Bush, Dukakis ready to storm South

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

CONCORD, N.H. — George Bush and Michael Dukakis today pointed their campaigns southward after decisive New Hampshire victories, and Bob Dole promised to counterattack unless the vice president stops "distorting the Dole record." Richard Gephardt said he was in the race to stay.

But Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, third among Democrats in New Hampshire after finishing second in Iowa, said he will have to drop out unless he can win next week in either South Dakota or Minnesota. Jesse Jackson said he had met with former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who he said was "wrestling with" the question of whether to continue.

Dole, the big Republican winner in Iowa last week, said Bush's comeback victory in New Hampshire meant "he's the front-runner."

Asked on CBS what made the difference in New Hampshire, Dole renewed his accusations against Bush, saying, "I think the negative advertising, in effect, distorting the Dole record on raising taxes."

And he said in remarks taped for ABC-TV, "Unless they want to get back on the straight and narrow and withdraw some of their attacks, we're going to have to counterattack."

Tuesday night, Dole had accused Bush of "lying about my record."

Bush, asked about that in an interview taped for CBS-TV today, said, "I'm sorry he feels that way."

Were you lying? Bush was asked.

■ How did Bush do it?; Related stories and photo — 5A

"No," he answered quietly.

Bush won 38 percent of the Republican vote — and 11 delegates to the GOP convention — in complete returns. Dole had 29 percent of the vote and seven delegates. They were followed by Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and former television evangelist Pat Robertson.

Dukakis lived up to expectations by carrying his neighboring state by 16 percentage points over Rep. Gephardt of Missouri, last week's winner in Iowa.

The turnout was a record — 154,012 Republican voters and 119,041 Democrats for a total of 273,053 compared with 261,243 in 1980. This year's figure was estimated to represent a bit less than half the state's registered voters.

In other comments today:

—Dukakis, who won by a big margin in a state bordering Massachusetts where he is the governor, said on ABC-TV that he can also do well in the South, which dominates the Super Tuesday primaries on March 8. "People in the South aren't voting for a ZIP code; they're voting for the president of the United States," he said.

—Simon said on NBC-TV he would have to win next week, "otherwise, I'm going to have to withdraw. ... You just can't continue to run second and third."

—Gephardt said on ABC that whoever remains in the race, he himself will "do well because we're connecting with the voters on my ideas."

—Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, who beat out former television evangelist Pat Robertson and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont for third place among the Republicans, said his showing proved his standing among the conservatives who form the base for himself, du Pont and Robertson.

Robertson, on the other hand, said, "This was a small spread between Jack and me." He added, "New England is not my natural constituency.... Going into the South, it's a different ball game."

"On to the South, where we're going to rise again," exclaimed a euphoric Bush late Tuesday night. He won a solid victory after seeing his earlier 20-point lead in the polls melt in New Hampshire after his embarrassing third-place finish in Iowa behind Dole and Robertson.

For all the attention they got, Granite State voters managed to keep the presidential races in both parties in turmoil, offering just enough support to also-rans to give them an excuse to struggle on toward Super Tuesday, with its enormous 20-state risks and rewards.

Credit counselors find 'new poor'

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

After visiting the Midland-Odessa area for the past four months, a Lubbock-based credit counseling firm has discovered more people need help than first believed.

"We've seen a lot more than we expected," said Margy McMennamy, director of housing services with the Guadalupe Economic Services Corporation.

Counselors have talked to about 300 people since the corporation began traveling to the Permian Basin last November, Ms. McMennamy said.

The non-profit agency — which receives $25 from U.S. Housing and Urban Development for each client — helps people avoid foreclosures and pay off credit cards bills.

Problems are divided about half and half between unemployed homeowners trying to avoid foreclosure on their houses and others trying to keep up with credit card payments after losing their jobs, she said.

"One thing standing out is loss of income. People are really having problems," Ms. McMennamy said.

The corporation helped one Midlander, who had a $1,500 monthly house payments, arrange a different pay schedule with his mortgage company after losing his $187,000 a year job, she said.

While most of the people seeking credit counseling have lost moderate income jobs, about 10 percent — mainly Midlanders — have lost high income jobs, Ms. McMennamy said.

"We're seeing the new poor," she said.

Also, more Odessans seemed to be seeking help than Midlanders, Ms. McMennamy said.

"There has been a lot bigger response in Odessa. I don't know if the economic situation is worse or not," she said.

Payments must be three months behind before companies can foreclose on houses, and people should not wait until it's too late to ask for help, she said.

"Hopefully, they'll come in when they are a month behind (on payments)," Ms. McMennamy said.

Plague remains a danger

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

Residents of 10 West Texas counties affected by a state health department bubonic plague warning should settle in for the long haul, a state health official said Tuesday.

The disease likely won't ease down to normal levels for "several months" despite massive die-offs of the range rodent population, said Guy Moore, a health department field investigator based in El Paso.

"Whether it has just started or just ended in any particular area, you don't want to let your guard down," said Moore.

That means the same precautions which the department advised residents to take remain in effect: keep household pets like dogs and cats at home, sprinkle them at least twice a week with flea powder and avoid handling sick or dead rodents or other wild animals, Moore said.

In addition, hunters should not skin or eat rabbits shot within the 10-county area, the department warns.

The department issued the plague warning Feb. 1 for Midland, Martin, Ector, Howard, Dawson, Borden, Glasscock, Crane, Upton and Pecos Counties based on visual sightings of large numbers of dead rodents.

The disease was called "black death" during the Thirteenth Century, when hundreds of thousands Europeans died of its effects.

The Midland Animal Control Department has reported that reaction to this year's outbreak among local residents has settled down from, in some cases, near panic.

The department reported that a local resident at the beginning of the outbreak shot 31 cats and left their carcasses in a box by the city shelter's gate.

So for, health officials have received confirmation of the disease's presence in seven woodrats found in northeast Midland County that were sent to the U.S. Center for Disease Control's Plague Unit in Fort Collins, Colo.

Results for other dead rodents from the 10 counties sent to the Colorado lab are expected in the coming weeks, Moore said.

The El Paso health department office has fielded no reports so far of the disease's presence in humans or household pets, he said.

Front could chase in rain, snow

From Staff Reports

A cold front stationed just west of Midland-Odessa this morning was expected to race through the Petroplex tonight increasing the chance for rain as it makes its way east toward the Texas Hill Country.

Forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport predict the front will erase the springlike weather residents enjoyed early in the week and replace it with the return of winter and the chance of rain mixed with snow.

However, near normal temperatures should return by the weekend when the Permian Basin undergoes a gradual warming trend, forecasters say.

Tonight's forecast calls for cloudy skies and a 40 percent chance of rain, possibly mixed with snow. A low in the lower 30s is expected and winds will be from the north at 5 to 15 mph.

On Thursday, the temperature will be colder under cloudy skies. The high will be in the low 50s and winds will be from the north at 5 to 15 mph.

"The Last Emperor"

'Emperor' leads Oscar nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "The Last Emperor," Bernardo Bertolucci's tragic saga of China's boy emperor, captured top honors today with nine nominations, including best picture, for the 60th Motion Picture Academy Awards.

It was followed by seven nominations for "Broadcast News," the romantic comedy of life in a network news bureau. Among the nominees were newcomer Holly Hunter, cited in the best actress category for her portrayal of a frenetic producer.

Following those two films, with six nominations each, were: "Empire of Sun," the Japanese invasion of China as seen through a boy's eyes; "Fatal Attraction," the chiller of a woman's revenge against a spurning lover, and "Moonstruck," the comedy of love in a volatile Italian-American family.

All four except Steven Spielberg's "Empire of the Sun," were nominated as best picture. The fifth nominee was John Boorman's "Hope And Glory." And Spielberg once again was denied a director's nomination, as he was in 1983 for "The Color Purple."

Two-time winner Jack Nicholson won his ninth nomination as the 1930s bum in "Ironweed," and Robin Williams was nominated for best actor with his role as the antic disc jockey in "Good Morning Vietnam."

Also nominated: Michael Douglas, "Wall Street"; William Hurt, "Broadcast News"; and Marcello Mastroianni, "Dark Eyes."

"It made me not only proud for our film 'Wall Street,' but it reminded me what a wonderful part (writer-director) Oliver Stone had created," said Douglas, son of actor Kirk Douglas, from New York.

Another double Oscar winner, Meryl Streep, won her seventh nomination for "Ironweed." Also in the best actress race: Cher, for "Moonstruck"; Glenn Close, "Fatal Attraction"; Miss Hunter; and Sally Kirkland for "Anna."

Marine kidnapped from south Lebanon highway

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen today kidnapped a U.S. Marine officer serving with the United Nations peacekeeping force in south Lebanon, U.N. sources said.

They identified the victim as Lt. Col. Richard Higgins, head of a 60-man observer group attached to the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon.

The sources said Higgins was kidnapped at 3:15 p.m. on the coastal highway between Lebanon's southernmost port of Tyre and the border town of Naqoura, site of UNIFIL's headquarters. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Militants of the Shiite Moslem, Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, are known to operate in the area.

"Higgins was driving in a U.N. jeep escorted by Fijian UNIFIL troops when gunmen intercepted them about three miles south of Tyre and abducted the American," one of the sources said.

The source said UNIFIL's command was questioning the escorts to determined how many gunmen were involved and why the Fijians were unable to prevent the kidnapping.

U.S. Embassy officials in Christian east Beirut, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed Higgins' abduction but said they had no details about how it happened or who might be holding him.

Higgins was one of six Americans serving with the 60-man observer group that monitors cease-fire violations on the Lebanese-Israeli border.

Twenty-four other foreigners, including eight Americans, are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon.

The longest held hostage is Terry Anderson, 40, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. Anderson was seized in west Beirut March 16, 1985.

Two Scandinavians were kidnapped Feb. 5 as they were driving just outside Sidon.

Jan Stening of Sweden and William Jorgensen of Norway worked for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency. No group claimed responsibility for their abduction, but U.N. officials said their abductors were Palestinians acting without a political motive.

Most of the other hostages were kidnapped in west Beirut and are being held by Shiite extremists.

Narcotics agents mistakenly raid Abilene minister's home

ABILENE (AP) — Department of Public Safety narcotics agents mistakenly raided a minister's house after counting from the wrong end of the block, officials say.

"I thought they were robbers," said Hector Sanchez, whose daughter, Noemi, woke him up early Sunday to say three men were in the backyard with crowbars and guns.

Sanchez, a minister at the Spanish Assembly of God Church, says he asked the men what they wanted and they told him to stop or be shot. They then followed him into the house, Sanchez said.

After questioning by Sanchez, the men identified themselves as law enforcement officials. "When he (one of the officers) told me he was from the state police, I was relieved," Sanchez said. "But I was still frightened."

His wife and two daughters sat in the living room while the men went through the house and out front, where they ran into the rest of the raiding party — and learned of their mistake.

DPS Narcotics Sgt. Don Bush blames "human error" for the mistake.

The DPS had assigned men to two groups, Bush said. The first group was supposed to enter the targeted home from the front, and the second group — the group that raided the Sanchez home — was supposed to guard the rear.

Because the houses in that neighborhood don't have numbers on the back, the group in the rear was instructed to count the number of houses from the corner and guard that home, Bush said.

The problem, he said, was that they started counting at the wrong end of the block.

The Sanchez's dog started barking, apparently awakening the family, and Sanchez opened the back door, Bush said. When Sanchez attempted to go back inside, the officers followed him with their guns drawn.

Two other Sanchez children — an 18-month-old boy and a 5-month-old boy — remained asleep during the raid. "I don't know how they slept through it all, with all the screaming and crying," Sanchez said.

A short time later, DPS officers and the Abilene Police Department's Special Services Bureau arrested seven people in a drug bust just down the block.

Fired man shoots 12 at defense plant

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — A man who had been fired from a top-secret defense plant shot 12 people there, including a woman who spurned his attention, and killed seven before surrendering, authorities said.

Richard Wade Farley, 39, of nearby San Jose walked from the sprawling two-story ESL Corp. building about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday with his hands in the air. He was quickly surrounded by three officers and taken to the Santa Clara County Jail.

Daryl Anderson, an ESL business analyst, said she was in her second-floor office when the gunman came down the hall firing shots between 2:30 and 3 p.m. She said bullets punctured her office door.

"I was under my desk in the fetal position for six hours," she said. "I figured there was a sniper in the building. The worst part of all was being there all by myself in the dark. All the time I thought he was right out there in the hall."

The bodies of two women and five men were found when police swept through the Silicon Valley building after the arrest, said Commander Alex Michaelis of the Sunnyvale Department of Public Safety.

Police seized a rifle, a shotgun, 9mm and .380-caliber handguns and two bandoliers of ammunition after the gunman left his hiding place in a second-floor room.

Sunnyvale Public Safety Lt. Rueben Grijalva, who led efforts to negotiate with the gunman, said Farley told him he invaded the building to wreck equipment.

ESL, or Electro-magnetic Science Lab, a subsidiary of TRW Inc., was established in 1964 and specializes in electronic warfare systems for the Navy, most of them highly classified. Products include reconnaissance systems, data-communications systems, computer simulation and image processing. It employs about 2,200 people.

Police said the gunman took no hostages, but that many employees had to hide under desks or in locked rooms.

On the second floor, the gunman met the woman who had spurned him, 26-year-old engineer Laura Black. When she slammed an office door in his face, he shot her through the door, Grijalva said. He said Farley told police he shot the others because "he felt threatened by them."

At one point, Farley began crying when talking about his mother, the lieutenant said.

Black was wounded in the shoulder, police said. She was listed in stable condition at Stanford University Medical Center after surgery to repair the damage, which included a collapsed lung.

Farley, who lived by himself in a dilapidated bungalow, had worked at ESL as a computer software technician before he was fired about two years ago, said Sunnyvale Lt. Tom Moore. Farley allegedly followed Black over a four-year period and Black had tried to obtain a restraining order to keep him away, Moore said.

"It was described to me as a situation that had turned into harassment. He had, according to him, given her a warning (to return his attentions) and she didn't heed the warning and he said this was his way of making a point," said Sunnyvale Capt. Al Scott before the surrender.

Near the ESL building, which is about 40 miles south of San Francisco, police found a motor home they believe was driven by the gunman. Inside, officers found ammunition, full cans of gasoline and other explosive material, said Scott.

At one point during the negotiations, the gunman "expressed a little remorse" for his actions, said Moore.

It was not clear how many of his victims the gunman knew.

One of those killed was identified by company officials as Lawrence J. Kane of San Jose. The rest were not immediately identified.

A 39-year-old man was listed in stable condition at Stanford University Medical Center with wounds to his face and hand.

A 44-year-old man was admitted to Santa Clara Valley Medical Center in San Jose with four gunshot wounds and listed in good condition.

Two people were admitted to San Jose Hospital. Their conditions were described as not serious.

At El Camino Hospital, a 41-year-old woman was being treated for a broken elbow suffered while she was being evacuated from the building, said a hospital spokeswoman.

None injured as 150 flee fire at Moscow embassy

MOSCOW (AP) — A fire broke out today in an unoccupied fifth-floor room of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, forcing about 150 people to flee the building to a snowstorm outside.

Flames leaped from windows on the fifth floor of the aging, 10-story building, and smoke continued to pour out for an hour after it was evacuated.

Soviet firefighters were summoned to the scene in midafternoon and were escorted by U.S. Marine guards into the embassy compound. The blaze apparently began in an unoccupied room in an area undergoing renovation.

Philip Brown, a senior embassy spokesman, said the cause of the fire had not been determined. No injuries were reported.

The building, leased to the United States by the Soviet government since the 1950s, was to have been replaced by a new diplomatic complex. But the embassy building at the center of that complex remains vacant and unfinished following discovery that it was riddled with Soviet eavesdropping devices.

About 150 embassy employees were in the building when the fire broke out. Ambassador Jack Matlock was not in the embassy at the time, press attache Richard Gilbert said.

The diplomats and embassy workers were ordered out of their offices and stood on the sidewalk in a snowstorm to watch firemen combat the fire.

The blaze occurred in a section of the building that had been used to house Navy Seabees — members of construction battalions — and workers brought to Moscow on temporary assignment. But a spokesman said the corner room where the fire broke out was not being occupied at the time.

Much of the building, which is in poor repair, is under renovation while officials in Washington ponder what to do with their new embassy building less than a block away.

PLAGUE

Despite the massive die-off of thousands of West Texas pack rats and cotton rats on range land, the disease still remains highly active within the West Texas flea population, Moore said. Infected fleas or the disease's primary mode of transmission.

Even while the rodent population has been substantially reduced, "we still have a lot of hungry fleas out there," Moore said.

Health officials have described the plague in West Texas as "endemic" meaning it always has some presence.

This year's outbreak is particularly pervasive because of a rodent population explosion.

"Nature has a way of balancing itself out," Dr. Evret Newman, health department regional vetrenarian, has said.

Human symptoms of the disease follow four basic levels. The first is similar to flu symptoms; the patient feels achy and feverish.

At the second level, "bubos" — or large lymph knots that can grow to the size of oranges or grapefruits — appear at the armpits, neck or groin.

Newman has described the third level of symptoms as "flu times 10" with increased achiness and temperatures that can reach 106 degrees.

At its fourth level — a "pneumonic" stage — the disease reaches the patient's lungs and becomes highly contagious.

While plague is treatable for recovery at all levels of symptoms, it will lead to death within two weeks from the first symptoms' appearance if left unattended, Newman has said.

Cats also are susceptible to plague and present a particular worry to the health department, Newman has said.

The animals also exhibit the four symptom levels, but while humans progress from one level to the next, cats may show several levels at once.

A cat that feels hot and seems to have large swelling in its neck should be isolated from its family and a vet should be called immediately, Newman has said.

Dogs cannot contract plague, but are a worry because of the fleas they may carry, he has said.

OSCARS

Nominees for supporting actor were Albert Brooks, "Broadcast News"; Sean Connery, "The Untouchables"; Morgan Freeman, "Street Smart"; Vincent Gardenia, "Moonstruck"; and Denzel Washington, "Cry Freedom."

All are first-time nominees except Gardenia, named for "Bang The Drum Slowly," in 1973.

All the supporting actresses were nominated for the first time: Norma Aleandro, "Gaby - A True Story"; Anne Archer, "Fatal Attraction"; Olympia Dukakis, "Moonstruck"; Anne Ramsey, "Throw Momma From The Train"; Ann Sothern, "The Whales Of August."

The nominees for best direction were Adrian Lyne for "Fatal Attraction"; Boorman for "Hope and Glory"; Bernardo Bertolucci, "The Last Emperor"; Norman Jewison, "Moonstruck"; Lasse Hallstrom, "My Life As A Dog."

A surprise omission was James L. Brooks for his direction of "Broadcast News." His only previous film as director, "Terms of Endearment," won him the award in 1983.

Brooks was at the Berlin Film Festival and was told of the film's seven nominations by telephone.

"He was quite thrilled with seven nominations. Yes, I'm sure he was somewaht disappointed about not getting that (nomination for best director)," said publicist Pat Kingsley. "But he was so thrilled for the actors. He was also thrilled with the screenplay nomination."

As expected, Louis Malle's remembrance of his wartime childhood, "Au Revoir Les Infants," was nominated as France's entry for best foreign language film. The other nominees: "Babette's Feast" (Denmark); "Course Completed" (Spain); "The Family" (Italy); "Pathfinder" (Norway).

Best original screenplay nominations went to Malle for "Au Revoir Les Infants"; Brooks, "Broadcast News"; John Patrick Shanley, "Moonstruck"; Woody Allen, "Radio Days"; and Boorman for "Hope And Glory."

For best screenplay adaptation, nominees included Tony Huston for "The Dead"; James Dearden, "Fatal Attraction"; Stanley Kubrick, Michael Herr, and Gustav Hasford, "Full Metal Jacket"; Mark Peploe and Bertolucci, "The Last Emperor"; and Lasse Hallstrom, Reidar Jonsson, Brasse Brannstrom and Per Berglund, "My Life As A Dog."

The popular "Dirty Dancing," scored its only nomination for its song: "(I've Had) The Time Of My Life." Also nominated in that category: "Nothing's Gonna Stop Us Now" from "Mannequin"; "Shakedown" from "Beverly Hills Cop II"; "Storybook Love" from "The Princess Bride"; and the title tune from "Cry Freedom."

The Academy could not be accused of chauvinism in the director's category; for the first time, all five nominees are foreigners. Lyne and Boorman are English, Bertolucci is Italian, Jewison is Canadian and Hallstrom is Swedish.

Some of the highly advertised films came up short. The prestigious "Cry Freedom" was mentioned only for supporting actor, score and song.

Miss Streep seems headed for the record book. So far, she has been nominated seven times for her 14 films. Also impressive is Miss Close with four nominations in seven movies.

The nominees were announced at dawn by actress Shirley MacLaine and Academy President Robert Wise.

The Academy has already announced one winner: Billy Wilder for the Irving G. Thalberg award, presented for "consistently high quality of motion picture production." The director-writer-producer of "The Lost Weekend," "Sunset Boulevard," "Stalag 17," "Some Like It Hot," "The Apartment" and other films has won six Oscars.

With one exception, nominations for the Academy Awards are made by the individual branches: actors nominate for acting, directors for directing. All of the 4,400 voting members nominate the best picture of the year.

The awards are voted by all members, with a few exceptions. For short subjects, documentaries and foreign-language films, voters must attend screenings or certify that they have seen the nominees.

RACE

Among the Republicans, Kemp finished third with 13 percent, and three delegates. Du Pont edged out Robertson, 10 percent to 9 percent. Du Pont's total was high enough to win two delegates; Robertson got none.

In the delegate totals, after Bush's 61 came Dole with 42, Kemp with 35 and du Pont with two. The winning Republican needs 1,139 delegates.

Among the Democrats, after Dukakis, with 36 percent of the vote and nine delegates, came Gephardt with 20 percent and six delegates and Simon with 17 percent and three delegates.

The other Democratic finishers — Jackson with 8 percent, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. 7 percent, Babbitt 5 percent and Gary Hart 4 percent — didn't do well enough to pick up any delegates.

In the delegate totals, after Dukakis' 44.5 came Gephardt with 39 and Simon with 33. The victorious Democrat needs 2,082 delegates for the nomination.

Though he got no delegates, Jackson said he was "happy because in Iowa and New Hampshire we proved we could broaden our base." Asked how he expected to do in the South, he said, "I expect to win."

Bush was exultant at his showing. Quoting Mark Twain, he said, "Reports of my death have been greatly exaggerated."

Dukakis belittled Gore's regional strategy.

"Tomorrow, we head South," said the Massachusetts governor. "I don't have a Southern strategy," he said. "I don't have a Northern strategy or a Western strategy. I have an American strategy."

Six states will vote before Super Tuesday, but it was clear Tuesday night that the campaigns were looking ahead to March 8 when 20 states on the Democratic side and 16 on the Republican will offer the biggest one-day delegate prize of the campaign.

Minnesota and South Dakota take the spotlight next. Republicans and Democrats hold caucuses in Minnesota and primaries in South Dakota next Tuesday.

In the New Hampshire Democratic primary, Gephardt and Simon, fighting for Democratic runner-up, were also in a battle for money. Both campaigns are in financial trouble and needed a second-place finish to keep contributions coming in.

With a first in Iowa and a second in New Hampshire, Gephardt was able to claim, "I'm in good shape."

South Carolina's Republican primary is Saturday, March 5, three days before Super Tuesday.

Gore, the Tennessee senator who passed up Iowa and spent less time than his rivals in New Hampshire, watched the returns from Houston, Texas, where he said "Super Tuesday changes all the rules."

Beijing mayor has phone hot line to take irate citizens' complaints

By JIM ABRAMS

BEIJING (AP) — When the lights go out, the bus breaks down or a Communist Party boss plays favorites, Beijing's 9.88 million people can call the mayor.

City Hall has set up a telephone hotline directly to Mayor Chen Xitong's office just for complaints from citizens.

"The mayor and the vice mayors consider this as a way to find out what people are thinking," said Zhao Hu, a city official who is in charge of the hotline and letters to the mayor. "It lets us see how our policies are doing."

Since the 24-hour service began in September, more than 2,000 people have called to complain about poor living conditions, personal problems and official shenanigans.

On one recent day at the mayor's office, the two women working four telephones had received calls about a traffic light that was always red, frozen pipes that had cut off the gas, a changed bus route, a nasty salesclerk in a state store and a bicyclist who complained that his traffic ticket was unjust.

More than half the calls come from people upset over living conditions in this city of severe housing shortages, overcrowded public transportation and inadequate power and water, Zhao said.

Electricity outages are a common problem, he added.

"Before people had only lights to worry about. Now they have televisions and refrigerators."

Problems also arise because new housing is constantly going up in areas where the city has yet to establish schools, nurseries, stores and transportation systems, Zhao said.

About a third of the callers are seeking the mayor's intervention for personal problems, Zhao went on. Some are transients seeking residence cards to stay in the city. Others need larger apartments. Some are quarreling with neighbors or houseowners.

Then come those, sometimes calling anonymously, with gripes about government and Communist Party officials. People say they have been wrongfully passed over for bonuses or promotions, or accuse their bosses of unfair, and sometimes illegal, displays of favoritism.

"We view these calls very seriously," Zhao said, adding that anonymous calls are accepted because "we know people are very afraid of their bosses."

Whatever the problem, callers are assured that City Hall will contact the authorities involved and try to resolve the problem quickly, Zhao said.

When a group of 10 foreigners called claiming they were shocked by a 700-yuan ($189) bill at a restaurant, the mayor's office contacted the restaurant and urged it to start providing menus with price lists written in English.

Once a week Zhao's office hands Mayor Chen a report outlining calls and letters and what steps have been taken on certain issues. The mayor becomes personally involved in urgent or policy matters, Zhao said.

Chen, who was just elected to his second five-year term, has acknowledged that devices like the hotline are needed because of the magnitude of woes Beijing faces.

He noted recently that the city must care for a daily transient population of 1.5 million, that water supply can be as much as 200,000 tons short during peak hours and only 13 percent of buildings have central heating.

Besides being a vent for urban frustrations, the service is one of several ways by which China's leaders are trying to make their tightly controlled nation more democratic.

Lent activities bring end to Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The wild abandon of Mardi Gras gave way to the sobriety of Ash Wednesday today as police cleared the French Quarter of revelers hoping to forestall the end of the annual street party.

Two fatal accidents involving parade floats marred the feverish excitement of the Carnival season, police said.

Officially, the day concluded at midnight with the meetings of the courts of Rex and Comus, the signal that Mardi Gras has given way to 40 days of Lenten penance.

"I enjoy it to the max, but it's Ash Wednesday. Mardi Gras is over. The normal standards of behavior now apply," Carl Seyler Jr., a resident of the French Quarter, said early today.

Nearly a million people immersed themselves this year in New Orleans' naughty exhibition of drinking, dancing and parading, said New Orleans police spokesman John Bryson.

Revelers not ready to give up the Fat Tuesday ghost were shooed into bars and clubs as uniformed officers and mounted police announced on bullhorns that streets were being reopened and cleanup crews were on their way.

"Mardi Gras 1988 is now over," police announced. "Please clear the streets and get off the sidewalks."

An 11-year-old boy was killed Tuesday afternoon when he was run over by a truck float in suburban New Orleans, and an unidentified man was killed when he leaped onto a tractor-trailer rig hauling a float in city traffic, police said.

The last float-related death was in 1984, Bryson said.

"This does not happen every year," he said. "The safety conscious individuals on the parade routes do not approach floats that are moving."

Despite the accidents, which also included two incidents in which people were injured badly enough to be hospitalized, police described the crowds as generally well-behaved.

Members of the Brazilian dance troup Casa Samba join a Mardi Gras parade in New Orleans Tuesday.

Police spokesman John Marie said the Canal Street crowd was the biggest he had seen in 18 years.

"I'm ready for it to be over, that's for sure. It's all good and fun but I'm glad it's over with," said Carl Chosa of New Orleans. "I hope everybody comes back next year."

But Ray Mattingly of Memphis, Tenn., wasn't quite willing for the bacchanalia to end.

"I think it should wind down of its own accord," he said. "If they don't close the bars, you should be allowed to be here as long as you want to."

Stepped-up anti-drug campaign planned

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

NATION

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Conceding failure in blocking the flow of drugs into the United States through Mexico, the Reagan administration is planning a stepped-up campaign to curb domestic demand.

A senior official said President Reagan, who is taking personal charge of the campaign, will ask Congress Thursday to increase federal funding for drug enforcement and abuse programs by $409 million, or 12 percent, to a new high of $3.9 billion for fiscal 1989. In fiscal 1981, the federal government spent $1.2 billion on drug enforcement.

Reagan also will appeal to communities around the nation to organize local anti-drug crusades, to beef up law enforcement and advertising of the dangers of drugs, and to ask the American business community to join the government's war by imposing drug testing on employees, the aide explained.

According to a U.S. Chamber of Commerce study, one-third of 500 major U.S. companies already administer drug testing of some kind, a dramatic increase from the three percent of those companies that tested their workers four years ago.

Wars on drugs have swept the United States in the past few decades. Last year, for example, Reagan had called for "a sustained, relentless effort to rid America of this scourge by mobilizing every segment of our society against drug abuse."

But other issues, such as the White House's preoccupation in 1987 with the escalating Iran-contra affair, overshadowed drug concerns, and Reagan devoted little time to the effort.

The senior official said the proposed campaign will be among the most intense, in large measure as a result of last weekend's summit meeting in Mazatlan, Mexico, between Reagan and Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz conceded after the summit that neither Mexico nor the United States has been doing enough to control illegal drug traffic in the western hemisphere.

Attorney General Edwin Meese I acknowledged that there is "frustration" on both sides and that the United States will have to do more to curb the demand that fuels drug trafficking.

U.S. officials estimate that Mexico is now the No. 1 source of heroin and marijuana entering this country. Even though most cocaine is produced in Colombia, at least one-third of about 121 tons that is believed to have been consumed in the U.S. last year was smuggled from Mexico, according to the officials.

By comparison, government estimates put cocaine use in the United States between 33 and 60 tons in 1981.

The U.S. repeatedly has complained that Mexico's efforts to stem the flow of drugs here have been inadequate.

De la Madrid charged last week, however, that the drug problem is the fault of the United States because it has done little to curb demand for drugs inside its own borders.

De la Madrid insisted Mexico has stepped up its efforts to arrest smugglers, confiscate drugs and eradicate sources of supply, and he complained bitterly that U.S. officials are not doing enough to dampen demand for drugs in this country.

Taking a swipe at the high level of drug use in the United States, de la Madrid insisted that international drug trafficking will not be curbed unless production, distribution and consumption are attacked.

Reagan asserted during the weekend summit that drug use in the United States is down. Later, Meese explained that Reagan was only referring to surveys of drug use among high school students.

Students still holding building

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Minority students occupying a University of Massachusetts building remained today after they failed to agree on an understanding reached by their negotiators and college officials.

"I'm not disappointed. I'm tired. We've been going at this a long time," Dwayne Warren, a spokesman for the group, said at a 4 a.m. news conference announcing the deadlock.

Two women wept in the halls of the New Africa House after about 100 protesters debated for five hours on the administration's response to their eight demands.

The demands included suspending five white students accused of beating two blacks Feb. 7 and suspending campus police officers accused of forming a lineup of blacks the same night in their search for men who allegedly harassed women on campus.

"The students want immediate action, but the way the structure is set up, you can't get that," said a student negotiator, David Moore.

Moore said the protesters planned to continue the debate at noon today in the building they have closed to whites since Friday.

All but one of the nine student negotiators were pleased with the understanding.

Train damaged by debris left on its tracks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A New York-to-Philadelphia Amtrak passenger train was damaged by debris that police said was placed on railroad tracks by four teen-agers out of school on the Presidents' Day holiday.

Some 400 passengers were transferred to another train after the air-brake on their train was disabled Monday in northeast Philadelphia, police said. No injuries were reported. A total of five Amtrak trains struck the debris, but only one was damaged, Amtrak police said.

The boys, two sets of brothers aged 14 and 16 and 15 and 16, were caught by Amtrak police as they apparently sought to put more metal pipes, lumber and old tires on the tracks. The youths were charged by Philadelphia police with risking a catastrophe, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief and conspiracy.

Reagan remains mum on successor

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is remaining mum on the battle for the Republican presidential nomination as he heads back to Washington and his regular weekly meeting with Vice President George Bush.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan watched returns from the New Hampshire primary on television on Tuesday as he wound up a three-day vacation at his ranch in the Santa Ynez mountains north of here.

"We won't have any comment," Fitzwater said when asked about the New Hampshire voting. Reagan has maintained a public stance of neutrality in the race for the nomination, although he has repeatedly praised Bush's performance as vice president.

The two are scheduled to have lunch at the White House on Thursday, as they do each week.

Also on Thursday, the president will meet with bipartisan negotiators in Congress who worked out the $1.1 trillion budget compromise to be formally unveiled that day.

Later Thursday, the president will attend the swearing in of Judge Anthony Kennedy of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals as a member of the Supreme Court. He nominated Kennedy after the Senate rejected his nomination of Robert Bork and his second nominee, Judge Douglas Ginsburg, withdrew in the face of reports of his marijuana use in earlier days.

Woman frees hostages

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A woman seeking psychiatric help in a hospital emergency room suddenly shot a social worker to death with a handgun and held three people hostage before surrendering Tuesday night, police said.

Edith Anderson, 31, of suburban Rankin was arrested on homicide and related charges in St. Francis Medical Center in the city's Bloomfield neighborhood at about 10:15 p.m., according to police Cmdr. Ron Freeman.

Ms. Anderson apparently was sitting with hospital caseworker Linda Rosen, 27, of Pittsburgh in the psychiatric waiting area of the emergency room at about 8:55 p.m. when she shot Miss Rosen without warning, according to police and to hospital spokeswoman Shirley Freyer.

After the shooting, Ms. Anderson took two women and a man hostage and held them for more than an hour before they were released unharmed, police said. The hostages, who were not identified, were waiting at the emergency room for a relative who was being treated, police said.

Mecham seeking delay

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham's right to a fair trial in criminal court will be severely harmed if his impeachment trial starts Monday as scheduled, his lawyer told the Arizona Senate.

Mecham attorney Murray Miller said Tuesday that conducting the impeachment trial first would subject the criminal trial to prejudicial publicity.

"In my judgment he will be convicted in the criminal trial if this matter (the impeachment trial) is going to proceed and he is convicted here," Miller said. "It just is in the cards...and I fear for his liberty."

The Senate was expected to decide late today whether to delay the impeachment trial. Senate President Carl Kunasek, a Republican, said he expected the Senate to approve some type of delay but he would not predict how long it would be.

Lead emissions decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emissions of lead into the atmosphere declined a record 59 percent in 1986, the second largest drop in a row, according to the Environmental Protection Agency's annual air pollution report released today.

The decline results from the agency's decision in 1985 to lower the permissible lead concentration of gasoline by more than 90 percent in two steps, reaching 0.1 grams per gallon in 1986.

Lead in high concentrations is a poison, causing kidney and brain damage. Young children are particularly vulnerable since their brains are still forming.

Though lead can serve as an octane booster in gasoline, it also disables the pollution control equipment installed on most cars from 1975 to 1980 and all cars after that.

As older cars are junked, leaded gasoline has represented a smaller share of the market — 31 percent in 1986 and 24 percent in 1987 — and lead emissions should continue to fall, officials believe.

No conflict determined

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former antitrust chief Douglas H. Ginsburg dealt with 16 different cable industry matters while holding cable stock but either his role or his chance for personal gain was too small to violate federal conflict-of-interest laws, the Justice Department says.

The department's decision not to request appointment of an independent counsel for further investigation of the former Supreme Court nominee was detailed in a 116-page report released Tuesday.

The report by Assistant Attorney General William F. Weld, head of the department's criminal division, summarized the results of a three-month inquiry in which Justice and FBI officials interviewed more than 80 people, including Ginsburg.

New approach styles primary victory for Bush

BY EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

GREENLAND, N.H. — George Bush, the formal, patrician Republican whose presidential bid had been thrown into sudden peril with a trouncing in Iowa, stood in the lot at Cuzzin Richie's truckstop.

"This is the real me," he insisted, climbing into the cab of an 18-wheeler. "This is my home turf."

It was three days after the vice president had been crushed in an embarrassing third-place finish in last week's Iowa caucuses. Bob Dole, riding the wave out of Iowa, was surging here in New Hampshire.

But then came the new George Bush and his new campaign. With a U-turn in style and approach, Bush came back and blunted Dole's surge with a big victory in Tuesday's New Hampshire primary.

Bush's formidable organization swung into high gear. The vice president's association with President Reagan, which had hurt him in Iowa, proved a big plus here — one that Bush milked for all it was worth.

And an eleventh-hour advertising campaign, attacking Dole and touting the support of Barry Goldwater, helped bring him back from the edge of the abyss.

The vice president went from a 20-point edge over Dole before Iowa to as much as 8 points behind. But the tracking polls said Dole peaked about Friday, the day the Bush campaign hit the airwaves with a new ad accusing Dole of "straddling" major issues.

In nearly final returns Tuesday, Bush held a 9-point margin over Bush: 38-29.

On the night of his big defeat in Iowa, Bush seemed stunned. Asked if his big entourage, Secret Service protection and arms-length style were getting in the way of reaching the people, Bush answered that he wasn't sure.

Still shaky the next day, Bush started before dawn to greet workers at a factory gate. But few workers used that entrance and Bush spent a good portion of the time talking to reporters.

Then Bush tried out a new slogan: "I'm one of you." Born in New England and with a home in neighboring Maine, Bush appealed to Granite State voters as his neighbors. But he drifted away from the slogan, which was too close to the "He's one of us" theme Dole had used in Iowa.

Then, 36 hours after Iowa, New Hampshire voters saw the new George Bush.

Canceling a swing through the South, Bush flew back in from his weekly lunch in Washington with President Reagan and went to the giant Pheasant Lane Shopping Mall in Nashua to shake hands late Wednesday.

Munching a chocolate-chip cookie, Bush shook hands with dozens of voters and heard some of them say he had their vote.

"That's good to hear," he told one supporter. "It's a good morale booster."

With that, gone were the formal events, the speeches, the "town meetings" with the carefully orchestrated crowds.

Now it was the informal George and "impromptu campaign stops."

The first came at the East Coast Lumberyard in East Hampstead, N.H. There, in a casual coat and a cap, Bush shook hands with customers and staff and drove a giant forklift around the yard. It was all for the benefit of the media, so the voters could see Bush mixing with people and doing everyday tasks.

Then it was onto Cuzzin Richie's, near Portsmouth on the seacoast. He talked to truckers and drove a semi-rig around the block — with a Secret Service man hanging off the mirror and the armored limousine right behind.

To go with the new freewheeling style were tough new ads hitting at Dole.

One labeled Dole as a man who had straddled the issues of taxes, the INF treaty and an oil import fee.

Another — a five-minute election-eve buy — featured Barry Goldwater, known as Mr. Conservative, backing Bush. Still another hit at Dole for backing a national economic commission.

That "exists to provide political cover for a tax hike. If it doesn't recommend a tax increase, I'll not only eat my hat, I'll eat Bob Dole's hat," Bush said in the ad.

Bush continued to campaign in malls and stores and nursing homes, reaching out to people directly, in the retail campaigning style that the state once insisted upon. He brought baseball great Ted Williams to the state to add a celebrity touch to the final days.

All the while, his well-respected organization was cranking away at high speed, focused on getting its 40,000 potential supporters to the polls.

The final piece of the puzzle was Bush himself.

A private man in a public job, Bush was forced to begin talking about himself — not as a public official, but as a person.

"Mostly these days, I think of Lincoln — 'Here I stand, warts and all,'" he told a group of senior citizens in Portsmouth.

"I have a tendency — and I will confess to it — to avoid going on and on with great eloquent statements of belief."

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis appears on NBC's Nightly News with Tom Brokaw, discussing his lead in the New Hampshire primary.

Dukakis, Gephardt ready to move campaigns south

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Michael Dukakis and Richard Gephardt, looking South after their one-two finish in New Hampshire's Democratic primary, said today that campaign themes should not change with the region. Paul Simon said he would withdraw from the race unless he wins one of two contests next week.

"People in the South aren't voting for a zip code. They're voting for the president of the United States," Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Gephardt, appearing on the same program, characterized his second place finish in New Hampshire as a victory. "The reason we won," he said, "is because we got off the plane last week and began saying the same thing in New Hampshire that we said in Iowa."

Dukakis said the race still was "wide open." Gephardt said it had now come down to him and Dukakis.

Meanwhile, Simon, who came in third, said, "I have to win either in South Dakota or Minnesota. Otherwise I'm going to have to withdraw."

Dukakis, the three-term governor of next-door Massachusetts, won Tuesday's primary with a strong 17-percentage point margin over the Missouri congressman. He was leaving today for the next major battleground, the South.

Even as he did, however, Dukakis acknowledged that his victory didn't decide the race but drew the battle lines more clearly. "I think it's going to go all the way to the last primary," he said.

Gephardt, whose victory in Iowa's caucuses eight days earlier was largely overshadowed by the brawl on the Republican side, accomplished his chief aim — finishing ahead of fellow Midwesterner Simon.

"I love New Hampshire," Gephardt said.

"It's a result that we needed here," Gephardt said. "It appears to be that we've got a Dukakis-Gephardt race in the rest of the country, but that could change."

Dukakis won 37 percent of the vote and said the victory gives him momentum heading into the delegate-rich primaries on March 8, when contests are set in every state of the South but one.

The Massachusetts governor won nearly as many votes as his next two closest challengers combined, and he was leaving immediately for the next round of campaigning in Atlanta and Florida.

"Last week in Iowa our message started to shine through, and we won a bronze," he said.

Dole accuses Bush of distorting record

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Bob Dole, beaten back by George Bush in the New Hampshire Republican primary, today renewed his allegations that the vice president had distorted his record and promised to counterattack, while Jack Kemp said he could unite the GOP's conservative wing.

From top to bottom, the 1988 Republican presidential race was as hot and furious after the New Hampshire primary as it had been before. No one talked of withdrawal and all looked south for new battles.

For his part, Bush denied that his campaign had distorted Dole's record.

"I'm sorry he feels that way," the vice president said in an interview aired today on CBS.

Interviewed on ABC's "Good Morning America," Dole said the Bush camp first tried "character assassination" in Iowa.

"That didn't work," he said, "so they start on distorting your record. ... Unless they want to get back on the straight and narrow and withdraw some of their attacks, we're going to have to counterattack."

Kemp said that although he finished third overall in New Hampshire's GOP contest, he was first among the conservatives. And he said he could "bridge the gap" between the conservative wing and Pat Robertson's "evangelical Christian" wing.

Kemp was crowing because he finished ahead of former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and Robertson, a former television evangelist. A week ago, he finished a weak fourth in Iowa, while Robertson was second.

In the first-in-the-nation balloting, here were the numbers at the end of the counting: Bush, 39 percent and Dole, 29 percent.

Kemp had 13 percent; du Pont, 10 percent; and Robertson, 10 percent.

Alexander Haig, who dropped out of the race Friday, got less than 1 percent.

Bush, Dole and Kemp were slated to be in Washington today, while du Pont headed for Wilmington, Del.

Robertson was campaigning in South Carolina and Florida, two Southern states where he hopes to win a few primaries.

"Tomorrow morning we go into the South and they're going to be playing in my backyard," Robertson said.

Robertson claims raising questions

The Rev. Pat Robertson's repeated claim that the Soviet Union has nuclear missiles deployed in Cuba underscores a danger of political campaigning that every candidate must be alerted to: Don't pop off with a statement that cannot be substantiated.

That appears to be what happened when Robertson claimed twice in the past few days that the Soviet Union has nuclear missiles in Cuba. By late Monday, Robertson had backed down from the claim, saying that he had no inside information and that he actually had made the statement in the debate Sunday as a question of whether missiles are located there. It looks, rather, as though Robertson made an erroneous statement and is now attempting to cover his goof.

Both the White House and Pentagon unequivocally deny Robertson's claim. But the way the claim was made raises this question: Can a man be trusted to hold the nation's highest political office who makes claims that he apparently can't support with concrete evidence?

If, in fact, Robertson had any information to support his explosive accusation, it certainly should be provided to federal officials who, in turn, must determine how to deal with a situation that's politically reminiscent of the Cuban missile crisis of two and a half decades ago. But Robertson didn't offer such evidence in the debate and when pressed later by reporters, eventually attempted to put a different "twist" on what appears to be an error in judgement. However, voters now must ask themselves these questions: Is a candidate who blurts out information he cannot substantiate truly fit to serve in the Oval Office? Would he deal with the heads of foreign governments, in negotiations that always are delicate, in a similar abrupt, reckless manner?

One has to assume that Robertson was infected by the wrenching competition of political manuevering or that he made a statement on a situation about which he was ill informed. But even those excuses would not negate the potentially damaging consequences of such a charge on relations between the superpowers that have been viewed as improving recently.

This claim is only one part of what appears to be a tendency on Robertson's part to use staggering, unprovable claims to gain national attention in the presidential campaign.

The polls will give an indication of how the American electorate feels about Robertson's actions and the voters in primaries will determine how far his campaign will proceed. But, as long as he is on the campaign trail he — and all the candidates — should restrict comments to information that can be substantiated.

WHOM TO WRITE

Following is a list of the names and addresses of various state and federal officials Midlanders may wish to contact from time-to-time:

PRESIDENT: Ronald Reagan (R), The President, The White House, Washington, D.C. 20500.

SENATORS: Lloyd Bentsen (D) and Phil Gramm (R), Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515.

REPRESENTATIVE: Lamar Smith (R), 509 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515; or 201 W. Wall, Suite 104, Midland, Texas 79701.

LETTERS

Baskin's savvy needed

In a recent letter to many individuals in the Midland area, Ernest Angelo, writing on behalf of Nick Taylor's candidacy for district judge, has branded Judge Pat M. Baskin as a "liberal" and has insinuated that Judge Baskin is soft on crime and therefore unsuitable to continue as our judge.

In his letter, Angelo asked Midland's citizens to ask attorneys who have practiced in Judge Baskin's court concerning his abilities. I have, in fact, practiced law in Judge Baskin's court since his election and, though I have yet to see Taylor in any court acting in a capacity as an attorney, I have tried a number of cases before Judge Baskin. I have found him to be fair, impartial, tough on crime and the criminal element and feel that the statements made in Angelo's letter are misleading and, apparently, misinformed.

To run a campaign for district judge based on such misinformation and "scare tactics" does not enhance Taylor's candidacy and is unbecoming of the fine persons supporting Taylor in his effort.

While not always agreeing with his rulings, this attorney feels that Judge Baskin represents and exhibits in his decisions the maturity of judgment and savvy in the courtroom that only comes from years of experience in the trial of civil and criminal lawsuits. That type of experience and maturity is exactly what the citizens of Midland need and deserve from their district judges.

Natural gas plan wise

I read with great interest a recent article in your newspaper in which Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp called for a natural gas marketing summit between producers, pipelines, marketing companies and state regulators

I applaud Commissioner Sharp for his foresight in seeking such a summit, and his perception of natural gas in the future of Texas. As Commissioner Sharp points out, Texas alone has 100 to 150 years of natural gas reserves. It truly is our "golden goose" and the fuel of the future.

As Texans we must begin to plan now how we will produce, market and distribute this valuable resource. We cannot let complacency and inaction lead us into a quagmire of bad planning and regulation.

A natural gas summit is an excellent start toward resolving some of the marketing, transportation and regulatory problems involving the natural gas industry, and I urge all members of the natural gas industry to support Commissioner Sharp in his call for such a summit.

City too restrictive

Each and every day I am thankful that I no longer live in the City of Midland. Here are a few of the reasons:

1. You cannot have a carport.
2. You have to park RVs behind your house, thus giving vandals an ideal opportunity.
3. You can have but a limited number of animals. Midland already has a law concerning loose animals. Why not enforce it?

Next thing you know Midland officials will be dictating what kind of animals we can have. Then they will be telling us how many kids to have.

Evangelist becoming decisive factor

NEW YORK — John Glenn, the astronaut, earned his political credentials as a senator from Ohio before his try for the presidency in 1984. Jack Kemp, the quarterback, paid his political dues as a member of the House from New York before offering himself for the Republican presidential nomination this year.

Wicker

Should Bill Bradley someday seek the White House, it will be as a respected senator from New Jersey, not as a former small forward in the National Basketball Association. And though Ronald Reagan often was derided in 1980 as "just an actor," his two terms as governor of the largest state were steppingstones to his election as president that year.

What, on the other hand, has Pat Robertson done that gives him any claim to the knowledge, experience and vision Americans usually expect of their president?

He has been a television evangelist, nothing more — not even if, in accord with his self-revealing complaint, you call him a "Christian broadcaster" whose experience in that line also required him — if it did — to manage a multimillion-dollar business.

Even Jesse Jackson, another minister not previously elected to public office, who is running a quite different presidential campaign, has more applicable experience.

Jackson not only has run before, he had extensive political associations as head of a civil rights organization and has conferred frequently with foreign leaders. He is a familiar spokesman, moreover, for the nation's largest minority group.

It's true that to some extent all of the above parlayed fame in other fields into political opportunity. Only Pat Robertson, however, has had the chutzpah to try to move directly from nonpolitical prominence to the highest political office in the land.

As a television evangelist, Robertson naturally is running on a platform of "moral values" — as if, somehow, under Ronald Reagan, the last White House aspirant to offer such a program, the moral values they both extol have been undermined or subverted. Robertson's ignorance and disregard of political reality nevertheless show through the cloth. He would, for example:

- Begin immediate deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative — Reagan's so-called Star Wars, or space-based missile defense — although no reputable scientific opinion believes deployment can even be hoped for in less than 7 to 10 years, if ever.
- Cut government spending by $100 billion before 1990 by eliminating "waste and mismanagement" — a proposal laughable in its lack of understanding of politics and government.
- Veto the whole budget and shut down the whole government — never mind national defense, law enforcement, the Weather Bureau or air traffic control — if Congress provided even one penny for any organization "encouraging abortions."
- Break off all negotiations with the Soviet Union until that nation satisfied Robertson's personal human rights standards, and begin supplying weapons to anti-Soviet elements, such as dissidents in Poland, that requested them.

(All the above are taken from an audio cassette that Robertson uses to propagate his message.)

Despite such unworkable notions, Robertson came in second in the Iowa caucuses. He has high hopes for a strong showing in the Southern states, where 15 percent of adults identified themselves in a New York Times-CBS News Poll as "evangelical, charismatic or fundamentalist Christians." In a Gallup Poll, however, only 10 percent of white evangelicals listed Robertson as their first choice for president, with 17 percent opposed to his candidacy.

More immediately, in the New Hampshire primary, Robertson hoped to dispose of Jack Kemp, his principal Republican challenger for the votes of religious conservatives. Ubiquitous "experts" said he could do that by finishing third and ahead of Kemp in a state without a strong fundamentalist tradition.

It's all very well to say he can't be nominated or elected, though even that remains to be seen. What does it say, meanwhile, about the American people and the system by which they choose their leaders, that a former faith healer, a man who boasted that his religious appeals could change the course of hurricanes, should have become perhaps a decisive factor in the presidential nomination of a major party?

Today is Ash Wednesday, Feb. 17, the 48th day of 1988. There are 318 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1817, a street in Baltimore became the first to be lighted with gas from America's first gas company.

In 1865, Columbia, S.C., burned as Confederate soldiers moved out and Union forces began moving in. It has never been determined which side set the blaze.

In 1897, the forerunner of the National PTA, the National Congress of Mothers, was founded in Washington.

Shultz trip focuses on hopes for Mideast

WASHINGTON — Fact No. 1: Our Secretary of State is headed to Moscow next week, and after returning home to brief the president, will make his way to the Middle East.

William Safire

From that we can deduce that George Shultz's first object is to get the Russians to tell the Syrians to stop forbidding King Hussein of Jordan from negotiating with the Israelis on behalf of Palestinian Arabs. The king's insistence on talks only at a U.N. conference set up to guarantee the outcome on Arab terms now blocks any progress.

Fact No. 2: Israel's prime minister has scheduled a trip to Washington during the Ides of March. He thus accepts the resultant pressure on himself to acquiesce in our negotiating framework, but he trusts Shultz and can count on our bipartisan political support in an election year.

This willingness to negotiate even under the duress of recent rioting means that Shamir is aware of the success of the new Arab strategy: instead of continuing to kill and maim Jews in terrorist raids, Arab rioters now provoke Israelis to kill and maim Arabs. This turns the tables of world opinion.

Israelis are also aware of a less publicized fear in the minds of Hussein and President Mubarak of Egypt: the same Palestinian unrest, made much more effective by the willingness of Islamic fundamentalists to strike a blow by dying, could soon be directed against them. Hussein would be especially vulnerable to techniques now in use in the West Bank if they were adopted by the Palestinian majority in his kingdom.

Fact No. 3: Nobody is calling the ideas being bandied about "the Reagan plan," or "the Shultz plan," or anybody's plan. Great pains are being taken to present this as an initiative without an initiator.

This is because George Shultz remembers his blunder of September 1982, in which he surprised Menachem Begin by undermining the Camp David accords in trying to impose a settlement, and naively placed his faith in Hussein's political courage.

Now Shultz is taking the opposite approach. The United States is evoking memories of the autonomy discussed in the Begin-Sadat-Carter agreement (free elections and self-rule by Palestinians quickly, and decisions about sovereignty and borders coming years later); meanwhile, Mubarak tells Kuwaiti newsmen that Egypt was right to press for that step forward. At the same time, we placate Arab rejectionists by changing the word "autonomy" to "interim or transitional solutions," by not mentioning Camp David, and by bringing the Russians into the dealings.

The newest wrinkle we are putting forward is a speed-up of the second, or sovereignty, phase. The nail-nibbling Hussein, faced with the new need to drum up support among young West Bank leaders neither beholden to him nor to the PLO, is reportedly demanding that the deadline for sovereignty talks be moved up to Dec. 15, and we seem to be going along with that.

The advantage to December is that it is not November, when U.S. and Israeli elections take place; but the disadvantage is that a timetable like that is unrealistic if the parties are serious about bargaining.

The Arab desire for a quick deadline is understandable: they take it as a guarantee from the United States and the U.S.S.R. that when direct talks between the Israeli and Jordanian delegations reach the expected impasse, Arabs will be able to go over the head of Israel to the superpowers to get a "recommendation" that Israel give up not only its West Bank protection from another attack, but its hard-won control of Jerusalem itself.

That would be dictation, not negotiation. Shamir, despite thunder on his right, is willing to give a fair amount on accelerating the timetable, just as he has recently shown his willingness to agree to some non-U.N. international cover to the direct talks. But Israeli leaders in both parties need written assurance from President Reagan that the United States will not recommend a U.N.-style settlement.

Shultz has already given Arabs an enormous concession by dealing the Russians in. He should advise President Reagan to give the explicit no-arm-twisting pledge, which would surely be honored by the next president, just as the no-dealing-with-PLO-terrorism promise has been honored by successive U.S. presidents. Such a memo would provide an incentive for Arabs to negotiate in good faith.

Down the West Bank road, sooner or later, lies self-rule by Palestinians and joint sovereignty by Israel, Jordan, and the Arabs and Jews who live on the land. Neither side can take that position yet. May the Shultz Shuttle help them bring about that solution sooner.

Scars of violence hurt abused many times

Her letter said she had a message and she wanted me to put it in this column.

She said it was important. The subject was hitting a woman. I decided to give her this forum. What follows is her message:

Grizzard

"I believe there are many men out there who have either hit a woman, have thought about it, or are capable of doing so.

"I want you to print this for a purpose — to prevent those men who are capable of hitting a woman from doing so, to commend those who have thought about it and have then abstained, and to expand the minds of those who have struck out and may do so again.

"I'm not a battered wife, nor do I see my husband as a wife-beater. I am simply married to a man who has hit me several times in furious moments.

"To him it was a bad experience. To me, it was a loss of self. He regrets, then, forgets. I will never forget.

"I suppose men find it easy to be aggressive at times. They lose control and express their aggression in a violent manner. Women wear the scars of that violence forever.

"Last night my husband hit me again. I have nothing physical to show for it. I don't have a single bruise nor a broken bone. The only remains of the experience are those which none can see, scars which affect me in a way in which I feel more alone than ever.

"It hurts to be hit. It hurts to have someone look at you with eyes that see so little and with hands that exercise no restraint.

"Long after the action, when those eyes are no longer looking at you, there still remains an imprint deep in your soul as you begin to look at yourself as those eyes did.

"All of a sudden, no matter where you stood before, you become as small as the eyes which saw you in the heat of anger.

"The loss of self-respect is immense.

"Nobody should be hit. Not an animal, not a man, not a woman or child. Nothing beautiful should be made to feel less than something that deserves some degree of respect.

"Last night my husband hit me again. I feel like I have been robbed of the beauty I saw in myself.

"Perhaps I will get the feeling back that there is something beautiful about me, but why do I have to go through this? Wouldn't it have just been so simple for my husband to have used a little self-restraint.

"I truly believe there are many men out there who can learn from what I have had to say, and I know there are women out there who can relate to my experience.

"Last night my husband hit me again. The positive side of this — and, believe it or not, there is one — is that I want to share what I feel. If one husband reads this and never strikes at his wife again then my suffering will have been worth it."

The darndest thing about my job is what people write me. They spill out their guts. They plead for help. Too often, there is absolutely nothing I can do to help them.

I didn't take this job, I remind myself, to try to save the world. But, then, you get something that really touches you, as this lady's message.

Her husband hits her. It makes her feel ugly. It makes her feel betrayed. She is begging to be understood.

Hitting any woman is a cheap shot. It's cowardly. If I could change the world, one of the first things I would do is get rid of the creeps and cowards who do it anyway.

That's my message.

IRS fears delayed returns

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — If the trend by many taxpayers to delay filing their federal tax returns continues to spread, the federal government could feel the pinch — right in the pocketbook.

Lawrence B. Gibbs, commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, notes that five years ago, 14 percent of all individual returns were filed in January and 34 percent in April. But last year, only 4 percent were filed during the first month and almost 40 percent in April.

"If this trend were exacerbated by tax reform (the sweeping 1986 law), it could jam the system by slowing down processing and the issuance of refunds," Gibbs told a Senate Finance subcommittee Tuesday. "As a result, there could be a high price to pay.

"If we don't process returns within a 45-day period after the return due date the government must pay interest on refunds," he noted. That due date is April 15.

The IRS is not ready to push the panic button, even though 9.7 percent fewer returns have been filed this year than during the same period in 1987. Just a week ago, that gap was 17.5 percent.

"It does not appear that there is an easy solution to reversing the trend" toward late filing, Gibbs said. He cited surveys finding that the chief reasons for later filing include simply procrastinating and failure to receive some information necessary to prepare a return.

The IRS is not sure how the new tax law, with its lower rates, reduced deductions and higher personal exemptions, will affect the late-filing trend. Some returns are simpler under the new law; others are more complicated.

The backlog of unprocessed returns at the IRS was down to 11.5 million last week, compared with 12.9 million at this time last year. The number of couples and individuals receiving refunds, 1.7 million, also dropped, to 1.9 million. The average refund was up 13 percent, to $743.

By the end of the tax-filing season, the IRS expects that about 80 percent of the 107 million returns will qualify for refunds.

But no one can say with a great degree of certainty, because of the new tax law and the fact that most workers filed new tax-withholding forms with their employers last year.

U.S. fear of attack spurs talks in Baghdad

By STEWART M. POWELL
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Iraqi aircraft have come so close to attacking U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf that the United States has ordered a high-level team to visit Baghdad to prevent another mistake like the "inadvertent" Iraqi attack that killed 37 crewmen aboard the USS Stark last year.

The unusual move underscored deepening U.S. fears that the threat of attack from Iraq, a supposedly friendly nation, is as great the threat from Iran.

U.S. warships on a number of occasions have come within seconds of firing upon Iraqi fighters approaching U.S. vessels in an "attack profile," according to U.S. naval officers who have returned from service in the Gulf. Marauding Iraqi pilots, after entering declared war zones, routinely fire anti-ship missiles at unidentified ships that appear on cockpit radar screens, U.S. officials said.

The menacing minuet of Iraqi pilots firing at unknown targets took a turn for the worse last Friday when an Iraqi Badger bomber ignored a radio warning and two flares from the USS Chandler to fire what were believed to be two, Soviet-made anti-ship missiles within range of a U.S. convoy of four Kuwaiti tankers.

One of the powerful air-to-surface missiles, with a warhead estimated to be twice the size of the Exocet that damaged the Stark, flew within eight miles of the U.S. convoy.

The Iraqi action "gave us a great deal of concern," Richard Armitage, assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, said in an unusual briefing on Tuesday with reporters. "We have communicated with them in Baghdad the undesirability of this dangerous practice."

The U.S. team, including officers from the U.S. armada in the Gulf, has been dispatched to Baghdad "to review the 'deconfliction' procedures to assure that we're all singing from the same hymnal," Armitage said.

Procedures worked out in the aftermath of Iraq's attack on the Stark last May established an "air exclusion zone" of about 40 miles around U.S. vessels, with approaching aircraft warned that any exhibition of hostile intent would be countered with force. The missiles believed fired last Friday have a range of some 50 miles, raising questions, said one Pentagon official, about "whether we need to revisit anything to be sure that everything is on a solid footing so that we don't have a recurrence of the Stark or anything else."

The convoy approached by the Iraqi bomber was the 33rd U.S. escort of Kuwaiti vessels since last July when the United States expanded its force in the Gulf to deter Iranian attacks on the vessels of oil-rich Kuwait, an ally of Iraq in the seven-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

The concern over Iraqi attacks emerged as the Pentagon continued to "tailor" forces in the Gulf to defend U.S.-flagged vessels, provide assurance to moderate Arab states and yet reduce costs estimated at $20 million a month. Armitage said U.S. forces, which once included 33 warships and 17,000 personnel, will be reduced, with the withdrawal of the battleship USS Iowa, the helicopter carrier USS Okinawa and half the ship-board contingent of 700 combat-ready U.S. Marines.

About 25 ships and 10,000 personnel are expected to be stationed in the region by the end of the month.

Pentagon pulling some ships from gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says withdrawal of some warships in the Persian Gulf represents a "fine-tuning" of the U.S. presence, but it also is voicing concern over the conduct of Iraqi forces in the region.

There are currently 28 ships in the region, but the helicopter carrier Okinawa, the battleship Iowa and two escorts are coming home without being replaced, assistant secretary of defense Richard Armitage said Tuesday.

"Our mission of protecting U.S. flag ships in the gulf remains unchanged," Armitage said. "We don't think the (overall) threat has abated. However, we think we've learned a lot of lessons in the mine-sweeping area and this allows us primarily to pull out (some of the ships)."

Armitage said the Pentagon no longer thinks it needs mine-sweeping helicopters along with mine-sweeping ships, clearing the way for the Okinawa's departure.

Armitage, in charge of international security affairs, also said the United States already had protested to Baghdad an incident Saturday in which an Iraqi jet fired a missile near a U.S. destroyer.

He said the administration planned to send a team of military officials to Iraq later this week to discuss the matter further.

Armitage also said that the administration had no plans to offer military protection to U.S.-owned ships flying foreign flags.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "This represents a fine-tuning of our position in the Gulf and not a policy change that would be reflected in overall forces or in other countries' actions."

The remarks by Armitage were the first reflecting official administration concern about Iraqi military operations near U.S. ships. The United States thought it had won Iraqi agreement after the deadly attack on the USS Stark last May to keep jet fighters roughly 40 miles away from American warships.

In Saturday's incident, an Iraqi jet failed to respond to Navy radio calls and fired a missile.

Federal courthouse being remodeled

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The federal courthouse in Midland is being remodeled from justice to taxes.

The George Mahon Federal Building and Courthouse, which was built in 1974, is undergoing limited remodeling for more efficient use of space from the District Clerk's Office on the third-floor courtroom floor to the Internal Revenue Service on the first floor.

On the upper floor, renovators have knocked out walls and are raising others and converting the old IRS Criminal Investigation Division office to storage space for court-related use.

"We were hoping to get mink carpet, but now it looks like we won't," quipped John Neil, deputy clerk-in-charge of the District Clerk's Office for the Midland-Odessa Division of the federal-court system's Western District of Texas.

Neil noted that the General Services Administration, which operates the building, and the United States Courts are sharing expenses in the remodeling.

Workers are laying new carpet in the clerk's office, which maintains records of criminal, civil and bankruptcy proceedings.

"And they will be doing the taping, bedding and floating walls," Neil said.

Down the corridor, Midland sign painter-letterer Ray Hart was affixing golden letters on the outer door leading to the chambers of United States District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton. The lettering denoted the Bunton's chambers in 1½- and 1-inch lettering.

"It's beautiful," Janis Kennedy, one of Bunton's three law clerks, said of the glistening lettering. And she expressed delight over the prospects of new computerized word processors for the three law clerks, Ms. Kennedy, Tom Stanton and Steve Polino, and for Bunton's executive secretary, Carolyn Emerson.

The second floor, which was spared this round of renovation, houses the Federal Bureau of Investigation office, the U.S. Magistrate's Courtroom and chambers, U.S. Deputy Marshal's offices, Grand Jury Room and U.S. Department of Labor Office.

Downstairs, IRS offices are being remodeled and expanded for facilities for tax auditors, tax collectors, investigators and taxpayer-service representatives.

Midland IRS officials were reticent about the renovations.

But Martin J. "Marty" Rosenthal, U.S. Department of Labor compliance officer, said the IRS expansion was a good omen.

"They (IRS agents) are putting it all together," Rosenthal said of the IRS centralizing its Midland-Odessa area functions.

The IRS Collections Division is being moved to Midland from Odessa.

"If they are consolidating their business operations into one location, it makes sense," Rosenthal said. "Things are going to be more efficient than they were before."

Agriculture official says state's economy can be turned around

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Recognizing that "even though the Texas economy has taken a beating and certainly the economy in the Permian Basin has taken more than its fair share of lumps over the last two to three years," the assistant commissioner of the state Department of Agriculture Tuesday said, "There is a way to turn things around."

Applauding the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce, Mike Moeller said, "The efforts you're putting forward are exemplary of the kinds of programs that can turn things around."

Some of the things going on in this area that TDA is "real proud of" include the farmers' market program, where farmers bring produce to a particular site for sell to members of the community. A second market location now is being considered in the Odessa area.

In addition, TDA has done a lot of work promoting local red meat programs, which Moeller termed "the wave of the future." Moeller said at least one person in the Odessa area is producing buffalo for slaughter.

"Last week, we kicked off a light-beef task force, which is eventually going to generate a great deal of interest in this industry statewide," Moeller said.

Consumers want to find a way to continue to eat red meat, he said, adding TDA believes exotic venison and light beef "are going to be areas of increased consumption and I think Texas has an opportunity to be in the forefront of those industries."

Moeller briefly touched on other agriculture department projects during a noon news conference Tuesday at the Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

A specific program discussed was the Right-To-Know, which is designed to inform people, users and workers, about the dangers of various pesticides. A pamphlet available from TDA describes who is covered by the new state Agricultural Hazard Communication Law. The pamphlet also describes the responsibility of agricultural employers under the law and the type of information that must be maintained by agricultural employers.

Prior to joining TDA, Moeller was elected president of the Texas Farmers Union.

Students from outside ECISD could pay up to $3,000 in tuition per year

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Out-of-district students attending Ector County schools in the 1988-89 school year may face tuition costs ranging from $1,665 to $3,000 per student per year.

The lower tuition figure would apply to full time "eligible transfers," while the higher figure would apply to "ineligible transfers."

The question of eligibility and ineligibility would be determined on "a case-by-case" basis, according to Ector County Independent School District superintendent Hugh Hayes.

Efforts to waive tuition costs next year for students living in the western Midland County areas of Mission Dorado and Ridgewood were stalemated Tuesday night by a tie vote when ECISD Trustee Jim Nelson abstained from voting because of a possible conflict of interest.

Nelson explained that the Odessa law firm with whom he is associated — Shafer, Davis, McCollum, Ashley, O'Leary & Stoker — had represented HBF Corp., developer of Mission Dorado, in connection with business transactions in the past and he wanted to fully research state law to determine if his vote on the waiver question could be construed as a conflict of interest.

Board President Vickie Gomez asked the board's attorney, Mike Atkins, to also research the question.

The question of whether tuition should be waived will be added to the agenda of a special meeting ECISD trustees have tentatively set for 5 p.m. Monday for a workshop on a proposed $10 million bond election.

North Texans rally round super collider project

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — More than 200 North Texans, led by Gov. Bill Clements, told U.S. Department of Energy officials the Superconducting "Super Collider" fits right in with the state's frontier spirit, but a handful expressed concern about the "boom town" growth they moved here to escape.

Although little information was gathered Tuesday at two hearings about the project's effect on the area's environment, the leader of the presiding DOE team said they served their purpose.

"One of the factors that we do evaluate in trying to select a final site is community support," said Ira Adler, a deputy director in the department's energy research office. "So the extent that we're hearing both plus and minus that is something we'll factor into that criterion."

Gov. Bill Clements began the afternoon session with a ringing endorsement of the project, the first of many.

"We in Texas have a spirit that goes back to the early days. It is a frontier spirit exemplified in the super collider project. We want to be part of it," Clements said.

Waxahachie is one of seven sites under consideration for the super collider, a high-tech research laboratory where protons will crash at speeds faster than light in a 53-mile oval-shaped tunnel.

Scientists say the super collider will provide new depth in high energy physics research, the field that studies the fundamental nature of matter and energy. When completed in 1996, the facility is expected to provide jobs for 2,500 people, with a $270 million annual payroll.

More than 200 political and business leaders, clergy, teachers, students and residents took turns telling federal officials that Ellis County, south of Dallas, should be the site of the super collider.

"The bottom line of a project of this magnitude and standing in the country is jobs," said George Singleton, president of Citizens National Bank of Waxahachie. "That's something all of us can relate to very, very sincerely."

Barney Taylor, president of the Waxahachie Chamber of Commerce, said that county leaders started discussing ways to land the project soon after it was announced in January 1987.

"In a matter of days it was decided by (county) leaders that this is something that we should go after," Taylor said. "Suddenly the folks in Waxahachie, Ennis, Maypearl and Midlothian were talking about each other in something less than four letter words.

"You have given us something that everyone in this area can get behind and we finally found something to do with the white chalk (underground) besides chuck it at chickens," he said.

The racetrack-like tunnel containing the super colliding magnets would be constructed in the Austin chalk base .

Although the mood was almost unanimously supportive, Debbie Timmermann of rural Maypearl said some residents privately fear the rapid growth the project will bring.

"We're not against the super collider itself," said Mrs. Timmermann, a Waxahachie school teacher who, with her husband Charles, would be displaced from their acreage by the project's 8,000-acre campus.

"We really fear this growth. I've had parents of children I teach tell me they will move away if they build this."

Pilot, passenger of drug-running plane still at large

From Staff and Wire Reports

The pilot and passenger of a drug-running private plane which landed on a ranch in Borden County, 65 miles northeast of Midland, remained at large today, lawmen said.

The pilot, an alleged member of a million-dollar marijuana smuggling ring, landed the plane near Gail after eluding officers in north Texas late Monday, Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox said.

"Two people are still at large — that is my understanding," Cox said.

Borden County Sheriff Norman Snead was unavailable for comment this morning.

DPS narcotics agents arrested Gerald Blake Mackey of Cedar Creek and Gary M. Whittington of Austin near Possum Kingdom Lake about 10 p.m. Monday, Cox said.

Mackey was being held in Palo Pinto County Jail on $150,000 bond and Whittington was in Erath County Jail on $100,000 bond following their arrests Tuesday, officials said.

Both men were charged with aggravated possession of marijuana, said Palo Pinto Chief Deputy Allan Spurlock.

DPS Sgt. Bob Porter said U.S. Air Customs Service officers and an Austin DPS agent followed the plane from Mexico to a small airstrip at Sportsmans' World, a housing development on the south side of the lake.

He said the pursuit plane, which was unable to land, circled away from the area and notified agents, who had been waiting on the ground.

Two men then loaded 40 large bundles from the KingAir craft into a large four-horse trailer hitched to a pickup and left the scene in separate vehicles, Porter said.

The plane — believed to have come from the Mexico City area — took off and was chased by an assault helicopter, he said.

Police chased the two men for about 15 miles before arresting them and confiscating the marijuana, valued at about $1.5 million, Porter said.

Gilbreath says he'll face Bentsen in fall

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Houston businessman Wes Gilbreath Tuesday predicted victory in next month's Texas Republican primary and said GOP rival Beau Boulter talks a good game but that his rhetoric isn't strong enough to unseat Democratic incumbent Lloyd Bentsen.

"Beau does a lot of talking, but he can't produce when the chips are down," Gilbreath said at a Tuesday morning meeting with news reporters and GOP supporters — less than a day before absentee voting for the March 8 primary was set to begin.

The former Gatesville farmer claims to be leading Boulter and his two other rivals in most statewide polls and predicted that he will win the primary on Super Tuesday.

The winner of the GOP primary will meet Bentsen in the November general election.

"I am looking for a challenge and I believe I found me one," he said. "I'd like to think it's going to be for the betterment of Texas."

Gilbreath casts himself as a strong loyalist to Texas Sen. Phil Gramm — also a Republican — and praises the junior senator's efforts to control federal spending and balance the nation's budget. He ridiculed Bentsen, saying the four-term Democrat has been a "failure" as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Bishop College benefactor refuses to release funds

DALLAS (AP) — An anonymous donor who promised $300,000 to Bishop College if the school could raise a matching sum has refused to sign an escrow agreement, effectively barring access to the funds, officials said.

Last month school officials cheered when they met the grant qualifications, saying the $600,000 could save Bishop from financial disaster. But officials said not having access to the escrow fund has meant that some faculty members and other employees have not been paid this month.

The money cannot be touched by the college without a signed agreement on how the money is to be used.

Jerry Pittman, the attorney representing the donor, said Tuesday that legal details have kept his client from signing the agreement.

"There is no bad faith involved. It's all legal details and concern over the long-term rehabilitation of the college," Pittman said.

But George McElreath, the trustee overseeing the college's Chapter 11 bankruptcy case, was not reassured.

"I think we (Bishop College officials) have a breach of contract action against the anonymous donor. The pre-condition was that we match his funds by such and such a date. We have done that. Our end of the bargain is done."

McElreath, who recommends action to the bankruptcy judge, said he will file a motion asking the judge to dismiss the bankruptcy case if the escrow account problems are not solved quickly.

If the Chapter 11 bankruptcy case were dismissed, creditors could sue Bishop for outstanding debts, McElreath said. Those debts total about $12.5 million.

"From my perspective, this is a desperate case. We are at the end of another rope," McElreath said.

In January, the anonymous donor offered the money to the predominantly black institution and up to 5,000 scholarships if funds were matched in a week. The school raised almost $450,000.

On Jan. 21, Bishop College attorneys presented an escrow agreement to U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Robert McGuire placing the matching funds with the $300,000 already deposited by the donor. According to the proposed agreement, the donor would have to approve all checks written on the account.

The extra $150,000 raised was placed in another account and used to pay part of the college's current bills, including a partial salary payment to employees.

GILBREATH

"Gramm votes for Texas and then his vote is canceled out by Bentsen because of the influences outside of the state," Gilbreath said. "Lloyd (Bentsen) should have left office after 12 years and retired as a statesman. Now he's going to be retired to a great extent as a failure."

Statewide polls, however, indicate Bentaen continues to be extremely popular with Texans.

Despite Gilbreath's support for Gramm's agenda, the one-term senator stopped just short of endorsing Boulter last month when he told the Dallas Morning News that the Amarillo congressman is "clearly the qualified candidate" in the Republican primary.

"No one has the qualifications comparable to Beau," Gramm said of Boulter, who already has garnered a pre-primary endorsement from U.S. Rep Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio.

Gilbreath — an advocate of a national energy policy that would include the repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax — supports completion of the Navy's Homeport and the campaign to bring the Superconducting Super-Collider to Texas.

The candidate also favors economic development through private-sector government partnerships, deregulation of small business, protecting Social Security and full implementation of the Strategic Defense Initiative — commonly known as Star Wars.

Gilbreath has begun to air television commercials, touting himself as a lover of family, God and Texas. In the advertisement, the candidate says he has 18 reasons why he's so concerned about the future of the state and "they all call me Grandpa."

Dealer selling Connally items

HOUSTON (AP) — Some possessions of former Texas Gov. John Connally are back up for sale through a Houston antiques dealer.

"There are a lot of people who either could not afford anything at the Connally auction or didn't have the time to go," said David Lackey, owner of David Lackey Antiques. "I'm just making it easier for people to own something that once belonged to John Connally."

At last month's auction, Lackey paid $1,800 for a 150-piece Spode china set and $1,000 for a 116-piece set of Spode tableware. Lackey is selling individual cups and saucers.

Ballet Midland stages 'Winter Production'

From Staff Reports

Ballet Midland's "Winter Production" is being staged at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

Of the seven works being presented, four new works will premiere choreographed by Valentine Boving, Octavio Nieto and Brian Taylor. The range of works created for this production include dances that are contemporary, traditional and neoclassical.

Miss Boving, the ballet's assistant academy director, a former dancer with Houston Ballet, New Haven Ballet and the Swedish Ballet, has choreographed her first work for Ballet Midland. The work, a satire on games people play entitled "Games," is set to the music of Franz Liszt.

Nieto, the newest Ballet Midland faculty member, comes to Midland from the National Dance Company of Mexico City, where he was a soloist. He has studied ballet in Mexico and New York. His work, "Songs of Harmony," a neoclassical work set to the music of Rachmaninoff, is the story of four sisters and the separation of one of them from the family.

Diane Gaddy, artistic director of Ballet Midland and former prima ballerina with the National Dance Company of Mexico City, will dance the pas de deux from "Le Corsaire" with Nieto. "Le Corsaire," a traditional ballet first produced in 1856, tells the story of a pirate's love for a young princess who has been sold into slavery.

Taylor, a former dancer with Ballet Midland who is now studying and working in Denton, recently returned to Midland to set two new ballets, one for students at Ballet Midland Academy and the other for adult dancers. The first, "Clearing the Air," is set to Gallic music, and the other, "Triplicity," is set to the music of Erik Satie's "Trois Gnosiennes."

Tickets, priced at $10 for adults and $5 for children, students and senior citizens, may be purchased at the Kiosk in the Plaza, Plaza Shopping Center. Group rates are available. For reservations and ticket information call 683-2027.

ECISD

Board members heard from several Midland County residents during Tuesday night's regular monthly meeting, including two young girls who attend Ector County schools, before voting to impose tuition fees for out-of-district students.

Yvonne Reyes, who lives in the Ridgewood area in western Midland County, told ECISD trustees her parents couldn't afford to pay tuition and asked the board to waive tuition fees for her, her older sister and others from the Ridgewood area.

The said she wants to continue to attend ECISD schools because "I think we will get a better education here in Odessa."

West Odessa businessman Sam Holloman, who lives in the area of Bates Field, east of FM 1788, contended the area he lives in is accessible only from Odessa and "a clear line" needs to be established.

Twila Holloman Young, who also resides in the Bates Field area, said if her children were required to attend Midland County schools they would have to board a bus at 5:15 each morning and not be able to return home until about 5:15 p.m. "An 11 hour school day is too long a day for children."

In addition, she said, both parents work in Odessa, have Odessa doctors and go to church in Odessa. Having to have their children in Midland County schools, she said, "would be too much of a hardship" on the family, she stated.

Ms. Gomez said it had been reported she favored waiving tuition for students involved in a lawsuit which was filed in an effort to force the Midland Independent School District to allow ECISD to annex the western portion of Midland County in which the Ridgewood and Mission Dorado areas are located in. However, she said Tuesday night she would vote in favor of imposing a tuition fee schedule because of the impact failure to do so might have on the proposed bond issue.

So far, plaintiff-parents have been unsuccessful in their legal efforts. Texas Education Commissioner William Kirby ruled in January that MISD could not be forced to disannex the area. Parents have vowed to carry on the question to state court.

According to ECISD Public Information Director Chuck Hornung, enrollment figures show the number of Midland County students involved in the dispute is less than 80.

Unless the board decides to continue waiving tuition the parents of these children would be required to pay the fees if the youngsters continued to attend ECISD schools in the 1988-89 school year.

The dispute concerning the children of Midland County residents attending Ector County schools has been going on for nearly five years.

Trinity adding high school

From Staff Reports

Trinity School officials will experience the sights and sounds of 10th grade students next fall when the first phase of a three-part high school expansion plan becomes reality.

At a press conference Tuesday afternoon, administrators and Trinity board members announced they had begun plans to add a 10th, 11th and 12th grade to their school within the next three years.

"The families have asked for this and we're excited we are going to do it," said Peggy Simmons, chief administrator.

Trinity currently serves preschoolers through ninth graders.

Midland and Odessa are not like "other communities," said Ms. Simmons. "There is an extremely high intelligence level here. Parents put education first."

The new high school will be located on the 20-acre site the school presently is on.

While Ms. Simmons said there is no exact figure on what the additions will cost over the next three years, the tentative operating budget for the first year will be $40,000.

Officials expect 15-20 new students in the 10th grade next fall.

Once the high school is fully operational in 1990, it will be the only private high school in the Midland-Odessa area accredited by the National Association of Independent Schools, officials said.

Frazier trust fund set up

From Staff Reports

A trust fund has been established at Midland American Bank for Debra Frazier, who was wounded in a Feb. 8 shooting in which her 11-year-old daughter, Jenalee Frazier, was killed.

Ms. Frazier, 33, a cashier at Albertson's supermarket, was listed in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital. She was to be dismissed from the hospital today.

The shooting was the result of a domestic quarrel, according to Midland police. Ms. Frazier's fiancee, Lyndon Bart Long, 27, was charged with murder and aggravated assault. He was being held today in the Midland County Jail in lieu of posting bail.

Donations to the trust fund may be made at either of Midland American Bank's locations in Midland, at Albertson's or at Crestview Baptist Church, where Ms. Frazier and her daughter were members.

Thorsen will cover the range of plants which thrive on alkaline soil common to West Texas and on brackish waters.

"He will also speak on proper trimming and pruning as opposed to butchering," according to Midge Erskine, program coordinator for the Sibley Environmental Learning Center.

Thorsen's talk will cover the conservation of water.

18-year-old man, juvenile in custody in beer thefts

From Staff Reports

An 18-year-old Midland man and a 16-year-old juvenile are in custody today, each suspected of a string of beer thefts from convenience stores in which clerks were assaulted, police said.

Roy Galindo, local address unavailable, was arrested Monday afternoon on a robbery warrant, according to Det. Sgt. John Ingram. He appeared before Justice of the Peace Robert Pine on Tuesday, who set bond at $100,000. At the time of his arrest, he was free on bond on a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, a felony, he said.

Galindo is expected to be charged in at least two other convenience store thefts — which began as petty thefts but escalated to robberies when the clerks were injured, Ingram said.

In several of the robberies, clerks were hit in the face with fists, and in at least one robbery, a clerk was stabbed in the hand, Ingram said.

The 16-year-old, who will be charged with two robberies, is being held in two of the three robberies Galindo was suspected of committing, Ingram said.

Several other juveniles are suspected of involvement in some of the robberies, but have not been identified by police, Ingram said.

The juveniles may belong to a youth gang, but the investigator said he "could not say if these were gang activities."

Texas likely to pass New York

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas will pass New York as the second most populous state in the 1990 census but will never pass No. 1-ranked California, says a University of Texas geography professor.

Dr. Robert Holz, author of a recently published study on Texas' population from 1980 to 2030, said, "Texas will never catch California and it's not growing as fast right now as Florida or Nevada."

"But Nevada has a relatively tiny population and one can't reasonably predict that its 60 percent growth rate will continue," Holz said.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Thank you Midland. The Volunteer Center grows daily, not only with the increase of generous Midlanders volunteering their precious time and efforts, but also with the nonprofit community organizations requesting assistance regarding their Volunteer Program Development/Enhancement.

In placing volunteers with community organizations, it is very important that both the volunteers and the organizations be aware of their rights respectively.

The volunteers should agree to:

- Respect and maintain confidentiality of all information.
- Not pressure clients to adopt their beliefs, style of living, religion or cultural patterns.
- Maintain open lines of communication with agency staff.
- To understand and abide by agency policies and procedures.

The nonprofit organizations should agree to:

- Treat all volunteers with courtesy and respect.
- Orient, train and supervise volunteers appropriately.
- Maintain accurate record of volunteer hours worked.
- Provide on-going evaluation of work.
- Provide extra sensitivity to those volunteers seeking paid employment.

The Volunteer Center waits to serve you. If interested, call the Center and allow the staff to place you in a nonprofit organization, based on your skills and interests.

Special needs of the week:

- Individuals interested in the field of alcoholism, especially those who are bilingual. Training will be provided.
- Clerical assistants are desperately being sought for very busy community organizations.

Murdered woman's family trying to implicate magazine in death

STATE

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for the mother and son of a murdered Texas woman began trying to convince a federal court jury today that the military magazine Soldier of Fortune was responsible for her death and should pay them $22.5 million.

Sandra Black of Bryan was shot to death in 1985. Her husband, Robert, was sent to the Texas death row for paying a hitman $10,000 to carry out the killing. The alleged triggerman, John Wayne Hearn, is serving life terms in Florida for other killings.

Marjorie Einmann, Mrs. Black's mother, and Gary Black, the victim's 18-year-old son, contend in their suit that Hearn's ad in the Denver-based publication brought him to the attention of Robert Black.

They are seeking $2.5 million in actual damages and $20 million in punitive damages from the magazine, which calls itself a publication for professional adventurers.

"Our case is there was another party in this crime — Soldier of Fortune," said Ron Franklin, attorney for the plaintiffs, accusing the magazine of facilitating the killing and giving Black the means to accomplish it.

"By looking at the back (where the classified ads appeared), he could select," Franklin said. "This is not Vanity Fair. It has a military flavor, to say the least."

"No one at Soldier of Fortune suspected anything criminal in that ad or any other ad in Soldier of Fortune," magazine attorney Larry Thompson said. "We think the evidence will clearly show Soldier of Fortune was not negligent."

A five-man, three-woman jury was selected Tuesday. Among questions asked to prospective jurors was whether they owned a gun and if they had watched "Rambo" and John Wayne movies.

The trial could last through next week, U.S. District Judge David Hittner said.

The ad in question appeared in four issues of the magazine in late 1984, seeking former Marine and Vietnam veterans and weapons specialists with jungle warfare expertise for "high risk assignments" in the United States or overseas.

CBS News reported Tuesday that Hearn said in a court deposition that he had received 10 to 20 calls a day in response to the advertisement. Most of the callers wanted to hire him for illegal acts, including kidnappings, bombings and murder.

Hearn claimed he was contacted by one group to murder Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

"From a defense perspective, there's no doubt Hearn and Black met as a result of the ad," Thompson said. "But that is the only thin thread with regard to Soldier of Fortune. With that ad, there was no way for anyone to determine he was seeking criminal conduct."

"You bet we're going to win," publisher Robert Brown said. "I have no doubt about it."

Brown, wearing a pin-striped suit and cowboy boots, flipped through the pages of one his magazines while Hittner took about an hour to review motions filed by attorneys in the case.

"I've been before TV cameras so this is similar," said Brown, who is scheduled to testify. "It can't be any worse than being on Phil Donahue's show."

The suit, filed 13 months ago, originally sought some $100 million in damages. And Glenn Einmann, Mrs. Black's father, recently and without explanation removed himself as a plaintiff.

Franklin refused to discuss the case with reporters.

"You can ask the jury," he said. "I really don't want to talk about this until the case is over."

Franklin, in arguments over pretrial motions, said Brown has published and run ads in the magazine for books on learning how to be a commando.

"Robert K. Brown says that never in his wildest dreams would he think that the ad would result in criminal conduct," Franklin said. "Yet in the same issue of the magazine he has an ad for 'How To Be A Hitman.'"

Defense attorneys said it was inflammatory for Franklin to select only certain ads.

"Out of 18,000 ads, they selected the 35 they felt were the most graphic," said Robert M. Callagy, another magazine attorney.

Two suspects in gas station shooting in custody

EL PASO (AP) — Two men suspected of shooting at a gas station attendant after a robbery and then firing shots at pursuing authorities during a 90-mile chase, were being held in lieu of $800,000 bail each.

Eugene Genest, 59, is being held in El Paso County Jail.

Authorities say the incident began about 9 p.m. Sunday in Sierra Blanca, Texas, and ended about 10:20 p.m. in east El Paso County.

The chase ended when the pair's car crashed into an El Paso Sheriff's Department car blocking U.S. 80. Leonard Nance, 22, was critically injured in the crash, said a Thomason Hospital spokeswoman.

Both men are charged with aggravated robbery and attempted capital murder in connection with a gas station robbery in Sierra Blanca, Lt. Luis Aceves of the El Paso County Sheriff's Department said.

They also are charged with attempted capital murder and criminal mischief in connection with the gunshots and crash in El Paso County, Aceves said.

The men are suspected of stealing a van in Van Horn, then robbing a Texaco station in Sierra Blanca of about $150, said Hudspeth County Sheriff Dick Love. As they left, 17-year-old gas station attendant Roberto Morales ran after them, Love said.

"They shot at him," Love said. "It just missed his neck and went through his collar."

Love said he and a constable chased the van west on U.S. 80, and that one of the occupants fired a shot at them. They radioed El Paso County authorities to set up a roadblock.

'We're recycled star dust' says astronomer

BOSTON (AP) — One day last year, every person on Earth was bombarded with 10,000 billion ghostly particles called neutrinos hurled into space by the explosion of a star, an astronomer said Friday.

However, neutrinos are so incredibly small and elusive that they passed through buildings, people and the Earth itself with barely a trace. Besides, said Boston University astronomer Larry Sulak: "We are recycled star dust."

The neutrinos are the remnants of a supernova, an exploding star, that suddenly appeared almost a year ago in the skies of the Southern Hemisphere.

Such explosions happen regularly, but this one was in the Large Magellanic Cloud, a galaxy 1 million trillion miles away, which is close by heavenly standards. It is the brightest, from an earthly perspective, in 383 years.

Scientists who have spent the past year studying the supernova discussed their findings at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

John Bahcall of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J., said that last Feb. 23, every human on Earth was showered with about 10,000 billion neutrinos from the exploding star.

However, people are constantly bombarded with neutrinos from our own sun, as well, and the added dose did no harm.

"Only 1 in 10,000 had as much as a single hydrogen atom changed by the neutrinos," Bahcall said.

The subatomic particles have almost zero mass and no charge.

He said the supernova explosion was the equivalent of about one million billion billion billion atomic bombs of the kind that destroyed Hiroshima. That's more energy than a hundred stars shining like the Earth's sun would give off in light over the lifetime of the universe.

Scientists at the conference said they were surprised and delighted that the supernova acted almost exactly like their theories said it would.

"It was expected to make neutrinos, and it did, right on schedule," said J. Craig Wheeler of the University of Texas in Austin. "The basic predictions have come to pass with this supernova."

The researchers said that when the star blew up, 99 percent of its exploding energy was released in the form of neutrinos, while most of the rest was light. The neutrinos reached Earth three hours before the light. That light, spotted from a mountain top in Chile last Feb. 24, was the first sign for astronomers of the celestial catastrophe.

Later, though, scientists found traces of the sudden burst of neutrinos in two huge vats of water, one in the United States and one in Japan.

Sulak operates the U.S. experiment, a square tank of water five stories high that sits in a salt mine beneath Lake Erie. The tank was built for another purpose — witnessing the death of protons — but it also showed that eight neutrinos from the supernova had collided with water molecules. The Japanese tank recorded 11 such collisions.

The experts believe that nickel was formed during the initial explosion. This decayed in about five days to form radioactive cobalt, which in turn more slowly breaks down to make iron. The cobalt gives off both light and gamma rays.

Robert P. Kirshner of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics said the steady dimming of the supernova has recently begun to accelerate. This is because it is spewing out more of its energy as gamma rays and less as light. However, the destroyed star is still visible with binoculars.

Supernovas are important to people, because they are the source of many elements that are essential to life.

"This is the death of a star," said Kirshner. "This is the place where the elements are made. The calcium in your bones was made in a supernova explosion."

Nothing gets in way of golfer's hole-in-one

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Golfer Steve Wells will take a hole-in-one any way he can get it — even if it means sharing the golf course with a private plane forced to make an emergency landing.

Wells approached the eighth hole of the Mohawk Golf Course late last week, shortly after the two-seater plane landed. The pilot and his passenger walked away uninjured.

Wells and his partner, Doug Smith, were determined to finish their game, despite the winged obstacle that remained on the 382-yard, par-4 hole. But police cordoned off the area around the damaged plane, which put the tee box out of reach.

Wells and Smith improvised, making their own tee box on the other side of the plane. The next thing you know, Wells got his second-ever hole-in-one.

"I hit it about as good as I could," Wells said.

Emergency personnel attending to the plane witnessed the feat.

"Bruce Gardner, the chopper pilot for the police, is the one who told me it went in," Wells said.

Rosalynn Carter stresses importance of volunteering

AUSTIN (AP) — Former first lady Rosalynn Carter says people should "make the most" of life through volunteer work and helping others.

"The best way to invigorate a life is through volunteer work," Mrs. Carter told an audience at the University of Texas Tuesday night.

Lee, Tascosa girls play Thursday

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Lady Rebels are headed for the state playoffs for the seventh time since 1977 when the school was first allowed to compete for such honors.

No team in District 4-5A can match that record, but the playoffs have not been overly kind to Lee and Thursday's 7:30 p.m. bi-district matchup with District 3-5A champion Amarillo Tascosa at Lubbock's Coronado High School gym again has the Rebels as a big underdog.

Lee owns a 2-6 playoff record and has never met Tascosa under playoff conditions. Still, Tascosa has lost only four games and probably possess the tallest 5A team in the northwest part of the state with three starters towering over six-feet.

But the Lee girls appear to be undaunted by it all.

"We're just glad to be in the playoffs," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "We're as ready as we can be. We'll just give it our best shot."

But Stephenson knows that the task ahead presents a major hurdle. But then again, Lee has hurdled some big hurdles the past few weeks.

"Tascosa is very tall, very talented and have a great record," said Stephenson, "but I'm proud of the way our girls have responded to a difficult stretch run in our district. We feel we can see some improvement. I'll say that and the wheels will fall off, but we hope we are ready."

Lee defeated Abilene Cooper, 54-47, Monday night in Colorado City in a second place District 4-5A playoff game to earn the right to the state playoffs. Lee had to win six games in a row to be where they are now and had to beat Cooper twice in six days.

"I don't think the girls have even realized yet that they are in the playoffs," said Stephenson. "It's been such an uphill climb to just get where we are that we haven't stopped to realize what it all means."

U.S. settles for bronze pairs medal

By STEVE WILSTEIN

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — A perky, flawless ballet on ice by a pony-tailed Soviet sprite brightened a night of stumbling performances as a U.S. duo blew a chance at silver and settled for bronze, the first American medal of the Winter Games.

Ekaterina Gordeeva, a lithe little 16-year-old, joined with powerful, towering Sergei Grinkov in a perfet union of grace and acrobatics that captured the pairs figure skating gold in Tuesday's only medal event.

Five golds are up for grabs today, when "Flying Finn" Matti Nykanen pursues a spot in Olympic history in the 90-meter team ski jump. Swiss skier Pirmin Zurbriggen goes for his second victory and medals are awarded in three other sports.

Nykanen, who won the 70-meter jump on Sunday, is bidding to become the first ever to garner two golds in jumping events, and he has the chance to make it three in the 90-meter individual jump Saturday.

ZURBRIGGEN, who won the classic downhill race Monday, carries the lead halfway through the combined Alpine event after posting the fastest time in Tuesday's downhill portion. He skis the slalom portion today.

It took until the end of the fourth day of these Games for the United States to crack the medal list, and it came with a disappointing pairs program by Jill Watson of Bloomington, Ind., and Peter Oppegard of Knoxville, Tenn., that earned a bronze.

They had an opportunity to catch

ICE DANCING

Soviets Elena Valova and Oleg Vasiliev for a silver, but Watson was less than sterling, crashing badly on one of the pair's best moves, side-by-side double axel jumps.

"I felt I landed it and then, all of a sudden, boom, I'm down," Watson said. "With that little flaw and so close to being medalists, we didn't want to blow it or hold back. We had to dig down deep.

"I said, 'You know you want this medal and you have to do these things.' I let my body take over and I did them."

She and Oppegard finished nicely, scored well for artistic interpretation but got low marks for technical merit.

Valova and Vasiliev followed with a soulful routine and no serious mistakes to finish second and boost the Soviets' medal-leading total to seven, five more than anyone else.

AHS clinches other 4-5A playoff berth

From Staff Reports

SAN ANGLEO — The San Angelo Bobcats did what they had to do here Friday night to stay in the District 4-5A basketball race with an 83-71 victory over the Midland Lee Rebels, but the rest of the league didn't cooperate.

Abilene High, 9-2, defeated Abilene Cooper 80-51 to earn a playoff berth and move to within one victory of claiming the district title. On the other end, 9-3 Odessa High eliminated 7-4 San Angelo with a hard fought 71-64 win over Midland High.

There is no district race left.

San Angelo led by as many as 22 points in the third period against Lee. The Rebels cut the margin to 10 points a couple of times, but could never turn the whole tide.

Lee trailed by a 40-26 margin at the half in a slow start, but outscored the Bobcats by a 44-42 margin in the second half. The start was just too late.

The Bobcats got 22 points from Scott Marschall, 19 from Bill Hollis and 10 each from Collin Burdine and Keith Kinmon.

Lee was paced by the 22 points from junior Darren Dortch, who has been red hot down the district stretch run. Calvin Gary and Jared Edwards each scored 10 points for the Rebels.

In Abilene, the Eagles got 13 points each from Cory Lockridge and Doug Brown in a balanced attack against Cooper, who could manage only 10 points each from Tom Toney and Mitch Royals.

Lee, now 4-7 in the district race, will host Abilene 8 p.m. Friday at Chaparral Center.

Odessa claims playoff berth

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

There is still a night left on the District 4-5A basketball schedule, but there is no longer a race as Odessa High withstood a late charge by Midland High at Chaparral Center Tuesday to vault into the 5A state playoffs with a 71-64 victory.

Since OHS draws the league's last open date, the Bronchos finished 4-5A play Tuesday with a 9-3 loop mark. Abilene High, 9-2, also defeated Abilene Cooper Tuesday, giving the other district playoff berth to the Eagles. Abilene High still has a game left with Midland Lee at Chaparral Center Friday night and the Bronchos can still hope for a championship district playoff with AHS.

A loss by OHS to the Bulldogs could have possibly meant no playoffs at all for the Red Hosses. San Angelo would have moved to within ½-game of OHS after defeating Lee in San Angelo Tuesday. Instead, San Angelo was the last team eliminated from the loop chase.

For Odessa High coach Keith Thompson, the agony was finally over. His team gave him the victory he needed.

"I'm glad it's over," said Thompson. "I knew we would have a hard game here. It's been that kind of district. Lee beats us, Cooper beats Lee — you just never knew what to expect.

"We shot good at the free throw line and that saved us and we had some key help from the kids off the bench. It feels good to be going to the playoffs. All we need to do now is put it together just a little bit better and we'll be OK."

AND IT was at the free throw line where the Bronchos sunk the Bulldogs' ship. OHS hit on 30 of 39 shots from the charity stripe, outscoring MHS by a 30-19 margin in freebies.

Stanton clinches share of 6-2A title

From Staff Reports

STANTON— Stanton's Buffaloes nailed down the second half District 6-2A title with a thundering 91-57 win over Reagan County Tuesday night to share the title with first half winner, Ozona.

The two teams will now play a one game playoff to determine the playoff pecking order for the 6-2A representatives.

Coach Eric Looney said the playoff game with Ozona was tentatively ticketed for next Tuesday at Big Lake. "The Stanton girls team is in bi-district this week and, if they win, they would probably play their area game in Big Lake next Tuesday, so we'd like to make it a doubleheader and give our fans a chance see both teams in action."

Gregg Avery scored 32 points to lead the Buffs, who took charge quickly, racing to a 20-9 first period lead and making it 64-42 after three periods.

Reggie Franklin scored 18 points and Brad Holland chipped in with another 14 to pace the Bisons.

The win gave Stanton a 7-0 second half record and a 23-6 mark for the season.

For the Buffs, it's a case of deja vue. Last year Stanton was 27-7 with a 12-3 district record to share the district title. Stanton went on to win the bi-district title.

In the JV game, Stanton posted a 47-40 win over Reagan County.

Downhill...cowards need not apply

By Art Spander
Hearst News Service

CALGARY, Alberta — It may be the single most compelling event in competitive sport, a union of speed and danger that matches humans against nature, men to match a mountain.

In a downhill ski race, your head goes into a crash helmet and your ears go out the window. Cowards need not apply.

You reach speeds approaching 80 miles an hour on a couple of metal slats while your knees compress over dozens of unseen bumps, the slightest of which can send you to disaster and to a hospital.

It's over so quickly, maybe two minutes, but the tales last a lifetime. And now they'll be writing a new story, about the fair-skinned young man from the Alps, Pirmin Zurbriggen.

SOME SAY he's the greatest skier ever. We will learn in time. What we know now is that Zurbriggen is the downhill champion of the 1988 Winter Olympics, on Monday conquering the nastiest of runs and the toughest of rivals.

Pirmin Zurbriggen (PEER-min TSOOR-briggen) is Swiss, of course, as is silver-medal winner Peter Mueller. Franck Piccard, from across the border in France, was third for the bronze. And who can say everything is not right with the world?

It was an aberration four years ago in the chill at Sarajevo when brash Billy Johnson of the U.S. won the men's downhill, in which Mueller also finished second.

Skiing is supposed to be the province of the Swiss or the Austrians or the French. Now once more it is.

WHILE OUR kids are throwing baseballs or shooting basketballs, farmers' and laborers' sons from vertical alpine locales are hiking up mountains in the summer and zooming down them in the winter, gaining strength and gaining confidence so that every four years they may gain the gold medal.

At the finish line on this mild late morning at the base of Mt. Allan, some 50 miles west of downtown Calgary's shining highrises, Pirmin's countrymen saluted his triumph. There were bongs of large Swiss cowbells and ripples of waving red-and-white Swiss flags.

For the U.S., there were only questions.

Why can't the home of the brave and the land of the free produce anyone who can place better than 26th, a 19-year-old named A.J. Kitt?

Why can Great Britain, without a mountain taller than Margaret Thatcher's hairdo, contribute someone who can finish as high as eighth, Martin Bell?

THERE WERE no questions about Zurbriggen, who will turn 25 in three weeks and the last couple of years has turned the ski racing establishment on its ear.

Three times in practice runs on a brutal course that begins with a 78-percent vertical angle that twists the thighs and tortures the mind, he had broken two minutes.

And then, in the race that had been postponed from Sunday because of high winds, Zurbriggen did it again. He had to, because no one else did.

Mueller, 30, a big-city guy from Zurich as gregarious as Zurbriggen is reclusive, had been given No.1, the first run, in the draw for positions after the postponement. It's a lousy spot, a chancy journey on unpacked snow even though forerunners are sent down before the main body of entrants.

Mueller nearly lost his balance in the opening section, but then he lost no time, burning down the course of 3,147 meters, nearly two miles, in 2 minutes, 14 hundredths of a second.

He waited anxiously at the bottom of the mountain watching an 18-by-23-foot outdoor TV screen as the next 13 skiers failed to approach his time. And then, in an orange-and-yellow Lycra Spandex suit, here came Zurbriggen, a rocket on the snow.

Once big Celtic-Laker match now mismatch

Murray

It happened to Dempsey in the rain at Philadelphia. It happened to the old Yankees when Ruth, Gehrig and DiMaggio all went. It happened to Joe Louis, Ali, the Green Bay Packers. It happened to empires, corporations, even civilizations, if it comes to that.

It happens to any elite force if it waits long enough.

It may have finally happened to the Boston Celtics.

The Celtics, like the New York Yankees, Notre Dame, Lombardi's Packers or Custer's cavalry, seemed as indestructible a force as the land provided. It was not a team, it was dynasty. It seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of gifted players who came out of a clogged pipeline. Cousy and Russell went — and Havlicek and Cowens came. Havlicek and Cowens went — and Larry Bird and Dennis Johnson came.

RED AUERBACH, the general manager, it seemed, just had to rub the lamp and another genie popped out — and another banner went up in the rafters of Boston Garden. There are already so many there — 16 — you can't see the ceiling.

But, is the dance over for the Celtics? Has the music stopped, the balloons come down? Are they yesterday's champions? Are faded banners all they have left?

They can't beat the Lakers any more. It's become a mismatch. Dempsey fighting his chauffeur, Louis against a bum-of-the-month.

THE QUESTION has been asked and answered, who's best? And the answer is, the Lakers.

Consider Sunday's match between the once-torrid rivals. The Lakers, almost contemptuously, opened a 20-point lead at the half. Then, the Celtics, calling on Lord knows what reserves of remembered pride and effort, turned the third quarter into an old-time Celtic rout and outscored the Lakers, 38-12, to retake the lead.

But, we're not talking about 12-minute basketball, or half-court basketball or slow-break basketball. We're talking the full-time, full-blown, full-court game. If the game goes 48 minutes, the Lakers win. They had a fourth quarter in which they outscored Celts 31-11 at one time before the coach called off the first team.

The Celtics, in the locker room later, were a pretty chastened bunch. They seemed to have accepted the inevitable. "They're better," conceded Larry Bird. "They're better," admitted the coach, K.C. Jones. "They're better," echoed the point guard, Danny Ainge, who had broken the single-season three-point record in the game but finished 22 points behind the man he was guarding, Byron Scott.

IT'S no longer one of the great matchups of sport. It's a rerun. It's a movie you've seen before. The guys in yellow-and-purple win.

What has happened? It wasn't always this way. It was not so many years ago the ball was in the other court. The Lakers had some pretty good players. But the Celtics had the pivotal ones. The Lakers never had the big-man-in-the- pivot. All the Elgin Baylors, Jerry Wests and Gail Goodriches in the world couldn't save them. Bill Russell managed to stuff the ball back in their faces.

You need two things to win consistently in this league: the big man in the pivot and you need a guy whose nickname is "Magic" (or Mr. Clutch, or Big O) to bring the ball up court for him.

You have to think Sunday's game was a watershed game for Boston. They were like a retreating army which marshals itself for one last, all-out, magnificent charge to change the conduct of the war.

Steers alive, well

BIG SPRING— Big Spring stayed alive and well in the District 2-4A battle for a post-season playoff berth by roughing up Sweetwater's Mustangs, 72-55, here Tuesday night.

N. Walker scored 20 points to lead the Steers, who improved their record to 22-9 for the season. Lending support were Bruce Jones with 16 and Abner Shellman with 15 points.

T. Taylor led Sweetwater with 13 points.

The Mustangs are 2-13 for the season and 5-20 for the season and out of the race.

However, Big Spring faces a big game Friday night when the Steers, 12-3 in district, host Andrews in a heated race that finds Andrews, Big Spring and Snyder in the battle for second place.

Lamesa still not home free with 13-2 mark

From Staff Reports

LAMESA— Lamesa's Golden Tornadoes defeated Andrews, 88-66, Tuesday night to remain in first place in the District 4-5A basketball chase, but Coach Wayne Roberts and his team aren't doing any cartwheels yet.

Should the Tornados lose at Fort Stockton Friday and should Snyder and Big Spring win Friday, Lamesa could still wind up in a three-way tie for first.

But as it is, Lamesa upped its district record to 13-2, a game in front of its two closest pursuers, and pushed its season's mark to a gaudy 24-7.

The Mason boys were scoring twins Tuesday with Cedric and Dee each sinking 24 points in the win to set the pace for Lamesa. Lavert Hawkins contributed another 16 to the Lamesa attack.

Andrews, now 11-4, in district, was led by Gym Bice, who scored 26.

The Mustangs' only hope of a shot at a playoff berth would be to beat Big Spring Friday and have Snyder lose Friday also.

Hey, anybody missing brawls?

By Melvin Durslag
Hearst News Service

LOS ANGELES — You are watching the hockey in the Winter Olympics and you see some pretty lively competition, especially when the U.S. plays the Czechs and the game is close and the action moves.

You ask yourself, "What is missing?"

And you answer yourself, "What is missing is a lot of brawling. And I don't miss it a bit."

You are exposed to young athletes playing hockey, not attacking each other like animals. And you conclude that what has happened in the pros is an embarrassment, one in which the owners, appealing to a depraved segment that likes to watch fights, permits players to lower themeselves to that kind of entertainment.

Make no mistake about it. Owners allow players to trash each other for box office. It has been that way. It remains that way. And watching guys simply play, as they do in the Olympics, you find the game wholly enjoyable without the ugliness of fighting.

WHEN THE U.S. WINS THE hockey in 1980, it is labeled a Miracle. Those are the depths to which the U.S. has plunged, generally, in the Winter Games.

It's a miracle when we win something.

Our courage is dramatized. We wave the flag. Hey, what's happening? This is a massive sports country. We're supposed to win our share. And when we do, it should be no miracle.

But right now, the greatest suspense seizing Calgary is whether the U.S. is going to win anything in gold. Our people there work up excitement over the possibility of snatching a bronze.

We are expecting the USOC to exhort its forces, "Just win third, baby."

THE DASHING YOUNG SWISS, Pirmin Zurbriggen, wins the glamour event of the Winter Games, the downhill. He does this on the 20th anniversary of Jean-Claude Killy's big show at Grenoble, and, instantly, folks at Calgary draw parallels between Pirmin and Jean-Claude.

Zurbriggen is a marvelous performer, but, in order to match Killy, he would have been asked to enter the Games with a paternity suit on his hands, as Jean-Claude did.

In the snows of France, Switzerland, Austria, Italy and Germany, he also would have been obliged to leave a trail of broken hearts.

Killy was the damndest lady-killer in the history of sports. An innkeeper's son, like Zurbriggen, Jean-Claude and the other French skiers were subsidized by the government, working as customs inspectors. Their job was to inspect each other's luggage to look for telephone numbers.

We recently see Killy at Lausanne, where he makes the winning pitch before the IOC for the '92 Winter Games at Albertville. He is now a businessman, rich, dignified. He has a wife and children.

If Zurbriggen follows his path, he will have skied a fast and lively course.

AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE '92 show at Albertville, another Winter Olympics will follow in 1994, at a location to be selected by the IOC in September.

Wilkins scores 51 for Hawks

Associated Press

Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins scored 51 points, one short of the NBA high this season, but Reggie Theus made a 3-pointer at the buzzer and the Sacramento Kings beat the Hawks 118-115.

The loss Tuesday night, only Atlanta's third in 22 home games, dropped the Hawks out of first place in the NBA Central Division.

Wilkins made 20 of 31 shots and 9 of 11 free throws. He scored 28 points in the third quarter, breaking the Hawks' record for points in a period set by Cliff Hagan in 1958.

Rockets 121, Warriors 116

Sleepy Floyd scored 20 of his 25 points in the second half and Akeem Olajuwon added 25 points and 10 rebounds.

Ralph Sampson returned to Houston for the first time since he was traded to Golden State and was scoreless in the first half. He scored eight points in the game, had eight rebounds, six turnovers and fouled out with 1:38 left.

Pacers 117, Knicks 104

Chuck Person scored 23 points and Vern Fleming's six points in the third quarter helped Indiana take the lead for good as the Pacers won their fifth straight.

Lakers 119, Clippers 100

Byron Scott scored 16 of 30 points in the third quarter and Michael Cooper added seven points during a fourth-quarter run as the Lakers rallied from a 12-point first-half deficit.

James Worthy scored 24 points for the Lakers, who improved the NBA's best record to 39-9 with their fourth consecutive victory

Chaps must beat Clarendon, again

From Staff Reports

The on-again, off-again Clarendon-Midland College game is on-again.

Make-up II is set for 5:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center as part of a college-high school doubleheader. Midland Lee will play Abilene High in a regularly scheduled District 4-5A contest at 8 p.m.

Clarendon showed up in Midland Saturday for a 7:30 p.m. game and no one was around. Midland College had announced a Clarendon forfeit at 2 p.m. Saturday when their opponent didn't show up at Chaparral Center.

Apparently, a misunderstanding between MC and Clarendon on the time of the Saturday make-up game in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference developed. No one really knows the reason how that could have happened, but it happened.

At any rate, Clarendon was not ready to accept a forfeit and appealed to the conference.

"Since there was never anything in writing, it will not be a forfeit," said H.A. Tuck, information director at Midland College. "We'll just drop a victory for Midland College and a loss for Clarendon and start all over."

Clarendon is scheduled to play Odessa College Thursday night in Odessa and will spend the night in Midland before meeting MC in the early Friday date.

The first make-up game was required because Clarendon coach Joe Mondragon's son came down with pneumonia, forcing him to ask for another playing date other than the scheduled Jan. 28 contest.

Make-up II is the third time these two clubs have tried to get this game in and it forces both teams to play three games this week.

BIG 10 WANTS MORE— Big Ten basketball coaches think five and probably six conference teams should be picked for the NCAA Tournament, and two others have a shot at the NIT. "It depends on Ohio State, I believe. Five should go for sure and we can make a case for six because Ohio State belongs in the NCAA Tournament," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder.

Last year, six, including Ohio State, got NCAA berths. The Buckeyes beat Kentucky and lost to Georgetown by three, while Indiana, co-champ with with Purdue, won the title.

This season, Ohio State, 13-8 overall, is tied at 6-5 in the conference with 16-8 Illinois and 14-7 Indiana. The Big Ten's top three teams — Purdue, Michigan and Iowa — appear shoo-ins for the NCAA Tournament.

SWC PICKS TCU's JACQUES— TCU's Rod Jacques was named men's basketball SWC player of the week after scoring 41 points, grabbing 14 rebounds, handing out 15 assists and had five steals in helping TCU to a 1-1 record last week.

EX—SEMINOLE ARRESTED— Former Florida State baseballerr Richie Lewis, the NCAA's second-leading career strikeout pitcher, was arrested after allegedly firing a pistol at a street light and threatening Tallahassee, Fla., police officers.

Islanders triumph

From Wire Reports

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Some wondered if the New York Islanders could hang on for a playoff spot as they struggled near the .500 mark earlier this month.

But a 9-3 victory over the Calgary Flames on Tuesday night, the Islanders' best offensive showing of the NHL season, has them looking toward the top of the Patrick Division.

"Our goal is to catch Philly," Greg Gilbert said after scoring three straight goals in the final period to lead the rout.

Elsewhere, the Winnipeg Jets defeated the Nordiques 7-3 in Quebec and the Buffalo Sabres beat the Blues 3-0 in St. Louis.

Pat LaFontaine added two goals for the Islanders during a run of five straight that broke the game open.

Jets 7, Nordiques 3

The Jets converted three turnovers into goals, including the second of Laurie Boschman's two scores in the final period, as they extended their unbeaten streak to seven games.

Sabres 3, Blues 0

Rookies Ray Sheppard and Pierre Turgeon combined on the Sabres' first goal, with Sheppard scoring his 22nd of the season on a wristshot from the left of the faceoff circle.

OHS

"They just didn't miss any free throws. We're right there in it if they shoot a normal percentage," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson.

The Bulldogs did what they had to do to stay on the floor with the Bronchos and that is keep 6-6 Lester White from going wild in the middle. White was held to only three field goals, all in the second half on a three-of-10 shooting night, but he did hit seven-of-nine charity tosses.

"We put Clyde Govan on Lester and he did a great job, but he got in foul trouble. When Clyde fouled out in the fourth quarter, that could have been a big difference in the game," noted Stephenson.

The Bulldogs trailed by as many as 15 points in the third quarter, but had cut the Broncho margin to a mere two points with 2:08 left in the game as Aundria Shaw came off the bench to score six points in the fourth quarter.

"Shaw may the best shooter in the district from 10 to 15 feet and we don't mind going to him if that shot is open," said Stephenson.

BUT IT was junior post Greg Lewis and Varrick McDonald who ignited the MHS rally. Lewis scored 10 of his 17 points in the third period and McDonald had eight of his 16 points in the second half.

The Bulldogs trailed only 66-64 with 1:17 left in the game on another Shaw bucket, but OHS got free throw hot again with Victor Dancer and Ed Rheams down the stretch while the Bulldogs missed good chances at scoring between the 1:17 mark and 36 seconds left in the game.

If the Bulldogs ever get this rally business down pat, they are going to be big trouble. MHS wiped out a 22 point margin against San Angelo before narrowly losing.

In the first half OHS' Derrick Ellis scored 18 of his game high 19 points, but he got in foul trouble. Dancer had 12 points, White 13 and Rheams 10. Patrick Brown came off the bench for five of his seven points in the fourth period.

Lewis led MHS with 17 points while McDonald had 16 and Govan 12.

"I'm extremely proud of our kids. Odessa High is a very good team, but I think we proved we can play with the best. We expect our kids at MHS to get up off the floor and come back. You just have the feeling that fate should have been more in our favor this year," said Stephenson.

MHS will end its season Friday on the road at Abilene Cooper. No matter the outcome, the Bulldogs will own a losing record this year, carrying a 14-16 record into that game. The victory was Odessa High's 20th of the season in 29 games.

They were a light brigade, all right. For 12 brilliant minutes, the Celtic flame flared. Then, the Lakers methodically doused it with cold water. Their message was clear: this game is ours. We own it.

THE CELTICS can probably beat the Houston Rockets, if it comes to that. They can handle Detroit, Chicago. But they don't beat the Lakers.

The Celtics had come to the Forum Sunday on a roll. They had just marched through Texas like men on horseback. Larry Bird was playing the best basketball of his career, flipping in 122 points in 125 minutes, averaging 40.7 points a game, burying 56 straight free throws. He was in the best shape of his life. He even had a hair cut and the word out of Boston was, the Bird was sick and tired of losing to Los Angeles.

The Celtics gave it their best shots. (cq) They got off the floor to carry the fight to their opponents which is the mark of a great fighter.

It wasn't enough. They even caught the Lakers in the bemused, self-congratulatory mood of a guy who thinks this is going to be easier than he thought. They even managed to get in a few sucker punches until the Lakers seemed to wake up and say "Oh? You want to fight, do you? Try this!"

SO, A GREAT rivalry has been turned into a Punch-and-Judy show. A melodrama turns into a sitcom. The Celtics are the straight men. Their role, in effect, is to say "No, how hot was it?" Five Ed McMahons.

The bench is the difference, the coaches agree. The Celtics have five good men, the Lakers have eight. Laker Coach Pat Riley says he has more than that: "I can use (Michael) Cooper to play three positions — point guard, off guard, small forward. I can use Mychal Thompson to play two—center and power forward. So, I have five options with two players." O.K ... so, it's 12-5.

Celtic Coach K. C. Jones dances with the guys what brung him. His options stop when any one of his front five has to leave the floor. For Boston, the bench doesn't work.

The differences may be subtler.

Does Magic Johnson's legerdemain prop up Kareem Abdul-Jabbar so he can play effectively long after his allotted time? Or does Kareem's dominating presence free up Magic to do all the other-wordly things he manages to do on a basketball court?

Would Bird, on a court with Kareem, be all-world and NBA champion again? Would Magic on the Celtics prove that five men were enough provided he was one of the five?

Since we'll never find out, we're stuck with the present reality that the Celtics are yesterday's roses and the one-time battle of the century is becoming just an exhibition as foregone as a Hulk Hogan wrestling match or a crap game in a hat.

His intermediate time was 1:46.04, compared to Mueller's 1:46.50. "I knew unless he made a mistake," sighed Mueller, a charmer, "Pirmin would beat me."

And so Pirmin did, finishing in 1:59.63, winning by a half-second in an event in which differences are usually in hundredths of a second.

Pirmin spun around so rapidly in a hockey stop to glance at the scoreboard, he nearly fell. The result was gratifying.

Zurbriggen raised his arms above his head, then took off one of his Kastle skis and threw it straight up. Moments later he clasped his hands together in silent prayer. A deeply religious Catholic, Pirmin says the man he most admires is Pope John Paul II, who was a skier in his youth.

"I was so happy," said Zurbriggen in halting but understandable English. "It is unbelievable."

Not to the rest of the people who know skiing. Pirmin is the Doppleweltmeister (double world champ), as it says on a postcard that features his visage. The thinking is he'll outdo the great Jean-Claude Killy, a triple gold-medal winner in the 1968 Olympics.

"I know I can ski all events very well," said Zurbriggen, his cheeks still flushed from the run, even though 2½ hours had passed.

THE MAN who went two miles in under two minutes took 50 times as long to produce a specimen for the drug test.

"Every ski racer dreams of making a gold medal in the Olympic Games. It was also my dream," he said.

Zurbriggen, who finished fourth in the Sarajevo downhill, is from one of those Heidi villages of 360 people in the canton of Valais, Saas-Almagell, about 13 miles by cog train from the Matterhorn and 140 miles east of Geneva.

Saas-Almagell didn't have a road until 1948 or a school until 1958.

But it had mountains. Pirmin's dad, Alois, was a ski racer until Alois' brother was killed in a racing accident. Alois then settled down, first to become a carpenter, later to run the Larchenhof, a hotel.

Pirmin owns the hotel. "It was the wish of my parents," said Zurbriggen. "They work for me."

Not that they need to work. Pirmin, who quit school after the ninth grade to concentrate on skiing, probably pulls in some $2 million a year. His name is even on a brand of Fendent wine, a white produced in the Valais.

The knock against Pirmin is that he's quiet and family oriented. "I go out," he insists. "One or two times a year."

Mueller is the playboy. And the critic. And the comic. He complained about the No.1 starting position — he was No.11 on Sunday — but also contended he skied as well as possible.

First he spoke in English, then French, then Schweizer-Deutsch, the Swiss dialect of German.

Later, when Mueller answered only in English, someone yelled: "What about the language?"

"You want Spain now?" laughed Mueller.

What America wants is a few guys who don't have to be timed with a calendar.

Kitt was 26th in 2:04.94, teammate Jeff Olson 28th in 2:05.9 and the third U.S. entrant, Doug Lewis, 32nd in 2:06.25.

"I'm disappointed," said Olson, "but it's just another ski race, except with a lot of hype. People in the U.S. don't pay attention to skiing except every four years."

In Switzerland they pay attention night and day.

"I skied fantastic," said Mueller. "Pirmin beat me. I congratulated him."

Kick Off "Year Of The Dragon" With East/West Brunch

Celebrate Chinese New Year on February 17 with a festive brunch. The menu created by home economists, features Good Morning Stir-Fry accompanied by Mandarin Orange Muffins.

Of all the festivals celebrated by the Chinese, none is more significant than Chinese New Year.

Festivities generally start on New Year's Eve, when the family gathers for a multi-course banquet. This is followed by gift-giving, story-telling and setting off fire-crackers at midnight.

No one sleeps much, and at dawn, the front door is opened and the master of the house gives a blessing of prosperity on the dwelling for the coming year. New Year's Day is spent with relatives and close friends. Food plays an important part in the day's events.

Following the ancient lunar calendar, Chinese New Year arrives with the second new moon after the winter solstice. This year, February 17 marks the beginning of the Oriental Lunar Year 4686, and what better way to honor the start of the "Year of the Dragon" than with a brunch for good friends and family.

With these delicious, convenient "East Meets West" recipes from home economists, the host can prepare most of the flavorful components for this bright, engaging spread before guests arrive. The Mandarin Orange Muffins, for example, with their delicate citrus flavor, can be baked the night before.

Early in the day of the brunch, collect the ingredients for China Cups, delicious individual quiches with sweet sausage, Chinese mixed vegetables and Oriental seasonings. Then, just before guests are scheduled to arrive, assemble and pop them in the oven.

Good Morning Stir-Fry is the centerpiece of this creative menu. The ham, red and green peppers and other savory ingredients for this delicious breakfast stir-fry can be cut up in advance, then stir-fried at the last minute. The quality convenience products help to create a spectacular dish boasting with authentic flavors and ingredients.

The Year Of The Dragon

February 17, the start of the year 4686, marks the beginning of the "Year of the Dragon."

Dragon years, say Chinese lore experts, tend to have more celebrations or festivals. These years are particularly good for those who dream of success and victory over adversity. A child born in the Dragon year will meet with good fortune throughout his or her life.

Those born in the Year of the Dragon (1904, 1916, 1928, 1940, 1952, 1964, 1976 and 1988) are also said to be generous, conscientious, sentimental, enthusiastic, intuitive, spirited, captivating, artistic, admirable, lucky and successful. It is said that the Dragon brings four blessings with him when he steps into this life: wealth, virtue, harmony and longevity.

Some famous Dragon personalities include James Cagney, James Coburn, Jimmy Connors, Salvador Dali, Ringo Starr and Al Pacino.

History of Hmong people woven into tapestries

By R.H. GROWALD
Copley News Service

They use no pencil, no pen, no typewriter, no computer to write their stories.

"The Hmong sew their literature," says Terry Clark.

She manages a Roman Catholic-supported shop in San Diego that markets these stitched tales of tragedy and triumph.

On wall-hangings, tablecloths and other lengths of Thai silk are the hand-stitched — they would no more use a sewing machine than a cowboy would ride a motorcycle — tales of the Hmong people.

It is spelled Hmong. It is pronounced Mong. It is a story of our times, struggling for a happy ending.

A common tale embroidered by Hmong refugees from Laos is the story of the Bad Tiger.

Told in dozens of 2-inch-high stitched figures, it shows a hunter in the hills of Southeast Asia. He is looking for a monkey. But a tiger sees him.

After eating the hunter, the tiger puts on the hunter's clothes, goes to the hunter's village, pretends to be the hunter and asks the hunter's wife, "What's for dinner?"

The Bad Tiger wants the widow and her children for fast food. But here comes the widow's sister-in-law. She sees the "hunter" is really the Bad Tiger in hunter's clothing.

The sister-in-law throws pepper in the Bad Tiger's eyes. The Bad Tiger roars. Stumbling from the house in pain, bumbling down to the Mekong River to wash the pepper from his eyes, the Bad Tiger tumbles into a tiger trap.

Such is a bit of Hmong lore. A fairy tale from the hills of northern Laos. But a generation ago a new type of tale emerged.

The Hmongs had come from China 150 years ago. They had been a minority tribe in China, second-class citizens, made to wear a tribal color in some degree as the Jews of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich had to bear a yellow star.

For a century the Hmong lived under the three-story-high trees of northern Laos. Some lived in Vietnam's upper reaches. They lived shy lives. They were called the hillbillies of Southeast Asia.

Then came the war in Vietnam.

As it spread, it reached the 350,000 Hmongs. They sided with the United States. Some 10,000 Hmongs, they say, died fighting for the CIA and other U.S. sponsors.

In 1975, the Communists won. May Xiong Yang, one of the needlework artists, remembers.

She had been trained as a nurse. She took her children and some of her patients and raced for escape.

"Some of the hospital patients we had to leave behind, they groped out of bed and followed," May Yang says. May Yang could bring nothing from home. Only the clothes she wore.

Chia Yang Moua tried to stay behind. She ran a village shop, "a sort of 7-Eleven but not open 24 hours," her daughter, Maria Xiong, says.

But her husband, who was hiding, and her older sons had fought the Communists. And she saw Communists, professing friendship, come to the neighbors, ask them for a chat.

"And the neighbors were never seen again," Moua says.

It's all there. Told in the embroidered language she sews so well. It speaks in the singing sentences of literature.

See the Hmong people in black and red. See them smile.

See the Communist Vietnamese troops come in green jackets. See them shoot Czechoslovakian-made AK-47 rifles.

See the village houses on fire.
See the Hmong flee.
See them swim the Mekong.
See the Communists shoot.
See the refugee camps in Thailand.

In this strange land of America, with a language to be learned and a life to be rebuilt, she says it's a struggle.

"And maybe a new book to be embroidered."

Ginseng popular to harvest, eat

Associated Press

Ginseng is hard to find, but with prices at more than $100 per pound there is no shortage of people looking.

"In many areas of the forest the plant has been dug so long that it's almost impossible to find," said Teena Sechler, a public information officer for the 188,000-acre Hoosier National Forest in southern Indiana. The same is true in the Wayne National Forest in southern Ohio, Ms. Sechler said from her office in Bedford, Ind.

The Forest Service allows harvesting of the plant, regarded in parts of Asia as an aphrodisiac and cure-all, in all its forests, but harvest times differ from state to state. In Indiana, it may be harvested from Aug. 15 through Dec. 31.

Ginseng grows wild in the eastern United States and is cultivated primarily in Wisconsin. Hunters can get $130 per pound for the dried root of wild plants. When grown in plots it brings only $30 to $50 because of the belief that the wild root is more potent.

In China, ginseng is used in such herbal remedies as "Recovery of Youth Pills" and "Blood Nourishment and Nerve Stability Medicine" made at the Hangzhou No. 2 medicine factory in Hangzhou. One product, ginseng-royal jelly tonic, is said to be therapeutic for heart disease, arthritis, anemia, gastric ulcers, hepatitis and early senility. Then there is Ginseng Cola, produced in the region of northern China formerly known as Manchuria.

A woman from the Detroit suburb of Warren even came up with a ginseng-based cocktail in a non-alcoholic drink contest sponsored by the Auto Club of Michigan last December. Isabel Noble made her drink, the Isabella, by adding Vernor's ginger ale to ginseng tea.

"I'm an agnostic when it comes to ginseng," said James A. Duke, an economic botanist for the federal Agriculture Department's Agricultural Research Service in the Washington suburb of Beltsville, Md. "I'm not convinced that it actually does any good, but I'm growing a little (of the plant) just in case."

One theory is that ginseng may be an adaptogen, a substance that increases the body's ability to deal with disease and other external threats.

Unusual vegetables grown in Northeast

Copley News Service

Mizuna, fuzzy squash, bitter melon, lettuce, edible chrysanthemum, gobo, luffa — these are only a few of the more than 100 unusual vegetables that could be profitably grown by Northeast farmers, according to Cornell University crop specialist Roger Kline, who conducted two years of field trials.

Consumer demand for gourmet vegetables such as miniature squash, cress, mache, shallot, snow peas, horseradish and Chinese cabbage has exploded in recent years, he says.

Sweet potato french fries may be wave of future

Copley News Service

If you could read the palm of McDonald's owner Joan Kroc, you would see red french fries in her future.

That's because sweet potatoes have been declared the next wonder food by a team of fast-food experts at North Carolina State University.

The study proves sweet-tater fries retain their quality and beta carotene content after one full year of frozen storage at minus-18 C.

And there's no appreciable difference between fresh and frozen sweet potatoes in either appearance, flavor or texture.

Chinese cookbook features 'chopsticks, cleaver, wok' recipes

By CARLA MOSLEY
Hearst News Service

Jennie Low, the owner of Jennie Low's Chinese Cuisine in Mill Valley, Calif., has a fascinating way of introducing the novice cook to traditional Chinese methods and recipes.

"Chopsticks, Cleaver and Wok" is a newly revised edition of a cookbook originally printed in 1974. Low has expanded and improved the '70s version with new recipes to represent Chinese cuisines that have gained much popularity in recent years.

The cookbook begins with a section on how to shop, chop, use a wok, how to stir-fry, deep-fry, pan-fry, steam and stew. Basic instructions are given on cutting techniques in boning and slicing chicken, shelling and deveining prawns, slicing flank steak and cutting squid. Also, specific instructions on how to prepare vegetables properly are included.

Low's book gives a detailed review of Chinese cooking techniques and equipment, along with a complete glossary of obscure Chinese ingredient food terms presented in Chinese characters.

Two special sections tell how to plan a Chinese tea lunch or a menu for four — just like your favorite Chinese restaurant. The step-by-step instructions will enable a beginner to duplicate the dishes easily.

The many recipes are divided into categories, beginning with an appetizer section and continuing with soups, poultry, meat, fish and shellfish, vegetables, claypot, sizzling-platter and firepot dishes, and finally, noodles, won tons and rice.

"Chopsticks, Cleaver and Wok" is paperbound with 144 pages, published by Chonicle Books in San Francisco. The suggested retail price is $8.95.

Here are a few selected recipes I found most appetizing:

CHICKEN IN HOT BEAN SAUCE
(Min See Gai; serves 4)
1 whole chicken breast
2 green onions
1 medium-sized carrot
1½ tablespoons hot bean sauce
2 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
½ cup chicken stock
¾ cup diced (½-inch) jicama
Seasoning mixture
Thickening mixture

Skin and bone the chicken. Cut into ¾-inch cubes. Place in a bowl. Add the seasoning ingredients to the chicken. Mix well.

Seasoning:
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon thin soy sauce
1 teaspoon oyster sauce
1 teaspoon white wine
1 teaspoon cornstarch

Cut the green onions into ½-inch pieces. Peel the carrot. Dice into ½-inch pieces. Mash the bean sauce to a paste.

Heat the wok and add the oil. Add garlic, chicken and carrot and stir-fry for 2 minutes over high heat. Add the hot bean sauce and mix thoroughly.

Add the chicken stock. Bring the mixture to a boil. Cover and cook for 2 minutes over high heat. Add the jicama and green onion. Cook for 1 minute.

Thickener:
2 teaspoons cornstarch, mixed well with 2 teaspoons cold water

Stir in the thickener. Cook for 30 seconds. Serve.

BEEF IN OYSTER SAUCE
(Ho Yau Ngow Yuk; serves 4)
1 pound flank steak
2 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
3 green onions, slivered
½ cup chicken stock
2 tablespoons oyster sauce
Marinade

Cut the flank steak lengthwise (with the grain of meat) into three equal strips each approximately 1-½-inch wide. Cut each strip across the grain into thin slices. Place in a bowl.

Marinade:
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon thin soy sauce
2 teaspoons white wine
Dash of pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon slivered ginger root

Add the marinade ingredients to the beef. Mix well and marinate for 1 hour at room temperature.

Heat the wok and add the oil. Add the chopped garlic and stir-fry for 30 seconds over high heat. Add the beef and stir-fry for 3 minutes over high heat.

Add the green onions, chicken stock and oyster sauce. Bring to a boil and serve.

HOT-AND-SOUR-SOUP
(Sheun Lot Tong; serves 4)
1 whole chicken breast
3 pieces dried black fungus
6 ounces fresh firm bean cake
1 quart chicken stock
½ cup shredded canned winter bamboo shoots
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1½ tablespoons white vinegar
¼ teaspoon pepper
Seasoning mixture
Thickening mixture

Skin and bone the chicken. Cut the meat into thin strips, julienne style. Place in a bowl. Add the seasoning ingredients to the chicken. Mix well.

Seasoning:
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sugar
¾ teaspoon thin soy sauce
1 teaspoon cornstarch
Dash of pepper

Soak the fungus in warm water to cover for 15 minutes. Drain, rinse thoroughly and drain again. Remove and discard the stems. Cut into 1-inch slivers; you should have about ½ cup.

Cut the bean cake into slices 1-inch long by ¼-inch thick.

Bring the chicken stock to a boil. Add the chicken, black fungus and bamboo shoots. Cover and cook for 3 minutes.

Add the bean cake. Bring quickly to a boil (do not overcook!). Stir in the thickener. Cook for 30 seconds.

Thickener:
1½ tablespoons cornstarch, mixed well with 3 tablespoons cold water
1½ tablespoon dark soy sauce

Stir the beaten egg into soup in a circular motion. Immediately turn off the heat. Adjust the seasoning with salt. Add the vinegar and pepper. Mix well and serve.

Note: When called for, be sure to buy firm bean cake. The soft variety will fall apart if prepared in this way.

Chinatowns celebrating Year of Dragon

By ELAINE LOUIE
New York Times News Service

Chinatowns are on the move: from the city centers of San Francisco, Los Angeles and New York to the suburbs and outer boroughs. And Chinese food is following, from Cantonese and Sichuan menus featuring dishes like orange beef and moo shu pork, to a sophisticated cuisine from Hong Kong emphasizing artfully presented seafood.

This migration of people and food began 30 years ago, but gained momentum only recently. "Although the Chinese began moving out of the ghettos in the 1950s, the best restaurants followed and expanded in the 1980s," said Lily Lee Chen, a former mayor of Monterey Park, Calif., about seven miles east of Los Angeles.

The evolution of surburban Chinatowns is most clearly evident now, as these communities prepare to celebrate the New Year, the Year of the Dragon, which begins today. In the markets, candies are wrapped in gold paper to symbolize money and prosperity. Chefs are preparing special dishes like sweet rice balls scented with brown sugar, which are said to insure a happy life.

On menus printed for the holiday, new names grace familiar dishes: a plate of shrimp, scallops and squid is now called "Three Elderly People Wish You a Happy New Year," at the Crystal Garden Restaurant in Flushing, Queens. Men will perform the traditional lion or dragon dances hoisting extravagant creatures made of papier-mache and fabric.

Peter Kwong, a political science professor at the State University College at Old Westbury, N.Y., calls these new Chinese communities "satellite Chinatowns." He said they were established by middle-class Chinese as residential, not commercial, centers.

Mrs. Chen agreed. "The Chinese-Americans who had businesses in old Chinatown, but who wanted better homes and schools for their children, moved from Los Angeles to Monterey Park," she said.

According to Kwong, the movement in San Francisco was from the downtown area along Grant Avenue to the Richmond district three miles away, and to the peninsula, which extends 45 miles south of the city. In New York, many Chinese moved from the Canal Street area in lower Manhattan to Flushing, about 15 miles away. Still, for 10 to 15 years they returned to the old Chinatowns to eat and shop; they could live without the dirt and congestion, but not without the food.

But by the 1970s, restaurateurs started following their clientele. "The old Chinatowns were saturated with restaurants and competition was intense," Kwong said. "Some of the new restaurateurs, who came from Taiwan and Hong Kong, had money to hire good chefs, and an aggressive management style, and could appeal to both the wealthy Chinese and non-Chinese alike."

The owners hired a variety of chefs. Some came from Taiwan and made local specialties, like noodles topped with braised pork chops. Others, trained in Hong Kong, made exotic seafood dishes and unusual dim sum. In culinary terms, the new Chinatowns began to rival the old.

To keep their chefs content yet creative, many restaurateurs made them partners. "A chef who is a partner will take better care of the food and of the kitchen," said Kenneth Yee. He owns the East River Restaurant in Flushing along with several other partners, including two chefs.

To keep the customers happy, restaurateurs must serve the familiar in addition to the exotic. When the East Lake Restaurant opened in Flushing a year ago, its specialty was seafood. This week, it began offering dim sum. Albert Lin, one of seven partners in the restaurant, explained the change simply: "People asked for it. They expect it."

These new restaurants, which seat 200 to 600, claim as customers not only the Chinese-Americans and others who live or work in the area, but also the middle-class Chinese immigrants, who arrived in large numbers beginning in 1965, with a relaxation of quotas set by the Hart-Celler Act of that year. Today, there are more than a million Chinese in the United States, as against 236,000 in the 1960 census, according to Kwong, who wrote "The New Chinatown," a sociological study of New York's Chinatown (Hill & Wang, 1987).

WHAT'S COOKING

Cook learns culinary skills from friends, developes recipes

EDITOR'S NOTE: This series of "What's Cooking" interviews will feature nonprofit organizations that have published cookbooks. This is the sixth article in a series of interviews with members of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Artie Clutter of Midland has spent the entire 34 years of her married life developing her cooking skills. "My mother was a good country cook," Mrs. Clutter said, but "I learned most of what I know from friends. In fact, when I got married I couldn't even boil water. I love to collect recipes and I like to exchange with people. I've learned so much from other people."

She has learned her cooking lessons so well, in fact, that she develops many of her own recipes. "I rarely use a recipe very long until I start to change it to where we like it. I came from a long line of good cooks, and they all are better than me," she said of herself in relation to her eight brothers and sisters.

Mrs. Clutter and her husband, John, and their family "like all kinds of food," she said, "all kinds of nationalities. I cook just a little bit of everything. If I had a preference, I'd say I love to bake and I love to try new recipes."

She also enjoys "just playing around with spices," giving each dish her own personal touch. "I use an awfully lot of seasonings in my cooking. I have a ton of spices, some I like and some I never use. I find that I'm really heavy on the pepper. I probably use more pepper than most people."

For all her skills in the kitchen, she also is a very careful cook. "I'm not a trained cook. My husband calls me a 'read-a-line,-do-a-line' cook, and sometimes I am."

Mrs. Clutter is an active member of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Midland, teaching a Spiritual Living lesson one Sunday of each month.

Some of the Clutters' favorite recipes follow:

ARTIE'S CHICKEN AND BEEF STEW

4 tablespoons margarine
6 tablespoons flour
2 cans beef broth
6 tablespoons tomato sauce
2 cups water
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste (¼ to ½ teaspoon)
2 6-ounce bottles mushroom caps
2 cups small whole onions (1 bottle pearl onions, NOT marinated)
1½ pounds lean stew meat, cut into bite-sized pieces
2 to 3 chicken breasts, cooked and cut into pieces

Melt margarine in 6-quart Dutch oven and stir in flour to make paste. Add beef broth, water and tomato sauce, stirring constantly until thickened. Add salt, pepper and beef, which has been lightly browned or cooked in microwave oven until red color is gone (about 6 to 8 minutes per pound). Simmer about 2½ hours or until beef is tender. Check occasionally and add more water if needed. Add mushroom caps, pearl onions, cooked chicken pieces and parsley flakes in last 30 minutes of cooking time. Serve with green salad and pita bread, or can be served over rice or buttered noodles if desired.

NOTE: Prepare chicken by cooking on ROAST in microwave oven for 8 minutes per pound. Start chicken, breast side down, in glass pan covered with plastic wrap. Cook for half cooking time, then turn chicken over and finish cooking. Remove cooled, cooked meat from bones and cut into bite-sized pieces.

Turkey may be substituted for chicken, or use half turkey and half chicken.

KING CRAB SALAD MACEDOINE

4 6-ounce packages frozen king crab meat, or cooked shrimp
2 10-ounce packages frozen peas
2 cups celery, sliced
2 cups mayonnaise
2 teaspoons frozen lemon juice
2 teaspoons grated horseradish
½ teaspoon curry powder
2 teaspoons salt
Salad greens

Defrost frozen king crab meat (or shrimp), then drain. Cook frozen peas in small amount of boiling salted water. Drain, chill. Mix sliced celery, mayonnaise, frozen lemon juice, grated horseradish, curry powder and salt. At serving time, toss all ingredients together. Serve on bed of greens.

SPINACH LASAGNA

1 15-ounce package Ricotta cheese or cottage cheese
1 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed
1 or 2 large eggs
¼ to ½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
Italian sausage sauce (recipe follows)
¾ pound lasagna noodles, uncooked
2 cups grated Mozzarella cheese (8 ounces)
¾ cups grated Parmesan cheese

Italian Sausage Sauce:
¾ pound Italian sausage, without casing
1 pound hamburger
45 ounces bottled spaghetti sauce
1 soup can water
Small onions, carrots and potatoes

Prepare stuffing: Melt in skillet ½ cup butter and saute onion and garlic until golden. Combine with crumbs, celery, parsley, salt, thyme, sage and pepper. Spread dressing on boned round steak and roll up. Tie securely. Brown on all sides in hot fat in heavy skillet. Place in 6-quart Dutch oven. Add pealed raw vegetables. Mix together 2 soups and water. Pour over meat and vegetables. Cover and cook in 350 degree oven for 2½ hours or until meat and vegetables are tender. Baste occasionally and add more water if needed.

Artie Clutter — Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Brown meats together until crumbly and brown. Drain, then mix with bottled spaghetti sauce. Set aside. Mix Ricotta, spinach, egg, pepper and nutmeg. Spread 2 cups of sauce in bottom of 3-quart oblong dish. Cover with single layer of uncooked noodles. Spread ½ Ricotta-spinach mixture over noodles; top with ½ Mozzarella and ½ Parmesan cheese. Repeat layers. Cover with foil. Bake in 350 degree oven for 45-60 minutes.

NOTE: This recipe can be made the day before, covered tightly with foil and kept refrigerated until baking time.

STUFFED ROUND STEAK

½ cup butter
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
3 cups coarse bread crumbs
½ cup minced celery
1½ tablespoons parsley flakes
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon sage
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 round steak, boned (about 3 pounds)
2 tablespoons hot fat
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can cream of mushroom soup

NOTE: Use more butter or milk if needed. Mix sugar and cinnamon together before adding other ingredients.

CHOCOLATE DROP COOKIES

½ cup shortening
1¼ cups sugar
2 eggs
3 squares melted baking chocolate
½ cup thick sour cream
1¾ cups all-purpose flour, sifted once before measuring ½ teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
40 pecan nutmeats

Cream sugar and shortening; add eggs and beat well; add vanilla. Mix and sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately to first mixture with sour cream. Drop by teaspoonsful on greased baking sheets. Allow room to spread. Put pecan half in center of each. Bake at 350 degrees 10-12 minutes or until done.

NOTE: ¼ cup cocoa plus 2 tablespoons shortening equals 1 ounce or 1 square baking chocolate.

BREAKFAST HOT HASH from Beverly Dyer

1 box seasoned croutons
2 pounds sausage, cooked and drained
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 can mushroom soup
1 cup milk
8 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 can mushrooms, drained

Layer in 4-quart casserole or deep, long pan: croutons, sausage, cheese and mushrooms. Beat eggs and milk with wire whip until frothy. Add soup and dry mustard and mix well. Pour over layers. Store overnight or for several hours in refrigerator, covered. Bake one hour at 325 degrees, uncovered (less time if long pan is used). Serve with fresh fruit.

PAVLOVA

4 large egg whites
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon white vinegar
2 cups heavy cream
4 kiwifruit, peeled and sliced
Raspberry Sauce (recipe follows), optional

Grease cookie sheet or pizza pan; line with foil. Grease foil lightly; sprinkle lightly with cornstarch. Mark 8-inch circle on foil.

In large bowl, at high speed, beat egg whites and salt until frothy and beginning to whiten. Stir together 1 tablespoon sugar with 1 tablespoon cornstarch; set aside. Gradually add remaining sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, to egg whites, beating after each addition for about one minute or until sugar is dissolved. Add cornstarch-sugar mixture to egg-white mixture; beat until blended. Beat in vanilla and vinegar. Spread on cookie sheet within marked circle; spoon higher on side to form hollow.

Place in preheated 250 degree oven. Bake until very lightly browned and surface is dry — about 1½ hours. (Meringue will be crisp and firm.) Turn off oven; open door and let sit in oven 5 minutes. Cool completely on wire rack. Peel off foil and slide onto serving platter. Just before serving, whip cream until stiff. Flavor and sweeten to taste. Line center of meringue shell with some of the prepared, fresh fruits. Fill center with whipped cream. Serve with Raspberry Sauce. Keep chilled.

Raspberry Sauce:

Thaw and drain two 10-ounce packages frozen raspberries in syrup; reserve 1 cup syrup. In 2-quart saucepan stir together ⅓ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Gradually stir in reserved syrup, keeping smooth. Stir in raspberries. Stir constantly, cook over medium heat until clear, thickened and boiling. Cool. Store in tightly covered container in refrigerator.

NOTE: Can use kiwifruit, sliced fresh peaches, strawberries, black cherries or other fruits.

Recipe gives 'foolproof' answer to tricky souffle

By KAREN EVANS
Hearst News Service

Others may speak lovingly of their stew pots and soup recipes on chilly winter nights, but my thoughts turn to the comforts of a cheese souffle, all puffed up and piping hot and smelling wonderful.

Souffles — cheese, chive-flecked, Grand Marnier, dusted with powdered sugar — are well loved, but they are also a little forbidding — all those fears of falling. But for years I've had a recipe that has been foolproof, so I dug through the files for the old newspaper clipping that contained it.

I pulled out the yellowed clip that I've used for years and noticed something I hadn't noticed before: The recipe came from the San Francisco Examiner, and was part of a story written in 1970 or so by Helen Civelli Brown.

The souffle is a delicious combination of cheddar cheese and little green flecks of chives. I've cooked it in a number of cities now — at sea level and at 7,500 feet, and it's never failed me. With a good green salad, a fire in the fireplace, and a souffle in the oven, who could ask for anything more?

CHIVE-CHEESE SOUFFLE

⅓ cup butter or margarine
⅓ cup flour
2 cups milk
2 cups (8 ounces) grated sharp cheddar cheese
6 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon salt (optional)
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ cup chives, chopped fine

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Melt butter or margarine over medium heat. Add flour, stirring constantly and watching heat carefully. Gradually add milk, stirring all the while. Add grated cheddar, handful at a time, stirring after each addition until cheese is melted. Remove from heat and cool slightly.

Beat egg yolks, and beat into mixture. Add salt, paprika and chives. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into cheese mixture. Do not overmix.

Use 1½-quart souffle dish; wrap 3-inch collar of foil around top. Pour in cheese mixture. Using tip of spoon or knife, make groove in top of souffle 1 inch from edge, to make souffle pop into top hat shape.

Bake in preheated oven, undisturbed, for 50 to 60 minutes or until puffed and brown. Remove collar carefully and serve at once. Serves 6.

Fancy, easy, and all done ahead — that's why this pie gets top ratings. For easier serving, let the pie stand at room temperature 10 to 15 minutes before you cut it. The refreshing mint flavor will come through better, too.

PEPPERMINT ICE-CREAM PIE

1½ cups rolled oats
¾ cup flaked coconut
¾ cup finely chopped walnuts
½ cup margarine or butter
¾ cup sugar
½ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
2 cups vanilla ice cream
2 cups pink or green peppermint ice cream
¼ cup coarsely crushed striped round peppermint candies

For crust, in a medium mixing bowl stir together oats, coconut and nuts. In a small saucepan melt margarine. Stir in sugar and cocoa powder until smooth; pour over oat mixture, mixing well. Reserve 1 cup of the crust mixture. Press the remaining crust mixture onto the bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate. Freeze 5 to 10 minutes or until crust is firm.

Scoop half of each ice-cream flavor into crust, placing scoops alternately side by side. Using a metal spatula, smooth surface and swirl gently to marble. Sprinkle with ¾ cup of the reserved crust mixture. Repeat with remaining ice cream and crust mixture. Sprinkle with candy. Freeze 4 hours or until firm. Wrap in moisture- and vaporproof wrap. Seal, label, and freeze up to 1 month. Let stand 10 to 15 minutes before serving. Makes 8 servings.

Cindi's Seafood Tips

Lent is upon us — what a perfect time to give up meat for a while! I know you won't give it up for good, but right now we have quite a variety of fish and seafood. Of course, it's naturally low in calories and cholesterol. But I've told you all that before.

If you're going to go without that red meat, it's important to prepare your fish in a variety of ways. I have a good selection of free recipes, and I'll be glad to help you however I can. Good eating!

Cindi's Wine-Poached Fillets

In skillet, combine ¼ cup dry white wine (or water), ½ cup water, ½ cup sliced fresh mushrooms, ¼ cup thinly sliced celery, 1 clove minced garlic, ½ teaspoon crushed dry mint, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 5 minutes. Add 1½ pounds firm white fish (i.e., halibut, snapper, grouper) and spoon liquid over fish. Simmer, covered, for 6-8 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove fish to a platter and keep warm. Boil the vegetable mixture gently, uncovered, for 3-6 minutes, or until reduced to ⅓ to ½ cup and pour over fish. Makes 4 servings of 279 calories each.

Chinese diners eat 'sweet before salty'

CNS Photo

This food stall at Kaifeng shows that Chinese food not only tastes different in China, but is served differently as well.

It is often said that Chinese food is better in the United States than it is in China.

I disagree.

But memories linger of that first dinner in Beijing of Chinese Spam and canned mushrooms, served in a dingy hall draped with Christmas lights.

As a person for whom the innate superiority of Chinese food is tantamount to a religion, I felt my faith was being tested.

Surely the philistines back home — the ones who said to take Granola bars in my suitcase — couldn't have been right. Could they?

Of course not. By the end of three weeks, I was more of a believer than ever. Beyond the superb taste of any one dish, I grew to appreciate the cosmic differences in the way the Chinese think of food.

In the United States we are blessed with year-round produce, thanks to refrigerated tractor-trailers and wide ribbons of interstates. Meals bear no relationship to a place or time of year.

Food in China depends entirely on the region and the season. In early May rural Henan Province was bursting with emerald-green garlic shoots. We ate them stir-fried with pork for breakfast.

Within two weeks the stalks had yellowed and the roots were dug up. Then plates of marinated raw garlic slices appeared on the table.

SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT soil conditions in neighboring Jiangsu Province brought forth fiery green peppers that we never saw once in Henan.

Americans eat by twos, Chinese by tens. We dine by candlelight, Chinese by neon light. We like slabs of beef, they like shredded beef.

At better U.S. restaurants we expect upholstered chairs, heavy draperies, thick carpeting, silent dessert carts and maitre d's speaking in hushed tones.

At their better restaurants we see red vinyl booths, peeling paint, linoleum littered with half-eaten food, clanking metal dim sum carts and shouting waiters.

Celebratory Chinese like the dining experience to be hot and noisy. We seem more subdued.

Practical Americans beautify dinner tables with flowers and candles. In China, where Ming vases were glazed before America was a gleam in Columbus' eye, no centerpiece is worth having unless it can be eaten.

Slivers of yellow vegetables and soy-drenched chicken are transformed into fantastic birds, and maraschino cherries are the eyes of a food dragon.

In the United States, entrees are private property. The sharing we indulge in on visits to our Chinatowns is the exception that proves the rule.

China, for thousands of years a hierarchical society, is thoroughly democratic about eating. Courses are brought to lazy Susans in the middle of giant round tables, and everyone is positioned the same fighting distance from the food.

Our extravagant meals are capital-intensive — i.e. give me the biggest steak in the house — while theirs are labor-intensive. With 1 billion people, there is no shortage of kitchen hands to cut up meats and vegetables.

WE START meals with soup and finish with dessert. A Chinese banquet begins with pastries and ends with soup; the Chinese say it's healthier to eat sweet before salty.

We celebrate the succession of passing years with sugary confections. Chinese birthdays feature noodles, a symbol of longevity because the chefs stretch and tug the dough into miles of slender strands. Borrowing from the Italians, we call thin pasta angel hair. They call it dragon's breath.

In even the best U.S. restaurants, dinners consist mostly of meat, starch and vegetable. In China, historically on the verge of famine, even a modest meal features a dozen separate courses.

Three-fourths of the American diet is made up proteins or fat while 75 percent of the typical Chinese diet is rice, breads or noodles. When rice is served at the end of a 20-course banquet in China, the Chinese gobble it down from habit, not hunger.

Today, health-conscious Americans want brown rice in Chinese restaurants. They fear the loss of nutritional value. Chinese like white rice — steamed and perfectly bland. That way it soaks up subtle sauces and flavorings — better for the preservation of aesthetic values.

The inventors of Yankee pot roast, beef-loving Americans are phobic about undercooked pork. In China, pork is revered.

(Non-religious Jews like myself are often obsessed with Chinese food. Possibly we, too, revere what our orthodox Jewish brethren revile. There is a joke that goes like this: Chinese civilization started 4,000 years ago, and Jewish civilization 5,000 years ago. So the question is, where did Jews eat for 1,000 years?)

AMERICANS ARE blessed with so many amber waves of grain that much of it rots in Midwestern grain silos. For the Chinese, survival has been a struggle ever since they settled down to farm the south bank of the Yellow River 7,000 years ago. They eat anything and everything that moves, including sea slugs, apricot pits, bird saliva, cats, duck feet, dogs, eyeballs, fish lips and sparrows.

We greet each other by saying, "How are you?" Chinese greet each other by saying, "Have you eaten yet?"

We had a president who said ketchup is a vegetable. The Chinese character for "law" means "the person who makes the water go" — a reference to the ancient emperors who earned their power because they ensured an adequate water supply through irrigation.

We often drink for long periods on empty stomachs before sitting down to a meal. Chinese approach a banquet table stone sober. Everyone files into the room and sits in straight-backed chairs sipping tea until the host gives the sign to move to the table. Drunkenness is not frowned on, but is considered a destination that friends reach together.

The host starts off by brandishing a glass of the fiery sorghum-based liquor, maotai, reciting a witty and well-reasoned toast.

AS WHITE LIGHTNING strikes home, it greases the straight-back wrist action to cheery shouts of "Ganbei! Dry cup!"

On the long march to intoxication, people toast all kinds of things. At one of our banquets, we even toasted Richard Nixon.

By doing so, we expressed our gratitude that he opened the door to China, giving us Americans the chance to experience the world's oldest, perhaps most magnificent, cuisine in the place where it began.

Recipe uses American, Chinese ingenuity

Associated Press

This recipe combines Oriental stir-fry, all-American ground beef and 'Yankee' ingenuity.

BEEF STIR-FRY ON A PITA

1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning, crushed
1 teaspoon bottled minced garlic
3 cups sliced mixed fresh vegetables (mushrooms, carrots, zucchini, celery, onion or green pepper strips)
1 tablespoon cooking oil
¾ pound lean ground beef
½ cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
4 large pita bread rounds
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese

For sauce, stir together tomato sauce and cornstarch; stir in Italian seasoning and garlic. Set aside.

In a wok or large skillet stir-fry vegetables in hot oil about 3 minutes or until crisp-tender. Remove vegetables from wok. Break beef into large chunks. Add to wok. Stir-fry, breaking meat up slightly, about 3 minutes or until brown. Drain beef in a colander; wipe fat from wok.

Return beef to wok; push away from center. Stir sauce; add to center of the wok. Cook and stir until bubbly. Cook and stir 1 minute more. Add vegetables; mix well. Cook and stir for 1 minute. Sprinkle with Parmesan; toss gently. Spoon the mixture on top of pita bread; sprinkle with mozzarella. Makes 4 servings.

Breast Cancer Detection Unit Available to Area Women

An early read could save your life...

Treat Yourself to a Valentine this Valentine's Day...

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of eleven women in the United states will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as the result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancer are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate. A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, even before it can be felt. The American Cancer Society has established guidelines for a mmography in asymptomatic women. (Women who have no symptoms of disease). Those guidelines have been adopted by the American Academy of Family Physicians, American College of Obstericians and Gynecologists, and the American College of Radiology. Those guidelines are:

I. 35-40 years of age - One baseline mammogram.
II.. 40-50 years of age - A mammogram every 1-2 years depending on breast type and risk factor.
III. 50 years of age and over. An annual physical examination and annual mammogram.
IV. Asymptomatic women under 50 years of age with significant high risk factors should be examined at appropriate intervals. These risk factors include previous breast cancer and family history of cancer.
V. A symptomatic woman should have a mammogram at any age when she experiences a mass, nipple discharge, skin changes or unexplained breast pain.

A screening mammogram is an x-ray of the breast using extremely low dosages of radiation (usually comparable to dental x-rays) and is designed to find very early cancers.

A female technologist who is highly trained in mammography will perform the examination.

The charge for the screening mammogram is $80.00. The unit accepts cash, check, Visa, Mastercard and American Express.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Three of ♡

The time has come to abolish the popular belief that the players seated to your right and left at the bridge table are your mortal enemies. Just smile pleasantly, tell a joke or two, and you'll find they will go out of their way to help you.

The bidding was straightforward. South had a perfect two no trump opening bid in most methods, and North had no pretensions beyond the obvious game.

By accident, West hit the right major with his choice of opening lead, because it removed the only entry to North's diamond suit. Declarer ducked in the hope that West had led from the king, but East won the monarch and forced out the table's ace by returning the ten.

Declarer tried a diamond to the king, but East was in no hurry to go up with the ace. To all intents and purposes the board was now dead. However, declarer found a way to resurrect it with the aid of the opposition.

To effect a strip, declarer led a low spade from hand. He won the heart return, cashed the top spades followed by the ace, king and queen of clubs to see whether that suit would break. When it did not, he continued by leading the jack of diamonds. Since that would have been declarer's ninth trick, East was forced to grab his ace. But all he could do was to take his winning club and, since his last card was a diamond, he had to surrender the game-going trick to dummy's high diamond.

Wasn't that a pretty duck of a low spade to set up the end position?

Lucille Ball given passing grade by Harvard's Hasty Pudding Theatricals

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Lucille Ball passed a Harvard University test with a little help from Lucy Ricardo.

Miss Ball was named Woman of the Year by the Hasty Pudding Theatricals, Harvard's all-male revue, Tuesday.

On stage before about 500 wildly appreciative fans, Miss Ball passed a trivia test about her alter ego in the 1950s sitcom "I Love Lucy," which lives on in reruns.

She couldn't remember the name of Little Ricky's baby-sitter (Mrs. Trumbull) but recalled husband Ricky Ricardo's theme song ("Babalou").

"I've waited 20-some years to make this gig, and may I say it was worth it," Miss Ball, 76, told the standing-room-only crowd after a parade through Harvard Square past hundreds of admirers.

She said she would fill the tiny brass pudding pot she received with potpourri and place it in her New York apartment.

The Hasty Pudding Club has named a Woman of the Year since 1951 and a Man of the Year since 1967. Comedian Steve Martin will be honored Tuesday.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Star Walk now has country singer Dolly Parton's footprints, handprints and a small rhinestone butterfly — and that's all it's going to get.

"Several people asked me if I was going to leave the prints of something else. I said, 'Heavens no!' I'm afraid some little kid might fall in it and get killed," the buxom entertainer said with a giggle during ceremonies Tuesday attended by about 200 people.

Star Walk, a year-old attraction at a new outdoor shopping complex, honors country artists who have won Grammy awards.

Miss Parton and the crew from her variety television show are in Nashville this week to tape the season finale of "Dolly."

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Sen. Joseph Biden experienced a pain in the neck, he was placed in a brace until it felt better. But last week when the pain came back suddenly, doctors found an aneurysm on the brain that required delicate surgery to save his life.

The surgery, performed last Friday, was so successful that doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center on Tuesday transferred the 45-year-old Delaware Democrat out of intensive care and into a regular hospital room.

"Physicians are pleased with his continued progress and his condition is listed as satisfactory," said Peter Esker, a Walter Reed spokesman.

A neurosurgeon familiar with the Biden case said many patients with cerebral aneurysms are not as lucky, particularly if there is rapid and serious bleeding.

"It can kill you in 10 minutes," said the surgeon, who asked not to be named. "Most patients survive," he added, but for a serious medical condition, aneurysms on the brain are "big time."

The doctor said that Biden is in "the lucky two-thirds" who live through cerebral aneurysm surgery, and the senator's relatively quick release from intensive care probably means he avoided a long list of problems that can ambush such patients.

"One third of these patients die," said the surgeon, while others may experience some loss of function, such as paralysis or decline of intellectual ability. "But if everything is perfect and the surgery is within 24 hours (of serious bleeding), they can be out of the hospital within seven days. Recovery can be absolutely normal."

Dr. Edward Laws, chairman of the neurosurgery department at George Washington Hospital, said he had no details on the Biden case but that patients with successful surgery usually are released within a week or 10 days.

"It sounds like he (Biden) is doing better than that, though," said Laws. "I think he's probably going to do great."

An aneurysm is caused by a weakness in the artery wall that allows pressure to force the artery to swell outward, like a blister. The danger is that the aneurysm will burst. But in the brain, even a mild leakage can be dangerous and damaging.

A leakage into the brain from a branch of the carotid artery can cause a neck pain, but both Laws and the other neurosurgeon said it is "unusual" for such a pain to be misdiagnosed.

Laws suggested that Biden, in fact, may have had a neck problem earlier and that development of the aneurysm, which manifests a similar pain, was just coincidental.

Biden first complained of the neck pain in late January.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Madonna, Sylvester Stallone and Bill Cosby are among those nominated for an award they won't want to receive: the Golden Raspberry for complicity in last year's worst movies.

Norman Mailer, who directed the film of his novel, "Tough Guys Don't Dance," also took some lumps in nominations announced Tuesday by the Golden Raspberry Award Foundation.

The Razzies, a lighthearted parody of the Oscars, coincided with today's annual Academy Award nominations.

Stallone, the all-time Razzie champ with four wins, continued the tradition with his arm-wrestling flick, "Over the Top," which got three nominations, including worst actor.

Cosby received three nominations for star, author and producer of "Leonard: Part 6," which he disavowed and almost no one saw. Madonna, last year's worst actress winner, is a contender this year for "Who's That Girl?," nominated for five Razzies.

In addition to worst director, "Tough Guys Don't Dance" was nominated for worst actress, Debra Sandlund, and worst supporting actress, Isabella Rossellini.

DEAR ABBY

Good attitude wins in job race

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It is my job to interview applicants for employment in this rather large company. Recently we advertised for office help, and I was shocked at what came through the door. Some wore sloppy jeans, others wore stretch knit pants, hair in a ponytail, chewing gum, and their attitudes were anything but professional. I was appalled. Some were college graduates; others had vocational and business training.

Please print something for the sake of those who really need employment but don't know the basic rules for dress and behavior when applying for a job.

We hired a person with mediocre qualifications simply because she was well-mannered, presentable and had a positive attitude. — DISGUSTED IN KENTUCKY

DEAR DISGUSTED: Some time ago I published a piece that appeared in William Raspberry's column that addressed itself to this problem. He quoted Karen Rak, a high-school English teacher in Strongville, Ohio, who wrote a letter (ostensibly from an employer) designed to let her youthful job seekers see themselves as they are seen.

I think this piece deserves all the exposure it can get.

"DEAR KID: Today you came to me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids your age can't find jobs.

"But I hired a teen-ager today. You saw him. What was so special about him? Not experience; neither of you had any. Attitude, son. A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E. He did his best to impress me. That is where he edged you out.

"He wasn't dressed like Easter Sunday, but then that wasn't necessary. His clothes were clean, and he had gotten a haircut. He filled out the application form neatly and completely. He did not ask to borrow a pen. He carried his Social Security card, had basic identification and did not ask, 'What's a reference?'

"He didn't start to chew gum or smoke while interviewing. He didn't keep looking at his watch, giving me the impression that he had something more important to do.

"He took the time to find out how we 'operate' here, and what his day-to-day tasks would be. I think he'll keep his eyes open and work for me like he'd work for himself.

"He was willing to start at that point where I could afford to pay. Someday, perhaps, he'll get to the point where he'll have more authority over others and a better paycheck.

"You know, kid, men have always had to get a job like you get a girl: Case the situation, wear a clean shirt and try to appear reasonably willing.

"Maybe jobs aren't as plentiful right now, but there are jobs. You may not believe it, but all around you employers are looking for young men and women smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way.

"If you have even the vaguest idea of what I'm trying to say, let it show the next time you ask for a job. You will be head and shoulders above the rest.

"For both our sakes, get eager, will you? — THE BOSS"

DEAR ABBY: I went with a guy for two years. We broke up last October. Last week I found out that he got married. Even though we have not spoken since our breakup, I still care for him, and I want to wish him happiness.

Would it be proper to send him and his wife a wedding card? How about a gift? I want to appear as sincere as possible. I do not know his address, but I could send it to his parents' home and they could forward it to him.

Maybe I shouldn't do anything at all. However, I feel a bit guilty in knowing that he is married and not acknowledging the fact. What would you do? — HIS EX-LOVE

DEAR EX: If I still "cared" for an "ex-love," I would not send him a card or gift unless he and his wife had sent me a wedding announcement, Christmas card or some kind of friendly greeting that bore their address.

DEAR ABBY: Why are some women so "blind" when it comes to their husbands? I'm a woman who has been in the business world for 30 years, and I would estimate that between 80 percent to 90 percent of married men have affairs. Rich men, poor men, quiet men, religious men, handsome men, ugly men — and their wives trust them completely.

These men make up "business trips," "fishing trips," "hunting trips" and "skiing trips" with their buddies. (Their wives think these "buddies" are men!)

I've been propositioned by married men from 20 to 70 years old, by men who have been married from two months to 45 years, by a grandfather of five to a new father whose wife was still in the hospital.

I know that some women have extramarital affairs, but from what I've seen, men are more apt to cheat than women. I wonder why? — TRICIA

DEAR TRICIA: It's unfair and inaccurate to tar all men with the same brush, but 30 years ago there were fewer women in the business world, where one is more apt to find the freedom to philander. Today, more men than women have the time and money to play. Of course, there's the old double standard — less prevalent today, but still with us: "Nice girls don't — but boys will be boys."

DEAR ABBY: Divorces and annulments are granted for a spouse's refusal to perform sexually, but is it possible to get an annulment or divorce if a spouse fails to perform housekeeping duties?

"Susie" lived with her mother for the two years I dated her. That home was neat as a pin. I figured "like mother — like daughter." During our engagement, Sue talked about cooking my favorite foods, and caring for "our" home, so I assumed she was the domestic type. Boy, was I ever fooled!

After a hard day's work, I come home to dirty dishes, unmade beds, clothes littering the bathroom and her two cats prowling the kitchen counters. She tells me I am able to get my own breakfast. Then she spills some dry cereal into a bowl for our daughter's breakfast, slaps two pieces of bread together, glued with peanut butter, for the child's school lunch. If I have time, I boil an egg for the sweet little kid, and add an apple and a Thermos of milk.

I try to mop the sticky floors, vacuum and do some grocery shopping. When I ask her to please take my shirts out of the dryer and hang them up, she tells me I have been "spoiled rotten" by my mother.

How do I get this lady to assume some responsibility for making a comfortable home for all of us? Kindness hasn't worked. — SEETHING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR SEETHING: You can't "get" anybody to do anything. But your wife's sloppy housekeeping is the least of your problems. She appears to be a very uncaring mother as well.

This domestic situation isn't going to get better unless you both want to improve it. Get thee to a family counselor now before it becomes totally hopeless.

Chocolate neutralizes tooth decay-causing acid

Copley News Service

Did you know chocolate is actually good for your teeth? That's because chocolate neutralizes decay-causing acid and kills bacteria.

Nuts and certain cheeses — cheddar, Monterey jack and Swiss — have the same neutralizing effect.

Dr. Stephen Moss, president of the American Academy of Pedodontics, says we no longer just categorize foods as being "good" or "bad" for teeth.

Some foods are worse than others, though. The biggest offenders are foods with a high sugar content that also stick to your teeth.

Greenspan: Economy in balance

By PETER T. KILBORN
New York Times News Service

Greenspan

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said Tuesday that important features of the economy seemed stable, if not particularly strong. Economists said his remarks implied that the Fed wanted interest rates and the dollar to stay where they are.

"The relationships at the moment among all the major financial variables seem to be in relative balance," Greenspan said, adding, "For the moment, we are in equilibrium."

"He's saying, 'We have no intention of changing policy for the foreseeable future,' " said John D. Paulus, a specialist in monitoring Fed monetary policies at Morgan Stanley & Co. "It tells me they're not going to change anything," said Robert Genetski, chief economist at the Harris Bankcorp in Chicago.

Greenspan's remarks, in reply to questions following a speech on Third World debt issues, appeared to belie recent speculation in the financial markets that the Fed feared a sharp decline of the economy and either had already started letting interest rates fall or would do so soon.

The comments, which typically did not include any specific mention of interest rates, were noteworthy because they come just a week after a closed-door policy-making meeting of the Fed's Open Market Committee, when decisions on interest rates are made. Usually, the Fed does not publicly disclose the decisions for six weeks. Instead it leaves the markets to try to discern shifts in policy through the Fed's intervention in the credit markets.

Greenspan's comments were also consistent with the modification in policy that the Fed made in December and disclosed on Friday. Because the economy appeared to be settling following the collapse of the stock market on Oct. 19, the Fed said that in December it had begun to move back toward the policy of paying less attention to interest rates.

The comments also show that the Fed has not yet submitted to election-year pressure from the Reagan administration to speed up the economy. Some Administration economists think that recent figures for the nation's money supply seem to presage a recession. Other economists, however, are more skeptical about what the money-supply figures suggest.

Immediately following the stock market collapse of Oct. 19, the Fed gave the economy a boost, in part by lowering the Federal funds rate a percentage point, to 6¾ percent. This is a rate that banks charge one another and that the Fed uses to try to influence other rates.

Some economists think the Fed is still holding it there; others think it is letting the rate slip fractionally to around 6⅝ percent — too little to mark any real change in policy. Some economists maintain that declines in other interest rates verify the view that the Fed has eased a bit. Others say the other rates have slipped because the financial markets anticipated a significant reduction in the Fed funds rate — and could now start letting those rates rise a bit in the face of the Fed's stand-pat policy.

Greenspan made his remarks after a speech to the Bretton Woods Committee, a private group of economists, businessmen and former government officials. Michel Camdessus, the chairman of the International Monetary Fund, was among the participants in the meeting.

Equilibrium, Greenspan showed in his speech, is not necessarily a happy condition. Despite six years of growth in the United States, strong growth in Japan and more modest growth in Europe, he said, "the prospects for more buoyant economic activity in the industrial world are not patently great."

About 2,600 workers will lose their jobs over the next two years as the Hanford N reactor at Richland Wash. is placed on "cold standby."

Aging plutonium plant slated for mothballing

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — After months of debate, the U.S. Energy Department has decided not to restart the flawed and aging N Reactor, one of four reactors supplying the U.S. nuclear arsenal with bomb-grade plutonium.

The N reactor has been closed since January 1987 for about $70 million worth of safety improvements prompted by the nuclear disaster that killed 31 people at the similarly designed Soviet nuclear plant at Chernobyl.

Energy Secretary John Herrington announced Tuesday the reactor at the Hanford nuclear reservation will be placed on "cold standby" status, forcing about 2,600 workers to be laid off in the next two years.

"This decision signals the end of the plutonium production mission at the Hanford site," said Mike Lawrence, Hanford operations manager for the Energy Department.

Plans for the mothballing of the reactor will be included in the Reagan administration's proposed budget that will be sent to Congress Thursday.

A report prepared last year for the Energy Department projected that a gradual phase-out of plutonium-producing operations at Hanford by 1996 would result in the loss of more than 13,800 jobs in the state.

Gov. Booth Gardner and members of the state's congressional delegation pledged to seek a way to cushion the economic shock.

But Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., said, "Frankly, the most likely type of aid to come will be unemployment benefits."

Seminole man indicted in Moncor investigation

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — An FBI investigation has led to the indictment of the former chief executive officer and three other former officials of the defunct Moncor Inc.

The six-count indictment released Tuesday charges the former officers and a West Texas man in connection with $5.7 million in loans from the bank.

U.S. Attorney William Lutz said he could not comment on whether any of the money was recovered.

The indictment was returned last Friday by a federal grand jury.

The indictment names Reed Chittim, Moncor's former president and chief executive officer; Stanley E. Newman, former director and president of the bank, and Robert Scott Blymn, executive vice president of Moncor's Hobbs bank.

The indictment also names Paul Condit, owner of three Seminole, Texas, companies which borrowed money from Moncor.

Chittim is named in all six counts. Newman is named in one, Blymn in four and Condit in four.

The grand jury charged that to influence the bank's decisions on loans, Chittim falsely stated in March 1984 that he owned assets worth $1.8 million. The indictment alleged the assets were nonexistent, substantially reduced in value or pledged as collateral to other banks.

The maximum penalty is two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

The other five counts charged Chittim and one or more of the other defendants with unlawfully allowing loans from Moncor "with intent to injure and defraud" the bank.

The maximum penalty is five years in prison and a $5,000 fine for each count.

One count charged that Chittim and Newman "knowingly, willfully and unlawfully" misapplied Moncor money by allowing a $302,533 loan to Chittim in December 1984.

The grand jury also charged that Chittim and Blymn misapplied $2.4 million in a March 1983 loan to Condit Chemical and Grain Co. Inc., misapplied more than $1.4 million in a

Housing starts tumble

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction fell 1.9 percent in January to its lowest level since the end of the last recession, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said new homes and apartments were being built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.38 million units last month.

The January setback, which followed a 15.5 percent plunge in December, surprised analysts who had been forecasting a modest rebound in construction activity.

The housing sector is being watched closely at present since it is often one of the first sectors to turn down at the start of a new recession.

While the majority of economists believe the country will be able to escape a downturn in this presidential election year, some forecasters dispute this outlook, in part because of concern about the record collapse of stock prices last October.

Sears to open home boutique

NEW YORK (NYT) — Sears, Roebuck & Co. will open its first home fashions store in midtown Manhattan late this spring.

The store will "feature a highly focused, market-driven assortment of bed and bath fashions, bedding, window coverings, floor coverings, lifestyle furniture and other selected products," said W. Stan Knipe, general manager of Sears's New York region. The new store will be the sixth in the city but the first of a specialized nature.

Factory output rises despite carmakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. industrial output rose 0.2 percent in January despite a sharp drop in the production of autos, the government reported today.

The Federal Reserve said that production at American factories, mines and utilities increased for the fourth consecutive month, following gains of 0.4 percent in both November and December.

The string of increases helped to push the production level up by 6 percent in the past 12 months, providing further evidence of the strength in the manufacturing sector.

U.S. industry has been benefiting from the weaker dollar, which has made American products competitive once more on overseas markets, boosting exports to record levels.

Economists are counting on strength in manufacturing to offset weakness in the consumer sector and keep the economy out of a recession this year.

Some of that consumer weakness was demonstrated by a second report today which showed that housing construction fell 1.9 percent in January to an annual rate of 1.38 million units, the slowest pace since the end of the last recession five years ago.

The report on industrial production showed that U.S. manufacturing increased 0.2 percent in January following a 0.5 percent December advance.

The strength was entirely from industries producing non-durable goods, where production rose by 0.4 percent. Output of durable goods, items expected to last at least three years, showed no change in January as a big decline in production of cars offset strength in other sectors.

The original First National Bank location, in the Oil and Gas Building at Wall and Main streets, is being renovated into a BANCHOME branch.

Larry Hellums, BancHome spokesman, said the BancHome branch in the Petroleum Building will move to the new office once renovation is completed. He estimated the project would be completed around April 1.

One reason for the move is to enhance the value of the Oil and Gas building, which is owned by BancHome, according to Hellums.

He added that the renovation would try to restore and incorporate some of the original construction.

Slow news means slow trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell marginally Tuesday in lethargic trading that dealers attributed to a lack of news and the absence of many market participants because of industry conferences.

"Basically, I'd have to say it was one of the quietest days this year that I can remember," said Peter Beutel, assistant manager of Elders Futures Inc., an energy futures trading firm in New York.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the March-delivery price of West Texas Intermediate closed at $16.67 per barrel, down 8 cents from Friday. The exchange was closed Monday for Presidents Day.

Refined products barely changed. The March-delivery price for wholesale heating oil fell 0.23 cent a gallon to 46.37 cents, and the March-delivery price for wholesale unleaded gasoline rose .01 cent a gallon to 46.29 cents.

Dollar down, gold mixed in trade

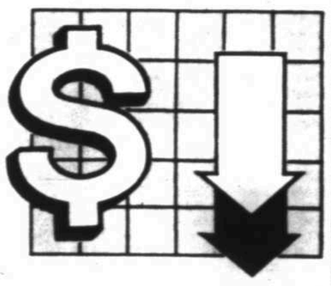
LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar eased slightly against most major foreign currencies in early European trading today. Gold dropped slightly in London and held steady in Zurich.

Currency dealers said trading was thin because of holidays in Asia and the lack of market-moving news.

In Tokyo, the dollar continued its decline against the Japanese yen, closing at 130.50 yen, down 0.99 yen from Tuesday. Later, in London, it was quoted at 130.45 yen.



Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.7103 West German marks, down from 1.7120

—1.4050 Swiss francs, up from 1.4038

—5.7795 French francs, down from 5.7815

—1.9194 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9200

—1,258.50 Italian lire, down from 1,260.00

—1.2690 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2687

In London, one British pound cost $1.7449, slightly more expensive than Tuesday's $1.7446.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price for gold of $444 a troy ounce at mid-morning today, unchanged from the opening bid, but down from late Tuesday's $445.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $444.50, unchanged from Tuesday.

Dow up 22 points, cracks 2,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock investors ignored bad news on interest rates, the dollar and commodity prices Tuesday as the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks cracked the 2,000 barrier for the first time since early January.

The Dow industrials rose 22.71 points to 2,005.97, its first finish above 2,000 since suffering a 140.58-point plunge on Friday, Jan. 8.

The Dow indicator has risen 110.25 points in the last five trading sessions.

Stock analysts were at a loss to explain the market's strong performance, especially in light of a recent rise in interest rates. Usually higher rates hurt stock prices by threatening to slow down the economy and by providing an attractive investment alternative to stocks.

Interest rates, after a big rise Friday, continued to climb Tuesday. The yield on the Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond rose to 8.46 percent as its price fell about $3 for every $1,000 in face value.

Big Board volume totaled 135.38 million shares, against 144.86 million in last Friday's session. The stock market was closed Monday for Presidents Day.

The NYSE index rose 1.10 to 145.96.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 3.02 to 299.09, and S&P's 500-stock composite index rose 2.20 to 259.83.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Many Americans may get hit with tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A significant number of Americans may have had too little tax withheld from paychecks last year, meaning they will owe the government when they file their tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service says.

Preliminary surveys indicate most people probably made accurate tax estimates when they filed new W-4 withholding forms last year, but some taxpayers such as high-income earners and working couples may have underestimated, Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs told a Senate Finance subcommittee Tuesday.

Firestone, Bridgestone set joint venture

CHICAGO (AP) — Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. said it planned to spin off its worldwide tire business into a $1.5 billion joint venture to be 75 percent owned by Tokyo-based Bridgestone Corp.

Firestone said Tuesday that the transaction, which must be approved by its shareholders, was expected to result in a $1 billion cash distribution to Firestone shareholders as part of a major financial restructuring, according to a joint statement.

Iacocca will subsidize laid off workers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca said he would dedicate all the profits from new Chrysler cars sold in Wisconsin this year to a trust fund to help the 5,500 workers in Kenosha who will lose their jobs.

Iacocca said Tuesday that based on 1987 sales, the fund should amount to about $20 million to help laid off autoworkers make house payments, educate their children and meet other financial obligations.

Iacocca stressed, however, there was no way he would change his mind about closing the Kenosha plant.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

H bond return declines in extended maturity period

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I bought a total of $12,000 of Series H, U.S. Savings Bonds, during 1975, 1976 and 1977 because I needed income and these bonds pay interest by check every six months. My interest gradually increased and amounted to $1,062.88 annually for a number of years. But that interest began to decline in 1985 and now is only $930.56 a year. Why?

Doyle

A. Because your H bonds entered "extended maturity periods" in which interest rates are lower.

H Bonds issued during the years in which you bought yours were scheduled to receive interest at an average annual rate of 6 percent. But interest was set to be paid on a graduated scale — 5 percent the first year, 5.8 percent for each of the next four years and 6.50 percent for the final five years of the bonds' original 10-year maturity period.

Then interest rates were raised — to 6.5 percent in June 1979, to 7.5 percent in November 1980 and to 8.5 percent in May 1981 —not only on newly issued H bonds and the newer HH bonds but also on already issued Hs and HHs.

The amounts of your H bond interest checks were increased to reflect the higher interest rates and to offset the original graduated interest schedule.

As a result, you received 9.024 percent annual interest on your bonds for the sixth through tenth years of their original maturities.

Now, the bad news. The annual interest rate on newly issued HH bonds and on H bonds entering an extended maturity period was reduced to 7.5 percent in November 1982 and to 6 percent in November 1986.

All your H bonds have passed their 10-year original maturities and now are in their first extended maturity period, which also is for 10 years.

The H bonds you bought in 1975 and before November 1976 currently are paying 7.5 percent interest. Those purchased after October 1976 now are paying 6 percent.

Q. We need all the income we can get and are most distressed by the reduction in interest from our Series H, U.S. Savings Bonds. Should we dispose of these bonds and invest elsewhere?

A. That has to be your personal decision. Although lower than the rates available a few years ago, the interest on H bonds is reasonably high — especially for an absolutely safe investment. Don't overlook the fact that you can redeem savings bonds at any time — without any penalty or fear of loss.

Q. We have $20,000 of Series HH, U.S. Savings Bonds. Among my notes, I see that we have a tax liability on $612.18 on each bond. Does this mean we will have to pay $612.18 income tax, leaving us with $387.82 for each $1,000 bond, or does it mean we will be liable for tax on $612.18 of each $1,000?

A. The latter, of course.

It's clear you obtained those HH bonds in exchange for E and/or EE bonds and/or U.S. Savings Notes. By making that exchange, you postponed paying federal income tax on the interest that had accrued on the Es, EEs and/or savings notes — until you redeem the HHs received in the exchange or until those HHs reach final maturity. The amount of that accrued interest is printed on each HH bond.

If you redeem one of those $1,000 HH bonds, you then report $612.18 as interest income on your federal income tax return and pay tax on that amount. If you redeem all 20 bonds, report $12,243.60 interest income.

HH bonds could be obtained either for cash or through the exchange process until Nov. 1, 1982. Since that date, they have been available only in exchange for Es, EEs and/or Savings Notes. H bonds, which have not been issued since January 1980, formerly could be either purchased or obtained through exchange.

March 1983 loan to Condit Implement Co., misapplied $1.4 million in a March 1983 loan to Condit, doing business as Condit Farms, and misapplied $208,236 in a loan to Paul and Patsy Condit.

The indictment charged that Condit "did knowingly, willfully and unlawfully aid, abet, counsel, induce and procure" Chittim and Blymn in the $5.4 million in loans to his companies and himself.

Moncor Inc., also known as First City Financial Corp., was once New Mexico's third-largest bank holding company with banks in Albuquerque, Carlsbad, Hobbs, Roswell, Ruidoso and Rio Rancho.

Moncor Inc. filed for reorganization Aug. 29, 1985, under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

OUTPUT—

Production of cars fell by 7.4 percent in January to an annual rate of 6.5 million units. The impact of this fall was softened somewhat by an increase in production of light trucks.

Also contributing to the weakness last month was a decline in iron and steel production, which fell back following a sharp rise in December.

The mining industry, which had been posting respectable gains, suffered a 0.6 percent drop in January, the second consecutive monthly downturn. This sector, which includes oil and gas well drilling, is still 3.2 percent above its production level of a year ago.

The utility sector had a 1.3 percent increase in January, erasing a 0.3 percent decline in December.

STARTS—

The January annual starts level was the slowest pace since a rate of 1.30 million units in December 1982, just as the last recession was ending. The January pace was almost 24 percent below the rate at the beginning of 1987.

The weakness last month came from a 2.9 percent decline in construction of single-family homes, which fell to an annual rate of 1.01 million units.

This drop offset a 0.8 percent increase in construction of multi-family housing, wich edged up to an annual rate of 366,000 units, still 35 percent below the level of a year ago. This sector has been in a slump because of the impact of the 1986 tax law, which removed many of the tax shelter benefits of investing in real estate.

In other ominous news, permits, considered a good sign of future activity, fell an even sharper 8.2 percent in January to an annual rate of 1.25 million units, the lowest level for permits since January 1985. Permits had fallen 7.4 percent in December.

The January weakness in construction starts came from two sectors of the country. Starts fell 21.8 percent in the Midwest to an annual rate of 223,000 units and dropped 17.1 percent in the South to 469,000 units.

These declines were partially offset by a 27.6 percent increase in starts in the Northeast, where homes were being built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 291,000 units, and a 21.2 percent increase in the West, where starts rose to a rate of 394,000 units.

Existing home sales steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home prices skyrocketed in many Northeastern cities last year, propelled by that region's prosperous economy, while prices were falling in depressed farm and energy regions, according to a survey by a real estate trade group.

The National Association of Realtors said Tuesday that prices on existing homes rose 5.1 percent to a national average of $84,300 at the close of last year, slightly ahead of consumer inflation, which was up 4.4 percent in 1987.

But the nationwide average masked widespread geographic differences. Home prices shot up 32.2 percent in Providence, R.I., six times the national average. Three other Eastern cities, Albany, N.Y., Hartford, Conn., and Washington, also saw home prices climb by 18 percent or more.

But the association said its survey of 53 metropolitan areas found 14 cities where prices fell during the year. This list was dominated by areas dependent on farming and energy industries.

Houston suffered the biggest price decline, a drop of 7.2 percent, followed by declines of 5.6 percent in Oklahoma City and 5.5 percent in Des Moines. Des Moines was ranked as the most affordable place to buy a home last year with a median price of $52,000.

At the top of the price scale were New York City, with a mid-point price of $180,800, and Boston, with a selling price of $178,600 at the end of last year. These two cities have held the top two price positions for the past two years.

Despite volatile mortgage rates and the October collapse of the stock market, home sales remained near eight-year highs last year. Sales totaled 3.885 million units in 1987, down a tiny 0.3 percent from 1986. Both years represented the fastest sales pace since 4.05 million homes were sold in 1979.

Alaska and Louisiana, two states which had suffered a big slump in sales because of depressed energy industries, enjoyed a rebound last year, leading the country along with Massachusetts with the largest percentage gains.

Sales in Alaska rose 26.2 percent and were up 18.8 percent in Louisiana and Massachusetts. Twenty-two states had sales increases last year.

Others enjoying big gains were Georgia, with an 18.5 percent increase and North Dakota and Maine, with advances of 17.9 percent and 14.3 percent respectively.

"The Northeast continues as the strongest region but we saw considerable strength in the South and Midwest, two areas which had been lagging the rest of the country," said John Tuccillo, chief economist for the realtors group.

Twenty-two states suffered sales declines last year, led by a 13.8 percent drop in Washington state, a decline which erased a 15.5 percent gain of the previous year. Sales fell 13.3 percent in Virginia, followed by declines of 9.7 percent in both Maryland and Oklahoma.

Analysts said that one factor which pushed up 1986 sales was a last-minute rush to close sales and reap capital gains profits before the new tax law took effect on Jan. 1, 1987.

Tuccillo predicted that price increases nationwide should be lower than the 5.1 percent rise in 1987 with sales expected to decline by around 8 percent, in part because of slower economic growth.

Tuccillo predicted that the Northeast will continue to have the highest home prices of any region, but he said the rate of increase should slow.

Mortgage insurance failure latest Southwest thrift woe

By ERIC N. BERG
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The failure of a leading mortgage insurer to meet its obligations has led banks and savings and loan associations to declare nearly $500 million in home mortgages in the Southwest in default. As a result, the lenders have begun foreclosure proceedings against the troubled tax shelter operation, known as EPIC, that owned the 6,600 homes involved, according to executives in the real estate industry.

News of the default, which took place earlier this month and is believed to be the largest ever in the home lending business, spread concern through many sectors of the real estate and financial industry Tuesday.

The foreclosure proceedings not only threaten to produce big losses for the lenders involved, but also may raise questions about $13 billion of mortgages, mortgage-backed securities and other securities insured by the Ticor Mortgage Insurance Corp. It was troubles at this mortgage insurance company that led to the record nonpayment.

Specifically, the nonpayment, which mortgage experts estimated Tuesday at $485 million, stems from the collapse in the summer of 1985 of the Equity Programs Investment Corp.

EPIC, which made front-page news at the time, was a nationwide seller of tax shelters in which some 10,000 doctors, dentists, lawyers and other professionals participated. Through 352 EPIC partnerships, the participants bought some 22,000 houses, mostly model units, in tract-home developments throughout the Southwest that they hoped to rent out at a profit.

When oil prices collapsed, however, the model homes either remained vacant or could not be rented at amounts sufficient to cover the $1.4 billion in mortgages on the properties. As a result, all 352 EPIC partnerships filled for bankruptcy around August 1985.

In April 1986, a "work-out" arrangement was reached under which EPIC's 100 or so lenders, including the Meritor Financial Corp., the Federal National Mortgage Corp. and the CityFed Financial Corp., agreed to reduced interest rates on their loans in exchange for a pledge by EPIC's three main mortgage insurers — Ticor, the MGIC Investment Corp., and Republic Mortgage Insurance — to make payments to the lenders on insurance policies they had issued.

That "work-out" agreement had been working fine, but just a few weeks ago Roxani M. Gallespie, the California commissioner of insurance, concluded that Tocor might not be able to pay all its claims as a result of unexpected shortfall of premium income and higher-than-expected losses. Consequently, Ms. Galespie ordered Ticor to cease making payments on all its policies.

It was at that point, around Jan. 21, that Ticor failed to make its payments to the EPIC lenders. On Feb. 5, the 6,600 homes insured by Ticor were officially declared in default by the lenders.

"Instead of receiving our payment, we got a phone call saying that there would be no payment," said Caryl Bernstein, Fannie Mae's in-house legal counsel. Under the terms of the workout, failure by any of the insurers would automatically trigger a default on mortgages it backed.

HANFORD—

Herrington said the decision to mothball the reactor was based on a secret Department of Defense review of the nation's future need for plutonium, a key ingredient in nuclear weapons.

The Energy Department said demand for plutonium could be met by three reactors at the Savannah River Plant near Aiken, S.C., and through plutonium recovery from nuclear weapons retired as a result of the recent U.S.-Soviet treaty.

The Savannah River reactors are running at 50 percent power because of safety concerns.

The N Reactor, operated for the Energy Department by Westinghouse Inc., shares several design characteristics with the Chernobyl plant, including graphite in the reactor core to moderate nuclear fission and lack of a containment dome.

U.S. officials say the N Reactor, operated for the Energy Department by Westinghouse Inc., was considerably safer than the one at Chernobyl.

The fate of the reactor, the last of nine plutonium producers that have operated at Hanford since 1944, had been mired in controversy. Proponents said the nation needed the plutonium while opponents contended it did not, and that the reactor was unsafe.

The "cold standby" status will begin next year shortly after the safety improvements are completed and tested. The reactor could be restarted, but that would take up to three years, Lawrence said.

The N reactor employs 3,300 of Hanford's 14,000 workers. The site is the biggest employer in the nearby cities of Richland, Kennewick and Pasco, which have a combined population of about 130,000.

"State agencies will do everything they can to help those who will be affected by the shutdown," Gardner said.

Rep. Don Bonker said he and Sen. Brock Adams, both Democrats, planned to introduce a "military waste cleanup bill that we hope will provide thousands of high-skilled jobs."

Over 40 years of defense wastes are temporarily stored in tanks at the site. Under cold standby status, fuel will be removed from the reactor and inspection and maintenance programs continued, the Energy Department said.

Related plutonium processing plants, which employ more than 3,000 Hanford workers, will be gradually phased out in the 1990s as the stockpiled plutonium is exhausted, Lawrence said.

The decision to close the reactor ended a period of uncertainty for local officials and plant workers.

"I'm just glad that we finally know what the decision is," said Richland Mayor John Poynor. "We'll survive this and come out stronger for it."

"The reality of it hasn't hit home yet," said Stan Waggoner, an N Reactor technician who learned of the decision as he came off the afternoon shift Tuesday.

Hanford was built in 1943 as part of the Manhattan Project to produce atomic bombs. The N Reactor began operations in 1963.

At more than 4,000 megawatts of thermal power, the N Reactor has the highest operating power of any U.S. reactor.

Violent, non-violent Palestinians would be on same boat

By JOHN RICE

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The 130 Palestinian deportees whose voyage home was aborted by the bombing of their ship this week include prominent Arab proponents of peace with Israel as well as others who advocate violence.

Most were expelled from their Israeli-occupied homeland without trial, under a process considered illegal by virtually every nation except Israel.

The Palestine Liberation Organization gathered the deportees and hundreds of observers in Athens for a trip back to Israel aboard a "ship of return."

Their goal was to focus attention on Israel's policy of exiling Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Participants said the voyage would have been probably the largest nonviolent action attempted by the PLO.

"We have chosen to go back with no guns, no explosives, not even any stones," said Mohammed Milhem, deported mayor of the West Bank city of Halhoul.

Israeli leaders had vowed to block the ship from reaching Israel's shores.

Monday, before the deportees could fly from Athens to the port of Limassol, Cyprus, to begin the protest voyage, an explosion left a hole below the waterline of the ferry bought for the trip. A day before, three PLO guerrillas were killed in a car bombing also in Limassol.

The PLO claims Israel was behind these actions.

The planned voyage carries echoes of the 1947 trip of the ship Exodus, in which Jewish refugees from Nazi death camps were turned back by British forces as they tried to reach Palestine.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had called the PLO-sponsored trip a "declaration of war" on Israel and branded participants as "terrorists and those who want to kill us, every one of us."

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said in 1985 that deportations were effective "for those who instigate and call for participation in terror, even though they themselves are not active."

The same 1945 British Mandate laws used by Israel for many of the deportations were applied against Shamir and other Israeli leaders who led guerrilla bands that assassinated and bombed British soldiers and Arabs in the 1940s.

The U.N. Security Council denounced the deportations in 1980 and again last month, saying they contravened the 1949 Geneva Convention.

"Their goal is to leave our people leaderless," said Abdul-Jawad Saleh, exiled in 1973, a year after his reelection as mayor of Al-Bireh.

Among those listed for the trip are the president of Bir Zeit University, the president of the Jerusalem Higher Islamic Council, the Jordanian mayor of Jerusalem, the deputy mayor of Jenin and the assistant Anglican archbishop of Jerusalem.

Milhem, expelled in 1980 and elected to the PLO Executive Committee in 1984, often has been suggested as a moderate Palestinian negotiator for Middle East peace talks.

Saleh described himself as "a nonviolent activist," and said he was never told specifically what triggered his deportation.

He recalled that Israeli military officials had summoned him to warn against founding agricultural cooperatives and ordered him to stop protesting on behalf of villagers outside Al-Bireh.

Like Milhem and many other exiles, Saleh said he favors acceptance of Israel alongside a Palestinian state.

Israelis open fire, killing one Palestinian

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers opened fire on Palestinian demonstrators in a West Bank village today, killing one with a shot through the heart and wounding four others, Arab reports and hospital officials said.

The clashes occurred at the village of Shuyukh, northeast of the city of Hebron, said the Arab-run Palestine Press Service.

The army said it was checking the report.

A 25-year-old Shuyukh resident was killed by a shot through the heart, said doctors at Aliya Hospital in Hebron. The Palestine Press Service identified the victim as Ismail Mohammed Hussein.

Aliya doctors also said they treated four Shuyukh residents for gunshot wounds in the legs and arms. They also treated four women for beating injuries.

The army today said seven Palestinians were wounded late Tuesday in clashes at the Fawwar refugee camp south of Hebron. Aliya Hospital officials said that, in addition to gunshot victims, they treated 12 Arabs who were injured by rubber bullets or beatings.

Also Tuesday, soldiers shot and wounded two Palestinians in the West Bank village of Kabatiyeh and a third in the nearby city of Jenin, hospital officials said. The army confirmed one protester was wounded in Kabatiyeh.

In another development, Transport Minister Chaim Corfu hinted Israel was involved in bombing the ferry that was to transport 130 deported Palestinians back to Israel. The Palestine Liberation Organization, which sponsored the voyage, has accused Israel of responsibility for the bombing Monday at the port of Limassol, Cyprus.

Corfu warned that if the PLO bought another ship for the trip, "its fate will be the same."

Speaking on Israel radio Tuesday, Corfu said: "We knew we wouldn't allow the boat to reach Israel. If we could prevent its departure, that was obviously the right thing to do."

Maj. Gen. Amram Mitzna, West Bank commander, told Israel Television Tuesday the situation in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip was "quiet," and noted: "Maybe the Limassol (bombing) has contributed to it."

Rabin Tuesday walked through the empty narrow streets of the Arab bazaar in Nablus, the largest West Bank city which was deserted because of a general strike that paralized Arab towns and neighborhoods. Israel Television showed Rabin talking to residents who complained of soldiers breaking into their homes.

During a Parliament debate Tuesday, Rabin was questioned about his policy of beating Palestinians to stop riots. He said the beating orders were necessary and "to the best of my knowledge and judgment, are legal."

"It's not my duty as defense minister to define beforehand what is an illegal order. I can only issue a legal order," he added.

Rabin said soldiers have exceeded orders "in many cases" and confirmed troops used a bulldozer earlier this month to bury alive four Arabs near Nablus. The Arabs were saved by other Palestinians.

The incident "will be treated with the full heaviness of the law. It's not imaginable that such an incident would happen in the Israeli army," Rabin said. "I'm convinced that army commanders and army authorities will do everything possible to bring those responsible for the incident to trial."

Maj. Gen. Ehud Barak, deputy chief of staff, said a sergeant-major and a non-commissioned officer were detained in connection with the incident.

"This pattern of behavior...is totally unacceptable under the standards of the Israeli Defense Forces and any civilized norms," Barak told reporters at a news conference in Jerusalem. "Whoever is found responsible for this event will be punished."

Barak said soldiers had no choice but to use beatings to try to curb nearly 2½ months of riots in the occupied lands.

He said more than 200 Israelis had been injured, most of them lightly, and that 53 Arabs had been killed since disturbances began Dec. 8. The United Nations puts the death toll at 54.

Barak, head of military intelligence from 1983 to 1986, said he saw no quick end to the disturbances.

"The whole thing is not stable," he said, adding that the unrest was caused by "decades of frustration on the personal, economic and political levels."

The Arab-run Palestine Press Service, meanwhile, said soldiers on Tuesday shot and wounded two Palestinians in the West Bank village of Kabatiyeh, 35 miles north of Jerusalem, and another in nearby Jenin. Jenin hospital doctors confirmed they had treated three men for gunshot wounds.

Army officials said troops wounded only one protester in Kabatiyeh after he tried to wrestle a gun away from a soldier.

Leading Israeli writers call for direct talks with Palestinians

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A group of leading Israeli writers called on the government to withdraw from the occupied territories and conduct direct negotiations with Palestinian leaders.

"I am in favor of a Palestinian state alongside Israel as early as tomorrow morning," author Amos Oz told more than 500 people who gathered to protest Israeli policy in the occupied lands.

"I am in favor of a Palestinian state...because that is the way to life. Other ways lead to death."

The Association of Israeli Playwrights organized Tuesday's gathering, which drew widely known actors, singers and poets, including several who had not previously expressed their views publicly on the unrest in the occupied lands.

One of them, poet Erez Biton, said that the riots in the occupied territories made it clear to him that through 20 years of Israeli occupation the Palestinians had become a nation.

"I think this is the first time I'm not too mad at the Palestinians," Biton said. "From their point of view, their behavior is absolutely one of honor."

The disturbances, which broke out Dec. 8, have intensified the controversy among Israelis about what to do with the territories captured during the 1967 Middle East war.

Both Israeli leaders advocate peace talks with Jordan and refuse to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which is outlawed in Israel as a terrorist group.

According to U.N. figures, the unrest has left 54 Palestinians dead, most by Israeli gunfire.

The army has used live bullets, then rubber ones and finally beatings to quell the protests. Israeli troops have wounded or severely beaten hundreds of Palestinians and more than 1,000 others been detained or jailed.

Oz said the Israeli crackdown on Palestinian demonstrators was increasing hatred between Arabs and Israelis. He predicted Israel's occupation would eventually collapse whether the two sides reach agreement or not.

Yehoshafat Harkabi, a lecturer at the Hebrew University, said Israelis and Arabs were beginning to realize they have no choice but to accept one another.

"The Arabs have learned that if the conflict continues it will become hell for both Israel and the Arab countries," said Harkabi, a former army intelligence chief. "Both the Palestinians and the Israelis will suffer because both are in the same boat."

Harkabi said Israel must start negotiating right away.

"The longer we wait, the worse the conditions will be," he said. "I realized long ago that if Israel adopts a moderate policy we will achieve the best possible terms."

Oz said peace advocates must persuade Likud voters to vote for left-wing parties in elections scheduled for the fall.

"We must try to talk seriously with the many people in Israel who are afraid to give (the West bank towns of) Nablus, Hebron and Ramallah back to the Arabs because they are afraid the Arabs will chase us out of Haifa as well," Oz said.

"The feelings are complicated. They include an element of genuine fear, historical trauma, many years of Palestinian threats and an element of right-wing demagogy," he said.

British anti-homosexual measure likely to become law

LONDON (AP) — The House of Lords defeated a bid to water down legislation restricting the promotion of homosexuality by local governments, making it virtually certain the measure will become law.

The Lords, the unelected upper chamber of Parliament, voted 90-48 Tuesday night to defeat an amendment to legislation regulating local government powers.

The restriction on promoting homosexuality is included in a legislative package proposed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative administration.

The vote represented the legislation's last parliamentary hurdle and the package has been penciled in for entry onto the statute books on June 1. The package only needs to complete a formal final reading in Parliament for it to become law.

The bill stipulates that local authorities — which run public libraries, some theaters and most state schools — must not "intentionally promote homosexuality." Authorities that defy the ban can be sued by individuals or penalized by auditors for misusing funds, according to the legislation.

The amendment defeated by the House of Lords sought to limit the ban on promoting homosexuality to one area only — state-owned schools.

A Labor Party member, Lord Willis, also tried to include wording saying the proposed law is not a license to discriminate against homosexuals, but his effort failed when the time allotted for debate ran out.

Arguing for the measure, Home Office Minister Lord Caithness said "gay pride" programs and the promotion of gay rights in youth clubs run by some local authorities sought to glamorize homosexuality.

"Young people are susceptible to these intolerable influences...Activities such as a Lesbian Gay Strength and Pride Week are, in the government's view, at least as likely to glamorize homosexuality in the minds of impressionable young people as anything a teacher might do," he said.

Lord Longford of the socialist opposition Labor Party told the House of Lords the measure smacked of a "general queer-bashing campaign."

Soviets dismantle missiles

BERLIN (AP) — The Soviet Union has started dismantling some of its missiles in East Germany although a superpower treaty scrapping intermediate-range nuclear missiles has not been ratified, a news agency reported.

ADN, East Germany's state-run news agency, said missiles stationed in Waren, 20 miles west of Neubrandenburg, have been taken apart, put in crates and are ready for transport back to the Soviet Union.

"With this step we can make an important contribution toward disarmament even before the treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union is ratified," ADN said Tuesday night.

The Communist Party daily newspaper Neues Deutschland today printed a front-page report on the preparations for early removal of the missiles. Neubrandenburg is north of Berlin.

President Reagan and Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed the treaty in Washington last December, agreeing to eliminate all land-based, medium- and shorter-range missiles.

Mexico to aid bean growers

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — About 70 farmers who had camped out in front of the state capitol planned to clean up the plaza and go home after the government promised to help bean growers.

Farmers in northern Chihuahua also responded to the government pledge Tuesday by vacating dozens of grain warehouses that had been taken over in a 51-day protest for higher corn and bean prices, said the Rev. Camilo Perez, leader of the Chihuahua Peasant Organizations Front.

Perez said that he and another priest, the Rev. Rene Blanco of Ciudad Juarez, had ended their 10-day hunger strikes in support of the farmers.

Although final terms have yet to be negotiated, the state government promised Monday to help bean growers who produce low yields on nonirrigated lands under the government's "ejido," or communal farm system.

Perez said the farmers would get either cash or government coupons to be exchanged for food and other necessities under the agreement.

Reporters claim harassment

GENEVA (AP) — Journalists have received widespread persecution and harassment, executives of three leading international organizations defending press freedom told the U.N. Human Rights Commission on Tuesday.

The reports marked the first concerted move to have examination of such abuses placed before the 43-nation panel.

First Sea World resident has whale of a time in new San Antonio home

By MARK LEWIS
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Sea World welcomed its first permanent resident Monday when Shamu the killer whale splashed down at Kelly Air Force Base in a Boeing 747 before slipping into something more comfortable — her new 7 million-gallon home.

"It's the largest (marine-mammal habitat) in the world — other than the oceans, of course," Sea World of Texas Chairman George Becker said as his 4,600-pound tenant was lowered into her new home just before dusk.

Shamu took a quick tour of the tank, accepted a few pounds of fish from her trainer and then playfully splashed news photographers by slapping her tail on the surface.

"She's already over there soliciting for more attention," Sea World General Curator Glenn Young said. "She's a veteran performer."

The 16½-foot-long whale had been flown from San Diego in a portable tank, along with four smaller whales, four dolphins and three sea lions.

The portable tank, when filled with salt water and Shamu, weighed 32,000 pounds, Sea World spokesman Bob McCullough said.

"Not a window seat, necessarily, but first-class — absolutely first-class," McCullough quipped as Sea World employees gingerly lowered the portable tank from the jetliner to the flatbed truck that ferried the huge mammal to her new home in Northwest Bexar County.

Air Force Maj. Gen. Lewis Curtis, who commands the Air Logistics Center at Kelly, watched as the largest living creature ever to grace the Kelly tarmac rolled away toward her new home.

Like many recent immigrants to Texas, Shamu is a refugee from the Rust Belt — specifically, from Ohio, where she once had performed at the Sea World there.

"She's been performing for the past eight years," Young said.

The whale was captured near Iceland in 1978, and is thought to be between 10 and 12 years old.

The life span of killer whales is estimated at 30 to 35 years, Young said.

Shamu shortly will be joined in her huge tank by two other killer whales — Namu, a male, and Kandu, another female, as the park ships in 75 marine mammals, 220 penguins, 200 flamingos, 50 sharks and more than 2,000 tropical fish in preparation for its April 15 opening.

The killer whales will consume between 180 and 200 pounds of fish per day between training sessions in their tank, which will be maintained with a constant water temperature of 55 degrees.

The habitat is comprised of three connecting tanks, with the deepest one doubling as the stage for the 4,500-seat Shamu Stadium.

After the plane landed at 3:45 p.m., it took almost three hours to get Shamu safely sequestered in her pool.

STATE IN BRIEF

Restaurant fined over aliens

AUSTIN (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service has fined a San Antonio Mexican restaurant chain $4,500 for allegedly hiring 21 illegal aliens found working in restaurants in Austin and San Antonio last fall.

INS agents last Oct. 22 arrested 21 employees and two customers, all of whom were in the country illegally, at five Taco Cabana locations.

Gary Renick, assistant INS district director for investigations, Tuesday said Taco Cabana Inc. has until March 12 to decide whether to pay the fine, set by the INS Washington headquarters, or appeal it to an administrative law judge.

"We think the fine is very reasonable in light of our initial recommendation to Washington," Renick said, who would not disclose the fine his office recommended.

Patrick Thomas, Taco Cabana corporate counsel, said, "We've not reached any conclusion, so what we're saying at this time is we can't admit or deny any of the allegations."

Citrus blockade challenged

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Citrus Mutual will challenge Texas' blockade on shipments of fresh citrus from the Sunshine State in federal court, an association executive said.

The Mutual, representing 12,000 state growers, plans to bring its suit this week in Texas, executive vice president Bobby F. McKown said Tuesday.

Citrus-producing states were off-limits to Florida growers for 3½ years because of a citrus canker outbreak in the state. But the U.S. Department of Agriculture said last week that Florida could resume fruit shipments to other citrus producers, such as Texas.

Thrilled Florida growers are preparing to make shipments to the $25 million in markets in California, Arizona, Louisiana and Texas.

But Texas agricultural officials, saying they feared canker could be shipped into their state, Monday imposed a 30-day emergency embargo on shipments of Florida fruit.

Dallas museum behind tour

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Museum of Art said Tuesday it is organizing an international tour of the Patsy and Raymond Nasher Collection of modern sculptures.

The exhibit, organized by the Dallas museum and based on an exhibition that appeared in Dallas and at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., will have its European premier in Madrid April 6 at the Centro de Arte Reina Sofia.

Subsequent showings will be held in Florence, beginning in July, and in Munich, beginning in November. The tour will end February 1989.

"It's fairly well known around the country that the Nasher collection is, very simply, the best collection of modern sculpture in private hands anywhere," said Steven Nash, chief curator of the Dallas museum.

"The collection stretches over about one century — about 100 years of the history of modern sculpture — from the late 19th century Rodin...up to the very present, to some of the youngest, most experimental and development trends .

140 CARD OF THANKS

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven" these are words given us by God. The fact that we don't and can't understand, only under lines our dependence on our comforter and savior at times like these.

Words can't express our heartfelt 'thank you' for the support of our family and friends at this time. For their many gifts of flowers, food and arms to hold us with love, to share our cross. But we do know God will bless each one and all.

Our Jenalee has found 'her peace in the storm' and is safe with Jesus.

Our heartfelt thanks, The family of Jenalee Dawn Frazier
