Murder trial gains 14th juror Friday

Two alternate jurors were added to the 12 already chosen Friday as the selection process ended for the capital murder trial of Dorsie Lee Johnson Jr.

Testimony in the case will begin at 9 a.m. Monday in 132nd District Court.

From that time until the end of the trial, the 14-member jury panel will be sequestered. District Judge Gene Dulaney has also held off releasing the names of jury members until Monday morning.

Johnson, 19, of Colorado City, faces a possible death sentence if convicted. He is charged in the slaying of Allsup's clerk Jack Huddleston during an early morning robbery of the College Ave. store March 23.

Trial proceedings actually began Oct. 13 when 117 prospective jurors filled out questionnaires related to their attitudes toward the local incident and capital punishment in general.

Beginning Oct. 20, the individual questioning process of these 117 got underway. The juror interviews were conducted by District Attorney Ernie Armstrong and Frank Conard, the court-appointed defense attorney from Sweetwater.

That process ended shortly after 4 p.m. Friday with the selection of the second alternate juror. Both alternates are men.

Seven women and seven men have now been selected. In all, 98 of the 117 prospective jurors were questioned.

The two selected as alternates will hear all of the testimony and will replace any panel members during jury deliberation if all 12 cannot complete the trial.

They will be staying at the Willow Park Inn during the trial and are to report there at 8 a.m. Monday.

Both the lengthy jury selection process and the requirement that

Tax rates for Snyder compare well in area

By VICKI BROWN
SDN Staff Writer

Taxpayers upset over a 37 percent tax increase on their Snyder-based property this year can take some comfort in the fact that their neighbors in all directions still pay more.

To compare, the SDN contacted taxing entities in five of Snyder's neighboring cities--communities of like, smaller or larger size.

The finding is that Snyder property owners are better off today than their counterparts were one year ago--a time before the severe economic downturn began pushing tax bills higher.

And this year's tax bills only widened the gap between cities like Abilene, Big Spring, Sweetwater, Lamesa and Colorado City--communities which to a greater or lesser degree are feeling the same economic crunch as Snyder due to the unstable oil economy.

For comparison purposes, the SDN used the example of a home located inside the city limits and valued at $50,000. The tax rates which affect this home in each respective community were then added to obtain a combined tax rate.

In Snyder, this combined tax rate--a combination of rates assessed by the county, college, school and city--totals slightly less than $1.42 per $100 valuation.

Using the example of a $50,000 home, this creates a total tax bill of approximately $707 this year.

For comparison, the combined tax rate this year for the five surrounding communities, with the larger rates listed first, are: Colorado City, at almost $2.14; Sweetwater, $2.03; Big Spring, $2; Abilene, near $1.63; and Lamesa, slightly over $1.60 per $100 valuation.

With the current combined tax rate at $1.42, Snyder residents saw the ad valorem rate jump from last year's $1.03--a 37 percent increase.

By entity, the rates are Snyder ISD, almost 82 cents; the county, almost 23 cents; Western Texas College, just over 11 cents; and the city, retained at 25½ cents.

Using a $50,000 home as an example, a city homeowner will pay some $409 to Snyder ISD; $128 to the City of Snyder, $114 to the county and $57 to the college

See TAXES, page 13A

The following totals equal the combined tax bill for a $50,000 home located in:

Colorado City	$1,068
Sweetwater	$1,015
Big Spring	$1,001
Abilene	$813
Lamesa	$803
Snyder	$707

Surplus food use increases

An unstable oil economy may be contributing to a noticable rise in the number of applicants for government-distributed commodities, individuals involved with the local program say.

Some 956 families representing 2,730 individuals received items last month — up from 798 households or 2,163 persons accepting the free commodities in May.

In October, 65 new applicants began receiving foodstuffs. Some 44 of these were under 60 years old — individuals theoretically still in the work force.

The commodities are distributed at the Senior Citizens Center monthly. "The total number of people we help has been gradually increasing each month since May," said Jean Smith, assistant center director. "I feel like (increases) will continue until the economy improves."

Smith also noted that the upward trend will likely continue in part due to seasonal employment patterns. "We generally have

Group helps heal scarred childhood

By Shirley A. Gorman
SDN News Editor

Adult Children of Alcoholics is a new organization in Snyder--a self-help group designed to aid adults who experience difficulty in relating to their children and spouses because of childhood experiences.

It meets for approximately one hour every Monday at St. John's Episcopal Church. The meetings begin at 7 p.m.

Even though ACOA is a relatively new group in Snyder, it has long been an established national organization.

ACOA is often thought of as "the finger of Al-Anon," an organization which helps families deal with problem drinkers. However, this organization is not associated with Al-Anon at this time.

ACOA is not just for people trying to cope with alcoholics. It is for the "dysfunctional family," one which experiences difficulties for a variety of reasons.

These can include any kind of compulsive behavior such as

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Half the economists think tax reform will be good, but could be bad. The other half think it will be bad, but could be good."

If we've learned anything this political season, it's to be skeptical about statements made during the heat of a campaign.

If you happen to have a weak stomach, don't compare campaign promises with actual performance. Such a situation reminds us of the recent federal tax overhaul, which by some was presented as tax simplification.

For six million low-income Americans removed from the tax rolls, the new act does provide simplification.

For the majority of Americans, however, quite the opposite is true. While some old deductions have ended, the space they occupied on the tax returns will be more than made up for in accounting for complicated phase-outs and phase-ins.

One report indicates that the government hopes that ending many popular deductions will motivate taxpayers to stop itemizing deductions.

The IRS hopes that the 64 percent using short forms will increase in number to 75 percent.

It's only simple if you have enough money to cover the check you send to the IRS.

We saw a good example of what is commonly known as the "pecking order" which most organizations have.

A school superintendent in another Texas city assured a parents organization that he was always happy to have input from them--any time--about any school problem.

"You can call day or night," he told them. He further impressed the audience of parents by giving them a telephone number.

The superintendent repeated the number so that the parents could write it down. Then there was an outcry from an assistant superintendent.

"Hey," he exclaimed, "that's my number."

Building still down

With the first month of the new fiscal year, Snyder building permits--which ended the 12-month estimate Sept. 30 down by some 51 percent--have again started to fall behind.

For the month of October last year, new construction jumped off to to some $952,000 in permits issued. This year, the figure is less than $100,000.

Exact figures for comparison are $951,580 last year and $98,500 this October.

The only category with significant numbers last month involved mobile home move-ins. Permits were issued for five, comprising some $89,800--approximately 91 percent--of the month's total.

The hands of the four workers were contaminated Thursday afternoon, as well as the face of one worker, said Rockwell Hanford spokesman Mark Musolf.

Officials do not know how the workers were contaminated, or why they weren't wearing protective gear in contaminated areas.

USSR harvest surprises U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is scrambling to look over the Soviet Union's 1986 crop for evidence to support Moscow's claim of a bumper grain harvest totaling 210 million metric tons.

"We're waiting for further information," said Kathryn Zeimetz, one of USDA's Soviet watchers. "We're interested in seeing if they provide any more details, the definitions they're using."

A month ago, the USDA forecast a Soviet harvest of 180 million tons, 14 percent less than announced on Thursday by Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev. If Ligachev's figure is accurate, it would be the largest Soviet grain harvest since output rose to a record 237.4 million tons in 1978.

Moreover, 210 million tons would rank as the Soviet Union's fourth-largest grain harvest, exceeded only by 223.8 million tons in 1976, 222.5 million tons in 1973 and the 1978 record. The annual output has dropped to as low as 140.1 million tons in 1975.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Grain harvest information is crucial to U.S. assessments of Soviet supplies and how much Moscow may have to import in the future. Short crops in the 1970s drove the Soviet Union deeply into the world market for wheat and corn, including huge purchases from the United States.

Since then, there have been bilateral agreements calling for regular annual purchases of U.S. commodities by the Soviet Union. But the size of the Soviet harvest matched against anticipated needs are still vital to U.S. policymakers and American farmers.

The USDA will issue its official monthly forecast of Soviet grain production Monday, but officials contacted Friday would not speculate on what the new estimate might be.

Doctor: gastric bubble safe despite warnings

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — A local clinic won't stop using a plastic bubble to treat obesity despite warnings from its manufacturer that it has caused at least one death and other serious complications, a doctor says.

Dr. James P. Hosler said problems associated with the Garren-Edwards gastric bubble are due to improper insertion of the device or improper care of the patient.

Hosler, a gastroenteroligist and chief of staff at the Dallas-Fort Worth Medical Center-Grand Prairie, founded the Gastric Bubble Weight Loss Program at the hospital in March.

"This bubble was initially used by a small number of people that were trained and paid close attention to its use," Hosler said. "Now that it has been approved for general use, some people are not using it properly."

The Food and Drug Administration has approved use of the device, and many doctors consider it more practical to reduce weight than stomach-stapling or other surgical procedures.

Statistics show that overall, 1 to 2 percent of patients carrying the bubble developed an ulcer or lost it when the bubble deflated and passed out of the body through the digestive system.

"In one case the bubble deflated and got stuck in the patient's small intestine and the patient died," Hosler told the Grand Prairie Daily News.

"That could have been prevented with surgery," he said. "Doctors who use the bubble need to know what can go wrong just as they need to know the side effects of drugs they prescribe.

Hosler said he has treated 59 or 60 people with the bubble, and only one developed an ulcer. Another patient asked the doctor to remove it because she was uncomfortable.

"I also heard of another person who died when the bubble was inflated while in their esophagus and caused the esophagus to rupture," Hosler said. "The company has gone to great pains in seminars to tell doctors how to use the bubble."

Local doctor recertified family practice specialist

KANSAS CITY, Mo.--Dr. James R. Burleson of Snyder has been recertified as a diplomate of the American Board of Family Practice (ABFP) as a result of passing a recertification examination offered by the ABSF. The physician thus maintains specialist status in the medical specialty of family practice.

ABFP diplomates must continue to show proof of competence in the field of comprehensive, continuing care of the family by being recertified every six years. The family practice specialty was the first to require diplomates to be recertified on a continuing basis.

The written examination is designed to prove the candidate's continuing competence in the basic components of family practice--internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatry and neurology, and community medicine.

To qualify for certification a physician must have successfully completed three years of residency in a family practice and passed an intensive certification examination. There are some 385 residency training programs in teaching hospitals and university medical centers across the United States.

More than 32,000 family physicians now have been certified in the specialty. Most are members of the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors. The academy was the first national medical group to require members to take continuing study, and was chiefly responsible for securing specialty status for family practice.

Pressure can cause bunions

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — How do bunions develop and what is the present method of removing them?

DEAR READER — A bunion is an abnormal swelling at the base of the big toe. Initially, it is caused when the bursa (joint covering) is irritated by pressure, as can occur with tight shoes. As the swelling increases, the normal front-back orientation of the toe is disrupted and the toe tends to turn to the side. Alteration of footwear — wearing less-snug shoes, for example — can retard the growth of a bunion, but as the mechanics of walking are affected, surgery may be necessary. The operation of choice seems to be the Keller procedure, in which part of the bone is removed and the toe is realigned.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In 1976 I had my first back surgery for a ruptured disc between the fourth and fifth lumbar vertebrae. In June 1984 I had the same disc rupture and repeated the surgery. Recently I lifted something heavy and heard a pop in my lower back. I now have severe hip and buttocks pain. Does it sound as if I ruptured the disc again? What's my next step?

DEAR READER — The tendency to rupture lumbar discs appears to be inherited. Unfortunately, once one disc has slipped, others can follow suit. Therefore, surgery may correct one problem, but, with time, other discs can cause difficulty.

I suspect that you are working on a new rupture, so I advise you to return to the surgeon who did the first two operations. The pain you are now experiencing could be due to further disc degeneration or it may be the result of further injury to the operated area. In either case, seeing your surgeon is the most appropriate next step.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have been taking tetracycline for my skin. It's cleared up my pimples, but how long can I safely continue to take it? I'm 15.

DEAR READER — For most adolescents, tetracycline is safe to take for months or years. Usually, a maintenance dose of two capsules a day is adequate. Remember that tetracycline can cause sun sensitivity, a form of drug allergy, in some individuals, so watch that exposure or use a sunscreen.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In your opinion, what is the maximum safe daily dosage of vitamin D? I have gotten startlingly different opinions from doctors.

DEAR READER — According to "Vitamins and Minerals: Help or Harm?" by Charles Marshall, an extraordinarily useful book on the subject, the limit for vitamin D is 1,200 international units (I.U.) for children and 2,000 I.U. for adults. Above these doses, toxicity is likely. The recommended daily allowance is 400 I.U. for children and 200 I.U. for adults.

Incidentally, Dr. Marshall's book is available in paperback from George F. Stickley Co., 210 W. Washington Sq., Philadelphia, PA 19106.

The best reasons for being a doctor

The cat is out of the bag, so to speak.

In addressing the grumpiness of doctors, Dr. Carla Eisenberg, dean of student affairs at Harvard Medical School has concluded that "as long as we (doctors) emphasize self-serving complaints — threats to our incomes and to our freedom to practice as we see fit — we will remain isolated and impotent."

According to Dr. Eisenberg, medical students are becoming increasingly more distressed and discouraged because their teachers are saturating them with information about physicians' shrinking incomes, endless paperwork and declining research grants. Although intellectual challenges still exist in medicine, doctors-in-training are being told that the good old days of medical practice have passed; medicine is no longer "fun." She says that "to lose sight of just how lucky we are to have a profession in which we do well for ourselves by doing well for others reflects a puzzling loss of perspective."

I think the dean of student affairs should get out of the real world. Maybe she would gain more insight if she were made dean of faculty affairs — not affairs of the heart, I'm talking about grown-up affairs of the checking account. Money, that is.

It seems to me that the issue is one of expectations. Eisenberg may not understand this point because she is probably salaried by Harvard and puts in a 40-hour week counseling budding healers about their class schedules, love lives and indebtedness on student loans.

We older physicians, who traditionally have acted as role models for young doctors, are no longer doing the neophytes any favors. They see us driving luxurious cars, summering in Nantucket and occupying the fanciest houses in town. And they want that good life. They expect it. They lust after the perquisites of medical practice. After living in roach-infested railroad flats during their years in training — and having their spouses work to be able to afford spaghetti sauce — they anticipate that the glass slipper will fit. When they enter practice, the good life will be theirs; it's just sitting there waiting for the right — and very magical — key, the "Open, Sesame" or "Shazam!"

We practicing doctors actually have encouraged this fantasy of expectations. In large part, we are to blame for painting the medical-career picture in unrealistic, shimmering brush strokes. Judging from the shock and depression now being seen in medical students, the profession may be painting itself into a corner.

I think that we more experienced oldies owe young practitioners the courtesy of showing them what is really important in medical practice. We have to reject the philosophy of "I make money because my patients are healthy." Many disgruntled doctors would be less disgruntled if they would stop showing off and would get back into a service profession, with the emphasis on service.

Physicians and surgeons have a right to reasonable remunerations for their time and skills. However, the feature that makes medicine so attractive — in fact, it's what sustained us doctors during our early training — is that we are in a position to help others and relieve suffering. To the good doctor (who is rarely rich), true work satisfaction comes from doing a good job; income is secondary.

Cutbacks in medical research are disastrous not because there will be fewer jobs for doctors, but because the patient's well-being is penalized when new cures are not discovered. The Medicare shell-and-pea game threatens to undermine financial security for millions of elderly middle-income patients. Forget the potential drop in doctors' incomes; that's not as important as the effect on the patient. Doctors need to be reminded, not of their own fees, but that the tidal wave of medical-cost escalation is a far greater concern to patients, fewer and fewer of whom can afford illness.

I believe that we would be a lot happier if we kept in mind the fundamental reason we chose medicine in the first place: to heal the sick and make ourselves useful, not wealthy. Medical teachers should remember that, too, and make absolutely sure that young doctors get the message. You can't buy respect and gratitude, and that, unseasoned colleague, is what it's all about.

Then, again, perhaps this pompous and pious view is itself merely a reminiscence.

Water demand shows decrease

What exceptionally wet and cooler weather can do to water demands in West Texas is reflected in an 8.58 percent drop in October water deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

For the month, total deliveries amounted to 1,130,326,930 gallons, down 106,023,000 gallons from October 1985. Of the total, 965,124,000 gallons were in municipal deliveries, down 9.07 percent, and 165,202,530 gallons were in deliveries to oilfield customers for secondary recovery purposes, down 5.55 percent.

During October Big Spring took 179,759,000 gallons, down 6.08 percent; Midland 345,730,000, up 20.16 percent; Odessa 359,691,300, down 14.77 percent; Snyder 68,587,000 gallons, up .25 of one percent; Stanton 5,137,006, down .04 of one percent.

Part of the difference in overall totals resulted in a sharp decline by San Angelo, which received good supplies in its lakes. A year ago, San Angelo took 97 million gallons, this October only six.

Because some of the municipal demands were at minimum levels, the rate structure resulted in a 14.51 percent increase in revenues in reading $978,548.

Senate questions wisdom of trading arms for hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders of both parties are questioning the wisdom of the Reagan administration's reported efforts to negotiate with Iran to trade arms for the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

Secretary of State George Shultz went almost as far in separate comments Friday, stating that the United States should not negotiate.

The comments came as White House officials, joined by former hostage David Jacobsen, refused to discuss the reports further, stating that revealing more on the situation could endanger Americans still held captive.

Shultz refused to say whether the United States has in fact abandoned its policy of refusing to negotiate with terrorists.

But talking to reporters Friday evening while flying home from a European diplomatic mission, he stated, "The policy of not negotiating — for us is the right policy."

Shultz said he could not comment because of a White House statement that all administration reaction on the issue would have to come from the White House.

"I don't particularly enjoy it," said Shultz, who was returning from talks in Paris with French officials on terrorism and in Vienna with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on arms control. "I like to say what I think."

Senate leaders, meanwhile, said they believe congressional investigations or hearings into the situation are likely, possibly when the 100th Congress convenes under Democratic control in January.

"What I want to make clear is that there be no payoff for terrorists," said Senate Republican Leader Robert Dole of Kansas. He said he believes a congressional investigation is in order "at an appropriate time" to determine if the administration "acted properly or stepped over the line."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, complaining that the White House has so far not offered to brief him on the facts behind news headlines, said that if the news accounts prove accurate, "I question whether it is a good idea to trade arms for hostages."

Most bed-wetting has biological cause

CHICAGO (AP) — A family history of bladder-control problems is more likely to cause youngsters to wet the bed than emotional troubles like family stress, a new study has found.

"Our results show that the reason children wet the bed is not because they're naughty or under stress but because they are children who are predisposed biologically to have this problem," said David Fergusson, lead researcher for the study conducted at Christchurch Clinical School of Medicine in New Zealand.

In an eight-year study of 1,092 New Zealand children, the researchers found that more than half stopped wetting their beds by age 3, Fergusson said in a telephone interview Friday from Christchurch.

The findings were released Friday and published in the November issue of Pediatrics, the journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics, based in suburban Elk Grove Village.

The researchers found that a family history of bed-wetting is the best predictor of whether a child will be late in developing nighttime bladder control.

The study indicated that children who have two close relatives, such as parents, with a history of bed-wetting take 1½ years longer to develop bladder control.

Press should 'back off' story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freed hostage David Jacobsen, welcomed back to the United States at a White House meeting with President Reagan, says reporters should "just be responsible and back off" or risk jeopardizing the release of Americans still held in Lebanon.

Jacobsen said Friday that his happiness at being home is tempered by the fact that his friends remain captive in Lebanon.

"We're in America and I'm free and we're going to get the other men free," Jacobsen said shortly after he stepped onto American soil at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington Friday.

Released in Lebanon last Sunday, Jacobsen flew to the United States from Wiesbaden, West Germany, where he had undergone medical tests and was given a clean bill of health.

Jacobsen, 55, a hostage in Lebanon for 17 months, spent his first day back in the United States visiting briefly with Reagan and attending a private party hosted by friends.

After seeing Reagan, the men appeared together in the Rose Garden where Jacobsen exhorted reporters to be careful about what they write.

"I am worried about what you might say ... might result in the death of somebody that I love. I don't want this on my conscience and I know you don't want it on yours."

Jacobsen bristled when reporters pressed Reagan about reports that the United States has shipped spare military parts to Iran in exchange for freedom of American hostages in Lebanon.

"In the name of God, will you please just be responsible and back off," Jacobsen said. When reporters continued asking Reagan questions, Jacobsen interrupted, visibly irritated by their persistence.

"Unreasonable speculation on your part can endanger their lives," he said, referring to the American hostages. "Simple speculation ... can cause the death" of the men.

Recounts likely in 3 races

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican officials say they expect to win all four House races in which skin-tight margins delayed the formal announcement of winners, even though recounts are likely in three of the elections.

The contested districts are in Indiana, Minnesota, New York and North Carolina, and involve margins of victory ranging from 83 to 511 votes.

"We feel really comfortable that these are ours," Barbara Pardue, spokeswoman for the National Republican Congressional Committee, said Friday of the races.

Pardue said the Republican candidates' leads were holding up through canvassing and the winners would be certified next week.

If the results hold, the House lineup in the 100th Congress will be 258-177 with the Democrats padding their majority by five lawmakers, about half the seats they had hoped to pick up.

Freshman Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., defeated former Democratic Rep. Robin Britt by 83 votes in the closest of the contests. But Britt, citing several examples of what he called election irregularities, has asked for a full recount.

As of Friday, county authorities had not granted his request. If they refuse it, he could appeal to Wake County Superior Court and ultimately to the House.

Pardue said Coble would be certified the winner early next week.

In Indiana, Democrat Thomas W. Ward on Friday asked the secretary of state to impound all voting machines and voting records from his race against four-term GOP Rep. John Hiler.

From Vietnam...

Road back said long, difficult

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Hank Samples says it took him 10 years to return from Vietnam and says he would never have made it if it hadn't been for local veterans groups.

The road back included stints in an Army jail in Vietnam, drug and alcohol abuse, two failed marriages and a brush with suicide, he said.

"I got heavy into drugs and booze," he said. "I couldn't cope."

Samples is one of the estimated 2,000 Vietnam veterans from throughout the United States camping in McAllister Park here this weekend to celebrate Veterans Day and dedicate a memorial to Vietnam veterans.

Samples said he did two tours in Vietnam, the first in combat, the second in a rear area unit.

"I stayed straight in the 11th Armored Cavalry," he said. "It was George Patton's son's old unit and (it) saw some of the heaviest combat in the war," Samples recalled. "I didn't touch anything there, but later I moved to a rear area unit and couldn't put up with the 'Mickey Mouse' nonsense. I started drinking and doping heavy."

Sample said he used nerve gas antitode syringes issued to all the troops to shoot heroin and used marijuana.

Because there was no Vietnamese law against drugs until late 1971, he said, a gram of 96 percent pure heroin cost $2 and rolled marijuana cigarettes were available from street vendors.

"I got high and got in trouble," Samples told the San Antonio Light. "I got thrown in Long Binh Jail after twice going through the Army's drug rehabilitation course and flunking."

His troubles had just begun, however, when he returned home and suffered the "coming home syndrome," including alienation from society, a need to be alone and an unwanted feeling.

He was never wounded in the war, but was hit by a train nine months after he returned to the United States. He said he then started drinking heavily and began shooting amphetamines and using heroin.

Archaeological find may be subject of Pilgrim writings

BOSTON (AP) — The discovery of an Indian settlement estimated to be 6,000-years-old may result in clues to what caused the decimation of tribal society on the eve of the Pilgrims' arrival in 1620, archaeologists say.

The 5.5-acre site, less than a mile from the original Plymouth Colony, appears to have been inhabited off and on from about 4000 B.C. to 1600 A.D., said state archaeologist Brona Simon.

The site contains the remains of the first 16th century Indian village found in Massachusetts, she said Friday. Previously, only hunting campsites from that era had been uncovered.

Myles Standish and the other Plymouth settlers "found a lot of abandoned villages, ghost towns if you would, and they wrote about them ... but it really wasn't very descriptive," Ms. Simon said.

She hopes the well-preserved tools and other artifacts from the village will help archaeologists and anthropologists learn about Indians of the time, many of whom died or were forced to flee because of diseases carried to the New World by European explorers.

The Indians, isolated from the Old World and its diseases, did not have built-up immunities to illnesses like hepatitis and smallpox, and as a result suffered massive losses and societal upheaval.

"The value of this site for archaeologists and anthropologists is to understand what the population decimation did to the society, what kind of changes the Indians made to pull together," said Ms. Simon. "It's a sad story, but it's an important historical event."

Ms. Simon said the village was abandoned about 1610, a decade before the Pilgrims arrived. The conclusion was reached because no European-made artifacts were discovered.

"If there was contact, there would have been exchange and none of those goods were found," she said.

Barbara Luedtke, an anthropology professor at the University of Massachusetts at Boston, hailed the site as a major find.

"That's the time period we have so little evidence from archaeologically," she said. "We know the Indians were there, we know they were living in big villages because the early settlers said so.

"What I'm especially interested in is it gives us a chance to find out (what the Indians were like) right up to the last minute before the Europeans arrived."

Ms. Simon said 6,000 year-old artifacts hopefully will give researchers a glimpse of how the Indians dealt with the rising sea level caused by melting glaciers. But the period just before the Pilgrims' arrival is the most interesting, researchers said.

Calcium from a large number of seashells discarded in the area neutralized acid in the soil and helped preserve the artifacts, researchers said.

Among the finds were a barbed-bone fishing implement, bone arrow points, chipped-stone spear points, knives and arrowheads, pottery shards and soapstone tools.

Handwriting sample given

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI says Lyndon LaRouche provided it with samples of his handwriting, which sources say is wanted by investigators sifting through papers seized in a raid on the political extremist's Virginia headquarters.

Law enforcement sources said Friday that the treasurer of LaRouche's 1984 presidential campaign, Edward Spannaus, has been subpoenaed in connection with the probe.

FBI special agent Jim Mull in Alexandria, Va., said Friday that LaRouche "did come down today to have handwriting exemplars taken."

He declined to discuss why the handwriting specimens were sought. But sources said investigators wanted examples for analysis and comparison to internal memorandums and notes that are among more than 400 cartons of documents seized when authorities raided LaRouche's Leesburg, Va., headquarters on Oct. 6.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said at least some of the documents in which comparisons are sought involve what could be viewed as discussions of ways to avoid taxes.

Spannaus, a top LaRouche aide and treasurer of The LaRouche Committee, was named in a subpoena to appear before a grand jury in Boston, sources said. Sources said handwriting samples are also sought from him. Also, two to three others close to LaRouche have been subpoenaed, they said.

Mull declined to comment on subpoenas.

LaRouche spokeswoman Dana Scanlon declined comment, saying she had no knowledge of either the subpoenas or the handwriting samples.

A grand jury in Boston last month indicted 10 other LaRouche followers in a 117-count indictment alleging fraud and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

The raid in Leesburg was conducted by FBI, Internal Revenue Service and Secret Service agents as well as state and county law officers, acting on state and federal search warrants.

Sources said that a federal grand jury has been empaneled in Alexandria, Va., to join in the investigation of LaRouche and his organization. The grand jury has not yet met, but is expected to do so soon and to issue subpoenas.

Federal prosecutors have provided a glimpse of the evidence seized in the raid, including personal notes which prosecutors presented as evidence of a conspiracy to impede the grand jury probe.

In another development, authorities said Paul N. Goldstein, a top LaRouche aide indicted on Oct. 6, was being taken to the Loudoun County, Va., jail in Leesburg Friday evening where he was to remain in custody until at least next week. Under terms of a detention arrangement established Thursday by a federal judge in Boston, Goldstein is to spend the night in jail but will be free to leave for 12 hours a day to work.

As Steers sew up share of title...

SHS Tigers fall but don't go down easily

Paul Decker's 22-yard run with 1:56 to play insured the Big Spring Steers of a hard-fought victory over the determined Ragin' Tigers in a penalty-plagued District 2-4A ballgame here Friday night, 27-17.

The victory wrapped up at least a share of the district championship for the Steers, who dropped down to Class 4A ball this season. Big Spring, 7-0 in loop action and 8-1 overall, can sew up the title with a win over Andrews next week.

Credit the Ragin' Tigers for giving the Steers all they could handle. Snyder had pulled within four points with 3:53 to play in the game, but was unsuccessful on an on-side kick attempt that gave the Steers the ball at midfield.

Big Spring responded with a 50-yard march that sprung Decker for the win-clinching touchdown. Snyder came back on a desparation drive and reached the Big Spring 20 before quarterback Roland Romo was intercepted with 10 seconds left in the contest.

The Ragin' Tigers, 2-7 on the season, wind up the 1986 campaign at Lamesa next Friday.

Big Spring took a 7-3 lead into halftime, but had to dodge a missed field goal to do it. Early third quarter action proved to be a stalemate, although Snyder took the kickoff and marched 64 yards to the Big Spring 10 before the drive went awry. Key plays included a 17-yard pass from Romo to Troy Burton, which erased a holding penalty, and a 10-yard run by an injury-hampered Michael Riggins.

The Steers managed to stop the drive, however, when Brian Mayfield knocked away a pass in the end zone on a third down and seven situation. Townsend tried a 27-yard field goal - his third attempt of the night - but it was wide right.

Big Spring answered the drive with one of its own. A 33-yard run by Decker made the march work, and the Steers were aided by a pass interference call which put the ball at the Snyder 14.

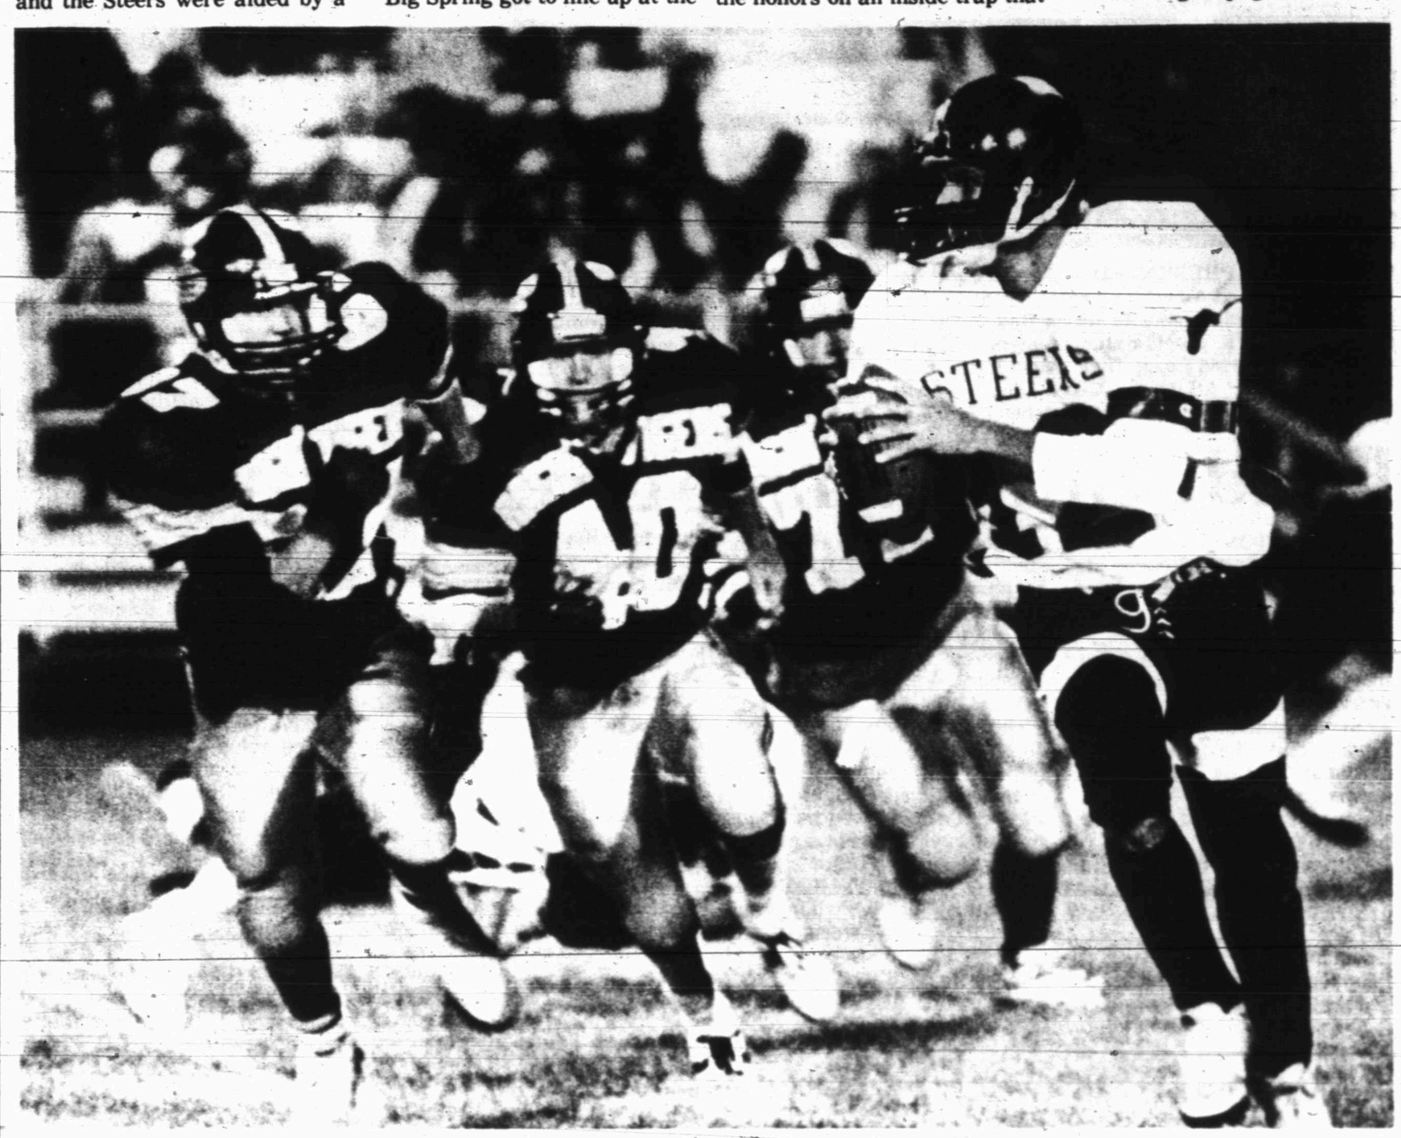

Another five-yard penalty against the Tigers left the ball at the 9, and Mathews took the pitchout at the 3-yard line three plays later to score. John Olsen's PAT kick put the visitors ahead 14-3.

Big Spring got to line up at the Snyder 45 after a personal foul penalty was assessed, and the Steers used the opportunity to try an onside kick. The plan backfired when the ball failed to go 10 yards and Snyder took over at its own 39.

It took just two plays for the Tigers to score. Vyron Clay did the honors on an inside trap that went for 60 yards. Snyder elected to go for two on the conversion, and got it when Scott Lanier took a pitch wide left and raced into the end zone.

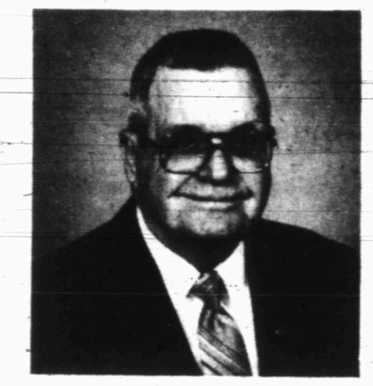

Snyder stopped the Steers' next possession and took over at its own 6-yard line. A 13-yard pass from Romo to Steven Mack mov-

IN PURSUIT – Troy Menix, Cotton Merritt and Henry Treat bear down on Big Spring quarterback Paul Decker during third-quarter action of Friday's District 2-4A ballgame between the Ragin' Tigers and Steers. Snyder was a 16-point underdog in the game but trailed only 21-17 with less than three minutes to play. A 22-yard TD run by Decker added insurance, however, and accounted for the 27-17 final score. Wellman ends Coyote hopes to make the playoffs, 44-41

WELLMAN -- Borden County's Coyotes fell three points short of a possible playoff berth as they fell to Wellman here Friday night, 44-41, in a District 4-1A West Zone ballgame.

"I was real pleased with our effort. The boys wanted to win and they played well enough to win," said Coach Joe Bond, whose Coyotes end the season at 6-3 overall and 4-2 in zone play. "I felt like there were some key calls in the fourth quarter that stopped our drive."

Borden pulled within three points, 44-41, when Shannon Bond hit Mickey Burkett on a 20-yard touchdown pass with 3:36 to go in the game. The point-after came on a a pass from Bond to John Stephens.

The Coyotes got the ball back moments later as Harold Barnes recovered a Wildcat fumble at the Wellman 33-yard line. It appeared Borden had the go-ahead touchdown when Bond connected with Michael Murphy on a pass to the end zone. The play was called back when officials flagged the Coyotes for holding.

Borden overcame the penalty and pushed to the Wellman 19, but was flagged again for another 15-yard holding penalty. The threat ended as Bond was sacked on a fourth down play.

Bond hit his receivers on 13 of 19 tries for 228 yards. Brice Key had 126 of the yards on five catches while Rockie Harbor got 64 yards and a touchdown on three receptions.

Key also ran for 85 yards and Harber for 64. Harber had touchdown runs of 1 and 4 yards.

Wellman was led by Jay Rowden, who ran for 242 yards on 27 carries.

The victory earned the Wildcats the West Zone championship and a playoff berth against the East Zone runnerup, either Trent or Ira. Loop is the runnerup and will face East Zone champion Jayton in the first round of the playoffs.

'RAGIN TIGERS

ed the ball out from deep territory and gained a first down. An alert Big Spring defensive end, Deeg Young, made a key play for the Steers at that point, however. Snyder tried a pitchout to Lanier and Young was on top of the action, meeting Lanier just as the ball arrived. Lanier couldn't control the pitch and Dickie Kelley recovered for the Steers at the Snyder 12-yard line.

A couple of illegal motion penalties pushed Big Spring back to the 22, but the Steers were able to convert when Decker hit Mathews under the outstretched arms of Snyder linebacker Troy Menix for the touchdown. Olsen's kick was good, and the Steers led 21-11.

The action wasn't over yet, however as The Rage refused to stay down. Snyder got the ball back with 4:32 left in the game and put Big Spring's undefeated 2-4A record in jepoardy when Romo found Mack open over the middle for a 41-yard pass to the 1-yard line. Lanier slammed over the left side from there, giving the game a 21-17 look with 3:53 to play. The Tigers went for two on the conversion, but Mike Cahill managed to pull Brad Gartman down short of the goal line.

Snyder needed to strike again quickly and attempted an onside kick. Cedric Banks recovered Shawn Randolph's bouncing boot, though, and Big Spring had the ball at midfield. Some good running by Mathews and Harlin pushed the ball to the Snyder 22 and Decker scored from there with 1:56 left.

"He (Decker) dealt the hand. He dealt the offense. He did a heck of a job," said Snyder Coach Dennis Tomlin after the game. "He was probably the difference in the ballgame."

Mathews led all ballcarriers with 122 yards on 21 carries but Decker managed 59 on just five, and had 54 yards passing.

Coach Tomlin obviously was disappointed with the loss, but was proud of the Tigers' effort.

"The kids battled hard to the end. They played with a great amount of intensity. They wanted to show the fans that last week (a 43-6 loss to Sweetwater) wasn't characteristic of us," said Tomlin. "They made a great effort."

The first half opened with a kickoff return and a penalty - all on the same play. The flag negated an 85-yard touchdown return by Big Spring.

Neither team scored on either of their first two possessions but the Tigers clearly ruled the field. Snyder's first effort went from its 19 to the 48 before a blitz by Young forced an incomplete pass and the Tigers had to punt. On the hosts second try, they marched from the Steer 42 to the 20. A Townsend field goal attempt from 37 yards out sailed wide left - his first miss in nine tries this season.

Townsend was able to redeem himself minutes later. After holding the Steers to another punt, Snyder moved from the Big Spring 34 to the 6-yard line. The visitor's defense buckled up from there, and held. In came Townsend again and his effort was down the middle from 23 yards out. Snyder led 3-0 with 5:46 to play in the half.

The field goal seemed to awaken the Steers, however. They took over at their 32 after the kickoff and marched 68 yards in seven plays. A 13-yard pass from Decker to Chad Walsh kept the drive going. Two plays later, Mathews broke up the middle on a 35-yard jaunt that ended in the Tiger end zone. Olsen kicked the PAT with 3:11 left.

Big Spring got the ball back and tried to tally again through the airways. Snyder kept the pressure on Decker - recording one sack along the way - and the Steers were at midfield when the gun sounded.

Although they lost the ballgame, the Ragin' Tigers won the statistical battle, outrushing the Steers 229 to 219 and outpassing them 98 yards to 54.

Clay led the Tigers with 79 yards rushing while Jeff Rose carried nine times for 37 yards and Riggins came off the bench for 32 yards on five carries.

Tomlin said he would have liked to have used Riggins - his leading rusher - more, but decided not to.

"He was getting sore and the other tailbacks, Jeff Rose and John Pena, were running the ball well," said Tomlin. "Plus, we wanted him to be able to play, if he can, in the final game next week."

Riggins is nursing a cracked bone in his left foot, which kept him out of last week's game with Sweetwater.

Big Spring was without one of its top running backs, Charles White.

Steers are playoff bound; Sweetwater on the way, too

Big Spring's 27-17 victory over Snyder gave the 2-4A newcomers no less than a share of the district championship Friday night.

The Steers are 7-0 in district play, with only Andrews left on the regular season schedule.

Meanwhile, Sweetwater clinched the other 2-4A playoff spot with a convincing 34-0 win over Andrews. Sweetwater improves to 6-1 in loop play and concludes the regular season by hosting San Angelo Lake View next Friday.

Monahans had its playoff hopes dashed by the two victories. The Loboes made Lamesa pay as they pounded the Golden Tors 42-7. Monahans could tie Sweetwater should the Mustangs lose next week, but since Sweetwater defeated the Loboes earlier this season, the Mustangs would get the playoff nod.

In Friday's other game, Pecos wound up its season with a 7-3 record by defeating Fort Stockton, 24-20.

Cats scrimmage Hermleigh

Snyder JV basketball girls scrimmaged Hermleigh varsity here Thursday and Cat coach Vicki Nelms was pleased with the action.

"I thought the girls looked real good for their first scrimmage," said the coach. "We still have a lot to work on, though."

The teams played four regulation quarters and one other four-minute quarter. Hermleigh won three of the periods; Snyder two.

Scoring for the Cats were Evette Housden, 8; Shelly Tomlin, 7; Michelle Candanoza, 6; Dana Fendon and Beth Alvis, 5 each; and Teena Braziel, Christie Necessary, Mande Henry, Shannon Warren and Melissa Williams, 2 each. Jodie Dunk and Sandi Glaves also played.

The girls open the season here, Nov. 18, against Abilene Wylie.

In 1890, the Preakness Stakes and Belmont Stakes were run on the same day at Morris Park in New York. They now form two-thirds of Racing's Triple Crown.

RETURN -- Dennis Martinez is caught from behind as he returns a punt during Friday's ballgame between the Snyder Ragin' Tigers and the Big Spring Steers. Snyder fought well in the ballgame, which was in doubt until the final two minutes. Big Spring's 27-17 victory gave the Steers at least a share of the 2-4A championship crown and a playoff berth. Changes anticipated in Texas operations, but questions remain

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Goodyear officials say Texas operations will be affected by a restructuring and stock buyback program. The question is: How much?

The giant tire and rubber company last week announced moves that company officials and analysts said were calculated to raise Goodyear's stock price and fight off a potential hostile takeover from Sir James Goldsmith, a British-French financier.

Initial restructuring moves will be felt most severely in the Midwest.

Goodyear says it employs more than 4,200 employees in Texas, with an annual payroll of $87 million. The company has approximately $500 million invested in its Texas operations, more than any other state outside its Ohio home base.

Goodyear's stock closed Friday on the New York Stock Exchanged at $48, unchanged, on a volume of 1.6 million shares traded. Goldsmith has said he is willing to pay $49 a share.

Early last week, Goodyear announced the possible sale of Celeron Corp., a California-based energy subsidiary that wants to build a cross-Texas pipeline. Thursday, the corporation said it would consider selling off its Goodyear Aerospace subsidiary in Akron, Ohio, and its Motor Wheel Corp. of Lansing, Mich.

Further restructuring is expected over the next two weeks. Goodyear Chairman Robert E. Mercer said Thursday in a statement that the moves and "stringent cost reduction programs" are the first steps in an overall restructuring program.

Meanwhile, just before the U.S. District Court in Cleveland closed on Friday, a Goodyear shareholder filed a lawsuit against the anti-takeover effort, seeking a permanent injunction and damages determined by a judge.

Shareholder Robert Cottle, in his lawsuit on behalf of a class identified as other holders of Goodyear stock, alleges Goodyear's directors are acting on behalf of management rather than shareholders.

Company officials last week declined to speculate on the specific effects these programs will have on Texas operations.

"There's a lot of uncertainty now," Robert G. Mercer, Houston spokesman for Goodyear, told the Beaumont Enterprise. "But whatever happens, it's clear that the company is going to be changed by all this. The Texas operations will be a part of that. We just don't know much right now."

Goodyear's Beaumont chemical plant employs more than 600 people with an annual payroll of $21 million. The plant makes various types of synthetic rubber. Tom Bondurant, Goodyear-Beaumont spokesman said Thursday that the company's chemical sector is "doing great," but executives are unsure whether the sector will be untouched by restructuring.

Other Texas locations, products and employees include: Houston chemical plant, synthetic rubber, 868 employees; Bayport chemical plant, hydroquinone, a substance used in rubber compounding, 64 employees; Houston district sale force, staff of 25 and 31 company-owned service stores employing 255 people; Spring airship base, home of blimp America, 27 employees.

Also: Kelly-Springfield subsidiary plant in Tyler, radial tires, 1,266 employees; Long Mile Rubber Co. subsidiary in Dallas, retread rubber, 700 employees.

Celeron Corp. is building a 1,700 mile crude oil pipeline from California to Webster near Houston.

Brownville deputies protect illegal aliens

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Sheriff's deputies have taken to horseback in an effort to stop bandits who strike along the brushy river banks of the Rio Grande, victimizing illegal aliens crossing the river and then scooting back into Mexico with their bounty.

The first arrests have been made by the Cameron County Sheriff's Department as a result of the unusual police detail.

Lt. George Gavito of the sheriff's department said people have been robbed while crossing the river for two or three years. But the problem has gotten worse in the past year, he said.

"More and more people are coming into the country now," Gavito said. "More are coming from Central American countries. And they are coming in with money. They have five, six, seven hundred dollars on them. They have to pay to get to Houston.

"They (the bandits) sit around the levee waiting," Gavito said. "They rob the men and rape the women."

Area cities taxes higher than here

At Colorado City

Rates for all Colorado City's taxing jurisdictions increased over last year to make that city's total tax rate among the highest in the area. City residents can expect to pay almost 61 cents per $100 valuation in city taxes with an additional 88 cents for Colorado City ISD, 39 cents to Mitchell County and almost 26 cents to the hospital district.

Colorado City's combined tax rate equals just over $2.13. A $50,000 home there will cost a Colorado City resident almost $1,068.

At Sweetwater

Although taxing entities in Sweetwater held rates to last year's levels, that city's residents still pay taxes based on a rate over $2.

"We went through (a tax hike) several years ago, and through conservative measures we have been able to hold the tax rate," Nolan County Chief Appraiser Patricia Davis said.

The City of Sweetwater will charge residents 69 cents per $100 valuation. Sweetwater ISD will add an additional 95 cents with Nolan County charging 39 cents.

Using the same $50,000 home as an example, a taxpayer will spend $1,015 for ad valorem taxes.

At Big Spring

Big Spring citizens will see an increase in county and college district taxes this year which will raise monies due on a $50,000 home by nearly $210 over last year.

Although the City of Big Spring and Big Spring ISD will hold to last year's levels — at 68 cents and just over 88 cents respectively — Howard County will rise from 22 cents to 26 cents and Howard College will go to 18 cents, up from 16 cents.

An individual owning a $50,000 house will pay a combined tax bill of almost $1,001. The same property last year generated a tax bite of $971.

At Abilene

Although Taylor County Chief Appraiser Richard Petree noted that taxing entities in that county also exercised conservative spending measures this year, city residents will see an approximate 2 percent rise in their total tax bill.

State mandated indigent health care costs forced the rise from nearly 25 cents to almost 28 cents for Taylor County, Petree said.

Abilene ISD, the City of Abilene, and the West Central Water District will add 84 cents, almost 49 cents and 2 cents respectively.

A $50,000 home within the city limits will generate almost $813 dollars for the four jurisdictions. The same home would have cost the taxpayer over $796 in taxes last year.

At Lamesa

Although the tax rate for Lamesa ISD now stands lower than the rate for the Snyder district — 68½ cents as compared to Snyder's nearly 82 cents — Lamesa's combined tax rate still edged above the local rate. This year, Lamesa's rate will reach over $1.50 per $100 valuation.

A $50,000 home in that city will generate taxes up from almost $783 last year to nearly $803 for 1986.

Group helps adults cope

alcoholism, overeating or drug addiction.

ACOA offers members a self help program of living based on the Twelve Steps used by Alcoholic Anonymous and other organizations. It is a spiritual, rather than religious program with individuals learning to rely on a "higher power" to help them cope with life.

Everyone is welcome and no dues or fees are charged, however, a collection is taken up at each meeting and members pay what they can.

Members of ACOA are guaranteed anonymity, and for this reason the two local founders will be referred to as "S" and "T."

"S," who decided to help found the local ACOA chapter a few weeks ago, grew up with an alcoholic father.

She said she decided to seek help to save her children from the experiences she went through.

At times, she notes, she sees herself repeating her parents mistakes.

She said ACOA breaks the stigma of sitting home alone "trying to keep it a secret." Through the program, she has discovered that other people have the same problems. And often, she says, their's are worse.

She said her experiences have left her with "a hole that is never quite filled up."

She has been married for seven years to a man she describes as a good husband. But, she admits to feeling quilty at times because of this.

"There was a time when I thought all men would act like my father did," she said. Now, she admits, her husband has to sometimes remind her that he is "not her father."

She said she always wanted her parents to be like other parents and for them to go places togther. But it rarely if ever happened.

Instead, she has dim memories at age four of her father being in jail because of his alcoholism and of her asking him, in her innocence, if being in jail was fun.

She remembers brutal fights between her parents, ruined holidays, and the police being called to her home. She also remembers policemen coming to the door and telling them "daddy was in jail again."

She said her father is still an alcoholic even though he has life threatening medical problems.

"He isn't ever going to change," she said. "I have to accept that and try to change myself. I am learning that it is his problem and not mine."

"T" grew up with an overbearing mother and alcoholic grandparents. As an adult, she developed into a compulsive eater.

The real seriousness of her situation "hit home," she said, when some of her children began to experiment with drugs. The realization that her grandchildren might suffer the detrimental effects of compulsive behavior led her to seek help. She found it in ACOA and Overeaters Anonymous.

"She says ACOA helps individals to focus on the problem and then do something about it. Overcoming denial is the first step, and it can be the hardest one to take. She explained that alcoholics and other individuals with compulsive behavior patterns "never admit they have a problem."

"Children of alcoholics or other dysfunctional parents learn how to survive, but they often learn inappropriate behavior. ACOA helps them to deal with this. But first you have to learn why," she said.

People in ACOA learn to give loved ones the right to their own disease. Since you cannot change the person, you must work on changing yourself, she said.

"You learn to function without running from the pain."

more requests during winter months particularly because of the slump in outdoor occupations such as construction," she said.

The food items, to include cheese, butter and rice, are classified as surplus food and are provided locally at no cost to the county.

Some $14,540 in commodities were distributed in October with almost 15 tons expected to be delivered in November.

Local officials must order sufficient quantities three months in advance of actual distribution. "An increase in applicants makes it difficult to know for sure how much to order. I ordered heavy for this month in hopes that some will carry over for December," Smith noted.

Superman statue erected

METROPOLIS, Ill. (AP) — The town that adopted Superman as its favorite son years ago has put a statue of the Man of Steel on the county courthouse lawn.

The statue unveiled Friday joins the community's other reminders of the comic book hero — Superman portraits on its water towers, the street called Lois Lane and the newspaper named the Planet.

The Massac County town is the only known Metropolis — earthly home of the fictional character from planet Krypton — in the United States and officially declared itself Superman's hometown in 1972, Mayor Richard Corzine said.

"Superman has been very good for Metropolis," Corzine said. "He tends to be a pretty good image for us. We have a lot of people drive by the mayor's office and ask where Superman is and where they can get souvenirs."

In the years since the Man of Steel became a native son in this southern Illinois town of 7,200 people overlooking the Ohio River, a museum in his honor opened, and then closed because of financial problems. A plan for a Superman theme park "kind of died before it got off the ground," the mayor said.

"It was bad timing, or maybe it wasn't pushed through fast enough or there weren't enough funds there to keep an interest in it," he said. "I think Superman, too, had a little lull in popularity about the time we were trying to get it going."

MIP charged

Police logged seven misdemeanor arrests Friday night.

Five of those were individuals under 21 charged with being minors in possession. Also noted was one arrest of an adult for public intoxication.

One suspect was also jailed for misdemeanor possession of marijuana in a quantity less than 2 ounces.

Assault said investigated

Police are investigating a report filed Friday of sexual assault involving a 14-year-old girl.

The girl told police she had been assaulted Nov. 1 by a 21-year-old man at a west Snyder residence. No arrest was made in the case Friday.

New Congress has trading partners nervous

NEW YORK (AP) — The Democratic triumph in the elections could lead to stiff restrictions on imports and possibly incite foreign retaliation against American exporters, some U.S. trading partners and domestic manufacturers say.

"I think there was a strong push for trade legislation anyway and there will be some in 1987, but since you've got a Democrat-controlled House and Senate now, the measure's going to be a lot tougher," said Eileen Dougherty, a staff member of the Japan Economic Institute of America, a Washington-based organization financed by the Japanese Foreign Ministry.

"The Democrats are more protectionist, they initiate most of the protectionist bills," said Han Din Imm, spokesman for the New York-based Korea Trade Promotion Center of South Korea, one of the most aggressive exporters to the U.S. market. "Our government officers, manufacturers and exporters are very worried about what will happen in the next couple of years."

In a sharp setback for President Reagan this past week, the Democrats reclaimed the Senate majority they lost in 1980 and now outnumber Republicans 55-45. The Democrats also strengthened their majority in the 435-member House.

Two top Democrats, Rep. Jim Wright and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, both of Texas, said trade would be the most urgent agenda item.

Bentsen is expected to head the Senate Finance Committee, replacing Sen. Bob Dole, a Kansas Republican who is considered an advocate of unrestricted trade. The committee would handle any trade legislation in the Senate.

For Reagan, who barely thwarted congressional attempts to restrict imports this year, the new Democratic strength may mean he will be forced to compromise his free-trade principles in negotiations over any new trade bill.

"We recognize there will be additional members of Congress who will wish for legislation in this area, and we'll have to attempt to reach a reasonable accommodation with them," Clayton K. Yeutter, Reagan's special trade representative, said after the election.

Over the last few years the Democrats have seized on trade as a political issue and have sought to erect barriers to foreign goods.

Museum seeking loan of toys for 'Happening' event

The Scurry County Museum is starting work on its annual Christmas Happening and would welcome the loan of toys for use in a special exhibit to be displayed during December.

Museum decorations this year are based on children's storybook characters and scenes. Volunteers are needed to help make ornaments for the tree as well as to help with other decorations.

Toys to be loaned for the exhibit are to be taken to the museum between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on weekdays so they can be properly identified for return to the owner after the holidays.

The museum, located on the campus of Western Texas College, is currently featuring an exhibit on Texas ranch women on loan from the Institute of Texas culture and engravings by Linda Miller of San Patricio, N. M., a former Snyder resident.

According to Terry Green, IRA Chief of Taxpayer Service, the IRS has already made at least two attempts to reach these taxpayers.

Persons from Snyder on the list include Clifford L. Johnson, Tony E. & Beverly A. Cobb, Cintia Gonzales, Cecil Peyton Baize, Juan & Inez Rodriguez.

Those whose names are on the above list are asked to call the IRS at (214) 742-2440 in Dallas (817) 263-9229 in Fort Worth, or 1-800-424-1040 elsewhere in Texas between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

Claiming that life on the road is "hectic but fun," two local civic club leaders have carried their sense of service beyond county borders this year to serve their organizations districtwide.

Max von Roeder of northwest Snyder and Troy Williamson of 2905 36th St. tasted a bit of political fervor to run for their respective offices. Now, they experience the demands and enjoyment their responsibilities require.

Manager and president of Von Roeder Seed Farms Inc. and a member of the Snyder Lions Club since 1975, von Roeder became governor of District 2-T2 in July. He is one of 15 governors elected to each of Texas' districts.

His territory covers an area west to the New Mexico state line, east to Roby, north to Paducah and south to Plainview and Muleshoe. In the 24 counties that comprise his district, he leads 68 clubs with some 2,500 members.

Prior to his election as governor, von Roeder served in several local and district capacities. "In order to be elected governor, you must be nominated by your club and must have served as club president and in a zone chairmanship," he explained.

In the local unit, he served as director for two years, as chairman for various projects and as vice president. He became president for the 1979-80 club year.

A zone chairman for 1981-82, he became deputy district governor in 1982. He served a stint as the group's lieutenant governor last year before winning the election for his current post.

Owner of Williamson Auto Supply and a 12-year Kiwanian with perfect attendence, Williamson secured the lieutenant governor's spot in the organization's Division 22 of the Texas-Oklahoma District in March. He was installed during the district's convention in Tulsa last August. Although he technically took office Oct. 1, he noted, "A lot of our work actually begins before Oct. 1."

Some of the early chores included two training sessions — a two-day stint in May and three or four additional days in August.

As lieutenant governor, he will lead 12 clubs spread over an area from Alpine, then south of Snyder to include Colorado City, Big Spring and Midland-Odessa and west as far as the El Paso County line.

Locally, he has served on the board of directors several times and has fulfilled duties as vice president. He earned the Distinguished President's Award as president during the 1983-84 club year.

Prior to becoming lieutenant governor, he served as lieutenant governor-elect last year. "That gets you prepared through training and the time helps you adjust your business schedule for the time demands (of the lieutenant governorship)," he added.

Duties for each office call for a great deal of travel. Both men noted that visiting the clubs in their areas takes the bulk of their time.

As a Kiwanis lieutenant governor, Williamson must attend four regular meetings of each of his 12 clubs during the year. He must also visit at least one board session for each unit as well.

"I must install officers in every club in the division," he said. "Since all of the installations take place between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15, I spent about 150 hours through that month. Then we settle down to visits and reports, so I probably average about 40 hours (of club related work) per month for the rest of the term. Most of that time is spent at night."

During one visit to each club, Williamson must also serve as the program's featured speaker.

As Lion's governor, von Roeder must "give talks" to each of the 63 units he leads. Early in his term, he set a hectic pace and has already reached 54 clubs. "In the first few months I have done the visits in order to get as much in before the cotton harvest was supposed to begin. Since we are going to have very little cotton, I'm not sure what I'll do with the rest of the term," he laughed.

Von Roeder often plans his schedule to combine trips and reduce travel time. "I have worked it as often as possible to do a breakfast club, a lunch club and an evening club in the same city in one day," he added.

Frequently, their travels also involve their wives. Husband and wife affairs, such as Kiwanis installation ceremonies, will find Anne von Roeder and Barbara Williamson supporting their husbands' roles.

The men agree that although the pace required can sometimes bite into business duties, they like the opportunity to meet their counterparts in other cities. "I really do enjoy the traveling. The new friends that you meet around the district, the state and the world makes it worth it," von Roeder noted.

Because the local club can amass points in the District Governor's annual contest when members attend a function hosted by another unit, he usually takes at least four locals with him. C.A. McCown coordinates those who will accompany him and attends every out-of-town visit von Roeder makes. "He's heard it so many times, I think he could get up and give them my speech himself," von Roeder said.

Another important aspect of each man's position is emphasizing the goals promoted at all organizational levels.

"In Texas, our most notable project is the camp for children in Kerrville. Owned by Lions, it provides schooling and camping for physically handicapped children. Most of the camping is done in the summer, but it also provides special schools all year around," von Roeder explained.

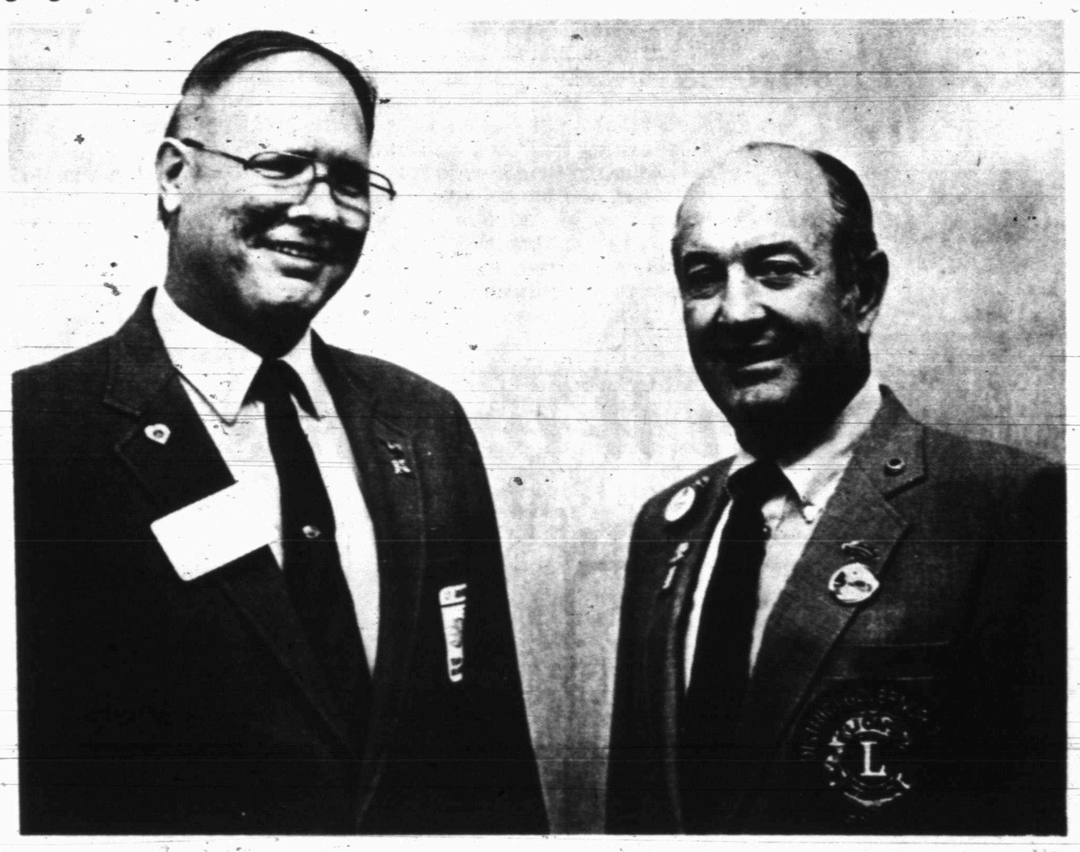

Lions also promote and help raise funds for Texas Boys Ranch, three campuses of Girls Town USA, the Texas Council for War on Drugs and Lions Youth Exchange Program.

The organization is also noted for its support of eye research, organ transplants and seeing eye dogs for individuals.

Each year, each Lions district is paired with another district from around the world. The "twins" offer support for one another and the governors correspond throughout the club year. "We have been twinned with District 352 — Egypt," von Roeder said as he pointed to the Egyptian banner decorating one office wall. "I'm hoping that the governor from Egypt will be able to come visit our district. He usually comes to the United States two or three times each year on business. He has invited me there, but I don't have any plans to go at this point."

Williamson emphasizes Kiwanis plans through his speeches and through periodic newsletters (an idea not utilized by his predecessors). "We encourage clubs to help their communities in the areas of youth and the aged specifically. Our major emphasis for the year is

'Miracle Makers' and on an international level we are helping in children's hospitals and helping with the handicapped. We give time and we raise money."

He explained that annually "Bible reading day" is set aside in November. "Each district is assigned a specific section and each division is given a section within that section. We host the day to promote the spiritual emphasis that is needed just for living," he said.

A Chamber of Commerce Gold Coater, Williamson is serving his third year as a Snyder city councilman. In that capacity, he has also been elected second vice president of Region III of the Texas Municipal League for 1987.

In addition, he served on the chamber of commerce board of directors from 1981-1984 and as chairman of the chamber's business development committee in 1985. He served on the organizing committee for the chamber's Century II Leadership Class and is an alumnus of the first class. A deacon at Colonial Hill Baptist Church, he also serves as a member of the financial advisory committee for the Martha Ann Woman's Club.

He noted he joined Kiwanis "because of what they do. Kiwanis is an organization of community-minded people whose efforts go into making a community a better place to live. Funds raised go into projects to help the local community. None goes outside the community.

"One of the things that's very special to me is that I have never attended a meeting that doesn't begin with a prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance. I think those are two things that are very important as a Christian and an American."

A member of the Snyder Jaycees for 10 years, von Roeder served 13 years on the Snyder ISD Board — two terms as president.

Currently a member of the board of directors for Snyder National Bank, he was president of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce in 1970 and is now a director. He also served as president of the Scurry County Fair Association for seven of the 13 years he has participated in association activities.

He likes the individual members and "just wanted to be a part of the Lion's organization. Our slogan for the year is 'Bring Quality to Life.' So as I make visits, I challenge them to bring quality to the lives of individuals in their communities who are less fortunate by using the programs available."

Tindol, Baze...

Couple exchanges nuptial promises

Kimberly Denise Tindol and James Darvin Baze Jr. of Ira were united in marriage Aug. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in Calvary Baptist Church. June Strickland of Forsans, formerly of Ira Church of God, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Kenneth Hunter of Hermleigh and Gloria Hunter of Snyder. Parents of the groom are Darvin and Nelda Baze of Ira.

The ceremony was performed before a 14-branch candelabra decorated with greenery and flanked by seven-light candelabras. Pew markers were red satin circles decorated with black lace fans and small ivory mums.

Tracey Botts, the bride's cousin, and Darren Hughes of Ira were candlelighters.

"There Is Love" was sung by Glenda Botts, the bride's aunt, as the mothers entered. The bridesmaids entered to "Theme from Ice Castles" performed by pianist Phillip Hagar. Jeff McGuire and Glenda Botts sang "Precious Love" and "Our Love." Richard Long of Ira sang his original engagment song during the lighting of the memory candle. He also sang "'Til I Loved You."

The bride was given in marriage by her children, Joe Dan Davenport and Tasura (Tas) Tindol. Tasura preceeded the bride in a satin-covered baby carriage flanked by her brother Joe Dan and Trey Roemisch. The boys were attired in black tuxedos with ivory shirts accented by red cummerbunds.

Tasura was attired in a satin and lace ivory dress with matching bonnet by Martha's Miniatures. The gown was accented by a large red satin bow, red pantaloons and red leather shoes. Laura Baze, sister of the groom, pushed the carriage and was attired in a red satin dress with puffed sleeves gathered at the elbow; a black sash accented the waist. A red silk flower adorned her hair.

The bride chose a Lizette gown designed in deep ivory satin. Embroidered in beaded appliques and trimmed in crystal pleating, the off-the-shoulder bodice was heavily appliqued and accented with Alencon lace. The sleeves were in leg-of-mutton styling ending in a point at the wrist.

Matron of honor was Terri Sue Brock; Kim Fritz served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Linda Reeves of Anton, cousin of the bride; Tammy Davis, the bride's sister; and Katrina Baze of Ira, the groom's sister. Their tea-length dresses were designed in red satin with puff sleeves gathered at the elbow and accented with black satin ribbons at the waist. They wore black accessories. Their silk bouquets were composed of ivory stephanotis and red peonies with satin streamers.

Jennifer Botts of Austin, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl and was dressed to match the bridesmaids.

Carl Martain Jr., cousin of the bride, was ring bearer. He wore a black tuxedo with ivory shirt and black bow tie accented by a red cummerbund and boutonneire.

Jay Clark of Ira served as best man. Groomsmen were Ward Baze of Ira, brother of the groom; Donnie Davis of Ira, brother of the bride; Doug Roberts and Scott Long of Robert Lee. Ushers were Joey and Jeff Chapa of Potete, cousins of the groom. The attendants wore black tuxedos with ivory shirts, black bow ties, and red cummberbunds and boutonneires.

The bride's aunt, Donna Parrish, registered guests.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. The bride's table was covered in red overlayed in ivory lace. The punch was served in a cut crystal bowl. Bakery mints shaped in red hearts and ivory bells were served with assorted nuts in silver dishes.

The wedding cake was three-layered with two stair cases extending from either side containing seven candles each and supported by two smaller cakes. A five-branch silver candelabra and the bride's bouquet adorned the table.

Servers were Kay Roemisch of Ira and Janet Botts of Westbrook, aunts of the bride; and Kathy Swan of Anton, cousin of the bride.

The groom's table was covered in brown with ivory lace overlay. His chocolate cake was in the shape of a horseshoe and decorated in chocolate icing. A gold heart-shaped frame held pictures of the bride and groom at ages two and one. A ceramic boot containing wild flowers and thistles decorated the table.

Servers at the groom's table were Latricia Jenkins of Clyde and Kathy Johnston, cousins of the groom.

The bride is employed by Universal Systems in Snyder. The groom attended Texas Tech University and is now employed by L-A Well Service in Ira where the couple is making their home.

More women doctors

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The number of women physicians has increased by more than 20 percent since 1980 while the total number of physicians has risen only nine percent, reports Family Practice News.

According to the medical journal, the number and percentage of women physicians is expected to continue to grow until the end of the century, with women accounting for 21 percent of all physicians by the year 2000.

The journal noted that enrollment of women in medical schools increased from 11 percent in 1971-72 to about 31 percent in 1983-84.

In 1984-85, total enrollments in medical schools declined slightly for the first time in 37 years, but despite the slowdown in growth, the supply of physicians is at the highest level in history — with the growth rate of physicians more than double to that for the general population.

INVEST NOW FOR HOME ENERGY SAVINGS

An investment in energy-saving features can help you save money now and make money when you sell your home.

The rising price of energy is a great concern to most homeowners. Even inexpensive energy-saving steps, such as caulking around windows and doors will help lower energy bills.

Major expenditures for more efficient heating and cooling systems or additional insulation will save even more, may actually help you make money in the future.

It typically takes several years of reduced energy bills before you reach the "payback" point on big energy investments. But you may more than recover the investment because energy saving features can increase the resale value of your home.

For maximum home energy efficiency:

—Find [illegible] leaks around windows, [illegible], foundations, electrical outlets, exhaust fans and attic openings.

—Install storm windows and doors to reduce heat loss and/or heat gain, especially in areas of north Texas.

—Provide summer shade for south and west windows.

—Adjust the temperature setting by 5 degrees on heating and air conditioning systems and compensate for comfort with the clothing you wear.

—Insulate ceilings, exterior walls, under floors, heat ducts and hot water pipes.

—Use exhaust fans effectively to control heat and excess moisture at the source.

—Use energy powered home appliances efficiently.

—Use lighting efficiently by lighting only those areas that are in use and selecting energy efficient bulbs, tubes and fixtures when replacements are made.

There are many ways to conserve home energy without sacrificing your level of living. Some of them involve spending money, but the long-range benefits should pay for the cost.

Homeowners who want to know more about investing in home energy conservation can obtain a free copy of a booklet entitled "Your Home Energy Portfolio" by writing the Alliance to Save Energy, P.O. Box 57200, Washington, D.C. 20037.

MANAGE HABITAT FOR QUAIL

Bobwhite quail usually have adequate native food supplies during the spring and summer months. During this time ripening seeds, juicy insects and tender green vegetation provide excellent food for adult and young quail. With the coming of frost, however, their food supply begins to diminish. During late fall and winter, other birds and small animals compete for the available forage. The quality of the remaining feed drops as seeds become weathered and vegetation coarse. The period from late winter when seeds become scarce until vegetation greens up in early spring is critical for survival of quail brood stock.

Habitat management to provide food plots will help quail through this winter period in addition to furnishing a seed source year-round. The first step in food development is to identify what foods are presently available to quail in your area. A quick and positive method is to identify the contents taken from quail crops during the hunting season. Quail will eat seeds from many plant species but usually only a few species make up the bulk of the quail's diet. Quail prefer smooth, hard seeds of grasses such as vine mesquite, sand dropseed, alkali – sacaton, plains bristlegrass, and forbs such as ragweed, croten or doveweed, carelessweed, bundleflower, snow-on-the-mountain and pricklepoppy.

The most dependable food development is to increase native plants rather than introducing new ones. Discing to a 4-inch depth will reduce grass competition and give forbs a jump in growth. A benefit of native weed or forb seeds is their high resistance to deterioration. This benefit is debatable by many; I suppose it depends if you're growing them for quail food or trying to keep them out of your garden or cropland. Many weed seeds will remain dormant when buried deep in the soil but germinate when brought near the surface by disturbances like discing. Discing simply allows a quail food crop that is already planted to sprout and grow.

Disc in a pattern about 20 feet wide within ¼ mile of good cover. The length is variable but several small plots are better than one large one. Next year plow a new strip adjacent to the first. Most plots will remain healthy for two years and having two strips will provide a steady supply of seeds by plowing each strip every other year.

If food is the limiting factor on your ranch, you should see an increase in quail populations a couple of years after discing the strips. If food is not a limiting factor and your quail population is still low, look at correcting a shortage of escape or nesting cover to increase quail numbers. Quail are no different from other wildlife species in that they need the basic necessities of life: food, shelter and water.

Today's deal is a bridge curiosity, since perfect defense seemingly requires East to have second sight. Because East and West were using weak no-trump openings (12-14 points), East opened the bidding with one club. After South had jumped to five diamonds, East doubled. This was a little rash, since South was apparently bidding to make his contract and could easily have 11 tricks in the diamond suit and some black-suit high cards.

On the opening lead of the club seven, declarer played the eight from dummy. East put up the jack and South won with the ace. Next came the A-K of diamonds with the queen dropping from West. Declarer's diamond deuce was an entry to dummy's six-spot, and the lead of the club 10 enabled declarer to pick up East's queen to score the doubled contract with six diamond tricks, four club tricks and the spade ace. So what makes the hand a curiosity?

East should assume that declarer has an entry to dummy in the diamond suit. If East decides that his partner's club seven is a singleton, he should play low on the opening lead. Although dummy's eight of clubs will win the trick, declarer cannot lead a club from dummy immediately or West will ruff. If South draws trumps and returns to dummy to lead a club, East can then split his honors and eventually come to a club trick. If West's original holding is the 7-3 of clubs, it will not matter that East fails to cover the eight of clubs. Only if West is leading from K-9-7 will East have to wipe egg from his face when he ducks.

Vows exchanged in evening ceremony

Kimberly Diane Byrom became the bride of Jefferey Allen Clement on Oct. 11 in Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Rev. Miller Robinson officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. D.P. Byrom of Snyder. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Clement of Snyder and Jim and Wanda Cooper of Abilene.

The couple exchanged vows before an altar highlighted by two candelabra and an arrangement of fall flowers. Sam Byrom, cousin of the bride, served as candle lighter.

Carla Thompson offered organ selections before and after the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a taffeta gown lined with lace. The fitted bodice was covered with lace. Full lace sleeves gathered at the elbows with rows of ribbon. Tiers of lace cascading from the waist and a border created by rows of lace and ribbon adorned the train.

The veil, which fell just below her waist, was attached to a hat covered in lace matching her gown.

She carried a selection of fall flowers in rust, tan and burnt orange entwined with white ribbon. White lace and ribbon adorned with love knots highlighted the bouquet.

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore a gold heart necklace borrowed from her aunt. Her gown served as something new with her garter as something blue and her mother's studded earrings as something old.

Theresa Hildreth of Snyder served as maid of honor with Ann Blackmon of Dallas and Joyce Feist of Snyder as bridesmaids. The attendants wore off-the-shoulder, black taffeta dresses.

The groom chose a gray suit, white shirt and black tie.

Best man David Crane of Canyon and groomsmen Don Boone and Mike Byrom, brother of the bride, wore dark suits. Gary Kubena and Sam Byrom were ushers.

Nena Forbes and Cathy Elam served at the bride's table and Cathy Keith of Abilene, the groom's sister, served at the groom's table during the wedding reception.

A Snyder High School graduate, the bride attended Angelo State University and Western Texas College.

The groom is also a Snyder High School graduate and is currently employed by Snyder Motors.

Following a honeymoon trip to Abilene, the couple will reside in Snyder.

Nova Scotia fog blankets the landscape relentlessly

ROGUE'S ROOST, Nova Scotia (AP) — Fog is to the south coast of Nova Scotia as peppers are to Mexican cooking.

It can add spice to the landscape. On a bluebird day it can finger into bays and inlets like a great, white cosmic hand toying with the landscape. That island is noiselessly blanketed from view while its sprucefringed neighbor basks warmly in sunlight.

Or, like peppers, it can overwhelm, ruining your whole day. Or days as it hangs on, dripping relentlessly, like a winter cold. Its clammy persistence at times insults the otherwise warm hospitality of coastal Nova Scotians. A man down the way in Lower West Pubnico passed judgment on it this summer in a nine-word phrase, the last word being "fog," the prior eight unprintable.

He pronounced "fog" as the locals do, as though it rhymed with "vogue." Fogue.

Fog moves up the New England coast like a growing puppy. Along Long Island Sound it yips and yaps and leaves little puddles just to let you know it's around. By Cape Cod it is chewing slippers and chasing cats. By Maine it is a real dog that might go for the postman, but it doesn't take over the household until Nova Scotia where it sleeps on the sofa and jumps up on you with muddy paws.

Basically this is so because the farther north one goes, the colder the water: 70 degrees in summer in Connecticut, 50 by the time you reach this secluded cove near Halifax. The moist, warm air from Dixie, riding the southwesterlies to summer in New England, is shocked into fog as the frigid water condenses its vapor. In winter, when the air is colder, the process reverses, producing fog known as sea smoke, equally blinding.

In summer you might be admiring the bouldered crags and berry thickets of Rogue's Roost one minute. The next you could as well be locked in a steamer trunk. Nova Scotia, with no land to the southwest to hide behind, gets the fog right in the kisser.

A high point for Maine was the year the foghorn on Seguin Island blew 2,734 hours or 113.92 days. A Nova Scotian born near Cape Sable, however, set a record that will never be surpassed. One July it blew its basset hound lament every minute for the entire month.

Carl Sandburg poetized about fog coming in on little cat feet. Sandburg was from Illinois. If he'd been from Nova Scotia, he'd have seen fog come in like a cheetah. The scenery dissolves like a blown TV tube, and you're there, blind, alone with your thoughts.

The assortment of fog is inexhaustible: fog straight, fog with drizzle, fog with rain, patchy fog, cottony fog, gray fog and fog as black as the inside of a seaboot. There is upperiscope fog, such as the 8-foot high bank that rolled in off the Bay of Fundy — no fundy if you have to live on it.

No time to make homemade soup? You don't need as much time as you may think. Lentils cook in much less time than other legumes and your appliances can make cooking soup even easier. Here are directions for making hearty lentil soup by slow, no-watch cooking in an electric slow crockery cooker and by speed-cooking in the microwave oven.

SAUSAGE LENTIL SOUP

1¼ cups dry lentils, rinsed
5 cups water
1½ pounds Polish sausage, sliced
1 6-ounce can tomato paste
3 potatoes, peeled and cubed
1 medium onion, chopped
1 cup chopped celery
1½ teaspoons instant beef bouillon granules
¾ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Crockery directions: In a pan combine lentils and water; bring to boiling. Reduce heat. Cover; simmer 30 minutes. In electric slow crockery cooker combine undrained lentils with remaining ingredients. Cover; cook on low heat 9 hours. Skim off fat. Serves 6.

Microwave directions: In a 4-quart casserole combine lentils and water. Micro-cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 15 minutes, stirring twice. Add remaining ingredients. Cook, covered, on 50 percent power (medium) 25 minutes, stirring 3 times. Skim off fat.

Petting is not for guide dogs

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Guide dogs for the blind should not be petted by strangers, advises an official at The Seeing Eye, the pioneer dog guide school in America.

The dogs are taught to work in harmony with their blind owners, and "petting or talking to a dog guide distracts it as well as its owner and thus creates a dangerous situation for both," explains Richard Krokus, director of instruction and training at the school.

In mistaken efforts to be helpful, Krokus adds, people sometimes create potentially life-threatening situations.

"Grabbing a blind person's arm, taking hold of the dog's harness, or shouting words of warning have much the same effect as grabbing the steering wheel away from the driver of a moving car," he says.

"On the other hand, if the blind person appears to be lost, a sighted person might ask if he can help. If the blind person needs help, he will accept the offer."

ASTHMA - VITAMIN C

As far back as the 13th century, Maimonides prescribed a diet rich in fruits and vegetables for asthmatics. Yale University investigators gave one group of asthmatics 500 mg of vitamin C - a second group a placebo for 3 days prior to the volunteers taking a bicycle exercise test. The results showed that taking vitamin C produced significant improvement in some respiratory function tests. However, other tests show mixed results.

How cozy to warm up to someone who never has anything good to say.

We're serious.

Experience tells you that a person who invariably looks on the bright side often times doesn't have their focus knob adjusted.

Nothing gets on your nerves like constantly hearing things are going to be sunshine and lemon drops all of the time. Occasionally, things are a bloody disaster and you might as well face it sooner as later.

Here lies the comfort of people who only think in terms negative.

Everybody knows at least one. Most of them are folks who never do anything. But they love to criticize those who do; to speculate on the failure of those who aspire; and to second guess the poor souls who have already flubbed up.

And they are as predictable as the noodle-headed goody two-shoes who constantly walk around thinking about how grand things are.

Some might draw support from the always cheery--we'll admit going to this well a time or two--but consider the equal value of our good old nay-sayer.

Imagine yourself ticked off. You can make up your own examples, whether it be burned biscuits for breakfast or just that nagging knot in your stomach that the bills are finally about to come due.

To modify your mood, go ask your negative companion what they think about the day. "Lousy," they might say, "crummy, rotten, no hope in sight, plain awful. Why do you want to know?"

Who wouldn't be cheered by such pessimism? Your problem can't be too substantial if someone else has an attitude this bad.

Also realize the ricochet effect. You can often bounce your own bad feelings off of the hide of old gritch.

We've found great comfort in getting them to say those hateful and nasty things we are too reluctant to say.

Figure a situation where some unnamed third party has screwed it up big time for the rest of us, an event which is likely to occur only approximately 10,000 times in a normal life.

The damage can be done in a thousand ways, but it basically comes down to someone else has succeeded grandly--which generates the bitter taste of unspoken envy--or failed bad--generating a like measure of guilty relief.

So, to ease personal discomfort, you cozy up to gripey guts, asking, "Now what do you know about that?"

Then, relish in their blast; warm your hands at the fire of their wrath; take pleasure in their venom; enjoy your own catharsis.

Venting your troubled winds is healthy. And it's essentially guilt free, since you're only a witness to all that ill will.

Nobody says you have to ask them out to dinner, nominate them for civic awards or give them as a credit reference.

But we'll admit it. Grumps have their place in this world.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

We went on a Family Ride the other day for the first time in ages. Back when we had our little fat Shetland pony, Chiggar, we used to go pretty often. We'd put our littlest one on the big calm black, the oldest one on jog-along Chiggar, and Kent and I on the other two. And off we'd go on a Family Ride.

But two things conspired to put family rides to an end. The kids outgrew Chiggar, as kids do, so we gave her away to a young family. And, three years ago, I got hit midstride by a mysterious muscular disorder. It's a manageable disease, as diseases go, (although there is no known medication to treat it), but physical exertion always causes a flare-up, and my muscles think that riding is about as physical as you can get.

But I've missed it. I taught the kids, in their earliest years. My theory was that if they could ride a rough-trotting Shetland bareback without clinging to the mane for dear life or screaming bloody murder, they could ride anything with a saddle. So off we'd go, up and down the road, me running along full speed, dragging a reluctant Chiggar by the halter, and shouting, "Squeeze with your legs! Keep your rear down!"

When we got that down pat, the kids "graduated" to old Sox, who bobbed along patiently on his lead rope behind Kent or me on one of the geldings, across wide pastures. After a time, they were allowed to ride solo, but only within the confines of the lots, practicing reining. ("Turn him! Get him out of the corner! Show him who's boss!")

The first ride out in the pastures without a lead rope was a Big Day, but by then, old Mom was left behind, feeling sorry for herself.

Now that the veteran ranch horse we brought with us from Fuller Brothers as newlyweds has yielded my son two silver buckles in 4-H horsemanship competitions and taught my daughter to ride, well, I didn't see how we could spread out three horses between four people and expect two kids to live through the fight. I was wrong. When they beggingly volunteered to ride double so that we could go on a Family Ride, I realized that they had missed having me along as much as I missed being there.

So we headed out, with the longsuffering Sox carrying the six-year-old in the saddle and the nine-year-old behind, Kent on the gentle but mischievious gray, Gebo; and me on the spirited sorrell, Buck, who stays nervous because he tries too hard to do the right thing, and he's never sure whether he is or not.

After maneuvering our way through three or four gates, we took off across rugged rangeland, broken by miniature canyons, split by deep ravines, and divided by sloping creek beds. The air was fragrant with fall flowers, newly-born in recent rains. Chinaberry trees along creeks dropped golden leaves on our shoulders. Thick, stirrup-high range grasses in russet, cinnamon and saffron rippled in the wind, as if God were running His hand across their heads.

We jumped up a covey of quail, who ruffled the air with their wings and startled the horses. A huge jackrabbit bounded away; the dogs missed him entirely. At one point, a deep green valley fell away before us, ending in the distance in misty blue hills. The wind on our cheeks was moist and cool.

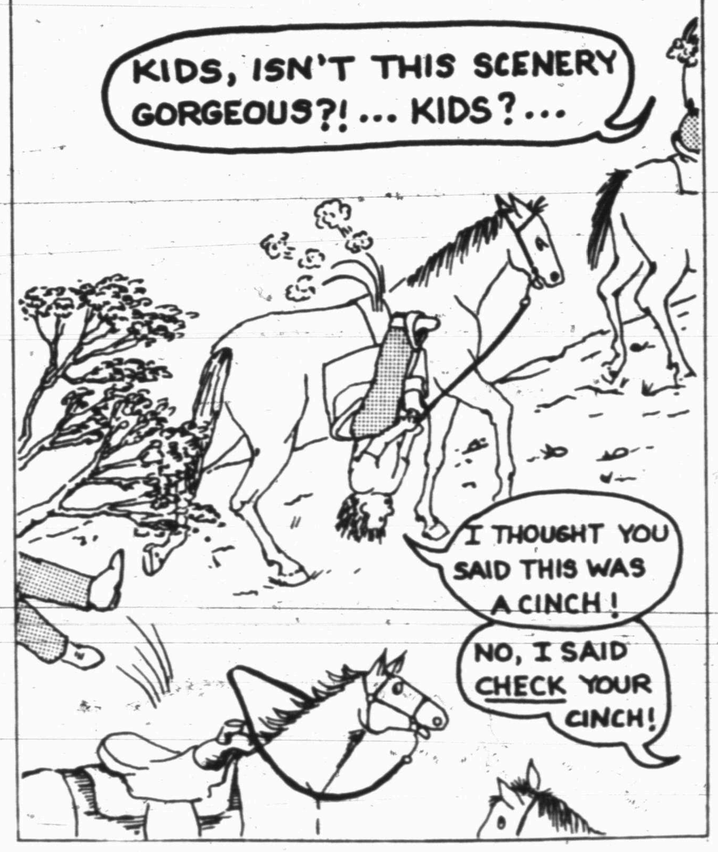

Sliding down a slope, ("Lean back, Jessica!"), a breathless leap over a ribbon of water, lumbering up the other side, ("Lean forward, Jessi!"), a pat on a sweaty chestnut neck, ("You're doin' fine, fella."), and we came upon an old rock chimney. Who used to live there and what happened to them?

Never did we see a road, hear a car, or see any people. Kent identified the grasses with their wonderful melodic names: Silver Bluestem, Alkali Sacoton, and Fall Witchgrass. The children's cheeks flushed with sunshine and happiness. I felt a swelling in my chest that almost hurt because I couldn't hold the moment forever.

Heading back, the kids changed seats without dismounting. ("We have a system, Mama.") Raccoon tracks on a muddy streambed looked like little human hands. The dogs vanished and returned, following their own dreams.

When we rode wearily up to the house, two hours had passed. My muscles screamed abuse at me and threatened to lay me low, but I ignored them. All good things in life come with a price attached, and the payment is well worth it.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
November 2

A week by week decline in the number of students enrolled in the Snyder system has been reported for four weeks in October, school officials reported Sunday.

The month of October has seen some 75 students move out of the district, they say.

"We may be seeing now what we expected at the first of school," commented Superintendent Bob Hawes.

Looked at from one perspective, the Crime Stopper program, administered through the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, has netted almost 20 times its worth, it was reported Sunday.

Since its inception in August of 1983, the program--which seeks information related to crimes--has paid out some $2,359 in reward money.

For that same period, local law enforcement officials report, arrests netted from the crime tips have generated an estimated $39,750 in fine monies for both the city and county.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

Are we really so bad off that we need to apply for a government disaster program? When we are noted for our sports, ball games, NIRA rodeos, drama, etc. with all our expensive trophies and awards?

Do we want people to think that we acquired all that by MOOCHING from the government?

Scurry County is no worse off than all these northwestern counties affected by the weather.

We want less taxes. How can we expect to get that when we ask for everything we can get that will make our government have to put on more and more employees? Statistics show that we already have almost as many government employees as we have in private enterprise.

If we get a majority of government employees, we will have a dictatorship. Then there will be no use in having elections anymore. By the way some other countries vote, we know how that always comes out.

We have survived hard times before. Let us show that we can overcome them again.

Dear Abby

Child-Support Checks Don't Add Up in Daughter's Mind

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Three months ago I moved out of my mother's house to live with my grandmother. Every month my mother gets $400 child support from my father for me and my brother. Abby, $200 of that money belongs to me. Of the $600 my mother got for my support the last three months, I have seen only $80. I have asked my mom to give me my $200 each month. She said, "No, I will give your grandmother $100, and I'll give you $10 a week for pocket money because that's all you need. I will not give you the whole amount because I want to know where it's going."

That's only $140 total. What about the other $60? If I received the whole $200 a month, I would gladly give some to my grandmother.

What are my rights to that money? My mother hasn't given my grandmother anything since I've been here.

FLAT BROKE

DEAR BROKE: The child support money should not go to you directly; it should be given to the person who is taking care of you — namely your grandmother.

If your father doesn't know that you are living with your grandmother and that she hasn't received any part of your support money, tell him.

You don't state your age, but $10 a week seems generous for pocket money.

DEAR ABBY: You be the judge. My husband, "John," is a very young 66. He is also very handsome, charming and gregarious. We have an excellent marriage. John sings in the church choir and I am part of the audience. The choir director is a lively, 24-year-old woman who is fond of John. (I'll call her Sandra.) Sandra has a live-in boyfriend who also sings in the choir.

Sandra recently called our home and I answered. She asked to speak directly to John. I assumed it had something to do with choir practice. Then I heard John laugh and say, "I'd better ask my wife." Well, it turned out that Sandra had tickets for a musical and she asked my husband to escort her because her boyfriend was going to be out of town! (No mention was made of me.)

When John asked if it would be all right with me if he escorted Sandra, I said no, it wouldn't. He said I was foolish to take that attitude — all it involved was picking her up and acting as her escort for the evening.

I held my ground. He insisted I was wrong to make a "big deal" out of it — all Sandra wanted was an escort.

I need to know from you, was I wrong to say no? Or should I have told him it was all right with me when it wasn't?

JOHN'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You were justified in saying no. Sandra struck a sour note when she asked your husband to escort her, and he should have told her so.

DEAR ABBY: I am sure I'm not the only one this happened to. I got married in a private civil ceremony; no family or friends were invited.

When I told my family and friends about my marriage, they said if I threw a party then I would get gifts.

Abby, if people want to give a present, why should the bride and groom be expected to shell out hundreds of dollars for a party? Can't friends and relatives give presents even if there is no party?

NOT ALONE
IN RUTHERFORD, N.J.

DEAR NOT ALONE: Certainly. And the people who want to give a present will — party or no party. However, some people feel obligated to give a present (and therefore will) only if they have been invited to a party.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DEEPLY INVOLVED AND NO REGRETS: If not for your own protection, consider the heartbreak such a revelation could cause your husband and family. Destroy those letters, and don't carry them with you for "safekeeping." Should you be involved in an accident and their contents are revealed, if you live, you'll be a dead duck.

Clements' transition readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the political pendulum swinging from Democrat to Republican in the Texas governor's race in this week's national election, staffers at the Texas liason office here are bracing for some changes.

Some of those appointed or hired during the administration of Gov. Mark White said Thursday they expect the newly elected governor, William Clements, to bring in his own team to run the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations.

The office serves as the eyes, ears and mouthpiece for the Texas governor in Washington, but it is also charged with working for the state Legislature and private interests.

Under White's Democratic administration, the staff of five coordinators, four support workers and two executives focused primarily on education and banking issues, said associate director Claiborn Crain.

Many of those staffers face the loss of their jobs with the victory in Tuesday's elections of Clements, a Republican.

"It's uncertain what's going to happen," Crain said. "I think everybody's watching this to see what other kinds of jobs are out there and what opportunities will still be available here."

During Clement's previous administration, the state office staff concerned itself largely with pursuing and developing oil and gas legislation for presentation in the two houses of Congress.

"When Clements first came into office in 1978 he didn't look very closely at this office," Crain said. "Later he realized the value of the office that looks after state interests here."

Many of the Clements' staffers who were "more overt politically," were asked to leave when the White administration took over the governorship in 1982, Crain said.

John Hanson, current director, said he expects Clements will use the office to serve as a pipeline into the White House to take advantage of his close relationship with Ronald Reagan.

"But keep in mind, this is an office for the legislature as well as for the governor's office," Hanson said.

No move toward placing Soviet consulates in cities

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Soviet Union has not asked to open consulates in cities on the U.S. border or anywhere else in Mexico, a top government official said.

He said reports that the purpose of Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze's visit to Mexico last month was to discuss opening consulates in border cities were "absolutely false."

The official, who spoke Thursday with foreign reporters on condition he not be further identified, was well acquainted with the details of Shevardnadze's visit.

He also said there was no cause for concern in the United States about a planned trip by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to Mexico next year.

"In my judgment, there should be no reason for any worry," the Mexican official said.

He noted that Mexican presidents have made official visits to the Soviet Union in the past.

"This (reciprocity of visits) is absolutely normal in diplomatic relations," the official said.

U.S. administration officials in Washington say Gorbachev's plan to visit Latin America apparently is an attempt to penetrate peacefully an area where the United States long has been the dominant influence.

Gorbachev is expected to visit Cuba, Moscow's closest ally in the Western Hemisphere, next spring and also become the first Soviet leader ever to travel to Mexico, Argentina and Brazil.

The U.S. officials, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said a long-term Soviet goal in Mexico is the opening of consular offices in northern Mexico, which would enable the Soviets to widen their intelligence-gathering capabilities in the southern United States.

Gorbachev's visit would come after a period of strains in U.S.-Mexican relations, especially over the drug issue.

Charges in Washington that Mexico is not doing enough in the war against the illegal narcotics trade and that widespread corruption here fuels the traffic have triggered angry denials by the Mexican government.

The Mexican official said U.S.-Mexican relations "are entering a phase in which the emphasis should be finding solutions." He also said a "political emphasis" has been placed on the conduct of Mexican relations in Washington.

Asked his opinion on the new anti-drug law in the United States, the official said it was necessary because of widespread drug consumption in the United States.

He said he hoped the new law would help clamp down on drug use so that there would be no further reason "to transfer the blame which belongs to the consuming nation"

Mexican officials have said repeatedly that the drug trade is caused by the billions of dollars spilling out from the United States in search of illegal narcotics, and that supply and trade routes could be more easily controlled if American consumers would reduce their demand for drugs.

Two cities pledge their cooperation

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — The cities of Wichita Falls and Lawton, Okla., have signed an agreement to share information, manpower and other resources that would benefit both cities.

The agreement was signed Thursday by Wichita Falls Mayor Charles Harper and Lawton Mayor Wayne Gilley. Dignitaries witnessed the signing near the Red River Bridge on Interstate 44 along the Texas-Oklahoma border.

It came about one year after the two cities began discussions on ways to attract new industry to the region.

Officials said areas of mutual cooperation could include joint purchasing, cross-training staffs and sharing statistics.

"This will wind back to city staff for implementation," said Jim Berzina, the Wichita Falls city manager. "We'll do our part to make it happen."

Both mayors will name a three-member committee early next week to head the cooperative program, officials said.

Harper said the city councils should strive to meet together at least twice a year.

"We will see things you won't believe," said Harper, who came up with the idea for a joint venture.

Hooper said the partnership should be successful because the two cities are so similar.

"We have too many things in common for us to be apart," Hooper said. "This is a great day for southwestern Oklahoma and North Texas."

Gilley was even more enthusiastic at a luncheon marking the event.

"We like what you do, we like how you think, we just like you," he said, addressing Wichita Falls officials.

Rally, counseling sessions are planned next spring

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Organizers hope to draw at least 100,000 Vietnam veterans and family members to a giant rally and counseling session next spring in Dallas.

Stan Hall, one of the organizers of Nam Fest '87, said the City of Dallas has issued a permit for the nationwide reunion May 15-17 in the Trinity River flood plain.

"We hope to get all veterans and their families to come together and help them deal with whatever problems are left from the war," Hall said. "We want to help alleviate their feelings of guilt and depression, to deal with their past and bury the ghosts. We want to more or less welcome them back with open arms."

Hall said plans for the rally are not complete.

But he hopes to have counselors there for veterans and their families. Hall also plans to invite experts to conduct panel discussions on the war, its causes and effects. He said Veterans Adminstration officials will explain delayed stress syndrome and will talk about Agent Orange, a chemical that was sprayed in Vietnam and is linked to diseases contracted by Vietnam veterans.

Hall also hopes to line up rock bands to play music popular in the 1960s. He also plans to invite politicians from the war era.

Dallas LD service disrupted

DALLAS (AP) — A freak coincidence in which two major telephone cables were cut, disrupted long distance service between Dallas and much of the nation and paralyzed several area businesses.

A construction crew crushed the main cable linking Dallas to the Midwest at about 1 p.m. Thursday, officials said. The cable also helps connect Dallas to Western states.

About 90 minutes later, a construction crew near Spring, Texas, just north of Houston, partly severed a cable linking the southern part of the state and Dallas.

Service was restored by about 5:30 p.m., but thousands of telephone customers were frustrated.

"There could have been hundreds of thousands of calls affected, considering the number of repeated attempts," said Diane Schwilling, a spokeswoman for American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Companies that rely on long-distance service for most of their business were hardest hit.

Hilton Reservation Center in suburban Carrollton was essentially out of business for about four hours. The center takes reservations for Hilton hotels around the world.

"We lost close to 10,000 calls," said Marie Dobson, reservation service president. "I can't help but ask the question, 'Why aren't those lines protected?' We will certainly want to debrief AT&T."

She said about 250 employees had virtually nothing to do for several hours.

The Budget Rent-A-Car Reservation Center in Carrollton also was affected. The center handles reservations for the company's nationwide fleet of cars.

Budget spokesman Dan Taylor said the interruption was especially annoying because the company's competitors were not affected.

"It's an extremely competitive business," Taylor said. "I would say 98 percent of our callers couldn't get through."

Taylor said his company would demand a written explanation from AT&T and will want to know if it will happen again.

"This cost us tens of thousands of dollars," he said.

Ernest Hayden of Advanced Telemarketing Corp. in Irving said his company lost "thousands and thousands of dollars" worth of business.

Hayden said 300 employees sat around "doing next to nothing for three hours."

"That alone cost us about $4,000 or $5,000," he said.

State appeals federal judge's order blocking transfer plan

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The state of Texas has asked a federal appeals court to overturn a federal judge's order blocking the transfer of minimum security prisoners to a former National Guard fort.

The state says the move is necessary to help resolve overcrowding in the prison system.

At issue is the Texas Prison Management Act, which dictates that a ceiling of 95 percent occupancy be maintained by releasing prisoners at the ratio other felons are ordered behind bars.

After an hour-long hearing Thursday before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the inmates' lawyer, William Bennett Turner, said the law had never been put into effect because Texas Gov. Mark White did not want to be known as the man who set convicted felons loose.

Texas Assistant Attorney General Scott McCown, arguing that unprecedented arrests and convictions were aggravating the prison situation, said, "We would have more prisoners if we had built expanded facilities," and insisted that expanded facilities would be ready by next summer.

Service pilots are competing in meet

AUSTIN (AP) — Flying at 600 mph, dodging Air Force jets along a 10 minute course in West Texas while attempting to log in targets for optical photographs is what U.S. service pilots are facing in the first Reconnaissance Air Meet this week.

Four U.S. Navy fliers and two F-14 Tomcats that flew combat against Libya last spring are participating in the RAM '86 competition along with Marine and Royal Australian Air Force crews at Bergstrom Air Force Base.

"All of us flew combat missions against the Libyans. We flew every day," said Lt. Dave Parsons, a radar intercept officer or backseater in the two-man F-14s of VF-102.

VF-102 was one of the F-14 squadrons aboard the aircraft carrier America, which steamed off the North African coast during the engagements with Libyan air and naval forces in March and April.
