Food, gas prices fall in June, report shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices held flat for a third straight month in June as both food and gasoline prices fell, the government said today. For the first half of 1984, inflation at the wholesale level was just 2.8 percent.

Not since early 1983 have prices refused to rise for a full calendar quarter, the Labor Department said.

Today's report seemed to indicate that inflation at the wholesale level is even more under control than had been predicted by many economists, who have foreseen a full-year inflation rate of 4.5 percent to 5 percent.

Even with that forecast, economist Robert Gough of Data Resources Inc., said in advance of today's report that "consumers really needn't worry about inflation in 1984."

Indeed, there was little to worry about last month.

Food prices fell 0.6 percent, their third straight monthly decline. Sharp decreases for meat, fish and eggs offset steep gains for fresh fruits and vegetables.

Gasoline prices were down 0.7 percent.

Meanwhile, the govenment offered fresh evidence that the economic expansion is moderating from the first quarter's frenzied growth. Analysts say slower growth will lessen pressure on inflation and interest rates, thus increasing the likelihood of a longer running expansion.

The Commerce Department reported that June retail sales advanced 0.8 percent to a seasonally adjusted $109 billion, a sign the spring buying spree was easing.

The increase was ahead of the 0.5 percent rise in May but well under the strong 3.1 percent gain in April.

In a third report, the Federal Reserve Board said production in the nation's factories, mines and utilities rose 0.5 percent in June, in line with the previous month's performance but under the strong showing of April.

The production report showed that the strongest gains were made in automotive products, business equipment and energy materials.

Detailing last month's Producer Price Index for finished goods — the official name for the wholesale price calculation — the Labor Department said:

—Beef and veal prices tumbled 1.8 percent while pork prices were off 0.6 percent. Fish prices were off 19 percent and egg prices plummeted 13.8 percent. Poultry prices were down 6 percent.

Offsetting those declines were a surge of 18.1 percent in fresh fruit prices and 10.5 percent for vegetables. Food prices overall had fallen 1.2 percent in May, the steepest decline in almost two years.

—Natural gas prices rose 0.8 percent and heating oil prices were down 0.2 percent. Overall, energy prices fell 0.2 percent. All the energy price calculations are for May.

Local leaders call Ferraro's selection 'historic'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's selection Thursday as Walter Mondale's choice for vice president was welcomed by several local political leaders as a historic event.

But reaction was mixed as to how the choice will affect Mondale's chances of defeating President Reagan in the fall.

Dallas Willis will get an early chance to vote on the choice when he attends the Democratic National Convention next week as a Texas delegate. Saying he was surprised Mondale did choose a woman for the ticket, Willis added, "She's really an exciting person. She's going to lend something to the campaign that will make the campaign different this fall."

"It is history in the making," said Delma Abalos of the Permian Basin Women's Political Caucus.

And Janet Massey, the Midland County Democratic chairman, hailed the choice of the three-term congresswoman from New York as "a definite asset to the ticket."

"I have to be delighted," said Ms. Massey. "It's definitely exciting that we have made the breakthrough in the Democratic Party that women are qualified."

"I think people have no fear of voting for a woman," she said, noting that Treasurer Ann Richards was the leading vote-getter on the state Democratic ticket in 1982.

But Republican National Committeeman Ernest Angelo said the choice of Ms. Ferraro would hurt Mondale, not because she's a woman but because of her political beliefs.

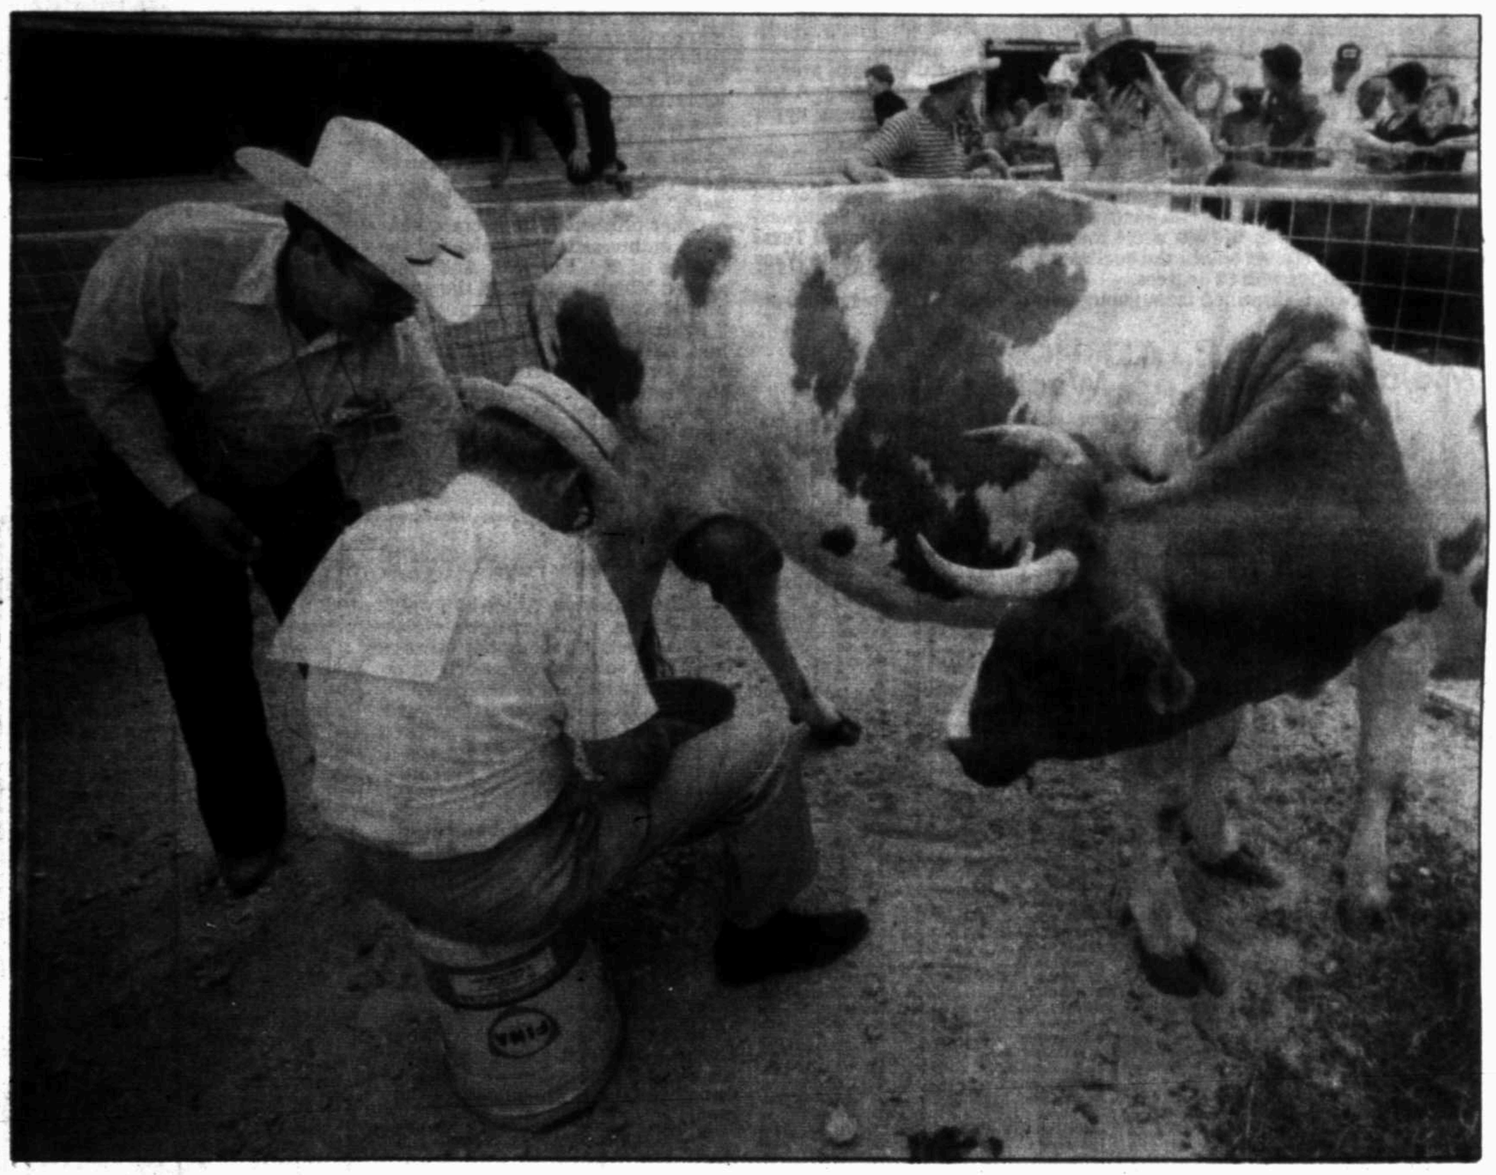

"Mondale selected a northeastern liberal, which means they have a philosophically unbalanced ticket," said Angelo. "It's good because it draws a clear line" between the Republican and Democratic tickets.

As for the historic importance of choosing a woman, "I don't think it's that big a deal," he said. "Women in recent years have certainly proved they can handle important jobs," and Ms. Ferraro "is clearly as qualified as a lot of other people who have run for vice president."

But Angelo is unimpressed with the political appeal of a Mondale-Ferraro ticket, especially in Texas, and Mayor G. Thane Akins agrees.

Political leaders applaude Ferraro

The Associated Press

Political leaders welcomed Geraldine Ferraro to the No. 2 spot on the Democratic presidential ticket with praise for her style and achievements, but many expressed doubts that the liberal New Yorker can help her party gather the much-needed votes of conservative Southerners.

Virtually every Democrat asked to describe the 48-year-old Ms. Ferraro, an Italian-American, a Roman Catholic mother of three and a three-term congresswoman from the New York borough of Queens, offered nothing but plaudits. Her rivals for the Democratic vice presidential candidate spot were among the most lavish with applause.

But amid the approval, some party leaders voiced skepticism of the decision Walter F. Mondale made after five weeks of deliberation. Mondale is assured of the majority he needs to win the presidential nomination at the Democratic convention in San Francisco next week.

"I'm a good Southern Democrat, and if she is on the ticket and Mondale is the nominee I will support her," Tennessee businessman and longtime Democratic fundraiser Marshall Ledbetter said Thursday. "But I'm not ready for a lady in that high place, and my people aren't ready."

KOSA fatal plane crash tests inconclusive

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Extensive flight simulations of the fatal crash of a twin-engine aircraft in Midland last November indicate the crash may have occurred after the pilot suffered a possible heart attack on a landing approach and a passenger riding in the right seat of the cockpit may have automatically grabbed the controls to avert a crash.

That reaction could have happened, according to Warren Wandel, a National Transportation Safety Board air safety investigator who probed the Nov. 26, 1983, crash. All eight aboard the Beechcraft King Air 100 turboprop aircraft, leased by KOSA-TV of Odessa from Texas Western Aviation Inc. at Midland Regional Airport, were killed.

"He (passenger Brent Roach) was just riding up there," Wandel said today. "He was not a rated pilot." But whether or not Roach, 24-year KOSA production assistant from Odessa, actually grabbed or tried to take over the controls has not been discerned.

"There's a possibility he may have," Wandel said. "We can't prove conclusively one way or another."

Further, pathologists disagree over whether or not the pilot, 29-year-old Keith Elkin, 29, of Midland suffered a heart attack hours or moments before the crash or if he suffered one at all. One group of pathologists say autopsy results indicate he suffered some form of a heart attack; another group of pathologists say trauma of the crash and fire caused injuries to the heart which may have simulated a heart attack.

"There is some (pathological) conflicts," Wandel said. "There were no conflicts in the evidence," he said, "but there are conflicting opinions."

The crash occurred after the aircraft had made a final approach but the pilot apparently aborted the landing, retracted the tricycle landing gear and was making a go-around when the aircraft went into a nose-high attitude between 700 and 1,000 feet above the ground, stalled, rolled inverted to the left and struck the ground nose first between 87 and 90 degrees. "I don't think it was recoverable," he said of the stalled aircraft.

Full moon adds to witches' Friday the 13th events

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) — A full moon on Friday the 13th may make some cringe, but those who claim to practice witchcraft are coupling solemn ceremonies and joyous celebrations because of today's rare coincidence.

Miguel Serrano, who operates an herb shop known as a botanica in this southern New Jersey community, said sales of witches' supplies — Lucky 13 Oil and Fast Luck 13 candles, for example — boomed because this month's full moon comes on Friday the 13th.

"For some people, Friday the 13th is a lucky day," Serrano said.

"Business is booming in the occult everywhere, and I'm sure the botanicas will sell a lot of '13' items," said Gavin Frost, who heads the School of Wicca in New Bern, N.C., that mails literature to about 20,000 witches in covens across the country.

Frost said a full moon on Friday the 13th "adds a little to the festivities. We're having an extra party. Having the full moon and the 13th is kind of a festive occasion."

Marion Weinstein, an author on the occult and a self-proclaimed witch living in New York, said witchcraft stems from an ancient pagan religion and was very individualistic.

"That's what is so nice about witchcraft. There's personal interpretation," said Ms. Weinstein.

Frost explained that witchcraft is not based on devil worship, as many people believe but, rather, on the worship of gods and goddesses established centuries ago.

"Witchcraft is the old religion. So when the Christians came on being the new religion, they said we were devil worshipers, because the god of the old religion is always the devil of the new religion," he said.

"We're very much into ecology and protection of the mother earth. We don't believe in blood sacrifices and things of that nature," he said.

Witches hold religious ceremonies every full moon, and gather for celebrations on Friday the 13th, said Frost, adding that this month he and his wife, Yvonne, would attend the solemn religious observation before a barbecue.

After-tax income climbs, report shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuts in government assistance have lowered the income of families headed by women, even as most other households were getting a boost from President Reagan's tax program, new government statistics show.

After-tax income for American households climbed 1.7 percent to an average $18,906 between 1981 and 1982, the Census Bureau reported Thursday.

But families headed by women, with no husband present, suffered a 3.8 percent income decline to an average of $10,868, the report disclosed.

Cuts in Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other assistance programs may be at least part of the reason for this drop, said Charles T. Nelson of the Census Bureau. He noted that eligibility rules for several programs had been tightened, eliminating some participants and thus lowering average income for women.

Nelson stressed that many of these families also receive non-cash benefits such as Medicaid, food stamps, housing subsidies and school lunch programs, which are income but are not counted in his statistics.

Several of those programs have also been cut, however, Catherine East of the National Women's Political Caucus pointed out.

She cited a Congressional Budget Office report that showed that families with incomes of $10,000 or less lost money under the administration tax program, while those with higher incomes gained.

The Census study showed that taxes paid by households with incomes of under $10,000 rose 4.2 percent, while taxes paid by all other income groups fell.

Some 55.4 percent of households with children, headed by women, no husband present, had incomes under $10,000 in 1982.

The Congressional Budget Office study showed that cuts in cash benefits reduced income to low-income families by $250 a year, Ms. East said, and another $390 was lost to reductions in non-cash programs such as Medicaid and food stamps.

But for most Americans the news from the new Census study of after-tax income was good.

"The tax cut, you could really see the difference it made," Nelson said in a telephone interview.

Average household income had declined 2.6 percent from 1980 to 1981, before the income tax cuts took effect, the report showed.

The biggest increase from 1981 to 1982, 5.2 percent, affected the elderly, with average household incomes rising to $13,767 after taxes. Nelson noted that indexing of Social Security income helps this group, with payments rising along with inflation.

And he observed that there has been an increase in interest income in recent years as banks and savings institutions offer a wide variety of high interest savings accounts.

Older families are more likely to have savings to invest in such accounts than younger people, he commented, and thus may have benefited from more interest income.

Nelson also observed that the effect of children on family finances was illustrated in the study.

Married couples had an increase in after-tax incomes of 2.3 percent to $22,934, Nelson pointed out. But for couples with children the after-tax income rose only 0.8 percent to $23,207, a change so small as to virtually be the same income as a year earlier.

There have been discussions of increasing the federal tax deduction for children and these statistics would tend to support those proposals, Nelson said.

White couples average income rose 1.7 percent during the year, to $19,606, the study reported.

Blacks had an 0.8 percent rise to $12,955 and Hispanic families saw their income fall 2.9 percent to $15,297. However, because of the small sample the change in income for blacks and Hispanics was not considered statistically significant by Census officials.

The largest regional growth was in the South, where household incomes rose 2.4 percent to $18,399, although that was still the lowest in the nation. The Northeast had 1.9 percent growth to $18,915.

Incomes grew 1.4 percent to $19,953 for families in the West, while the average North Central families had income growth of 1 percent to $18,754.

FERRARO

Virginia State Republican Chairman Donald Huffman of Roanoke said he felt Mondale's choice would do nothing to enhance Democratic chances of overtaking what many consider an overwhelming Reagan lead in his state.

"A woman from New York City won't appeal that much to Virginians," Huffman said.

"I consider Rep. Ferraro a highly qualified person with a wide range of experience," said Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, a Democrat. "But I'm concerned she may not bring the support he needs in the West."

Alabama GOP Executive Director Marty Connors said information from polls indicates that the selection of Ms. Ferraro "shows this is an indication that Walter Mondale is willing to write off the South. The very fact he did not choose a Southerner...is an indication he knows how strong the president is down here."

Other prominent Democrats, however, enthusiastically applauded the choice of Ms. Ferraro. And most agreed Mondale attracted the attention of women voters.

South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings, once thought to be in the running for the vice presidency, called Ms. Ferraro "very smart and effective on her feet. She has gained a great deal of respect in a very short time," the Democrat said.

Walter Mondale is joined by his wife Joan, left, and his selection for vice president, Geraldine Ferraro and her husband John Zaccaro, at the podium of the Minnesota House of Representatives.

Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, who was also considered Mondale, said Ms. Ferraro is "extremely well qualified. She's a dynamic person with a great deal of enthusiasm."

"I think she's a winner and she'll look like one," said former National Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss. "She's a class act."

"Her public record on behalf of working people of America is outstanding," said Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, an early Mondale supporter.

Former President Jimmy Carter said his former vice president had made "an excellent decision" in choosing Ms. Ferraro, and Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes called her "very competent, articulate" person who "will bring a new, added dimension to the Democratic ticket."

"There will be women who perhaps would have been sitting on the sidelines who will now step forward and campaign hard for the Democratic ticket," said Lucille Pattison, the top county official in Dutchess County, N.Y., and the only woman county executive in the state.

"I fear, from a Republican standpoint, that she (Ms. Ferraro) will solidify the gender gap for the Democrats with women for the next decade, maybe the next generation," said Republican Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon.

On a more personal note, the reaction from the homefront was entirely predictable.

"I know the time might come when a woman should be vice president. But I think that she should have a great deal of experience in foreign affairs before she is nominated for such a position," said Dorothy Bush, the mother of Vice President George Bush.

Antonetta Ferraro, the mother of the congresswoman who raised Ms. Ferraro alone after her father died when she was 8, said her daughter and Mondale "make a great pair."

"With the help of God," she added, "I'm moving to Washington."

LEADERS

"I don't think she'll help him win," said Akins, a Republican. "Not because she's a woman, but because any polls I've seen very clearly show a very large lead for Reagan."

County Commissioner Durward Wright, a Democrat, said the ticket will probably lose as many votes as it gains as a result of Ms. Ferraro's candidacy.

"They'll probably about break even," said Wright, who feels Ms. Ferraro's value as a running mate will depend on what she can bring to the ticket as an individual.

"It'll come down to qualifications, as opposed to gender," said Wright.

Mondale had been considering several minority candidates, such as Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros. But his failure to choose a minority running mate didn't disappoint black voters "because they doubted they were really seriously considered," said Charlie Jackson, president of the Black Advisory Council.

Interviewing the minority candidates was "a political scheme," Jackson said, but because blacks never took it seriously, choosing Ms. Ferraro probably won't hurt Mondale with black voters in the fall.

"I thought he would choose someone a little more in the public eye," he said. "But if she's qualified, that's good and well."

The choice was welcomed by Beatrice Herd, president of the Coalition of Black Democrats.

"I think it's a great idea," she said. "Women are definitely on the move."

Her enthusiasm was echoed by Oralia Corrales, past president of the Mexican-American Advisory Council, who said she was "very, very happy" with the selection of Ms. Ferraro.

Even though she said some men will be threatened by a female candidate for vice president, overall Ms. Ferraro "is certainly going to help the Democrats."

"There's a tremendous amount of excitement" about the campaign, said Ms. Corrales. "The time has come."

Inmate dies in Florida's electric chair

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — David Leroy Washington, who admitted killing three people and said he'd rather die himself than rot in jail, was executed today in Florida's electric chair.

Washington was the second U.S. death row prisoner to be executed in as many days.

His death was announced at 7:09 a.m. by corrections Sgt. Don Gladdish to the 42 witnesses in death chamber.

"I would like to say to the families of all of my victims, I'm sorry for all the grief and heartache I have brought to them," Washington told the witnesses shortly before he died. "If my death brings them any satisfaction, so be it."

Addressing the 220 other condemned inmates in the prison, he said, "I'd like to say to all the guys on death row, don't bow to defeat, don't bow to a victory, don't bow to a defeat without a fight."

"I'm kind of nervous. That's all."

A chin strap was placed over his mouth, a skullcap was tightened over his head and a black rubber mask dropped over his face.

At 7:04 a.m., the jolt of 2,000 volts of electricity made his body jump briefly, and sweat darkened his shirt. He tightened his fist, and the fist remained closed throughout the 85-second cycle of electricty.

About 30 people demonstrated outside the prison against the death penalty, while a half-dozen showed their support.

The U.S. Supreme Court late Thursday rejected last-ditch pleas by Washington's lawyers to step in and halt the execution, voting 7-2 against further argument.

Washington was under his third death warrant for killing University of Miami student Frank Meli, elderly Miami resident Katrina Birk and minister Daniel Pridgen in an eight-day murder spree in Miami in 1976.

As he waited in a holding cell near the death chamber at Florida State Prison, Washington was "stoic" when told of the high court's decision, a prison official said.

His appeals were based on a lawyer's claim that the death sentence was arbitrary and discriminatory.

A second Florida inmate also scheduled for execution today was spared by the high court.

Washington ordered a last meal of fried shrimp and oysters, french fries, lemonade, a half-pint of vanilla ice cream, hot rolls and catsup, said prison spokesman Vernon Bradford, and was visited by his mother and other relatives Thursday.

His execution made him the 22nd inmate, and the seventh in Florida, to be put to death in the United States since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976. On Thursday, Georgia executed convicted murderer Ivon R. Stanley for the death of an insurance collector who was robbed, beaten and buried alive.

The 34-year-old Washington, a tall, slim former migrant worker, confessed to all three slayings, saying that he hated Pridgen; that he had planned a robbery at the home of Ms. Birk; and that he had abducted Meli after answering a newspaper advertisement for Meli's car.

After pleading guilty, he asked the judge to sentence him to death rather than send him to prison.

"I don't want to die — you know what I mean? But if I sit up in some jail and rot, I'd rather be killed," he said.

In Miami, Meli's mother, Dolores Meli Lo Proto, said Washington's execution was long overdue.

"My son was tied up for two days, stabbed 11 times in the chest," she said.

While the Supreme Court refused to block Washington's execution, a separate ruling by the justices Thursday spared a second Florida inmate from the electric chair today.

The high court refused to overrule a stay of execution granted by the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta to Jimmy Lee Smith, 30, who was convicted of slaying a mother and daughter. The appeals court had ruled that Smith's arguments of ineffective trial counsel needed closer study.

Judge dismisses count against De Lorean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John De Lorean's lawyers, jubilant at rulings dismissing one count and throwing out two pieces of government evidence, said the automaker's defense on cocaine charges had become "more manageable" as they began calling witnesses.

"John De Lorean has been acquitted of a crime," defense attorney Donald Re declared Thursday. "... We are beginning to whittle their case to pieces."

However, prosecutors minimized the loss, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Perry said the prosecution may seek a reconsideration of the ruling.

The silver-haired auto industry maverick, charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine to save his sports car company from bankruptcy, broke into a broad grin and flashed a victory sign with his fingers when U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi announced his surprise decision Thursday.

The elimination of one count decreased by five years and $10,000 the possible sentence De Lorean would face if convicted. The remaining eight counts against him carry top penalties of 67 years in prison and $180,000 in fines.

Meanwhile, the defense team began calling witnesses, disclosing a strategy of attacking the government through its own agents.

FBI agent Jerry West, who arrested the 59-year-old automaker, was the first defense witness called before court recessed until Tuesday.

Approach speed in the aircraft is 114 knots (131 mph), he said, and the aircraft impacted the ground between 130 and 160 knots (150 and 184 mph).

Dead are Elkin, Roach; Gary Hopper, 32, KOSA-TV's assistant news director; Jeff Shull, 25, the station's sports director; Bob Stephens, 47, KOSA's chief engineer; Ed Monette, 26, KOSA assistant engineer; Bruce Dyer, 26, production assistant, and Hopper's brother-in-law, Jay Price, 37. Elkin, Hopper, Dyer and Price lived in Midland. The others were from Odessa.

"It was not a survivable accident," said Wandel. The pilot and passengers were killed on impact, which resulted in a fire. He said Roach was strapped in the cockpit's right seat when the bodies were removed from the smeltering wreckage in the predawn hours of Saturday, Nov. 26. "We know exactly where everybody was." The pilot in command occupies the left seat.

KOSA-TV had leased the aircraft to fly to Wichita Falls and Fort Worth in covering high school football games.

Wandel said he conducted 4½ hours of crash simulation in a flight simulator in duplicating the crash.

He said the twin-engine Beechcraft is certified by the FAA for single-pilot flying.

Wandel said he mailed his 257-page report to the five-member NTSB in Washington, D.C. Conclusive findings of the crash may be released in about three weeks, he said.

Tennis size hailstones hit Munich, West Germany

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Hailstones the size of tennis balls, high winds and torrential rain pounded the Munich area, injuring at least 300 people and causing millions of dollars worth of damage, police said.

A 54-year-old man was stricken by a fatal heart attack when a hailstone shattered a window in his house, the fire department said.

The barrage of ice balls began about 8 p.m. Thursday.

Jackson expected to give 'Thriller' concert in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Sporting the obligatory Sgt. Pepper jacket and white sequined glove, Michael Jackson tonight will strut and dance his way to the top of a five-story stage built just for him and try to thrill thousands.

Jackson and his road crew already have turned Texas Stadium from Cowboy country into a laser-lit sound stage, with nine-story speaker columns, and even the Cowboys are impressed.

Five Cowboys players tried to pay the singer a visit Thursday afternoon at his hotel suite. He wasn't in, but Dextor Clinkscale, Tony Dorsett, Tony Hill, Drew Pearson and Dennis Thurman were invited backstage to one of the three Victory Tour concerts.

Some critics say Jackson's appearance in Dallas has brought out the worst in people. Ministers complain about the underlying tones of his music, and fans protested ticket policy. But crowds have come out to see Jackson and his family so far during his stay.

"Michael is really up for the concert," said Jackson's spokesman Norm Winter.

Officials said some seats for the concert series remained unsold in the second leg of his nationwide tour. But stadium spokesmen said workers are preparing for a flurry of medical emergencies when the concerts begin at dark each night.

The National Weather Service predicts temperatures at dark each night should be about 90.

Concert-goers will have to pass through metal detectors, and bags will be searched, officials said.

Jackson himself has been accompanied by heavy security in his stops in the Metroplex.

Jackson donned a fake mustache and beard as he walked through the Galleria shopping mall on Dallas' north side Wednesday. A brother and sister were also at the mall.

After his mall visit, Michael Jackson spent a couple of hours in a north Dallas neighborhood with members of a Jehovah's Witness congregation, knocking on doors to discuss his beliefs with residents.

Jackson had met the members when he and his mother, Katherine, dropped in unexpectedly at their Bible study Tuesday night in Carrollton, a suburb on the northwest fringe of Dallas.

Postmaster admits he discarded mail

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) — A postmaster who was placed on administrative leave after admitting he threw away hundreds of magazines because he wanted to save time admits he did something wrong — but doesn't think he should be fired for it.

Ronnie Powell, who has 19 years with the postal service and has been postmaster in this East Texas community for the past two years, vowed to appeal the action.

Powell had earlier been the subject of a postal service investigation, Jack Johns, sectional service manager, said Thursday. He said Powell will be fired at the end of the leave if the appeal is denied.

Johns said the magazines thrown away had incorrect addresses and should have been returned to the publishers.

"The only reason I did it ... is that there was lots and lots of pressure" in the job, Powell said in a telephone interview from his Fairfield home. "I was using this as a means of saving work hours. I'd do it every two or three months when I'd get behind."

Powell said he discarded "hundreds" of the magazines during his two years as postmaster in the community.

Johns said a report on an investigation of the practice was given to the U.S. Attorney's office. He said he did not know whether any charges would be filed.

"It's very uncommon," said Johns, who has been in the Postal Service for 23 years. "It's not the first case I've heard of that's happened but it is very unusual."

Swimsuit, talent winners named

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Sherry Elkins, Miss Greenville, won the talent competition and Patti Packer, Miss Hurst-Euless-Bedford won swimsuit competition in the second night of preliminaries of the 1984 Miss Texas Pageant.

Miss Elkins, a 23-year-old student at Texas Woman's University, is a cousin of former Miss America Mary Ann Mobley, pageant officials said. She performed a ventriloquism act with a dog named Twinkles.

Miss Packer is a 21-year-old senior at Texas Christian University.

The pageant began Wednesday night. After another round of preliminaries tonight, the finals will be televised, beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Texans praise Veep selection

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — By eliminating the two Texans he interviewed as potential running mates, Walter Mondale may have eliminated Texas from the Democratic column this November, said some of the state's politicans.

Mondale on Thursday ended the suspense and elected New York Congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro as his vice presidential running mate.

Expected to win the nomination at next week's Democratic convention, Mondale had interviewed Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros as possible vice presidential nominees.

Though he reportedly impressed Mondale, the 37-year-old Cisneros had been viewed as a long shot because of his youth and relative inexperience. Most Texas Democrats were pushing for Bentsen.

Bentsen friends had said earlier this week the senator was told "indirectly" by the Mondale campaign that he would not be selected.

"I congratulate Vice President Mondale on his selection of Rep. Ferraro as his running mate," said Bentsen in a statement released from his Washington office. "I have a good deal of respect for Rep. Ferraro and I look forward to working with her when she presides over the Senate as the first woman vice president in the history of the United States."

CISNEROS told reporters in San Antonio he was also "very, very pleased" with the choice of Ms. Ferraro, the first woman selected by a major party candidate to run for vice president.

"I could not have been prouder to have been involved in a process that results in this historical achievement," Cisneros said. "My family is honored, my city is honored, my heritage has been paid respect by my involvement in the process."

Ms. Ferraro's geographic and political background — not her gender — was of more concern to politicians in Texas, where the top of the ticket could affect the outcome of the U.S. Senate race between state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, and U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, R-College Station.

"I think it will make it more difficult for us in Texas to carry the state," said Gov. Mark White at a Capitol news conference.

"It would have been easier if she were from Houston," he said.

"The Senate race, I think, is riding on the success of the (presidential) ticket," said Houston Congressman Mickey Leland, a Mondale supporter and chairman of the Democratic National Committee's Black Caucus. "With Mondale being painted as a liberal and another liberal on the ticket and Doggett — there's no philosophical balance. It's going to present some problems.

"It was my opinion at the beginning that it was going to be hard enough to carry Texas even with Bentsen on the ticket."

DOGGETT MET with with campaign aides in Austin on Thursday and issued a brief statement calling Mondale's selection of Ferraro "wise and courageous," though he had preferred Bentsen or Cisneros.

Gramm issued a statement congratulating Ferraro on her selection, noting the two entered Congress the same year — 1978 — and served together on the Budget Committee.

But, Gramm said, "I do not believe that voters will be swayed one way or another by the fact that Geraldine Ferraro is a woman. I think they will judge her on the basis of qualifications and experience."

Republican U.S. Sen. John Tower, whose retirement is giving Democrats a shot at retaking his Senate seat, said through an aide in Washington that Ferraro's selection "will help Reagan in Texas simply because Mondale chose a northeast liberal as his running mate."

Former Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss previously had said Democrats had to win Texas to win the election and the best way was to put a Texan on the ticket. But he called Ferraro's selection "splendid."

"THIS IS THE first real good day for the Mondale campaign," Strauss said from his Dallas law office.

"I think she's a winner and she'll look like one. She's a class act."

State Treasurer Ann Richards, who was at a conference in Santa Fe, N.M., called the selection of a woman "an historic day for all of us and most especially for our daughters. What this does for them is just wonderful."

Texas GOP Chairman George Strake said that by choosing Ms. Ferraro, the Democratic Party had "left the Texas mainstream out in the cold" and "will help us recruit conservative Democrats into the Republican Party of Texas."

But National Democratic Committee member Billie Carr of Houston predicted a "substantial" turnout of women voters and a cross-over of Republican women.

Polls disagree on strength of Mondale-Ferraro ticket

NEW YORK (AP) — An ABC News poll taken shortly after Walter F. Mondale named Rep. Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate says the Democratic ticket is in a near dead heat with the Republicans, but other poll results show Mondale still faces an uphill battle against President Reagan.

The ABC News telephone poll of 500 registered voters across the country Thursday found that 68 percent approved of the choice of Ms. Ferraro, while 19 percent disapproved.

Twenty-two percent said they were now more likely to vote Democratic, 19 percent they were less likely — a virtual tie in a poll with a margin of error of 5 percent.

Forty-four percent of the respondents said they would vote for the Republican ticket while 43 percent preferred the Democratic ticket — although 52 percent preferred George Bush as vice president while only 27 percent rated Ms. Ferraro the superior candidate.

However, 60 percent of respondents to an NBC News poll taken before the Thursday announcement said they would vote for a Reagan-Bush GOP ticket, while 33 percent said they would vote for a Mondale-Ferraro Democratic ticket.

The NBC News poll was conducted this Sunday through Tuesday among 1,459 likely voters.

"She's an unknown commodity to most people," Laurily Epstein, the NBC News poll consultant, said of the three-term congresswoman from Queens. "But preliminary indications are that she doesn't add to the ticket. Indications from polls taken before the announcement are that a woman either creates a net loss or makes no difference."

But Kathleen Frankovic, director of polls at CBS News, warned that poll results will change for two reasons: first, people often react differently now that a woman on the ticket is not just a possibility but a high probability; second, people will react more to Ms. Ferraro as an individual.

"It's not longer just 'a woman,' it's a particular woman," Ms. Frankovic said. "She's going to have her own individual impact."

That lack of previous recognition, the pollsters agree, means Ms. Ferraro's words and actions over the next few days and weeks will shape the public opinion of her as she is thrust into the national limelight.

"It's going to depend a lot on her personality and how things come together," John Brennan, a spokesman for ABC News, said. "You've got to remember, she's not only a woman, she's an urban Catholic. It looks as if the Mondale campaign has decided to go with an urban blue-collar strategy with wide appeal from, say, Massachusetts to New Jersey. I'm not sure how the South is going to react to this."

The NBC polling said that among likely voters who have not already made up their minds between Mondale and President Reagan, 14 percent said they would be more likely to support the Democrats if a woman runs with Mondale. Eighteen percent, however, said they would be less likely to vote for Mondale if he picked a woman running mate.

In an ABC News-Washington Post poll also released Thursday, respondents were about evenly divided over the impact of a woman on the Democratic ticket, although Ms. Ferraro was not mentioned specifically.

The question read, "Suppose a woman runs for vice president with Mondale. Will that make you more or less likely to vote for Mondale?" Sixteen percent said it would make them more likely to vote for Mondale, 14 percent said it made them less likely, 68 percent said it made no difference and 2 percent were not sure.

Feinstein had hopes

By DAVE FARRELL
Hearst Featuree Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Only in the last few hours did she allow herself to think it might be true. But then the call came, and Dianne Feinstein found herself rejected as the first woman candidate for vice president.

He had picked someone else to be his running mate, Walter Mondale told her softly yesterday evening. Later, she learned that his choice was Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York.

So close.

In an interview today, the mayor said that Mondale had praised her highly in a 6:30 p.m. telephone call from his North Oaks, Minn., residence yesterday while breaking the news that she would not be his choice.

"Fritz said, 'I want to tell you I think you are a star — you are No. 1 on the press' list. But I'm going to go another way. Please trust me on this one.'

"I said, 'Fine. Is it a man or a woman?'"

Mondale, the mayor said, declined to state his choice in the conversation.

The mayor's hopes had been raised by these developments:

On Sunday and Monday, Mondale advisers Peter Kyros and Michael Cardoza, both lawyers, spent 20 hours in Feinstein's home and in the office of her husband, Richard Blum, interviewing the mayor, Blum and her top aides.

Kyros and Cardoza also closely examined records detailing the private financial affairs of both the mayor and her husband. Mondale had indicated that this type of scrutiny was reserved only for the most serious vice-presidential prospects.

Yesterday, Feinstein's office was flooded with calls from reporters across the country, many of them asserting that they had learned from sources in the Mondale camp that the mayor was his choice.

By late yesterday, a highly expectant Feinstein was sitting in her City Hall office feeling elated and nervous.

San Francisco's first woman mayor was telling two friends she was finally coming to believe that she just might be the woman destined to receive a history-making call from the apparent Democratic presidential nominee, Walter Mondale.

As Feinstein envisioned it at the time, the call would mean that she would be the first female vice-presidential candidate in the history of the United States.

But it was not to be.

Even as she spoke, Mondale was on the telephone to another woman in a hotel room less than a mile from City Hall: Rep. Geraldine Ferraro.

When the call came at 6:30 p.m., the mayor was at home preparing for a party at the Fairmont Hotel to be attended by some of San Francisco's heaviest hitters.

Yet when he finally called, Mondale scotched it all with a few words.

Soon after entering the Fairmont, Feinstein was approached by a reporter. "We've heard you got it," the reporter said.

"No," Feinstein replied, softly. "I think there'll be an announcement from Minnesota tomorrow, and that's really all I can say right now."

"If you want to know the truth, I actually feel a sense of relief.... I tried to stand tall and represent the things I believe in. I got to express my views, and a door is now open to women in high office that will never be closed again."

Military trial begins for four Solidarity advisers

By MATTHEW C. VITA
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — The long-awaited trial of four top Solidarity advisers charged with plotting to overthrow the Communist system began in a Warsaw military court today.

Authorities rejected a request by Lech Walesa, founder of the now-outlawed labor union, to attend the trial, but he strode to the front of the courthouse surrounded by supporters and police to greet the defendants' families before leaving.

"I will try to be as close to the trial as I can," Walesa said.

Defendants Jacek Kuron, Adam Michnik, Henryk Wujec and Zbigniew Romaszewski — former members of the Committee for Social Self-Defense — face a maximum 10-year prison sentence if convicted. They had rejected a government offer of amnesty in exchange for political silence.

"The suspects contributed to the emergence of an undesirable social climate, the staging of protests and strikes, and actions leading to social anarchy and disturbance of public order," said the government indictment filed last September.

The government was expected to restrict admittance to the trial, set for Warsaw military court. Family members of the defendants said they had received two tickets each. The government refused to say whether Western reporters would be permitted in the courtroom.

WORLD

The four defendants, along with seven Solidarity leaders, are the most prominent Solidarity activists still imprisoned as a result of the Dec. 13, 1981 imposition of martial law.

Solidarity, the first independent trade union in the Soviet bloc, included a majority of Poland's workers, It was suspended and later outlawed under the martial law government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who continued as premier after martial law was lifted.

"Jaruzelski would have liked to have avoided the trial, but he lacks the political power to do it," said a Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It is the trial of two extremely popular figures (Kuron and Michnik) put on by an extremely unpopular government."

Authorities last spring offered the 11 Solidarity leaders and advisers freedom if they would promise to avoid political activity or accept temporary exile. All rejected the offer.

"I won't accept an amnesty, as I don't feel guilty at all," Michnik, a 37-year-old historian, said last month in a letter smuggled from Rakowiecka Prison in Warsaw. "I demand ... an open trial and will be strong enough to wait for the not-guilty verdict."

There has been widespread speculation that the government was preparing an amnesty for most or all of the more than 600 political prisoners in Polish jails on July 22 to mark the 40th anniversary of the proclamation of Communist rule. But it was unclear if such an amnesty would include the four defendants.

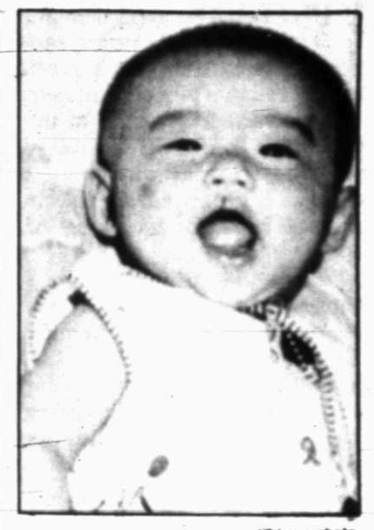

Walesa, who won the Nobel Peace Prize for his work as leader of Solidarity, told ABC News Thursday that he would attend the trial.

"It is my place to be there with them...," he said.

But today, authorities refused to let him past the foyer to the courtroom.

"Please get in your car and leave," a uniformed policeman told the 40-year-old shipyard electrician, who is on vacation this month.

Walesa replied that he was prepared to "set up a tent here with my friends," but he left after about five minutes, saying he didn't "want to make a mess."

Defectors celebrate

TORONTO (AP) — Two Polish sailors who defected from a sailing ship docked in Canada celebrated with Polish Canadians but expressed regret at leaving their families behind.

Wojtek Slupek and Dariusz Reiss, both 22, attended a party Thursday with members of Toronto's Polish community. They defected Wednesday from the tall ship Tryglaw.

Canadian immigration officials released the two from detention in a hotel earlier in the day after members of the Polish Canadian Action Group posted bonds of $1,000 for each.

Americans die in crash

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Nine Americans were killed when a U.S. C-141B transport plane burst into flames and crashed shortly after taking off from a naval air station, U.S. officials report.

The plane, which carried a crew of eight and one military passenger, crashed Thursday after a refueling stop at a U.S. base near Catania, said Lt. Cmdr. Ron Donovan, a spokesman for the base.

Pro-Syrians still fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two pro-Syrian Lebanese militias battled one another with artillery and rockets for a third day today in a contest for dominance in a region of Syrian-occupied northern Lebanon.

Soviets cite rearmament

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union says the United States is maneuvering to avoid serious talks on limiting space weapons or other arms because they would jeopardize a multi-billion-dollar rearmament program.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in an editorial today, said the Soviets are still waiting for a positive response to their June 29 proposal to begin talks in Vienna this fall on banning space weapons.

Nicaraguan trend eyed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Nicaraguan official predicts that the leftist Sandinista government will win presidential elections scheduled for November, and will then be able to resolve its conflict with the Roman Catholic Church.

"It is true that tensions exist between the state and the Catholic church, but since we will win the presidential elections in November, I am sure we will reach some kind of agreement with the Catholic hierarchy," Sergio Ramirez, a member of the three-man leftist junta, said Thursday at a press conference.

Close polling foreseen

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Muldoon, in office for nine years, predicted today that the outcome of general elections Saturday would be close but that his National Party would win.

Mondale's choice

Walter Mondale's selection of Rep. Geraldine Ferraro of New York as his running mate in this year's presidential election was a significant step forward for women in the American political arena — regardless of the outcome. It should be regarded as exactly that and not something more or less.

To say that the choice of a woman as a running mate was unanticipated would display absurd naivety. After all, it had been obvious for weeks that Mondale was strongly courting the female vote and during recent days that had been reaffirmed as he had personally met with Rep. Ferraro and other women in North Oaks, Minn. Still, the selection took political courage on the part of Mondale and he displayed that courage.

But to indicate that her selection by Mondale did anything more than to recognize once and for all that American women, too, have a place in the national political scene would be false trimming. It simply was a matter of time until a woman showed up in a presidential race and this year is as good as any. After all, if nominated she will be the first woman whose name will actually appear on a presidential ticket.

That fact ensures her celebrity status, but that only detracts from the true importance of her candidacy because women have been serving admirably in governmental leadership positions in nations throughout the world for a number of years now. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir are just two excellent examples of the importance of women in the political processes of this world.

To a large degree, Mondale's running mate selection mechanism contributed heavily to the carnival atmosphere surrounding the decision. Over a couple of weeks Mondale trooped representatives of virtually every imaginable political minority to his Minnesota home for interviews and, as most Americans were certainly aware, the former vice president had previously tried to associate himself with every special interest group in the country.

Of course that was intended to show Americans that Mondale wants his candidacy to truly represent every segment of the population. But in a way it was demeaning because of its "showmanship" aura.

What Americans want in their highest political offices are the best qualified, most courageous, brightest individuals available. That certainly includes women and anyone who doesn't think so is living in the Dark Ages.

Then they must face the all-important cutting edge of American politics — the voters.

It isn't a matter of whether a politician is a man, woman, black, white or green, you see. The only real qualifier is whether the American people will entrust in them the future of this nation.

Another View:

Jackson's prisoners

There is only one reason why a Jesse Jackson can succeed in prisoner negotiations abroad where normal diplomatic channels fail — whether in Cuba or anywhere else — and that's where the government with which Jackson deals wants to embarrass the American administration for reasons of its own. And that, of course, is precisely why the sort of free-lance diplomacy in which he likes to engage — and in which he appears to be contemplating further adventures — has been prohibited by federal law almost since the founding of the republic.

Cuba's recent release of a handful of prisoners, most of whom had nearly served out their prison terms, achieved headlines for Castro and Jackson, but did nothing — and said nothing — about the thousands of others still sitting in Cuban prisons or the political system that put them there.

Now Jackson is talking about a rescue mission to the Soviet Union whose arrogance easily tops its predecessors in Cuba and Syria. If it suited their purposes, the Soviets could long ago have released Andrei Sakharov and Yelena Bonner — not to mention hundreds of others — to any one of the scores of organizations, public or private — which for years have expressed deep concern about the fate of political dissidents in the Soviet Union.

The one thing that qualifies this Jesse-come-lately or the effort would be the publicity — and the embarrassment — that the Russians believed they might generate if they turned someone like Sakharov over to him, embarrassment not only for the United States in this instance, but for the many legitimate cultural, scientific and humanitarian groups that have so long pleaded the case for human rights in the Soviet Union. Where was Jackson when Sakharov was first arrested and exiled? Where was Jackson when the last of the Soviet Helsinki watch group was hounded out of existence?

Presumably Jackson is too smart to go to Russia without some prior assurance of success — and surely the Russians are too smart to let him come without some payoff for themselves. Yet the very talk of such an effort demeans what Sakharov has done and suffered — makes of him an object not only for Soviet repression, but for Jackson's private political games. And that is the most unconscionable thing of all.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 13, the 195th day of 1984. There are 171 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 13, 1863, rioting against the Civil War military draft erupted in New York City. The violence would result in the deaths of about 1,000 people over the next three days.

On this date:

In 1787, Congress enacted an ordinance governing the Northwest Territory.

In 1793, French revolutionary writer Jean Paul Marat was murdered in his bath by Charlotte Corday.

In 1878, the Treaty of Berlin ended one of a series of wars between Russia and Turkey.

In 1977, a blackout left New York City virtually paralyzed and resulted in widespread looting.

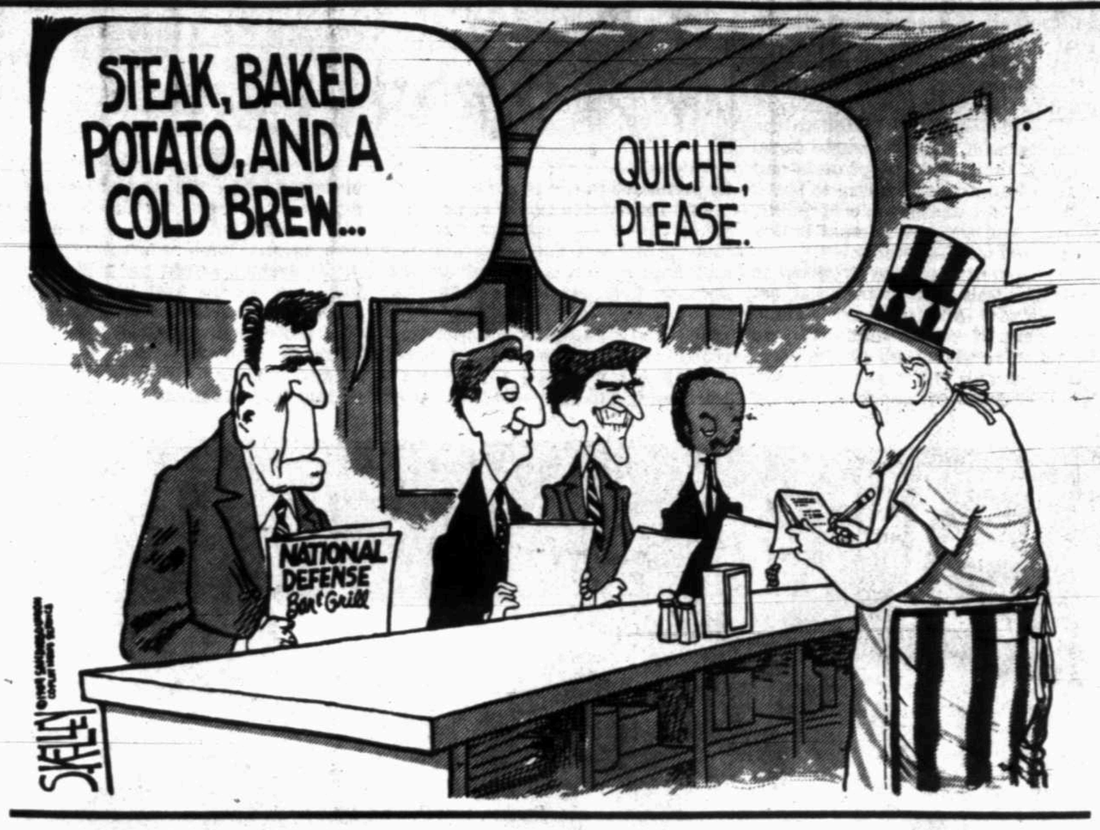

Ten years ago: The Senate Watergate Committee proposed sweeping reforms in campaign procedures and other statutes in an effort to prevent another Watergate scandal.

Five years ago: Four Palestinian terrorists seized the Egyptian embassy in Turkey, demanding freedom for jailed comrades in Egypt.

One year ago: With Vice President George Bush casting a tie-breaking vote, the Senate voted to authorize money for new nerve gas weapons.

Today's birthday: Actor Harrison Ford is 42.

Thought for today: "There are people who want to be everywhere at once, and they get nowhere." — Carl Sandburg, American writer (1878-1967).

Union pushing 'shoddy' workers

WASHINGTON — A two-year Senate investigation of labor union corruption has turned up alarming evidence that job favoritism by union bosses has produced shoddy work at chemical and nuclear plants. When inexperienced workers are hired to help construct these plants, there is potential danger of an accident once the plants start running.

Jack Anderson

The Senate Labor and Human Resources subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has been investigating the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and the Operating Engineers Union. Evidence has been uncovered that unqualified welders and mechanics have been hired to work at such sensitive plants as Three Mile Island.

A staff memo to Hatch, summarizing the investigators' findings, has been obtained by my associate Indy Badhwar. "Business agents of local construction trade unions routinely refer friends and relatives, regardless of qualifications, as journeymen to the most dangerous field construction projects," the memo alleges.

These unqualified workers were assigned to restricted jobs that could endanger the public safety, including the construction of "nuclear and conventional power and chemicals plants."

The memo cited sworn testimony from union members. For example, a Louisiana local "referred inexperienced women, including a beauty shop operator, to operate heavy construction equipment at chemical plants in return for sexual favors."

Between 1979 and 1982, according to the memo, the Pittsburgh local referred 273 unqualified workers as journeymen to construction projects that included the Beaver Valley nuclear power plant. "Youthful relatives of the Pittsburgh business agent, though barely qualified as journeymen, earned $40,000 to $49,000 a year," the memo said, "while veteran journeymen who were at odds with the business agent made as little as $1,400."

A legal opinion submitted by the boilermakers' counsel in January 1983 insisted that workers can qualify for journeyman's pay only if they have at least 8,000 hours of actual field experience or have completed their field-construction apprenticeship.

But when Hatch confronted union officials with their counsel's opinion, they resorted to what Hatch called "newspeak" — the baffling jargon developed by George Orwell in "1984." According to the staff summary: "The union witnesses argued that those words meant the opposite of what they said."

Six union welders testified that they had taken proficiency tests for unqualified job applicants under threat of losing their jobs, the staff memo noted.

"The union pressures you on every job to get their favorite people past the test or allow them to work without taking the test," veteran boilermaker Joe Danko testified. "There's a lot of nepotism that goes on — the hiring of their sons, cousins and so on."

Thomas J. Smith, a Pittsburgh painter, confessed in an affidavit that he had worked on a power plant precipitator with "a welder who welded brackets on upside down because he didn't know what he was doing. I had no boilermaking experience, so that I had to ask the foreman, pusher or other workers how to do each job assigned."

The subcommittee staff memo demanded: "Must we wait for a major accident caused by a bad welder doing a bad weld before we take the necessary steps to ensure the public safety?"

BOMBS AWEIGH?: The Pentagon and State Department are quietly but passionately at odds over a shipment of weapons-grade plutonium from France to Japan.

The Pentagon is afraid the plutonium may be hijacked by terrorists if it is shipped on a civilian freighter with no military escort. The State Department is afraid the Japanese will resent being told how to handle the nuclear material. For reasons of their own, the Japanese don't want military involvement in the plutonium shipment.

The reason the United States is involved at all is that the material used to make the plutonium came from this country. By law, U.S. officials are obliged to approve any subsequent use or disposal of the deadly product.

The Japanese plan to use the plutonium strictly for peaceful scientific research. That's no problem there. The sticking point is in the method of shipment.

The Japanese government — apparently worried about its people's sensitivity to things nuclear — says its regulations require that the plutonium be shipped on an unarmed freighter. A military ship or escort would create a furor in Japan.

EVANS & NOVAK

Soviets testing U.S. patience

Washington — When a blue-ribbon panel informed President Reagan last November of Soviet arms control treaty violations, it put the seven months since then in ominous perspective by suggesting the Kremlin was testing how much cheating the Americans would swallow.

Rowland Evans

One unintended partial answer to the degree of U.S. tolerance is that 275-page document still under lock and key as "secret." It has been kept from Congress by the White House and may never be delivered to Capitol Hill. That is ominous since the report by the president's General Advisory Committee on Arms Control (GAC) goes far beyond any routine new charge of massive cheating to suggest "peculiar properties" in the Kremlin's political and military rationale for its violations.

Robert Novak

The rationale is foreboding for the future in a world in which nuclear weapons may be decisive. One of the chilling "peculiar properties" is that Soviet cheating is partly designed to "test ... U.S. political processes" on arms control.

Under the heading, "Further Significance of Recent Soviet Breaches" of treaties, the GAC report suggests that cheating may in part be a Soviet tool to register levels of American anger or acquiesence over Soviet non-compliance. "What they may be probing for," one official told us, "is the true level of American toleration for their cheating."

That tolerance level has been high by any fair accounting. For example, when the Soviets were discovered to be developing a new heavy SS-19 ICBM at the very time they were about to sign the first SALT agreement — which ruled out new "heavy" ICBMs — the U.S. only complained. The report hints that Soviet discovery of American tolerance for its cheating is irresistible inducement for Moscow to become ever bolder.

Given the high standing of its authors (including former defense secretary Donald Rumsfeld), the GAC report is badly wanted by both houses of Congress. The final version of the defense authorization bill is likely to demand submission of the document to Capitol Hill within 60 days.

The White House rejected efforts to use the GAC report in a closed-door session the Senate held last month to discuss latest U.S. intelligence on Soviet anti-satellite technology. If unveiled at that session, it could have stimulated a harsh new anti-Soviet diatribe and undermined efforts of Reagan's political operatives to arrange new U.S.-Soviet arms talks and thereby buttress Reagan's man-of-peace image before Nov. 6.

But the GAC report never made it up to the Senate that day. White House legal aides ruled it out even for a secret Senate session because of "executive privilege." That was an answer of sorts to the Soviet test.

Besides such probing for American tolerance, another rationale for persistent Soviet refusal to abide by either the letter or the spirit of its nuclear and other military agreements, according to the report, is "to test ... U.S. intelligence capabilities." Development of the SS-19 was discovered by extraordinarily successful satellite-based bugging of the late Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev's limousine. The Kremlin quickly uncovered this U.S. breakthrough when Washington complained that the SS-19 looked like a violation of SALT.

The GAC report makes a strong case that Soviet decisions to engage in widespread SALT II violations seem to have been "initiated at about the time" the never-ratified treaty was signed in 1979. Moreover, the U.S. should have known from the start. Encryption of test data on new missiles, a violation of SALT II, is described by the GAC report as "done in a fashion which should have at least caused U.S. suspicion."

Authors of the GAC report paint an even gloomier view of the future. They claim that "the expanding Soviet national concealment and deception program may have been a preparation or a cover for more extensive violations taking place now or to take place in the future." The clear aim: cheat to win.

That raises a profound question of Reagan administration policy on the current plans for anti-satellite warfare talks at Vienna with the Russians. U.S. specialists argue there is no way to verify an anti-satellite warfare ban. Concealment of tests is as easy as concealment of new data from missile testing: by encryption.

Thus for the immediate future, the shrouded GAC report warns congressional liberals and Reagan's political aides demanding anti-satellite arms talks. For the more distant future, it maps a twisted, rutted roadway in U.S. efforts to steer the "arms control process" from intentional, provocative Soviet violations into true limitation of the nuclear menace.

CHARLEY REESE

'Backyard' problem ever closer

The woman was 23 years old. She lay on a broken piece of plywood in a dusty shed in Honduras. Neither a doctor nor a family member was present. She delivered her baby in the presence of strangers who didn't even have a clean piece of cloth with which to wipe her off. When the baby came he was placed on a dirty, oily rag.

Charley Reese

Kenneth Dale Wells and his wife Ruthie watched the birth of this Nicaraguan baby whose mother has been driven out of her own country by the communist bully boys who call themselves Sandinistas.

Wells lives in Edgewater, Fla., a small town on the east coast. If you don't know who he is, I will tell you he is one fine American citizen. He is the kind of man who reminds you of what human beings can and ought to be but seldom are. He is 76 years old. Instead of playing golf or sitting in a rocking chair, Wells has been tramping all over Honduras and Costa Rica for the past two months entirely at his own expense and risk — hitching rides in decrepit aircraft, riding local buses and just hiking.

He went not as a tourist, but as an American citizen to see for himself what is going on in the backyard of his own country. He went to talk to refugees and to Honduran soldiers and anybody else who had first-hand information.

He's at home now and just about busted. But he and his wife of 54 years are busy organizing relief supplies for some of the refugees. At the moment they are trying to gather some 400 layettes for pregnant women in the camps.

On the grand scale of human misery, that's not much. There are already over 100,000 refugees from the communist government in Nicaragua. But it is something. And doing something is what it means to be a responsible human being — to do something instead of just turning your head, to do something instead of focusing your whole attention on your personal comfort, to do something about the real needs of real human beings who are really suffering rather than burning up your energy in pursuit of trivia.

When Wells was down there he sent back letters to anyone he thought might be interested. I doubt of any newspaper published them. Wells is definitely out of fashion for these times. He's a retired big oil company executive with earned and honorary degrees and he is founder of Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge. What makes him unfashionable, however, is his strong belief in the greatness and goodness of his own country. On that subject he is what a lot of young poeple would call "corny."

Describing a chance encounter with some American soldiers in the Honduran boonies, Wells wrote: "I felt so proud. Disciplined, trained, wholesome fellows. Yes sir, grand soldiers. I've always felt the regular Army sergeants are among the best heroes ever in American life."

In another of his letters from Honduras, Wells related the ordeal of a group of Miskito Indians who had fled Nicaragua. They were bombed and strafed by Sandinistas. The young boys carried the old women when they could no longer walk. He interviewed the boys and at the end of his letter he wrote:

"Think of the emaciated kids, sleeping below stilt houses on the ground, helter skelter in inch thick dust, open sores infected from bramble cuts, falls on the trail. I asked, 'Do you know President Reagan?' 'Yes, yes,' and the first smiles. 'Do you have a message for President Reagan in America?' Much palaver. They said, 'Tell him, Mr. Reagan, we love you. You will not fail us, we will not fail you. Careful, Russians, lots of tanks, big ones. Tanks no pick coffee, no pick bananas, only shoot. Help us. Some day go home.'"

These are the kind of people that overweight, overpaid Rep. Tip O'Neill calls murderers, rapists and maurauders. These are the victims of the communist dictators Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., and nine other Democrats wrote a letter to, bemoaning American interferece in their totaltarian plans. These are the people the Congress, which squanders money like sewer water, have voted not to help.

We can sit up here and watch soap operas. We can ignore what is going on in just a three-day drive from our border. We can, as it is fashionable to do, refuse to make a judgment about who are the good people and who are the bad people in Central America.

Yeah, we can ignore their suffering and our danger — for just a little while longer. But not much longer. Wells believes, based on entirely unofficial information gleaned from hundreds of refugees, that both the bad and the good will be moving north pretty soon.

Steinbrenner rescues Scottish soccer team

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Thanks to New York Yankees head George Steinbrenner, a band of youthful Scottish soccer players who were stranded by Air Florida's grounding are finally on their way home.

"I won't soon forget. The kids never will," said soccer club leader John Kelly as his boys, garbed in plaid kilts and New York Yankee baseball hats, headed for Scotland penniless but happy.

He was talking about their trip to the United States — an odyssey that had them worrying whether it would ever end after the airline they expected to fly quit flying and other airliners wouldn't honor their tickets The 27 soccer players and 16 family members were short $11,000 to ferry the contingent of 43 to Edinburgh, Scotland.

But there was a happy farewell Wednesday at the St. Petersburg-Clearwater International Airport for the Portobello Thistle Boys Soccer Club.

Steinbrenner, principal owner of the Yankees, footed the bill after reading of the team's plight in the Tampa Tribune last week.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, who plays the taciturn pilot of an attack helicopter on CBS-TV's "Airwolf," turned himself in and was charged in connection with a bar fight that left a man unconscious.

The 38-year-old actor, accompanied by his attorney, was booked for investigation of misdemeanor assault Thursday at the Malibu sheriff's station, Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy John Broussard said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch says he'll continue to eat at a favorite restaurant despite a Health Department inspection which turned up a dead rat and other unsanitary conditions.

Edward Koch

"The food is superb, I shall continue to eat there," Koch said Thursday. "I think many restaurants near the East River have a problem with rodents."

Inspectors found cockroaches, dirty floors, peeling paint and other infractions at the Bridge Cafe during an inspection April 23, according to Health Department spokesman Marvin Bogner.

Bogner said the restaurant was fined $700 after a followup inspection May 29 revealed that the restaurant still had roaches and a dead rat in the basement.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors Gregory Peck, singer Pat Boone, comedian Rich Little and a host of other notables are joining an estimated 15,000 people to pose for promotional "snapshot" of the city's skyline.

Billed as an historic "Big Picture" — a 140-degree crowd shot framed by the city skyline and an arch of balloons — the photograph will be "a time capsule of what life in Los Angeles was like in 1984," said the promoter, Nann Miller.

Mayor Tom Bradley was to be on hand today along with Sid Caesar, William Shatner, Ed Asner, Cicely Tyson, Jack LaLanne, Lola Falana, Donna Mills, Jerry Buss, several old-time Dodger baseball stars and members of the Rams football, Kings hockey, and Lakers basketball teams.

Life magazine photographer John Zimmerman will take a 140-degree wide-angle shot that will be blown up to the size of "two or three billboards" and unveiled downtown in the next two weeks. Smaller versions will make nice postcards, Ms. Miller said.

Doctors list break dance do's, don'ts

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a flip, a turn and a spin, break dancers can dazzle with acrobatic acuity. But with a twist, a jump and a bend, they also could fracture their bones or sprain their backs.

Because of mounting injuries associated with the dance fad, some health professionals think its time to lay down some ground rules — particularly for oldtimers over the age of 18 who want to give it a whirl.

The International Chiropractors Association said Thursday that it has developed lists of do's and don'ts to reduce the toll from "break dance syndrome."

High on the list of guidelines are getting proper dance instructions, doing warm-up exercises, avoiding certain risky dance movements and protecting vulnerable parts of the body, such as limbs and bones.

"We recognize the artistic expression of break dancing," said Dr. Sid E. Williams, the association's president. "We want it to be a safe experience and to alert break dancers of ways to help protect their necks and backs."

Reported injuries include serious neck disorders, knee and hip fractures, dislocated joints, back sprains, ankle and foot problems, muscle strains, pinched nerves, and various bruises and abrasions.

The association cited one case of a 16-year-old boy who knocked his pelvis out of position through a quick series of twists and turns with his legs extended in the air. The abrupt spinning led to a traction effect caused by the weight of his extended legs pulling away from his body.

Those who have never done any break dancing, especially adults, should be the most cautious and pay particular attention to conditioning their bodies.

"Adult bones are stronger but are less flexible and less resistant to trauma than the bones of children and teen-agers," Williams said.

The bone specialists consulted several break dance groups and instructors in developing two lists of guidelines on what to do and not do.

The "do" list includes the following recommendations:

— People with a history of back, neck or spinal problems should get medical advice and preferably a checkup before starting break dancing.

— Do warm-up exercises for your back, neck, arms and legs for at least five minutes. Stretching exercises are best for wrists, arms and legs, and twisting and stretching is good for the back and neck.

— Use gloves, elbow and knee pads, or supportive taping or bandaging at joints.

— Wear protective clothing with long sleeves and legs.

— Dance on a smooth surface, such as linoleum and flattened cardboard sheets, in an uncluttered area and avoid rough surfaces such as sidewalks.

The "don't" list includes these guidelines:

— Don't break dance without instruction or pre-conditioning.

— Don't dance alone. In case of injuries, someone else should be around to help or summon aid.

— Don't spin your body while in a head-stand position or you can jar the spine off the base of the skull. The neck is meant to support only the weight of the head, about 8 to 10 pounds, and not the entire body.

— Don't ignore the warning signs of pain. Stop dancing immediately if pain occurs in any part of the body and does not go away. Then consult your doctor.

Boa constrictor returned home

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Julius Squeezer, Sunrise Museum's pet boa constrictor, is slithering in his own home again today after his snake-napper was turned in by a concerned citizen, officials said.

The 3-year-old, 3-foot-long boa constrictor was returned Wednesday night after someone who had read news reports of his disappearance identified the snake and called Sunrise officials, museum executive director Horner Davis said.

"We're pursuing a full investigation, but the nature of it is somewhat sensitive," he said Thursday.

Davis said museum officials are "elated" at the snake's return and said Julius also appears to be pleased.

"He seems to be quite healthy and well looked-after," Davis said. "I'm sure he's happy to be home."

In fact, Julius may have had something of a high time while he was away. Davis said the snake, normally fed sections of dead mice, was fed his first live meal — a rat — while in the hands of his captor.

Fog over College grid TV begins to lift

By The Associated Press

The jumbled status of televised college football in 1984 has become somewhat clearer — although there still is uncertainty regarding who will be showing what games.

On Thursday, all 63 members of the College Football Association filed a commitment form that binds them to following the CFA's television package.

Those members did so after disdaining efforts by a separate coalition of the Big Ten and Pac-10 Conferences, which tried to get some Southern and Eastern independents to join their group in an attempt to widen its base of support.

The CFA membership consists of the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big 8 Conference, the Southeastern Conference, the Southwest Conference, the Western Athletic Conference and 19 major independents.

"Naturally, we are pleased with the unanimous vote," said Chuck Neinas, executive director of the CFA.

The Supreme Court two weeks ago upheld a ruling that struck down two existing NCAA packages sold to CBS, ABC and ESPN for almost $275 million, saying they were in violation of federal antitrust laws. On Tuesday, college football's major schools turned down a last-ditch proposal by the NCAA for a TV package that would have been based on voluntary cooperation.

An attempt to get the CFA and Big Ten-Pac-10 to consolidate efforts failed earlier this week.

Neinas said the basic CFA television plan provides for a national marketing effort in two times period on each date — offering those games to national networks and national cable — as well as an open period for conference and institutional telecasts in the afternoon, which would be used for local and regional broadcasts.

"The CFA Television Committee will commence discussions with all interested television entities at the earliest possible date," Neinas said.

Regardless of their affiliation, schools can still negotiate deals for themselves on top of any arrangement they may make with either the CFA or Big Ten-Pac-10.

The Southeastern Conference has said it will start negotiations next week with WTBS, Ted Turner's national cable network, on broadcast of a game-of-the-week for 1984.

"We may have something resolved in a week or two," said Mississippi State Athletic Director Charley Scott.

Some schools that joined the CFA said they felt there was nothing else they could do.

"We have a major market for football, to be sure, but we certainly are not in a position to make that fly on a national level," said Dr. Ed Bozik, athletic director at the University of Pittsburgh.

"We're committing to the CFA. It's the only choice we have," he said. "The CFA had agreed to try to make a coalition with the Pac-10 and Big Ten. We committed to that proposition first. We initially supported the NCAA plan, but that doesn't exist anymore. It was voted down by the members."

Joe Kearney, commissioner of the nine-member WAC, said his schools had "only one choice."

"As a member of the CFA, you could go forward with the CFA plan of 63 members or go on as a conference. I think our feeling was the largest group we could join was the best. There was absolutely no choice to go out on your own as a conference."

"I think everybody has said that the best plan that was there was the NCAA plan that was declared null and void by the courts," he said.

Professor Frank Remington, who represented the University of Wisconsin at a meeting of Big Ten athletic directors in Chicago this week, said "the general feeling was that the CFA plan was unsatisfactory because it, too, raises serious antitrust issues."

He said the Big Ten had not intended to join the Pac-10 in a separate coalition.

"The objective was to continue the NCAA plan. We voted for it. The problem with this is that it creates a great deal of uncertainty," he said.

"More importantly, it does great hurt to a number of schools — the Mid-American Conference, black schools and the Division I-AA schools."

The smaller schools are the ones that will feel the brunt of the breakup of the NCAA television package since it had provided that several Division I-AA, II and III games would be shown.

Amy likes 'em tough

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — Consistent Amy Alcott firmly believes that the tougher the golf course the tougher she plays.

That could spell bad news for co-leader Jo Ann Washam and 148 other rivals entering today's second round of the U.S. Women's Open championship at the Salem Country Club's exacting 6,285-yard course.

The par-72 layout, designed by the late Donald Ross, took its toll Thursday as the 72-hole event returned here after a 30-year absence.

Starting just 16 minutes apart in midmorning, Alcott and Washam fired one-under-par 71s, the only players among 120 professionals and 30 amateurs to break the standard.

"This is not an easy golf course, it's not set up for phenomenal scores," Alcott said. "However, I had a very consistent round and consistency means success in professional golf."

Washam, two strokes over par with a 38 on the front nine, charged back with a 3-under 33 for a share of the lead.

"I was not disappointed to be two-under at the turn," Washam said. "I just tried to be patient."

Alcott, winner of 19 tournaments in 10 years on the LPGA Tour, and Washam, winless since 1979, took a one-stroke lead in the 72-hole test with $225,000 in prize money, including $36,000 for the winner.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson, bidding to become the fifth player to win consecutive Opens, Japan's Ayako Okamoto and amateur Joan Ellis, were all at 72.

Ellis, 22, a 1983 Furman University graduate, registered a hole-in-one, the ninth since the U.S. Golf Association became sponsor of the Open in 1953. Using a driver, she sank her tee shot on the 203-yard, 15th hole.

"Some days you make bogeys and some days you make holes-in-one," she quipped. "But this is my first hole-in-one since I began playing golf 10 years ago."

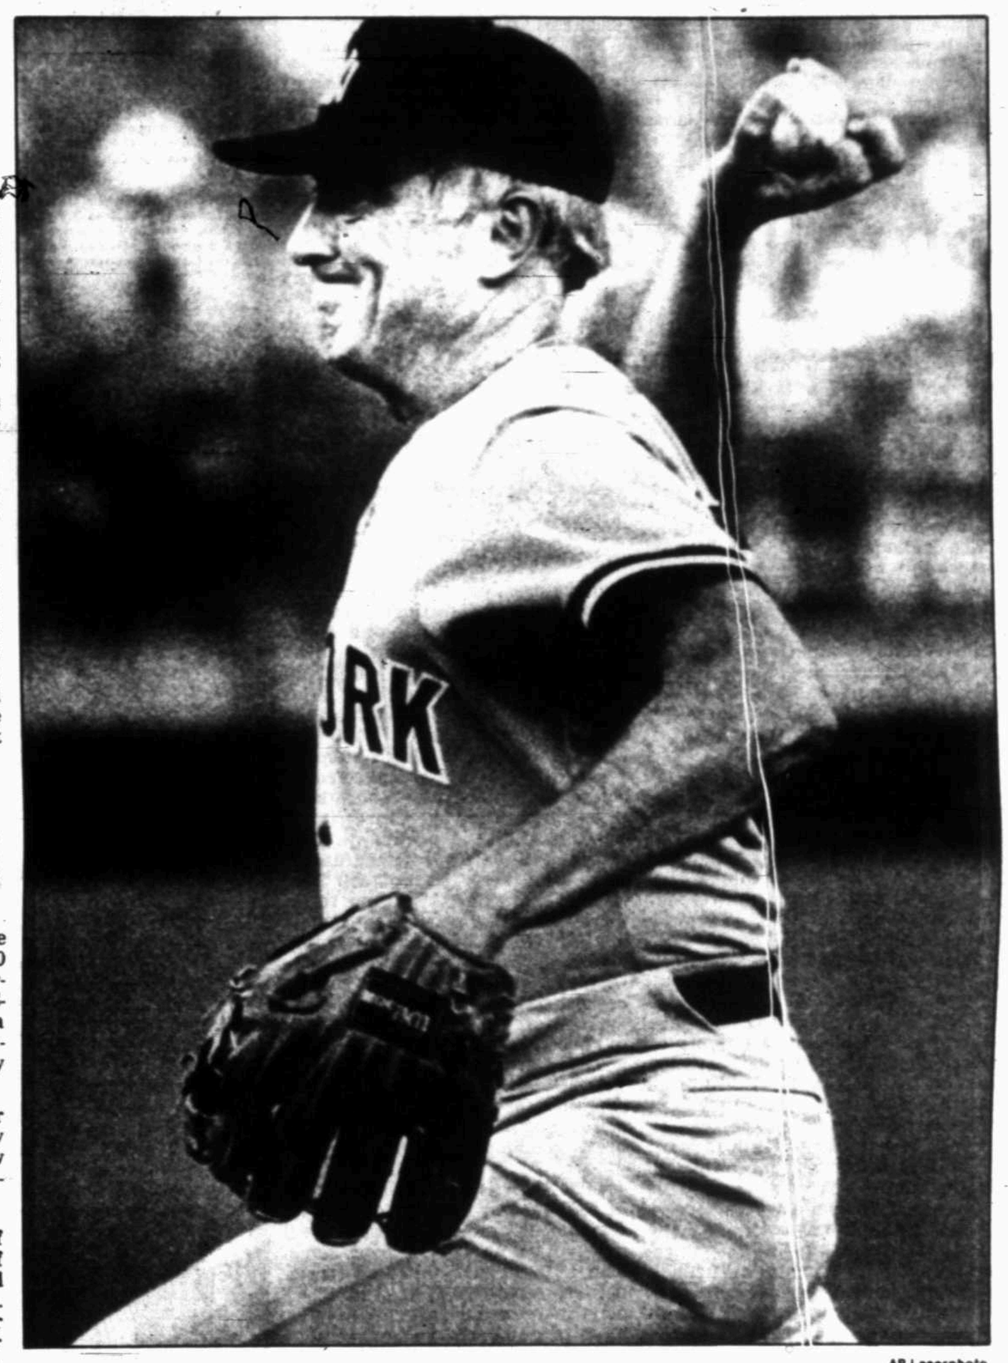

Deadlocked at 73 were Patty Sheehan, two-time LPGA winner and the leading money winner on the tour this year; veteran Kathy Whitworth, winner of 84 LPGA events but seeking her first Open title in her 25th year as a pro; Alice Miller, who earned her first victory last year, her fifth on the tour; veteran Rosie Jones and rookies Amy Benz and Heather Drew.

Two-time U.S. Open champions Donna Caponi and Hollis Stacy were in a pack at 74.

Local favorites Pat Bradley, the 1981 Open champion, and Jane Blalock were locked in a group at 76, while Nancy Lopez was at 77.

Stephenson, winless on the tour this year, said she didn't hit the ball as close to the hole as she usually does, but "I'm happy with my start." She began the tournament with a bogey-5 on the first hole, and "lagged two or three putts after that." However, she was satisfied with a round finished with a birdie on the 11th green and pars the rest of the way.

Walden has second thoughts

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The landmark decision of U.S. District Court Judge Juan Burciaga, upheld by the Supreme Court, cutting the colleges loose from the restraints of the NCAA and sending them off to dine in the enticing vineyards of free enterprise television, creates a new sport — laissez faire football.

But Jim Walden, football coach at Washington State, wonders if it's quite as wonderful as the folks at the universities of Georgia and Oklahoma, who initiated the action, believe it is.

"I didn't think things were so bad before," Walden said. "Certainly, they weren't at Georgia and Oklahoma. They sell out their stadium for every game — 80,000 at Georgia, 76,000 at Oklahoma (compared to Washington State's 40,000). All season tickets. They can buy and sell my school. Why did they need more than they were getting?

"What was their beef? How much money did they need? That's my question. What were they looking for? To be on television six or seven times? For what purpose? How much more revenue could they need?

"At Washington State, I don't have half and I don't have a third of what they have (in their budgets), but I have all I need to be competitive.

"Two of 105 (Division I-A) schools were dissatisfied. If it was that bad, wouldn't it have been more than that?"

The problem now, says Walden, is no one is quite sure what the impact of the decision will be on the smaller schools. They routinely shared in NCAA television revenue, almost all of which was generated by the major powers. College football free agency changes all that.

"We're a good example at Washington State," Walden continued. "We're bigger than the smallest, not as big as the biggest. I need the big guys. Not as bad as Wyoming and Bowling Green do, but I still need them and the support the NCAA provides. It's nice to open the morning mail and find a (TV share) check for $25,000."

That will continue to happen for Washington State because of the school's affiliation with the Pacific-10 Conference. Pac-10 and Big-10 Conference games will be marketed by TCS-Metrosports, originally conceived as a supplemental service for the conferences but, at the moment, their primary outlets.

Washington State's TV take last year was more than $1 million. "We probably won't make as much now, but I know we'll get something. I'm secure knowing that," Walden said.

When the NCAA was in control of television rights, it served as sort of a super conference for unaffiliated schools, distributing revenue to them. Now, there will be no TV money for that body to distribute. That's good for the NCAA's accounting department, but bad for schools who don't have their own fat deals, unless members of the new College Football Association, who will cut up the TV pie, come through for them.

Escalating salaries threat to USFL and NFL health

An AP Sports Analysis
By DAVE GOLDBERG

TAMPA, Fla. — It was important news here when Ronnie Lott, the San Francisco 49ers' cornerback arrived in town the other day to meet with represntatives of United States Football League teams about a possible contract.

But it wasn't necessarily viewed with glee by a lot of USFL officials, who see the escalating costs of salaries to players using their league against the established National Football League as a growing problem that could threaten the stability of both leagues

"Personally, I think it's an embarrassment," Carl Peterson, general manager of the Philadelphia Stars, said of Lott's appearance here. "I feel sorry for Ronnie. They're trading him around like a piece of meat."

That's not an unusual opinion here as the USFL gears up for Sunday's nationally televised title game between the Stars and the Arizona Wranglers at 7 p.m. It's also an opinion that has resulted in the second-year league's desire to impose a team salary cap in upcoming negotiations with tne newly formed USFL Players Association.

"The salaries are killing us," says Peterson. "Not only us, but the NFL, too."

Meanwhile, as in Lott's case, many agents encourage players to put themselves up at public auction. But the players don't argue much.

A year and a half ago, after the National Football League strike but before the USFL's first game, salaries in pro football were 150 percent lower than basketball and baseball. Now, they're at least even, thanks to the bidding war between the leagues that has resulted in salaries of $1 million plus per year for rookies like Los Angeles Express quarterback Steve Young and huge raises for established stars like the New York Giants' Lawrence Taylor, whose salary was increased from $150,000 a year to $1 million to keep him from jumping leagues.

All-Pro players like Lott are in a particularly good position.

Shreveport home runs sink Midland Cubs

From Wire Reports

Shreveport and Midland were locked in a 4-4 tie at Shreveport going into the bottom of the seventh. But the Captains exploded for seven runs on seven hits, including three straight home runs after two men were out, to break open the Texas League game as the Cubs opened a 10-game road trip through the East.

Bob O'Connor slapped a three-run blast followed by solo homers by Jessie Reid and John Stevenson. The homer was the second in a row for Reid, who raised his year's total to six.

Paul Noche had a two-run homer in the second for Midland.

Dave Wilhelmi, 3-10, was the winner in relief. He allowed only one hit over the last three innings. Jorge Carpio, 6-3, was the loser.

Mark Wasinger walked, stole second and scored on Pat Casey's two-out, 12th-inning single to give the Beaumont Golden Gators a 5-4 victory over the Arkansas Travelers Thursday night in a Texas League game between division leaders.

Willie Woods 63 good for two-shot Busch lead

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — For a young player, there is a certain pressure attached to the sight of your name on the leader board, the scoreboards that show the standings of the tournament pace-setters, according to rookie Willie Wood.

"I try not to look at them, but it's hard not to," the sllightly-built man called "Wee Willie said after he put together his best round as a professional, an 8-under-par 63 that gave him a two-shot lead Thursday after the first round of the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Classic.

Wood, 24, 5-foot-7 and just 135 pounds, has collected $47,004 as a first-year touring pro and said he anticipated a good tournament in this event.

"It's not an extra-long golf course, and that helps me," said Wood, who led the PGA Tour's qualifying school last fall.

Lindy Miller, with a 66 in the hot, humid weather, was third.

Commentary

Remember the old television show "The Millionaire" where each week someone was the recipient of a million dollars from a fictional philanthropist with money to burn?

The recent Supreme Court ruling and Tuesday's meeting of major football-playing colleges in Chicago — which combined to put the NCAA out of the TV football business for 1984 — will dry up that kind of money for some conferences.

In 1983, the Division I-AA Southern and Southland conferences received $1.3 million a piece from football TV revenue and divided it among their members and the conferences. Among other things, the money was used to run the respective conference offices and hold championships in other sports.

They will have to look elsewhere in 1984.

THE TV networks, which were committed to showing a number of Division I-AA, II and III games under the old NCAA plan, likely won't be interested in Southern Illinois and Western Carolina when they can go after the Notre Dames and Nebraskas with much more flexibility than in the past.

"It's a fight for survival," says James Frank, commissioner of the Southwestern Athletic Conference, a league of predominantly black schools, including Grambling. "Obviously, this means more competition, more people out there trying to strike deals — not only the big boys, but us small ones, as well."

"The I-AA schools will probably get bypassed, and so will the havenots in I-A," says John Geis, director of the Southern Conference Service Bureau. "The networks will deal with a very, very select few schools, to nobody's surprise.

"The money is going to have to be made up from somewhere at some point. "Maybe not this year, but somewhere down the line, or our schools face the distinct possibility of an assessment over and above their normal dues structure."

"A bunch of people won't get what they've been getting," adds Dick Oliver, commissioner of the Southland Conference. "We'll just have to devise some other system."

The Chicago vote was termed "a big setback" by Andy Mooradian, athletic director at the University of New Hampshire, executive director of the Yankee Conference and a member of the NCAA Football Television Committee. "The big thing we're concerned about right now is the I-AA championship (televised by ABC in the past).

"We're going to try and save it because it built up a lot of interest in our conference, gave us something to shoot for, helped us attendance-wise and brought in some money. It will be very difficult now to get exposure for I-AA and people were just getting to realize that I-AA plays pretty good football."

THE YANKEE Conference took in $647,000 last year in football TV revenue, Mooradian said, and "we'll have to try and get it from somewhere. Right now we're all scrambling to see what we can do. If we don't increase our revenue, we may have to cut back on some things we're doing so we come out in the black."

Mooradian said the NCAA TV Committee would meet next Tuesday "to try and sell the I-AA championship and to try and get a Thursday night (I-AA) package, maybe a combination of the two. As far as the Yankee Conference is concerned, right after that we'll see if anybody would be interested in some of our key games."

Bradshaw denies quitting reports

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, who led the Pittsburgh Steelers to four National Football League championships, has denied reports that he has decided to retire and the quarterback says he's "ticked off" by all the speculation.

When asked in a telephone interview Thursday night with KDKA-TV in Pittsburgh if he had decided to retire Bradshaw replied: "No, I haven't. I had hundreds of phone calls lately but I haven't decided. I just get ticked off by all this. It's amazing."

A CBS spokesman said Thursday that Bradshaw has been offered a contract as a color analyst for NFL games on the network. But Bradshaw told KDKA he has not made a decision on the offer.

"I'll be very honest with you, I really don't know," Bradshaw said when asked by KDKA about the CBS offer. "I haven't sat down. I just know I gave them the authority to negotiate on my behalf in regards to the contract and what not.

"All they have to know is I won't play this year and I'll be a special case for CBS," Bradshaw said.

Sandberg's belt in 10th nips LA for Cubs

From Wire Reports

Gary Carter continues to look like an all-star for the Montreal Expos.

The Montreal catcher led the Expos to a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Thursday, driving in all runs with his 16th homer and a two-run single that broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning.

"We're not out of this race by any means," Carter said of the fourth-place Expos, currently 7½ games behind the front-running New York Mets in the NL East.

Carter's homer off Cincinnati starter Joe Price, 3-6, in the fourth gave the Expos a 1-0 margin that stood until the fifth, when Carter's first error in 92 games allowed the Reds to score their only run.

Cubs 3, Dodgers 2

Ryne Sandberg homered to lead off the bottom of the 10th inning, lifting Chicago over Los Angeles.Sandberg smacked his 12th home run of the season to pin the loss on Tom Niedenfuer, 1-5, who had relieved Dodger starter Alejandro Pena.

Chicago's Steve Trout and Pena had dueled through eight innings. Tim Stoddard, 7-1, pitched scoreless ninth and 10th innings to gain the victory.

This was the 11th time this year that the Cubs have won in their last at-bat.

"I had two strikes on me and I was choking up on the bat, trying to get solid contact," Sandberg said. "I was fortunate it went out."

Pirates 6, Giants 3

Jose DeLeon struck out 12 batters in eight innings and Tony Pena's run-scoring double capped a three-run fifth inning as Pittsburgh beat San Francisco.

DeLeon, 6-4, fanned seven batters in the first three innings and struck out 10 for the fifth time in his one-year major league career and the second time this season.

With the Pirates trailing 2-1, Marvell Wynne, Lee Mazzilli and Bill Madlock lined consecutive one-out singles in the fifth inning, with Madlock's single driving in Wynne. Jason Thompson followed with a sacrifice fly off loser Bill Laskey, 4-9, to score Mazzilli before Pena doubled.

Mets 8, Braves 6

Keith Hernandez and Mike Fitzgerald each drove in a pair of runs in a five-run ninth inning to lift New York over Atlanta. After the Braves scored three runs in the eighth to take a 6-3 lead, pinch-hitter Rusty Staub led off the Mets' ninth with a double. Wally Backman then walked, chasing Steve Bedrosian, Atlanta's third pitcher.

When Atlanta left fielder Albert Hall dropped Mookie Wilson's fly to allow the Mets to load the bases, Hernandez singled to score John Stearns, who was running for Staub, and Backman.

After Darryl Strawberry struck out, George Foster singled home Wilson with the tying run. One out later, Fitzgerald doubled to score Hernandez and Foster. Jesse Orosco, 7-2, picked up the victory in relief while Doug Sisk pitched the ninth for his 13th save. Donnie Moore, 0-1, who relieved Bedrosian, absorbed the loss.

Padres 4, Cardinals 1

Kevin McReynolds hit his 12th home run in the sixth inning and Eric Show and Craig Lefferts combined on a four-hitter, leading San Diego over St. Louis.

McReynolds' home run capped the San Diego attack off Joaquin Andujar, 13-7, giving them a 4-0 lead. Show, while winning for the first time since June 19, struck out three and walked the same number before giving way to Lefferts in the seventh inning.

Phillies 5, Astros 3

Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter through seven innings and drove in two runs with a double, and Ozzie Virgil and Tim Corcoran each homered as Philadelphia defeated Houston.

Carlton, 7-4, struck out four and walked one as he won his fourth game in his last five decisions. Al Holland collected his 18th save, pitching the final two innings.

Joe Niekro, 9-8, was the loser, snapping a personal seven-game winning streak.

The sixth was the big inning for the Phillies. They produced four runs, two on Carlton's double, and took a 5-2 lead.

Night of Knuckler

From Wire Reports

For the young and the old, the right-handers and the lefties, it was a pitchers night in the American League.

From 45-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro, the oldest player in the majors, to 24-year-old Frank Viola, and from one Baltimore ace (Scott McGregor) to another (Storm Davis), the pitchers were in paradise Thursday night and the hitters were in despair.

The knuckleballers had a terrific time. New York's Niekro tied Detroit's Jack Morris for the American League lead in victories with his 12th and has a 1.88 earned run average after he combined with reliever Dave Righetti on a 5-2 Yankees victory over Kansas City.

In Texas, Charlie Hough threw a four-hitter for his seventh win in the last eight games and AL high 10th complete game as the Rangers belted Cleveland 7-2.

Viola used more classic stuff to win his sixth straight start, 4-2 over slumping Detroit, lifting the Twins into undisputed possession of first place in the West.

The Orioles swept a doubleheader from the White Sox behind the strong hurling of Davis and Sammy Stewart in a 2-1 opening-game victory and a four-hitter by McGregor in a 3-0 decision in the nightcap.

Rangers 7, Indians 2

Buddy Bell drove in four runs with a double, single and sacrifice fly to aid Hough, who says his strong work is based on strong confidence.

Twins 4, Tigers 2

Viola gave up just one run on five hits over eight innings to win his fifth consecutive game since the birth last month of Frank John III. He allowed only a solo homer to Barbaro Garbey before pulling himself from the game with a stiff shoulder after the eighth. Ron Davis pitched the ninth for his 17th save.

Orioles 2-3, White Sox 1-0

Chicago had won seven in a row before journeying to Baltimore, where it was stymied by Davis, Stewart and McGregor. Eddie Murray and Wayne Gross homered in the first game and Cal Ripken Jr. had a home run and triple in the nightcap.

A's 7, Blue Jays 4

Oakland won its fifth straight, a season high, thanks to a six-run seventh that was capped by Dave Kingman's major league-leading 24t home run. Just prior to the homer, Kingman had swung and missed at a Roy Lee Jackson pitch but it got past catcher Buck Martinez, allowing Rickey Henderson to score from third.

Bill Caudill earned his 19th save with two innings of relief for the host A's.

"I just missed it, it sailed right on in and I didn't get it," said Martinez. "It was a fastball that was really running. WE gaJc8$Lling to get beat. We don't play like that very often."

Angels 5, Brewers 2

Witt won his fourth in a row and increased his league-leading strikeout total to 105 in going the route for the fifth time. Rod Carew went 3-for-5, knocked in a run and scored two.

Mariners 3, Red Sox 2

Langston, who three-hit Boston on July 1, gave up singles to Marty Barrett and Jackie Gutierrez and Dwight Evans' 17th homer, leading off the ninth. At that point, Mike Stanton came on and, after he gave up a home run to Mike Easler, was replaced by Paul Mirabella, who picked up his third save.

Largest children's theater opens at World's Fair

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Four-year-old Amanda Keeney of Queens, N.Y., doesn't understand Spanish, but she gleefully sat through a performance by a Mexican acting company at the World's Fair.

Mexico's circus-like company, La Trouppe, opened the largest theater festival for young audiences ever staged in the United States on June 1.

Language was no barrier for the audience because the actors' lines were whistled, not spoken. For the finale, whistles were given to the audience. The ensuing cacophony was Amanda's favorite moment and she blasted away with gusto.

Eleven companies were involved in the festival, nine from overseas. They ranged from La Trouppe to groups with serious scripts for teenagers. It is the first international theater festival ever produced for a world's fair.

The flavor of the Mexican production contrasted to that of New York's First Lady which opened the same day and is a serious play dealing with the historical and emotional tensions of Eleanor Roosevelt's life.

"I thought it was fabulous," said Laura Gowdy, 15, of New Orleans. "I don't know anything about Eleanor Roosevelt, but I was impressed. Everyone has a really good voice and they changed clothes and props so fast, so professionally.

"Besides," she said. "Franklin's cute. My mother was saying that the smile was the same smile."

Miss Gowdy said she planned to return for the opening of the French show.

"I'm excited about the French one because I'm taking French and I want to see if I understand them."

But she had complaints about the sound in the performance tent — as did the rest of the audience — and the actors.

The spillover from a street public address system pumping recordings into the adjacent Italian Village commercial district is not the only difficulty producer Orlin Corey contends with.

"Initially we were to be in a 1,200-seat house, the World Theatre, which dwindled along the way to 600, then disappeared one day," he recalled.

Most of the shows are being seen in the shiny, spangled, red-white-and-blue American Showcase tent.

The French production is full scale and will be staged downtown in the Orpheum Theater. The famed Sicilian Marionettes will bang out their classical bloody mayhem from the time of Charlemagne on a stage in the Italian Village.

Other companies in the festival include Brazil, with a parable about freedom featuring costumed birds as main characters; England, with the legend of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight; Canada with a mime production, "The Potato People in the Piggy Bank Caper," which has costumes including "larval masks."

Japan produced two shows, one a traditional mime highlighting gymnastics, and the other a contemporary tale of young friendship.

New rating awarded

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The new PG-13 rating has been awarded for the first time, to a Matt Dillon film called "Mr. Hot Shot" that is scheduled for release next Christmas.

In the 20th Century Fox film, which also stars Richard Crenna, Hector Elizondo and Janet Jones, the 20-year-old Dillon plays a Brooklyn boy who becomes a gin rummy hustler at a posh Long Island resort.

PG-13 rating was established recently by the Motion Picture Association of America to bridge the gap between the R, or restricted, rating, which denies admission to children under 17 unless they are accompanied by an adult, and the PG, or parental guidance, rating, which advises parental caution.

PG-13 suggests that parents exercise "special guidance" in deciding whether to let pre-teens see a film.

"We never give the reason for a picture getting a certain rating," said Richard D. Heffner, chairman of the seven-member board that determines ratings. "But in this case I guess it's only fair to reveal that certain language was responsible."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

We have often remarked that those contracts that seem to be laydowns require more care than difficult hands. If you relax, it is easy to make a wrong play from which you cannot recover.

The auction was brief and accurate. South showed a balanced hand of 22-24 points, and North used simple arithmetic to arrive at the conclusion that a small slam should be bid.

The play was brief, at least the early part where it mattered, but hardly accurate. When dummy appeared, declarer announced: "No problems, partner." He won the spade in hand, laid down the ace of hearts and, when West showed out, declarer found that 12 tricks were beyond him. (We know that there is a double dummy way to recover, so don't write. But you may get some fun out of trying it.)

There is a way to play this particular heart combination for a sure four tricks. Win the spade lead in dummy and lead a low heart. Regardless of whether East follows or not, insert the 10.

If East follows and the finesse loses, the rest of the suit is good. If the finesse wins and West shows out, cross to the king of hearts and repeat the finesse, and you have four tricks in the bag.

If East shows out, West can capture the 10 with the queen. You win any return in hand, and take the marked finesse of the eight to assure four tricks. If West refuses the first heart, simply continue with a heart toward the K-8, and no matter what West does you are guaranteed four tricks in the suit.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. HBO film 'a western with comedy'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Give Home Box Office an "E" for Effort, though it is hard to believe that "Draw!" is the kind of made-for-pay motion picture that HBO's subscribers are clamoring for.

If you start with the premise that Kirk Douglas and James Coburn, on mere talent and force of personality, could not make a bad movie, then "Draw!" certainly is passable.

Trouble is, naughty language and Douglas' bare behind (sadly, elements that distinguish cable from network TV) can't do much for a hackneyed tale of the Old West, scheduled to premiere Sunday night.

"Draw!" follows closely two previous HBO Premiere Films: "The Far Pavilions" and "Sakharov."

Douglas plays Handsome Harry Holland, an aging outlaw holed up in the hotel in Bell City. Coburn is former sheriff Sam Starret, a legendary, though drunken, lawman who is bound and gagged and pulled into town on a horse-drawn litter to bring Harry to justice after he kills the first sheriff.

From the opening scene, in which Harry shoots a hole in his hat, one wonders, is this movie supposed to be funny? There seems to be consensus that "Draw!" is at least hyphenated comedy, as in comedy-adventure or comedy-drama: HBO calls it "tongue-in-cheek," and Douglas says it's "a Western with humor."

A twist at the end is at least amusing. But most of the humor is of a rather juvenile variety, relying frequently on name-calling and the like for laughs.

Harry isn't looking for trouble when he arrives in Bell City. "Yeah," he says, "I done a few things way back that wouldn't win no church prizes. But I paid for it."

All he wants is a little place over the border in Mexico, where he can eat, sleep, maybe work the farm from time to time and, he says, "watch the sun come up and go down."

Ultimately, though, he's forced into a gunfight with the town sheriff, during which he takes a slug in the thigh. The sheriff isn't so lucky.

"Dead?" Harry wonders. "Sheesh. I guess my eyes ain't what they used to be."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Current financial trends favor your efforts. Learn to influence events instead of just responding to them. Love and marriage enjoy favorable influences. Discuss your goals with mate. Travel proves rewarding.

Peter D'Ambrosia, left, and Charles Nelson, first-year students at Pope John XXIII National Seminary in Weston, Mass., stand aside while helping to serve daily Mass. The light on the way is a ceiling light in the chapel that illuminates the statue.

Priests answer a mystical 'calling'

WESTON, Mass. — John Ozbun, a lanky 43-year-old former high school principal with a crew cut as bristly as a wire brush, has trouble with celibacy.

"I will have trouble with that until 15 minutes after I am dead," he said. "I don't think there will be anything magical that will happen when I become a priest."

Ozbun is one of 35 men between the ages of 30 and 60 who have come to Pope John XXIII National Seminary in Weston to answer a mystical "calling" that many of them describe as a nagging companion throughout their lives.

As men who exceed the traditional age for admission to seminaries, they also are part of a quiet trend in the Roman Catholic Church.

Since the mid-1960s, the church has been slowly relaxing its tradition of training only teenagers and men in their early 20s for the priesthood. Gradually, some seminaries around the country have been accepting older men as students, although no one seems to have kept track of their numbers.

Four seminaries have been founded exclusively for what the church calls "adult vocations." Among them is the seminary in Weston, which was founded in 1964.

ANOTHER IS Holy Apostles College in Cromwell, Conn., where 97 men averaging 44 years of age are studying for the priesthood. The college, founded in 1956, became a seminary offering a master of divinity degree in 1978. The two others are in Hales Corners, Wis., and Spokane, Wash.

The seminarians include lawyers, former military officers, a former investigator for the Internal Revenue Service and a former public health official who specialized in vepereal disease.

The Rev. Dennis Sheehan, rector at Pope John XXIII, said the trend toward "adult vocations" is partly a response to a sharp decline in interest among youth in pursuing church vocations. In 1966, 46,000 men were studying in Catholic seminaries in the United States. Today there are 12,000.

The trend, Sheehan said, also is the result of an increasing appreciation among some church leaders of the experience older men can bring to the priesthood and of the maturity and depth of their commitment to the church.

For older men who wanted to become priests at that time, Sheehan said, "it seemed as if God had passed you by."

THE CHURCH, he said, was wary of men contaminated by "worldly experience." There was concern, he said, that older men "were too formed and not easily remade. The idea was younger men could be molded; some would say brainwashed."

The church's attitude toward adult vocations began to change with the Vatican II ecumenical council in 1962-65, Sheehan said. "The Vatican took a look at the world and decided it was a good place and we should be more involved in it."

For inspiration, Sheehan said, supporters of the change look to giant figures from the church's past. St. Augustine, for example, did not convert to Christianity until he was 32; when he was ordained a priest in the year 391, he was 37.

Several of the older men who have chosen to study for the priesthood described their decisions as difficult ones made after years of prayerful self-searching. Others described it as an easier decision reached after they found that financial success was not enough to fill an emptiness in their lives.

RONALD Gomes, 44, a former U.S. Public Health Service officer from Cambridge, Mass., said that he had strayed from the church for 11 years.

"I had acquired all I set out to," he said. "I had money, a nice job, a nice home, a nice car. But there was an emptiness in my life."

He visited a friend in Cambridge, he said, and found him changed. "He radiated something. I asked him what had happened, and he told me Christ had come into his life."

Ronald Gomes, a first-year student, sits in his bedroom at Pope John XXIII National Seminary. Behind him are icons that he has made from drawings, wood and shellac.

All-Star MVP choice not unanimously acclaimed

The balloting is closed, and the honor of Most Valuable Player of baseball's 55th All-Star Game has gone to Gary Carter of the Montreal Expos.

The distinction was not offered without equivocation, nor was it unanimously acclaimed.

Many people thought the award should have been shared by Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets.

The two pitchers combined to strike out six in a row — three apiece — to break, but not diminish, Carl Hubbell's 50-year-old record. Hubbell struck out five of the game's greatest players — Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin — in succession in the second All-Star Game.

Still others thought the award could have gone to Steve Garvey of San Diego, who played a key role both offensively and defensively in the National League's 3-1 victory Tuesday night.

Garvey scored an unearned run in the first inning after singling, then started a first-to-home double play with none out in the third to bail Valenzuela out of trouble.

But the real MVP was a player who not only did not get a hit but even dropped a ball he might have caught.

If the All-Star Game is baseball's midsummer showcase, then shortstop Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals was the headliner. Smith put on the best show in what, after all, is a game designed solely for show.

Carter became only the second player to win two All-Star MVP's when he hit a second-inning home run to give the Nationals a 2-1 lead. Carter also won the award in 1981 when he hit two home runs.

But this year's All-Star Game did not belong to the hitters.

This game belonged not to the run producers, but to the run preventers.

Even Carter, who accepted the award graciously, felt it had been misdirected.

"It was a great honor the first time and just as great the second time," Carter said. "But the trophy should go to the National League as a whole."

The real All-Star was Smith, one of only three Nationals to play the entire game. And he started the show before the first pitch was thrown by doing his cartwheel-into-a-backflip — made famous in the 1982 World Series — as he took his position at shortstop in the first inning.

AP Analysis

In the third inning, after Thornton had led off against Valenzuela with the single, Whitaker singled to right, and Smith pulled another cute one out of his hat.

Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets, in right, fielded Whitaker's hit and fired toward third, just missing Thornton. It was a dramatic play in itself, but Smith made it even more so. He leaped as if to cut off the throw, slapped his glove and spun in mid-air toward Whitaker, rounding first. Whitaker froze. A perfect deke by Smith had kept the runner out of scoring position.

Smith had created a play for himself where none had existed.

Then, with one out in the sixth inning, Gooden's second on the mound, Eddie Murray of Baltimore hit one of those neck-twisting popups that got caught in the swirling wind of Candlestick Park.

Tim Raines of Montreal raced in from his position in left. Smith raced out. Raines had no idea how far out there Smith could get and, to avoid a collision, Raines skidded to the ground. Without breaking stride, Smith hurdled over Raines' prone form, but he took his eye off the ball for a split second.

He looked back toward the sky, and there was the ball, coming down on a vector like a pig's tail. Smith had overrun the ball. He lunged, got a glove on it, but it bobbled to the turf, and Murray had a double.

An All-Star miss if ever there was one.

Olympic death threat received

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Michael M. Keon, Philippine Olympic Committee president, confirmed Friday local sports officials have received a letter threatening Filipino athletes with death if they particpate in the Los Angeles Olympics, but said he wasn't bothered by it.

"We do not take this very seriously," Keon, a nephew of President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Keon pointed out that all but one of 19 Filipino athletes entered in the games between July 29 and Aug. 12 are already in Los Angeles and said he had complete faith in security precautions taken by U.S. authorities.

The U.S. State Department has hinted in Washington that the letters were part of a Soviet "disinformation campaign."

Ex-Reds blast Cincinnati shuffle

From Wire Reports

BASEBALL—Reliever Bill Scherrer and infielder Tom Lawless blasted the Cincinnati Reds for demoting them and two others to their farm system in a 10-player shuffle. Scherrer and Lawless both said they don't expect to play for Cincinnati again, and asserted they were being made scapegoats for the Reds' troubles, "I told them I want to be traded. I will never play in this city again. I'm sure they're panicking. They're worried after the last few years that the same thing's happening. It's a shame they picked on me," Scherrer said. The Reds placed right-hander Frank Pastore on the 15-day DL and sent Scherrer, Lawless, catcher Dann Bilardello and pitcher Charlie Puleo to their Class AAA Wichita team in the American Association. They called up pitchers Brad Lesley, Jay Tibbs and Keefe Cato, catcher Dave Van Gorder and infielder Skeeter Barnes...

San Francisco first baseman Al Oliver said he will ask to be traded if the club does not battle back from the cellar to win a division title. Oliver, 37, who has a .305 lifetime batting average, said he is frustrated playing for the Giants, who were 16 games off the pace set by the San Diego Padres in the National League West at the All-Star break. He also said he was bothered by not being in the lineup every day...

In second-round matches, Wojtek Fibak of Poland ousted defending champion Sandy Mayer, the No. 4 seed, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2; and seventh-seeded Jose Higueras of Spain emerged as a top contender for the title, easily defeating unseeded Tim Gullikson 6-4, 6-1...

Friday, Small will play his last gig for the five-piece Tim Ryan Band before becoming full-time trainer of Anxious Robby and two other harness racehorses. "I think my wife's going to like this (full-time training) more," the 28-year-old Small said. "I'll be home at night. At least, I'll be home earlier." Anxious Robby won the fastest of the six qualifying heats for the Sheppard with a time of 1:59 1-5 for two trips around Yonkers' half-mile track. In five previous races, Anxious Robby posted three seconds and two thirds on two races over a five-eighths-mile track and three on a mile track...

Quality. It's as important in diamonds as in anything else you own.

There's more to a diamond than meets the eye. And to understand the differences between diamonds is to understand the 4C's—Cut, Color, Clarity and Carat-weight. It's these 4C's that determine the value of a diamond.

The differences between diamonds are subtle indeed. But to people of discriminating taste, it's quality that makes all the difference. Your jeweler is the expert where diamonds are concerned. And he can show you high-quality diamonds in all sizes. They simply look better and will enhance your jewelry, no matter what the design.

Loeffler: Problems in El Salvador reach constituents

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

It is up to El Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte to come up with the "smoking gun" if Congress is to change its mind about the $21 million for covert aid that was denied the Central American country recently, U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler said during an interview here this week.

The problems in Central America are like tentacles that reach out to Loeffler's contituents in the 21st Congressional District with El Salvador being cited by many as one of their concerns, he said. And if the problems aren't stemmed in those countries through military aid, Loeffler said, then the United States faces a strong possibility of having to send troops to stop the infiltrating guerrillas.

During the interview, Loeffler also talked of the budget, tax loophole closing bill and immigration legislation.

President Reagan had requested $21 million in aid for the contras in El Salvador, but Congress deleted it from the $1.1 billion emergency spending bill about two weeks ago.

Loeffler said Duarte has been pursuing human rights violators to demonstrate his intent to the United States that he is serious about getting the guerrillas out of El Salvador.

DUARTE ALSO MUST bring more evidence in the form of serial numbers of weapons confiscated during the U.S. involvement in Vietnam to show Congress how the guns are being shipped to El Salvador through other countries, such as Cuba and Nicaragua.

Tough school regulations maintain drop in incidence rate of diseases

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The decline in the incidence rate of diseases which once were a deadly and often daily experience is due in part to the introduction of vaccines, according to a state health department official in Lubbock. But in Texas, the success of preventive medicine is maintained by strict laws which require schoolchildren to have the inoculations.

"A lot of states have entry laws but the state of Texas follows them all the way through the 12th grade," said D.L. Wilson, Texas Department of Health program manager for immunization programs for Regions 2 and 12. "I think Texas probably has, as far as I'm concerned, the best school immunization regulations in the United States."

While measles, mumps and rubella (also known as German and three-day measles) still spread through schoolrooms, diseases such as diptheria, tetanus, pertussis (whooping cough) and rheumatic fever have dropped dramatically.

POLIO, A once-common and contagious disease, has struck fewer people while smallpox, a fatal viral disease, has been eradicated worldwide because of vaccines.

"The first inoculation for smallpox started in the late 1800s," Wilson said. "The last case of smallpox was introduced in a laboratory in England in 1976. No one even gets immunized for smallpox anymore. It's not required."

Vaccinations in this country were stopped in the late 1960s, but persons traveling overseas could receive them through the 1970s.

Since the state law regulating student immunizations was put into effect in 1971, the number of reported cases of polio in Texas has dropped from 4 to 0, according to the Texas Public School Immunization Report for the 1983-84 School Year. The rate of incidence of tuberculosis, another contagious disease, also has declined.

"But we still have it," said Mimi McKnight, Midland Memorial Hospital infection control nurse, who pointed to poor nutrition and health habits as major causes.

DESPITE HIGHER numbers in border states or areas where people are coming in from undeveloped countries, the incidence rate of tuberculosis in the United States is estimated to be around 12 per 100,000 people, Wilson said. "Actually, we pretty well follow the same curve as the rest of the United States as far as declines in tuberculosis."

There were 2,045 cases reported in 1982, similar to 1981, according to the Reported Morbidity and Mortality Survey in Texas. "We should have dropped from the previous year but we didn't," Wilson said. "That's believed to be the result of tremendous growth in the state."

Polio "is just way down," Ms. McKnight said. She was told that in the 1950s, one hospital in New York had five cases of polio per day coming in. Depending on the incidence rate, five cases reported in the entire country in a year could be considered an epidemic, she was told.

Ninety-nine percent of the students in Texas received immunizations for polio, diptheria, pertussis, tetanus, measles and rubella in 1983, the state health department reported. The 1 percent of school age children who were not vaccinated were exempted for religious or medical purposes.

New illnesses on the increase

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Although many serious illnesses have been erased from everyday life, new ones are on the increase with one even being added to the list of legally reportable diseases.

Reye's syndrome, an often fatal disease which usually strikes children, was reported on a voluntary basis by some hospitals and physicians, according to a public health technician in Austin. But the state added the disease to the list of those that must be reported by law in April 1983.

"Actually, there's been no great increase in the number of cases reported (since it became mandatory)," said James Perdue of the Bureau of Epidemiology. In 1983, 29 cases of Reye's syndrome were reported in Texas with 25 meeting the standard case definition, developed by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. Of the 25, 13 died.

Because of inconsistencies in disease descriptions and case definitions, different reporting laws of states, delay in reporting and inadequate follow-ups on patients, the numbers vary. While Texas reports cases on a calendar year, the national figures are computed from Nov. 1 through Oct. 31.

But the most difficult aspect of identifying victims is identifying the disease, he said. Cases range from mild symptoms to coma death.

"The problem is, it's a syndrome and it's not easily identifiable. There's no known cause and we just call it a disease because we don't know what else to call it," Perdue said. "The more severe the disease, the better the reporting."

Of the 38 states reporting cases in 1983, 191 victims were identified across the nation. But that doesn't mean there weren't any Reye's syndrome victims in those 12 states. "It probably means they just didn't report any," Perdue said.

Follow-ups were done on only 173 of the 191 patients. Of that figure, the disease was fatal in 32 percent, or 56 people.

Texas victims are younger than the national average, although the reason has not been determined. In 1982, 68 percent of the victims in Texas were under the age of 5, compared to 36 percent on the national level. In 1983, 60 percent of the cases involved children under 5 while 40 percent of the national total fit that age range.

There were 36 cases of Reye's syndrome reported in 1981 and 22 cases in 1982, according to state figures. To date, 10 cases have been reported, Perdue said.

The CDC attributes fewer reports to a milder flu season, "even though there's no proof that influenza and Reye's syndrome are related," Perdue said. Despite being linked to viral diseases, it could be related to liver damage from a viral disease, he said.

In 1974, health officials began separating cases of hepatitis into two categories. Since then, there has been a gradual increase.

"There are one or two reasons for it," said Dr. Lynne Sehulster, staff epidemiologist at the Bureau of Epidemiology. "Health officials are looking for it and when you look for it, you usually can find it."

The increased awareness came when the Food and Drug Administraton licensed a vaccine in 1981. Specifically useful for health department workers or those who may come into contact with serum hepatitis, also known as hepatitis B, the vaccine was made available to the general public in 1982.

Once considered to be transmitted by dirty needles and associated with drug addicts, hepatitis B has been found to live in male semen, blood and sputum, according to Mimi McKnight, infection control nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital. The disease also may be linked to AIDS and may be increasing due to a more promiscuous society, she suggested.

In 1983, 1,234 people were identified as having hepatitis B in Texas. "And it's gradually increasing," Dr. Sehulster said. Vaccinations against the disease are "firmly" recommended for health and medical employees who work with serum. "But it's fairly low (rate of incidence) in the general population."

Hepatitis A, which struck 3,030 Texans in 1983, is "more of a hand to mouth type" of disease.

"The virus for hepatitis A is concentrated in fecal matters," Dr. Sehulster said. "It's really a problem in day care centers where children are still in diapers.

"Sometimes its difficult to tell if a child has hepatitis A because they don't show the nice, classical symptoms we show as adults. The only way to tell is when the parents come down with it within a month."

There is no vaccine available for infectious hepatitis yet and treatment usually consists of rest and good nutrition. Shots are available for those who come in contact with a victim, but the protection is not permanent, she said.

Odessans for Decency promoting boycott of area 7-Eleven stores

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Area 7-Eleven convenience stores are the latest anti-pornography project taken up by Odessans for Decency, who have joined a nationwide boycott of the stores promoted by the National Federation for Decency.

Charging the convenience store chain is the "number one retailer of pornographic magazines in the U.S. today, according to the N.F.D.," the Odessa group is promoting a boycott of the stores selling pornographic magazines and a nationwide picketing effort Aug. 6.

"Odessans for Decency ask our friends to join us and the N.F.D. in this boycott of 7-Eleven stores by exercising our Constitutional right to spend our money with merchants who do not sell porno," according to a press release distributed by the group.

The Midland/Odessa district manager of 7-Eleven Stores said there were no plans to stop the sale of the magazines despite pressure from the decency group.

" We at 7-Eleven feel we have a very restrictive policy on the sale of adult magazines," said District Manager Keith John, noting the adult magazines are available only by request from behind the main counter, with covers not visible to other patrons.

John did not dispute claims that the chain was the largest retailer of the pornographic magazines. "With 7,500 outlets in the United States, we're big in everything," he said, adding the stores also are the largest corporate fundraiser for Muscular Dystrophy, and among the largest contributors to the March of Dimes and the Olympics.

A "picket packet" included with the release sets guidelines for protesting the Southland Corporation's convenience store chain selling magazines, such as Playboy and Penthouse.

The packet sets hours for the picket (11 a.m.-2 p.m., Aug. 6), and suggests picketers first make sure they protest only at Southland-owned 7-Eleven stores selling the magazines.

Suggested picket sign slogans are "7-Eleven, Leading Porn Retailer."

The literature criticizes the sale of the magazines in a store "noted traditionally as a family store."

The packet stresses legal assembly, instructing picketers not to respond to supporters of the stores' sale of the magazines. "Remember that you are doing a good thing. Your attitude should not be vengeful," said the release apparently prepared by the national group.

Included in the packet are answers to "cliche arguments" supporters of the boycott are instructed to use when confronted by opposition.

The answers refer to reports and Supreme Court decisions which are interpreted to support their belief that pornography is harmful.

In response to the argument that obscenity "is in the eye of the beholder," the literature defines it as "the description or depiction of specific sexual activity, the description or depiction of which is prohibited by law, to protect the common good."

"It is as objective as stealing or murder," according to the release.

In response to the argument that ready availability of pornography would reduce its attraction, the literature suggests "Heavy users of pornography do not get bored. They go deeper and deeper into more and more bizarre forms of it. Pornography is addicting."

"Very definitely, it's a downward step," said Joe Seay, vice president for Odessans for Decency, suggesting statistics link pornography with "crimes of passion," such as rape and child molestation.

While the group does not extend its membership beyond Odessa, Seay said there were supporters of the national federation in Midland.

Motorist challenges court system

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Upset by the procedures in Municipal Court, 30-year-old Robert Carlin has thrown down the gauntlet and is telling the city to catch him if they can.

Carlin had posted a $35 signature bond after pleading innocent to a stop sign violation and was scheduled for a trial by a jury of his peers at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

As fate would have it, though, he claims car trouble and other problems caused him to show up 40 minutes late — something he says shouldn't have made that much difference in the first place because he had been told there were four cases ahead of him and he could figure it would take about 10 minutes each to dispose of them.

"But they said I had forfeited the bond and would have to pay the $35 before they'd reschedule a second hearing.

"I said I'd do so if the $35 would serve as bond for the second trial. But they said no, and that I'd have to pay the first bond and post an additional $35 cash bond."

Carlin — a motel waiter who plans on attending graduate school in another state in September — balked at having to shell out $70 and told court personnel they could arrest him if they wanted to, but he wasn't going to pay it.

According to Carlin, court officials in effect said so be it and that a warrant would be issued for his arrest.

While Carlin says he takes no issue with the need for court policies and guidelines, he does resent what he terms a "lack of flexibility" on the part of court administrators:

"They need to realize they're not dealing with machines, but with human beings who are quite often confronted with circumstances beyond their control.

"They didn't even ask why I was late. They said I could talk to the prosecutor, who had already told me he couldn't change anything.

"What if I had been in an accident and was laid up in the hospital? Would they make me pay the $35 anyway — like they want me to do now?

"Well, I won't pay their corrupt blood money. If they arrest me before I leave for school, I'll serve out the time. Otherwise, they can extradite me."

Court officials apparently have accepted the challenge. Citing state law, Court Administrator Nick Weidenkopf said Thursday, "We usually allow 30 minutes. When someone doesn't show up on time, the witnesses and jury have to be excused. At some point you have to draw the line. He could have called and told us he was going to be late. If you're 40 minutes late for a plane, the plane isn't going to wait."

Assistant City Attorney Roy Scott concurred with Weidenkopf. "We're only required to wait 10 minutes. We waited until 2 p.m., and then I called out his name at the courthouse door, according to law.

"He was loud and profane. We're not required to grant a second hearing, but he was so insistent he was innocent that I agreed to one," Scott said.

As to what's in store for Carlin, Scott said a summons will be mailed to him. If he doesn't honor it, a warrant will be issued "and we'll send somebody out to get him. If he's gone, he's gone, I guess."

Residents should ensure eligibility to vote

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midlanders who are not yet registered to vote or who have failed to file changes of addresses with Midland County Elections Administrator Janeice Builta may miss out on the Nov. 6 general election.

"They should do something about it and do something quick," Ms. Builta suggested.

Earlier in 1984, her office mailed out more than 40,000 of the blue biennial voter registration certificates, valid until early in 1986. But 5,000 were returned by the U.S. Postal Service as undeliverable. By law, the USPS is prohibited from forwarding voter registration certificates.

Unless those previously registered voters contact Ms. Builta by telephone, mail or in person, their names will be purged from the roll and they will be disqualified from voting.

"Everyone of these (5,000 names) will be canceled on the 16th day of August without fail," she warned.

A registered voter on the purge list may avoid the cancellation if he updates his address. A voter who did not receive the new blue certificate may make corrections on his outdated salmon-colored voter certificate and mail it to Ms. Builta at P.O. Box 3434, Midland, Texas 79702. He will thereby ensure his eligibility to vote and will be mailed the blue certificate.

About 44,000 persons are registered to vote in Midland County.

Ms. Builta noted that once a person has signed up, he or she is eligible to vote in elections whether or not he voted in previous elections. However, if a voter's renewed voter registration certificate is undeliverable by the mailman and is returned to Ms. Builta's office, then that person's name will be stricken from the list of eligible voters unless the address is corrected.

Alta Taylor

BIG SPRING — Graveside services for Alta M. Taylor, 75, Big Spring, were to be at 4 p.m. today at Trinity Memorial Park here with the Rev. Bobby Fuller, pastor of College Baptist Church, officiating. Handling arrangements was Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Born June 7, 1909, in Blevins, Ark., Ms. Taylor married J.B. Taylor in 1927 in Blevins. The Taylors had lived in Big Spring since 1961. Prior to that, they had lived for 30 years in Midland.

She was a member of the College Baptist Church.

Loeffler

"This would get the U.S. to move forward with funding for covert aid. The contras have got to have that assistance," he said.

This vacillation by Congress — giving aid one time and rejecting it the next — has resulted in Honduran leaders believing the U.S. would also renege on aid to their country, according to Loeffler.

"Duarte will have to stand up and say he respects the sovereignty of Nicaragua and he expects the sandinistas to respect the sovereignty of El Salvador. If not, he'll declare war," said Loeffler. And if that happens, "We'll be forced to move into Central America and provide troops. We don't want to do that. It's a very tenuous situation."

The Republican congressman from Hunt who also represents Midland in his 21st District, said Duarte's attempts to resolve the human rights violations should appeal to the liberal wing of Congress — the same group which denied the $21 million in covert aid.

But the El Salvadoran president doesn't have much time to get his "smoking gun." Loeffler said, "It is vital that Congress do something by Aug. 23."

CENTRAL AMERICA is only one of three issues that crop up in comments from his constituents, according to Loeffler. The other two are immigration and the national deficit.

"Central America is in our laps, not just our back yards," he said of the increasing numbers of refugees crossing the southern border illegally into the United States.

One version of the Simpson-Mazzoli immigration bill has passed the House and another version in the Senate. Loeffler, who is opposed to either version, said legislators who live outside districts that would be directly affected by the bill and are its supporters don't understand the impact. Rep. Romano Mazzoli of Kentucky and Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming "have become so obsessed with it they've lost the concept of what it would mean."

"It would bring chaos to a problem we understand," said Loeffler who hopes both bills die a quiet death this summer. Instead of the bill, he would prefer to see more border patrol agents.

ALTHOUGH THE Reagan administration wants the bill passed, Loeffler said the pushing is coming from people in the Administration who don't understand the legislation's effects on Texas. "They have as much experience with border problems as Simpson and Mazzoli."

The tax loophole closing legislation passed recently consisted of two parts: $50 billion in revenues from taxes and $13 billion in spending restraints. Loeffler said he voted against it because "I don't believe any nation can tax itself into prosperity."

When there is a tax package that calls for a $1 cut in spending for every $1 of tax revenue, he said he will vote for it.

Part of that tax loophole closing bill redraws the time frame on eliminating the Windfall Profits Tax on upper tier oil. Loeffler said the tax should have dropped from its current 30 percent down to 15 percent by 1986. Congress, however puts the reduction at 22.5 percent in 1984 through 1987, 20 percent in 1988 and 15 percent in 1989.

In addition to the bill, Congress looked at cutting the defense budget by $50-60 billion over three years. Combined with the other legislation, the down payment on the deficit should be $130 billion, he said.

EARLY IN NEXT year's session of Congress, both parties may try to address deficit spending, according to Loeffler who added, "This year for the first time both parties have acknowledged deficits are a problem."

But the parties will differ in their approach, he noted, with one going for spending reductions and the other side for tax increases.

He chastised the Democratic members, saying if they had stuck with President Reagan's program, Congress would have reduced spending by $600 billion by now. Instead, the cuts total half, or $300 billion.

Despite the varying opinions, Loeffler thinks a balanced budget could be achieved. "The 1984 elections are a determining force as to the direction Washington takes in dealing with the deficit."

Loeffler, who will attend the Republican National Convention in August as a delegate-at-large and will serve on the Platform Committee, is planning to assist in the presidential and U.S. senatorial campaigns this fall.

Huddling before kickoff

Packing materials for the 1984 United Way campaign are, from left, Frances Fitzgerald, Georgia Tucker and Altha Odom, supplies division chairman. More than 68,200 pieces of literature, including brochures, pledge cards, progress thermometers and posters, are being assembled for the campaign which kicks off Sept. 10. Campaign goal is $1.95 million.

DISEASES

REPORTED CASES of diptheria in the state fell from 56 in 1971 to 0 in 1983. Cases of pertussis declined from 282 to 95 while tetanus fell from 10 to 7 during the same period.

"Both measles have gone down a whole lot," Ms. McKnight said. In 1971, 9,585 cases of measles (rubeola) were reported while only 37 cases were reported in 1983, according to the state's school immunization report. Rubella (German or three-day measles) fell from 4,414 to 117 in that same period.

"The incidence rate is probably higher among rubella," Wilson said. "That was true in 1983, but it might not hold true for every year. Rubeola would be the most serious although rubella has the connotation of being real severe because it causes problems with mothers during the first trimester of pregnancy. But usually, most often, it is mild."

There is not yet a vaccination for chickenpox, another extremely contagious viral disease among children that can be dangerous. A group of doctors in Japan, however, has come up with a vaccination to test on severe cases, Ms. McKnight said. Chickenpox can be dangerous for children with leukemia, for example, or infants and adults.

Mumps, which usually strikes children between the ages of 5 and 15, also has declined with 224 cases reported in Texas in 1983, compared to 9,231 reported in 1971. A child with mumps usually does not have to be totally isolated, although males over the age of puberty should avoid contact with a patient. Orchitis, or inflammation of the testes, affects about a third of the males who contract mumps after puberty, causing sterility in some cases.

THE VACCINE is not given to infants less than a year old or people with certain allergies.

Scarlet fever, which usually strikes children in late winter and spring, follows a streptococcal infection. Very contagious between children, an adult who comes in contract with the disease may only suffer a sore throat, Ms. McKnight said.

Although it used to be more common and severe, antibiotics have reduced the incidence of scarlet fever.

One possible complication of scarlet fever is rheumatic fever, which usually strikes children and, less frequently, young adults. In 1982, 12 cases of rheumatic fever were reported to the Texas Department of Health, Wilson said. Of those patients, three were females and nine were male, ranging from 4 to 42 years of age. The cases all occurred in the winter and spring.

Antibiotics or penicillin can be used to reduce fever and pain, but no methods of fighting the disease directly have been developed.

VOTE

"They will have to re-register," she noted, "and that means they will have to come into this office and register or else be registered by a volunteer deputy." An estimated 170 volunteer deputies set up registration tables in shopping malls, supermarkets and other places where people congregate.

The last day a U.S. citizen 18 years old or older may register to vote in the Nov. 6 presidential election is Oct. 7, Ms. Builta noted.

Her office is located at 709 W. Washington Ave. at Front Avenue and Pecos and B streets and is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. She or one of her deputies may be contacted by telephone at 687-0231 or 687-0232.

"A husband, wife, mother, father, son and daughter can register for one another," Ms. Builta said. "But no in-laws, no-outlaw, no brothers and sisters" can similarly register.

In the 1980 general election, 32,890 Midlanders voted in that presidential-year election.

Ms. Builta is mindful of citizens' rights to vote if they are properly registered.

"It's later than they think," Ms. Builta said. "Don't put off tomorrow what you can do today, and don't put off next month what you can do this month, because if the next six months move like the first six months (of 1984), the election will be over...Get yourself in gear and get registered."

Couple arrested in Oklahoma

HOUSTON (AP) — Police in Oklahoma have arrested two people wanted in the fatal shooting of a 2-year-old Houston boy who was used as a shield to block a bullet, officials said.

Bristow, Okla., police arrested Lloyd Daniel Reece, 33, and Edna Denise Cole, 22, about 10 p.m. Thursday, detective D.B. Osterberg said.

The two are charged in the slaying of Shaun Givens, who was dead on arrival at a Houston hospital Monday night.

Houston police said the boy was shot when a woman being chased by a man with a gun snatched up the child and held him in front of her.

Reece was sought on a murder warrant. Ms. Cole is charged with involuntary manslaughter and injury to a child.

The two were arrested at Ms. Cole's father's home, where they had been for two days, said Osterberg.

Osterberg said he and another officer would fly to Oklahoma today to question the pair.

Church of the Nazarene appoints missionaries

The Rev. Dwight Rich and his wife Carolyn recently were appointed missionaries for the Church of the Nazarene to Ecuador.

The couple will be holding a special missionary service in the Permian Basin Church of the Nazarene, 2813 W. Loop 250 N., at 7 p.m. today.

Rich received his associate bachelor degree from Mid-America Nazarene College in 1975. In 1979, he graduated from Nazarene Theological Seminary in Kansas City with a master of divinity degree with an emphasis in missions. Mrs. Rich received her bachelor of science degree in nursing from Mid-America Nazarene College in 1981.

As a child, Rich lived in Haiti with his missionary parents. After receiving "his own call" to missionary service at 15, he served a summer's term with the Student Mission Corps in the Dominican Republic. Mrs. Rich "received her call" to missionary service when she was 19.

From 1981 to 1984, the couple pastored the Lauderdale Manor Church of the Nazarene, a cross-cultural church with 12 counties represented in the congregation, in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

They have an infant son, Bryan Scott, born in 1983.

In September 1984, the couple will be going to Costa Rica for a year of Spanish language training. They plan to be in Ecuador by July 1985.

The public is invited to attend tonight's service.

Gay rights opponents say they'll have names

HOUSTON (AP) — Saying the matter concerns "simply perverts," the leader of Houston's Roman Catholics endorsed a petition drive aimed at overturning two city ordinances which protect homosexuals against discrimination in city jobs.

Bishop John L. Morkovsky, head of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston, said Thursday he hopes the campaign to force a referendum "really succeeds."

Morkovsky said the ordinances were "a matter of concern to a particular group who are simply perverts."

He said laws protecting qualified people already were in effect and that homosexuals "shouldn't be singled out for protection of jobs that a majority of the people would rather not let them have."

Meanwhile, an opponent of two laws said the ordinances give Houston a "negative image" but predicts her group will gather enough signatures on petitions to bring the matters to a citywide vote.

Ann Lenick, a member of the Committee for Public Awareness, said she is confident her group will have the required 28,000 signatures of registered voters by Monday.

"We have given ourselves plenty of time to get them in," Mrs. Lenick said.

City officials have said the deadline is Thursday. Anita Rodeheaver, Harris County clerk of court, has said the earliest the referendum could be held is January.

One of the ordinances passed by the City Council last month outlaws discrimination against homosexuals in Houston's Affirmative Action program. The other forbids discrimination on civil service examinations and bars the city from keeping personnel statistics on sexual orientation.

"I don't personally think they (homosexuals) belong on the police department, or on the playground, where the children are involved," Mrs. Lenick said. "This is my main contention."

She said she is afraid the laws will project "a very negative image of our city."

Lee Harrington, an officer of Houston's Gay Political Caucus, has said the two laws should not be generating any controversy.

"What we're really talking about here is a simple protection of employment," he said. "The issue really is that simple. People can disagree about lifestyles, they can disagree about religious issues and religious people can disagree among themselves.

"But what we're talking about here is the freedom to have a job if you're qualified and if you do a good job, to keep that job," he added.

About a dozen people, including two ministers, appeared before Houston's city council Wednesday to condemn its members for passing the laws.

Odessan dies from drug overdose

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 22-year-old Odessan died Thursday night, allegedly from an overdose of cocaine he took to avoid arrest for possession of the drug by police who had stopped him on a traffic violation.

Tirso Contreras Jr., 22, who listed a northwest Odessa residence, was in full cardiac arrest when an emergency medical team arrived at Optomist Park at the intersection of Grandview and Everglade at 10:18 p.m. Thursday, according to reports.

Contreras had been stopped earlier by police on a traffic violation. A passenger in the car told police Contreras had swallowed four baggies containing a gram of cocaine each to avoid being arrested for possession of the drug.

The witness told police Contreras had been snorting the drug "all day," said reports, and had been at a local bar before the traffic arrest.

After ingesting the drug, Contreras reportedly drove to a nearby business and attempted to force vomiting. He began choking at the park, at which time the passenger called an ambulance.

Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee pronounced Contreras dead at 12:13 a.m. today and ordered an autopsy.

Waiter held in infirmary cell after suicide attempt

DALLAS (AP) -- An unemployed Moroccan waiter was being held in an infirmary observation cell today following a suicide attempt that came after he was ordered to stand trial for the slayings of six bar patrons, authorities say.

Abdelkrim Belachheb, 39, received 18 stitches at the infirmary of the Lew Sterrett Justice Center early Thursday after slashing himself twice in the left arm with a razor blade at his cell, officials said.

"Since he's given us an indication that he may be suicidal, we'll keep him there (in the infirmary) for the duration," said Bob Knowles, Dallas County sheriff's department detentions commander.

Belachheb's court-appointed attorney, Ted Calisi, said he would question jail officials about why his client was allowed access to a razor in light of earlier statements by the suspect that he has previously attempted suicide.

Calisi, who said he is planning an insanity defense for his client, added the attempted suicide was prompted "by many factors, including mental illness."

He claimed Belachheb was upset after he was interrogated by investigators Tuesday night from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 a.m. "without the benefit of counsel."

Calisi said he will use the police interrogation as part of the insanity defense that he plans to use at Belachheb's trial.

"You have to look at his state of mind," Calisi said. "The man is sick. He has a mental defect. He has a mental illness."

A guard making a routine, hourly check on Belachheb's cell at 7:15 a.m. Thursday noticed the inmate lying on his bunk with blood dripping from his arm.

"He just cut his arm with a razor blade that he dismantled," said a jail official who asked not to be identified.

Belachheb had two gashes on his left arm between his wrist and his elbow, said Knowles. Officials said the injury was never life-threatening.

Belachheb is charged with six counts of murder and one count of attempted murder in the June 29 shooting of seven patrons at Ianni's Restaurant and Club in North Dallas.

During the onslaught, four women and two men died and another man was hospitalized.

Belachheb was ordered to stand trial after a probable cause hearing Wednesday. A police detective testified that several witnesses had identified Belachheb in a photograph lineup as the man who did the shooting.

Sgt. Bill Parker said that witnesses picked Belaccheb's picture from among several they were shown as that of the man who fired a 9mm automatic weapon at seven restaurant patrons.

Belachheb was identified despite the dramatic change in his appearance since the night of the shootings, said Parker.

Eagle to be tracked by satellite

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A bald eagle to be released in Tennessee this month will be tracked by satellites circling the Earth, a "real breakthrough" in efforts to monitor bird migration, a state official says.

Satellite telemetry equipment powered by the sun will be strapped to the eagle's back when the bird is set free the week of July 23, Bob Hatcher of the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency said Thursday.

"Using satellites," he said, "this device will allow us to get as many as 10 readings per day on the bird's location as it travels...."

Heating bills may soar when price controls removed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 45 million American families who heat their homes with natural gas can expect an average 14 percent increase in their utility bills next year when price controls are removed on about two-thirds of the nation's supply of the fuel, says a consumer group.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, which has mounted a nationwide grassroots effort to prevent the federal controls from expiring, predicted in a report Thursday that the typical 1985 increase will amount to about $104 per household.

The coalition's report contradicts estimates last week by the Reagan administration that gas prices will rise only 2½ percent when the controls are removed next January.

Energy Secretary Donald Hodel and J. Erich Evered, director of the independent Energy Information Adminstration, have said they don't expect soaring prices to occur. They have been predicted by consumer groups and pipeline companies.

"The price effects of partial decontrol have probably already occurred, and no significant gas price rise is predicted for 1985-87," Evered told reporters.

Wholesale natural gas prices have been relatively flat since mid-1982 while residential rates nationwide have dropped about 3 percent in the past year after rising at annual rates of between 14 and 24 percent in 1979, 1980 and 1981.

The coalition based its estimates on an assumption that prices on about 40 percent of so-called new gas produced from wells drilled after 1977 and on about 20 percent of the deep gas will rise to an average $5.50 to $6 per 1,000 cubic feet under current contract provisions when the controls come off.

Despite a 20 percent surplus in supplies, prices on new gas have steadily risen from $2.89 in 1981 to $3.62 this spring. Deep gas prices, however, have dropped about one-third since mid-1982 to about $5 per thousand cubic feet.

So-called old gas from wells drilled prior to 1978 — now about 40 percent of the nation's supply — is to remain under price controls after next January. It is selling for an average $1.42 per thousand cubic feet.

The coalition's report was criticized by the Natural Gas Supply Association, an organization of the nation's largest gas producers, many of them major oil companies.

The association's president, Nicolas Bush, said the study is "as invalid and flawed as its previous studies, including the ridiculous forecast they made in 1983 predicting a flyup of 58 percent."

Mike Waters, a spokesman for the producers' group, said suppliers know they can't sell gas at $5.50 to $6 per thousand cubic feet, but acknowledged there has been little negotiation to remove those 1985 price levels from current contracts.

"Everyone is waiting to see what Congress will do before beginning those negotiations," he said. "The industry has shown it is quite capable of renegotiating volumes; there's no reason to believe they won't do it on price."

The coalition has been the primary force behind a bill by Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., to extend controls. House Speaker Thomas O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has been urged by 217 of the 435 voting House members to allow a vote on that bill before the election.

Officials don't want strikers voting

In election to decertify copper union

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Officials of the Phelps Dodge Corp. say striking employees should be prohibited from voting if an election to decertify a copper union is held at the local facility.

"Our position is that these strikers are economic strikers and are not eligible to participate in any election that is held," lawyer Thomas Greaves said Thursday in a brief opening statement at the National Labor Relations Board hearing.

The NLRB scheduled the hearing, which began Thursday and was continuing today, to give both Phelps Dodge officials and union representatives the opportunity to argue why elections should be held and, if held, who would be allowed to vote.

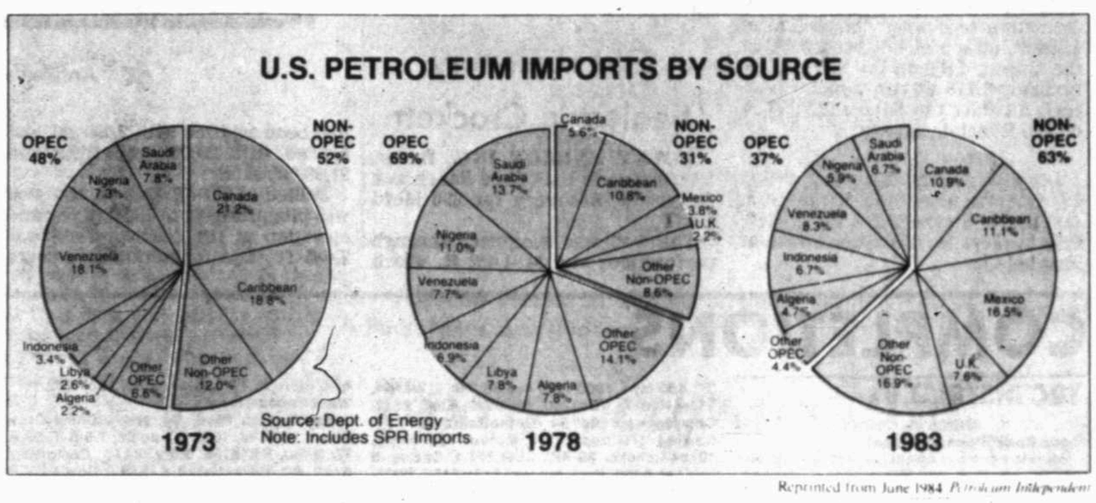

An attorney for the United Steelwokers union, which represents about 250 employees still striking the El Paso facility, said the union's position is that the question of who should be able to vote at a decertification election should not be addressed until labor grievances filed against the company have been settled.

Bruce Fickman said the union has filed charges of unfair bargainning practices against Phelps Dodge "and given (that), it is inappropriate to proceed at this point with a determination of the eligiblity of striking employees."

Greaves, however, denied the union's charges.

More than 300 workers struck the El Paso facility of Phelps Dodge, the largest copper producer in the nation, in July 1983. The company's Arizona operations also were hit by the strike, where about 2,200 people work for Phelps Dodge.

Phelps Dodge, however, has continued to operate with non-strikers and new hires and has said that in both Arizona and El Paso it has about the same number of employees it had before the strike.

Arab oil cutoff won't cause crisis

WASHINGTON — An Arab oil cutoff today would hardly pose a major crisis according to a report in the June issue of Petroleum Independent Magazine.

According to the report by contributing economics editor Deborah Rowell, the world oil market has changed dramatically since the gasoline lines experienced as a result of the 1973 Arab oil embargo and the 1979 Iranian crisis.

According to Rowell, there are several reasons for this. Among them a decline in imports and the actually amount of oil being imported from OPEC sources. "Last year," notes Rowell in her article, "the U.S. imported 30 percent of its crude oil and petroleum products, compared with 35 percent a decade ago and an even higher 43 percent in 1978 before the Iranian shortage. In the first quarter of this year that ratio increased to about 32 percent, but still only about a third of all U.S. imports come from OPEC nations."

Rowell, in writing for the official magazine of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, says the reason for this decline is increased production in non-OPEC areas such as Mexico and the North Sea.

In 1983, for example, Mexico was the leading source of U.S. imports followed by Canada, Venezuela and the United Kingdom.

As the chart shows, only about one percent of U.S. imports comes from Iran. "Still," writes Rowell, "their ongoing war poses the most viable threat to oil supplies through the likelihood of a Persian Gulf blockade. Although 20 percent of the free world's total oil supply passes through the Strait of Hormuz, such a disruption today probably would not cause the long gasoline lines and skyrocketing prices of 1973 and 1979 because the world oil market is a different place today."

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 256 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $1.3 billion to $169.7 billion during the week ended July 11, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 10.21 percent from 10.05 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 10.07 percent from 9.98 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity remained at 36 days for the second week.

William E. Donoghue says: "Savvy investors are staying liquid and getting higher yields in money funds, which are currently outperforming by 1.01 percent the 9.20 percent average MMDA rate reported by Bank Rate Monitor. The $1.3 billion asset increase was in funds open to individual investors and brought taxable money fund assets to their highest level since early May 1983. The 7-day average yield is the highest since August 1982." Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746. 800-343-5413.

Du Pont says alcohol added to gas raises octane rating

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The Du Pont Co., a major manufacturer of the gasoline additative methanol, was gearing up to sell alcohol as an additive if the Environmental Protection Agency approved its latest petroleum mixture.

The company's immediate goal was to produce a low-cost replacement for the extra refining and additives now used to raise the octane rating for unleaded gasoline.

Its long-range goal was finding a replacement for gasoline.

The chemical and petroleum manufacturing company applied Wednesday for an EPA ruling on its alcohol-methanol mixture, expected within six months. The agency denied a 1982 application from Du Pont to sell refineries a different methanol mixture. The Clean Air Act requires EPA approval of any gasoline additives.

Company officials said the mixture of gasoline, methyl, alcohol and methanol is a step toward its goal of producing a cheap replacement for gasoline.

The company, with a capacity to produce 450,000 gallons of methanol a year at its two Texas plants, views methanol as an eventual replacement for gasoline. Methanol sells for 45 cents a gallon.

Two years and 50,000 miles of tests at the company's Petroleum Laboratory in Deepwater, N.J., showed the alcohol-methanol mixture was safe both for the environment and for car engines, company officials said.

Alden J. Pahnke, who supervised the tests, said results showed no harm to automobile emission control equipment, no significant corrosion of metal parts and only slight swelling of rubber tubing. Even the swelling, Pahnke said, could be accommodated by the cars' fuel systems.

"As a major U.S. producer of methanol, our principal interest in blends is as a necessary step toward eventual use of methanol as a direct substitute for gasoline," Jerry McCleskey, director of Du Pont's methanol products division, said Wednesday.

Census bureau to conduct local survey

DALLAS — The U.S. Bureau of the Census will conduct its regular survey on employment and unemployment in Midland during the week of July 16-21, according to John E. Reeder, Jr., Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Dallas.

The survey is conducted for the U.S. Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of approximately 71,000 households throughout the United States. Employment and unemployment statistics based on results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the nation.

For example, in May 1984 the survey indicated that of the 113.8 million men and women in the civilian labor force, 105.3 million were employed. The nation's unemployment rate dropped to 7.5 percent.

Dollar makes early retreat; Gold mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar retreated against most key currencies in early trading today amid some profit-taking from its recent record-breaking surge. Gold prices were mixed.

Dealers said European markets followed a Far East trend on the dollar, but said expectations that U.S. interest rates will remain high underpinned the currency.

High returns on dollar-related investments make the U.S. currency attractive and helped raise it to record highs against the French franc and Italian lira Thursday.

Dealers noted, too, that the markets were pulling back to see whether the Federal Reserve Board's key Open Market Committee decides to tighten credit when it meets next Tuesday.

Figures for U.S. industrial production, retail sales and producer prices in June were scheduled to be announced later today.

Mattel allows investor group to buy 45 percent of shares

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Shareholders of Mattel Inc. Thursday approved a plan by which an investor group will pump $231 million into the ailing toy maker. The plan, which was announced last May, would give the group 45 percent of the voting shares of the Hawthorne, Calif.-based company.

Although the plan was approved by a vote of 12.36 million to 639,891, a small group of shareholders against the plan spent more than two hours at the annual meeting here voicing opposition and criticizing management for a host of other matters from the size of executive bonuses to the company's history of acquisitions and more recent disposals of subsidiaries.

The investor group will get seven spots on the Mattel board as a result of the new financing. The group is led by Warburg, Pincus Capital Partners, an affiliate of E.M. Warburg, Pincus & Co., a New York-based manager of of investment funds.

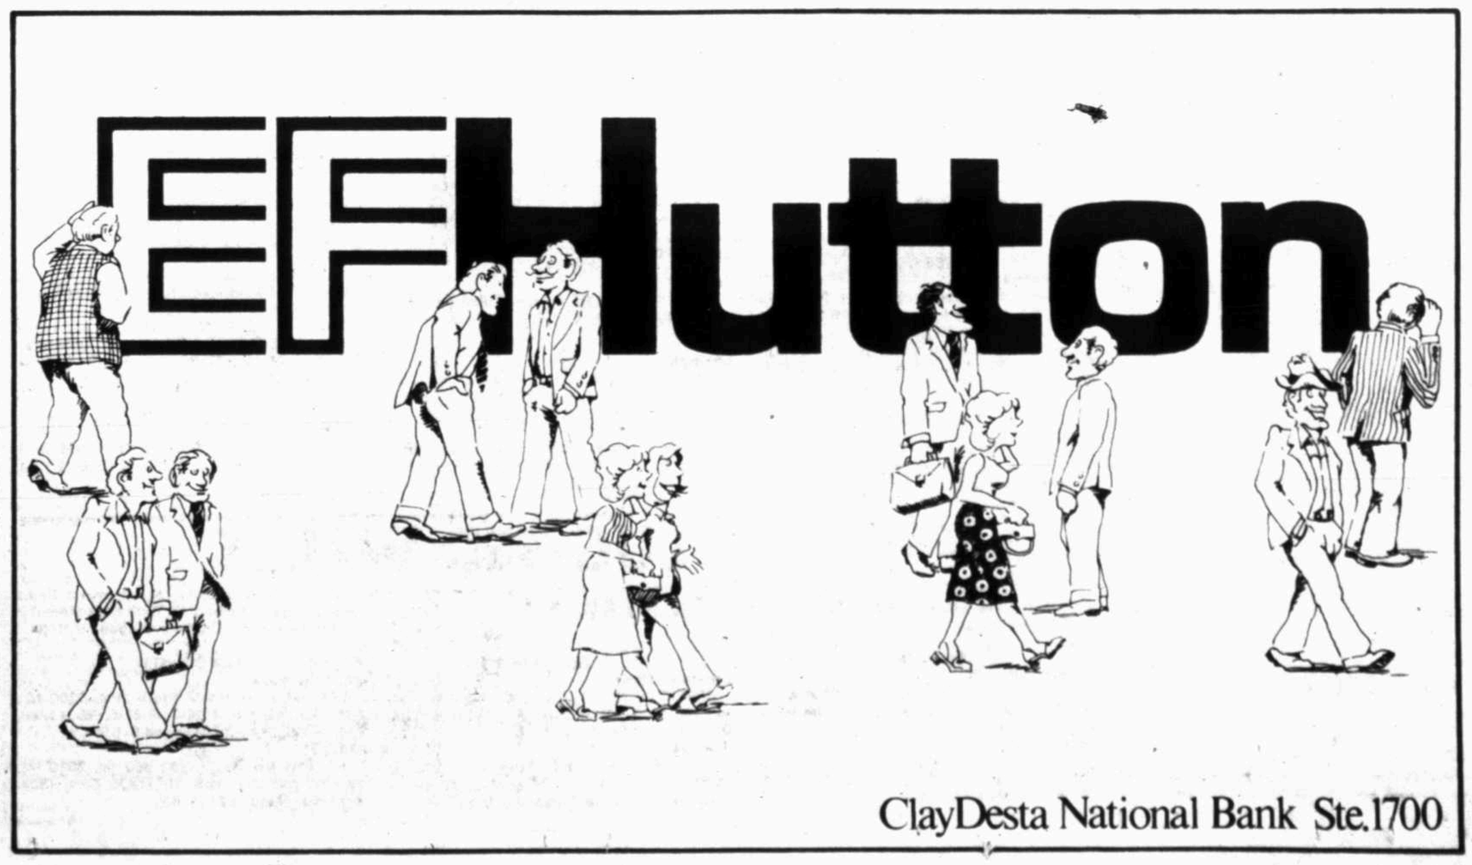

The group also includes Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., a New York investment banking company, and Riordan & Joseph, a Los Angeles-based merchant banker.

The financing agreement allows the company to fully repay its outstanding domestic bank loans of $349 million and restores the company's net worth to a positive position. The restructuring will also allow Mattel to implement a recently negotiated revolving credit agreement extending through Jan. 30, 1987.

Spencer Boise, Mattel vice president, said this year's annual meeting was held in New York because the financing agreement is scheduled to be signed here Friday.

Some shareholders voiced misgivings about a condition of the financing plan that provides that the new group could gain 51 percent control of Mattel if dividends on its newly issued preferred shares are not paid within seven consecutive quarters.

But Arthur Spear, chairman of Mattel, told shareholders that there was little difference in the amount of influence the investment group would exert with 45 percent of the stock instead of 51 percent.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Aminoil executive elected to API board

HOUSTON — J.B. Coffman, president and chief executive officer of Aminoil Inc., has been elected a member of the American Petroleum Institute's Board of Directors.

The American Petroleum Institute (API) is a petroleum industry association representing more than 200 company members and 6,000 individual members.

Efforts to increase energy supplies limited

WASHINGTON — Efforts to increase U.S. domestic energy supplies are being limited by congressional action at a time when we can least afford it, according to the National Ocean Industries Association (NOIA).

M.E. "Bo" Eagles, vice president, marketing of Cameron Iron Works Inc., who heads NOIA's efforts in Texas to promote understanding of the offshore issue, expressed concern that congress is again acting to continue moratoria on vast tracts of offshore areas having significant potential for new oil and gas discoveries.

Eagles's statement came after the House Appropriations Committee's voted to withhold millions of acres from offshore development. The bill now goes to the full House of Representatives.

Texas oil, gas discoveries down in June

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas operators reported 117 gas and 68 oil discoveries in June, according to Railroad Commission chairman Mack Wallace. In May, a total of 133 gas and 64 oil discoveries were filed with the Commission. To date, 701 gas and 353 oil discoveries have been reported. Through the same period of 1983, operators had filed 669 gas and 430 oil discoveries.

New drilling applications down in June

AUSTIN — A total of 3,700 drilling applications were processed by the Railroad Commission in June, according to RRC chairman Mack Wallace. In May, the Commission processed 4,367 applications, and 3,629 were handled in June 1983. The June 1984 total included 2,842 applications for permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 82 applications to deepen existing holes, 305 applications to plugback existing holes, and 53 applications for service (non-producing) wells. Operators also filed 418 amended drilling applications.

Presidio stock bought in private acquisition

DENVER — Presidio Oil Co. has reported that Mary L. Smith of Philadelphia, Penn. had acquired 24,558 shares of the company's common stock from Howard G. Hoegsted and 53,405 shares from Ross Miller as part of a previously-announced acquisition of 467,406 shares of the stock. No price was disclosed.

The company also announced that Hoegsted had resigned as a director of the company. A successor to Hoegsted, whose term was to expire at the 1984 annual shareholders' meeting, has not been named. Miller, whose term expires in 1985, will remain a director.

Pipeline needs much work to ensure safety

DALLAS — The U.S. energy pipeline network will require the infusion of billions of dollars through the rest of the 1980s and 1990s if it is to maintain its current enviable safety and efficiency level, says a special report in the July issue of Pipeline & Gas Journal.

U.S. energy pipelines will spend almost $10 billion in the next 12 months, the magazine predicts, and 50 percent of that is expected to be spent on the 3Rs of a new era in energy transporation — repair, renovate, and replace.

Gulf rigs stable

HOUSTON (AP) — Rig activity in the Gulf of Mexico has remained stable for four weeks, with only a slight increase, a petroleum industry research firm reported.

The gulf gained one active rig last week, bringing the number of active rigs up to 84 percent from 83.7 percent the previous week, according to Offshore Data Service, a Houston-based oil research company.

The gulf had 206 active rigs last week, one more than a week earlier.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were higher at midday dealings today.

The average price for strict low mid- dling 1 & 1-16 inch spot cotton advanced 16 points to 70.19 cents a pound Thursday for the eight markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Maid services now booming businesses in China

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PEKING — Like their counterparts in the West, many Chinese working women hold down jobs and do the housework as well.

Many find the burden oppressive. But nearly 35 years after the Communist Party "liberated" the women of China, help is in sight — at least for those women who can afford to pay the price. Today, it is once again politically acceptable to have a maid.

"I don't know what I would do without one," said Dong Liya, 31, a computer technician. "The ayi ("auntie," or maid) makes life a lot easier.

Dong and her husband, Chen Ying, a tour guide for Japanese visitors with the China's travel service, hired a live-in maid in March. Their joint income of $75 a month puts them in a better-than-average financial position, but even by Chinese standards they are not rich. Still, they can afford the $12 a month they must pay their 18-year-old live-in maid, who sleeps in a hallway of their tiny apartment and cares for their 5-month-old daughter, Yuanyuan.

Not all couples are so well-off. But enough are to get the new maid service industry off to a booming start. Chen and Dong got their maid from the Chaoyang Household Service Co., which announced its establishment on Feb. 19 in the Peking Evening News, a popular newspaper.

LAT Photo

Live-in maid Jia Xiahua, center, holds Yuanyuan, daughter of computer technician Dong Liya, left, and travel guide Chen Ying, residents of communist Peking.

CHAOYANG WAS the first company in the Chinese capital to provide household help to the masses — or rather to the affluent among them, according to Li Gangzhong, chairman of the Peking Municipal Women's Federation, which sponsors the official maid services.

Since the Chaoyang's start, the service has spread and there are now 35 offices throughout Peking offering maids. There are officially sponsored, openly advertised maid services now in other large cities as well.

On an informal basis, well-heeled urban residents, particularly government functionaries, have been hiring maids from the countryside for several years. In Peking, for example, before the Chaoyang company was started, a citywide survey showed that there were already 30,000 maids, two-thirds of them women from outlying counties or provinces.

Because movement into Peking is restricted by the government, which wants to limit the city's population, most of these maids came to the city unofficially, and have been working without contracts or local identity papers. The largest single group is from one county in Anhui Province, one of the poorest areas of China.

By contrast, most of the 1,110 maids placed by the officially sponsored Peking service companies over the last three months come from the city's rural suburbs, according to Ms. Li of the Women's Federation. These districts are poor but are developing fast under China's economic reforms, and the young maids are "surplus labor" generated by increased productivity, she said.

Employing them as maids, she added, "helps them and it helps the overworked women in the city. It's a case of mutual benefit and it advances the development of our modernization."

This is a radically different attitude than Chinese leaders took in the 1960s and 1970s during the ideological storm of the Cultural Revolution. In those days, it was considered "reactionary" to have a maid or any kind of servant. Some said the practice was a "feudal" remnant of the centuries-old hierarchical society that the communist "liberation" overthrew. Or, alternatively, some saw it as a form of "bourgeois" exploitation spread through contact with Western imperialists.

BEFORE THE Cultural Revolution, maids were permitted in China's socialist society for people with high status. Even during the Cultural Revolution there were maids serving in foreign embassies and in the homes of China's top leaders. For other Chinese, even officials with substantial but not top-ranking positions, having a maid was asking for serious political trouble.

That began to change when Deng Xiaoping and his supporters consolidated power in 1979 and 1980 and started to institute flexible economic reforms. Entrepreneurs received a cautious welcome. People were encouraged to improve the physical and cultural quality of their lives.

With incomes rising, many people complained that they had no time for anything but work and household chores. These include such tasks as lining up daily to buy food (because refrigerators are rare and food supplies are tight) and washing clothes by hand (because washing machines are just starting to be popularly available).

Women have had to do most of this work, according to Chinese surveys, which show that working women have about four hours of household chores daily, about double those of men.

In theory, men and women in China have equal rights and opportunities. "Women hold up half of the sky," Chairman Mao Tse-tung said. The Chinese revolution, he said, guaranteed the rightful place of women in society.

BUT IN REALITY, Chinese authorities admit today, women were not given equal opportunity in many areas of employment. Their legal rights have frequently been neglected, some have been abused, and most have little leisure time. Women's rights have received increasing emphasis in recent months under the Deng regime.

Meanwhile, China's unemployment problem — officially known as its "waiting for employment" problem, since the party holds that there is no unemployment under socialism — remains serious. Under party guidelines, thousands of jobs have been created for youths who can't find work.

The leadership's desire to free up leisure time, and employ idle youths, combined with a renewed recognition that women in China have not been fully liberated, led to the new maid service companies, Li said. In Peking alone, she said, the companies have a waiting list of 1,700 people seeking maids — and they only started publicizing their services a few months ago.

"The supply of maids cannot meet our needs now," she said.

Wildlife sanctuary proves popular

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark. (AP) — It could have ended up as a stretch of neglected flood plain, but 186 acres of wetlands and forests flanking Lake Dardanelle have grown into one of the most popular recreation spots in town.

It's the Bona Dea Trails and Sanctuary, a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers project that has spanned 10 years and still is not complete.

Recently, the trails and sanctuary were added to the National Recreation Trails System. It has been a big hit with locals, as well as tourists, said park ranger Greg Robus, who works out of the Corps' Lake Dardanelle office.

"It's getting to be pretty well-known — it's one of the busiest parks as far as visitation at Lake Dardanelle goes," he said.

Joggers and walkers travel Bona Dea's 5.6 miles of trails that wind through woodland and grassland, the home of beavers, swamp rabbits, flying squirrels, cottontail rabbits and other mammals. During the course of a year, birdwatchers can gaze at up to 200 species of birds in the sanctuary, including herons, ducks, geese and songbirds.

Robus said Bona Dea had started about 10 years ago when Russellville residents asked the Corps to build a trail so they would not have to walk along the dike that separates the park from Lake Dardanelle on Arkansas Highway 326.

The Bona Dea trails and sanctuary are most crowded early in the morning and in the evening, Robus said.

Equestrian studies popular

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — Classrooms in the biggest part of Findlay College tend to be dusty and smell like horses, but the 70 students in an equestrian studies program couldn't imagine it any other way.

The college has offered an equestrian studies program since 1975. It recently bought a 70-acre farm nearby which had hosted the program since the beginning.

"Now that we actually own the property, a lot of people associated with the college feel more comfortable coming out here," said Jo Gellert, an administrative assistant who doubles as barn manager, tractor driver and counselor.

Mrs. Gellert's husband directs the equestrian studies program, one of about 15 nationwide that offers a degree program.

"We've got one of the largest indoor training arenas around ... but when you get 30 kids all going in different directions at once, you wish it was bigger," she said.

Mrs. Gellert said equestrian studies was no snap course.

"We're here to produce people for the horse industry," she said. "It's not a place for someone to come to learn to ride. They must have some sort of horse background."

A year in the program costs about $10,000, including room and board.

"It's not an easy program. You have got to be dedicated," she said. "A dropout rate of 10 percent in the first year is not unusual."

Women outnumber men in the program about 10 to one, though equestrian studies students usually stick together because of their common interest, Mrs. Gellert said. "One definition of true love is whether or not your boyfriend will help you clean stalls," she said.

Such maintenance chores are a daily task for students in all stages of the curriculum. Each student has up to five horses under his or her care in a semester.

The college owns some trained horses, but most of the animals are privately owned and brought to the college to be broken. Students in advanced classes are encouraged to bring their own horses in for training.

"You can keep a business going that way. I rode five horses this semester and I've had up to seven before," said Deborah Lynn Ward, a senior from Carrollton, Ohio. Miss Ward said she would probably work for a horse trainer in Minnesota when she graduates.

Jobs are plentiful in the horse industry, Mrs. Gellert said. "The horse industry itself is growing, primarily for recreation. I have more jobs than I have students."

The college has three full-time riding instructors, a barn manager, a blacksmith and a farm manager. There is room for up to 300 horses with about 230 on hand most of the time.

Most animals brought in for training are quarter horses, but other stock breeds and an occasional thoroughbred are enrolled.

"Training horses is extremely time-consuming," Mrs. Gellert said. "They must be ridden every day. Repetition is the only way they learn and most horse owners don't have that kind of time to invest."

Investment is another growing area in the horse industry. Terry Hampel of Mansfield, Ohio, spent two years studying business at the University of Dayton before transferring to the equestrian studies program here.

Oldtime barbershop recalls age of 25¢ haircuts

MONTICELLO, Ark. (AP) — The days of sauntering into a barbershop and asking for a little off the top may have given way to hairstylists armed with blow-dryers, perming lotion, curling irons and hot rollers.

But barbershops with striped pole and the old barbers' chairs still exist. Quietly, they continue to provide a sense of history in small towns across America.

"Barbershops just don't do the business like they used to," Cecil T. Boone said in a recent interview. Boone works Fridays and Saturdays at the 80-year-old Mhoon Barbershop in Monticello. "People used to come to town to get a shine, to shower and to shave."

Raymond Ashcraft, the shop owner, said the shoeshine boy used to work full time. The man who had that job at Mhoon's is now in his 80s and still lives in Monticello.

The shop originally was owned by the late Ernest Mhoon, who ran the shop for 52 years. Ashcraft has had it for the past eight years.

"You see that bare spot on the floor, where the paint is all rubbed away, that is where he used to sit when he wasn't working. It took him several years to rub that spot out. He sat there and read the Bible," Ashcraft said.

Boone, who began barbering in 1924, said Monticello barbers charged 25 cents for a haircut and 15 cents for a shave in those days. A barbershop shave, with steaming hot towels and straight razor, is almost a thing of the past. "We may do one and then it may be months before anyone else wants one," Boone said.

Bill Wheat of Monticello has been coming to Mhoon's since 1974, but he grew up in the area and remembers when there were about 14 barbers in town. He used to trade wood for a haircut and a shave.

"Us country boys would come down and get a shave and a haircut for Sunday," Wheat said. In the barbering heyday, when Arkansas farmers came into town on a Saturday, after being in the field all week, Boone and Ashcraft said the shops used to open at 7:30 a.m. and close at midnight.

"I remember I used to get home about 1 a.m. on Sunday morning," Boone said. "Sometimes you could see boys lined up, up and down the street on Saturday."

In those days, Boone and Ashcraft said, barbershops were hubs of social life, and customers whose turn had come might tell them to take someone else first, because they were in the middle of a conversation.

"People would just drop in, even if they didn't need a haircut, to talk, visit and read the newspaper," Ashcraft said. "... Nowadays I've seen them try to buy a turn in the seat."

Plants require vacation care

Hearst Feature Service

Houseplants don't have to suffer while you're gone on vacation this summer, providing you take a few protective measures before leaving.

Water is the most critical need. Surprisingly, it's less a problem in the summer than winter, when household climates are bone dry because of furnace heat and low humidity outdoors. Your houseplants will not dry out as quickly in the summer.

There are two tricks not to pull on your houseplants:

— Don't move them outdoors right before you leave. While it's often a good practice to take houseplants outside for the summer, they require a close watch for the first few days. To move a plant out now and leave for vacation is dangerous to the plant's health.

— Don't leave the houseplant sitting in a saucer of water. The theory behind this common practice is that the plant will drink when it's thirsty. What happens instead is that standing water blocks off air needed by the roots. Usually, slow but sure death begins. A good practice is to never let a plant stand in a saucer of water longer than 30 minutes. What it needs water-wise it will draw up within that time.

What does work well, summer or winter, is to set your collection of houseplants on a bed of gravel with water added to a level just below the top of the gravel. The plants' tiny hair-like roots will absorb this moisture, and while the soil at the top of the pot may seem dry, there is usually enough moisture at root level.

Another good practice is to move the plant away from the window. The reduced light level for a week or two won't hurt it. It will slow its growth rate and will need less water. Don't do this, though, if the plant — green plants in particular — is growing especially strong at the time. Depriving it of normal light during a critical growing spurt could result in a misshaped plant.

A simple but effective compromise is to partially close the window shades. This reduces the light, but not so much as to interfere with growth.

Another technique is to build a mini-greenhouse with plastic products, such as Saran Wrap or big Ziplock bags. Whole plants can easily be enclosed. Punch several ventilation holes in the plastic wrap before inserting the plant. The plastic helps keep the plant properly moist by reducing the loss of moisture to the air. Use this technique with care, though, if the plant is by a very sunny window. The plastic may keep too much of the sun's heat inside the greenhouse and if adequate ventilation isn't provided, the plant could be damaged.

Another simple solution is to condition the plant to your upcoming absence. Beginning a month before you leave, discontinue any fertilizing and gradually reduce watering. The plant will then be ready for an even more severe reduction while you're gone. Build your watering and fertilizing schedule gradually on your return.

Asking family and neighbors to tend to your houseplants can be dangerous. As well meaning as they are, it's an easy chore for them to forget. They don't know your plants and may not be careful about critical details such as leaving water in the saucer.

Mistakes made in overwatering houseplants are difficult to correct. Plants growing outdoors have a lot of natural air and water circulation to correct over-indulgence. Houseplants don't have that luxury.

Entertaining visitors tricky task

By ERMA BOMBECK

I'm looking at two letters that deserve an answer ... but I can't decide what it should be.

One is from a woman in Illinois who says, "Could you please write something about people who go to visit family or friends for a couple of days and the first thing they do is load you in a car and show you every monument, park and traffic light in the whole city? All we want to do is kick off our shoes and relax and have a nice visit."

The other one is from a woman in California who writes, "Maybe you could get a column out of people you visit who say how glad they are to see you and then go about their business and let you sit and watch television for the next four days. If I wanted to watch TV, I could stay at home. What happened to good old-fashioned hospitality?"

It occurs to me the rules of social grace have always been rather loose where visiting relatives or friends are concerned, so maybe it's time to make some.

— When you hear the hostess on the phone making inquiries as to whether a tongue transplant is covered under Blue Cross/Blue Shield, you know you've hung around the house talking too long.

— When your guests complain of blisters on their knees, maybe you should cancel the afternoon excursions to the Kangaroo Farms.

— When someone tilts you over backwards to vacuum under you, dusts your ankles and fluffs up your cheeks, maybe you should stir around a bit.

— A lot of it is common sense. When a guest times his visit with you in Los Angeles July 28 through Aug. 12, I think you can safely assume he's not there to buy fresh squash at the Farmer's Market

My best advice is communicate! We visited friends a few years ago and said, "Look, all we want to do is to visit with you for the next three days. We want to know about your life, what's been going on, and get caught up on all we've missed."

Fifteen minutes later as we nodded, we said, "Is there a car wash in town to watch? A waterbed sale? An owl sanctuary? An opening of a computer center? Maybe we could pack a lunch!"

Summer romance may be risky

Hearst Feature Service

A sizzling summer love is not such a hot idea if you can't keep it under control.

The self-limiting summer romance tempts both single and married women because it promises an exciting lift out of life's routine "dailies," according to New York and Princeton behavior therapist Dr. Debora Phillips in an interview in Bazaar.

Married women who indulge in summer romance when on a business trip or away from home and husband at a summer cottage intend to return to marriage as usual in September, Dr. Phillips said. Single women also expect hot weather romance to cool off in the fall.

She reported such casual involvements are full of hidden dangers, even though they appear to be rejuvenating, revitalizing to self-esteem and just plain erotic fun.

The danger is what begins as temporary can linger on and intensify if the players can't keep their deeper emotions in check. One risk is a married woman — or a single woman dallying with a married man — simply will be unable to give up the sexual and emotional "high" of her summer fling. She may try to prolong the affair or even contemplate permanent separation from her husband or long-term lover.

Dr. Phillips added when a husband finds out his wife has strayed, the results are usually explosive. Even the most forgiving man can have trouble overcoming the jealousy and sense of betrayal he feels.

Another problem can arise when a woman is ready to end her fling with the coming of fall but her partner is not. She can wind up on a troubling guilt trip.

Careful packing helps short trips

Hearst Feature Service

You've finally managed to schedule a summer weekend getaway. Tonight, you'll toss a couple of things in an overnight bag and head for the beach.

And Saturday morning, you'll realize you forgot your toothbrush and didn't bring a sweater.

"Many people make packing lists for a long trip, but don't think about what to bring for a weekend until the last minute," says Paige Miller of the Samsonite Travel Advisory Service.

"As a result, they either forget to bring vital necessities or carry enough luggage and clothing to last a week."

To avoid excess baggage, Miller suggests you start by visualizing yourself in the clothes you'll be wearing for all your activities.

"If you need special sportswear, such as tennis clothes, you can maximize their uses," she says.

For example, tennis shoes and shorts can be worn as part of casual outfits, eliminating the need to pack a second pair of sneakers or shorts.

IF YOU ARE planning a casual weekend, you probably won't need much else except for a pair of jeans, a sweater, a few T-shirts and a bathing suit.

"Sneakers are probably the most comfortable shoes for traveling and an obviously necessity if sports activities are in the agenda," says Miller.

Women also should bring one pair of low-heeled shoes or sandals. "They can be worn both with casual outfits and dressier clothes in the evening."

If your plans call for dressy attire, Miller suggests bringing one lightweight polyester sundress.

"It won't wrinkle like cotton or linen, and can be worn daytime or evening. And it takes less packing space than a skirt and blouse."

For men, she suggests substituting a pair of sports slacks instead of jeans.

"The only extra item to pack is a blazer. Worn with a polo shirt, this is usually suitable attire during the summer for dressier occasions. Any of these can be easily packed — wrinkle-free — in a carry-on size bag."

However, she adds, if you will need something very formal, you should consider using a garment bag instead of trying to pack evening attire into a carry-on.

"DON'T FORGET, IF you leave directly from the office, you already may be wearing a suit or dress and won't need to pack anything dressy," she says.

There are some items you need to pack, no matter what you are planning: Toiletries or a shaving kit and a small first-aid kit with aspirin, band-aids, something for an upset stomach and any medication you take regularly.

These items will fit in a carry-on bag or can be stashed in the pocket of a garment bag.

Once you've decided what to bring, choose the smallest piece of luggage you have that will accommodate these items.

One carry-on should be large enough, unless you are bringing extra sports equipment.

"Then, a carry-on or weekend bag, in combination with a shoulder bag, should provide adequate packing space. Women should carry a coordinating shoulder tote instead of a purse. You can fit everything you normally keep in your purse, plus extra items for the trip."

HOW DO YOU make it all fit? Miller suggests the following packing method:

— Start to pack by putting shoes and heavy items (such as a hairdryer or toiletry kit) at the bottom side of the bag. Then build up a "platform" base from rolled T-shirts, pajamas, etc. This way, all clothing next packed will lie flat.

— Then pack dress or pants and shorts: Place the collar or waistband at the side edges, alternating from side to side.

— Button blouses, shirts or blazers completely and place them front down. Lay the collars flush with the bottom side of the case, letting excess length and sleeves hang out.

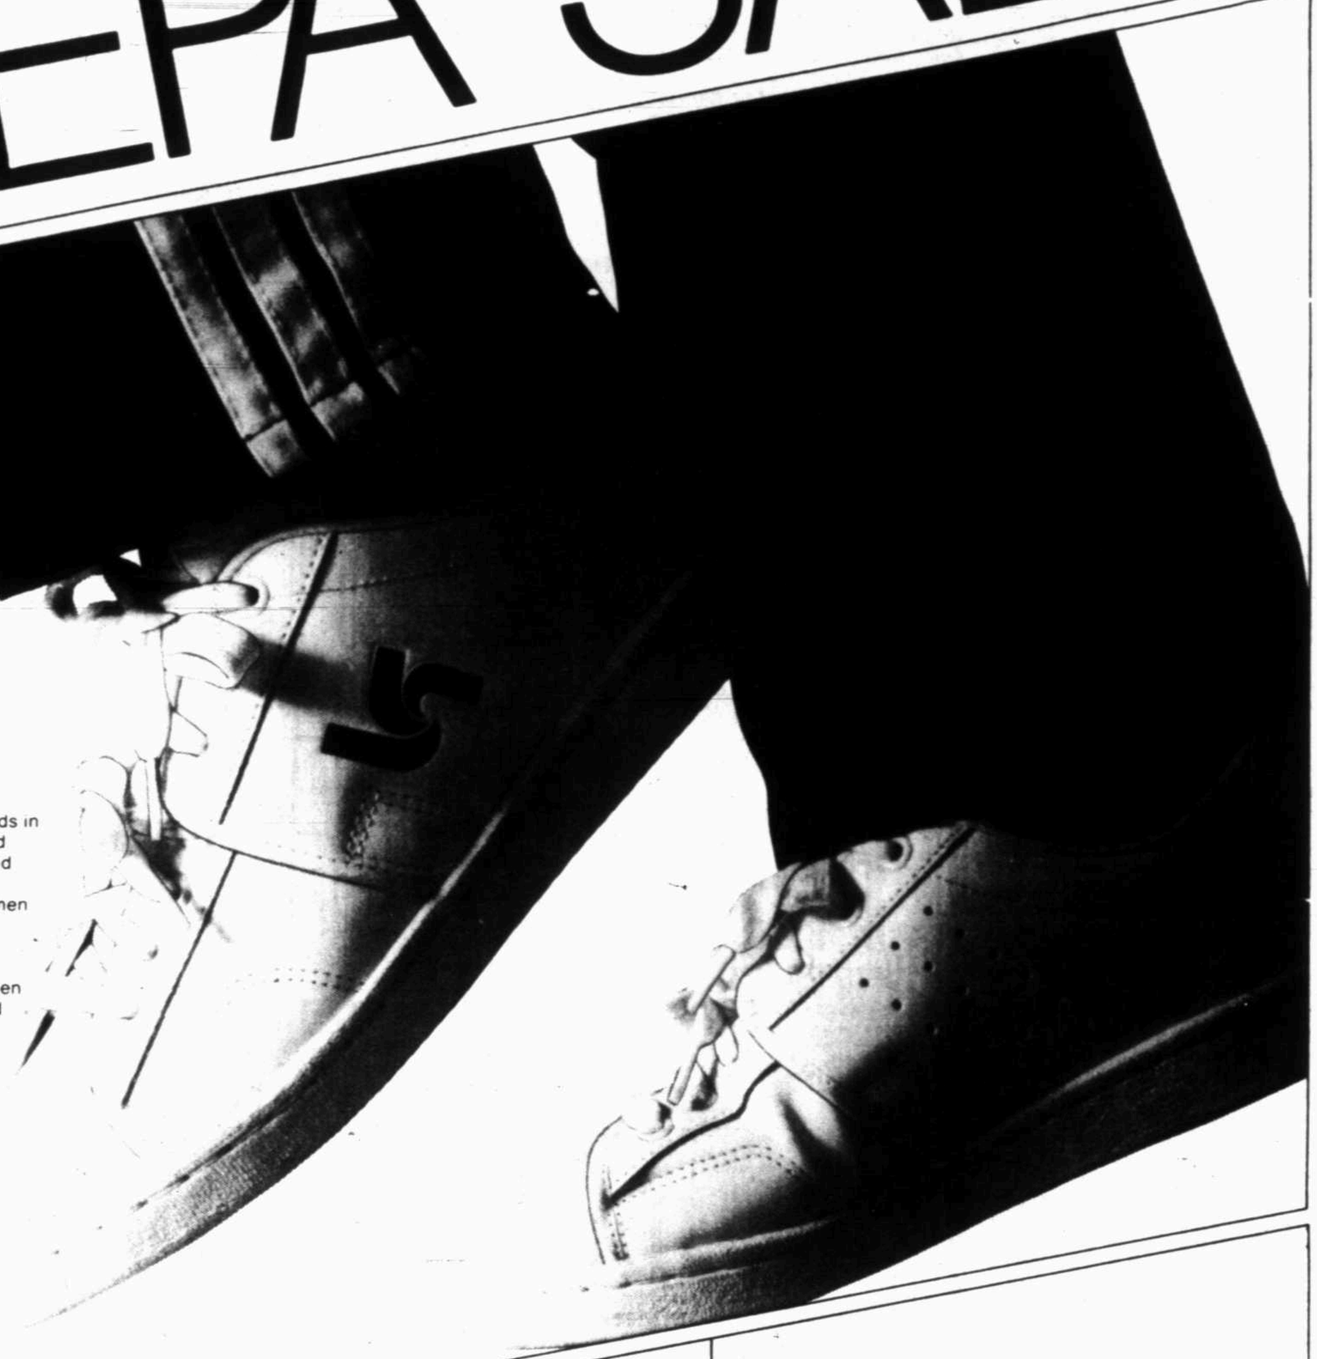

— Roll the remaining undergarments, socks, etc., and place these on top of the clothes along the sides to cushion folds.

— "Interfold" dress, shirts and/or slacks by folding extensions left hanging over the sides. Alternate from side to side, smoothing wrinkles as you go. Pack firmly, but don't overpack to avoid strain on luggage and excess wrinkling.

Miller says a summer weekend trip can be a relaxing diversion from a hectic schedule, but only if you are well prepared.

"The philosophy of the well-dressed traveler is 'less is more,' " she says.

DEAR ABBY

Unethical therapist hurts, not helps

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I want to warn women against psychotherapists who have sex with their patients. It happened to me, and a year later, I am still devastated.

Two years ago I went into psychoanalysis because of some recent personal tragedies that I couldn't handle. After many sessions, my therapist started to touch me — beginning with friendly pats and affectionate hugs. I didn't see what was coming. I was "in transference" at the time — projecting onto him the love that other important men in my life had rejected.

Then an entire session of "therapy" was spent rolling around on the floor of his office locked in embraces. (He billed me for that hour!)

I was in a state of emotional shock, terminated the analysis immediately, and sought help from an ethical analyst, the local rape and assault committee and a lawyer. I also filed a malpractice suit for these reasons:

When a woman is in therapy she's like a child — emotionally at the mercy of her therapist. (I read that 5 percent of psychiatrists ADMIT to having sex with their patients — which means there are probably more, but they won't admit it.)

The American Psychiatric Society has taken the official position that once sex occurs with a patient, the therapy is destroyed. Few women take action against their therapists because they feel so ashamed.

So women, be warned. If a mental health practitioner starts to hug you, kiss you or go further, run like hell. He is sicker than you are!

I'm signing my real name and address, but please don't use it. — ANONYMOUSLY GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: All licensed therapists (psychiatrists, psychologists and counselors) are accountable for their professional conduct.

Patients should call their local mental health association to learn where to address their complaints. And they should do so promptly.

DEAR ABBY: How would you define "bedroom eyes"? — JOHN, ANNETTE, JULIE AND KRIS

DEAR JOHN, ANNETTE, ETC.: Bedroom eyes are the kind of eyes that suggest mattress acrobatics. (P.S. "Bedroom eyes" often lie in the eye of the beholder. And sometimes they just lie.)

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Pets can present travel problems

The Associated Press

Dogs and cats are a major part of many American families and when vacation time comes, they can present a special set of problems.

Leaving the pet with a friend or carefully choosing a clean, well-run boarding kennel may be the answer.

But many people want to take the family dog or cat along on vacation instead.

If so, a veterinary examination is important to make sure the animal is in good condition and to obtain any needed innoculations and necessary health documents.

Any dog or cat crossing a state line should have a valid health certificate and a certificate of rabies innoculation.

To enter Canada, dogs need a rabies certificate. Cats are permitted to enter if healthy.

Mexico requires advance preparation. A health certificate stating the number of the rabies vaccine, proof of distemper vaccination and veterinarian's statement that the pet is free from disease must be sent to the Mexican consulate with a small fee. Once this has been certified and returned the trip may proceed.

In the United States, travel by pets is unrestricted — with proper certificates — except for Hawaii, where a 120-day quarantine is enforced for all dogs and cats.

Mixup blamed for hijacking report

ATLANTA (AP) — The pilot of an air-taxi service, suspicious of two passengers who carried a large sum of cash and passed notes to each other, triggered a hijacking alert which turned out to be an apparent misunderstanding, authorities said.

Police and federal agents were called to Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport to investigate when the pilot radioed a hijack code to controllers.

The FBI dismissed the incident as a misunderstanding after questioning the passengers for more than an hour.

"The FBI has bowed out of the investigation," FBI spokesman Dick Berry said. "The pilot had conversations with air controllers that indicated there might be trouble, but no federal crime has been committed and no charges have been filed."

The Federal Aviation Administration was continuing its investigation.

The pilot, Kenneth Shirrell, 48, of St. Louis, said he felt threatened because his passengers paid $1,215 cash for their flight from St. Louis to Atlanta aboard the twin-engine Beechcraft Baron, and because they could have flown a commercial airline for less than half his fare.

He added that the two men, one of whom claimed to be a pilot, wrote notes to each other and asked him questions about his aircraft during the flight.

"I got the idea they were planning to take the plane away from me," Shirrell said. "They were writing notes. I thought they were writing a note to me. I assumed they were going to hand me a note telling me that they were going to take over the plane."

The two men, who were not identified, were released after questioning by officials of the FBI, the FAA, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration and the Atlanta Police Bureau.

Police spokesman Mike Knapp said the interest of federal drug agents was piqued because the men reportedly were carrying close to $200,000.

U.S., Cuba conference begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban negotiators sat down with U.S. officials Thursday to begin talks on immigration issues, including the return of 1,000 undesirable refugees who arrived in this country in the 1980 Mariel boatlift, the Washington Post reported.

U.S. officials said the secret talks, the first between the United States and Cuba since President Reagan took office, were being held at an undisclosed location in New York, the Post reported in Friday editions.

State Department spokesman Joe Reap and White House spokesman Kim Hoggard said Thursday night there would be no comment on the report. Reap said the subject came up at the department's daily press briefing Thursday and that reporters were told the administration hoped the talks would begin soon.

The four-member Cuban delegation was headed by Deputy Foreign Minister Ricardo Alarcon de Quesada, the ministry's chief expert on the United States, and Olga Miranda, its legal adviser, the Post quoted U.S. officials as saying.

U.S. officials refused to give the names of American negotiators at the talks, the report said.

The report said the United States was understood to be seeking to limit the negotiations to repatriation of criminals and mentally ill Cubans who arrived in the boatlift.

nation in brief

Identification tentative

DETROIT (AP) — A badly decomposed body found in an abandoned house was believed to be that of a woman allegedly kidnapped by fugitives Alton Coleman and Debra Brown, say authorities who were working to positively identify the victim.

The body was tentatively identified as Donna Williams, 25, of Gary, Ind., Wayne County Medical Examiner Dr. Werner Spitz said Thursday. He said he hoped the identification could be completed today.

Spitz said he had asked Gary police to obtain fingerprints from Ms. Williams' home and asked her dentist to provide dental records.

Bus, gravel truck collide

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A gravel truck and a bus carrying teen-age missionaries collided head-on with a sound "like dynamite going off," killing both drivers and one passenger and injuring about 30 other people, officials and a witness said.

A 13-year-old boy was critically injured in the crash Thursday eight miles north of Flagstaff. Another 13-year-old boy was listed in serious condition.

Bongo Brake, co-owner of the Silver Saddle Trading Post near the accident scene, said he heard the crash and grabbed a first-aid kit before running to help.

Train hits pickup truck

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — A freight train slammed into a pickup truck at a railroad crossing, killing the truck's 26-year-old driver, the Highway Patrol said.

Robert Earl Dawkins of Hamlet was killed around 5:45 p.m. Thursday as the Seaboard System train, traveling at about 40 mph, dragged the truck about a quarter of a mile, Trooper R.P. Norton said.

Dawkins was dead on arrival at Richmond County Memorial Hospital, said administrator Jim Iseman.

Phony degrees probed

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven people, including four resident hospital physicians, have been charged with buying phony Caribbean medical degrees for between $5,000 and $20,000 in a probe that could generate 60 more indictments, authorities said.

The seven indictments handed up Thursday stemmed from the arrest and conviction in Virginia of Pedro de Masonis, who collected some $1.5 million from people across the country by selling phony degrees from CETEC University in the Dominican Republic, authorities said.

Six defendants were taken into custody Thursday, pleaded innocent and were released pending an Aug. 16 court appearance. The seventh remained at large.

Toxic fumes injure eight

WENTZVILLE, Mo. (AP) — A chemical believed to be nitric acid spilled from a burning truck on Interstate 70, spreading fumes that injured eight people and prompted a brief evacuation by hundreds of people, including more than 100 nursing home residents.

A spokeswoman at St. Peter's Hospital said two firefighters, one police officer and a nursing home resident were in stable condition today after being overcome by the fumes Thursday night.

Many seek prison post

EDDYVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Steelworkers, grocery clerks, teachers, coal miners and police officers are among 150 people who have applied for the job of executioner at the state penitentiary, officials say.

But Warden Gene Scroggy warned those who may have thought they were applying for a full-time job that the position would not be permanent. Three people will be selected and will work under personal service contracts only when needed, he said.

The applications, many from the unemployed, came from as far away as Florida.

Prison officials have already begun the selection process and will narrow the field to 10 people, who will be asked to fill out a yet-to-be-completed questionnaire designed with the assistance of a psychologist, Scroggy said.

Hot line to be upgraded

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet negotiators are reported near agreement on plans to modernize and upgrade the crisis "hot line" between Moscow and Washington.

"I'm reasonably certain agreement is near," said one State Department official, who gave his assessment on condition he not be identified by name.

Priest says refugees flee transfer

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Troops have surrounded 5,000 fleeing Guatemalan refugees in the southern Mexico jungle, cutting off supplies of food and medicine, a priest reported Thursday. He said the refugees were trying to avoid transfer to new government camps.

A government spokesman denied that and other charges made by the Roman Catholic priest, who requested anonymity for fear of reprisals.

The priest told a news conference that on July 5, Mexican soldiers tortured three refugees in front of witnesses in the frontier camp known as Ixcan, took the men away in a small plane and returned their bodies the next day.

He said the incidents were part of a series of official abuses that began after refugees from Ixcan, Puerto Rico and other camps fled across the Lacantun River into a jungle area on June 27.

"They don't want to go to Campeche," a state on the Yucatan peninsula where the government has begun moving 46,000 Guatemalan refugees, the priest said. The refugees crossed the Mexico-Guatemala border over the last 2½ years, fleeing violence between their government and leftist guerrillas.

On July 4, soldiers set fire to and "totally destroyed" the camp of Puerto Rico in Chiapas state only a few miles from the Guatemalan border, the priest said.

Interior Ministry spokesman Mauro Jimenez said the charges were false.

"The Mexican army troops were mobilized in that zone to protect the refugees and help out in their transfer to an area where they can more easily receive food, medicine and educational services," Jimenez said.

Mexico expels missionaries

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In the first six months of this year, the Mexican government has expelled from the country 1,346 foreigners for teaching religion, the government news service Notimex reported.

Notimex said the foreigners were violating a section of the constitution which says only Mexicans by birth can "practice the ministry of any sect."

The news agency said 52 foreigners were kicked out of the Sierra Tarahumara mountains in the northern border state of Chihuahua for trying to spread religion among Indians there.

There was no further information on the others who were expelled.

POSTAL EXAM WORKSHOP

Distribution Clerk Machine (DCM)

The Midland Post Office has indicated it will be accepting applications for the DCM exam soon (possibly this month). The dates for taking applications have not been set at this time, but those dates should appear in the near future on Post Office bulletin boards and in local newspapers. The DCM position currently pays $10.56 per hour plus excellent benefits. People are hired for these positions based on their exam score, i.e. the people with the highest scores are hired.

WORKSHOP BY POSTAL EXAM PREPARATION CENTER

Many cities often take applications and begin testing the very next week. This system does not allow adequate time for proper preparation. In order to make sure that you have enough time to properly prepare, this workshop is being offered before application dates have been set. This workshop was designed by the foremost authority in America on gaining postal employment. Stephen McNally is a former postal employee and a Ph. D. candidate in Education. He scored 100% on the first DCM exam. One of Mr. McNally's students recently made this statement: "This workshop was well worth my time and money. Using Mr. McNally's techniques allowed me to score 100% on my first 3 Clerk-Carrier exams!" K. A. Summerfield, IL. The DCM exam & C/C exams are very similar.

GUARANTEED SCORE OF 95% or HIGHER

★ The Exclusive P.E.P.C Double Guarantee: 1. At the end of the workshop, if you do not think these methods will significantly increase your score, your money will be refunded. 2. You will enter a written contract guaranteeing you a score of 95% or higher or your money will be refunded in full.
