Goodbye to Ives

Children knew Burl Ives as the tubby, goateed folk singer with twinkling eyes, the balladeer who sang of the old lady who swallowed a fly and Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer. Adults saw a darker side: the domineering Southern patriarch Big Daddy in the movie "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." Ives, 85, died Friday morning. Story/10A.

Actor to appear

Thaao Penghlis, Tony DiMera of NBC's "Days of Our Lives," will be at Builders Square II, 5407 Andrews Highway, from 1 to 3 p.m. today for grand opening festivities. Penghlis will sign autographs and meet fans.

Clinton's war

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, who as a college student opposed and avoided the war in Vietnam, says he feels vindicated by former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's disclosure that he viewed the war as a terrible mistake. Page 10A.

Just another day

LOS ANGELES — The O.J. Simpson judge chastised prosecutors Friday for playing unfair but still allowed them to show jurors the fourth page of a crime scene report that the defense had suggested was destroyed as part of a coverup. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said the prosecutors intentionally violated a court order Thursday when they failed to tell him and opposing lawyers that they had found the missing page. Page 11A.

Rumors spark fear in Tokyo

City takes precautions against another attack by cult

A member of the Aum Sninri Kyo doomsday cult shouts at police during a raid on one-of the group's Tokyo offices Friday.

■ Streets, subways are unusually quiet while some shopping centers, schools close.

TOKYO — Helicopters patrolled Tokyo's skies and police stood watch over major intersections Saturday because of fears that the cult suspected in a nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways might strike again.

Streets and subway trains were unusually empty, and shopping centers and several schools in Tokyo's central Shinjuku district were closed due to the threat of a possible attack. As a precaution, hospitals reportedly were ordered to stock up on nerve gas antidotes.

In a highly unusual move, Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama directed officials to tighten security in the capital, according to the Kyodo News Service.

Chief government spokesman Kozo Igarashi said the fears may be baseless. "But we must be cautious about everything so that the people can be free of worry," he said Friday.

The cult, called Aum Shinri Kyo, or Supreme Truth, has repeatedly denied involvement in subway terror and denounced violence.

But evidence linking it to the kind of nerve gas used in the March 20 attack, which killed 11 people and sickened thousands, has made

W. Texas' rare quake causes minor damage near epicenter

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Minor repairs are being made and life is returning to normal for residents in the southern West Texas area near the epicenter of Thursday's 5.6-magnitude earthquake.

There was some minor damage in homes and buildings near the epicenter, located about 20 miles southeast of Alpine in Brewster County. Experts say this was one of the strongest quakes in Texas' short and sparse recorded earthquake history.

Most residents in the Big Bend area went to work as usual. The quake was more of a hot topic of conversation than a reason of major concern, according to sheriff's deputies in Presidio County, which is adjacent to Brewster County.

Late Thursday, however, telephone lines were jammed with calls from concerned relatives and friends of those in the Alpine area. The telephone system was so overtaxed that American Red Cross officials were unable to gather information regarding the extent of damage in the area, according to Civil Air Patrol Lt. Victoria Detiveaux in Odessa.

Odessa CAP personnel were able to contact the CAP office in Alpine to relay information to Red Cross officials in the Permian Basin and in Lubbock.

Clintons join last-minute filers, expect handsome tax refund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Finishing up his taxes just before Monday's deadline, President Clinton is in line for a handsome refund from Uncle Sam. The bottom line for the Clintons: taxes of $55,313 on income of $263,900, with a refund of $14,418 — half of which they're applying to next year's bill.

Joining the 36 million Americans who were expected to file in the home stretch of the tax season, the Clintons wrapped up final details of their return in a meeting with their accountant and tax attorney Thursday night.

The president's tax bite works out to 21 percent of adjusted gross income, placing Clinton among the 1.2 percent of Americans paying more because of the deficit-reduction law he pushed

Group works to educate, raise awareness of area child abuse

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

April is Child Abuse Prevention month, and members of Midland County Child Welfare are working to foster community awareness of the problem.

There were 124 new cases investigated in the first two months of 1995, with physical abuse being the dominant type of abuse, followed by no supervision and physical neglect, according to Child Protective Services.

"We're trying to educate parents on how to help their children," said Mary Frances Brown, a member of the Child Welfare Board since 1980.

The board has 10 members — two from each County Commissioners' precinct who are appointed by the commissioners and approved by the county judge and two appointed by the judge.

The board works with the County Commissioners' Court and the Texas Department of Human Service and, as an entity of the DHS, coordinates the

Continental's restructuring won't affect Midland employees

By John Paul Pitts
Business and Oil Editor

Continental Airlines' announced restructuring will not affect scheduling or employees at Midland International Airport, a company spokesman said.

Continental announced Thursday that it would cut its floundering low-fare division and take a $563 million loss in the fourth quarter.

Features of a restructuring plan and the results for the fourth quarter include: 4,000 layoffs, shedding unprofitable routes, rerouting flights to reduce excess capacity and removing certain aircraft from the fleet. Most of the aircraft being removed from the fleet are wide-bodied planes.

Dave Messing, Continental spokesman, said most of the write-downs were involved with aircraft related costs, in which some aircraft were retired early. He said Continental received cooperation from Boeing on future aircraft orders and from aircraft lessors on leases.

He said the restructuring had nothing to do with marketing features of the company.

"Continental will continue to have low fares and will not change its scheduling out of Midland-Odessa," he said.

He said most of the fare changes had occurred earlier this year.

Continental, which employs approximately 40,000 people, has struggled to become profitable since it emerged from bankruptcy in April 1993.

Messing said the restructuring would help the company become profitable.

"We will make it. We are very optimistic about the restructuring, and think it will improve cash on the balance sheet."

Continental in 1994 lost $613.3 million. It announced an anticipated loss for the last quarter, but had not calculated the impact of a $400 million non-operating charge, according to Associated Press reports.

Road to the cross

Pontiff receives help of Protestant nun, others during traditional holy procession

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, still limping after hip surgery, asked for help carrying the cross in the Good Friday procession. A Protestant nun, a mother of three and a teen-age girl were among those called.

It was the first time the pope didn't carry the wooden cross himself over the entire half-mile circuit around the Colosseum. And it was the first time women were brought into the procession.

Around the globe, Christians observed the day in contemplation and prayer. In the Philippines, a dozen penitents had themselves nailed to crosses in sympathy with Christ's anguish.

The pope, who has relied on a cane since last year's hip replacement surgery, carried the light wooden cross on only three of the 14 stations of the cross, which recall Christ's suffering before his crucifixion.

The pope began the ceremony by remembering the victims of recent civil wars and those who perished in concentration camps and atomic blasts during World War II.

The pope, wearing a red cape over white vestments, limped heavily as he carried the 5-foot cross for the first two stations around the Colosseum. After handing it to a Swiss Lutheran nun, he used a cane and was helped down stairs during the hour-long procession.

The pope again held the cross for the final station. "The Colosseum stands here as testimony to the martyrs of faith," he said after the procession.

Tens of thousands of worshipers shielded prayer books and burning candles from the steady rain.

Women have never before taken a direct role in the procession, although nuns have previously written the text read at each of the 14 stations.

A Russian Orthodox priest from Moscow also was one of the cross bearers as part of Vatican efforts to involve other denominations on Christianity's most solemn day.

John Paul broke his right leg in a fall nearly a year ago. He canceled a number of activities last year, including a trip to the United States, but resumed foreign travel and a full schedule this year.

In Jerusalem, one of the largest crowds of pilgrims in years retraced Christ's steps toward crucifixion through the ancient walled city. Some lugged heavy wooden crosses along the Via Dolorosa, or "Way of Sorrow," to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, revered as the site of Jesus' crucifixion, burial and resurrection.

This year's large crowds contrasted with the trickle of tourists during the 1987-93 Palestinian uprising. Tourism has boomed since Palestinians and Israeli reached a peace accord in 1993.

In the Philippines, dozens of penitents beat themselves with bamboo whips or were nailed to wooden crosses in an annual ritual.

Men dressed as Roman centurions drove thin aluminum nails into the hands and feet of about a dozen people in sweltering San Pedro Cutid.

"I will do this as long as I can stand the physical rigors," said Fernando Macapagal.

Large processions also took place across Spain, where most events are organized by lay groups. In Seville, more than 10,000 hooded worshipers followed a relic of Christ through the streets in a prelude to Good Friday ceremonies.

At the Vatican, the pope heard confessions from a dozen Roman Catholics picked from a crowd of thousands of pilgrims filling St. Peter's Basilica.

"Many others wanted to be heard, but it would have taken a week without sleeping," said John Paul, wearing a black cloak over his white robes.

Vatican officials picked five men and seven women from the crowd, escorting them to a mahogany confessional booth near the center of the vast basilica.

John Paul began the tradition of hearing Good Friday confessions in the first year of his papacy 16 years ago.

Villagers claim Russian soldiers' assault killed 300

SAMASHKY, Russia (AP) — A spring breeze carries the smell of ash and burned flesh through this western Chechen village, scene of an assault by Russian troops last weekend in which villagers claim up to 300 people were killed.

A few miles south, columns of smoke hang over Bamut, in the foothills of the Caucasus Mountains. Russian troops attacked the village again Friday as part of a push evidently intended to bring the war to an end before Moscow's World War II victory celebrations.

Defense Minister Pavel Grachev recently declared the war in the breakaway republic would end before May 9, when President Clinton and dozens of other foreign leaders plan to come to Moscow to commemorate the Nazi defeat.

Foreign leaders have criticized Russia's use of force in Chechnya, and growing media attention to the massacre at Samashky is an embarrassment for the government. Red Cross workers and Russian lawmakers have said human rights were violated in the storming of Samashky.

Interior Ministry spokesman Vladimir Vorozhtsov on Tuesday denied reports of heavy civilian casualties in Samashky.

Russia sent troops into Chechnya on Dec. 11 to put down its drive for independence. Grachev had said he could defeat the Chechen rebels in a few hours with one paratroop unit. In fact, the Russians suffered humiliating losses in the early weeks, although they now control most of the republic.

On Friday, troops shelled forests around Bamut where rebel fighters are positioned, the military command told the Interfax news agency. The Russians later pulled back after encountering "fierce resistance" inside the town.

Chechen sources told Interfax that up to 30 Russians were killed and only a few Chechens. Russian officials said the area next to Bamut was once a strategic missile garrison, so the rebels could take advantage of silos, concrete bunkers and underground communications.

At Samashky, a few reporters who had been prevented for several days from visiting the village stood awkwardly as groups of Chechen women wearing black mourning scarves sobbed in the burned-out shells of their homes.

Villagers said up to 300 people had been killed. But a Western aid worker who asked not to be identified said no more than 150 people were killed.

Outside, bloated bodies lay on the streets. Many dead had already been buried; Islamic law dictates that the dead must be buried as quickly as possible.

Usman Nadirov, 80, stood quietly while villagers uncovered the charred body of his 35-year-old son, Khamzad, and three other men in a temporary grave.

Khamzad's wife, Esma, ran away screaming as the bodies were lifted onto stretchers and wrapped in white sheets for burial.

"The soldiers came and began loading our things onto their armored car," said another relative, 73-year-old Suleiman Suguyipov. "The men protested, and were shot down in the yard."

He said the soldiers burned the corpses with a flamethrower.

Besides a few smashed roofs, there was little outward evidence of damage to houses along his street. But inside the walls and green iron gates, Russian soldiers had done a thorough job burning the interior.

Many villagers said they heard soldiers shout, "Get the cellars, the cellars." Most villagers had taken shelter in cellars from the shelling that preceded the attack.

Bekatu Mutiyeva, 46, said she and 12 others held their breath in a cellar when Russian soldiers stormed into the yard and sprayed the cellar door with automatic fire.

Soon after, her 18-year-old daughter, Khaba, was shot twice in the stomach when she crept out to see if the soldiers had gone. The family wrapped her body in a sheet, laid it on a bed and ran back to the cellar.

Later, they said, they heard a soldier cry "a body," and the room where Khaba lay was set on fire. Some charred bed springs and a few bones were all that was left.

Villagers showed reporters used syringes to back up their claims that soldiers were high on drugs during the attack. Clutching a handful of used needles, 36-year-old Khasan Ifayev said, "After the attack, soldiers sat down in the street and injected themselves in the leg or the arm."

Russian officials have denied the soldiers acted improperly in Samashky.

Warm Easter weekend in store

Staff Report

Today should be partly sunny with a high in the upper 80s and southwest winds 15 to 25 mph and gusty, according to a forecaster at the National Weather Service office at Midland International Airport.

Tonight should be mostly clear with a low in the mid-50s. Easter Sunday should be partly sunny with a high in the upper 80s.

After a low of 57, compared to the record low of 29 set in 1983, the high was 92, almost reaching the record high of 95 set in 1935.

STATE

It was mostly sunny, breezy and warm across Texas on Good Friday with considerable dust kicked up by gusts in West Texas.

A trough of low pressure in the West was responsible for the strong southerly winds, with speeds up to 30 miles an hour.

Temperatures warmed into the upper 70s and lower 80s due to plenty of sunshine and at 3 p.m. ranged from 72 degrees at Guadalupe Pass to 91 at Childress and Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock.

The North Texas forecast is for partly cloudy skies with highs in the 80s. Saturday night and Sunday should also be partly cloudy with highs in the 80s and lows in the 60s. Mostly cloudy sunday night with a slight chance of thunderstorms in western portions. Lows in the 60s.

The forecast for South Texas was for increasing cloudiness during the weekend. Highs in the 80s and lows in the 50s and 60s.

Forecasters said West Texas will be sunny, windy and cooler on Saturday. Mostly clear Saturday night and partly sunny to sunny skies on Sunday. Highs Saturday from the upper 60s north to the mid 90s in the Presidio Valley. Lows Saturday night from the 40s north and mountains to the 60s south. Sunday's highs from 70s north and mountains to the low 90s in the Big Bend Valleys.

NATION

Snow and strong wind lashed parts of the West on Friday as a Pacific storm moved into Utah and Idaho. The East was mostly mild and clear.

Salt Lake City reported four hours of continuous snow, wind of up to 20 mph and visibility of a half-mile or less. From Provo, Utah, north to the Idaho border, 1 to 5 inches of snow fell by mid-morning.

Wind chills have been in the single digits, a sharp drop from Thursday's temperatures in the low 70s.

An associated cold front raged through southern Colorado, northern Arizona and southeastern Utah. Wind gusted to 69 mph in Grand Junction, Colo., 51 mph in Craig, Colo., and 45 mph in Saint Johns, Ariz. The high winds caused scattered power outages.

On the other side of the Rockies, gusty winds developed in Colorado, rising to 54 mph near Colorado Springs and nearly 50 mph in Denver. A 49 mph gust was measured at Rawlins, Wyo.

Elsewhere, light rain and snow showers fell in Washington and Oregon. Light snow mixed with rain covered parts of Montana and Wyoming, with 5 inches at Gallatin and 3 inches at Belgrade in Montana.

It was partly cloudy and windy in the country's midsection, with lingering light fog in western South Dakota and high winds across the Plains and down to Texas.

Lingering storms produced a few scattered rain and snow showers over western parts of New York and Pennsylvania. Some ice pellets were reported in Williamsport, Penn.

It was fair and mild elsewhere in the East.

The nation's high temperature in the Lower 48 states was 81 degrees at West Palm Beach, Fla., and the low was 8 degrees in Slide Mountain, Nevada.

QUAKE: Life near temblor's epicenter returns to normal

(From 1A)

"The Civil Air Patrol radio frequencies were utilized ... to relay information from the Emergency Operations Center in Alpine that there were no serious injuries or deaths in the area and that structure damage was minimal," Ms. Detiveaux said.

"This was the first information the Red Cross had from the affected area," she said.

Alpine police were continuing to record damages late Thursday, but these were mainly confined to about a dozen buildings with hairline structural cracks and several broken windows, according to Alpine Police Capt. Chris Croy.

There were no injuries reported to Alpine police, although there has been talk of a couple of minor injuries in the area, Croy said.

There were no interruptions of power, water, waste water and other city services in the town of less than 6,000.

The temblor's effects gave everyone in the area a good scare, but caused very little further damage, he said.

Quake leaves seismologists scratching their heads

Associated Press

West Texans and New Mexicans were still shaking from a magnitude-5.6 earthquake, an unusual Texas temblor that was the strongest in more than 60 years.

The quake that hit Thursday was felt as far north as Roswell, N.M., and as far south as San Antonio, according to the U.S. Geological Survey, National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

Thursday's 7:33 p.m. CDT quake had an epicenter 20 miles east-southeast of Alpine. It triggered small fires, cracked plaster and jolted residents of the town of about 5,700.

The needle on a ground sensor at the McDonald Observatory, about 25 miles north of Alpine, broke off because of the earthquake, said Doug Otoupal, an instrument technician at the observatory.

"It's just your typical seismograph, but we've got the sensitivity way up," he said, adding they are adjustable to record large or small movements.

"We weren't looking for earthquakes, just small movements. It just broke the needle off when the earthquake came through," he said.

Only two minor injuries were reported in the West Texas areas near the quake's epicenter.

Texas is not earthquake country, so why was there an earthquake of such magnitude here?

"It's hard to know why," said Stuart Koyanagi, a USGS geophysicist. "It's difficult to say why we sometimes have earthquakes where they don't usually occur."

He said part of the problem is that the history of earthquakes in Texas is short, dating back only to the 1880s.

"A hundred years' history is not a lot to look at," Koyanagi said.

FEAR: Tokyo takes precautions against possible attack

the cult the target of Japan's most intense criminal investigation ever.

It also has focused the nation's attention on a prophesy by cult leader Shoko Asahara that disaster will strike Tokyo on Saturday. Made in a book published last month, the prophesy spoke of an earthquake. But several reports this week have said Asahara also has predicted a "horrible" event in Shinjuku, one of Tokyo's most popular entertainment districts.

The prophesy heightened anxieties in a city still stunned by the subway attack and the near-fatal shooting of Japan's top police official 10 days later.

Some shopping centers and schools in Shinjuku closed early Friday.

The government instructed hospitals to stockpile nerve gas antidotes and train personnel in preparation for a possible attack, according to a report Friday in the Yomiuri, Japan's highest circulation newspaper.

Police patrols have been beefed up in Tokyo, tens of thousands of police manned roadblocks nationwide, and thousands more conducted raids Friday at more than 130 facilities.

In one of those raids, at the cult's main commune at the foot of Mount Fuji, police carried away 53 children — many wearing headgear with wires attached, which cult followers believe allows them to synchronize brain waves with Asahara's.

Eight of the children were hospitalized for malnourishment, including several who had pneumonia, reports said.

Almost daily searches at several cult facilities since the attack have turned up tons of chemicals and equipment police say could have been used to make nerve gas.

Police also claim to have found chemicals and documents that could indicate the cult was experimenting with biological weapons and was trying to manufacture its own guns.

The cult says at least 107 of its members have been arrested on a variety of charges, none directly related to the subway attack or the shooting, and claim the police actions are religious oppression.

Early Saturday, police announced the arrest of cult member Masanobu Iwao, 35, on suspicion of breaking into a laser research center, the Kyodo News Service said.

Though Asahara's whereabouts remain unknown, so far at least three of his top disciples and one senior member who was formerly a member of Japan's largest gangster syndicate have been taken into custody.

Most of those arrests were also for unrelated, minor crimes — one for riding a stolen bicycle, another for using a false name in a hotel register.

"Police are supposed to gather evidence, and make arrests based on that evidence," said Fumihiro Joyu, the cult's spokesman. "But this time, they're just attacking us, and making up reasons to dismantle our property."

Asahara predicts a war between Christians and Buddhists will set off World War III in 1997, and says sect followers must prepare to survive.

REFUND: Clintons join nation's other last-minute filers through in 1993.

The president's not complaining.

In fact, his press secretary used the release of Clinton's tax returns Friday to denounce anew Republican tax-cut proposals that the Democrats argue would unfairly benefit the wealthy.

"It's clear from their returns that they would be enormous beneficiaries of tax cuts as proposed by the Republican majority in Congress and the president ... thinks that that's unfair and that tax relief ought to be targeted on middle-income Americans," Mike McCurry said. "As you can see from their return, they fall outside that category."

The bulk of the Clintons' income came from the president's $200,000 salary, supplemented by $38,000 in capital gains on holdings in their blind trust and $21,000 in interest and dividends.

They also got $1,421 in residuals for Clinton's 1992 appearance on the "Arsenio Hall" show and $259 in belated royalties for an article Hillary Rodham Clinton wrote for Harvard University in 1973.

For the second straight year, their dividends and interest included $12,000 for Mrs. Clinton from a "pin money" fund for first ladies set up in the 1912 will of Henry G. Freeman Jr.

Freeman wrote that he set up the fund because "the president of the United States receives such a miserable pittance for a man holding the greatest position on earth."

Nonetheless, Mrs. Clinton plans to donate the money to charity.

Overall, the Clintons reported $30,000 in charitable contributions during 1994, but declined to publicly itemize their donations. McCurry said the Clintons contributed to 28 organizations, with most of the money going to their churches.

The Clintons filed a separate return for their 15-year-old daughter, Chelsea, showing taxes of $911 on income of $6,678. The bulk of the money came from royalties on an autobiography by Clinton's mother, the late Virginia Kelley, that were dedicated to Chelsea.

The White House also released federal tax returns for Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper. They showed income of $414,705 and taxes of $142,688. Some $221,000 came from royalties on the sale of Gore's best-selling book, "Earth in the Balance."

Other details from the Clintons' return:

- They paid $10,000 to their attorney for legal and accounting work that went into preparing their tax returns and other issues. They paid an additional $3,000 to attorneys who prepared their annual financial disclosure form.
- They took a home mortgage interest deduction of $4,402 for Mrs. Clinton's half-share in her mother's home in Little Rock, Ark., and a $62 personal property deduction on a 1988 Oldsmobile the president owns in Arkansas.

use of federal, state and local funds.

Members, who meet monthly, prepare an annual budget and statistical reports for the commissioners, advise the DHS on policy and long-range plans and educate the community on child welfare policies, programs and needs.

The board has distributed a variety of tip sheets, including one on tips about being a good parent that was distributed to day-care centers, pre-kindergarten and kindergarten classes in Midland.

A sheet on positive ways to deal with a bad report card were handed out to junior high school students.

Other fliers provide statistics on child abuse and neglect, ways to support child-protection efforts, ways to eat out and shopping with young children and how to help children succeed in school.

Child abuse was formally recognized by the medical profession in 1961 as "battered child syndrome."

In fiscal year 1994, Texas' child protective service agency received and referred for investigation 109,375 reports of alleged child abuse and neglect. Approximately 55,607 children were found to be substantiated or suspected victims of abuse or neglect.

According to the National Clearinghouse on Child Abuse and Neglect Information, the link between substance abuse and child abuse has strengthened over the years. Parental abuse of alcohol and use of other drugs was identified as a major factor contributing to child maltreatment and death in the United States. It is estimated that nearly 10 million children under the age of 18 are affected in some way by their parents' substance abuse, according to statistics.

To help solve the problem, the Child Welfare Board not only works to educate the public, but assists in recruiting foster parents, furnishing clothing and emergency needs for children in foster care, raises funds for the local child welfare program, promotes reporting of child abuse and neglect and acts as a liaison with school boards, hospitals, mental health and mental retardation clinics and other agencies.

Lubbock judge agrees to reconsider his decision to try case of Cisneros

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Lubbock judge has agreed to reconsider his decision to try the case of Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros while lawyers ridiculed a $256,000 lawsuit by former mistress Linda Medlar as a soap opera.

But Judge Blair Cherry Jr. Friday offered Cisneros' defense team little hope that he would reverse his previous ruling and dismiss the case.

"I've read the evidence and I do not come to the conclusion that there is not a disputed fact issue here," Cherry said after the 30-minute hearing.

The motion from Cisneros' attorney Seagal Wheatley asking Cherry to dismiss the case drew heated rhetoric from both sides, with each camp claiming victory after the half hour of legal sparring.

Ms. Medlar, a former Cisneros' campaign aide, sued him last July. She alleged Cisneros reneged on an oral contract to compensate her after their extramarital affair was made public in 1988.

Ms. Medlar has based her claim on secretly recorded telephone conversations with Cisneros in which he discusses his payments to her.

Neither Cisneros nor Ms. Medlar attended Friday's hearing.

Wheatley spent most of the hearing hammering at legal aspects of Ms. Medlar's case that he said should be reviewed and rejected by a judge rather than a jury.

"We are all headed into what we think will be an expensive and unnecessary trial," Wheatley said. "I know what they (Ms. Medlar's attorneys) want to do. They want to try this as a soap opera rerun."

"There's nothing very novel or different about this case," Holder responded. "It's just a simple contract. This issue is simple: Was there a promise made, and what was the promise?"

Wheatley's motion to have the case dismissed was his second such request. Cherry denied the original motion Feb. 3, saying a jury should decide the issues.

Wheatley said the central issue involves the state statute of frauds, which requires most legal contracts to be written and signed.

Since Ms. Medlar has no written agreement with Cisneros, a judge must decide if her tape recordings constitute a legal contract before a jury can determine Cisneros broke it, he said.

Couple already has approval to adopt two black children, state agency says

AUSTIN (AP) — A couple who accused the state's child protective agency of hindering interracial adoptions have been approved since March to adopt two black boys, an agency official said Friday.

But the prospective parents, Scott and Lou Ann Mullen, said no one informed them of the agency's decision.

"That is great. I wish I had known about it," Mrs. Mullen said.

A lawsuit filed here Thursday on behalf of the Mullens and more than 500 nonwhite children accuses the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services of illegally using race as a factor in placing adoptive children.

The lawsuit is part of a nationwide legal attack by the Washington-based Institute for Justice against states that allegedly impede interracial adoptions. Another lawsuit was filed in Tennessee.

The Mullens allege social workers have delayed their adoption of two black children, Matthew, 2, and his brother Joseph, 6, while they search for black parents. Mullen is white, and his wife is an American Indian.

Pat Devin, deputy director of the agency, said Friday she was "confused about the lawsuit" because the couple were approved as adoptive parents on March 24.

An adoptive placement agreement could be signed as early as Monday, and the adoption will be finalized in six months if no problems are reported, she said.

Ms. Devin said the agency had planned to permanently place the boys with the Mullens since January, when the children were assigned to the couple on a temporary basis.

"I really was confused about the lawsuit because it had been my understanding that that had been the plan," Ms. Devin said. "I can't find anybody who's not in agreement that that's not the best place for them.

Ms. Devin said the agency has begun a review of the Mullen case "to see where and how that communication broke down and to see which if any of the allegations are founded."

The Mullens still plan to go forward with their lawsuit.

At Last! How to Buy A New Central Air & Heating System for Less than

HIGH-EFFICIENCY AIR CONDITIONERS

with Lower, Electric Bills

...and best of all, you don't have to put any cash down.
But you must act now while the special circumstances that created this unique offer are still available.

WHY WOULD CLAIRE'S HEATING & COOLING MAKE THIS INCREDIBLE OFFER?

OUR PROBLEM IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

Every year we have to guess how many air conditioners and furnaces to buy to meet the "Emergency Demand". Of course we're never exactly right. But this year we're way off and have "extra" systems sitting in storage in the four most popular sizes used in the Permain Basin Area.

6 MONTHS NO PAYMENT. NO INTEREST.

THERE IS ANOTHER REMARKABLE ADVANTAGE!

If your central air system is over 10 years old, the money you save on utility costs should be enough to offset the monthly payment on your new system. Imagine that - "Buy a new central heating and cooling system without taking money out of your pocket!" It's like having the utility company buy you a new air conditioner and furnace.

Iraq considers U.N.'s offer to allow oil sales

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq gained the United Nation's permission Friday to sell oil to buy food, medicine and other supplies for its people, who are suffering under U.N. economic sanctions.

Although Iraq rejected a similar deal in 1991, there were signs it was considering the new offer.

The unanimously approved Security Council resolution would let Iraq sell $2 billion worth of oil over 180 days under international supervision.

Iraq wants the U.N. sanctions, imposed after Saddam Hussein's army invaded Kuwait in August 1990, completely lifted. The sanctions include a ban on sales of oil, Iraq's main export.

But the offer seemed the best Iraq could hope for, for now. U.N. weapons inspectors recently reported Baghdad may be working on germ warfare agents.

That means the sanctions would not be lifted soon, since under Gulf War cease-fire resolutions Iraq's weapons of mass destruction and its means for producing them are supposed to be destroyed.

In Washington, White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the United States remains "fully committed to the view that Iraq needs to comply fully with relevant U.N. Security Council resolutions" before sanctions can be lifted.

He denied the new offer was an effort to forestall lifting the sanctions.

Before the resolution passed, Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz, accused the United States of blocking a "workable" solution.

Afterward, Aziz met for an hour with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali "to discuss its implementation," a U.N. statement said. No details were released.

The United States and Britain, the resolution's chief sponsors, have urged Iraq to go along. So did France, which bargained on Iraq's behalf.

The resolution allows Iraq to resume oil sales only after Boutros-Ghali tells the Security Council that U.N. arrangements to monitor the sales are in place. No deadline was set.

The exports can continue as long as U.N. monitors certify that Baghdad is ensuring "equitable" distribution of supplies to its 18 million people.

In addition, 30 percent of the proceeds would go to a U.N. fund to compensate victims of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, and at least 13 percent would go to the Kurds in northern Iraq.

Iraq would have to export most of the oil through a now-idle pipeline running from Kirkuk in northern Iraq to Yumurtalik on Turkey's Mediterranean Sea coast. The rest would run through Iraq's Gulf terminal at Mina al-Bakr.

Aziz said the plan's conditions infringed on Iraq's sovereignty — the same reason Iraq gave when it rejected the 1991 offer to sell $1.6 billion of oil.

But British Ambassador David Hannay and other diplomats said Aziz's statement did not amount to a rejection.

Oil markets are anticipating Iraq's reentry. Prices in New York tumbled this week from above $20 a barrel to $19.15 a barrel.

At $15 to $18 a barrel, the approximate price of Iraq's type of crude, the deal would equal about 600,000 to 750,000 barrels per day. Iraq exported 3.2 million barrels per day before the U.N. ban.

The plan was welcomed by Turkey, a key Gulf War ally that says the closure of the pipeline and lost trade with Iraq under sanctions have cost it $20 billion. Iraq will have to pay Turkey fees for using the oil pipeline.

Russians struggle to cope with 'world's most arcane' tax system

By Angela Charlton
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The forms baffle experienced accountants, late fees change depending on where they're paid, and even the deadline is open to debate.

As tax season hits Russia this month, millions of residents are struggling to decode one of the world's most arcane tax systems, which includes a 63 percent tax on importing personal belongings and a levy on guard dogs.

"It's not that they're crooks, it's just gross incompetence all over the place," Scott Antel, a tax consultant with the Arthur Andersen accounting firm in Moscow, said Friday. "It's a joke."

And by changing its tax laws every month, the Russian government is sending mixed messages to its much-needed potential investors.

"It's a major deterrent to investment," said Richard Layard, a professor from the London School of Economics working with the Russian Center for Economic Reform. He also called heavy taxation a major motivation for the increasing outflow of Russian capital.

Even Russian tax officials complain of confusing legislation.

"We have no comprehensive tax legislation, and our people are fed confusing tax propaganda by confused newspapers," said Alexander Yeromin, spokesman for the State Tax Service.

Yeromin also echoed government complaints that pressure from the International Monetary Fund to come up with more revenue has pushed Russia into this tax mire.

AP Laserphoto

Employees of the Ernst & Young accounting firm, which provides Russian and foreign individuals and companies with accounting and tax services, are hard at work at the Moscow office Friday.

But frustrated foreign businesses, recently hit by a 38 percent wage tax on all salaries over the minimum of $24 a month, disagree.

"It's just turning away more investment, and that's less tax revenue for Russia right there," said Sean Wood of the American Chamber of Commerce in Moscow, which represents more than 200 companies and about $2 billion in investment in Russia.

The excess wage tax comes on top of the 41 percent social security tax on all Russian wages paid by employers, a 13 percent profit tax and the 13 percent to 15 percent import tariff, to name just a few.

The average Russian taxpayer in 1994 earned $1,112, and will pay anywhere from 12 percent to 30 percent in income taxes, depending on which side of the averaging scale they fall.

Moscow businesses face 51 different taxes. All of this has made tax evasion practically a national pastime.

Yeromin estimated that evasion cost the government as much as 5 trillion rubles, the equivalent of $1 billion, last year and that at least 12,000 businesses paid no taxes at all.

Some Russians evade taxes because they just can't figure out when, where, or how much to pay. Few Russian taxpayers can afford the handful of private accounting services available, and none has the luxury of 800 help numbers or consultations via E-mail.

Others complain their taxes would only go into the black hole of Russian bureaucracy.

"Only an idiot pays all his taxes to our corrupt government," said Sergei, the director of a Moscow video distribution firm, who asked that his last name not be used. "The money certainly doesn't go to fix our embarrassing roads."

Sergei does pay some taxes, "to keep up appearances," but declares only one of his 15 employees on his tax forms.

Even the deadlines — April 15 for filing, April 25 for payment — are unreliable. A top tax official said this week foreign offices could wait six months to pay the wage tax, but was later contradicted by a colleague in the same office.

Tale leads to Jerusalem temple replica, expert says

MOUNT GERIZIM, West Bank (AP) — Guided by an ancient love story, an archaeologist says he has uncovered an exact replica of the temple in Jerusalem that was the center of Jewish life for centuries until its destruction nearly 2,000 years ago.

Yitzhak Magen, Israel's chief archaeologist for the West Bank, located the replica through the writings of the ancient historian Flavius Josephus.

Josephus recorded the story of Menashe, a Jerusalem high priest who flouted Jewish law by marrying a non-Jew, Nikaso. She was a Samaritan, a sect reviled by the Jews.

"They told him, 'Either you leave the Temple in Jerusalem or you leave your wife.' He decided to stay with his wife," said Magen. "Is this a love story or what!"

According to Josephus, Sanballat, Nikaso's father and the leader of the Samaritans, promised to build Menashe an exact replica of the Jewish Temple in Jerusalem and make him its chief priest.

That copy lies underneath the remains of a 5th-century Byzantine church on Mount Gerizim, a barren mountaintop overlooking the Palestinian town of Nablus in the West Bank.

Magen began excavating the 2,900-foot peak in 1983, but only recently did the profile of the Samaritan temple begin to emerge. His team has uncovered the temple's six-foot thick walls, gates and altars.

The find could provide the first historical indication of what the ancient Jewish temple, destroyed by the Romans in 70 A.D., looked like.

The site of the Temple in Jerusalem — the archetype for the Samaritan one — cannot be excavated because it is beneath the Dome of the Rock, revered by Muslims as the site where the Prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven.

This spring, Magen plans to rip up some of the flooring of the Mary Theotokos church to reach the rest of the replica temple. An earlier excavation in the 1920s partially uncovered that church, but it remained mostly covered until Magen's dig.

The Mount Gerizim excavations have already found that the temple was surrounded by living quarters such as those in Jerusalem and unlike anywhere else. Some 15,000 people lived in a city spread out over 100 acres.

Magen said there is "no doubt that Josephus was right" that the Mount Gerizim temple is a replica of the one in Jerusalem.

He cited inscriptions at the site from the 2nd century B.C. written in Paleo-Hebrew, showing that the Samaritans adopted everything, from the Jewish prayers to sacrifice ritual.

Bending down, the 50-year-old archaeologist scraped through ancient ashes and pulled out a handful of charred bones.

"These are from yearling goats and sheep that were sacrificed on an altar here, exactly like they did in Jerusalem," he said.

The northern gate of the replica temple matches the gate to the Jerusalem Temple depicted in one of the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Mandela fires wife from post a second time

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President Nelson Mandela again fired his controversial wife from her Cabinet post Friday — saying he did it right this time.

Winnie Mandela went to court to contest her original dismissal on March 27. Rather than respond directly, Mandela reinstated his estranged wife just long enough to fire her constitutionally, thus precluding any legal challenge.

In a statement, Mandela said he replaced Mrs. Mandela as deputy minister of arts, culture, science and technology "after due consultation and weighing up a myriad of factors which may or may not be related to the incumbent."

"The overriding consideration, as in this instance, is what the president believes is necessary in pursuit of good government and the interests of the country as a whole."

There was no comment from Mrs. Mandela.

In her court papers, Mrs. Mandela had complained that not all political parties in Mandela's government had been consulted about her dismissal, as required by the constitution.

An unlikely ally — Home Affairs Minister Mangosuthu Buthelezi — contributed an affidavit saying Mandela had not discussed the dismissal with him. Buthelezi's Zulu nationalist Inkatha Freedom Party is the biggest black rival to Mandela's ANC.

Mandela reinstated his wife Wednesday. Thursday, he consulted with Buthelezi and Deputy President F.W. de Klerk, head of the former white ruling National Party.

Buthelezi told Associated Press Television on Friday that he had contributed his affidavit to clear up questions about government procedure, not to take sides in the dispute.

Suspected militants kill 5 in taxi attack, Egyptian officials say

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Suspected Islamic insurgents fired Friday on a taxi in southern Egypt and killed five people before escaping.

Three of the dead were women sharing the ride. A policeman and his guard also were killed, security officials said on customary condition of anonymity.

They said three gunmen were involved in the attack in the village of Naway near Mallawi, 160 miles south of Cairo. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

The Mallawi area has seen numerous clashes between police and Muslim extremists in recent months. It lies in the province of el-Minya, a stronghold of the Islamic Group, which has been blamed for much of the violence in a three-year insurgency against Egypt's secular government. The Muslim extremists want to install strict Islamic rule.

More than 680 people have been killed, most of them police and militants.

Also Friday, an Arabic-language newspaper reported that a different Muslim extremist group threatened to retaliate for the trial of 42 suspected militants.

The group, which called itself the New Vanguards of Conquest, made the threat in a fax to the London-based Al-Hayat newspaper, saying its members would not "stand by quietly or with their hands tied."

The trial of 42 suspected extremists opened in a military court Wednesday with four of the defendants complaining of police torture. They are charged with terrorism and reviving the militant Jihad extremist group, which assassinated President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

After a series of trials last year, the government claimed that security forces had eliminated the Vanguards of Conquest. It was unclear if the new faction was a revival of the Vanguards, which claims roots in the Jihad movement.

The trial resumes Sunday.

Navy's first coed combat crew returns from sea with high marks

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The USS Eisenhower returned home Friday after six months at sea during which women flew, refueled planes and worked in the radio room of a warship for the first time on an extended combat tour.

"They've made every commitment they've had to make, in the Mediterranean, in the Adriatic, in exercises with NATO allies," said an Atlantic Fleet spokesman, Cmdr. Kevin Wensing.

"They've had men and women aviators flying combat patrols over Bosnia and southern Iraq," he said.

The aircraft carrier arrived about 3:30 p.m. at the Norfolk Naval Base to a crowd of about 5,000 people.

On board were 415 women among the crew and air wing of about 5,000.

"It was nervous and tense until we got used to each other," Airman Gabriele Monaco, 19, of Middletown, N.J., said when she returned. "It was wonderful."

All eyes were on the Eisenhower when it went to sea in October. Naysayers warned that the women wouldn't perform as well as men and fraternization would be a problem.

'They've made every commitment they've had to make, in the Mediterranean, in the Adriatic, in exercises with NATO allies.'
— Cmdr. Kevin Wansing, Atlantic Fleet spokesman

There were 15 pregnancies, but 12 of the women boarded the ship that way last fall. The three others got pregnant while on shore leave off the ship in Europe — two by their husbands and one who wasn't married.

The pregnancy rate is far lower than the national rate for women in the same age group — the 20s, mostly.

Some critics dubbed the ship a "Love Boat," a moniker that makes the Navy chafe despite a man who videotaped himself having sex with a woman on the ship. Both crew members were sent ashore, as was a warrant officer who watched the tape but didn't report it.

Six couples went to the captain and declared they had fallen in love, while two women complained they were sexually harassed, said the April 17 issue of Time magazine, which had a writer on the Eisenhower last month.

Wensing said the Eisenhower had "a mishap-free cruise." The ship and its air wing of about 80 planes "have performed in a magnificent fashion," he said.

The Eisenhower crew was the first to include men and women on a long tour on a combat vessel.

The Navy first assigned women to support vessels, such as maintenance ships, in 1978.

In 1993, after President Clinton took office, Congress passed a defense budget that repealed the restriction on women serving on Navy combat ships.

Retired Adm. Harry D. Train II, who was commander of Navy ships in the Atlantic when women were first assigned to them in the late 1970s, said if he had to answer for the Eisenhower's cruise, "I would not be dismayed."

Clinton announces feelings of vindication following McNamara's disclosure

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, who as a college student opposed and avoided the war in Vietnam, says he feels vindicated by former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's disclosure that he viewed the war as a terrible mistake.

Asked if he felt vindication from McNamara's new book, Clinton replied, "Yes, I do; I know that sounds self-serving, but I do."

CNN correspondent Wolf Blitzer recounted the conversation, which occurred off-camera Thursday following a taped television interview.

Press secretary Mike McCurry, paraphrasing Clinton's comments, said Friday the president "thought it took a lot of courage to write the book and, on balance, it was a good thing that the former defense secretary had written the book."

"He thought that, on balance, the information in the book and the argument that McNamara makes certainly vindicates the views of millions of Americans, including President Clinton, that the Vietnam War was a sorry episode in American history and that those who opposed the war had good grounds for doing so."

Blitzer said Clinton reminisced about his days as a student at Georgetown University, when he worked for Sen. J. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Blitzer said Clinton suggested that his job made him privy to documents about the war and that "he knew more about what was going on than the public really knew at the time."

Clinton, in finding vindication in McNamara's conclusion that the war was a mistake, called attention anew to his own behavior in that period — a matter that came up repeatedly during his election campaign in 1992 and could arise again in 1996, especially if Sen. Bob Dole, a wounded war hero, is his Republican opponent.

In 1969, when Clinton was most vulnerable to being drafted, he, like thousands of other young men, was tormented by the war; he opposed it philosophically and feared its potential impact on his life. While a graduate student at Oxford University in England, he took part in antiwar demonstrations.

Even then he had political ambitions and could not decide whether to make himself open to being called or to take steps to avoid the draft.

He received a draft notice that spring. Returning to Arkansas in the summer, Clinton used contacts in Fulbright's office and the governor's office to get a slot in the University of Arkansas Law School ROTC program, which provided a deferment.

Clinton later that summer wrote a letter to his draft board asking to be reclassified 1-A and drafted. But, according to "First in His Class," a biography by David Maraniss, he carried the letter around for several weeks and never mailed it.

That fall he returned to Oxford. Back home, President Nixon cut the draft calls, reducing Clinton's vulnerability. Clinton wrote the draft board to give up his deferment, Maraniss wrote.

That December, the country switched to a draft lottery and Clinton's birthday drew a high number, making remote the chance that he would be called.

McNamara has come under renewed criticism this week from some who view the war as a mistake. They argue that he should have made his views known while the war was still going on and he might have been able to alter its course.

In an interview Thursday night, McNamara declined to respond to that view. He said he and others in the Johnson administration were influenced by Secretary of State Dean Rusk's argument that the appearance of appeasement in Vietnam could invite communist aggression elsewhere, ultimately leading to a third world war.

In his book, McNamara, chief war architect under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, laid out causes "for our disaster in Vietnam."

Folk singer, actor Burl Ives dies from cancer at 85

ANACORTES, Wash. (AP) — Children knew Burl Ives as the tubby, goateed folk singer who sang of the old lady who swallowed a fly and Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer.

Adults saw a darker side: the domineering Big Daddy in the movie "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Elizabeth Taylor, who starred with Ives in the film version of "Cat," remembered him as a "great talent who possessed this wonderful teddy bear-like warmth.

"I felt so incredibly safe with him, especially after Mike Todd died," said Taylor, whose third husband died during filming. "I love him and I will miss him."

Ives died Friday at age 85. He suffered from mouth cancer and had slipped into a coma Wednesday at his home. Dorothy, his wife of 25 years, and her three children were with him.

A born performer with a national reputation since the 1930s, Ives made his first public appearance when he was 4.

"Since I was a child, I knew I was going to be a performer," he said in a 1993 interview.

Ives may be best known for his classic recordings of folk and children's songs including "The Blue Tail Fly," with the memorable chorus, "Jimmy crack corn and I don't care."

His music topped the charts during the 1940s and '50s, and he created traditions with songs such as "Holly Jolly Christmas," "Little White Duck" and "A Little Bitty Tear."

AP Laserphoto

Burl Ives, shown in a 1977 file photo telling the story of "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," died at his home in Anacortes, Wash., Friday morning.

Poet Carl Sandburg once called him "the mightiest ballad singer of this or any other century."

But in typical blunt fashion, Ives later allowed that "I never did like to sing for kids much" and recalled with relish singing bawdy songs for grownups.

Ives also made his mark as an actor on stage, screen and television, winning an Oscar in 1958 for his supporting role in "The Big Country."

Elia Kazan cast him as Big Daddy in Tennessee Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" after running into him in New York City. Ives was sporting a pair of black eyes from getting into a fight the night before with an audience member who had jeered at one of his folk ballads.

For Kazan, the shiners were proof "I was an aggressive male," Ives said. "It's one of the reasons I got 'Cat.'"

He made the role of Big Daddy his own, getting Kazan and Williams to go along with his suggestion to add elements of an old-time Southern preacher. The part as written was "dull as hell," Ives said.

The Broadway role led to the 1958 screen version, and he found a niche in Hollywood, appearing in such films "East of Eden," "Our Man in Havana" and "Desire Under the Elms."

Born in Hunt, Ill., Ives was one of six children in a farm family. His clay pipe-smoking grandmother taught him many of the songs he sang all his life, he said.

"I don't remember when I started singing," he once said. "There wasn't any beginning."

Roaming the country as a young man, Ives picked up songs and stories and sang with the likes of Josh White and Woody Guthrie.

He chronicled those years in a 1948 memoir, "Wayfaring Stranger." He later admitted embellishing it a bit, lamenting: "The truth is mundane."

Judge cites state's assault weapons ban in gun control lawsuit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Massacres by suicidal gunmen wielding assault weapons first led Californians to ban the guns. Now a judge is letting citizens go after the weapons makers.

In what could prove to be a historic legal victory for gun-control advocates, Superior Court Judge James Warren ruled that the maker of a semiautomatic pistol can be sued for the carnage at a San Francisco law firm in 1993.

For years, judges around the country rejected wrongful-death lawsuits against gun makers by offering some version of the National Rifle Association's maxim, "Guns don't kill, people do."

On Monday, Warren cited one thing missing from unsuccessful lawsuits in the past: The state has outlawed assault weapons.

Warren also said the weapon in the San Francisco attack, a TEC-DC9 made by Navegar Inc. of Miami, may be an "ultrahazardous" product, like dynamite and some pesticides. That means the maker can be held responsible for any harm it causes.

He said the plaintiffs will also have to prove the gun was designed for mass killing and marketed in a way that would appeal to criminals. But the judge cited Navegar ads proclaiming the TEC-DC9 was fingerprint-resistant and "as tough as your toughest customer."

Warren's ruling is the first to be based on a state law banning certain types of weapons.

Unless the ruling is overturned on appeal, the suit by eight survivors and relatives of the victims in the San Francisco attack will be the first of its kind to go to trial in the United States.

The suit names Navegar and others involved in the manufacture and sale of the pistols that Gian Luigi Ferri used in the attack in July 1993. He killed eight people and wounded six before shooting himself to death.

"It would have a national impact because California is such a huge market for guns," said Dennis Henigan, legal director of the Center to Prevent Handgun Violence and a plaintiffs' lawyer. He said Connecticut, New Jersey, Hawaii and Maryland also ban certain types of semiautomatic weapons.

The ruling also means a company that made and sold a gun legally in another state can be forced to pay damages for actions by a criminal in California, said Ernest Getto, lawyer for Navegar.

The Nation in brief

■ Clinton officially declares candidacy for 1996

WASHINGTON — It's official: President Clinton is now also Candidate Clinton.

Without fanfare, the president filed papers with the Federal Election Commission on Friday declaring himself a candidate for re-election and establishing the Clinton-Gore '96 Primary Committee Inc.

The political paperwork will be followed up months from now by the showy balloons-and-bunting kickoff of Clinton's re-election campaign. But the formalities were necessary at this point so Clinton could crank up his money machine.

On Monday, Clinton is sending a letter to what press secretary Mike McCurry describes as 1 million of the president's "closest friends," inviting them to join a national steering committee for the re-election effort.

The letter doesn't expressly ask for money, but McCurry allowed that it does "conveniently" include a return envelope should supporters feel moved to contribute.

■ U.S., N. Korea to conduct joint exercise

WASHINGTON — U.S. and South Korean military leaders will conduct an exercise late this month to rehearse how troops on the peninsula would be reinforced in a crisis.

There will be no large-scale movements in the event, which will run from late April until mid-May, a senior Pentagon official said Friday.

"It will be closer to a paperwork exercise," said the official, who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity.

He said the exercise will involve practicing procedures for ordering reinforcements, staging their deployment and integrating the troops with those already in the region.

About 13,000 troops in South Korea will be involved in some parts of the exercise. Some 1,300 service men and women from other regions also will participate. A similar exercise was held last year, the official said.

The exercise occurs amid concern over North Korea's threat to halt a deal designed to deal with its suspected nuclear weapons program.

■ Deputies arrest loud women outside church

GREENSBURG, Pa. — Two women whose loud praying drowns out the priest and the choir were arrested as they tried to attend Good Friday services in defiance of a court order.

Sheriff's deputies took Joan Sudwoj and Cynthia Balconi into custody at the doors to Blessed Sacrament Cathedral. They were charged with criminal trespass, which carries up to two years in prison.

Common Pleas Judge Bernard Scherer had barred the women from the Roman Catholic church on Wednesday because of their loud praying. He banned them from another church last week.

On Thursday, the women entered Blessed Sacrament, prayed loudly and took Communion. The judge set a hearing for next week on whether they should be held in contempt of court for violating his ban.

The women, described in church newsletters as the "shouting ladies," have been accused over the past two years of disrupting worship as well as baptisms and confessions by shouting the rosary prayer and splashing holy water.

■ Reno opposes reduction of cocaine sentences

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno will ask Congress to reject a plan that would reduce sentences for criminals convicted of selling crack cocaine, the Justice Department said Friday.

Reno said she disagreed with a U.S. Sentencing Commission report that said crack sentences are too harsh when compared to similar crimes involving powder cocaine.

"I strongly oppose measures that fail to reflect the harsh and terrible impact of crack on communities across the America," Reno said in a statement.

On Monday, the independent commission voted 4-3 to make crack cocaine sentences equal to those for powder cocaine. The proposal will become law Nov. 1 if Congress takes no action on it.

In a report in March, the commission said that crack cocaine crimes should be punished more severely than powder cocaine offenses, but that current federal policy goes too far.

It recommended that Congress change rules requiring a first-time offender to serve five years in prison for selling more than five grams of crack cocaine.

Prosecutors broke rule with document, O.J. judge says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The O.J. Simpson judge chastised prosecutors Friday for playing unfair but still allowed them to show jurors the fourth page of a crime scene report that the defense had suggested was dest yed as part of a coverup.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said the prosecutors intentionally violated a court order Thursday when they failed to tell him and opposing lawyers that they had found the missing page.

In his slash-and-burn cross-examination, defense attorney Barry Scheck had accused criminalist Dennis Fung of replacing the page because it contained notations that conflicted with his account of when he received a vial of Simpson's blood.

Scheck produced the copied page with great fanfare Thursday, noting it was the only page of the report without staple holes. The lack of holes, Scheck contended, proved that another page was slipped into the report as part of a conspiracy to frame Simpson for two murders.

Minutes after that, Deputy District Attorney Hank Goldberg produced the original page in court and had Fung identify it, drawing vehement objections from the defense.

Goldberg refused to concede any wrongdoing. He said the defense was upset because its dramatic claim of conspiracy had been deflated.

"Their tactical decision didn't work," Goldberg argued outside the presence of the jury. "Quite frankly, I would not have thought of predicating a conspiracy theory based upon the existence or non-existence of staple holes on Page 4."

In a sidebar Thursday, Goldberg had referred to Scheck's flourish as "an attempt to achieve a 'Perry Mason' moment, where he wants to spring something on the witness that they didn't disclose to us."

Ito said he might consider this a "no harm, no foul" situation except for his earlier order demanding the disclosure of all documents before they are raised in testimony.

"I find the failure to disclose was a violation of the court's order, and I am going to instruct the jury," the judge said.

AP Laserphoto

Defense attorney Barry Scheck points to the prosecution team Hank Goldberg, left, Marcia Clark, center, and Chris Darden while asking Judge Ito to impose sanctions for a late-discovered document Friday, during the Simpson double-murder trial in Los Angeles.

But lead prosecutor Marcia Clark moved quickly to stop the judge, arguing that no instruction should be given until other issues of lawyer misconduct are argued. The judge agreed to consider the matters next Wednesday.

That permitted Goldberg to proceed with his redirect and show jurors the resurfaced crime report page. Fung said he found it while flipping through a notebook after his grueling cross-examination had concluded.

The page, which contained a blank space where officers normally note the time they depart a crime scene, was passed among jurors along with the copy they had seen Thursday. Some of them held the two documents up to the light to compare the marks left by the staples, holes on the original, black specks on the copy.

Goldberg's efforts to repair the damage done Fung prompted a flurry of defense objections, sending attorneys racing to and from the judge's bench for legal arguments. Fung is to return Monday for his eighth day on the witness stand.

Seeking to counter the defense argument that Simpson was framed and Fung took part in the conspiracy, Goldberg played the defense's own videotape to the jury. It shows criminalist Andrea Mazzola walking next to Fung and carrying a black plastic bag from Simpson's estate the evening after the murders.

The defense used the image Thursday to demonstrate that Fung was empty-handed and could not have carried a vial of Simpson's blood from the home, as he earlier testified.

But Goldberg directed jurors' attention to the shape of the plastic bag, which he said indicated it contained the evidence envelope into which a detective had place the blood vial. But questions to Fung about what the bag appeared to contain were blocked by defense objections.

Jurors were next shown the 10 1/2-by-7 1/2-inch evidence envelope in question, with its notation — in Fung's handwriting — that it was delivered to him at 5:20 p.m. June 13, 1994, the day after Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were slain.

The time notation on the envelope is important because the crime scene report contains no other time factors to support Fung's story that a detective gave him the blood vial the same day Simpson voluntarily gave police 8 milliliters of blood. The disposition of that sample has become a central theme for the defense.

Scheck suggested that a police detective kept the blood vial overnight, giving him time to sprinkle Simpson's blood in strategic places before he actually delivered it for booking June 14.

Fung insisted he received it on June 13, although he said Friday he had no independent recollection of how the blood vial was handled because he paid no special attention to it.

"I would think it would be improper to make a big deal out of collecting a certain piece of evidence," he said.

Lincoln assassination still fascinates many Americans, some say

By Tom Strong
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Even 130 years after John Wilkes Booth fired the shots that changed history, the public's fascination lingers.

"We cannot seem to get enough of Lincoln," the National Park Service's chief historian told the audience Friday at an Abraham Lincoln symposium at Ford's Theatre, where Booth shot Lincoln on April 14, 1865.

Memories of Lincoln range from "the dignified and reserved president to the practical joker, from almost a demagogue of the Civil War to the earthy frontier rail splitter of New Salem (Ill.)," said the historian, Dwight Pitcaithley.

The Park Service manages five historic sites associated with Lincoln, more than any other president except Theodore Roosevelt, who also has five.

And excluding memorials and monuments on the Mall in Washington, the most popular of the 18 presidential sites is Lincoln's Springfield, Ill., home, with 500,000 visitors each year.

"The moment he fell at Ford's Theatre, he was transformed into a secular god," said Harold Holzer, a Lincoln scholar who discussed how the events of the assassination were portrayed in the popular media of the era.

As president, Lincoln came across as a tyrant to some critics because of his unprecedented expansion of federal power: the national draft, travel and trade restrictions, trial by military commission, institution of the income tax and emancipation of slaves.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, APRIL 15, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Strive to widen your circle of professional and personal contacts. Encouraging young people to take more responsibility will produce terrific results. Check out a self-help program before recommending it. Investment planning begins to pay off next winter.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: guitarist Dave Edmunds, track star Evelyn Ashford, actress Claudia Cardinale, artist Leonardo da Vinci.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Major purchases are best postponed. Look into having your car fixed up by a master mechanic. An old friend breezes into town. Change your social plans to include this special person. Old memories surface.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Daydreaming can offer release from nervous tension. Pamper yourself today, but only after spending quality time with offspring. A home improvement project will shape up nicely. An invitation takes you by surprise. Be gracious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pay more attention to sales and bargains. There are lots of ways to stretch a budget. A friend with a new hobby or business wants to recruit you. Listen carefully before making up your mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Now is the time to get together with people who can help you recharge your emotional batteries. Visiting a familiar out-of-town hideaway will give you a real lift. Focus on the future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do you like how you look in a full-length mirror? Seek expert advice before starting a physical workout program. Trying to do too much too quickly could cause problems. Share lighthearted activities this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Know what you want and go after it! Persistence counts. Maintaining your emotional balance about romance will take some doing. Be very careful when choosing a confidant. Gossip could sink a promising new alliance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A recurring dream could be telling you something about career or romance. Tend household chores first today, then visit a museum or art show. A so-called bargain may be overpriced. Comparison-shop.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You know exactly what you want from a relationship and are determined to get it! Plan an intimate meal for two. Your wit and charm are legendary. Use them to good effect. Be alluring.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Guard against going to extremes now. Expressing your feelings too strongly could make the object of your affections nervous. Enjoy spontaneous fun and shared activities. It is possible to have fun on a slim budget.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone from your past may reenter the picture. You begin to hope again. Discuss any financial concerns with your mate or partner. A career in the health field captures your imagination. Get more information.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ask people for what you need without criticizing them. Compromise will also promote harmony on the home front. Buy something to beautify your surroundings. A romantic attraction continues to blossom. Show your sentimental side.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try to keep your financial goals in mind at all times. Harmony comes when you treat partner as a true equal. An important business agreement will soon land on your doorstep. Follow up immediately.

Kenny Rogers puts money on ship that offers no alcohol or high rolling

BRANSON, Mo. — Kenny Rogers has put his money on a belle with no taste for liquor or high rollers.

The $13 million Showboat Branson Belle, co-owned by Rogers, set off on its maiden voyage Thursday on Table Rock Lake.

In keeping with the wholesome, family image this Ozarks tourist village likes to project, gambling and alcohol are banned on the ship.

In fact, Rogers christened the 650-seat Belle with a bottle of water from the White River. The Belle offers two-hour lunch and dinner cruises.

"I've done some movies, I've done some TV, and there's a very good chance that if I don't have a hit (song) before long, I might be driving this boat around the lake," said Rogers, whose "The Gambler" album inspired several TV movies in which he starred.

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Queen Latifah was charged with video piracy after some illegally copied tapes turned up in a video rental store she once owned.

The rapper was charged Thursday, but not arrested, after the store's current owner, Gil Daggett, notified police. He found 240 illegally copied tapes, about 5 percent of the store's 4,000-tape stock, including such movies as "Alien 3," "The Bodyguard" and "Single White Female."

"Queen Latifah hasn't even been in the store for years," said her attorney, Paul Bergrin, adding that his client did not know the store stocked pirated tapes.

Queen Latifah's mother, Rita Owens, and the store's former manager, Ramsey Gbelawee, also were charged with video piracy, which carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and $250,000 in fines.

Latifah, who stars on Fox's "Living Single," was listed on the initial Municipal Court complaint under her given name, Dana Owens. The case has been transferred to Superior Court and will be referred to a grand jury for possible indictment.

LOS ANGELES — Stuffing her face made her an asset.

Minnie Driver says it took a year of eating to persuade director Pat O'Connor to cast her in the lead for the film "Circle of Friends."

Driver plays Bernadette, a self-styled ugly duckling at an Irish college in the 1950s who charms the school's most attractive guy with her strength and good heart.

"I had to gain 25 pounds for the role," the British actress said. "That was the prerequisite; they didn't want to give me the part straight off because of that. I campaigned for a year before I actually got cast."

Princess Diana leaves the Banana Republic clothing store in Chevy Chase, Md. Friday with an unidentified man. Diana is in Washington for a private visit over the Easter holiday.

O'Connor said Driver didn't need to try so hard.

"I always thought Minnie could do it," he said. "I met her and I thought she was very sweet and very good."

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The names brought the fans but the tunes kept them rocking.

Pearl Jam vocalist Eddie Vedder made a surprise appearance Thursday night when he joined punk rock institution Mike Watt for a show before about 300 fans.

"It was a great show, great music," said University of New Mexico student Sarah Gillert, one of those who crowded into the tiny Dingo Bar.

Vedder's presence — known but not seen by many — was enough for some fans.

"Knowing Eddie was here helped influence us to come tonight," Gillert said.

Watt is touring behind his solo record "ball-hog or tugboat," featuring 50 cameos by alternative musicians including Vedder, ex-Nirvana drummer David Grohl, Henry Rollins and Soul Asylum's Dave Pirner.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Revival planned

St. Paul Christian Methodist Episcopal, 409 S. Lee St., is celebrating its anniversary and hosting a revival Tuesday thorugh Friday and April 23.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Rayfield Medcalf of Charlotte, NC. The public is invited.

Tomb erected

A life-sized model of a stone tomb has been erected on the lawn at Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 Golf Course Road, in preparation for an Easter sunrise service at 7:15 a.m. Sunday.

Worshippers will find the door to the tomb open with a "grave cloth" lying on the ground nearby. As the sun climbs over the horizon, the Rev. Donald Hafemann will deliver a sermonette focusing on Matthew 28:1-5, entitled "the Answer to All Questions."

Worshipers are advised to wear warm clothing and bring blankets to the sunrise service. Breakfast will be served in the church fellowship hall after the service.

A festival service with communion is planned at 10:30 a.m.

The public is invited to all services and the breakfast. Sunday School is at 9 a.m.

Guest to preach

Evangelist Clyde C. Brown is the guest preacher for the 5 p.m. service Sunday at Greater St. Luke AME Church, 401 S. Adams St.

"If you have unsaved friends, please invite them to come with you to this special service," said Brown, whose ministry emphasizes healing. The Rev. King Haile Selassie II is the associate pastor and the Rev. I.C. Cooper, the church's pastor.

For more information call the church, 684-6785 or Selassie, 687-4050.

Program planned

The community is invited to join Hollowell United Methodist Church in its Easter Celebration Program at 6 p.m. Sunday at 400 S. Marshall St.

The Easter Sunday Celebration program, "Christ Has Risen!: A Celebration of the Resurrection," will feature the Sunday School Department and the Youth Choir.

For more information call 689-3050.

Musical presented

Kelview Heights Baptist Church will present a musical drama on Sunday, entitled "The Greatest Story Ever Told."

Three special presentations are planned at 9 and 11 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.

This is a fully dramatized musical with a cast and choir of 160.

The musical traces Reuben, a contemporary of Jesus, and Richard, a man of today's world, as they examine their lives and question who Jesus Christ was.

The regular services of Kelview Heights Baptist Church are broadcast at 10:30 a.m. Sundays on KPEJ 24, Channel 5 on the cable.

Mentally retarded find place in church

By David Briggs
Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — When she heard that Michael was enrolled in a service club's equestrian program for mentally retarded kids, his aunt remarked that now special ed children receive not only compensatory programs but elite privileges.

Normal kids were the real disadvantaged, the relative said.

It is at this point that Christine Gudorf, Michael's mother, breaks down with emotion.

"Both Michael and I would have gladly traded 10 years of the equestrian program for an invitation for him to visit with her family for a weekend," Ms. Gudorf said as she choked back tears in the chapel at Yale Divinity School.

Of all the modern sins committed against the mentally retarded, perhaps none are as painful as being ignored. The very people most likely to reach out in loving acceptance of others are often treated as this generation's lepers.

What mentally retarded people want most of all is to be accepted members of the community, especially in churches and synagogues, said speakers at "That All May be Welcome," a Yale Divinity School symposium on the ethical, theological and pastoral issues surrounding mental retardation.

The past three decades have brought massive public policy changes around mental retardation, Gudorf said.

More than 100 pieces of legislation have been passed in support of the retarded. Extensive special education programs in public schools and training and employment programs for mentally retarded adults are among the new services available to those able to navigate the bureaucratic labyrinth that often accompanies such programs.

However, the past decades have also seen a greater mobility and more impersonal communities, cutting off the retarded and their caregivers from traditional supports such as neighbors, friends and extended families.

And, in general, prejudices against the retarded, which in some part can be traced back to earlier beliefs that retardation was a curse from God, have not changed dramatically, according to Gudorf.

What of the church — the one place where people should feel they are OK, affirmed and beloved for who they are?

The answer is mixed, said the Rev. William Gaventa, director of community training and coordinator of congregational supports for the University Affiliated Program of New Jersey.

Gaventa says he still hears stories about pastors telling parents of retarded children, "What did you do that God gave you this child?"

After a hurtful comment was made to her in a youth group, a microcephalic child told her mother she was not going back. But her mother insisted on not giving up, saying the church was God's house, Gaventa said.

Her daughter, who was mildly retarded, replied, "Well, it may be God's house, but he's not home."

At the other extreme, he said, is the tendency to idealize mentally retarded individuals as God's special people, or holy innocents.

But there are also a number of churches who neither exclude the mentally retarded or view them solely as objects of ministry, according to Gaventa.

In these houses of worship, he said, the mentally retarded are welcomed into the life of the community and given positions of responsibility such as being ministers of hospitality.

In a society that isolates them, a church or synagogue that welcomes them and affirms their gifts can become the fundamental community in their lives, Gaventa said.

Sometimes, he said, it just takes a different way of looking at the world to overcome stereotypes of the disabled and help see the image of God in all human beings.

Gaventa remembers one skeptical pastor asking him, "How do you expect people from a group home to listen to a 25-minute sermon?" After thinking it over, his response was: "How do you expect ANYONE to listen to a 25-minute sermon?"

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Revival planned

The First Church of the Nazarene, 1208 W. Wall Ave., is hosting a Youth Revival Friday through April 23.

Guest speakers will be Bob and Lisa Diehm.

"I have watched Bob and Lisa Diehm minister to young people in a powerful way," said Jim Williams, senior pastor and general president of Nazarene Youth International. "Every time I have worked with them they have led young people to the foot of the cross."

The revival begins Friday with hamburgers being served at the church from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. Cost is $1.50.

Picnic and games are planned for 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. April 22 at Cowden Park. Free hotdogs will be served. Services April 23 will be in the morning and evening.

For more information call 682-4524.

Crusade set

The Rev. Rayfield Medcalf of Charlotte, N.C., will lead the revival and evangelistic crusade at St. Paul C.M.E. Church, 409 S. Lee St., Monday through April 23.

A former Midlander, Medcalf taught school at Carver High School and was Carver's first band instructor.

A graduate of Samuel Huston College in Austin (now Huston Tillotson) and Southern Methodist University School of Theology, Medcalf was the first black City Council member in Greenville, S.C., and is the former pastor of St. Paul C.M.E. Church.

Services will begin at 6:30 p.m. for Bible Study. Revival services will begin at 7:30 a.m. The Anniversary Service will be at 2:30 p.m.

Celebration set

Tall City Baptist Church, 3500 Anetta St., will celebrate its 26th anniversary on Sunday.

Tall City operates West Texas Baptist Institute-Seminary. The institute concludes its eighth year April 28. Commencement exercises are set for 7:30 p.m.

Simpson invites the public to attend Easter services and the commencement exercises April 28.

PURPOSE

The purpose of the Midland YMCA 1995 Corporate Cup Challenge is to 'Promote health, physical fitness and a sense of community through the spirit of friendly competition.' Toward this end, measures are being taken to assure fair and equitable competition for all participants. Specific rules have been developed for each of the events: these rules will be enclosed in your team packet. Eligibility requirements governing the competition are provided below.

ELIGIBILITY

1. Team members must be at least 18 years of age.
2. Team members must be employed by the sponsoring company or agency at the time of the competition or, if laid off, must still be covered under the company's health insurance plan. In addition, contract labor that is on site full time at a facility where they are supplying a required service of that company, may also participate for that company. A written request to the Registration Committee listing these participants must be made.
3. Up to five companies/businesses of the same or similar professions having 25 or less than 25 employees may combine to enter a team. They must make a written request to the Registration Committee in order to be officially entered.
4. In the division categories, spouse participation will be allowed based on the number of company employees. This scale is listed below:

of Employees	# of Spouses
99-75	9
74-50	14
24-lower	24

In order to insure participation in the Cup by Division I and II, these teams will be individually evaluated when lacking enough participants of one sex to competitively participate. Rulings allowing additional spouses for these companies and businesses will be made by the Registration Committee and each case treated accordingly upon a written request.

5. Team members must be employed within Midland or one of its reporting district offices.
6. Team members must sign the Midland YMCA Corporate Cup waiver prior to competition; this must be submitted with the team roster.
7. Individuals not employed by a corporation, company or agency may enter the competition provided they form teams as representatives of their professional group(s). Examples are as follows: Midland Medical Society, Midland Bar Association, etc. Groups needing special assistance, may submit a written request.
8. The Midland YMCA Corporate Cup Registration Committee reserves the right to review all team entries relative to eligibility.

TEAM COMPOSITION

1. A team shall consists of no more than 40 members and no less than 20 members; each team must have identifying uniforms consisting of, at the minimum, matching t-shirts, a 1995 Corporate Cup Challenge t-shirt will provided to team members prior to the event with the intention that teams will have the backs of these shirts screened with their own logos.
2. Team rosters are due by April 1, 1995. It is assumed that each team's roster is final as of that date. Rosters must be typed and all information included. Failure to so so may result in ineligibility for those events.
3. Each team member may participate in up to five events. The Banner and Spirit events will not be counted as part of these five events as we would like everyone to participate in these two.
4. Corporations that enter more than one team may not share or cross-enter members between teams. Each team scores its own points. No points will be shared or split.
5. Protests affecting the eligibility of any team member to complete or represent any agency, company or corporation in any event shall be made in writing to the Corporate Cup Registration Committee before the event is held.

Toll-free 888 area code to be added to 800 numbers, companies say

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press

No one knows yet when the first 888 numbers will go in use, though April 1, 1996, is now considered the most likely date. Phone equipment makers and software programmers must first get communications networks ready and there is some concern that may not happen before 800 numbers are exhausted.

NEW YORK — See an 800 number. Think free call.

Before long, 888 numbers will be here too and the nation's phone companies are hoping you'll think the same.

The number of toll-free 800 lines shot up 50 percent last year to 5.7 million, a growth rate that at first excited phone companies and then sent them scrambling.

With 7.5 million numbers available in an area code, all the 800 numbers could be used up before year's end.

Phone companies recently decided to use 888 as the next toll-free area code, followed in order by 877, 866 and on down to 822.

But several problems remain, including how to prevent millions of wrong numbers, how to charge for misdials and what to do for companies that have vanity numbers like American Express' 1-800-THE-CARD.

Mark Plakias, an analyst at the New York consulting firm Strategic TeleMedia, said "the real question is who's going to bear the brunt of educating the consumer" — the telephone company or the company that uses the number.

Part of the reason the 800 numbers are getting exhausted is the same as that for traditional area codes — exploding use of mobile phones, pagers, fax machines and computers.

Demand has also grown for personal 800 lines, chiefly among families with children at college or in which an adult travels a lot for work.

In addition, technical changes in May 1993 made it possible to get any 800 number from any carrier. Previously, individual carriers owned the exclusive rights to certain telephone exchanges — the second three numbers after the area code.

That meant, for instance, that American Express could only get THE in its 1-800-THE-CARD number from one phone company.

No one knows yet when the first 888 numbers will go in use, though April 1, 1996, is now considered the most likely date. Phone equipment makers and software programmers must first get communications networks ready and there is some concern that may not happen before 800 numbers are exhausted.

If there's a crunch, phone companies may have to limit who gets 800 numbers for a few months, said Don Bender, director of national services planning for the United States Telephone Association, a trade group of local phone companies.

The addition of 888 numbers raises a challenge for companies that have developed a marketing identity with their 800 line. For instance, the flower delivery company 1-800-FLOWERS Inc. doesn't want 1-888-FLOWERS to go to a competitor.

"We've been spending a ton of money on marketing and building that as a recognized brand," said Chris McCann, vice president of operations for the Westbury, N.Y., company. "We would have to have the 888-FLOWERS number just so you don't wind up confusing the consumer."

Phone companies meet later this month on the issue, but several said firms with vanity numbers are likely to get first rights to the same number using the new 888 code.

How to deal with billing for wrong numbers is also a problem. Toll-free calls aren't really free, of course, but paid by the receiver of the call. While people are getting used to 888, misdialing may be common and result in erroneous charges for those with 800 lines.

Economy slows, new data shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — A flurry of new data — including the first drop in industrial production in six months — offers fresh evidence the once-booming U.S. economy is slowing down and inflation is muted.

The Federal Reserve said Friday that industrial output fell in March by 0.3 percent, only the second decline in nearly two years and the first drop since a September dip related to an auto industry strike.

The central bank also revised figures for January and February to reflect that the cumulative gain in output for the two months was 0.3 percent less than previously estimated.

And another closely watched Federal Reserve index showed that the nation's factories, mines and utilities were operating with more slack in March for the second straight month. It was the first back-to-back decline for the operating rate in nearly two years.

Pressure ulcers are a complication for bedridden

By Dr. Miguel Sanchez
Associated Press

Any period of prolonged disability that keeps someone in bed carries an ever-present danger — pressure ulcers, also known as bed sores or decubitus ulcers.

A bed sore results from breakdown of the skin and underlying tissues caused by prolonged pressure on a body part. It can lead to serious complications such as infection and be costly to treat.

It's estimated that 9 percent of patients hospitalized in medical and surgical units develop pressure ulcers. The more immobile a patient, the more likely pressure ulcers will form.

Fifty percent of people who are confined to wheelchairs and 85 percent of all spinal cord injury patients get skin ulcers over their lifetime. The incidence in nursing homes ranges from 2 percent to 24 percent, depending on the patients' disability and the quality of nursing care.

In many instances, the ulcers can be prevented by a number of low-cost measures that even the most immobilized patients can use or have performed for them.

When a person lies in a bed or sits in a wheelchair all day, blood circulation to the skin is impaired. Consequently, body parts that bear weight such as the buttocks or back have a heightened risk of skin breakdown.

Without a steady supply of blood and oxygen, skin tissue dies and pressure ulcers result. It has been shown that two hours without a change in position is enough to cause permanent full-thickness necrosis (death) of the skin.

PRESSURE ULCERS range from barely perceptible, shallow sores to 10-inch or greater, craterlike lesions that leave bone exposed. The sores form because a patient has decreased feeling in a body part and cannot pick up the warning sign of pain or because the patient is too weak to change position.

Bed sores are often complicated by serious infection. In addition, the ulcers consume the body's proteins and further weaken a person.

To prevent pressure ulcers, the patient should be turned at least every two hours. If the patient or a loved one cannot perform the movement, the nursing staff should be reminded to do so. If possible, the patient should get out of bed or change position in the wheelchair at two-hour intervals to improve blood flow.

Inexpensive air cushions can be periodically inflated and deflated to redistribute pressure to different body parts. Application of moisturizer prevents dryness that promotes skin breakdown.

If a patient is incontinent, diapers should not be left on for extended periods of time. Diaper chafing can lead to ulcers. Moisture from sweat or urine cause skin maceration, thus decreasing the time needed to get a bed sore to less than two hours.

Pressure ulcers are treated with special gels and dressings used for wound healing. Surgery may be required for ulcers that don't respond to other treatment.

But prevention is the best measure. Most importantly, rotate the body if red skin patches develop, keep the skin clean and apply skin moisturizer. If a pressure does develop, the resulting complications and treatments can cost about $30,000. If surgical treatment is required, it will usually increase the length of hospitalization by at least three weeks.

Rural program dispenses weekly care

By Jean Pagel

HART (AP) — A melancholy procession of runny noses and sore throats was making its way into the school clinic this Wednesday morning.

One baby arrived with a rash. A 4-year-old girl needed blood tests. A teen-ager sought treatment for her irregular menstrual cycle.

Dozens of sick children and adolescents would flow through the crowded building by time the clinic closed for the evening and Dr. Mike O'Neill headed back to Lubbock.

This weekly dose of health care — dispensed in a campus structure previously used as a cafeteria, bus barn and ag shop — fills a medical-access void for these rural students.

"They never went to the doctor, so they didn't know they were supposed to," said school nurse Retta Knox. "They just thought an earache hurt until it went away."

No doctor or pharmacy operates in this Texas Panhandle town of 1,200 people. A trip to the closest hospital requires about a 30-mile drive past vegetable farms and feedyards to Dimmitt, Plainview or Tulia.

And then there's economics: The U.S. Census Bureau classifies 29.3 percent of Castro County residents as impoverished.

So Ms. Knox went looking for a way to provide health services that were more convenient and consistent for Hart children.

Two years ago she received $89,000 from the state to run a clinic under contract with the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center pediatrics department. Another $76,000 followed to help the school open a dental clinic last year.

The result, observers say, is long-overdue services for Hart Independent School District babies and students who often lacked the transportation or money to go to the doctor.

"When you're talking $40 or $50 to treat strep throat, there just wasn't the means," Ms. Knox said.

Now the students can obtain handy health care at reduced fees.

The doctors and Tech medical residents who staff the clinic can keep tabs on young patients with allergies or asthma. Checkups there have detected dia-

Various symptoms to usher in allergy season

Hearst News Service

Sneezing, watery eyes, runny noses, scratchy throats, earaches, headaches and irritability are just a few of the symptoms to usher in the allergy season.

Studies estimates that perhaps as many as one in every three Americans suffers from an acquired hypersensitivity to certain foods, environmental contaminants or airborne pollens, Maggy Howe wrote in an article in the current issue of Country Living, and allergies also can be the underlying causes of a number of common health complaints.

To date, clinical nutritionists have linked more than 50 medical conditions to allergies, including arthritis, acne, candidiasis (yeast infection), memory loss, psoriasis, sore throats and vertigo.

Allergies have been blamed on allergens, typically classified as substances that create immediate allergic reactions.

Various treatments available for enlarged prostate

By Dr. Andrew McCullough
Associated Press

Excessive enlargement of the prostate gland occurs in all men with advancing age. Surgery to correct the condition was once the second most common operation done in the United States. Because there are now many nonsurgical treatment possibilities, the need for surgical treatment has decreased in the past five years.

The prostate is a chestnut-sized gland, present only in men. It encircles the urethra, the tube through which urine flows from the bladder. The prostate provides a major component of the ejaculate volume.

Enlargement begins on a microscopic level after age 35. If the prostate becomes too enlarged, it can cause difficulties in urinating. The most common symptoms are a reduced flow and frequent urination. Men should seek medical help when the symptoms interfere with the quality of their life.

The urologist must first exclude serious conditions that might jeopardize the patient's health, such as prostate cancer, kidney blockage and bladder failure.

If no problems exist, the doctor might ask, "How troublesome are your symptoms? Are they troublesome enough so

Study questions belief of benefits of eating fish

By Daniel Q. Haney

BOSTON (AP) — A major new study questions the popular belief that eating lots of fish can ward off heart disease.

The study, the largest ever to examine the issue, found that men who eat fish several times a week are just as likely to have heart trouble as those who have it once a month.

Despite its size and careful design, however, the research is unlikely to be the last word on the health effects of fish. Some other smaller studies have found that fish eaters live longer. Moreover, heart disease is less common in places such as Japan and Greenland where fish is a big part of the diet.

Nevertheless, this study was conducted by a highly respected team of dietary researchers, and its findings at least cast a shadow on dietary dogma.

"It doesn't mean fish consumption is bad. The question is emphasis. Maybe some people are eating fish instead of vegetables or exercising and think they are protected. This suggests that is not the case," said Dr. Alberto Ascherio, principal author of the report.

His results are part of the Health Professionals Follow-Up Study, one of Water — No problem...

A youngster with a broken arm finds he can still splash around in the pool while on the mend. The new 3M Scotchcast Wet or Dry padding and stockinet allow people wearing fiberglass casts to continue normal activities such as swimming and bathing with protecting their cast from water. The casting products shed water, draining it away from the cast until the wearer feels comfortably dry. Patients maintain skin conditions similar to a traditional dry cast and experience less cast odor.

Exercise may control post-pregnacy fat

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Having a baby can make a woman fatter, but a study indicates that vigorous exercise can keep the gain within limits.

Women who continued strenuous aerobic exercise during their pregnancy averaged smaller weight gains and less fat accumulation than women who did not, the study found.

"It looks like, in general, if you do exercise you can control that to some degree," said researcher Kathleen D. Little of MetroHealth Medical Center, affiliated with Case Western Reserve School of Medicine in Cleveland.

A separate researcher cautioned, however, that women who don't do a lot of exercise may see little benefit.

Little studied 79 women whose average age was 31. Forty-four kept exercising, primarily in running or aerobic dance, throughout their pregnancies. Of the rest, 31 stopped exercise before becoming pregnant. The others cut back after conception from aerobics to occasional brisk walks — not enough for an aerobic benefit, according to Little and Dr. James F. Clapp III, a prominent researcher in the area of pregnancy and exercise who also worked on the study.

Before conception, the women were weighed, and their body fat was estimated from skinfold measurements — a sort of scientific pinch test. The researchers also gave the women treadmill exercise tests to see how fit they were, and had them recall what they ate, so the calories in their diets could be compared.

Before conception, there were no differences in weight, fitness, overall exercise intensity, exercise type or the amount of calories taken in, the researchers reported. The group of primarily nonexercisers was slightly fatter in the skinfold tests, said the report in the American College of Sports Medicine journal, Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise.

The researchers made follow-up measurements at eight-week intervals.

The exercisers' average performance, measured in intensity and time, was 84 percent of their prepregnancy levels, the researchers said. On average, the women started cutting back after 28 weeks of pregnancy, Little said. If they had done as much work after pregnancy as before, the added weight of pregnancy would have required more effort from them, she said.

The rate of weight gain was similar in both groups for the first 15 weeks, the report said. Exercisers averaged three-fifths of a pound a week; the others averaged three-quarters. After that, the rates diverged, with the exercisers gaining 1.25 pounds a week and the others 1.5 pounds.

The overall average weight gain for the exercisers was 29 pounds; for the others, it was 36 pounds, Little said. Both were in the healthy range, but most physicians prefer women to be on the low end of the range, she said. The skinfold tests also showed the exercisers gaining less fat, the study found.

All the women had healthy babies. The exercisers' babies had slightly lower birth weights, but they were also in the healthy range, Little said.

The study indicates that women who did aerobic exercise before they were pregnant can continue throughout it, Little said. Although the study did not look at women who were sedentary before pregnancy, these women probably could start a monitored exercise program, she said.

Exercise may help a woman prevent weight gains that she may otherwise be stuck with after pregnancy, Little said: "It becomes a snowball effect where they never get their weight back."

However, another researcher said most women may not want to work out as hard as the ones in this study. The Ohio women were burning calories at a rate equivalent to running 20 miles a week, said Robert McMurray, professor of physical education and nutrition at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

His research indicates that women who do less exercise can expect to have weight gains closer to those of the sedentary women in the Ohio study, McMurray said.

However, the Ohio research shows that exercise — even late in pregnancy — does not harm the baby, so women who want to keep working out needn't worry about it, McMurray said.

Little advised women to avoid jarring exercises that could affect joints, which loosen during pregnancy. And she said runners may find it more comfortable to support their abdomens with elastic belts during the last trimester.

But women who exercise can even compete in races, within limits, Little said: "Pregnancy is not a time to compete for best times."

VISIT: Doctors provide community care clinic

betes, heart murmurs and hernias.

O'Neill said the clinic provides a base for people who otherwise might apply home remedies to their pains and illnesses.

He alternates with other doctors every Wednesday and said he likes the setting.

"In the emergency room, that's your turf," O'Neill said. "Here they (the children) feel a little safer, like they belong here. You get better communication."

Absentee rates have dropped. And teachers point out that parents already trust the school.

"We can get people to come to the school," said kindergarten teacher Judy Dotson. "They know us. They're comfortable here. We're available."

The clinic features two exam rooms and a small waiting room. Ms. Knox and two of her aides orchestrate the indoor traffic.

Ramiro Vega was awaiting a checkup on his athlete's foot. Without the clinic, the 16-year-old basketball player acknowledged, his condition probably would go untreated.

"Mom thinks it's pretty cool because she works and I can just come here," he said.

"I don't have to miss school," 11-year-old Lindsey Martinez chimed in despite her cough and sniffles.

The clinic in its first year saw 464 students who made 1,401 visits. Ms. Knox said Medicaid pays the bills for children who qualify. Others who can't pay get free services.

The dental clinic next door opened in November and operates every other Thursday to fill cavities and extract teeth.

Dr. Richard Lampe, chairman of pediatrics at the Tech center, said the clinic demonstrates how various agencies can coordinate for rural health.

"Seldom is any one thing the answer," Lampe said. "But if it's one part of the puzzle, it's worthwhile."

A federal block grant of about $1.5 million funds the Hart operation and 14 other school-based clinics in Texas, said Mary Jackson, nurse consultant for the Texas Department of Health school health program.

The 15 clinics, in places like Houston, Galveston, Dallas, El Paso and McAllen, all enjoy strong community support, Ms. Jackson said.

But she foresees a murky future for such sites.

"I see more of them happening because of local people saying this is how they need to address their health needs," Ms. Jackson said. "... I don't know what's going to happen as far as (federal) funding."

Conservative critics fear that school-based clinics could encourage sexual activity among teenagers.

But people who make such charges misunderstand what the clinics do, others say.

Judy Jonas, project director for the Austin-based Texas Comprehensive School Health Initiatives, talked about cost-effectiveness.

"Healthier children learn better, so the more we can help them stay healthier, the better the education," Ms. Jonas said. And "if you can meet the needs of the kids where they are, that cuts down on those who may show up in an emergency room later on."

Back in Hart, parents who see Ms. Knox at the grocery store or ball games get nudged to fill prescriptions. Parents thank her for the clinic, she said.

"If we take the service away now, they're going to feel deprived," she said. "They didn't feel deprived before."

GLAND: Many treatment options are available

that you want to be treated?" Symptoms that are unbearable to one patient may be merely annoying to another.

There are many treatment options available. The most commonly prescribed treatment is "watchful waiting," in which the patient chooses to wait and see if the symptoms consistently worsen with time. In most patients, symptoms will wax and wane, sometimes resolving for months at a time.

If medications are chosen, there are two classes of drugs that may be prescribed.. One class, alpha blockers, are alpha-adrenergic antagonists that are approved by the Food and Drug Administration for treating the symptoms of prostate enlargement. These drugs act directly on the smooth muscles in and around the prostate. They relax the muscles, improving the bothersome symptoms.

A newer drug approved by the FDA can reverse the growth of the prostate. Within the prostate, it prevents the production of the male sex hormone that causes the prostate to grow. This medication is effective in reducing the size of the prostate in some patients.

If drug treatment doesn't work, surgery may be considered. An operation can be done to reduce the blockage by removing the obstructing portion of the prostate or reducing its size.

Depending on the operation done, the surgery may be performed as an outpatient procedure or with a brief hospital stay. The need for transfusions is exceedingly rare.

Many men dread prostate surgery because of the fear that it can cause impotence and incontinence. In fact, the most common form of prostate surgery, transurethral resection, produces impotence or incontinence in less than 1 of 500 patients.

Several promising treatments are in the experimental stage. One is the use of a laser; another is prostate reduction using microwaves or heat; a third is implantation of a permanent stent through which urine can flow more freely.

SEASON: Doctor believes 'total load theory' on allergies

(From 1B)

Dr. James Braly, medical director of Immuno Laboratory Inc., in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is convinced that allergies are not created solely by allergens, but instead believes in what he calls the "total load theory."

Braly believes that allergies, like many ailments, do not begin all of a sudden. He suggested that when healthy people "suddenly" develop allergies, they do so because of food sensitivities they never knew they had.

These sensitivities may surface during the time of the year when the pollen count is particularly high simply because the body can handle only a certain amount of bombarding on a daily basis.

"Our bodies and immune systems cannot distinguish food allergies from airborne pollens," Braly said.

The body, for example, reacts to birch tree pollens as it would to kiwi, apple and potato pollens.

"Nature is not as diverse as we thought," Braly said. "There is a common thread in chemical makeup in seemingly unrelated pollens."

An allergy sufferer may have a food sensitivity to tomatoes, but be unaware of this until he or she is subjected to grass pollens. The body then becomes overloaded by the presence of these airborne allergens.

Braly's treatment isolates specific food sensitivities, as revealed by blood tests, and removes them from the diet for approximately three months. During the withdrawal period, most people experience a variety of food cravings, generally for the foods they are allergic to.

Following the three-month period, the body can more properly assimilate and digest those foods that it could not previously, Braly said, adding these foods may be slowly reintroduced back into the diet on a rotating basis.

When prescribed in conjunction with a revised and nutritionally sound diet, homeopathic remedies are gaining considerable attention in allergy treatment. Homeopathic physicians believe that any substance that causes a sickness can be diluted and used in significantly smaller amounts to heal the sickness.

In Europe, many hay-fever sufferers begin homeopathic treatment for their allergies several months before the hay fever season begins.

Because homeopathy treats patients' symptoms one by one — or unravels diseases layer by layer — Dana Ullman, founder of Homeopathic Educational Services in Berkeley, Calif., strongly suggested that allergy sufferers seek the professional advice of a well-informed homeopath and not attempt to diagnose themselves.

'Our bodies and immune systems cannot distinguish food allergies from airborne pollens.'
— Dr. James Braly, medical director of Immuno Laboratory Inc.

Although various homeopathic remedies that have been found in health-food stores to ease mild allergy symptoms, allergy sufferers are advised to consult a doctor of homeopathy before beginning allergy treatment.

FISH: New studies' findings considered surprising by doctor three large continuing studies at the Harvard School of Public Health that have produced intriguing results about the links between diet and health. Earlier reports have looked into the effects of alcohol, fat and vitamins, among other things.

In the latest work, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, doctors questioned 44,895 dentists and other male health professionals about their eating habits, then followed their health for six years.

They found no association between the consumption of fish or fish oil and the risk of death from coronary disease, nonfatal heart attacks or the need for bypass surgery or angioplasty.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Martijn B. Katan of Wageningen Agricultural University in the Netherlands called the findings surprising. He said they should dampen enthusiasm for fish as a panacea against heart disease.

"A little fish may still do some good, but more fish is not necessarily better," he wrote.

The study could not answer the question of whether an occasional fish meal is better than none at all, since so few participants abstained from fish entirely. In fact, two-thirds of the men said they had greatly increased their fish consumption in the decade before the study began.

Is Your Sound System Fulfilling Your Ministries Needs?

New Computer Technology Equalizes and Enhances Auditorium Sound

Do members of your congregation frequently comment that they couldn't hear everything being said during services? Outdated sound systems could be part of the problem.

David Percy
Caldwell Music

New technology in recent years now allows your church to advance from a standard "pa system" to a computer designed sound reinforcement system.

David Percy of Caldwell Music explains that the acoustic design software that Caldwell implements can help to equalize sound throughout the sanctuary. The software program EASE "Electro-Acoustic Simulator for Engineers" enables Percy to determine the exact acoustics for a given auditorium.

Acoustics can vary depending on the shape of the building and the building materials used in the walls, floor & ceiling. Also the placement of fixtures such as pugles, columns etc, have to be taken into consideration.

Once a detailed 3-D diagram of the church is prepared in the computer, Percy can determine exactly what the decible ratings, sound pressure level and degree of clarity one might hear from any position in the church.

The information that EASE provides helps Percy in his recommendations as to the size, placement and the wattage of speakers necessary for that particular church.

The combination of the EASE Computer program and Percy's sound equipment expertise allows the church, utilizing Caldwell's services, to have the most accurate, equally distributed sound and the best possible clarity.

Percy adds that once the system is installed, Caldwell's implements a regularly scheduled follow-up maintenance program to service whatever need might arise.

David Percy can be contacted at Caldwell Music Co., 3205 W. Cuthbert in Midland or call 697-0852.

Passover ceremony encourages children, families to ask questions

By David Briggs
Associated Press

Why is this night different from all other nights?

The inquiry at the Passover seder is only one among a series of questions and answers that will be exchanged by Jewish families throughout the world in the coming nights, as the story of God's deliverance of the ancient Hebrews from slavery in Egypt is retold.

From the ritual questions contained in the Haggadah flow more personal questions, as families celebrate God's action in human history and struggle to understand how God acts in their lives today.

In the home of Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel, no questions were forbidden, and the exploration of faith could move from religious questions to such diverse topics as politics and the economy.

"I love it for the questions it raises, the compassion it evokes, the memories it keeps alive and its challenge to children to ask, to ask questions," Wiesel says in "A Passover Seder," a new video that shows highlights of a family celebrating the most festive event of the Jewish calendar.

'I love it for the questions it raises, the compassion it evokes, the memories it keeps alive and its challenge to children to ask questions.'
— Elie Wiesel
Nobel laureate

On the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Nazi death camps — the end of the period known as the Holocaust when many questioned God's lack of interference in human affairs as 6 million Jews were murdered — the seder remains a time for children to explore their faith.

At Solomon Schecter School in White Plains, N.Y., God would be barraged with questions if the deity suddenly appeared in the school library.

"I would want to ask him what he is. He's not a person because a person can't make a person and a person doesn't have any power. Is he a monster or something?" asks Liba, a second-grader.

"If he talked to Moses and the children of Israel, why doesn't he want to talk to anyone else now?" wonders Jordan, another second-grader.

Even more difficult to understand is the extent of God's actions in the world. In the Book of Exodus, with its accounts of plagues and the parting of the Red Sea, God's action to free an oppressed people some 30 centuries ago is clearly and dramatically shown.

But in the sweep of human history and often in their own lives, God's presence is often less clear.

"When Hitler was attacking millions and millions of Jews ... why couldn't He just bring them out?" Jordan asks.

"Why are good people dying? Why is he not interfering?" asks Gabby, an eighth-grader.

Arel said his Hebrew teacher says God is not responsible for bad things.

"If that's true, then it's a two-way street. Then God doesn't do the good things. People do the good things. Then why are we praying?" he asks.

In round-table conversations with their classmates, the process of raising questions often leads them to find their own answers.

"What does it take for God to interfere with what's happening" is the question Rafi, an eighth-grader, would ask of God.

'Why don't we have world peace?' Alex asks God. "And he'll say, 'Because your planet doesn't respect me.'
— Alex
fifth-grader

In his view, God is the good side in people, the side that motivated some people to risk their own safety to save others during the Holocaust, for example.

Naama, a second-grader who wonders how God can be both in a room with her and in Australia at the same time, remembered a time when she was fighting with her best friend.

"I was wondering whether or not to be her best friend anymore, or to make up with her. I decided to make up with her. I felt God was telling me to do that," Naama said.

Alex, a fifth-grader, says sometimes God gives him answers when he asks why certain things happen in the world.

"Why don't we have world peace?" Alex says he will ask God. "And he'll say, 'Because your planet doesn't respect me.'"

Even if sometimes there are questions without answers, that is all right, too, Wiesel said in an interview.

More than a half-century ago, Passover was the last time Wiesel's whole family was together. Wiesel, who chronicled his experiences at the Auschwitz and Buchenwald concentration camps, lost both parents and his younger sister during the Holocaust.

If someone told him today they had the answers to the meaning of the Holocaust, he would not believe them, Wiesel said.

As parents, grandparents, relatives and even strangers gather around seder tables tonight, Wiesel said, they should encourage the children to ask questions, even when they ask the unanswerable.

"We try to answer as best we can," Wiesel said, "and (sometimes) say we have no answers."

Australian physicist finds God amid mysteries of universe

By David Briggs
Associated Press

NEW YORK — "Science offers a surer path to God than religion," Australian physicist Paul Davies wrote in 1983.

This week, Davies' statement took on a prophetic tone as he became the third physicist to win the Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion.

For Davies, author of the 1992 book "The Mind of God," and a professor of natural philosophy at the University of Adelaide in Australia, the $1 million prize represents an important affirmation that science is not the dehumanizing force it is often made out to be.

Rather, in a life's work as a scientist plumbing the mysteries of the universe, he has found evidence of a purpose and design to human existence.

"Whenever we look at science we realize what a wonderful universe it is," Davies said in an interview. "It is deserving of awe and inspiration."

The prize — the largest monetary award for achievement in any field — was established in 1972 by investment manager John M. Templeton to recognize individuals who advance the world's understanding of religion.

Previous winners have included such modern pillars of faith as Mother Teresa and the Rev. Billy Graham. Last year's winner was Michael Novak, a conservative Roman Catholic scholar.

But the prize also has been given to several scientists, including physicists Stanley Jaki in 1987 and Carl Friedrich von Weizsacker in 1989.

"The prize is not for sanctimoniousness or mere good works. It is for progress," says Templeton, the pioneer in global investing.

Davies admits he is not a churchgoer, nor is he interested in the ritual and practices of formal religion.

"For me, the important things are the nature of God, the nature of the universe," he said.

And while science is itself imperfect, Davies said he considers it the most reliable form of knowledge about the world.

In his own work exploring subjects ranging from the origin of the universe to the ability of human beings to understand math and science, he has found that that the idea of a world slavishly conforming to mechanistic principles is "totally inadequate."

Consider, he says, that even minor changes in the way the universe was put together might have destroyed any chances for conscious life.

"Einstein once said that the thing which most interested him was whether God had any choice in the form of his creation, by which he meant: Could the universe have been otherwise, or does it have to be what it is? The fact that this universe is as it is, in particular that the laws permit the emergence of conscious beings who can reflect on the meaning of it all, is surely a fact of immense significance," Davies said.

If that means religion cannot ignore scientific advances and hope to remain credible, evidence of design and order in the world also elevates the dignity of human beings, he said.

"For 300 years, science has had the effect of marginalizing human beings, even to the point of trivializing them," Davies said.

Deep study into the laws of physics reveals that human beings are also part of nature, and that there is an underlying purpose and significance to human existence.

"We have a genuine place in nature. I think this is cause for celebration," Davies said.

The discovery of a transcendent order in the universe also could lead to a change in human behavior, he said.

If people think there is no purpose or point in life, they are much more likely to act selfishly or with little concern for others. For some people, science can provide meaning to human existence, according to Davies.

"It matters for the universe that we're here, that we could wipe ourselves out," he said.

Rangers trade Hulse

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers have traded outfielder David Hulse to the Milwaukee Brewers for a minor league pitcher, making room for free agent Mickey Tettleton.

The Rangers get right-hander Scott Taylor, 28, who has a 61-45 record with a 3.97 ERA in six seasons in the minors, the team said Friday.

Hulse, 27, batted .255 with one homer and 18 steals in 77 games with the Rangers in 1994.

The Rangers signed Tettleton to a one-year, $550,000 contract on Wednesday.

The 34-year-old, who made the All-Star team for the second time last year, hit at least 30 homers in each of three previous seasons with the Detroit Tigers. He hit .248 with 17 homers and 51 RBI last year and will be used primarily as a designated hitter for the Rangers.

Player apologizes

MANCHESTER, England — Manchester United midfielder Roy Keane apologized Friday for stomping on a Crystal Palace player during a Football Association Cup semifinal replay.

Keane stomped twice on Palace captain Gareth Southgate during the second half of United's 2-0 victory Wednesday night at Villa Park. A scuffle involving several players ensued, and both Keane and Palace's Darren Patterson were thrown out of the game.

The game was played in the shadow of the death of Palace fan Paul Nixon, who was killed in a brawl at a nearby pub parking lot when the two teams played to a draw at the same venue on Sunday.

Williams stays free on probation

■ Cowboy tackle Erik William's accuser said he threatened to "blow (her) away."

By Mark Babineck
Associated Press Writer

IRVING — Erik Williams will remain free on probation until the courts resolve his latest brush with the law.

Williams, arrested Thursday on allegations he and a companion sexually assaulted a 17-year-old girl at his north Dallas home, has been serving two years probation for an Oct. 24 drunken driving accident.

An All-Pro offensive tackle for the Dallas Cowboys in 1993, he missed most of last season when he severely damaged his knee in the wreck, a head-on collision with a concrete barrier after a celebration following the Cowboys' victory over the Arizona Cardinals.

The vehicle was demolished and Williams was severely hurt. He has since had two reconstructive knee operations and plastic surgery on his face.

Williams pleaded no contest to misdemeanor drunken driving and received probation.

Under state law, Thursday's incident represents a probation violation, but an official said the county will wait until his current problems are resolved.

"We'll wait until the felony case is taken care of," said Dallas County probation officer Rose Harris.

Williams posted a $1,000 bond after Barker issued a warrant for the probation violation Thursday afternoon.

Bulldogs 1-stroke short of district title

■ San Angelo wins the 4-5A golf championship but the Bulldogs Josh Jacobs takes the medalists title.

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High boys golf team fell one stroke short of the District 4-5A golf championship at San Angelo Country Club Friday, but MHS' Josh Jacobs won the district medalist title by 11 strokes over Jon Lummus of San Angelo Central.

San Angelo won the team title with a four-round total of 1,258, a mere stroke over the Bulldogs, who came into the last round tied with the Bobcats for the lead. Still, the top two teams earn Region I berths in Lubbock on April 24-25 at Lubbock Country Club, so Midland High returns to that event for the second year in a row.

"I thought if we had shot a 310 on that course in that wind, we would have won," said MHS golf coach Aubrey Culley. "One shot after all those holes was disappointing."

Midland Lee II placed third in the team race, 28 strokes behind MHS, missing the Region I cut.

Jacobs' final round 76 keeps the 4-5A medalist title in the hands of MHS. The Bulldogs' Jeremiah Luttrell, now playing with Odessa College, won the medalist title a year ago. Jacobs had a four-round total of 299, an average of 74.75 per district round.

Jacobs held the district lead through all four 4-5A tour stops, also including Odessa, Midland and Abilene. Second place Lummus came in at 310. He also had a 76 on the last round, failing to put a dent in Jacobs' lead.

Hurting McIlvain falls in district semifinals

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO - After playing probably his best tennis of the season for two sets, it was a shame Midland High's Kevin McIlvain had to end his day doubling over in pain.

The No. 3-seeded McIlvain, a senior, played brilliantly to open up an early 4-1 first-set lead over No. 2-seeded Ryan Hughes of Abilene Cooper Friday in the semifinals of the District 4-5A tennis tournament held at San Angelo Central's Tut Bartzen Courts.

McIlvain went on to best Hughes 6-3 to take first set and was cruising along with a 3-2 lead in the second set when a questionable call stopped his momentum and Hughes forced a third set by winning the second, 7-5.

That third set, however, turned into a lesson in intestinal fortitude as McIlvain was seized by bad cramping in his legs, and despite a hard fight, fell easily 6-1.

"At the start of the third set, about the second or third points, I started feeling twinges in my legs," said McIlvain. "I really thought I had my chance in the second set. I could

DISTRICT 4-5A TRACK MEET

Good news, bad for Midland thin clads

■ Injuries are a major concern for the Midland Lee and Midland High track teams.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — The prognosis for Midland High and Midland Lee's boys and girls track teams is a mixture of good news and bad news today as they head into the District 4-5A track and field meet at San Angelo Stadium.

Competition begins at 10 a.m. with the 3,200-meter run. Field events begin at 11 a.m., running preliminaries are at 1:30 p.m. and finals start at 6:30 p.m. with the 400 relay.

For both boys teams, athletes who were nursing injuries at last week's Tall City Invitational seem to have returned to a state of health that will allow them to compete. For the girls, however, two of the district's brightest young performers are still coming up lame.

Midland Lee's Melvin Dunson, who won the 100 at the Tall City meet in a blistering time of 10.76 seconds despite favoring a sore leg the week before, is about as well as he can be expected to be according to coach Mike Quimby.

"He's O.K. I think. He's looked alright all this week." said Quimby. "He really did a nice job last week."

Dunson, a senior who ran Lee's 400 relay last week with three sophomores, is part of Quimby's plan to fall back on his senior strength to repeat as champion in the short relay.

Lee won the gold last year after Odessa Permian dropped the baton. The Rebels, with a time of 41.62, probably would have qualified to the regional track meet anyway with a second-place finish. But now they have a title to defend.

"We're going to go back to our seniors on the sprint relay," said Quimby. "We'll have Jerry Stanford and Everett Searuggs back. They didn't run last week."

Joining that trio on the relay is senior Roderick Mayfield, who after qualifying to state in the 300 hurdles last year, has a good bit of big meet experience. Mayfield will be trying to return to regional in the 110 and 300 hurdles and he has strong times in both races.

The hurdles will be a big event for the Rebels with the trio of John McAfee, John Norman and Will Close added to Mayfield. McAfee was fourth in the 110s at district last year. Norman in the 110s and Close in the 300s are both among the leaders in the district.

Hurdles won't be the only obstacle to a regional berth for Lee. San Angelo Stadium's lanes are 36 inches wide instead of 42 like most tracks. While the width is within regulation, it is not wide enough to accomodate the 42-inch wide hurdles. In both hurdles races instead of eight lanes of competition, there will be seven; and confusion sometimes arises over which lane the runner is supposed to stay in.

"At the San Angelo Relays, a kid from Temple got right in front of Roderick in the highs and Roderick had to stop right in the middle of the race. We're working on running out of a lane right now."

The Midland High boys are healthy as well despite struggling with conditioning. And they would like to have a say in Midland Lee's bid to repeat as 400

Maddux to miss Braves opener with chicken pox

■ The Atlanta pitching ace will give way to Tom Glavine in the Braves' season start April 26.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Three-timer Cy Young Award winner Greg Maddux, diagnosed Friday with chicken pox, will miss at least a week of spring training and his starting assignment in the Atlanta Braves' season opener April 26.

Tom Glavine is now expected to be the starter when the Braves open at home against the San Francisco Giants.

Maddux, who turned 29 Friday, said he probably caught the illness from his 16-month-old daughter, Amanda Paige, who was just getting over it when he left home for spring training 10 days ago.

Maddux noticed red spots over much of his upper body when he awoke Friday morning and was diagnosed by Dr. William Donovan, a Braves physician, team spokesman Glen Serra said.

Serra said Maddux was put under quarantine in his hotel room for at least a week.

Because the illness is contagious, team officials surveyed all 55 players, coaches and staff in the Braves' camp, he said. Thirty-nine said they already had chicken pox, 10 said they did not and six weren't sure.

Maddux made his first start of the spring in Atlanta's opening exhibition game Thursday.

Rodman rebounds as Spurs beat Kings

The Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson scored 32 points and had 16 rebounds and Dennis Rodman returned from his shoulder injury to grab 15 rebounds as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Sacramento Kings 98-88 Friday night.

Sacramento fought back from a 60-49 deficit in the third quarter and took an 80-79 lead on a field goal by Randy Brown with 8:04 left.

But San Antonio went ahead 81-80 on a field goal by Rodman with six minutes remaining and never trailed again. The Spurs held the Kings scoreless for 5 1/2 minutes as San Antonio took a 93-82 lead as Robinson and Rodman dunked to send wild cheers through the Alamodome.

The victory improved the Spurs' record to 57-20, the best in the history of the franchise.

Sean Elliott scored 17 points for the Spurs and Avery Johnson added 16 and Vinny Del Negro 12.

Mitch Richmond led the Kings with 22 points, while Walt Williams scored 18 and Brian Grant 12. Olden Polynice had 13 rebounds for Sacramento.

Rodman returned to the lineup to the delight of San Antonio fans, who gave him a 25-second standing ovation when he entered the game with 7:29 remaining in the second period.

Rodman, who had missed 14 games after separating his right shoulder in a motorcycle accident March 19, left Friday night's game grimacing in pain as he had muscle spasms in his right shoulder blade seconds before halftime. But after working with a physical therapist during intermission he returned early in the third quarter.

Cavaliers 83, Hawks 70

CLEVELAND— Tyrone Hill had 16 points and 18 rebounds as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Atlanta Hawks for their second victory in the last eight games.

The Hawks collected four technical fouls in the game, including three that led to the ejection of coach Lenny Wilkens after the end of the third quarter.

Andrew Lang scored 15 points and Steve Smith had 13 for the Hawks, who had won two in a row and four of five.

John Williams added 16 points and Tony Campbell 15 for the Cavs, who didn't have starters Mark Price, out with a sore left heel, and Chris Mills, who had a sinus headache.

Hornets 94, Pistons 86

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Alonzo Mourning scored 23 points and Larry Johnson added 15 as the Hornets eliminated Detroit from playoff contention.

Greg Sutton, who scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half, hit a 3-pointer that gave the Hornets an 86-81 lead with 3:14 left.

The Pistons, who trail Boston by five games with six to play in the race for the eighth and final Eastern Conference playoff berth, got no closer than six points the rest of the game.

Allan Houston led Detroit with 21 points, while Grant Hill had 19 points and 11 rebounds. Lindsey Hunter added 17 points.

Timberwolves 104, Bucks 100, OT

MINNEAPOLIS — Isaiah Rider's 3-pointer with 1:38 left helped the Timberwolves end a 10-game losing streak in overtime games.

The game was tied 96-96 when Rider beat the shot clock to put the Wolves ahead to stay. Minnesota was 0-2 in overtime games this season and last won an overtime game in March 1992.

Glenn Robinson led Milwaukee, which had a three-game winning streak snapped and its playoff run sidetracked, with 28 points, while Marty Conlon had 17 of his 19 points after halftime.

Christian Laettner had 25 points and 11 rebounds and Tom Gugliotta and Rider each scored 23 points for the Wolves, who ended a four-game losing streak.

Knicks 88, Pacers 84

INDIANAPOLIS — Derek Harper hit a 3-pointer with 7.5 seconds to play as the Knicks strengthened their grip on the Eastern Conference's No. 2 playoff seed.

With the scored tied 84-84, Harper, wide open in the corner as the shot clock ran down, buried the shot and most likely Indiana's hope at the second spot. With one more win or one Indiana loss, New York would lock up the second position.

New York, led by Patrick Ewing's 30 points, has won five straight.

Indiana, which led 68-60 after three quarters, was led by Derrick McKey's 23 points.

Nuggets 102, Suns 87

DENVER — Bryant Stith scored a season-high 27 points as Denver snapped the Suns' four-game winning streak.

With the win, the Nuggets claimed sole possession of the eighth and final Western Conference playoff spot with five games to play.

Trailing 78-66 after three periods, Phoenix made a run as Kevin Johnson scored 15 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter. He hit a shot to pull the Suns within 80-75 with just over eight minutes remaining.

However, Phoenix could come no closer.

Kidd's new-found touch may bring rookie honor

■ Maverick Jason Kidd's recent scoring splurge has erased some doubts about his shooting ability.

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Jason Kidd has phenomenal basketball instincts, so it's no surprise he knew what to do when Jim Jackson and his 25.7 points per game left the lineup more than six weeks ago.

What has been surprising is how well he's responded by suddenly finding the shooting touch that was supposed to be his biggest weakness. That discovery could be what makes him the NBA's Rookie of the Year.

Kidd was the third person in a three-man race when Jackson went down Feb. 24. He didn't have the early season hype of Detroit's Grant Hill or the gaudy offensive numbers of Milwaukee's Glenn Robinson.

Kidd also was well into the period where rookies, especially those who only played two years of college, hit "the wall." Instead, he became Rookie of the Month in March and is off to an even better April.

Any lingering doubts should've been answered Tuesday against the Houston Rockets when Kidd posted his third triple-double within five games and scored a career-high 38 points in a 156-147 double-overtime victory.

It wasn't just what he did as much as how he did it.

With the Mavericks down by five and less than 30 seconds to play in the first overtime, Kidd exploded in front of Clyde Drexler to steal a pass in the backcourt, barely got set then drilled a 3-pointer.

Then, with 2.5 seconds to play, he charged to the top of the key and hit a leaping, winding, one-handed 3-pointer that forced the second overtime. He finished with a team-record eight 3-pointers.

But scoring is only part of Kidd's game. His real strength is the way he helps his teammates become better scorers by making great passes and creating opportunities for easy baskets on defense.

It's the little things that define Kidd and he does them as well as most veterans and definitely better than any rookie.

Sure, the 30-point games are aberrations for Kidd and somewhat expected from Hill and Robinson. Yet they can't be counted on to do everything else the Mavericks expect from the No. 2 pick in last year's draft.

Kidd's impact is everywhere.

As of Wednesday, the Mavericks had 21 more wins than last year and they'd gone from fighting for the No. 1 pick in the draft to being in the hunt for the No. 8 spot in the playoffs.

He's the only rookie among the league leaders in steals and assists, and those numbers have helped Jackson and Jamal Mashburn rank among the league's top scorers.

Reunion Arena is selling out once again, the team's television ratings are up 30 percent and sales of Mavericks merchandise are up 260 percent nationwide.

Hill has been on Letterman twice, he's on the cover of this month's GQ and he looks good smiling for the camera, but the Pistons' record hasn't improved much since his arrival.

Robinson, who started off with bad PR over his $100 million contract demand, is a great scorer and will be for years, but that's about as deep as his game goes. His defense is horrible and he leads the league in turnovers.

No matter who wins, it won't be a bad choice. Remember, Magic Johnson was the runner-up to Larry Bird for the 1980 Rookie of the Year award.

Considering Johnson is Kidd's idol, following in those footsteps may not be so terrible.

Bad back forces Norman out of MCI tourney

The Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Greg Norman withdrew from the MCI Classic today, citing back pain.

Norman, who was three shots back at 69, said he felt tight on the driving range. After hitting his first drive, he told playing partners John Huston and Vijay Singh that he had a twinge in his back and could not continue. He went right to the PGA fitness trailer to have the back examined.

There was no immediate word on his condition.

Even the tournament's leaders, Gene Sauers and Nolan Henke, had their ailments to struggle through during Thursday's first round.

Sauers was clogged and woozy with a head cold, while Henke was clunking through swing problems. Both came through with 5-under 66s.

Henke, who shot his sixth straight sub-70 round at Harbour Town Golf Links, said he'd fallen into bad habits this week. "I'm not real sure what's going to happen after this."

For Sauers, bed rest and fluids replaced range balls and putting after he surged to 6-under, then held on for a share of the lead as his illness worsened. Sauers said he would get dizzy at times setting up over the ball.

"It was a little shaky at the end there with that fever," said Sauers, who grew up 65 miles south of Harbour Town in Savannah, Ga. "It was kind of tough to move on the ball."

Bob Tway, Brian Kamm and Tom Lehman were a stroke back at 67, as a who's who field was quickly reduced to "Who's he?"

The group of seven at 68 included PGA stars Corey Pavin, John Daly and Phil Mickelson, along with Greg Kraft, Steve Jones, Steve Lowery and Brett Ogle.

"To me, it's not who is shooting what, it's a matter of what's been shot," Pavin said.

Sauers thought it too early to rule anyone out. "Somebody here is liable to shoot 9-under, but I'm sitting up there pretty good right now," he said.

The star-studded Harbour Town field quickly became star-dudded. Left behind were the marquee names who just days before had dazzled crowds at the Masters.

Davis Love III, runner-up to Augusta champ Ben Crenshaw, was four back at 70. Jay Haas, the second-round Masters leader, bumped up to 72. Nick Faldo took 74, Fred Couples 75, and rookie surprise Brian Henninger, who strode alongside Crenshaw in the Masters' final group Sunday, was at 76.

Hale Irwin, who won this tournament when it was called the Heritage Classic last year, was at even-par 71. U.S. Open champ Ernie Els got left at 73.

Seniors Championships

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Jim Colbert got up and down nine times during a bogey-free round and established a one-shot lead at the halfway point of the PGA Seniors Championship.

"I used all my skills today," Colbert said after completing a second consecutive 3-under-par 69 on the Champions course of the PGA Resort.

"This is the most rough we've ever played on the Senior Tour," Colbert said after reaching the tournament halfway point at 138, 6 under par.

But most of his scrambling was from the short side of the green.

"You have to put it where you can make par," he said. "With the rough, par has never been more valuable on this golf course.

"And most of the time when I missed the green, it was in the fringe, maybe 18-20 feet from the pin," said Colbert, the seniors' leading money-winner with $313,298.

The masterful scrambling exhibition left him one in front of Isao Aoki of Japan, who also had a 69 and was at 139.

"He's a gutsy guy and gets the most out of his game," Ray Floyd said after playing two rounds with Colbert. "He's good around the green. He scores well."

And, while Floyd is only two off the pace at 140, he complained about lack of scoring.

"I'm playing much better than I'm scoring," Floyd said after two rounds of 70. "And the ironic part of it is that I'm putting the ball as well as I have in a long time. I'm putting it where I'm looking, but it just isn't going in."

"I just hope I can keep my patience and keep on doing what I'm doing."

J.C. Snead, DeWitt Weaver and Larry Gilbert were next at 141. Gilbert and Snead each had 70s on Friday and Weaver, one of three tied for the first-round lead, shot 73.

LPGA Pinewild

PINEHURST, N.C. — Caroline Pierce, winless in eight years on the LPGA Tour, shot a 3-under-par 69 in windy conditions for a one-shot lead after the first round of the inaugural Pinewild Women's Championship.

A self-proclaimed good wind player from England, Pierce got in five holes among the tall pines with a morning tee time before gusts of 25-30 mph made conditions extremely difficult on the 6,426-yard Pinewild Country Club layout.

She admitted her 8:35 a.m. tee time was a definite advantage.

"The first few holes it was really very calm. We were very lucky," she said. "It's swirling. There are a lot of girls missing greens out there because it is swirling. It gets going one way and at the top of the trees it's going another way."

Players were coming off a nearly three-week layoff following the final round of the Nabisco Dinah Shore on March 26. Pierce was the only one in the 144-player field to break 70 and only 12 finished below par.

"I putted very well. I hit the ball average, really," said Pierce, who was in contention earlier in the season at Tucson, Ariz., but had a final-round 74 to finish tied for seventh.

Races final rehearsals for Kentucky Derby

LEXINGTON, Ky. (NYT) — Talkin Man was flown from Lexington to New York Friday to run in Saturday's Wood Memorial, where he is the 4-5 favorite. Thunder Gulch, who arrived in Louisville, Ky., from California last Tuesday with his trainer D. Wayne Lukas and his stablemates Timber Country and Tabasco Cat, will ship by van Saturday to Lexington, where he is the 8-5 favorite to win the Blue Grass Stakes.

And amid all this traveling, Suave Prospect galloped Friday morning on the track at Keeneland and waited for the final dress rehearsals for the Kentucky Derby. They are the Wood at Aqueduct and the Blue Grass at Keeneland, both worth $500,000, both at a mile and an eighth, both major springboards to Churchill Downs, where Saturday's winners and some losers will gather on May 6 for America's most prestigious horse race.

Neither weather nor post position was considered likely to affect either race. A clear and cool day was forecast, and Talkin Man was assigned the No. 2 stall in the starting gate for the Wood, while Suave Prospect drew No. 2 and Thunder Gulch No. 4 in the Blue Grass.

But something had been added since Thunder Gulch edged Suave Prospect by a nose in the Florida Derby last month, three weeks after he had nipped him by a head in the Fountain of Youth Stakes. Both times, Mike Smith won the homestretch duels against Jerry Bailey. This time, both jockeys will be absent: Smith to ride Concern and Bailey to ride Cigar in Arkansas in the $750,000 Oaklawn Special for older horses.

Smith's place aboard Thunder Gulch will be taken by Pat Day, but only for the day; Smith will return for the Kentucky Derby. But Bailey's place aboard Suave Prospect will be taken by Julie Krone, who will return for the Derby. Trainer Nick Zito has been ticked off because Bailey similarly defected from Go for Gin last year in favor of Irgun, three weeks before Go for Gin won the Derby and Irgun broke down with an injured ankle.

As a result, Krone has vaulted back from her latest injuries (fractured ankle followed by broken finger) and suddenly is riding toward the Kentucky Derby. In 120 years, no woman jockey has won the Derby. In fact, none had won any Triple Crown race until Krone won the Belmont two years ago aboard Colonial Affair. Now, she was adding a winsome way to Zito's stable, which has won the Derby twice in four years.

She was reminded the other day that she had given the colt Mr. Greeley a hug and kiss after winning the Lafayette Stakes, and that she had done the same in the stable area to Bill Greeley, the president of Keeneland. And she replied smartly: "Well, it's better than hitting him with a stick."

FINISH LINES:

Howard Battle, the racing secretary at Keeneland since 1973, was named to the new post of racing secretary and handicapper for the Saratoga meeting. The position has been handled by Mike Lakow, who also serves as the racing secretary at Aqueduct and Belmont Park, but it will be separated under a format created by Ken Noe Jr., the new president of the New York Racing Association.

PAIN: Bulldog senior only Midland player to make 3rd round

have taken him in two but I couldn't put it away."

MHS coach Tom Heiting added, "He was up 3-2 and was at ad in and was receiving when he hit that passing shot in the corner and he (Hughes) called it out. But I'm 100 percent sure that it was in. If that call had been made correctly, I'm sure Kevin would have beaten him in straight sets.

"That's the one thing that is eating away at me," continued Heiting. "Of all the people for that to happen to. Because he's (McIlvain) such a good person. You don't get a better person than Kevin."

McIlvain was the only player from MHS or Midland Lee to advance to the third round, or semifinals. While McIlvain will play Abilene Cooper's Beau Brown for third place today at 9 a.m., it's not likely he will be able to utilize the playback option.

Hughes will play San Angelo's Charlie Roberson, the defending state champion, in the finals today and if Roberson loses and McIlvain wins his match, then they would play to see who would advance to regionals in the second-place spot. But if Roberson beats Hughes, which is expected, McIlvain will have to settle for third and no regional berth because Hughes owns the semifinal win over the Bulldog senior, therefore, no playback.

McIlvain took advantage of three double faults from Hughes in the first set to pull ahead 4-1. The normally steady Hughes was falling fast as he became increasingly frustrated with his play. Hughes, however, finally got into his rhythm and could have pulled within 4-3 by breaking McIlvain's serve. But McIlvain held and went on to take the first game.

The second set was much different as Hughes began to settle down. Still, McIlvain was able to take a 5-4 lead and was serving for the match when Hughes broke serve and tied the score at 5-5. Hughes then won seven of the last nine points in the second to force the third set.

Because of the cramps, which have never bothered him before in a match, McIlvain was hobbling around the court in the third set and Hughes won easily.

"Sometimes it's a combination of working really hard during the week and then having the pressure of playing in a big match that causes cramps," Heiting said. "But I'm pleased with the way he's playing. It's a good way for him to end his senior year."

Despite the loss, McIlvain, too, was pleased with his performance. Especially considering he lost in the second round as a junior after qualifying for regionals on a doubles team as a sophomore.

"I'm really happy with the way I played," said McIlvain. "But I really thought this would be my year."

While McIlvain was the only Midlander to advance to the third round, several escaped the first round with wins.

Midland Lee was led by the girls doubles team of Rae McNeill and Krystal Barnett, who defeated Janae White and Chelsea Maddux of San Angelo 6-2, 6-2 in the first round. There were, however, overwhelmed by Odessa Permian's Jennifer Robison and Melissa Hodges, 6-0, 6-0, in the quarterfinals.

Lee's boys doubles team of Glenn Abrams and Eric Chandler defeated Odessa High's Freddy Chavez and Rajeev Patel 6-1, 6-3 in the first, but were ousted by finalist Andrew Cole and Matt Parkhill of Cooper, 6-2, 6-0.

Midland boys doubles team Nathan Lawrence and Bryan Sheffield opened the tournament with a 6-1, 6-0 win over Robert Steakley and Chad McKinley of Odessa High. But they fell to the No. 2-seeded Graham Thurman and Brandon Howard of San Angelo, 6-4, 6-4. It was a tough-fought loss to the eventual finalists.

In boys singles, MHS' Terrell McDonald defeated Midland Lee's Robert Hunt, 6-4, 6-4, in a mini-intracity rivalry but then fell to Cooper's Beau Brown, 6-1, 6-4.

In girls singles, two Lady Bulldogs won first-round victories, but fell, like all of the Midlanders but McIlvain, short of qualifying to today's matches.

Kallie Kerr defeated San Angelo's Monica Rodriguez, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5, but then fell to top-seeded Meiling Parks of Abilene High, 6-3, 6-0. Parks, by the way, was the only top seed casualty of the day. She fell to Permian's No. 3 seed Courtney Edwards, 6-4, 6-3, in the semifinals.

Carrie Geltemeyer of MHS survived a second-set tie breaker to beat Permian's Jacque Robinson by a tally of 6-2, 7-6 (7-2). Jillian Levrets of Abilene ended Geltemeyer's day at 6-0, 6-0.

GOLF: Sanchez joins Lee's Prince on all-district

(From 1C)

Odessa Permian's Harry Hernandez fired the low round of the day, a 72, to move into third place at 311 while Lee's Charlie Prince had a 76 to capture fourth place.

It wasn't necessarily a great day for all the Bulldog linksters. Carey Gentry, a junior, came into the event in second place, but had a final round 87 to end up tied for 10th place, almost missing out on the all-district team. The Top 10 make up the league's all-loop squad.

MHS' Chris Owens came in with a 75 Friday to move into that 10th place tie with Gentry at 321. Also ending up at 321 were Kenneth Boyce and A.C. Calderon of Abilene High.

Lee's Prince was joined on the all-district team by teammate K.J. Sanchez, who had a 78 Friday for a tour total of 320 and ninth place.

It's been a great golf season for San Angelo, which won both the boys and girls titles under coach Rick Harvey.

relay champs.

"I figure we've got the best chance to get out (qualify for regional) in the sprint relay, the 100, 200 and 400," said MHS coach Monte Stumbaugh. "After last week when we won the 400 relay at the Tall City meet, the kids feel like they've got a good shot.

"I'm glad too because I was just about to break it up and put everyone into individual events. But this is the last chance for those four seniors and after last year when we dropped the baton I kept the watch running and they picked it up and finished third. I figure if we hadn't dropped, we could have gotten at least second."

Sam Powell, Charlie Juarez, Landley Mannery and Roy Coats make up the sprint relay and they clocked a season-best time of 42.08 last week. While Stumbaugh knows San Angelo Central has the best time of 41.4, he knows that his athletes "have worked hard all year long and anything can happen in a relay."

MHS did break up its 1,600 relay and put Coats, Mannery and Powell in the 100 and Juarez in the 200.

"When I looked at the times and saw that it was going to take a 3:16 probably to get out, it was an instant decision to put those kids in a race that they have a chance to get to regionals."

Stumbaugh did say he wished he had more time to work with Coats, who was in baseball for part of the year.

"I wish I would have had him the whole time," said Stumbaugh. "Of course he's in good physical shape, but he's not in track shape."

The health scorecard didn't far too well for the girls teams.

For the Lady Bulldogs, sophomore Tami Zachery has not worked out all week long due to a back injury but will try to compete today. The Lady Rebels, however, are without their best chance to get a regional qualifier. Sophomore Kendra Albus was benched by doctor's orders for six weeks due to a hip ailment. Albus had the best time in the 800 heading into today.

MHS coach Susan Nix is not sure about Zachery's back but she's confident in her will.

"She's convinced that on Saturday (today) by darn, come hell or high water, she's going to run in the meet," Nix said of Zachery, only one of a group of six strong sprinters for the Lady Bulldogs. "But she said she talked to her dad and agreed that if she was going to get hurt, it was going to be at the meet and not out here working on handoffs."

Zachery runs on both the 400 and 800 relay in which the Lady Bulldogs have the second-best times behind Abilene High. She also has a strong chance to qualify in the 200. But Nix does have a contingency plan if Zachery goes down.

"Ogonna Merritt (who runs on the 800 relay) will take her place in the sprint relay and Toya Zachery (Tami's junior sister) will run on the 800. And I feel good about the relays even if Tami can't run. I feel like we've still got enough speed to get second in both. If Abilene High is going to win them, then let them. As long as we get out, we'll have two weeks to work on handoffs and get healthy."

Shelly Ray and Talitha Belcher, two more speedy sophomores for Nix, will be looked upon to score points in the 100 and 200. "I feel like they've both got a good shot of getting out in those," said Nix.

With the loss of Albus, two of the Lady Rebels best shots at regionals are lost. Her time of 2:27 was first in the 800 and she also ran on the 1,600 relay, which was running times near the group of three teams that have the best times.

"Her hip was just not getting better," said Lee coach Bill Martin. "In six weeks she will be fine but right now, we can't run her. It's been pretty rough on her, too."

The Lady Rebels, however, have junior Tina Valdez, who has a jump of 5-feet-2 inches in the high jump — which ranks just behind Odessa's Donelle Jones' 5-4 mark. She is among a small group of strong performances in that event.

They also have two more strong sophomores in Toya Strambler and Kim Edwards. Strambler won the 400 at the Tall City meet with a time of 1:01.49 while Edwards won the 100 hurdles in 16.74, beating Permian's Mercedes Alvarado, who ranks above her in the district standings. Edwards will probably be battling for second, however, because there is a sub-15 second mark that ranks first.

"Toya has a chance, she's in the top four and my hurdler has a good shot, too," said Martin. "That win last week gave her (Edwards) a lot of confidence."

Crane sweeps 8-3A track

GREENWOOD — Crane swept titles in the District 8-3A track meet here Friday, winning both the girls and boys titles.

Greenwood made a strong run in the boys division, but Cranewon a 152-110 decision over the Rangers. The Crane girls posted 157 points while Colorado City was second with 141.

The Greenwood boys did advance seven individuals and one relay to the Region I meet, which will be held in two weeks. Rusty Purser led the way with wins in both the shot put and discus. Miller and Jamie Presley swept the region high jump berths at 6-0 while T.J. Pfannenstiel won the 100 in 10.51. Presley was also second in the pole vault at 10-6 and Matt Gilly was second in the triple jump at 42-3. The Rangers also placed second in the 1600 relay in 3:39.56.

The Greenwood girls qualified for six Region I berths. Jill Stanley won two events, taking the 800 in 2:35.18 and the 1600 in 6:11.22. Leah Hohle was second in the 1600 to give Greenwood a region sweep in that event. Hohle also won the 3200 with a 13:22.13. S. Stamper was second for Greenwood in the discus and Cassie Henkel was second in the 400 with a 1:07.09 to get the other region berth.

Real baseball back, but hurt remains for the game

By Mark Bradley
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — So baseball was back, and not the unlamented faux version. This was the real thing, such as it is. These were the real players, playing real exhibition-style ball. And it felt . . .

"Strange," Fred McGriff said.

It looked pretty much the same. Greg Maddux struck out the Expos' Mark Grudzielanek on that staple faster-than-it-looks fastball. Mark Lemke turned two. David Justice dropped his bat and unbuckled his little shin guard after drawing a walk. On its face, it seemed familiar. Underneath, it wasn't.

It was baseball creeping in on little cat feet, the players trying to remember just how this worked, the fans — Municipal Stadium wasn't even half-full and was nearly muted — unsure how much to care. Outside on Congress Avenue, the locked-out big-league umpires were picketing, a reminder of a sad chapter not yet closed.

Said Lemke: "I don't think the strike will be easily forgotten. It'll take time." It figures to take weeks and months, if not years and decades. What happened Thursday was the first step on a figurative journey of a thousand miles. Real baseball has been restarted. What no one can yet know is whether the sport will ever again feel so real.

"Baseball is a big business," McGriff said. "I know the fans are upset, but what can you do? If you're a player, you have to go out and play."

The Braves played. They lost 6-1. Big deal. The young man Chipper Jones worked competitively for the first time in 13 months, going 1-for-3, striking out against the expressive Carlos Perez, younger brother of Pascual and Melido. Carlos Perez punctuated the moment by pumping his fist, which seemed a tad excessive for the first exhibition. Said Jones: "That's just the way (the Perezes) are. I've gotten him so many times in the minors."

The new man Marquis Grissom hit a home run his third time up. Before his first at-bat, he tipped his helmet to his former mates in the Montreal dugout. "All in fun," he said. "All of them know why I was traded. All of them are looking out for my best interests."

Preseason games are noted for their languor, but this one felt more tentative than relaxed. Not since Aug. 11, 1994, had these players performed before an audience. Said Grissom: "It felt good to see the fans again." How long before the audience returns in full force, assuming it ever does? "I hope they come back pretty quickly," Grissom said. "I hope they understand what went on."

For everyone involved, this is uncharted territory. Never before has a sport resumed after its playoffs were canceled because of a strike. Never before has a sport had so much apologizing to do. Said Bobby Cox: "We have to get used to playing baseball again." Maybe then the fans, who were given ample cause to stop caring, will again get used to watching. Or maybe not.

Ty Murray becomes superstar in spurs

FORT WORTH (AP) — Ty Murray is rodeo's top hand.

He's dominated the arena for years, most recently winning a record-tying sixth all-around cowboy title and solidifying his status as a superstar in spurs.

The fresh-faced 25-year-old from Stephenville, Texas, fits all the cowboy stereotypes.

He's taciturn. He works hard. He's polite and quick with the ma'ams. OK, maybe he doesn't sing in the saddle, but that could be a little hard to do when that saddle is strapped to a bucking bronc.

"I don't know if I'm shy. I'm not real ... talkative," Murray said.

The only tarnish on his public record came in 1994 in Colorado when he was caught chasing a cow elk with a snowmobile. That indiscretion cost Murray a cool $1,333.30 fine for wildlife harassment.

Since then, the only animals he's harassed have been those on the rodeo circuit.

Murray has ruled the riding events in professional rodeo since he started at age 19. He gained early fame as a bareback and saddle bronc rider, but is now a main factor in the spotlight bull-riding competition, taking the title in 1993.

He was selected Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rookie of the year in 1988, became the PRCA's youngest all-around champion, was the first competitor in 20 years to qualify for the National Finals in three bucking stock events: bareback riding, saddle bronc riding and bull riding.

Murray needed just 5 1/2 years to ease past the $1 million earnings mark. No cowboy's ever done it faster.

The awards and accolades are boundless and even though he's earned more money a year than anyone, he treats all the hoopla as mere fluff.

"If you take one day at a time and one ride at a time, you can't do any better than that," he said.

Murray's six all-around titles ties him with Larry Mahan and Tom Ferguson in rodeo record books.

The difference is Murray is still riding.

"He's had as big an impact on rodeo as Michael Jordan on basketball or Wayne Gretsky to hockey," said Steve Fleming, director of communications with the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

The result is that Murray has become a somewhat quiet spokesman for the sport.

"He's had a huge impact on rodeo and the way it's gauged by the general public," Fleming said. "He's been a joy to work with. He knows how good he is, he's humble but he knows how good he is."

His fellow riders both admire and desire his talent and exposure. Murray wears a black hat but he's considered one of the good guys.

"He's my hero," said bronc rider Jeff Collins of Fort Scott, Kan. "He's a superstar in this game. He's the one the little kids mug for autographs. He's got a lot on his shoulders and he does it really well. I've never seen him turn down an autograph."

His competitors rarely change. The same cowboys travel from rodeo to rodeo and are beaten by him time and time again. But they still look forward to seeing him burst out of the chutes.

"We're always matched up together," said bareback rider Eric Swenson of Denison, Texas, talking with tobacco tucked in his lip. "I think he's a good ambassador for the sport."

The demands of rodeo riding are stiff, and to last for many years is a task in itself.

"It's kind of a young man's sport," said Collins.

First of all there is the body toll, caused from constantly climbing aboard hundreds of pounds of angry animal. Murray says he never practices but still racks up about 500 rides a year.

"There's a certain factor of pain. You deal with sore muscles, but that's like any athlete. The difference is if we don't play and win, we don't get paid," said Murray, who has suffered only two real injuries, a torn knee ligament and a broken elbow. "There's no guarantees, no contracts."

But there's plenty of danger.

In December of 1994, bull rider Brent Thurman died from head injuries suffered on the circuit.

"I'm doing maybe the most dangerous sport in the world. It makes you reevaluate and rediscover," Murray said.

Free agent camp land of baseball bargains

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Take the Florida Turnpike south until it ends, make a left and go two miles. There it is, right before your eyes: The end of the earth, baseball-style.

Welcome to career hell. A place where everyone expects to take a 70 percent pay cut if they're lucky. A place where tempers have gotten shorter as the days have gotten longer.

It's the free agent camp, major league baseball's equivalent of a used car lot.

Yesterday's well-paid wunderkinds are today's tryout camp fodder. In the grim economic reality of post-strike supply and demand, they represent this year's overstocked warehouse sale.

Need a front-line catcher? Benito Santiago is available for half-price. Too much? Don't worry, the price is negotiable.

For general managers with thin wallets, how about a veteran middle reliever? There's Paul Gibson, Craig Lefferts and others. Prices start at the major-league minimum. These babies can't sit here all spring.

There are utilitymen galore, minor league misfortunates, former hitting studs. Thirteen major league teams have already bought up some of the best deals, but plenty remain.

"In two weeks, I might look for a job selling cars," outfielder Glenn Wilson said as he lamented his career coming to an end at the first-of-its-kind training camp organized by the players' union for free agents. The camp opened April 7 and has been a stopping off point for 20 players who have agreed to new contracts.

There were 33 players at roll call Friday, the eighth day of workouts at a camp that will stay open until April 26. Running the show is former Oakland manager Jackie Moore, himself a free agent of sorts after he was squeezed out of a bullpen coaching job in Boston.

"We want to get players off the lot. We want to cut a deal. We have a product to sell here. How many camps can you go into where you can look at a player and take him home with you?" Moore said.

A total of 53 players have been to the camp, with 21 leaving to sign deals. The alumni include Mickey Tettleton, Chris Sabo, Dave Stewart, Todd Stottlemyre, Erik Hanson, Bobby Witt and Howard Johnson.

The leftovers include 14 outfielders, 11 pitchers, five infielders and two catchers. Except for Andy Van Slyke and Santiago, most of the others will probably take whatever deal they can find at this point.

"I'd like to work for Michael Jordan, Oprah Winfrey, Donald Trump or Ted Turner, but I guess I'm gouing to have to stay in baseball and get what I can," former Phillies first baseman Ricky Jordan said.

"It looks not like I'll just be a backup somewhere," he said.

The players' anxiety level increased each day as the start of the exhibition season approached and then passed.

"The number of players we've gotten out of here, I think that's been a success. There's still some here very concerned. We're all human, they should be concerned," Moore said.

"The longer we're into this camp, mentally it will be taxing on these guys. They've seen a lot of guys sign, a lot of guys out of here. It's getting closer to the opening of the season and I'm sure nerves are becoming a factor here," Moore said.

The free agents who are still here April 22 may get to take part in a unique piece of baseball history. A game for the free agents — alumnus Randy Velarde dubbed them the "Homestead Homies" — against the Chicago White Sox is scheduled for that afternoon. The free agents already have uniforms that bear the logo of the players' association.

The union is trying to schedule more games, but teams have balked at traveling so far away from the cluster of camps up Florida's two coasts.

Then there's the matter of the umpire lockout. If it persists and replacement umpires are brought in for the Homies-Sox game, the union may balk at playing.

That unsettled issue is the least important thing to players like Doug Dascenzo, Tim Belcher and Lloyd McClendon, who fear they may be jilted this year and leave spring training without someplace to go.

Wilson, the most popular answer in some who's-the-last-to-go queries, figures he may be finished with baseball as soon as this free agent camp ends. He had a job with the Class AAA Omaha Royals, but was cut because the team needed room for seven replacement players who were guaranteed jobs.

Pitchers Steve Curry and Dave Otto were also among the "Omaha Seven" and made their way to Homestead.

Now they are in limbo and not liking it.

"I'll be happy if I get them all out of here," Moore said.

Milutinovic resigns position with U.S. soccer team as talks fall short

NEW YORK (AP) — Bora Milutinovic resigned as coach of the U.S. soccer team on Friday following six months of negotiations over a new four-year contract.

Milutinovic, 55, led the United States to the second round of the World Cup last summer, coaching the Americans to their first victory in the tournament since 1950.

"It's kind of sudden," U.S. midfielder John Harkes said from England, where he plays with Derby. "I was just thinking that Bora was going to be there for the games this summer."

Milutinovic had wanted to stay on as coach. But a U.S. Soccer Federation official, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the sides couldn't agree on terms for the new deal. The official said Milutinovic wanted some of his payments to be made outside the United States.

"I have loved being in the United States and being coach of the USA," Milutinovic said in a statement issued by the USSF. "I have enjoyed my time with the U.S. players and thank them for their commitment."

Carlos Queiroz, the coach of Sporting Lisbon in Portugal and the former coach of Portugal's national team, became the immediate favorite to succeed Milutinovic. Earlier this week, the USSF offered Queiroz a job as director of technical coaching and youth player development.

Green wins Sundrop 400 pole

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — David Green won his third NASCAR Busch Grand National pole of the season, leading qualifying Friday at Hickory Motor Speedway for Saturday's Sundrop 400.

Green, the defending series champion, turned the .363-mile track at a speed of 89.068 mph, the fastest of the 40 drivers making qualifying attempts. A field of 30 will start the 300-lap event.

Green, driving a Chevrolet, won the pole for the third straight NASCAR Busch Grand National event at Hickory, including both events last year. He has never won in eight starts at the track.

"There's something about this track that I can really get around it good for qualifying," he said.

Dennis Setzer, who lives only a few miles from the track and won last July's event here, was second-fastest at 88.042 mph in a Ford. Hermie Sadler was third in a Chevrolet, with rookie Curtis Markham fourth in a Pontiac.

Browning bombed in first outing since breaking arm in '94

By The Associated Press

HAINES CITY, Fla. — The best thing to say about Tom Browning's first outing of the spring is that his bones did not break.

But a discouraging cluster of hits, walks and runs accompanied the left-hander's first appearance against major league hitters since his arm snapped while delivering a pitch last May.

The 34-year-old Browning — 120-87 with a 3.91 earned run average in 10 years with Cincinnati — was signed by Kansas City last week to a Triple-A contract. He went one inning Friday, allowing the first seven batter to reach base in a 13-0 exhibition loss to the St. Louis Cardinals, who bombed him for four hits and five runs.

The Cardinals' Tim Hulett drove in six runs with a single, two doubles and a triple as the Cardinals pounded six pitchers for 17 hits.

Left-hander Danny Jackson, signed as a free agent over the winter, went the first 2 2-3 innings for the Cardinals and gave up three hits, two walks and struck out four.

Rangers 14, White Sox 2

SARASOTA, Fla. — Kevin Gross, making his first start for Texas, pitching three hitless innings in the Rangers romp over the White Sox. Gross, signed to a two-year contract after pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers last season, walked two and struck out three.

Texas scored six runs in each of the first two innings as Jim Abbott, making his debut with Chicago, began the game by giving up five straight singles and a double by Dean Palmer before getting an out. Abbott was charged with six runs on seven hits.

The Rangers pounded out 20 hits, with Ivan Rodriguez going 2-for-4 with a home run and four RBIs.

Astros 12, Indians 8

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Luis Gonzalez drove in three runs and Brian Hunter hit a bases-loaded double in Houston's victory as the Astros and Indians combined for 24 hits, including a three-run homer by Cleveland's Carlos Baerga.

Domingo Jean was the winner and ex-Astros pitcher Jason Grimsley was the loser.

Dodgers 6, Yankees 1

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Knuckleballer Tom Candiotti and four relievers limited the New York Yankees to three singles as Los Angeles Dodgers got its second straight outstanding pitching performance.

A day earlier, in their first exhibition game following the end of the strike, five pitchers scattered six hits in a 7-1 triumph over Florida.

Reds 7, Tigers 2

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Ron Gant got his first hit in more than a year, highlighting Cincinnati's home exhibition opener with an RBI single.

The crowd of 3,772 was more than double the largest attendance for any of the Reds' replacement games at Plant City Stadium.

Phillies 7, Pirates 6

CLEARWATER, Fla. — Rick Holifield's RBI grounder scored Dave Gallagher with the winning run in the ninth inning for Philadelphia.

Michael Brown fielded Holifield's grounder to first and touched the bag for the inning's first out. But his throw home to get Gallagher sailed over catcher Mackey Sasse

Expos 7, Braves 1

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Tom Glavine, expected to be Atlanta's opening day starter, gave up two runs on four hits in three innings and was charged with the loss in the Braves' loss to Montreal. He walked none and struck out one.

"I threw some good pitches, my stuff was good and the ball was alive, but I was up in the strike zone, too," Glavine said. "I need to get the ball down better."

Twins 6, Red Sox 1

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Scott Erickson got the leadoff hitter to pop up, and the center fielder dropped it. He got the second batter to hit a double play ball, and the second baseman threw it into the dugout.

Erickson then struck out five of the next 10 Boston batters as the Twins overcame five errors.

Blue Jays 9, Orioles 6

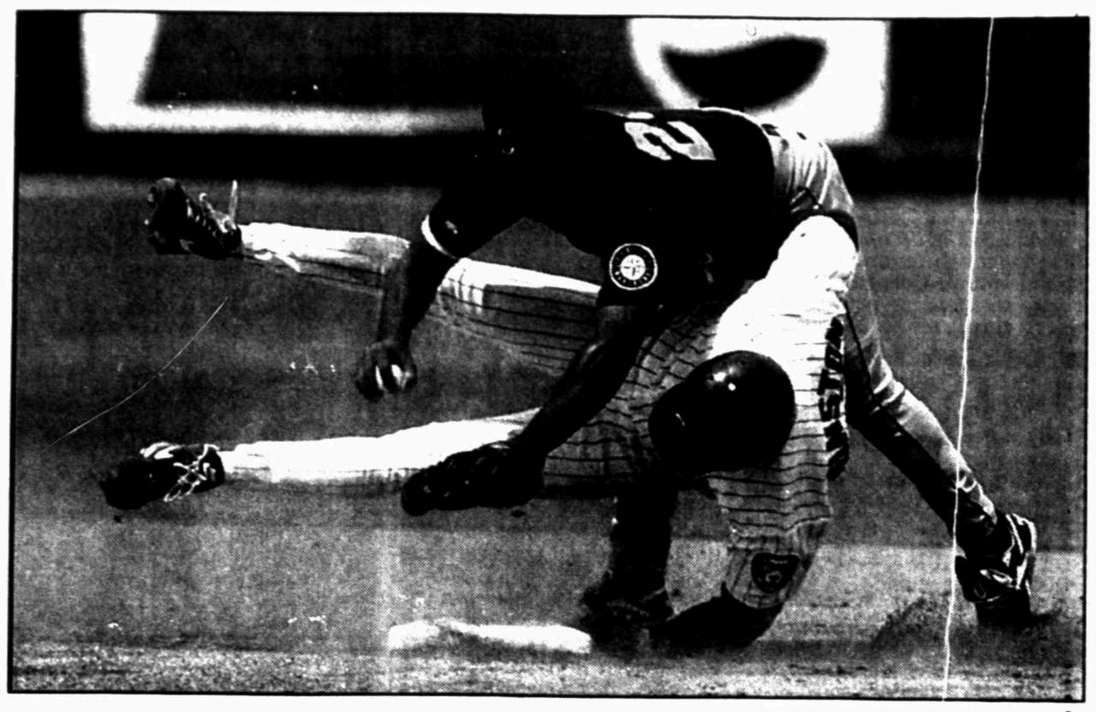
DUNEDIN, Fla. — Shawn Green and Tilson Brito both homered as Toronto outslugged Baltimore.

Baltimore's Brady Anderson led off the game with a home run as Blue Jays starter Pat Hentgen gave up three runs in four innings, including Greg Zaun's two-run double in the second.

Cubs 7, Mariners 4

MESA, Ariz. — Center fielder Brian McRae hit his first National League home run in the Cubs' win over Seattle.

McRae, acquired in a trade with Kansas City last week, scored pinch-hitter Tuffy Rhodes with his 400-foot homer to right center in the Cubs' four-run third inning.



AP Laserphoto

Chicago Cub shortstop Shawon Dunston knocks down Seattle Mariner Arquimedez Pozo to break up a double play in Mesa, Ariz., Friday.

Rockies 8, Angels 6

TUCSON, Ariz. — Eric Young had two doubles and a triple and Pedro Castellano hit a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly to power Colorado to victory. Andres Galarraga also had a three-run homer for the Rockies.

Marlins 8, Mets 4

VIERA, Fla. — Andre Dawson highlighted his Florida debut with a double, scoring a run in the Marlins' victory.

Dawson recently signed with the Marlins as a free agent.

Brett Butler, also signed this week as a free agent, was 0-for-2 and hit by a pitch in his first game for the Mets. Kelly Stinett homered for New York.

Athletics 12, Brewers 6

CHANDLER, Ariz. — Jason Giambi, Mike Bordick and Jose Herrera each had three hits as Oakland spoiled the Brewers' Compadre Stadium home exhibition opener. The game drew 2,628 fans, a larger crowd than for any of the replacement-player games at the field last month.

Oakland finished with 20 hits. The Brewers had 11 hits, two each by Fernando Vina and John Jaha.

Players back, but now umpires on picket line

NYT News Service

Just when you thought it was safe to go to the ball park again, the labor-lashed game of baseball threatens yet another blow. With the delayed opening day of the season 10 days away, the real players are playing for the first time since last August, but the real umpires are picketing instead of calling balls and strikes.

The National and American leagues locked out their 64 umpires Jan. 1 and don't intend to ask them back to work until the two sides negotiate a new collective bargaining agreement.

No one knows when that might be because bargaining is progressing as slowly and fruitlessly as the languorous talks between the owners and the players, who also have no agreement.

In other words, come opening night on April 25, the players, who ended their strike after 234 days, will very likely take the field with replacement umpires. The players may even have to cross the locked-out umpires' picket lines to reach the field.

"It's not going to work," Jack McDowell, the Yankees' new pitcher, said, discussing the use of replacement umpires.

"It'll work on the level that the replacement players would have worked for us. When you put someone in the situation who is not at the level of major league umpires, you're going to have big problems."

Although this dispute over wages and other economic benefits is between leagues and umpires — the umpires haven't received a raise in pay since 1991 — it also raises intriguing questions about the relationship between umpires and players.

For many years, the two groups' unions have not been enamored of each other.

"There's been no love lost," acknowledged Jerry Crawford, president of the Major League Umpires Association. But this year they feel greater kinship because they are at economic war with a common employer, and the players have offered noticeably greater vocal support for their locked-out brethern.

That doesn't mean the players will honor picket lines and forgo more of their salaries than the 28 percent they lost last year and the 11 percent they're already losing this season. But Richie Phillips, the umpires' lawyer, said Friday the umpires would ask the players to make that very sacrifice if the season begins with replacement umpires.

"We'd like to see baseball get back together and get everybody in America and Canada happy again," Phillips said in a telephone interview. "So we're not asking players to honor our picket lines during spring training because this is the time players need to prepare for the season. That will change if this thing gets to the regular season and we throw up legitimate picket lines. We're going to ask the players not to cross those picket lines, not because we want to put them on the spot but because we feel compelled to do that."

Eugene Orza, the No.2 official of the players' union, was noncommittal in his reaction to Phillips's comments.

"Right now, we're obviously concerned about the use of scab umpires only slightly less than we were concerned about the use of scab players," Orza said by telephone from Scottsdale, Ariz.

"The players believe whatever the occasional differences they have with umpires, those issues are dwarfed by having scab umpires. The players are concerned about playing games with scab umpires and want this thing resolved, but we have not resolved nor addressed the question of what to do in the event that there is picketing."

Robert Kheel, the leagues' negotiator, said the clubs' understanding is that the players are not very likely to honor picket lines. "We certainly hope that isn't the case," he said.

Indeed, besides losing more pay, if the players refused to cross they would play into the strategy of the hard-line owners who wanted to lock them out when they offered to end their strike.

This is the first lockout of umpires after six strikes in the previous 25 years. That labor history rivals that of the players and owners, who have engaged in eight work stoppages in 23 years.

Umpires picket the exhibition game between the Toronto Blue Jays and the Baltimore Orioles Friday in Dunedin, Fla.

Gene Budig, the American League president, said the leagues hope to have the regular umpires back in time for the start of the season, but he added, "We are doing the best we can with the existing situation."

Orza derided the quality of the replacements, saying: "They're not even minor league umpires. They have been released for incompetence and they are being used as scab players were used, as pawns in the leagues' fight with umpires."

By not asking minor league umpires to work major league games, baseball officials have opted to take a different approach than the one taken during the umpires' 73-day strike in 1979. That time they not only used minor league umpires during the strike but hired four for each league to continue working once the striking umpires returned.

"We learned a lesson in 1979," said Marty Springstead, the American League's executive director of umpiring. "We don't want to jeopardize a guy's career for a short-term use."

Fehr: players have right to know replacement identities

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Boston Red Sox outfielder Mike Greenwell is eager to get a list of the minor leaguers who played in spring training replacement games.

"I look at it this way: These guys were simply there to hurt us," he said Friday. "That doesn't mean you have to hurt them. That's not the way the world works."

Union head Donald Fehr came to Fort Myers on Friday to update the Twins and Red Sox on the labor situation. And one of the topics was a "hit list" the union is compiling so major leaguers can identify the strikebreakers.

"They have a right to know who was trying to take their jobs," Fehr said. Red Sox pitcher and player rep Roger Clemens said he already has a copy.

Greenwell said he wouldn't threaten any of the replacements.

Asked whether he was concerned that the list might become a tool for retribution, Fehr said: "We don't encourage anybody to do anything. ... I'm not concerned about that kind of stuff."

Red Sox manager Kevin Kennedy turned stern when asked if the same question.

"I addressed it the first day and that's the end of it," he said. "I don't want to hear about it."

Said Boston general manager Dan Duquette: "Our position is that they were exhibition games all along. We disagreed with the union's position on that from the start."

Fehr did say the union would consider legal ways of making its point to the strikebreakers, like not allowing them into the union if they ever make the majors.

But he also said he understood that some of them were "subject to massive pressure," and he would try to speak to them if he got the chance. The union might also investigate whether owners threatened players' career if they refused to cross, Greenwell said.

"Players are looking at a lot of that kind of stuff," Fehr said. "We will still represent them (in bargaining), obviously. But I think there will be vanishingly small numbers who will have any staying power in the major leagues."

"It would be ironic," he said. "Suppose a player gets there and he can play. And he can arbitrate and be a free agent without any salary cap — the very thing he was trying to destroy.

Hack to face Graf in Houston Women's Championship play

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Defending champion Sabine Hack of Germany faltered briefly in the second set before charging past erratic Nino Louarsabishvili of Georgia 6-1, 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Houston Women's Tennis Championships on Friday night.

Hack, seeded fifth, will meet No. 1 ranked Steffi Graf of Germany in Saturday's semifinals.

"If I have a real great day and she (Graf) has a bad day, anything is possible," Hack said. "She serves really well and moves incredibly well. My best chance against her is on clay."

Hack had little trouble in getting past 18-year-old Louarsabishvili, who appeared nervous at the start of the match and hit numerous forehand errors, allowing Hack to take a 5-0 lead.

"I was trying to hit winners in the first set," Louarsabishvili said. "I'd never played against her before so I didn't know what to do. It was kind of windy and I was missing a lot of points."

Hack broke Louarsabishvili's serve in the final game of the first set when Louarsabishvili double-faulted on set point.

But Hack was broken on her first two serves of the second set and fell behing 3-1.

"I think I could have beaten her easier but the ball was swirling in the wind," Hack said. "I wasn't getting the ball deep, so she could attack the next ball."

Lourasabishvili upset third-seeded Iva Majoli but Hack wouldn't allow another comeback.

"I think I am more consistent and move better," Hack said. "She hit a lot of good shots but she misses some too. She needs to be more consistent."

Asa Carlsson of Sweden will meet Meike Babel of Germany in Saturday's other semifinals match. Carlsson defeated Joannette Kruger of South Africa 6-3, 7-6 (7-5) and Babel beat seventh-seeded Sandra Cecchini 6-4, 6-3.

Conde de Godo

BARCELONA, Spain — Russian Yevgeny Kafelnikov, ranked No. 5 in the world, defeated Thierry Champion of France 6-4, 6-3 to earn a place in the semifinals of the Conde de Godo ATP Tennis Tournament.

Kafelnikov is the tournanment's highest remaining seed after No. 1 seed, American Pete Sampras and No. 2, Sergi Bruguera of Spain, were both eliminated in their opening round matches.

In the semifinals Saturday, Kafelnikov will face the ninth seed, Thomas Muster of Austria, who Spain's Carlos Costa 6-3, 3-6, 7-5.

No. 5 seed Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia, who defeated No. 4 seed Alberto Berasategui of Spain 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, will meet Sweden's Magnus Larsson who won his quarterfinal match against Spaniard Jordi Arrese 6-3, 6-1.

Third period score lifts Maple Leafs over Dallas Stars, 2-1

TORONTO (AP) — Randy Wood's goal at 8:37 of the third period Friday night gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-1 victory over the Dallas Stars.

The victory improved Toronto's chances of overtaking Chicago for fourth place in the Western Conference and gaining home-ice advantage in the first round of the playoffs. Dallas, meanwhile, was left clinging to seventh place, with five teams still within reach of one of the eight playoff berths.

Peter Zezel scored for Dallas and Mike Craig for Toronto in the first period.

Zezel tapped a cross-crease pass from Brent Gilchrist into the open side of the net to finish off a 2-on-1 break at 10:56.

Craig tied it at 14:03 when he sped down the right wing, veered to the outside of defenseman Paul Cavallini and, from a near-impossible angle, banked the puck off the inside of the far post with a wrist shot.

The closest thing to a goal in a second period was a shot by Dave Gagner that clanged off a post behind goalie Damian Rhodes at the 10-minute mark.

Montana, Clark bury hatchet after quiet feud

■ After several frosty years, Joe Montana and former San Francisco receiver Dwight Clark mend friendship fences.

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — It turns out Joe Montana's impending retirement also is a time for reconciliation.

Montana and Dwight Clark, indelibly linked as the passer and receiver in one of NFL's most famous plays, had grown apart since Montana left the San Francisco 49ers to play for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Close friends while both were with the 49ers, the two barely saw or spoke to each other in the last couple of years. But they will be reunited Tuesday.

Montana made the first move to end their estrangement, calling Clark and asking him to attend Tuesday's public retirement announcement and celebration of Montana's career at San Francisco's Justin Herman Plaza.

"There was a period when there was some tension just because it was such a bad scene when he left," said Clark, now the 49ers vice president for football operations. "It was a difficult time for everyone and I don't think either one of us knew how to handle it.

"He was in another city with another team. There was just a natural division there, and it's over. I talked to him (Thursday) at length and it was time for it to be over."

Clark said he was thankful Montana called because "I'm not much for going where I'm not invited."

Now that the two have made up, he said, "I wouldn't miss it for the world."

Clark, who retired as a player in 1987, made the leaping last-ditch touchdown catch from a backpedaling Montana to vault the 49ers to victory over Dallas in the 1981 NFC title game.

San Francisco went on from there to win four Super Bowls in the '80s with Montana as its quarterback. An elbow injury disabled Montana for virtually all of the 1991 and 1992 seasons, and he lost his starting job to Steve Young, who led the 49ers to a fifth Super Bowl title last season.

Unhappy with the prospect of being a backup, Montana decided to finish his career elsewhere, and the 49ers traded him to Kansas City prior to the 1993 season. The Chiefs went to the playoffs both years, reaching the AFC title game in 1993 before losing at Buffalo, a game in which Montana suffered a severe concussion.

"I don't feel that weird about it (Montana's retirement) because I was hoping it would happen a little sooner, just because it was so hard for me to watch him play out there," Clark said. "I kept flinching. It just seemed like he would get hit one of these times and not be able to get up. But one thing he proved, he proved he could still play."

Clark didn't hesitate to say that in his estimation, Montana was the best quarterback ever to play the game.

"He'd get in that huddle and he was guy, he was the man," Clark said. "It's such a contradiction because he was so quiet and kind of reserved. He didn't like talking to the press. He didn't like being in the limelight.

"I think he was very confident in himself without ever having to say it to anyone," Clark said. "I don't know that I ever saw him panic.

"He'd get to the line of scrimmage, settle in and get the play going. When the guy that's running the show is cool and calm it helps everybody else. When the guy that's in charge is looking kind of shaky, it's hard to have confidence in him.

But Joe, it was always, 'No problem. Let's get this done.'"

Team-by-Team breakdown for the 1995 NFL Draft

By Dave Goldberg
AP Sports Writer

Team-by-team capsules for the 1995 NFL draft, in the order they will pick:

1, 32, Carolina (0-0)
1994 DRAFT: None.
NEEDS: Everything.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Quarterback Frank Reich, who finally gets a team of his own; a kicker and a punter (John Kasay and Tommy Barnhardt) plus a gaggle of guys like defensive ends Mike Fox and Gerald Williams who are legitimate NFL players but nothing special. They fill from there.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: General manager Bill Polian started from almost nothing in Buffalo and built a team that made it to four straight Super Bowls. Extra draft choices will help a management group that knows what it's doing. But the players still have to perform.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Ki-jana Carter, RB, Penn State. The best player available, even though he'll take his lumps behind an expansion offensive line. Like Kerry Collins, QB, Penn State and could trade down to get extra pick and still get Collins.

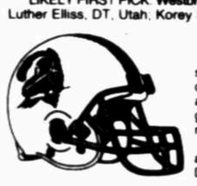
2, 31, Jacksonville (0-0)
1994 DRAFT: None.
NEEDS: Everything.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: The best are probably two defensive linemen, Kelvin Pritchett and Jeff Lageman. But as with Carolina, they'll only be as good as what's around them, and what's around them won't be very good for a while.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Tom Coughlin, who is both coach and general manager, has never been more than an assistant at the pro level.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Tony Boselli, T, USC; Kevin Carter, DE, Florida; Warren Sapp, DT, Miami; Steve McNair, QB, Alcorn State. If no McNair, look for Rob Johnson, QB, USC, or John Walsh, QB, Brigham Young at the end of the round.

3, Houston (2-14)
1994 DRAFT: Henry Ford, the No. 1 pick, looked like a major bust until late in the season, when Jeff Fisher became head coach. He could become a good defensive end. The rest of the draft picks were questionable.
NEEDS: Long-term quarterback, defensive and offensive linemen and probably just about anyone who can help rebuild a team that fell apart precipitously last year after seven straight playoff appearances.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Mark Stepnoski, C, signed from Dallas, is a good building block, but they may have overpaid for him as well as for 33-year-old kick returner Mel Gray, who is explosive but does only one thing.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Not good. Jeff Fisher looks like he may be a good young coach, but the team is weak at owner, which makes everything it does a question mark.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Steve McNair, QB, Alcorn State; Sapp; Kevin Carter, Michael Westbrook, WR, Colorado.

4, Washington (3-13)
1994 DRAFT: Heath Shuler, the first pick, was inconsistent, not unusual in a rookie quarterback. Tre Johnson, OL, and Tydus Winans, WR, should contribute, and the Redskins also got a sleeper quarterback in Gus Frerotte.
NEEDS: A lot. Defensive line, running back and wide receiver are probably the top priorities.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Two good safeties, James Washington and Stanley Richard, are at the top of the list along with Marvcus Patton, LB. But with exception of Ken Harvey, Redskins' free agents haven't worked out as well as expected.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Norv Turner will get more time from impatient owner Jack Kent Cooke but general manager Charlie Casserly is in jeopardy if the Redskins don't improve dramatically in a city used to winning.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Trade up with Carolina to get Ki-jana Carter. Westbrook, Sapp, Kevin Carter, J.J. Stokes, WR, UCLA.

5, Cincinnati (3-13)
1994 DRAFT: Dan Wilkinson, the DT taken No. 1 overall, was a disappointment, but remains a top prospect if he gets in shape. Best rookie was No. 2 Darnay Scott, WR, who became a deep threat immediately.
NEEDS: Running back, offensive line, secondary.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Two second-tier running backs, James Joseph and Eric Bieniemy in keeping with their habit of eschewing high-priced talent. Tom Waddle, WR, a great possession receiver.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: A team that operates on the cheap, they've been forced to hit the cap minimum. But any good players they're likely to draft are likely to move on, and so are the Bengals if they don't get the stadium improvements they want in Cincinnati.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Boselli; Sapp, Kevin Carter, McNair; Tyrone Wheatley, RB, Michigan.

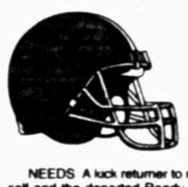
6, St. Louis (4-12)
1994 DRAFT: Their best rookie wasn't drafted — quick defensive tackle D'Marco Farr. But No. 1 pick Wayne Gandy, G, became a starter late in the season and should develop.
NEEDS: Quarterback, speed at receiver, offensive and defensive linemen.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Carlos Jenkins, LB, and Alexander Wright, WR. Wright can run but has questionable hands.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: The prospects get better if owners Georgia Frontiere and John Shaw leave.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Westbrook; Stokes, Carter; Sapp; Luther Elliss, DT, Utah; Korey Stringer, OT, Ohio State.



7, Tampa Bay (6-10)
1994 DRAFT: They still think Trent Dilfer is the quarterback of the future and they actually got a good one at No. 2, with running back Errict Rhett.
NEEDS: Defensive and offensive linemen. Defensive backs.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Alvin Harper, WR, was one of the big acquisitions of the year, but the Buccaneers may have overpaid for a guy who has yet to prove he can be a lead receiver. The rest of their signings were complimentary players like punter Reggie Roby.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: They came closer than any time in the last 12 years to avoiding 10 losses — the 10th came in their last game. They also have new ownership. Malcolm Glazer and his sons, although they're keeping Sam Wyche and the other football people for now. May finally be headed up a bit, particularly if Dilfer develops.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Elliss, Stringer; Derrick Alexander, DE, Florida State; Mike Mamula, DE-LB, Boston College; Westbrook, Stokes.

8, Seattle (6-10)
1994 DRAFT: Sam Adams, the No. 1, showed potential but was hurt, and guard Kevin Mawae became a starter.
NEEDS: Receivers, defensive backs.
FREE AGENT: Quarterback John Friesz, much traveled, is good insurance for Rick Mirer.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Much better now that Ken Behring has turned over the team to son David and Dennis Erickson is the head coach. They also have their quarterback in place in Mirer, assuming they can re-sign him.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Stokes, Westbrook, Mamula, Elliss, Alexander; Stringer; Joey Galloway, WR, Ohio State.

9, New York Jets (6-10)
1994 DRAFT: Aaron Glenn, CB, was an instant starter and an instant success and Ryan Yarborough, WR, came on at the end of the year. Quarterback Glen Foley, the last pick, hardly played, but is No. 2 on the depth chart and considered a comer.
NEEDS: Defensive linemen, defensive backs, offensive linemen.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Lost more than they gained, although they got another backup quarterback in Bubby Brister and an all-purpose back in Dexter Carter.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Who knows? The Jets keep spinning their wheels, first going old (Ronnie Lott, Boomer Esiason, Art Monk) and now going young under new coach Rich Kotite. A team that never seems to know quite what it wants to do and keeps finishing between 8-8 and 6-10.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Stringer, Galloway, Stokes, Alexander, Reuben Brown, G, Pitt; Wheatley, McNair.

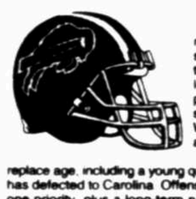


10, Cleveland (11-5)
1994 DRAFT: Both Antonio Langham, CB, and Derrick Alexander, WR, both played up to the expectations of their first-round status, although Alexander will be remembered for his drops in a playoff game with Pittsburgh.
NEEDS: A kick returner to replace the traded Eric Metcalf and the departed Randy Baldwin, plus some depth on the defensive line, where free agency cut into the talent. Consistent quarterbacking would help. Tight end.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Andre Rison, WR, explosive but temperamental. Key is whether he can coexist with coach Bill Belichick.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Belichick got the team to the playoffs last year in his fourth season after hovering around .500 for the first three. It's time for this team to get over the top or fall back.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Kyle Brady, TE, Penn State; Galloway, Stringer; McNair.

11, 24, Minnesota
1994 DRAFT: Also had two first-rounders and both were starters, Todd Steussie, OT, and DeWayne Washington, CB. Tight end Andrew Jordan, a sixth-rounder, also was a part-time starter, but breakaway threat David Palmer was slow developing.
NEEDS: Defensive tackle to replace departed Henry Thomas; secondary, offensive line. Young quarterback.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Broderick Thomas, LB, should help replace Carlos Jenkins, another free agent loss and safeties Harlon Barnett and Charles Mincy are possible starters.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Have long been one of better drafting organizations. But while they've been a consistent playoff team, the farthest they've gotten is the 1987 NFC title game, which may have been a strike-year fluke. Dennis Green has taken over almost everything and maybe he can get them by the last roadblock.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Like McNair and could trade up to get him. Stringer; Mamula; Shawn King, DE, Northeast Louisiana; Ellis Johnson, DT, Florida. Second could be one of the other quarterbacks, like Rob Johnson, USC; Wheatley.

12, Philadelphia (7-9)
1994 DRAFT: Bernard Williams, the top pick, did the unusual and began the season as a starter at left tackle. But he regressed in the second half of the year along with the rest of the team and got called for holding on a regular basis. Charlie Garner had a burst at running back, then got hurt.
NEEDS: Tight end, cornerback to replaced departed Eric Allen, pass rusher.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: New coach Ray Rhodes expects Ricky Watters, RB, San Francisco, to become a franchise player. Rhett Hall, DT, San Francisco, shows signs of pass rushing ability.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Rhodes, one of eight former 49ers assistants coaching in the NFL, will remake the team along San Francisco lines. He's got a reputation as a good judge of personnel, but owner Jeff Lurie may be a tinkerer.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Brady, Mamula; Hugh Douglas, DE, Central State; King; Ellis Johnson, Bobby Taylor, DB, Notre Dame; Jimmy Hitchcock, CB, North Carolina State.

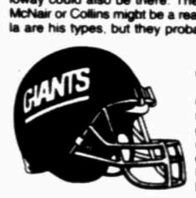
13, New Orleans (7-9)
1994 DRAFT: Got decent if not great players in Joe Johnson, DE, and Mario Bates, RB, with the first two picks. Quarterback Doug Nussmeier, in the World League, could be a prospect and Winford Tubbs, LB, will replace Sam Mills. Altogether, quite good.
NEEDS: More defense on a team that used to be all defense and no offense.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Eric Allen, CB, was the premier signing although he's coming off a down year with Philadelphia. Rufus Porter is a pass rusher to replace departed Darion Conner.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Jim Mora has more control of personnel decisions and that's probably a plus. Should inch back to playoff contention although getting the first playoff win has become a burden.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: King, Ellis Johnson, Hitchcock; Taylor, Mamula, Mark Fields, LB, Washington State.



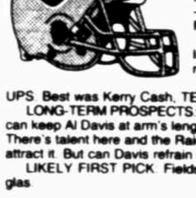
14, Buffalo (7-9)
1994 DRAFT: Jeff Burris, the No. 1, was a starter at corner back part-time and had rookie problems but remains a prospect. Lonnie Johnson, TE; Bucky Brooks, WR, and Sam Rogers, LB, also look like comers.
NEEDS: Youth to replace age, including a young quarterback now that Reich has defected to Carolina. Offensive line. Linebackers are one priority, plus a long-term running back replacement for Thurman Thomas.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Jim Jeffcoat, DE, and Bryce Paup, LB, provide pass rushing alternatives to Bruce Smith and could take pressure off.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Front office remains solid and slide was to be expected following four Super Bowls. Could get back to top fairly quickly, but a quarterback would be nice.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Hitchcock; Fields; Mamula; Brown, Douglas, could go for young quarterback later.

15, Indianapolis (8-8)
1994 DRAFT: Marshall Faulk was one of the reasons the Colts got to .500 — a franchise running back can do that. Bernard Washington and Damon Watts started part-time in the defensive backfield, largely by default. Linebacker Trev Alberts, the other No. 1, missed most of the season with a shoulder injury but should be fine.
NEEDS: Why does this team always need defensive backs? Long-term quarterback.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Flipper Anderson, WR, will provide more speed and experience to receiving corps.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Front office has never been sure of the direction to take — draft, trade or free agency. Also had bad luck in injuries to high picks like Steve Emtman. If Emtman's healthy, there's a nucleus but a need to upgrade at quarterback from Jim Harbaugh.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Taylor; Hitchcock; Brown; Ellis Johnson.

16, Arizona (8-8)
1994 DRAFT: Jamir Miller, OLB, reported late and was disappointment until late. But he has potential and so does Chuck Levy, the Dave Meggett-type running back, third-down pass catcher. Free agent Brent Alexander, DB, started part-time.
NEEDS: Quarterback and wide receiver. Buddy Ryan ignores offense.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Dave Krieg, the quarterback the Cardinals signed, is a stop gap. He may end up also serving as de facto offensive coordinator.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Who knows with Bill Bidwill as owner and Ryan as coach-general manager. Ryan promised the playoffs and failed, largely because he played musical quarterbacks with Steve Beuerlein, Jay Schroeder and Jim McMahon. If that continues, the Cardinals will remain mediocre at best.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Could Ryan take offense? Galloway could also be there. The quarterbacks other than McNair or Collins might be a reach, but Douglas or Mamula are his types, but they probably won't be there.

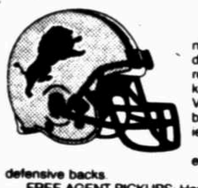


17, New York Giants (9-7)
1994 DRAFT: First-rounder Thomas Lewis showed potential before getting hurt and second-rounder Thomas Randolph, CB, was a comer. Rest of choices remain to be tested.
NEEDS: Pass rusher of some kind — linebacker or end; safety.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Best were Mike Croel, LB, and Herschel Walker, RB, although they hope Ray Agnew or Robert Harris, DLs, show potential they had when drafted high.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: As always, they know what they're doing even if what they do seems odd to other teams. Seem to have quarterback of future in Dave Brown, which is good enough to rebuild around.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: They allsways mask well. Taylor, Hitchcock, Ellis Johnson; Galloway; Davis, Barrett Brooks, OT, Kansas State; Rashaan Salaam, RB, Colorado.



18, Los Angeles (9-7)
1994 DRAFT: Rob Fredericksson, LB, a surprise first-round pick, wasn't a surprise by year's end — he was a good player. Rest of draft so-so.
NEEDS: Offensive linemen; defensive linemen.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Best was Kerry Cash, TE.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Who knows if Mike White can keep Al Davis at arm's length and run his own team. There's talent here and the Raiders seem to continue to attract it. But can Davis refrain from coaching?
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Fields, Salaam; Brooks, Douglas.

19, Kansas City (9-7)
1994 DRAFT: First three picks Greg Hill and Donnell Bennett, RBs, and Lake Dawson, WR, all contributed as rookies and should get better.
NEEDS: Young quarterback, wide receiver, cornerback, defensive lineman.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: James Hasty, CB, had off-year with the Jets, could contribute if he returns to form.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: There are reports of tension between general manager Carl Peterson and coach Marty Schottenheimer, and reports that Peterson wants out. Chiefs seem to be in a slow decline.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Brooks, Ellis Johnson; King; Galloway; Jack Jackson, WR, Florida. Quarterback later?



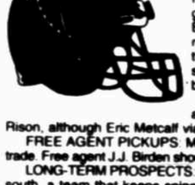
20, Detroit (9-7)
1994 DRAFT: Johnnie Morton, the No. 1 pick, did little last year but may replace Mel Gray as the kick returner this year. Van Malone, S, had the biggest impact as a rookie.
NEEDS: Pass rushers, offensive linemen, defensive backs.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Henry Thomas, the Pro Bowl nose tackle from Minnesota, is the major acquisition. But they lost Kelvin Pritchett and Broderick Thomas and may end with a net free-agency loss.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: There's a sense that the Lions' recent success is due more to Barry Sanders than any long-term strong management. Sanders may wind down in a few years, and then where are they?
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Taylor; Brooks; Douglas; Blake Brockmeyer, T, Texas; Anthony Cook, DE, South Carolina State.

21, Chicago (9-7)
1994 DRAFT: John Thierry, the first pick, wasn't much at linebacker but may be a star moved to defensive end. They also like Marcus Spears, OT, who was inactive all of his rookie year. But lower picks did better — Raymont Harris, FB, was a starter after Merril Hoge retired, and Jim Flanigan will compete for a starting job at defensive tackle.
NEEDS: More speed at wide receiver and at running back. An impact linebacker would also help.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Michael Timpson, WR, from New England brings speed but not consistency.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Dave Wannstedt looks after two years like one of the best young coaches in a while. The front office has to provide him talent to let him realize his potential.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Salaam; Wheatley; Fields, Cook, Matt O'Dwyer, G, Northwestern.

22, Green Bay (9-7)
1994 DRAFT: First-rounder Aaron Taylor, OT, injured his knee in camp and lost the year. No. 2 LaShon Johnson, RB, also was hurt.
NEEDS: Running backs as always, wide receivers, linebacker, cornerbacks.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Trades were more significant, bringing Mark Ingram, WR, and Keith Jackson, TE, from Miami. Lost Bryce Paup, key pass rusher, to Buffalo, and Sterling Sharpe to injury.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Sharpe's loss hurts, particularly when they weren't able to lure Andre Rison to replace him. Reggie White's time clock is running and the Packers remain on a treadmill, if not headed downhill.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Salaam; Wheatley; Fields, Douglas; trade.

23, New England (10-6)
1994 DRAFT: Good at top and bottom. No. 1 Willie McGinest, LB, came on as a pass rusher. Marty Moore, LB, the last pick in the draft, was a starter.
NEEDS: Bigger defensive linemen; secondary; running game.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Dave Meggett was added as the all-purpose speed back they needed but may have overpaid for a player who can stand up to spot duty. Jeff Dellenbach, C, should help the Patriots and hurt Miami, one of their division competitors.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Bill Parcells has taken a bereft franchise and gotten it to the playoffs in two years. But he doesn't have the personnel help he had in New York, so the Super Bowl talk may be premature.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Cook; Dameisin Jeffries, DE, Alabama; Cory Raymer, C, Wisconsin.

25, Miami (10-6)
1994 DRAFT: Tim Bowens, DT, was defensive rookie of the year. Aubrey Beavers, LB, was a contributor who showed promise as Dolphins continued to rebuild defense. Tim Ruddy, C, can also play.
NEEDS: One running back out of many potentials. Young offensive linemen.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Eric Green, TE, enabled them to trade Keith Jackson to Green Bay. Randal Hill, WR, comes back from Arizona. Trade for Trace Armstrong gives them extra pass rusher.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Short-term prospects are more important to Don Shula, who thinks he's a player or two from a Super Bowl.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Raymer; Brockmyer; O'Dwyer.



26, Atlanta (7-9)
1994 DRAFT: With no first round pick, they got a good wide receiver in Bert Emmanuel on the second round. Perry Klein, the third rounder, showed some promise at quarterback.
NEEDS: Defense plus a replacement for Andre Rison, although Eric Metcalf via trade was a good start.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Metcalf was picked up in a trade. Free agent J.J. Birden should fit in the run and shoot.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: The New York Jets of the south, a team that keeps spinning its wheels, changing coaches, philosophies and players, and winds up 7-9 or 6-10.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Jeffries; Derrick Brooks, LB, Florida State; Craig Powell, LB, Ohio State; Lorenzo Styles, LB, Ohio State.

27, Pittsburgh (12-4)
1994 DRAFT: Charles Johnson looks like the wide receiver they've needed for years and Brentson Buckner was an instant starter at defensive back.
NEEDS: Still need speed on offense, a quarterback for the future would help, and more depth.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Tom Newberry, G, gives them a veteran guard to replace the troubled Carleton Haseirig.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Good. The organization is on keel and Bill Cowher is one of the best young head coaches in the league.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Brooks, Jeffries; Powell.

28, Dallas (12-4)
1994 DRAFT: Without Jimmy Johnson, a relative bust. Only second-rounder Larry Allen, who moved in at right tackle when Erik Williams was hurt, looks like a comer. First-rounder Shante Carver looks like a bust, but will get another chance.
NEEDS: Depth that's been lost in free agency, offensive linemen to replace aging veterants.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Ray Donaldson, C, who was signed to replace Mark Stepnoski, but has perhaps a year or two in him at 36.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Not as good as they would have been without the salary cap. The young talent like Stepnoski and Alvin Harper keeps leaving and there's no way the drafts can keep up with the drafts of the early '90s.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Billy Milner, OT, Houston; O'Dwyer; Raymer, Styles, Jackson.

29, San Diego (11-5)
1994 DRAFT: Isaac Davis, G, became a starter late in the season, and lower rounds netted some prospects like Aaron Laing, TE.
NEEDS: More than a Super Bowl team should have — they lost both safeties to free agency. Speed wide receiver and offensive linemen.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Shaun Gayle, S, is a stop-gap at safety.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: Alex Spanos finally stepped into the background, let Bobby Beathard and Bobby Ross run the team, and they went to the Super Bowl. But there's still work to do — the AFC title game win over Pittsburgh was something of a fluke.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Jackson; Brockemyer; O'Dwyer; Styles, Milner; Houston.

30, San Francisco (13-3)
1994 DRAFT: Just the best in the NFL, and this for one of two power teams. Bryant Young, DT, and William Floyd, FB, two first-rounders, are future Pro Bowlers. Lee Woodall, LB, sixth-rounder, was an instant starter. Doug Brien became the placekicker.
NEEDS: Depth for offensive line, running back to replace Ricky Watters, defected to Philadelphia. Backup or developmental quarterback.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Oliver Barnett, DT, from Buffalo best of a mediocre bunch.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: How can they be anything but good in an organization that's been the best in football over the last 15 years? The 49ers are the only team in the NFL that's been able to stay on top over a protracted period with changes in the system.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Salaam; James Stewart, RB, Tennessee; James Stewart, RB, Miami; Jackson; Christian Fauria, TE, Colorado.

112, Denver (7-9)
1994 DRAFT: Despite only two picks before seventh round, did OK, led by second-rounder Allen Aldridge, a linebacker.
NEEDS: Developmental quarterback. Offensive line. Will be hard to get instant starters because they traded away picks in first three rounds.
FREE AGENT PICKUPS: Beefed up defense with Michael Dean Perry and James Jones on defensive line, Britt Hager at linebacker and a host of others.
LONG-TERM PROSPECTS: OK until John Elway retires. Can't decide whether they want to go free-agent or draft route, and owner Patrick Bowlen is getting more active, a bad sign. Still, Mike Shanahan should be a good coach.
LIKELY FIRST PICK: Much too late to predict.

ERIK: Sexual assualt is punishable by 2-20 years in prison

(From 1C)

If Williams is convicted of the sexual assault charge, which is expected to be formally filed Monday, Harris said the Dallas County District Attorney's office would pursue revocation of the probation. That would mean he would serve out his drunken driving sentence at the county jail before beginning any further penalty.

The Collin County District Attorney's office will handle the sexual assault allegations.

Sexual assault is a second-degree felony that is punishable upon conviction by two to 20 years in prison.

Through his attorney, Donald Godwin, Williams said he is innocent.

Williams' latest problem began around 2 a.m. Thursday when police received a 911 call from his house.

The alleged victim, a night club dancer who said she's known Williams for four months, asked police to go to Williams' north Dallas home and ask for her by her first name, police said.

When they arrived, Williams, 26, said she was not there and that there was no disturbance, police said.

As officers returned to their patrol car, they said they heard a sound and saw the girl looking out a window.

Officers went back and arrested Williams and Roderick Carson of Madison, Wis. Carson, 26, was a teammate of Williams at Central State of Ohio. Both were released from custody after posting $2,500 bond at separate hearings.

According to what the girl told police, the men picked her up at her apartment late Wednesday, then took her to Williams' house. Police said she alleged that the two men threatened to "blow (her) away" if she didn't concede to sexual intercourse.

Ndeti tries to become first non-U.S. runner to 'threepeat'

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Track Writer

BOSTON — One year away from celebrating its 100th running, the Boston Marathon could have another significant event to celebrate Monday: Cosmas Ndeti winning the race for the third consecutive year.

Only two men in the race's long, glorious history have won three times in a row, both Americans, and both from Melrose, Mass. The first was Clarence DeMar, from 1922-24. The other was Bill Rodgers, from 1978-80.

DeMar has more Boston Marathon victories than anyone: seven, including 1911, 1927, 1928 and 1930. Rodgers is tied for second with four wins, including his first in 1975 — 20 years ago.

Gerard Cote of Canada is the other four-time winner, in 1940, 1943, 1944 and 1948. There are three others with three victories apiece — Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, R.I., in 1933, 1938 and 1941; Eino Oksanen of Finland, in 1959, 1961 and 1962, and Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya, in 1989, 1991 and 1992.

The 25-year-old Ndeti won in his Boston debut in 1993 and is coming off last year's sensational triumph in a course-record 2 hours, 7 minutes, 15 seconds, the fifth-fastest time ever and the fastest in the world in six years. He has to be considered the favorite to match Kenyan countryman Hussein as a three-time winner.

No foreigner has won three straight.

Sure, there are other strong contenders, such as Ndeti's friend, Benson Masya of Kenya; Moses Tanui, also of Kenya, the 1991 world champion at 10,000 meters; Lucketz Swartbooi of Namibia, the third-place finisher at Boston in 1993 and the world championship silver medalist that year; Alejandro Cruz of Mexico, the 1988 Chicago Marathon champion; and Canada's towering 6-foot-5 Peter Maher, winner of 17 marathons since 1987.

Nevertheless, the confident Ndeti appears to be the man to beat, despite having a blister on his left instep and retiring after 21 miles in his last marathon, at Chicago Oct. 30. He also ran an uncharacteristically slow 1:08:14 in a half-marathon last month at Lisbon, Portugal, where he was bothered by strong winds and an upset stomach.

"My goal is to win Boston," Ndeti said. "It will be very important for me. People will recognize me as the best because I have won it three times and set a course record."

Before the Chicago Marathon, Ndeti was talking about running the fastest marathon ever, breaking the mark of 2:06:50 set by Belayneh Densimo of Ethiopia at Rotterdam in 1988. The blister, which began developing at the six-mile mark, negated that.

Ndeti is a most unusual runner.

He's his own coach. He designs his workouts according to how his body feels. If he doesn't feel like running far in the morning, he goes back to sleep for a couple of hours and runs later.

"A coach can tell you to do something which your body is not willing or ready to do," Ndeti said. "If you do that at the time, you are exhausting your body."

One of Ndeti's favorite workouts is to run six miles up a steep hill as hard as he can, then run six miles back down as hard as he can.

"I did this several times in the two weeks before I came to Boston," Ndeti said after winning in 1994. "This year, the course record came very easily, so next year I will try for a world record. If I run 30 seconds faster for the first half of the race, I think I can do it."

Surprisingly, in both Boaton victories, he ran the more difficult second half of the course faster than the first half. In 1993, he clocked 1:05:23 for the first 13.1 miles, 1:04:10 for the second. Last year, his times were even more remarkable, 1:05:00 for the first half, 1:02:15 for the final 13.1 miles.

Greg Meyer, the 1983 champion and the last U.S. winner, called Ndeti's 1994 performance "mind-boggling."

"I can't believe a 1:02 second half on the substantial part of the course with all the hills," Meyer said.

Ndeti had to run that fast in order to win, because runner-up Andres Espinosa of Mexico was only three seconds back at 2:07:18, also under the course record of 2:07:51 by Rob de Castella of Australia in 1986.

Temperatures in the mid-50s, low humidity and a 19 mph tailwind were just about perfect, and the first 11 finishers all broke 2:10:00.

The first six women cracked the 2:30:00 barrier, with Uta Pippig, the 29-year-old medical student graduate from Germany winning at 2:21:45, the third-fastest time in history and a course record, erasing the mark of 2:22:43 by Joan Benoit Samuelson in 1983.

Pippig will defend her title and will be joined by the Nos. 2-3-5 finishers from last year — Olympic gold medalist Valentina Yegerova of Russia, Elana Meyer of South Africa, and Carmen de Oliveira of Brazil, along with Tegla Loroupe, the precocious 21-year-old from Kenya who won the New York City Marathon in her marathon debut in November.

Just like the men, foreigners have dominated the women's competition in recent years, with the last U.S. winner being Lisa Weidenbach in 1985.

This year, no elite Americans are entered in the men's field, and the only world-class U.S. competitor among the women is Linda Somers, 33, of Oakland. Her best time, however, is only 2:33:37.

Pippig's victory capped a series of excellent but non-winning performances at Boston. She had finished second in 1990 and was third in 1991 and 1992.

Like Ndeti, she immediately talked about breaking the world-best of 2:21:06 by Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway at London in 1985.

"It is not so good to say sometimes, but maybe I can break the world record someday," Pippig said shyly.

World Cup officials try to reach beyond traditional yacht crowd

SAN DIEGO (AP) — At Cabrillo National Monument, a finger of land with wide views of the Pacific Ocean, Aaron Grizzle points a pair of binoculars toward several white triangles floating on the water.

The dots are actually multi-million-dollar America's Cup yachts racing an 18.55-mile course.

"It beats watching Ricki Lake," says Jon Wintersteller, Grizzle's friend and classmate at Miramar College.

"I don't know about that," Grizzle says unenthusiastically.

Wintersteller and Grizzle are part of the major challenge facing promoters of the prestigious yacht races: How do you sell an event that is perceived to be elitist, confusing and even boring?

This year, to try to attract more viewers and keep corporate sponsors happy, Cup officials have tried to reach beyond the traditional polo-shirt-and-deck-shoe crowd.

For the first time, yacht owners have opened the doors of their compounds and stripped the "skirts" off their boats, inviting the public into the exclusive world of yacht racing.

Tourists and other newcomers have attended parties with sailors and gawked at the silver America's Cup trophy, which has been displayed around town. And in keeping with the times, Cup results are now available online.

But the task of selling the Cup is not an enviable one.

For starters, the matches themselves take place four miles off-shore, where for roughly three hours — assuming the wind cooperates — two boats jog upwind and then downwind.

Even if fans can find a ride to the course, viewer boats are kept back from the action, and choppy seas can render binoculars useless.

Making sense of the event is another thing altogether. To get anything out of the experience, viewers should have a command of nautical language — terms like leeward, starboard, spinnaker and jib.

Rather than nail-biting photo finishes, more races end with boats lodging protests on technicalities. The greatest moment-to-moment drama of the four months of sailing duels was probably the three-minute sinking of oneAustralia.

"It's not something that I would actually sit down and watch," said Jason Gwazdacz, 26, a bartender at Trophy's sports bar.

Mighty Mary trails Young America as she rounds the weather mark during the Citizen's Cup defenders finals Friday.

If this is the America's Cup, what's all this talk about the Citizen Defenders Cup and the Louis Vuitton Challengers Cup?

Those are the two sets of trials that determine which U.S. boat and which foreign boat will face-off in the America's Cup in May.

Money, some have charged, also has helped create distance between the boats and the public. From the billowy spinnakers to the 75-foot hull, each craft is blanketed with corporate logos. The races become three-hour advertisements for Chevrolet, Citizen Watch, Yoplait, Cadillac and other corporate interests.

The need to sustain that corporate support — a yacht costs about $3 million — is forcing the syndicates to reach out to the community.

"To justify the money they are asking sponsors for, they need to demonstrate that there is broad general appeal and interest in the event," said Larry Edwards, who runs Events On-Line, which posts America's Cup material to the Internet.

Three times in four months of racing, all the syndicates have held open houses for the public to view their boats and ask questions.

And for the first time in 12 years, each boat has unveiled its keel. Such appendages have been closely guarded secrets ever since an innovative design allowed the Australians to snatch the Cup from the Americans, breaking a 132-year streak.

During the keel showing, crowds overflowed onto the street and blocked traffic outside the compound of Team New Zealand, which is undefeated on the water.

This kind of openness is a big break from the days when syndicates hired divers and helicopters to spy on competitors.

On Point Loma, this city's boating central, a set of white circus tents comprise the America's Cup Pavilion, where one can find America3 sweatshirts, Team New Zealand slickers, oneAustralia caps and other items inscribed with team names.

Under the same tarps, volunteers hand out brochures and dispense advice on Cup rules and race viewing.

"There is much more of a center of gravity for the event than there has been in the past," said Chuck Nichols, president of America's Cup '95.

Sipping a beer in front of a bank of TVs inside the tents, Phoenix school teachers Douglas Schlenker and Adrian Young are riveted by the coverage.

Young, a native New Zealander who has only been on a boat twice despite growing up in a country where sailing is the national pastime, is proof that one can learn to be a fan.

"When I first started watching this I had no clue," Young said. "Now, I love it."

Next year's 100th marathon shaping up as most-celebrated road race ever

BOSTON (NYT) — This year's 99th running of the Boston Marathon is like the opening act for a Madonna concert.

Or the night (itals) before (unitals) Larry Bird Night at the Garden.

It is, to be sure, an authentic Boston Marathon coming up on Monday, but it may go down in local lore less as the 99th and more as the one that preceded the 100th, which is shaping up to be the most celebrated road race ever.

You can sense it as runners from South Boston to Manhattan to Los Angeles are talking up the Hopkinton-to-Copley run the way they always do this time of year — but this time the buzz is about what's happening in 369 days, rather than in three days.

You can see it as marathon organizers, while drawing a world-class field and doing all they can to make Monday's race memorable, also are using it to test everything from bus routes to finish line chutes they'll need for next year's race.

And you'll be hearing more and more about it starting this weekend as a newly-formed committee of racing boosters works to make sure the 100th, in the words of organizer John McGrath, "celebrates what's really the birthday of the sport in this country as much as the birthday of the Boston Marathon."

Guy Morse, the marathon race director, says he's trying hard to balance the temptation to look ahead with the need to pull off this year's run: "It's certainly a challenge to remain focussed. Naturally we want to plan the very best for the 100th ... but our charge is not to forsake the 99th."

The rest of the running community is showing no such restraint. "People in the running world care more about the 100th Boston Marathon than they've ever cared about anything else in running," said Amby Burfoot, executive editor of Runners World magazine and winner of the 1968 Boston.

"Marthoners care more about the 100th Boston than the Atlanta Olympics ... Everybody wants to run Boston next year."

To understand that interest it's necessary to understand the place Boston holds in the hearts and minds of runners everywhere. It's the oldest annual 26.2-miler, and traditionally has attracted the world's finest runners. What Wimbledon is to tennis, and St. Andrews to golf, Boston is to long-distance running.

Race organizers are intent on capitalizing on that appeal for their 100th anniversary, which is why they've started planning for it more than a year ahead. And why some of what happens Monday will be a dry run for next year, when 25,000 runners are expected as compared to this year's 9,410.

Runners will get a look at those tests as they head out to Hopkinton Monday morning, taking a new route that loops from the Mass Pike to Rt. 495 and should be able to accommodate the extra buses needed for next year. There also will be extra chutes at the finish line and more facilities for TV cameras, although a plan to steer runners through a tunnel under Massachusetts Avenue was put off until next year.

Plans are underway to bring back next year as many of previous Boston winners as possible, with Morse saying he already has a commitment from 1982 winner Roberto Salazar. Bill Rodgers, who won in 1975, 1978, 1979 and 1980 but these days only runs shorter distances, says he'll make an exception for the 100th.

"I've got to do it," Rodgers said. "I was in Japan last week and met runners in retail stores, people who ran Boston last year or a few years ago. I said, 'Are you coming back this year?' They said they'll be back next year."

The enthusiasm is building across America, too. "The 100th is very much on runners' lips with everyone I speak to, much more than the 99th," said Allan Steinfeld, director of the New York City Marathon. "It'll be the granddaddy of all events, they want to be a part of it."

And all over New England runners are talking about and planning for next year's race, including many who hope to officially qualify by running this year's race within a time limit for their age group. Others who are sitting out the 99th and weren't sure they'd ever run another marathon plan to lace up again for the 100th.

Joe Gateley, who's trained for two previous Bostons with South Boston's L Street Running Club, said an injury kept him out of this year's run "but it's so much easier to get through by just focussing on the 100th, it just seems to be so much more important a race.

"The only thing I want to do for another marathon is next year's Boston," added the 41-year-old Gateley. "I don't want to run another one after that, I'll do just half marathons."

While some runners worry that 25,000 participants will make next year's race more party than road race, Burfoot said "most people don't care how fast they'll run once they get there, they just want to be there to be part of the happening."

Race organizers, however, insist that for the fleetest-of-feet who start up front, next year's race will be just like any other Boston. Only better, because they vow to improve the field even beyond the world-class one that's become their trademark.

That may not be easy next year, since most of America's best will be running Olympic qualifiers in Feburary (North Carolina for the men and South Carolina for women). But Jack Mahoney of John Hancock Financial Services, the major race sponsor, said

'Rudy' says more should follow their dreams

ABILENE (AP) — Former Notre Dame football walk-on Dan "Rudy" Ruettiger, now a motivational speaker, says more people need to follow through on their dreams.

Ruettiger, whose achievement of his college-football dream was profiled in the movie "Rudy," was in Abilene on Thursday to spread his message to an audience at Abilene Christian University's Moody Coliseum.

"You're no different than me," he said. "You know what's inside you? A dream. ... You can become anybody that you want to be. ...

"Too many of you ask, 'How much do I have to do?' which is a stupid question from a quitter. Do it until you've got it completed."

Ruettiger's biggest drawback was his small size and lack of talent. Still, he got by with dedication and hard work.

"There is no magic," Ruettiger said. "The formula is simple: Work hard, work long and work differently.

"It's not easy. It means you will face a struggle. The successful people in this world have gone through a lot of struggling to get where they are."

Hyundai's new Accent subcompacts come ashore with low prices

BY BOB PLUNKETT

SPECIAL TO THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM

The pre-production version of Hyundai's new sedan, sized in midget scale and tinted to resemble a sherbert flavor, awaited me on Broadway in downtown Portland. A map in the door pocket displayed the route to Tillamook, 77 miles to the west on Oregon's rugged coast.

Set both side mirrors, shove the short stick into first gear, crank up that teeny engine, plug my radar detector into the lighter's socket, and then we were off, this Accent and I, heading south on Broadway for six blocks before hooking right to catch the freeway leading west on Route 26 up a steep slope past Washington Park.

Traffic seemed heavy, despite the late morning hour, and I cut from one lane to another to expedite my rush out of town, passing everything on the road.

Distracted by all that traffic, I was well beyond the exit to Beaverton before realizing what I was actually maneuvering from lane to lane.

This was a wee little Hyundai, I reminded myself, and its pint-sized engine produced less than 100 horsepower.

So why was I able to move so assuredly down the road?

Good question.

I slowed to review the facts.

These new wheels I steered, wrapped in a cute little package with curvaceous corners and high wrap of window glass, contained Hyundai's new Alpha engine, a 4-in-line with aluminum cylinder heads, three valves in each cylinder and single cam on top, multi-point sequential electronic fuel injection and distributorless electronic ignition.

Output reaches only 92 hp at 5500 rpm, but there's juicy torque in lower gears and even some thrust remaining in fifth overdrive.

Of course, the whole package weights only 2,105 pounds

So that's part of the reason why this little thing feels so zippy: There's not much mass to consider, and what there is cuts through thin air with low resistance, thanks to aerodynamic streamlining of the exterior design and maximizing of torque quotient and gear ratios.

Rack and pinion steering produces a lively feeling to the wheel, and a new 4-wheel independent suspension system with MacPherson struts up front creates a nimble and surprisingly smooth-riding platform.

The front geometry of this new suspension works to reduce tendencies to dive and squat when accelerating and braking, and the addition of a front stabilizer bar helps control body roll from side to side.

As I wound between coastal peaks in a series of switchbacks later that day, another realization surfaced.

This little car is actually quite fun to drive.

That's not a statement I could make about Accent's predecessor, Excel. As Hyundai's first subcompact in this country, Excel charged into our market in the mid-1980s, fueled by a price tag that dipped below $5,000. Several years later, though, sales fell as word spread from buyers about their dissatisfaction because Excel proved to be merely what it proclaimed — a cheap set of wheels.

Eventually, Hyundai's marketeers realized that to compete in the United States, the company must not only provide inexpensive products but dependable ones too. Subsequent models like the subcompact Elantra sedan and sporty little Scoupe coupe addressed quality issues as the Hyundai brand earned new consumer confidence.

Now comes Accent to eradicate Excel with a new chassis that pushes wheels to the corners, the new engine with far more horsepower and torque than Accent's two closest competitors, a nice interior with room for up to five, plus safety systems which begin with dual airbags.

Accent will be offered as a 3-door hatchback in two trim levels, plus the 4-door sedan, with all models riding on the new chassis with a 94.5-inch wheelbase.

As I discovered, Accent feels peppy and is downright pleasant to drive, and it's a comfortable car too.

But here's the most important point: Hyundai has created a price structure for Accent's three models to position them below the price of rivals.

That makes Accent the lowest priced car in the country.

Measure it against others in this teeny class and Accent's bottom line undercuts by as much as $1,000.

Entry level begins with the Accent L 3-door hatchback, which from the outset is projected to capture the bulk of customers due to a low price and solid features.

The base Accent's amenities include full carpeting inside, front center console with cupholder, side window defoggers and electric rear window defroster, intermittent windshield wipers, front map pockets on the doors, reclining front bucket seats with adjustable headrests, passenger vanity mirror, folding rear seatback, and convenient lighting for the rear cargo bay.

Exterior styling lines for the 3-door Accent conceal the hatchback's lid in the shape of a slick little coupe.

Inside, legroom for front and rear seat riders measures as much as in the 4-door sedan's edition, and headroom in the front seat also stays the same.

A second hatchback, simply called Accent, adds perks like a digital quartz clock, remote release for rear decklid, exterior bodyside moldings and full wheel covers.

The single sedan edition, also labeled Accent, provides rear door child safety locks and roll-down rear windows.

A l-piece instrument panel has white-on-black gauges, with various warning lights showing mechanical functions.

Accent options begin with a new electronically- controlled 4-speed automatic transmission. The hatchback version I tested was equipped with this new shift system and seemed extremely quiet and efficient. That fourth overdrive gear is a rarity in such a small car.

Other options range from air conditioning to a choice of sound packages including one with compact disc player, tinted glass, a manually-tilting moonroof, plus power assistance added to rack and pinion steering.

A 4-wheel anti-lock brake system is also optional.

From every angle, Accent looks good, and it definitely feels good to drive. As the lowest priced car in the country, that's one sweet deal.

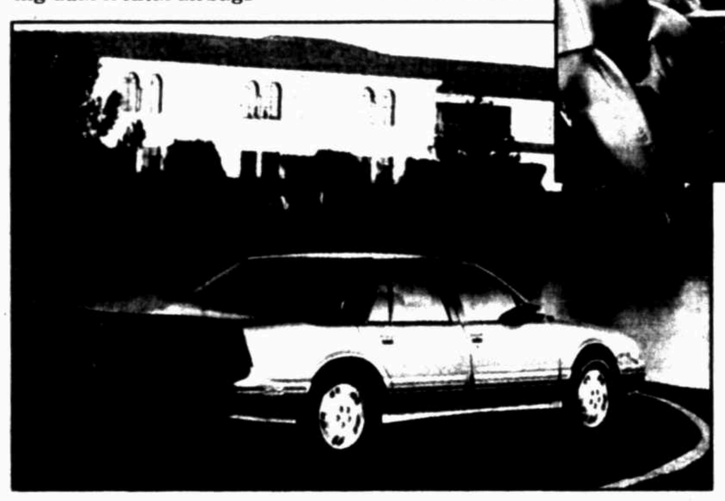
Hyundai's marketeers realized that to compete in the United States, the company must not only provide inexpensive products but dependable ones too.

Functional improvements make '95 Oldsmobile Cutlass "Supreme"

During the 1960s, car manufacturers compulsively freshened their cars every year with the latest breakthrough in front end design, taillamp design, or side sculpture. Those days are gone. Now customers are more interested in functional improvements such as more efficient powertrains or safer and more practical interior designs.

Acknowledging these dramatic changes in the marketplace, Oldsmobile presents the 1995 Cutlass Supreme lineup—familiar on the outside but thoroughly revamped on the inside, including dual frontal airbags



The Cutlass Supreme standard equipment list includes dual frontal air bags, power windows, automatic programmable power door locks, cruise control,16-inch aluminum wheels, CFC-free air conditioning, and an interlock device that enables shifting into gear only when the driver's foot is on the brake pedal.

The Cutlass Supreme Family

As before, this popular mid-size model is offered in three bodystyles—two-door coupe, four-door sedan, and convertible. However, in 1995 under Oldsmobile's simplified pricing strategy, the SL model will be available in two levels of standard equipment for the coupe and sedan while the convertible is available one way. A limited number of options will be offered on all models.

Two potent engines are available. The standard 1 60-horsepower, 3100 SFI V- 6 was reengineered last year and the optional 21 0-horsepower, 3.4-liter Twin Dual Cam V-6 provides high-revving four-valves-per-cylinder performance. A well- coordinated four-speed electronically-controlled automatic transaxle is standard on all Cutlass Supremes.

New Interior

The news inside is improved occupant protection as a result of added structure to exceed the federal government's dynamic side impact requirements on the sedan and an instrument panel that now houses an airbag for both the driver and the front passenger on all models. Comfortable lap and shoulder belts are anchored through the floor and B-pillar instead of to the door frame. The four-door Cutlass Supreme goes a step further by providing an adjustable-height guide loop for the front passengers' shoulder belts. A leather-wrapped steering wheel is standard and remote radio controls on the steering wheel are optional.

The functionally designed instrument panel places a cluster of four large, analog gauges within clear view of the driver and all controls within easy reach. HVAC and sound-system knobs are mounted on a central panel which is purposely high and angled toward the driver for convenience. Neatly integrated vent registers are large and adjustable. A roomy glove box is positioned in the usual location. All switchgear is ergonomically designed with a high quality tactile feel. An attractive option is a dual-zone automatic climate control system.

Two different sound systems allow Cutlass Supreme buyers to select electronic entertainment that's precisely right for their needs. Standard fare is AM/FM stereo cassette with electronic tuning. A cassette and CD player in the same unit is optional. Door-mounted extended-range speakers are included in every case.

Suspension Overhaul

With Oldsmobile's Centennial Plan for the future in mind, chassis engineers have thoroughly retuned the Cutlass Supreme's suspensions. The intention was to provide more responsive steering and reduce body roll while maintaining road isolation and overall ride quality. Spring rates, strut and shock absorber valving, and anti-roll bar sizes have all been optimized for each powertrain and body style combination to yield responsive, nimble handling and supple-feeling road manners.

In 1995, Cutlass Supreme models offer the following chassis systems and features:

• Electronic Variable Orifice (EVO) rack and pinion steering is new to the Cutlass. In response to vehicle speed, an electrical valve in the power steering pump controls fluid flow to provide the optimum feedback to the driver under all conditions. This approach reduces parking effort while providing excellent road feel at highway speeds..

• Coupe, sedans and convertibles with 3100 SFI V-6 engines offer quicker steering (15.7: 1 changed from 17.6: 1), 215/60 R-16 touring radial tires (225/60R16 Michelins on the convertible), rear anti-roll bars, and optional EVO steering.

• Cutlass Supremes with the optional 3.4-liter Twin Dual Cam V-6 engine will also have EVO steering standard, 14: 1 steering and 225/60 R-16 Michelin speed rated performance tires.

Other Improvements

A handy low oil sensor is provided in all Cutlass Supreme models.

Marketing Strategy

Mid-size car buyers have responded to Oldsmobile's simplified pricing marketing strategy with rabid enthusiasm. Over 90 percent of the Cutlass Supreme buyers purchased cars from this program (Special Edition models) during the 1994 model year through May, driving sales upward 23 percent. Using that tactic on all Cutlass Supremes in 1995 with their all new interiors, there'll be no stopping the mid- size model now.

Rate & Credit Policies
Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations
The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments
Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads
The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.
