U.S. accused of interfering in French affairs

Abdallah

PARIS (AP) — A new French-American row blew up Saturday with Paris accusing Washington of "unacceptable...regrettable interference in French affairs" by criticizing a French court's handling of an alleged terrorist said to be involved in the killing of a U.S. diplomat.

It is most unusual for an embassy to publicly attack decisions of its host country's legal system.

Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond summoned U.S. Charge d'Affaires William Barraclough to express the French indignation.

The problem arose just a week after French President Francois Mitterrand and President Reagan, meeting amid the euphoria of the 100th birthday of the Statue of Liberty, had supposedly patched up U.S.-French relations.

The ties were strained by France's refusal to grant overflight rights to U.S. aircraft that bombed Libya on April 15. France considered the strike an inappropriate response to terrorism purportedly backed by Libya.

The U.S. Embassy in Paris on Friday expressed "surprise" — a heavily charged word in diplomatic language — that a Lyon court sentenced alleged Lebanese terrorist Georges Ibrahim Abdallah to four years on an arms possesions conviction. The four years were "a lighter sentence than we have seen in similar cases in other European countries," said the U.S. statement.

Abdallah has been charged separately in Paris with complicity in the murders of U.S. military attache Col. Charles M. Ray in 1982 and Israeli diplomat Yacov Bartsimentov in 1984.

The embassy, concerned over reports Abdallah might be swapped for French hostages in Lebanon, said it hoped Abdallah "who makes no secret of his violent intentions against Americans, will serve his full term."

Raimond, quoted in a Foreign Ministry communique, said the statement showed "a serious lack of knowledge of the principle of the independence of justice."

The embassy statement also criticized the Lyon prosecutor for referring to Abdallah's crime as political.

"Terrorists should not be allowed to hide behind political labels," the embassy said.

The four years were "a lighter sentence than we have seen in similar cases in other European countries...(It is hoped Abdallah,) who makes no secret of his violent intentions against Americans, will serve his full term....Terrorists should not be allowed to hide behind political labels."

— Statement by U.S. Embassy in Paris

France reportedly had been willing to exchange Abdallah after a Frenchman was released in Lebanon last year, but backed off when a gun, allegeldy used to kill Ray and Barsimentov, was found in an apartment rented in Abdallah's name.

Abdallah's release was demanded by groups who set a series of bombs in central Paris late last year.

U.S. concern that Abdallah might not stand trial in connection with Ray's murder was underscored Friday when the U.S. government and Ray's family became parties to the Paris case against Abdallah, which is being prepared by a French investigating magistrate.

Under French procedure, the magistrate could eventually find there was no case to back the charges against Abdallah, and French newspapers Friday said this was what his lawyers sought.

Such a finding would clear the way for his exchange for one or more of seven French hostages held by guerrillas in Lebanon, the papers said.

By becoming parties, the U.S. government and Ray's family will have full access to the documents of the case.

Several months ago, the United States accused France of allowing a Lebanese terrorist involved in the June, 1985, hijacking of a TWA jetliner to Beirut to enter and leave France without being arrested.

Unemployed trying to cope

More people seek service agency aid

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Plunging oil prices — which have seriously hampered the Permian Basin's economy — are creating more work for some governmental offices.

Agencies such as the Department of Human Services claim they are bogged down in paper work as people in need of help stream through their offices.

The economy also has prompted several other problems such as crowded unemployment offices and busy counseling centers putting people on waiting lists.

"We're seeing a different clientele now than we probably were six or seven years ago," said Joan Morris, income assistance program director for the Permian Basin.

"We've started seeing stable long- term employed people... the people we were seeing were transients," Ms. Morris said.

Ms. Morris' employer, the Department of Human Services, has shown increases in demands for nearly all of its services.

In Midland County, food stamp applications have increased on the average from 252 per month in 1985 to 284 this year. The averages are for six-month periods.

Active cases for Aid to Families With Dependent Children also have increased since last year.

In 1985, the department averaged 402 cases per month. This year, it has jumped to 510.

Ector County has shown similar increases.

The result has been overtime for state employees, sheaths of paperwork and long waiting lines, department officials say.

"We're trying to keep our heads above water just to keep the applications worked," Morris said.

Another problem, officials say, is the low criteria of the aid programs.

Even people who may need help cannot qualify.

Ex-oil company employee will never turn down oil-related job

Darrell and Sharon Rhea say they live day to day, struggling to make ends meet.

What used to be a steady income is now unemployment benefits, cake decorating jobs and part-time softball scorekeeping.

"We used to know what it's like to live from paycheck-to-paycheck," says Rhea, a 32-year-old father.

"Now we know what it's like to live from day to day."

The Rheas — one of many Midland families affected by the 11.7 percent unemployment rate — are among numerous Permian Basin residents suffering from depressed oil prices.

"Midland has produced some tough people. Strong people that have been able to survive...Midland has produced some good people and that's another reason why we won't be leaving. When this is over, the people that are left will be the best."

— Darrell Rhea

The family, who lives in a modest brick home in west Midland, has not always lived so precariously.

In March, Rhea was an assistant manager at an oil company bringing home about $16,000 a year. Today, he and his wife earn about $9,000 a year.

Town salutes woman escaped convict had taken hostage

GILMER, Texas (AP) — The morning after the quiet capture of a jail escapee called "Animal," crowds of cheering citizens Saturday packed the lawns of the Upshur County Courthouse to salute a woman the escapee had held hostage during his two-day flight.

The celebration had been planned in honor of the safe return of Rosalie Williams, a deputy sheriff who was taken hostage by Jerry Walter McFadden, a murder suspect and three-time convicted rapist, when he broke out of jail Wednesday night.

Mrs. Williams escaped unharmed from McFadden Thursday night.

McFadden, 38, who was armed with a .38-caliber revolver, surrendered quietly Friday night when police found him in a vacant house in the community of Big Sandy near here.

He was caught not far from the spot where Mrs. Williams escaped the night before after spending 16 hours captive in a boxcar with the fugitive.

"He knew that he was a loser, and he wanted to surrender as peacefully as he could," said Chief Deputy Rick Allen of Collin County, whose men surrounded McFadden.

Convicted of three rapes to which he pleaded guilty, McFadden has been charged with capital murder in the rape and strangulation of Suzanne Harrison, 18, of Hawkins.

■ Escapee's wife says he's kind-hearted father, other story — 2, 10A

Her body and the bodies of another young woman and a young man were found in May after the three had gone on a lake outing and disappeared.

"Jerry is a very dangerous man," Mrs. Williams said Friday. "I believed he might kill me at any time.

On Saturday, she and her husband, state trooper Eddy Williams, and their 4-year-old son rode around the courthouse square in a bright red convertible in a small parade that was heralded by a blast of fire engine sirens and the rousing beat of a brass band.

"God has heard us all. He's heard us all," she told the crowd as she stood on the bandstand and accepted the key to the city from Mayor Jake Dupree.

Economists beginning to predict recession

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite forecasts by government and most private economists for a strong rebound in the second half of 1986, the U.S. economy appears stuck in low gear.

And with recent economic indicators underscoring this weakness, forecasters — even those in the Reagan administration — are revising their projections downward. Some economists are even beginning to mention that unmentionable: a recession.

"There is a 30 percent chance that we'll have a recession in the second half. We don't see any signs of strength around," said Michael Evans, president of an economic forecasting service here.

Evans had originally projected a 4 percent increase in the Gross National Product, the broadest measure of the nation's economic health, for July-December. Now he says that even if a recession does not materialize, growth for the second half will be no more than 2 percent.

Evans acknowledged that he's more pessimistic than many economists. But others said that they're once again beginning to think about the possibility of a new recession.

Police: Man arrested prior to his death

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

A man who may have been murdered in a northeast Midland field was arrested four times before his death, Midland police said Saturday.

Police identified the man as a 29-year-old Midlander, but said they could not release the name until next-of-kin had been notified.

The man's body was identified Saturday morning through fingerprint records, said Midland police Det. Sgt. B.G. Johnson.

The man's parents moved in May from Midland to Oklahoma, police said.

Detectives late Saturday night were trying to reach the parents.

The man was arrested three times by Midland police in 1982 and then arrested again in 1984 before his death, Johnson said.

All arrests involved misdeameanors for public intoxication and traffic violations, Johnson said.

No charges were filed in any of the arrests, he said.

Police said they did not know if and where the man was employed.

"We can't find anyplace where he was working, but we don't know if he was working," Johnson said.

The nude body was discovered about 10 a.m. Friday by two girls riding horseback, Johnson said.

Judge: UTPB needs more Hispanics

From Staff and Wire Reports

The University of Texas at the Permian Basin should have more Hispanics enrolled, said a retired U.S. district judge.

Judge Reynaldo Garza of Brownsville said UTPB, an upper-division school in Odessa with about 130 Hispanics among its 1,900 students, should have more Hispanic students.

The judge made the comments Friday after the Select Committee on Higher Education decided not to colse any state universities.

"Somebody ought to do something about about recruiting these people who are not going to college," Garza said.

UTPB President Duane Leach said Saturday night he had not heard about the judge's comments.

But he said the reason his school does not have many Hispanics is because it recruits primarily from Odessa and Midland junior colleges.

Leach said about 90 percent of UTPB's students come from the two junior colleges.

He said the junior colleges do not have a large Hispanic enrollment.

"If students are not enrolled there (Midland and Odessa colleges), it is very unlikely they would continue their eduction at UTPB," Leach said.

State Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston and a committee member, said many state universities should increase efforts to recruit minority students.

"They see their role as educating white kids, not Hispanic kids and black kids," Luna said.

"These institutions are in a changing environment. When you find yourself in a changing environment, you adapt or you die."

The committee also heard staff presentations on possible mergers that would pair UTPB with Texas Tech, West Texas State, Midwestern State and Sul Ross.

AID

To qualify for Aid to Families with Dependent Children, applicants must first have an insufficient income.

An insufficient income depends on the size of the recipient's family.

In addition, an applicant must have $1,000 or less in countable resources.

The average earnings of employed families receiving AFDC is about $1,389, or less than one-fifth the $8,220 annual poverty level for a family of three.

To receive food stamps, applicants must have $1,500 or less in countable resources. There are also other guidelines for households of two or more and persons 60 or older.

Cars used to earn income, homes and surrounding property are exempt in determining a family's resources.

The bust also has spurred an increase in people needing unemployment benefits.

In December of 1985, 330 people applied for unemployment. That figure jumped to 548 the next month, and 630 in February. In March 951 applied, and in April applications went as high as 1,069.

Applications began to decrease in May with 977 and in June applications dropped again with 919.

Bob Burke, former Midland director of the Texas Employment Commission, said the trend is unique.

"In the past, a number of workers in this area would have avoided filing for unemployment compensation as a matter of principle.

"When people find out they are going to be laid off, they are more amiable to filing a claim."

Midland's unemployment rate is 11.7 percent. Odessa's rate is 16 percent.

Burke said the hike in claims also has prompted long waiting lines in his office and forced his staff to work overtime.

But he said he sympathizes.

"Most people losing their jobs have nothing whatsoever to do with it," he said. "There's a feeling of loss of self-worth. They shouldn't feel that."

Also, people who are still working have been affected, said Perry Marchioni, Samaritan Counseling Center clinical director.

Officials with Family Services of Midland and the Samaritan center both report increases in people seeking counseling since January.

Marchioni said his center broke a record in January by seeing 40 new clients — twice as many as those who usually seek help.

In February the center saw 35 new clients, 44 in March, 42 in April and 51 in May.

In June the center was forced to begin a waiting list with 30 people.

Marchioni attributed the increase to the area's depressed economy and to cutbacks at state mental health agencies.

"We see a low percentage of the unemployed worker. Coming into a mental health agency may just be too big of an embarrassment for an individual," Marchioni said.

But the majority that seek counseling are fearing layoffs and unemployment, he said.

"Almost every company is talking about cutbacks and that's got people worried. Even though they may be employed, they're still faced with the problem of job loss," Marchioni said.

RHEA

Rhea says he thought he made a good career move when he joined the oil company. But after six months on the job he was laid off.

He had made a mistake.

"I didn't have but five minutes notice when it happened. I felt betrayed."

The layoff was a "kick in the teeth," says Rhea's 28-year-old wife, Sharon.

"I felt so betrayed. They asked him to leave a job he already had," she said.

Now, Rhea spends his days filling out job applications and mailing resumes. He works part-time as a scorekeeper while Mrs. Rhea bakes and decorates cakes.

But the oil prices also have hurt the cake decorating business, Mrs. Rhea said.

"People just can't afford the big weddings. They cut back on what they want or ask me just to decorate," she said.

Unlike many who are looking for better times elsewhere, the Rheas say they are determined to stick the bust out.

"Both of our families live in Midland. We just have roots too deep to pull them up and go somewhere else," Rhea said.

Rhea said he is used to the roller-coaster oil industry because his father worked several jobs in the Texas oil patch.

"The oil industry has always been a part of my family as long as I can remember. I can remember some real tough times when I was growing up," he says.

And while others are leaving the oil industry to find jobs in different fields, Rhea says he will never turn down an oil-related job offer.

"Pride and disbelief in the oil industry is not going to be putting food on the table," Rhea says.

But Rhea wasn't always so optimistic.

After he lost his job he was depressed and eventually sought his pastor's advice.

"I had a long talk with my pastor. There are some things he made me aware of that I really hadn't thought about before — little hidden blessings."

Rhea says one benefit springing from his layoff is that he can spend more time with his 4-year-old son Dusty.

"Dusty is going to hate it when he (Darrell) goes back to work," Mrs. Rhea said.

The crisis also has brought the Rheas closer to their friends.

"This is the opportunity to find out who true friends are. When times were good, you wouldn't think about that.

"Now they are coming out of the woodwork to let you know they are thinking about you, which is something that wouldn't happen before," Rhea said.

The unstable nature of the oil industry has toughened up many Midlanders, Rhea says.

"Midland has produced some tough people. Strong people that have been able to survive.

"Midland has produced some good people and that's another reason why we won't be leaving. When this is over, the people that are left will be the best," Rhea says.

Says Rhea: "I'm not going to give up hope and I feel like I'm going to be a survivor.

Escapee's wife says he's kind-hearted father

DALLAS (AP) — The man called "Animal," a thrice-convicted rapist accused of murder who led police on a two-day East Texas manhunt, is a kind-hearted father to his stepchildren, his wife says.

To a former employer, Jerry Walter McFadden is a hard worker. But to law enforcement officers, he's "a vicious animal."

McFadden, 38, a suspect in the murder of an 18-year-old woman, escaped from the Upshur County Jail in Gilmer Wednesday night.

Bearded, barefoot and 220 pounds, he led some 200 law officers on a two-day search of a hilly, wooded section of East Texas before he was captured Friday night, giving up without a fight.

His easy surrender was but another unpredictable chapter in a lifetime of contradictions.

His wife of 10 months, Sherry McFadden, told the Dallas Times Herald she had never heard him called by his nickname, "Animal."

"The only nickname I ever heard Jerry called was 'Mule,'" she said. "The guys he worked with called him that because he's so big and is such a hard worker...We do love Jerry and when you love somebody, you just don't turn it on and off."

She called him a kind-hearted "Daddy" to his stepchildren.

Tom "Bull" Barnett, police chief of Haskell in West Texas where McFadden grew up, said, "He was just a kid ...just a typical ol' wild boy. He never did nothing bad, but he never did stand for nothing good."

McFadden dropped out of school in the eighth grade and began working in the oil fields as his father had done before him. During those years he wound up in jail a couple of times for misdemeanors, said former Haskell County Sheriff Garth T. Garrett.

By the early 1970s, McFadden had married his first wife and they were expecting their second child, acquaintances said.

But in 1973, a Haskell school teacher identified McFadden as the man who pulled a knife on her and raped her. During the investigation that followed, authorities learned McFadden was charged in the rape of a 14-year-old Denton girl.

He pleaded guilty to both rapes and was sentenced to 15 years in prison, getting out on parole after five years in 1978.

Bill Kitchen hired McFadden to work at his oil field construction company where he described him as "an average guy. You'd never know he'd been in any trouble. There were no violent outbreaks or anything unusual about him. He showed up every day and on time."

Kitchen said McFadden was happy and "worked 10 hours a day. He was trim, fit. I wished I'd had about 20 more like him."

Several months later, however, McFadden was accused of abducting an 18-year-old secretary from Kitchen's office in Hamlin. The woman was raped repeatedly.

She was choked and left for dead along the Brazos River. In a plea bargain, McFadden pleaded guilty and got a 15-year prison sentence.

Woodrow Simmons, the former sheriff in Jones County, where McFadden was jailed for after the secretary's rape, called him "a vicious animal. He has no conscience... and would do anything to anybody to satisfy his desires."

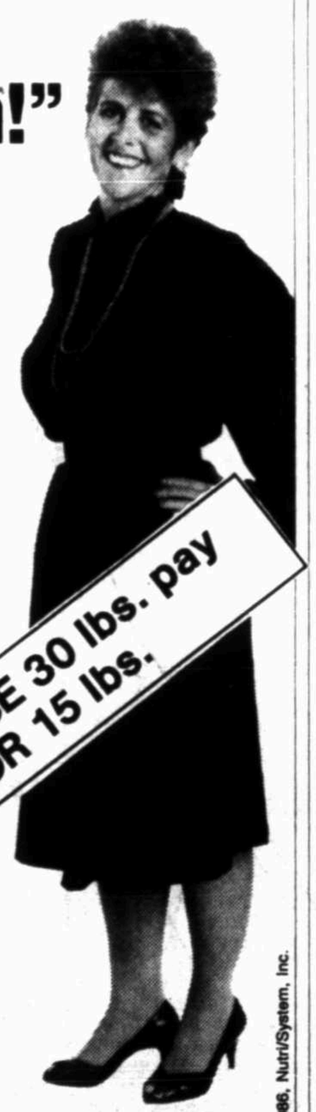

But Kitchen said McFadden was "a pretty square character until the thing over in Hamlin happened. Something just sort of triggered it. He was out from Huntsville (prison) and away he went.

"There always would be a period of time that he'd be a good boy, but then something would happen...He just went crazy."

Yellow ribbons and balloons fluttered from trees and businesses and many of the onlookers wept as Mrs. Williams made a few tearful remarks that were mostly inaudible above the noise of the crowd.

"I have a lot to do here," she said. "Thank you, thank you so much."

She was was feted by the crowd of more than 500 in an impromptu celebration arranged Friday by Dupree and Gilmer Fire Department member Cloddie Henson.

Lifetime Gilmer resident Nancy Hendrix said the celebration is the community's way of expressing relief over Mrs. Williams' safe return.

"We want to give her honor and to show her that we was all praying and thinking about her in her time of trial," Mrs. Hendrix said.

She and her husband, Buddy, ride with the Upshur County mounted patrol and were among those who searched for the three missing Hawkins youths two months earlier.

"We were hoping we wouldn't have to ride and look for Rosalie," Mrs. Hendrix said.

"We care about everyone in our community and when the times are rough, we'll pull together."

McFadden, who wears a tattoo that says "Death before dishonor before the Lonesome Loser," was charged early Saturday after his capture with aggravated kidnapping, attempted capital murder, escape and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, said his lawyer, Vernard Solomon.

Bond was denied on two charges and was set at $60,000 on the other two charges.

Jailer Stacy Mullinix said the outpouring of concern Saturday is because Mrs. Williams has many friends here. Ms. Mullinix was one of the deputies McFadden overpowered when he abducted Mrs. Williams.

"She never said a word, she never said a word the whole time we were up there," Ms. Mullinix said, referring to when Mrs. Williams was taken hostage.

McFadden made Mrs. Williams lock Ms. Mullinix and another deputy in a jail cell.

According to the woman jailer, after Mrs. Williams got away she told Ms. Mullinix, "There I was out there with him and I was worried about you locked in that cell."

ECONOMY

"We're telling our clients of the risks of a weaker-than-had-been-expected second half, and even of a recession arising," said Sandra Shaber, director of consumer economics for Chase Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

"That's not what we're forecasting," she quickly added. "We're still hoping that the Fed will keep the economy afloat...A lower discount rate and similar actions can't really do much at this point to get growth going again. But we're hoping that these steps can at least ward off a recession."

The Federal Reserve Board, citing the period of slower-than-expected economic growth, moved last week to cut the discount rate, the fee it charges for loans to banks and other financial institutions, from 6.5 percent to 6 percent.

It was the third cut of a year that began with the discount rate at 7.5 percent. But, while major banks followed the Fed's lead by cutting their prime lending rates to 8 percent on Friday, most analysts suggested that the latest interest rate reduction would only have a slight impact on the economy's overall well-being.

The Reagan administration last winter projected that GNP growth for all of 1986 would be an even 4 percent.

They had made a similar forecast the year before, but the GNP grew only by an anemic 2.2 percent in 1985 — down sharply from the 6.5 percent posted in 1984 at the height of an economic recovery that began in late 1982 and is still continuing, if at a much reduced pace.

On July 22, the Commerce Department will release its preliminary figures for the GNP for the second quarter of 1986 — April through June — and private analysts are generally predicting it will come it at scarcely more than 2 percent.

Budget Director James Miller III, who had been scheduled to release a White House midsession review of the economy this coming Tuesday, last week postponed the report until Aug. 4 — in part to await the new GNP figures.

The size of the 1986 federal deficit will increase as the GNP falls short of the original 4 percent growth forecast. A larger deficit will make it harder to meet deficit-reduction targets enacted by Congress.

OMB spokesman Edwin L. Dale Jr. said there is now a "better than 50-50 chance" that the deficit for 1986, originally projected by the White House for $208 billion, will top the $212 billion 1985 deficit.

Private analysts suggest that the deficit may go as high as $220 billion, despite all the attention to deficit reduction.

"Do not surprised if the assumptions for economic growth and maybe even other variables are slightly different in the Aug. 4 report than they were in the president's budget of last February," Miller alerted reporters last week at a White House briefing.

Robert Ortner, the chief economist for the Commerce Department, said the current "sluggishness of the economy" can be seen by the fact that inflation is nearly non-existent.

Even though the oil price plunge of early 1986 has just about exhausted itself, prices across a wide spectrum of products showed no net change in June from May, according to the Labor Department's Producer Price Index, which was released on Friday.

In fact, the report showed that so far this year, wholesale prices have decreased at an annual rate of 6.5 percent — the largest half-year drop since the government began keeping such records in 1947.

At the same time, the U.S. trade deficit widened by $2 billion last month to $14.2 billion, suggesting that the turnaround expected from recent declines in the value of the dollar against other major currencies was still a long way off.

MAN

Police said Friday the body had at least one stab wound and indicated there may have been a struggle prior to the man's death.

"Everything points that there was violence out there, but we can't prove he was the victim or the aggressor. We have to get a lot of other points covered before we can say anything like that," Johnson said.

The case is still under investigation, he said.

"Until we get full results of the autopsy, we're still working on the assumption that it may be a homicide," Johnson said.

Although the preliminary autopsy was finished Friday afternoon, a final autopsy report may take up to several weeks to complete, Johnson said.

Two Midlanders report their vehicle tires slashed

From Staff Reports

Two Midlanders reported their tires slashed Friday evening, the Midland Sheriff's department reports.

Bob Owens, of rural Midland, told Sheriff's officers four of his tires worth $600 were slashed between 11:30 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday. The damage was done to a white 1977 Chevy pickup, reports said.

Fred Rodriguez Jr., who lives on the northwest corner of County roads 116 and 1220, told officers two of his tires were also slashed Friday night.

About $150 damage was done sometime Friday night or early Saturday morning to two tires on a blue 1981 Chevy pickup, reports said.

In other law enforcement reports, Danny Howell, 3717 Anetta, told deputies a $1,500 stereo was taken from his home within the last 10 days.

Howell's residence is located at the corner of south Midkiff and County Road 116.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A thousand mourners, some clenching their fists in defiance of emergency decrees, sang banned songs and chanted outlawed slogans at a funeral Saturday in Soweto.

In another neighborhood of the sprawling black township outside of Johannesburg, scores of families packed their possessions and fled their homes to escape street battles between migrant workers and local radical youths. The Meadowlands residents told local reporters the fighting in the past few days left five people dead and five homes had been burned.

Before the national state of emergency was declared June 12, funerals had been one of the few outlets for black political demonstrations. But they have been sharply curtailed in the past four weeks under rules that outlaw most public gatherings in black townships and limit funeral corteges to 200 people.

Saturday's cortege in the Orlando neighborhood, estimated by a reporter as five times that size, set out from the home of the dead man, a 19-year-old who was reportedly killed last week while trying to burn down the house of a Soweto council member.

The government Bureau for Information said Friday that 62 percent of the deaths during the month-long state of emergency were blacks killed by blacks, particularly in townships where differences of opinion over fighting the apartheid system have turned into violent disagreements.

David Venter, a bureau research chief, said Friday the emergency laws were a success because the number of such killings had decreased.

The funeral march Saturday proceeded for two minutes, until the marchers were ordered into vans and cars. But as they drove to the cemetery, some opened car windows and raised clenched fists, an act that has been outlawed under the emergency decree.

The slogans they chanted and the African anthem they sang after the 4½-hour graveside service were also illegal under the regulations which prohibit statements deemed subversive.

The regulations forbid reporting any activity or even the presence of security forces during the funeral without permission from the government. Chief spokesmen of the Bureau for Information and the South African Police would not comment on the events in the Orlando neighborhood.

In Meadowlands, police stood guard around the Mzimhlope Hostel, home to about 800 migrant workers, mostly Zulus. Witnesses have reported nightly raids between the fighting factions since police arrived Friday.

The police activities in Meadowlands can be reported because the government does not consider the factional black fighting part of the anti-government "unrest" that spawned the emergency decrees.

U.S. soldiers advised to keep out of Juarez

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Military personnel in El Paso, Texas, have been advised to avoid this border city just across the Rio Grande over the weekend, when results from state elections are to be released, an official said.

At a City Council meeting Friday afternoon, the Juarez acting mayor and the chief of police described how Mexican army soldiers took over the police department at about 1 a.m. MDT Thursday. The acting mayor said Juarez was under "undeclared martial law."

Political tension has been on the rise since last Sunday's elections to elect a governor for the vast mining and ranching state of Chihuahua, 67 mayorships and 14 legislative seats. Official results are scheduled for release tonight.

The conservative, opposition National Action Party, or PAN, has accused the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party of massive government-instituted fraud.

PRI leaders have denied the charges, asked for proof of the allegations and suggested the PAN accept its defeat. City government in Juarez, the largest city in the state of Chihuahua and along the border, has been under PAN control for the last three years, as have been the state's most important communities.

Juarez Mayor Francisco Barrio, who resigned his post to run for governor on the PAN ticket, told several thousand people at a Friday night rally in front of city hall that there will be more protests.

"It's true, we've been confronted with one of the worst frauds of this century...but we are more than them, much more," said Barrio. "We will not be silent against the monstrous fraud committed against the people of Chihuahua."

Juarez Bishop Manuel Talamas Camandari issued a statement Friday night saying his diocese is convinced there was electoral fraud in Juarez. He urged citizens to strive for their rights using non-violent measures.

"We want to stress this is not a partisan statement. Political parties are temporal things. But there was fraud against the citizenry and that is a sin," the bishop said.

U.S. Army Major General Donald Infante issued a recommendation Friday to the 22,000 U.S. military personnel under his command at the Fort Bliss facility just outside El Paso.

"This is not a direct order that they not go," said Fort Bliss spokesman Ralph Dohme. "They can take it or leave it. But if they're caught in a bind over there, they're on their own."

U.S. Consul General Mike Hancock in Juarez warned American tourists who planned to visit the city this weekend.

"We are advising American citizens...that there's a strong possibility of political demonstrations," said Hancock.

Protestant youths attack police

PORTADOWN, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant youths attacked police with bricks and bottles Saturday night and overturned an armored jeep, injuring four officers, at the end of a peaceful parade through Portadown, police reported.

They said a mob attacked riot squads that barred the marchers from entering a street in a predominantly Roman Catholic district.

Witnesses saw the driver of a police jeep dragged out and attacked and said a youth wearing a scarf with the colors of a Catholic soccer team also was beaten.

Early Sunday, gunmen attacked a police patrol vehicle in County Tyrone near the Irish border and one officer was shot in the arm and leg, police said. No group claimed responsibility, but the area is notorious for Irish Republican Army attacks on security patrols.

The violence followed parades by thousands of Protestants throughout Northern Ireland that combined the annual celebration of the victory in 1690 by Protestants over a Catholic army with protests over last year's Anglo-Irish agreement.

Authorities said 78 policemen and 49 civilians were injured in rioting Friday night and early Saturday. Police made 90 arrests.

Two bystanders were wounded in Belfast Friday night when gunmen shot at police trying to halt the sectarian fighting, police said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In a separate development, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said it had suspended two senior officers following an investigation into charges that police force had an illegal shoot-to-kill policy from 1982-84. During that period several suspected Irish nationalist guerrillas were shot to death at roadblocks and in ambushes.

AP Laserphoto

Northern Irish Orangemen march through the streets of Portadown Saturday following a night of violent clashes. Men of the Orange Order, the largest Protestant organization in the British-ruled province were celebrating the 1690 victory over Roman Catholic forces.

The suspended officers' names and ranks were not disclosed. The action was seen as a victory for Catholic activists who had accused the constabulary of covering up the incidents and attempting to smear British policeman sent to investigate.

Meanwhile, a Catholic workman shot in a Protestant area of Belfast on Thursday died of his wounds. A group calling itself the Protestant Action Force claimed responsibility for the slaying of Brian Leonard, 20, in an anonymous call to a Belfast radio station.

Sporadic disturbances were reported throughout Northern Ireland after nightfall Friday, but parades in 19 towns Saturday generally were peaceful as the Protestant Orange Order marked the victory of King William of Orange over Catholic King James II at the Battle of the Boyne River.

In Belfast, police estimated 20,000 people marched in Orange Order parades. Many carried banners or wore T-shirts and caps saying "No Surrender" — the slogan of Protestant opposition to the Anglo-Irish accord.

Last November's agreement gives the Republic of Ireland an official role in consultations on British policy regarding Northern Ireland, a British province. Ulster Protestants see the pact as a step toward their being sold out by Britain.

In Portadown, police fired 150 plastic bullets to quell predawn rioting Saturday, the police spokesman said. Fourteen police were hurt, and several arrests were made, he said.

Ulster Protestants traditionally have routed their marches through Catholic areas to emphasize their supremacy in the province, where they outnumber Catholics 3-2.

Jimmy Hamill, a gray-haired Catholic watching the string of bagpipe bands and bowler-hatted Protestants pass by here, disgustedly described the parade as a re-enactment of the Boyne Battle.

"This march has been a problem right down through the years," Hamill said. "They come down here to dominate the Catholics."

He said a pro-Irish Republican Army sign daubed on a nearby wall reflected the sympathy people in his neighborhood felt for the IRA's guerrilla struggle to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and unite the north with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Broken glass, stones and smoldering debris from the night's clashes lined the parade route in Portadown. A huge bonfire lit before midnight had attracted marauding youths who police said rioted sporadically until shortly before dawn.

When the march began in a drizzle with smartly dressed men carrying banners and ceremonial swords, the leaders made a perfunctory attempt to enter the main Catholic neighborhood surrounding Obins Street, but detoured when they were rebuffed by police backed by armored vehicles and riot police.

Opposition vows new round of protests in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Opposition parties vowed a new round of protests Saturday after President Augusto Pinochet indicated he would seek to stay in power until 1997.

The centrist Social Democratic Party said it would organize "a wide mobilization, at all levels, to stop Pinochet."

Even some right-wing organizations that generally have been sympathetic to Pinochet's 13-year-old government expressed opposition to a second term for the army chief.

The 70-year-old Pinochet's eight-year term expires in 1989. He told a political rally Friday his government "has the right to project itself beyond 1989."

"I am sure the nation will support the government for a new presidential term," he said.

His wife, Lucia Hiriart de Pinochet, later told reporters that he "clearly means that we will stick to the constitution, and the constitution states that he can be a candidate for re-election."

The centrist Christian Democratic Party called Pinochet's remarks "a provocation to the entire country." It said it would hold an emergency meeting Monday to define a new strategy to fight his government.

"The answer to Pinochet should be a new, stronger general strike," said German Correa, president of the Popular Democratic Movement, a coalition of outlawed Marxist parties.

"Pinochet has clearly warned the country that, definitely, there will be no democracy," Correa said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Pinochet has ruled Chile with an iron fist since the 1973 coup that overthrew elected Marxist President Salvador Allende.

However, he is under growing pressure at home and abroad to act promptly to restore democracy. On July 2 and 3, a coalition of social, labor and professional organizations staged an anti-government general strike that triggered street violence in which eight people were killed.

The government responded by charging 18 of the strike leaders with breaking the state security law by "inciting to public disorder (and) inciting to work stoppage."

Fifteen of the leaders were arrested Wednesday, and Judge German Valenzuela on Saturday ordered they be held for five more days pending indictment. The three other leaders remain at large.

Among the 15 is Juan Luis Gonzalez, president of the Civil Assembly coalition that called the strike. Gonzalez also is the chief of Chile's Medical Doctors' Association.

Under Chile's 1980 constitution, approved in a referendum that the opposition called fraudulent, only one candidate will be put before the voters in the 1989 presidential election. The candidate will be selected by the chiefs of the army, navy, air force and national police.

As army commander, Pinochet would help select the candidate.

Duarte urges guerrillas to lay down their arms

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte on Saturday urged leftist guerrillas to lay down their arms and help restore peace in this Central American nation torn by nearly seven years of civil war.

Duarte's call appeared to be in response to the negotiating proposal the rebels made Friday to renew peace talks, but he did not mention their offer directly.

"We must all understand that the first objective we must achieve is peace, but not the peace of the dead, nor the peace of dictatorship, nor the peace of Marxism-Leninism," Duarte told a rally in the provincial capital of San Francisco Gotera.

Duarte on June 1 suggested a third round of peace talks amd the rebels agreed.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Italian navy on alert for planned Libyan maneuvers

ROME (AP) — The Italian navy has gone on alert in preparation for Libya's planned maneuvers in the disputed Gulf of Sidra, according to a newspaper report Saturday.

Libya's official JANA news agency has said large-scale maneuvers will be held Sunday through Tuesday.

The daily Il Giornale of Milan said the Italian navy was on alert for the exercises, but did not cite its sources or give other details. Defense officials were not available for comment Saturday.

JANA, meanwhile, claimed the United States has moved new aircraft and missiles into the Mediterranean region, and accused it of "playing with fire."

A U.S. Defense Department spokeswoman, Navy Lt. A. Wiley, said in Washington she had not been informed of any special operations by America's 6th Fleet in the gulf, but noted units of the fleet have been conducting regular maneuvers in the area for some time.

Relations between Italy and Libya have plunged since Libya fired two missiles at the Italian island of Lampedusa in April in retaliation for the April 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libyan targets.

Dynamite tossed at targets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Assailants on motorcycles tossed sticks of dynamite at targets in Moslem west Beirut on Saturday, police said, and the blasts broke windows in a mile-wide area of Hamra commercial district, but no casualties were reported.

A police spokesman said officials believed the attacks were "part of a campaign of sabotage against Syria's military intervention to enforce a security plan in west Beirut."

Lebanon's three main Christian groups, including President Amin Gemayel's rightist Phalange party, issued a joint statement Friday night condemning the return of Syrian troops to Beirut as "illegal and infringing on Lebanon's sovereignty."

About 200 Syrian commandos and paratroopers moved into west Beirut nine days ago to help the Lebanese army and police end a 27-month reign by Moslem militias.

Mexico raises subway fares

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The price of a Mexico City subway ticket, now the cheapest in the world at about one-sixth of a cent, will soar in August as the government tries to bring more money into its depleted coffers.

City officials said that the Treasury Department gave final approval to a plan to raise the cost of a subway ride from 1 peso now to 20 pesos, about 3 cents, Aug. 1. The current exchange rate is about 625 pesos to the U.S. dollar.

The higher fare also will be charged for buses and trolleys.

To try to soften the blow for the capital's large, impoverished population, city officials said Friday residents will be able to buy a 15-day transit ticket for 700 pesos, or about $1.12. The ticket can be used for an unlimited number of rides on all public transit and shared among family and friends.

Filipino guerrillas killed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Soldiers killed 11 communist guerrillas Saturday but lost two additional dead themselves on the second day of a battle in the southern Philippines, the official Philippine News Agency reported Saturday.

It said the rebels had taken workers hostage at a logging camp, but the hostages were released after four hours. It did not specify their number.

The latest deaths brought to 33 the number of people reported killed since Wednesday in rebel-related violence throughout the country.

PNA, quoting a field report to the Defense Ministry, said the logging camp near Prosperidad in Agusan del Sur province, 535 miles southeast of Manila, was attacked Friday by about 300 guerrillas of the communist New People's Army.

Soldiers were sent to the camp and four of them were killed and six wounded in fighting Friday, earlier reports said. The news agency said reinforcements, backed by two helicopter gunships, pursued the rebels Saturday and killed 11 guerrillas, but two more soldiers died.

Berries, game still tainted

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austrian berries and wild game are still tainted by fallout from the Soviet Union's Chernobyl nuclear power plant accident in April, while lamb and honey could contain unhealthy amounts of radiation, the Health Ministry reported Saturday.

The ministry reported its findings after testing different foods for traces of the radioactive element cesium 137.

The report said radiation in most food, including milk, beef, vegetables and poultry, as well as drinking water, was well below the safe limits set by the ministry.

But it said children should be allowed to eat only small quantities of home-grown currants, cherries, gooseberries, raspberries and blueberries.

Austria's safe limit for radiation in fruit and berries is three nanocuries per kilogram (2.2 pounds.) An average of 12.7 nanocuries was measured in currants harvested in the province of Upper Austria.

Reagan warns Congress that cuts could cripple 'Star Wars' research

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, repeating assertions that his "Star Wars" missile defense program is not an arms-control "bargaining chip," warned Congress on Saturday that spending cuts would cripple research just as advances are being made.

"Nothing of great value...comes cheap," Reagan said in his weekly radio address, delivered from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

"A defensive system that can protect us and our allies against all ballistic missiles nuclear and conventional, is a prudent investment," the president said.

"Our SDI research to make nuclear missiles less effective also makes these missile more negotiable," Reagan said.

In the past few days there have been reports the administration was intrigued by a Soviet proposal to delay deployment of a "Star Wars" system in return for deep cuts in offensive missiles.

But Reagan repeated his oft-stated line that the "Star Wars" program "is not a bargaining chip."

He said the system was necessary because "the Soviets have yet to agree to arms reduction despite the strenuous efforts of several U.S. administrations.

Despite arguments by critics, Reagan said the "Star Wars" program has accomplished much and that "faster progress than expected" has been made in the research.

"Even faster progress than expected has been made in developing the system's 'eyes,' — scientists call them sensors — and its 'brains' — which guide an interceptor toward its target, and methods of stopping incoming missiles, especially with non-nuclear means," Reagan said.

"Technological advances now permit us to detect and track an aggressor's missiles in early flight," Reagan added.

The president has asked for $5.4 billion for the program in the next fiscal year, but two key congressional committees have voted to slash funding for the research program.

Congress is scheduled to return from its Fourth of July recess on Monday, and a summer of battles with Capitol Hill is looming over the defense budget and the president's arms control policies.

Just before leaving for the holiday, Congress agreed on a new budget blueprint that cut Reagan's $320 billion Pentagon spending request to $292 billion.

The president's futuristic missile defense shield has come under attack by critics who charge that it has received too much emphasis in the Pentagon budget, is being rushed into premature development, and that the goals of the complex system are unclear.

Air Force seals off crash site of mysterious aircraft

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Air Force guards with automatic rifles sealed off a wide area of a national forest Saturday around the burned crash site of a mysterious aircraft widely speculated to have been an experimental stealth fighter.

The Air Force imposed strict secrecy and said little Saturday other than to identify the pilot who was killed in the crash and say he was stationed at Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada.

A recently published book, "Stealth Aircraft," by British author Bill Sweetman, says stealth fighters are tested in a closely guarded section of Nellis.

Lt. Col John Kuminecz at Nellis said the pilot was attached to the 4450 Tactical Group at Nellis, and added: "I can't comment on the mission of that group."

Pentagon spokesman Glen Flood had no comment on any questions Saturday when contacted by The Associated Press.

Friday's predawn crash, near 4,100-foot Saturday Peak in the western Sierra Nevada, set off a 150-acre brushfire in Sequoia National Forest that was controlled six hours later.

Military officials refused to divulge what kind of plane crashed, the base from which it took off, or its mission.

White supremacists gather in Idaho

HAYDEN LAKE, Idaho (AP) — White supremacists at the Aryan Nations Congress were urged Saturday to remember those who died for their cause, while Gov. John Evans, joining human rights advocates 10 miles away, denounced racism and prejudice.

About 150 white supremacists met at a wooded, 20-acre compound owned by the Church of Jesus Christ Christian-Aryan Nations in this town 10 miles north of Coeur d'Alene.

Meanwhile, Evans and others gathered in Coeur d'Alene, for a "Good Neighbors Day." Nearly 200 communities sent resolutions in support of that session, and governors of Montana, Washington and Oregon sent statements asking citizens to reject hate groups and racism.

"We want everyone to know that the Aryan Nations and other such hate groups do not represent nor do they speak for the people of Idaho," Evans told the racially mixed crowd.

The white supremacists' gathering was their first in the Northwest since an FBI investigation led to last December's racketeering convictions of 10 members of The Order, a militant, right-wing group blamed for two murders, more than $4 million in robberies, counterfeiting and other crimes.

Many Order members met through the Aryan Nations and its leader, the Rev. Richard Butler.

The 1985 congress was canceled because of The Order indictments and what Butler said were FBI threats against the Aryans.

The Order was smashed when its founder, Robert Mathews, died during a Dec. 8, 1984, standoff with FBI agents. Mathews was killed when a flare ignited his waterfront hideout on Whidbey Island, north of Seattle.

Many at the Aryan Nations meeting were dressed in combat fatigues. Pins bearing swastikas, crosses, and U.S. flags were popular, and one delegate wore a scarf patterned with a Confederate Flag.

Guards patrolled the grounds with semi-automatic weapons they said were similar to M-16s. A handful of delegates wore sidearms.

Kootenai County sheriff's deputies were on patrol outside the compound. They used video cameras to photograph delegates as they entered or left the grounds.

"Let us remember those who died at Dresden, and some who are still in Dresden," Butler said at the opening of the meeting, referring to the German city that was firebombed by the Allies during World War II.

He then mentioned several members of The Order, including Randolph Duey, David Lane, Randall Evans, and Gary Yarbrough, who formerly served as Butler's security chief.

"Of that group there was one who died. He gave his statement shortly before he died why he wanted to die rather than live in tyranny," Butler said.

"Let us all remember Robert Mathews," he said to cheers from the delegates.

Butler called roll of "those who reside with our Father, but whose hearts were true." His list included Gen. George Patton, U.S. Sen. Joseph McCarthy, and Rudolf Hess, a deputy to Adolf Hitler who in 1945 was sentenced to life in prison for his activities during World War II.

Most men would remarry wives, survey claims

CHICAGO (AP) — A newspaper survey asked married men, "If you had it to do again, would you marry your current wife?" and found that the answer was, overwhelmingly, that they would.

The Chicago Sun-Times found that 77.1 percent of first-time married men would remarry their spouses, compared with findings in a recent women's magazine poll that said only 50 percent of the women surveyed would make another trip down the aisle with the same man.

The only other question asked in the newspaper poll was: "Why (would you marry her again) or why not?"

Of 2,301 men who responded to the printed queries, an overwhelming majority — 1,788 — said they would remarry their wives, the newspaper said in its Sunday editions.

Their reasons ranged from the gushing — "the most understanding, trusting, loving, supportive woman I've ever met" — to the terse "Why not?" — to the pragmatic "Without her, I'd be a bum."

The newspaper said it received hundreds of letters echoing the sentiment of the man who said: "She is my better half. She is my partner, my mistress, my best friend. She lights up my life."

It said about 5 percent of the letters were in the "Why not?" vein — men who said they'd marry their wives again "because no one else would put up with me" or because "Who else would do my laundry?"

The men's responses were much more affirmative than those of women polled by Woman's Day magazine. Only half the women who wrote to the magazine said they would marry their current husbands if they had it to do over again.

"On the whole, men experience fulfillment more easily than women do. Women are filled with all these romantic yearnings, and romance is finite, limited, difficult to sustain," David Roadhouse, a Chicago psychotherapist, said in suggesting a reason for the disparity.

The newspaper survey found that men in their first marriages appeared not quite as content as men who had been married more than once. Of the first-timers, 77.1 percent said they would marry the same woman, while 81.5 percent of those in subsequent marriages said they would.

The Woman's Day poll found that 63 percent of women in subsequent marriages said they would marry the same man — significantly higher than the 50 percent of first-time wives.

Seventy-four percent of the men married fewer than 10 years said they were happy with their wives, but that figure declined to 70 percent for men in the second decade.

Chilean teen's mother claims son murdered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mother of a teen-ager killed during a demonstration in Chile condemned that country's military government Saturday as the Reagan administration dispatched a senior diplomat to press Chilean officials for a thorough investigation of the death.

Rodrigo Rojas, 19, a free-lance photographer, died Sunday as a result of burns he suffered during an anti-government demonstration on July 2.

Witnesses have said Chilean soldiers doused the youth and another teen-ager with gasoline and set them afire. President Augusto Pinochet has suggested that Rojas may have been carrying flammable liquid and that the two were set on fire because they were handling a Molotov cocktail.

"The government is trying to portray this kid as a terrorist," Veronica de Negri said of her son at an emotional airport news conference upon her return from his funeral in Chile. "This is a lie...The only bomb my son had was cameras."

"I'm very proud of him. He always believed in human rights. He always was concerned about the suffering of people," added Mrs. de Negri. Her 12-year-old son, Pablo, stood at her side, holding a flag of Chile and fighting back tears.

In a related development, Robert S. Gelbard, deputy assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, left Saturday for a week-long trip to Chile, Paraguay and other South American countries.

The State Department, in an unusual gesture, called in three public statements this week for an honest investigation into Rojas' death.

Mrs. de Negri, a social worker and an exiled supporter of the leftist government toppled in a 1973 military coup, thanked the State Department, the U.S. ambassador and American lawmakers for their expressions of concern.

But she bitterly condemned Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., for praising Chile last week as stable and on the road to democracy "when crimes like this are happening." Helms, who was visiting Chile on what he called a private fact-finding visit, also said there was no need for the United States to call for an investigation of the Rojas case because Pinochet had already started one.

Mrs. de Negri, who was tortured and raped before being banished from Chile a decade ago, is active in Amnesty International. She returned to her homeland for her son's funeral Wednesday.

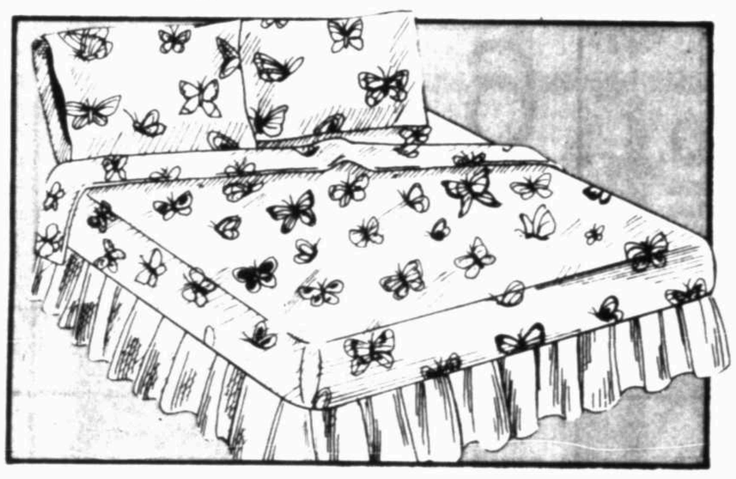

Riot police fired tear gas and water cannons to disperse some 2,000 mourners as U.S. Ambassador Harry Barnes and four European diplomats looked on from a nearby Santiago building.

Barnes said later he had seen no provocation for the police actions. The State Department has said it received reports that the procession was peaceful until police arrived.

Sondra McCarty, a State Department press officer, said Saturday that Gelbard's trip was long-planned and "more or less routine." But another U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the trip "takes on a different dimension of urgency because of what has happened."

Witnesses who were at the July 2 anti-government demonstration said a military patrol doused Rojas and an 18-year-old woman with gasoline, set them afire and drove them away. The two were found later on a de-

Talk by 'witch' draws protests

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — About 250 parents and religious leaders picketed as self-proclaimed witch Zsuzsanna Budapest talked about her religion at a library's "Meet a Real Witch" lecture on Saturday.

"This is an outrage. It is absolute hypocrisy," said the Rev. Charles Crabtree of the Assemblies of God Bethel Church of San Jose. "The fact that they paid a witch to come in and speak to very impressionable teenagers and do not allow Christian leaders to do the same is appalling."

Crabtree said religious leaders have been banned for several years from speaking in tax-supported buildings because of a constitutionally mandated separation of church and state.

But city librarian Homer Fletcher said anyone can speak at the lectures.

"We believe that we have the responsibility to provide as many different perspectives as possible and allow the people to make up their own minds," Fletcher said. "Intellectual freedom must not depend on whose ox is being gored."

Religious leaders were allowed to address the group before Ms. Budapest's presentation in the Santa Teresa branch library.

An hour before the talk, about 200 people, mostly protesters, stood in line vying for one of the 112 seats in the small conference room.

"We're not interested in what she has to say," said Stacy Haines, 17, of Cupertino, Calif. "We're just here to take up seats so that small children don't get exposed to this."

But Jamie Rose, 22, of San Jose said he came to listen.

"Everyone here is passing judgment on everyone else," said Rose.

Fire in derailed tank car put out; Residents return

MIAMISBURG, Ohio (AP) — A 5-day-old fire in a derailed tank car filled with phosphorus that released potentially toxic smoke was extinguished Saturday, allowing about 300 people to return home.

The derailment and the fire had sent as many as 40,000 people fleeing earlier in the week.

It was the largest evacuation following a train accident in the United States, said William E. Loftus, executive director of the Federal Railroad Administration.

Officials blamed the derailment on 90-degree temperatures which warped a 35-foot section of rail five inches out of line.

A small area containing less than a dozen homes near the derailment site will remain off-limits for a day or two until the railroad cars can be removed, but residents will be allowed back to obtain personal belongings, said assistant city manager John Weithofer.

"I feel relieved. There's a lot of very tired people here who have put in the toughest five days of their lives," Weithofer said.

The blaze was extinguished after firefighters discovered that only a very small layer of phosphorus, which burns on contact with air, remained in the tanker, Weithofer said.

"What was burning were the vapors in the tank, so they filled it with water as high as they could to seal it off from air and put it out," he said.

American Legion chapter decries Kent State memorial

CLEVELAND (AP) — The state American Legion Saturday condemned a planned memorial to Kent State University students killed and wounded by National Guardsmen during an anti-war protest in 1970, calling the monument "an insult to patriotic veterans."

The 1,300 delegates representing 142,000 veterans unanimously approved the measure on a voice vote without debate.

The May 4, 1970, confrontation came at the height of campus protests against the Vietnam War. National Guardsman fired 67 bullets into a crowd of demonstrators protesting the U.S. invasion of Cambodia, killing four and wounding nine.

"The construction of this memorial would be an insult to the patriotic veterans who served their country honorably and well," said the resolution, originally headed "Kent State Memorial To Terrorists."

The reference to "terrorists" and language suggesting that the four students who died were felons were eliminated in a committee meeting Friday.

The resolution also condemned the burning of a campus ROTC building and the burning of the American flag during protests.

"The heart of the issue...was civil disobedience," said Legion spokesman Douglas Weakley. "People were breaking the law. It was on state property. Everybody's a state taxpayer.

"Why should a memorial be built to a situation where there was civil disobedience?" he asked.

But Arthur Krause, the father of 18-year-old Allison Krause, one of the four killed, said "the gentlemen from the American Legion ought to be ashamed of themselves."

Lions to remain all male

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Lions Club International voted down a proposal Saturday to allow women to join the 1.3 million-member club, but its new president predicted the measure will eventually pass.

With just under 38,000 affiliates, the club claims to be the world's largest international service organization.

Fifty-nine percent of the estimated 6,600 to 7,000 delegates attending the 69th annual convention voted in favor of the proposal, short of the two-thirds majority needed to change the constitution. Exact vote totals were unavailable, club officials said.

"I would like to stress that this was the first time that our delegates were asked to vote on this question...which has been brought to our brother service organizations many times without success," said a statement issued by newly installed President Sten Akestam of Stockholm, Sweden.

AMA criticizes ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Medical Association, in a legal brief filed at the Supreme Court, has criticized a Justice Department opinion that dismissal of workers who have AIDS would be permitted if there is a fear of contagion.

The Chicago-based AMA, which represents more than 280,000 physicians and medical students, said the Justice Department's analysis of the civil rights of AIDS victims was "incorrect as a matter of law."

The AMA's "friend-of-the-court" brief was filed Friday in a case that did not involve acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but dealt with the rights of a Florida woman with tuberculosis, said Carter Phillips, a Washington attorney who represents the AMA.

Medicaid cuts proposed

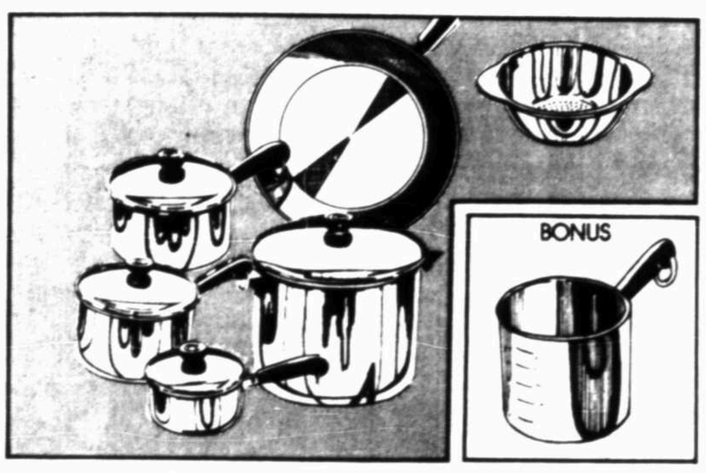

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration is working on proposals that would delay or deny Medicaid benefits for many people with high medical costs, including disabled children and elderly people needing long-term care, The New York Times reported in today's editions.

Under one proposal, people with high health care costs would have to pay their entire share of the medical bills before anything could be paid by Medicaid, the newspaper said.

Under current law, people may qualify for Medicaid if they have incurred but not yet paid large medical expenses. People may pay their share of the bill in installments while Medicaid pays the rest of the bill.

Another proposal would sharply restrict Medicaid eligibility for people who set aside money to help support their disabled or retarded children, the Times said.

Woman taken hostage says family gave her strength

PRITCHETT (AP) — Rosalie Williams, who spent a terrifying night and day as the hostage of a murder suspect known as "Animal," said Saturday the comfort of friends and family is helping her to resume everyday life.

Mrs. Williams escaped unharmed Thursday night and her captor, Jerry Walter McFadden, surrendered to officers Friday night when he was cornered in a vacant house in Big Sandy.

After the escape, Mrs. Williams radioed in a message from a police car at Big Sandy, and other officers said they were surprised by the calmness of her voice.

"I kind of surprised myself because I realized that this made me strong. It gave me strength to want to try to get out of this," she said. "I knew I had my child to live for and my husband."

Mrs. Williams said she will take some time off to try to forget the ordeal by relaxing with her friends and family. But, she said, she plans to go back to work as a jailer-dispatcher for the Upshur County Sheriff's Department.

"Of course. This is my career," she said Saturday, relaxing at her home in Pritchett after an emotional parade and presentation held in honor of Mrs. Williams and her husband Eddy, a state trooper.

A petite, soft-spoken woman, Mrs. Williams said she drew on her conviction that her prayers would be answered to help her withstand the long, frightening wait.

She said she often feared for her life, but told herself she would be rescued. "He is a dangerous man," she said.

McFadden, a heavy-set man was awaiting trial on capital murder charges in connection with the strangulation of an 18-year-old woman when he escaped Wednesday night.

Authorities said he overpowered two deputies and seized a .38-caliber service revolver. A massive manhunt was launched after Mrs. Williams was found in Big Sandy and McFadden was captured late Friday.

McFadden kept Mrs. Williams in a boxcar for more than 16 hours in sweltering heat and she escaped when thirst drove him out of the car in search of water, telling Mrs. Williams to stay put.

"Both of us were at the point of real dehydration," she said. "I was beginning to see things. I was just dying of thirst.

"I started breathing rapidly. I think that kind of shook him up. He said, 'You stay here, and I'll go get us some water.' I said, 'OK, Jerry. I'll stay here.' Maybe he thought I really would."

"I told him I would. He said, 'just do as you're told and you won't get hurt.' He would say that all the time," she said.

After a few minutes went by, she said she peered through the boxcar opening and saw McFadden beating a dog with a stick.

"That dog had all of his attention at that time. I love that dog," she said.

Mrs. Williams said she jumped from the boxcar after McFadden had gone several hundred feet from the train. She ran to the nearest house, the home of Mancho Martinez.

Man cleared of attempted murder after 11 years

FORT WORTH (AP) — For 11 years Kenneth Leslie Miller lived as someone else, adopting a new name, marrying, moving from town to town, but always looking over his shoulder.

Now Miller, 36, is free from the wrongful conviction for attempted capital murder that had shadowed his every move.

On Friday, a judge threw out the conviction and a 70-year prison sentence and dropped all Texas charges against him.

"It's still kind of surrealistic, kind of a dream," Miller said.

Most recently, Miller has been living in Las Vegas. According to Miller and friends of his, he worked as a mechanic, got married and divorced while waiting to be cleared of another man's crime, .

"I'm just used to being on guard, that's what kept me out for so long," said Miller, who lived almost a third of his life in wary fear.

"It was very unpleasant, very paranoid. It's a scary feeling," he said. "There was always hope, there was always a hope."

John Terrell, a retired detective who helped unravel the details of who really did attack and shoot a 20-year-old coed in a 1974 robbery, said he always wanted to prove Miller's innocence, but couldn't because he couldn't find him.

"It was kind of a gut feeling," Terrell said. "I had no physical evidence, no witnesses or anything."

Miller escaped from a Tarrant County courtroom in 1975 before his 70-year sentence was read.

"I talked with Miller one time. It's like when your kids talk to you, you know when they're telling the truth and when they're not," Terrell said.

He said that when he interviewed Miller after his arrest in 1974 on charges he shot Texas Christian University coed Janelle Kirby, Miller said, "Hey, I've done a lot of bad things, but I didn't shoot that girl at TCU."

"I believed him," the detective said.

Shortly after the shooting, Terrell was investigating an unrelated case and interviewed another man, William Ted Wilhoit. Wilhoit hinted at another crime he might have committed, and Terrell thought he might have meant the shooting.

Now, Wilhoit has confessed to the shooting and has given authorities a full statement with details only the real assailant would know, said Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry.

Wilhoit, 34, is a state prison inmate serving a 40-year sentence on an Abilene rape conviction. He was granted immunity in the attempted murder case in exchange for his information.

Miller's conviction was based on both a photo lineup and an in-person lineup in which Ms. Kirby seemed certain about pointing to Miller.

Police said they believe Ms. Kirby is living in Florida and they have been unable to locate her.

"It is a case of mistaken identity," Curry said. "I think this is an isolated case...one in a million, as far as I'm concerned."

STATE IN BRIEF

Water restrictions avoided

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin water usage dipped just below the figure that could have triggered mandatory restrictions during the weekend, a treatment plant operator said Saturday.

Under a city ordinance, the restrictions go into effect if total usage exceeds 155 million gallons a day for three consecutive days, or tops 165 million gallons for one day. Thursday's usage was 160 million gallons and officials expected the Friday figure to hit 162 million gallons.

But the actual Friday usage was 154.7 million gallons, according to Dave Davis, an operator at the city's Ullrich Treatment Plant.

"It was just barely under. It'll be higher today. It's already pretty heavy," he said early Saturday.

Faith George, city water conservation director, had said Friday the only hope for avoiding the restrictions this weekend was voluntary compliance with the city's yard watering schedule.

There is no shortage of water here, but the city's treatment plants are inadequate to handle demand. Construction under way on additional facilities is expected to be completed by next summer.

Courts to rule on museum

NEW YORK (AP) — The courts may decide whether New York or Dallas is a better home for the Museum of the American Indian, whose cramped Manhattan quarters have prompted its trustees to look for a new home for the collection.

State Supreme Court Justice Martin Stecher said the museum cannot survive financially in its current location on upper Broadway, so the city must come up with an alternative.

"It must be obvious...that it was not the intention of the museum's founder to allow his museum to perish and its collection be dispersed rather than be removed to another state," the judge said.

The museum's request to move is "ripe for adjudication," Stecher said.

On Thursday, Stecher denied a petition by state Attorney General Robert Abrams to block the move. Abrams argued that the museum is bound to remain in New York under the terms of a trust set up by the late oil engineer George Heye, founder of the 70-year-old institution.

Teen contestant stabbed

HOUSTON (AP) — A 14-year-old girl on her way to compete in the Miss Houston Teen competition was brutally stabbed in the restroom of a fast-food restaurant, police said.

"I thought she was dead, she was stabbed so bad and bleeding profusely," Houston police officer J.L. Yates said of the Friday incident. "It was grisly. It was like a horror movie — something from 'Psycho.'"

Misty Morse was listed in stable condition Saturday at Hermann Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman who asked not be identified.

Police said the girl and her mother, Glenda Lee Morse, 34, had stopped at the southwest Houston restaurant about 5:30 p.m. and the girl went to the bathroom outside the restaurant.

NTSB crash reports at odds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Staff members of the National Transportation Safety Board have issued two conflicting reports on last year's crash of a Delta Air Lines jet, an NTSB spokesman says.

The differing viewpoints about the crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport that killed 137 people will be released on Tuesday. The four-member safety board will use the staff's report to try to reach final conclusions about the cause of the Aug. 2, 1985 accident.

Two-inch cockroach wins Dallas contest

DALLAS (AP) — A two-inch cockroach that may soon star on the Johnny Carson Show as an example of Texas' bigger-is-better bravado has been challenged by an exterminator in Houston.

The cockroach, captured by three Southwestern Bell employees who chased it down in the basement of the Dallas office building, won the Texas Largest Cockroach contest Friday.

About 200 roaches were entered in the contest, which boasted a $1,000 grand prize offered by a local exterminating company.

But John Hartman of Houston, who is also in the pest tracking business, said he is offended because the contest was limited to Dallas.

"Not one was a Houston proud roach," Hartman said. "We know the biggest Texas roach lives in Houston."

Michael Bohdan, who runs a Dallas pest company and sponsored the Dallas contest, has promised a rematch in August, Hartman said.

Friday's winners said they set traps with bananas and beer encircled with petroleum jelly to keep the bugs from escaping. But the 48.78 millimeter roach — just shy of two inches — was chased down and snared in a paper cup.

Pat Camden, 32, and Janet Bowman, 33, both of Carrollton, and Marcia McCrackin, 24, of Cedar Creek, won the $1,000.

"We'll probably take ourselves out and have one good, fine time," said Ms. Camden, who showed up with Ms. McCrackin in purple T-shirts emblazoned with "From Rags To Roaches."

Unfortunately, they didn't get their roach alive.

Ms. Camden said his neck was broken accidentally.

"It's a pretty good size cockroach. I wouldn't want it in my bedroom," contest sponsor Bohdan said.

The average American cockroach is usually 1½ inches long, he said.

Bohdan said he has been asked to display the Texas-size roaches on the Johnny Carson Show later this month.

The contest, which gave participants two months to grab up the crawling things and submit them dead or alive, was a pest controller's way of celebrating the Sesquicentennial, he said.

A curator at the insect zoo at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. had told Bohdan she was interested in specimens brought in for the contest, because of Texas' reputation for producing bigger and better breeds.

Dead girl's father: Millionaire asked forgiveness

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — The father of a young girl slain 10 years ago in the mansion of industrialist Cullen Davis said last week that Davis recently asked his forgiveness "for what I did." Davis denies making such a request.

"Cullen did come to me and ask me to forgive him," Jack Wilborn told The Associated Press.

Through an attorney, Davis acknowledged the meeting with Wilborn but said he did not ask forgiveness for the slaying, nor did he admit any role in it.

The Davis case dates back to a summer night in 1976 when a "man in black" invaded the isolated hilltop Davis mansion and gunned down four people, killing two, including 12-year-old Andrea Wilborn.

Davis, then the richest U.S. citizen to be tried for murder, was acquitted in the child's death and was not brought to trial for the other shootings. He did not testify at the murder trial but asserted his innocence outside the courtroom.

Describing his exchange this spring with Davis, Wilborn said:

"He did not say, 'I want you to forgive me for murdering Andrea.' His words were: 'Could you forgive me for what I did?' "

Wilborn, a born-again Christian, said he replied: "Cullen, I forgave you a long time ago."

Authorities told the AP the Wilborn-Davis exchange has no significance legally as far as criminal charges are concerned.

"Cullen could stand up on the pulpit and admit the whole thing and there wouldn't be a damn thing we could do about it," said Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry, whose office prosecuted Davis.

Curry said that there is no statute of limitations on capital murder, but the state's "Speedy Trial Act" would preclude prosecution at this late date.

There are no criminal charges pending against Davis but several civil suits by Wilborn and others against the millionaire remain active.

Asked for what Davis sought forgiveness, Wilborn said, "The only thought I had was Andrea's death. There was no question about what he was talking about."

Wilborn's wife Betty, Andrea's stepmother, told the AP that Davis grabbed and hugged her and said, "Betty, I want you to know how sorry I am for all the pain I've caused you. Can you ever forgive me for what I've done?"

The Wilborns said the emotional confrontation occurred at the conclusion of a Sunday night, interdenominational church service in Dallas. The three wept openly, the AP was told.

"I had to forgive him to have any peace," said Wilborn, a Fort Worth car dealer. "It probably was the most difficult thing I ever did in my life. You know how much that little girl meant to me.

"I think of her constantly."

Wilborn, who once said he considered killing Davis, asserted that there is "nothing in the world that will destroy a person more than hate, and I had a lot of it in me."

In researching a story on the 10th anniversary of the mansion shootings, the AP heard reports that Davis met Wilborn this year in church and asked forgiveness. The AP obtained a first person account from Wilborn, who first declined comment before seeking legal advice.

Davis did not return phone calls from the AP but later denied through Dallas lawyer Steve Sumner that his request for forgiveness involved the death of Andrea.

Instead, Davis said, he approached Wilborn to forgive him for his activities years ago when Wilborn hired private detectives and photographers to follow Davis in an attempt to gather evidence in a divorce suit.

Sumner quoted Davis as saying he was acting on his "Christian beliefs" when he approached Wilborn and that there was this exchange:

Davis: I forgive you for everything you did to me a long time ago.

Wilborn: I forgive you, too.

Davis: I forgave you years ago when I became a Christian.

Wilborn: I didn't forgive you that long ago.

Sumner said Davis told him there was no mention of Andrea's death or the purported transgressions by Wilborn in the 1960s divorce case.

"If in fact your article is implying or suggesting there was an admission, or even the slightest inference of an admission of a crime by Cullen Davis, that is ridiculous," Sumner said.

Recontacted by the AP, Wilborn said the Davis-Sumner response was "silly," "ridiculous" and "incredible" and added:

"I felt when Cullen asked me to forgive him that he was a sincere Christian who had the potential to do a lot of good. He must be sick."

Betty Wilborn said there was no doubt that the church exchange dealt solely with the death of Andrea because "that was the only thing we could forgive him for."

The Wilborns' account comes a short time after Davis quietly settled a personal injury suit with Bubba Gavrel, one of the wounded survivors of the mansion massacre.

Gavrel and his date that night, Beverly Bass, intend to marry in November.

District Attorney Curry reacted to the Wilborns' account of the exchange in church by Davis by saying: "That's strong. If that's correct, it confirms what we thought all along."

Three survivors of the Aug. 2, 1976, shootings identified Davis as the gunman dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig who shot and seriously wounded his estranged wife Priscilla and killed her lover and her daughter.

Davis and his wife Priscilla were engaged in a bitter divorce suit.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of the child's death in 1977 after what then was the longest and costliest murder trial in American history.

In August 1978, less than 10 months after the acquittal, Davis was arrested and charged in a bizarre murder-for-hire scheme in which he was accused of ordering the deaths of 15 people.

Six disabled protesters sentenced to probation

HOUSTON (AP) — Six disabled people were sentenced to probated jail terms after a jury convicted one of them of using his wheelchair to block a bus during a downtown protest in February.

Robert Conrad of Denver was convicted of obstructing a passageway after jurors in Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Sherman Ross' court deliberated three hours Friday. He was sentenced to 30 days probation and assessed a $250 fine, which also is probated.

After Conrad was convicted, five other members of his group, American Disabled for Accessible Public Transportation, entered no contest pleas to the same charge.

The group members said the purpose of their protest Feb. 12 was to call attention to the fact that wheelchair-bound people cannot ride regular Metropolitan Transit Authority buses.

Instead of equipping buses with wheelchair lifts, the city offers a separate system of vans. But the protesters complained that they must arrange for the vans 24 hours in advance and cannot always count on the system.

Their point was underscored Friday when they were late to court because the van that picked them up was 45 minutes late.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Thunderstorms in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

A slim chance of thunderstorms is possible for tonight, says the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

Today will be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the mid 90s, with winds south and gusty at 10 to 20 mph.

Tonight's low will be near 70.

Monday will be partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent of late afternoon and evening thunderstorms. The high will be in the lower 90s.

Saturday's high of 96 degrees was 8 degrees cooler than the record high of 104 degrees set in 1933. The overnight low of 70 degrees was 21 degrees warmer than the record low of 49 degrees set in 1936.

STATE

Sunny, windy and warm weather baked much of Texas Saturday, with south to southwest winds of 15 to 25 mph gusting to 35 mph over central sections of the state.

Only far West Texas escaped gusty winds, and the deep south, including the lower coast and Rio Grande Valley, received the only reported scattered thundershowers.

The forecast calls for fair to partly cloudy with scattered thunderstorms over parts of South Texas Sunday, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Thunderstorms battered the nation's midsection Saturday, spawning tornadoes in Ohio and Indiana.

A twister damaged a trailer and several houses in Ayersville, Ohio, Saturday evening, but no injuries were immediately reported, said State Highway Patrol dispatcher Russell Miller. At least six funnel clouds were sighted in the northwest part of the state, officials said.

High winds damaged a house in Camden, while authorities reported power failures and downed trees throughout southwest Ohio.

In Indiana, police said tornadoes touched down in Adams and Wells counties south of Fort Wayne. The twisters caused minor damage, but no injuries were reported, authorities said. Heavy rain caused some flooding in Fort Wayne.

Winds were clocked at 65 mph at Rushville, Ind., and high winds downed trees at New Unionville, Mount Alburn and Edinburg. Wind damage also was reported at Rolla, Mo.

Heavy thunderstorms also were found over parts of the mid-Atlantic Coast, North Carolina and northern Ohio.

Martin County residents gather for yearly reunion

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

STANTON — It is 1930 and residents here are gathered in the front yard of the Hamilton place on Broadway.

They've collected today to welcome home a friend, Turner Vance, who had since moved onward from this small Martin County town.

So much fun was had by the many old friends and neighbors gathered to welcome home Vance, they decided to have an annual reunion of the town folk every year.

Saturday marked the 54th reunion and this time more than 2,500 citizens, past and present, turned out on Main Street, to celebrate "Old Settlers' Day."

Dorothy Hamilton, daughter of Nobye and Horace, whose home held the first reunion, said the tradition began with everyone bringing a picnic lunch to her parents' house.

The annual fete has grown into a county-wide celebration with parades, contests, games and lots of food.

The Martin County Jaycees sponsored the games portion of the celebration Saturday and Morgan Cox, a Jaycee and Tarzan farmer, said it's a special time.

"People get a chance to smile and forget about their problems.

"Most of the Stanton residents work in Midland and are feeling the pinch brought about by the bad economy. This is a day for them to forget their problems and celebrate their ancestors who started the town," Cox said.

The day began with a parade through the main part of town. The antique car parade featured everything from a Model-T to a new black Corvette.

The Shriners from the Suez Lodge in Big Spring drove through on miniature fire trucks.

The parade also featured families whose heritage in Stanton reached as far back as 1917.

The contest portion featured an egg-throwing contest and at presstime, the winner was still a "toss up."

Cox remarked that the cow-chip throwing contest was canceled this year because, "The cow's wouldn't chip. They're in a slump, too."

The celebration ended Saturday night with a barbecue and awards presentation.

Cox said the entire event was paid for by either donations or volunteer work and the barbecue proceeds would go to financing overhead costs for next year's event such as refreshments for the celebrants and plaques for the contest winners.

Geologist 'devastated' by layoff

He finds it hard to realize he must change careers

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

During the boom geologist John Cys brought home about $50,000 a year.

But his income plunged to $15,000 a year after losing his job. After a futile six-month job search, he left Midland — hoping to find better times in Fort Worth.

Cys, 46, who has a 16-year-old son and a wife, is among many Permian Basin geologists who have lost their jobs and are trying to cope.

Midland's unemployment rate is 11.7 percent and Odessa's 16 percent.

"There's just nothing out there. So I'm more devastated this time than I was the first time," Cys said in an interview before he moved to Fort Worth this month.

"Even though it was expected, it has been far more scary than the first time because conditions now are really depressed. Within the petroleum industry there just aren't any jobs to be had," Cys said.

He was laid off in 1983 by a Midland oil company.

During the 14 months he was unemployed, Cys was forced to take odd jobs including one as a part-time security guard.

He later found a job in September 1984 as a geologist. That lasted until he was laid off again in January.

"It (going for counseling) has removed the feeling that I'm at a dead end. I can see some sort of light at the end of the tunnel rather than darkness."

— John Cys

"To make it through something like this, one thing you have to do is swallow a lot of pride," he said.

Cys, who has lived in Midland for 16 years, said the second layoff was harder to take than the first.

"That time I developed self-doubts about what I could have done that may have kept me on.

"If I had generated more high-quality prospects than someone else, than I'm sure I would have been retained."

Cys's feelings of self doubt are not unusual for people going through unemployment, local counselors said.

"People personalize the experience and say 'It's me that's a failure,'" said Perry Marchioni, clinical director with the Samaritan Counseling Center.

The loss of income means the loss of self esteem, said Steve Roberts, counselor and director with the nonprofit counseling center, Family Services of Midland.

"A lot of our identity as adults revolves around where you work," Roberts said.

"Unfortunately in our society the loss of jobs indicates failure and that's just not the case. People lose jobs because of the world market situtation," says Bob Burke, former Texas Employment Commission director.

"It's ridiculous for someone in Midland, Texas, to feel they have failed for something done in the Middle East," Burke said.

Along with feelings of self-doubt, Cys said he was depressed when he began to realize that he would have to change his career.

"He'd wrap himself up in the few things he enjoyed doing and that was it," said his wife, Beverly.

"I kept asking 'What about a career change?'...because it was hurting me to see him like that. It was a traumatic thing for both of us."

The Cys found their marriage threatened after they began arguing about "normal things people wouldn't get angry about."

"Things could really come to heated arguments at times," Mrs. Cys recalls.

Problems occur more rapidly when families spend more time together, Roberts said.

"Things that could have been ignored with outside interests now crop up."

The unemployed may become overly critical of their spouses and children, Roberts said.

If the wife goes back to work, the husband may resent the shift in roles from primary breadwinner to "Mr. Mom," Roberts said.

Mrs. Cys finally convinced her husband to go to a counselor.

Cys said the counselor helped him realize he is not in a unique position and unemployment is a natural process many people must face.

"It has removed the feeling that I'm at a dead end. I can see some sort of light at the end of the tunnel rather than darkness."

Economy's effect on crime rate uncertain

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Crimes such as assaults, rapes and robberies are up in Midland and Odessa, but officials disagree about the economy's role in the increase.

However, they do agree this year's depressed economy has prompted a rise in domestic violence.

"Crime becomes a way to pass your time when times are bad," said Bob Peetz, a Midland College criminal justice coordinator.

The Midland Police Department reports hikes in assaults, burglaries, automobile thefts, larceny, rapes and robberies in the first five months of 1986, compared to the same period last year.

There were no murders in Midland the first five months of this year, compared to four committed during the same period in 1985.

Three deaths within the past three weeks are still under investigation.

In Odessa, police say all crimes are up except burglaries and automobile thefts.

Peetz said most studies indicate a direct relationship between economics and crime.

"When times are bad, people don't have the material goods" to be stolen, Peetz said.

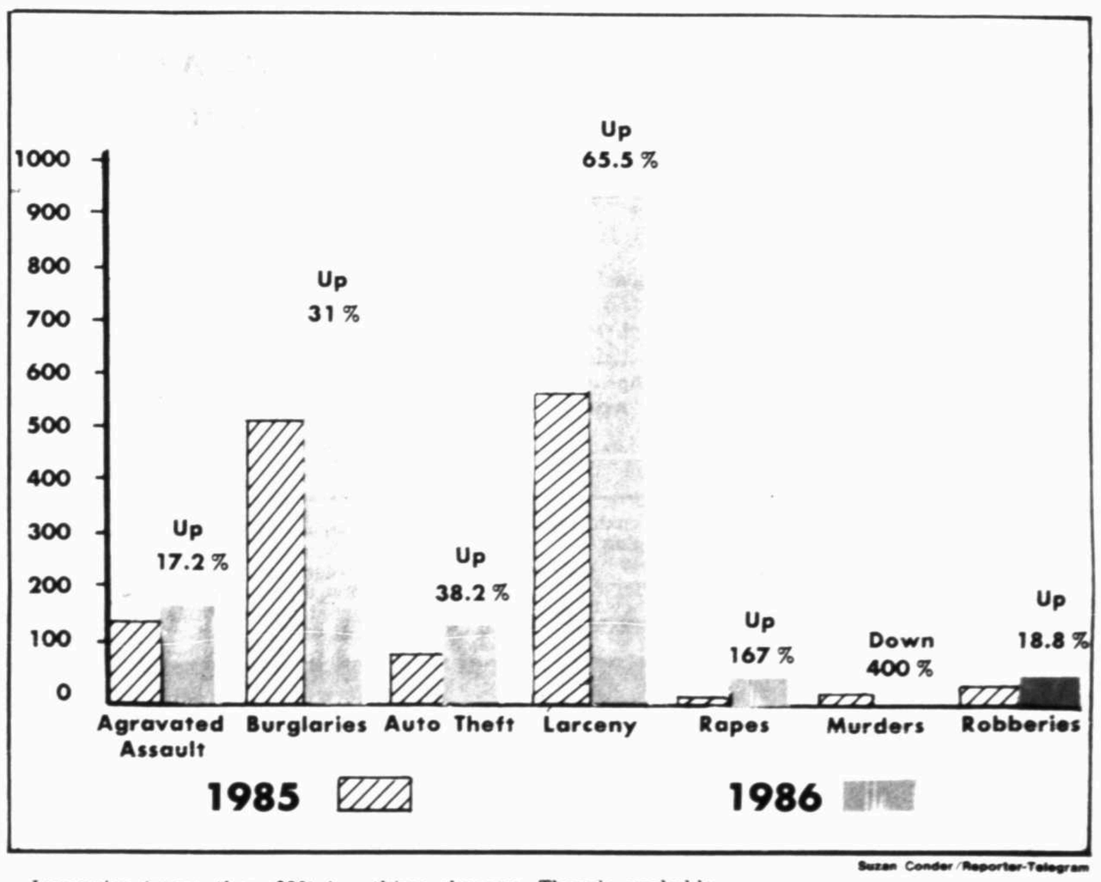

"Because people don't have the material goods, thefts and burglaries generally go down. But assaults go up because people are laid off and don't have anything to do but feel sorry for themselves," he said.

Police disagree.

Sgt. Frank Beam, a 10-year Odessa Police Department veteran, said numbers can be juggled around to make any conclusion.

In the first five months of this year, assaults in Odessa are up 137 percent. In 1985 from January to May, 81 persons were assaulted.

That compares to 192 assaults during the first five months of this year.

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

Larcenies (more than $50) increased from 1,285 in 1985 to 1,675 in 1986 — a 30.35 percent hike.

Robberies showed an 87 percent increase, murders went up from six last year to eight this year and petty larceny showed a 55 percent hike.

Burglaries and automobile thefts are down 7.5 percent and 14.3 percent, respectively.

"It's really hard to say why anything changes. There's probably some correlation to the economy being depressed, but it could just as well be the weather.

"There's 10,000 factors you got to figure in there. It's basically speculation," Beam said.

Midland also has seen increases in most crimes except for murders. But the increases, in most cases, are not as large as Odessa's.

Lt. Hank Norton of the Midland Police Department said he was unsure whether the economy played a role in the crime rate.

"I really don't know if it is a result of bad times or not," Norton said. "I don't think we are seeing any impact yet."

Probation officer: Runaway problem not big in Midland

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

Shorty, a 17-year-old Midlander, and Christine, a Dallas 13-year-old, say children should not run away from home.

But they claim they had no alternative.

Today, the two girls live at High Sky Children's Ranch in Midland — a ranch which houses abused children or children whose parents no longer want them or feel they can care for them.

The two girls agreed to be interviewed, but requested their full names not be used.

"You should sit down and talk with your parents, but mine were impossible to live with. I'll run again if I have to go home," Christine says.

Christine and Shorty are just two of some 1.5 million runaways a year nationwide.

In 1985 Midland had 154 runaways picked up by the police. For the first six months of this year, there have been 63 caught, says Lorriane Miles, chief juvenile probation officer in Midland County.

Midland police say to be classified as a runaway a child must be between 10 and 17 years old and be voluntarily absent from home for a substantial time without their parents' or guardian's consent.

Ms. Miles said the runaway problem is very big nationwide, but said it is not bad in Midland County.

She attributes the small amount of Midland runaways to local counseling agencies, family centers and the children themselves.

"Kids are more aware of what they can and can not get away with these days," Ms. Miles says.

When Christine and Shorty ran away they would stay with friends.

The girls would earn their keep by doing housework and laundry. Christine also worked in a convenience store.

Christine, who has been running from home since she was 8, says fleeing seemed to be the only alternative.

"My stepfather was messing around with my sisters and I, so when my parents fell asleep, we left," she says.

After being returned to her home Christine fled again, but turned herself over to the police.

"When you you first run away you think it's fun but after several days you get bored, and I was bored," she says.

After running away from several placement homes, Christine was sent to High Sky.

She has been there for five weeks.

"I don't really like it here. I am suppose to stay until I graduate from high school if I do not run away first."

Shorty has been at the ranch for 4½ months. At 16 she had ran away from home four times.

"I didn't like the way my mom was treating me. She wouldn't let me go anywhere, she was always pushing me. I got tired of it so I ran away to friends," she says.

Shorty says her aunt found her at a friend's house and turned her over to a case worker. Shorty spent 1½ months in the Odessa Youth Shelter.

"When my mom didn't claim me that's when I was sent here. I will graduate from Lee High School next year," she says.

Reasons why children run away vary although abuse and severe long-term problems are two of the reasons.

Ms. Miles said Midland children run away because a friend suggests it or because of the pressure of school.

"Most of our runaways leave during the school months. Kids are more relaxed in the summer."

Many children who do run away get involved with drugs, pornography or prostitution.

Shorty and Christine say they were lucky and never experienced those problems.

But Christine quickly adds, "When my 15-year-old sister runs away she works on the streets as a prostitute."

Ms. Miles says it has been difficult to find help for runaways since a federal mandate was enacted last year.

Authorities can not keep a runaway for more than 24 hours, Ms. Miles says.

"It is the worst law that has ever come out. Runaways, many of them anyway, are the ones who need to be detained until we can figure out a way to help them. With this mandate they turn around and run again."

Both Shorty and Christine say they want to go to college, but contend they would run away again if they have to, and feel they can survive by themselves.

Says Christine: "I can make it on my own. I have been doing it for a long time."

If you try, you can find things to be positive about

During these hard times it is sometimes difficult to feel positive about life. But if you try, it can be done. Following some serious thought, here's a list of things I truly like:

— Baseball played on natural turf.

— Spotting flashing red lights approaching me from the rear and suddenly realizing I'm not the target.

— That first cup of coffee in the morning.

— Big old lazy cats that just hang around the house and don't bother anyone.

— People who can laugh at themselves.

— Putting on a pair of pants that were worn last week and finding a wadded up $20 bill in the front pocket.

— Hitting more than three green lights in a row.

— Sleeping late.

— Hearing a really good female singer do "Amazing Grace."

— The smell of bacon frying.

— Beautiful women who don't take their good looks too seriously and, as a result, don't stop every 15 minutes to admire themselves in the mirror.

— Being recognized in public by strangers. It's an ego thing.

— Going to the grocery store and finding no lines at the check-out counter.

— Paying for merchandise with a check and not having to produce three forms of identification.

— Listening to golfers bemoan the fact that had they just made a couple of three-foot putts and not duck-hooked that drive on No. 16, they would have broken 90 for the first time. That's a lie, of course, because they shot 105 and had to cheat to do that.

— Ex-smokers who don't care if you light up in their presence.

— Backyard barbeques.

— Jukebox music.

— Husbands and wives who are not jealous of each other's free time, especially if I happen to be drinking buddies with one or the other.

— Old two-story houses with high ceilings and large trees.

— Old gangster movies.

— Sitting around with good friends and talking about whatever happens to come up.

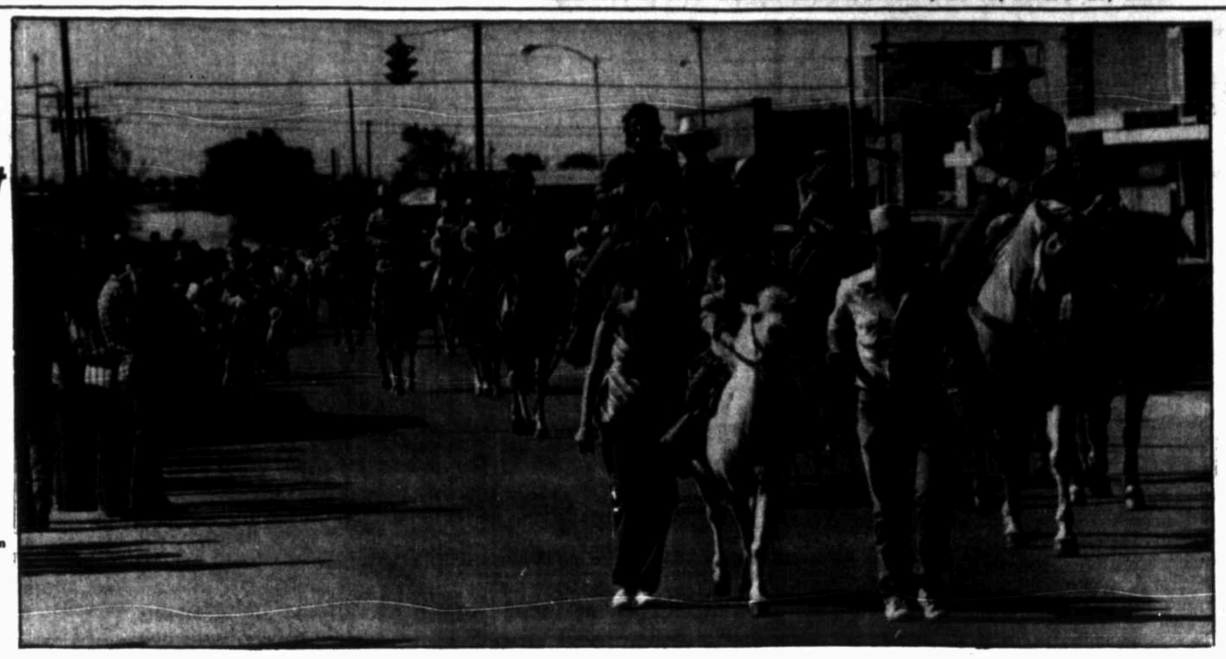

— Meeting someone who, at first glance, came across as a real jerk but after getting to know them, turned out to be good people.

— Having my hair shampooed by an attractive hairdresser.

— Coming across this bit of advice in a book the other day, "You're almost always better off keeping your mouth shut, but don't let that stop you from popping off."

— Coming across this bit of advice in the same book, "There are few satisfactions in life better than holding a grudge. Pick them carefully but hold them."

Growers see blueberries as future moneymaker

BEAUMONT (AP)— Industrial engineer Wayne Partlow figures that in about three years, when his blueberries are in full production, he will quit engineering, "sit and whittle and watch them grow" and make money.

John H. Kerr sees blueberries as his future moneymaker and has bought 8,500 bushes.

Barbara Devillier and daughter Michelle McCarley of Winnie expect to get back the $5,00 they invested in blueberries in three years and make money.

Does it all sound like blueberry pie-in-the-sky?

Not so, says Lamar Lynch, who has interested many area people in raising berries. His opinion is backed by Texas Department of Agriculture research.

Larry Strange, administrator in the department's agricultural development division, says blueberries are a promising newcomer to the state's agriculture scene.

"It is clear that Texas blueberry producers of all sizes and types are standing at the doorway to a new industry with a positive growth trend and the potential to become one of the state's largest horticultural crops," Strange said.

Strange said Texas must devote enough acreage to allow commercial production of blueberries before other Southern states beat Texas to it.

Until recently most blueberries were grown in northern states because the bushes require a certain amount of cold weather. Blueberry production became possible in Texas through development of a warmer-weather strain known as the rabbit eye blueberry.

Blueberries sold in local supermarkets from northern states go on the market in mid-July. Texas blueberries ripen earlier and are ready for market in early June, giving Texas growers a potential advantage.

So far, state blueberry production has been hampered by a lack of growers to satisfy demand.

But Partlow, Kerr, Devillier, McCarley and others are intent on satisfying that demand.

Robert Hopkins of Silsbee, in his first year as a grower, has about 3,000 berry bushes in production. Buddy Self of Vidor, growing for the third year, has a like amount of bushes. Gene Dishman and his cousin, Bill Dishman, along with Bill Dishman's three sons, are seeing fruit in the 1,770 bushes they put in near China in March.

The growers often come from diverse backgrounds, but are finding common ground producing blueberries.

Partlow, a 1974 industrial engineering graduate of Lamar University, employed by the Fluor Corp., was interested in buying a fast-food franchise before he decided on blueberries.

Kerr, 59, of Beaumont, a retiree from Mobile Oil, is investing about $95,000 in his blueberry venture. His son, police Sgt. John S. Kerr, will help out in his spare time.

CRIMES

Rapes in Midland showed the highest increase during the first five months of this year with a 167 percent jump over last year's reported attacks.

Six rapes were reported in 1985, compared to 16 during the same period this year.

Other increases were larceny (up 65.5 percent), auto thefts (up 38.2 percent), burglaries (up 31 percent) and assaults, which increased 17.2 percent.

Peetz said Odessa's larger population of 100,223 and its "rougher" blue collar population may be why the crime rates between the two cities differ.

"It's always been my impression that Odessa always had the reputation of being the rough and rowdy town and Midland has been the town that rolls up the sidewalks," Peetz said.

But Peetz said he wasn't certain why the two cities crime rates are different.

"I have no idea why two cities 20 miles apart would have such different crime statistics," he said.

While Midland has escaped a surge of crime so far, two types of crimes are rising due to the economy, Midland officials say.

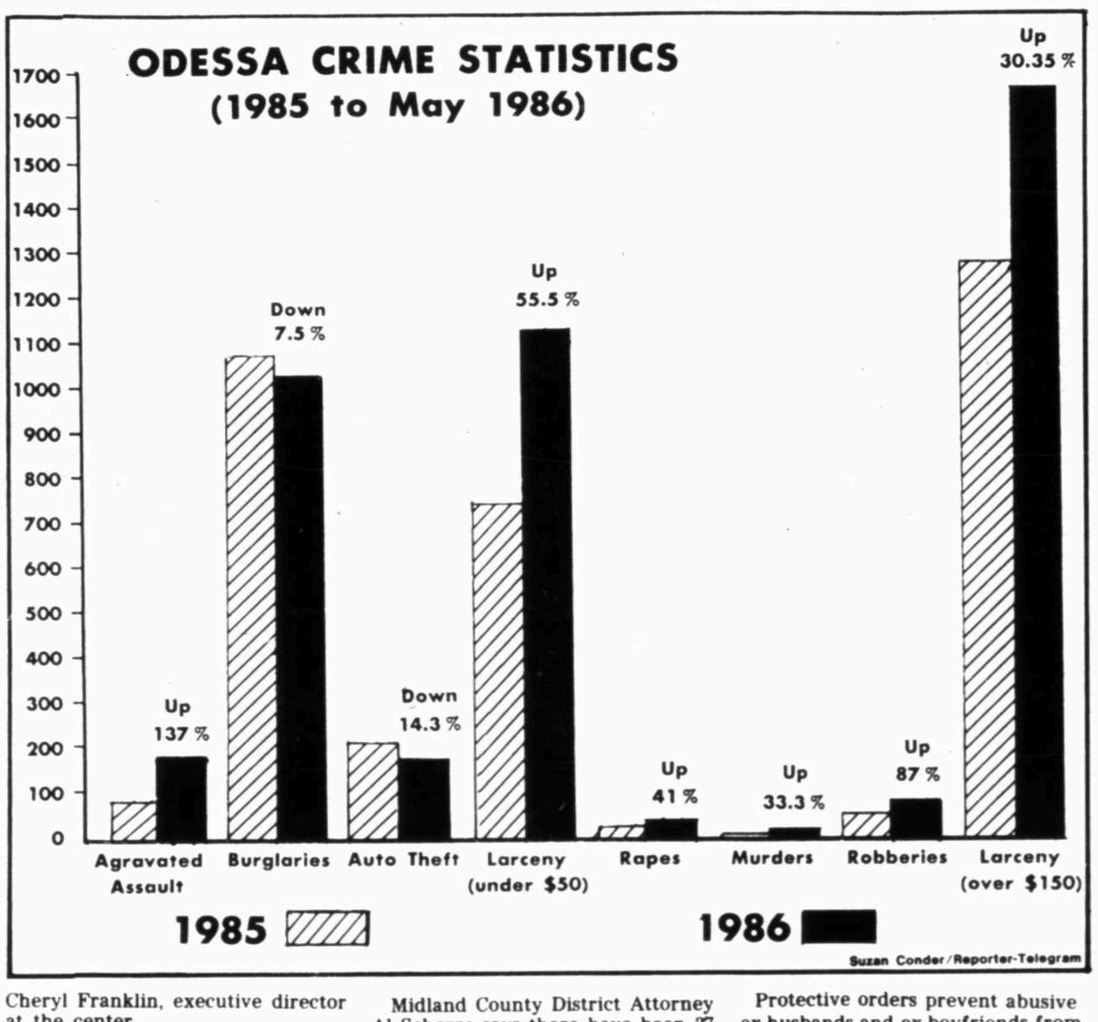

The Permian Basin Center For Battered Women and Their Children showed a 48 percent increase in the number of women served this year from January to June.

The center said 252 women and children received shelter during the first six months of last year while 372 have been served so far this year.

The types of women coming into the shelter are career-types — in contrast to typical clients in the past.

"I see that in the last couple of months the type of crime is a different kind. The working women and career women are coming in," said Cheryl Franklin, executive director at the center.

"This may be coming from some of the husbands getting laid off and not knowing how to deal with their frustrations," Ms. Franklin said.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre says there have been 37 protective order requests during the first six months of this year, compared to five during the same period last year.

Protective orders prevent abusive ex-husbands and ex-boyfriends from harassing former mates.

"As a family's economic situation gets worse, more strain is placed on the family," Schorre said.

Taking care of the injured

Midland paramedics bandage a man Saturday afternoon who was hit by a car at the intersection of Baird Street and Florida Avenue. The man, whose name was not released by police pending notification of next of kin, was not seriously injured.

DEATHS

Earnest Whittle

Services for Earnest "Buddy" Whittle of Midland will be at 11 a.m. Monday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel.

Lowell Cessna will officiate. Burial will follow at Resthaven North Memorial Park.

Whittle, 54, died Friday morning at Midland Memorial Hospital.

He was born June 20, 1932 in Idabel, Okla. where he attended school. Whittle entered the armed forces in 1948 serving three years and was awarded the Purple Heart.

Whittle later moved to Midland in 1951 and met and married Clara Morgan in 1954. He worked for Midland Hardware and Furniture Company and then later worked for Carrolton Tile Company.

He was a member of the VFW Post 7208.

Survivors include his wife, Clara Morgan Whittle of Midland; two daughters, Kathy Hefner and Tammy Whittle both of Midland; his father, Edgar Whittle of Midland; two brothers, J.B. Whittle of Midland and Morris Whittle of Kingsfield; three sisters, Millie Phillips, Mary Thomas and Shirley Homes all of Midland.

Pallbearers include, Dan Saunders, Roy Barr, Eddy Lucas, Danny Mitchell, Robert Thompson and Gene Carlton.

The family requests memorials be sent to the American Cancer Society and the Hospice of Midland.

Agnes Lares

Services for Agnes Lares, 59, of Lamesa will be at 2 p.m. Monday at the St. Margaret Mary Catholic Church in Lamesa with Father Jim O'Conor officiating.

Burial will follow in Lamesa Memorial Park.

She died Saturday morning at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

Ms. Lares was born Feb. 6, 1927 in Scotland. She moved to Midland in 1945 from Glasgow, Scotland. She moved to Lamesa in 1985 from Midland.

Survivors include three daughters, Ann Suniga of Lamesa, Margaret Hernandez of Midland and Elisa Dominques of Monterey, Calif.; two sons, Jack Sanchez of Lubbock, Fred Alexander of Dallas; her mother, Annie Jones of Peterborough, England; five sisters, Jaqueline Falkner and Margaret Hughes both of Peterborough, England; Irene Mcintosh of East Kilbride, Scotland, Ana McMillian of Dumbartonshire, Scotland and Isabel Sawyer of Glasgow, Scotland; two brothers, John Jones of Saint Leonard's on Zea Sussex, England and Alex Jones of Thorton Heath Surrey, England; 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Joe Brooks

Services for Joe Brooks of Midland are at 2 p.m. Monday at the Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 East Golf Course Road.

Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery.

Brooks, 38, died Wednesday at Midland Memorial Hospital.

He was born Dec. 10, 1947 in Ballinger. He went to George Washington Carver High School in Ballinger. Later he joined the armed forces and participated in the Vietnam War.

After his honorary discharge, he moved to Midland. Brooks was a member of the Antioch Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Mildred Brooks of Midland; a stepdaughter, Mae Etta Bruce of Midland; three brothers, Leo Manley of Ballinger, Robert Manley and Carl Brooks both of Midland; two sisters, Flo Johnson of Midland and Billie Gore of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Pallbearers include, J.C. Donald, Billy Brown, Thomas Hunt, Bobby Palmer, George Mitchell Jr. and Calvin Hubert.

Honorary pallbearers include Milton Frazier, Michael Johnson, Micheal Manley, Ernest Mitchell, Charles Frazier and James Thompson.

Elsie Dahl

Funeral services have been set for Monday at 10 a.m. for Elsie Mae Dahl of Lawton, Okla., mother of a Midlan man. The services will be held at the Liberty Heights Chapel in Lawton with Rev. Weldon Rightmer officiating.

Mrs. Dahl, 87, died Saturday morning following a lengthy illness in a Lawton nursing home.

She was born June 4, 1899 in Caldwell County, Mo. She moved to Lawton in 1937 from Oklahoma City.

The burial will be in Marlow, Okla.

Mrs. Dahl is survived by a son, Fred Forester, Jr. of Midland; a daughter, Mrs. Jean F. Grimes of Columbia, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. Mary Cearlock of Marlow.

She also is survived by five grand children, eight great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. Memorial contributions may be made to Liberty Heights Chapel, 17th and Ferris, Lawton, Okla., 73507.

Madge Wilson

Services for Madge Wilson of Midland are pending at Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Wilson died Saturday at the Lutheran Nursing Home.

Substitute believes she was 'called' to teach

HOUSTON (AP) — When a 87-year-old substitute teacher saw about 20 students sprawling limply in their chairs in a Houston senior high school, she decided to impart some of her philosphy.

"Stand tall, walk tall, sit tall," Pauline Keeley instructed her home economics class.

The students quickly sat up and Ms. Keeley smiled warmly.

It was another lesson imparted by the silver-haired woman who is the oldest substitute teacher in the Houston Independent School District.

One day a week, Ms. Keeley leaves the little frame house where she's lived alone since 1947 and drives a mile down the street to Milby Senior High School in Houston.

"She's a remarkable lady," Milby assistant principal Sara Smith said. "She comes out on days when it sleets or rains — days when young teachers want to sleep in. She's been a loyal person and the kids respect her. She's an inspiration to me, to us all."

Ms. Smith said she would call on Ms. Keeley more if it weren't for a technicality.

"In the HISD, you can only teach half the school year and still draw full retirement," she explained. "So we use her until she's used up her 90 days."

Ms. Keeley is frank about what makes her keeping coming back to teach.

"I say this not to be sanctimonious, but I believe I was called to teach," she said firmly.

Besides, she said, "I have no desire to be put on the shelf. I think old people, all people, have the responsibility to impart what we have — to use it."

Teachers like Ms. Keeley "opened a gate," school board member Bobby Peiffer said.

Ms. Peiffer, a friend of Ms. Keeley's daughter, said Ms. Keeley encouraged her to go to college during the 1950s. She attended the University of Texas at Austin.

Today, Ms. Keeley is still encouraging students.

"You've got a pretty neck — you should hold it up high," she advised one girl, who blushed but looked pleased.

She began teaching in Houston in 1942 after working in schools in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Louisiana. She has a master's degree in music education and taught music in Houston elementary and junior high schools before retiring in 1969. She has done most of her substitute teaching at Milby.

"As long as I'm physically and mentally able to do it, I'm going to keep on going," she said.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC scholarships available

By H. A. TUCK

Yes, it's true! Every 1986 graduate from Midland, Midland Lee, and Greenwood high schools is eligible for a full tuition, fees, and books scholarship to attend Midland College this year.

The announcement made Tuesday that the Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland had made the offer has created national news. And it certainly ranks as one of the most positive news items coming out of Midland during the past year.

The offer is open to any of this year's graduates who takes at least six hours at MC, and will even make up the difference on any other grant or scholarship which might not cover all costs.

• • •

Late registration for the second summer term continues this week through Wednesday. Prospective students need to visit the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. to get signed up for a course or two.

• • •

This week also is the third annual Kids' College at Midland College, a time when youngsters ages 9 to 12 can take one, two, or three classes each afternoon in a wide variety of subjects.

Kids' College coordinator Sue Alford, the Continuing Education Department, and the instructors have put a lot of work into making this year's program as successful as those the past two years.

Sue reminded parents that children enrolled in Kids' College should come 20 minutes prior to their first class for processing and orientation on Monday.

• • •

Bulletins listing fall credit courses arrived from the printer last week and are available at the Student Services Office in the Administration Building. They also can be picked up at local banks, the Chamber of Commerce, or the Midland County Library.

• • •

Only two Continuing Education classes start this week. Aerobic Dancing is a two-week class which meets Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. for only $19. Pottery class meets on Tuesdays from 7-10 p.m. from July 15 through August 12. Fee for this class is $38.

To enroll, just visit the Continuing Education Department in the Administration Building between 7 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

For more information, you may call 685-4518.

H.A. Tuck is Public Relations Director at Midland College.

Lutheran church to be dedicated

From Staff Reports

The Good Shepherd Evangelical Lutheran Church congregation today will dedicate its new house of worship "to the glory of God and the furtherance of His kingdom," said Good Shepherd Pastor David Krenke.

The building, a general-purpose building at 3800 Bluebird Lane in northwest Midland, contains 2,300 square feet of floor space and was built for $126,000.

Dedication ceremonies will be at 10:45 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Pastor Vilas Glaeske, district president of the South Central District of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, will be the guest speaker in the morning service.

Glaeske serves Christ the Lord Evangelical Church in Houston. Pastor Myrl Wagenknecht of Immanuel Evangelical Church in Fort Worth will be the guest speaker in the afternoon service.

Hard-times 'high'

There's a common expression that captures the desperation and hopelessness of people who are down on their luck. Those people are referred to as "down and out."

In three words the expression says such individuals can be forgotten, cast aside and left to live on society's brutal side. There is no hope for them. They are, literally, down and out; down on their luck and out of the game of life.

Doubtless there are many around the country who, upon hearing of Midland's plight since early this year when the bottom began falling out of the oil pricing structure, consider that this community is down and out. After all, haven't there been widespread layoffs, business and personal bankruptcies, and haven't many people been forced to reorganize their lives as a result of this "oil depression"?

Certainly all of that — and more — is being encountered in Midland and throughout the Permian Basin. Times are tough, there's no denying. Whether that fact constitutes the condition of being "down and out" is dependent on a number of other factors.

One is the way in which a person — or a community — reacts and responds to adversity. To a large degree that response will help determine how well the person weathers the situation. Will the person who becomes lost in the woods lose control and run screaming in a panic? Or will that person maintain his composure, formalize a plan to help make his rescue more likely and approach his adversity calmly?

Earlier this year thousands of the community's residents gathered at Midland Center to participate in a rally that should have told anyone watching the people of Midland are undivided in their loyalty to the community and resolute in their conviction that Midland will survive these hard-times as it has survived them in the past. Inherent in the success of that rally was the assertion that if Midlanders hold together, everything will be fine.

Now Abell-Hanger Foundation has reaffirmed that belief while underscoring the economic reality of the present. In a move that embodies everything implied in the term "community support," the foundation has offered to every 1986 graduate of Midland and Greenwood public high schools a full year of education at Midland College free of charge. The foundation will pick up the tab.

The gesture gives every high school graduate in Midland County an unprecendented opportunity for the future. It gives parents breathing room to get through the current crunch without sacrificing their graduates' college careers. And it gives Midland the additional strength that comes from knowing "we're all in this together" is not merely a nice-sounding expression.

Midland is suffering hard times for sure. But "down and out"? Don't forget Midland just yet.

Another View: Fine-tune speed law

Nevada's brief posting of a 70-mile-an-hour speed limit the other day wasn't genuine defiance, but a move to trigger a court challenge of the national 55-mile limit. The action, however, emphasized the growing Western rancor over a speed law that can add hours to an obedient motorist's travel over the great distances between Western cities. The resentment has reached the point — and everyone knows it — that it's a rare driver who keeps it at 55.

Nevada's is but the latest such protest. Other Western states have enacted symbolic 70-mile limits (usually, as in Nebraska, with prior assurance of a gubernatorial veto), and Western congressmen have repeatedly introduced bills to allow higher speed limits on rural sections of the interstate system. Out West, the 55-mile limit is as popular as prohibition or cattle rustlers.

Twelve states have devised an ingenious way of discreetly ignoring the limit. Instead of stiff fines, drivers exceeding 55 on thinly traveled rural highways are given only mild citations for "energy wasting" that cost around $5 and aren't recorded against the driver's license or reported to his insurance company.

In California, the limit is so widely flouted that the Highway Patrol recommends boosting it to 65 on safe, lightly traveled rural stretches of the interstates. That would let the CHP concentrate its enforcement on highways with heavier traffic where the 55-mile limit should remain as an important safety factor. Such flexibility is especially important in the West, where scofflaw motorists who habitually exceed the limit on safe stretches become menaces when they reflexively speed on heavier-traveled routes. Moreover, once half or more of a state's driving public is caught speeding, the state must forfeit millions of dollars in federal highway funds.

The growing erosion of respect for the 55-mile limit could be stemmed by letting the states make sensible exceptions on their safe, rural interstate routes. That might lead to a marginally higher accident rate on those highways, but it could well be offset by the ability to deploy scarce traffic officers more effectively on the hazardous routes and thereby better safety overall. The 55-mile limit made sense as one of a package of stopgap energy conservation measures when it was enacted nine years ago, and it still makes sense as a safety measure on crowded highways. But it's unnecessarily restrictive in many parts of the wide-open West. It's time for Congress and the administration to acknowledge the need for fine-tuning.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, July 13, the 194th day of 1986. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One year ago, President Reagan underwent surgery to remove a large intestinal growth in his colon that turned out to be cancerous. Before the operation, the president took the unprecedented step of transferring his executive power to Vice President George Bush. For about eight hours, Bush was acting president of the United States.

On this date:

In 1787, Congress enacted an ordinance governing the Northwest Territory.

In 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean Paul Marat was murdered in his bath by Charlotte Corday.

In 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City. The violence would result in the deaths of about 1,000 people over the next three days.

Today's birthdays: actor Harrison Ford is 44. Singer Louise Mandrell is 32.

Thought for today: "There are people who want to be everywhere at once, and they get nowhere." — Carl Sandburg, American writer (1878-1967)

Report says kiddie porn on decline

WASHINGTON — From the scary findings of the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, you might reasonably conclude that the country is drowning in a slimy sea of smut.

Jack Anderson

Actually, there is some good news on the subject, contained in a second, less sensational report due for release shortly. It concludes that child pornography — the most depraved branch of the smut industry — is being successfully fought and is on the decline.

This latest report is the result of a two-year investigation of child pornography by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. Our associate Vicki Warren has obtained a draft of the report, which is now being circulated among subcommittee members for comment.

The Senate study is sure to cause controversy in this highly charged area, because it debunks some of the most cherished notions of alarmists who contend that child pornography is growing by leaps and bounds, and can only be stopped by ever more draconian legislation.

Despite the cutesy name it has been given by headline writers, there's nothing benign about "kiddie porn" — and the public by and large knows it. Few issues can arouse the honest wrath that cases of child abuse do. The subcommittee noted that one well-publicized arrest of a child molester can inspire literally hundreds of thousands of letters to Congress demanding action.

In fact, though, the Senate investigators discovered that the action Congress took two years ago has had a dramatic impact on child pornography. Since passage of the Child Protection Act of 1984, which outlawed distribution of all sexually explicit material involving children, the Justice Department has won 147 convictions against child pornographers. That compares to only 64 convictions in the previous 6½ years.

According to the report, Customs Service officials have determined, from pornographic material seized, that both the quantity and quality of child-related smut being brought into the country has declined since mid-1984.

In addition, customs investigators who have the thankless job of analyzing the seized materials have noticed that the number of new child participants being photographed has declined. Much of the commercially produced child pornography shipped into the United States now consists of photos recycled from originals made in the 1970s.

During the course of its investigation, the subcommittee staff interviewed more than 200 persons, including child molesters, victims, law enforcement officials and other experts.

Another myth the Senate study shattered was that organized crime is deeply involved in the marketing of child pornography. "There is substantial evidence to show that La Cosa Nostra crime families exert considerable influence in the production and distribution of commercial adult pornography," the investigators found, and some of the material involved adults made up to look like under-age models. But they added:

"The distribution of child pornography in the United States is largely carried out by individual pedophiles, who produce this material and trade it among themselves or order it through the mail from other countries."

It's not high moral principles, of course, that keep the Mafia out of the child pornography trade. The main reason is that the industry is small potatoes compared to adult pornography.

At most, the investigators calculated, child pornography is a $5 million-a-year business, while adult smut grosses several billion dollars a year. So the Mafia is content to leave child pornography to the pedophiles, especially since the crackdown that followed passage of the 1984 law.

The subcommittee staff recommends additional legislation to outlaw child pornographers' use of computer bulletin boards.

GEORGE F. WILL

Illinois 'contest' may become exactly that

CHICAGO — The Chicago tone — unminced words about elemental things — was struck in a recent headline about the reaction of Dallas Green, the Cubs' general manager, to his players' performance: "Cubs Nauseate Green." Adlai Stevenson III feels that way about his two opponents, Gov. Jim Thompson and Fate.

George F. Will

Stevenson uses the word "lie" repeatedly in his litany of accusations against Thompson, whose job Stevenson wants. He nearly won it in 1982. The weekend before that election a poll showed him being shellacked by 18 points. On Election Day he lost by just 5,034 out of 3,627,128 votes. The polls had missed the surge of black voting that would soon elect a black mayor in 1983.

Stevenson is an unlikely beneficiary of increased black voting. Think of everything Jesse Jackson is, beginning with: electric. Stevenson is not. Even when things are going swimmingly, and Stevenson is chipper, he is so diffident he seems melancholy. Today, when absolutely everything is going rottenly, he seems almost chipper about the certainty that things can not get worse.

These dog days of summer were preceded by the dog days of spring and may be followed by the dog days of autumn. In last spring's primary, because no one was paying attention, candidates from Lyndon LaRouche's not-so-funny farm of political extremists beat the Democratic organization's candidates for lieutenant governor and secretary of state. Stevenson instantly said he would not run with them. (Governor and lieutenant governor candidates are voted on as a team after the primary.) He resigned the Democratic nomination for governor, hoping to run as an independent.

However, Illinois has a "sore loser" law designed to prevent losers of primaries from running as independents. (It is not aimed against third parties.) It says independent candidates must file months before the primary. Stevenson challenged that law's constitutionality and lost, so now must organize a full slate for a third party. His new "Solidarity Party" must run a full slate, but he does not want the pro forma candidates of his party to take votes from regular Democrats, such as Sen. Alan Dixon. So in his spare time he must teach the slumbering electorate how, and convince it that it ought, to perform a "three-punch" operation on the voting machines in November. He wants them to vote the straight Democratic ticket, but then also for Stevenson and his lieutenant governor candidate, and his secretary of state candidate.

Stevenson smiles wanly as he says his woes have given him "millions of dollars worth of attention." However, but for the honor of it, he would as soon dispense with the attention he has received in the New York Times this morning.

"There goes my money again," he says imagining the depressive effect of the Times catalog of the misadventures during his recent foray into central Illinois. On his ill-timed visit to the University of Illinois he missed the class break and got only two signatures for his petition to get his party on the ballot. At a meeting of auto workers, when asked about owning a Japanese pickup truck, he said his farm is hurting, the truck saved him $1,500 but, "If I had known I was running then, I wouldn't have done it."

In 1982 Big Jim Thompson — for 10 years Illinois has been governed by an adjective: "Big" — said Stevenson was a "wimp." Stevenson was on his way to shedding that image by acting decisively against the LaRouche-ites, then he hauled it back in his pickup truck.

Stevenson has a theme — two, in fact: "It's time for a change, and you can't believe him (Thompson)." If Thompson wins he will become Illinois' first four-term governor. Stevenson is startled when told how frequently he says Thompson lies — then he says it again. The northern part of Illinois is north of Cape Cod and the southern part is south of Richmond, and the place is not big enough to hold both of these guys.

In politics, them that has — has money, has momentum — gits: gits money, momentum. Big Jim radiates energy and, says Stevenson, "has never in his life taken an unpopular position." Of course neither has Big Jim apologized for his pickup. However, Stevenson says, Illinois is three states — Chicago, the suburban "collar counties," and downstate. The city is Democratic; farm distress helps him downstate.

Besides, there is a natural attrition in governing. Thompson's 10 years of governing have been 10 years of choosing. Choosing means pleasing some people but aggravating others, and people have longer memories for aggravations than pleasures. Furthermore, Stevenson, a representative of one of America's most distinguished political families, may now have an appealing kind of anti-charisma: stoicism in the face of unkind Fate. The contest may yet be a contest.

Hard-nosed hard-liners have it soft? Hardly!

Hard-liners are hard-nosed and play hardball. Inevitably, they lead hard lives because they spend so much time between a rock and a hard place.

They are hard-talking, too, but only because they have to be, just as they have to be hardheaded realists.

The reason: Life is hard.

It is full of hard rows to hoe.

They are always telling children, "I'm not going to soft-soap you, kid. I'm going to hard-soap you: Life is not a rose garden. No sirree. Life is a place where you're going to meet not only hardened criminals, but also hardened veterans who know from hard experience that there are only two kinds of people in the world — those who give others a hard time, and those who are given a hard time."

Whereupon they counsel the young to take a hard-eyed view of the world.

Children appalled by the granite message often ask, "But won't I meet any softened veterans at all?"

Oh yes, the hard-nosed hardball players of Hardworld are human, too, but they know there are times when the best thing you can do for a child is to be hardhearted.

And so when a child begs to be told that, yes, he might meet one or two softened veterans as he pursues his hard destiny, the citizen of Hardworld must tell the child some hard truths.

"I'm going to give you the hard facts, youngster, so listen carefully."

At which the child often says, "You mean you want me to be hard-eared?"

Hard is the task of the Hardworld philosopher.

"No, child. As you go through life you must be hardheaded, hard-nosed, hard-eyed and hardhearted, but hard-eared is not an authorized condition, maybe because it could be too easily confused with hard of hearing."

Softened veterans? What could be more absurd. Sure, veterans come in many varieties. There are grizzled veterans and grizzled old veterans. Wise old veterans. Canny veterans of many a campaign. Make that many a hard-fought campaign.

But softened veterans? Never. And softened criminals? Impossible. Does anybody think we make judges sentence criminals to hard labor to soften them?

Can women also be hard-liners, have hard noses, play hardball and all the rest, just like men?

They can now, thanks to the women's liberation movement. In the old days, women could be hard-liners, but could not be hard-nosed or play hardball.

They could work hard, but not play hard.

They could be hardheaded, but not hardhearted.

Now, thanks to the feminist movement, no woman can be forced any longer to go through life with a soft heart and soft nose. Now, women can share in the once strictly male joy of being hit in the head playing hardball.

Life in Hardworld has become more delightfully savage than ever since its full range of opportunity has been opened to women.

Hardworld has some extremely bizarre geography. Reference was made above to that terrifying peninsula known as "betwee a rock and a hard place," but is it any more dreadful than "the cutting edge"?

Inhabitants of Hardworld think of "the cutting edge" as mountain climbers think of Everest. It is the ultimate test. Think of Hardworld's greatest achievers. What will be said of them in their obituaries?

To be sure, their hard-nosed hardball skills will be praised, as will their hardheaded realism, their hard-earned experience and their hard-eyed view of the world, as well as the way hard-fought campaigns turned them into wise, grizzled, old, hardened veterans.

Anecdotes will be retold about how their hardhearted resolution enabled them to turn hard faces to sentimental softness. In obituaries such stories make nice preludes to little tales of secret kindnesses done to stray kittens, which reveal that within that hard shell, unbeknownst to a world that trembled at his frown, cringed just another old softy.

But the obituary's lead will say that he was "at the cutting edge." That is the dream of every inhabitant of Hardworld: to stand some day at the awesome "cutting edge."

If he gets there, the hacks whose praise he seeks will say of him in their newspapers, "He stands at the cutting edge of... ."

Of what? The cutting edge cuts and, having cut, slashes on to cut again. One hears of the cutting edge of events, of history, of the struggle for the president's mind.

This last was said recently of a notorious citizen of Hardworld: He was at the cutting edge of the struggle for President Reagan's mind.

This was the ultimate accolade, for to be at the cutting edge of that particular struggle, he obviously had to know the whereabouts of the president's mind. Knowledge this remarkable makes him an extraordinary man. Later, it will gain him an obituary of at least six paragraphs.

Will threatened snake tilt scales in battle over dam?

Bill Modisett

There's a new joke going around. It goes like this:

"What's oly 18 inches log and scaly, et strong enoughto hold up an entre lake?"

Answer: Te Concho Rivr Snake.

Don't laua. This joke reall isn't funny.

Neither is th situation the reptile has helped crte. But before grabbing a mallet nd climbing aboard the "Ban the Sake!" wagon, consider both sides othe Stacy Reservoir issue.

If the Colorio River Municipal Water District obtains a permit to build Stacy on the proposed site, the snake loses its home, a number of landowners lose their land to make room for the new lake and the people of West Texas gain a valuable resource — water for a dry region.

If the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service wins its attempt to keep the reservoir from being constructed at the proposed site, the snake keeps its home, the landowners keep their land and a couple of million people in West Texas go thirsty.

That's an exaggeration, of course. Most West Texans have plenty of water to drink. The question is: For how long? West Texas is growing in population, just like the rest of the state, and as it does it's increasingly clear that if Stacy isn't built, the people of the region likely will face ever-increasing water supply problems.

The water from Stacy would help provide for the needs of Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, San Angelo, Snyder and Abilene, ensuring not only adequate drinking water but also water for industry to fuel continued business development. What's that worth? Go back East for a visit where steel mills and other major industries have been forced to close for one reason or another, and then ask that question again.

Ironically, though, the process the government uses in an attempt to balance societal needs with environmental concerns gives undue weight to the environment. Not that concern for the environment isn't justified. It is. But this is not a world in which man can blindly separate himself from the needs of nature and enjoy it without doing harm. Man has to live in harmony with nature as much as possible, but to a degree, nature must adapt to live in the world occupied by man.

The trouble comes when a species obviously will be endangered or exterminated by one of society's progressive steps. In the fray that typically develops, all thought of reaching a solution that reflects a reasoned approach to the problem is thrown out the door as the participants reach for straws. The matter becomes a situation of "let's win!" instead of the realistic "let's find a middle ground that addresses both needs based on the facts at hand."

Here are the facts:

— Stacey Reservoir has been in the active planning stages for a couple of decades.

— Without the reservoir, which wouldn't be able to provide any water for the people of West Texas before the early 1990s, there's little doubt that area reservoirs would not be able to handle the population's water needs. Considering the frequency of drought, it's not inconceivable to imagine the entire region having to ration water on a regular basis in the event of long-term dry conditions.

— How many people would be affected were Stacy not constructed? Roughly, according to "Texas Almanac" figures, half a million, give or take a few hundred.

— Residents of the region in question overwhelmingly approved the Stacy Reservoir project and their communities' participation in a water purchase program in August last year.

So, the situation comes down to this: The region needs and wants the lake built. The snake definitely would be threatened because its habitat would be inundated by lake waters. Wildlife specialists say the Concho River water snake only exists in shallow, running streams and likely will not be able to reproduce in other situations.

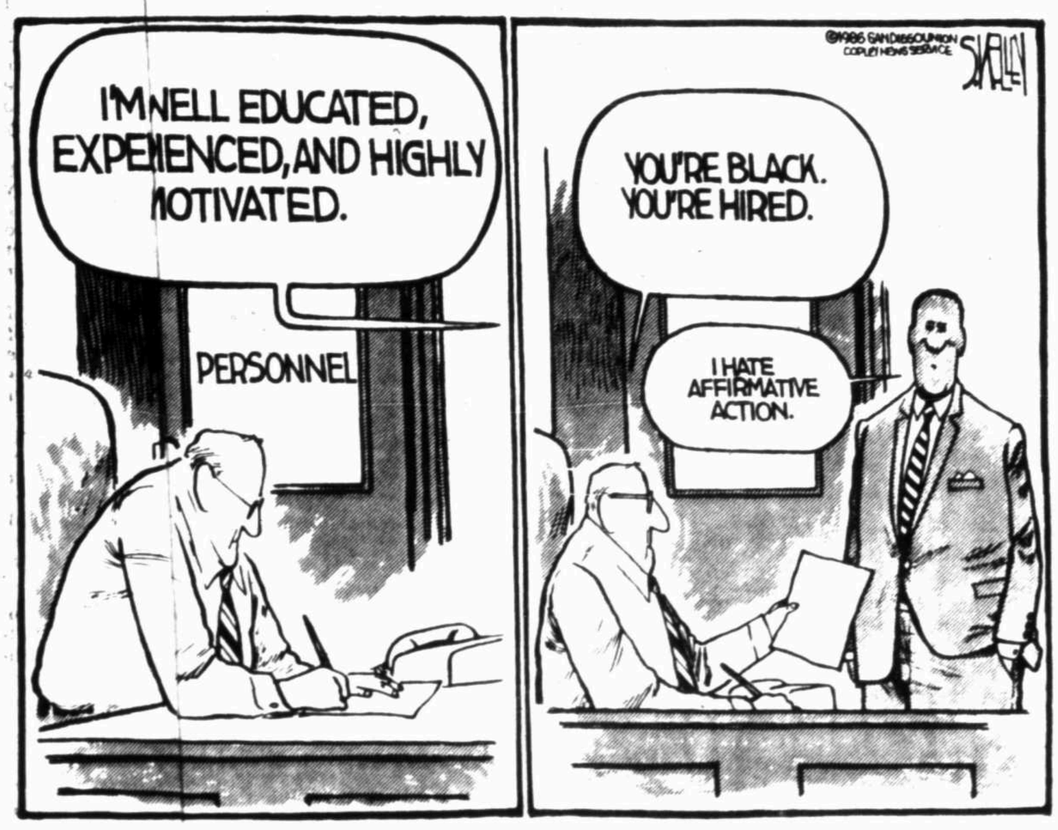

Perhaps not, although similar past situations have illustrated the adaptability of many threatened species. It would be regrettable to lose the species, but it would be even more regrettable to threaten the economic viability of an entire region of the state.

So why not follow a recommendation already put forward by the Colorado River Municipal Water District. Relocate the snake to a suitable habitat either further downstream or upstream.

The point is getting the reservoir, not endangering the snake. It's time to get on with the matter at hand.

Local foundation's gift shows generous spirit

In this time of economic depression, I stand in awe at the beautiful gesture of community spirit and totally unselfish sharing exhibited by the Abell-Hanger Foundation in offering the Midland College scholarships to our kids!

This literally put $500 to $600 into my pocket as well as many other parents in Midland, and I would like to take this opportunity to express my heartfelt thanks and gratitude. In this time when so many of us are in a struggle in our businesses for a company to share so unselfishly in their good fortune is very heart-warming indeed. I strongly urge all Midlanders to join together and exhibit this type of community service and spirit, and together we can bring Midland back to her prosperous old self again.

My hat is off to the Abell-Hanger Foundation for their most generous gift, and one thing is sure — they will not have to worry about their continued success in this town!

Council deserves praise for its tough decisions

I am very impressed with our City Council and their handling of the proposed city budget for fiscal year 1986-87. They made some tough decisions during tough times.

Their proposal to hold the tax rate at .3988 will mean less taxes for Midlanders due to overall property devaluations and, to make up for less tax revenue, the council trimmed the fat. Next year's overall budget has been cut from the present $62 million to $57 million, a reduction of 8%; not bad for a government.

If I wore a hat it would be off to the council right now. I sincerely hope that the other taxing entities of our fine community will follow their lead and give the taxpayers a well-deserved break.

Europe, America still necessary to each other

As a new immigrant to the United States, who has greatly appreciated these pages to air his old European views, I have a comment or two at the close of an extraordinary weekend.

The opening ceremony on July 3rd reminded me of the first time I saw the Statue of Liberty, exactly 24 years ago, July 3rd, 1962. Full circle was 18 months ago when I came to Midland as an immigrant, not exactly a huddled mass as my wife is a third-generation Texan and her family Midlanders for 35 years, but still an immigrant.

Until fairly recently most immigrants were from Europe. This weekend Europe, the old Europe, has been much talked about and thought of. I would like to think that the warm feelings expressed these last few days, of ties, bonds, of heritage, will not just fade away. The theme has been a familiar one in my recent letters, but I firmly believe that Europe still needs America and that America needs Europe.

Of course there will always be points of difference, things we will disagree on. Journalists with columns to fill make careers out of emphasizing these differences. No doubt dissension sells more newspapers than stories of cooperation and goodwill. Talking on Thursday about America, President Reagan said, "The things that unite us far outweigh the things that divide us." I feel the same way about America and Europe, and hope that anyone with contact of any kind with people in Europe will work to foster understanding and good feeling. It takes work, and we should not forget that many people are working in the opposite direction.

The "special relationship" between the United States and Britain is not talked about today as it was in the days of Roosevelt and Churchill, or Kennedy and Macmillan (the latter, incidentally, having resigned as prime minister due to ill health in 1963 and is today an active and vocal member of the House of Lords at age 92 and now called Lord Stockton). Nevertheless, I think the feeling is still there in many people. The history of the 20th Century is proof of a special relationship between the United States and the whole of Europe. If we neglect this relationship, I think we will regret it.

Local merchants need more than lip service

The latest "fund raiser" for a "worthwhile charity" brings to mind that many, many give lip-service when we say that we should support our local merchants.

The Crystal Ball, Casino Party, Midland Community Theatre's Whorehouse Party, Cancer Society and Auction '86, just to mention a few; all of these functions brought in outside caterers at tremendous expense, from Buffalo Gap to Houston, Austin and San Antonio. Why not use local establishments and keep the business here in the Petroplex in addition to being able to turn over a greater portion of the money to the charity or benefit for which it was intended.

The recent Gourmet Midland that was presented at the Midland Center during the Arts Festival showed the capabilities of many, many fine restaurants, hotels and specialty houses in furnishing very excellent food. The food that was presented to the guests at the Reporter-Telegram's party at the Holiday Inn's Convention Center was excellent.

When I receive an invitation or request to support a local charity, it does not impress me one bit to see that the food or decorations will be supplied by "Don Stick from Tim-Buck-To." I would prefer to see a greater portion of my contribution going to support "the benefit" by using local people and their effort to establish a business here in Midland.

Heaven knows, all of these merchants are asked many, many times to give a donation or contribute an article to be auctioned off to support that "worthwhile cause". Let's support Midland; we would see a greater portion of our contribution going in support of that project and in addition help our local people.

The picture on the front page of the Sunday paper June 29th was very inappropriate to say the least! It seems to me that the people who support MADD, SADD, etc., should be incensed — but our Christian community should be outraged!

Isn't it bad enough that we are bombarded every day we watch TV with the "beautiful people" and the athletic "macho-types" who influence our young people, advertising alcoholic beverages? Don't we come up in arms when someone is killed or maimed by a drunk driver? Shouldn't we also try to do something when our local paper flaunts — on the front page of the Sunday paper — a young person "cooling off" with what is obviously an alcoholic beverage?

If there is no other response to this issue, then I will know one of two things: People do not really deep-down care enough about their convictions to speak out OR no one reads the editorial page of this paper.

Thank you for allowing me to air my views. I hope to see enough response to shame this paper into being more cognizant of its influence on our community!

Coni Aldridge

EDITOR'S NOTE: Photographing young people with alcoholic beverages is against our policy. The photo referred to was of non-alcoholic citrus juice drinks, although the bottle was similar to those sometimes used for wine coolers and possibly other alcoholic beverages. We have asked our photographers to be alert to such similarities.

On July 3, 1986, you published a picture titled "Going Along For a Ride," in which several "youngsters enjoy a slow ride in the back of a pickup truck down Big Spring Street."

Are there no seat belt laws in Texas to protect our young children? I feel this was in very poor taste to publish a picture showing such disregard for the law. Whether we agree with this law or not it is a law. Do Midland police let this type of activity go unnoticed?

Please, let's make our children as safe as they can possibly be when riding in a motor vehicle. Young children don't understand how dangerous a ride in the back of a truck is however fun it might be at the time. We, as adults, need to act responsibly in regard to the safety of our children.

Congress faces crucial test without Gramm-Rudman

By WILLIAM RANDOLH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO — Starting this week, Congress will face a crucial test of its duty to the American people.

Returning tomorrow from a two-week Independence Day recess, the nation's lawmakers must tackle the momentous problem posed by the Supreme Court's rejection of the Congressional attempt to pass the buck on federal budget cuts to the comptroller general.

With the entire House of Representatives and one third of the Senate up for election Nov. 4, the Congressional legislators wanted to avoid voting on specific cuts in government programs which they knew some of their constituents or special interests which fund their election campaigns did not want reduced. They sought to achieve the evasion by enacting the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law.

This provided that if the deficit reduction target in any year over a five-year period is exceeded by $10 billion, the comptroller general would be empowered and compelled to make across-the-board cuts in domestic and defense programs to meet the deficit ceiling, which was set at $144 billion for fiscal 1987.

The Supreme Court ruled that giving the comptroller general such executive power violated the constitutional separation of powers.

So the issue in Congress this week boils down simply to whether Congress will assume the responsibility it clearly has under the Constitution.

President Reagan has called on Congress to enact on its own the various spending cuts in the GRH plan. He said the Supreme Court's decision "brings the focus of compliance with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction targets back to where it belongs: on the Congress."

I agree, and if you do, I hope you will urge your representatives in Congress to do their duty by voting for the cuts that are necessary to meet the reduction targets.

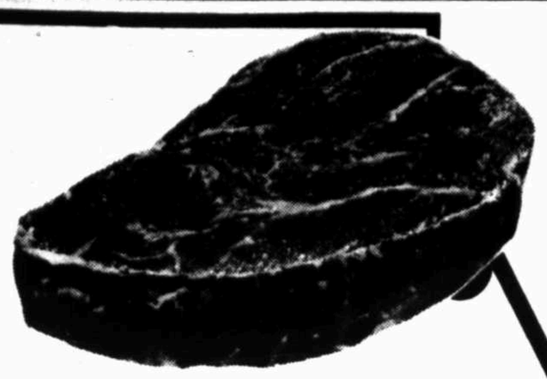

Sen. Phil Gramm, the Texas Republican who formulated the ingenious plan to get Congress to support the deficit reduction program without having to vote on each specific cut, plans to try again to save the lawmakers from facing up to the tough and politically dangerous voting decisions. He intends to introduce legislation to solve the "separation of powers" problem by depriving Congress of control over the comptroller general.

Apart from various reasons this might be unwise, I strongly share the president's view that members of Congress should have the courage to perform their constitutional duty by voting on every cut that is necessary to meet the deficit reduction targets.

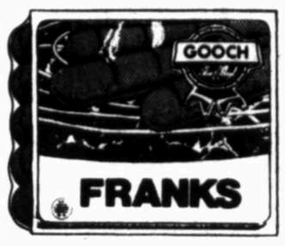

Congress faces no challenge more important than the effort to prevent the federal deficit from running out of control. Fear that this effort might fail, which was sparked by the Supreme Court's ruling against the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings legislation, caused the stock market to plunge 61.87 points last Monday – the greatest one-day point loss in its history.

The stability of the economic recovery that President Reagan has brought about in our country could be at stake in how Congress acts now to implement the deficit reduction program already approved by that legislative body and accepted by the President.

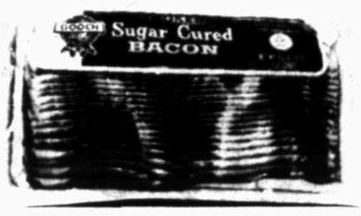

Let's hope members of Congress realize that and do their duty.

MC students eligible for UT merit scholarships

Midland College students will have the opportunity to receive the University of Texas Merit Award for enrollment at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The scholarship for outstanding students will be awarded for the 1986-87 school year.

The scholarship is for $800, with $400 to be awarded at the time of registration for the fall semester and $400 for the spring semester.

The prospective recipient must rank in the top 20 percent of students who will complete 54 credits and have had a minimum 3.0 grade point average for 45 hours, maintained in the 15 hours taken.

The student must be recommended by Midland College President Jess Parrish and enroll in a degree program offered at UTPB.

To remain eligible for the award, the student must maintain a 3.0 GPA during the spring semester.

Recipients will be selected by the Permian Basin Scholarship Committee based on the student's application and recommendation.

Students completing 54 semester hours by spring 1986 should submit applications by August 1.

Application forms are available at Midland College and the Office of Financial Aid at UTPB.

Energy conference slated

ODESSA — There is still time to register for the regional conference on cogeneration — the combined production of heat and power.

Leaders in the cogeneration industry will speak at the one-day conference from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Participants will acquire information about cogeneration as a new energy industry for West Texas — the supply of energy resources, the regional market, alternative sources to financing, service companies and the capabilities for expediting projects.

The conference costs $35. A special fee of $15 is available for college faculty and students. For information or to reserve seats, call 367-2370.

Elderly volunteers sought

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin professors are seeking volunteers to participate in the start of a national study on elderly fitness, 55 years or older.

The findings will contribute to the establishment of national fitness standards for senior citizens and the development of new techniques to measure their fitness. A survey will also be administered to determine how the level of fitness affects the outlook of individuals. The test will be conducted Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

The test will be administered under the direction of Dr. Robert Rhodes, Dr. Werner Hoeger and Dr David Hopkins.

The test consists of simple movement exercises, skin fold, blood pressure, grip cardiovascular measurement and mobility range. According to UTPB spokesman the test cause no unusual strain or stress and will take 15 to 20 minutes. Each person will be given the results of the test and there is no charge. Call the center for an appointment. For further information call Em Carnett at Midland Senior Citizen Center 699-5023 or Rhodes at 563-2400.

New AA formed

From Staff Reports

A newly formed alcoholics anonymous group will begin having their meetings on Fridays beginning this week.

The meetings will be from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the parish office behind Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, 1208 Cherry Lane. The AA group is not affiliated with the church.

The only requirement to become a member is to have a desire to quit drinking or using drugs. More information can be obtained at 685-0612.

Board kills option of certificates

AUSTIN (AP) — By a one-vote margin, the State Board of Education Saturday killed a plan to let districts award "certificates of completion" to students who pass their courses but flunk the high school graduation exam.

Proponents said the certificate would reduce the drop-out rate and be a reward for slow learners who work hard but could not pass the test.

Opponents said school districts would use the certificate as a too-low goal for minority students.

A 7-6 vote shot down the plan that would have allowed school districts to hand out certificates of completion for 1987 and 1988 graduates who fail the exit-level Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills.

The 1984 Texas school reform act barred diplomas to students who fail that test, even if they have all credits needed for graduation. Lawmakers rejected proposals similar to the certificate of completion for students who fail the TEAMS test.

Jack Strong of Longview, chairman of a board committee that recommended the certificate plan, said the option is fair because it would mean a student had met requirements that were in place when the student began high school.

But board member Mary Helen Berlanga of Corpus Christi said, "This is opening up an area for the masses of students to graduate and not receive diplomas. The masses will be minority students.

"This is nothing more than consolation to administrators who feel compelled to give youngsters something after 12 years and some consolation to parents who want to see their children walk across the stage," she said.

Board member Rebecca Canning of Waco agreed with Ms. Berlanga that some districts might use the certificate as a tool to push minority students through school. Some districts, she said, are "looking for a fast way to write kids off."

But board member Geraldine Miller of Dallas said the certificate would be an important accomplishment for "slow learners" who cannot pass the exit test.

"This may be the biggest thing and it may be the only thing in that child's life that he is going to accomplish," she said. "I don't perceive it as a dumping ground. I don't perceive it as a cop-out."

Katherine Pearcy Raines, board member from Cleburne, said the certificate could be an incentive to keep in school students who otherwise might drop out.

"This is a carrot to say stay in school one more year," she said, adding that students with certificates might have an advantage over dropouts when seeking jobs.

Concert will be held for benefit of service group

From Staff Reports

A gospel concert to benefit the City-wide Community Services for the Aged Inc. will be held at 8 p.m. Sunday, July 20, in the downtown Midland Center.

Midland-Odessa area gospel singers and choral groups and the Dallas-based The Mighty Supreme Voices will be featured in the benefit.

Tickets to the concert are $5 each.

City-wide Community Services is a program which specializes in cleaning houses of the poor, the aged, the infirmed, and the handicapped for free in most cases.

Fees may be charged for those who are financially able to pay for the services.

The service was founded in 1984 by Helen Johnson.

"They are picking up a lot of people who are falling through the cracks of other (welfare) agencies," Jerri McAlpin, communications director for the United Way of Midland, said of the program.

Tickets to the event may be purchased at the concert or in advance at Milton's Records and Tom's Pharmacy, and by dialing 682-7181 or 683-3066.

Airport road construction complete

By JIM BROWN

Many upbeat activities are going on at the Midland Regional Airport. Following two years of construction, the $15 million roadway and parking lot expansion is now complete. Air Terminal now has grown from 1,000 to 3,000 parking spaces which should provide ample parking for the greater Midland-Odessa area for the next 20 years.

While the terminal expansion project has been put on hold due to the current economic climate, one phase of the project is under immediate consideration. Midland Regional Airport may well have a new roof within a year. Because roof leaks have caused extensive structural damage to the building as well as damage to the carpet, Air Terminal officials are currently meeting with a Houston engineering firm to determine the cost of adding a new roofing system. The proposal will be brought before the City Council in August with a view to beginning the several hundred thousand dollar project as early as September.

The need to replace the roof was the finding of a 1985 roofing study. Because the main building was constructed in 1958, the ticket area in 1970, and the concourse area in 1979, it was concluded that while the old roof had served well, a replacement was timely because all buildings in the facility leak badly. The current roof is constructed out of a material which is not resistant to jet fumes which settle on the roof and cause extensive damage over time. The new roof will be constructed out of a far more resilient material that will stand up to constant exposure to jet fumes, and this should insure the long-term solution to the problem.

All flat roofs will be reconstructed out of sheet metal and will be peaked to avoid water collection. A major flaw in the current roofing system is that water collects in pools which leak for weeks after a rainstorm. Bidding for the roof construction will be open to local firms with an expected 30-50 persons employed for the 12-month project.

Another improvement under way at Air Terminal is a new restaurant. The High Sky restaurant is now under the ownership of Dobbs House, a leading national restaurant chain with sales in excess of a billion dollars last year. The half-million dollar project will completely expand and refurbish both the restaurant and the gift shop. A snack bar/bar has already been opened in the gate area so that passengers can enjoy ice cream, hot dogs, nachos, ham & eggs, or alcoholic beverages inbetween flights.

Midland Regional Air Terminal may well see the arrival of another airline. America West, an airline based in Phoenix, is looking to begin service to Midland in October. America West would offer flights to Phoenix and from Midland to the West Coast via Phoenix. A Midland-San Antonio-Phoenix route is under strong consideration. Space for America West has been available since March 1986 when Transfer Airlines stopped service to the area.

Ex-workers settle suit

HOUSTON (AP) — Six workers who said they were unfairly fired during a Houston Lighting & Power Co. probe into on-the-job drug use have settled a lawsuit against the company, officials said.

Attorney Elliott Cin said the six employees accepted a "nuisance settlement" of $3,000 each, and that U.S. District Judge Carl Bue had signed an order accepting the tentative settlement.

HL&P spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg said there was "no wrongdoing or negligence on the part of HL&P," but that the cost of continuing to fight the lawsuit would have been "far more than just paying them off."

Grateful Dead guitarist hospitalized

GREENBRAE, Calif. (AP) — Rocker Jerry Garcia, lead guitarist for the Grateful Dead, was hospitalized but recovering Saturday from a diabetic coma caused by an infection which began in an abcessed tooth, a band spokesman said.

Garcia, 43, was in Marin General Hospital, about 20 miles north of San Francisco.

"Jerry Garcia is improving and has stabilized. He's awake and alert and is being treated for diabetes," said Marin General spokeswoman Sandra Currie. She did not know how long he would be hospitalized.

Band spokesman Dennis McNally said Garcia lapsed into a diabetic coma on Thursday.

"He's really sick, but he'll be OK," McNally said.

McNally and concert promoter Bill Graham released a one-sentence statement on Friday afternoon which said: "Jerry Garcia is in the hospital receiving treatment for a sudden onset of diabetes and a general systemic infection as a result of an abcessed tooth and exhaustion following a road tour."

The band has been playing together since 1965, and has thousands of devoted fans, known as Dead Heads. Two concerts had to be rescheduled.

E. Borgnine

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Actor Ernest Borgnine says he feels like a child again when he clowns around in the Great Circus Parade here.

Sunday will mark Borgnine's fifth appearance as a clown in the annual march of animals, bands and antique circus wagons.

"I think it's one of the great wonders of the world," Borgnine, 69, said Friday. "We're all children at heart. Milwaukee has this wonderful parade where everybody can (go) back in their childhood. It's a bit of Americana that makes it all worthwhile."

He first appeared in the parade in 1970 and said the only time he had been a clown elsewhere was as a teen-ager in a Boy Scout circus in New Haven, Conn.

"There's no set thing for me," Borgnine said. "I just walk all over, and I have a ball.

Princess Margaret

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Expo 86 may be the place to be for British bigwigs. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was scheduled to be the guest of honor at the British national day ceremony at Expo 86 Saturday, a day after Princess Margaret visited the world's fair.

The 60-year-old prime minister, accompanied by her husband Denis, arrived here Friday and planned to visit Expo's Canada pavilion Saturday.

The 55-year-old princess, the younger sister of Queen Elizabeth, toured the waterfront pavilion for 20 minutes Friday, escorted by a pair of Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 10-year-old cerebral palsy victim belted out Charlie Daniels' hit "The Devil Went Down to Georgia" to launch the 10-hour Volunteer Jam concert Saturday.

Jason Ellsworth of Broad Brook, Conn., was accompanied on the fiddle by Daniels as they kicked off the concert at the Starwood Amphitheater to benefit United Cerebral Palsy. The concert, the 12th in as many years, was held outdoors for the first time.

The youngster, who has performed at the Grand Ole Opry, also sang the Hank Williams' hit "Long Gone Lonesome Blues."

"It's a good way to start the Jam," Daniels said as the crowd, estimated at 10,000, gave Jason a standing ovation.

Two dozen entertainers, whose names were released as the concert began, were on the program. The Allman Brothers Band was on the program for the concert, the first time all surviving original members of the group will have performed together in a decade.

Other entertainers included John Schneider, John Conlee, the Judds, Bill Monroe, Pat Boone and Carl Perkins. Gov. Lamar Alexander, a pianist, was also scheduled to perform during a segment saluting Tennessee music.

Performers donate their time and Daniels pays their expenses.

One hour of the concert was to be broadcast by the Voice of America to a potential audience of 120 million around the world.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Detective writer Mickey Spillane wanted little to do with the process of making his character "Mike Hammer" come to the screen in a television movie, says producer Jay Bernstein.

Bernstein said Friday that Spillane listed only a few conditions for his character in the TV movie "Murder Me, Murder You" which aired April 9, 1983.

Among them were that Mike Hammer would have short hair, the story would take place in New York City, Hammer would carry a .45-caliber handgun, "not a sissy .38," and the detective's secretary, Velda, would be a busy brunette.

The movie spawned a CBS series.

Boy George

LONDON (AP) — British singer Boy George, a pioneer in the rock world trend of androgynous chic, was arrested Saturday and charged with heroin possession, police said.

Nearly 12 hours after taking him in, Scotland Yard released the 25-year-old pop star and he was ordered to appear before a London magistrate on July 29.

Boy George, who was said to be undergoing treatment for heroin addiction, left Harrow police station in north London in a chauffeur-driven car with a police escort, smiling and waving.

His driver, Bill Button, said that when drugs squad detectives picked the singer up at an undisclosed address east of London at 10 a.m., "George was in good form. He looked good enough to do a concert."

Dr. Meg Patterson, who was treating Boy George's addiction, was said to be upset that police did not wait for the treatment to be completed, but Scotland Yard said he was examined by a police surgeon and pronounced fit for interrogation.

"He's okay," said Superintendent Michael Hames of the drugs squad, who announced the charge to reporters as Boy George left Harrow station.

Boy George, with his feminine coiffure, pancake makeup and cheerfully admitted bisexuality, rocketed to fame with hits like "Karma Chameleon" and "Do You Really Want to Hurt Me."

But last week, after drug allegations surfaced, his London home was raided by police. He was not there, and police appealed to him to come forward for questioning.

Press Association, the domestic news agency, said police had intended to leave him alone until he completed his treatment, but apparently changed their minds.

Four people, including his brother Kevin O'Dowd, were remanded in custody Thursday.

ROME (NYT) — Pope John Paul II says that angels exist, but that they have always been misunderstood.

The pope, who of late has often spoken of the devil, notably in his recent encyclical on the Holy Spirit, discussed angels on Wednesday, at his weekly audience before 10,000 people in St. Peter's Square.

"The angels are those creatures which are unseen," the pope said. "They are invisible, for they are purely spiritual beings."

The pope said belief in angels "does not constitute the central content of the world of God," but added that angels were "collateral yet inseparable from the central revelation."

The pope said that on the question of exactly who angels are, "confusion at times is great...All of the church's tradition is unanimous in affirming that they do exist," John Paul said.

Runs in bunches, but Captains steer the ship

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland will send Vic Romanovsky, 0-1, to the mound at 6 p.m. today in Angels Stadium as the Angels attempt to even the five-game Texas League series at 2-2.

Led by Daron McCue and Alan Cockrell, who knocked in four runs apiece, Shreveport's Captains outlasted Midland, 15-12, in 30-hit, five hitbatsmen, 12 walk spectacle before 1,836 witnesses at Angels Stadium Saturday night.

One reason Midland wound up on the losing end was that 10 of the walks were issued by four Midland pitchers.

Things started out promisingly enough with Shreveport jumping to 6-0 and 8-3 leads before Midland rallied to tie it at 8-8. The Captains then struck for four runs and it was 12-8. That was only after 13 1/2 innings. However, what promised to be a slugfest then deteriorated into a pitching battle between George Ferran and Midland lefthander Randy Harvey.

Midland made a late run at pulling out another late hour victory , scoring four runs in the eighth as James Randall knocked into two runs with a single and Al Romero brought home two more runs in with his sixth homer.

That trimmed the lead of the Texas League East Division leaders to 13-12, but a couple of two-out errors by third baseman Pat Keedy opened the door for a couple of Shreveport insurance runs in the ninth, which took the sting out of the comeback.

IT WAS a terrible night for pitchers. Phil Venturino, returning from a 7-0 sojourn with Palm Springs of the California League, received a rude welcome home greeting. Cockrell, whose homer won the series opener, hit a two-run double in the four-run first for Shreveport and then belted a two-run homer in the second to give the Captains a 6-0 lead.

Before the night was over Cockrell added a single and chased one outfielder to the warning track for an out.

Midland bounced back with three in the second against Shreveport starter Charlie Corbell, a rare minor league 20-game winner last year at Fresno, when Brian Brady singled home one run and David Heath knocked in two more.

Although Shreveport sent Venturino to an early shower with two more runs in the third for an 8-3 lead, Midland tied it in the home third, sending 11 batters to the plate and scoring five times.

James Randall ignited the rally with a triple and Kevin King supplied the big wallop with a three-run homer, his 14th of the season. Two hit batsman and a walk helped.

SHREVEPORT went ahead for keeps in the fourth. Lefthander Vance Lovelace, who had come on to get the final out in the third, walked the first three batters and before Harvey could retire the side Charlie Hayes' sacrifice fly, Angel Escobar's single and McCue's two-run single gave Ferran, who had relieved Corbell in the third, the lead.

Ferran held on the rest of the way despite the lapse in the eighth, to notch his 11th win without a defeat.

King and Brady each had three hits for Midland while McCue, Cockrell and Todd Thomas had three hit nights for the Captains.

Rangers' Hough still owns Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Indians kuckle under to Charlie Hough whether they're in last place or are one of the hotter clubs in baseball.

"I don't know what it is. I've been lucky that I never had a gem pitched against me and it seems that I've always had a bit of a cushion against them," Hough, an American League All-Star, said after the Texas Rangers stopped Cleveland 11-6 Saturday.

The knuckle-balling Hough, 9-4, has won his last eight starts against the Indians. Saturday, Hough was in command until the eighth inning when, with an 11-3 lead, he allowed three solo home runs.

"I was pretty much trying to get the game over by throwing strikes. I was saying, 'Here, hit it; here hit it.' That's pretty tough to do in the big leagues," Hough said.

He has accounted for eight of the Rangers' last 11 victories against Cleveland. He recorded the Rangers' only other victory against Cleveland this year on May 12, a 19-2 drubbing.

Scott Fletcher provided his share of the offensive support for Hough, scoring three runs, hitting a run-scoring single, a double and a two-run homer to raise his batting average to .317. Texas had 15 hits in all.

"I'm thankful to the lord for it," Fletcher said. "It sounds simple, keeping your eye on the ball and hitting it. But I've go to try to stay consistent in seeing the ball, not pulling off of it, in keeping my concentration."

Hough allowed nine hits, struck out four and walked two. Hough, who last lost to Cleveland on April 23, 1984, left after 7 2-3 innings following eighth-inning homers by Joe Carter, Pat Tabler and rookie Cory Snyder.

The victory snapped a three-game Ranger losing streak and ended the Indians' three-game winning streak. It was only Cleveland's third loss in 13 games.

John Butcher, 1-6, lasted only 2 2-3 innings, giving up six runs and nine hits. Each Texas starter had at least one hit by the third inning.

Texas scored twice in the first on Pete O'Brien's RBI single, the first of his three hits, and Pete Incaviglia's run-scoring grounder.

With two outs in the third, the Rangers strung together six straight hits for five runs and a 7-0 lead. Incaviglia and Gary Ward singled before Larry Parrish blooped a run-scoring hit. Steve Buechele doubled in a run, knocking out Butcher. Toby Harrah greeted Don Schulze with a two-run double and Orlando Mercado capped the uprising with an RBI single.

Cleveland scored single runs in the fourth, sixth and seventh on Mel Hall's RBI double, a run-scoring double-play grounder by Tabler and Andy Allanson's RBI single.

Fletcher doubled in the seventh and scored on O'Brien's triple before Ruben Sierra drove in a run on a groundout.

Texas took an 11-3 lead in the eighth when Oddibe McDowell walked and scored on Fletcher's second homer of the season.

Walker rips Rawley, leads Astros to win over Phillies

HOUSTON (AP) — Rookie Tony Walker hasn't exactly set the National League on its ear, but against All-Star Shane Rawley, Walker has hit like an All-Star.

"He's the only guy I can hit, I think I'll take him to dinner," Walker said after collecting three hits, including a home run and driving in three runs to lead the Houston Astros to a 4-3 victory Saturday over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Walker, who entered Saturday's game with a .194 average, has two home runs this season — both off Rawley — and has five hits and 10 at-bats against the Philadelphia lefthander.

"It's nice to get those hits off an All-Star," Walker continued. "Now I can go home and watch the (All-Star) game and tell all my buddies that I've got two home runs off an All-Star."

Nolan Ryan, 6-6, won his third straight game since coming off the disabled list on June 24. Ryan went six innings and gave up three runs on three hits while striking out eight and walking five.

"Nolan threw good. He pitched himself out of several jams," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "He was getting a little tired when I took him out."

Dave Smith, who has been suffering from a rib injury, recorded his 17th save and his first since June 12, with three innings of perfect relief. Smith ranks second in saves behind Montreal's Jeff Reardon with 20.

"Last night was the first time I was throwing pain-free in two and one-half weeks," Smith said. "That makes a big difference when you don't have to worry about pulling it again."

TC squads tipped early in state play

From Staff Reports

The three Midland entries were quick work for the strong 25-team field assembled at Ulmer Park for the Girls 15 & Under ASA State Tournament this weekend.

Emerging from the field were two unbeaten teams — the Silver Streaks from Alvin and Lake Jackson Chaos who will play at 9:30 a.m. for a spot in the championship game at 2 p.m. today. But four others are still alive for a chance at the state title.

In a late game Saturday, Woodlands Outlaws eliminated El Paso Knights, 4-0, but the Wichita Falls Sensations and Texas City Mustangs went into extra innings. Also still alive are Freeport and Galveston Rotary Club Wheels. Games begin at 8 a.m. at Ulmer Park.

And though the Midland Mavrix, Midland Bombers and the Midland Misfits were eliminated after compiling just two wins between them in the double elimination tournament, they had nothing to hang their heads about.

The Mavrix won their first game Friday, 6-4 over the Lewisville Outfits, but then dropped their next two games Saturday, 12-1 to the Texas City Mustangs and 14-2 to Woodlands Outlaws.

After each dropped its first game, Midland's Misfits won the matchup of Tall City squads, 12-11, over the Midland Bombers. The Misfits losses came 11-4 to the Silver Streaks and 9-5 to the El Paso Knights. The Bombers fell 16-6 in their opener to the Galveston Rotary Club Wheels Friday.

North Central drops from unbeaten list

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Midland North Central, the Tall City's champion Little League champion dropped out of the winner's bracket in District III Little League tournament play Saturday night.

North Central was beaten by Big Spring American, 7-5, Saturday night, leaving Midland Western as the lone Tall City team left in the winner's bracket.

Big Spring American will play Odessa Northeast on Monday night, while North Central drops to the loser's bracket to face Odessa Alamo Monday.

Big Spring's Jonathan Downey scattered seven hits to earn the win, while Allen Chase was saddled with the loss for North Central. Dewayne Culpepper, Jim Patton and Jim Stanton each had two hits for Midland. Stanton also added a pair of rbi.

Midland Western is the lone Tall City team left unscathed in the winner's bracket, but three Midland teams are fighting for a berth in next week's finals through the loser's bracket, Tower, defending champion Eastern and North Central.

In Friday's action, Midland Western defeated Big Spring's Texas League team, 9-0, to advance to the third round against Odessa's Jim Parker. It was Western's second lopsided win of the tournament. They have outscored opponents 30-1.

Western's Raymond Domingues was the winner, striking out 11. The loser was Steven Robles. Western's offense was aided by eight wild pitches by Big Spring pitchers.

Western is now idle until Tuesday night when they will face Odessa Jim Parker, a 5-0 winner over Big Spring National Friday. That game is slated for an 8 p.m. start Tuesday at the American League Park.

In other action, Odessa Northeast defeated Midland Eastern, 8-1, to drop defending champion Eastern into the loser's bracket. Northeast's Stormy Case was the winner and also hit a home run. Mark Reyes took the loss for Eastern.

Eastern now hooks up with Midland Tower in an elimination game Monday night at 8 p.m. at the American League Park.

North Central's Monday night game will begin at 8 p.m. at the National League Park.

U.S. boxers off to fast start, win five matches

MOSCOW (AP) — Terrance Southerland and Ernesto Chavez, two last-minute substitutes on the weakened United States boxing team, made their international debuts with victories Saturday as five Americans won first-round matches at the Goodwill Games.

Diver Michele Mitchell of the U.S. and the American women's volleyball team won bronze medals, while the water polo squad defeated West Germany 7-5, clinching a medal.

Despite the U.S. successes, the Soviet Union continued to dominate at the games. Soviet athletes have collected 47 gold medals and 128 medals overall, well ahead of the United States' 31 golds and 90 total medals.

Southerland, a lightweight from Cincinnati who returned to boxing in 1985 after a four-year break, won a 5-0 decision over Ireland's Thomas Tobin.

Chavez, a welterweight from Garden Grove, Calif., wrapped up the afternoon competition by outpointing three-time Irish national champion William Walsh, 4-1.

Bernard Price of Muncie, Ind., won a medical walkover in the 119-pound class from no-show Mongolian Tserendorzhi Amarzhargal. Middleweight Parker White of Richmond, Calif., scored a 5-0 decision over Brazil's Joze da Silva.

Light heavyweight Harvey Richards of Springfield, Ill., stopped Tanzania's Ruben Mkhere at 1:33 of the first round.

Five Soviet boxers also won bouts.

King leads hot, shaky, wet Women's U.S. Open

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — Betsy King salvaged a 2-under-par 70 and a one-shot lead Saturday in the Women's U.S. Open Golf Championship that has been plagued by fire, flood, storm and earthquake.

"This is going to become a Tour story," King predicted after she'd survived a two-hour, 17-minute storm delay and posted a 213 total for three rounds of this weather-plagued 41st American national championship.

"I can see us, 10 years from now, saying, 'You remember back in '86 when we had all the weather, and the fire and the earthquake'?" King said of the elements and events that have overshadowed the golf.

They have included:

—The fire. Noxious fumes of burning phosphorus from a derailed tanker that forced the evacuation of some 30,000 people in nearby Miamisburg, Ohio and chased some players from their hotel rooms.

—The flood. Rains from a severe thunderstorm Saturday afternoon which flooded portions of the course, caused the long delay and, at one time raised questions whether the round could be completed before Sunday.

—The earthquake. That registered 4.2 on the Richter Scale in Lima, Ohio Saturday morning; 60 miles away but strong enough to jolt players from their hotel beds.

—The storms. A series of extremely strong thunderstorms that have disrupted play in each of the first three rounds. The latest was the strongest, with winds strong enough to knock down trees on the golf course.

THE LATEST storm struck at 2:28 p.m. with 10 players — including all the leaders — still on the course.

They immediately sought shelter, hopping into vans and golf carts for the ride to the clubhouse.

Ayako Okamoto of Japan, who came on to take second place a single stroke back, was a passenger in a cart that went out of control on a rain-slickened cart path, crashed through bushes and into a tree.

"It was by the 18th tee, and the water was streaming down like a waterfall. I was screaming. I knew it wouldn't stop the cart, but I still was screaming," Okamoto said through an interpreter.

She said she received a sharp rap on the right side of her head in the accident.

But it didn't deter her from dropping a 25-foot birdie putt on the 17th green more than two hours later when play was resumed.

A one-putt par on the 18th gave her a 3-under-par 69 and a 214 total. A regular on the American LPGA Tour for the past four seasons, Okamoto played the back nine in 32 and used only 10 putts on those nine holes.

It was three shots back to Judy Dickinson, Sally Little and Deb Richard, tied at 217. Little and Richard each matched par 72. Dickinson, who shared the second-round lead with King, slipped to a 74.

The group at 218, five strokes off the pace, included amateur Joan Pitcock, Jane Geddes and rivals Amy Alcott and three-time Open champion Hollis Stacy.

Pitcock, who returned Saturday morning to complete second round play with a 69, had a par 72 over the third round. Pitcock shot 72, Alcott 74 and Stacy 73.

Pat Bradley's hopes of a one-year sweep of all the ladies' Grand Slam events all but vanished. She did not make a birdie in a round of 74 that put her at 221, five over par with one round to go.

King, the current Ladies' British Open champion, made three birdie putts of about 15 feet but bogeyed the 16th shortly after the storm delay.

Okamoto started her challenge on the lead with a 30-foot chip-in for par kon the 11th, dropped a 30-foot birdie putt on the 12th, and birdied both the 13th and 14th after hitting her approach shots inside of six feet.

Oilers trying unity as key to success

HOUSTON (AP) — When Jerry Glanville became Houston Oiler head coach early this year, owner Bud Adams and General Manager Ladd Herzeg announced there would be no more divisiveness in the organization.

They were going to be one big happy family.

Glanville and his coaching staff picked up on the family approach and they've carried it onto the field through Glanville's "Operation Headstart" program that will lead to the opening of training camp later this month.

So how is the family getting along these days?

Glanville says the philosphy is working perfectly, from the owner to the janitor.

Others are skeptical, including non-contract employes who received only 1 percent raises this year.

"You can feel it," Glanville said. "It's not something we're going to get. It's something we've got.

"Bud Adams has sat at the locker of every player here. He's been to the workouts and he's had a barbecue for the players. This starts with the boss and goes all the way down to the janitor."

THE OILERS have tried just about everything else to produce their first winning season since 1980. Glanville finished out last season's 5-11 fnish after Hugh Campbell was fired.

Adams, the Oiler owner since its inception in 1960, had faded into the background in recent years, allowing Herzeg to face the media and fans' questions about five straight losing seasons.

Players like the idea of a close group. It's obvious management is trying, but many are waiting to see it in action.

"The only thing that will help us be close is to win some games," cornerback Steve Brown said. "All families have arguments. I think we'll get along much better if we win some games.

"Losing causes people to start pointing fingers."

Running back Larry Moriarty says he considers the team a family business.

"We're not walking around smiling at each other all the time," Moriarty said. "But it is like a family in that we're working hard together to produce something. It's like a family business."

Glanville wanted all the players to take part in his Operation Headstart, a voluntary workout program that started in February.

He was not pleased that backup quarterback Oliver Luck missed some of the early sessions due to law school classes.

"I suppose if this is a family I'm the black sheep right now," Luck said.

"But I think they understand that I had to finish up my law studies. I've been doing it in the off season for three years.

"But the idea of family is a good one. The coaches are trying hard to create the feeling. They are around here every day to help us. It helps to know they're interested in what we are doing."

Adams asked Oiler "family" members not under contract to take a 1 percent pay raise earlier this year because of tough economic times in the oil business, the cornerstone of Adams' empire.

"It doesn't seem fair," an Oiler employee told the Houston Chronicle. "The Oilers made money last year but we get this because of problems in the oil business. One percent is almost an insult."

But so far, the family has stayed together. They'll reassemble July 22 in San Angelo to begin preseason drills.

SWC teams split $2.65 million CBC proceeds

DALLAS (AP) — The nine Southwest Conference schools will split $2.65 million as their share of proceeds from the 1986 Cotton Bowl Classic, officials said Saturday.

Texas A&M, the 1985 SWC champions and host team in the 50th anniversary Cotton Bowl, took home $733,559, while the other eight SWC schools were paid $240,000 each, Cotton Bowl Athletic Association president Dan S. Petty said.

Texas A&M and Auburn each received a record $2.08 million from the Jan. 1 game's gross receipts, but both schools will share the income with their respective conferences, Petty said.

A&M defeated Auburn 36-16 in the New Year's Day contest.

Lee grad finding success as rower

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There are a few things in this world that just don't sound right for people coming from desert regions, things like skiers of any sort, swimmers and rowers.

They just don't fit into the normal scheme of things. To participate in any of these events — or other related cold weather or water sports — a person has to travel a good distance.

So it was for Midland's Karen Carpenter, who graduated from Midland Lee in 1983 and will be a senior at Smith College in Northampton, Mass this fall. Carpenter, a volleyball athlete and honor student at Lee, didn't pick Smith for its rowing. That was just a by-product of her attendance.

Under the coaching of Kathy Heeler, who rowed stroke (the No. 1 port position on a 4 or 8 boat) on the American gold medal women's 8 in the Los Angeles Olympics, Smith College has developed considerably in rowing competitions. And, Carpenter has been a part of the growth.

The first year Carpenter rowed for Smith, the team lost all of its dual meets and placed poorly in the Mt. Holyoke Regatta.

In the recently concluded 1985-86 school season, Carpenter was a co-captain of the Smith crew and Smith won all but one of its dual meets and went on to win the Mt. Holyoke Regatta.

THIS YEAR, Carpenter was invited for the summer to row for the Pioneer Valley Rowing Association out of Hartford, Mass. After three weeks of training, she earned a starboard rowing position on the Elite Eight, Senior Eight and to row Pairs.

An elite designation is mandatory for any boat which has one or more former national team members in the boat.

Last month, PVRA's Senior Eight boat finished second in the finals at nationals at Lake Hammond near Tioga, Penn., to claim silver medals for the crew.

Carpenter and partner Cindy Schuessler placed fifth in Pairs and the Elite Eight crew came in seventh.

Even though the team did well overall, Carpenter was disappointed at not being selected for the national team which will compete in the Goodwill Games in Moscow.

However, as a consolation, Carpenter was named the team's assistant manager and will become manager of the camp when the U.S. team leaves for Moscow today.

As manager, she will make arrangements for and get the 16 sweep rowers off to the Olympic Festival in Houston for the July 26-28 competition and will take the remaining team to Hanover, N.H., for continued training until August at which time she'll accompany the world championships squad to Nottingham, England for the World Women's Rowing Association championship races.

Five youth and adult soccer teams from Midland competed in last weekend's Fourth of July tournament in El Paso.

Against very tough opposition from both sides of the border, the Midland five combined for only one win and one tie in sixteen games. Representing the Tall City were the girls under-16 United, the boys under-16 Raptors, the men's adult Dustdevils and the ladies' adult Soc-hers and Berg Dustbusters.

The single victory came when the United upset the El Paso Panthers by a 2-1 margin. Tania Castillejos scored both goals for United, which also benefited from outstanding play from midfielder Shannon Butler and goalkeeper Marnie Sage.

Also playing well was the defense of the Dustbusters, led by goalkeeper Sharon Hindman and the play of fullbacks Debby Corey, Rosa Khonghra and Nancy Angevine. The Dustbusters surrendered only three goals total in three games, fighting the Albuquerque Peligra to a 0-0 tie.

The Midland Soccer Association has announced player registration dates for the coming fall youth season as Saturday, Aug. 16 and Saturday Aug. 23. Registration will be conducted at Midland Park Mall on both days and at Hogan Park on Aug. 23. After Aug. 23 only wait-list registrations will be accepted. Games will begin Sept. 13...

The MSA has also announced that the special called meeting of the general membership, set for Aug. 26, has been postponed until Tuesday, Sept. 9...

The Houston based Texas Soccer Academy and Coaching School returns to Midland to hold a soccer clinic the week of July 21-25. The clinic, which will have both morning and late afternoon sessions, has been approved by the MSA. For further information and reservations, call Jeanne Starr, 694-6187...

Garlits escapes NHRA crash

ENGLISHTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Top Fuel defending world champion Don Garlits of Ocala, Fla., crashed his dragster in a mid-track wheelstand Saturday during qualifying in the 17th annual National Hot Rod Association Summernationals at Raceway Park.

Garlits was not injured in the crash which destroyed the car's front suspension and rear stabilizer wing and bent the dragster's chassis in the middle, forcing the driver to withdraw from further competition.

The dragster went into a nearly vertical wheelstand at about 150 mph, pivoting sideways on the rear stabilizer wing before its front end slammed to the ground.

The car remained upright and Garlits was able to drive it to a stop.

"The wind just got underneath it when the front end came up," Garlits said. "I took my foot off the throttle, but there was nothing I could do. It just went over backwards, faster than you could say Jack Diddly."

On Friday, Garlits established a new national speed record of 271.08 mph and had the quickest elapsed time in the history of the sport for Top Fuel at 5.34 seconds. That run was not bettered Saturday.

Mark Oswald of Cleves, Ohio, recorded the fastest Funny Car run ever Saturday, running the quarter mile in 5.56 seconds at 265.48 mph.

In Pro Stock competition, world champion Bob Glidden of Whiteland, Ind., retained the qualifying lead he set Friday.

Bassett wins Sun Life Nationals

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Top-seeded Carling Bassett defeated Helen Kelesi in the finals of the $50,000 Sun Life Nationals tennis championships Saturday night to become the third woman to win three Canadian singles titles.

Bassett, of Toronto, defeated the second-seeded Kelesi 6-3, 6-3 in 94 minutes to join Susan Stone and Marjorie Blackwood as a three-time titlist.

Buckner's homer lifts Red Sox, Clemens to 3-2 win

Associated Press

BOSTON — Bill Buckner hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning Saturday to lead the Boston Red Sox to a 3-2 victory over the California Angels as Roger Clemens edged Mike Witt in a duel of All-Star Game-bound right-handers.

Clemens, expected to start Tuesday for the American League in the All-Star Game at Houston, snapped a two-game losing streak while hiking his record to 15-2.

Clemens allowed five hits, struck out eight and walked two. The strikeouts increased his American League-leading total to 146.

Witt, 9-7, gave up six hits — including three to Buckner — struck out seven and walked one. He has struck out 124, second only to Clemens in the AL.

Clemens retired the first nine batters before Ruppert Jones beat out an infield hit in the fourth, moved to second on Jack Howell's sacrifice and scored on Wally Joyner's single to left.

Boston tied the game in the fourth as Wade Boggs walked, took second on a single by Buckner and scored on Jim Rice's single.

A's 5, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Jose Canseco hit his 22nd homer of the season and Mike Davis forced in the tie-breaking run in the sixth when he was hit by a pitch as the Oakland A's snapped a four-game losing streak with a victory over Toronto.

With the score tied 1-1 in the sixth, Dave Kingman drew a one-out walk off starter Jimmy Key, 8-6, and Carney Lansford and Dusty Baker followed with singles, loading the bases. Kingman scored when Davis was hit by Key's 2-2 pitch.

Davis also singled in a run in the eighth.

With the score 3-2 in the ninth, Canseco took the American League lead with a two-run blow came off Dave Stieb, who was making his first relief appearance since Oct. 4, 1980.

Dave Stewart, making his third start of the season, allowed four hits in seven innings. Stewart, 2-0, struck out a season high of seven batters and walked three as he ended the Blue Jays' string of three straight victories. Key had won his last four starts.

Four relievers finished for Oakland. Steve Ontiveros pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Royals 7, Tigers 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Frank White knocked in two runs and Willie Wilson and Lonnie Smith each scored twice, propelling the Kansas City Royals to a victory over Detroit.

White, the only member of the world champions who will play in Tuesday night's All-Star game, had an RBI single in the first inning and a sacrifice fly in the three-run fourth.

Charlie Leibrandt, 9-6, gave up six hits in eight innings, with two strikeouts and three walks. Steve Farr and Danny Jackson pitched the ninth, Jackson getting his first major-league save.

Dave Engle doubled three times for three of Detroit's seven extra-base hits.

The loser was rookie right-hander Eric King, who dropped to 5-2 with his first appearance against Kansas City.

American League

White Sox 6, Orioles 3

CHICAGO — All-Star Harold Baines had four hits, including a double in a four-run sixth inning, leading the Chicago White Sox to a victory over Baltimore.

With Chicago trailing 2-1, Ozzie Guillen opened the pivotal sixth with a single and Baines doubled. Guillen scored as Greg Walker grounded out and Jerry Hairston doubled Baines home.

Steve Lyons singled to score Hairston, knocking out Baltimore starter Mike Boddicker, 11-5. Lyons stole second and scored on a single by Julio Cruz off reliever Brad Havens.

Tim Hulett added his sixth homer of the season in the eighth, a drive into the upper deck in left field.

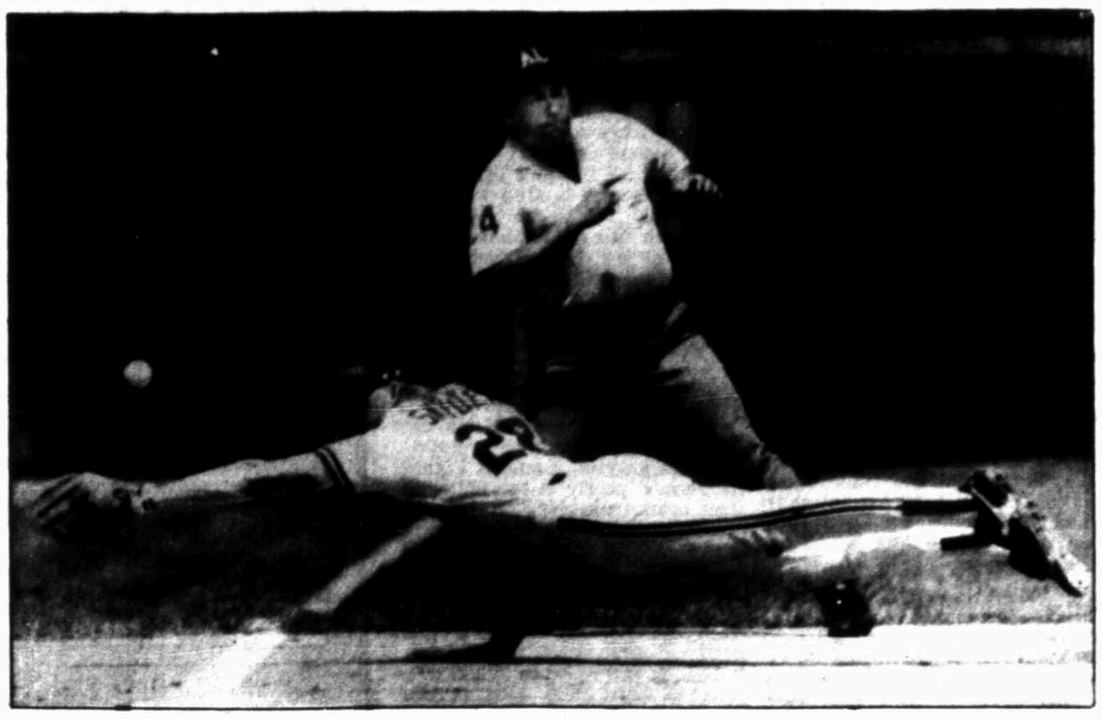

The triumph snapped a three-game White Sox losing streak and went to reliever Gene Nelson, 5-4. Dave Schmidt pitched the last 2 2-3 innings for his fifth save.

Yankees 8, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Pagliarulo homered for the fifth time in his last eight games and Don Mattingly drove in two runs, backing the six-hit pitching of rookie Scott Nielsen as New York beat Minnesota for the Yankees' fourth straight victory and the Twins' fifth consecutive loss.

The triumph marked the second consecutive outstanding pitching performance by a rookie for the injury-plagued Yankees pitching staff against the Twins, who have been outscored 40-5 during their losing streak. Doug Drabek won his first game, a 9-3 decision, Friday night.

Nielsen, 2-0, in only his second major-league appearance, struck out four and walked four to post his first complete game.

Cleveland Indian third baseman Cory Snyder makes a diving try but can't come up with this double by Texas Ranger Toby Harrah Saturday. The Rangers went on to win, 11-6.

The Yankees scored twice in the third inning on run-scoring singles by Claudell Washington and Mattingly.

Pagliarulo hit a 443-foot homer, his 21st of the year, into the right field upper deck to make it 3-0 in the fourth inning. He is one behind AL home run leader Jose Canseco of Oakland.

The Yankees added a pair of runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Mike Easler and Dan Pasqua, knocking out Minnesota starter Mike Smithson, 8-8.

The Yankees added two runs in the sixth on a passed ball by Jeff Reed and and another RBI single by Mattingly. The rally was helped along by an infield hit by Paul Zuvella, who broke an 0-for-28 streak since he was traded by Atlanta to the Yankees.

Pasqua's soft fly ball to left field got past Randy Bush and went for an inside-the-park homer in the seventh, making it 8-0.

Giants slip past Pirates, 3-1

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Mike Krukow held Pittsburgh to seven hits and rookie Robbie Thompson hit two triples and a single Saturday as the San Francisco Giants downed the Pirates 3-1.

Thompson's second triple keyed a two-run second inning in which the Giants took a 2-1 lead. Krukow led off the inning with a single and stole second before Thompson tripled. Chili Davis singled in Thompson.

Thompson singled and scored in the fifth.

Krukow, 11-5, beat fellow All-Star Rick Rhoden, 9-5, in his sixth complete game. The victory kept the Giants in a first-place tie with the Houston Astros in the National League West.

Krukow walked a batter and struck out five. He has won seven of his last nine decisions and is 8-2 with five complete games at Candlestick Park this season.

National League

The triples were Thompson's first in the major leagues.

Mets 10, Braves 1

NEW YORK — Keith Hernandez tripled in two runs and Mookie Wilson and Ray Knight singled in two apiece as the New York Mets coasted to a victory over Atlanta, their second straight rout of the Braves.

Hernandez hit a two-run triple in the four-run third inning, during which the Mets sent nine batters to the plate. Wilson and Knight hit two-run singles in the five-run seventh inning, when the Mets again batted nine men and opened up a 5-1 game.

New York beat the Braves 11-0 Friday night.

Len Dysktra had four singles for New York, his third four-hit game of the year. Rick Aguilera, 2-3, scattered five hits and two walks over seven innings for the victory.

The Mets had 15 hits, 13 of them singles.

Hernandez circled the bases on his triple when second baseman Glenn Hubbard's relay throw went into the stands. The triple followed singles by Aguilera and Dykstra.

Reds 2, Expos 0

MONTREAL — John Denny combined with Ron Robinson on a two-hitter and Buddy Bell knocked in one run and scored another as Cincinnati defeated Montreal.

Expos starter Dennis Martinez, 0-2, matched zeroes with Denny until the seventh, which Bell opened with a double off the glove of Montreal third baseman Tim Wallach.

Kurt Stillwell followed with a ground single to the right of shortstop Hubie Brooks, scoring Bell. The Reds, winners of seven of their last nine games, scored again in the eighth when Pete Rose singled, stole second and scored on a single by Bell.

ASTROS

Rawley, 11-5, had his personal seven-game winning streak snapped. He gave up four runs and nine hits in three innings before leaving for a pinch-hitter.

Kent Tekulve pitched in relief for Philadelphia, tying Elroy Face's National League record for career appearances at 819.

Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead in the first when Gary Redus scored from third on a wild pitch by Ryan. Redus had walked, stolen second and taken third on catcher John Mizerock's throwing error.

Houston scored three runs in the second, on Walker's homer and Ryan's RBI single that scored Mizerock, who had tripled.

Philadelphia tied it 3-3 in the third when Redus doubled and scored on Juan Samuel's triple. Mike Schmidt doubled in Samuel.

Houston broke the tie in the bottom of the inning when Walker singled in Kevin Bass.

Cards take early lead to 4-2 win

SAN DIEGO — Andy Van Slyke and Curt Ford hit consecutive run-scoring doubles in the first inning off Ed Whitson, keying a three-run burst that carried the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Whitson, making his first appearance for the Padres since he was acquired from the New York Yankees on Wednesday, gave up four runs in five innings and took the loss.

Whitson, who had worked only one-third of an inning in the previous 19 days, allowed hits to four of the first five St. Louis batters in the first.

The victory went to Bob Forsch, 7-6, who benefitted from four of St. Louis' five double plays in the six innings he pitched. Todd Worrell pitched the final inning for his 15th save.

Vince Coleman opened the game with a single and then stole second for his 21st straight steal without being caught. After Coleman moved to third on a groundout, Willie McGee knocked in the first run with a single.

Van Slyke and Ford then doubled to make it 3-0.

Whitson, who allowed seven hits, walked Mike Lavalliere in the first before setting down two batters to end the inning, starting a streak of nine straight outs.

Terry Pendleton ended that string with a fourth-inning single and stole second before scoring on a single by Jose Oquendo.

The Padres scored in the third on a leadoff homer by Terry Kennedy and again in the fourth on consecutive singles by Tony Gwynn, John Kruk and Graig Nettles.

Cubs 7, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES) — Leon Durham drove in three runs with a single and a two-run homer and Jerry Mumphrey knocked in the tie-breaking run with a seventh-inning single, leading the Chicago Cubs to avictory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Former Midland Cub Shawon Dunston started the winning rally with a one-out single off reliever Tom Niedenfuer, 5-4. Dunston advanced to second on a sacrifice by winning pitcher Ed Lynch, 1-0, and came home on Mumphrey's hit to left field, his first game-winning RBI of the season.

Durham gave Chicago some insurance with his 10th homer of the year, off reliever Ken Howell in the eighth.

Lynch, who started the season on the disabled list with the New York Mets and was traded to Chicago earlier this month, pitched four hitless innings for the victory.

Los Angeles right-hander Alejandro Pena held Chicago to two singles through the first five innings before the Cubs knocked him out during a

Lee grad finding success as rower

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There are a few things in this world that just don't sound right for people coming from desert regions, things like skiers of any sort, swimmers and rowers.

They just don't fit into the normal scheme of things. To participate in any of these events — or other related cold weather or water sports — a person has to travel a good distance.

So it was for Midland's Karen Carpenter, who graduated from Midland Lee in 1983 and will be a senior at Smith College in Northampton, Mass this fall. Carpenter, a volleyball athlete and honor student at Lee, didn't pick Smith for its rowing. That was just a by-product of her attendance.

Under the coaching of Kathy Heeler, who rowed stroke (the No. 1 port position on a 4 or 8 boat) on the American gold medal women's 8 in the Los Angeles Olympics, Smith College has developed considerably in rowing competitions. And, Carpenter has been a part of the growth.

The first year Carpenter rowed for Smith, the team lost all of its dual meets and placed poorly in the Mt. Holyoke Regatta.

In the recently concluded 1985-86 school season, Carpenter was a co-captain of the Smith crew and Smith won all but one of its dual meets and went on to win the Mt. Holyoke Regatta.

THIS YEAR, Carpenter was invited for the summer to row for the Pioneer Valley Rowing Association out of Hartford, Mass. After three weeks of training, she earned a starboard rowing position on the Elite Eight, Senior Eight and to row Pairs.

An elite designation is mandatory for any boat which has one or more former national team members in the boat.

Last month, PVRA's Senior Eight boat finished second in the finals at nationals at Lake Hammond near Tioga, Penn., to claim silver medals for the crew.

Carpenter and partner Cindy Schuessler placed fifth in Pairs and the Elite Eight crew came in seventh.

Even though the team did well overall, Carpenter was disappointed at not being selected for the national team which will compete in the Goodwill Games in Moscow.

However, as a consolation, Carpenter was named the team's assistant manager and will become manager of the camp when the U.S. team leaves for Moscow today.

As manager, she will make arrangements for and get the 16 sweep rowers off to the Olympic Festival in Houston for the July 26-28 competition and will take the remaining team to Hanover, N.H., for continued training until August at which time she'll accompany the world championships squad to Nottingham, England for the World Women's Rowing Association championship races.

Five youth and adult soccer teams from Midland competed in last weekend's Fourth of July tournament in El Paso.

Against very tough opposition from both sides of the border, the Midland five combined for only one win and one tie in sixteen games. Representing the Tall City were the girls under-16 United, the boys under-16 Raptors, the men's adult Dustdevils and the ladies' adult Soc-hers and Berg Dustbusters.

The single victory came when the United upset the El Paso Panthers by a 2-1 margin. Tania Castillejos scored both goals for United, which also benefited from outstanding play from midfielder Shannon Butler and goalkeeper Marnie Sage.

Also playing well was the defense of the Dustbusters, led by goalkeeper Sharon Hindman and the play of fullbacks Debby Corey, Rosa Khonghra and Nancy Angevine. The Dustbusters surrendered only three goals total in three games, fighting the Albuquerque Peligra to a 0-0 tie...

The Midland Soccer Association has announced player registration dates for the coming fall youth season as Saturday, Aug. 16 and Saturday Aug. 23. Registration will be conducted at Midland Park Mall on both days and at Hogan Park on Aug. 23. After Aug. 23 only wait-list registrations will be accepted. Games will begin Sept. 13...

The MSA has also announced that the special called meeting of the general membership, set for Aug. 26, has been postponed until Tuesday, Sept. 9...

The Houston based Texas Soccer Academy and Coaching School returns to Midland to hold a soccer clinic the week of July 21-25. The clinic, which will have both morning and late afternoon sessions, has been approved by the MSA. For further information and reservations, call Jeanne Starr, 694-6187...

Garlits escapes NHRA crash

ENGLISHTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Top Fuel defending world champion Don Garlits of Ocala, Fla., crashed his dragster in a mid-track wheelstand Saturday during qualifying in the 17th annual National Hot Rod Association Summernationals at Raceway Park.

Garlits was not injured in the crash which destroyed the car's front suspension and rear stabilizer wing and bent the dragster's chassis in the middle, forcing the driver to withdraw from further competition.

The dragster went into a nearly vertical wheelstand at about 150 mph, pivoting sideways on the rear stabilizer wing before its front end slammed to the ground.

The car remained upright and Garlits was able to drive it to a stop.

"The wind just got underneath it when the front end came up," Garlits said. "I took my foot off the throttle, but there was nothing I could do. It just went over backwards, faster than you could say Jack Diddly."

On Friday, Garlits established a new national speed record of 271.08 mph and had the quickest elapsed time in the history of the sport for Top Fuel at 5.34 seconds. That run was not bettered Saturday.

Mark Oswald of Cleves, Ohio, recorded the fastest Funny Car run ever Saturday, running the quarter mile in 5.56 seconds at 265.48 mph.

In Pro Stock competition, world champion Bob Glidden of Whiteland, Ind., retained the qualifying lead he set Friday.

Bassett wins Sun Life Nationals

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Top-seeded Carling Bassett defeated Helen Kelesi in the finals of the $50,000 Sun Life Nationals tennis championships Saturday night to become the third woman to win three Canadian singles titles.

Bassett, of Toronto, defeated the second-seeded Kelesi 6-3, 6-3 in 94 minutes to join Susan Stone and Marjorie Blackwood as a three-time titlist.

Associated Press

BOSTON — Bill Buckner hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning Saturday to lead the Boston Red Sox to a 3-2 victory over the California Angels as Roger Clemens edged Mike Witt in a duel of All-Star Game-bound right-handers.

Clemens, expected to start Tuesday for the American League in the All-Star Game at Houston, snapped a two-game losing streak while hiking his record to 15-2.

Clemens allowed five hits, struck out eight and walked two. The strikeouts increased his American League-leading total to 146.

Witt, 9-7, gave up six hits — including three to Buckner — struck out seven and walked one. He has struck out 124, second only to Clemens in the AL.

Clemens retired the first nine batters before Ruppert Jones beat out an infield hit in the fourth, moved to second on Jack Howell's sacrifice and scored on Wally Joyner's single to left.

Boston tied the game in the fourth as Wade Boggs walked, took second on a single by Buckner and scored on Jim Rice's single.

A's 5, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Jose Canseco hit his 22nd homer of the season and Mike Davis forced in the tie-breaking run in the sixth when he was hit by a pitch as the Oakland A's snapped a four-game losing streak with a victory over Toronto.

With the score tied 1-1 in the sixth, Dave Kingman drew a one-out walk off starter Jimmy Key, 8-6, and Carney Lansford and Dusty Baker followed with singles, loading the bases. Kingman scored when Davis was hit by Key's 2-2 pitch.

Davis also singled in a run in the eighth.

With the score 3-2 in the ninth, Canseco took the American League lead with a two-run blow came off Dave Stieb, who was making his first relief appearance since Oct. 4, 1980.

Dave Stewart, making his third start of the season, allowed four hits in seven innings. Stewart, 2-0, struck out a season high of seven batters and walked three as he ended the Blue Jays' string of three straight victories. Key had won his last four starts.

Four relievers finished for Oakland. Steve Ontiveros pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Royals 7, Tigers 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Frank White knocked in two runs and Willie Wilson and Lonnie Smith each scored twice, propelling the Kansas City Royals to a victory over Detroit.

White, the only member of the world champions who will play in Tuesday night's All-Star game, had an RBI single in the first inning and a sacrifice fly in the three-run fourth.

Charlie Leibrandt, 9-6, gave up six hits in eight innings, with two strikeouts and three walks. Steve Farr and Danny Jackson pitched the ninth, Jackson getting his first major-league save.

Dave Engle doubled three times for three of Detroit's seven extra-base hits.

The loser was rookie right-hander Eric King, who dropped to 5-2 with his first appearance against Kansas City.

American League

White Sox 6, Orioles 3

CHICAGO — All-Star Harold Baines had four hits, including a double in a four-run sixth inning, leading the Chicago White Sox to a victory over Baltimore.

With Chicago trailing 2-1, Ozzie Guillen opened the pivotal sixth with a single and Baines doubled. Guillen scored as Greg Walker grounded out and Jerry Hairston doubled Baines home.

Steve Lyons singled to score Hairston, knocking out Baltimore starter Mike Boddicker, 11-5. Lyons stole second and scored on a single by Julio Cruz off reliever Brad Havens.

Tim Hulett added his sixth homer of the season in the eighth, a drive into the upper deck in left field.

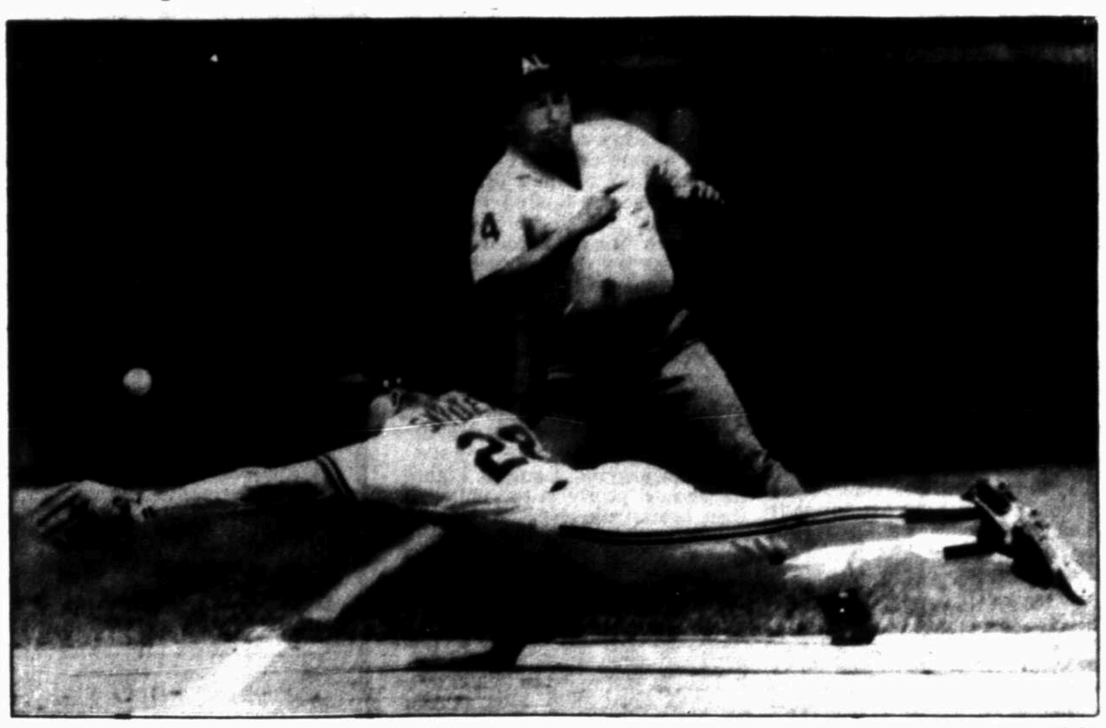

The triumph snapped a three-game White Sox losing streak and went to reliever Gene Nelson, 5-4. Dave Schmidt pitched the last 2 2-3 innings for his fifth save.

Yankees 8, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Pagliarulo homered for the fifth time in his last eight games and Don Mattingly drove in two runs, backing the six-hit pitching of rookie Scott Nielsen as New York beat Minnesota for the Yankees' fourth straight victory and the Twins' fifth consecutive loss.

The triumph marked the second consecutive outstanding pitching performance by a rookie for the injury-plagued Yankees pitching staff against the Twins, who have been outscored 40-5 during their losing streak. Doug Drabek won his first game, a 9-3 decision, Friday night.

Nielsen, 2-0, in only his second major-league appearance, struck out four and walked four to post his first complete game.

Cleveland Indian third baseman Cory Snyder makes a diving try but can't come up with this double by Texas Ranger Toby Harrah Saturday. The Rangers went on to win, 11-6.

The Yankees scored twice in the third inning on run-scoring singles by Claudell Washington and Mattingly.

Pagliarulo hit a 443-foot homer, his 21st of the year, into the right field upper deck to make it 3-0 in the fourth inning. He is one behind AL home run leader Jose Canseco of Oakland.

The Yankees added a pair of runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Mike Easler and Dan Pasqua, knocking out Minnesota starter Mike Smithson, 8-8.

The Yankees added two runs in the sixth on a passed ball by Jeff Reed and and another RBI single by Mattingly. The rally was helped along by an infield hit by Paul Zuvella, who broke an 0-for-28 streak since he was traded by Atlanta to the Yankees.

Pasqua's soft fly ball to left field got past Randy Bush and went for an inside-the-park homer in the seventh, making it 8-0.

Giants slip past Pirates, 3-1

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Mike Krukow held Pittsburgh to seven hits and rookie Robbie Thompson hit two triples and a single Saturday as the San Francisco Giants downed the Pirates 3-1.

Thompson's second triple keyed a two-run second inning in which the Giants took a 2-1 lead. Krukow led off the inning with a single and stole second before Thompson tripled. Chili Davis singled in Thompson.

Thompson singled and scored in the fifth.

Krukow, 11-5, beat fellow All-Star Rick Rhoden, 9-5, in his sixth complete game. The victory kept the Giants in a first-place tie with the Houston Astros in the National League West.

Krukow walked a batter and struck out five. He has won seven of his last nine decisions and is 8-2 with five complete games at Candlestick Park this season.

National League

The triples were Thompson's first in the major leagues.

Mets 10, Braves 1

NEW YORK — Keith Hernandez tripled in two runs and Mookie Wilson and Ray Knight singled in two apiece as the New York Mets coasted to a victory over Atlanta, their second straight rout of the Braves.

Hernandez hit a two-run triple in the four-run third inning, during which the Mets sent nine batters to the plate. Wilson and Knight hit two-run singles in the five-run seventh inning, when the Mets again batted nine men and opened up a 5-1 game.

New York beat the Braves 11-0 Friday night.

Len Dysktra had four singles for New York, his third four-hit game of the year. Rick Aguilera, 2-3, scattered five hits and two walks over seven innings for the victory.

The Mets had 15 hits, 13 of them singles.

Hernandez circled the bases on his triple when second baseman Glenn Hubbard's relay throw went into the stands. The triple followed singles by Aguilera and Dykstra.

Reds 2, Expos 0

MONTREAL — John Denny combined with Ron Robinson on a two-hitter and Buddy Bell knocked in one run and scored another as Cincinnati defeated Montreal.

Expos starter Dennis Martinez, 0-2, matched zeroes with Denny until the seventh, which Bell opened with a double off the glove of Montreal third baseman Tim Wallach.

Kurt Stillwell followed with a ground single to the right of shortstop Hubie Brooks, scoring Bell. The Reds, winners of seven of their last nine games, scored again in the eighth when Pete Rose singled, stole second and scored on a single by Bell.

Cards take early lead to 4-2 win

SAN DIEGO — Andy Van Slyke and Curt Ford hit consecutive run-scoring doubles in the first inning off Ed Whitson, keying a three-run burst that carried the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Whitson, making his first appearance for the Padres since he was acquired from the New York Yankees on Wednesday, gave up four runs in five innings and took the loss.

Whitson, who had worked only one-third of an inning in the previous 19 days, allowed hits to four of the first five St. Louis batters in the first.

The victory went to Bob Forsch, 7-6, who benefitted from four of St. Louis' five double plays in the six innings he pitched. Todd Worrell pitched the final inning for his 15th save.

Vince Coleman opened the game with a single and then stole second for his 21st straight steal without being caught. After Coleman moved to third on a groundout, Willie McGee knocked in the first run with a single.

Van Slyke and Ford then doubled to make it 3-0.

Whitson, who allowed seven hits, walked Mike Lavalliere in the first before setting down two batters to end the inning, starting a streak of nine straight outs.

Terry Pendleton ended that string with a fourth-inning single and stole second before scoring on a single by Jose Oquendo.

The Padres scored in the third on a leadoff homer by Terry Kennedy and again in the fourth on consecutive singles by Tony Gwynn, John Kruk and Graig Nettles.

Cubs 7, Dodgers 4

LOS ANGELES) — Leon Durham drove in three runs with a single and a two-run homer and Jerry Mumphrey knocked in the tie-breaking run with a seventh-inning single, leading the Chicago Cubs to avictory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Former Midland Cub Shawon Dunston started the winning rally with a one-out single off reliever Tom Niedenfuer, 5-4. Dunston advanced to second on a sacrifice by winning pitcher Ed Lynch, 1-0, and came home on Mumphrey's hit to left field, his first game-winning RBI of the season.

Durham gave Chicago some insurance with his 10th homer of the year, off reliever Ken Howell in the eighth.

Lynch, who started the season on the disabled list with the New York Mets and was traded to Chicago earlier this month, pitched four hitless innings for the victory.

Los Angeles right-hander Alejandro Pena held Chicago to two singles through the first five innings before the Cubs knocked him out during a

ASTROS

Rawley, 11-5, had his personal seven-game winning streak snapped. He gave up four runs and nine hits in three innings before leaving for a pinch-hitter.

Kent Tekulve pitched in relief for Philadelphia, tying Elroy Face's National League record for career appearances at 819.

Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead in the first when Gary Redus scored from third on a wild pitch by Ryan. Redus had walked, stolen second and taken third on catcher John Mizerock's throwing error.

Houston scored three runs in the second, on Walker's homer and Ryan's RBI single that scored Mizerock, who had tripled.

Philadelphia tied it 3-3 in the third when Redus doubled and scored on Juan Samuel's triple. Mike Schmidt doubled in Samuel.

Houston broke the tie in the bottom of the inning when Walker singled in Kevin Bass.

From Wire Reports

LUFKIN — Bo Beard's bubble finally broke in the Trans-Mississippi Championship at the Crown Colony Country Club on Saturday.

Neil Hickerson, a junior at Texas A&M, breezed past the 18-year-old Beard, a Conroe High School golfer, 6-5 in the quarterfinals, then defeated Mike Ketchum, Ottumwa, Iowa, 2-up to gain Sunday's championship.

Hickerson, of Carrollton, Texas, will face Brian Watts, who eliminated two Oklahoma University players. In the quarterfinals, Watts stopped Tripp Davis 5-4, then shot 4-under par to beat Grant Waite, the tournament medalist, 4-2.

In his match with Beard, Hickerson won the second hole and never fell behind. Beard had defeated defending champion Bob Estes of Abilene, Texas, and two other highly ranked players. In his toughest match of the tournament, Hickerson won the 17th and 18th holes with pars.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — Defending champion Don January birdied four of the final five holes Saturday to finish with a 6-under-par 66 and take the second-round lead in the Greenbrier-American Express senior golf tournament.

January shot an opening-round 70 on the 6,709-yard Greenbrier course Friday, and his two-round 8-under-par 136 gives him a two-shot lead over first-round co-leader Bruce Crampton entering Sunday's final round.

Boxing

ATLANTA — Evander Holyfield won his title Saturday by defeating Dwight Muhammad Qawi in a split decision for the WBA junior heavyweight crown.

Holyfield is the first member of the 1984 Olympic boxing squad to win a professional championship.

Holyfield scored repeatedly against Qawi, who kept plodding in on him during the 15-round contest. But only twice did he stagger the champion.

The first time was with a combination of punches to Qawi's jaw in the first round, but the champion, who suffered only his third loss in 30 pro fights, quickly resumed the attack.

The second time was in the 12th when Qawi, a two-time light heavyweight champ, landed two solid rights only to have Holyfield come back with two rights followed by a left to the jaw that wobbled the defending champion...

Cycling

NANTES, France - French cycling superstar Bernard Hinault won Saturday's Tour de France 38-mile time trial, advancing to third overall.

His major rival, Laurent Fignon, performed poorly in the individual race against the clock on the roads around Nantes, the tour's ninth stage, and dropped several minutes on Hinault.

Denmark's Jorgen Pederson was sixth overall in the stage to retain the yellow jersey as the overall leader.

Hinault was timed in 1:18.46 at an average speed of 29 mph, with his teammate, American Greg Lemond second, 44 seconds slower, and Ireland's Stephen Roche third, 1:01 behind Hinault...

Tennis

GSTAAD, Switzerland - Top-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden and unseeded Roland Stadler of Switzerland on Saturday advanced to the final of the $231,000 Swiss Open Tennis Championships.

Edberg, who has not dropped a single set in the tournament, overpowered fellow Swede Gunnar Gunnarsson 6-3, 6-2, while Stadler, No. 403 in the ATP world rankings, stunned fourth-seeded Emilio Sanchez of Spain, ranked 21st in the ATP listings, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4...

Zokol moves into two-stroke lead

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Canadian Richard Zokol, taking advantage of faltering play by the leaders, shot a 4-under-par 67 Saturday for a two-stroke advantage after three rounds of the $500,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"Every dog has its day," Zokol said. He has not won on the Tour in four years and up until two seasons ago wore stereo headphones on the course to help relax between shots.

Zokol posted the best round of the day and a three-round total of 205 on the par-71 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course.

Zokol, a resident of Vancouver, British Columbia, who missed the cut in 12 of his previous 19 events on the main tour this season, went into Sunday's final round with a two-stroke lead over Kenny Knox, who shot a 70 Saturday, and second-round co-leader Jodie Mudd, who carded a 72.

"I have to hit the greens, hit the fairways and let the chips fall where they may," said Zokol, who is ranked 162nd on the money list this year with $14,922. "There's a lot of things that can happen."

Hal Sutton, seeking his third victory of the season, birdied three of his first four holes to move to eight under and the early lead Saturday, but fell victim to a string of bogeys on the back nine and finished with a 71, good for a 208 total, three shots off the lead.

Sutton was joined there by Gene Sauers, who also shot a 71 in Saturday's hot, windy, humid conditions.

Tony Sills, who shared the second-round lead with Mudd, swelled to a 75 Saturday to join a large group of players at 210.

Rookie Adrian Stills, the first-round co-leader who entered Saturday's play one stroke off the pace, carded a third-round 73.

Mark O'Meara, whose 63 Friday tied a course record and tied him with Stills, also faltered to a 73 Saturday.

O'Meara and Stills were joined at 209 by Davis Love III, Denis Watson, Tim Simpson and Loren Roberts.

Zokol offset a pair of bogeys on the par-36 front nine with four birdies, and made the turn at 34. He added birdies on the 13th and 15th holes to complete his round.

Knox, who won the Honda Classic in March, was eight under after a birdie on the 14th, but fell victim to a bogey at the par-5 15th and a double-bogey on No. 17. He recovered by hitting an 8-iron shot to within 10 feet on the 18th hole and sinking the birdie putt.

"The type of attitude is to never give up, to keep trying," Knox said. "You're going to have mental mistakes and all that. You just have to recover."

Pokes go long in scrimmage

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Steve Pelluer's 52-yard touchdown pass to Leon "Speedy" Gonzalez was one of three long-pass plays that highlighted an intra-squad scrimmage at the Dallas Cowboys' training camp Saturday.

Gonzalez, a second-year veteran from Bethune-Cookman, also caught a 34-yard pass from ex-USFL star Reggie Collier. The other was a 42-yard throw from rookie free agent Scott Woolf of Mount Union to five-year veteran Kenny Duckett.

Defense defeated offense 44-23 in Coach Tom Landry's complex scoring system.

Defensive highlights included an interception by first-year safety Tommy Haynes of USC, fumble recoveries by 11th-round draft choice Garth Jax of Florida State and 12-round pick Tony Flack of Georgia.

Second-year veteran Robert Lavette led all rushers with 67 yards on 12 carries, including a 20-yard gain. Gonzales topped receivers with 92 yards on three receptions, including the scrimmage's only touchdown.

Free agent rookie Kelly Potter of Middle Tennessee State kicked the day's only field goal, a 38-yarder.

TITLE EXAMINATIONS

A title search or title examination for land involves looking at public records to determine if the person claiming to own the land actually does own it, and to further see if there are any defects in the title to the land, such as unpaid mortgages and other liens, easements or unpaid taxes.

In order to perform a title examination, the attorney or Title Company first traces the "chain of title" from the current owner back a number of years, carefully examining each deed, will, or other title transfer document. He then "comes forward" with this chain of title, checking the indexes for the name of each owner to insure the property had not been sold to more than one person, that there are no unpaid mortgages or other liens against the land, that taxes have been paid, and there are no other situations which would affect the title.

If you buy land without having a title examination performed, you are taking a tremendous risk that the property has some sort of problem with the title.

Take the Clara Johnson Test.

In Alamance County, North Carolina, Honda lawn mowers are assembled from the wheels up. Then, each mower must pass rigid quality control standards before we ship it.

The final test is a critical performance check to ensure easy starting. We call it the Clara Johnson Test. At the end of the assembly line, each mower is started or it doesn't ship.

Come in and give the whole line of Honda mowers the Clara Johnson Test yourself. Each one will start easily, or it wouldn't be a Honda.

SHERIFF'S NOTICE OF SALE

THE STATE OF TEXAS
COUNTY OF MIDLAND

WHEREAS by virtue of WRIT OF EXECUTION issued out of the 238th Judicial District Court of Midland County, Texas, on the 27th day of May, 1986, in Cause No. B-33,677, where Western Bank, Midland, Texas was Plaintiff, and Willie E. Wilson was Defendant, on a judgment rendered in said Court against Defendant and in favor of the said Plaintiff, for the sum of $8,910.66 DOLLARS, with interest thereon at the rate of 16 per cent per annum, from date of judgment, together with all costs of suit; I did on the 9th day of July, 1986, at 3:45 o'clock P.M., levy upon the following described lots, tracts and parcels of land situated in Midland County, Texas, as the property of Willie E. Wilson and Ennis Cole to-wit:

Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, Block 33, Moody Addition.
Commonly known as 100, 102, 104, 106, 108, & 110 of South Tyler St.

and on the 5th day of August, 1986, being the first Tuesday of said month, between the hours of 10 o'clock A.M. and 4 o'clock P.M. on said day, at the courthouse door of said County, and I will offer for sale and sell at public auction, for cash to the highest bidder, all the right, title and interest of Willie E. Wilson in and to said above described property.

THE SALE WILL BEGIN AT 10:00 AM

Witness my hand this the 9th day of July, 1986.

LOCAL OPENINGS

Grandy's is well known for its delicious food . . . and its outstanding restaurant managers. The men and women who manage Grandy's think nothing of rolling up their sleeves to get the work done. Their involvement is total and "hands-on".

Involvement is a way of life at Grandy's. Because of it, our managers are different from—and better than—the rest. Involvement is what makes them, and us, big winners in the highly competitive world of fast foods.

If you already know the demands of the fast foods business, and want a better future in it, get involved with a career at Grandy's. Ideally, you should have one or more years successful experience in restaurant management.

We'll start you off with an excellent salary, a lot of benefits, and a structured training program to introduce you to the Grandy's way of doing things. After that, the sky's the limit. We'll give you all the opportunity to rise as high and as fast as you want to go.

For more information, please call Keith Cattani collect at (214) 221-3780. 997 Grandy's Lane, Lewisville, TX 75067.

Pick a car.
Any car.

Now you can be picky about the kind of car company you keep. Because we've got a full hand of Civic, Accord and Prelude automobiles.

To Honda, the game has always meant innovation in engineering.

The payoff? Reliability, economy and performance. Maybe that's why Honda has the highest owner loyalty of any leading import car.*

So come see the 1986 Hondas. The odds are all on your side.

Each of the photos above perfectly depict the classic contemporary style of the beautiful homes in Greentree North. On the left, are photos of the master bath, kitchen and living room at 4909 Island Drive; on the right, the master bedroom and exterior of 4951 West Rustic Trail. Both homes were built by Johnny Whitley.

Take a look at Greentree North

By GIGI MCKINNEY
Advertising Feature Writer

With the many areas of prime real estate available in Midland, the decision to buy a portion of land and build a home on it is a difficult one. The amenities offered should, of course, be many.

One such example, which for some unknown reason, has been somewhat overlooked is Greentree North, located in the lake area of the posh Grenntree Country Club.This expanse boasts all the quiet luxury of an elite country club setting while maintaining that wonderful feeling of living in the country. Of the original 173 lots apportioned about the golf course, approximately 40 lots just beyond the golf course are still available; and, about 73 golf course lots are ready for residential construction. Although membership fees for Greentree Country Club are not included in the lot prices, the feeling of the "club" ambiance prevails.

"Once this area begins to take off, we have a Homeowners' Association ready for installation, offering to its members many needed features such as trash collection and maintenance of the lake area," said Frank Mullins, Greentree North developer.

Mullins explained that commercial building sites are also in the planning stages, with a retail shopping center and commercial office buildings; consequently, the Greentree North residents will enjoy a more "community-oriented" concept in living.

One particular builder is devoting his expertise in developing the residential portion of this area. Johnny Whitley has built four homes in the club setting.

"The types of homes I enjoy building most are those with an open, airy feeling – more of the contemporary style, I guess," explained Whitley. And the natural landscaping out here, with the ponds and green golf course, makes the view from each window just beautiful. This area gives my homes a more peaceful feeling."

Two of the homes on the cover pose as perfect examples of this builder's work. Each features an individual floor plan, designed by Whitley, characterizing the thoughtful planning for the needs of today's busy family.

Whitley said that he tries to incorporate amenities into each home that will maximize the comfort and functionability. For instance, each of his all electric kitchens boast standard features such as a double oven, microwave, Jenn-Aire range, trash compactor, dishwasher, a wet bar and a centrally located island with storage beneath.

All of Whitley's homes also enjoy the finest in cabinetry and masonry work, utilizing many built-in wall units; intercom/security systems, plush carpeting (some bordered adding a chic decorative flair), decorative wallpaper appointments and spacious utility rooms with locations for hanging laundered clothing and a deep sink for hand washing.

Attic heating and cooling to reduce noise, 2'x6' exterior walls of Douglas Fir, cake ceilings, encased windows, ceiling fans in most every room and Crown moulding are other important factors in each home's building plan.

The approach to this builder's works is also a treat. Each new home Whitley builds has a personalized landscaping design with a times sprinkler/bubbler system installed upon completion.

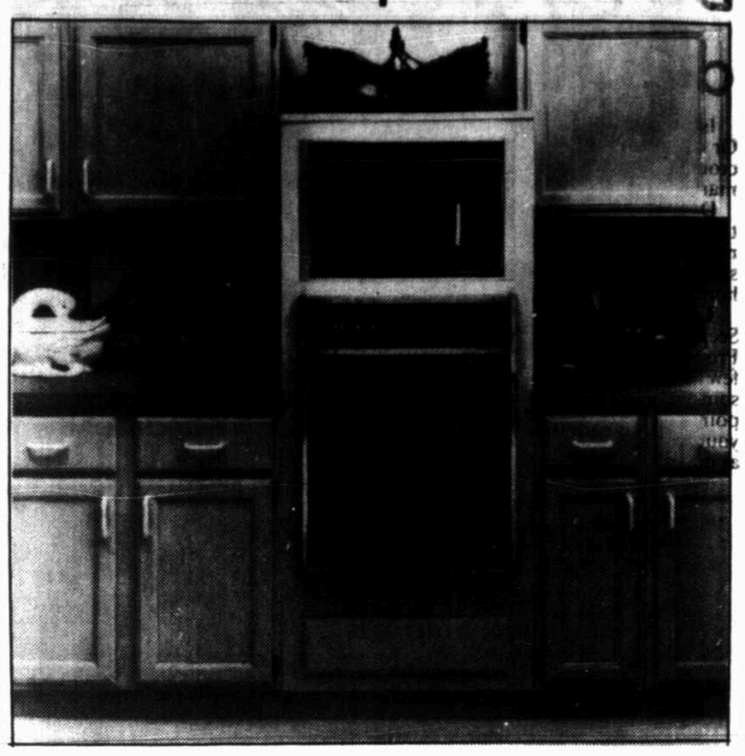

At 4951 West Rustic Trail is a personal favorite of Whitley's. This four bedroom, three bath domain encompasses approximately 2,700 square feet of workable living space. Throughout the open, airy theme prevails, with every available window facing the lush golf course. Decorative appointments such as plush bordered carpet and muted patterned wallpaper add a sparkle of luxury. This home is listed by Langston Monarch Realtors for $195,000.

At 4909 Island Drive, is another completion of Whitley's. Its proud owners enjoy the thoughtful planning in each room's design of this 3,500 square foot domain. The covered patio of this dwelling looks onto one of the exquistely-designed fairways of the new golf course.

From beginning to end, Greentree North is definitely worth a second look.

Ideal small space units

There's no need to go without the advantages a microwave oven offers just because of limited space.

Don't let the small size fool you, say the home economists—the 0.8 cu. ft. oven capacity with a cooking power of 500 watts can handle just about any cooking chore efficiently.

The smaller size is ideal for singles, college students, recreational vehicle and mobile home owners, as well as space-conscious apartment dwellers.

Paint can putt a little texture in life

Are you in a "decorating dilemma?" The colorful, imaginative use of textured paint could be the answer! After it is brushed on, this paint can be simply and easily designed so that it enhances and complements the style and feeling of almost any room in the house. It is also useful for effectively disguising walls that contain surface imperfections.

In the room pictured, textured paint adds to a spirited country look with a pattern achieved by using a sponge to randomly dot the wall.

Any instrument can be used to pattern the paint before it dries. Try a comb, a piece of cardboard, or even a feather. For a stucco appearance, use a paint roller intended for use with textured paint.

Combine two complementary colors by making a random pattern or design in the wet paint using an unsharpened pencil. After the paint dries, fill in the impressions with a slightly deeper shade of the wall color or a preferred shade.

Textured paint is available in red, green, gold, tan and white, and in a variety of grains from coarse to fine. Textured paints can also be covered with flat latex wall paint to blend with your particular design scheme.

The following instructions, from the National Paint and Coatings Association, illustrate how to bring this versatile decorating product to your house.

• Clean the surface of all dirt and grease. Large cracks should be patched and glossy surfaces sanded to remove any sheen. Wallpaper and paste should be removed prior to painting.

• Spread the textured paint using a paint roller or brush. For best results, limit your work area to one square yard at a time. This allows you to make sure the paint is evenly spread and gives you better control over the design.

• Seal bare spots or areas of pattern irregularity with extra applications of the paint. To prevent paint build-up, applications should be limited to ¼" in depth.

Textured paint gives a unique and personalized touch to any room in the home.

Discovering un-desklike desks

Traditionally relegated to the office, the desk encroaches increasingly upon home furniture as ever more numerous breadwinners work at home.

Recognizing this trend, a recent issue of Home Magazine describes and illustrates a wide variety of desks ranging from the sturdy pine pieces used by New England schoolmasters of yesteryear to replicas of exquisite antiques to sleek and elegant offerings whose simple lines complement that ubiquitous new adjunct, the personal computer.

Liz Seymour, author of the article titled, "Desks for the Discriminating," notes, "A desk can be the most personal piece of furniture in your home—a place to pay your bills, write your letters, figure out your taxes, or perhaps to compose poetry or draft blueprints."

At the same time, however, "A home desk should also be a handsome, well-designed piece of furniture compatible with your personal style and with the other pieces in your home."

Dan Droz, designer of the Daphne Award-winning Obie computer furniture series, comments: "The more technology that enters a home the less homey and personal it becomes.

Fascinating Facts
By Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers
Though boobies are largely tropical birds, some species are occasionally found as far north as Long Island on the Atlantic Coast. They are plentiful in Florida where the common booby is a brown bird with a white breast. The blue-faced booby is white with a yellow bill, brown wings and tail and a bluish tinge to the face and neck. Boobies rest near the shore in nests on the ground. They were named for the stupidity with which they landed on ships of early British mariners and allowed themselves to be caught. They have also caused trouble on airfields by nesting on runways.
If finding emergency service for your plumbing or air-conditioning on weekends, holidays, or after hours is enough to drive you into the booby hatch, relax! Do-it-yourself quiz detrmines home safety

Is your home attractive to burglars? Or do your precautions tell potential crooks to look elsewhere for an easy mark?

Despite the fact that burglary statistics are down by nearly nine percent nationwide according to recent FBI statistics, approximately one out of 14 homes will be burglarized this year.

The following do-it-yourself Home Security Survey, provided by Honeywell Protection Services, will take only a few minutes and can help you correct some of the most obvious danger points. Simply mark the boxes with your answers and then score yourself as directed.

Home Security Survey

1) Does your home have exterior lighting?
A. ___No lighting.
B. ___Some lighting.
C. ___Lighting, front, back and garage area.

2) Do you leave these lights on from sundown to sunup?
A. ___No.
B. ___Yes, turn on and off manually.
C. ___Yes, automatic timer automatically turns lights on and off.

3) Is your home fairly isolated, far from neighbors, or not easily visible to neighbors?
A. ___Yes, neighbors cannot see my home, or hear noises.
B. ___House is hidden from view by fences, trees, shrubbery, etc., but is close enough to neighbors for them to hear a disturbance.
C. ___No, neighbors can see my home clearly and are within earshot.

4) Do you have an attached garage?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

5) Do you have shrubbery around your home?
A. ___Yes.
B. ___Yes, but not near windows or doors.
C. ___No, not near house or garage.

6) Do you have windows that can be reached from the ground?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

7) Do you have a basement?
A. ___Yes, with an outside entrance or windows.
B. ___Yes, with windows only.
C. ___No.

8) Have there been burglaries or incidents of vandalism in your neighborhood?
A. ___Yes, frequently.
B. ___A few.
C. ___None.

9) What are your doors made from?
A. ___Wooden, hollow or lightweight.
B. ___Wooden, solid or heavy.
C. ___Metal.

10) Do any of your doors have windows in them?
A. ___Yes.
B. ___Front door has adjacent window.
C. ___No, none.

11) What kinds of locks do you have on your doors?
A. ___Spring locks (simple lock in the knob).
C. ___Deadbolt.

12) How many locks do you have on your windows?
A. ___One, standard.
C. ___Two on each window.

13) Do any of the adults in your house travel regularly?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

14) Do you take vacations away from home?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

15) Are there times during the day when no adults are at home?
A. ___Yes, often.
B. ___Rarely.
C. ___Almost never.

16) Do you have children living at home?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

17) Do you have an elderly person living with you?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

18) Does anyone in your family have heart trouble or another physical disability?
A. ___Yes.
C. ___No.

19) What kind of climate do you live in?
A. ___Cold.
C. ___Warm.

20) Have you ever left keys outside your home?
A. ___Yes, in a hiding place.
B. ___Left with a neighbor, friend or household help.

C. ___No.

21) Do you ever leave your doors or windows open when running an errand, working in the yard, or sleeping?
A. ___Yes.
B. ___Sometimes.
C. ___Never.

Here's how to score your safety answers:

1. Add up all your "A" answers, your "B" answers, and your "C" answers.

2. Subtract 10 points for each "A" answer and 5 points for each "B" answer. Add 10 points for each "C" answer.

3. Scoring:

–105 and lower: Be careful! Your home is an open invitation to burglars.

–104 to 0: A determined thief could break into your home. Think about extra locks and other deterrents.

0 to 100: A good start, but your home safety plan needs work.

For details, answers and recommendations on ways to protect your family, home and possessions, send for the free Honeywell Protection Services Portfolio. Sensible sophisticated snazzy sneakers

Competition on the courts and in the board rooms seems to be getting tougher all the time, and many competitors are choosing to "sneak up" on their opponents — and they're doing it in sneakers.

That's right. Sneakers have stepped out of the closet. They are no longer just for athletes and boys who hate to wear "real shoes." In today's society, these wonderfully soft-soled marvels have become a staple — a necessity. They are being donned at corporate business meetings, aerobics classes and intimate cocktail parties. The range of designs encompasses the comfort-minded, the fashion-conscious and the athletically-inclined.

"I have a customer who works for one of the oil companies and he wears a three-piece suit and tennis shoes all the time," said Allen Manning, assistant manager of Foot Locker.

Women also are shedding their high heels in lieu of comfortable, yet stylish sneakers, and these trendy foot coverings are not limited to day wear. Sequined and rhinestoned sneakers in several colors represent the latest fashion trend for evening wear. Even actress Cybill Shepherd wore sneakers to the Emmy awards, but hers were a pair of bright orange Reeboks worn with a strapless black velvet gown.

Some women are shedding their heels for the comfort of fashion sneakers donned with rhinestones and glitter (top right) from J. Harris. Teens enjoy the color selection of Converse High Tops (top left) from the Foot Locker. Athletic shoes are designed for specific activities such as (below, from left) Power racquetball shoes from Oshman's Sporting Goods, Roo's "knock-around" shoes by Kangaroo — complete with a zipper and Velcro closed pouch for storing small valuables from Foot Locker, New Balance 470 for running from Oshman's Sporting Goods and Kaepa's Aerobic shoes which have added a fashion flair of interchangeable triangles available in 68 colors.

It's Summer Mummers time again! And it was "Old Home Week" for theatre folk at last weekend's Fourth of July opening. Among those spotted in the audience and who have worked closely with the Mummers over the years were Liz and Bill Pennebaker, Mary Lou Cassidy, Douthea and Bill Shaner, Joan and Ted Noel, Jayne and Fred Kester, Linda and Jim Hicks, Flo Hughes, Evelyn and Norman Gould and Mavis and Mike Murphy.

This year marks the 38th triumphant season for the Mummers. The concept for the show was originated in 1949 by Bill Pennebaker, Bill Pomeroy and former Midlanders Art Cole of Boulder, Colo., and Norris Creath of San Angelo. The idea was to establish a theatre building fund. At that time, the community theatre operated out of the City-County Auditorium, which is now the site of the Midland County Public Library. Their dream took shape with the completion of a new theatre facility on West Indiana Avenue in 1958. The move to the present location on West Wadley was made in 1978.

This is the fourth time the popular melodrama, "Peril on the Pecos," or "Gunfight at Gory Gulch," has been staged locally. It was written by a Midlander, the late Bill Davis.

To get the season off to a rollicking start, the show's director, Ron Hughes, and his wife, Brenda, hosted the first cast party at their home following the July 5 performance. Guests enjoyed swimming, visiting and a hot dog supper.

A LARGE NUMBER of Midlanders and ex-Midlanders were in Houston for the June 28 wedding of Devera Fadrique and Martin Allday III and the accompanying festivities.

Marty, as the groom is known to family and friends, is the son of Patricia and Martin Allday and grandson of Edna (Mrs. William H.) Pryor, all of Midland. Devera's parents are Beverly and Lloyd Fadrique of Santa Fe and Houston.

Marty's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Petroleum Club of Houston. A reception at River Oaks Country Club followed the couple's exchange of vows in Christ Church Cathedral. Other weekend social events were the bridesmaids luncheon and a wedding day luncheon for out-of-town guests, both held at River Oaks Country Club.

The Midlanders present were Marty's sister and brother-in-law, Kathy and Trent Timberlake; his godmother, Joan (Mrs. Pat) Baskin; Becky (Mrs. Doug) Ferguson, Carole and Johnny Warren, Sarah Lew and David Grimes, Betty Jo Morgan, Betty and Bill Gilmore, Karen and Tim Thompson and sons, Tim, Jr. and Ford, Dode and John Harvard III, Ken Nordeman and son, Chris, and Marianne and Wilbur Yeager.

And former Midlanders attending were Marty's sister, Betsy (Mrs. Doug) Dashiell; Link Grimes and Karen and Walter Hall, all of Austin; Kevin McCarter of Fort Worth, Lorie and Marvin Stetler of San Antonio, Marty's aunt and uncle, Fifi and Rebel Blackwell and their children, Pryor and Frances of Dallas and Rebel III of Lubbock, and Marion and Fred Chambers and Jonny Morgan, all of Houston.

After a honeymoon on the island of Maui, Devera and Marty are at home in Austin.

FOND FAREWELLS were wished Daphne Pemberton and Louis Kluck at a recent party hosted by Louise and Patrick Whelan.

Louis has already made the move to Houston, where he was transferred by Joy Manufacturing Co. He will be joined by Daphen and their daughters, Lauren and Megan, at summer's end.

Party guests included Louis' mother, Irma Kluck; his brother, Rick Kluck, and his aunt, Ferne Crowley, all of El Paso.

The Klucks will long treasure the unique mural, which was presented to them as a memento of their days in Midland. It features an artistic design in green, gold and brick red of the party guests' hand prints or footprints.

The musically talented couple are well known from their appearances on the Midland Community Theatre stage, as members of the First Presbyterian Church choir and as soloists for the Christian Science Church.

A MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER recently honored Carla Lauderdale, who became the bride of John Young Saturday in the Northwestern Baptist Church.

The party was held at the home of Virginia (Mrs. R.L.) Shelton. Co-hosting were Jeanne Lauderdale, Paula (Mrs. Phil) Barron, FanDelene (Mrs. Jimmy) Mowles, Grace (Mrs. Ralph) Marshall, Barbra (Mrs. Ken) Welch, Cheryl (Mrs. Jerry) Tarpley, Sandra (Mrs. George) Smith, Mrs. Chat Norman, Susie (Mrs. James) Bailey and Denise (Mrs. Doug) Carter.

The party decor and the beautiful cake made by Paula Barron carried out the bride's chosen colors of yellow and white.

Special guests were the bride's mother, Nina (Mrs. Harvey) Lauderdale; the groom's mother, Margie (Mrs. Shirley) Young, and his grandmother, Dana (Mrs. John) Mowell.

AN 80TH BIRTHDAY party recently honored Edwin C. Reed. The festive celebration was held at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Vernon and Lavonne Reed.

The honoree, his wife, Mary, and a host of friends and relatives from Midland and other Texas communities enjoyed an afternoon of visiting and a noon meal of barbecue, salads, homemade ice cream and birthday cake.

Mr. Reed was born June 29, 1906, in Hill County, Texas. Prior to his retirement, he was a 30-year employee of the Santa Fe Railroad. He and his wife moved to Midland from Snyder in 1981.

The Reeds' four grandchildren, Eddie of Austin and Fort Worth, and Greg, Jeff and Charlotte, all of Midland, were present for the party, as well as Greg's wife, Melinda.

SNEAKERS

"Most of our customers wear them (sequined sneakers) with lace tight-like pants or miniskirts," said Mary Dillon, assistant manager of J. Harris. "They're real popular. We sold almost all that we had in two weeks. We still have some of the leather sneakers with the rhinestone and glitter design."

Other fashion sneakers being advertised include lace, plaid, brocade and linen in colors such as blue, pink, mint and buttercup. Vans, a particularly popular sneaker in the skateboard circle, bedecks tropical and floral print designs with checkerboard squared or triangled patterns.

Converse has also gotten into the fashion footrace with its colored high-tops in shades such as pink, yellow and aqua in addition to the well-known white, black and red hues. Manning said these styles are particularly popular with the 9-17 year-old-range, but customers over 17 are beginning to step out a little more as well.

"Men didn't use to wear colors. Women could have a closet of different colored and styled shoes, but I've always had three pairs of shoes and if I bought a new pair they always wound up looking like one of the three pairs I already had," Manning said. "Men are beginning to see a little more variety."

IN SPORTS, there is a jungle menagerie of specialty shoes and each one is designed to enhance the play of a particular game. The designs have specialized features to assist and protect the wearer. There are special sneakers for tennis, for racquetball, for basketball, for running, and the list goes on and on.

Face it. The days of owning one pair of sneakers to run in, play tennis in, ride your bike in and take a hike in are now only footprints in time.

"When someone comes in to buy a pair of tennis shoes we always ask them what they will be using them for. It's very important," Manning said.

Manning explained that there are basically two types of athletic shoes, the court shoe and the running shoe.

THE COURT shoe has a cupped sole, which means the sole wraps up over the leather or top material of the shoe. The soles of court shoes are designed of a non-marking material to prevent streaks on the court, but Manning pointed out that just because a sole is colored doesn't mean it will mark up the court. He advised wearers to ask if the sole is made of carbon rubber. Carbon rubber, the same substance used to make car tires, will mark court floors, but many non-carbon soles come in red, blue, white and purple.

The running shoe is designed with a higher heel to shorten the distance of the achilles tendon helping to alleviate cramping and to relieve pressure to the heels, ankles and knees from the pounding contact with the ground. Protection of the heels is particularly important to joggers, according to Manning.

"Running is done on the ball of the foot, but jogging is on the heel. The heel always hits the ground first with the force of your body behind it. That's why the elevated heel is important," Manning said.

THERE ARE shoes designed for different kinds of running as well, Manning noted. "Some people's feet are pronate, meaning they turn inward, where others turn outward. There is a $100 pair of shoes that is designed to help correct those problems," Manning said.

"Don't get me wrong, the shoe can't cure a problem, but the proper shoes can help to correct or prevent a lot of problems. There are doctors who advise their patients to buy certain shoes to wear for knee problems and things like that.

"We try to keep people from buying shoes they can't use. That's why we ask them right off what sport they will be wearing the shoes for," Manning said.

For a good aerobic shoe, Manning recommended Kaepas' court shoe. This shoe comes with a double-string lace-up allowing the wearer to tie the shoe tighter where the foot is narrow and looser where the foot is wide. This shoe also comes with interchangeable colored triangle accents that pop out. There are 68 different colored triangles that sell for approximately $1.50 for eight, adding a touch of fashion to the sports line.

OTHER RECOMMENDED aerobic shoes are the Avia, which has only been on the market about five years, and the Nike "Air Conditioner," which has an air inner sole and insole to alleviate pressure to the knee and ankle.

Reebok, which has cornered approximately 25 percent of the business in the U.S., passing even Nike, is considered a very durable shoe.

New Balance is a relatively new American-made shoe and by many is considered the top selling, ultimate running shoe, Manning said.

For good knock-around shoes, Manning said Roos by Kangaroo were a good choice. The Velcro closings and the small zippered "pouch" make theme easy and fun to wear.

"They are the only national brand to make the Velcro closing shoes. You'll find some knock-off brands at stores like KMart, but the Velcro doesn't hold the foot against the shoe properly. They're easy to get on and off, though. They are a good knock-around-town shoe," Manning said.

For playing tennis, his recommendations are the Reebok ACT600, the Adidas Player GS and the Ellesse'.

When buying an athletic shoe, it is important to get a proper fit too, and comfort is a the top of the list for Manning.

"If I'm running a 5K race, I want to be comfortable in my shoe, not look good. Sometimes you have to look past the bright orange color (as Ms. Shepherd must have) if they are comfortable," he said.

FOR CHILDREN, Manning recommended at least a thumbnail's length between the child's longest toe and the end of the shoe with an average thickness sock on. This will give the child a little room to grow, yet not impair the fit for the present time. For adults, he advised a ¼-¾ of a thumbnail's length for "kick room." This extra space allows the toes to move so they are not constantly pressured by a tight fit at the toe.

"Black-toe, or in-grown toenails, are often caused by people not having enough kick-room in their shoes," Manning said.

But just because the shoe fits, it doesn't mean everybody will be able to wear it. These new sneakers are not purchased on shoestring budget. Manning said a decent pair of sneakers at regular price will start around $36 and range to as high as $290 for the New Balance 2000 series. This shoe contains a microchip with a mini-processor in the heel to rate the pulmonary system. Puma also has one available, Manning said.

When in the market for a new pair of sneakers, don't get started on the wrong foot. Consider the activity the sneakers will be worn for, select the proper shoe, then — if the shoe fits, wear it.

Largest county 16 times size of smallest state

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — You know the largest state (Alaska) and the smallest state (Rhode Island), but do you know the largest county in the United States?

It's San Bernardino County in California. The county is 16 times larger than the state of Rhode Island.

Basic hygiene important for feet

Associated Press

Good basic hygiene is as important for your feet as it is for your face. Good foot hygiene begins with clean, dry skin. If you're like most people, your feet perspire. Although this moisture is natural, keep your feet as dry as possible to avoid skin irritation and infection.

Keep your feet dry by rotating the shoes you wear from day to day. Three pairs of shoes are ideal.

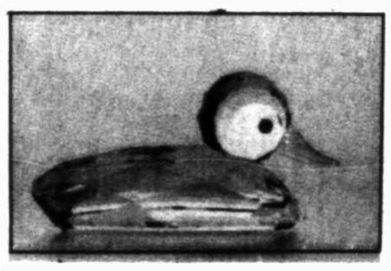

If you have a persistent foot problem — such as a callous, corn, ingrown toenail, or rash — consult a licensed podiatrist or physician. Never doctor your own feet.

Buy shoes for comfort first, then fashion. Shoes should feel good when you purchase them, so do your shopping after work.

Select shoes that are made from natural materials such as leather or fabric. These materials allow your feet to breathe and remain dry.

THE SUBJECT IS ROSES

Rosebushes require food, water, air

By JOY BUTTS

Following the recent beneficial rains the Permian Basin has received, it is timely to feed roses well. But before even buying a fertilizer, let's discuss your goal and how to achieve it.

Roses basically need three things to thrive: water, air (oxygen) and food. Water seems so basic, sometimes it is easy to ignore the fact that there is a correct, useful and an incorrect way to water our gardens.

Especially in this normally arid area, it is important to maintain as constant a level of moisture as possible in the plant's root zone. If a light daily sprinkling is being made, the roots of the plant will remain near the mean ground level, and will be more vulnerable to every changing condition.

Deep soaking every five to seven days during summer months will put moisture six to eight inches deep, and will encourage roots to reach down further. This will create a healthier bush more able to endure high or low temperatures and less susceptible to diseases and insects. Each soaking to this depth equals two inches of rainfall.

The practice of slowly deep watering, teamed with a two- to three-inch layer of mulch will provide the type of beneficial moisture rosebushes need, as well as maintaining a more even temperature in the root area. Check moisture in beds before watering.

AIR IS VERY necessary for the growth and vigor of plants. If the growing medium is constantly kept too wet, a rosebush cannot "breathe" and will eventually die.

Good drainage is very important in rose beds with aeration following close behind. Around this time of year rose beds tend to become "hard-packed," usually because we must apply so much water. It is a good practice to take a large-tined garden fork and perforate the ground all around each rosebush. Beginning at the edge of the bush's drip line, angle fork away from the center, and push fork into the soil to its maximum, making a circle around each bush.

Regular aeration allows the bush to breathe and lets water and fertilizer penetrate the beds, rather than running off.

Food and fertilizer may seem synonymous, but this is not necessarily so. All soils and growing mediums contain a certain amount of "food." Rose beds built with large amounts of humus added will have more food available for plants than what might be called "our natural soil." Yet, although frequently low in nitrogen, good natural soil of the Permian Basin is usually much more fertile than it is credited to be. The addition of humus and nitrogen is the most common need. Because lightning delivers extra nitrogen with a thunderstorm, after a rain we notice plants all around turn very green and enjoy a spurt of growth.

If a feeding program producing the results you desire is already established in your rose beds, then you are encouraged to continue with it. Ideally soil test results should be reviewed to determine the presence or absence of any element in your beds before selecting fertilizer.

FOR BEST RESULTS in our area feeding should alternate between two or three different fertilizers. The most important feature of a rose food is not the brand name, nor the trace elements included — it is the three numbers listed on each product.

A "balanced fertilizer" is one having all three numbers the same, or near the same. An old reliable agricultural fertilizer, and still a very useful one, is 13-13-13. It may be applied early in the spring and again about mid-August, and is slower acting, but lasts longer. It is well to combine a granular food of this type (i.e. Ferti-Lome Gardener's Special, 11-15-11), with a water soluble food.

The Numbers Story is this: the first number listed indicates percent of nitrogen present — 13 percent, 11 percent, 23 percent, etc. Nitrogen is responsible for larger, stronger stems and canes, healthier foliage and more growth to the rosebush. When selecting fertilizer for roses here, choose one with nitrogen content just higher or almost the same as the second number, phosphorus.

Too much or too little phosphorus can be bad news. The second number listed (phosphorus) should be fairly near the first number (nitrogen) in at least one product you use. Nitrogen moves quickly through the soil and will leave the plant's root area after several waterings. Phosphorus remains stationary, but without nitrogen present the plant is not able to use the other elements it needs to grow. It becomes stunted, stops growing and in time dies. Phosphorus produces more and larger blooms of better quality, when teamed properly.

The third number encompasses all the other trace elements and minerals in the fertilizer, such as magnesium, iron, zinc, sulphur, boron, copper, etc. These are necessary too, and all products will list three numbers.

Should you be advised to add only nitrogen to your beds, a word of caution: straight nitrogen, 32-0-0, is very "hot" and should not be applied during the summer. If using it, add it to the soil by mid-March, and use very sparingly, at ½-teaspoon per large bush. Provide lots of water. Any more at one time will "burn up" rosebushes.

Apply a balanced granular food in March, then again in mid-August. Add humus to your beds each spring. In addition, alternately feed with two water soluble products such as Rapid-Gro, 23-19-17, and Green Light Super Bloom with chelated iron, 12-55-6. Your roses should repay you with lush healthy bushes and armloads of great blooms. Remember, use every product according to its own directions.

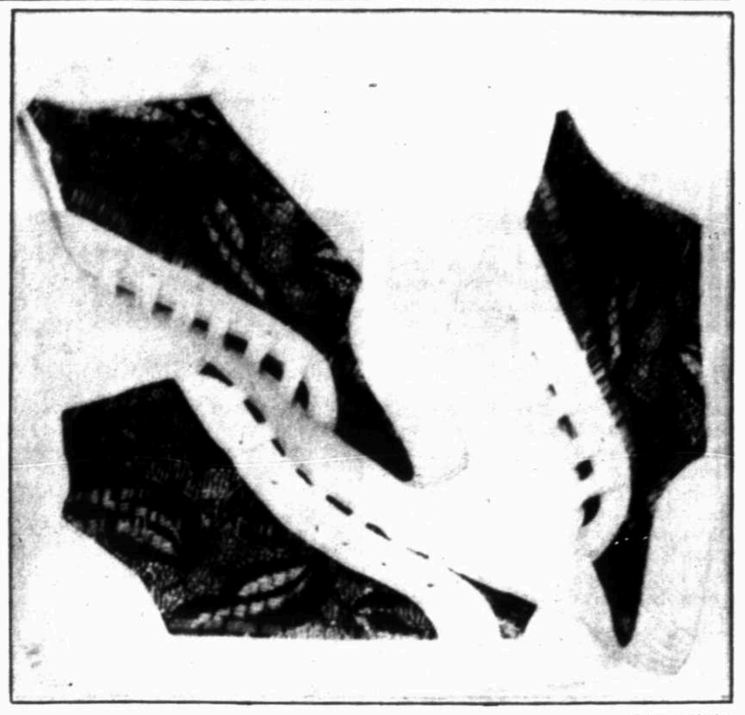

DEAR ROSIE thanks every person who has indicated an interest in this column, written or oral. We hope we have been of some help to you in your rose-growing efforts.

It appears that the rosebushes we've given away to promote this column are going to be two choice introductions for 1987. A Hybrid Tea, ivory blushing palest pink centers, with blooms on very long stems, bearing the name Sheer Bliss is a 1987 All-America Rose Selection. Also a Hybrid Tea, very prolific, blooming luscious peachy pink, Summer Dream will be the 1987 Rose of the Year for Jackson & Perkins Co. Both varieties will be introduced by Jackson & Perkins.

Congratulations to all winners of these two roses, and thanks for your reports on them.

Rosie has one bush left of each of those varieties. We want to give those away this month to the first male reader to respond, and one to any current member of the Midland Rose Society. Send your name, address and telephone number to P.O. Box 5464, Midland 79704.

Sneaking around

Reports from New York say that the sneaker has finally come out of the closet and is blooming in a plethora of patterns like brocade, plaid, linen and lace and colors like baby blue, pink, mint and buttercup.

The familiar sneaker shape is also getting a lift these days, some are being shown tongue-less and others high-top and sassy. The styles shown in above photo are called Adrienne and Madeleine, from American Eagle, which are available in high or low in black lace with rubber soles.

Among the other new entries shown by American Eagle is a white peek-a-boo lace shoe that is see-through. Rubber bump toes and treads make it a tough but delicate-looking style. The shoes retail for $36 to $40.

Everything's coming up tennis shoes

Sneaker today's trendy fashion statement

By MICHAEL GROSS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — At 8:30 a.m. a steady stream of walkers poured out of Central Park's pathways onto sunny Fifth Avenue. But the clickety-click of hurrying heels could hardly be heard and only rarely was the flash of shiny shoe leather seen. Most of the morning's purposeful pedestrians strode silently by on the soft-cushioned soles of what were once known as sneakers, those dumpy but utilitarian Volkswagen Beetles for the feet.

Twenty years ago, they bore names like Converse and U.S. Keds and were made for playing sports. Off the field, they were worn mostly by boys, to the great distress of mothers who worried about "healthy feet."

But in the last decade, a footwear revolution snuck up on sneakers, spurred first by technological advances and then by the 1980 transit strike in New York City, which forced many people to walk to work. Women, who could not move easily in heels, began a love affair with sneakers.

Now, the trend has exploded and the sneaker's stamping ground has expanded, from weekends to midweek and from playing fields to city streets. Men who once scoffed at women in sneakers are donning them, too. Shoe manufacturers have even started copying new sneaker styles. Among the trendy, athletic shoes have become color-coordinated fashion staples, worn not only for fitness activities and on the way to work, but also at the office and beyond.

THOUGH YOUNGSTERS still wear sneakers for playing ball, break-dancing or just hanging around, it is status-conscious young urban professionals, reveling in the shoes' comfort and style, who are the foot soldiers of this rubber-soled revolution. During the morning parade down Fifth Avenue, everyone from Yuppies and their mothers to besuited professional men sang the praises of the once-lowly gym shoe.

"If you want to walk around the city, it's the only way to go," said Lisa MacWilliams, a fashion coordinator for J.P. Stevens.

"They're very hip," said Michael Seroy, a knitwear designer who favors white Converse high-tops. "They work with a sports jacket, a cardigan, a V-neck, a T-shirt or a sport shirt and they always look great."

"It's power walking," he said.

Sneakers are "American, preppy, clean and uncontrived," Sandy Seroy, his wife and co-designer added. "You see them in every sportswear shop in Paris, too."

The first signs of the trend became visible 15 years ago when brands such as Adidas and Nike popularized hi-tech running and jogging shoes. "People realized they were real comfortable to walk around in," said Steve Kessler, who owns three Athlete's Foot stores, one of which attracts a celebrity clientele, including Diana Ross, Mary Tyler Moore and Dustin Hoffman.

"With Nike," he continued, "they became like Levis — casual apparel."

IN 1979, REEBOK, a brand begun by J.W. Foster & Sons, a British company that had been making athletic shoes since 1895, entered the American market. Unlike the cheaper canvas, nylon and mesh sneakers that preceded it, Reebok's soft garment-leather aerobics sneaker needed no breaking in and was, according to Sharon Cohen, a vice president of Reebok International, the American licensee, the first sneaker designed specifically for women.

"It captured the supreme comfort women wanted," she said. "It also looked good. That's where the magic started." In 1984, she said, Reebok introduced a tennis shoe to expand the brand's appeal to men who did not do aerobic exercises but still appreciated comfort.

Retailers say Reebok's Free Style aerobics shoes have been America's best-selling sneakers ever since. Often worn with pompon tennis socks beneath business attire, Reeboks have become the mark of the young urban professional woman. More than that, they legitimized sneakers as a fashion statement. Even Ralph Lauren, the leading fashion designer, ran national advertisements in 1985 in which "everybody was wearing sneakers," said Susie Aitken, a Polo-Ralph Lauren spokesman.

According to a consumer survey conducted by the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association, a trade group, last year Americans spent nearly $2 billion on 77.4 million pairs of athletic shoes of all kinds. Eighty-seven percent of those sales were for sneakers. Reebok claims sales of 13 million pairs of sneakers in 1985, for a wholesale volume of $307 million. Nike, which sells shoes for jogging, running, basketball, racquet sports, field sports, children and what the company calls "leisure" activities such as aerobics, reported 1985 sales exceeding $550 million. With these sales figures, it isn't surprising that sneakers have taken on a new upscale name and image. They are called athletic shoes, though they are hardly worn just for athletics.

"NINETY PERCENT don't aerobicize," Kessler said. "But these shoes offer more support than regular shoes, which is the reason their cost went from $15 to $150 without resistance. It's a Yuppie situation — the name and features have become important."

To appeal to their new audience, athletic footwear manufacturers have altered their once purely functional products. "Our market now is style," said Tom Ricker, director of marketing communications for Converse. So the company is offering its classic Chuck Taylor-style high-top sneakers in stripes, gold lame, blue lame, pastels and camouflage designs. "You name it," Ricker said.

High-top sneakers are the rage. "Unless they are for basketball, they're strictly fashion," Kessler said. Though white sneakers are still best-sellers, colored ones such as those produced by Converse are gaining ground and black sneakers "have become their own category," Kessler said. Several retailers said they are particularly popular in winter, when white sneakers stain easily, and among fashion-conscious youth, for whom black clothes express an attitude.

Putting best foot forward easier with healthy feet

Associated Press

If there are two things in this world that will always lead you in the right direction, they're your feet. And well-cared-for feet will allow you to put your best foot forward, according to Workstyle magazine.

If you are like most people, however, your feet are mistreated in every way imaginable. They're squashed into shoes that don't fit, stepped on, overworked and underprotected.

People usually take their feet for granted — until they hurt. Then they're anything but forgotten.

Your feet contain 26 bones, 56 ligaments and 38 muscles — any one of which can cause pain if squeezed, smashed or swollen.

The key to keeping your feet healthy is exercise. Foot muscles need to be stretched and strengthened so that blood can circulate.

You probably exercise your feet performing typical day-to-day activities. But when time is tight, try doing some of these one-minute, shoes-off exercises at home — or even during an office break.

There are several seated exercises you can do:

- Begin by flexing your toes up and down. With your heel resting on the floor, raise your forefoot as high as possible. Now, roll your foot inward so that the outside edge is as high as possible. Roll it again so that the side of your foot is upraised. Relax. Hold each position for five seconds.
- Raise one foot from the floor and point your toes. Then, from the ankle, rotate your foot at least five times in a wide circle. Relax. Repeat the exercise with your other foot.

Exercises you can do while standing include:

- Stand on your tiptoes and hold this position for 30 seconds. Then, slowly lower your heels to the floor — first with the toes pointing forward. Repeat, this time with your toes pointing outward. Repeat again with toes pointing inward.
- Place the ball of one foot on a book about two inches thick. Set your heel firmly against the floor. Now lean forward as far as you can without lifting your heel from the floor. Repeat with the other foot.

Marriages hurt by too much television

Associated Press

Too many couples are turning on the television set instead of each other — which can have a disastrous effect on marriage.

Some couples watch the screen rather than face their emotional, sexual or financial troubles, according to an article in the July issue of Redbook, and what they see on the screen is no help in handling the difficulties of marriage.

"TV watching is an easy, inexpensive, passive habit that can work as a substitute for intimacy," said Dr. Pierre Mornell, a Mill Valley, Calif., psychiatrist and marriage counselor, and author of "Thank God It's Monday or How To Prevent Success From Ruining Your Marriage."

"It may inhibit closeness. If you're watching more than an hour or two a night, it's a signal you could be more tuned into the TV than you are to each other."

Francine Klagsbrun, author of "Married People: Staying Together in the Age of Divorce," agreed:

"Couples don't have to interact when they watch TV. It's like going to sleep early to get away from each other."

The experts recommend gradual withdrawal from the TV habit.

"If a couple has been used to having the TV on seven hours a day, getting rid of it cold turkey is likely to cause the husband, the wife, or both to have a seizure," Mornell said.

He suggested instead watching television for a brief winding down after work.

After this transition period, the couple can eat a TV-less dinner and plan on another 15- to 20-minute period during the evening when they can talk or participate in other non-TV recreation.

Before complaining your husband watches the TV screen like a bug stuck to a windshield, consider that the A.C. Nielsen Co. finds that women watch more television than men.

Women ages 18 to 34 watch an average 32 hours, 21 minutes a week, while men in that age group watch 26 hours, 3 minutes. In the 35-54 age group, women watch 33 hours, 59 minutes, while men watch 28 hours, 53 minutes.

"Watching TV should be the exception, not the rule," said Joan Anderson Wilkins, author of "Breaking the TV Habit," who suggests you ask yourself questions such as these:

- Do you have dinners for three — you, your husband and Dan Rather?
- Would your diary on how you spend your free time read like the pages of TV Guide?
- When you hear a clock ticking, do you automatically think "60 minutes" is on the air?

If so, it is time to rethink your television habits and go on a "TV diet." Here are some tips:

- Try to limit yourself to one TV set in the home. Remove TV from the dining room and bedroom, prime areas of interaction between husband and wife.
- If you have children, remain at the dinner table with your spouse and enjoy coffee or a glass of wine after they have been excused.
- When watching TV with your husband, sit next to each other on the couch.
- Don't use the set as a source of background noise. If you are not watching, turn it off.
- Turn on a program because it interests you, not just because it's there.

Don't call for a total TV blackout initially. If you usually have the set on all evening, practice keeping it off for just 15 to 20 minutes each night. Eventually, work up to a balance of at least as many non-TV-related as TV-related activities.

Money in marriage

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — If you and your spouse fight over money, you're not alone.

More married couples fight about money than about anything else, but often the fight isn't really over finances said Dr. Sheldon Kramer, a San Diego psychologist and marriage therapist. "They are really fighting about power, or who has control in the marriage," he explains.

Kramer offers guidelines for fighting over money:

- Remember you each come into the marriage with different attitudes toward money and will have to negotiate.
- Solving disputes by comparing expenses with income and then agree on the use of leftover money.
- Decide if you prefer sharing a checking account, or prefer to have two individual accounts.
- Make sure the argument is really about finances. "Many times when people say they are fighting about money it turns out they have difficulty with intimacy." Klein said."

Finally, the psychologist recommended that each partner in a marriage should have some money that can be used any way he or she wants without having to account for the purchases.

NORRIS-VAUGHAN

Deana Marie Norris and Kelly Gordon Vaughan, both of Midland, are planning a 10:30 a.m. July 26 wedding at Golf Course Road Church of Christ. Parents of the bride-elect are Jack and Peggy Norris of Fallon, Nev. The future bridegroom is the son of Lera Randolph of Midland and Arlen Vaughan of Sonora.

Miss Norris is a 1977 graduate of Churchill County High School in Fallon. She earned a bachelor of science of education degree from Abilene Christian University in 1981 and is a member of Alpha Chi and Kappa Delta Pi. She is a teacher at Midland Christian School. Her fiance graduated from Midland High School in 1981. He is a member of FFA and is employed as a welder and trailer mechanic with Hobbs Trailers.

Lack of privacy causes family stress

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A shortage of bathrooms can lead to family stress, Psychology Today reports.

In a survey of 200 Indiana households, half of those with only one bathroom said they suffered stress from a lack of privacy. In contrast, only 14 percent of those with two bathrooms said they suffered stress from lack of privacy.

For comparison purposes, the households were matched for family size and number of rooms.

Grooms bring gifts

Copley News Service

In some human cultures, women must bring a certain amount of wealth, called dowries, to their marriage. It's the other way around in many animal cultures, with the groom bringing nuptial gifts, called "dowers." Often they're food items. For instance, terns give fish; hangingflies present insects.

de COMPIEGNE-LUTZ

Anne Kennard de Compiegne and James Douglas Lutz, both of Dallas, are planning to be married 7:30 p.m. Oct. 4 at St. Ann's Catholic Church. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henri A. de Compiegne Jr. of Midland. Parents of the future bridegroom are Dr. Robert Lutz and Bette Lutz, both of Dayton, Ohio.

Miss de Compiegne is a graduate of Purnell School and Southern Methodist University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in fine arts and was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. She is a member of the Dallas Museum of Fine Art and is a graphic artist for The Promotion Network. Her fiance received a bachelor of art degree with honors from Brown University and is a senior at Southwestern Medical School at Dallas.

MEETINGS

Marketing satellite data topic at meeting

The next Geosat Committee, Permian Basin Chapter, is scheduled for July 15 at the RepublicBank First National Midland second floor meeting room, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The speaker will be Steve Prucha from the EOSAT Houston field office. EOSAT is the company that was formed to market pictures from the Landsat satellite after commercialization from the federal government. His topic will be the EOSAT company and their future plans for marketing the Landsat data.

SIPES to host discussion on gas pricing

Jimmy Cox and Charles Kuss will address the next meeting of the Midland chapter of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientiests, SIPES, on July 16. The meeting will be at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The two will discuss and evaluate recent changes in natural gas pricing policies in Texas.

Mr. Cox, a partner in Watson and Cox, has an accounting degree from Abilene Christian University and a law degree from U.T. Austin. He has been an oil and gas producer in Midland for 15 years. He will discuss "The impact of the Texas Railroad Commission on gas pricing in Texas."

Mr. Kuss graduated from Texas A&M and worked seven years for Texaco and BTA in gas sales, processing, and administration, before forming a partnership with John Smart as natural gas consultants in 1984. His talk will be "A review of the FERC order to raise the ceiling on old natural gas prices."

The luncheon is free to SIPES members and $10 for invited guests.

AFL-CIO now offers members MasterCard

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO officials say their new MasterCard for the union's 13.5 million members, offering dramatically lower interest rates, pushes the labor organization into a new area of service.

The program will mean that "millions of people will save millions of dollars," Thomas R. Donahue, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer, said.

Donahue said the program means the labor movement can now begin to offer its members "the same kind of protection in the marketplace as it offers them on the job."

Members who obtain the new Union Privilege MasterCard will pay interest rates of 5 percentage points over the prime rate, now 8.5 percent, or 7.25 points over the prime, depending on which of two alternative plans they elect.

That would mean effective cardholder interest rates of 13.5 percent or 15.75 percent currently, compared with rates of 20 percent or more charged by leading credit card companies.

"Interest rates have been continuing to drop, with the prime falling from 21 to 8.5 percent, yet the interest rates on credit cards have continued to rise," said Ray Denison, president of the AFL-CIO Union Privilege Benefit Program. "We are pleased that all Americans will benefit from this program, because this card cracks the high interest-rate barrier."

The federation said in a statement "there is no profit to the AFL-CIO, nor to the international unions," and said no membership dues money would be used to pay for the program.

The AFL-CIO officials denounced what they called "outrageously high" rates charged by major credit card companies across the country.

They cited several examples of rates charged by major credit card companies: Citicorp VISA, 19.8 percent; Bank of America, 19.8 percent; Chemical Bank, 19.5 percent; Chase Manhattan, 19.8 percent; Sears, 21 percent; Montgomery Ward, 21.6 percent; and J.C. Penney, 21 percent.

Major card issuers and retailers in the past have countered criticism of high rates with the contention that their rates stem from administrative costs and loss expenses.

"Our only comment would be that it's certainly a competitive market out there," said John Maloney, a spokesman for Citicorp. "They're pricing it according to their likes and according to what they're going for."

Although some of the biggest credit card issuers still have annual interest rates in the range of 18 percent to 21 percent, many institutions across the nation have been offering bank cards at substantially lower rates for some time.

According to the Bank Credit Card Observer newsletter, a survey of 105 banks nationally indicated interest rates on bank cards such as MasterCard and Visa ranged as low as 11.5 percent. Some of those rates were promotional, are limited by state law, or applied only under certain conditions, such as on balances above a minimum level.

Cathy Gucfa, a spokeswoman for Sears, Roebuck and Co., said, "Our finance charges on our Sears charge card range from a low of 11.5 percent in Arkansas" to a maximum of 21 percent.

"Our feeling is that customers have total control over any finance charge" by paying off their balance as soon as they are billed.

Study: Too rapid growth may cause bank failure

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — Rapid growth, usually a healthy sign for any business, can cause the failure of a bank if management loses control, a study of bank failures shows.

A study of the major causes of the 92 bank failures during 1982, 1983 and the first quarter of 1984 has been completed by Richard L. Peterson, professor of Bank Management at Texas Tech University and William L. Scott of Illinois State University for the Federal Reserve Board of Chicago.

In most of the banks studied, it was difficult to identify one cause that led to the failure, Peterson said.

"However, if I had to identify one cause, it was mismanagement that more often than not caused the failures we studied," he said.

"Often a bank grows too fast, or reaches a crisis point by being overloaded with one type of loan, and the management resorts to illegal means to try to save a bad economic situation," Peterson said. "But, if there were good management to begin with, problems that lead to failures wouldn't occur."

"What happened so many times was that banks experienced such rapid growth that they had to fund their loans with money borrowed at premium rates," he said.

Citing some of the recent bank failures in Oklahoma and Texas, Peterson said, "These banks were all seemingly solid banks that had sustained loan growth in excess of 20 percent per year just prior to their failure."

Peterson said in order to support rapid growth, experienced loan officers and credit anyalysts must be hired and properly trained.

"Tight administrative control is necesssary to ensure that growth is fueled with high-quality credit, not other banks' rejected credit customers," he said.

More than half of the bank failures studied involved actual or probable criminal misconduct by officers, directors or others associated with the bank.

Although many of the illegal actions were deliberate, Peterson said many occurred only to save a bank from a bad situation.

Natural Gas Burns Hot. But tempers boil when the federal regulations come down.

Getting hot under the collar about implemented natural gas regulations from Washington doesn't do much for your cash flow. But, understanding them beforehand and then making wise decisions can.

You can get just this type of insight at the upcoming Natural Gas Issues and Development Seminar brought to you by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. Federal Energy Regulatory Commissioner C.M. (Mike) Naeve, 20% of the power affecting your income from natural gas, will keynote this vital seminar. You'll hear it straight from the horses mouth when he discusses the current and projected status of federal regulations that impact your bottom line.

Joining the Commissioner will be Gene Hammons, El Paso Natural Gas Company, who'll express the opinions of an interstate pipeline concern about Reg. 451 (deregulation of old gas) and 436 (equal access). In addition, John Hays, renowned gas attorney, will outline the pitfalls of selling gas across state lines and the legal aspects of "take or pay" provisions.

If you have income from natural gas, this is one free seminar you can't afford to miss. After all, it's much easier to make plans in your best interest when you have an idea of what the future will be.

ON THE LEASE/STATE/LAN

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

James Manning, assistant manager at Fuddruckers in the Midland Park Mall, poses amid future hamburgers. Burgers are still tops in Texas taste.

Burgers still king of the hill

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Despite economic difficulties in the state, Texans continue to spend money on eating out and a recent survey showed that among Texans, the hamburger is still king.

Surprisingly, 61 percent of the state's residents say the economy has not affected their eating out habits. It is estimated that in 1986 Texas foodservice sales will increase 6.5 percent — to 11.2 billion. Texans will spend an average of $732 in the state's restaurants this year.

While Texans are known as steak lovers, dining habits have changed, according to a recent telephone poll of 3,400 Texans conducted by the Texas Restaurant Association (TRA).

Hamburgers are still the favorite choice among diners. Although taking only 10 percent of the dinner market, hamburgers thoroughly dominate the lunch market, controlling 30 percent.

According to Jerri Allen, assistant manager at Fuddruckers in the Midland Park Mall, "Hamburgers are fast and nutritious. They are a type of food that offer a great variety of taste. You have your beef, your bread and the vegetables. Hamburgers are just a way of life in America and I think they will always be popular."

When Texas consumers eat dinner out, 18 percent choose Mexican food, up from 14 percent in 1985. Restaurant patrons also are choosing seafood for dinner more often than ever before. "Fish is now one of the most frequently ordered menu items in the industry. Seafood accounts for 16 percent of all menu items ordered at dinner, slightly above steak, which accounts for 15 percent of all dinner entrees," said Louis Hochman, TRA president, and owner of Luigi's in Midland.

BABY BELLS UNDER FIRE

Pay phone business opens wide for new competition

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Pay phones, the last unchallanged bastion of Ma Bell, are now under fire, and the attack is producing a whole new industry — the private pay phone.

Way back when, in 1984 to be exact, AT&T and the telephone industry were synonymous. Ma Bell ruled the roost and all phone services, including pay phones, were her domain. But now, two years after the court-ordered divestiture of AT&T, a group of upstart companies are taking on Ma's seven so-called Baby Bells, the regional holding companies such as Southwestern Bell, by providing local services — including pay phone service.

Merchants who want a larger commission, or the entire proceeds from pay telephones on their property, now have the option of buying or leasing pay phone equipment from vendors competing with Southwestern Bell.

Thus far only about 1.5 percent of the estimated 1,000 pay phones in the Midland area have converted to private coin service, according to Judy Hill, Southwestern Bell's supervisor of coin telephone operations in Midland. Nationally, approximately 50,000 pay phones have been replaced by private companies seeking their share of the annual $1.4 billion in local pay phone revenues.

The bulk of the private coin service stations in Midland are owned by Kent Oil Co. at its Kent Kwik convenience store locations. Other trial locations around the city include supermarkets and other retail outlets, Hill notes.

Several considerations went into Kent's decision to 'go private' with the pay phone service, according to company president Bill Kent.

Kent cautions other merchants considering purchase of private pay phone equipment to make the investment for service and customer relations reasons, not as a get-rich-quick scheme. "We've been able to generate an acceptable return on our investment in the 16 Midland store installations," he notes.

A primary factor in Kent's decision was the ability to determine the number and positioning of phones at our store locations. "We wanted to move the phones indoors, which Bell resisted," Kent says.

"Our stores have always done good pay phone business, and in order to augment our service to those customers, we wanted to bring them in out of the hostile West Texas elements.

"The designated telephone area in each store — formerly the video game room — is isolated to reduce background noise and is equipped for the privacy and convenience of calling customers," Kent notes. "Without control over where the phones are located, we could not have gone forward with the phone room set up."

EVOLUTION OF PAY phone equipment technology, like that for private phone sets for home and office use, has mushroomed in the years of open competition since the 1984 AT&T break-up.

Improvements and refinements of non-Bell equipment have advanced enough to make other vendors' products competitive with the industry standard Bell machinery, particularly within the last six months, according to one local vendor.

Continuous monitoring and upgrading of equipment when replaced has allowed Kent to minimize customer confusion with the privately owned sets.

Please see PHONES, Page 3G

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Alerting phone customers that privately owned pay phones operate differently than Bell coin-operated phones is one challenge facing merchants opting to buy their own pay phones. Overcoming resistance with humor has worked so far for Kent Kwik stores.

Buying vs. Leasing filled with pros & cons

- Buying private pay phones gives the merchant full control over the number and location of phones; but along with that comes the responsibility for maintenance and servicing.
- As an agent for a leasing vendor, a merchant receives commissions without an up-front investment. Equipment costs can range from a few hundred to more than $3,000, with average costs of $1,200 to $1,500.
- Owners of private pay phones avoid sharing the proceeds from their phones with vendors; however, if technological advances make current phones obsolete, the owner must buy a replacement set — under many leases, vendors agree to keep their agents supplied with state-of-the-art hardware.
- Pay phone owners are still liable for monthly and per call charges for line service for their phones; Southwestern Bell handles all the complex procedures involved with inter- and intra-LATA (local long distance service area) revenue accounting.

South Padre Island looks for peak year

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — This is shaping up as a great year for this South Texas resort, renowned for its annual invasion by college students on spring break but a victim of hard luck at other times.

As tourism pecks away at oil as the No. 1 source of revenue for the state, city officials, merchants and real estate agents are working to attract as many tourists as possible.

"We're predicting 1986 is going to be a banner year," said Jim Luck, president of the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau. "Gas prices are low and the weather has been just outstanding."

South Padre Island — about 25 miles north of Brownsville and the Mexican border — has a history dating back to 1800 when Padre Nicoles Balli was awarded sovereign rights to the island by the King of Spain.

A statue of the priest greets visitors who arrive from Port Isabel via the 2-mile long Queen Isabella causeway.

Since 1973, when South Padre Island was incorporated, to 1985, the city's revenues have grown from about $500,000 to more than $3 million. City employees now number about 60 and the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau's budget is nearing $1 million. Condominium units number about 4,000 and hotel rooms 1,400.

The city's population, however, is only 1,100.

The future looks bright, unlike the past seven years of near catastrophe for the developing resort, officials said.

An oil spill in 1979 in the Gulf of Mexico washed tar onto the beaches. Hurricane Allen struck the coast the next year. There was a construction boom in 1982, but a year later the value of the peso against the dollar began to drop, driving away Mexican condominium investors.

A freeze that hit the Rio Grande Valley in December 1983 hurt business on the island. In 1984, a minor freeze and more peso devaluations took their toll on the island economy.

Business slowly recovered in 1985. A new mall opened and condominium and townhouse projects are under way, and realtors are hoping to attract investors from northern states. A new chain hotel will open in September.

Merchants are working to expand the tourist season by two months to nine and hotels and airlines are devising packages to bring tourists from as far as Chicago.

There was talk of changing the city's name to eliminate confusion with south Padres Island Boulevard in Corpus Christ, but the idea was called silly.

AP Laserphoto

Padre Island, the South Texas resort, is looking for a record year in tourism and Island officials are doing everything they can to promote additional tourist business.

"That just means we're just going to have to work harder to let people know where South Padre Island is," said City Manager Eddie Campirano.

College students seem to have little trouble finding the island, with tens of thousands visiting during spring break — some from as far away as Massachusetts.

Campirano has been on the job for six months, but his enthusiasm reflects that of an island native.

"We are one of the top beach resort areas in the state. Our beaches are still beautiful," Campirano said. "The appeal of the island is going to

Cogeneration conference set at UTPB

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A marriage between industry and education for diversification of the Permian Basin will take place July 18 with a regional conference on electric power cogeneration at University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Cogeneration is a new power source being developed, which produces power and heat simultaneously, using excess steam from one facility to produce power in another. As such, it is ideally suited to industrial complexes and can raise the total effeciency of a plant to 80 or 90 percent, while coming in much cheaper than other power sources.

The conference to consider the implications, possibilities and technology of the new energy industry for West Texas is sponsored by Center for Energy and Economic Diversification at UTPB and co-sponsored by Odessa Chamber of Commerce, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and West Texas International Trade Forum.

According to Duane Leach PhD., president of UTPB, the cogeneration industry in West Texas is already an $85-100 million industry, accounting

James Manning, assistant manager at Fuddruckers in the Midland Park Mall, poses amid future hamburgers. Burgers are still tops in Texas taste.

Burgers still king of the hill

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Despite economic difficulties in the state, Texans continue to spend money on eating out and a recent survey showed that among Texans, the hamburger is still king.

Surprisingly, 61 percent of the state's residents say the economy has not affected their eating out habits. It is estimated that in 1986 Texas foodservice sales will increase 6.5 percent — to 11.2 billion. Texans will spend an average of $732 in the state's restaurants this year.

While Texans are known as steak lovers, dining habits have changed, according to a recent telephone poll of 3,400 Texans conducted by the Texas Restaurant Association (TRA).

Hamburgers are still the favorite choice among diners. Although taking only 10 percent of the dinner market, hamburgers thoroughly dominate the lunch market, controlling 30 percent.

According to Jerri Allen, assistant manager at Fuddruckers in the Midland Park Mall, "Hamburgers are fast and nutritious. They are a type of food that offer a great variety of taste. You have your beef, your bread and the vegetables. Hamburgers are just a way of life in America and I think they will always be popular."

When Texas consumers eat dinner out, 18 percent choose Mexican food, up from 14 percent in 1985. Restaurant patrons also are choosing seafood for dinner more often than ever before. "Fish is now one of the most frequently ordered menu items in the industry. Seafood accounts for 16 percent of all menu items ordered at dinner, slightly above steak, which accounts for 15 percent of all dinner entrees," said Louis Hochman, TRA president, and owner of Luigi's in Midland.

BABY BELLS UNDER FIRE

Pay phone business opens wide for new competition

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Pay phones, the last unchallanged bastion of Ma Bell, are now under fire, and the attack is producing a whole new industry — the private pay phone.

Way back when, in 1984 to be exact, AT&T and the telephone industry were synonymous. Ma Bell ruled the roost and all phone services, including pay phones, were her domain. But now, two years after the court-ordered divestiture of AT&T, a group of upstart companies are taking on Ma's seven so-called Baby Bells, the regional holding companies such as Southwestern Bell, by providing local services — including pay phone service.

Merchants who want a larger commission, or the entire proceeds from pay telephones on their property, now have the option of buying or leasing pay phone equipment from vendors competing with Southwestern Bell.

Thus far only about 1.5 percent of the estimated 1,000 pay phones in the Midland area have converted to private coin service, according to Judy Hill, Southwestern Bell's supervisor of coin telephone operations in Midland. Nationally, approximately 50,000 pay phones have been replaced by private companies seeking their share of the annual $1.4 billion in local pay phone revenues.

The bulk of the private coin service stations in Midland are owned by Kent Oil Co. at its Kent Kwik convenience store locations. Other trial locations around the city include supermarkets and other retail outlets, Hill notes.

Several considerations went into Kent's decision to 'go private' with the pay phone service, according to company president Bill Kent.

Kent cautions other merchants considering purchase of private pay phone equipment to make the investment for service and customer relations reasons, not as a get-rich-quick scheme. "We've been able to generate an acceptable return on our investment in the 16 Midland store installations," he notes.

A primary factor in Kent's decision was the ability to determine the number and positioning of phones at our store locations. "We wanted to move the phones indoors, which Bell resisted," Kent says.

"Our stores have always done good pay phone business, and in order to augment our service to those customers, we wanted to bring them in out of the hostile West Texas elements.

"The designated telephone area in each store — formerly the video game room — is isolated to reduce background noise and is equipped for the privacy and convenience of calling customers," Kent notes. "Without control over where the phones are located, we could not have gone forward with the phone room set up."

EVOLUTION OF PAY phone equipment technology, like that for private phone sets for home and office use, has mushroomed in the years of open competition since the 1984 AT&T break-up.

Improvements and refinements of non-Bell equipment have advanced enough to make other vendors' products competitive with the industry standard Bell machinery, particularly within the last six months, according to one local vendor.

Continuous monitoring and upgrading of equipment when replaced has allowed Kent to minimize customer confusion with the privately owned sets.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Alerting phone customers that privately owned pay phones operate differently than Bell coin-operated phones is one challenge facing merchants opting to buy their own pay phones. Overcoming resistance with humor has worked so far for Kent Kwik stores.

Buying vs. Leasing filled with pros & cons

- Buying private pay phones gives the merchant full control over the number and location of phones; but along with that comes the responsibility for maintenance and servicing.
- As an agent for a leasing vendor, a merchant receives commissions without an up-front investment. Equipment costs can range from a few hundred to more than $3,000, with average costs of $1,200 to $1,500.
- Owners of private pay phones avoid sharing the proceeds from their phones with vendors; however, if technological advances make current phones obsolete, the owner must buy a replacement set — under many leases, vendors agree to keep their agents supplied with state-of-the-art hardware.
- Pay phone owners are still liable for monthly and per call charges for line service for their phones; Southwestern Bell handles all the complex procedures involved with inter- and intra-LATA (local long distance service area) revenue accounting.

South Padre Island looks for peak year

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — This is shaping up as a great year for this South Texas resort, renowned for its annual invasion by college students on spring break but a victim of hard luck at other times.

As tourism pecks away at oil as the No. 1 source of revenue for the state, city officials, merchants and real estate agents are working to attract as many tourists as possible.

"We're predicting 1986 is going to be a banner year," said Jim Luck, president of the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau. "Gas prices are low and the weather has been just outstanding."

South Padre Island — about 25 miles north of Brownsville and the Mexican border — has a history dating back to 1800 when Padre Nicoles Balli was awarded sovereign rights to the island by the King of Spain.

A statue of the priest greets visitors who arrive from Port Isabel via the 2-mile long Queen Isabella causeway.

Since 1973, when South Padre Island was incorporated, to 1985, the city's revenues have grown from about $500,000 to more than $3 million. City employees now number about 60 and the South Padre Island Tourist Bureau's budget is nearing $1 million. Condominium units number about 4,000 and hotel rooms 1,400.

The city's population, however, is only 1,100.

The future looks bright, unlike the past seven years of near catastrophe for the developing resort, officials said.

An oil spill in 1979 in the Gulf of Mexico washed tar onto the beaches. Hurricane Allen struck the coast the next year. There was a construction boom in 1982, but a year later the value of the peso against the dollar began to drop, driving away Mexican condominium investors.

A freeze that hit the Rio Grande Valley in December 1983 hurt business on the island. In 1984, a minor freeze and more peso devaluations took their toll on the island economy.

Business slowly recovered in 1985. A new mall opened and condominium and townhouse projects are under way, and realtors are hoping to attract investors from northern states. A new chain hotel will open in September.

Merchants are working to expand the tourist season by two months to nine and hotels and airlines are devising packages to bring tourists from as far as Chicago.

There was talk of changing the city's name to eliminate confusion with south Padres Island Boulevard in Corpus Christ, but the idea was called silly.

Padre Island, the South Texas resort, is looking for a record year in tourism and Island officials are doing everything they can to promote additional tourist business.

"That just means we're just going to have to work harder to let people know where South Padre Island is," said City Manager Eddie Campirano.

College students seem to have little trouble finding the island, with tens of thousands visiting during spring break — some from as far away as Massachusetts.

Campirano has been on the job for six months, but his enthusiasm reflects that of an island native.

"We are one of the top beach resort areas in the state. Our beaches are still beautiful," Campirano said. "The appeal of the island is going to

Cogeneration conference set at UTPB

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A marriage between industry and education for diversification of the Permian Basin will take place July 18 with a regional conference on electric power cogeneration at University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Cogeneration is a new power source being developed, which produces power and heat simultaneously, using excess steam from one facility to produce power in another. As such, it is ideally suited to industrial complexes and can raise the total effeciency of a plant to 80 or 90 percent, while coming in much cheaper than other power sources.

The conference to consider the implications, possibilities and technology of the new energy industry for West Texas is sponsored by Center for Energy and Economic Diversification at UTPB and co-sponsored by Odessa Chamber of Commerce, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission and West Texas International Trade Forum.

According to Duane Leach PhD., president of UTPB, the cogeneration industry in West Texas is already an $85-100 million industry, accounting

Good PR can save and enhance your career

Public relations. Businesses use it to attain profitability, entertainers use it to attain fame, and politicians to gain office. Now, management experts tell us individuals should use it to achieve career goals and protect their jobs.

Public relations is just that — our relations with friends, bosses, colleagues, customers, and the public at large. And like it or not, we are all in the relations business. We can decide only if we will manage it for our benefit or if it will manage us. It is, however, the smart employee or businessman that decides to manage his public relations. For it is in relationships that success is ultimately found or lost.

As a former owner of a public relations firm, I learned long ago that PR is not so much bull. It really does work. Exposure and image are the keys. It is a proven rule that more opportunities come to those who stick out above the crowd and have the right image, than to those who pursue a low profile.

Alfred Geduldig, president Chester Burger Co., a firm which specialists in the field of communications management, says there are many ways an employee can and should gain the exposure necessary to assure his continued employment and progress within a company — information many in the Permian Basin will doubtlessly find useful at this time.

GEDULDIG ADVISES to seek tasks and projects that offer high visibility and to do them well. The same rule applies to committees and volunteer positions. By serving in such visible positions, one is able to gain the exposure that will eventually lead to greater positions of leadership within the firm or industry.

An absolute necessity, according to Geduldig, is to become a polished public speaker and, with management consent, encourage invitations to speak before professional, trade, industry and community groups. One can speak either about his or her company or his field of expertise. Either way, exposure is increased and the public perception of one as a leader and expert is enhanced.

Public speaking skills plus responsible positions on industry committees invariably lead to credibility and credentials which, in turn, often lead to a role as a "spokesman." A spokesman, of course, is one who is frequently quoted in the press, and every time he is quoted his expertise and reputation increase.

Newspapers and TV are more than happy to have handy recognized authorities who are willing to be interviewed.

Radio and TV in particular rely heavily upon a stable of experts who can be called upon for quick quotes to localize a story, and the best way to join the stable is simply to present your credentials and offer your services.

NEWSPAPERS DO NOT rely so much on quick quotes, but there are other ways you can get your name in the print media. As an insider, you can suggest news stories and features to your local newspaper and industry trade magazines and be willing to provide pertinent facts and quotes to the story. You can also offer to by-line articles in your company publication — even offer to write a column in an area of particular expertise.

The would-be spokesman should not be deterred by the fact that he is not as expert in a particular field as others. That's acceptable. Most bosses have people working under them that are smarter than they. It is ironic that those with the greatest expertise in a field are often those who spend their careers in the trenches, while the company "politicians" move to the top.

Call it politics if you wish, but it's public relations and it works for those who use it and against those who don't. It is unfortunate that many self-conscious individuals see it as something negative, because it is neither dishonorable or in bad taste to "toot one's own horn" provided it is properly done. To pursue success with a low profile makes about as much sense as writing a great novel and hoping the world will discover it in your trunk.

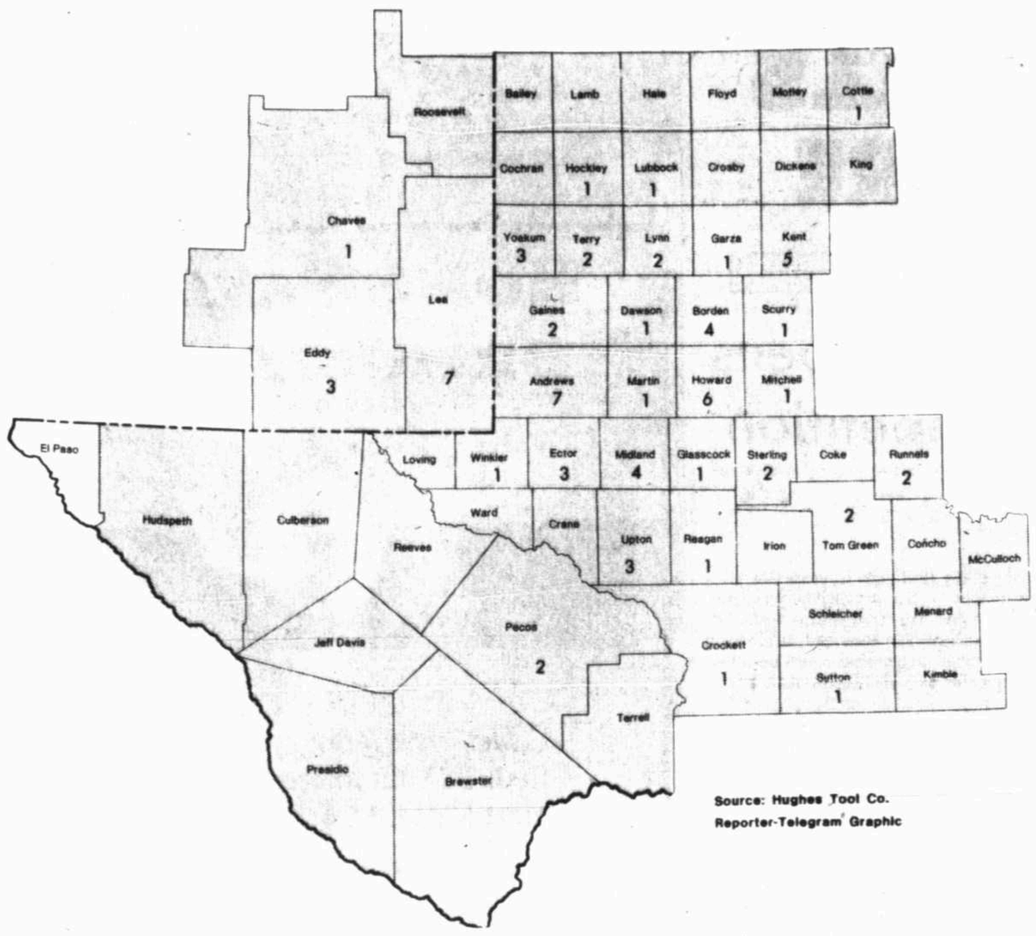

But there is a right way and a wrong way. Where many go wrong in personal PR is coming on too strong and appearing arrogant, egotistical and ruthless. Also, many crash in their efforts by making their superiors insecure. An employee can get pushed down very quickly by a suspicious superior who perceives him to be too pushy. The trick is to always appear helpful and not arrogant, and to never go around your boss on any personal PR project. Andrew Sherwood, president Goodrich & Sherwood, the nation's largest full-service human resources management firm, advises those ambitious for success to communicate with their boss on every move, because he will be the ultimate key to their professional success.

Working rigs hit another all-time low

The number of working oil and gas drilling rigs fell to another all-time low this week as decreased and unstable prices continued to discourage production, according to a Hughes Tool Co. spokesman.

The active U.S. rig count dropped to 672, a 25-rig loss from last week's count of 697, spokesman Don King said. It was the second straight loss after two weeks of growth.

In addition to the low and unstable prices, uncertainty resulting from proposed federal tax reforms contributed to the decline, King said.

The company's previous all-time low was 686 working oil rigs a month ago.

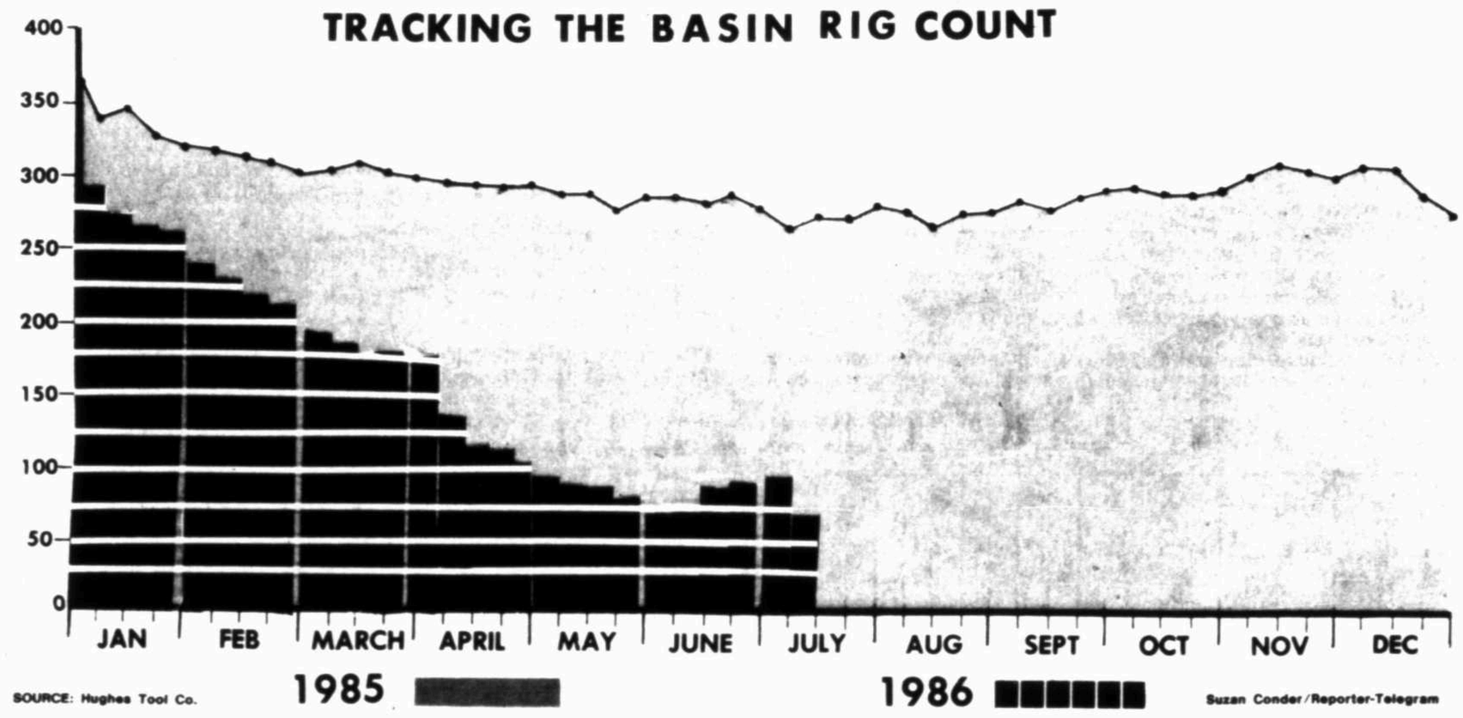

Before 1971, the lowest number was 805 rigs working in April 1943, said officials with Hughes Tool, an oil tool maker that has kept industry statistics since 1940.

More than 1,000 rigs have been idled since December when oil prices began their slump, hovering around $14 a barrel. Since Dec. 23, the rig count had dropped steadily from 1,995, officials said.

In contrast, 4,500 rigs were active in December 1981.

The Permian Basin also saw the number of rigs plummet, after a couple of weeks of growth. The count fell by 17, from 90 to 73.

TRACKING BASIN COMPLETIONS

Local completion total plummets

The weekly count of wells completed in the Permian Basin fell by half this week, to 82 from 163 reported a week ago.

Nationally, completion totals during the first six months of 1986 trailed nearly nine percent behind the same period a year ago, according to Petroleum Information.

Total completions for the first six months of the year numbered 17,676 wells with official 1986 completion dates compared to 19,302 for the first half of 1985. The success rate for all drilling at mid-year was 68.2 percent, while a year ago the ratio stood at 66.9 percent.

Exploration for new fields dropped approximately 22 percent as only 1,794 new field wildcats were completed. Of those, 170 were oil discoveries and 89 were completed as gas discoveries. In the first six months of 1985, 204 oil and 100 gas discoveries were registered. This year's success ratio for new field wildcats is 14.4 percent, down from 16.6 percent a year ago.

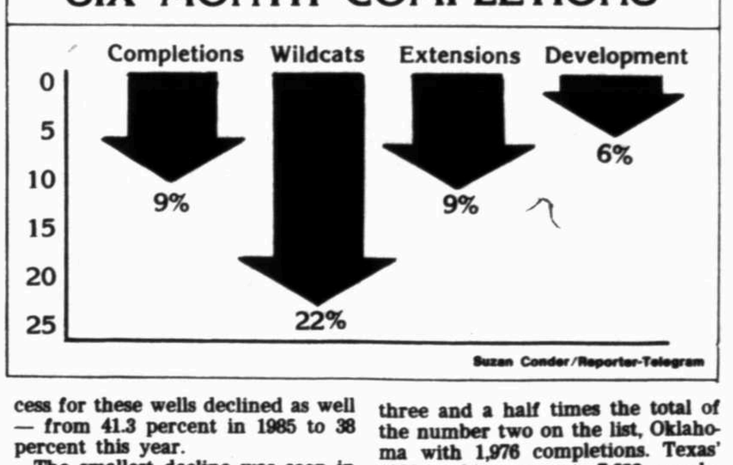

Other exploratory completions (field extensions and shallower and deeper pool tests) numbered 1,719, down nine percent from 1985's mid-year total of 1,890. The rate of success for these wells declined as well — from 41.3 percent in 1985 to 38 percent this year.

The smallest decline was seen in development completions which fell 6.4 percent in the first half of 1986. The 14,163 wells completed thus far this year is down from the 15,128 completed in the first half of 1985.

Texas, the perennial national completion leader, again tops the list at the mid-point of 1986. The 7,079 wells completed in the Lone Star state is three and a half times the total of the number two on the list, Oklahoma with 1,976 completions. Texas' 1986 total compares to 7,353 completions from January through June of 1985; while Oklahoma's total is down 22.8 percent from last year.

Other top drilling states and their 1986 mid-year totals are: Kansas, 1,493; Louisiana, 1,419; California, 1,029; and, Ohio, 619.

TASTE

"The restaurant industry continually monitors consumer preferences, so that we can offer what our customers want in terms of food items, convenience, fine dining or any other aspect of eating out," says Hochman.

"At this year's TRA convention, the 49th Annual Trade Show and Foodservice Exhibition, featured the latest food products and equipment as well as industry panel discussions," said Hochman.

"Our annual convention helps prepare restaurateurs for an increasingly competitive marketplace by highlighting a variety of foodservice trends."

Monitoring trends is what helps the industry to compete and prosper in times of economic slowdown. Some of the latest eating out trends in Texas are:

■ Health and fitness is no longer a fad or trend — it's a way of life and restaurateurs have changed menus to meet the new demands of health-conscious consumers.

■ Sixty-four percent of all consumers eat lunch out each week, compared to 50 percent of consumers who eat dinner out, and 26 percent who eat breakfast out.

■ Texans are slow to kick the caffeine habit. More than half of all Texans (54 percent) prefer regular coffee, 15 percent prefer decaffeinated, and 28 percent don't drink coffee. Females are more likely to order decaffeinated than men, and the popularity of decaffeinated coffee increases with older age groups.

■ Three out of four Texans are tea-sippers. Only 15 percent of Texans do not drink tea. Decaffeinated tea is popular among 6 percent of consumers.

■ Despite trends toward eating light, desserts are growing in popularity and sophistication. Consumers are more likely to order desserts when they are eating out with friends than when eating alone. And, most consumers cannot resist temptation — they are more likely to order a dessert if they can see it.

■ Diet soft drinks are increasing in popularity and account for 16.5 percent of all soft drink sales in restaurants. Overall, the most popular according to consumers who drink soft drinks, are Coke (43 percent); Dr. Pepper (15 percent); Diet Coke (13 percent); and Pepsi (11 percent).

Private equipment generally operates differently than a standard Bell coin operation, and in many cases requires "post-payment", inserting money after the second party has answered.

Because of the long-standing dominance of Bell pay phones, operating a pay phone is a virtual reflex action for many consumers. Any change in the operating routine has the potential to confuse and frustrate users.

In a light-hearted attempt to draw customers' attention to the difference in Kent phones' operations, the company has posted "If all else fails, read the instructions" signs above its phones. In addition, store personnel are instructed to be extra-sensitive to possible customer relations problems, and quickly refund any lost money as well as explain the phones' operation, Kent says.

ANOTHER OPTION FOR pay phone agents seeking an alternative to the 10 to 15 percent commissions offered by Southwestern Bell is system leasing from a national vendor. National chain operators Denny's Inc.and Southland Corp. have reached agreements to switch pay phone services.

Neither company has yet revealed its timetable for installation of the private phones in the West Texas area.

A significant difference between 'Baby Bell' companies around the country and other leasing vendors is the commission structure. Southwestern Bell recently raised its commission percentage for medium-use stations, with daily revenues of $2.50 to $6.99, from 10 to 15 percent — the company's maximum rate. The national average commission for former Bell-affiliated firms is 3 to 6 percent.

Competitors such as Big Apple Telecommunications and Niktel Inc. offer as much as a 20 percent share of the proceeds.

In order to retain customers in the face of what amounts to a bidding war of commission rates, Southwestern Bell is — in addition to its rate increase last month — emphasizing its 80-year tradition of pay phone service and its reliability and service record.

be the ocean and being close to Mexico. For some people it's the only opportunity to go to a foreign country."

The island began developing after the Queen Isabella causeway was completed in 1974.

"We're truly unique out here on South Padre," said Dennis Franke, co-owner of Franke Realtors. "When you cross the causeway, you feel like you're really on an island. You can see both waters, the gulf on one side and the Laguna Madre on the other."

At its widest, South Padre Island is about a half mile.

Franke and his brother, Richard, are planning a subdivision of townhomes on bridge-linked islands in the Laguna Madre.

"We're making a good recovery at this point and I think by next summer we'll be starting to roll again," Franke said.

City and county services are being hard pressed to keep pace with the construction demand.

Water pressure continues to be a problem in some places. Several years ago, water was cut off, forcing hotel guests to carry water from swimming pools to their rooms to use in their bathrooms.

But the city manager said city services are being improved, including the recent conversion from a volunteer fire department to a paid staff of 13.

"People used to come to the Valley and discovered South Padre Island," Campirano said, "Now they're coming to South Padre Island and discovering the Valley."

The U.S. Department of Energy is predicting the need for an additional 438,000 megawatts of generating capacity, or two-thirds of current capacity, by the year 2,000.

Leach says that since 1980 more nuclear and coal-fired power plants have been cancelled than started, while 785 small-scale power projects with a generating capacity of 14,000 megawatts have been registered with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. Most will be generating electricity within four years.

Computer course planned at PBGC

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer courses dealing with computers and the petroleum industry during the second half of July.

"Intermediate Lotus 1-2-3" is set for July 16 and 17 from 7 to 10 p.m. Topics include advanced functions, the graphics commands, and the database commands. Individual computers will be assigned go each student. Ted Windecker, T.R. Windecker, Inc., will instruct the course. Fee is $130; $15 for those unemployed since January. Eligible for 6 CPE credits.

"Drilling Reports," will be held July 21-22 from 7 to 10 p.m. It is designed to assist those responsible for taking drilling reports to better understand the language and procedures used in drilling. The first part of the course will deal primarily with the "mechanics" of drilling and completing a well and the last part with the taking of drilling reports. Helpful forms and recordkeeping tips will be covered as well as actually taking reports. Montie Carol Wesley, Petroleum Management Consultants, will instruct. Fee is $100; $10 for those unemployed since January.

"Basic Fundamentals of the Petroleum Industry," has been scheduled for July 21-22 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This well-received course presents an overview of the petroleum industry. Topics include historical aspects of oil and gas formation, exploration, legal aspects, leasing, drilling, completions, production, transportation, storage, refining and distribution, marketing, economics and politics. Dr. Raymond Bass, Petroleum Educational Services, Inc., Lafayette, La., will instruct. Fee is $260. Eligible for 16 CPE credits.

"Oilfield Sales Seminar," set for July 23-24 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. is geared to the needs of those who are specifically involved with selling in the oil industry. This seminar will minimize theory and maximize the practical approach. Raymond Bass will instruct. Fee is $219; $119 each additional person from the same company.

Southwest reports air traffic increase in June

DALLAS (SWN) — Southwest Airlines and its wholly-owned subsidiary, TranStar, flew a combined 654.0 million revenue passenger miles (RPM's) in June, 1986, a 4.6 percent increase over the 625.4 million RPM's flown by the two carriers in June of last year. Southwest's (only) June traffic was down 4.1 percent to 508.6 million RPM's, while TranStar (only) flew 145.3 million RPM's, a 52.6 percent increase over last year.

The combined load factor for the month was 60.5 percent, compared to the 67.8 percent figure of a year ago. TranStar's individual load factor was 59.4 percent for the month and Southwest's load factor was 60.9 percent.

For the second quarter of 1986, the two carriers flew 1,791.0 million RPM's, an increase of 3.0 percent over the joint RPM's recorded for the second quarter in 1985. The combined year-to-date load factor is 55.7 percent, compared to 59.8 percent for the same period last year. In terms of individual statistics, TranStar's year-to-date load factor is 55.4 percent, 3.6 points above the 51.8 percent achieved over this time frame a year ago.

Herbert D. Kelleher, chairman of the board of Southwest Airlines Co. and TranStar, and president and CEO of Southwest, said: "Bill Franklin, president and CEO of TranStar, and I are pleased to report the increased consolidated traffic for the month of June compared to last year and remain cautiously optimistic that the increased passenger traffic which developed throughout the month of June will continue during the remainder of the summer season. Southwest's new routes and services are showing substantial load factor improvement, and its energy belt load factors remain strong."

Refinancing thrives on lower rates

Mortgage companies inundated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Homeowners lured by low interest rates are seeking to refinance mortgages at such a feverish clip they are bogging down the system and facing long delays and higher-than-anticipated interest rates.

California, the nation's biggest market for residentil mortgages with 28 percent of the business, is feeling the pinch the most.

"Some of our members are doing 300 percent more business this year than last," Lee Anne Mathews, spokeswoman for the Sacramento-based California Mortgage Bankers Association, said Monday. "It's just more than anyone anticipated, and we weren't ready to handle it."

But the problem is being felt elsewhere, as well.

"It's causing a lot of problems," said Roman Olescyeak of Earl Keim Realty Inc. in the Detroit suburb of Livonia. "Deals are falling apart because it takes too long to get them closed and people get frustrated."

Nationally, lenders this year expect to process new loans and refinancings worth about $400 billion for residences of up to four units, compared with $246 billion last year and $210 billion in 1984, according to the national Mortgage Bankers Association, based in Washington, D.C.

Loan officers, appraisers, title insurers and credit verifiers are stretched to their limits, and still the time it takes to get a mortgage has swollen from the usual 30 to 60 days to as much as 120 days, officials said.

More typical, in recent months, is 80 to 90 days.

Trying to parlay the problems into more business for itself, one lender, Beverly Hills-based Great Western Savings & Loan Association, issued a release saying that despite delays elsewhere, it was able to process loans in an average of 41 days.

"Understandably, consumers are none too happy about it when it means they have to pay higher interest rates," said Warren Dunn, a bankers association spokesman.

In many cases, the delay has meant homeowners faced interest rates as much as 1 percent higher in the end than what they anticipated when they applied.

"In a lot of cases, people could no longer qualify under the higher rates, and the loans just fell through," Ms. Mathews said.

Other times, rising rates made refinancing less lucrative — or not worth it.

Homeowners refinance when the difference between what they are paying and what they could be paying is enough to make it worth incurring $2,000 to $3,000 in refinancing costs.

For instance, Aziz Rastegar, 50, a business consultant from suburban Santa Monica, was enthusiastic about refinancing in February when interest rates were 9.5 percent, compared with the 13 percent he was paying. But as his application worked its way through the logjam, the interest rate climbed to 10.5 percent.

Usually, lenders won't agree to "lock in" an interest rate until the application has been approved by their loan committee — about halfway through the process — or until all the paperwork is done.

"Some in the industry attempted to offer (interest-rate) commitments based on application date, and that turned out to be a disaster for them," said Michael A. Durkin, chief lending officer for the nation's second-largest thrift, Stockton-based American Savings & Loan Association.

Nationally, interest on traditional 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages dipped to 9.5 percent in April — the lowest in about eight years. Rates jumped last month to near 11 percent but have since fallen off to about 10.5 percent.

In an uncharacteristic move for a lender, American Savings last month increased its interest rate twice to discourage new applications while it tried to clear its backlog of unprocessed applications.

"We moved the rate from 10 percent to 10.75 percent, and that didn't slow things down a bit," Durkin said. "So we bumped it to 11.25 percent, and things started to taper off."

In a sharp departure from the past, refinancings are expected to account for about 60 percent of the loan business, said Warren Raybould, head of real estate lending for Los Angeles-based California Federal Savings & Loan Association.

That's the reverse of the traditional pattern of refinancing accounting for about one-third of the loan business.

Namedropping policy

Business Namedropping is intended to inform our readers of promotions, achievements, and changes among the professional business personnel and leaders of Midland.

New presidents, chairmen of the board, directors of major coporations or new officers of organizations are normally treated separately as free-standing stories.

Texas sues Shell over air pollution

AUSTIN (AP) — The state has filed a lawsuit alleging that Shell Chemical Co. has released dangerous gases into the air on at least 54 occasions since 1980, Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

The suit says illegal emissions from Shell's Deer Park plant included vinyl chloride, identified by Mattox as a possible cause of liver cancer.

Shell Chemical Co. is a division of Shell Oil Co.

Bill Gibson of Shell's community relations department had left for the day and was not available for comment after Mattox announced the lawsuit Wednesday, according to a security officer at the Deer Park plant.

Mattox said problems at the plant have continued despite three administrative enforcement conferences conducted by the Texas Air Control Board.

The suit, filed in Austin, asks that the company be ordered to comply with state pollution rules and pay civil penalties.

United Bank reports earnings for second quarter of 1986

United Bank Board Chairman and CEO, Wayne Merritt, has announced that the bank had after tax earnings for the second quarter of $239,407. Earnings for the first six months of 1986 were $512,677 versus $445,844 for the first six months of 1985, an increase of 15 percent. "United Bank has experienced its eighth consecutive quarter of profitability," Merritt stated.

"United Bank finished the first half of 1986 with total capital of $20,064,943 and total assets of $111,640,186 resulting in a capital-to-asset ratio of 17.9 percent, the highest of any financial institution in Midland."

Gas assocation urges FERC to grant rehearing on old gas order

WASHINGTON — The American Gas Association (AGA) is urging the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to grant a rehearing on its "old gas" order.

Says AGA president George H. Lawrence: "FERC's Order 451 is illegal, and should not be implemented."

However, if FERC implements Order 451, it should be modified to allow market-responsiveness and avoid gas price increases which could hurt consumers and markets, Lawrence says.

Heart Answers
Tachycardia
Tachycardia means "fast heart rate." The definition of fast depends upon the age and physical activity of the person. Tachycardia in a newborn is a heartbeat rate of over 160 beats a minute, while in the teenager or adult, tachycardia is a heart rate of greater than 100 beats a minute. Normal tachycardia occurs with fever, excitement, exercise and other similar temporary events, and treatment is not needed. Some diseases, such as an anemia or increased thyroid activity, cause tachycardia and, in those cases, the underlying diseases should be treated. Often, the cause of tachycardia is unknown but can be controlled and prevented with medications.

MEETINGS

Marketing satellite data topic at meeting

The next Geosat Committee, Permian Basin Chapter, is scheduled for July 15 at the RepublicBank First National Midland second floor meeting room, from 7 to 9 p.m.

The speaker will be Steve Prucha from the EOSAT Houston field office. EOSAT is the company that was formed to market pictures from the Landsat satellite after commercialization from the federal government. His topic will be the EOSAT company and their future plans for marketing the Landsat data.

SIPES to host discussion on gas pricing

Jimmy Cox and Charles Kuss will address the next meeting of the Midland chapter of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientiests, SIPES, on July 16. The meeting will be at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The two will discuss and evaluate recent changes in natural gas pricing policies in Texas.

Mr. Cox, a partner in Watson and Cox, has an accounting degree from Abilene Christian University and a law degree from U.T. Austin. He has been an oil and gas producer in Midland for 15 years. He will discuss "The impact of the Texas Railroad Commission on gas pricing in Texas."

Mr. Kuss graduated from Texas A&M and worked seven years for Texaco and BTA in gas sales, processing, and administration, before forming a partnership with John Smart as natural gas consultants in 1984. His talk will be "A review of the FERC order to raise the ceiling on old natural gas prices."

The luncheon is free to SIPES members and $10 for invited guests.

AFL-CIO now offers members MasterCard

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO officials say their new MasterCard for the union's 13.5 million members, offering dramatically lower interest rates, pushes the labor organization into a new area of service.

The program will mean that "millions of people will save millions of dollars," Thomas R. Donahue, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer, said.

Donahue said the program means the labor movement can now begin to offer its members "the same kind of protection in the marketplace as it offers them on the job."

Members who obtain the new Union Privilege MasterCard will pay interest rates of 5 percentage points over the prime rate, now 8.5 percent, or 7.25 points over the prime, depending on which of two alternative plans they elect.

That would mean effective cardholder interest rates of 13.5 percent or 15.75 percent currently, compared with rates of 20 percent or more charged by leading credit card companies.

"Interest rates have been continuing to drop, with the prime falling from 21 to 8.5 percent, yet the interest rates on credit cards have continued to rise," said Ray Denison, president of the AFL-CIO Union Privilege Benefit Program. "We are pleased that all Americans will benefit from this program, because this card cracks the high interest-rate barrier."

The federation said in a statement "there is no profit to the AFL-CIO, nor to the international unions," and said no membership dues money would be used to pay for the program.

The AFL-CIO officials denounced what they called "outrageously high" rates charged by major credit card companies across the country.

They cited several examples of rates charged by major credit card companies: Citicorp VISA, 19.8 percent; Bank of America, 19.8 percent; Chemical Bank, 19.5 percent; Chase Manhattan, 19.8 percent; Sears, 21 percent; Montgomery Ward, 21.6 percent; and J.C. Penney, 21 percent.

Major card issuers and retailers in the past have countered criticism of high rates with the contention that their rates stem from administrative costs and loss expenses.

"Our only comment would be that it's certainly a competitive market out there," said John Maloney, a spokesman for Citicorp. "They're pricing it according to their likes and according to what they're going for."

Although some of the biggest credit card issuers still have annual interest rates in the range of 18 percent to 21 percent, many institutions across the nation have been offering bank cards at substantially lower rates for some time.

According to the Bank Credit Card Observer newsletter, a survey of 105 banks nationally indicated interest rates on bank cards such as MasterCard and Visa ranged as low as 11.5 percent. Some of those rates were promotional, are limited by state law, or applied only under certain conditions, such as on balances above a minimum level.

Cathy Gucfa, a spokeswoman for Sears, Roebuck and Co., said, "Our finance charges on our Sears charge card range from a low of 11.5 percent in Arkansas" to a maximum of 21 percent.

"Our feeling is that customers have total control over any finance charge" by paying off their balance as soon as they are billed.

Study: Too rapid growth may cause bank failure

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — Rapid growth, usually a healthy sign for any business, can cause the failure of a bank if management loses control, a study of bank failures shows.

A study of the major causes of the 92 bank failures during 1982, 1983 and the first quarter of 1984 has been completed by Richard L. Peterson, professor of Bank Management at Texas Tech University and William L. Scott of Illinois State University for the Federal Reserve Board of Chicago.

In most of the banks studied, it was difficult to identify one cause that led to the failure, Peterson said.

"However, if I had to identify one cause, it was mismanagement that more often than not caused the failures we studied," he said.

"Often a bank grows too fast, or reaches a crisis point by being overloaded with one type of loan, and the management resorts to illegal means to try to save a bad economic situation," Peterson said. "But, if there were good management to begin with, problems that lead to failures wouldn't occur."

"What happened so many times was that banks experienced such rapid growth that they had to fund their loans with money borrowed at premium rates," he said.

Citing some of the recent bank failures in Oklahoma and Texas, Peterson said, "These banks were all seemingly solid banks that had sustained loan growth in excess of 20 percent per year just prior to their failure."

Peterson said in order to support rapid growth, experienced loan officers and credit anyalysts must be hired and properly trained.

"Tight administrative control is necesssary to ensure that growth is fueled with high-quality credit, not other banks' rejected credit customers," he said.

More than half of the bank failures studied involved actual or probable criminal misconduct by officers, directors or others associated with the bank.

Although many of the illegal actions were deliberate, Peterson said many occurred only to save a bank from a bad situation.

Natural Gas Burns Hot. But tempers boil when the federal regulations come down.

Getting hot under the collar about implemented natural gas regulations from Washington doesn't do much for your cash flow. But, understanding them beforehand and then making wise decisions can.

You can get just this type of insight at the upcoming Natural Gas Issues and Development Seminar brought to you by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. Federal Energy Regulatory Commissioner C.M. (Mike) Naeve, 20% of the power affecting your income from natural gas, will keynote this vital seminar. You'll hear it straight from the horses mouth when he discusses the current and projected status of federal regulations that impact your bottom line.

Joining the Commissioner will be Gene Hammons, El Paso Natural Gas Company, who'll express the opinions of an interstate pipeline concern about Reg. 451 (deregulation of old gas) and 436 (equal access). In addition, John Hays, renowned gas attorney, will outline the pitfalls of selling gas across state lines and the legal aspects of "take or pay" provisions.

If you have income from natural gas, this is one free seminar you can't afford to miss. After all, it's much easier to make plans in your best interest when you have an idea of what the future will be.

WEST OF THE PECOS

Text and Photos by David Lee Forrest

PECOS — "Just make yourself right at home!" said the cheerful woman in the lobby of the West of the Pecos Museum.

Besides being friendly, that welcome was also very appropriate for this museum. Touring its rambling, occasionally odd exhibits is much like rummaging through an old relative's attic — you never know what you'll find.

It has even more offbeat old things than you could ever hope to stumble across in Grandma's attic, ranging from an Indian mummy to a 1920s permanent wave machine.

The museum is housed in the old Orient Hotel and Saloon, once billed as the "Finest from Ft. Worth to El Paso." The original two-story, red sandstone portion of the building, a saloon with upstairs rooms, was constructed in 1896 by R.S. Johnson, a former Texas Ranger. A portrait of Johnson, a man with a bushy white moustache and a stern expression, hangs in the lobby of the museum.

Right after the turn of the century, Johnson built the three-story hotel onto the saloon. The hotel was built of crude but sturdy concrete blocks and was furnished with fixtures bought in Chicago.

Each room originally had a large rug on the floor, an iron bedstead, two chairs, and a washstand with a big white bowl and pitcher as well as a dresser with a mirror, according to the museum's tour pamphlet.

There were, of course, no private baths, but the first floor had a "wash room" and the other two floors had one bathroom each. An artesian well behind the hotel flowed with enough pressure to carry water all the way to the top floor.

The building was used as a hotel until the mid-1950s. The City of Pecos purchased the building in 1963 and now, after considerable restoration work, it houses an eclectic collection of local memorabilia.

THE SALOON adjoining the lobby has two bronze markers set into its wood floor showing where a John Denson and a Bill Earhart fell after being shot and killed by Pecos resident Barney Riggs on March 3, 1896.

Stairs lead up from the saloon to the bedrooms, which have been transformed into a number of exhibition spaces.

The West of the Pecos Museum, above, is housed in the old Orient Hotel and Saloon and is part of a historic area in downtown Pecos. A replica of Judge Roy Bean's famed Jersey Lilly Saloon, top, was built in the 1930s and now serves as a gift shop for the museum complex.

The first couple of upstair rooms visitors encounter are the Rotary Room and the Rock Room.

The names are quite precise. The Rotary Room is completely filled with odds and ends acquired over the years by Pecos' local Rotary Club chapter. The museum's tour pamphlet succinctly sums up its geology exhibit this way, "Rock Room — Local rocks."

The Rock Room can be frustrating because very few of the mineral specimens are labeled in any way. It does contain one impressive fossil, though, a mastodon tusk found northwest of Orla in 1963, as well as big variety of Indian grinding stones.

Some other rooms on the museum's second floor are devoted to two prominent residents, E.B. Kiser and T.H. Beauchamp.

E.B. Kiser was sheriff of Reeves County from 1918 to 1930. He was also apparently an avid collector of Indian artifacts because his rooms are lined with arrowhead displays he gathered.

T.H. Beauchamp also must have been a busy man; he was one of the founders of Pecos' First National Bank, the town's first schoolteacher, its first pharmacist and an early politician. He also somehow found time to run a ranch. His room includes everything from a large stained glass window originally given to the town's First Baptist Church in honor of Mrs. L.M. Beauchamp in 1910 to ordinary color snapshots of Beauchamp family reunions.

TWO EARLY area physicians, a Dr. Camp and a Dr. Lindley, are also honored with exhibitions. Camp, who came to Pecos in 1900 to practice medicine for more than 50 years, is credited with having built the first operating table in West Texas. This plain, hardwood table looks awfully uncomfortable until one reads in the museum guide that Camp sometimes performed "operations on kitchen tables at remote ranches."

Other second-floor rooms contain exhibits devoted to the annual West of the Pecos Rodeo (Pecos claims to have had the world's first rodeo back in 1883), ranching memorabilia, the old one-room schoolhouse, the First Baptist Church, the local Daughters of the American Revolution, pioneer cookery, the local Masonic Lodge and old-time barber shops.

The only room that's still preserved as an original hotel room is the Bridal Suite. This two-room suite in a sunny corner of the Orient Hotel was always the bridal suite.

The building's third floor is closed to the public, so, after completing the second floor, visitors usually circle down another staircase to the east side of the ground floor.

This section of the West of the Pecos Museum holds a miscellaneous collection of historical tidbits, many which can certainly whet one's curiosity. On one wall, for example, hang several photographs of the 1921 Pecos High School Baseball Team with this mildly mystifying inscription, "It was the undisputed champion of West Texas in 1921 and it once was scheduled to play in Fort Worth for the state championship, but something happened and that game did not occur."

ANOTHER HIGHLY unusual exhibit is an Indian mummy found in a mountain cave near Mexico. The skeleton — its thin, parchment-like skin barely stretched over it — sits curled up in cave-like display case bathed in eerie blue light. The tour pamphlet is, once again, not overly informative, telling the reader, "Indian mummy, found in the Chinati mountains in the Big Bend country. It's interesting to study the different culture of our United States."

The museum is built around a complex that includes the Pecos Chamber of Commerce building, a primitive old adobe jail, the grave of Pecos gunfighter Clay Allison, the oldest house in town and a picturesque 1930s replica of Judge Roy Bean's Jersey Lilly Saloon.

All of this is located on a block of downtown Pecos, bounded by First Street on the north, Second Street on the south, Cedar Street to the east and Oak Street to the west. The museum's summer hours are 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 2-6 p.m. Sundays. For more information, contact the West of the Pecos Museum, P.O. Box 1784, Pecos, Texas 79772.

Dallas 'little bit larger than life'

By LOREEN ARBUS and
NORM CHANDLER FOX

Everything about Dallas is a little bit larger than life, but as any Dallasite will tell you, "That's why we call our city 'Big-D.'"

On a recent visit, we were bowled over by the Dallas skyline. Move over, Chicago, you've lost your crown as our nation's most interesting architectural city to Dallas. The L-T-V Building has that futuristic look of a building out of Fritz Lang's film "Metropolis," while the Inter-First Bank stands like a 21st century sentinel over the charming log cabin in Historical Plaza.

The Infomart looks like London's Crystal Palace as seen by George Orwell, and the newest edifice to scrape the blue Texas sky, the Inter-Bank building appears like a giant green glass shard — a facet of a giant jewel from the Land of Oz. As spectacular as all of these buildings are in daylight, nighttime turns them into living art. Buildings are outlined in green neon or festooned with mega-beacons. And one's eyes can never stop watching the bouncing lights on the Reunion Tower.

Besides being on the architectural vanguard, Dallas has always been a great supporter of the arts. The wonderfully designed Dallas Museum of Art was built in 1983 in an area designated as the Arts District. There are a number of square blocks in this section of the city that feature art galleries, antique stores and other venues for art.

Last November, The Dallas Museum of Art opened its Decorative Arts Wing after receiving the Wendy and Emery Reves Collection. This 1,429-item bequest worth over $35 million literally doubled the value of the museum's holdings, and in one fell swoop, brought the museum into decorative arts. The Reves collection contains three Cezannes, five Renoirs, two Manets and four Bonnards, as well as furniture from the Middle Ages, Chinese porcelains, Venetian glass and memorabilia of Sir Winston Churchill who was a dear friend of the benefactors.

Within walking distance of the museum is the new Dallas Theater Center Arts District Theater. The architect, Eugene Lee, designed the auditorium of this theater as a mobile space in which each new production creates a new design allowing for interaction of the audience and the artists.

Another delightful area of town is Dallas' Historic West End. Here's another urban restoration that doesn't get too cutesy or quaint. Wonderful old brownstone warehouses have been renewed, and a panoply of interesting restaurants, bars, boutiques and nightclubs are filling these buildings. This is an area that invites you to leave your car, wander around the shops, sip an espresso at a French or Italian bistro, and just meander by the warehouses and old iron railway tracks that are symbols of Dallas' first entrepreneurial spirit in the late 19th century.

We wanted to strike out and see some of the residential neighborhoods of Dallas, so we started in the east part of town on Swiss Avenue. This is a boulevard of lovely prairie-style grand homes built in the early part of the century. Individuals and groups are busy restoring these homes and bringing them back to their original glory.

From this area, we headed north to Highland Park, which is the Beverly Hills of Dallas. Here's where you expect to find members of the Ewing family gadding about. There are some magnificent stately homes on Preston Road, and the surrounding gardens rival the best in France.

There's a wonderfully old-fashioned shopping center in this town that has the reputation of being the oldest mall in America — built in 1931. Compared to the indoor labyrinths filled with canned music, the Highland Park Village Center is a lovely breath of the past. It's outdoors and the buildings are all pink stucco with tile roofs housing charming boutiques and flashy restaurants.

On our last evening in Big-D, we decided we wanted to "get down" and go to a night-spot where Dallasites really relax. Everyone recommended Dick's Last Resort located in the West End District. As we walked in the door, we noted a large sign that stated, "No coats, no ties, no bull." It was close to midnight, and the place was hopping. Dixieland jazz is played nightly, and the enterprise loudly states that "reservations are scoffed at."

You can order beer in an aquarium-size glass, but we just ordered some Lone Stars in long-neck bottles. The music really became infectious, and before long we were singing with everyone at our long table. At one point, we looked up at a sign over the bar that read, "You can't kill a man born to hang!" It was very funny, because Dallas can be so refined, and at the same time, this north Texas city sure loves to have fun.

Big D has fine dining

By LOREEN ARBUS and
NORM CHANDLER FOX
Copley News Service

Dallas is a city of superlatives. The city now boasts some of the most innovative architecture in the nation, an extraordinary downtown arts center and some outstanding restaurants that have brought Southwest cuisine to a new culinary height.

Although the city has a plethora of spanking new hotels, there is only one, The Mansion On Turtle Creek, for which you could repeat the Guide Michelin maxim of vaut le voyage — worthy of the trip itself.

Only a few minutes from bustling downtown, The Mansion sits on a 4½-acre terraced hill overlooking Turtle Creek with its banks of azaleas, willow trees and jogging paths. This prestigious residential neighborhood boasts wonderful art galleries and boutiques, as well as some special restaurants.

As we drove up to The Mansion in the stretch limousine that the hotel uses to pick up guests at the airport, we were taken by the overall architecture of the place. Rosewood Hotels, owner and operator of this hotel, as well as other posh hostelries such as Houston's Remington and Los Angeles' Bel Air, acquired the 1925 Sheppard King mansion that was designed in 16th century Italian style. While restoring this building to its former glory and setting the wheels in motion to convert it into a phenomenal restaurant, Rosewood built the nine-story hotel portion that joins the older building. The hotel tower's arched windows, porticoes and rotunda all carry forth a harmonious theme from the original mansion.

Entering the hotel's scaled-down lobby, we loved the understated elegance that has become a signature of Rosewood hotels. Filled with one-of-a-kind collector's items such as an English Chippendale breakfront, antique mirrors, Chinese porcelains and a Lord Paxton jardiniere, the lobby feels like the living room of a stately English manor house. Near the front desk, a concierge is on duty to handle anything from theater tickets to car rental to suggestions on where to get the best barbecue in town.

All of the guest rooms at The Mansion are oversize. It's as if the management was subtly trying to tell us that in this giant state of Texas, luxury abounds in vast quantities. Again, everything is opulent in a quiet way. The televison and radio are discreetly hidden in an armoire, and you can luxuriate in a soft terry robe while lolling in an overstuffed easy chair and ottoman. Thoughtfully, the hotel provides telephone extensions in the bath, at bedside and on the desk, and there's every type of customized bath accessory in the marble-and-brass appointed king-size bathroom.

With such close attention to detail, we knew the cuisine in this hotel would come close to perfection, and we weren't disappointed. Dallas' power elite all seem to converge for breakfast in The Promenade, a long sunny room with high arched windows. The menu contains such gourmet items as cinnamon brioche french toast with an orange curd sauce, stir-fried eggs served in a flour tortilla with jalapeno jack cheese, poached eggs on homemade muffins with pancetta bacon, wild mushrooms and apple cider Hollandaise. They even make their own red bell pepper ketchup to accompany the cottage fries. After starting the day here, subsequent meals throughout the day seem to go downhill — unless you eat them at The Mansion.

Lunch in The Promenade is equally inventive, but we were really knocked out by the tea served at 4 p.m. in the same room. A profusion of finger sandwiches, terrines and pates help to tide you over the long afternoon, as well as strong English tea drawn from a magnificent antique tea service. Then you are served a panoply of jewellike pastries, scones and sweets (including the most outrageous truffles in Texas) just for good measure.

Dinner is served nightly in the historic mansion portion of the hotel. The adjoining bar and lounge feels like an English men's club, while the sumptuous main dining room has an inlaid ceiling containing 2,400 separate pieces of wood and a fireplace based on an original in England's Bromley Castle. Our dinner was the epitome of regional American cuisine.

We began with succulent crab cakes, followed by a black bean soup served with a goat cheese-stuffed jalapeno pepper. Among the entrees served were salmon in orange butter, grilled Mexican shrimp with papaya chutney, breast of pheasant in a lady apple and white zinfandel sauce and venison in a burgundy and pear sauce. Desserts included a crunchy-topped creme brulee with raspberries inside and an exquisite three-layer chocolate, mocha and white chocolate mousse. The wine list at The Mansion is a mind-boggler with some masterful wines at astronomical prices; there are a large number of medium-priced bottles for those of us who can't afford labels that belong in a museum.

After a glorious stay, we felt rather wistful when the time came to check out of The Mansion On Turtle Creek. That wistfulness turned to sadness by the time we arrived at the Dallas/Fort Worth Airport. Besides being sad to leave our lap of understated luxury, we also were unhappy because we knew that no other hotel would feel quite the same once you've been spoiled by the best little mansion in Texas.

Arizona hosts Native American Arts festival

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Travelers headed for the Southwest this summer will find an unusual festival of Indian tribal arts that is within easy reach of four Indian reservations and the Grand Canyon.

The sixth annual 1986 Festival of Native American Arts will be held through Aug. 3 at the Coconino Center for the Arts in Flagstaff, Ariz.

It celebrates the talents of Indian artists, actors, filmmakers, musicians, dancers, poets and craftsmen from Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado.

Flagstaff is a logical jumping-off point for exploring a number of Indian reservations, as well as the Grand Canyon — all less than 100 miles away.

The Hopi and Navajo reservations are to the northeast, the Hualapai and Havasupai reservations to the northwest and the South Rim of the Grand Canyon to the north.

Last year the festival drew more than 10,000 visitors, who came to attend films and plays by Indians, and to view works of Navajo, Zuni, Apache, Havasupai, San Juan Paiute and other tribal artists and craftsmen — many of which will again be on sale at the center. Most of the craft demonstrations are scheduled during the weekends.

There will also be demonstrations of Indian food preparation and a fashion show.

Recipient of a grant from the Folk Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts, the festival is cosponsored by the Museum of Northern Arizona and the Native Americans for Community Action (NACA).

NACA is a nonprofit corporation, based in Flagstaff and operated primarily by Indians, that seeks to promote the self-sufficiency of American Indians in Coconino County through economic development. A major aim of NACA is to encourage the "appreciation and perpetuation of the arts and culture of Native Americans," according to Dian Magie, director of the festival.

Among the upcoming weekend events scheduled on the festival program are:

■ San Juan Paiute Basket Workshop. Weaving of willow baskets. Admission to the demonstration is free, but there is a $5 materials fee for those interested in learning to make a basket; July 19, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

■ Native American Clothing, Traditional and Contemporary. A fashion show with Indians modeling examples of dress and accessories of tribes from around the nation. Admission $5 for adults, $1 for children under 12; July 26 and 27, 4 p.m.

The festival has been selected by the Arizona Commission on the Arts as one of the state's 1986-87 Touring Exhibitions.

"This is an excellent example of a small local arts agency effectively representing its region," says a spokesperson for the National Endowment.

The festival will be open to the public from 9 to 5 daily. Admission to many of the presentations is free.

The Museum of Northern Arizona, just outside Flagstaff, is also open daily 9 to 5 and will be presenting its own annual exhibitions of Hopi and Navajo craftsmen.

This program also began June 20 and ends Aug. 10. There is an admission ($3 adults, $1.50 for children 12 and under) to the museum, which covers both the permanent collection devoted primarily to the history of the Anazasi Indians and the special annual exhibitions.

For more information, contact the center at 2300 North Fort Valley Road (U.S. Rte. 180), P.O. Box 296, Flagstaff, Ariz. 86002, (602) 779-6921.

Scarecrows built by ancient farmers

Associated Press

The practice of scarecrow building is as old as man's efforts to till the earth.

Our Asian, European, and African ancestors all erected forms of one kind or another to frighten marauders from the fields, says Country Home magazine. When the first colonists arrived in North America, they found scarecrows watching over stalks of corn the Indians had so tediously coaxed from the rocky New England soil.

As farming grew more sophisticated, so did scarecrows. Sticks draped with flapping rags gave way to life-like figures dressed in cast-off clothes.

Scarecrows makers spend long winter evenings planning the creations that will rule their vegetable gardens come spring.

MISTER ROGERS

Children dance through time at own pace

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

Rogers

"It hasn't worked out right at all," a mother complained. "I mean one of the main reasons we had a second child was so that Mark would have someone to play with and be close to while growing up. Now they're 7 and 4. Toby's old enough to play, but Mark says he hates playing with him because he won't follow the rules. So he goes off playing with friends his own age, and of course he never wants Toby along. I really feel very sad about it, sad for Toby, and I wonder if we did the right thing after all."

When I read that mother's lament, I thought, "Yes, that's the way it so often is!" Then I thought, "But why does it have to be so?" The child in me replied, "Because!"

Mark doesn't understand where Toby is. Only three years between them, but Mark has forgotten what it was like to be 4. Perhaps that's the way early memory works. Perhaps it doesn't seem important to Mark to remember: What's important to him is what it's like to be 7... and wishing and dreaming about being 10.

Part of being 7 is the excitement of learning and mastering new things — difficult and complicated and mysterious things like secret codes, and why polar bears don't eat penguins, and, yes, rules to games. Knowing the rules, like knowing a magic spell, can bring the power to control what happens and what other people do... so long as people will follow your rules. When they won't, your power is gone.

Toby, for his part, hasn't the slightest idea what his brother is all about. Oh, Toby's excited about learning and mastering, too. He's mastered how to walk, to run, to climb. He may still be working on how to stay dry and clean all the time. Or trying hard to understand that when people you love leave, they haven't left you forever. Or that something like a toy can come to pieces, but the parts of your own body stay together.

For him, a checker board is a place of shapes he's learned and colors he knows, a place full of paths of his own making. It's an arena for stories he can make up — about cars that zoom here and there on the way to "wherever" bumping into one another if he feels like making them crash, or stories of little checker-people who go away from one another for a while and then come back.

Rules? What's all this stuff Mark's coming up with about "You have to do it this way or that"? Toby's learned he can do it whichever way he feels like doing it... and that's power!

Meanwhile, Mark's and Toby's mother feels powerless and unhappy because her hopes and expectations for her children aren't working out the way she wanted. Her feelings made me think of seeing a father playing with his new daughter one day when she was only a few months old. He wanted her to hold on to his finger, really hold on, and when she did, he'd pull and say, "Turn over. Come on, turn over." When she wouldn't because she couldn't, he looked disappointed.

But the baby was busy trying to learn other things: Her hand wasn't just something that floated around out there. She could make it stop sometimes and sometimes even make those things that wiggled on the end open and shut.

What, she must have wondered in her own way, is all this stuff about "Turn over"?

As children develop in their own ways as individuals, and as sons and daughters, and as brothers and sisters or playmates, there's a dance going on. To borrow a phrase from the writer Anthony Powell, it's a "dance to the music of time." That dance has its own rhythms. The steps to that dance can be made more comfortable, easier to learn, but they can't be hurried.

Mark's mother can help this older son of hers learn to be understanding and patient, that it's safe to give up some of his power some of the time, and that there are new kinds of power in being a caring teacher. Together, they can help younger son, Toby, learn little by little (when he's ready) what rules are and that games' rules can be fun — win or lose.

They can all learn the dance from one another. What none of them can do is speed up the music.

If you'd like to tell us something about life in your family, I'd be glad to hear from you. Write "Insights Into Childhood," c/o Family Communications, 4802 Fifth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213.

America's roadside 'attractions' listed

NEW YORK (UPI) — It is morning on the highway, and as you attempt to juggle the steering wheel and a cup of coffee, a gigantic figure looms up from the roadside ahead.

Peering through the fog, you can barely make out the features of this gargantuan being.

All of these apparitions actually exist as gigantic animal sculptures on America's roads, along with such attractions as rollerskating parrots, biblical theme parks, tasteless souvenirs, The Liberace Museum, and a wheat field shaped like Will Rogers' face. You can find them in the recently-issued guide, "Roadside America."

Published by Simon & Schuster, Inc., the book surveys the United States for the most bizarre tourist magnets this land of asphalt and yellow lines has to offer. Among them:

■ Giant sculpture battling for supremacy in the large animal division are the World's Largest Shrimp in Houston, Texas, the World's Largest Buffalo of Jamestown, N.D., the World's Largest Prarie Chicken in Rothsay, Minn., and Paisano Pete of Ft. Stockton, Texas, also known as the World's Largest Roadrunner.

"Inanimate" objects of heroic size also litter the American landscape, including a bevy of big chairs and the World's Largest Six Pack in La Crosse, Wis.

■ Famous figures: They come in all sizes and substances, from wax to wheat. The Will Rogers wheat field near Dodge City, Kan., for example, shows the humorist's head, outlined by furrows and shaded with various grains of the plant.

The Smokey the Bear grave site in Capitan, N.M. is marked with a museum that tells his story and features his visage in stained glass. And the Liberace Museum in Las Vegas, Nev., part of the Liberace Shopping Center, includes miniature pianos and a plaster cast of the head of the pianist's brother — George.

■ Mementos of your trip: No tourist should miss the chance to take home some of the souvenirs.

Written by Jack Barth, Doug Kirby, Ken Smith and Mike Wilkins, "Roadside America" sells in bookstores for $9.95.

Dallas 'little bit larger than life'

By LOREEN ARBUS and
NORM CHANDLER FOX
Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Everything about Dallas is a little bit larger than life, but as any Dallasite will tell you, "That's why we call our city 'Big-D.'"

On a recent visit, we were bowled over by the Dallas skyline. Move over, Chicago, you've lost your crown as our nation's most interesting architectural city to Dallas. The L-T-V Building has that futuristic look of a building out of Fritz Lang's film "Metropolis," while the Inter-First Bank stands like a 21st century sentinel over the charming log cabin in Historical Plaza.

The Infomart looks like London's Crystal Palace as seen by George Orwell, and the newest edifice to scrape the blue Texas sky, the Inter-Bank building appears like a giant green glass shard — a facet of a giant jewel from the Land of Oz. As spectacular as all of these buildings are in daylight, nighttime turns them into living art. Buildings are outlined in green neon or festooned with mega-beacons. And one's eyes can never stop watching the bouncing lights on the Reunion Tower.

Besides being on the architectural vanguard, Dallas has always been a great supporter of the arts. The wonderfully designed Dallas Museum of Art was built in 1983 in an area designated as the Arts District. There are a number of square blocks in this section of the city that feature art galleries, antique stores and other venues for art.

Last November, The Dallas Museum of Art opened its Decorative Arts Wing after receiving the Wendy and Emery Reves Collection. This 1,429-item bequest worth over $35 million literally doubled the value of the museum's holdings, and in one fell swoop, brought the museum into decorative arts. The Reves collection contains three Cezannes, five Renoirs, two Manets and four Bonnards, as well as furniture from the Middle Ages, Chinese porcelains, Venetian glass and memorabilia of Sir Winston Churchill who was a dear friend of the benefactors.

Within walking distance of the museum is the new Dallas Theater Center Arts District Theater. The architect, Eugene Lee, designed the auditorium of this theater as a mobile space in which each new production creates a new design allowing for interaction of the audience and the artists.

Another delightful area of town is Dallas' Historic West End. Here's another urban restoration that doesn't get too cutesy or quaint. Wonderful old brownstone warehouses have been renewed, and a panoply of interesting restaurants, bars, boutiques and nightclubs are filling these buildings. This is an area that invites you to leave your car, wander around the shops, sip an espresso at a French or Italian bistro, and just meander by the warehouses and old iron railway tracks that are symbols of Dallas' first entrepreneurial spirit in the late 19th century.

We wanted to strike out and see some of the residential neighborhoods of Dallas, so we started in the east part of town on Swiss Avenue. This is a boulevard of lovely prairie-style grand homes built in the early part of the century. Individuals and groups are busy restoring these homes and bringing them back to their original glory.

From this area, we headed north to Highland Park, which is the Beverly Hills of Dallas. Here's where you expect to find members of the Ewing family gadding about. There are some magnificent stately homes on Preston Road, and the surrounding gardens rival the best in France.

There's a wonderfully old-fashioned shopping center in this town that has the reputation of being the oldest mall in America — built in 1931. Compared to the indoor labyrinths filled with canned music, the Highland Park Village Center is a lovely breath of the past. It's outdoors and the buildings are all pink stucco with tile roofs housing charming boutiques and flashy restaurants.

On our last evening in Big-D, we decided we wanted to "get down" and go to a night-spot where Dallasites really relax. Everyone recommended Dick's Last Resort located in the West End District. As we walked in the door, we noted a large sign that stated, "No coats, no ties, no bull." It was close to midnight, and the place was hopping. Dixieland jazz is played nightly, and the enterprise loudly states that "reservations are scoffed at."

You can order beer in an aquarium-size glass, but we just ordered some Lone Stars in long-neck bottles. The music really became infectious, and before long we were singing with everyone at our long table. At one point, we looked up at a sign over the bar that read, "You can't kill a man born to hang!" It was very funny, because Dallas can be so refined, and at the same time, this north Texas city sure loves to have fun.

Big D has fine dining

By LOREEN ARBUS and
NORM CHANDLER FOX
Copley News Service

Dallas is a city of superlatives. The city now boasts some of the most innovative architecture in the nation, an extraordinary downtown arts center and some outstanding restaurants that have brought Southwest cuisine to a new culinary height.

Although the city has a plethora of spanking new hotels, there is only one, The Mansion On Turtle Creek, for which you could repeat the Guide Michelin maxim of vaut le voyage — worthy of the trip itself.

Only a few minutes from bustling downtown, The Mansion sits on a 4½-acre terraced hill overlooking Turtle Creek with its banks of azaleas, willow trees and jogging paths. This prestigious residential neighborhood boasts wonderful art galleries and boutiques, as well as some special restaurants.

As we drove up to The Mansion in the stretch limousine that the hotel uses to pick up guests at the airport, we were taken by the overall architecture of the place. Rosewood Hotels, owner and operator of this hotel, as well as other posh hostelries such as Houston's Remington and Los Angeles' Bel Air, acquired the 1925 Sheppard King mansion that was designed in 16th century Italian style. While restoring this building to its former glory and setting the wheels in motion to convert it into a phenomenal restaurant, Rosewood built the nine-story hotel portion that joins the older building. The hotel tower's arched windows, porticoes and rotunda all carry forth a harmonious theme from the original mansion.

Entering the hotel's scaled-down lobby, we loved the understated elegance that has become a signature of Rosewood hotels. Filled with one-of-a-kind collector's items such as an English Chippendale breakfront, antique mirrors, Chinese porcelains and a Lord Paxton jardiniere, the lobby feels like the living room of a stately English manor house. Near the front desk, a concierge is on duty to handle anything from theater tickets to car rental to suggestions on where to get the best barbecue in town.

All of the guest rooms at The Mansion are oversize. It's as if the management was subtly trying to tell us that in this giant state of Texas, luxury abounds in vast quantities. Again, everything is opulent in a quiet way. The televison and radio are discreetly hidden in an armoire, and you can luxuriate in a soft terry robe while lolling in an overstuffed easy chair and ottoman. Thoughtfully, the hotel provides telephone extensions in the bath, at bedside and on the desk, and there's every type of customized bath accessory in the marble-and-brass appointed king-size bathroom.

With such close attention to detail, we knew the cuisine in this hotel would come close to perfection, and we weren't disappointed. Dallas' power elite all seem to converge for breakfast in The Promenade, a long sunny room with high arched windows. The menu contains such gourmet items as cinnamon brioche french toast with an orange curd sauce, stir-fried eggs served in a flour tortilla with jalapeno jack cheese, poached eggs on homemade muffins with pancetta bacon, wild mushrooms and apple cider Hollandaise. They even make their own red bell pepper ketchup to accompany the cottage fries. After starting the day here, subsequent meals throughout the day seem to go downhill — unless you eat them at The Mansion.

Lunch in The Promenade is equally inventive, but we were really knocked out by the tea served at 4 p.m. in the same room. A profusion of finger sandwiches, terrines and pates help to tide you over the long afternoon, as well as strong English tea drawn from a magnificent antique tea service. Then you are served a panoply of jewellike pastries, scones and sweets (including the most outrageous truffles in Texas) just for good measure.

Dinner is served nightly in the historic mansion portion of the hotel. The adjoining bar and lounge feels like an English men's club, while the sumptuous main dining room has an inlaid ceiling containing 2,400 separate pieces of wood and a fireplace based on an original in England's Bromley Castle. Our dinner was the epitome of regional American cuisine.

We began with succulent crab cakes, followed by a black bean soup served with a goat cheese-stuffed jalapeno pepper. Among the entrees served were salmon in orange butter, grilled Mexican shrimp with papaya chutney, breast of pheasant in a lady apple and white zinfandel sauce and venison in a burgundy and pear sauce. Desserts included a crunchy-topped creme brulee with raspberries inside and an exquisite three-layer chocolate, mocha and white chocolate mousse. The wine list at The Mansion is a mind-boggler with some masterful wines at astronomical prices; there are a large number of medium-priced bottles for those of us who can't afford labels that belong in a museum.

After a glorious stay, we felt rather wistful when the time came to check out of The Mansion On Turtle Creek. That wistfulness turned to sadness by the time we arrived at the Dallas/Fort Worth Airport. Besides being sad to leave our lap of understated luxury, we also were unhappy because we knew that no other hotel would feel quite the same once you've been spoiled by the best little mansion in Texas.

Arizona hosts Native American Arts festival

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Travelers headed for the Southwest this summer will find an unusual festival of Indian tribal arts that is within easy reach of four Indian reservations and the Grand Canyon.

The sixth annual 1986 Festival of Native American Arts will be held through Aug. 3 at the Coconino Center for the Arts in Flagstaff, Ariz.

It celebrates the talents of Indian artists, actors, filmmakers, musicians, dancers, poets and craftsmen from Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado.

Flagstaff is a logical jumping-off point for exploring a number of Indian reservations, as well as the Grand Canyon — all less than 100 miles away.

The Hopi and Navajo reservations are to the northeast, the Hualapai and Havasupai reservations to the northwest and the South Rim of the Grand Canyon to the north.

Last year the festival drew more than 10,000 visitors, who came to attend films and plays by Indians, and to view works of Navajo, Zuni, Apache, Havasupai, San Juan Paiute and other tribal artists and craftsmen — many of which will again be on sale at the center. Most of the craft demonstrations are scheduled during the weekends.

There will also be demonstrations of Indian food preparation and a fashion show.

Recipient of a grant from the Folk Arts Program of the National Endowment for the Arts, the festival is cosponsored by the Museum of Northern Arizona and the Native Americans for Community Action (NACA).

NACA is a nonprofit corporation, based in Flagstaff and operated primarily by Indians, that seeks to promote the self-sufficiency of American Indians in Coconino County through economic development. A major aim of NACA is to encourage the "appreciation and perpetuation of the arts and culture of Native Americans," according to Dian Magie, director of the festival.

Among the upcoming weekend events scheduled on the festival program are:

■ San Juan Paiute Basket Workshop. Weaving of willow baskets. Admission to the demonstration is free, but there is a $5 materials fee for those interested in learning to make a basket; July 19, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

■ Native American Clothing, Traditional and Contemporary. A fashion show with Indians modeling examples of dress and accessories of tribes from around the nation. Admission $5 for adults, $1 for children under 12; July 26 and 27, 4 p.m.

The festival has been selected by the Arizona Commission on the Arts as one of the state's 1986-87 Touring Exhibitions.

"This is an excellent example of a small local arts agency effectively representing its region," says a spokesperson for the National Endowment.

The festival will be open to the public from 9 to 5 daily. Admission to many of the presentations is free.

The Museum of Northern Arizona, just outside Flagstaff, is also open daily 9 to 5 and will be presenting its own annual exhibitions of Hopi and Navajo craftsmen.

This program also began June 20 and ends Aug. 10. There is an admission ($3 adults, $1.50 for children 12 and under) to the museum, which covers both the permanent collection devoted primarily to the history of the Anazasi Indians and the special annual exhibitions.

For more information, contact the center at 2300 North Fort Valley Road (U.S. Rte. 180), P.O. Box 296, Flagstaff, Ariz. 86002, (602) 779-6921.

Scarecrows built by ancient farmers

Associated Press

The practice of scarecrow building is as old as man's efforts to till the earth.

Our Asian, European, and African ancestors all erected forms of one kind or another to frighten marauders from the fields, says Country Home magazine. When the first colonists arrived in North America, they found scarecrows watching over stalks of corn the Indians had so tediously coaxed from the rocky New England soil.

As farming grew more sophisticated, so did scarecrows. Sticks draped with flapping rags gave way to lifelike figures dressed in cast-off clothes.

Scarecrows makers spend long winter evenings planning the creations that will rule their vegetable gardens come spring.

MISTER ROGERS

Children dance through time at own pace

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

Rogers

"It hasn't worked out right at all," a mother complained. "I mean one of the main reasons we had a second child was so that Mark would have someone to play with and be close to while growing up. Now they're 7 and 4. Toby's old enough to play, but Mark says he hates playing with him because he won't follow the rules. So he goes off playing with friends his own age, and of course he never wants Toby along. I really feel very sad about it, sad for Toby, and I wonder if we did the right thing after all."

When I read that mother's lament, I thought, "Yes, that's the way it so often is!" Then I thought, "But why does it have to be so?" The child in me replied, "Because!"

Mark doesn't understand where Toby is. Only three years between them, but Mark has forgotten what it was like to be 4. Perhaps that's the way early memory works. Perhaps it doesn't seem important to Mark to remember: What's important to him is what it's like to be 7... and wishing and dreaming about being 10.

Part of being 7 is the excitement of learning and mastering new things — difficult and complicated and mysterious things like secret codes, and why polar bears don't eat penguins, and, yes, rules to games. Knowing the rules, like knowing a magic spell, can bring the power to control what happens and what other people do... so long as people will follow your rules. When they won't, your power is gone.

Toby, for his part, hasn't the slightest idea what his brother is all about. Oh, Toby's excited about learning and mastering, too. He's mastered how to walk, to run, to climb. He may still be working on how to stay dry and clean all the time. Or trying hard to understand that when people you love leave, they haven't left you forever. Or that something like a toy can come to pieces, but the parts of your own body stay together.

For him, a checker board is a place of shapes he's learned and colors he knows, a place full of paths of his own making. It's an arena for stories he can make up — about cars that zoom here and there on the way to "wherever" bumping into one another if he feels like making them crash, or stories of little checker-people who go away from one another for a while and then come back.

Rules? What's all this stuff Mark's coming up with about "You have to do it this way or that"? Toby's learned he can do it whichever way he feels like doing it... and that's power!

Meanwhile, Mark's and Toby's mother feels powerless and unhappy because her hopes and expectations for her children aren't working out the way she wanted. Her feelings made me think of seeing a father playing with his new daughter one day when she was only a few months old. He wanted her to hold on to his finger, really hold on, and when she did, he'd pull and say, "Turn over. Come on, turn over." When she wouldn't because she couldn't, he looked disappointed.

But the baby was busy trying to learn other things: Her hand wasn't just something that floated around out there. She could make it stop sometimes and sometimes even make those things that wiggled on the end open and shut.

What, she must have wondered in her own way, is all this stuff about "Turn over"?

As children develop in their own ways as individuals, and as sons and daughters, and as brothers and sisters or playmates, there's a dance going on. To borrow a phrase from the writer Anthony Powell, it's a "dance to the music of time." That dance has its own rhythms. The steps to that dance can be made more comfortable, easier to learn, but they can't be hurried.

Mark's mother can help this older son of hers learn to be understanding and patient, that it's safe to give up some of his power some of the time, and that there are new kinds of power in being a caring teacher. Together, they can help younger son, Toby, learn little by little (when he's ready) what rules are and that games' rules can be fun — win or lose.

They can all learn the dance from one another. What none of them can do is speed up the music.

If you'd like to tell us something about life in your family, I'd be glad to hear from you. Write "Insights Into Childhood," c/o Family Communications, 4802 Fifth Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213.

America's roadside 'attractions' listed

NEW YORK (UPI) — It is morning on the highway, and as you attempt to juggle the steering wheel and a cup of coffee, a gigantic figure looms up from the roadside ahead.

Peering through the fog, you can barely make out the features of this gargantuan being.

All of these apparitions actually exist as gigantic animal sculptures on America's roads, along with such attractions as rollerskating parrots, biblical theme parks, tasteless souvenirs, The Liberace Museum, and a wheat field shaped like Will Rogers' face. You can find them in the recently-issued guide, "Roadside America."

Published by Simon & Schuster, Inc., the book surveys the United States for the most bizarre tourist magnets this land of asphalt and yellow lines has to offer. Among them:

■ Giant sculpture battling for supremacy in the large animal division are the World's Largest Shrimp in Houston, Texas, the World's Largest Buffalo of Jamestown, N.D., the World's Largest Prarie Chicken in Rothsay, Minn., and Paisano Pete of Ft. Stockton, Texas, also known as the World's Largest Roadrunner.

"Inanimate" objects of heroic size also litter the American landscape, including a bevy of big chairs and the World's Largest Six Pack in La Crosse, Wis.

■ Famous figures: They come in all sizes and substances, from wax to wheat. The Will Rogers wheat field near Dodge City, Kan., for example, shows the humorist's head, outlined by furrows and shaded with various grains of the plant.

The Smokey the Bear grave site in Capitan, N.M. is marked with a museum that tells his story and features his visage in stained glass. And the Liberace Museum in Las Vegas, Nev., part of the Liberace Shopping Center, includes miniature pianos and a plaster cast of the head of the pianist's brother — George.

■ Mementos of your trip: No tourist should miss the chance to take home some of the souvenirs.

Written by Jack Barth, Doug Kirby, Ken Smith and Mike Wilkins, "Roadside America" sells in bookstores for $9.95.

AT WIT'S END

Life in fast lane leaves no time to hear swings squeak

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Ever feel like you're a 45 r.p.m. record in a cassette world?

You don't fit the equipment, you can't get anyone to repair you, and you're going at the wrong speed.

Obviously, quite a few of you do who wrote in response to the column on summer evenings when life was slower and you sat for hours on the front porch and listened to the swing squeak.

One woman said our life nowadays is by appointment only — the more you have on your calendar, the more successful you feel. Another said her children are running around from one event to the other like a blur. She asks, "Where is everybody going so fast and furious?"

I wish I knew.

Turn right on red.

Fast forward to eliminate the commercials.

Just add water. Heat and serve.

Reach out and touch someone — and drive at the same time.

At the sound of the beep, you have five seconds to leave your message.

I think it all began when we thought if we could shorten the time it took us to do chores, we would have a lot more time for leisure. But then we started knocking minutes off of "leishing."

Boats went faster, books became condensed, picnics were catered, planes chopped hours off travel time, and we watched one TV show while we taped another one.

We passed the disease on to our children. Don't sit around the house. Get out there and play organized ball, twirl a baton, get a black belt, play a tuba, learn to act, sing in a choir, pitch a tent and weave a sit-upon that you will never sit on, but do something!

Every morning of our lives when we get up we must dress for success, say something meaningful, make a commitment to something, fulfill a goal and seek fulfillment. I'm not even sure what all that means.

I heard a career woman say the other day, "Tomorrow, I have to take the car in, do the laundry, go to the dentist, grocery shop, pick out new fabric for the sofa, go to a luncheon and car pool after school. Thank God for a day off!" She was serious.

I'm a heavy contributor to the problem. Recently, I used a deodorant that I would apply only once, saving eight seconds, took a headache tablet that raced to my stomach 15 seconds faster than its competitor and climbed in a car with an additive in the gasoline that saved me possibly five seconds on my starting time.

At lunch, I used a catsup that saved me six seconds by coming out of the bottle faster than Brand X, ran off some copies on a copier that did the job in 20 seconds less than the former one, and later put a hot dog in the microwave that chopped 60 seconds off the traditional way of cooking. As I slept little blue men were in my toilet bowl making bubbles that saved me 45 seconds of scrubbing.

I had saved a total of two minutes, 39 seconds. How many squeaks in a swing is that?

Network news edited to inform passengers

SEATTLE (AP) — Passengers on incoming flights from the Orient to the United States now are able to receive a "briefing" on what's been happening in the states, thanks to a specially edited version of television network news, reports Travel Agent magazine.

Regular morning network news programs are edited and updated each week into a condensed 45-minute version of the news so that incoming travelers can be up on the news.

The program is shown shortly after takeoff in Northwest Airlines planes equipped with video screens.

Passengers departing on international flights see edited, half-hour versions of news commentary shows.

ASK DR. RUTH

Gentleman caller's kiss not persuasive

BY DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. At 64 my gentleman caller is a regular loverboy, but we are stuck in the initial stages because he keeps trying to French-kiss and I don't want him to. He must know I have false teeth. Can't I teach him no-no?

A. You can turn your face away prettily, like a fascinating little tease. You don't have to make a federal case out of the dentures and how you don't want to have them explored, or spotlighted, or whatever it is. Just turn away and then begin to nibble his earlobe, or whatever little trick you like, such as maybe giving a tiny little hickey. OK?

Later, if he keeps trying to kiss that way, you can just say, "I don't like that." Nothing has to be said about your teeth. Men often believe some style of kissing is totally persuasive to any woman, leaving out our individual likes and dislikes. But they learn, if they really want to please. At least your suitor isn't one of the face-mashers — be thankful for that!

Q. She always enjoys sex and has great climaxes, but lately it's headaches, too tired, not in the mood. How come she avoids it when she likes it so much?

A. Let's not forget there are real headaches and real fatigue. Not just to perk her up for sex, but to show concern for her, you could ask her if she is putting in too long a day every day, or not eating, or if she shouldn't get a checkup. Or it might be something else. Maybe she wants to get out of the relationship.

Maybe you're doing fine in bed but not pleasing her in other ways. You can't make up for everything in bed. Maybe you don't help with housework, maybe you don't listen to her, maybe you don't want a child and she does.

Ask her, "Honey, something is wrong, right?" And don't ask it in bed, where she will think your only concern is about the sex you're not getting. Ask her very nicely some other time, and let her see that you are really concerned.

Q. I'm worried about my honeymoon (only four days away) because I was seriously molested as a child. My fiance knows and understands, but I want to make him happy.

A. Then be happy for yourself, concentrating on every happy aspect of the wedding and the being together that follows. Your memories probably do not make you more nervous than most brides. Honeymoon sex is likely to be sweet and rather bumbling. Just expect to enjoy that, not too solemnly, and the sex may work pretty well.

If you are too tense, tell him so and that loving man will understand. You both have lots of time to learn love and its ways together, so for now just enjoy such intimacies as you are used to.

When you come back home, see a counselor to talk about this tenseness and its cause — for which, believe me, you were never to blame. Meanwhile, there is no pressure on either of you to turn your private, loving honeymoon into a Hollywood spectacular.

DEAR ABBY

Poolside chats upset wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I live in a townhouse built around a central swimming pool used by others in this complex. I'm 60, my wife is 57, we've been married 35 years and have grown children, all living elsewhere.

I like to sit around the pool to get a suntan. My wife complains that tanning will wrinkle my skin and make me look older, which may reduce my chances for working another 10 years. But that's a minor irritation. The major one is a 20-year-old girl who likes to talk to me at the pool.

My wife doesn't go to the pool because she fears the aging effect of the sun, plus the risk of skin cancer, but she has a view of the pool from our window and has a fit if she sees me talking to this girl. She says, "A man your age shouldn't talk to young girls, it looks bad. If she approaches you, tell her to go away, blah, blah, blah!" Abby, we talk about many things — nothing suggestive or indecent — and the people around us can hear every word we say.

Yesterday, while talking with this girl, my wife came down and a big fight ensued. What can I do about her unreasonable behavior? Believe me, I am ... INNOCENT IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR INNOCENT: I believe you, but that won't solve your problem. You shouldn't have to refrain from innocent conversation because of your wife's groundless suspicions. She needs counseling in order to help her deal with her inappropriate jealousy, which is probably rooted in her feelings of insecurity. Meanwhile, work a little harder to reassure her. She's hurting.

DEAR ABBY: After a 44-year marriage, my husband divorced me on the basis of "constructive abandonment" (translation: "no sex"). Are you laughing? I am not. We are both in our 70s. Last year I had surgery for lung cancer, and the prognosis was good. Anyway, I guess the future looked too dreary for him, so divorce was his solution.

We have many friends living out of state whom it will be necessary to inform, as I do not want to have to forward Christmas cards, anniversary cards, etc.

Please advise me of some format I can follow in writing such a note. I would like it to be brief but not terse. And I want to include his address in case they want to reach him. — SOMEWHERE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR SOMEWHERE: How's this:

Dear Friends: After 44 years, (his name) has left me. If you wish to reach him, you may write to him at the address listed below.

All the best, (Your name)

DEAR ABBY: There is a co-worker of mine who is having an affair with an old flame. He comes to me often to confide the details of this sneaky romance, then says he feels guilty because his wife is such a nice person and she just had a child (their third). I do not want to listen anymore, but we are good friends and he trusts me because he knows I would never tell.

Is there some way I can tell him that I do not want to be his confidant? He asks for advice, but if it's not what he wants to hear, he doesn't take it. (I told him from the beginning he should quit seeing this woman.)

I don't want to lose his friendship, but I do not like the role I am playing. I'm afraid he is going to hurt a lot of people. How can I get out of this without hurting his feelings? — GOOD EAR

DEAR EAR: You may not be able to, but risk it anyway. Tell him you don't want to hear anymore about his affair, period.

If he's a good friend, give him some good advice and tell him to confide in a professional counselor before he breaks a lot of hearts — including his own.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Beepers alert fathers-to-be

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The father-to-be who is on the go at work, or is jittery out on the golf course, will get special treatment at a Philadelphia hospital bent on making sure dad doesn't miss the birth of a child.

Albert Einstein Medical Center is loaning out telephone pagers to men who just can't afford to sit by a telephone waiting for word that their wives are headed for the delivery room at Einstein. The special service is free, according to hospital vice president Robert B. Kimmel, and is also the result of a situation Kimmel found himself in eight months ago.

"Here I was, 43 years old and I'm about to become a father," Kimmel said. "But my job takes me from one place to the next. There's no telling where I'm going to be at any one time," he said, explaining that Einstein encompasses four divisions that are located at four different sites. Kimmel is in charge of marketing and corporate relations.

"I didn't want to miss the big event and I didn't want my wife frantically phoning around trying to find me," he said. "So I came up with this."

The special service that came out of that situation is known as "D.O.C.," or "Dad-On-Call." It comes complete with a sticker on the side which shows a stork on its way with baby.

It's simply a telephone pager, like the ones that Einstein doctors use. The caller can dial a number to make the pager beep, hence the commonly used term "beeper," and at the same time transmit a telephone number the person being paged is supposed to call.

DEAR ABBY

Poolside chats upset wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I live in a townhouse built around a central swimming pool used by others in this complex. I'm 60, my wife is 57, we've been married 35 years and have grown children, all living elsewhere.

I like to sit around the pool to get a suntan. My wife complains that tanning will wrinkle my skin and make me look older, which may reduce my chances for working another 10 years. But that's a minor irritation. The major one is a 20-year-old girl who likes to talk to me at the pool.

My wife doesn't go to the pool because she fears the aging effect of the sun, plus the risk of skin cancer, but she has a view of the pool from our window and has a fit if she sees me talking to this girl. She says, "A man your age shouldn't talk to young girls, it looks bad. If she approaches you, tell her to go away, blah, blah, blah!" Abby, we talk about many things — nothing suggestive or indecent — and the people around us can hear every word we say.

Yesterday, while talking with this girl, my wife came down and a big fight ensued. What can I do about her unreasonable behavior? Believe me, I am ... INNOCENT IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR INNOCENT: I believe you, but that won't solve your problem. You shouldn't have to refrain from innocent conversation because of your wife's groundless suspicions. She needs counseling in order to help her deal with her inappropriate jealousy, which is probably rooted in her feelings of insecurity. Meanwhile, work a little harder to reassure her. She's hurting.

DEAR ABBY: After a 44-year marriage, my husband divorced me on the basis of "constructive abandonment" (translation: "no sex"). Are you laughing? I am not. We are both in our 70s.
