Israelis Strike Six More Guerrilla Strongholds

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes, tanks and assault troops pushed Palestinian guerrillas out of six more strongholds Friday in their conquest of a "security belt" in southern Lebanon.

Guerrillas spokesmen said 14 persons were killed when Israeli rockets hit two carloads of civilians fleeing from the coastal city of Adloun, 22 miles north of the Lebanese-Israeli border.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman said an "ambush by a select force" had struck at Adloun and killed the commander of a terrorist band of Palestinians but "there is no truth at all" that an Israeli commando force continued to operate in the city. He identified the slain guerrilla as "Jihad Carlos," and said he was the regional commander of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

The major Israeli operations were aimed at consolidating a hold on a 6-by-62 mile buffer zone along the Israeli-Lebanese border.

In New York, the United Nations Security Council began debate on the Israel-Lebanon conflict late Friday afternoon, at the request of both parties. Lebanese Ambassador Ghassin Tueni called for an "immediate withdrawal of the invaders" and said the council should "put an end to one of the most savage acts of aggression" in U.N. history. Chaim Herzog, the Israeli ambassador, said the Israeli troops were in Lebanon to "clear out once and for all" the Palestinian guerrillas who used the zone for attacks against Israel.

There were no firm casualty figures in the invasion, launched by Israel early Wednesday. Lebanese Red Cross officials said more than 250 Palestinians and Lebanese were killed and 350 were wounded.

Israeli casualties were listed by the military command in Tel Aviv as 14 soldiers killed and 57 wounded, with one civilian killed in guerrilla rocket attacks on Israel's northern settlements.

Israel said it sent its forces into southern Lebanon to eject the Palestininan guerrillas from the zone and prevent repetition of the weekend terror attack near Tel Aviv that killed 35 Israelis.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said the Israeli units would remain in southern Lebanon until an agreement was reached to ensure the "murderers" would not return there.

He said Israel's military operation was "completed," but reporters with Israeli units said fighting continued and Palestinian defenders of the few remaining outposts were putting up a vigorous defense. Palestinian commanders said they were mounting counter-attacks. "We're using the same hit-and-run tactics the Vietnamese used against the Americans," said one Palestinian referring to the Indochina war.

The high command of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization claimed Israel has committed 25,000 soldiers backed by tanks, artillery, missiles, jet fighters and 15 gunboats and destroyers to the action. The guerrillas are believed to have some 10,000 armed men in the zone. They are bolstered by about 1,500 left-wing Lebanese Moslems.

Weizman, asked if there would be a further extension of the Israeli offensive, said, "I don't think there will be, but you never know what the enemy will do."

"Everything will cease when the other side understands that when they stop shooting, so will we," Weizman said.

Arafat, in a statement addressed to all Arab nations, said, "The terrorist Begin can crush the Palestinian revoltuion and dictate his terms for a Middle East peace with his plus 25,000-expedition. But he will have been made to realize that his arrogant expedition was not a picnic in south Lebanon ... this is a battle of life or death and we have decided to fight it out to the bitter end."

Israeli Chief of Staff Gen. Mordechai Gur said the only significant Palestinian resistance was artillery fire from north of the red-lined Litani River.

The Litani runs about 18 miles north of the Lebanese-Israeli frontier. Israel has made it known the Litani was the "red line" that could not be crossed by Syrian army units enforcing a pan-Arab cease-fire that ended Lebanon's civil war between leftist Moslems and right-wing Lebanese Christians.

Israel previously had supported the Christian militiamen in southern Leba-

Death Assessed In Two Slayings

No Emotion Displayed By Hawkins

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A LUBBOCK jury Friday decreed that Samuel Christopher Hawkins III must pay with his life for the stabbing death of a six-months-pregnant Borger woman.

The bony-thin defendant stood apparently emotionless, leaning with his hands on the counsel table, as the jury's decision was read.

Then he sat and stared at each panelist as jurors were asked individually if each agreed with the verdict.

The eight men and four women replied "yes" firmly, never seeming to look at the defendant.

Second In One Day

At almost the same hour a Wichita Falls jury assessed the death penalty against Philip Carey Brasfield of Slaton, charged with capital murder in the October slaying of a Lubbock child. Veteran courthouse observers could recall no previous instance of death penalties in unrelated cases being handed down on the same day.

Friday, as prosecutors and defense attorneys argued his case, the volatile Hawkins — who clashed repeatedly with his attorneys throughout the five-week trial — sat scribbling on a yellow legal pad.

No Statement Read

He reportedly was writing a statement to read to presiding Judge Richard N. Countiss at sentencing time.

He said nothing when the moment came.

However, the judge had a statement to make. Before dismissing the jurors, he told them, in a voice that sounded choked, "In my opinion, you have reached decisions that are justified by the evidence in this case."

Hawkins, 34, an Amarillo meat company butcher, was convicted Wednesday of the stabbing murder of 19-year-old Abbe Rodgers Hamilton.

Jurors spent six hours on that decision, but only one hour, 24 minutes to return the death verdict.

The indictment against Hawkins alleged Mrs. Hamilton was killed during an attempted aggravated rape, elevating the crime to its death penalty status.

The pretty brunette's body was found May 3, 1977, on her blood-soaked bed in her small Borger home.

Her hands and feet were tied with red-and-white napkins from her dining table. She had been stabbed 10 times. One wound was so severe it appeared an attempt might have been made to decapitate her, a pathologist said.

Trial testimony showed Mrs. Hamilton's husband returned home from his all-night job about 9 a.m. the fatal day after picking up lumber for an addition to the couple's modest home. It was to have been a nursery for the anticipated child. His wife was sleeping peacefully then, he said.

He left to run some errands — neglect-

VICTIM, CONVICTED SLAYER — Philip Carey Brasfield must die by lethal injection for the October, 1977, slaying of 6-year-old Johnny Turner Jr., a Wichita Falls Jury decreed after brief deliberation Friday. Earlier Friday the jury had declared Brasfield guilty of the tot's asphyxiation death.

Deliberation In Brasfield Trial Brief

WICHITA FALLS — The death penalty was returned Friday against Philip Carey Brasfield, convicted of kidnapping and murdering 6-year-old Johnny Turner Jr. last Oct. 26.

It took jurors only 36 minutes to return the grim verdict after an electric, impassioned punishment argument by Lubbock Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin, who called the crime "depravity of the worst kind.

"I wonder ... how much horror a 6-year-old boy experiences when he suddenly realizes 'this isn't a nice fellow who got me in this pickup after all,'" Griffin said.

Two Questions Posed

"I wonder how much horror Johnny Turner Jr. felt when he received a bruise on the jaw and felt hands — or something — beginning to smother his life away.

"Thank God this little 6-year-old boy didn't have to live through the 10 or 11 stab wounds found on his body," Griffin said.

Griffin argued that "a rattlesnake is not entitled to bite you a second time" in asking the jury to return the ultimate punishment.

The seven-woman, five-man panel filed back into the 89th District courtroom here to announce the penalty decision at 3:58 p.m. It was up to the jury to answer two questions: basically, whether the murder had been committed deliberately and whether Brasfield, married and the father of two, would probably commit future acts of criminal violence which would constitute a continuing threat to society.

Displays No Emotion

The bearded Brasfield, 28, stood erect as presiding District Judge William R. Shaver received the jury verdict and read it aloud.

He showed no change of expression when Shaver announced affirmative answers to the two questions, tantamount to the death penalty.

A 55-pound first grader, the Turner child was abducted from his 1028 E. 29th St. Lubbock residence shortly after 5 p.m. His decaying body was found, partially obscured by brush, in the rugged

Shattered Tanker Spewing Oil

BREST, France (AP) — A huge and growing oil slick seeping from the wrecked supertanker Amoco Cadiz washed up on miles of Brittany shoreline Friday in what was potentially the worst ecological disaster ever on this spill-plagued coast.

The American-owned ship, which broke in two on rocks three miles offshore early Friday, carried 68 million gallons of Middle East crude oil, enough to create the worst tanker spill on record. Officials said three of its 15 tanks — containing nearly 24 million gallons of oil — had ruptured.

Culture and Environment Minister Michel d'Ornano said an oil slick 10 to 13 miles wide was floating on the sea near the wreck a few miles off the coast.

He said three miles of beach already had been soiled by the oil and at least 10 more miles of shoreline was threatened.

Fish were spotted floating belly-up in the besmirched waters off the tiny fishing port and summer resort of Portsall, 25 miles north of here.

Oyster grower Alain Madec in the village of Lannilis scooped up as many oysters as possible and transplanted them inland in artificial basins. Crews were putting a barrage in place in an effort to keep the oily waters from the area's prized oyster beds.

The 233,000-ton tanker lay with its bow and its stern-mounted living quarters jutting up from the sea, while oil oozed underwater from rock-punctured tanks. Officials were studying the possibility of pumping oil from the ship to minimize the spill.

Ecologists marched in Portsall to protest the growing pollution. The town's 2,000 residents feared the spreading slick would bring economic activity to a standstill.

"We were fully booked for the summer, but now it looks like the season will be ruined," said a woman hotelkeeper.

Local fishermen, who pull in mackerel and pollack aboard small boats, planned a demonstration to protest the damage to their livelihood.

Politicians, in the middle of France's two-week national elections, immediately seized on the accident as an issue. The Socialist mayor of Brest, Francis Le Ble, blamed the center-right national government, saying, "Nothing was learned from previous catastrophes."

Former Premier Jacques Chirac, leader of the rightist Gaullist party, called for a law to keep tankers 12 miles from the French coast.

The 5-year-old Amoco Cadiz, flying the Liberian flag and owned by a subsidiary of the American Oil Co., had been sailing northward, en route from the Persian Gulf to the northern French port of Le Havre.

Its steering machinery malfunctioned as it was navigating into the English Channel. A tug was called but the tow line broke and 2 1/2 hours later the Amoco Cadiz was stranded on Portsall Rocks.

Operating in darkness, French navy helicopters evacuated 41 crew members during the night. The captain and first officer, who stayed aboard, were removed later in the morning, after the 1,067-foot ship was wrenched in two by the waves.

The maritime prefecture in Brest sent a message to the American owner asking for immediate help in the fight against the spill.

The worst tanker spill on record was the wreck of the supertanker Torrey Canyon in 1967 off the southwest coast of England, 100 miles northwest of here. Nearly nine million gallons of oil poured into the sea, much of it washing up on the English and French coasts.

In January, 1976 the new 275,000-ton supertanker Olympic Bravery, the biggest ship ever wrecked, ran aground off the coast of nearby Ouessant Island and broke up. It was empty at the time, but its engine oil caused major pollution ashore.

In October, 1976 the 10,000-ton East German tanker Bohlen sank with a loss of 25 lives off Sein Island, also off Brittany. In an operation that cost three lives and millions of dollars, about 8,000 tons of the oil was pumped from the sunken ship.

West Scoffs At Kizer's Charge Of Utility Conflict Of Interest

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MAYORAL candidate Robert D. Kizer charged Friday that the connection of his opponent, Dirk West, with Southwestern Public Service Company renders West unable to "make unbiased governmental decisions on power."

Kizer, who made his charges in a prepared statement released at the opening of his campaign headquarters, also said West, who handles the advertising account for the utility — city-owned Lubbock Power and Light's competitor — may be in violation of the city charter.

"The city charter prohibits anyone employed by a public utility, or anyone employed by a person who owns stock in a public utility, from serving as mayor or as a member of the city council," Kizer said.

West, however, said that as an independent businessman who has been in the advertising business for 20 years, he has handled advertising for several clients: "among them I'm very proud to say is Southwestern Public Service Company.

"They retain my agency to do their advertising the same way they retain law firms, real estate consultants etc. for their expertise," West said. "I discussed this at length of course when I announced, so there's really nothing new about it."

"Whether he (West) is breaking the letter of the law I can't tell you," said Kizer, a 29-year-old attorney and building contractor. "That is for the courts and people of Lubbock to decide. But I can tell you he's breaking the spirit of the law."

West's two terms as mayor pro tem while he was handling the SPS account "hits right in the face of the ordinance," Kizer said.

However, Kizer said, he has no intention of taking any legal action against West, saying the situation was one for the voters to decide. He also said it was his understanding that about four years ago City Attorney Fred Senter reviewed the case and summarily passed over it be-

Parades, Green Beer Spice St. Pat's Day

By United Press International

MOST PEOPLE love parades — but not as much as Irishmen on St. Patrick's Day.

And if a parade isn't feasible, the Irish will celebrate the day the best way they can — armadillo races, country-western jamborees, political protests and green beer as well as green bagels.

In Boston, where tradition says it all started in 1758, there was no parade because the snows of winter still clog the streets.

In New York, however, the luck of the Irish prevailed. It snowed almost all day Thursday and while many of the city's suburbs recorded up to six inches of snow, in the city it melted almost as soon as it hit the pavement.

A brief flurry early Friday worried the faint of heart but by noon when an Irish cop named Patrick Skelly blew a police whistle to start the parade of some 127,000 persons up the green line on Fifth Avenue, the sun was shining brightly and the streets were dry.

With the skirling of bagpipes and the rat-a-tat of drums, what is believed to be the oldest continuous parade in the United States celebrated St. Patrick, who wasn't Irish but has come to symbolize the Emerald Isle.

In Washington, House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill was presented with a green bagel, three feet in diameter.

The giant bagel presented by Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., was encased in plastic with the message "Erin go Bragh-Shalom," painted on the crust.

SEC Alleges Securities Law Violated By Lance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Budget Director Bert Lance and 10 other defendants were accused by the Securities and Exchange Commission on Friday of violating securities laws in connection with an alleged secret takeover attempt of a $2 billion Washington-based bank holding company.

The SEC complaint, which was filed in U.S. District Court here late in the day, alleges that Lance and others acted to obtain more than 20 percent of the stock in Financial General Bankshares Inc.

The complaint said Lance acted on behalf of Bank of Credit and Commerce of London, which had arranged "substantial personal loans for him." Also named in the complaint were the Pakistani-born president of the London bank and four Arabs, highly influential in their countries.

The thrust of the SEC complaint, which is a civil rather than a criminal action, is that Lance and the other defendants failed to disclose in advance their attempted takeover of the holding company.

The complaint also contends that the defendants were making secret offers at premium prices to selected shareholders of Financial General, which operates banks in Virginia, Maryland and the nation's capital.

Lance, a close friend of President Carter's, resigned as the nation's budget director last September after questions were raised over management of his personal finances and his actions as head of the National Bank of Georgia.

The SEC complaint said the alleged takeover "was structured by certain of the defendants in such a manner to avoid public disclosure of their activities."

It asked the court to issue a permanent injunction against Lance, the London bank and other defendants to prohibit them from continuing the takeover at-

Congress Sent Nuclear Power Plant Licensing Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter sent Congress a bill Friday to speed up the licensing of nuclear power plants by cutting about 4½ years off a process that now takes 11 or 12 years.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said the proposed changes should permit a nuclear power plant to begin producing electricity about 6½ years after a utility decides to build it.

"The nuclear option is barely alive because of the uncertainty" about licensing and construction costs, Schlesinger said.

The proposal drew immediate criticism from Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., who said the administration did not find out what really delays nuclear licensing before proposing the bill.

Meanwhile, Schlesinger also said the Carter administration still opposes construction of the plutonium-producing Clinch River breeder reactor project, planned near Oak Ridge, Tenn.

But he said the administration is willing to study the possibility of building a different type of breeder reactor which would be less expensive and better.

Carter has attacked the project as a $2 billion waste of taxpayers' money and a potential spur to the spread of nuclear weapons. However, Congress has repeatedly refused to kill the project.

Breeder reactors offer the promise of a new energy source because they produce more plutonium fuel than they use. However, critics contend the plutonium could also used to build nuclear weapons.

The administration's bill to streamline approval for nuclear plants would provide for advance selection, approval and "banking" of sites suitable for nuclear facilities before applications are filed.

It would also allow approval of standardized plant designs that could be routinely licensed for specific construction projects without individual review.

This would replace the present case-by-case licensing process in which each nuclear power plant is individually designed, sited and reviewed from scratch.

The proposal also drew criticism from Mark Messing, spokesman for the Environmental Policy Center. Messing said the approval of advance sites and designs would lock the public into a commitment to nuclear power plants which might appear less attractive as other energy forms are developed.

Schlesinger said current delays in approval of nuclear plants have caused some utilities to cancel or postpone construction of nuclear generators in recent years.

A delay of one year, Schlesinger said, could add about $120 million to the cost of a nuclear power plant and increase the ultimate cost of its electricity sold to consumers.

Area Temperatures To Reach Into 80s

Westerly to southwesterly winds are expected to carry warm temperatures reaching into the low 80s and blowing dust into the Lubbock area today.

Gusting winds should blow at 15 to 20 mph this afternoon before temperatures drop into the low 40s tonight and rise into the 70s Sunday.

Forecasters predict temperatures to remain near 70 here through Tuesday, before a slight cooling trend moves into the area by mid-week.

Fair weather also is expected for the rest of the state today.

Friday temperatures here soared up to 76 in the late afternoon, following an early morning low of 32.

The clear skies which prevailed across Texas Friday found temperatures in the 70s throughout the state along with southwesterly winds blowing at 10 to 15 mph and gusting up to 30 mph in some areas.

Fair and sunny skies which also existed over most of the nation Friday, are expected to return today except where rainshowers and snowshowers are predicted for regions Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, the Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes.

The heavy snowstorm which had tormented the northeast Thursday moved out over the Atlantic Friday, leaving sunny skies in those areas and a weaker snowstorm in the Ohio Valley and lower Great Lakes regions.

Nationally, afternoon temperatures ranged from 18 degrees at Massena, N.Y., to 90 degrees at Long Beach, Calif.

Pentagon Ponders Sale Of Rifles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is considering selling 700,000 surplus M-1 rifles to private gun clubs and their members, an Army official said Friday.

Col. Jack R. Rollinger, an official of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, a government agency, made the disclosure in testimony before the House Armed Services' investigations subcommittee.

A Defense Department panel is to meet next Wednesday to decide whether to greatly expand the current practice of selling only a few hundred weapons each year. The board's parent executive committee, headed by Walter R. LaBerge, an undersecretary of the Army, is to meet next week to decide if the M-1 sale should be broadened.

Rollinger said 600 M-1s were sold last year at a price of $120 per rifle and twice that number has been approved by the board for sale this year. Proceeds go to the federal Treasury.

Rep. Sam Stratton, D-N.Y., the subcommittee chairman, said the rifles should be sold closer to the present open market price of about $250 each.

Until the M-1 was replaced by newer weapons, it was the U.S. Army infantryman's basic weapon.

Under current regulations, gun clubs like those of the National Rifle Association, must be certified as qualified by the Treasury Department before they may purchase M-1s for use in target practice or marksmanship competition.

Rollinger said that if there is a decision to sell the complete surplus, he expects sales to be brisk because there are no more large stocks of M-1s anywhere.

"The American people are aware this is the end of the line," he said.

The board also is considering proposals that surplus M-1 carbines, a lighter version of the M-1 rifle, also be released for sale.

There were unlimited sales of M-1s until 1968, when the demands of the Vietnam War forced officials to retain the surplus, if needed, for training troops or for use in the Southeast Asian fighting.

Rollinger said selling weapons to gun clubs is a means of attracting enlistees to the all-volunteer Army by introducing their younger members to target shooting.

"It is a program which encourages people into our way of life," he said.

The subcommittee voted to recommend that the board expand its annual sale to 2,600 rifles, but that it stop short of emptying Army warehouses of the complete M-1 surplus.

15 Workers Treated After Chlorine Leak

WATERFORD, Conn. (AP) — Fifteen workers were taken to a hospital after inhaling toxic chlorine from a leak at the Millstone nuclear power complex, authorities said. None of the workers — 13 men and two women — was injured seriously and residents in the area were not evacuated in the incident Thursday, officials said.

"The incident in no way involves anything nuclear," said Karl Abraham, a spokesman for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission. He said the leak could happen in any city that has chlorine in its water treatment system.

Candidate Set To Dedicate Headquarters

Jesse George, Democratic candidate for the state senate, will open his headquarters at 1414-B Texas today at 10 a.m. and christen his campaign the "Windmill Brigade."

At a 10:30 a.m. press conference George, a former state representative from Brownfield, is expected to discuss the referendum on the May 6 primary ballot concerning so-called loan shark bills.

Democratic voters will decide whether the 1979 Legislature should authorize higher interest rates on loans under $5,000.

George said representatives of the large loan companies, most of which are based out of state, have appealed to virtually every session of the legislature in the past 10 years to "increase already exorbitant interest rates allowed on small consumer loans in Texas."

The loan rates affect "those least able to repay it," George said, noting the one our of five persons who borrow from loan companies do so primarily because they are unable to borrow from banks and savings and loan institutions.

"This is an opportunity for Texas citizens to be aware of an issue long before it hits the legislative network and a means of being in direct contact with the legislature," George said.

He pledged, if elected, to be a "watchdog" for this type of legislation, which he said nearly passed the state senate in the last session.

NASA Names Orbital Flight Directors

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space agency officials named flight directors Friday for the first orbital flights of the space shuttle, scheduled for the spring of 1979.

Neil B. Hutchinson, Charles B. Lewis and Donald R. Puddy, all of the Johnson Space Center flight operations crew, will be the flight directors, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

Each of the men has been a flight director on Apollo and Skylab missions.

The trio will be responsible for planning and directing activities of the mission control center during the shuttle program. Hutchinson will plan and direct the shuttle launch, Lewis the on-orbit phase and Puddy the re-entry phase.

LEWIS B. NANCE

New Officers Named By Brownfield Bank

Brownfield State Bank and Trust has elected two new officers, according to Sam Spikes, president.

Lewis B. Nance, formerly of Hobbs, was named senior vice president and controller. Mike Banta of Brownfield was appointed assistant cashier.

Nance began his banking career at First State Bank, Tishomingo, Okla., later joining First National Bank in Hobbs, N.M. Before that, he was employed by Pan American Petroleum as a title clerk. He joined the First National Bank of Lea County in 1967, where he held positions of cashier, senior vice president, controller and trust officer.

Banta, a 1970 graduate of Brownfield High School, received a degree in finance from Texas Tech University. He served in the U.S. Army in Korea from 1971-72. Before joining the staff at Brownfield State, he held positions as manager of the Pizza Hut and K-Bob's Steak House in Brownfield.

Genetics Lab Opened To Public

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first certified maximum containment laboratory for genetic research — a complex of sealed work boxes, sterilization equipment and airlocks — was opened to public view Friday by the National Institutes of Health.

The so-called P4 laboratory in Frederick, Md., will become operational March 30. The first experiments will evaluate the potential risks of recombinant DNA research, a controversial form of gene splitting.

About 20 opponents of the research held a silent vigil outside the laboratory as news reporters and public officials attended a briefing and toured the facility.

Signs saying "DNA Is Not the Way" and "Who Should Play God" contrasted with assurances from NIH officials that the research would be conducted safely and had great potential benefit for mankind.

"The benefits of recombinant DNA research are coming out of hundreds of laboratories all over the world," said Dr. Bernard Talbot, an assistant to the NIH director. "Recent evidence indicates the potential of risk has been overestimated."

Recombinant DNA research manipulates deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA), the basic genetic component of life. The work splits off and transfers DNA from one species of organism to another, creating lifeforms not found naturally.

Proponents say the work will advance the understanding of basic biology. It also could lead to new drugs and vaccines, plants that don't need fertilizer and microorganism "factories" to make large quantities of rare medical chemicals, such as blood clotting factors.

However, critics say the work could produce virulent disease organisms against which humans, animals and plants may have no natural defense should the organisms escape the laboratory. Some opponents also say the work could be a step toward manipulating human genes for questionable purposes.

Talbot of NIH said no hazard has come from the work after almost five years of research. But to get a better idea of potential risks, the first experiments at government P4 laboratories will be risk assessment.

Two NIH virologists, Drs. Wallace Rowe and Malcolm Martin, will put the DNA of a mouse cancer virus into a weakened bacteria. This bacteria with the foreign DNA will be administered to mice to see if they become infected. The experiments will serve as a "safe" model to evaluate NIH safety guidelines, officials say.

The guidelines call for four levels of physical containment and three levels of biological containment. The levels of containment required to assure that organisms stay in the laboratory depend upon the individual experiment.

Biological containment means using host organisms with varying abililities to survive outside the laboratory. Some of the organisms are so weak that they can't survive without special nutrients or are killed by sunlight.

Physical containment goes from P1, about equivalent to any modern college laboratory, to P4.

COURTROOM JEST — Theodore Bundy finds something funny during his conversation with chief public defender Mike Minerva, right, in Tallahassee, Fla. The court ruled Friday that it was proper for authorities to take blood, hair and handwriting samples that might link Bundy to additional crimes. (AP Laserphoto)

Bundy Ordered To Give Samples For Lab Tests

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Theodore R. Bundy was ordered Friday to surrender hair, blood and handwriting samples to authorities within five days — despite claims by his attorneys that prosecutors are on a fishing expedition.

"The state is asking for a blood sample from the defendant for a trial-and-error procedure," Joe Nursey, one of Bundy's court appointed attorneys, said during an hour-long hearing Friday. "Here we have the state attorney asking to get blood on the mere chance that it will match the blood in the van."

Prosecutors have said that it was essential to their case that they be allowed to obtain samples of Bundy's blood, handwriting and hair to match a signature on receipts made with a stolen credit card and hair and blood samples found in a white van, stolen from the Florida State University campus.

Bundy faces charges on 42 counts of theft, burglary and the forged use of credit cards.

The former law student and political campaigner also has been called a prime suspect in the Jan. 15 deaths of two Chi Omega sorority members. Police have said a lone assailant entered the sorority, killed the two women and severely beat two others.

Prosecutors have indicated that the blood, handwriting and hair samples were to be used in the charges pending against the 31-year-old Bundy, although Nursey suggested at Friday's hearing that the samples also will be used in the investigation of the Florida State beatings.

Arguing against allowing the sample-taking, Nursey said a Florida Department of Criminal Law Enforcement report indicated that the blood was to be compared with samples being analyzed in connection with the assault on Kathy Kliner, 20. Miss Kliner was one of two women beaten by the Chi Omega killer.

Shipyard Threatens Navy Work Stoppage

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — Newport News Shipbuilding "is absolutely prepared to stop work" on the half-finished nuclear-powered cruiser Arkansas on Monday unless the Navy agrees to pay the yard more money, a spokesman said Friday.

The shipyard spokesman, James Griffith, said a proposal under which the company would continue construction of the Arkansas in the absence of a building contract had been delivered to the Justice department last Wednesday.

A counter-proposal by the Justice Department on behalf of the Navy was received late Thursday, he said, and now is being considered by the shipyard, but no decision has been reached.

Both Griffith and a Justice Department spokesman declined to discuss the proposals.

"We expect to work something out," the Justice spokesman, Mark Sheehan, said Friday in Washington. "But if we can't, we just have to see."

The dispute is over the final price for constructing the Arkansas, the fourth ship in the Virginia class of nuclear-powered guided missile cruisers.

The Navy in 1975 exercised an option in the contract with Newport News Shipbuilding covering construction of the first ship of the class, the USS Virginia, to have the fourth cruiser built at about the same price.

The shipyard announced, however, it would lose $30 to $40 million on the fourth ship's construction if it accepted such a contract.

A negotiated agreement ordered by U. S. District Court in Norfolk in August 1975 got the construction started, with the Navy agreeing to "consider" a more profitable contract for the yard.

But although construction has continued under the agreement, no contract has ever been signed, Griffith said.

Griffith would not speculate on the possibility of worker layoffs at the Newport News yard, Virginia's largest private employer with a payroll of about 24,000, if work on the Arkansas should actually be stopped on Monday.

The Electric Boat division of General Dynamics Corp. in a related development, said last Monday it would halt work on 16 nuclear submarines if the Navy did not pay $544 million in disputed back bills.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edward Hidalgo told a congressional subcommittee hearing on shipbuilding claims Thursday in Washington that the Electric Boat "ultimatum" was a disappointment to the Navy.

Dollar Drops On Tokyo Market, But Rises In New York, Europe

By The Associated Press

The U.S. dollar plunged on the Tokyo foreign exchange Friday to hit a new low, but improved in trading in Europe and New York.

The price of gold declined slightly on the two major European bullion markets as the dollar stabilized somewhat in late trading. In Zurich, gold was worth $183.125 an ounce, down more than a dollar from Thursday's price of $184.625. In London, a troy ounce sold for $183.75 Friday, down from the previous day's $184.25.

Meanwhile, with dealers reporting pressure still mounting on the dollar in Tokyo, the U.S. currency closed at 230.025 Friday after the Central Bank tried to stop the slide by buying about $200 million. Volume was heavy and trading was described as hectic as the dollar dropped three yen from Thursday's closing.

Japan's huge trade surplus, which Thursday was put at $2.3 billion, is the main cause of the dollar's postwar low against the yen, dealers said. The United States' own huge trade deficit, $26.7 billion in 1977, has compounded the market's confusion, they said.

In England, despite the government's announcement that the inflation rate fell to an annual 9.5 percent in February, the lowest since September 1973, the pound dipped slightly against the dollar to a late trading rate of $1.9080 to the pound, compared with Thursday's late rate of $1.9133.

Other late dollar rates in Europe Friday: Zurich — 1.89875 Swiss francs, up from 1.8830; Frankfurt — 2.0370 marks, up from 2.0356; Amsterdam — 2.1785 Dutch guilders, up from 2.1750; Paris — 4.6750 French francs, down from 4.6957.

A London broker described the market in Europe Friday as "flattish and cautious," and said there was nothing new on the scene to justify the dollar's slight improvement.

But some dealers guessed the United States' oil import figures for January and February, down from 1977's comparable period, might have had an influence on the market.

"If, in spite of the U.S. coal strike and a hard winter, the oil imports are down over the same time last year, then this is the kind of thing a nervous market is looking for and will grasp onto," one broker said.

In New York, the dollar's improvement was broader. The U.S. currency was worth 2.0430 German marks, against 2.0315 Thursday; 4.6450 French francs, against 4.6875; 1.9000 Swiss francs, against 1.8710; and 231.92 yen, against 231.82. The pound was worth $1.9050, against $1.9145.

Traders in New York also attributed the dollar's improvement to the nation's better position regarding oil imports.

"Any positive news at all would have led to dollar buying today after the slump of the last couple of days," one dealer said. "The oil news was good enough."

The dollar has been shrinking in value for more than a year. In the final half of 1977 it lost 10 percent against the yen.

Panama Pacts--If Shoe Fits...

REGARDLESS OF the final decision on the Panama Canal Pacts, and it is by no means certain despite this week's vote, the behind-the-scenes events leading up to the showdown raise all sorts of questions.

Not only about the wisdom of approval of the treaties but of the Carter administration's efforts to gain that approval.

Not being naive in the ways of politics, wheeling and dealing and horse-trading, a certain degree of persuasion and arm-twisting was expected to be a part of the battle, so to speak.

BUT IF, AS The Wall Street Journal alleged in an editorial Thursday morning, the administration traded its support of certain tax-funded legislative proposals for some senators' votes, then we think the "political game" was carried much too far.

According to The WSJ, "the administration has made some handsome offers to try to win over recalcitrant senators..."

Then, the paper said "Sen. Talmadge of Georgia has been promised administration support for his $2.3 billion emergency farm bill..."

And, in the next breath, The WSJ said "Sen. DeConcini (who had been reported on the fence on the Canal issue) has been promised a $250 million federal purchase of copper for the strategic stockpile..."

The publication also said that GOP Sen. Packwood has been quoted by The Washington Post as saying the President should not be "master of ceremonies at 'Let's Make A Deal...'"

THE DAY OF the vote on the first part of the two treaties, it was also revealed that President Carter had been in telephone contact with Dictator Torrijos of Panama, apparently seeking to sooth his displeasure over crucial amendments attached to the treaty package.

Perhaps we attach too much importance to it, but the White House did not go out of its way to publicize the Carter-Torrijos talk.

The thing the White House has attached importance to, and unseemingly so, is that the approval of the Panama pacts represents a bulwark of the administration's credibility and contribution to the nation's well-being.

WE COULDN'T disagree more. As a matter of import to the nation's future, yes, the Panama Canal pacts are of grave importance.

But, Mr. Carter has spent far too much time on "winning" the battle here while losing the war on a number of other fronts.

While concentrating his energies on the divisive and questionable Panama Canal project, the President has let other vital issues, such as farm legislation, the energy bill, the sinking dollar and the Mideast crisis, sort of take second helpings. Or, so it seems to us.

NATURALLY, WE are disappointed in the fact that the first part of the Panama pacts, the neutrality act, was okayed.

However, the closeness of the vote, the hint of trouble over the amendments with Panama's Communist-leaning leader, and the fact the people will have a chance to buttonhole the senators during the Easter recess gives hope that the final treaty "give-away" provision may yet be defeated.

In the meantime, we in Texas should take the occasion to renew our letters and calls to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, and other "pro" senators for that matter, to change their minds.

In so doing, they will only be carrying out the wishes of the majority of the people who sent them to Congress in the first place.

Whether Sen. Bentsen, and others, think so or not, the people still have the final say—if not on the Panama Canal treaties, at least on those who reject the honest opinions of their constituents back home.

Rolling In Dole

REMEMBER that complaint by northeastern states that they are paying more to the federal government in taxes than they are getting back in federal spending?

The way they see it, they are on the short end of a regional imbalance in which the lion's share of federal expenditures for such things as military bases, procurement contracts, new federal buildings, etc., has been going to the southern and western states.

Well, the tide has turned—sort of.

According to the General Accounting Office, the flow of federal money has shifted in favor of the Northeast, particularly the New England states, in recent years. A key reason, it explains, is the region's large welfare rolls and high unemployment rate—the highest in the nation.

"Those regions in relative economic decline are gaining relatively in federal aid," said the GAO. "Thus the complex formulas and other factors that determine the flow of aid do seem responsive to changing conditions."

Somehow, it doesn't seem that being put on the federal dole is much of a solution to the problem.

AN EDITORIAL:

No Soup, Thanks

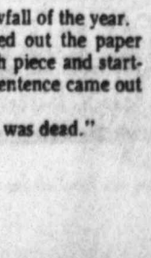
WORD COMES from Singapore that the price of bird's nest soup, that ancient Chinese delicacy, is going out of sight. A small bowl now costs the equivalent of $4.35 in the restaurants that serve it—and you have to put your order in several days in advance.

For some reason, there's a shortage of suitable nests built by tropical swifts in Malaysia, Thailand and Indonesia. The saliva the birds use to hold their nests together is the key ingredient of the soup, you see.

It's one piece of news about the rising cost of living that doesn't upset us one bit.

ART BUCHWALD:

And If This Is March... It Must Be Winter!



WASHINGTON—"I saw my first robin the other day—it was dead."

This sentence has been in my typewriter for two weeks. I was hoping that, like winter, it would go away. But it wouldn't.

I read it to my secretary, Jeannie, who told me it would be a mistake to use it. She said I'd only be contributing to the depression the country is already in because of the weather.

"You should write about spring," she told me.

"What's spring?" I asked her.

"You know, when the buds show up on the trees and the grass turns green, and people throw off their overcoats and start mulching their lawns."

"I THINK I remember it," I said. "Isn't that the time when windows are opened and girls and boys fall in love, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land?"

"And birds sing," she said, "and dogs romp, and children daydream, and they pick up the garbage on the days they're supposed to."

"It's coming back to me," I said excitedly as I sat at the typewriter. "I can almost smell it. I can smell...wait...I can smell cherry blossoms."

"Of course you can. And you also can smell roses and hyacinths and clover."

"Clover," I cried. "How could I have forgotten the smell of clover?"

"It's been a long time," she said. "Anyone who has lived through this winter would have forgotten the smell of clover."

"QUIET," I SAID, playing my fingers across the typewriter. "I think I hear the sound of a babbling brook."

"You do, you do," she said. "It is a babbling brook beside a waterfall."

"Are my ears deceiving me? Is that the buzz of a bee?"

"Of course it's a bee. A beautiful honeybee alighting on a flower. Close your eyes for a moment and think back, back, back."

"It's so hazy. How far back should I go?"

"Go back to last April."

"I can't go back that far. There's too much slush and ice."

"Concentrate. Concentrate on last April."

"The ice and slush are melting. Yes, I see a bush."

"What kind of bush?"

"A lilac bush—a white lilac bush."

"Write it down before you forget it."

I TYPED IT OUT. Then I said, "There's dew on the hedges. Silver droplets of fresh morning dew."

"Are the dogwoods in bloom?" she asked me.

"What color are dogwoods?"

"White, pink and red. Don't forget the dandelions."

"It's all there. It's coming back to me. I see virgin forests wearing their new spring colors. And over there is a host of daffodils."

"That's spring," Jeannie said. "You haven't lost it. You've still got it in your breast."

"THERE'S MORE," I told her. "I see girls in skirts and blouses strutting in high heels and silk stockings along the nation's byways."

"That's lust, but it's also spring," she said.

"Can I write it down?" I begged.

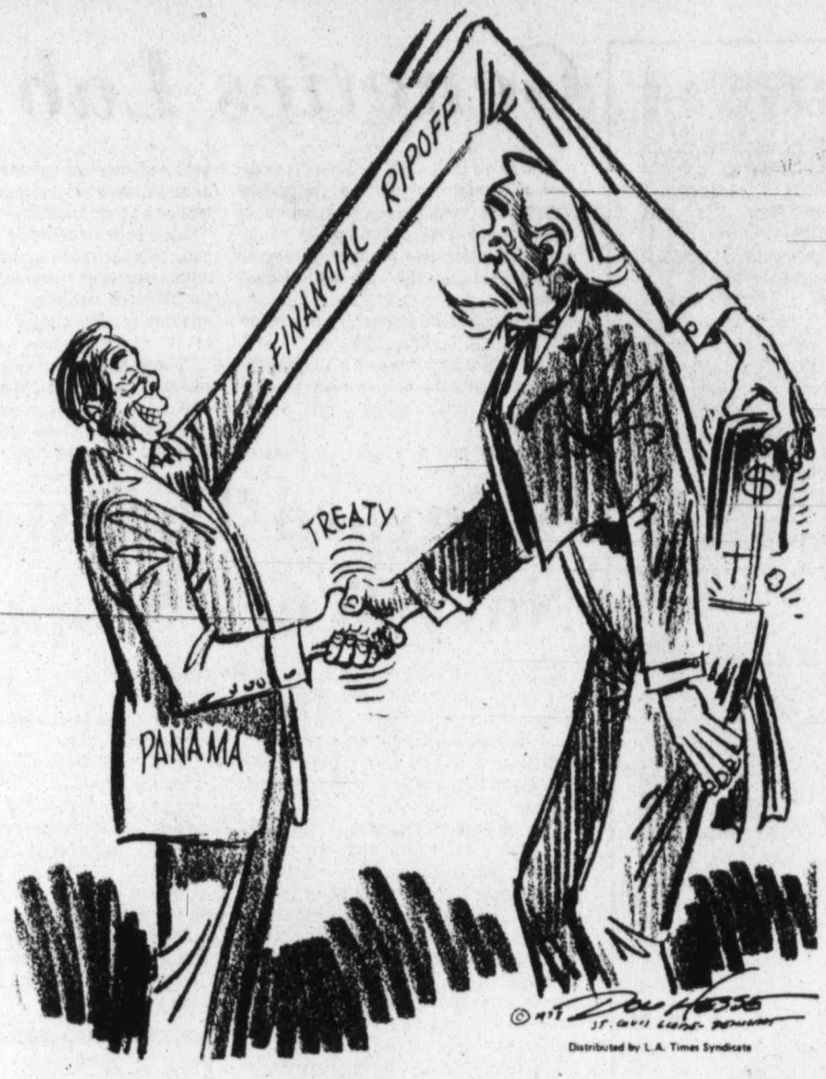
"Yes," she said, "because it goes with spring."

I finally opened my eyes and looked out the window. Wet globs of snow were falling outside, and the cold wind was whipping them around in a whirling dervish.

It was Washington's tenth snowfall of the year.

The spell was broken. I ripped out the paper from my machine, put in a fresh piece and started out all over again. The first sentence came out automatically.

"I saw my first robin today—it was dead."



ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Cuba's Next Move

EVANS

WASHINGTON—The unannounced presence of one reinforced Cuban battalion in Communist-oriented South Yemen has raised the spectre of Fidel Castro's Africa corps being used against the conservative royalist states in the vital, oil-rich Arabian peninsula.

The worried government of Saudi Arabia has quietly asked the U.S. to share its secret intelligence estimate of why the Cubans are in South Yemen.

Strongly allied with the Moscow-Havana bloc, this is the first purely Arab state to which Castro has sent so many troops.

Although the Carter administration is not certain of the answer, two possibilities spring to mind:

* One is that the Cubans are training South Yemenis for future military operations against oil-rich Oman;

* The other is that the Cubans are being quietly positioned by the Russians for future military action of their own against pro-Western North Yemen.

In either case, the appearance of a highly trained battalion of Castro's roving Africa corps has the potential for major trouble in the Arabian peninsula.

WHEN THE RUSSIANS were booted out of Somalia for helping Ethiopia, parts of the huge Soviet naval base of Berbera were moved across the Red Sea to Aden, South Yemen's capital.

That included the Soviet drydock and associated equipment for servicing its Indian Ocean fleet.

This has made Aden an important staging area for the Soviet-Cuban operations in the Horn of Africa and Red Sea.

But adding to this a Cuban battalion is dangerous new evidence of Castro's cutting edge in Africa.

The Cubans, still arriving in Ethiopia at a rate of more than 100 per day, are in sight of cleaning up Somali resistance in the disputed Ogaden district of Ethiopia.

THEIR NEXT DESTINATION will point directly to the West's next African crisis.

It could be on the Rhodesian border, where some U.S. officials in Washington are convinced the Cubans will join pro-Moscow black guerrillas attacking the "internal" Rhodesian political settlement.

Or it could be the Sudan, now pro-Western but vulnerable to outside political and military pressures.

Moreover, location of a Cuban battalion in South Yemen now adds the troubled Arabian Peninsula to possible targets for future Cuban operations.

That is a matter of deep concern for the Western nations that depend on Arabian oil.

AS A SIGN OF right-wing hostility toward Sen. Howard Baker for his support of the Panama Canal treaties, one conservative political action group is quietly organizing a campaign to purge him as Senate Republican leader next January.

The National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC), part of fund-raiser Richard Viguerie's "new right" network, is attaching a slight string to its contributions for Republican Senate candidates.

Each candidate is asked to promise that, if elected to the Senate, he would oppose Baker's re-election as minority leader.

Terry Dolan of NCPAC told us that "so far" the anti-Baker promise is not a condition of receiving the $5,000 contribution.

But Dolan added that no recipient has yet refused to take the anti-Baker pledge.

Baker's announced hostility to the prospective arms control treaty (SALT II) will not soften NCPAC.

"That's been Baker's strategy all along," said Dolan, "to support Panama and oppose SALT, and it won't work with us."

★

TO HALT THE Democratic decline in North Carolina, senior poltical advisers are urging President Carter to name former Gov. Robert Scott to the vacant post of Deputy Secretary of Agriculture as a symbolic statement of friendship for the tobacco land.

Scott is currently placed, high but anonymously, in the federal bureaucracy as co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission.

His elevation to the Agriculture post (vacant since John White became Democratic national chairman) would be a peace offering to both North Carolina Democrats and the tobacco industry.

Worried Democratic politicians would much prefer, one told us, "Califano fired than Scott hired"—a reference to Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Califano, architect of the anti-smoking campaign. Nevertheless, Scott at Agriculture would be warmly welcomed.

ANDREW TULLY:

Swipe A Big One

WASHINGTON—In a Washington courtroom the other day, a black mother broke down and wept when her 22-year-old son was sentenced to three years in prison for breaking and entering.

Later, after embracing her son, she regained her calm and told reporters quietly she was concerned about "the effect on my other five children of this public humiliation of the family. They are branded now."

So sadly true. It does hurt to be known as the mother, brother, or sister of a convicted felon. We sometimes forget that the poor have pride, too.

Yet the evidence against this soft-spoken mother's son fair cried for heavy punishment. The sentence was more than fair, it was imperative.

BUT THERE IS another side to justice's coin, and U.S. Atty. Earl Silbert noted it in a rare burst of criticism of city judges for what he called their generally lenient sentences of so-called white-collar criminals.

Silbert dismissed as "fallacious," the belief that the possible humiliation or embarrassment of white-collar criminals is punishment enough.

"It is our view," he said, "that the family of a poor robber is as much distraught by this persecution as is the family of a wealthy swindler."

THE PROBLEM, according to Silbert, is that some judges give too much deference to the professional status or family ties of white-collar offenders. This, he said rather mildly, "creates in the eyes of the public a perception of preferential treatment by the criminal justice process for those with status and wealth."

He can say that again—several times a day, every day of the year. Every time an embezzler who went to the right schools and lives in a $250,000 house is caught and put on trial, his neighbors, friends, and even total strangers bemoan in print the disgrace to his family. He was "a good father." He was "well liked at the club."

I join in extending compassion to those close to the well-educated wealthy sailing and tennis enthusiast who is found guilty of stealing several hundred thousand dollars from his company. It is a terrible blow to his wife and children. Can one find pleasure in the family's shame?

BUT JUSTICE IS supposed to be even-handed. If the mugger who wrenched 50 bucks from a tourist goes to jail, it seems a bit much to hear a judge the next day speak of a big-time corporate crook as "a respected member of the community" and then put him on probation.

Indeed, the loot involved should figure in the judge's sentence. Where violence is not an issue, justice cries that the individual who stole $500,000 has done more injury to the community than the cutpurse who made off with $50.

In any case, this double standard is dangerous. It suggests to the small-time footpad that he is being persecuted because he's poor. Or, as a lawyer friend put it, "My client's fault was in not wearing a button-down collar, not sitting behind a big desk, and not stealing big."

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

It's Over For NOW

PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY may not realize it yet, but her war against the Equal Rights Amendment is about to get the female equivalent of the atom bomb from the Lady Libbers. They're going to ignore her.

No more counter-attacks on her distorted shots at ERA; no more defensive explanations that equal rights won't lead to unisex bathrooms, and no more crossfire over her smokescreen about homosexual marriages. From here on in, in the fight to make ERA a law, Mrs. Schlafly is a non-person.

That's the war cry of the National Association for Women, which has finally discovered that they've been wasting their time—and ammunition—trying to convince the public that Schlafly and her troops are misleading us with lies and distortions and that that's not what ERA is all about.

THE COUNTER-effort didn't work anyway. Not where it counts: in state legislatures. Most Americans say they're all for equal rights, but not enough of them went the rest of the way and pressured their representatives to vote for ratification.

As a result, the amendment has only 35 of the 38 states it needs and its momentum has died. It just isn't going anywhere. So NOW held a war council and came up with what may be the only effective way to shoot down the persuasive Schlafly.

They're going to pretend she just isn't there. And they're going to do what they should have done all along: promote the gut issue of ERA as "equal pay for equal work," regardless of sex.

That's what it's all about, really. But it's a basic goal that got lost somewhere along the line in the hair-pulling battles over bras, lesbians, sexual freedom and who's going to make papa support the little woman.

NOW LEADERS realize it's going to take a blockbuster campaign to change their negative image. And so they're going the Madison Avenue route, with a series of newspaper ads to accentuate the positive, and a high-powered advertising executive, Jane Trahey, running the show.

Miss Trahey, you'll remember, is the one who dreamed up the idea of photographing famous personalities in mink, without identification, and with only five words of copy: "What becomes a legend most?" It's a campaign every man in the advertising business wishes he'd though of first.

For NOW she's zeroing in on a new slogan, "ERA means equal pay." That's it. Forget the coed bathrooms, gay rights and all the rest; Miss Trahey is going for the jugular.

HER CAMPAIGN IS even going to be test-marketed, just the way Madison Avenue launches a new brand of coffee or mayonnaise. The target will be Chicago, where there are plenty of voters to help the Illinois legislature make up its mind on ERA.

She's rounded up a collection of real people who are willing to let their names and faces appear in a series of newspaper ads plugging ERA as persuasively as Joe Namath promoted panty hose (an equal-rights campaign if there ever was one).

They include a hospital administrator, a psychiatric nurse, a secretary, a black steelworker, and a nun who thinks maybe Illinois is "almost past praying for when it comes to equality for women."

THE PITCH FROM the hard-hat steelworker is that he wants a world where his 9-year-old daughter will have a chance to succeed or fail on the basis of her ability, not her sex. As a "member of a minority group," he says, "I know what women are facing."

Each of the ads suggests, politely, of course, that readers do a little arm-twisting on their elected representatives to vote for ERA and to persuade their colleagues to do the same.

If it works, the Trahey campaign will be used in other states which still haven't voted on ratification of ERA. NOW forces, who admit the Schlafly tactics have them backed into a corner, are counting on the newspaper blitz to block out her projection of them as "kooks, jack-booted harridans and screaming revolutionaries."

MEANWHILE, THERE'S another problem. The Pentagon has just asked Congress to lift its ban on women in combat and to let women volunteers fly fighters, serve in the infantry and draw duty aboard destroyers and aircraft carriers.

The generals and admirals say they have no "immediate" plans to assign females to frontline duty, but you can bet Schlafly and her army will latch onto that in a hurry. This could be the big test.

If NOW spokesmen (spokeswomen?) can manage to zip their lips, resist any angry rebuttal about "Army nurses serving in combat zones for 100 years, etc.," and keep plugging away on "ERA means equal pay," maybe they'll wing her on this one, too.

Maybe. And maybe that little nun better start praying for more than equal rights in Illinois.

THIS IS A translation from ancient Egyptian of a love song written between 1300 and 1100 B.C.:

"I think I'll go home and lie very still, feigning terminal illness/Then the neighbors will all troop over to stare, my love, perhaps, among them/How she'll smile while the specialists snarl in their teeth!/She perfectly well knows what ails me."

How could any Seasoned Citizen forget the Burma-Shave sign that went: "Cattle crossing...Please go slow... That old bull...Is some cow's beau!"

If that water is of normal temperature, the catfish in it will take 18 months to grow to a pound and a half. If the water is 20 degrees warmer than normal, the catfish will only need four months to grow that big.

Congressman Admits He Took Korean Bribes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard T. Hanna, a white-haired former congressman, confessed Friday that he took more than $200,000 for using his office to assist Tongsun Park, who allegedly schemed to buy support for South Korea on Capitol Hill.

In a plea bargaining deal with the government, in which 39 of 40 counts were dropped, Hanna became the first present or former congressman convicted in the Korean influence-buying scandal that has shaken Capitol Hill.

Hanna, a California Democrat, denied through his lawyer any knowledge of the alleged connection of Park, a rice dealer, to the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency (KCIA).

Hanna pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to a single count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government, thereby avoiding a trial that was scheduled to begin next week. He could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. No sentencing date was set pending a probation report and Hanna remains free.

As he was led from the courtroom for fingerprinting and processing, Hanna brushed past reporters and refused to talk.

Meanwhile, in another courtroom, a jury heard opening arguments in the trial of Hancho C. Kim, also charged in the Korean influence buying scandal. Kim, a Korean-born cosmetics salesman and Washington businessman, is charged with defrauding the government.

Hanna, who served in Congress from 1963 to 1974, wanted to give U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant "a simple exposition of what happened to me, where I went wrong," but the judge, following normal legal procedure, refused to listen to his explanation.

When reporters later asked Hanna if he knew Park to be an agent of the KCIA when he conspired with him, Hanna's lawyer, Charles McNelis, stepped in and said, "Definitely not."

In return for the guilty plea, federal prosecutors dropped 39 charges alleging that Hanna accepted bribes from Park, was involved in paying influence money to congressmen and was an unregistered agent for the South Korean government.

Federal prosecutors told the court they had lined up witnesses, including a former director of the KCIA, to prove the government's assertion that Hanna was part of a conspiracy of South Korean officials to buy influence in Congress.

Chief government prosecutor Jeffrey S. White read Hanna's statement to the court, in which Hanna admitted he agreed with South Korean businessman Tongsun Park to use his position as a congressman to further the financial interests of Park.

"For these acts, Hanna received from Park substantial amounts of money and other material considerations," the statement said. Federal prosecutors said the $200,000 included Hanna's share of Park's rice commissions.

Park also is under indictment, but the Justice Department has agreed to drop the charges against Park in exchange for his "truthful testimony" in other cases arising from the alleged influence buying. In continuing congressional hearings, Park has denied bribing congressmen or acting as an agent of the Seoul government.

Park, however, has admitted giving some 30 congressmen approximately $750,000 in political contributions and business payments.

White said the former KCIA director, Kim Hyung Wook, was prepared to testify that he helped make Tongsun Park South Korea's exclusive U.S. rice dealer after Hanna stated that some of the rice commission money would be paid to congressmen to "influence these congressmen to become pro-Korea."

The prosecutors' case was based largely on letters Hanna wrote to South Korean President Park Chung-hee and other Korean officials, claiming that he and Park, among other things, got House leaders' advice on influencing congressional hearings and got congressmen to reverse cuts in U.S. aid for South Korea.

Tornado Kills 22 In India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A tornado, something virtually unknown here, roared through the northern outskirts of Delhi on Friday, uprooting trees, smashing walls and flipping over crowded buses. Authorities said 22 persons were killed and 700 others injured.

The violent windstorm, which witnesses said lasted about two minutes, struck a two-square-mile area that included the campus of Delhi University. The old city of Delhi adjoins the Indian capital of New Delhi.

The tornado collapsed housing at an army installation, killing a family of four, and smashed in the roof of a poorhouse near the campus, injuring 23 persons, 10 seriously, authorities said.

persons, 10 seriously, authorities said.

"My bus was swept a furlong (one-eighth mile) by the storm and then this other bus, overturning five or six times, smashed into us," said driver Avtar Singh, 35. He said some of his passengers were injured but he was unhurt.

A police officer reported seeing a young woman swept off her feet twice by the winds. She later was rushed to a hospital with serious injuries, he said.

A street running through the campus was strewn with five wrecked buses, including one European-style doubledecker, in which dozens of people were injured. Hours after the tornado, police rescue squads using kerosene lamps searched for victims under toppled trees and brick walls.

"The tornado roared like a freight train coming through," said Michael Mayer , 26, of Miami, Fla., a graduate student who was in his Delhi University dormitory when the tornado hit.

"It was like a real American tornado with a mammoth funnel cloud about 75 yards in diameter," he said. "I dived under the bed but I felt the pressure as it smashed down inside."

Delhi residents said they had never heard of a tornado striking the inland city.

"If I told people across town what happened here, no one would believe me," said one man.

Communion Wafers Taken From Church

ALTAMONT, N.Y. (AP) — Police aren't sure, but they think the disappearance of about 200 consecrated Holy Communion wafers from a Roman Catholic Church here might be theft and might be related to a television series on Dracula.

"It sounds weird but this is a weird incident," said one investigator.

The disappearance of the wafers and the ciborium which contained them was discovered at 6:30 a.m. Thursday by the Rev. Joseph R. Romano, pastor of St. Lucy's Catholic Church in this rural suburb of Albany County.

The discovery of the theft followed the concluding episode of a Dracula series on a local public television station by several hours. In that episode, the antagonist drove the vampires out of England by ostentatiously breaking the wafers, which are considered sacred, and sprinkling pieces in the graves where the vampires lived.

Authorities said the box which held the wafers was of little value and they speculated that the theft may have had some symbolic importance to the thief.

Cold Shoulder Given Loyal Sons Of Eire

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Sure and we'll never know whether the lads were on the square, but on this St. Patrick's Day let it be known that a group of Fairbanks men once tried to buy Ireland.

None of them are around to talk about it, so it might have been a shenanigan cooked up in stove talk during the winter of 1907-1908, but such a proposal there was.

The offer, in a letter signed by Michael Gately, went to Ireland's chief secretary, the Right Honorable Augustine Birrell, in the spring of '08.

Gately said he represented a group of Irishmen, Irish-Americans, Americans and one Englishman who wanted to "ascertain through some official channel if England would feel disposed to sell Ireland and at what price."

He said the Fairbanks group felt England's "roughshod" treatment of Ireland and its expense in governing the country should dictate a moderate price for the island, then at the center of a home rule fight that went for decades more before the Irish Republic was formed.

"I may state that my friends desire it to be distinctly understood that in their purchase scheme no gain is contemplated — not on their side at least," Gately wrote.

"The purchase money will be advanced by them as a loan to the Irish people, who will be expected to pay it back as it suits their convenience, and they will not in any manner interfere with the management of the Irish nation by the Irish people."

Gately went on to say: "For several years past it has been almost unendurable to some men of Irish blood on the American continent — men who have acquired immense wealth and influence — to have the taunt flung in their faces that although they were rich and took a lively interest in Ireland's affairs, they tried no remedy to right her unheard of and prolonged wrongs."

In a story on the proposal, a Fairbanks newspaper described the men in Gately's group as extraordinary millionaires. But, alas, reaction to their proposal was about as encouraging as a wilted shamrock.

An aide to Birrell wrote Gately that the proposal was "quite impractical and could under no circumstances be carried out."

Court Lets Charges Die 'Natural Death'

EDINBURG (AP) — A South Texas judge whose court of inquiry into alleged misuse of federal funds resulted in charges aganst eight officials said Thursday that he's ending the investigation. The charges, he said, would likely "die a natural death."

State District Judge Joe Cisneros had convened the court of inquiry to investigate the activities of the Associated City-County Economic Development Corp., an anti-poverty agency, and the Hidalgo County Manpower Program.

He issued arrest warrants against eight persons, including three already-indicted anit-poverty agency officials and the mayors of two South Texas towns.

Cisneros said he no longer would pursue the inquiry because District Attorney Oscar McInnis would not present evidence from the court to the Hidalgo County grand jury.

"If there is no prosecution before July 1 this year, under the speedy trial act those so-called arrest warrants will die a natural death," Cisneros told reporters.

"There is no need for a state grand jury to consider those matters if the district attorney is not going to be interested to take them before the grand jury and seek indictments."

McInnis, who had counseled against the court of inquiry from the beginning, said he felt the investigation fell under federal jurisdiction and that the government had better resources to conduct an investigation.

McInnis said he felt the state investigation would duplicate federal efforts.

A federal grand jury in Brownsville already is looking into the two Hidalgo County agencies and the Greater South Texas Economic Programs (STEP) of Hebbronville.

Cisneros' court was prompted by a similar court of inquiry in neighboring Cameron County.

Cisneros' arrest warrants had been issued against:

—Eliseo Sandoval, former executive director of the ACCEDC, 10 counts of misapplication of funds.

—Nick Ramirez, director of the Hidalgo County Manpower Program, six counts of felony theft and one of official misconduct.

—Manpower accountant Ed Romeros, six counts of felony theft.

—LaJoya Mayor Leo J. Leo, charges of official misconduct.

—Hidalgo Mayor Ed Vela, one count of official misconduct and one of misapplication of funds.

—Evangelina Vela, wife the the mayor, one count of misapplication of funds.

—Former Manpower official Robert Adame, one count of official misconduct.

—Greater STEP employee Leonel Fernandez, one count of misapplication of funds.

Sandoval, Ramirez and Romeros had already been indicted in Cameron County.

Personal Income Shows Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Payroll gains for workers in most industries conributed to an overall $8.2 billion increase in Americans' personal income in Feburary, an 0.5 percent gain from a month earlier, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

The February increase in income exceeded an 0.2 percent gain in January, and was at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1,634.1 billion.

The Commerce Department said manufacturing payrolls were up $3.3 billion in February, reflecting increases in employment during the month, compared with a $1.4 billion increase in January.

Among industries registering the largest payroll gains, the agency said, were electrical and nonelectrical machinery, fabricated and primary metals, and apparel.

While factory payrolls were up, farm income was down sharply for the second consecutive month. It fell $3.5 billion, which was not as much as January's loss of $6.4 billion.

Overall wages and salaries increased $7.6 billion in February, down from $11.1 billion in January.

The Commerce Department said the gain was reduced by about $1.5 billion because of layoffs resulting from the coal strike.

Hill, Briscoe Meeting Heated

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Attorney General John Hill went nose-to-nose Friday over their investigations of each other.

Each of the contenders for the governor's office was scheduled to speak before a meeting of the Texas Senior Citizens Committee, and Hill, who arrived early, stalked Briscoe while the governor was concluding his remarks.

Hill made his way to a door that Briscoe was going to use as an exit, then confronted him as newsmen and well-wishers ringed the pair.

Hill then asked Briscoe if he would consider postponing a proposed audit of federal grant programs in the attorney general's Organized Crime Division.

"I would well understand why you want that, but I can tell you it's not gonna be," Briscoe said.

Hill then said he wanted the audit postponed because it would pull one of his key investigators from the task force investigating the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs. "Is that all right?" Hill asked.

"We will go ahead as planned," Briscoe said.

"I don't see the difference in going ahead and waiting a few weeks," Hill said. Prior to beginning his speech, Hill called Briscoe's proposed audit "pure politics."

Later, Briscoe added more heat to the situation when asked what some of the allegations were against Hill's crime unit. Briscoe said he understood those allegations include "attorneys running around carrying concealed weapons" and that the unit "has all the makings of a secret police."

Told about those remarks, Hill asked: "Was it a private police force when we cleaned up Duval County...Was it a private police force when we cleaned up Starr County?"

Nazi Indicted For Assault

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Frank Collin, director of the National Socialist Party of America, has been indicted on a charge of striking the police chief of Florissant, Mo., during a Nazi demonstration outside Florissant City Hall.

The indictment was returned Thursday by a St. Louis County grand jury. It said Collin, 33, of Chicago, and Harris J. Hunter, 22, also of Chicago, engaged in a street fight Oct. 8 outside the City Hall and struck Police Chief Robert Treuken during the skirmish.

Florissant had denied the Nazis a permit to hold a rally on city property.

Collin and Hunter have denied that they struck Trueiken.

STAGE TO CHURCH

The English dramatist and satrist John Marston, born in 1575, set out to study law at Oxford University and eventually turned to the writing of drama in 1599. After writing a number of satricial comedies, he suddenly gave up the stage in 1616 and went into the Church, where he spent most of the remainder of huis life as a country vicar.

Urban Emphasis Changes Noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris expressed optimism Friday that a cohesive urban policy can influence business to help resuscitate the nation's cities.

She said there no longer is the assumption "that the only way to improve housing stock is to raze. The elimination of that idea is probably the best thing that has happened to the cities."

Another key change in attitude has been the recognition that improvements rarely come through "massive changes. They have to come incrementally," she said.

She said Carter's urban policy, which is due to be revealed later this month, will emphasize the piecemeal city preservation movement.

Senators questioning Mrs. Harris at a Budget Committee hearing were skeptical that the policies could reverse urban migration.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla, said a Library of Congress study indicated that incentives such as tax breaks had not kept business from moving out of urban areas or, if they relocate from one part of the country to another, from choosing a suburban rather than an inner city site.

Harris and assistant secretary Donna Shalala said that local tax incentives had not been strong enough to reverse the migration. But the Carter administration hopes that the local incentives, used in combination with an array of federal urban programs, will do the job, they said.

Bellmon said that International Business Machines, for example, had moved out of downtown New York City to White Plains, N.Y., several years ago and probably no federal policy could have stopped this. He noted their profits had not suffered from the move. qumrs.

Harris said she would have questioned the corporation's move if she had been on IBM's board at that time. She said the move came before the city's fiscal problems mounted, however, and could have been motivated by something as frivilous as the officers' desire to have a shorter drive to work since many live in neighboring Westchester County.

She agreed that HUD might not have been able to influence the decision but said business and the cities generally are more attuned to the need to preserve downtowns and federal policies can help reinforce this trend.

Many cities of 300,000 population have the same problems as New York, said Sen. Pete Dominici, R-N.M. "Despite prettying up their downtowns with malls or putting their police on horses to show crime is down," few are reversing the erosion, he said.

"I'm with you if we have a way but I think we have a number of (urban renewal) pilots out there that haven't worked and I think they have the same ingredients you are going to put into the national war (on urban blight)," Dominici said.

Mrs. Harris said the battle had to be fought on a comprehensive scale.

She said the government wants to encourage new and contemporary uses of cities, acknowledging that the previous prime purpose of housing manufacturing has changed.

"We're not going to put Humpty Dumpty back on the wall. We're going to make a very good omelet," she said.

U.S.-South Korean War Games End

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An 11-day, U.S.-South Korean military exercise involving 107,000 soldiers ended today. Its coordinating commander, Gen. John Vessey, called it "very successful."

The United States is withdrawing 33,000 soldiers from Korea over the next five years. The exercise involved 20,000 of those men, 22,000 U.S. soldiers from outside the country and 65,000 South Koreans.

Italians Search For Premier

ROME (AP) — Thousands of troops and police scoured hillside caves, isolated farmhouses and miles of coastline Friday in a desperate search for kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro. A grieving and nervous nation debated how to combat a wave of terrorism and feared Italy had become the target of an international guerrilla cabal.

Late Friday night, police announced that Gianfranco Moreno, 32, had been jailed as a suspect — the first person held in the case, but investigators said they had no firm clues to Moro's whereabouts or condition.

Jittery policemen in Milan shot and killed a young man who disobeyed a stop order at a roadblock. Investigators said later the 18-year-old apparently had no connection with the kidnap.

A saddened public lay flowers on the Rome street corner where Moro was abducted and his five bodyguards killed Thursday in a cold-blooded ambush.

In Turin, Judge Guido Barbera said he expects the trial of 15 Red Brigades leaders to go on as scheduled Monday, despite anonymous threats that the 61-year-old Moro would be killed if the defendants are not freed.

The Marxist revolutionary Red Brigades claim to be holding Moro and have vowed to disrupt the Turin trial. Another purported Red Brigades message received Friday threatened to "liquidate" him Saturday and take other hostages if the group's jailed members are not released.

"We can hit wherever we want, in any way we want, as you have seen. We can even liquidate 50," the anonymous caller told an Italian news agency.

Investigators said Friday they had no new clues in the hunt for the man who ranks as Italy's most influential politician — head of Italy's dominant Christian Democrat Party and the country's probable next president. Police also said they were still unsure whether Moro was hurt in the deadly street ambush.

Searchers early Friday found the second car used in the terrorists' getaway. Like the first it had bloodstains inside, and specialists were checking to determine whether the blood was Moro's. Police believe one of the kidnappers may have been wounded, however.

Authorities also expressed fears for the health of the five-time former premier under harsh kidnap conditions. Moro is said to be in need of medical attention as a result of kidney surgery two years ago.

The second car was found parked not far from the kidnap scene, leading police to believe Moro might be held captive in the vicinity, Rome's suburban Monte Mario section.

A house-to-house search was extended to the surrounding countryside. Customs police checked nearby Mediterranean waters and helicopters criss-crossed the skies northwest of Rome.

Authorities appealed to the public for help, circulating the names and photos of 16 men and two women described as Red Brigades members wanted for questioning. Composite sketches of two suspects, drawn from eyewitness descriptions, also were circulated.

Unconfirmed reports spread of a possible international terrorist connection in the Moro abduction. One of the legion of anonymous callers claiming responsibility for the attack identified himself as a member of West Germany's Baader-Meinhof terror gang. "Moro is with us," he said.

Police said they could not verify the authenticity of the calls, but investigators, though lacking firm evidence, believe urban terrorism has international connections.

After a leadership meeting of the Communist Party, which has denounced the Red Brigades, party official Giancarlo Pajetta said, "Above all the Italian government must be sure that no power or secret services are involved in this matter."

Christian Democrat Premier Giulio Andreotti called in his ministers and top security officials to consider new steps against terrorism, including possible declaration of "a state of danger" that could give police power of arrest without charge.

Other measures being considered were re-introduction of the death penalty and imposition of a curfew or martial law.

Initial reaction was negative. The powerful national labor federation, incorporating the Communists as well as Christian Democrats, declared it opposes any "special and exceptional laws." A Christian Democrat publication said such measures are what the terrorists want.

Kennedy Attorneys Pay Fine

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — Attorneys paid a $50 traffic fine for Caroline Kennedy after a judge accepted her plea of guilty to a speeding charge that was reduced in a plea-bargaining agreement.

Suffolk County Judge Lawrence Newmark accepted the agreement and the fine was paid on Friday by attorneys Donald Noonan and Thomas McVann, both of Westhampton Beach.

Miss Kennedy, 20, daughter of the late president, said she was "thoroughly sorry for the inconvenience" to everyone and "glad it was taken care of," according to Noonan. He reached her by telephone in Boston where she is attending Radcliffe College.

The agreement, reached with county District Attorney Patrick Henry, reduced the charge from driving 86 mph in a 55 mph zone to driving at 70 mph. Maximum penalty on the original charge is revocation of driver's license, a $100 fine and 30 days in jail.

Miss Kennedy was shown no special favors because traffic charges often are reduced for first offenders, the judge said.

Miss Kennedy was driving to the Hamptons, a group of resort communities on Long Island, when she was ticketed on July 4.

Customs 'Hit' With Orchestra

TOKYO (AP) — Seiji Ozawa, conductor of the Boston Symphony, says he's introduced the 106 members of the orchestra to the customs of a Japanese inn, including Japanese bathing.

Though communal, or mixed, bathing exists in some Japanese inns, the musicians were divided up into men's and women's baths at the inn, near Kanazawa on the Japan Sea.

Ozawa said he toyed with the idea of opening the doors between the two rooms but changed his mind.

"I thought the Boston Symphony was not ready for that," he told foreign correspondents here Friday.

Burglar Gets Stuck In Chimney

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Ricardo Riddick spent part of his 23rd birthday in a supermarket chimney. The rest of the day he spent in jail, charged with attempted burglary.

Police said Riddick became stuck at about 2 a.m. Friday when he tried to climb down the 28-foot-tall brick smokestack at Forston's Supermarket. He was too big for it, they said, and got stuck about 15 feet down.

When the store owner, E. Earl Forston, opened up at 8 a.m., Riddick was shouting for help.

"I heard him hollering, 'Somebody help me! Today's my birthday, and I don't want to spend it in a chimney,'" Forston said.

Forston called police, and police brought firemen, who climbed to the roof and yanked Riddick from inside the chimney. Then the police took him to jail.

"I cut the heat out in there last night, and he was freezing to death," Forston said.

Temperatures had dropped to 37 degrees overnight.

Couple Settles Dispute Peacefully

ALDEN, Mich. (AP) — Lena Anderson, 86, didn't like the idea of her 89-year-old husband, Clarence, climbing up and down a ladder to the roof of their two-story home. So she took the ladder away — while he was up there.

Then she called police.

"I got there and here was this sweet little old lady out in front of the house, pointing at the old boy up there on the roof," Antrim County deputy Don Snyder said Friday. "He sort of smiled down at me, kind of embarrassed, I guess."

Anderson had gone to the roof to shovel off some snow, and his wife was afraid he would fall if he tried to climb down unaided, she told sheriff's deputies. The deputy propped the ladder against the house and Anderson climbed down without help, chided his wife and then promised he wouldn't go up on the roof any more.

The couple embraced and then invited the deputy in for coffee.

"It is the opinion of this officer the couple should live happily ever after," Snyder reported after the incident on Wednesday.

Probated Term Set In Burglary Trial

District Judge Thomas L. Clinton Friday gave a convicted burglar his second probated prison term.

Stanley Joe Plunk, 22, formerly of Lubbock, but now living in Denton County, was convicted in 99th District Court here Thursday of burglary of a building.

Officers testified Plunk was found inside the Curry Motor Freight Lines Inc. at 2809 Ave C at 4:10 a.m. March 13, 1977.

The defendant, who had worked for the company for about a month before the incident occurred, maintained he was inside the building because he had seen a flashlight there and was checking it out.

The jury deliberated about 5½ hours before finding him guilty.

Clinton sentenced the man to a three year probated prison term.

Plunk has already served a two year probated sentence for theft of a motorcycle in Dallas County.

South Lebanon Peace Arrangement Pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department reaffirmed Friday that it "wants and expects" Israel to withdraw its forces from southern Lebanon but said it is also pursuing arrangements that would guarantee future stability and security in the area.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters the United States was promoting these objectives through a series of diplomatic contacts here, at the United Nations and in various Middle East capitals.

The focus of attention was at the U.N. where both the Israeli and Lebanese governments have requested a meeting of the U.N. Security Council.

Carter said the administration was weighing several possible courses of action but that it was leaning towards support of an international peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon.

Carter refused to set a date by which the administration believes the Israeli withdrawal should take place nor would he comment on administration thinking about the makeup of an international peacekeeping force.

He conceded that the Palestinian terrorist raid into Israel last weekend and the retaliatory Israeli strike against Palestinian positions in southern Lebanon are not conducive to peace.

But Carter said these events shouldn't necessarily rule out a continuation of Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations.

Meanwhile, other State Department officials told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Mideast peace negotiations will be hindered until Israel withdraws from southern Lebanon.

"Our whole hope is that it will be possible to move quickly toward getting the force that will make it possible for Israel to withdraw quickly," special envoy Alfred Atherton told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Harold H. Saunders, the State Department intelligence director nominated to succeed Atherton as assistant secretary for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, told the panel the administration expects such an international force to prevent new terrorist attacks on Israel from Palestine Liberation Organization bases in Lebanon.

A PLO attack last Saturday left 33 civilians dead and triggered Israeli counterattacks and occupation of parts of PLO-controlled Lebanon that border on Israel.

Atherton said talks are underway with members of the United Nations Security Council and others on creation of a peacekeeping force. Saunders said considerations involved in the makeup of such a force include acceptibility to Lebanon and Israel, willingness of the nations involved to accept the risk of armed conflict and the immediate availability of appropriate military units.

"What is needed is a force to prevent the return of those groups that will turn that part of Lebanon into a battleground," Saunders said. "The force would have to have more than an observer role. Clearly it would have to be a force with a mandate to control access to the territory in question."

Both men indicated the United States will not insist that Israel withdraw until an international military force can reach the area. But Atherton said, "A prolonged Israeli presence will become a central issue of debate and it will become a factor in making peace negotiations much more difficult."

"For the sake of peace progress and in the interests of restoring stability in Lebanon there must be an Israeli withdrawal," Saunders added.

Asked about reports that the military arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization, has received large cash grants from Saudi Arabia, Atherton replied that Saudi Arabia states that it is not its policy to support terrorist groups.

Thousands Of Refugees Depart Tyre

TYRE, Lebanon (UPI) — Thousands of refugees streamed out of Tyre Friday in search of the safety, food and water denied to them by attacks from Israeli warjets, gunboats and artillery.

On the political front, Foreign Minister Fuad Butros said Washington and Moscow's opposition to the massive Israeli invasion along the 64-mile border may help to end the three days of warfare.

Israeli Kfir, Skyhawk, Mirage and Phantom warjets battered Palestinian positions throughout south Lebanon as guerrillas attacked Israeli supply routes and troop concentrations. American-built F-15 fighters flew reconnaisance over the area but did not take any combat role.

"Everything is closed down in Tyre and we are out of everything," said a resident of the port, 10 miles north of the border. "We have no water, electricity or food. The migration from the area is heavy. It is frightening."

Officials estimate 40,000 civilians have fled northward since Tuesday, most to Beirut where mosques and schools were jammed and officials said refugees were breaking into empty homes.

A Palestine Liberation Organization spokesman estimated 75 guerrillas were killed in the past three days, as well as more than 200 Lebanese and Palestinian civilians. Another 150 civilians are missing.

The Israeli warplanes bombed and straffed the areas of Bourgholieh, Adloun, Ansar, and Bourj ech Chemali in the Tyre region while Israeli gunboats shelled them from offshore.

Guerrilla officials said a string of counterattacks hit Israeli supply routes and troop concentrations behind the frontlines. In southeast Lebanon, the Palestinians said they recaptured the town of Kaoukaba with a barrage of Soviet-made "Grad" missiles.

The guerrillas confirmed that an Israeli commando squad assassinated the military leader of the Palestinian Rejectionist Front in a highway ambush north of Tyre. Witnesses said more than 20 civilians were also killed in the ambush.

(In Tel Aviv, Israeli defense minister Ezer Weizman confirmed a top aide of guerrilla chieftain George Habash was killed in a commando raid and conceded some civilians "may have been hurt.")

The slain Palestinian leader was identified by a guerrilla spokesman as Jihad Carlos. The spokesman laughed and denied it when asked if it was notorious Venezuelan terrorist Ilyich Ramirez, alias "Carlos."

Butros said he requested an emergency U.N. Security Council meeting because, "the frank attitude adopted by the United States and the position taken by the Soviet Union could help in resolving the effects of the Israeli aggression."

Moscow condemned the incursion while Washington proposed a U.N. peacekeeping unit would occupy the border zone to ensure it is clear of Palestinians — Israel's stated objective in launching the invasion.

China 'Successfully' Holds Nuclear Test

TOKYO (AP) — China confirmed it had "successfully" conducted a nuclear test. The Peking Radio broadcast did not give the yield range, test site or other details.

The U.S. Energy Department said Wednesday the blast was in the atmosphere, set off at the nuclear testing site in Lop Nor.

Middle East Debate Set

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. Security Council called a formal meeting Friday afternoon to debate the latest Middle East crisis — a session that almost certainly would deal with Washington's proposal for a U.N. peace-keeping force in southern Lebanon.

The meeting was called after Israel and Lebanon requested the already beleaguered 15-member Council to step into the situation.

The Israeli and Lebanese ambassadors delivered their requests even as the Council was wrapping up back-to-back debates on Rhodesia by slapping Prime Minister Ian Smith's regime for the second time in three days — this time for Rhodesian raids into neighboring Zambia March 6-8.

British U.N. Ambassador Ivor Richard, this month's president of the Security Council, immediately called closed-door consultations on the Middle East issue Friday afternoon to prepare for a full Council debate.

Richard met with Lebanese U.N. Ambassador Ghassan Tueni, who delivered the formal complaint that Lebanese Prime Minister Selim al Hoss had promised over Israel's invasion of southern Lebanon. Lebanon requested an "urgent meeting" of the Security Council.

Israeli U.N. Ambassador Chaim Herzog delivered a letter to Richard asking for a Council meeting "to consider continuous acts of terror and violence against Israeli civilians together with the frequent shelling ... incursions, bombings and murder being perpetrated from Lebanese territory."

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, meanwhile, conferred by telephone with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance over the U.S. proposal for a U.N. peace-keeping force to replace Israeli troops in southern Lebanon.

Such a peace-keeping force would have to be approved by the Security Council.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman said earlier that, as to the U.N. force, "anything that can give a solution, we shall look into."

The Security Council cleared the decks for the Middle East issue by voting 15-0 for a Third World-sponsored resolution that "strongly condemns the recent armed invasion" of Zambia by Rhodesian troops. Rhodesia said earlier that the 38 persons killed in the raids were black nationalist guerrillas.

The Council on Tuesday voted to declare as "illegal and unacceptable" any "internal settlement" generated by the Smith regime. That 10-0 vote, however, was weakened by abstentions from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada.

Canal Treaties Letter Exchange Angers Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos earlier this week that his administration had been able to prevent changes that contradicted the original intent of the Panama Canal treaties, it was disclosed Friday.

Copies of an exchange of letters between Carter and Torrijos, dated March 15, were furnished to the Senate at the request of Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, a treaty supporter.

In his letter to Carter, the Panamanian leader reserved judgment on Senate changes to the canal treaties, but pledged to "study carefully" the reservations added. Torrijos said he would give a detailed reply after the second of the two pacts is ratified.

In his letter, however, Torrijos also appeared to interpret Carter's message in somewhat broader and sharper terms, saying he understood it to mean that Senate reservations would not "alter or detract from the content" of the treaty or a joint clarifying statement issued by the two leaders last Oct. 14.

Byrd asked the White House for copies of the letter in an apparent effort to blunt attempts by treaty opponents to raise a new controversy.

Some anti-treaty forces reportedly were angered because Carter did not tell the Senate about the letters before Thursday's ratification of the first of the two treaties — the neutrality pact — by a 68-32 vote, with but one vote to spare.

"Some senators supported the treaty only because they believed the reservations made important improvements," said an aide to one treaty opponent. "If we'd known about Carter's assurances to Torrijos that the reservations being added didn't change the treaty, some might have voted the other way," said the aide who declined to be identified.

Both letters had been released previously by the White House but were not sent to the Senate. The White House also had confirmed earlier that Carter talked with Torrijos by phone the day before the vote.

There was no immediate comment from Carter aides on why the letters weren't furnished to the Senate.

The exchange between Carter and Torrijos dealt with the reservation attached to the neutrality treaty just before it was ratified. The reservation specifies that the United States has a right to use military force or any other means to keep the canal open after the year 2000.

Panama has objected strenuously to any treaty provision that would allow the United States to keep military forces in Panama or to "intervene" in its internal affairs after the turnover of the canal.

Carter reluctantly agreed to the reservation in order to hold onto the pro-treaty vote of its sponsor, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and questions quickly arose as to whether the Panamanians could accept it.

Panamanian officials were quoted as saying they were not happy about DeConcini's reservation, and that they would insist that the final version of the treaties not allow U.S. intervention in internal Panamanian affairs because of "wrongly put" words, commas or phrases.

The White House confirmed Thursday that Carter had telephoned Torrijos with assurances that the change was not detrimental. Only later was it disclosed there also had been an exchange of letters between the two leaders.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., a leading treaty foe, was preparing a speech demanding to know why the White House did not make the letters available before the ratification vote. But when the issue was brought up on the floor by other treaty opponents, Byrd consented to the request.

Already facing a new round of verbal turmoil over the Panama Canal, Senate leaders said they will try to work out an agreement to dispose of the second canal treaty as quickly as possible.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said debate on the second pact could last as long as the first — six weeks — "but I don't believe it will."

Byrd said he would like to bring the second treaty to a final vote in the week of April 10. To do that would require the consent of treaty opponents.

Panamanian Leaders Worry About Canal Pact Changes

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanian leaders said Friday they are worried that U.S. Senate changes in the first Panama Canal treaty may have made it unacceptable here.

Romulo Escobar Bethancourt and Aristides Royo, Panama's top treaty negotiators, outlined the government's official concern over the changes in a meeting with Panamanian reporters. Foreign reporters were barred from the meeting.

Escobar Bethancourt was quoted by sources as saying Thursday night "was not a night of jubilation for the government, it was a night of uncertainty."

The Senate passed the first of two Panama Canal treaties Thursday after making changes in the pact. The measure approved by the Senate guarantees neutrality of the canal after the year 2000.

The Senate approved the treaty after adding two amendments and two reservations to the instruments of ratification.

A Panamanian government source said the changes had thrown cold water on what would have been a jubilant celebration had the treaty not been altered.

The change that caused most concern, the sources said, was one suggested by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., that would give the United States the right to intervene with military force to "reopen the canal or restore operations."

Sources emerging from the meeting with Panamanian journalists said Escobar Bethancourt felt the addition could leave Panama open to invasion by the United States under many pretexts.

Escobar Bethancourt said if an epidemic threatened operation of the canal, the addition to the treaty could be used as an excuse to send in American troops, the sources said.

Escobar Bethancourt also said Friday the Panamanian government is afraid the Senate will change the second treaty so much it will cause demonstrations here, according to the sources.

More than a dozen students demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy Friday morning, handing out leaflets headlined "No to Blackmail" and calling on Panamanians to reject the treaties. The students say Panama should have sovereignty over the canal immediately, not in the year 2000, as provided in the second treaty.

In a related development, the Panamenista Party, from which Gen. Omar Torrijos seized power in 1968, issued a statement calling for a new referendum. Panamanians already have approved the treaties in a plebiscite.

"If the dictatorship evades the plebiscite and accepts the amendments and reservations, the present generation and the Panamanians of the year 2000 may morally and legally disown the amendments, reservations and understandings forced on them by the autocratic regime," the statement said. "The Panmenista Party declares that only the Panamanian people, through a free and honest plebiscite, may decide on the acceptance or rejection of the amendments and reservations."

Rallies staged by the Panamenista Party usually attract thousands of people.

Ordinary Panamian citizens had mixed feelings about the Senate's actions.

"I think the treaty is a great thing for the people of Panama but I don't know about the changes made in the United States," said taxi driver Manuel Campos Lara, 56. "It seems to me that one of those changes says the United States can come back into the canal any time it wants to. I don't like that. We'll just have to see what the government decides."

A man who would not give his name said the treaties "are a mistake. All Panamanans know how to do is borrow and borrow," he said. "The canal will be in trouble when we get it and everyone knows that. People here can't say anything about it, they just have to take what the government tells them."

Several Americans said they were not surprised that the treaty passed. Scott Hitti, 17, said he and other students booed when they heard on the radio the treaty had been approved. He said many students were warned by their parents to stay out of Panama City in the event the treaty was rejected, for fear of possible riots.

Hopi Tribe Seeks Flood Aid

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Hopi tribe, forced to borrow money to aid stranded families during recent flooding while a government airlift aided the neighboring Navajo tribe, hopes to get $500,000 in federal aid to help repair damages.

"The damage could be close to $1 million, and we hope to get at least $500,000," Hopi tribal chairman Abbott Sekaquaptewa said Friday.

The Hopi tribe borrowed money from the Bureau of Indian Affairs to rent two helicopters to airlift food and medical supplies to isolated families on the reservation last week. At the same time, a National Guard airlift operation provided aid to the Navajo reservation at the request of Navajo tribal leaders, who had appealed to Washington for help.

"We borrowed the money to provide our own support," Sekaquaptewa said. "We have many Navajo families under our jurisdiction, and we had to assist them."

Bill Williams of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration in Phoenix said the Hopi Reservation has been declared eligible for aid, and the amount of assistance will be determined within a week.

"We want to give them the aid so they can fix the homes," he said, "but outside of that they don't want any outside help. They will do it on their own."

More than 400 homes were damaged as water soaked into mud roofs, creating leaks that resulted in safety and health hazards, Sekaquaptewa said.

"Where we were left out was assistance to meet our own needs, mainly damage to homes," he said. "We have 175 real emergency cases and they need immediate help."

Damage to dirt roads that isolated 2,500 people on the reservation is being repaired, thanks to several days of dry weather.

Money borrowed from the BIA for the Hopi airlift has to be repaid, Sekaquaptewa said.

"We had to take the money from regular funds, and we will have to resolve that later on," he said.

STATUARY HALL

The National Statuary Hall in the U.S. Capitol occupies the original quarters of the House of Representatives. It was created in 1864 and each state was invited to contribute not more than two statues of distinguished persons. In 1933 the number was limited to one statue from each state. To date a total of 91 statues has been contributed by the 50 states.

Pleasant Weather Brings Lull In City Crime

Pleasant weather appeared to have simulated a minor crime lull in the city Friday, but police still were investigating a number of varied criminal incidents, including the theft of a family's dog, more vandalism and the latest report of stolen wheelcovers.

Sibyly Smith of 4413 44th St. said someone stole her dog -- a pomeranian — Friday. The animal reportedly was found missing in the backyard when the woman checked.

Elsewhere, vandals struck two vehicles in the east parking lot at 5434 40th St. Friday. Bill Cottrell said headlights, taillights and radio antennae had been broken on the cars, and the hood had been pried without success.

John Johnson said he'd have to pay $500 to replace the hubcaps stolen from his car parked at his 5208 11th St. residence Wednesday.

Warm weather also brought out that old nemesis Friday — the bike thief. Capitola Rice of 2802 Colgate St. said a cycle valued at $140 was stolen from his house.

Meanwhile, a gap between the top of a wall and the ceiling provided the necessary access for a burglar Friday, said Vera A. Trott, manager of a fabric outlet at 6508 Ave. U. The woman told police someone had scaled a wall, gone over the top and taken $247 from a desk drawer. The door leading into the office reportedly was locked when the burglary occurred.

Security guard Ladeana Sant of the Globe Department Store, 3201 Ave. Q, said a woman allegedly stole about $100 worth of clothing Friday. The suspect, an 18-year-old black woman, was arrested on suspicion of shoplifting.

Rape charges were filed Friday against 29-year-old Lubbock man in connection with an alleged assault on a 16-year-old girl.

Charged was Eddie Carl Pipkins of 500 E. Broadway, No. 12.

The victim told officers that she and a cousin had gone to the suspect's apartment to play cards, but lacked enough people for the game.

She said that her cousin left to get someone else for the game, and that while she and the suspect were alone, he beat her with his fist and a bottle and raped her.

The assault is said to have occurred Thursday.

Officers said that while they were sitting in their patrol car interviewing the complainant, she suddenly looked up and pointed out a man across the street as her attacker.

An apparent case of criminal mischief-sabotage had police baffled after someone reportedly cut guy wires on a utility pole, causing it to fall across a section of Quaker Avenue late Thursday.

No one was injured when the pole, which held telephone and railroad lines, fell in the 1900 block of Quaker Avenue about 7:45 p.m.

According to reports, a pair of 36-inch bolt cutters was found at the scene, and police said two guy wires had been severed.

An attendant at a nearby service station told officers he noticed the pole falling, but saw no one in the immediate vicinity at the time.

The damage and repair estimate was set at $3,500.

Alton Travis Leach of 6801 19th St., No. 40, told police he lost $1,000 worth of clothing to whoever broke a window on his vehicle parked in the 1700-block of 4th Street Thursday.

Cynthia Kay Whitworth of 1912 10th St., No. 3, complained that whoever pushed out a piece of cardboard in her front window Thursday made off with her $250 television set.

According to Ernest Amaya of 2613 E. 19th St., someone kicked open a door at his home Thursday and got away with his television and wallet, together valued at $128.

And police, for some reason, did not believe the story of a 49-year-old Lubbock man Thursday afternoon when he said the city was paying him to hold up a stop sign in the 200-block of Temple Avenue.

A few minutes after approaching the man wrapped around the sign, officers arrested him on suspicion of being drunk.

A 20-year-old Lubbock optician told police she had left her apartment Thursday, gone to the parking lot to get in her car and was unlocking the doors when a man walked from behind another car.

The stunned woman said the man walked around to the passenger side of her car as she jumped in her vehicle and locked the doors.

The victim said the grinning man was wearing only one thing: his skin.

Later, the woman told police the man had short hair and bushy eyebrows.

Meanwhile, a 51-year-old hairdresser told police a booth mate at a local bar Wednesday began going through her purse as though searching for a cigarette lighter, but later the woman said she realized the man may have stolen $2,800 from her clutch.

Meat Industry Defends Bacon, Urges Continued Use Of Nitrite

WASHINGTON (AP) — The meat industry declared Friday that bacon is safe to eat and that the government should allow processors to continue using sodium nitrite in making it.

The American Meat Institute said, however, that its study shows that the amount of nitrite used in making bacon should be reduced, to be on the safe side.

The institute, which is supported by the meat industry, also said the government should allow use of vitamin compounds in making bacon to help block the formation of potentially cancer-causing substances.

Sodium nitrite is used as a curing agent by meat processors to guard against the formation of botulism in bacon and other products. However, under certain conditions, nitrites can combine with other substances to form nitrosamine, a potent cancer-causing agent.

Some consumer advocates have urged the government to ban use of nitrite from food products.

Last fall, the Agriculture Department ordered the meat industry to provide evidence on cancer-related dangers from the use of nitrite and its chemical parent, nitrate, in bacon. The deadline for the report was Friday.

"Bacon, as produced today, is not a health hazard," the institute said. "It is, however, possible to reduce the formation of nitrosamines in fried bacon by lowering the amounts of sodium nitrite and including sodium ascorbate (vitamin C) or isoascorbate."

The institute added that research is under way on further reducing nitrosamines in bacon.

However, the institute disputed the basis for some advocates' seeking a ban on nitrite in the bacon-curing process. It noted that nitrates and nitrite have been used "for literally thousands of years" to cure meat and protect consumers against food poisoning.

"If nitrite were banned, the danger from food poisoning would be increased to a degree that is difficult to assess," the institute said, adding that meat products represent "only a minor source" of nitrate and nitrite in the human diet.

"Green, leafy vegetables, such as spinach and celery, contribute far more nitrate and more than 80 percent of the nitrite entering the stomach originates in saliva," the institute said.

The department has had an expert panel studying the nitrite question since 1973. It has recommended that steps be taken to reduce nitrosamines, including the use of less nitrite and approval of vitamin compounds in bacon to help block the formation of nitrosamines.

Brewery Funds Probed

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Olympia Brewing Co. may have spent $285,000 to improperly influence beer sales, a company proxy statement says.

Two federal agencies still are investigating the questioned payments, the Olympia, Wash., brewery said in its annual meeting notice.

The $285,000 in questionable payments may have been made by Olympia before the end of 1973, a special committee of outside directors, appointed by the brewery's board, said in the notice.

That figure is $130,000 more than the amount estimated by the company after a 1972 investigation and reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Investigations by the Oregon and Washington liquor control agencies resulted in fines and beer distribution suspensions against Olympia last year. Washington imposed a $25,000 fine and Oregon assessed a $15,000 fine and 14-day suspension of distribution rights.

The Internal Revenue Service has told Olympia it will be liable on taxes for $230,000 of the payments. The brewery said it had set aside $326,496 for added federal taxes and penalties.

In addition to an IRS investigation, the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms also is looking into the payments.

The payments disclosed Thursday were "made by the company in order to encourage sales in violation of state and federal liquor control and other laws," the proxy statement said.

"Management believes the $285,000 maximum reported by the special committee is overstated," the proxy notice said. "Nevertheless, because the special committee did not in each instance attempt to trace the ultimate use of the funds, the company is unable to conclude with certainty whether their ultimate use was for legal, illegal or questionable purposes."

The newly discovered funds included a payment to a distributor and an illegal rebate to another distributor, according to the statement.

Some of the payments were made to a corporation "which may have been organized" by a former vice president of marketing "to serve in part as a vehicle for making questionable payments," it said.

Nine employees who submitted $7,500 in fictitious expense account vouchers to provide funds for the payments still work for Olympia and five of the nine have been promoted, the committee said.

Freight Line Gets Rights To Haul

T.I.M.E.-DC Inc. has purchased from Strickland Transportation Co. all of the firm's operating rights between Chicago, Ill., and Milwaukee, Wisc., according to a joint announcement by Hugh C. Shurtleff, president of T.I.M.E.-DC, and David Gantz, president of Wilson Freight Co. and operator of Strickland.

The transaction will extend T.I.M.E.-DC's operation into the Milwaukee market, Shurtleff said.

The purchase is subject to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

T.I.M.E.-DC currently is filing application with ICC for approval to operate the Strickland rights under temporary authority.

Group Petitions To Submit Brief

A petition was filed in U.S. District Court Friday asking federal Judge Halbert O. Woodward to grant the Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools "friend of the court" status in Lubbock's school desegregation case.

If Woodward approves the request, CASS will submit a brief asking the judge to seek testimony from expert witnesses regarding the integration plan proposed by the Lubbock Independent School District.

The alliance, an advocate of system-wide integration, has criticized some major aspects of the school board's plan.

PTA To Campaign Against Big City Despair Of Pupils

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National PTA said Friday it will mount a national campaign to "reverse the human deterioration" in America's big cities.

The 40 percent unemployment rate among minority youth has made a sharp impact on urban schools, where students "despair" for their future, said PTA President Grace Baisinger.

She said the PTA will begin a series of hearings around the country this fall to "serve as a forum for parents to identify the problems which affect their children's education and to develop the goals which urban education should meet." Hearing sites have not been chosen.

The organization staged similar meetings a year ago in preparing a report on violence in television.

The PTA has 6.4 million members, with chapters in large cities such as Chicago and Atlanta but not in New York.

"The traditional emphasis of PTAs has not been on urban centers as such," said Becky Schergens, PTA executive director.

The campaign was announced at a news conference after a meeting of a PTA urban advisory task force, including Colorado Lt. Gov. George Brown and Atlanta Superintendent of Schools Alonzo Crim. Both said they welcomed the PTA's move into the urban arena.

"We stand in danger of wasting a major portion of a generation of American youth," Mrs. Baisinger said, noting that many surburban schools are expeiencing the same problems as those in the cities.

Farmers Call Talk With Bergland 'Worthless'

BUMPER CROP — A bumper sticker supporting American Agriculture is presented to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, left, by Randy Butters of Homer, Mich. Bergland met with the protesting farmers at the Agriculture Department in Washington Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland met Friday for 45 minutes with two dozen protesting farmers under tight security in his headquarters building, where about 30 had spent the night.

After the session, first of three scheduled for the day, protest leader Tommy Fulford of Georgia called it "worthless ... it's like talking to a wall. I don't think he understands the problem" of low farm prices.

Four of those at the initial meeting were among those involved in a brawl and later sit-in at the department Thursday and in a mass demonstration two weeks ago on the Texas-Mexico border.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said it would be Tuesday or Wednesday, instead of Monday, before the Panama Canal treaty debate could be interrupted for one day of action on emergency farm legislation.

Bergland took questions on grain inventories, how foreign countries buy grain, the operation of his plans for reducing production to raise prices and the need for farmers to cooperate in those plans.

"It was the same old bull---we've been getting for six months," farmer Merle Osborne of Iowa said afterward. He said he would stay to lobby members of Congress until planting time and then go home to reduce his crops by half.

Fulford said the core of the protesters that has been here two months would remain, but that those who have been here this week for three days of demonstrations are going home.

He and Randy Butters of Homer, Mich., complained bitterly that the Agriculture Department had locked its doors this week, turning away everyone except employees, reporters and visitors with appointments.

Bergland explained that threats on his life and earlier damage to the public building made such security necessary. Outside, more than 200 police officers were stationed around the buildings, and down the street the entire Capitol police force had been put on 12-hour shifts to deal with potential violence.

Today's meetings had been scheduled earlier this week in an attempt by Bergland to find some common ground with American Agriculture members who are demonstrating for higher government price guarantees for wheat and other farm products.

The farmers who forced their way through security guards Thursday were not content with the meetings Bergland promised them.

The group, part of about 2,000 farmers who marched on the department from Capitol Hill, scuffled with security guards in gaining entry to the Agriculture Department's administration building, where Bergland's office is located.

After federal police restored quiet, about 15 of the protestors agreed to meet across the street in another department building with officials, promising they would leave after the meeting and cause no further trouble. They were joined by about 30 others.

But after their demands to meet with Bergland or President Carter immediately were rejected, the group refused to leave the meeting room. Federal officers intitially told them that they had until 6:30 p.m. to leave or face arrest.

The sit-in demonstrators still refused, vowing that they wanted to get publicity for their arrest to bring their plight more to the attention of the public.

However, Bergland and security officials a few hours later recommended to federal police that the group be allowed to remain in the room if they chose.

Although Bergland's recommendation was accepted by the police, farmers in the room did not immediately decide whether to leave voluntarily or remain through the night.

"We are selling out our women and our brothers if we walk out," Quincy Murphy, a farmer from Mississippi, told his fellow sit-in protestors.

Wayne Peterson of South Dakota said that "We were called cowards (Thursday morning). ... What are they going to call us if we turn our tails and run?"

Karen Voight, a department representative in the room, told the protestors that she was in error when she told them earlier they might be able to have a meeting with Bergland on Thursday.

"I screwed up," she said. "It's as simple as that. I checked with the wrong sources. I thought you could meet with the secretary. It was my fault."

Minneapolis Star Names New Editor

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Stephen D. Isaacs on Friday was named editor of the Minneapolis Star by Publisher Donald R. Dwight.

Isaacs, 39, is director of the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service.

He is the son of Norman Isaacs, retired editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and director of the National News Council.

Dwight had been serving as editor since September when Donald F. Wright was named executive vice president of Newsday.

Isaacs began his newspaper career at the Louisville Times in 1959 and has been with the Washington Post Co. since 1961.

Haldeman Article Defended

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Ombudsman for the Washington Post, commenting on that newsaper's recent publishing of excerpts from H.R. Haldeman's book, "The Ends of Power," said Friday "anything that is news is fair game to a newspaper."

Charles Seib, whose job it is to criticize, praise, or defend his employer through his published columns or inter-office memos, spoke to the 1978 convention of the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors.

Seib contended that Haldeman, former President Nixon's chief of staff, was a public figure and anything he had to say was of sufficient interest to the public that it should be published.

His defense followed criticism of the newspaper, especially from the New York Times, which had paid to have the excerpts published.

Seib pointed out that the Post wrote it as a news story and only used about 500 words of direct quotes.

"His (Haldeman's) own words are still marketable," said Seib, acknowledging that after the Post story the Times' excerpts were "damaged merchandise" because the story had lost its promotional value.

Seib conceeded the whole affair "wasn't great journalism." He said there was even a "gloating" atmosphere in the Post newsroom after the story was published.

On other matters, Seib told about 100 Texas editors at their noon luncheon there is a paradox in the press' role of watchdog for our society while the profession itself is unwatched.

This is where his job comes in, Sieb said. He is the Post's fourth such inhouse critic.

Although it was described as a "second-rate burglary" by the New York Times, Seib reiterated that no money changed hands and no release date was broken becaue the Post had never agreed to hold the story for a specified time.

Meat-Grading Proposals Supported By Official

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Foreman says a proposed change in meat grading regulations which she supervises would help both consumers and farmers by helping to eliminate misrepresentation of beef quality.

Richard Lyng, who once held Ms. Foreman's job during the Nixon administration and now heads the American Meat Institute, says the proposal is "fundamentally illegal," wrong in principle, and would raise consumer food costs.

The conflict began taking shape in Washington Thursday as the Agricuture Department held the first of five scheduled hearings on its controversial proposal. Remaining sessions will be held Tuesday in San Francisco, Thursday in Omaha, March 28 in Atlanta and March 30 in Dallas.

Under the proposal, all meat sold to consumers would have to be marked either with a traditional Agriculture Department quality grade — such as Prime, Choice, Good, etc. — or would have to be stamped "U.S. Ungraded."

The grading system, which the Agriculture Department has operated for many years, does not deal with the wholesomeness of meat products. The department operates a separate, mandatory federal inspection program to assure wholesomeness and safety, and grading — which is voluntary at the option of meat packers who pay for the service — deals only with quality factors which mainly affect taste and tenderness.

Ms. Foreman, in announcing the proposal in January, said that under the current system ungraded meat can be "represented for sale as being of a better quality than it actually is." Labeling meat with a true grade or an "ungraded" stamps should eliminate misrepresentation, she said.

"Without accurate grade information, consumers may pay 'Choice' grade prices for meat of lesser quality," Ms. Foreman said. She noted that investigators have also found several cases of illegal "upgrading" of meat in recent years.

Lyng, at the opening hearing Thursday, said the Foreman proposal to require use of an "ungraded" label is illegal because — under a federal marketing act — the use of grades is purely voluntary.

"We feel that a 'U.S. Ungraded' label is demeaning and suggests that a product is inferior. ... The practical effect would be to make government grading mandatory, contrary to requirements of the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946," he said.

The American Meat Institute represents major meat packers and processors.

Lyng said the Agriculture Department proposal is also "wrong in principle" because it imples that meat is not of good quality unless it bears a government grade.

"This is not true. Some packers and retailers have developed markets for beef which they and their customers think is superior in quality ... to the U.S. grades (and) these private grades sometimes bring price premiums over USDA graded beef," Lyng said.

The industry executive said the government proposals would force the elimination of private brand grades. And the proposal to enforce the use of federal grades on retail packages "will in many ways significantly add to the cost of marketing meat and meat products."

It might, Lyng said, cost "tens of millions of dollars" to put grade-labeling information on all containers used to package meat products.

Also, the executive said, he doesn't believe the Agriculture Department's claim that it could operate the proposed new regulations without more inspectors or operating funds.

"This is impossible if enforcement of the proposal is contemplated," he said.

Cattle Futures Finish Higher On Mercantile

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures rebounded from an early loss of as many as 25 points and closed 40 to 115 higher led by the nearby Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The two nearby options were up 135 points before resistance was met. Volume was estimated at 21,962 contracts.

Initial selling spilled over from Thursday's limit losses and forced prices to week's lows, off 227 points from recent highs.

Short covering and new buying was sparked by continued strength in beef, despite heavy output and steady to firm cash cattle.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one cent at 76 to 77 cents a pound, highest since October 1975. Cash cattle were steady to firm with the top at $51 per hundredweight.

Slaughter was estimated at 147,000 head. The six markets expect 18,400 head to arrive on Monday.

Hog futures ended 120 points lower to 27 higher on a turnover of 12,004 contracts. April led the decline with only February higher after gaining 85 cents early. The nearby contract was down 127 points near the close.

Pressure carried over from Thursday limit declines and forced prices to 1 1/2-week lows, off 342 points from the highs. Some sharply lower cash hogs and the 12-cent per pound fall in cash hams in the past week made for aggressive selling in Chicago.

Wholesale hams were off one to two cents at 69 to 73½ cents per pound, f.o.b. river points, lowest since July. Cash hogs were off 50 cents to $2 with the top at a week's low of $48.50 per hundredweight.

The major terminals expect receipts on Monday to total 28,500 head. Friday's kill was estimated at 297,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed with most contracts limit down for the second day in a row after prices tumbled 180 to 200 points lower on sales of 6,454 cars.

Prices slipped to one-week lows, down 6½ cents from recent highs, on selling associated with lower cash hogs and bellies. Buying on the scale-down stemmed from prospects of a bullish cold storage report.

Traders available for comment after the report was released called the figures constructive.

Stocks were estimated at 16.1 million pounds on March 1, compared with a revised 19 million a month earlier. The total is a new record low for March 1 and compares with the previous record of 30.7 million pounds in 1973.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE SENATE WILL VOTE TUESDAY on the emergency farm bills sponsored by Sens. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., and Robert Dole, R-Kan.

It agreed to interrupt the Panama Canal treaty debate and devote up to four hours to each of the bills, Reuters reported.

Meanwhile, the Senate Appropirations Committee helped to clear the way for quick action by voting 17-0 to send the Talmadge measure to the floor, without recommendation. The Dole bill does not require committee action, but both still must be cleared by the Budget Committee.

The Talmadge bill, approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee on Monday, provides for payments to farmers to divert 38 million acres of cropland out of production this year.

THE DOLE BILL, PASSED BY THE SAME panel on Wednesday, is the so-called "flexible parity" measure which would allow individual grain farmers to choose support target prices up to 100 percent of parity — depending on how much each grower cuts acreage. For cotton, there would be a 60-cent target for a 20 percent cutback from last year's acreage.

A new USDA estimate, released by the Appropriations Committee Friday, indicates that the Talmadge bill would cost the government $473 million in additional outlays this year.

But by forcing up market prices, it would result in a $563 million reduction in government costs via Commodity Credit Corp. outlays in 1979, the USDA figures show. Thus the bill would result in a net saving of $90 million over the two years.

The Dole bill, on the other hand, would cut 1978 costs to the government by $793 million but boost 1979 costs by $2.301 billion. The net cost for two years would be $1.508 billion.

THE CATTLE ON FEED REPORT this week showed increased cattle feeding activity but also showed that cattle feeders are selling cattle even faster than their accelerated placement rate.

During February, the seven major feeding states had a record number of new placements — 1.5 million head. However, marketings were so brisk — 1.67 million head — that the total numbers of cattle on feed actually declined to 8.3 million head, down from 8.6 million a month earlier.

"This report is considered bullish," said Joe Wood, market analyst with the Texas Cattle Feeders Association. "It shows feeders are still marketing their cattle when they're ready and it shows a net reduction in the number of cattle on feed — 4 percent below Feb. 1."

THE REPORT, HOWEVER, ALSO SHOWS there are 10 percent more cattle on feed than there were a year ago. "The large placement figures would pose a potential problem this summer when these cattle are ready to market," Wood said. "The problem could be compounded by excessive pork and poultry supplies at the same time."

Wood expressed relief at the report's figures on Iowa marketings. The 225,000 head sold in that state last month, he said, is an indication that the heavy Midwestern placements of last fall are being worked off in an orderly fasion — "meaning we may not have a bulge early this summer, as we had earlier expected."

In Texas, 347,000 head of cattle were placed in feedyards during February and 377,000 head were marketed. Texas feedlots held 1.78 million head on March 1, down from 1.840 a month earlier but up from 1.520 million a year ago.

High Plains feedyards accounted for 1.389 million head, up from 1.153 million a year ago.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and soybean meal futures shot up the daily limit in nearby months, influencing buying that boosted grain futures sharply higher on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Soybeans advanced almost the 30-cent limit at the open. The strength, which was based partly on rumors that Brazil might stop issuing export licenses for soybeans and soybean meal, was sustained throughout the day.

Shortly before the close, the central bank of Brazil confirmed that it was restricting export sales to contracts that specified prices, as opposed to deals where the price could be established at a later time, analysts said.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 80 cents to $1.90 a bale higher Friday.

A government report showed that cotton and exports for the week ending March 5, had risen, influenced demand for futures contracts, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton declined 10 points to 55.54 cents a pound Thursday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was active on Friday. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was good.

Growers sold mixed lots at 700 to 1,100 points over loan rates.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations remained unchanged. The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mikes 3.5-4.9, stood at 53.35 cents per pound, 100 points over a week earlier.

High Plains classing offices graded 2,937,000 samples of 1977-crop c otton. This compares with 1,228,000 bales in 1976.

Sixty percent of the samples were in the white grades, compared with 12 percent a year earlier and 25 percent in 1975. Staple lengths averaged 31 7-32nds.

Micronaire was excellent with 92 percent of the samples at 3.5 or better, compared with 54 percent in 1976 and 11 percent in 1975. Only 1 percent of the samples was reduced because of bark, compared with 40 percent the year before and 23 percent in 1975.

Sugar Beet Potential Said High

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — "When you look at the income potential of corn and grain sorghum as compared to what sugar beets will do, it seems to me that you shouldn't spare the horses in producing beets this year."

That is the opinion of Dr. Ramon Sammons, Texas Agricultural Extension Service area economist in Amarillo. Sammons spoke to beet growers during their recent annual meeting here at the Bull Barn.

Apparently, the producers already had reached that conclusion long before hearing Sammons' presentation.

They've already signed up to plant the full 30,000 acres contracted by the Holly Sugar Corp.'s Hereford plant for 1978, and beets already are going into the ground in the Clovis area.

Sammons' presentation was one of several designed to help area growers with decisions on cultural practices and production inputs.

The meeting was sponsored by area implement and chemical dealers, along with Holly Sugar Corp.

"I can't run a budget on corn or milo for this year and project a profit. But I would shoot for the best possible sugar beet yields, because beets appear to be the only crop that will return you a profit," the economist said.

Sammons also advised area growers to adjust their corn and milo acreages so that nothing "interferes" with beets. This may be the year to get some fences up and graze those tops too, because it will increase your cash flow," he said.

Soviets Say Carter Warning Alarming

By The Associated Press

The Soviet Union said President Carter's defense policy speech Friday was "alarming" and incompatible with his earlier expressions of peaceful aims.

Responding with unusual promptness, the official news agency Tass said Carter's speech at Wake Forest University showed he is moving from a policy of detente to one based on "threats and a build-up of tension."

Tass said Carter's speech, in which he coupled a call for a strong defense program with a warning to the Soviets to use restraint, "testifies to a retreat from the solution" of urgent problems facing the world.

Called "Distortions"

Its report from Winston-Salem, N.C., headlined "Distortions," said Carter used "the well-worn thesis of a 'Soviet military menace' and included also an assertion that the U.S.S.R. is supposedly interfering in local conflicts."

While not specifically mentioning the presence of Soviet and Cuban forces in Africa, Carter's speech called for "restraint ... in the projection of Soviet or proxy forces into other lands and continents."

The Tass report said "there are a number of alarming moments in J. Carter's speech which are clearly incompatible" with the president's earlier remarks that the United States seeks to avert nuclear war and to cooperate with the Soviet Union.

"Shift In Emphasis"

"From the essence of the president's speech it becomes clear that he is speaking in fact about a shift in the emphasis of American foreign policy from its formerly announced course of ensuring national security through negotiations, through limiting the arms race and deepening detente, to a course of threats and a build-up of tension," Tass said.

The news agency detailed the weaponry listed by Carter as he described U.S. defense potential and quoted him as saying he was ready to develop and deploy such armaments as the cruise missile and MX rocket.

It said Carter "grossly distorted" Soviet foreign policy by claiming Russia shows "an inclination to interfere" in African countries.

U.S. Accused

Tass claimed it is the United States that seeks unilateral advantages in foreign relations — encouraging Israel, for example, in its occupation of Lebanese territory.

The agency said, "the U.S.S.R. upholds the sovereignty, national independence and freedom of peoples," observing the principle of non-interference in internal afairs and trying to reduce tension.

Carter's statements came shortly before the former Navy lieutenant flew by helicopter to the USS Eisenhower in the Atlantic Ocean off the Georgia coast for a first-hand inspection of the Navy's newest, largest and most expensive nuclear aircraft carrier.

Off Georgia Coast

As the presidential helicopter set down on the flight deck of the Eisenhower, the big carrier was about 50 miles off the Georgia coast.

The president and first lady Rosalynn Carter were almost immediately given uniforms. They donned Navy blue jackets and matching carrier-style baseball caps laden with gold braid. Embroidered on the breast of Carter's jacket was "Jimmy Carter, Commander-in-Chief." Mrs. Carter's read, "Rosalynn Carter, First Lady."

The jacket clashed with Mrs. Carter's St. Patrick's Day outfit — a Kelly green sweater-jacket and green plaid slacks. The president's civilian garb made no concession to the holiday.

Later in the day, on his arrival in Savannah, Ga., Carter made his first public statement on the Israeli raid into Lebanon.

In response to a question, Carter said, "Our policy is that Israel ought to withdraw from Lebanon and eventually the Lebanese people take over. If there needs to be a transition period, then of course the United Nations could provide forces. We want an absence of bloodshed."

In the evening, Carter spoke at a St. Patrick's Day dinner at the Hibernian Society in Savannah — a traditional stop for Carter when he was Georgia governor.

Commenting on his tour of the USS Eisenhower, Carter said: "As president of the United States, as commander-in-chief, I realized even more intently that the best way to peace is to be stron • and as long as I am president our country's going to stay strong."

The president then headed for St. Simons Island further down the coast for a three-day holiday.

The commander-in-chief's inspection of the nuclear aircraft carrier came at a time when military planners are debating whether any new carriers, which could cost as much as $2.4 billion, are needed. Carter's fiscal 1979 budget proposal provides no money for new carriers beyond those already in the works.

Carter's speech, delivered to an audience of about 2,000 persons at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C., was his first major defense policy address since taking office nearly 14 months ago.

He declared that the three-pronged U.S. defense system of land-based missiles, sea-based missiles and bombers and cruise missiles "will retain the ability to impose devastating retaliation upon an aggressor.

"Our strategic forces must be — and must be known to be — a match for the capabilities of the Soviets," Carter declared. And he added that "if they fail to demonstrate restraint in missile programs and other force levels and in the projection of Soviet or proxy forces into other lands and continents, then popular support in the United States for such cooperation (as detente) will erode."

The president did not mention Soviet and Cuban military activity in Africa, but his meaning was clear.

Hawkins Handed Death Penalty In Slaying Of Borger Woman

ing to lock the front door — and returned 45 minutes later to discover the gory bedroom and lifeless body, he told the jury.

The young widower was red-eyed, but composed after the death verdict was tendered. His only comment was, "I'm glad justice prevailed."

Mrs. Hamilton's parents sat side-by-side, hands clutched, during much of the trial. Sometimes there were tears in their eyes.

The tears were there again Friday.

"I want to extend my thanks to the jurors and to everyone that worked on the case. I think they worked hard and diligently," said the father, Joe Dell Rodgers of Borger. He said he particularly wanted to thank Hutchinson County Sheriff Lon Blackmon and his family, Dist. Atty. Stephen Cross and his family, Asst. Dist. Atty. Linda Walden, and "all the law enforcement officers of Hutchinson County and Lubbock County."

"The verdict reaffirms our belief that the criminal justice system can work," his wife Sandra added. "I think some recent decisions, including some in some Lubbock cases, are a sign there is a change — that things are turning back toward protecting innocent citizens, rather than criminals."

Hawkins's case was tried here on a change of venue from Hutchinson County.

To return the death verdict, jurors had to decide two questions: did Hawkins act deliberately and with a reasonable expectation death would result when he stabbed Mrs. Hamilton? and is he likely to commit future acts of violence?

An affirmative answer to both made imposition of the death penalty mandatory. If the panel had answered no to either or both questions, Hawkins automatically would have received a life imprisonment sentence.

Hawkins gave police a confession about the murder.

In it he said he went to Borger and "started looking around ... for somebody to rape." He said he checked houses until he found one with a door open.

The statement says he went "straight into a bedroom" and there noticed a woman on a bed. "I put the knife to the woman's throat and she jumped. When the woman jumped, the knife went into her neck," it says.

Hawkins's confession says the woman got hysterical, and that he did, too. "I started stabbing the woman in the neck but I don't know how many times I stabbed her. When the woman became hysterical, she grabbed the telephone and was going to call on it. I guess this is when I cut her again."

Hawkins said in the confession that he cut the wire, went into the dining room, got the napkins and tied her up while trying "to calm her down."

"The woman wouldn't give up, so this is when I cut her again," the confession says.

Cross relied heavily on the confession during the trial and in final arguments.

The DA said the confession proved Hawkins's actions were deliberate, and therefore warranted a "yes" answer to the first sentencing question.

Court-appointed defense lawyer Russell Busby had argued that while Hawkins may have deliberately planned a rape, the stabbing death was not intentional.

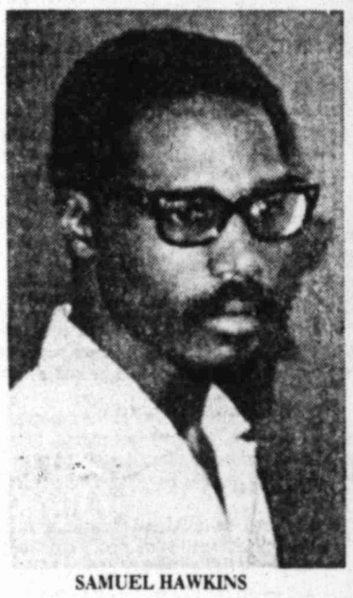
"Is he hysterical when he's trying to calm her down?" Cross retorted.

Cross referred to Hawkins's past criminal record — including two burglary, an attempted rape and a rape conviction — and said, "Those victims were left alive and he was punished," getting sentences ranging up to 40 years in prison.

"In my mind, he was determined there was not going to be a witness in this case and he took the life of Abbe Hamilton," he said.

Miss Walden hammered on the past record, calling Hawkins a "leopard who will not change his spots."

She urged the death penalty for society's protection, saying, "Here is a man who will not stop. A good look into the future comes from a look at the past. Violence, violence, violence, violence!"



SAMUEL HAWKINS

ABBE HAMILTON

Later, defense cocounsel Gene Storrs asked the jury to believe it could better protect society by allowing Hawkins to live than by ordering his death.

He begged jurors to keep Hawkins alive for mental studies so doctors can find out "what in God's name caused him to do it."

"If you kill him to try to avoid another Abbe Hamilton, you've missed the boat. Because there will be another and another and another" — victims of men who have not had benefit of study of Hawkins's mind, the attorney said.

After the trial ended, experienced lawyers, prosecutors and other court experts were shaking their heads over one group of statements made by Miss Walden in her final punishment argument. The observers felt possible grounds for reversal of the case had been laid.

Law requires that jurors not consider for any purpose a defendant's failure to testify in his own behalf.

Miss Walden seemed to tread close to asking jurors to think about that fact.

"Have you seen any showing of remorse?" or indication Hawkins wants to reform, she asked.

Defense attorneys immediately objected and moved for a mistrial. Countiss sustained the objection, but denied the mistrial motion, and warned jurors to disregard Miss Walden's remark.

Then, Miss Walden compounded the statement, telling jurors she wanted to "explain" to them what she meant. She asked them to reflect on Hawkins's conduct during the trial, his impassivity during most of it.

Defense lawyers lept to their feet again, renewing objections and mistrial motions.

Countiss again denied the mistrial motion, but lashed at Miss Walden that he had just sustained one objection on such a line of argument and ordered her to instantly move into other areas.

She was white-faced and swollen-eyed from crying hours later.

Brasfield Declared Guilty, Assessed Death In Slaying

Yellowhouse Canyon north of Slaton eight days later.

The child's pants and shorts had been pulled down to his ankles, and no shirt was ever found. Evidence indicated the victim had died from asphyxiation, with an Amarillo pathologist testifying he probably had been smothered to death, rather than strangled.

Numerous stab wounds were visible in the chest and stomach. Dr. Jose A. Diaz-Esquivel said the stab wounds to the stomach probably were inflicted after the tiny victim was dead, citing an absence of internal bleeding even though part of an intestine was left protruding from the body.

Court appointed defense attorney Dennis McGill made a brief, but fervent, plea for Brasfield's life.

"At this point in time, I don't know what one man can say to a jury to save another man's life ... I just don't," he began.

McGill then asked if "a single act of violence" were enough to enable the panel to predict the future course of someone's life.

He said the victim was dead, and that Brasfield's death would not raise the victim back to life.

"Do we now kill people to say killing is wrong?" McGill asked. He implored jurors to imagine Brasfield anticipating his last moment of life before he was executed via injection of a lethal substance in his veins.

"On the basis of the evidence, can you say Phil Brasfield will probably commit future acts of criminal violence? I don't think you can.

"I know I can't," McGill said, then walked over and sat down at the counsel table.

Griffin retorted that Brasfield had shown "everything except humanity" in murdering a helpless child and abandoning his body in the canyon.

"The mentality that allows this starts long before this and will last long after," he said.

Says Victim 'Used'

The prosecutor, holding aloft the small pair of blue trousers found at the death scene, said Brasfield had "used" the victim and indicated the jury could imagine from the evidence what that use had been.

Jurors earlier Friday had deliberated an hour and 45 minutes before finding the defendant guilty of capital murder.

The state based its case on witness accounts designed to link the defendant with the Turner child after the victim had disappeared from home.

Defendant Identified

Two witnesses — Cecille Joyce Hunter and 13-year-old Teddy Robinson — made courtroom identifications of Brasfield as the man they saw with the boy shortly before 5:30 p.m. Oct. 26.

The Robinson youth said he saw the pair traveling in a white pickup truck about two blocks from the Coronado Apartments where the Turners lived. The witness said he knew the victim because his family also lived in the same apartments.

The state particularly stressed testimony by Mrs. Hunter, who said she observed a man she identified as Brasfield closely for several minutes at a service station near East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue.

Says Child Recognized

Mrs. Hunter said she recognized the child with Brasfield as "the Turner boy," although she said she did not know his first name at that time.

The witness's attention was attracted when Brasfield, she said, "poked" cigarettes at the child who, according to Mrs. Hunter, "kept shaking his head no."

Two other witnesses said they saw a white man with a black child at the station. Those witnesses said the man looked very much like Brasfield, but said they could not make a positive identification.

Pickup Described

Witness Ray Dunn said he also noted a scratch on the right side of the pickup truck in which the two were riding, along with an indentation in a hubcap.

Dunn later viewed a pickup truck which was impounded by police and said he thought it was the same truck he had seen at the station.

Two of Brasfield's friends — Armando Ramirez and Jerry Wayne Robinson — said that while working at a job site near Posey, about midway between Slaton and Lubbock, they saw Brasfield en route to Lubbock about 3:30 p.m. They said they saw him again between 6:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on the date in question.

The two testified they were drinking beer inside a car parked on a dirt road adjacent to Horseshoe Bend Road, which winds from the Yellowhouse Canyon area toward Slaton.

They said they encountered Brasfield as he came from the direction of the canyon.

Testimony during the guilt-or-innocence phase of the trial, moved here from Lubbock on a change of venue, closed on an emotional note when Mrs. Johnny Turner Sr., the victim's mother, burst into tears after identifying tennis shoes found at the death scene as belonging to her son.

There will be an automatic appeal of the death penalty conviction.

Kizer Charges Law Bars West As City Mayor

cause of West's independent contracting situation with SPS.

"He (Senter) said the ordinance doesn't apply in this case but I believe it does," Kizer said.

Kizer said Lubbock citizens need the mayor to lead the council in "concerted" action on power issues, especially in a rate case on industrial gas prices that is expected to come before the council in late June or July.

If West is elected mayor and abstains from voting on this issue, as he has done in similar council matters in the past, the people of Lubbock will not be fully represented, Kizer said.

And though council members often disqualify themselves from various votes that may affect them personally, no other abstentions are as "blatant" as West's, according to Kizer.

"LP&L is a business and there are certain things in that business that shouldn't be known to the other," he added. If West is elected mayor, he will serve as LP&L's board chairman while remaining an employee of its competitor, Kizer said.

"And there's quite a disparity there," Kizer said of the possibility.

West, however, said Friday that he doesn't regard his dual position as detrimental to the Lubbock.

"As for abstaining, all members of the council abstain and do not vote at one time or another, including the mayor, when they feel they should disqualify themselves," West said in a prepared statement.

"As long as Lubbock continues to elect good honest people to the city council, this will be the rule," West said. "And thank goodness for that because good honest people never vote where they feel they should disqualify themselves, on matters such as zoning, purchases, contracts etc.

"We have an excellent Utility Board made up of honest, dedicated citizens that reviews and recommends all utility matters to the council, and it only requires three votes of the five-member council for action," West added.

West, first to announce for the mayor's post, said "all kinds of publicity stunts" such as this must be expected from other candidates who entered the race "at the very last minute as my opponents have."

Kizer's statement also emphasized his earlier campaign concerns of improving Lubbock's police force by studying action taken by cities similar to Lubbock, importing water to the region and plans for future development of Lubbock.

tempt in the way they had been proceeding.

Besides Lance and the bank, others named in the SEC complaint included Agha Hasan Abedi, president of the Bank of Credit and Commerce; Sheikh Kamal Adham of Saudi Arabia, identified as a client of Abedi and his bank; Faisal Saud al Fulaij, a Kuwaiti businessman and Abedi client; Sheikh Sultan bin Zaid al Nahyan, the crown prince of Abudahbi; and Abdullah Darwaish, an advisor to the royal family of Abudahbi.

Several shareholders and the current president of Financial General Bankshares, former Navy Secretary J.W. Middendorf, also were named in the complaint.

Government securities laws require that public notice be given when a group obtains control of five percent or more of the securities of a corporation.

Financial General officials who have sought to block the Lance takeover bid have previously alleged that the Lance group tried to circumvent that requirement by parceling out more than 20 percent of the stock among the Middle East investors so each held less than five percent.

In its statement filed with the court, the SEC said Lance purchased 13,000 shares of the bank holding company stock on the open market for the account of his wife in January.

Since last fall, the SEC said, Lance has obtained substantial loans that were used by the London bank. It added that he also receives a substantial fee for providing advice on potential business investment.

Israeli Forces Hit Six More Guerrilla Bases

non who battled the Lebanese Moslem-Palestinian alliance.

Syrian and Israeli units have not engaged each other, Lebanese sources said, but Syria has sent Soviet-made MiG fighters into the air on patrol along its Lebanese border.

The international furor over the invasion reached the United Nations with both Lebanon and Israel requesting a Security Council session. Lebanon said it wanted a meeting to call for Israel's "prompt withdrawal" while Israel said the meeting should "consider the continuous acts of terror and violence against Israel" from Lebanese territory.

The United States joined the Soviet Union, Egypt, Germany, Yugoslavia and Britain in renewed calls for Israel to pull out of Lebanon.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the United States was weighing several courses of action, and leaning toward an internationl peackeeping force in the battle area.

Cairo's Middle East News Agency said Egypt would agree to a U.N. truce force coupled with Israeli recognition of the Palestinian people's rights.

Syria, a hard-line leader against the stalled Egyptian-Israeli peace talks, opposed any U.N. peacekeeping force. Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddan said he would accept only the stationing of Lebanese troops in the embattled region.

Iraq declared it would provide the Palestinians with military assistance to save "the Palestinian revolution from liquidation."

Jordan's pro-West King Hussein called for an Arab summit conference to consider "Israel's expansionist policy" and make "effective decisions."

Israeli jets continued to bomb guerrilla positions around the southern port city of Tyre, about 20 miles north of the border, and Palestinian fallback positions at Nabatieh, north of the Litani River.

Lebanese sources said a helicopter-borne Israeli force landed at Adloun, a fishing village midway between Tyre and Sidon, and blew up a marine base of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. The operation reportedly took place after a two-hour missile bombardment by four Israeli gunboats.

A PFLP statement in Beirut claimed guerrilla defenders beat back the afternoon assault in hand-to-hand combat, suffering two wounded and one killed.

Ten hours earlier, two cars packed with fleeing Lebanese refugees were hit by rockets and gunfire as they passed north through Adloun, killing 14 of 16 occupants, guerrillas reported.

Reporters saw the bodies of men, women and children being loaded into ambulances. Local residents said an Israeli gunboat fired on the two cars and others said seaborne commandos assaulted the vehicles.

Wright Fears GOP Seat Pickup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Wright said Friday that he had ample support among fellow Democrats to retain his House majority leader's post but expressed concern over a possible Republican uprising in two Texas congressional districts.

The House Democratic Caucus elected the Fort Worth congressman majority leader by a slim, one-vote margin last year. When Congress reconvenes after the November general elections, however, Wright feels he will be in control of the situation.

"Some of my friends spent the last three days talking to the 262 (Democrats) who are intending to return," he said. "I have 191 firm pledges... that's not quite three out of every four."

Wright admitted, however, that Texas Democrats are going to "have a fight on our hands" in two of the six House seats being vacated after this session.

"I'm not a political pundit or haven't seen any polls, but I think the (George) Mahon district may be vulnerable and perhaps the (Bob) Krueger district. I'm not predicting Republican wins, you understand... a lot will have to do with who we nominate as Democrats and if we have a strong candidate."

Mahon, Congress' senior member, has announced his retirement after this session. Krueger is leaving the House to run for the Senate seat occupied by Republican John Tower.

"I think we have a pretty good chance this year," said Wright. "Probably a better chance than we've had since Sen. Tower was first elected, but it's not a cinch."

Wright also noted that historically the political party in control of both Congress and the White House have lost seats. "There are two exceptions," he said. "The most recent one was in 1934 when Mr. Roosevelt was president. The average loss (for the party in power) has been 27 seats in situations like that. That's on a national scale."

Wright also used Friday's press conference as a forum to promote the Democrats' campaign spending bill, which is faltering badly in the House.

Under the proposal, candidates in general election races for the House would be eligible for up to $50,000 in federal money to match private contributions. With some exceptions, recipients would have to accept a campaign spending ceiling of $150,000.

The Republicans, with roughly eight times more money in their war chest to spend on the November general elections according to Federal Election Commisson figures, are up in arms over the proposal because the measure would also reduce by 70 percent — from $50,000 to $15,000 — the amount a political party's fundraising committee could contribute to a House candidate.

Wright admitted chances for the bill's passage are "questionable" but added: "I think somehing ought to be done to correct flaws in the election law. For one thing, we tried several years ago to establish a binding and enforceable ceiling on total expenditures in congressional races and I think that's desireable.

"I don't think you ought to put a seat in the U.S. Congress up for bid to the highest bidder like a seat on the New York Stock Exchange.

"The court, however, has ruled that you can't establish a limit," continued Wright. "You can't legally do that unless some element of public financing is involved. I think we need to establish such limits so people aren't going out and buying public office."

When — and if — the campaign funding bill reaches the floor of the House, most observers feel the Democrats will accede to Republican demands on contribution limits in order to gain GOP support for public financing.

U.S. Claims Soviets Broke World Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union broke international law by revoking the citizenship of two famous Soviet dissidents now in the United States, the State Department says. Over the past seven days, the Soviet Union has taken away the citizenship of conductor Mstislav Rostopovich and Gen. Pyotor Grigorenko.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter on Thursday said the Soviet action violated both the United Nations Universal Declaration and the 1975 Helsinki Agreement guaranteeing everyone "the right to leave any country, including his own, and return to that country."

California Solons Get Voter Ratings

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The performance of Republican Senator S.I. Hayakawa has dropped in the eyes of California adults and he's getting much lower marks than his Democratic counterpart, Alan Cranston, according to a poll released Friday.

Pollster Mervin Field announced results of a survey last month of 1,217 adults, including 708 Democrats and 429 Republicans. Three times as many people polled thought Cranston was doing a "good job" as opposed to a poor one, but Hayakawa's good and poor ratings were only a few percentage points apart.

Virginia College Integration Plan Gets Nod

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Friday it has reached agreement with Virginia officials to settle a protracted dispute over desegregation of that state's colleges and universities.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. announced the settlement, which is still subject to approval by the state's board of college and universities and the board of the Virginia Council on Higher Education.

Califano said that to reach the settlement, Virginia Gov. John Dalton and other state officials "made specific commitments to increase black enrollment in state-supported colleges, to increase employment opportunities for qualified blacks at state institutions, and to enhance the two traditionally black universities."

Virginia is the fifth of six states to settle in recent weeks a desegregation dispute that has dragged for several years through federal courts and HEW's Office for Civil Rights.

The six states traditionally have maintained separate systems of higher education for whites and blacks.

North Carolina has so far refused to meet HEW's terms and stands in jeopardy of losing millions of dollars in federal education aid.

Arkansas, Florida, Oklahoma and Georgia have settled their cases with the department during the last six weeks.

Califano said he hopes that negotiations now under way with North Carolina officials will lead to a settlement of that case.

Under terms of the Virginia settlement, the state must give priority consideration to placing new undergraduate and graduate programs at Norfolk State and Virginia State, the state's traditionally black universities.

Califano said the state has also agreed:

—"To increase black enrollment in the system so that the percentage of black high school graduates entering the system is the same as the percentage of white graduates."

—To ask the state legislature for scholarship funds to help black students attend traditionally white schools and white students to attend traditionally black schools.

—A bi-racial advisory committee is to be appointed to monitor implementation of the agreement.

Back-To-Work Order Extension Rejected By Federal Courts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal judge who ordered striking coal miners back to work last week refused on Friday to extend the order after saying miners "are not paying attention to what I do anyhow."

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr., who issued a temporary order March 9 to send the miners back to work, made his decision Friday about a half hour before the order expired at 6 p.m. EST.

The miners, who have almost universally ignored the back-to-work order, could end the strike on their own next Friday when they vote on a new contract offer.

Robinson told government lawyers he did not feel they had proved the necessity of issuing the order in the first place, then made his wry comment on the refusal of miners to obey it.

Robinson had issued the back-to-work order under provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, and the government had sought to extend the temporary order for 11 days rather than to seek a permanent injunction as is normal in Taft-Hartley cases.

Government lawyers said they wanted to extend the temporary order for fear that stronger action would adversely influence the vote on the new contract offer.

In refusing to extend his back-to-work order, Robinson in effect lifted legal restrictions against continuation of the 102-day United Mine Workers strike.

Although he refused to extend his temporary order, the decision does not mean the government cannot seek a permanent back-to-work order. Robinson told government lawyers they could ask for the permanent injunction on March 28 and a Justice Department spokesman said the government was prepared to seek the full injunction if the miners reject the new contract offer.

"That would be an entirely new situation that the court would have to take into account," said spokesman Mark Sheehan.

In a hearing before announcing his decision, Robinson was critical of government documents designed to prove that a continuation of the strike was a threat to the national health or safety — a requirement for invoking the Taft-Hartley Act.

Attorney General Griffin Bell, in asking Robinson last week to send the miners back to work, had presented 11 affidavits from Carter Cabinet members warning of the adverse impact the strike was having or could have on the national health and safety.

But Robinson said Friday: "I have torn the affidavits apart sentence by sentence ... but three-quarters of those affidavits are clearly not relevant to Taft-Hartley." Those considered irrelevant, he said, were concerned only with the nation's economic well being.

"Only three are relevant to safety and health and they have to be stretched," he said.

Justice Department attorneys originally were scheduled to argue Friday for a full 80-day Taft-Hartley injunction against the strike by the 160,000 UMW members. Instead, they asked for an extension of the temporary order, arguing that a hearing on an injunction at this time might "distract" miners as they consider the new proposed contract agreed upon by union and industry leaders Tuesday.

"I don't think they (the government) would seriously contend they have enough" evidence for the injunction, Robinson said. "That's why they came in for an extension" of the temporary restraining order.

Glenn V. Whitaker, representing the government, told the judge, "We believe what we have now in affidavit form is sufficient for an injunction."

The judge replied, "you can't get a preliminary injunction" based on the evidence attorneys have presented thus far and "I find it very difficult to understand how I can comply with the law on this record and extend the (temporary order)."

The chief attorney for the United Mine Workers, Harrison Combs, had told the judge in earlier arguments that the union would not object to an extension of the temporary order.

Contrasts Shown For Coal Pacts

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Here is a comparison of major provisions in the United Mine Workers' 1974 contract, the contract rejected March 5 by the miners, and the tentative agreement on which the miners vote next Friday:

WAGES

NEW CONTRACT — $1 an hour increase immediately, 70 cents an hour each of the final two years, including 30-cent cost of living increases. That adds up to an average hourly wage of $10.20, plus shift differentials of 20 cents an hour for afternoon shift and 30 cents an hour for midnight shift, in the third year.

REJECTED CONTRACT — $1 an hour increase immediately, 40 cents an hour each of the final two years, plus a cost of living increase tied to the nation's economy, and thus not guaranteed. Other provisions the same as the new contract proposal.

OLD CONTRACT — Average hourly wage of $7.80. Cost of living adjustment of one cent per hour for every .4 increase in the consumer price index, with no adjustment downward if index fell. Shift differentials of 15 cents an hour for afternoon shift and 20 cents an hour for midnight shift.

PENSIONS

NEW CONTRACT — Pensions guaranteed for the first time in union history. Immediate increase to $275 a month for those who retired before 1976. February and March pensions, lost due to the strike, to be made up. Those who retired after Dec. 31, 1975, receive $10 a month increases each of the first two years and $5 a month the final year of the agreement, bringing average pensions to $450.

REJECTED CONTRACT — Same as new contract except increases for older retirees would have been spread over the life of the contract and pensions would not have reached $275 until the final year.

OLD CONTRACT — Two pension plans, one for miners who retired before 1976 and one for those who retired after Dec. 31, 1975. Older retired miners who received state or federal black lung benefits received a maximum of $225 a month. Those who received no black lung benefits received a maximum of $250 a month. Those who retired after Dec. 31, 1975, received an average of $425. No guarantee. Pension payments dependent upon the health of the trust funds financed by company paid royalties on man-hours worked and coal produced. There has been frequent financial difficulty in the fund for older pensioners, little trouble with the fund for younger retirees.

HEALTH CARE

NEW CONTRACT — Benefits maintained at 1974 contract level except for family payments totaling a maximum of $200 for working miners and $150 for retired miners. Miners will not have to pay anything for hospital visits. They will have to pay $5 for prescriptions up to a total of $50. Working miners will have to pay $7.50 for doctor visits, retired miners $5, up to a total of $150 for working miners and $100 for retired miners. Eye care coverage for the first time. Sickness and accident benefits $120 a week first year, $130 the second year and $150 the third year.

REJECTED CONTRACT — Miners would have had to pay deductible amounts up to $700 per family per year — including up to $500 for hospital visits — for active miners and a total of $450 for retired miners. Eye care coverage would have been provided. Sickness and accident benefits same as new contract.

OLD CONTRACT — Health care free, including such items as medication and ambulance service. No deductibles. No eye care. Sickness and accident benefits $100 a week.

LIFE INSURANCE

NEW CONTRACT — $12,000, plus an additional $12,000 if death is accidental for any reason.

REJECTED CONTRACT — Same as new agreement.

OLD CONTRACT — $2,000 for the beneficiary of a miner without dependents, ranging up to $10,000, depending on the number of dependents. If death occurred in a mine accident, an additional one-time cash payment of $10,000, plus $100 per month until the beneficiary's death or remarriage.

VACATION

NEW CONTRACT — Fourteen days vacation, plus 10 paid holidays, including birthday. A mine would select from one of three vacation periods to avoid industry-wide shutdown as in the past.

REJECTED CONTRACT — Fourteen days vacation, plus 10 paid holidays including birthday, plus a Christmas shutdown period of nine days, six of them paid.

OLD CONTRACT — Fourteen days vacation, plus 10 paid holidays, including birthday and two floating holidays. All UMW mines closed at the same time — late June and early July — for vacation period.

PRODUCTION INCENTIVE

NEW CONTRACT — An employer may institute a production incentive "bonus plan" if the employees involved vote their approval and it meets safety and other requirements.

REJECTED CONTRACT — None.

OLD CONTRACT — None.

PROUD FIRST LADY — Rosalyn Carter holds her grandson, James Earl Carter III, as she waits for the President to arrive at Wait Chapel on the Wake Forest University campus, Friday, in Winston-Salem, N.C. BY OSWALD JACOBY AND ALAN SONTAG

After a recent duplicate one defending pair is still gloating while one declarer and dummy are still gnashing their teeth.

Some way or other every South player reached four spades and every West opened the king of hearts and all but one continued the suit. South would ruff the third lead, draw trumps and concede a trick to the ace of diamonds.

At the tooth-gnashing table East followed with the queen of hearts. West looked at his partner's card with surprise, amazement, astonishment and whatever.

Could East have raised him to two hearts with queen and one trump? Could East have pulled the wrong card? Could East have suddenly gone insane? Could his own eyes be deceiving him?

West abandoned all those possibilities and came around to thinking that East must know what he was doing. Then that queen had to be a suit preference signal asking for a shift to a diamond.

So West shifted to a diamond. East took his singleton ace; put West in with the ace of hearts; ruffed a diamond for the setting trick and listened to the moans and groans from North and South.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: "Chilly in Philly" burned me up with that blanket indictment of Yankees, especially Pennsylvanians. I grew up with and fervently believed the Southern myth of the "damnyankee" — until, thank God, a sensible, sincere, courteous and hardworking Pittsburgh man taught me differently.

And may I remind "Belle from Richmond," who considers herself well versed in history, that Virginian General Lee took up his sword against the Union in deep sorrow — and laid it down at Appomattox with a vow to devote the rest of his life to rebuilding the nation he loved, a truly UNITED States, forged in bitter war. It surely must sadden the ghost of that gallant American to see that a fellow Virginian hopes for a "next time." — Reconstructed Rebel

Dear Recon: Thank you from all of us — both north and south of the Mason-Dixon line. You said it beautifully.

• • •

Dear Ann: We are very friendly with a couple who live nearby, and we go out together often. We always use our car although theirs is just as comfortable. It's always "What time will you pick us up?"

My husband is tired of getting stuck for gas and oil, parking fees, etc., while they get portal-to-portal transportation. How can we turn this around without appearing cheap? — Free Livery

• • •

Dear Liv: Next time say, "How about picking us up for a change?" The time after say, "It's our turn to drive." In this way you will get on an alternating basis. Far better to speak up than remain silent and build an ulcer.

• • •

Dear Ann: Loved your column on the school bus driver. Here's a message I hope you'll print. It says it all.

WHAT IS A SCHOOL BUS DRIVER?

A school bus driver is a person who smiles in the morning and smiles in the evening and eats Rolaids in between.

A school bus driver gets there when nobody else can; finds houses which don't exist and children with no names.

He dries tears, dispels fears and finds lost notebooks.

A school bus driver has eyes in the back of his head and hears every word, even in sign language.

He is immune to noise.

A school bus driver's favorite words (besides "Good morning" and "Good night") are, "Sit down."

A school bus driver's worst apprehension involves five-year-olds with motion sickness — especially in the winter when the windows are closed and the heater is on.

Sometimes a school bus driver gets tired — but he seldom gets mad; and always, most faithfully, he gets there. — From the Wyoming Educator

Dear Wyoming: Thanks. It does indeed say it all.

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL to Sorry Now: Too bad you were so impatient. You should have stayed with him until he got his strength back. He said he was "tired" — not dead. Ask for another chance.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was much interested in the letter from the woman with the 5-year-old with recurrent urinary infection. My little niece had this problem and took medication, but nothing helped.

Then, after much praying, the answer was found to be that she had an allergy. She was allergic to citric acid, such as oranges, lemonade, tomatoes, and so on. She is not on a diet and avoids citrus acid foods. I thought you would be interested in this. — A.G.R.

An allergy certainly must be on a list of things to investigate when there is chronic urinary tract distrubances of this kind, and tomatoes and citrus fruits are high on any list of allergy suspects. Others are eggs, milk, chocolate, food coloring and flavorings, wheat, some nuts and cola drinks.

Cystitis (inflammation of the urinary bladder) can be caused by infection of an organism, or it can be a reaction to a substance in food as it reaches a particular point in the digestive system. Also, an allergy can irritate a membrane (as in the bladder) and thus set the stage for actual infection.

Mrs. T.O. asks me if such an allergy can cause bedwetting.

The allergy-irritation combination is usually worth investigating in cases of enuresis (bedwetting). One study indicates that 5 per cent of allergic children are also bedwetters.

Incidentally, thank you, A.G.R., for your note, which points up an important fact about youngsters and urinary-tract symptoms.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I recently had a sugar-tolerance test, which confirms that I have hypoglycemia. The Army physician's assistant seems to feel it is a question of metabolism rather than any physical malfunction. He feels I should be able to control the symptoms through diet, but he didn't give me any specific one and I'm finding it difficult to balance the several small feedings a day he recommends. I'm also trying to lose 20 pounds. — Mrs. R.L.B.

He probably meant that there is no physical malfunction, as for example in disorders of the thyroid, adrenal, or pituitary glands. A mild hypoglycemia can be controlled by the standard six feedings a day of high-protein food (but with a little carbohydrate content). If you're trying to lose weight, fat should be reduced. I think you will find some help in the low-blood-sugar booklet you ask about. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can Down's syndrome be predicted by checking the fluid in the pregnant woman's fetal sac? When is it done? — L.F.

Yes, and this is one of the commonest reasons for having amniocentesis done. Laboratory tests of a tiny amount of amniotic sac fluid will show the characteristic chromosome situation of Down's syndrome (mongolism). This is usually done in the 14th to 16th week of pregnancy.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If a person had a stroke and wore corrective eyeglasses before it, does he need examination for new glasses afterward? — Mrs. J.R.

Yes, because eye muscles may be involved and a check for glaucoma is in order.

• • •

Bed wetting can be a frustrating problem but it can be controlled. To learn how, write to Dr. Thosteson at P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. for a copy of his booklet, "Bed-Wetting: Ways To Stop It," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

COFFEE LOVERS!

Have I got a money-saving, taste bud-awakening idea for you!

I really enjoy my coffee. Nothing tastes better than that first good cup early in the morning while reading the paper.

I also enjoy many of those fancy, continental-type coffees that come in different flavors, but they really do get expensive. Also, many of them have sugar added, and that really boosts the calorie count (for those of us who count).

As the old saying goes, "I put my brian to work," and came up with an idea that saves money -considerably, and calories - lots.

I make my own. My favorite is cinnamon. I sprinkle some ground cinnamon in my coffee cup, add some artificial sweetener and then pour in the coffee. I add my creamer or skim milk and stir well.

I guar-an-tee that it will delight your taste buds, and have you humming with plesure.

I also like nutmeg or allspice added, especially for after-dinner coffee. It is almost like a rich, sweet dessert for me, and really satisfies that urge to have something I don't really need.

A dash or spoonful or cocoa, depending on how strong your taste preference is, will give your coffee a sinfully good, chocolate flavor that is unbeatable. Bon appetit! -Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

Sometimes when I read a hint in your column I feel so smart, if I'd already thought of it. Other times I just think an idea is original with me and then realize that it had come from your column.

Grand Jury Indicts 10 In Lubbock

A federal grand jury has returned indictments against 10 Lubbock area persons.

Indicted — with ages and last known addresses provided by federal authorities — were:

— Norman Eugene Gardner, 27, Route 3, Box 46, Lubbock, a four-count indictment including two charges of a convicted felon making false statements in connection with the acquisition of a firearm and two charges of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

— Denise Johnson, 20, 3413 E. 19th St., a two-count indictment for forgery and the passing of a stolen U.S. Treasury check.

— Mary Francis Lopez, 33, 2504 Ave. K, obstruction of correspondence.

— David Michael Wilson, 30, 2107-D 49th St., making a false statement to a bank to obtain a loan.

— Richard L. Alcorta, 22, 3205 Colgate St., possession of a firearm by a convicted felon.

— Raymond Arredondo, 36, formerly of Plainview but last known to be living in Illinois, making a false statement in connection with the acquisition of a firearm.

— Bennie Jean Hicks, 26, 3314 E. Cornell St., a three-count indictment including obstruction of correspondence, forgery of an endorsement on a U.S. Treasury check and passing a forged U.S. Treasury check.

— Alphonso C. Orr Jr., 22, 5501 22nd St., a three-count indictment including obstruction of correspondence, forgery of an endorsement on a U.S. Treasury check and passing a forged U.S. Treasury check.

— Clifton Horace Smith, 22, Spur, making a false statement with the acquisition of a firearm.

— Lola Mae Baucum, 56, Midland, claiming 13 withholding exemptions for tax purposes when allegedly entitled to only two.

Two other persons were indicted in connection with crimes alleged to have occurred in Lubbock.

They are Herbert Meeks, 39, of Canyon Lakes, and Artis Wayne Chew, 22, of Lewisville.

A five-count indictment in connection with possession of stolen postal money orders was returned against Meeks.

A three-count indictment was returned against Chew, including obstructing correspondence, forging an endorsement on a U.S. Treasury check and passing a forged U.S. Treasury check.

Dam Safety Plans Hit By Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recalling last November's Toccoa Falls, Ga., dam collapse, which took 39 lives, Georgia's natural resources commissioner said Friday that not more than five states have adequate dam safety programs.

Commissioner Joe D. Tanner urged a Senate subcommittee to quickly approve dam safety legislation so that each state could have such a program "without waiting to respond to a terrible disaster."

"Based on a study we made, not more than three to five states have an adequate dam safety program," Tanner told the water resources subcommittee of the Senate Committee on the Environment and Public Works.

He did not name the states, but did say that California has an excellent program.

Robin R. Reynolds, deputy director of the California Department of Water Resources, also testified in support of the proposed legislation, which is sponsored by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

The bill would provide federal assistance to states to develop and implement dam safety programs. States which established programs meeting federal standards would participate along with the federal government in a national dam inspection program.

Tanner told the subcommittee he was first informed of the Toccoa Falls disaster in a telephone call at his home at 2 a.m. on Nov. 6.

"I asked that night and on many occasions since, 'Could that tragedy have been averted?'," he said. "I have to say that it could have been. Every indication was that that was a dam in serious trouble."

When the 38-foot-high Taccoa Falls dam burst, it sent a 30-foot wall of water crashing down the falls and through the dormitories and trailers of Taccoa Falls Institute, a small Bible college at the foot of the falls.

"If we had had a law in effect at the time, the dam would have been inspected and drained," Tanner said. "I hope that we do not have to have another tragedy before we are able to put our dam safety program into effect."

Georgia has enacted a dam safety law that will take effect July 1, but Tanner said the state program would be "much more adequate and stable" if the legislation providing for federal matching grants is enacted.

Candidate Blasts Foe's Tactics

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Clements of Dallar said Friday his opponent for the GOP gubernatorial nomination was "wallowing" in mud when he accused Clements of misuse of Air Force planes.

Clements made the statement about Ray Hutchison, his opponent, during a Capitol news conference.

He bridled when asked to comment on Hutchison's accusation that he had taken a pleasure trip in an Air Force plane while serving as a deputy secretary of defense.

"If my opponent wants to wallow around in some hog wallow, he can do it by himself," Clements said.

Clements also was asked to comment on a newspaper column, several years old, to the effect that he pushed for sales of fighters to Iran while holding business interests in that nation.

He said his record in the defense department is an open book, and "I have been looked at by experts for four years." One columnist who wrote of the Iranian problem, Joseph Kraft, is "the epitome of the Eastern liberal establishment," Clements said.

Of the allegations, he said, "There's nothing to them. It's baloney."

Clements also said his contributors and volunteer campaigners include a "significant" number of persons who once backed Democratic Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

"It is surprising how many Democrats that formerly supported Mr. Briscoe are moving over to me," Clements said.

He declined to give names or specific figures.

"I know what the numbers are, and they are significant.... I expect to have a lot more, frankly, because that is what I am all about, ... a Republican candidate who can win in November," Clements said.

Clements said that if elected governor he would appoint task forces, with six-month deadlines, to study two of the most difficult questions facing state government: property taxes and school finance.

Reminded that the Legislature would convene and adjourn during his first six months in office, Clements said, "As I recall the constitution, I as governor can call the Legislature back into session as I deem appropriate."

Special sessions last only 30 days, but he said the complex issues could be dealt with in that time "if the programs are well conceived" and top legislative leaders had served on the task forces.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. Our joint income is about $31,000. We have $4,000 in saving earning 5¼ percent. Should we buy municipal bonds? Would they be safer? Some friends suggest we buy tax-sheltered bonds for our 5-year-old son? Are children allowed to have income?

A. If, as I assume, you are a young-to-middle-aged couple it seems clear that your investing is motivated by extreme caution and by a refusal to face up to the problems which come from having accumulated money.

An income of $31,000 indicates a tax bracket which pretty well eliminates at least half the gain from a savings account. (And what taxes don't take, inflation will.)

I don't want to scold anyone who seeks to "play it safe," but I also cannot ignore the fact that there are only relative amounts of safety in today's financial world. And that you are paying a high price for yours.

To answer one of your questions directly: $40,000 in insured savings accounts is "safer" than $40,000 you're doing as well as can be expected in world subject to many forms of investment crises.

If you try to do more you must assume the risk of the market place — bond market or stock market or real estate market, or antique market, etc.

A child certainly may have income and since his tax bracket is obviously lower (if not non-existent) you and your wife could shift $6,000 a year into custodian accounts in his favor. Since taxes are not the main issue, there is no point to tax-exempt bonds. And, since you are looking years ahead, some equity investments would make sense, too.

• • •

Q. Would you recommend investing in high grade bonds if you still have an 8½ percent mortgage on your home? Could these bonds be redeemed in an emergency?

A. A corporate bond may be sold (not redeemed) at ANY time. The price you get depends upon market conditions — it may be more or less than the price you paid.

The question of whether to put investable money into 8½ percent bonds or into extinguishing one's 8½ percent mortgage depends to a great extent on the individual investor's needs.

A retired investor living on a tight budget would ease the strain considerably by wiping out the mortgage instead of investing in bonds because he would thereby save not only the 8½ percent interest being paid out but the monthly amortization which, I admit, is a "saving" but not necessarily a comfortable one for those living on a modest retirement budget.

If the retired persons had no budget problems and felt more comfortable with the liquidity provided by a high grade bond, purchase of the bond while allowing the mortgage to "ride" would be plausible.

In the case of a younger, still-employed person interested in building capital, I'd to retain the mortgage and put money, instead, into growth equity securities or any other growth venture.

• • •

Q. Bank certificates run to 4 to 7 years. What is the usual maturity of corporation bonds?

A. You may go into the market and buy a bond that matures in 1979 or in 2009 or 2017. And you can sell any such bond tomorrow, if you like.

Sheats' Debate Offer Rejected

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Morris Sheats said Friday he is "very disappointed" his Democratic opponent, state Sen. Kent Hance, refused to debate him and urged Hance to "seriously reconsider debating me any time, any place."

"This debate is very important, and I am disappointed that my opponent has treated it so lightly," Sheats said.

In a conversation with Avalanche-Journal editors Thursday, Sheats said he would debate Hance "any time, any place he agrees to."

However, Hance turned down the suggestion and said a debate challenge is "an American tradition that the candidate who finds himself way behind in the race" uses.

The Lubbock attorney said the debate challenge told him Sheats "is truly worried about his progress in the campaign."

Sheats denied he issued the challenge because he felt he was trailing in the race, saying the "allegation doesn't hold water."

"There are some basic political differences between myself and my opponent," Sheats said. "I am the conservative candidate in the Democratic primary for the U.S. Congress, and all the people in West Texas deserve an opportunity to evaluate these differences."

Sheats refused to discuss those differences saying, "That's what a debate is for — to bring out the differences. That's why it is so important."

The Trinity Church pastor did say one of the differences is that he is a "persuasive communicator" and that would come across in a televised debate. But Sheats conceded "the issue" in the race now is the debate.

Sheats said he could name the differences between him and Hance, but preferred the differences to "be brought out in a powerful way such as in a debate."

He emphasized Congressional hearings would soon be televised and residents of the Congressional district had a right to see how candidates for the office appear on television.

Voters in the district have been polled, Sheats said, but he refused to release any figures to indicate if they showed him leading or trailing Hance.

He said the race is close in some of the counties, but in some "we would be way ahead."

"We feel the campaign has not been won by anybody," he said.

"I've always been part of a winning team and my 2,600 workers do not intend to lose in May," Sheats said, adding he "feels good about where our campaign is today."

In responding to the challenge Thursday, Hance said he had appeared at numerous forums with Sheats and would continue to do so as his schedule permits.

However, he said he had attended every forum to which he'd been invited while Sheats had missed some of those.

Sheats labeled that "incorrect information" and said Hance missed an Odessa forum several weeks ago which Sheats attended.

Sheats said he had missed none of the forums, but his wife represented him at one event.

But Sheats said the forums excluded those in small towns, whereas "through the magic of television, this debate would include the people in small communities as well as in the large communities."

Asked if he felt Hance was wise to refuse the invitation to debate, Sheats said he thought it was "very unwise politically for Hance to refuse."

Sheats had proposed a televised debate between the two Democratic opponents sponsored by a non-partisan organization such as the League of Women Voters.

However, league president Carolyn Lanier said the organization would not sponsor a debate, but was contemplating a televised forum involving both Republican and Democratic Congressional candidates.

If that forum is held, candidates would have the opportunity to speak and then would be questioned by league members.

In the same session with Avalanche-Journal editorial staff members which produced the debate challenge, Sheats promised he would "conduct a sample survey of 400 registered voters (in the district) to get their feedback on issues" every four months.

He also repeated his primary campaign promise of returning to "every county seat twice a year on a pre-announced basis to listen to the people one-on-one."

On the subject of agriculture Sheats said, "I am not for guaranteeing everything by law to the farmer. But they ultimately must have a place to sell their products," he said.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture must start moving commodities around the world and create markets for (the farmers)," Sheats said.

"Saying 'keep the government out of farming' is fine for a political speech, but it just doesn't work that way.

"The farmer cannot pass on cost increases," he noted.

Sheats said he felt the U.S. should use food as a diplomatic tool and as leverage against other nations instead of arms.

The minister said he had been recruiting workers in the 17 counties of the Congressional district and emphasized his organization had a "widespread, broad-based group of people" working for it.

Man Cited With Manslaughter

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — Clarence Ronald "Ronnie" McCoy, 27, of Lubbock, will be arraigned Wednesday in District Court in Lovington, N.M., on the charge of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of his 21-year-old wife, Donna.

According to Lea County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Gene Denton and Deputy Greg Howell, Mrs. McCoy was killed in her quarters at Westward Trailer Court in Hobbs the night of Nov. 4, 1976. Her body was taken to an abandoned oil well location in the sand hills about 20 miles west of Hobbs, where it was buried in a shallow grave.

The body of the grocery checker was discovered by arrowhead hunters on March 20, 1977, and was reported to have the appearance of a mummy because it was so badly decomposed.

McCoy was arrested by Hobbs police Nov. 15, 1977, as a fugitive from justice with charges pending against him in Texas. He was released to Texas authorities by Hobbs police and subsequently released on bond in Lubbock.

He later returned to Hobbs but disappeared the day his wife's body was found. He told police at the time he was arrested that the last time he saw his wife was when they were in the process of getting a divorce and he left her and his child, Christa, then 18-months old, at a bus station in Odessa.

The child was found Nov. 5, 1977, in an Odessa supermarket, abandoned and sitting in a shopping cart. She was identified by a Hobbs woman who had been her babysitter when the woman saw the child's picture in a Hobbs newspaper.

McCoy was arrested recently in El Centro, Calif., on a felony warrant charging him with issuing worthless checks. He signed a waiver to return to New Mexico and was brought back to Hobbs.

He is being held in the county jail in Lovington in lieu of $50,000 bond, set by magistrate Drayton Wasson.

Reporters Barred From Courtroom

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — An angry judge has barred Marietta Daily Journal reporters from the fourth floor of the Cobb County Judicial Building, saying a story about him published in the newspaper contained "lies."

Superior Court Judge Howell Ravan said he directed bailiffs to keep Journal reporters off the floor where his courtroom and offices are located.

The story published in Tuesday's edition of the newspaper claimed Ravan was involved in an attempt to fire the county's public safety director, Otis Brumby, publisher of the paper, said the information in the story was accurate.

Health Review Plan Approved

By JIM BUSBY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

South Plains Health Systems (SPHS) governing body members Thursday night approved the agency's "revised procedures and criteria for project review" — a process that essentially could recommend or kill future plans to expand or change some health facilities in a 15-county area including Lubbock.

The SPHS decision to conduct the review process in those 15 counties — beginning May 1 — allows SPHS to screen certain area health project proposals and then pass its recommendations to the Texas Medical Facilities Commission and/or to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Current federal law details circumstances under which health-related facilities must seek review, but generally covers all federally-funded, health-related projects and new institutional health services.

The SPHS procedures and criteria specifically cite review methods, including the omission of votes — but not the opinions — of health systems volunteers who might be influenced by conflicts of interests.

Any of the 21 members of the project review committee may express his opinion of a health proposed health project, but he will not be allowed to vote once his conflict of interest has been recognized.

According to the newly adopted review guidelines, committee or governing body members must notify SPHS of possible conflicts, thereby relinquishing their votes on the projects involved.

The review committee recommendations go to the full governing body for a vote and then — following public hearings — to HEW and the TMFC.

The governing body Thursday also formally adopted its "Health Systems Plan" and "Annual Implementation Plan", documents that list area health needs — as determined by SPHS — and steps that should be taken to satisfy those needs.

The lengthy documents were formulated following the compilation of area health data, SPHS study and public hearings.

HEW must approve the health system's proposed HSP and AIP which would guide SPHS function for the next five years.

The plans would serve as partial fulfillment of requirements for "full designation" as the area's health systems agency.

SPHS staffers hope the full designation status can be applied to their agency with the beginning of the upcoming federal grant period. SPHS is expected to seek an estimated $195,000 for that time — June 17.

Drilling Base Sought

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Lewes, Del., is one of two sites preferred by the Continental Oil Co. as a port and support base for offshore oil drilling in the Baltimore Canyon, according to a company official.

Louis M. Ayers, offshore supervisor of North American production for Conoco, said here that Atlantic City is the company's No. 1 choice for a long-term onshore base.

The company may have to turn to Lewes, a historic port town in southern Delaware, because of "wetlands problems" in Atlantic City, he said. Those problems may prevent the necessary construction of docks and channel dredging, Ayers added.

Speaking to the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, Ayers said he was well aware of Ocean City's concerns about oil drilling in the Atlantic.

"I can't understand why we can't convey how small is the risk of destruction" to beaches and resort businesses, he told the group.

The tract leased by Conoco from the federal government is located between 68 and 77 miles off the coast from Atlantic City on the outer continental shelf.

To use the Lewes site, which is now occupied by an old fish plant, Conoco would have to dredge a channel that is now about six feet to 17 feet deep.

Damages Considered In Kodak Lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) — A 10-member federal jury began its second round of deliberations Friday in the $42.9-million antitrust suit Berkey Photo, Inc. filed five years ago against photo-giant Eastman Kodak Co.

In the second trial, which began three weeks ago, the jury is to determine damages Kodak may be required to pay Berkey in return for lost profits and sales and for overcharges to Berkey resulting from Kodak's dominance of the amateur photographic market.

In January, the same jury concluded in the first round that Kodak had injured Berkey by monopolizing the amateur photographic markets for film, still and movie cameras, color print paper, and photofinishing services and equipment.

In 1973, Berkey attorneys initially sued for $300 million in damages. After the first trial, they reduced their claim to $93.4 million and on Thursday they adjusted the claim still lower, to $42.9 million.

In his hour-long instructions Friday to the jury of eight women and two men, U.S. District Judge Marvin Frankel said the jurors' task was not to fine or penalize Kodak, but to compensate Berkey.

"Your verdict must be designed to make Berkey whole by putting it, financially, in the position it would have been in but for the wrongful conduct of the defendant (Kodak)," Frankel said.

In so doing, Frankel noted that if the jury concludes that Berkey failed to make "prudent" efforts to overcome business difficulties stemming from competition with Kodak, then damages paid to Berkey must be less.

He noted that Kodak's attorneys have argued in this second trial that Berkey suffered losses not because of Kodak's dominance, but because of "poor management, mistakes in business judgment and entirely lawful competition by Kodak."

The jurors will deliver their verdict by answering a series of 10 questions, each written in two parts: Whether damages are due and how much those damages are. Frankel reminded the jurors that their vote must be unanimous on all damage issues. The panel was expected to deliberate through the weekend.

Berkey's claims are for compensation partly for losses resulting from Kodak's introduction of photo "systems" — interrelated camera, film, flash and photofinishing processes. One such system is the 110 pocket Instamantic camera, Kodacolor II film, and other related products introduced in 1972.

Kodak jointly developed the Magicube flash and camera rig with Sylvania in 1970 and the Flipflash with General Electric in 1975.

Berkey claims it was damaged by those agreements, which the jury earlier found in violation of antitrust laws because the joint projects were not disclosed in advance of their introduction.

Berkey also wants damages for what it claims were excessively high prices it paid for Kodak film and color print paper. Berkey argues Kodak was able to charge the excessive prices because of its dominance over the film and paper markets.

Other losses were incurred, Berkey has claimed, because Kodak received discriminatory discounts for Magicubes and Flipflash units from Sylvania and General Electric in return for being included in Kodak's camera kits.

Candidate Names Staff For County

Republican Congressional candidate Jim Reese named Deane Stoltz and Gywn Sparks co-chairmen for Midland County and named Brad Patteson operations chairman for the county.

Stoltz, president of Tipperary Corporation, will be involved in overall campaign coordination. Mrs. Sparks, a Midland housewife and piano teacher, will be responsible for precinct organization, volunteer recruitment and headquarters activities.

Patteson, a self-employed businessman, will coordinate the precinct organization in Midland County.

In Ector County, Reese named Jack Chapman county campaign chairman. Chapman is a 25-year resident of Odessa and the owner of Texas Tanque Manufacturing Company, Inc., in Odessa.

As chairman, Chapman will be involved in organizing precincts, arranging neighborhood coffees and fund raising.

DANGEROUS WORK

Some 14,000 deaths annually are due to on-the-job accidents, the Conference Board observes. And government officials now estimate that there are as many as 100,000 deaths directly attributable to work hazards, in addition to the 390,000 new cases of occupationally-related disease discovered each year.

Leaks Harm Probes, Griffin Bell Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell accused Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., Friday of jeopardizing Justice Department investigations by disclosing confidential information.

He called Wallop's action "a gross breach" of an agreement under which the department furnished documents to the Senate Judiciary Committee in connection with its hearings on Benjamin R. Civiletti's nomination to be deputy attorney general.

Bell's protest was made in a letter to Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., Wallop, who said he disagreed "with the substance of the allegations," has been using the confirmation hearings on Civiletti's nomination to probe the removal of David Marston as U.S. attorney in Philadelphia.

Bell said none of the matters in the documents disclosed by Wallop on Thursday "relate to the facts and circumstances of the dismissal of Mr. Marston."

Rather, he said, "all of them relate to other areas where actual investigations are being conducted ... The disclosure of this information jeopardizes the ongoing investigations of this department."

Bell's letter cited a report that Wallop quoted from a Justice Department document referring to a grand jury investigation "into fraud and corruption" involving Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., and several federal agencies, including the Department of Justice.

He also noted that the story said Wallop told reporters the quotes were taken from a Nov. 2 cover letter by Kurt Muellenberg, chief of the justice department's organized crime section, relating to an immunity grant for Stephen Elko, a former aide to Flood.

Meanwhile, Wallop asked President Carter for sworn affidavits from five White House aides, including top political advisor Hamilton Jordan, on information they had about Marston's replacement.

Wallop said the letter was being circulated among all Judiciary Committee members for signing. The only ones who had signed it so far, in addition to Wallop, were Sens. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Paul Laxalt, R-Nev.

The only witness, as the committee concluded its fourth week of hearings on Civiletti's nomination, was Associate Attorney General Michael J. Egan. He said he had recommended to Bell last March that Marston, a Republican, be retained, but said Bell rejected his recommendation.

Egan also testified that the first time he heard anything to indicate that Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., might be under investigation was when he read a news article on Jan. 10.

The replacement of Marston stirred controversy after Carter told a news conference on Jan. 12 that he had directed Bell to expedite it after receiving a phone call from Eilberg last Nov. 4.

Juvenile Drug Users Arrested In Roundup

WILLIMANTIC, Conn. (AP) — More than 50 students, most of them under 16 years old and three of them just 9, have been arrested around their schools here on charges involving the sale or possession of marijuana, police said.

Residents said they thought the roundup would help cut into drug use in the area, and Windham High School Superintendent Dr. Thomas Pepe said he hoped it would "act as a deterrent."

Police Chief John P. Hussey said the police were also after persons believed responsible for distributing the marijuana.

The arrests began Wednesday morning around Windham High School and continued through the day and throughout the town.

Pepe said Thursday that he believes Windham High is no different from any other urban school of 1,600 pupils.

"I think we're a typical school. I think that in most urban high schools there would be some use of drugs, some use of marijuana," he said.

Charges in the arrests involved the sale or possession of marijuana.

"We are concerned about the misuse of drugs, including alcohol, which doesn't enter into it at this time," Pepe said.

"Certainly, we'll continue to support, we will continue to cooperate" with police, Pepe said.

"We hope that this recent move will act as a deterrent to other students ... to discourage them from the use of drugs."

Jet Lands Safely After Losing Gear

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A Denver-bound Frontier Airlines jet lost a portion of its left landing gear on takeoff from McCarran International Airport here and made an emergency landing on a foamed runway. There were no injuries.

The plane landed safely Thursday night about 20 minutes after takeoff. One of the 45 passengers said he heard a "clunking" noise when the jet lifted off.

Anglo-American Treaty Permits Lower Transatlantic Air Fares

WASHINGTON (AP) — Great Britain yielded Friday to U.S. demands for low transatlantic air fares, and the two nations signed agreements that will open up less inexpensive travel to London from 13 more American cities.

President Carter announced in Winston-Salem, N.C., that the agreements were signed after a week of tough negotiations in Washington. Carter reportedly discussed the matter by phone during the week with British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

One agreement settles the low-fare dispute, and another liberalizes charter airline service between the two nations.

"These two agreements constitute a major step forward in implementing our key objective in international travel — to provide the traveling public with a wide choice of low fares on scheduled flights," Carter said in a statement.

"They demonstrate once again that we can work out differences with our most important aviation partner," he added.

The British government earlier had insisted on confining less expensive point two weeks ago when it blocked Braniff Airways from inaugurating its Dallas-Fort Worth to London service because the carrier offered low-cost tickets.

Braniff now is free to start the service, and said it will do so on Saturday.

The Civil Aeronautics Board had recommended that Carter suspend British Caledonian Airways' London-Houston service if Britain continued to bar Braniff's flights. Carter held off action pending outcome of the negotiations, but warned he would consider retaliatory action if an agreement were not reached by March 17.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, the House Majority leader, said: "I assume the British realized that cooperation is a two-way street. Americans are the most prolific air travelers in the world — 60 percent of air travel is by citizens of the United States."

The President said the agreement will make it possible for airlines to offer budget, standby and advanced purchase fares between London and these U.S. gateway cities: Anchorage, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas-Fort Worth, Detroit, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle and Washington-Baltimore.

As an example of what fares might be available, British Airways, in anticipation of an agreement, this week proposed these one-way standby prices to London: $162 from Washington, $143 from Boston, $151 from Philadelphia, $169 from Detroit, $171 from Chicago and $227 from Los Angeles and San Francisco.

A regular one-way coach ticket from Washington to London costs $340.

Pam American World Airways said it would offer similar rates from 10 U.S. departure points starting Saturday. Fares to the U.S. would be slightly lower because of the monetary exchange rate.

Treasury Proposes New Weapon Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed new regulations might make it easier for police to trace weapons used in crimes.

The regulations, proposed by the Treasury Department, would require: a new serial number system for firearms; daily reports to the federal government on firearm thefts; quarterly reports on dispositions of handguns among manufacturers, importers and dealers.

ADAPTS TO CALIFORNIA LIFESTYLE — Interviewed at a luncheon in her honor in Palm Springs recently Mrs. Betty Ford said she and the former president, Gerald Ford, have adapted to the new California lifestyle with ease. She said, "I feel great. My problem is arthritis, and the desert and Palm Springs agrees with me." At the luncheon with her was one of the town's star residents, actress Mary Martin, right.(AP Laserphoto)

Fords Enjoy Palm Springs Life

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Gerald and Betty Ford move into their rambling new 15-room desert home this weekend, and the former first lady says, "It's turned out even better than I expected. Both of us are very happy."

In recent weeks Mrs. Ford took time out from writing her autobiography to oversee last-minute touches to the 6,000-square foot ranch house adjacent to the Thunderbird Country Club golf course in the Rancho Mirage section of this desert oasis 100 miles east of Los Angeles.

"Since it's been painted, it looks like a jewel," she said. "The furniture has been made; the drapes have been made, and it's ready."

Mrs. Ford spoke in a recent interview about the new California lifestyle which she said she and the former president have adopted with ease.

"Palm Springs agrees with me," she said. "I didn't think it would be agreeing with me so much ... I feel great. My (health) problem is arthritis and the desert is great for my arthritis."

She was seated in the sunny patio of Palm Springs' most elegant French restaurant where, moments before, she had been honored at an intimate luncheon.

At a flower-bedecked table, Mrs. Ford laughed and chatted with one of the town's star residents — actress Mary Martin. Across the table sat John Barrymore Jr.

"I haven't been to a luncheon in 30 years," said Miss Martin. "But I wouldn't have missed this one."

The occasion was Mrs. Ford's introduction as patron chairman of the Palm Springs Center for the Performing Arts. The organization seeks to raise funds to bring theater road shows to the desert.

Mrs. Ford's appearance at the luncheon inspired one guest to donate a $7,500 check on the spot.

Mrs. Ford, radiant in an aqua and white summer dress, said later she has always considered the endowment of the arts her pet project.

"I guess I've been involved in the endowment of the arts since I was 8 years old and started dancing," she said.

"It seems I've been on stage — whether doing well or indifferently — since I was 8."

She spoke of the importance of the arts to towns such as Palm Springs and to the nation. "A country cannot go on without a culture, without the arts," she said.

The Fords retired to Palm Springs in January 1977 following his defeat by Jimmy Carter in the 1976 presidential election.

They moved into a temporary, rented home near their new residence and announced that they had contracted to write separate books.

Mrs. Ford's book, which she says is being edited, is due for publication this fall. The former president's memoirs, expected to include his views of Watergate, are scheduled for publication in the summer of 1979.

Ford travels a great deal these days, giving speeches and attending functions across the country. His military aide, Bob Barrett, says "We received over 5,000 requests last year for appearances."

When the former president is at home, he golfs. Mrs. Ford says that's why they chose Palm Springs for retirement.

"We'd been coming here for 15 years," she said. "But I thought of it as a vacation spot.

"When we looked for a place to retire — and I convinced my husband to retire — we considered the East Coast because most of our life had been lived in Washington.

"However, after exploring the islands and the southern part of the East Coast, I began thinking about his interest in golf, and I was interested in the desert."

The Fords spend part of the year at their ski lodge in Vail, Colo. But the details and size of the house they have built here shows they consider this their home.

The new house has a complete exercise room and a swimming pool, a semi-detached two-bedroom guest house for use by visiting Ford family members and other guests.

The architect, MacDonald Becket, desiged a "bright and airy" kitchen for Mrs. Ford and "an intimate breakfast room overlooking a small, semi-enclosed exterior garden opening to the morning sun."

There is a large outdoor terrace for patio entertaining.

Reagan Urges Continued Treaty Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan urged conservatives Friday to keep fighting against the Panama Canal treaty. He also said Africa is in danger of becoming a Communist continent.

Speaking to the annual Conservative Political Action Conference, the former California governor called on conservatives to "make your views known to your elected representatives on this next treaty debate."

The Senate ratified by a 68-32 vote Thursday a treaty that would guarantee the neutrality of the canal once the United States relinquishes control. The second treaty would turn the canal over to the Republic of Panama by the year 2000.

Reagan said the second treaty is "the basic treaty because it is the one which would relinquish our rights and would actually eliminate the Canal Zone as soon as it goes into effect — if it does."

Reagan said the treaty approved Thursday would become meaningless eventually no matter what happens to the second one.

"Even though the neutrality treaty supposedly guarantees our right to go back in to defend the canal after 1999, if there is no Canal Zone, wouldn't any such move on our part be branded as interference in the internal affairs of Panama?" he asked.

"On the other hand," Reagan said, "if the basic treaty is not ratified, the neutrality treaty itself won't have much meaning because our rights and our presence in the Canal Zone would continue."

Reagan also said the canal treaties were based on mistaken assumptions which "are being duplicated around the world" by the Carter administration, particularly in the handling of the conflict between Somalia and Ethiopia.

"The Soviet goal is obvious," Reagan said, "to secure a permanent foothold for itself on the Red Sea.

"If the Soviets are successful — and it looks more and more as if they will be — then the etire Horn of Africa will be under their influence, if not their control," he said. "From there, they can threaten the sea lanes carrying oil to Western Europe and the United States, if and when they choose.

"More immediately, control of the Horn of Africa would give Moscow the ability to destabilize those governments on the Arabian peninsula which have proven themselves strongly anti-communist," Reagan said. "Among them are some of the world's principal oil exporters."

Reagan also criticized American positions in regard to Rhodesia, saying the United States should "support the moderate position in Rhodesia and quietly tell Moscow to keep its hands off."

On South Africa, he said "control of its mineral riches and its strategic position is the Soviet Union's ultimate goal in Africa.

"Unless the White House can bring itself to understand these realities, it is not too much to say that in a few years we may be faced with the prospect of a Soviet empire of proteges and dependencies stretching from Addis Ababa to Capetown," Reagan said.

SEED MONEY

U.S. business now spends $2 billion a year educating and training its executives and other employees. More than 40,000 full-time teachers are employed to run these programs. About 70 percent of the money is spent on employees who hae already proven their worth to the companies, with the other 30 percent spent on new workers.

'Brighties' Confound Judge; Art Thief Avoids Jail Term

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A judge has ruled that a convicted art thief who has an IQ of 140 should not have to go to jail because "we don't have the prison facilities to handle a genius."

"The system is set up for people with more normal intelligence. I don't understand the dummies and I don't understand the brighties," said Montgomery County Common Pleas Court Judge Russell E. Yeazel in suspending a 2-to-5-year prison sentence and granting probation to Ronald Anthony Valerin.

Valerin, 22, had pleaded guilty to stealing $14,500 worth of art works from Dayton and Cincinnati museums.

Yeazel said in his ruling Wednesday that it would be as difficult to impose a sentence on Valerin as it would be to sentence a mentally incompetent defendant. He also said that Valerin, who graduated cum laude from Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., last year, has a serious psychological problem and is under a doctor's care.

The judge said a psychiatric report showed Valerin had an IQ — intelligence quotient — of 140, which places him in the "genius category." Persons with "normal" intelligence have IQs around 100.

"We seldom see a defendant with such an IQ," Yeazel said after the sentencing.

Valerin was arrested after a security guard at the Dayton Art Institute saw him leave with a large bundle and later noticed that a bronze sculpture was missing.

Police confiscated more than 60 pieces of art estimated to be worth $100,00 from his Dayton home, including an etching by Edouard Manet taken from the Cincinnati Art Museum in November.

Cincinnati police said Valerin told them he carried the Manet etching "right out the front door."

Also confiscated were drawings and photos taken from the Williamstown College Museum of Art where Valerin had worked as a student monitor.

Franklin W. Robinson, director of the college museum, said that when Valerin worked there he had been emotionally upset.

"He needed art as a part of his spiritual life but was afraid of it because of its power over him," Robinson said. "If anything, he responded too deeply to art."

Valerin, who declined comment on the judge's ruling, still faces sentencing Monday in Mailton County Common Court for the theft of the etching in Cincinnati.

A WARNING TO POETS

The Italian lyric poet Carlo Alessandro Guidi was said to have died as an indirect result of his poetical version of the six homilies of Pope Clement XI. While en route to present a copy to the pope, he discovered a grave typographical error, after which he was seized by an apoplectic fit and died.

Cartoon Ad, Tax Probe Jeopardize Re-Election

CHICAGO (AP) — Once the fair prince of Illinois Republicans, Attorney General William Scott now finds himself the subject of a federal tax investigation and a cartoon character in a rival's campaign television advertisement.

SCOTT

The cartoon — one of the first animated political advertisements to run on television anywhere — depicts Scott as a tiny man scooping up a $50,000 tax-free windfall and flinging it gleefully about his head.

Scott, who is unopposed for renomination in Tuesday's primary election, has been under investigation by the Internal Revenue Service for the $50,000 cache which dates to 1967.

And new disclosures Friday reported that he appears to have been living beyond his available income for the past seven years, even though Scott himself says he has been living the life of a near-pauper.

A few months ago, Scott, 51, was considered a cinch for re-election in November. Now there are rumors he may be forced off the ticket because of the alleged tax difficulties.

The cartoon approach was introduced by Richard Troy, an unopposed candidate for the Democratic nomination for attorney general.

Troy, son-in-law of a powerful West Side politician, had little success dramatizing the issue of the $50,000 until the cartoon ad began running on TV stations around the state last week.

The animation deals with "very, very serious charges" in a whimsical setting, according to its creator, Hal Wallace, an independent film producer who handled the late Mayor Richard J. Daley's media spots in 1975.

A Scott spokesman, who asked not to be identified, called it "a Mickey Mouse technique by a Mickey Mouse candidate."

While the character in Wallace's cartoon flings the money around, a voice says: "Wouldn't it be great if all of us could have $50,000 tax free?" It then mentions the $50,000 "found in a secret safe deposit box" under the control of Scott.

"Fifty thousand dollars," the voice says.

"The attorney general.

"The man whose job it is to uphold the law."

The existence of the $50,000 cash — the actual amount was $48,000 — was disclosed last fall when Scott's former wife appealed a 1970 divorce decree which gave him control of the money.

Scott has said the fund existed from 1967 to 1972 and consisted of nontaxable political contributions used to meet politically related expenses.

But investigators are trying to determine if Scott has been dipping into the political funds for his personal use, which would make the money taxable.

The Chicago Tribune, meanwhile, said court documents show Scott telling investigators he has troubles making ends meet.

But the Tribune said its own investigation shows that if Scott had only his salary to live on, by the time he paid his rent, alimony and other identifiable large expenses, he would have had only $32 a week for clothing, food, household expenses, entertainment and travel.

Yet, the Tribune said, Scott vacations annually in such places as California, the Bahamas and Hawaii and pays more than $800 a month for a lakefront apartment.

'Cinderella' Contestants Vie Tonight

Thirty-eight contestants will vie tonight for the four crowns of the Tri-County Cinderella Miss Pageant at 7 p.m., in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Theater.

The girls, ranging in age from 3 to 17, will compete in four categories for the titles of Cinderella Tot, Miniature Miss, Cinderella Miss and Cinderella Teen.

Headlining the pageant will be Kenny Maines, known for his country music appearances in the areas, the KLLL "Opry" and a tour of the west with the Kenny Vernon Band. Maines will be leading the contestants in two production numbers and also will make a solo performance.

Jance Prince, co-anchor for KCBD television will serve as mistress of ceremonies.

Texas Tech University graduate Kenny Dean, will direct the pageant. Dean has had experience in production as a student of theater arts and telecommunications at Tech and a member of the KCBD production staff.

Judges for the pageant are: Jack Geddes, serving as chief judge and coordinator, Doug Hodel, Terri Sue Caldwell, Lana Mitchell, Don Caldwell, Joe Provence, Bea Eoff, Fredda Provence, Betty Putnam, Charlotte Kemp, Betty Kemp, Betty Harrell, Wayne Jennings and Dorotha Meeks.

The contestants are judged on the basis of personal interview, sportswear and party dress modeling and talent presentations. The youngest age group–Cinderella Tot–does not compete in the talent category.

Tickets are available from contestants and at the box office at Hemphill-Wells in South Plains Mall. Tickets also can be purchased at the door.

50 SPECIES OF GARFISH

There are about 50 known species of garfish, also known as needlefish, because of their long, slender bodies and their prominent beaks, which are pointed and bony. A species common along the coasts of Britain is called "long-nose."

Pair Arrested In Drug Smuggling Operation

RATON, N.M. (UPI) — State Police said Friday two men had been arrested in an alleged attempt to fly 400-500 pounds of marijuana into the United States from Mexico.

Police said one of the men, Ted Larson, 28, of the Denver areu, was arrested late Thursday at Crews Field south of Raton. The other man, Clarence Lee Wells, 28, also of the Denver area, was arrested Friday as he stepped off a bus in Pueblo, Colo.

Capt. Robert Thompson, head of the State Police narcotics unit, said marijuana distribution chjrges would be filed against both men. He said federal smuggling charges also may be filed in the case.

Thompson said the incident began Wednesday when U.S. Customs Air Support in El paso, Texas, spotted the plane on radar as it was flying from a location in Mexico to the United States.

"The plane came up and circled the Las Vegas area, then circled Springer, and then went north to Raton," said Thompson. "We alerted uniformed state police that the plane was headed in their direction."

Thompson said uniformeb officers waited at Crews field for the plane. After it landed, police arrested Larson. Before police could reach him, the pilot of the aircraft took off and headed south.

"He just threw it (the plane) in gear and took off," said Thompson.

Thompson said the plane flew to Springer and landed.

"He (Wells) was trying to dump his load when officers approached him," said Thompson. "He took off on foot, and the officers lost him in the darkness."

An air search of the area Friday morning was unsuccessful.

Scurry County Champion Chosen For Spelling Bee

A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — Raymundo Fuentes, an eighth-grade student at Hermleigh Junior High School, won the annual Scurry County Spelling Bee here Friday.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Fuentes, he will represent Scurry County in the regional spelling bee in Lubbock April 15.

First runner-up was James Crowder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Crowder. He is a student at Ira Junior High. Kevin Huddleston, also from Ira Junior High, was second runner-up. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Huddleston.

Soviets Evaluate Record Space Flight

C NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Saturday, March 18, 1978

MOSCOW (AP) — The record-setting 96-day Soviet space flight that ended Thursday has shown that man can live in space for more than a year, Soviet scientists concluded Friday.

Professor Anatoly Yegorov, head of the flight control center's medical group, told the Tass news agency there were four factors leading to this conclusion:

—The cosmonauts' continued capacity for creativity and hard work.

—Correct forecasting and neutralization of the effects of prolonged weightlessness.

—The relative comfort of the Salyut 6 space station.

—The compatibility of the cosmonauts, Yuri Romanenko, the commander, and flight engineer Georgy Grechko.

Romanenko and Grechko spent more than three months aboard the orbiting space laboratory, carrying out scientific experiments and photography. They also received two pairs of cosmonaut visitors during the flight.

"Throughout the flights, the cosmonauts retained high creative interest in scientific research and experimental work" carrying out more than 100 experiments, Yegorov told Tass.

Yegorov said the cosmonauts neutralized the effects of weightlessness with large doses of physical exercise using a treadmill and weighted exercise suits.

The space station, the most comfortable yet in Soviet space exploration, even had its own specially pressurized shower, he said.

He said the psychological stress of the long flight was greatly relieved by visits from two teams of cosmonauts and one unmanned robot resupply mission. Fresh food, water, fruit and even letters from home eased the routine.

The fourth factor Yegorov listed, the cosmonauts' compatibility, made all the difference, he said.

The 33-year-old Romanenko and 46-year-old Grechko, "men of different ages, different characters and habits, cooperated well during their flight," he said.

"Their enthusiasm for work, mutual thrust and respect, and their sense of humor ensured for them the desired spirit of compatibility without which they would have been unable to live and work for such a long time within the close confines of a present-day orbital station."

TEMPORARY STORAGE PROPOSAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — New short-term storage sites will be needed by 1983 for radioactive waste from nuclear power plants, an Energy Department task force says. The group said Wednesday that permanent disposal facilities cannot be established before 1988, three years later than previously planned.

Authorities Seek Terrorist Bombers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After five months of silence, the terrorist New World Liberation Front has reared its head again — claiming its 58th bombing in Northern California in the past 3½ years.

The group said in a "communique" that it was responsible for Tuesday's bombing of a Pacific Gas Electric Co. substation in a San Francisco suburb.

The bombings — so many that one FBI official called San Francisco "the Belfast of North America" — have caused more than $1 million worth of damage, the FBI says. The prime target has been PGE, but office buildings, private homes of the wealthy and even the San Francisco Opera House have been hit.

There have been no arrests.

"It's sheer, dumb luck on their part," said FBI bombings coordinator Frank Daniel. He is investigating this week's bombing of a PGE transformer that cut off power for more than two hours to 75,000 homes in Concord and Walnut Creek.

Like the others, this one was followed by a communique delivered to the news media in which the NWLF took responsibility for the blast. The communiques nearly always claim the NWLF is acting on behalf of minorities and the poor.

That leads the FBI to believe its members are white, middle-or upper-class young people on what Daniel calls "a guilt trip for not being among the oppressed minorities."

Daniel said the group is probably "very, very small." He suspects the bombs have been planted by former members of the Symbionese Liberation Army, which kidnapped newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, and possibly other extinct terrorist groups.

He estimated that the FBI has questioned more than 10,000 people since the first NWLF bomb went off in August 1974 at a General Motors office in Burlingame. But no leads have panned out.

"Look at their targets. They're remote, isolated," he said. "They always work in the dead of night. They make frequent mistakes, like picking out the wrong house. But the evidence blows up. It's a very difficult crime to investigate and a very easy crime to commit."

Transformers and offices of PGE have been bombed 16 times since 1975, while bombs planted on five other PGE sites were found and defused before they could explode.

"There is certainly a feeling of frustration" about authorities' inability to make arrests, said PGE spokesman Paul Girard.

But he conceded that "it's quite obvious to anybody that PGE is vulnerable. We service an area that is 94,000 square miles."

Research West, a detective agency specializing in terrorism, calls PGE "the prime victim of terrorism in the United States."

Chinese Attitudes Toward Academic Thought Changing

TOKYO (AP) — The study of feudalism and capitalism should no longer be "forbidden territory" to Chinese scholars and students, an influential group of Communist social scientists has asserted.

Calling for a clear separation between academics and politics, the experts said intellectuals "ought to present facts and reason things out. It is permissible to make mistakes and correct them."

The social scientists' comments were made at a recent forum for 100 experts in literature, history, philosophy and law and were reported in a dispatch by China's Hsinhua news agency received here. The forum was sponsored by the Communist Party contingent in the Chinese Academy of Social Scientists.

The statements reflect China's changing policy — under the "pragmatist" leadership of Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng and Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping — of greater openness to foreign thought and technology and to influences from China's own pre-Communist past.

Ideological rigidity pervaded much of China's intellectual and political life in the declining years of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, Hua's predecessor.

The news agency blamed the radical "Gang of Four" — led by Mao's widow, Chiang Ching — for having made the study of non-Communist institutions disreputable.

The state flower of Nebraska is the sagebrush.

Tubbed Dwarf Fruit Trees Yield Rich Harvest

BY ELVIN MCDONALD

Up until early last fall, I always thought it might be easier to keep a partridge in a pear tree than to grow a crop of perfectly formed, blemish-free fruit; I had been put off by fine-print charts and schedules of repeated sprayings or dustings for insect and disease control. Then I saw — and tasted — the harvest from my friend Jacqueline Heriteau's tubbed orchard on a New York rooftop.

My first reaction at the sight of the little trees, all dwarfs in bushel-size or slightly larger tubs, was one of pleasure. Then, as my eyes adjusted to the brilliant sunlight, I realized that ripening fruit dangled temptingly from the leafy branches, exactly the way nursery catalogs promise.

The clincher came when Jacqui matter-of-factly picked the reddest apple, gave it a polish on her blouse and said, as she handed it to me, "Here, taste a King Luscious raised 14 stories above Park Avenue." Now, months later, my mouth still waters at the remembrance of its juicy, crunch white meat and tantalizing aroma.

What amazed me perhaps the most was the none of the fruit showed any signs of damage from pest or disease. While I munched away, Jacqui explained that once-a-week applications of an all-purpose fruit spray were responsible, plus hand picking of caterpillars, both obviously a lot more easily done to a dwarf than a standard-size tree.

CONTAINER-GROWN GRAPES

If you'd like to duplicate Jacqui's success with tubbed dwarf fruit trees, here's how:

1. Select a container about 20 inches deep and two to three feet across; the thicker its walls, the better because they temper soil heat in summer and help prevent root damage in severe cold.
2. Use a growing medium composed of approximately equal amounts by volume of good garden loam or all-purpose potting soil, vermiculite or perlite (sand would serve the same purpose but adds considerable weight, an important factor to be considered) and light humus (well-rotted compost or sphagnum peat moss).
3. Add water as necessary to keep the soil evenly moist at all times; avoid severe drying-out and plant only in a container with drainage holes so that roots won't drown after a heavy rain.
4. Choose a site that receives at least a half day of direct sun. Plant as early as possible in spring.
5. As soon as growth becomes active, begin to make regular applications of fertilizer. Jacqui uses either a flowering houseplant or all-purpose garden type, diluted to half the strength recommended but applied weekly instead of once every two weeks. Continue fertilizing until about six weeks before killing frost is expected.
6. Apply an all-purpose fruit spray (a fungicide-insecticide combination), following label directions. The first should be when the flowerbeds begin to show color, the second just before they open and the third when the petals have fallen. Thereafter, apply every seven to 21 days, depending on the weather.

Besides apples and pears, there are also dwarfs of peaches, plums, nectarines, apricots and cherries, both sweet and sour. If you can't get the varieties you want locally, send for the catalog of a fruit nursery such as Bontiful Ridge, Princess Anne, Maryland 21853; J.E. Miller, Canadaigua, New York 14424; or Stark Brothers, Louisiana, Missouri 63353.

Most dwarf fruit trees begin to bear the second or third year after planting. While you wait, I suggest you put in some containers of runnerless strawberries, the fraises des bois of gourmets. Allow a 10- to 12-inch pot for each or plant several in a bushel-size container. Jacqui says she also gets a good harvest from regular everbearing strawberries and counts on the runners to replace any old plants that die out in the winter.

It is also possible to grow grapes in sizable containers, but Jacqui cautions not to expect fruit for three years and that pruning properly is important. She has had good luck with container-grown highbush blueberries and points out that if the soil in your area is alkaline, this method makes it easier to provide the required ph of 4.0 to 5.2, which is quite acidic.

In order to assure fruit, adequate pollination is vital. Apr

Garden Preparation Should Begin Now

BY FRANK CAREW

March is the month of commitment in your garden. How you plant, fertilize and spray now will set the pattern for the variety, volume and quality of color for your spring and summer enjoyment.

Several plantings of gladiolas should be made over a four-to five-week period for staggered blooming; don't regiment them in rows but set them in groups of matching, contrasting and harmonizing colors.

Dahlias planted mid-March to early April in well-manured beds and given one half day or more of sun will flower until the first frost.

Caladiums are a must for the shaded portions of your bulb garden. They will give large, splashy shows of color in a wide spectrum through the summer. Caladium tubers need a soil that contains a high percentage of organic matter, a porous soil that will allow good drainage and raised beds are advisable. If this is not feasible, several inches of coarse builder's sand worked into the bed will aide in promoting better drainage. In heavier, compacted soils, depth of planting recommendations should be modified. Bone meal or super phosphate in the bottom of each hole, covered by a layer of soil, will encourage better blooms and healthier bulbs.

Complement the caladiums in your shaded garden with coleus, begonias and impatiens. Cutting from your coleus will give you week-long color for indoor flower arangements. Ageratum, copper plants, verbena, salvia, vinca and portulaca planted now will favor you with interesting flower shapes and colors as well as outstanding foliage and leaf textures over an extended period.

You will be able to make additions to your rose garden by seeing the true colors as the spring crop starts blooming in late March.

Root stimulator should be applied when trees and shrubs are planted, with re-applications at seven-to 10-day intervals for four to five weeks. Consult your local Texas Certified Nurseryman (TCN) for complete information.

For your established roses, fertilizers containing systemic insecticide applied at three-to four-week intervals furnish good nutrition and insect prevention. Black spot fungus can usually be prevented with periodic spray applications of Benomyl. The popularity of container-grown roses is on the increase as more and more town houses and other small-lot dwellings make their appearance. Twelve-inch and larger size containers will give beautiful shows of greenery, delicate color and fascinating flower form when they border a patio. They should be located so they receive at least six hours of direct sunlight each day.

Most roses will still be grown in beds where drainage is assured by elevating the beds eight to 10 inches above the surrounding area with retention of the bed materials by railroad ties, concrete blocks, wood or metal strips. Basic amendments to the existing soil are two parts sandy loam, one part cow or sheep manure, five pounds of balanced fertilizer, eight to 10 pounds of superphosphate and aricultural gypsum as indicated by soil needs is also recommended, cultivated into six to eight inches of existing soil. This mixture will give the slightly acid condition favored for rose culture.

A six-to eight-week wait is recommended before planting in your new bed, which allows for settling and mixing of the soil. The holder for a container-grown rose should be half again as large as the soil ball. The dirt should be firm but not compacted around the ball and thoroughly watered, maintaing the soil line just below the bud union. Two inches of pine bark mulch should be added for root protection against temperature extremes, for water conservation and weed control.

Look now for dogwood, magnolia, tulip trees, redbuds, crape myrtle, or other flowering trees adapted to your area. Planted now, these selections will give you handsome blooms this spring and summer. Your TCN can help with your particular requirement.

Utilize oil sprays if needed to control scale insects on hollies, citrus, camellias and gardenias. Applied according to label instructions, it will pay big dividends later on. Malathion sprays should start now to prevent aphids, white flies and mites from destroying all of the color about to burst forth.

With the preparation and most of the work now behind you, there awaits a spring and summer filled with color, thanks to your efforts and your TCN's helpful advice!

FIRE'S ORIGIN — Lubbock firefighters, (from left) Bill Bryant, Jim Shuey and Lt. Howard Bostick battle a small blaze that occurred about 2:45 p.m. Friday at the Acacia Mobile Home Park, 2317 Auburn St. The blaze, which began in the small converted shed, spread to two mobile homes at the park, causing heavy damage to Mary Espinoza's trailer and minor damage to Bill McKay's. Mrs. Espinoza had taken her pregnant sister to the hospital when the blaze occurred and returned to the scene tearfully to find her trailer heavily damaged by flame and smoke. About six pieces of fire equipment were dispatched to the scene and the fire was controlled within 27 minutes. No injuries were reported. (Staff Photo by Jim Watkins)

Firing Squads Kill Plotters As Zaire Revolution Fails

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Eight army officers and five civilians died before a firing squad at dawn Friday for what President Mobutu Sese Seko said was a plot aided by foreign diplomats in Kinshasa to sabotage Zaire's economy and force him from office.

Mobutu announced the executions in a special 10-minute radio and television "message to the nation."

The president did not name the foreign countries allegedly involved. But he said the plot was started by a terrorist group in 1976.

Ninety-one alleged plotters were tried by a military court in proceedings that started March 8 and ended Thursday. Fourteen were sentenced to death.

Sgt. Maj. Kisonga, who with her sister Brigitte ran a bar where the plotters allegedly met, was the only one given a reprieve by the president.

"It is the first time in the history of our country that a Zairian mother is so seriously involved in a plot," Mobutu said explaining his decision to grant mercy.

"I have rejected the plea for mercy from 13 death convicts in the trial of terrorists," Mobutu said. "They were shot at dawn.

"Alone with my conscience, I granted mercy to Sgt. Maj. Kisonga, the only woman in the terrorist group whose death penalty was commuted to prison for life."

The military court sentenced a total of 19 people to death, 10 military and nine civilians. The soldiers included eight officers and two non-commissioned officers, including Maj. Kalume Hamba who was accused of being the leader of the plot.

Five were sentenced to death in absentia. Four of them are civilians living in Belgium, leaders of the Action Movement for the Resurrection of the Congo, the former name of Zaire. The Congo was once a Belgian colony.

The other convicted conspirators received sentences ranging from one to 20 years, most of them short sentences, some suspended.

Fourteen persons were acquitted.

The announcement that a plot had been discovered came shortly after reports of serious disturbances in Bandundu Province in western Zaire. The unrest was quelled quickly.

Opponents of Mobutu, who took power in 1965, claimed government troops massacred up to 2,000 farmers, including women and children, in putting down the disturbances. Zaire and Belgian authorities later confirmed there were riots in the province and that sterm measures had been used, but the number of dead was not given.

In his speech, Mobutu said the plotters tried to destroy the "dearest achievements of the revolution, threaten the life and security of the population and plunge everyone into misery with the sole aim of making the chief of state ridiculous before the world, forcing him to resign or weaken him to take power by force."

Mobutu's regime was threatened last March when invaders described as former Katangan gendarmes and followers of the late Moishe Tshombe, who led a rebellion in the 1960s, entered Shaba Province in southeastern Zaire and seized about one-third of the province. They were driven out in May by joint Zairean and Moroccan forces. A military and government purge followed.

Foreign observers concur that more rebellion is likely unless the economic situation is rapidly improved. They describe the country as on the verge of economic collapse. Opponents of Mobutu blame the regime for concentrating the country's wealth and power in Kinshasa while provinces are starving.

Russia Names Coca-Cola Official Drink

ATLANTA (AP) — One detail needs to be worked out in the agreement opening up the Russian market for Coca-Cola Co.'s soft drinks. How will Coca-Cola get its rubles out of Russia?

The company and various Soviet agencies jointly announced Tuesday that Coca-Cola had been named the official soft drink for the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, and that a full range of the company's other soft drinks would be sold during the games.

In addition, beginning in 1979, the company's Fanta orange drink will be available in Russia on a five-year contract. Under the agreement, Coca-Cola will export to Russia the necessary bottling equipment.

At a Moscow news conference, J. Paul Austin, Coca-Cola chairman, said details of how the company will be reimbursed for its equipment and soft drink concentrate still are to be worked out.

The Russians generally refuse to use their own currency to pay for foreign goods.

When Pepsi Cola became the first U.S. soft drink to be bottled and sold in the Soviet Union, Pepsi had to accept Russian wines and vodka in exchange.

Pepsi then received its profit on the exported soft-drink concentrate on its markup of the Russian drinks it sells in the United States.

Austin indicated that some form of barter is being discussed, but said final terms still are being negotiated.

TV Cable Restrictions Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cable television and broadcasting industry officials clashed Friday on whether local television stations would lose viewers and money if cable systems are not restricted.

Robert L. Schmidt, president of the National Cable Television Association, said "restriction of cable television development by limiting the signals cable may carry does nothing more than curtail customers' viewing choices ... Cable competition may in fact result in improved broadcasting."

The National Association of Broadcasters said a study done for it confirms that local TV stations would lose viewers if cable systems are not restricted in importing distant signals.

The NAB said it is confident that an ongoing study will show that the audience loss would lead to reduced revenues and a subsequent reduction in the stations' ability to serve the public.

The conflicting views were presented to the Federal Communications Commission in connection with its study of the economic relationship between broadcasting and cable TV.

The cable association said cable systems offer the ability to expand consumer viewing choices by importing distant TV signals by microwave or satellite.

However, it said that since 1964 the FCC has limited diversity in cable programming by restricting the number of distant signals a cable system may import. The FCC also requires that signals be blacked out when they duplicate a local station's programs.

The broadcasters said their study showed that liberalization or elimination of distant signal limitations would substantially reduce audiences in small one and two station markets.

It addition, the NAB said its study found that audience loss would be most substantial for network affiliates during the early fringe time period, 4:30 to 7:30 p.m., and that independent station audiences would be devastated.

The cable association said cable regulations have been based on the assumption that cable television poses a competitive threat to service by local broadcast stations and have been designed to protect broadcasters.

It cited a survey of competitive markets that showed that local broadcast stations lose an average of less than 8 percent of their audience to cable television. And it said there is no evidence that the loss of audience produces an equal loss of station revenue.

DATING CUSTOM

The custom of dating events B.C. (before Christ) and A.D. Anno Domini (in the year of our Lord) was introduced about 525 by Dionysius Exiguus, a Roman abbot and astronomer who set Christ's birth 753 years after the founding of Rome.

School Board Wavers On Washington Trip

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — When President Carter invited Sharon Corvey's second-grade class to visit the White House, parents and Bangor business leaders started raising money for the trip. But the school board isn't sure they should go.

Carter, on a visit to Bangor last month, had fielded questions from the class at Abraham Lincoln School and invited the 32 students to visit him and daughter Amy.

The PTA began a campaign to raise $6,000 for the trip, 26 banks and businesses pledged money, and the Jackson Boat Co. said it would donate a canoe for a raffle.

The excited class has been studying all about Washington, Carter and even peanuts, but on Friday, school board chairman Isabel Bishop wondered if the trip was a sound idea.

"Still unanswered is whether we are personally liable should anything serious happen to children of that age away from home without their parents," she said in a telephone interview.

She said attorneys had given conflicting views on that question, but most agreed that liability waivers from parents "aren't worth the paper they're printed on."

Carter, whose off-the-cuff invitation was followed up by a phone call from the White House this week, has offered to host the kids on either April 29 or May 20, both Saturdays.

Parents and teachers decided the children should make a three-day trip of it by jet. Two teachers and their husbands, and four other adults, would chaperone.

The school board will vote on Monday whether to approve the trip, and parents involved are threatening to campaign in the next election to defeat any board members who vote against the trip.

Mrs. Bishop said the board would be happy to have the trip proceed without its blessing, but the teachers and some parents are reluctant to go without board endorsement.

Meantime, school Superintendent Wendell Eaton questions whether the trip to the White House would have "purely educational value" for the children. He also worried that the children might get "disoriented" on such a long trip.

Mrs. Corvey said the educational benefits would be enormous.

"I think they've already received tremendous benefits. They already know more about the president and his job and Washington than most adults. The trip will make all these things come to life. And I think meeting the president will be an inspiration they will never forget," said Mrs. Corvey.

Propylene Sales Cut Authorized

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Acting under authorization of a federal bankruptcy judge, Commonwealth Oil Refining Company (CORCO) has rejected a contract to supply propylene feedstock to the Oxochem Enterprise plant, which it owns with a subsidiary of W.R. Grace Co., in Penuelas, Puerto Rico.

Commonwealth stopped supplying propylene to the plant Thursday.

The action had been authorized by Federal Bankruptcy Judge Bert Thompson at a hearing in San Antonio, where CORCO recently filed a voluntary petition under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act.

Gary W. Davis, CORCO president, said it is not his firm's intention to shut down the Puerto Rico plant. "We have offered to sell propylene to Oxochem at market value, but our partner has not yet agreed to pay market value prices," Davis said. "CORCO had no alternative but to stop the supply."

Power Crisis Eased By Weather, Coal, Power From Outside

By The Associated Press

The electricity crisis has eased a bit in many parts of the industrial East and Midwest thanks to increased shipments of non-union coal, heavy purchases of power produced elsewhere and milder weather, utility officials said Friday.

Spokesmen for utilities serving West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other states that had been fearing widespread layoffs and large-scale mandatory power curtailments due to the 102-day coal strike, said they have been able in recent days to either boost their coal inventories or at least keep them level.

"Our inventory actually increased a little this week because of unusually good deliveries," said Lee Sheppeard, a spokesman for the Tennessee Valley Authority, which serves 2½ million people in Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia.

"We're still down to a vulnerable level but we're hanging on, thanks to the deliveries and the milder weather," Sheppeard said. He added that the TVA had enough coal to last 24 days at normal rates of use. Power companies consider 90 days' supply to be safe.

As coal supplies dwindled in recent weeks, utility and government officials in many Midwest and mid-Atlantic states imposed power curtailments — voluntary in most areas, but mandatory in parts of Indiana, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Now, with government officials cautiously optimistic that members of the United Mine Workers union will vote next week to accept the latest proposed contract, Sheppeard and spokesmen for other utilities said they believed further curtailments would be unnecessary.

Much of the credit for the improved situation was given to huge three times as much as coal-fired power by the time it reaches Midwest or mid-Atlantic states, has allowed coal-poor utilities to cnserve fuel.

The Allegheny Power System, which serves a million customers in West Virginia, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, is buying about 60 percent of its pouer needs elsewhere. The firm's coal stocks have been holding steady at 17 days' supply for most of this week.

Ohio Edison, serving northeastern Ohio, has been buying about 35 percent of its power. Ohio Edison, and other firms, have also shut down some back-up generating equipment — a move that increases the danger of blackouts due to equipment breakdowns but which bonserves coal.

But spokesmen also said that utilities were beginning to receive shipments of coal. Most of the coal either was newly mined by non-union members or had been mined by union members before the strike began and had been sitting on railroad cars.

The spokesmen attributed the deliveries to the temporary restraining order won several days ago by the Carter administration. The order forbids anyone from interfering with the mining or delivery of coal.

"We had taken the position prior to that order that we would not receive coal in order to reduce any possibility of confrontation (with striking miners)," said Bill Coleman, an Allegheny Power System spokesman. "But after the order, we notified our suppliers that we would accept coal and we've been receiving small amounts."

Sheppeard said the TVA this week received about half as much coal as it would have received had there been no strike.

In addition, government statistics show that coal-related layoffs haven't been as widespread as predicted. The Labor Department reported that about 22,900 factory workers were laid off for some part of last week because of coal or electricity shortages. The department had predicted that more than 31,000 factory workers would be laid off.

Oil Spill Payment Bill Declared Retroactive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to provide compensation for damage resulting from offshore-drilling oil spills applies to existing leases as well as future federal leases, the Interior Department's top legal officer said Friday.

Solicitor Leo M. Krulitz said in a statement it is his opinion that the proposal's intention is to provide compensation in cases involving leases in the federal offshore domain, which lies beyond the three-mile limit of state coastal waters.

Bills have been passed by both the House and the Senate with compensation provisions and now await resolution of differences by a joint conferEnce committee.

The compensation issue developed during the past few years as the Interior Department prepared and began the first leasing for oil and gas drilling off the Atlantic Coast.

States and communities, recalling the oil spill from a well off Santa Barbara, Calif., in 1969 feared that an Atlantic coast spill could bring economic ruin to seaside resorts whose white sand beaches might be blackened with oil.

The legislation also would compensate fishermen for damage to equipment.

The Atlantic coast's fishing industry worried that nets and gear could snag on underwater petroleum equipment.

The legislation now moving through Congress sought to answer these concerns by establishing revolving funds to pay for fishing-gear damage and oil spill cleanup, financed through fees on offshore oil0and natural gas production.

The Department has already auctioned leases off New Jersey, and preparations are underway to begin exploration drilling.

The planned auction of leases off New England last January was blocked by a federal court injunction at the request of Massachusetts and others, who asked the court to delay the leasing until the compensation bills became law.

The Interior Department asked a federal appeals court to lift the injunction.

Krulitz said the same question about application of the compensation bills has been raised concerning a proposed lease sale off the South Atlantic coast.

Krulitz said "there is ample evidence that both House and Senate intended the oil-spill and fishermen's-gear compensation funds to apply to existing leases and no evidence that existing leases would be exempt."

Murder Plea Given By Reputed Mobster

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James "Jimmy the Weasel" Fratianno, held in protective custody for three months, has made a surprise appearance in U.S. District Court to plead innocent to charges that he aided in the slaying of a reputed San Diego mobster.

Fratianno, accompanied by four U.S. marshals during his court appearance Thursday, had been named in one count growing out of the slaying of Frank "The Bomp' Bompensiero, a reputed mobster-turned-FBI-informant. Fratianno, 64, is the key prosecution witness in an extortion, conspiracy, racketeering and murder case.

Energy Aide Due Probe Of Background

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy is opening an internal probe into allegations that the agency's director of administration, William S. Heffelfinger, falsified his background.

Heffelfinger has denied that he intentionalv2alsified his personnel documents to show he attended a college he never went to and to claim an award he never got.

The decision to probe Heffelfinger's past was made by Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary after the allegations surfaced at hearings held this week by the House energy and power subcommittee.

Congressional investigators have charged that the agency's Office of Inspector General failed adequately to investigate allegations of impropriety stemming from Heffelfinger's past government career when it did a backgpound check on him last May.

Testimony showed that a resume in Heffelfinger's personnel file listed his education as "1953 Kansas University, business administration." It also showed Heffelfinger to be the recipient of an award given to outstanding federal workers.

Committee investigators said that Heffelfinger neither attended the college nor won the award.

Heffelfinger acknowledged he never attended the school and said he did not understand how the data got into his personnel records. However, he admitted knowing it was there.

As for the award, Heffelfinger said he thought he had won the award, even though committee investigators insisted he was only nominated for it.

Heffelfinger, 53, was fired early last year by Transportation Secretary Brock Adams from a position in the Department of Transportation similar to the one he now holds in the energy agency.

O'Leary said he was not aware that Heffelfinger had been fired or that his conduct had figured in several past congressional investigations.

Subcommittee investigators said other allegations previously leveled at Heffelfinger — all of which he denied — included:

— That while in the Transportation Department, he attempted to steer a contract for Coast Guard surveillance jets to North American Rockwell.

— That he improperly attempted to pack the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration with former Rockwell employes.

— That he shredded certain Transportation Department documents to prevent public disclosure.

Sentence Due For Ex-Official

CLEVELAND (AP) — The former board chairman and chief executive of Tenna Corp. will be sentenced for accepting $235,000 in kickbacks from two shipping firms after a federal judge examines a probation report on him.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. Battisti said he will read the report by the federal probation department before sentencing Harvey A. Ludwig, 45, of Shaker Heights, a Cleveland suburb. Ludwig pleaded guilty and faces up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

The two firms that paid the kickbacks, New York-based Seatrain Lines and a subsidiary, Ocean Equipment Corp., also pleaded guilty Thursday in federal court. They face fines of up to $1.02 million.

Ludwig has already turned over $202,000 worth of bonds to the U.S. attorney's office, and he agreed to turn over an additional $33,000 worth of bonds that had been kept in a Swiss bank account.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Herbert Berkowitz said that in return for Ludwig's plea, the government would not seek criminal charges against Tenna.

The two firms had been indicted for conspiring to defraud the Maritime Commission, an agency that sets shipping rates. Seatrain pleaded guilty to similar charges in 1973 in New Jersey and was fined $50,000.

Foreign Oil Fee Vowed If Crude Tax Not Voted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may impose fees on foreign oil to discourage imports if Congress does not adopt his domestic oil production tax within the next six to eight weeks, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Friday.

Schlesinger has frequently mentioned the possibility of such action but has never before suggested when Carter's patience might end.

Schlesinger said, however, that he believes Congress will pass the crude oil tax.

Schlesinger said he thought the crude oil tax "should move within the next six to eight weeks. If it does not move within that time," he said, "the President will have to consider alternative measures."

He stopped short of a more definite prediction of presidential action.

Earlier in the week, G. William Miller, the new head of the Federal Reserve Board, told a congressional panel that Carter should consider oil import quotas or fees designed to drive up the price of oil and reduce consumption.

Schlesinger said the argument about the tax was mainly over whether to rebate all of the money to the public, or to apply some of it to mass transit and energy projects.

The tax proposal is part of the National Energy Plan proposed by Carter last April and still under congressional consideration.

Most of the crude oil now produced in the United States is under controls limiting its price at levels several dollars below the prices charged by foreign producers for imported oil.

Carter proposed to encourage U.S. oil conservation by charging consumers the world price while limiting the price the oil companies could charge.

The difference between the two prices would be collected by the federal treasury as a tax.

Without this tax, Schlesinger has said, Carter would have to take other action to reduce U.S. oil consumption, and the one specific option he has repeatedly mentioned is imposition of fees on imported oil to raise its cost even higher.

No exact level of import fees has been proposed.

VILLAGES MERGED

The eastern Pennsylvania borough of Jim Thorpe originaly consisted of Mauch Chunk and East Mauch Chunk, which wre Indian names meaning "bear mountain." The two villages merged in 1954 when they adopted the name of Jim Thorpe, the Indian football player whose body was brought to the area for burial.

Cyclamen Secrets Give Long Life, Blossoms

By ELVIN MCDONALD

Late last fall, I splurged and bought eight cyclamen, each with a few open blooms and a lot of buds. The florist put them all in one large shallow carton with crushed papers between the pots and then helped me into a taxi.

Fortunately, as it turned out, traffic was moving at a snail's pace, so I had a lot of time to contemplete my purchases. I admired all the flowers, found those of one plant to be lightly fragrant and counted over 100 buds on another. I picked off a few dead leaves and marveled at nature's handiwork in the healthy ones — perfect heart shapes in dark green, each overlaid with a smaller heart in silver.

Just when I had decided to put my head back and take a catnap, the driver braked hard to avoid hitting a pedestrian and I was joltfed from my reverie. Actually, catching sight of the meter is probably what did it; at the rate we were going to cost twice what it should have.

Now my thoughts turned serious. Was I like the young woman who only days before had nervously confided in me that she was irresistibly drawn to nurseries, garden centers and flower shops and thought she might be a plantaholic?

CYCLAMEN

Would I, as she put it, "steal" from the family grocery money in order to pay for my habit?

Well, yes, I decided, I would, but "borrow" would be a nicer way to think of it. Besides, I was beginning to feel like Auntie Mame when someone left a taxi meter running in the middle of the Great Depression; obviously, what I needed was a positive thought.

Leave it to taxi drivers. They have an answer for everything and this one was no exception. The voice I had heard only as a series of unintelligible grunts and unmentionable curses at the world in general and New York traffic in particular suddenly turned civilized:

"Excuse me, sir, but aren't those cyclamen? My grandmother has one that has bloomed every winter since I was a kid."

I was practically speechless. Not only had he pronounced cyclamen the purists' way, SICK-luh-men, but he had solved my problem. I would treat my cyclamen as a long-term investment instead of a short-lived extravagance.

The rest of the trip passed all too quickly as I quizzed the driver about how his grandmother had managed to keep a cyclamen alive for so many years. By the time we parted in front of my apartment building I felt immensely cheered, minus two plants, one for him and one for her.

Now, some six months later, I'm glad to report great success with what Steven, my 16-year-old, says I should call Taxi Grandma's Recipe for Cyclamen:

First, don't ever let the soil dry out until the leaves and flowers wilt. Touch it with your fingers every day; you can't depend on memory and not all growing mediums "look" dry when they are.

Second, give your cyclamen a place in a bright or half-sunny window; or situate it so that the flowers are about three inches below two 20-watt or larger fluorescent tubes kept on 14-16 hours out of every 24.

Third, give your cyclamen a cool spot where fresh air circulates freely; avoid heat blasts and chill drafts. Nighttime temperatures around 60 F., into the low 70s by day give excellent results.

Fourth, keep pebble humidity trays filled with water. Operate a cool-vapor humidifier in the same room all through the winter heating season.

Fifth, mist the leaves once or twice a day. This keeps them looking rain-fresh and emphasizes the silver markings.

Sixth, as soon as a flower wilts or a leaf turns yellow, remove it by using a small pair of scissors to cut the stem as close to the base of the plant as you can without breaking or bruising the good parts. If you try to do this with your fingers, you may intend to pull out one dead leaf and wind up with a handful of green leaves and flowerbuds as well.

Seventh, apply a flowering house-plant fertilizer exactly according to label directions for African violets or begonias.

By followin these seven steps I have managed to keep all six of my cyclamen in constant bloom; a ruffly pure white with mostly silver leaves had a bouquet of 51 flowers at once. Another, a cherry-red precisely edge with a narrow band of white, has formed two fat seedpods.

The rest of Taxi Grandma's recipe goes like this: About the time roses start to bloom outdoors, set the cyclamen pot in a closet or cupboard or turn it on its side under a shrub outdoors; apply no fertilizer and only a splash or water now and then to keep the soil from becoming bone-dry. This is to rest the tuber. In August repot, positioning the tuber at the same level as before and in prepared African violet soil or a mixture of two parts well-rotted leaf mold to one each of clean, sharp sand and garden loam.

Now go back to step one and follow through seven. Be careful not to overwater until new leaves start to grow, and bring indoors before nighttime temperatures drop below 50 F. Resume fertilizing in early December.

Incidentally, play-name-pronunciation purists and one erudite taxi driver aside, I say "SIKE-luh-men."

Auto Radar War Truce Offered

SEATTLE (AP) — A manufacturer of those electronic devices that enable motorists to tell when they are about to enter a radar speed trap has made a peace offering to state law enforcement agencies.

"I'm here to offer our technology for developing a suitable, economic drone," said David Koncak, board chairman of Autotronics Inc., near Dallas.

A drone is an electronic transmitter that operates on the same frequencies as police radar. Radar detectors cannot differentiate the drone's signal from actual radar.

The drone is designed to be installed on fence posts or trees. Using solar power, it transmits a radar signal when no speed enforcer is around.

"The obvious result when a driver gets a signal on his detector is for him to slow down," Koncak told state law enforcement representatives here Thursday. "Anything that will slow down speeders is what we're all looking for, isn't it?"

The Washington Traffic Safety Commission has ordered 20 of the drones from another maker, but is waiting for a federal license to operate them, commission spokesman Tom Gullikson said.

"By selling radar detectors for drivers, we have become the involuntary adversary of police," said Koncak. His offer, he said, is an example of how radar and detectors can work in harmony.

Group Seeking Jury Worklist From Griffin

A group called Coalition for Equal Justice filed a petition Friday asking that Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin be ordered to hand over the worklists his office uses in picking juries here.

In its petition, the group said it asked Griffin in writing Feb. 7 to "produce for inspection the worklists recording the district attorney's office use of preemptory challenges and the jury panel information sheets indicating the addresses of the panel."

Griffin refused to produce the material, the complaint, filed in 140th District Court, alleges.

The coalition said that under the Texas Open Records Act, Griffin should be forced by the court to open such records.

The petition was filed by the "National Lawyers Guild, NAACP, American Civil Liberties Union, LULAC, Chicano Law Student Association, Black American Law Student Association, Association of Mexican-American Women, Brown Berets, Young Black Women Association, GI Forum, Arnett Benson Committee, Cursillo Movement, La Raza Unida and Common Cause, also known as the Coalition for Equal Justice; and Stephen C. McIntyre and Eliseo Solis, individually and as representatives of the coalition."

Laotian Troops Kill Six Meo Tribesmen

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Laotian soldiers killed six Meo tribesmen and seriously wounded 14 Thursday as they tried to cross the Mekong River border from Laos to Thailand, Thai officials said.

The Meos insisted they are considered clandestine army during the Indochina war and are considered anti-Communist. Laotian soldiers have been fighting to drive the Meos from their mountain strongholds.

INTENT — Gina Barrier of Oakwood Baptist Church's bell choir, gives rapt attention to the ringing of her set of bells. The bell choir group and others of a youth and college-career choir from Oakwood will be performing tonight in the Cadet Chapel of the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Oakwood Choirs Set Colorado Concerts

The High School and College Career Choir, Bell Jubilee and "The Reflection" singing group from Lubbock's Oakwood Baptist Church will do concerts and make appearances at two locations in Colorado while on a "mini" tour during the spring break.

At 7 p.m. today, the singers and musicians will participate in a revival-type service in the Cadet Chapel of the U.S. Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.

At both morning and night worship services at the University Hills Baptist Church in Denver, the choir and bell ringers and trio will be performing.

Monday, the 25-member youth group and five adults will be guests of the University Hills Church for tours and visits in the Colorado area.

The Lubbock contingent will return Tuesday.

A breakdown of the 25 young persons of the "mini" tour concerts is: 25 singers, 12 Bell Jubilee members, and a trio of "Reflection" musicians and singers.

At University Hills Baptist Church, the Lubbock group will be presenting the musical "Bright New Wings." The concert in the Air Force Academy chapel will be a 20-minute presentation as part of a revival program.

Joe Jones, music director at Oakwood Baptist Church, is director of the touring choir and musicians.

The tour group will include Kathy Pate, Gina Barrier, Jeaneen Wingo, Suzy King, Dana Turner, Kathy McGee, Cathy Crenshaw, Marcha Coursey, Alana Havens, Beth White, Cindy Garrett, Laura Lackey, Dalena Johnson, Janet McCaleb, Jenny Coke, Elaine Hines, Kelly Riebe, Melissa Robinson, Clay Riebe, Barry Hazel, Tom Johnson, Dan Hogan, Bruce Anderson, Wayland Hazel and Mark Brown.

Sponsors will include Joe Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon White and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Riebe.

Jones has been minister of music at Oakwood here six years. It is recalled Bell Jubilee ringers from Oakwood were one of the winning floats in Lubbock's Bicentennial parade in 1976.

BELL RINGING MUSIC — Bell ringers from the bell choir group of Oakwood Baptist Church here, are shown in rehearsal for a spring break tour being made to Colorado. The bell choir, along with a youth and college-career choir of the church will appear at the Air Force Academy tonight and at a Denver church Sunday for two performances. The choir entourage will return next Tuesday. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Youth Choir Embarking On Spring Concert

Broadway Church of Christ's Youthreach singing group, "New Beginnings," is on a spring concert tour, presenting concerts in Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Tennessee and Texas.

The concert singers departed Friday (March 17) and will return to Lubbock, March 25.

Friday night, the "New Beginnings" group was at the 4th and Elm Street Church of Christ at Sweetwater. Tonight, the group will present a concert at Bammel Road Church of Christ in Houston.

Rest of the schedule is: Sunday, Belle Chase Church of Christ, New Orleans, La.; Monday, Pensecola, Fla.; Tuesday, Avondale Church of Christ in Atlanta, Ga.; Wednesday, White Station Church of Christ, Memphis, Tenn.; and Thursday, Mineral Springs Church of Christ at Mineral Springs, Ark.

The concerts will be for church congregations.

The singing group is composed of youths from the Broadway Church of Christ Youthreach program. The name "New Beginnings," was chosen to signify the new life a person has when he becomes a Christian, a spokesman said.

Members of the group are Donna Rigney, Paul Hancock, Michelle Baxter, Bryan Mullican, Robin Igo, Doug Barnett, Becky Brown and Steve Mack.

Minister of youth John Paul Blankenship is sponsor and director.

CHURCH BRIEFS

The church library "Media Center" of Lubbock's Trinity Baptist Church contains 2,935 books, 248 film strips, 88 records, 1,494 cassette tapes and 283 other tapes. New media is purchased each month and shared as memorial gifts or given by individuals, according to a report to the conggreation. Volunteers keep the "Media Center" functioning. More volunteers are needed, a church spokesman said.

ARIEL FERRARI

Emmanuel Church Slates Evangelist

Evangelist Ariel Ferrari of Buenos Aires, Argentina, will be speaker at a series of services in Lubbock's Emmanuel United Methodist Church, Wednesday through Sunday of next week (March 22-26).

The church is located at 2617 Cornell St. The services will be in Spanish but "all are welcome," according to the Rev. Samuel Picazo, pastor of Emmanuel.

Evangelist Ferrari is currently taking special studies in Perkins School of Theology at SMU.

Services will be at 7:30 p.m. each day. There will be special music for each service.

The visiting evangelist will bring a special sunrise service on Easter Sunday (March 26).

Director Attends Youth Meet

Mark McBrayer of Lubbock Youth for Christ recently attended the Youth for Christ staff meeting and board conference in San Francisco.

Each year, staff and board members from the 156 local Youth for Christ chapters gather for business, inspirationals and education meetings.

In order to sharpen skills in their ministry among hundreds of thousands of students, each year conference participants take advantage of seminars on varied subjects. This year there were 24 subjects including such topics as these: "How Can I Teach the Bible in a Wilderness Setting?"; "Developing Ministry Leadership in Students"; "Working With Kids From Divorced Families"; "Psychology and Christianity — Some Current Trends"; "Finding Jobs for Our Own Youth Guidance Kids."

McBrayer said from the opening address by Dr. Francis Schaeffer through the closing message by YFC president Jay Kesler, the emphasis was on evangelism, which in turn emphasized communication with the total person.

The Lubbock YFC director reported that the opening message established man as being created by God and in need of God and God's standards in order to survive. According to the speaker, the responsibility of the Body of Christ is to present a gospel of hope for the whole man and be grounded in objective truth of God's revelation.

The closing address by Kesler, according to McBrayer, challenged delegates with six Biblical principles of evangelism which YFC has followed in its ministry among high school age students.

Lubbock Youth for Christ sponsors Campus Life Clubs and Campus Life Magazine for high school age students in the Lubbock area. Locally governed and directed, it is a non-denominational Christian organization affiliated with 155 other local chapters and Youth for Christ International headquarters in Wheaton, Ill. Youth For Christ International has indigenous activities in 52 other countries of the world.

Local offices are at 1619 University Ave., Suite 225, McBrayer said.

YFC is active in three Lubbock high schools and McBrayer said, it intends to branch out to all of the other high schools next year. Presently, there are Youth for Christ activities in Coronado, Monterey and Lubbock highs.

Missionary Slates City Presentation

The Rev. Warren Newberry, an Assemblies of God missionary to Malawi, Central Africa, will be speaker at 7 p.m. Sunday in Lubbock's University Avenue Assembly of God Church at 4803 University Ave.

Rev. Newberry and his wife, Annettee, have ministered in Malawi since 1968 in areas of construction, tent evangelism, teaching and serving as principals of two Bible Bible schools.

In 1966 the nation formerly called Nyasaland, gained its independence and became Malawi. Five and one half million people live in the landlocked country. The country is served by Assemblies of God Bible schools, printing presses and an International Correspondence Institute outreach.

At his missions rally presentation here, Rev. Newberry will present African songs, show curios, and present an audio-visual presentation, according to David McNeely, pastor, who invited the public to attend.

Rex Webster To Lead Methodist Singing

How is this for ecumenism?

A Baptist deacon will lead singing in a United Methodist church for Holy Week services.

He is Rex Webster, longtime church and civic leader in Lubbock and a deacon and former choir director of First Baptist Church.

He will be leading singing for a series of Palm Sunday services at Lubbock's First United Methodist Church and will continue through Wednesday as song leader.

Dr. Sam Nader, senior minister at First United Methodist, will deliver the sermons.

Services will be at 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday; and 12:05 to 12:35 p.m. and 8 p.m., Monday through Wednesday in the sanctuary

Webster was choir director of First Baptist Church here 1947 to 1969 and has been song leader for many church and religious meetings. He has been a song leader for Rotary International meetings at all levels.

Wayland Senior's Home Church Members To Attend Graduation

PLAINVIEW (Special) — There can't be anything quite like having friends — lots of friends.

Marvin Matthews, a 22-year-old graduating senior at Wayland Baptist College, will tell you that. He knows.

Marvin is a native of Washington, D.C., who dropped a pre-law study four years ago to come to West Texas and Wayland to study music.

He stayed here and on May 20, he'll receive his degree and set out on a career in professional music.

But, Plainview is a long way from home to be graduating from college.

Back home, he says, his church, the Antioch Baptist Church, believes in supporting its college students.

RELIGION NEWS

Several months ago, his family, his pastor, the pastor's family and a few church members began making plans to come to Plainview for Marvin's graduation.

Marvin says that when his pastor told him they were coming, he went to talk to Carlos McLeod at Plainview's First Baptist Church.

In 1975, Marvin recalls, the chapel choir from First Baptist Church here went to Washington and through the missions director at the Plainview church, Marvin arranged to have the choir sing at Antioch Baptist.

With his pastor coming to Plainview, Marvin says, he decided it would be nice if the man preached at First Baptist.

Marvin made the arrangements and the whole proposition bloomed.

Marvin's pastor, Dr. Fred X. Porter, decided that if he was going to preach here, he'd bring part of his church with him.

As plans stood three weeks ago (the last time Marvin heard from Washington), the church's traveling choir; a number of members; Porter; Porter's family; and Marvin's mother,brother, four sisters, adopted sister, and at least four of his 18 nieces and nephews are coming to Plainview on May 18.

"There are 75 of them the last I heard," Marvin says. "It's really going to be exciting."

They will fly in time to hear Marvin's senior recital on May 18 and be here when he graduates on the 20th and leave on the afternon afternoon of the 21st of May, after Dr. Porter and the choir have appeared at First Baptist. First United Baptist, and probably a church in Lubbock or Amarillo.

"It's sort of a vacation for the church," Marvin said of his 700-member home congregation.

Singer To Present Easter Performance

Kim Wickes — "When you hear her sing, you forget she's blind..."

So said Vienna's Frau Ludwig, famous voice teacher and critic, about the talent of Kim Wickes, who will be heard in concert at Lubbock's Trinity Church at 5 p.m. Easter (March 26)

Born in Korea in 1947, Kim was a victim of the Communist invasion of that war-town country. When the North Koreans invaded her village on June 25, 1950, a bomb exploded near the little three-year-old girl, permanently blinding her.

Her life nearly was snuffed out later, when in frustration over his inability to feed his children, Kim's Buddhist father threw the little blind girl and her younger sister into the river. Kim's mother's screams caused the father to change his mind. He rescued Kim from the quick-closing waters, but her sister was already drowned.

When Kim's mother failed to return home from a search for food, her desperate father took Kim to Harry Hill Orphanage for the blind at Taigu. There she was nutured back to health and got her first introduction to singing. Soon, she was soloing regularly at church services.

At 10, Kim was encouraged to come to the United States. She was placed by the Harry Holt Adoption Agency (Eugene, Ore.) with a dedicated Christian family from Dayton, Ind., with Mr. and Mrs. George Wickes and their four children.

After overcoming the drastic adjustments of a new culture, new language, and new parents, Kim became an outstanding student at school. She graduated in 1965 from Wheaton Academy, a Christian high school, then operated by Wheaton College, at Wheaton, Ill. She attended Wheaton College and then went on to earn her bachelor's and master's degrees in music from the school of music at Indiana University.

After doing the course work for her doctorate degree at Indiana, she was awarded a Fullbright Scholarship to Vienna Institute of Music and Dramatic Arts in Austria. It was during that year (1973-74) that she studied under Frau Ludwig, one of Europe's most talented teachers of German Lieder (song) and oratorio, and mother and teacher of the well-known Christa Ludwig.

After her Fulibright work, Kim was asked to sing at a series of prestigious events, starting with the International Congress on World Evangelization in Lausanne, Switzerland, where she quickly became acquainted with many of the International Christian leaders.

Also, that summer, she appeared at EXPLO 74. She made appearances in Malaysia and Hong Kong. And her 29 days in Korea could only be considered a triumphant welcome home by the people of her native land. Kim was followed from place to place by the press, who told the story of how she had survived the bitter experiences of her life and also chronicled her search for her long-lost father, with whom she was reunited on that trip.

In the fall of 1974, she was a special soloist at Billy Graham's 25th Anniversary Celebration at the Hollywood Bowl. That appearance had special meaning to Kim, for it was at a Billy Graham Crusade in Indianapolis in 1959 that that she accepted Christ as her Savior.

Kim has quickly become a legend in her own time. She has performed in front of millions on all continents via personal appearances, television and radio. Her records, 8-track and cassette tapes titled "The Love of God" and her book "Kim," are available at her concerts.

Church Features Special Events

A "Procession of Psalms" will be a feature at Lubbockview Christian Church Sunday.

At the morning worship service (10:30 a.m.), children of the church will march into the sanctuary carrying psalm branches. This will be done to illustrate the crowds and what they did many years ago on what is now Psalm Sunday.

The church also is opening a Lenten Fair in Jennings Hall Sunday. Children, youths and adults are expected to enjoy the Psalm Sunday at the church.

FIRST DETACHED COLLAR

Hannah Lord Montague made the first detached collar in 1825 in Troy, N.Y., after she became tired of washing her husband's shirts just because the collar was dirty. With a scissors, she snipped off the collar and the result was a new look in menswear of the day, says "Famous First Facts."

A MINISTRY IN SONG — Lubbock singer, Carolyn Mullins, who has a gospel singing ministry in nursing and convalescent homes of the city, is shown here doing an Easter hymn in a concert Thursday night at Lakeside Lodge. Her accompanist is Luella Stokes, and she also is assisted by her husband, J.A. "Moon" Mullins. (Staff Photo by Norm Tindell)

Amid joyous hosannas and waving of palm branches, He rode into the city of Jerusalem, past these same walls which are standing today.

Long ago in ancient Palestine, the prophet had heralded the coming of a king. But now few thought it more than the usual procession of some new earthly ruler. Yet no king ever came as He came. No king ever built such a kingdom.

This was the King of Heaven who rode into the hearts of men and built there a Kingdom of Love!

They crucified Him, but death could not stop His coming. He comes in every age to all who will believe. He comes to you.

Go to church this Palm Sunday, for "thy king cometh." Let the King of Heaven ride into your heart.

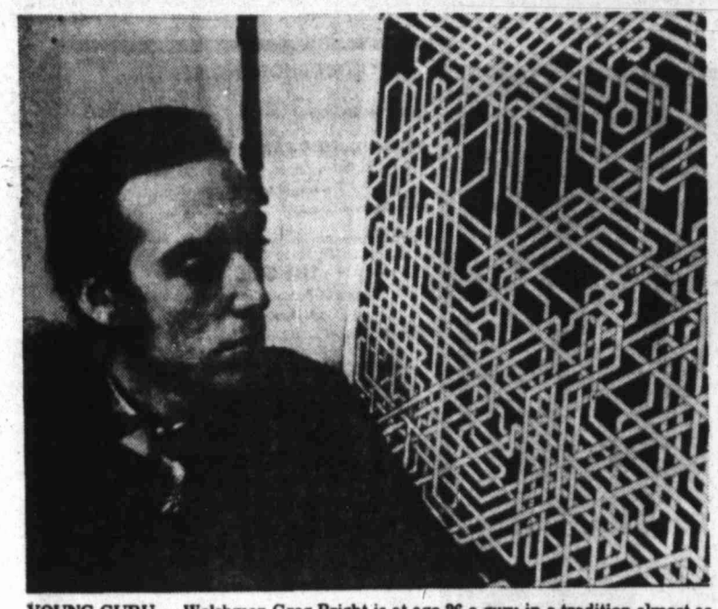
Expert Designs Mazes To Baffle Puzzle Fans



YOUNG GURU — Welshman Greg Bright is at age 26 a guru in a tradition almost as old as recorded history. He solved Britian's Hampton Court maze at age nine. A 280-square-foot maze painting of his featured in a one-man showing in London has yet to be solved.

LONDON—(NEA)—Greg Bright is an a-maze-ing young man. At 26 he is the leading world authority on the design and construction of mazes.

Every kid has been confronted early in life with the puzzle book maze designed to keep him busy during long car trips or rainy weekends indoors. You remember: go in entrance "A" with your crayon, then swiggle around corners and through alleys until you reach the jackpot at letter "B". Greg Bright's made a very good living out of turning this child's play into an adult art-form and mind-stretcher.

Welshman Bright is the latest guru in a tradition almost as old as recorded history. He regards with disdan the legendary maze at Knossos on the island of Crete wahere Theseus slew the Minotaur. "It's hardly a maze at all," he sighs condescendingly. He has similar low regard for the famous 18th Century maze on the grounds of the Palace of Versailles: "It's really just a pleasant garden waok." What about the tourist-crowded maze at Britain's Hampton Court which he easily resolved at the age of nine? "It's one of those simple mazes to unscramble; you just keep turning the same direction at every intersection and you get through it in a breeze."

Bright's an artist, virtually untrained and unschooled, but suddenly the best in the world in a very bizarre and baffling business. "I studied art in school," he explains, "mostly because it was the one course that had no homework. School didn't challenge me; I left at 17."

His most widely challenged large-as-life masterpiece was commissioned by Lord Weymouth, who runs Britain's most famous stately home at Longleat. Here, paying guests walk into -and hopefully through -Bright's largest maze, a puzzler constructed of 3,600 yew bushes, pegged out with the intention of confusing and confounding day-trippers visiting the gardens.

"We really shouldn't have opened the maze so soon, as the bushes are still too squat," Greg sighs. "When they grow to 12 feet tall, however, that maze is going to be a really good one." One imagines Bright will be satisfied only when a busload of tourists goes into his maze, gets hopelessly lost, and a rescue party has to be called in.

Three design-filled volumes, "Greg Bright's Fontana Mazes" and "Visual Music" have come off the presses in the past few years. U.S. readers snapped up more than 60,000 copies of his latest tome almost as soom as it hit the book stores. Editions in Dutch, Japanese, German, French and Spanish are moving well. Some of this books mazes go on for three and four pages.

London's prestigious institute of Contemporary Arts has staged a one-man showing of Gret's puzzle pictures. The exhibit features plexi-glass over some of the art with crayons handed out to gallery spectators so they could try to trace their way through his complex mazes. Critics called the Bright work "staggeringly ingenious," "maddeningly difficult" and "beautiful to look at."

The focal point of the exhibit was a 280-square-feet painting, an immense and baffling maze in which lanes of changing colors were the avenues to escape. The maze, which took four years to develop, is so labrynthine and complex that it carries letters and numbers along its edges, like a road map, enabling frustrated puzzle solvers to make notations on their latest locations on the maze as they attempt to navigate towards the solution. Greg says proudly, "No one's solved it yet."

The daily routine of the bachelor maze-maker begins around 11 a.m., when Bright gets up for a long time thinking about the next design." His maze-making jargon is filled with references to "mutually accessible centers" and "partial valves." His total eqipment consists of a few drafting tools, pencils and a dining room table which he hunches over for a good part of the day and night.

Like most artist, Bright is possessed by a vision. "It's the ultimate maze," he explains. "The walls are 12 feet tall, so the person in the maze can't see out. When he enters the maze the door behind him locks, and the attendants go away. The lanes are mostly archs and spirals, which are the most disorienting. No place to eat, no place to drink. It's a matter of solving the maze or not surviving."

His eyes glitter as he describes this. One senses he would welcome the chance to tackle this life-or-death challenge himself -if only there were someone else in the world who had the talent to design a maze that would really be a test for him.

Water Project Saves East African Game

NEW YORK (NEA) — The conflicting needs of fierece Maasi cattle herders and wild animals have been fulfilled by a water diversion project, saving a 150-square-mile wildlife paradise in the shadow of East Africa's Mt. Kilimanjaro.

Since October, water from springs in the heart of Kenya's Amboseli National Park has been piped outside its boundaries, creating artificial swamps where the herds of the Maasi can drink.

Until the pipelines were opened, the Maasi cattle drank at the springs, the only permanent water in the region. The cattle — considered wealth as well as a food source by the Maasi — were consuming and trampling the vegetation of the park, threatening the survival of its rich game population.

The park has been created out of 150 square miles of an existing game reserve, operated by the Maasi, famed as warriors and lion hunters. Under an agreement with the Kenyan government, the Maasi no longer will drive their cattle into the park, and will be compensated for giving up grazing land within their boundaries.

The agreement and completion of the water project climax a long-term effort to establish and protect the park, fostered by the New York Zoological Society. The society, based at the Bronx Zoo, developed the water diversion plan, and paid for half of the pumping and piping facilities.

At the urging of the zoological society — which has helped establish more than 40 national parks and preserves around the world — the government of Kenya in 1970 began to create the park. In return, the society conducted an ecological study of the Amboseli region and its wildlife, which includes elephants, rhinoceroses, lions, cheetahs, and myriad antelope.

Amboseli is a great, shallow depression which until 5,000 years ago was a salt lake. The resulting salinity of the soil makes it difficult for plants to flourish, so the vegetation cannot take the dual stress of grazing by both game and cattle.

The Maasi, a tall, haughty people who wander through southern Kenya and Tanzania without regard for national boundaries, possess immense cattle herds. In many parts of Kenya the herds have stripped the landscape of vegetation and turned it to desert.

Unlike wild game, which has adapted to dry conditions and gets most of its moisture from food, the cattle need to drink large quantities of water. Without water holes, the cattle die during the periodic droughts that grip the region. Because the Maasi treasure cattle so highly, they have been reluctant to relinquish the rights to water holes, even if compensated.

Under the plan for Amboseli, however, the Maasi receive monetary compensation as well as several new water holes and lush swamps that serve as a new source of graze for the cattle. During the dry season, moreover, game from the park will be able to wander onto the surrounding Maasi lands, and feed on the vegetation growing around the new artificial water holes.

GAME POPULATION THREATENED — Maasi Cattle no longer roam the Kenyan Amboseli National Park, trampling the vegetation, which threatened the survival of the game population.

Hughes Claim Ruled Late

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of Nevada says Howard Hughes owed it $2.8 million before his death, but a judge ruled tentatively Friday that the institution's claim was filed too late.

However, Superior Court Judge Jack Swink gave attorceys permission to file further papers in the matter. They are asking that the deadline be waived to allow filing of the claim against the Hughes estate.

The university says the $2.8 million is the balance of a $3.8 million grant Hughes made in 1972 for constructing and maintaining a medical school.

The grant was paid in annual installments of $200,000 and was paid up through the 1976-77 school year, they said.

In asking that the "creditors' deadline" for filing claims be waived, the university said it was never formally notified by the California estate of the claim deadline which took effect July 1976 — four months after Hughes died.

Judge Swink rejected the argument saying notification was unnecessary because of the massive publicity attending Hughes' death.

The university has filed similar claims in Texas and Nevada.

Attorney George Stephens said the school wants to make claims in all three states which are litigating the question of Hughes' legal residence.

Cockroaches first came from the warm, moist climates of Africa and the Middle East, and today make their home wherever people live, except in the polar regions, says National Geographic.

Suit Seeks To Halt Acquisition Of Land

AUSTIN (AP) — Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE) filed suit Friday to block the purchase of 6,741 acres of land for a new prison in Hidalgo County.

CURE said in its petition for an injunction that the State Board of Corrections' vote to buy the land was void because the Texas Open Meeting Act was violated.

Purchase of the property cannot take place until an "approval board" consisting of Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and prison board chairman James Windham gives its okay.

The panel has scheduled a March 28 meeting in Austin.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Five Farms Corp. said reports that the firm would turn a $4 million profit from selling the land to the state for the new prison were "absolutely false."

Frank Westerman said the 14,500-acre Monte Cristo Ranch cost more than the $10 million reflected in Hidalgo County records.

"There was a substantial down payment. We're really making a modest profit off of this," Westerman said.

The prison board has an option to buy not only the initial 6,741 acres for $8 million but the remainder of the ranch for an additional $6 million.

CURE's suit alleges that when the prison board voted March 13 in Palestine to buy the land, its agenda did not show that the issue would come up.

Closed meetings are permitted when land acquisitions are discussed, but a state board's agenda still must reflect all items, even those to be taken up behind closed doors.

The suit says that as a result of the alleged violation, the vote to buy the land "is voidable and should be set aside by the court."

CURE opposed construction of a West Texas prison in the last legislative session, and is against the South Texas prison on principle, said director Charles Sullivan.

The Legislature authorized construction of a West Texas prison.

"We're for a moratorium. We want to delay the building of our traditional maximum security prisons until a maximum development of community programs has taken place," Sullivan said.

He said he would be in Edinburg Monday and Corpus Christi on Tuesday to distribute petitions asking the "approval board" to block the purchase of the prison site.

Sullivan said he would ask the board for a chance to present the petitions at its March 28 meeting.

The board met March 13 in Brownwood for about 30 minutes but declined to give immediate approval to the purchase, saying it needed time to obtain an appraisal and title information.

State Court Refuses Appeal By SLA

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has refused to hear an appeal by Symbionese Liberation Army members Joseph Remiro and Jack Little to overturn their conviction in an attempted escape from the Alameda County jail three years ago.

Remiro, 30, and Little, 27, are serving life sentences for the 1973 shooting death of Oakland School Superintendent Marcus Foster.

It's Worth Looking Into

Think Ahead ... Think of Summer...
Think of swimming in the back yard of this lovely "early" contemporary home, featuring 2 fireplaces, 3 large bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, an office and a garden room. Over 2800 sq. ft. and priced at only $69,950. You might call the pool a "bonus" feature. Call for private showings.

Quiet, Established Neighborhood
Lots of trees, a lovely yard and a home that's just immaculate. Two living areas, 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, and worlds of storage. Carpet and drapes are almost new. Drive by 6010 Vernon, you'll like the inside, too!

Advantage One! Formal Dining Room
Advantage Two! Office, sewing room or playroom all-in-one. It's pretty and clean and has 3 exceptionally large bedrooms. You'll see a lot for your money when you check out 7708 Lynnhaven Drive. You'll also enjoy the party house, pool and tennis courts of Melonie Park South.

Crowded? Move Up To Comfort
In this spacious 4 bedroom home with living-dining comb., den, gameroom, breakfast area and a multitude of extras. It's big, it's sharp and it's priced to sell at $74,500. Call for further details.

Can't Find What You're Looking For?
Build it! Corner lot, super location in the Westgate Addition near Rushland Park. Be a part of that prestigious neighborhood. The lot is priced at $25,000. You might also ask about other lots we have avilable.

SUBJECT: REGARDING THE NEW TREATY ON OUR U.S. CANAL IN PANAMA

Dear Senator _____

With a sense of urgency, I ask you to stand loyally with America in exercising your maximum influence to defeat the treaty which would give our U.S. Canal and zone in Panama to the Communist-puppet-dictatorship sitting on the people of Panama.

The Communists are now testing this nation to determine whether the U.S. Senate can be persuaded by fear propaganda and deceptive illusions to give to the Communists our U.S. Canal in Panama which is a strategic part of the sovereign territory of the United States. To the Communists the great test is this: If the U.S. Congress can be persuaded to ratify the treaty, the U.S. Government could likewise be persuaded to surrender the entire United States in response to an ultimatum demanding surrender. The serious danger of ratification of the treaty and its ultimate consequences needs more in depth examination than the Senate has given to it.

If by your action or inaction Senator, you contribute to the surrender of our canal zone and thereby cause the Communists in the near future to issue the United States an ultimatum to surrender, you would find it exceedingly difficult in that emergency to prevent the Presidency from implementing their Pre-Emptive Surrender Plans already formulated. Surrender would be followed by the mass murder of the American people. We must not forget the extensive mass-murders by the Communists in Russia, China, Cambodia, and all other countries they have taken over. Sixty-six million murdered in the Soviet according to Alexander Solzhenitsyn. Up to sixty-four million murdered in China by the very conservative report of the U.S. Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee's report entitled THE HUMAN COST OF COMMUNISM IN CHINA, but which is far less than actually killed. In Cambodia they have killed at least one-third of the population and they are still killing them by driving families out of their homes to die in the country from exposure and starvation. Denmark's ambassador Kield Mortsen recently returned from Cambodia and stated only fifteen thousand live in the Cambodian City of Phnom Penh where three million lived before the Communists took over.

The tough foreign cadre Communists that would take control of America hate Americans far more than any other people, and with an insane passion borne of the conviction that all living in America are mentally diseased with the infection of capitalism and must be exterminated to prevent the infection and contamination of their New Social Order which will be world-wide if we let America fall into their hands. To the Communists, the extermination of Americans would alleviate the world population explosion. People of other lands would be imported into our land of technological wealth which the Communists intend to have intact by their series of chain-like tactics to persuade our surrender. Ratification of the treaty would forge for them a very important link in that chain.

American Communists, Fellow Travelers, and other opportunists would be exterminated first because they are not only contaminated with the good life of American capitalism, but they would probably turn against the foreign Communists in control when the massmurders of Americans began. This could be anticipated from the record of many American Communist defections, including those in high positions, and in previous circumstances much less severe than the extermination of Americans would be. (i.e. Stalins alliance with Hitler, and Khrushchev's admissions to the mass-murders under Communism.).

We must not let fear propaganda trick us into surrendering our canal and then the United States. We must remember that we would sustain far less deaths and suffering to fight with all of our might to prevent Communist domination than we would suffer by surrender followed by torture and extermination of our people.

Evidence shows that ratification of the treaty would in reality transfer the powers of sovereignty and control to the Communist dictators in the Kremlin who control through Castro the Communist-puppet-dictatorship sitting on the people of Panama. The columnist Drew Pearson identified Torrijos, the dictator of Panama, as a member of the Communist Party of Panama as far back as November 19, 1968. The columnist Paul Scott reported March 25, 1973 that Soviet documents referred to Torrijos as a Marxist-Leninist and a true friend of the Soviet Union and they also listed Panama as their coming Soviet military base. On January 22, 1976 Paul Scott reported that Torrijos had taken 200 of his aides to Cuba to plan for the Communist takeover of the Panama canal. Why would any U.S. Senator vote for ratification?

Obviously our leaders are not fully aware of the intense anger and hostility quietly growing at the grass roots against the policies of our government that continue to aid and abet the aggressions of Communism. The American people will not tolerate the giving of our canal to the Communists either by ratification of the treaty, or by the President (after rejection of the treaty by the Senate) giving it to them by making only a pretense of defense smelling like the Bay of Pigs and then offering the senseless excuse that he could not defend it.

It appears that very little has been done to strengthen our defenses in our Canal Zone, especially in riot-crowd-control defense. This must be rectified immediately as a priority emergency. President Carter as Commander-In-Chief of the military is inviting invasion of our Canal Zone by not showing an existing massive defense force there.

Apparently the quiet American people will soon be angry enough to start raising their voices in demanding the impeachment and removal from office of those who would endanger our security by causing the Communists to believe that our courage and resistance are gone by giving them our U.S. Canal in Panama.

It is imperative that our U.S. Senators reject the new treaty and to demand by resolution that the President successfully defend our canal. It is recognized that upon rejection of the treaty it would be appropriate, under the circumstances, for the Congress to simultaneously and voluntarily increase the annuity payment to Panama as we have done several times in the past. Perhaps even that agreed upon in the negotiations, but NO NEW TREATY.

The American people have given the Senate an overwhelming mandate to defeat the treaty. Upon this issue each Senator will carve his image in the hearts of the American people as being either for or against giving our canal to the enemy. We must now be highly resolved to act with wisdom, foresight, and courage that this nation shall not perish from the earth.

Most sincerely,

_____

Broad Gain Aids Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market capped off its second straight advancing week with a broad gain Friday in the heaviest trading so far in 1978.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.89 to 768.71, finishing the week with a 10.13 gain after an 11.27-point advance the week before.

Gainers outpaced losers by close to a 5-2 margin in the daily New York Stock Exchange tally, and the NYSE's composite common-stock index was up .37 at 50.25.

Big Board volume reached 28.47 million shares, up from 25.40 million Thursday and the heaviest total since a 29.15 million-share day last Nov. 23.

Analysts have noted an absence of any dramatic developments in the news to account for the Dow's 26-point rally so far this month. The average had tumbled 89 points in January and February.

Brokers did point out that the market has benefited of late from accumulating evidence of a stable trend in interest rates.

Polish Youngster's Art Works Excite Critics

NEW YORK (UPI) — At the age of seven most children are just learning to draw straight lines with a ruler. But a New York art gallery is concluding this week a one-person show of paintings done by Polish-born Wlodek Koss when he was only seven.

Critics who have viewed this exhibition — believed to be the first ever given by a major gallery for the work of a child — and Wlodek's other early paintings do not compare his art to other children's work.

Instead they compare it favorably to the work of adult artists, citing Wlodek's originality in painting what most interested him when he did the paintings in 1972 — faces.

Actually Wlodek (pronounced Vwodek), who is now 13, has been painting since he was six.

Wlodek, a tall, handsome boy with shiny black hair and dark eyes, smiles proudly as he stands alongside his work in the Vorpal Gallery in Manhattan's Soho district where the show was held. He paints in oil, acrylic and watercolor and is lavish in his use of color.

Among the canvases, many more than twice his size, are those titled: Charles Chaplin, Self-Portrait, Portrait of Mother, and Portrait of Mother and Father, which is 10 feet by 16 feet and the largest canvas in the exhibit.

Wlodek got the inspiration to paint Chaplin after he and his family saw several of the film tramp's old movies. "You just can't help but be influenced by his image," Wlodek said.

He had seen his parents only a bit more often than Chaplin when he painted them. The family is from Poland where Wlodek was born in 1964, but Wlodek's father, Jerzy and mother Bogumila, both artists, left there in 1965 for what was to be a one-year stay in Paris. Once there, they decided to emigrate and settled in New York in 1969. They sent for their children but the Polish government would not allow them to leave until 1971, after the American government lobbied on their behalf.

Wlodek and his sister Tomira came straight to New York but Tomira, then eight, barely remembered her parents and Wlodek, then six, did not remember them at all. Neither child could speak English.

The family lived in a Fifth Avenue loft near the Flatiron Building and the children watched their parents paint on the floor. Soon they asked to paint and did a female figure on wood with cleaning brushes. Within months, Wlodek had painted many of the large faces now on exhibit at Vorpal.

The children say they started painting to help identify with their parents in their new American environment. "You want to do what your parents are doing," they said. Wlodek and his sister first exhibited in a gallery before he was eight.

In 1974 the family exhibited at the World Trade Center. Wlodek contributed a work 190 feet long, which he painted in 16 stages in canvas on the 16x10-foot loft floor. He never saw the work complete until it was assembled for the show. Once he saw it, he recalls, "I looked at it and I liked it."

During the 1975 July 4th weekend the family painted on giant canvases in front of thousands at Rockefeller Plaza. "I was painting mask-like faces," recalls Wlodek. Does it make him nervous to paint in front of people he never saw before? "It does, but not that much," he says.

Muldoon Elder, owner of the Vorpal Gallery, saw Wlodek's work for the first time two years ago and felt immediately that the boy was a "downright genius." He said he waited a while to exhibit him to be sure Wlodek wasn't "a flash in the pan."

"When I first saw the paintings I could hardly believe he painted them at all, whether it was yesterday or when he was seven," Elder said.

The family has also exhibited at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and One Penn Plaza, where works by Wlodek and Tomira are still hanging. They have exhibited at the Union Carbide building and Wlodek is proud the company chose one of his works to grace the ground floor of its new office building in Moorestown, N.J.

Wlodek's best-known work is a painting of the Statue of Liberty which appeared on the cover of a children's book created for President Carter. It has special meaning for the family because they all became U.S. citizens in 1973.

Wlodek's subject matter has evolved over the years. "First came large faces, then came geometric designs, then came small faces," he said.

Wlodek had no art background in Poland, where he and Tomira lived with Bogumila's parents in a small seacoast city. He has had no specialized art training here, either. He attends a public junior high school with only standard art appreciation courses. He will start high school this fall.

Wlodek wants to attend college but unlike most children is sure of what his career will be.

"I'd like very much to continue to be an artist," he says. He would also like to travel around the U.S. and "other countries — Italy, Egypt and China."

Wlodek also likes to swim and read and enjoys listening to classical music while painting on the loft floor. The family also enjoys visiting the various museums in New York but do not spend too much time out because they are busy painting.

"Time is kind of precious to us," Bogumila said.

The exhibition of Wlodek's work will travel to Vorpal galleries in Chicago, San Francisco, and Laguna Beach, Calif., later this year.

Coal Industry Plans Growth

HOUSTON (AP) — Carl Bagge, president of the National Coal Association, said Thursday the coal industry plans to double production to 1.2 billion tons per year by 1985.

Bagge told an energy-law conference at the University of Houston that the industry can meet the goal if President Carter allows industry to get on with the job.

Bagge said Congress must face the hard decision of striking a balance between energy, environment and the economy. He said he hopes the Department of Energy can assume a role for energy equal to that federal Environmental Progression Agency on environmental matters.

"The Clean Air Act does not permit the consideration of all the factors that may be in the public interest," Bagge said.

Long-term solutions will require higher prices for energy and recognition that there is some risk to public health in producing and using energy, he said.

Singer Schedules Appearance In Dallas

KELLY GARRETT — To Appear in Venetian Room March 20-April 1.

Kelly Garrett's superb musicianship is the reason she is known to many as the "singer's singer." Critic John Simon said "Kelly not only sings her songs superlatively, she also acts them — indeed becomes them."

Kelly has appeared in three Broadway shows. For her performance in "Mother Earth" she won the Theatre World Award and such critical acclaim as Emory Lewis' statement — "she can turn any song into dramatic fireworks." Kelly won a Tony nomination for her appearance in Harry Chapin's "The Night That Made America Famous." Noted composer Sammy Cahn also chose her to co-star in his Broadway presentation "Words and Music" and later for his television specials of the same name, soon to be aired.

Her dynamic versatility makes her a favorite guest on The Mike Douglas Show, The Merv Griffin Show and The Dinah Shore Show. Over the past eighteen months Johnny Carson has featured Kelly more than a dozen times on the Tonight Show. She has just completed her fifth appearance with Carson in Las Vegas.

Other television appearances include The Bobby Vinton Show, two David Frost specials, the 1976 Academy Awards, and hostess of the 1977 Miss New York World Pageant.

Kelly has appeared in America's most prestigious supper clubs including New York's Persian Room, The Rainbow Grill and Reno Sweeney's. In the past few months she has made personal appearances with Bob Hope and Bob Newhart. In January, she will perform for the second time as featured soloist with the Oklahoma Symphony Orchestra.

Following the release of her first album on RCA Records, Peter Reilly of Stereo Review Magazine said, "It is the depth in her voice that makes Garrett special among today's singers ...Kelly can probably sing anything, so no need to make it easy. Remember, this kid works one hundred feet up — and without a net."

Town Hall marks Kelly's New York concert debut.

Embarrassed Mayor Honors Patrolman

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Policeman Floyd Dufore was all set to receive the outstanding police officer of the month award when he arrested Mayor Max Graff for drunken driving. Graff handed him the award that night anyway.

Dufore arrested the mayor early Thursday morning and took him to the Carteret County jail in Beaufort. A trial was set for March 28, and Graff was freed on bond in plenty of time to take part in the award ceremonies Thursday night.

The award for policeman of the month was Graff's idea, and Dufore was the first officer to receive it.

Atlantic Beach police weren't talking much about the whole thing Friday. Chief L.C. Swain said Dufore was "still employed by this department. I recommended him for the award."

Another officer said, "The chief has ordered us not to say anything at all about the case. It is a very hush-hush story around here."

Carteret County courthouse officials were reluctant to say anything about the upcoming trial. "If anyone wants to know about the trial, he will just have to talk to the mayor," a clerk said.

Graff and Dufore were unavailable for comment Friday.

Auto Dealer Named In Federal Lawsuit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The federal government is seeking $200,000 in penalties in a civil suit accusing a San Francisco auto dealer of tampering with automobile smog control devices.

Van Ness Sales and Service Corp., which markets Chrysler, Plymouth and Dodge vehicles, was named defendant in the suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court. The government alleged the dealer violated the Clean Air Act during an 18-month period from Oct. 1, 1975. The law prohibits auto dealers from removing emission control devices or making them inoperative.

OKAY RECOMMENDED

AUSTIN (AP) — President Lorene Rogers of the University of Texas said Wednesday she has recommended approval of a March 1 student referendum that favored abolishing student government at the university. Regents must approve results of the referendum for it to take effect.

Met Debut Of Romanian Soprano 'Exciting'

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the exciting things about opera-going is to hear a great new voice unexpectedly. And when you find one who can hold her own with Joan Sutherland and James Morris it's a red-letter day.

Mark the name of Julia Varady, a lovely Romanian soprano who made her Metropolitan Opera debut March 10 as Donna Elvira in the Met's first "Don Giovanni" since the 1974-75 season. (She repeated her performance in a live PBS TV broadcast of the Met production on March 16.)

Miss Varadi has a glorious ringing voice, just dark enough for Donna Elvira, flexible as a Mozart singer must be, beautiful diction, and all in all an exciting addition to the first rank of contemporary singers.

She did beautifully with the arias "Ah, fuggi" and "Mi tradi," and her contribution to the second act trio and sextet gave the audience a special treat.

Miss Varady's current repertoire includes Mozart, Offenbach, Gounod, and Puccini, as well as Violetta in "La Traviata" and Queen Elisabeth in "Don Carlo." These, and the many other roles of which she undoubtedly is capable, are something to look forward to.

Though Donna Anna in "Don Giovanni" is a comparatively small role for a superstar — there are so many principals in the opera — it's no wonder Joan Sutherland wants to sing it and fans flock to hear her. She makes the tessitura of "Or sai chi l'onore" seem easy, and her "Non mi dir" and her ensemble work combine for one of the most rewarding characterizations in contemporary opera.

And with James Morris we have a Don Giovanni perfectly capable of the 2,065 conquests he is credited with: big, vibrant, confident, charming, with his tender wooing in "La ci darem la mano" and "Deh, vieni alla finestra," and the ebullient "Fin ch'han dal vino."

English tenor John Brecknock, making his Met debut as Don Ottavio, seemed to be holding in a far more powerful voice than that required for "Dalla sua pace" and a quiet "Il mio tesoro," and one looks forward to hearing him in other roles. The evening also saw Richard Bonynge conducting his first Met "Don Giovanni," Huguette Tourangeau's first Zerlina, Gabriel Bacquier's first Leporello and Allan Monk's first Masetto.

While the Met pursues its heady ways in Lincoln Center, New York City Opera is going from strength to strength right next door at the New York State Theater, during its Feb. 23-April 30 spring season.

Over the years, NYCO's emphasis on American (and Canadian) singers has paid off handsomely, and recent evenings have seen some marvelous singing by soprano Gianna Rolandi, tenor Ermanno Mauro, baritones Pablo Elvira, William Justus and Harlan Foss, and bassos Andrew Foldi and Ara Berberian.

Elvira, who earlier in the season sang a much-acclaimed standby Germont pere in "La Traviata" and the title role in "Otello," proved himself one of the finest of contemporary Figaros March 12 in the season's first "Barber of Seville" (in Italian). It is one of the great performances of the day and Elvira's reputation in Europe and throughout the U.S. is well deserved. His appearance, acting and singing could hardly be bettered.

His Rosina was Gianna Rolandi, a soubrette who gives the impression of being undisciplined until you get used to her free-wheeling voice and acting. Her "Una voce poca fa" and the hijinks in the singing lesson help make this buffo production as good as it is. Andrew Foldi as Bartolo and especially Ara Berberian as Don Basilio were fine supporters. Alan Kays, a late replacement as Almaviva, has a light tenor which makes itself felt more in the ensemble singing than in his solo work.

Miss Rolandi also scored in the season's first "Fledermaus" March 8, as the chambermaid Adele in this bourgeous version of the Strauss operetta nicely devised and directed by Gerald Freedman. Rosalinda was sung well by Patti Allison as a suburban Viennese housewife of 1912, and Harlan Foss was excellent as a baritone Orlofsky.

On March 12 Ermanno Mauro sang his first NYCO Cavaradossi in "Tosca," and proved first rate in the role, both as actor and singer of "Recondita harmonia" and an exquisite "E lucevan le stelle." William Justus was a superbly majestic, charming and vengeful Scarpia.

The Floria Tosca was Marisa Galvany, who is very popular with the NYCO regulars. She has the temperament of the actress Tosca, and her powerful and dramatic "Vissi d'arte" was certainly exciting. But she is no actress and her head tones and her difficulties with the melodic line in the lower register and in recitative can be irritating.

A large-sized kangaroo can cover as much as 25 feet in a single leap.

ACTRESS IN COURT — Actress Linda Blair leaves Court of Common Pleas in Stamford, Conn., with her attorney, Martin Garbus, after she was granted 30 days to contest an extradition warrant signed by Gov. Ella T. Grasso. Miss Blair was arrested last December at her Wilton, Conn., home on a Florida fugitive warrant charging her with conspiracy to buy or sell cocaine. (AP Laserphoto)

Actress Vows To Make Art Serve Political Ends

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Melina Mercouri, a long-time professional of film and stage, says that henceforth even her acting career will serve her new political profession.

"The art from now on will serve my country and my party," she said, combing her hair in a tiny dressing room at the Broadway theater.

Miss Mercouri, 52, was elected to parliament last November on the Panhellenic Socialist Movement ticket in Piraeus. She currently is playing the lead in "Tribute for Brecht," a play combining sketches from several of the German dramatist's works to mark his 80th birthday.

"It is all part of my political work," she said. "I am taking Brecht to the masses. And when the play closes here, I will take it to the provinces, to the villages, to the peasants."

In the dressing room with her were Manos Katrakis, her leading man, and Yannis Ritsos, the Greek poet and Lenin Prize laureate.

Both men are Communists and have shared long spells of exile on Aegean islands. They told Miss Mercouri of some of their common experiences — how Katrakis saved Ritsos' poems by stuffing them in a bottle and burying them under aree at a concentration ca ; how Ritsos found some eggs and made them both an omelet.

Melina is a Marxist but says she is not a Communist.

"My devotion to my party was not the result of a moment's inspiration. It was a well-studied, deliberate political action. I did not enter politics yesterday. I was born into it," she said.

The tall, slender actress is the granddaughter of Spyros Mercouri, a legendary mayor of Athens. She is daughter of a gentle patrician politician, Stamatic Mercouri, who drifted from extreme right to extreme left during the course of a 40-year career.

Miss Mercouri joined the opponents of the junta that ruled Greece until 1974 and ran for parliament after democracy was restored. She lost by a handful of votes.

But she kept in touch with her constituency, one of the poorest worker neighborhoods of Athens, and her efforts have paid off at last.

She was recovering from a bleeding ulcer when elections were called last November. She left her luxury apartment in Athens, moved to a room in her constituency and started campaigning. The election period coincided with a torrential rainstorm that struck heavily in Piraeus, Athens' port city.

Thirty people were killed, mostly in the poorer section of Piraeus where a lack of storm drains turned the streets into raging torrents of water.

"It was hell. People were left without homes, their belongings completely destroyed. Facing illness and hunger. It was then that they realized how I could help and I realized how they needed me," she said.

She became one of 11 women deputies in the 300-member parliament.

"My feminism also had something to do with my success. I do believe that women in Greece are underprivileged and they should fight for really equal rights, but as a Marxist I am all for the working people — all the suffering persons. All the underdogs," she said.

Once in parliament, she immediately made her presence felt —first by being the first woman to enter the house in a pants suit.

Her initial speech had similar impact. She said she would stop paying taxes for radio and television — a small fee paid by all Greeks for support of the state-run radio and television stations —and urged citizens to follow her example.

She was protesting the low standards of programming and the pro-government slant in newscasts.

As a followup, she's become a member of her party's "Group on National Issues."

"Our duties include promoting national positions abroad and also the image of our party," she said.

"Turkey is doing a masterly job with propaganda, while our government does nothing. The parties have to fill that gap. We also have to keep our image alive with our friends abroad, especially members of the Greek communities throughout the world."

Miss Mercouri does not see many other actresses around the world doing what she has done although another Greek actress, Anna Synodinou, also was elected to parliament. A member of Premier Constantine Caramanlis' party, she now is deputy minister of social services.

"For all the admiration I have for her, for her superb struggle during the Vietnam war and for her work for the underprivileged, I can't see Jane Fonda getting elected to Congress," she said.

Then, thinking again, she said, "But I may be wrong. Even Ronald Reagan made it as governor and almost made it to the presidency."

Israeli Filmmaker Explores Jewish-Arab Relationships

NEW YORK (UPI) — With Arabs and Israelis at least talking to one another, this is as good a time as any for "Madame Rosa." It's not very well made or acted, even with Simone Signoret in the title role, but it is ripe with the good intention of showing mutual respect, even love, can flower in strange soil.

Rosa is an aging, long-retired Jewish prostitute who looks after castoff children in her Paris slum apartment. Her favorite is an Arab boy she has kept for 11 years, ever since his Algerian pimp of a father was put away for murdering the boy's prostitute mother.

Rosa raised the boy as a Moslem. But when the father returns to claim him, young Momo chooses to remain with the dying Rosa.

Director Moshe Mizrahi's flat style does tend to minimize the obvious sentimentality of the story, based on Emile Ajar's book. But the picture suffers from its plodding sincerity and from mechanical performances by Signoret and Samy Ben Youb as the boy. Claude Dauphin appears as a kindly old doctor. Michal Bat Adam is the young woman film editor who befriends the boy — and makes him wish life, like film, could be run backwards. Director Costa-Gavras ("Z") is seen briefly as her husband.

Mizrahi is an Israeli filmmaker whose pictures "I Love You, Rosa" and "The House on Chelouche Street" represented Israel when nominated for Oscars as best foreign language film in 1973 and 1974. "Madame Rosa" was nominated this year but as the official entry of France.

"Madame Rosa" (105 minutes) is an Atlantic Releasing Corp. release, in French with English subtitles. Unrated.

Swedish actress Gunnel Lindblom, a star in several Ingmar Bergman films of the late 1950s and '60s, has turned director herself with a stunning picture, "Summer Paradise."

It scrutinizes contemporary Swedes as closely as her mentor (now her producer) did in "Scenes From a Marriage" but in a more direct way without recourse to fantasy or symbolism.

The ironic title refers to a large seaside summer house outside Stockholm, the gathering place for an annual family holiday presided over by a middle-aged woman doctor. The idyllic atmosphere is shattered by the arrival of a poor relative and her deeply troubled, fatherless young son.

Mrs. Carter Lobbies For Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometimes even President Carter wonders who is running the store.

His on-the-record appointments schedule tells reporters and photographers which callers they will be permitted to cover —usually in the Oval Office, for a minute or so at the start of a meeting.

The way the White House scheduling office decides which appointments should have press coverage and which do not often have no rhyme or reason and defy the imagination.

Carter complains that the pictures that are being taken do not often land on the front page.

But he was taken aback at the end of a picture-taking ceremony with the Irish ambassador — who brought a gift of shamrocks in a Waterford crystal vase — when he learned the press was not being allowed to cover his next event. He had an appointment was with Nobel Laureate Maired

Corrigan, who won the international peace prize and while the press loitered, hoping to catch a glimpse of her, his aides were shooing them out of the room.

• • •

When Carter refused for two days to comment on the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and left all the talking to the State Department, one reporter reminded deputy press secretary Rex Granum of Carter's respect for Harry S. Truman and wondered aloud where the buck stops.

"It stops all over town," another reporter quipped.

Carter has Truman's original plaque on his desk with the famous inscription "the buck stops here."

• • •

Rosalynn Carter lobbied a bit to try to drum up support for the Panama Canal treaties. But she hates to have it publicized.

After Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D.-Neb. blew the whistle and reported the first lady had called his wife Cece to urge her to influence her husband in favor of the vote. Zorinsky responded "I make my own decisions."

He also cast a "no" vote.

However, even though Zorinsky disclosed Rosalynn's phone call, Mary Hoyt, the first lady's press secretary, apparently at her boss's behest, refused to "confirm or deny" the lobbying activities. The incident reminded reporters of the late Martha Mitchell who used to get on the telephone to senators' wives at times when a vote was crucial to the Nixon administration. The wives did not appreciate the prodding.

• • •

Incidentally, after a White House chauffered car went to the wrong place to pick up Zorinsky who was being wooed to vote in favor of the Canal, the congressman decided to drive to the White House himself the following morning. Before he arrived a memo was circulated "no slipups this time...or it will be the guillotine for all of us."

Former President and Mrs. Gerald Ford have moved into their posh new home in Palm Springs, Calif. "It's very contemporary, very Palm Springs," said a friend. The Fords have been living in a spacious leased resort home since they left Washington. It has been a mecca for old friends who come calling.

• • •

A reporter ran into former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger recently and he teased: "you don't say nasty things about me anymore." "I don't see you much these days," replied the reporter. —

• • •

Rosalynn Carter plans to have some solo events when she accompanies the president on his weeklong post-Easter journey to Latin America and Africa.

As her husband's diplomatic emissary, Mrs. Carter has previously visited two of the countries, Venezuela and Brazil and she will be able to show the president around. Both the Carters have studied Spanish and get by in the language.

• • •

Chip Carter is working for the "Cities in the Schools" program which is directed by a dynamic 38-year-old Georgian, Bill Milliken, who has worked with youth since he was 20 years old. Milliken, a followed of Mahatma Gandhi, has devoted his life to helping disadvantaged youths, starting out in Harlem. His aim is to restore interest in learning in teenagers, to make their classes small enough for the personal touch and to have teachers who are with them all the time as friends.

Watchmaking Major Industry For Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — Watchmaking has become a major export industry for the Soviet Union, which quietly has climbed to third place in worldwide sales behind traditional leaders Switzerland and Japan.

Aiming mainly for the budget-priced market, the Soviets have made inroads for their Slava (Glory) brand, Raketa and other timepieces in markets from London to southeast Asia.

Soviet watch parts also are exported separately, and one official estimates that more than a million Americans are wearing watches with Soviet mechanisms. The mechanisms are use by companies in Guam and the Virgin Islands for the U.S. market, the official said, and the watches often are labeled simply "foreign made."

Many of the Soviet watches are produced with Swiss-made equipment. The Soviet Union has tried to stay on good terms with their Japanese and Swiss competitors and to cooperate in combating labeling frauds.

Western sources say some foreign watchmakers have obtained Soviet mechanisms and sold them in watches marked "Made in Switzerland." Yuri V. Lozovoi-Shevchenko, a director of the Soviet watch-export firm Mashprioborintorg, said in an interview here that any such counterfeits have been made without Soviet permission.

The Soviets started exporting watches about 15 years ago and moved into third place in watch exports, ahead of all European countries except Switzerland, in the past three to four years.

Russia exported 12.5 million wristwatches in 1977, compared to 65.9 million by Switzerland and 28.3 million by Japan.

Russian watchmakers hope to keep increasing exports 4 to 5 percent a year, but see little prospect of surpassing Switzerland or Japan.

"I don't think we present any danger to our competitors," Lozovoi-Shevchenko said. He noted that the export of Soviet electronic quartz watches began only last year, well behind other countries, and that the Soviet internal market that governs two-thirds of the local watchmaking is traditionally conservative in styles.

"We don't change our styles so quickly," said the vice president of Mashpriborintorg, Boris Selikov. "The market changes very fast and sometimes we fall behind."

Swiss sources in Moscow said the Soviets have been seeking help from overseas designers to keep up with fashion trends.

The Soviet watches now on sale in London, one of Moscow's main overseas markets, are priced at $23 to $76. The same watches would cost the equivalent of $52 to $119 for Soviet consumers, who make an average wage of about $222 a month.

Soviet officials say export prices are based on current world prices for watches, rather than their original cost in rubles.

They dispute western allegations that Soviet watches are "dumped" on overseas markets at below their real production cost for the sake of earning hard currency.

Mashpriborintorg officials claimed the production of watches at the lower export price is still profitable for the 12 Soviet watch factories, which pay assembly line workers about $252 a month. A watch assembler in Japan can make $800 monthly.

A glance through Soviet watch catalogs shows styles similar to many western makes, including black-faced skin-diving watches, light-emitting and liquid crystal digital watches, self-winding watches and timepieces with dates and calendars. Western specialists call them "good, middle-range watches." Guarantees run for 18 months.

Officials said there are now about 1,500 styles of Soviet watches and clocks available for the export market.

While exports grow, the Soviet Union is importing only about 1,000 watches a year. Lozovoi-Shevchenko said the level of imports may increase somewhat in the future, but quoted the Russian proverb "There's no point in bringing trees to the woods" to suggest that Soviet consumers will continue to wear mainly locally produced watches in the future.

Blaze Destroys Old Wisconsin Building

PORTAGE, Wis. (AP) — The Portage Hotel, one of the city's oldest buildings, was gutted by fire early Friday.

Portage police said all of the hotel's 25 occupants, most of them elderly, full-time residents, had been accounted for. Some of them were taken to a hospital for treatment of shock. The fire, the cause of which was not immediately known, destroyed all but the frame of the four-story building.

NEWLYWEDS — Kay Bailey, acting Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, and Ray Hutchison, Republican candidate for Governor, pose for photographers Thursday after they were married in a family ceremony in Dallas (AP Laserphoto)

Mrs. Carter Lobbies For Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometimes even President Carter wonders who is running the store.

His on-the-record appointments schedule tells reporters and photographers which callers they will be permitted to cover —usually in the Oval Office, for a minute or so at the start of a meeting.

The way the White House scheduling office decides which appointments should have press coverage and which do not often have no rhyme or reason and defy the imagination.

Carter complains that the pictures that are being taken do not often land on the front page.

But he was taken aback at the end of a picture-taking ceremony with the Irish ambassador — who brought a gift of shamrocks in a Waterford crystal vase — when he learned the press was not being allowed to cover his next event. He had an appointment was with Nobel Laureate Maired Corrigan, who won the international peace prize and while the press loitered, hoping to catch a glimpse of her, his aides were shooing them out of the room.

• • •

When Carter refused for two days to comment on the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and left all the talking to the State Department, one reporter reminded deputy press secretary Rex Granum of Carter's respect for Harry S. Truman and wondered aloud where the buck stops.

"It stops all over town," another reporter quipped.

Carter has Truman's original plaque on his desk with the famous inscription "the buck stops here."

Rosalynn Carter lobbied a bit to try to drum up support for the Panama Canal treaties. But she hates to have it publicized.

After Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb. blew the whistle and reported the first lady had called his wife Cece to urge her to influence her husband in favor of the vote, Zorinsky responded "I make my own decisions."

He also cast a "no" vote.

However, even though Zorinsky disclosed Rosalynn's phone call, Mary Hoyt, the first lady's press secretary, apparently at her boss's behest, refused to "confirm or deny" the lobbying activities. The incident reminded reporters of the late Martha Mitchell who used to get on the telephone to senators' wives at times when a vote was crucial to the Nixon administration. The wives did not appreciate the prodding.

• • •

Incidentally, after a White House chauffered car went to the wrong place to pick up Zorinsky who was being wooed to vote in favor of the Canal, the congressman decided to drive to the White House himself the following morning. Before he arrived a memo was circulated "no slipups this time...or it will be the guillotine for all of us."

Former President and Mrs. Gerald Ford have moved into their posh new home in Palm Springs, Calif. "It's very contemporary, very Palm Springs," said a friend. The Fords have been living in a spacious leased resort home since they left Washington. It has been a mecca for old friends who come calling.

A reporter ran into former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger recently and he teased: "you don't say nasty things about me anymore." "I don't see you much these days," replied the reporter. —

Rosalynn Carter plans to have some solo events when she accompanies the president on his weeklong post-Easter journey to Latin America and Africa.

As her husband's diplomatic emissary, Mrs. Carter has previously visited two of the countries, Venezuela and Brazil and she will be able to show the president around. Both the Carters have studied Spanish and get by in the language.

'Giant Killer' Fullerton Goes After Razorbacks

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Giant killer Cal State-Fullerton is one step away from being in the final four of the NCAA basketball championships. But the Titans will have to slay another Goliath to get there.

Fullerton's unranked but now highly respected Titans will tangle with Arkansas' powerful fifth rated Razorbacks today in the title battle of the Far West regional basketball tourney.

The winner of the nationally televised contest, set for a 3:15 p.m. CST tipoff, will move on to St. Louis and join the winners of three other regional tournaments for the championship round of the playoffs.

The Titans, who are playing in their first-ever NCAA tourney, will carry a 23-8 record into their tussle with the 30-3 Razorbacks, who are in their sixth NCAA tourney but have never have advanced this far before.

Fullerton knocked off 11th ranked San Francisco 75-72 Thursday night on a 20-foot bomb by Keith Anderson in the game's final seconds to grab its second victory in postseason play over a nationally rated team. The Titans had dropped then fifth ranked New Mexico 90-85 last weekend in Tempe, Ariz., in first round action of the regional tourney.

The Titans will again be cast in the role of the underdog when they tangle with the Razorbacks, who moved into the regional championship contest by upending No. 2 ranked UCLA 74-70 in Thursday night's other semifinal clash.

But Titan Coach Bob Dye said it doesn't matter that everyone expects his club to get beat and then considers his team's victories upsets.

"I haven't really worried whether they're upsets or not," he said. "You just look at who you've got to play and try to go ahead and play them.

"I'm a sports fan. If there's a fight going on I'll pick a favorite, a football game going go, I'll pick a favorite. But if my team is playing, I don't have time to worry about favorites or underdogs.'

Dye said he and his players are only thinking about how they want to play against Arkansas and not who's favored.

"They've got five guys and we've got five," he said. "We'll show up and get after them."

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said he knew everyone was calling the Titan victories over New Mexico and San Francisco upsets.

But he added, "I'll tell you that basketball team is for real. We certainly are not underestimating Cal State-Fullerton."

Some people, including coaches, overestimate teams because of raw talent, said Sutton. He said, however, that just as important as talent was that players know their roles on a team.

"They're as well coached a team as we've faced all year," he said. "They know their roles. I can see why they've had a great season."

In Fullerton and Arkansas the game will pit two clubs who are very much alike in that neither has great size but relies on super quickness and good jumping and fine shooting to get the job done.

Cal State is paced by forwards Greg Bunch and Kevin Heenan, while Arkansas is led by the trio of Marvin Delph, Sidney Moncrief and Ron Brewer.

Villanova Nips Hoosiers

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Speedy guard Rory Sparrow made a twisting, turn-around layup with 13 seconds left to give the underdog Villanova Wildcats a come-from-behind 61-60 basketball victory over 13th-ranked Indiana University in the NCAA East Regional semifinals Friday night.

Villanova will play Duke, 84-80 winner over Pennsylvania in Friday night's over Mideast tilt, on Sunday.

Indiana held an eight-point halftime lead and built the margin to 10 early in the second half. But the Hoosiers' offense stalled, and it became a one-man show by Mike Woodson, who scored 12 of Indiana's meager 17 second-half points.

Villanova was in danger of being blown out of the game in the first half when Indiana's Wayne Radford pumped in 19 points, but Villanova's Keith Herron kept the Wildcats in the game with 19.

Indiana's lead was up to 11 points with 14:40 left in the game, but Villanova chipped away, forcing Indiana turnovers and switching from a zone to a tight man-to-man defense.

Baskets by Sparrow, Reggy Robinson, Herron and Alex Bradley knocked down the Indiana lead until Sparrow could score the game winner.

Coach Rollie Massimino of Villanova said the winning play was set up to go to Herron, who spotted Sparrow open near the basket and passed off for the winning bucket.

"This is the fourth game he (Sparrow) has won for us this year," Massimino said. "We had to gamble and we came out on top. The real big thing was when we put Rory on Radford. It worked. He only had one field goal (in the second half)."

Massimino said he believed before the game that Indiana could be beaten if his Wildcats could hold the Hoosiers to less than 66 points. He also said his game plan was to hold Radford and Woodson to as few points as possible.

Sparrow, who was assigned to guard Radford throughout the second half, said the winning bucket was his "biggest shot ever."

"It was a big lift in confidence and a big thrill altogether," Sparrow said. "I gave a fake, I don't know which way and just tried to get up as high as I could."

"I had to make it. It was a do or die situation."

Chaps Extend Streak With Panhandle Sweep

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The home run has suddenly become a big weapon in Lubbock Christian College's offensive arsenal and the Chaparrals unleashed six roundrippers in peppering Panhandle State 11-7 and 22-5 Friday.

Now 13-9 and riding a 10-game winning streak, the Chaps were in a generous mood at the start of the day as the Aggies took advantage of three miscues to jump into a 6-0 lead before LCC's bats awoke.

It was Clark Langdon who got things started with a two-run shot in the second inning of theopener but it was Mark Lisle who reaped most of the benefits.

A senior from Graham who had only six career homers before this year, Lisle ripped a two-run shot in the fourth inning that drew LCC even at 6-6 and then ignited an 11-run outburst in the second frame of the nightcap with a grand slammer.

The Chaps will turn their attentions to Abilene Christian today in a 1 p.m. doubleheader.

LCC was originally slated to play winless (0-21) North Texas State today, but Denton deejay-Eagle coach Johnny Williams begged off due to injuries.

And since Hays' hospital list only reads: 1977 starting catcher Mark Morgan, who is in Methodist with strep throat and mononucleosis; shortstop Glenn Wilken, who hyper-extended his shoulder against ACU Thursday and is out indefinitely; 1977 right fielder Richard Bowles, who has a strained shoulder among other ailments; '77 regular hot corner man Kenny Toney, who is hampered by shoulder woes although he was the winning pitcher in Friday's opener; center fielder Darius Copley, an All-America last year, who is playing with a strained thigh; Richard Nixon, who was due to be the starting pitcher in one of the games Friday but was in bed with the flu, and left fielder Tommy Inman, who has a sore throwing shoulder, Hays let the Eagle coach off the hook.

Hays then got on the phone and lined up ACU.

The depleted Chap pitching staff got a workout Friday, as hard-luck Gary Swann was roughed up in the opener and Randy Vinson, Toney and Dan Sanders were pressed into duty. Vinson started the nightcap and then Randy Elmore came on to finish up.

It was the first mound duty of the year for Toney and Elmore and they picked up victories.

Toney hurled 2 1/3 innings, allowing only one hit—which was erased in a double play—and one walk before his shoulder tightened and he was relieved by Sanders, who allowed only two hits and fanned five in the final 2 1/3 frames in gaining the first save by a Chap this year.

Langdon drove in four runs in the opener and three other Chaps—Lisle, Tim Leslie and Inman—did that in the nightcap. And ironically, Inman, Leslie and Lisle are the 3-4-5 hitters, thus accounting for 9 of the 20 hits and a 12 of the 19 RBIs.

The first 11 Chaps to approach the plate in the second inning of the nightcap reached base safely and all eventually scored as LCC equalled its biggest inning of the year and also its biggest scoring output.

Inman uncorked his fourth homer of the year in the third and Leslie zapped his eighth of the year with two out in the fourth.

That gave the former Monterey standout 21 in his one plus campaign at LCC and leaves him in second place on the All-time Chap list behind three-time All-America John Harris, who had 63.

Baltimore Edges By WTC Unit

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (Special)—Baltimore Community College rallied from a nine-point deficit in the final five minutes Friday and took a 69-68 victory over Western Texas College in the consolation bracket of the National Junior College Tournament.

Baltimore will play the winner of the Palm Beach (Fla.)-Northern Idaho game for seventh place at 1 p.m. today. The loss completed WTC's season. The Texans finished 11th in the meet.

Baltimore held a 38-36 halftime advantage, and the lead changed hands a number of times in the second half. However, Western Texas moved out to a 66-57 lead with 4:57 remaining before Baltimore began its rally.

WTC scored only two points in the final 4:57, that on a basket by Adam Beadle with 2:52 remaining, and missed the front end of two crucial one-and-one situations.

The first came with 1:50 left, as Joe Mendoza missed the first shot with WTC up 68-67. Finally, with six seconds left and the score still 68-67, WTC's Julio Gallardo missed the first shot of a one-and-one.

Baltimore rebounded, and Leroy Loggins hit a 20-foot jumper at the buzzer to give his team the victory.

Bobby Alton led Baltimore, 32-3, with 18 points, while Jeff Paige and Joe Miller scored 10 points each. Beadle paced Western Texas, 30-9, with 21 points. John Morehead added 13 and Mendoza 10.

IN TROUBLE—Larry Nelson bares his teeth after coming out of the woods in second round play of the Tournament Players Championship at Ponte Vedra, Fla. Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

Three Tied For Top In TPC Golf Tourney

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, wildly erratic in biting cold and gusty winds, fought his way to one-under-par 71 and retained a share of the second-round lead Friday in temper-testing conditions at the rich Tournament Players Golf Championship.

Nicklaus, who has finished second, first and second in his last three starts, was tied with Ben Crenshaw and Lou Graham at 141, only 3 shots under par for two trips over the windswept 7,174 yards of reclaimed marsh land that make up the Sawgrass links.

Graham, a softly-drawling former U.S. Open champion, birdied the last two holes for a 70. Crenshaw, traditionally a wild man off the tee but playing with careful, dedicated control this cold, windy day, shot a 71.

All three played in the afternoon half of the field which enjoyed the best of the very severe conditions that produced some fantastically high scores—rapidly becoming a tradition in this ambitious event billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

"It was bad enough when we played," said Crenshaw. "I'd hate to have had to play in the morning."

"Somebody said the morning players actually had an advantage," Graham observed, with tongue firmly planted in cheek. "All the lakes were frozen over."

It was but a small exaggeration. "I'd guess the temperature was about 35 degrees and the wind was about 35 miles an hour when we started," said Australian David Graham, one of the early players.

In addition to Nicklaus, Crenshaw and Lou Graham, only Larry Nelson could better par for two rounds. He had a 72-143.

"The only way you could describe (playing conditions) is 'miserable'," the soft-spoken Nelson said. "It was really ridiculous. I started out playing with two sweaters, my wind-breaker, mittens and a toboggan cap. And I had to run to the 10th tee to try to get my feet warm."

John Mahaffey, a third-place finisher last week, matched par 72 and was at 144. He was followed by Mike Morley, John Schroeder and Andy North at 145. Schroeder had a 75, Morley 73 and North was one of only four men to break par at 71. The field is composed of all the world's great shot-makers, and none have yet broken 70 on the links-type course that normally plays under a whipping wind.

Some of the scores bordered on the ridiculous.

There was Tom Weiskopf, a winner last week, taking an 80 and a 153 total. There was Johnny Miller, once the game's leading light, shooting 82 and 159. There was PGA champion Lanny Wadkins taking an 82 and a 161 total.

And there was Tom Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and a two-time winner this season, shooting 78-154. Watson missed the cut for the second time in a row. It took a score of 153 to make it.

Lee Trevino had 78-153 and withdrew, saying the cold, windy conditions were playing havoc with his injured back.

Some other scores: Gary Player, 73-147; Ray Floyd, 77-154; U.S. Open champ Hubert Green, 77-153; Hale Irwin, 75-150; Jerry Pate, 76-152; Arnold Palmer, 78-152.

Nicklaus had some unusual difficulty on short putts. He 3-putted twice, once from 12 feet for a double bogey, and missed three others from seven feet or less. He recorded six birdies, three bogeys and the double.

He took sole control of the lead with consecutive birdies on his eighth and ninth holes, dropped back with the double bogey that triggered a 5-5-5 stretch, then regained a share with birdies from 12 and six feet.

Graham wedged to five feet on the 16th and needed only an 18-inch putt after a fine sand shot for a birdie 4 on the 18th.

Crenshaw had to work hard to retain his piece of the lead in the event that offers a total prize of $342,000. He got his drive in the water, had to drop out, thread the next shot through trees, then play a sand wedge over a bunker to about eight feet. He made the putt for par 5.

"I felt like I threw away a shot when I got it in the hazard, then I felt like I'd regained it when I made the par," he said.

Russell Lands Berth On NABC Cage Unit

Mike Russell, Texas Tech's second-leading scorer of all time, has been named to the west squad for the all-star game sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers reported that the 6-7 Russell had been picked for the game, to be played in St. Louis on March 26.

The all-star game will be held the day between the NCAA semifinals and finals. In the past, the NABC all-star game had been held a few weeks after the NCAA championship weekend.

Russell closed out his collegiate career by scoring 34 points and grabbing 18 rebounds in Tech's 93-82 loss to the University of Houston in the SWC tournament two weeks ago. That point total gave him 569 for the season and 1545 for his three-year career, a sum topped only by Rick Bullock's 1725.

Bullock preceded Russell in the NABC all-star game, competing in the 1976 contest. Thus Tech has had two players in a three-year span.

Russell was a two-time all-conference selection and named twice to the all-District VI team as picked by both the NABC and the U.S Basketball Writers Association.

Retired Marquette coach Al McGuire will coach the West squad, which will have Koe Koenig of Kansas, Mike Santos of Utah State, Mike Evans of Kansas State, Ricky Lee of Oregon State, Harold Robertson of Lincoln, and Roger Phegley of Bradley.

The East squad, to be coached by South Carolina's Frank McGuire, will have all-America guards Butch Lee of Marquette and Phil Ford of North Carolina, Jerome Whitehead of Marquette, Marty Byrne of Syracuse, Golie Augustus of South Carolina, Rod Griffin of Wake Forest and George Johnson of St. John's.

Three more players will be added to each ten-man squad.

Kuhn, Ziegler Speak Against Carter's Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's tax-revision plan threatens the existence of many professional baseball teams and would mean sharply higher ticket prices for average fans, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn told a congressional panel Friday.

John A. Ziegler Jr., chairman and president of the National Hockey League, said enactment of the proposal would mean revenue losses for cities that own sports facilities and would eliminate thousands of jobs connected with hockey.

The two sports executives testified before the House Ways and Means Committee in opposition to Carter's proposal. The president wants to eliminate the income-tax deduction allowed for business purchases of tickets to sports events and other entertainment.

If approved, Kuhn said, the provision would have "calamitous economic consequences" on baseball that "would undermine the very ability of the national pastime to continue in this country as we presently know it."

A similar picture was painted by Ziegler. On the average, 54 percent of each NHL team's tickets are bought by businesses. Thus, Ziegler said, elimination of the tax deduction would cost the league about half its 1976-77 gate receipts of $50 million. That would mean an average loss of $1.6 million per club, he said.

Only four of the 15 U.S. teams in the NHL sold enough tickets last year to break even, he added. "If additional losses of $800,000 to $1.6 million per club were imposed upon these clubs it is quite likely that some would have to give serious consideration to suspension of operations."

Kuhn said businesses buy one-third of the tickets to professional baseball games at an average cost of $4.75. If the Carter plan takes away that revenue, the commissioner noted, tickets bought by other fans will have to be raised by 50 percent.

Duke Raps Conference Post-Season Tourneys

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Postseason tournaments — despite their increasing popularity — have hampered the selection process for this year's National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament, according to the chairman of the NCAA's tournament committee.

"The emergence of postseason tournaments has reduced our flexibility to consider certain clubs," Wayne Duke said here Friday.

What caused Duke and his committee such problems this year was the fact that teams such as North Carolina, Kansas, Providence and Syracuse all won their conferences during regular season play but then lost in the postseason tournaments.

That meant they had to be considered for possible at-large spots in the NCAA tournament.

Admitting them hurt chances of other clubs to partcipate in postseason play, Duke said.

"There were an unusual number of upsets in postseason tournaments this year," Duke said, "and that undoubtedly put more pressure on us.

"If the conference winner is not the tournament winner we're faced with a difficult problem."

By putting teams such as North Carolina and Kansas in at-large berths, Duke said chances of such schools as Detroit, Utah State and Illinois State were hampered.

Of course, Duke pointed out, these schools might not have made it anyway since the strength of schedules is also a factor in determining selections to the NCAA tournament.

The NCAA official noted that the organization's executive committee last year turned down a proposal that a team could not be in a tournament with less than a 60 percent winning percentage.

"That is one of the factors that we might have to reconsider," Duke said.

Passage of such a measure might ease criticism that the NCAA has received about the presence of schools such as Western Kentucky, which finished with a 16-13 season but won its postseason tournament.

Another help, according to Duke, could be an already-implemented decision which would cut the number of automatic berths for conferences from 21 to 16.

That would be based on tournament play during the last five years and would ease the selection process by adding more at-large slots.

Duke noted the current process resulted in "the loading up" of talent in the West and Mideast regionals of the NCAA tournament.

"They were loaded up because we couldn't put the second team from a conference in the same region with an automatic bid," Duke said.

Monterey, Dunbar Shoot For Canyon Reef Title

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Bob Gay says he likes his team's chances. And John Ford says he likes his team's chances, too.

Now, gentlemen, let's get this little matter straight. Bob, you say you think the Monterey Plainsmen have a shot at Snyder's Canyon Reef track title? That's right. And John, you feel MHS may win it, too. Now, we're rolling.

"I'll be honest with you," the Monterey coach said. "I think our chances down there (Snyder) sound pretty good."

Ford, the Dunbar head track man, seconds that motion.

"Monterey stands a good chance of winning it," Ford said. "But I like to think we'll be in there too."

Gay, who watched the Plainsmen finish a respectable third at the West Texas Relays in Odessa last week, said he hasn't heard of any dazzling times turned in by the other teams entered in Division I. That's what makes him optimistic.

Along with the Panthers and the Plainsmen, Division I has drawn teams from Big Spring, Lamesa, Levelland, Snyder and Lubbock High. Division II consists of JV and AA teams, Division III Class B schools. There is also a Freshman category.

"I think we compare a lot with Big Spring (the team Gay feels might give both Dunbar and Monterey a race for the team title)," the MHS coach pointed out. "They may not win any events but they'll score a lot of points down the line. That's the way have to do it."

Gay pointed out that "as usual" Dunbar will be its onry self in the running events.

But will they? Ford says that's a good question.

Currently suffering from a leg injury is speedster Kenneth James. James, one of the state's top sprinters last year, pulled up lame during the finals of the 100 at Amarillo last week.

Ford said it could be three or four weeks before the DHS senior is at full speed.

Heading the Dunbar lineup are Billy Don Hardaway, the city's top shot and discus man, and Walter Alsbrooks, currently the Hub's number one sprinter.

Monterey is anchored by miler Curtis Conaway, currently ranked eighth in the state with a time of 4:23.9 and high jumper Chuck Perry, also eighth in the Lone Star's standings after clearing 6-7.

Conaway and Perry are Lubbock's only state-ranked performers.

Lubbock High, which also could threaten for the title, isn't without its own main man.

The Westerners, which scored only 10 points at the OdessaMeet, will rely on the services of Darrell Hicks, a 22.8 sprinter in the 220 , to carry much of its load.

While Dunbar, Monterey and Estacado are competing in Snyder, Estacado and Coronado journey to the Hereford Invitational.

Like Dunbar, the Matadors will have to rake up a bunch points in the running events if it hopes to capture the title.

Sprinters Kenzie Burrell and Michael Sims will tote the mail in the dashes for Estacado, while versatile Freedie Ivory, a hurdler along with being a weightman, also heads the group.

One of the real surprises during the young cinder season has been the showing of James Gandy's Coronado Mustangs, a team which wound up third at Amarillo.

Long jumper Brent Roye, sprinter Archie Moore and hurdler Johnny Pesino are three of the top runners so far this year. Each lead the city in their respective event.

Snyder and Hereford are only two of many track encounters scheduled for today as meets are set for Farwell, Forsan and Coahoma.

Rutgers Concerned With Texas' Speed

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Where's Abe Lemons?"

"He's on his way. His plane's landed and he's just held up in a little traffic. He'll be a few minutes."

Two hours later the Texas coach with the best one-liners in the business wulked into the Madison Square Garden luncheon for the National Invitation Tournament. The other coaches had already spoken, the shrimp and veal and tiny pastries had been cleared away and most of the media were gone.

"A little traffic?" Lemons said incrediuously. "Did you ever ride in a cab that ran out of gas? And then the cab driver wanted to watch the St. Patrick's Day Parade. New York's got a great parade."

Rutgers' Coach Tom Young, who will match strategy with Lemon's 19th-ranked Longhorns in the NIT semifinals Sunday night following the Georgetown-North Carolina State game, was hoping Lemon's delay was an omen of some sort.

"Maybe the traffic will slow them down," Young quipped. "We don't want to run with them. Qe're diseiplined and deep and Texas has a typical Abe Lemons team, fast, running style."

Young wus particularly concerned about the speedy backcourt of the 24-5 Longhorns, who are the favorites to win the NIT this year in their first New York game since 1967 and first NIT appearance in 30 years.

"They're more guard-oriented than we are," said Young. "Jim Krivacs and John Moore are tough to stop."

Both 6-foot-1 juniors, Krivacs is averaging 21.5 points per game while Moore is averaging 13.3. Small forward Ron Baxter, a 6-4 sophomore, leads Texas with an 18.8 scoring averuge and 8.9 rebounding average.

But if Texas has the advantage with outside speed, Rutgers may have the edge in execution and inside muscle.

"Rutgers is strong where we're not — inside," Lemons said. "Our center doesn't get any rebounds."

That's the key matchup as far as Rutgers, 23-6, is concerned. They need a big game from 6-9 scoring leader James Bailey against 6-7 Texas pivotman Tyrone Branyan. Bailey is averaging 23.8 points and 9.5 rebounds per game. Branyan is averaging 12.4 points and 5.7 rebounds per game.

The game between Georgetown (23-6) and North Carolina State (20-9) will pit two similar teams.

"We're both quick, big teams," said North Carolina State Coach Norm Sloan.

"I'm quite impressed with their motion," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "They've got good quickness and excellent rebounding."

The first game Sunday begins at 5 p.m. CST at Madison Square Garden and the finals will be played Tuesday night.

National Run Set

ODESSA (Special) — The national one-hour run championship will be held here today at the Odessa High School track.

The meet, sanctioned by the United States Track and Field Foundations (USTFF), will begin at 10 a.m.

Runners may enter at 9 a.m. today. A $2 entry fee is required and all participants are asked to furnish their own lap counters.

Participants running the most laps during the one-hour span will be declared the winners. There will be seven different divisions.

Raiders Enter Austin Meet

AUSTIN (Special)—With a full squad on hand, Texas Tech will join LSU, Kansas State and the host University of Texas in a quadrangular track meet here tonight.

The Raiders will be minus halfmiler Randy Yates who is sidelined—probably for the season—with mononucleosis, but rest of the team will be intact, coach Corky Oglesby reported.

Last week, the Raiders, who competed in the Eastern New Mexico All-Comers meet, were without long jumper Jim MacAndrew who competed unsuccessfully in the NCAA indoor championships at Detroit, Mich.

"We still need a lot of work," said Oglesby after the Portales meet. "With the hard winter, we haven't had that much outside work. We've had a chance this week to get in some good, hard work, but it's not enough.

"We looked good in spots, but we still need a lot of work."

Texas coach Cleburne Price was singing the same song, feeling that in the few days of good weather, he had had to work his Longhorns too hard to be honed for tonight's meet. Too, the Longhorns are without sprint ace Johnny Jones, who is returning to shape after being injured in the Cotton Bowl game but is not ready for heated competition.

Kansas State, despite several injuries, appears to be the favorite for the title.

Tech will lean on milers Ricky McCormick and Greg LautLautenslager, high jumper Billy Stone and sprinter Charles Green. Lautenslater will run the 3,000 meters, McCormick trying the mile and then coming back in the 3,000 if possible.

Green warmed up for tonight's meet with 9.5 century and 21.4 furlong victories last week.

After tonight, Tech will not have another meet until hosting its invitational April 1.

TECH ENTRIES

Griffin, Snook Dominate All-State Cage Squads

FORT WORTH (Special)—Fort Worth Dunbar's James Griffin dominated the Texas Sports Writers Class AAAA All-State basketball team and Snook ruled over the Class A squad.

Griffin, a 6-10 senior who averaged 18.1 points a game, was named on the first team on 26 of 30 ballots in the AAAA voting.

The front line on the AAAA unit went 6-10 (Griffin), 6-10 (Anthony Lee of Tyler) and 6-11 (Randy Woods of Bryan). The guards also had a Bayou City flavor, with 6-3 Nolan Greenlead of Houston Wheatley and 6-2 Robert Williams of Houston Milby, only one of three juniors listed on the first three teams, on the first squad.

State champion Snook landed two men on the first team—5-11 junior James Washington and 5-11 senior Myron Palmer—and another, 5-11 junior Mike Junek, on the second team.

Marlin Records Top Speed For Atlanta

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Coo Coo Marlin had the fastest speed Friday in the second round of qualifying for Sunday's Atlanta 500-mile stock car race.

Marlin, driving a Chevrolet, circled the 1.522-mile Atlanta International Raceway in 159.270 miles per hour, giving him the 13th starting position in Sunday's $207,000 event.

Marlin also won $1,000 for recording the fastest speed of the day.

He was almost one mile an hour faster than the runner-up, Al Holbert, who went 158.345 m.p.h. in a Chevrolet.

The first 12 positions were filled Thursday when Cale Yarborough captured the pole in an Oldsmobile at 162.006 m.p.h.

Lining up in the 15th spot Sunday will be Bruce Hill in an Oldsmobile after a speed of 158.198. Then came Dick Brooks in a Ford at 157.457.

Other drivers who qualified were Bill Elliott, Mercury, 156.957; Richard Childress, Chevrolet, 156.513; Tom Gale, Ford, 156.468; Jimmy Means, Chevrolet, 156.356; D. K. Ulrich, Chevrolet, 156.143; Blackie Wangerin, Mercury, 159.359; Janet Guthrie, Chevrolet, 155.240.

Monterey Runs Past Cooper 9-0

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Bobby Moegle is sick and tired of winning every other game but the Monterey coach can pitch Ron Reeves just so many times.

The senior righthander (3-0) fanned 10 batters and tossed a five-hit shutout as Monterey pounded Abilene Cooper 9 9-0 Friday in Lowrey Field. Trouble is the Plainsmen (4-3) must play two more games today at Big Spring and Moegle must find other pitchers.

"It looks like we're pretty competitive with Reeves out there. But we've got to get some kind of a run going. We can't just keep winning every other game. Maybe Derek (Hatfield) will start pitching well," the MHS coach said.

Hatfield and Phil Bruedigam are the likely starters in today's twin bill. Then Monterey will take a break until next Friday's game with Midland High in Lowrey Field at 2 p.m. Moegle and the Plainsmen faithful only hope their charges can still swing the bats so well when the vacation ends.

Monterey collected 12 hits in ending Cooper's four-game win streak. The last three hitters in the batting order, Eric Voyles, Tom Bevins and Phil Bruedigam, pounded out two hits and drove in 6 runs. And, yes, Moegle also had been sick and tired because the top of the order had been doing so much of the work lately.

"The thing that pleased me most was our tail-end kids doing so much more an they've done in the past," Moegle said.

Voyles, Bevins and Bruedigam knocked home all of Monterey's four runs in the fifth inning as the winners jumped to a commanding 8-0 lead. Then Reeves' solo smash over the leftcenterfield fence added another run in the next frame.

With two outs and runners on first and second, Voyles cracked aone-strike pitch to the opposite field, scoring catcher Jeff Harp from second and Reeves from first. Bevins followed with a run-scoring double to the base of the rightcenterfield fence. Bruedigam's single up the middle chased home Bevins moments later.

Of course, Monterey had compiled more than enough runs by then. Moegle probably was wondering how many fish he would catch next week on the Rio Grande River. Or maybe Moegle wondered why such nice mid-70 days couldn't show up for every Monterey baseball game.

The weatherman finally cooperated with a pretty day, which is something different for high school baseball lovers in March. The wind and the cold weather which forced three other Plainsmen postponements had stayed away. Moegle doesn't blame the weather or anything else connected with his team's 4-3 start. Matter of fact, he's pleased so far.

"We've got so many seniors that we have to play everybody a little bit and see who can play. (Kent) Potts may turn into a good third pitcher. We've got a few guys who could come around," the MHS coach said.

One hitter who came around Friday was Mike Wooten. The MHS shortstop entered the game 4-for-20 at the plate but he doubled and tripled against Cooper. Wooten hit a full-count pitch to the center field fence for a first-inning triple. Then Wooten scored the game's first run when Cooper starter Kyle Stuard (1-1) tossed a wild pitch behind the back of Harp.

In the second, Voyles reached on a high-hop infield hit. Voyles broke for second base on the first pitch and Bevins doubled through a vacant hole in rightcenter to score Voyles.

Voyles started another 2-run rally in the fourth by drawing a base on balls and stealing second. Bruedigam's double down the right field line scored Voyles and Andy Barron's single to left chased home Bruedigam.

Cooper runners reached third base in the first and third innings with no outs. Reeves pitched out of trouble by fanning the key hitters, though.

CHS Pulls Past Steers For 4-2 Win

BIG SPRING (Special) — Ben Pollard made his first high school hit a big one by socking a 3-run home run in the top of the sixth to lift Coronado past Big Spring 4-2 Friday.

The 170-pound junior leftfielder hit a 1-2 pitch over the left field fence with two outs, scoring Jim Wells and Dee Law ahead of him. Kenny Bunch and Wells had singled before Law reached on a fielder's choice, which forced Bunch at third. Then Donnie Arterburn fanned for the second out before Pollard knocked his game-winning blast.

The home run helped provide junior Gene Segrest his first mound victory of the season. Segrest walked one, allowed four hits and struck out 14 as CHS raised its record to 3-6 and Big Spring dropped to 7-3.

"Gene (Segrest) really pitched well. That's what we've been looking for a long time, just a well-pitched game from someone. We hit the ball hard all day and only had three strike out," said a pleased CHS coach John Dudley.

Coronado took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second when Arterburn clouted a solo home run over the 370-foot sign in left field. Big Spring tied the game in the bottom of the inning when Tony Mann's single drove home David Manley from third base. Manley had singled to center and advanced on a two-base error by center fielder Robert Ledbetter.

Big Spring assumed a short-lived 2-1 edge in the bottom of the fifth. Ricky Myers reached first on a throwing error by shortstop Mark King. Segrest's attempted pickoff throw sailed past first base and allowed Myers to reach second Then Kevin McLaughlin bunted to Segrest, who threw the ball past third base and Myers reached the plate.

The Mustangs return to action Friday in the Snyder tournament against Lamesa at 3 p.m.

Tech Fem Pair Reaches Finals

COLUMBIA, Mo. (Special)—Two Texas Tech women qualified for the finals in the Missouri Indoor National Championships Friday.

Janelle Smalley leaped 5-5 to make the finals in the high jump. Felicia Freeman ran the 300-yard dash in 38.0 to qualify for today's finals. No preliminaries were held in the mile relay or two-mile run, in which Tech has entries.

Although not reaching the finals, Kelly Goodwin ran the 880 in 2:22.95 and Dora Bentancourt ran the quarter in 59.4, both best times of the season.

Levelland, Hereford Advance To Finals

HEREFORD (Special)—Levelland topped Borger 5-2, while Hereford downed Pampa 11-4 Friday to advance into today's 4 p.m. championship game in the Hereford Baseball Tournament.

Borger and Pampa will play for third place at 1:15 p.m., while Dumas will battle Amarillo Tascosa for the consolation title.

Dumas nipped Canyon 6-5 Friday.

Morin Paces Lubbock Past Seminole Unit 2-1

MONAHANS (Special) — Roy Morin singled home the winning run in the bottom of the seventh, giving Lubbock High a 2-1 victory over Seminole Friday in the Monahan baseball tournament.

LHS, now 8-2, faces Snyder, 6-3, in the consolation finals today at 4 p.m. Westerner coach Vince Buffamonte planned to throw sophomore Andy Vasquez (1-0) against the Tigers.

"We looked good again defensively and it was definitely our best-pitched game of the year," the LHS coach said.

Junior righthander David Rush (3-1) pitched the distance and allowed four hits, while striking out nine and walking one.

Morin's game-winning hit scored Donald Beyer from third base with no outs. The first baseman slammed a fast ball on the first pitch into right field. Beyer singled to left and Terry Brady added a bunt single before Seminole pitcher Albert Villava intentionally walked shortstop Vasquez to load the bases.

Seminole, now 4-4, tied the game 1-1 in top of the seventh when Joe Worthington's single chased Bobby Villava to the plate. Villava had singled and advanced to second on a passed ball.

Lubbock gained a 1-0 lead in the bottom of third when second baseman Noel Jaime's single to left chased pinch-runner Larry Walker home from second. Walker stole second and ran for Bobby Ibarra who had singled.

Seminole plays Fort Stockton for seventh place today at 11 a.m.

Host Plainview Retains Lead

PLAINVIEW (Special)—Hostess Plainview fired a team 386 total and maintained its solid lead in the District 4-AAAA girls golf chase.

The Plainview girls, paced by Ann Horne's 88, have a two-meet total of 769 to lead Monterey, which is at 871, and Coronado, at 878. Friday, MHS girls turned in a 433 total, beating Coronado by 2 strokes.

With her 88, Miss Horne has a two-meet total of 175, to lead Hereford's Barbara Scott by a stroke. Miss Scott, competing individually since Hereford doesn not fild a team, is at 176 after two rounds. Fran Miller of PHS had a 91 Friday and is at 189 for third after two rounds.

Next Friday, the district teams were scheduled to gather in Lubbock, but that meet has been moved to April 7 at Pine Hills. There will be no action next Friday.

Upsets Shake Tennis Meet

Upsets rocked the upper brackets of the gigantic Lubbock Invitational Tennis Tournament Friday, and the pairings for the semifinals and finals do not look as they did previously on paper.

Seeded players fell in five of the eight A and B divisions, and only boys doubles escaped the shockers in the A division. And in A girls doubles, both top-seeded duos fell.

Coronado's Robert Davis ousted Amarillo High's Jim Cannon in A boys singles, needing three sets (6-3, 4-6, 6-4) to gain the finals. Cannon had come into the tournament seeded second to Midland High's Jeff Bramlett.

Bramlett marched through three opponents, but he needed three sets to subdue Canyon's Todd Kent 4-6, 6-2, 6-1 in the semifinals. Davis and Bramlett will meet at 10 a.m. today at Coronado courts for the championship.

The boys doubles bracket is as expected, with the team of Kirk Farquhar-Joe Love of Midland to take on the Coronado duo of Dale Anderson and David Craig at 10 this morning at Coronado. The CHS team is seeded second.

In A girls singles, Monterey's Cheryl Rosen upset second-seeded Karen Broe of Midland Lee 7-5, 1-6, 7-5 to gain today's finals. Her foe today at 10 a.m. at Coronado will be top-seeded Vicki Vasicek of Midland, who lost only seven games in winning two matches.

The top-seeded doubles duo of Karen Young and Leslie Towry of Wichita Falls Rider fell in the semifinals to the Plainview sisters team of Sharon and Teresa Landry, 6-2, 6-1. And, in the lower half of the bracket, the team of Boyd and Armstrong of Midland fell to Coronado's Dana Craig and Lynda Lee Weaver, 6-1, 6-3.

The two winning teams will collide at 10 a.m. at Coronado.

In B boys singles, top-seeded Duncan Kennedy of Midland defaulted to Dunbar's Bruce Pillow in the quarter-finals after winning his one previous match. Second-seeded Philip Catuogno of Coronado gave up only six games in winning three matches and rating today's semifinals, beginning at 8:30 a.m. at CHS.

All matches in Division B will be at Coronado, and beginning at 8:30. In Division C, play starts at 8:30 a.m. at Monterey.

The junior high division will be at Lubbock High's courts and play will resume today at 8:30 p.m.

Navratilova Moves To Net Semifinals

BOSTON (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova and third-ranked Evonne Goolagong withstood strong challenges Friday night to advance to the semifinals of a $100,000 women's tennis tournament.

Navratilova rallied from a 4-6 loss to Kerry Reid in the first set with straight 6-3 sets.

In the evening's second singles match, Goolagong aced Marise Kruger on the final point of a second-set tie-breaker to win 6-4, 7-6.

Goolagong broke Kruger's serve at 3-3 in the first set, and went on to a 6-4 win.

Bears Nip Arkansas Nine 5-4

By UPI

Shane Nolen's long liner to center with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 10th drove in Burl Coker with the winning run Friday and gave Baylor a wild 12-11 victory over Arkansas.

The decision left Baylor, Arkansas and Houston tied for the Southwest Conference lead with 5-2 records.

Baylor hed led 8-3 going into the seventh, but Arkansas scored four times in each of the seventh and eighth innings to go in front 11-8.

It took a two-run home run by Fritz Connally in the eighth to get Baylor back in the game, and the Bears forced extra innings with a run in the ninth.

Arkansas was led by Mark Brumble, who went four-for-six with two doubles and five RBI. Two of those RBI came in the Arkansas eighth.

Coker not only scored the winning run, but was the winning pitcher, too. Coker, the third Baylor pitcher of the day, ran his record to 3-0. He had been scheduled to pitch the opener of today's doubleheader between the two teams.

Baylor ran its season record to 10-5-2, while Arkansas is 9-4.

Texas A&M 5, Texas 4

Sophombre Mike Hurdle drove in three runs with three hits, including a bases-loaded double in the eighth which broke a 1-1 tie, to give A&M victory over slumping Texas.

Texas, annually a contender for the Southwest Conference baseball title, slumped to a 2-5 conference record, while the Aggies evened their SWC mark at 2-2.

Hurdle's double came off Texas reliever Keith Walker, who had just entered the game. The loss, however, went to Kem Wright, now 3-2.

The Aggies added two runs in the top of the ninth to boost their lead to 5-1 before the Longhorns staged a three-run comeback in the bottom of the ninth.

Two singles and a hit batsman set up Mark Chelette's sacrifice fly and Joe Bruno's two-run single. But, with runners on second and third and two out, left fielder Bobby Thompson grounded out to second baseman Randy Woodruff to end the game.

Mark Ross, who was relieved in the ninth, picked up the win for A&M. Texas is 17-6 for the year and A&M is 15-6.

Houston 9, Rice 3

Billy Blum went the distance and Jay Beard drove in three runs to send Houston past Rice.

Blum surrendered seven hits—two of them homers to Rice's Steve Fry and Bob Burnell, which accounted for all of the Owls' runs.

Oral Roberts 6, SMU 0

Oral Roberts blanked the Mustangs 6-0 in a non-conference game in Tulsa to drop SMU to a 6-11 overall record.

The Titans upped their season record to 10-2 with the easy victory.

Golf Benefit Slated

Golfers throughout the South Plains are invited to enter a one-day golf tournament to benefit the Lubbock Babe Ruth League baseball program.

The tournament will be held at Pine Hills Golf Course on April 1, beginning at 8:30 a.m., reported Joe Davila.

Entry fee is $10, and winners will be decided on a handicap system, Davila reported. Trophies will be given as awards, thus high school golfers can cocompete without jeopardizing their UIL eligibility, Davila said.

Persons seeking additional information can contact Davila at 765-7200.

NFL To Use Replays In Preseason Games

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The National Football League took a first step Friday toward the use of television instant replays as an added officiating tool by agreeing to try it out in seven preseason games this year.

"We'll do a dry run on the replay on officiating decisions," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said after the league's 28 club owners concluded their week of winter meetings. "We're not going to implement anything but it'll be part of a study. We'll use it in the seven national preseason telecasts," starting with the Miami vs. Philadelphia Hall of Fame game at Canton, Ohio, July 29. The other six games, two covered by each network, have not been selected.

"We've made arrangements with the networks so we can get a booth for the man who'll be monitoring the game, and we'll have a director for him. The individual (most likely an NFL field official) will have the opportunity to run plays back and look at them.

"By dry run we mean he's not going to over-rule any officials' decisions; he's not going to have any communications with the field," Rozelle explained. "What he's going to do, in effect, is make it a part of our continual study on this by charting plays, seeing the ones in which he feels he can clearly tell whether the official was right or wrong, the percentage of plays where there would probably be sufficient doubt."

Rozelle said the replay man would determine how much time it took to review questionable plays and decide whether the officials' calls were right or wrong.

The results of the study, the commissioner said, probably would not be released until the league's winter meetings a year from now. No form of instant replay review will be attempted during 1978 regular-season of playoff games.

"I don't want to be unduly optimistic that this means we're close to using this to second-guess officials, nor do I want to sound pessimistic," Rozelle cautioned. "We're just open-minded about it...to study it, to see what problems there are, and perhaps some we haven't thought of, and to see the mechanics of implementing it. That's the only way you should take this."

Rozelle acknowldged the experiment is "a major change and before the owners consider implementing it they want all the information they can get. They felt this would be the way."

Also Friday the owners voted to employ common opponents and strengths of opponents as methods of breaking ties in the standings at the end of the season.

The major changes in National Football League rules and procedures approved by the 28 club owners at the March 13-17 winter meetings:

—Added a seventh field official, the "side judge," to improve downfield coverage;

—added "baiting and taunting" by a player toward an opponent to the unsportsmanlike violation;

—liberalized pass-blocking rules to permit extended arms (locked elbows) and open hands by blockers;

—restricted defenders intentional contact with potential pass receivers within 5 yards of the line of scrimmage;

—legalized the "double touch" of a pass by two successive players on the offense;

—ruled that an intentionally grounded pass by an offensive player in his own end zone will be a safety;

—approved the experimental use of instant replays as a method of reviewing (but not over-ruling or supporting) officials' calls during seven nationally televised preseason exhibitions; —placed greater emphasis on the use of common opponents' records and introduced relative strengths of opponents as means of breaking ties between clubs in the final standings;

—set roster cutdown dates of Aug. 15 (60 players), Aug. 22 (50 players) and Aug. 28 (43 players), and;

—established the Tuesday after the sixth regular-season game as the deadline for all trading and the Tuesday after the last regular-season game as the deadline for setting rosters on playoff-bound teams.

Raider Rally Downs Horned Frogs 12-11

FORT WORTH (Special)—Texas Tech capped a counter-rally with a ninth-inning run Friday and took a 12-11 victory over TCU in the opener of a three-game series.

The teams play a doubleheader today, beginning at 1 p.m. at the TCU diamond.

The Raiders, 10-9 for the season and 4-3 in SWC play, raced to a 7-1 lead after two innings, only to see the Horned Frogs score eight runs in the next three innings and then add two more in the seventh to assume an 11-7 advantage.

However, Tech rallied to tie the game with four runs in the eighth frame. Rusty Laughlin opened with a double and later scored on Randy Newton's single. Larry Selby also poked an RBI-single, while Brooks Wallace slapped a two-run single.

The winning run came in the top of the ninth. Laughlin, Tech's leading hitter with four hits in six tries, hit a line drive to center field that Terry Bellows misplayed for a two-base error. Moments later, designated hitter Mike Farmer doubled to drive him in.

The Raiders had scored four runs in the first on RBI-singles by Selby, Noonan and Wallace and a dropped pop fly by TCU pitcher Reuben Tomlin that allowed Noonan to cross the plate.

Tech added three more runs in the second, highlighted by Wallace's two-run double.

TCU power narrowed the gap. First baseman Biff LeFevre hit a solo home run in the first inning. In the third, right-fielder John Shelley hit a two-run homer and David Novey smashed a solo shot.

The Horned Frogs, 6-8 and 1-3, got another run in the fourth and then took a 9-7 lead with four fifth-inning runs, an uprising that was highlighted by catcher Danny Rosellini's three-run double.

Shelley doubled for a run in the seventh and Trey Brooks singled for another, as the Frogs increased their lead to four runs.

Sox Lose Game, Tiant

By The Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox suffered a double loss Friday.

They dropped a 12-9 exhibition baseball game to the Detroit Tigers and also lost pitcher Luis Tiant, who suffered a dislocated right index finger when he was hit by a line drive.

"It's broke, it's broke," Tiant muttered as he left the field, but X-rays showed no fracture and Boston's team doctor said the veteran right-hander "could be ready for the start of the season."

The Tigers teed off on Reggie Cleveland for seven runs in the third inning. Detroit's batting star was Charlie Spikes, who slammed a three-run homer and drove in six runs.

Richie Zisk and Toby Harrah delivered run-scoring singles in the sixth inning Friday night to give the Texas Rangers a 6-4 exhibition victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Both hits came with two outs against Baltimore's right-hander Andy Replogle. Zisk's single was his first hit in 14 times at bat this spring.

Jim Palmer started for the Orioles and was wild, giving up seven walks in three innings. Six of the walks came in the second inning when Texas scored its first two runs.

The Orioles went ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the second when Pat Kelley drove in two runs with a triple and scored on a groundout.

The winning pitcher was Roger Moret, who hurled three innings of one hit ball.

The loss was the third straight for the Orioles and dropped their exhibition record to 2-5. Texas is 6-1.

The Kansas City Royals also suffered a pair of losses, but didn't lose any players. Instead, they dropped a 7-3, 5-2 doubleheader to the Chicago White Sox. Reggie Sanders' 450-foot home run broke a tie in the opener and Chet Lemon drove home three runs in the nightcap.

The Vida Blue trade continued to pay off for the Oakland A's when newly acquired Gary Alexander hit two home runs in a 10-9 victory over the Seattle Mariners. Gary Thomasson, who also came across the bay in the deal, hit a pair of home runs Thursday.

However, the Giants didn't seem to miss either Thomasson or Alexander. They got five-hit pitching from Ed Halicki, Lynn McGlothen and Gary Lavelle and blanked the San Diego Padres 4-0.

Dan Driessen drilled a two-run homer off Catfish Hunter and the Cincinnati Reds shelled Rich Gossage for six runs in one inning in a 9-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

The New York Mets' five-game winning streak came to an end when they bowed to the Atlanta Braves 10-3. Vic Correll's bases-loaded triple in the eighth inning was the big blow.

Buddy Bell drilled a three-run homer off California's Nolan Ryan as the Cleveland Indians pounded the Angels 6-2.

Two doubles and a single by Steve Garvey helped the Los Angeles Dodgers rout the Minnesota Twins 12-1 while Bob Watson hit a tie-breaking three-run homer as the Houston Astros defeated the Montreal Expos 7-2.

Larry Hisle and Jim Wohlford cracked three-run homers as the Milwaukee Brewers bombed the Chicago Cubs 15-1 and the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 on Omar Moreno's 10th-inning homer.

Wolverines Nab Whirlwind Title

Ronnie James scored 25 points to lead Springlake-Earth to the Division A team crown at the Whirlwind Relays in Floydada Friday afternoon.

James' only winning performance came in the long jump, leaping 20-2½.

Placing second behind the Wolverines were the Lubbock Christian High Eagles with 82 points. Christ the King collected 64 points to place fifth.

In the Division AA competition, host Floydada edged Frenship 103½-89 to win the overall crown. Danny Clark's 29 points led all competitors in the AA competition.

Recording first-place finishes from Lubbock were Phillip Buescher of CTK in the shot (50-9) and discus (153-7).

At the Spur Relays, Rotan ran away with the show, outdistancing second-place finishers Lorenzo and Ralls 115-57 in the Division I competition.

Abilene High rolled up 73 points to edge past cross-town rival Abilene Cooper 73-69 to take the Division II crown at Spur.

Rotan and Abilene High's wins came in the fem portion of the meet.

Monterey and Coronado failed to fair well at the Hereford Girl's meet. The Plainsmen totaled 32 points, while Coronado notched only 12.

Winning the meet was Palo Duro with 161 points. The Dons captured the title at the Lubbock Invitational meet last week.

Host Hereford finished the day in last place, totaling a mere nine points.

Jana Field and Rebekah James scored second place finishes for the Plainsmen. Miss Field tossed the shot 37-1¼, James the discus 101-41¼.

In Hereford's small-school division, Bovina defeated Tulia 120-98 1/3. Dimmitt was a distant third with 69 points.

At the Sundown meet, Seagraves won the combined championship by rolling up 573 points. The overall champion was determined by the total point in both the boy's and girl's high school and junior high divisions.

The Smyer girls squeaked by Greenwood 70-69 to capture the fem title at the Borden County relays.

Lazbuddie won the boy's crown.

Midland Lee, needing to finish second to at least tie for the championship of the Tall City Relays, saw its chances fade, as Odessa High's anchorman nipped Lee by a yard for second in the final event on the night's schedule.

Lee had gone into the final event leading San Angelo 96-92 in points, but the 20 points from the mile relay victory shoved San San Angelo to 112 for the championship.

Three records were set, and another tied, as Richard Buck of Palo Duro established two marks, in the hurdle events. Danny Wells of Permian matched the existing pole vault record of 14-0, and Ed Bruning of San Angelo set a record in the 880.

Fighting Irish, DePaul Post Midwest Wins

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Notre Dame's Kelley Tripucka keyed an 11-0 run in the final minute and the Irish surged past Utah 69-56 Friday night in the semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regionals.

Earlier, Dave Corzine poured in 44 points to become DePaul's leading career scorer in a 90-89 double-overtime victory over Louisville.

Notre Dame, now 22-6, blew a five-point lead early in the second half and trailed the Utes 50-49 when Tripucka sank a baseline jumper to make it 51-50.

Utah's Earl Williams drove in for a layup at 6:01, but the Utes then hit a fatal dry spell, going scoreless until Greg Dean hit a pair of free throws at 1:32.

Tripucka, a 6-foot-7 freshman who led the Irish with 20 points, accounted for seven of Notre Dame's next 11 points as the Irish grabbed a 62-52 lead with 2:42 left.

Utah, ending its season as 23-6, was led by Jeff Judkins with 16 points.

Corzine, a 6-foot-11, 250-pound senior, scored the winning basket for DePaul with less than 20 seconds left in the second overtime. His 44 points surpassed the DePaul career record of 1,870 points set by George Mikan.

Corzine's shot came seconds after Rick Wilson gave the Cardinals an 89-88 edge with a short jumper.

DePaul held a 36-35 halftime lead and Corzine scored eight during a 14-4 spree to grab a 54-43 lead for the Blue Deomons.

Wilson hit a 20-footer for the Cardinals to knot the score 74-74 at the end of regulation.

Gerulaitis Tops South African

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis got the United States off to a 1-0 lead over South Africa Friday night in a North American Zone Davis Cup tennis match marred by mass demonstrations but no ugly incidents.

The 22-year-old stylist cut down Bernie Mitton 2-6, 6-2, 6-1, 7-5 in the first of five weekend matches between the two countries.

The second match Friday sent little Harold Solomon of the United States against Byron Bertram.

The doubles match is scheduled today at 1 p.m. CST with South Africa's Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan, ranked No. 1 in the world, going against America's Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair.

The final singles will be played Sunday starting at 2 p.m. CST with Solomon meeting Mitton and Gerulaitis facing Bertram.

Demonstrations are scheduled both of those days by various groups protesting the apartmeid, or legal separation of the races, of the South African nation. The NAACP is choreographing Saturday's protest with a march designed to end at a nearby city park under the only replica of Greece's Parthenon.

Several groups of organized demonstrations to protest apartheid policies, segregation of the races, in South Africa.

Villanova Wins

"The first thing I would like to do is congratulate Villanova. They were 10 down and did a hell of a job coming back in the second half."

Knight added that his Hoosiers had lived up to their potential and "I'm very proud of Indiana."

In the final seconds of the game at the Providence Civic Center, Knight said he did not plan to do anything tricky. He only wanted to get a man open for a clear shot.

"I think we made some real bad ball-handling errors (in the second half) that lost the ball for us and lead to some points for Villanova," he added.

Eugene Banks and Jim Spanarkel scored 21 points apiece to lead seventh-ranked Duke to an 84-80 victory over Pennsylvania.

Twentieth-ranked Penn threatened to upset Duke by taking a 9-point lead, 66-58, with about eight minutes remaining in the game.

But Banks, a 6-foot-7 freshman forward, and Spanarkel, a 6-foot-5 guard, hit on a variety of short jumpers and the Blue Devils' defense held Penn to one basket in nearly six minutes.

Duke had led 44-40 at halftime on two free throws and a basket at the buzzer, and the Quakers' hustling defense forced Duke turnovers and fast-break baskets for Penn.

But Penn's offense went cold except for the driving layups of guard Bobby Willis, who had 16 points, and forward Tony Price, who had 17. Duke limited Penn's high-scoring forward, Keven McDonald, to 12 points.

In the first game, Indiana led by as many as 11 points early in the second half, but Villanova's late switch from a zone to a man-to-man defense choked off the Hoosiers.

Researchers Investigating Neglected Past Of Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Atlanta may be "the city too busy to hate" and New Orleans "the city that care forgot." Houston, says Don Carleton, could be called "the city without a past."

But the transplanted Dallasite is working to change that image, thanks to a unique research program, originally set up through a federal grant and funded since 1976 by the city of Houston.

"Houston is the archtypical American city, constantly looking to the future, created by entrepreneurs, builders and land speculators," the director of the Houston Metropolitan Research Center said. "Very little has been published on local history here and even less analysis made of how it got the way it is."

Carleton, a University of Houston graduate with a doctorate in U.S. history, and three other professional historians work with two graduate students, a secretary and a $100,000 annual budget out of the Houston Public Library. He said it is the only program of its kind in the country although other cities are using Houston as a model to set up their own.

Having a building in which to set up the center — the Spanish Renaissance former library building next door presently being remodeled — was an important factor, Carleton said, in obtaining the original funding.

Through spot ads on radio and television Carleton and his staff are seeking private papers, diaries and journals, letters, records, photographs — anything that bears on the development and history of Houston. They also approach businessmen, companies and institutions for documentary material.

"One of the most frustrating parts of the job is convincing people what they have is worthwhile," Carleton said. "Businessmen will offer annual reports but when we ask about correspondence and things like that, they say, 'oh, that's private, that's not history.'"

Although the city previously had no archives to speak of, Carleton said the center is not just somewhere to conserve old papers and cracking photographs.

"We want this to be a place where people come to do original research that will result in publication of studies on Houston history. We want students and residents to use the resources to answer questions they have about the place in which they live," he said.

It is often non-native Houstonians who provide the impetus and ask the questions. Dr. Harold Hyman of Rice University's history department thought up the idea for the center, Carleton said, and he is from Illinois.

"Outsiders want to know why we have no zoning here, what are the reasons why Houston and not some other place became the city it is today."

The Bicentennial and the "Roots" phenomenon, Carleton said, stimulated interest the past of people and their cities. He said local history has now become academically "acceptable" thanks to pioneering work by historians studying daily life in colonial America.

Carleton's own research centers on what he calls "the crisis of rapid change" — what happens when a city goes from a population of 292,000 to 938,000 in 30 years. One of the results, he feels, is a tendency towards conservatism like Houston's "Red scare" of the 1950s.

Some Houstonians are beginning to question the direction in which their city is going, Carleton said.

"There is a vague uneasiness but no real perception that anything is wrong, but we're heading in that direction. Booms do not last forever."

Scientists Conclude Meeting On Future Of Space Research

HOUSTON (UPI) — Five hundred lunar and planetary scientists from 14 nations including the Soviet Union ended their annual conference Friday with the realization that the more they discover about the solar system the more they have to learn.

"Dr. (G.J.) Wasserburg (of CalTech) summarized that very nicely by saying he was completely baffled by the large variety of data that were being presented that virtually no one understands," said conference co-chairman Michael Duke.

"He said he hopes the situation would not be further confused by next year. There are just so many different processes apparently that went on to form the chemical elements we now see in the solar system.

"Next year, there is going to be some anticipation, to some extent, that people will try to give a 10-year recapitulation of what has gone on."

Duke is the chief of lunar and planetary science at Johnson Space Center.

"It seems like it (next year) will be an appropriate time to sit back and see what has gone on and where we're going. I think next year will be a conference of great interest," Duke said.

It also will be a time for sentimentalism about the evolution of knowledge.

"The youngest person who presented a paper at the conference this year was in the 9th or 10th grade when Apollo 11 landed on the moon in 1969," he said.

"There is an evolution of people and hopefully some of the younger people are smarter than some of the older people and are able to put together modern analytical techniques and gain understanding to make some new insights."

Duke made the comments after a day of summation sessions in which participating scientists try to pull together what they know and what they don't after a week of meetings.

As usual, the latter outweighed the former, even on so old a question as the origin of the universe.

But the pursuit of answers for the ever increasing number of questions will continue and Duke listed a few areas of special interest for lunar and planetary scientists in the coming year.

Aside from further efforts to define the early history of the solar system, Duke said scientists will be investigating the origin of volcanic rock on the moon, the Earth and other planets.

Another question will be the mechanism of explosion cratering, a subject which this year for the first time brought together scientists specializing in meteorite impact craters and nuclear explosion craters.

"In the lunar program, we still have a major amount of work to be done with lunar cores," Duke said. "We are still opening for the first time cores that were taken by the Apollo astronauts."

And then there will be further study of data gathered from the Viking missions to Mars.

"I am convinced that next year there will be even more of a story told about Mars than there was this year," Duke said. "That is partly because NASA is going to concentrate next year on analysis of data from the martian probes."

As for the distant future, Duke said, "A lot of what we do depends on developing new sources of data.

"We will be looking forward to the successful completion of missions such as Voyager to Venus (this year) and the othe missions that are approved to the outer planets like Galileo (to Jupiter in 1982)."

Houston Growth Called Menace To Farm Land

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's growth is gobbling up prime farming land and may cause flooding and drainage problems, speakers at a land use conference here have warned.

David Myers, of the Soil Conservation Service, cited statistics showing that more than two-thirds of the land in Harris County is prime farm land, but more than half of the land already has been irreversibly committed to urban use.

Jay Naman, a Texas Farmers Union representative from Waco, said urban dwellers should encourage farm land adjacent to cities because, he said, "a green belt around the city is more attractive than transition stuff such as junkyards."

Harris County Flood Control District Director Gordon Smith said Houston's flat terrain causes drainage problems. "It's like trying to drain a pool table," he said.

Smith said rapid development has diminished the bayou drainage capacity in Harris County. "The thing to do is stop development, but that's not popular around here," he said.

Environmental planner Jim Veltman said the solution to the county's drainage problem is to use a natural drainage system and preserve trees, wildlife and open space.

"The only way to convince the developers is to show them they can make money using natural drainage," he said.

Houston should grow toward the north and northwest for improved drainage, Smith said.

Space Satellite Anniversary Noted

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Around the world for 20 years might well be the title of a story about America's longest running space venture.

Friday was the 20th anniversary of the launching of Vanguard 1, the second satellite successfully launched by the United States. Vanguard has circled the earth more than 78,000 times and is the oldest satellite still in orbit, according to the North American Air Defense Command.

Democrats Postpone Primary Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic National Committee will delay until June 9 consideration of rule changes that would make it more difficult for outsiders to challenge an established presidential candidate.

Chairman John White postponed from April 21 consideration by the committee of the rules which would shorten the primary season, partially revived the winner-take-all formula and forced presidential contenders to enter primaries at least 55 days before the election.

The rules changes have been favored by members of the White House staff. The rules being changed made it possible for President Carter to win the Democratic presidential primary in 1976.

WANTED

Young Adult Businessmen and Women for...Delivery of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

A young adult on a Avalanche-Journal route is a part-time business person. He/She is in business for themselves and will learn fundamentals of good business practice through actual experience.

The Avalanche-Journal carrier buys for wholesale and sells for retail, realizing a gross profit. He learns to operate his business as efficiently as possible to assure maximum profit. The A-J carrier builds his business by giving good prompt delivery service and through the use of good salesmanship.

It is important that he learns how to keep accurate records. The Avalanche-Journal carrier has the responsibility of keeping his accounts receivable in order so he can take care of his obligations promptly.

This early training will be useful to a child through his adult career. Many parents encourage their children to accept the challange offered an Avalanche-Journal newspaper route.

HEW To Publish Student Rights Guidelines

By The Associated Press

You want to look at your child's scholastic record and the principal turns you down. Do you have the right to demand the information?

A school dress code requires that boys' hair be kept above the collar. Your son wants to wear his longer. Can he?

In both case, the answer is "yes."

Supreme Court decisions and federal laws enacted since the start of the 1960s have given public school students new legal rights and the government is trying to help youngsters and their parents learn what they are—and are not—entitled to.

A guide, published by the Youth Development Bureau of the Office of Health, Education and Welfare, details student rights in areas like religion, free speech, discrimination and records and outlines steps to take in case of possible violations.

"Your Legal Rights and Responsibilities" is available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 652F, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Here are some key issues for students:

STUDENT RECORDS

The 1974 Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act gives certain rights to eligible students or their parents or guardians. (An eligible student is one who is 18 or over or is attending any school after graduation from high school.) Under the law, an eligible student or his or her parent or guardian has the right to review and inspect the student's records, except for records made and kept by one person such as a psychologist or social worker. The parent or student also is entitled to challenge the records in a hearing to make sure they are not misleading or inaccurate. With a few exceptions, officials must get written permission from a student or parent before revealing the records to anyone else.

The law covers all schools receiving federal funds. Further information is available from: The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Office, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 330 Independence Ave. S.W., Washington, 20201.

SEX DISCRIMINATION

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 prohibits schools from treating boys and girls differently because of sex. Schools cannot provide separate classes or activities for male and female students; deny students the right to take a particular course because of sex; apply different rules about physical appearance to boys and girls; make different disciplinary rules or enforce them differently on the basis of sex; refuse to let a female student to take part in a class or activity because she is pregnant. (The school may, in some cases, require a pregnant student to get a doctor's approval for participation in a particular class.)

Because of these rules, a school cannot force boys to cut their hair shorter than girls; it cannot prevent a girl from taking shop or a boy from taking home economics.

There are some exceptions to the requirement for joint classes. Schools may, for example, provide separate classes for sex education; they also may separate students by sex within physical education classes for participation in contact sports.

Violations of the law should be reported to the Director of the Office of Civil Rights at the HEW address listed above.

RELIGION

A 1962 Supreme Court ruling prevents schools from interfering with a student's right to observe any religion — or none at all. Schools may not require, establish or conduct religious services. Students, in turn, must not interfere with the freedom of others to worship as they please. The ruling does not prevent a school from disciplining a student who, for example, harasses or tries to embarrass another student for wearing a crucifix or other religious symbol.

SUSPENSION

Under a 1975 Supreme Court ruling, school officials suspending a student for 10 days or less must tell the student what rule has been broken, write it down and give the student a copy. If the student denies the offense, the officials must explain why they believe the rule has been broken. The student must have a chance to give his or her version of what has happened.

The court ruling involved brief suspensions only; the court mentioned that longer suspensions or expulsions might require more formal procedures, but it did not spell them out.

Nothing in the Supreme Court action or the law protects students from properly imposed suspensions. In addition, a student whose conduct is dangerous to other persons or who continually threatens to disrupt school, may be suspended immediately; a hearing according to the rules set down by the court should be held as soon as possible after the suspension.

Authorities Trace Bank Error Suspect

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A 52-year-old bachelor accused of taking off with $100,000 mistakenly credited to his bank account has been traced to Las Vegas, authorities say.

Charles Walsh has been sought since Feb. 9 when authorities say he emptied his account at Commercial Trust Co., which says $100,000 was mistakenly credited to the account. Jersey City police said Thursday the FBI and the department have traced the former coin dealer to the gambling capital "where he has cashed a lot of travelers checks," but he has not been located.
