other processing plants, he said.

The governors' policy statement said Congress should enact an excess profit tax once deregulation begins. Exemptions should be provided on profits that are plowed back for additional exploration.

The conference also urged the House of Representatives to pass a Senate bill that would limit court challenges to orders allowing pipeline construction and set a July 1, 1977, deadline for a presidential decision of pipeline routes.

IRS begins checking Gulf Oil gratuities

By SUSAN J. REIMER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has begun investigating allegations that its auditors accepted gratuities from Gulf Oil Corp. while reviewing that company's taxes, two sources close to the investigation say.

The IRS' inspection service unit has been questioning some of the 290 auditors here about gifts of liquor, dinners, golf outings or trips which they allegedly accepted from Gulf, one of the sources said Tuesday.

The inspection service operates out of IRS headquarters in Washington and is responsible to IRS Commissioner Donald Alexander.

The IRS began a special review of Gulf's tax reports after revelations that the giant oil company operated a secret $12.3-million slush fund for payments to domestic and foreign officials.

In the wake of those allegations, a three-member committee headed by New York attorney John J. McCloy last winter gave Gulf and the Securities and Exchange Commission a 300-page report on Gulf's legal and illegal political contributions from 1960 to 1973.

Soon afterward, Bob R. Dorsey, whom the committee said "perhaps chose to shut his eyes to what was going on," resigned as Gulf's chairman and chief executive. Jerry McAfee was named to replace him.

Sources have said the current investigation covers alleged gratuities to IRS auditors over many years. No Gulf officials are under investigation in connection with the alleged gratuities, one of the sources said.

The IRS standard of behavior and federal law forbid revenue officials from demanding or accepting gratuities. An auditor found guilty of impropriety would be subject to administrative sanctions ranging from an oral reprimand to dismissal.

But in most cases of serious misbehavior, the inspection service takes its evidence to the U.S. attorney's office for review. The federal prosecutor then decides whether to present the evidence to a grand jury for criminal indictment.

U.S. Atty. Blair Griffith said he has been asked "for legal assistance by the internal audit section of the IRS in connection with those allegations." But there were no indications a grand jury has begun considering the matter.

If convicted of criminal violations in accepting gratuities, an IRS agent could get a maximum of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Denton asserts utility rates could be lower

AUSTIN (AP) — A defeated candidate for railroad commissioner and a private utility consultant said Tuesday the legislature could do much more to reduce electricity rates than House leaders have proposed.

"The legislature could reduce electric utility bills 25 per cent for a typical customer," said Rep. Lane Denton, D-Waco.

A package recommended a week ago by House Speaker Bill Clayton and three committee chairmen offers reductions of as much as 15 per cent, mainly through tax credits and elimination of sales taxes on utility bills.

Denton said he backed proposals made by Dr. Jack Hopper, a private consultant. The main one would require the Texas Railroad Commission to set a ceiling on the price of natural gas at the wellhead.

Hopper said this could be expected to pare $11 from a $100 electric bill.

Without regulation, he said, natural gas prices could be expected to double over the next two years.

Hopper did not testify before the House committees that held days of hearings in May to seek ways in which a special legislative session could cut utility bills for consumers. He said he financed his 25-page report out of his own pocket and did not expect reimbursement. Hopper was Denton's utility consultant during Denton's race for railroad commissioner and also worked in 1974-75 with an informal committee of House members on utility problems.

He said $3 could be trimmed from a $100 bill through closer supervision by state agencies of utility company operations and construction; $8 through reduction, revision or elimination of sales, gross receipts and corporate franchise taxes on utilities; and $3 through new methods of incorporating investment capital into a company's rate base.

Production reported

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas wells produced 620.1 billion cubic feet of natural gas in April, a decrease of 6.52 per cent from April 1976, the railroad commission reported Tuesday.

Gas production for the first four months of the year totaled 2.6 trillion cubic feet, 100 million cubic feet less than was produced during the same period in 1975.

cotton

Profit taking following recent advances depressed futures prices, but renewed demand caused prices to rebound.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16-inch spot cotton advanced 200 points to 86.84 cents a pound Tuesday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were $1.30 to $5.00 a bale lower than the previous close. July 90.30,

Stock market drops lower

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market settled lower today in the aftermath of Tuesday's drop. Trading was light.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 3.68 at 988.13, after an 8.03-point decline Tuesday. Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market turned weak and sluggish after the Dow faltered again early Tuesday at the 1,000 level. Analysts noted a concentration of selling in the basic-industry stocks that had led the market's rally early in the year, and thus were logically vulnerable to profit taking.

Among actively traded basicindustry issues, Dow Chemical lost ⅜ to 45¾; Bethlehem Steel was down ½ at 43¼, and U.S. Steel gave up ½ to 52⅜.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks eased off .05 to 55.27. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .08 at 105.18.

Volume on the Big Board came to 7.25 million shares over the first two hours, down from 7.51 million in the comparable period on Tuesday.

Superscope, which raised its estimate of its second quarter earnings, picked up ¾ to 18⅞.

Trucking firm asks change in ICC rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major trucking firm asked the Interstate Commerce Commission today to revise regulations covering the transportation of such bulk commodities as gasoline and chemicals. The company said the change could save consumers up to $400 million a year.

Herman Bros. Inc., of Omaha, Neb., sought a reduction in the time required for a company that ships its own products to replace its trucking operations with those of a private trinsportation firm.

Oil and petrochemical companies sometimes ship products themselves.

Under commission regulations, the producer must usually send its goods via a trucking company that has been given ICC permission to operate over the specific route between the city where the goods are manufactured and their destination.

If a shipper wants to hire a trucking firm that lacks permission to operate over the specific route, it must wait as long as 18 months for the requested trucking firm to secure operating rights.

The Herman Bros. petition asks the commission to change its procedures so an interim 18- month operating certificate could be issued to the new trucking firm within 50 days.

The bulk commodities that would be affected include gasoline, other petroleum products, cryogenics, cement and chemicals.

The president of Herman Bros. said many private companies that produce these goods are seeking to replace their own trucking operations with those of private transportation firms.

R. L. Herman said that by liberalizing the requirements for firms seeking to enter the bulk commodity transportation market economic efficiency could be increased.

He estimated that from $200 million to $400 million could be saved by consumers each year by 1980 because private trucking firms such as his could transport the products more efficiently and at a lower cost than could the producing firms, and that this would reduce retail prices.

He argued that the change would be a reversible, first-step test in reforming the trucking regulations.

He said shippers are experiencing rapidly increasing transportation costs, difficulties with labor unions and higher capital costs and that company management would be relieved of these problems if they could replace their own transportation units with private firms.

Checkpoint ruling by court elates border patrolmen

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Border Patrolmen, who daily confront a flood of illegal Mexican aliens trying to enter the United States, were delighted by the U.S. Supreme Court decision approving highway checkpoints.

The high court ruled 7-2 Tuesday that the Border Patrol could stop traffic on interstate highways to check for Mexicans being smuggled into this country, sometimes by the truckload.

The Border Patrol had operated such a checkpoint about 40 miles north of San Diego until a federal appeals court closed it in March 1975.

"We're just elated over this," said Allen Gerhardt, chief Border Patrol agent for the San Diego area.

"The checkpoint was extremely important. It was one of our key positions in controlling the penetration of illegal aliens."

The Supreme Court said the fixed highway checkpoint does not violate 4th Amendment guarantees against illegal search and seizure.

Until March 1975, the Border Patrol stopped vehicles on Interstate 5 near the San Onofre nuclear power plant to question drivers and search certain vehicles. But the 9th U.S. Court of Appeals then ruled that the blanket search warrants being issued to authorize the checkpoint were unconstitutional.

Mexican Americans have complained bitterly about the checkpoint, saying that they are singled out and searched because of their race.

San Diego attorney John Cleary said he was disappointed with the court's decision. Cleary defended Amado Martinez-Fuetre, whose case was the vehicle for the court's ruling.

Martinez was arrested at the checkpoint in June 1974 after two illegal aliens were found in his car.

"The ruling permits great potential for abuse by Border Patrol officers, as encountered in the past," said Cleary.

Gerhardt said the checkpoint would remain closed until final approval was sent from the Border Patrol's general counsel in Washington D.C. and U.S. Atty. Terry Knoepp in San Diego.

Knoepp is already on record in support of the traffic searches.

"With the checkpoint in operation, the smugglers have to set up more drop houses, which are risky and more exposed. That leads to more illegal aliens being caught," he said.

Bankers help fight conmen

DALLAS (AP) — The bank vice president in East Dallas just knew something wasn't quite right.

It wasn't that he was bothered by withdrawals. They were a way of life. But the $3,500 just withdrawn by the elderly woman sitting across the desk from him made him uneasy.

Maybe it was the man standing across the lobby and looking nervously at the bank executive.

Could his customer be the pigeon in the old "pigeon drop" swindle?

He explained the scheme to the woman. He told her of how a stranger would tell her about finding a large sum of money and how she could have part of it if she would just put up good faith money.

The woman insisted on her money. He couldn't refuse. But he did send an employe to follow the woman and her male companion. The employe lost them in traffic.

"When we arrived at the woman's house, the swindlers had just left with all her cash," said Hugh Davis, a swindle investigator with the Dallas police department. He said the con artists have never been arrested.

It was that incident and many similar ones that caused Dallas police to ask for help from area banks in stopping swindlers who prey on elderly persons.

Banks have been asked to notify police when an aged depositor withdraws an unusually large sum of money, Davis said.

Or the bank can subtly warn the account holder about different types of swindles.

FEEDING THE FLOCK is a daily routine for Arthur "Pappy" Chalk, 87, when he arrives at Watson Island, near Miami, Fla. Chalk started the amphibious airline that bears his name and operates from the island. He has been feeding the birds in the area for the last 57 years.

Drug makers, sellers push medicines involving risks

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The business of a pharmaceutical manufacturer — selling drugs — sometimes conflicts with the mission of the medical profession. That mission is helping patients, some of whom may be more hurt than helped by a prescripition.

Moreover, the market is a peculiar one, being limited less by purchasing power than by the extent of disease. Sometimes the market is expanded when the dangers of a drug are understated.

No one can reliably quantify the knowing understatement of dangers, but Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, says that "it has to be staggering."

He cites injuries to the fetus, including heart and limb defects, and latent vaginal cancer that may occur when a doctor prescribes sex hormones for a woman in early pregnancy — usually in the unsubstantiated belief that they avert a threatened miscarriage.

In 1972, the last year in which the official FDA labeling listed early pregnancy as a condition in which estrogens and progestogens could be used, doctors wrote 588,000 prescriptions largely in hopes of preventing miscarriages. In 1975, two years after that usage had been deleted from the labeling, they wrote almost as many — 533,000.

Why? "Because," says Wolfe, "manufacturers did not include an affirmative warning in the labeling and the FDA did not require them to do so."

In 1974 physicians wrote 6.4 million prescriptions for Cleocin, the Upjohn Co. trade name for the antibiotic clindamycin.

Cleocin and a chemically similar Upjohn antibiotic, Lincocin, can cause an inflammation of tcolitis. By January 1975, the Food and Drug Administration had received reports of 26 colitis deaths "possibly or probably related" mainly to Cleocin. In the same month there were these developments:

—Medical specialists told the monopoly subcommittee of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business that 95 per cent of the persons who received Cleocin should not have, primarily because it is ineffective against the minor infections for which doctors had prescribed it.

—Subcommittee Chairman Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.) blamed the unwarranted prescribing largely on Upjohn which he said had "vigorously promoted" Cleocin for "routine general use" rather than seeking to confine it to its proper role as an emergency drug for particular life-threatening diseases.

—The FDA tightened the official labeling.

—The company acceded to an FDA request to suspend all advertising and direct promotion of Cleocin, and it agreed to undertake advertising designed to restrain physicians from overprescribing it.

But fatalities continued to increase. By June 1975, the FDA knew of 45. This figure probably was low because, the agency has said, drug deaths and injuries almost always are underreported. Sometimes they are not recognized for what they are. Some doctors, reluctant to incriminate their prescribing, blame other factors.

Although Upjohn had a major responsibility to try to curb misprescribing of Cleocin, the firm resumed heavy promotion of the drug.

A case in point was a four-page ad in the New England Journal of Medicine on June 19, 1975. The first two pages built up Cleocin with lavish color and open space. The third page made a hard sell for the effectiveness of the drug on a variety of serious infections.

Not until the final page was there a boxed warning — in small type — which began: "Clindamycin can cause severe colitis which may end fatally. Therefore, it should be reserved for serious infections where less toxic antimicrobial agents are inappropriate ..."

Another threat to the consumer is the suppression or underestimation of the frequency of adverse reactions. That is what happened in the case of Chloromycetin, an early "wonder" antibiotic effective in a broad spectrum of infections. Also known as chloramphenicol, it seemed to have the advantage of causing fewer minor side effects, such as a rash, than rival products.

In 1950, a year after Parke-Davis, a Detroit firm, began to sell Chloromycetin, it got the first reports on users stricken by aplastic anemia, a usually fatal disease that destroys the ability of the bone marrow to produce blood components.

At least 16 months passed before Parke-Davis notified the FDA. meanwhile, Chloromycetin sales increased from $9 million in 1949 to $28 million in 1950 to $52 million in 1951. In 1952, the year in which the association of the drug with aplastic anemia started to become widely known, sales fell $5 million from the previous year's.

In June 1952, the FDA halted shipments of the antibiotic pending the outcome of a study by an expert committee selected by the National Research Council (NRC), the operating arm of the National Academy of Sciences.

By August, the committee had "definitely" associated Chloromycetin with serious blood disorders in 177 persons, half of whom died. Many of the victims were children.

One was James Watkins, 10, of La Canada, Calif. Three months before he died, he had received Chloromycetin for an infection of the urinary tract. A Parke-Davis detailman — a salesman who calls on doctors — had assured the prescribing physician that the antibiotic was "perfectly safe."

The physician was the boy's father. "I might have done better had I taken a gun and shot him," Dr. Albe M. Watkins said in a letter to Parke-Davis. "At least he wouldn't have suffered."

The NRC committee advised the FDA to tighten the official labeling to warn physicians not to prescribe Chloromycetin "indiscriminately or for minor infections." The agency followed the advice, reasoning that the drug ought to remain available to doctor for "careful use."

But in letter to company detailmen, Parke-Davis president Harry J. Loynd claimed that the NRC and the FDA had "officially cleared Chloromycetin ... with no restrictions on the number or range of diseases for which (it) may be administered."

The NRC-FDA review "resulted in unqualified sanction for all conditions in which (Chloromycetin) previously had been used," the company told the detailmen in a later letter.

In court cases brought by Chloromycetin victims or their survivors, the evidence established that Parke-Davis detailmen, programmed by such methods, easily overcame any apprehensions that physicians may have had about uninhibited prescribing of the drug.

As for the government warnings, Parke-Davis "nullified (them) by promotion," particularly promotion done through detailmen, the California Supreme Court said in 1973, when it upheld a $400,000 award to the husband and three children of a woman killed by Chloromycetin, prescribed — wrongly — for pneumonia.

In 1952, at the time of the NRC-FDA warning, Parke-Davis assessed the risk of fatal aplastic anemia at 1 in 400,000. This assessment did not deter over-prescribing, with the result that over the next eight years the estimated number of Americans who got Chloromycetin was 40 million.

In 1960, however, the company acknowledged to the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee a risk almost twice as high as that cited in 1952: 1 in 225,000.

Later, a California State Department of Public Health study showed "positive and significant correlations" between sales of Chloromycetin and deaths from aplastic anemia.

In 1962, the department reported that the death rate in users of the drug was — "conservatively" — 1 in 60,000. Not satisfied, the department made further studies.

In 1967, the department concluded that, depending upon the size of the dose, the death rate was 1 in 24,200 to 1 in 40,500.

These rates were 10 to 16 times higher than the firm had figured in 1952. All of its computations were based on reports made to it by physicians. Such reports usually underestimate hazards partly because physicians are not required to make the reports.

After a quarter-century of adverse publicity, much of it stemming from Nelson and hearings by his Senate subcommittee, prescribing of Chloromycetin last year dropped to a record low. Even so, an estimated 400,000 persons got it in the popular capsule form. In the judgment of medical experts, 360,000 to 390,000 of them should have gotten a safer drug or none at all. A computation based on the California risk estiamtes, which for years have been in the official FDA labeling, suggests that at least eight of those persons died needlessly.

Parke-Davis is one of about 300 pharmaceutical houses that together deploy some 24,000 detailmen — a major component of the estimated minimum of $1 billion a year spent to promote prescription drugs. While the FDA can monitor printed drug ads with relative ease, it has no way to monitor reliably what the 24,000 detailmen are saying in hundreds of thousands of conversations a year with doctors, nurses, pharmacists and others involved in prescribing and dispensing drugs.

Some hospitals and medical schools have taken steps to restrict the access of detailmen to medical staff and students.

A general restraint on detailmen's conduct was imposed in a 1969 decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit — a decision cited by the Californria Supreme Court four years later when it upheld the $400,000 award to the Chloromycetin victim.

The Eighth Circuit decision was that in promoting drugs to doctors, detailmen must tell them the bad news as well as the good.

The decision upheld an $180,000 award by a lower court to Irene M. Yarrow of Sioux Falls, S.D. After several years' use of the drug Aralen for rheumatoid arthritis, she became almost totally blind — unable to read, sew, cook, drive a car, watch television or recognize people, including family members.

Yarrow was one of an estimated 300 persons blinded by Aralen. Another was Margaret B. Stumpenhorst, an Arlington, Va., woman who settled a suit against the manufacturer, Sterling Drug, Inc., for $175,000. The firm stopped selling the drug in 1970.

In the Yarrow case, the lower court had found that a Sterling detailman had introduced her doctor to Aralen in late 1957 or 1958, had called on him thereafter at intervals of four to six weeks, but "did not bring the side effects of Aralen to his attention" even though the firm "knew or had reason to know some persons would be injured."

Powell said today's decision does not disturb a rule that illegally seized evidence may not be used in trials.

The decision, reinstating the convictions of two men accused of murder in California and Nebraska, centers on a 1961 ruling under the late Chief Justice Earl Warren.

It requires state courts to exclude any evidence obtained in violation of the constitutional ban against unreasonable searches and seizures. The decision is called the exclusionary rule. Its object was to deter illegal police procedures.

In 1969, the court allowed state prisoners to appeal their convictions to federal courts through habeas corpus proceedings if they think evidence against them was seized unlawfully.

High court ruling curtails prisoners' rights to appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Tuesday sharply curtailed the right of prisoners to challenge their convictions on grounds that evidence against them was seized illegally.

In a 6-3 decision, the court said federal courts may not free state prisoners on such grounds unless the prisoners can show they were not given "full and fair opportunity" to present their claims in state courts.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. spoke for the court. Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and Byron R. White dissented.

The decision came on the last day of the court's present term. This is only the second time this century the court has extended its term into July. The first was in 1974 when the justices wrestled with the Watergate tapes case. The court now goes into recess until Oct. 4.

Carter man eyes position

AUSTIN (AP) — Angelina County Atty. John Henry Tatum, 40, East Texas coordinator for Jimmy Carter, announced Tuesday he would be a candidate for state Democratic chairman at the September convention.

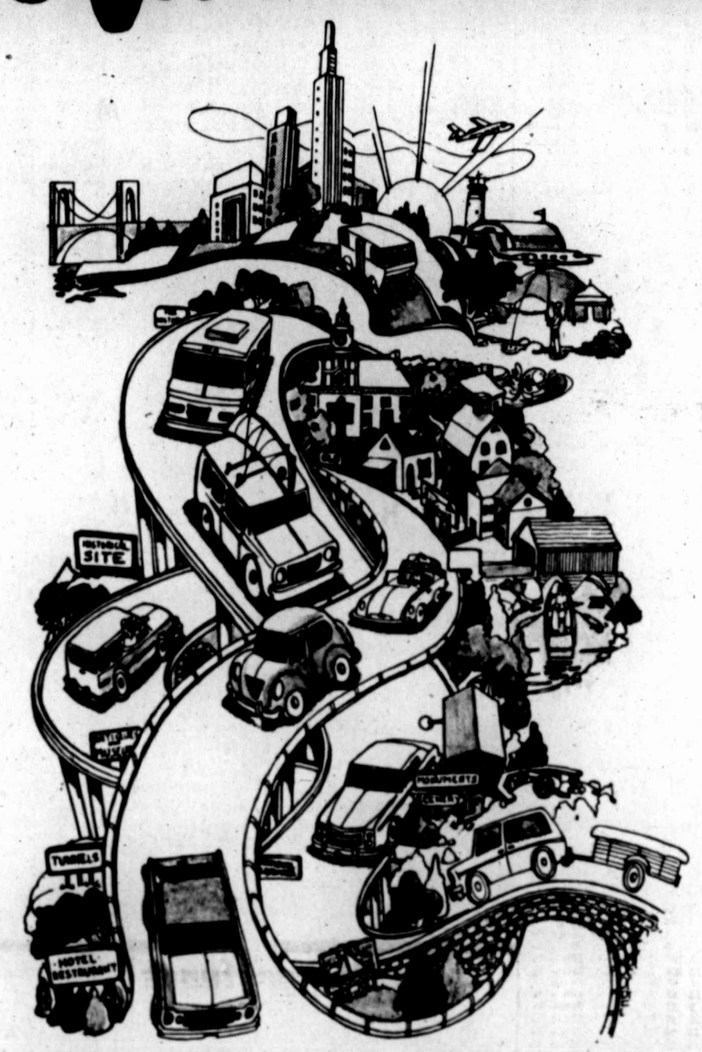

Tatum is opposing the present chairman, Calvin Guest of Bryan, who is a state cochairman of the November Carter campaign.

"It is essential that the Democratic party of Texas function in an organized, open manner unlike it has in the recent past," Tatum told a news conference.

"For too long, the party has been the plaything of the chairman and his big shot cronies," Tatum said. "We can no longer afford that luxury."

Tatum said in answering questions that he did not think the chairmanship race would hurt the Carter campaign nor did he think it would turn into a liberal-conservative battle.

Survey of records shows Hays big spender on foreign junkets

By WALTER PINCUS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a five-day period last September, Rep. Wayne L. Hays (D-Ohio) drew $4,000 worth of Danish kroners from the American Embassy in Copenhagen to cover unlisted "delegation expenses" at a North Atlentic Assembly meeting, according to State Department records.

The 10-man U.S. delegation from the House of Representatives and its nine staffers had each already drawn $600 apiece to cover individual expenses, in Copenhagen and another $25,000 had been appropriated earlier by Congress to pay the group's general expenses.

According to Hays' press aide, Carol Clawson, the $4,000 was for dinners and a reception. Hays is not required to document to the public or even to government auditors what was done with the money, she said.

Clawson cited a law passed 16 years ago which says that the signature of Hays, as chairman of the U.S. North Atlantic Assembly delegation, on the embassy receipt for the kroners "shall hereafter be final and conclusive upon the accounting officers in the auditing of accounts."

That law also applies to the heads of other U.S. interparliamentary delegations. But none other than Hays drew large sums of unvouchered foreign currency in the January 1975-May 1976 State Department records reviewed last week by The Washington Post.

The records reviewed showed Hays in 1975 withdrew another total of $2,000 in foreign currencies from U.S. Embassies in London, Brussels and Paris for unspecified "representation" expenses.

Hays' spending of foreign currency abroad is under investigation by the FBI, according to Justice Department sources.

One phase of that inquiry, an official said recently, focuses on funds Hays allegedly requested and received from one U.S. Embassy where local currency owned by the U.S. is in excess of governmental needs.

These funds were generated by U.S. aid programs and loans which, under executive agreements are repaid to the U.S. in local currencies. Those currencies can be spent only in the country where they were generated.

Under law, a congressional traveler authorized to use foreign currency can obtain only $75 a day for expenses except in the handful of countries where the currency is termed "in excess." In those countries, a legislator may draw unlimited amounts. Excess countries now include Egypt, Poland, Romania, Burma, India and Yugoslavia.

The Washington Post review of 1975-1976 congressional travel vouchers maintained by the State Department found that Hays supervised and participated in a variety of costly trips abroad funded in various ways.

A part of Hays' foreign travel is paid for from the annual $25,000 appropriated by Congress for the House North Atlantic Assembly delegation. The assembly is a formal but unofficial organization of members of various West European parliaments. Hays has controlled the U.S. House delegation funds for more than 16 years.

Under the law, Hays is required to report annually on Assembly expenditures of both foreign currency and appropriated funds.

The reports Hays filed, however, do not detail expenditures of the $25,000. In 1975, for example, the Hays report identifies over $25,000 in foreign currency received by specific delegation members and staffers and concludes with a $30,169.78 item marked only "delegation expenses — including office rental, telephone, official representation and transportation."

Hays' press aide Clawson said the $25,000 was included in that lump sum figure.

She also said that Hays interpreted that the law did not require him to break down in a public report how the lump sum was spent.

The law, 22 U.S.C. section 276c-1, reads in part that the chairman of the interparliamentary group shall file an "itemized report showing all such expenditures made by or on behalf of each member or employe of the group or delegation together with the purposes of the expenditure ..."

Asked for an example of an expenditure from the appropriated $25,000 fund, Clawson cited the costs of an April 1975, overseas trip by Hays aide Paula Peake — who now is also his sister-in-law.

Peake, according to Clawson, went to Copenhagen in April to make advance arrangements for the September North Atlantic Assembly, and her expenses were paid for out of the $25,000 fund.

However a check of the State Department records showed that Peake drew foreign currency per diems from U.S. embassies in London and Copenhagen on that trip.

Clawson, informed of the per diem records, said the $25,000 fund had been used to pay for Peake's air travel on the April trip.

A second check of the State Department records, however, showed that $1,325 in foreign currency was used to pay for Peake's first class air fare from New York to London and Copenhagen and back.

State Department records show seven trips abroad by Hays in 1975 including three delegation junkets which he led.

In February 1975, Hays organized an eight-man delegation on a six-day trip to England for a conference with British members of Parliament. The members flew on a plane supplied by the Air Force and five congressmen brought their wives ... One, Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.) brought a staff member.

Each of the participants drew six days' per diem, $450 worth of British pounds — although their hosts paid for lodgings at a English country inn during the two conference days.

State Department records show another $825 worth of pounds was spent on rented chauffered cars for four of the members with Rep. James Scheuer (D-N.Y.), accounting for almost half the total amount.

Hays, in addition to his per diem, took another $840 worth of pounds as unaccounted "representation" money, according to the State Department records.

Another $1,500 in pounds was used to pay for hotel rooms in London described as control rooms for the delegation. Such rooms normally housed the embassy personnel providing telephone and transportation services for the congressmen. The pay voucher did not specify who occupied these specific rooms.

Hays made additional trips to London in March and April 1975, according to the State Department records.

In May 1975, Hays led another eight-man delegation, most with wives, to Europe — this time to an interparliamentary session in France. Again the group traveled in a military plane.

Before arriving in Paris, however, there was a one-day stopover in Brussels. The records show $1,152 worth of Belgian francs were spent on per diems and hired cars and Hays took an extra $100 for "representation expenses."

In Paris, each of the members received $525 apiece in French francs, according to the records. Hays, the records show, took an additional $500 in francs for himself.

According to one congressional participant, only 1 1-2 days out of the first four in Paris were spent in conferences with French legislators. The remainder, except for a meeting with U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Rush, was free time.

Russians note Bicentennial

By PETER OSNOS
The Washington Post

MOSCOW — Soviet observance of the United States Bicentennial culminated Tuesday night in a gala meeting at a downtown Moscow theater where Thomas Jefferson was invoked as a friend of Russia and the course of modern-day detente was endorsed — with reservations.

Perhaps the most notable feature of the occasion was that in appearance and pace it closely resembled Soviet gatherings usually reserved for marking the national days of other Communist countries. Nothing like it for the United States could be recalled.

A solemn presidium of speakers faced a polite audience of invited Russians in a hall bedecked with flags of the United States and Soviet Union as well as banners featuring the words of Lenin and Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

On the whole, Soviet recognition of the American Bicentennial in the past few days has been restrained, a reflection presumably of the coolness of superpower ties in recent months. Sunday's Pravda carried a lengthy article on the subject that was far more critical than congratulatory. It said that the United States had betrayed the American communists.

Nevertheless, Moscow has shown that it regards the Bicentennial as an event out of the ordinary.

Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko showed up for the embassy's July 4 reception, the first time in recent years that a Politburo member had attended a Western country's national day. Also among the guests were several celebrated Soviet dissidents, a juxtaposition that, one Russian remarked, "only you Americans would dare."

College will launch four short courses

Four community service courses will be offered next week at Midland College.

Trustees set closed session

Midland school trustees will meet in executive session at 1:30 p.m. Thursday to consult with the schools' attorney on the district's desegregation case.

The purpose of the meeting is to "continue to map some strategy on how to respond to the court order," schools superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey said.

OU to contact geology alumni

NORMAN, Okla. — Midland geology alumni of Oklahoma University will be contacted by the School of Geology and Geophysics alumni advisory council for contributions to the Victor E. Monnett Chair in Energy Resources.

Monnett was director of the university's geology program from 1924 to 1955.

The drive has a goal of $750,000, the amount necessary to endow the professorial chair. Volunteers will contact alumni in other Texas and Oklahoma cities during the drive.

AUSTIN — More than $500,000 in cash and another $119,000 in firm commitments have been received for the endowment of the Ch air of Free Enterprise at the College of Engineering at The University of Texas at Austin.

Several Midlanders were among the contributors.

The endowed professorial chair, initiated by the Engineering Foundation Advisory Council, was established to provide academic recognition of the importance of freedom in business and economic relationships. Thus far, $560,468.64 has been received and another $119,166 committed to the fund.

The University of Texas System board of regents approved the chair, to be filled by a professor qualified academically for one of the departments of engineering, in May.

Contributors from Midland include M. D. Abel, Elizabeth M. Brown, H. L. Brown Jr., Maurice R. Bullock, Cal-Mon Oil Co., Reese Cleveland, Wright E. Cowden, W. R. Davis, Diamond M Drilling, Joe B. McShane, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, W. F. Roden, Tom Sealy and Dean H. Stoltz.

Twelve troops were competing for awards. The Midland troop's honors were a third place in campsite inspection, an "Honor Troop Award," and the first place in hiking and camping.

Troop 233 scouts were inducted as charter members of the "Mountain Man Camp."

Midland scouts who attended the camp were brothers Richard, Robert and Kenneth Barton; brothers Billy and Jim Dawson; and Craig Jordan, Steve Lamkin, Roger Larsen, Will Porter, Paul Raymond, Paul Rusnek, Jeff Salmon, John Shrode and Lance Solomon.

Weyenberg dies

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Frank Weyenberg, 94, who founded the Weyenberg Shoe Manufacturing Co. in 1906, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack.

Hot, dry weather boosts CRMWD consumption

BIG SPRING — Continued hot, dry weather has contributed to a 10 per cent increase in municipal water consumption during June and slightly more than that for the first half of the year, the Colorado River Municipal Water District reported.

Water used in oil field repressuring, however, was up slightly in June but down slightly for the first half of the year.

Cities used 1,489,551,600 gallons of water during June, up 136 million gallons or 10.06 per cent, for the month. Deliveries to cities during the first half of 1976 totaled 6,265,617,000 gallons, up 10.76 per cent.

The CRMWD also reported that total district deliveries during June were 2,078,379,689 gallons, 193 million gallons more than a year ago, or up 9.07 per cent. For the first six months of the year, the total delivered was 9,468,730,132 gallons, up 540 million gallons, or 6.05 per cent.

Oilfield deliveries amounted to 588,828,029 gallons last month, down 36 million gallons, or 6.64 per cent.

For the first half of the year, the oilfield total was 3,203,112,802 gallons, down 68 million gallons, or 2.09 per cent.

The June loss was due mainly to 11 million gallon declines by Sun and SACROC, the CRMWD said. About 110 million gallons of the oilfield deliveries were in brackish water.

Doland's 4-0, four-hitter gives Midland Cubs split

By TED BATTLES

After San Antonio pushed over a run in the eighth inning to win the opener, 3-2, Wayne Doland hurled a four-hit shutout to give the Midland Cubs a 7-0 win and a split in the Texas League doubleheader at Cubs Stadium Tuesday night.

Timely hitting by Scott Thompson and Mike Gordon plus some sensational fielding support from left fielder Jose Ortiz and shortstop Mike Sember made Doland's ninth win in 13 decisions look easy.

The win gave Midland a 4-2 edge over the Brewers in the series as they prepared to depart for a 10-game, two-week road trip to Jackson and Little Rock in the East Division.

GORDON SINGLED home two runs in the second and Thompson drove in two runs in the four-run third with a single and singled to left to plate another run in the fifth.

Doland, who won his first six and then lost four in a row, now has won three in a row.

"No, it wasn't my best game of the season," the righthander from Hamburg, N.J., said later. "I had better stuff in a game at Amarillo earlier in the season. Tonight I threw mostly fastballs. I'd like to add a curve to my repertoire, but with a 7-run lead, I wasn't about to start experimenting tonight."

Perhaps, just as encouraging as the victory was the fact that Wayne pitched without any tightness in his right elbow, which forced him out of a game last Thursday.

Doland gave up a second inning single to Wayne Pinkerton and then held the Brewers hitless until Keith Chauncey's two out single in the sixth. Both other hits came in the seventh.

THE CLOSEST San Antonio came to scoring was in the second when Jim Thomas walked and reached second when Jerry Reedy also walked. Pinkerton singled to left, but Ortiz made a perfect throw to nail Thomas at the plate.

In the fourth, Ortiz took Melvin Barrow's long blast against the wall in left after a long run. Sember's gem came in the sixth, with Chauncey, who had singled on first. Don Thomas grounded into the hole and Sember gloved it one handed, whirled and threw off balance to Bill Huisman at second for the force play.

Jay Temple was pinned with his second loss in six decisions in relief of starter Steve Hamrick in the first game when the Brewers nudged home an eighth inning run. Dan Duran walked to lead off the inning and Brian Nakamoto singled up the middle while Bobby Thompson advanced the runners with a sacrifice. Reedy grounded to Mike Umfleet at third. Umfleet checked the runner and finally went to first.

HOWEVER, WHEN first baseman Ed Putman saw Duran break for the plate, he came off the bag too quickly and then couldn't get the ball out of his glove as the run scored.

Bobby Cuellar, former University of Texas pitcher, picked up the win in relief.

San Antonio broke a scoreless tie in the fifth as one of Hamrick's seven walks came back to haunt him. With two out and Reedy on second, Chauncey's bouncer over the box trickled off Keith Drumright's glove

BATTLE SCENE

An eye-opener

BY TED BATTLES

Over the past year, the Bicentennial Bombardment has been so intensive, like so many commercialized events, we were aware of it, but for the impression it made, it had been shrugged off and shut out.

It took a phone call from South Africa early Sunday morning to forcefully bring home the full impact of Independence Day in America.

The call was from the Mrs. uncle, David Ladin, who happily offered Bicentennial congratulations and shared a few moments of the anniversary.

We should have expected the call. We can't think of anyone with more reason to celebrate this nation's 200th anniversary, but it served to make us ashamed of our blase acceptance of it and all it means.

MAYBE SOME, by accident of birth and through no individual accomplishmemt, may be able to trace their roots back to the founding of a Dedham, Mass., the revolution that followed later and Puritan sounding names like Josiah, Hezekiah, Mahitable and Caleb, but the numbers are so few that they can't really be called typical.

The Ladins are the real America, I suppose, because there were so many more of them.

A tailor, Poppa Ladin brought his family to New York from the old country before the turn of the century.

He soon died, leaving a young widow, speaking a strange language with three small children to raise in an unfamiliar land.

She must have been a good mother, albeit strict, like her granddaughter, if complaints around the house are any criteria.

WE CAN still remember her well into her 80s, calling downstairs at night and ordering oldest son Rueben to stop talking so loud (TV) and go to bed. It made no difference that Rueben was retired and in his 60s.

Youngest son David was self-educated. He learned about Gettysburg by hiking there and spending days studying the battle grounds first hand.

Swedish wasn't a language learned at school. It was spoken at home and perhaps ridiculed by the natives.

Yet, it opened doors for him when he went to work for the company that was making those new-fangled horseless carriages.

When the company began to grow and flex its muscles, it needed a salesman to expand into the Scandanavian countries. David spoke Swedish. He got the job.

After serving in France in World War I, he eventually participated in plant expansion into Europe and Germany, specifically. In the 1930s, he was arrested by the Nazis and jailed briefly.

BEFORE THE U.S. became involved in WW II, General Motors sent him to the Burma Road to instruct the Chinese on the proper use of the heavy trucking equipment, which was being misused.

Not long after he arrived, the Japanese overran the country. Ladin's flight from Rangoon by train, boat and foot to safety in Indian was chronicles in Time magazine.

After the war there was a stint in the Orient and then more new territory when GM expanded into South Africa and named Ladin general manager of the new plant.

Although he married a South African citizen and remained there after retirement in deference to her family ties, he made lengthy periodic trips to the U.S. to retain the citizenship he so cherished. And during those visits, he made it a point to see more of the nation than most Americans see in a lifetime.

At 85, those pilgrimmages are no longer possible, but that was no excuse for letting No. 200 slip by as just another holiday, like some people we know were ready to do.

Arnold Palmer comes out of bunker on second hole of Royal Birkdale golf course in Southport, England, in today's opening round of the British Open.

3 share British golf lead

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Christy O'Connor Jr. of Ireland, Norio Suzuki, a Japanese playing outside his native country for the first time, and 19-year-old Spaniard Severiano Ballesteros shot three-under par 69s today for the early first-round lead in the British Open Golf Championship.

With his co-leaders already in the clubhouse, Ballesteros gained a tie for the top spot with a birdie on the 13th hole. He also birdied Nos. 3, 7 and 12 and bogeyed No. 8.

O'Connor, a British Ryder Cup player, was the first finisher on the 7,001-yard, par-72 course which was playing tough for the majority of early finishers. The Irishman made the turn in two-under-par 32 but then fell victim to a triple-bogey eight on No. 13.

Suzuki, 24, went out in oneover 35, then charged home with five birdies, three of them in a row. On the back nine he opened with a par four on the 10th, then shot two birdies—a three on No. 11 and a two on 12. His three straight birdies were a four on 15, three on 16 and a four on 17.

The Japanese would have taken the lead but he missed the 18th green and took a bogey six.

Brian Barnes, another British Ryder Cupper, was in at 70.

U.S. pro Tom Kite was two under par after nine with a 32. He fired three birdies on the first five holes, but took a bogey five on the ninth.

Jack Nicklaus, a two-time British Open winner, was one of those having trouble with the course, made tougher by a tricky breeze. He bogeyed the first two par four holes, made a birdie on the par three fourth and was one over after five holes.

Gary Player, the 1974 Open champion, got home in even par 72 and said, "I played better than I scored."

But Arnold Palmer, who last won the Open in 1962, struggled in with a 75. "All the mistakes I made were costly ones," said Palmer, who opened his round with a bogey five.

Doug Sanders, who finished second after losing a playoff to Nicklaus in the 1970 British Open, shot a 77.

A disgusted Hale Irwin finished at 74 in a round which he described as "terribly pitiful, horrendous. I'm a little bit discouraged. It wasn't so much shot execution—just stupidity."

Irwin, winner of this year's Los Angeles Open, had a bad start with a couple of bogeys on the par four second and sixth holes. Then, on the eighth, he topped a three-wood but salvaged a par by sinking a 10 footer for a four.

African urges second look at New Zealand

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Kenya's leading sports administrator said today that African countries should have another and more searching look at their planned boycott of New Zealand athletes at the Montreal Olympics.

Isaac Lugonzo, chairman of the Kenya National Sports Council, said the New Zealand issue — several African countries object to New Zealand's participation in the Games because of her sporting links with South Africa — was different in character from that of Rhodesia and South Africa.

Lugonzo said, "It isn't right to hold that because the New Zealand Rugby Union sent a team to South Africa that its Olympic committee necessarily approved of it or also has links with South Africa.

Yanks'...er...A's Blue blanks Birds on 6 hits

By The Associated Press

Vida Blue looked like a million-dollar pitcher Tuesday night but the Oakland A's still have Blue and the New York Yankees still have their $1.5 million.

Making his second start after three weeks of Charlie Finley enforced idleness following his voided controversial sale from the A's to the Yankees, Blue hurled the A's to a six-hit 2-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. It was his first victory since June 6 and his 23rd career shutout.

"It was my best game of the season," said Blue, who evened his record at 7-7.

Blue had to be good in outdueling Baltimore ace Jim Palmer, who also allowed six hits. The A's scored in the fourth inning on Don Baylor's single, a stolen base and a single by Gene Tenace. They got their other run in the eighth on a walk, a double by Baylor, an intentional walk to Joe Rudi and a bases-loaded walk to Tenace.

Royals 3-4, Yankees 1-7

Roy White delivered a tiebreaking two-run single and Chris Chambliss added a decisive three-run homer as the Yankees erupted for five runs in the eighth inning of the nightcap. In the opener, Kansas City's Doug Bird and Steve Mingori combined to pitch a three-hitter and the Royals came from behind on run-scoring singles by John Mayberry and Hal McRae in the sixth inning.

Rangers 3, Tigers 2

Joe Lahoud, a .168 hitter, doubled home Toby Harrah with the winning run in the eighth inning while Steve Barr, whose only other victory came way back on April 13 and who had a 6.27 earned run average, scattered six hits.

"The underdogs did it tonight," said Manager Frank Lucchesi. "Of all the games we've had this year, I've never rooted harder for a player than I did for Barr. He had that one great game against Oakland, and in the back of your mind you remember that and you think he'll do it again."

Red Sox 4, White Sox 0

Ferguson Jenkins pitched a four-hit masterpiece for his 198th career triumph and 39th shutout while Rick Burleson delivered a two-run single. Chicago Manager Paul Richards ignored the desginated hitter option and Brett became the first pitcher to bat regularly in a meaningful game since the American League adopted the DH rule four years ago. Brett, an excellent hitting pitcher, went 0-for-3, although he lined to short, grounded sharply to first and lined to first.

Indians 7, Angels 3

Playing Manager Frank Robinson slugged his third home run and added a run-scoring single to help his Indians break a four-game losing streak. The 40-year-old Robinson, in one of his infrequent starts, hit his 586th career homer in the first inning and singled home a run in the second.

Ron Pruitt tripled and singled twice while Larvell Blanks collected three singles to pace Cleveland's 13hit attack.

Brewers 6, Twins 2

Robin Yount touched off a three-run third inning with a single and belted a two-run homer in the sixth, enabling Jim Slaton to post his ninth victory. Yount's second home run of the season put the Brewers on top 5-2.

behind second and into the outfield as the run scored.

The Brewers scored again in the sixth as Duran singled and Nakamoto and Jim Thomas walked to load the bases with one out. Temple came in and when Reedy missed a squeeze bunt, Duran was an easy out. However, the Brewer second baseman then singled to center to score Nakamoto.

MIDLAND TIED it in the home sixth after leaving the bases loaded in the fifth on three walks by starter Rick Shubert. When Shubert walked Sember and Earle Chew to open the sixth, Glen Bright came in from the bullpen. Umfleet sacrificed the runners to second and third, Gordon singled for one run and Thompson's fly to center brought in the other.

Bypassed Palmer blasts AL All-Star hill picks

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, passed over for this year's American League All-Star pitching staff, says Boston Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson made "some ridiculous appointments" to the team.

"It's a little upsetting that this is the way the All-Star pitchers are chosen. I think this may be the reason the National League wins every year," said the two-time Cy Young Award winner.

Palmer went on to call Johnson "an idiot" for selecting three relief pitchers among the nine-man bullpen.

Johnson, when asked about Palmer's statement Tuesday night, said, "Who cares. I certainly don't."

Johnson said American League President Lee MacPhail, and the managers who will work the All-Star game— Cleveland Manager Frank Robinson and Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch, discussed the selections prior to the announcement.

Palmer, 10-7, with an earned run average of 3.10 this season, has an identical won-lost record as Yankee pitcher Catfish Hunter, who was selected for the All-Star team. Both pitchers have five 20-game seasons to their credit.

Joining Hunter on the American League pitching staff will be Detroit's rookie sensation Mark Fidrych, Frank Tanana of California, Bill Travers of Milwaukee, Dave LaRoche of Cleveland, Luis Tiant of Boston, Rollie Fingers of Oakland, Rich Gossage of the Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees' Sparky Lyle.

"The major error he (Johnson) made was naming Hunter," Palmer said.

"If he names Hunter, why didn't he name Palmer? I don't really think I deserve to go because there are a lot of other guys who are having better years," Palmer said.

"I think he named Hunter from his past records. If he checks lifetimes and who won Cy Young Awards, he'll find I've won more and had a better year last year. I suppose if he deserves to go, then so do I," he said.

Hunter agreed that he didn't deserve the All-Star assignment.

"I was picked for the team so I'll be there," Hunter said. "I don't know why I was picked, I don't have that good a record."

Both Palmer and Hunter won 23 games last year. But Palmer, who won the Cy Young Award, had only 11 loses while Hunter had 14.

Midland Colts sweep to Stockton crown

Midland's Colts swept through the Fort Stockton July 4 Baseball Tournament like a prairie fire, defeating the Odessa Dorrados, 19-2, in the championship game behind the one-hit, 13 strikeout pitching of Randy Blanscett.

Don Spain sparked the Colts to their 13th win in 14 games this season, hitting a three-run homer in the first while going 4-for-4. Louis Perez also homered in the second, his third roundtripper of the tournament and Jesse Benavidez connected in the sixth.

Perez, who went 8-for-16 and hit three homers and a double, was named tournament Most Valuable Player.

ROBERT SHAEFFER pulled an iron man feat Sunday, pitching both ends of a doubleheader to beat the Big Spring Cardinals, 4-3, with a six-hitter and the Fort Stockton Sonics, 10-0, with a two hitter.

In the win over Big Spring, Benavides hit a homer behind a Perez single in the fifth after Shaeffer had helped his own cause with a two run single in the fourth.

Against the Sonics, Perez hit a homer in the first, Benavides hit a two-run homer in the third and Shaeffer's homer highlighted a five run fifth.

In the tournament opener, the Colts beat McCamey, 9-3, as Perez, Blanscett and Danny Rey connected for round trippers.

The Colts play the old Midland Colts at 3 p.m. Sunday in Cubs Stadium. Some of the "oldtimers" in action will be Armando Gutierez, Lee Velarde, Manuel Munoz and Daniel Sanchez.

AL honors A's Bando

NEW YORK (AP) — Sal Bando of the Oakland A's belted five home runs last week to become the American League leader with 18, a feat which won him the AL Player of the Week award, league President Lee MacPhail announced Tuesday.

Yanks bring up Klutts

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees purchased shortstop Mickey Klutts from their Syracuse farm club in the International League Tuesday and said he would be in the starting line-up against Kansas City Wednesday night.

After hitting only .217 at West Haven in the Eastern League a year ago, the 21-year-old Klutts batted .307 in 70 games at Syracuse this season with 15 home runs and 46 runs batted in.

To make room for Klutts on the roster, the Yankees optioned pitcher Ron Guidry to Syracuse. Guidry was called up in May but appeared in only one game, allowing four runs in one-third of an inning for an earned run average of 108.00.

Gold medal winner dies from gunshot

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Olympic gold medalist swimmer Kevin O'Halloran who died on his farm at Kojonup, near Perth Tuesday is thought to have been killed when his rifle discharged while he was climbing a fence.

Police said Wednesday that O'Halloran was hit in the head by a bullet from his .22 rifle and died instantly. They believe his loaded and cocked rifle discharged while he was getting over or through a fence on his farm. Forensic and pathological tests all indicated an accidental shooting.

O'Hallorah won a gold medal at the Melbourne Olympics in 1956 as a member of Australia's 800-meter relay team.

No action taken on indictment

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — No indictments were issued Tuesday by a Hennepin County grand jury investigating a bottle-throwing incident last December that injured a National Football League official during the Minnesota-Dallas playoff game.

County Atty. Gary Flakne had sought indictment of a 21year-old Golden Valley man on a charge of aggravated assault.

The NFL official, Armen Terzian, required several stitches to close a cut on his head after he was hit by a whisky bottle. The incident occurred during the final minutes of the Vikings' Dec. 28 playoff loss to the Cowboys at Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington.

The suspect still could be charged with violating a Bloomington ordinance such as simple assault or disorderly conduct. City Atty. Gary Gandrud said he will decided today whether to charge the suspect under Bloomington ordinances.

Flakne would not say why the grand jury declined to indict the suspect, but prosecutors in his office have said it would be difficult to prove in court that the suspect intended to hit the official when he threw the bottle.

Messersmith named top Nl pitcher

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Hard-throwing pitcher Andy Messersmith of the Atlanta Braves, who didn't get his first victory this year until May 17, was named National League pitcher of the month for June.

Pittsburgh Pirates slugger Al Oliver, who hit .406 in June with seven home runs and 25 runs batted in, was named player of the month. Oliver's June hot streak boosted his season batting average to a league leading .370.

Messersmith overcame his worst start ever in the major leagues to pitch six complete games for five victories, two shutouts and an earned run average of 1.50. He struck out 36 batters in 54 innings.

The selections were announced today.

Maltbie seeking repeat

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) The 1975 Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament moved Roger Maltbie from obscurity to solvency and now he's back for another crack at the $100,000 purse.

When the 25-year-old Maltbie made his initial appearance on the Oakwood Country Club course last year, his tour earnings for the season were less than $15,000.

But he made a late scramble and pocketed $15,000 for first place from host Ed McMahon.

A week later, he came from seven shots off the pace on the final day to take the Pleasant Valley Classic at Sutton, Mass., worth another $40,000. That helped make him the Professional Golfers Association's rookie of the year.

Topping it off, last May he defeated Hale Irwin in a playoff to claim the Jack Nicklaus Memorial tournament.

Maltbie's total take in the last in the last 12 months is nearly $200,000.

Russians, Cubans pose threat to U.S. boxers

BURLINGHON, Vt. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Boxing team shapes up as the nation's strongest since 1960. But it's medal harvest depends greatly on the Cubans, Russians and— as always—the draw.

"Talent-wise we have a very good chance of winning four golds and maybe more," said head coach Pat Nappi of Syracuse, N.Y., who has coached military service teams for 30 years.

"So much depends on the draw.

"I would say Cuba is the toughest team," added Nappi, and U.S. team manager Rollie Schwartz of Cincinnati agreed.

THE CUBANS are led by Theofilo Stevenson, the 1972 Olympic, world and 1975 Pan-Am champion and experience-wise could present a team with members who were on the 1967 Pan American team.

But Stevenson, who has said he wants to win three Olympic gold, doesn't have a lock on the heavyweight division. The Russians are strong here and one observer says of the U.S. chances, "If we get a break in the draw, we can win a medal."

John Tate, a 21-year-old truck driver from Knoxville, Tenn., finds himelf the U.S. heavyweight just 18 months after he took up boxing. Perhaps he doesn't have the potential that George Foreman had but he has, with 58 fights, has much more ring experience than Foreman, a former pro world heavyweight champion, had when he won the gold in 1968 at Mexico City.

But the best chances for U.S. gold appear to be in five weight classes—Davey Armstrong of Puyallup, Wash., at 125; Howard Davis, Glen Cove, N.Y., 132; Sugar Ray Leonard of Palmer Park, Md., 139; Clint Jackson of Evergreen, Ala., 147, and Leon Spinks of St. Louis and the U.S. Marine Corps, 178.

Armstrong, a member of 1972 Olympic team whose career was in jeopardy after suffering third-degree burns of the feet in a car crash in 1974, is a boxer with a punch. The 20-year old winner of a Pan American Games medal in 1975, was a National Gold Gloves champion in 1976 and National AAU champion in 1972-75-76.

BUT ARMSTRONG was knocked down and stopped in the second round last Jan. 24 in Moscow by Anatoly Vokov, a man not considered by the Russians as one of their better medal bets. The Americans are hoping that was a fluke and that Armstrong's experience will pull him through.

Davis has all the moves of a classic boxer and plans to turn professional after the games. "I think he's overcome the fault he had," Matty Cussack of Yonkers, N.Y., the chairman of the U.S. Olympic Boxing Committee, said of Davis who won the world title at 125 pounds in Cuba in 1974 and has been a two-time National AAU champ and a four-time New York Golden Gloves champ.

'He was a slow starter. You can't feel out your opponent to see what he's gonna do. You got to go all out," said Cussack.

LEONARD, WHO has lost only five times in 136 bouts, is "an all-around medal shot, a potential winner," said Nappi. "He has fast hands and is a good boxer," added Cussack. "He'll score well.

El Paso increases TL lead

The Associated Press

El Paso increased its Texas League West lead to five games Tuesday night as the Diablos' Rance Mulliniks waited until the last inning to score the winning run in their 2-1 victory over Amarillo.

In other games, San Antonio won the first game of a doubleheader with Midland 3-2 and dropped the nightcap 7-0, and Jackson swept two games from Shreveport 9-6 and 1-0. Arkansas at Lafayette was rained out.

El Paso's John Caneria hurled three-hitter at Amarillo as he carded his ninth victory with one loss. Loser Roger Coe also pitched three-hit ball but lost when Mulliniks tripled in the ninth inning and scored on a sacrifice fly.

In Shreveport, the Jackson Mets exploded for four runs in the first inning of the first game and added three more in the fourth when Terry Ervin belted a homer with two on. Jackson's Mardie Cornejo, 3-3, picked up his victory in relief while Shreveport starter Doug Nelson, 6-5, took the loss.

Reds' Borbon gets rare start, but needs help early

By The Associated Press

For years Pedro Borbon has been following Don Gullett to the mound and usually serving as a nightcap for Cincinnati Reds' victories.

But Manager Sparky Anderson is shaking up his pitching staff these days. Gullett is the chaser now.

One of the most successful relief pitchers in baseball, Borbon made his first start in four years Tuesday night. Gullett— relegated to bullpen duty of late—came on to finish the Montreal Expos 10-7 in a unique juxtaposition of assignments.

"Sparky told me maybe I'd go five innings," said Borbon. "But I figured I'd go one and then see after that. It's about the same as relieving—you've got to have good control. Everybody's ready for anything on this team."

The start was only the fourth of Borbon's major league career and the first since Oct. 4, 1972, when he pitched against the Houston Astros. He started one game in 1970 and two in 1972.

During Tuesday night's game, the burly right-hander was anything but artistic. He gave up eight hits and four earned runs in 3 1-3 innings, leading Anderson to comment: "He threw all right, but it seemed every pitch he threw was a base hit, on the ground or somewhere. But he saved us pitching today."

Gullett, meanwhile, has been trying to make a comeback into the starting rotation after his dismissal to the bullpen last month. The left-hander, Anderson's ace card in last year's World Series with the Boston Red Sox, pitched one inning Tuesday night and recorded his first save.

Ken Griffey's two-run double sparked a five-run seventh inning that carried Cincinnati over Montreal. The Reds led 5-4 when they loaded the bases in the seventh against Don Carithers, the second Montreal pitcher, on a single, a walk, a sacrifice and an intentional walk.

After Griffey drove in two runs, Joe Morgan was walked intentionally and George Foster reached on an error by second baseman Pete MacKanin. Foster got an RBI on the play and a second run scored on the error. Dan Driessen capped the inning's scoring with a sacrifice fly to center.

Winner Rawley Eastwick improved his record to 5-3 in relief of Borbon. Eastweck pitched 4 2-3 innings, gave up five hits, including a three-run homer to Larry Parrish in the eighth, walked two and struck out two.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 1

Triples by Reggie Smith and Steve Yeager highlighted a five-run third inning for Los Angeles and the Dodgers eint on to beat Philadelphia behind Doug Rau's six-hitter. It was the third straight loss and fourth in six games for the National League East leaders, but failed to dishearten Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark.

"I'm not pushing the panic button," said Ozark, whose team remained nine games in front of Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Braves 4, Pirates 2

Right-hander Andy Messersmith and reliever Mike Marshall combined on a seven hitter, leading Atlanta over Pittsburgh. The victory was the seventh in the last eight games for Messersmith, 9-6, who went the distance in his previous eight starts.

"I'll go on record as saying that Messersmith is the best pitcher I have ever seen," said Atlanta Manager Dave Bristol. "Why? Because he has five pitches he can throw for strikes. He has the keenest mind I've ever seen in knowing how to go about getting hitters out."

Cardinals 13, Giants 7

St. Louis scored seven runs in the first inning and coasted over San Francisco as Jerry Mumphrey blasted four hits and Willie Crawford a home run amd two doubles. The pair led an 18-hit attack which helped send San Francisco right-hander Ed Halicki, 7-11, from the mound with none out.

Astros 1, Mets 0

Jerry DaVanon's single over a drawn-in infield scored Wilbur Howard from third base with the winning run in the 10th inning as Houston beat New York. Despite control problems, J.R. Richard went all the way for Houston, scattering eight hits in winning a pitcher's duel with New York left-hander Jon Matlack.

Richard's 10 walks tied the major league record for bases on balls in an extra-inning shutout game and the 15 runners left on base by New York set a major league record for most runners stranded in a 10-game inning shutout defeat.

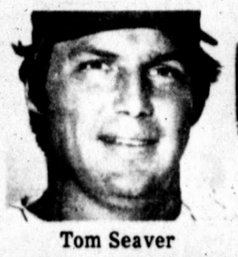

"I thought he (Manager Bill Virdon) was going to take me out a couple of times," said Richard, 8-9. "I was surprised when he didn't. I threw 167 pitches, the most I've thrown this year."

Cubs 4, San Diego 0

Bill Madlock drove in two runs with a single and a double to help Chicago beat San Diego. Steve Stone, who came off the disabled list last Friday after recovering from a sore shoulder, gained his first triumph since last September. He blanked the Padres on three hits the six innings he worked.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Southpaws Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres and Jon Matlack of the New York Mets, who have a combined record of 25-5 this season, will head the National League's eight-man pitching staff at next Tuesday's All-Star baseball game.

The other pitchers, chosen Tuesday by Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, include Tom Seaver of the Mets, Andy Messersmith of Atlanta, Woodie Fryman of Montreal, Ken Forsch of Houston, John Montefusco of San Francisco, and Rick Rhoden of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Jones, who will be making his second all-star appearance, is the winningest pitcher in the major leagues this year with a 15-3 record and a 2.51 earned run average in 165 innings.

Matlock, who has put together a 10-2 mark and ERA of 2.61, will be making his third all-star appearance.

Right-hander Tom Seaver, 8-5 with a 2.92 ERA, was named to the all-star team for the ninth time. Messersmith, a righthander with an 8-6 record and 2.37 ERA, will make his fourth appearance. Lefty Woodie Fryman, also 8-6 with a 3.71 ERA, will be playing in his second all-star game.

Three right-handers — Rhoden, Forsch and Montefusco — will be playing in the midseason classic for the first time. Rhoden is 8-0 with a 2.77 ERA while Forsch, a reliever with a 1-2 record and 1.94 ERA, has 14 saves this year.

John "The Count" Montefusco, last season's rookie of the year, is 7-8 with a 3.25 ERA.

The American League pitching staff was named earlier by Boston Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson, who will manage the AL team.

His selections include Mark Fidrych of Detroit, Catfish Hunter and Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees, Frank Tanana of the California Angels, Bill Travers of Milwaukee, Dave LaRoche of Cleveland, Luis Tiant of Boston, Rollie Fingers of Oakland and Rich Gossage of the Chicago White Sox.

Killanin weighs evidence on exploxive Taiwan issue

MONTREAL (AP) — While one member of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) calls for the cancellation or transfer of the Montreal Games, Lord Killanin sits tight and weighs his alternatives.

Killanin, the unflappable Irishman who heads the IOC, said Tuesday he will make no move on the explosive Taiwan situation before Saturday, when a meeting of the IOC's nine member executive board is scheduled to convene. He also said he would have no further statements on the affair before Saturday.

Allan MacEachen, external affairs minister, said Tuesday that Taiwan's 52-member contingent would not get past the Montreal airport without assurances that Taiwan will not compete as the Republic of China.

Canada, which recognizes the People's Republic of China (Mainland China), could refuse to issue passports to the Taiwanese, who are to leave for Montreal on Thursday.

Shen Chai-ming, president of the Republic of China Olympic Committee, said the delegation would travel under its official name—the Republic of China.

That places the two sides at loggerheads, and if Canada doesn't budge, then Conte Jean de Beaumont says the Games should be moved or canceled.

De Beaumont, a past vice priesident of the IOC and former president of France's Olympic committee, said in a telgram to the IOC here that he was "greatly disturbed.

"I must tell you that if Canada does not abide by its undertakings and if, in spite of this, the Games nonetheless take place in Montreal, our principles would be repudiated, our rules violated and our movement brought to an end."

The IOC says, as a matter of principle, that sportsmen from all over the world must be admitted to the Olympics, regardless of political labels.

Killanin has told the Canadian government it gave a pledge to this effect when Montreal was awarded the Games.

"China is not really the issue here," Killanin said. "It is the principles of the Olympic Games that are at stake.

Ashe sympathizes with Mexican boycott

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Ashe is sympathetic to Mexico's refusal to play South Africa in Davis Cup competition, but the American tennis star believes the United States made a mistake by withdrawing from the Davis Cup Federation.

"It's not a question of politics in sports," said Ashe, considered one of the top tennis players in the world. "You can never separate politics and sports.

"I can very readily identify with Mexico not wanting to play South Africa, emotionally," said Ashe, the only black to win the Wimbledon's men's title. "Short of going to war, you say 'I won't play you.'"

The U.S. Tennis Association withdrew from 1976 Davis Cup competition and from the Davis Cup Federation because of political influence in the competition.

"They're in that dream world of let's not mix politics and sports," said Ashe, who is president of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP). "I think they were wrong to pull out of the whole concept.

"I think they should have pulled out for one year, to make a point, along with England and France."

The two European nations have boycotted the 1976 competition, but have remained in the Davis Cup Federation.

In New York to promote a four-man Grand Slam tennis tournament, to be held in Myrtle Beach, S.C., this weekend, Ashe said the South African problem could be easily handled by utilizing a rule of the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

Cedeno wins NL's award

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cesar Cedeno, who helped the Houston Astros sweep a doubleheader from the Cincinnati Reds last week by successfully hitting seven of 11 times at bat, was named National League player of the week Tuesday.

The 25-year-old outfielder, who recorded his 1,000th major league hit over the weekend, had 15 hits for 35 at-bats last week for a .429 average.

Yankees first to surpass million fan mark at gate

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees became the first team in the American League to go over the 1 million mark in paid home attendance this season with a crowd of 35,370 for Tuesday's twi-night doubleheader against Kansas City.

The crowd raised the Yankees' season total to 1,024,035, the fourth season in a row the club has drawn over a million and the 30th time in the past 31 seasons.

The team returned to a refurbished Yankee Stadium this season after playing for two years at Shea Stadium, home of the National League New York Mets The Yankees are 231,000 ahead of their attendance pace for last season when they drew 1,288,048 at Shea.

Bronze Buckaroo still popular

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "The Bronze Buckaroo," Herb Jeffries, actor-singer whose action-packed movies used to be staples on the segregated black theater circuit and whose recording of "Flamingo" has sold more than 13 million copies, was proving that time hasn't touched his talent.

Starring at The Parisian Room, a modest bistro near MGM Studios, Jeffries was not only filling the house but attracting celebrities like Tony Bennett and Redd Foxx, who are very selective about their evening's entertainment.

Whether he was tackling songs with a rich baritone, so full that a Los Angeles critic said he made Robert Goulet sound like a boy soprano, or with a fine falsetto voice, Jeffries sang stylishly and on key.

True, his stand at The Parisian Room was a comedown from the bookings he played as vocalist for Duke Ellington, and his audience wasn't so glamorous as the international jet-setters (kings, queens and khans included) who used to visit his club in Paris called The Gay Paree.

A tall man with cafe-au-lait complexion, gray eyes, and an Indian-like profile, he comes from mixed antecedents which, in his boyhood, confused him.

"My little Irish mother was a saint," Jeffries declared. "My father was a multiracial man — American Indian, English, Italian, Polynesian and Ethiopian. So I was all messed up — a total mess of races.

"After I went with Duke Ellington, most people called me black, and that was all right, because I didn't care what they called me so long as I could sing.

"However, my family and I went through some trying times.

"Now, though, I've found my group. It's the human race. I've been striving all my life to belong to the human race, because that's what it's all about. I'm 50 per cent Irish, and I've yet to wave a shamrock."

Jeffries had been making movies, mostly westerns, in which he, as a singing cowboy, was "The Bronze Buckaroo" when Ellington grabbed him to become a featured attraction with his band.

"I was raised in Detroit," he remembered, "and scrambled around there for a lot of years singing with little local bands before I came out to California and began making pictures.

"Well, I'd made several of them when, like the prodigal son, I went home for a visit. I went back to Detroit with a big western hat and an automobile with cow horns on it. I was a movie star!

"So, anyway, Duke Ellington was playing at a ballroom in Detroit and I, with my ten-gallon hat and cowboy boots, decided I'd go over to hear him, because I wanted to be where everybody could see me.

"I went over and, naturally, was right down front so Duke would know I was there.

"He introduced me saying, 'I see we have "The Bronze Buckaroo" here,' and so forth.

"Then, during intermission, I went backstage to say hello to him, and he asked, 'What are your plans? I've just come from New York where I worked in a theater that was showing your picture.'

"Incidentally, the pictures I'd been making were five-day movies, made in five days and called 'quickies.'

"Anyway, when Ellington asked me what I was going to do next, I said, 'Well, I'm going back to California and make some more pictures.'

"And he said, 'That's a shame. I was hoping you'd have some time to go on tour with me.'

"And, at that, I said, 'I think I can cancel some pictures.'

"That's how I joined his organization.

"Touring with him was a fantastic experience which brought me a lot of luck, because it was with Ellington that I had the big hit 'Flamingo.'"

In 1951, Jeffries went to Europe and opened a club which was so successful that in September, 1953, Life magazine devoted 3,500 words to his story. But shortly after that he abandoned France and came home.

Back in this country, Jeffries has worked in movies and television but hardly to his full potential, partly because he retreated from Los Angeles to Reno where he lived until quite recently.

"I got so disgusted with the business," he explained, "that I exiled myself. I felt that for me to get into recording and to spend money trying to compete with the kind of music that was coming along would be ridiculous.

Lana Turner sets the story straight

By JACK SMITH
The Los Angeles Times

Any man of my vintage, or any vintage, for that matter, can understand the thrill I felt when I picked up my telephone messages and found that Lana Turner had called me and left her number.

Evidently word had got to her that I was investigating the story of her discovery back in 1936, and she was ready to talk. At last, I realized as I dialed the number, I might be able to rescue the truth from the haze and error in which it had become enveloped.

For 40 years the legend had been that Miss Turner, then a Hollywood High School girl, was discovered while sitting at the fountain in Schwab's drug store having an ice cream soda. It was at the heart of the Hollywood myth, that story, an article of faith for every starstruck schoolgirl, a staple of every journalistic dissertation on the Hollywood mystique.

But some of my old colleagues had questioned the facts, and urged me, as one of them put it, "to settle this momentous question for all time." It was their belief that Miss Turner was not discovered in Schwab's at all, but in a drug store across the street from Hollywood High. One of them said it wasn't an ice cream soda, either, but a Coke.

As I have already reported here, my preliminary investigation did indeed suggest that the scene had not been Schwab's; but if not Schwab's, where? And I was not willing to concede that Miss Turner had been having a Coke. I was of the opinion that it was an ice cream soda and it was vanilla.

But the truth was not easy to discover under the layers of time and legend Some of the principals had passed from the scene. Others were themselves victims of the mythologizing of Hollywood, where tiny facts are enclosed and obscured in opalescent fantasies, as grains of sand are enclosed in pearls. I soon saw that it was not going to be easy. Phones went unanswered. Memories proved blank or faulty. Faith had given way to cynicism.

Then the break came. Miss Turner called me. I called her back. Here is her story:

"This will be," she said, "the 5,500th time I have told the true story, and yet I am still asked the question, over and over again, to the point where I say to myself — dear Lord! — I'm not getting through to people! But nobody listens.

"The true story is, I was not discovered at Schwab's drug store sitting on a stool. In fact, I wish I had stock in Schwab's. They've lived off me for over 30 years now. I've been told about these young girls, they hit the Hollywood trail, and they go and sit on these stools at Schwab's and nothing happens, because that isn't where it happened!

"Now here is where and how it happened. I was going to Hollywood High and I cut a typing class, because it was boring and I guess I had no plans to become a secretary anyway. And I went across Sunset Blvd. and there was this little malt shop. I was sitting there and the place was totally empty, because all the good students were doing what they were supposed to do."

"What flavor was your ice cream soda?" I asked. "It's important."

"I believe they had strawberry sodas, chocolate sodas — I do not truthfully remember, but I do remember that it could only have cost a nickel, because that's how poor we were. It was probably a Coca-Cola.

"They had a counter like a square horseshoe kind of thing, and this gentleman, way over on the other side, I noticed was looking at me. I lowered my eyes. I mean, you know, I wasn't that green."

The gentleman spoke to the proprietor. The proprietor spoke to Julie (not yet Lana), whom he knew as a regular customer.

Westerns now difficult

By BILL RICHARDS
The Washington Post

SUN VALLEY, Idaho — There have been gun fights by the hundreds, endless series of hell-for-leather chases across the plains, and for the last half-century, a trail of Western movie mayhem that stretched through cowtown and railhead from Yuma to Boise.

But the bad old days were positively bucolic compared to the new breed of western making its comeback today, according to former cowboy star Tim McCoy and another old western movie actor Iron Eyes Cody.

The two aging actors, who have logged more than 200 westerns between them over the last half century, were among more than 200 Western film industry representatives, Western film scholars and Western buffs who gathered here for a week's discussion and a look at dozens of examples of that peculiarly American art form — the Western horse opera. The symposium was entitled, "Western Movies: Myths and Images" and was sponsored by the Levi Strauss Company and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

"Compared to what is coming out these days we who were making Westerns years ago were gentlemen," said Iron Eyes Cody. The 62-year-old Cherokee, whose classic Indian profile has become well-known in the last few years in those clean-water commercials that show him with a single tear running down each cheek, has made 130 Westerns since he broke into the movie business in 1925.

"Now," he said, "I find that I have to turn down some Western roles because they want me to appear naked and use a lot of four-letter words. A lot of Westerns today are just interested in sex and violence and that's not my idea of what the West was all about."

The real West, said Tim McCoy, who at 85 is one of the deans of the classic Western cowboy star ranks, was nowhere near as violent as filmmakers have been portraying it.

"There was more shooting among the cowboys who came to Hollywood to earn $7.50 a day and drink at the old Water Hole in North Hollywood than there ever was in Dodge City," he said.

McCoy and Cody began their cowboy and Indian careers together in the 1925 film "War Paint" and appeared together in more than 50 other Westerns before their last picture together in 1960. Cody is still acting and serves as technical director for Western Filmakers while McCoy is retired and living on his ranch in Nogales, Ariz.

"I never look at Westerns "They want to rub your nose in the vulgarity. I liked pictures where people spoke like gentlemen, not like bums."

Bette had troubles

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Bette Midler had difficulties getting it on (on stage, that is) the night she opened at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, because just before show time the power in a section of the hotel failed.

Nevertheless, Bette dressed by candlelight to make her show room entrance on a regulation hospital bed attended by three girl singers called "The Harlettes."

The bed reminded her audience that Bette had recently undergone an emergency appendectomy. However, the rest of the act reminded her audience of how fully she's recovered.

Unfortunate hand suffers cruel fate

The Mass of bridge hands lead lives of quiet desperation. They never know when they're going to be murdered, with nary a sign to mark their sad fate.

East took the ace of hearts and returned the jack. South held up, but had to win the third heart.

Declarer lost the diamond finesse but then won the rest of the tricks, making his contract with an overtrick.

Regular readers of this column will shed a tear for the poor bridge hand that was so brutally done in. East was, of course, the murderer. His crime took place at the very first trick since his correct play is the jack of hearts rather than the ace.

PREVENTS HOLD-UP

If East plays the jack of hearts at the first trick, South must win at once with the king. South cannot tell which opponent has the ace of hearts, and this may be South's only chance to win a heart trick. Declarer will still be safe if the diamond finesse works or if each opponent has four hearts.

When East gets in with the king of diamonds he cashes the ace of hearts and leads his low heart to let West defeat the contract with the rest of the suit.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer bids one diamond, and the next two players pass. You hold: SK-J10 HK76 D1094 CAQ76. What do you say?

ANSWER: Double. Your side can probably make a part score, of perhaps even a game. It is seldom correct to let the opponents play a hand at one of a suit unless you yourself have length and strength in the suit.

Mining said threat to American condor

By BILL RICHARDS
The Washington Post

OJAI, Calif. — A proposal to begin a large phosphate mining project on federal land in the mountainous Los Padres National Forest near here has stirred fears for the future of the last remaining flock of giant California condors.

Opponents of the U.S. Gypsum Co.'s plan to mine phosphates and gypsum in the southern Sespe Creek region of the forest contend that the strip-mining would create severe noise, air and water pollution, which, in turn, would disrupt the condors' feeding and breeding habits.

The controversy has become highly charged both here and in Washington. Not only has the proposal drawn near-unanimous opposition in this small, well-to-do artists' community, but it also has raised a complex federal question that could affect other projects nationwide.

A recent study by the Bureau of Land Management, which operates the Los Padres National Forest for the Interior Department, concluded:

"The proposed action will adversely impact wildlife, particularly threatening the condor."

The 250-page report added that air quality, soils, vegetation, aesthetics, recreation and land use also would be affected.

The condor — whose nine-foot wingspan makes it the largest bird on the North American continent — is officially classified as an endangered species. Only about 50 remain, and virtually all of these can be found in the proposed mining area, about 50 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

The broader controversy revolves around whether the Interior Department can ignore environmental considerations in granting permits for mining on federal land if the department issued original prospecting permits for the sites before the National Environmental Protection Act of 1970 was passed.

The act sets out a general national environmental policy and requires that all other federal laws be interpreted in accordance with it. The act says the Interior Department and other federal agencies must see to it that potential environmental damage is assessed and considered before granting permits for prospecting or mining federal land.

U.S. Gypsum has said it received its approval to prospect for phosphate in the Los Padres National Forest before the act was passed and therefore is subject only to the requirements of an earlier and less stringent Federal Mineral Leasing Act. That law, passed in 1920, grants no authorization to the Interior Department to place environmental restrictions on federal mine leases.

In addition to the claim here, similar exemptions are being sought from the Interior Department on other phosphate leases and on 183 coal leases on federal land. The coal leases cover about 12 billion tons of coal located in the six big Western coal states on the Northern Great Plains.

At present four court cases are pending over whether provisions of the 1970 environmental act must be enforced on a federal coal lease in Utah and on a similar federal lease covering phosphate reserves in the Osceola National Forest in Florida.

A spokesman for the Interior Department said recently that officials are studying the Los Padres lease controversy to decide whether U.S. Gypsum can be granted its mining permit.

Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe is expected to take several months to make the final decision on the lease, the spokesman said.

The Chicago-based company said it plans to sue the government if its mining permit is denied. U.S. Gypsum received its prospecting permit from the government in 1964, according to federal officials, and informed the Interior Department it had found valuable deposits of phosphate beneath 2,434 acres of the national forest here.

U.S. Gypsum plans to remove 30 million to 50 million tons of phosphate from the mining site, with some of the open pits going to a depth of over 200 feet, executive vice president Andrew Watt said.

He said the company does not feel the project would endanger either the condors or the environment. "We have some experience in this sort of thing and a pretty good reputation for environmental concern," he said.

Deaths send churchman to Brazil

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. flew to Brazil Tuesday after his son-in-law and the relative's brother were shot to death by a group of farmers.

Jule Spach, elected to the denomination's highest office earlier this month, left his furlough residence in Winston-Salem, N.C., for the trip to Belem in the northern Brazilian state of Para, a church spokesman said.

Spach, a graduate of Georgia Tech, has been a lay missionary in Brazil for the past 25 years.

His son-in-law, Bruce Davis, 29, was killed in the attack Sunday in which John Mallory Davis, 33, also died and the men's father, rancher John Weaver Davis, was wounded by gunfire, U.S. officials in Brazil said.

John Mallory Davis was a graduate student at Texas A&M University.

Police said the incident came as a result of a land dispute.

John Weaver Davis, a native of Alabama, who was reported by his daughter to be in fair condition on Monday, also had been a Presbyterian missionary in Brazil, leaving that position eight years ago to go into ranching and timber production.

The Presbyterian spokesman said Bruce Davis, husband of Spach's daughter Lynn, had a cattle ranch about 150 miles from his father's and had journeyed to his father's land "to try to help him work out his problems."

Brazilian police said the native farmers had complained that land was being taken illegally by John Weaver Davis, whose family owns one of the biggest farms in the state.

His two sons were to be buried in Belem.

Democracy almost dead in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — When Prime Minister Indira Gandhi proclaimed a national emergency on June 26, 1975, her supporters hailed the action as a courageous and long overdue push for "a peaceful revolution."

But her critics condemned the imposition of news censorship, the jailing of thousands of political opponents and the suspension of most civil rights as the unjustified subversion of democratic ideals and the beginning of one-person rule.

Now India has lived with the emergency for a year, and Mrs. Gandhi's supporters and critics both claim their original assessments have proved correct.

"This nation is on the move," proclaimed the prime minister's supporters, and as evidence they point to an improved economy, good food supplies at lower prices and renewed ties with India's old foes, Pakistan and China.

"But democracy is dead," her critics retort, citing as proof the indefinite postponement of elections, curbs on the judiciary, permanent news censorship and the central government's takeover of the only two states that were run by duly elected opposition parties.

What both sides agree is that this nation of 610 million people, with an estimated 60 per cent unable to read and 45 per cent barely able to subsist, has been put through a year of fundamental, permanent, and in large measure, popular, change.

They also agree that the 59-year-old daughter of the late Prime Minister Jawaharial Nehru is entering her second decade as government leader with little viable political opposition and virtually unfettered power.

Mrs. Gandhi said in an interview on the anniversary of the emergency she is not ready to lift any of the restrictions.

By all accounts, there has indeed been significant economic progress during the past year.

A food grain harvest exceeding last year's record 114 million tons is being predicted. Food prices remain lower than a year ago and a crackdown on black marketeering has reduced hoarding and shortages.

International economists say industrial production is up almost five per cent, in part due to a ban on strikes. Foreign exchange reserves are also up, in part due to antismuggling measures.

A campaign against tax evasion has pumped more capital into the national treasury. Economists also say cuts in income and excise taxes, combined with streamlined licensing and investment procedures, have stimulated business.

A "discipline" campaign has improved bureaucratic performance and helped quiet the universities.

Mrs. Gandhi's supporters say another gain of the past year has been the progress of the government campaign to curb the birth rate and stop the population from growing each year by 13 million, a number equivalent to the entire population of Australia.

According to the government, new incentives and penalites have inspired Indians in record numbers to accept sterilization operations.

All of which, the government claims, justifies the steps which the prime miniter took to end what she charged were growing abuses of political, individual and press freedoms.

In the view of Mrs. Gandhi's critics, however, the gains of the year of emergency are welcome but do not justify the government's means.

"Assuming that all the achievements claimed are true and valid, the basic question we have to ask ourselves is whether all the repressive measures are required to achieve the supposed results," opposition member of Parliament Krishan Kant told his colleagues in January.

"We adopted a democratic constitution and decided to have a free and open society to reach national goals through democratic processes," he said.

Mrs. Gandhi's critics claim the main goal of Mrs. Gandhi's actions is to keep her in power.

"Everybody seems to have forgotten that two weeks before she proclaimed the emergency Mrs. Gandhi was convicted of corrupt electioneering practices," one critic complains.

The Supreme Court overturned that conviction in November after parliament, controlled by Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party and with much of the opposition jailed, retroactively rewrote the constitution and election laws to ensure a favorable verdict.

Since the emergency, news censorship has been made into law beyond judicial review and a code of ethics has been imposed defining what Indian jouranlists may write.

The year of emergency has also seen courts barred from reviewing habeas corpus petitions filed by political prisoners, and the Congress party leadership has endorsed constitutional changes further curbing judicial power.

Just how long India's state of emergency will remain in effect is stil unclear. Nor have there been any firm indications when elections might be held.
