Begin, Sadat begin two days of talks

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — Meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin today for a two-day summit, President Anwar Sadat wants Israel to lift more restrictions on the Palestinians in the occupied territories. Begin wants Sadat to accelerate the improvement of relations between their two contries.

Egyptian sources said they expected little or nothing in the way of concrete action to be announced after the talks at Sadat's summer capital on the Mediterranean. They said even if anything was agreed to, details would probably be kept secret until after Begin meets with President Reagan in Washington next month. Begin was greeted at the airport by Vice President Hosni Mubarak upon his arrival today.

Israeli officials said Begin is seeking revival of the talks with Egypt and the United States, which Sadat suspended last summer, on Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Sources close to Sadat said his price would be more "confidence-building measures" by Israel, like the removal of security roadblocks in the Gaza Strip earlier this month. The Egyptians believe more such action might help convince moderate Palestinians they have a chance of getting genuine autonomy from the negotiations.

Israel and Egypt agreed in two years of talking, with the United States as mediator, that a Paletinian council wold be elected to head the government in the West Bank and Gaza. But they have been unable to agree on how much power the council would have, whether the Arabs of East Jerusalem could vote in the election for the council, or a formula for ultimate disposition of sovereignty over the territories.

A leading West Bank Palestinian, Mayor Hilmi Hanoun of Tulkarm, said in a radio interview Monday that the 1.2 million Palestinians in the occupied territories want total independence and are interested in nothing less. Begin and many Israelis are adamantly opposed to that.

Israeli officials said Begin would also demand that Sadat, to resume the normalization of relations promised by the Camp David peace treaty, put into effect cultural and commercial agreements already signed.

Sadat halted the normalization process after the Israeli destruction of the Iraqi nuclear reactor June 7 to try to minimize the fallout on him of Arab reaction. His anger was heightened by the Israeli air raid on Beirut in July in which more than 300 Lebanese and Palestinians, most of them noncombatants, were reported killed.

"We have not been happy with Israel's recent behavior," said one Egyptian diplomat.

But David Kimche, director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, told reporters in Jerusalem: "Normalization isn't a subject that can be turned off and on at will because of some political action." Begin will tell Sadat to "stop playing with the switch," Kimche said.

Sadat visited Washington earlier this month and told Reagan he thought it was time the Americans opened a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Egyptian sources said he was exected to expand on this with Begin. But Kimche made clear that th Israeli leader would reject any attempt to bring the PLO into the autonomy negotiations.

Sadat and Begin last met on June 4 in the southern part of the Sinai Peninsula territory that Israel is scheduled to return to Egypt next April. The meeting was viewed as a boost to Begin's campaign for re-election, but nothing else apparently resulted from it.

Hydrologist sees 'nothing alarming' in study of draw

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An Austin hydrologist, who admitted that his "limited study" of Midland Draw and the associated rising water table and overflowing sewage effluent yielded "limited answers," said Monday that he uncovered nothing alarming in his study.

"There don't appear to be any 'smoking guns,' " the water expert, William F. Guyton, told the Midland County commissioners and a smattering of people who live along the draw southeast and east of Midland. "We still haven't made absolutely sure (about the draw's problems). It could take quite an effort."

Guyton, whose $15,000 one-man study took three to four weeks to complete, said water was tested in three wells along the draw and that he examined hundreds of geological maps pertaining to the draw area before coming up with a composite map.

The cursory study indicated:

—The rising water table in Midland in part may be caused by the city's over-taxed sewage treatment plant and back-up water. "It (sewage treatment plant) is causing part of it, but how much I don't know."

—There's vitually no "contamination" in wells along the draw. "It (effluent) looks better than 'natural water.' "

He said the study revealed no "inorganic, organic, or bacteriological contamination."

"None of the three wells within 1,000 feet (of the draw) showed signs of bacteriological contamination," Guyton said. "We didn't find it on the face of it."

The hydrologist presented a 30-minute orientation on the geology of the draw, which is tabbed Scharbauer Draw in Midland but which undergoes a name change to Midland Draw outside the city limits. He referred to people "crying wolf" on the rising water table.

The downhill draw goes from about 2,800 feet above sea level in the city to about 2,720 feet — an 80 foot drop — by the time it meanders to the treatment plant, which is southeast of Midland. "It (sewage treatment plant) has to be downhill; it can't be uphill," he said.

Guyton crossed out water-injection into old oil wells as a contributing factor to the rising water table.

"Your oil fields have basically all been shut off (in the area)," he said.

Initially, Guyton seemed reluctant to speculate on other possible reasons for the rising water table. "I'm not prepared to tell you." But at one point he said, "There's always rainfall and other sources of water."

And he did say that the imported city water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District via Lake Spence at Robert Lee and from the Paul Davis Water Field midway between Midland and Lamesa and the decreased use of in-city water wells may contribute to the rising water table.

Paul Anderson, who lives in the Greenwood area 3½ miles from the sewage treatment plant, said he can smell the stench of raw sewage in his well water. "Contamination (comes) out of our well by smell," Anderson said.

"You're essentially in the flow

Suspect held in shooting

A suspect was in custody at the city jail this morning following a shooting early Monday night that left a Midland man dead.

Pronounced dead by doctors at Midland Memorial Hospital shortly after 7 p.m. was 27-year-old Gonzalo Munoz Perez of 608 N. Dallas St. He had been shot in the left chest with a small caliber weapon and was brought to the hospital in a private car.

Less than two hours later, police arrested a 27-year-old woman at her home on North Lee Street. According to police, Perez was shot at the Permian Tire Co., 1409 Garden City Highway.

His body was taken to the Thomas Funeral Home, where services are pending.

The woman was expected to be formally charged with murder later today.

A step at a time

There was a time three years ago when Wanda Ralston couldn't step out of her house — agoraphobia wouldn't let her get near her car. She's not cured now, but she is able to get out of the house.

Agoraphobia: The fear that closes in on you, closing you in

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Wanda Ralston had been sitting at her table at home when a peculiar feeling came over her.

Her palms became clammy.

She became overwhelmed with anxiety.

As her heart began to pound, she felt the room begin to spin.

Her arms fell heavily to her side and she felt exhausted.

She did not go out of the house or drive for three months.

That was three years ago. Mrs. Ralston, a lifelong resident of Midland County, didn't know what had happened to her. She said after many doctor's visits and numerous anti-depressant drugs, her phobia was finally diagnosed.

"AGORAPHOBIA is incapacitating anxiety of leaving the safety of home or being in a crowded place, being alone or being in any situation where the sufferer thinks he may experience overwhelming panic, giddiness, palpitations and weakness," according to the Agoraphobia Information Center (AIC) in Dallas.

It's a phobia Mrs. Ralston shares with one out of 50 people in urban areas — and three-fourths of these people are women, according to Kirby Allsup, director of AIC. She said it is often misdiagnosed as either hypoglycemia, anxiety, depressive and hysterical neurosis, hypochondriasis or situational adjustment reaction.

Allsup said the sufferer usually reports the first panic attack as coming "out of the blue" after a period of prolonged stress, illness or upsetting experience.

"I had been going through a problem with my son," Mrs. Ralston, a mother of three children, said. "That's when it happened."

Mrs. Ralston said after her "first attack," she noticed that driving a car frightened her.

"It was like the car had control of me instead of me being in control of it," she said.

Other difficulties followed. She could not go into any crowded areas such as the grocery store, banks or restaurants.

"My two boys did all the grocery shopping. It was very hard on me. I used to be very active — my hands into everything. Then it happened. I was always afraid I would get out in the public and lose control — scream — embarrass myself or family," she said.

Ms. Allsup said because the experience is so frightening, even approaching a place or situation where an attack could occur arouses anxiety. This is why the agoraphobic will become housebound — an avoidance reaction, according to Ms. Allsup.

Mrs. Ralston, 39, describes herself as an outgoing type, the oldest of nine children with a "need to prove herself."

ACCORDING TO Ms. Allsup, typical family characteristics of many agoraphobia cases are quarreling, domineering, overprotective parents with the agoraphobic feeling anxious or overly concerned with what people think. Personality traits include above average intelligence, creative, a keen sense of humor and overly sensitive to other people's feelings.

Ms. Allsup, a recovering agoraphobic and founder of the AIC, said it is frustrating for the agoraphobic in the diagnostic stage because a major symptom is depression. She explained that doctors can decrease the anxiety with drugs, but the use of medicine does not treat the cause.

Mrs. Ralston said it took her three years to discover this.

"I went to a lot of doctors, even mental health. 'Take

Navy fliers define positions during dogfight

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Two U.S. Navy planes were just outside the limits of the area set aside for U.S. maneuvers when they shot down two Libyan jets last week, but they were over international waters at least 50 miles off the Libyan coast, the admirals in charge of the war games said.

Vice Adm. William Rowden, commander of the U.S. 6th Fleet, told a news coference aboard the carrier Nimitz Monday that the two F-14s from the carrier were patrolling last Wednesday to keep other aircraft out of the zone where they might get hit by a practice missile during the fleet's Mediterranean exercise.

Rowden said the dogfight occurred between 50 and 60 miles off the Libyan coast. Rear Adm. James Service, commander of the task force that took part in the maneuvers, said the closest any planes came to the coast was 25 miles, on Tuesday, the day before the dogfight.

Although the location given by Rowden was over the Gulf of Sidra, and Libya claims the entire gulf, the United States recognizes only the traditional three-mile offshore territorial limit.

Rowden said pairs of Libyan fighters flew up a total of 45 times to meet American jets patrolling the edges of the area used for the war games. The first 39 times, the Libyans flew off without making trouble, he continued.

Cmdr. Henry Kleeman, 38, of Clinton, Ill., gave this account of the 40th time:

"At approxmately 0715 my radar intercept officer detected a contact some distance to the south of us. We watched this contact for a short period of time, and it became obvious tat they were headed directly for our patrol position....

"At approximately 8 miles I saw the two SU-22 Fitters (the NATO code name for SU-22) on the nose.... At 500 feet above them and 1,000 feet out in front, I observed a missle being fired from the right station of the (leading) Fitter.... I continued a very hard turn across their tails to come back and find him.

"I kept both of them in sight.... I saw we had been fired upon (and) they might do it again. The only acceptable course of action was to fire myself....

"My Fitter was approaching the sun and as I planned to use a Sidewinder heat-seeking missile, I decided that wasn't a very good position to shoot from. I waited abou 10 seconds, until he had cleared the sun, and fired my missile. The missile guided, struck him in his tailpipe area, causing him to lose control of the airplane. He ejected within about five seconds."

The pilot of the second F-14, Lt. Lawrence M. Muczynski, 28, of Houston, Texas, said he also saw the Libyan plane fire its missile and wheeled about to chase it. He said he also fired one Sidewinder and it brought down the second plane.

"I was aware of the possible political implications," said Kleemann. "I was aware of it before we went out there.... It passed through my mind that it was going to cause a ruckus."

"The standard rules of engagement are that if you are fired upon, you are authorized to fire back," said Service.

Rowden said there were five more encounters between Libyan and U.S. planes before the maneuvers ended.

Asked about the claim by Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader, that his jets shot down an American plane, Service commented: "I think what Mr. Khadafy says has great entertainment value but not much to do with the facts."

Postal workers ratify new contract

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) Postal Service employees overwhelmingly ratified new contracts providing a typical worker with a $2,100 pay raise over three years plus unlimted cost-of-living increases, union officialsannounced today.

They said the voting was not influenced by the Reagan administrtion's tough stance against strikig air traffic controllers.

Postmaster General Willam F. Boler has said that the $4.8 billion settlement should not push the price of a first-class stamp beyond the 20 cents already sought by the Postal Service.

Members of the National Association of Letter Carriers voted 124,316 to 20,856 to ratify the tentative contract reached July 21 after an all-night bargaining session, said union president Vincent Sombrotto.

The American Postal Workers Union was still counting votes early today when its president, Moe Biller, left the suburban Maryland motel where the tally was conducted.

He said that at 4:10 a.m. EST, 110,367 votes in favor of ratification had been counted and that he expected the number to reach 150,000 by the time all 186,500 ballots were tallied.

"I've very pleased that people have ratified it to that extent," Biller said.

The APWU represents clerks, motor vehile operators, maintenance workers and special delivery personnel. The letter carriers union represents people who deliver the mail door-to-door.

The Postal Service says the average postal worker had earned $23,300 a year — $19,915 in base pay and the rest in benefits — under the old contracts.

Many women share an overwhelming anxiety

this pill, take that one' they'd say. 'You're suffering from exhaustion. You need tranquilizers, anti-depresants.'"

And then two months ago through a relative, Mrs. Ralston heard about the Agoraphobic Center in Dallas and calleo them.

"You've got to be kidding," Mrs. Ralston responded to Ms. Allsup's diagnosis.

MRS. RALSTON SAID a feeling of relief came over her just to know she was not alone in her situation.

"I know now I can live a normal life again," she said.

According to Ms. Allsup treatment involves education through understanding the "physiological dynamics of the fight or flight response." Then, she added, relaxation therapy, behavior modification and assertiveness training is incorporated.

But, before an agoraphobic can be helped, Ms. Allsup explained, the condition must be understood. Literally, agoraphobia means fear of open places; however, the term has been more generally used to describe a condition known as fear of symptoms.

"They may be in a department store, a restaurant, a supermarket or at a social function when suddenly they are bombarded with extremely frightening bodily sensations such as weakness, heart palpitations, missed heartbeats, dizziness," she said.

Ms. Allsup added that as soon as the agoraphobic is convinced that something is physically wrong, the person usually goes to the doctor.

IF THE DOCTOR cannot find anything physically wrong with the person, it is difficult for the family to comprehend what is happening, Allsup said.

"Society doesn't want to accept something like this," Mrs. Ralston said. "But as far as my family goes, they've been wonderful. The last trip I've taken with my family was to Colorado years ago, but now, I'm beginning to plan to go on a trip next summer."

Mrs. Ralston said she's not cured, but she is making progress.

"The biggest step is to step out. If you make it to the end of your sidewalk, pat yourself on the back," Mrs. Ralston said.

She noted that if "you do it once, you can do it again."

"I've come a long way baby. I can't stay sheltered in this house," she remarked.

Ms. Allsup explained that agoraphobia is similar to claustraphobia in a sense that the victim feels trapped. She said there is a nationwide program to educate the medical community with this phobia. In Midland, the Agoraphobia Information Center, in an attempt to increase public awareness, will present a seminar at 7 p.m. Sept. 17 at the Midessa Heights Baptist Church, East Highway 80, Odessa.

Speakers for the program will be James O. Wilson, M.A., and C. Robert Ingram Jr., Ph.D., of the Center for Human Development in Dallas. The center specializes in the treatment of phobias and during the last seven years has treated over 700 cases of agoraphobia. The seminar will involve discussion on the dynamics of agoraphobia: what it is, how it begins, how it is maintained and how it is treated.

For additional information on the seminar, contact Mrs. Ralston at 563-1338. She's not staying home — she'll be there.

Pleasant weather in store

Midlanders can expect pleasant temperatures with no sign of precipitation in the near future, according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

It should be partly cloudy with warm afternoons and fair nights through Wednesday.

The high is expected to be in the mid-90s through Wednesday with the low tonight in the low 60s.

Tuesday's high of 92 didn't approach the 103-degree record set in 1936, and this morning's overnight low of 66 is up from the overnight record low of 58 set in 1970.

Winds are expected to be light, south to southeast at 5-10 mph through Wednesday.

Local band concert tonight

Four local school bands will give an hour-long outdoor concert tonight next to Midland Center, just east of the courthouse.

There is no charge for the 7 p.m. event, which is open to the public and will feature football music. Homemade ice cream and cake will be served afterward. Persons wishing to attend should bring their own chairs and blankets.

Bands scheduled to perform are from Alamo Junior High, San Jacinto Junior High, Midland Freshman and Midland High.

Unemployment rate drops

The unemployment rate for Midland County — which stood at an all-time high of 7.1 percent in figures released for June — dipped to 6.6 per cent in July despite an 11.6 per cent increase in the labor force to an estimated 55,750.

The figures are based on data released by the Texas Employment Commission.

Total employment for the county increased for the seventh consecutive month to 52,090, representing a yearly growth of 8.3 per cent, while the rise in the civilian labor force represented an 11.6 per cent gain over July, 1980.

Despite the decrease in the unemployment rate, the July figure was well above the 1981 average of 4.8 percent. The state and national average unemployment rates for the same period are 5.3 percent and 7.6 percent respectively.

A gain of 1 percent in nonagricultural wage and salary jobs occurred from mid-June to mid-July. Manufacturing, meanwhile, increased 2.4 percent due to new orders for oil-related products.

Although ground continued to be broken for more new oil-related high rise office complexes, construction employment has experienced a decline of 3.6 percent over July, 1980 as the industry continued to suffer from high interest rates.

Although Midland's jobless rate has moved erratically during the first seven months of 1981, TEC has indicated the local job outlook is "extremely bright with many more jobs waiting to be filled than there are workers to fill them."

The Midland office is placing applicants in several hard-to-fill jobs, such as airplane mechanic helper, geophysical drafter, secretary, insurance sales agent, punch press operator, laboratory core analysis technician and freehand sign painter.

Some of the current job openings include petroleum engineer, geologist, electrical engineer, party chief, instrument surveyor, general office clerk, computer operator, cook, guard, waiter-waitress, backhoe operator, diesel mechanic, construction worker, machinist, pipefitter, refrigeration mechanic, roustabout, sheet metal worker, truck driver and arc welder.

Business robbed

In light criminal activity reported to city police during the past 24 hours, an employee of the Freight Damage Store, 2900 W. Front St., said $3,265 was taken in a burglary of the establishment. Entry was gained by removing a garage window.

Commissioners' Court strips Wright of liaison role

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Personalities got entangled with politics and business on Monday, when Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright lost his liaison status on the county-bank library project in a 3-2 vote.

The Commissioners' Court opted to strip Wright of his liaison role with The First National Bank of Midland and awarded the job to Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

"I didn't seek this prestigious title," Davis contended. "I've fallen heir, and I accept it graciously."

Wright did not congratulate him.

"I feel like I've been fired," he lamented.

Davis' role will be to "keep this (commissioners') court apprised" of developments in the building of the new three-story Midland County Public Library in downtown Midland. The bank has pledged $5.5 million toward construction of the library, which will be near the bank's proposed 40-story tower on the bank's envisioned Eagle Plaza.

Wright's past role, which began last autumn, was negotiating with the bank, which had expressed interest in the library's half-block property at 301 W. Missouri Ave. just south of the bank. The bank successfully bidded $701,240 for the 12 lots comprising the property earlier in August and, in a gesture described as "generous," offered to donate the $5.5 million toward construction of a county library. The commissioners waited a week before accepting the offer.

"I will keep this court apprised," Davis pledged. "I'm really truly sorry it came to this (conflict between Wright and the court). "This (liaison title) doesn't add to my stature as far as my ego one iota."

The motion to make Davis, a retired school teacher, the liaison officer between the Commissioners' Court and the bank was made by Commissioner Win Brown. County Judge Bill Ahders seconded the motion. In the vote, Davis joined Brown and the judge on naming him as the court's representative. Wright and Commissioner Charlie Welch cast the dissenting votes.

"You're taking it as a personal affront, Mr. Wright," Davis told the commissioner, who obviously felt slighted and fired.

"You can't be fired," said Davis in parting, "if you haven't been hired."

Initially, Wright had proposed that the five-member Commissioners' Court make up a committee to work with the bank on building the library. Welch seconded the Wright motion, which Ahders, Davis and Brown promptly rejected. Bank officials reportedly requested only one liaison person from the county on the library project and not a committee.

County wants engineer

Midland County may be going to the "Help Wanted" route in its search for a county engineer whose salary has been pegged at $25,000 to $30,000 but whose duties haven't been confirmed.

"I would hesitate at this time to put a job description on the county engineer," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, who argued for an engineer.

He was opposed by Commissioners Durward Wright and Charlie Welch.

"I have trouble putting a value to it," Welch said before the 3-2 vote. The measure was passed by Commissioners Win Brown and Davis and County Judge Bill Ahders.

However, Davis, who had been investigating the roles of the county engineer in such places as Odessa, Wichita Falls and El Paso, was resourceful enough to propose projects for an un-named county engineer.

"It (engineer) would be a pretty good man — or woman — to have around," he speculated.

Davis suggested that the county engineer might:

—Advise County Road-and-Bridge Superintendent Albert Stewart on road and culvert work.

—Work on the Midland County Public Library project and annex.

—Supervise the $1.6 million "window pane" project to upgrade a section of a disadvantaged neighborhood in south central Midland with federal funds. "Everything about that project involves engineering," Davis said. Plans call for street paving, repairing old houses and razing dilapidated ones, installing water and sewer lines, and putting in a day care center.

—Consider a flood plain. "We've had some flood-plain problems," Davis said.

—Name rural roads and streets and erect signs. "I happen to live out in the boondocks," said Davis. "I can't get UPS (United Parcel Service), because they can't find us."

—Work on the county map. "The map is not complete. The roads are too numerous."

Davis said the engineer's job was not a "threat" to the road-and-bridge superintendent's job. He did say that the county engineer was needed "yesterday."

However, the commissioner said he didn't know "if the county has the money or not" for the engineer's salary.

"I know the road-and-bridge (budget) isn't healthy," Davis said. "Never is, never will be, I guess." The road-and-bridge department's budget accounts for $1.3 million of the county's $8.6 million budget for 1982.

Davis' proposal passed.

"It may be a bad deal," he said. "I hope not."

Hydrologist not alarmed by study of Midland Draw path," Guyton said.

Jon and Ethel Whisler, who live along the draw, were at the meeting out of concern for their drinking water, which they chlorinate.

"I would be cautious about it (drinking well water before it's chlorinated)," Guyton said. "You may not like the taste and odor and it may not be associated with the sewer plant."

Mrs. Whisler said she "cannot...feel safe about drinking my water."

Guyton told her that she would "still have to be a little bit cautious."

Guyton, who lives in the country outside of Austin, said he chlorinates his drinking water there. The use of chlorine in household water has taken the dangers of cholera and dysentery out of drinking water and has made it "basically safe."

"You can be sure that all the creatures (harmful bacteria) are gone," he said.

But Guyton said he couldn't explain why the well water along the draw had a "smell" to it.

"I don't have an explanation," he said. "It's a puzzlement to me." But he did say that there's "further work that could be done" in studying the underground water flow, the draw, and the sewage treatment plant.

Anderson expressed apprehension over the possible increase in effluent if alfalfa is no longer irrigated by the city's effluent.

Alfalfa farmer Gene Jones by midwinter is threatening discontinue the use of effluent due to the high cost of energy to operate his sprinkling system. But City Councilman Tom Sloan, who was sitting in on the meeting, said "We're negotiating right now."

Guyton's study was requested earlier this year after Commissioner Charlie Welch was disappointed in the results of a $50,000-plus hydrological study of the draw by Ed L. Reed & Associates.

The Reed study did not confirm Welch's contentions that the underground water was being contaminated by the city sanitary landfill and by runoff and heavy seepage. However, the Reed study, which recognized that the "effluent water has materially affected the quality of ground water" at select water wells, recommended the holding ponds be reduced from their 123.44 acres to about 20 acres to cut down on seepage into the water table and to pipe the effluent to a Salt Lake south of Midland.

Welch said he had "no quarrel" with Guyton, since the hydrologist did not address the sanitary-landfill angle.

But Anderson did.

"I think that (the studies) was the worst waste of money that was ever going on in the city and the county," Anderson said.

Maverick mayor turning town around

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A radio station owner with a grandfatherly face, handlebar mustache and easy smile is single-handedly turning this border city upside down with his maverick brand of populist politics.

Since taking office Jan. 1, Mayor Jorge Cardenas Gonzalez has closed cantinas on Sundays, donated his $12,000 annual salary to light crime-plagued neighborhoods and given bar owners in the infamous redlight district of Boys' Town an ultimatum to move or shut down.

His campaign slogan was "Jorge es el cambio," meaning "Jorge is the change." He says he is trying to change everything that's wrong with this city across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas.

His biggest accomplishment to date was getting elected.

Cardenas challenged the candidate backed by Mexico's establishment Partido Revolucionario Institucional (PRI), the party of President Jose Lopez Portillo and most Mexican elected officials.

Cardneas' followers, "Jorgistas," waited up to eight hours to cast votes Dec. 7. They threatend to riot when election officials withheld the result for 10 days.

Local newspapers stopped covering the campaign after unions backing the PRI slate threatened to strike and halt the presses.

Cardenas, now 55, bolted PRI several years ago to join the opposition PARM, Partido Autentico de la Revolucion Mexicana. He has become a folk hero to many impoverished residents who helped elect him by a 2-to-1 margin.

Cardenas grew up in middle-class family. In addition to two radio stations, he owns grocery stores, import-export companies, orchard groves, a hotel and a rope factory.

His election has meant the first street lighting, drainage and paved streets for many poor neighborhoods, or colonias.

His popularity is in contrast to his predecessor, who narrowly escaped an angry mob that dragged him out of his office three years ago. The crowd was enraged over the death of a teenager while in police custody.

The mob burned the municipal palace, which houses the mayor's office.

Cardenas remodeled the office. He tore out a wall, replaced it with glass "to let everyone see who is here" and took all the locks off the doors.

Clad in traditional Mexican guayabera shirt, the silver-haired Cardenas was interviewed recently in his office.

"When we started the campaign, we found out that Matamoros was a sick city, politically, morally and financially," he said in Spanish. "It was terribly bad. The people were 'divorced' from the authorities."

He promised to open up government and has arranged his daily schedule to include morning and afternoon "office hours" beginning at 6:45 a.m. to meet the public.

He also conducts a daily talk show on one of his radio stations, taking questions, complaints, comments from listeners.

"We want them to know how money is invested, what is going to be done with money, what errors are committed in city administration and how we messed up," he said.

Cardenas ran three times for mayor before winning. He cannot succeed himself and has little to lose politically in his reform projects.

"We are going to close the redlight district or move it out of town," he said. "The club owners came to see me and I firmly told them that this year we have to make a move or we close it. One thing or another. It is causing a very serious problem where it is now."

Shootings and knifings within the "zona roja" or "zona de tolerencia" have alarmed city officials and nearby residents.

"We're going to run a socially moral city, that is my aim," he said.

Top priority for the city of 210,000 are street and drainage improvements, he said. Parts of town turn into lakes after a heavy rain.

The World Bank provided money for a drainage project in one of the most heavily populated neighbrhoods.

Cardenas even plans to change the names of some town districts.

Plazas, streets and neighborhoods named for politicians will be renamed after Matamoros residents who made a contribution to the city.

Back to school time

With the start of school less than a week away, thoughts of Midland parents should turn to the coming school year and ways in which they can help their children start the school year right.

Midland's senior high schools in the past have sent a sheet of "tips" from teachers to help parents help their youth in school. But a look at the tips reveals they're good suggestions for the parents of students at any level. Parents should feel free to contact their child's teachers in order to establish a working and cooperative relationship. They should let the teachers know their concerns as well as their satisfactions. Parents also should visit school on open house night and participate in any other school-related functions.

It's important that parents acquaint themselves with and support school rules. If both parents and teachers enforce school rules, both will have more time to devote to the education of our young people.

Parents should take the lead in seeing that their children know school assignments are their responsibility. They should make it a point to know what their children are doing in school and, if they have any doubts, should contact the student's teacher or counselor for clarification.

Another aspect of helping one's child in school is ascertaining whether that child has all the necessary supplies — pens, pencils, paper and other essentials. Parents should stress the importance of students being prepared for class. They also should stress that school is serious business. Students should be taught to respect the rights of others and to respect both private and public property.

Progress reports are sent home regularly from school. If a child does not bring a report home at the proper time, parents should contact the child's teacher or counselor.

These are just ways in which parents can help make the educational process a little more of a family affair and a little more effective. We all want to achieve the best education possible for our children and involvement in the educational process is one of the best ways.

SS system 'fleeced'

Maybe one of the reasons why the Social Security Trust Fund is so financially troubled is that its managers don't trouble themselves enough about its investment practices.

At least that's the opinion of Sen. William Proxmire, who has given his monthly "Golden Fleece" award to the pension fund's Treasury Department managers on the ground that their official performance leaves a lot to be desired.

According to the Wisconsin Democrat, the fund lost $2 billion in earnings last year because of poor investment management. Proxmire said the investment policies of Treasury Department managers prevented higher return on the $47 billion investment portfolio in 1980.

"While private money managers earned 13 percent on their investments in 1980, the Treasury managers earned only 8.3 percent interest," said Proxmire.

The senator said the money was invested in low-interest government or government-backed securities to minimize the interest on the national debt instead of to maximize the yield on the money.

While it's only natural and proper for Treasury Department officials to be worried about the size of the national debt, their overriding concern in this case would seem to be the debt owed to Social Security recipients. Better management of the fund couldn't help but improve the system.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

CIA's 'James Bonds' are back in business

WASHINGTON — Remember the plot to dose up Cuban Premier Fidel Castro so his beard would fall out? The contract with Mafia hit men to knock him off? The CIA agent who plugged in a lie detector machine and blew out all the lights in a dingy Sinapore hotel? The clandestine military operations that backfired in Cuba, Laos and Iraq?

Jack Anderson

The James Bonds responsible for those slapstick misadventures are back in business. The trick-or-treat branch of the Central Intelligence Agency is now propounding more of those hare-brained schemes that produced such fiascos during the 1960s and 1970s.

Anyone who has noticed the unnerving glitter in the eyes of a CIA strategist or has attended a planning session of the covert crowd can only wonder what new undercover operation the CIA may be about to unloose.

A few weeks ago, for example, a report appeared in print that the CIA was plotting a multiphase operation to rid the world of Libya's radical ruler, Muammar Qaddafi. Not so, protested the White House.

It was explained in another news leak that the operation was targeted against Mauritania, not Libya. This caused understandable consternation in Mauritania. Still another leak offered further clarification: The target was Mauritius, not Mauritania. The former is an island in the Indian Ocean with a comparatively small population that can be alienated.

The truth is that the CIA plotters still have Qaddafi in their sights. If this should be denied by a White House spokesperson; with eyes cast heavenward, let me clarify: The White House, though aware of the CIA mindset, has not approved any scheme to overthrow or liquidate the troublesome Qaddafi.

Meanwhile, back in the protected corridors of the CIA, there have been whispers about slipping an assassin into Libya to do away with Qaddafi. One scheme would have the hit man pose as a mercenary and join a ring of mercenaries now in Qaddafi's employ.

The secret killer, according to one CIA scenario, would carry a deadly poison that would have a delayed effect. There would be no symptoms at all for the first 48 hours. Then the unfortunate Qaddafi would come down with a fever that could not be distinguished from various viral diseases. This would be followed by gradual paralysis, a coma and then death. No trace of the poison would be left in his system for the coroners to find.

CIA sources have given my associate Ron McRae a complete description of this unpleasant potion — a common derivative that can be duplicated in any chemical lab. Journalistic responsibility forbids me, therefore, from publishing any further details.

To administer the poison, the conspirators at the CIA have considered using a tiny dart disguised as one of the black flies that infest the Libyan desert. Another possibility would be to equip the assassin with a Borgia ring, which could squirt the poison into Qaddafi's food or drink.

There is one bugaboo that troubles the more thoughtful strategists. Assassination is a game that anyone can play, and the tempestuous Qaddafi has his own killer squads that might ambush Ronald Reagan in retaliation. The greater contribution to world stability might be a solemn pact among heads of state that they won't try to knock each other off.

Footnote: Other plots are hatching in the backrooms of the CIA, and the public should be made aware of the wildest of them. These will be reported in future columns.

WHO'S ON FIRST?: As the Reagan administration tries to develop a firm policy on arms limitation in negotiating with the Russians, it has been studying some highly classified documents from the Carter era.

One of the most interesting was a secret Pentagon memorandum warning that the United States should stop worrying about the perceived technological advantage of either side as a bargaining chip in the disarmament poker game.

"The rationale underlying U.S. decisions to undertake arms control negotiations (is increasingly based) on an antitechnology approach," the memo warned. "The unprovable assumption — that if the U.S. is ahead it is to our advantage to stop technological improvement — pervades arms control policies."

Addressing the other side of the coin, the memo said: "Equally without foundation is the notion that if we are behind, improvement will 'provoke' adversaries to further their lead, or take other measures disadvantageous to us. Of course, if we are in a situation of 'perceived equivalence,' any proposed activity on the U.S. side becomes 'destabilizing.'"

The secret memo notes that the Russians don't seem to be bothered by competitive edges. It lists numerous examples where the Kremlin has restricted development of new technology — such as laser weaponry, particle beams, the neutron bomb and other sophisticated advances in the military art.

WATCH ON WASTE: The State Department apparently pictures itself as a junior branch of the National Archives. The trouble is, our bureaucratic squirrels in Foggy Bottom are preserving documents that have limited interest, to say the least. At a cost of more than $200,000 a year, the Passport Office is storing some 140 million documents that accompanied passport applications over the past 100 years. The stuff fills more than 7,500 file cabinets.

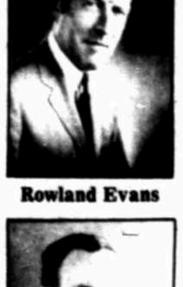
INSIDE REPORT:

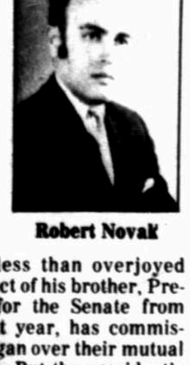
Reagan, Bush not overjoyed with relatives' political plans

WASHINGTON — "Well, I guess I just blew it," Ronald Reagan told an aide moments after he publicly expressed hope that daughter Maureen would not run for the Senate next year.



Rowland Evans

He was right. He had angered his daughter, without budging her from an irrevocable decision to go after the Senate seat now held by Republican S. I. Hayakawa. At the end of the press conference at his Santa Barbara ranch, Reagan was asked whether Maureen was going to run. "I hope not," he replied.



Robert Novak

That snap answer reflected the president's private comments. Vice President George Bush, less than overjoyed about the prospect of his brother, Prescott, running for the Senate from Connecticut next year, has commiserated with Reagan over their mutual family problems. But the president's daughter and the vice president's brother will run no matter what their famous relatives think.

REAGAN'S COMBAT RULES

The restrictive rules of engagement laid down in the Carter administration would almost certainly have saved those two Soviet-made Libyan SU-22 aircraft from being shot down by U.S. Navy F-14s over the Gulf of Sidra.

Jimmy Carter issued a directive to the Pentagon early in his administration limiting U.S. military flights over the gulf and carrying strict warnings to evade actual combat. When President Reagan took over, he was eager to demonstrate American resolution to stand up to the Libyan strongman Muammar Qaddafi, even at the risk of confrontation.

The result — shooting down two Libyan planes which shot first with no damage to the U.S. F-14s — sent this message to the world: Reagan means to restore American credibility as a country determined to stand up for international law and protect its rights.

GOP MONEY BLOOPER

Vindictive refusal by President Reagan's inner circle to forgive Californians who supported other Republican candidates last year has cost the Republican Party more than $100,000, plus wasted effort and embarrassment.

Beverly Hills millionaire David Murdoch had planned a party fund-raiser, with about 30 well-heeled guests paying $5,000 apiece at his home with the president as the featured speaker. But senior aide Michael Deaver ruled it out on grounds that Murdoch backed John B. Connally for president in 1980. That is unacceptable behavior for a Californian, say Reagan's political aides.

Instead, Republican leaders hurriedly planned a Reagan fund-raiser at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles. About one-quarter of the room was papered with giveaway tickets, and even then there were embarrassing empty seats. Insiders put the net take at not much better than $25,000 (far below the announced total), compared with an expected $150,000 from the virtually expense-free dinner at Murdoch's home.

TURNING DOWN EMBASSIES

Millionaire New York City businessman Lewis Lehrman, a leading supply-side economic theoretician, turned down separate offers to become ambassador to France and Portugal in order to launch a long-shot bid to be elected governor of New York.

After Lehrman had been passed over early this year for any economic policymaking post in the Reagan administration, he was suddenly offered the coveted Paris embassy last month. When he said no, he was offered the Lisbon post to finish Portugese base negotiations. His reason for turning down diplomatic service: At age 43, he feels his role is to stay home and fight to bring Reaganism to Albany.

Some friends of Lehrman were deeply suspicious that the sudden White House interest in him coincided with the beginning of deliberations of the U.S. Gold Commission, where Lehrman is advocating a gold standard in opposition to top Reagan policymakers. Just as Dr. Arthur Burns was silenced as an economic critic by naming him ambassador to West Germany, a diplomatic assignment would have removed Lehrman from the commission and silenced him on the gold question.

TEDDY'S FOE

Massachusetts labor leaders are privately overjoyed at the prospect of Dr. Mildred Jefferson, a black physician and anti-abortion crusader, as Republican nominee opposing Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for re-election next year — a candidacy that terrifies Republican leaders.

"Dr. Jefferson would get Teddy off the hook with our rank and file who don't like his busing position," one labor leader confided to us. Key Republicans in Massachusetts are not alarmed because she is black but by the likelihood that her right-to-life militancy would turn the Senate election into a referendum on abortion, which she would be sure to lose.

Nobody expects to beat Kennedy, but Republican leaders fear Jefferson's nomination would ruin the rest of the ticket and blight the state party's future. They hope the $500,000 warchest amassed by industrialist Ray Shamie, a political novice, will win the Republican nomination against Jefferson. But what they really want is a run by veteran moderate Rep. Margaret Heckler, who may lose her House district in congressional reapportionament.

A CORRECTION: Rep. Jake Pickle of Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, has informed us we erred in our report that he suggested to President Reagan the elimination of the $122 minimum benefit. Congressional colleagues of Pickle had told us that he was taking credit for bringing the need for Social Security reform, including the minimum benefit problem, to the president's attention. They stand by that report. Pickle did not see Reagan in the Oval Office as we reported, and we regret the error.

The Country Parson

BIBLE VERSE

Train up a child in the way he should go, and even when he is old he will not depart from it. Prov. 22:6

CHARLEY REESE

Disobedience of the law creates chaos

A businessman watching President Reagan handle the air controllers' strike said, "You know, he's the first president since Harry Truman who knows how to make a decision."

Charley Reese

It is refreshing to have a man in the White House who can see an issue clearly. It is educational to note how many others cannot bring themselves to face the same issue without splitting their inseams trying to straddle the fence.

The issue is simply this: each air controller, when he was hired, took an oath that he would not strike; the union had made a pledge, when it was certified to represent them, that it would not strike; the law says air controllers cannot strike. They did.

End of discussion. They broke their word and they broke the law. They deserve to be fired. The union deserves to be de-certified. And they both deserve the fines and the criminal prosecutions.

Every American ought to thank President Reagan for upholding the law. A great many political leaders in recent years haven't had the guts to do that. The people ought to take careful note, too, of all the people to whom the law and an oath mean nothing, and I am not talking about just the controllers and the union but also about those who publicly made excuses for their behavior.

Civil disobedience, the technique of deliberately breaking the law, can be like letting a genie out of a bottle. You may have a good reason for taking the stopper out, but once the genie is free, he may wreak havoc. Civil disobedience became popular during the civil rights revolution. It escalated during the Vietnam Era. In my opinion, it produced what it always produces: first marches and demonstrations and then riots, arson, looting, and assassinations.

A society of laws is a fragile thing. It rests really on the voluntary support of the people. If all of us decide to take the law into our own hands, there aren't enough police to stop us. That's why, to maintain an orderly society every public figure should be preaching obedience to the law as if he were conducting a religious revival. In fact, the duty of a public figure is to fashion just laws and uphold the principle of obedience to the law.

The problem with breaking laws you don't think are just is that there is no logical way to stop the process once it starts. I have heard liberals argue that it's okay to break "little" laws but not big ones. That is no argument at all. If the legal process isn't going to be the final judge of what is right behavior, then you open the door to anarchy.

You may not like this law, but I may not like another and my neighbor may dislike still another. You may think it's alright to strike in violation of the law; another may think it's alright to kill provided it's done in the name of a good cause. There isn't a terrorist on earth who isn't convinced that he is doing what is right, that his cause is more important than life or law.

If we wish to live in a reasonably safe environment, then it must be a society ruled only by laws. We must, as individuals, obey the laws. We must elect leaders who will always support the principle of obedience to the law. We must never tolerate public figures, be they editors, politicians, lawyers, union leaders, or priests who advocate disobedience of the law.

Our gutless politicians did that in the Sixties, and we are paying the price. The alternative to a society of law is anarchy — every many for himself, gang versus gang, and the deciding factors: force and intimidation.

Voyager 'in good health' as it approaches Saturn

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2, America's mechanical emissary to distant worlds, swooped past battered, frozen moons and glimmering rings today as it neared its closest approach to Saturn's pastel surface.

On the eve of the encounter, the Voyager was pronounced "in excellent health" with everything working smoothly both on the spaceship and at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, where nearly 500 scientists, engineers and technicians were making final preparations.

Mission director Richard Laeser said last-minute changes were still being made Monday in some of Voyager's assignments.

The ship cruises just 63,000 miles above Saturn's cloud tops at 11:24 p.m. EDT. News of the fly-by won't reach Earth, however, until the radio signals arrive at 12:50 a.m. Wednesday.

Its television eyes shifting frantically from one mystifying sight to the next, the robot explorer was giving earthlings their best look at an exotic kingdom 96 million miles away — a giant, gaseous world swaddled in delicately painted clouds.

The ship's cameras and instruments examined the strangly misshapen moon Hyperion late Monday, then looked from 413,000 miles at giant Titan, a planet-sized moon hidden inside a dense atmosphere, early today. On Saturday evening the spacecraft scanned another of Saturn's 17 known moons, two-tone, reddish Iapetus, with one extremely dark hemisphere and the other, a shiny region of cratered ice.

Voyager continues poking and probing one of the solar system's most spectacular sights and greatest mysteries — the cradle of rings that reaches 150,000 miles from Saturn. A major chore for Voyager 2 is to search for clues that might explain the myriad of tiny ringlets found hiding in the major rings when a sister ship, Voyager 1, encountered Saturn last November.

The ship's cameras have been taking high-resolution pictures of selected regions of the rings in hopes of confirming a popular theory for the rings' startling complexity. The search is for small moonlets — less than 20 miles across — that might be sweeping out gaps within the rings and thus creating the smaller ringlets.

With most pictures of target areas already examined, imaging team leader Brad Smith said Monday no moonlets have turned up and the theory seems to be slipping away.

"We now find ourselves at a point where we had hoped not to be," he said. "We are looking, desperately now, for other solutions."

AP Laserphoto

At a diameter of 900 miles, Iapetus, the outermost of Saturn's large satellites, is noteworthy for the very dark material covering the ice crust of its leading hemishpere, seen in the lower righthand section of this photo. Voyager 2, passing four times closer to the satellite than Voyager 1, took this photo Aug. 22 from a distance of 680,000 miles.

Pictures of Hyperion, taken before Voyager's encounter, from 300,000 miles, with the moon late Monday, revealed an object that looks like a giant peanut or a battered beer can, although Smith said, "It's beginning to look more like a hockey puck."

In either case, he said, it certainly "looks rather strange. We are dealing with a somewhat peculiar object which may have some rather peculiar dynmics associated with it."

Roughly 130 miles by 220 miles, the moon's long axis seemed not to point as it should at Saturn, leading some scientists to suggest it might have been knocked out of its normal orientation by a strong impact of some kind.

As it races past Saturn, at speeds reaching more than 50,000 mph, Voyager 2 will grab close peeks at four more icy moons.

Backup crew to join shuttle test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After a successful mock launch, the backup crew of the space shuttle Columbia was to join astronauts Joe Engle and Dick Truly for more testing to simulate problems during liftoff and re-entry of the spacecraft.

The Columbia received high grades Monday after Engle and Truly guided the shuttle through the make-believe launch despite an eight-hour delay caused by a balky computer.

Astronauts Thomas Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield will join the two in today's testing.

"Everything went very well on the second attempt," said George Page, director of shuttle operations. "A quick look at the data shows no significant problems."

The Columbia is scheduled to be rolled out of its hangar in the Vehicle Assembly Building to its launch pad Aug. 31 for its second flight into space.

Launch is still set for Sept. 30, although some officials in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have already said the date will be pushed back because of a series of minor delays in checking out and testing the Columbia's complex systems.

Saudis agree to restrictions on use of American AWACS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, opening "an uphill fight" to keep Congress from rejecting the sale of sophisticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia, says the Saudis have agreed to restrictions that would lessen the threat to Israel.

President Reagan offically notified lawmakers Monday that he has decided to sell the Saudis $8.5 billion in arms, including five Airborne Warning and Control System — AWACS — planes and gear to increase the flying range of 62 U.S.-made F-15s already purchased by the Saudis.

It would be the largest U.S. arms sale ever to another nation.

State Department officials, who briefed reporters on the condition they not be identified, said the Saudi planes would be less sophisticated than the AWACS used by the United States and its NATO allies.

There also would be restrictions on where the planes could operate and Americans would be on them initially, although they would be manned entirely by the Saudis after five years, the officials said.

While they refused to say what areas would be off-limits to the planes, one official repeated past administration statements that Israeli fighters could shoot them down if they flew close enough to spy on Israel's air operations. AWACS can monitor all planes within 200 miles.

Another offical conceded there was no way to guarantee the safety of Americans, either on the planes or on the ground, in the event of a Saudi-Israeli conflict.

State Departent officials said more than 400 Americans, including 30 Air Force training personnel, would be assigned to Saudi Arabia under the proposed contract. The numbers would diminish with time but Americans would be assigned there as long as the planes lasted, they said.

Under the timetable administration officials announced Monday, the sale will go through unless both the House and Senate vote against it by Oct. 30. The first planes would be delivered in late 1985.

A majority in both houses already have indicated opposition to the sale.

One State Department official said he would not deny "it's going to be an uphill fight, but we are confident, very confident, that the sheer logic of what we are proposing is so overwhelming as to guarantee the sale."

The administration told four congressional committees Monday that it will give them formal preliminary notice of the sale Sept. 9 and final notice Sept. 30. The final notice will trigger a 30-day period for Congress to either veto the sale or allow it to go ahead.

The Israli Embassy on Monday reiterated opposition to the AWACS sale, saying Israel "considers the sale of the AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia a danger to its security and to the military balance in the area."

Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron, after meeting with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. following Monday's announcement, told reporters "I don't know of any" restrictions on the AWACS planes that would be sold to the Saudis.

State Department briefers said Monday that the sale is crucial to the administration's strategy of protecting Middle East oil and winning influenee in that region against Soviet expansion.

Small amount of nerve gas found in container around Weteye bomb

DENVER (AP) — A "minute" amount of nerve gas has been found in the shipping container surrounding one of the Weteye nerve gas bombs scheduled for shipment from Denver to Utah, according to the chief chemist of the Colorado Health Department.

Chemist William Dunn said Monday the concentration of nerve agent found during preflight testing was barely detectable and was so low the bomb was not considered to be leaking by U.S. Army standards.

"You could walk around that bomb all day and it wouldn't affect you" because the concentration was so low, Dunn said.

An extra layer of protective packing would be placed around this particlar bomb before it was shipped to Utah's Tooele Army Depot, Dunn said. The extra layer of packing would be in addition to the hermetically sealed storage and shipping container surrounding each of the 888 Weteyes.

Each bomb contains about 346 pounds of GB nerve gas, a drop of which can cause instant death to humans through contact with skin.

The Army has been testing the air inside the shipping containers before moving the bombs to Utah.

John Hinckley, Jr., is escorted by federal marshals upon arriving at the Quantico Marine Base last Tuesday after arriving by helicopter from a federal prison in North Carolina.

Hinckley's lawyer has not decided on defense

WASHINGON (AP) — John W. Hinckey Jr., due in court Friday to enter pleas to formal charges of trying to assassinate President Reagan, has yet to decide what defense to use, his chief lawyer says.

"When this decision has been reached, it will be communicated to the court," defense attorney Vincent J. Fuller said Monday after a federal grand jury returned a 13-count indictment against the 26-year-old Hinckley.

Fuller has had a defense medical team examining Hinckley, described by his parents as "our troubled son."

The indictment accused Hinckley of attempting to kill Reagan and three others in the March 30 shooting outside the Washington Hilton. White House press secretary James S. Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy and Washington policean Thomas Delahanty also were wounded in the attack. Brady, who was shot through the brain, remains hospitalized.

The indictment, delivered to U.S. Magistrate Jean F. Dwyer during a one-minute proceeding Monday, did not mention conspiracy. The FBI has said it believes the Colorado resident acted alone.

Five of the counts could bring life imprisonment. If Hinckley pleads innocent by reason of insanity and a jury agrees, he would be placed in a mental institution until a judge decided he was no longer dangerous to society.

To sustain an insanity plea, Hinckley would have to convince a jury that he "lacked substantial capacity to conform his conduct to the requirements of the lw."

Friday's arraignment will be conducted by U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, who presided recently over the retrial and acquittal of two anti-Casro Cubans accused in the 1976 car-bombing assassination of Orlando Letelier, former Chilean ambassador to the United States. Parker was selected by lot.

Federal law requires that a trial begin within 80 days of arraignment, but either side may request a delay.

The defendant's father, Denver oilman John W. Hinckley, issued a statement Monday sayng he and his wife, Joanne, "will be grateful when this tragic episode is finally over."

"We pray that not only the innocent indiiduals injured in this misfortune recover completely but that the best result is obtained for our troubled son as well," the statement said. "We love him and will continue to stand by him."

Hispanic leader wants civil rights enforcer dismissed

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan should fire the government's chief civil rights enforcer and disassociate the adminisration from the comments of Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, the head of the nation's largest Hispanic organization said.

Tony Bonilla, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said he sent telegrams Monday to Reagan and Attorney General William French Smith demanding the firing of Reynolds.

"Hispanics and other minorities can forget about any protection as long as he remains there," said Bonilla.

Reynolds, the assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said Friday he was against forced busing and numerical goals and timetables for minority hiring.

When asked about his position on extension of the voting rights act, Reynolds said, "I really don't have a personal view"

"Our feeling is that the chief enforcer of the Justie Departent should have a view and should be leading the charge for its extension," said Bonilla.

He said his organization is demanding that Reagan and Smith dismiss Reynolds and "disassociate themselves wth declarations made by this joker."

Bonilla returned to Texas Monday from Atlanta here he met with Hispanic leaders in Georgia and with Coretta Scott King, the widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Bonilla said he met wth Mrs. King, head of the Center for Non-Violent Social Change, to "develope a coalition and improve the lines of communication with the black leadership in America."

"We have agreed to work together to bring about a better understanding between blacks and Hispanics, particularly during this time of cutting back on programs and funding," Bonilla said.

"I stressed in talks with Mrs. King that the black and Hispanic leadership must get together to develop strategies that will prevent any conflict with blacks and Hispanics seeking block grant funds at the local and state level."

Bonilla said he also met with Hispanic leaders to call for release of 1,800 Cuban refugees held at the federal prison in Atlanta.

He said the Cubans are being "denied their liberty without due process of law."

The detainees, many of whom had criminal records in Cuba, were among 130,000 refugees who arrived in the country last year as part of the "Freedom Flotilla" boat lift from Cuba.

32-year-old twins share special intimacy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Yvette and Yvonne Jones are Siamese twins, best friends who share a lively interest in the world. But even with an intimacy that dictates both will die at the same time, they can never see each others' faces, except in a mirror.

The women were born 32 years ago joined at the tops of their heads — a condition known as craniopagus twins.

The Siamese twins have normally developed bodies, separate brains and different personalities. It is a type of abnormality that doctors say occurs perhaps once in every 2.5 million births.

The twins must walk with their necks turned to the side at nearly a 90 degree angle, but they insist it does not hurt. And with their connected circulation, the death of one would mean death for both, said Dr. Frank Anderson, a pediatric neurosurgeon at Childrens Hospital.

Despite lives that began as circus attractions to help pay their hospital bill, the twins are free of bitterness and can charm people who are shocked by their appearance.

Recently, a stunned waiter dropped his order pad and spilled the wine he was carrying as he approached their table.

Never missing a beat, Yvonne calmly introduced him to everyone at the table exept her sister. When Yvette piped up to introduce herself, Yvonne joked, "Oh, yeah, I forgot about her."

The waiter was at ease.

"People can't help themselves," said Yvette, the more timid of the pair. "They're just so...surprised when they see us. But once they get over that, people are usually nice. And curious. They always want to ask us a bunch of questions."

Educated by tutors, they received high school equivalency certificates in 1967. They even run together, despite predictions that they would never be able to do more than crawl.

Anderson was among the physicians who saw the children soon after the were born at what is now Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center. He said the mother, Willa Jones, then 38, didn't want surgery to separate them because of the risk one or both would die. Anderson said the possibility of a surgical separation now was "theoretical."

The twins said they don't want to be separated.

"It would just seem so strange," said Yvonne. "We've been this way for so long." As for the possibility of her sister dying first: "I'll worry about it when the time comes."

Anderson said he has seen two other sets of craniopagus twins. In a case 15 years ago, both children died while being separated. In the other case, four years ago, one girl died eight days after separation, but the other survived and today "she's outstanding, she really is," Anderson said.

Another set of twins attached by the head, Lisa and Elisa Hansen, were successfully separated in a pioneering 1979 operation in Salt Lake City when they were a year old.

When the Jones twins were born, the girls' mother was divorced with five normally developed children she supported by working as a presser in Los Angeles' garment district. She refused suggestions the Siamese twins be institutionalized.

"God gave them to me," she said, "so I guess he'll show me the way to raise them."

Overwhelmed by a $14,000 hospital bill, the mother signed a contract with the Clyde Beatty Circus to disply the twins. But they were removed from the circus after Mrs. Jones married factory worker Charles McCarther two years later.

The pair worked for five years as gospel singers in Georgia, then moved back to Los Angeles.

They live on Social Security and welfare in a home they share with another family. The sisters and mother sleep together in a king-size bed. The twins spend much of their day lying on the bed, watching TV, reading or working word puzzles.

Both say they'd like to marry, pointing out Siamese twins who gave the condition its popular name — Chang and Eng, born in 1811 in what was then Siam — married and had children. However, they say their friendships with men so far have been platonic.

"They kiss both of us goodnight," said Yvonne.

The twins' appearances in public can bring out the best — and worst — in people.

"Oh, gross! How gross!" shrieked a teen-ager when the twins went to a movie, while a woman snapped, "Why would they come out in public?" But a man came over, kissed Yvonne and Yvette on the hand and said, "God bless, sisters" before walking away.

Mrs. America contestants suing pageant, sponsors

Boyd

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two contestants who lost the race to be crowned Mrs. America are suing the pageant, alleging the contest was fixed.

In a Superior Court suit filed Monday by attorney Marvin Mitchelson, Denise Ames, 29, and Vicki Vidoni, 28, claim the winner "was predetermined by design and with the knowledge and consent of" the contest operators, who were sued individually along with the Beverly Hills-based Mrs. America Pageants, Inc.

Mitchelson said he conducted a six-month investigation into April's pageant in Las Vegas before deciding to file suit. He added that more than 25 other contestants have backed up the allegations by Mrs. Ames, who was Mrs. Nevada, and Ms. Vidoni, who was Mrs. Maryland.

They say that some judges admitted to contestants they were pressured about their choices, and some contestants were offered payoffs for not complaining about the way the pageant was run, Mitchelson said.

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Vice President George Bush was testing the waters, but he came up empty handed.

While waiting for guests to arrive at the Portland airport Monday, Bush fished quietly for an hour from the Maine State Pier on the city's waterfront, according to police.

No one recognized or interrupted him at the pier, but the fish weren't very obliging, said Capt. Clement Dodd of the Portland police department. The vice president didn't catch a thing.

Bush came and went in his speedboat, Fidelity, accompanied by his cocker spaniel, Fred.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, are vacationing at their summer home in Kennebunkport.

Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's oldest daughter says she's thinking "very seriously" about running for the U.S. Senate next year and will make a decision within two months.

Maureen Reagan also said Monday she doesn't believe her father's remark two weeks ago that he hopes she doesn't run means he opposes her prospective candidacy for the seat now held by Republican S.I. Hayakawa. Hayakawa says he is seeking re-election and she would be one of nine prospective Republican candidates challenging him.

The 40-year-old Ms. Reagan, who is president of a foreign trade association, said she has not yet accepted any campaign contributions but has had "very encouraging" meetings with potential contributors.

She made her remarks in a brief interview before a speech to a Sacramento business group.

Ms. Reagan said she has not talked with her father since Aug. 13, when he was asked by reporters if he expected her to run for the Senate and replied, "I hope not." But she said she thought the president's remark had been misunderstood.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hundreds of mourners attended a service marking the 55th anniversary of the death of of sflent film star Rudolph Valentino.

Singer Rudy Vallee told the crowd Monday their attendance was testimony to the mystique of the actor.

"People will cherish his memory for time eternal," Vallee said. "I don't think any performer in the world, including (Frank) Sinatra, (the late Bing) Crosby or (John) Travolta, had the remarkable charisma that Valentino had."

Leadership Midland deadline approaches

Applications for the Leadership Midland program, sponsored jointly by the Chamber of Commerce and Midland College, will be accepted until Friday.

The program, designed to give interested men and women with leadership potential the opportunity to develop their knowledge of Midland, is in its fourth year.

Forty individuals will be selected for the course, which will provide intensive training for leadership in areas strategic to the city's well-being.

Applicants who demonstrate management and/or leadership ability, show an interest in community affairs and have the time and talent to offer the community will be eligible.

Participants applying for the program should be able to commit themselves to participate one full day on the second Thursday of each month for nine months. These sessions provide information on the city through lectures, dialogue between participants and community decision makers and tours of various community facilities.

Topics cover city concerns of regional economy, public education, decision-making processes, tools of leadership, cultural and recreational facilities and organizations, social and charitable agenicies, government and criminal justice, housing and employment, problems of aging, poverty and youth concerns.

Applicants will be chosen by an anonymous admissions committee. Each individual selected for participation in Leadership Midland or that person's employer will be asked to pay a fee of $275 for the program. Partial scholarships will be available on a limited basis for qualified applicants who may require assistance.

Applications may be obtained from the Chamber of Commerce, and should be returned by Friday to the chamber office, P.O. Box 1890. Successful applicants will then be notified within two weeks.

For more information call the Midland Chamber of Commerce at 683-3381

Controller fighting fear

By MELISSA JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Fear is a feeling that hits a lot closer to home these days in the household of air traffic controller Bill Christensen, who is crossing a picket line to work during his union's nationwide walkout.

Christensen, 33, and his wife, Caren, acknowledge being concerned about the safety of their 10-year-old daughter and 8-year-old son when they ride their bicycles around the block near their suburban Elgin home.

None of the family has been a victim of violence during the strike, but concern — Christensen prefers not to use the word fear — about the possibility clouds his generally upbeat outlook on his decision not to walk out on his job at O'Hare International Airport's control tower.

"That concern is still there because you just don't know what they're going to do," said Christensen, a member of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization for seven years. "These guys are getting frustrated. They don't know whose doing what. And it's hard on them. Talk about stress — they're under more stress than I am by working."

Their home was plagued briefly by telephone callers who hung up without speaking. Last week they received a letter with no return address. It contained a picture of "an ugly black thing, ' identified as a scab, said Mrs. Christensen, and a note saying that scabs were a disgrace to God.

Those not-so-subtle reminders contribute to their concern about what would happen if the strikers were allowed to return from what the government says is an illegal strike.

Christensen endured stony silence from co-workers after he told them them two months ago he would not join a walkout. And, he says, any sort of amnesty for strikers would make him the target of harassment or "anything they can do."

"I'm still an outcast where they're concerned, whether they come back or not," he said. "(If they come back) I'd really have to watch myself and be careful."

Mrs. Christnsen echoes his concern. When she saw news reports of possible amnesty for the strikers, she said,"I thought, now they're going to come after Bill to make him lose his job. They can do that. They can make it look bad for him in the tower.

"There's a fear — not that they're going to kill him — but that they could do enough to make him a nervous wreck," she said.

Although his daily routine is basically unchanged by the strike, he takes a secret path to the tower to avoid heckling incidents.

The hours are longer, but that's to be expected, says Christensen, who despite six-day work-weeks and additional overtime finds room for yardwork and softball with his church's team.

It's all made easier by his family — which he says has been "super understanding" — and his religion.

For strikers, some decisions wait

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer

NORTH OLMSTED, Ohio (AP) — Nick Motsis kicked some loose gravel from his cement driveway, examining pock marks created from several years of road salt.

"You know, I had planned to use my income tax money to get this thing replaced...have a few of the guys out and redo the driveway," he said. "Now I have to use that money to pay bills."

For Motsis, his wife, Donna, and their two children ,the driveway problem is only a temporary diversion. A job action that Motsis said he never believed would happen — the nationwide walkout by air traffic controllers — is in its fourth week.

Money at the Motsis home is short, but determination runs long.

"I guess the big development is that I found out I can still retire, and I'm going to," Motsis said last week.

At 50, Motsis was a dean of air traffic controllers at Hopkins International Airport in Cleveland. He claims to be one of few to reach retirement age in what he and other members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization call a pressure-cooker job, although he kept on working until the strike began.

"I would find it difficult to go back to work for an employer that showed its true face in a battle like this," he said.

His wife corrected him, saying the retirement decision isn't final yet, even though, "he's leaning toward it."

Although he's received notification of termination, Motsis has retirement as an option since the actual date of termination has not been decided by the Federal Aviation Administration. He said he has eight days from the day his termination letter arrives to retire.

"I may cut, but I won't run," Motsis said. "If I retire, I'll stick right with these guys until it's over. I won't start reorganizing my life until all of us do. Right now, this is my big fight."

The couple and their children — Lisa, 15, and Michael, 12 — have made the PATCO strike a family project. Motsis is the liaison to the Cleveland AFL-CIO Council, a job that involves about 45 hours a week. His wife and children help at strike headquarters when needed.

The family doesn't pretend to understand why they're receiving continued support from neighbors in their upper-middle class neighborhood, 15 miles from downtown Cleveland.

"This is a para-professional neighborhood," Motsis said. "I can see many of them (neighbors) being dead-set against me. Instead, they throw their arms around me, hug me and tell me they're with me in this."

FAA action should stabilize schedules at busy airports

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Federal Aviation Administration is moving to help the nation's airlines and passengers cope with the air traffic controllers strike, a larger labor union is assisting the 12,000 strikers.

The FAA took major steps Monday to stabilize air travel over the next eight months by informing the major airlines they would share the maximum number of flights that will be allowed hour by hour at the 22 busiest airports.

The agency said the total number of flights nationwide would remain at 25 percent below pre-strike totals through next April 24 but added that traffic at the non-busiest airports should be about normal.

Meanwhile, the Communications Workers of America, which has public employees among its approximately 650,000 members, announced Monday it would give $100,000 to a special AFL-CIO fund to aid strikers and their families.

The airlines were told by the FAA to revise flight schedules based on the FAA limitations. They will be required to adhere to the schedules until Oct. 24, when they will be allowed to adjust flights as long as they do not exceed the maximum number allowed per hour.

"Such schedules will give the traveling public information it can rely on whe they make travel plans," an FAA statement said.

The agency said it hopes the new schedules will spread flights over a longer period of the day, reducing the number during peak periods and increasing the number at other times.

The airlines are expected to submit their new schedules to the Official Airline Guide by Thursday.

Judge orders five refugees freed

By ROBERT UNRUH
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A federal judge in Cheyenne, Wyo. has ordered the release of five juvenile Cuban refugees and caustically criticized the federal government for keeping them in jail more than a year without cause.

"I think it's time the federal government's ostracism of Cubans was stopped," U.S. District Judge Clarence Brimmer said Monday.

"The court finds that an exclusionary hearing was held three or four months ago but the Department of State is apparently going to wait about 18 months before deciding on the plaintiffs' applications for asylum," Brimmer said onday.

"I find this shocking," he said. "I tend to agree (that) the federal policy is that juveniles should not be confined if possible."

Brimmer's decision means at least temporary freedom for the five juveniles who came to the United States during the "Freedom Flotilla" of refugees from Cuba in May 1980.

The five are Lazaro Hidalgo-Rodriguez, Emilio Cavrere-Vasquez, Rene Roriguez-Mea, Lorenzo Escobar-Sulueta and Manuel Diaz-Bandera. All are 17 or 18 and had been held in Colorado or Wyoming since they came to the United States.

Acording to testimony, each of the youths had been accused or convicted in Cuba of a minor crime such as stealing beans and rice to eat. One testified, however, that he was jailed in Cuba for no more than witnessing the theft of a wallet.

Norman Schoss, of the Immigration and Naturalization Service regional office in Colorado, said heaings on whether to rule the teen-agers excludable aliens had been held. He said a decision was being delayd by the State Department.

Brimmer said the INS had "long since forfeited its right" to rule the aliens excludable, which would mean their deportation.

"The acts of...holding them estopped the right to hold exclusionary hearings," he said. Besides, Brimmer ruled, Cuba has made it clear it is not accepting any aliens subject to deportation by the United States.

Brimmer also noted that the Bill of Rights guarantees that "no person" shall be deprived of life, liberty or the pursuit of happiness without due process of law.

'It doesn't sav citizens," he said.

Schoss said the Attorney General has set up boards to review the cases of about 1,800 jailed refugees and make recommendations, and that juveniles were on te top of the list.

But Brimmer said more delays are likely and decided the juveniles should not be held "one day longer."

Suspicious fires again plague northeastern city

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press Writer

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Fire swept through a condemned four-story apartment building, killing at least six people in this Massacusetts mill city notorious for its suspicious blazes, authorities said today.

Five of the victims' burned to death and the sixth died after jumping from the burning building, authorities said.

Police said the fire began in South Holyoke about 10:45 p.m. EDT Monday. Authorities at Holyoke and Providence hospitals said four of the victims were children, the other two adults.

In addition, two persons were treated at Holyoke for burns and injuries. Deputy Fire Chief John Barnett said a woman and four children were found dead on the fourth floor.

Officers caught two residents as they jumped to safety, authorities said.

Barnett said there was a small fire in the building a month ago, and several people in the building were to be witnesses in an arson case connected with that fire.

The Holyoke and state arson squad were checking the rubble today, but officials declined to speculate on a cause.

"The screaming woke me up and then I got out," said Angel Morale, a resident of the building's second floor.

Identifications were not immediately available.

Barnett said 25 people were in the building at the time of the fire, which apparently moved up the staircase. That blocked the escape route of top floor residents who had to climb down the stairs to reach the fire escape.

"We tried to get them out, but the whole front of the building was a sheet of flame and we couldn't get up the ladder," Barnett said.

He said two children were found just inside the fire escape window on the top floor.

Pointing to the charged stairway, the deputy chief said, "That goes all the way to the top floor. People on the top floor could see the fire underneath. They didn't have a prayer."

Witnesses said they could hear screams from the top floor, and then silence.

"Officers on the scene say the building was engulfed...it went up very quickly. It would have been hard to escape," said a police spokesman who asked not to be identified.

The building was condemned Aug. 5 in Hampden County Housing Court because of building code violations. At that time, Judge James L. Landers had ordered that tenants vacate the building immediately, but many had stayed on.

Earlier this year, officials said suspicious fires in this city of 43,000 just keep "happening and happening an happening."

Roughage diet can relieve constipation

Dear Dr. Solomon: My sister suffered severely from constipation after she gave birth. Now that I am pregnant, I'm wondering how I can avoid the same problem. Is there a laxative you would recommend? — Connie, Miami, Fla.

Dear Connie: You can usually avoid or relieve constipation by having a diet rich in roughage. Include lettuce, greens, and prune juice. Laxatives should be avoided unless recommended by a doctor.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My older child had an allergy to citrus fruits when he was a baby. Now that I have had another child, I would like to avoid that problem if it is at all possible. Would it be a good idea not to give the baby citrus fruits until he is older? — Mrs. N.P., Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Mrs. P.: Withholding citrus fruits will postpone an allergic reaction, but will not prevent it. Two researchers at the University of Helsinki, Drs. Ulla M. Saarinen and Merja Kajosaari, compared children who had begun eating citrus fruits before the age of three months, with chilren who had not had any during their first year. Both groups had the same incidence of citrus allergies.

However, one advantage of eliminating citrus fruits may be that more attention could be given to more important allergies, such as cow's milk or cereals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was growing up, I don't recall any of my friends suffering from asthma. Now that I have children of my own, it seems I hear about it all the time. Either one of my child's friends has the illness, or a classmate has been absent from school because of it.

Is the number of people who suffer from asthma actually increasing, or is there just more publicity about the condition? I'd also like to know what causes asthma, and whether it is inherited. — Mrs. T.Y., Clearwater, Fla.

Dear Mrs. Y.: Many doctors are of the opinon that the number of cases of asthma, as well as the severity of the condition, has increased over the past 25 years; however, it is not possible to confirm or refute this claim. There is general agreement that despite major advances in the development of drugs for the treatment of asthma, the condition continues to present serious problems.

Various studies have indicated that asthma has a strong genetic basis, but it is still not possible to identify individuals who would be considered at risk of developing the disease. Moreover, while a number of conditions are believed to be associated with the onset of asthma, it is not clear what role each plays. These factors include the irritants and allergens found in the air, exercise, climate, emotions, and respiratory tract infections.

Given the possibility that there may be as many as 10 million asthmatic patients in the United States, it is not surprising that we read so much about the condition.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Kennedy's bid to end three-martini lunches fails

WSHINGTON (AP) — Liberal Democrats have been denouncing the tax-deductible business lunch since the days when the restaurant tabs ran to 10 or $15. They used to call it the martini lunch. Now they say it's three martinis, caviar and fancy wine.

Whatever the martini quota, it is still on the menu, the efforts of would-be tax reformers not withstanding. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy sponsored the latest attempt to cut the lunch deduction and, like those who had tried before, got nowhere.

His amendment to President Reagan's tax bill was little more than a token effort to keep the subject alive. He lost, 8-12.

"I believe I have heard this argument before," said Kansas Republican Bob Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who didn't even bother to speak against the Kennedy amendment.

He'll hear the argument again, probably in the next campaign. The effort to limit business eductions for entertainment has been a fixture since John F. Kennedy was president.

Jimmy Carter pushed the issue from the White House, too, but with no more success.

So the three-martini lunch is still a legitimate tax deduction, still a symbol and slogan for Democrats who argue that the system subsidizes privilege. "We are not talking only about the three-martini lunch," Kennedy told the Senate when it was considering the tax bill that now is law. "It is also the chateaubriand steak and the bearnaise sauce, the caviar and the flaming desserts and the fancy wine."

Kennedy said the business meals deduction costs more than $3 billion a year in tax revenues and proposed that it be cut in half, the same change Carter wanted to make.

The Massachusetts senator called the entertainment deduction "nothing more than food stamps for the rich."

"Cutting the business meals deduction in half will ensure that the sacrifices required by the policy of budget restrait will be shared fairly," he said. "If the poor and middle class are being asked to pay more for their food, it is unconscionable to contine unchecked a $3 billion federal subsidy for three-martini lunches and luxary meals for the wealthiest people in the country."

Craftsman etches gold tableaus on weapons

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Sam Shortes simply got tired of watching his research get tossed in the technological trash heap, another victim of scientific progres.

So the former Texas Instruments researcher has melded his scientiic wizardry with a 700-year-old art form — etching gold-inlaid tableaus of nature and history on the metal surfaces of knives and firearms.

"Technology basically is a disposable item," Shortes says, "but I expect my works to be in museums."

John Wayne liked a set of etched knives done by Shortes' Aurum (Latin for gold) Etchings so much, he shelled out $2,000, Shortes says.

Now Aurum is designing limited-edition commemorative single-action guns — possibly depicting scenes from the late actor's movies — as requested by Wayne's son, Patrick.

"People were always giving John Wayne things," Shortes says. "Then when they'd be having a beer with a buddy, they'd say, 'John Wayne owns an oil painting I did.' Well, it makes me feel good to think John Wayne would pay $2,000 for work of mine."

The average customer doesn't walk into the Aurum offices in this Dallas surburb and purchase a single etched piece, which can run anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000.

Shortes instead deals with firearm manufacturers such as Colt, Remington and Winchester — though he currently is busy planning his foray into the retail world of etched belt buckles and etched office art.

Colt Industries is the major stockholder, purchasing 61 percent of Aurum's stock when it was just a fledgling company, but Shortes still oversees all aspects of the unique busines he expects to reap $2 million this year.

Aurum is Shortes' baby — lock, stock (39 percent of it) and barrel.

His 40 to 50 employees have done "work with the fidelity of a postage stamp" for a gamut of organizations — 2,00 engraved knives for the National Rifle Assocation, 1,800 firearms for the Michigan State Poice, now 2,000 engraved shotguns for the Los Angees Police Officers Association.

Shortes says most of his clients hail from the overlapping Sun and Bible Belts, which form a sort of Gun Belt that has stretches into Southern California and Michigan.

His customers maintain a common tenet, though. They never fire Aurum's crafted weapons, for that would diminish their value.

Shortes picks up a calculator designed by the company he used to invent for and comments that not one facet of his research is used to make he palm-sized mathematcal gizmo work these days.

The updated technique of his artful etchings, however, stretches back eras to a tenth-century acid etching procss.

A large piece of artwork is reduced to grace the small surface of a knife or firearm. A positive film of the art then is taped to the metal, bathed in material called photo-resist.

When exposed to light, photo-resist clings to the metal and protects it from the acid, the same principle kids use when coating an Easter egg with wax to color certain portions.

His craftsmen can turn out volumes more than the only four or five metalsmiths employed by Colt, but Shortes insists, "We're not running a doughnut machine here.

"You can be a really good artist and successfully starve to death," he says. "I may be running a business, but I'm an artist at heart."

Judge puts off medfly ruling

As California officials fighting fruit flies expanded a quarantine zone to more than 3,000 square miles, a federal judge in Dallas gave California growers more time to reach agreement with Texas over a proposed expanded quarantine of fruit and vegetables.

U.S. Disrict Judge Patrick Higgenbotham on Monday extended the deadline by which Texas Agricultural Commissoner Reagan Brown and California officials must agree on the scope of Texas' proposed quarantine of California's produce.

Higginbotham had said if the two states couldn't agree, he would rule today on Brown's request that a federal quarantine on some California counties infested with the Meiterranea fruit fly be extended. Higginbothams order did not set a new deadline.

Texas has backed off its demand for a statewide quarantine of California fruit and now seeks only a quarantine of medfly-host fruit from counties infested with the insect and adjoining counties, said David Ivey, Texas plant quarantne director. Texas officials are concerned that medflies will be carried in fruit from California to Texas and endanger farming there.

In the past few weeks, however, as more fertile flies have been discovered, California medfly project officials have had to expand the zone under quarantine and the area being sprayed by aerial pesticides.

"Of course it's discouraging," said Dick Thompson, California's medfly eradication project spokesman. "We knew we were going to find satellite infestations," apparently caused by motorists who disregarded state warnings and transported suspect fruit,he said.

If Texas is successful in its suit, the quarantine imposed in California would include a substantial portion of the nations richest farming region.

The current federal quarantine, covering all or portions of six counties south and east of San Francisco, grew to at least 3,140 square miles Monday. A few days ago, the qarantine region was about 700 square miles smaller.

Medfly officials also increased an aerial spray zone to 1,157 square miles, an increase of more than 400 square miles.

A fertile fly found in Hollister, Calif., over the weekend brought the first aerial spraying to that farm community Saturay, and officials planned to douse a broader, 358-square-mile region around Hollister early today.

Meanwhile, in Florida, a helicopter doused 12 square miles of Tampa with malathion Monday. The area is just west of Florida's lucrative citrus belt.

Five medflies have been found since Aug. 4 in the 24-square-mile Florida spraying zone, half of which was treated Sunday. Workers continued checking thousands of traps, but no additional pests have been found since Aug. 14, officials said.

Many vests

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

You're going to love this! It makes you feel so frugal.

We all know that the price of patterns is out of sight. Therefore, the more times you use a pattern, the less it costs. However, it is more than a little boring to make the same thing two or three times. What we need to do is make the same thing — only make it different. Enter my vest idea.

I took one very simple button vest pattern and made seven — count 'em — seven totally different vests. You can do the same thing with any pattern and a bit of ingenuity.

From quilted fabric: Cut the vest waist length and along the center front lines. Round the front corners. Line the vest with a coordinating print and add two frogs for closing.

From linen: Cut the vest below the waist and square the corners. Trim the neckline and front edges with ecru eyelet ruffling. From each side seam stitch two rows of tan grosgrain ribbon (three-eighths inches). Overlap the vest at center front and tie the ribbons to close.

From denim: Cut waist length and square the corners. Add a small breast pocket. Into the pocket tuck a scrap of bandana print (the same print is used for the lining). Topstitch all edges in red and use silver "overall" buttons.

From brown and white baby-cord: Edge in dark brown piping except for armholes. Use brown and white buttons and make buttonholes from dark brown thread.

DEAR ABBY

Borrowed 'gift' makes her blue

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Bill and I were married June 1, 1980. We received many gifts of money from relatives, but we never got anything from my mother's sister, Aunt Jenny, who is usually pretty generous. We thought it was rather strange, but of course we didn't say anything.

Well, we just found out that the May before our wedding, my mother borrowed $500 from Aunt Jenny with the understanding that starting June 1 she would give Aunt Jenny $100 a month to pay back the loan. Since our wedding was June 1, Aunt Jenny told my mother to give the first $100 to Bill and me as her (Aunt Jenny's) wedding present.

It's been over a year now, and Mom still hasn't given us the $100. My mother is always crying "poor mouth," but she eats out with her friends nearly every night, plays bingo three nights a week and works two jobs. The money would come in handy now as we have a baby.

Bill says we should skip it. I say my mother owes us $100, and if she doesn't pay it, Aunt Jenny should because she committed herself for that amount as our wedding present.

Abby, who owes who what? And what do you think of this whole family mess? — HOLDING THE BAG

DEAR HOLDING: As I see it, the only person who "owes" anybody anything is your mother, who owes Aunt Jenny $500 because she borrowed it. Aunt Jenny doesn't "owe" you anything because a gift is never "owed," it's voluntary. I think your mother's word isn't worth very much, and your Aunt Jenny's style of gift-giving is tacky. I vote with Bill. Skip it.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you had an article regarding children answering the telephone. I have something I would like to add that I think is worthy of printing because it would save thousands of people hours of wasted time: Have paper and pencil handy to write down any message or phone number.

It is astonishing to me that only about one in 50 people answering the telephone (other than business establishments) have anything available to write on or write with. And the person making the call has to sit and wait while the other person hunts up something to write with — and I am talking about adults. — ELSA IN FORT MYERS

DEAR ELSE: Hear, hear! Now if only someone would perfect a pencil that can be chained to the telephone so the kids couldn't carry it off!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married a few months ago, and since then we've had a bit of a mystery on our hands.

At our reception, shortly after our wedding cake was disassembled, it was discovered that the decoration piece from the top of the cake was missing.

Someone then informed us that it was a customary wedding prank. Someone "steals" the decoration, and the bride and groom then have until their first anniversary to figure out who has it. If they find out who's holding it, a party is given for them by this person. If not, the newlyweds must give a party in order to get back the decoration.

I have never in my life heard of such a custom.

We've asked a number of people, and nobody we spoke to has ever heard of it. The ornament that topped our wedding cake has sentimental value to us, and of course we hope to get it back, but we'd like to know if you or any of your readers have ever heard of such a custom. — SUSIE IN WAUKEGAN, ILL.

DEAR SUSIE: It's news to me. But if such a custom exists, I'll surely hear about it after this hits print. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose husband goes out to fetch the morning paper in the nude. She said, "I can hardly look my neighbors in the face, wondering if they've seen my husband picking up our morning paper."

Please tell her I've seen her husband, and I can understand why she can hardly look her neighbors in the face. — STRAWBERRY BLONDE IN CHERRY HILL

Procrastinators thrive on excitement

By NOEL OSMENT
Copley News Service

Do you carry a burden of guilt around because you procrastinate?

If you do, you may be punishing yourself unnecessarily, says Dru Scott, a time-management coach.

"Ask yourself if doing things at the last minute hurts you, your work or others in your life," she said during an interview. "Many times the answer is 'no.' If you're not hurting anyone don't hassle yourself," she said.

"One of the biggest problems in our society is productivity. It's not those producing at the last minute — it's those who aren't producing at all."

Scott, a clinical psychologist based in San Francisco, specializes in productivity in business and manufacturing and counts IBM, DuPont and Exxon among her clients. She coaches executives, salespeople, engineers and scientists on time investment and said she has seen many successful people who do things at the last minute.

"Most who procrastinate on a regular basis have a high need for stimulation and excitement. I call it an 'S-and EQ' for 'stimulation and excitement quota.'"

She cites the case of an executive who, his employees reported, was a pussycat to work for while he was involved in the complications and cliff-hanging negotiations of a corporate merger. When everything was over and he was back in his routine duties, he drove his staff wild with his last-minute instructions and projects.

"What he needed was a daily dose of exictement," Scott said. "I suggested he plan something each day that would give him something to be excited about — even if it meant taking time off for a golf game."

Scott said she can understand the problem of people like the executive, since she, too, has a high S and EQ, although she grew up in the quiet little logging town of Burney, Calif., where her father, who had come from Sweden, was a lumber grader.

"I'm someone who loses my 'to do' lists," she said.

In truth, she said, people shouldn't use "to do" lists if they cause discomfort, since they can just add to the guilt — an unproductive emotion — of the procrastinator.

"It's like nagging yourself."

One of the problems of lists, she said, is that they are too extensive.

"People put so many items on a list they get discouraged. It is important to be realistic about commitments. Pick out five, rather than 50 things to do."

Picking out the important things to focus attention on — in both the short and long run — is a basic tenet of Scott's philosophy of time management. She gives many time management tips in her book, "How To Put More Time in Your life."

"Imagine that you are at your 100th birthday party," she says. "You are talking with your friends about your long-term accomplishments and your long-term lifestyle. Think about what it is you would like to tell them. Then begin to concentrate on achieving those things. Perhaps you would like to be able to say that you have always been financially independent. Start right now, reading each day — maybe for only 15 minutes — on investing.

"Perhaps you would like to remember that you had friends and special people in your life. Begin now by taking time today to call a friend just to say you are thinking about him or her."

Scott said procrastinators too often think they will get things done "when they get organized."

"There is no magic state of 'get organized,'" she said. "It's not something you get like a shot in the arm which will end all your problems. It has to be a lifetime program. You need a daily order in your ife."

She also believes people need quality "time-outs" in their lives.

"Procrastinators should ask themselves if they have enough off-times when they just play or relax. The problem is mushy time — when you're fishing and thinking about working, or working and thinking about fishing. Procrastinators need to learn to be completely on or completely off."

AT WIT'S END

There aren't enough major news stories

By ERMA BOMBECK

It's been coming for a long time, but I didn't put my finger on the problem until the other night.

Every time a news story breaks, I find myself knowing more about it than I care to know. If it's a Washington scandal, I see the "scandalee" on television, in the newspaper, in magazines, authoring a paperback book, on radio talk shows, on a poster and a few weeks later on Hollywood Squares.

The other night as I watched two TV reporters interviewing one another, it hit me. We don't have enough major news stories to go around.

Suppose it's a slow news day and a congressman is suspected of paying $130,000 a year to a secretary who couldn't find her office.

We get to see the congressman with his head in an attache case hiding from the cameras, lurking behind the blinds of his apartment and shouting obscenities to the press as he runs to the elevator. After we have seen his mother, his birthplace and the typewriter that was never unpacked in the office, we are treated to an interview with a psychiatrist who explains mid-life behavior, an interview with the head of the secretaries' association, plus a few tabloids that will examine the contents of the congressman's garbage.

The answer is simple. Those of you living ordinary, uneventful lives are just going to have to get off your apathy and start supplying news to fill the demand.

Heaven knows, Elizabeth Taylor, Tip O'Neill, the baseball strikers, Sandra O'Connor, Prince Charles and Lady Diana, William Casey and John McEnroe have done their share. (Do you think Bani-Sadr enjoyed describing the dress he wore to escape from Iran to France to Woman's Wear Daily?) It's time for all of us to pitch in and bear our Media Burden.

The next time you feel like staying home and doing something uneventful, just think about the 1,769 daily newspapers in this country that are counting on you, the 1,013 television stations with 20 hours of time to fill every day, the thousands of radio stations that want to hear your questions, the hundreds of magazines and newsletters who need to know what you have never told anyone before and hunger for details of your life.

So, don't just sit there . . . do something.

Shutters underscore out-of-the-ordinary window

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have a pair of windows on the north wall of our living room with arches across the top. The irregular shape makes the windows very expensive and hard to drape.

We likethe arched effect and want to preserve it rather than cover it over with standard draperies. We also need as much light as possible because the room has only the northern exposure.

What would be a good solution? — M.M.

A. Shutter just the bottom portion of the windows. Leave the top arches open to the sky and outdoors.

Paint the window frames a different color from the walls to emphasize the interesting and unusual shape and paint the shutters the same color as the window frames.

Q. I feel very timid about decorating my new home. In fact, it seems overwhelming to make all the decisions necessary to create a charming and inviting home for our family.

I do not have the funds to hire an interior deisgner. Where should I start? How do I avoid making expensive mistakes? — J.L.

A. Many of us have the same feeling so don't despair. First, begin to learn about the principles of good residential design. Dozens of books have been written by talented designers. To my mind there are two types of interior design books — textbook types wich tell why certain things are done and explore various principles of good designing and picture books of beatiful rooms, from which you can borrow ideas. Start with the textbook types, then go to the idea books as you progress in your self-styled education.

Enroll in a design class. You'll pick up more ideas from an imaginative teacher and enthusiastic fellow classmates.

Visit model rooms of good deparment stores to determine what you like and why. You'll soon find you must analyze your own rooms according to the lifestyle of your family and its individaul members.

Plan for activities especially important to you. Arrange furniture and facilities for these activities. Plan your home around your life)

After you determine the furniture you'll need and its arrangement, begin to think about colors and patterns andtextures. Vary these for most interesting effects — glass and leather, wood and brass, velvet and linen.

Proceed slowly and only buy when you feel comfortable with your decisions. With success your confidence will increase.

Q. I'd like to create an alcove in my daughter's room for her bed. How can I do that without hiring a carpenter and spending great amounts of money? — R.T.

A. Purchase a pair of armoires that run floor to ceiling. Place them on each end of the bed with the bed across the wall.

Add a flounce of fabric at the ceiling from armoire to armoire and repeat the fabric in a bedspread. Or create a wooden piece to connect the storage pieces.

Make a neat cuff

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Cuffs are not only nice, but they also keep your sleeves from fraying at the edges. They can be neat or they can be sloppy, depending on how you tackle them.

Take interfacing, for instance ... every pattern I have ever used has suggested sewing or fusing interfacing to half the cuff. And that's OK but if you fuse a lightweight interfacing to the entire cuff, you will have a much neater piece. Plus, it will be easier to work with. For a very crisp cuff, use Waist-Shaper.

Corners, for instance ... corners should be squared off and neatly turned. When you are stitching, take two tiny stitches across the corner rather than pivoting on one stitch. When trimming seam allowances trim across the corner. Work the corners out carefully.

Attaching, for instance ... so many patterns suggest stitching the facing part of the cuff to the back side of the sleeve, then turning the front edge under and stitching it to the front side of the sleeve. A real good way to get a sloppy cuff. Stitch the front of the cuff to the front of the sleeve first, then attach the facing part to the back.

Fastening, for instance ... most cuffs have one or more buttons, and that's nice. But you also need a good snap. Sew this snap to the upper corner of cuff above button and buttonhole. Prevents gap-i-osis.

The underneath, for instance ... it should not show. After attaching and pressing cuff, if you still have trouble with the facing, topstitch around cuff, working the facing back out of sight. This topstitching can be made close to the edge or one-fourth inch to three-eighths inch away, depending on the style of your garments.

Phone company wants to time, charge for local calls

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bel wants to time your local calls and send you a monthly bill calculated on when you made the calls, how far across town they went and how long they lasted.

"Measured service is the environment needed for the future," Paul Roth, Southwestern Bell vice president for revenues, testified Monday.

Roth was the first witness in Bell's request for a $469.8 rate increase. The Public Utility Commission hearing could last six weeks.

Bell wants 87 percent of the increase to come from local service increases, with $5.45 tacked onto monthly residential bills and up to $14.40 on business bills. The company wants to offer measured service as an option to the increased flat-rate charges for local service.

The PUC staff said Monday that Bell's package leans too heavily on local service. The staff favors a rate inrease of $248.1 million, and said some of it should come from increases in long distance tolls.

The staff plan would raise local rates by $2.40 per month. Intrastate long distance rates — except for calls shorter than 30 miles — would go up by 5 percent, adding about $42 million in revenues for Bell.

Bell opposes increases in long distance charges because of increasing competition in the field. As the company paints the picture, its new competitors are forcing higher local rates. Roth said the profitable long-distance business traditionally has subsidized local service. The competition means Bell must keep long-distance rates down.

He said Bell studies indicate it costs the company an average of $24 per customer a month to provide local service — far above the monthly bills.

"What I see is a trend that requires that flat-rate service increase substantially," he said.

When flat rates approach the actual cost of the service, Roth said customers will want an option. Measured service is the option Bell is pushing.

"We feel that measured service is the concept that makes sense for the future," he said.

Customers who use the equipment more — "cost-causers" — should pay more, he said.

Roth testified that Bell has no plans to eliminate fla-rate service, although it could rise to prohibitive levels for many customers. However, the phone giant does want to do away with flat-rate service — at any cost — for businesses.

"Ultimately, we would like to have an all-measured environment for business," he said.

Bell's rate hike package, the largest in PUC history, includes the first step in measured service. Customers who choose measured service would pay 4 cents for the first minute of a call shorter than 15 miles. Additional minutes would cost a penny each.

For calls of 16-30 miles, the first minute would cost 5 cents, with 2 cents per additional minute.

Calls of 31 miles or more would cost 6 cents the first minute, and 3 cents for each additinal minut.

There would, however, be a ceiling on the monthly measured-service bill. It could not exceed $5 more than the monthly flat-rate charge for residential customers.

The PUC staff Monday endorsed the measured-service plan, with a few modifications.

The Texas Consumers Association, which favors no hike for Bell, pointed out "there would be no ceiling on business phone charges (nor any guarantee that there would be a ceiling on residential charges next year)."

Local measured service could have an adverse effect on MCI and other long-distance hone companies. Customers of those companies must call a local number on Bel equipment in order to make their long-distance calls.

TCA said the measured service idea is a plan to cash in on increasing dependence on telephones.

"You can pay your bills by phone, shop by phone, and, with theadvent of home computers, do even more by phone. The phone company plans to be ready to charge you every time you use the phone," a TCA release said.

TCA President Jim Hightower said Southwestern Bell officials should "hinch up their belts" instead of asking for more money.

"They could cut back on the millions of dolars they spend for ther television and newspaper ads, for these silly, self-serving inserts they put in our monthly bills .. and for some of their lobbying expenses in Austin and Washington...," Hightower said.

Chapman takes 'vow of silence,' gets 20 years

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark David Chapman, sentenced to 20 years to life in prison for gunnig down ex-Beatle John Lennon, has taken a "vow of silence," his lawyer says.

Chapman was sentenced Monday by acting Justice Dennis Edwards, who said he should receive psychiatric treatment during his imprisonment. Chapman was to be taken today to Sing Sing prison in Ossining, N.Y., to await a final prison assignment.

"He's a very dangerous man," lawyer Jonathan Marks said about his client."Through that treatment, perhaps the sentence will make some sense."

Marks had planned an insanity defense for Chapman.

But then the former mental patient from Hawaii pleaded guilty June 22 to killing Lennon outside the posh Dakota apartments, where the singer-songwriter lived with his wife, Yok Ono, and their son, Sean. Miss Ono was not in court Monday.

Marks said he would not appeal unless Chapman asked him to.

During Monday's sentencing, Chapman, protected in a bulletproof vest, read aloud what he called "my final spoken words" — apassage from J.D. Salinger's book "Catcher In The Rye." Marks said Chapman has taken a "vow of silence."

Chapman has insisted the book explains his reason for killing Lennon last Dec. 8. In the passage read in court, the book's troubled teen-aged hero, Holden Caulfield, visualizes thousands of children playing in a field of rye. Caulfield thought it was his job to keep them from falling over a cliff.

Chapman did not elaborate on the connection.

The minimum penalty for second-degree murder under New York law is 15 years to life, and the maximum is 25 to life. Fist-degree murder charges are filed only in the slaying of a law enforcemnt officer. Chapman's senence requires him to serve 20 years before becoming eligble for parole.

Dr. Daniel Schwartz, a defense psychiatri witness, said during the sentncing hearing Chapmn was a "chronic paranoid shizophrenic" who had experienced delusions since childhood.

The murder was Chapman's "psychiatric substitute fr suicide," Schwatz said. He explained Chapman had projected his own shortcomings onto Lennon and "killed himself psychologically" by committing the murder.

The prosecutor, assistant district attorney Allen Sullivan, said Chapman committed "a public crime" when he shot the 40-year-old Lennon. "He wanted to steal someone else's fame," said Sullivan. "He got what he wanted."

The posecutor said Chapman planed the crime for at least two months. He visited New York last October but left, Sullivan said, since he could not obtain bullets and Lennon was inaccessible.

Chapman returned Dec. 6 and "stalked" Lennon, "waiting all day" for his victim outside the Dakota Dec. 8, he said. Lennon, leaving his home with his wife for a recording session, stopped to autograph a copy of his last album, "Double Fantasy," for Chapman.

When th couple returned shortly before 11 p.m., Chapman stepped from the shadows of the Dakota's arched entranceway and fired five shots. Four hit Lennon.

Chapman as arrested within minutes. He was sitting near the shooting scene, reading "The Catcher in the Rye."

Distant Hughes relatives can not agree on story

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers in the final and most complicated chapter in the fight over the fortune of the late billionaire Howard Hughes are quizzing prospective jurors about their opinions on adultery, sterility and the tycoon himself.

About 500 people claiming to be distant relatives of the reclusive entrepeneur are challenging three first cousins and two adoptive cousins for a share of the estate valued at between $180 illion and $2 billion.

Lawyers, who already have questioned five of 25 prospective jurors, today planned the second of what could be several days of jury selection.

Four of the five people questioned Monday were empaneled, but lawyers still must pick 18 additional jurors before they can narrow the panel to six members and an alternate. A 5-1 verdict will be required to settle the case and determine the paternal heirs of Hughes.

The distant cousins, trying to lay claim to half the estate, have challenged the claims of thee children born to a late Huhes' first cousin, Elspeth Hughes Lapp. The trial hinges on whether she was the legitimate daughter of Hughes' uncle Rupert Hughes.

Th outcome of that decision also affects the estate claims of the two adoptive cousins.

A decision earlier his month named 16 maternal cousins or their heirs as recepients of half the estate.

The long and complex battle for the fortune was prompted by court rulings, no will or any immediate survivors.

The distant relatives split into two groups, each with a different version of why it thinks Elspeth was not kin to Howard Hughes.

One group contends Elspeth was the issue of an illicit love affair. This group also says Rupert Hughes had the mumps as a child which made him sterile and therefore he could not possibly have been Elspeth's father. The other group contends Rupert was not sterile, and did in fact father a daughter. But they say she died in a swimming accident as a child in California. This group says Elspeth Hughes Lapp was born before Rupert married her mother and therefore she was only his stepdaughter.

Attorneys for the first cousins say her 1897 birth certificate proves she was born to Rupert and Agnes Hughes.

"One of the strongest presumptions of law is he legitimacy of a child born in the marriage of a man and a woman," said lawyer Wayne Fisher, who represents the stepsister and stepbrother of Elspeth.

Williams to fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., vowing to fight a committee recommendation to expel him for "ethically repugnant" conduct, says he is heartened by the panel's plea that Senate punishment await appeal of his Abscam bribery convicion.

The Senate ethics committee, interrupting its summer vacation, met for seven hous Monday before recommending that the 61-year-old New Jrsey Democrat be the first senator to be expelled since the Civil War.

Nugent named to ICC boards

AUSTIN — Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent has been named as a member of several joint boards which conduct transportation hearings on behalf of Texas and the Interstate Compact Commission. The order was issued by ICC Chairman Reese H. taylor Jr. on behlaf of the Commission.

Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace and members of the RRC's Transportation legal staff were named as substitute members of the boards.

The sharing of hearings time and records eleminates the need for duplicative hearings at the federal level and in each of the states involved.

OPEC disagrees on unified oil price

By DON COOK
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

GENEVA, Switzerland — Once again the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has failed to agree on a unified world price for oil. On balance, this is good news for the industrial world. But any speculation about the death of OPEC is premature.

It is true that OPEC is viewed by some as a group of 13 squabbling countries, driven by political and ideological disputes, with two of its members in a state of war with each other. As it lurches from meeting to meeting in its 21st year, no longer able to reach a consensus, its usefulness and effectiveness are on the wane and its future seems to be in doubt.

This is not, however, the way OPEC views itself. Nor is it the way its more sophisticated and experienced internationally minded leaders see its future and its role.

To begin with, it is by far the most important and powerful of any Third World organization — the Third World equivalent of the industrial world's Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

OPEC's role is not nearly as broad or as important as OECD's, but it does have its own economic aid program, its own common statistical service, its own growing secretariat and the machinery for consultation and decision-making and OPEC's common interest is the world oil market, and with that market now in decline OPEC is beginning to realize that it is going to be more important than ever to stick together.

DESPITE THE FAILURE to reach agreement here last week, it was clear that OPEC's members all recognize they are in a new economic ballgame and that the halcyon days of soaring demand and soaring prices are gone — at least for the moment. But in the end, the problem was more political than economic. The members were unwilling to admit defeat by the market forces and so could not agree on a price cut.

In the colorful expression of Iranian Oil Minister Mohammed Gharazi, whose refusal to go along with a cut in the base price of oil to $34 a barrel blocked a new consensus agreement: "Oil is the blood of our people and we will not allow it to be squandered by Western imperialists."

Yet when this kind of rhetoric was taken out of the discussions, the experts from the 13 member countries who have to market the oil amid glut and recession were consistently close to agreement. As a member of the OPEC secretariat put it, "We were in agreement at the experts level within a matter of very small amounts, but it then became a question of whether we were to decide questions of economics or politics."

The Saudi Arabian oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, regarded as the coolest, most sophisticated and toughest customer in the business, commented, "At one point, I left the meeting for half an hour to telephone the government and say that it looked as if we had agreement, but when I came back it was not on. We all knew what the price should be when we discussed economics without politics."

Yamani and the Saudis lost a battle in Geneva for a unified price structure, built around a Saudi market crude price of $34 a barrel. Neverthless, the Saudis are well on their way to winning the oil price war within OPEC. Their offer to go up $2 a barrel to $34 is no longer on the table, and Yamani announced that the Saudi price will remain at $32 a barrel at least until the end of 1982.

AS A RESULT, two oposing theories of the future of the oil market will be put to the test in the next 12 months — the emotional Iranian approach and the logical Saudi approach.

As far as Iran is concerned — and Iran is supported with ideological enthusiasm by Libya and, to a lesser extend Algeria, the course is clear: Cut production, engineer a world oil shortage and keep prices high.

But Yamani has argued tirelessly, for two years or more, that in this free-for-all the OPEC members have been pricing themselves out of the market. It is high prices, Yamani contends, that are causing the oil glut, and not increased Saudi production at $32 a barrel.

He points to the fact that coal, which is 40 percent cheaper than oil at the present inflated prices, is making a major comeback, with even the Japanese switching to coal-fueled power stations. Although nuclear energy is slowing down because of general economic conditions in the industrial world, nuclear power is 20 percent cheaper than oil when on stream, Yamani says.

Moreover, it is clear that oil consumption is down not just because of recession in the industrial world — but because of savings and resistance to high prices. Finally, OPEC, which held about 70 percent of the world's oil export market 10 years ago, is now down to less than 55 percent. North Sea oil, Mexican oil and other marginal but important finds outside the OPEC area mean that its members no longer have the world over a barrel the way they did in the 1970s.

SO YAMANI'S MESSAGE is this: If you want to sell oil, bring the price down. If you want to retain oil's share of the world energy market, bring the price down. If you want to end the oil glut, bring the price down so customers will buy. If you want the West to get out of recession and the oil market to start to expand again, bring the price down.

Everybody seemed to get the message in Geneva except Iran.

So the market will continue to fluctuate in the immediate future on the price scales of the "Bali agreement," which was patched together by OPEC in Indonesia last September. This calls for a Saudi marker price of $32, a price of $36 for Venezuela, Indonesia and others, and a top differential price of $41 for Libya, Iran, Algeria and others — if they can get it.

TMI accident costs placed at $27.1 million

By JOHN DANSZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — An expert witness, testifying in a class-action suit, said the Three Mile Island nuclear accident cost local residents and businesses $27.1 million.

The testimony came during a hearing Monday on a proposed $25 million settlement in a suit against TMI owners, operators and builders.

The suit was filed on behalf of people who lived, worked or operated businesses within 25 miles of the plant at the time of the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident March 28, 1979.

Lawyers for both sides argued for the proposd settlement package, agreed to in February.

It includes $20 million to satisfy economic claims and $5 million for a public health fund to support such items as radiation-monitoring improvements and anti-cancer programs.

U.S. Distrct Judge Sylvia Rambo took the arguments under advisement, saying she expected to issue a final ruling in September.

During the first two weeks after the accident, said Benjamin Stevens, president of the Regional Science Research Institute of Amherst, Mass., evacuation costs were $12.9 million, lost wages were $8.4 million and lost profits were $4.4 millio.

In addition, he testified, $1.4 million was lost in wages and profits during the next 50 weeks, for a total loss of $27.1 million.

Kay Pickering of Three Mile Island Alert, an ant-nuclear group, argued the settlement should be raised to $35 million, $25 million for economic claims and $10 million for the health fund.

The settlement would be paid by American Nuclear Insurers and Mutual Atomic Energy Liabilty Underwriters, two insurance pools that are required by federal law to cver certain damages from nuclear accidents.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, August 26, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: U.S. Attorney General William French Smith shares this birthday with you, and so does popular Michigan Congressman Guy Vander Jagt. Also born on this date: actress Jan Clayton, who won a large following in the Sixties on TV's "Lassie." Those born on this date are reserved, highly intellectual and dedicated to their work. In the year ahead, your ingenious ideas will give you a strong edge over the competition in career, business. Give credit where it is due. Love guides you to new discoveries. An unexpected reunion may take place at Christmastime. A financial dilemma proves easier to resolve than you anticipated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An "A-1" day for study and research projects. Mental pursuits are favored over physical endeavors. You will have no trouble getting an "okay" to enroll in a useful course.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family member may be in a demanding mood. Be diplomatic. You find a solution to a serious problem that affects you and loved one. Finances deserve careful attention. Trust in your mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid being preoccupied—it could interfere with your work this morning. Some travel will be refreshing and also help business. A child may be very persuasive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spending time away from the office can prove beneficial today. Stress your originality and independence when dealing with higher-ups, associates. Display a willingness to change.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Influential people will be impressed by your ability to move with the times. Someone who has been too timid to express appreciation may do so now in meaningful ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The emphasis is on examining desires, motives and goals. Try to correct problems before they get out of hand. Be willing to pay for the best when seeking expert advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New financial gains are forthcoming. Invest in the stock market only if expert advice is available. Otherwise, disregard hunches. Plan something special for loved ones. Your popularity is on the upswing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get rid of a burden that is not rightly yours. Refuse to sell yourself short! Promote your own ideas, not others'. Ignore the envy of a relative or neighbor. See old friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Downplay your own interests now and be patient with others. Obligations involving friends are part of the picture. Adopt a conservative approach, and keep an eye on joint financial arrangements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be willing to play a secondary role in business today. Seek advice from experts. Ask questions about legal documents, insurance and taxes. You must take more initiative if you want to control your own destiny.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be sure to establish your priorities before embarking on any new projects. You will welcome the comforting assurances you receive from a friend or relative. Count your blessings!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others are impressed by your ideas. Put your special talents to work and you will fatten your bank account! Concentrate on those projects that require imagination and creativity.

Some hands contain a built-in trap for the expert. Here's an example from a recent tournament.

The popular contract was four hearts, reached on an auction similar to the above. At most tables the opening lead was a club. Declarers saw immediately that they would have to bring in the spade suit to make the contract. To a man, they won the ace of clubs and led a spade to the nine.

West won the jack, cashed the queen of clubs and shrewdly shifted to a diamond, forcing out declarer's entry. Declarer could not afford to draw trumps, for then he would not be able to set up and run the spades. So he went after his long suit immediately by leading the king of spades for a ruffing finesse. West ducked, and ducked again when spades were continued. But this time East ruffed and the contract could no longer be made.

An average player would have little difficulty with the contract. The first thing he tends to do is draw trumps. See what a difference it makes if, after winning the ace of clubs, declarer cashes dummy's ace and king of hearts before leading a spade to the nine and West's jack.

West can cash the queen of clubs and queen of trumps, and then shift to a diamond. However, now declarer can take a ruffing finesse for the ace of spades and, after ruffing it out, get back to his hand with a diamond ruff to run the spades for his contract.

It is true that this line could result in a huge set if the trumps break 4-1, but declarer cannot be too concerned with that prospect if he wants to make his contract. He has to accomplish two things—draw trumps and set up a long side suit—and this is one of those rare cases where drawing trumps first significantly increases the chances of establishing the side suit.

Who could imagine that the ace and king of trumps were actually liabilities and had to be disposed of at once for the contract to succeed?

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. So you think Midland has housing problems?

Midland is not alone in its housing problem. The oil rush near Woodward, Ok., has provided jobs in the area, but no housing exists for the hundreds of people coming to fill the jobs. Kristi Lee, top, from California, removes a suitcase from her family's car in front of the tent that serves as home for the her family. Ed Walker, top right, comforts his son Jamie after a bike spill. Walker and his family are camped in Boiling Springs State park awaiting a job opening and an apartment to rent. The younger Walker, bottom, looks weary beyond his age of four years. The campers have to alternate between three state parks in the area because of a two-week limit for camping in state parks.

Sony introduces color video disk camera

TOKYO (AP) Japan's Sony Corp. today unveiled a still color camera that uses magnetic video disks instead of film.

The camera looks like a conventional one, but produces electronic signals on a tinymagnetic disk that can then be shown on a television screen or made into color photographs on a printer that is still being developed.

The new system was demonstrated to the foreign press in Tokyo by Akio Morita, Sony's chairman and chief executive.

Morita aimed the novel camera at a model. After about of minute he announced that he had taken 50 pictures, which were promptly shown on two large color televsion monitors.

He said the new system, which relies on the electronc technology of video rather than the chemical, silver-based process of still photography, represents "another revoution in image recording."

The camera, which Sony calls "Mavica" for magnetic video camera, weihs 1¾ pounds and measures about 5-by--by-2 inches.

The single reflex lens with a bayonet mount is the only part that can be interchanged with those manufactured by other companies, Morita said.

The system works on electromagnetic principles of video. After an image comes through the lens, it is converted into electronic signals by a solid state imager Sony calls a CCD, or charge coupled device. The signals are then recorded on a magnetic disk called the "Mavipak" that weighs slightly more than a third of an ounce.

Each magnetic disk can store up to 50 color pictures. The disks can be removed from the camera at any time and later re-inserted for further picture taking without any danger of recording over previous images, Morita said. Sony claims recorded material can be erased from the disk, and the disk re-used with no deterioration of picture or color quality

Images recorded on the disks can be displyed instantly on a home TV set, but this requires the use of a specially designed playback unit. Through another specially designed adaptor, the camera can be used to take moving pictures when hooked to Sony's Betamax videotape recorder.

Former President Jimmy Carter, left, meets with China's Premier Zhao Xhing, right, in the gilded Hall of Purple Light in Peking today. Carter, whose administration established diplomatic ties with China, arrived in China Monday for a 10-day visit.

High-level delegation to discuss proposed Pakistani economic aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-level U.S. delegation heads to Pakistan this week to discuss details of a possible economic aid deal still barred by Congress because of fears Pakistan may yet join the list of nuclear weapons states.

The Reagan administration shortly will ask Congress to waive legislative roadblocks which currently prohibit aid to Pakistan. The administration contends Pakistan's strategic position in Southwest Asia justifies a multi-billion dollar military and economic assistance effort.

The U.S. delegation is headed by Peter McPherson, administrator of the Agency for International Development.

"Our job is to go in and find out how to direct the best program with the most economic impact,' McPherson told a group of reporters.

He emphaized that the aid program is not yet in final form and added, "It's a little delicate...because I'm going to Pakistan and may talk out something that Congress has not yet approved."

The nuclear weapons issue remains a potential obstacle to congressional approval of aid to Pakistan.

Under the Syminton Amendment, now a part of the Foreign Assistance Act, the president must certify to Congress that a non-nuclear weapons state wanting U.S. foreign aid has promised not to develop a nuclear weapon.

McPherson said that Congress can waive the amendment and that President Reagan will ask it to do so in the national interest "in the next few weeks."

Pakistan is widely believed to be at the stage where it could produce nuclear weapons to counter a perceived threat from India, which detonated a nuclear device some years ago.

The proposed economic assistance is part of a total military and economic aid deal for Pakistan totalling roughly $3.75 billion over the next five years.

The administration justifies its support for the package on what it says is the need to strengthen defenses in the oil-rich Persian Gulf region, especially in view of continuing Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, just across Pakistan's northwest frontier.

Although the military section of the package likely will be the smallest in dollar terms, it is virtually certain to be the most controversial, especially since it includes sales of the sophisticated F-16 fighter-bomber.

Carter, Chinese leader share several interests

PEKING (AP) — Jimmy Carter and Premier Zhao Ziyang had a jogger-to-jogger chat today about running, farming and another mutual interest — ties between the United States and China.

In a two-hour private visit with China's top government official, Carter predicted the relationhip between the two countries would progress because the desire "is so deeply engrained in the consciousness of the people."

Meanwhile, in an interview published today in the Hong Kong independent newspaper Ming Pao, Chinese Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping said a deterioration in U.S.-Sino relations could happen if the United States makes "policy mistakes." He did not elaborate.

"Even if relations deteriorate to a level below that of 1972, China will not collapse. We didn't collapse then and we will certainly not collapse now," Deng was quoted as saying. Deng is China's most powerful political figure.

Relations between the two nations should be based on "equality and mutual benefit," he added.

Carter, on a private visit at the invitation of the Chinese government, discussed developments in Sino-U.S. ties since he announced normalization of relations on Jan. 1, 1979.

Explosion damages new home

BELFAST, Nothern Ireland (AP) — An early morning explosion today damaged a partly built house belonging to the brother of Irish nationalist Owen Carron, a hunger strike representative elected to the British Parliament last week, police said.

They said no one was at the house when the blast occurred shortly after midnight in the remote village of Maguiresbridge, near Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, 75 miles west of Belfast. The house is owned by Seamus Carron.

Neighboring homes also were damaged but no injuries were reported, police said.

A Royal Ulster Constabulary police spokesman said it was not known immedately if the explosion was causd by a bomb.

Carron called the blast "the latest in a series of sectarian attacks on myself and my family."

He said police had visited the house Moday night "and their presence is very sinister given the subsequent explosion.'

A police spokesman said if Carron made a complaint abot police behavior it would be investigated.

Carron's election for Fermanagh and South Tyrone fills the Parliament seat left vacant by Irish Republican Army hunger striker Bobby Sands, who died May 5 at the Maze prison in a protest for political status. Carron was Sands' campaign manager.

Carron was elected as a self-described "proxy political prisoner" on behalf of the Maze hunger strikers but has vowed not to take his seat in Parliament because he would have to swear allegiance to Queen Elizabeth II.

Kramer, Ashe join crusade on tennis brats

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Jack Kramer and Arthur Ashe, two of America's all-time tennis greats, are joined in a crusade that is bound to draw universal acclaim — rid the world of "tennis brats."

"Behavior patterns on the courts are getting out of hand," insists Kramer, world champion in the mid-1940s, later king of the pros and ringmaster of the pro tour. "Kids are natral imitators. They ae copying the tantrums of players like Ilie Nastase, Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe. It's giving the game a bad image."

Added Ashe, former U.S. and Wimbledon winner and current captain of the American Davis Cup team:

"They see thes outbursts and confrontational situations on TV and read about them in the tennis magazines. They think that's the way to get to the top. Sadly, it not only hurts their own game but turns the sport off for millions of people."

KRAMER AND Ashe are advisors for the National Junior Tennis League, a summer recreational program for youngsters of all backgrounds and between the ages of nine and 12.

More than 200,000 participated in eliminations at local, district and regional levels leading to the finals Sept. 1-4 at the Port Washington (N.Y.) Tennis Academy and the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills. Winners receive the Arthur Ashe Jr. Cup.

Kramer, who continues to be one the dominant administrators in tennis, and Ashe, whose playing career was shortened by the need for a quadruple heart bypass, conduct clinic and oversee the tournaments.

"These kids are not as advanced as those playing on the regular circuits where rankings are at stake," said Ashe. "But they're impressionable and some unoubtedly will graduate to that class.

"I had to eject one of the kids in my tournament at Flushing Meadow recently. He became unruly with an official."

BOTH OF these American tennis Hall of Famers said the McEnroe's antics at Wimbledon this year had made a deep impression on the young minds just as the vulgar displays by Nastase and Connors had done in earlier years.

Marriage and birth of a son appear to have reformed Connors since his rowdier days. Nastase's berserk tirades blunted one of the game's finest talents and he has virtually disappeared from view. But "Mac the Strife," tennis' premier Super Brat, is still around and kicking up storms.

KRAMER SAID that he thought McEnroe got off too easily at Wimbledon where in one match he called the umpire an "incompetent fool," the referee an "imbecile" and officials "the absolute pits of the world," later accusing a linesman of racism and fially boycotting the Wimbledon Ball.

The Wimbledon Committee recommended to the International Council that McEnroe be fined $14,750 for his series of abuses.

"A lesson might have been brought home to McEnroe if he had been expelled in that first match," Kramer said. "It would have deprived the tournament of its eventual champion — and that's not desirable — but until we show that we will not put up with such deportment I'm afraid it will just get worse."

ASHE AGREED that administrators should crack down hard if rules of conduct are ignored even at the risk of losing a top star whose presence adds to the gate appeal.

"They must clean up their act or somebody will have to clean it up for them," warned Arthur.

Both men said doting parents were much to blame for the proliferation of spoiled, defiant tennis tykes and their (Kramer and Ashe) mission was to bring the warning home to the thousands of kids with whom they come in contact.

"The character building comes in those informal matches when you're calling the lines yourself," Kramer said. "If you call all the close ones in your favor you're going to be bugged by our conscience and lose more times than you win.

"Sometimes the parents, in their over eagerness for their kid to win, will encourage them to cheat. The kid gets to thinking it's the thing to do."

"That's true," agreed Ashe. 'The parents will say, 'Hey, my kid's got a chance to make a lot of dough. It's worth it to incur a few penalties to do well and get a ranking.' "They've got to learn: You can't separate how you live your life from how you win tennis matches."

"Great players," said Kramer, "must first be great people."

Mike Diaz wins it in 9th.

Diaz homer wins for Cubs

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Mike Diaz slowly let the bat drop and took a couple of strolling, almost reluctant, steps toward first as he watched the ball disappear behind the scoreboard, a sudden and dramatic homer with two out in the ninth that gave the Midland Cubs an 11-9 win over El Paso at Cubs Stadium Monday night.

"He (Diablos' relief pitcher Rene Quinones) just kept getting behind on me. First, it was 2-0 and when it was 3-1 I knew it would be a fast ball," Diaz said.

But before Fritz Connally singled with two out, it seemed as though the Cubs and Diablos were headed for extra innings in a typical Midland-El Paso dockwalloper.

Bill Schroeder's 14th homer, a two-run job in the seventh, had tied it at nine. The Cubs had led 8-5 after three innings, only to let it getaway.

With Amarillo winning in extra innings against San Antonio, the Cubs moved back to within three games of first place in the hectic Texas League West division, a race which the Cubs might have wrapped up by now if they had just been able to play close to .500 on a 13-game road trip.

INSTEAD, the Cubs came into Monday's first of a five-game series after a disasterous 2-11 trip. "Don't remind me," said Manager George Enright. "I'm just glad we are back in a park that we can hit in. And I'm not worried about what San Antonio and Amarillo are doing. What we do tomorrow night is all I'm concerned about."

Reflecting on spilled milk, however, Enright confirmed it was a case of the Cubs not being able to make the most of the good pitching they received on the road as Cub batters went into a dreadful slump.

Midland lost seven of eight at Amarillo, "Amarillo got good pitching, but if we'd just been able to get into their bullpen. They have just eight pitchers, but had to relieve only twice in the series against us."

WHEN THE Cubs took an 8-5 lead after three, it was the most runs they had scored since an 18-1 win over San Antonio on Aug. 5 and only the second time in the last 17 games that they had scored more than five runs in a game.

Reagan Owls out to reverse horrible season

Owls high on tailback Greg Fisher

BY MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

BIG LAKE — Richard Davis, in his second year at the helm at Reagan County, will be counting heavily on eight offensive returners and seven defensive starters as the Owls try to rebound from last year's horrible 1-9-0 record.

Davis said, "I am expecting a lot of improvement. Everyone has worked hard this spring. We have 52 out for football this year while we only had 35 out last season. The extra players out give us a chance to be much better. Just the added depth helps a lot."

GREG FISHER (5-11, 165-pound junior) will be a key on offense for the Owls from his tailback slot. Last year, Fisher rushed for 383 yards while splitting time between quarterback and tailback. Fisher, who made honorable mention on the All-District 9-AA team, is expected to provide Reagan County with a solid running attack.

Davis is also counting on Torin Burleson (5-10, 175 senior fullback), Perry Cox (5-8, 150 junior fullback), and returning starting quarterback Michael Ortiz (5-7, 150 senior) to form the nucleus for an improved offensive unit. Last year, the Owls had a dreadful time getting into the endzone. The Owls scored only two touchdowns in two games — a 13-7 win over Crane and a 21-13 lose to Wall.

Four times Reagan County was whitewashed and managed to put only one score on the board in four other contests. Overall the Owls scored only 53 points on the season — an average of 5.3 points per game. A total that is easily reflected in their 1-9 campaign.

DAVIS FEELS that the offense will be much improved, "The kids started out knowing what the coaching staff expected of them. The kids had more time to work on getting their timing and execution down instead of spending all their time learning a new system."

If the Owls are to get their offense rolling the offensive line must come through. Davis thinks that he has the material in Scott Britton (5-7, 170 junior center), Thomas Baker (6-1, 200 senior guard), Allen Johnson (5-8, 150 junior guard), Joe Armstrong (5-7, 155 senior tackle), Emmit Baker (6, 175 sophomore tackle), Hector Martinez (6-3, 190 junior tackle), Danny Schwertner, 6-2, 190 junior tackle), Joe Nichols (6, 190 sophomore guard), and Bill Miley (6, 260 senior tackle) to build a decent offensive line with.

When Ortiz goes to to the air, he will have an experience target in 6-4, 175-pound senior tight end Mitch Dorsey to throw to. Adding to the aerial game is returning wingback Bradley Armstrong (5-10, 165). With Armstrong and Dorsey to catch the ball, Davis in hoping to see a drastic improvement in a passing game that ranked near the bottom of the district last year.

DEFENSIVELY, Reagan County had a long season in 1980. Actually, the defense didn't play all that poorly last year. But, because the defense was on the field for such long periods of time, it became brittle and often broke in the latter stages of a game. The only blowouts the Owls suffered last year came at the hands of Mason, the district champions, 39-7, and a 31-0 loss to Ozona. In ten games last year, Reagan County gave up 198 points — 19.8 per outing.

Defensively, the Owls have a gem returning. Thomas Baker, who made second-time All-District both ways, is expected to ramrod an improved defensive team from his linebacking spot. Baker led the club in tackles last year with 138 stops and Davis is expecting the same type of season from him this year. Of course, Davis is hoping that fewer enemy running will get into Baker's territory. Davis wants to see an improvement in the front wall of the defense.

Help for the defense should come in the form of returning starters Fisher, second leading tackler with 108 tackles as linebacker/end, Burleson (linebacker), Bradley Armstrong (end), Ortiz (corner back), Robby Clark, (5-7, 155 junior corner back), and Jack Blakley, (5-11, 160 junior safety).

OVERALL, Davis says, "We are real optimistic. We have shown good quickness on both offense and defense. One problem facing us is a lack of good size." The Owls have two squad members over 200 pounds, three over 190 while the rest of the club runs from 140 to 185.

The Owls face a tough preseason schedule. The Owls hope to get the new season off on the right foot when they travel to Crane to tangle with the Golden Cranes in a non-district encounter. The next three weeks should be tough as the Owls face three highly regarded foes — McCamey on the road, Iraan and Stanton at home. Davis said, "All four of our non-district games will be tough. But they should be good ballgames. The games with McCamey, Iraan and Stanton are turning into grudge matches — they should be exciting games for our fans and good games for our kids to play before starting district."

Reagan County opens the district race at home with Menard then takes a week off before facing Junction on the road.

Ed Biles wants Stabler back

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Ed Biles has a problem getting his players on the right lists — he wants Ken Stabler off the retired list and Gifford Nielsen off the injured list.

So far, Biles has had little control over either situation.

Nielsen, heir to Stabler's job when the 11-year veteran announced his retirement last month, suffered a shoulder injury in Saturday's 27-17 exhibition loss to Tampa Bay.

The Oilers awaited results of tests conducted Monday on Nielsen's right shoulder. Biles hopes Nielsen suffered only a bruise and will be back in action for the regular season.

Biles said Monday that Stabler would remain on the team's active roster until next week when the Oilers must cut to the National Football League maximum roster of 45 players.

"I feel 150 per cent there would be no problems if we could sit down and talk," Biles said of the elusive Stabler, who has not talked directly with the Oilers since mid-May. "Yes, the door is open for Stabler to return. It always has been open."

Biles said Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzeg had been in daily contact with Henry Pitts, Stabler's agent, since Staber failed to show up for the opening of Oiler training camp. "I have personally made efforts to talk with Kenny but I haven't been able to reach him. I don't know of anything else we can do."

John Reaves, signed by the Oilers to play a backup role to Nielsen this season, led the Oilers to their best offensive performance of the preseason against the Bucs and will get the starting assignment in Saturday's final preseason game against the Dallas Cowboys.

Reaves completed 21 of 36 passes for 236 yards in passing his third straight preseason test.

Biles said it was possible Reaves also would start the regular season opener against Los Angeles.

"That possibility exists," Biles said. "Reaves would have received almost two games of work while Gifford was out. So we possibly would go with Reaves in the opener."

Biles said if Nielsen will be out for an extended period of time he would have to consider finding a suitable backup quarterback but remained leary of seeking a trade.

"We don't want people holding a gun to our heads because they know we need a quarterback," he said. "We feel as we have from the start, that this team is good enough to carry a quarterback. It doesn't need a quarterback to carry the team."

Stabler told The Houston Post last weekend he had decided to return to the Oilers until he read a comment by Biles.

In a news conference, Biles had said he would not want Stabler back if his only reasons were monetary.

"I don't even want to comment any more about that situation," Biles said Monday. "If we can sit down and talk personally, there won't be any misunderstanding."

The Oilers reduced their roster to 52 players Monday by putting linebacker Art Stringer on the physically unable to perform list; waiving defensive back Charles Caufield, tight end Mike Lockler and running back Rich Tomaselli; and placing linebacker Delbert Fowler and running back Larry Jones on injured reserve.

Hrbek makes big time debut a smashing success

By The Associated Press

Kent Hrbek, playing in his first major league game, drove in Minnesota's first run in the fifth inning with a scratch single, then opened the top of the 12th with a home run to give the Twins a 3-2 victory Monday night over the New York Yankees.

Hrbek, who had never before played in a professional game in a league higher than Class A, slammed his game-winning homer off George Frazier, ending Frazier's string of 13 scoreless innings since the Yankees purchased him from the minors two weeks ago.

Hrbek, a 21-year-old first baseman, was born within a few miles of Metropolitan Stadium in Bloomington, Minn., the Twins' home.

Kansas City's Amos Otis drove in three runs with a homer and double to lead the Royals to a 4-2 victory over Detroit and snap the Tigers' winning streak at nine games. Willie Aikens also homered for the Royals.

Cecil Cooper drove in three runs with his ninth homer, a double and a single, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-4 victory over the Chiago White Sox. Cooper's 3-for-4 spree raised his batting average to .300 for the season, including .391 since play resumed Aug. 10 after the 50-day players' strike.

Doc Medich fired a six-hitter and Buddy Bell drove in two runs as the Texas Rangers snapped a three-game losing streak with a 3-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays. The loss was the third straight for the Blue Jays.

A six-run sixth inning sparked California to an 8-6 win over former teammate Frank Tanana, who entered the inning with a four-hitter and a 4-1 lead for Boston. With one out, Bobby Grich reached on third baseman Carney Lansford's error. Dan Ford and Don Baylor each singled to score Grich. Brian Downing's double scored Ford and Baylor.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson collected four hits, Mike Heath drove in three runs with three hits and Shooty Babbit and Jeff Newman also had three hits apiece as the Oakland totaled a season-high 20 hits to defeat Cleveland, 16-4.

Baltimore's Rich Dauer belted two home runs and drove in five runs, Al Bumbry scored four times and Rich Murray had four hits, including a home run and three RBI in the Orioles' 12-8 win over the Seattle Mariners.

In the National League, rookie Bruce Berenyi hurled a two-hitter and scored a run in leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 2-0 victory over the New York Mets. Berenyi allowed an infield single by Mookie Wilson to lead off the game and a two-out single to Ellis Valentine in the fourth. He also struck out a career-high 12 batters in pitching his third complete-game shutout of the season.

Pinch-hitter Mike Tyson, after failing to bunt in two attempts, slammed a double to score Ivan DeJesus in the 11th inning and give the Chicago Cubs a 9-8 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Tony Herr, who scored St. Louis' first run in the sixth inning, singled up the middle in the 10th to chase home Tito Landrum as the Cardinals edged the San Francisco Giants 2-1.

Manny Trllo's two-run homer in the bottom of the 13th inning powered Philadelphia over the Atlanta Braves 7-5 in a game which saw Phillies Manager Dallas Green and shortstop Larry Bowa ejected. The two were kicked out of the game in the ninth inning after umpire Steve Fields ruled that Bowa had failed to touch second in a double play attempt.

Charlie Ane's name finally seen everywhere

By The Associated Press

He played a position that receives little glory yet is so important in all those close games. Now, Charlie Ane's name will finally be seen by football fans everywhere as one of the players released by the Kansas City Chiefs.

Ane, the long snapper on punts and placekicks for the Chiefs for the past seven seasons, was waived Monday along with three other players as the National Football League roster limit of 50 had to be met by 4 p.m. today.

Ane, a graduate of Michigan State, played in 90 consecutive games over the past six sesons, starting three of them when regular center Jack Rudnay was injured.

The son of former Detroit Lions center Charlie Ane, the Hawaii native was signed by te Chiefs as a free agent in 1975.

Along with Ane, the Chiefs also waived second-year tackle Jim Rourke and rookies Bian Sullivan, a punter, and David Dorn, a wide receiver.

Kansas City running back Horace Belton was placed on the injured reserve list and is expected to undergo knee surgery this week.

Other veterans also were waiver casualties as the final roster limit of 45 approaches next week.

Bob Lee, a quarterback with 13 years experience and two Super Bowl appearances to his credit was waived by the Los Angeles Rams.

Lee, signed by the Rams as a free agent in the 11th week of the 1979 season when injuries incapacitated quarterbacks Pat Haden and Vince Ferragamo, got into only one game for Los Angeles in 1980. He played in both Super Bowl IV and XI with the Minnesota Vikings, the team he played for in eight of his 11 seasons.

The dropping of Lee means the Rams likely will keep Dartmouth's Jeff Kemp, son of New York Congressman and former American Football League star Jack Kemp, as their third quarterback.

In addition to Lee, the Rams waived two other veterans, safety Eric Johnson and linebacker Greg Westbrooks, along with four rookies. Los Angeles also placed tackle Art Plunkett and running back Robert Alexander on the injured reserve list.

Fred Cook, a starter at defensive end in 104 consecutive games with the Baltimore Colts, was released by the Wasgington Redskins.

The Redskins had obtained Cook, a seven-year veteran from Southern Mississippi in a conditional trade with the Colts July 18.

Some other prominent names released by NFL teams Monday included: tackle Curley Culp and defensive back Eddie Lewis by the Detroit Lions; tackle Tim Stokes by the Green Bay Packers; running back Rick Berns by Tampa Bay; and tight end Terry Nelson and tacke Steve McMichael by New England.

The Lions also placed kick returner Ray Williams on the non-football injury reserve list. Williams, who was hurt in an off-season basketball game, will now miss the entire 1981 season.

One veteran not only didn't lose his job, he earned himself additional duties.

Dallas quarterack Danny White will again handle the punting chores as the Cowboys released their camp's only other remaining punter, free agent Curt Carion, who punted eight times for an average of 35.6 yards in Dallas' 24-14 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night.

The Cleveland Browns were the most active team as three trades kept some players' chances alive with different teams.

The Browns acquired two players for undisclosed draft choices: defensive end Thomas Brown from the Philadelphia Eagles and linebacker Bruce Huther from the Cowboys.

The Denver Broncos obtained wide receiver-kick return specialist Wade Manning from the Buffalo Bills in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice.

Despite probation Meyer is hopeful

DALLAS (AP) — The thunderbolt of NCAA probation left the Southern Methodist Mustangs with only their pride and an 11-game schedule this year.

How well SMU Coach Ron Meyer can boost the morale of his team which can't appear on television or go to a bowl could mean more than how good the Mustangs' block and tackle in 1981.

"I believe there will be a favorable reaction by our squad...I believe we'll pull together," said Meyer

In fact, there's the theory in some quarters that the talented Mustangs could now even be more determined to capture the Southwest Conference title.

And they don't really have any pressure on them.

"There's always pressure to perform well," said Meyer. "This should make the team even more determined."

SMU was 8-3 last year after losing a 46-45 heartbreaker to Brigham Young University in the Holiday Bowl at San Diego.

The Mustangs return two of the most talented running backs in the country, juniors Craig James and Eric Dickerson.

Sophomore quarterback Lance McIlhenny proved to be a canny operator as a freshman and stands to be even better with a year's experience.

Michael Charles, Lott McIlhenny and Jerry Kovar will battle for the fullback position which is mostly a blocking back slot in the Mustangs' I-Formation.

SMU has a relatively inexperienced offensive line although Meyer feels they will be ready by the time the SWC campaign begins.

"I feel good about the group we have," he said. "We're not all that worried."

The Mustangs may have the best kicking game in the country with placekicker Eddie Garcia and punter Eric Kaifes.

Garcia kicked three field goals in the Holiday Bowl and had 11 during the regular season.

Kaifes averaged 41.6 yards per punt last year which placed him fourth in the nation. His average was the second best in school history.

Defensively, the Mustangs are led by tackle Harvey Armstrong and noseguard Michael Carter.

SMU lost Al-American corerback John Simmons to graduation along with Charles Bruton and Dick Blaylock.

James Mobley will fill Simmons' cornerback spot.

SMU has a relatively easy non-conference schedule against Texas-Arlington, North Texas State and Grambling.

Cubs in dramatic win

El Paso, as it usually does in Cubs Stadium, got only nine hits, but made them count with three home runs, bringing their total here this year to 23.

Eddie Irvine tripled to open the game and scored on a fly and then Bob Skube homered to right off starter Randy Clark. The Cubs got three in the home first and the foot race was on.

Javier Fierro belted his sixth homer in the second, but the Diablos went ahead 5-4 in the third when Jon Hanson homered behind a couple of walks. Midland erupted for four more runs and an 8-5 lead before the inning was over, but El Paso made it close in the fifth when Skube singled and Stan Davis chased him home with a single to center that got by Mel Hall in center for a three-base error.

Hall's single and Carmelo Martinez' second double of the night made it 9-7 in the home sixth and set the stage for Schroeder's game-tying homer off lefthander Phil Nastu, who came in to start the sixth and eventually picked up the win to raise his record to 6-4. Nastu allowed just three hits the final four innings.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Chicago Cubs General Manager Herman Franks watched Monday's game as he takes a look at what's down on the farm....Jim Tracy, Texas League batting champion with a .355 average, singled home a run in the first and another in the third, his first rbi's in 14 games with the Cubs. It isn't difficult to determine what happened to Midland on the road. Going into Monday's game, Joe Carter had 2 rbi in his last 13 games; Fierro 0 in his last 7; Connally, 2 in 13; Hall 3 in 16; Jack Upton, 3 in 15; Diaz, 0 in 13; and Randy LaVigne, 3 in 13...Wendesday will be Texas National Guard Night at Cubs Stadium with dress code Army Green Work uniform, which will admit Big Spring, Lamesa, Midland and area Guardsmen in free...Stop of the night, Connally's headlong dive toward second to rob Schroeder in the third.

NOTED HYNOTISTS IN MIDLAND

TO HELP SMOKER & THE OVERWEIGHT

WADE M. GENTHNER, F.A.I.H.
Director of Techniques For Living

The subject of numerous newspaper and magazine articles as well as television appearances, Mr. Genthner and his staff have been conducting these seminars throughout the country. In a comprehinsive and fascinating three hour program, those who attend the seminar experience the relaxing and beneficial effects of clinical hypnosis. Not only do people permanently lose weight and stop smoking as a result of the seminar, they also report that they sleep better, feel more energetic, and generally enjoy life more than they had previously.

Mr. Genthner's skill in clinical hypnosis was noted by Dan Rather of CBS' "60 Minutes", who referred to him in a nationally televised report as a well-trained and highly experienced hynotist".

"Clinical hypnosis is the easiest way there is to solve these problems". Genthner says. "Simply put, it helps to eliminate these types of problems permanently."

Genthner says that the reason clinical hypnosis is so successful is that "it removes the causes of problems, not just the symptoms." For example, he explains: "People who are overweight go on diets. A diet is only good for as long as you can follow it. Once you stop the diet you regain the weight. Hypnosis is permanent because it eliminates the causes of over-eating, not just the symptoms." The same holds true for smokers where the need to prevent cravings for cigarettes or weight gain is just as important. Both problems are covered at the seminar, and each seminar leader is personally trained by Mr. Genthner. Further information can be obtained by calling, toll Free 1-800-645-5454.

Are you overweight or a cigarette smoker? Have you tried to lose weight or stop smoking, only to fail time and time again? If you find yourself answering "yes" to either of these questions then the Techniques For Living Seminar, under the direction of Wade M. Genthner F.A.I.H. at the Holiday Inn West—3904 W. Wall, will be the place for you to be on Tuesday, September 1. Techniques For Living will be conduction their famous Lose Weight - Stop Smoking Seminar which has helped thousands of people throughtout the United States. Techniques For Living is a national organization dedicated to helping Americans solve these and other problems that have kept them from enjoying their lives to the fullest.

Umpire Steve Fields, center without hat, is the man that Philadelphia shortstop Larry Bowa, left, and manager Dallas Green (46) want to get at. Both Bowa and Green were ejected from the game against Atlanta after this altercation over a disputed call at second base.

Philly manager may have second vacation

By The Associated Press

Philadephia Manager Dallas Green was long gone when Manny Trillo slammed a two-out, two-run homer that boosted the Phillies to a 13-inning victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Just how long Green will be gone may be up to National League President Chub Feeney because the Phillies manager bumped umpire Steve Fields during a dispute in the ninth inning Monday night. Such actions generally are punishable by suspensions.

Green and Philadelphia shortstop Larry Bowa were ejeced after what at first appeared to be an inning-ending double play.

Bowa grabbed Dale Murphy's grounder, ran to second base, then threw to first. As the Phillies started to leave the field, thinking they were going into the bottom of the ninth with a 4-4 tie, second base umpire Fields ruled runner Chris Chambliss was safe at second as Atlanta's fifth run crossed home plate.

"He (Bowa) wasn't even close to tagging the base," Fields said. "The only thing I can tell you is he straddled the bag ... He just flat missed it by six inches."

Bowa charged Fields, yelled at the umpire, waved his glove and slammed his hat to the ground.

"I ran Bowa for throwing the glove," Fields said.

Green raced from the dugout, put himself between Bowa and the umire, screamed at Fields, bumped him several tims and grabbed the umpire's hat, knocking it off his head. Philadelphia players finally restrained Green.

Bowa also was restrained by his teammates and the other umpires as he tried to get at Fields a second time.

"I ejected Dallas because he threw his hat and threw my hat," Fields said.

"I've been in the game 25 years and seen that play 10,000 times," Green said of Bowa's "phantom tag" at second. "Five thousand times he (the fielder) touches the bag. Five thousand times he doesn't. But 10,000 times the runner is out.

"Bowa touched the base."

The shortstop later described Fields as incompetent.

"I hit the bag with my heel," Bowa said. "If I didn't think I hit the bag, I wouldn't argue. I've never seen that call ever."

The Phillies came back to tie the game in the bottom of the ninth and send the game into extra innings, setting the stage for Trillo's heroics.

Another argument broke out after the game in the tunnel leading to the umpires' dressing room. Nick Colosi, the umpire-in-chief, turned on a television commentator, cussed him out and reportedly smashed what the commentator said as a $10,000 camera.

Team USA may face long tournament

QUEBEC (AP) — It could be a long, tough tournament for Team USA, but at least the American hockey players should know what to expect the next time they meet Team Canada.

The Canadians overcame two periods of sluggish play and scored four goals in the third period to defeat the American 5-2 Monday night in a tune-up for the Canada Cup, the six-country international hockey tournament that starts next Tuesday.

The Americans had to play without the services of defenseman Bill Nyrop, and it meant that Mark Howe was moved to defense causing the disruption of a few Team USA lines.

Cowboys release punter

DALLAS (AP) — Quarterback Danny White is the Dallas Cowboys' only punter once again because coaches released the last of four free agent punters Monday who were vying for the kicking chores, a team spokesman said.

Curt Carion, who punted eight times for an average of 35.6 yards in Dallas' 24-14 win over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night, was one of four rookies released.

He was the last of four free agent punters the Cowboys tested during the preseason in an effort to relieve the starting quarterback of the punting chores.

Cowboys public relations director Doug Todd said a decision will be made in the next two weeks whether to get another punter or let White handle the job for a sixth year.

In another move, the Cowboys traded backup linebacker Bruce Huther, signed as a free agent out of the University of New Hampshire in 1977, to Cleveland for an undisclosed draft choice.

Assistant public relations director Greg Fiello said rookie Danny Spradlin, a fifth-round draft choice from Tennessee, would become the backup middle linebacker.

Todd said veteran wide receiver Drew Pearson was released Monday from a Dallas hospital, where he had spent the last two nights after suffering a mild concussion against the Steelers.

He said Pearson will not play in the team's last preseason game Saturday against the Houston Oilers but will be ready for the regular season opener in Washingon Sept. 6.

Texas A&I's record is stout

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas A&I University has the third best all-time record among NCAA Division II football teams.

The Javelinas, who fielded their first football team in 1925, have a 342-150-16 record.

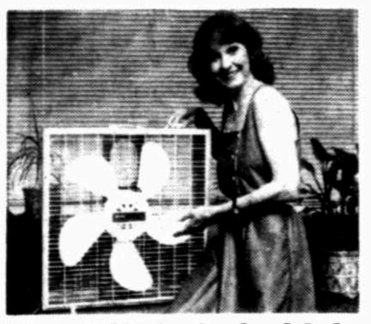
Cool carefully and help hold down your bills.



In many homes, summer air conditioning uses more electricity than all other appliances combined. To help hold down electric bills, use it sparingly. Set your thermostat at 80 degrees or higher, and use a fan to circulate the air. A fan uses considerably less electricity than air conditioning. And when no one is going to be home, make sure your air conditioning is turned off. It pays to know how to cool carefully.

Midland's Linda Jolly thinks title

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Although Midland High head coach Linda Jolly feels this is a rebuilding year for the Purple and Gold, she thinks this might be the year the Bulldogs move into the throne room in District 5-5A volleyball. Last year, the Bulldogs rolled to a 22-9 record and tied for second behind the San Angelo Bobcats.

Jolly bases here optimisim on returning senior letter winners Judy Gatlin, Ann Miller, Holly Randell and juniors Shelia Christian and Penny Griffin. There is a question mark concerning Miller. She is suffering from a back injury and it is not known how long she will be out of action.

Besides the returning players, Jolly is looking for good things from talented senior Missy Larrimore. Last year, Larrimore didn't play volleyball after playing as a sophomore.

Jolly is excited as her program seems to be gaining strength — for the first time there will be a sophomore team at MHS. "A sophomore team really encourages kids to come out. They know if they do they will have a chance to play," says Jolly. She added, "Although the sophomores will be playing only six or so games, it will give them a good idea of what to expect in the varsity program." One aspect of the sophomore class that excites Jolley is the fact that there are three players 5-foot-10 or better. Overall there are 41 girls out for volleyball this season.

Jolly has been pleased with the long hours the girls have been putting in but still feels the Bulldogs could improve. "The kids have look real good. In the first three days of practice, we worked eight hours with an hour off for lunch. We're not exactly where I would like to see them," Jolly noted.

Although MHS will be putting a short team on the floor, Jolly feels that the Bulldogs have good jumping ability. Jolly added, "We have a couple of players that can really jump and are capable of blocking shots."

Through the first weeks of practice, the Bulldogs have been working on they several different defenses. Jolly stated, "Right now we are working so that the girls will know instinctively when to change defenses on the floor."

Jolly has had some trouble in her early morning practices in getting all her players out. Several of the girls are also in the school band and it practices at the same time in the mornings. Jolly said, "It has created some problems at times but I think we have it worked out pretty good."

When looking at the district race, Jolly feels that, "There are no easy teams any more." "It's real exciting to see how popular the sport (volleyball) is becoming in West Texas," Jolly added.

Today the Bulldogs open their regular season by hosting Odessa Ector at 4 p.m. at MHS gym (varsity and junior varsity) before traveling to Plains for two games Thursday. Friday and Saturday, the Bulldogs were be participating in the varsity and junior varsity tournament at Monahans.

Also members of the varsity team this year are: Yenni Avila, Jennifer Jackson, Melinda Raschke and Cindy Triplitt.

Junior varsity squad members are: Lisa Caldeway; Elizabeth Colvin, Christime Conneer, Theresa Haney, Jincy Jackson, Maggie Marmolejo, Laura Sherman, Shauna Stokes and Emily Wurtz.

The team manager is Christi Calhoun.

Brad Wright is cut by Miami Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — Former University of New Mexico and Midland Lee quarterback Brad Wright was one of 10 players waived Monday by the Miami Dolphins.

Coach Don Shula trimmed his team's roster to 50 by waiving the 10 players, half of them selections from this year's National Football League draft.

Waived along with Wright were Sam Greene, a wide receiver from Nevada-Las Vegas; offensive tackle Mike Daum, a seventh-round selection from Cal Poly San Luis Obispo; wide receiver John Noonan, a ninth-round pick from Nebraska, and defensive tacke John Alford, a 12th-round selection from South Carolina State.

Also, guards Thom Dornbrook and Vince Cowell; defensive tackle Ray Webb and linebacker Rodell Thomas. Veteran safety Doug Beaudoin was placed on injured waivers.

SWC against NBC offer

DALLAS, Texas (AP) — The final count was 4-5 against when the Southwest Conference voted in Atlanta Friday on NBC television's offer to the College Football Association.

SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch said Monday that SMU had voted for the package along with Texas, Arkansas and Texas Tech.

SMU was previously reported to have abstained.

Voting no were Baylor, Texas A&M, Rice, Houston, and Texas Christian.

Hitch said "I'm concerned about it. I'm surprised at the split. We went along with what we thought the conference was going to do."

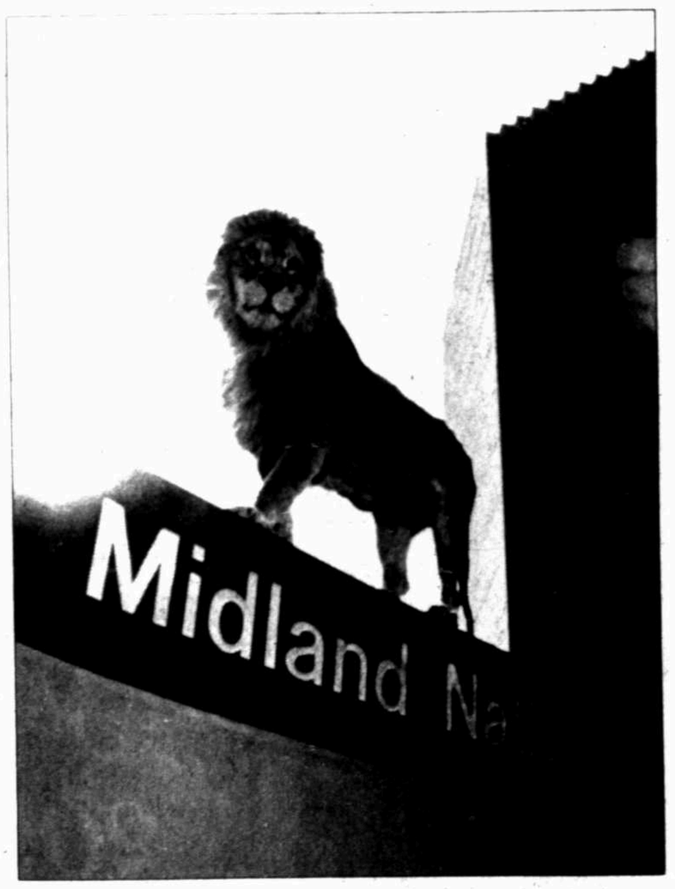
Taking a strong financial stand in Midland.



On July 3rd, 1903, Midland National opened its doors in the old Llano Hotel, on the northwest corner of Wall and Main.

We were just starting out, but we already had an unwavering commitment to sound, healthy growth. And we were eager to lead the way, searching for new territory to explore.

For thirty years, we kept pace with Midland's ranching, agricultural and mercantile interests; as they grew, so did we.

With the discovery of oil here, our pace quickened. We took strides to introduce new banking services. We were the first bank in the Permian Basin to add a petroleum engine

Women's mission is to save dogs

By DANIEL J. WAKIN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — She cajoles, bribes and even steals when necessary to separate suffering dogs from the junkies, aloholics and former mental patients who are their msters.

Evry night, Chitra Besbroda enters New York's twilight world of teneements and SRO's, single-room occupancy hotels, offering whatever cash she has to nodding addicts and others to buy their abused pets.

"The pain of not doing what I know I have to do causes me more grief than he risk I take. I know it's risky, but it's a job to be done," she said.

"Mrs. B," as the addicts call her, says she has cared for 90 to 100 dogs in eight years. She is a small, assertive woman with black hair, a middle-aged divorcee who lives on Manhattan's Upper West Side and works in detoxification centers.

She will do almost anything for an animal. When an addict demanded $100 and a color television in exchange for his starving chihuahua, she bargained him down to just the TV, ran home and broughtback her own black-and-white set.

Mrs. Besroda, a social worker trained in psycotherapy, came to this country from her native Sri Lanka in 1971. Her training in New York street life began in 1973, when she started work at a de-tox center in Harlem and witnessed the "unbearable grief" of som of the addicts' animals.

At lunch hours she would walk around and talk to pet owners in the area, asking about the animals, making suggestions about medical care and nutrition. And then came Teddy.

Mrs. Besbroda had occasionally heard the howl of a dog coming from garage across the street from her clinic. When she investigated, she found an animal "starving, whipped, beaten and locked in an abandoned building all winter."

The drunken owner, who locked the dog up on weekends, threatened her life and chased her away. Mrs. Besbroda taught Teddy to eat dry dogfood through the keyhole and placated his owner by bringing him cakes, wine and beer.

Evenually, he allowed her to take Teddy home for a weekend. She didn't take him back.

Since then Mrs. Besbroda says she has come across unimaginable cruelties, suh as dogs fed hot sauce or gunpowder because their owners think cruelty is good training for guard dogs. Other starve their animals or beat them, even prick their genitals with pins.

"They're not sensitive to the pain of animals, maybe because they suffer so much themselves,' she said.

Most dogs stay with their masters, she said. "All these dogs love them, that's the problem," she explained. But when they can escape to the safety of her home, "they completely forget their masters."

Sometimes Mrs. Besbroda fails. Once she called the ASPCA about one puppy in an SRO that "was like the living dead" after a diet of hot sauce and bread. The ASPCA, unabe to find proof of mistreatment, trimmed and washed the puppy's coat and returned it to its master.

Soon after, the ownr's brother-in-law returned from Bellevue Hospital's mental ward for a weekend and strangled the puppy with a telephone cord.

But more often, she succeeds in saving a suffering animal, sometimes by paying for medical care hersIf when an owner refuses or the ASPCA cannot provide a free operation.

She keeps three or four dogs at a time in her small co-op, with the overflow going to her mother's nearby apartment. Since 1979, 21 of Mrs. Besbroda's dogs have been adopted. She carefully sreens prospective owners, who must sign a contract stipulating they will provide good care for the dog, return it to her if no longer wantd and allow her to visit periodically to inspect the animal's condition.

Mrs. Besbroda says she is thinking of giving up her crusade; she works full-time and cares for an 1-year-old daughter. But she has a goal left: to rescue one last SRO dog, perhaps her toughest case.

His name is Cocaine. He lives in a tiny room with about two square feet to stand in. In the winter, he is tied to a steaming radiator by a chain so short he cannot sit down. His paws are full of splinters from trying to scratch through the door.

When free, he can drink from a toilet bowl. His master never feeds him. Food comes from Mrs. Besbroda and a neighbor.

His owner, F., has had five dogs in four years, the neighbor says. Three were hit by cars and killed.

Mrs. Besbroda has tried everything to get the animal from F. — persuasion, bribry, appeals to the ASPCA and the SRO's landlord.

F. resents her efforts. "Every day there's a subtle threat about killing me," Mrs. Besbroda said.

But she is determined to save Cocaine. "When I go to sleep, I see his face peering through a hole in the door. I feel very bad that I can't give him a drink of water. It's getting too much of an emotional strain. When I get him, I think my work is done."

It's easy street on the Bess Truman patrol

By MARK PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — For most U.S. Secret Service agents, it's life in the fast lane. But for a few in Independence, it's easy street.

Their assignment is to potect former first lady Bess Truman.

"Thigs are pretty quiet around here," said special agent Robert Lockwood, one of seven agents on the detail. "There's not a whole lot that goes on."

Mrs. Truan is 96 and confined to a wheelchair. She never leaves her Independence home except for medical reasons.

So agent-in-charge Lockwood and his six subordinates spend most of their time sitting in a rented, two-story house across the street. There are surveillance televisions to monitor to watch and alarms to check, but mostly there's time to kill.

"This is noted in the service as being a detail of little activity," said Lockwood, who has been in Independence since February 1973. "Frankly speaking, I'd have to call it boring."

But agents on the detail have found ways to break the monotony. They go to school, for example.

"Since I've been here, maybe 12 or 13 have earned their master's degrees," Lockwood said. "I got mine here."

The degrees have been earned in criminal justice administration from Central Missouri State University, which conducts evening classs in Kansas City. One gent started law school at the University of Missouri-Kansas City while on te "Bess detail," then quit the service to finish his degree and practice law in Pennsylvania.

So between regular checks on Mrs. Truman, an agent may bury his nose in a book. Until reading gets boring.

"You know," said Lockwood, "you'll get a big stack of books and think to yourself, 'I'm going to read them all' but then quit after one or two."

That's when television fills the gap. Or maybe a friend drops in for a visit.

"I don't watch the soap operas, just a movie now and then," Lockwood said just as a fellow agent and friend from Dallas came knocking at the front door. They kicked off the visit with a fresh pot of coffee.

The combined annual salaries of the seve agents on the Truman detail is about $182,000. The service also pays $4,-200 a year to rent the brick house from which agents watch over the Truman home.

Lockwood, who said there never has been an attempt to harm Mrs. Truman, acnowledged her protection may be excessive. Things may change on the "Bess detail," however.

Legislation was introduced recently in Congrss that, among many oher things, would limit Secret Service protection for former first lades to six months after a president leaves office.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., is before the Senate Judiciary Committee. It has been endorsed by Secret Service Director H. Stuart Knight but still is far from becoming law.

In the meantime, the service provides around-the-clock protection to Mrs. Truman, with agents spending an average of 2½ years on the detail.

College students going to banks in droves

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Prss Writer

WASHINGON (AP) — Students are flocking to banks in record numbers to take out federlly subsidized loans for college before a new law makes them harder to get. Because of that, the administration says it may need more money for the program it wants tocut back.

Since 1978 the loans have been available to all comers, regardless of their need or family income. But as of Oct. 1, students from families with adjusted gross income of $30,000 or more will have to pass a needs test to get a loan.

Student aid experts say banks and lending agenies have one a booming business in guaranteed Student Loans this summer.

Some 3.6 million students are expected to borrow nearly $8 billion under the program in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, up from $4.8 billion a year ago and $1.9 billion three years ago.

"We are going to have to get some more money out of Congress to pay the tab for this sumer," said James W. Moore, acting director of the Education Department's student financial aid programs.

Reagan administration budget cuts already have begun to rein in the program. Effective last Sunday, students who take out new loans must pay a 5 percent originaton fee. A student who borrows the maximum $2,500 will gt only $2,375 from the bank but must repay principal and interest on the full $2,500.

For a student who must pass the needs test, eligibility requirements for the loans will vary according to the size of the family and the cost of college.

Edward M. Elmendorf, a deputy assistant secretary of education, said some students from families with income as low as $31,000 or $32,000 will be barred from the loan program. Others from families with income of $60,000 or more still may get loans if they attend an expensive college.

Elmendorf said 70 percent of the loans for the coming school year will have been made before the change takes place Oct. 1.

"For people entering higher education this year, I see very litle change" he said. "The real effect will not take place until next year." He said he did not know how many students would be driven out of the loan program. An merican Council on Education analyst has estimated that 800,000 to 1 million student who now have loans would be ineligible under the new rules.

Elmendorf said some of the slack could be taken up by an existing federally subsidized loan program for parents. The loan date in that program will jump from 9 percent to 14 percent on Oct. 1.

The government subsidizes all the interest on student loans while they attend school. The Reagan admnistration wanted to end the in-school interest subsidy, but Congress refused

Students pay 9 percent interest starting six months after they leav school. For those who took out loans before this year, the rate is 7 percent. The government now pays 19⅛ perent interest overall on the loans for students in college.

In the loan program for parents, loans must be repaid starting 60 days after the sudents leave school.

Elmendorf said the Reagan administration will sek further economies in the loan program, which is costing $2.8 billion this year. "We really think everyone hould have a needs analysis," he said.

Summer is always the peak season for college loans, but Dallas Martin, executive director of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Adinistrators, said this summer has been 20 percent to 30 percent busier than usual.

"Most parents and studens know that the conditions are going to change Oct. 1 ... so they have tried to et in under the wire before the needs test is imposed," he said.

Vic Mears, chairman of United Student Aid Funds a New York-based lending agency, called it a legitimate "panic" for borrowers who will be knocked out of the program.

Labor publishes new rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer federal contractors will have to submit written plans for the hiring and promotion of women and minorities under new rules the Labor Department is proposing.

A major change wanted by the department is to require the affirmative action plans only from firms employing at least 250 workers and having at least $1 million in government contr[illegible]

Currently, affirmative action regulations apply to firms with 50 or more workers doing at least $5,000 business with the government.

The proposed set of regulations "keeps the necssary safeguards for protected groups while cutting down the paperwork burden for employers," Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan said Monday.

Veterinarians mend horses' broken legs

By STEVE WILSON
Associated Press Writer

GRAFTON, Mass. (AP) — When a horse breaks a leg, they shoot it, don't they?

Whoa — not these days.

In the Old West, a pony with a broken leg might have been dispatched with a six-shooter, but modern veterinary medicine has changed things. Today, injured horses that once might have been retired or destroyed can be healed and returned to work or competition.

At the Tufts New England Veterinary Medical Center's large animal clinic, doctors are using screws, metal plates, carbon fibers — even acupuncture — to treat horses with serious leg injuries.

"We do probably two or three fractures a week," says Dr. Gustave E. Fackelman, professor of surgery at the clinic and one of the nation's foremost equine orthopedic doctors. "The broken legs are usually sports injuries, fractures just like Joe Namath or Magic Johnson might get. Ten years ago, it would have meant either cessation of a racing career or humane destruction of the horse."

Fackelman has been a pioneer in internal fixation — inserting screws and metal plates to repair fractures and leg deformities. The develop ment of this technique in the last few years has prolonged the careers of many race and show horses.

"Before that the fracture healed, but the appendage as a whole may not have functioned as it used to," Fackelman says. "You salvaged the horse, but you didn't have the athlete."

The clinic, located in the rolling, countryside about 40 miles west of Boston, began accepting patients in January. It is the only one of its kind in New England with an academic affiliation.

Its barn has 17 stalls for horses awaiting or recovering from surgery. Most come from New England, but some have been trucked in from as far away as Florida and Chicago.

One typical day recently, doctors repaired a pacer's splint-bone fracture, began acupuncture treatment on a lame appaloosa and corrected a two-week-old foal's crooked leg.

Just getting a horse on the operating table is no easy matter. First, the horse is given a tranquilizer, then led to a stall where it is injected with a muscle relaxant. After it slumps to the floor, it is put under anesthesia.

The horse is then wheeled into the operating room on a portable platform. Grabbing the horse by the legs, tail and neck, doctors roll it onto the padded operating table. A catheter tube is inserted into the trachea to keep the throat passage open, and sometimes the horse is hooked up to a respirator. An anesthesiologist monitors the horse's blood pressure, heart rate and eye reflexes.

The horse is covered with blue sheets so only the head and damaged leg are exposed. A typical operation lasts one to two hours.

Horses normally are back on their feet within 20 to 45 minutes. Four days later, they can return home. After rehabilitation, often including swimming exercises, a race horse can be back on the track within four months to a year.

Race horses are not the only patients. Recently, Fackelman operated on a foal whose right front leg was bowed because the bone was growing unevenly. The surgeon used a power drill and screw driver to insert two screws for correcting the growth pattern.

Energas Company, a division of Pioneer Corporation, hereby gives notice of its intent to implement new rates for domestic and commercial type, small industrial and large air conditioning/electric generating customer classes residing in the unincorporated areas (environs) of its West Texas System. It is anticipated that the new rates will result in a 1.6% increase in Energas' gross revenues, which increase is not a "major change" as defined in Section 43(b) of Article 1446c, V.A.T.C.S.

A Statement of Intent to change said rates was filed with the Railroad Commission of Texas on or about August 7, 1981, and is available for inspection at the Company's Amarillo office, 301 S. Taylor Street.

The proposed increase will not become effective until or except to the extent that the same rates are approved for service within the municipalities on the West Texas System.
