FDIC, investors suing over FNB building

By ED TODD
Staff Writer
and JULIE FAUBEL
Business/Energy Writer

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and seven Midland-Odessa oil men are asking a federal court to settle a dispute over the 24-story downtown First National Bank building.

The building now houses RepublicBank First National Midland, which assumed FNB's deposits after the bank failed Oct. 14.

On Wednesday, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., liquidator of the $1.2 billion in assets of defunct FNB, filed suit in federal court to recover what it says is $25 million now due by default on notes made by seven Midland and Odessa oil operators who in December 1982 agreed to purchase the bank building for $75 million. At that juncture, the bank was sorely in need of capital.

Those seven oil men are partners in Eagle Properties Ltd., which agreed to purchase the building.

THE FDIC SAYS the seven partners are in default, says that interest on the note was due on Dec. 31, and is seeking a foreclosure of the lien on the bank building. At time of the takeover, FNB was indebted to the Federal Reserve Bank by $664 million.

The Eagle partners contend they they are not in default since, they claim, the bank "committed fraud" on Eagle by representing the bank was "in sound financial condition when in fact it was in an extremely serious financial condition" at time of the sale. Eagle says any fraud would make its $25 million notes unenforceable.

Further, Eagle, which promptly filed a countersuit, says the additional $50 million is not due until December 1985. Eagle claims it is the "victim" and not the "culprit."

"THEY (FDIC) LOVE their reputation for being merciless," Eagle attorney Seagal V. Wheatley of San Antonio said late Wednesday, soon after he had filed Eagle's counterclaim.

Wheatley said FDIC's suit to recover the $25 million formerly due to FNB was "very unwarranted and without any basis. The FDIC in all good conscience overstepped their bounds."

Even at time of the sale almost 14 months ago, FDIC "knew that the bank was going to go under," Wheatley said. He said it "certainly was culpable on FDIC's part." FDIC, which now holds the note, "knew how bad the bank was," and if the seven Midland-Odessa investors had been advised of that, they "would not have participated" in buying the building.

"We put in over $1.2 billion into the community," said Don McKinley, an FDIC attorney. "This lawsuit is an effort to recover part of the monies we put into the transition. Everytime they (Eagle) ask for an extension (on the note), we gave it to them. It's our job to come to the rescue of a community when a bank fails. That's not merciless."

THOMAS R. PROCOPIO, FDIC liquidator in charge of FNB, said the suit was filed because Eagle was in default of a second mortgage note which the FDIC holds.

In an effort to work out a settlement, the due date was extended, said McKinley. When no settlement was reached, the FDIC sent a demand letter to Eagle's directors and shareholders informing them the FDIC was calling in the note.

A source close to the FDIC said the FDIC had offered to settle with Eagle for about $18 million; however, the company's directors never responded to the offer.

Reagan rebuts challenger, critics

■Shelling continues; Lebanese react to pull-back — Page 2A

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says critics who suggest he isn't running the country — and Democratic challenger Walter F. Mondale in particular — "don't know what they're talking about."

At his 22nd presidential news conference Wednesday night, Reagan acknowledged that "things don't look bright" in Lebanon but said his decision to pull the Marines out of Beirut did not constitute a failure of leadership.

Rather, he said, it was an attempt "to make the right decision."

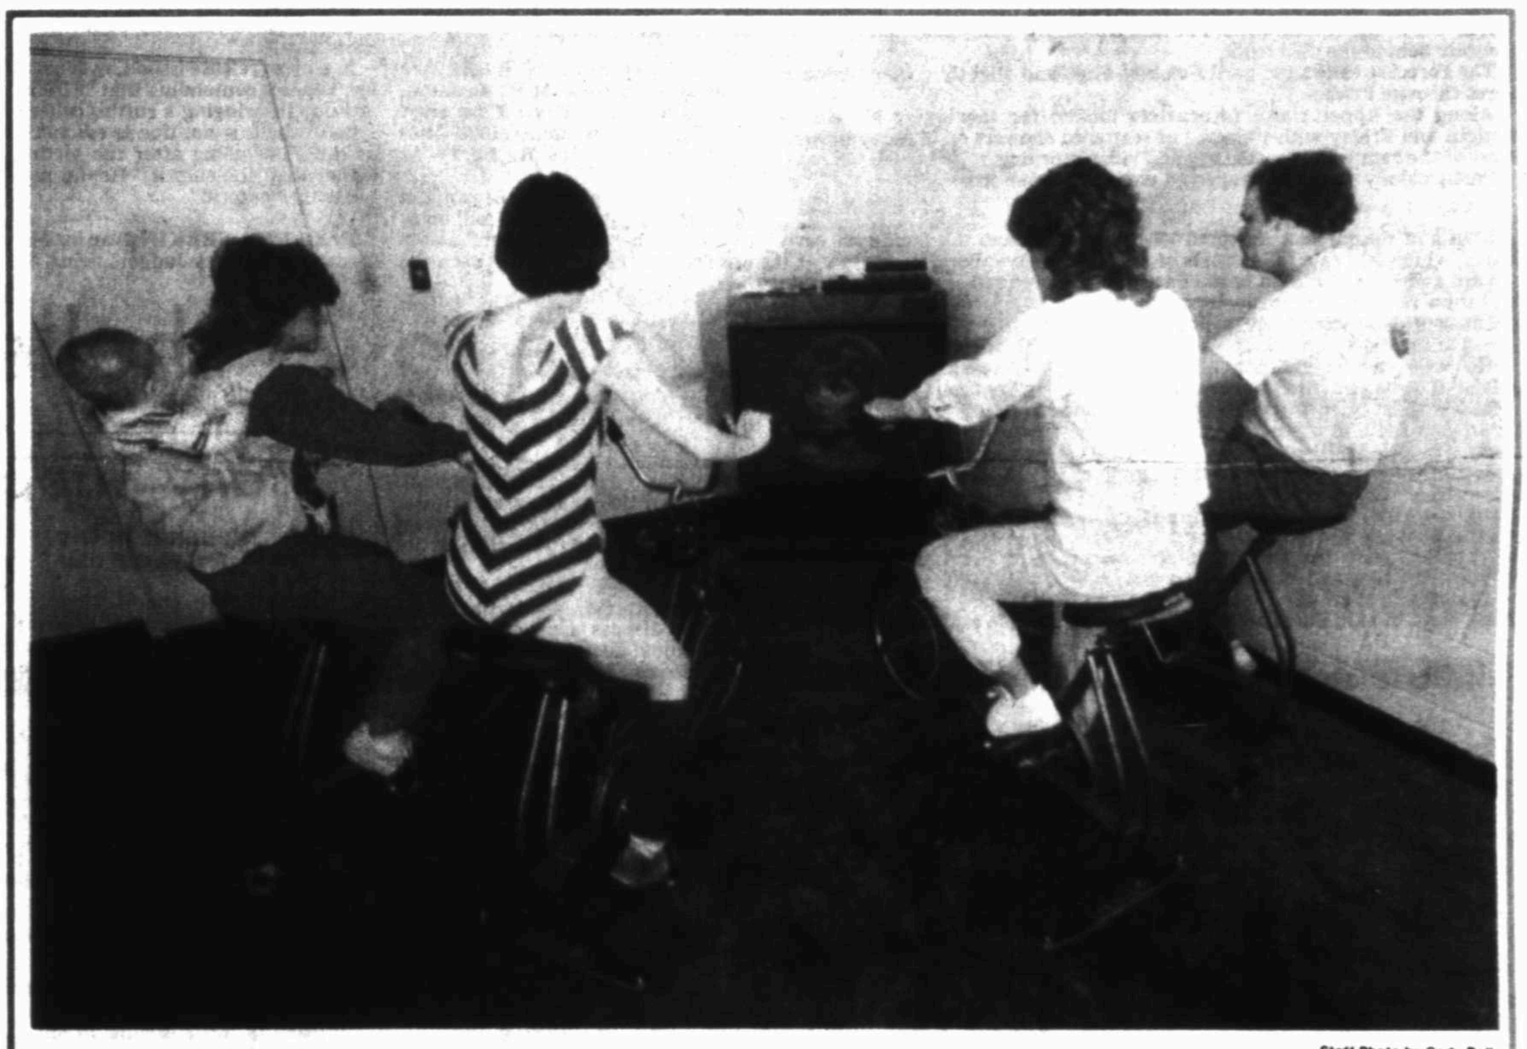

Reagan rankled when a reporter told him critics are saying his apparent indecision about redeployment of the Marines and his desire for consensus among his advisers raise questions about whether he is "really running things (as) a full-time president."

"My answer to them is they don't know what they're talking about," Reagan said. "I have never gone upstairs from that office once that I have not carried an entire evening full of homework with me."

The half-hour question-and-answer session was dominated by Lebanon and Reagan's style of leadership. The president defended his decision to withdraw the Marines months after the devastating bombing of their Beirut airport headquarters, saying: "I don't think you can say we have lost as yet ... We are not bugging out: we are just going into a little more defensible position."

Reagan also defended his style of leadership. Rather than insist on a consensus, he said, "I want people around me who are independent minded. I want to hear all sides of everything."

'Bubble boy's' try for freedom fails

■David's life, death make medical history — Page 2A

HOUSTON (AP) — David, the 12-year-old "bubble boy" who remained bright and cheerful through a life of isolation, is dead only 15 days after leaving his sterile environment — the victim of a failed attempt to free him for a normal life.

The longest-surviving victim of a rare condition that robbed him of immunity to disease, David died Wednesday night of heart failure in his room at Texas Children's Hospital, officials said.

The end came just over two weeks after the joyous moment when David stepped out of his bubble for the first time, kissed his mother and felt the loving warmth of a human touch.

"When David died, everybody in the hospital felt it. There were tears all around. All of the family cried. A lot of the nurses cried and even some tough police officers cried," said Houston police Officer Bradley L. Mills.

His family, whose last name has never been released to protect their privacy, left an hour later without comment.

"They seemed limp and exhausted," Mills said.

David's family has requested that the funeral be private, the hospital said.

One gift brings park fourth of way to finish

From Staff Reports

With one gift, the downtown park project is a quarter of the way to reaching its $1 million goal.

During a Midland Chamber of Commerce board meeting Wednesday afternoon, the $250,000 donation from an anonymous donor was announced by Midland Jaycees President Kelly Fish.

The Jaycees developed the plan for Centennial Plaza as a way to leave a lasting mark on the community that could be of benefit to all citizens. The half block next to Midland Center and the Chamber of Commerce building will be turned into Centennial Plaza. Plans call for the park to be completed by Summer 1985 in conjunction with the city's centennial celebration.

"When you try to raise $1 million, it not only takes a large donation but small ones as well," said Randle Lee, Chamber of Commerce assistant manager of economic development.

"I think it's a good project and it makes use of land that presently is not used," Lee, also a Jaycee, said. "This shows that if there is a worthwhile project for Midland, we always seem to find the support we need, not only with chamber projects, but city-wide."

While the size of the substantial first donation was "a pleasant surprise," Lee stressed smaller contributions also will benefit the project. "Every little bit helps," he said.

The park will feature a waterfall that will tumble over concrete columns and flow into a holding pond. On one side of the waterfall, the water will fall in sheets down a wall, forming a backdrop for the amphitheater. Terraced seating interspersed with trees will stretch in rows in front of the semi-circular theater.

The north end of the park is designed for people who want to eat lunch in the park. Areas will be set aside for vendors. And the park will be accessible for handicapped persons.

The park was designed by architect Walter Pate and will blend in with the designs of Midland Center and the chamber building.

"It will add to the quality of life we're able to sell to people outside of Midland," Lee said.

Penn searchers have few clues

By MORT YOUNG
Hearst Feature Service

PENN STATION, N.Y. — He's not shooting them for the money. The sniper suspected in seven shootings here has something else on his mind.

The police assigned to the task force don't know why the Penn Station sniper shoots people. They don't know what he looks like. They don't know who he hunts.

They think the sniper is male; someone saw a man running away after a Amtrak railroad engineer was shot close-up in the face at 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Today, a police task force is flooding Penn Station with 14 city plainclothesmen and six uniformed officers, supported by an unannounced number of guards assigned by the railroads serving the station. Most of the plainclothes officers look like commuters. They wear suits, carry newspapers and they sweat.

The street people here haven't been frightened off by the sniper, although two of the sniper's targets were homeless women, bag ladies. They had the bad luck to be sitting at the window of the Women's Shelter near the station. Both were wounded with 25-caliber bullets.

So were three other victims. Police say ballistics tests indicate all five slugs came from the same gun. "Other" evidence suggests that a sixth victim also was shot with that gun, although the ballistics test failed to make a match.

The latest victim is Richard Russo, 29, of Lynbrook, N.Y. The gunman came up close behind Russo, who started to turn when he hard a sound as he walked along a deserted stretch of Track 21. The slug caught him behind the right eye and continued into his brain. The eye is gone, the brain damaged. Doctors are trying to preserve the sight in his left eye.

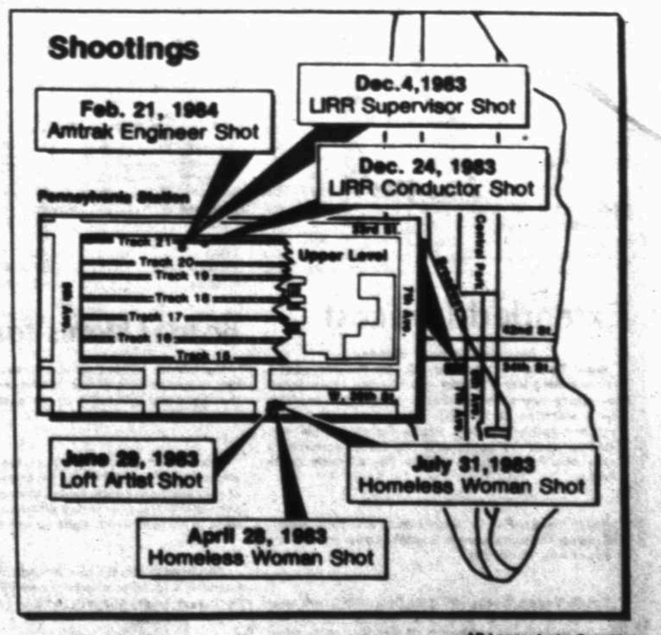

The first victim, Nicholas Riccadi, was killed on July 25, 1982, police say, although the weapon seems to have been a 38-caliber weapon. The 45-year-old Amtrak powerhouse worker was shot at close range, in the face.

Two other victims were railroad workers and another was an artist, shot in his loft a block from here. The artist, the homeless women, and Riccadi were shot within yards of each other along W. 30th Street, between April 1982 and last summer. The three railroad men — two last December and Russo — were shot down near Track 21, on the opposite, north side of the station.

A police officer, ostentatious in his dark blue uniform, said he didn't know who to look for.

A plainclothesman in a plaid suit shrugged. "Who'm I looking for? We have no eye witnesses. We have no descriptions. We're looking," he said. "I don't want to pass the buck, but ask the lieutenant."

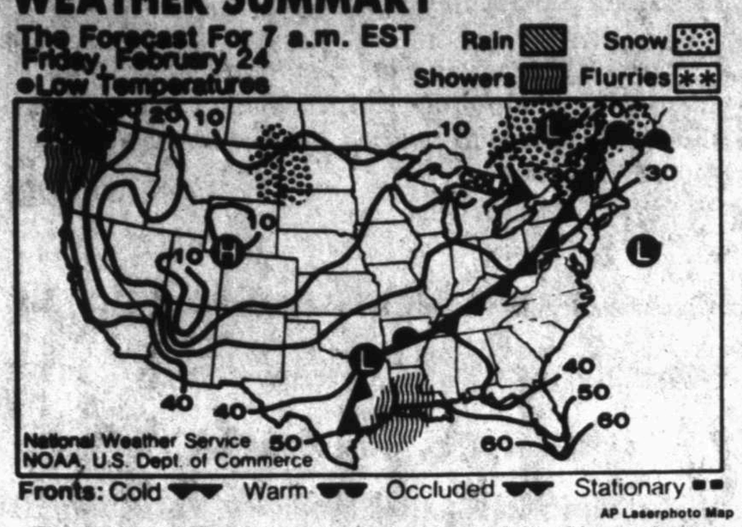

The hunters don't know what to look for. The sniper is perfectly camouflaged. He looks like everyone else.

Ballistics tests indicate at least six sniper shootings at New York's Penn Station involved the same gun.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts clear skies and warm weather for most of the country through Friday. Snow is expected in the northern Plains and from the St. Lawrence Valley to northern Maine. Showers are likely for the coastal areas of the Pacific Northwesr and the western Gulf.

Cooler temperatures, clear skies forecast for Midland

Clearing skies and cooler temperatures are in the forecast for the Permian Basin, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The low tonight should dip into the lower 30s while the high on Friday is expected to reach into the middle 60s.

Winds will be northerly at 5-10 mph tonight, increasing to 10-15 mph Friday.

Wednesday's high of 73 was 13 degrees cooler than the record high set for that date of 86 in 1977. The overnight low of 44 missed the record low of 14, set in 1966, by 30 degrees.

STATE

A cold front moved into the Panhandle before dawn today, but forecasters expected little change in the Texas weather picture.

The front marked the return of high clouds to the Panhandle and western sections of the state. Otherwise, clear skies were the rule over Texas.

Some fog developed before dawn in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s, but the mercury dipped into the 30s over the Panhandle and the Big Bend. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 32 at Sanderson to 52 at McAllen and Laredo.

Light and variable winds were reported over East and South Texas. Southwesterly winds at 10 to 15 mph were noted over western portions of North Texas and the Edwards Plateau. Northerly winds near 15 mph were the rule behind the cold front.

The forecast called for partly cloudy skies and slightly cooler temperatures through Friday.

Along the upper coast, forecasters looked for increasing cloudiness tonight and Friday with a chance of scattered showers or thundershowers. Most of the rain was expected to end Friday morning.

Partly cloudy skies were expected along the lower coast.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms, some heavy, swept across the Southeast early today, while light rain fell in parts of the Tennessee Valley.

Rain and snow persisted in the Pacific Northwest and scattered light rain and snow fell through the northern Plains.

The southwest states, central and southern Plains, Ohio Valley and Northeast had fair skies, with temperatures in the 20s, 30s and 40s. Readings were in the 50s in the desert Southwest, 60s and low 70s across the Florida peninsula, and teens and 20s in the central and northern Rockies.

Rain was expected to spread across the northern Pacific coast later today, turning to snow in the northern Plateau and the northern Rockies. Light snow was to move through the upper Great Lakes region, while rain was expected to linger over the middle Atlantic coast states.

Sunshine was predicted for the South.

Highs temperatures were expected to be in the 30s and 40s over the northern states, 50s across the central Plains, mid-Atlantic coast and much of the Northeast, 60s and 70s in the southeastern third of the country, Tennessee Valley and desert Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 8 degrees in Elko, Nev., to 74 in Fort Lauderdale, Homestead and West Palm Beach, Fla.

David's death a 'calculated risk'

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A bone marrow transplant for David, the "bubble boy" who lacked immunity from disease, was a calculated risk that could have freed him from his sterile plastic environment.

Doctors, his family and David himself decided to take the gamble on his chance for freedom — and lost.

David died Wednesday night, his body battered by illnesses resulting from the transplant.

During the final hours, David acknowledged that he was extremely ill and that death might be imminent, his doctor, William Shearer, said today at a news conference.

"He said that we had all these tubes and all these tests and 'I'm getting tired. Why don't we just pull out all of these tubes and let me go home,'" Shearer quoted his young patient saying.

David's death was his most important contribution to medicine, Shearer aid.

"It has taught us there is an important connection between the immune system and the development of cancer or abnormal growth of cells," Shearer said. "David's death was as unique as his life was."

David apparently died of a proliferation of a type of lymphocyte — an "abnormal growth" of B-cells — not from graft vs. host disease as had been believed, Shearer said.

He was suffering from ulcers in his stomach and throughout his intestine which restricted blood flow, causing blood vessels to become irritated.

"There were hundreds of them," Shearer said.

One result was the collection of fluids in places like the heart and lungs.

The doctor had to stop in mid-sentence a number of times and seemed to be trying to control his emotions, particularly when reporters asked questions about his own relationship with David, whom he described as a "happy boy."

AP Laserphoto

David, shown celebrating his 12th birthday, died Wednesday.

David "made it easy for his doctors," Shearer said.

The discovery of the growth of B-cells, made after Shearer performed an autopsy, is "an unusual finding and of great medical significance," he said.

"I believe the principle diagnosis was not graft-vs.-host but this abnormal proliferation of B lymphocytes," he said.

He explained that B lymphocytes secrete immunoglobulins, a substance important in producing antibodies. Doctors had previously believed David's system was attacked by mature T-cells, a lymphocyte responsible for the control of malignancies and viral infections.

Shearer said the proliferation of the B-cells probably resulted from the October bone marrow transplant made in hopes of stimulating the boy's long dormant immune system.

"This technique has worked" in other cases, Dr. Joel Rappaport, clinical director of the bone marrow transplant program at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, said after learning of David's death. "It's not going to work 100 percent of the time."

For David, the illnesses that killed him were the only ones he ever suffered.

David was born with severe combined immune deficiency, a rare inherited condition in which the body is unable to produce the lymphocyte cells that fight disease.

Rappaport said the disease is very rare, perhaps afflicting 50 people a year in the United States. David's plastic bubble allowed him to become, at the age of 12, the longest living survivor of the syndrome.

The disease forced him to live all but his last two weeks inside a germ-free clear vinyl bubble, constructed with technology developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to protect the Earth from bacteria that might have been brought back from the moon.

Doctors first hoped to correct David's condition with a bone marrow transplant from a family member with a matching tissue type. But neither parent nor his sister matched, and the chance of finding a matching donor among the general population was 64,000 to 1. Doctors used a computer to scan for a match in a search that continued fruitlessly almost to the end.

The bone marrow treatment has been used six times, three successfully, Rappaport said.

"I think this technique is still a very applicable technique," he said.

David wanted to be among those fortunate few.

FNB building subject of federal suits

"I think that the people who sign a legal obligation on the second mortgage should be responsible and pay the note, if capable, when due and not try to get out of their legal obligations," said Procopio.

The partners of Eagle are Thomas C. Brown, M.W. Branum, Gene Sledge, J.L. Davis, Clint Hurt and Carl F. Lawrence, all of Midland, and Charles R. Perry of Odessa.

As general partners, Brown and Branum contributed $2.65 million in capital at the time the partnership was formed. As limited partners, the two men contributed more than $3.97 million in captial. The other limited partners each contributed $2.65 million in capital when the partnership was formed.

In negotiating with FDIC, Wheatley said "We (Eagle's partners) can't seem to talk any sense into them, frankly."

In a press release issued by Wheatley, Eagle is contending that "FDIC's attitude in bringing a suit to collect a note which is not due is evidence of the FDIC going after the victim rather than the culprit." He did not name the "culprit."

EAGLE IS SEEKING an order from U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton that the FDIC-held notes are unenforceable and for dismissal of FDIC's suit.

In the meantime, Eagle's San Antonio attorneys said they have issued subpoenas to FDIC and U.S. Comptroller of the Currency officials to subpoena federal government files "to determine the extent of knowledge of the FDIC concerning the fraud committed by" FNB in representing its financial condition when FDIC and the Comptroller were supervising the bank.

Testimony is to be taken on March 20 in Washington, D.C., Dallas and Midland.

In its countersuit, Eagle says that FNB "victimized" Eagle "through one of the most significant frauds in banking history."

Eagles says the 1890-founded FNB in December 1982 represented the fair-market value of the bank building was "not less than $75 million." But in June 1983, the seven partners "discovered" that the value of the building "was actually not more than $49 million." Eagle partners allege that "fact" was known to the bank at time of the December 1982 sale.

The FNB building was constructed as an eight-story edifice in 1939, and was enlarged and remodeled in the 1950s. An additional 16 stories were added to the building in the late 1970s.

Druse town shelled by Lebanese

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets attacked suspected guerrilla bases in the Syrian-controlled mountains east of Beirut today, and Druse insurgents said a town in the area was shelled by Lebanese army artillery.

In Beirut, President Amin Gemeyal summoned his Christian allies to discuss a peace proposal which would allocate more power to the Druse and Shiite Moslem opposition. One key element of the proposal reportedly would scrap the May 17 agreement providing for withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

The Israeli air raid was the third this week and the sixth this year. The military command in Tel Aviv said jets attacked Palestinian guerrilla bases in the Bhamdoun area, including a staging post and headquarters.

It said an artillery position outside the town of Mansouriyeh also was attacked before the warplanes returned to base safely.

The Druse radio station, Voice of the Mountains, claimed the air raid coincided with an artillery barrage on Bhamdoun by the Lebanese army.

At Beirut's airport, U.S. Marines today finished reloading heavy equipment and prepared for the final withdrawal from their bunkers to 6th Fleet ships offshore.

"The normal phased redeployment is in progress," said Marine Capt. Keith Oliver, a spokesman for the U.S. contingent of the multinational force. "Line companies are in the process of breaking camp."

Support troops withdrew Tuesday, but Oliver gave no indication how long it would take the line companies to complete their pullout. The Marines have been deliberately vague on details of the operation for security reasons.

"We're on schedule or ahead of schedule for everything we've been told to do," said logistics officer Charles Rinehart. He said the 1,300 shore-based Marines were carrying out the pullback at a "prudent, professional pace," but could be out of the airport base in 48 hours if they were in a hurry.

President Reagan said Wednesday night that the pullout did not signal an end to the Marines' mission.

Many happy to see U.S. Marines go

By STEPHEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The U.S. Marines are leaving behind embittered enemies and disillusioned old friends among the Lebanese, who in general are happy to see them go.

Italian troops, on the other hand, will be missed at the Palestinian refugee camps where they stood guard.

Seventeen months after entering Lebanon to support President Amin Gemayel's government and protect the Palestinians, the multinational force is breaking up, and there has been no outery from the people of Beirut.

The minuscule British force left first, followed by the Italians, and the Marines are now in the process of withdrawing to ships offshore. That leaves only the French, deployed along the Green Line dividing Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Pro-government Christians and Moslems feel the force never had the military muscle to play an effective role.

Anti-government Moslems and Druse remain angry that the Americans took the side of Gemayel's government and bombarded leftist areas.

There is outright hostility toward the Marines in Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp and Hay el-Selloum, a poor Shiite Moslem neighborhood on the outskirts of the Marine zone which is plastered with posters of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini.

"They'd better go home before we murder them," said Bilal el-Ameli, 17, a Shiite refugee from the southern city of Tyre. "The day will come when we shall kill the Americans. We are not afraid of anyone but God."

"At the beginning, they did no harm to anyone," said Suad Rahhal, 37, also from Tyre. "But at the end, they left no eye without tears and they made us pull our children from the rubble of our homes. The (U.S. battleship) New Jersey was hitting us. We used to like them. The children who loved them and spent hours with them now despise them."

"May God speed the wheels of their departure," said Wahibeh Briteh, 40, a Shiite refugee from the eastern city of Baalbek.

The Italians were less controversial in their narrowly defined role of policing the Palestinian refugee camps south of Beirut where hundreds of people were massacred in September 1982.

In Chatilla refugee camp, about 200 people have been sleeping in the basement of a school since the Italains left earlier this week, and many others fled to homes of relatives because they feared the return of the Christian militiamen who committed the 1982 massacres.

The residents of Chatilla had only good things to say about the Italians. Issam al-Katib, 30, a hospital laboratory director, said some of the Italians had girlfriends and many taught children in the camps to speak Italian.

"The people became attached to these Italians," said al-Katib. "It was more than security. It's like a family member leaving — because they didn't enter the conflict, they were neutral militarily speaking."

"The Italians were very nice," said Nayef Mostafa Ramadan, 44, a shoe store owner. "They provided us with a hospital, medicine, and they did patrols day and night, in the rain and in the sun. Everyone regrets their departure."

"I don't see their mission as being over yet," he said at a news conference. "We're not bugging out. We're just going into a little more defensible position."

The Marine base was not affected by shelling duels overnight between rival Moslem and Christian militia gunners in Beirut and in the Druse-controlled hills east of the capital. Police said 15 civilians were killed and 58 wounded.

The fighting subsided by daybreak, and Moslem units of the Lebanese army began policing west Beirut after Shiite Moslem and Druse militiamen gave up their checkpoints. The militias seized contol of the Moslem half of the capital four weeks ago.

The quiet transfer followed a decision by Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite's Amal militia, that national police and army forces based in west Beirut should assume security duties, the state radio said.

The army's 6th brigade and units from other brigades refused to fight against Druse and Shiites when they drove Christian units of the army from the Moslem sector Feb. 6.

The 6th brigade, made up of about 1,500 troops, took control of the airport, the airport highway and checkpoints at southern approaches to the city.

On the diplomatic front, Gemayel and his foreign minister, Elie Salem, met during the night with Saudi mediator Rafik Hariri at the presidential palace on the latest proposals for ending the conflict, palace sources said.

Gemayel was reported ready to scrap the May 17 agreement with Israel, as demanded by Syria and its Lebanese Moslem and Druse allies, government sources said. But several Christian leaders warned they would withdraw their support for Gemayel, a Maronite Christian, if the pact were abrogated.

Gemayel scheduled a meeting with Christian leaders today, and palace sources said he president hopes to convince them to go along with the Saudi plan.

The plan calls for reconciliation talks in Switzerland among leaders of Lebanon's rival factions to draft reforms that would give Moslems an equal share of power with Christians, the source added.

Reagan explains decision on Lebanon

As he has often said in the past, Reagan likes to run his government "like a board of directors." But he explained Wednesday night, "The only difference between a board of directors, then, and our Cabinet meetings is when it comes time for decision, we don't take a vote.

"The decision is mine, and I make it on the basis of the information that I have heard," Reagan said.

As a result of such discussions, he suggested, "I probably have a better store of information on the issues confronting us than a president normally has."

Following up the same line of questioning, ABC White House correspondent Sam Donaldson told Reagan that Mondale, the Democratic front-runner for the nomination to challenge Reagan, "says you're intellectually lazy and you're forgetful — so forgetful that he says you're providing leadership by amnesia."

Mondale, in his campaigning in New Hampshire, has said voters "won't stand for government by staff, policy by default, management by alibi and leadership by amnesia."

Reagan first sought to brush off the criticism from his opponent, saying, "I'm surprised he knew what the word meant. I haven't any comment to make at that."

But pressed further about whether such personal attacks are fair comment, Reagan said Mondale "doesn't know what he's talking about."

Reagan also returned fire at what he called "the sniping that takes place at so-called vacations."

"I have to tell you, presidents, I've learned, don't take vacations," he said. "They just get a change of scenery."

Since taking office three years ago, Reagan has spent 175 days in California, including 132 at his mountaintop ranch.

On other issues, Reagan dismissed as "disgraceful" speculation that he might welcome the resignation of Secretary of State George P. Shultz because of the failure of U.S. attempts to settle the Lebanese crisis.

Shultz, he said, "has not failed. I hope he doesn't have any thoughts about leaving us at this point."

Lucas leads officers to spot body found

LIVINGSTON (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas picked the picture of a murder victim from a photo lineup that included seven other young women, then led authorities to almost the exact spot where her body was discovered more than six years ago, Polk County Sheriff Ted Everitt said.

"It was close enough that we're sure what he was telling us was the truth," Everitt said Wednesday in an interview with Livingston radio station KETX. "There's no doubt in our mind that the case is cleared and that the grand jury will hand down an indictment."

Lucas, a 47-year-old handyman who claims to have killed more than 150 people, also led authorities to the precise spot that officers found a boy's head in a plastic bag in 1980, Everitt said. The location was more than 25 miles from where the woman's body was discovered, he said.

Lucas "seemed to have an extremely good memory" Wednesday as he talked freely about the murder of Stephanie Lee Smith, who was abducted from a New Orleans school in 1977, Everitt said.

Lucas, who has been convicted in two Texas murders, told investigators that he and a traveling companion, Ottis Elwood Toole, killed the girl, Everitt said.

Toole, who traveled about the country with Lucas, is jailed in Florida on an arson charge.

After picking Ms. Smith from a photo lineup, Lucas directed the officers to a site off a dirt road near Corrigan, 16 miles north of Livingston, where her body was found in 1977, Everitt said.

Everitt said that when Lucas was asked if he knew anything about a boy's head that had been found in the county in 1980, "he said he and Toole abducted a boy and girl near Houston, and that Toole cut the boy's head off and threw it out."

Lucas took investigators to the same road the head was found on — old U.S. 190 near Blanchard, 12 miles west of Livingston, the sheriff said.

Everitt said Lucas told officers that he grabbed the girl and Toole grabbed the boy outside a convenience store in east Houston.

"At one point, the girl got away and he (Lucas) shot her, he said. He found her hiding under a park bench and shot her. He did not know about the boy. Toole got him, and Toole was the one that cut the boy's head off," Everitt said.

Car retrieved from reservior with three skeletal remains

BAYTOWN (AP) — On June 22, 1980, Isadore Roussell, 38, went to take pictures at a class reunion. Veri Fontenot, 20, attended a wedding reception. Tommie Earvin, 19, left his house without saying where he was going.

The three, who knew each other, were never seen alive again.

Roussell and Fontenot lived in Barrett Station, a small predominantly black community on the north outskirts of Baytown, and Earvin lived in McNair, another black community nearby.

But Roussell's 1974 Oldsmobile Cutlass was pulled two weeks ago from a reservoir on the north edge of Baytown, and the skeletal remains of three people found inside were confirmed Wednesday as those of the three men who disappeared almost four years ago.

Baytown Police Chief Wayne Henscey said the Harris County medical examiner's office found no signs of trauma, such as broken bones or bullet holes, that would indicate foul play was involved in the deaths.

Fishing gear was found in the car, and Henscey said his officers believe the men probably were fishing from the car and drowned when the vehicle ran off the steep levee that surrounds the three-acre reservoir and plunged into the water.

The vehicle's top became visible when officials lowered the water table of the holding reservoir of the Baytown Area Water Authority, Henscey said.

Roussell's wife and Fontenot's mother, Alice Isaac, disagree with Henscey's theory.

Driver rams car through fence, strikes children

HOUSTON (AP) — Three children were injured, one critically, when a man rammed a car through a fence onto a schoolyard striking the youngsters as they walked.

Ngeth Prom, 57, was charged with three counts of injury to a child and remained in jail in lieu of $20,000 bond following the incident Wednesday.

Two of the children were flown to Hermann Hospital via Lifeflight helicopter. Jennifer Taylor was listed in critical condition and her schoolmate, Patricia Sung, was in stable condition.

The third child, Kikko Hinderstein, 11, was treated and released from a hospital with minor abrasions.

Patricia suffered a fractured collarbone and pelvis.

Inmates kill, hold victim's wife hostage

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Police set up roadblocks across northeast Tennessee today in an intensified search for two escaped convicts who allegedly killed a retired businessman, abducted his wife and vowed before freeing her that they won't be taken alive.

Gov. Lamar Alexander offered a $10,000 reward Wednesday for James Clegg and Ronald Freeman, who were among five inmates who escaped at gunpoint from a work detail at Fort Pillow State Prison on Saturday.

Two of the five have been recaptured, and another is being sought near the prison in western Tennessee.

The Tennessee Highway Patrol set up about two dozen roadblocks from Knoxville north to the Virginia line, and today FBI agents and county sheriffs were joining more than 100 troopers and three eight-man tactical squads already combing the area, said Billy Jones, assistant commissioner of the state Safety Department.

Authorities say Clegg, serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal, and Freeman, serving 198 years for murdering his wife and stepdaughter, walked out of the woods near a Brownsville farm Tuesday evening and killed Paul M. Windrow Sr., who was grilling steaks in his back yard.

Windrow, 59, a retired tire store owner, was shot when he pulled a .45-caliber pistol he was carrying because he had heard the fugitives might be in the area, authorities said.

Elizabeth Windrow, 55, told detectives she was in the house and did not see the shooting. The convicts took her hostage and, after letting her be with her husband briefly, forced her to accompany them on a five-hour drive across the state in her own car.

The convicts pulled into a rest area on Interstate 40 about 15 miles east of Knoxville after dawn Wednesday, told Mrs. Windrow to lie on the floor and and drove away in another car. Unhurt, she drove to Knoxville and called police.

She told detectives the convicts had stopped several times between Brownsville and Knoxville to make telephone calls, which detectives were trying to trace. Carson said the two apparently arranged for someone to leave a car at the rest area.

Clegg, 30, was sentenced to life in prison in 1981 as a habitual criminal whose convictions included six burglaries, forgery, grand larceny and receipt of stolen property, authorities said.

Reagan's military solutions criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., the feisty new chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, believes that Ronald Reagan and other recent presidents have been wrong to use American military power as the chief tool for achieving U.S. diplomatic goals.

"We have not figured out a way to respond to the use of military force by communists around the world," Fascell said.

In Vietnam, Lebanon and other trouble spots, he said, "We have simply answered with our own military forces. We just can't keep doing that."

While the Soviet Union feels free to impose its military will on Afghanistan and other nations, Fascell said, "That's their style. I don't know why it has to be our style. We should be using moral persuasion."

The 67-year-old Fascell is taking over the Democratically-controlled committee at the start of an election year, amid continued uneasiness among Reagan's critics over U.S. policies in the Middle East and Central America.

A short, aggressive fireplug of a man who has been in the House for 30 years, Fascell is replacing mild-mannered Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., who died of a heart attack late last year.

Republicans and liberal Democrats on the committee agree that Fascell will feel free to challenge Reagan, but be able to forge compromises with the administration even in an election year.

"He will be much more aggressive and assertive (than Zablocki)," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., one of the most conservative members of the House.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., a committee member who is far more critical of Reagan's policy in Lebanon and El Salvador than Fascell, said "He has a great capacity to pull people together. He will be much more of an activist."

Fascell represents a congressional district in and around Miami where there is a large population of Cubans, many of whom are militantly anti-communist.

Over the years, Fascell's voting record has reflected those views especially on issues relating to the regime of Fidel Castro, and liberal attempts to cut off or limit U.S. aid to El Salvador and the guerrillas battling the leftist government in Nicaragua.

But Fascell says unequivocally he would oppose the introduction of U.S. troops anywhere in Central America, for whatever reason.

"I just don't see it," he said. "I don't think the American people will support it. I don't think Congress will support it. I don't support it."

But he is equally skeptical about the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, and recent announcements by its leaders of plans for democratic reforms, including elections.

In El Salvador, Fascell said the peasants have demonstrated that they do not want the country taken over by communist guerrillas.

Asbestos standards to be reconsidered

WASHINGTON (AP) — At the urging of two unions, the Environmental Protection Agency is taking a second look at whether school districts should be required to reduce asbestos contamination in school buildings.

The EPA on Wednesday granted a petition from the Service Employees International Union, which asked the federal agency to draw up rules determining when asbestos-containing materials in schools are hazardous and to set up requirements for correcting the problem.

Earlier Wednesday, the National Education Association also asked the EPA to make school districts do something about asbestos in their buildings.

The nation's largest teachers' union will ask its local affiliates to seek measures against asbestos in their contracts with school boards, NEA president Mary Futrell told a news conference.

About 15 percent or 14,000 of the nation's schools contain asbestos health hazards, Ms. Futrell estimated, citing a Department of Education report. Some 3 million students and 648,000 teachers and other employees are at risk, she said.

The "EPA is in full agreement with the goals of the petition and intends to insure that human health is protected to the fullest extent possible where asbestos is concerned," EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus said in a statement. The agency is seeking public comment and will hold a public hearing on the petition.

Inmate indicted in scheme run from penitentiary

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A convicted felon has been charged with defrauding a national brokerage firm of $14,000 while he was serving time at the federal penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kan.

A federal grand jury on Wednesday indicted Johnnie Ray Johnson of Atlanta on charges of mail fraud and wire fraud in connection with the alleged scheme against Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis Inc.

The scheme, which allegedly ran between August and October, involved the impersonation of bank officers and the use of fictitious names, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger Bernstein.

Authorities charge that Johnson telephoned the Denver office of Paine, Webber to open a stock trading account under the fictitious name of Jodith Swayze.

He told the brokerage firm he would transfer $29,000 to Paine, Webber's Denver bank by wire to open the account, authorities said.

A woman named Judith Swayze lived at the address Johnson provided, Bernstein said. Ms. Swayze was not charged in the case.

A few days later, Johnson impersonated a bank officer in a second call to Paine, Webber and said a $29,000 wire transfer from Jodith Swayze had been received at the firm's Denver bank, Bernstein said.

Later that day, Johnson again called Paine, Webber as Jodith Swayze and asked the firm to wire $14,000 from the Swayze stock trading account to a bank account at City Federal Savings and Loan Association in New Brunswick in the name of Judith Swayze, Bernstein said.

Unaware that no funds had been received by its bank in Denver, the brokerage firm wired the $14,000, which later was withdrawn for Johnson by an individual who was not named, Bernstein said.

Deficit talks reopening amid partisan exchanges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and the Reagan administration are reopening talks on cutting $100 billion from the federal deficit amid sharp partisan exchanges and doubts over how much could be achieved.

President Reagan, while urging bargainers to "get down to business" in his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, also called Capitol Hill Democrats "born again budget balancers" who once favored red-ink spending.

With a counter shot, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., accused Reagan of "trying to play politics" with the deficit issue and "political fraud."

Reagan said he takes a dim view of defense cuts and tax increases while House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he wanted the talks to explore a plan to "stretch out" major components of the Pentagon budget over five years to save $278 billion.

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., said the Senate Finance Committee he chairs already has agreed to a plan to reduce deficits by about $42 billion over three years. About half would come from tax increases chiefly affecting business and investors and the rest from tightening Medicare and Medicaid reimbursements and curbs on welfare eligibility.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, Secretary of State George Shultz told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the administration would work with Congress on ways to impress on El Salvador that it must improve its human rights record to continue to receive U.S. military aid. But he opposed the idea of making military aid conditional on a finding by Congress that the Salvadorans were making sufficient progress toward reform.

Shultz said that in El Salvador, "an end to death squad activities and construction of a judicial system providing a rule of law are essential ingredients..."

The Foreign Relations Committee, ignoring protests by conservative religious groups, approved 9-1 William A. Wilson as the first U.S. ambassador to the Vatican.

Reagan urged the Democratic-controlled House to "stop dragging its feet and to act promptly" on the legislation that he said would end "the era of coddling criminals."

O'Neill told reporters he wanted "to get a crime package on the floor."

The Republican-controlled Senate, which has spent most of its time so far this year on crime bills, pushed on to another such measure that would allow federal prosecution and mandatory 15-year sentences for career burglars and robbers who use firearms.

In other Capitol Hill developments:

-Petitions signed by more than 1 million people opposed to decontrol of natural gas prices were presented to Congress along with a call for action to lower homeowners' gas bills. Gathered by more than 300 citizen and labor groups in 30 states, they were presented in huge stacks in the Caucus Room of the Cannon House Office Building by the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, the umbrella group that directed local organizations.

—Several public television stations asked Congress to authorize a three-year experiment involving the limited airing of commercials. They said shortages of funds left them no choice. Other public broadcasting officials and the commercial broadcasting industry opposed the plan.

Hope fades for climber

TALKEETNA, Alaska (AP) — The hunt for Japanese climber Naomi Uemura will continue even though hope is fast fading that the 44-year-old adventurer is still alive somewhere on the cloud-shrouded peak of Mount McKinley, rangers say.

"We will continue to search as weather allows because of his past, proven, exceptional survival skills," Bob Gerhard, a mountaineering ranger in Denali National Park, said Wednesday.

Uemura was last heard from Feb. 13 with a radioed report that he had reached the 20,320-foot summit the night before, and a pilot reported that he may have seen him a week ago, on Feb. 16.

Whether or not Uemura emerges alive, Gerhard and mountaineering guide Brian Okonek said they believed he would be credited with the first solo winter conquest of North America's highest peak.

"He certainly will," said Gerhard, a veteran climber with McKinley experience. "There's no doubt whatsoever. There were sightings of him near the summit."

Searchers were frustrated Wednesday by the second straight day of snow and clouds on McKinley. If the bad weather broke today, search planes were to scour the mountain again.

Uemura in 1970 became the first known climber to ascend the peak alone. This time he set out Feb. 1 from a base camp at the 7,200-foot level, carrying about 17 days' worth of food and fuel as he started for the peak, where winter temperatures drop to 40 below zero and storms create 150 mph winds. He had been due back at the base camp Feb. 15.

Climbers Jim Wickwire of Seattle and Eiho Otani of Tokyo were continuing the ground search from the 14,300-foot level, the point at which they were dropped off and where Uemura had traded his snowshoes for crampons to climb a nearly vertical wall of almost 2,000 feet.

Rangers on Wednesday made radio contact with Wickwire for the first time in two days. He said he and Otani were in good condition and adjusting to the altitude, but that they had found no trace of Uemura.

Climbing experts said previous expeditions had left numerous supply caches on the mountain, and they hoped Uemura had found one.

Matter of respect

Okay, we admit the AT&T breakup will result in higher telephone service costs. Prior to the breakup we were told that would be the case and it has come to pass.

What's even more disturbing, though, is the apparent lack of respect for consumers being shown by some telephone company officials following the breakup. A prime example of that disrespect is Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s current shenanigans aimed at raising phone rates.

The phone company announced last week it would raise rates to bring in an additional $280 million while waiting for the Public Utility Commission to decide the company's request for a permanent increase. Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle challenged Bell's decision, saying the phone company is prohibited from doing that under a state law that went into effect Sept. 1.

Boyle sought a legal opinion on the matter and Attorney General Jim Mattox ruled the phone company can't legally raise phone rates unless the PUC approves the rates to be imposed. Bell says it will go ahead with its rate hike because it believes it's on solid legal ground.

Well! Anyone who knows anything about business realizes that a breakup on the scale of the AT&T one results in uncertainty for companies. Chances are Bell will need an increase in rates to continue to operate satisfactorily. And few individuals who recognize the importance of quality telephone service in their daily lives would deny the company the money it needs to provide that service.

But the Public Utility Commission was created for one overriding reason: To ensure that utility service is adequately provided at a fair price. In that respect, determining how much of an increase is warranted and when it is warranted is crucial.

The company has indicated it would post a bond, which is supposed to mean customers would get a refund if the PUC later rules a smaller increase was justified. Consumer lawyers say don't hold your breath if that happens. We won't.

The PUC was designed to protect consumers from heavy-handed tactics by utility companies out to make a buck regardless of who gets hurt in the process. That's about what Bell's rate hike wrangling looks like in this instance.

Bell's recent action is a good reminder of why the PUC was needed in the first place.

Rolls Royce chiseler

Welfare chiselers nowadays seem to be even more blatant and sophisticated than they were when Ronald Reagan was exposing and denouncing them during his days as governor of California.

A candidate for the all-time welfare queen surfaced the other day in Los Angeles when she was indicted on a number of federal pornography charges. Catherine Wilson reputedly had an annual income of $500,000 from the sale nationwide of illicit films and literature depicting children engaged in sexual acts with adults. This provided a high lifestyle for her and her four children: A mansion in the exclusive Hancock Park district of Los Angeles and a fleet of limousines — a Rolls Royce, a BMW and a Cadillac.

Still, Wilson found time amidst her seemy activities tpayments regularly. Her criminal activitfraudulent welfare schemewoman drov This flagrant example of the widespread waste and fraud that continue to disgrace the welfare system in this country cmorale of taxpayers entering upon another income-tax season.

Another View:

Lebanon madness

Do you wonder why the "Saudi plan" for a settlement in Lebanon collapsed over the weekend?

It almost seems that its prime defects, in Syria's eyes, were that President Gemayel accepted it, and that it was not specifically a Syrian plan. Also, it failed to satisfy Syria's root demand for Beirut to undo the Lebanese-Israeli agreement of last May 17.

Gemayel had promised in November to work for the changes that would remove the May 17 accord as an object of contention among the Lebanese. But he has been reluctant to give up the connections to Israel and the United States — lifelines for the Christians, as he sees them — embodied in that agreement.

The longer he waits, the more is asked of him. Now not only his Druse challengers, but also the more moderate Shiites demand his head.

The Israelis watch with foreboding the crumbling of the Lebanese government, which their policy did much to weaken, and which, inconsistently, they had counted on to help secure their northern border.

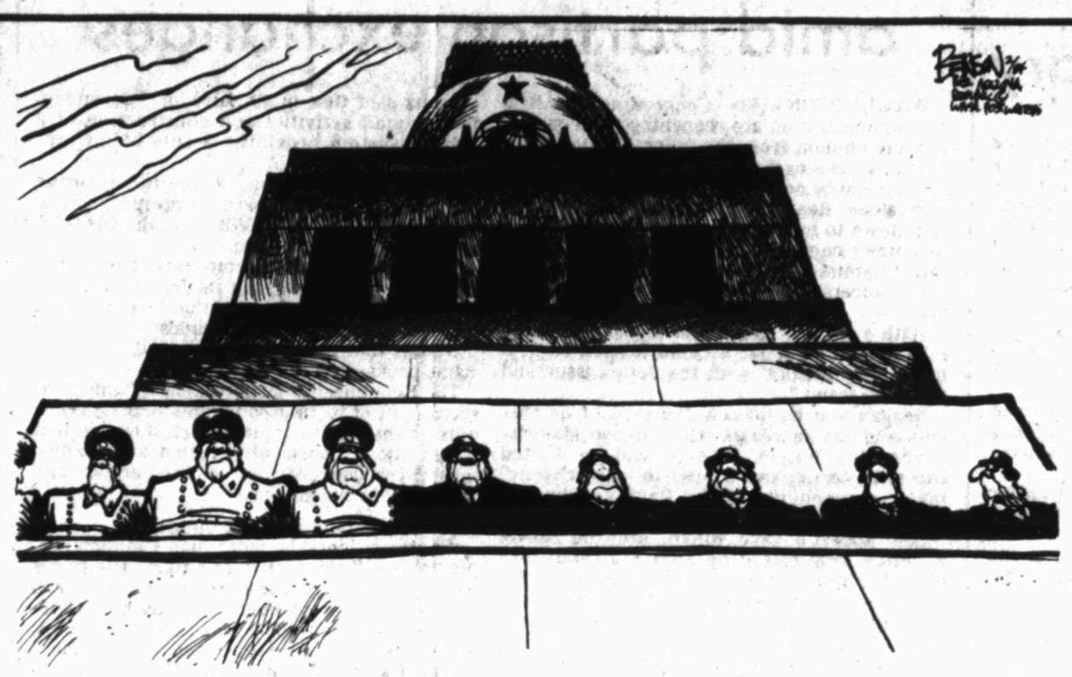

By fresh military attacks, the Shamir government seeks to remind everyone — not least Israeli voters — that Israel remains ready to protect its own security.

Jerusalem threatens to stay in Lebanon until a Lebanese government gives a "credible" anti-terrorist commitment. That is a formula for an open-ended, perhaps multi-year (multi-decade?) occupation. The Israeli public is unlikely to support it.

President Reagan and his chief lieutenants are busy saying that their policy has not failed, or that others were responsible, and that anyway Lebanon is not all that important.

They would do better to accept the painful truth that Syria is calling the shots now in Lebanon, to support the Saudis and others who are attempting to cushion the impact and to make sure that the United States' old friends in Lebanon are not led to believe further that Washington is in a position to bail them out.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Nixon moves costing taxpayers

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon is moving again — and as usual, his itchy feet will cost the taxpayers a bundle.

Jack Anderson

Although Nixon resigned in disgrace, he is still entitled to the same generous perquisites lavished on every ex-president, including round-the-cock protection by the Secret Service. His latest move will be the third time he has pulled up stakes since he left the White House for San Clemente in August 1974.

Every time Nixon moves, the Secret Service has to remove the elaborate security devices it had installed at his home and either move them to the new location or put in new equipment. The bill for all this paraphernalia around the country will run into the millions by the time his latest relocation is completed.

Nixon's decision to leave his estate at Saddle River, N.J., and buy a $1.8 million cooperative apartment in a fashionable section of Manhattan is turning into a nightmare for the Secret Service and the General Services Administration. Space for the Secret Service command post will be almost impossible to find in the high-rent district Nixon has chosen.

The agency will find space eventually, of course. But it's a landlord's market, and the cost will be steep. Obviously, the command post will have to be as close as possible to Nixon's new home. One official told my associate Vicki Warren that the space "will cost a minimum of $50 a square foot, and they'll need at least 3,000 square feet" — or $150,000 in rent per year.

The overall cost of the Nixon relocation isn't known yet to the government officials in charge — and it will never be known to the American taxpayers who pick up the tab. That's because the Secret Service, for security reasons, is not obliged to make its budget public.

The expecpation is that if the Secret Service doesn't have enough money in its general operating funds, it will just include the expense in the supplemental budget it is expected to submit to Congress later this year. More money may be needed because of the large number of presidential candidates entitled to Secret Service protection.

It's not the first time Nixon has created a headache for the Secret Service under similar circumstances. His first move as ex-president, to a Manhattan town house, left the agency scrambling for a place to put their command post. They finally had to refurbish an old furnace room. By the time they found adequate space in a former fast-food restaurant, Nixon decided to move to Saddle River.

Nixon could give the GSA and Secret Service a better chance to save money if he gave the agencies advance notice, allowing them time to scout out the territory before the move became known and the prices went up. But one official complained that Nixon's office generally discloses the ex-president's intentions one day and expects to have everything taken care of the next.

As with the move to Saddle River (more room for the grandchildren), Nixon has given a reasonable explanation for this move: Mrs. Nixon's poor health. But Nixon critics suspect it's all part of his persistent effort to gain greater media exposure in his chosen role as an elder statesman. A "salon" in New York City is better suited to this than a home out in the suburbs.

Footnote: Nixon faces a congressional challenge today on an unrelated expense: his proposed presidential library at San Clemente. Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., will conduct hearings on legislation requiring former presidents to raise enough private funds to maintain the presidential libraries, which are now kept up at taxpayers' expense.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI — Angela Buchanan, the treasurer of the Reagan-Bush re-election committee, isn't just balancing books these days — she's also balancing a long-distance marriage. While she's in Washington, her husband, attorney Bill Jackson, is in California with their year-old son, Billy. The very first night Pop was alone with the baby, Billy Jr. wouldn't stop crying, Jackson put him in the car and headed for the hospital, but on the way, the baby fell happily asleep. Ms. Buchanan keeps in touch by phone between her frequent cross-country commutes. Once, she recalls, she was hauled out of a meeting to take an "emergency call" from home. The urgent message: Young Billy had taken his first steps.

— Walter Mondale's reputation for caution and reserve are well deserved. Around campaign headquarters, no one calls him by his nickname, Fritz — at least not to his face. It's either "Mr. Vice President," "Sir" or — in the case of campaign manager Bob Beckel — "Chief." The candidate is conscientious about his physical condition, dutifully going in for a checkup every six months — and sometimes more often. When he sprained an ankle playing tennis in the midst of a hectic schedule, Mondale's blood pressure was clocked at 142/4 — a little on the high side for a man of 55. In three tests since then, it has been 128/8, 130/0 and 135/0.

— Armchair political buffs who grouse about presidential candidates with the claim that "I could do better than those bozos" will now have a chance to find out on their own personal computers. A new computer game called "Nomination" allows the operator to run against four candidates of either party — and, at least theoretically, win the nomination. The players can select an easy campaign or a knockdown, drag-out fight. The hurdles that must be jumped include press conferences and allocation of campaign funds. "If the past is any indication, you'll be able to play it until 1992 without changing any of the names," says game author Mark Cohen.

Iowa Democrats get serious

WASHINGTON — Iowa's Democrats, having launched McGovern in 1972 and Carter in 1980, have a lot to answer for. But on Monday they made amends, of sorts, as they made three winners, and one thing clear. The winners are Lane Kirkland, Walter Mondale and the Democratic Party. What is clear is a warning from rank-and-file Democrats to Republicans: "This time we're serious."

Kirkland, head of the AFL-CIO, has taken a risk, and a trophy. He kissed a candidate early, and has delivered for him. By so doing he has arrested the decline of organized labor as a player in presidential politics.

George F. Will

One way to gauge the scale of Mondale's achievement is this: Having won by 30 percentage points over his nearest rival (if anyone so trounced can be called a rival), Mondale heads for New Hampshire knowing that in the last four Democratic primaries there, no one has won by more than 10 percentage points.

Another measure of Mondale's success is his strength relative to the party's most left-wing forces. He received more votes than Hart, McGovern, Cranston and Jackson combined. He has one so well so early that there is no need for him to move left and adopt a nomination strategy that would jeopardize his election chances.

A third index of Mondale's potency is second place. Hart has risen gallantly, against a 1963 tide of dismissive reporting. But what good will come of it? Back when Joe Louis was in his prime, someone was always the second-raked heavyweight. And who remembers them now, those victims of Louis' "bum of the month" campaign.

Two doubts have clouded Mondale's campaign. Does he have the requisite hunger — an amalgam of pride and other animal spirits — to pay the price exacted by presidential politics? And can he stir passions, without which the White House is rarely won?

It was said that Iowa was a contest for second place. But in a sense Mondale began his campaign as a front-runner in second place: The Democrats' most popular (and most unpopular) candidate, Ted Kennedy, was abstaining. Mondale never will stir the giddy passions the Kennedys have stirred. He does not arouse ideological fervor comparable to what Goldwater and Reagan have aroused. But Mondale may be eliciting something that is, to discerning Republicans, more ominous. It is a gray passion: seriousness. When seriousness is not merely a mood but a passion, it is a formidable force.

The most impressive aspect of Mondale's mulching of his rivals is that voting for him is not jolly fun. It is not like going to the dentist, but neither is it the sort of exhilaration many Democrats hanker for.

In primaries, many Democrats do the damndest things. They use their votes to "send a message" or to enjoy a year of living dangerously: Hey, let's send forth Cranston to slay Reagan. Or: Did you hear McGovern tell those farmers to sell the farm and build a bomb shelter? For that snappy one-liner, let's make him President. Some of the ideologically inflamed persons who come out of the woodwork and into Democratic primaries play presidential politics for the same reason other people play pinochle: amusement.

The Democratic Party loses when enough Democrats behave nuttily — treating Hubert Humphrey as a warmonger in 1968, nominating McGovern in 1972. Voting for Mondale does not cause many Democrats' pulses to race. But a lot of Democrats who would really enjoy walking off another cliff with McGovern are sighing and voting for Mondale because the idea of beating Reagan causes their pulses to gallop.

For many other Democrats — the temperamental opposites of the ideological activists — Reagan may be an alarm clock. Here is the paradox of "high-definition Republicanism": A Republican like Reagan energizes the nation's political arguments, and the beneficiary is the Democratic Party. By the clarity and force of his political personality Reagan awakens the slumbering; he interests the uninterested; he makes apparent to the inattentive the stakes of national politics. And most of these hitherto dormant persons are, when aroused, Democrats.

Can Mondale turn the lethargic on, and turn them out? That is, can he make his passion infectious?

Proof of his passion — his hunger — is the labor that went into building the machine thap is enabling him to cut such a swath through such a thickly planted field of rivals. Genius has been defined as an infinite capacity for taking pains. Whatever else posterity may say of Mondale, it will never deny that his striving was touched with political genius.

ART BUCHWALD

When life is on line it's moved!

The most dangerous place in America to be these days is anywhere near the poverty line. As the president's Task Force on Hunger reported, cuts in food assistance have not hurt the "truly needy," who are still being taken care of. But they have reduced benefits for many people "just above the poverty line."

Art Buchwald

Mabel Newbaum, a mother of five in South Succotash, is an example of someone who is having a tough time because she can't stay below the poverty line.

"The way things are going now, the nearer you get to the poverty line, the more trouble you're in," she said.

"In what respect?" I asked.

"Well, if you're way below the line, the government has to take care of you. And if you're way above it, you don't need help from anyone. But it's when you get close to the line that you're walking a tightrope. The main problem is no one is quite sure where the poverty line is. Every time you've found it, the government changes the guidelines."

"Would hunger be a test?"

"Not necessarily. Your family could be hungry, but if you own a TV set they could still put you above the line."

"Where are you right now?" I asked Mabel.

"Last week I was eligible for food benefits for my family. But this week they added the benefits I was getting to my income, and decided I was above the poverty line by this much" she said holding her two fingers a sixteenth of an inch apart.

"Are you trying to tell me without the food benefits you might have remained below the poverty line?"

"That's what the lady down at the welfare office said. She told me as long as I didn't take my benefits I could qualify for them. But the minute I took them I went above the poverty line, and was no longer entitled to them."

"It's kind of a Catch-22 situation."

"It's a Crock-22 situation. I told the lady my kids were still hungry even though the government decided we weren't poor. She said she didn't make the rules. David Stockman had to draw the line somewhere."

"Why don't you quit your job? Wouldn't that put you safely below the poverty line?"

"I've thought about that, but I can't make it with five kids on government handouts. I also can't make it just on my salary. What I need is both. If the government would stop moving the poverty line up and down every day I'd know where I stood."

Mabel continued, "Even President Reagan can't agree on who is poor and who isn't. I saw him discussing the homeless on 'Good Morning America' and he said that the fact a person sleeps on a grate doesn't necessarily make him homeless, because many people in America like to sleep on grates."

"I think you're being too harsh on this administration, Mabel. After all, they have to cut the size of the budget. They can either do it by announcing they're going to ignore the poor people — or by insisting there are far less of them than anyone would like to believe. The latter method is much more palatable to the American people. That's why the poverty line is so important to the budget cutters. The less people they include below it the less benefits they have to make available to them. That's just good Reaganomics."

"Yeh, but how does that put food on my table?" Mabel wanted to know.

"I wouldn't look at it from that angle," I said. "Aren't you proud that your government no longer considers you a poor person and a drag on society?"

"I suppose so," Mabel said. "But just because they arbitrarily put me above the poverty line doesn't mean I can pay my bills."

"Look on the bright side of things, Mabel. If they turn off your heat you'll probably drop below the poverty line again, and then you'll be entitled to government assistance."

"Are you sure?"

"Well, they're certainly not going to ask your family to sleep on a grate — unless, of course, you want to."

Iran claims capture of 15 Iraqi villages

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

Iran claimed today its troops had pushed "deep inside Iraq," capturing 15 villages and part of the strategic main highway linking Iraq's two largest cities.

Iraq said it had smashed two Iranian offensives, but it had no immediate comment on the latest Iranian claim.

"The very strategic Baghdad-Amarah highway is seized in several points by the combatants of the Islamic Republic of Iran," said the official Iranian news agency IRNA, monitored in Cyprus.

"With this Iranian victory, the enemy has lost one of its most important logistical routes,, IRNA said. It claimed the thrust "deep inside Iraq" had reached the Tigris and Euphrates rivers and divided the Iraqi army.

Al-Amarah is some 150 miles south of the capital, Baghdad, and 100 miles north of Basra, Iraq's second-largest city.

The agency did not specify the highway locations captured and it was not immediately clear if the attack was part of an assault launched Tuesday night in the central sector of the 733-mile-long border or one begun Wednesday night on Basra.

Neither side reported casualty estimates.

At about 10 a.m., Iraq issued a communique saying a new attack on Basra had left "the bodies of thousands of Iranians scattered on the battlefield becoming the food of vultures and wild animals."

Baghdad state radio and television stations broke into their regular programs to broadcast a terse announcement from the armed forces command: "Iraq won and its enemies lost." Iraq claimed the Basra attack started at 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Few foreign correspondents have been allowed by either side to visit the battlefield and verification of the rival claims is impossible.

Basra, a city of some 350,000 people, is close to the Shatt-al-Arab, the waterway connecting Iraq to the Persian Gulf. The gulf is used by tankers carrying about 40 percent of the non-communist world's oil.

In Washington, President Reagan warned at a news conference Wednesday night that "there's no way" the United States would allow the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow channel at the southern end of the Persian Gulf, to be closed.

Iran has threatened to block the gulf if foreign powers join Iraq's side in the 3½-year-old war or if Iraq destroys Iran's ability to export its own oil.

Reagan noted the United States has a naval force deployed in the Arabian Sea, which adjoins the gulf. The British foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, also confirmed Wednesday that two British warships were "on patrol" in the Indian Ocean, but said they were not on their way to the Persian Gulf.

In Bahrain, the Manama-based English-language weekly Gulf Mirror reported today that Bahrain's foreign minister, Sheik Mohamed bin Mubarak, said his country was stockpiling food as a precaution against a closure of the strait.

Iran said earlier Wednesday that its troops had crossed the border in three places and pushed to within 10 miles of Iraq's main highway. Iraq said early today that Iran had begun a major offensive, but said it had been repelled.

Strife returns to ancient battleground

PANIPAT, India (AP) — This ancient battlefield, now a bustling city on India's main highway, remains a powder keg of religious strife. Last Sunday it exploded and it could do so again.

Eight Sikhs were lynched and four Sikh temples were defiled and burned in a savage Hindu backlash against increasing Sikh terrorism in northern India. Many shops and offices have been closed since then to guard against looting.

Three of the most famous wars in Indian history were fought centuries ago in Panipat, 65 miles north of New Delhi in Haryana state.

"We now are fighting the fourth battle of Panipat," attorney Jai Singh Rathi said in an interview. "The battle will go on as long as Sikh extremists continue their hit-and-run campaign in Punjab."

Punjab state to the north, home of most of India's 13 million Sikhs, has been shaken by terrorism for the past three weeks. Twenty Hindus were reported killed this week alone.

St. Louis trolly cars moved mail in 1892

The first Street Car Railway Postal Service was inaugurated in St. Louis with the full sanction of the U.S. Post Office Feb. 3, 1892. The cars were provided with a special canceling device that read, "Street R.P.O. No. 1." Soon many other cities established trolley mail service.

On her first birthday, Faith weighs more than 13 pounds

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Baby Faith, born four months premature and so tiny that nurses made her a waterbed out of a plastic sandwich bag, celebrates her first birthday today weighing more than 13 pounds. But her mother says the struggle is not over yet.

"It's been a long year," said Rose Marie Materowski. "We never really looked ahead. We couldn't allow ourselves that much of a luxury."

Faith, who weighed just 19½ ounces and was only 10½ inches long when born Feb. 23, 1983, at Hackensack Medical Center, is still blind after five eye operations. She spent the first 4½ months of her life in the hospital.

"We're still trusting and praying. As far as the doctors are concerned, she's out of danger," said Mrs. Materowski, whose daughter is the smallest ever to survive at the medical center.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although Johnny Carson and his estranged wife Joanna have settled on a financial support arrangement, it's nowhere near the $220,000 a month she had sought, says a spokesman for the host of "The Tonight Show."

Johnny Carson

"The agreed upon figure for temporary spousal support was close to the amount suggested by Mr. Carson's lawyers, which was approximately 10 percent of the amount requested by Mrs. Carson," spokesman Jim Mahoney said late Wednesday, reading from a statement.

Mrs. Carson's request to Los Angeles Superior Court had amounted to about $2.64 million a year from her 58-year-old husband.

LONDON (AP) — Despite the best efforts of Britain's royalty hounds, model Katie Rabett has been glimpsed but briefly since attaining status as the new girlfriend of Prince Andrew. But she'll soon be presented to the world as the star of the movie "Real Life."

Mike Dineen, producer of the romantic comedy, said Wednesday he picked the 23-year-old blond from a field of 180 actresses to play the girlfriend of the film's protagonist, played by Rupert Everett.

"We were looking for a young actress who exuded youthful vitality and Kate scored first time," he said.

Reports of Miss Rabett's romantic link to Prince Andrew, the second of Queen Elizabeth II's three sons, spread after she threw a party to mark his 24th birthday at her home Sunday night.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Even with its wings clipped, Elvis Presley's personal jet, the Lisa Marie, barely fit on the four-lane highway named in the late singer's honor.

The Convair 800 was towed Wednesday to a site near Graceland Mansion, Presley's home, where it will be opened to tourists for $3.50 a visit.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Pauley confesses to being a bit nervous about returning to her co-anchor job on NBC's "Today" show after a three-month hiatus, but there's one topic on which she has plenty to say.

Jane Pauley

"I've just spent three months dedicated to the heart things," said the Miss Pauley, who returns to the show Monday. "Of course I'm going to wax poetic about motherhood."

Her husband, "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau, works at home and takes care of twins Rachel and Ross when Miss Pauley can't be there.

She felt no jealousy, just some anxiety attacks, watching the women who substituted for her on "Today," she said.

One Percent Solution: Bi-district tonight

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

LEVELLAND — The shock to some Midlanders is that the Midland High Bulldogs will be opening the bi-district round of the playoffs here today at 7:30 p.m. instead of 8 p.m. Friday.

This playoff experience may become known as the "One Percent Solution" before all is said and done.

As early as Wednesday morning, Midland High was scheduled to meet Amarillo High on Friday. By Wednesday afternoon, the game plan had changed due to a conflict with facilities in Levelland. So the game was switched to today. At one point in time, school officials were saying that the Friday date was 99 percent certain. Today we are greeted with the one percent flaw.

BUT AS far as MHS is concerned, today's playoff date with destiny is being greeted as good news.

"I think the team is ready to play now and it will give the winner a chance to scout the El Paso teams on Friday. I like the change, but I realize we may have put some of our fans in a bind," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "The school's Cotoico dance is set for Saturday and when we couldn't get the Friday date due to the Levelland girls, we went with the Thursday date. I think it's good because we haven't played since last Friday and I think we need to play as soon as possible."

So all gears have been put in motion for tonight's battle with the 25-3 Sandies. Tonight's winner will face the winner of the bi-district contest between 27-3 El Pass Jefferson and 14-17 El Paso Eastwood, which is being played on the UTEP campus at 8 p.m. MST Friday.

Midland High, 27-7 on the year, and Amarillo High have had three common opponents in El Paso Bel Air, Odessa Permian and Odessa High. MHS defeated Bel Air and split with Permian and Odessa High in two meetings each. AHS lost to Bel Air in the Tall City Tournament, but beat both Permian and OHS.

Amarillo High also lost to Clovis and Amarillo Tascosa, but won 18 games in between those losses. MHS was 10-4 in District 4-5A after starting the season with a 17-3 record.

THIS GAME will be a contest of opposites. The Sandies are big with depth and like a controlled contest. MHS likes the run and shoot format, but also uses a lot of players.

Amarillo High is lead by 6-foot-3 wing Tim Gilbreath, who owns a 16.5 points per game. Wing Kelly Calvin, a 6-4 senior, is averaging 12.1 points per games. The Sandies also use 6-7 post Kevin Gleghorn, who is averaging 7.8 per outing. The guards are Gary Hassenfratz (6-0, 5.9) and Koy Eddleman (6-3, 6.8). The main man off the bench is Todd Rivers with a 7.0 average.

Midland High's 5-11 guard Chris Rooker leads all scorers in this game with a 19.6 per game average. Post Darrell Davis, a junior, is hitting at a 12.9 clip while forward Kenneth Johnson owns 11.5 points per game. Forward Fred Franklin at 6-3 averages 8.6 per game.

MHS will also use two guards in Chris Herbert (5-9, 3.6) and Todd Shiplet (5-9, 4.2). Willis Ratliff (6-5, 3.8), Eric Brunson (6-4, 3.2) and Albert Reed (5-11, 1.2) are the main keys off the bench for the Bulldogs.

"Amarillo High is an extremely strong rebounding team with size and they are a good shooting team," said Stephenson. "I think our guard play is better, but they are stronger than we are. We've got to take advantage of our quickness, which means we must press them to our advantage."

Amarillo head coach Allen Simpson is also impressed with the Bulldogs.

"We thought Midland High was probably the best team in District 4-5A as far as overall personell is concerned," said Simpson. "I kind of hated it when we drew them for bi-district. I'm impressed with their guard play and they will run you to death. I think it's going to be a great game."

Amarillo High's last trip to the playoffs came in 1978 when they lost to Fort Worth Dunbar by five points in the first game of the Region I tournament.

Midland High can identify with that also since the Bulldogs lost to Dunbar by five points in the first round of the Region I tournament in 1981 at Chaparral Center before one of the largest West Texas playoff crowds in history. Nearly 5,000 fans saw that game. It's the largest crowd in Midland high school basketball history.

AMARILLO HIGH had a warmup contest Monday with Pampa, winning by one point in triple overtime. Midland High was unable to workout a warmup game and hasn't played since Friday.

District 4-5A champion Odessa Permian will face Lubbock Monterey tonight also with a game set for Lamesa. The winner of that game will face the winner of Friday's 6 p.m. game between 24-5 El Paso Riverside and 22-9 El Paso Burges.

There is a possibility that if Permian and MHS both win that an area doubleheader could be played between the four schools in either El Paso or Midland next Tuesday. If both Amarillo High and Monterey win, the logical site would be Chaparral Center since that is the site of the Region I tournament, March 1-2.

Hopefully, tonight's winner can find a place to play without changing playoff dates at the last minute. It's tough on fans to make last minute changes. This time, however, it was unavoidable since conflicts seemed to crop up at every turn.

Amarillo High won the District 3-5A championship with a 15-1 record. MHS is District 4-5A's runnerup behind Odessa Permian. Lubbock Monterey is 3-5A's runnerup.

Chaps fight for position in WJCAC

From Staff Reports

After a 57-54 loss at Amarillo Monday, the Midland College Chaparrals will be jockeying for position for the Western Junior College Athletic Conference post-season tournament to decide the final two berths in the Region V tournament.

The loss to the Badgers dropped the Chaps to 9-6 in WJCAC and virtually eliminated the team from contention for one of the two automatic berths in the Region V jousting.

IN THE final three games, the Chaps primary concern is to earn "home court" advantage for the tournament, which may not be all that easy.

MC plays its final regular season home game against league-leading Howard College, 13-2, at 8 p.m. today in Langford Chaparral Center. It is also homecoming and the queen will be presented at halftime.

After that, the Chaps must journey into the cold, impersonal Panhandle where Frank Phillips College waits in ambush at Borger Monday. Next Thursday, the Chaps close out the regular season against second place Odessa College at Odessa.

Coach Jerry Stone would like to take all three remaining home games. He also realizes with no luck at all, the Chaps could lose all three.

Midland's loss to Amarillo Monday was particularly galling. The Chaps led by nine with seven minutes to go. In the first game at Midland, Amarillo led for only two seconds in the entire game, the final two seconds of a 54-52 win. The Chaps lost Monday despite a spectacular 28-point effort by 6-5 Jackie Phinnessee.

At halftime tonight, several prizes will be given away, including a TV set and four full-sized autographed basketballs. A shooting contest will reward the winner with $55 and some lucky fan will Scramble for Cash, picking up as many dollar bills off the floor in a 30-second period.

IN THE first meeting with HC, Midland lost 78-62, playing the Hawks even in the first half.

"Phinnessee played a great game against Amarillo," said Stone, "We didn't execute well during the last few minutes and we didn't make the free throws all night, hitting just two of nine. I think we've been looking ahead too much to Howard and Odessa, but now we just have to have a strong finish."

Stone's reference was to the tournament for the final two berths in the eight-team Region V tournament. Under the format, the third place teams hosts the 10th; the fourth hosts the ninth; the fifth hosts the eighth; and the sixth hosts the seventh. The games will be played between March 1 and the start of Regional on March 8.

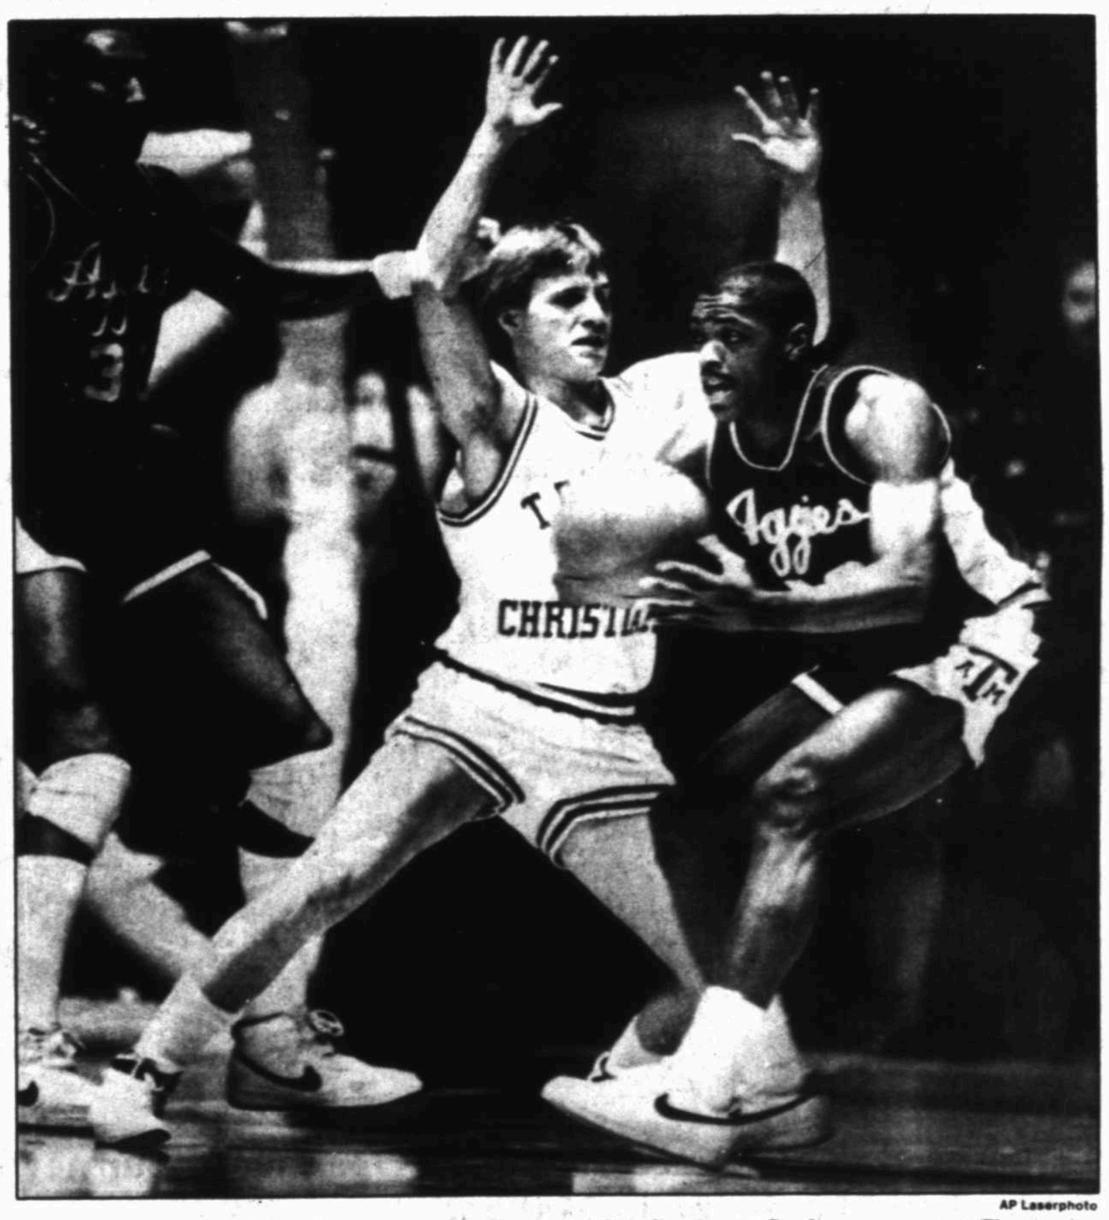

Four teams will come from the Northern Conference. This year, in addition to the men's tournament, the women 's Region V tournament will begin March 6 with four first round games and conclude with semifinals March 7 and finals March 8.

Cougars roll over Owls

By The Associated Press

With a big showdown between third-ranked Houston and the 11th-rated Arkansas Razorbacks set for Sunday at Hofheinz Pavilion, the Rice Owls were hoping that the Cougars might be a bit preoccupied.

No such luck.

Michael Young, who suffered bruised ribs in a Monday night auto accident, ignored the injury and scored 22 points to lead Houston to a 70-54 Southwest Conference win over Rice on Wednesday night.

"I felt great," Young said. "I had some great treatment and I felt no pain at all."

IN OTHER SWC clashes Wednesday night, Texas sophomore guard Karl Willock hit four free throws in the final 18 seconds to sew up a 61-54 win over Baylor, while Todd Holloway scored the winning basket to give Texas A&M a 67-65 double overtime win over Texas Christian.

The victory gave the Cougars a 24-3 season record and extended their winning streak to 37 consecutive league games — the third-longest streak in the nation.

Houston is 13-0 in SWC play going into Sunday's contest against Arkansas at Hofheinz Pavilion. Arkansas, 11-1 in conference action and 21-4 for the year, travels to Lubbock tonight to meet Texas Tech in a regionally televised game.

Although Houston didn't put the game out of reach until the second half, Coach Guy Lewis was still pleased.

"We played as well as we could have played. I can't ask for anything more," Lewis said. "It was a 16-point win. I'm always satisfied with that. There aren't any easy wins."

Rice Coach Tommy Suitts approached the game by telling the Owls just to play their game. But it didn't work.

"I feel we've got a little momentum playing at home," Suitts said. "I hope we can adopt the Summit (site of the SWC tournament in Houston next month)."

TYRONE Washington led Rice with 15 points. The Owls fell to 5-9 in SWC play and 9-15 for the season.

Texas hit eight of eight free throws in the last 27 seconds to provide the margin of victory. The Longhorns' parade to the free throw line capped a second half with five ties and nine lead changes. Carlton Cooper put Texas up for good 49-47 on a four-footer with 5:08 left.

Willock paced Texas with 17 points. Baylor's James Stern led all scorers with 19 points.

Texas Coach Bob Weltlich said the win "was like pulling teeth.

"Our free throws have been unbelievable lately and they were good again tonight," he said.

SWC Roundup

Baylor Coach Jim Haller had the opposite perspective.

"We missed enough free throws tonight," he said. "If we had made our share of them we would have certainly won the game."

Baylor dropped its record to 5-19 on the season and 1-12 in SWC play. Texas is 7-17 overall and 3-10 in league action.

TCU lost a chance to beat the Aggies in regulation. Tracy Mitchell was fouled with four seconds left in regulation. He made the first of a two-shot foul, tying the game, but missed the second, forcing overtime.

In the first overtime, Mitchell sank two free throws with 2:09 left to give TCU a 61-59 lead, but A&M's Kenny Brown tied the game with a 10-foot jumper with 1:02 left. TCU's Scott Brooks missed a 15-foot shot at the buzzer.

THE VICTORY, which improved the Aggies' record to 6-8 in SWC play and 13-12 overall, assured A&M of the home-court advantage in the first round of the upcoming conference tournament.

A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said it was about time.

"We've been in some real close games and we were due to win one of these," Metcalf said.

TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth said the game "was another one where we get beat at the gun.

"We've had a few of those this year," he said.

TCU slipped to 3-11 in SWC play and 10-15 overall.

Bulldogs, Rebels put on shorts

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The winter month of Feburary hasn't produced its last day, but the Midland High and Midland Lee track teams will start the 1984 track season Friday and Saturday with the annual running of the Comanche Relays in Fort Stockton. It's time to put on the shorts.

The Comanche Relays is annually the first West Texas thinclad test for all area high schools. Again this meet will have the flavor of a District 4-5A meet as Lee and Midland High go against district foes Big Spring, Odessa High, Odessa Permian and San Angelo. The two Abilene schools have decided to skip this meet.

COACH SAM Volpe's Rebels are wearing the tag of defending district champions in 1984, but Lee was hurt by graduation losses and Volpe says, "It looks like Odessa High and Permian will be the teams to catch this year. We are very young and not as deep as we were last year."

Midland High coach Johnny Williams has been pleased with the work of his track troops thus far. "We have more basic depth than a year ago and will be more balanced in what we are going to do. The kids have been working hard."

Lee does return seven veterans who scored a lot of points for Volpe a year ago and should be a very competitive team.

Highlighting the Lee effort will be junior Walter Jones, who won 4-5A's 100-meter championship a year ago as a sophomore. Shot putter Isaac Garnett, a Region I qualifier last year, is also back with some high goals in mind.

Marc Brackens, another Region I qualifier, returns in the 400 meters. Other identifiable Lee tracksters are Derek Westbrook in the 3200 meters, David Meyers in the 800, Michael Johnson in the hurdles and Ricky Lozano in the discus.

"We have a very young team with a lot of good sophomores. If they all stay together and work, this could be a very strong track team in two years," said Lee assistant coach Eddie Wolski.

MHS is a team that should realize greater potential in 1984. The star could be sprinter Alan Foret, another high class junior. The sprints could be a strong suit for MHS this year with Terry McGowan and Randall Swindell ready to produce.

Williams also thinks his sprint relay team of McGowan, Swindell, Keith Byrd and Foret will be a strong unit. The Bulldogs also appear strong in the 800 with Tracy Hagens and Ross Petree. The top sophomore on the scene may be Michael Eaden, who could be strong in the long jump and mile relay.

BYRD SHOULD be strong in the 200 meters and vaulter Ron Hernandez is expected to produce points this year. Sophomore Freddie Goodman has potential in the 400 as does Jimmy Perez in the 800 and Phillip Schuil in the 1600. Mike Mashburn is back and could be a force in the 1600 also.

The Comanche Relays will begin at 2 p.m. Friday with running preliminaries. Action begins again Saturday morning with field event finals at 9 a.m. and the meet will continue through the afternoon.

The Comanche meet will feature three divisions of competition. Lee and MHS will be in Division I with the 5A schools. Division II will be made up of Class 4A schools and will look like a District 2-4A meet with Fort Stockton, Andrews, Pecos, Monahans, Lake View, Snyder and Lamesa among the teams expected to compete.

Division III will be made up of all schools under Class 4A and area teams such as Rankin, McCamey, Crane, Reagan County and Stanton expected to compete.

Despite the Feburary start, the Comanche Relays has been run under some of the best weather of the year. Many of the other spring track meets are plagued with colder weather and higher winds. Fort Stockton is hoping that the trend will hold Friday and Saturday.

Lee is the defending champion of the Comanche Relays in the 5A division and the Rebels will be able to see just how strong they are in 1984 with the likes of Odessa High and Permian in the field. MHS, not considered as strong as those three teams, could turn in some surprises before the 1984 season is over.

Hokies spill No. 12 Memphis State

By The Associated Press

There's nothing like home sweet home when you're seeking revenge. Just ask Virginia Tech or DePaul. Or even their victims, Memphis State and Dayton.

"When you catch a team as good as Tech on a good night, things like this can happen," Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk said Wednesday night after Virginia Tech trampled his 12th-ranked Tigers 89-69 in Metro Conference basketball in Blacksburg to avenge a one-point loss on the road last month.

"We played poorly and Tech was hot and at home," Kirk added. "And that means we were in trouble."

Dayton ran into a similar buzzsaw in Rosemont, Ill., where DePaul Coach Ray Meyer said his fifth-ranked Blue Demons possessed "payback motivation" in the wake of last week's 72-71 loss to the Flyers, a setback that cost the team its No. 3 ranking.

Wednesday night it was DePaul 79-59 and the triumph left Meyer talking about the Blue Demons' defense, rather than revenge.

"We didn't give them anything in the second half, they had to earn it," Meyer said. "Our defense won it and some of our players came of age."

In other games involving Top 20 teams, Boston College beat 16th-ranked Syracuse 90-88 in overtime; No. 8 Oklahoma went an extra period to beat Kansas 92-82; third-ranked Houston breezed past Rice 70-54; No. 15 Wake Forest demolished Monmouth 85-57 and 17th-ranked Temple thumped George Washington 93-77.

Dell Curry and Perry Young combined to score 49 points as Virginia Tech, 63-62 losers at Memphis State on Jan. 31, knocked off the 20-5 Tigers.

College Basketball

The Hokies took the lead for good on Young's three-point play with 12:45 remaining and led 37-23 at halftime.

Curry scored 25 points and Young added 24, while Keith Lee paced Memphis State, 10-2 in the Metro, with 21 points and 10 rebounds despite sitting out the last 11 minutes of the first half in foul trouble.

"When we fell behind in the first half, I think we tried to catch up too quickly," Kirk said. "We took some real bad shots during that stretch."

Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir attributed the triumph to "great teamwork."

"Everybody that got into the game for us did a heck of a job," he said. "I hope we can get a rematch with Memphis State in the finals of the Metro tournament."

Top Twenty

Michael Young scored 22 points as Houston, 24-3, hiked its record to 13-0 in the Southwestern Conference. The Cougars, who also got eight points from Alvin Franklin in the closing minutes, opened an 18-point lead midway through the second half and coasted as Alvin Franklin finished with 16 points and Akeem Olajuwon added 13 to run the Cougars' winning streak to 37 consecutive league games.

Oklahoma is 23-3, 10-1 in the Big Eight, after surviving a scare from Kansas. The Jayhawks forced overtime on Calvin Thompson's 25-foot jump shot at the buzzer, but the Sooners' Jan Pannell keyed an 18-8 burst with five points in the extra session.

Freshman Tim McCallister scored 31 points and Wayman Tisdale added 28 for Oklahoma.

Boston College, meanwhile, overcame a seven-point deficit in the final 1:02 of regulation and nipped Syracuse on Stu Primus' basket with two seconds remaining in overtime.

Primus, who finished with 14 points, sent the Big East game into overtime by hitting a twisting lay-in after stealing an inbounds pass under the Boston College basket.

The host Eagles held the ball for nearly four minutes of the overtime before Primus took the winning shot, spoiling a 33-point performance by Rafael Addison of Syracuse, now 17-6.

The game also featured a finger-pointing and pushing incident between Boston College Coach Gary Williams and Eagles senior forward Martin Clark.

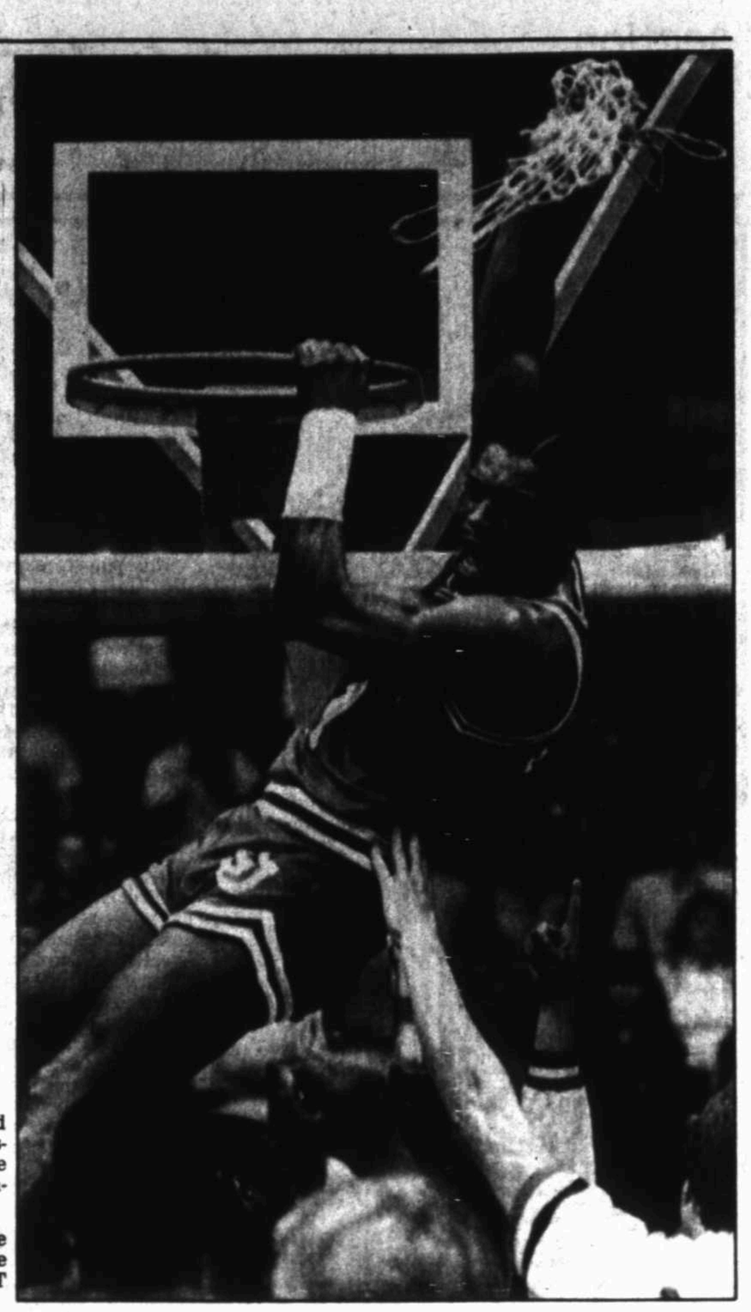

Security guards and officials, meanwhile, had to break up an altercation between Temple Coach John Chaney and George Washington Coach Gary Gimelstone at halftime of their game at the Palestra in Philadelphia.

As the teams left the court with Temple leading 42-34, Chaney stopped to complain to referee Gene Steratore. When Gimelstob attempted to join the conference, words were exchanged and Chaney grabbed the George Washington coach in the neck area.

Granger Hall scored 23 points as the Owls boosted their record to 21-2 overall, 15-0 in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

Wake Forest played without Kenny Green, the Atlantic Coast Conference's fifth-leading scorer, but the Deacons used a balanced attack to glide past Monmouth.

Delaney Rudd scored 14 points, Anthony Teachey added 13 and Tony Karasek contributed 11 as Wake improved its record to 19-5.

ABC draws first blood in battle with USFL

By The Associated Press

There's an interesting little battle taking place between Jim Spence, executive vice-president of ABC Sports and Chet Simmons, Spence's one-time ABC colleague who is now commissioner of the United States Football League.

First blood goes to Spence — ABC will not, as the league wanted, set up regional networks to beam telecasts of visiting teams back to the home fans; it will not black out home markets.

As the USFL begins its second season, ABC is its lifeline, the television outlet the league needs to remain in business. It's not just the money — ABC is kicking in an estimated $22 million for the league's first two years — it's also the exposure.

It is exposure that's the current arguing point for a league whose teams still lack identity. The USFL's idea is simple — put a team's away games on television, whetting the interest back home; black out home games sending the fans whose interest was whetted to the ticket booths. That avoids situations as in Philadelphia last year, where the Stars had high television ratings but low attendance.

"Imagine if we could televise all of Doug Williams' road games back into Oklahoma," says Simmons. "Imagine the audience for that."

But check the listings for the first week — everybody gets one of two games, home markets included.

ABC will bring you the New Jersey Generals at the Birmingham Stallions or the Arizona Wranglers (nee Chicago Blitz) at the Oakland Invaders with highlights of the Pittsburgh Maulers (Mike Rozier) and the Oklahoma Outlaws (the aforementioned Doug Williams.)

Hardly a great victory for the USFL although Simmons sees one bright spot — the 1:30 p.m. CST starting time.

"At least we're starting an hour later this season," he says. "I think that's a lot better. The later we start, the better the ratings — or so we're told."

Woodley obtains rich Steeler pact

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers bypassed Dan Marino of Pitt last spring on the first round of the National Football League's college draft. The Miami Dolphins didn't.

Now the Steelers, desperately thin at quarterback because of sore-armed star Terry Bradshaw's uncertain status, have signed former Dolphins quarterback David Woodley to the largest contract in their history.

The same David Woodley who in Miami couldn't beat out Marino, the hometown boy the Steelers didn't draft.

"There's a great opportunity here for David to take the reins," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll.

Steelers President Dan Rooney wouldn't confirm reports that Woodley's contract will pay $2 million over three years. Woodley wouldn't deny it.

If Bradshaw makes another in his series of often remarkable comebacks this summer, the Steelers could find themselves paying $700,000 a year to the highest-paid reserve in pro football.

But Noll, able to name Bradshaw as his starting quarterback just once in 17 games last season, said that's a big "if."

"We have to deal with realities," said Noll, who obtained Woodley in just the eighth trade the Steelers have made since he became coach 15 years ago.

"And the reality is that he (Bradshaw) might not be ready," he said.

Woodley, at 23 the youngest quarterback to start in a Super Bowl, now becomes the likely starter for the only team to win four Super Bowls. The only other quarterback on the Steelers' roster is seldom-used Mark Malone.

"I want to win a Super Bowl," said Woodley, 25. "I think that's the goal of most quarterbacks."

Woodley, a free agent, and his agent, Howard Slusher, negotiated with Steelers' executive Jim Boston for more than a week before reaching contract terms. Woodley then went through the formality of re-signing with the Dolphins, since he was a free agent, before he could be traded to the Steelers.

Cancer claims Collins

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Cornerback Kirk Collins, who led the Los Angeles Rams in interceptions last season despite playing in only four games, has died of gastroesophageal, a form of cancer. He was 25.

Collins died Wednesday morning at Anaheim Memorial Hospital, the Rams said.

Collins became a regular for Los Angeles for the first time last fall and started the first four games of the season.

He returned his fifth interception and second of the game against the New York Jets 58 yards, and suffered a groin injury on the play. Doctors diagnosing the injury discovered a tumor in Collins' esophagus. It later was determined to be malignant.

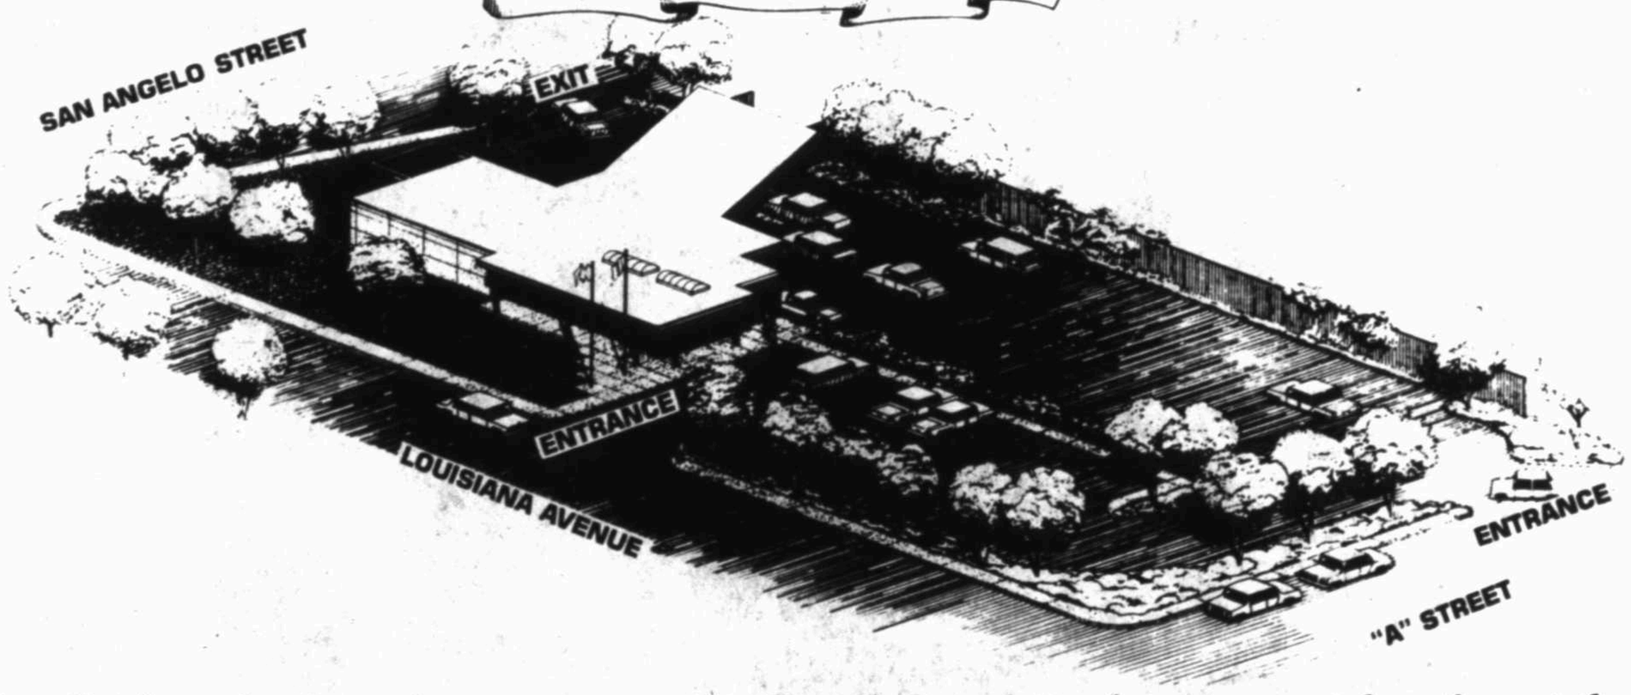

Collins, whose full name was Edward Kirk Collins, was placed on the National Football League team's inactive roster with a non-football related illness and did not play again.

He did make all road trips with the team and attended all home games.

Registration set for MJBA teams

From Staff Reports

The Midland Junior Baseball Association has named Gil Kinney as commissioner for the 1984 youth baseball season.

The MJBA has organized youth baseball leagues for over 30 years in addition to obtaining sponsors, playing field and equipment.

At the annual winter meeting, Don Phiffer, Little League commissioner, announced that registration for Little League and T-Ball programs would be March 1-2 at the home field of each league. The Little League boundaries will remain the same as last year.

The T-Ball program, under the direction of Gerald Nobles, will move to Lancaster Park, located at Alpine Street and Kansas Avenue. The T-Ball program is the newest baseball program in Midland and is designed for youngsters in the 6-7 age group. The season will be completed by the end of the school year.

The Little League season will end June 16. Phiffer announced that the B-Division City tournament would begin on Tuesday, June 19, and would be a three-day single elimination tournament at Garrett Brown Park with Western Little League as a host.

Western will also host the A-Division City Tournament at Garrett Brown, beginning Monday of the following week. Each of the five city Little League divisions will be represented in the City Tournament by the winner of its A and B division teams. After the City Tournament, each league will send an all-star team to the Little League District Tournament, which is expected to be in Big Spring in late July.

Bob Crawford, Teenage commissioner, announced that sign-up for teenagers would begin April 16 with the season starting the Monday after school is recessed for the summer.

Ernie Johnson, head baseball coach at Midland Lee, and Tim Wayland, head baseball coach at Midland High, will hold a coach's clinic for persons interested in coaching a team this year. No date has been set for that clinic.

MSA extends registration

The Midland Soccer Association has extended registrations until midnight Saturday for the following divisions: Girls and Boys, under-12, under-14 and Girls under-16.

Forms may be picked up at the Parks and Recreation Dept. and returned to Commissioner Paul Breitzman, 2611 Ward.

The MSA begins its regular season March 3.

Steve Gross wins ski race

Midland's Steve Gross of Midland won the Texas Cup ski race at Sierra Blanca last weekend.

The field of 110 the first day was reduced to 32 for the finals. The finals consisted of one-on-one dual slaloms, two runs, with best times advancing.

Odessa women set meeting

ODESSA — An organizational meeting of the Odessa Women's Amateur Softball Association is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 29 at the Energas building, 519 N. Lincoln in Odessa.

Coaches and managers are urged to attend. Team fees will be $325 per team.

For further information, contact Betty Burns at 332-2580 after 5 p.m.

Players expect release

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Willie Wilson and Jerry Martin, two of four members of the 1983 Kansas City Royals serving sentences at a federal prison on cocaine convictions, were expected to taste freedom today, prison officials said.

Officials at the Federal Correctional Institution in Fort Worth confirmed Wednesday that Wilson and Martin would be released ahead of schedule, The Kansas City Times reported. The time of their release was not disclosed.

Wilson and Martin began serving 90-day sentences Dec. 5 for misdemeanor convictions of trying to obtain cocaine. Both players, who pleaded guilty to the charges in U.S. District Court in Kansas City, Kan., are being released nine days ahead of schedule because of good behavior, officials said.

Vida Blue and Willie Aikens, two other 1983 Royals serving similar sentences at the federal prison, began their sentences after Wilson and Martin and were not scheduled for release until late March and early April.

Neither player has yet received time off for good behavior, prison officials said.

Martin's attorney, William Simpson, said the former Royals outfielder probably will report soon to the New York Mets' training camp to try out as a free agent.

"He's very hopeful to be playing baseball this time next week," Simpson said. "We are very close to an agreement. In fact, we have what both sides consider a verbal agreement. We just don't have a signed contract."

Wilson, an All-Star outfielder who has been retained by the Royals, was expected to report to training camp at Fort Myers, Fla., after visiting his family in suburban Kansas City, team officials said.

"Willie and I talked about it when I visited him last month," said Royals General Manager John Schuerholz. "Whenever he is ready to come, that means whenever he has been with his family and he reaches the point where he is ready to come down here and get his mind fully on baseball, we'll be glad to have him."

Aikens has been traded to the Toronto Blue Jays, and the future of Blue, a former Cy Young Award winner, remains uncertain.

Wilson, Aikens and Martin were suspended from baseball for one year by baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who allowed for a review of the suspensions May 15 by his successor. None can play in spring exhibition games, except perhaps informal intrasquad games.

Wilson and Martin were expected to appear at hearings in New York next week in conjunction with a grievance filed by the Major League Baseball Players Association. The grievance asks that Kuhn be required to show just cause for the suspensions.

Green irked over Jenkins' absence

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — The failure of pitcher Fergie Jenkins to make the Chicago Cubs' first spring training workout has General Manager Dallas Green irked at the veteran right-hander.

But Jenkins says he was in the team's clubhouse Tuesday and didn't take part in practice because he didn't have his equipment with him.

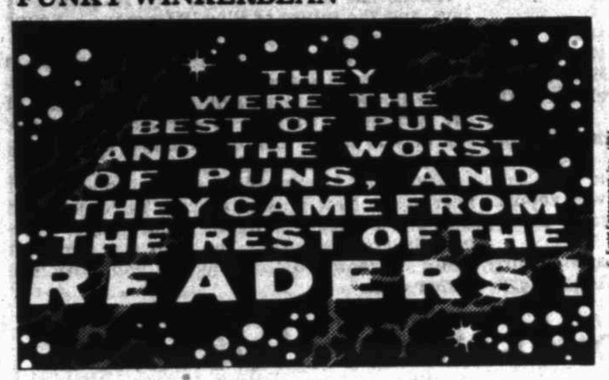

"I was there," Jenkins said Tuesday. "I talked to Jay (Johnstone) and most of the guys. The reason I didn't work out was because I had no equipment in my locker. I can't work out in my stocking feet. It's no big deal."

Jenkins said he left his equipment in nearby Scottsdale, where he had taken part in former

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, February 24, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthday of German fairy tale author Wilhelm Grimm, Pittsburgh Pirates great Honus Wagner, artist Winslow Homer and WWII hero Adm. Chester Nimitz. Also sharing your birthday: actor James Farentino, Baltimore Orioles all-star Eddie Murray and conductor/composer Michel Legrande. In the coming year, a new partnership could give you everything you want. Concentrate on building your financial resources. The family circle draws tighter in times of crisis. Set aside more time for romance. A new love could try to hustle you down the aisle. Step on the brakes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not become involved in problems that your loved ones should solve for themselves. Act quickly and a legal matter could be resolved in your favor. Take experts with you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A touch of mystery makes romance very exciting. Concentrate on completing whatever you are working on. Member of opposite sex could be setting you up for a fall. Watch your step.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new understanding with loved one gets your day off to a promising start. Complete any old projects before committing yourself to something new. Socializing takes precedence over romance this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new understanding with loved one gets your day off to a promising start. Complete any old projects before committing yourself to something new. Socializing takes precedence over romance this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Making money has to be your top priority now. Good luck and travel go hand in hand. Let romance simmer for a while. Athletes are winners today. Keep your emotions under control.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be careful not to overpower your co-workers. They might resent instead of admire you. Consider a family member's proposal. A loan has a better chance of being approved now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Dealing with ineffectual people will only frustrate you. Concentrate on projects you can handle on your own. You meet someone very attractive in an unlikely setting. Go slow in romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cope as best you can with someone who is difficult. Your work impresses influential people, putting you in line for a raise or promotion. A communications breakdown causes temporary confusion. Stay calm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Better be sure of your facts before making any accusations. A new creative challenge is a plus. Resist an urge to be extravagant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone may be playing games with your emotions. Protect yourself in the clinches. Settle any misunderstandings before leaving the office. Group gatherings hold special appeal this evening. Invite a friend along.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An influential friend is on your side in a personal matter. The situation could get sticky, however, if mate is involved. Be honest. This is no time to gamble with joint resources.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Early morning is the best time to make proposals. Influential people are receptive to your ideas. Heed your intuition if about to make a big change. Take nothing at face value.

'Lace' mindless miniseries

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Three silly girls, sitting amid the Alps, talking about one of them being pregnant. This scene perfectly sums up "Lace," ABC's cheap champagne that bubbles over with cardboard characters, glitzy scenery and titillating talk.

The mindless miniseries, adapted from Shirley Conran's best-selling novel of the same name, will be broadcast for three hours Sunday night and two more never-ending hours Monday night.

"Lace" is the logical regression for a television industry that is becoming more perversely enamored with loathsome characters who say nothing, stand for nothing and give us nothing in return for our time.

"Lace" is about three cliquish, snooty girls from a cloistered boarding school in France.

The three girl spend their frivolous lives dreaming of first love and the chance to re-create the amours of their paperback heroine, Lucinda Lace.

They must have skipped the part about birth control. One gets pregnant. Then they swear to keep hidden from the outside world which of them is "pregers," as the British member of the trio puts it. Their intention is to have the baby, put it up for adoption and reclaim it, as soon as one of them becomes a woman of means.

But who's baby is it?

Is it Judy's (Bess Armstrong)? She's the American bobby-soxer who rises to fame by reporting on Vietnam from a trench and living to tell the world about death through her best-seller, "Rape in a Foxhole."

Is the baby Pagan's? She's the aristocratic English girl, played with a perpetual snear and snarl by Brooke Adams, who has a brief fling with an Arab prince (Anthony Higgins).

Or could Mommy Dreariest be Maxine? She's the French girl played by Arielle Dombasle, who gives the only satisfactory performance of the bunch.

Meanwhile, the baby is growing up, waiting pitifully for her anonymous, insensitive mother to give her the affection she desperately wants. Whatever sympathies viewers might have for Lili (played blankly by former model Phoebe Cates), they evaporate when she becomes a slimy, sniveling prostitute and porno star obsessed with ruining the lives of her three mothers.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

We all know that it is aces and kings that win the tricks. But don't overlook those deuces and treys. You never know when one of them could prove crucial to success.

Note North's raise to three hearts. Since it showed a maximum no trump opening bid and excellent trump support, and South was more than justified in going on to game.

While we do not normally recommend the underlead of an ace against a suit contract, we heartily endorse West's choice here. The bidding marked North for spade values, and if declarer lacks the queen he will almost surely misguess. Unfortunately, when declarer played low East made the technically correct, though impractical, play of the nine. East should have realized that, if declarer does indeed have the ace of spades, the defenders will get no trick in the suit because dummy's clubs will be a source of discards.

Declarer won the ten of spades and led the jack of clubs. West grabbed the ace and recovered lost ground by again underleading the ace of spades. This time East won the queen and he returned the suit, completing the defensive book when West took the ace of spades. West exited with a diamond to the queen, king and ace.

Now declarer made a play which he was soon to regret — he led the three of trumps to the king, and then continued with the ace. Life improved fleetingly when the queen dropped. Declarer now started to run clubs for diamond discards. Before declarer could get his third sluff, East ruffed and declarer overruffed. Had declarer been able to cross back to the board, he would have been able to get rid of his last diamond loser on dummy's fifth club. That would have been achieved had declarer retained his lowly three of hearts. Since all the trumps had been extracted, he could have crossed back to the table by leading the tray to the five.

High deficit could soak up housing loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Record federal deficits will soak up money that is badly needed to house Americans in the next decade unless steps are taken quickly to reduce the red ink and increase money available for loans, the U.S. League of Savings Institutions said today.

The trade group is recommending spending cuts to trim the deficit and tax incentives to encourage people to put more money in banks and savings and loan associations.

President Reagan, though not addressing the question of housing, said in his news conference Wednesday night he foresaw no clash between government and private borrowing that could drive up interest rates and abort the nation's economic recovery — at least this year.

In fact, he said rates should be coming down, a development that would clearly help prospective home-buyers.

However, the savings institutions group said problems were clear in the longer term.

Today's new report says even by conservative estimates, an average of 2.12 million housing units, including mobile homes, will have to be built in each of the remaining six years of the decade to provide homes for 14.8 million new households.

"But there will not be enough capital available to the private sector to finance 2.12 million housing units a year after the capital market is tapped to fund the federal deficits. Housing will suffer an acute capital shortage totaling $288 billion," the report said.

Deficits estimated to rise above $200 billion a year will be financed through federal borrowing, no matter what the consequences, the trade group said in a new report titled, "Assuring Homeownership in the 1980s."

"The private sector — least of all families seeking home financing — is no match for the federal government when it comes to borrowing money," the report said. "The U.S. Treasury always stands first in line at the credit window."

The group estimates that without actions to change current trends, federal deficits will actually exceed net domestic savings in the years 1985-87.

Foreign money lured by high interest rates and a stable U.S. economy has been adding significantly to the domestic savings pool in the past year, but only at the cost of a record foreign trade deficit, the report said.

"Filling the future capital shortage with foreign savings is obviously not a sensible solution," it said.

Part of the answer, according to the league, is to cut federal spending from projected levels for goods and services by amounts ranging from 12 percent this year to 17 percent in 1989. And to cut projected payments for such programs as Social Security, Medicare and welfare by amounts ranging from 1.5 percent to 3 percent a year.

However, the report said, even those cuts won't be enough unless policy-makers recognize the need for more personal savings and do something about it.

The league's recommendation: enactment of "a broad-based tax incentive for personal saving that is structured to reduce taxes on interest and dividend income for all taxpayers, but which has its strongest relative effect on taxpayers at or below the 28 percent marginal tax bracket" — generally those with taxable income of less than $30,000.

At the same time, certain taxes on consumption would be raised to make up for the revenue lost through the savings incentive.

"The best hope for raising the aggregate level of saving therefore rests with households in the middle of the income distribution, those who have incomes that would allow them to save more than they currently do and for whom a tax incentive might provide a sufficient inducement for them to change their behavior," the report said.

It did not offer specific proposals on which federal spending programs should be cut or how consumption taxes should be raised.

Nationwide walkout of airline pilots halted

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association has quietly abandoned talk of conducting a nationwide one-day strike in a protest over deregulation of commercial aviation.

Henry A. Duffy, president of the union, said in an interview he had concluded that such a shutdown "would be a traumatic thing for the people to go through."

Duffy, in town for a week-long meeting of the AFL-CIO executive council, had threatened such a strike by the 33,000-member union last summer as some major airlines resorted to bankruptcy or near bankruptcy. He repeated the threat last October at the AFL-CIO convention in nearby Hollywood, Fla.

The aim of the shutdown, Duffy said then, would have been to rivet public attention on economic problems in the airline industry, which the union blames on 1979 legislation lifting government regulation. He claimed the resulting competition was forcing many airlines to try to abandon labor contracts.

However, Duffy said Wednesday that after talking to both Reagan administration officials and members of Congress, "I came to the conclusion that it wouldn't be productive — that even if we pulled the world down for 24 hours, it wouldn't do any good."

Duffy first threatened a nationwide walkout before pilots struck Continental Air Lines on Oct. 1, but he has not raised the specter of a walkout in recent months. Continental sharply cut back its flights before the strike, and has continued to operate with non-striking and newly hired pilots.

Auto industry reveals $900 million profits

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp., announcing its 1983 earnings statement today, was expected to show a profit as high as $900 million, pushing U.S. auto industry profits for the year to a new high.

Such a profit for Chrysler would boost last year's U.S. industry profits to $6.3 billion in the latest sign that the U.S. industry, mired in a depression for four years, has pulled itself into a sustained recovery.

Chrysler was the most striking example of the industry turnaround. Four years ago, it began to teeter on the brink of bankruptcy, losing more than $1 billion in 1979, a U.S. corporate record $1.7 billion in 1980 and nearly half a billion dollars more the next year.

Pioneer lists net income

AMARILLO — Pioneer Corporation (NYSE) today reported that the corporation 's net income for 1983 was $75.1 million, or $2.01 per share, compared with $61.5 million, or $1.66 per share, for 1982. Income computations for 1982 included a special charge to provide for losses on uranium operations.

Income from continuing operations amounted to $72.9 million in 1983, or $1.95 per share. The comparable figures for 1982 were income from continuing operations of $64.4 million, or $1.74 per share. The 1982 figures reflect the spin-off of Energas Company, formerly a Pioneer division, in October 1983.

One million can collectors help Alcoa recycle over 10 billion cans

Pittsburgh, Pa. — An estimated one million can collectors helped Aluminum Company of America recycle 10.7 billion aluminum beverage cans in 1983. Collectors earned nearly 123 million for voluntarily bringing the used cans to one of 1900 recycling centers participating in Alcoa's national aluminum can recovery activity.

Ron Glah, Alcoa Recycline Company president, said Alcoa will remelt the used cans and roll the metal into new aluminum sheet for sale to can makers. He said the 428 million pounds of aluminum cans Alcoa recycled was about equal to the annual output of two average-sized aluminum smelting plants.

"Aluminum can recycling is a growing enterprise of uncommon value to the nation and to Alcoa," Glah said.

"Recycling saves 95 percent of the energy required to produce aluminum from ore. Can recycling flights litter, and eases the burden on municipal landfills. By reducing foreign ore imports, recycling also makes a positive contribution to the nation's balance of trade. Recycling cans is a convenient way everybody can help conserve valuable resources and earn extra money for themselves or their organizations at the same time."

Glah estimates can recycling has created about 30,000 jobs at the nation's 6000 recycling centers, at aluminum compaies, and in the transportarion and can processing equipment industries that support the recycling effort.

About 92 percent of beverage cans are aluminum. During 1983, recycling programs by aluminum companies, can makers, the beverage industry, supermarkets and others recovered about 55 percent of the aluminum cans produced. Reclaimed aluminum from used cans currently makes up about eight percent of total U.S. aluminum consumption, Glah said.

Nuclear industry resists more safety orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort by the nuclear industry to thwart any more government-ordered safety improvements to power plants is being rejected as "absolutely unbelievable" by federal regulators.

Four of the five members of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission objected Wednesday to new regulations proposed by the Atomic Industrial Forum that would require exhaustive analyses before regulators could order any changes at plants already licensed or under construction.

"This is a lawyer's dream," said Commissioner James Asselstine. "The commission won't be able to impose any new requirements. I find that an absolutely unbelievable proposal."

Only Commissioner Thomas Roberts didn't object to the industry's proposal. "You can't blame them for trying," he said.

Meanwhile, reactor manufacturers, utilities and the Reagan administration — all blaming ever-changing NRC regulations for most of the industry's problems — are asking Congress to do what the NRC rejected.

The administration's so-called "nuclear regulatory reform" bill contains essentially the same language requiring the NRC to first economically justify any backfitted changes it wants and at the same time prove they will substantially increase a plant's overall safety level.

"They want the Congress to say that all of the reactors out there are safe and that nothing ever needs to be done," said Commissioner Victor Gilinsky.

The NRC went on the record last year objecting to the administration's proposal to limit the commission's authority to order safety changes as the need for them is recognized.

But because of industry claims that changing regulations and new safety requirements are behind the construction delays and skyrocketing costs of many plants, the commission promised to address the problem.

Asselstine and Gilinsky said that already much has been done, with many new review and appeals procedures established in the past three years requiring NRC officials to weigh the costs and benefits of any changes they want. Both said they saw no need for more formal regulations doing the same thing.

Texas discoveries reported

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas operators reported 1,226 gas and 715 oil discoveries in 1983, according to Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

In 1982, a total of 1,421 gas and 702 oil discoveries were filed with the Railroad Commission, which regulates drilling for and production of oil and gas in the state.

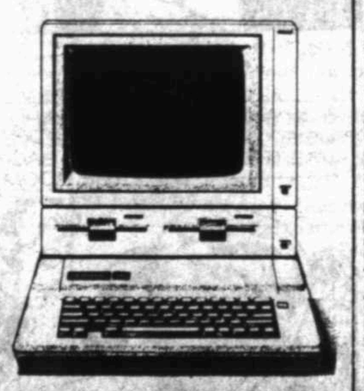

Completions reported to the Railroad Commission in 1983 were down 7 percent compared to one year ago. Operators reported 15,941 oil, 5,027 gas, and 534 service completions, for a total of 21,502. Reports filed with the commission for 1982 reflected 16,296 oil, 6,273 gas and 629 service completions, for a total of 23,198.

Oil discoveries in 1983 included 34 in the San Antonio area (District 1).

ST LOUIS,—Southwestern Bell Corp. has reported a modest incease of 3.3 percent in net income for 1983.

The company said net inocme rose to $892.7 Million from $864 million in 1982. Total operating expenses were up only 1.3 percent, to $5.31 billion, from $5.24 billion, in 1982. Return on equity for 1983 was 12.16 percent, up from 12.05 percent in 1982.

"While this is an improvement over 1982 in our rate of return, it is still far below the return level investors require of a corporation involved in a highly competitive, rapidly-evolving industry," said Zane E. Barnes, Southwestern Bell Corprostion chairman of the board.

Barnes said the company's rising net income for 1983 continued a positive trend.

Jury finds teen-ager guilty of attempted murder

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Eighteen-year-old Albert Roy Sanchez is to be sentenced today after having been found guilty of attempted capital murder in last fall's abduction and stabbing of his former fiance's mother.

A seven-man, five-woman jury returned the guilty verdict after 2½ hours of deliberations late Wednesday afternoon. Sanchez, of 1520 S. Terrell, could be sentenced to a maximum of life imprisonment.

Sanchez admitted stabbing 45-year-old Arlene Mullin and abandoning her at an isolated oil lease site near Greenwood on Oct. 6. But he could offer no explanation for why he did it.

"I didn't mean to do it," he said in response to questions by court-appointed defense attorney Bill Bowden of Odessa. "I don't know why I stabbed her. No, I didn't plan it."

Sanchez also admitted, however, that he carried a strip of bedsheet around for four days prior to the attack and had a 10-inch butcher knife concealed in his sock when he induced Mrs. Mullin to accompany him on a drive to see a car he told her he had purchased as a present for her daughter.

The cloth was used as a blindfold that Mrs. Mullin said she had put on voluntarily after Sanchez told her he wanted her "to be surprised" when she saw the vehicle.

The girl — 16-year-old Cindy Nelson — had left for California to be with her father prior to the stabbing of Mrs. Mullin, who had posted bond for Sanchez after he was arrested for burglary last spring. The youth was found guilty and placed on five years' probation May 31.

Sanchez denied prosecution contentions that he somehow held Mrs. Mullin responsible for her daughter's move to California and indicated he was planning on moving there to be with her.

He told jurors the reason for the knife was that he was going to talk to Mrs. Mullin about some remarks she allegedly had made about her daughter being "immature and irresponsible."

He said he felt "she wouldn't listen to me" unless he had something with which to intimidate her.

In other testimony, Sanchez was portrayed as an introverted, "almost withdrawn" young man who had difficulty making friends and communicating with people.

Mrs. Mullin was stabbed once in the back during a six-hour ordeal in which she said she prayed and "talked to a little lizard" to remain conscious when Sanchez abandoned her on the lease site after refusing her pleas to be taken to a doctor or the hospital.

He returned to the location twice during the three or four hours she lay alone on the lease, she testified, and said she was finally able to talk him into taking her for help after agreeing to "a story" that would blame the attack on "two strangers."

Her pulse wasn't "discernible" when she arrived at Midland Memorial Hospital with massive internal bleeding, and Dr. Seamus Carmody told jurors: "There's no question in my mind that she would have died without medical treatment."

"I was just afraid to take her to the hospital" at first, Sanchez maintained in whispered, barely audible responses to defense questions.

"I didn't know she was hurt that bad. I didn't want her to die. I never intended to leave her there to die."

UTPB psychology professor Dr. Joel Greenspoon said the conclusion he reached after a four-hour examintaion of Sanchez last December was that he "is a passive, submissive, highly suggestible young man" who showed no sign of "aggressive or assertive behavior."

Greenspoon admitted under cross-examination, however, that he hadn't talked to Mrs. Mullin and agreed that her stabbing "certainly was not" consistent with his assessment of Sanchez.

The sentencing phase of the trial got under way at 9 a.m. today in State District Judge Pat Baskin's court. The minumum sentence for the first-degree felony is five years.

Owner: Only thing to do is kill dog

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Moments after the jury found Al Edson guilty of letting Mushroom run loose in the neighborhood, he decided confinement for his dog was no life befitting a friend.

"Absolutely the only alternative I have is to kill the dog," said a saddened Edson, who viewed Mushroom as a roaming neighborhood security dog. "The only thing I can do is kill the dog. I'm not going to be cruel. I'm not going to pen her up." Mushroom is a "free spirit," he said. "What is she going to do without the relationship that I have with her?"

Edson said Mushroom couldn't live without her freedom.

"We don't want you to kill the dog, obviously," Municipal Court Administrator Nick Weidenkopf told Edson. He suggested Edson might find a home for the dog in the country, where no leash-law exists, or turn her over to the city's Animal Shelter for care.

"Would you take one of your children and give her away?" Edson asked Weidenkopf.

"I don't want to do that (kill the dog). That's the last thing in the world I want to do."

Mushroom is accustomed to roaming within the neighborhood, Edson said, and the neighbors apparently appreciate her surveillance and barking at strangers. "Everybody in the neighborhood loves her," he said. "I have neighborhood support." Mushroom's watchfulness, Edson suggested, has the effect of warding off criminals and alerting neighbors of intruders.

"There's no way she going to stayed penned," Edson said. "She's just a special dog. She likes to roam; she likes her freedom." The dog is too old to change her lifestyle and to submit to confinement, he said.

Edson said he would have no objection to Mushroom living in a confined area if only she could adapt to it, but that's unlikely, he indicated. "The dog would be miserable if I penned her up."

Weidenkopf said the Animal Shelter could help Edson and the dog adjust to new circumstances.

ON THE NIGHT after the trial, Mushroom was in the house with Edson and his wife, Barbara, instead of outside in the yard, roaming the neighborhood or resting in an older car just outside Edson's house.

"She wants to sleep in the car," Edson said Wednesday night. "She doesn't have any other home."

Edson said he really doesn't want to end Mushroom's life. Then again, he said neither he nor the dog could bear for her to be confined within a fenced-in yard or chained up.

EDSON, 40, was convicted in Midland Municipal Court by a four-woman, two-man jury of violating the city's dog-leash ordinance which requires that a dog be confined by fence or leash unless the animal is hunting, is in obedience training or is in a dog show.

In the four years he has owned the 7-year-old mutt, Edson has let Mushroom roam the neighborhood in northeast Midland. He said Mushroom was protective but not aggressive.

Pedalists can view while they lose at YMCA

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

It was while watching a basketball game a couple of weeks ago that the idea bounced into Bob Smith's mind.

The Midland YMCA general director was at the men's fitness center at the Central Y branch when the Arkansas-North Carolina game began. "I turned on the TV and pulled my (stationary) bike up," he said. "There were others coming in and I looked back and there was one more riding back there, and then, eventually, every bike in the health club was pulled in front of the TV."

As the men talked about the teams, criticized the coaches, discussed the dunks and pumped the pedals, an idea for a new YMCA program began.

"There was kind of a camaraderie that developed in there," Smith said. "It was just like if you were at home watching the game with friends. But it was the idea of burning up calories, getting entertained and being weight conscious...

"When you consider the amount of hours sports fans spend watching sports, it can add up to a lot of time for fitness."

As the wheels turned, the concept grew.

"People that watch soap operas enjoy it, but they feel guilty because they're wasting time. I thought that if you start to exercise while you're watching them, well, over a course of a year, it can amount to a certain degree of weight loss."

When one of the pedalists behind Smith panted it'd be great if they were watching the game on a big television screen, the idea swung into action.

The Alamo YMCA's Cyclers and Soapers Club was formed with the cooperation of local merchants who helped finance the six stationary bikes, large screen TV and recording equipment.

For $20, a passport fitness card is issued to Y members and non-members for 12 hour-long workouts. Thirty minutes can be spent on the bikes in front of the TV while the Y provides other exercise programs such as calisthenics and workouts on the weight-lifting equipment for the other half hour.

If one wants to watch an hour-long program, space is provided in the bike room for floor exercises.

It's pretty much of a first-come, first-serve now, Smith said, but plans call for reserving a bike for special events like the Summer Olympics or boxing events, other sporting events and possibly the political campaigns.

Ricky Skaggs didn't disappoint his fans

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Ricky Skaggs' "overnight success" took the better part of a quarter of a century to achieve. And he still has a long way to go before having the drawing capacity of a headliner.

At least that's the way it looked Saturday at his Chaparral Center performance when, in an area supposedly a safe draw for country shows, his gig grossed 1,295 paying fans.

Backed up by The Whites, a group which has had four top 10 singles since 1981, ("You Put the Blue in Me," "Hangin' Around," "When the New Wears Off of Our Love" and "That Old Familiar Feeling"), Skaggs didn't disappoint his fans.

Performing for 90 minutes, he included the songs many came to hear — "Don't Get Above Your Raisin'," "Crying My Heart Out Over You," "Heartbroke," "I Wouldn't Change You If I Could," "Don't Cheat in Our Hometown" and "Highway 40 Blues." (Skaggs' credits include two gold albums in two years — "Waitin' for the Sun to Shine," May 1981, and "Highways and Heartaches," September 1982.)

Amtrak will not serve Midland, spokesman says

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Data gathered by Amtrak on an inspection tour of the Missouri Pacific Railroad line through Midland earlier this month has not resulted in plans to implement passenger service to the area, according to an Amtrak spokesman.

An Amtrak train, consisting of a diesel locomotive, coach and sleeping car, rolled across Texas from Houston to El Paso and through Midland Feb. 3. On board the test train were engineering and technical experts.

"There's no immediate plans to reroute the service," Debbie Marciniak, manager of corporate communications for Amtrak's Midwest Region, said when contacted in her Chicago headquarters. "Amtrak regularly conducts tests of this kind. It was very routine.

"We operate inspection trains of this sort quite often to update us on the track conditions."

Amtrak's findings from the inspection tour are not being discussed with the media.

"We don't make public those results," noted Ms. Marciniak.

Factors which were to have been studied by train officials included:

— Platform and station facilities;
— Suitability of the tracks for passenger service;
— Crossing protection;
— General physical plants in cities.

A spokesman said at that time that one major purpose of the test run was for Amtrak officials to become aware of possible routes which might be used in case disasters befell tracks normally followed by Amtrak passenger trains.

The announcement that the test train was to inspect Missouri Pacific tracks stirred up considerable hopes locally for the initiation of passenger service to West Texas.

Midland City Council last December adopted a resolution supporting service by Amtrak. City councilmen noted a need for additional forms of transportation to and from the city, which last had passenger train serice in 1968.

At that time, Midland's population was 59,000. In the interim it has increased 54.6 percent to approximately 92,000 now.

Any passenger service to Midland, according to a second Amtrak spokesman, would be preceded by a broad range of marketing studies which would scrutinize population densities along the route, operational impacts for connecting trains, and travel trends.

No such marketing studies are planned, noted Clifford Black, public information representative in Amtrak's Washington, D.C., office.

He just needs the basics to keep chugging along

Today I'm fastidious. I wasn't always so discerning in the yesteryears and at the supper table. But if you know me, you've got to know that all this bragging (or moaning) is relative.

I'm particular today about where and what I eat and drink. I go to cafeterias a lot; the food is reasonably priced. (I try to pick up a tab around $3.50 or so. Why splurge? If you're inclined to be penny-wise and dollar-foolish, you don't want to buy high-priced cuts of meats and expensive desserts.) After feeding, I often go by a grocery store and pick up a banana, orange, apple or grapefruit. It's cheaper that way and plenty nourishing. I also drink lots of water. Not a glass or two. I mean more and more. Tons of water. There's reason behind my thirst.

(I eat after late-afternoon aerobic exercises at the downtown YWCA.

The W is intentional; I often behold (Would a gentleman gawk?) one of God's finest-ever creations — the female figure. It's worth a gander even at the upstanding Y. The YWCA is appropriate, since there are lots of women bending, stretching, running and hopping down there along with the men folks. Maybe the YMCA should be the YMWCA or the YPCA for young people.

But you can understand my thirst after a workout. I leave the coffee and tea alone but don't let me mislead you; I'm not a purist. Anyone who drinks Midland water, though it's filtered, couldn't be physically chaste. The water's on the house. That includes refills.

Too, I drink out of habit; it satisfies a craving.

I used to drink most anything within reach — particularly if the drink was naturally inclined to suds up. Food without beer wasn't edible.

I've eaten chili, son-of-gun soup and menudo stew that only a desert rat would devour. I've eaten pigs' feet and thought they were a treat (or a dare). I've eaten smoked fish and who knows what else on a sawdust covered floor in a Barcelona bar and thought Maxim's played second fiddle to barroom snacks.

I've downed meals in chat-'n'-chew cafes where the dish water was the rinse water. (Today you'd have to forcibly ply me full of booze and lies before I'd go back to one of those greasy spots.) Fortunately, too, I've eaten and drank in the dark.

I've eaten rancid beans only because the beer was free and the hospitality was there. And in my more rash youth I, in seeking instant health, once put a raw egg (minus the shell) into a glass of milk and drank it. I didn't go for seconds.

I've even eaten some hotdogs which were about as fit to eat as salt pork or carrion. I've eaten lots of cracklings fried in pure lard back in my home country of East Texas and really tried to savor fried crawfish tails. At one point in my pock-marked life, I thought nothing was finer than potato and ketchup (Who ever heard of cats-up?) sandwiches.

I've eaten none-better mulligan stew made by a dear friend, Merwin Ratcliff, a retired newspaper editor who left the chemistry field and took on printer's ink.

Now, I've even eaten gourmet meals at country clubs, restaurants and homes. And they were good. But just like too much salt pork, hotdogs and red-eye chili, exotic cuisine can be suicidal.

Today, I'm like a steam locomotive. Just let me at the basics, and I'll fuel up and keep chugging along.

Owner: Only thing to do is kill dog

The neighbors appreciated Mushroom's attentiveness, he said, and some so testified in the trial in Municipal Court Judge Michael Abrams' court.

But after hearing testimony and arguments, the jury found Abrams guilty of letting Mushroom run loose on Dec. 30 and again on Jan. 23 in the 400 block of West Dormard Ave.

The jury fined him $220 — $165 on one offense and $65 on the other — and Abrams added on a $2.50 state tax.

"They (the jurors) seemed to have apparently thought that it was more severe than perhaps you did," the judge told Edson.

"I don't have that kind of money (to pay the fine in full)," Edson said. His fines likely would have been $35 and $40 for the offenses had he pleaded guilty before the court.

Abrams said he would "set up a time pay if you need it" to satisfy the fines.

HOWEVER, Edson indicated he might appeal the verdict to Midland County Court. "I'm considering it," he said Wednesday night.

Prosecutor Keith Stretcher said Edson "took no precautions to stop" the dog from running loose. His closing arguments were brief. "What we've got here is total disregard (of the law)," he told the jurors.

Afterward, Stretcher said Edson "did a real good job" in representing himself. "He was well prepared." Earlier, Abrams said Edson's opening comments in the courtroom were "eloquent."

In his remarks to the jury, Edson, who was acting as his own attorney, admitted he allowed Mushroom to roam the neighborhood.

"She just never adapted to confinement," he said. "If there is such a thing as a free spirit, Mushroom certainly is one."

In his defense, he denied he had "recklessly" — as the city had charged — allowed the dog to be at large. Further, he said his behavior in letting Mushroom roam was not a "gross deviation" from the standards of care that an ordinary person would exercise under similar circumstances.

"IT WAS NEVER my intention to flagrantly disobey the law," he said. He noted that the dog was licensed, spayed and inoculated and that he would take responsibility for her actions.

He said that 39 residents in his neighborhood signed a petition, which indicated "no one on the block has any objection to Mushroom being free in the neighborhood...Mushroom is a valued neighborhood friend...Mushroom is loved and appreciated by neighorhood residents, especially by all of the children. She is always obedient...She is always under either my control or that of anyone else in the neighborhood."

He asked the jurors to render a "humane verdict."

"From the prosecutor's viewpoint, it is a simple matter of black or white: Mushroom was either loose, or she was not. From the defense's point of view, there are shades of gray."

FBI seizes company's books

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — FBI agents seized business records from a company that supplies spare aircraft parts to the Air Force in a raid staged as part of an investigation into possible fraud against the federal government, authorities said.

U.S. Attorney Edward Prado said the government is "just in the initial stages of the investigation" into Alamo Aircraft Supply Inc.'s business dealings with the government.

The FBI raided the offices of Alamo Aircraft on Saturday, according to the company's attorney, Segal Wheatley.

"We don't know ourselves what it's about," said Carl Wulfe, who owns the business with his two brothers.

Wheatley said that Alamo Aircraft has maintained a good record as a supplier, handling about $21 million in federal contracts a year.

Ricky Skaggs, The Whites didn't disappoint their fans

During "Heartbroke," two young girls age 14 to 16 behaved anything but broken-hearted. Both showed their familiarity with the song by dancing and singing from the concession stand to their seats.

The same was true for The Whites. Instant applause greeted each of the singles they've had in recent years and, when Buck White said, "We're going to give you some plain, pure country music," the audience certainly registered its approval. (However, Buck White's strongest performance of the night came when he sang a blues number, his expert fingers dancing across and sliding over the piano keys.)

Buck White introduced his girls, Sharon and Cheryl, by saying they had "spent 17 years on the road with their old dad." The Whites were joined by a relative newcomer to the group who is also a White daughter, Rosanna (whom Buck calls Miss Rose), for a quick solo of "Love is a Rose."

Miss Rose carried this Linda Ronstadt tune well; and Sharon's rich, husky voice contained an authenticity particularily in "You Put the Blue in Me."

Performing with The Whites was the virtuoso dobro player Jerry Douglas. Buck introduced him by saying, "He's going to play a fiddle tune on that. You watch him. This can't be done."

Douglas' expertise inspired a fan to say, his voice containing a hint of awe, "He's real talented."

And Skaggs would not be complete without the versatile Ricky Skaggs Band, winner of the Country Music Association's Instrumental Group of the Year award in 1983.

The Whites and Skaggs worked most of their lives perfecting their brand of bluegrass-influenced country. (Skaggs and Sharon White were married in August 1981, and the two are expecting a new arrival in less than three months.)

Both toured with Emmylou Harris, The Whites opening for her act (Cheryl and Sharon provided back-up on Miss Harris' LP "Blue Kentucky Girl") and Skaggs playing in her Hot Band (as well as collaborating on her album "Roses in the Snow").

It has only been in the last three years that The Whites and Skaggs have gained national recognition.

The low turnout could be partly chalked up to a more conservative approach in spending since the boom busted.

And Saturday was not Skaggs' first time onstage in Midland; he opened for Ronnie Milsap March 27, 1982 at Chaparral Center.

But perhaps the main reason was the style of country Skaggs performs.

Skaggs, who credits the Stanley Brothers with exerting a great influence on his music, said in an interview: "I'm coming in and doing traditional country music with more of a bluegrass, Appalachian Mountain string music. I'm taking it on back even much farther than Bob Wills or farther even than Bill Monroe, it's going back in real early days."

His statement "Sometimes it's hard to hear the country in country music these days" would find most traditional country fans nodding their heads in agreement.

His next words identified his feeling about the success he has experienced in record sales.

"What I have is very unique and very traditional sounding, but it is also contemporary with the age. It's very marketable these days, but it's still traditional. I'm so proud that I have something like that, that we can still look back and cling onto, and say this is part of our American heritage."

However, there is a difference in listening to an album or catching a song on the radio and signing on for an entire evening.

Skaggs may not have developed that broad base of followers who will come out for a show he does anytime, anyplace, not yet. But 29-year-old Skaggs, who performed on Nashville's Flatt & Scruggs television show at age 7 and said he first knew he wanted to be a musician at about that age, isn't going away.

The songs and approach in Saturday's concert merely reaffirmed that he and The Whites (and they're not alone) are dedicated to charting a place for traditional country and bluegrass in the '80s.

Odessa Hot-Air Balloon Festival scheduled

ODESSA — The First Annual Odessa Hot-Air Balloon Festival has been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 25 and 26, at Schlemeyer Field. The festival is being co-sponsored by the Odessa Convention & Visitors Bureau, the Odessa Hilton and Permian Mall.

The balloonists will register Friday, Feb. 24 at the Hilton, the headquarters for the event. Gates will open at 6:30 a.m., with the first ascension set for 8:30 a.m., Saturday at Schlemeyer Field. There will be a 50-cent general admission charge, with proceeds going to the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center. A limited number of booth spaces are available to clubs and organizations.

Also scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 25 is "Aviation Appreciation Day," scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. at the festival site. Those in attendance will be able to experience vertigo in a vertigon simulator furnished by the Federal Aviation Administration, watch continuous movies, see World War II planes on display, enjoy a mini air show, see Ultra-Lights fly, experience soaring with Alex Aldot through his own slide presentation and take scenic air rides. This event is co-sponsored by the Ector County Air Safety Committee, Ector County Pilots Association and the Civil Air Patrol.

Clubs and organizations interested in a booth or persons wanting additional information on these activities should contact Eunice May at the convention center, 400 W. 4th St or call 332-8189.

Madison engaged in combat

The only president to engage in combat while in office was James Madison, who briefly commanded an artillery battery trying to stave off British troops marching on Washington in the War of 1812.

Pedalists can view while they lose

Available during the Alamo Y's regular hours (9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday-Friday and 9 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Saturday), the cyclists have caught the eye of other potential pedalists.

"Since we've put the pilot program in, we've noticed a lot of parents spend a good deal of time waiting for their children here in the lobby," Smith said. "There is nothing more boring than waiting. So we're providing bikes and television for them on a per minute basis. Catching a news update or whatever would combat the boredom and alleviate the stress they've accumulated all day."

The program will be tested for six to eight weeks while the staff monitors what shows are preferred. Schedules then will be made with popular shows taped for second viewings.

Although studies indicate many people purchase stationary bikes for home use, pedal furiously for a few weeks and then put the bikes away out of boredom, Smith doesn't think the program will peter out.

"I think it'll be different because it's a group atmosphere," he said. "Like all of the other group exercise programs, you don't want to miss them, because you'll miss out on the fun of being part of the group."

Judge puts woman on 10:30 p.m. curfew

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the death of a wrecker driver has received a 10-year probated sentence with the stipulation that she be home by 10:30 each night.

Debra Ann Moore, 31, was convicted by a state district court jury which also set the 10-year sentence. She was charged with responsibility for an auto accident last November that killed wrecker driver L. C. Stephens.

State District Judge Judge Ted Poe granted probation, but he added extra features to the sentence.

He ordered the woman not to drive during probation.

Woman to stand trial

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Spring Valley woman accused of abducting a 3-day-old baby from a hospital maternity ward has been ordered to stand trial on charges of kidnapping, child stealing and false imprisonment.

Superior Court Judge Kenneth Johns set a trial date of April 4 for Linda Marie Patton.

education in brief

MC celebrates homecoming tonight

Midland College celebrates Homecoming tonight with announcement of the Homecoming Queen, naming of the college mascot and a dance.

The Queen will be named at halftime of tonight's basketball game between MC and Howard College.

The winning name of MC's mascot, hatched earlier this year, will be announced and the winner given $50.

ClayDesta National Bank is sponsoring a "Cash Scramble" for all the dollar bills one selected person can pick up in 30 seconds.

KCRS radio will choose a person to shoot a freethrow. The basket is worth $55 if made and $5.50 if missed.

MC's booster club will give away a television set and four autographed basketballs.

Following the game, MC students will have a dance in the Student Center.

MARC sponsors training session

A training session for IEP (individual education plan) planning is being sponsored by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens. It will be 7-9 p.m. tonight at the MARC Opportunity Center, 2701 N. A St. It is applicable to all types of special education students.

Included will be information on parents' rights, schools' responsibilities and avenues of appeal. Midland school representatives will explain forms and what can be expected in forming the IEP. Ray Unterbrink, MARC executive director, will explain legal rights.

MC offers SAT preparation course

The Midland College Department of Community Services will offer SAT Test Preparation, Financial Planning for Couples and two sections of Defensive Driving beginning the week of Feb. 27.

SAT Test Preparation will be 7-9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays for three weeks. Course is designed to improve performance on the SAT through the application of test-taking skills, the reduction of test anxiety and experience with the SAT format and testing procedures. Practice with actual test items will be included. Fee is $25.

Financial Planning for couples will meet 7-9 p.m. Thursdays for three weeks. Course is an overview of the vital goals, tools and methods needed to plan money management and growth. Emphasis on gaining financial knowledge and responsible planning for couples. Fee is $10.

Defensive Driving will be Monday and Tuesday as well as Wednesday and Thursday 6:30-10:30 p.m. Fee is $20.

Further information on these and other Community Services short courses can be obtained by calling 684-7851, extensions 147 or 216.

MC to sponsor art workshop

Area high school students taking art courses can participate in a workshop at Midland College March 9. Sponsored by the MC Art Department, it is a free seminar for high school students interested in taking art courses and learning different techniques in several media.

Between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. students may choose an intensive program in printmaking, fiberwork, painting, drawing and ceramics.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Charles A. Stewart, chairman of the MC Fine Arts Division, at 684-7851.

Students to bury time capsule

Pease Elementary sixth-graders in Dorothy McAtee's reading class were to bury a time capsule today as the culminating activity of a study unit on archeology.

The waterproof box will be filed with items representing 1984, including population statistics on Midland, a list of Pease teachers and students, a fashion magazine, a newspaper, a record and items of clothing. It was to be buried next to the flagpole. The students plan to leave a letter in the school office instructing students in the year 2000 to open the capsule.

Sheriff sentenced to one year in prison

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge rejected pleas for leniency and sentenced former Rockwall County Sheriff John M. Vance to a year in prison for hitting a 15-year-old boy with a whip last year.

"I believe that if this offense is not dealt with in a serious manner, then a cancer could grow unchecked within our law enforcement community," U.S. District Judge Joe Fish said Wednesday in announcing the sentence.

Fish also ordered Vance to pay a $1,000 fine.

Deputy Roy B. Wooldridge, who continues to serve, was ordered to pay a $500 fine for kicking the boy.

Vance resigned his position in January after pleading guilty to violating the civil rights of 15-year-old Richard V. Williams. Wooldridge also had pleaded guilty to the charges.

Vance also announced when he pleaded guilty that he would not run for re-election.

The judge said no sentence was necessary for Wooldridge because the deputy kicked the teen-ager in a fit of anger after a high-speed chase. Fish said that offense was less serious than Vance's use of a whip on the boy after he was taken to the Rockwall County sheriff's office.

Vance is to begin serving his sentence on March 14 at an institution that will be named later. He will have to serve at least 10 months in prison, since those who are sentenced to one year or less are ineligible for parole, a federal official said.

However, federal prisoners can have their sentence reduced by five days for every month served if they abide by prison regulations.

J.W. "Jimmy" Williams, superintendent of the Rockwall schools; W.T. "Bill" Satterwhite, senior vice president of Dallas-based Enserch Corp.; and Floyd Hacker, chief of the criminal law enforcement division of the Department of Public Safety, were among those who asked Fish to be lenient with Vance.

The judge said he did not want police officers to consider Vance's actions as acceptable conduct.

The investigation was launched after Williams' legal guardian, Martha Glenn, of Rowlett, said her nephew told her the sheriff whipped him on June 15 with a riding crop tipped with three knotted leather cords.

The youth claimed he was kicked by the deputy later.

Vance, who had been accused of lying about the beating before a grand jury, later apologized for beating the youth and lying about the incident.

Consulate helped businessman, official says

DALLAS (AP) — A State Department spokesman says a Dallas businessman who claims he was tortured during an eight-month stay in a Saudi Arabian prison received as much help as possible from U.S. diplomatic officials.

Bruce Munden, a 34-year-old petroleum engineer, has said that U.S. consulate officials in Dammam, Saudi Arabia, did little to help him in his attempts to be released.

Munden, who returned to Dallas last Thursday, told The Dallas Morning News that he was jailed following a dispute with his Saudi business partners over an Arabic-language contract. The Saudis claimed that he owed them $161,000, Munden said.

Steve Hill, a State Department spokesman in Washington, said Wednesday that consulate officials visited Munden eight times in prison and that Munden never said he was being physically mistreated.

Munden said he and other Americans confined in the prison were routinely beaten and strung up on a rack for minor violations of prison policy.

"Mr. Munden never made those allegations to consulate officers," Hill told The News. "He was visited eight times in prison, and he never brought this to our attention. If he had, with his permission, we would have made a formal protest to Saudi officials."

Hill said he had no information on the torture of other Americans.

However, Munden said he told consulate officials about the torture many times, but was told there was nothing that U.S. officials could do.

Munden, who claimed the contract was altered by his business partners to show he owed money, was jailed under a provision of Saudi law that allows a person to be detained over a dispute, even if no charges are filed.

The claim was dropped when the original English-language contract was read in court, Munden said.

Hill said the consulate officials provided Munden with translation services for most of his court appearances.

Ammonia fumes send people to hospital

ARLINGTON (AP) — At least 12 firefighters and four residents were hospitalized after being overcome by ammonia fumes that spread several blocks from a ruptured tank at a farm in southeast Tarrant County, authorities said.

The cause of the leak from the 1,000-gallon ammonia tank was not immediately determined, but a pressurized line apparently burst, a fire department spokesman said.

The leak was shut off about 8:05 p.m. Wednesday, about 30 minutes after being reported, officials said.

Fumes spread northward, forcing the temporary evacuation of about 12 homes about a mile south of Arlington near Mansfield, authorities said.

Nine firefighters and the residents were treated at Arlington Community Hospital for exposure and inhalation of the fumes, which affect the respiratory system and irritates the skin.

Three other firefighters were treated at Arlington Memorial Hospital. None were seriously injured, hospital spokesmen said.

Ector County to dismiss some pending cases

ODESSA (AP) — About 2,500 pending misdemeanor cases will be wiped off the books as "unprosecutable," Ector County Attorney Steve Groh says.

Groh said the "vast majority" of the cases, which range from shoplifting to driving while intoxicated, were filed between 1973 and 1979 and have been virtually ignored since.

He said DWI cases more than three years old and other misdemeanor cases more than two years old will be dismissed as part of a housecleaning process this week.

"Really, you can't effectively prosecute a case after it's one, two or three years old," said Groh. "Either the witnesses are unavailable or, if you can find them, they can't remember what happened.

"If you're talking about a law enforcement officer, he's probably handled several thousand other cases and the chances he'll be able to identify the guy are almost zero."

Groh, who is leaving office March 15 to join the U.S. Navy, said removal of the old cases would clean out county computer files.

"It's easier for me to dismiss a whole bunch of cases than a county attorney who's just starting off, just because some people won't understand and think that somehow they should have been salvaged," Groh said.

Ector County Judge Carol Gregg said that 300 new misdemeanor cases are filed each month and that "keeping current on those has taken quite an effort." She said old cases were put on a back burner.

Groh said a new system of setting court dates results in most cases being disposed of in two or three months.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

EDB causes consumer confusion

By LINDA ANDERSON

Products believed to contain unsafe amounts of the fumigant ethylene dibromide have been removed from supermarket shelves throughout the country. Many consumers are truly concerned and even frightened by all the hoopla about EDB, but many are mostly confused.

Several food manufacturers and processors have attempted to answer some consumers' questions about EDB.

According to the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, "The controversial fumigant ethylene dibromide (EDB) is not widely used in this country on fruits and vegetables...According to Bernard J. Imming, president of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association (the produce industry's national trade association), Alexandria, Va., the public has been given the erroneous impression that EDB is used on many fruit commodities. Actually less than 2 percent of the total fruit marketed in the U.S. has been treated with EDB, and most of that is imported, according to the Environmental Protection Agency's own estimates. Domestic use of EDB as a fumigant is practically non-existent, according to Imming.

"The fresh fruit and vegetable industry has actively sought effective and safe alternatives to EDB...

"Recent studies indicate that the risk to consumers of EDB-treated fruit has been grossly exaggerated. If these studies had suggested that the use of EDB as a fumigant was a significant hazard to the safety and confidence of consumers, these circumstances would have forced the industry to cease marketing EDB-treated fruit, regardless of the economic consequences."

The Quaker Oats Company, manufacturer of many grain products, has provided an information packet about EDB, its history and the controversy surrounding its use. According to the Quaker Oats Co. literature, the company has not used EDB "on grain or any finished products for more than 20 years. To the best of our knowledge, based on hundreds of tests by Quaker and others, all of our products fall well within the federal guidelines for EDB."

The literature also points out, "many consumers are unaware that even the minute traces of EDB residue are reduced 80-92 percent when grain-based products are cooked or baked."

Here are more EDB questions and Quaker Oat Company's answers:

" — What is EDB? EDB (or ethylene dibromide) is a colorless, non-flamable liquid with a sweet odor. It has been used as a pesticide to protect stored grain and milling machinery from infestation and, until quite recently, to protect the roots of citrus trees and a variety of other agricultural crops from attack by parasitic worms. By far the major use of EDB, however, is in anti-knock compounds added to leaded gasoline. This function accounts for over 90 percent of the EDB use in the United States.

" — Has EDB, in fact, been shown to cause cancer in human beings? A 1977 study by the National Cancer Institute showed that massive doses of EDB caused cancer in laboratory rats and mice. For a human being to consume the same quantity of EDB, in a similar time frame as that given to the laboratory mice, a person would need to consume from six to 12 tons of food containing low trace levels per billion of EDB everyday...

" — How much of the U.S. grain supply has been exposed to the pesticide EDB?...Unofficial estimates vary from 5 percent to 50 percent of the U.S. grain supply. Because EDB has been widely used as a pesticide on stored grain since the late 1940s, one EPA official has noted that 'if you want to avoid EDB, don't eat.' If all uses of the pesticide were halted tomorrow, estimates are that it would take from three to five years for our food supply to be free of EDB.

" — What is the current tolerance level of EDB? The three-tiered standards (set by the EPA Feb. 3, 1984) allow 900 parts per billion on raw grain intended for human consumption; 150 parts per billion on intermediate products including flour, mixes, soft cereals and other products requiring cooking before eating; and 30 parts per billion on ready-to-eat products such as cold cereals, snacks, bread and all baked goods. Additionally the EPA announced an emergency suspension of the use of EDB as a fumigant for stored grain and milling machinery.

" — What would be the result of not using pesticides to fumigate stored grain? Illinois State Agriculture Director Larry A. Werries has noted that the benefit of fumigation is 'it keeps little black bugs out of your breakfast food.' Dr. Stephen King, director of Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, has testified that without pesticide fumigation the incidence of weevils in grain products would increase."

Many manufacturers include their addresses on product packages. For any questions about EDB, please don't hesitate to write the manufacturer. I am sure they are anxious to clear up any misgivings consumers may have about certain products.

Clinic calms anger

Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Sacred institutions no longer offer guidance and order. Family networks have disintegrated. The threat of nuclear attack is ever present.

When we feel no one is minding the store in the cosmic sense, says Dr. Roland Maiuro, we experience frustration, competition and anger, which may translate into explosive violence.

Maiuro, director of Harborview Medical Center's nationally-recognized Anger Management Clinic here, is in the forefront of therapy designed to deal with the rising violence and anger of the '80s.

Many of those attending the anger management sessions have been ordered to do so by Seattle area judges in lieu of the more traditional sentence of jail or fines. Traditional sentences haven't been successful in stopping the tendency to violence. Last year in Seattle, assault figures through November stood at 4,361 cases, one of the few crime categories on the rise here. Police say the higher figures are due in part to domestic violence, which is now regarded as a criminal offense.

ANGER MANAGEMENT clinics such as Maiuro's are usually group sessions. They begin with feedback from the staff and other class members to give each angry person a picture of himself. Recognition of one's own anger is often difficult, but class members can usually see each other's anger more easily. It helps them recognize their own.

Clinic staff then teach them "de-arousal" techniques — relaxation, breathing amd imagery — and give medication if needed.

Then comes "stress inoculation, controlled provocation," Maiuro says. "We re-enact what triggers their anger. This allows them to develop psychological and behavioral antibodies, a coping mechanism. Each individual works as the others observe. We videotape them so they can see themselves in vivid — sometimes livid — color."

The anger management clinics have been busy, and Harborview has a three- to four-month waiting list for its classes. Class sizes range from six to 12 people, and attendance is for eight to 18 sessions. Full tuition ranges from $160 to $325, though fees may be adjusted downward according to income.

Class members cut across all economic, educational and age lines. About 95 percent are male, because angry women do not usually get physically violent.

ALCOHOL IS often involved and is treated as a separate problem. At least 70 percent of class members are referred by courts. Voluntary enrollment is encouraged but uncommon.

Angry people, even the violently angry, often do not see themselves as angry for two reasons, therapists say.

"People learn to deny they are angry because anger is socially undesirable and culturally disapproved," says Maiuro. "Usually, those around you know better than you that you are angry. Some people also have alexithymia, the inability to read one's own feelings and emotions. Clients are often unaware, at first, that they have any problem."

He says such people wonder why others are picking on them because their anger response — the fight-or-flight syndrome — is usually a sincere self-defense against what they perceive as a threat to their safety and well-being. Unplugging the fight-or-flight response and showing clients different ways of thinking about situations that have aroused their anger are the goals of anger management therapy.

"Anger patterns differ," Maiuro says. "Some people are depressed, some have alcohol problems, some have random anger, some are angry only in intimate relations. A few, 5 percent at most, have brain disorders. The majority have assaulted someone or something."

The classes have been very successful, says Maiuro.

"Eighty percent show a noticeable decrease in their level of anger, less dysphoria — the opposite of euphoria — and more coping power," he says.

Owning home still desired, but expensive

Copley News Service

Despite the fact that American families now desire a home of their own more than ever before, the home ownership rate is falling.

That's quite a surprise to housing leaders and economists who have been predicting a continual increase in the ownership rate at least through this century. They are now huddling over their forecasting desks with sharpened pencils to produce revised projections.

About 65 percent of all U.S. households now own their own home. It has been predicted that rate would continue to climb to 71 percent by the year 2000. New projections now point to about 59 percent by the turn of the century.

During the 1970s, the home ownership rate increased by 2.6 percent annually, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. It now appears that the rate may fall by 2.7 percent during the 1980s.

The next decade (1990s) will probably bring a sharper decline in home ownership rates — perhaps decreasing by 3.2 percent, it was stated in a recent report from the National Association of Realtors.

The reason for the previously unexpected decline in ownership rates is twofold: (1) The recession-induced decrease in household formations in the United States, and (2) loss in housing investment value caused by the lack of affordable mortgage money.

However, the motivation to own a home is as strong as ever. This is borne out by a recent survey conducted by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

The survey revealed that 29 percent of all U.S. households plan to move within the next five years. Of those who plan to move, about 90 percent of current home owners and 53 percent of current renters plan to buy their next home.

Also, from that same group of expectant movers, 81 percent of current home owners and 70 percent of renters want their next home to be a single-family detached house.

Judge gives convicts choice: Schooltime or hard time

CHICAGO (AP) — In the Rev. Harold Bailey's game of life, players don't go directly to jail. They take a second roll of dice — and land in school.

It's all part of Probation Challenge, a program in which a judge gives the convict this choice: schooltime or hard time.

In Probation Challenge, burglars, dope dealers and shoplifters must attend a court-mandated school — sometimes for as long as four years. Their reward is more than freedom.

"It's an education opposed to incarceration," says Bailey, 46, who founded Probation Challenge in 1979, which was the first court-mandated program of its kind in the nation. It has since been duplicated in North Carolina.

While Bailey's brainchild operates on the simple premise that everybody deserves a second chance, "It must be a meaningful second chance," he says.

When a convict is placed on probation, "We tell him to rehabilitate himself. But most clients can't even spell rehabilitated."

Bailey tries to change that. His program, which operates out of a courtroom and has 63 "students," offers the three Rs — reading, writing and arithmetic — and practical skills, such as electronics courses.

Seven Cook County judges participate in the program, screening convicts for the program.

Most convicts, Bailey says, are reared in "a vacuum of ignorance. They're brought up in high-rise concentration camps (public housing). They're dropouts. The only thing they put on the computers of their minds is the vernacular of the street."

"You ask them, 'Who knows a physicist?' No one raises their hand," Bailey says. "When you start talking about who knows a lawyer, you get hands. Who knows a prostitute? Everybody's hands go up. Who knows someone who smokes marijuana? Everybody's hands and feet go up."

Bailey says he and his 17-member staff try to teach their students — most are first offenders — that common sense, not street smarts, is key to survival.

Often, that's not an easy message to convey.

When someone enters Probation Challenge, "Needless to say, he feels he has gotten away with a thing called paper," says Bailey, also an interdenominational minister.

Participants range in age 17 to 38 and, "Most of the guys are rebellious," adds Ron Minor, one of the teachers. "A lot of them feel they're too old, they think they're wasting their time. They usually give in. It could take a year."

But it doesn't take long for Bailey to convince them he means business. One missed class means seven days of jail. No one in the program has ever missed more than two classes, Bailey says.

And the recidivism rate is under 1 percent, he claims.

That's much lower than the experts' estimate of a state recidivism rate of more than 20 percent, says The John Howard Association, a prison watchdog group.

Bailey also said Probation Challenge helps many participants find jobs and offers counseling. "We assume the role of father, big brother or merely a friend," he explains.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Refrigeration will slow down, not kill bacteria

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does either heat or refrigeration kill any bacteria that might be present in food? — Jo, New York City

Dear Jo: Bacteria in food will be killed if the food is cooked at a high temperature. However, refrigeration will stop bacteria from multiplying but will not kill them.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does food contain the kind of fluoride that dentists put on teeth in order to cut down on cavities? If there is fluoride in food, why does it have to be added to the water supply? — Gwen, Augusta, Ga.

Dear Gwen: Fluoride is found in food, but the amount varies according to the soil and water content, and therefore is different in different parts of the country. Fluoridation of the water supply guarantees an adequate level throughout the country, and thus helps prevent tooth decay.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a few questions about weight, because usually when someone speaks about being overweight, I'm not sure what that person means. What is meant by an ideal weight? What is overweight? And when is a person considered to be obese? — Thelma, Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Thelma: An ideal weight for a person is that associated with the lowest mortality. Overweight refers to a weight above the ideal weight. And obesity is defined as a weight at least 20 percent above the ideal weight.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm really pretty good at sticking to a diet, but my job requires me to have dinner out quite a bit and that's where I get into trouble. I can't very well order cottage cheese on a lettuce leaf when I'm having dinner with a client. Would you have any suggestions about how someone in my situation can eat out without having it become a caloric disaster? — D.W., Oakland, Calif.

Dear Mr. W.: It is of course more difficult to watch calories in a restaurant than it is at home, but there are certain steps you can take to minimize the problem. The obvious ones are to eliminate rich desserts and alcohol. No one will raise an eyebrow if you order a slice of melon for dessert instead of pie a la mode with whipped cream. You can also order fish or poultry instead of steak; and, if you do order poultry, remove the skin.

Finally, if you plan to have dinner out one day, don't skip either of the other two meals but do eliminate between-meal snacks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Kids these days are supposed to know so much, even more than they should, but from what I've seen a lot don't know beans. I am a widower, 71 years old, and I have just had a conversation with my son in which he told me, in a very nice way, that I should not feel bad because I can't have sex any more. I never though I'd have to tell a 40-year-old man the facts of life, at least as they affect people my age. — Anthony, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Anthony: Your letter highlights the misconception that old age (whatever that is) and an active sex life are mutually exclusive. Dr. Arthur Zitrin, of the New York University Post-Graduate Medical School, points out that studies of primitive cultures have shown that sex can continue into the seventies and eighties, provided the person is in good health.

Many older people who abstain from sexual relations do so more as a result of society's attitudes than because of actual physical impairment. Older people should recognize their own sexuality even if younger people do not.

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of the comic strips had a sequence on narcolepsy. I didn't think it was particularly funny, but it did arouse my interest. Can you give me some information about it? For example, at what age does it start, and when does it end? — Bruce, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Bruce: Narcolepsy refers to sudden attacks of sleep that can occur at any time and that usually last about 15 minutes. They can take place while the person is eating or talking, or even while participating in physical activity. The attacks may happen only occasionally or occur several times during the course of a 24-hour period.

According to Dr. Wallace B. Mendelson, of the National Insititute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Md., the attacks may start during puberty and continue throughout life. Some patients find that the frequency of the attacks may be reduced if they take planned naps during the day.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write him at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

'Cuban Connection' aids dope dealers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The so-called Cuban Connection that has been helping narcotics reach the United States may have diversified to include the smuggling of U.S. high technology gear, a State Department official says.

"Recent reports suggest that the Cubans may be engaged in efforts to smuggle such equipment from the United States," according to James H. Michel, deputy assistant secretary for inter-American affairs.

Michel told the House Foreign Affairs task force on international narcotics control Tuesday that illegal removal of high technology gear may involve methods developed in drug smuggling and gun running.

Michel said Cuba has cooperated with drug smugglers, allowing them to fly over the island, land to refuel aircraft and bring large vessels into its waters to transfer narcotics to smaller U.S.-bound vessels.

The smugglers pay Cuba protection with much-needed hard currencies and on their return from the United States ferry weapons that are shipped to Latin American revolutionaries, Michel said.

"The facts have shown that the Cuban government has facilitated narcotics smugglers who can be used to move arms to guerrilla forces in Latin America," he testified.

"We have no reason to doubt that it also would cooperate with drug smugglers in order to obtain high technology equipment," said Michel, who offered no details about the type of equipment.

"Cuba has an ongoing significant objective of obtaining high technology machinery from non-communist bloc countries," Michel said.

Francis M. Mullen Jr., administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, told the task force that "although the Cuban assistance given to drug smugglers is alarming...only a very small portion of the cocaine, marijuana and methaqualone transiting the Caribbean is believed to pass through Cuba."

"If Cuba were completely neturalized as a transit point, the effect on drug availability in the United States would be minimal," he said.

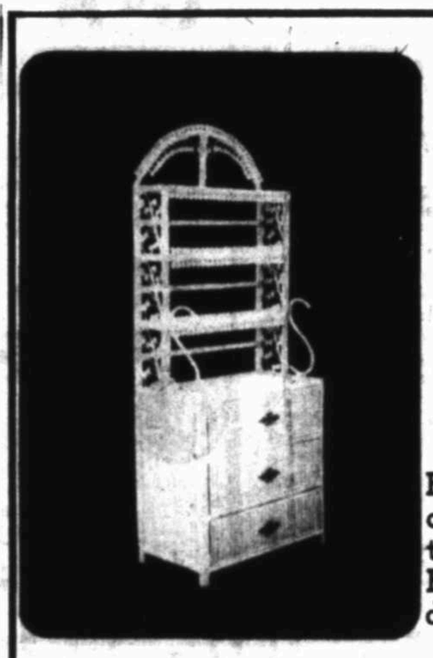

Mullen added, however, that if the United States and Cuba combined to wage an "aggressive interdiction program in the Yucatan Channel and the Windward Passage, a more significant impact could be made on the drug traffic."

UTPB shows couple's art work

ODESSA — The contrasting art work of a husband-wife team from Houston will be featured in an exhibition opening at 7 p.m. Monday in The University of Texas of the Permian Basin third floor art gallery.

Robert and Carla Poindexter, both graduates of UTPB, will be showing paintings, prints and drawings which were inspired by a recent visit to Mexico. Poindexter, who paints predominantly landscapes and still life, visited Mexico this summer with his wife. His trip was made possible through a grant from a Houston fine arts museum. Much of the work in the exhibition consists of studies of land and impressions of the environment in Mexico.

Poindexter, a 1980 UTPB graduate, is completing a masters at the University of Houston. He plans to graduate in June. He is represented by Merideth Long, a leading gallery in Houston and New York.

Mrs. Poindexter, a 1979 UTPB graduate, has done baccalaureate study in art at the Alfred Glassell School and at the University of Houston.

The exhibit, which will be on display through March 22, is free and open to the public. Hours are 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Morang retrospective at museum

Consisting of over 100 paintings, prints and drawings, "Alfred Morang: A Retrospective Exhibition" is an exhibit assembled by the Museum of the Southwest. Currently on display through April 8, the exhibition is the first major retrospective exhibition of works by Alfred Gwynne Morang.

The show traces Morang's artistic development from his earliest seascapes painted in his native Maine to the landscapes, still lifes and bar room scenes of his Santa Fe years.

The Museum's interest in Morang was sparked in 1980 when "Harem of Colors," a vividly expressive oil painting, was acquired for the permanent collection. Since that time numerous man hours have been spent on this project.

Also on display at the Museum through March 11 are works by sculptor Lincoln Fox.

Hours at the Museum are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Mall to host fiddling contest

Midland Park Mall will host the 4th annual "Best Little Fiddling Contest" March 3.

The contest, approved by the Texas Old-Time Fiddler's Association, will award over $2,500 in cash prizes to winners. Competition will be divided into the following age groups: up to 21 years old; 22-46 years old; 47-59 years old; and over 60 years old.

Contestants must be members of the Association to participate in the sanctioned contest. Information regarding membership may be obtained by contacting Pam Leach or Libby Edwards at the Midland Park Mall Management Office, 694-1663.

The contest is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. in the center court area of the Mall.

Gallery 1114 sponsors reading

Larry D. Griffin will give a poetry reading Sunday at 3 p.m. at Gallery 1114, 1114 Big Spring St.

This Midland College English instructor will read from his own work, "New Fires," as well as other selections. Griffin, who is a native of Oklahoma, has given readings in coffee houses, bars and art galleries in Oklahoma, but this is his first time to give one in Texas.

The public is invited to attend the free reading. A reception will follow.

Count Basie event cancelled

Count Basie's March 15 performance has been cancelled.

After two attempts, one last December, no plans exist at this time to bring the 80-year-old Basie to Midland, said a spokesman for Big Brothers-Big Sisters.

Part of the proceeds for the $100-per-couple event were to go to the organization. Refunds will be made at the Big Brothers-Big Sisters office, Texas Avenue and O Street, to those who bring in their tickets.

GM stamps its corporate approval on CBS' miniseries 'Washington'

NEW YORK (AP) — Putting General Motors' corporate imprint on a TV drama, for the first time, was John McNulty's idea, and that meant he had to convince the directors of GM's powerful and competitive divisions to endorse the unique project: he had to find a show that would satisfy everyone.

"We had wanted for some time to do something significant on television," says McNulty, who is vice president for public relations for General Motors Corp., "not necessarily something big, or long, but something of quality, something that would have an impact on American thought.

"We came up with this fascinating story of George Washington," McNulty says. "He'd never been done on television, in a way that people remember, anyway."

CBS will broadcast the eight-hour miniseries, "George Washington," in three segments, three hours the night of April 8, two on April 10 and three more on April 11.

The dramatization, covering Washington's life from young adulthood through the Revolutionary War, is based on the first two books in James Thomas Flexner's acclaimed four-volume biography, published between 1965 and 1973.

Barry Bostwick plays Washington, Patty Duke Astin his wife, Martha, David Dukes is Washington's best friend, George Fairfax, and Jaclyn Smith his wife, Sally.

Violinist Benny Kim featured artist at symphony concert

Violinist Benny Kim is the featured guest artist for the Midland-Odessa Symphony's 5th subscription concert, set for Friday at Odessa's Permian High School and Saturday at Midland's Lee High School. Concert time is 8 p.m.

The 21-year-old Kim won the Young Concert Artists International Audition in Spring 1983 and opened the Young Concert Artists 1983-84 New York Series with a recital which was called "dazzling" by the New York Times.

In 1980, he won the Chicago Symphony Youth Auditions and performed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at the age of 18. He has also appeared with, among others, the Saint Louis Symphony, the Aspen Philharmonic and the Cosomopolitan Symphony of New York.

In addition to Kim's performance, local actress and director Marilyn Allen will be featured as narrator on the program in Sir William Walton's "Facade Suite." Ms. Allen, who studied under B. Iden Payne, is a co-founder and past president of the Texas Non-Profit Theatres and Texas Theatre Council.

The symphony program will also offer Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony," Milhaud's "Creation of the World" and "The Unanswered Question" by Charles Ives.

Single admission tickets will be sold at the door. For more information call 563-5269.

Director's pitcher jumps team

ATLANTA (AP) — Director Hal Ashby, here to prepare for the Neal Simon baseball comedy, "The Slugger's Wife," found one of his performers had jumped teams.

Bob Galasso, now an Atlanta banker but a former pitcher for Milwaukee and Seattle, tried out for a pitcher's role in the movie.
