Growing complexities in divorce laws make it less advisable for most divorcing couples to try to negotiate without the assistance of a specialist in family law.

Weinberger: Decision hurt U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told congressional investigators today that "the interests of the United States were damaged overall" by President Reagan's decision to sell arms secretly to Iran.

"The way to avoid that is not to embark on a policy of this kind," he said as the 11-week-old Iran-Contra hearings neared an end.

Testifying for the second day, Weinberger said he hopes Congress will allow presidents continued leeway on when to notify Congress that a covert operation has been authorized.

"A rigid time or an inflexible time is not a very good thing," he said. Weinberger said he generally favors an existing legal requirement for notification of Congress in a "timely fashion."

Weinberger was the 29th and last witness to be interrogated in public session at the nationally televised hearings on the secret U.S. sale of arms to Iran and diversion of profits to benefit the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Leaders of the House and Senate investigating panels hoped to wrap up Weinberger's testimony by early afternoon before adjourning for the final time.

The panels intend to question several CIA officials privately later this week, and then spend the month of August writing a formal report on the affair that has dealt major political damage to President Reagan.

The hearings ended as they had begun — under the glare of television lights in the ornate Caucus Room of the Russell Senate Office Building.

Since the hearings got under way on May 5, investigators have heard Cabinet officers describe how they tried unsuccessfully in 1985 and again in 1986 to persuade Reagan not to go ahead with the arms sale initiative, only to find the president going ahead with the plan out of concern for the American hostages held in Lebanon.

Iran-Contra Affair

The joint committees also heard testimony that while Reagan approved the arms sales, he never knew that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a staff deputy at the National Security Council, was helping provide military assistance to the Contras at a time when Congress had banned all direct or indirect U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan insurgents.

In a dramatic moment last month, the lawmakers heard former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter say that he alone authorized the diversion of arms sales proceeds to the Contras, and never informed the president.

Poindexter resigned and North was fired last Nov. 25 after the fund diversion was uncovered by Justice Deparrtment investigators, and Congress is still trying — nine months later — to answer lingering questions in the affair.

"The evidence clearly is that the president of the United States did not authorize the diversion," said Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, as Weinberger listened from the witness table.

"In summation, there is and was no smoking gun," DeWine said.

DeWine offered his own summation after questioning Weinberger about the current legal requirement that a president notify Congress in a "timely fashion" about covert operations.

Reagan kept Congress in the dark about the Iranian arms sales for nearly a year, until they were disclosed in a Middle Eastern magazine. Some lawmakers have called for tighter notification requirements.

Weinberger said he was against rigid timetables.

"Generally speaking I think notification should be given a short time after" a presidential decision is made to authorize a covert action, he said.

But, he said, a "rigid time or an inflexible time is not a very good thing."

Earlier, one panel member said Reagan would have had to break off the arms sales if either Weinberger or Secretary of State George P. Shultz had told Congress about them.

"That would have done more to discourage the president from going forward after they heard from the Hill in very strong language" than resignation threats from either Cabinet officer, said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine.

Last week Weinberger told the committees that he argued repeatedly against selling arms to Iran in return for American hostages, but had been blunted by presidential aides who pushed him out of the process and furnished skewed intelligence information to the president to bolster their arguments.

On Sunday, two investigators in the Iran-Contra affair say laws probably were broken in the secret U.S. initiative, despite Reagan's assertions to the contrary.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, chairman of the House panel looking into the matter, and Attorney General Edwin Meese III both said they think it likely that statutes were violated.

Tehran radio reports naval exercises start

KUWAIT (AP) — Iran said today it was starting naval maneuvers in the Strait of Hormuz and warned ships and aircraft to stay clear of its territorial waters as a U.S.-flag Kuwaiti tanker under U.S. Navy escort steamed into the strait. Tehran radio said preliminary operations of the maneuvers have begun in the Persian Gulf, and the military warned ships and planes to avoid Iranian territorial waters for three days as of Monday midnight (4:30 p.m. Monday EDT).

Pentagon sources in Washington said at the U.S.-escorted tanker Gas Prince was inside the Strait of Hormuz itself as of this morning. Iran has deployed Silkworm anti-ship missiles at the strait.

Another convoy including U.S. warships is scheduled to sail north through the strait and into the gulf on Thursday.

The strait is the Persian Gulf's only outlet. It connects the gulf with the Gulf of Oman and Arabian Sea to the south.

The missile destroyer Kidd and missile frigate Crommelin accompanied the 46,732-ton Gas Prince, which left Kuwait on Saturday for Imari, Japan, carrying liquefied petroleum gas. The 550-mile journey through the gulf takes 2½ days.

The guided missile cruiser USS Fox sailed nearby on Sunday.

Iran said its maneuvers, codenamed "Martyrdom," were to prepare Iranian forces against possible U.S. aggression and in honor of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims killed in clashes with Saudi police on Friday in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, Islam's holiest city. The fanatical Revolutionary Guards were conducting the naval exercises.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary and spiritual leader, today vowed revenge against America, holding it responsible for the Mecca deaths, Tehran Radio reported in a broadcast monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

The United States earlier denied any involvement in the Mecca incident.

Iran claimed today that the casualty toll from the Mecca clashes had risen to at least 600 Iranians dead and about 4,500 wounded. The Saudis say 402 people, 275 of them Iranian, were killed and 649 injured.

Shiite Moslem group vows to punish Saudi Arabia and the United States for the deaths of Iranian pilgrims in Mecca — 4A

A communique issued today by Iran's military command said it "has issued a serious request to all shipping centers and military and civilian aircraft to halt all their air and sea traffic in...(Iran's) regional waters...in the Persian Gulf and Oman Sea for three days starting from 2400 hours tonight," Tehran radio reported.

A Kuwaiti shipping source meanwhile said that the Bridgeton, another U.S.-flag Kuwaiti tanker holed by a mine while escorted with the Gas Prince by U.S. Navy ships July 24, loaded 230,000 tons of oil, moved away from the Sea Island loading terminal and was at anchor. The source demanded anonymity.

The Pentagon said it suspected Iran planted the mine.

The Bridgeton might wait several more days before heading south on the return journey through the gulf, shipping sources said.

U.S. Rear Adm. Harold J. Bernsen said Sunday there had been "no alarms" and "no unusual incidents" connected with the Gas convoy.

On Saturday, the convoy passed without incident through gulf waters west of Iran's Farsi Island where the Bridgeton hit the mine.

Thomas: City, county have 'friendly' relationship

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A public forum historically has provided Midland's elected officials a place to make political points with constituents when one entity has a special interest that involves the other.

Public meetings involving city or county officials routinely are filled with political rhetoric, with one entity often labeling the other as "bad guys who don't care about us good guys."

But when the cameras are silenced, city and county officials describe their relationship a little differently — chalking up all the backtalk to fun and games.

"Some groups can't even sit down and talk to each other, but we get along exceedingly well," said County Commissioner Win Brown.

"It's a good situation, a healthy situation. It's a situation where the bottom line is saving dollars."

Wheeling and dealing behind closed doors is usually amicable because both city and county officials realize each other's importance to making government work efficiently, Brown said.

The commissioner said the county owns a lot of the heavier equipment and it often loans the machinery to the city so they don't have to hire a contractor to do the job.

"The bottom line is the taxpayer's dollar and how we can make the best use of it."

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said he and his colleagues from the county enjoy a "healthy and friendly" relationship.

Thomas said city-county government has provided residents with "first-class" library and fire and ambulance services as the result of negotiations between elected officials.

"For years, the county has been responsible for the library and they've done an outstanding job," Thomas said. "The city, in turn, said it would take care of fire protection. Subsequently, we got in to the ambulance business as well."

Oil field service companies recalling workers

DALLAS (AP) — Oil field service companies are quietly calling back employees furloughed when oil prices slid below $10 per barrel.

Executives said although a full-fledged recovery isn't under way, they're encouraged by crude selling for more than $21 a barrel.

In recent weeks, many energy company stocks have traded at 52-week highs; domestic drilling activity is up by more than 250 rigs from last year's low of 663.

If the trend holds, the industry will improve, industry leaders say.

"Last year all the news was bad," said Guy Marcus, a spokesman for Halliburton Co. "Now you pick up the phone and it is good news."

Companies have responded cautiously.

Last month, Halliburton, an international oil services company based in Dallas, recalled 50 workers at its oil field services division in Oklahoma. Halliburton cut 18,000 jobs last year because of the collapse in drilling activity.

Lone Star Technologies, the Dallas-based parent of Lone Star Steel Co., a manufacturer of drill pipe, has quietly called back 300 workers in recent months. Lone Star lost $9.3 million in the first quarter of 1987 and laid off about two-thirds of its 4,000 employees in 1986.

There is also hope for a Wall Street turnaround as stocks of oil exploration and production companies have risen in response to improved earnings and higher crude oil prices.

Prices firmed after OPEC agreed on production quotas and rose on continuing fears of disruption of world oil markets from the Iran-Iraq war.

When crude prices fell about 60 percent last year, the oil services industry bore the brunt of the collapse. Total spending on oil rigs, tools, drill pipe and related products and services fell to $9 billion in 1986 from $40 billion in 1982.

Only recently has Halliburton, which has seen its worldwide employment decline by 68,000 since 1980, discontinued on a trial basis a furlough procedure in which its oil service employees take one week off without pay every two months.

"Bringing people back full time gives an indication of our expectations," Marcus said.

The manufacturers, distributors and processors of oil tubular products also were devastated by the downturn. Prices for pipe and tube, used in drilling wells, declined more sharply than other kinds of oil field equipment.

At Lone Star Technologies, the company is producing pipe at about 20 to 30 percent of its capacity, up about 5 percent from a year ago, said Judi Murrell, vice president of corporate relations.

The most important market indicator for pipe manufacturers, Ms. Murrell said, is the amount of footage drilled, a measurement of productivity of working oil rigs. Total footage drilled in the United States last year was 171 million feet compared with 320 million feet in 1985.

Lone Star expects this year's total footage drilled to be about the same as last year's, Ms. Murrell said.

But the trend still appears positive.

Heat wave continues across Midwest U.S.

Associated Press

The heat wave blamed for at least 72 deaths entered its 17th day today with no relief in sight until at least Tuesday in Kansas and Missouri, where almost 400 fans were overcome at a baseball game, and not for several days in Alabama, where the health department issued an alert warning people to take it easy.

"We're not seeing any drastic changes," Bill Herrmann, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Birmingham, Ala., said Sunday. "We do have a little weak front approaching Tuesday night or Wednesday that might increase shower activity. But it won't have much effect on temperatures."

"It's like living in the tropics — it's getting to be a way of life," said police dispatcher Nancy Bolyard in Moline, Ill., where the best thing to be said about the 101-degree high Sunday was that it was cooler than the 103 degrees Saturday.

Murdered man often stood up for others, friends say

Sims

RICHARDSON (AP) — A former college gymnast who was shot and killed after he chased down two purse-snatchers was the type of person who often stood up for others, his friends and family say.

Glenn Michael Sims, 25, a former University of Oklahoma gymnast, was shot in the heart Saturday after he drove three miles along a highway, chasing two women who had snatched a purse in a suburban shopping center parking lot.

Sims was responding to a woman's yells for help when he made the chase, Richardson police said. Friends said Sims actions were characteristic.

"Mike is the kind of kid where, if something wasn't right, he'd speak up and say so," said Mark Williams, assistant gymnastics coach at OU. "If he thought someone was getting a raw deal, he'd do something about it."

Two women, aged 23 and 17, were being held on investigative charges of murder and burglary, a spokeswoman for the Richardson police department said Sunday. The 17-year-old also was booked on an investigative charge of attempted murder for allegedly trying to shoot a police officer.

Police said Sims, who lived in Garland, a Dallas suburb that borders Richardson, was "attempting to be a Good Samaritan."

Friends said Sims was spending time with his parents in Garland after having received his master's degree in sports administration from OU.

Greg Buwick, head gymnastics coach at OU, said he had planned to talk to Sims this week about a job.

Buwick said Sims' death shocked him, but he wasn't surprised at the circumstances.

Silent screen actress who was Valentino's lover dies

Negri

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Pola Negri, the dark-haired seductress of the silent screen and real-life lover of Rudolph Valentino whose career went into decline with Valentino's death and the advent of the talkies, is dead.

The tempestuous, Polish-born actress died Saturday at Northeast Baptist Hospital, where she was being treated for a brain tumor complicated by pneumonia.

She was 88 years old by her own account, although other sources gave her year of birth as 1894 or 1897, which would have made her older.

An exotic, green-eyed beauty, Miss Negri already was playing the vamp in films in Poland and Germany when she came to the United States in 1923 and quickly became an American star.

She appeared in about 20 U.S. films before the advent of talkies in the late 1920s, which made her thick accent a handicap and forced her to return to Europe.

A trend-setter for fashion-conscious women of the time, she popularized painted toenails, turbans and high boots, and in her limited public appearances draped herself with diamonds and pearls that once belonged to Europe's royal families.

She had highly publicized affairs with Valentino and Charlie Chaplin and was living openly with Valentino when the heartthrob actor died in 1926.

"He and I were to be married the following week," she said in an interview years later. "I have never gotten over his death."

"The screen will never see his equal again. He didn't just thrill women. He hypnotized them. He had virility, sex appeal, intelligence, charm, good looks and something that no actor ever had before — or since."

That something was "mysticism," she said.

Miss Negri collapsed at Valentino's mobbed funeral in New York, and then took his body back to California by train as swooning, grief-stricken fans of the actor paid tribute along the way. She was accused of using the funeral train to advance her own career, and her box-office popularity soon began to drop.

In Berlin under the Nazis, Miss Negri found herself on a list of suspected "non-Aryans," and was prevented from working there until Adolf Hitler personally intervened because he was so taken with the exotic screen siren.

Newspapers in New York and London carried stories in 1935 linking Miss Negri romantically with Hitler. She denied they had ever met and won a lawsuit against the French magazine that initiated the story.

Born Apollonia Chalupec in what is now Poland, she paired the diminutive of her given first name with the name Negri, from an Italian poet who was a girlhood idol.

Films such as "Forbidden Paradise" in 1924 and "Hotel Imperial" in 1927 made her among the most memorable of Hollywood's seductresses.

Among her other American films were "Bella Donna," "The Cheat," "The Spanish Dancer," "Shadows of Paris," "Men," "Lily of the Dust," "The Charmer," "A Woman of the World," "Three Sinners," "The Secret Hour" and "The Woman From Moscow."

Her last film appearance was as a wealthy eccentric in the 1964 Disney movie "The Moon Spinners."

She was wed twice, to a count and a prince, but her marriages ended in divorce.

About 300 rally to protest Bork's nomination to court

DALLAS (AP) — A spirited rally opposing the nomination of federal appellate Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court drew jeers from a group of anti-abortion advocates who tried to disrupt the gathering.

About 300 people attended the protest at a Dallas park Sunday to hear speakers who vowed to block Bork's nomination, including the woman whose lawsuit spawned the landmark decision that legalized abortion.

"The nomination of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court represents a threat to our personal privacy. It is an insult to every woman who has had to face the decision about an abortion — and especially to every woman who had to seek a back-alley abortion," said Norma McCorvey, reading from a prepared statement.

Ms. McCorvey was "Jane Roe," in the lawsuit that resulted in the 1973 Roe. vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

Members of the Abortion Abolition Society clashed briefly with the protesters. Winston Wilder, leader of the group, was arrested for using a bullhorn without a permit.

"We want to restore some sanity to the Supreme Court," Wilder said before his arrest. "They have been legislating for a long time, and that is not their job. Bork will restore restraint to the court."

Bork is President Reagan's choice to replace retiring Justice Lewis F. Powell.

North tells Meese one story, Congress another

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Oliver L. North's testimony before the Iran-Contra committees repeatedly contradicted the statements of others, the greatest conflict of all, the record shows, was between the Marine lieutenant colonel and himself.

The story he told Attorney General Edwin Meese III last November, when the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contras first was revealed, is far different from the one he told the congressional committees during televised hearings last month.

Last November, according to Meese's testimony, "Colonel North said to me, without any question, that there were only three people in the government who knew anything about this: himself, (Rear Adm. John M.) Poindexter and (Robert C.) McFarlane."

Meese said then-CIA Director William J. Casey told him he didn't know.

But on July 9, North testified, "My recollection is Director Casey learned about it before the fact...Director Casey used several words to describe how he felt about it, all of which were effusive."

As for who conceived the diversion plan, by Meese's account, North in November gave credit to Amiram Nir, a former Israeli government counterterrorism expert.

But in July, North said it was first proposed in January 1986 by Manucher Ghorbanifar, an Iranian middleman, who "took me into the bathroom, and...suggested several incentives" — including that one.

What did President Reagan say about his knowledge?

According to North, "On Nov. 25 the president of the United States called me. In the course of that call, the president said to me words to the effect that, 'I just didn't know.'"

North told his aide at the National Security Council, Robert Earl, that Reagan said, "It's important that I not know," according to Earl's released testimony. Confronted with this North said, "I don't recall the conversation that way."

In his testimony, North not only disputed Poindexter and McFarlane, the two national security advisers he served, and Casey, his mentor on covert operations, but he contradicted Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams over what Abrams knew of the Contra resupply effort.

North was asked if Abrams — a chief salesman for the administration's Contra aid bills in Congress — was aware of the rebel supply operation run by North.

"Well, I certainly believed he was," North said.

Abrams insisted to the committee he had only limited knowledge.

And North had a much different view of what Secretary of State George P. Shultz thought of his activities than Shultz did.

Shultz, a chief opponent of the Iran arms deals, and North had strongly differing interpretations over what the secretary meant when he congratulated North at a reception.

North said Shultz "took me aside just weeks before I was summarily fired, put his arm around my shoulder and told me what a remarkable job I had done, keeping the Nicaraguan resistance alive. He knew, in sufficiently eloquent terms, what I had done."

"Did you, sir?" Senate Iran-Contra counsel Mark Belnick asked Shultz.

"No," Shultz replied. "I hardly knew Colonel North...I said to him...that I knew that he had extended himself to keep up the morale of these (Contra) leaders, and I appreciated it. To build on that remark this superstructure of implication is entirely unwarranted."

"I'm inclined to believe Oliver North," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a member of the House Iran-Contra panel. "He has a gift for hyperbole, but he's a true believer. He's swept along along by his convictions. I would not accuse him of consciously lying."

Judge to rule if boys carrying AIDS virus will go to school

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — A judge holds the key to the schoolhouse door for three young, hemophiliac brothers barred from class because they carry the AIDS virus.

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich is scheduled to rule whether the Ray brothers — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9 and Randy, 8 — should go back to DeSoto County's public schools when school begins on Aug. 24.

The controversy has left the Rays isolated and turned them into outcasts.

It has also caused many town residents to worry about the health of their schoolgoing children despite evidence that the AIDS virus is transmitted sexually, in the womb or through sharing tainted needles, not by casual contact.

Doctors believe the Ray brothers were infected through injections of blood-clotting products contaminated before donor screening for AIDS began.

The boys' parents, Louise and Clifford Ray, say the situation has provoked hysteria.

These days, the boys' cousins are usually the only ones who come to play on an old tire swing hung from a tree outside the Rays' sparsely furnished house.

"At school I used to have a lot of friends. Now I only have one. I miss them," said Ricky.

His brothers shy from conversation about the highly charged issue.

"They don't get cranked up like I do," said Ricky. "We want to be with the other kids."

Last fall, the school board barred the boys from class after they tested positive for AIDS antibodies, indicating that they carry the AIDS virus, although they have shown no symptoms of the deadly disease. The Rays moved to Bay Minette, Ala., but when the boys' school records caught up with them they decided to come back home and fight.

The school board offered the brothers a portable, self-contained classroom on campus, away from mainstream students. The family turned the proposition down.

The Rays sued the DeSoto County school system in June claiming illegal discrimination and asked a judge to order reinstatement.

Ms. Kovachevich ordered the latest medical update about the risk of getting acquired immune deficiency syndrome through casual contact and got a mixed message.

The Ray's pediatrician testified that the boys do not, and may never, display active symptoms of AIDS and said there is no known case of the disease being spread through casual contact.

Court-ordered antibody tests showed the virus hadn't spread to the parents or a 6-year-old sister, Candy, despite close daily contact.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The day was warm and pleasant, 77 at Spring Mill.

The six street commissioners met and drew orders on the treasurer to pay various bills. They then made a decision on John Sitgreave's request, made in behalf of his father, William Sitgreaves, "concerning the repairing of his House, the Corner of Chestnut & Fourth, which is built several feet over the lines on said Streets." This Sitgreave property was the Cross Keys tavern, well beyond the city limits in the 1690s, which had been built long before the streets had been carefully regulated. The commissioners unanimously decided that "however great their desire might be, not to injure private property," they couldn't agree to the Sitgreaves' appeal which stood "so direct in violation" of the city's laws. Evidently, the appeal hoped to avoid necessary alterations to the old tavern.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Congress convened, seven states present.

Few and Blount had taken advantage of the recess at the Constitutional Convention to return to New York. Few, seconded by Blount, moved for a conference with the Creek Nation to seek peace. Dane, seconded by R.H. Lee, moved to postpone Few's motion and instead consider a committee report on the Creek situation. This report implied that Georgia was probably more at fault than the Indians and accused Georgia and North Carolina of insisting on managing relations with the Indians within their boundaries until war came, and then turning it over to Congress.

CONVENTION TODAY

The Convention continued in recess. The Committee of Detail probably sent its draft Constitution to Mr. Claypoole to be printed.

George Washington accompanied Robert and Mary Morris, and Gouverneur Morris (Pa.) on a fishing trip to Trenton, N.J. The party stayed with Col. Samuel Ogden at the Trenton Ironworks; Ogden's wife was Gouverneur Morris' younger sister.

Thomas Jefferson wrote two separate letters from Paris to Edmund Randolph, governor of Virginia. In the personal letter he expressed the hope that the Convention would enable Congress to pay its debts, commented on two incipient European wars, and offered to buy books, fashions, wines, and so forth for Randolph and his family. In the official letter, he discussed the weapons Virginia had purchased in France.

LOOKING BACK

The adjournment of the Constitutional Convention between July 27 and Aug. 5, 1787, provided an opportunity for the delegates to escape "the foul airs" of a hot city and a demanding social schedule. Taking full advantage of this reprieve on July 30, George Washington recorded the first of four fishing trips he was to take during his brief recess. That Monday, with fellow delegate and good friend Gouverneur Morris, he went "to one Jane Moore's in the vicinity of Valley Forge to get trout." They fished again Aug. 3 and 4: "In company with Mr. Robt. Morris and his Lady, and Mr. Gouvr. Morris I went up to Trenton to another Fishing party."

In a city bounded by two rivers, fishing was a common Philadelphia activity. Fisheries lined the shores of the Delaware, and banks of the Schuylkill provided sites for a number of social angling clubs. Indeed, the first fishing club in America, the Schuylkill Fishing Company, was founded in Philadelphia in 1732.

Provided with few clues as to the methods he used, we must assume that "the Father of Our Country" often fished with worms, as did his contemporaries. If this image of George Washington fishing is less than heroic, there is one facet of his person that remains untarnished even in his pursuit of piscatory pleasure. Completing his diary entry for the Aug. 3 outing to Trenton, he wrote: "In the Evening fished, not very successfully."

Even when fishing, he could not tell a lie.

Most don't trust televangelists, poll reveals

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans have little faith in television evangelists, and many believe the sex and money scandal involving evangelist Jim Bakker and his PTL ministry won't be quickly forgotten, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

In addition, 53 percent of the 1,348 adult Americans in the nationwide telephone poll said they didn't believe money collected by television evangelists generally went to good causes. Only 27 percent believed the money was used for good purposes, and 20 percent were unsure.

Seven in 10 respondents said the scandal involving Bakker would hurt all television evangelists. Six in 10 said it would have long-term effects, while 36 percent thought it would be quickly forgotten.

Of those who thought all evangelists would be hurt, three in 10 said the Bakker scandal raised questions about television preachers' believability, and an additional quarter said it raised questions about how they're spending donations. One-quarter also said the public would confuse Bakker with other evangelists.

Bakker resigned as head of the 500,000 member PTL in March after saying he had been blackmailed over a sexual liaison with Jessica Hahn, a church secretary from West Babylon, N.Y. Miss Hahn has said she was forced into sex with Bakker and another evangelist. She reached a $265,000 settlement with PTL, but received only part of the money before Bakker resigned and payments were cut off.

PTL, which stands for People That Love or Praise The Lord, is about $66 million in debt, according to documents.

Most ignore pope's economic message

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Most Americans would rather ignore the social and economic teachings of Pope John Paul II, a theology professor says.

"They pick and choose and hear only what they want to hear," Stephen Schafer, a theologian at Notre Dame Seminary here said Sunday during the second of the continuing series of lectures held in preparation for the Sept. 11-13 papal visit to New Orleans.

The pope's preferential option for the poor challenges people "to look at society through the eyes of those at the bottom: the homeless, the hungry, the unborn, the sick who can not cannot pay for basic medical care," Schafer said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Many felons placed on probation, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight percent of the felons convicted of homicide and a third of the offenders convicted of drug trafficking were placed on probation rather than behind bars, according to a study of 28 court systems.

Overall, 74 percent of the people convicted of a serious felony in state courts in 1985 were sentenced to prison or jail while 26 percent were given probation with no prison or jail time, according to the report issued Sunday by the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

Of 2,600 offenders convicted of homicide in 1985, the study found that 84 percent were sentenced to prison, 1 percent were given jail terms of less than a year, 7 percent received combined jail and probation sentences and 8 percent were given probation.

Of 3,100 people convicted of rape, 16 percent were sentenced to probation, 65 percent were sent to prison, 1 percent sent to jail and 17 percent received a combination of jail and probation. The figures total 99 percent, not 100 percent, because of rounding, the study said.

Of 16,400 offenders convicted of drug trafficking, 32 percent were given probation. Twenty-seven percent were sentenced to prison terms, six percent were given jail terms, 34 percent received a combination of jail and probation and 1 percent were given other sentences.

Poverty rate may be lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 13.6 percent national poverty rate reported last week was an improvement, but the actual share of Americans living in poverty may be even lower than indicated.

The official statistics are based on family income. But many government programs provide assistance that isn't in the form of cash, and therefore isn't counted when poverty is calculated.

If benefits such as as food stamps, Medicare and subsidized housing were included, the national poverty rate could drop as low as 9 percent, according to alternative, "experimental" calculations by the Census Bureau.

"We are now in a position where almost two-thirds of all means-tested benefits are in non-cash form, and yet they are not included in the official estimates of poverty," reported Gordon W. Green Jr., the bureau's assistant chief for socioeconomic statistics.

These means-tested benefits, which are distributed to people based on their income, totaled just over $59 billion last year, based on what it would have cost to purchase those goods and services in the marketplace.

Dotson held for beating

CHICAGO (AP) — Gary Dotson, who drew national attention when his prison sentence for rape was commuted after his accuser recanted her testimony, was arrested Sunday night for allegedly beating his wife, police said.

The wife, Camille Dotson, did not require hospitalization, said Police Lt. Fred Friedlieb.

He said Mrs. Dotson flagged down a squad car Sunday evening to say she had been beaten during an argument and that Dotson had taken the couple's 6-month-old daughter out of the house.

Shiite group vows to punish U.S., Saudi Arabia

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group, releasing a photograph of U.S. hostage Terry Anderson, vowed to punish Saudi Arabia and the United States for the deaths of Iranian pilgrims in Mecca.

The photo and typewritten statement were delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut Sunday by Islamic Jihad, which has claimed it is holding one other American and four Frenchmen.

The statement referred to Friday's riots in the Saudi Arabian holy city. The Saudi government said 402 people, including 275 Iranians, were killed. Iran said 650 Iranians were killed or missing.

"We consider the house of Saud has come into direct confrontation with the Moslems and will not escape this massacre without punishment," said the Arabic statement.

"We consider the United States responsible for this massacre and it will bear the consequences of its directives to its surrogates," it said.

Although there was nothing in the photo to indicate when it was taken, the picture had not been released before. The last released picture of Anderson, received Feb. 14, showed him with a light beard.

The statement issued Sunday did not mention Anderson, the longest held among 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. Islamic Jihad has told news agencies in Beirut that any statement it releases must be accompanied by a photo of one of its captives to prove its authenticity.

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say of Batavia, N.Y., said the kidnappers had released three pictures of him since November, "but it was obvious all three had been taken at the same time, so I was a little alarmed at that."

She said in the latest photo her brother "looks in good health and it is encouraging to finally see a picture different than the ones that were taken last November. I would hope it would indicate he was still in Beirut."

There have been unconfirmed reports that some foreign hostages, possibly including Anderson, had recently been taken to Iran to "stand trial."

Shortly before the statement was released Sunday, a bomb was hurled at the empty Saudi Embassy in Beirut. There were no injuries.

In east Lebanon, thousands of pro-Iranian Shiites rallied to protest the events in Mecca.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, is believed to be made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. The group also claims to hold American Thomas Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collings, Colo., acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut. He was kidnapped June 10, 1985.

Sunday's statement, which echoed Iranian accounts, called the clash in Mecca "a premeditated massacre-...masterminded by the great Satan, America."

In a reference to the Saudi ruling family, the statement said: "The house of Saud has proven its blind obedience to its American masters by polishing the Grand Mosque of Mecca with the blood of honorable Moslems opposed to the United States and Israel."

The statement charged that Saudi riot police used poison gas and machine guns against Iranian pilgrims. "They also finished off the wounded, men and women," it charged. Saudi Arabia has denied any shots were fired. Local residents have said tear gas was used to disperse rioters.

Nine Americans are among the 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. Also missing is British Anglican church envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in January while on a mission to negotiate the release of hostages.

GULF

The two ships were escorted to Kuwait as part of a U.S. initiative to ensure freedom of navigation in the waterway, a main theater in the nearly 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. A U.S. Navy official said Sunday that three more Kuwaiti tankers will hoist U.S. flags within the next 10 days, entitling them to U.S. warship escort through the gulf.

Iran's announcement that its maneuvers were beginning came hours after Iranian President Ali Khamenei was quoted as telling navy graduates in Tehran that the United States yields only to force and would be addressed that way.

Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding its war enemy Iraq. Iran has often attacked Kuwaiti tankers and ships that stop at Kuwaiti ports.

The Reagan administration agreed to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect the flow of oil through the gulf. It acted after the Soviets leased three tankers to Kuwait.

The Strait of Hormuz is considered one of the most perilous stretches of the Gas Prince's voyage because Iran has installed anti-ship missiles on its side of the passage. The Chinese-built missiles can hit a ship at a range of up to 50 miles.

THOMAS

But the mayor added that officials don't always see eye-to-eye because each entity has different legal responsibilities.

"It's more like 'This is my turf and this is your turf' instead of wheeling and dealing or a 'You scratch my back and I'll scratch your back' arrangement," he said.

Budgetary limitations on government often come into play when city and county officials — involved in negotiations — are looking for the best deal, said Thomas.

"We're interested in seeing to it that they do their fair share just as they are interested in seeing that we do our fair share. That's when the dealing comes in," he said.

City-county officials have a contract agreement, whereby the city provides ambulance services to county residents, and the county, in turn, paves city roads and streets to offset the cost.

"We agree on what the fee on the paving is to be and then we deduct it from what the county owes on the ambulance service," he said.

Khomeini pledges revenge against U.S.

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today pledged revenge against the United States, holding it responsible for the killing of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims in Mecca during clashes with Saudi police.

An Iranian official today claimed the toll from Friday's clashes rose to at least 600 Iranians dead, 4,500 wounded. The Saudis say 402 people, 275 of them Iranian, were killed and 649 hurt when an Iranian anti-American demonstration grew violent Friday, the eve of the annual Moslem pilgrimage to Mecca.

The United States has denied any role in the clashes.

Khomeini's statement coincided with an announcement that the Iranian navy had begun maneuvers in the Strait of Hormuz. The military warned all ships and aircraft to stay clear of Iran's territorial waters for three days as of Monday midnight (4:30 p.m. EDT). A U.S.-flag Kuwaiti gas tanker escorted by U.S. warships was steaming toward the strait on a return journey through the Persian Gulf. The convoy's exact location was not known.

Khomeini, Iran's 87-year-old revolutionary and spiritual leader, did not say how Iran would respond against "arch-Satan" America, but said revenge would come "in an opportune time."

His remarks came in a message to Hojatoleslam Mahdi Karrubi, head of the estimated 155,000-strong Iranian pilgrims to the holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia, Tehran radio reported.

Iran's President Ali Khamenei told a group of navymen that America yields only to force and would be addressed that way, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, also monitored in Nicosia, reported today.

The Iranian president said the Mecca killings will not go unanswered, and the Iranian navy commander vowed revenge soon.

"We will deal them the fatal blow," IRNA quoted him as telling graduates at the navy command college in Tehran Sunday.

"They are very vulnerable in the Persian Gulf. The U.S. was also defeated in the Persian Gulf and was humiliated politically and militarily."

And today Khomeini said: "We hold America responsible for all these crimes (at Mecca). God willing, in an opportune time we shall deal with her ...

"The blood which flowed...the future nations and generations will satisfy their thirst from it and the oppressors shall drown and die in it."

"It is not surprising to see the contaminated hands of America and Israel emerging through the sleeves of the devious people, the ringleaders of Saudi Arabia and the traitors to the two holy shrines and then target the heads of the best Moslems," Khomeini said.

Today's developments came came as the tanker Gas Prince, escorted by two U.S. warships, headed toward Hormuz after loading volatile cargo from Kuwait, a shipping source in Kuwait said.

Iranian news media reported earlier that more than 1 million people demonstrated in Tehran Sunday, chanting "Revenge!" Iran's sympathizers in Lebanon also protested Sunday and attacked the empty Saudi Embassy. The pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, releasing a picture of U.S. hostage Terry Anderson, threatened to punish the Saudi government and the United States.

Several Arab and Moslem countries meanwhile expressed support for Saudi Arabia's King Fahd following the riots in Islam's holiest city.

First step planned in launch of shuttle Discovery

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said it would begin readying a space shuttle today for the first launching since the Challenger tragedy.

Switching on the electrical power of the shuttle Discovery was planned as the first step in a long process leading up to a mission scheduled for June 2, 1988, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said.

"The power-up of Discovery to ready it for launch will be a major milestone," said launch operations director Bob Sieck.

Discovery is one of NASA's three shuttles, which have been grounded since Challenger exploded 73 seconds after launch on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the seven crew members.

NASA engineers have been working on modifications to Discovery for months here. Some of the modifications were planned before the Challenger disaster, but many resulted from the inquiry into the accident.

The modifications will improve the aircraft's electrical, communication and instrumentation systems, engines, fuel valves, landing gear door and the protection that keeps the shuttle from burning up when it re-enters the atmosphere, according to NASA officials.

After turning on power, engineers and technicians planned to spend about five weeks testing the modified systems. Then they will start the normal process of readying Discovery for flight.

NASA's schedule calls for rolling Discovery to the launch pad March 7 and test-firing the ship's engines April 7.

Five veteran shuttle fliers headed by astronaut Rick Hauck have been selected for a four-day mission during which the crew is scheduled to deploy a communications satellite.

One modification that has not been completed is installation of a cabin hatch that would permit emergency evacuation. The change is designed to save the crew in certain emergencies, although not a explosion like the one that destroyed Challenger.

The other shuttles, Atlantis and Columbia, are undergoing similar modifications here.

Hollywood stuntman victim of highway shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police said there were four more reports of gunfire on Southern California's highways after a man driving a red Corvette was seen firing a semiautomatic weapon in the air and three motorists said they had been shot at.

The incidents, which occurred early today and Sunday evening and resulted in no injuries, did little to spur optimism that the gunslinging trend was abating, authorities said.

Earlier Sunday, California Highway Patrol officials had reported that motorists were driving more defensively and expressed hope the shooting spree, which has left four people dead and about a dozen wounded, was coming to an end.

The latest victim in the violence was identified Sunday as a Hollywood stuntman.

Henry Kingi, ex-husband of actress Lindsay Wagner and a stuntman on TV's "The Dukes of Hazzard" and "The A Team," was among seven people injured in traffic disputes on Saturday, including four in a chain-reaction car wreck that started when an angry motorist rammed another vehicle.

Kingi, 43, was shot in the arm and side after arguing with a Jeep full of teen-agers Saturday. He was in stable condition at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center today, said hospital spokesman Ron Wise.

In the most recent incident, a tanker truck was hit by gunfire on the Interstate 5 in Sun Valley early today, said California Highway Patrol dispatcher Bob Neely. There were no injuries.

Another motorist reported being fired on a short time earlier from the same vehicle, a green Chevrolet panel van, Neely said.

On Sunday night, the driver of a red Corvette fired a semiautomatic weapon into the air while driving on Interstate 5 north of downtown, according to a caller. CHP Officer Diane Lowery said the accuracy of the report hadn't been confirmed.

Earlier Sunday night, a woman reported seeing a flash of gunfire from the window of a rust-colored van on I-5 in San Fernando, police said.

There were no incidents during the daytime Sunday, authorities said.

Among the incidents Saturday:

— In La Mirada, four people — including Doreen Delgadillo, 25, of Whittier — were hurt in chain-reaction automobile crash that started when a car was rammed after a dispute on a highway. Kevin Learnihan, 31, of La Mirada was being held for investigation of attempted murder.

HEAT

Thunderstorms spawned as cool air from the north continued to clash with the hot, humid air that has been hanging over the Midwest and Plains.

More than 1½ inches of rain in an hour flooded streets and basements in northern Ohio, downed trees and cut off electricity to thousands of homes. There were unofficial reports of funnel clouds or tornado touchdowns in seven counties. Lightning seriously injured a Cleveland-area man taking shelter under a tree at a golf course.

Thunderstorms also crashed through Michigan's southeastern Lower Peninsula, knocking out power to at least 12,000 homes and businesses. A man who dived into Lake St. Clair to retrieve curtains that blew off his boat was missing and presumed drowned, according to a sheriff's officer.

Alabama's Department of Public Health issued a heat alert warning people to take it easy after the weather service said the heat index, a measure of the combined effect of temperature and humidity, would hit between 105 and 110 degrees.

Weather service meteorologist Greg Dyer said the heat index hit 111 in St. Louis at 3:40 p.m. Sunday. More of the same was predicted for today before possible moderation Tuesday. The index topped out at 105 in Topeka, Kan., but temperatures were forecast to drop to the mid-80s to mid-90s Tuesday.

Record highs were set or tied Sunday in 16 cities, including Cocordia, Kan., with 106; downtown Kansas City, 105; Columbia, Mo., 104; Moline, Ill., 101; Paducah, Ky., 100; and Sacramento, Calif., 108. Beckley, W.Va., set a record with an 89 degree reading, the 10th day of record highs in just two weeks.

A 96-degree day in Chicago was the 29th above-90 day this year.

In St. Louis, where the high reached 103, almost 400 fans attending a baseball game between the Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Pirates were treated for heat-related illnesses.

Missouri officials were investigating whether heat should be blamed for four weekend deaths, including two elderly people, a woman on heavy medication and a man who collapsed in a wooded area.

In Omaha, Neb., a 65-year-old woman died after suffering heat stroke in her un-air-conditioned home. Rita Pacaj's body temperature had topped 109 degrees and could not be recorded on a thermometer, her doctor said Sunday.

Eleven musicians were treated for heat exhaustion in Decatur, Ga., as temperatures reached the mid-90s during the 11th Annual Drums Across America Competition, which attracted teams from the United States, Canada and Japan.

Seven parade-goers in Jasper, Ind., were overcome by heat, and in New Orleans, mule-drawn carriages that cart people through the French Quarter were ordered off the streets after a mule collapsed in record-tying 96-degree heat.

There were widespread reports of record power and water consumption as people tried to beat the heat with air conditioning and extra showers and baths.

Sprinklers provided relief for children in urban playgrounds and for farm animals.

Allen Barker, a dairy farmer in Dunlap, Tenn., said his cows, whose milk production has dropped about 500 pounds a day because of the heat, are spending "80 to 90 percent of their time under the sprinkler."

Farmers who raise beef cattle are suffering too because the animals lose their appetites when temperatures reach the upper 80s and 90s, said Joe Hawkins, president of the Tennessee Farm Bureau.

OIL

"Half of the wells were drilled in the first few months of 1986 and then it went straight down," Ms. Murrell said. "This year it started low and will probably increase as the year goes on. So even though the numbers are the same, the picture is prettier."

Another aspect of improving oil prices is the effect they may have on major oil producers' exploration budgets during the second half of the year. Industry analysts say many major oil companies underspent during the first six months, so expenditures for the second half of the year could be almost doubled.

Douglas Yadon, publisher of the Preston Pipe Report based in Tulsa., Okla., said he expects the number of active rigs, currently at 917, to climb to 1,300 to 1,600 by the end of the year.

From a 1981 peak of 4,530 active drilling rigs in the United States, the count dropped to a low of 663 in July of 1986, according to the Baker-Hughes Rotary Rig Count, a widely followed index of domestic drilling activity.

Despite the positive signs, the energy industry has a long climb back.

Odeco Chairman Hugh Kelly said his company is still losing money and the recovery has a long way to go before it will produce profits. But he expects utilization rates for offshore rigs in the Gulf of Mexico will climb to 70 percent levels by the end of this year.

Kelly said earlier this month that an increase in drilling permits and bid requests for offshore lease tracts indicate that a recovery in the contract drilling business is under way and gaining momentum.

DECISION

Last week, Reagan said "I haven't heard a single word that indicates, in any of the testimony, that laws were broken."

But Meese, asked whether he thought laws had been broken, said "Yes."

Meese said he had not spoken to Reagan about the matter, but assumed the president meant that "the administration as a whole was not seeking to break the laws." He said Reagan's statement was probably a reference to the Boland amendment, a one-time congressional ban on aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels that carries no criminal penalties.

Investigators have raised the prospect that numerous other statutes might have been violated, however, including restrictions on arms shipments to other countries and laws against the misappropriation of government money.

With the end of public congressional hearings, attention shifts to the government's independent counsel in the case, Lawrence E. Walsh, and criminal charges that may grow out of his investigation.

Survivors sift through rubble

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Wearing garbage bags to shield themselves from a cold drizzle, survivors of a tornado that killed 26 people picked through mountains of rubble in a wrecked trailer park hunting for possessions.

About 200 people were injured in Friday's tornado, the deadliest to hit Canada in 75 years.

The Red Cross provided hotel rooms for about one-quarter of the 400 families left homeless by the twister. The tornado, which left a 19-mile trail of destruction, caused at least $75 million damage, according to Alan Wood, regional vice president of the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

The tornado also severely damaged an industrial park south of the city, reducing factories to piles of rubble and twisting tractor-trailers into heaps.

The injured included four infants, among them 3-month-old Tyler Chrisp. He was found Friday critically injured on a road near the Evergreen Mobile Home Park nearly eight hours after a twister touched down.

The baby and his mother, 23-year-old Wendy Chrisp, were hospitalized in critical condition.

Earlier Friday, a policeman picking his way through the park pulled a week-old baby from the rubble of a mobile home. Police spokesman Lance Beswick said the infant, who is in satisfactory condition, was found when an officer heard a cry at his feet.

Two people whose homes were apparently ruined were arrested Sunday for allegedly stealing items from other wrecked homes, said city police spokeswoman Joy-Lynn Dorash.

The 32-year-old man and 23-year-old woman "decided that since they lost everything, they would take it from somebody else," she said.

Member of Philippine Cabinet assassinated

WORLD

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police set up roadblocks and searched hospitals today after the first assassination of a Cabinet member in the Philippines.

Witnesses told police three to five gunmen riddled Local Governments Secretary Jaime Ferrer's car with automatic weapons fire Sunday evening about a block from his home in suburban Paranaque. One gunman may have been wounded.

Ferrer, 70, a staunch anti-Communist, and his driver died of multiple gunshot wounds. No group immediately claimed responsibility.

Ferrer's brother, Wally, said the secretary had been receiving death threats but refused bodyguards. Ferrer, a guerrilla fighter against the Japanese in World War II, had boasted to reporters that he never traveled with bodyguards and that his enemies "know where to find me."

President Corazon Aquino met with a Cabinet crisis committee today to discuss the assassination. Her spokesman, Teodoro Benigno said it was the first assassination of a Cabinet minister in Philippine history.

The assassination of the two men was the most spectacular in a wave of killings that have rocked Manila since Mrs. Aquino took office in February 1986. Legislators warned the slayings were symptomatic of a grave law-and- order crisis facing the Aquino government.

"There can be no economic recovery under the present state," said Rep. Antonio Cuenco, speaker pro tempore of the House of Representatives. "This is the number one problem of the country today."

Sen. Joey Lina, former Manila acting governor, called the killing "a desperation move on the part of those who see the present government is succeeding."

Officials blame Communist assassins, known as "sparrows" for the swiftness of their attacks, for killing many of the more than 50 police and soldiers slain in Manila this year.

As local governments secretary, Ferrer administered thousands of local officials appointed by Mrs. Aquino after she fired those who had served under deposed President Ferdinand Marcos. The position made him one of the most prominent and visible members of the Cabinet.

Ferrer had angered many officials and opposition leaders by demanding appointees support Mrs. Aquino's candidates in the May congressional elections. He threatened to dismiss any appointee who failed to deliver a majority of the votes in his district to the administration ticket.

Ferrer has also been an outspoken champion of civilian vigilante groups, which have sprung up across the country to help fight Communist rebels. Human rights groups have accused the vigilantes of abusing civilians.

Benigno said Mrs. Aquino was deeply concerned about the slaying.

Last month, she criticized military commanders for failing to curb rising crime and solve a series of spectacular crimes committed during her administration.

She ordered all flags in the country to fly at half-staff today.

"I can assure you that the president is no softie, that the president is aware of the problems, that the president certainly realizes the gravity of the situation," Benigno said.

U.S. executives die when they fall from raft

ALEXIS CREEK, British Columbia (AP) — Five American advertising executives were killed when their inflatable raft pitched sideways in fast-moving rapids in the Chilko River, police and company officials said.

Among the dead was Richard T. O'Reilly, president of the advertising firm that handled President Reagan's 1980 campaign.

Sgt. Ken Williamson, a spokesman for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, said the raft "turned sideways in fast water" Saturday, throwing 11 of the 12 occupants into the churning water about 35 miles west of Alexis Creek.

One person clung to the raft and was rescued, while six others made it out of the river alive, police said. Two had to be hospitalized.

Among the survivors were Michael Miles, president and chief executive officer of Kraft Inc. in Glenview, Ill., Jack Collins, president of Clorox Co. in Oakland, Calif., and Al Wolfe of Lake Forest, president of the U.S. division of the advertising agency DDB Needham Worldwide, Needham said.

Police identified two of the dead as Robert V. Goldstein, 50, of Cincinnati, who was vice president of advertising for Procter and Gamble Co. and James Fasules, 63, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., a former senior vice president of Needham.

Also killed in the accident in southwestern British Columbia near Lava Canyon, were O'Reilly, 65, director of the New York-based Media Advertising Partnership for a Drug-Free America Inc.; and Stuart Sharpe, 37, and Gene Yovetich, 41, both Chicago residents and senior vice presidents of account management at DDB Needham, the company said.

O'Reilly was president of a Greenwich, Conn.-based advertising firm that bears his name.

The cause of the deaths will be determined in an autopsy, police said.

Police said 11 Americans and a Canadian guide were traveling on the raft, which was rented by Ron Thompson Guiding of Riske River.

Searchers recovered three of the bodies soon after the midday accident and found the other two after the search resumed Sunday morning.

A police helicopter from Victoria and six officers took part in the search, along with several civilians who piloted kayaks along riverbanks.

Two of the survivors were taken to the hospital at Williams Lake, 85 miles east of Lava Canyon. One was released Saturday night, the other on Sunday. The remaining rafters were not seriously injured.

Israeli officer killed in attack at Gaza Strip

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Arab gunmen opened fire on an Israeli military vehicle in the occupied Gaza Strip on Sunday, killing the army officer at the wheel, the military command announced.

The early afternoon attack was carried out by "terrorists" and occurred as the officer drove through a central street in Palestinian-populated Gaza City, said an army spokesman who demanded anonymity.

Israeli security forces blocked roads leading to the Gaza Strip and also prohibited all boats from leaving the coast until further notice.

A curfew, confining residents to their homes until further notice, was imposed near the shooting site. Witnesses said troops wielding billy clubs forced merchants to shut their shops in Gaza's main commercial district.

The army spokesman identified the officer as Capt. Ron Tal, 22, a commander of the Gaza military police.

Several hours after the shooting, a man identifying himself as a member of the Force 17 commando unit of the Palestine Liberation Organization called the Agence France Presse news agency in Jerusalem and said his group was responsible for the officer's death, a reporter with the agency said.

The reporter quoted the man as saying his group had killed the officer "because he belongs to the occupation army which is killing innocent civilian Palestinians."

Allies must pay for their defense

With an East-West arms deal on the horizon and a $49.8-billion trade deficit with Western Europe, Congress soon may start debating in earnest the possibility of reducing the U.S. troop commitment to the NATO alliance.

Any sudden, destabilizing cuts would be a bad idea, especially if they coincide with a nuclear-arms reduction. Once the missiles are gone, Western Europe legitimately fears that it will be vulnerable to a conventional attack by the Soviets' far superior non-nuclear forces. A decrease in U.S. troops undoubtedly would make Europe even less secure.

But Congress has a point: It is time for our allies to contribute more toward their own defense.

After nuclear weapons are removed, Europe must be ready to increase tanks and troops to offset the East-West inequity in conventional weapons. Rough parity with the Soviets will ensure that any non-nuclear war would be long, expensive and bloody; since Europe — Eastern and Western — suffered terribly in World War II, the threat of another similar ordeal should deter war perhaps as effectively as nuclear weapons.

The European allies undoubtedly won't be happy with a U.S. request that they pay a higher proportion of their future defense costs. The present arrangement isn't perfect either. The United States, which provides a hefty share of Western Europe's defense, is disappointed when the Europeans don't support U.S. foreign-policy initiatives. European nations, for their part, value their right to make their own decisions.

One way to help relieve these strained relations is to make Europe more independent of us, more responsible for its own defense. The imbalance in conventional forces, magnified by an arms-reduction agreement, should offer that opportunity.

In fact, if the allies want to correct the security imbalance after the withdrawal of nuclear weapons, they will have to pay for the troop increases themselves. The United States no longer can be generous with money it doesn't have. With deficits of about $200 billion a year, Uncle Sam can no longer afford to provide more troops than he already does — 350,000, or about one-third of NATO's total forces.

Americans spend about 6.9 percent of this country's gross national product on defense, much of it going to Europe. Great Britain, in contrast, spends about 5.2 percent, and West Germany, 3.2 percent. In fact, most of the allies spend only about 3 percent of their GNP on defense.

And, Western Europe is booming economically. Foreign trade is up, much of it with America, and Europeans invest much of their profits in our economy, providing, in fact, some of the money that our government is borrowing to pay its bills. So Western Europe can hardly plead indigence.

The allies may have to sacrifice some social programs or raise taxes, just as the United States had to cut some programs to pay for a defense buildup, but they can do it. The question is whether they will. NATO allies must think hard. It is a difficult choice — security or social programs — but it is a choice they must make.

The United States isn't going to abandon NATO, but it should start insisting that Western Europe assume more responsibility — and pay a bigger share of its defense costs.

Stranger than fiction

It may seem strange to you, it may strike you as truth being stranger than fiction, but I take offense at the idea that it's hard to accept because what I have told you is the absolute truth of what happened." Thus did Attorney General Edwin Meese defend his early inquiry into the Iran-contra affair. Most members of the investigating committees understandably found Meese's November inquiry, if not his accounting of it, hard to accept, as Sen. George Mitchell put it.

William Bradford Reynolds, an assistant attorney general, discovered in National Security Council files a memo containing a reference to the diversion of Iran arms sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels. Meese muttered an oath when told of the discovery at a Saturday lunch last November and scheduled an interview the following day with the memo's author, Lt. Col. Oliver North.

Before reading the memo, Meese paid a Saturday evening call on William Casey, the director of central intelligence. He didn't ask Casey, his friend since the 1980 Reagan election campaign, about the diversion — even though Casey introduced the subject by telling Meese that some arms financiers were threatening to charge publicly that Iran arms profits had been used for "other purposes." That is hard to accept.

When confronted with the memo, North chided himself for not destroying all damaging documents. The attorney general, the nation's top legal officer, took no steps to prevent further shredding. That night the colonel spent five hours at the shredder. Meese testified that North "probably" destroyed only "irrelevant" documents. That is also hard to accept.

After the North interview, Meese talked with the principals alone and without taking notes. He conducted a rushed interview with Rear Adm. John Poindexter, the national security adviser, identified by North as one of three people in the government who knew about the diversion. Among the questions he didn't bother to ask was the elementary one: Who authorized the diversion? That, too, is hard to accept.

Offered a chance to say what, given hindsight, he now would do differently, Meese had no second thoughts. The "essential facts," he said, are those he found last November. What's more significant is that with all the destruction and deceit, some of which might have made him suspicious, it's a miracle that any facts were found at all.

It's not that Meese was obliged to call in the FBI, but rather that in running the only investigation under way, he failed to take elementary precautions. There is no evidence to disprove Meese's account, and bumbling and carelessness can never be dismissed as defenses. Still, his investigation is indeed "stranger than fiction." By any standard, it is hard to accept.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 3, the 215th day of 1987. There are 150 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 3, 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail from Palos, Spain, with three ships — the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria — on a voyage that would take him to the New World.

On this date:

In 1914, Germany declared war on France at the outset of World War I.

In 1923, Calvin Coolidge was sworn in as the 30th president of the United States following the death of Warren G. Harding.

In 1936, the U.S. State Department urged Americans in Spain to leave because of that country's civil war.

In 1943, during World War II, General George S. Patton slapped a GI at an Army hospital in Sicily, accusing him of cowardice. (Patton later apologized for this incident, and a second similar episode.)

In 1958, the nuclear-powered submarine Nautilus became the first vessel to cross the North Pole under water.

Untypical Simon isn't afraid to offend

WASHINGTON — With his bow tie, horn-rimmed glasses and baggy pants, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois has more than enough to set him apart from the other Democratic presidential candidates. But the important differences are of substance, not style.

Jack Anderson

While his rivals try to avoid offending any groups that might block their nomination, Simon sometimes seems to go out of his way to step on the toes of special interests that could make or break his candidacy. Call it refreshing or suicidal, it's a way of running for president that the American voters haven't seen in a long time.

Consider a few of the powerful egos Simon has bruised since he arrived in the Senate two and a half years ago:

— Television executives. Simon's campaign to reduce the violence on TV doesn't sit well in network boardrooms, where a popular shoot-'em-up series is revered as a financial lifesaver. A modern presidential candidate does not lightly risk the hostility of those who control the most important campaign medium.

— Civil libertarians. In a rare confrontation with the American Civil Liberties Union, which worries about government interference with television's content, Simon insists he doesn't want censorship. Calling himself a "lifelong civil libertarian," he says he can't accept the idea that a free society can't find a way to curb mayhem on the tube.

— Tax reformers. Simon was one of three senators who voted against the much-ballyhooed tax bill. He opposed it because it did nothing to solve the crucial problem of the budget deficits. He also surprised fellow liberals by supporting a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget.

— The coal industry. Though he represents a coal-producing state, Simon has insisted that acid rain is an issue that must be dealt with.

— The tobacco industry. Simon supports an increase in the excise tax on cigarettes.

— Big Oil. Simon has proposed that by 1992 at least half the gasoline sold in the United States contain 10 percent ethanol, a corn derivative. The Transportation Department is concerned about the plan, which would leave the ethanol portion of the gas free of federal excise tax. Simon says his plan would help the farmers, reduce U.S. dependence on imported petroleum and contribute to cleaner air.

— Budget cutters. Simon has sponsored an $8 billion plan that would guarantee public-service jobs to those unable to find work. He points out that the cost is less than one-fourth of the defense budget increase the White House sought last year, and says his plan would eventually save money by breaking the welfare cycle.

— Ollie North fans. Though his mail ran 50 to 1 in favor of Lt. Col. Oliver North, Simon disdained "finger-in-the-wind politics" and said he doesn't consider someone who fails to uphold the law to be a hero. Simon has also opposed the jingoistic de-emphasis on the teaching of foreign languages; on practical grounds, he notes, Americans must know how to communicate with potential customers in a global market.

Simon's independence is also reflected in his stubborn devotion to his trademark bow ties against the advice of many political supporters — including the late Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill., whom Simon admired deeply.

In fact, Simon now believes his rumpled look is an advantage. "It's slick not to be slick," he explained cheerfully to our reporter Gary Clouser. His wife, Jeanne, says the senator's appearance makes him seem approachable — like "everyone's favorite history teacher."

MINI-EDITORIAL — A retired colleague, who is both a keen observer of the political scene and a veteran player in barroom games of chance, has watched every minute of the Iran/contra hearings. We think his judgment on the administration witnesses is worth noting. "You know," he said, almost in awe, "I'd hate to be in a game of liars' poker with those guys!"

Leahy's ouster really intolerance of leaks

WASHINGTON — Contrary to Sen. Patrick Leahy's statement that he "resigned" from the Senate Intelligence Committee over his regret at leaking a document, he was in fact expelled by the committee's chairman and vice chairman, who warned he would be thrown out by a unanimous vote if he did not quit.

Leahy's release of the committee's incomplete preliminary probe of the Iran-contra affair last winter was the last straw in a series of leaks laid at Leahy's doorstep. These leaks had brought him into major confrontations with CIA officials, especially the late William J. Casey.

Given traditions of senatorial courtesy, the case against Leahy and the method of removing him from the committee probably never will be publicly acknowledged. It was engineered by Democrat David Boren, chairman, and Republican William Cohen, vice chairman, in a deliberate move to let other members know leaks will not be tolerated.

LUCKY PIERRE

Much to the consternation of former senator Paul Laxalt's managers, erstwhile liberal Republican Pierre du Pont is the leader in the race for approval of New Hampshire's right-wing Manchester Union-Leader.

An editorial by editor in chief J.W. McQuaid praising du Pont's "candor" was followed by a front-page declaration from publisher Nackey Loeb urging the state's voters to "take a good, close look" at the former Delaware governor as "a genuine conservative, with a genuine faith in Ronald Reagan's principles." The late-starting Laxalt campaign has counted on an endorsement from the Union-Leader.

Besides beating on Vice President George Bush, the Union-Leader is sniping at Senate minority leader Robert J. Dole because of his association with New Hampshire's Sen. Warren Rudman. Under fire from the right for his Iran-contra investigating role, Rudman asked whether Dole would prefer him not to issue a presidential endorsement after the hearings end. Dole declined the offer of non-support.

SWEEPING THE GULF

Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was secretly dispatched by President Reagan to persuade Saudi Arabian Ambassador Prince Bandar to let U.S. minesweeping helicopters land on Saudi territory to facilitate clearing the Persian Gulf.

Crowe, an old Persian Gulf hand who has known the prince many years, spent more than one hour with him in a secret conference. The subsequent dispatch of eight U.S. helicopter minesweepers to the Gulf signified possible Saudi softening of past refusal to permit landing rights for U.S. combat equipment.

That refusal is based in part on the approaching visit of up to 200,000 Iranian pilgrims to the Moslem shrine in Mecca. Such "worshippers" in the past have tried to sabotage Saudi installations to protest the kingdom's close links with the U.S.

JESSE'S JAB

The Rev. Jesse Jackson has been on his good behavior as a presidential hopeful, but showed at last week's Democratic governors conference at Mackinac Island, Mich., that he does not forget insults and can still throw a dart.

The presidential candidates were being introduced at a private dinner hosted by the governors, when Jackson shouted from the rear of the room: "What about Bill Clinton?" Everybody present knew it was a jab at the governor of Arkansas, who had boasted he could take southern black voters away from Jackson but then decided not to run.

A footnote: Ohio Gov. Dick Celeste says he will wait until September before deciding whether to run for president, but in private at Mackinac he was much more negative. He suggested Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis was making the same appeal he had intended, and that the best campaign operatives had been picked over in Iowa and other early key states.

ASSAD'S HAND

The determination of Syrian President Hafez-el Assad eventually to get credit for the release of captive American newsman Charles Glass was demonstrated when he wielded backstage power to release five terror-connected Iranians.

The Iranian officials in charge of Shiite Hizballah terrorists in Lebanon took a wrong turn in their car and were arrested by Christian militia in East Beirut. But within hours, word flashed from Damascus that Assad wanted them set free and not used for bartering purposes to free the former ABC correspondent.

The reason: Assad did not want to share international credit for springing Glass. His wishes were conveyed to Gen. Michel Aoun, Christian commander of the Lebanese army, who told the militia to release the Iranians. But the Syrian leader still has not been able to free Glass.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. flirtation with socialist policies curious

What do you think about the idea of the U.S. Government nationalizing the banks and the export industry and confiscating all the property owned by any person or corporation in excess of, say, 1,200 acres?

Charley Reese

Do you think that's a good idea? Do you think it's constitutional? Do you think it's in keeping with our concepts of a free society and a free market economy?

I assume your answer is no, for I assume few socialists read my column. If that is the case, then why did our State Department in collusion with the Congress do precisely those things in El Salvador? Why does so often the foreign policy mechanism of the world's greatest capitalist nation force socialist solutions on foreign countries? For that matter, why is so much of the American Establishment so sympathetic to socialism?

Well, I don't have all the answers but I can give you a clue. Socialism, like most isms, is a great fraud. It claims that its premise is that the people should own the means of production. In fact, however, this is an impossibility outside of a small commune. What socialism really amounts to is control of the means of production by an elite minority in the name of the people. If the American Establishment is anything, it is elitist as a German baron.

Americans imposed the land confiscations and other so-called economic reforms on the people of El Salvador, using the threat of cutting off aid as a club. We also, with the same club, made sure the Christian Democrats won the last election. The Christian Democrats are the State Department's guys in El Salvador. The message was sent loud and clear: if the Arena Party (the other major party) wins, we'll cut off your aid and abandon you to the communist guerrillas.

It makes you wonder whether our policy objective is to defeat communism or to impose socialism.

There's another possibility. Socialism never works and so consequently the need for U.S. aid never ceases and on the contrary, increases. Maybe if you're a bureaucrat in the aid dispensing business that is reason enough to foster socialism.

The other thing we are doing to El Salvador is not letting them win the war against the guerrillas. We give military aid intravenously — enough to keep them going, not enough to win. That's probably because in Foggy Bottom there is the doctrine that no war against a communist insurgency can ever be won. So long as U.S. policy is to coax communists to the bargaining table with military pressure while communizing the economy no war ever will be won — except by communists.

Communists are odiously evil but they are not nearly so stupid and illogical as the American foreign policy establishment. They know, for example, there is no such thing as a no-win war. There is always a winner and a loser.

They won in Russia, in Eastern Europe, in Cuba, in Vietnam, in Laos, in Cambodia, in China, in Ethiopia, in Mozambique, in Zimbabwe, in Angola, in Marxist Yemen, and in Nicaragua.

And they will keep on winning until the American people flush out of Washington the closet socialists, appeasers, and just plain boneheads whose combined efforts are flushing America down the toilet.

Guatemala, it should be noted, pretty well destroyed their communist guerrillas but fortunately for the Guatemalans, the U.S. had cut off all aid and was therefore not able to interfere and prevent victory.

Rather than getting any credit for victory, however, Guatemala gets an incessant lashing from the leftists for alleged human rights violations. Among American leftists, every casualty in a war with communists is a human rights violation committed by the anti-communists. As the leftists tell it, the communists never fire their guns and never make a mistake while anti-communists never kill anybody but innocent by-standers.

Specialist needed in negotiating divorce

Associated Press

Marshall J. Auerbach, a Chicago lawyer who drafted Illinois' marriage and divorce law, warns that growing complexities make it less and less advisable for divorcing couples to try to do the negotiating without a specialist in family law unless their assets are minimal and they have no children.

You can't just accept a settlement offer, even one that sounds good, without knowing all the facts. And to get those facts your lawyer may need to subpoena your spouse's personal and business financial records, take depositions (out-of-court statements under oath) and audit tax returns.

Your lawyer must know state law, be comfortable with tax law and know when to call in an outside expert, such as an accountant, actuary, appraiser or financial planner, especially if assets include a closely held business or limited partnership interests.

Once a clear picture of the financial landscape emerges, negotiation can begin.

To find a specialist in family law, ask friends and professional acquaintances for recommendations. Court clerks may tell you who handles the most cases in the court.

Changing Times Magazine suggests you also write to the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers, 20 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 540, Chicago, IL 60602, for names of the nearest certified fellows in matrimonial law. If the nearest fellow is too far from you, call him or her and ask for local recommendations. Arrange interviews with several on your list. Some lawyers do not charge for this initial meeting.

Ask the lawyers how long they have specialized in divorce law. Do they usually handle cases involving assets similar in value to yours? Do they usually represent the husband or the wife? If you are a homemaker, how will they figure your contribution to the marriage? Will the lawyer work on your case personally? If not, meet whoever will.

What percentage of their cases settle and what percentage go to trial? Be wary of high litigation percentages. It may mean they are too aggressive to work out a good deal for you. Will you get regular progress reports? Discuss fees right from the start. Seek a lower hourly rate for work done by paralegals and law clerks.

You have to trust your instincts, too. Do you like them? Do they listen to you? Seem interested in your case? Did your meetings start on time? Were you interrupted by phone calls?

Once you are working with the lawyer, are you getting the kind of service you were promised? Do the points made in letters to the other side match those discussed with you? Does the lawyer seem to be heading to trial even though you and your spouse don't want to?

If you feel you are not being well represented, Harvey L. Golden, a Columbia, S.C., lawyer, suggests getting a second opinion from another lawyer. How helpful this would be depends a lot on your ability to present the situation objectively, candidly and thoroughly. In some instances, such experts as financial planners can provide valuable second opinions.

An alternative course is mediation. Divorce mediators, usually mental health professionals or attorneys specializing in family law, help couples work out an agreement but have no power to make binding decisions for you. Mediation won't work if either spouse wants to drag out the process or is too bitter to cooperate.

CNS Graphic

Mediation can be cheaper than negotiation through attorneys. You and your spouse hire one mediator and can split the fee, which is normally based on hourly rates comparable to an attorney's. Rates range widely but are often between $70 and $150 an hour. An average case might take 10 to 12 hours spread over five or six sessions but can take much longer, depending on the complexities of your finances and the depth of your disagreements. Each spouse still has an attorney, whose role is generally limited to reviewing and implementing the agreement you make.

DEAR ABBY

Marriage made in heaven enjoys 70 years on earth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Today is a very special day. It marks the 70th — yes, 70th — wedding anniversary of a couple who are very dear to me: my in-laws, Rose and Jay Phillips of Minneapolis.

Theirs was not just a marriage, it was a merger — a blending of beauty, brains, character, talent, ambition, generosity, hard work and mutual love, tempered with a sense of humor.

Their cornerstone: a devotion to their religion, and respect for the rights of others.

Congratulations and God bless you, Mother and Dad. Love, ABBY AND MORT

DEAR ABBY: I have a rather touchy problem. Last Mother's Day my husband and I had our 6-month-old daughter christened. Several relatives were present and, much to my surprise, they all brought gifts. While opening the gifts, my great uncle — a very wealthy man who has no children — told me he was going to open a "college fund" for our daughter. Then he started explaining the terms of the fund — how much interest it would draw, etc.

After waiting for six months and hearing nothing more about the "college fund," I asked my uncle about it, and he said he was going to go through a large bank in Nashville. (We live in a very small town in Tennessee.)

Abby, it's been over a year, and we still haven't received any information about the gift. My uncle is a very responsible man, and we would like very much for our daughter to have this gift to assure her college education. How should I handle it? — BLUE IN GRAY, TENN.

DEAR BLUE: Being "blue" will not accomplish anything — neither will procrastinating. Remind your uncle of the "college fund" he promised to establish for your daughter. And don't be shy. He offered it.

DEAR READERS: Rollan Melton, who writes a column in the Reno Gazette, was so taken with a sermon delivered by one V. James Jeffery, rector of the Trinity Episcopal Church in Reno, he shared that message with his readers. I've since discovered that the message in the sermon originally came from Robert Fulghum, a retired Unitarian minister in Edmonds, Wash. Here it is (in part):

"Most of what I really need to know about how to live, and what to do, and how to be, I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate school mountain, but there in the sandbox at nursery school.

"These are the things I learned: Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and cold milk are good for you.

"... When you go out into the world, watch for traffic, hold hands and stick together."

"... And it is still true, no matter how old you are, when you go out into the world, it's best to hold hands and stick together."

Thanks, Rector Jeffery and Robert Fulghum. I couldn't have said it better myself. And thanks to Edna Brigham for introducing me to Rollan Melton.

American marriages have high casualty rate

Associated Press

Marriage, American-style, has a high casualty rate — one out of three marriages ends in divorce.

In some areas of the country the failure rate is one in two, according to an article in Cosmopolitan, and the magazine consulted counselors, psychologists, psychiatrists, divorce lawyers and family court judges to find out why. These are the major reasons they gave why women get divorced:

■ What you expect is not what you get. Some people expect marriage to mirror television. Real-life parents also color expectations, said Patricia Bogin Wisch, psychologist, divorce mediator and director, Philadelphia Institute of Awareness.

"If your father always took out the garbage, then you think all husbands should," she said. "If your husband's mother cooked him a hot breakfast every morning, he expects you to do the same."

The experts advise couples to discuss expectations before the wedding day — especially money, sex and long-term goals.

■ You can't talk to each other. "You must express your feelings," said Dolores Meltzer, head of the family-therapy unit at Mid-Bergen Community Health Center in Paramus, N.J.

Family counselor Karen Goodman, director of Humanistic Associates of Philadelphia, said: "You can't always judge from a person's behavior what the problem is, and yet people make faulty assumptions all the time. Ask."

■ Life is too short to be unhappy. Phyllis Beck, a judge on the Supreme Court in Philadelphia, said of 25- to 35-year-olds:

"They look down the road and say, 'I don't really want to be living with this person in 20 years.' They assume — perhaps wrongly — that problems they have now will only get worse, and they don't want to see them through. There are ebbs and flows in every marriage, though."

■ Alcoholism, drug addiction and physical abuse. "In the past," Meltzer said, "a woman couldn't leave an abusive mate, because she had nowhere to go, but now, with centers for battered women opening around the country, she can walk out. No woman should have to suffer abuse."

■ In-law problems. "People often have problems because they haven't really separated from their families," Meltzer said. "It's not just the difficulty of committing yourself to a new life with your partner, but also your family's unwillingness to let go."

■ You married the wrong person. Usually you marry the wrong person either to please your parents or to displease them, Goodman said. But how can you tell ahead of time if you've picked the wrong partner?

"If you ask friends to be honest and are open to that honesty, you can learn a lot," said psychiatrist Dr. Martin Goldberg, director of Marriage Counsel of Philadelphia.

■ People grow and change at different rates.

"No marriage stays the same over the years," Goldberg said. "The question is: Do the changes strengthen the relationship or fracture it? Very often, they can break up a marriage."

■ You fight about money. "Value differences come out in the handling of money," Wisch said. "One partner may pay bills on time, avoid buying on credit, always live within a budget, while the other has an easy-come, easy-go attitude about money."

■ Society has changed its attitudes and rules. "At least half of the divorces we've mediated in my offices have been initiated by women," said Arnold Chassen, director of the Family and Divorce Mediation Services in Philadelphia. "It's easier now for a woman to become independent and strong enough to get along without a man."

■ Divorce is easier to get and no longer a "disgrace." All but two states now have no-fault divorce.

The mechanics of divorce have been simplified, but splitting up can be emotionally devastating — particularly if your problems are solvable with patience and the help of a marriage counselor.

Splitting kitty with spouse main litigation in divorce

Associated Press

Getting a divorce may be less messy than in the past, but it isn't necessarily easier.

The emphasis has changed from litigation over fault to negotiation over assets.

The trend is to view marriage as an economic partnership and its dissolution as the breakup of a business.

Assets that were never before considered marital property are now on the table, and nonmonetary contributions to a marriage — such as a homemaker's services — are now beginning to be considered fair game as bargaining chips, says Changing Times magazine.

State law specifies what is considered marital property and how it should be divided when spouses split.

You can work out a plan through mediation or with the help of your lawyer, but it must be something the court will approve.

Whichever route you take, these are the issues to be resolved.

■ ALIMONY. Unless you live in Texas, where state law prohibits it, a decision has to be made about alimony.

The key factors a court considers are the needs and financial abilities of each spouse.

Age, health and ability to work are considered, and there is sure to be a connection between the size of the property settlement and the decision on alimony.

If there are provisions in a prenuptial agreement covering your rights in a divorce, courts in a number of states will consider them.

But alimony is far from automatic. In a no-fault divorce between two career people with no children alimony is not likely to be awarded.

Alimony is still tax-deductible, but with the reduction of the highest tax rate from 50 percent in the past to 38.5 percent this year and 33 percent after that, it becomes substantially more expensive.

Not only does alimony cost the payer more, but it's more valuable to the recipient.

Since the payments are considered taxable income, the lower the recipient's tax bracket, the less tax she has to pay on that income.

■ CHILD SUPPORT. Support obligations vary by state and by family.

In some cases it includes private school tuition and college expenses.

If you have joint custody, figuring who pays how much may end up being even more complicated.

Child support is not deductible by the parent who pays it, nor is it included in the income of the receiving parent.

The general rule now for claiming a child as a dependent is that the exemption goes to the parent with whom a child lives most of the year regardless of which parent provides most of the child's support.

Therapist reveals men's fears in love lives

Hearst News Service

What are some of the things men fear most about their love lives?

According to California therapist Mel Krantzler, they are:

■ Their mates are attracted to other men.

■ They wonder if their women still find them attractive.

■ They worry that a woman's other lovers were better.

■ They fear illness or medications will make them impotent.

■ They continually fear losing control.

■ They're afraid they can't meet the sexual demands of liberated women.

■ They think they're turnoffs in the sack.

■ They think exposing their own sexual fantasies will turn off their lovers.

Fishing for families

Copley News Service

The family that fishes together may stick together. It turns out fishing is better than any other type of leisure activity when it comes to building better relationships between family members. In fact, fishing was at the top of the list in study conducted by Dr. Rudy Nail, a St. Louis family therapist.

Nail also ranks softball, baseball, swimming, golf, bowling, exercising, hunting, tennis and skiing in his list of the top 10 leisure activities.

What's the worst family leisure activity? Watching TV.

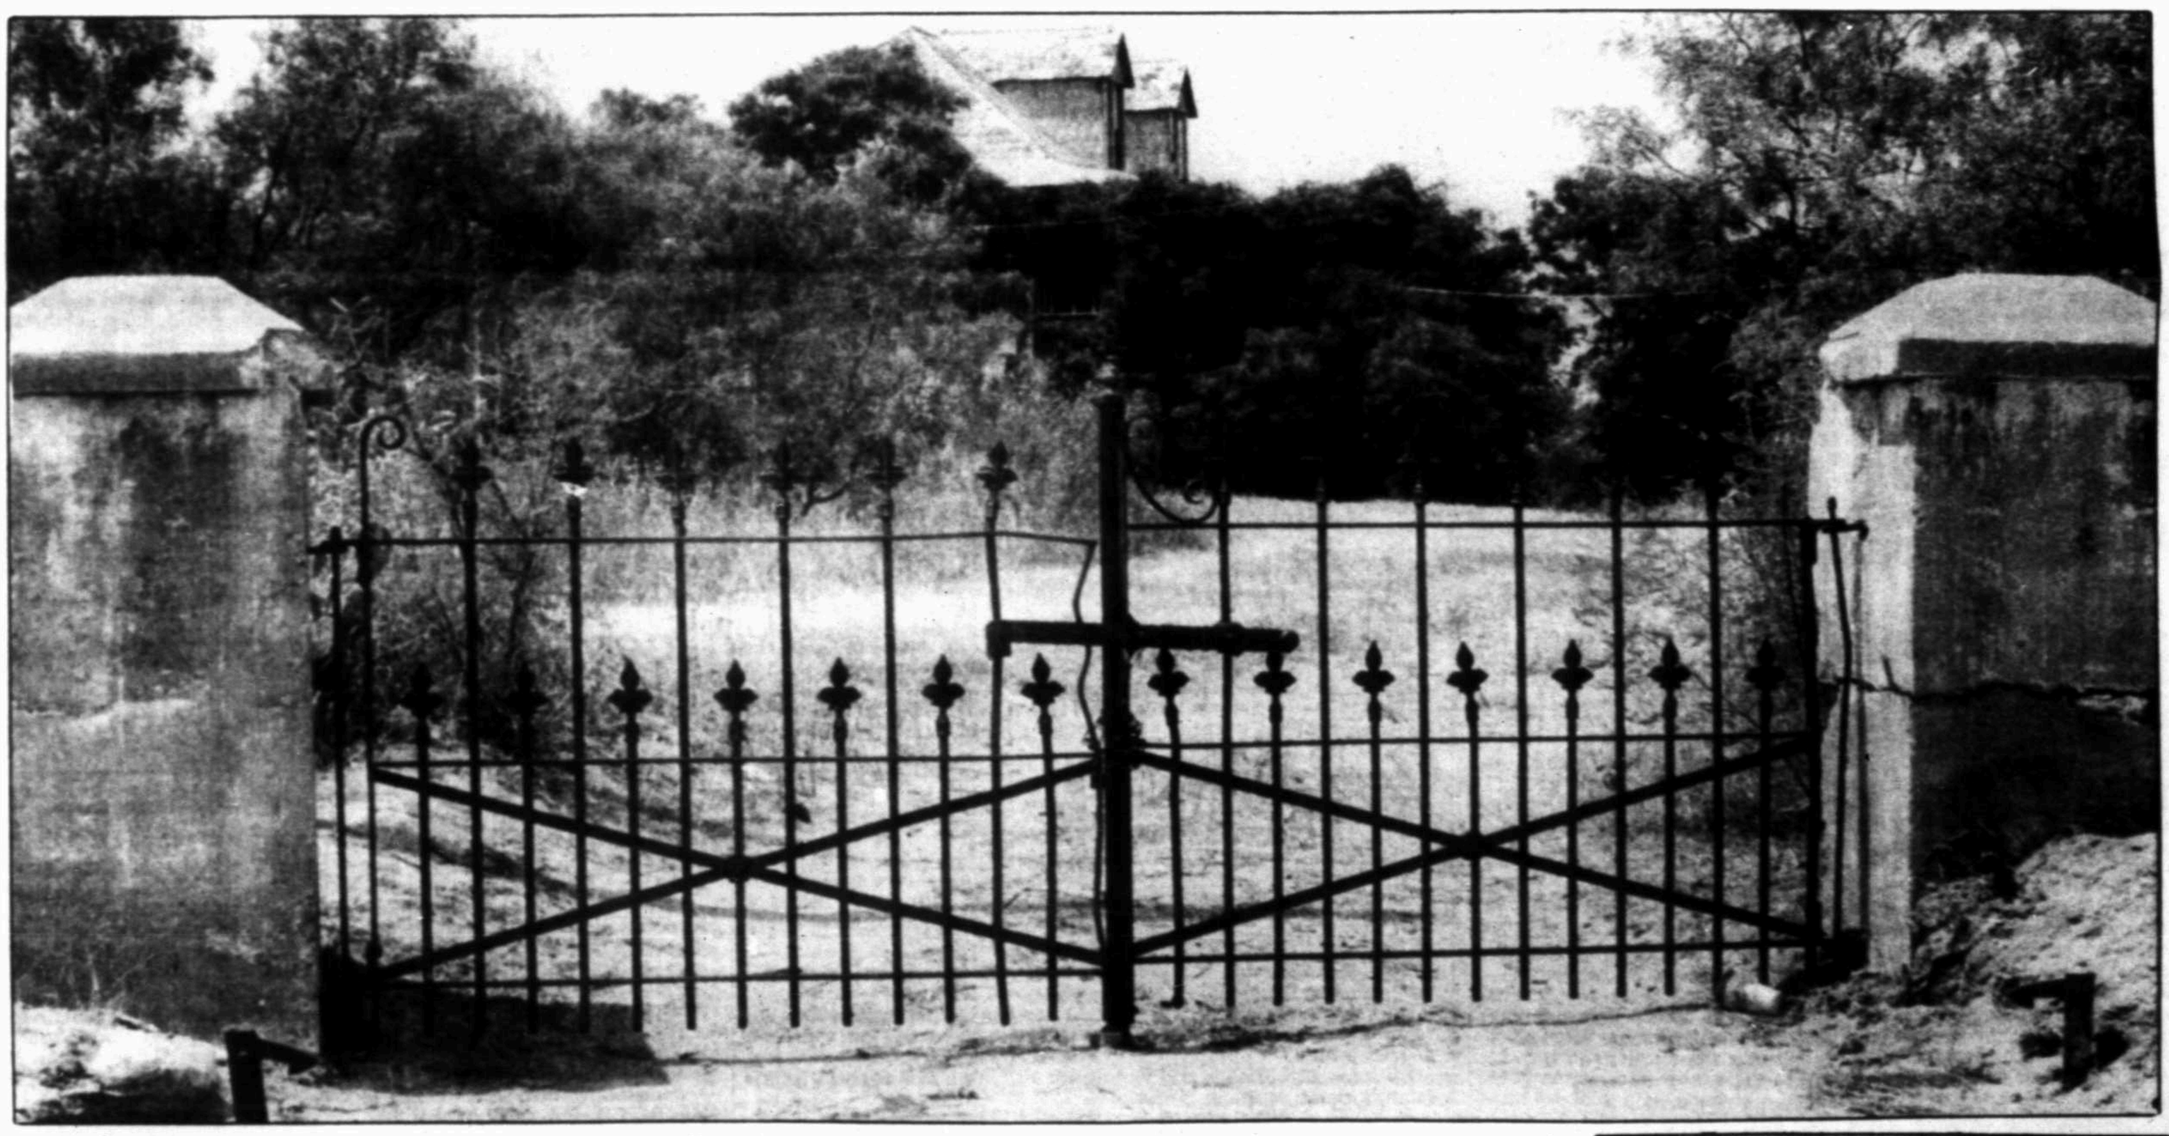
Miles Tollison, top left, said no one has been inside the convent in the last 15 years except when the Jaycees operated their annual spook-house. Recently it was reopened during the Old Settlers Reunion to give area residents and guests a chance to revisit part of their heritage that some may have experienced growing up.

The top right and center photo show exterior shots of the remaining west wing. Originally there was a center building and another wing directly across from the standing one. The bottom left photo is a look into the attic while the center photo shows an altar that still remains. The bottom right photo is an upstairs hallway.

A place in history



STANTON — Some people are remembered for great deeds and heroic efforts. Events and places are remembered because of them.

Such is the case of the old convent located in Stanton.

It began as a religious monument of sorts, started by the Carmelite monks of Kansas as a center to train young men for the priesthood. Later it evolved into a Catholic school named Our Lady of Mercy Academy and Convent.

The convent school was used until 1938 and today only the west wing of a small part of West Texas history remains.

And remain it will, since the Stanton Jaycees recently purchased the convent.

Spokesperson for the group, Miles Tollison, said efforts are under way to turn ownership of the convent into a foundation. And restoration of it would be completed somewhere between two and three years at an approximate cost of $150,000.

Teen-ager maybe 'a little special,' but not handicapped

By GRACE LIM

DENTON (AP) — When people marvel at April Dawn Voglino's artwork and ask, "You did this with your left hand?" the 16-year-old Kingsland teen-ager grins mischievously and says, "It's the only one I have."

April, who lost her right arm in a shark attack three months ago, was once an aspiring right-handed artist. She had won several art awards, but after she lost her arm, she began drawing with her other hand.

She's also doing the other things most teen-agers do, like going to the prom and enrolling in driver's education for the summer.

She doesn't consider herself handicapped, different or special.

"Well, maybe special," April said, grinning, showing her dimples. "I like to think I'm a little special. But definitely not handicapped."

April, wearing bright orange high-top sneakers and a matching orange and white striped T-shirt, is not unlike many other teen-age girls who think actor Tom Cruise is a hunk and pizza is food for all times.

"I'm just a normal 16-year-old girl," said the blue-eyed teen who will be a junior at Llano High School this fall.

But before she starts school, April will be fitted for an artificial arm.

"I'm going to have so much fun with that arm," she said, laughing. "I'm going to put it in somebody's locker, probably a freshman's. Can you see it? They're going to open that locker and an arm falls out. It's going to be funny."

Her aunt Vicky Pruett joins in and says, "They are going to rewrite the school policy and say, 'Please leave your arms at the door.' "

"OR DO NOT put your arm in the teachers' drawers. It's going to be a riot. I can't wait," April said.

April Dawn Voglino of Kingsland, an aspiring artist who lost her right arm in a shark attack three months ago, poses recently in her aunt's home in Denton. The 16-year-old artist who has won several art awards and has begun drawing with her left arm does not consider herself handicapped.

Since the shark attack April 18 at Mustang Island, April has been using humor to cope. She recalls an incident when she was trying to crawl on three limbs for the first time.

"I was trying to get my shirt that was laying on the double bed. I was sitting there trying to figure out how to crawl and finally I did. I got over there, grabbed my shirt and I went plop right on my face. My hiney was sticking up in the air. I was sitting there on my face, thinking, 'Good job, April, real good,' because after I grabbed the shirt, I figured out there's nothing holding me up."

Another time, when she filled out an application for a driving learner's permit, the instructor said to specify whether she was right or left-handed. April didn't skip a beat. "Right," she joked.

April is staying with the Pruetts in Denton while completing a three-week driver's education course at North Texas State University. A swivel knob attached to the steering wheel allows her to manipulate a motor vehicle easily.

"That's the car I want. A '65 Mustang," she said, pointing to a passing car. "I'm driving an automatic now, but I'm going to learn how to drive a standard, too."

While April is eager to talk about what she's accomplished and what she's going to do, she avoids talking about the attack.

She carries an article describing the shark attack for the curious.

"When people ask me, 'How did you lose your arm?' and I say, 'A shark bit it off,' they usually say, 'Nah...' This way I can just say, 'Here, read this.' "

"I don't mind them asking how my arm is doing or if it hurts but I don't like them asking me anything about that day.

"I'M TRYING TO deal with it the best that I can and the way I'm doing that is try not to think about it as much as possible. Some people think that's not good, but that's how I choose to deal with it right now. If I change my mind about it, I will."

Her father, Robert Voglino, said his first-born now sleeps with the lights on. "Once or twice, she'll get up in the middle of the night and say, 'Daddy, I'm scared.' "

Sometimes her family will joke about the accident, April said. The Voglinos watched the movie Jaws III the night before the shark attack.

"We were screaming (during the movie), my sisters and I," she said, adding that her father jokingly told the girls never to scream upon seeing a shark.

After the real thing, April reminded her father, "Well, Dad. I didn't scream."

But her father gets misty-eyed and has trouble finding the words when talking about the day he and his wife, Beth, almost lost their daughter.

Voglino was in shoulder-deep water near April when he heard his daughter call out.

"It (the shark) first bumped into her. By the time I got to her, it bit her here and moved up to here," he said, pointing first to the elbow then to the upper arm.

"I grabbed her and put my arm around her so it wouldn't drag her away from me and just began to beat it with my fist, trying to knock it off her arm. Didn't seem to do any good, but what else could I do?" he asked, wiping the tears.

After struggling with the shark for 20 or 30 seconds, father and daughter headed toward the shores, where Mrs. Voglino began administering first-aid.

"I didn't want her to go into shock, so we kept talking to her," Mrs. Voglino said.

APRIL REMEMBERS the day. "I got so tired of them asking what my name was that I started to sing. I sang "Home, Home on the Range" and some John Denver songs," she said.

"I started singing 'Country Roads' because I thought I was going to die. I thought one way to make sure I wasn't going to die was to sing.

"I love his (Denver's) songs. They are about nature and some about love. I love nature," she said softly, looking away, then adding, "except for sharks."

"I want to beat them with a baseball bat. Sometimes I imagine that. It makes me feel better thinking about beating them to a pulp."

But she shakes her head and grins.

"I got free tickets to see (Denver)" two months after the attack, she said.

An Austin radio station was giving away John Denver concert tickets so "I asked my mom, 'Wonder if I could call them up and ask them to save me some tickets for a poor deserving young soul? I guess I wouldn't tell them who I was. I would tell them that I was a friend or a relative (of the deserving soul).' "

While the radio station ploy didn't work, she did receive three free tickets from the Frank Erwin Center public relations office. "This time I told them who I was so it was OK," she said, sheepishly.

April said people sometimes act uncomfortably when they find out that she was a shark-attack victim. "When people find out that I'm the one, they usually ask stupid questions and feel like they have to tell me some shark stories. I don't need to hear that.

"KIDS ARE better than adults by far. They understand, I guess, but adults feel they have to say, 'Oh, I'm so sorry,' and ask stupid questions."

April, with her infectious smile, is not worried about what her peers might think about her artificial limb, especially her male peers.

"When a guy looks at a girl, he doesn't look at her arms. He looks at her face, hair and the front, the rear end and her legs and that's all. They don't pay attention to her arms. Is that not right?" she asked, grinning.

After the accident, April received hundreds of letters from people expressing concern and support.

"People tell me I inspire them. It's nice, but I'm kind of tired of people putting me out as brave or courageous. I just want to get back to being normal again. When people tell me that I'm inspiring to them, I'm just being myself."

Funds to offset April Voglino's ongoing medical expenses have been established at the Lake Buchanan State Bank, P.O. Box 468, Buchanan Dam, 78609, and Kingsland First Baptist Church, P.O. Box 1137, Kingsland, 78639.

Friends, relatives of minister want police to step up probe of attack

DALLAS (AP) — Friends, relatives and neighbors want officials to step up their investigation into an attack on the wife of a prominent Methodist minister that left her comatose.

Margaret "Peggy" Railey was choked nearly to death in the April attack and her husband, the Rev. Walker Railey, has refused to cooperate with police investigators and prosecutors.

"All of them (callers) have been angry that we have not arrested anyone in this case and because we have not required people to tell what they know," said Lt. Ron Waldrop.

Railey has not talked with police since the day after he found his wife unconscious on the floor of their garage April 22. When questioned before a grand jury last week, he repeatedly invoked his Fifth Amendment right to remain silent, sources said.

Neighbors of the couple, who lived in the Lake Highlands area of Dallas, say they no longer feel vulnerable to threats they and the Raileys believed had come from a white supremacist group.

Railey had received several threatening letters attacking his pro-civil rights stance in the weeks prior to the attack. Authorities later determined the letters were typed on a typewriter from Railey's church, First United Methodist of Dallas.

A close friend says Mrs. Railey believed the six threatening letters received by her husband were little more than hate mail, The Dallas Morning News reported. The friend said Mrs. Railey was wary of the possibility the family was being stalked by someone and resolved to take precautions.

On April 21 or early April 22, someone grabbed Mrs. Railey, 38, in her home, wrapped cord or wire around her neck and choked her nearly to death. She is now being cared for in a Tyler nursing home.

On May 1, Railey, a former senior minister at First United Methodist, attempted suicide and was hospitalized for a drug overdose.

No arrests have been made and officials have yet to name anyone a suspect. Police are looking to citizens for help, offering rewards for information through the Crime Stoppers program.

They also have retraced Railey's steps from the evening of April 21 to April 22. The crucial point is between 9 p.m. and 12:40 a.m., when Railey said he arrived home to find his wife on the floor of their garage, investigators said.

A jogger in the Railey's neighborhood told police she spotted a man dressed in a suit and street shoes running through the yard between two houses south of the Railey home about 9:30 p.m.

STATE IN BRIEF

Volunteers look for signs of missing woman's grave

BACLIFF (AP) — Hundreds of volunteers searched for signs of a grave where a woman who has been missing for 14 months may be buried, but found nothing, authorities said.

After the day-long, shoulder-to-shoulder search in the Bacliff area, Chief Galveston County Sheriff's Deputy Gene Leonard said officials would await additional information before other searches are held.

The group hoped to find the body of Shelley Sikes, 19, a waitress who disappeared on her way home from her job in Galveston last May, and has not been seen since.

Her parents organized an intensive search, distributing pamphlets nationwide and offering rewards for information about her.

John Robert King, 29, of Bacliff and Gerald Peter Zwarst, 33, of El Lago have been charged with kidnapping the girl. Both are being held on $100,000 bail.

AIDS controversy raging

HOUSTON (AP) — The director of the nation's first AIDS hospital and the city health director are publicly disputing how serious a health threat the disease poses.

Dr. Peter Mansell, medical director the Institute for Immunological Disorders, wrote in a letter to Mayor Kathy Whitmire that the city's health director doesn't know enough about AIDS and is downplaying its perils to the public.

"The public health official for this city continues to deny that AIDS represents a serious problem," Mansell wrote in the July 13 letter.

Dr. James Haughton, the city health director, denied Mansell's allegations.

Sitter suspect in beating

HOUSTON (AP) — A traced telephone call led to the arrest of a 17-year-old babysitter suspected of abducting a 3-year-old girl and beating the child's grandmother, authorities said.

"I've learned right now that I don't think I'll ever leave my baby with anybody," said Karen Sue Clark, 33, at a party Sunday night marking the return of her daughter, Tabitha.

The babysitter apparently went berserk Friday night while Ms. Clark was enjoying a night out, beat the grandmother and fled with the baby, investigators said.

Pro-gambling forces bet on the blitz; Foes raise stakes

DALLAS (AP) — Proponents of racetrack gambling are mounting an advertising blitz to promote the Nov. 3 binding referendum on legalizing pari-mutuel wagering.

Officials of the Texas Horse Racing Association say the Austin-based group plans to spend $1.6 million to counter opposition from religious leaders and prominent Texans — whose group includes Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

"I'm 99 percent sure it will pass," said Ricky Knox, executive director of the Austin-based Horse Racing Association, of the proposition to allow betting at horse and dog race tracks.

As of last month, the association had collected the names and addresses of 485,000 supporters to be targeted in get-out-the-vote efforts, he said. Consultants have been on board for months, and more than 40,000 pro-racing pamphlets have been distributed statewide.

Staffing has been arranged for phone banks that will become operational in about two weeks, several fund-raisers have been held, and bumper stickers have been passed out at horse shows that say: "Don't mess with taxes. Race horses in Texas."

Pari-mutuel racing's chief opposition is a coalition of ministers, politicians and anti-crime organizations called Texans Who Care, which opened a campaign headquarters in Dallas last week. Leaders of the coalition said they got a late start because they were tied up in a legislative battle against a lottery bill.

The organization received its first shipment of 20,000 anti-gambling brochures last week, has hired a pollster and a direct-mail expert, and is preparing a voter information guide on the election, said spokeswoman Sue Cox.

Distraught father still searching for son's body

SISTERDALE (AP) — A distraught father has not abandoned the search for his son, who helped rescue other youths before being washed away by the flooded Guadalupe River last month.

"He's my son. Can't just leave a part of you," says John Bankston Sr. "I know a part of him is with the Lord, but a part of him is still down here. I want to find my son."

Bankston and a handful of volunteers have combed the banks of the Guadalupe looking for John Bankston Jr., missing since July 17 when floodwaters swept away a busload of Dallas-area church campers returning from the Pot O' Gold camp in Comfort.

The 17-year-old was last seen helping others to safety during the river's worst flooding in 55 years. He was one of 43 people aboard two vehicles from the Seagoville Road Baptist Church in Balch Springs. The bodies of nine other teen-agers were recovered from the river and 33 people were rescued.

The elder Bankston has been staying at a Comfort hotel since the accident, searching for his son every day.

Over the weekend, he covered the river bank in Sisterdale, 20 miles southeast of the accident site. He said the body may have drifted downstream.

Bankston, 37, of Dallas, said finding out his son's fate is essential for his family's peace of mind.

Local police investigate two unrelated armed robberies

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

Midland police are investigating two armed robberies which occurred over the weekend and which authorities believe to be unrelated.

At about 3 a.m. this morning, a suspect believed to be a man wearing a light blue ski mask with orange trim entered the Friends Convenience Store at 2411 S. Rankin Highway, reports said.

The clerk, Tim Ollie Benson, said the suspect came into the store, and proceeded to tape the clerk's hands and ankles together before breaking into the safe and stealing more than $2,000, reports said.

The suspect was carrying a nickel-plated, semi-automatic pistol, reports said.

Another customer entered the store after the suspect left and found Benson lying face-down on the floor, police said.

Another aggravated robbery occurred early Saturday morning, reports said.

Doris Dean Harden said a man entered EZ Mart Store on 2210 N. Big Spring between 2 and 3 a.m. Saturday.

Reports said the suspect bought an Almond Joy candy bar and, after placing the change for it on the counter, pulled a .38 caliber gun out of his pants and told her he wanted the cash in the register.

About $80 was taken in the robbery and the suspect left on foot, Ms. Harden told police.

A Midland woman was arrested Saturday night for solicitation of prostitution, police reports said.

She was transferred to the Midland County jail and released on $500 bond.

The woman flagged down an undercover policeman in the 1000 block of South Midkiff Road Saturday at 1:15 a.m., the officer said.

When the patrolman stopped, she asked if she could get in the car and the policeman said yes, reports explained.

Upon getting in the passenger's seat, the woman proceeded to explain "her price," reports said.

She was then informed he was a policeman and arrested.

Carmen's Import store at 410 N. Terrell St. was robbed Saturday night as well, police reports said.

Taken were a videocassette recorder, stereo speakers and two radios, valued at $900, reports said.

Two escaped prisoners still at large

PALESTINE (AP) — Two prisoners who escaped from the Coffield Unit were being sought, while authorities said a man matching the description of one of the escapees stole a car in Longview.

A man put a knife to the throat of an 11-year-old boy and forced him out of a parked car Saturday, dispatcher Daryl Ferguson of the Gregg County Sheriff's Department said Sunday. The man then drove off toward Interstate 20, officers said.

Authorities said there was a previous attempt to steal a car Saturday when a man tried to force a woman out of her car in nearby Liberty City. The woman put on her emergency brake and struggled with the man, who then fled on foot, officials said.

In both cases, the man matched the description of Danny Ray Lambert, 29, who escaped Friday apparently by driving a truck through the back gate of the Coffield Unit in Anderson County, police said.

There have been no sightings reported of the other escapee, Phillip Hutchinson, 24.

Both men were serving life prison terms, said prison spokesman Charles Brown.

Hutchinson was convicted in Williamson County of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Tollison said the convent is listed as a historical monument with the Texas Historical Commission. He also said restoration experts were contacted in Austin and Midland to get estimates for completion.

While some foundations are being contacted for funding of the restoration project, other money has been donated and placed in a Stanton bank.

Farm Aid Inc. dispenses $6.4 million by mid-May

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Farm Aid Inc. dispensed $6.4 million by mid-May to 100 organizations aiding farmers in 39 states, according to a summary of activities released by the group.

Farm Aid, the non-profit organization that distributes money raised by singer Willie Nelson's benefit concerts, raised $11.5 million from two previous concerts — Farm Aid I in Champaign, Ill., in September 1985 and Farm Aid II held near Austin, Texas, on July 4, 1986. Together, the concerts cost $3.2 million.

Through the end of last year, Farm Aid had donated $5.3 million to farm assistance groups. By mid-May, it had spent another $1.1 million. A month later, it had allocated another $200,000 to aid farmers, said Kennedy Wheatley, Farm Aid's associate director.

The group's administrative costs through 1986 were $183,528, or 1.6 percent of its total income. By mid-May it had about $1.66 million left in its accounts, which is roughly the cost of putting on another concert.

Not reflected in the report is the $1.4 million raised by the sale of tickets for Farm Aid III, to be Sept. 19 in Lincoln. Farm Aid, however, stands to lose almost $74,000 if the Nebraska Department of Revenue collects unpaid sales tax on the tickets.

Of the money dispensed by Farm Aid, the largest category is $1.7 million used to buy food and make emergency payments for medical and utility bills.

The second largest category was for education — $1.4 million. About $750,000 of that went to pay for the United Farmer and Rancher Congress in St. Louis last September.

At that event, sponsored by the Minnesota-based League of Rural Voters, delegates endorsed a federal farm program based on crop production controls. The American Farm Bureau Federation criticized the event as political, but the congress was endorsed by a coalition of 13 other farm groups, including National Farmers Union, National Farmers Organization and the National Save the Family Farm Coalition.

Of the $163,300 given by Farm Aid to Nebraska groups, Interchurch Ministries of Nebraska received $110,500, said Joanne Komenda, coordinator of a statewide network of food pantries. The money was used to buy food for 200 pantries. One-time grants of up to $200 also were given directly to farm families to meet emergencies.

A total of $15,300 went to the Farm Crisis Committee of Emerson to buy seed and food for farmers and to send reports on government studies of farm issues to members. The Farm Crisis Network, a church-sponsored group, received $10,000 to help run a hot line. The Great Plains Organizing Project, an interdenominational group of church leaders working to improve the quality of life in small towns, received about $15,000. Nebraskans for Peace used $10,000 to help educate city residents about the farm crisis. Farm Action Concerns Tomorrow's Society, a University of Nebraska student group, also received $2,500.

Gold jumps $10

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices jumped more than $10 an ounce in early European trading today on worries over mounting tension in the Persian Gulf, dealers said.

The dollar rose against all currencies except the Canadian dollar in light trading.

Bullion dealers said worries about the situation in the Middle East pushed gold prices higher in Hong Kong, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins. Gold is often used as a refuge investment at times of political instability.

In Hong Kong, gold rose $5.81 an ounce, closing at $470.79.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $471.25 a troy ounce and at mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $473.25, sharply higher than Friday's late bid of $461.40.

In Zurich, the bid price was $473.25 at noon, up from $463.00 late Friday.

Silver prices also rose sharply in London where the metal was selling at a bid price of $8.60 a troy ounce at mid-morning, up from Friday's late bid of $8.24.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 150.15 yen from Friday's 149.25. Later, in London, it was quoted at 150.05 yen.

Boeing stock gets a 'Boone'

Stockholders see shares soar to $54

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co. shareholders saw the company's stock hit a high of $54 a share last week after Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens expressed his interest in buying a chunk of the aerospace company.

Pickens has remained silent about his plans, other than to notify Boeing, as required by federal law, that he planned to buy more than $15 million in stock and might attempt to acquire 15 percent of the outstanding shares. With 155.37 million shares outstanding, that would cost Pickens nearly $1.24 billion at $53 a share.

Following the July 27 announcement by Boeing of Pickens' interest, Boeing stock climbed $7 a share. At one point, it hit $54 a share, and ended the week at $53.

Boeing presently is owned by approximately 64,000 shareholders. According to Vickers Stock Traders Guide, the largest holder as of the end of first-quarter 1987 was Capital Guardian Trust Co., a Los Angeles investment company with 2.9 million shares.

As an investment company, Capital Guardian represents a large number of smaller investors, who could range from pension funds to corporations to private individuals.

"It's almost impossible to know who holds your stock," said S. Michael Kunath, a Seattle investment counselor. "If we were listed as holding 50,000 Boeing shares, that might represent five people or 500. You would have no way of knowing."

At times in the past five years, up to three-quarters of Boeing's stock has been held by institutions, including mutual funds, insurance companies, pension funds and investment advisors. At the end of first-quarter 1987, just over half of Boeing's shares were held by institutions.

No individual, including descendants of company founder William Boeing, owns more than 1 percent of the stock.

Connally won't starve

.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — John B. Connally, the former Treasury secretary and three-term governor of Texas who filed for bankruptcy on Friday, said he might return to legal work or assisting others wanting to "put deals together."

Connally, who is 70 years old, told the Associated Press: "You won't see me at the food stamp line."

Connally filed in Federal Bankruptcy Court here for protection from his creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code, citing Texas's depressed real estate market. The Barnes-Connally Partnership, a development venture including Connally and former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, filed for liquidation under Chapter 7. The partnership listed liabilities of $56.2 million and assets of $38.1 million.

According to The Austin American-Statesman, the partnership's interest in its largest project, Estates of Barton Creek, a luxury housing subdivision, was owned through another company, Austin Sunbelt Development Inc., that filed for liquidation on Friday. That project involved 1,411 acres, with plans for 1,500 homes.

Some of the projects held by Barnes-Connally had been in foreclosure actions earlier, and judgments had been rendered against the two partners personally in various suits. Two federal tax liens, totaling $97,000, were filed against the partnership on July 13.

Southwest has meager net earnings

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines reported meager net income Friday of $635,000 for the second quarter after the company's earnings were offset by subsidiary TranStar's losses.

Southwest had a net income of $17.1 million in the second quarter of 1986.

The company also reported earnings per share of 2 cents for the second quarter of 1987, compared with 53 cents for the same period in 1986.

Southwest Airlines reported a second-quarter operating profit of $8.87 million for the parent company alone in the second quarter, compared with an operating profit in the same quarter of 1986 of $25.5 million.

Herbert D. Kelleher, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said Southwest Airlines, standing alone and on an unconsolidated basis, returned to profitability.

He said that its earnings were sufficient to overcome its first quarter loss and to produce an unconsolidated parent company profit for the first half of 1987.

"On a consolidated basis, the second-quarter loss of TranStar, Southwest's wholly owned but independently operated subsidiary, virtually offset the second-quarter profits of parent Southwest, resulting in a meager consolidated net profit for both companies of $635,000 for the second quarter and a consolidated net loss of $9,199,000 for the first six months of 1987," Kelleher said.

"It is the unfortunate losses of TranStar, commencing in September 1986 and continuing on a substantial basis into July 1987, that caused the regrettably necessary decision of TranStar's board of directors to discontinue the operations of TranStar on Aug. 10, 1987, and to thereafter liquify its assets," he said.

"It was hoped that the combination of industry fare increases and stronger summer passenger traffic would restore TranStar to profitability but that proved not to be the case," he said.

TranStar blames Continental

HOUSTON (AP) — TranStar Airlines was forced out of business after Continental Airlines wielded its pricing muscle, says the executive who helped found TranStar.

"It (TranStar) would have been a great operation, but Continental proceeded to eliminate it," said Lamar Muse, 67, who in 1981 helped found Muse Air, later renamed TranStar.

Last Wednesday, TranStar announced it could no longer compete effectively with giant carriers with big route systems and sophisticated computer reservations. The airline said it would cease operations Aug. 9.

Pennzoil denys wrongdoing

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. plans to file documents today saying it did not break a federal regulatory rule that possibly voided its agreement to acquire Getty Oil Co., the Houston Chronicle reported.

The Securities and Exchange Commission on July 22 filed a brief with the Texas Supreme Court saying Pennzoil had a private agreement to buy Getty stock from the J. Paul Getty Museum while it had a public offer outstanding for the company.

The action would have violated an SEC rule against such private transactions, thus voiding the planned acquisition, the SEC argued.

Texaco has asked the Texas Supreme Court to hear its appeal of a $10.53 billion judgment against it won by Pennzoil in November 1985, when a Houston jury concluded Texaco had wrongly interfered with Pennzoil's planned merger with Getty.

In today's filing with the Texas Supreme Court, Pennzoil will argue its agreement with Getty interests called for the Sarah C. Getty Trust to buy stock owned by the J. Paul Getty Museum, the Chronicle quoted sources as saying.

Under the terms of a "memorandum of agreement," the Getty Trust would have bought stock owned by the museum, while Pennzoil would have bought stock owned by public shareholders.

The trust, controlled by Gordon P. Getty, at the time owned about 40 percent of Getty's stock, while the museum owned about 12 percent. Under the merger agreement, the resulting organization would have been owned 57 percent by the Getty Trust and 43 percent by Pennzoil.

Allied Products buys Smith Energy Services

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

An international energy firm with facilities in Midland has been sold and a Midland executive will head the new division.

The Chicago-based Allied Products Corp. announced today that it had bought the name and certain assets of Smith International Inc. of Newport Beach for an undisclosed cash sum.

Smith Energy Services headquartered in Golden Colorado and with facilities in Midland, provides high technology, well stimulation services to the oil and gas industry. The purchase of Smith Energy will be combined with Allied's Cooper workover rig business to form the neculeus of a new Energy Service Group which will be headed by Dan G. Moriarty, president and CEO of Leamco Services Inc. of Midland.

This acquisition represents a significant step forward in implementing a strategy of becoming a major provider of services, parts and equipment for those industries that produce and deliver oil," said Richard Drexler, president and CEO of Allied Products, a major manufacturer of agricultural equipment, transportation and industrial products and chemical specialties.

"We are very optimistic about the prospects of the energy business, especially in light of of recent oil price increases," said Drexler.

Asked if the headquarters for the new Allied Products Energy Group might be moved to Midland, Dan Moriarty said it was too soon to tell about that, but indicated that it might be discussed.

Smith Energy Services operates out of four specialized centers in the Rocky Mountains and West Texas regions.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Placid may file Chapter 11 plan

DALLAS — According to news reports the Hunt brothers Placid Oil is expected to file for Chapter 11 reorganization today in a plan that would eventually pay back its creditors over a 10 year period if the company can remain profitable. The oil company owes 18 U.S. and foreign banks $773 million.

Nation's economy expands more

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's economy expanded further in July, with production and new orders rising but employment declining, according to a survey of purchasing managers.

The National Association of Purchasing Management, whose members buy raw materials and products for industrial concerns, said Sunday its indicator of future economic growth hit a 12-month high last month.

It said the index rose to 58.2 percent in July from 57.3 percent in June, marking 12 consecutive months the indicator has been above 50 percent. A reading above 50 percent generally indicates the economy is expanding, while one below indicates a decline, the group says.

Manufacturing demand climes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for manufactured goods climbed 1.7 percent in June, the fifth consecutive monthly increase, as U.S. factories continued to reap the benefits of rising foreign demand.

The Commerce Department said Friday that orders for durable and nondurable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $204.8 billion in June.

Pan Am considering resturcture

NEW YORK (AP) — The coalition representing most Pan American World Airways workers said it has held preliminary discussions with Anglo-French financier Sir James Goldsmith over a possible restructuring of the airline's parent.

In an announcement marking the latest development in Pan Am Corp.'s often bitter relations with its labor unions, the company's Joint Labor Coalition said Friday it also was talking with other, undisclosed parties about restructuring alternatives.

Banks plan $700 million merger

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pittsburgh-based PNC Financial Corp. said it would merge with Central Bancorporation Inc. in a nearly $700 million transaction that would create a $32.7 billion bank holding company.

Motorists to pay for 65 mph limit

Insurance costs will jump 10 percent

By ALAN FLIPPEN
Associated Press Writer

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — Auto insurance rates will rise an estimated 10 percent in states that have adopted the new 65 mph speed limit, an insurance company study said.

Half of the increase would be needed to compensate for the higher number of accidents expected at higher speeds, while the rest would cover the increased severity of such accidents, the study by Metropolitan Property & Liability Insurance Co. said.

The finding "is supported by accident statistics, the laws of physics, and intuitive logic," the study's author, Metropolitan actuary Martin Deede, wrote.

Metropolitan officials said the study, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press Tuesday, does not necessarily mean that the company plans a rate increase any time soon.

The study's findings were based largely on statistics showing a significant decrease in accidents when the national speed limit was lowered to 55 mph in 1974.

"It is logical to conclude that the 4.6 percent reduction in accident frequency (from 1973 to 1974) will be reversed today in those states that abandon the 55 mph speed limit," the Warwick-based insurer said.

"Many European nations saw similar declines in accident frequency when they introduced or lowered speed limits in the 1970s in response to the energy crisis," the study said. "Regrettably, Denmark, Finland and Sweden also saw sharp upturns in accident frequency when they again raised speed limits as energy problems eased."

The second component of the study was based on statistics showing that deaths per motor vehicle accident decreased 11 percent between 1973 and 1974.

"A figure of 5 percent for the increase in severity in states which abandon 55 mph is predicted, rather than a complete reversal of the 11 percent figure, as a result of an allowance for the increased use of seat belts and child safety seats, as well as the better medical care which prevails today," the study said.

Bob Sasser, a spokesman for State Farm Insurance Co., the nation's largest automobile insurer, said the study's figures sounded reasonable.

"There's no reason to think it's off base," Sasser said in a telephone interview from the company's headquarters in Springfield, Ill.

Stock Market Loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was lower today, and a rally that ran for eight straight sessions stalled temporarily.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks stayed lower throughout the morning session and was down 9.41 points by noon EDT to 2,562.66.

Losers outpaced gainers by slightly less than a 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 528 issues up, 925 down and 394 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 115.47 million shares in the morning session, vs. 96.15 million Friday morning.

Among actively traded blue-chips, IBM declined 1 to 160, General Electric fell ⅜ to 58⅞ and American Express was off ⅝ to 36¼.

Heightened Persian Gulf tensions, however, pushed oil stocks sharply higher. On the Big Board's most-active list Amoco rose 1½ to 86¼, Mobil gained 2⅛ to 54⅝ and Exxon jumped 3 to 97⅛.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks stood at 178.47, down 0.17.

The American Stock Exchange market value index was up .99 at 359.02.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.63 to 2,572.07, its fourth consecutive record high. Volume totaled 181.87 million shares.

Roy Disney embellishes legacy of entertainment left by Uncle Walt

Hearst News Service

It's not easy to intimidate a man who is worth $400 million, but a pure-hearted princess, an evil witch, a tenor prince and seven little comic reliefs managed to shake up Roy E. Disney.

"A few years ago I brought home a print of 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs,' because my kids had never seen it," says Disney, who bears an uncanny resemblence to his late uncle Walt. "Near the beginning there's a scene where she pulls a bucket out of a well and you see water spilling out all over and all these birds flying around and it is incredible, just beautiful. There was so much time spent on that little scene. I sat there and wondered, 'Can we ever get back to that kind of moviemaking, that kind of production value again?' "

That is a question that might be worth even more than Roy Disney. In this 50th aniversary year of the first animated feature, "Snow White," the Disney studio is embarking on a giant step backward to try and re-discover the magical quality found in such classics as "Pinocchio," "Fantasia," "Dumbo" and "Bambi."

"Animation is the fountainhead of this company," says Disney, 57. "It's where we came from. It caused the existence of Disneyland and Disney World. It's our roots. If you say 'Disney' to someone out in Peoria, the first thing that comes to their minds is animation."

If you say 'Disney' to a Hollywood insider these days, however, that someone will probably think of "Down and Out in Beverly Hills," "The Color of Money," "Golden Girls" and the Euro Disneyland megaproject. The company is riding high at the moment in live-action film, TV and its theme park development; animation has played almost no role in its present success.

But Roy Disney wants to bring film animation back into the studio's picture, and not just for nostalgia's sake. The new leaders of the company want high-quality cartoon features that will attract a huge audience, and they want them at the rate of one a year.

Animated films, beloved as they are, are spectacularly labor-intensive to produce. Originally budgeted at $150,000, "Snow White" cost $1.5 million (a huge production cost in 1937) and almost bankrupted the Disney operation. As the years went by, labor costs skyrocketed until it became increasingly difficult to take the time Walt Disney demanded for his animated visions.

But the bulk of the studio's output had to become primarily live action if it was to survive. In 1959, one of Walt's most treasured projects, "Sleeping Beauty," was released at a total cost of $6 million. It grossed, initially, only $5.3 million. In the same year, the far less inspired live-action "The Shaggy Dog," which cost less than $1 million, took in $9 million. After Walt died in 1966, the animation output slowed even more.

Roy Disney had once been involved in the production of Disney's popular nature film series, but more recently had become busy with private ventures in the broadcasting industry. His personal success and the fact that he is Disney's largest stockholder led to him being named the eighth richest man in the L.A. area by Forbes magazine last year.

Still, Disney didn't like what was happening to the studio in general and to animation in particular.

"The animation department wasn't doing very much," he says, "and what they were doing was not so hot. Even though 'The Fox and the Hound' (1981) did good business, it was not a great film."

With his huge financial clout, Roy Disney was instrumental in toppling the studio regime headed by Walt's son-in-law, Ron Miller, in 1984 and the installation of his allies, filmland hotshots Michael Eisner and Frank Wells, as heads of the company. In the aftermath, Disney could have had a position in just about any part of the studio operation that he chose.

"I went to Michael and Frank and said, 'The one thing I know you know nothing about is animation. Why don't you let me insulate it from the Hollywood influence that's coming into this place?' "

By "Hollywood influence," Disney means the penchant for pushing a film out quickly. To turn out a completed feature using the full, lush animation the public expects from Disney takes at least two and a half years.

Roy Disney's first task was to oversee the completion of "The Black Cauldron," a project that was sorely overbudget and overschedule. The 1985 movie, released at a final budget of about

One key to the turnaround at Disney under Walt's nephew Roy E. Disney has been crucial personnel decisions. Michael Eisner, the 43-year-old chairman and chief executive officer, is a vital ally for Roy.

$25 million, was a critical and box office disaster, and Roy Disney turned his attention to a smaller film, eventually released as "The Great Mouse Detective" (1986), to respectable business and press reaction.

A contemporary, New York-based adaptation of Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist," with dogs and a cat as the main characters, is the first animation project spawned by the new regime. Roy Disney set about working on it in the old way.

"Walt used to give the guys an idea and then let them kick around ideas and experiment for months or even years. We tried that, but in today's economic climate, it wasn't practical."

Enter Peter Schneider, hired to help oversee the revitalized animation unit and work with Roy Disney on streamlining the creative process.

"One of the biggest changes was that we started to say that we had to have a script before any production began," Schneider says. "All the experimenting in animation and false starts is where the money gets eaten up — animation is what costs $100,000 a week. That's were the budgets go out of control."

"Oliver," featuring the voices and singing of Bette Midler, Billy Joel, Dom DeLuise, Cheech Marin and Roscoe Lee Brown, is due for a summer 1988 release. The next project on the roster will likely be an adaptation of the "The Little Mermaid" children's story with songs by Howard Ashman and Alan Menken of "Little Shop of Horrors" fame. Projects in the hopper for the future include a sequel to "The Rescuers," a Winnie the Pooh feature, an adaptation of "Beauty and the Beast" and a new version of "Fantasia."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Lightning strikes, investor burning mad

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am the owner of 420 shares of common stock. Lightning hit my home and the stock certificates were burned up, as was the house.

I wrote to the stock's transfer agent, asking that new certificates for 420 shares be issued to me. I said I would do whatever is necessary to prove ownership. I gave them the names and addresses of the brokerage firm through which I bought the stock and the bank at which I deposit the dividend checks.

They told me I would have to pay, which I do not want to do. I already paid for that stock. It is mine. The certificates were not lost. They were destroyed.

Can you explain why I am being asked to pay for something that already is mine?

Doyle

A. You're not. You are, no doubt, being informed that you will have to provide what's called a "lost security affidavit" and a surety bond, if you want to obtain new certificates for those 420 shares. That's standard procedure.

You might be a bit confused by the term "lost security affidavit." It could just as well be called a "destroyed security affidavit." In that affidavit, you attest that the certificates are gone — lost, stolen, destroyed, burned up, disintegrated or whatever.

The money you are being asked to pay is for the surety bond, which usually costs 3 percent of the market value of the stock. For example, if that stock is trading at $10, the market value of 420 shares is $4,200 and the surety bonds would cost you $126.

That type of surety bond protects the company whose stock is involved and its transfer agent if "lost" certificates turn up in the hands of legitimate owners who present them for transfer.

No one is accusing you of hanky-panky, but things such as this do happen. Hence, lost security affidavits and surety bonds.

Now for some less dreary news. Even though you no longer have the certificates, you remain the owner of those 420 shares. Your name is recorded as the owner of those shares on the record books of the company, its transfer agent and dividend-paying agent. You'll continue to receive dividend checks, stockholder reports, annual meeting notices and other communications from the company.

However, because the destroyed certificates were issued in your name and you don't have replacements, you can't sell that stock and, when you join the choir silent, it won't be possible to transfer the 420 shares into your heirs' names.

My strong advice is to obtain the lost security affidavit, pay for the surety bond and get new certificates. In the future, keep all your stock and bond certificates in a safety deposit box.

Q. If I sell my stock this year, turn around and invest the money in ranch land within 30 or 60 days, will it be necessary to file the profit as a long-term capital gain or ordinary income?

A. You will be required to report the profit and pay income tax on it, no matter what you do with the money.

If you owned the stock for more than six months, the profit will be a long-term capital gain. The new federal tax law makes the tax on long-term capital gains the same as the tax on ordinary income — with the exception that, for 1986, the tax on long-term capital gains cannot exceed 28 percent.

Q. My stock and mutual fund shares were purchased through the office of a large brokerage firm near my former home and are still at that office in "street name." Now that I have moved, should I have the brokerage transfer my shares to its local office, so a financial consultant will be assigned to me and I can occasionally consult with him?

A. You can have your account transferred to that brokerage firm's nearby office, simply by placing a phone call. Your records will be moved, but it's most unlikely your shares will. Instead, they will stay at a central repository.

It's up to you how often you wish to talk to the broker assigned to your account. Some investors do that frequently. Others never phone brokers, except to place buy or sell orders.

Cowboys obtain Barksdale after trading Fellows

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Wide receiver Rod Barksdale, the newest Dallas Cowboy, never played high school or college football but has world class speed that gives defensive backs migraine headaches.

To get Barksdale from the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday night, Dallas signed holdout cornerback Ron Fellows then traded him to Coach Tom Flores' team 19 miles down the road at Oxnard.

It was the first player-for-player trade the Cowboys have made since 1984 when they traded Butch Johnson to the Houston Oilers for Mike Renfro.

Fellows, who had no contract and refused to report to the Cowboys' training camp, shopped his talents around the NFL and decided he preferred playing for the Raiders.

Fellows, a former seventh round draft choice from Missouri, was under the gun after Dallas drafted Baylor's Ron Francis in the second round. The rookie has been impressive in training camp.

"I'm delighted I'm going to the Raiders. I didn't want to go to Green Bay or somewhere like that," Fellows said from Dallas.

Coach Tom Landry said "Francis has so much talent he could start for us at right cornerback."

Landry had said before training camp that Fellows was "our best pure cover man because of his speed and quickness."

However, Landry was critical of Fellows' inability "to finish off more plays."

Fellows had 67 tackles and five interceptions in 1986.

Barksdale, starting his third season in the NFL, joined the Raiders as a free agent in 1985 and spent a year on the injured resrve.

His biggest NFL day was 179 yards on six receptions against the Indianapolis Colts. Barksdale caught 18 passes for 434 yards.

He has run a 10.2 in the 100 meters at Arizona. He was sixth in the 1984 NCAA championships in the 200 meters.

"He can burn it," said club President Tex Schramm. "With the speed he has, he has real value."

Schramm said Fellows had been on the market from the start of training camp.

"We're interested in doing anything we can to try to improve the club," Schramm said.

Asked if he thought he had been traded fairly by the Cowboys, Fellows said "not exactly. I'll be more appreciated by the Raiders."

Schramm said the Cowboys looked at offensive tackles but couldn't work a deal.

Still missing from camp is holdout linebacker Jeff Rohrer, who is being fined $1,000 per day until he shows, and first round draft pick Danny Noonan of Nebraska.

Rohrer has threatened to retire if he doesn't get a big increase over the $192,000 he was scheduled to make this season.

Midland 'walks' past Pilots, 5-4

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It took a long time, but the Midland Angels finally proved the old baseball adage that a walk is as good as a hit. Well, in this case, it proved to be better than a hit.

Joe Redfield walked with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to force in the run that gave the Haloed Ones a 5-4 victory over the Wichita Pilots before 1,071 fans at Angels Stadium.

Angel Manager Max Oliveras didn't view it quite the same way. "It chaffed me that with all those runners on base, we didn't take advantage of it."

His attitude was understandable. Four Pilot pitchers walked 15 Angels.

Even Stan Holmes, one of the game's heroes with two home runs was chided by a passerby, "With all those people on base and you managed two solo homers, how?"

"Timing," he admitted somewhat ruefully. "Both homers led off the inning. How else could I have done it."

The first one in the sixth gave Midland a 3-2 lead, although the Angels were being outhit at the time 9-2. Holmes' homer, his 22nd, was the second hit for Midland.

His second homer tied it at four in the bottom of the tenth after Wichita forged ahead 4-3 in the top of the inning and appeared to have a slump-ending victory within reach.

BUT FOR Oliveras the game-saver was Reggie Montgomery's throw from right that cut down what would have been the go ahead run in the ninth.

Jeff Yurtin led off with a double off relief ace Bryan Harvey. Harvey then turned Scott Rainey's bunt into a force at third and when Mike DeButch walked, in came Miguel Garcia, Midland's fourth pitcher of the long, long night...four hours and 22 minutes worth.

The change forced switch-hitter Thomas Howard, who had doubled twice as a lefthander, to bat righty. It didn't make any difference. He still singled. But Montgomery's arm did make a difference.

Howard drilled sharply to right and Rainey raced home from second only Montgomery's one bounce throw to catcher Edwin Marquez was right on the money and Rainey was out by 10 feet.

"I thought I had a good chance to make the play," said Montgomery, "It was a line drive and it bounced right to me, a perfect setup."

WHEN it was all over, Wichita had outhit Midland 14-7, with six doubles. However, Pilot pitchers gave up 15 walks to eight by Midland pitchers.

Vinicio Cedeno, the winner, now 3-6, issued four walks in the 10th and 11th, all intentional, in pitching out of jams after leadoff doubles as Oliveras pulled out all the strategical stops.

With the bases loaded on two walks following Roberto Alomar's lead off double, Cedeno got Jerold Clark to ground into an inning-ending 4-6-3 double play in the 11th. A double play, 6-4-3, also was the Angels' answer to the 10th inning threat.

That set the stage for Midland's game winning rally when the intentional walk strategy for the Pilots failed.

NORM CARRASCO singled up the middle off Jeff Reed, 3-5, Wichita's No. 4 pitcher. Doug Jennings' sacrifice moved the runner up and Montgomery, who was robbed of extra bases when a leaping 6-4 Clark reached over the fence in left to one-hand his sagebrush-bound drive in the third, was walked intentionally.

Holmes also walked, and after two homers, understandably wasn't going to get anything fat. But Reece just couldn't find the plate on the one-out walk to Redfield that forced in the winning run.

"Outside of the first pitch, I didn't get anything I could really swing at," said Redfield, who didn't enter the game as a pinch hitter until the 10th. "But I did have the green light on the 3-1 pitch, if it was in there."

"It was a win we needed," Montgomery said later without realizing El Paso had a 7-0 lead over San Antonio while the Angels were fighting for survival.

The win did keep Midland in first place in the Texas League West by a half game.

Oliveras used his entire bullpen. "But it didn't hurt us. Nobody pitched that long."

THE KIND of night it was to be may have been hinted at by the first inning. The Pilots got three hits and scored just once off lefthander Chris Collins thanks to Marquez, who gunned down DeButch trying to steal.

In the home first, Midland used four walks and a hit but scored just two as Montgomery's single brought home one run and a walk to Brian Brady with the bases loaded forced in another.

When he left after five, Pilot starter Candy Sierra, just off the DL, had allowed only one hit and had whiffed seven...but he had issued seven walks. Still, it was a 2-2 game.

It was a game in which there were also 18 strikeouts, seven by Collins.

HALO HOOPS— The series resumes 7 p.m. today with Wichita's Kevin Brown, 5-4, going against Midland's Marty Reed, 12-5, one of the leading winners in Class AA baseball. Sierra was 7-2 going into Sunday's game, rebounding from 4-5 and 3-6 seasons at Beaumont after an 11-4 debut year in 1984.

Gee! City title goes to the youngster

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The whispers began Friday, not long after 18-year-old Bobby Gee stepped to the forefront of the Reporter-Telegram City Golf Championship with a two-under 69.

"The kid will choke. He'll realize who he's playing against and it will be all over," went the common line.

Wise heads nodded in agreement, especially after his lead was cut from two strokes to one after the second 18 holes on Saturday.

But Gee, fresh out of Midland Lee and on his way to College Station in the fall, not only hung onto the lead Sunday, he ran away with it in the final round of the 54-hole championship at Hogan Park Golf Course.

By the time he was through, Gee's two-under par 69 left the field five strokes behind and the whisperers began to pipe up.

But this time, it was a roar of approval for his two-under par 210 over 54 holes.

"He showed no weaknesses out there, he played an outstanding tournament," said defending champion C.E. Boyd, who never pulled any closer than the four strokes he began the day behind Gee.

"I thought if we could've put a few birds together at the start of the day he might have felt the heat a little. But nobody did," said Mission Country Club's Mac McGee, one of two players who began the day one stroke behind the champion.

For those who expected to watch the youngster choke, Gee's victory was a surprise. But for those who have watched Gee's game over the last few years, this was just his latest accomplishment.

"I figured people were saying things like that... it didn't bother me," Gee said. "I've played with older guys at Green Tree quite a bit, and there are some good ones out there."

Gee has been the mainstay of the Lee golf program for three years, earning medalist recognition his junior and senior seasons over the four-stop District 4-5A circuit. He's also played in numerous junior tournaments all over the state as well as the country. And in the fall, Gee will begin a college career at Texas A&M.

All that experience seemed to pay off for Gee, as he was paired with the 42-year-old Boyd, the defending champ, Johnny Wilson, 42, and McGee, 33, in Sunday's final round.

Wilson, actually pulled even with Gee on the front nine, but by the time the turn was made, Gee had widened his margin to a comfortable three strokes.

But Wilson, who golfs at Green Tree with Gee and father Ed, began to scatter his left-handed deliveries around the course on the back nine and fell out of contention.

"This was my first medal play tournament in 17 years — and it shows," said Wilson, 42, who finished with an 80.

It was McGee, who finished the tournament tied for second with former Midland College golfer Leon Van Rensburg at 220, three over par, that came the closest to making a run over the final nine holes. A pair of birdies on 11 and 12 pulled McGee within three, but Gee responded with birdie, par, par and birdie through 14 for a four-stroke edge.

Meanwhile, Van Rensburg, playing in the group in front of Gee, was quietly putting together an impressive round, three-under after 16 holes, and still had hopes of catching the leader if he faltered. But bogeys on 17 and 18 along with Gee's strong finish dashed those hopes.

Alysheba, Bet Twice to meet again

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — Bet Twice and Alysheba, now tied at two victories apiece this year, will have some new competition when they renew their rivalry at Saratoga in the Aug. 22 Travers Stakes.

"We got the Bald Eagle coming for that one, too," Alysheba's trainer, Jack Van Berg, said of 74-year-old Charlie Whittingham, who trains Temperate Sil. Whittingham's colt missed the Triple Crown series because of illness, but recently won the Swaps Stakes at Hollywood Park.

VAN BERG was not disturbed that Belmont Stakes winner Bet Twice beat Alysheba, the Kentucky Derby and Preaknes winner which is owned by Midland's Dorothy Scharbauer and daughter Pamela, by a neck in Saturday's $500,000 Haskell Invitational Handicap for 3-year-olds at Monmouth Park. Lost Code, winner of seven conecutive stakes before Saturday, was only a neck farther back.

"I still think he's the best colt in the country," Van Berg said of his horse.

Alysheba, who just missed catching Bet Twice after a strong late drive, proved that he didn't need the anti-bleeding medication Lasix to run well.

The son of Alydar was forced to veer around the leaders, Lost Code and Bet Twice, on the turn for home, losing some momemtum under Chris McCarron.

In mid-stretch, Alysheba was third, 2½ lengths behind Lost Code, who was a head behind Bet Twice. His stretch drive came up just short.

Alysheba had run with Lasix in the past, but the medication is banned in New York and Alysheba was forced to go without it for the June 6 Belmont Stakes. Bet Twice won by 14¼ lengths with Alysheba fourth.

Lost Code also runs on Lasix, and that means the colt won't be going to Saratoga, trainer Bill Donovan said.

"I thought he fit with these horses, and he did fit," Donovan said of his speedy colt, who wasn't nominated for the Triple Crown series after a poor start this year.

Donovan is looking at the Pennsylvania Derby and the Pegasus Stakes at the Meadowlands for the colt's next outings.

Gene St. Leon, Lost Code's rider, said, "He ran his eyeballs out."

With Lost Code setting fast fractions, the race was clocked in 1:47, matching the stakes record by Majestic Light in 1976 and just one-fifth of a second off Spend a Buck's track record set in the 1985 Monmouth Park Handicap.

Bet Twice, with Craig Perret riding, and Alysheba each carried 126 pounds, two more than Lost Code. The winner paid $4.60 as the slight favorite over Alysheba.

As expected, it was a three-horse race all the way. Clever Secret finished fourth, 12 lengths behind Lost Code, and Born To Shop was last, another 28 lengths back.

BET TWICE, trained by Jimmy Croll and based at Monmouth, has won all four starts there and now has earnings of $2,613,207. He has three wins in seven 1987 starts and close seconds in the Derby and Preakness.

"This was the best race in America this year," Bob Levy, one of Bet Twice's owners, said.

It also kept alive the Bet Twice-Alysheba rivalry, which is proving to be the sport's most interesting since Affirmed and Alydar in 1978.

Alydar handed Triple Crown winner Affimed his only 1978 defeat in the Travers after Affirmed was disqualfied for interference.

In addition to Bet Twice, Alysheba and Temperate Sil, the 1¼-mile Travers, worth $1 million, is expected to also attract Swaps Stakes runner-up Candi's Gold, Cryptoclearance, Gone West, Gulch and Java Gold.

Michael Andretti captures Marlboro 500 over Big Al

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — The heat and 'G' forces were getting to Michael Andretti as the miles piled up in the Marlboro 500.

He was well on the way to the biggest victory in his budding Indy-car career on Sunday, but his final pit stop — and the distinct possibility of trouble — was ahead.

With great determination, the help of his sweating crew and the luck that deserted his father earlier in the race, the 24-year-old Andretti was able to get in and out of the pits in the lead and go on to victory in the fastest 500-mile race in Indy-car history.

"It did bother me, knowing I had to stop for fuel," the exhausted Andretti said. "I knew we had trouble all day getting in and out of the pits. We did lose about 10 seconds. It was a good thing I had a big lead over Big Al."

Andretti, who led Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser by about 21 seconds before the fuel stop just seven laps from the end of the 250-lap race, came back onto the track about 10 seconds ahead. He beat Unser to the finish by 9.11 seconds to earn the second jewel of the Indy-car Triple Crown of 500-mile races. It was Andretti's first 500-mile victory, his second victory of the season and the fifth of his career.

"You just run to the end of the race and see what happens," said Unser, who won his record-tying fourth Indy 500 because Mario Andretti, Michael's father, and Roberto Guerrero of Colombia had mechanical problems late in the race.

Mike Tyson unifies titles ...almost

AP Sports Writer

Super promoter Don King had a simple reaction. "Hallelujah."

After 16 months, 10 fights and a bellyful of bickering, HBO's heavyweight title unification series is over, with all three championship belts around the waist of 21-year-old Mike Tyson.

Not since 1978, when Leon Spinks beat Muhammad Ali, has there been just one heavyweight champion.

Problem is, there still are those who feel Tyson has company at the top of the division, and this could affect the heavyweight picture over the next year.

MICHAEL SPINKS, who was stripped of his International Boxing Federation version of the heavyweight title, calls himself the people's champion, and his promoter, Butch Lewis, feels Spinks' victory over Gerry Cooney last June 15 has made him more popular than Tyson.

"He won the title and all," Spinks said of Tyson. "I mean, he's got all the belts, but he hasn't beat me. He's a champion because he's got the belts."

Tyson, who already held the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association titles, captured the third belt Saturday night with a unanimous 12-round decision over IBF champion Tony Tucker.

Spinks was stripped for refusing to fight Tucker as part of the HBO series. Nows Spinks would like to fight Tyson.

Spinks was among the 7,800 spectators at the Las Vegas Hilton for the Tyson-Tucker fight. He sat in the very last row, the cheap seats. Nothing could have been more appropriate. He feels shunted aside by Tyson.

"I want to get the fight signed," Spinks said. And Lewis added: "It could be the biggest box office in our industry's history."

Such a fight, however, is not expected to take place until the fall of 1988, at the earliest, after Tyson fulfills several commitments. Tyson, 31-0 with 27 knockouts, is scheduled to face Olympic champion Tyrell Biggs on Oct. 16, perhaps in Atlantic City.

After that fight, plans call for Tyson to meet undetermined opponents, the first in December or January, the other at Tokyo on March 21. After that, he is supposed to fight in June or July at London, perhaps against British heavyweight Frank Bruno.

"He's not the champion," Tyson has said of Spinks. "I'm the champion. He's not running the show. He used the excuse that he didn't lose the title in the ring. That's a bunch of baloney. How can you call yourself champion when you give it up?"

Biggs, ranked as the No. 1 contender by all three governing bodies, tuned up for the October fight by stopping journeyman Lorenzo Boyd in the third round last Friday night at Corpus Christi, Texas. The victory gave Biggs a record of 15-0 since turning professional after the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics.

BIGGS, considered by some a legitimate threat to Tyson, looked a little sluggish against Boyd, although he knocked Boyd down four times before the fight was stopped. Biggs admitted he wasn't in the kind of shape he would like to be in against Tyson.

Spinks' refusal to fight Tucker was not the only hitch in the $22 million HBO series.

Trevor Berbick, who held the WBC title when the series began, threatened to pull out and fight Cooney because he wasn't getting enough money. Tyson took the WBC title by beating Berbick on Nov. 22, 1986.

Net winners in the first flight were Sam Baker, Tommy Conner and Mingo Valencia. In second flight, Bob Salcedo, Steve Morris and Ricky Moreno, and in the seniors it was Joe Jeffers, Foy Cox and Don Pyle.

Chris Johnson waves after putting for a birdie during her run to the LPGA Columbia Savings title Sunday.

Johnson wins by 'hard' five

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — For once, Chris Johnson was not her own worst enemy.

Johnson won a battle with her nreves Sunday to shoot a 2-under-par 70 and record her fourth LPGA career victory by winning the $250,000 Columbia Savings National Pro-Am. Her 72-hole score of 11-under-par 277 left her five shots ahead of Shirley Furlong, who also had a 70 and finished at 282.

But it was an emotional struggle all the way for Johnson, who said she struggled until the 13th hole.

"It might have looked easy but it wasn't, and it wasn't pretty," Johnson said. "I felt quite a bit more settled after the 13th.

"I felt as if I were laying it up on nine, 10 and 11, because they were all short. But the 12th hole was good, and at 13 I came in pin high."

Johnson had three birdies and two bogeys on the front nine, then began the back nine with three straight pars.

But on the 380-yard par-4 13th hole, she put a sand wedge within eight feet of the cup, then tapped in a putt for a birdie.

She followed with another birdie on the 512-yard par-5 14th, when she put her tee shot in a bunker, used a 3-iron to get out, and again rolled in a putt, this time from about five feet out.

After that, her biggest problem was the weather. Thunder distracted her on the 16th hole and a light rain began to fall on the final two holes.

"I was worrying about the lightning," she said. "I heard it rumbling out there, but then thought 'They'll tell us if we should get off the course.'"

Despite the distractions, Johnson parred the last three holes and walked away with the $37,500 first prize.

Strange birdie produces win

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — With the PGA Championship starting on Thursday, Curtis Strange can't spare himself the luxury of enjoying his victory in the $742,043 St. Jude Classic golf tournament.

"What I'm going to have to do is get myself ready. I have never played particularly well after winning a tournament," Strange said after Sunday's one-stroke victory over Russ Cochran, Tom Kite, Denis Watson and Mike Donald.

"Rest is probably the key," said Strange, an 11-time winner since joining the PGA Tour in 1977. "This tournament (played in 98-degree temperatures) takes a lot out of you."

Strange's second title of the year wasn't assured until the 72nd hole. He came to final hole tied with five players at 12 under par, and figured he'd need a birdie to earn a spot in a playoff.

When he learned that both Russ Cochran and Mike Donald, playing in the group immediately ahead of him, had parred the par-5 548-yard finishing hole, Strange knew he had the tournament in his grasp.

"It just kind of gave me a shot in the arm," he said. "I wouldn't want to be in the scorer's tent waiting for Curtis Strange to come to the last hole with 80 yards to go. That sounds a little rough and usually I don't say things like that, but I felt very confident today.

"The 18th is a hole where you're going to make a four half the time. You ought to be able to get it up and down from 80 yards."

Strange, in fact, got it up and down from 93 yards, sinking a six-foot birdie putt to cap a round of 69 for a four-day score of 275 over the 7,282-yard, par-72 Colonial Country Club course.

In collecting a winner's check for $130,328, Strange moved into second place on the money-winning list with $530,885. There were checks of $47,787 for the players who shared second at 276. Watson closed with a 66, Kite shot 67 and Donald and Cochran had 69s.

Littler wins seniors tourney

SCARBOROUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Gene Littler was not up to par, but that didn't stop him from winning the $250,000 Commemorative seniors golf tournament.

"Surely, no one ever went 11 holes (without par) and still won a tournament," Littler said Sunday after his victory at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club.

The 57-year-old Littler shot an erratic 5-under-par 65 Sunday en route to a 54-hole total of 10-under-par 200 and his first Senior Tour victory this year. Over the last 11 holes, Littler recorded six birdies and five bogeys to hold off Dale Douglass.

Douglass finished at 201 after a third consecutive 67 on the par-70, 6,545-yard course.

The 5-9½, 160-pound Littler collected a first-place check of $31,500 that boosted his earnings this year to $103,178.

Miller Barber, one of two millionaries on the tour — Don January is the other — also had a 67 to claim third place at 202.

"It was the best putting round I've ever had," Littler said. "It's not my style to win like this."

Style or not, Little, who had 29 victories — including the 1961 U.S. Open — in 27 years on the PGA tour, three-putted only once.

Cleveland pitcher Darrell Akerfelds climbs back on the mound as Toronto's Ernie Whitt, background, rounds the bases with a homer.

Reds' Eric Davis joins 30-30 club

Associated Press

The door to baseball's elite 30-30 club must be located in the upper left field stands at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium because that's where Eric Davis knocked to enter.

The 25-year-old outfielder became only the seventh player in history to hit 30 home runs and steal 30 bases in the same season when he knocked a towering drive off the facade of the upper deck leading off the bottom of the 11th inning Sunday.

Davis' 30th homer — he also stole his 38th and 39th bases — gave the Cincinnati Reds a 5-4 victory over San Francisco that stretched their National League West lead over the second-place Giants to three games.

Davis said he wasn't really concerned about joining Willie Mays (1956, 1957), Hank Aaron (1963), Bobby Bonds (1969, 1973, 1975, 1977, 1978), Dale Murphy (1983), Tommy Harper (1970) and Ken Williams (1922) as the only players in the 30-30 club.

"I was just looking to hit the ball somewhere and get on and score a run," Davis said. "I knew he (reliever Jeff Robinson) was going to give me a pitch to hit."

With two months left in the season, Davis has a solid chance to become the first player with 40 homers and 40 stolen bases in a single season.

The Giants were six outs away from trimming Cincinnati's lead to one game after taking a 4-3 lead in the top of the eighth against John Franco on Joel Youngblood's pinch homer and Jeffrey Leonard's sacrifice fly. But the Reds tied it in the bottom of the eighth when Tracy Jones singled off Craig Lefferts, stole second and scored on Terry McGriff's single off Scott Garrelts.

Three innings later, Davis, who singled in the first inning and scored on Bo Diaz's two-run single, ended it.

Astros 6, Padres 0

Mike Scott pitched a three-hitter over eight innings and Alan Ashby homered, doubled and singled and drove in three runs. Scott, 12-7, who has won all of his nine decisions against San Diego in Houston, held the Padres hitless until Tony Gwynn singled with two outs in the fifth.

The Astros took a 3-0 lead off Mark Grant in the first inning. Gerald Young led off with a single and went to third on Grant's wild pickoff throw. Billy Hatcher walked and when Grant again threw the ball away on a pickoff attempt, Young scored and Hatcher took third. One out later, Ashby hit his 10th home run.

Cardinals 9, Pirates 1

Joe Magrane pitched an 11-hit complete game in 103-degree St. Louis heat and Terry Pendleton drove in four runs with a homer and double. The Cardinals, who had lost seven straight before the Pirates came to town, swept three games from Pittsburgh, which has dropped seven in a row.

Magrane also hit one of St. Louis' four doubles, triggering a two-run third inning. Vince Coleman doubled Magrane home and scored on Tom Herr's single before the Cardinals made it 3-0 in the fourth on Jim Lindeman's fourth homer, all against Pittsburgh.

Pendleton hit a two-run homer, his ninth, in the fifth inning and doubled two more runs across in the eighth. Herr and Coleman had RBI singles in the sixth and seventh.

Mets 7, Expos 4

Ron Darling and Roger McDowell combined on a four-hitter and Keith Hernandez drove in New York's first three runs with a pair of doubles and a grounder as the Mets climbed within one-half game of the second-place Expos in the NL East.

Darling gave up two singles in 6⅔ innings but walked eight. McDowell allowed a two-run single to Tim Wallach in the seventh after Darling walked the bases loaded before earning his 16th save.

Hernandez hit RBI doubles in the first and fifth innings off Bob Sebra and had a run-scoring grounder in the third. Kevin McReynolds had a two-run single in the fifth.

Cubs 3, Phillies 2

Chicago second baseman Ryne Sandberg ended a Philadelphia threat with a slick fielding play and then drove in two runs, including the game-winner with a single over a pulled-in outfield in the 10th inning.

After the Cubs tied the score with single runs in the eighth and ninth innings off Philadelphia relief ace Steve Bedrosian — Manny Trillo homered with two out in the ninth — Leon Durham drew a walk off Jeff Calhoun to open the 10th and and was sacrificed to second.

Luis Quinones also walked and the fourth ball was a wild pitch. Durham took third and scored when Sandberg singled over the right fielder's head.

It was only the fifth time this season that Bedrosian, who leads the majors with 30 saves, had failed in a save situation.

Braves 10, Dodgers 5

Paul Runge's second major-league homer ignited a six-run fourth inning that also included a three-run double by Ted Simmons. Winner Zane Smith pitched shutout ball for six innings before the Dodgers scored all their runs in the seventh.

With Atlanta leading 2-0, Runge hit a pitch from Ken Howell over the center field fence to open the fourth inning. Gerald Perry singled home the second run of the inning and, after the Braves loaded the bases, Simmons cleared them with his double off Brad Havens. Simmons scored on a single by Ken Oberkfell. James drove in Atlanta's final two runs with a grounder and his eighth homer.

Seitzer's six hits collects seven RBI

Associated Press

Rookie Kevin Seitzer had a royal feeling after going 6-for-6, hitting two homers, driving in seven runs and scoring four times.

"I'll probably never have a feeling like I had today," said Seitzer, who tied or broke several team records Sunday in leading host Kansas City over Boston 13-5. "Everything was just perfect today. I caught every break I could possibly catch."

Seitzer's play this season has allowed the Royals to shift perennial All-Star George Brett to first base. Seitzer, selected in the 11th round of the 1983 June free agent draft, hit .319 in 129 games for Class AAA Omaha last season.

Seitzer hit his eighth homer leading off the third inning against starter Bob Stanley, 3-11. He had an RBI single in the fourth, a three-run homer in the fifth, giving the Royals an 8-3 lead, and added a two-run double in the eighth.

"I was telling my wife last night that things have gone so well and I haven't had a four-hit game in the big leagues. I've had three and couldn't go any further," Seitzer said. "Today, when I got that fourth one, that was the perfect day right there, especially after I had just talked to her about this last night."

His 13 total bases tied a team record set by Brett, and the seven RBI also matched the club record. Seitzer is now batting .324 with 55 runs batted in, both tops on the team.

Seitzer is only the second Kansas City player to have six hits in a game. Bob Oliver, also a rookie, had six hits on May 4, 1969, against California.

He's the first player to have six hits this season and the eighth to drive in seven runs in one game. The last player to go 6-for-6 was Cleveland's Jorge Orta on June 15, 1980. Rennie Stennett of Pittsburgh set the modern major-league record for a nine-inning game when he had seven hits on Sept. 16, 1975.

"I wanted to have a perfect day and I thought if I got that sixth at-bat, maybe it wouldn't happen for me," Seitzer said. Up to now, I had brutal Sundays. I hate playing Sundays because I never seem to do any good. I guess today kind of turned it around."

Seitzer played with tape around his left wrist due to an injury sustained during the Royals' visit to New York earlier in the week.

"The hand's all right. I don't think I could hit without the tape support, but I don't think I'm going to try the rest of my career, either," Seitzer said. "It just needs support so I don't roll my wrist. Maybe it's the best thing that ever happened to me at the plate so I don't try to pull the ball, just let everything happen naturally."

Rangers 5, Orioles 2

Bobby Witt pitched five-hit ball for 8⅓ innings and tied a major-league record by striking out four batters in one inning as Texas beat visiting Baltimore.

Witt, 5-5, struck out a season-high 11 batters and was backed by home runs by Geno Petralli and Pete Incaviglia.

Witt became the 18th pitcher in major-league history to strike out four batters in an inning when he fanned Ray Knight, Terry Kennedy, Mike Young and Gerhart in the second. The last pitcher to strike out four in an inning was Houston's Mike Scott last Sept. 3.

AL Roundup

Athletics 6, Twins 5

Jose Canseco singled to score the winning run with two out in the 11th inning as Oakland edged Minnesota.

Oakland's second consecutive victory in the three-game series moved the Athletics into second place, a half-game ahead of California and a game behind the AL West-leading Twins.

Canseco's hit off reliever Jeff Reardon, 5-6, scored Luis Polonia, who had singled and taken second on a throw home that nailed Alfredo Griffin at the plate. Griffin had opened the inning by reaching on an error by second baseman Al Newman, then stole second.

Yankees 8, Tigers 5

Before 46,212 at Yankee Stadium, Dan Pasqua singled three times and drove in two runs and Mike Pagliarulo hit a two-run homer, leading New York over Detroit.

The Yankees won twice in the three-game series and increased their AL East lead to three games over the Tigers.

Don Mattingly, and Dave Winfield also had three hits in a 17-hit attack as New York won for the sixth time in seven games.

Rick Rhoden, 14-6, allowed five runs on 12 hits in eight-plus innings and Dave Righetti got his 20th save.

Mariners 5, Angels 4

John Moses scored Dave Valle in the ninth inning with a suicide squeeze bunt to lift visiting Seattle over California.

Valle led off the inning with a single against reliever Greg Minton, 3-2. He advanced on a chopper by Domingo Ramos, and moved to third when third baseman Doug DeCinces' late throw to second sailed into right field for an error. One out later, Moses laid down a bunt up the first-base line and Minton's only play was to first, allowing Moses to score.

Mike Kingery gave Seattle the early lead with a grand slam in the first inning.

Blue Jays 11, Indians 5

Ernie Whitt drove in four runs with a homer and a bases-loaded triple and Lloyd Moseby drove in three runs to lead host Toronto over Cleveland. The start of the game was delayed three hours, 45 minutes by rain.

Toronto got off to a fast start with homers by Moseby and Whitt in the first inning off Darrell Akerfelds, 0-2.

Jesse Barfield singled to open the second and Rance Mulliniks followed with a walk. Willie Upshaw singled, scoring Barfield for a 3-0 lead, and two outs later, Moseby walked to load the bases.

Whitt then lined a triple that skidded under the glove of right fielder Cory Snyder for a 6-0 lead.

White Sox 7, Brewers 3

Bill Long and Bobby Thigpen combined on a five-hitter and Steve Lyons hit a two-run homer as Chicago took 3-of-4 at Milwaukee.

Young Niekro headed for OSU

ATLANTA (AP) — John Niekro, son of former Atlanta kunckleballer Phil Niekro, will report to a baseball coach at Oklahoma State University, not the Atlanta Braves farm system.

The 6-6 right-hander was selected by Atlanta during the June amateur draft.

Niekro, whose father pitched for the Braves for 18 years, was 6-0 with a 2.35 ERA as a senior this spring at Shiloh High School in suburban Atlanta.

Phil Niekro currently pitches with the Cleveland Indians; his brother, Joe, is with Minnesota.

Oklahoma State assistant head coach Tim Holliday, whose team was 59-13 last season, losing to Stanford in the College World Series, said the Cowboys have lost three of their six top pitchers.

"He's going to get a shot," Holliday said. "But we will be willing to be patient with him. He's the kind of kid we like to think of as a plus as a freshman. If he wins one or two games, that'll be great."

Elsewhere, the Pittsburgh Pirates reportedly will acquire right-handed pitcher Jim Gott from the San Francisco Giants to complete the weekend trade in which the Giants obtained pitcher Don Robinson.

Dickerson may ask for trade

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A business representative for Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams said the star running back wants to be traded if his contract is not improved by the Rams.

Dickerson signed a contract extension in 1985 that pays him a $683,000 salary for three years through 1989, but reportedly has been dissatisfied with the deal for quite a while.

"Under the present condtions, he wants to be traded," Charles Chin, Dickerson's business representative, said in a Los Angeles Times report. "If you don't hear of a great new contract for Eric, you will hear a lot about Eric wanting to be traded."

An article published in Sunday's Orange County Register reported unidentified players as saying Dickerson had walked out of training camp after learning of the contract given to running back-baseball player Bo Jackson by the Los Angeles Raiders.

Jackson reportedly signed a five-year, $7.4-million package with the Raiders.

"He didn't walk out," Chin said. "He's a little unhappy, but he didn't walk out."

Dickerson reportedly wants the Rams to pay him in line with the top running backs in the NFL.

Chin said that Dickerson still held that position, but that Dickerson would not stage a holdout similar to the one in 1985 that caused him to miss two games.

Dallas defensive tackle John Dutton makes his way around Crawford Ker during pass rush drills in Cowboys' training camp. Dutton's job is on the line again this year.

Dutton still fights for job

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It's nothing new for John Dutton to be told by Dallas Cowboys coaches that although he's played well, he's getting older and younger players are waiting in line to take over his defensive left tackle job.

"They (the coaches) try to replace me every year but when camp is over I'm the only one left standing," Dutton says.

For the past five years, Dutton's job has been on the line when the Cowboys went into training camp, and his job is again in question this year. But no one is betting it's the end of the line for the 14-year veteran from Nebraska.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry says of Dutton: "He probably played as good last year as he's ever played for us. But at 35, he's at an age now where it's hard to be a regular over a 16-game season. We must be ready to move in with young players."

Translated, that means young Kevin Brooks could take Dutton's job. If that happens, there's a chance Dutton might not make the final 45-man roster.

"I plan to start and if I didn't think that way then I wouldn't have come to camp," Dutton says.

Defensive line coach Ernie Stautner, he says, "tells me that there will be heavy competition for my job. Fine. Bring 'em on. I'm ready."

Dutton was one of the hardest workers in the Cowboys' off-season program, arriving at the practice field daily at 7 a.m.

"They keep saying every year that somebody is going to beat me and one of these years they might be right," Dutton says. "I know I'm still good enough, but whatever happens this is my last year."

Dutton hopes to land a beer distributorship when he retires from the Cowboys.

He says Dallas' defensive line caught a lot of undue heat last year because its members played tired the last part of the season.

"It was a little unfair," Dutton says. "We had so many injuries we were down to four players — me, Randy White, Ed Jones and Jim Jeffcoat. Most teams were alternating seven defensive linemen during the games. We had just four. And we just had four in practice all week. We got worn down."

Dutton added: "We keep getting a lot of heat because of our age but we can still produce. There wouldn't be one of us here if we didn't think we could do it. The defense will be lot better this year and we're going to have a better pass rush."

Landry said Dutton wouldn't go without a fight.

"He's a remarkable guy," Landry said. "They haven't run him out of there yet."

Oilers' Helton grooms tough line

SAN ANGELO (AP) — New Houston Oiler offensive line coach Kim Helton has a highly decorated group of linemen that includes three first round draft choices.

But Helton doesn't read press clippings or dwell on past accomplishments.

"They are only great if they make this football team great," Helton said.

"If (starting left guard) Mike Munchak can make the left tackle, the center, right guard and the right tackle, great and we're in the playoffs and he's in Hawaii (Pro Bowl), then he's great.

"Otherwise, he's just another guard on a losing football team."

Two players, former starting center Jim Romano and reserve tackle Mike Kelley have left camp.

Starting left tackle Bruce Matthews has not reported to camp and on Sunday promising line prospect Don Maggs suffered a knee injury that may require major surgery.

Knitting together a cohesive offensive line is Helton's assignment and he's doing it with tough talk.

He shouted at another player following a good block "That's good, that's good, I just want you to show up every day and not every third day."

The Oilers have stockpiled first round draft choices on their offensive line but they've never fulfilled their potential.

Helton wants to erase the stigma that the Oiler linemen, while talented, are "too nice."

"We're not nice except to our wives and children," Helton said. "We certainly won't be nice to the other team.

"I think people get nice titles when you lose. Everybody is hunting for a reason why and they will say the line is too nice or this or that is wrong."

Helton's banter is not all criticism.

Raiders ink top draft pick

Associated Press

In addition to getting Ron Fellows from the Dallas Cowboys in a trade for wide receiver Ron Barksdale, the Los Angeles Raiders also signed rookie offensive lineman Bruce Wilkerson, their second-round draft pick.

Wilkerson, 23, had announced last week through his agents that he was considering a career in pro boxing because he was unhappy with the Raiders' contract offer.

That boxing career, which included a session with the light bag for television cameras, apparently came to an end Saturday night when Wilkerson attended the Tony Tucker-Mike Tyson heavyweight title fight in Las Vegas.

Wilkerson and agents Neal Allen and Doug Brenner left Las Vegas Sunday morning and arrived in the late morning at the team's training camp.

Several hours later, terms were reached.

"Bruce went with his first love, which is football," Allen said.

Allen added that the contract does not prohibit Wilkerson from pursuing boxing during the off-season. According to Allen, the four-year contract with the Raiders calls for more than a $1 million over a four-year period with no option.

Wilkerson will work at both right tackle and right guard, according to Coach Tom Flores.

Wilkerson's signing means the Raiders have all 11 of their draft choices under contract. Ten of them — all but baseball player Bo Jackson — are currently in training camp.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Rams announced that their top draft choice, defensive end Donald Evans, had signed a contract and ended a two-week holdout. Evans, a second-round selection out of Winston-Salem State and the 47th player taken overall, was the only rookie still unsigned.

NFL Camps

The New Orleans Saints came to terms with all of their remaining veterans, leaving just their first three draft choices to sign.

Cornerback Dave Waymer signed a three-year contract with no option early Sunday. Later, wide receiver Eric Martin signed a two-year contract with no option, while defensive end James Geathers agreed to a one-year no option contract.

Holdouts

In other training camp news, two veteran Raiders' offensive linemen, tackle Shelby Jordan and center Don Mosebar, remained unsigned and away from camp in salary disputes.

The Cowboys also had some players still missing from camp: linebacker Jeff Rohrer, who is being fined $1,000 per day until he shows, and first-round draft pick Danny Noonan of Nebraska, who is still unsigned.

Meanwhile, Green Bay Packers Coach Forrest Gregg says he may have to name a replacement for Randy Wright next weekend if the holdout quarterback does not report to training camp.

Gregg said he would make the decision after next Saturday's scrimmage.

"There comes a time. If a guy's not here, he can't very well start for you, can he? Especially at that position," Gregg said. "We can't have a ghost lining up at that position. We've got to have someone in there who can take the snap, throw the ball, call the plays and call the cadences."

A decision would be made among the four quarterbacks in camp: rookies Don Majkowski of Virginia and Dave Yarema of Michigan State, and veterans Chuck Fusina and David Woodley.

Still unsigned with the Cleveland Browns are veteran offensive lineman Cody Risien and the team's first-round draft choice, Mike Junkin. Cuts

Cleveland waived nine players Sunday, including free-agent wide receiver Clyde Duncan, who was a first-round draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1984. Also waived were offensive linemen Shawn Heffern, Ron Pasquale, Scott Kehoe and Billy Kidd; wide reciever Sam Johnson; nose tackle Jim Pauciello; linebacker Scott Watters; and safety Terry Wright.

The New York Jets made their first cuts Sunday. Waived were guard Mike Estep, guard Craig Vittum, wide receiver Joe Giaquinto, wide receiver Kirk Burnett, wide receiver Jimmy Norris, running back Anthony Corley, running back Tim Newman and safety Ken Danforth. Defensive end Tony Sagnells and defensive end James Scott were waived after leaving camp.

The Chicago Bears cut veteran cornerback Leslie Frazier because of a knee injury that sidelined him all of last season.

Dr. Clarence Fossier, the team's physican, said it was his opinion that because Frazier cannot bend his left knee at more than a 90-degree angle, any hard hit from the back could result in a life-long injury.

"The risk of a permanent, significant disability was just too great. He just shouldn't be in a contact sport," Fossier said.

Unser Jr. nails NASCAR's Waltrip

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Al Unser Jr. had only five laps of practice, had never won a race on a superspeedway oval and was behind one of the best stock car drivers of all time with less than one lap to go.

But he was right where he wanted to be.

"Maybe he didn't know any better because he's so young," joked three-time Winston Cup stock car champion Darrell Waltrip moments after the 25-year-old Unser zoomed by him on the final turn to win the 50-lap, 100-mile third round of the International Race of Champions on Saturday.

Unser, the defending IROC champion and a CART Indy-car star, used a classic stock car slingshot move to shoot past Waltrip, beating him to the finish line by just .03 seconds, the closest margin in the 12-year history of the all-star racing series.

Geoff Bodine, who finished third to barely retain the series point lead, 50-48, over Unser, unsuccessfuly tried the same move on Unser with five laps remaining.

"He used that last-lap slingshot to perfection," Bodine said. "I wish I hadn't showed that move to him. I should have saved it."

Unser, who was allowed a special five-lap practice session Saturday morning after missing Thursday's practice because of stomach flu and Friday's because of rain, said he learned about the move by watching Bodine in his rear-view mirror.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1076 ♡7 ◇AJ83 ♣762
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—Three spades. That shows a hand with game-going values and at least five spades. Should partner rebid either three no trump or four spades, pass. If he cue-bids four clubs, you can afford one slam try with four diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ872 ♡K73 ◇8 ♣AK6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—With a five-loser hand, you don't have quite enough to contract for game unilaterally, especially since partner might have a singleton spade. A jump to three spades, strongly invitational, describes your hand nicely and leaves open three no trump as a possible contract.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠952 ♡AK6 ◇AQJ3 ♣763
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—If you made some noise in hearts, you have overlooked a basic principle of jump raising partner's suit—you promise four-card support. Correct is to make a temporizing bid of two diamonds, then raise hearts vigorously at your next turn.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ6 ♡A106 ◇KJ87 ♣QJ8
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—This is simply a matter of mathematics. With partner showing a balanced 16-18 points, you are a whisker short of slam if he has a minimum, but have just enough if he is maximum. Jump to four no trump. That's an invitational raise asking him to bid slam if he is at the top of his range, not ace-asking.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♡AQ85 ◇AJ10632 ♣QJ6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Your excellent hand has slowly gone to pot. This is a classic misfit, so be happy that you are in a contract that should prove makable. Pass.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK83 ♡AQ92 ◇AJ763
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—In terms of point count you might be thinking slam; in reality you don't even know where your best spot is. Therefore, don't crowd the auction. This is not the time for a jump shift. Just respond one diamond to make it as easy as possible for partner to make his most descriptive rebid.

Sean Penn will pay $50 a night to serve time at small-time jail

BRIDGEPORT, Calif. (AP) — Tough-guy actor Sean Penn wasn't going anywhere, but he still managed to lead reporters and photographers on a chase as they tried to find the secret, out-of-the-way slammer where he was confined.

Officials finally confirmed Sunday evening that Penn had reported Friday night to the Mono County Jail near the California-Nevada border.

Penn was allowed to pay about $50 a night to serve his 60-day sentence for a probation violation in a small-town jail rather than the rough, crowded Los Angeles County Central Jail.

Officials said such an arrangement is not uncommon for prominent people and actually helps authorities, because security is easier to maintain in a smaller jail.

The 26-year-old star of such films as "Fast Times at Ridgemont High" and "The Falcon and the Snowman" was in a private cell in a 12-cell area holding 10 other people jailed on mostly misdemeanors, sheriff's dispatcher Maureen Hier said.

"He's been very cooperative. He's very nice," she said. "We haven't had any problems."

Hier said Penn is expected to remain at the jail for the entire sentence he received after he admitted to reckless driving and punching a movie extra.

His wife, pop star Madonna, who was performing at a concert in Wisconsin on Sunday, said her husband would have to be "a pacifist or a Buddhist" to tolerate the baiting he undergoes and predicted his jail stay will make him a better person.

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — Oscar-winning director John Huston is recovering after collapsing from emphysema and suffering an attack of pneumonia, his doctors say.

"While he is still seriously ill, his condition overall appears improved," his doctors at Charlton Memorial Hospital and family members said in a statement Sunday.

They said Huston, who will be 81 on Wednesday, "felt stronger on Saturday and spent considerable time out of bed. He is actively engaged in the production of the movie 'Mr. North.'"

Huston, a former longtime smoker, suffers from lung disease and emphysema. The director was stricken in Newport, R.I., on Tuesday just before a scheduled film acting role in "Mr. North," a comedy.

He was to play the part of an eccentric millionaire. Robert Mitchum took over the role Thursday.

Huston is co-author of the screenplay, based on Thornton Wilder's "Theophilus North." His son Danny is director, and his daughter, Anjelica, has a leading role.

The orchestra has played five concerts in Brazil during a tour of South America.

The concert went on under sunny skies. It is winter in the Southern Hemisphere.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Christopher Lee Marshall, a 10-year-old who piloted a small plane across the United States, plans to spend three days at Walt Disney World before making his return flight to California.

Christopher has taken a sailboat cruise in the Caribbean and toured a Piper Aircraft plant in Vero Beach since landing his single-prop Piper here July 22 with flight instructor Rowe Yates.

"Going to Disney World is just for fun before we go all the way home," he said Sunday. "Once we get up in the air it's serious business."

He and Yates planned to fly to Orlando today before returning to Christopher's hometown of Oceano, Calif. They left the coastal town 150 miles north of Los Angeles on July 19.

Christopher said his father, an airline pilot, encouraged him to make the cross-country trip after 11-year-old John Kevin Hill of Arlington, Texas, and a flight instructor flew cross-country nearly three weeks earlier.

"Being the youngest pilot ever to cross the country means a lot and it will mean even more if I can do it again," Christopher said. "I'm not letting go of the controls no matter what. Well...maybe if a wing falls off."

The Guinness Book of World Records announced last week that Hill will be listed as the youngest person ever to fly such a long distance. Editor David Boehm said he has not yet received documentation of Christopher's flight.

Yates said the return trip to California will be more leisurely than the first trip, which was made in four days with up to eight hours in the air a day.

Brinkley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television commentator David Brinkley, threatened with $2,137 in possible fines for owing 10 cents in back taxes, is treating the incident as more of a metaphor than a menace.

"Over the years, I have chronicled more than a few outrages by those on our various public payrolls...and they have ranged from the ridiculous to the hilarious to the stupid. This one is all three," Brinkley said Sunday on his ABC television program, "This Week with David Brinkley."

Brinkley, who has made a career out of reporting government snafus, reported on his own first-hand run-in with the District of Columbia government.

Brinkley said he recently received a "brisk and officious" note from District tax officials informing him he owes 10 cents in back property taxes. The note warned him fines could amount to $2,137.32 if he didn't pay up, he said.

Harper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The producers of NBC's "Valerie" say they'll write the title character out of the series unless Valerie Harper ends her month-long holdout this week.

Barbara Brogliatti of Lorimar Productions said Sunday that the producers also will sue the actress for damages that could reach "hundreds of millions."

Harper has not commented on the dispute, but Lorimar says she is seeking a salary increase that would put her in the superstar range occupied by Bill Cosby and Larry Hagman.

Harper and her husband, executive producer Tony Cacciotti, are co-owners of the series.

U.S., Vietnam end meetings

Agreement reached on MIA issue

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — The United States and Vietnam ended their highest-level talks in a decade today with an agreement to accelerate the process of accounting for America's wartime missing.

The agreement, announced by U.S. presidential envoy John W. Vessey and Vietnamese Foreign Minister and Deputy Premier Nguyen Co Thach, also said the countries would address Vietnam's "humanitarian concerns."

A joint statement said the two sides agreed that the missing in action issue "should not be linked to broader political questions such as normalization or to economic aid."

U.S. offficials had feared that Hanoi was seeking U.S. aid and re-establishment of diplomatic ties as a price for help in accounting for 1,776 Americans who remain listed as missing in action in Vietnam from the war, which ended in 1975.

Vessey arrived Saturday and held several hours of talks over three days with Thach.

"Specific measures were agreed upon to accelerate progress toward accounting for Americans missing in Vietnam and to address certain urgent humanitarian concerns of Vietnam," the statement said.

"In particular, meetings of experts on these issues will take place in the near future: one to discuss steps to resolve the MIA-POW (missing in action-prisoner of war) issues, and one to discuss urgent Vietnamese humanitarian concerns," it added.

"The two sides have undertaken to work methodically and seriously on these humanitarian concerns," it said.

Vessey would not elaborate on the five-sentence joint statement. Thach said the Vietnamese side was "very happy" with the results of the talks.

Vietnamese officials recently have been calling for U.S. help in resolving Vietnam's problems from the war, including orphans, the disabled, alleged victims of U.S. chemical warfare.

U.S. policy is not to consider economic aid or restoration of relations until Hanoi gives the "fullest possible accounting" of the MIAs and withdraws its forces from Cambodia.

The Soviet-backed Vietnamese invaded Cambodia in late 1978 and maintain about 140,000 troops in Cambodia to support the pro-Hanoi Heng Samrin government.

Asked if both sides had agreed on everything, Thach said: "Not on everything, but we have agreed on the very necessary questions."

Vessey's delegation was scheduled to return home later today.

The talks were held behind closed doors at the pastel green French colonial-style state guest house, the former residence of the French governor general.

Vessey's seven-member official delegation included Richard Childress, a member of the National Security Council, David Lambertson, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asia and Pacific affairs and Ann Mills Griffiths, director of the National League of POW-MIA Families, a private lobbying group.

A 65-year-old Vietnam combat veteran, Vessey is the highest-level U.S. representative to visit Hanoi since former President Jimmy Carter sent his envoy, Leonard Woodcock, in March 1977. Woodcock, then president of the United Auto Workers Union, returned with 12 sets of MIA remains but otherwise failed to make progress on the MIA issue.

After a series of dramatic initiatives beginning in early 1985, Vietnam slowed its pace on the missing in action issue. It has returned no remains of MIAs since Nov. 26 and has refused to meet with U.S. technical experts since October. Vietnamese officials have complained that the United States is not helping their country enough.

Demjanjuk says he couldn't be guard since he didn't drive

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk testified in his Nazi war crimes trial today that he couldn't have been the brutal death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible" because, unlike Ivan, he didn't know how to drive a truck.

Demjanjuk also sought to explain contradictions between his testimony in the United States and in this trial by saying that in previous proceedings he "answered like a little child. Whatever came to my head, I said."

Demjanjuk took the stand for the fifth day, answering calmly in his native Ukrainian. He has been under cross-examination for four days.

When Demjanjuk entered the courtroom, he blew a kiss to his daughter, Lydia Maday, 37, of Philadelphia, who was sitting in the front row.

Demjanjuk, 67, is charged with being the guard "Ivan the Terrible" at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland. About 850,000 Jews were killed in the camp in 1942 and 1943.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk maintains he is a victim of mistaken identity. He has said he spent most of World War II in German prisoner-of-war camps and was never at Treblinka.

Prosecutor Michael Shaked today cited testimony by Otto Horn, an SS officer at Treblinka, who told U.S. courts that "Ivan the Terrible" drove a truck at the camp.

Demjanjuk said he knew how to drive a tractor during the war but did not learn to drive cars and trucks until 1947 when he began to work for the U.S. Army in West Germany.

Shaked quoted Fyodor Fedorenko, a Ukrainian guard at Treblinka, as testifying the Germans selected prisoners from the Cheim POW camp for the SS training camp in Trawniki if they were technicians or knew how to drive.

Fedorenko was executed last month after being convicted of war crimes in a court in the Soviet Union.

"You were in a very difficult plight at Cheim," interjected presiding Judge Dov Levine. "You were being starved, weren't you? Did you not see people being taking from the camp because they could drive? It must have been quite a temptation to get out of such a situation."

Levine asked whether Demjanjuk had volunteered to become a driver. The defendant said: "I wasn't fully qualified. I couldn't have pulled it off."

Demjanjuk also reiterated that he was not certain that a picture on the so-called Trawniki document, an SS identity card in his name, depicted him.

The defense contends that the card, a key piece of prosecution evidence, was forged by Soviet officials, who supplied it.

Two expert witnesses have said the picture on the Trawniki card shows Demjanjuk.

"I wouldn't say with 100 percent certainty this is my face, but it certainly resembles my face," Demjanjuk said. However, he added: "I never wore such a uniform and as for the hair, it is the sort of haircut I only had in the Red Army."

Demjanjuk served in the Soviet army before being captured by the Germans.

Cargo plane crew to answer charges

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Three American crewmen of a cargo plane that crashed on a crowded Mexican highway have been ordered to appear before a federal judge to answer charges that include involuntary manslaugter, a court official says.

The charges by the Federal Attorney General's Office stems from the Thursday evening crash of the 35-year-old Boeing 377 that was carrying 18 thoroughbred horses. The plane was operated by Belize Air International, a cargo charter service.

The government news agency Notimex reported Sunday night the death toll from the fiery crash rose to 41 with the weekend death of one of those injured. It said 33 victims had been identified and forensics experts were working to identify the other eight.

The Red Cross said 23 people remained hospitalized, mostly with burns and fractures. Most of those killed and injured were on the ground.

Arrested are pilot Frederick Morr, 49, of Hialeah, Fla., co-pilot Robert Banta, 61, of North Bay Village, Fla., and flight engineer Forrest Wootten, 55, of Dade County., Fla. In addition to manslaughter, they are accused of bodily injury and damage to private and government property.

They are to appear before Judge Alfredo Munguia Camara of the Federal District Second Penal Court to answer the charges. A court official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said no specific hearing date has been set, "but it will probably be (today) if they can get counsel and papers ready."

The three remained Sunday under guard at the American-British-Cowdray Hospital, recovering from injuries sustained during the crash. Armed policemen patrolled the hallway outside their rooms.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez told reporters Sunday that Belize Air International has assumed legal responsibility for those killed and for the property damage.

He said the four-engine propeller plane carried two insurance policies covering people and property on board and the damage it caused "to people and property on the ground, which has been very serious."
