Plane crash kills 5

MAYAGUEZ, Puerto Rico — An American Eagle commuter plane crashed while coming in for a landing Sunday, killing all five people aboard, police said. The twin-turbo prop CASA 212 crashed and burst into flames in a swampy area about 300 feet from the runway of Eugenio Maria de Hostos Airport in Mayaguez, about 85 miles southwest of San Juan, police and airport officials said.

Rio studies cash

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Delegates at the Earth Summit on Sunday turned to one of the trickiest issues at the global gathering: who will pay for cleaning up the environment and protecting it. The issue underlies nearly all others at the summit and is partly responsible for the U.S. refusal to sign a treaty to protect animal and plant species. The United States has come under harsh criticism for its stance./3A

Helms' close call

RALEIGH, N.C. — Sen. Jesse Helms, who underwent open heart surgery last week, stopped breathing Sunday and was placed on a respirator. Doctors said he was expected to recover. Helms, 70, a conservative Republican who has served 20 years in the Senate, has been in intensive care since heart valve replacement and four heart bypass grafts performed Wednesday. He stopped breathing because of fluid in his respiratory tract, said Dr. Bertram Coffer, head anesthesiologist at Rex Hospital. An anesthesiologist in the room at the time used a squeeze bag to force air into Helms' lungs for about one minute until he could be put on a respirator, hospital officials said. Coffer said Helms would be taken off the respirator today.

'Country' fan fair

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A horde of 24,000 star-struck fans invades the capital of country music this week for seven days of music, autographs, food and souvenirs — and a chance to shake hands with country's top stars. It's the 21st International Country Music Fan Fair — a weeklong festival of concerts and autograph and photo sessions. Acts performing this year include Garth Brooks, "Achy Breaky Heart" sensation Billy Ray Cyrus, Wynonna Judd, Travis Tritt, Aaron Tippin, the duo Brooks and Dunn, and Ricky Van Shelton.

Sands, shiny sea belie troubled waters in gulf

DESTIN, Fla. — Dewey Destin makes his living from the Gulf of Mexico, but he's worried about its future — and his.

This one-time fishing village in the Florida panhandle, named for one of his ancestors, still has a thriving recreational charter fleet. But Destin is its last commercial fishing boat owner.

Pollution, abuse and overuse of "America's Sea" have reduced the population of many species, including red snapper, king mackerel and redfish, to the point where regulatory agencies have limited or prohibited catches.

L.A.'s Gates threatens to postpone retirement

By Seth Mydans

LOS ANGELES — Playing his last political card, Chief Daryl F. Gates of the Los Angeles Police Department threatened over the weekend to delay his retirement this month, pointing to his critics and saying: "Vengeance is taking place. Vengeance."

His remarks caused handwringing at City Hall, which has found itself unable to deal with Gates' caprices since its failure to remove him after the videotaped police beating of Rodney G. King 15 months ago.

Critics: U.S. view delays nuclear cuts

■ At issue is whether to obtain reductions in Moscow's arsenal now or to risk no agreement at all.

By Thomas L Friedman
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In the last few months, the United States and Russia have quietly narrowed their differences over how to make additional cuts in their nuclear arsenals, well beyond those agreed to in the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty.

But the inability to close the remaining gap has led critics of the Bush administration to say the United States is missing an opportunity to obtain radical reductions in the Russian arsenal because the administration is too wedded to Cold-War strategic theories.

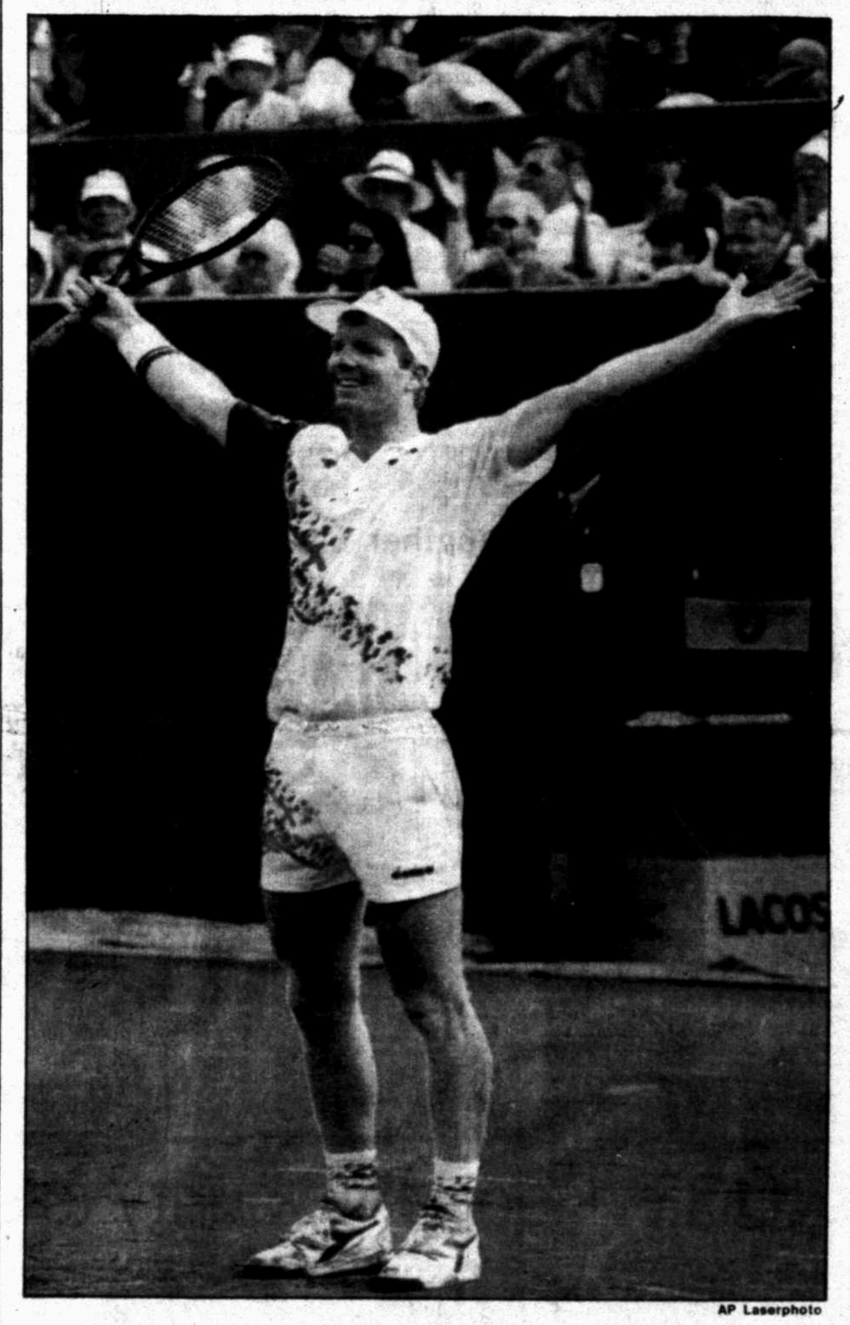

The administration's negotiating position has been to put a higher priority on getting rid of Russia's remaining long-range nuclear missiles, which would be most effective in a surprise attack against the United States, rather than on getting Russia to get rid of thousands more warheads generally.

In recent weeks, Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev, who will be meeting on this issue today with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, has signaled a willingness to cut the roughly 8,500 warheads allowed by the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty to about 4,700 warheads — as Washington has proposed.

But the deal is being held up in large part because the United States has insisted that those cuts include all of Russia's most powerful SS-18 multiple-warhead intercontinental ballistic missiles, which the Russian military has been resisting.

At the core of the issue is a simple question: what is more important? Locking in Moscow to an agreement to get rid of thousands of additional warheads? Or

Book reports five suicide attempts by Princess Di

LONDON (NYT) — In one of the most serious blows to the prestige of the British royal family in years, the marriage of the heir to the throne, Prince Charles, and his wife, Diana, the Princess of Wales, was portrayed credibly this weekend as being on the rocks.

A new book, serialized on Sunday in The Sunday Times for a reported $410,000, says the princess tried five times to commit suicide after her marriage to Charles in 1981 because he was cold, aloof, and indifferent to all her emotional needs.

The marriage had been celebrated as the "romance of the century." But by 1982, says Andrew Morton, the author of "Diana: Her True Story," it had become so empty that the White, 41, was charged with killing Jack Wilson, a 55-year-old opthalmologist who was found beaten in the head with a baseball bat and stabbed twice in the stomach at his home on May 22.

Reagan County's political weather vane

BIG LAKE — Folks out here take special pride in their big lake, even though it's been dry since the mid-1970s.

They have even erected a sign in the bed of the old buffalo wallow that asks, "Who pulled the plug on the big lake?"

The 4,000 residents of Reagan County — 50 miles southeast of Midland-Odessa — also boast about living in "the birthplace of the fabulous Permian Basin."

But they were unaware of the county's other distinction: being Texas' weather vane when it comes to presidential politics.

Reagan County has voted for the White House winner 86 percent of the time, giving it the best record of any of the state's 254 counties.

In 1992, it's still up for grabs.

President Bush appears to hold a slim — though unenthusiastic — lead over probable independent candidate Ross Perot in this oil-dependent West Texas county.

HOUSTON — Spurs Tavern, a local beer joint or "ice house," as it is known, is a manly place. The walls are covered with skulls and horns and hides of Texas steers. Confederate flags hang from the ceiling. The pool tables are crowded and Merle Haggard spits out his songs from the juke box. It is proper etiquette to leer at waitresses and drink beer straight from the bottle. And the ladies' room is filled with pictures of John Wayne aiming rifles.

It seems a suitable place to ask the jingoistic question: What will happen when two Texans have a presidential shootout?

WEATHER SUMMARY
Cloudy skies might drop rain

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, a high in the upper 80s and south winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 50 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstormsand a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 61, Sunday's high reached 86 compared to the record high for that date of 106 set in 1964. The record low for that date is 57 set in 1949.

STATE

A large mass of unstable air spawned showers and thunderstorms over much of Texas late Sunday, dumping more rain on already saturated areas.

It was mostly cloudy over most of north Texas Sunday afternoon with winds from the east and southeast at 5-15 mph and temperatures in the 80s and 90s except in some rain-cooled areas.

Storms hovering over the region extended from Childress southeast to just south of Fort worth and farther southeast to near Waco and Centerville.

Thunderstorms triggered a tornado wach that was posted for some areas of the Big Bend mountains in far west Texas. Skies were mostly cloudy in the Panhandle and the eastern south plains while mostly sunny skies prevailed elsewhere.

Temperatures in west Texas ranged from near 70 in the Panhandle to near 90 in the far west. Winds were from the south and southeast at 5-15 mph with some gusts in the northwestern Panhandle.

NATION

Soggy Texas got more heavy rain Sunday. Rainshowers also spread over parts of the Ohio Valley and Plains. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with sunny skies over California and Nevada.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across parts of Texas, which has had weeks of persistent rain, and showers and thunderstorms also were scattered over the central Gulf Coast region.

Heavier rainfall totals for the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 1.05 inches at Kingsville, Texas. Heaviest total for the six hours up to 8 a.m. was 1.38 inches at both Hondo and Kelly Air Force Base at San Antonio.

Showers and a few thunderstorms were scattered along a cold front from Kentucky to the lower Great Lakes during the afternoon.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CUTS: U.S. demands threaten pact, critics say

(From 1A)

risking no agreement by insisting that Russia dismantle the missiles most likely to be used in a first strike against the United States?

The critics of administration policy say, lock Moscow in now. The administration, concerned that even with the Cold War over, the possibility of a nuclear attack cannot be ruled out, has been holding out for what Washington considers a more strategically secure and advantageous deal.

"The administration continues to see only a few trees instead of the forest," said Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., in a statement. Biden, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on European affairs, which oversees arms-control negotiations with Russia, continued:

"We have the opportunity to achieve drastically deep cuts in the Russian arsenal if we are willing to make cuts ourselves. Yet the administration is focused solely on weapons systems where United States cuts would be minimal."

The administration position, he asserted, "appears driven by antiquated Cold-War theories and a desire to achieve unilateral advantage."

"At this moment of opportunity," he said, "trying to push Moscow over the threshold from cooperation to unilateral disarmament is dangerously shortsighted. Our goal should be the deepest possible mutual cuts compatible with nuclear stability."

This debate arises from the following chain of events:

Last September, President Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, then the Soviet president, announced their intention to cut nuclear arsenals below the levels set by the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, which was signed last summer. That treaty brings each side down to roughly 8,500 warheads by 2000.

When the talks on deeper cuts began in earnest last winter, Russia insisted on a reduction to 2,500 warheads each early in the next century.

The Bush administration argued that this was not feasible because it would require too radical a change in the composition of the U.S. nuclear arsenal. Furthermore, it said, Russia did not have the equipment to dismantle that many warheads and dispose of the nuclear material.

Washington proposed instead a reduction to 4,700 warheads each — provided that Russia dispose of all of its most potent land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles that can carry multiple warheads. These form the backbone of Russia's remaining nuclear arsenal.

During the Cold War, these ICBMs were viewed as the most destabilizing weapons. Because one missile can carry up to 10 warheads and thus hit many American targets at once, in any crisis the United States would want to knock out these missiles before Russia could launch them.

GULF: Campaign to trumpet sea's magnitude bait fish, one of the few unrestricted catches.

"When you stop to think that we've only really been majorly polluting the gulf for, what, 40 years, it's really scary that 40 years from now we may have choked it completely to death," Destin said.

The shiny blue-green seas and sparkling sugar-white beaches that make this part of the gulf a tourist attraction belie troubled waters.

The gulf receives waste water from toilets flushed in cities as far away as Chicago and industrial discharges and fertilizers washed off farms and lawns across the eastern two-thirds of the United States.

Scientists say nutrients flowing down the Mississippi River have created a lifeless, oxygen-depleted "dead zone" covering about 3,000 square miles on the gulf bottom off the Louisiana and Texas coasts.

Pollution was blamed for the explosive growth of smelly seaweed that covered miles of Florida beaches, hip deep in some places, last summer. It clogged power plant cooling systems.

California last year ordered restaurants and stores to post signs warning that Gulf Coast oysters may be contaminated. Instead, most businesses just stopped selling them.

Destin's fears have been recognized, although some say belatedly, at the federal level. Congress has passed and President Bush has signed a resolution declaring 1992 as the "Year of the Gulf of Mexico."

The Environmental Protection Agency is boosting the budget of its Gulf of Mexico Program, created three years ago at NASA's Stennis Space Center near Bay St. Louis, Miss., from $1.4 million to about $6 million. The new dollars will be used to complete a series of studies and begin taking steps to clean up and protect the gulf.

Legislation has been introduced in Congress to write the gulf program into federal law and increase its budget to as much as $30 million a year.

"The gulf is 415 times larger ... yet the EPA was spending multimillions of dollars more on Chesapeake Bay," said Rep. Greg Laughlin, D-Texas, co-chairman of the House Sunbelt Caucus' Gulf of Mexico Task Force.

A public relations campaign with the slogan "America's Sea — Keep it Shining" is planned through the year to seek public and political support for gulf programs and the additional money it will take to make them succeed.

BOOK: Heir's marriage portrayed as on the rocks

princess was losing weight from depression and bulimia.

He quotes James Gilbey, a longtime friend of the princess, as saying that her suicide attempts were "messages of complete desperation. Please, please help." Neither Gilbey nor others quoted have denied the remarks attributed to them, a fact that was taken by much of the press here as a sign that the princess might have encouraged them to talk about her problems.

The Buckingham Palace press office on Sunday denied that the princess had cooperated in any way with the author. On his disclosures, it had no comment at all.

Such silence is the usual response by the royal family, rocked already this year by the separation of the Duke and Duchess of York, better known as Prince Andrew and "Fergie," the former Sarah Ferguson, and by the divorce of Princess Anne, Charles's sister.

The Mail on Sunday, trying to scoop The Sunday Times, reported that "Fergie" and the princess had made a private pact to leave their husbands at the same time, but that the princess had decided to put duty ahead of personal preference and stuck with her marriage.

According to Morton, a former tabloid reporter whose book will be published here by Michael O'Mara Books on June 15, the princess first tried to commit suicide by throwing herself down the stairs of Sandringham Palace in January 1982 when she was three months pregnant and suffering not only from morning sickness but from the discovery that another woman, Camilla Parker-Bowles, meant more to Prince Charles than she did.

"Charles accused her of crying wolf and prepared to go riding," Morton wrote. "Standing on top of the wooden staircase she hurled herself to the ground, landing in a heap at the bottom." Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother was among the first to come upon the scene, and was said to be "horrified, physically shaking with the shock of what she had witnessed."

Another time, the princess threw herself against a glass display cabinet at Kensington Palace, the book reports. "On another, she slashed at her wrists with a razor blade. Another time, she cut herself with the serrated edge of a lemon slicer; on yet another occasion, during a heated argument with Charles, she picked up a penknife lying on her dressing table and cut her chest and her thighs. Though she was bleeding, her husband scorned her. Charles thought that she was faking her problems."

The shy woman was terrified by the constant round of public appearances that her new life imposed on her. The crowds loved her more than they loved Charles, further increasing the strain on the marriage, the book says, and driving the princess deeper into depression. But in Buckingham Palace, no one appeared to care.

The royal couple themselves had nothing to say on Sunday. Charles was playing polo in Sussex.

TRADE: Japan accuses partners of being unfair

(From 1A)

ized it as a cathartic exercise — a chance for Japanese bureaucrats to hit back at all the accusations that have been made against Japan, which rang up a world trade surplus of $63.5 billion last year. Japan sold $43.4 billion more in goods to the United States than it bought.

In March, the United States presented its own laundry list of unfair traders, with Japan at the top.

"Tit-for-tat," said Naohiro Amaya, a former top Japanese trade negotiator who now heads a private research center, the Dentsu Institute for Human Studies.

The report accuses the United States of using unfair trading policies in nine out of 10 areas cited in the report, and of frequently abusing international trade rules for its own advantage.

Among the report's charges:

■ "Buy American" laws restrict government purchases to mostly U.S. goods and services and discriminate against Japanese products, the same complaint U.S. trade officials have made about Japanese government contracts.

■ Trade restrictions imposed for reasons of U.S. national security are unfair because the concept of national security is vaguely defined.

■ U.S. requests for voluntary ex-p.. restraints on such products as cars, steel, machine tools and textiles are "particularly aggressive."

■ Unilateral decisions to impose punitive tariffs on Japanese products for alleged dumping — selling below cost to unfairly win market share — violate international trade rules.

"One must wonder why the United States presumes that it alone is qualified to make these judgements," the report says.

GAUGE: Reagan County is state's weather vane in presidential politics would finish a distant third if the election were today.

Reagan County, appropriately, is also the home to many Reagan Democrats — those longtime Democrats who abandoned their party to vote for Ronald Reagan for president in the 1980s.

But that only partially explains why Reagan County has the state's best record in backing national presidential winners.

Local leaders offer a variety of other reasons.

"This community is hard-working, independent business people and we think for ourselves," said Reagan County Judge Frank Sandel.

Noting that 90 percent of the county's tax dollar comes from the oil industry, the judge said, "We're voting, if you please, for survival."

Big Lake Mayor H.F. Ritchie, who divides his time between municipal duties and picking and grinning with his Country Squires band, said, "People just kind of vote a split ticket most of the time here. They pretty much just go by their instincts when they vote."

David Werst, 42, editor of the weekly Big Lake Wildcat, suggested another reason: "We're an oilfield community here. We have people coming and going all the time, so there is not a stagnant group of folks that have one opinion and keep one opinion."

He noted the county's diversity of income and ethnic groups. Nearly half of the county's population is Hispanic.

The county has a Democratic Hispanic sheriff; Sandel is the lone elected Republican official.

It didn't have a Republican primary until four years ago, but GOP candidates have carried the county in six of the last seven presidential elections.

In 21 presidential elections, the Democratic candidate has carried the county 11 times, the GOP contender 10 times. No independent candidate has ever carried Reagan County.

As in most rural counties in Texas, Friday night football with the Reagan County Owls and Little League baseball games are the talk of the town.

The county's unemployment rate is only 5.9 percent, thanks to a rebound in the oil business, which developed locally in 1923 with West Texas' first major discovery of oil 10 miles from town.

Still, Werst declared, "We need some help right now. There are a bunch of people in West Texas who are a paycheck away from disaster or a payroll away from disaster."

The mood of most of the residents here is no different from many other Texans' when it comes to politics and government.

"I need a change. I'm tired of politicians. I'm ready to throw the bums out. It's a protest vote," said Charlie Berlin, an oil-field supervisor who said he intends to vote for Perot, the Dallas billionaire.

The sentiment of disgust and distrust of politics was echoed at Grandma's Kitchen, where the town's richest and poorest eat lunch together, and at the Dairy Queen, where the good ol' boys gather for their afternoon coffee.

"I might not want Ross Perot, but I know I don't want the other two," the president of a local bank exclaimed.

Clinton's scant support in Reagan County comes from a handful of nurses, teachers and the few remaining "yellow dog" Democrats in Big Lake.

BRAWL: Dallas computer puncher, Kennebunkport cowboy to face off plenty of old words are going to be slung around this state and this country before the Dallas computer puncher and the Kennebunkport cowboy are finished.

(From 1A)

Henry Ross Perot is George Herbert Walker Bush's most hellacious nightmare: a real Texan with billions of dollars and a barbed-wire style, swaggering around bragging that he will kick the "sissies" out of Washington and that he does not need to prove his manhood by going to war.

Strategically, it is a disaster for the White House, insuring a race with a rattlesnake bite in a year when Bush had hoped he could play the statesman. Geographically, it is also a disaster, with Perot leading in polls in the state where Bush claims his legal residence.

"The Bush people in Texas are just apoplectic," said John C. White, the Washington lobbyist and former Democratic Party chief who hails from Texas. "We've got a billion-dollar Bubba here to deal with, and no one has figured out how to handle this. A lot of the time in Texas, we confuse money with intelligence. And that gets us in a lot of trouble."

Ann W. Richards, the state's Democratic governor, predicts that it will not be pretty. "They will try to out-tough each other," she said. "You have got to prove your manhood down here whether you're a man or a woman, let me tell you."

Mark White, a former Democratic governor, agrees: "It's going to be these two guys putting knives in their teeth — no quarter, nuclear war. It will make the Alamo seem like a love-in."

It became clear last week that the campaign is going to have all the elements of a Texas barroom brawl after Marilyn Quayle charged that Perot was trying to buy the election, and Perot responded with a line straight out of the Western classic "High Noon:"

"I find it fascinating that grown men are hiding behind their women. If they have anything to say, why don't they step out front and say it themselves? If they want to get in the ring, come on in the ring — we'll have it and get it on."

The Dallas tycoon is clearly trying to paint himself as the true heir to Ronald Reagan's Western myth, an outsider with simple ideas who can rescue Dodge. As he like to say: "It's time to take out the trash and clean out the stable."

An athletic 6-foot-2, the 67-year-old president has the long, lanky form of a Texan, compared with the bantam bearing of the 5-foot-6, 61-year-old Perot.

But when George Bush started his career in Houston politics more than three decades ago, there was a lot of skepticism. He had Eastern money backing his West Texas oil business. He had campaign contributors who were members of the Council of Foreign Relations, which Bush once conceded that some voters thought of as "a One World tool of the Communist-Wall Street internationalist conspiracy." And even his biggest boosters warned him that he would never be mean enough for Texas politics.

Bush learned to hire others to do "the naughty stuff," as he once called it. But, as Sam Kinch Jr., the editor of The Texas Weekly, a political newsletter in Austin, observed: "Perot knows how to go for the jugular himself."

Frederick Meyer, the chairman of the Texas Republican Party, said he believed that Perot's cockiness would lead to the same trouble that cost Clayton Williams the governor's race, after he made sexist jokes around the campfire and snubbed Ms. Richards. "Clay-tie" Williams was the quintessential good ol' boy, putting a statue of John Wayne in the lobby of his Midland bank and misting up whenever he heard the fight song of his alma mater, Texas A&M University.

There has been a lot of talk down here among Republicans that "Jimmy" Baker, the tobacco-chewing, cowboy-boot-wearing secretary of state who started in Houston politics three decades ago with Mr. Bush, should gallop in and save the ranch.

John B. Connolly, the former Democratic governor of Texas who turned Republican to join the Nixon Cabinet, said he had no doubt that Perot would win Texas.

"People feel like Bush paraded as a Texan, ran as a Texan, got elected as a Texan and as soon as he got in there, forsook Texas," he said. "Banks are going under. There's no energy policy. We don't like the debt, the deficit, the scandals, the inaction, the parties or the rhetoric. We don't want any more hale fellow well met types from New England."

George Christian, a former aide to President Johnson who lives in Austin, said he believed Perot's real appeal was not with cowboys, but with computer nerds, "the guys who moved here from Michigan and now wear cowboy boots while they run their computers."

"If you scratch a lot of the New Texans," he said, "they look at Perot as a fellow who puts something into the computer and comes out with an answer. He talks their language."

Earth Summit turns to key issue of money

By Paul Raeburn
Associated Press writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Delegates at the Earth Summit on Sunday turned to one of the trickiest issues at the global gathering: who will pay for cleaning up the environment and protecting it.

The issue underlies nearly all others at the summit and is partly responsible for the U.S. refusal to sign a treaty to protect animal and plant species.

The United States has come under harsh criticism for its stance. Japan and the 12-member European Community have said they would sign the so-called biodiversity convention, a centerpiece of the summit.

President Bush has adamantly opposed the treaty because the administration claims it would hurt U.S. industry. That position was challenged Sunday by U.S. Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., and others.

"Our president is not speaking with one voice for the United States," said Miller, chairman of the House Interior Committee. "The American people have very strong views about cleaning up the environment and putting it on a sustainable basis."

About 10,000 people marched along Rio's famed Copacabana Beach on Sunday.

Some of the marchers — led by former Brazilian soccer star Pele, actress Shirley MacLaine and Australian singer Olivia Newton-John — also protested U.S. positions at the summit.

Bush "has sent a very bad message to the world ... by not wanting to attend the summit to begin with. And we're embarrassed," said Doug Moss of Norwalk, Conn.

At least 116 heads of state, including Bush, are expected in Rio on Friday for two days of talks aimed at making the environment a central concern of the post-Cold War agenda.

After a weekend break, formal summit sessions were to resume today, with attention shifting to money — who will pay for environmental protection and cleanup and who will decide how the money is to be spent.

The summit's chief coordinator, Maurice Strong of Canada, said the cost could top $125 billion a year.

Developing nations say they are willing to protect their resources if the rich nations are willing to pay for it. They also want more aid to help conquer poverty, which they argue is at the root of environmental degradation.

The United States and other industrialized nations, however, are strapped by tight budgets and are unwilling to give up control over what funds they do provide.

William Reilly, the chief U.S. delegate and head of the Environmental Protection Agency, said last week that Bush's offer to contribute $150 million to an international forest protection fund "is all we have in a year of budget problems."

Blame for fouling the environment has focused on the United States, which produces a quarter of the world's carbon dioxide, the main greenhouse gas. It has also been severely criticized for refusing to sign the biodiversity treaty.

Fighting leaves besieged Bosnian capital ablaze

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Using heavy weapons left behind by departing Yugoslav troops, Sarajevo's Muslim-led defenders struck back at Serb gunners Sunday after what state radio called "another night in hell."

Dozens of buildings in the besieged Bosnian capital were ablaze. Firefighters struggled to stop the flames from spreading, but there was little water.

A Bosnian defense official, Dragan Marjanovic, said 5,000 shells had pounded the capital since the Serb-led Yugoslav army vacated its last downtown barracks on Friday.

Shells fired from Serbian hillside positions ringing the city hit about once every five minutes Sunday afternoon. Several rockets also landed, booming as chanting Muslims buried five of their soldiers at the Kovaci heroes' cemetery in the old town.

There were patches of blood on the streets, and the few civilians who ventured out ran from block to block for cover.

Marjanovic said at least 10 civilians died and two dozen were wounded overnight. Sarajevo television put the death toll in the previous 24 hours at up to 30.

Bosnian television also said Serb irregulars killed 22 Muslims in Ljesevo, a village northeast of the capital.

The Belgrade-based news agency Tanjug quoted Serbian sources as saying 71 Muslim and Croat fighters were killed in a pre-dawn battle near Zvornik on Bosnia's Drina River border with Serbia.

None of the casualty reports could be independently verified.

Clashes also were reported in Gorazde to the east of Sarajevo and around Capljina and the Serb stronghold of Trebinje to the south, where troops from neighboring Croatia reportedly have been involved in recent fighting.

An estimated 5,700 people have died in Bosnia and more than 1 million have been driven from their homes since majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29. Serb militants opposed to secession have seized two-thirds of Bosnia's territory with help from the Yugoslav army.

Marjanovic said Yugoslav troops withdrawing from Sarajevo's Marshal Tito barracks Friday left "a number of heavy weapons and tons of other supplies," which allowed the city's Muslim defenders to bolster their artillery forces.

"For the first time in the war, our counterfire silenced two Serb artillery positions," said Marjanovich. He gave no details.

KMB's winning sure looks good

Our hats are off to Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful, that organization's board of directors, and all the good people who give their time and money to making Midland a beautiful place in which to reside.

Last week the agency received word that it had won its third $100,000 grant from the state for road beautification. No agency in the state had ever won the beautification grant three times in a row.

No project has yet been chosen for use of the funds, but if the past projects are any indication of what to expect, Midlanders will be pleasantly surprised. The earlier awards funded creation of Volunteer Park on Big Spring Street and Achievement Park at Wall and Front streets, two beauty spots at entrances to the community. In addition to making life in the Tall City more pleasant for residents, the parks truly help convey the message that Midland is a community in which the people care about how their town appears to others. And that translates into impressed visitors who are more than happy to come back to Midland in addition to telling others about us.

Ms. Hotchkiss appropriately gave credit for the awards to Keep Midland Beautiful's board of directors and numerous volunteers who really do take an active interest in how the community looks. She's correct. There are literally thousands of Midlanders who take pride not only in how their homes and businesses look, but in the "face" that Midland presents to the rest of the world. In fact, the community has a long history of interest in such projects and all the residents of Midland are the lucky recipients of that heritage.

Congratulations to the fine folks at Keep Midland Beautiful! You're doing a great job and we appreciate it. Keep up the good work and keep winning those awards. It puts a shine on Midland that can't be dulled.

Use aid to prevent chains

America's foreign aid program has always been controversial, and with the end of the Cold War, it appears to be in danger of being vastly reduced or converted to domestic uses. While some retrenchment seems inevitable, foreign aid can still be a vital tool in helping encourage democracy and economic growth, an investment that can eventually help our own economy.

With the need for military aid reduced there ought to be room for continued and even expanded development aid, properly targeted to where the need is greatest.

Instead of weighting our development aid toward those nations regarded as partners in fighting the now vanished enemy, world communism, we should now weight it toward those most in need and most in danger of being plunged into the chains of authoritarianism.

Family values aren't the answer

Vice President Dan Quayle has made himself a champion of "family values" by attacking a TV sitcom that features unwed motherhood.

It would be good if America could return to the days of the two-parent family, when divorce and teen pregnancy were rare. But conservative yearning for the respectability of yesteryear is unrealistic. Cultural tides are difficult to roll back, and besides, the propriety of previous times often was a sham.

Consider "The Brady Bunch," a popular TV show of the early 1970s. It exuded the wholesome family values desired by Quayle. But off-camera, the show's characters cavorted. The actor playing the oldest son dated the actress playing the mother. Those playing the middle brother and sister were caught half-naked by police. Teens playing the youngest brother and sister "made out in Tiger's doghouse," according to a report. One actor showed up stoned on pot. And the show's father died of AIDS (last) month.

We don't know how to reverse societal trends. But clamoring for family values won't help if it leads only to pressure for conformity and putting up a false front.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 8, the 160th day of 1992. There are 206 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on June 8, 1967, 34 U.S. servicemen were killed when Israeli forces raided the Liberty, a Navy ship stationed in the Mediterranean. Israel called the attack a tragic mistake.

On this date:

In A.D. 632, the prophet Mohammed died. Mohammed's teachings, recorded in the Koran, forged a new religion, Islam.

In 1845, Andrew Jackson, the seventh president of the United States, died in Nashville, Tenn.

In 1861, Tennessee seceded from the Union.

In 1876, author George Sand died in Nohant, France.

In 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt offered to act as a mediator in the Russo-Japanese War.

In 1915, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan resigned in a disagreement over United States handling of the sinking of the Lusitania.

In 1942, 50 years ago, Bing Crosby recorded "Adeste Fideles" with the John Scott Trotter Orchestra and "Silent Night" with Max Terr's Mixed Chorus and the Trotter Orchestra in Los Angeles for Decca Records.

In 1953, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that restaurants in the District of Columbia could not refuse to serve blacks.

In 1966, a merger was announced between the National and American Football Leagues, to take effect in 1970.

In 1968, authorities announced the capture in London of James Earl Ray, the suspected assassin of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

JACK ANDERSON

Mudslinging may make 1988 look tame

WASHINGTON — Presidential elections have always been a contact sport, but this year's promises to be particularly mean, dirty and hard-hitting.

Anderson

It's all part of a day's work for sleuths, Democratic and Republican, who clinically call themselves "opposition research," but whose job is the muckraking and mudslinging in the presidential campaign. They uncover, catalog and computerize the words and weaknesses that lurk as potential targets in an opponent's personal and professional closets.

"I like to think of it (campaigning) in terms of people painting on a picture. Your opponent is coming over with a graffiti spray can," one Democratic campaign strategist explained.

President Bush recently ordered Republican campaign operatives to "stay out of the sleaze" business. But what's clear is that one candidate's sleaze is another candidate's substance. And this year the political sleuthing for Republicans will profit from new and pricey optical disk technology that makes research even more state-of-the-art. Democrats acknowledge there is a high-tech gap between the two parties.

Republican researchers have shifted resources away from Bill Clinton, and are furiously playing catch-up on Ross Perot. Abortion, gun control and Social Security are the wedge issues they hope to drive against the Texas populist.

Clinton and the Democrats, who would like to leave most of the Ross Perot-bashing to President Bush, believe they can turn the first family into the first target over alleged financial wrongdoing by some members.

Ross ("I hate the mudwrestling in politics. I think it's obscene") Perot delivered a below-the-belt shot to Bush recently by suggesting he started the Persian Gulf war to prove his masculinity. He said that as president he "would not send people onto the battlefield unless the nation is committed," and that he wouldn't have "to prove my manhood by sending anyone to war."

In what may be emerging as an early theme, Perot also recently hinted he was more courageous than Bush for daring to come to Little Rock, Ark., and mingle with a crowd of supporters without bodyguards. "I came here totally by myself. . . . Would you want a general afraid to go in the battlefield?"

For now, Democratic strategists told us that Clinton — who condemns the "Republican attack machine" — has to spend his time defining himself rather than attacking Bush or Perot. Democrats are haunted by the Willie Horton specter, and determined never again to allow their candidate to get hog-tied by negative advertising. Democrats are approaching this election nursing a big grudge from 1988. Some fund-raising events have even been earmarked for intelligence-gathering on the opposition to avoid a repeat of 1988 when Michael Dukakis seemed tongue-tied.

A taste of the fall campaign is foretold in at least one memo prepared by the Democratic National Committee that calls for playing hardball on alleged ethics lapses in the first family. Some party officials want to see the national campaign take a page from the "in-your-face" style employed by Harris Wofford against Dick Thornburgh in the Pennsylvania Senate election.

The opportunity is to hammer the theme of "family favoritism" that would include a laundry list of sins, proven and unproven, against Bush family members, particularly son Neil. But officials also believe they can effectively mine the Quayle Council on Competitiveness to demonstrate a correlation between large campaign contributors and White House intervention in environmental and consumer protection rules.

Pols in both parties agree that by the time the votes are counted next November, Bush's 1988 Willie Horton ads may seem genteel by comparison.

RIO POLITICS — All things considered, Environmental Protection Administration Administrator William Reilly would rather be in Rio as "Mr. Secretary," the head of a Cabinet-level agency. Along with wetlands, clean air and global warming, Reilly has long agitated within the administration to achieve Cabinet status for the environmental agency and his failure to do this weighs on him, according to one top adviser.

CHARLEY REESE

Telling truth would help politics, family life

If President George Bush deserves re-election, Pat Buchanan should not have opposed him in the primaries. If President Bush doesn't deserve re-election, Buchanan should not support his re-election.

Reese

Buchanan, however, did both — opposed Bush in the primaries and promised to support him in the general election. This is the usual partisan ritual required of both "good" Republicans and "good" Democrats.

What it really tells you, however, is that these politicians put the welfare of the party and their own political welfare — staying in the good graces of the partisans so they can run another day — ahead of their own alleged principles and philosophy. It means you can tune them out because for all their passionate speech-making, they don't mean a word of it.

If Buchanan really meant what he said about Bush, how could he support him? If the Bush flunkies really meant what they said about Buchanan, how could they accept his support?

The answer is that in the politics as usual game nobody means what they say. It's all a self-serving charade played out by self-serving players who value the game more than anything else. Like lawyers who argue opposing sides of case, their only real interest is one they share in common — lining their pockets. In that they find real togetherness.

There is nothing new about this. Human beings, as a species, have never been pillars of sincerity, integrity or wisdom. For the most part, we humans pursue our self-interest, or what we think our self-interest is, and to that end employ incredible ingenuity in rationalizing everything we do. Routinely we adapt our religious or ethical beliefs to suit our lifestyle rather than adapt our lives to our religious or ethical beliefs.

That's why history is so depressing. I have read a middling amount of history and it is not encouraging. If you value peace of mind, I would advise against reading any history. Then you can proceed with your life ignorant of the past and blind as to what the future is likely to bring.

That's why the easiest way to empty out the churches in America would be for pastors, preachers and priests to teach in unadulterated form the actual words of Jesus of Nazareth. Christianity straight up would be as popular in America today as the AIDS virus.

"You mean I gotta be honest?" people would say. "Can't I just be legal? What do you mean I gotta marry this broad? Or care about those SOBs? You're going too far, man. What are you, an extremist?"

It will never happen, however, because preachers also value their lifestyle, and few there are who will tell the paying customers what they don't want to hear, which today is apt to be anything that might cause them even slight inconvenience.

The only point is that moderation in all things, including self-indulgence, selfishness, hypocrisy, insincerity and greed, is necessary for survival. I'm not saying that as a society we're on the edge of the precipice. That would sound too much like a computerized fund-raising letter. It just probably wouldn't be a bad idea if we all began to practice a moderate amount of honesty and sincerity. It might help if we injected just a tad of realism into politics.

Maybe, for example, we could start out by meaning what we say and saying what we mean at least 25 percent of the time. If we don't go into shock, we could up it a little bit each month.

Admittedly, caring about others is more difficult. Maybe we could start out by just caring about the people who live in the same house with us. Like Buchanan and Bush, sometimes what we do contradicts what we say even in our homes.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Checking a snake's stripes may take too long

There are two schools of thought regarding snakes.

One is the school that always points out that snakes aren't really the epitome of evil and most of them aren't poisonous anyway, so don't be afraid of snakes.

Grizzard

The other is, don't talk to me about no snakes.

I'm a member of the second group.

I'm afraid of snakes. No, I'm terrified at even the thought of a snake. I don't even like to look at pictures of snakes.

When I was a kid, some idiot was always bringing a snake to school to frighten girls. I tried to hide my fear of snakes back then so I wouldn't be called a sissy.

Being called a sissy was a hard fate. It meant you threw a baseball with too much wrist, were overprotected by your mother and walked funny.

I was able to remain in the snake closet until one day the school bully, Frankie Garfield, brought a snake to school and said to me, "Hold my snake, while I go beat up a couple of fourth-graders."

What a dilemma. I had rather put my hand in a lawnmower blade than touch a snake. But if I didn't do what Frankie told me to do, he would do the fist dance on my face.

I opted for the fist dance. Frankie let me hold one upside the head and called me a sissy, but I didn't have to touch the snake.

The reason I bring all this up is I was thumbing through the paper the other day and there was an article in the Home and Garden section about garter snakes.

It was an article people who aren't afraid of snakes always write. It said garter snakes can live in urban and suburban surroundings, but it's silly to be afraid of them or attempt to kill them because they aren't poisonous and they're important to the ecological balance.

"It's shameless to destroy these snakes," the article said.

It also quoted a naturalist as saying snakes with longitudinal stripes, like the garter snake, in this country aren't poisonous.

So what am I supposed to do when I see a snake?

"Well, snake, let me see your stripes. Oh, they're longitudinal. That means you aren't poisonous. Here, let me pick you up and you can crawl around on my head and neck."

No way. In the first place I'm not hanging around a snake long enough or getting close enough to see if it has longitudinal stripes or not.

In the second place I'm not absolutely certain about the difference between longitudinal stripes and latitudinal stripes. It's always one of those things I've always had trouble remembering — like which number to invert when dividing fractions.

I've written often here regarding my theory that if you figure there's really only one kind of snake and it will bite you, given half a chance, then you won't ever make a mistake and misread a snake's stripes and wind up having someone suck out the snake's poison. Blech!

To me, there is only one kind of snake, the dreaded copper-headed water rattler. If you run from it, it will chase you. If you lock yourself inside your house and hide in a closet it will wait outside until you finally come out because copper-headed water rattlers have x-ray vision and can see you in there.

And even if you stay in the closet for, say, a week, and the snake has to leave, don't forget the copper-headed water rattler also knows where you work.

To anybody who tries to tell me otherwise, save your breath. It's my phobia and I'm sticking to it.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

Egypt appeals to foreign specialists to save Sinai ancient ruins

PELUSIUM, Egypt (AP) — Egypt seeks foreign help in saving more than 1,300 ancient ruins threatened by an irrigation project intended to turn the desert of northern Sinai into farmland.

Egypt's appeal is reminiscent of its call for help in the 1960s to save Nubian monuments, including the spectacular Abu Simbel temples of Ramses II, from the rising headwaters of the Aswan High Dam.

So far, the new effort has focused on attracting foreign specialists. The government also has approached the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, but the agency is committed to other projects and is unlikely to play the major role it did in Nubia.

"We need any help we can get from qualified experts," said Ibrahim Bakr, Egypt's chairman of antiquities, describing the situation as urgent.

Ironically, the best source of expertise is Israel, which carried out extensive excavations during its occupation of Sinai.

Egyptian sources say the government will not ask for Israel's help, however, because public opinion remains hostile to the Jewish state despite a peace treaty that returned Sinai to Egypt.

The late President Anwar Sadat envisioned the el-Salam, or Peace, irrigation canal in 1979, the year the treaty was signed.

It will carry Nile River water from the delta port of Damietta under the Suez Canal and more than 100 miles across northern Sinai. The western terminus is south of el-Arish, 25 miles east of the Israeli border.

Work has been completed from Damietta to the Suez Canal and in Sinai has reached the outskirts of Pelusium, a Roman port of spectacular ruins mostly buried in dunes.

The path through Sinai parallels, then crosses, an ancient thoroughfare used by a historical Who's Who: Ramses II, Alexander the Great, Cleopatra, the Holy Family of Christendom fleeing Herod, and Muslim armies invading Egypt.

Relics read like entries in a textbook on archaeology: prehistoric camps, fortresses, cities, elaborate houses, early Christian churches.

Some sites lie directly in the canal's path, but the real danger to antiquities will be after the canal is finished, when plows begin turning the soil.

The canal's first Sinai phase, including 20 drainage ditches, is expected to be finished within four years.

"This is our generation's Nubia campaign," said Abdel Maksoud, Sinai coordinator for the Egyptian Antiquities Organization. Maksoud and his team of excavators work under a blazing sun, seven days a week, with the roar of bulldozers and dredging cranes a constant reminder of the challenge.

Eliezer Oren, an archaeologist at Ben Gurion University in Israel, spent 10 years in northern Sinai. He documented 1,300 ancient sites and directed 40 excavations.

"There is no time to waste," Oren said by telephone from Israel. "What I fear is that, unlike the Nubia campaign, the world might not be as excited because we don't have such major attractions as temples. Many of the sites are simple and need only surveying. Others need excavation."

Maksoud considers the irrigation project both a blessing and a curse.

"Because of it, we're finding so many missing pieces of history," he said. "But when the farmers move in, we've lost them. Still, we understand the importance of the canal."

Egyptian teams are excavating and recording a dozen sites simultaneously. French and German experts are at work, and Canadians and Poles are on the way.

Bakr, the antiquities chairman, estimates 45 virgin sites lie within the first quadrant of the canal's path.

Panamanian jet crashes, kills all 47 aboard

PANAMA CITY (AP) — The wreckage of a Panamanian airliner was found Sunday in remote jungle-covered mountains, officials said. All 47 people on board were killed.

The COPA airlines Boeing 737 went down during a storm late Saturday on a flight from Panama City to Cali, Colombia, Civil Aeronautics officials said. The plane was spotted by teams in helicopters near Tucuti, a village 120 miles southeast of Panama City on the Balsas River.

"Clothes and suitcases can be seen on top of the trees," said Maj. Cristobal Fundora, director of the National Air Service, in a television broadcast from the crash site.

This time of year, the area is virtually cut off by torrential rains. The nearest city, La Palma, is accessible only by air or boat.

Aviation officials in Panama and Colombia said two of the 40 passengers were from the United States, but were not further identified. Others aboard were 35 Colombians, one Italian and nine Panamanians, including the seven crew members.

The flight left Panama City at 8:40 p.m. (8:40 p.m. CDT) Saturday. Two minutes before the jet disappeared from radar, the pilot, Capt. Rafael Chial, told air traffic controllers he was changing course to avoid a storm.

Fundora said an electrical storm could have caused the jet to explode in midair.

Japanese bill allowing troops abroad moves closer to OK

TOKYO (AP) — Legislation allowing Japanese troops to be sent overseas for the first time since World War II moved nearer to passage after oppposition Socialists agreed Sunday to drop five motions stalling a vote.

Parliament's upper house reconvened early this morning to vote on an eighth Socialist motion, which called for censure of the chairman of a committee that rammed through its approval of the bill Friday.

That was expected to clear the way for a vote on the bill itself as soon as tonight or Tuesday.

The legislation would allow up to 2,000 Japanese soldiers to participate in U.N. peacekeeping operations.

The bill is supported by the governing Liberal Democrats and two centrist opposition parties. It was introduced after Japan was sharply criticized for not helping the U.N.-mandated effort to oust Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

The legislation is expected to pass eventually because the Liberal Democrats and their allies hold a narrow majority in the upper chamber, and the Liberal Democrats have a solid majority in the lower house.

Osamu Yatabe, a Socialist leader in the upper house, said his party's policy of "absolute opposition" was unchanged despite its agreement to drop five of the last eight delaying motions.

As part of the weekend delaying tactics, Socialist and Communist lawmakers inched their way to the podium to cast their ballots, a strategy called "cow-walking."

U.S. support for Iraq ignored early warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — In July 1989, an Energy Department task force started tracking intelligence reports about the alarming pace of Iraqi shopping for nuclear weapons components. By December, the task force had died of neglect.

"The task force was disbanded ... due to a lack of DOE interest," says William Emel, the former Department of Energy intelligence analyst who founded the monitoring group.

Emel was among dozens of U.S. officials ringing alarms during the first 18 months of the Bush administration about Iraq's increasingly aggressive actions and statements, according to an Associated Press review of documents and interviews with these officials.

At the Commerce Department, officials urged holding back licenses for the export of U.S. technology to Iraq — some of it with clear military destinations. Similar recommendations were made at the Defense Department.

At the Agriculture Department, officials urged that U.S. credits to Iraq — which enabled U.S. farmers to sell $5 billion in goods — be reduced or suspended because of irregularities in the program, including suspicions that Iraq was using guaranteed U.S. government loans for guns rather than grains.

At the Treasury Department, internal reports showed that Iraq's credit worthiness was sinking as its massive international debts rose. Treasury and the Export-Import Bank recommended against further credits or loans.

At the CIA, analysts were warning that some Palestinian terrorists — including master bombmaker Abu Ibrahim — had returned to their safe haven in Baghdad.

But senior officials — mostly in the State Department and White House — overrode the warnings, treating them with disinterest or outright rejection.

Now, Bush's political opponents — from Democrats in Congress to probable presidential candidate Ross Perot — want to know why.

Their argument goes like this: by ignoring the warning signs or reacting to them mildly, the administration led Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to believe he could get away with a rap on the knuckles for invading Kuwait.

Had Saddam believed otherwise, the argument goes, he might not have invaded Kuwait and countless lives would have been saved — 148 Americans and tens of thousands of Iraqis.

President Bush defined U.S. policy toward Iraq in October 1989 when he signed National Security Directive 26, a document stating the government "should propose economic and political incentives for Iraq to moderate its behavior and to increase our influence with Iraq."

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, in House testimony last month, said policymakers at the time recognized Iraq's poor human rights record and were concerned about Saddam's suspected nuclear weapons program. But "it appeared that Iraq had made a conscious decision to moderate its behavior since we normalized relations in 1984."

Offering a friendly, if wary, hand to the Iraqis was in the national interest, he said.

GATES: Remarks cause hand-wringing at City Hall

cision by the Police Commission on Sunday morning to hire an independent lawyer to help decide what to do next.

"How many times have we been promised that he'd finally leave?" complained Mayor Tom Bradley, who tried and failed to force the chief's retirement a year ago. "I think the people have had enough of Daryl Gates jerking them around."

Once again, in the wake of the rioting a month ago, the attention of Los Angeles city government has shifted from issues to political infighting, pointing up the weaknesses of the city's decentralized leadership.

Los Angeles faces urgent problems in rebuilding the inner city, calming racial tensions and reforming the police force after the rioting that killed 60 people and caused more than $1 billion in damage.

On Saturday night 30 police officers were injured, mostly by rocks and bottles, when they entered a housing project to break up a gathering of 200 to 300 people at what was described as a gang truce meeting.

At City Hall on Sunday, the Police Commission, which is appointed by the mayor, voted to hire an outside lawyer to explore possible disciplinary measures against the chief, who is insulated by civil service protections.

That decision must be approved by the City Council at a meeting scheduled for Tuesday. Last year the council blocked moves by the commission to discipline the chief, but a number of council members said the balance of power has now shifted against him.

A delay in the chief's departure could seriously complicate the transition to his designated successor, Willie L. Williams, who has already resigned as Commissioner of Police in Philadelphia and is moving his family to Los Angeles this week.

If Williams does not assume office this month, his selection would be invalidated by a ballot measure approved last week that mandates a new method of selecting and removing police chiefs.

But any effort to discipline or remove Gates at this point might only create further complications, delaying his departure by weeks or months as he makes a last stand in the courts.

Stanley K. Scheinbaum, president of the Police Commission, said Williams would probably be selected again under the new procedure. But he said that at a moment of crisis in the city, a long and potentially contentious new selection process would be both politically and financially costly to the city.

TWINS: Sisters face charges

on May 26, Wilson's widow, Betty, and her twin sister, Peggy, also were charged with capital murder. They face a possible death penalty or life in prison without parole if convicted.

Mrs. Wilson was in jail and her twin was free on $300,000 bond.

White said the sisters agreed to pay him $5,000 to kill Wilson, who was last seen alive when children playing on his cul-de-sac street watched him put a political sign in his yard.

Mrs. Wilson said she found her husband of 17 years dead when she returned home that night. A neighbor, Donald Sieja, said she ran to his house two doors away and was "obviously upset."

White said he met Mrs. Lowe when he did carpentry work at Vincent Elementary School, where she taught.

His court-appointed attorney, Roy Miller, said White, a Vietnam war veteran, suffers from post-traumatic stress syndrome and manic depression.

White said he was given $2,500 in advance and said Mrs. Wilson passed another $200 for travel expenses to him in a library book at Lake Guntersville State Park. He said he then drove to Huntsville and that Mrs. Wilson allowed him into her home so he could ambush and kill Wilson.

Police said a Huntsville library book checked out to Mrs. Wilson was found at White's home in Vincent, south of Birmingham, along with her revolver and a pair of blood-stained shoes.

Madison County District Attorney Mo Brooks said White's confession is the best available explanation for Wilson's murder.

The twin sisters, two of four girls in their family, graduated in 1964 from Gadsden High School, where Betty was a student council officer, pep club member and participant in drama and talent shows, and Peggy was the homecoming queen and class beauty for three years.

Both were married just after high school and both marriages broke up after about five years. Betty later married Wilson, whom she met while working as a nurse at a Huntsville hospital.

Peggy also remarried. Her husband, Wayne Lowe, a music teacher and a deacon in the First Baptist Church in Vincent, is convinced the sisters are innocent.

"All I know is, when Betty saw it she could hardly talk," he said. "She was in shock and she was just in a daze, all through the funeral."

Charlie Hooper, Mrs. Wilson's attorney, said she "would have no motive for wishing her husband harm."

Midland Police Department Officers John Champion and Richard "Candy" Candelaria patrol their east side beat. Below, they talk with an area resident who had stopped them with information about an abandoned vehicle.

BIKES and BADGES

The police officer walking the beat is now the police officer on a roll. Midland is one of more than four U.S. cities to have a bicycle unit within the Police Department.

Proposed by Sgt. Ernest Wakefield, the Midland unit started as a pilot program in August. And although "it's still in that phase, I think it's here to stay," he said.

Wakefield said his proposal focused on taking bikes that were impounded and sending officers in plain clothes into the neighborhoods."Things kind of snowballed after that," he said.

Wakefield said seven officers — all who volunteered for the duty — are assigned to the bicycle unit and others are available from the department's training division. He hopes next year's budget will allow him to add five more officers.

The officers patrol on mountain bikes and are equipped with shorts, helmets, gloves and portable radios; they are armed with their service weapons.

The officers carry report forms, and if they are in the area they can take calls but are "usually not assigned calls as are officers in cars," Wakefield said.

He said the purpose of the unit — which patrols residential areas, parks and apartment complexes — is to increase contact with residents and to "watch out for burglars."

Wakefield said one advantage of the unit is "getting out of the car and back in touch with the public. We don't have that barrier of the car. We talk to kids playing and people mowing their lawns."

He said bicycles have expanded foot beats and have given officers more mobility.

"Plus, people don't pay a lot of attention to people on bikes. There's that element of surprise. (They) . . . expect a police car. . . . Residential burglars are not looking for (officers) on bicycles."

Wakefield, who is the program's coordinator, is surprised at the public's reaction to the unit. "The most surprising thing about it, everyone thinks it's a good idea. We've received a lot of positive response."

Wakefield, a native Midlander who has been with the force since August 1977, said that so far this year the unit has gone on patrol about once a week.

He said the unit has made an occasional arrest and has written one or two tickets for seatbelt

Decatur plane crash kills two

DECATUR (AP) — A single-engine airplane out of Bedford crashed near railroad tracks here Sunday afternoon, killing the pilot and passenger, authorities said.

Homer Woodard, 50, of Ruston, La., and Charles Arthur Boyd, 50, of Bedford, were killed when their plane went down about 1 p.m. on Highway 51, 35 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

Witnesses said the plane was flying at tree level and appeared to be practicing emergency landing techniques when it crashed.

"It came over those trees and then straight down," said Roy Shackelford. "It looked like he was just angling back, just a little bit."

Victims, families try to cope 2 months after explosion

BRENHAM (AP) — Two months have passed since a salt dome owned by Seminole Pipeline Co. exploded, destroying the home and killing the son that Alan Meinen and his wife, Jane, cherished.

But time has yet to dim memories of the hopes and dreams that brought Alan and Jane, who was critically wounded in the blast, to live on the 20-acre rural lot just eight miles south of here.

"It was nice to be out there," Meinen, 34, told the Houston Chronicle in its Sunday editions. "It's nice to get out and simplify your life like that, and that's what we wanted: a simple life where we could raise our boy the right way."

The couple found the land shaded by stout, moss-draped trees the ideal home — a serene and spacious place for themselves and for Derrick, 5, who nicknamed the cows that grazed beneath his treehouse.

They never felt endangered by underground pipelines that carried liquefied petroleum gas to the salt dome or the Seminole pumping station just across the fence.

Mrs. Meinen, 29, was on the phone talking to authorities about a foul odor April 7 when the gas explosion ripped through the family's double-wide trailer, sending her and Derrick flying with the debris.

Derrick was killed instantly. Mrs. Meinen, who had undergone back surgery just three weeks before the accident, still is undergoing intensive therapy for multiple injuries. Doctors say it will be at least two more months before she can rejoin her husband in Washington County.

"She's in pretty high spirits, but it's going to be a long road for her; and it may be a long time before we'll know if she'll ever have use of her left arm," Meinen said. "We've been talking a lot about our boy. It helps when you're Christian people. We believe in afterlife, and we know someday we're going to see him."

The massive blast also killed their neighbors, Gloria Diver, 46, who died three days later, and her daughter, Delores Medve, 27, who died on April 12.

The women and Mrs. Medve's 3-year-old son, Travis, were in a car smashed and scorched in the blaze. Travis Medve remains hospitalized with burns, while 17 other Washington and Austin County residents were injured.

The catastrophe caused $3.5 million in property damage in Washington County and $3.1 million in damage in neighboring Austin County. In Washington County alone, 16 homes were demolished and 18 others had structural damage. More than 150 homes and buildings were damaged.

"There's an awful lot of emotional and financial hardship for these people," State Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, whose district includes Washington County, said. "The area didn't qualify for federal disaster aid because most of the people had insurance. But insurance covered 80 percent for some of these people, and they didn't have funds to make up the difference."

Washington County Judge Dorothy Morgan said the state Department of Housing and Community Affairs issued a $5,000 disaster relief grant for victims — a paltry amount, she said, considering the millions of dollars in total damages.

"The check is still sitting on my desk, and I can't give any of it away," Morgan said. "To qualify for any of this cash, you have to be below a certain poverty level, and most of these people don't have incomes low enough that they can qualify.

"It shows there's a problem with the system," she said. "These are hard-working people who pay their taxes, and they can't get help when they need it."

The National Transportation Safety Board and the Texas Railroad Commission continue to investigate the cause of the blast. In the meantime, Tulsa, Okla.,-based MAPCO Inc., which operates Seminole and owns 80 percent of it, agreed last month to pay some $4 million in deductible claims before any findings are complete.

In addition, Seminole spokesman Rick Neal said the company immediately made a $50,000 contribution to the Red Cross to help the residents.

Most of the victims remain displaced, living with friends or relatives and drawing aid from the Red Cross or other charitable organizations.

Meinen has been living in a Houston hotel room rented by his employer, Coca-Cola Bottling Co. He said he will rent a Washington County home well away from the explosion site when his wife is released from a rehabilitation center later this summer.

Eight families have filed a class-action lawsuit against Seminole, and more litigation is expected. Many victims, including Meinen, have hired attorneys.

"It seems to me (Seminole) could have had 24-hour monitoring at the site," Meinen said.

Indiana mother sees end to six-year vigil for murdered daughter

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — For six years, an Indiana woman has burned candles as a memorial to her 22-year-old daughter, found bludgeoned to death on a South Texas beach in 1986.

Shirley Cory of Albion, Ind. called the flames "the light of hope."

Now Cory waits along with South Texas officials for the extradition of Shelley Lynn Webster's accused killer, who was found in Vermont last week.

"It's been a long, hard six years. I have never given up," Ms. Cory told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"When I can't sleep at night, I get up and there's the light. I could sit in my chair and say the rosary," she said.

Ms. Webster's body was found on a Kleberg County beach July 17, 1986. Her former boyfriend,, Rolf Huseboe, 29, of La Crosse, Wis., was charged in Burlington, Vt., as a Texas fugitive while in a jail for twice assaulting his current girlfriend.

Texas officials say when Huseboe was jailed on assault charges in Vermont in January, he told a cellmate that he had killed a woman in Texas.

The cellmate gave Vermont police Cpl. Skip Hardy a 25-page statement in which he says Huseboe confessed to killing a former girlfriend in Texas six years ago.

Ms. Cory said her Catholic faith and her determination to bring the killer to justice kept her from giving up on her daughter's case.

"I could not let her go without at least trying until the day I died," she said. "I would have never, never given up. No matter how long it took."

Lead cleanup receives mixed reviews from Dallas residents

DALLAS (AP) — The federal cleanup of the lead-contaminated soil that's caused a stir stretching from West Dallas to Monroe, La., is receiving mixed reviews from the people who fought to have the tainted dirt removed.

After five months of work, only 14 of 129 homes in a West Dallas neighborhood are free of the soil. While some of the residents say the Environmental Protection Agency has done a good job handling the project, others are not pleased with the pace or quality of the cleanup.

Maxine Henry said workers left chunks of what appeared to be lead slag and battery chips in her front yard after hauling away the top six inches of soil.

"I don't know whether they got most of it or not," she said. "I thought maybe they'd come back and dig some more, but they just brought this new dirt in."

Ms. Henry also wondered why the EPA had cleaned up some yards while others had not been touched.

"Everybody asks me, 'Why did they get you, and they're skipping everybody else? It seems to me like if I've got it, everybody else has it too," said Ms. Henry, whose next-door neighbor's yard has not been cleaned.

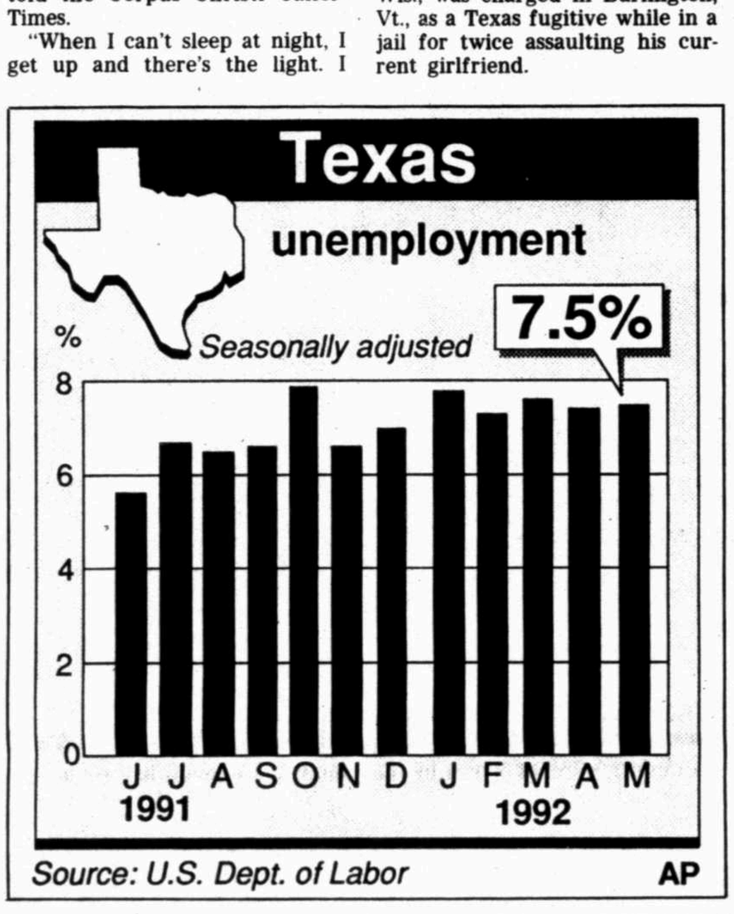

While EPA officials acknowledged the complaints, they said they have also received good reports from residents.

"What we're being told by the residents living in that area is, 'Thank you,'" said EPA spokesman David Bary. "We've had a lot of success stories come out of that part of town."

Joycie Lee Thomas, 79, is one of those stories.

Ms. Thomas, who has lived in her home on Nomas Street since 1945, said she is glad to get back to her gardening, now that workers have finished excavating and replanting her yard.

"I know they did a good job on my house," she said.

Research team studies how pigs beat skin cancer

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A team of scientists at Texas A&M is trying to unlock the secret to beating skin cancer by studying 600 pigs equipped with tumor-fighting superpowers.

Texas A&M endocrinologist Max Amoss is leading a National Cancer Institute research project involving Sinclair pigs, many of which develop tumors when very young.

But only 10 percent actually die from cancer, Amoss told the Bryan-College Station Eagle.

"I have some animals out there that are eight years old that were covered with melanomas, and they're living a very pleasant life in a breeding herd," said Amoss, a researcher in A&M's College of Veterinary Medicine.

Skin cancer is the most common form of cancer. While only 5 percent of the 600,000 cases diagnosed annually are melanoma, it accounts for about 75 percent of all skin cancer deaths. With the popularity of tanning, melanoma is 14 times more likely today than it was in the 1930s.

Amoss' research team and scientists from four other U.S. labs are trying to determine how Sinclair pigs fight off the spread of the tumors.

A melanoma tumor is made up of abnormal cells that produce the skin pigment melanin. The reason this type of cancer is so deadly is that the tumors tend to metastasize, or spread throughout the body.

"We find melanoma cells in the brain, in the lung, spleen and the liver," Amoss said. "But by and large, the animal doesn't die of metastatic disease, which is what happens in almost any other kind of cancer. These metastatic melanoma cells start to grow and then just stop."

As in humans, the pigs' melanoma cells do migrate.

If Amoss and the other researchers can isolate the pigs' secret defense against melanoma, they may be able to transfer it to humans.

It is not known why the pigs get melanoma in the first place.

For humans, the number one contributing factor is overexposure to the sun. But melanoma's relationship to sunlight isn't as easily established as with the more benign forms of skin cancer — basal and squamous tumors. With those types, the more sun exposure over many years, the more likely your chances of developing tumors.

With pigs, sunlight has nothing to do with the cancer.

Their tumors start growing before they're born and grow rapidly for about six weeks after birth.

DEAR ABBY

Good, clean limerick betrays its vulgar origins

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Enough limericks — but if you will, please correct the public's misperception that Edward Lear (no relation to Norman) invented the limerick. He merely popularized the CLEAN limerick — and only because his "Book of Nonsense" caught the public's fancy in 1863, although its first publication in 1846 made nary a ripple.

Van Buren

The clean limerick fad lasted only five years (thank God), but the genuine article still exists (and has for several centuries) as the main vehicle for vulgar doggerel. Please refer to the excellent, scholarly work "The Limerick" by G. Legman (Bell Publishing), which has a comprehensive introduction, tracing the history of this verse form, and gives 1,700 examples of genuine limericks. With few exceptions, they are vulgar, salacious and unfit for family newspapers. In short, indicative of the true nature of the beast.

Abby, I know I said "enough limericks" — but they are addictive, aren't they? Example is Professor Morris Bishop's masterpiece:

The limerick is furtive and mean,
You must keep her in close quarantine,
Or she sneaks to the slums and promptly becomes disorderly, drunk and obscene.
— V. APPLEMAN, FREEPORT, TEXAS

DEAR V. APPLEMAN: I have received many naughty and bawdy limericks from my readers. Some are so steamy they should be stored in a fireproof vault. Now here's one that's slightly suggestive, but quite witty:

Said a potentate grown and despotic
"My tastes are more rich than exotic.
"I've always adored
"Making love in a Ford
"Because I am auto-erotic."

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter in your column from someone who was thrilled when the Salvation Army found a lost relative. I am bothered by this. Suppose somebody doesn't want to be found?

Several years ago, by my own choosing, my "family" ceased to exist. I moved to another part of the country, changed my name, and have made no contact with them, nor do I want any. (Please, save the lecture, Abby — I didn't write for that reason.) I have never for one minute regretted my choice.

I doubt very much that any relative of mine has ever expressed the slightest curiosity as to learning my whereabouts. But if one does, I do not want the Salvation Army, or anybody else, sticking their nose in my business, giving out information of my whereabouts to people who did not show any interest in me in the past. Sign me ... I AM NOT LOST

DEAR NOT LOST: Have no fear or trepidation; the Salvation Army is not in the business of disclosing the whereabouts of people who do not want to be found. Before making a search, the Salvation Army gets sufficient information to ensure that it is not invading anyone's privacy. And, if a family member is located who prefers to remain "lost," the Salvation Army will respect that person's privacy.

When not rolling through the streets of Midland, Wakefield said the officers patrol in vehicles and also participate in a lot of public relations-type projects, such as riding in parades and attending Neighborhood Watch gatherings.

Wakefield said the unit has three divisions: West, west of Midkiff Road; Central, Midkiff to Big Spring Street and north of Highway 80; and East, east of Big Spring and the south side.

Dallas teen curfew ordinance nears expected council approval

DALLAS (AP) — A year after Dallas became the first city in the state to pass a teen curfew, the law gathers dust while other cities have begun enforcing their newer ordinances.

Challenges to the Dallas law landed it in court and out of bounds for enforcement, but City Council is expected to refine the ordinance Wednesday so police can begin enforcing the curfew.

The revisions are intended to help the curfew pass judicial review, and — like the original ordinance — expected to pass easily.

"I'm sure the ACLU still doesn't like it," said Don Postell, assistant city attorney. "I think they've got problems with the concepts of juvenile curfew ordinance. But from my standpoint, I think we've got it worked out."

The revised ordinance would require those under 17 years old to be off the streets by 11 p.m. weekdays and midnight on weekends.

Joe Cook, executive director of the North Texas office of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the ordinance is unconstitutional and would permit police to harass residents.

"This gives police the license to stop people without probable cause. That's the real serious problem we have with it," Cook said.

Bruce Anton, attorney for those challenging the curfew, said the city has been unable to justify the ordinance. There is nothing to suggest a large number of juvenile crimes occur during the curfew hours, he said.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer of Dallas is expected to conduct a hearing soon after the council's vote.

Council originally adopted the ordinance on June 12, 1991, acting at the urging of Police Chief Bill Rathburn, who said police will be able to more effectively deal with gangs and young drug dealers.

Several other Texas cities have proceeded with teen curfews of their own. San Antonio's went into effect on Aug. 7, 1991, Houston's on Nov. 9, 1991, and Fort Worth's on April 1, 1992.

"Our ordinance seems to be working well," said Servio Soto, director of San Antonio's office of youth initiatives. "Officers in the field say it's reduced youth activity by about 60 percent."

"So far, the city council's satisfied, and so are we," Soto said.

In the juvenile division of the Houston police department, Sgt. A.D. Moore said early protests against the ordinance soon subsided, "but our ordinance hasn't been in effect long enough to analyze what effect it will have."

Fort Worth's ordinance calls for a warning letter on the first offense and a fine of up to $200 for repeat violations.

"We have issued 39 warning letters to the parents, but there have been no repeat offenders so far," said Sgt. Calvin E. Wallace of the youth section of the Fort Worth police department.

"Officers on the street tell us they're seeing less groups of kids hanging out at the night spots and things of that nature," Wallace said.

As originally written, the Dallas ordinance called for police officers to give violators two warnings, then take them into custody on subsequent offenses.

"The ordinance now has officers just issue a citation, the same as a speeding ticket. Taking a kid in is a fairly heavy penalty. This is a much better procedure," Postell said.

Those ticketed would have the option of appearing later before a city judge, either to plead guilty or no contest, or to challenge the citation.

The newest version of the ordinance requires officers to ask teens caught after the curfew if they qualify under any of the exceptions to the ordinance: work, school, religious and city-sponsored recreation activities, interstate travel, emergencies and errands for parents and guardians.

"If you're caught speeding but you have a medical emergency, you're probably not going to get a ticket," Postell said. "The same is true here. If it's 2 o'clock in the morning and you've got a 16-year-old kid going to an all-night pharmacy to get medicine for a brother, that's justifiable."

Lottery's lure proves candy-store temptation for problem gamblers

HOUSTON (AP) — A little more than a week into the lottery, Texas Gamblers Anonymous officials already have stories to tell.

There's the man who spent his $1,500 paycheck on "Lone Star Millions" lottery tickets and had nothing left to pay this month's rent or bills.

There's the daughter who called for help after her mother broke into her piggy bank to play the lottery.

There's the Houston mother who can't feed her children because grocery money was spent on scratch-off tickets.

Gambling Anonymous members, many of whom came to Texas to avoid gambling, say the stories prove the lottery isn't just a harmless game. It's a dangerous temptation.

"Send an alcoholic into a bar and it's difficult, and effectively, now the whole state is a bar. You get it at work, at church, at school," said Jim Z., a 13-year member of the group.

Jim, whose last name was withheld as are other members of the organization to protect his identity, said the Houston group took 2,500 calls in the three days after the lottery started on May 29. The lottery is expected to be expanded later with a computerized lotto game.

The American Psychiatric Association declared compulsive gambling an impulse disorder, much like alcoholism, in 1980.

Up to 7 percent of the population is so compulsive about gambling that even winning the lottery won't satisfy the craving, Jim said.

Jim said he has rebuilt his credit rating, paid off debts and started a family since moving to Texas. Now he's being frightened by the lottery.

Sue Cox, executive director of Texas Council on Problem and Compulsive Gambling, said that group received more than 5,300 calls during the first week of the lottery. The group's toll-free telephone number is printed on the back of game tickets.

Ms. Cox said about 50 percent of the calls to TCPCG have been from people wondering how to collect winnings, but others are from distressed people.

Letter backed by regulators angers chiropractors' critics

HOUSTON (AP) — Controversial procedures backed by state chiropractic regulators have angered critics who say some of the methods may mirror those of doctors and osteopaths.

The methods — and the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners' endorsement of the procedures — have surfaced in a May 2, 1991, letter written by top board members, the Houston Chronicle reported in its Sunday editions.

The letter's contents are creating a stir because one board member and a former board member have just become aware of the missive.

Critics say the methods show some members of the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners are more interested in enriching chiropractors than in protecting the public from bad practitioners.

The letter, addressed "to whom it may concern," was issued by board President James E. Franklin, Vice President David Albracht and Secretary-Treasurer Nancy Jones.

Franklin, who signed the letter with the other two members names listed below, could not be reached by The Associated Press Sunday as his residential number in San Antonio is unlisted.

In the letter, the board members identified various diagnostic procedures they considered "within the scope of practice of Texas chiropractors."

While some procedures deal with the skeletal and muscular systems, others — such as EKGs, which study heart activity, and blood system tests — are more commonly associated with medical doctors or osteopaths.

According to the letter, "manipulation under anesthesia" also falls within the scope of chiropractic practice, although chiropractors can't administer anesthesia and would have to use specialists to provide that service.

In addition, the officers also said chiropractors could order brain and bone scans and gastrointestinal studies — procedures that often require the injection or ingestion of a special dye.

Some of those substances require prescriptions, and chiropractors are prohibited by state law from using drugs that require prescriptions.

Clay Salyer, a Dublin chiropractor reappointed to the board by Gov. Ann Richards last year, said the letter, which he opposes, isn't legally binding because it wasn't formally approved by the full board.

Judges refuse to identify school workers as probationers

DALLAS (AP) — Two county judges superseded long-standing probation department policy by not notifying Dallas and Plano school officials that two employees were serving probation for sex offenses against children, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The policy routinely requires probationers to inform their employers when they have committed offenses that pose a special risk, The Dallas Morning News said.

Lawyers for the two men, a maintenance worker and a teacher, stressed neither man was technically convicted of crimes since both cases involved non-adjudicated probations.

Because of their particular cases, neither man would pose a risk inside schools, mental health experts told the judges.

In some cases, a judge may have "better information than we do .... that this person doesn't pose a risk," said Ron Goethals, director of Dallas County's probation department.

But school officials still think they should have been told.

"Absolutely, I think school districts have a right to know if the offenses are against children," DISD Superintendent Marvin Edwards said. "If we err at all, we should err on behalf of the children."

The News found nearly 200 people who committed felonies in Dallas County were employed by the Dallas Independent School District.

A 1989 state law requires school districts to do criminal background checks on new employees. But The News found many employees with criminal records had been hired since the law took effect.

DISD has taken steps to fire 51 individuals identified when The News requested access to their personnel files.

GUMS AFFECT SMILES

A beautiful smile is composed of not only teeth, but healthy gums around the teeth as well. Even beautiful teeth can appear unpleasant if the gum tissue surrounding them is red, puffy, or receding. These are just some of the indications of gum disease, or periodontal disease. This problem can cause the gums to bleed when brushed, to become swollen, or to pull away from the teeth creating unattractive spaces which are often difficult to correct.

Any of the signs and symptoms of periodontal disease should be taken seriously. If the gingival tissue surrounding the teeth does not appear light pink in color, flat, and stippled in texture like the outside of an orange, then some stage of disease is present. Any sign of bleeding with mild stimulation like toothbrushing is usually an indication of inflammation. Tissue that is receding or pulling away from the tooth can also be an early warning sign. Not all of these symptoms must be present or noticeable to indicate the presence of this destructive infection.

Fortunately, this process can be corrected in the early stages and with proper preventive techniques and professional help your smile will not be permanently disfigured.

$124 million jury award alarms attorneys

■ Assessment favoring fired Triton Energy Corp. executive could trigger avalanche of hefty verdicts, defense lawyers fear.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Corporate defense attorneys fear a $124 million jury award in favor of a fired Triton Energy Corp. executive could trigger an avalanche of hefty verdicts in such cases.

Officials say the verdict is the largest in Dallas County history and one of the biggest ever in Texas.

"It's shocking and outrageous. It's Alice in Wonderland down there," said William Bux of the Dallas law firm of Hughes & Luce. He and others fear the verdict and others are changing the nature of labor lawsuits in Texas.

The case was filed by former Triton executive Jimmy W. Janacek, who claimed his firin came after he challenged his bosses' failure to disclose relevant financial information to shareholders.

Company officials said Janacek was fired because they "couldn't get along with him."

After ruling in Janacek's favor, jurors assessed nearly $124.4 million. Punitive damages against Triton totaled $75 million with another $5 million assessed to company chairman William Lee.

The remaining damages would compensate Janacek for 18 separate categories of actual damages jurors believed he had suffered. Amounts ranged from $200,000 to $4.5 million.

Jurors said they tried to send a message to corporations.

"We wanted to say something to large corporations that might think they are above being dealt with," said juror Gayla Bruner, who added that to "put things in terms they'd understand," punitive damages were set in the millions.

Ms. Bruner said she and other jurors reasoned that to Janacek, being fired "wasn't just a slap on the wrist. So (Triton) didn't deserve a slap on the wrist, either."

Another juror, who asked not to be identified, said the verdict had "nothing to do with money."

"It has to do with morality," the juror said. "No one is above the law."

Triton vows to have the decision overturned, and some legal authorities predict that it may achieve at least a reduction after a pre-judgment hearing scheduled for June 15.

Steven Daniels, a researcher studying Texas jury damage awards at the American Bar Foundation in Chicago, says the jury's attitude toward Triton is common.

"It has something to do with a notion of arrogance" on the part of defendants, particularly companies, Daniels said. "Texas juries are slow to anger. You really have to aggravate them. But when you do, wow."

Bruce Bowman, Triton's defense attorney, said he was surprised by both the size and direction of the verdict.

Concern fuels vehicles' turn to natural gas

Associated Press

NEGAUNEE, Mich. — For the most part, U.P. Tire and Marathon Convenience Center is typical of the places where you pick up a loaf of bread and fill the car with gas.

But when you say "gas" around here, you'd better be specific.

While most people mean gasoline, a few want to top off the tank with natural gas. At this station in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, they can.

It's one of more than 500 stations nationwide that offer natural gas as an automobile fuel to regular customers.

That's not many, especially considering it was in the 1960s that people began adding natural-gas tanks to gasoline-burning cars, so they could use either fuel.

But growing government and public pressure to diversify the nation's energy sources is pushing the number up.

"A lot of little pieces are coming together," says Carl Ericson, a spokesman for the American Gas Association. "The time just seems to be right."

The association says three to five stations a week this year have been joining the ranks in selling what the association sees as the fuel of the future. About 30,000 vehicles equipped to run on natural gas are on the road in the United States.

Polaroid unveils dry-process film

N.Y. Times News Service

Polaroid's Helios, its new dry-imaging system, is based on carbon rather than silver-halide technology. Unlike photographic films that have to be protected from light and processed with wet chemicals, Helios film is insensitive to ordinary light and is developed through a dry, laser process.

Helios film is a four-layer sandwich: a polyester base, a layer sensitive to laser light, the imaging layer with carbon particles in a polymeric matrix and a cover sheet.

Helios can quickly create a hard-copy record of images captured by highly sophisticated scanning equipment used for medical testing and diagnosis.

Caroline Rose Hunt, 69, daughter of U.S. oil tycoon H.L. Hunt, poses in the dining room of the newly opened ultraswank Lanesborough Hotel in London recently.

Millionairess Hunt balances wealth, thrift

By Cotten Timberlake
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Caroline Rose Hunt, daughter of legendary oil tycoon H.L. Hunt, is a serious penny pincher at heart.

Her economizing may seem incongruous with her wealth, but both were inherited from her father.

"Profitable luxury" is the guiding principle of her hotel management company, Rosewood Hotels Inc., which recently opened London's ultra-swank Lanesborough Hotel.

"Someone asked me, 'Do you press a piece of soap on another piece of soap?' and I said, 'Doesn't everyone?' " Mrs. Hunt said. She punctuated the sentence, as she tends to do, with a peal of laughter.

Mrs. Hunt doesn't go that far at the Lanesborough, but she says: "We're very, very conscientious about managing it on the most cost-effective basis that we can."

Out to outdo the Dorchester, Savoy and Claridge's, the 95-room Lanesborough perched at Hyde Park Corner opened to the seriously rich on New Year's Eve.

The cheapest room is 190 pounds, or around $333 a night. The most expensive, the Royal Suite, costs 2,500 pounds, or around $4,375, including the standby Rolls-Royce and chauffeur.

The restored neo-Greek building, formerly St. George's hospital, overlooks the gardens of Buckingham Palace.

Given its grand exterior proportions the interior is surprisingly intimate and residential, in the opulent style of a 19th century aristocratic home.

However, the hotel has caused a bit of a stir in Britain, where many prefer their luxury understated and well-worn. The Guardian newspaper said the interior "seems to derive from the apartment of some high-class, successful Second Empire tart."

Despite a few such reviews, and the recession, business has been better than expected, said Keith Waldon, the company's marketing manager.

Mrs. Hunt, who used to avoid publicity, attributes this partly to herself. "I recognize the part that I can play in the public relations part," she said during an interview in the hotel's library-bar.

Mrs. Hunt, at 69, has a gentle and unaffected manner, and speaks with a light Texas accent.

Her privately held Rosewood Hotels, as well as its sister investment company Rosewood Financial Inc., are subsidiaries of Rosewood Corp., which in turn is owned by the Caroline Hunt Trust Estate based in Dallas. Her only involvement in the oil business is through a few investments, said Waldon.

Rosewood Hotels owns the Mansion on Turtle Creek and the Crescent Court in Dallas. It manages the Bel-Air in Los Angeles.

A consortium from Abu Dhabi led by the ruler, Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan, bought the old St. George's hospital four years ago, renovated it into the Lanesborough and built an adjoining office building for $385 million.

Mrs. Hunt's idea is that the hotel's customers should feel like welcome, non-paying guests in a stately home.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor should balance income needs, risk

By Bill Doyle

Q: My wife and I are in our 70s, with a comfortable income of $28,000 a year. No frills. Our house is paid for, etc. We have $20,000 in Ginnie Mae mutual funds and $75,000 in certificates of deposit paying 5 to 6 percent.

Doyle

A financial adviser is encouraging us to invest $20,000 in preferred stock of an electric and gas utility that has paid above-average dividends since 1900. We are a little reluctant to risk a large amount of our savings, preferring to keep our money in insured CDs.

What do you suggest?

A: That depends on whether you need more income and whether you are willing to take on a bit of risk. If your answer is no to both, leave things as they are.

The utility you named in your letter has six issues of preferred stock, all now yielding about 8 percent. That number is arrived at by dividing a stock's current market price by its annual dividend payment.

All six of those preferreds pay fixed dividends, which will not change unless the company falls upon particularly hard financial times. Count that as most unlikely for this and most other – not all – utilities.

One rather small risk is that the preferred stock might be called in and paid off at lower than the price at which you buy. All six of the preferreds you are considering have call features, giving the company the right to redeem them at prices set at the time the shares were issued.

But you won't have to worry about that unless interest rates in general drop even lower than their present levels.

Another risk is that the market price of the stock might fall after you buy it. That happens to fixed-income securities when interest rates in the marketplace rise.

High-quality preferred stocks are conservative investments, suitable for people seeking steady income. The rap against most preferred stocks is their dividends never rise. The exceptions to the rule are "variable rate" preferreds, whose dividends rise and fall with overall interest rates, and "participating" preferreds, which are entitled to fixed dividends and also to additional dividends paid on common stock.

Q: I own a few hundred shares of utility stock, and I have received a proxy for the company's annual stockholder meeting. It asks me to vote for approval to authorize additional shares of common stock.

My small number of shares will have little influence on the outcome. However, to protect my best interest, how should I vote?

A: Almost certainly, vote "yes." If those shares are authorized, the company will have them on hand for future business purposes. When they are issued, the shares will represent part ownership in the corporation.

All companies need authorized but unissued shares handy. Assuming those shares are used for worthwhile purposes, their issuance should help the utility prosper.

Q: A few months ago, my husband and I bought stock through a broker. We requested, in writing, that the stock be registered with the word "or" between our names. The certificate came with "and" between our names.

We asked the broker to change this. He replied that the certificate is fine as it is and, in the event one of us expires, he could "straighten it out." I doubt that. Can you advise how we can have the stock registered with "or" between our names?

A: No. That would be an unacceptable form of stock registration and is not permitted under Stock Transfer Association rules.

Putting "or" between names is fine for bank accounts and debt securities, such as bonds. But that's a no-no for stocks, which represent ownership in corporations. No transfer agent who knows the business will register stocks that way.

Irvan rallies

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Ernie Irvan, black-flagged for jumping the start, battled back through the field to win the NASCAR Save Mart 300 in race-record time on Sunday at Sears Point International Raceway.

Irvan, who beat pole-sitter Ricky Rudd to the line at the start of the 74-lap race, pushed his Chevrolet past Terry Labonte's Oldsmobile in turn 11 on lap 67 and held on for the victory.

It was Irvan's fourth career win and his second on a road course. He won at Watkins Glen last year.

Mark Martin was third in a Ford. Rudd was fourth in a Chevrolet, and Bill Elliott came fifth in another Ford.

It was a remarkably clean race — there were only three caution periods covering a total of eight laps.

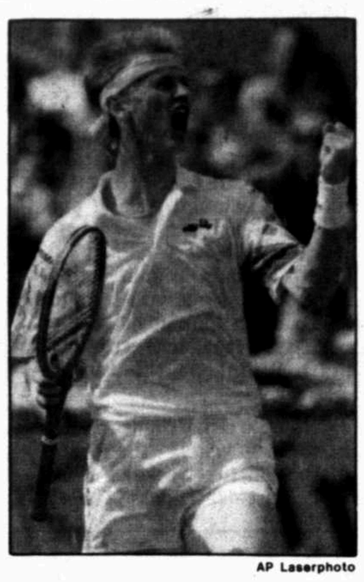

Irvan's winning average speed was 81.412 mph, a new race record. The time of the race was 2.17:25, and Irvan's margin of victory was 3.19 seconds.

"I never really got mad," Irvan said of being bumped last place at the start after being black-flagged. "It was just one of those things. There's nothing you can do about it."

Davey Allison, who had a trouble-filled day and finished 28th, retained his lead in the Winston Cup standings with 1,773 points.

Loser Petr Korda
...a premature celebration

Courier halfway to slam

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — Nothing fancy. Just another typical Jim Courier performance — steady, powerful and unbeatable.

Courier wore down a nervous Petr Korda 7-5, 6-2, 6-1 Sunday to win the French Open for the second year in a row, strengthen his grip on the No. 1 ranking and move halfway to a Grand Slam.

When Courier won the Australian Open in January, he celebrated by jumping into the Yarra river. This time, he paid a golf-swing tribute to Johnny Carson in a courtside box and gave his acceptance speech in French.

"There wasn't anything around to jump in, so I'll make do," Courier said. Referring to the Seine, he said, "It's not close enough. If if was across the street, we would have made it two for two."

Courier said his third Grand Slam title is as sweet as the first two. Cradling the winner's trophy, he said "it's just nice to have your name stenciled on something that beautiful.

"It is extraordinary. The Grand Slams have such a deep feeling. When you finally get through them and win one, it is really hard to describe. It's just an adrenaline rush."

Courier said he came to Paris not with the aim of defending his title but of adding a new one.

"I didn't know how I was going to be coming in to play again here after last year," he said. "I wasn't sure how I was going to react mentally. I am very proud of the way I went out there and played to win, instead of not to lose."

The match had none of the drama or excitement of Saturday's women's final, in which Monica Seles beat Steffi Graf 6-2, 3-6, 10-8.

The women's match lasted two hours and 43 minutes; Courier demolished Kõrda in just 1:59. It was the most one-sided men's final since 1988 when Mats Wilander beat Henri Lecõnte by the same score.

Korda said Courier played "like a machine." But it wasn't a case of Courier playing spectacular tennis.

Instead, the tone of the match was set by Korda, who showed flashes of brilliance early but eventually succumbed to nerves (many), unforced errors (49) and double faults (9).

NBA turns 'bullish'

■ The Chicago Bulls have set the NBA playoff script and they are following it to a tee.

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Beating the Chicago Bulls once is not much of a feat this year.

Beating them twice in a row is proving to be impossible.

The Bulls, who split their first two home games in three consecutive series, have now won Game 3 on the road on all three occasions, including Sunday night's 94-84 victory over Portland that gave them a 2-1 lead in the NBA Finals.

"We talked about champions getting off the floor and coming back," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "We talked a lot about that yesterday."

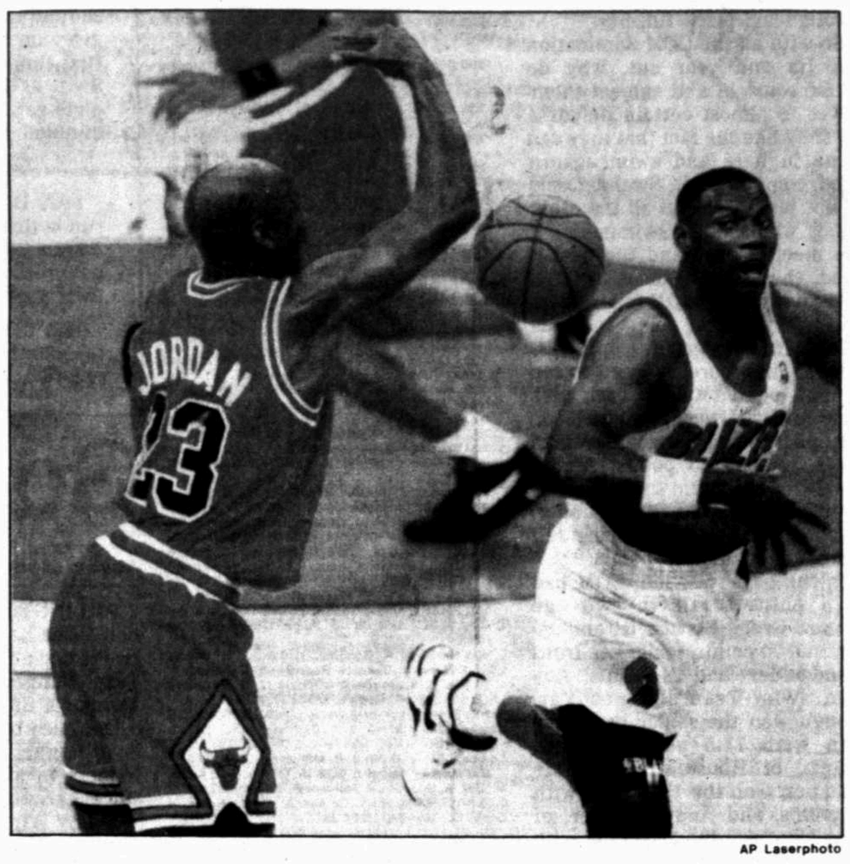

It was the Trail Blazers' first loss at home in nine playoff games and matched the franchise's low point total in postseason history.

"I think when we have our backs against the wall, we come out a little more focused," said Michael Jordan, who scored 26 points. "We let our defense lead us. That's the mark of a good team."

With their fifth victory in eight playoff road games, the Bulls continued to take a roller-coaster ride in the postseason, in sharp contrast to their romp in 1991 when they won 15 of 17 games on the way to their first NBA championship.

Chicago has six defeats in this year's playoffs, but they have not lost consecutive games.

"It's been our trademark in the playoffs; we've been able to bounce back," guard John Paxson said. "We've been a good road team. Now I hope we don't have a letdown in Game 4."

Portland's Jerome Kersey, right, knocks the ball away from Chicago's Michael Jordan during NBA playoff action Sunday.

The Bulls did it with defense, holding the Trail Blazers to 36 percent shooting. Portland also matched its playoff-low in scoring in franchise history, having lost 99-84 to Seattle in a 1978 Western Conference game.

"We made a point to forget about offense and commit to our defense," Jackson said. "We were able to make them erratic through pressure. We were able to get them to turn the ball over."

"We played tired," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "Chicago controlled the tempo, we shot poorly and never got in a groove."

The homecourt advantage has vanished for the Western Conference, whose champion is 0-9 at home in the NBA Finals since 1989.

COM wins another title

■ Local swimmers defeat second place team by 1,950 points.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

In just-another-day-at-the-pool fashion, the City of Midland swim team brought home first place honors at the Inwest West Texas Invitational, held Saturday and Sunday at the Doug Russell Pool.

Just to say that COM brought home first place honors, though, is not nearly an adequate enough explanation of the dominance the team displayed. COM ran away with both girls' and boys top honors, and out-pointed overall second place finisher Amarillo by a whopping 1,950 points.

If that's not mind-boggling enough, try this one on for size: COM's boys' point total of 1,053.5 was six points shy of what the remaining nine teams in the pool had combined. And the COM girls' total of 1,439 was more than twice the point total of the other 11 teams combined. All tolled, COM amassed 2,492.5 points, while second place Amarillo Swim Team had 547. The Lubbock Swim Team was in third place overall with 398.

"They've worked as hard this week as they have all year," COM coach Brad Swendig said. "We pretty much knew we were going to win coming

Vincent wants to cut superstations out

■ Baseball's commissioner wants to limit cable TV access to games, especially the glut given to fans by the superstations.

By Diane Duston
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Baseball commissioner Fay Vincent has an idea for pumping more money into his sport, but it would mean an end to the superstations that pump so much baseball into American homes.

It also would take an act of Congress.

At issue: a section of copyright law that allows cable television easy access to baseball through local stations broadcasting major league games. Vincent wants it repealed.

Consumer advocates, the National Association of Broadcasters and the cable industry are fighting congressional action, saying it would cheat fans.

The owners of two superstations who own two major league baseball teams also oppose changing the law.

But Vincent says: "Superstations deprive fans of a wide range of options. We wish to provide fans exposure to all baseball teams."

More than a dozen local broadcast stations with local sports contracts are picked up by satellite and sent to cable outlets, but the three that dominate are WTBS of Atlanta, WGN of Chicago and WWOR of New York, with 57.6 million, 34.9 million and 13.5 million cable subscribers respectively.

Hundreds of Braves, Cubs, White Sox and Mets games on the stations glut the market, to the point where fans no longer pay attention to their local teams, Vincent told a recent Senate subcommittee hearing.

They also make negotiating lucrative national broadcast contracts with national networks more difficult, he said.

Others say Vincent — trying to find money for a sport with multimillion dollar player contracts — wants to get rid of the superstations as a first step toward making viewers pay for games individually.

Vincent denies it.

Jody Shapiro, director of Home Team Sports, a regional cable network that transmits Baltimore Orioles games, dismissed the idea that the superstations cut into home team loyalty.

But he said: "I have some sympathy with the notion that having a superstation in a market can affect the gate. If there is a game of national importance on a superstation you may have some people who say they don't want to go out to a game."

That's not likely until the end of the season, however, he said.

Technically, the superstations are local broadcasters who negotiate with their home team for local rights to games. Besides baseball, the stations carry other sports, TV reruns, movies and original programming. Satellite distribution companies sell them as cable channels all over the country.

The way to kill the superstations is to repeal a section of law called the "compulsory license," which allows cable to pick up broadcast programs without permission from the shows' creators.

In baseball, the commissioner is considered the creator of programming and although he negotiates all national broadcast contracts, he is blocked by the compulsory license law from control of superstation games.

The Motion Picture Association of America also wants the law changed so Hollywood can have more control over how films and television programs are used.

There is some talk in the House of amending the bill regulating cable to include repeal of the compulsory license.

At a recent congressional hearing, Braves and WTBS owner Ted Turner railed against changing the law.

"We wouldn't need a compulsory license for the Braves to be on Superstation TBS, except for the anti-trust exemption that gives the League iron control over national television rights," Turner said.

He noted that the Braves pay Major League Baseball about $10 million a year because they are on a superstation.

The Tribune Co., owner of WGN and the Cubs which also pays extra for superstation carriage, is equally adamant about protecting the compulsory license.

The whole issue wouldn't matter so much if baseball weren't so dependent on television contracts to pay players an average $1 million each a year.

The money the baseball commissioner raises from national network and cable contracts is pooled and disbursed evenly among the teams. The only national contracts are with CBS and ESPN.

COM: Locals dominate meet, individual points

(From 1C)

in. What we try to do is force individual races."

Take away the team results and focus on the individuals and still COM comes away in commanding style.

Of the 56 events swam Sunday, COM had 101 of the 168 1st-through-3rd place finishes.

So with all the COM domination year in and year out, why do teams come in and subject themselves to almost certain defeat?

"They like the fact that they can come in here and swim against good competition," Swendig said of not just COM, but all the other teams who send in swimmers. "If the meet is good and the pool is good, they like to come."

Individually, COM swimmers amassed the most points in seven of the 10 different age groups.

COM girls scored a clean sweep in high point totals in each division: Allison Owens (seniors) compiled 53 points; Monica Stroman (13-14) totalled 83 points; Amber Goodwin (11-12) finished with 96 points; Ellen Brown (10-and-under) had 77 points, and Catherine Jelf (8-and-under) had 43 points.

In the boys' disivion, COM had high point totals in two age groups: Gregg Strauss (10-and-under) had 74 points, while Lee Irons (8-and-under) had 34 points. Abilene Swim Team's Lance Yarbrough won the senior boys division with 71.5 points; Glenn Counts, of Houston's Blue Tide Aquatics, won the 13-14 boys with 90 points, and Andy Gardner, of Blue Tide, won the 11-12 boys with 97 points.

Wilson hurls gem on birthday

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Trevor Wilson pitched a two-hitter on his 26th birthday and Cory Snyder continued his hot hitting with his eighth RBI in two days as the San Francisco Giants beat the Houston Astros 3-0 Sunday.

Wilson (5-5) stopped a personal three-game losing streak in throwing his first shutout since Oct. 5, when he beat Los Angeles on a two-hitter. In winning for the first time since May 19, Wilson joined Bill Swift as the only Giants to throw a complete game. Swift, who has three, is on the disabled list.

Braves 9, Padres 4

SAN DIEGO — David Justice hit a two-run homer and a two-run triple to go above .200 for the first time this year and Atlanta pounded San Diego, completing a sweep of their three-game series.

The defending NL champions won for the eighth time in nine games to even their record at 28-28, the first time they've been at .500 since May 8.

Dodgers 1, Reds 0

LOS ANGELES — Tom Candiotti pitched a six-hitter and Brett Butler drove in the game's only run with a fifth-inning single as Los Angeles defeated Cincinnati.

Candiotti (6-4) tossed his second shutout of the season and 10th in 216 career starts, going the distance for the fourth time this year. He struck out five and walked one.

Pirates 3, Mets 0

PITTSBURGH — Randy Tomlin continued his mastery of the Mets with a six-hit shutout and Pittsburgh took advantage of third baseman Dave Magadan's error in a three-run sixth inning as the Pirates blanked New York.

Despite a 15-1 loss Saturday night — Pittsburgh's worst loss in 14 years — the Pirates took three of four in the weekend series between the NL East contenders. The Pirates have won seven of 10 since losing 11 of 12, including eight of nine on a West Coast trip.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

MONTREAL — John VanderWal's bases-loaded pinch single in the bottom of the ninth inning drove home the winning run.

Tim Wallach doubled off Bob Scanlan (1-2) to start the ninth and Gary Carter hit an infield single. Wallach holding second. The runners advanced on a wild pitch before pinch-hitter Bret Barberie was intentionally walked, loading the bases and setting the stage for VanderWal, whose single to right scored pinch-runner Steve Lyons.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Ozzie Smith hit a two-run single with two outs in the ninth inning to give St. Louis a victory over Philadelphia, snapping the Cardinals' five-game losing streak.

Philadelphia's John Kruk, the major league's leading hitter with a .386 average at the start of play, went 0 for 5 and never hit a ball out of the infield.

Gonzalez connects three times

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez had three home runs, including a two-run shot in the eighth, as the Texas Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 5-4 Sunday night.

Gonzalez became the fifth player in Rangers' history to hit three homers in a game, and the first since Larry Parrish in 1985.

Bobby Witt (7-4) was nearly perfect the first five innings. Witt, who improved to 10-3 against Minnesota, went eight innings for his fourth straight victory, allowing six hits and four runs.

White Sox 6, Athletics 1

CHICAGO — Charlie Hough pitched a three-hitter and Robin Ventura had three hits, including a homer and a run-scoring double, as Chicago beat Oakland to snap a four-game losing streak.

It was only the second victory in the last 12 games for the White Sox, while Oakland had its five-game winning streak snapped.

Warren Newson hit his first homer of the season to break a 1-1 tie in a two-run fourth inning and Ventura hit his fourth in the fifth inning.

Brewers 10, Angels 3

MILWAUKEE — Paul Molitor and Dante Bichette each hit home runs and Milwaukee used three three-run innings to beat California for its eighth victory in 10 games.

The Brewers completed their first three-game sweep of the Angels since 1988 and moved back to a season-best three games over .500 for the first time since May 2.

The frustrated Angels, meanwhile, lost for the 17th time in 21 games.

Red Sox 4, Indians 0

BOSTON — Joe Hesketh and Danny Darwin combined on a seven-hitter as Boston beat Cleveland.

It was only Boston's third victory in nine games and its first in that span without Roger Clemens pitching.

It was the eighth time the Indians have been shut out in 56 games this season.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 1

BALTIMORE — Mike Mussina allowed one run in 7⅔ innings and Cal Ripken had three RBI singles, leading Baltimore past Toronto.

The victory pushed the Orioles back into first place in the American League East, percentage points ahead of the Blue Jays. Baltimore limited Toronto to just five runs in winning two of three over the weekend.

Ripken has hit in 16 straight games to raise his batting average to .287, the highest since opening day.

Yankees 6, Tigers 5

NEW YORK — Jim Leyritz's two-run homer in the fifth inning lifted New York past Detroit, snapping the Yankees' four-game losing streak.

With the Tigers leading 5-4, Danny Tartabull led off the fifth with a single and Leyritz followed with his fourth homer, a high fly over the left-field wall.

Mickey Tettleton hit his second career grand slam in the top of the fifth.

Royals 4, Mariners 1

KANSAS CITY — Kevin McReynolds had two hits and drove in a run to extend his hitting streak to 13 games and reliever Rick Reed held Seattle to an unearned run in 6⅔ innings as Kansas City escaped last place for the first time this season.

Rahal uses slick pass to win at Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Bobby Rahal drove a steady race and came away the winner of Sunday's chaotic Detroit Grand Prix after a slick pass on the narrow Belle Isle circuit.

Rahal, a two-time series champion and the current leader, took the lead 21 laps from the end of the 77-lap event by passing Paul Tracy and Michael Andretti as they were locked in a wheel-banging battle for the top spot.

But it was Rahal's Chevrolet-A-powered Lola that came away in front and stayed there.

John Andretti, driving Midland's Hall/VDS entry, placed 21st after being forced to pit on lap 25 with a faulty shifting mechanism. The car was finally withdrawn on lap 45.

Tracy, filling in for injured Rick Mears, was something of a surprise Sunday as he passed Andretti, the defending series champion, for the lead on lap 38 and pulled off to leads of up to 11 seconds.

But the 23-year-old Canadian's margin disappeared when one of five full-course caution flags came out on lap 48 after Scott Pruett blew his engine.

Edwards wins PGA playoff

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — David Edwards, who gained a share of the lead with birdies on the last two holes of regulation, won the Memorial tournament on Sunday with a par on the second playoff hole.

Edwards scored the second individual victory of his 14-season career when he beat Rick Fehr with a two-putt par on the 17th hole of the rain-soaked Muirfield Village Golf Club course.

Fehr, who had missed the green short and right in something approaching total darkness, chipped from deep rough to eight feet and had that putt to extend the playoff.

Had he done so, it almost certainly would have meant a return Monday morning. A 2-hour, 15-minute rain delay earlier in the day had the playoff starting under gray and gloomy skies and ending in darkness at 8:55 p.m., EDT.

But he missed it and Edwards had his first title since 1984. The victory was worth $234,000 from the total purse of $1.3 million.

Fehr, whose only tour triumph came in the 1988 B.C. Open, and Edwards each shot 67s. However, Edwards got his spot in the playoff in more dramatic fashion, moving into a tie with a birdie-birdie finish.

Payne Stewart and Joey Sindelar, a 3-stroke leader after 54 holes, missed the playoff by a single stroke, finishing at 274.

Stewart, who will defend his U.S. Open title in two weeks, took a share of the lead when he hit a 1-iron to 18 feet and made the eagle putt on the 15th hole of regulation play.

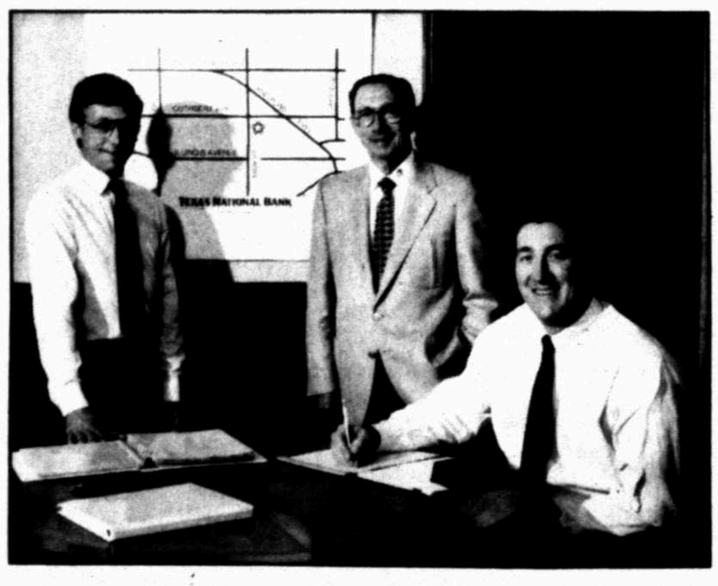

But he dropped back with a bogey after taking a drop from casual water on the 17th hole. A par on the 18th gave him a round of 66.

Summer cage league has meeting Tuesday

Staff report

The Summer Basketball League, for any kids from ninth grade through seniors, will hold an organizational meeting at Midland College gym at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Growing West with Texas National . . .
Texas National West to open June 29th.

Fred McCann, Vice President
Leon Shrader, Vice President
Jeb Hughes, Senior Vice President

A lot of banks talk about convenient service for their customers. Texas National is making it possible. On June 29th, Texas National Bank of Midland will open Texas National West, our third banking facility in Midland -- and a truly full service bank for west Midland.

There will be some familiar, friendly faces at Texas National West. Jeb Hughes, Leon Shrader, and Fred McCann will be back in west Midland, and ready to do business.

New location. Familiar faces. Texas National West. Opening soon at Midkiff and Cuthbert.

McConnell, Swingle send Angels to fifth straight

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — Walt McConnell's two-out, two-strike, two-run double in the eighth inning lifted the Midland Angels to a 4-2 victory over the San Antonio Missions here Sunday night, extending Midland's Texas League winning streak to five games.

McConnell also had a run scoring single in Midland's two-run sixth inning.

Paul Swingle (4-4) went the distance for the first time in his pro career to get the win. Swingle gave up only seven hits, one walk and struckout seven Missions.

Swingle wasn't touched until the seventh inning when he gave up back-to-back, two-out homers to Mike Busch and John Deutsch. That tied the score at 2-2.

The five game winning streak is the longest of the season by the Angels.

Midland won five of six games from San Antonio and now head for El Paso today to play the league leading Diablos. Midland trails El Paso by 6½ games with 12 games left to play in the first half of the Texas League West race.

Bies escapes Trevino

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Don Bies took advantage of Lee Trevino's 17th-hole bogey Sunday to win the PaineWebber Invitational senior golf tournament with a tournament record 13-under-par total.

It was the first victory for Bies since he won the 1989 GTE Kaanapali Classic.

Bies moved into position for his sixth senior title on the 501-yard 16th, reaching the green with a 3-wood and two-putting from 80 feet.

Trevino, who had won five of the last eight senior events, maintained his perch as second-round co-leader throughout the day. Playing with the next threesome, Trevino duplicated Bies' birdie on the same hole and set the stage for the dramatic finish.

Bies, who earned $67,500, created an anxious moment at the final hole when his sand wedge approach flirted with water to the left of the green. However, he saved par from the fringe, moments before Trevino's trouble at the 142-yard 17th.

Landing within 6 feet of the pin, Trevino putted over the right lip, 3 feet past the hole. The bogey came when he pulled the next putt left and the ball lipped out.

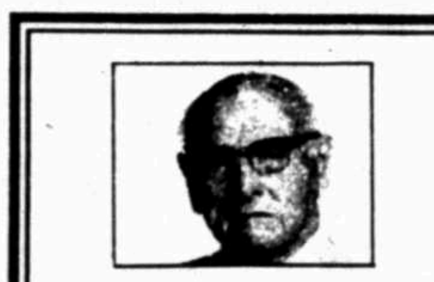

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who tied the course record with a 7-under 65, finished three shots off the pace. Bobby Nichols, who shared the first-round lead with Jim Colbert, joined Rodriguez at 10-under 206, along with Mike Hill and Gene Littler. All had final-round 69s.

Colbert and Rocky Thompson were another shot back. Thompson arrived at the 514-yard 18th one stroke off the lead, but yanked his tee shot into water.

Okamoto takes title

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Japan's Ayako Okamoto won her first LPGA tournament in two years Sunday with a three-stroke victory at the McDonald's Championship.

MONDAY, JUNE 8, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your diligence will bring a big payoff. In September, redouble your efforts to reach a coveted career goal. Mixing business with pleasure produces wonderful results in late fall. Transitional events make December an exhilarating period for your personal life. Take a new direction in romance early in 1993. Creative ventures will greatly expand your horizons next spring. Embrace original ideas.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: first lady Barbara Bush, comedian Joan Rivers, country singer Boz Scaggs, Justice Byron White.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold on to your ideals. Do not allow distractions or daydreams to deter you from your long-range goals. Emphasize quality over quantity when selecting projects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): See what the day brings before you make any major moves. Be prudent to avoid upsetting your closest ally. A good credit rating and nice possessions often impress those who lack them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go ahead and use your influence if trying to accomplish something of vital importance. A love relationship could have you thinking seriously about settling down.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Once you get rid of certain distractions, it will be easy to buckle down to work. A new friend could join your social circle under quite unusual circumstances. Roll out the red carpet.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Continue to pursue yesterday's agreeable occupations. Complete old business before launching a bold new plan. Keep a watchful eye out this evening to protect your property.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your instincts help you capitalize on a special social situation. Try to maintain your objectivity if petty annoyances surface. Weigh your words carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The work week commences on a highly optimistic note. It is full steam ahead for your career ambitions! If you act quickly, you can profit from an innovative moneymaking scheme.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Suspicions concerning a friend or financial deal could make you edgy this morning. From afternoon on, it is clear sailing for a community project.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): Your enthusiasm this morning could stem from your financial involvement in a community activity. Curb a tendency to act pompous when on the defensive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone's personal shortcomings could strain a business relationship. There are certain advantages to staying out of the spotlight. Take advantage of a subtle ploy to advance your prestige.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A last-minute change of plans could cause disappointment. Count 10 before saying what you really think or you may have to forgo the company of a visitor. Play a waiting game.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A promising day at work for those who keep their cool. A troubling situation could find you at odds with a coworker. In love relationships, balance sensitivity to others' needs with independence.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are both ambitious and very popular with their peers. Their love of life and competitive spirit are greatly admired by more timid souls. Count on these bright youngsters to graduate at the top of their class. To them, a good education is their passport to success.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J9762 ♡85 ◇AK1093 ♣7
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Your trick-taking ability is too great for a jump to game, which would be preemptive, but your high-card strength is woefully inadequate for a forcing spade raise. Highlight your source of tricks by bidding two diamonds, then jump to game in spades at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J9762 ♡85 ◇AK1093 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Yes, if you bid four spades you rate to make it. However, there are all sorts of hands partner could hold, including a number of minimums, which would yield 12 tricks. We recommend a jump shift to three diamonds, a one-round force by a passed hand, to be followed by four spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A87632 ♡AKQ ◇A63 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—An awkward hand, to be sure. You have a poor suit, but your overall strength, with all prime values, is rather potent. You have to tell a white lie about something, and we opt for suit quality. Jump to three spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♡Q72 ◇K852 ♣Q762
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your holdings in the minor suits do not instill great confidence in a no-trump game. Since you can't raise hearts with only three-card support, the only option open is a false preference to three spades, and await further developments.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ93 ♡AKJ85 ◇A4 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your jump shift committed your side to game, but in which strain? Bid four hearts, just in case partner took a false preference to your first suit with a hand such as in the previous example. That will ensure landing in an eight-card fit—if one exists.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K93 ♡K8 ◇984 ♣AKQJ10
Your right-hand opponent opens with a weak two hearts. What action do you take?
A.—Give this hand to a panel of experts and we're sure they'll come up with several different answers. We feel your best chance for game is in no trump, and, therefore, we would choose to overcall two no trump.

Tammy Faye Bakker apparently decides to cancel Texas move

DALLAS — Tammy Faye Bakker apparently has changed plans to move to Texas.

Bakker

The ex-wife of fallen television evangelist Jim Bakker, who has been living in Orlando, Fla., had been reportedly planning to lease a house in Colleyville, about 21 miles west of Dallas.

But Scott Murray, sports anchor for KXAS-TV, said the owners of the house, just down the street from his home, told him Ms. Bakker had decided not to sign a contract.

"She's not coming," Murray said.

Ms. Bakker was granted a divorce in March from her husband, who is serving an 18-year federal prison sentence for fraud and conspiracy in his PTL ministry.

SALUDA, Va. — Pulitzer Prize-winning author Lewis B. Puller Jr. told Christchurch School graduates that he's proof that life offers second — and even third and fourth — chances.

Puller, a 1963 graduate of Christchurch, won the 1992 Pulitzer for his autobiography "Fortunate Son." He is the son of the Marine Corps' most decorated officer, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller.

Puller told the 66 graduates of the exclusive private school Saturday about his tribulations, including academic failures, alcoholism and the loss of both legs in a booby-trap explosion in Vietnam.

"By the time I graduated from college, I had flunked out of one school and was on academic and disciplinary probation at another," Puller said. "I was also well on my way to being an out-of-control alcoholic.

"I'm not proud of any of this, and I readily acknowledge that most of my problems, most of my misfortunes, were of my own making."

However, he told the graduates: "Remember this — life, more often than not, gives young men and young women second chances."

After returning from Vietnam, Puller obtained a law degree and now works as a lawyer for the Defense Department.

PHOENIX — Members of the heavy-metal band Metallica say their songs are inspired by something different than the usual sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll topics.

The thundering song "One," about a fully conscious, mute quadriplegic, draws upon Dalton Trumbo's "Johnny Got his Gun," according to an interview with the band in The Arizona Republic. Another song, 'The Shortest Straw,' is based on a book called "Naming Names," about the McCarthy era.

"We don't sing songs like, 'I want to rock and roll all night and party every day,'" said songwriter James Hetfield. "It's so blatantly obvious, it's going to get old real soon."

Not that the band doesn't enjoy rocking.

"You play the right choice of notes, and it just sounds so heavy," said guitarist Kirk Hammett. "I mean, sometimes you feel like you can just bash people's heads in just with riffs."

Metallica was in Phoenix for two shows this week.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. — Life is not always easy and you're stuck with what you get, says nationally syndicated radio talk show host Rush Limbaugh.

"Folks, for 17 years in radio I was a miserable failure," he said in a commencement address Friday at Cape Girardeau Central High School, which he graduated from in 1969.

"Life is not fair, folks, and if you spend your time trying to make the playing field even, you're never going to excel," he said. "You have to accept life as it is."

Limbaugh also took a shot at Ross Perot, suggesting this is how Perot would answer questions about global warming: "Everybody knows that if it gets hot, all you do is cool it off."

BOSTON — Folk singer Tracy Chapman's recent tour rehearsals in Los Angeles were cut short by the riots that followed the police acquittals in the Rodney King case, and she wants to do something to help rebuild the city.

"In recent years, everyone's done all those large benefit concerts, like Live Aid and Amnesty International," she said. "But maybe we should consider something like 'WattsStax' to benefit the inner city."

Chapman said "WattsStax" was a benefit record that came out after the earlier Watts riots in Los Angeles.

* * *

LOS ANGELES — An arrest warrant has been issued for rap singer, Andre Rommel Young, known as Dr. Dre in the group N.W.A., for an alleged attack on his record producer, authorities said.

Young was charged with assault using a deadly weapon and battery for an alleged attack on music producer Damon Thomas at Thomas' home on May 5, said the warrant, issued Friday.

Thomas suffered a broken jaw, the warrant said.

"The incident stems from supposedly inappropriate remarks that Mr. Thomas had made to Mr. Young's girlfriend," said city attorney's spokesman Ted Goldstein.

Young already faced charges in New Orleans in a hotel brawl that injured four police officers and a teen-ager.
