U.S.-Soviet Arms Treaty Agreed

School Trustees Undecided On Auto Tax Ban

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

IF IT'S left up to local governments to decide whether personal cars will be subject to property tax in the future, Lubbockites probably can expect a break on their city taxes, but they may have to keep paying school taxes on their autos.

A bill passed by the Texas Senate implementing the Tax Relief Amendment approved by voters in November would allow local governing bodies either to continue to tax cars or to exempt all passenger cars not used to produce income.

Most City Council members said they'd like to remove personal cars from the property tax roll, but school trustees said their decision would depend on how much tax revenue is at stake and whether the state reimburses the district for the lost taxes.

School board president Charles Waters predicted every school trustee would favor removing cars from the tax roll because of the difficulty in collecting auto taxes.

However, he said he would "have to consider all the ramifications attending it" including whether the cost of collecting the tax outweighs the revenues generated and the "fairness of continuing to tax (cars)."

Cautious About Decision

"It's a question no one can give a flip answer to," Waters said, adding it would be "a reckless and irresponsible thing to say we're going to remove all automobiles from the tax roll."

Although "the public will be strongly in favor of taking it off," Waters said he wanted to talk with school "budget people" and with City-School Tax Assessor-Collector John Brooks before making up his mind on the car tax.

Trustee Jose Ramirez agreed with Waters' wait-and-see attitude.

"I'd have to see how much money we'd be losing and what would be the result if we lose all the tax money," Ramirez said.

Trustee Harold Harriger said his decision on the car tax exemption depends on the school finance bill passed by the legislature and whether the school district will be reimbursed by the state for lost revenue.

"I don't like (the tax) because it's difficult to administer," Harriger said. "I'd like to dispose of it if we can get enough state aid but not if we're going to have to raise property taxes on real estate."

School board vice president Monte Hasie was the only trustee contacted who said cars definitely should be removed, but added he might be "saying the wrong thing" because an alternative source of funds would have to be found.

"I think it'd be all right to take them off," he said. "I'd prefer they not be taxed."

Some Pay, Some Don't

Mayor Dirk West predicted the City Council will remove cars from the tax roll if it is made "legal" by the legislature because "some pay (the tax) and some don't."

"The only reason we didn't do it last spring was at that time it was illegal," he said. "I personally think we certainly will" exempt cars from property tax.

Distribution Idea Seen For Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday his staff is trying to develop a statewide gasoline distribution plan in case fuel shortages similar to California's plight develop in Texas.

"We're not talking about a rationing plan," Clements told reporters. "We're talking in terms of a calculated and planned distribution system. I don't want anyone to think that we in Texas are going to institute a rationing plan with coupons."

The governor said his staff is working on a plan "to move supplies from one part of the state to another. It would be a planned approach to shortages that may turn up on a spot basis."

He said he was watching "with interest" how California officials cope with gasoline shortgages in that state. Gov. Jerry Brown ordered a plan that allows motorists to buy gasoline on odd or even days depending on their license plate number.

Gas rationing is a federal problem and the state has no authority to get involved in that, Clements said after a public bill-signing session.

"We're not prepared to develop a ra-

Senate Sets Terms, Okays Gas Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved President Carter's standby gasoline rationing plan 58-39 Wednesday but unanimously told him not to use the power except in dire national emergencies.

Senate acceptance sent the latest version of the often-modified plan to the House, where action was anticipated today.

The president generally agreed to go along with a unanimous Senate resolution spelling out circumstances under which he could invoke the rationing power.

At the White House, President Carter issued a statement aplauding the action and calling on the House "to place the national interest above narrower interests, as the Senate has done."

"We do no expect that we wil ever need to use this plan, but, as with our military forces, we would be foolhardy not to be prepared should such a need ever arise," Carter said.

"Defeat of this plan would leave this country vulnerable and defenseless against a supply interruption," he said.

"The government would require six to eight months to develop, pass and implement a new plan — time we could ill afford during an energy crisis."

To win Senate aproval, the White House made a number of additional last-minute concessions, including a promise not to use rationing to ease lines at gasoline stations caused by temporary shortages.

The president also promised to make more gasoline available to farmers and to industries engaged in producing energy under a compromise reached moments before the Senate showdown.

These concessions came in addition to modifications made by the president earlier in the week — modifications which the Senate agreed to on a 66-30 vote shortly before approving the overall plan.

By this vote, senators went along with the president's decision to change his plan to guarantee a larger share of rationing coupons to individuals living in states where average gasoline consumption is high.

Originally, Carter had wanted to distribute coupons based solely on the School Bill's Ban On Certain Courses Denied By Sponsor

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A CONTROVERSIAL Texas House bill, contrary to reports circulating throughout the state, would not affect the course choices of public school students, according to a letter written Wednesday by the bill's sponsor.

In a letter of clarification dated May 9 to state legislators, Rep. Wilhelmina Delco of Austin explained that HB 921 requires school districts to offer certain percentages of course types to students. The bill does not require students to enroll in a certain percentage of course types, nor are students restricted in the number of fine arts courses he or she may take, she explained.

Spokesmen in several area legislators' offices said Wednesday that Rep. Delco issued the letter after state educators complained that the bill limited the amount of time students in all grades could spend in fine arts courses.

The rumors that fine arts courses were eliminated or restricted in the bill apparently stemmed from a misinterpretation of the percentages set forth by Rep. Delco in the measure which passed in the House on Thursday. It currently is before the Senate.

The bill mandates that school districts offer a certain percentage of three categories of courses — basic skills, work skills and other skills.

Different Skills Defined

As defined by the Texas Education Code, basic skills include such courses as reading, language arts, math, science, physical education and health.

Work skills include industrial arts, home and family life, agricultural education, health occupation education and vocational education.

Fine arts courses are included in the other skills category, according to Raymon Bynum, associate commissioner of finance for the Texas Education Agency.

As clarified in Rep. Delco's letter, the percentages do not refer to the breakdown of course types a student must take. A student still has flexibility in planning his or her curriculum according to his or her tastes and interests, the letter explained.

The percentages, however, did not specifically refer to the area of fine arts, and students and teachers apparently concluded that such courses would either not be included in a district's class offerings or would be restricted.

Adding Amendment

The bill refers only to the percentages of basic and work skills that a district must offer. In order to clarify her bill, Rep. Delco will add an amendment to the Senate version of the bill to include fine arts courses within the basic skills category.

In her letter she noted that the amendment does not require a student to take fine arts courses, but allows the student to pursue such a course as a basic skill if desired.

R.R. Whitten, band director at Mackenzie Junior High, said he was told that students in elementary grades could take only about 15 minutes of fine arts courses, such as band and choir, as compared to the approximate hour that they can now devote to such courses.

He said he thought that fine arts courses in the high schools would be reduced from about two hours time to about 72 minutes.

He said he was concerned that the short length of time for such courses in the lower grades would seriously impair the students' fine arts skills and subsequently cause them problems in those

Panama's President Plans Canal Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panamanian President Aristides Royo arrived here Wednesday for talks with President Carter on the prospects for a smooth transition to joint U.S.-Panamanian management of the Panama Canal this fall.

Royo stopped off in Washington enroute to Panama after a trip to Europe. Although his two-day visit is officially designated as private, Royo has arranged separate meetings today with Carter and with House and Senate leaders.

The Senate ratified the canal treaties a year ago but Congress still must approve legislation to enable the United States to fulfill its treaty obligations. Administration officials say a close vote is expected next week when the House takes up legislation to create an agency to run the canal through 1999.

Summit Signing Plans Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winding up nearly seve years of hard bargaining, the United States announced agreement Wednesday with the Soviet Union on a treaty to slow the nuclear arms race.

President Carter said he and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev will sign the treaty at a summit meeting as soon as it can be arranged.

"The American people have no more deeply felt wish then to enhance our nation's security and to reduce the risk of nuclear war," Carter said in a speech to a Demcocratic Party congressional campaign fund-raising dinner.

No Soviet Announcement Of Pact

There was no simultaneous announcement from the Soviet Union. A senior White House official said he expected the Russian people would be informed through the Soviet press.

When a decision is reached on the time and place for the Carter-Brezhnev summit meeting there probably will be simultaneous announcements in Washington and Moscow, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who negotiated the settlement on key provisions with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, made the formal U.S. declaration that — except for a "few remaining secondary items" — the treaty was finally wrapped up.

U.S. officials said there were no hitches. They said the remaining details were technical and could be handled by the U.S. and Soviet delegations in Geneva who will prepare the treaty text over the next two or three weeks.

Assurances Given

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, speaking for the Pentagon, gave assurances that "SALT will contribute significantly to our security."

Brown said that even with the treaty, the United States will have to expand its defense efforts, and particularly its strategic nuclear forces.

Vance emphasized the hope the pact carries for "a safer America and a safer world." But he, too, said the agreement limiting long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles will enhance the security of the United States and its allies.

"The treaty is a message of hope for us, and for all the people of the world," Vance tod reporters crowded into the White House briefng room.

Mid-June Summit

Carter and Brezhnev are to sign the treaty at the summit in mid-June. A senior White House official who asked not to be identified said the Soviets have assured the United States that Brezhnev will be able to attend, despite his poor health.

The exact time and site for the summit will be announced "in the very near future, in a few days," the official said.

Vance and Dobrynin held their 27th meeting this year at the State Department late Wednesday to discuss a date and location for the summit, but there was no word whether they settled the issue during their 45-minute session.

Even in advance of the announcement, Carter began meeting privately with some members of the Senate, which will have to ratify the accord. White House press secretary Jody Powell did not identify the senators contacted, but said the president would be seeing lawmakers throughout the day.

Amendment Likely

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said later he told Carter it is his "strong feeling" that the SALT treaty likely will be amended on the Senate floor or returned for renegotiation.

"He (Carter) asked for help in getting it ratified and I told him I have strong

Utility Rate Bill Passed By Senate

By MITCH GREEN
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Sen. E.L Short of Tahoka was in the wrong place at the wrong time Wednesday, as the Senate considered and passed a controversial bill transferring electirc rate making authority from city councils to the Public Utilities Commission in Austin.

By a 20 to 10 vote, senators suspended the necessary rule to allow the bill to be brought to the floor for debate. Short was the only senator not voting.

Had he been present and voted against the suspension, proponents of the bill would have failed by one vote to get the two-thirds margin they needed.

Short, who eventually voted against the bill on passage to third reading, was busy in the House where a petty squabble between a Lubbock and a Dallas representative was threatening the progress of his bill establishing a municipal court of record for Lubbock.

However, Rep. Froy Salinas, House sponsor of the bill, said he had the situation well under control before Short arrived.

Lengthy Debate Conducted

After lengthy debate, the Senate approved a slightly amended version of the rate making bill by a 16 to 14 vote.

Opponents had argued that the legislation was an attempt by electric utilities to evade effective regulation by city councils who now have original jurisdiction over rates.

"The utilities want to get out from under the cities because they can't control them any more. Now they want to come down here and try to control PUC," charged Rep. Ron Clower of Garland.

Unnecessary Red Tape Cited

Supporters of the legislation argued that municipal regulation is an unnecessary layer of red tape because the PUC ends up setting most rates after appeals from city council decisions.

Clower made several unsuccessful efforts to amend the bill.

"Let's be honest. These amendments are do-nothing amendments, and their only purpose is to delay this bill by sending it back to the House," said Sen. Gene Jones, Houston, senate sponsor of

Gasohol Production, Sale Plans Backed

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LEGALIZATION of gasohol in Texas took another major stride Wednesday when a Senate commitee unanimously approved a House bill that would provide $15 million in state loans to persons and groups willing to construct gasohol facilities.

And another House bill awaiting a Senate hearing has been altered to clear the way for a major gasohol production plant in Dimmitt, an event that appeared impossible only last week.

Senate Vote Due Today

The first bill, HB 1803, will be read and voted on by the full Senate Wednesday. Should it pass, it would lack only Gov. Bill Clements' signature to become law.

"We're thrilled," said Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale, the pioneer of gasohol bills in the Texas legislature. "We've been pulling for this for quite some time, and it looks like we're finally going to get it."

The second bill, HB 1986, would provide for the manufacture of alcohol for use as a motor fuel, and is the cornerstone for statewide gasohol production.

That bill was altered as a result of a meeting late Tuesday involving Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Reps. Kubiak and Bill Keese of Somerville, another strong gasohol proponent, and representatives from the attorney general's office, the powerful Licensed Liquor Distributors and the Texas Corn Growers Association.

The bill now will allow anyone to apply for a permit to manufacture alcohol, whereas it previously allowed application only by groups with more than 50 percent Texas ownership. Had that stipulation been allowed to stand, neither the Amstar Corn Sweetening Plant in Dimmitt nor the Midwest Solvents plant proposed for the Rio Grande Valley would have been eligible for the licenses.

Liquor Lobby Concession

As a concession to the powerful state liquor lobby, that bill also was amended to forbid the production of beverage-quality alcohol. Should it be passed into law as is, gasohol facilities would be able to produce only denatured alcohol, which is unfit for drinking.

Though Midwest Solvents, which has received a $15 million federal grant to build its proposed $22 million plant near Santa Rosa, strongly opposed the prohibition of beverage-quality alcohol, a spokesman for the Kansas-based company said plans for the Rio Grande Valley facility still were being seriously considered.

The next steps toward the realization of gasohol in Texas are the Senate vote on the state loan bill, and a hearing on the alcohol manufacture bill. Chuck Dean, Kubiak's legislative assistant, said

Agents Confiscate Illegal Stuffed Owl

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — For more than two years, a stuffed screech owl decorated the kitchen wall of Tom and Dulsie Ryan's rural home. Then federal agents confiscated the bird and feathers started flying.

While the Ryans and their five children were off on a spring vacation, Mrs. Ryan said, agents from U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service entered the house in Fond du Lac and hauled off the foot-high trophy.

"The federal government broke into our home," she said. "They didn't even give us a chance to explain. They didn't give us a fair hearing."

The Ryans then got a letter notifying them that they were being fined $100 for illegal possession and transportation of a federally protected migratory bird.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says the family illegally had the bird stuffed and mounted. The family says the state gave proper authorization. The state suggests the family may not be telling the whole truth.

The controversy over the owl began with the bird's demise in 1976, when it

The family spent $50 to stuff and mount the distinctly marked bird, which is heard more often than seen in the woods.

But they first had to get a "red tag" issued by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources which allows citizens to keep otherwise illegal animals.

Mrs. Ryan said they were issued such a tag by Tom Harelson, a Fond du Lac area state game warden, which was labeled only "critter."

"We were issued a red tag, just like when a deer is killed a by a car out of season," she said.

But when Richard Dickinson, a special agent with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, showed up at the Ryan home and warned that the owl would be confiscated unless they produced the tag, it could not be found.

Then, while the Ryans were off for an Easter vacation, Dickinson and other agents got a federal warrant and retrieved the owl.

In the meantime, Mrs. Ryan said, they found the tag, dated Dec. 22, 1976, and signed by Harelson.

Dickinson would not comment, but a state Department of Natural Resources official said there is no record of Harelson or any other warden issuing a red tag for the Ryan's screech owl.

Harelson said he did indeed write a red tag for the family in December 1976, but he said it was for a weasel killed by a car.

Mrs. Ryan denied that the tag had been altered. "Why would we do that?" she said. "He just had 'critter' written on it. That was the only thing we had around here that we needed a tag for."

ARM AMPUTATED

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — A life-threatening complication Wednesday caused surgeons at the Hershey Medical Center to finally amputate the right arm of a Mercersburg, Pa., man. A center spokesman said the decision was made when excessive bleeding threatened the life of Thomas Burkett, 21. A team of surgeons had re-attached Burkett's arm Tuesday in a 10-hour operation after it was severed in the collision of his station wagon with a school bus.

Woman, Child Dead In Florida Flood

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — With a raging whirlpool of floodwater swirling about him, Bert Collom snatched his 14-year-old daughter to safety. But his wife and other teen-age daughter were swept to their deaths in a storm sewer.

The terror of death still showed on the face of Collom's wife, Judith, 37, when they pulled her body from a drainage ditch, rescuers said Wednesday.

"She had a very terrified look on her face, very terrified," said Roy Wheeler, one of the two rescuers.

"I've never seen anything like it before" said his coworker Tom Guiffrida. "Totally a look of shock and fear. She didn't know what hit her."

The body of Collom's 12-year-old daughter, April, was found Wednesday in a drainage canal only a few blocks from where she disappeared.

An unidentified body found in Tampa Bay northeast of St. Petersburg apparently was another victim of tornadoes and drenching storms that raked Central Florida Tuesday, leaving at least seven persons dead.

The Colloms were fleeing their flooded house, headed for the safety of a relative's home to wait out the storm. They were crossing a street near Tyrone Square Mall, a huge shopping complex that hugs the heavily traveled thoroughfare in St. Petersburg.

Police said water was nearly waist-deep in the street from the record 17.7-inch rainfall that pounded the city.

Chelly, 14, was swept into a drainage ditch, but her father managed to pull her to safety. The water caught April, and when her mother tried to rescue her, both were swept into a closed conduit beneath 66th Street.

Twelve blocks away, where the conduit opens into another drainage ditch, Mrs. Collom's body surfaced.

Not long after that, at that same spot, a city policeman dived into the swirling waters and pulled a woman to safety after she toppled into the ditch.

The American Insurance Association in Atlanta Wednesday estimated $8 million in insured losses to vehicles, buildings, dwellings and contents in Pinellas, Polk, Hillsborough and Volusia counties, which bore the brunt of the storms. The estimate did not include losses from widespread floods such as the one that trapped the Collom family.

House Backs Foreign-Student Tuition Hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Foreign students, except Mexican nationals in financial need, would pay the same state college tuition as non-resident students from other states under a bill approved Wednesday by the Texas House.

"I recognize, members, that some of you hate foreigners," said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, during the almost two hours of debate on the bill.

The measure advanced, 123-14, and needs one more vote to return it to the Senate for approval or disapproval of a House amendment.

Under present law, virtually all foreign students pay $14 per semester hour tuition, compared with $40 paid by out-of-state students from the United States and $4 by Texans.

The one exception came in an amendment by Coleman allowing state university regents to continue the $14 an hour tuition charge for students from Mexico who are proven to be in financial need.

Rep. Lanny Hall, D-Fort Worth, the sponsor, said he introduced the bill after constituents complained that foreign students have a tuition advantage that non-residents from other states do not have.

"My intent is to make it fair, to make foreign students' tuition the same as out-of-state tuition," Hall said.

Cloudy Skies, Cooler Temps Head For Area

After a week of sunshine and summer-like temperatures, South Plains residents today can expect cooler temperatures and cloudy skies.

A cold front, which began moving into the region from the Panhandle Wednesday evening, will bring clouds and temperatures some 20 degrees cooler than Wednesday's 90-degree readings.

The high temperatures for today are expected to be in the upper 70s and lows are expected in the middle 40s. Westerly winds are expected to gust up to 25 mph causing wind warnings to be issued for area lakes.

Temperatures Friday are expected to reach into the lower 70s.

Hail and tornadoes were reported from severe thunderstorms that developed as the cold front moved across the Panhandle. No damage was reported from a tornado that touched down south of Canadian, but another tornado that touched down four miles east of the northeastern Panhandle community damaged a building and ripped the roof off a barn.

Pampa police reported pea-sized and larger hail and heavy rains just south of town.

Temperatures remained cold along the eastern slopes of the northern Rockies into the western portions of the upper Plains. Snow showers invaded South Dakota and western Nebraska.

AN EDITORIAL:

A Key Point: Retain LP&L

THE KEY POINT made by the Lubbock Power and Light Study Committee in its recommendations to the City Council is that every effort should be made to preserve electric power competition here.

Lubbock consumers would be in trouble if the competitive climate became such that either Southwestern Public Service Co. were to decide to "pull out" or if LP&L were to be phased out of viable existence, Committee Chairman Arnold Maeker said.

This is an eminently correct assessment and one which must be impressed upon the less-wise Texas Public Utility Commission, which has taken a head-in-the-sand monopolistic attitude as its dangerous bureaucratic power grows.

MOST OF THE CITIZENS' study group's recommendations dealt with City Council policies that are necessary to keep municipally owned LP&L economically healthy.

Correctly noting that past City Councils have raped the utility by draining its profits in order to keep the city tax rate low, the citizens committee endorsed the current policy of transferring 8 percent of LP&L's gross revenues to the City general fund.

By emphasizing the "present application" of that formula, the committee explicitly recognized the correctness of the Council's action last year in reducing the level of its profiteering off the automatic fuel cost adjustment to 4 percent.

Actually, no part of the FCA should go to the City treasury. It represents the rising cost of boiler fuel which LP&L merely passes along to the consumer.

Study Committee members also recommended that an interconnection be made as soon as possible between LP&L and another power company, probably but not necessarily SPS itself, and that the role of the Electric Utilities Board in LP&L operations not be altered.

STUDIES BY THE citizens group dispelled the persistent myth that LP&L has been a drain on taxpayers in the past.

To the contrary, the study showed, the utility has paid the city about $6.5 million more than 8 percent of its gross revenues since 1957. Therefore, a bookkeeping entry showing that the utility "owes" the general fund $2 million is in error and should be corrected with an appropriate entry, the group recommended.

"There has never been a situation here where the taxpayers were subsidizing LP &L," Maeker said. "It has always gone the other way; LP&L has subsidized the City."

It has done so while, by virtue of competition between SPS and LP&L, consumers here have enjoyed uncommonly low electric rates. It is a situation which the study correctly shows should be perpetuated.

AN EDITORIAL:

Gas Crisis--Just How Serious?

THE STATE OF confusion which seems to be a standby of the Carter administration apparently is going to be a way of life for the foreseeable future.

Or at least until 1980 when voters will have another opportunity to decide what direction they want the nation to take.

The latest chapter in where are we and where are we going is taking place on the energy front, with emphasis on the "yes there is-no there ain't" a gasoline shortage. And if so, how did we get this way?

THUS FAR, it has faced rough sledding, although with modifications will go to a full Senate and House floor debate.

With lines of cars growing by the day in California and that state planning to institute its own "alternate days" fuel rationing plan, motorists in other areas of the nation are becoming increasingly jittery. On the eve of an approaching vacation season more and more people are wondering if there will be enough gas, not how much will it cost.

In the latest change in signals from the White House, the proposed standby rationing program would give drivers in the more "wide open" western states more gas.

Despite his push for the authority, the President still argues that gasoline rationing should not be necessary. In view of past promises which have gone sour, especially on the crude oil front, it is a hollow pledge.

ONE WOULD think that at this stage of the game, officials—of the government as well as the oil companies—could pretty well say if the nation faces a major shortfall in gasoline supplies for the next few months.

If not, then rationing will not be necessary—and more importantly, those long lines, some brought on by the mere fear of rationing, will be alleviated.

As for how we got this way, the answers are obvious. We have squandered five years after the Arab Embargo without coming up with alternate sources of energy. A squeamish Carter administration allowed Iran and the Shah to go down the drain, thus losing a prime supply of oil.

In brief, human error, misjudgment and a lack of bold initiative have put us where we are. The solution is just as obvious as the problem.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Card Shark Takes Bite Out Of Casinos' Cache

WASHINGTON—Take a Yale Phi Beta Kappa, mix in a masters degree from Harvard Business School, and add a dash of service as senior vice president of the Pacific Stock Exchange, and what do you get?

The answer, in the case of Kenneth Uston, is one of the most proficient gamblers in the U.S., if not the world. Uston is so good, in fact, that he has been barred from casinos in Las Vegas and Atlantic City.

He is currently fighting a legal and public relations battle to be allowed to ply his trade as a professional blackjack player in U.S. gambling spas.

And thereby hangs a tale—one Uston has recounted in two recent books, "The Big Player" (soon to be made into a movie), and "One Third of a Shoe" (a shoe is the box from which the cards are dealt).

BEFORE PROCEEDING further, let me make a declaration of personal interest: I have known Ken Uston since we were classmates, and friends, at college. He was hard-working, serious, and intelligent—as his record suggests, an excellent student.

That he might in time become a celebrated gambler would not have crossed the mind of most of us who knew him—or, I imagine, of Ken himself.

Yet there were attributes evident even then which contribute directly to his success in his unusual career: An aptitude for numbers, economic science, and music—all revolving around the mathematical skills that make his blackjack playing so effective.

His approach to the game is entirely scientific: It does not depend on hunches, luck, or any sort of mystical mumbo-jumbo—though it is doubtful any gambler could succeed without occasional bursts of intuition.

Uston's formula is to employ his mathematical skills, and knowledge of the game, to do his serious betting when the odds are in his favor. In the simplest terms, he is a "card counter":

HE KEEPS track of the cards as they are dealt, and after a certain time knows if the remainder of the deck is rich, or poor, in aces, tens or face cards. If and when a deck becomes highly "positive" (rich in high value cards), the betting is increased accordingly.

It's more complex than that, of course, but this conveys the basic notion. Using this method, Uston and his teammates (who pool resources to establish a bank of tens of thousands of dollars), have won enormous sums at Las Vegas, Atlantic City, and casinos around the world—over $3 million, by Uston's estimate.

He also notes that, by one calculation, he and the teams with which he has been connected have placed $600 million in bets over the past four years.

Because these stratagems have made a dent in the casinos' "bottom line," Uston has been branded as an undesirable by several of the managements.

HE HAS BEEN barred from various casinos in Las Vegas and, early this year, after a successful foray into New Jersey, was shown the door at that establishment as well.

This puts him in the unusual position of being a professional gambler with virtually no place to practice his profession (though he still has income from writing, investments, and teaching).

It should be stressed that there is no issue here of cheating or unfair advantages. Uston is playing by the rules of the casinos themselves, and simply using his wits and superior methodology to beat them at their own game.

He is being barred, in other words, not because he is doing anything dishonest, but because he is too skillful.

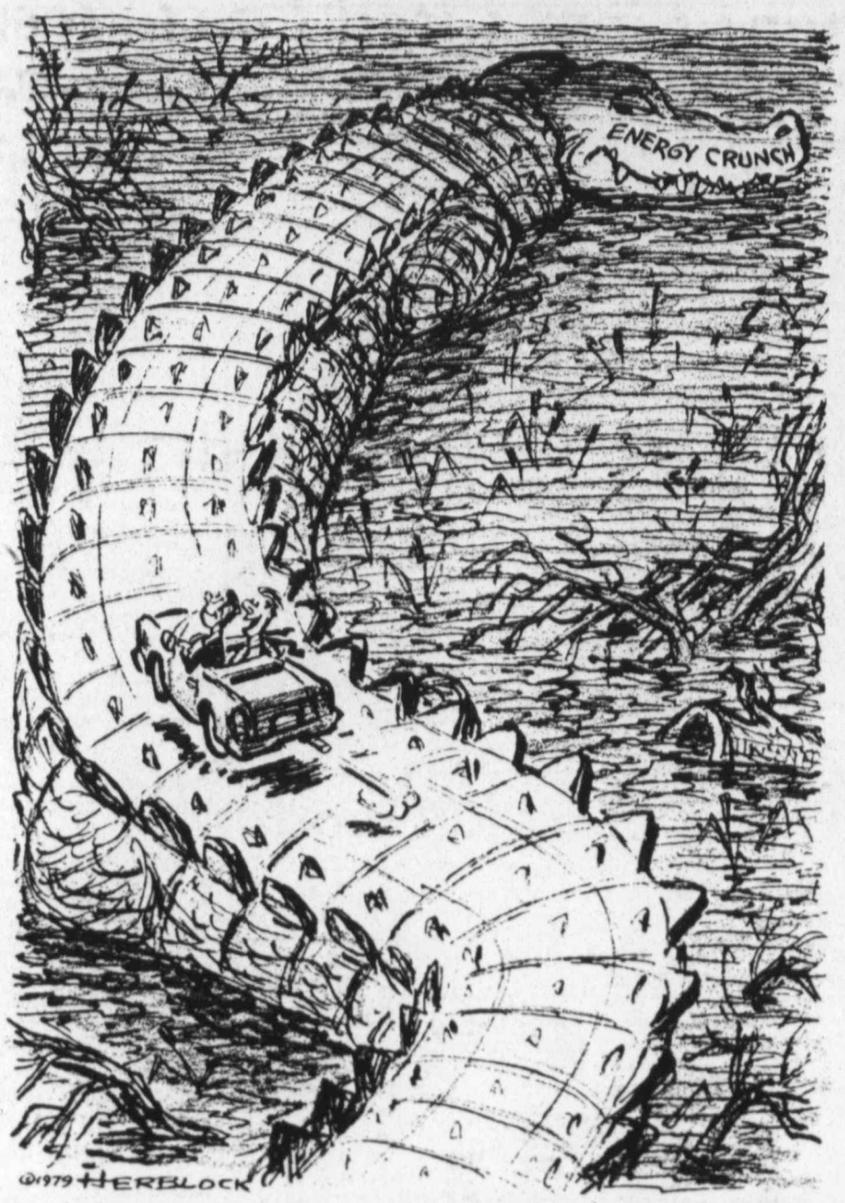

All of this will be hashed out in the hearing rooms and the courts, and I would not presume to analyze the legal technicalities involved. A couple of points, however, should suffice by way of comment:

FIRST, IN THE usual case, the casinos are licensed by government, and in the case of Atlantic City the casino in question has been the only game in town.

Second, it is not a general practice of casinos to bar players whose gambling skills (like my own) range from small to none, and who have little understanding of the odds against them.

What, then, is the justice in barring players who are considered too proficient?

ROLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Reagan Joins Rejects

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Movement by front-running Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan toward the center has been confirmed by his effort—though unsuccessful—to hire the campaign management firm that defeated him for the 1976 nomination.

The spurned offer was made to the Washington-based firm of Bailey and Deardourff, which handled the finishing stages of Gerald Ford's victorious campaign against Reagan.

John Deardourff (who broke into national politics as an aide to Nelson Rockefeller) and Doug Bailey are preeminent practitioners of moderate Republicanism.

Consequently, those conservatives who have heard about it were stunned by Reagan's move. They believe it confirms their worst fears that Reagan manager John Sears wants to run a non-ideological campaign not attuned to the issues.

Sears contacted the Bailey-Deardourff firm, and Reagan himself conferred with Bailey last month. But the firm informed Reagan, as it has other Republican presidential hopefuls, that it does not intend to take on a presidential campaign this time.

The reasons are twofold: first, Bailey and Deardourff would rather concentrate on interesting state races—especially Illinois, Pennsylvania and California—in 1980; second, no current presidential prospect—Reagan included—particularly appeals to them.

A footnote: The 1984 campaign might be another matter. Bailey-Deardourff has close contacts with several Republican governors—James Thompson of Illinois, Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Lamar Alexander of Tennessee—who might be ready to go national that year.

TURKEY, THE long-time U.S. ally that was denied U.S. military aid several years ago by Congress under the influence of the pro-Greek lobby, now holds a whiphand over the U.S. that is giving policy-makers the jitters and raising questions about the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II).

When aid was restored by President Carter, the Turks agreed to reopen highly important American bases, but only for a one-year test period. That year runs out in October.

The problem is that, as a result of the Iranian revolution, the loss of U.S. monitoring stations in Iran that could monitor Soviet missile tests has made the Turkish bases infinitely more important than they used to be.

Although the Turkish stations could never fully take the place of the now-closed monitoring stations in Iran to verify Soviet performance on SALT, they are far more important today than ever before.

The problem is that the pro-Greek lobby is still furious at Turkey for that country's refusal to make concessions on Cyprus that Greece demands. That means Congress retains the threat to reduce the new U.S. aid program, a threat the Turks take so seriously they will not promise that the American bases will stay open indefinitely.

Without such assurance, the Carter administration is reluctant to spend the large sums needed to upgrade the bases.

HERMAN KAHN, the cerebral whiz who runs the Hudson Institute, has had preliminary talks with Gen. Alexander Haig over the possibility of Haig doing special long-range, foreign-military policy work for the institute after he retires as supreme commander of NATO—and from the Army—the end of June.

If Haig takes the job, it would be a sure signal that the four-star general who has run the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) for more than four years wants to move into elective politics.

Haig has offers from at least three major corporations for top-rated jobs, in addition to offers from some of the nation's think-tanks. These are government-financed research organizations that do long-range planning in strategic, technological and other specialized work for the government.

The Hudson Institute, one of the foremost, wants Haig and has offered him a job. Haig's response: no decision on his future until after his June 30 retirement date.

With offices near New York City and in Paris, Tokyo and Montreal, Hudson would offer Haig an attractive place to hang his hat. But the general has not decided on his future course, despite the opening of a Haig-for-President office in Chicago, as we reported last week.

If he decides to try for political office, particularly a spot on the 1980 Republican presidential ticket, he might well go with the Hudson Institute. If not, he is expected to accept one of the business jobs.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

It Is Up To PLO

ISRAELI PLANES and naval aircraft bombarding southern Lebanon put the Palestine Liberation Organization and its chief, Yasser Arafat, on the defensive.

I once interviewed Arafat at his secret hideout in Amman, Jordan. It was heavily guarded by camouflage-uniformed "militia." As always, Arafat wore an "agals" (a braided rope headdress).

Arafat is a broad-shouldered, slab-sided Arab with a crushing grip and a tanned, leathery face, and his eyes dart in all directions. He has a hooked nose, a low-pitched voice, and a mustache that curves down around his mouth like a scimitar.

Arafat told me he was born in a haimah—a nomad tent—and that in the PLO he prefers the alias "Abu Ammar."

THE PALESTINE refugees evicted by Israel total at least 2.78 million, many more than supposed, and some of them go back more than 31 years to Israeli's 1948 war.

They live in farflung regions, including Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and other countries on the Persian Gulf. About 320,000 live in Lebanon, chiefly in refugee camps and in Iraq and Iran, among other countries.

Through their bombings and assassinations, the PLO and its 14 offshoots have utterly lost the respect of the entire civilized world. Arafat himself admitted to me that the PLO is so riddled with rivalries and jealousies that nobody really speaks for the organization.

Only hatred for Israel's Zionism holds the evacuees together. They feel that Israel has deprived them of their birthright, and they are willing to pay dearly for revenge—what they call their "akhad taro."

ARAFAT SAID: "The Palestinians think of wars against Israel in terms of decades, figuring they are in the battle for destiny. We can lose many times, but Israel can only lose once."

The Arab riots continue inside Israel, and they are much more significant than we are told. The riots widened from Old Jerusalem's Temple Mount, and the boil burst at two major Islamic shrines.

Actually, the riots began in August 1974 when the Israeli government imprisoned 890 Arabs, contending that they were Palestinians stealing across the Syria-Jordan borders.

But instead they were West Bank and Jerusalem Arabs from areas that Israel seized in the 1967 war and never gave back.

ISRAEL TOTALLY depends on the U.S., and America has a permanent, continuing stake in Israel.

This also exists with regard to the Mideast peace—as shown by the peace pact signed by Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin on the White House lawn on March 26, 1979, which was attested to and formally witnessed by President Carter.

When Sadat visited Jerusalem, he took an immense step forward in establishing a Mideast peace. Peace may come—but only after important, vital settlements regarding the Palestinians who were evicted from Israel.

JAY HARRIS:

'The Taj' Of Agra

AGRA, INDIA—Unless it is the majestic bronze and black Bengal tiger, no other "symbol" of India is more widely known than the Taj Mahal.

Termed the most magnificent monument ever built to Love, the fantastic marble mausoleum here is a must for any visitor to India.

And while one may have the feeling, because of the many photos made of it, that "I've been here before," The Taj truly rates as one of the wonders of the modern world.

We flew into Agra one muggy morning from New Delhi, actually a "commuter's hop" of half an hour from the Indian capital. The next three days here, and at nearby Jaipur, "the pink city," were a change of pace from village life and game preserve.

AGRA HAS A history dating back some 5,000 years.

Its heritage is steeped in ancient lore, fact, fancy and an ample dose of the soft sell. Agra and The Taj have an appeal which cuts across all ages.

Not only is the 327-year-old Taj Mahal crowded with tourists from around the world from early morning until late at night—when the moon is full—but by thousands from within India itself.

Here a feeling of warmth coupled with a near reverence seems to take hold of those who walk through the huge main red gate and gaze upon the splendor of the shimmering white marble structure for the first time. For a moment, time stops and one is transported on a magic carpet to another time, another place.

IF THE DAY is calm and the long, rectangular reflecting pool is clean of debris and dust, the "second view" one gets of the domed Taj is one of a shimmering duplicate.

The edifice, overpowering in its symmetry, balance and overall beauty, was built by the 17th Century Emperor Shah Jahan to house the jewel-encrusted tomb of his second but "favorite" wife, Armand Banu. Known as "Mumtaz-i-Mahal," or "elect of the Palace," from which the name of the Taj was derived, the Empress died at the age of 39.

When her distraught husband asked her on her death bed what he could do to pay homage to their great love, she asked that he never marry again, that he take care of their three children and that he build a monument to her.

THE TAJ MAHAL was built as promised, and few "love stories" in history match it.

The monument, started shortly after Mumtaz' untimely death June 17, 1631, was completed 22 years later. It is said 20,000 workers toiled on the edifice and that the most perfect marble, stones, inlay and workmanship in all of India, if not Asia, may be found here.

From an architectural standpoint, The Taj is near perfect. Set in a rectangular garden on the right bank of the Yamanu river, the domed structure seems to float above a long reflecting reservoir of marble.

The main mausoleum stands on a double platform, the first of red sand stone, the second of marble 18 feet higher than the first and measuring 313 feet square. Two staircases, each with 22 steps, lead to the entrance. Inside is an intricate pattern of stone, lace-work carvings and on the main level two tombs, "transparent" to light. Below are two more tombs, reputedly the final resting place of the Empress.

TODAY, THE Taj Mahal may be in trouble.

Although it has survived wars, floods and the touch and trampling of millions, a modern plague, pollution, is taking its toll.

Agra, always an important way stop, is now an industrial center as well as tourist attraction. Some 250 foundries have been built in and around the city the past 30 years, and critics claim they are causing the pure white mausoleum to lose much of its pearly sheen.

But, it is not the plants alone that are at fault. Agra, a metropolis of one million, becomes a smog-shrouded city each morning and as the sun sinks. Smoke from a thousand and one native cookfires hovers over homes and hovels, creating a layer of pollution that can be seen and felt.

AGRA IS MORE than the Taj Mahal for those who wish to study its past and present.

It is a city of monuments dating back to the days of the marauding Mongols. Some 40 kilometers southwest of Agra lies a deserted sandstone city, Fatephur Sikri, one of the more unusual "extras" of a visit here.

Built by the Emperor Akbar in the 16th Century, the complex of red forts, palaces and mosques had to be abandoned for lack of water and other reasons. Other monuments and palaces vie for attention as does the city's world-famous marble works.

But, the Taj Mahal is the drawing card. It was Bayard Taylor who said: "If there is nothing else in India, this alone would reply the journey." His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales said: "Most writers who have tried their hands at a description of the Taj set out with the admission that it is indescribable, and then proceed to give some ideas of it."

And Major Gen. Sleeman said: "I asked my wife when she had gone over it, what she thought. 'I cannot,' she said, 'tell you what I think, for I know not how to criticize such a building, but I can tell you what I feel. I would die tomorrow to have such another over me.'"

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

WHEN AN Australian aborigine goes out to hunt down a kangaroo, he relies on a peculiar characteristic of the beast—its tendency to imitate, if not alarmed. When the hunter gets the attention of the roo, he pauses a moment, then takes one hop toward it.

The kangaroo takes one hop toward him. The hunter takes another hop. So does the roo. This goes on until the hunter is close enough to make the kill.

Did I tell you a wild turkey can outsprint a horse?

Colorado Cement Firm Cited For Price Guidelines Violation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Council on Wage and Price Stability charged Wednesday that a Denver-based cement producer is the first company not in compliance with anti-inflation price guidelines.

Ideal Basic Industries denied the allegation and announced it would immediately appeal the council's decision. If its claim is rejected, the company could be barred from bidding for government contracts.

A spokesman for the council said, "We fully expect to start identifying more companies publicly. This is just the the start."

At the same time, President Carter said he still expects unions to adhere to his 7 percent wage guideline.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said there has been "no moderation" in the wage ceiling despite Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal's statement Tuesday that the annual inflation rate would exceed 8½ percent rather than the administration's earlier prediction of 7.4 percent.

Powell said Blumenthal was speaking only for himself and the new forecast "wasn't an official administration update." He said the president stands by the 7.4 percent prediction.

The council's action Wednesday represents the strongest move yet against any of 1,400 U.S. companies with sales over $250 million annually. Ideal Basic Industries, with reported sales of $410 million a year, is among the biggest cement makers in the country.

A council spokesman, who asked not to be named, said there are more than a dozen letters out to other companies saying they are in "probable non-compliance" with the price guidelines. He declined to identify them.

The council also said Giant Food Inc., headquartered in the Washington, D.C. suburbs, had agreed to roll back prices of several hundred items to assure that it complies with price standards.

The move is similar to one by Sears, Roebuck and Co., which agreed in late April to reduce some of its prices after being warned it was in "probable non-compliance" with the guidelines.

Like Sears, Ideal had been on the probable non-compliance list. A notice to that effect was issued April 6, said the council. But the company's response was deemed not sufficient.

John A. Love, Ideal's president and a former Colorodo governor, said his firm "strongly disagreed" with the council's finding.

"The company had advised the council that its suggested testing of compliance on the basis of quarterly sales data is unrealistic for companies like Ideal which historically announce annual price changes in the fall to become effective on or after Jan. 1 of the following year.

"In contrast, many consumer goods companies adjust prices at a significantly greater frequency," Love said.

Ideal had informed the council it did not plan to raise prices again this year, added Love.

The council spokesman countered: "We have studied their pricing very closely and we're on firm ground."

He said the council has dealt with more than 600 companies and not one had made the claim Ideal made.

The council earlier this month identified two paper companies as being in probable non-compliance. Crown Zellerback Corp. and the Hammermill Paper Co. denied the charge and said they plan to contest the findings.

Troop Reduction Talks Remain Deadlocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union remain deadlocked in negotiations for troop reductions in Central Europe despite a recent stepped-up effort to achieve a breakthrough, State Department officials said Wednesday.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said differing estimates over the numbers of Warsaw Pact forces remain the "central disagreement" between the two countries.

Texas Court Upholds Payment Of $226,298 Death Damages

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday ordered a San Antonio packing firm to pay $226,298 in damages to the husband of a 28-year-old woman killed when her auto was smashed by a cattle truck owned by the firm.

Randall Hahn had filed the suit against Leonard and Harral Packing Company, contending the negligence of its driver was responsible for the collision between the truck and the car, driven by Wanda Ruth Hahn, on Interstate 35 between Austin and San Antonio.

The woman delivered newspapers for the San Antonio Light. The left front tire of the truck blew out, causing it to cross the median on the interstate highway and smash into the car driven by Mrs. Hahn.

Hahn's suit also had sought damages from Sears, Roebuck and Company, claiming the company was negligent in inspecting the tire.

L&H, in turn, filed suit against Sears and the tire manufacturer, Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, claiming the tire was defective.

But a trial court ruled the negligence of the driver was at fault in the accident, and ordered the trucking firm to pay $225,000 in pecuniary damages and $1,298 funeral expenses for Mrs. Hahn, who was married on Valentine's Day, three and one-half months before the accident.

The court ruled the tire was not defective, and denied L&H's claim for damages against Sears and Kelly-Springfield.

The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court rulings without written comment.

In a separate case, the court upheld the Texas Railroad Commission's authority to continue bonus oil allowables to Sun Oil Co. despite protests from Texaco Inc. and another oil producer in Chambers County.

Texaco and Vernon Frost had filed suit to void a 25-year-old order allowing producers in the Fid Ridge (Seabreeze) oil field in Chambers County a bonus production permit for injecting water into the field.

Texas, Frost and Sun cooperated in the water injection program for 20 years, but Texaco and Frost became unhappy when their wells, in 1973, began producing more water and less oil. They contend the injection program operated by Sun now is draining oil away from their wells.

The Supreme Court ruled there is substantial evidence to support the Railroad Commission's determination that continuation of the bonus allowable to Sun will result in production of an additional 800,000 barrels of oil from the field, and said there was no evidence that amount of oil could be recovered by any other production method.

Houston Man's Murder Conviction Overturned

AUSTIN (UPI) — A Houston man serving a life sentence for capital murder Wednesday had the conviction overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals because a waiver he signed permitting prosecutors to try him as an adult was for a lesser charge.

Michael Ray Allen was convicted of the March 29, 1974, capital murder of Eric Siegfried, whom he shot while robbing him. Allen, 16 at the time, signed a waiver at a hearing several months after his arrest.

Allen appealed, contending that the only evidence derived from that hearing in juvenile court dealt with an attempted murder charge, not capital murder for which he was later found guilty.

At the same hearing, Allen was certified to be tried for attempted murder and he assumed the waiver he signed was for the attempted murder charge — which carried a maximum prison sentence of 20 years — rather than the automotic life sentence for capital murder.

The court ruled that the waiver was insufficent to try Allen for capital murder when he understood the charge to be attempted murder.

The criminal appeals court also reversed a two-year probated sentence assessed against Robert Kyle Ormsby of Brady for involuntary manslaughter because the trial court failed to instruct the jury that the man could be convicted of criminal negligence, a lesser crime.

Ormsby was charged with involuntary manslaughter after he fell asleep while driving late the night of Nov. 24, 1976. His car crossed the center stripe of the highway and collided with a vehicle in which Deborah Stitt was a passenger, killing her.

Witnesses testified Ormsby smelled of beer and slurred his speech.

Ormsby testified he was familiar with the road but was exhausted that particular night. He also testified he had consumed three beers on an empty stomach before traveling on the road.

The court said Ormsby's testimony was sufficient to raise the issue of criminal negligence. But because the trial court judge refused Ormsby's request the jury had no alternative but to convict him of involuntary manslaughter.

The court also:

—Reversed three 10-year sentences against Rudolph Thomas Jr. of Houston for aggravated robbery. The court ruled Thomas was convicted by the jury on charges not specifically set forth in the three indictments, which were fundamentally defective because they were drafted identically.

—Upheld the 70-year prison sentence given John Calvin Thompson of Houston for murder, ruling he had not been denied his right to a speedy trial. The court said Thompson twice agreed to continuances of his trial and had not sought release from jail during the 20 months he awaited trial although bond had been set.

Court Upholds Jury Decision

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday agreed that a Lubbock woman was totally and permanently disabled when she slipped and fell while mopping floors at St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock.

The Supreme Court made no further comment in the case, ordering International Insurance Co. to compensate Valentia A. Terres for her injuries.

A Lubbock jury earlier found that the woman would no longer be able to work following the accident, and said she was entitled to full worker compensation benefits.

In another case, the Supreme Court said it had no jurisdiction to consider a dispute involving Security National Bank of Lubbock and its attempt to collect on a $10,000 loan to Peter Payne.

Washington Loan and Finance Corp. is also a party to the case, since shortly before taking out the loan with Security National, Payne purchased a $10,000 certificate of deposit with Washington Loan.

Lower courts have already ordered a new trial in the dispute.

Minister Asks Rebuttal Time Against Hefner

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. James Robison has asked a Dallas television station to broadcast his religious documentary in rebuttal to the airing of Hugh Hefner's "25th Anniversary Playboy Special."

Robison, whose weekly program was cancelled after he made disparaging remarks about homosexuality, called on officials of WFAA-TV Tuesday to show his film, "The End of Outrage — A Call to Arms."

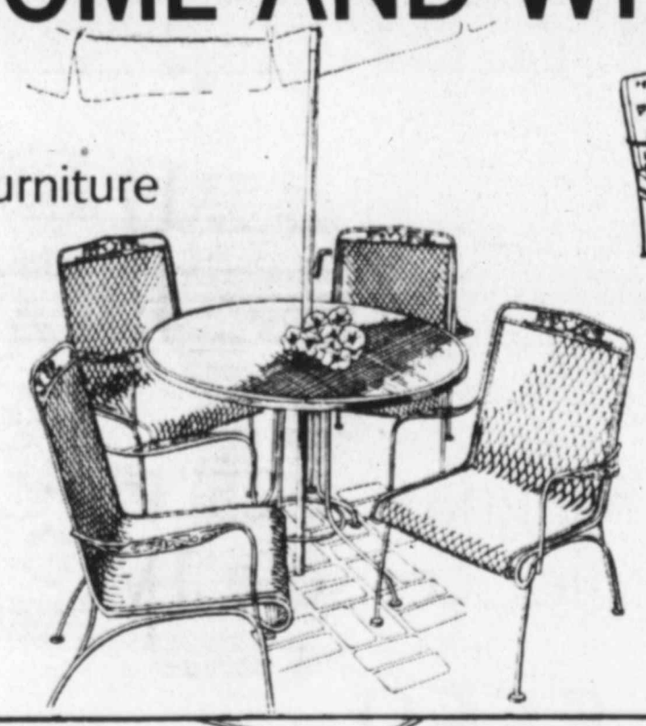

Station officials have been in a running battle with the evangelist since they refused in March to air the one-hour special portraying the moral swoon of America over the past 40 years.

In a letter to television officials, Robison said, WFAA "has used the public airways to present one side of a controversial issue of public importance."

"We feel our program reflects the views of a good number of citizens in this area who hold to traditional Judeo-Christian values of home, family and morality."

President Presents Plaques, Receives Stuffed Toy Dog

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter presented plaques to the Multiple Sclerosis Society's mother and father of the year Wednesday, then was given a giant stuffed dog that "I may play with when Amy is away."

The mother-father honors, given annually to persons symbolizing victims of MS, a disease of the central nervous system, went to:

—Nancy Katz, a former airline stewardess who lives in New City, N.Y., with her husband and 5-year-old son.

—Michael A. Aara of Wayland, Mass., executive administrator of a Boston money management firm who has a wife and two young children.

Carter, appealing for support for the MS society's annual fund drive, said his daughter Amy is a dedicated participant in the organization's read-a-thon program, which finds adults pledging to contribute a dime or more to the society for each book a youngster reads.

Smokers' Vote Snuffs Clean Air Proposal

MIAMI (AP) — A Dade County anti-smoking ordinance was snuffed out by an 835-vote margin Wednesday, but the man behind the "clean air" referendum predicted his movement will rise from the ashes.

"We are not giving up," said Charles Freefield, president of the Group Against Smokers' Pollution (GASP for short), following a final tabulation of absentee ballots. "We are going to try again by getting the issue on the ballot in the presidential primary." Florida's primary is next March.

But Freefield added that he hoped the Dade County Commission would enact a smoking curtailment ordinance first, making another voting campaign unnecessary.

After counting 3,287 absentee ballots, county election officials announced a final unofficial total of 96,511 votes against the ordinance and 95,676 in favor.

The absentees narrowed the margin, but not enough to reverse the results announced late Tuesday, when the referendum trailed by 1,203 votes — 95,074 against to 93,871 in favor.

However, the difference did dip to less than one-half of 1 percent, making a recount automatic, Elections Supervisor Joyce Dieffenderfer said. The recount started immediately.

Analysis of selected precincts in Miami and its suburbs indicated that a coalition of black voters and middle-class suburbanites joined to halt the ordinance, which would have banned or restricted smoking in most public places. Latins, Republicans, elderly citizens and condominium dwellers appeared to favor it.

"I lost a brother and sister because they smoked," said Sarah Mark, 78. "And I've got another sister right now who has cancer. Although it won't stop people from smoking, perhaps they'll have to smoke less."

Mandel Korn, 79, is a retired truck driver who quit smoking 30 years ago.

"If this is passed, then someone may decide that there is too much sex in this country," he said. "Then they will start a campaign to have women wear bridal shrouds."

Opposition to the referendum was organized by Dade Voters for Free Choice, who said it would give government the right to dictate to businessmen how to treat and serve their customers.

The measure would have required restaurants to provide equal segregated areas for smokers and nonsmokers. Lobbies and waiting rooms would have to be partitioned to isolate those who wished to smoke.

Sniper May Have Been Rich

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Fiesta sniper Ira Attebery may have left cash and property valued at up to $100,000, it was reported Wednesday, as a search for his assets continued.

Attorney Randolph Maness, of Doniphan, Mo., representing Attebery's survivors in Missouri, declined in a telephone interview to comment on the value of the estate, which is the object of a court battle in Missouri and San Antonio.

Attebery, 64, a native of Poplar Bluff, Mo., shot two women to death and wounded or injured more than 50 other persons on April 27 before fatally shooting himself in the head inside his motor home, parked on the route of the Battle of Flowers Parade.

An attorney representing the two small children and mother of Ila Dollard, one of the women killed by the automatic rifle fire, has filed suit seeking to recover Attebery's estate as damages for "wrongful death," but Attebery's family has also filed suit in Missouri asking that his assets be turned over to family members.

San Antonio attorney Oliver Heard said Wednesday he had information that Attebery at one time in 1977 had $80,000 in certificates of deposit, that a bank interest statement found in his camper indicated Attebery had at least $20,000 in one bank account at the end of 1978, and that the vehicle from which the sniper fired into the parade crowd was valued at between $5,000 and $10,000.

In addition, Heard said he had information that Attebery owned at least a part of 180 acres of farmland in Missouri.

Manness said Wednesday, however, that Attebery did not own any property by himself and would neither confirm nor deny that Attebery owned an interest in farmland.

SCHOOL VIOLATED CONSTITUTION

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) A federal judge has ruled the Nashua school board violated the First Amendment to the constitution when it banned "Ms." magazine from the Nashua High School library in March 1978. U.S. District Court Judge Shane Devine ordered the school board Tuesday to replace back issues of the feminist publication in the library and re-subscribe to the magazine. Devine said the magazines were "not obscene within any recognized definitions."

Five Local Veterans To Be Honored

Vietnam Veteran's Week, as proclaimed by President Jimmy Carter, will be observed locally May 28 to June 3 by recognizing five Vietnam era veterans for outstanding community achievement.

The awards will be made by Mayor Dirk West at a city council meeting at 9:30 a.m. May 24.

Civic organizations, community groups, employers and individuals wishing to nominate a Vietnam veteran should contact John Yugovich at 763-6565 or 745-1563 by May 15.

Veteran Administration chief Max Cleland said, "Vietnam Veteran's Week will be a one-time opportunity for the people of the United States to put aside their convictions about the war itself and pay tribute to the people who were called upon to fight it."

Cleland, a triple amputee who recovered from multiple hand grenade wounds in Vietnam to become the first veteran of that conflict to head the VA, said, "These veterans served their country with full measure of valor during the Vietnam War. They served with bravery fully equal to that of Americans who served in other wars."

Lynda Bird Robb Named To Head Women's Group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lynda Bird Robb was formally named Wednesday to replace former Rep. Bella Abzug as chairwoman of a revamped President's Advisory Committee for Women.

Mrs. Robb, 35, daughter of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was expected to take over her new duties at a meeting of the committee Thursday.

A self-described feminist who is not a member of any women's organization, Mrs. Robb is the mother of three children, the wife of Virginia Lt. Gov. Charles S. Robb, and a contributing editor to the Ladies Home Journal.

The choice of Mrs. Robb "emphasizes the importance the president places on women's right to choose freely among playing the role of wife and mother, combining work in the home with work outside and pursuing a career outside the home," a White House statement said.

President Carter, who met with Mrs. Robb Monday to give his final approval to the choice, said she will bring "greater understanding of the concerns of women who have chosen the role of homemaker and that she can provide these women with greater perspective on the effects of women's issues on their lives."

At the same time, Carter announced the appointments of four new members to replace women who resigned from the committee in protest when Mrs. Abzug was fired in January.

The new members are: Linda J. Lee, a New York city council aide and president of Council of Asian Women; Alice McDonald, assistant to the mayor of Louisville, Ky.; Ann S. Ramsay, budget director of Harvard University; and Jill L. Schropp, Seattle real estate investor.

Marjorie Bell Chambers, who has been acting chairwoman since January, and Libby Koontz, assistant superintendent of education in North Carolina and head of a National Commission on Working Women, were named vice-chairwomen.

Carter also signed an executive order changing the name of the group from the National Advisory Committee for Women to the President's Advisory Committee for Women, reducing its membership from 40 to 30, and extending its life through 1981.

At a reception for the new commission Wednesday night, Vice President Walter F. Mondale, praised Mrs. Robb. "She had many, many years in public life. No one has worked harder for the Equal Rights Amendment than Lynda has," he said.

Noting that Mrs. Robb has also spent time raising her family, the vice president said, "She's had experience as a homemaker."

Mrs. Robb said she hoped she could represent "those women who have not belonged to anything in the women's movement."

"I don't say I am a voice for all the women, I am a channel for the voices of millions of women," she said.

She said that before accepting the job she consulted with her mother, Lady Bird Johnson, who "reminded me of the many times my father tried to get women into government."

"Women do have an obligation, when they can, to work for other women," as well as all people, Mrs. Robb said.

She said that her father, the late president, believed in getting people working together and then observed that trying to get a consensus on the commission "will put all of us to a test."

More Funding Sought For Food Stamp Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration warned Congress Wednesday that unless it approves new funding to allow the food stamp program to keep up with steadily rising prices, poor families may have to have their benefits curtailed.

Agriculture Department officials said that rising food prices since last summer will mean a 7 percent boost in food-stamp allotments to more than 6 million low-income families this July, a hike of $14 a month for a family of four.

Because of the way the grocery-buying aid is calculated, benefits actually may increase more than that, a House subcommittee was told.

The officials emphasized anew that if Congress fails to lift a spending ceiling of $6.2 billion for this year's program, the aid will either have to be reduced until the new fiscal year starts on Oct. 1 or canceled entirely by the end of September.

Deputy Agriculture Secretary Jim Williams said that food-price increases and the addition of almost 2 million more persons to the recipient rolls since December mean full benefits will cost $403 million to $653 million more than the law now allows, even after $338 million left over from last year is spent.

The $6.2 billion ceiling was set in October 1977 at 10 percent above estimated costs. Those estimates, actually made in December 1976, assumed food prices would rise by 23 percent between October 1977 and October 1979, instead of the 45 percent now expected.

Rules making it easier for poor families to get stamps went into effect Jan. 1, increasing the number benefitting from some 17.5 million in December to an estimated 19.3 million.

About 500,000 persons are being stricken from the rolls by other new rules that took effect March 1, officials said.

The cost estimates include the boosts slated to take effect o July 1, Robert Greenstein, acting administrator of the Food and Nutrition Service, told the Agriculture Committee subcommittee on domestic marketing, consumer relations and nutrition.

State administrators were told Wednesday to prepare for an order to either cut benefits by one-third for three months, by one-half for two months or altogether for one month. The order could come as early as June 15, Greenstein said.

The subcommittee scheduled action Thursday on a bill to raise the ceiling by $653 million or remove specific dollar amounts from the law, leaving the figure up to the regular appropriations process.

Every Jan. 1 and July 1, food-stamp allotments are adjusted to reflect the costs four months earlier of ingredients in a "thrifty food plan," a low-cost diet that takes into account both nutrition and consumer buying patterns.

Three Prisoners Holding Hostages

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — Three Washington State Penitentiary inmates took 10 prison workers hostage Wednesday, state officials said. The prisoners claimed to have a bomb, police said.

No injuries were reported. Police in Richland said two bomb squad officers were sent to the prison, but it was not known if the prisoners had explosives as they claimed.

Odessa Man Changes Plea During Trial

FORT WORTH (Special) — During an Odessa man's trial here for the murder of his girlfriend, the state introduced as evidence photographs of the unearthed remains of the victim.

After seeing the grisly photos, Stephen Fife, 22, changed his mind and pleaded guilty to the murder of Catherine Ann (Fifi) Murphy.

The murder trial was a day and a half old when Fife instructed his attorney, Royal Caswell, that he wanted to plead guilty.

"Because of the evidence introduced by the state, the kid was visibly shaken," said Warren Hagey, an associate of Caswell. "He then demanded his attorney see what he could plea bargain for."

Fife was sentenced to 50 years imprisonment by 244th District Judge Joe Connally. The trial was moved to Fort Worth in March following a change of venue hearing.

Through Tuesday afternoon, the state's evidence included the testimony of four witnesses and 36 photogrpahs of the bones of Miss Murphy.

Her body was found in January, after Fife led authorities to a shallow grave in Crane County, where he buried her after strangling her during a "lover's quarrel" on July 19, 1978.

Forty hours after Miss Murphy disappeared, police found her car — which she and Fife had used on their date — on the parking lot of Permian Bank & Trust in northeast Odessa.

Intensive air and ground searches for the young woman failed. The search attracted the attention of private investigators, psychics and volunteers.

When the offical investigation and searches ended, the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Murphy, offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to their daughter's location. The reward was increased to $25,000 in December.

Fire Officials Report Arson In House Fire

An early morning fire that engulfed a condemned house in Lubbock was caused by arson, fire officials said Wednesday.

Assistant Fire Marshall John Anthony, who investigated the fire at 2219 27th St., found a deep burn pattern on the floor of the house that indicated a flammable liquid had been used to set the fire.

Fire units were called to the fire at 4:14 a.m. Wednesday. Firemen found the house engulfed in flames, but they had the fire under control by 4:32 a.m.

In other criminal activity, a man found lying in a ditch east of the city early Wednesday was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where he told sheriff's deputies he had been kidnapped, beaten and robbed by three black men.

Ramon Canales, 29, of 608 Idalou Road, said he was jogging near his residence when the suspects forced him into their car, beat him and robbed him of $100 cash.

Canales, who was treated and released at the hospital, said the men then drove about a mile east of the city on Acuff Road and dumped him in the ditch.

The men were described as between 20 and 21 years old. Since the reported kidnapping occurred within the city, the case was turned over to Lubbock police.

Police late Tuesday were inundated with reports of sex crimes within the city.

In two separate reports of attempted rapes, police say they think the attacks occurred within minutes of each other and were by the same man — a man both victims said appeared to be "doped up" on drugs.

A 37-year-old certified public accountant said she was working in her garden about 8 p.m. Tuesday when a man attacked her. She said the man fled after she screamed when he began fondling her.

While the investigating officer was searching the area for the suspect, a 22-year-old woman, accompanied by her husband, flagged the policeman down and said a man attempted to rape her just a block from the accountant's house. Her description of the man matched that given by the other woman.

The suspect was described as a thin Mexican-American, between 22 and 24 years old, about 5 feet 10 inches tall. He had shoulder-length black hair and was clad in a dark blue knit T-shirt, jeans and black shoes with platform heels.

Both women said the suspect's shirt had a decal stamped on its front, and the accountant said it possibly read "The Goon." The man lost one of his shoes when he fled the 37-year-old woman's house, reports indicate.

The accountant said the man approached her and asked if he could wait on her front porch for the bus. When the woman said no, the man said he was from Houston and was lost.

The woman said she told the man to leave and began walking towards the front porch where her 1-year-old daughter was playing. She said the suspect then grabbed her and sexually assaulted her.

John Dean Reports Theft

JOHN DEAN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Dean, former White House counsel and Watergate witness, has reported the theft of about $26,000 in jewels taken from a box hidden under a bed in his home.

Dean told police Tuesday evening the theft occurred sometime in the last three weeks during remodeling of his West Los Angeles home. He said a number of people entered the house during construction.

Items reported missing included a $10,000 ring, a $5,000 pendant, and about 50 loose diamonds valued at about $6,000, police said.

Chess Master Visits Canada

MONTREAL (AP) — Soviet chess grandmaster Boris Spassky was cool, collected and overwhelming as he took on 25 challengers simultaneously at a downtown plaza.

Onlookers burst into laughter Tuesday as Spassky, in town for a recent tournament, mocked wide-eyed disbelief when competitors made moves to postpone defeat a little longer. When the dust had settled Spassky had won 22 games and drawn three.

"Some of the new breed of chess players remind me more of hockey players," Sweet said, "but not him."

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri L. Brezhnev, son of the Soviet president, was awarded the Order of the October Revolution, Moscow Radio reported, in yet another step in his meteoric career rise.

BREZHNEV

The 45-year-old son of Leonid I. Brezhnev was just recently named first deputy trade minister in an appointment never publicly announced. He is next in line to succeed Nikolai Patolichev, 70, as chief Soviet foreign trade minister.

The award, the country's second highest honor, was presented Tuesday to the junior Brezhnev for his services in the development of gas fields in Orenburg in the Soviet Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan.

Ali's Mother Wants Son To Quit

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali may be "The Greatest," but he can't claim sole rights to the title of "The Mouth," says his mother, Odessa Clay.

Mrs. Clay says Ali, the only three-time heavyweight champion, got his penchant for speech from his father, Cassius Marcellus Clay.

"He gets the talking from his father. His father talks a lot and sometimes I wonder who talks the most," she said Wednesday on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America" program.

She told interviewer David Hartman she would like her 37-year-old son to quit fighting. "He's in boxing practically all his life, since he was 12 years old and I just wish he would retire."

Alimony Payments Ordered

NEW YORK (AP) — The husband of feminist author Lois Gould has been ordered to pay his former wife $10,500 in back alimony despite his claims they were never legally married.

Supreme Court Justice Martin Stecher on Tuesday rejected Dr. Robert Gould's argument the arriage was invalid because his former wife, Elsie, was never legally divorced from her first husband.

Another 'Marvin' Trial?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has cleared the way for Rod Steiger to become the second Academy Award-winning actor involved in a "Marvin" lawsuit over property rights of an unmarried couple.

ROD STEIGER

Steiger's estranged wife, Sherry Nelson, claims an oral agreement to share property the couple made while living together before their 1973 marriage takes precedence over a later, written pre-nuptial pact.

Superior Court Judge Billy Mills on Tuesday set the trial for June 18 after granting a motion by Miss Nelson's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, to try the property rights case and a separate divorce case together.

Mitchelson represented Michelle Triola Marvin in a case that saw her win $104,000 from Oscar-winning actor Lee Marvin after the couple lived together nearly six years.

Jackson Leaves Hospital

JACKSON

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, national president of Operation PUSH, has been released from St. Joseph Hospital after a 10-day stay.

A PUSH spokesman said Jackson, who was released Tuesday, suffered from bronchitis, a peptic ulcer and exhaustion. He said Jackson's physician has ordered him to reduce his schedule.

Gas Cuts Affecting Students

MORAVIA, N.Y. (AP) — Gasoline shortages spell trouble for most people. But for the 1,060 students at Moravia Central School District, they spell vacation.

The rural Cayuga County school district's gasoline allocation was cut by 20 percent for May, prompting the school board to vote Tuesday to close schools for a five-day Memorial Day vacation.

The vacation will save enough gasoline to keep the district's fleet of more than 20 buses operating until the June allocation arrives, school officials in this small community west of Syracuse say.

As Memorial Day is celebrated on May 28 or May 30 in New York State, the students will be recognizing both holidays.

Georgia Pageant Denied Tax Exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — The organization that grants scholarships to participants in the Miss Georgia Pageant has been denied a tax exemption by the U.S. Tax Court.

The Miss Georgia Scholarship Fund, Inc., had appealed to the court after the Internal Revenue Service refused to grant it tax-exempt status.

Tax exemptions are often available to organzations set up for charitable, religious or educational purposes.

The Miss Georgia Scholarship Fund is affiliated with the Miss Georgia Pageant Corporation, which conducts the annual beauty contest, and the scholarship fund makes grants to the participants "to attract Georgia's most talented young ladies to participate in the Miss Georgia Pageant," according to court papers in the case.

Stay Off Grass Order Irks Tenants

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — The Rolling Green apartment complex, saying it wants to live up to its name, has told tenants to "stay the hell off the grass" — or they'll be kicked out for violating their leases and the law.

Tenants are hopping mad about the order, handed down in a letter slid under their doors this week. The letter said walking or playing on the grass violated federal and state orders, as well as their leases.

"So stay the hell off the grass, or move to one of the many 'projects' in this fair city whose owners could care less about lawn traffic," said the letter from manager George J. Burgess. "We care and will help you move."

Apartment residents say they're angry at both the order and the way it was delivered. But many say they won't fight it because they're worried about losing their federal rent assistance or being ejected as undesirable tenants.

"A lot of us are raising our children not to use language like that," one woman said. "What right do they have to send a letter like this?"

"I like the grass," another woman said. "I like to see it. But the kids don't have any other place to play."

"It's just plain ridiculous," another tenant said.

Burgess says he informs the tenants each year that the grass is off limits.

"Let's face it," the apartment manager said. "That's all Rolling Green has going for it — nice lawns. I'm going to keep it that way."

Federal and state officials say Burgess apparently went a little too far in claiming lawn users violated government orders.

"We have no regulation against grass or anything like that," said Chris Neves, a U.S. Housing and Urban Development official.

"We have nothing to do with the grass," said John Caruso of the state Department of Community Affairs.

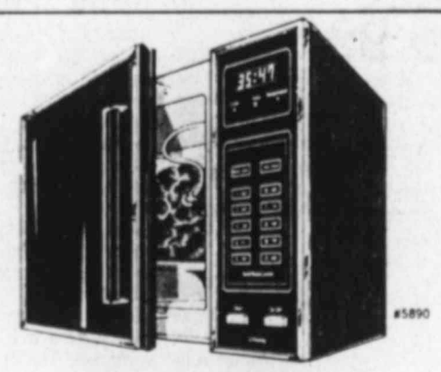

"The letter is obviously attempting to use a little clout," Caruso said. "I don't think they spoke to anyone here."

Rubber Workers Commence 'Carter's Strike' Against Uniroyal

By The Associated Press

More than 8,000 members of the United Rubber Workers union struck a dozen Uniroyal plants Wednesday in a dramatic showdown with the big tire maker over President Carter's anti-inflation wage guidelines.

The strike is against the Carter administration as much as Uniroyal Inc., as the union seeks to win a new contract that exceeds the president's voluntary seven percent annual ceiling on wage and fringe benefit increases.

"Hey, Carter, we can't live on peanuts," proclaimed one picket sign outside a Uniroyal tire plant in Detroit as 300 day-shift workers walked off the job in observance of a noon strike deadline.

Uniroyal, the nation's third largest tire company, has "pledged to uphold the guidelines," company spokesman James F. Hill said, shortly after the strike began.

Negotiations ended Tuesday, after bargainers failed to make any headway in breaking the contract deadlock, and no new talks were scheduled. Federal mediators, perhaps anticipating a long walkout, had no plans to call the parties together again this week.

Hill said Uniroyal is "prepared at any time to resume negotiations toward a settlement."

But union spokeswoman Janis Froelich said the URW will not return to the bargaining table until Uniroyal officials indicate "they want to change their position."

The administration has exerted considerable pressure on Uniroyal and other tire companies to resist wage settlements that exceed the already stretched guidelines.

Several presidential inflation advisers acknowledged privately that they were encouraged that Uniroyal was willing to take a strike rather than give in to a guidelines-busting settlement.

Union President Peter Bommarito, who has dubbed the walkout "Carter's strike," was unavailable for comment Wednesday at his headquarters in Akron, Ohio, but he said earlier that the administration was responsible for triggering the walkout.

The union contends it had reached tentative agreement with Uniroyal on new economic terms that would have broken Carter's guidelines, but the company backed out of the deal last month because of intense government pressure. Uniroyal denies that it ever had an agreement.

Government sources said the administration stepped into the dispute amid reports that Uniroyal and the union were on the verge of a settlement that would have boosted labor costs by more than 40 percent over three years. Such a settlement would have devastated the wage guidelines, said one source.

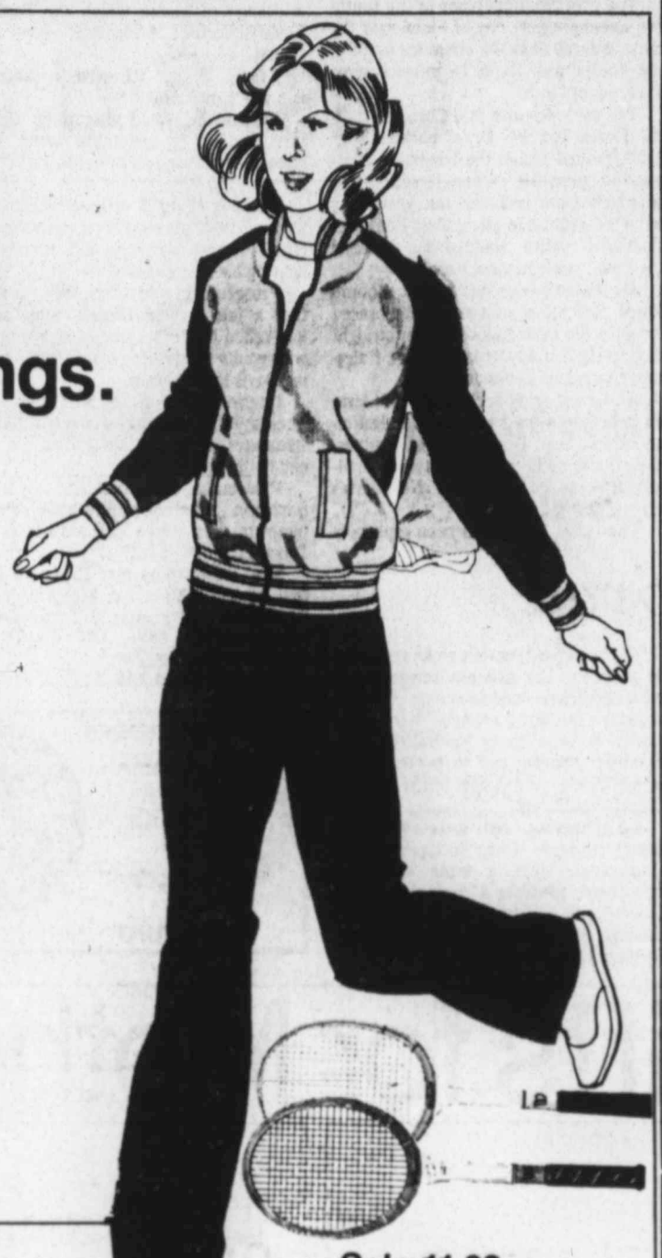

The union also is challenging Carter's guidelines on another front — in the courts. The Rubber Workers, the AFL-CIO and other unions contend in a suit pending before a federal judge in Washington that administration efforts to enforce the wage guidelins are illegal.

The suit argues that Carter lacks congressional authority to threaten to deny federal contracts to companies that violate the guidelines.

Bommarito said Uniroyal, which has $37 million worth of federal contracts, reneged on its contract agreement with the union after the government threatened to stop buying Uniroyal tires.

Israel Troops Bow To U.N. Peace Force

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops and U.N. peacekeeping forces stood toe-to-toe Wednesday in a tense five-hour confrontation in southern Lebanon before the Israelis gave up their chase of Palestinian guerrillas and withdrew across the border, a U.N. spokesman said.

An Israeli army spokesman said about 400 Israeli soldiers were involved. He said the incident began when an army patrol encountered a band of Palestinians attempting to cross the border fence west of Kiryat Shmona into Israel about 4 a.m. Wednesday.

The spokesman said one Palestinian was wounded and captured. The rest were chased across the the Israeli-Lebanese border. He said no Israelis were injured.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, one of eight guerrilla groups that make up the Palestine Liberation Organization, claimed responsibility for the attempted raid into Israel.

A front communique said 20 Israeli soldiers were killed or wounded in the clash. It said the operation was a reprisal for the "barbaric Israeli attacks against Palestinian and Lebanese citizens."

Hugo Rocha, spokesman for U.N. Mideast headquarters here, said that before the confrontation ended the 400 Israeli troops were backed by about 20 tanks, eight armored personnel carriers, four half-tracks and 37 jeeps mounted with machine guns.

The incident occurred, Rocha said, when the Israelis reached the southern Lebanse town of Shakara, where an Irish U.N. battalion refused to let the Israelis search for the terrorists.

The Israeli army spokesman did not mention the confrontation with the U.N. forces but alluded to it when he said:

"It is unthinkable that terrorists who attempt to carry out an attack against Israeli civilians that failed should escape and find shelter across the border."

Rocha said U.N. troops from Senegal, Holland and Nigeria were brought in to back the Irish. U.N. commander Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Erskine of Ghana negotiated the Israeli withdrawal. Rocha quoted Erskine as saying if the Israelis "wanted to use force to go through, it would be their responsibility."

The Israeli spokesman said questioning of the captured guerrilla determined that the band had landed at Tyre on Lebanon's Mediterranean coast and intended to attack Israeli civilians.

The provincial governor in the southern Lebanese port city of Sidon said the tanks entered Shakara, six miles north of the border and about 15 miles east of Tyre, about 7 a.m.

The governor also said Christian militia forces led by Israeli-backed Maj. Saad Haddad joined the Israelis in chasing the guerrillas. When Israeli forces withdrew from Lebanon last year, they left a six-mile strip along their border in Haddad's control. Haddad has declared the area an independent state.

Jerusalem police dismantled a bomb found near a bus stop as Israelis braced for guerrilla raids following four straight days of Israeli air strikes against Palestinian targets in Lebanon.

An Israeli army spokesmen said Israeli helicopters fired rockets at Palestinian camps near Tyre at sunset Wednesday. Local authorities said Israeli artillery also shelled the camps. No injuries were reported.

The Israeli public has been especially alert to terrorist attempts since Palestinian guerrillas raided the northern settlement of Nahariya last month. Six persons, four Israelis and two guerrillas, died in tha assault.

Israeli warplanes attacked Palestinian targets in Lebanon for four consecutive days after the raid in April, and on Tuesday flew their third straight day of reprisal missions this month.

Three Lebanese civilians were wounded in the latest sortie when the jet fighters strafed the coastal highway between the Zaharani River and Abu al Aswad, 30 miles north of the Israeli border.

Fort Worth Davis Retrial Set

FORT WORTH (AP) — The judge presiding over the retrial of millionaire Cullen Davis on murder-for-hire charges announced Wednesday he will attempt to try the case in Fort Worth starting July 9.

In doing so, State District Judge Gordon Gray refused to act on a motion for a change of venue which the Tarrant County District Attorney's office had sought.

Gray's ruling followed a hearing which began Tuesday.

He said he would attempt to seat a jury and, if a stalemate arose, the change of venue again would be considered.

Davis is charged with solicitation of murder, with prosecutors contending he tried to have someone kill the judge hearing his divorce case.

Prosecutors, claiming they cannot find a fair jury in Davis's hometown, had relied on the testimony of a woman who wants to stop the state from bringing Davis to trial again.

Interior decorator Joy Smith testified Tuesday that she has collected 76,321 signatures on a petition calling for an end to the prosecution.

Prosecutors Jack Strickland and John Bankston called Mrs. Smith in an attempt to show a bias in Davis's favor in Tarrant County.

Mrs. Smith, who met Davis for the first time at the hearing, began her pro-Davis drive shortly after his first murder solicitation trial ended last January in Houston with a hung jury.

Bankston asked Mrs. Smith if she offered to sell a pro-Davis bumper sticker to Strickland after distributing 11,000 of them for free.

"Mr. Strickland didn't buy one, did he?" Bankston asked.

"No, I don't believe he wanted to contribute to the Davis defense fund," Smith said.

Later in the hearing, defense attorneys attempted to block testimony of a public relations consultant, Pierce Allman, who worked for Davis during his 1977 capital murder trial in Amarillo.

Davis was acquitted in the slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

When cats died in ancient Egypt, they were mummified and buried with their favorite toys, food and mummified mice.

U.S.-China Charter Flights Approved

PEKING (AP) — Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said Wednesday formal talks will begin soon to clear the way for regular airline service between the United States and China. She said charter flights between the two counries can begin now.

She told reporters she had met with Shen Tu (Shen Du), head of China's civil aviation administration, and agreed that a civil aviation agreement should have high priority.

Several U.S. carriers have expressed interest in providing service to China now that diplomatic relations are restored after a 30-year break. The agreement would allow American jetliners to land in China and Chinese planes to serve America.

The secretary came here to sign or initial a trade agreement, but her efforts have been hamstrung by delicate negotiations.

There have also been problems in completing a $80.5 million claims-assets pact to reimburse America for property seized when the Communists took power, and officials stress that agreement must be signed before proceeding to the trade pact.

She said it was "unlikely" the trade pact could be initialed before she leaves Peking but possible before she leaves China, May 15.

"It's a matter of how far we can move through separate areas -business facilitation, industrial cooperation, patents, trademarks and copyrights," she said.

Asked about signing the claims-assets settlement before she leaves, the secretary said, "it looks hopeful. I personally remain hopeful we can sign the agreement."

The claims-assets agreement was initialed in February by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, but obstacles remain.

Mrs. Kreps met again Wednesday with Foreign Trade Minister Li Qiang (Li Chiang) on the trade agreement and in a five-minute press briefing before the session, Li told reporters:

"We think we have basically reached agreement on the principles, but the details remain to be discussed. We hope we can conclude an agreement tomorrow.

"...But it's hard to say. We are pressed for time. Your draft is lengthy and we are not familiar with it," he said. "Those that we sign with other countries are much shorter. We are still working on amendments."

The U.S. Trade Act of 1974 makes numerous requirements that are not part of other nations' trade agreements. A senior member of the U.S. trade negotiating team said both sides were fairly close to agreement on most-favored nation treatment for China and financial provisions.

A most-favored nation clause would give China tariff breaks as favorable as those accorded to any other American trading partner.

But he said that industrial cooperation and the protection of patents, trademarks and copyrights — all required by the United States — had not advanced far.

China has not had a patent system in 30 years and has difficulty integrating it with its socio-economic system. The negotiator also said trade talks were going slowly because many specialized U.S. business concepts had to be translated into Chinese, and some terms had no Chinese equivalent.

On Thursday, the secretary meets deputy Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping), signs a trade exhibition agreement, presents a computer to the Chinese and will be feted at a farewell banquet. She leaves Friday for Shanghai, Gweilin (Kweilin) and Canton.

DALI INDUCTED

Panel Sets N-Plant Construction Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee Wednesday approved a six-month ban on federal construction permits for nuclear power plants.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., who pushed the measure, said it would affect permits for six reactors at four sites in Arizona, Massachusetts, Oregon and Texas.

Approval came on a 23-7 vote after panel members generally agreed that the ban was largely a symbolic step to show the Congress is doing something about nuclear safety in the wake of the Three Mile Island plant accident in Pennsylvania.

A similar amendment to the 1980 budget authorization for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission failed in an Interior subcommittee on a 11-9 vote. To stand up, the ban would have to survive tests on the House floor and in the Senate and be signed into law by President Carter.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the ban probably would pass the House.

"There is no question that after the Three Mile Island situation there is a go-slow feeling in the House toward nuclear power," O'Neill told reporters. "I would be surprised if it didn't pass."

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., the committee chairman, said he was sympathetic to a ban although he opposed it. The panel has scheduled a sweeping inquiry into all aspects of nuclear energy and should make a more comprehensive decision in coming months, he said.

"Really, what were doing is symbolic in the sense we're trying to send a message to the 60,000 or 80,000 people who came to Washington last weekend" to demonstrate against nuclear power, Udall said.

Rep. Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind., said, "We'll have no effect on anyone's health or anyone's safety. If we choose up sides today we'll kiss off the credibility of the committee" and its nuclear power inquiry.

Markey said the ban would send "a clear message" that Congress is "serious about increasing nuclear safety. We are not going to investigate and debate the accident while at the same time the industry expands as if Three Mile Island never occurred."

Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., said the ban would at least alert power company investors to the danger of committing money to build more nuclear power plants.

Markey's measure would not affect the 70 power plants already in operation or 92 other plants already under construction.

Reactors Listed

Markey said his amendment would deny NRC construction approval to single reactors at the Boston Edison Pilgrim 2 plant, near Plymouth, Mass., Houston Lighting and Power's Allens Creek 1 plant near Houston; and two reactors each at Portland General Electric's Pebble Springs plant near Arlington, Ore., and Arizona Public Service's Palo Verde plant near Phoenix.

The committee action was denounced by Francis Wiedenmann, a spokesman for Boston Edison Co., which owns 59 percent of the $1.9 billion Pilgrim 2 plant.

"They're looking for votes for the next time around," Wiedenmann said. "It's silly. It would serve no purpose. A six-month moratorium would serve no purpose in terms of safety. It would simply delay construction. The vote simply means that the NRC would take a vacation."

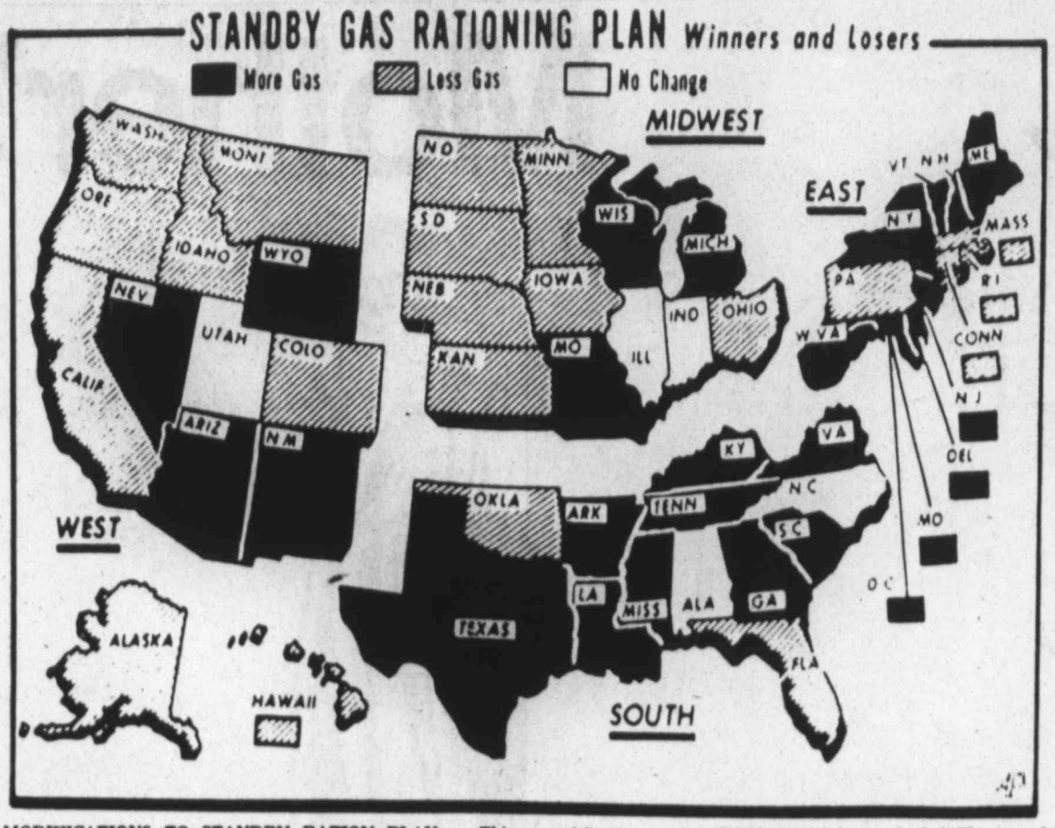

Other Changes

In a related move, the committee decided to include instructions to the NRC in its report on the legislation to consider posting inspectors at all operating nuclear plants, establish an agency emergency communications network and suggest to Congress a plan for the commission to take command in nuclear power plant emergencies.

Inspectors now are posted at only 22 operating plants.

During the Three Mile Island emergency, the NRC had no direct communications with its field staff until President Carter provided equipment used by the White House.

Nuclear power plants are private property and there is no provision in federal law dictating who has authority to issue orders in an emergency reservations and that I continue to lean against it," Baker told reporters.

U.S., Soviets Agree On Nuclear Treaty

"I really do not want to vote no on the treaty but I have serious misgivings," he said. "I have a strong feeling the treaty is likely to be amended or returned for further negotiations."

Asked why Carter himself was not making the announcement, Powell noted that Vance had been the chief treaty negotiator. "Everyone thought he ought to have the honor of making the announcement," the press secretary said of Vance.

Powell said Carter will have ample opportunity to discuss the subject in the future.

The president had predicted completion of a treaty outline back in October 1977. The final round of negotiations proved difficult, however, as the two sides jockeyed for terms suitable to their defense needs as well as arms-control objectives.

Toward the end, there was painstaking delay as U.S. and Soviet negotiators worked on final details surrounding tests of missiles carrying multiple warheads and definition of new missiles.

The strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) sets a ceiling of 2,250 on the combination of strategic bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles each of the superpowers can have through 1985.

Soviets To Cut Back

The Soviets, having about 2,500 launchers now, will be required to cut back. The United States is about 100 under the maximum and, therefore, has the right to build up to that limit.

Besides slowing the proliferation of destructive weapons, the treaty aims at some qualitative improvements in these systems. For instance, it would not bar the superpowers from improving existing missile guidance systems.

The final text will be put together over the next two or three weeks by U.S. and Soviet SALT delegations in Geneva, Switzerland.

The summit is projected for mid-June. The sites under consideration are Helsinki, Finland; Stockholm, Sweden; Geneva and Vienna, Austria.

Additional Discussion

Once Carter and Brezhnev get together, they will discuss a number of measures to improve U.S.-Soviet relations in addition to the SALT II treaty. These are likely to include pledges not to interfere in each other's satellite surveillance systems and ways of cutting back NATO and Warsaw Pact foot soldiers and tanks in Central Europe to lessen tensions there.

Because of Brezhnev's health problems, the Russians are promoting Helsinki as the site for the summit. Brezhnev could travel there by train. But there is a feeling in the Carter administration that Finland is too close to the Soviet Union in a political sense to be considered strictly neutral.

Under terms of the treaty, each side will be permitted to install one new missile system. Also, they would be able to make changes in existing systems by altering key dimensions by no more than 5 percent.

Missile Warheads

In a briefing for reporters, U.S. officials who worked on the treaty said one of the last points settled was that if the United States put more than three warheads on Minutemen missiles that would count as the one new missile system allowed under the treaty.

The administration may decide to deploy the MX mobile missile as its permissible new weapons system.

The treaty requires ratification by the Senate — a minimum of two-thirds of the senators voting, or 67 if all 100 vote.

Auto Tax Future Still Hazy

West added.

West said he hoped the city could "do without" the revenues from the car taxes rather than attempting to find another source of revenue.

Before seeing next year's proposed budget, West said he didn't want to comment on the possible effects the loss of revenue would have on city services.

However, he conceded there is "no question it will make some differences in city operations if these things come to pass."

"Any time we can eliminate any tax without severely hampering the city's operations, we should," he said, adding he's "not thinking at all in terms of replacing the auto tax with another form of taxation."

Councilmen Bud Aderton and Bill McAlister said they'd like the legislature to allow the city to collect more sales tax, which McAlister called the "fairest tax there is to offset the loss of revenue."

Without that option, Aderton said he'd "have to do some more thinking" about exempting personal cars from taxation since "my thought has always been replacing it with the sales tax."

"The state is going to have to give us some help one way or another," Aderton said.

Aderton and McAlister agreed the property tax on automobiles is an "unfair" and unpopular tax.

McAlister said some taxpayers feel they are "being taxed twice" and said most citizens he'd talked to would prefer paying more taxes on other property if the automobile tax can be abolished.

Aderton said exempting only personal cars from taxation would amount to "a form of discrimination" against those who must pay taxes on vehicles used for commercial purposes.

"I would be in favor of taking it (the tax) off," Mayor Pro Tem Alan Henry said. However, he refused to say what other funds could be used to replace the lost revenue. "It's impossible to predict how it will affect the budget," he said. "I can't make any predictions at this point."

The Senate version of the tax relief legislation differs from the House bill, so likely will end up in a House-Senate conference committee for resolution of the differences.

Lubbock state Rep. Froy Salinas already has announced his intention to fight making the auto tax exemption optional rather than mandatory.

Texas Solons Back Plans For Gasohol

he expects no trouble with either measure.

"That manufacture bill has got to go for gasohol to have any real effect here, because importing alcohol would be too expensive," he said. "But I think the senators realize that, and now that the changes have been made, I don't foresee any real problems."

Everyone connected with the loan bill was optimistic on its chances.

"We expect very little trouble, if any, in getting the bill to the governor," said Del Williams, a spokesman in Sen. Raul Longoria's office. Longoria, who is carrying the House Bills through the Senate, represents Santa Rosa, the site of the proposed Midwest Solvents plant.

More Charges Filed Against Bianchi

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kenneth A. Bianchi, already accused of murdering two women college students in Washington state, was charged Wednesday with five of the 13 Hillside Strangler killings.

The Hillside slayings occurred in the Los Angeles area between September 1977 and February 1978.

Bianchi, 27, was charged with strangling Yolanda Washington, Kristina Weckler, Jane Evelyn King, Kimberly Diane Martin and Cindy Hudspeth. He was also charged with one count of sodomy involving Miss Weckler and one count of conspiracy to commit murder, kidnapping and rape.

District Attorney John Van de Kamp said he has not decided whether to seek the death penalty in the case.

Bianchi is in jail in Bellingham, Wash., where he has been charged with murder in the strangulation of two women. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. No trial date has been set.

"We are desirous of bringing him down here as soon as possible for arraignment," Van de Kamp told a courthouse news conference. "We would like to get this prosecution going as soon as possible."

Police Chief Daryl Gates had announced on April 23 that police were seeking charges against Bianchi in 10 of the Strangler deaths.

Electric Rate Bill Advances

the legislation.

Jones blamed the determined effort to add what he called "do-nothing" and "innocuous" amendments on "lobbyist Brown," referring to Dick Brown of the Texas Municipal League, which as oposed the legislation.

Under legislative rules, a bill that's amended after being approved by one house must be sent back for concurrence in the amendments of appointment of a conference committee to reach a compromise.

Sen. John Traeger of Sequin finally was successful in winning a close vote to amend the bill to require utilities to mail written notice to ratepayers of their intent to ask PUC for rate increases.

Filibuster Erupts

Adoption of that amendment launched Jones into a 45-minute filibuster against his own bill, while utility company lobbyists reportedly worked the Senate trying to pressure one of the senators who voted with Traeger to change his mind and move to reconsider.

"It was a rather pathetic sight to see Jones filibustering against his own bill so that the utility lobbysists could twist arms in the back room," said Theo Brown of Common Cause, the citizens' lobby.

Brown applauded Traeger's amendment and credited those senators "who refused to bow under this type of pressures".

Meanwhile in the House, co-sponsor Lynn Nabers of Brownwood said he was confident House members would concur in the amendment.

As the bill now stands, it transfers original jurisdiction for ratemaking from city councils to the PUC and offers in return what Jones called "safeguards".

Cities are granted the right to intervene in all rate increase hearings and are guaranteed reimbursement for their legal expenses.

They are also allowed to hold public hearings on rate requests, and will maintain jurisdiction over quality of service.

As a result of an amendment added on the floor of the House, the PUC also will have to hold a hearing when considering rate increases.

Short's vote against the bill came despite "considerable concern" over extensive federal reporting requirements that will be required of all cities exercising rate making authority.

According to Short, regulations currently being prepared by the Department of Energy could cost 67 cities in Southwest Public Service's service area more than half a milion dollar to comply with.

Senate Sets Terms, Okays Gas Rationing

number of registered vehicles in a household.

The rationing plan is intended only as a standby program, one that would be kept on the shelf until needed in a crisis. And once Carter invoked such a plan, Congress would have 15 days in which either chamber could veto it.

"In the absence of contingency plans, including rationing, we would not be able to deal with the crisis except in anarchy," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, told colleagues.

Negotiations Furious

Earlier Wednesday, Jackson and other Senate leaders were still several votes short, touching off a furious round of negotiations between the White House and key senators

In a last-minute compromise that brought many Senate Republicans into Carter's camp, the Senate unanimously approved — and Carter generally agreed to abide by — a resolution stating that:

—Gasoline rationing would only be used when there is a 20 percent loss in U.S. oil supplies for at least 30 days.

—This loss of supplies would have to come from an embargo by exporting nations, oil-field sabotage, an act of war or terrorism or an "act of God that destroys substantial production."

Stevens Supports

That agreement brought the active support of Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who had previously been the plan's major opponent, enabling the measure to pass.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., told the Senate: "This plan is not to be invoked to permit temporary relief from lines at gas stations."

Carter also put in writing a promise to make additional supplies of gasoline available for growing crops or bringing them to market. He also pledged that if he invokes rationing, he would make extra supplies available to industries that produce energy.

Approval came on the third version of Carter's standby rationing plan, which would make a state's past per-vehicle gasoline consumption the prime test for distributing coupons.

"No More Plans"

"The well is dry. There are no more plans," said a White House lobbyist before the vote. "If Congress doesn't adopt this one, it is eminently clear Congress doesn't want to have anything to do with rationing." The lobbyist asked not to be identified.

Under the rationing plan, individuals would get coupons based on the number of autos or trucks in their households — for up to a limit of three vehicles.

But those living in high-consumption states would get more coupons for each vehicle than those living in low consumption states.

According to Energy Department figures, 24 states and the District of Columbia would get more coupons under the new plan than under Carter's original proposal to allocate strictly on the basis of registered vehicles.

They are: Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, South Carolina, the District of Columbia, Georgia, Virginia, Delaware, Missouri, New Mexico, Louisiana, Arizona, Tennessee, Nevada, Wisconsin, Michigan, Maine, Wyoming, West Virginia, New Hampshire, Vermont, Maryland, New York, Kentucky and New Jersey.

Five states would get the same number of ration coupons — coupons for roughly 46 gallons of gasoline a month assuming a 20 percent overall oil shortage. They are: Indiana, Alabama, Utah, Illinois, North Carolina.

Twenty-one states would receive less than this amount: Florida, Oregon, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Iowa, Ohio, Massachusetts, California, South Dakota, Connecticut, Alaska, Idaho, Nebraska, Kansas, Washington, Colorado, Pennsylvania, Hawaii, Rhode Island, Montana and North Dakota.

House Okays Liability Cut On Products

AUSTIN (AP) — House members weakened, then approved, Wednesday night a bill making it harder for consumers who have been injured by defective products to collect money damages for their injuries.

The bill advanced, 74-63, and final passage could come today. That would send the measure to the Senate, where a package of product liability bills has awaited floor action for months.

Trial lawyers in the House failed to kill the bill but tacked on several amendments softening its provisions, including one that would automatically repeal it on Sept. 1, 1981.

In 1981, the Legislature could extend the bill's life if it were found useful in cutting businessmen's rates for product liability insurance.

As approved by the House, the bill would reduce the damages an injured consumer receives by the percentage by which his own negligence caused the accident in which he was hurt.

If a jury, therefore, found a person suffered damages totaling $1 million but was 60 percent at fault, he or she would receive only $400,000.

The original bill would have prohibited any recovery if the consumer and the manufacturer were equally at fault, but the House removed that provision 74-67.

Sponsor Nips Rumors About School Plan courses on the secondary level.

Whitten said he doesn't know the basis for the amended times that were given to him. But he acknowledged that the percentages for the district possibly were misinterpreted to apply to the amounts of certain types of courses students could take.

The percentages as set down in the bill are as follows:

— Grades K-3 — 95 percent of the courses offered by a district must be in basic skills and 0 percent must be in work skills.

— Grades 4-6 — 90 percent in basic and five percent in work.

— Grades 7-8 — 85 percent in basic and 10 percent in work.

— Grades 9-12 — 60 percent in basic and 20 percent in work.

According to the Senate Education Committee clerk, Rep. Delco's bill was a "comprehensive approach" to organizing curriculum requirements in Texas public schools. She said the percentages in the bill would add "new language"to the Texas Education Code.

tioning plan. I'm not sure how to approach that. And it's not in our jurisdiction," he said. "That's Mr. Carter's problem, and I'm glad to leave it in his hands."

The governor has authority to allocate limited supplies of fuel to areas with scarce supplies.

Gas shortages in Texas have been spotty so far, Clements said, and caused mainly by decreases of between 15 percent to 30 percent in retail supplies.

"Some of the shortages have been brought about by changes in traffic patterns, but most of it is because of decreased supplies to retailers," he said.

Clements said his staff is not working on a deadline and has not formulated the plan's details.

Edward O. Vetter, the governor's chief energy adviser, heads the group studying the proposal. Other members of the governor's energy office and energy advisory council are involved, Clements added.

"It's not a simple problem," he said. "We're considering everything. We're going to try to solve the problem."

In addition to the odd-even days for gas sales, Clements said he was considering allowing service stations to remain open only half a day on weekends.

Bomb Threat Hits N-Plant

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Surry nuclear power plant was partially evacuated Wednesday night after a bomb threat was received, officials said. All workers returned to the plant after no bomb was found.

The threat was received as federal officials tried to determine whether an attempt to damage fuel elements at the Virginia Electric & Power Co. plant was an act of sabotage or vandalism.

James Surrat of the state Office of Emergency and Energy Services said an anonymous caller told a telephone company operator there was a bomb in the nuclear plant at 7:54 p.m.

C.M. Stallings Jr., Vepco vice president, said the caller, a man, told the operator, "There's a bomb at Surry." The operator called the county sheriff's department, he said.

He said Vepco personnel searched the plant for a bomb but found nothing. The plant was not in operation when the threat was received.

Frank Ingram, an Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman, said there was a "precautionary evacuation," meaning all but essential personnel were evacuated. He said they returned about an hour later.

The NRC is using sabotage to describe the dumping of a caustic crystalline substance into 62 unradiated uranium fuel elements.

But the FBI shied away from the word.

"It might have been a disgruntled employee, an act of vandalism or a variety of other things," said William C. Ervin, assistant agent-in-charge in Richmond.

Vepco officials said the incident could be the first documented case of attempted sabotage at a nuclear generating plant in this country.

Attack On Fine Arts Denied

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, said Tuesday she is not trying to take fine arts instruction out of public schools.

Mrs. Delco is sponsoring legislation that would repeal all existing statutory curriculum requirements and would require students to spend a certain percentage of time in basic skills courses.

"Recently, supporters of fine arts instruction in the public schools have expressed concern," Mrs. Delco said in a prepared statement. "While effectively pointing out the need to consider fine arts as a basic educational need of our children, these expressions indicate a misunderstanding of the bill."

The House passed her bill May 1 but it is now stalled in the Senate Education Committee with no hearings scheduled.

The sponsor said she would offer an amendment for Senate consideration that would include fine arts among the list of basic skills courses a school district must offer.

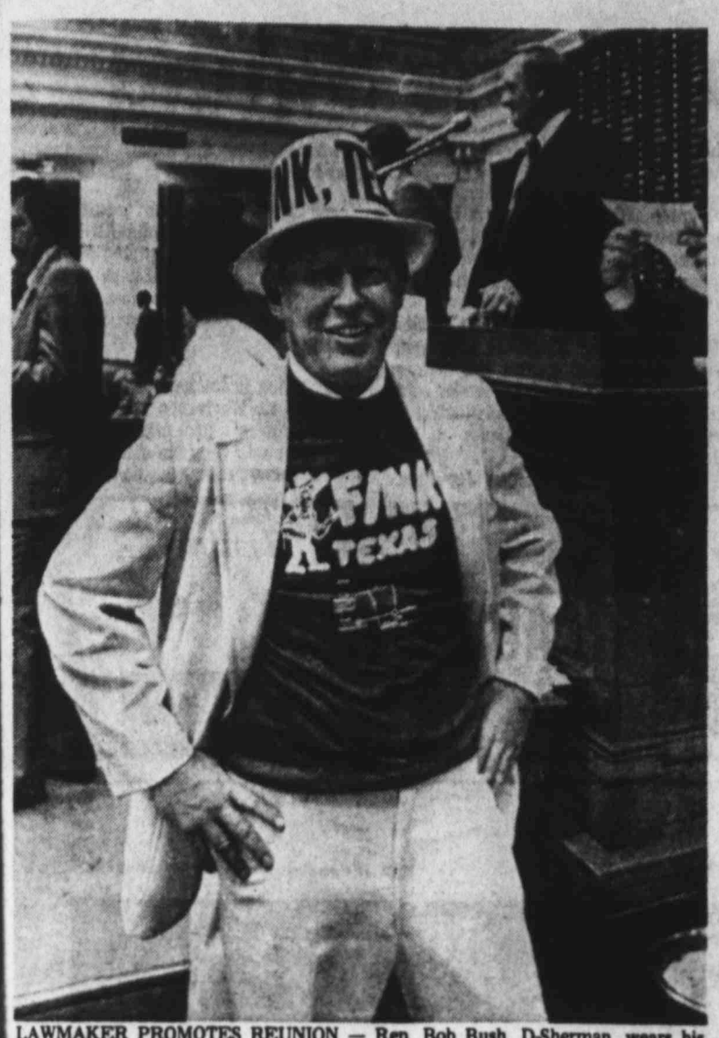

The measure is aimed at making school districts teach the 3 R's in a more organized way, said Mrs. Delco's research assistant B.J. Landers.

"Kids are managing to get out of schools without being able to read past the fifth grade level because they take so many electives," the aide said.

The bill says, "Each public school with a district shall offer the following basic skills courses: reading, language arts, mathematics, social studies, science, health and physical education."

It would require schools to offer courses within those areas as 95 percent of total instructional time from kindergarten through third grade.

State Radioactive Waste Bill Advances

AUSTIN (AP) — The House laughed off warnings of nuclear dumps near homes and schools Wednesday and voted 82-55 for a bill authorizing the state to own and control disposal sites for low-level radioactive wastes.

A final vote, expected Thursday, would return the bill to the Senate for action on changes made by the House.

Rep. Tom Martin, D-George West, the sponsor, said the federal government would take over regulation of low-level nuclear waste disposal in 1981 if Texas did not have a law authorizing state acquisition of storage sites.

The State Health Department has regulated disposal of low-energy wastes, such as those generated by hospitals and oil operations, since 1963.

Martin's district includes uranium mines and mills, which produce radioactive "tailings" that must be disposed of in a way that protects the public from radiation.

His bill authorizes the health department to acquire nuclear waste storage sites and operate them itself or lease them to private firms operating under department supervision.

Businesses and other entities licensed to store nuclear materials would pay fees into a Radiation and Perpetual Care Fund for maintaining the storage sites after they are decommissioned.

An amendment to the bill prohibits Texas storage sites from accepting radioactive materials from other states.

Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, sought unsuccessfully to table the bill and to restrict nuclear activities by amendments, then urged the House to kill it.

"Do you want them (the health department) to tell you that you are going to have a radioactive dump in your district, near your house, near your schools?" Mrs. Denton said.

A number of representatives laughed and shouted, "No! No!"

She maintained that the bill lacked a definition of low-level waste, prescribed no environmental limitations on location of disposal sites and offered no chance for the public to participate in site selection.

Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, also urged defeat.

"I want a signal to President Carter that we are concerned in this state about sending (high-level) radioactive materials into this state. His decision (on a federally operated disposal site) will be political. If the state does nothing to signal that we don't want it in this state, it will come to this state," Waters said.

Martin said there was no way the bill would invite a federal nuclear dump — "It does the opposite."

As to health hazards, he said the health department's track record for regulating nuclear materials was better than the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission's.

He blamed the NRC for the use of uranium mill tailings to mix concrete that went into building foundations in Grand Junction, Colo.

Demonstration Planned By Nuclear Plant Foes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Mobilization for Survival will demonstrate June 2 in Matagorda County against the operation of any nuclear plants or the disposal of radioactive nuclear wastes within Texas.

"This demonstration is an expression of our demands that the South Texas Nuclear Project and all other nuclear facilities, both power plants and weapons factories, be shut down immediately or converted to safe, productive causes," Todd Samusson, a spokesman for the organization, told a news conference Wednesday.

He said a similar demonstration will be held the same day at the Comanche Peak nuclear construction site near Glen Rose.

The news conference was held shortly after the Texas House approved a bill authorizing state ownership of low-level nuclear waste disposal sites.

Samusson and Gail Vittori said the Texas demonstrations are a part of the International Days of Protest June 2-4.

Samusson said the demonstation at the South Texas Nuclear Project in Matagorda County would be at the front gates on Saturday afternoon. He said demonstrators are coming from Austin, Houston, San Antonio, Nacogdoches and Matagorda county.

"We are currently training over 50 rally monitors to assist with the parking and to assure a peaceful demonstration," he said. Preliminary talks have already been held with the Department of Public Safety, the Matagorda County sheriff and Houston Lighting & Power Co., one of the builders.

"These people have indicated their willingness to cooperate with with our legal rally," Samusson said.

The demonstration at the Comanche Peak nuclear construction site near Glen Rose will be held by the Armadillo Coalition of North Texas, he said.

The word "sideburns" originated with Civil War Gen. Ambrose Burnside, who is reputed to have had an admirable set of mutton-chop whiskers.

Senators Approve 'Bill Of The Week'

AUSTIN (AP) — "The money lenders bill of the week" was the tag applied Wednesday to a proposal approved by the Senate, 25-6.

The measure would lower the penalties for illegal charges on long-term mortgage loans.

"It's a puzzle to me who needs this bill," said Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado.

Patman stalled the bill for nearly four hours Tuesday before the Senate tentatively approved it, 20-4.

He also spent 30 minutes on an amendment Wednesday but gave up after it was clear he had not persuaded anyone to switch votes.

Sen. Ray Farabee, the Senate sponsor of the bill, said the bill was designed to protect lenders who make an error in calculating interest rates from being held liable for huge court damages.

Under current law, lenders who charge more than the legal rate of interest can be penalized by twice the amount of interest contracted for on a loan.

Farabee's bill would penalize usurious lenders three times the amount of interest that exceeds the legal rate.

Patman said the difference is considerable. For example, on a usurious 12 percent loan of $50,000 for 30 years, a lender could be forced to pay $270,000. Under Farabee's proposal, Patman said, the maximum liability would be $81,000.

The Senate amended the bill to provide a minimum penalty of $2,000 or 20 percent of the principal, whichever is lower.

Patman's amendment to make the new provisions apply only to loans of 10 years or longer was rejected, 25-6.

He said current law "works, works well" in that the penalties are severe enough that "lawyers are careful about advising their clients how much interest they can charge."

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the bill is needed "because there has been a lot of confusion about the law" regarding points and late charges on loans.

He said $100 errors had resulted in $50,000 court judgments against lenders but offered no specific example.

"It's part of a grand ol' package — one wheel of the Juggernaut," replied Patman.

"Let's not continually weaken the position of borrowers when there's no need," he said.

House Passes Interest Hike

AUSTIN (AP) — With no oratory and little debate, the House finally passed, late Wednesday, a bill that would raise legal interest rates on home loans from 10 to a top of 12 percent.

The vote of 78-47, with 15 voting "present," sent the controversial bill to the Senate.

The bill won preliminary approval Tuesday by the same 78-47 vote.

One final effort was made to amend the measure before final passage.

Rep. Albert Price, D-Beaumont, proposed that no penalties be allowed for early prepayment of a loan. The bill already contains a provision for no prepayment penalties for loans of 10 percent interest or more.

House members at first refused to table Price's amendment, then voted it down by 81-50, far short of the two-thirds needed for amendment on final passage.

The bill, by Rep. Jerry Donaldson, D-Gatesville, provides for a "floating" interest maximum. Lenders would be permitted to charge two percentage points above the average monthly rate for 10-year U.S. Treasury notes but no more than 12 percent. Donaldson at first proposed three percentage points.

The House also added a "Sunset" provision that says new interest maximum automatically will expire on Sept. 1, 1981, unless the 1981 Legislature extends it.

Texas Gasoline Plan Pledged By Governor

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday that Texas will have a "contingency plan" within two weeks to ease gasoline shortages if situations similar to California's develop in Texas.

"It is not a standby rationing plan as such," said Jon Ford, Clements' spress secretary. "That is a federal thing with coupons and limits on how much gasoline you can buy in a week. This is not being considered here."

The governor's office said Edward O. Vetter, Clements's chief of energy matters, was working on "a contingency response plan to distribution problems, such as overloads at service stations."

Ford said this plan might include such procedures as setting aside separate days for selling gas to automobiles with odd and even number license plates or for special hours for gasoline sales.

"Any practical approach to easing the use of gasoline if a shortage develops," Ford said. "So far no specifics have been worked out."

Prominent Jew Executed By Iran Firing Squad

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A prominent Iranian Jew and seven Moslems, including a wealthy industrialist, were cut down by revolutionary firing squads Wednesday.

Iran's Jewish community was shaken by the execution of Habib Elghanian, a 69-year-old entrepreneur and former head of the Tehran Jewish Central Committee.

Radio Tehran, which announced the latest executions, said he was charged with "contact with Israel and Zionism." The eight executions Wednesday and 21 on Monday brought the total to 199 since the monarchy fell in February.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli government condemned the execution of Elghanian as a "serious violation of human rights."

"The state of Israel condemns this spilling of blood and turns to every state which supports the existence of human rights to condemn this act..." a government communique said.

Speaking earlier in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Elghanian "was a good Zionist and one who helped Israel."

An estimated 10,000 Jews have left Iran since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's regime. Before the revolution there were about 75,000 to 80,000 Jews in the country, many with roots going back centuries.

"We are very frightened," said one Jewish shopkeeper, who refused to be named. "You're not going to get me involved."

A Tehran rabbi, who asked not to be identified, said, "We hope this (Elghanian's death) is an isolated case."

The rabbi said he knew of no other "prominent" Jew presently in custody of Islamic revolutionary authorities. The regime has arrested more than 7,000 former officials and collaborators of the shah. They are being held in prisons in Tehran and in key provincial centers.

Israel Radio, however, said Wednesday that 100 other Jews were in Iranian jails.

Other members of the Jewish community said Elghanian was apparently picked out because "he was very rich and someone had a personal grudge against him. They said they believed "this was not going to be the beginning of trouble for our community."

Khomeini, despite his anti-Zionism, has repeatedly pledged religious freedom for Jews and other Iranian minorities.

After the Islamic revolution, a Jewish group called the "Society of Intellectual Jews" suddenly emerged and announced its support for the revolt in an apparent attempt to head off anti-Jewish sentiment.

Several days after Ayatollah Mortez Motahari, a close Khomeini colleague, was assassinatated earlier this month the group held a memorial service at a Tehran synagogue. The officiating rabbi repeated the Jews' allegiance to theIranian Islamic Republic.

The wealthy Moslem industrialist shot Wednesday was Rahim Ali Khorram, a millionaire who established the huge Khorram amusement park outside Tehran. The official Pars news agency said he owned casinos. Islam opposes gambling.

According to the newspaper Kayhan, witnesses at Khorram's trial accused him of throwing a poor man into a lion's cage. They said the man died after the lion had chewed on him for 3½ hours.

Wronged Woman To Resume Vigil

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — An attorney for Madeline Messer, jailed for refusing to end her 13-year vigil outside the home of a former lover, says the 61-year-old woman will resume her activities now that she is out on bail.

"She told me that once she's out of jail, she's going right back," attorney Hale W. Brown said Tuesday shortly after Mrs. Messer was released on $500 bond.

"She just drives by and parks about halfway down the street and stares at his house. She's not committing a crime. It's his conscience that's bothering him."

Clemm J. Hartmann said Mrs. Messer has appeared outside his home almost daily since their brief affair ended 13 years ago. Hartmann obtained a court order last year prohibiting the woman from "being at or near his home."

Mrs. Messer ignored the order and was sentenced last Friday to 90 days in jail for contempt of court. She began serving the sentence Monday, but Brown filed an appeal and she was released on bond.

"It's her right to use the public streets as long as she doesn't annoy him by going on his grass or beating on his door," Brown said. "They had a love affair 13 years ago and he got rid of her. She was married at the time and took it quite seriously."

Brown said the affair caused Mrs. Messer to get a divorce and she later became emotionally disturbed. She is now living with her former husband.

Council To Consider Bond Sales For Reservoir, Pump Station

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock City Council members will consider setting a marketing schedule for $8.82 million in general obligation bonds when they meet Thursday.

City Manager Larry Cunningham has suggested the bonds be sold on Aug. 21 to allow completion of a Southwest Lubbock reservoir and pump station in June, 1980.

Under the plan, bids would be taken for the reservoir in early August prior to the bond sale, with the contract scheduled to be awarded on Sept. 4.

It is unclear what effect a lawsuit filed against the city Monday by City Hall critics James G. Marshall and Robert Lee Isom Jr. will have on the bond sale.

Marshall and Isom unsuccessfully challenged the city's legal efforts last year to validate $9.5 million in bonds and now are attempting to have that validation set aside.

Also at the 9:30 a.m. meeting in council chambers, council members are scheduled to discuss a state highway department offer to install signals and gates at a railroad crossing at East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue.

Under a proposed agreement with the highway department, the city would pay only about $3,200 of the total $65,000 cost of installing the gates and signals.

However, area residents told city officials at a Tuesday night meeting they don't want the signals and gates. Instead, they want a grade separation (overpass or underpass) crossing and they want Quirt Avenue straightened.

City officials have favored an at-grade crossing because it is the least expensive option, but railroad companies which own land adjacent to the tracks have strongly resisted that idea.

Council members also will discuss contracting with the Chamber of Commerce to operate the Convention and Tourism Bureau — now a joint venture — so the city's money and efforts can go towards promotion of city facilities.

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan and Councilman Bill McAlister, who formed a committee to discuss the idea with chamber officials, estimate the city could save about $30,000 a year under such an arrangement.

At noon the council will meet with auditors from the Mason, Nickels and Warner accounting firm to discuss the annual "management letter" on improvements the city can make in accounting procedures.

Council members also will discuss permitting zoning and building inspectors to seek search warrants from Municipal Court to inspect sealed buildings or those where owners refuse to allow inspection of their properties.

To obtain such a warrant, inspectors would have to prove there is probable cause that additional violations of city codes would be discovered with an interior inspection.

The Transit Advisory Board will ask the council for a $5,645 budget supplement to continue a route begun on an experimental basis between the South Plains Mall and Monterey High School by way of 82nd Street.

The route met only 40 percent of its ridership goal and 36 percent of its revenue goal during its 90-day trial period.

However, transit board members decided the route should be given more time to develop ridership and voted 4-2 to ask the council for special funding to maintain the route until September.

Council members will consider applying for grants to operate a senior volunteer center for nine months beginning June 1 ($15,837) and to fund a summer food service program for children operated by the Parks and Recreation Department ($40,072).

Monterey Band Slates Pops Concert Tonight

Monterey High School's Plainsmen Band will present its 10th annual Spring Pops Spectacular today at 7 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Special guests will be residents of the Lubbock State School and area childrens' homes.

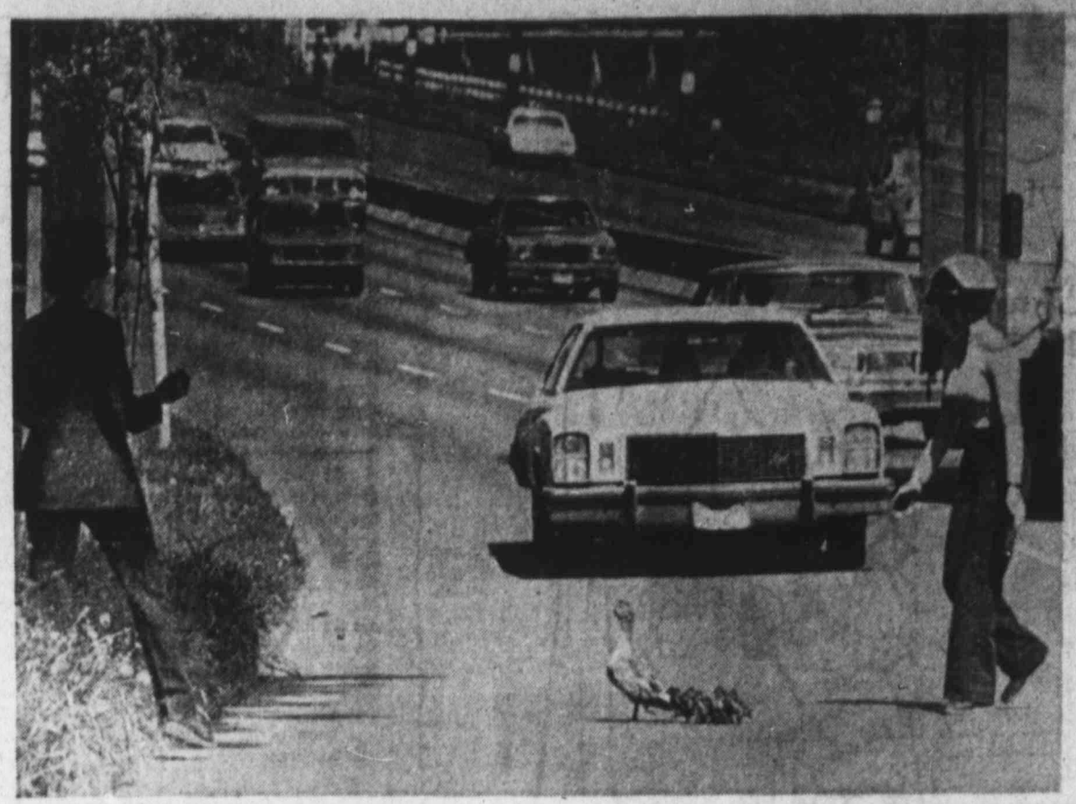

State School resident Gayle Herrington will take the baton at one point on the program to lead the honors band in the "Home Town Boy March."

The band's Dixieland combo will be featured on a special arrangement of "The Sheik of Araby." The Jazz Ensemble, which toured Hawaii during the Christmas season, will play Neal Finn's arrangement of "Nerkmobile," "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue" and "I Doubt It."

Four Scottish dances will be played, as well as "Caccia and Chorale," a selection of Richard Rogers hits, "Fantasia on Dixie" and the sounds of the Captain and Tenile.

The program will include Monterey's three concert bands and two jazz ensembles. The group recently won its 10th consecutive Sweepstakes award in University Interscholastic League competition and has just finished a trip to the Buccaneer Days Festival in Corpus Christi, where it won a first division rating.

Admission to the pops concert is $1.50 for adults and $1 for students. Band directors are Keith Bearden and Mack Bibb. They are assisted by Texas Tech student teachers Jimmy Edwards and Daid Lewis.

Panel To Explain Aid For Handicapped Kids

Texas Education Agency representatives will present the proposed 1980 program plan for serving handicapped children in the public schools during a public hearing from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The hearing is one of 10 the agency will sponsor across the state through May 18.

The first draft of the proposed plan will be outlined for citizen review and comment before a final draft is presented to the State Board of Education for approval.

The final draft will be presented July 14 in Austin. If the board aqproves the final draft, the revised plan will be forwarded to the U.S. Office of Education for review and funding, said Don Partridge, TEA associate commissioner for special education.

The proposed program plan focuses on the identification of all handicapped children, assessment of their educational needs, development of individual educational plans based on those needs and providing these children with a free and appropriate public school education.

Texas is expected to receive approximately $50 million in federal funds to help support special education during fiscal year 1980. Federal support for programs serving handicapped children in the public schools totals $38.8 million this year.

State support for special education is expected to total $250 million by the end of the 1978-79 school year, Partridge said.

Copies of the proposed 1980 plan are available for public revjew at each of the state's 20 regional education service centers and at the Texas Education Agency, 201 E. 11th St. in Austin. The Education Service Center for Region 17, which includes Lubbock, is in room 700 of the Texas Commerce Bank Building, 14th Street and Avenue K.

Written comments received by June 20 will be included in the revised draft to be presented to the State Board of Education. However, public comments will be accepted until July 14, Partridge said.

Mother Seeks Aid In Search For Dog

A Lubbock mother is asking residents to be on the lookout for a black, female cocker spaniel which bit her 3-year-old daughter on the face this morning.

The animal, wearing a white flea collar, was last seen in the vicinity of 73rd Street and Slide Road. The child's mother is seeking the dog to have it tested for rabies.

Persons having knowledge of a dog matching this description are asked to call the Lubbock Police Department at 762-6411.

Alamo Skull Linked To 1836 Siege

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A skull found at the Alamo during recent excavations apparently was that of a casualty from the 1836 Texas Revolution battle, University of Texas at San Antonio archaeologists said Wednesday.

After reconstructing the broken portions of the skull, the archaeologists said they found a cut indicating an injury inflicted by a sword or similar weapon.

The wound is believed to have contributed to or was the cause of death," said Anne Fox, historical archaeologist with the UTSA Center for Archaeological Research.

A small band of about 185 Texans was wiped out March 6, 1836 by more than 6,000 Mexican troops under Santa Anna in a crucial battle of the Texas Revolution. The battle followed a 13-day siege.

Miss Fox said there is no way to determine if the skull was that of a Texan or a Mexican soldier. After the battle, Santa Anna ordered the bodies of the Texas soldiers burned.

The skull was discovered under some stones along a north wall of the downtown mission-fortress. After fitting together the broken pieces, the team of archaeologists found it was an almost complete skull from a man about 20 years old.

By studying the related artifacts found in the vicinity, they were able to determine that the skull "quite likely" was that of a victim of the battle. Musket balls and a gun lock were found nearby, she said.

The archaeologists also found evidence of a fortification trench near the north wall, where a new fence is being built. Until this discovery, there was no record that such a trench was built at the Alamo.

"This was a popular form of fotification at that time and it originated in Europe," said Ms. Fox. "The men simply dug a trench near a wall and piled dirt beside it. This enabled them to stand on the mound of dirt to shoot over the wall and also delayed anyone who scaled the wall to enter the fort."

Although the jaw and facial portions of the skull and the other skeletal remains were not found, Ms. Fox believes they are buried somewhere along the trench.

"The top of the skull breaks away easily once the body has deteriorated. It could easily have been swept away when the trench was being filled," she said.

Genealogical Society To Show Methods

Mary Orr, member of the South Plains Genealogical Society, will be guest speaker for the organization's regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Municipal Garden and Arts Center at 4215 University Ave.

Mrs. Orr, who has been involved in family history research for about five years, will tell how she has used correspondence, telephone calls, newspaper searches, personal visits, and other methods to trace family lines from America back to Europe.

Before the meeting, from 6:30 p.m. to 7:15 p.m., a brief session for beginning researchers in genealogy will be conducted by Mrs. Eugenia Toland, former president of the society and an experienced instructor in family history research.

Dr. John Anderson, president of the group, said the instructional session was scheduled because of the interest in genealogy shown by the more than 300 persons stopping to register at the society's booth at the recent Lubbock Arts Festival.

The meeting and pre-meeting session are open to all interested persons.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Readers: If you are not sexually active, skip this column. It will not interest you. If such is not the case, I urge you to read it.

The letter is from Samuel R. Knox, National Program Director of the American Social Health Association:

Dear Ann Landers: As in the past, I am writing to keep you informed on sexually transmissible diseases. As you know, genital herpes is now regarded as epidemic in this country. There are approximately five million cases of it. The number is growing rapidly because it is highly contagious and as yet we have no cure for it.

The disease is known as Herpes Type 2. It appears approximately two to ten days after exposure. Fluid-filled lesions or sores appear around the genital areas — and sometimes around the buttocks and on the thighs. The lesions may be extremely painful — accompanied by swollen lymph glands, fever, aching muscles and a "sickly" feeling.

The sores (they often resemble blisters) will eventually dry up and disappear within a week or a month, but don't let the apparent "cure" deceive you. Even though the symptoms have disappeared, the virus has not. Chances are excellent that the lesions will reappear.

Women who have Herpes Type 2 should not fail to have Pap smears regularly — twice a year. In case of pregnancy, there should be careful monitoring by a physician to minimize the risk to the unborn child.

Since there is no known cure for this viral disease, victims are left to fend for themselves in seeking relief — often turning to unproductive home remedies. In the worst cases they choose unsubstantiated, often potentially dangerous solutions. The results are costly, physically, emotionally and financially.

And now the good news. A national organization has been formed to help those who are victims of Herpes Type 2. It is called HELP. The purpose of HELP is to provide information on the latest research and other information about this disease. HELP will publish a newsletter which contains do's and don'ts for successfully coping with recurrences.

Those who wish to join should write to: HELP, Box 100, Palo Alto, Ca. 94302.

Those who want information about Herpes Type 2 should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the same address.

Thank you, Ann, for getting this vital information before the public. I apologize for pressing you but your influence in this country is enormous and we need all the visibility we can get.

— Sincerely, Samuel R. Knox, National Program Director, American Social Health Association

Dear Samuel Knox: I am pleased to alert my readers to this new organization. For years, victims of Herpes Type 2 have been struggling with the problems of ignorance, isolation, fear, shame and guilt. Now, at long last, they can band together and hopefully support research to find a cure for this hideous disease.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: When my boy was 12 (he's now 14) we noticed his left arm was somewhat shorter than his right. X-rays showed he had an old fracture in the shoulder joint. The doctor said there is nothing to be done. He is now nearly six feet tall, so the arm is more noticeable. He is active and an excellent athlete. I know there are worse things to worry about than this, but we wondered if you knew of any treatment for the arm so that it will grow out. — Mrs. O.W.

At 14 there are growth years left. Just how many are left can be determined by a study of the bone end plate (the epiphysis). If it has been sealed off or otherwise disturbed by the old injury, growth stops and will not resume. If the injury did not interfere with blood supply and if the epiphysis remains open, then future growth will occur. The condition of the bone ends can be determined by an orthopedic (bone) doctor.

I know of no treatment to alter the situation in any case.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: A weight-loss clinic recently moved into my town. It operates by giving daily injections of HCG, which is a hormone. There is also a stringent low-calorie diet. Is HCG safe? I have signed up but haven't started the program yet. I am 24, and in good health except for 60 excess pounds. I know several people who have been helped by this program, but I want the straight information on it. — T.G.

Forget this program.

HCG (human chorionic gonadotropin) is a hormone derived from the urine of pregnant women. It's harmless, but has nothing to do with whether you gain or lose weight. Such programs, usually stipulate a 500-calorie regimen (daily). Most people can lose as much weight as they want to on such spartan fare. You probably will, too, with or without the injections, if you follow the diet.

The hormone is approved by the Food and Drug Administration for certain hormone-related problems, not for weight reduction. This use of HCG began in 1954. Reputable researchers theorized that it might help eliminate abnormal fat cells, but this was not proven. To test the idea a group of people were put on a 500-calorie diet. Half got HCG shots. The rest did not. All lost weight, of course, but (you guessed it) those who did not get the shots lost as much as those who did. Need one say more?

Use the money (usually $500) for your family's needs. Better still, donate it to a worthy medical cause. Researchers are studying honest methods of helping people lose weight. If you need a sensible weight reduction program see my booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing." You shouldn't have to go into a starvation program to lose your 60 pounds. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: On occasion I have had a transient sparkling effect in my eyes. It lasts about 15 minutes. My side vision is affected during this, usually the right side. It began about three years ago. My doctor says it is migraine. But I never had headaches, although recently they have started to occur after the sparkling. Is this a matter of concern? I am 18 and in excellent health. Could this be caused by an allergy? — N.B.

Migraine headache sufferers do report such eye symptoms (aura) just prior to attacks. For some it can be a blessing of sorts, because they can forestall the headaches by taking medicine promptly. However, the possibility of retina damage should be investigated, especially if the sparkling or vision disturbance is continuous. That requires prompt treatment.

The allergy-headache connection is open to question. If you can match your attacks to use of a certain food or drink, you will have an answer. Some migraine problems can be traced to allergy.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What do you advise for a woman who wants to take an extended vacation with her family (camping) and doesn't want to be bothered with menstrual periods? — Mrs. P.T.

A birth control pill with a high progesterone content can avoid the menstruation, but I wouldn't recomend it for that purpose only. With so many convenient products that avoid menstrual unpleasantness, I doubt you need the pills. If you decide to use the pill method, check with your physician first. You will need him to prescribe them anyway.

Dr. Ruble welcomes readers mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Immunizations Required By State For Entrance To Public School

Now is the time to begin preparing for the next school year. One of the most important preparations is to see that your child has current health immunizations.

Texas state law requires immunizations for all public school students. The student's immunization record must be validated by a doctor's signature or by a clinic. Necessary immunizations are listed below:

• Diptheria-Tetanus — three doses required, with the last dose since the fourth birthday, and additional boosters every ten years.

• Oral Polio — three doses required, with the last dose since fourth birthday.

• Red Measles (Rubeola) — one dose since the first birthday or a doctor's statement of disease.

• German Measles (Rubella) — one dose of vaccine.

• Mumps — one dose of vaccine, or doctor's statement of disease, required for first grade or below.

If your child has had these immunizations, please send a record of the dates to school as soon as possible.

Lubbock City Health Department and the Lubbock Public Schools strongly encourage parents to bring immunizations up-to-date immediately. If immunizations or boosters are necessary, these may be obtained from family physicians, the Lubbock City Health Department Clinic, located at 1100 North Avenue Q, or the Well Baby Clinic at 102 Avenue J. Immunization records of any sort should be brought with you to the doctor or clinic.

Lubbock City Health Clinic times are 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Monday and Friday only. The Well Baby Clinic is open on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Thursday, from 6:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Students easily can receive immunizations now and in the early summer. Waiting until August to complete this requirement will mean waiting in lines for long periods of time. No students will be allowed to enroll in the Lubbock Public Schools next year without satisfying the state immunization law.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
How can I clean in between the white tiles on a bathroom floor?

The grouting looks gray, even black, in some places. I've tried scrubbing with a brush and cleanser but to no avail.

Any suggestions? — Mrs. R.R.

Discouraging, huh?

Well, the best way I've found to clean grout between ceramic tile is to mix household bleach with scouring powder (make sure the powder does NOT contain ammonia, though) to form a thin paste.

Apply with a toothbrush, sponge or old rag; let dry.

Then just rinse the paste off. In some cases, it may need more than one application.

Some professional tile cleaners use a fine grade of dry steel wool on completely dry ceramic tile. Just scrub the tile while completely dry without any moisture or cleaning product. The film will come off in fine dust!

Hope this lightens your load. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Use an egg poacher to heat baby's food.

Each section holds a small quantity and food can be steamed all at once. — Mrs. Amos

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
You know those cartons that bottle drinks come in? Well, my husband found a good use for them, so don't throw them away.

We put them in the cabinet, under my sink, to hold my cleaning items, such as furniture polish, sink cleanser, brushes, etc.

You can tote your little carton with you to do your cleaning and it saves a few steps or possibly trips back and forth to the kitchen (it also organizes the bottom of your cabinet).

I hope this little tip works for others, because it sure works for me! — Mrs. T. Owen

You must have a husband who helps you because he sure can think of the shortcuts. — Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:
I have several friends in nursing homes who like homemade fruit cake.

I grind the fruit to make it easier for them to eat and I bake the cake in a 9 x 15-inch pan. I then cut it in serving size slices, wrap in foil and only take one or two pieces at the time as they have no place to keep it.

I keep it in the fridge at home to keep it fresh.

Check with the nurse in charge to see if patients can have sweets before you bring some to them. Most of them can, and they love a "bit of home." — Mrs. L.R.B.

DEAR HELOISE:
From years of experience, I found that when a room is painted, the closet, for any number of reasons, is not painted.

I bought a gallon of white enamel (semi-gloss) and painted all my closets.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

There are plenty of ways to get to six notrump with the North-South cards, but the slambang method used by this pair is about as good any. Of course, they belong in six notrump played by North since a heart lead will defeat South at the slam.

However, West wasn't playing with mirrors and made his normal lead of the jack of spades.

South won in dummy, made the tatuous remark, "Partner, maybe we didn't bid enough," and led a low diamond from dummy.

East showed out and South talked again. "Partner, we did bid enough." Then he proceeded to take the slam and throw it out the window.

Without thinking at all, he played his jack of damonds. West won the trick and eventually the defense collected a heart trick.

South remarked that the odds had to be about 50 to one against the bad breaks he got, but North shut him up quickly by pointing out that bad breaks or no bad breaks, the slam had been a lay down.

At trick two, South should have risen with the ace of diamonds. At trick three, he should have led a low diamond toward dummy. West could not have afforded to take the trick and set up the diamond suit.

So South would have two diamond tricks home. Then he could come to his hand, take and lose the heart finesse and be home with three spades, two hearts, two diamonds and five clubs.

$1 Gas Price Seen Over U.S. By Winter

Motorists in most of the country will be paying $1 a gallon for premium gas by next winter — months before the Carter administration's forecast — according to service station operators and gasoline industry experts.

The White House has predicted that the $1-a-gallon price for premium, already a reality in parts of New York City, Chicago, California and Hawaii, will not spread to the rest of the nation until next spring. But many dealers and industry-watchers interviewed by The Associated Press say the dollar barrier for premium fuel will be broken in most areas before the year is out.

"To use Carter's expression, 'Baloney,'" James V. Crescente, executive director of the Northern Ohio Petroleum Retailers Association, said of the administration prediction. "Baloney" was the president's response to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's charge that Carter had bowed to the oil industry in proposing that price controls be lifted on domestic crude.

Dollar-a-gallon prices will be seen first on premium leaded gasoline and, where it is available, premium unleaded. Regular-grade unleaded will probably hit $1 a gallon in most places next spring, according to dealers, and regular leaded would trail that by several months.

Jerry Ferrara, executive director of the New Jersey Gasoline Dealers Association expects premium grades of gas to hit $1 by Labor Day in his state. "The other grades?" he added, "not $1 a gallon this year."

"In 10 or 15 weeks we'll have $1 a gallon," said Michael Klein, a spokesman for the American Automobile Association branch in Hartford, Conn. Premium leaded gasoline in Connecticut is averaging 84.9 cents a gallon and premium unleaded is averaging 87.9 cents a gallon.

In Chicago, where several gas stations have already hit the $1-a-gallon level, Robert Jacobs, executive secretary of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association expects that price to be widespread in the area by summer.

"Unquestionably by the Fourth of July the average price of unleaded premium will be $1 a gallon," he said. "You're going to see it all over."

One reason for rising gas prices is the increased price of imported oil. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has raised its basic crude oil price 14.5 percent since the beginning of the year, and surcharges have widened that increase. Many analysts expect OPEC to further boost the base price when the cartel meets in June.

Another factor is the decision by the Department of Energy to allow refiners to pass on more of their costs to gasoline customers.

President Carter's proposal to begin decontrolling prices of domestic crude oil is also expected to lead to an increase of a few pennies in the price of a gallon of gas.

In all, gasoline prices have already risen an average of more than eight cents a gallon since Jan. 1, to an average, for all grades, of about 78 cents a gallon, according to the Lundberg Letter, a newsletter that surveys prices.

Complicated Fuel Pricing Plan Proposed By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission Wednesday proposed a multi-ceiling rule on the prices industrial boilers must pay for natural gas. The action indirectly would influence household gas prices as well.

The proposal would establish, in effect, 117 specific price ceilings — three alternatives in each of 39 geographic areas — and update them every month, in relation to the local prices of fuel oil.

The commission did not predict the price levels or their impact on natural gas costs to households, but requested comment on its proposed regulation.

The complex rule stems from the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, which sought to ease the impact of rising natural gas prices on residential users by requiring industrial boilers, which pay discount rates, to pay a larger proportion of price hikes in the future.

The act limits the increases to be paid by industrial boilers, however, to a cost no higher than that of the fuel oil which they could burn as an alternative.

Alternative fuel may mean light oil or heavy oil, high-sulfur or low-sulfur oil. And the prices of each fuel vary both geographically and seasonally.

The proposed commission solution was to establish 39 geographical areas — eight general regions and 31 metropolitan areas — and to set three alternative price ceilings in each, corresponding to the local costs of light fuel oil, high-sulfur heavy oil and low-sulfur heavy oil.

These local costs would be determined by the Energy Department's Energy Information Administration, which would update them monthly.

But the commission noted that collecting, processing, and announcing these monthly updates would delay them anywhere from 45 to 60 days, a lag which could create a mismatch between the price ceilings and the seasonally changing prices actually charged at any given time.

To correct that mismatch, the commission proposed to apply statistical adjustments to the price ceilings.

The commission said its aim was to make industrial boilers pick up a larger share of rising natural gas costs, as Congress intended, without pricing their gas so high that they are prompted to abandon it entirely and switch to oil.

Recent Votes Of Area's Congresmen Recorded

By ROLL CALL REPORT

HOUSE

SHAH'S SHIPS The House rejected, 88 for and 325 against, an amendment primarily seeking to prevent the U.S. government from buying two destroyers ordered years ago by the Shah of Iran but not wanted by the new Iranian government. The amendment sought to eliminate $628 million in fiscal 1979 budget authority. Its failure may result in the Defense Department acquiring the destroyers from the Ingalls shipbuilding company at Pascagoula, Miss. The vote came during debate on the fiscal 1979 and 1980 budgets (H Con Res 107).

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, a supporter, called this a vote on priorities because symbolically it meant "we either cut the money for food stamps (or) for two destroyers, outdated, outmoded, ordered by another government than our."

Rep. Charles Dougherty, R-Pa., an opponent, said the Navy had testified that the ships "were not inadequate, that they were advanced destroyers, something that the U.S. Navy could use."

Mambers voting "nay" favored budget authority to acquire the destroyers for the U.S. Navy.

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Bill Archer, R-7, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, James Wright, D-12, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Charles Stenholm, D-17, Mickey Leland, D-18, Kent Hance, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Abraham Kazen, D-23, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "nay."

New Mexico Reps. Manuel Lujan, R-1, and Harold Runnels, D-2, did not vote.

DEFENSE BUDGET The House rejected, 188 for and 209 against, an amendment in favor of higher defense spending. The amendment sought to increase fiscal 1980 budget authority for the military by about $2.6 billion over the $135.2 billion ceiling urged by the House Budget Committee. The vote came during debate on H Con Res 107 (see vote above).

Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., the sponsor, said his amendment is necessary because "we need a sustained period of real growth if the Soviets are not to achieve overwhelming superiority."

No member spoke against the amendment. Opponents generally favored the Budget Committee ceiling of $135.2 billion or a lower figure.

URBAN v. RURAL The House voted, 212 for and 198 against, to eliminate budget authority for a program to funnel $250 million to some 1,200 cities and counties having unemployment rates of at least 6.5 per cent. Later, the House reversed itself and okayed the authority. However, both votes (occurring during debate on H Con Res 107; see above votes) were largely symbolic because legislation that would implement the "counter-cyclical aid" program appears to be permanently stuck in a committee pigeonhole.

Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, who favored eliminating the budget authority, said the program was "an effort to appease some of the urban interests" and that of the $250 million "very little, if any, would ever reach the people it was intended to help."

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., an opponent of the cut, said that "for a number of cities in this nation, including my home city of New York, these funds are essential to insure the city would not have to make dire sacrifices in services to citizens."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to the counter-cyclical aid program.

SENATE

AIRCRAFT NOISE The Senate rejected, 33 for and 57 against, an amendment to deny the Secretary of Transportation authority to waive certain deadlines for complying with federal airline-noise standards. This vote left unchanged language that allows the waivers to be granted. One effect of the vote is that commercial airlines in some instances will meet noise standards by buying new aircraft at some later date rather than by retrofitting existing craft at an earlier date. The amendment was offered to S413, later passed, which dealt with airport safety and aircraft noise levels.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a supporter, said the waivers "would allow the airlines to avoid the 1981, 1983 and 1985 deadlines for fleet-quieting currently mandated by the Federal Aviation Administration's aircraft noise regulation."

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., an opponent, said the waiver language "does not 'gut' (the noise regulations) or allow noncompliance through some contractual trickery. It seeks only to allow a rational alternative to retrofitting that portion of the fleet that can be replaced."

Senators voting "yea" were opposed to granting the waivers.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "yea."

Sen. John Tower, R, and New Mexico Sens. Pete Domenici, R, and Harrison Schmitt, R, voted "nay."

DEPT. OF EDUCATION On a vote of 72 for and 21 against, the Senate passed a bill to create a cabinet-level Department of Education. The U.S. Office of Education and a score of other education agencies and programs throughout the government would comprise the new department. The Senate bill (S 210) allows the department about 17,000 employees and an annual budget of $14.3 billion. The new department is a keystone of President Carter's government reorganization plan.

Supporters said that the consolidation of most federal education functions under a Secretary of Education will curtail bureaucracy and improve the delivery of services to the public.

Opponents said the new department would itself become a bureaucracy and would increase federal control over local and state education.

Supporters favored the new Department of Education.

Tower and Schmitt voted "nay."

OUTDOOR LIGHTS The Senate rejected, 24 for and 70 against, legislation (S Res 123) to give the President standby authority to restrict the use of electricity in advertising lighting. The Department of Energy estimates that if the authority were utilized it would save 4,400 barrels of oil daily, about .03 per cent of present petroleum consumption. The House had not yet taken up a companion resolution.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., a supporter, said: "I hope that by passing this measure we will double the emphasis to the American people as to the seriousness of the (energy) crisis, that it is not manufactured..."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said that "of all the users of energy in this country, the one industry that voluntarily has done an admirable job is the outdoor advertising industry."

Senators voting "yea" wanted the President to have the standby authority.

Bentsen, Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — The 1977 amendments to the G.I. Bill provide that the Secretary of Defense may determine whether those who served in the Women's Air Force Service Pilots or other similar groups are eligible to receive veterans benefits.

I was an Army Cadet Nurse in World War II, serving for two years. By the time I completed my nurse training, though, hostilities had ceased and I wasn't allowed to enlist in the Army Nurse Corps. I recently wrote the Department of Defense asking whether my two years can be counted toward retirement from my job with the U.S. Public Health Service. At the time, implementing regulations were being prepared and I was told I would receive a copy when it was ready. I have had no further word. I would appreciate your advice and assistance in this matter. G.J. — San Angelo

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The Department of Defense informs me that a review board has been established to assist the Secretary in determining which of the World War II women's service groups qualify for benefits. If a favorable determination is made (as it recently was for Women's Air Service Pilots of World War II), then members of that group may apply for discharge certificates by furnishing proof of their membership. The Cadet Nurse Corps, to which you belonged, has been submitted for review but no determination has yet been made. You will be advised once a decision is reached if you will write: SAP/MICP, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20330.

MESSAGE — About two years ago, my family helped in a local campaign to collect Universal Price Codes from the labels of canned goods and other products. We were told that the price codes were a form of coupons that could be redeemed at hospitals for free kidney dialysis treatment, perhaps through a federal government program. Is any such treatment-payment available at this time? If so, please send me the details. Thank you. C.M. — Weslaco

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The American Kidney Foundation advises me that these label collection drives are widespread, but are a cruel hoax. There is, however, a substantial program for dialysis treatment that is operated by the Health Care Financing Administration. Detailed information is available at local offices of the Social Security Administration.

Postal Finances Discussed In Secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the objection of its newest member, the Postal Service board of governors voted Wednesday to hold a discussion of the agency's financial future in secret.

The 6-1 vote came on whether to close to the public a discussion scheduled for next month in St. Louis.

Board member William J. Sullivan, whose appointment recently was confirmed by the Senate, said the decision went against the "Sunshine Act" passed by Congress in 1975 and which was aimed at opening meetings of governmental boards.

The Postal Service board had always met behind closed doors until that law took effect and since then has frequently taken advantage of exemptions in the law to hold discussions in secret.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger suggested the discussion be held in secret.

"We would like to talk about how to finance the Postal Service in the future," he said, adding that the discussion would take up negotiating strategy during the next negotiations with postal unions and possible increases in postal rates during coming years.

Postal Service General Counsel Louis Cox then cited legal exemptions in the Sunshine Act which he said would allow the discussion to be closed to the public.

Sullivan said he agreed that parts of the discussion should be held in private, but said he was "not comfortable" with closing a discussion of finances.

"This may be broadening the exemptions to the act too much. Financing is an issue of paramount public interest and it should take place in the sunshine," he said.

The requirements of the law for open meetings "may be a pain in the neck sometimes, but it is the law," Cox added.

Sullivan suggested starting the discussion in the open and "moving into executive session if it is getting into sensitive areas." Cox said the board could meet behind closed doors and decide to open the discussion if it appeared there would be no secrets given away, which the board decided to do.

The dissent by its new member is unusual for the Board of Governors of the Postal Service, which usually approves unanimously the requests of postal management. Pending legislation would abolish the board.

In other actions, the board:

— Approved without dissent purchase of 750 new battery-operated electric mail vehicles to add to the 383 already in the fleet. The gasless vehicles, which are recharged overnight, are used mainly in southern areas of the country.

— Voted unanimosly for a $11.8 million program to reduce heating, cooling and electrical bills in postal facilities. Energy savings of 16 percent are projected for 260 major Postal Service facilities under the program.

— Was told that the agency operated at a surplus of $459 during the first three months of 1979. The Postal Service has projected the first annual surplus in its history for the current fiscal year.

Music Concert Scheduled Today In Plainview

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Robin Flood, a member of the Wayland Baptist College music faculty, is presenting a concert of sacred music at 8 p.m. today in Brown Memorial Chapel on the Wayland campus in Plainview.

Miss Flood, the newest member of the voice faculty at Wayland, is a graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University and received a master of music degree in vocal performance from the University of Colorado at Boulder in August, 1978.

Currently teaching elementary and secondary church music courses and music literature, as well as private voice, Miss Flood has had experience in opera. In 1978 she was a regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera auditions; a finalist in the San Francisco Opera Apprentice Program; and in 1975 she was an apprentice with the Des Moines Summer Opera and received supporting roles with that company.

This past summer she sang the role of Musetta in Lubbock Civic Opera's production of "La Boheme." This summer she is travelling to Paris, France, and surrounding countries where she will attend master classes with teachers of vocal performance.

ABOLISH OR EXTEND

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. House of Representatives urged West Germany Wednesday to either abolish or extend its statute of limitations on prosecuting Nazi war crimes. The House made the appeal by approving a resolution 400-0. West Germany's statute of limitations, already extended twice, now expires Dec. 31.

ACCUSED MARINE TO REPORT

GREENSBURG, Ind. (AP) — Robert Garwood, the Indiana Marine accused of desertion and collaborating with the enemy during the Vietnam War, will arrive in Camp Lejeune in North Carolina next Monday, according to his father. Jack Garwood Sr. said Wednesday that his son Robert, 33, will board a plane for the military base sometime before noon on May 14, ending a month's leave at his home in the tiny rural community of Adams near here. The Naval Intelligence Service is investigating the charges against Garwood.

Four Lubbock Men Attempting Ascent Of Alaskan Peak

Three Lubbock men Wednesday were reported in good condition in an attempt to climb Mount McKinley. A fourth was safe at the group's campsite despite low temperatures and high winds.

Eighty mph winds Monday and Tuesday caused Richard Rice, Ron Mahaffey and Clay Louder to make an emergency camp 16,000 feet up the Alaskan mountain. The group also suffered losses of some equipment and supplies but was able to cook a hot meal Tuesday night.

The group will renew its climb today if conditions permit, said Wayne Mahaffey, whose son is a member of the group. The men are expected to return to base camp, however, if they do not reach the summit today.

Wayne Mahaffey said the group reported it had enough food for four more days.

Mahaffey and Rice, founders of Wind, Rain and Fire Adventure Camp in New Mexico, have led previous expeditions in the United States and Mexico.

Bodies Of Slain Protesters Retrieved

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Red Cross workers entered San Salvador's blood-stained Metropolitan Cathedral Wednesday to retrieve the bodies of 17 persons killed when police opened fire on anti-government demonstrators a day earlier.

The steps leading to the centuries-old cathedral were stained with blood and the church was heavy with the odor of decomposing bodies.

The 17 corpses lay in front of the main altar and a candle burned in front of each. Each appeared to have several bullet wounds. Bloodstains stretched across the church floor.

A Red Cross spokesman said 19 persons died and 38 were wounded in Tuesday's shooting when police aimed their automatic weapons at some 300 workers and peasants marching in support of anti-government militants in front of the cathedral in downtown San Salvador.

Earlier, Roman Catholic officials said 22 persons were killed and 69 were wounded in Tuesday's shooting. Hospital sources said 36 persons were hospitalized, most in serious condition.

Members of the anti-government Popular Revolutionary Bloc took over the cathedral and the French and Costa Rican embassies Friday to press demands for the release of five of their leaders. The government says it is holding only two of the leaders.

Five hostages held by the militants escaped from the Costa Rican Embassy on Monday, but six hostages were still being held in the French Embassy.

A score of Red Cross workers arrived at the cathedral after the military government of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero gave permission. They were accompanied by reporters.

Nine of the corpses were laid out with care. Eight others were frozen in contorted shapes. They were the demonstrators who had died on the steps outside the cathedral. They had lain there since Tuesday afternoon.

The Red Cross workers distributed food and water among the 80 bloc members in the cathedral, as well as to an estimated 100 demonstrators who sought refuge inside when the shooting started. The government shut off water supplies to the church and allowed no food inside after it was taken over.

The bloc members kept themselves apart from the demonstrators, and a spokesman for the bloc claimed none of them were armed.

Police chief Col. Jose Antonio Lopez said at a news conference that bloc sharpshooters had opened fire on a truckful of policemen, seriously wounding four troopers. This, he said, sparked the shooting.

As the Red Cross officials bent over the bodies, Roman Catholic church officials opened the heavy cathedral doors and hundreds of Salvadorians quietly entered the church and filed past the corpses.

Police earlier had sealed off the three square blocks around the cathedral, expecting more demonstrations supporting the cathedral militants and their brethren holed up in the embassies.

There were reports of two civilians killed late Tuesday in a shootout with police, but details were not available.

The downtown section of the capital outside the cordoned area appeared normal; stores were open as usual and crowds were in the streets.

A woman across the street from the French Embassy said "the police appear more nervous than yesterday and there are more of them."

She said two persons brought food to the building where six hostages, including Ambassador Michael Dondonne, are held by 16 militants.

No change was reported at the Costa Rican Embassy, where three activists occupied the building, despite the escape Monday of the ambassador and four other hostages.

Jailed Minister To Be Freed

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Rev. Maurice McCrackin will be released Thursday from Holmes Hospital, a free man for the first time since Jan. 19, when he was jailed for refusing to answer grand jury questions.

"It was winter when he went in. He saw his first green grass when they put him in the hospital on Thursday — though the window, of course," said McCrackin's court-appointed attorney, Robert Newman.

Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Rupert Doan set Thursday as the date when the 73-year-old minister would be released, regardless of whether he answered the grand jury's questions. The grand jury wanted information about two prison escapees who allegedly held him hostage.

"Mac never wore down. He is going to be as active for his causes as he was in (jail)," said Newman. "I think the other side perhaps lost interest in keeping him in the Hamilton County jail. They saw there was no way they ever were going to be able to coerce his testimony."

McCrackin has been active in prison reform for many years. He has said he could not testify against his accused abductors because his testimony might cause them to be returned to "inhuman" jail conditions.

During his imprisonment, McCrackin was hospitalized twice as the result of extended fasts. The latest food strike ended Monday. A hospital spokesman said McCrackin "is medically able to be released."

Two 21-day fasts have have left McCrackin thinner, but he feels well, Newman said.

Soil Losses Via Water Erosion Limited

WASHINGTON(AP) — A massive new survey of the nation's cropland shows that soil isses due to water erosion have been much less than previously estimated, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

Soil particles are removed from land as excess water runs over it. The soil then is carried into small streams and rivers where it eventually winds up as sediment, one of the biggest pollutants in the U.S. water supply.

The survey, made by the department's Soil Conservation Service, showed that the amount of soil washed away from fields averaged about 4.8 tons an acre in 1977. Previously, the agency estimated losses annually at about nine tons an acre, almost twice the rate now reported.

A spokesman, Hubert W. Kelley Jr., said the earlier erosion rate of nine tons an acre a year — announced 16 months ago — was determined for soil losses in 1975 by using information and projection methods available then.

The new figures, Kelley said, were based on a much more thorough national inventory of land resources which included field inspections at 200,000 sample points in all states except Alaska, and in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Although the inventory report includes many other aspects of the U.S. land situation, the new estimate of soil lost to water erosion was the most dramatic part.

In all, the report said, about 1.97 billion tons of soil were washed from the nation's cropland in 1977, enough to cover the entire state of Rhode Island to a depth of about 1.3 inches.

A similar national inventory in 1967 showed a water erosion rate on U.S. cropland of 5.9 tons an acre and a total for the entire year of 2.6 billion tons.

According to the agency an acceptable rate of soil loss to water erosion is four to five tons an acre a year. That is approximately the rate at which valuable topsoil can be replaced naturally.

"This bright picture is dimmed by the fact that 22 states, mainly in the eastern part of the U.S. and the Caribbean area, have average annual erosion rates for cropland of four tons or more per acre," the report said. "Seven states and the Caribbean area have more than eight tons."

The report also said that about 872 million acres of agricultural and forest land need conservation treatment, based on the 1977 survey, about the same acreage as in 1967.

But the kinds of land needing conservation measures has changed, it said. In 1977, 58 percent of the cropland required treatment, compared to 64 percent in 1967.

Forest lands needing conservation treatment, however, increased to 67 percent of the total acreage from 62 percent in 1967, and rangelands increased to 75 percent from 71 percent a decade earlier.

The 1977 average rates of cropland soil lost by water erosion and the total lost in the year, by states, included:

Alabama 8.9 tons an acre and 39,904,000 tons; Arizona 0.45 and 593,000; Arkansas 6.48 and 51,809,000; California 0.76 and 7,626,000; Colorado 2.5 and 27,687,000; Connecticut 4.13 and 855,000; Delaware 3.49 and 1,854,000; Florida 4.17 and 13,298,000; Georgia 6.58 and 42,645,000; Hawaii 13.71 and 3,975,000; Idaho 2.36 and 14,843,000; Illinois 6.72 and 160,056,000; Indiana 5.15 and 68,607,000; Iowa 9.91 and 261,719,000; and Kansas 3.78 and 108,797,000.

VANCE TO VISIT IN PACIFIC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will visit Indonesia and Australia following the seven-nation economic summit set for Japan at the end of June, the State Department announced Wednesday.

Lamesa Oil Mill Begins Operations Next Month

LAMESA (Special) — Nearing completion here is a major project which will increase West Texas' capability to send oil to the oil-rich Middle East.

Makes no sense, huh?

Sure it does, in view of the fact that the West Texas product is cottonseed oil that becomes food and the Middle East oil is the kind that provides fuel.

Edible oils from the United States are in demand among food processors in the Middle East and other parts of the world, as well as this country itself.

The Lamesa project is a new multimillion-dollar plant of the Lamesa Cotton Oil Mill, a division of Chickasha Cotton Oil Co. of Forth Worth. It will replace the previous Lamesa plant, which has continued operations during construction of the new installation.

About June 1, operations will begin in the new plant's "front" part, the department which prepares cottonseed for extraction of its oil and meats (kernels). The rest of the plant will go on stream in November, in time to handle seed from the new cotton harvest.

Rex Steele, executive vice president of Chickasha, says the new plant is to be one of the most modern and complete facilities of its kind built in the United States in recent years.

The plant will have capacity to process in excess of 300 tons of seed per day (50 percent more than the old plant). A new railroad spur and new loading facilities have been added to handle the increased volume of cottonseed products.

The general office and local management personnel expressed appreciation for the company's relationships with plant employees, area ginners, officials of the city of Lamesa and Dawson County, plant neighbors, local suppliers, and others. Allen Herzer is the plant manager and Robert Pearson is the plant superintendent.

Thanks to new equipment and technology, the new plant will reduce energy consumption per unit of production, as compared with the old plant. Also, while a cottonseed plant is not a significant source of pollution, the plant will have the newest provisions to prevent emissions of waste material.

By DUANE HOWELL

A LARGE AMOUNT OF WEST TEXAS COTTON that has been certified for delivery against the No. 2 cotton futures contract will be a focus of discussion when the Futures Contract Committee of the New York Cotton Exchange meets this week in Memphis.

The meeting is scheduled in conjunction with the annual convention of the American Cotton Shippers Association. Discussions were to begin Wednesday.

Proposals for changes in the No. 2 contract, which has traded without change since May 1973, have been discussed in some industry circles for several weeks.

The base grade and staple for the No. 2 contract is strict low middling 1 1/16th inches. Cotton stapling 1-1/32nd is deliverable at a discount. No cotton outside the base micronaire range of 3.5-4.9 is tenderable. Tenderable grades include low middling and higher in the white classes and middling light spot and higher in the light spotted categories.

ONE OF THE PROPOSED CHANGES is to widen the discount on 1-1/32nd cotton delivered against futures contracts. Another is to shift the 1-1/32nd cotton from the No. 2 contract to the currently listed but untracted No. 1 contract.

There also have been proposals for shortening the time certificated cotton can be held before delivery against futures and for eliminating transit privileges on moving cotton for certification beyond the nearest delivery point.

Most Texas shippers oppose the proposals.

One trade source who favors a contract change claims: "The No. 2 futures contract, as it exists today, does not fulfill the purpose for which it was created."

"In effect, we have a Texas No. 2 contract that affords no protection to the mill or the merchant that deals in Memphis territory cotton," one source said.

"If the futures contract becomes a Texas contract, we will not use the futures market at all," said one merchant. "We'll just price our cotton at a fixed physical price."

BILLY DUNAVANT OF MEMPHIS, DESCRIBED as the "largest handler of Memphis territory cotton in the world" and member of the Futures Contract Committee, is among those at odds with those opinions.

"How can anybody say that this futures market is not working?" he asked.

"If there were 2 million bales in open interest and you couldn't get into a position or out of one, yes, I'd say, 'Let's look at the contract,' but there are 3.5 million to 4 million bales open interest.

"The people who are complaining are the people who made the wrong decisions in the market," he said.

Those who have been hurt by the delivery of West Texas cotton were said to include several small-scale Memphis merchants and some domestic mills. Those traders were "short the basis and long futures," meaning they sold physical cotton and took delivery of the "poorer quality" West Texas cotton against futures contracts.

THOSE WHO FAVOR CONTRACT CHANGES contend the more than 200,000 bales of certificated cotton was a reason for the fall of cotton futures prices toward the government target level in the past month.

Certificated stocks recently rose to the highest level since 1953, one noted. As of Tuesday, certificated stocks deliverable in the No. 2 contract totaled 201,255 bales. Some trade sources believe most of the certificated cotton may be obligated on summer sales.

Many industry leaders, including some members of the 16-man committee, expect no contract changes as a result of the Memphis meeting.

"I frankly don't think any changes are going to be made when I see who is on the committee," said one merchant who is a member of the panel. He and others said several of the large Memphis merchants on the committee may have the power to defeat the proposals.

"Everybody is in favor of changes when they are needed," commented cotton exchange chairman Albert Weis. "But are they needed now? I don't know yet.

"It would be 18 months, at least, before any change would take effect because no contract month can be changed once it is trading on the board."

MEANWHILE, COTTON FUUTURES CLOSED firm Wednesday, a shade below the day's highs, on aggressive new buying and commission house short covering triggered, some said, by sharp gains in Midwest grain futures.

Final gains ranged from 73 points in old-crop July to 30 points in the new-crop months.

Floor brokers reported only light trade selling on the rally, which lifted nearby July to a high of 63.15 cents. With many trade members in Memphis for the shippers' convention, some sources say, participation by the trade may be light for the next two days.

Activity on Telcot was light and sporadic, with many farmers who still have 1978-crop cotton apparently holding for higher prices. As of about 4 p.m., the volume was only 1,652 bales. Prices to the farmer were averaging 891 points over the loan.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures rose sharply Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade, encouraging sharp increases in corn and soybeans as well.

Reports of rain in the western end of the Grain Belt and a 1.15 million-ton Soviet corn purchase sparked a rally that carried both wheat and oats futures above commission houses' automatic buy-order points, analysts said.

The result was 7-to 10-cent-a-bushel gains in wheat, including new life-of-contract highs, 3½-to 5¼-cent gains in oats and 2-to 4¼-cent gains in corn.

Sulfa-Detection Program In Third Month Here

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — A program to help pork producers detect sulfa residues in withdrawal rations is now into its third month, says Dr. James M. Armstrong, veterinarian with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Feed samples are being posted from 60 hog farms in Texas, as well as 780 farms in nine other states. The samples are being collected by extension personnel and others in major pork producing states. Before the program ends this summers, it is estimated that at least 4,000 farms will be sampled in about 20 states," Armstrong says.

Sulfa residues are showing up in hogs from farms where the producer uses no sulfa, he points out.

"Consequently, samples are being taken from these farms as well as from farms where sulfa is used, since he program is aimed at helping producers pinpoint the contamination sources. Samples are also being taken on farms whe feed is farm-mixed and on farms using commercially mixed feeds," Armstrong adds.

Hogs with more than one-tenth part per million sulfa residue in their carcasses at slaughter may not be sold for human consumption. Residues result when hogs consume sulfa contaminated feeds or water.

With the limited number of feed samples taken to date, about 10 to 15 percent have sulfa levels that could cause violations. While there is no connection between the feed sampling program and tissue sampling at packing plants, reports show that of all hog carcasses checked at the packing plants, from 10 to 15 percent have violative sulfa residues.

"The problem comes," Armstrong explains, "when the producer feeds a sulfa-contaminated withdrawal ration that he believes is sulfa-free."

This contamination can come from feed-mixing equipment, on the farm or in a commercial mill that was not adequately cleaned following its use to mix sulfa-medicated feeds. It can also come from producer's mixing clean feed with sulfa-contaminated feed ingredients, such as protein supplement, purchased from another source.

"Another source of contamination," Armstrong says, "comes from hogs eating manure that was dropped by sulfa-contaminated hogs in trucks, buying stations, packing plants, and other places on the way to market."

He said producer cooperation has been excellent in providing feed samples. The program is aimed at helping hog producers spot potential problems before they find themselves in violation for having excess sulfa in their hogs.

Cattle Futures Close With Low For Month

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 70 to 150 points lower with June through December limit-down Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 3,505 cars.

Prices fell to the lowest in a month, off more than 5½ cents from recent highs.

Values weakened after early gains of 25. Local and commission house selling was sparked by weakness in the pork complex along with an easy tone to carcass beef. Early support followed higher cash cattle despite increased arrivals.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 110½ to 1114 1/2 cents a pound. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the best top $77 per hundredweight. Omaha's top was $76.75. Slaughter was 116,000 head. Receipts at the major markets today are expected to total 9,100 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 105 to 150 lower with August through October at the limit decline. Sales totaled 4,661 contracts.

An early advance of 35 gave way to late selling when other meats tumbled.

Easiness in carcass beef along with limit losses in other meat pits brought late pressure. Initial buying carried over from last night but lacked follow through. New five-week lows were posted on the downturn.

Dewiveries total 211 thus far. Cash feeders were up $2 to off $4 with the best top $142 per hundredweight at San Antonio. About 5,700 head are expected at the major terminals today.

Hog futures closed 72 to 150 lower with June through February limit-down. The market retreated after gaining 22 early on firmness in cattle futures.

The reaction forced prices to the lowest in five weeks, 4 cents under recent highs. Heavy hog runs and lower prices combined with limit lower belly futures to exert pressure here, as did fear on increased hog marketings.

Chevy Chase Says Rumors About 'Tonight Show' Never True

HUMOR TEST — Actor-comedian Chevy Chase gets a pie-in-the-eye in a segment of his upcoming TV special, "The Chevy Chase National Humor Test," a tongue-in-cheek special poking fun at national TV tests. The show will be aired on NBC—TV tonight and is geared to find out what makes people laugh. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chevy Chase says there was never any truth to the report that he was being groomed to succeed Johnny Carson as host of "The Tonight Show."

He also denied he'd started the rumor himself.

"Nobody ever talked to me about 'The Tonight Show,'" he said. "Not from the first day. Not even back in the days of 'Saturday Night Live,' when it was first said I was being groomed. I've never even been asked to be a guest host."

Chase said it "made it difficult for Johnny and me to get together," but the two later met after Chase sent Carson a letter. He later was invited to appear on "Tonight."

He said the report began when a magazine suggested he would be a good replacement for Carson, and it was picked up by other reporters.

"So the rivalry was precipitated," said Chase. "The fact is that it never came up. It was just something someone wrote about in a magazine."

Chase is host for "The Chevy Chase National Humor Test" on NBC Thursday night. His guests are Martin Mull, Pam Dawber, jazz musician Tom Scott, Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner and psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers.

Carson also became annoyed when Chase was asked if he would like to do the show.

"I made a few remarks that were deprecating to the show, not him," explained Chase. "I said it in the wrong way, sort of arrogant in my new-found fame. He took it the wrong way and I never meant it that way. He's the best there is."

Carson has said he wants off "Tonight" before his contract expires in mid-1981, and Chase again was asked about becoming the show's host. "I don't very much think I'll be asked, but if I am asked, I'll consider it," he said.

Chase's "National Humor Test" special is a spoof on previous programs like the safety and driving TV tests. "It's a form of sorts for a tremendous amount of funny things to happen," said Chase. "You take it at home. It's multiple choice. No one really loses because there are no incorrect answers, only unfunny answers."

The three-time Emmy-winning writer-comedian said he was disappointed he didn't get 90 minutes for the show. The show was devised for that length, and in the days before air time, he had to cut out a number of things.

Next up for Chase, who made his movie debut in "Foul Play," is a film called "Saturday Matinee," which he wrote. He said he was thinking of directing the movie, as well as starring in it, but didn't think he would have the time because he also is working on two record albums.

Chase said he also expects to star again with Goldie Hawn in Neil Simon's next movie, "Seems Like Old Times." "I can't speak for Goldie, but it looks like we'll do it," he said.

"Saturday Matinee" will be Chase's vision of those nostalgic days when you could go to a movie for 50 cents and see a newsreel, a cartoon, a travelogue, a serial and two features. All of that will be wrapped into one picture, with Chase playing several roles.

Chase, who came to fame on "Saturday Night Live," then quickly left NBC's late night program, said, "I thought the show should have broken up long ago. John Belushi is a superstar, and Gilda and the others are so good," he said referring to the actors who called themselves The Not Ready for Prime-Time Players. "I want to see them put their talents elsewhere.

"We satirized television, then we won awards and were embraced by the medium. It was time to get out. How long can you go on being different? It's exhausting."

Cab Driver Idolizes John Wayne, Writes First Song About 'The Duke'

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — There is a tiny quiver in his booming basso voice and a hint of moisture in his eyes as "Big Irv" Lampman talks of his hero, the man he considers The Ultimate American.

He is, Lampman believes, the personification of all that is clean and right and tough. The defender of the innocent, of virtue, freedom and mother country. The Duke. John Wayne.

Lampman, a native son who makes his living driving a battered blue Cadillac limousine here, has penned what he believes is the first song in tribute to Wayne, who lies striken with cancer at UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles.

"That man has done so much to make you proud to be an American," Lampman said. "His strength is a powerful force in this country. In his time of need, somebody should say, 'Duke, thank you so much.'"

Lampman, 38, and a couple of Nashville producers are putting together "A Tribute to John Wayne" on tape this week. Next, they'll peddle the tape to label companies, hoping for a contract.

"Even if worse comes to worse and it doesn't sell ... I don't give a damn," Lampman said. "All I want in this world is for John Wayne to hear it. Win, lose or draw.

"I'm just a lowly cab driver in Madison, Wisconsin, who wants to say 'Thank you.'"

Lampman was stricken with a musical inspiration as he warmed himself from the eternal Wisconsin snows while waiting on a fare at the airport about two months ago.

"It's all up here," he said, tapping his temple under the ever-present blue cap he wears. "And it comes from here," he said, thumping his chest. But Lampman said he finally put the words on paper and copyrighted them.

"John Wayne. Why, the very name brings visions of Indians in warpaint, mountains and deserts, of main streets and gunfights in dusty little western towns. Of cavalry and buffalo hunts, of battles on lonely Pacific islands and the saga of this great, wonderful land of ours," Lampman intones while "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again" plays softly in the background.

The Duke, Lampman said, is the symbol of what's "right with this country." What's wrong, he explains, is the decided lack of heroes to "be an inspiration to the youth of this country."

Lampman's adoration of Wayne, which began when he first saw "The Sands of Iwo Jima" 28 years ago, borders on idolatry.

"I don't idolize anything or anybody. I believe John Wayne is a man. There's not one damn thing Made in Taiwan about John Wayne.

"He's an American.

"He's taking on 'The Big C' like he's taken on everything else. Head on and no backing up. When the Grim Reaper comes, and that time comes for everyone, he'll know he's been in a fight.

"He's a full-speed-ahead, redneck American, that's all."

Coroner Says Job Not Worth Salary

KANKAKEE, Ill. (AP) — Coroner Wes Wiseman says his job isn't worth the yearly $18,000 salary. So he returned one-third of it to the Kankakee County board.

"I found myself sitting in my office not doing much of anything and decided my job did not deserve the $18,000 provided by taxpayers," Wiseman said. He added, however, that he plans to run again for coroner in 1980 and said, "I expect to be re-elected."

He was elected coroner in 1976 in a race against a doctor. He also has kept his full-time job as a shop foreman with Conrail.

"I told the County Board that it was ridiculous for me to sit in my office with nothing to do, but they wouldn't reduce my salary," he explained. "They told me that my salary was set by the board and could not be reduced or increased while I was in office."

He said that when he presented the refund check at Tuesday night's board meeting, he received a "quiet response."

"They didn't say anything, not even thank you, but they took the check," Wiseman said. "I feel that it's an honest and sincere gesture. It's only fair to the people."

Wiseman said that one-third of his salary would amount to $6,000, but he deducted the taxes paid on that sum, leaving a refund check of $3,900.

NO 'LAME DUCK' RAISES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — An Illinois House subcommittee on Wednesday approved a bill to bar salary hikes for lawmakers in the period between an election and the time their new terms begin. The measure, approved unanimously by the House Executive subcommittee, would eliminate the kind of "lame duck" pay hikes legislators approved for themselves and other top state officials

45th Suicide Recorded By Apartment Complex

TOKYO (AP) — A 33-year-old Japanese homemaker jumped from the balcony of her sixth floor apartment, becoming the 45th suicide victim to leap from the sprawling Takashimadaira-Danchi apartment complex since it opened seven ears ago.

Tokyo police said the young woman was suffering from a mental disorder. Ofthe 45 persons to jump to their deaths from the towering complex, nine have been residents and 36 were outsiders.

ABC Continues Nielsen Ratings Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — The week's most-watched prime-time TV program? "Mork and Mindy" at 8 p.m. The week's No. 2 show? "Mork and Mindy" at 8:30 — and a rerun at that.

ABC, in fact, came within a shade — two shows — of sweeping the first 15 places in the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s ratings for the week ending May 6. CBS' broadcast of the Miss U.S.A. beauty pageant was No. 7, and "60 Minutes," also on CBS, finished 12th.

ABC got a big boost in the ratings from "Ike," its three-part war years biography of Dwight D. Eisenhower. The first and third chapters tied with "Mork and Mindy" for second place, and Part II was No. 15 for the week.

The three shows bunched in second place had ratings of 27.1. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 27.1 percent saw each of the broadcasts.

ABC's rating for the week was 20.5, with CBS second at 15.7 and NBC third at 14.4. It was ABC's 17th week in a row as the No. 1 network.

The networks say the ratings mean in an average prime-time minute during the week, 20.5 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the nation were tuned to the leading network.

All three networks scored with specials in a week sprinkled liberally with reruns. The Country Music Awards show on ABC was No. 16, NBC's "The Best of 'Saturday Night Live' Part II," was No. 27, and "Castaways from Gilligan's Island," also on NBC, was 32nd.

NBC's best regular program was a repeat of "CHiPs," No. 20.

Each of the networks was represented at the bottom of the ratings: "Mackenzies of Paradise Cove" on ABC was 55th, followed by "Supertrain" on NBC, a "CBS Reports" news special on the Three-Mile Island nuclear accident, "The Osmond Family Show" on ABC and NBC's "Highcliffe Manor."

Here are the week's Top 10 programs:

"Mork and Mindy," 8 p.m., with a rating of 27.6 representing 20.6 million homes, ABC; "Mork and Mindy," 8:30 p.m., "Ike," Part I, and "Ike," Part III, all 27.1 or 20.2 million, all ABC; "Three's Company," 26.5 or 19.7 million, and "Laverne and Shirley," 26.3 or 19.6 million, both ABC; "Miss U.S.A. Beauty Pageant," 25.5 or 19 million, CBS; "Happy Days," 23 or 17.1 million, "Taxi," 22.9 or 17 million, and "Fantasy Island," 22.2 or 16.5 million, all ABC.

The next 10 shows:

"Love Boat," ABC; "60 Minutes," CBS; "Charlie's Angels," Movies-"Beach Patrol" and "Samurai," and "Ike," Part II, all ABC; "Country Music Awards," NBC; "Eight is Enough," ABC; "Alice" and "Dukes of Hazzard," both CBS, and "CHiPs," NBC.

U.S. Book Black Mart Thrives In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — E.L. Doctorow's American best-seller "Ragtime" is the hottest book in Moscow right now. In fact, too hot for Soviet authorities to handle — but not for the thriving black market.

Writers here say the Communist Party's Central Committee has denounced the novel as pornographic in what is being whispered as a new government crackdown on U.S. books available in translation.

The decision, secretly made in April, puts the book into the underground market in pirated books — especially new American novels — where bestsellers bring anywhere from $45 to $150.

"It's a business," a Soviet writer explained. "Anyone who wants to read American books can get them this way."

The pirating is done by Russians who have access to copying machines, like Xerox, which are heavily controlled. The prices are a healthy chunk in a country were the average monthly salary is $240.

One enterprising Muscovite is known to have collected 3,000 popular books from abroad just to reproduce and sell them.

There are also recent graduates of Moscow language institutes who sit at typewriters most of the day and translate U.S. books, like Mario Puzo's "The Godfather." Some Soviets go to the apartments of translators to hear the books read in Russian. Many writers say they were able to "read" the works of Vladimir Nabokov this way.

The Xerox copies of U.S. books appeared on the Moscow scene only in the last three years, writers say, now that bound novels sold on the black market have become scarce.

The typical Moscow bookstore is stocked with copies of Angela Davis' autobiography — and little else American.

Buyers who show a badge from the elite Writer's Union can browse through a special tiny bookstore in central Moscow that occasionally has U.S. works for sale. In recent years, writers have seen Arthur Hailey's "Airport," Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood," and Robert Penn Warren's "All The King's Men," as well as works by science fiction writers Isaac Asimov and Ray Bradbury.

The editors of important Soviet journals, as well as Soviet ministers and their aides, have special reading privileges. They receive a list of U.S. books available in translation and merely underline the novels they want to read.

At the first International Book Fair held in Moscow in 1977, Soviet publishers bought the rights to 119 American books.

So where are they?

Many books meet the same fate as "Ragtime," a kaleidoscopic look at the 1920s that was translated in full and appeared in the September and October 1978 issues of Foreign Literature, a widely sought but hard-to-get journal that prints foreign works.

The Central Committee, writters said, determined that the book was "not only bad for women to read, but for men, too" and has indefinitely delayed its publication in book form — despite earlier publicity here that it would be made available.

"It signals a definite change of policy for a while," one Soviet writer told The Associated Press.

Now, underground copies of "Ragtime" are being hurried out into the waiting arms of readers anxious to see what all the fuss is about, and the issues of Foreign Literature are prized.

The Central Committee is said to be pressuring the journal to present more works by authors of the socialist countries.

In July and August of this year, the journal is slated to published John Updike's novel, "Marry Me," about adultery and other problems of upper-middle-class life in America. The book contains explicit sex but Updike has long been viewed here as a "suitable" writer because he chronicles the decay of modern American society.

Why are American books so popular in the Soviet Union? One emigre writer explained it this way:

"The thinking person in the Soviet Union takes delight in discovering a new proof that a profound, serious spiritual life exists in the Western world, refuting Soviet propaganda, which declares that all culture of the West, especially American culture, consists of nothing but ... triviality."

Ernest Hemingway has been widely translated here, though in the 1960s his "The Old Man and the Sea" was branded as "harmful petty bourgeois nonsense." William Faulkner is another favorite, as is John Steinbeck. Kurt Vonnegut's "Breakfast of Champions" appeared in Foreign Literature because of his reputation, the editors said, "as a talented satirist criticizing various aspects of American life and character."

And Russians love to read. Sociological studies published here show that 97 percent of Soviet families have their own libraries. More than 70 percent of the Soviet population of 262 million spend at least an hour a day reading books, statistics show.

One of the United States' largest bookstore chains, B. Dalton Booksellers, has tentative approval from Soviet officials to open three book kiosks in Moscow during the 1980 Olympics.

The president, Floyd Hall, told U.S. conference he would exercise "self-censorship" on what he offered Russian readers.

Theft Victim Chases Pair Sans Clothes

NEW YORK (AP) — Two young muggers may have stripped stamp dealer Zoltan Gordan Bana of his clothes, but not his pride.

The naked Bana became very angry Tuesday when muggers robbed him of $80, a watch and the contents of his briefcase, then forced him to strip. He dashed after them, using his briefcase as a fig leaf.

Weber picked up the chase and collared one suspect. The other mugger escaped.

"My Hungarian blood began to boil," Bana said after police charged Kevin Simpson, 17, of Brooklyn, with assault and possession of stolen goods.

As Bana told it, the muggers grabbed and punched him at the turnstile of a deserted entrance shortly before 3 p.m., said Sgt. Ray Gardella, in charge of City Hall security.

The crime scene is a few blocks south of City Hall.

After going through his case, they made Bana strip, pitched his clothing into the station and ran.

Community Tries To Keep Doctor From Prison

HOLLIS, Okla. (AP) — One by one they stepped up to the community center microphone in an outpouring of love for their town doctor — and in an effort to raise money to keep him out of jail.

Some 500 of Hollis' 3,200 residents filled the center Tuesday night and managed to scrape together $1,700 to help Dr. Lester Moline appeal his five-year sentence for a check-floating scheme.

To Moline, prison means the likely end of his medical practice. But to the people of the small farming town on the southwestern Oklahoma plains it means the loss of a vital part of community life.

"I don't want to lose him. He is precious to us and we all love him," said a 90-year-old woman, the first speaker in an hour-long procession that left Moline in tears.

Other patients told of times Dr. Moline had treated their families for free when they couldn't afford to pay. They urged his critics "who are without sin to cast the first stone."

Moline, 52, was sentenced April 30 after he pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to misapplying bank funds through a check-floating scheme in his plans to develop the town of Burns Flat.

The doctor ws given three weeks to clean up his affairs before reporting to federal prison.

Hospital board chairman M.F. Guett, chairman of the appeal fund, said Hollis will be left with an osteopath and an internist, who will open her practice this week.

The emotional gathering at the community center Tuesday developed after a town resident called The Daily Oklahoman and said several supporters of Dr. Moline wished to speak on his behalf.

Kenneth Moore, a Hollis farmer leading the support move, said $2,500 had already been paid to retain Sen. Gene Stipe to handle the appeal. He said the money raised Tuesday will pay further legal costs. But not everyone in town wants to see Moline go free.

"Do you know what the procedure would be for me? My license would be gone just like that," pharmacist Gene Williams said.

"If Joe Blow on the street commits a crime, will we do the same thing? No, we wouldn't." said Hollis minister Paul Evans.

For his part, Moline was deeply moved by the town's efforts to keep him free.

"What can I say to these people today but thank you?" he said. "They want me to be their doctor ... that's the only way I can thank them."

HEARING DEADLINE SET

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents and supporters of a proposed Gulf of Mexico deepwater port will have a last chance May 17 to present their views to the U.S. Department of Transportation. Federal agencies' final review of the application by the Texas Deepwater Port Authority for the facility 26 miles south of Freeport will begin after next week's hearing, the DOT announced Wednesday.

Grant Applications Being Taken

The Lubbock Cultural Affairs Council has begun taking applications for grants to promote cultural activities from organizations actively involved in the arts and humanities.

The Lubbock City Council contracted with the Cultural Affairs Council to disburse the portion of the hotel/motel tax earmarked for support of the arts and humanities.

Currently there is approximately $50,000 in the tax fund.

Under the contract, the Cultural Affairs Council will accept and review grant applications twice a year with the first application deadline on June 1.

Applicants for the grants should be non-profit organizations and projects must serve residents of and/or visitors to the Lubbock area.

Books and records must be maintained by those receiving the grants, who should be prepared to exhibit financial statements for at least one year following termination of the grant.

Projects and programs should contribute to Lubbock's cultural identity and assist in promoting tourism to be eligible for funding.

The grant program is a result of a state constitutional amendment authorizing Texas cities to increase the hotel/motel tax rate by 1 percent for support of the arts and humanities in the community.

The amendment's aim was an increased access to the arts for all citizens, an improvement in the quality of the arts endeavors and to foster the continuing cooperation, sense of unity and common purpose among arts and humanities organizations.

Buses, Trains Expected To Have Boom Season

By Louise Cook
Associated Press Writer

Americans who are afraid they won't be able to get gasoline are flocking to buses and trains, jamming some telephone lines with requests for reservations and with questions about how to get around without a car.

"It looks like it's going to be a boom summer," said Joseph Vranich, a spokesman for Amtrak, the quasi-public passenger rail network.

An Associated Press spot check of ground transportation on Wednesday showed some public transit systems also report local ridership is up, but the biggest jump is occurring in long-distance travel.

C NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Thursday, May 10, 1979

Greyhound Corp.'s chairman, Gerald Trautman, said Tuesday that bus travel has increased so much during the past month that the company is having trouble finding buses to carry all the would-be passengers.

Lee Sneath, director of public relations for Trailways Bus System, said: "Our ridership figures are up. It is too soon to tell how sharply." He said several factors were responsible for the increase, including gasoline shortages and the machinists' strike that has grounded United Airlines' flights for more than a month, crowding many of the most popular air routes.

Regional airlines, meanwhile, have picked up business as a result of the energy crunch. "Obviously we're getting a lot of that," said a spokesman for the Air Transport Association of America. The association said the number of revenue passenger miles flown by short-haul airlines during March was 27 percent higher than in the same month of 1978.

Sneath said Trailways planned to ask state regulatory agencies in several areas to ease restrictions on all bus companies to allow them to expand service from June 15 to Sept. 15. He said the company wanted to add extra runs to existing schedules and to begin intrastate service in areas from which it is now excluded.

Neither Trautman nor Sneath provided specific ridership figures. Amtrak's Vranich said advance bookings for the next two weeks are running 40 percent above 1978 levels. Amtrak reservations centers handled 50 percent more calls on Tuesday than they did a year earlier and the carrier is now training extra operators.

"The most apparent reason ... is gasoline worries," Vranich said, adding that many callers mention the possibility of a fuel shortage when they ask for information. He said callers often have no idea of whether they can get where they are going without driving. "They'll say: 'I want to go from New York to Richmond, Va., and I'm worried about gasoline. Do you go there?'" Vranich said.

In California, where the shortage has hit hardest, some passenger trains already are full, Vranich said, adding that 11 of 24 trains between Los Angeles and San Diego carried standees last weekend.

Elsewhere, Vranich said, the Southwest Limited between Chicago and Los Angeles is fully booked for 18 of 31 daily runs this month; last year, it was sold out on only eight days in May. The Inter-American, between Chicago and Laredo, is expected to be 60 percent full during the next three weeks, a figure Vranich called "mind-boggling." In the East, some Friday and Sunday runs between New York and Florida are sold out until the last weekend in August.

Vranich said Amtrak is "happy," with the increase, "but worried" about handling the business. In an unrelated development, the Transportation Department has proposed a 43 percent cutback in the number of miles of track served by Amtrak, and on Tuesday the House rejected efforts to restore some of the money to the budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Vranich said Amtrak has stepped up maintenance of older cars, and is diverting equipment to high-traffic areas and adding cars to existing trains. He also urged people to call reservations numbers early in the morning or late in the evening to avoid getting a busy signal.

Local mass transit companies in some areas also have reported an increase in ridership, although it appears less dramatic and officials are not always sure of the reason. Dave Murdock of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority, said, for example, that both suburban and city ridership has risen. Asked why, he replied: "It's hard to say. Service, at best, has not improved and in some areas there have been reductions in service. We are not offering a better product, but more people are riding .... We do think the increased cost of operating automobiles and worry about fuel problems ... did contribute."

Officials in Tulsa, Okla., say the gasoline situation has boosted bus ridership. But Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh said there won't be a shortage "unless we create one by panic purchasing of gasoline."

Nigh said: "If every American went out today and filled up his gas tank, we would drain every service station dry. This would have been true in the '50s and '60s, when we had plenty of motor fuel, as well as today."

CHARGED WITH ARSON

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A man who had quarreled with several apartment tenants above the pool room he operated was charged with setting a fire that killed two boys early Wednesday, police said. Kevin Fredericks, 21, of New Haven was charged with first-degree arson and two counts of murder in the deaths of Glendell Smith, 8, and his brother, Joseph Smith, 14, police said. Police said the fire first reported at 2 a.m. started in the pool room on the first floor of the 3½-story tenement where the boys and about eight other persons lived.

Motorists Line Up - Where Gas Available

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 10 million gasoline-craving California motorists found their fuel rationed Wednesday in an effort to shorten blocks-long lines at service stations and take the panic out of filling up.

But the "odd-even" gas plan ordered by Gov. Edmund G. Brown drew mixed results on its first day in operation.

Lines at gas stations in the San Francisco Bay area, San Jose, San Diego, and some suburban sections of Los Angeles were shorter than they had been the last few days.

In the more congested central and western areas of Los Angeles, some lines were even longer — up to six blocks at some stations.

College student Nancy Weisburg cut classes to get in a long line in West Los Angeles Wednesday morning.

"There's as much panic now as there was before, because if you don't get gas today, then you won't be able to get it until Friday," she said.

The plan now affects only eight of the state's 58 counties. But those are urban counties where about 10 million of the state's 15 million motorists live. And many of the less populous counties were expected to join the plan later.

Under the rationing plan, drivers whose license plates end in odd numbers can refuel only on odd-numbered days and even-numbered cars can get gas on even days.

Emergency and commercial vehicles, motorcycles and out-of-state cars are exempt from sales restrictions. Gasoline is limited to 20 gallons per car, and filling of tanks more than half full is prohibited. Violations are punishable by $500 fines and six months in jail.

Gas station operators generally checked license plates and turned away cars with even numbers Wednesday.

But one Standard station operator in Marin County near San Francisco said that if fuel gauges were checked, "We'll have nothing but fights on our hands.

"I simply refuse to stick my head in a customer's car."

"I'm not really checking to see whether tanks are half full," he said. "I don't want to get my head chopped off."

In San Diego, the lines averaged about a dozen cars and Police Lt. John Morrison said, "It appears to be sorting itself out."

In Santa Clara County, south of San Francisco, one of the state's most gas-thirsty areas, a check of three stations showed lines of 10 cars at two stations and none at the third.

In the city-county of San Francisco, which didn't take part in the rationing plan, there were lines several blocks long at gas stations.

The biggest problem for motorists, besides the lines, was finding stations that were open and had gas to sell. Many stations were out of regular and unleaded fuel.

In the Los Angeles suburb of Pasadena, police ticketed several cars parked on the street overnight near gas stations for an early place in line.

Joseph Fuentes, 24, of Redwood City was sitting in a line of cars intersected by railroad tracks when the train came along and smashed into his car.

Not injured, he was still in line when police arrived.

Gas Rationing Plan Gets Senate Okay

By The Associated Press

California muddled through its first day of odd-even gasoline sales Wednesday while the Senate approved the latest version of President Carter's plan for standby rationing on a national basis.

Reactions to the West Coast plan were mixed. Lines at some stations were shorter than they have been; lines at others were longer.

"There's as much panic now as there was before because if you don't get gas today, then you won't be able to get it until Friday," said Nancy Weisburg, a college student who cut classes to get in a long line in West Los Angeles.

In other energy developments:

—Service station operators and industry spokesmen said $1-a-gallon premium gasoline, already a reality in parts of the country, will spread across most of the rest of the nation by winter. The White House had predicted that the price barrier wouldn't be broken until spring.

—Amtrak, the nation's quasi-public passenger rail network, and major bus companies reported business booming as motorists looked for alternatetransportation. Amtrak's advance bookings for the next two weeks are running 40 percent ahead of last year.

—Texas Gov. Bill Clements said his staff is trying to develop a statewide gasoline distribution plan in case of fuel shortages similar to those in California. "We're talking in terms of a calculated and planned distribution system. I don't want anyone to think that we in Texas are going to institute a rationing plan with coupons," Clements said.

The California plan drawn up by Gov. Edmund G. Brown went into effect Wednesday in eight of the state's 58 counties — home to about 10 million of the California's 15 million drivers. Other counties are expected to institute a similar setup later on.

The odd-even system means that, with a few exceptions, drivers whose license plates end in odd numbers can refuel only on odd-numbered days; even-numbered cars can get gas on even days. No driver can get more than 20 gallons at a time and motorists whose tanks are more than half full are banned from "topping off" their tanks.

The standby rationing scheme approved by the Senate would allocate gasoline coupons to individuals based on the number of cars or trucks in their household. There would be a three-vehicle limit per household and, under one of the modifications in the original plan, residents of states where average gasoline consumption is high would get extra coupons.

The Senate's 58-39 vote in favor of Carter's plan came after additional last-minute concessions by the president, who promised not to use the standby power merely to ease long lines at gasoline stations and who vowed to make more gasoline available to farms and some industries. The House is expected to take up the plan today.

Gas Station Shutdown Planned

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — After meetings at the White House and state capitol, a spokesman for California service station operators said Wednesday dealers around the nation still plan a four-day shutdown later this month to demand higher profits.

Jim Campbell, executive director of the California Service Station Association, said he met Tuesday with White House aide Mike Chanin and David Bardin, administrator of the Economic Regulatory Administration.

"There was no commitment by the White House staff. They understand and sympathize with our problem. I told them we're still going to shut down unless they change the regulations," Campbell said. He said the U.S. Department of Energy rules affecting dealers' share of profits can be changed in 24 hours.

Some service stations plan to close from May 17 to May 20 in protest of low profits they say they receive.

Campbell said they want 25 percent of the wholesale price or about 15 cents per gallon. Presently, dealers can mark-up gasoline as much as they did in 1973, plus three cents. Campbell's proposal would raise the price of a gallon of gas about three cents.

Campbell said the dealers also want "the U.S. Department of Energy to stop acting like a Gestapo."

"They are walking in and telling a guy to roll back his price without looking at his books. We know of 50 instant rollbacks, where a dealer didn't even know what his maximum price was," Campbell said.

Campbell met here Wednesday with Richard Maullin, chairman of the state Energy Commission, about the state's new odd-even gas distribution system.

He declined to comment on what was said.

Spokesmen for the association have said they represent dealers primarily from Northern California, but they say they expect dealers elsewhere in the nation to join the protest.

SPLIT FAMILY — Robert Kerr, of Johnstown, Pa., and his daughter, Melissa, 3, picket with conflicting viewpoints on nuclear power in front of the Cambria County War Memorial Arena Wedneday. Nuclear Complex Owner Fears Bankruptcy

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — General Public Utilities Corp., the owner of the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear complex, said Wednesday it may be facing insolvency despite cutbacks in employment, construction and salaries.

The nation's 16th-largest utility has been negotiating with a group of banks for $450 million in new, short-term loans to ease it out of the financial squeeze caused by the accident, Chairman William G. Kuhns said at the company's annual stockholders meeting.

Without the loans, "We'd very quickly run out of cash," Kuhns said. "In a few months, the entire GPU system would face insolvency."

GPU has been spending $800,000 a day to replace the loss of nuclear power since the accident at the $1.3 billion complex March 28.

Kuhns said GPU's work force of 11,500 will be trimmed by five percent through layoffs, early retirements and attrition. Some workers will be given the option of transferring to posts at Three Mile Island rather than face layoffs, he said.

About two dozen anti-nuclear demonstrators and a like number of construction workers protesting building cutbacks in the power industry marched peacefully outside te hall while the meeting was going on.

GPU previously halted new construction and cut its quarterly dividend by 20 cents to 25 cents a share. Directors will discuss the company's future dividends on July 12.

Kuhns said Wednesday that as part of the cash conservation program, his annual salary has been reduced from $265,000 to $230,000 a year, while President Herman Dieckamp's salary is being cut from $207,000 to $180,000. Other executives' seven percent salary boosts have been rescinded.

John G. Graham, GPU's vice president and treasurer, said the cash crisis could hit the company's Metropolitan Edison and Jersey Central Power and Light subsidiaries as early as July, when the two companies could reach their legal short-term borrowing limits.

Unless the companies are able to raise money through longer-term financing and rate increases by then, they would "go insolvent," he said.

Metropolitan Edison owns 50 percent of Three Mile Island and operates the complex near Harrisburg. Jersey Central Power and Light and Pennsylvania Electric, a third GPU subsidiary, each own 25 percent of the complex.

GPU now has $170 million in short-term debt. Jersey Central Power and Light is contemplating raising $40 million to $50 million "in the next few months" through an issue of preferred stock or debentures, Kuhns said.

GPU and its subsidiaries also may raise an additional $260 million from securities sales, said Verner H. Condon, the company's chief financial officer. But he said it was not certain that any of those sales could be made.

If GPU became insolvent, it could file for protection from creditor lawsuits under federal bankruptcy laws. Kuhns said such a move would diminish investor confidence in utilities nationwide and could boost the cost of raising money for utilities by an average of 20 percent. The utilities would continue operating during the bankruptcy proceeding.

GPU has asked New Jersey authorities for a $113 million rate increase to help pay for higher fuel costs following the Three Mile Island accident. Officials said GPU plans to ask Pennsylvania regulators for similar increases.

The accident — the worst in the history of U.S. nuclear power generation — shut the $700 million No. 2 reactor at Three Mile Island. Dieckamp said the reactor would remain closed for at least three years. The companion Three Mile Island No. 1 reactor was closed for maintenance at the time of the accident and, while undamaged, will remain closed at least through the end of 1979.

A proposal by John Feather Jr., a Lebanon, Pa., attorney who owns 12 shares, to close the Three Mile Island plants permanently was defeated by a vote of about 44 million shares to 25.

GPU's Oyster Creek nuclear station in southern New Jersey has been shut down since last week due to a malfunction in "a pressure indicating device, not in the reactor itself," Dieckamp said.

That shutdown has boosted GPU's replacement power costs by $250,000 a day. Dieckamp said he expects the station to resume operations after a review by federal authorities begun Wednesday is completed. He did not say when the plant would be restarted.

Since the Three Mile Island accident, GPU has paid out slightly more than $1 million in claims, mostly for lodging and related expenses of families evacuated from the area of the plant, officials said. The $1 million is covered by insurance, part of $560 million in liability coverge.

"Insurance will also cover up to $300 million for physical damage to the Three Mile Island site" and will "pay the bill for cleanup and repairs," Kuhns said.

But GPU is not covered for the cost of replacement power or for $8 million a month in carrying charges on the money raised to build Three Mile Island, he said.

Asked if GPU planned to sue Babcock & Wilcox Co., the J. Ray McDermott & Co. subsidiary which built the damaged reactor, Dieckamp said GPU was preserving its rights but has made no decision to sue.

Nuclear Weapons Plants Inspection Demanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government nuclear weapons facilities could pose more of a health threat to surrounding populations than nuclear power plants do, antinuclear groups charged Wednesday.

Spokesmen for several such groups said facilities that develop or produce nuclear weapons are not as well regulated as civilian nuclear power, which they said was far from ideal.

"We are calling for a complete government investigation of the health effects of radiation around weapons plants," said Michael Jendrzejczyk, a director of the Rocky Flats Nuclear Weapons Facility Project.

Jendrzejczyk told a news conference that weapons facilities around the country virtually regulate themselves under the guise of national security. These facilities have been reluctant to study the effects of radiation on their workers and people in surrounding communities, he charged.

There have been repeated radiation leaks from the Rocky Flats facility near Denver, which makes triggers for nuclear weapons, and preliminary studies show increases in some cancers in the vicinity, he charged.

Will Riggan, a member of the University of California Weapons Laboratory Project, said weapons plants don't have to report to oversight agencies such as the Environmental Protection Agency or the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"They alone decide about the health effects on their workers and surrounding communities," he said.

The University of California runs the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory at Berkeley and the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico.

Riggan said nuclear critics soon will meet with Gov. Edmund G. Brown, a member of the university's board of regents, to urge him to push for more accountability from the laboratories.

Dr. Helen Caldicott of Harvard Medical School, president of Physicians for Social Responsibility, said it often takes 15 to 30 years for cancer to develop from radiation. She said the government has done little to follow the health of nuclear workers to see if there are later radiation effects.

She said these workers should be studied more carefully "because military facilities are dirtier than civilian plants because standards are much less strict."

The government has begun a series of studies on the effects of low-level radiation following disclosure of apparent related cancer increases.

United Strike Benefits Other Airlines

NEW YORK (AP) — The strike which shut down United Airlines more than a month ago has turned into a bonanza for some competitors of the nation's largest airline.

While fewer people are flying, some analysts estimate that competing airlines are profiting by as much as $5 to $6 million a day by picking up traffic lost to strike-bound United.

United Airlines declines to estimate the cost of the March 31 walkout by 18,600 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers. The talks, scheduled to resume in Denver today, have been deadlocked on cost-of-living benefits, work rules and other issues, according to the union.

The Chicago-based airline normally carries about 130,000 passengers daily over routes connecting more than 100 cities. Its revenues a year ago — before expenses — averaged $9 to $10 million a day,a United spoksman said. Normally United's business accounts for about 20 percent of the total industry.

For such cmpetitors as American and Trans World Airlines, the United strike provides a double-bonus because it means fuller airplanes with only a little extra cost for meals and extra staff.

The United strike is also the first shutdown of a major airline since the end of a long-standing mutual aid pact. Until that expired last December, airlines that benefited with extra traffic from a struck competitor helped out the struck airline by returning part of that revenue under an agreed upon formula.

But in the wake of government deregulation of the industry, the pact was allowed to expire last December.

Louis A. Marckesano, an airline analyst at Janney, Montgomery, Scott Inc. in Philadelphia, estimates that the because competitors are most part are simply filling up seats that otherwise would be empty and can keep that added revenue themselves, the industry as a whole is probably getting an extra $5 to $6 million in profit before taxes daily because of the United strike.

No one can say for certain how many people have canceled trips because of the United strike. An industry report on traffic last month, the first since the strike began, won't be available for several weeks.

But Jim McCarthy of the Air Transport Association, an industry group, said it appears large numbers of travelers are simply switching and Marchkesano estimates that as many as 80 percent of travelers who would fly United are traveling on other carriers.

American Airlines and Trans World Airlines, the two largest United competitors, both reported steep increases in traffic last month.

"We're estimating that we are picking up as much as 20 percent of United's traffic currently," said Dave Benz, a TWA spokesman. The airline's figures for April showed a 39 percent increase in traffic from a year earlier but part of that was due to promotional fares and the fact that the Easter hliday was in April thisyear and in March a year earlier.

Judge's Gun Stops Angry Defendant

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — When the defendant in a battery case became enraged and charged toward the bench, Judge Darrel Carnell never flinched. He pulled a pistol from under his black robes and ordered the man to stop.

"What are you going to do?" said Carnell, a Volusia County judge. "Sit back and take it? I'm not."

No shots were fired, and 33-year-old David Toliver of Holly Hill, Fla., was restrained by court officials a few feet from the judge. He was being tried Tuesday on a neighbor's complaint that Toliver hit him during an argument over Toliver's dog.

Toliver began yelling during opening statements. The jury was sent out while attorneys discussed whether to continue the trial. As they talked, Toliver rushed the bench.

Judge Carnell refused to say whether the small-caliber pistol he drew was loaded, saying it was enough that Toliver thought it was. He also defended his right to pack it in court.

"He came charging up to the sidebar. This guy was a wild man. He startled the hell out of me," Carnell said. "I wondered what I was going to do. Retreat was impossible."

Carnell said state law and at least four attorneys general opinions support a judge's right to carry a weapon.

"I deplore the circumstances which compeled me to defend myself. I felt I was down to my last alternative. I will not leave myself at their (defendants') mercy," Carnell added.

Will he continue to carry his pistol?

"It's either that, or have a uniformed deputy present at every proceeding," the judge said.

After order was restored, Toliver was handcuffed to a chair and gagged with a towel, but still didn't calm down. So he was locked in a holding cell while the judge cited him for contempt, fined him $500, and sentenced him to 30 days in jail.

The whole episode was witnessed by 14 startled Seabreeze High School students who had come to court as part of a law class.

Their counselor, Carol Boatner, agreed with the judge's gun policy. "If I were a judge, I'd have one too," she said.

Geothermal Energy 'Coming Of Age'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Geological Survey reported Wednesday that the United States could tap as much energy from underground heat sources as current oil consumption would supply in 162 years.

Major untapped resources of geothermal energy exist in this country, particularly in "hot spots" in the West and parts of the Gulf Coast, the agency said.

In its second national assessment of geothermal resources, the survey said the upper six miles of the earth's crust contains about 32,000 billion-billion (32 followed by 21 zeros) British Thermal Units of heat energy.

Of this, the agency estimated that 6.4 billion-billion Btu's could be used — the equivalent of 1.2 trillion barrels of oil.

With the American Petroleum Institute reporting current oil consumption of 20.3 million barrels a day, the available, geothermal energy would equal 162 years of current oil use. The two types of energy are not always interchangeable, however.

Geothermal energy, said Dr. L.J.P. Muffler of the survey, "is a very promising source of energy whose optimum use could substantially affect the energy economy of the United States."

Muffler said use of such energy is "coming of age, as demonstrated by the rise in gowth rate of 7 percent per year since World War II to a growth rate of 16 percent per year in the late 1970s."

Currently, Muffler said, electric power is being generated from geothermal energy at The Geysers in California, the first geothermal electric installation in the nation and the world's fastest growing.

Besides the Geysers, hot water from underground sources has been used for some heating requirements in Boise, Idaho since 1892. And in Klamath Falls, Ore., homes, churches, business and schools have long used hot ground water, mostly for space heating.

Muffler's report, developed in cooperation with the Department of Energy, is the second national assessment of geothermal potential. The first, in 1975, provided higher estimates for available energy from underground hot water. These have been revised because of improved techniques for estimating that can be tapped.

Another energy resource listed, but not currently in use, is pressurized underground water. If the technology can be developed, the report states, abundant energy of this type could be available along the northern edge of the Gulf of Mexico, both onshore and offshore.

A Btu is the amount of energy necessary to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. One kilowatt hour of electricity is the equivalent of 3,413 Btu's.

Former Executive Cites Suggestion Of Payola

TOKYO (AP) — A former executive of a large Japanese trading house testified Wednesday the company's chairman told him seven years ago to feel out the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. about providing a $2.3 million cash gift to former Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

Toshihara Okubo, former managing director of Marubeni Corp. which had been Lockheed's Japanese sales agent, said the gift was intended to promote sales in Japan. He said Board Chairman Hiro Hiyama suggested the gift after arranging a meeting with Tanaka and saying they could not go empty handed.

Spot Oil Prices Climb; Traders Grow Shy

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Prices for the dwindling supplies of crude oil on the spot market continue to climb, but refiners and traders say they are trying to stay away from what one source described as "silly levels" in a "phantom" market.

Traders expect the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries once more will seize on the higher spot prices to justify a new increase in their base price of oil, even though relatively small volumes of oil change hands in the spot market, where oil not sold under long-term contracts is traded. The OPEC oil ministers will meet in Geneva in late June.

In Paris Wednesday, French Industry Minister Andre Giraud confirmed reports that France will seek to have controls imposed on the spot oil market.

The current disorder of the oil market is due to "shameless speculation" in Rotterdam, he told parliament, and disclosed that the government would call on "international organizations concerned" to control the market by imposing ceiling prices. Giraud didn't elaborate.

Saudi Arabian light crude oil, which is used by OPEC in setting the base price of oil, is selling for $25.50 a barrel on the spot market in Rotterdam, compared with its official price of $14.54 a barrel.

According to Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a New York-based newsletter, spot prices are rising because oil supplies are still tight and refiners are scrambling to purchase any crude oil they can find.

PIW said most of the spot purchases have come from Europe and Japan, which have been most adversely affected by problems with supplies of Iranian crude oil. Although Iranian production has resumed after being cut off for several months, it is running at about two-thirds of previous levels, continuing the supply squeeze on oil markets.

Iranian light crude oil is now generally priced on the spot market at between $25 and $25.50 a barrel, up $3 a barrel from a week ago and well above the official price of $16.57 a barrel.

A source said several of his contacts had been advised by the National Iranian Oil Company that its availabilities of spot crude would be reduced, putting further upward pressure on the spot price.

Gasohol Gets Another Backer

WASHINGTON (AP)-A Wisconsin congressman says the Energy Department is ignoring the garbage pile as a potential source of energy.

To drive his point home, Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., appeared before the Energy Department building Wednesday with a garbage truck and 100 gas cans.

He said that 72 pounds of garbage can be converted into enough methyl alcohol to produce the energy equivalent of one gallon of gasoline. The alcohol is mixed with ordinary gasoline to produce a mixture known as gasohol.

Roth quoted one top energy official as calling the use of gasohol "a pipe dream" and said that such a pipe dream "can go a long way toward solving the energy shortage. If all the gasoline in the United States were replaced with gasohol our dependence on foreign oil would be cut by 20 percent and our total gasoline consumption would be cut by ten percent," he said.

He pointed out that the cars at the Indianapolis 500 run on alcohol fuels and blends of up to 60 percent alcohol are used in the operation of vehicles in Brazil.

Gasoline Supplies Show Increase, Production Down

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline inventories increased slightly for the first time since early February, according to the latest weekly supply bulletin released Wednesday by the American Petroleum Institute.

For the week ended May 4, gasoline supplies rose to 232.1 million barrels from 231.7 million barrels a week earlier. The 400,000 barrel addition to gasoline stocks is the first increase since the week ended Feb. 16.

The increase was acheived despite the fact that gasoline production was down slightly in the latest week, to 6.6 million barrels daily from 6.7 million barrels daily a week ago.

Supplies of distillate, which U.S. refiners are already trying to rebuild for next winter's home heating season, increased nearly two million barrels to 117.3 million barrels from 115.4 million barrels in the previous week.

Distillate production of 2.9 milion barrels daily was virtually unchanged from the previous week and was higher than normal for this time of year because of the stock rebuilding effort.

Crude oil imports of 5.8 million barrels daily were unchanged from the week earlier figure.

LEVI'S LAWSUIT STICKS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An antitrust case filed earlier by the state of California against Levi Strauss & Co. has been reactivated, the company said Wednesday. The company and the state previously had reached a $3.5 million out-of-court settlement of the action. Termination of the tentative settlement resulted from the state attorney general's belief that the $3.5 million settlement fund was inadquate to properly compensate California consumers, the company said. The state has charged the company with improperly maintaining retail prices on its wearing apparel.

Arab States Oil Producers Study European Market

KUWAIT (AP) — The Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries opened its regular ministerial meeting here Wednesday with the sale of more refined products to Western Europe as its main theme.

"If the Western consumers want to continue to take our crude oil, they should also take our refined oil products," declared the chairman of the meeting, Libyan oil minister Izzedin Mabrouk.

Conference sources who did not wish to be named said the OAPEC members plan to increase their refined output and thus offer a more profitable product to the Western European market.

"If the European Economic Community accepts coordination with OAPEC in the field of oil refining and agrees to share its technological know-how with the Arabs, then we would be ready to guarantee them with a constant supply o crude oil," one conference source said.

The source said OAPEC's present total daily production amounts to 20 million barrels, or 30.8 percent of the world's production, but OAPEC members are forced to import refined oil products and additives.

The meeting was attended by nine members of OAPEC. The 10th member, Egypt, was suspended from membership last month as part of the political and economic boycott measures imposed by the majority of Arab league member states against the government of President Anwar Sadat after he signed a peace treaty with Israel.

Stock Exchange Operations Union Backed

WHITE SULPUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — The board of Wall Street's principal trade group decided Wednesday to push for a combination of some operations of the New York and American stock exchanges.

Governors of the Securities Industry Association went on record in favor of a merger of the nation's two largest stock exchanges as long ago as 1974.

But since then, discussions of a full-fledged merger have been bogged down in antitrust questions and other problems.

So, instead of a merger, the brokerage trade group has decided to press for combinations of operations in such areas as options and financial futurescontracts.

The brokers' main aim is to cut their costs of parallel operations at both exchanges.

Boothby is head of the large brokerage firm Blyth, Eastman, Dillon Inc.

It was evident that the brokers were focusing on options and financial futures in the belief that they would not present great antitrust questions because both types of securities are also extensively traded by commodity exchanges in Chicago.

The Amex in recent years has established options and financial futures markets.

The NYSE has neither at the moment but is developing plans for financial futures trading and has expressed its intentions to trade options as well.

The development of new options markets for the moment is blocked by a Securities and Exchange Commission moratorium on expansion of options trading, pending an SEC study of options and their impact.

Options are contracts that give their holders the right to buy or sell stocks at specified prices within a set time period.

Financial futures are contracts similar to those traded on many farm and industrial commodities, which cover delivery of such things as foreign currencies at a later date.

IT&T Earnings Set Record For Company

PITTSBURGH (AP) — International Telephone and Telgraph Corp. Wednesday reported 1979 first quarter net income of $209 million, the highest for any quarter in the company's 59-year history.

"This is the first time that any quarter's net income has exceeded $200 million, and earnings per share were the highest for any quarter ever reported," Lyman C. Hamilton Jr., president and chief executive, told shareholders here.

Consolidated net income for the three-months ended March 31 was $209.1 million, or $1.47 per common equivalent share, a 31 percent increase over the same period a year ago. First quarter 1978 net income was $159.4 million, or $1.12 per share.

Worldwide sales and revenues of $4.9 billion set a new first quarter record in the 1979 period, compared with the previous high of $4.3 billion reported for the same period last year, Hamilton said.

The entire increase in profits, 35 cents a share, were caused by currency exchange figures. ITT lost 25 cents a share on them in the 1978 quarter and gained 10 cents a share in the 1979 period.

Investors reacted negatively to the earnings report, with ITT stock down 25 cents to $28.375 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1978, all five of ITT's businesses — telecommunications and electronics, engineer products, consumer products and services, natural resources and insurance and finance — were profitable, Hamilton said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have been buying small lots of different stocks. My last transaction was the purchase of 25 shares, at $15 — $375. The broker charged me $36 commission. That came to eight percent. The broker says that his firm charges this kind of commission, because it has a large research department and other services for its customers.

I don't need a research department. All I need is a broker who will just take my orders to buy or sell. I have heard there are "discount brokers" who charge lower commissions than most brokerage houses. How do I get in touch with a discount broker?

A. You have two basic ohoices. You can go through the yellow pages of the phone book; call every brokerage firm in your area; ask about commission rates. Or, you can watch for newspaper advertisements by discount brokers. Many members of the rapidly-growing discount brokerage business promote themselves quite aggressively.

A discount broker can serve a person such as you very nicely. Other people who want and/or need research and other services should stick with "full service" brokerage firms.

Remembering that commissions are "negotiable" — which boils down to each brokerage firm's setting its own rates — many discount brokers charge half, or even less, the commissions of full service firms on most transactions.

Almost all brokerage houses, however, have "minimum commissions" of about $25 or $30 on every transaction. So, when you deal in relatively small numbers — such as the $375 trade you cite — it's unlikely you could save any commission dollars dealing with a discount broker.

Face it. Considering the time, effort and paperwork involved in handling a stock transaction, a brokerage firm charging less than $25 or $30 can't expect to make money and stay in business.

So, if you want to save commission dollars by trading through a discount broker, you'll have to deal in somewhat larger numbers.

Q. The statement I receive every three months from the company in which I own stock and am reinvesting my dividends lists both a "share price" and a "tax basis price."

Suppose I sell some or all of the shares I acquired by reinvesting dividends. In figuring my capital gain or loss, to report on my income tax return, which do I use as my cost — the share price or the tax basis price?

A. The tax basis price. Some dividend reinvestment statements use the words "per share tax basis" or some similar phrase. No matter what the wordage, those are the numbers you should use when calculating your gain or loss.

This, again, drives home the lesson that everyone in a dividend reinvestment plan should save all dividend reinvestment statements.

In many dividend reinvestment plans, the share price is the same as the tax basis price. In some of those plans, the reinvestment statements make no mention of the tax basis price.

It's obvious that the reinvestment plan in which you are enrolled allows stockholders to use their dividends to buy additional shares at a discount from the stock's going market price. In plans of that type, the discount is usually five percent.

If you're reinvesting dividends to buy that company's stock at 95 percent of market value, the five percent discount is added to the dividend income you must report on your tax return each year. It is also added to your actual cost, making your tax cost for any future capital gain or loss purposes the share price — the price at which the shares were bought for you — plus the discount. Those two numbers add up to the tax basis price.

Q. You frequently reply to questions about individual mutual funds by saying that the particular funds have good, medium or poor records. Where does this information come from? It must be available somewhere.

A. My standard reference on mutual fund performance is the "Wiesenberger Investment Companies Service" manual. That fat book, along with quarterly and monthly supplements, can be found in the reference sections of most public libraries.

Dollar Rises Marginally In Europe

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose marginally against most major currencies in European trading Wednesday but turned in a mixed performance later in New York.

In London, gold closed at $247.75 a Troy ounce, 25 cents better than Tuesday's closing price. In Zurich, the main bullion market, the price slipped to $248.375 from Tuesday's $248.625.

"It was a very quiet day," said one New York trader, who asked not to be named. He said the main action was in yen-dollar trading.

The Japanese currency ended the trading day in New York at 212.85, down from 215.15 on Tuesday and from 213.25 at the end of trading Wednesday in London.

Dealers said there was no international or economic news pushing the dollar down against the yen.

In Japan, where dealing ends before the European markets open, the dollar faded against the yen for the fourth straight day in busy trading. But dealers said the U.S. currency now appeared to be holding ground.

Bank of Japan Governor Teiichiro Morinaga told a news conference in Tokyo Wednesday the yen was still undervalued against the dollar "considering Japan's balance of payments position."

Parents Warned Of Diet Soda For Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents shouldn't allow their young children to drink diet soda because of the growing evidence that saccharin causes bladder cancer, the Food and Drug commissioner and a panel of independent experts said Wednesday.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy also told a Senate health subcommittee hearing that new data gathered on saccharin for the National Cancer Institute shows that men who consume saccharin are twice as likely to get bladder cancer as those who don't use the artificial sweetener.

But Dr. Ernst Wynder, president of the American Health Foundation and the chief researcher of the study, said Kennedy's analysis was premature. Wynder said he has not yet made an evaluation. The foundation is a non-profit medical research organization based in New York.

He said his report will be published within two months, and before that it is too soon to comment on the final outcome. Wynder made his remarks in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Meanwhile, members of a National Academy of Sciences' panel studying the health risks of saccharin told the health subcommittee that parents should beware of letting their children drink diet sodas.

The warning was prompted by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., subcommittee chairman, who asked what advice the medical experts would give to mothers during the coming summer months as youngsters increase their consumption of soft drinks.

"There is a strong presumption that there is a risk (of cancer) in those children where there is no particular reason to drink diet soda, and I see no justification for taking that risk," replied Dr. Frederick C. Robbins, a pediatrician and dean of Case Western Reserve University's school of medicine.

"The male is pecularily at risk but we don't know the reason for that," added Robbins, who headed the NAS saccharin study.

Echoing the concern was Dr. Emmanuel Farber, chairman of the University of Toronto's pathology department.

Farber said he was "flabbergasted" at the degree to which children are exposed to saccharin products.

Not only are children consuming saccharin but they are smoking cigarettes, and that combination "frightens me," Dr. Farber remarked.

Commissioner Kennedy agreed, saying "everything we know and are learning suggests we ought to stay away from (saccharin) whenever possible."

The commissioner said he learned of Dr. Wynder's new data on bladder cancer only Tuesday night from the National Cancer Institute. He said he asked the institute for the report after he heard rumors in the profession that it existed.

Commissioner Kennedy said Wynder's study is an expansion of one that Wynder did in 1977 for the NCI. In the earlier report, Wynder found no relationship between saccharin and bladder cancer in humans.

The commissioner said the new data "appears to support the hypothesis of an association between saccharin and bladder cancer in males."

In the interview, however, Wynder said that after the 1977 report, "we have since found confounding variables that affect saccharin users." Those variables included other factors in the diet as well physical attributes, explained Richard Klarberg, Wynder's lawyer.

"We have no way of knowing today whether that new report will indicate a correlation between saccharin use and cancer," Klarberg said.

The FDA has proposed to ban saccharin as a food additive but would keep the sugar substitute available as an over-the-counter-drug. Congress placed an 18-month moratorium on the FDA ban and required warning labels on products containing saccharin.

The congressional moratorium expires May 23.

FDA Recalls Popular Nasal Sprays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virtually all Contac Nasal Mist and Sine-Off Once-A-Day Sinus Spray on store shelves throughout the country are being recalled because of possible bacterial contamination, the Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday.

A spokesman for SmithKline Corp., parent company of the maker of the two non-prescription drug products, said the bacteria involved are unlikely to harm anyone but that the recall was being undertaken "as a precaution."

The FDA agreed that the bacteria, known as pseudomona sepacia, "is not a general health hazard" but said it might pose some risk to people with upper respiratory infections.

More than 2.7 million squeeze bottles of the two well-known nasal sprays are affected by the recall, which involves essentially all lots produced in 1978 and 1979.

Jeremy Heymsfeld, spokesman for SmithKline, said no decision has been made on when production of the products will be resumed following what he conceded is the largest recall in the firm's history.

He refused to estimate the cost of the recall but said, "it won't have material impact on SmithKline sales or earnings."

"We want to emphasize that there is no general public health hazard, but we do recognize that consumers may want to return these products," Heymsfeld said when contacted following the FDA's announcement.

He said consumers may return any of the affected drugs directly to the manufacturer, Menley & James Laboratories of Philadelphia, a wholly owned subsidiary of the giant drug and cosmetic firm.

The affected lot numbers, printed on the bottom of each bottle, end in 87 or 97.

Heymsfeld noted that Menley & James also makes Contac cold capsules and Sine-Off tablets but that neither of those products is involved in the recall action.

Faye Peterson, a spokeswoman for FDA, said the company detected the contamination during routine laboratory tests of samples and has retained a marketing firm to notify between 260,000 and 275,000 possible outlets for the over-the-counter drugs.

The agency also announced the recall of several cleansing lotions intended for treatment of acne because the products contain a chemical the FDA considers unsafe for use on the skin.

The products were identified as Dermastat Lotion, Acne-Prep Lotion, AHC No. 3 BP Gel Medication, AHC Benzoyl Peroxide Gel 10 Percent Plain, AHC Sulphur Resorconol and Benzoyl Peroxide 20 Percent HP with Sulphur 10 Percent.

Miss Peterson said the products contain methoxyethanol, a solvent used in varnishes, enamels and wood stains, as well as an ingredient in automobile antifreeze. Methoxyethanol "can cause nerve, blood and kidney disorders if it's absorbed through the skin," she said, and the agency considers it potentially hazardous when applied as a topical preparation.

No injuries have been reported, however, the spokeswoman said.

Municipal Workers Strike In Four Cities

By The Associated Press

Angry policemen and other municipal workers walked picket lines in four cities Wednesday while their bosses worked overtime to head off crime and clean up the garbage.

"I thought you guys were on strike," exclaimed a Cincinnati burglar who was caught in the act even though many of the city's 1,000 policemen had walked off the job.

But in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where about 200 street and sanitation workers were on strike in defiance of a judge's order, officials said that although supervisory personnel were on duty there was little they could do.

"I'm just sitting here waiting for my phone to ring," said Carl Henderson, superintendent of Tuscaloosa's street and garbage department.

Other disgruntled city workers were off the job in Worcester, Mass., and Cookeville, Tenn.

The strikers' grievances ranged from the dangers facing police officers to union representation for city workers.

The striking Cincinnati policemen planned to join their wives in a march on a City Council meeting before ending a 24-hour walkout triggered by the death of a fourth officer in 10 months.

The Tuscaloosa workers put up picket lines to back up their dispute with the city over a union leader's job status.

Street and sanitation workers in Tuscaloosa, the home of the University of Alabama, posted pickets 15 minutes before garbage trucks were due to roll. Pickets also were on hand at the five waterworks installations.

Circuit Judge Jerry Baird Tuesday enjoined the members of Local 2237 of the State, County and Municipal Employees Union from picketing. But union president James Brown, whose status was at issue, said the workers would set up picket lines anyway.

Tuscaloosa Mayor Rainey Collins had given the 211 strikers until the start of their regular shifts Wednesday to return to work or face discipline ranging from fines to dismissal.

In Worcester, city workers manned picket lines in defiance of a state order after particulars of a new contract for 1,800 employees were leaked to reporters, according to union spokesmen.

Richard Boulanger, business manager of Local 495, Service Employees International Union, authorized pickets at every city department, including the city hospital, public nursing home and the municipal airport. However, he said union members would take steps to make sure emergency services were not effected.

While garbage pickup was halted, police and fire fighters were expected to stay on the job.

In Cookeville, the city's entire force of about 45 police officers walked out to protest the suspension of a fellow officer who wrecked his patrol car while chasing a suspect outside the city limits. The policemen also want union representation.

The officers walked out at 10 p.m. Tuesday and City Manager Bethel Newport said no policemen reported for work Wednesday morning.

But Newport said, "It was a very quiet night. There were no problems, just a few routine calls."

IN MEMORY — Two Cincinnati policemen place hats representing each of the city policemen slain during the last five years on the desk of Cincinnati Mayor Bobbie Sterne during a meeting, Wednesday. The presentation of the hats capped a long demonstration at the council meeting as police officers presented demands for more protection in the wake of Saturday's slaying of police officer Melvin Henze, the fourth slain in five months. The council meeting ended a 24-hour walkout by police. (AP Laserphoto)

Large Pension Request Creates Italian Furor

ROME (AP) — Italy's labor minister is investigating the state-run Pension Institute's plans to pension off a former test pilot with $1.9 million in severence pay and $6,000 a month for life.

In the meantime, Pier Paolo Trevisan, 50, former chief test pilot of the state-owed Aeritalia Aviation Group, will get nothing. Word of the pension reached newspapers and subsequent news reports caused an uproar among the public. The reports said Trevisan demanded the high settlement because he had a risky job.

Merit Replacing High Tar Brands.

—National Smoker Study

Do smokers attracted to low tar MERIT stay with the brand, or "backslide" to former high tar favorites? Read what MERIT smokers had to say in a nationwide research effort.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

And in research conducted among smokers who taste-tested MERIT against leading high tar brands:

Confirmed: Majority of smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

This ability to satisfy, and especially to satisfy over long periods of time, could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is the first real alternative for high tar smokers.

CHEVY CITATION

Citation goes a long way on a tank of gas. But that's just the start. Citation has the traction of front wheel drive, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, and a transverse mounted engine that's cradled in rubber cushioned mountings to reduce engine vibration. Sleek Citation is easy to park, yet big enough for five adults and lots of cargo. See Chevy Citation for yourself. And to really appreciate it, get behind the wheel.

EPA ESTIMATED MPG
CITY ESTIMATE 24
38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE
With standard 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission.

Remember: Compare the estimated MPG to the "estimated MPG" of other cars. You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length, and weather. Your actual mileage will be lower in heavy city traffic, and your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy. The "estimated MPG" is more likely to reflect actual overall mileage than the "combined estimate".

TEST DRIVE THE ALL NEW CHEVY CITATION.

Questions, Answers About Proposed Salt II Pact Given

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some questions and answers about the proposed SALT II treaty.

Q: What does SALT stand for?

A: SALT is an acronym, used to mean both the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks and the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. Strategic arms are defined as those missiles and bombers capable of striking the Soviet Union from United States territory or vice versa. So the treaty does not apply to the bulk of the military forces of each side, which consist of "conventional" infantry, artillery and jet fighter planes.

Q: Would the proposed treaty stop the arms race?

A: Not at all. Each side has insisted on the right to continue to modernize and improve the capability of its missiles and bombers.

The United States, for example, would be able to replace its Minuteman III missile, in service since the mid-1960s, with a new missile called the MX, with more warheads and more power. It would be permitted to replace its submarines with a new Trident submarine carrying a more advanced missile. And it would be able to put its new cruise missiles into the aging fleet of B-52 bombers. The Soviets would be able to make similar, costly improvements in their forces.

The treaty would allow the United States to increase its total of nuclear warheads aimed at the Soviets from 8,526 to more than 12,000. The Soviets would be able to increase their total from about 4,000 to more than 8,000.

But Defense Department officials estimate that if there were no treaty, the United States would have to spend an additional $30 billion to $60 billion to match the anticipated, uncontrolled Soviet buildup.

Q: Then what limits would the treaty put on both countries' forces?

A: It sets an overall limit of 2,400 on strategic missiles and bombers, and within that limit tere are "sub-limits" applying to a variety of weapons, particularly missiles with multiple, independently targeted re-entry vehicles, or MIRV's. In 1981, the limit would go down to 2,250.

The Soviets would have to destroy about 270 aging missiles. The United States, sometime in the 1980s, might have to destroy 35 mothballed B-52 bombers, depending on how fast the new Trident submarine is built.

The treaty also would limit the new Soviet missiles to the number of warheads they now carry. Thus, the Soviet SS-18 would be limited to 10 warheads. American analysts believe it is capable of carrying 20 or 30 warheads.

The treaty would ban a few weapons which one side or the other might have tried to develop, such as missiles launched from the sea bed.

And it would limit each side to developing only one land-based missile until the end of 1985. Even that limit is loose enough to allow each side to make its missiles more accurate without being counted as a new missile.

Q: Will the forces on each side be of equal strength?

A: No, although the administration says each side will have "rough equivalence."

There is no symmetry between American and Soviet strategic forces. The Soviets have traditionally relied on large, land-based missiles with huge warheads, although they have some bombers and submarines. The American force is more evenly divided between bombers, land-based missiles and submarine-based missiles. In addition, the Americans have developed smaller, more accurate missiles with smaller warheads.

Within the SALT II limits, then, the two forces would remain quite different. There are varying ways of measuring how effective they might be.

The United States, with its cruise missiles and submarine-based missiles, will have an advantage in the number of nuclear warheads it can deliver against Soviet targets. Defenders of the treaty say this advantage is all-important, because even a relatively small nuclear warhead, delivered accurately, can destroy any conceivable target.

The Soviets will have advantages in other measures of strength, such as the total number of explosive megatons they can deliver against the United States.

Q: Will the U.S. land-based missile force be vulnerable to a Soviet first strike?

A: In theory, it might be. Land-based missiles are the most accurate and reliable of the strategic weapons. They are based in underground tubes of highly reinforced concrete.

Two improvements in missile technology have made them vulnerable. One is the MIRV, which would allow an attacker to fire at numerous targets with only one missile. Another is the improvement in missile accuracy. This means an attacker could fire at even a "hard target" like a missile silo and be confident that the warhead would explode close enough to the silo to destroy it.

In theory then, the Soviets might launch an attack against the 550 U.S. Minuteman silos and B-52 bases, using perhaps just 100 of their SS-18 missiles, and wipe them out before they could be launched. Then they might confront the American president with an ultimatum, forcing him to choose between some political concession or a second nuclear exchange that would destroy both countries' cities.

But that would be taking the risk that the United States would retaliate with its surviving bombers and submarine-launched missiles.

Q: What can be done to prevent it?

A: The administration is considering several plans, including a "shell game," in which the United States would move land-based missiles from one hole to another, so the Soviets would never know which to aim at.

Q: Is the treaty verifiable?

A: This will be one of the most hotly debated issues in the Senate. The American ability to monitor Soviet tests is based on a variety of "national technical means," including spy satellites, radar stations near Soviet territory and airborne radar. The two sides have agreed not to conceal their missiles or interfere with the array of surveillance devices.

The administration theory is that the Soviets will not deploy a weapon until it has been extensively tested. And the American ability to monitor tests will show if they cheat in a substantial way.

For example, there is no way that a reconnaissance satellite can tell how many warheads are on a Soviet missile in an underground silo. But for the Soviets to exceed the limits in the treaty, the United States believes they would have to test the new warhead cluster in an actual launch. U.S. officials say they are confident they could count the warheads in a given test and know the Soviets were preparing to cheat.

U.S. monitoring capability was diminished earlier this year by the loss of two radar stations in Iran which "looked" directly at an important Soviet launch test site.

The administration contends that within a year, it will replace the Iranian capability with improvements to its Turkish radar bases and such measures as increased airborne radar flights. But critics like retired Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, former head of military intelligence, contend that the Iranian stations cannot be replaced in time.

And, the critics say, there are some SALT aspects, such as the potential range of a cruise missile, which cannot be verified.

Q: How will the treaty affect the NATO allies?

A: Only indirectly. The treaty would not place limits on intermediate-range weapons, like the Backfire bomber and the SS-20 missile, or the American F-4 and FB-111 bombers stationed in Europe. It would not affect French and British nuclear forces.

The proposed treaty does have a hazy "non-circumvention" clause that prohibits either side from exceeding the treaty limits by stationing weapons in a third country. It also would ban until 1982 the testing or deployment of long-range cruise missiles launched from land or sea. Those are weapons NATO might want. But the administration insists the treaty will not affect "traditional" cooperation with U.S. allies.

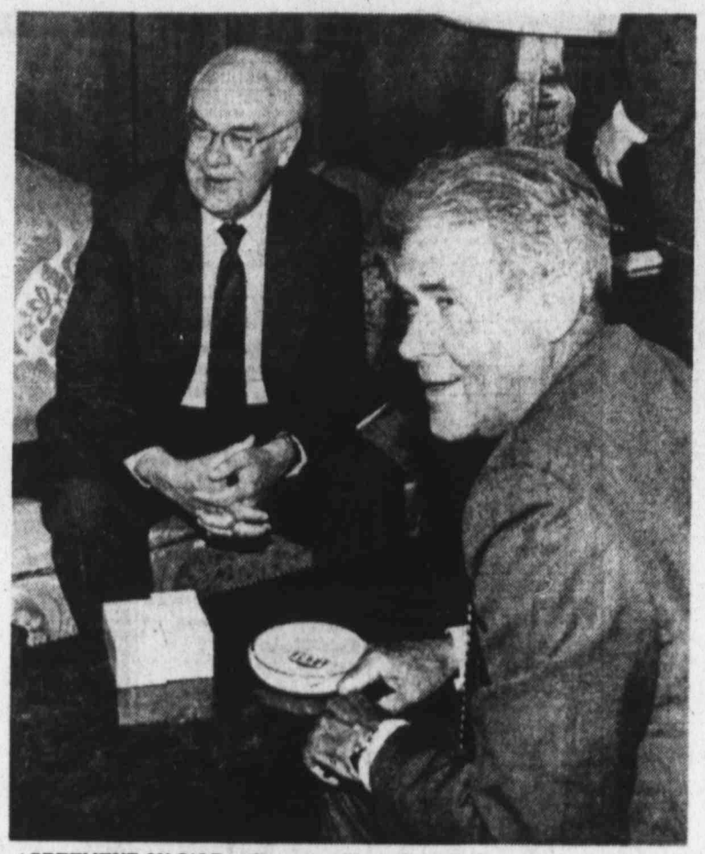

Q: Why isn't the Soviet Backfire bomber included?

A: The Russians argue the Backfire is an intermediate-range weapon, for possible use against Europe or China. The administration tends to agree.

But the Backfire could reach American targets if it flew at slow speeds and landed in Cuba. This would, of course, mean that it would only strike after an exchange of missiles.

The Backfire will be the subject of a letter, signed by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, that will limit the bomber's deployment to areas far from the United States and limit its production rate to the current average of 30 per year.

Critics undoubtedly will argue that this agreement is insufficient.

Friends Of Ousted School President Start Car Fund

DENTON (AP) — About 200 friends of deposed North Texas State University president C.C. Nolen have raised about $6,000 to buy him a car.

"We don't want to see him leave after eight years, working practically 24 hours a day, without someone saying, 'We care,'" said Dr. June Buhler, an associate professor of education who attends the same church as Nolen.

She said 12 people met April 23 and decided to conduct a low-key, word-of-mouth campaign. A "Jitter Nolen Appreciation Fund" was established at a Denton bank.

Nolen resigned under fire April 1 just hours before the Texas House General Investigating Committee questioned him about charges of fiscal mismanagement at the university. The investigation began after state auditors complained of possible unconstiutional diversions of state funds into the private NTSU Educational Foundation Inc. established in 1972 to raise and distribute funds for the school.

Dr. Buhler said three or four of the original group which started the car fund are affiliated with the university. They decided to raise the money as friends of Nolen and not because of their ties with the school.

Both Sides Unlimber Big Guns As SALT Debate Takes Shape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Howard Baker told President Carter Wednesday the Senate likely will amend the strategic arms limitation treaty with Russia or return it for further negotiations.

Baker said he told the president that while he believes in arms control and would like to vote for the SALT II treaty, he has strong reservations about its terms.

"My inclination is to vote against it," Baker said, after meeting with the president at the White House.

"I have a strong feeling the treaty is likely to be amended or returned for further negotiations," he said.

Baker, a key to the ratification of a SALT treaty, said he will make up his mind on SALT II shortly after he sees the final version of the text. He said he will then campaign to make sure his view prevails.

The Baker comment came as an opening volley in the long-awaited SALT debate.

Sen Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who has been at odds with Carter on the adequacy of the president's energy policy, hailed the SALT treaty and promised "to do everything in my power to ensure the earliest possible ratification of the treaty."

The Senate should ratify the treaty, Kennedy said, "because it is an indispensable step toward peace that history now offers us and that we cannot afford to miss."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, promised speedy hearings. He said that if the treaty is received by the end of June, hearings can be concluded by the end of July.

The foes of the treaty were not silent.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., called it "substantially unequal and unverifiable."

"It favors the Soviet Union," Jackson said. "In its present form it is not in the security interests of the United States."

Jackson echoed Baker in predicting the Senate "will act to amend its most serious shortcomings and to plug its many loopholes."

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, called the treaty unequitable and unverifiable and contended it will give the Soviet Union the "war-winning capability" to develop a first-strike punch against U.S. intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., called for cooperation and flexibility as the SALT debate begins.

"We cannot as a nation, afford a partisan fight, with one side portrayed as war-mongers, the other as sell-out artists," he said.

Dole, who will soon announce his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination, recently told reporters that Republicans who oppose SALT should be very careful because polls show that 70 percent of all Americans favor a SALT treaty.

He said the treaty will be ratified if it can be demonstrated that it is in the interests of the United States.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., indicated strong opposition to the treaty, not because it might erode U.S. security interests but because it does not end the arms race.

The treaty would slow but not stop the growing size of the nuclear arsenals of both nations.

"Under the SALT II treaty the equivalent of nearly one million Hiroshimas will be added to the nuclear arsenals of both the United States and the Soviet Union," Hatfield said.

"In addition both nations will deploy advanced weapons which are designed specifically and solely to fight and win nuclear wars," he said. "This is the most dangerous shift in strategic doctrine since the nuclear arms race began."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the debate will turn on the entire picture of national security, of the balance of conventional as well as strategic forces.

He said SALT will be ratified if it is demonstrated to be equitable and if it leads to stability and to SALT III negotiations in which the numbers of strategic weapons can be significantly reduced.

A group of key senators voiced mixed reactions following a 90-minute briefing session with Carter, Vance, Brown and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, told reporters, "I don't believe any of my doubts about the treaty have been resolved." He said he expects to vote against ratification.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who has expressed doubts about provisions for policing the treaty to ensure against Soviet cheating, said, "Verification, I think, for many of us is still an issue."

Positioning himself as undecided on how to vote, Glenn spoke of verification as "still a gamble, still a risk." But he said the adminstration will attempt to deal effectively with the issue before the treaty comes to a vote.

Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., said he remains uncommitted but expressed concern about the psychological impact of a Senate defeat for the pact.

In such a case, he said, the Soviets "would emerge as the defenders of peace and we would appear to be the warmongers."

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., also declared himself to be uncommitted but lauded Carter for making "a very fine presentation of the whole picture — the situation with the treaty and without the treaty."

Although picturing himself also as undecided, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told reporters "the treaty battle will be very, very difficult, but I think the battle can be won" by its supporters.

Main Treaty Points Outlined

WASHINGTON (AP)— Here is a brief summation of the proposed SALT II treaty, based on briefings by the Carter administration.

DURATION: the treaty runs through 1985, with a protocol that will expire at the end of 1981.

LIMITS: each side would be limited initially to a total of 2,400 strategic missiles and bombers. The overall limit would drop to 2,250 in 1981.

Within those limits are sub-ceilings: no more than 820 land-based missiles with multiple warheads; no more than 1,200 land and sea-based multiple warhead missiles and no more than 1,320 total multiple warhead missiles and bombers equipped with cruise missiles.

ARMS REDUCTIONS: the Soviets would, by the end of 1981, have to destroy some 270 aging missiles, according to American estimates. They would also not be allowed to deploy the SS-16, a mobile missile they have tested with mixed success. The United States might have to destroy some 35 B52s now in mothballs in 1984 or 1985, depending on when its new Trident submarines are deployed.

NEW WEAPONS ALLOWED: The two sides would each be allowed to equip their bombers with new cruise missiles, and to develop one new land-based missile. After 1981, it could be a mobile missile. Each would be allowed to develop as many new types of submarine-based missiles as it wished. In addition, each side would be able to substantially increase the number of warheads it deploys: from 8,500 to more than 12,000 for the United States and from 4,000 to more than 8,000 for the Soviets.

And, the Soviet Backfire bomber would not count against the strategic limits. It would be dealt with in a side letter from President Leonid Brezhnev.

Senate Debate To Follow Pact Signing

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev sign an arms limitation treaty, they will signal the formal opening of a long, complex and politically charged Senate debate.

No one is certain yet if SALT II can be brought to a final vote on the Senate floor in 1979, or whether the decision to accept or reject the treaty will carry over into the 1980 presidential election year.

On one assessment, everyone agrees: there are not 67 sure votes in favor of the treaty and there are not 34 certain votes against it.

Those are the critical numbers. Senate approval of the treaty will require a two-thirds majority of those voting — 67 votes if all 100 senators are recorded.

In the forefront of the fight for approval will be Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, a member of the Senate Armed Services committee; Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., assistant majority leader, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Among the leading opponents ar likely to be Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and a group of Republican conservatives led by Sen. Jake Garn, D-Utah.

But the important figures to watch are a small number of senators who have insisted they still are uncommitted. They include Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.; Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who says he's leaning against approval; Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee; Sen. Sam Nunn., D-Ga., a younger member with growing influence on military affairs, and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who says he wants to support the treaty but has doubts about the U.S. ability to be sure the Soviets don't cheat.

One group of opponents, led by Sens. George McGovern, D-S.D., and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., argues that the treaty fails to go far enough in cutting back on strategic arms. They say that the president is prepared to go ahead with such systems as a new mobile intercontinental missile in order to win the votes of senators concerned that the United States has agreed to too many limitations on weapons.

But the principal arguments of opponents will be that the treaty enables the Soviets to surpass the United States in strategic capabilities; that it fails to counter the possibility that by the mid-1980s the Soviets could wipe out the U.S. land-based missile force wih a first strike, and that there is no way of being certain that the Soviets are complying with many of the limitations.

Listing Of Concessions Shows Weapons Intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — With negotiations on the SALT II treaty all but completed, attention now turns to the question of which side, if either, got the better of the deal.

In the United States, the Senate will pass the ultimate judgment on that question. In Moscow, the Supreme Soviet will decide, but its agreement is a virtual certainty.

Briefings and interviews with administration officials and well-informed critics of the treaty make it possible to list the major concessions made by each side, even though a text has not yet been published.

The United States conceded defeat in one of its early SALT II goals. American negotiators could not prevent the Soviets from catching up to and in some respects surpassing the United States in missiles with multiple warheads (MIRVs).

The United States pioneered in MIRV development in the early 1970s, placing three warheads atop each land-based Minuteman III missile. The Soviets caught up while the SALT II negotiations were in progress.

Now, the Soviets have a new generation of land-based missiles, the SS-17, 18 and 19 with six, ten and four warheads, respectively. The new American land-based missile, the 10-warhead MX, will not be deployed until 1986.

The best the United States could get from the Soviets was, essentially, a freeze in their current MIRV force. The freeze will restrain the Soviets from adding extra warheads to their missiles or deploying more of them.

First, the treaty does not cover either the American bombers based in Europe or the strategic forces of American allies such as Great Britain and France, even though all of those weapons are capable of hitting the Soviet Union.

That American negotiating victory became somewhat hollow, however, when the Soviets began deploying intermediate-range Backfire bombers that fit into the same exemption the United States insisted upon for its F-4 and FB-111 bombers in Europe.

Under the treaty, the United States would be able to mount an average of 28 cruise missiles in a heavy bomber, or 20 in a B-52. Each bomber would count as one strategic weapon under the ceiling of 1,320 for multiple warhead weapons.

Third, the Soviets agreed to the U.S. proposal for equal totals of strategic weapons on each side, rather than the unbalanced totals in SALT I. The totals are not as low as the Carter administration wanted, but they are low enough to force the Soviets to dismantle some 250 operational weapons.

The United States also reserved the right to develop the MX and the Trident submarine. And the Soviets, of course, have the right to match all of those developments. The history of strategic arms competition indicates that they will probably do so.

Watson Heads Nelson Golf Field

DALLAS (AP) — Defending champion Tom Watson heads a classy field for the $300,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic beginning Thursday, and the tournament's namesake, Lord Byron himself, believes Watson will become a three-time winner at the Preston Trail Golf Club.

"Tom is playing so well, and I'm goin to stay with him even if I am a little prejudiced," said Nelson, who on occasion has helped Watson straighten out his game. "It's the best field ever."

Nine out of the 10 current leading money winners on the Professional Golfers Association tour were entered. Only Fuzzy Zoeller, whose wife had a baby over the weekend, was absent.

Nelson said he hasn't worked with Watson this year — a campaign in which the Kansas City native with the Huckleberry Finn features has sacked $232,674. Watson missed the Houston Open last week.

"The work I do with Tom is exaggerated," said Nelson. "I stay away from his game unless he wants me. If he asks, then I'm available."

"My golf has been so bad I've been ashamed to put it before a group of people," said Nelson, who once won 11 consecutive tournaments, a record not likely to be equalled. "I had been shooting in the low 80s. I've worked on my game enough recently to cut four strokes off."

George Gervin and James Silas combined for 51 points and Larry Kenon had three key points in the final 32 seconds Wednesday night as San Antonio shaded Washington 116-114 to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven NBA Eastern Conference final series in San Antonio.

Trailing 107-93 with 6:35 remaining in the game, the dogged Bullets clawed back to within one point, 113-112, when Kevin Grevey hit a follow up with 56 seconds remaining.

The usually explosive Kenon, shackled on only eight points up to that moment in the game, stuffed a rebound to give the Spurs a 115-112 lead with 32 seconds remaining. After Washington missed a shot, Kenon got the ball but was called for traveling and the Bullets closed the gap to 115-114 when Elvin Hayes put in follow up shot with 11 seconds remaining.

Washington's Bobby Dandridge committed his sixth foul when he nicked Kenon with three seconds remaining. The San Antonio forward then converted one of two free throws to give San Antonio its 116-114 lead.

Gervin finished with 29 points and Silas had 22, 18 of them in the second half. Reserve guard Mike Gale added 14 for the Spurs.

Dandridge finished with 28 before fouling out, 20 of those coming in the second half. Grevey, who has been mired in a slump throughout the playoffs, snapped his skid with 27 points.

Second Time Around

IN TEXAS TECH track geography, the world has been just the Southwest Conference and a couple of extra stops along the way. But, today, coach Corky Oglesby is happily waving a copy of Track & Field News — and showing it to everyone within sight.

Chances are, he'll seek out a few folks, just to point out a line of type to them. the one in the 800-meter dash column which reads, "James Mays, Texas Tech. . . 1:47.14." And it's second down the list.

This is what has Oglesby so delirious. Seems that above Mays' name is only one other. And that that means is that the Raider runner is ranked — or was through competition of last weekend — the second-fastest halfmiler in the world this spring.

Only thing, as Oglesby — and Mays — realize, is that with that F&FN ranking, it still takes quarter (or more) to get a cup of coffee. And, come Saturday, it will mean nothing without additional production.

MAYS RAN THAT 1:47.14 in El Paso last month, finishing behind the current world leader, Scott Poehling of Nebraska. So, the world ranking was good for only a second-place medal.

And, ranked third in the world is Rice's Bruce Gingrich, who has a time of 1:47.17 this season.

Now, Mays and Gingrich have met but once this season. And Gingrich won that.

Sooooo. . .

Come Saturday night — unless something unexpected happens in the Friday preliminaries — in the SWC meet finals, the two adversaries will hook up for the 800-meter title.

That's the way it will be billed, but that's not the way Mays views it all.

"No, by no means do I see it as me and Gingrich," observed the sophomore from Hereford. "There will be six other guys capable of good things in the half. That'd be unfair to say it was between me and Gingrich."

The first time Mays got a look at the Rice runner was at this year's Border

By The Associated Press

Relievers Al Hrabosky and Renie Martin held off a late Texas rally as the Kansas City Royals took advantage of four errors to edge the Rangers 4-3.

Rich Gale, 2-2, scattered six hits in 6 ¾ innings, struck out four and walked two to beat Ferguson Jenkins, 4-1. Jenkins struck out five and walked three. Two of the runs he gave up were unearned.

GIANTS 6, EXPOS 2

Bill Madlock's two-run single capped a three-run fifth inning and Jack Clark's three-run double highlighted a five-run eighth inning that carried the San Francisco Giants and Vida Blue to a 6-2 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Blue became the National League's first six-game winner, scattering 10 hits. He has lost two.

RED SOX 9, ANGELS 8

Carl Yastrzemski's sixth home run of the season, a two-run shot with one out in the ninth inning, vaulted the Boston Red Sox to a 9-8 victory over the California Angels.

Fred Lynn, who had driven in five runs with his 12th and 13th homers of the year, led off the ninth by striking out. But Dave LaRoche, 2-4, walked Jim Rice and Yaz unloaded his homer into the right field seats.

REDS 7, CUBS 4

George Foster ripped a two-run double in the seventh inning to snap a 4-4 tie and carry the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

YANKEES 5, MARINERS 0

Ed Figueroa silenced Seattle on five hits and Reggie Jackson hit a three-run homer to lead the New York Yankees to a 5-0 victory over the Mariners.

Figueroa, 3-3, walked three and struck out two en route to his first shutout and third complete game of the season.

WHITE SOX 5, TIGERS 4

Ralph Garr drew a bases-loaded walk to force in one run and hit a solo homer for another to help the Chicago White Sox defeat the Detroit Tigers 5-4.

Garr's walk scored the first of three runs in the third inning off Milt Wilcox, 2-2. The homer came in the seventh to give the White Sox a 5-3 lead after the Tigers had come back with two runs in the sixth on a homer by Aurelio Rodriguez.

INDIANS 8, BREWERS 7

Bobby Bonds hit a homer and three singles and drove in three runs and led the Cleveland Indians to an 8-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night.

Cleveland reliever Sid Monge committed a bases-loaded balk and gave up two bases-loaded walks in the ninth. The balk triggered a rhubarb in which Indians Manager Jeff Torborg was ejected.

A'S 4, ORIOLES 2

Mike Norris pitched a one-hitter — Gary Roenicke's seventh-inning double — and Mario Guerrero and Jeff Newman drove in ninth-inning runs, giving the Oakland A's a 4-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

PIRATES 17, BRAVES 9

John Milner hit a grand slam home run moments after the first of two near brawls in the ninth inning and Bill Robinson homered twice to power the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 17-9 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Spurs Edge Bullets

Trailing 58-56 at the half, San Antonio outscored the Bullets 20-11 to take a 76-69 lead in the first 6½ minutes of the third quarter. The Spurs backcourt duo of Gervin and Silas had 15 of those points.

The Bullets, refusing to surrender, fought back to within two points, 84-82 with 1:20 remaining, but the Spurs went ahead 89-84 by the end of the quarter.

The Spurs then exploded in the first 5½ minutes of the final period, outscoring Washington 18-9 and building their lead to 107-93 with 6:30 remaining.

The Bullets then reeled off eight consecutive points on baskets by Thomas Henderson, Dandridge, Dave Corzine and Johnson to close the gap to 107-101 with 4:10 remaining.

Washington outscored San Antonio 11-6 over the next three minutes to cut the Spurs' lead to 113-112.

Silas got 12 of his points from the free-throw line, missing only two of 14 attempts. Gervin converted all nine of his free throws and the Spurs had 32 of 40 from the foul lie for the game.

Massive Washington center Wes Unseld, who had burned San Antonio for 40 points and 41 rebounds in the first two games of the series, was held to a mere six points and 18 rebounds for Wednesday night's game.

Nelson Golf Begins

Watson when he arrived Tuesday was, "Hey, I've got my game down four strokes. It's getting better."

Watson, who on Monday gave Jack Nicklaus a putting tip before an exhibition in Spokane, Wash., smiled.

Beyond Watson, Nelson gives Lee Trevino an excellent chance to take the $54,000 first-place prize although Trevino has never won in his home town.

Trevino and Watson exchanged birdie barrages in 1978 before Watson outlasted Super Mex.

"It would be a popular victory if Lee won it," said Nelson. "Lee probably wants to win it worse than anybody."

Watson said he felt confident of winning again.

"It's easier to win where you've won before," he said. "You've been there and you know what to do. I've played this course a lot of times and that makes it easier."

Watson also loves the slick greens.

"I like it hard and fast," said Watson.

Because of a cold, wet spring, the fairways are thin.

"It will favor the better players," Watson said. "On a course like this you've got to hit the ball good. You don't win here just on the greens."

Foyt Posts Top Time In Indy 500 Practice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Veteran A.J. Foyt showed without delay Wednesday that he is a serious contender for his fifth victory in the Indianapolis 500, posting the top practice speed of the day and the month.

Foyt was clocked at 194.007 mph as the pace quickened in preparation for Saturday's opening of qualifications.

In an earlier practice run, Foyt brushed a tire on thewall on the third turnand continued around the 2½-mile oval before pulling into the pits. His car was not damaged and he was not injured.

As has been his custom in recent years, Foyt, who finished seventh in 1978 after winning the race in 1977, didn't spend much time on the track. The 44-year-old Texan, seeking his 22nd start here for the May 27 race, made only a few trips around the track and spent most of the day in the garage.

"I'm a little surprised the speed is at 190," said Jim Hall, who built the Lola which Al Unser drove to victory last year. "I kind of figured 190 would be it, and we're there already."

Hall said he thought the cars were probably operating within U.S. Auto Club limits. In a recent rule change, USAC limited eight-cylinder engines to only 50 inches of boost to make them more competitive with four-cylinder cars.

Other drivers topping 185 mph Wednesday included two-time USAC national driving champion Tom Sneva, 185.033; Gordon Johncock, 185.605; Tom Bagley, 185.261; Bobby Unser, 187.199; Danny Ongais, 189.913; and Sheldon Kinser, 185.

LEGEND RETURNS—A.J. Foyt, the only man to win the Indianapolis 500 mile race four times, prepares to go out for practice for qualifications next Saturday. After a short run where he touched the turn three wall withough damaging the car, Foyt quickly returned to the garage area. (AP Laserphoto)

Guidry Gives Unselfish Attitude About Recent Bullpen Duty

NEW YORK (AP) — The bullpen is more challenging but the starter's role brings greater reward, says Ron Guidry, the New York Yankees' "volunteer fireman" whose unselfishness has pricked the imagination of the baseball world.

"I don't care what I do as long as I help the team to win — winning is the important thing," added the 1978 Cy Young winner who elected to become the team's reliever after a freak injury had sidelined the world champions' Rich Gossage.

"I've even told them I would like to play outfield, but nobody would listen."

Guidry, 28-year-old lefthander known as "Louisiana Lightning" whose 25-3 record was the best in baseball last year, was honored by The Sporting News Wednesday as "Man of the Year."

He received a portrait of himself from the publisher of the baseball weekly, Michael Hadley.

"This is not an award for 'Player of the Year', it's for 'Man of the Year,'" said Hadley. "It represents more than performance, it represents character."

"I wish we could clone Ron Guidry," Rosen said. "I wish we could send him in to pitch every fifth day and also use him in the bullpen. It is delightful to see a young man of his caliber put the interest of the club before his personal interests.

The award by The Sporting News was in the works before Guidry, recognizing the Yankees' need for a relief pitcher, offered to sacrifice his role in the starting rotation.

Manager Bob Lemon, after consulting withthe Yankee higher echelon, leaped on the offer last Saturday, assigning Guidry to relief duty normally a lowly and lonely job.

In Guidry's case, it was different. He became an overnight folk hero. Now every time Guidry, a relief pitcher in the minors, is ordered to the rescue, a wave of electric excitement sweeps through the crowd.

As soon as he has two strikes on a batter, the crowd rises to its feet and starts yelling wildly. The customers expended a lot of lung power Tuesday night when Guidry replaced Jim Beattie in the eighth, retiring six batters in a row — the last four by strikeout — in a 5-3 Yankee victory.

On Sunday, he relieved Catfish Hunter in the seventh, pitching 32-3 innings to gain a 6-5 extra-inning victory over Oakland. Last April 14, in his first relief appearance since 1977, he went in with one out in the ninth and forced Jorge Orta of the White Sox to hit into a double play.

Thus, in three relief appearances, he has two saves and one victory. His ERA is 0.00.

"I may have second thoughts about this," Guidry said. "Everybody says I'm crazy."

SWC Takes Money Stand

HOUSTON (AP) — The Southwest Conference voted at the close of its annual spring meeting Wednesday to hit schools placed on probation in the pocketbook by not allowing them to share in post-season bowl revenue.

"I believe the feeling was widespread that the current process was an insufficient penalty to institutions which in some cases could profit from wrong doing," SWC president Al Witte of Arkansas said at the conclusion of the three-day meeting.

Witte said each SWC school received about $300,000 from bowl revenues last year when four SWC teams played in post-season games.

"This rule is patterned after what the Southeastern Conference did a year ago," SWC commissioner Cliff Speegle said. "I think all the conferences across the country are going to go to a rule like this."

Witte said a school placed on probation in basketball or another sport still would be allowed to receive football bowl game revenues.

SWC faculty representatives also met with Mutual Radio Network officials to discuss last year's SWC broadcast package. Witte said Mutual officials agreed the quality of many broadcasts needed to be upgraded.

"We reviewed all aspects of the conference agreement with Mutual," Speegle said. "That included advertising, time-outs and you name it, we discussed it.

"It was the consensus of both Mutual and the conference that the performance for 1979 will be vastly improved."

Complaints against Mutual's SWC football package last season included frequent commercial breaks during playing time and games being broadcast by outlying stations in metropolitan areas.

Speegle said no action was taken on any investigative matters "that are to be reported."

"We don't release any investigative matters unless they are voted on to be released," Speegle said.

SWC officials had said earlier they did not expect to have a report on an alleged bank loan to a Texas A&M football player.

SWC investigators are trying to determine if defensive tackle Mack Moore received a loan under preferential terms after his transfer to A&M.

In other action, the SWC: approved a request from SWC basketball coaches to pick an all-rookie team; asked the athletic directors to study the administration of the basketball program to make sure it is being promoted fully; increased the baseball practice period from 20 to 30 days in the fall and asked Speegle to lobby nationally for a national letter-of-intent signing on the same day as the SWC letter.

Raider Women Ink Cager

Christie Newman, an all-conference performer at Amarillo College, has singed a letter-of-intent to play basketball for Texas Tech, Raider coach Gay Benson reported.

Miss Newman, a 5-11 athlete who played high school ball at Caprock, is the second cager signed, the other being Nodia Vaughn of Western Texas College.

Miss Newman led her team to a 21-11 season record and 13th spot in the national junior college tournament. She averaged 13.9 points and 5.3 rebounds.

"Her stats speak for the themselves," said Mrs. Benson. "She has a good outside shot and good size. We'll probably use her as our power forward."

Chaps Sign Basketball Recruit

Larry Holt, a 6-3 all-state forward at Portales, N.M., became Lubbock Christian College's first basketball recruit of the year Wednesday.

Holt shot 50 percent from the floor in leading the Rams to a 20-11 record and fourth place in the Class AAA state tournament in New Mexico.

Holt was a first-team all-stater, nominated for McDonald's all-America team and made all-tournament at Clovis and Santa Fe, as well as in the state meet.

He will play in the state high school all-star game in Albuquerque on Aug. 10.

Last season, Holt averaged 15 points and eight rebounds.

Olton Seeks Girls Cage Coach

OLTON (Special)—The high school here is seeking a girls varsity basketball coach.

Interested persons should contact either Joe Turner, superintendent of schools, or Larry Shakleford, athletic director. Both men can be reached at 285-2641.

Holmes To Defend WBC Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes will defend his World Boxing Council heavyweight crown against Earnie Shavers Sept. 14 in Giants Stadium at the Meadowlands complex in East Rutherford, N.J., Jim Spence, vice president of ABC Sports, announced Wednesday.

ABC will show Holmes-Shavers as part of a three-fight show in prime time Friday night. The other two fights have not been determined yet, Spence said.

This will be the third defense of Holmes' title since he won it from Ken Norton last June 9. He beat Shavers March 25, 1978, on a one-sided 12-round decision to qualify for the title shot at Norton.

Shavers, who lost a unanimous decision to Muhammad Ali Sept. 29, 1977, in a bid for universal title recognition, earned his crack at the WBC title by knocking out Norton in the first round last March 23.

Monterey Golfers Set For State Action

AUSTIN (Special)—Monterey High golfers will take the course this morning in quest of a state Class AAAA golf honors.

The team finished second to El Paso Eastwood in the regional meet in Lubbock two weeks ago and is one of eight teams fighting for the state championship.

Play will be on the Morris Williams Municipal course.

In the Class AAAA field—in addition to Monterey and Eastwood—are Tyler Lee, Fort Worth Richalan, Stafford Dulles, Humble, San Antonio Churchill and Seguin.

Slaton, Kermit, Decatur, Joshua, Hardin-Jefferson, Madisonville, Kenedy and Boling have sent teams to battle for the Class AA championship.

Chad Davis of Crosbyton is a single entry in the Class A competition. Teams entered are Stratford, Memphis, Dublin, Big Lake, Bullard, Edgewood, San Antonio Lackland, and Brazos Consolidated.

In B, the field has Booker, Darrouzett, Throckmorton, Saint Jo, Mayperal, Tom Bean, Salado and Valley Mills.

Teeams will play 18 holes today and another 18-hole round Friday in picking state team and individual honors.

Lakers Mum On West's Future

LOS ANGELES (AP) — No decision has been made on the future of Los Angeles Lakers' Coach Jerry West, a spokesman for the National Basketball Assoiation team said Wednesday.

It was reported in March that West, the Lakers' head coach for the past three seasons, had decided to step down from the position at the conclusion of the 1978-79 campaign.

But West made no announcement following the team's loss to Seattle in the second round of the post-season playoffs two weeks ago. He said at that time that a decision would be announced "within a week or 10 days."

Turner Settles For A Chicken

ATLANTA (AP) — Ted Turner, the owner of the last-place Atlanta Braves, is continually searching for a winner but apparently will settle for a chicken.

However, it's not any ordinary chicken, it's the KGB Chicken.

Ted Giannoulas, who made the chicken famous performing his antics at San Diego Padres games, has been fired and barred by a court order from using his feathered costume.

Turner heard about it Tuesday night and immediately reacted.

"What? The KGB Chicken fired? What did he do wrong? Get me that chicken. Get him here next week. I don't know what I'll do with him, but we'll do something," he said.

Turner, however, warned Giannoulas.

"He won't get as much as I offered before. He had a job then. Now, he needs a job," he said.

Turner last year reportedly offered Giannoulas a salary and other incentives which would have totaled more than $100,000 a year.

Rangers Stay With Rotation

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Ed Farmer of the Texas Rangers said he "was nervous" about his first major league starting assignment in five years. And getting hit by a drive off the bat of Kansas City's Fred Patek didn't help matters.

But Rangers Manager Pat Corrales isn't changing his pitching plans just because two Farmer fastballs sent a pair Kansas City players to the disabled list.

"He didn't have much control after he was hit in the arm, but he'll tart again Sunday as scheduled," Corrales said of the 6-foot-5 righthander whose pitches broke the right thumb of second baseman Frank White and the left jaw of right fielder Al Cowens in Texas' 8-7 victory Tuesday night.

Patek singled off Farmer's right arm to lead off the second inning, and Farmer says his arm was numb by the third inning. He had a nasty-looking lump on the arm, but said it would be okay in time for him to start again Sunday against Toronto.

The 29-year-old Farmer's last start had come with Philadelphia in 1974. He missed a couple of seasons because of injuries and had been used as a relief pitcher, although he started regularly while playing in the Dominican Republic last winter.

White was put on the disabled list for 15 days and Cowens for 21 days. White, the Royals' leadoff batter, was hit on the game's second pitch.

"I don't know what their pitching situation is, but the way he was throwing he should have been out of the ball game," said an angry White. "Why risk ruining a whole ball club to give one guy more work? It doesn't make sense."

After Farmer hit Cowens in the fifth inning, he immediately threw a run-scoring wild pitch and Corrales pulled him out.

"He was wild the whole game," said White. "The first pitch he threw me was a curve ball behind me. The next pitch was a fast ball right at me. Then to come back and watch my roommate hit in the face, I was shaking all over. And after he hit Cowens, Pat left him in to throw another pitch.

"I don't know if Pat was hoping he'd settle down, but it was obvious he didn't have any control at all," White said.

Farmer said he was "terribly sorry about what happened. I heard (Royals reliever Al) Hrobosky screaming that it had been deliberate. That's senseless, but I can understand why they felt that way. They just lost two very good players."

The Royals, 15-13, had begun to make a move after getting off to a slow start. Cowens hit safely in 19 of his last 21 games, hitting .354 over the last three weeks. White had hit .370 in his last 13 games.

Herzog called White "the best second baseman I've seen in 30 years of baseball. Both players were playing great. You just don't replace people like that."

NEW ATHLETIC DIRECTOR

POTSDAM, N.Y. (AP) — John Hantz, director of physical education and a faculty member for 26 years, has been named Clarkson College's athletic director effective July 1. Hantz succeeds F. William Fiesinger, who is retiring. Hantz has coached wrestling, soccer and lacrosse at Clarkson.

Skins Release Former All-Pro

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chris Hanburger, an All-Pro linebacker, has been released by the Washington Redskins, the team announced Wednesday.

Hanburger, a 14-year veteran who will be 38 when the 1979 season begins, apparently was caught up in the Redskins' plans to go with youth, a strategy decided on last season after George Allen was fired as coach.

Coach Jack Pardee said, "It was a most difficult decision to release someone like Chris, who I respect and admire.

"He has expressed an interest to play pro football," Pardee said. "In the best interests to Chris, as well as the Redskins, I had to make an early decision where both parties have the time to fulfill our needs prior to the season. Chris has been a great player and a favorite of Redskin fans for years. He will be missed."

This is Dennis Green's first trip to the State track and field meet, all right, but don't go thinking he's already chalking this journey up to experience. No sir.

No, next year never enters the Idalou junior's conversation.

"I'm going to be very disappointed if I don't do awful well down there," said the IHS high jumper. "I haven't choked all season and I hope I don't start now.

"I'm really excited about jumping. I haven't been able to sleep all week. I reall want to do well."

Even if something should happen, '79 has still been a year Green can certainly be proud of. After starting out the season rather slowly, he jumped 6-8 at a meet in Stanford. Then the following week, he leaped 6-10 at the district meet in Tulia, establishing himself as one of the top jumpers in the state.

Green will compete at Memorial Stadium at 6:30 p.m. Friday afternoon. However, the Class AA track events won't take place until Saturday afternoon. Also on tap for Friday evening is the Class AAA running events.

"He's really had a great year," said IHS coach Mike Tannehill. "I think he's capable of jumping 6-10 or 6-11 at State.

"But Dennis' strong point is his consistency. Every day he can go out and jump 6-6 and 6-8 ...every day."

But both Tannehill and Green feel neither 6-6 or 6-8 will win gold in the event, though.

"I think it's going to take 6-10 on the first jump," said Green. "I really don't know how the other jumpers have done. But I suspect everyone can get up there."

Green said he'll "have to really get fired up to clear that height. But if I jump 6-8, I think I can get in the top three."

And what's it going to take to get Green "fired up"?

"Not much," he confessed. "I guess just competing against all the other good jumpers is all it's going to take."

As a sophomore Green didn't have that stellar a season, although he did make it to the Regional Meet. However, at Regionals he placed seventh with a 6-3 3/4 jump.

"As a sophomore he got stuck on 6-0," said Tannehill "And I didn't think he could ever get over that. But at regional he cleared 6-3 3/4 and he's been going up ever since."

"I think the reason I've been doing so well this year is because I've got my steps down a lot better," said Green. "That's probably helped me the most. Also, I just like to jump."

After more than 10 track meets, Green says that the season is "starting to get a little long. I'm sort of tired of it. But then I think what's waiting up ahead (the state meet) and I start to get excited again."

Green really doesn't know who his competition will be when he gets to Austin. But he says it really doesn't matter.

"It could help me that no one really knows each other," said Green. "That way you don't start watching out for just one jumper. Maybe I can just sneak in."

Beat Goes On For Ageless Rose

Playing on a new team, in a new position and no longer a fixture as a leadoff man, the 38-year-old Rose has the Philadelphia Phillies off to one of their fastest starts.

"I knew what he could do on the field, but I wasn't aware of the things he does in the clubhouse said Manager Danny Ozark, whose streaking Phils own one of the best records in the big leagues.

Ozark's month-old experiment that shuffled Rose into the third spot in the batting order is paying dividends for the Phils.

Since the switch, Philadelphia is 19-5 and Rose has been vintage Rose. He drilled three hits Tuesday night, including the decisive two-run 12th inning double, in a 9-7 victory over San Diego to boost his batting average to .340.

Rose landed in Philadelphia last winter for $800,000 a year after his 16-year love affair with the Cincinnati Reds soured.

"Some players are playing hurt. And some are playing with a little more enthusiasm. He's always there on the bench making them think more optimistically and more aggressively," said Ozark.

The decision to drop Rose from the leadoff spot to No. 3 in the batting order came after the Phils got off to a slow start.

"I started off with Bake McBride hitting fifth but it was really screwing him up. With Bake leading off we've got more speed and Pete is perfect for the third spot because he's a switch hitter The No. 3 batter should be your best hitter," explained Ozark.

Noted for torrid spring getaways, Rose leads the club with 33 hits in 26 games and has hit safely in 16 of his last 17 games.

Currently with 2,356 singles, Rose is one single shy of tying Nap Lajoie for sixth place on the all-time singles list. He is 70 singles away from Honus Wagner's all-time mark of 2,426.

Rose, who set a National League record last year with his 44-game hitting streak, is taking aim at his 14th .300 season in 15 years.

But his biggest goal is to help the Phils end their post-season failures. Since 1975, Philadelphia has been one of baseball's biggest regular season winners, only to lose three straight NL playoffs.

Olympics. It was Tech's first outdoor competition, and Mays had to watch as Gingrich won in 1:49.7 and Mays finished in 1:50.1.

• • •

"HE'LL TRY TO sit back (in the group) until we get to the 550 mark," said Mays, "and then he'll explode. Starting that backstretch, he'll take off like a shot. And, if he's in the lead (there), he'll just kill you.

"If I have a chance, I'll have to take that (strategy) away from him, just try to deny him the lead, and really be conscious of him about that 550 mark."

• • •

THERE WAS NO way to forecast such a year as 1979 for Mays, the way he ran last year. When the SWC race was run last year, Mays was a spectator; he finished fifth in his preliminary heat and didn't make the finals.

There was plenty of basis to forecast that Gingrich would be on hand again. As Mays watched in '78, Gingrich hit the tape in 1:49.8. But he was disqualified for cutting in and stripped of his title, his medal and the 10 points to go with it.

So, there will be incentive for both the men.

• • •

A YEAR AGO, Mays finished a disappointing season. This year, it's been quite successful — with sub-1:50 halves coming just about every week, along with a winning anchor lap on the two-mile relay at Texas and a second-place in the Drake Relays. That's after a poor year as a freshman.

Mays is aware of the turnaround. And he knows why.

"I didn't play basketball (this winter)," he observed Wednesday, prior to taking off for Austin and this weekend's meet. "And, I'm a little more dedicated. Also, I worked harder in the off-season; that's the bulk of it."

JAMES MAYS

Mays ran indoors this time and won the SWC 600-yard dash. The next night, as SWC champion, he competed in a meet at Baton Rouge where some of the top athletes in the country were on hand.

"Indoors (competition) built my confidence up. It made me aware I could run against some good competition. I had an interest before, but now, I'm anticipating this meet. I'm kinda fired up.

"I'm surprised (about the world ranking); I'd thought some of the foreign countries would be further along in their season.

"But (from last year), I don't think I was really in shape, I was inexperienced; I just wish I could do it all over again.

"I just have to try to make up for lost time."

Steinbock Set For State Meet

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Charleson Steinbock will be the first to admit that during the state track meet last year he got a little cornbread caught in his throat.

"Hey," recalled the Lazbuddie senior, "I kinda choked down there bad."

As a sophomore the 5-11, 150-pound pole vaulter had placed second with a vault of 12-6. But then came last year's disaster when be wound up in sixth.

"I got real nervous and had a bad practice day on Thursday," recalls Steinbock. "And I continued to worry about it on Friday. Then on Saturday, I couldn't even hang onto the pole, my hands were sweating so bad."

But he admits that the setback of a year ago may have been the best thing that every happened, believe it or not.

"It made me work a lot harder this year," said the state-bound trackster. "Last year was really embarrassing, and I didn't want that to happen again this year."

Vaulter To Beat

Steinbock established himself as one of the vaulters to beat in the Class B ranks by clearing 14 feet during a State Qualifiers Meet here last week.And because he did clear the 14-0 mark and barely missed at 14-6, Steinbock feels 15-0 is certainly within his reach in Austin. Steinbock, like the other Class B athletes, will compete on Saturday afternoon.

He is also loaded down with plenty of confidence.

"When I was a sophomore I went down there and said, 'Wow, I'm at the state meet,' Then last year I started off bad and things got wore," Steinbock observed.

"But this year, I'm not nervous at all, I'm really excited. I'm looking forward to it. I'm ready to go out and compete."

Steinbock To Compete In Long Jump

Steinbock will also compete in the long jump with teammate Russell Windham. But he says that is basically for fun, the pole vault is where he'll pull out his business card.

"I could be in contention for a medal, I think," said Steinbock. "But Russell (Windham) has really been coming on strong. He'll be hard to beat."

Windham, although only a sophomore, won the Region I-B title in Levelland by leaping 21-2¼, while Steinbock was second at 20-1¼. Joel Williams of Milano has the best jump, 22-2¼, in Class B.

And how does Steinbock like competing against Windham, he was asked?

"Well, Russell is one of my best friends, but when we go out there to compete we go out there to beat each other. I want to beat him just as bad as he wants to beat me," explained Steinbock.

Talking about the key to his success the past three years, Steinbock said: "I'll have to say good coaching. Coach (Dewayne) Sexton has really helped me out a lot. I'm been fortunate to have a good coach like him."

Sexton is such a good guy, he is planning to drive to Austin this morning, while Windham and Steinbock will fly.

Steinbock believes Wayne Evans of Navarro — the vaulter he tied for second as a sophomore — will be his top competition. Evans has reportedly sailed 14-8, Steinbock said.

"I'm excited about getting back down there," said Steinbock. "I hope to bring back a medal to the South Plains."

LCC Drops In Rankings

Lubbock Christian College dropped out of the NAIA's top ten in the final poll of the year.

The Chaparrals, who will play in the District VIII tournament at Arlington this weekend, finished 11th in the national rakings.

HOCKEY FARM CLUB

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Flames of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday that the Birmingham Bulls will serve as the club's principal farm team next season. Flames general manager Cliff Fletcher also announced that the Bulls will be coached by John Brophy, who coached the Bulls in their final season of play in the World Hockey Association.

International Series Scheduled In U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — The eighth annual United States-Japan collegiate "world series" will be played in Japan June 23-July 1, organizers announced Wednesday.

The best-of-seven series will be played in Tokyo, Yokohama and Sapporo. This year's games were originally scheduled to be held in the United States, but since Japan is hosting the 1980 world amateur baseball championship, it was decided to hold the games in Japan for the second consecutive year.

The U.S. nine will be composed of the top players from the 1979 NCAA championships at Omaha, Neb., June 1-7. Japan will select its squad after the all-Japan university baseball championship June 6-10.

The Japanese won the last series in Japan four games to three. The Americans still lead in the series, 5-2.

Big Red Proves Proud Bird With Glowing Wings

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's mid-afternoon at the Frank Washburn residence and the phone's ringing off the hook. That's nothing new, but this particular call is a little out of the ordinary.

"I want to talk to Red," says the caller.

But Mrs Marion Washburn takes the call in stride.

"Listen," she says, "Red's a heck of a flyer, and he's awful smart — but he can't talk.

"And if you want to see him you'd better hurry and come over," she adds. "Because I'm fixing him for dinner."

The caller is horrified.

"No, you can't do that," says the man on the phone. "I've heard too much about Big Red. You've got to let me come see him."

So the visit is arranged and Big Red is shown to the guest. And, boy, does he look sharp — his chest is truly red and, as he struts before his admirers, it puffs out and almost glows.

But somebody makes him mad and in a huff, he flaps his feathers and flies away.

Yes, Big Red is a pigeon — of the homing variety — but he's no ordinary homing pigeon. Red's a racer and one of the best racing pigeons in Lubbock.

Last weekend the Lubbock Racing Pigeon Club entered birds in its longest race of the season. The birds were released in Lafayette, La., approximately 630 miles away — as the pigeon flies.

The club sent 33 birds from seven lofts, and Big Red was the only one to retun in a race time. That was on Sunday and most of the other pigeon owners are still waiting for their birds to get back.

His owners said Big Red flew the course under extremely rough conditions — strong winds and heavy rains for most of the trip — yet he still finished in an average speed of 22 miles per hour.

But that only part of the story.

The Average Racing Pigeon

The average racing pigeon, for you non-pigeon racers, usually needs a rest between races. But not Big Red; the Washburn's usually enter him in every week's race. Invariably the bird is one of the first home.

"This particular bird flies the schedule for Washburn every year," says Tom Noble, president of the pigeon-racing club. "He is singularly responsible for what glory Washburn has had in pigeon racing."

(Off the record, Noble will tell you that the rest of Washburn's birds "ain't nothing to crow about.")

"Red is the only real good bird that I have," admits Washburn. "He's a larger bird, and I guess he has more stamina, but usually big birds don't do very well."

The Washburns got interested in pigeon racing as a hobby when son Matt received the pigeon as a birthday gift. Matt's a junior in high school now and the family is wrapped up in racing.

Even the Washburns — avid pigeon racers that they are — will admit there is a slight twist of the bizarre in the sport, hobby or obsession.

"I like it," says Matt. "But when everyone else comes over they think it's pretty weird."

"I think it's stupid," she says. And that was her last comment on the subject.

Stupid or not, racing pigeons make an interesting topic. Scientists have studied the homing pigeon for years, according to Noble, and still no one knows for sure why they always return to their loft.

A bird flying 630 miles back to Lubbock is one thing, but when you consider that it gets to Lubbock and then pinpoints its own personal loft and drops in — some say that's weird.

Both the male and female pigeons are very attached to their mates and children, though, and that provides one explanation of why they always return.

At least that's the opinion offered by Mrs. Washburn.

"Big Red is just a kind and loving father," she said. "He's always worrying about his children, that's why he's always one of the first home."

And Big Red has sired a lot of offspring. But, for some reason, none of them have turned out to be racers like their old man. It's also doubtful that they are as tough as Big Red.

Last summer, the Washburns returned home one afternoon to find Red floating in the backyard pool — just barely alive.

Big Red has been flying for four seasons now, but this weekend, when the club flies from Austin, the Washburn's plan to give him a rest.

"That last race really took it out of him," said Washburn. "Of course, he might try to go to Austin by himself when he finds out I'm not shipping him down there.

"This bird is something else."

The Legend Of Big Red

Suns Hope To Continue Backboard Domination

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns will have to continue beating Seattle on the offensive boards if they want to capture the National Basketball Association's Western Conference championship, according to Phoenix coach John MacLeod.

At the same time, Seattle coach Lenny Wilkens feels the key to besting the Suns in the best-of-seven series is playing SuperSonics-style basketball.

Game No. 5 in the series, tied 2-2, is scheduled for Friday night in Seattle's Kingdome. The Suns squared things Tuesday night as they dumped the SuperSonics 100-91 for their second-consecutive triumph before a sellout crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

In Sunday's 113-103 victory over Seattle, the Suns won the battle of the offensive boards 24-19. Tuesday, the Suns had a 15-13 edge on the offensive boards. Seattle had overwhelmed the Suns on both the offensive and defensive boards in their two victories.

"I don't feel that we're playing good basketball right now.," said Wilkens. "We're just not doing things instinctively."

Wilkens acknowleged that the Suns are playing well, "but we're doing things that we shouldn't be doing."

"Sometimes we come back down the court, and if our shot selection is poor, that's our fault. If we don't get back on the defensive end when we miss, that's our fault. If our shot selection is poor, that's our fault."

MacLeod attributed much of Seattle's troubles to his team's increased aggressive. In addition, he felt the club's passing has bolstered the offense.

"Everybody talks about Seattle being a good offensive rebounding team, and they are," said MacLeod. "But we're the first team in the NBA that has four players with 300 assists or more in a year. So, we're a pretty good passing team, too."

The Suns handed out 30 assists Tuesday while Seattle tallied 14.

"I think that we can pass the basketball and can run the fast break," added MacLeod.

Wilkins puts it another way: "If you give the other team open shots all the time, you're going to be in trouble."

The sixth game of the series is scheduled for Sunday, beginning at 2:45 CST at Veterans Memorial Coliseum, with the seventh game, if needed, set for May 17 back in Seattle.

Sam Snead won the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament eight times.

Hockey Rangers Take Day Off To Celebrate Win

NEW YORK (AP) — It would be surprising to just about anyone who thinks practice makes perfect. But then again, the New York Rangers are a very surprising hockey club.

They did not schedule a practice Wednesday, as a team might, since the National Hockey League final playoff series begins Saturday. The New York Rangers took the day off. And they played golf.

"Yep, I'm going to try to break 100 again," said John Davidson, who helped carry the Rangers to a six-game upset of the New York Islanders in the semifinal round that ended Tuesday night.

Left wing Steve Vickers played, too. After suffering through four years where the suburban Islanders were New York's team and the Rangers didn't even make the Stanley Cup quarter-finals, Vickers can enjoy 18 holes as a member of the team that has won this city's love.

"I'm glad, in that now I can walk out the front door of my country club out on Long Island," he mused. 'I've had to walk out the back door for the last four years."

That's over now. For the first time since 1972, the Rangers have made the final, and they beat the regular season's best team in getting there.

"I know exactly what they'll do. They'll go on a three-day drunk like I usually do, then wake up one morning and say, 'Let's get the heck out of here,' and go to Florida," said Vickers.

The Rangers have a different destination, though they won't know what it is until the Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens have played the seventh game of their semifinal tonight.

"Whoever it is (the Rangers play), they'd better be ready," said defenseman Denis Potvin after the Islanders made the semifinals for the fourth time in their seven-year history — and lost for the fourth time. "I just hope the Rangers' luck and tenacity will carry them through."

At least one Rangers player, Anders Hedberg, sees no reason why it shouldn't. "Why not?" asked the Swedish-born right wing who joined the team last summer after signing a two-year contract worth some $600,000 per year. "I don't think any of us dreamt of being in the Stanley Cup finals when we came to training camp last fall."

Defenseman Dave Maloney went one step further. "Any guy in his right mind wouldn't have bet on us at the start of the playoffs," he said.

But this team is different from most. The Rangers hardly ever practiced hockey fundamentals in their workouts, but they buried the Islanders by doing the fundamental things better. They finished 25 points behind the Islanders in the regular season and won only three of the eight games between the clubs, yet they won four of six games in this semifinal; the two they lost came in overtime.

Ruidoso Set To Begin New Season

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — More than $6.5 million in purses is expected to be dished out to horsemen during the 1979 Ruidoso Downs meeting which begins Friday.

That's the word from new general manager Woody Erwin, who reported that the money figure is the highest in the track's 33-year history. In fact, Erwin commented that Ruidoso has set a new record for purses each year since 1972. That year, the figure was $3,237,154. Last year the total reached $6,347,585.

The new season, covering 68 days, gets off the ground Friday and extends through Labor Day. About 1700 horses are expected to be stabled at the track by Friday's program.

Of that $6.5 million in purses, big hunks will go into the world's two richest races. Biggest of all is the All-American Futurity, which packs a purse of $1,280,000 for Labor Day. A week earlier, Ruidoso will stage the 3-year-old counterpart of the Futurity, the All-American Derby.

Once again, the heart of the Ruidoso stakes schedule will be the famed Triple Crown for 2-year-old Quarter Horses. The 2-year-old set is topped by the All-American Futurity, and preceded by the $525,000 Kansas Futurity on June 3 and the $450,000 Rainbow Futurity on July 22.

No horse has yet to sweep all three legs.

For 3-year-olds, the Triple Crown is the All-American Derby, the $200,000 Kansas Derby on May 20 and the $450,000 Rainbow Derby on July 8.

Action will be staged in a basic format of Thursday-through-Saturday racing. First post will be 2:30 p.m., CDT, except for Sundays, when the races will start at 2 p.m. CDT.

Stocks Post Strong Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, saved again by a late rally, ended a see-saw session Wednesday with its biggest gain in two weeks.

Analysts said that lacking any fresh economic or business news to give it guidance, the market was forced to rely on internal forces for its direction.

But traders did seem encouraged by word just before the market closed that the United States had reached an agreement on a Strageic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .17 to 55.96.

New York (AP) — Wed.'s national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.
