Annual meeting

Perrin elected director

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

A crowd of nearly 500 Hereford Grain Cooperative members elected a new board member and collected more than $1.7 million in patronage rebates Thursday night at the co-op's annual meeting.

Joe Perrin was elected to succeed outgoing board member Burl Miller, who has served for the past nine years.

The election of Perrin was of secondary importance when compared to the disbursement of the stockholder checks.

A representative of Ault and Associates, the accounting firm responsible for verifying the company accounts, said, "This has been a very good year for Hereford Grain. Even though the grain prices are down, handling, grain storage and quantities are up, which has helped bring a good return to Hereford Grain."

This year, Hereford Grain has handled more than 254 million pounds of wheat, valued at more than $13 million; 145.7 million pounds of milo, valued at $6.25 million; 156.8 million pounds of corn, valued at $7.72 million; and approximately 5 million pounds of white corn and other mixed grains valued at $38,000.

According to general manager Joe Artho, this has been a record year for the cooperative.

Hereford Grain president Frank Brorman, in a letter written to all members, stated, "These high profits were attributable primarily to a 66 percent increase in grain deliveries, which generated much higher storage and handling income. And in spite of lower grain prices, especially the drop in wheat market, trading margins were higher because of the increased quantities."

Hereford Grain has more than 850 members in the growing enterprise.

Board members include Frank Brorman, president; Roger Williams, vice president; Ted Eicke, Al K. Moore, Bryan Reinart, Jim Cavin, and Joe Perrin. Joe Artho is general manager; Dennis Artho, assistant manager; and Fritz Backus, assistant manager.

Rain too little, too late to help

COLLEGE STATION - Too much rain is coming too little, too late for some farmers, although ranchers are welcoming the showers, the Texas Agricultural Extension reports.

Much-needed rain fell on many Texas counties this past week providing a little relief from the state's widespread intense heat and severe drought.

Joe Pena, Extension economist in Uvalde, said the 21/2-3 inches of rain were more than appreciated.

"We like the rain and we welcome it," Pena said.

The rain came at a perfect time for many of those involved in the agriculture industry, he said.

"Ranchers are especially loving the rain," he said.

The rains have cooled off the area and helped in the production of forage for livestock. In other areas, the rains have served as a great preparation for early fall planting, re-filled stock tanks and rejuvenated struggling wildlife.

"The rains make it possible to plant fall small grains early, and of course, the rain will definitely help livestock," Pena said.

Cotton, corn and sorghum farmers wish, however, the rain had come a month earlier. It was just too late for 70 percent to 80 percent of the crops planted in the spring.

About two-thirds of the cotton in the Winter Garden has been harvested and significant rainfall at this time could actually hurt already poor cotton yields, Pena said.

"The heavy rains and high winds in our area have caused many of the bolls to just drop off too early," Pena said of the cotton in Southwest Texas.

Rain also can cause the cotton to be discolored or have a brownish tint. Any discoloration is not favored by cotton buyers and, in fact, in many circumstances can cause the price of cotton to fall, Pena said.

"Don't get me wrong," he said, "the rain is definitely a good thing, but some people are also wishing it did not come as fast as it did."

In areas of Southwest Texas two to three inches fell in a matter of hours, Pena said.

"We would have much preferred for there to be a slow, steady rain so that it would penetrate the soil," he said.

Pena said when rain falls too fast, it saturates the ground and then runs off. It does not provide relief for very long.

However, after more than 160 days of dry weather in many parts of Texas, the rain was an answer to many prayers, he said.

In the Rolling Plains, district Extension director Galen Chandler, said scattered rains and cooler temperatures in the area have provided some relief to this area.

Chandler said the change in weather was a welcome relief, but unfortunately it will have no long-term benefit.

In North Texas, district Extension director Randy Upshaw said the lack of rain has many pecan producers in the Dallas area wondering if there will be a crop this year. North Texas also welcomed scattered thunderstorms and cooler temperatures.

"Scattered showers have improved everyone's attitude but has done little to correct the drought situation," Upshaw said.

The following crop and weather conditions were reported by district Extension directors:

PANHANDLE: soil moisture very short to adequate. Scattered thunderstorms produced varying amounts of rain up to 3 inches. Corn is fair to good. Cotton is poor to fair. Sorghum is poor to good. Irrigated soybeans and peanuts good. Range very poor to good.

SOUTH PLAINS: soil moisture short. Scattered showers and cooler temperatures. Pastures and ranges in poor condition. Corn in fair condition. Cotton in fair to good condition; irrigated crop doing well. Insect pressure has increased.

ROLLING PLAINS: soil moisture very short. Light rainfall lowered temperatures. Cotton crop still declining; plants wilting in afternoon heat; bollworm numbers increasing. Range and pastures poor to fair. Cattle body conditions stable; feeding continues.

Oil royalty changes questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) - A drive by the energy industry and Oil Patch politicians to change the way companies pay royalties to the federal government for oil and natural gas pumped from federal lands isn't workable at present, congressional investigators have concluded.

The General Accounting Office, in a report issued this week, raised questions about the "royalty-in-kind" concept promoted by congressional Republicans, including Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison and Rep. Mac Thornberry, both of Texas.

Under their proposal, oil and natural gas producers would pay their royalties to the government in product rather than cash. Currently, producers estimate the value of the oil and gas they've pumped and then pay royalties - a system that pleases neither government regulators nor the energy industry itself.

The dispute over royalty collection isn't inconsequential.

The Interior Department's Minerals Management Service collected some $2.5 billion last year in royalties for gas from leases on federal land; and another $1.6 billion in royalties for oil pumped from government-owned lands.

MMS, which contends taxpayers are being shortchanged under existing rules, is pushing a new royalty collection system tied to market prices. But MMS has run afoul of the oil industry and Republicans on Capitol Hill and has been barred by Congress from changing its rules in the near term.

Oil companies have their own problems with the current collection process, which has exposed some of them to lawsuits charging that they've undervalued their royalty payments. But they dislike the changes proposed by MMS even more - pushing the royalty-in-kind concept instead.

But GAO found shortcomings with royalty-in-kind, saying the government doesn't have an appropriate network to accept a flow of oil and gas.

Analysis of past royalty-in-kind programs "indicates that it would not be feasible for the federal government to take its oil and gas royalties in kind except under certain conditions," the investigators wrote.

Dems: focus on sex, no impeachment

WASHINGTON (AP) - With the testimony of President Clinton and Monica Lewinsky in hand, prosecutor Kenneth Starr has Clinton admitting sexual improprieties and conflicting accounts about why the former White House intern returned gifts from the president.

Democrats on Capitol Hill feel that if any report to Congress by Starr focuses on sex there will be no chance for impeachment proceedings against the president.

If the independent counsel sends to Congress strong evidence that the president tried to obstruct justice, Clinton will have much more difficult problems, many of the Democrats say.

Alleged gifts are an important element in Starr's probe of possible obstruction in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit against the president. Starr has been trying to determine whether Clinton suggested that Ms. Lewinsky get rid of items she received from him so that she wouldn't have to turn them over to lawyers in the Jones case, where the gifts would raise questions about their relationship.

Ms. Lewinsky testified she and Clinton agreed she should hand over the gifts to his secretary, Betty Currie, sources familiar with her account have said.

Clinton told the grand jury he never instructed Mrs. Currie to retrieve them, didn't know she had them and "didn't consider them a big deal," said a Clinton adviser, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Clinton's advisers have said since Tuesday that he will not answer any more questions for Starr. If the prosecutor issues another subpoena, Clinton would almost certainly fight it, they say.

Ms. Lewinsky wants to go about "rebuilding her life," Lewinsky family spokeswoman Judy Smith said after Ms. Lewinsky left the courthouse Thursday after her second and probably last appearance. The grand jury is apparently not finished with its work.

U.S. strikes back

TEXAS

Republicans, Democrats endorse U.S. action

By The Associated Press

While the Texas Republican Party's chairwoman pronounced the timing of military attacks on targets in Afghanistan and Sudan "a little suspect," few other Texas politicians attached a political motive to President Clinton's decision.

In the face of a foreign policy challenge, Texas Republicans on Capitol Hill appeared Thursday to set aside their differences with a president grappling with the fallout from his admission of an improper relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

"I am highly supportive of our military strikes today in Afghanistan and Sudan," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, a frequent Clinton critic. Echoed Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-San Antonio: "I support the president's strong action and hope it continues."

Bonilla and Rep. Mac Thornberry, R-Clarendon, refused to question the timing of the military action during a week when Clinton faced the biggest political crisis to date of his presidency.

"I've got to assume that any president is going to only risk U.S. servicemen's lives when national security interests are at stake," said Thornberry, who serves on the House National Security Committee. "And until I get evidence to the contrary, that's what I'm going to continue to assume."

For her part, Texas GOP Chairwoman Susan Weddington said "the timing of this attack seems a little suspect given recent events at the White House."

Gov. George W. Bush, touted as a top Republican presidential prospect, steered clear of any debate about motives. "I'm not going to get involved in all that speculation," he said during a San Antonio appearance.

WASHINGTON

Clinton's political opponents generally give support

By The Associated Press

Divided over President Clinton's personal life, critics and supporters in Congress are mostly united behind his decision to bomb terrorist targets in Afghanistan and Sudan.

"This does not involve the president of the United States," said Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev. "It involves the security of our nation."

But there were discordant voices in the choir. While some of the nation's most prominent Republicans rallied behind Clinton, others questioned the timing of Thursday's attacks - just three days after the president admitted having an improper relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

"Because this president has broken his bond of trust with the American people, his motives will be suspect in every action he takes - both at home and abroad," said Rep. Jon Christensen, R-Neb., nonetheless adding that he supported the bombings.

Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., said, "While there is clearly much more we need to learn about this attack and why it was ordered today, given the president's personal difficulties this week, it is legitimate to question the timing of this action."

"The president in his statement indicated that these were groups that had attacked Americans before, so then why did we wait until now to do something?" he said.

Others said the attacks seemed to bear an uncanny resemblance to the recent movie "Wag the Dog," in which a president stages a fake war to

Allies support attacks, but question timing

By The Associated Press

America's allies strongly support the U.S. attacks in Afghanistan and Sudan, but some commentators questioned whether they were timed to distract the public from President Clinton's problems back home.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin reportedly denounced Thursday's missile strikes on suspected terrorist centers in Afghanistan and Sudan. Clinton said he was retaliating against terrorists in connection with the deadly Aug. 7 bombings on two U.S. embassies in East Africa that killed 257 people and injured more than 5,500.

"I am indignant and I condemn these bombings," Yeltsin said, according to Interfax news agency. However, his spokesman was more conciliatory, saying Yeltsin was mainly upset about not being informed in advance of the attacks.

Australia and New Zealand joined other American allies like Britain, Germany and Israel in supporting the U.S. decision.

News of the attacks dominated world news today, with some commentators questioning Washington's motives.

South Korea's Kukmin Daily, a national newspaper, said controversy may ensue because the bombing appears, in part, to be an effort to divert attention away from Clinton's domestic problems.

"The bombing is comparable to double checks in a chess game - punishment of terrorism and cover-up of sex scandal," it said, referring to Clinton's relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

One popular Turkish newspaper was particularly blunt in assessing Clinton's

Lottery operator wants information on profits kept secret

AUSTIN (AP) - Lotto Texas has been lucrative for the state lottery's operator, but Gtech Corp. executives want to keep secret exactly how much they make from running the games of chance.

That desire has put the company at odds with the Texas Lottery Commission chairwoman and news organizations seeking to review the information about it.

"I believe that information that relates to the operation of the Texas Lottery ought to be available to the public," said Commission Chair Harriet Miers, adding that Attorney General Dan Morales will likely make the final decision.

The Austin American-Statesman and other news organizations filed requests Thursday under the Texas open records law.

Ms. Miers said she disagrees with Gtech's contention that the data falls under the category of "competitively sensitive data."

Report: Humane society vows to stop live pigeon shoot

DALLAS (AP) - Up to 25,000 captive pigeons are scheduled to be released and then shotgunned by sport shooters in an event that has angered animal rights groups, according to a published report.

Three sources with knowledge of the event told The Dallas Morning News in today's editions that the pigeon shoot is planned by the Dallas Gun Club at its secluded range off Interstate 35E near Lewisville.

The club's members have imported truckloads of pigeons from Arizona and other states for the event today through Sunday, according to the newspaper. But John Williams, who answered the phone at the club north of Dallas, told The Associated Press Thursday night he was unfamiliar with the shoot and didn't know the event had been planned.

A source told The Morning News that the shoot, one of the country's largest, will attract participants from as far away as Australia and Japan.

Carthage opens new Texas Country Music Hall of Fame

CARTHAGE (AP) - Off a two-lane, tree-lined highway winding through East Texas is a white two-story, turn-of-the-century home.

The house is unoccupied - except for rows and rows of vintage movie posters from the heyday of Tex Ritter, Jim Reeves' speckled guitar, a collection of 10-cent Gene Autry comic books and Willie Nelson's handwritten version of the hit song "Four Walls."

That's only a sampling of the memorabilia that Carthage resident Tommie Ritter Smith, has collected for the Texas Country Music Hall of Fame, which opens Saturday with the induction of six renowned country musicians.

Nelson will attend the dedication, along with TV and movie actor John Ritter, son of Tex Ritter.

Ms. Smith, a distant cousin of Tex Ritter, spearheaded the creation of the hall. She said the town has always been a source for country music talent, starting with her cousin in the 1930s and later with Reeves' "Mexican Joe" making it to No. 1 on the country charts.

Cellular 9-1-1 tracers now available

HOUSTON (AP) - Local cellular phone users who dial 911 can soon be pinpointed by emergency personnel through a new locator system, officials said Thursday.

The Greater Harris County 9-1-1 Emergency Network, the state's largest 911 system and the third-largest in the country, has contracted with Vienna, Va.-based TruePosition Inc. and other vendors to begin installing such a system.

In an announcement Thursday, Harris County officials said they hope to have the wireless location system up and running in stages by the end of the year.

At that time, 911 operators in Harris County will start tracking exactly where certain cellular distress calls are coming from through receivers attached to Houston Cellular towers.

In its first stage, Houston Cellular users located downtown and in most of west and southwest Houston can be located if they make a 911 call.

While any cellular phone user can phone 911, the new location system will work only for Houston Cellular subscribers, at least in its early stages of operation.

Officials said the system will be entirely in place and open to all cellular users by 2001, at a cost of up to $10 million. The federal government has mandated that the nation's cellular providers have the technology in place for 911 calls by then.

Corporations such as Shell Oil Co. are betting on the location system - paid for by all phone service users, cellular and regular telephone users - to lure more customers to their own motorist clubs and services.

However, even if corporations eventually shoulder the wireless location system's costs, there's no guarantee that the savings will be passed on to the residential and business telephone regular telephone users who paid for its startup.

"We don't know yet," said John Melcher, spokesman for Greater Harris County 9-1-1 Emergency Network, which includes nearly 50 cities in Harris and Fort Bend counties.

Currently, cellular users pay 50 cents a month for 911 service. The 911 fee for regular residential and business customers vary, but in Houston it is about 24 cents a month.

Low prices dampen lease bids

The recent dip in oil prices probably will translate into less interest from petroleum explorers when the federal government offers 3,770 blocks for lease offshore of Texas in the western Gulf of Mexico, analysts say.

Five months ago, sliding oil prices did not dampen enthusiasm for bids in the central Gulf. But since then, prices have dipped to around $13 per barrel, while natural gas has fallen below $2 per thousand cubic feet.

"You will see fewer dollars spent and fewer overall bids," said Kenneth Beer, an industry analyst at Johnson, Rice & Co. in Houston.

The sale is scheduled Wednesday in New Orleans.

Energy companies have cut their spending plans this year and that will probably carry over into their budgets for leasing drilling sites, analysts said.

John Selser, analyst at Lehman Brothers in Houston, said the independent companies have cut spending involuntarily. Companies have less money to spend because their cash flow from petroleum sales is down. As a result, their stock has decreased in value, and banks are less willing to extend credit.

Some companies have an inventory of undrilled leases and do not feel much urgency to build a larger portfolio of sites, Selser said.

During the central Gulf sale on March 18, companies overcame their doubts about falling oil prices and made the event the third most active bidding of its kind in history.

At last year's western Gulf sale, when oil was selling for $19.73 per barrel, companies submitted a record number of bids.

But a shortage of exploration rigs has ended over the past year, said Susanne Pagano, editor at Offshore Data Services in Houston. This week, there are 144 mobile rigs under contract in the Gulf, down from 169 a year ago. Of the 174 rigs available, only 83 percent are in use, according to Offshore Data Services.

Also, rig rates have continued to come down in recent months, as well as rental rates for supply boats.

Some companies have begun to announce layoffs. Dryx Energy Co. said it would trim payroll expenses by 20 percent and sell $35 million in U.S. properties because of low oil prices. British Petroleum and Amoco Corp. plan to lay off 6,000 people as the result of their merger plans.

Last year, companies offered a record 1,224 bids on 804 tracts. High bids totaled $616.2 million, up from $352.5 million in 1997.

Many of the bids were for deepwater drilling sites, which are not as vulnerable to ups-and-downs in prices due to the long-term planning required. Analysts say that although the major petroleum companies will continue to be big players in deepwater drilling, they also may be more cautious in their spending.

Banks fund small business

MATAMOROS, Mexico - In a small room filled with wood panels, Federico Patricio Rubio molded a cabinet which will be used in a closet of one of his first customers.

Rubio, a 29-year-old man who moved from San Luis Potosi more than 10 years ago, has worked for other woodworking shops as a carpenter and a painter, but he always wanted to have his own business.

In time, Rubio would decide he preferred working for himself. Though he knew that his bag of tools would come in handy, but he stared down the same hurdles other entrepreneurs invariably face including finding start-up capital.

"I already have my tools, but I didn't have the cash to buy wood," Rubio said. "Luckily, I know a reporter who told me about a program that helps low-income people to borrow money at low-interest rates. I got a loan and here I'm working on my own shop."

To get the loan, Rubio joined a "community bank," a program organized by FEMAP, the Mexican Federation of Private Community Development Associations and run by a local organization known as Cofac.

Ana Luisa Cabello, coordinator of the community banks in Matamoros, said the program has had a great response from people willing to take the chance to start their own business.

The program began in late 1997 with three community banks made up of about a dozen people each. In the past month, the program has more than doubled. The ranks are filled with artisans, pinata makers, seamstresses, hair dressers, and carpenters.

"We have six groups now," she said while issuing the first loans to 42 new members at the Mundo Nuevo Convention Center. "A lot of people are inquiring about the program. They got their first check for $67 (600 pesos) each. They have three months to repay the loan and then we would lend them $80 (720) which again will be repaid during the same amount of time."

Members get nine installments, until they reach a maximum of $391, within a period of 27 months and are expected to save a percentage of their earnings, she said.

Ms. Cabello said the program emphasizes saving money to encourage investment in their own business.

For more than 25 years, Neri Garcia has made her living by sewing.

After her husband became ill, Mrs. Garcia wanted to work at home rather than for someone else.

She already had an industrial sewing machine, but it was broken. She didn't have the money to have the machine repaired until she heard about the program in the radio.

Once she got the $67 loan, she fixed the machine and now runs Creaciones Neri, or Neri Creations, in her neighborhood known as Colonia Matamoros.

Out of 31 community banks established there, 65 percent of their members are still in business, Ms. Cabello said.

Texas rips Indians, 8-2

ARLINGTON (AP) -- Todd Stottlemyre has made fast friends with his new Texas Rangers teammates, and it shows. Each time out, they shower him with runs.

Texas hit four homers in support of Stottlemyre on Thursday night as the Rangers beat the Cleveland Indians 8-2.

"Right now on the days that I pitch, the club is playing great," said Stottlemyre, who improved to 3-1 in his four starts for Texas since he was acquired in a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals on July 31. "They're scoring a lot of runs."

Juan Gonzalez became Texas' career hit leader when he connected for his 35th home run. Pinch-hitter Roberto Kelly hit a three-run homer, Ivan Rodriguez hit a two-run homer and Rusty Greer had a solo shot for Texas.

Since Stottlemyre joined the Rangers, they've scored 43 runs in his starts. That explains Stottlemyre's three wins despite a 6.00 ERA for the Rangers.

"I've been struggling a little with my stuff," Stottlemyre said. "The only thing you can do is keep battling. Eventually I'll come out of it."

RANGERS NOTES

In Stottlemyre's three previous starts for Texas, the Rangers scored a total of 35 runs. . . Rangers right-hander Roger Pavlik, out since April 23 with a broken finger on his pitching hand, will have surgery a week from Friday to repair a partial tear of his right rotator cuff. Pavlik injured the rotator cuff while throwing in the outfield and is out for the season. . . The homer was Gonzalez's 28th against Cleveland, his most against any team. He has 27 against Kansas City. . . The Indians finished the season series 4-7 against the Rangers, a possible playoff opponent.

The Rangers had scored more than five runs only once in their previous nine games until breaking out against the Indians.

"It was nice to be in a situation where we weren't one pitch away from being tied up," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "It was just a good night for our ballclub."

Stottlemyre allowed two runs in 5 1-3 innings. He worked around 10

Singh takes share of lead at International

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) -- Newly crowned PGA champion Vijay Singh maintained his hot hand, posting six birdies and an eagle to share the early first-round lead Thursday in the weather-delayed Sprint International.

Four days after capturing his first major, Singh scored 15 points under the modified Stableford system used in this unique event, tying journeyman Jim Carter for the lead.

Tiger Woods, whose long game suits this course and format, was just a point behind at 14, thanks to a pair of eagles. Corey Pavin, having his best round in years, was at 13, along with Davis Love III and David Sutherland.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson finished at 8, and David Duval, the tour's leading money winner, stood at 7.

Lightning caused a suspension of play at mid-afternoon with half the field still on the course.

Play resumed after a delay of 2 hours, 40 minutes, and when darkness fell 36 players remained on the course. They were to complete their rounds early Friday, with the second round beginning as scheduled.

The leader among players still on the course was Brandt Jobe, who had 12 points with three holes remaining.

The field will be cut to the low 70 players and ties for Saturday's third round and to the low 36 and ties for Sunday's final round.

Under a scoring format that awards 5 points for an eagle, 2 points for birdie, zero for a par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey or worse, Singh had a steady round

CU looks to derive lessons from '97

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOULDER, Colo. -- The 1997 season spawned a series of lessons, most of them painful, for Rick Neuheisel and his Colorado Buffaloes.

Perhaps the biggest lesson was: Don't believe your press clippings.

Touted as the No. 1 team in the country in a preseason poll by one national publication, the Buffaloes were embarrassed by Michigan in their second game, had their confidence shattered and never recovered.

"We were beaten pretty badly on national television," wide receiver Darrin Chiaverini said. "That kind of set the tone for us, and we could never get back on track."

They finished 5-6, their first losing season since 1984. They had been 10-2 in each of their first two seasons under Neuheisel.

Looking back, Neuheisel wishes he had done several things differently.

"I made a mistake a year ago," he said. "It was my third year, so I had a group of seniors that (former coach) Bill McCartney had recruited, and then everybody else that I had recruited."

"I kind of penciled those kids (seniors) in as starters. My reasoning was, I wanted to make sure there was no dissension. I didn't want Bill's seniors thinking I was favoring guys I had recruited. We would have been a better team had I opened up every job to competition. That's what we've done this year."

"Another lesson is that you can't inherit success. You have to earn it every year."

Finally, Neuheisel said, there was one more lesson to be learned.

"When you find Rogaine in a player's locker," he said, "make sure you check his eligibility immediately."

The Buffs forfeited all five of their wins when an internal investigation disclosed that fullback-linebacker Darren Fisk should have been ineligible. NCAA rules allow an athlete four seasons of competition over five years, but Fisk, a transfer, had been granted both a medical redshirt and a traditional redshirt, so his 1997 season was his sixth.

Colorado continues to list a 5-6 record, however, since the NCAA recognizes all results on the field for its record-keeping purposes.

Outside of those learned lessons, Neuheisel wants his players to put

Jarrett realizes he needs luck to catch Gordon

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

BROOKLYN, Mich. -- Dale Jarrett knows he needs a change of luck -- and quickly -- if he's to have any chance at a Winston Cup title.

After missing out on the title last year by just 14 points, Jarrett came into this season as one of the favorites to win the championship. After finishing third last Sunday at Michigan Speedway, he's still third in the point standings.

He trails leader Jeff Gordon by 233 points and Mark Martin by 136 with 12 races remaining. And although that's closer than at this time a year ago, Jarrett knows some things are different.

"We have as good a car as we had last year," he said. "We just haven't parlayed that into wins. It's just been circumstances that have kept us from having four or five victories, instead of Jeff maybe having eight."

Jarrett, who won seven times last season, has just two now. He had three at this point a year ago, but was 280 points behind the leader.

It's not like the Robert Yates Racing Ford hasn't run well. It has. But at times on the NASCAR circuit, luck is as important as anything.

For example, Jarrett ran out of gas at Indianapolis. Or take the miracle pit stop with 20 laps to go by Gordon, who had run almost 20 seconds behind the leaders at Michigan.

"It can be bad, but it's not," Jarrett said. "All things considered, the things that are happening to us aren't real bad."

"It's not like we're falling out of races or wrecking. You just have to understand that there's going to be good times and bad times."

But as Jarrett defends his Goody's 500 title this weekend in Bristol, Tenn., he knows he can't hit many bumps and stay on the road. There aren't many opportunities left to close the gap.

Jarrett admits he probably can't afford anything worse than a 15th- or 20th-place finish from now on. What he really needs are some trips to the winner's circle if he hopes to reel in Gordon and Martin.

"The good thing we can look at is that we are closer to them in points than we were last year," Jarrett said. "But the thing is they've got everything going for them right now."

The law of averages alone gives him reason to hope.

"They can't expect to go through the last 12 races with nothing happening," Jarrett said. "Maybe we shouldn't expect that. But they're in the front, and so there's a little more pressure on them."

And it's not as though Jarrett isn't driving well.

He has 15 top-10 and 13 top-five finishes this season, and failed to finish only twice in 21 races.

"There have been a few times where I've been a little slow to react with the changes to the car," Jarrett said, but on balance he is satisfied.

In his mind, Jarrett isn't racing for points. He simply likes the challenge presented by trying to catch up.

"Right now we have to win races because that's the only way we are going to gain in the points," Jarrett said. "That's kind of the attitude we took last year and actually the year before when we won a couple of races."

"It's a fun position, but one year I'd like to get the lead and hold onto it."

Rockies double Expos, 6-3

MONTREAL (AP)--Darryl Kile struck out a career-high 14 on the way to his first road win since May as the Colorado Rockies beat the Montreal Expos 6-3 Thursday night.

Kile (10-14) allowed three runs on nine hits in seven innings to win his third straight start as Colorado snapped a four-game losing streak. It was Kile's first road win since he beat the Expos on May 10.

Todd Helton's 19th home run in the sixth off Mike Thurman (2-2) followed Vinny Castilla's two-out walk to put Colorado ahead 4-3. The Rockies added two runs in the ninth on RBI singles by Darryl Hamilton and Neifi Perez.

Kile topped his previous high of 13 strikeouts last season against Los Angeles.

Lessons

1997 behind them.

"I don't want the specter of last year to be like an albatross hanging around any of this year's players," he said. "I don't want them to feel like they have to atone for 1997. We're going to use this year as a springboard in the sense that we've fixed the things that we felt needed fixing. Other than that, we're going to quickly forget about last year and focus on the challenges that lie ahead."

"How we finish, who knows? But I do know our kids will play hard, and they're excited about bringing back some level of respect for the Colorado program."

The Buffs, who traditionally have one of the nation's better recruiting classes, are not without talent. However, it's mostly young talent; 41 of 83 scholarship players are either incoming freshmen or redshirt freshmen.

Most will be asked to play reserve roles behind a solid nucleus of starters. The Buffs are particularly strong at defensive end, cornerback, tailback and wide receiver, and such players as Chiaverini, cornerback-kick returner Ben Kelly, linebacker Hannibal Navies and offensive tackle Ryan Johanningmeier have received preseason honors.

Neuheisel predicted that defensive end Fred Jones "is ready to become much like the Florida State defensive ends that we've all admired over the last several years. He will wreak his share of havoc in the backfield as a pass-rusher."

In Kelly, Damen Wheeler and Marcus Washington, Colorado cornerbacks "will be as good as anybody's in the country," Neuheisel said.

Colorado lacks depth at linebacker and is inexperienced at safety. The Buffs also figure to miss stalwarts Ryan Olson and Viliami Maumau at defensive tackle.

Although their passing game declined in effectiveness last season, the Buffs again led the Big 12 at 232 yards a game. Seeking to replace the graduated John Hessler at quarterback are three candidates: junior Jeremy Weisinger, sophomore Adam Bledsoe and junior-college transfer Mike Moschetti.

"I want to make a decision on a starter relatively early so we can keep that from being a distraction," Neuheisel said. "I fully expect us to lead the conference in throwing again."

It's an inexperienced position, however. Weisinger and Bledsoe combined to complete only six passes last season.

Colorado spent an inordinate amount of the spring working on its running game, which averaged just 136 yards per game last season, ranking 69th in the country.

The offensive line figures to be improved, and Neuheisel expects the running backs Marlon Barnes and Dwayne Cherrington to be more productive.

Colorado, which faced seven bowl teams and both co-national champions last season, has a more reasonable schedule, despite a tough opener against in-state rival Colorado State.

International

in which he didn't miss a fairway.

He birdied three of his first six holes to get to plus-6, dropped a point with a bogey at No. 7, then birdied three more holes. He eagled the 492-yard, par-5 17th hole, hitting a 5-iron approach shot to 10 feet.

"I hit a lot of good tee shots, a lot of good approach shots and putted nicely," Singh said. "Winning a major like that, I just wanted to get back on the golf course and play again."

"It's a good feeling to go out there and know that the confidence from last week is so high that I could just let it go. I don't worry about the bad shots, I just think about where I'm going to hit the ball. The feeling is good, and you've got to ride it while you can."

Carter, 37, a non-winner in seven full seasons on the PGA Tour whose best finish this year was a tie for third in the Freeport-McDermott Classic, had nine birdies and also finished at 15.

Carter had 11 one-putt greens, including his last eight. He birdied six of those eight holes and had sand saves on the other two, moving him from plus-3 to plus-15.

"Eleven one-putts, I could make that a habit," he said. "I could be addicted to that in no time. All in all, it was a pretty nice day."

He began his birdie barrage after hitting a ball into the water at No. 10 and taking double bogey, dropping 3 points.

"Maybe that was a blessing in disguise," he said. "Sometimes it takes a mistake to get you re-focused."

Woods, playing 7,559-yard Castle Pines Golf Club for the first time, started on No. 10 and got his first eagle at the par-4 13th, holing out a sand wedge on the fly from 122 yards. He added 5 more points at the par-5 eighth hole, hitting his 6-iron second shot, 208 yards away, within 15 feet.

Woods, insisting he is struggling with his swing plane, used his driver only three times during his round, saying he is getting enough distance with a high-trajectory 3-wood that soars at Castle Pines' 6,200-foot elevation. He did use driver at No. 1, hitting it 391 yards.

Besides his two eagles, he had four birdies and four bogeys, which would have translated to a much tamer 68 under normal scoring.

"This format is pretty good," he said. "In a stroke-play event, this would be a tough day."

Texas

hits and three walks as the Indians stranded 11 runners.

"We got base hits, but not with men on base," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said. "We didn't hit at the right time. Since the All-Star break, we haven't gotten a big hit. It just isn't happening for us."

Danny Patterson pitched 2 2-3 innings for his second save.

Jets edge Giants

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) -- Losing the game was bad enough. Losing one of their best players, Jason Sehorn, for the season was a whole lot worse for the New York Giants.

Sehorn tore up his right knee returning the opening kickoff, costing the Giants one of the league's premier cover men. Then the Giants blew a 10-point lead and fell to their local rivals, the New York Jets, 27-23.

Dedric Ward caught a short pass from Vinny Testaverde and turned it into an 81-yard touchdown play to give the Jets the winning points with 3:10 left in the third quarter.

Stars try to block logging

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Julia Roberts, Harrison Ford and Madonna joined 16 other stars trying to ax a deal over old-growth redwood trees.

The celebrities say a plan agreed to by Pacific Lumber Co. and the government does not go far enough to protect old-growth redwoods and threatened wildlife on California's north coast.

The 19 stars signed a letter written by actor Woody Harrison saying the plan to conserve 200,000 acres of timberland is simply too little too late.

"We appreciate a concern for protecting habitat, but this deal is not good for the forest and is an insult to taxpayers," the letter read.

Pacific Lumber's property includes groves of 1,500-year-old redwoods in the Headwaters Forest about 300 miles north of San Francisco, the largest privately owned stands of ancient redwoods in the world.

The letter was sent to all 120 legislators, who are discussing the fate of the state's $130 million share of the Headwaters deal.

Harrison, 37, star of the TV show "Cheers" and the film "Natural Born Killers," was arrested last year when he climbed atop the Golden Gate Bridge to protest the deal.

CARROT TOP

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - The music director of the Evansville Symphony Orchestra changed his tune about Carrot Top.

When the manic comedian with the wiry red hair was chosen to perform at Friday's reopening of the newly-restored Victory Theater, Alfred Savia, the orchestra's music director, criticized the decision and referred to Carrot Top as "declassé."

The 30-year-old comic, who resides in Orlando, Fla., said he was honored to have been selected to reopen the lavish, 1,950-seat theater in downtown Evansville. The 77-year-old theater has undergone a $19 million restoration.

Carrot Top explained that his stage act is nothing like the wacky, prop-driven comedy he performs on television talk shows and promised that "I can be as classy as they want me to be."

That pledge, plus a little national publicity, was apparently good enough for Savia, who is also the artistic director and principal conductor of the Orlando Philharmonic Orchestra. He said he is now thinking of going to Carrot Top's show with some friends.

"I would've never thought of doing that when this first started, but now - hey, if you can't beat 'em, join 'em," he said.

JERRY CLOWER

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Grand Ole Opry comedian Jerry Clower underwent heart bypass surgery in a Mississippi hospital.

Clower, 71, had six bypasses performed during a four-hour operation Thursday at Baptist Medical Center in Jackson, said his manager Tandy Rice. Doctors say Clower's prognosis is good and he may be able to return to his Liberty, Miss., home in a few days, Rice said.

Clower canceled his first show in 32 years Aug. 4 when he complained of exhaustion before a performance at the Georgia Mountain Fair in Hiwassee, Ga.

Clower is known for his Southern humor it centering on the fictional Ledbetter family. His 26th album on MCA Records is due for release this fall.

JACKIE GLEASON

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Jackie Gleason's relatives are fuming over a stogie ad.

The late comedian's family sued a cigar store chain Thursday, accusing it of using an image of "The Honeymooners" star without permission.

But an owner of the Royal Cigar Society International said it removed the image of Gleason with a cigar in his hand as soon as the family asked. "We took it down immediately," said Steve Sheman. "That was several months ago."

Gleason's relatives accuse the cigar chain of ignoring the request, which they first made last June. Sheman contends the chain removed an image of Gleason and several other cigar-smoking stars after receiving notices from an attorney.

Gleason charmed his way into millions of hearts around the world in his portrayal of Brooklyn bus driver Ralph Crandem in the 1950s television series "The Honeymooners."

He was nominated for an Oscar in 1961 for his role as billiard king Minnesota Fats in "The Hustler," and also portrayed a rural sheriff in the hit "Smokey and the Bandit."

He died in 1987 at the age of 71.

CHRIS ROCK

NEW YORK (AP) - Chris Rock somehow managed to cross the line between what can and cannot be said on television about the Monica Lewinsky matter.

On NBC's "Today" show Wednesday, the comedian used the word "ass" four times and referred to independent counsel Kenneth Starr as a "scumbag."

Matt Lauer's interview with Rock ran live in front of about 70 percent of the country but was deleted from the taped West Coast broadcast. Western viewers were given a segment about a rodeo school instead.

"I find it odd that the people at 'Today' felt that talk of stained dresses and violent crimes was more suitable for morning TV than me joking about whupping Ken Starr," Rock said in a statement.

During the show, Rock joked that if President Clinton gave the comedian a pardon, "I would whup Starr's ass right now."

A nervous Lauer interrupted Rock, reminding him it was morning television. "You see the clock?" he said. "That's 7:53. That's a.m."

DON IMUS

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) - A man accused of sending threatening e-mail to radio personality Don Imus has reached an agreement with prosecutors that will keep him out of jail.

According to police, Michael P. Michalski, 43, of Cromwell, sent the wisecracking New York radio personality this e-mail after listening to a January show on the Monica Lewinsky case: "I hope that one day as you walk out of the studio, someone is on the street with a deer gun."

Later that day, another e-mail indicated Michalski was on his way to New York.

Under the agreement reached Tuesday, charges of threatening and harassment will be wiped from Michalski's record if he stays out of trouble for the next two years.

MERV GRIFFIN

VICTORIA, British Columbia (AP) - Merv Griffin says it's not his fault his 130-foot yacht, the Griff, blocked some spectators' views during last weekend's boat races.

The harbor master assigned the berth, said Griffin, who stopped at the Victoria Dragon Boat Festival after a cruise in British Columbia.

Some spectators yelled abuse at Griffin and his guests and threatened to throw eggs at his boat, which was blocking an area that included spots for spectators with disabilities. Eventually, the crew moved the yacht.

"I was a little embarrassed because there was nothing we could do about it," said the 73-year-old "Wheel of Fortune" producer and former talk show host.

DMX

NEW YORK (AP) - DNA saved DMX.

Charges that the rap star raped and sodomized a 29-year-old stripper were dropped Thursday after genetic tests showed that semen on the woman was not DMX's.

"I never met the girl," DMX, aka Earl Simmons, said outside court.

Simmons, 27, was arrested in June. The woman claimed she was attacked after meeting the rap star at a club. Simmons' album "It's Dark and Hell Is Hot" debuted at the top of the Billboard pop charts at the start of the summer.

DEBRA BARNISIN

PITTSBURGH (AP) - A prosecutor used her powers of persuasion to land a one-night gig as Jimmy Buffett's backup singer.

Debra Barnisin sent in a 20-second contest entry and was named a finalist along with four others to perform with the "Margaritaville" crooner when he appeared in suburban Pittsburgh on July 27.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Harvard, Princeton and Yale universities share the No. 1 spot in U.S. News & World Report's annual ranking of the top universities in the nation.

The University of California-Berkeley and the University of Virginia share the No. 1 spot in the magazine's separate ranking of the nation's public universities.

The rankings are included in the magazine's annual publication, "America's Best Colleges," which goes on sale Monday.

The magazine used several criteria, including an institution's reputation among academics; the percentage of students that go on to graduate; faculty pay, class size, student-faculty ratio and other indicators of faculty resources; student selectivity; financial resources, such as spending per student; and alumni giving.

Other top universities were Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Stanford University, sharing the No. 2 spot; Cornell University, Duke University, and the University of Pennsylvania, sharing No. 3; and California Institute of Technology at No. 4. Brown University, Columbia University, Dartmouth College and Northwestern University shared No. 5.

The University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, followed Berkeley and Virginia among the public universities. The University of California-Los Angeles and the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor shared the No. 3 spot. The University of California-San Diego followed at No. 4. The College of William & Mary was No. 5.

Church expansion, historic preservation collide

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) - St. Anne's Church, in the center of downtown Annapolis, has withdrawn plans to add a basement and a sunken side-yard atrium.

The Rev. John Randolph Price said church officials sensed that the city's Historic Preservation Commission intended to reject the plan.

Local preservationists said the expansion would change the appearance of the nearly 300-year-old church and disturb dozens of unmarked Colonial-era graves.

St. Anne's sought the added space for child care, Bible classes, choir practice and receptions. The parish hall, a block away, is now used for such activities.

Church leaders believed an addition would have helped to attract and keep new members, and Price said he knows of no adequate alternative to the proposal.

World's end is focus of author's talk

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - A weekend of fiery oratory and gospel singing begins Friday, and the opening-night speaker, author Hal Lindsey, says almost all signs pointing to the end of the world are in place.

He won't predict when Judgment Day will come, but at age 68 he says he's confident he'll live to see it.

Others scheduled to speak at the event in Branson sponsored by the Revival Fires Ministries include Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., and former presidential candidate Alan Keyes.

Lindsey is author of "The Late Great Planet Earth." A sequel, due out this month, will be his 17th book since 1970.

He has anticipated Armageddon since 1956, when he heard a religious scholar discuss the fight for control of the Suez Canal and how it related to biblical predictions of the world's end.

"I was skeptical at first," he said. "By the time he finished, I was convinced something was there."

Links seen between body, spirit

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - Some hospitals now emphasize spirituality alongside science as caregivers recognize that linking body and soul can mean better healing.

The Emmanuel Unit at St. Francis Hospital in Greenville relies on prayer and music in addition to surgery and IVs. At Piedmont Medical Center in Rock Hill, a program called Rapha - from the Hebrew "to heal" - offers counseling based on psychology and theology.

"Spirituality itself is a part of health," said Mark Tompkins, a health policy researcher and associate professor at the University of South Carolina.

Mary Ann Robertson of Laurens, though weakened by cancer, affirms the connection between body and spirit she found in the Emmanuel Unit.

"I've not been afraid through any of this because I know God never leaves us. He's always by our side," she said.

Research has shown religious people are less depressed, have healthier immune systems and deal better with addictions. A new Duke University study of 4,000 North Carolinians ages 65 and older found those who participated in religious activities were 40 percent less likely to have high blood pressure.

In a way, "one could say the church is in the health care business," said Paul Jersild, a professor and ethicist at Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary.

He and Robert McKeown, an ordained United Methodist minister and an epidemiologist at the University of South Carolina, are helping to study connections between faith and health.

The seminary and USC's School of Public Health have joined in a three-year national project funded by the Carter Center in Atlanta to find programs that bring religious and medical personnel together and to improve training. The other consortium sites are Atlanta, Berkeley, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Faith in God and in her doctors has buoyed Robertson, 56, through difficult times. "I get up some mornings and I think this could not have happened to me," she says.

Her story began in April with a night of abdominal pain, then gall bladder surgery and a biopsy that showed stomach cancer.

While taking radiation and chemotherapy, she learned of the Emmanuel Unit's combination of prayer and medical treatment. "Everyone was very attentive and very concerned," she said.

"The whole thing is about getting in touch with the mind-body-spirit," hospital spokeswoman Samantha Sinowitz said. Sometimes it's about something as simple as helping a patient relax.

"Fear can sometimes be worse than anything else," she said.

The 20-bed unit takes up half a floor at the downtown Greenville hospital. A chapel is available, and nurses pause on their rounds to read Scripture and pray with patients.

"That made a definite difference in your outlook," said Robertson, who also liked the music therapy.

"Live music can really help ... because of feelings of isolation when you're sick," said Linda Mattern, a certified music therapist who works part time at St. Francis.

Sometimes she plays a favorite hymn on a guitar. Other times, patients prefer soothing recorded music. It can help reduce blood pressure and take patients' minds off their pain.

With the Rapha program, the focus is "to look at a patient's value and self-worth in relationship to God," director David Dixon said. "God's the author of all healing. Sometimes he uses medication; sometimes he uses counseling."

Bringing God into the hospital setting is one avenue; sending nurses out into the community is another.

The Midlands Partnership for Community Health, which is affiliated with the four big hospitals in Columbia, hires registered nurses to work directly with pastors and congregations.

"It's paid off in getting people to work together with other denominations for overall health," said Kay Cover, who coordinates the parish nurse program.

The four nurses handle 20 area churches, she said. They also work with the Columbia Housing Authority to provide health assessments and educational programs for elderly residents in public housing.

A similar program, Congregational Health Ministries, operates in the Greenville Hospital Systems. Nearly two dozen nurses - all unpaid volunteers - provide blood pressure screenings and health fairs for their local churches.

"I've always believed you can't separate a person's physical body from their emotional and spiritual self," said program director Deborah Flanagan, wife of an Episcopal priest.

News in brief

U.S. strikes at terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) - The thunderclap of cruise missile strikes against targets in Afghanistan and Sudan signaled what President Clinton said would be a lengthy war on terrorists who bombed two U.S. embassies in Africa and were planning still more attacks.

Calling Thursday's strike a preemptive measure, U.S. officials nevertheless warned that the military action almost certainly would provoke a terrorist response.

Some U.S. airports tightened security immediately, and the CIA told senior Clinton administration officials that the prospect of retaliation against Americans overseas was "very, very high." The State Department urged U.S. citizens traveling or residing abroad to remain alert and to exercise much greater caution than they usually would.

The FBI issued a nationwide alert to U.S. law enforcement officials to watch for signs of terrorist action.

Interrupting his vacation on Martha's Vineyard, Clinton jolted the press corps and the nation from the Monica Lewinsky scandal with the surprise announcement of the strikes, which took place at 1:30 p.m. EDT. U.S. ships in the Red and Arabian seas fired 75 to 80 Tomahawk cruise missiles at a suspected chemical weapons plant in Khartoum, Sudan, and a terrorist training complex in eastern Afghanistan near the Pakistani border.

Smoke, flame and smoldering ruins signaled the destruction of the suspected chemical plant in Sudan. Pentagon officials said it might take days to assess the damage caused by strikes in Afghanistan at the sprawling terrorist complex, which encompassed six separate targets in remote, arid countryside.

A spokesman for Afghanistan's ruling Taliban regime, Wakil Ahmed Akhmalzada, said 21 people were killed and 30 injured at the Zhawar Kili Al-Badr base near Khost. Another Taliban official, Maulvi Sadre Azam, said three people were killed in strikes elsewhere in the country, but it was not immediately clear if these were related to the U.S. attacks.

IRS to accept plastic for tax bills

WASHINGTON (AP) - Beginning next year, the federal government will accept credit cards for Americans' income tax bills.

Although taxpayers will be charged a yet-to-be-determined "convenience fee" for the privilege, the Internal Revenue Service hopes the move will encourage more people to file returns electronically. About 24.5 million did so this year.

"Our responsibility, we believe, is to give folks the widest possible array of payment options," said Steve Holden, the national electronic program director at the IRS. "Many consumers will find it convenient to use their credit cards."

One major question is whether Visa International - the world's largest credit card issuer - will get involved. Company officials there will decide this fall whether to give the program a try.

Under the plan, taxpayers next year will be able to pay IRS bills two ways with credit cards:

- Holders of MasterCard, American Express, Discover - and possibly Visa - cards will be able to charge their balances due by calling a toll-free number. It won't matter whether the tax returns are done manually, through a paid preparer, or electronically. This phone system is being run by US Audiotex of San Ramon, Calif.

- Holders of Discover or Private Issue cards issued by Novus Services Inc., using Intuit's popular TurboTax or MacIntax preparation software, will be able to complete and file their returns and pay their taxes using personal computers.

Reno may OK campaign finance inquiries

WASHINGTON (AP) - Described as "closer than ever" to seeking an independent counsel, Attorney General Janet Reno is expected to authorize preliminary Justice Department inquiries into campaign fund-raising by former White House aide Harold Ickes and Vice President Al Gore.

Both Gore and Ickes were questioned last week by Justice investigators and the FBI over whether the vice president was aware that some money he raised with telephone calls from his office in 1996 was spent illegally on specific election campaigns, said a government official and another source familiar with the questioning.

Decisions by Reno to launch 90-day preliminary inquiries involving both Gore and Ickes under the independent counsel law could come as early as today but are more likely sometime next week, a senior official said Thursday, requesting anonymity.

Several officials said the inquiry into whether Gore illegally solicited money for specific campaigns - as opposed to money sought legally for party-building and issue advertising - likely will be closed in 90 days without calling for an independent counsel. The extra time was said to be needed to fully explore an ambiguous handwritten notation on a Nov. 21, 1995, budget memo from the Democratic National Committee.

"Whenever this process ends, at whatever stage, we are confident it will show that everything the vice president did was legal and proper," Gore spokesman Chris Lehane said.

However, Reno was described by an aide as "closer than ever before" to requesting an independent counsel in the case of Ickes, a former deputy White House chief of staff heavily involved in managing President Clinton's 1996 re-election fund raising. In his case, the 90 days would be used to give his attorneys reasonable opportunity to rebut any evidence. Ickes has denied wrongdoing.

Court: Quebec can't secede unilaterally

MONTREAL (AP) - It was a judgment worthy of Solomon. Canada's Supreme Court managed to rule on the question of Quebec secession without infuriating leaders on either side of a bitter ideological divide.

In its unanimous opinion Thursday, the court stated clearly - as the federal government had hoped - that Quebec had no right to secede from Canada unilaterally. The ruling was widely considered the most important ever by Canada's high court.

But instead of the expected anger from separatists, there was satisfaction over another part of the court's declaration: that federal officials would be obligated to negotiate if a clear majority of Quebecers voted for secession in a fair referendum.

"We've always said that negotiations would follow a vote for secession," said Jacques Brassard, a Cabinet minister in Quebec's pro-independence government. "Now what the court has said is that these negotiations will be obligatory."

Hard-line anti-separatists also were pleased, because for the first time, the high court said there was no legal basis for the separatists' longstanding claim that Quebec could decide for itself whether to secede.

"If I were a dancing man, I'd be dancing in the street," said William Johnson, president of a Montreal-based group called Alliance Quebec that promotes the rights of the province's English-speaking minority.

"Secessionists have always said that they alone could impose the question (in a referendum), interpret the results as they like and then impose all the conditions of the secession," Johnson said. "It has always been false."

Anti-Semitism flares in Berkeley
BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) - A small group of protesters swastikas on the sidewalk. It's not the kind of reaction a vocal bookstore owner expected in this, the birthplace of the free speech movement.

But in the six months he's been speaking out against loitering on famous Telegraph Avenue, Andy Ross has sustained thousands of dollars in broken windows and the fear that he can't predict the next attack.

Last week, he discovered a Star of David painted on the sidewalk in front of Cody's Books and a crucifix drawn on a window. He had already received an anonymous postcard calling him a "cancerous Jew."

"When all else fails, there is still the swastika and the broken glass in the night," Ross said at a rally outside his store Thursday.

Former South African leader fined

GEORGE, South Africa (AP) - Former President P.W. Botha was found guilty today of ignoring a summons from a panel investigating apartheid-era atrocities. He was given a suspended prison sentence and fined.

The ruling brings an end to a trial that has underscored South Africa's simmering racial divisions.

"The failure of the accused to appear ... was unlawful, intentional and without sufficient cause," Magistrate Victor Lugaju said in his ruling, which took 50 minutes to read.

The magistrate ordered Botha to pay a fine of $1,577 or spend 12 months in prison. He also gave Botha a 12-month prison term, suspended for five years on condition that Botha comply with any future summons.

U.S. air strikes thrust 'Wag the Dog' back into the spotlight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Why Albania?" Hollywood producer Dustin Hoffman asks presidential spinmeister Robert De Niro.

"Why not?" De Niro answers. And so, in the reel world, America launches a fraudulent war against an obscure country to distract the nation from the president's sex scandal. Eight months following the release of "Wag the Dog" on Christmas Day, the movie is a reference point in the real-world debate over President Clinton's motivations in bombing Sudan and Afghanistan in retaliation for terrorist attacks at U.S. embassies.

Officials are peppered with questions about the movie and politicians say they couldn't help but think about it. Industry analysts say video rentals are up. The moviemakers say everyone's making too big a deal about a movie.

Still, the similarities remain. The missile attacks on Thursday came days after the president admitted to an inappropriate relationship with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

From the moment Clinton went on live television to announce the bombings, "Wag the Dog's" producer-director Barry Levinson and producer Jane Rosenthal were inundated with requests for comment.

"The world's media right now are giving the filmmakers far too much credit for being clairvoyant," said their spokesman, Simon Halls. "The filmmakers put together a movie that was entertainment, and it was well received, but that's what it was: entertainment. Anything that is happening in the world today really has nothing to do with the movie."

Massachusetts acting Gov. Paul Cellucci, a Republican and a movie buff, said: "It popped into my mind, but I do hope that that's not the situation and I trust that it isn't."

Similar comparisons were made earlier this year when the Clinton administration threatened action against Iraq not long after the Lewinsky story broke - and shortly after the movie's release.

One of the first questions asked of Defense Secretary William Cohen at a nationally televised Pentagon news conference was how he would respond to people who think the military action "bears a striking resemblance to 'Wag the Dog.'"

"The only motivation driving this action today was our absolute obligation to protect the American people from terrorist activities," Cohen said. "That is the sole motivation."

"I don't think any president, regardless of party, would ever take military action to distract from personal problems," Dee Dee Myers, Clinton's former press secretary, said Thursday on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno." "Most of the Congress, most of the American people I think will say, 'I don't believe that our president regardless of how bad things are would do that.'" divert attention from an Oval Office sex scandal. Some non-politicians also questioned the president's motives.

"I think any intelligent person could see through it - it was a political act," said Umar Abdul Haq, a counselor for a drug rehabilitation center in Los Angeles. "Two days ago he was proven a liar. A dishonest act won't correct another dishonest act."

Michelle Perez, 27, an office worker in Phoenix, said the strikes sounded like a bad idea.

"(Clinton) has got to do something to make himself look like a president right now," said "No one trusts him right now."

But many praised the president's judgment and rallied to his side in the first real test of his clout since the Lewinsky confession.

Among them was House Speaker Newt Gingrich, who dismissed as "sick" suggestions that Clinton was simply trying to distract attention from his personal life.

The United States "did exactly the right thing today," said Gingrich, R-Ga. "We cannot allow any terrorist group to attack our citizens or our interests without forceful and focused retaliation."

Chad Boulanger of Portland, Ore., said Gingrich's comments "dispelled the 'Wag the Dog' theory."

"I take the action for what it was - to stop the terrorists and to make them pay for what they did," said Rep. Dan Burton R-Ind. "And that was the right thing to do. That's coming from one of the president's severest critics."

Other prominent Republicans who lauded Clinton's decision were Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi, Arizona Sen. John McCain, New York Sen. Alfonse D'Amato and North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms.

"Anyone who says this is politically motivated is absolutely wrong," said Rep. Ike Skelton of Missouri, ranking Democrat on the House National Security Committee.

Others also said they supported Clinton, if only because his decision to attack was backed by military leaders they trust.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said those involved in the planning included Defense Secretary William Cohen, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Henry Shelton and Joint Chiefs of Staff Vice Chairman Joseph Ralston.

"I think they would be the first to jump up if our military people were being put in danger for political reasons," Stevens said. "I just discount that entirely."

Clinton's job rating continues to be up

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's personal ratings have slipped with the public since his televised comments on Monica Lewinsky, but the negative perception of him personally has not hurt his strong job approval ratings, polls suggest.

In two polls taken at midweek, a majority thinks he obstructed justice in the Lewinsky investigation, and three-fourths of Americans in an ABC News poll released Thursday say they don't think he is trustworthy or has high moral standards.

But a majority wants him to stay in office and has backed his job performance.

And still another poll, released today by the Los Angeles Times, said a majority of Americans think the Lewinsky matter should be dropped.

A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released Wednesday suggested the public was satisfied with the president's explanation of his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky Monday night, but thought he should have said, "I'm sorry," and should not have criticized special prosecutor Kenneth Starr.

The polls on the Lewinsky probe were taken before the president on Thursday ordered U.S. military strikes against terrorist facilities in Afghanistan and Sudan that the United States says were linked to the embassy bombings in Africa.

"Historically, there is a rally effect (after such news) and the president's job approval rating will go up," said Frank Newport, editor in chief of the Gallup Poll.

In most of the most recent polls, those who viewed Clinton favorably slipped anywhere from 5 to 15 percentage points.

The Gallup Poll released Wednesday showed his favorable rating at 55 percent, 5 points lower than last week. The ABC poll released Thursday showed his favorable rating at 39 percent, down from 54 percent in July.

The ABC poll also showed that only 24 percent think Clinton is honest and trustworthy, gradually sliding from 40 percent in February. Only 18 percent said he has high ethical and moral standards.

But the relationship between the perceptions of the public and private Clinton is unclear.

motivation for ordering the strikes.

"The Monica Missiles," read a headline in popular daily Hurriyet. Clinton said he ordered the strikes against sites in that are linked to Osama bin Laden, a Saudi millionaire. U.S. officials say he is a major sponsor of anti-U.S. terrorism.

In the Middle East, some were lining up against the U.S. attack. The Palestinian Authority said the U.S. air strikes would bring more turmoil to the region.

"I believe that this act will bring the world back to the rule of the jungle," said Ahmed Abdel Rahman, secretary-general of the Palestinian Cabinet.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a how-we-met story with a little different twist. Please print it. There's a moral here: It pays to do the right thing.

Several years ago, I found a wallet in a phone booth, and the identification indicated that it belonged to a truck driver. I called his home repeatedly, and there was no answer. I refused to give up and kept calling.

After several days, I finally reached him. I explained that I had found his wallet and would mail it to him immediately. He seemed amazed that anyone would return a wallet with money, credit cards, checkbook and other valuables. He then said, "I have a trip through your town next week, and I'd like to meet you." My response was "Fine. Here's my address."

He stopped by, and we discovered we had a lot in common. There were several visits after that. One year later, we were married. I was 60. He was 57. We will celebrate our eighth anniversary in December. Tell your older readers it's never too late to find happiness. -- Blessed in Covington, Tenn.

Dear Blessed: You told 'em, and I thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently, I read a letter you printed from a woman who was fed up with her husband's snoring. I had read letters like that in your column before and promised myself I would write to you, but I never got around to it. Well, today, I'm going to keep that promise.

My husband was a world-class snorer. I mean, he could really rock a room. It used to upset me, but I decided to make the best of it. Whenever I heard his snoring, I would remind myself of all my faults he had to put up with -- and believe me, there were plenty.

Several years ago, my wonderful husband died suddenly. The loneliness is so much worse than the snoring. The silence is awful. I would give anything in the world to hear him snore again. Just sign me -- Missing Him in Syracuse, N.Y.

Dear Syracuse: You, my dear, and millions of other widows. Thanks for a poignant letter that is sure to make a great many women think differently about their husband's nocturnal symphonies. You did more good today than you know.

Dear Ann: I don't know who wrote this verse, but I think it deserves space in your column. -- Shirley X

Dear Shirley: So do I. Here it is:

The Measure of Man
Not "How did he die?" But
"How did he live?"

Not "What did he gain?" But "What did he give?"

Not "What was his station?" But
"Had he a heart?"

And "How did he play his God-given part?"

Not "What was his shrine?" Nor
"What was his creed?"

But "Had he befriended those really in need?"

Not "What did the piece in the newspaper say?"

But "How many were sorry when he passed away?"

Was he ever ready with a word or good cheer,

To bring back a smile, to banish
a tear?

These are the units to measure the worth

Of a man as a man, regardless of birth.

What's in your name?

Shakespeare asked in "Romeo and Juliet," "What's in a name?" Do you know what's in your name, where it actually comes from or what significance it has on your family tree? Finding out can be both fun and educational for the whole family.

EXPLORE THE MEANING OF YOUR NAME

Names often come from other cultures, with Greek, Latin, Gaelic or African origins. Andrew, for example, means "manly" in Greek. Linda means "pretty" in Spanish.

Names like Adam, Sarah, Matthew, Rebecca and Jacob have historical or biblical influences. You can easily find them listed in an encyclopedia or even some dictionaries.

You may be surprised by what your research reveals. Susan, for example, comes from both the Greek "Susanna," meaning "lily," and the Hebrew "Shoshana," meaning "rose." Take it a step further by seeing what your name would be in other languages. The name "John" is Juan in Spanish, Johann in German, Jean in French and Ivan in Russian.

A PERSONALIZED POSTER

Get out your art supplies and make name posters with your children to hang on their bedroom doors. Print each name in bold letters at the top of a large sheet of poster board or paper. Use pictures or drawings to illustrate and explain each name's unique meaning or derivation. If your child became fascinated with any interesting story, particularly if the name is rooted in your own family's history, you might want to add photos of ancestors, flags, etc.

NAMING PEOPLE AND THINGS

Share with your children the names you considered before they were born. Kids especially like to hear what their name would be if they had been born the opposite sex. Then have fun talking about the times your children have named something special to them, such as a teddy bear, doll or their pet goldfish or hamster.

FELLOWSHIP OF BELIEVERS

"What was Wayne Oates trying to say in his book, When Religion Gets Sick?" "What is the difference between Rosa Parks and the stooped woman in this Sunday's gospel text of Luke 13:10-17?" "Regarding the traditional wedding question, 'Who gives this woman to be married?' -- why won't Pastor Stone ask such a question?" "What is 'worm theology' and what in the world is a 'wretch'?" These and other questions will call for some theological wrestling in a sermon entitled "Mike and the Woman: Religion as Burden."

The people of Fellowship of Believers are the ministers of the church. They call Nathan Stone their pastor. But he is one of the ministers.

FOB is an ecumenical church, which means that we believe there is much to be learned from every avenue of truth and that there is goodness in every honest seeker of truth. As an independent congregation, FOB makes and sometimes breaks or reverses her own "rules." Needless to say, the church is a tad radical and sometimes rambunctious. But, at bottom, this fellowship honestly seeks to be driven by the love we see in Jesus. We want our love to be spontaneous, natural and anonymous, believing that a spirit much bigger than we are will carry that love to the heart. FOB is interdenominational and non-exclusive.

In September, FOB will introduce a fresh, tailored curriculum for children's Sunday School. The goal will be to avoid indoctrination and, instead, to promote a curiosity about faith, a love for truth, a respect for other cultures and religious expressions, a love of self and the uniqueness of others, and the learning of virtues and values from many sources. All of this will spring from the love and teachings of Jesus.

Our Sunday schedule is as follows: 9:15-coffee, morning snacks and a chatfest; 9:30-an open-discussion Sunday School called "Forum"; 10:15-informal singing with Bettye Owen and her band and Cindy Cassels and her keys; 10:30-worship (to conclude no later than 11:25).

A supervised nursery is available at all services. The church is located at 245 North Kingwood (at Moreman), next door to the Hereford Care Center. For transportation to the services please phone 364-0359.

Oh yes, please watch for "A Night at the Movies" (popcorn included -- free!)...in October.

IMMANUEL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Immanuel invites you to come worship with us this Sunday at 10:30 a.m. We are located at the corner of Avenue B and Park Avenue, across from Dameron Park.

This Sunday's sermon theme is "Walking by Faith, A Life of Patience and Trust" focusing in on Genesis 15:1-6. Pastor Stadler will preach on Abraham, and his story of faith, and how that can be an example of our relationship with God today.

Sunday School for the children is from 9:15 a.m.-10:15 a.m.

Immanuel also offers two Bible studies with one on Sunday morning at 9:15 a.m. and the other on Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. The Sunday morning class deal with what the Christian church believed in the 16th century. The Wednesday evening study is all about the parables of Jesus Christ.

For those interested in joining the Lutheran church, a new member class discussing what being a Christian is all about is held at 7:30 on Tuesday night.

Pastor Stadler begins the day Tuesday through Friday with a 15-minute prayer service and invites others to join him. Hope to have you join us at any one of our services or activities at Immanuel.

If you have any questions, please call Immanuel Lutheran Church at 364-1668.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

FDA OKs treatment for pain

"Although we don't understand why it works, it's clear that it works," said Dr. Susan Alpert, the FDA's medical device evaluation chief. "Some of these patients were essentially bedridden ... and they were able to get up and go."

Main Street, Hereford: This undated photograph shows Hereford in its early days. The A.O. Thompson stable is the background at left and the event appears to be a parade because the spokes on the bicycle are decorated.

News in brief

The hearing on Thursday was believed to be the first in the nation to address the health care industry's coverage of the drug.

The disputed photograph will go on the auction block in October at Christie's in New York. It is expected to fetch at least $200,000, and possibly up to $1 million.

434 Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Joshua, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

OTHNIEL'S TRIUMPH
OTHNIEL HAS HAD ALL HIS MEN WHO CARRY BRASS SHIELDS POLISH THEM TO A HIGH SHINE - NOW HE HAS PLACED THE MEN UP ON THE HILLS OPPOSITE THE GIANTS' CITY...

ASA, TAKE THY BEST ARCHERS AND SLINGSHOT MEN, AND PLACE THEM ON THE HIGH GROUND!

THOU SHALT NOT LOOSE AN ARROW NOR A STONE UNTIL THOU HAST SEEN MY COMMAND!

NOW, YE WARRIORS OF JUDAH - FOLLOW ME...

AND OTHNIEL'S MEN FOLLOW QUICKLY IN THE WAKE OF THEIR LEADER - THE ATTACK HAS BEEN MOUNTED AND THE GIANTS ATOP THE HIGH WALLS AWAIT THEM!

Next Week THE GIANTS ON THE WALL!
