Albright says Saddam can stop airstrikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said today that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein can stop threatened airstrikes against his country if he rescinds his decision to prohibit U.N. weapons inspections. "Reverse course or face the consequences," she warned.

She told a news conference she didn't see much room left for diplomacy.

"We all want a 'peaceful outcome," Albright said. But, speaking as the U.S. military buildup in the region intensified, she added: "One by one the diplomatic options have been rebuffed."

Albright suggested that only Saddam himself might be able to stop the strikes. "He needs to rescind publicly his decision" to bar cooperation with weapons inspectors, she told reporters at the State Department.

She spoke as more jet fighters, heavy bombers, ships and ground troops were on their way to the Persian Gulf region to augment a substantial force already there.

Baghdad has refused demands that it allow the resumption of weapons inspections, even though eight Arab nations on Thursday told Saddam not to look to them for help.

"It's up to him whether he chooses at long last what the world has asked him to do," she said. "We are prepared to act" if Saddam doesn't do a public turnabout.

"That is our position. No further warnings are needed," Albright said.

She said the goal of U.S. military strikes would be "to degrade his capacity to develop and deliver weapons of mass destruction and degrade his ability to threaten his neighbors."

Albright also said the United States would work more aggressively with opposition groups inside Iraq. "We would look forward to working with somebody else," she said, while not specifically commenting on whether Saddam himself was a target.

She disputed a report that the president had decided to cancel his planned nine-day trip to Asia, saying she planned to join him there over the weekend.

Albright said the president did not plan to get specific approval from Congress before striking Iraq, as some lawmakers have suggested. "We have the authority and we have consulted extensively with members of Congress," she said.

She noted that Russia, a past ally of Iraq on the U.N. Security Council, was also frustrated by Iraq's recent defiance.

Iraqi officials "are blaming everyone else but themselves for concealing what is going on or not allowing (the U.N. inspection commission) to do its work." That, she said, was "completely disingenuous and dishonest and despicable."

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz has said that U.N. chief Kofi Annan was "the best person" to try to ease the current crisis. But Annan says he has no plans to visit Baghdad as he did in February to resolve the last standoff with Saddam.

In addition to the United States, Britain also has threatened military action, and Prime Minister Tony Blair said today neither country could back down in the confrontation with Saddam.

Albright was flying later today to Malaysia, in advance of President Clinton, for talks with Asian officials at an economic conference.

On Thursday, an influential Senate Republican, Richard Lugar of Indiana, suggested the only way to stop Iraq from threatening its neighbors with weapons of mass destruction might be to kill Saddam.

Homecoming at Dunn Saturday

The homecoming began 50 years ago when soldier boys came home from World War II and it has grown into a community-wide event.

The homecoming is held every other year on the Saturday closest to Armistice Day (or Veterans Day).

Mrs. E.M. Ashley, chairman, said all past and present residents and friends are welcome to attend. She asks that everyone bring sandwiches for the 5 p.m. meal.

Tea, coffee, chips, cookies, and plates and napkins will be furnished.

Memorabilia may be brought for "show and tell (or tales)" of bygone days.

At 4 p.m., I.E. Martin will make a presentation recognizing soldiers who were killed during World War II.

Julia Fox said the event will last "until the last one gets tired and goes home."

Recognition will be given before the meal to the oldest attendant as well as to the youngest and to the person who comes the farthest.

"There will be visiting, visiting, visiting and laughing and giggling," Fox said.

Gingrich to complete his 2-year term

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outgoing House Speaker Newt Gingrich said today that he will serve out his current term before leaving office in January.

Gingrich, R-Ga., announced Nov. 6 that he would leave Congress in the wake of elections that whittled his party's House majority to six votes. But he did not specify when.

On his way to an orientation session for the House's incoming 40 freshmen this morning, Gingrich told a reporter that he would serve out his term. The 106th Congress will be sworn in Jan. 6.

Gingrich was easily re-elected to an 11th two-year term on Election Day. To replace him, Georgia's governor is expected to soon schedule a special election, which will probably be a nonpartisan race early next year. In such an election, all candidates are listed on the ballot without party identification, with the top two vote-getters meeting in a run-off if no candidate topped 50 percent.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Luck seems to favor the guy who needs it the least."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors: Jimmy Carr, in the Vernon Daily Record, said you might expect someone who writes for a publication known as "Skeptical Inquirer" to be a bit dubious about the traditional bad luck associated with Friday the 13th.

Author Henry Gordon, a Fellow of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, is almost brazen in his disregard for the unlucky day.

Gordon has taken his stand despite — or perhaps because of — his extensive research into the superstition associated with both the number 13 and with Fridays.

In a special report, Gordon wrote that the bad rap associated with Fridays can be traced to Adam and Eve, who supposedly fell from grace on a Friday.

Other cataclysmic scriptural occurrences associated with the day, according to Gordon, include the start of the Flood, the fall of the Temple of Solomon and the crucifixion of Christ.

The most commonly-referred to event involving the number 13 is also Biblically-based, Gordon notes. The Last Supper featured 13 men at the table. The 13th man was Judas Iscariot, who betrayed Jesus and later committed suicide — on a Friday.

Other traditions are associated with the number. Gordon says you will rarely see a 13th floor listed on an elevator or the number 13 on an airline schedule. Visit Paris and you will have difficulty finding a house with the 'unlucky' number on it.

If you are among those who still have an uneasy feeling about a Friday the 13th, you won't have to worry about another one until August, 1999.

But according to Gordon's research, Friday the 13th isn't as infrequent as one might think. Over a 400-year period, the 13th day of the month occurs most often on a Friday, some 688 times.

Ira trustees select auditor, amend budget

Ira ISD trustees approved Carol McDonald of Abilene to conduct the school district's audit for this school year, and amended the district's 1998-99 budget when it met Thursday night.

"Dollar-wise, the budget wasn't changed," said Ira Supt. Rick Howard. "Some accounting classifications were changed to reflect new Texas Education Agency standards."

The board delayed action on the purchase of property pending a current appraisal.

"Jose Juarez qualified for the state cross country meet this weekend, and Wesley Kellner did well in the Punt, Pass and Kick competition in Dallas," said Howard.

"It was good to recognize these kids and their achievements," said Howard.

Snyder board begins annual evaluation of superintendent

By Wade Warren
Managing Editor

Snyder ISD trustees took care of mostly routine items in Thursday evening's board meeting, but did meet for an hour in executive session to begin the annual evaluation of Supt. Gayle Lomax.

Board president Mark McCormick prefaced the executive session by stating he did not expect the evaluation to be concluded in the session due to the absence of two board members.

Luann Burleson and Janet Stribling were not present.

McCormick said this morning that the evaluation process normally extends over two or three meetings, and he expects the process to be completed when the board meets on Dec. 10.

In action items, the board approved Phyllis McGinnis, Sammie Jarrell, Jo Ashley and Julie Sentell as election judges for the Dec. 5 school bond election.

The trustees also approved Anita Felan as alternate presiding election judge to replace Francene Noah who will not be available to serve on election day.

The textbook committee for the 1998-99 school year was also approved.

Members are Jerry Worsham, Ronda Haire, Ben Reed, Troy Lilly, Marci Dennis, Judy Smallwood, Theresa Best, Lisa Hartzog, Linda Cozart, Aleta Long, Pam Hart, Samijane Webb, Stanley Cozart, Cyndee Gayle, Laurie Grinslade and Vickie Crawford.

In personnel matters, the board approved the contract of Katie Henson to teach journalism and English at the high school.

Trustees also approved the resignation of Betsy Griffin, psychology/sociology and U.S. history teacher, also at the high school.

In non-action items, the board reviewed several goals of the district which the trustees had first been presented in a workshop last September.

Also, school nurses Angel Duncan and Chris Bane presented a plaque to Nina Nesbit recognizing the late Dr. Jack Nesbit's work with the local school district in eye care for students.

Dakon Hollingsworth

Ira man wins Cowboy tickets

Dakon Hollingsworth of Ira was the lucky winner of two tickets to the Cowboy-Seattle football game in a contest sponsored by the Snyder Daily News.

The contest, matching clues with NFL team mascots, drew 205 entries, with 156 all correct. Hollingworth's entry was drawn from the group of perfect entries.

The Dallas Cowboys play the Seattle Seahawks Nov. 22 at Texas Stadium.

Arnett to return to CNN

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Arnett's long route back to the air on CNN took him through war-torn Algeria.

Four months after nearly losing his job in the fallout from the network's retracted story about nerve gas use in Vietnam, Arnett is due to return to television with six reports on Algeria's civil war.

"It was mutually agreed that we needed to let some time pass and find some appropriate stories for him to cover," CNN spokesman Steve Haworth told The Associated Press on Thursday.

The reports will be shown soon, Haworth said.

Arnett hasn't been on CNN since a follow-up report in June on Operation Tailwind. He narrated CNN's original Tailwind story in May that alleged the deadly gas sarin was used by U.S. forces in a 1970 mission to hunt down American defectors during the Vietnam War.

The story infuriated the military, and CNN concluded after an investigation that it could not be proved. Two producers who worked on the story were fired. A third quit.

Arnett successfully fought for his job after arguing his role in reporting the story was minimal.

Since then, CNN hasn't exactly rushed to put Arnett back on the air.

Arnett spent about a month working with lawyers preparing to defend CNN against slander cases related to Tailwind.

School fumes still a mystery

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Investigators are baffled over the source of noxious fumes that filled a high school classroom and hallway and sent at least 85 people to the hospital with nausea, headaches and dizziness.

Investigators searched Warren County High School on Thursday and found nothing. They said the air quality inside the vocational wing was better than the air outside.

"It's a mystery. We may never know," said Richard Myers, Warren County Emergency Management Agency director.

A student prank was the suspected cause of the fumes, variously described as reminiscent of paint thinner, bug spray or pepper spray. Someone also may have mixed two cleaning compounds and created the noxious odor, Myers said.

Hospital officials said no one appeared seriously ill. Patients were given oxygen, and blood samples were taken for testing but turned up nothing.

Students began getting sick Thursday morning near classrooms for commercial food preparation and an automotive body shop. All 2,000 students at the high school were sent home.

A stink bomb had been set off in the vocational area earlier this school year, and that may be what happened Thursday, Myers said.

The high school was to remain closed today.

Rodman sued

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A cocktail waitress claims Dennis Rodman jammed a $100 bill down her blouse and grabbed her breast.

According to the lawsuit, filed Tuesday, Rodman stuffed money and his hand down the front of her blouse and held on to her breast, then persisted despite her repeated protests.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The creation of an inspector general for the Police Department was considered one of the most important reforms made after the Rodney King beating.

Now the job is vacant, its first occupant forced to resign.

Katherine Mader's resignation, announced Tuesday and effective Jan. 1, renewed questions about the Police Commission's dedication to monitoring complaints against officers.

"Today we have a popular police chief, low crime rates and no major Rodney King type of incident," Ms. Mader said in Thursday's Los Angeles Times. "People feel secure and are less likely to be interested in learning that there are still problems in the disciplinary system."

Joe Gunn, head of the civilian commission, insisted Mader's bosses are not turning a blind eye to abuses. He said Thursday the board was unhappy with her performance and wanted to fire Ms. Mader, but she quit first.

Gunn, a former police commander, said Ms. Mader's report-writing and police officer evaluations were not always backed up by hard evidence. She also conducted one investigation without the commission's permission, he said, though he declined to provide specific cases.

Ms. Mader defended her performance. "I'm sorry that personality has been injected into this very important public policy issue," she said in today's Daily News of Los Angeles.

Creation of the inspector general's position was one of the most important reforms to come from the 1991 Christopher Commission report, written in the aftermath of the King beating, that found a pattern of police brutality within the LAPD.

The post was created to reassure the public that the LAPD would be held accountable for its actions and that wayward officers would be disciplined.

Attorney Deirdre Hill, a former police commission president, will serve as interim inspector general.

Browns hire security head

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Secret Service director is going from watching the Top Dog to keeping an eye on Big Dawg.

Lewis Merletti, the Secret Service director for the Clinton White House, is leaving his job in Washington to join the Cleveland Browns as the NFL expansion team's vice president and director of stadium and security affairs.

One of his duties will include monitoring the Dawg Pound, the Browns' notoriously rowdy, beer-drinking, biscuit-throwing fans, some of whom wore dog masks to games in the old Cleveland Stadium and who will have the same end-zone home in the team's new state-of-the-art stadium.

"The Dawg Pound I'm quite familiar with in that I do have one confession that I have to make: I grew up in Pittsburgh" Merletti said referring to the Browns' hated rival. "So I'm certainly aware of their tradition and I think it's great and it's the best there is in football."

Septuplets will observe first birthday

Never mind the 40 diapers a day, or the 15 loads of laundry each week, or the challenge of getting seven babies to go to bed at 7:30 each night and still have energy left for her husband and their older daughter.

"After having gone through this year, I can say I wouldn't change my decision now," said Mrs. McCaughey, who gave birth Nov. 19, 1997, to the world's first surviving set of septuplets. "We still would have carried all seven of them."

Kenneth Robert. Alexis May. Natalie Sue. Kelsey Ann. Brandon James. Nathan Roy. Joel Steven.

When the babies were born, Bobbi and Kenny McCaughey said their unswerving faith helped them make it through a dangerous pregnancy and into medical history.

Since the births, an army of volunteer helpers and corporate donations have helped with the worldly things. But Mrs. McCaughey said faith is still the foundation.

"God is our source of strength and that through him we can do all things," she said. "And you know, that includes getting the last baby to bed or getting up for the hundredth time during the night."

Doctors, friends and family held their collective breaths and watched to see if the babies not only would survive, but thrive.

"They know it could have turned out five babies or no babies or seven babies with problems and complications," said Robert Brown, pastor at the McCaugheys' church, the Missionary Baptist Church in Carlisle. "But it was deeply ingrained in their hearts: obedience to God and trusting in what God says. They are very thankful."

Thankful and busy.

Kenny McCaughey still works at a car dealership in Carlisle. But the couple now has an agent who handles interview requests and deals such as endorsements for power tools and sewing patterns. Pictures of the babies are handled by the Sygma agency.

"The majority of things that we have done were not necessarily things that we wanted to do, but more like we felt like we ought to do them," Mrs. McCaughey said in a telephone interview to promote the couple's new book, "Seven from Heaven." It will be released on the babies' first birthday.

Kenneth and Brandon have been crawling for a while and Kelsey started Wednesday. Kenneth, dubbed "Hercules" by nurses and doctors because he supported the weight of his brothers and sisters in Mrs. McCaughey's womb, is the only baby who can pull himself up into a standing position.

Mrs. McCaughey describes Kenneth as the adventurer, Kelsey and Brandon as "little comics" who are "hysterical to watch." Natalie and Nathan are very sensitive. Alexis is either happy or sad and Joel is the most affectionate.

"They are so cute." Kenny's mom, Kathryn Addleman, said. "And they all look different. That's what is so amazing to me."

Except for colds and ear infections — "their normal baby illnesses," Mrs. McCaughey said — their health has been good, although Natalie and Alexis still eat with the help of feeding tubes. Mrs. McCaughey said doctors cannot say when the tubes will come out.

On a typical day, the children are up at 7 a.m. and take three scheduled naps.

Confiding Secrets to Strangers Provides Safe Venting for Some

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1998 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This has always puzzled me. Why do people who are virtual strangers tell you their deepest secrets?

I was on a first date not long ago with "Phil." Before the evening was over, he'd told me about his father's attempted suicide, the fact that he hasn't spoken to his mother in more than 18 years, and his sister's many bad habits — all of which were described in detail.

On another occasion, the woman seated next to me at a seminar told me more than I ever wanted to know about her struggle with infertility. What gives?

OFFENDED
IN OTHELLO, WASH.

DEAR OFFENDED: Phil may have been talking to mask his first-date jitters. Many people use nervous chatter to hide their feelings. Or perhaps he mistook you for a sympathetic listener. You could have gently stopped his recitation by turning the conversation to another subject, or lightly suggesting that it wasn't necessary for you to learn everything about him in one night.

Some people confide in strangers because it's "safe." They are able to express their emotions and lighten their emotional burden without worrying about the other's reaction, or living with the consequences of what they have disclosed.

DEAR ABBY: I owe you a debt of gratitude. I'm a 20-year-old married college student. "Rick" and I married five months ago, and we live in Palo Alto, Calif. I love my in-laws dearly. They are kind and generous, but I do have one problem with them. They are so perfect they intimidate me.

They live in a lovely house that my husband's father keeps in good repair. The outside looks almost picture-perfect. "Jill," my mother-in-law, has made the interior look like a designer's pet project. She's a great cook, too. Neither of Rick's parents has every tried to make me feel inferior, but how could I ever measure up to their level?

Recently, Rick's father was sent to Oakland on business and decided to bring Jill with him. They asked to come to our apartment since they were in the area. I was scared out of my wits. However, among the gifts I received at my kitchen shower before my wedding were your two cookbooklets. I needed something that I, a novice at cooking, could prepare.

Abby, I chose my entire menu from your "More Favorite Recipes." Your tomato salad because it could be made the night before; your Sour Cream Chicken because I could assemble it early in the morning to cook just before their arrival, and the Heavenly Peanut Butter Pie. While I made the salad on Friday night, Rick made the pie. He also helped me with the chicken recipe on Saturday morning.

I'm happy to report that dinner was a great success. My in-laws were impressed. In fact, Jill said, "You've been hiding something from me — I had no idea you were such a talented cook." Rick's dad was equally complimentary and didn't have to be encouraged to take seconds.

Thank you, Abby, for helping me measure up to Rick's terrific parents. Sign me ...

GRATEFUL
IN PALO ALTO, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'm delighted that my recipes helped you dazzle your in-laws. (However, I suspect your secret weapon was Rick, the kitchen collaborator!) Next time you entertain, try my carrot cake, the sweet potato pie or the brownies. They're not lo-cal — but I predict there won't be any leftovers.

Below the line

By Phillip Alder

Rubber-bridge players know all about "below the line." That's where you score the trick points that lead to game bonuses. There is another line: the equator. And below that line we find two English-language magazines. The bigger is Australian Bridge. It appears bimonthly, containing 84 middling-sized pages. The larger page size permits more attractive layouts and the inclusion of photos. Most articles aim at the tournament player, but there is a fair amount for the improver.

Here is a declarer-play quiz from the magazine. You are in three no-trump. West leads a fourth-highest heart two. What would you do?

Declarer won the first trick, which is correct. (If West has led from king-fourth of hearts and wins a trick with the club ace, he won't know South has the singleton heart jack left.) Declarer continued with a club to dummy's king, and the club-jack to West's ace. The defenders took their three heart tricks. Then, West switched accurately to a spade. Declarer was in a predicament. He could gamble on the spade finesse or assume a 3-2 diamond split. Playing with the odds, South called for dummy's spade ace and tried to run the diamonds. Unlucky!

Of course, that wasn't unlucky. Before attacking clubs, declarer should have cashed two top diamonds just to check. If both opponents follow, South knows he doesn't need the spade finesse. But when the 4-1 break is revealed, declarer realizes that he needs two spade tricks for his contract. He doesn't have a choice.

Sweet potato cost may rise as crop yields fall

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Sweet potato producers in East Texas may not get to enjoy the profits they hoped for, with the crop yield falling to less than 30 percent of normal.

For consumers, this could mean higher prices and out-of-state potatoes in the supermarket, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

Because of extreme drought conditions and scorching temperatures, this year's sweet potatoes failed to develop. Extension horticulturist Marvin Baker said the poor potato yields will hurt producers as well as potato shed operators.

"This crop is so pitiful that people who have storage sheds are calling out of state to find sweet potatoes to fill their sheds," he said. "The root temperatures were just so hot, around 97 to 108 degrees, that they did not swell and bust out like they're supposed to."

Mississippi, Louisiana, North Carolina and California all harvested profitable sweet potato crops. Baker said that although there is not much difference in these out-of-state crops, East Texas sweet potatoes are known for their smooth skins.

"Texas-grown sweet potatoes always sell well because of the high quality of their skins" because of the sand they are grown in, Baker said. "It just so happens this year, though, that these same sands hurt the crop by not holding the water we did have."

Bulldogs, Coyotes run to state meet

For nine local runners, Saturday will the the pinnacle of their season.

Ira's Jose Juarez, Borden County's Trent Pepper and the entire Lady Coyote squad have advanced to the Class 1A state cross country meet at Old Settler's Park in Round Rock on Saturday.

"I am very pleased for Jose," said Ira coach Joee Gainer. "He's a great runner. He's had to overcome so many injuries this season just to compete, that it's a great tribute to him to be going."

Juarez finished sixth at the regional meet with a time of 17:41.53, while Pepper took the top spot with a time of 16:41.07.

Jose Juarez

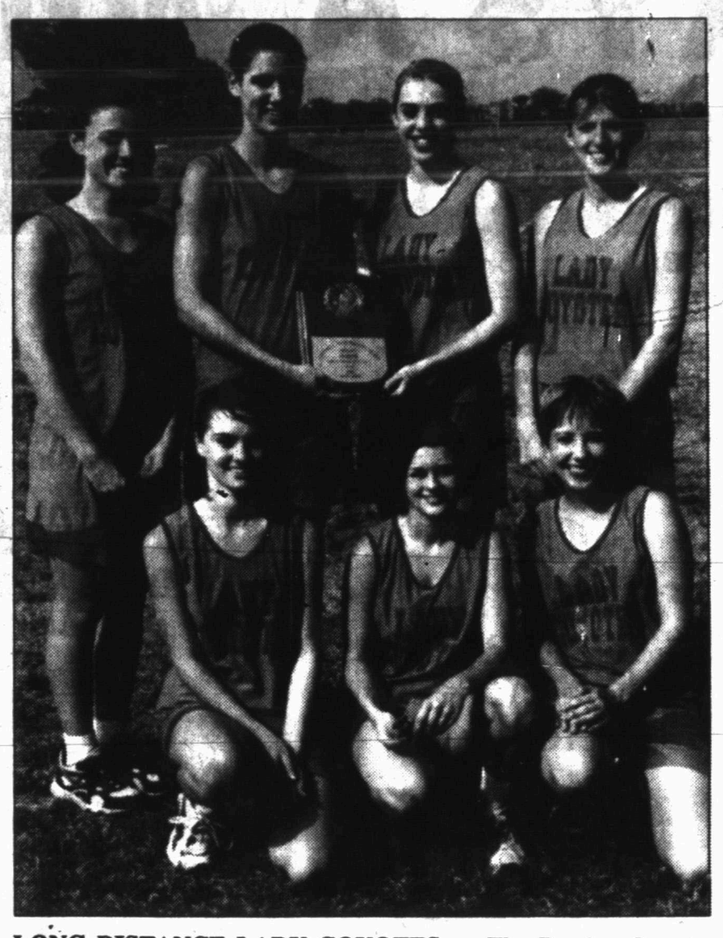

"It's really exciting and makes me nervous at the same time," said Juarez. "There's no way I could've made it this far without the support of my coach, teammates and my family."

Pepper, a sophomore transfer from Sabinal, will be making his second appearance at the state meet. The Coyote runner finished fourth last year as a freshman.

It will also be a return trip for the Lady Coyotes.

The Borden County girls placed ninth overall in '97.

Running for ther Lady Coyotes will be Lindsey Smith, Holly Thomas, Bekah Hensley, Julie Mayes, Crystal Dye, Valerie Wootan and Hailey Adcock.

Tech, UT desperate for victory

LUBBOCK (AP) — There are so many reasons both teams must win that you could almost lose count.

On the line for No. 18 Texas: a shot at the Big 12 South championship, Ricky Williams' second-to-last chance to break the NCAA rushing record and the Longhorns' bowl prospects.

Texas Tech needs the victory to boost recruiting for next year, snap a three-game losing streak, get into a top-notch bowl and overcome the reputation of not being able to beat ranked teams.

"This is a huge game for us for so many reasons," Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "Sometimes you just imagine there is a lot of pressure. This time, there IS a lot of pressure. This is a game that will give us something to talk about with kids next year when it's recruiting time."

Longhorns coach Mack Brown said Tech's three-game slide isn't representative of the Red Raiders' ability.

"Texas Tech is very fast. They have great team speed and quickness," Brown said. "I don't think they received the credit that they deserved when they were 6-0. They are a really good football team."

Much of the focus Saturday will be on Ricky Williams, who is only 204 yards behind Tony Dorsett's NCAA Division I-A career yardage record.

If Williams can break the record against Tech, he'll earn his place in history against one of the nation's top defenses. Only Missouri's Devin West has run for more than 100 yards in Tech's last 12 games.

Brown said the Red Raiders' defense could provide some problems.

"Montae Reagor may be the best defensive end in the country," Brown said. "He can dominate a game, especially as much as we throw the ball. He can be in the backfield ... and that will be a very difficult thing for us this weekend. He will be a player that we have to be totally aware of."

Reagor, who has six sacks this season and 17 tackles behind the line of scrimmage, leads a defense that has allowed only 40 of 136 third-down conversion attempts.

Texas Tech has a Ricky Williams of its own. The sophomore, dubbed "Little Ricky" by some, is fifth in the nation with 146.1 yards per game. He has carried 249 times for 1,315 yards and 11 touchdowns this year.

Tech's Williams says his Texas counterpart is the country's best back, but he doubts the Longhorn can carry for 200-plus yards.

"We're too tough of a team to give up that much," Williams said. "I don't think you'll see him break the record in our town. I think our defense will shut him down somewhat."

Come Saturday night...

Title picture could be much clearer

By The Associated Press

No. 1 Tennessee, No. 2 Kansas State and No. 3 UCLA face tough tests Saturday that they must pass to stay in the title chase.

Tennessee plays host to No. 10 Arkansas, Kansas State meets No. 11 Nebraska in Manhattan, Kan., and UCLA faces a dangerous Washington team on the road.

When the Volunteers (8-0) play the Razorbacks (8-0), it will be latest in the season that two undefeated SEC teams have met since 1971.

Although Kansas State (9-0) has lost 29 straight games to Nebraska (8-2), the Wildcats are 10-point favorites in Saturday's showdown.

Many are calling it the biggest game in Kansas State history.

"I don't know if that's necessarily the case, but it is certainly important and vital to us," coach Bill Snyder said.

Nebraska, which has won or shared three of the last four national titles, isn't used to being an underdog, especially against Kansas State.

"We haven't been in this position in a long time," fullback Joel Makovicka said. "In my career here, we've been the ones on top and people have always taken their bests shots at us."

UCLA (8-0), which has escaped with narrow victories the past two weeks over Stanford and Oregon, will have to play much better to win at Washington (5-4).

"There's a lot at stake," UCLA coach Bob Toledo said. "We're a team with a bull's eye on us."

UCLA has won 18 straight games, the longest streak in the nation, but the Bruins haven't won at Seattle since 1990.

"We're playing on the edge," Toledo said of his team's close calls the past two weeks. "If we're not careful, we could be pushed over the cliff."

In other Top 25 games Saturday, it's South Carolina at No. 4 Florida; No. 5 Florida State at Wake Forest; No. 13 Missouri at No. 6 Texas A&M; No. 7 Ohio State at Iowa; No. 8 Wisconsin at No. 15 Michigan; No. 9 Arizona at California; No. 12 Notre Dame at Navy; No. 14 Tulane at Army; No. 16 Virginia Tech at Syracuse; No. 17 Georgia at Auburn; No. 18 Texas at Texas Tech; Northwestern at No. 19 Penn State; Arizona State at No. 20 Oregon; North Carolina at No. 21 Virginia; No. 23 Air Force at No. 25 Wyomin and No. 24 Miami at Temple.

On Thursday night, No. 22 Georgia Tech beat Clemson 24-21.

With key first half buckets...

Garvin leads WTC to third straight win

WICHITA FALLS — If the Lady Dusters were to notch their third victory to open the season on Thursday, then they needed a spark.

Snyder's Erica Garvin was up to the challenge.

Garvin poured in eight points, including a pair of long-range buckets, in a five-minute span to push Western Texas into a lead it would never relinquish as the Lady Dusters knocked off Temple JC, 79-54.

The victory was WTC's first of two contests at the Texas JUCO Round-up. The Lady Dusters take on Kilgore at 2 p.m. Saturday.

WTC's unblemished record looked to be in jeopardy early on against Temple.

"We got off to another slow start," Lady Duster head coach Valery Jackson said. "Garvin was really the spark we needed to get going in the ballgame."

Temple opened with a 7-0 run and held onto the lead six minutes into the first half, until Garvin entered the contest.

The redshirt freshman drained a pair of three-pointers and connected on another basket in the paint, fueling a 31-19 WTC rally to finish the half.

Leading 42-30 entering the final 20 minutes of play, the Lady Dusters continued their pressure defense which offset a rather poor night of shooting.

"We didn't shoot the ball all that well," said Jackson. "But we still played hard and stayed after it. Our defensive pressure won us this game."

Following Saturday's contest with Kilgore, WTC travels to Cisco for an 8 p.m. tip-off on Monday.

Clinton basher's probe set

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A U.S. Marine reserve officer is being investigated for writing an article in which he accuses President Clinton of committing adultery and lying.

An inquiry has been ordered this week after the New Orleans-based Marine Forces Reserve learned of a Nov. 9 opinion piece in The Washington Times written by reserve Maj. Daniel J. Rabil, spokeswoman Maj. Paula Buckley said Thursday.

He is the third military officer to write disparaging comments about Clinton in a publication, and the second to be investigated.

Rabil, 34, joined the Marines in May 1986 and became a reserve officer in 1990. He is now attached to a unit based in Camp Pendleton, Calif.

"I'm a civilian and so I don't speak on behalf of the Marine Corps. It's a column I wrote on my own, as a civilian," Rabil said Thursday.

"It's not me against the Marine Corps and I don't want to paint this as a crusade I'm on to make the Marine Corps look bad. I love the Marine Corps," he said.

In his article, Rabil expressed indignation over Clinton's record in office, called for his impeachment and described the president as "a lying draft-dodger," who has "always had contempt for the American military."

"Bill Clinton has always been a moral coward," Rabil wrote. "To subject our services to such debased leadership is nothing less than the collective spit of the entire nation upon our faces."

Coping with schizophrenia

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife was diagnosed with schizophrenia. This is making me a nervous wreck, because — along with her uncontrollable and bizarre behavior — she has become fixated on finances: Everything she talks about relates to money. Her mother is like this, too. Is the disease inherited? Is lying a typical manifestation? What can I do to maintain my own sanity?

DEAR READER: Schizophrenia is a serious mental disorder characterized by extreme disorganization of thoughts and feelings, resulting in delusions, obsessions, lack of concentration, loss of touch with reality and inability to think or act normally. Although "schizophrenia" means "split personality," this description is inaccurate; despite popular belief, such "splits" are quite rare. No one knows the precise cause of the disease, although research suggests that both a biochemical factor and heredity may be involved. What is known is that schizophrenia is an illness that is not caused by outside events, even though it can be triggered or worsened by stress.

Schizophrenia can be helped by medicine administered under the supervision of a psychiatrist; psychotherapy is often useful. Hospitalization may be necessary if the patient cannot function, resists needed treatment, is a threat to self or others, or requires comprehensive care. Before being released from the hospital, patients enter a rehabilitation program that reacquaints them with everyday skills, tasks and pressures that they must face outside.

Spouses and relatives of schizophrenics can cope more satisfactorily with the disease by joining local support groups, in which members discuss problems, share their successes and offer emotional support and advice. To find a support group in your community, contact the National Self-help Clearinghouse, 33 W. 42nd Street, New York, NY 10036. You can also obtain information and recommendations from your wife's psychiatrist and area mental-health agency.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Mental and Emotional Illness." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My old physician retired and I had to call a young doctor for an appointment. His secretary told me his fee for the first visit, plus any needed tests. Does a doctor have the right to demand a flat fee before he even sees a patient?

DEAR READER: In my opinion, a doctor does not have the right to demand a fee in advance of a service. Unfortunately, many physicians — far too many, in my view — require an upfront payment. Although this is not considered unethical, I believe that patients are entitled to be billed later if they choose this option. Perhaps the secretary was merely trying to give you useful information, not intimidate you into a pre-payment. This way, you are forewarned; the doctor's charges would not come as such a shock.

New dinosaur species discovered in Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fish-eating monster with razor teeth, a long snout and foot-long curved claws has been identified as a fearsome new species of dinosaur that dominated a part of Africa some 100 million years ago.

In a study published today in the journal Science, a University of Chicago researcher said the previously unknown species was a 36-foot-long animal with the weapons and the strength to have intimidated even the famed Tyrannosaurus rex, the king of the North American dinosaur predators.

"It was an impressive-sized beast," paleontologist Paul Sereno said Thursday of the new species he has named Suchomimus tenerensis.

"If you were standing next to it, your eye level would be at its knee," the researcher said. "This animal was easily the size of Tyrannosaurus rex. And it was not fully grown."

Sereno said an adult Suchomimus would be 3 feet to 4 feet bigger.

Suchomimus apparently was a fish eater, said Sereno, but it could threaten virtually anything around it.

"With its forearms and its jaws, it would have been able to take down just about anything," Sereno said. "It was the dominant predator of its time."

The animal was generally shaped like the T. rex, with two large hind legs, a powerful tail, forearms and a toothy head, Sereno said.

But Suchomimus was a member of a group of animals called spinosaurids that lived in the lands that became Africa, Europe and South America between 90 million and 120 million years ago. At that time, T. rex was just emerging in North America. Three other spinosaurs have been found, but Suchomimus is unique, said Sereno.

The discovery "provides important new insights on the evolution and adaptation" of the spinosaur group of dinosaurs, Thomas R. Holtz Jr., a University of Maryland researcher, said in a Science commentary.

The fossil was found in Niger, a central African country on the southwestern edge of the Sahara. In the dinosaur era, the area "was a lush climate that could support many different species of dinosaurs," Sereno said.

The animal's most distinctive feature is its long, pointed jaw, armed with about 100 teeth. The end of the jaw is tipped with an extra chin-like projection, called a rosette, that actually contains the largest teeth. The top and bottom teeth mesh together to securely hook prey, a design common among fish-eating animals.

"The jaw is really very much like a crocodile's," Sereno said. "It was built for snaring and swallowing."

Suchomimus' teeth also are typical of fish-eating crocodiles, lightly curved and hooked and not designed for chewing.

The animal's thumbs were about 16 inches long and tipped with 12-inch claws curved like a sickle. The two fingers on each hand had shorter, curved claws.

"The hand is amazing," Sereno said. "It was probably ideal for fishing, for grabbing ... into those large fish."

It is not known how the newly discovered Suchomimus died, but it apparently was swept into a river, rolled over and over and then buried by soil. When found in extreme desert, wind had eroded the sands that had covered it for 100 million years.

Once-hidden IRS 'problem solvers' gain toll-free line

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once exceedingly difficult to reach, Internal Revenue Service employees who help taxpayers solve hard-to-fix problems now can be found through a single telephone call.

"The problem resolution office was a well-kept secret," Val Oveson, the new national IRS taxpayer advocate, said in an interview Thursday. "Not enough people were getting through. This new number will give people a direct pipeline to a place where they can get help."

The hot line number — 1-877-777-4778 — will appear prominently in this year's tax form instructions. It is among wholesale changes ordered by Congress to bring more independence and authority to the 80 taxpayer advocates and their problem resolution caseworkers around the country.

"We're trying to make it so that when you do business with the IRS, we're on your side, as long as you're trying to be cooperative and do a reasonable job of paying your taxes," IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti said in an interview this week.

Announcement of the hot line coincides with two related events Saturday: the second annual "Problem-Solving Day," when people can quickly resolve long-standing difficulties at 40 IRS offices around the country; and the first meeting in Miami of a citizen advocacy panel that will recommend ways to improve the service.

The IRS has had a problem resolution program and taxpayer advocates since 1977, but they were frequently difficult to reach in the multilayered IRS bureaucracy and had limited authority to intervene in disputes.

Phil Brand, a former IRS compliance chief now with the KPMG Peat Marwick accounting firm, said that under the old system, only taxpayers facing severe hardship — loss of a home, seizure of bank accounts — could obtain services of an IRS advocate or problem caseworker.

The IRS reform law passed by Congress this year lowered that threshold, gave advocates broader authority to intervene and ensured their independence from colleagues in the tax compliance and enforcement divisions.

"The advocate now has authority to intervene in situations where all of us would say that's not right even if it may be legal," Brand said.

Army ups college fund to $50,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The maximum education benefits available under the under the Army College Fund and the Montgomery G.I. Bill are rising from $40,000 to $50,000, the Army announced.

The change is immediate.

The Army also has decided to provide a $3,000 sign-up bonus to every qualified applicant who reports to training by May 1999. In the past, the bonus was available only to those who signed up for certain targeted jobs.

Those targeted bonuses of up to $12,000 for a four-year-or-more enlistment will remain in effect, the Army said Thursday.

"The Army has been concerned for some time that education entitlements from the military service are lagging behind the private sector. We must remain competitive," said Maj. Gen. Timothy Maude, the Army's director of military personnel management.

Hurricane recovery will be hard work

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — In Honduras and Nicaragua, where more than 9,000 died in the fury of Hurricane Mitch, ordinary citizens are picking up shovels and taking on the task of building a new life from the depths of ruin.

This week's promises of foreign aid and debt relief from around the globe were welcomed. But the real work was being done by residents and aid workers out shoveling mud, removing debris, distributing food and disposing of the dead.

In a radio broadcast Thursday, Honduran President Carlos Flores Facusse called on his countrymen to "redouble your efforts and your work to rebuild the country as rapidly as possible."

"The time has come for us to jointly face the apocalyptic reality of our villages and cities ... and try to create a Honduras that is renewed, vigorous, modern and better," Flores Facusse said.

In the northern Honduran town of La Mesa, U.S. soldiers planned to help open a key road buried by the hurricane. But U.S. Army Capt. Mike Slocum in La Mesa told The Associated Press that the situation in Iraq has slowed the delivery of equipment and aid to Central America.

The Pentagon press office, contacted late Thursday, could not comment on that suggestion. The United States on Wednesday ordered more warships headed to the Persian Gulf to ready for a possible attack on Iraq.

The U.S. government has announced $80 million in emergency aid to Central America. Yet in a region where U.S. influence in local politics is taken for granted, many Central Americans have criticized the United States for not doing more to help.

Frustration at the slow pace of relief efforts was felt everywhere, with blocked roads meaning blocked food, less medicine and more despair.

Hurricane Mitch hit hardest in Honduras and Nicaragua, the two poorest countries in the Western Hemisphere after Haiti. Flooding and mudslides destroyed so many roads and bridges that entire communities might still be cut off from food, medicine and water.

Thursday in Nicaragua, a local Catholic bishop, Rev. Bosco Vivas Robelo, made a public plea for information about communities where aid has not yet arrived.

In the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa, law students dug with shovels Thursday alongside roaring earth-moving equipment, trying to rid the city of thick layers of mud left by Mitch.

"I had never seen my country like this," said Hector Duran, an engineering student standing in 2-feet-deep mud. "I did not realize the damage was so bad. If we all make an effort, we will come out ahead."

The Rome-base U.N. World Food Program announced it would distribute more than 100,000 tons of rice, corn, fish and oil over the next six months in the hurricane-hit countries.

Palestinians protest Israel's plan to pave W. Bank roads

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has authorized the paving of 13 roads to Jewish settlements in the West Bank, including one that will require the expropriation of huge tracts of land owned by Palestinians.

The Palestinians sharply protested the decision, which Israel confirmed today.

"Such actions create an atmosphere that will not be encouraging for the peace process and is a direct provocation to the Palestinians," said Nabil Amr, an adviser to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

There is no mention of bypass roads in the Mideast peace agreement struck last month at the Wye summit in Maryland. Palestinian negotiator Hassan Asfour said that while the Palestinians had expected that some roads would be built, they were taken aback by the large number of projects authorized.

The Palestinians consider the paving of those roads a unilateral Israeli act, especially since they involve seizing Palestinian-owned lands.

As part of the land-for-security agreement, Israel is to gradually withdraw from an additional 13 percent of the West Bank by the end of January. The pullback will turn several Jewish settlements into isolated enclaves in Palestinian-controlled areas and Israel has said it needs to pave new roads to ensure safe passage to all settlers.

U.S. officials were critical of Israel's decision, which came as U.S. Mideast envoy Dennis Ross was en route to the region to oversee implementation of the deal.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and senior Cabinet ministers authorized the paving of bypass roads Thursday, although initial reports were unclear on how many and which projects had been approved.

Netanyahu adviser David Barlian said today that in all, 13 roads would be paved, including one that will stretch from near the West Bank town of Hebron and past the Palestinian refugee camp of Al Aroub to Jerusalem.

Space station...

Russians withdraw request to change orbital position

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Russian space officials have withdrawn a last-minute request to change the orbital position of the international space station, which would have placed the new outpost closer to Mir.

The decision, reached this week and announced today by NASA, followed "frank and candid" discussions by both sides, said Randy Brinkley, space station program manager.

"The conclusions were mutual. There was not a heavy-handed U.S. Both sides concluded that it did not make sense," Brinkley said at a space station news briefing this morning.

NASA officials were stunned when Russia's prime contractor proposed last week — just 2½ weeks before the launch of the first station part — that the orbital position be changed to put the station considerably closer to the 12-year-old Mir. That would have allowed the cash-strapped Russians to haul a few thousand pounds of scientific equipment from Mir over to the new station, Brinkley said.

Delaying the Nov. 20 launch of the first station component by the requested 10 hours would have forced similar shifts in the succeeding assembly missions, and possibly resulted in unfavorable sun angles on the station.

"That added technical complexity and risk to the mission that was not justified," Brinkley said.

As it stands now, a Russian rocket will lift off with the first station component — a Russian-built, U.S.-financed propulsion and power tug — a week from today as planned from Kazakstan.

Space shuttle Endeavour will follow with the second part, a connecting passageway called Unity, in the predawn hours of Dec. 3.

The third component — Russia's oft-delayed service module — is now targeted for a mid-1999 liftoff.

Americans bought cars and clothes in October buying

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a hopeful sign for holiday sales, Americans spent briskly on cars and clothing in October, shrugging off the plunging stock market at home and economic turmoil overseas.

Retail sales rose 1 percent to a seasonally adjusted $227 billion last month, the Commerce Department said today. It was the biggest increase in five months.

"What consumers are saying — 'We're feeling less confident' — is not yet reflected in what they do," said economist Ian Shepherdson of High Frequency Economics in Valhalla, N.Y.

Though the sales number was supported by a 2.6 percent surge in auto purchases, the largest in 15 months, all broad categories of goods managed at least modest gains and most did better. Excluding autos, sales rose 0.5 percent.

It could be a sign that Christmas sales might not be as weak as some analysts feared.

The Labor Department said today that prices charged by factories, farms and other producers increased 0.2 percent in October, reflecting the first increase in energy costs in five months. Core prices, excluding the volatile food and energy components, rose a mild 0.1 percent.

For the first 10 months of this year, producer prices declined at a 0.5 percent annual rate, compared with a drop of 1.2 percent for all of 1997.

For Brazil...

IMF announces approval of long-expected rescue effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund today announced approval of a long-expected $42 billion rescue package for Brazil designed to stop global financial turmoil from spreading to Latin America.

"The Brazilian authorities and an IMF team have successfully concluded negotiations on a strong three-year program of economic and financial reform," said IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus.

Camdessus said that as part of the agreement, Brazil committed itself to reducing its $65 billion budget deficit.

"The way is now open for the international community to provide financial support to Brazil that will enhance market confidence in the government's economic policies and help ensure the success of the country's program," Camdessus said.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said the package offered "a solid basis for restored confidence and renewed growth." As part of the package, the United States will provide up to $5 billion in short-term funding.

Rubin said the Clinton administration's decision to participate "reflects our commitment to strengthen the international financial system, guard against financial market contagion, and protect America's economic interests."

Camdessus said more than $41 billion would be available to Brazil over the next three years with $37 billion ready if needed in the next three months. Camdessus said that as part of the package the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank would provide $4.5 billion each.

He said Brazil also would obtain funds from a large number of industrial countries in North America, Europe and Asia totaling about $14.5 billion. That includes the $5 billion from the United States. Rubin said 19 other countries are expected to contribute the rest.

The IMF is expected to contribute between $15 billion and $18 billion to support Brazilian President Fernando Henrique Cardoso's austerity plan of tax increases and spending cuts aimed at saving $23.5 billion so he can avert a devaluation of the country's currency, the real.

A devaluation could set off an economic meltdown in Latin America and worsen turmoil in other world markets including the United States.

While the IMF's estimated share was known since early last month, the amount contributed by the United States and other wealthy nations was the subject of lengthy talks in Washington and Switzerland.

The U.S. contribution will come from a Treasury Department fund originally established to protect the dollar. The United States used the fund to help Mexico in 1995 and South Korea and Indonesia last year.
