City's teachers chalk up options on accelerated block scheduling

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

While local high school students had a day off from school Monday, their teachers dutifully sat for hours in Lee High School desks hearing about ways other school districts have changed class schedules.

Hundreds of Midland freshman and senior high school teachers attended sessions conducted by educators from Mansfield and Garland independent school districts.

Hearing that restructuring a school day could mean starting school by 7:20 a.m. drew more than a few gasps from teachers.

Restructuring the school day meant having students in classrooms by no later than 7:25 a.m. for two school districts. Both of the districts have closed campuses for lunch and both districts have "content mastery" teachers who work with lower performing students and special education students.

Court raises county taxes with 3-2 vote

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

State's debt-forgiving calculation brings 12.18 percent increase down to 7.99 percent, just under 8 percent rollback-election requirement.

Without fanfare, the five-member Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday unanimously adopted the county's $18 million general-fund budget for Fiscal Year 1995.

The budget year begins Oct. 1.

But the court was divisive in its 3-2 approval of the 26.43-cent ad-valorem tax rate, which funds almost 50 percent of the budget.

The 26.43-cent tax rate, which applies to each $100 assigned to property valuations, is 2.87 cents higher — or 12.18 percent more — than last year's 23.56-cent rate.

However, due to a debt-forgiving calculation built into the tax structure by the Texas Legislature, the county's official tax-rate increase is 7.99 percent, just short of an 8-plus-percent increase, which would have invited a rollback election.

Voting for adoption of the 1994 ad-valorem tax rate were Commissioners Henry Goulet, Louisa Valencia, and Win Brown. Voting against the measure were County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer and Commissioner Guy McCrary.

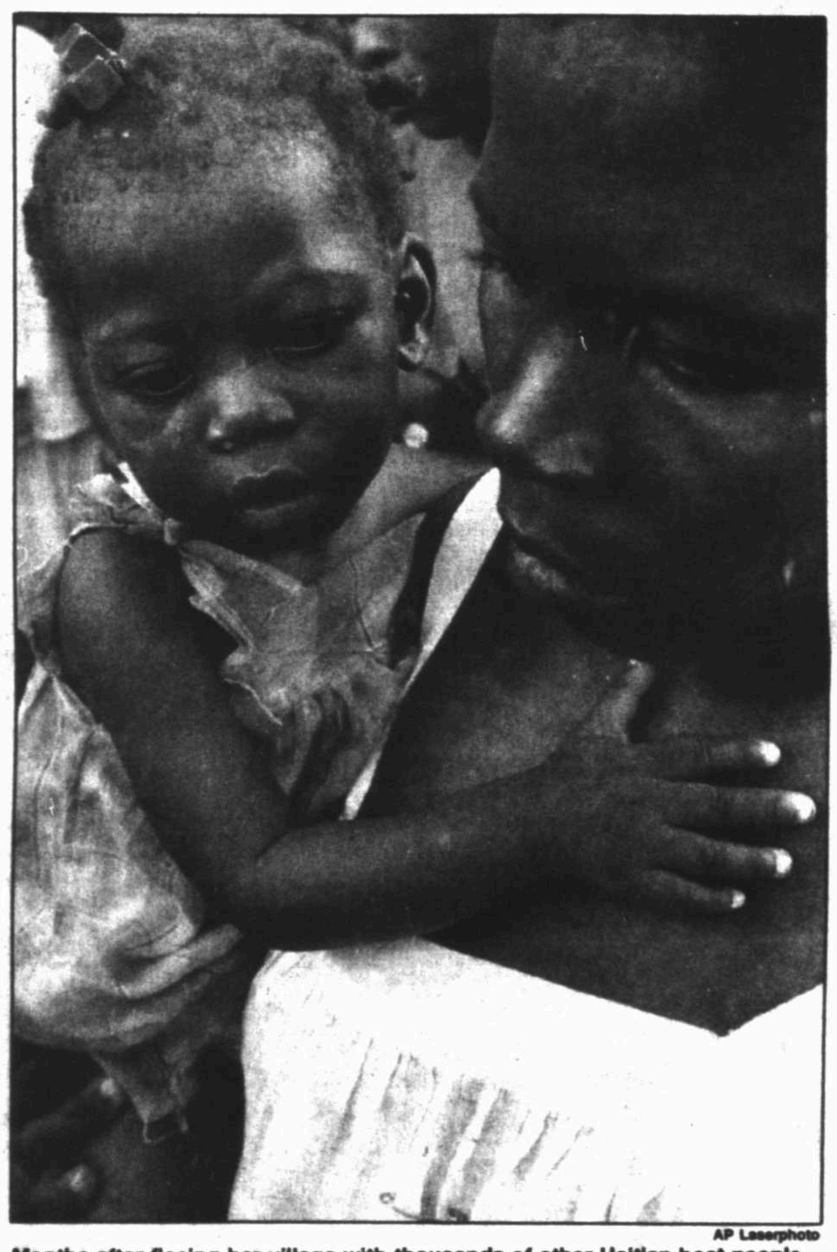

The difference in the literal tax increase of 12.18 percent that is not reflected in the 7.99 percent official tax-rate increase is 4.19 percent. And it is the latter percentage that the Texas Legislature allowed for the Midland County to recoup its loss of $375,000 for housing state prisoners.

The state had paid Midland County about $2 million in the last year to house prisoners, but the money was $375,000 short of county expenses in housing those inmates.

County taxpayers and not the state picks up the shortfall.

In other business, the Commissioners' Court set sheriff's and constable's fees for 1995 and approved a contract with the city of Midland to charge the

First boat people return to Haiti since arrival of American troops

PORT-AU-PRINCE — The last time Haitian refugees returned to their homeland, they endured the taunts and threats of military goons.

But the 221 boat people who stepped ashore Monday came home to a new situation: a country protected by American troops.

■ HAITI UPDATE: Call Cityline, 560-2400, enter 6201.

The refugees who sailed into the capital's port aboard the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Northland were the first to return since 15,000 American troops began arriving in this Caribbean nation a week earlier.

Although the Haitians had agreed to be returned from detention at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, they looked glum and confused as they stepped off the cutter and headed toward homes many hoped they had left for good.

Many perked up, however, after the Haitian Red Cross gave them the equivalent of $15 — more than the average weekly salary in Haiti — and dropped them off at the bus

Health-reform wreckage buries tax deduction for self-employed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several million self-employed Americans may be in for a rude surprise when they file their taxes next year. They will no longer be able to deduct a penny of the money they pay for health insurance.

The 25 percent tax deduction for the self-employed expired at the end of 1993. Lawmakers in both parties had expected to restore it and provide an even more generous break this year as part of health reform.

But the tax deduction for the self-employed has been buried for now in the wreckage of the health reform bills.

"It's kind of a shock," said Rebecca Anderson, a legislative analyst for the National Association for the Self-Employed. "It was being held hostage to the health care debate. Now we're down to the wire and . . . everyone is saying it's not going to happen.'

"It's a crime," said John Motley, city $44 per day to hold each city inmate. The fee is equal to the $44 per-diem fee which the county charges the United States Marshal's Service to house federal prisoners but is more than twice the $20 fee which the state pays the county for housing state prisoners.

The Commissioners' Court discussed but put on hold proposals to adopt "a standardized work week as authorized" by the Fair Labor Standards Act, to ratify "job classifications as required" by the act, and to ratify "employee time-reporting procedures as prescribed" by County Auditor Jim Ross.

Each of the three proposals met with discussion and opposition but none was resolved.

Toward end of the controversial discussion, taxpayer-representative Edna Walger characterized the exchange as a "battle between autonomy and economics."

Seltzer agreed and saluted Mrs. Walger for succinctly describing the controversy.

County Treasurer Carol Baker had proposed that the work week begin at the onset of Sunday, at 12:01 a.m., and end seven days later at Saturday midnight.

"For most employees, it won't affect them," Brown said. Most of the county's 500 employees work weekdays.

The proposal was deferred.

The county auditor, Jim Ross, who said that one of his duties is to ensure that the county is "in compliance with the laws on financial matters," said that employees' work routine "is the province of election officials."

County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, who agreed with Ross, said that "It's up to each elected official to run the office as he or she sees fit. They know how better than anybody else."

Dettman said he has no problem with a standardized work week for Midland County.

But Dettman expressed concerns over how the other Commissioners' Court's proposals on job classifications and time-reporting procedures might affect the autonomy of elected officials.

"When you are trying to control their lives in 15-minute increments, you are taking away from their autonomy," Dettman said.

In response, McCrary said Dettman was mutinous.

"I'm not trying to mutiny," Dettman said.

"All we are trying to do is help the elected officials ... by standardizing their workweek," Brown said.

McCrary said the court's intent is "not to step on any toes, (not) to take away any power."

Dettman favored a "less burdensome, more flexible" system.

The proposals confronted the commissioners after some deputies of Sheriff Gary Painter had asked the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) to clarify when overtime pay comes into play for law-enforcement officers.

The Commissioners' Court, while voicing objections to the sheriff, had expressed concern over the high cost of overtime.

As a result of the DOL inquiry, the county got a $42,000 "surprise," as McCrary characterized it. The county is paying deputies that much money in back overtime pay for the past two years.

While most wage-earners start collecting overtime beyond a 40-hour work week, overtime for Midland County law-enforcement officers begins with hours beyond a 171-hour, 28-day (four-week) period.

The usual four-week work hours total 160.

The DOL spokesman said deputies are to be paid "straight time" for the 11 hours they worked between 160 and 171 and time-and-a-half for hours they worked beyond 171 hours in a 28-day cycle.

And law-enforcement officers who accumulate more than 320 "comp-time" hours (480 hours if the 1½-pay formula is applied to 320 hours) are to be paid in cash and not "time off" for additional hours worked.

Other than the $42,000, most of an additional $30,000 in overtime pay in the past year has been paid to four deputies, said Mrs. Valencia. Those deputies, according to courthouse officials, are investigators Rory McKinney, Sue Rudie, Jim McFadden, and Crime-Stopper officer Terry Lowe.

A concern of courthouse judges is the status of their "personal" staffers, including secretaries, bailiffs, and court reporters.

The judges seemed to want their staffers exempted from certain provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act due to the erratic and long hours worked by judges and staffers in jury trials. The theory is that the work weeks would balance out fairly because of occasional lulls in the judicial process.

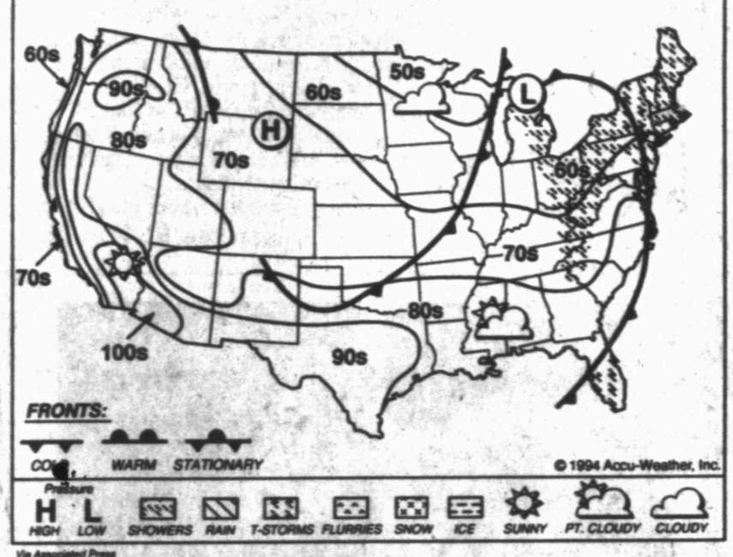

Of talk of a workshop on the proposals, Texas District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles said that a previous county round-table discussion turned out to be a "sales job" for a purchasing agent for Midland County.

Seltzer said "there needs to be standardization" of the overall proposals.

"All we have been trying to do is bring good business practices to county government," Seltzer said. "The rules that apply to business should be equally applicable to government to the greatest extent possible."

BURIES: Self-employed may have rude surprise

vice president for government affairs of the National Federation of Independent Business. "Not only is there no health care reform, but we lost even the very meager incentive that small, self-employed people had to purchase health insurance."

Corporations can deduct 100 percent of the costs of providing insurance for their employees.

Many health reform bills — including President Clinton's and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole's — proposed giving the self-employed a 100 percent tax deduction. It was trimmed to 80 percent in a House Democratic leaders' plan and 50 percent in Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's proposal.

The 25 percent tax deduction, which applied to insurance bought by the self-employed for themselves, spouses and dependents, cost the Treasury about $500 million a year. Expanding it to 100 percent would cost $2.5 billion a year.

More than 12 million Americans are self-employed for part or all of their livelihood, and almost 3 million have no health insurance, according to the Employee Benefit Research Institute.

A study conducted last year by the National Association for the Self-Employed predicted that 400,000 more self-employed would go without insurance if they lost the 25 percent tax deduction.

"This is health care in reverse if they don't reinstate this provision," said Anderson.

Several lawmakers, including Reps. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, and Jan Meyers, R-Kan., are pushing bills to revive the 25 percent tax deduction.

The tax break for the self-employed has expired in the past. It took Congress until August 1993 to restore it after it expired at the end of 1992.

Motley said former House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., "always tried to use it as a trump card to keep us in line."

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., the current Ways and Means chairman, wants to restore the 25 percent deduction, but the timing is up in the air, said a spokeswoman, Ellen Dadisman.

If Congress waited past April 15, 1995, to restore the deduction, it would create headaches for the self-employed because they would have to amend their tax returns, she noted.

The National Federation of Independent Business was widely credited with helping topple President Clinton's health reform plan and its mandate on businesses to buy insurance for every employee.

In pulling down health reform, the small-business lobby also undercut its bid for a 100 percent tax deduction.

But Motley said, "This doesn't hurt the NFIB. It hurts hundreds of thousands of small-business owners across the country and probably the very poorest of them."

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, is pushing a last minute, stripped-down reform plan to combine expanded coverage for children with a 100 percent tax deduction for the self-employed. But its prospects of passing are minuscule.

RETURN: 221 refugees sail into capital's port

"I'm happy to be back. This is home," said Rita Petit Frere, whose baby Frantz was born at the detention camp at Guantanamo Bay a month ago. "I feel protected because the U.S. troops are here."

She and her husband, Veness Joseph, sailed from Haiti on July 4 after selling virtually all their possessions, including their goats, to make the trip. They were picked up the following day and taken to Guantanamo Bay.

"The Americans here now and there is more security," said another returning refugee, 26-year-old seamstress Guerly Joseph.

"We really don't like foreign troops here, but it seems that that's what my brothers and sisters need. That's the only language they understand."

Unlike refugees who returned to Haiti in the past, those who came back Monday were not met by hostile throngs. Instead, they were greeted by about 3,000 curious Haitians crowding the dilapidated docks and nearby shore — many looking for information about relatives and friends who had left the country on boats.

Some returnees carried their meager possessions in their arms — a single blanket, or a bundle of clothing. A few smiled and waved at journalists. Most just stared in awe at the soldiers in camouflage uniforms gathered on the pier.

"They are excited about the prospects of coming home, but apprehensive about what they are going to find here," said Cmdr. Jim Decker, skipper of the Northland. "We have done our best to calm their fears."

The refugees were greeted at the dock by U.S. Ambassador William Swing and Lt. Gen. Hugh Shelton, commander of the U.S. operation in Haiti.

"This is, in effect, a reverse of the flow of what we had several weeks ago when people were leaving Haiti in unseaworthy crafts," Swing said.

"This is the first of a number of repatriations we will have."

Undoubtedly, not all were delighted about coming home, even if they did so voluntarily. Many who left were fleeing poverty as well as political repression, and even if the U.S. intervention leads to the return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's economy is in desperate straits. Unemployment tops 50 percent.

The refugees returning Monday were mostly young men, along with a few women and children and at least three babies.

STRANDS: Couple leaves sitter for 16 days custody hearing for the children, who range in age from 2 to 10.

The sitter, 14-year-old Angela Morris, tried to maintain the household, enlisting the help of friends, skipping school and keeping the secret from authorities, hoping to keep the children out of foster homes.

"In the end, that's what happened anyway," she said in an interview.

The gas had been shut off at the house, so the teen improvised to feed and bathe the youngsters, at one point heating bath water in an electric coffee maker.

Police acting on an anonymous tip came to the house Friday and removed the children. Describing the neighborhood as a well-kept working class area, police said the house was filthy. The baby sitter took the blame for that.

"It was hard to keep the house clean, especially with the little ones," Angela said.

Railing and Fignar were arraigned Monday on four counts each of endangering the welfare of a child. Each count carries five years in jail.

Bond was set at $10,000 for Railing and $15,000 for Fignar, and both were beiong held in Allegheny County Jail.

Bond for Fignar was higher because he also was charged with failing to appear at a hearing earlier this year on a 1993 domestic violence charge.

Family Court Judge Joseph Jaffe ruled Monday the children must remain in foster care at least until another hearing Oct. 5, said Mark Cancilla, a lawyer representing the children. The next hearing for Railing and Fignar is scheduled for Oct. 4.

The couple learned about the custody hearing, which was closed, from the children's grandmother, who said she tried to have the children turned over to her last week.

The couple had no comment as they left the hearing. The children attended, and the oldest was crying, said their grandmother, Dorothy Brooks.

"The kids are obviously quite traumatized after having been removed from their home," Cancilla said.

The baby sitter said the couple left their two children, ages 2 and 3, and Railing's two older children, aged 9 and 10, in her care on Sept. 7, with the promise they'd return in three days. Her payment was to be $75.

"But it ended up being extended every other day until it ended up being 16 days," Angela said.

Last week, Mrs. Brooks had asked police to release the children to her care but was turned down. She said she didn't realize how long the parents had been away or how young the baby sitter was.

Fignar worked until Saturday installing floor coverings at a Burlington Coat Factory store being built in Lawrenceville, N.J., according to Ric Bramble, a Burlington spokesman. Railing said the job took longer than expected, and Fignar wouldn't be paid until the job was completed, Mrs. Brooks said.

The couple initially called twice from New Jersey and left a motel phone number, but the motel would not accept Angela's collect calls.

The teen said she'd seen the movie "Home Alone," about a child accidentally left behind when his parents went on vacation.

"I thought it was funny," she said. "But I didn't have time to think about that. I was too busy thinking about what I needed to do for the kids."

BLOCK: Teachers hear about options on restructuring day

tory. Instead I'm here to give you an informational speech," said Mansfield High School history teacher Larissa Cox.

Speaking about Mansfield's "accelerated block schedule," Ms. Cox said it involves four 90-minute class periods per day. Most classes meet twice per week.

Ms. Cox, who teaches honors English and history, said Mansfield is a small town growing into a metroplex. "We had horrible attendance and dropout problems, and not enough challenging courses for our students," she said.

The educator said switching over to a class schedule similar to a college schedule, and cracking down on tardiness, turned things around for the district.

"Our schedule allows for remediation as well as acceleration," she said, noting that the block program, now in its second year, accommodated 43 more classes the first year, and an additional 29 courses added the second year.

Courses added included Aqua Science (marine biology), Study of Shakespeare, History of JFK, War America Style, The Real West, Energy and Environmental Technology, Probability and Statistics, Photojournalism, Genetics, Science Fiction Writing, and Plays, Playwrights, and Writing.

The schedule also affords students the opportunity to earn up to 32 credit hours in four years, rather than 8 credits per year.

"This has improved attendance, simply because, if you miss 90 minutes, you miss two days," Ms. Cox said.

The district also doesn't fool around with tardiness. Students have 10-minute passing periods between classes. A one-minute warning bell rings and then classroom doors are locked. Students who are tardy have to go to the principal to get a pass. Tardiness can result in attending lunch detention and even expulsion.

"Our district philosophy is that education is a privilege," Ms. Cox said.

Mansfield students attend four 90-minute classes and have a 50-minute lunch. The first 30 minutes of the lunch period are for eating and compose the teachers' duty-free lunch. The last 30 minutes are when pep rallies are held and school clubs or UIL (University Interscholastic League) organizations meet. School begins at 7:25 a.m. and ends at 2:45 p.m.

"Teachers are in the building by 7 a.m.," Ms. Cox said. "Half of our student body is working after school, so we wanted to offer this schedule."

The Mansfield High School campus is closed. Because of overcrowding, students eat in several areas, including school hallways. "There are off-limit areas, and when an area becomes trashed, it becomes off limit. Students lose their privilege of eating there."

Ms. Cox described the school administration as "strict and supportive."

"We don't want problems in the metroplex moving into our district," she said. "We refuse to allow insubordination."

A bonus of the system, is that Mansfield teachers teach only three classes a day. Ms. Cox has a total of 68 students in three classes — 20, 22 and 26 in each of the classes.

Teachers involved in the Mansfield plan said lecturing usually is kept to about 25-30 minutes, leaving time for group activities, and 10 minutes to start homework assignments.

"You cannot expect students to sit passively for 90 minutes," she said.

"Starting homework assignments (at the end of class) assures the students that they know how to do the assignments. And when they begin a chapter in class they are more motivated to finish it at home," Ms. Cox said.

The teacher said some of the advantages of the accelerated block schedule are:

- Stress reduction because of a less hurried daily routine.
- Stress reduction because of an extra day being given for homework assignments to be completed and extra time for teachers to grade papers.
- Learning is more intensified and lessons aren't likely to be interrupted by the bell. "If you take kids to the library, usually by the time they find the materials they need for an assignment, the bell has rung," said Sue Montgomery, a teacher from Garland ISD.
- More time to teach skills and activities.
- Teachers have more time to spend with students who need it.
- The schedule is in line with what the state would require if current state recommendations were to become mandates.
- A year's credit is earned in 18 weeks.
- Teachers have 90-minute planning periods, increasing time to meet with parents.

Clinton lifts most U.S. sanctions on Haiti

AP Laserphoto

The first Haitian boat people to be repatriated arrive in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Monday from the Coast Guard cutter Northland.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Citing "a moment of opportunity" for democracy, President Clinton lifted travel, trade and most other U.S. sanctions against Haiti on Monday and urged other nations to follow suit.

Clinton told the U.N. General Assembly that lifting the sanctions would hasten rebuilding of the impoverished country and was being done "in the spirit of reconciliation and reconstruction."

He suggested the sanctions were no longer needed, with American and other forces firmly in place in the Caribbean country to enforce the U.S.-brokered agreement to restore exiled president Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power by Oct. 15.

But Clinton said some sanctions would remain in force — including a freezing of bank accounts and other assets — against Haiti's military leaders and their supporters.

The U.S. government has a list of 600 people with ties to Haiti's military junta who will remain under the sanctions, officials said.

Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, later told reporters that leaving the sanctions in place on the military leaders and their associates was designed to turn up the heat on them to leave the country by Oct. 15.

'Essential civil order will be restored. Human rights violations will be curbed. . . . The military leaders will step down. Democracy will be restored. . . .'

— President Clinton

She said the United States would seek a quick vote on lifting remaining U.N. trade sanctions on Haiti, even though it may contain a "trigger" that they would not be fully removed until Aristide is back in power.

The United States is encouraging exiled Haitian parliamentarians to return for a key session Wednesday in Port-au-Prince to consider amnesty legislation — an important step in persuading the military leaders to leave. U.S. forces will provide security for the legislators once the session is convened.

A week after American soldiers and Marines landed peacefully, Clinton said the operation demonstrates that "progress can be made when a coalition backs up diplomacy with military power."

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, Defense Secretary William Perry cautioned that while U.S. troops are being greeted "as friends and not invaders" in Haiti, it is critical that humanitarian aid begin flowing to maintain that idea.

Taking note of the violence over the weekend in Cap-Haitien, Perry said that U.S. forces have been told to defend themselves and that the Marines involved in the shootout had acted within the military's rules of engagement.

He cautioned Congress anew about setting a specific date for a troop withdrawal, saying that would "complicate our military operations."

Clinton's lifting of the U.S. embargo on Haiti came as more than 200 Haitians who had fled their homeland boarded a Coast Guard cutter at the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to return to Port-au-Prince.

Aristide himself had urged an end to the sanctions on Sunday. A trade ban was imposed by the Bush administration after Aristide was deposed in a 1991 coup, and additional sanctions, including a ban on commercial flights and the blocking of financial transactions, were imposed earlier this year.

BLOCK: City teachers mull change in day

(From 2A)

■ There is a greater opportunity to earn electives, and a greater number of electives can be offered.

Disadvantages of the system include:

■ It is more difficult for transfer students to catch up.

■ Teachers (using a grading computer software program in Mansfield) need to send out grade reports every three weeks.

■ Teachers must plan well in order to cover all course objectives in nine weeks (one semester).

■ Teachers must use different methods to keep a 90-minute period moving. Most teachers said they have at least three different activities each class period.

■ Students who earn more than three absences in nine weeks must attend Saturday school. (Absences to attend school activities are excused.)

Ms. Cox said the schedule results in teaching a one-year course, twice a year.

Ms. Montgomery of Garland ISD, said the district offers a "modified block schedule," called the "A/B Block."

Classes on the "A" schedule meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday one week, and on Tuesday and Thursday the next week — similar to a schedule at Abell Junior High School.

"It has allowed us to add courses like European History," Ms. Montgomery said. "It also gives teachers flexibility. If troops have moved into Haiti, for example, you can take 10 minutes out of your class time to discuss this. In a typical 55-minute class there would not be time for this."

The teacher said Garland is the seventh largest city in Texas. The district will be opening its sixth high school this year.

The Garland high school day begins at 7:20 a.m. and ends at 2:30 p.m. Lunch is only 30 minutes long on a closed campus. Because of overcrowding, the schools offer four lunch periods. Band and athletic classes meet daily. "Without this system, our students in show choir and other activities were having to take core courses in the summer to fit in all their credits," Ms. Montgomery said.

Ms. Montgomery teaches six classes with 190 students. However, most Garland teachers have five classes and a study-skills class.

"I find my work load has been increased more trying to meet the needs of low performing students and special education kids that it has been increased through block scheduling," she said.

"I love my 90-minute preparation period. I love having only 68 students, and I love teaching only three classes per day," Ms. Cox said. "Although I do get just as tired. I don't want to be disillusioning anyone in any way that your feet aren't going to hurt as much at the end of the day. They do."

Ms. Cox said standardized test scores have increased slightly since the program's inception. Ms. Montgomery didn't have that data, but noted that dropouts are fewer because students have time in the schedule to re-take courses they failed in the past. "And this schedule stopped us from losing kids to a private academy. The kids love it."

Midland Independent School District is exploring options to restructure the school day for high school students in order to allow them to earn 24 credits, the state recommendation.

Some parents attended the Monday staff development sessions.

Congress should face laws it OKs

The National Labor Relations Act covers millions of American workers in the public and private sectors — but not the 40,000 who work for Congress. The same is true for nine other federal laws that define and protect employee rights.

Legislation to correct this injustice awaits final action by the Senate, which seems in no hurry. If members want to demonstrate that they do not hold themselves above the laws they write for everyone else, they should pass this bill before they adjourn.

To make the point, Rep. John Boehner of Ohio once invited the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to inspect his office. They found more than a dozen violations. Anywhere else, OSHA could have ordered that they be corrected. Not on Capitol Hill.

Exemptions apply to 21,000 Senate and House staffers and almost 19,000 employees of the Library of Congress, the Government Printing Office and other congressional agencies. Laws from which they are excluded, wholly or partially, cover civil rights, family leave and age discrimination.

In some cases, Congress and all its agencies are exempted; in others, only one chamber. In all cases, Congress sets the rules and sits as jury and final judge on employees' complaints. No other employer enjoys such absolute authority.

The drive to make Congress comply with its own laws began with Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, several years ago. He and Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., are cosponsors of a compliance bill that the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee approved last week on a vote of 8-0. It is substantially identical to a bill the House has already approved.

Cost and the constitutional separation of executive and legislative powers are raised as the principal objections to these bills. Making Congress comply with worker-protection laws would be expensive, opponents say. Maybe so, just as it is expensive for businesses and state and local governments.

Why should Congress not feel the same burden? As for the separation of powers, both bills create an independent Office of Compliance to do the regulating. Employees who are not satisfied with its rulings could appeal them in court.

The Senate majority leader, George Mitchell, has yet to schedule a floor vote on the compliance bill, and time is running out. If he does not put it on the calendar, Lieberman and Grassley will try to attach it to other legislation as an amendment. Congress should be ashamed if legislation so fair, so benign and so long overdue cannot even be debated.

Progress in Korea tied to nuclear hard-liners

Progress in nuclear diplomacy between the United States and North Korea could accelerate when talks resume Friday — but not if South Korea's hard-liners get their way.

Their shrill opposition to accommodation could complicate Washington's efforts to make a deal with Pyongyang. It also could delay North-South talks.

The hard-liners are playing on doubts about who is actually running North Korea following the death of Kim Il Sung.

They are also sowing doubts about how much bomb-making plutonium the North may have already produced. The best way to lay those doubts to rest is to keep negotiating and see whether the North lives up to its commitments.

The evidence suggests that Kim's son remains on the negotiating path laid out by his father. In talks with Washington last month, the North firmed up its pledge to freeze its nuclear program by agreeing to seal its reprocessing facilities and halt construction of two new reactors — reactors that could generate far more plutonium than the one it now has.

In return, the United States promised to help build new light-water reactors and to meet the North's electricity needs in the meantime.

Spent fuel rods that the North removed from its one working reactor also remain under international inspection at Yongbyon, preventing extraction of four or five bombs' worth of plutonium. According to the International Atomic Energy Agency, the North has kept its pledge not to reprocess spent fuel. It has also refrained from refueling the reactor. So long as the North does not reprocess or refuel, its nuclear ambitions can be kept in check and the dialogue can continue.

Unfortunately, stopping the North from building bombs does not satisfy Seoul's hard-liners. They want to undermine North Korea's new regime. To that end, they never miss a chance to disparage the younger Kim's legitimacy and want the United States to put off diplomatic ties.

Some of Seoul's top leaders seem sympathetic to the hard-liners' complaints. They would be wiser to recognize that coming to terms with Pyongyang is the only way to make the Korean Peninsula nuclear-free.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1994. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Thirty years ago, on Sept. 27, 1964, the Warren Commission issued a report concluding that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President Kennedy.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Does GOP know what to do if it wins big?

The bad news for the Democrats this fall is the possibility of an electoral rout: Democratic incumbents sprawled everywhere, Republicans with their feet on the necks of the fallen, exulting triumphantly.

Murchison

The bad news for the Republicans this fall is — that very same prospect: Democratic incumbents sprawled everywhere, etc., etc.

It's one thing, as Bill Clinton proved in 1992, to talk a feisty game about change and reform; it's another actually to deliver.

Say the Republicans, as looks eminently possible, take control of both houses. Or say they just expand their numbers greatly. What then?

Wednesday, Republican senators previewed their agenda for 1995. Should the GOP — as is manifestly possible — take control of the Senate, says Sen. Phil Gramm, "we will shut down the taxing and spending and regulating machine that is the Clinton administration." There would be welfare reform, a balanced budget amendment, repeal of the 1993 increase on Social Security benefits paid by "upper-income" people and a doubling of the income tax exemption parents may claim for each child.

This is good stuff. More in the same vein is to come next week when House Republicans offer their own "contract" with the people.

The Republicans, who haven't lost a national election since 1992, and who see Clinton supporters like Rep. Mike Synar in Oklahoma going down to defeat in the Democratic primary, and who lick their chops as House Speaker Tom Foley fares poorly in his own primary — the Republicans, I say, are on a roll. In two years' time, they could end up running the whole federal government.

But if a card-carrying Whig may offer free advice, Republicans at this juncture must be exquisitely careful. The ongoing popular alienation from the Democrats is one part phooey-on-Clinton, one part phooey-on-everybody-now-in-charge. If the Republicans take over, that means they get the blame along with the credit. They'd better know what they are doing.

Do they? Will they? That isn't altogether clear. Republicans are people, just like Democrats; they like power and perquisites. The danger is that, handed power, they will forget to repudiate it and instead start enjoying it. Then their own days of wine and roses will end.

Unless, amid the self-congratulation and popping of champagne corks, they manage to remember what voters are mad about.

What are voters mad about? The growing disconnection between government and normal daily life. Here's the government, trying to solve all these enormous problems at enormous expense; but nothing gets better.

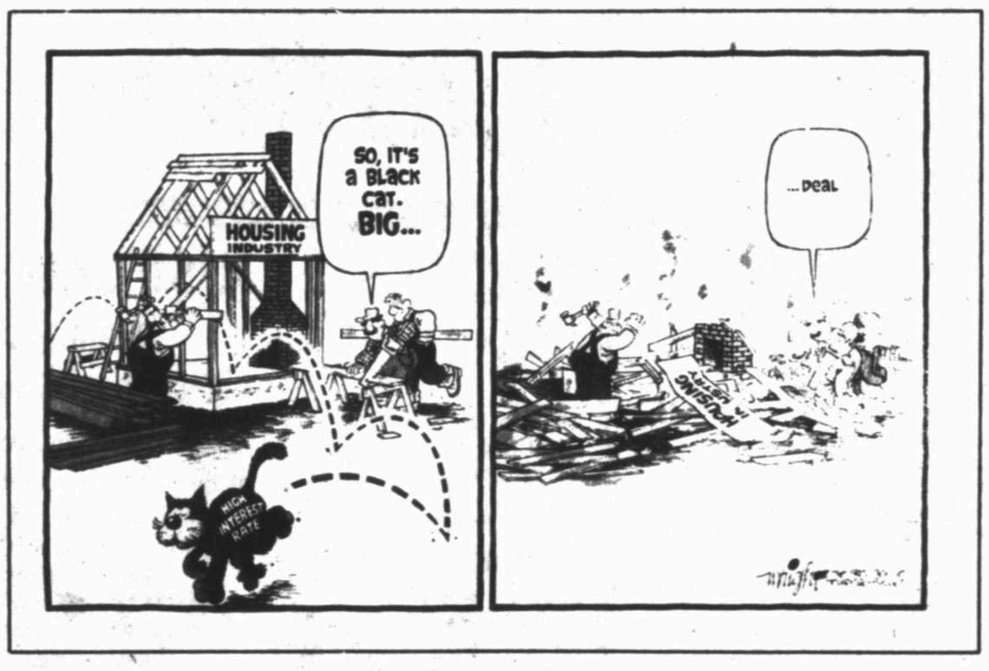

How to show that people count more than power and programs? Two reforms — both under active consideration by Republicans — should take priority.

Term limits — as in the forthcoming House Republican proposal. Today's reform bloc will turn into tomorrow's establishment unless there are firm, fixed rules for regular rotation of power. Twelve years is enough; if by that time a Congress member hasn't achieved his objectives, he should reconsider his vocation.

2) Rep. Dick Armey's flat-tax proposal — not a part of the House GOP contract. How about Congress' making things easier for people, instead of harder? The progressive income tax is a costly fraud that misdirects investment, penalizes work and wastes the valuable time of people with better things to do than fill out forms.

Term limits and the flat tax are people programs. They prospectively help people and excite the kind of support that makes them eminently doable.

CHARLEY REESE

Who's worse, armed thugs or politicians?

Well, I suppose I should feel safer if poorer now that President Clinton has gotten around to signing the $30 billion crime bill.

As you probably know, when the bill was still in Congress, the president made one of his typically excessive statements to the effect that every day the bill remained unpassed, people would die.

Reese

So Congress passed it even without reading it, and what did Clinton do? He left it on his desk and took a vacation. Presumably an unknown number of people were killed every day the bill remained unsigned. Presumably, the instant the President signed the bill and made it law, American criminals laid down their guns and surrendered.

I know it will be a great comfort to me personally to be able to tell a criminal pointing a semiautomatic rifle at me that the gun he is holding is illegal.

"Yeah, you jerk," I'll say to the criminal, "Not only is that gun illegal (uh, you didn't buy it before the bill was passed, did you, so that it's grandfathered in and legal?), but while you're wasting your time robbing me, you could be out playing midnight basketball."

"Well, I'm going to rob you and play midnight basketball," he says.

"Yeah, I guess you can," says I.

"And you're paying for everything. You're paying for the midnight basketball, and if I get busted for this job, you'll pay for my lawyer, my trial, my meals, my appeals, my bed, my education, my medical care, my cable TV and my parole officer. So who's the jerk?"

"You've got a point."

Oh, but I hear you saying, with all those extra cops out on the streets, I won't have to worry about getting robbed.

Well, let me provide an impeccable source to respond to that. The official publication of the National League of Cities, which supported the crime bill, recently published a table explaining some of the grant programs.

For cops on the beat, there is an authorization of $9 billion (none of this has yet been appropriated, by the way). Grant users have four choices: A, B, C or D.

A is rehiring laid-off law enforcement officers for deployment in community-oriented policing. B is hiring and training new officers for deployment in community-oriented policing. C is procuring equipment, technology, support systems or support personnel — or paying overtime — provided grant-seekers can prove such uses will increase the number of officers deployed in community-oriented policing. D is establishing projects such as pro-active crime control, specialized training to enhance conflict resolution or specialized training to increase participation in multijurisdictional early intervention teams, etc.

As you can see, it's not a straightforward hire cops program. Moreover, local government must provide a 25 percent match the first year and an additional 25 percent per year for the life of the grant.

Of course, as my fictional robber pointed out, we pay. We pay for the 75 percent federal grant and the 25 percent local match. It seems to me that since we taxpayers and crime victims are paying for everything, there is little reason for us to be grateful to the politicians.

After all, they are sticking us with a $30 billion tab and asking us to applaud them for doing it.

I know we Americans tend to be a lot more generous and trusting than we are smart when it comes to politics, but really, at some point, it should dawn on us that we should no more be grateful to politicians when they pick our pockets than we should be to robbers who relieve us of our cash at gunpoint. At least the criminals don't try to con us.

Personally, I feel a lot more secure dealing with a criminal armed with a simple firearm than I do in dealing with politicians armed with the unlimited power to tax. The crook doesn't keep coming back to the same pocket. The politicians do.

MIKE ROYKO

'Defining moments' in America now come on TV

I'm disappointed to learn that I blindly missed a defining moment in American history.

This has come to my attention in the many gushing reviews of a new movie called "Quiz Show."

Royko

The movie is loosely based on the true story of how a popular TV quiz show from the 1950s called "Twenty-One" was rigged to heighten suspense and increase ratings and profits.

Most of the critics say the movie is of great significance because the quiz-show scandal marked the loss of our national innocence.

Americans were supposedly stunned to discover that they couldn't believe everything they saw on their rabbit-eared TV sets. They were shattered by the revelation that Charles Van Doren, a bright, young college teacher and a member of a prominent literary family, had been slipped the correct answers and really wasn't as brilliant as he appeared.

And that is when we lost our national innocence, which is a serious loss, indeed.

It just shows how alert you have to be if you don't want to miss defining moments.

I owned a TV during much of the 1950s, and I vaguely recall watching a few segments of that tainted quiz show. I also vaguely remember the scandal.

But I stupidly failed to recognize its great significance — namely the loss of my innocence and that of my fellow Americans.

Shortly after the quiz-show scandal, I forgot about it completely. In fact, I didn't think much about it even when the scandal was unfolding. And I haven't given one thought to Van Doren, the scandal and the rest of it until I read the scholarly movie critiques.

That's because I was a Chicagoan. As such, I was familiar with aldermen, bagmen, juice men, hit men and other exotic urban wildlife. I had a naturally suspicious nature and assumed most public activities weren't on the legit.

As for the honesty of TV, by the late 1940s our family tavern had one of the city's early sets. Those were the days when pro wrestling was one of the biggest hits, and everyone knew those outrageous matches were fixed.

In fact, the wise men of the tavern agreed that just about everything they saw on the tube was a fake.

But that is no excuse for any alert person missing so significant a defining moment as the loss of our national innocence.

My only excuse is that it is difficult for any American to keep track of defining moments.

If anyone did a computer search of the phrase "defining moment" in the general press, we would find that it has been used an estimated 1,286,543 times in the last year or two.

If the forgettable Charles Van Doren punctured America's faith in TV, why do millions of Americans tune in every day to watch talk shows on which transvestite mothers-in-law describe their affairs with their sons-in-law?

While I would never argue with profound movie critics about defining moments or the precise time we lost our national innocence, these are debatable points.

Some might say that we lost our national innocence during the terrible slaughter and hardship of our Civil War. Or when tens of thousands of young men went off to die in World War I. And were there any innocents left after the Great Depression, World War II and the dropping of the A-bomb on Japanese civilians?

There are national shrinks who say we lost our national innocence when the 1919 White Sox threw the World Series for gambling bribes.

Others will argue that national virginity was violated by the Korean War ending our winning streak. Or it was plucked when John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King and Bobby Kennedy were assassinated. Or the debacle of Vietnam.

And what about Watergate? If I had a dollar for every time someone said that scandal shattered our national innocence, I could afford a nose job.

The World in brief

■ Paris' Champs-Elysees shines anew

PARIS — A two-year renovation of the city's most famous promenade culminated Monday as Mayor Jacques Chirac flooded the Champs-Elysees in shimmering emerald green light.

"The Champs-Elysees, a magical place in the world's subconscious, has regained its prestige," Chirac said.

Celebrated in song and film and considered by some the world's most beautiful avenue, the Champs-Elysees in recent years has been overrun by panhandlers, pickpockets, bumper-to-bumper traffic, fast-food joints, shopping malls and oversized cafes.

■ Court denies Carlos the Jackal's release

PARIS — A Paris court rejected a request Monday to free Carlos the Jackal, the terrorist captured in Sudan in August and brought to this country by French agents.

Attorneys for Carlos filed a request to free the 44-year-old Venezuelan, claiming one of the two warrants for his arrest was outdated and the other was valid only for France.

Lead lawyer Jacques Verges said before the court's ruling, however, that he "had no illusions because (releasing Carlos) would be an act of heroism to which we are not accustomed."

SOS Attacks, a group that is against terrorism, opposed Carlos' release, saying he had been expelled by Sudan rather than arrested by the French.

■ U.S., Japan trade-talks deadline nears

TOKYO — With a deadline looming Friday in bilateral trade talks, Japan's trade minister will leave for Washington Tuesday in a last-ditch effort to avert trade sanctions from being invoked against his country.

Ryutaro Hashimoto, the minister of international trade and industry, is expected to meet Wednesday with Mickey Kantor, the U.S. trade representative, and also probably with Commerce Secretary Ronald Brown, officials here said Monday. Hashimoto and Kantor spoke by telephone this morning.

Yeltsin calls for disarmament, cooperation

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Russian President Boris Yeltsin told world leaders Monday they must accept Russia as a "great power" and called for a treaty on ending the production of nuclear weapons material.

Yeltsin said he would welcome U.N. involvement in former Soviet states beset by civil strife, but insisted "the main peacekeeping burden in the territory of the former Soviet Union lies upon the Russian Federation."

The Russian leader's speech was part of the three-week U.N. general debate, the largest annual gathering of world leaders. About 180 diplomats will speak, including 47 heads of government.

Security was extremely tight, with police blocking off the street in front of the building and U.N. guards closing access to two floors.

In an earlier speech, President Clinton praised the cooperation between the United States and Russia and said the two nations were working to reduce their nuclear arsenals.

Clinton also announced the United States was lifting all sanctions against Haiti, except those that would help its military rulers, and indicated he would support the lifting of the U.N. oil embargo.

Clinton and Yeltsin move to Washington for a two-day meeting beginning today that is expected to focus on U.S. support for Russia's economy and on further cutbacks in long-range nuclear weapons.

Yeltsin's plan to limit the spread of nuclear weapons included the signing a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty by 1996, extending the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, regulating weapons sales, initiating a treaty on nuclear security and holding a conference on converting military factories to civilian use.

"There is an urgent need for all nuclear states to participate in the process of reduction and limitation of nuclear weapons," Yeltsin said.

Yeltsin said the treaty on nuclear security and stability should be signed by the world's five major nuclear powers — the United States, Russia, United Kingdom, France and China.

He also called for ending the production of nuclear materials and nuclear munitions.

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Madeleine Albright, called Yeltsin's proposals "creative and intriguing," but said the United States would have to study them.

Yelstin urged nations to be more active in U.N. peacekeeping and said Russia was prepared to designate troops for a stand-by U.N. force.

Troops search out cases in India's plague-stricken city

SURAT, India (AP) — Authorities listed no plague deaths in this industrial city Monday for the first time in six days, but they reported a disturbing development: an outbreak of plague in a neighboring state.

Soldiers searched shantytowns for more plague victims and guarded Surat's main hospital to stop infectious patients from fleeing. Officials said 56 new plague cases were recorded in the city.

Since pneumonic plague was first reported in Surat last Tuesday, at least 51 people have died, more than 450 have been hospitalized and an estimated 400,000 have fled the city. Unofficial death tolls run as high as 300.

South of Surat, officials in Maharashtra state reported 31 cases of bubonic plague — a less deadly form of the disease that ravaged 14th century Europe and Asia as "the Black Death."

"This development makes us worried" Ramanand Tewari, Maharashtra's health secretary, said of the outbreak in the city of Beed. An outbreak of bubonic plague in villages around Beed last month infected 93 people but caused no deaths.

In Surat, a port in western Gujarat state, soldiers in blue-gray fatigues accompanied doctors into slums where most plague cases were reported. The troops helped search for plague sufferers being kept home by their families and watched for looting of medicine being distributed by health officials.

City workers cleaned up piles of garbage and dead cows and rats left in the slums by monsoon floods.

The plague is spread by fleas that have bitten infected animals and by bacteria ejected into the air by the coughing of infected people.

Soldiers with automatic weapons stood guard at the Civil Hospital to keep patients from leaving before being cured by antibiotics. At least 60 people fled before the federal government sent in 800 soldiers Sunday.

Doctors described the fugitive patients as "time bombs" who could quickly spread the disease from one mud hut to another in the many shantytowns on the banks of the filthy Tapi River.

With nearly one-fifth of the population having fled the city, Indian officials fear the plague may be spread to other regions.

South Africa donates white rhinos to Kenya

mmASAI MARA, Kenya (AP) — Ten white rhinos from South Africa began a new life in the Kenyan bush Monday, welcomed by officials making champagne toasts and Maasai warriors singing praise for wildlife conservation.

The animals are among a group of 20 donated by the Natal Parks Board in South Africa to help this East African nation restock its rhinoceros herd, which was nearly wiped out by poachers in the late 1970s.

The first lot arrived by air over the weekend and the rest are due Saturday.

THANK YOU!

Panel to propose families should support immigrants, not welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal commission will propose that Congress change immigration laws to make families who bring relatives to the United States legally responsible for supporting them. The plan follows an explosion in the number of immigrants receiving welfare benefits.

Authorized by Congress in 1990 to examine immigration policies and their impact on society and the environment, the U.S. Commission on Immigration Reform will issue its first report to lawmakers on Friday.

According to the commission's executive director, Susan Martin, the nine-member advisory panel headed by former Rep. Barbara Jordan wrestled for days with the complex and politically explosive issues surrounding welfare and immigrants.

In a series of unanimous decisions, the commission will recommend to Congress that illegal immigrants be barred from most public aid, aside from immunizations, emergency medical care, school lunches and child nutrition programs.

The commission also believes there should be no broad ban on welfare benefits to legal immigrants, as some lawmakers have proposed, but that the families who bring their relatives to the United States must be held responsible for supporting them.

"We can't lift the safety net for legal, permanent residents," Martin said in an interview. "But at the same time, families have to take more responsibility."

Most legal immigrants are the spouses, children, parents or siblings of U.S. citizens and long-term, permanent residents.

If immigrants cannot show they have financial resources or a job in the United States, their sponsors must be able to support them and are required to sign a non-binding affidavit.

Supreme Court to hear school desegregation case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, jumping the gun on the start of its 1994-95 term next week, agreed Monday to hear civil rights cases involving school desegregation and giving businesses owned by women and minorities an edge in getting federal contracts.

The justices said they will decide whether the small-business affirmative action program — a boon to companies owned by minorities and women — unlawfully discriminates against companies owned by white men. The case could lead to the court's most important ruling on affirmative action since 1990.

The school desegregation case from Kansas City asks whether courts can require improvements in student achievement before some court-ordered programs can end.

The court also agreed to hear arguments in six other cases. Accepting the cases for review before the official beginning of the court's new term next Monday gives the lawyers an extra week to prepare for argument.

The court agreed to decide:

■ In a California case, whether states may increase the time between parole hearings for all prison inmates, including those who were sentenced when state law required more frequent hearings.

■ Whether companies can trademark the color of their products. The case involves a Chicago company that seeks to regain a trademark for the color of the pads it makes for dry-cleaning presses.

■ In a Florida case, whether lawyers can be barred from using the mail to solicit clients until 30 days after a personal injury or death occurs.

■ When the government can appeal to federal courts in disputes over benefits awarded to disabled maritime workers.

The affirmative action case involves the federal Small Business Act, which requires government agencies to use their purchasing power to help small businesses. Those owned by historically disadvantaged people receive special help.

The Transportation Department's Central Federal Lands Highway Division gives prime contractors on federal projects a 1.5 percent bonus if at least 10 percent of their subcontracts go to "disadvantaged business enterprises."

The agency wrote the bonus contingency into a highway-building project in the San Juan National Forest in southern Colorado that was awarded to Mountain Gravel and Construction Co.

Mountain Gravel subcontracted the guardrail work to Gonzales Construction Co., which meets the law's definition of a disadvantaged business.

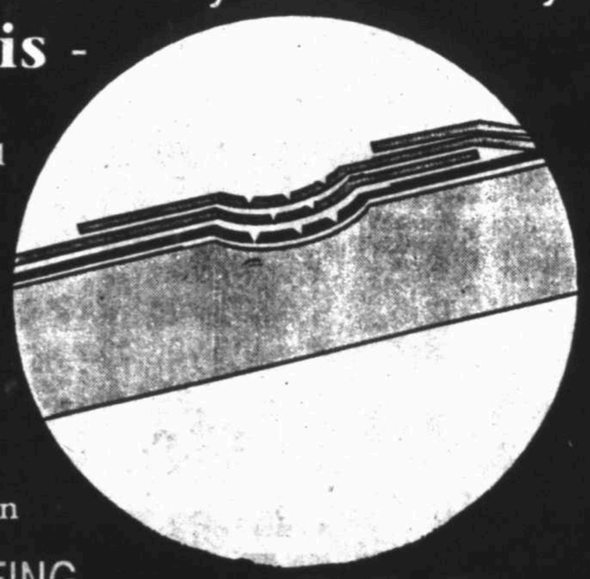

The white-owned Adarand Constructors Inc., had submitted a lower bid. The company sued in 1990, contending that the agency's subcontracting policy was an unlawful set-aside based on race.

Justice Department contend the Small Business Act does not promote any set-aside program.

Mitchell declares health-care bill dead in Congress for this year

■ Clinton, other Democrats vow to resurect legislation in 1995.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — National health-insurance legislation, President Clinton's grandest legislative goal and the dominating issue before Congress all year, officially died on Monday.

After the legislation had staggered under its own weight and the withering attacks of Republicans and insurance interests for months, Sen. George J. Mitchell, the majority leader, bowed to the inevitable and announced that Congress would not pursue the issue any further this year.

Clinton and other Democrats immediately said they would try to bring health-care legislation back to life in 1995, although the task is likely to be even harder than it was this year if the Republicans do as well as expected in the congressional elections on Nov. 8.

Clinton said in a statement, "For the sake of those of us who touched us during this great journey, we are going to keep up the fight and we will prevail."

Mitchell, a Maine Democrat who turned down a Supreme Court nomination to devote all his energies to passing health insurance legislation this year, told a news conference that the "insurance industry on the outside and a majority of Republicans on the inside proved to be too much to overcome."

His two targets scoffed. "Senator Mitchell blames Republicans for everything except the plane that crashed into the White House," said Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the Republican leader. The American people "feared an overdose of government control," he said. "We saw democracy in action. That's what happened. That's the way it is supposed to work."

Charles N. Kahn III, executive vice president of the Health Insurance Association of America whose "Harry and Louise" television advertisements spread doubts about the president's plan, said: "We went to the airwaves to raise questions. Our purpose was to change the product, not harm it."

Mitchell said he made a preliminary decision to abandon the bill last Tuesday, after Republican leaders told Clinton at a bipartisan meeting that if he pursued health care, they would block a new international trade pact, a threat they acknowledged last week.

Mitchell's concession came after initial efforts by Clinton to revamp the entire health-care system had foundered, and the majority leader had struggled to find a more modest step that would keep the hope of universal health care alive for the future.

Mitchell said he became certain the course was hopeless when Sen. John H. Chafee, the Rhode Island Republican with whom he was negotiating a compromise that could have insured about half the nation's 39 million uninsured, told him that day there were not enough Republicans ready to vote to break a filibuster. But Mitchell delayed proclaiming the legislation dead, he said, because some Democrats pressed him to force a test vote that would underline the Republican opposition even if it could not succeed.

Simpson faces his potential jurors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson quietly sang, "A new day has begun ... " before facing some of his potential jurors Monday as the most-watched murder trial in U.S. history got under way.

Jury candidates were identified only by numbers, and the first to be questioned was No. 0032. Simpson wore No. 32 as a college and professional football star, and that didn't go unnoticed.

"I don't know if this is an omen," said Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

After questioning potential jurors about whether serving would be a hardship, Ito excused 112 of the first 219 called.

The judge divided those remaining into groups who said they definitely could serve and those who said they might be able to, then asked them one-by-one to explain their positions. Sixty-five had said they definitely could serve.

Of those called, 212 reported Monday and had to pass a phalanx of news crews, demonstrators and entrepreneurs outside the courthouse hawking everything from T-shirts and caps to buttons reading: "O.J. Juror Reject, Didn't Make the Cut."

Inside, they gathered in a large 11th-floor jury assembly room, and Ito introduced the principal players in the case, including Simpson. The former football star then stood up and said, "Good afternoon."

He is charged with the slaying deaths of ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman on June 12.

Simpson sat at a table, hands in his lap, and tried to make eye contact with the jury candidates, but few looked at him.

Just before they were brought in, he hummed and sang quietly. A pool reporter could make out the words, "A new day has begun ... " but didn't know the name of the song.

"This is probably the most important decision you'll make in your personal life," Ito told the group. "It's the most important decision of any American citizen. I need a fair jury."

Among those excused were at least one person who was physically disabled and some whose employers would pay for only 10 days of jury service.

Hawkers, barkers swarm courthouse for first day of trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A radio station had promised the start of the O.J. Simpson trial Monday would be a circus. The acrobats and jugglers didn't make it, but the scene outside the courthouse was still, well, a circus.

Hawkers offered Simpson memorabilia and barkers advocated causes ranging from religion to children's programs at the YMCA.

Media trailers filled a nearby parking lot and hot dog vendors competed with caterers who delivered meals to some news organizations.

On Sunday, KIIS-FM took out a full-page ad in the the Los Angeles Times featuring a picture of acrobats and promising a "Media Circus provided by Circus Vargas."

The station ended up not hiring the performers.

"It was a last minute decision ... you can only be so irreverent. We wanted to be involved, but it's not something that is totally congruent to humor," said Steve Perun, program director for KIIS-FM. He said the ad had cost about $20,000.

Simpson faces two first-degree murder charges in the June 12 stabbing deaths of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman.

About 200 people, mostly reporters, crowded the downtown street outside the block-long courthouse. They were kept at bay by orange pylons and rope that carved out an aisle for attorneys and potential jurors to walk down the stairs to the building's entrance.

"It's very annoying," defense attorney David Herriford said as he waited for an elevator inside the building.

Winning platform endorses 'right to be dumb, ugly and rich'

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — He promised to support impotent men and vowed to improve the weather. His platform endorsed "the right to be dumb, ugly and rich." He called his campaign a practical joke.

But the joke may be on Danish voters, who elected Jacob Haugaard to Denmark's parliament Wednesday. A popular musician, stand-up comedian and actor, Haugaard heads "The Party of Deliberate Work-Shy Elements."

"It's incredible that I got elected on this twaddle," Haugaard, 42, told a Danish newspaper Thursday.

While the top parties tried to rebuild a Cabinet after an election that toppled Denmark's government, Haugaard was relishing his victory as the first independent parliamentarian since the 1950s.

A self-proclaimed "court jester" running for the eighth time, Haugaard captured more than 23,000 votes in elections for the 179-seat assembly.

His platform was clear: "Shorter queues at supermarkets' cash registers, the right to be dumb, ugly and rich and bachelors to single mothers."

His seven previous campaigns were "practical jokes," he told the newspaper Ekstra Bladet.

"And my time in the (parliament) will be the same," promised Haugaard, elected in Aarhus, Denmark's second largest town.

But Haugaard could play a key role if the Social Democratic Party or the Liberal-Conservative opposition stand even on an issue. And some people weren't laughing at his election.

"Seriously, I think that there are greater expectations (of politicians) in the population," said interim Prime Minister Poul Nyrup Rasmussen, who resigned Thursday after his government's surprising election defeat.

Haugaard, who has refused to say which party he supports, performed his first task as legislator Thursday when he met Queen Margrethe II. The queen will ask the party with the most support to form a government.

Sporting his trademark three-piece suit made of coffee sack cloths, Haugaard showed up to see the monarch bearing flowers and wearing a multicolored tie, a large gray hat and a long brown leather coat.

Asked afterward which party he would support, Haugaard was categorical: "I didn't side with anyone, not even with myself."

Election expert Soren Risbjerg Thomsen told Danish radio that Haugaard was mainly elected by left-wingers and first-time voters.

"Politicians may behave a little ridiculous sometimes and people feel that they can just as well vote for a comic," Risbjerg Thomsen said.

Fergie would like reconciliation, her father says

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York's father says his daughter would love to return to her estranged husband, Prince Andrew, a newspaper reported.

Maj. Ronald Ferguson was interviewed by the Daily Mail, which is to serialize his book, "The Galloping Major," about his family's relationship with the royal family.

His daughter Sarah separated in March 1992 from Prince Andrew, the second son of Queen Elizabeth II. They appear to enjoy each other's company when they are photographed occasionally with their two young daughters.

"I believe Sarah does love Andrew and he'd have her back tomorrow," Ferguson was quoted as saying.

Blair murder trial

The capital murder trial of Michael Blair is again drawing heightened media attention from the Dallas area, since attorneys are expected to reach closing arguments later this week. Jurors spent most of Monday watching 10 hours of taped police interrogation of Blair. The defense will continue to present its case today. The video tapes consist mostly of Blair talking to an off-camera police officer about his whereabouts during the disappearance of Ashley Estell and the details of his prior conviction for burglary and molestation of an 11-year-old girl in 1988. Blair is accused of kidnapping and strangling 7-year-old Estell in September of 1993 at a Plano park.

State official pushes voter registration

Secretary of state tries to stir excitement about November election

Jayne Krawietz and Karen Nicholson, right, both with the Midland League of Women Voters, listen as Texas Secretary of State Ron Kirk tells of his office's attempts to re-register voters who were purged from voter lists across the state.

Texas Secretary of State Ronald Kirk was in Midland Monday in an effort to get people "excited and zealous" about voting.

Texas' chief election officer and the League of Women Voters have been out encouraging people to register by Oct. 9 to be eligible to vote in the Nov. 8 general election.

"We are on a statewide tour trying to get all the top 16 major media markets," Kirk said.

This week — Sept. 24 to Oct. 1 — has been designated voter's registration week by Gov. Ann Richards.

"There's no excuse for people not to register," Kirk said. "It is not true that one individual vote doesn't count."

Kirk pointed out that only 8.1 million Texans are registered to vote. Texas has an estimated voting population of 13 million.

"Over four or five elections we hovered at around 50 percent (turnout

Attorney general GOP candidate blasts Morales for state prisons

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Republican candidate for the post of Texas attorney general, Don Wittig of Houston, castigated incumbent Dan Morales for failing to properly protect the state from federal "micromanagement."

Morales has failed, Wittig said, to "fight for Texas' sovereignty." At the center of Wittig's argument with Morales is the Texas prison system, which Wittig maintains is being managed by the federal government.

"One of my first acts as attorney general will be to retake control of our prisons," Wittig said. "We will overturn the Holiday Inn-style prison system cre-

Incumbent judge for appeals court stumps in Midland

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

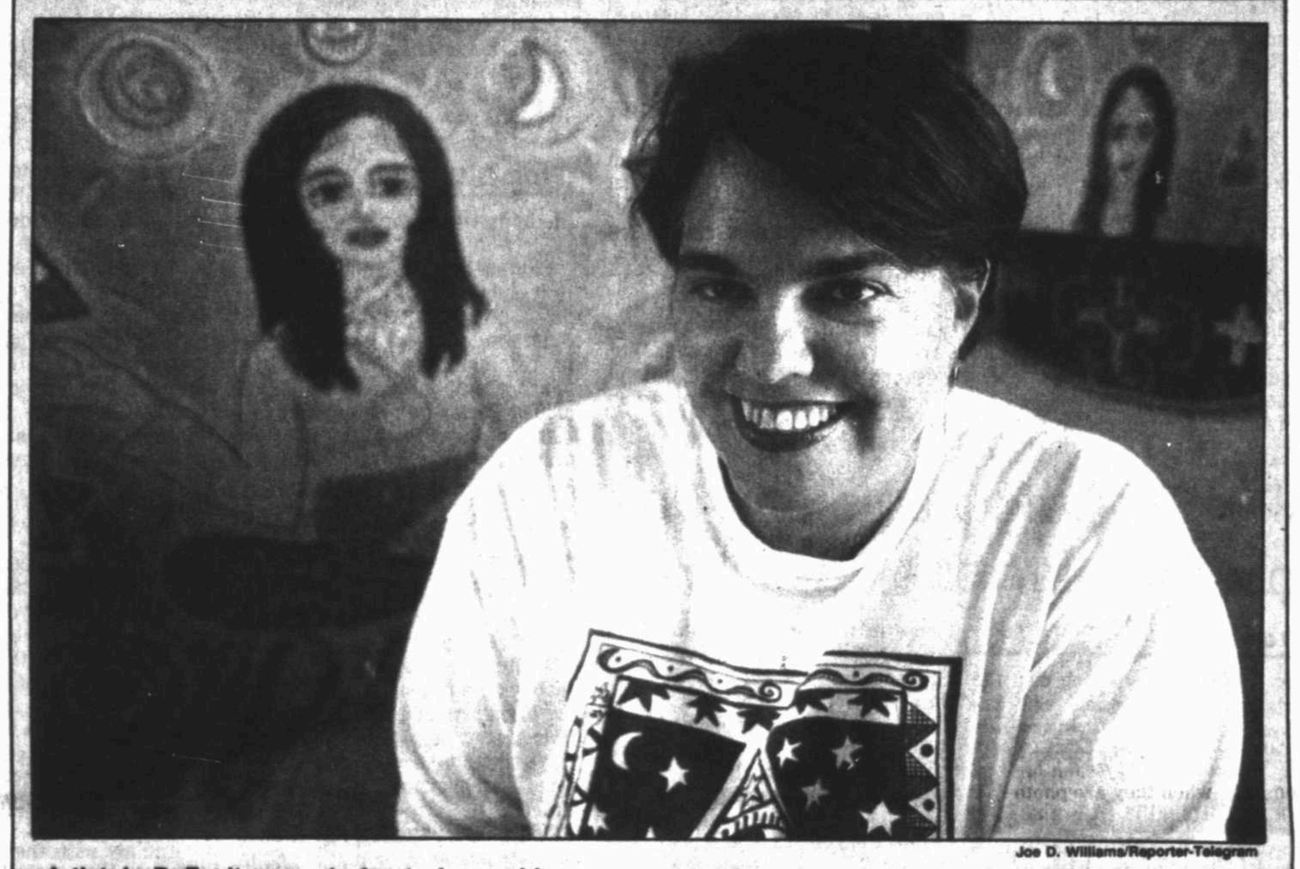

During a re-election campaign stop in Midland Monday, Judge Charles "Chuck" Campbell, Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, asked a group of prosecutors and defense attorneys to spread the word about the most qualified candidate.

The incumbent said he expects a close race this November largely due to voters' general lack of knowledge when it comes to Court of Criminal Appeals elections. Campbell said he hopes to let voters know the best candidate through word-of-mouth by those familiar with the court such as criminal law attorneys and through newspaper endorsements.

Work helps artist overcome painful childhood

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Jo Dufo sat in her tiny art gallery — which is simply an extension of her home — and explained why the clothes and furniture decorated with boldly colored peace symbols, crosses and funky people helped her not only make money, but deal with a painful childhood.

"I lost my mother when I was young," said Ms. Dufo, whose real name is DuFault. "When a child loses their mother, they lose their reference point. I went through total rebellion. But art gives you grounding.

It was a way for me to become more independent, to make money, also," she continued. "It was something I loved that I could make into a career."

Her decision to become an artist has paid off for Ms. Dufo, both personally and professionally. She has opened Jo Dufo Designs in Midland, where her bold decorations and messages of peace and love have transformed into a brisk business, which includes T-shirts designed for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

In addition, she said her craft has helped her become more in tune with herself.

"You can be anything you want to be in art," she said. "It helps you develop as a spiritual person."

She gives part of the credit for her business to her husband, William DuFault.

"He designs the furniture," she said. "He is very talented. He is also a graphics designer. He's the technology behind the business."

Participants get ready for this year's Feed For Need cook-off

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Preparations are under way for the 10th Annual Feed For Need cook-off, which is set for this weekend at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

"Because this year marks our 10th anniversary, we are planning on a bigger and better cook-off," said Lee Roy Childress, president of the Permian Basin Cook-off, Inc.

Numerous activities are planned for Friday and Saturday, according to coordinator Sue Polson. Gates open Friday at 5 p.m. for the dance, to begin at 7 p.m. with "Jerry Dugan & Westwind."

Games and contests are scheduled prior to the dance, Friday. Most of the cook-off's barbecue pit crews will begin setting up that day.

All cooks must be registered by 8:30 a.m. Saturday to compete in the various cooking events. Cooks will be judged in four categories including chili, brisket, fajitas and ribs.

Seminar to give tips on Walmart to retailers

Staff Report

A seminar — "Coexisting with Walmart" — is scheduled for 1 p.m. today at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification and will teach area businesses how to survive today's ever-increasing competition from the retail giant.

The seminar will be headed by Don Taylor, executive director of the Panhandle Small Business Development Center at Amarillo, and will provide retailers with practical lessons on how to deal with mass mercandisers like WalMart.

Americans already seem to have lost interest in events in Haiti

More rambling thoughts . . .

— Don't you just hate those people who start to say something and then, about halfway through the sentence, begin to mumble to the point where you can't even understand what they're saying?

— It probably wasn't all that important, but once I get started with something I like to finish it, even if it is a boring conversation.

— Running through an airport in a frantic attempt to make your flight can be terribly exciting, provided, of course, you make it in time.

— There are a lot unhappy looking people in this world.

— If you had six months to spare, it might be kind of interesting to be a juror in the O.J. Simpson trial.

— Question: How many books will result from the entire Simpson ordeal?

— Perhaps the saddest commentary on today's society is that it has become almost routine to read newspaper stories about children killing children.

— People who constantly clear their throats should be shot.

— It's odd, I suppose, but you can usually tell a person by the sound he makes when he walks.

— I recently heard my first commercial referring to Christmas shopping.

— Once they start airing those dreadful collections of favorite Christmas carols, as sung by (fill in the blank), then we'll know the holiday season has definitely arrived.

POLICE REPORTS

Arrest

The arrest of three Midland men Monday may have closed at least 40 vehicle burglary cases in northwest and central Midland, according to police officials.

Sgt. David Garcia said police detectives working on the incidents, which have all occurred in the past two weeks, arrested Joshua Justin Brooks, 20, Patrick Matthew Kuzmich and Chad Andrew Butler, both 19, after one of the three confessed to the crimes and identified the other two suspects. All three were charged with burglary of a vehicle and engaging in organized criminal activity.

Burglary of a Vehicle: A stereo was reported taken from a vehicle at 1202 W. Cuthbert Ave. at 1:31 p.m.

Anyone having information concerning these incidents should contact the Police Department at 685-7108 or Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

COOK-OFF: Many activities to occur over weekend

(From 1B)

Net proceeds from the charity event will primarily benefit the Make a Wish Foundation and the Allison Cancer Center Look-Good Feel-Good Shop. Depending on the amount of proceeds, there are other charities to benefit as well, Ms. Polson said. "We try to keep people not funded by the United Way. And we keep the money in the Permian Basin," she said.

Saturday's events includes volleyball, horseshoes, washer pitching and other activities. A silent auction will include such items as cellular telephones, dinners and rare prints.

Cooking teams will be judged for best cooking rig, best campsite, friendliest camp and most unique camp.

Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys gear up for the evening dance at 8 p.m.

Entry fees for Friday are $3 and $7 for Saturday. Tickets for both days are $8.

This year, the initial entry fee has been reduced to $25 per event or $100 to enter all four classes, coordinators said.

"Another budget cutter for you and your sponsors — we no longer require pounds and pounds of meat to be cooked and turned in to serve the public. This year, we only require that you provide us with a small amount of uncooked meat.

"Chili cooks will not be required to turn in any uncooked chili meat, simply because we will not be serving chili to the public. Brisket cooks must turn in a six-to-eight pound uncooked brisket, fajita cooks — five pounds uncooked fajita meat and rib cooks — four racks of uncooked pork ribs," said Boomer Kingston, chairman of the Judging/Rules Committee.

Meat must be turned in Friday after setup or before 8:30 a.m. Saturday. More than 50 teams are expected to participate this year, Ms. Polson said.

For more information on events or registering for a cooking team, call Ms. Polson at 682-1664 or Judy Makowsky at 571-3132.

JUDGE: Campbell makes campaign stop in Midland life to do what I do right now," he said.

Campbell — a Democrat — was first elected to the Court of Criminal Appeals in 1982 and re-elected in 1988. A board certified specialist in criminal law for almost 20 years, Campbell's experience includes working as an adjunct professor of legal research, an assistant attorney general, a district attorney and a county attorney.

Campbell said his opponent, Republican and Houston attorney Steve Mansfield, is not qualified to sit on the court. Campbell said he has no knowledge that Mansfield has ever tried a major felony case or appealed a major felony case.

Mansfield could not be reached for comment Monday. In a past interview with the Reporter-Telegram, Mansfield said he primarily practices civil law although he practiced criminal law early in his career.

Campbell emphasized the need to carefully consider Court of Criminal Appeals candidates' qualifications in light of crime being — according to polls — the number one public concern.

"If that is the number one concern of people, it would seem people would be concerned about who serves on the Court of Criminal Appeals," he said.

But uninformed voters coupled with a near-even split in Republicans and Democrats across the state means the election will be close, Campbell said.

"I don't expect to win this county at all, but I would like to do some damage control in this county," Campbell said.

Among those who showed up to support Campbell on Monday was Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre, a Republican.

ness, Ms. Dufo is looking past the little room at her home. She has several plans for the future, including working with troubled children and getting a master's degree in counseling.

"One of my goals is to start a non-profit organization using mural painting to work with troubled kids, including gangs," she said. "These kids need a non-judgmental atmosphere to start expressing themselves. They need to be able to get in touch with themselves, to express their anger. They need to learn that they are not bad kids, they just have a lot pent up inside and need to learn to use their emotions for the better."

She has already gotten her message to the city of Midland with her project called City Art. After approaching the city about painting positive messages in murals around the city, she recently painted a mural on the side of Mr. M Food Store, 1100 N. Big Spring St.

She also hopes to take a group of children from California to New York, choosing a handful of sites at which to paint positive messages and murals.

"People, especially children, think they are without any power in their lives," she said. "But we are all spiritual beings, and that is our power center. We are often taught just to shut up and conform, and we lose faith in our abilities. It's there, and I want to help people get in touch with that power."

BLASTS: Wittig plans to retake control of state prisons

ated by Dan Morales," he said.

Wittig said that Amendment 50 of the new federal crime bill specifically gives states the option of reopening any federal suit regarding prison space every two years. It is under this amendment that Wittig intends to reopen the federal suit and overturn the "Ruiz settlement," he said.

"This amendment gives Texas absolute authority to challenge the settlement and retake control of our prison system. Finally, the legislature, not the weak politicians and convict lawyers, can decide how to lock up criminals. Public policy can be made in public hearings, rather than in a back room by a bunch of lawyers," Wittig said.

Wittig maintains the Ruiz settlement placed a cap on prison space, costs taxpayers $714 million over five years and has left 5,000 prison beds empty.

Officials with the Morales campaign, however, say Wittig is completely wrong in his conceptions of the Ruiz settlement.

"It is hard to believe that after 12 months of campaigning, Don Wittig still doesn't understand the Ruiz settlement," said Morales Campaign Director Mary Elizabeth Jackson.

Ms. Jackson said the settlement, organized by Morales, takes back control of Texas' prisons from the federal government. The settlement removes all caps from the prison system as well, Ms. Jackson said, in direct contrast to Wittig's statements.

"All decisions regarding inmates' time and facilities are currently being made by Texas system leaders and not by federal courts," Ms. Jackson said. "I don't believe the citizens of Texas would support reopening the Ruiz settlement," she said.

Wittig disagrees. "Overturning Ruiz would be the single most effective step Texas could take to stop violent crime. It would be a strategic victory in the war on crime. . . . We could finally keep violent offenders off the street."

among registered voters) in governor's races. We hope to do better than that," Kirk said.

Midland County Election Administration officials joined Kirk in his push to increase registration and voter turnout.

Currently, there are approximately 52,651 Midlanders registered to vote.

Within the next few weeks, various civic organizations will be setting up booths and going door to door to register people. Registration applications are also available at the Elections Administration office, 709 W. Washington Ave.

Interested Midlanders can register to vote in person at the Elections Administration office through the 7th of October. Mail-in registrations must be postmarked on or before Oct. 10.

Early voting will begin Oct. 19 and continue, intermittently, through Nov. 4.

Among the political offices that Midland voters will help decide are: U.S. senator, U.S. representative (Districts 19, 21 and 23), governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, comptroller, treasurer, general land office commissioner, agriculture commissioner, railroad commissioner (two places), Supreme Court (three places), court of criminal appeals (two places), state board of education, state senator (District 31), state representative (District 82) and justice for 8th Court of Appeals (two places).

Other seats are: district judge (238th, 385th and 318th Districts), county judge, county court at law judge, district clerk, county clerk, county treasurer, county commissioner (precincts 2 and 4) and justice of the peace.

Day honors former elections administrator

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Texas and United States flags at the Midland County Courthouse and Elections Administrations office will be flown at half-staff today in honor of Bettye Calvert, the county's elections administrator who died last week at age 67.

The county commissioners Monday deemed today "Bettye F. Calvert Day."

Mrs. Calvert had been elections administrator since December 1985, when she succeeded Janeice Builta, who, too, died in office.

The successor to Mrs. Calvert is to be named at 9 a.m. Thursday when the Midland County Election Commission meets in the Commissioners' Courtroom in the Midland County Courthouse.

The court's resolution said she had been "recognized as the most knowledgeable and efficient elections administrator in the State of Texas."

"Though she is gone," the resolution said, "Bettye F. Calvert's impartial and even-handed devotion to the electoral process in Midland County shall live in the hearts of all of us forever. She was loved and respected by many and shall be missed by all."

The resolution was signed by Seltzer and the four commissioners, Henry Goulet, Guy McCrary, Louisa Valencia and Winfree Brown.

Special committee proposes plan for school construction funding

■ Panel recommends use of $261 million in new state money.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A special Senate committee on Monday proposed funding public school construction with an estimated $261 million in new state money, an amount that a lawyer for poor school districts called inadequate.

The proposal would finance the debt service on about $2 billion in new construction debt, said Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, head of the Senate Interim Committee on Public School Facilities.

After a report is finalized, the recommendation will go to Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who presides over the full Senate. The Legislature meets in regular session in January.

Al Kauffman, a lawyer for property-poor school districts that 10 years ago sued in state court over education financing, said there are positive aspects to the proposal but that it doesn't go far enough.

"There's certainly too little funding in it to solve the problem or even to address the problem thoroughly," Kauffman said.

Bivins said he believed the proposal "would cover all of the pent-up need that we've heard people talk about, and I believe is a conservative estimate in terms of our ability to pay."

Kauffman said some estimates show about $3 billion a year is spent on construction, renovation and debt service in school districts. About $500 million a year of that currently comes from the state, he said.

Senators said they believe the $3 billion estimate is too high.

Under the proposal, state funding for construction would be based on a school district's wealth and tax rate, as is state maintenance-and-operations funding.

The need for building or renovating school facilities would be made at the local level by school districts and their voters.

That means if approved locally, state funds for school construction could be spent on football stadiums instead of classrooms. But Bivins stressed that most school construction is instruction-related.

Kauffman said it's good that state money would be allocated based on school district wealth.

Representatives of urban and rural school districts also expressed concern about parts of the proposal, while nevertheless calling it a significant step.

The Senate committee was formed after State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin last year ordered lawmakers to come up with a way to equitably fund school construction by Sept. 1, 1995.

If lawmakers fail, McCown said he will stop issuance of new school bonds.

McCown's ruling came in the long-running lawsuit property-poor school districts seeking equal financial footing with wealthier ones. The school funding system relies on state aid and local property taxes.

Lubbock voters to decide if city needs $39 million arena

LUBBOCK (AP) — Months of speculation ended last week when City Council members chose a vacant lot near the Civic Center as the place to build a $39 million arena.

Now voters must decide whether to replace the 40-year-old Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, which has no air conditioning, with a new facility for basketball games, concerts and other events.

The referendum is set for Jan. 21. If approved, the arena would be paid for with a three-eighths-cent sales tax.

A public hearing drew dozens of citizens — some speaking out against a tax increase, others arguing that a 13,000-seat arena could boost tourism and regional prestige for Lubbock.

"Our ability to improve our (city) has a direct impact on our ability to attract new companies and to stimulate existing businesses," said Joe McKay, vice chairman of the Chamber of Commerce.

Bob Bockrath, Texas Tech athletic director, urged even more seats.

"We should build the facility for the next 50 years, and for that reason, it should seat 15,000 people!"

Talk of building a new arena gained momentum after city officials commissioned a feasibility study in 1991. The arena push also won greater attention with Texas Tech's planned membership in the Big 12 Conference.

Supporters envision a facility with sky boxes and a floor big enough for ice hockey.

Houston woman wins $41 million in record Lotto jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) — Jean Graham, a nurse from Houston, easily could have missed becoming Lotto Texas' largest individual winner with a jackpot worth $41.8 million.

Feeling ill last week, Mrs. Graham, 64, was told by her doctor to go home and rest. But she decided to stop first and buy a lotto ticket.

When picking numbers, Mrs. Graham considered changing one to coincide with her and her husband, Burnie's, 48th wedding anniversary.

But she decided to stay with the previous anniversary.

The result: Mrs. Graham was the only player to pick all six of the winning numbers Wednesday to become the largest single winner of Lotto Texas with a jackpot totaling $41,762,409. The previous largest single Lotto Texas winner was Wanda Wilson of Houston, who won $41.5 million in February.

Mrs. Graham said when she found out she had won, "I went kind of bonkers for a few minutes, and then called the kids and said, 'Get here. Y'all are millionaires.'"

On Monday, Mrs. Graham, Burnie, and several family members picked up a check for $2,090,409, the first of 20 annual installments.

"We need to get on our knees and thank God that we've got this," said Mrs. Graham. "And we need to do something for some other people."

A labor and delivery nurse at Baycoast Medical Center in Baytown where she works 12-hour days, Mrs. Graham said she probably will retire soon.

She said she picked the numbers, as she always has, by using family birthdays and the number of years she had been married.

"When I bought my ticket the other day, I was going to change it to 48 because we just had an anniversary," she said. But, she said, she decided to stay with 47. The winning numbers were 7, 10, 16, 17, 23 and 47.

She said she and Burnie plan to buy a new house and take a cruise. Her mother said she wanted a fire-engine red Lincoln Town Car, so Mrs. Graham said she will buy that too.

She also said the winnings will be split with their son and daughter.

World War II veteran seeks boy who saved his life 50 years ago

By Jerry Harkavy
Associated Press

SANFORD, Maine — With his 79th birthday just around the corner, Phillip J. Roy knows he may not have much time left to find the answer.

He wants to know what happened to the 12-year-old French boy who came to his World War II foxhole and told him the location of German forces and mines — information he is convinced saved his life and the lives of his fellow GIs 50 years ago this month.

Roy is returning to France on Oct. 6 with only a name, a snapshot and two return addresses on letters written in 1944 to guide him.

Roy was a rifleman with the 29th Infantry Division, which landed at Omaha Beach on D-Day and advanced into central France.

Roy, who spoke French, befriended young Claude Ganaye near Brest and gave him food and a pair of shoes. The boy had been sharing his only pair of shoes with his father.

"He had never seen white bread before, and he called it cake," Roy recalled.

Claude told Roy about a field planted with German mines, and gave the locations of German troops and weapons emplacements.

"We took 40 prisoners without losing a man, without any casualties at all," Roy said.

The soldier gave Claude his home address before his unit moved on through France.

The boy wrote two letters to Roy's wife, Louise, and sent her the snapshot. His correspondence contained two addresses, one in Brest and one in the nearby village of Quilbignon. That was the last Roy heard of him.

After his wife died in November, Roy decided it was time to tie up loose ends. His three children agreed.

"It's just been hounding my dad. So we said, 'Why don't we go to France? Why don't we see what we can do?'" said Linda Kilgour of Bangor.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Shun casual romantic encounters while searching for a partner who shares your high ideals. Devotion to a stable home life is a must! Relatives could play a major role in a financial success you enjoy in December. Although business propositions will be plentiful early in 1995, only a few will be worth considering. Your analytical mind enables you to spot the weakness in a highly touted plan. Speak up!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Wilford Brimley, American patriot Samuel Adams, golfer Kathy Whitworth, actress Sada Thompson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A partner could fall victim to wishful thinking now. It is up to you to get things back on track. A gentle approach will work better than criticism. Be sympathetic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A legal matter can be settled in your favor. Get your facts and figures straight before you ask someone to represent you. Your honesty will attract a soul mate. Do your own dirty work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Launch a pet project today; luck is on your side. Stick to what you know best. A newcomer may be difficult to read. Why try? Rely on information and people you can check out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not a good week to take unnecessary risks. Refuse to become entangled in a friend's crazy schemes. Students would be smart to hit the books this evening. Review bank statements for possible errors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your mate or business partner will go along with your suggestions today. Show appreciation. Adventure beckons! Delegate household chores to youngsters who want to learn and share.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creative ideas abound this week. Jot them down for future reference. Self-improvement activities prove more fun than anticipated. Keep any diet and exercise resolutions. News from your family will send your spirits soaring.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your good deeds will not go unrewarded. A romance with an older person could be the real thing. Leave nothing to chance where a business deal is concerned. Meet with new people this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The emphasis today is on teamwork and cooperation. New business will result from a group effort. Seek investment advice from the experts. A former foe could do a complete about-face. Seek the limelight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Search for knowledge and you will find the truth. A business deal shapes up according to plan. Take advantage of a unique career opportunity. New financial options could help a family situation. Persevere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your timing is superb! A last-minute schedule change will work in your favor. Romance is in the air. Use diplomacy to settle any differences of opinion on the home front. Suggest a compromise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A work deadline requires your full attention now. Someone challenges you to make a dream come true. Your enthusiasm for a special project could be dampened by someone's comments. Patience is essential for progress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others will be happy to make concessions if you explain your situation. Stay alert! An old friend or relative could hold the key to a major financial or career triumph. Socialize with newcomers tonight.

The bidding:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH
1♠	Dbl	Pass	2♡
Pass	2♠	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠

Bidding calamities can befall anyone. We remember well one in a major championship — a world-ranked pair lingered in two diamonds doubled and vulnerable with a singleton ace opposite a low doubleton — no great success. Once in a while, however, an accident in the auction can reap an unexpected reward.

South intended two spades as a cue-bid, creating a forcing-to-game situation. North interpreted the sequence as showing a good spade suit, hence the pass. To take that position without any proof that East was psyching would have been grounds for acquittal for any assault and battery charge that South might have committed against partner.

Not surprisingly, West led a trump, and the ten forced declarer's ace. Declarer decided that the contract stood no chance unless East held at least three clubs, so the ace and king of clubs were cashed and a third club was led. West discarded a diamond (ruffing would not help) and declarer ruffed.

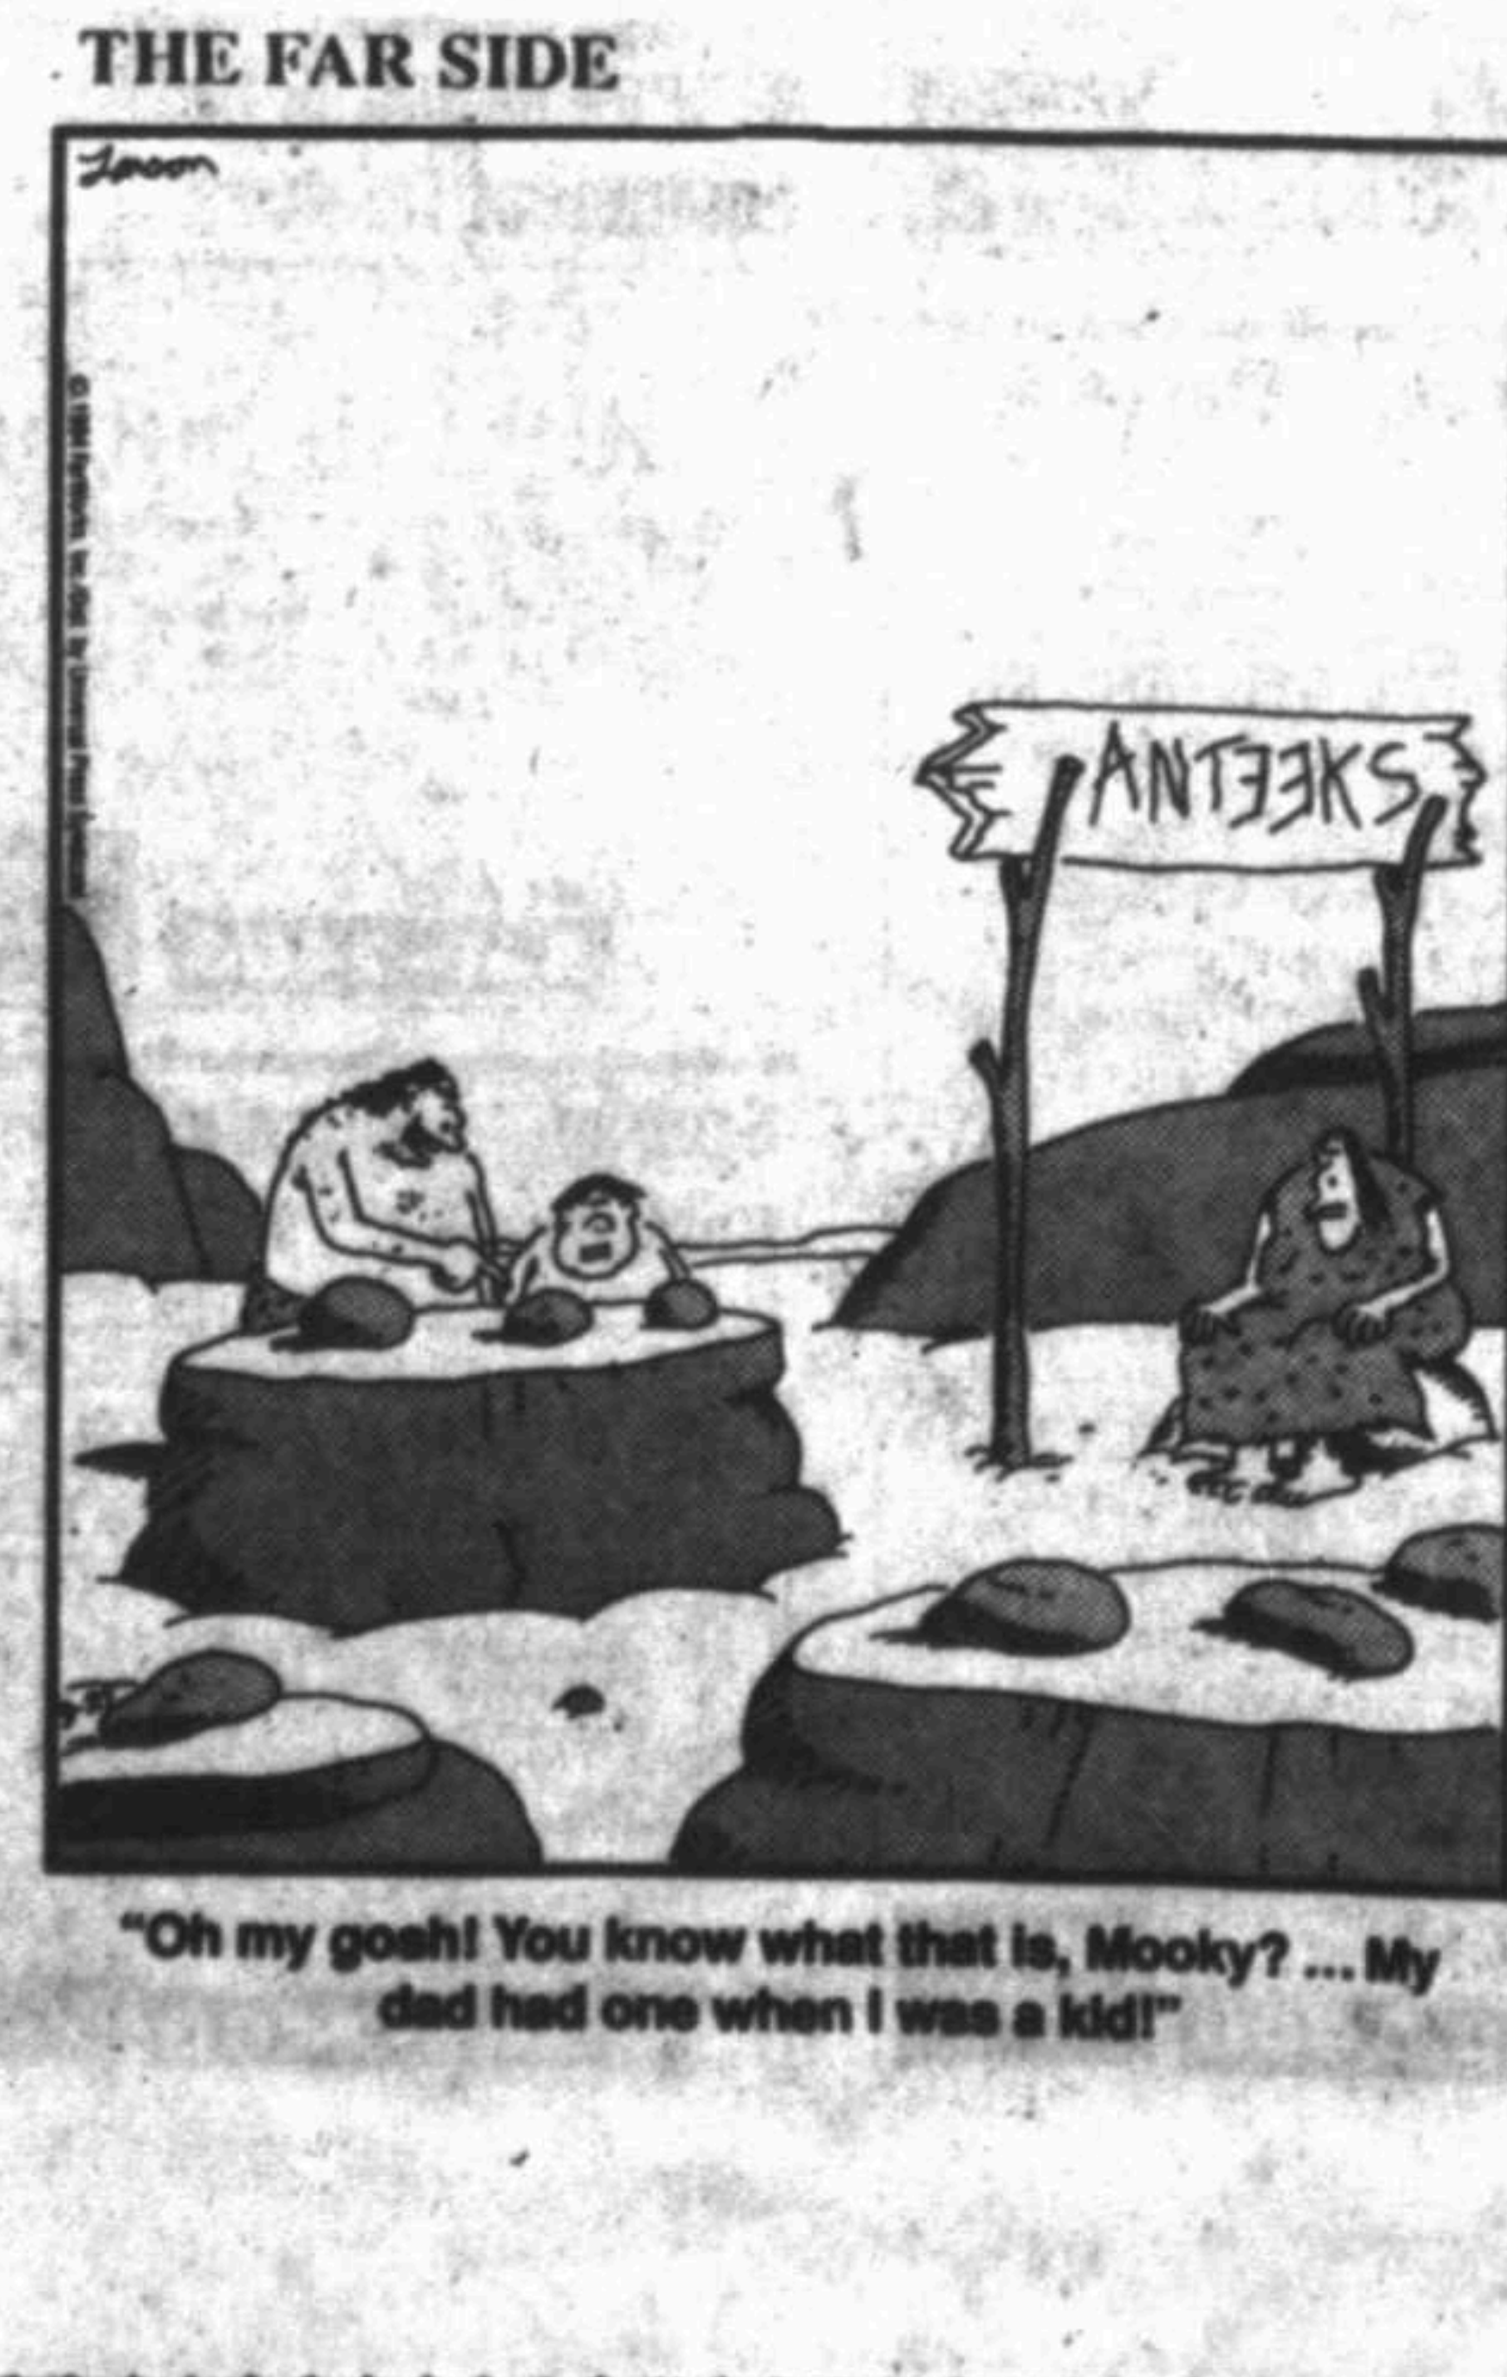

A diamond to the queen won and another club was led, ruffed on the table when East pitched the jack of diamonds. Declarer finessed the ten of diamonds and, though West ruffed this trick, declarer still had to score a heart and the ace of diamonds for a total of eight tricks — one trump, one heart, two diamonds, two clubs and two club ruffs.

That was an absolute top on the board. At every other table North-South were in two no trump or higher, with declarer going down one or two tricks depending on the defense and level of the contract.

Fergie's at center stage as curtain rises on season's royal soap opera

LONDON — The curtain rose Monday on the autumn season of Britain's royal soap opera, with the errant Duchess of York at center stage.

Fergie's father predicted in tell-all memoirs that she would be reconciled with Prince Andrew, while a rival newspaper said the couple have agreed to divorce.

Fergie, Andrew to reconcile — or divorce.

Either way, Maj. Ronald Ferguson's book about "back-biting toadies" at the court of Queen Elizabeth II and how his bored daughter sought solace with an American bachelor, heralds another round of front-page royal gossip.

For the queen, the book means fresh attention to the troubled love lives of her children and the rumors spread by friends, courtiers and occasionally royals themselves.

"The Major Ron book is a new frontier in royal indiscretion," said Peter McKay, a columnist for London's Evening Standard.

Ferguson, a former polo manager to Prince Charles, wrote that his daughter, the former Sarah Ferguson, would love to return to Andrew but feared the prince would not defend her against hostile courtiers.

"Most of them are more snobbish than even the most aloof member of the royal family," Ferguson wrote in "The Galloping Major," which is being serialized in London's Daily Mail.

Andrew and Sarah, both 34, separated in March 1992 after six years of marriage. The duchess lives in a rented house west of London with their children, Princess Beatrice, 6, and Princess Eugenie, 4.

The Yorks separated nine months before Andrew's older brother Charles parted company with Princess Diana.

WAYZATA, Minn. — Success has fresh meaning for singer Karyn White.

"Being able to have a successful career and have a family, it's very hard," she said. "I want my daughter to know she has a mother."

Between her last album, "Ritual of Love," in 1991, White married one of her producers, Terry Lewis. The couple have a daughter, Ashley, who turns 2 in November. White, 28, is stepmother to Lewis' two young children.

"I've redefined what success was," said White, whose new album, "Make Him Do Right," comes out this week. "Before, I was career-driven. Not that I'm not anymore. But there's other things beyond career in life. Success for me is being able to have both family and career."

NEW YORK — Tim Robbins has a thing for the King.

"I just have this unnatural fascination with Elvis," the star of the new movie "Shawshank Redemption" told Entertainment Weekly.

Actor Tim Robbins admits to a fascination with Elvis.

Robbins' wife, actress Susan Sarandon, gave him a Presley tapestry for Father's Day.

"I guess it reminds me of how important perspective is. You know, watch out or you might wind up wearing really silly costumes with Hawaiian leis," he said.

NEW YORK — There's a scene in "Quiz Show" that director Robert Redford knows all too well.

An obnoxious fan demands an autograph, chiding the star: "C'mon, don't be a snob."

Fans "don't care about you. What they care about is, 'Hey, look who I've seen,'" Redford said in the latest Entertainment Weekly.

Redford headed for the hills of Utah in the late 1970s and early '80s when fame became too much for him. But he said he stayed away too long.

"I got too far off the track," he said. "I went four years at a crack without acting or directing. And that was too long for me."

The setback was temporary. Redford, 57, has directed four movies and feels he no longer has to fight the pretty-boy image of his youth.

"Finally, you get old enough where you're not seen that way anymore. New people come in to occupy people's attention, so you no longer hold the same place," Redford said. "It makes it a little better for you."

PHILADELPHIA — Who would you rather fight, Larry Holmes or the devil?

Former boxer Marvis Frazier chose the latter Sunday, when he was ordained as a Pentecostal minister.

As a heavyweight, the son of former champ Joe Frazier believed God was imploring him to make the change. "But I kept ducking him," he said.

The younger Frazier, who retired from the ring in 1988, said he had been a decon in the church for 15 years.

DEAR ABBY

Spaying, neutering pets to control population is owners' responsibility

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the woman who was embarrassed to ask whether her tomcat could mate with a rabbit:

What she should really be embarrassed about is owning an unneutered male cat.

While it is true her cat cannot father "kittirabbits," unless he is neutered soon, he will undoubtedly be responsible for helping to produce many kittens, thereby contributing to the disgraceful situation of millions of animals being put to death because there are no homes for them.

In addition, Abby, when her tomcat is neutered, he will make a much more socially acceptable pet — and will stop trying to get funny with the bunny. — MARGARET MARSHALL IN SEATTLE

DEAR MARGARET: Your point is well-taken. And while we're on this important subject, all dog owners should have their pets spayed or neutered so that unwanted puppies won't have to meet a cruel end.

A well-to-do animal lover in Los Angeles contributes generously to the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), requesting that her contribution be used expressly for spaying and neutering. Perhaps others may want to do the same.

P.S. Sandy and Bob Miller of Ellicott City, Md., sent me an interesting chart distributed by The Maryland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals:

"Two uncontrolled breeding cats — plus all their kittens and all their kittens' kittens, if none are ever neutered or spayed, add up to: first year: 12; second year: 66; third year: 382; fourth year: 2,201; fifth year: 12,680; sixth year: 73,041; seventh year: 420,715; eighth year: 2,423,316; ninth year: 13,958,290.

Boggles your mind, doesn't it?

DEAR ABBY: A remarried widow wrote complaining about sleeping with her husband's two dogs, who kept her awake. You replied that maybe he should try to train the dogs to stay in a basket by the bed. From my experience, that will be hard to do.

During my college days, I had a little dog that slept with me in my sleeping bag. We were both freezing in a trailer. Years later, I left her with my Gramma when I was going to be out of the country. Gramma asked me to train her to sleep in a basket before I left. The pooch didn't understand, so I decided Gramma could set the new rules for the new place.

I returned a month later and found little black doggie hairs between Gramma's sheets. "What's this?" I asked.

"Well," Gramma blushed, "it was easier to teach an old Gramma new tricks." — S.K. CHEW, OREGON

DEAR ABBY: This may not help "Stumped in Delaware," who didn't know how to tell a man his zipper was open, but readers of your vintage (and mine) will surely enjoy the laugh.

My father, as he became older, also became slightly forgetful about zipping himself up. When this happened, Mother came up with a great reminder. She would softly sing "Zippity Doo Dah" as she went about her work or recreation.

It worked immediately — every time. — LOVE MY MEMORIES IN MENLO PARK, CALIF.

AT WIT'S END

Children don't see value of life same way as adults

I have attended more funerals around a toilet bowl than I care to remember.

Bombeck

As a caring, sensitive family, we have put to rest tropical fish that bellied up, 2-inch lizards that lived in a terrarium on the back of the commode and I suspect died of flush anxiety, and a couple of pet beetles that took part of my hall carpet with them when they went.

Larger animals were buried an inch below the ground around the swing set in match- and cigar boxes.

At the time the animals passed on, I, as a parent, felt a real need to explain the life/death process to my children. As with most parents, I probably told them more than they cared to know.

The Monterey County Herald in California ran a classic story about the death of a woman's dog. Pamela Ashby of Ventura said that when her aunt's beautiful dog died suddenly, she wanted to break the news in a kind way to her 5-year-old daughter. "We can all be happy now," she said, "that Frisky's up in heaven with God."

Her daughter replied patiently, "Mom! What's God going to do with a dead dog?"

Small children seem to be spared the realities of death — the finality, the loss, the realization that something that was alive is not coming back. An animal dies. They pick up a Slinky, and life goes on. Adults do not have that luxury. We are the ones who are left with the memories of a pet and loneliness.

When our children were in the formative years — whatever that means — we lived on a farm in Ohio, and my husband saw great possibilities in teaching them about life. One of his high-fever ideas was to get a dozen duck eggs and hatch them in the basement. The basement was a dirt-floor horror movie set that had snake skins hanging from the rafters and smelled like the underground sewer of a large city. I was terrified to go down there, but the kids pleaded, promised and begged that twice a day they would turn those eggs that were arranged under lights.

I never saw those kids again.

The lives of 12 ducks rested on my shoulders. After they hatched, it was my responsibility to build little rafts for them in my bathtub so they wouldn't drown. When I thought they could swim, I transported them in a brown grocery bag and launched them in our pond. A turtle pulled one under, I rescued the rest of them, and it was back to the bathtub. When they were older and on their own, I paid one of the kids $5 a week to feed them daily. So much for the value-of-life lesson.

You can't blame children. They're just too young to comprehend what is going on. I've always liked the story of the 4-year-old at his grandpa's funeral. To comfort his grandmother, he held up his favorite toy as a model and said, "We could have Grandpa stuffed." Everything is relative.

Discovery of ancient human ancestor may be 'tip of iceberg'

By Keay Davidson
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — More surprises may be in store at a paleontological dig in Ethiopia, where researchers have found the earliest known "direct ancestors of humanity," a top University of California-Berkeley scientist says.

The discovery of 4.4 million-year-old fossil remains of hominid creatures in the Ethiopian desert indicates human ancestors emerged almost a million years earlier than previously known.

But the discovery, announced Wednesday, may be just the tip of the iceberg, says Tim White of UC-Berkeley. White, with two colleagues, reported the find in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature.

"We have only begun to understand this ancestor and its environment," White says. "I am sure there are more surprises in store for us."

The fossils come from a creature with teeth and a skull similar to a chimpanzee's. It apparently foraged for food and hid from predators in the Ethiopian forest 4.4 million years ago.

The creature has been dubbed Australopithecus ramidus, or A. ramidus for short, say the authors of the Nature article: White and researchers Berhane Asfaw of the Ethiopian government's Paleoanthropology Laboratory and Gen Suwa of the University of Tokyo.

"This species is the oldest known link in the evolutionary chain that connected us to our common ancestor with the living African apes," White says. "The discovery takes us one major step closer to this common ancestor."

The discovery is another major clue in the step-by-step tracing of human origins, a paleontological detective job that has involved hundreds of fossil-hunters including White, Berkeley's Donald Johanson, Kenya's Richard Leakey and many others.

In recent years scientists have exploited a fairly new technique to trace human roots — the comparison of human genetic molecules with those of primeval ancestors — but old-fashioned fossil-hunting remains essential.

"When you combine these ... fossils with the evidence from the molecules, clearly Darwin was right: Humans evolved from an African ape," White says.

On Dec. 17, 1992, Suwa was strolling over the barren, pebble-strewn desert wastes at Aramis, Ethiopia, when he spotted a curious glint on the ground. He looked closer and realized it was a molar.

"I knew immediately it was a hominid," Suwa says. Further more, "Because we had found other ancient animals that morning, I knew it was one of the oldest hominid teeth ever found."

But where was the rest of the body? Suwa and his colleagues worked through 1993 to recover the rest of the fossil skeleton and fossils from related creatures.

Over many tedious hours, they lay on the desert ground and sifted through rock and dirt to find fossil fragments, which had to be distinguished from some 600 fossil remains of nonhominid animals.

Raveling hurt

LOS ANGELES — Southern Cal basketball coach George Raveling, who sustained multiple fractures and a collapsed lung in a car accident, probably won't need surgery but is expected to be hospitalized for up to two weeks.

Raveling, 57, fractured nine ribs, his collarbone and pelvis when his Jeep Cherokee collided with another car near the USC campus Sunday morning.

"George Raveling is in stable condition," Dr. Demetrios Demetriades, trauma director at USC University Hospital, said Monday.

Winning not Oilers' tonic

■ Houston has a win, but it doesn't feel much better than the losses.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers had to keep reminding themselves that they won the game.

They didn't sound like winners on Monday, the day after they beat the Cincinnati Bengals 20-13 for their first victory of the season.

"Our performance as a team was embarrassing," Ray Childress said. "If we'd lost this game, we couldn't have gone to our cars until dark."

They didn't look like winners either.

Cody Carlson showed up for the team meetings with a reddened nose that was broken in the third quarter of Sunday's game.

Starting running back Gary Brown was on crutches with a twisted ankle, and punt returner Travis Hannah's right knee was in a brace.

Even with all the injuries, the Oilers (1-3) were relieved to get that first victory.

"We started like the Mighty Ducks and finished like the Bad News Bears. We barely pulled this one out," linebacker Michael Barrow said.

However, the narrow victory over the Bengals (0-4) was not a confidence builder.

Carlson returned to the lineup after missing two games with a second-degree shoulder separation. He produced enough offense for a victory, but he was so rusty the fans were booing in the second half.

He got an A for bravery from his teammates, but it will take more efficiency to beat Pittsburgh on Monday night.

"Cody played his butt off with a broken nose and everything, but it's not enough to go out and beat quality teams," wide receiver Webster Slaughter said. "We have to do something to make our play better offensively."

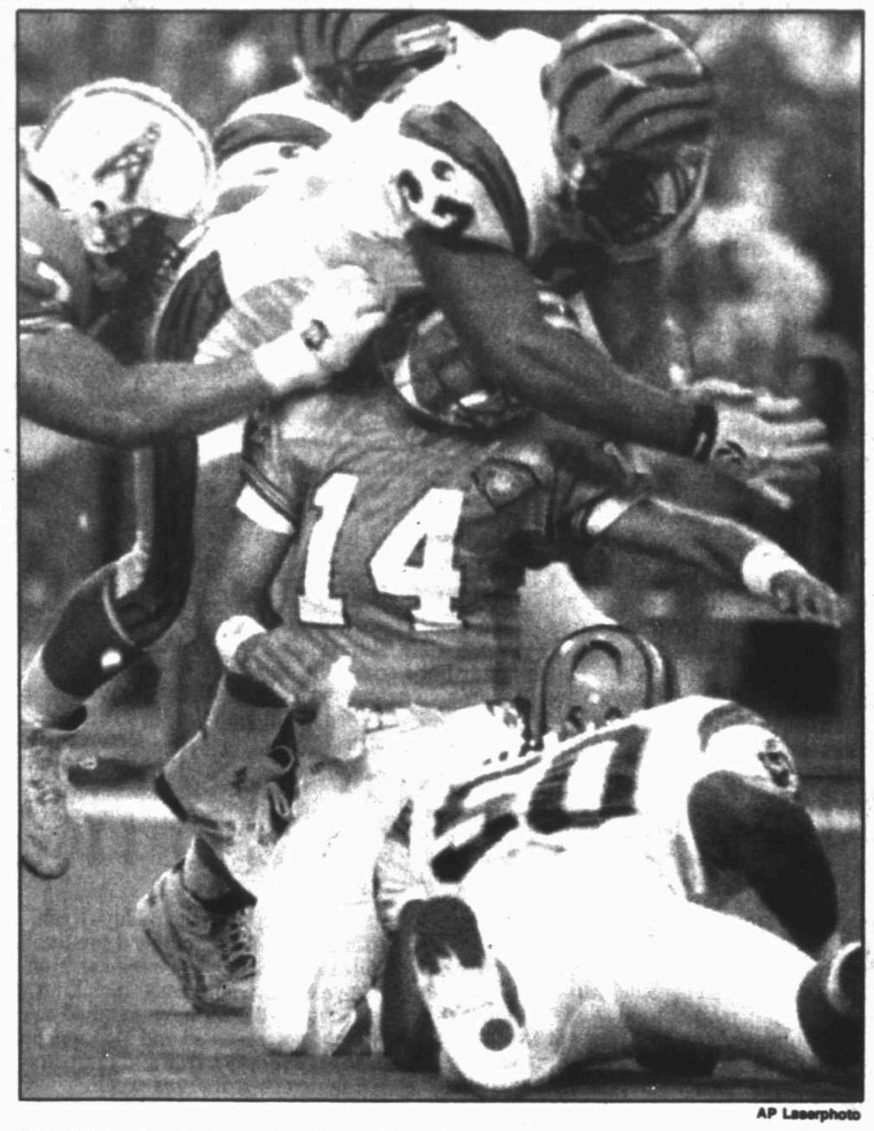

The Oilers were 1-4 last year when they beat New England to start an 11-game winning streak.

"When we lost those games last year, we were a lot better than we are right now," Slaughter said.

Carlson's nose was too swollen Monday to reset the bone. He'll have that done Tuesday, the team's day off, and expects to be back for practice on Wednesday.

"Offensively, we played better except for the quarterback position," Carlson said. "I hope the guys don't look at this game and say we're just not talented. We did some things better. I

Tech faces 'Home Boys'

■ Texas A&M has a 22-game winning streak at home waiting for the Red Raiders.

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK — Visiting teams to Kyle Field have come up short their past 22 attempts against Texas A&M. Next up: Texas Tech.

Saturday's game gives the Raiders the chance to end the nation's longest current home winning streak by beating the No. 10 Aggies in College Station.

Tech coach Spike Dykes offered some typical dry wit Monday in his assessment that "nobody's gotten a win down there lately."

Southern Mississippi became the latest Kyle Field victim last week as Texas A&M (3-0) claimed a 41-17 victory. The Aggies are 30-1-1 at home since R.C. Slocum became head coach in 1989.

Dykes said his players remain focused amid attention on A&M's streak and the expected sellout crowd.

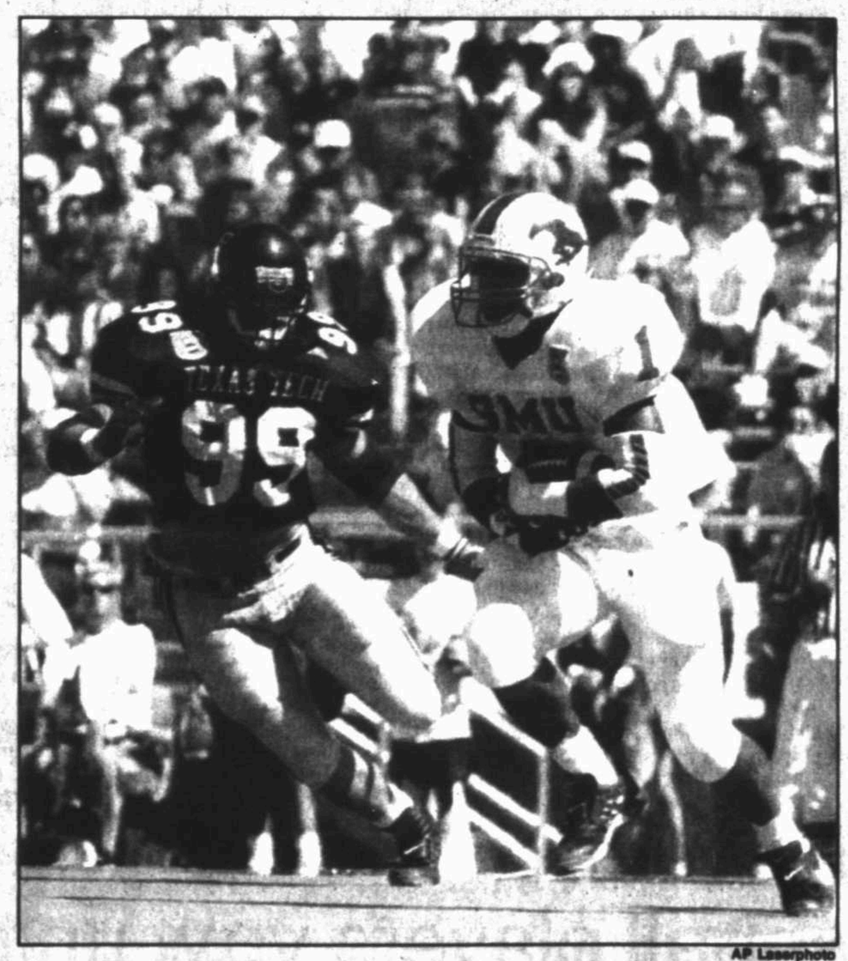

"There's an air of sportsmanship there that's unbelievable," Dykes said. "They're loud and they're all over things, but they're also good. It's really a lot of fun."

But while Texas A&M is opening Southwest Conference play against Tech (2-2, 1-0), the Aggies are ineligible for the SWC championship or any postseason bowl.

The Red Raiders — who haven't beaten the Aggies in their past four contests — put out their best performance so far this year in a 35-7 victory over Southern Methodist last week.

Baltimore fires Oates

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Johnny Oates, whose high-priced lineup did not produce enough to satisfy ownership, was fired as manager of the Baltimore Orioles on Monday night.

The Orioles were 63-49, second in the AL East, under Oates when the players went on strike Aug. 12. But new owner Peter Angelos had made it clear in the offseason that with the addition of free agents Rafael Palmeiro, Sid Fernandez and others, even more was expected.

"He has served the Orioles not only well as a coach and manager, but has shown much character in the process," general manager Roland Hemond said. "He is an extremely decent man and will leave with our gratitude and deep respect."

Oates became the third manager to be fired since the strike, following Hal McRae of Kansas City and Butch Hobson of Boston. Two general managers, Tom Grieve of Texas and Dal Maxvill of St. Louis, also have been dismissed.

The Orioles did not name a replacement. They reportedly have been interested in Oakland's Tony La Russa, whose contract expires shortly.

Oates took over as manager when Frank Robinson was fired in May 1991. In his first full season, the Orioles went 89-73 in 1992 and finished third and they were 85-77 in 1993.

"I want to thank the Baltimore Orioles organization for giving me the opportunity to manage at the major league level," Oates said in a statement released by the team.

"I leave the O's with my head held high," he said. "Last but not least, I would like to thank all the wonderful Orioles fans for their support and encouragement."

'Idle' win tougher for UT than TCU

■ Longhorns drop in AP poll after 34-18 win over the Horned Frogs.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — It's about respect.

Two weeks ago, Texas had the week off and climbed two spots to No. 15.

On Saturday, the Longhorns had their most convincing victory of the season, a 34-18 defeat of Texas Christian on the road, and dropped to No. 16.

"That proves a point doesn't it," Texas coach John Mackovic said with a smile Monday. "It proves 'idle' is pretty tough."

While Texas' third-year coach made light of the situation, Longhorn players were scratching their heads.

"What did they want us to do to TCU?" said running back Rodrick Walker, who rushed 17 times for 106 yards against the Horned Frogs.

"If we move up when we're idle, maybe we should just take the rest of the season off and they will give us the national championship," said linebacker Thomas Baskin.

One thing would cure any respect or image problem the Longhorns may be suffering: beating 5th-ranked Colorado (3-0) in a televised game in Austin on Saturday.

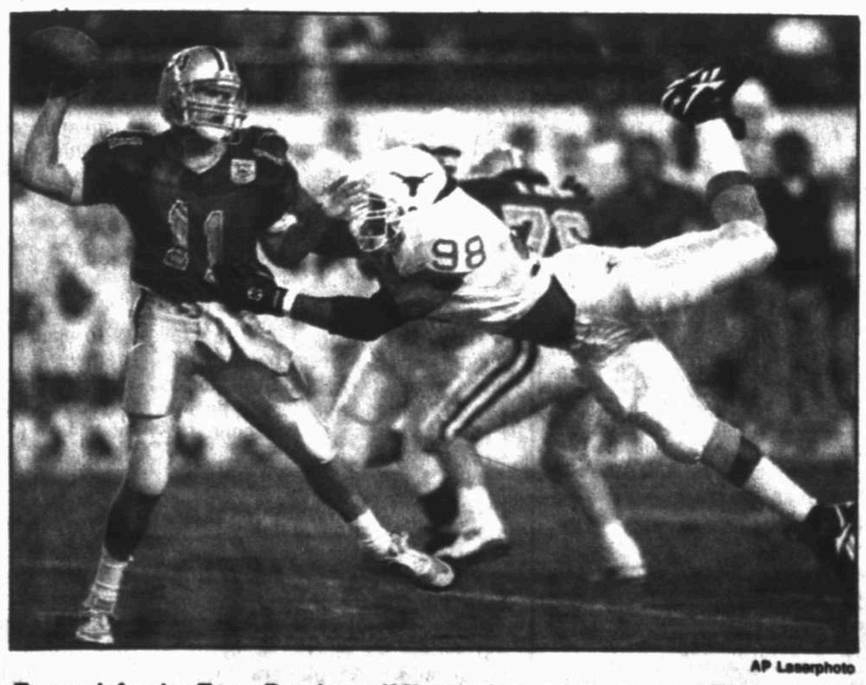

"This is the biggest game of the season for us because Colorado is a national power that brings a lot of exposure," said offensive tackle Blake Brockermeyer. "In order for Texas football to get going, it will be important for us to do well."

Texas has beaten Pittsburgh, Louisville and TCU to reach 3-0 for the first time since 1985. After a miserable defensive performance against Pittsburgh, in which the Longhorns yielded 251 yards to a single running back, Texas has toughened, holding TCU and Louisville to an average of 59 yards rushing.

Mackovic said his team's improved defense was a key to the Longhorns grabbing a 24-3 halftime lead against TCU and then closing out the victory.

"It was important for us to get control early," Mackovic said. "Our de-

Bills buck Broncos

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills and Denver Broncos both know the anguish of losing Super Bowls. The Broncos are learning a lot about the anguish of losing plain, old games.

Thurman Thomas ran for two late first-half touchdowns and Carwell Gardner scored early in the third quarter as the Bills beat the Broncos 27-20 Monday night in a meeting of the losers of seven of the last eight Super Bowls.

But the Bills didn't clinch it until John Elway threw out of the end zone from the 4-yard line with 21 seconds left in the game.

Denver, considered a Super Bowl contender when the season started, fell to 0-4. The only other time Denver began that badly was 1964 and it got Jack Faulkner fired as coach, a fate that could be awaiting Wade Phillips if Denver fans get their way.

The Bills took advantage of two turnovers for two TDs for 14 points in their spurt.

Thomas, who gained 103 yards in 17 carries before leaving with a right knee injury early in the third quarter, went in from 16 yards with 1:54 left in the half and from 27 with 18 seconds left in the half after Bruce Smith sacked Elway and forced a fumble.

Then Gardner scored 1:42 into the second half after Mickey Washington's interception, the fifth thrown by Elway this year.

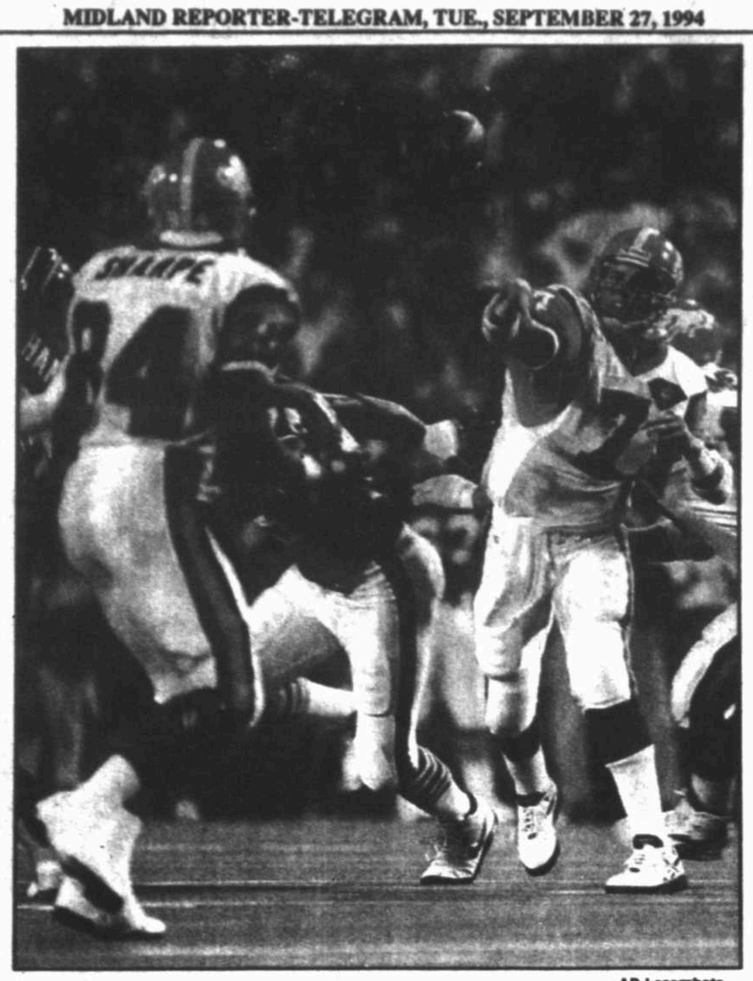

The Bills (3-1) trailed 7-3 late into the second quarter against a team that had allowed an average of 37 points in its first three games and four starters to injury in the first 18 minutes — running back Rod Bernstine, cornerback Ray Crockett, offensive tackle Russell Freeman and defensive end Dan Williams.

The Bills took a 3-0 lead on Steve Christie's 36-yard field goal with 4:28 left in the first period.

Elway, who finished 26 of 45 for 280 yards, hit Anthony Miller on an 11-yard slant 1:18 into the second period to make give the Broncos their only lead.

The drive was vintage Elway: a 31-yard strike to Shannon Sharpe on a third and 19 from his own 19 and a 22-yard scramble to the 12 set up the score. But on his next series, he missed Miller wide open for what could have been a long TD play.

Buffalo appeared to take the lead on a 65-yard punt return by rookie Jeff Burris. But as the teams lined up for the extra point, referee Bob McElwee announced that a Bill had been holding on the play, negating the TD.

Prep poll sees few changes in rankings

Associated Press

Few upsets in the first weekend of district play resulted in little change in The Associated Press high school football poll released Monday.

Only four new teams entered the five classes and, of those, Houston Cypress Creek made the highest debut at No. 9 in Class 5A. They came in just ahead of fellow newcomer Arlington Lamar.

Bay City, seeking its fifth-straight playoff appearance, joins the Class 4A rankings for the first time this season at No. 10 and Roscoe is the new No. 10 in 1A.

Some of the ranked teams in Classes 3A and 2A moved around a bit, but all 10 teams remained in the poll.

This is the third-straight week that all five No. 1 teams have remained intact. They are Aldine MacArthur in 5A, Stephenville in 4A, Cuero in 3A, Schulenburg in 2A and Thorndale in 1A.

MacArthur is the most solid No. 1 of the group. The Generals, who were runners-up in 5A Division I last year, received 31 of 33 first-place votes in the polling of statewide sports writers and broadcasters.

Abilene Cooper picked up the other two top votes and held on to

■ Prep Top 10 Poll

No. 2. The Cougars are followed by Austin Westlake, Deer Park, and two-time defending Division I champ Converse Judson.

A pack of Dallas-area schools follows with Mesquite at No. 6, Plano East jumping up three spots to No. 7 and Grapevine at No. 8.

Falling out of the 5A rankings were Irving Nimitz, which lost 33-14 to Arlington, and Spring Westfield, which lost 13-7 to Humble.

Although Stephenville is the only defending champion among the five top-ranked teams, the Yellowjackets are the ones being pursued the closest.

Stephenville was ranked first by 23 voters, second-ranked Waxahachie got three first-place votes and No. 3 La Marque, which has shut out its last three opponents, received four first-place votes.

Fourth-ranked Sulphur Springs, which beat then-No. 9 Highland Park 24-14 to knock the Scots out of the poll, got two top votes and No. 5 Gregory-Portland had one.

Rounding out the 4A poll are No. 6 Corpus Christi Calallen, No. 7 Sherman, No. 8 Austin Reagan, which fell from sixth following a 14-14 tie with New Braunfels Canyon, and No. 9 Lamar Consolidated.

NFL salary cap making impact

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

It may have been the Sunday the San Francisco 49ers finally hit the salary cap wall.

For the rest of the NFL (except for the Niners and Cowboys at the top and Cincinnati and Tampa Bay at the bottom), just call it parity. A lack of depth caused by the salary cap has transformed the league into 3-1 teams that could be 1-3 and 1-3 teams that could be 3-1, and ... "On any given Sunday:"

— Joe Montana can be shut out for the first time in 16 years.

— Detroit can beat Dallas on the road, then come home and lose to New England.

— Minnesota can beat Miami 28-6 in the first half. Miami can win the second 29-10, and Warren Moon can have the frights about Buffalo Revisited?

— The only unbeaten teams are two that figured to be no better than .500 at the season's start? One (the Giants) didn't play Sunday, and the other (the Chargers) blew a 20-point lead and escaped by two seconds.

Of course, the way things are going, they still might still finish 8-8.

From the top:

The 49ers: It was great highlight film footage and perfect timing, but Neon Deion Sanders' 74-yard TD return simply emphasizes once again that what Sanders does is flashy, crowd-pleasing and often unnecessary.

"It was a fourth-down pass. He could have knocked it down and we would have won anyway," Steve Young said. "But it was fun watching him run it back. It was great."

All Sanders did was overshadow the overriding problem for one of the NFL's two top teams — with all their salary cap manipulation to get Sanders and free agents like Rickey Jackson, Bart Oates, Ken Norton and others, they should have manipulated to get some offensive line depth.

Young was sacked five times by the Saints — a less mobile quarterback would have gone down 10 times — behind an offensive line missing Jesse Sapolu, Harris Barton, Ralph Tamm and Steve Wallace. So we got the 36-year-old Oates at center anchoring ... Harry Boatswain, Frank Pollack, Derrick Deese and Chris Dalman?

Barton and Tamm will be out a few more months. Wallace and Sapolu are questionable for next week against Philadelphia.

So, is Young the next victim? Maybe Phil Simms should forget Buddy Ryan, wait for Young to go down and head for the Bay Area. On the other hand, if Young can't survive, can a 38-year-old who wasn't mobile at 28?

Montana: We all have our bad days, it was raining at Arrowhead and Montana had the flu. So 18 of 37 for 175 yards and three interceptions can be excused for this week.

Still, it had never happened to Montana, in 153 starts over 16 years.

More relevant, the Chiefs had never been 4-0 in their history and, if they had to take anyone lightly, it was the Rams. "I don't think in your worst nightmare you could imagine the performance we put on out there today," Marty Schottenheimer said.

Sometimes they call that the law of averages.

The Lions: If anyone was ripe for an upset, it was Detroit, which acted like it had won the Super Bowl after it beat Dallas. Wayne Fontes is an emotional coach and, despite his warnings about a short week and the potency of the Patriots, he couldn't keep his team on an "even keel" — one of the key sayings in the coaches' phrase book.

So with due credit to the Patriots, who finally played a little defense to support their offense, consider:

— Harry Colon, the nickel back, dropped a Drew Bledsoe floater with which he could have walked into the end zone.

— Scott Mitchell was an awful 14 of 29 for 189 yards and two interceptions, and he overthrew a wide open Brett Perriman in the end zone.

— Lomas Brown, who buried Charles Haley in Dallas (no tackles), let Chris Slade blow by him for a key sack.

It was another indication that the Patriots are back in the pack (who isn't?). "It's the biggest win we've had since I've been in New England," said Bill Parcells.

That may not be saying much.

Moon Over Miami: A stat that tells it all: In their first three games, plus 29 minutes, 58 seconds, the Vikings allowed 33 points. In the last 30:02 Sunday, they gave up 35.

That can happen against Dan Marino.

It also can happen TO Warren Moon, the losing pitcher in the biggest comeback in NFL history, Buffalo's 41-38 overtime win in the playoffs two years ago. Moon's Oilers had built a 35-3 lead in the third quarter of that one.

Was it deja vu? "Darn tootin'," Moon said. So he asked offensive coordinator Brian Billick to open it up instead of playing the prevent offense, and Minnesota pulled it out.

Was it the law of averages? Perhaps, but Miami had too many injuries to be 4-0.

"It looked great!" Miami linebacker Aubrey Beavers said of Moon over Marino. "Hats off to Moon, because they won. Hats off to us and Dan because he put up some good numbers, also."

Beavers is a rookie. He'll learn that Don Shula doesn't like losing — even if he does play Cincinnati, where son David is the coach, next Sunday night.

The undefeated and the AFC West: The Giants didn't play so they couldn't lose, which brings us to the Chargers, who beat the Raiders at the Coliseum for the fourth straight season.

They blew a 20-0 lead, survived a tipped pass that Lionel Washington returned for a TD that gave the Raiders a 24-23 lead and won on John Carney's fourth field goal — from 33 yards with two seconds left. That's shades of last year, when Carney was the only offense San Diego had.

So they now lead what looks like the NFL's toughest division by a game over Kansas City and the surprising Seattle Seahawks, who resemble the Bills of the late '80s with their young stars — Cortez Kennedy, Rick Mirer and Chris Warren.

Moreover, Stan Humphries looks like the gutsiest quarterback since ... Bill Kilmer?

He popped a knee on the interception, returned to the game against the advice of his coaches and actually blocked Nolan Harrison, a defensive lineman, on a reverse during the drive that set up Carney's winning field goal.

"He's got guts, I'll give him that," Harrison said.

The Raiders, probably the consensus AFC Super Bowl favorite (before they started playing, of course) are in trouble already, three games behind the Chargers, two games behind the Seahawks and the Chiefs.

They aren't as good as they were supposed to be (running game, linebackers).

And Art Shell and his staff (Fred Biletnikoff?) made some dubious decisions, like running up the middle on a fourth-and-3 from the San Diego six trailing 20-3 late in the first half. Even a field goal there and they probably would have won.

In a league so tight, that kind of thing makes the difference.

Sampson works with Phoenix

PHOENIX (AP) — Ralph Sampson, the 7-foot-4 center who hasn't played in the NBA since 1991, worked out Monday with the Phoenix Suns.

The Suns, in need of a quality center, also invited 7-6 Manute Bol to this week's informal workouts. Bol didn't show but team president Jerry Colangelo said he might work out Tuesday.

Sampson, 34, played for Houston, Golden State and Sacramento. He got into 10 games for the Washington Bullets in November 1991 before knee problems forced him into three years of rehabilitation.

"It gets miserable sometimes, but I kept my faith and I kept believing," Sampson said. "I don't have anything to prove to anyone. When I played before, I was self-driven."

Before visiting Phoenix, Sampson worked out with the Chicago Bulls and the Milwaukee Bucks. He said he was looking for teams with title potential.

Asked about trying out with the Suns, who reached the finals in 1993 and the second round last season, he said: "When I stepped on the court today, it was the stage to win a championship."

Sampson says he is in good health but his knees aren't at full strength. He had three operations in three years before the Rockets traded him to Golden State for Jim Petersen in 1989.

By then, the future of the No. 1 draft choice in 1983, a center who moved liked a small forward, was in a shambles.

Sampson averaged 21 points and 11.1 rebounds his first season with the Rockets, 22.1 points and 10.4 rebounds the next, and 18.9 points and 10.7 rebounds the third.

Then his totals fell as his knees deteriorated. For his career, he has averaged 15.6 points.

Chaps hold Bossier lead

Staff Report

BOSSIER CITY, La. — After 36 holes of play, Midland College holds a 10-stroke lead over the field with 18 holes left to play today in the Bossier Parrish Community College Golf Invitational.

The Chaparrals were a dominate power in the first 36 holes, all played Monday at the Palmetto Country Club par-72 course. They were so dominate, in fact, that they hold the top three medalist players after 36 holes.

MC's Jason Brooks shot an even-par 144 with rounds of 71 and 73. Graham Davidson was in second place with a two-over 146 and Michael Lofdahl, a walk-on from Sweeden, stands tied for third with a 147 with Paris Junior College's Chris Jacobi, a Snyder product.

Rounding out the MC players was Monahans sophomore Jason Garduno at 155 and Andrews freshman Derrick Pursley at 156.

Team Totals: Midland College 290-297-587, NMJC 296-301-597, Paris JC 309-305-614, Tyler JC 311-307-618, McLennan CC 316-303-619, Western Texas 311-309-620, Navarro College 313-312-625, Bossier Parrish 307-3178-625, Weatherford 315-314-629, Lon Morris 322-316-638, San Jacinto 322-324-646.

Midland College Scores: Jason Brooks 71-73-144, Graham Davidson 72-74-146, Michael Lofdahl 72-75-147, Jason Garduno 75-80-155, Derrick Pursley 81-75-156.

CHICAGO (AP) — Striking baseball players vowed to stay unified against owners and briefly discussed the possibility of a league of their own during a 3½-hour meeting Monday.

"We have seven or eight options. What I have been told there are 10-plus corporations that are willing to sponsor us and there are a lot of city owned stadiums where leases haven't been fulfilled," Cubs player representative Randy Myers said of a new league.

"We also have a couple of broadcasting stations that are willing to go with us. It's just one of the possibilities."

Fifty-six players attended the fourth of seven meetings headed by union chief Donald Fehr, who said there has been no progress in negotiations with management.

Player agent Tom Selakovich said an announcement of a players' league for 1995 could come within about 10 days. But Dick Moss, the agent who is organizing it, said Oct. 19 is his current target date.

"I wouldn't call it a joke. People are putting a lot of time and effort into it," said Selakovich.

"There's a lot of work to be done on that," said Chicago Cubs first baseman Mark Grace.

Frank Thomas, who said he didn't consider talk of a new league to be serious at this stage, reiterated that the players would not crack.

"The bottom line is that the owners are trying to break the players' union and they are not interested in bargaining. I really don't think they care about the fans and what is going on," said Thomas, whose bid for a Triple Crown was curtailed when the season was cancelled.

Thomas said he saw no wavering by the union.

"You never know, there could be some guys who jump the line but I have a feeling that is not going to happen," he said.

"It would be unheard of, undoing what the players before us did. That's what they're trying to do, make us take a giant step backwards."

NHL nears season postponement

TORONTO (AP) — With the league and its players no closer to an agreement, NHL commissioner Gary Bettman says he will decide Friday whether to postpone the start of season.

Five hours of negotiations between the NHL and the NHL Players Association on Monday failed to bridge "considerable differences" between the two sides.

Faced with Saturday's deadline to have a collective bargaining agreement in place, negotiators for owners and players met in large and small groups, trying to find common ground. The season is to open Saturday night with 12 games.

Both sides described the talks as "free-flowing," but the main issue of how to impose a tax system to help small-market teams was discussed only toward the end of the negotiations.

"It is very clear we have a wide difference of opinion," said NHLPA executive director Bob Goodenow. "I think unless there is flexibilty, there will be a serious problem."

The NHL is proposing a luxury tax for teams that exceeding a maximum salary. The money would be pooled to help small-market teams. Players resist the proposal because they feel it is a salary cap.

Players have proposed a 5 percent tax on salaries and revenues, with the money pooled to help small-market teams. The NHL opposes this because the league feels it does not address the issue of escalating salaries.

The contentious issue of rookie salaries was not addressed.

"It was a free-flowing discussion," Bettman said. "I think it remains formative and constructive."

A&M: Tech faces task

(From 1C)

since getting beaten 31-6 by A&M in 1993.

"I tell you, they're good," Dykes said of his opponent. "They've got great speed and they've got great athletes. Course, they've got a great quarterback in Corey Pullig."

Pullig completed 5-of-5 passes for 129 yards despite twisting his right knee and leaving the Southern Mississippi game.

Dykes reaffirmed his confidence in his own quarterback, Zebbie Lethridge, who threw two TD passes and ran for another last week during his first career start. Lethridge will start again, he said.

The biggest potential mismatch looming at A&M, Dykes said, appears to be the Tech offense going up against the Aggie defense.

"It will be extremely important that our offense doesn't get rattled, plays with a lot of poise," he said. "And I think we will."

OILERS: Richardson balks at defense plan

just didn't perform well."

Defensively, the Oilers have been hit hard by injuries in the secondary, the team's most talented area.

Defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher was forced to recruit wide receiver Reggie Brown as a nickel back in the final two minutes Sunday because the team was down to just four defensive backs.

Starting safety Bubba McDowell is out six weeks after knee surgery, and Steve Jackson and Bo Orlando also are out with injuries. Mike Davis was ejected Sunday because of a late hit.

Fisher first talked to backup quarterback Bucky Richardson about filling a defensive back spot but "Bucky's eyes got this big," Fisher said.

Fisher finally decided on Brown, who played defensive back earlier in his career.

"I explained it and Reggie was confident," Fisher said. "I just wanted him to go out and play that third deep spot."

'HORNS: Drop in poll

fense controlled the line very well against the run. We pressured their quarterback and got hands on or close to 11 or 13 passes."

A test of how far the Longhorns' defense has come will be played out Saturday. Colorado, which defeated Michigan on the game's final play Saturday, is averaging 536 yards and 43 points per game.

"We can not assume they will score only seven or 10 points," Mackovic said. "We can't give them a lot of big plays. They are not easy to keep up with."

The Longhorns, namely Mackovic, had little to say about Colorado's 27-26 victory at Michigan. The Buffaloes won with no time remaining when Kordell Stewart's desperation 64-yard bomb into the end zone was tipped into the hands of Michael Westbrook.

"Nice play," Mackovic said.

Colorado defeated Texas 36-14 at Boulder, Colo., last year after turning three of six Longhorn turnovers into touchdowns.

"We can't have those kinds of mistakes this year," Mackovic said.

Mackovic said receiver Mike Adams is doubtful for the Colorado game after straining his right knee on a punt return in the third quarter against TCU.

Pacers make Davis rich

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dale Davis, the Indiana Pacers' leading rebounder last season, has signed a multiyear contract worth a reported $20 million, team officials said Monday.

"This contract puts him in an elite position in the league of players that are of his caliber," Pacers general manager Donnie Walsh said. "It is a contract that reflects two things: His stature as a player and his importance to our team."

The Indianapolis Star reported that sources put the deal's value at $20 million over five years, which would make him the highest-paid player on the team.

The 6-foot-11 power forward averaged a club NBA record of 10.9 rebounds per game last season. His 280 offensive rebounds were the third highest total in the team's NBA history.

Davis, 25, averaged a career-high 11.7 points a game last season. The Pacers drafted him out of Clemson with the 13th pick overall of the 1991 draft. He has averaged 8.7 rebounds and 8.9 points in his three-year career.

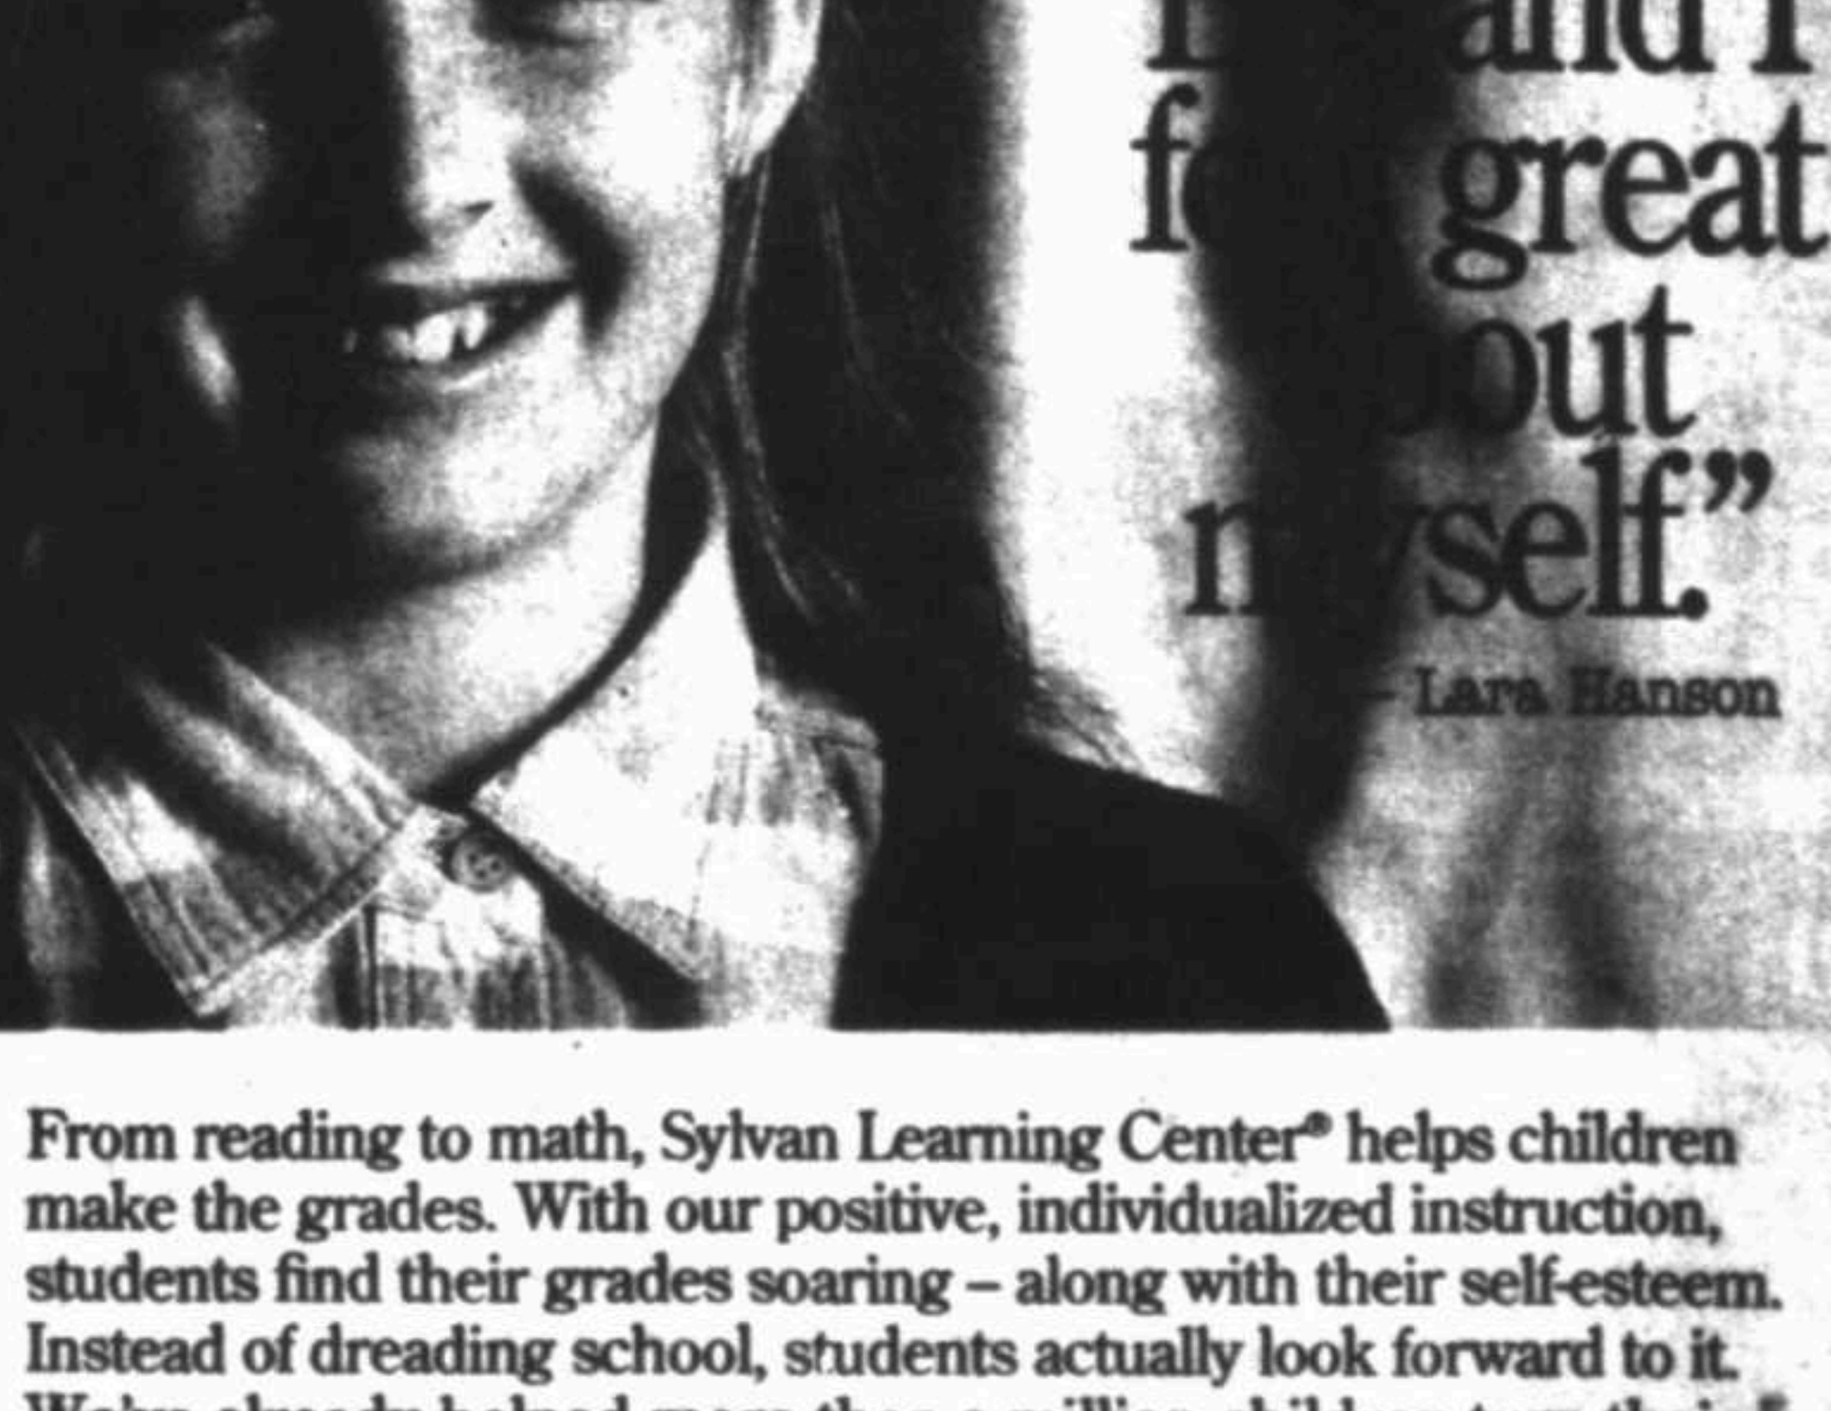

"Every time a player signs a long-term contract, you're always concerned if he's going to concentrate on his game," Pacers coach Larry Brown said. "But I'm confident he will continue to grow. Dale had a lot to do with the team's success last season."

Last season, the Pacers advanced to the Eastern Conference finals, where they lost to the New York Knicks in seven games.

Under Davis' contract, he will donate $1,000 to an unspecified charity for each game in which he reaches double figures in points and rebounds, Walsh said.

Younger Manning finds father's shoes

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Tennessee freshman quarterback Peyton Manning got his first extended playing time. Ironically, it came in the state of Mississippi.

The Manning name was made famous in Mississippi because of the exploits 25 years ago of former Ole Miss quarterback Archie Manning. Peyton's father twice finished among the top four in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

The younger Manning completed 14 of 23 passes for 256 yards and two touchdowns Saturday in the Volunteers' 24-21 loss at Mississippi State, the arch rival of his father's alma mater.

"I felt good out there. I really did. I felt poised," said Manning, a high school All-American in New Orleans last year. "Mississippi is somewhat my home turf. I tried to do a good job. But the loss, it hurts bad."

He probably won't get much sympathy from Ole Miss fans, many of whom felt spurned when the son of their hero signed with Tennessee last spring.

After attempting just five passes in the previous three games, Manning replaced injured starter Todd Helton in the first quarter Saturday. He got the Volunteers on the board in just three plays, throwing a 76-yard touchdown pass to Kendrick Jones.

Manning played 10 of the last 11 series. The other Volunteer freshman quarterback, Brandon Stewart, had his only series ended by an interception.

Helton was the second starting quarterback this season for Tennessee, having replaced Jerry Colquitt after his season-ending injury against UCLA. Helton, who sprained his knee on a running play, was to be evaluated Monday.

"Basically you'll hear no excuses from me. Injuries are a part of the game, and I thought that Manning did a good job," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said.

Just before halftime, Manning directed a 13-play, 78-yard drive in 3:25 to give the Volunteers a 14-7 lead. He hit Joey Kent for a 17-yard score, the fourth time the two teamed up on the drive.

The Volunteers led 21-7 in the third quarter, but lost after turnovers on their last four drives. Three were fumbles by senior running backs Aaron Hayden and James Stewart.

"Our two senior running backs dropped the ball in the fourth quarter when we had the lead, and that should not happen," Fulmer said. "The leadership on this football team needs to come forth better, and more of it."

Manning could provide the spark Fulmer is seeking. The Volunteers host No. 17 Washington State (3-0) next week.

The Volunteers have lost two straight Southeastern Conference games, including the 31-0 debacle to top-ranked Florida the previous week. They lost three September games for the first time since losing their first six games in 1988.

"It appears that Tennessee made the decision finally to stick with Manning. I thought that was a good decision," Mississippi State coach Jackie Sherrill said. "He fits their offense and does a good job of throwing the football."

Even if Helton hadn't been injured, Manning would most likely have gotten an opportunity against Mississippi State.

Tennessee took 12 of its first 13 offensive snaps, three possessions, in Mississippi State territory. The Volunteers punted twice, and Todd Becksvoort missed a 38-yard field goal attempt.

"The loss, it kills me," Manning said.

Earndhardt holds lead

More Sports/8C

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Although Rusty Wallace gained another 10 points on Dale Earnhardt in the NASCAR Winston Cup standings by winning at Martinsville, Va., he will not catch Earnhardt at that pace.

"I just can't seem to shake the cat," Wallace said Sunday after he and Earnhardt finished 1-2 for the second straight week. "We aren't wishing misfortune on anyone, but we know he's got to have some for us to make some ground.

"We're doing all we can do. We're winning races and leading laps, all we can do."

Mark Martin is third with 3,543 points while Ken Schrader (3,454) jumped back in front of Ricky Rudd (3,407) in what has become a weekly battle between them.

Morgan Shepherd (3,334) remained solidly in sixth, nearly 150 points ahead of Jeff Gordon (3,186). Bill Elliott (3,131), Darrell Waltrip (3,093) and Terry Labonte (3,073) fill the next three spots, merely 58 points apart.

Ernie Irvan is 11th with 3,026, followed closely by Michael Waltrip (3,004), Sterling Marlin (2,974) and Lake Speed (2,902). Kyle Petty (2,874) is 15th, two points ahead of Ted Musgrave (2,872).

Geoff Bodine (2,779) is still 17th while Dale Jarrett (2,710) jumped from 21st to 18th. Todd Bodine (2,662) and Rick Mast (2,647) round out the top 20.

Geoff Bodine also became the fifth driver to top $1 million in winnings this season.

Jeff Gordon leads the pack with $1,500,200, followed by Wallace with 1,397,060 and Earnhardt with $1,305,455.

The NASCAR Winston Cup Series will head to North Wilkesboro, N.C., this weekend for the Tyson-Holly Farms 400.

UTEP seeks ways to eliminate deficit

EL PASO (AP) — Texas-El Paso officials are looking for ways to eliminate a $700,000 athletic department budget shortfall without making drastic program cuts.

University officials are holding a series of discussions this week that focus on covering the deficit, which may have placed UTEP football in jeopardy.

"We're working on some options," said athletic director John Thompson.

UTEP officials generally won't discuss what those options might be, although Thompson has said cutting football may be included among measures suggested to balance the department's $6.5 million budget.

University officials say they want to avoid killing football, however, leaving them scrambling for options as they near the date when they must present plans for closing the deficit to University of Texas system regents.

The regents are expecting the plans next month.

"We've got a hundred ideas. The problem is we've got a week and a half to make it a reality," said Manny Aldana, president of the Miner Foundation, the fund-raising arm of the UTEP athletic department.

UTEP President Diana Natalicio has indicated she may turn to the community for support because the school can't continue the past practice of using money from other university accounts to cover athletic department shortfalls.

Aldana said any long-term solutions will have to involve the community.

"This isn't just a university issue or a football issue, but a citywide issue," he said. "This is our university and this community can't afford to go backward. UTEP is a mainstream university, with a number of pieces involved to make it that. Athletics is just one of them."

Veteran El Paso fund-raisers differ on how successful soliciting contributions from the public may be.

"It would be tough, no question about that, but it's conceivable," said Jonathan Rogers, chief executive of the Bank of the West and a former El Paso mayor.

Pete Duarte, chief executive of the county-run Thomason Hospital, wasn't as optimistic.

Capriati's return receives another setback

NEW YORK (AP) — Jennifer Capriati's long-awaited return to tennis is being delayed.

Capriati will not play the European Indoors tournament at Zurich, Switzerland, next week because of a groin injury, Linda Dozoretz, a publicist for Capriati agent Barbara Perry, said Monday.

"I was really looking forward to playing next week in Zurich and returning to the tour," Capriati said. "This is disappointing, but I'm confident that I will be playing again soon."

Earlier in the day, Dawn Biggins, an assist to Perry, said Capriati hadn't withdrawn from the tournament. Perry didn't return telephone messages left Monday by The Associated Press.

In her last match, Capriati lost in the first round of the 1993 U.S. Open. She had planned to return to the women's tour at Zurich.

"I don't care about being No. 1, but I'm ready and willing to give it a battle, and that's what sports is all about. ... There's no ending to my story yet."

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices fell slightly Monday after traders failed to sustain a push above $18 a barrel.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $17.67 per barrel, down 16 cents on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16 a barrel.

The day started higher as traders tried to continue a rally that lifted crude prices a combined 61 cents on Thursday and Friday. However, a sell-off began when the price hit $17.99.

One trader said there was no fundamental news about future supplies or demand for the price to be that high. In addition, a push past $18 would likely have encouraged new buyers to come into the market, further boosting the price. Trading volume was light.

Natural gas prices were lower. Contracts for delivery in November settled at $1.716 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 0.3 cents.

Accountants meet

The Petroleum Accountants of the Permian Basin will meet this evening at the Petroleum Club.

The meeting will begin with the technical session at 5:30 p.m. Speaker Larry Monzingo, assistant audit manager with Texaco will speak on "Joint Venture Audit Practice."

Social hour will begin at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:45 p.m. The dinner speaker will be Tod Brown, vice president, Petroleum Strategies Inc., speaking on "Future of Asset Trades in the Oil and Gas Industry."

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose broadly Monday, posting one of biggest single-day gains against the Japanese yen this month, on optimism for a trade deal that will help cut the nagging U.S. deficit with Japan.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 98.85 yen, up from 97.85 late Friday.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5537 marks, up from 1.5480.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared with late Friday: 1.2870 Swiss francs, up from 1.2865; 5.3060 French francs, up from 5.2935; 1,565 Italian lire, up from 1,559; and 1.3488 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3435.

The British pound fell to $1.5720 from $1.5770.

Dow rebounds

NEW YORK — Blue chips snapped out of a four-session slump Monday but the broad range of other stocks started the week with an indecisive session.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which zigzagged between modestly higher and lower readings during most of the session, gathered upward momentum in late action to close near its best reading.

Fed likely to defer on rate increase

Many private economists believe market participants got carried away with fears

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve policymakers meet Tuesday to decide whether to boost interest rates for a sixth time this year, but despite some worrisome signs of inflation, many economists believe they will leave rates unchanged — at least until November.

Speculation that a rate increase could be imminent sent Wall Street into a tailspin last week. But many private economists believe that market participants got carried away with fears of an imminent increase in rates.

Still, analysts are looking for at least one more rate increase before the end of the year. They just contend that it is more likely to occur at the Nov. 15 policy-setting meeting.

"There is no doubt that higher short-term interest rates are coming. The question is when," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers in New York. "My guess is that members of the Fed think that enough has been done for now and they will take a watch-and-wait approach."

Many investors stayed on the sidelines Monday, afraid to make a financial bet that could be proven wrong a day later. The Dow Jones industrial average rose by more than 17 points while Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond climbed to 7.79 percent in thin trading.

The reason for the unease is that since the Fed began boosting short-term interest rates in February, all but one of the five increases has come in conjunction with a meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, the panel of Fed board members and regional bank presidents who set interest rate policies.

The last increase was Aug. 16 when the central bank boosted the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, a half-point to 4.75 percent. It also increased the discount rate, the rate the Fed charges on direct loans to banks, to 4 percent.

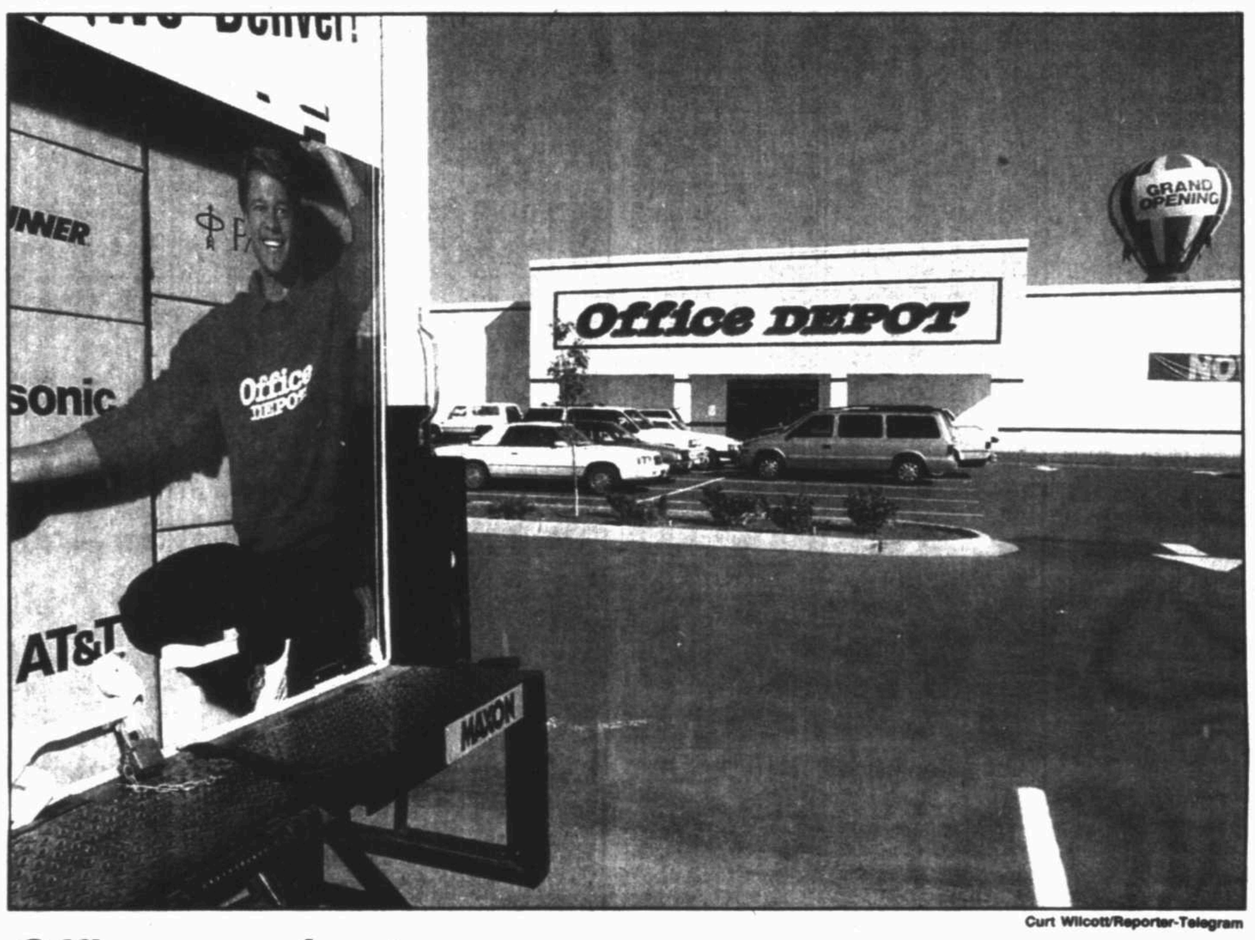

With the economy in the fourth year of an economic recovery and unemployment now down to 6.1 percent, the central bank has begun to worry about rising wage and cost pressures.

Recent reports showing that American factories in August operated at their highest level in five years while wholesale prices jumped a worrisome 0.6 percent convinced the markets that another rate increase was one the way.

But the Clinton administration has argued that the price report was an aberration and inflationary pressures remain subdued.

"Fears of a large uptick in inflation are unwarranted," Laura Tyson, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers told the National Association of Business Economists on Monday. She said that there was still "little indication of rising labor costs," which represent 75 percent of a product's costs.

Even if the September meeting passes without a rate increase, analysts were looking for further increases, probably at the Nov. 15 FOMC session.

Office supply store opens

Midland's Office Depot, 2326 W. Loop 250, opened its doors Monday with a ribbon-cutting ceremony. The store employs between 25 and 40 people and carries an inventory worth more than $1.5 million of name-brand products ranging from paper clips to computers. Office Depot, based in Delray Beach, Fla., caters to small and mid-size businesses, the growing home office market, students, teachers and all business professionals. The store is open 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday. Delivery and order ready pick-up services are available as is a complete Business Services Center offering printing, faxing, personalized checks and business forms.

Existing-home sales decline during August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes fell 1.8 percent in August, a real estate trade group said today, as higher mortgage rates continued to take their toll on consumer demand. The West posted the only regional gain.

The National Association of Realtors said sales of previously owned single-family homes totaled 3.9 million at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, down from 3.97 million a month earlier.

Existing home sales have slipped in three of the last four months and in July posted only a revised 0.3 percent gain. The Realtors originally estimated sales in July had fallen 0.3 percent.

Most analysts attribute the slowdown in the housing industry to higher mortgage rates. The government reported last week that housing starts rose 2.1 percent in August, but the entire advance was in multifamily construction. Single-family starts — 80 percent of residential construction — dropped 2.7 percent.

Still, the Realtors noted that existing home sales were 1 percent above those of August 1993 and continued to predict the second-best year ever — 3.95 million units compared with the record 3.98 million in 1978.

"Actual sales remain strong," said President Robert H. Elrod. "Based on our forecasts, we are right on track toward finishing out the year with the second best on record."

"Good affordability conditions and an array of financing tools available to consumers in the market continue to encourage both first-time and move-up buyers to purchase," he asserted.

Although mortgage rates are nearly 2 percentage points above their 25-year low set last October, they remain below the double-digit figures that existed during much of the 1980s.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.51 percent in August, down from 8.62 percent a month earlier. Rates have been fluctuating, however, and reached 8.73 percent during the week ended last Thursday.

David Lereah, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association, predicted last week that rates will reach 9 percent by the end of the year, from less than 7 percent nearly a year ago.

Microsoft, Lockheed sign on to Bell interactive video project

RICHARDSON (AP) — Microsoft Corp. and Lockheed Corp. have signed on with Southwestern Bell to bring interactive video services into homes in this North Dallas suburb.

By late 1995, a trial offering of interactive video services was initially scheduled to serve 2,500 homes.

Southwestern Bell Video Services, a subsidiary of the San Antonio-based telecommunieations corporation, last week signed memorandums of understanding with Microsoft and Lockheed, said a spokeswoman.

"It will be video on demand and other interactive services such as shopping, games and other information — even education and travel information," said Cindy Browne, vice president of Bell Video Services in San Antonio.

"It could be a host of information and the capability of many transactions — things that make your life more convenient."

She said her subsidiary was created and has filed a lawsuit in district court to give consumers freedom of choice. If successful in its lawsuit, it would provide video programming. Currently there is a prohibition against telephone company affiliates providing the video service in their telephone territory.

The service was also subject to Federal Communications Commission approval.

Ms. Browne said that negotiations were continuing on final terms of contracts between Microsoft and Lockheed. Deals were expected in coming weeks and months.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Two checks from Treasury confuse investor

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: I'm a widow who was advised to invest in U.S. Treasury notes through the "Treasury Direct" system because of the safety of such investments. So, I sent a filled-out tender form and money to purchase a $10,000 face amount, three-year, 6.5 percent Treasury note to the district Federal Reserve Bank. The purchase price was slightly below face amount.

Shortly thereafter, I received a small check from the Treasury Department. And I am told I will receive a $325 check in February.

I do not understand this. Can you explain?

A: Let's have a whack at the "mystery of the two checks" by taking them one at a time.

The small check you have already received represents the difference between the $10,000 face amount of those Treasury notes and the slightly lower price at which you made your purchase.

As required, you sent in the face amount of the notes with your tender, which is an offer to buy at the Treasury Department's auction. Because the price at which the notes were issued and sold to you and other investors was slightly below face value, you received a refund for the difference between those two prices.

The $325 you are to receive in February is a semiannual interest payment. On $10,000, annual interest of 6.5 percent works out to $650.

Treasury notes and bonds pay interest twice a year. So you will get $325 interest every six months — in February and August — until your notes mature. At that time, the $10,000 you loaned to our federal government through the note purchase will be returned to you.

The interest payments and repayments of principal will go to you by direct deposit, meaning they will be sent by wire to your personal account at the bank, savings and loan association or other depository institution you designated when you opened your Treasury Direct account.

Q: The only difference I have been able to ascertain among U.S. Treasury securities is that Treasury notes come in various maturities -- but none longer than 10 years — Treasury bonds also are issued with various maturities ranging from more than 10 years to as long as 30 years. Treasury bills, on the other hand, are never issued with maturities longer than 52 weeks.

Am I correct?

A: Close, but no cigar.

The other major difference is that Treasury bonds and notes are "current interest" securities on which interest is paid every six months, as mentioned above. Treasury bills, on the other hand, are "discount" securities.

Every T-bill is issued at a discount — below face value — and redeemed at face value on its maturity date. The difference between the two prices is interest.

Interest from Treasury securities, both discount and current, is subject to federal income tax but not state or local income tax.

Q: Treasury securities are very complicated. I can't believe you are able to reply to questions about them off the top of your head. Where do you get all your information?

A: Basically from the 16th edition of "Buying Treasury Securities at Federal Reserve Banks," published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Va.

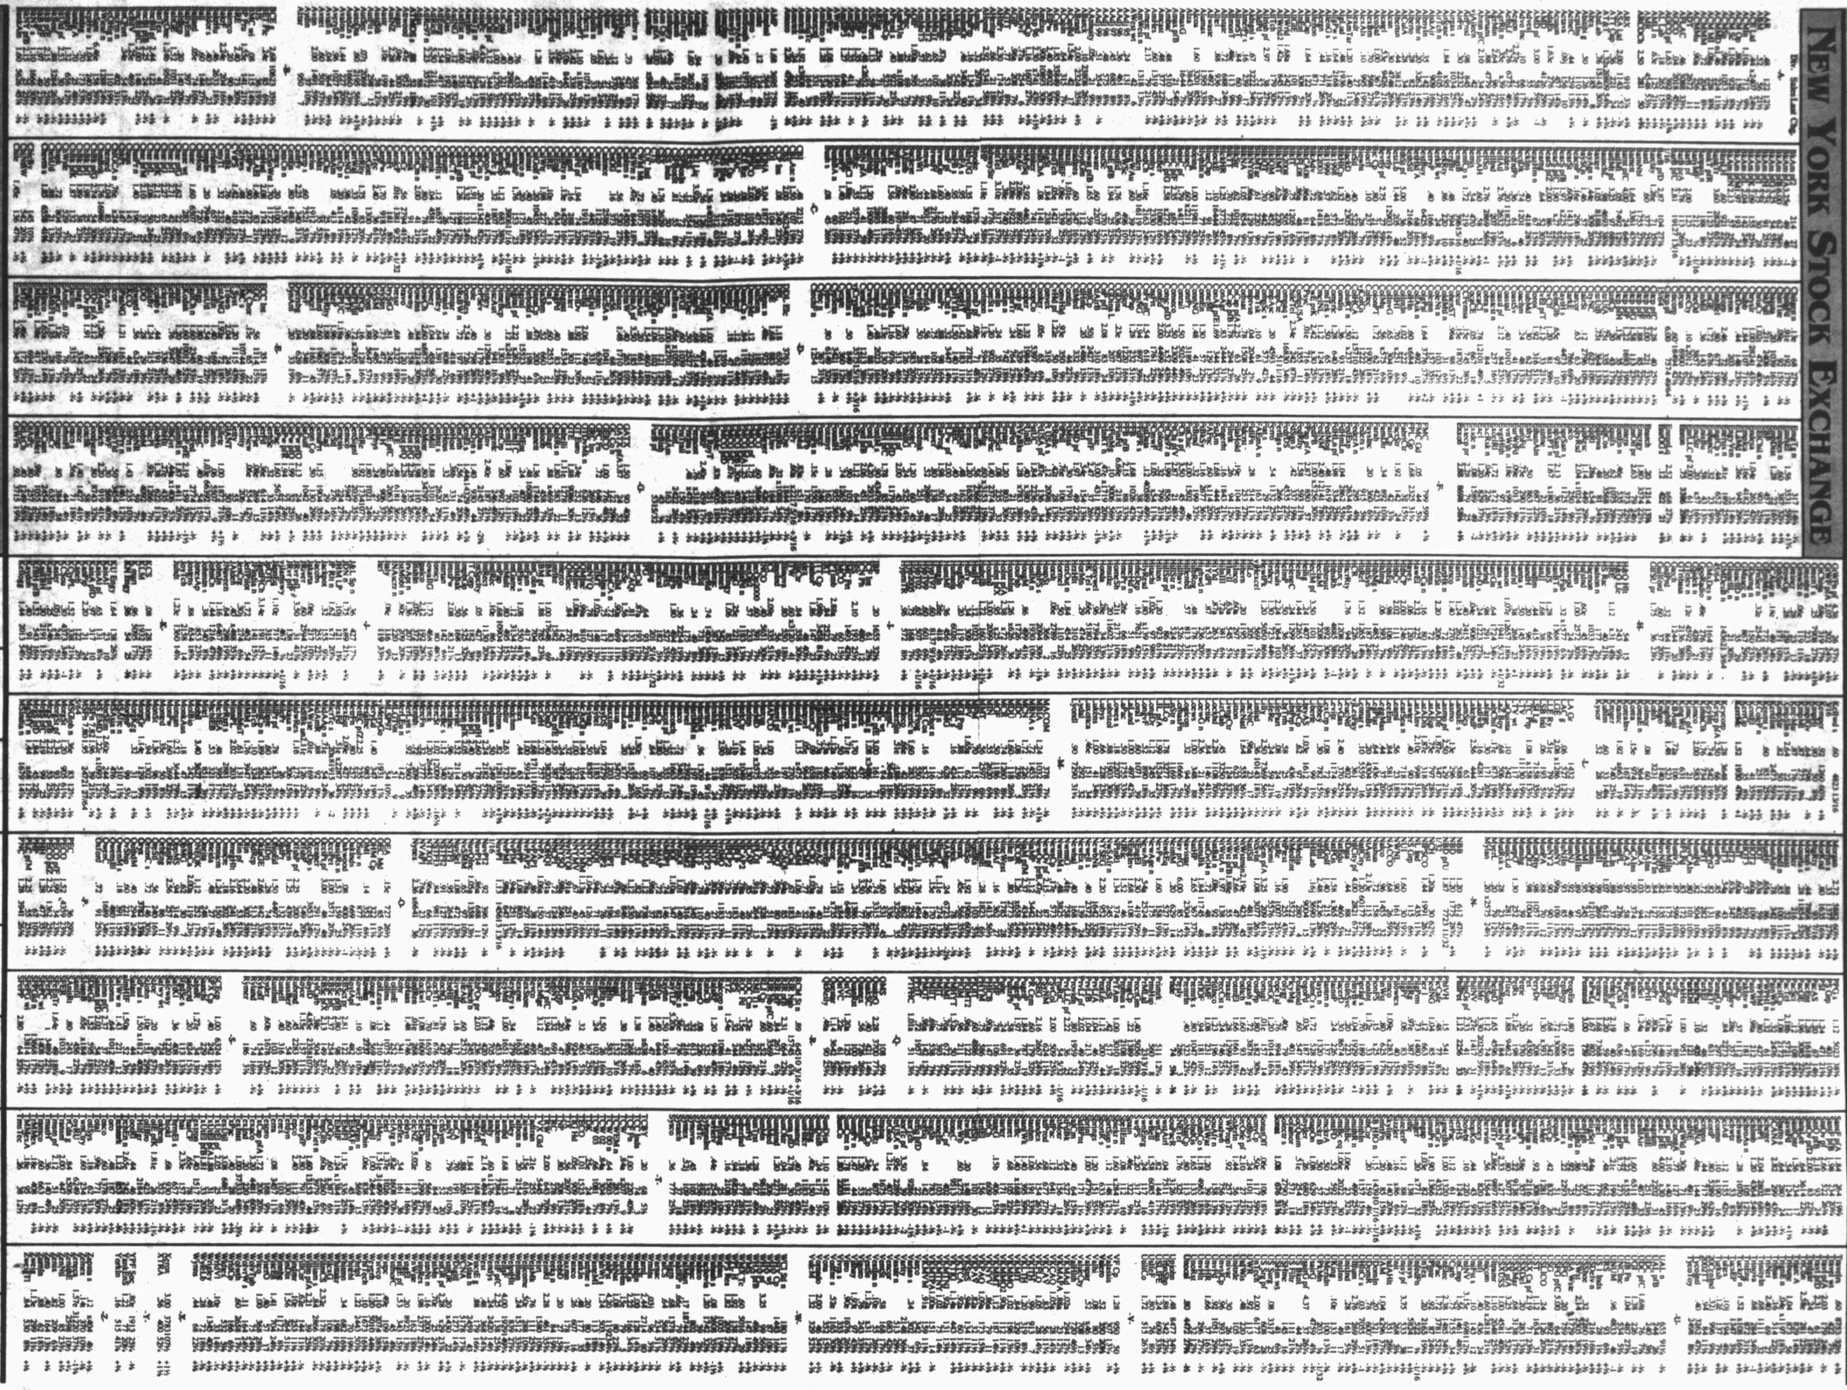

That 88-page reference work has become the standard tool for everyone wanting information about Treasury bonds, notes and bills.

It can be purchased by sending $4.50 to Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, P.O. Box 27471, Richmond, VA 23261.

NCAA expands probe for transcript credits

By Danny Robbins
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — As many as 70 athletes from 40 NCAA schools may have obtained correspondence-course credits in 1993 from Southeastern College of the Assemblies of God, a small Bible college that has gained attention as a result of Southwest Conference and federal investigations of the Baylor basketball program.

The figures were included in data the college submitted in July in response to a request from the NCAA enforcement department, said Tom Wilson, director of the school's Continuing Education program.

Southeastern College, in Lakeland, Fla., became entangled in the turmoil surrounding the Baylor basketball program when four junior-college transfers were withheld from competition last season because of questions regarding the validity of correspondence-course credits obtained from the school.

Prodded by the SWC as well as Baylor president Herbert Reynolds, the NCAA has sought to learn whether athletes at other NCAA schools used credits from Southeastern College to establish eligibility.

According to Wilson, the NCAA supplied the college with a list of "NCAA schools with basketball programs." The college's registrar then identified those schools that were sent transcripts from the college during the summers of 1992 and '93.

Wilson said the search revealed that 70 transcripts were sent to 40 NCAA schools in 1993. Those figures represented a huge increase from '92, when only 16 transcripts were issued to 14 schools.

Wilson said the college does not know whether the 70 transcripts were those of student-athletes.

"But I think it would be fair to think a good number of them were," he said.

The college, which is not a member of the NCAA, last fall provided SWC investigators with academic records relating to the four Baylor players' correspondence-course work. But the school, citing privacy concerns, declined to comply with a sweeping request by the NCAA for other student records.

Wilson said the data provided to the NCAA in July lists the schools but does not identify students.

Asked how the NCAA could use the information, he said, "What they could do, if they wanted to, is go to a school where we sent a transcript, interrogate the coaches as to which of their players used our program, then get releases from those players and ask to see their records here."

He declined to identify publicly the NCAA schools that had received transcripts from the college.

Chuck Smrt (CQ), the NCAA enforcement director who initially requested information from the college, said he could not comment on whether the NCAA is acting on data supplied by Southeastern.

"I can tell you the NCAA is monitoring correspondence courses," he said. "But I can't discuss specific information."

NCAA officials and college administrators have expressed concern about the Southeastern College correspondence-course program and others like it. They are fearful that the programs, which are popular among junior-college athletes seeking to satisfy NCAA eligibility requirements, invite cheating by athletes and coaches.

Recent developments in the Baylor case, including former player Jason Ervin's allegation that Bears coaches provided him with the answers to an "extra credit" final exam in a Southeastern College correspondence course, would appear to justify that view.

Officials at the tiny school, which fields teams in the National Christian College Athletic Association and does not award athletic scholarships, note that they have taken steps to tighten correspondence-course procedures. Coaches can no longer proctor final exams. "Extra credit" exams are no longer allowed.

In addition, the officials said, the college has asked for a team of representatives from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to review the correspondence-course program.

DePaul put on probation

CHICAGO (AP) — DePaul's basketball team was placed on probation for one year Monday by the NCAA for violations involving a booster who provided free apartments and meals to players.

However, the men's team remains eligible to play in postseason tournaments and faces no television sanctions.

The penalties include a reduction in scholarships, official visits and off-campus recruiting.

There were no specific violations found against coach Joey Meyer. However, David Swank, chairman of the NCAA infractions committee, said Meyer shares the blame for the most serious infraction — failure to closely monitor the program.

As an example, Swank said, the booster sent envelopes with his name on them to players in care of the school's basketball office. The envelopes contained keys to the apartments they used and tickets to professional sports events. Swank said someone should have been suspicious of the envelopes.

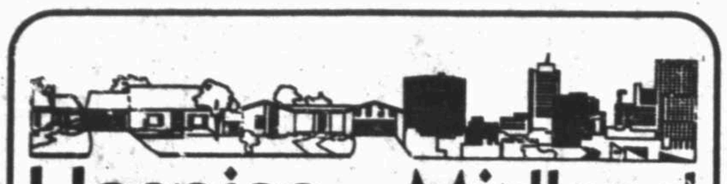

DePaul began investigating the accusations in 1992 and the university reported the infractions to the NCAA.

The school had frozen Meyer's salary last year and said Monday it will not negotiate his contract until the NCAA probation ends in August 1995.

"If anything goes wrong in the basketball program, the head coach bears the brunt," Meyer said. "I do and will accept responsibility for what transpired."

DePaul athletic director Bill Bradshaw said the university "pledges ... complete support" to Meyer.

The NCAA violations, which stretched from 1985 to 1988, involved Jeffrey Tassani, a DePaul booster and then vice president at First National Bank of Chicago. Tassani pleaded guilty two years ago to misappropriating bank money.

Something is rotten in Harlem — since 1986

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The opening of Riverbank State Park was a major bash: Clowns mingled with marching bands, the mayor and governor schmoozed, there were speeches and ceremonies.

Then they all went home, leaving behind a splendid park — and a stench.

Directly below the park, millions of gallons of raw sewage course through the North River Treatment Plant. And despite pledges by politicians, despite engineering that was supposed to prevent odors, North River reeks.

Eight years after the plant's completion, some Harlem residents close their windows on the steamiest July nights to shut out hydrogen sulfide fumes that smell like rotten eggs.

They are victims, they say, of environmental racism. And they battle proposed new developments — particularly Donald Trump's Riverside South — that would add to the sewage load.

"I have talked to people from all over the city, and anybody who's driven past or came by in a cab says the same thing: It stinks," said Peggy Shepard of West Harlem Environmental Action, which sued the city over the smell.

Shepard's group collected a $1.1 million settlement — small potatoes compared to the $57 million the city spent on odor abatement in 1993, the $52 million it may spend next year, and a proposed $100 million renovation to permanently deal with the problem.

"There is still a substantial piece of work yet to be done before we can literally breathe easier," said Manhattan Borough President Ruth Messinger.

But in a neighborhood that has had more than its share of hard times, many doubt that the aroma will ever disperse.

Originally the plant was to be built 70 blocks to the south, but predominantly white residents of the Upper West Side fought it, as they had fought two bus depots and a garbage transfer station. All went to Harlem.

"It's an example of putting something nobody wants in a black area. It's environmental racism," said City Councilman Stanley Michels, whose district includes the West Harlem neighborhood.

As a sop to the community, the sewage plant carried a bonus — a park on its roof, creating an oxymoron-on-the-Hudson. "The most surreal state park in the country," was one take on the juxtaposition of entertainment and effluence.

The stench comes and goes like a rancid rogue spirit — wafting in on an easterly wind, intensifying during the summer months.

The park, sitting directly over the plant, catches only pockets of odor. The neighborhood can get blanketed for blocks — complaints have come from 120th Street up to 159th Street, and from commuters on the West Side Highway, which runs alongside the plant.

While there's no proven link to neighborhood health problems, there are stories: The park's summer tennis class which came down with a rash. The asthmatic woman who collapsed near the park entrance.

"If you can smell something like that in the air, certainly that something is not healthy," said Theodore Kovaleff, the local community board president and longtime opponent of the sewage plant.

Studies have shown that 12 percent of Central Harlem residents have asthma — about three times the national average. Shepard said her group plans to use its settlement money for a comprehensive local health study.

If the plant is bad news, the park is a smash. A typical Saturday brings thousands of people to Riverbank. Amenities include a soccer field, tennis courts, a track, a skating rink.

The edge of the park offers a spectacular view of the Palisades. Unseen are $1.2 million worth of air pollution monitors that are supposed to read the level of hydrogen sulfide but don't work.

The plant currently handles 170 million gallons of sewage a day — just about its maximum capacity. But some developers want to direct more sewage to North River from new construction below 96th Street — a move locals say would kill the hope of new buildings in their neighborhood.

Inspirational U.S. Little League team meets with Reagan

By Eric Sondheimer
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — It's not every day that a group of boys is invited to skip school for a private meeting with a former president.

Members of the U.S. champion Northridge Little League team traveled by bus to a Century City high-rise Friday morning and took an elevator to the 34th floor where they were warmly greeted by Ronald Reagan, who personally had invited them.

"You know, I have something in common with you guys," Reagan told the players. "I used to broadcast baseball games."

Reagan shook hands with each of the 14 players, had his picture taken and then accepted a Northridge T-shirt and ball autographed by the team.

"He looked good," Northridge manager Larry Baca said of the 83-year-old. "He's got more dark hair than I do."

Third baseman Gregg Wallis said Reagan also told them that the movie "Die Hard" was filmed at the building.

The players later traveled to the Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley for a tour that concluded with cake and punch.

It was the latest honor bestowed on a Northridge Little League team that inspired thousands of earthquake-ravaged residents in the San Fernando Valley and people across the nation by advancing to the championship game of the Little League World Series before losing to Venezuela in Williamsport, Pa.

The team has participated in two parades, met first lady Hillary Clinton, appeared on "The Tonight Show" and had its exploits printed on a milk bottle. And there are plenty of activities to come.

The team visited the Veteran's Hospital in West Los Angeles on Saturday to meet with residents. A corporation has invited the players to ride on a float in the Rose Parade. And Gov. Pete Wilson will visit the Northridge field next month to salute the players.

All the attention hasn't changed the players. They are still acting like 11-, 12- and 13-year-olds.

When a tour guide at the Reagan Library told the players they were going to see an exact reproduction of Reagan's former office at the White House, first baseman Matt Cassel yelled, "Cool!"

When the tour guide showed the players a cruise missile at one exhibit, inquisitive outfielder Michael Nesbit asked, "Is the nuclear fuse out?"

But something is changing, Bonnie Gordon, the mother of outfielder Spencer Gordon, observed.

"When (Spencer) packed up to go to San Bernardino on Aug. 10, he was shorter than me. When he got off the plane from Williamsport on Aug. 28, he was taller than me. Something happened to these boys over the summer," she said.

On Friday, Cassel decided to cool off at the Reagan Library by dunking his head into the water fountain.

When the team met Hillary Clinton last weekend, coach George Saul paid special attention to Cassel. "I had to grab him before a Secret Service agent got him," Saul said.

Pandas outshine other species in Mexico City's zoo

By Carmina Danini
Hearst News Service

MEXICO CITY — The lion may be king everywhere else, but at the Chapultepec Park Zoo, the pandas are still the star attraction nearly 20 years after the first pair — Pe-Pe and Ying-Ying — arrived in Mexico.

Nearly 1,300 animals representing 220 different species make their home in the zoo built in 1926, but the four black-and-white pandas continue to draw the largest crowds.

That was made perfectly clear during a recent outing to the zoo, located inside the 2,100-acre Chapultepec Park. The largest park in this teeming capital, it is home to the stunning National Museum of Anthropology, several restaurants, an amusement park, botanical garden, Chapultepec Castle and the Museum of Modern Art.

The zoo re-opened to the public Aug. 2 after two years of renovations that zoo director Maria Elena Hoyo compared to remodeling a house with the inhabitants inside while an army of carpenters is working around-the-clock.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, accompanied by his family, inaugurated the zoo Aug. 1. More than 100,000 people visited the zoo the next day, and it continues to attract large crowds.

It is open from 9 a.m.-4:15 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. The zoo closes on Monday but it remains open on holidays, including Christmas and New Year's Day.

The free admission may be one reason why so many people make the zoo a prime tourist attraction. The other is that it is a pleasant place to visit and allows a visitor to leave behind the hustle-and-bustle, the smog and the incessant traffic snarls of one of the world's largest cities.

The $32 million renovation project designed by famed Mexico City architect Ricardo Legorreta completely revamped the zoo, considered one of the best in Latin America.

There is a new aviary and instead of steel cages, the animals now live in settings that resemble their natural habitat. Each area, lushly landscaped and dotted with ponds and waterfalls, has been divided into sections such as Tropical Forest, Desert and Semidesert.

Some animals, such as the pandas, remain behind glass, but the majority, including the lions, giraffes and hippopotamuses, can be glimpsed from behind rails that do not obstruct the view. The barriers that keep visitors from getting too close to the animals are subtle but effective and make the zoo experience more enjoyable.

The grounds are pristine and for those for whom the trek through the zoo can be laborious, there are rocks that serve as benches.

While there is no guidebook, there are small, well-placed plaques and maps that give the first-time visitor enough information to allay any fears about getting lost.

Even then, look to friendly-faced security guards in grayish green uniforms and dark green hard hats and young people in safari hats and printed shirts to guide you through the maze-like grounds.

There is also a small gift shop in the food court that boasts a McDonald's, Domino's Pizza and ice cream shop. Popcorn, nachos and tacos also can be purchased at other stalls. Comfortable tables and benches abound for eating at a leisurely pace.

For those who can't wait for a treat until they reach the food area, McDonald's has a second site within the grounds.

On the day I visited, adults outnumbered children. The adults, including groups of businessmen toting briefcases, appeared to appreciate the sights just as much as the tots.

Why visit the zoo, I asked two well-dressed, twenty-something businessmen loaded with briefcases, umbrellas and cellular phones.

"The pandas," said one.

"The girls who like the pandas," his companion said, grinning.

To see the pandas, visitors must stand in line and the viewing time is short — too short for looking at these delightful animals who spend most of the day munching on bamboo shoots.

IRA consolidation simplifies retirement planning

Individual retirement accounts have become a common method of saving for retirement since their inception in 1974. As more West Texas investors became familiar with IRAs, they began experimenting with the different investments that could be placed in this retirement-planning vehicle.

"Today, it is not unusual for investors to have a variety of investments in their IRAs, or to have several different IRA accounts, each with a different custodian," commented Van Pearcy, one of Midland's Investment Representatives with Edward D. Jones & Co.

"Although the Internal Revenue Service certainly allows this, you can save money and simplify record keeping by consolidating your accounts. This requires you to pay only one annual fee and allows you to receive a single statement of your IRA balances."

Consolidating your IRA accounts in one location, however, does not mean you're limited to one investment.

Most custodians offer a wide selection of investments. For a reasonable fee of about $10 a year, a mutual-fund family offers IRS-approved plans that ensure proper reporting and amending when required by the IRS. In addition, you receive a regular accounting of your investments and timely documents for your annual tax returns.

"Consolidation of your accounts makes it easier to track your investments while you are working, and at retirement it simplifies the monthly withdrawals you make from your IRA," Pearcy said.

If you decide to make an IRA rollover, you have 60 days to roll the funds from one IRA into another after you take delivery. You can make only one rollover per IRA per each 12 months. If you fail to roll your IRA into another within 60 days of taking delivery of the funds,and you are not yet age 59-1/2, both taxes and penalties will be accessed on the withdrawal.

"IRAs are a simple, inexpensive way to plan for your retirement," said Pearcy. "When you roll over any of these funds, be certain the transaction is handled properly. By taking extra care, you'll ensure your retirement future is properly planned for."

Van Pearcy has been working with West Texans for almost 8 years. He received his undergraduate degree and an MBA from the University of Notre Dame.

Reared in the small West Texas town of Andrews, Van teaches an advanced investment class at Midland College.

If you have questions or need intelligent investment help, feel free to call Van's office for a no-obligation appointment. Call 683-1516 or stop by his office at 2020 West Cuthbert across the street from the high school football stadium.

Van Pearcy, Investment Representative with Edward D. Jones & Co. recommends rolling multiple IRA accounts into one account in order to save money and record keeping. For more information about IRAs, call him at 683-1516, or stop by his office at 2020 Cuthbert (opposite the high school football stadium).

Hercules Self-Storage:

New facility offers unique service

Hercules Moving Company is expanding into Hercules Self-Storage Company.

The newly created branch of the Hercules Moving Company is "the natural expansion of the small local moving business," Brian Foley, owner, said.

Foley has been in the moving business for four-and a-half years and is "intimately familiar with most of the other storage facilities in town."

"Hercules was designed to outperform the other store facilities in town," Foley said."I know the storage business inside and out," said Foley.

Hercules Self-Storage is unique because it is the only self-storage operation affiliated with a local mover.

"Because of the combined operation," said Foley, "people only have to make one phone call."

Therefore, customers can, if they wish, receive both a moving contractor and a storage unit within the same business.

The Hercules' units lease month to month and there is no deposit required.

For a limited time, however, there is a special that includes four hours of free moving services for anyone who signs a three-month lease.

There are forty brand new 10x20 units.

The building, which is located at 608 West Kentucky, has a fortress type design with an enclosed courtyard.

"The building surrounds a paved, as opposed to dirt, courtyard," said Foley.

It is surrounded by a 10-foot cinder-block wall, and two security lights are located at the back of the storage property.

There is 24 -hour accessibility to these facilities, but they are locked at all times.

The gates are self-service, however, and anyone who has a key (which will be received upon leasing of the unit) can access his or her unit.

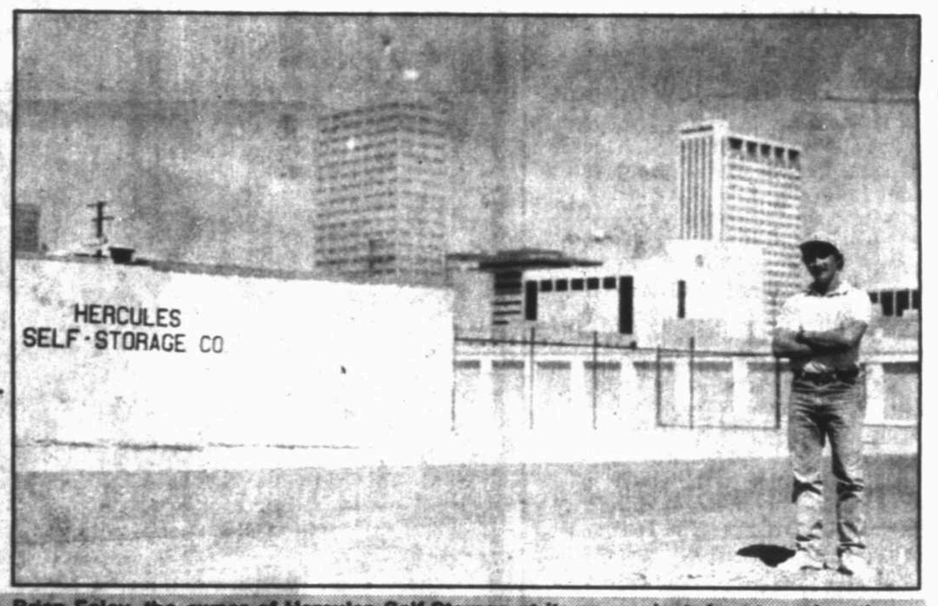

Another benefit in choosing Hercules Self-Storage is that the building is convenient to the downtown area.

"Hercules Self-Storage is the closest self-storage facility to the downtown area and the one that is nearest to the police station," said Foley.

These lots are convenient to the downtown business community because people can be closer to their things during the workday and can have access to their storage facility from their workplace.

These units are located at 608 West Kentucky, which is right between the County Tax Office and the old Exxon building.

To inquire about pricing, call Hercules Self-Storage Company at 689-6723, or contact Foley by his mobile number at 553-4545. Foley's office is located at 5111 San Antonio in Midland.

Brian Foley, the owner of Hercules Self-Storage at its convenient downtown location. Hercules offers a combination of storage and moving facilities. For more information about how one call can solve your storage and moving problems, call Foley at 689-6723.

Bridge enthusiasts try to bring game to youths

By Richard Benke
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — In France 20,000 children study bridge in school. In China, where a pilot program has begun, the number could reach 200 million.

The World Bridge Federation and the American Contract Bridge League have sought for 10 years to persuade school officials around the world, especially in the United States, that bridge is more than a game — and to convince youngsters that it's not just a diversion for the over-40 station-wagon set.

"It's a mixture of poker and chess and falling in love," said Zia Mahmood of Karachi, Pakistan, author of "Bridge My Way."

Bridge is a great tool for studying statistics and probability, said Jose Damiani of Paris, the WBF president-elect.

The campaign to bring bridge to schools was prompted by a realization that young people aren't taking up the game the way their parents and grandparents did. In 1990, the average age of the WBF's 200,000 North American members was 58.

"It's a mixture of poker and chess and falling in love.'

— Zia Mahmood, author of 'Bridge My Way'

"We were careless I think for a long time. We didn't realize how old our membership is getting," said Virgil Anderson of Springfield, Mo., president of the ACBL.

"I think if we can get into the high school curriculum, we have our best chance. We're beginning to have success."

The ACBL is offering to provide books and teachers to public school systems to get bridge programs started.

Mahmood and others trying to introduce bridge to youngsters are here for the 9th World Bridge Championships, which runs through Oct. 1. The tournament features 5,000 players.

An estimated 4 million people worldwide play bridge, according to the WBF and the ACBL.

In France, schools offer a mix of curricular and extracurricular bridge, with some students getting diploma credits, Damiani said.

Yi Hou Gao, vice chairman of the Chinese Bridge Federation, said a bridge program has begun in at least 10 schools in Beijing, Shanghai and elsewhere.

Bobby Wolff of Dallas, president of the WBF and the No. 2 player in the world, said he visited China last year and found it "very much into bridge." "Bridge will be taught to 200 million Chinese students," he predicted.

CDC reports cases of food poisoning from ostrich ferns

ATLANTA (AP) — Well fiddle-dee-dee! It seems fiddleheads can cause food poisoning.

Ostrich ferns, more commonly called fiddleheads, are part of the regular diet in the Northeast and in Canada's Maritime Provinces, as a cooked vegetable.

Since the 1980s, however, restaurants and specialty shops have sold fresh fiddleheads foraged from the wild as a seasonal delicacy.

The taste for something novel led to two outbreaks of food poisoning among more than 60 people who ate fiddleheads at restaurants in New York and in Banff, Alberta, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported.

About 30 people who ate the vegetable at a restaurant in New York's Steuben County fell ill with diarrhea, nausea and vomiting after eating fiddleheads.

Ancient smelters spewed lead over entire hemisphere

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ancient Greek and Roman smelters spewed enough lead to contaminate the entire Northern Hemisphere, rivaling modern-day gasoline as a top lead pollutant.

That's the finding of the latest study, published in the journal Science, to condemn the fallout from silver refining 2,500 years ago.

"This occurrence marks the oldest large-scale hemispheric pollution ever reported, long before the onset of the Industrial Revolution," concluded study author Dr. Claude Boutron of France's Domaine University.

The ancient Greeks and Romans have long been suspected of causing a toxic fallout.

Twenty years ago, Dr. Clair Patterson of the California Institute of Technology theorized that vast areas of Europe were contaminated by lead shed as a byproduct of ancient silver refining.

In March, Swedish researchers confirmed his calculations, using lead in lake sediments to pinpoint the earliest pollution between 500 B.C. and A.D. 300.

Boutron took those findings a little further, analyzing lead preserved deep in Greenland's ice.

Like the Swedes, Boutron found that lead suddenly increased hundreds of times above natural levels 2,500 years ago, and stayed that high for the next 800 years — corresponding to the Greco-Roman civilizations.

The finding so far north shows that swirling air masses spread the lead from smelters in Spain, Greece and central Europe not just regionally but across the entire hemisphere, he concluded.

About 400 tons of lead were deposited on Greenland, his study found. That's equal to 15 percent of the fallout from leaded gasoline, one of history's worst lead pollutants, Boutron said.

"We hadn't recognized how extensive it could be," Patterson said. "The average person contains 1,000 times more lead in your body than did your prehistoric ancestors. ... The Arctic record lead levels have affected modern people.

shows when this buildup began and how it proceeded."

Picture I.D. cards help kids in emergency situations

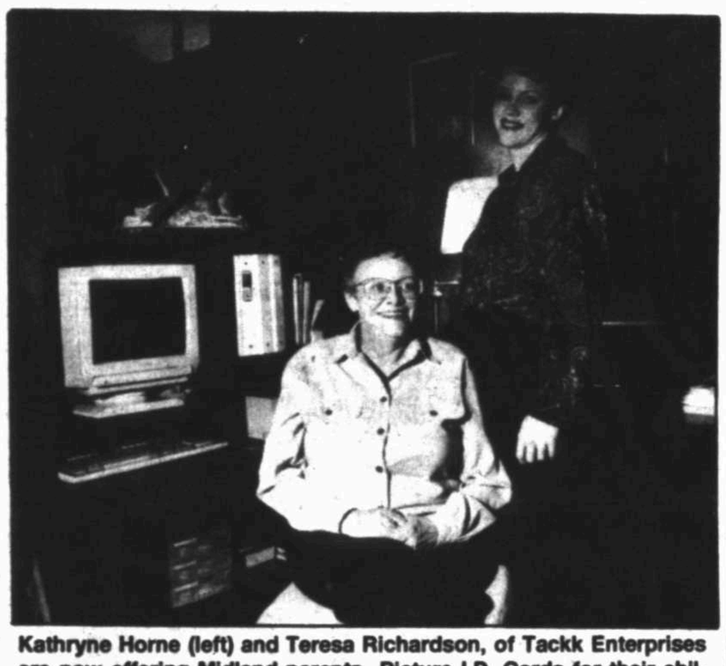

The first few minutes after an accident or other emergency are critical and, in most cases, medical treatment should start immediately.

A new business recently opened in Midland can help parents prepare for this crucial situation by providing Picture I.D. Cards for children and young adults.

These laminated, pocket-sized plastic cards, which include a photo, name, address, birth-date, allergy information, and emergency contacts and phone numbers, are recommended for all family members from the age of three months to 18 years.

The cards, which may be worn or carried, also provide a parental consent form to permit Emergency-Room treatment in life threatening situations.

The Picture I.D. cards are available from TACKK ENTERPRISES, a new Midland-based company owned and operated by Kathryne Horne and Teresa Richardson.

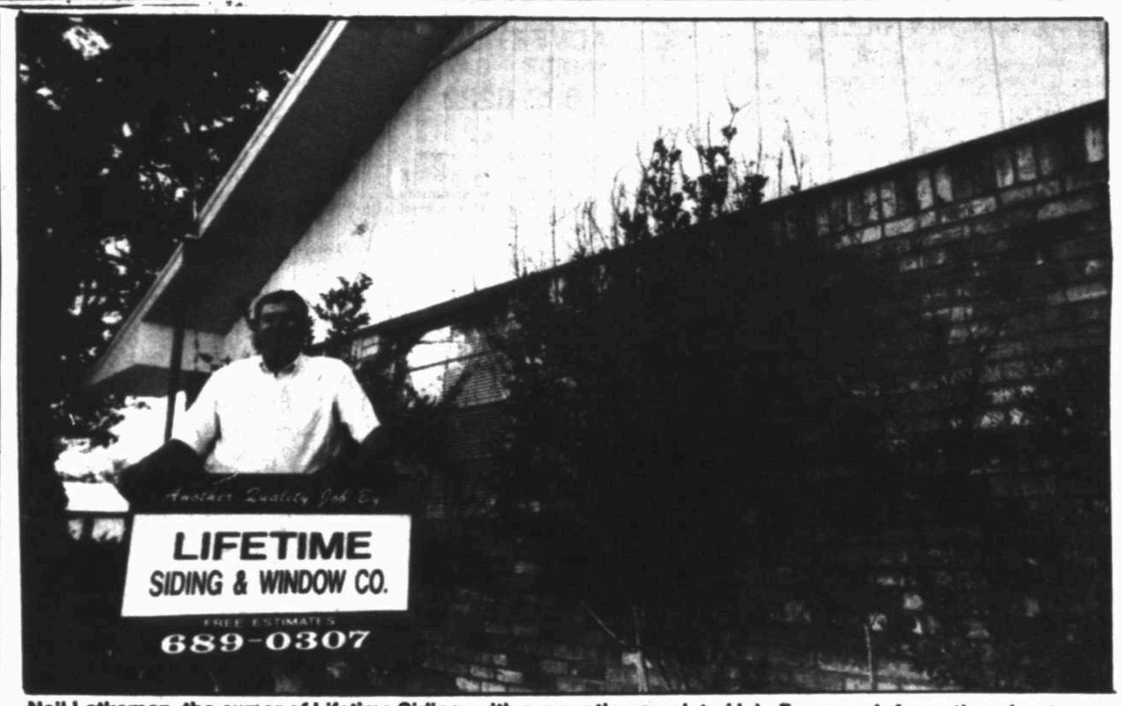

Kathryne Horne (left) and Teresa Richardson, of Tackk Enterprises are now offering Midland parents Picture I.D. Cards for their children. For more information about the cards call them at 694-8012.

According to Horne, a Registered Nurse for more than 20 years (who now works at Midland Hospital and Medical Center), "Our new Picture I.D./Consent Form Cards were developed because of the difficulty I've experienced in finding the parents of an injured child when immediate treatment was required.

Some complicated treatments and procedures require parental consent and, when a child has this card, healthcare specialists will be able to locate parents more quickly and begin the emergency procedures. Such prompt action could save your child's life.

Information about obtaining Picture I.D. Cards for your family is available by writing to TACKK ENTERPRISES, P.O. Box 80932, Midland, TX 79708-0932; or by phone: 694-8012, Mon.-Fri. 9:00 AM 6:00 PM and Sat., 12:00 Noon to 4:00 PM.

Rules:

Anyone 18 years or older can enter except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Brite systems Inc., Associated Publishing Co., and their advertising and promotion agencies.

The "It's 4 U" Game is designed for people who live in the Midland and Odessa calling areas and no purchase is required to play or win prizes, although long distance toll charges may apply if you call from outside the Midland-Odessa calling area.

Look for the "It's 4 U" Game ad here and in the advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until November 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you will win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize.

You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4 U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, October 30, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending November 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win one of that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4 U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads page. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.

How you feel at 8 a.m.

How the kids make you feel at 2:45 p.m.

Being a Junior Achievement volunteer can change your whole day. Not to mention a few kids' lives.

When you're greeted by kids who are so eager to learn that they're bubbling over with enthusiasm, it can turn your day around. To become a volunteer and help kids get started thinking about their future careers, you don't need teaching experience. We supply training and materials. The kids supply the motivation.

To find out more about the new Junior Achievement elementary school program, call 1-800-THE-NEW-JA.
