FRANCE PREPARES COUNTER PLAN ON WAR DEBT

Commission Opens Search For New City Manager For Wichita Falls

Home Town Talk

By B. D. D.

The Benjamin Post reports the Knox county jail empty for the first time this year and views the departure of the temporary guests with regret for during their stay they had kept the courthouse and grounds in excellent condition. "Believing in giving even the devil his dues," says The Post, "we can truthfully say that these were model prisoners, gentlemen that any jail should be proud to have in their possession and so it is with regret we see them leave for greener pastures."

This item is followed by an announcement that the county judge will assess as his lowest fine, $50, against those found guilty of driving a car while intoxicated.

The time was when it was nothing unusual for jails in "dry" counties in Texas to be tenantless. Many of us who worked for prohibition in the old days believed it would empty most of the jails throughout the land. There has been disappointment in this but we can reflect we have never had prohibition.

Last week this Talker drove nearly 300 miles down through western Texas through a section that only a year ago was in the grip of one of the worst drouths it had ever experienced. Everywhere on the hills and over the prairies he saw luxuriant grass, cattle so fat they could hardly walk, fields of wheat and oats thickly shocked and cotton and other row crops getting a good start.

It was hard to realize that in the midst of such plenty there should be any shortage of money or any one in want. Talker still can't make himself believe there is anybody hungry in that territory but he must believe there is a lack of money.

A good many flour mills are offering flour and bran and shorts in exchange for wheat. This practice was quite common in an earlier day, but when prices of grain were high fell into disuse. Low prices for grain have brought its revival.

The modern era of manufacturing and business resulted in the abandonment of many of the old customs and practices and even brought into question some of the sound principles that had governed business of an older era. The present depression is in turn putting to question some of the modern practices that supplanted the old.

Talker saw city firemen out on Avenue Q last night fighting flames almost with their bare hands. At least they were fighting fire with a water pressure that forced them to thrust the nozzle of the fire hose into the flames to get the water upon them. As the readers of this column have been reminded before there is considerable area in the western part of the city without adequate water pressure in dry and hot weather for satisfactory domestic service to say nothing of the emergency of fire.

FORT WORTH COUNCIL PICKS GEO. FAIRTRACE

Wichitan Selected for Post From Group of 44 Applicants

ACCEPT RESIGNATION

Council to Name Temporary Manager if Place Is Unfilled July 1

Steps toward the selection of a new city manager for Wichita Falls will be taken at once by members of the city council, it was announced Tuesday afternoon by Mayor Walter Nelson Jr., following the resignation of George D. Fairtrace, city manager here since April, 1928, to accept a similar post at Fort Worth on or about July 1.

Applicants for the post to be vacated soon by Mr. Fairtrace should file written applications at once with Mayor Nelson, it was stated. Those who are to receive consideration will be notified and asked to appear before the city council at an early date, it was said. It was revealed that since Mr. Fairtrace first learned of his consideration by the Fort Worth council several days ago, a number of individuals have made known to city officials their intention of filing applications for the managerial post. No names of such tentative applicants were revealed, however.

Council Meets

At an unofficial meeting of the council held Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Fairtrace announced his intention of accepting the position at Fort Worth, and expressed his desire of getting to his new field of work by July 1 if possible. According to Mayor Nelson, conditions in the city government are in excellent shape, and will permit Mr. Fairtrace to relinquish his responsibilities here within a few days.

Announcement from Fort Worth of Mr. Fairtrace's selection was made Tuesday afternoon by William Bryce, mayor of that city, following an executive luncheon at the Fort Worth club. The position will pay a salary of $12,000, it was said. The resignation of O. E. Carr, city manager at Fort Worth for several years, will take effect next Saturday in order that he may accept a like position at Oakland, Calif.

In the event that no successor to Mr. Fairtrace is selected by July 1 or shortly thereafter, it was announced, a temporary arrangement within the city council will be made

The old chief was wounded 15 times in his tempestuous life. He started many revolts by his tribe against the Diaz government. He joined General Obregon in the revolution of 1913, his warriors at that time carrying bows and arrows.

WASHINGTON, June 23. (INS)—A new international plan aimed at restoring the monetary value of silver was presented to President Hoover and the federal reserve board today by Senator Reed Smoot, Republican, of Utah, chairman of the senate finance committee.

Smoot said it would not be made public for the present, until the president and members of the reserve board have an opportunity to examine it.

They Face Murder Trial Today

CECIL CROSBY

BILL GUESS

Two former deputy sheriffs at Ardmore go to trial Wednesday morning for the slaying of two Mexican college students, members of leading Mexican families, shot to death beside their car at Ardmore early in June. Oklahoma City, Washington, and Mexico City officials have pushed the prosecution.

Prosecutors of Two Nations Join In Ardmore Deputies' Trial Today

Former Officers to Ask Separate Trials in Death of Two Mexican College Students

ARDMORE, Okla., June 22. (AP)—A murder trial of international tinge begins here tomorrow—to decide if two erstwhile deputy sheriffs are liable to the law for killing the cousin of Mexico's president and his college chum.

Tonight it appeared that the talents of a sizable prosecution staff from the two republics might be first directed at William (Bill) Guess, who has taken responsibility for the actual shooting of Emilio Cortes Rubio, cousin of President Ortiz Rubio and Manuel Garcia Gomez, with whom he was traveling homeward from college in the United States. J. B. Champion, chief defense counsel, announced a severance would be sought in the trial of Guess and Cecil Crosby, another deputy and that if it is granted, Guess would stand trial first.

Crowds Gather

Tomorrow's trial already has drawn scores here, some of them telegraphing and writing for "reservations" in the little courtroom which seats about 230. Here Clara Smith Hamon won her freedom 11 years ago in the killing of Jake Hamon, prospective member of the Harding cabinet.

John B. Ogden, at 33 years one of Oklahoma's youngest district judges, will preside.

The defendants have been free on $25,000 bond each. They are typical Southern Oklahoma peace officers.

Venire Drawn

Both are taciturn, handy with a gun. Both are in their thirties and Guess, six months ago, was cleared of the fatal shooting of an accused slayer in Texas. Crosby said today they were the "goats" because of circumstances. Both were anxious for trial, they said.

A special venire of 110 prospective jurors has been drawn.

COMRADE TO ATTEND TRIAL

ARDMORE, Okla., June 23. (AP)—"I have no bitterness toward officers here," said Salvador Cortes Rubio, young Mexican student who came here today as the chief state witness in the trial tomorrow of two former peace officers for the slaying of his college companions, Emilio Cortes Rubio and Manuel Gomez.

Cortes Rubio, like the slain youth, a kinsman of the Mexican president, arrived in Ardmore with his sister, Lucille, 18.

"My father thought it best that I come back," he said. He refused to let me attend my friends' funerals."

The youth said he planned to return next fall to St. Benedict's college at Atchison, Kan. His sister will begin her first year's schooling in the United States at the same time.

He conferred late today with prosecutors.

GIRL FLIER FALLS

AKRON, Ohio, June 23. (AP)—Mildred Stinaff, Akron, girl aviator who set a world's looping record for women about a year ago, was injured fatally here tonight when her plane crashed near the Akron airport. She died a few hours later in Akron City hospital.

Miss Stinaff was flying a plane of the Air Services corporation about 1,500 feet above the airport when it went into a tailspin and dived to the ground. She was about 19 years old.

Mrs. F. C. Rochon New Head of State Group

DALLAS, June 23. (AP)—At a meeting of Texas Women's Municipal Golf association officials here today, the 1932 state championship tournament was awarded to Wichita Falls. Fort Worth and Wichita Falls made bids for the tournament. Mrs. F. C. Rochon of Wichita Falls was elected president of the association for the coming year.

100 TO PARTICIPATE IN TOURNAMENT

Approximately 100 of the state's leading golfers are expected to participate in the tournament of the Texas Women's Municipal Golf association to be held here in 1932, William Strachan, municipal professional, said Tuesday night.

Mrs. F. C. Rochon, who was elected president of the association Tuesday following the tourney held at Dallas, officially extended Wichita Falls' bid for the 1932 meet. The Weeks Park Women's Golf association will be hostess club to the tournament next year and will select the date of the meeting at an early gathering of officials on the return of Mrs. Rochon, it was said.

Victim of Father's Gun Unable To Describe Amarillo Suicide

AMARILLO, Texas, June 23. (AP)—With her head and face battered with blows from the butt of a rifle and a bullet lodged in her right jaw, Josephine Loden, 13, was still unable late today to recount what happened this morning in the family residence here when her step-father, Ray Loden, 30, attacked her, then took his own life with a revolver.

Although the girl was in a critical condition late today, physicians said she probably would recover. Her scalp was cut in several places and her face was scarred, perhaps permanently, from the beating which her step-father administered before firing at her. The lacerations were so severe, it was believed at first that an axe was used.

The one bullet that struck her—no one knows whether it was fired from the rifle or the revolver—hit back of her right ear and lodged in her jaw.

After Josephine had fallen on the front doorstep, Loden shot himself through the head with a revolver, dying instantly.

DEFENSE CALLS WITNESS IN DONOHOE TRIAL

Attorneys Attempt to Show Walden Victim Of 'Gang' Row

OFFICERS TESTIFY

Circumstances of Slaying Told by Wilbarger Residents

Introduction of defense testimony in the third trial of Verner Donohue, charged with the murder of Herman Walden in Wilbarger county in February, 1929, began late Tuesday afternoon before Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th district court after a score of witnesses had been examined by the state during the day in the construction of a circumstantial case.

It was predicted by attorneys in the case that all of Wednesday morning will be required to complete the introduction of evidence. The state will probably re-open its case at the opening of court at 9 a. m., according to Sam B. Spence, district attorney. Numerous defense witnesses also are to be examined, it was said.

Many Witnesses

Many citizens of Wichita and Wilbarger counties, and officers connected with the case, were used by the prosecution Tuesday to reconstruct the chain of circumstantial evidence by which the state seeks to establish the guilt of the defendant.

Ed Whittenburg, oil field worker in the Hilltop area south of Harrold, was the first witness presented, and told of seeing Walden and Donohue together on the Sunday night preceding the discovery of Walden's partially decomposed body in a nearby pasture on Feb. 15. On Sunday night, he testified, he overheard loud talking between Walden and the defendant. Donohue at that time had a shotgun in his hands, and ordered Whittenburg, who approached, to keep back, according to the testimony offered.

Upon Donohue's direction, the witness continued, Walden got into the defendant's car, and after talking for some minutes, the two drove away with two other men also in the automobile. The witness said he saw Walden's body on the following Friday, after it had been found by officers. He said there was a shotgun wound in the chest.

W. H. Sneed stated that he was in a cafe at Hilltop late Sunday night before the alleged killing when the defendant entered. Donohue inquired whether or not the witness had seen Walden, according to the testimony, and lifted Sneeds' hat, saying, "I thought at first you were Walden. It's a good

Wife Gives Link In Case Against Quinn

NEWKIRK, Okla., June 23. (AP)—Mrs. Jean Quinn, who has been active in an attempt to save her husband, Earl Quinn, from possible death in the electric chair, for the slaying of Jessie and Zexia Griffiths, sisters and school teachers, was instrumental in the discovery of one of the most damaging links of evidence against him, it was testified today at Quinn's preliminary hearing.

Charles Wagoner, chief of police at Tonkawa, near where the bodies of the slain sisters were found on a highway last Dec. 28, testified that Mrs. Quinn directed him to the spot where the pistol allegedly used in the slaying was found.

An outstanding witness of the day was J. F. Griffith, father of the slain girls, and who is a police captain at Blackwell. He wept as he told of his daughters leaving home early in the morning of Dec. 28, after having spent their Christmas holidays at home. A few hours after they had started back to their schools, their bodies were found.

TEXARKANA, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Carl Bell, 24, of Ida, La., was found not guilty on a charge of dynamiting the $500,000 highway bridge over the Red river at Garland City, Ark., by a jury in Miller county circuit court here late today. The jury deliberated but 30 minutes.

Throughout the day the defense sought to establish an alibi for Bell, and to repudiate the testimony offered by Charley Brown, 25, of Lewisville, Ark., who as a state witness, testified Bell induced him to enter a plot to blast the bridge.

Oklahoma Fliers Soar Over North Atlantic With Berlin As Goal

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., June 23. (AP)—The Winnie Mae was winging its way over the Atlantic tonight bearing Wiley Post and Harold Gatty toward Europe on the second lap of their projected round-the-world flight.

The sturdy craft took off from here for Germany at 4:57 daylight time this afternoon, three hours and 40 minutes after concluding a fast flight from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., to Harbor Grace.

HAROLD GATTY

The fliers had breakfast in New York and luncheon here. They took only sandwiches with them and hoped to have their next real meal in Berlin.

They left Roosevelt Field at 3:56 eastern standard time this morning and made the 1,200-mile hop here in six hours, 52 minutes. This was an average of considerably more than 150 miles an hour they hope to maintain in order to realize their ambition of smashing the 22-day globe circling record of the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin.

WILEY POST

As they left they said they expected to cover the 2,860 miles between here and Berlin in 19 hours, three minutes.

Those extra three minutes indicate just how closely the long flight has been planned. Between Harbor Grace and German capital there are 13 positions marked on their flying map for compass checks. They also will check their actual time of arrival at those points with the scheduled time of arrival in hours and minutes.

Pilot One-Eyed

All the flying will be done by Post, a one-eyed veteran who sits alone in the cramped forward cockpit of the white single motored monoplane.

In the navigator's compartment Gatty will watch the instruments, operate the radio and keep Post informed of their position and whether or not they are maintaining their schedule. They will communicate by means of messages pulled back and forth on a string.

Gatty planned to send the call letters of the ship, KHRDW, every hour on the hour, as an "all's well" signal. The radio set transmits on a 35.5 meter wave and receives between 500 and 900 meters.

Reveals Delay

Post and Gatty stayed here just long enough to fuel up for their long flight and eat the last full meal they will have until they reach Berlin. They left behind them Otto Hilligand Holger Hoisila, who arrived here before them in preparation for an Atlantic crossing, but who decided to delay their takeoff until tomorrow.

It was learned from New York that the weather was clear today for the first part of the ocean journey of the Winnie Mae but over

Parents' Worries Win Parole for Students

KANSAS CITY, June 23. (AP)—Edward E. Tate and George Tooley Jr. were back home today after serving two weeks of six-month terms in the Johnson county, Kansas, jail for possessing and transporting liquor which officers said was intended for a fraternity party at Lawrence.

Tate and Tooley, University of Kansas students at the time of their arrest last Feb. 2, were paroled yesterday after it was testified that Tooley's father, Dr. George Tooley Sr., had suffered a collapse and his mother had lost 25 pounds worrying over their son's incarceration.

Railroad Wins Right To Gyp Deposit Line

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—The Interstate Commerce commission today held that the Houston and Texas Central Railroad company was the proper company to build a line to the rich gypsum and salt deposits in Harris county, Texas.

The Warren Central also had applied for permission to build a line to the deposits.

withheld at the request of the low bidder, J. W. Sempter of Amarillo who asked to withdraw his bid because of error. The project was for 17.2 miles of concrete paving on highway 75 from the Collingsworth county line to Wheeler.

Highway officials were undecided about awarding the contract to the next lowest bidder or cancelling all bids and readvertising the project.

The contracts were awarded on an average of 21 per cent less than the estimated cost. Sixteen months ago the average of the awards under the estimates was between eight and 10 per cent, officials said.

The awards included:

Motley county—21.6 miles grading and drainage structures from Matador to Hall county line on highway 18, Huddleston Construction company, Crosbyton, $62,582.

Cottle county—8.2 miles concrete paving from Paducah, north on highway 4, L. E. Whitham, Wichita Falls, $127,583.

NATION FIGHTS FOR TIME TO ANSWER OFFER

Plan Would Involve U. S. In Prolonged Series Of Negotiations

HOOVER CONCERNED

President to Stand On 'No Modification' Ultimatum

By GEORGE W. HINMAN JR.

PARIS, June 23. (US)—An official indication of France's attitude to President Hoover's one-year debt holiday will be forwarded to Washington tomorrow night, following a meeting of the French cabinet, Premier Pierre Lavelle tonight informed the American ambassador, Walter E. Edge.

The premier, in conference with cabinet members tonight, had tentatively formulated a counter proposal to the Hoover plan. Details of this new plan will be further discussed at a full cabinet meeting tomorrow.

Meanwhile France is marshalling her forces against acceptance of the project of President Hoover in its present form.

The French order of battle, it is learned definitely from government sources, aims at two objectives:

1. To avoid payment of debts to the United States and Great Britain while simultaneously conserving "unconditional" reparations from Germany; and

Note Prepared

2. To take advantage of the Hoover pronouncement so as to involve the United States inextricably in prolonged negotiations relative to debts and reparations with the idea of achieving ultimate cancellation of debts while preserving the greatest possible share of reparations.

To gain these two objectives, France seeks, by a note which will be submitted to the cabinet tomorrow, to postpone final decision as long as possible and meanwhile elaborating counter-proposals so as to prolong the discussions.

At the same time, there is re-

There is great fear that the United States may have the finishing blow in the form of a series of notes addressed to accepting powers such as England and Italy, declaring:

"Since you are granting a moratorium to your debtors, we grant you a moratorium for one year."

Not receiving such notification, France would stand alone as the only great power obligated to continue payments to the United States and Great Britain, or else risk grave impairment of credit standing.

HOOVER BOTHERED BY RUMORS

WASHINGTON, June 23. (US)—Although the United States has informal assurances that France will accept the proposal of President Hoover for a one-year suspension of all war debt payments, the attitude of that government is causing President Hoover much concern.

At the White House and the state department today there was much apprehension over reports that the French government will make a counter proposal rather than accept the Hoover proposal for suspension of all reparations payments for the one year.

Any move to modify the Hoover plan or change it, however, will be unacceptable to the United States. The French have been so informed. France has been told that the whole plan is predicated upon the suspension of "all" war debt payments for one year in the hope that this will give Germany and the world an opportunity to recover from the depression.

Any alternative proposal, it was stated, will upset the whole plan.

President Hoover today continued his negotiations on the assumption that the proposal for a moratorium will meet with the approval of the powers.

He desires to be in a position to pledge quick action upon the part of the United States when congress meets in December and today adopted the unprecedented policy of asking all members of congress to declare if they favor the plan.

To offset any suspicion in foreign quarters that congress would not support the presidential proposal when it meets, it was said that the president desires to be in a position

Panhandle Grain Men's Spokesman Demands Farm Board Statement

AMARILLO, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Acting in the interest of Panhandle grain men, Congressman Marvin Jones today wired the federal farm board for a definite statement that it would not place any wheat on the market this year.

"Announcement by the farm board that it would not put any wheat under its control on the market this year would hike the price of wheat now being paid farmers at least 10 cents a bushel," Harry Mitchell, Booker grain dealer, said.

"If such an action is taken, it must be done at once," Mitchell said. "In some parts of Texas the 1931 crop is already out of the hands of the farmers. If the farm board wants to help the farmers, now is the time to act."

Congressman Jones sent telegrams to James C. Stone, chairman, and Gov. Sam McKelvie, wheat member of the board. He also wired senators and members of congress throughout the wheat belts of Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, asking them to join the movement.

Cities and chambers of commerce throughout the Panhandle will be asked to send telegrams to the farm board.

FLIERS SOAR OVER ATLANTIC

Oklahoma Pair Set Off For Berlin

more than two-thirds of the course the sky was overcast with occasional showers. Gatty is an expert at instrument flying however, and there was little doubt among flying men that he could guide Post through the thickest flying weather.

Named for Girl

The scheduled course to Berlin lies along the great circle to the northern tip of Ireland, across Scotland and England and over the North Sea to Germany. If the weather is bad, however, when Ireland is reached the fliers will swing southward to the coast of France and then up to Germany.

The Winnie Mae is named for a daughter of F. C. Hall, of Chickasha, Okla., a wealthy oil operator. Mrs. Hall, who died in September, 1930, suggested the flight and Hall assumed its financing to carry out her wish.

Post entered Hall's employ several years ago after a period of barnstorming. He learned to fly in 1924, going up solo after one hour and 40 minutes of instruction. His log now shows 3,100 hours of solo flying. He was a participant in the 1929 Ford air tour and later a Lockheed tester.

Won Derby

Flying the same ship now winging the Atlantic, Post last September won the non-stop derby from Los Angeles to the national air races at Chicago.

Post was born in Grand Plain, Texas. He is 32 years old. His parents, William and May Post, now live in Maysville, Okla. He was married in June, 1927, to Miss May Lane, of Sweetwater, Texas. They have no children.

Gatty, trained in the royal Australian naval college and in commercial shipping for six years, was with Harold Bromley in an attempted Japan-to-America flight last September. They had been up more than 25 hours and were 1,200 miles at sea when a broken exhaust ring forced them back. Gatty was in bed two months suffering from carbon monoxide gas poisoning.

He is regarded as one of the best navigators in the country and was Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh's trainer. He has written several important textbooks on navigation, with collaborators, and independently has penned many magazine articles on marine and aerial observation.

Retiring from the sea in 1927 he opened a navigation school at Los Angeles with a branch in San Diego.

A native of Australia, he is 28 and his home is in Los Angeles. His wife is the former Miss Vera McCulloch, of Sydney, and he has three sons. His parents live in Lasmania.

The Gatty-Post plane is a Lockheed Vega, driven by Wasp engine of 425 rated horsepower and developing 590 with a 1-to-10 supercharger.

that anything was wrong until she saw her sister collapse on the doorstep. Mrs. Loden had gone to work at a home laundry, taking two small children with her.

Josephine went into the house to change her dress, Lillian said. She was gone only a few minutes. No one saw what happened inside. J. W. Lindsey Jr., 7, said he saw the girl try to break through a rear window, her face and head bleeding.

Mrs. Loden expressed the belief that her husband, despondent over not having a job and a recent liquor law conviction, had become mentally deranged and was preparing to commit suicide when surprised by the girl. The stepdaughters said Loden worked until 10 o'clock cleaning his guns.

Loden, who formerly was a telephone lineman, had been out of work about four months. He was recently fined $500 in federal court for violating the liquor laws, but took a pauper's oath after serving 30 days and was released last Wednesday.

Evans to Open Second Drug Store At Ninth and Broad Wednesday

MARSHALL EVANS

The Evans Drug store No. 2, located at Ninth and Broad, will be formally opened Wednesday, according to an announcement Tuesday by Marshall Evans.

Mr. Evans, the owner, has been connected with the drug business in Wichita Falls for more than 10 years. For the past six years he has been associated with his father, J. A. Evans, at Evans pharmacy, located at the intersection of Hayes street and the Seymour road.

The public is invited to inspect the complete line of standard drugs and sundries which Wichita Falls' newest, modernly equipped pharmacal establishment will carry. An up-to-date soda fountain, equipped to dispense the latest in sundry innovations, will feature curb service. Martha Washington candies will be sold as a specialty in this new Evans drug store.

Included in the efficient personnel assisting Mr. Evans are T. J. Dubose, Roy Sonamaker and M. R. Sanson, all of whom are well known to drug store patrons in Wichita Falls.

Business Opportunities of Wichita Praised by Visitor From Oklahoma

Wichita Falls has justified the confidence of W. L. Buck & Co., which located a branch of the wholesale barber supply business here six months ago, with an exceptionally gratifying volume of sales, W. L. Buck, proprietor, of the concern, told The Record News Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Buck are spending several days in Wichita Falls to inspect the branch firm here.

"Our business in Wichita Falls," Mr. Buck declared, "has surpassed our fondest expectations. Naturally, at the time we opened our new business in this territory, we were advised strongly against it. At first we were inclined to listen to this pessimistic advice, more especially since considerable capital was necessary in this new enterprise and a complete sales and office organization had to be used in opening a new business here.

"However, we decided that conditions couldn't be as bad as some tried to paint them, and we went right ahead with our plans.

"Our confidence in Wichita Falls has been more than justified and we can say with all truthfulness that we have seldom had a new branch show the successful sales volume that is had from our Wichita Falls branch, and right from the start.

"In my opinion, the business is here and all that is required to get it is more of this confidence in our local market with plenty of good earnest effort. As a matter of fact, this is probably true of most any section in the United States at this time. The trouble with most of us is that we take bad business for granted and don't really get out after the good business."

After spending a few days here, Mr. and Mrs. Buck will motor to the West coast, to Canada, from where they will return to Oklahoma City, where the W. L. Buck & Co. headquarters are located.

of Wichita Falls is chosen city manager of Fort Worth. There were more than 40 applicants for the position but Mr. Fairtrace was chosen without having filed an application. It was a case of the job seeking the man rather than the man seeking the job. The compensation is a very substantial increase over the salary Mr. Fairtrace has been receiving in Wichita Falls.

Mr. Fairtrace has made a splendid record as city manager for Wichita Falls. Under his management an overdraft in the city's finances has been changed to a substantial balance, the net indebtedness of the city has been considerably reduced, the budget has been balanced even during a period when receipts from taxes have been heavily reduced. It has taken cool thinking and a steady hand to do all of these things and a multitude of others which stand to the credit of his administration.

Wichita Falls will likely appreciate George Fairtrace more after he has gone than while he has been among us but this isn't saying we cannot find a man to carry on his work. We hope we can be as lucky as Fort Worth. Fort Worth had a city manager who was regarded as one of the ablest in the entire country. He recently resigned to accept a similar job at Oakland, Calif. Now they have a man in Fairtrace whom those who have been closest to the city government believe is equally good. Maybe Wichita Falls can have equally good luck.

Turman Charged With Kidnaping His Children

FORT WORTH, June 23. (AP)—The two children of L. C. Turman, oil man, L. C. Jr. and Thomas, were spirited away from the home of their grandmother, Mrs. R. E. L. Braford, today after the latter was knocked down.

Authorities are searching for Turman and the children. A charge of kidnaping has been filed against Turman.

According to the story Mrs. Bradford told the district attorney's department, a man came into the house, knocked her down and ran after the children who fled. Finally he caught them, put them in an automobile and drove away.

COURT TOLD OF SLAYING

Testimony Opens in Trial Of Donohoe

thing you are not; I want my money." The defendant was said to have been carrying a shotgun at that time.

Under cross-questioning by the defense, Sneed admitted that he had been discharged from a state hospital when 16 years old, having gone there for an operation on his head. He also admitted having been tried for murder in Wilbarger county several years ago, but declared that he was acquitted before Judge J. V. Leake, chief counsel for the defense in the present case.

Borrowed Gun

E. C. (Buddy) Hall, also an oil field worker, told of Donohue's having come to his home near Hilltop on Sunday night and asking for a gun. The defendant was said to have declared that he had been robbed of more than $100, and knew two of the men who did it. According to the witness, Donohue declared he had a gun for himself, but wanted another weapon for one of his companions.

About midnight Sunday, Jack Forbes testified, he found Donohue and Walden in the defendant's car, stuck in a ditch between Hilltop and Vernon, and pulled them out. H. M. Henderson stated that on Monday morning he was called to a point about a quarter of a mile from where Walden's body later was found, and pulled Donohue's car out of a ditch.

Recovery of the body from the pasture on the following Friday morning was described by H. M. Henderson, Vernon undertaker, who said the body was frozen and considerably decomposed. A shotgun wound was found just above the heart, he said. The undertaker also testified that several No. 6 or 7 shot, and pieces of wadding, were removed from the wound. These items were introduced as evidence by the state.

Constable R. H. Bratton told of finding shot, wadding and pieces of blue serge cloth in a hole in the ground under the body. He stated that one shot apparently had clipped an edge of the man's trouser leg and entered the ground without touching the body. Three empty shotgun shells, said to have been found near the spot, together with shot and wadding, were introduced by the state. Mr. Bratton also testified that tracks of an automobile, showing the rear wheels equipped with chains, were found about 75 feet from the dead man's body, and led around the slope to the point where Donohue's car was found in the ditch, about a quarter of a mile away.

H. L. Coleman, civil engineer of Vernon, described his preparation of a map showing the terrain surrounding the spot where Walden's body was found, and declared that the ditch above and below the spot where Donohue's body was found was of such nature than an automobile could not have crossed it.

Sheriff R. L. Wray of Wilbarger county told of having examined the ground in that vicinity on Thursday, the day before the body was found, while making a search for Walden. He declared his belief that the car found in the ditch could have reached that position only by coming near the spot where the body was found. Sheriff Wray also told of coming to the location on Friday morning when advised that the body had been found. Tracks from the point where Donohoe's car had been pulled from the ditch back-tracked towards the site on which the body lay, he said.

Gun on Display

John D. Chester, deputy sheriff in Wilbarger county in the early part of 1929, told of having gone with the defendant's brother to Donohoe's home after the body had been found, and of finding the defendant's .12 gauge shotgun there, four shells in the magazine, and mud on the stock and on the barrel. The gun and shells were introduced by the state as evidence.

L. D. Campbell, chief deputy under Sheriff Wray at the time, testified that the gun and shells were brought into the sheriff's office and identified the exhibits already introduced by the state.

W. H. Walden, father of the deceased, told of having asked Donohoe early in the week of Feb. 10 for information as to Herman Walden's whereabouts and declared that the defendant told him not to worry, that he (Donohoe) "had left Herman at the Palace hotel Sunday night."

Albert Walden, brother of the dead man, also told of going to Donohoe's home later in the week, seeking information about Herman Walden. Donohoe said, according to the witness, that he had left Walden at the Humble camp Sunday night.

Charles Justin, justice of the peace, testified that he conducted an inquest on the ground where the body was found. He also declared that on Feb. 14 Donohoe had filed a complaint with Wilbarger county officers charging Walden and two other men with robbery with firearms.

E. V. Savage, teamster, testified that Donohoe had asked him on Monday morning to send a team to a certain point on the lease to pull the defendant's car out of a ditch.

Oscar C. Meyers, who first found Walden's body, described its position on the ground.

Robbery Alleged

Efforts of the defense during its examination of witnesses Tuesday afternoon were designed to show that Walden had been party to a robbery, and to imply that his death resulted from a disagreement with his own accomplices.

Testimony given by J. L. "Blackie" Savell, Electra barber, at an earlier trial, was read by defense counsel. Savell testified that on Wednesday evening, Feb. 13, 1929, an oil field character known as "Shortie" came to his barber shop in Electra for a "much needed shave." The customer, according to Savell, unfolded a story of having "pulled" a $400 hi-jacking job with Walden a few days earlier, and said that he had been hiding out waiting for Walden to get him safely out of Hilltop. "Shortie" declared that he and Walden were en route separately to Mexico City, the witness testified, where they would meet. Savell also testified that the customer had a huge roll of bills in his possession when he paid for the shave.

Character Witnesses

C. W. Mathews, a farmer living near Electra in 1929, told of having seen a man answering Savell's description of "Shortie" leaving the Savell barber shop on the Wednesday night in question as he (Mathews) entered for a haircut. Mathews admitted on cross-examination that he said nothing of the incident until during the second trial of Donohoe, held last February at Vernon.

Herman Crawford, a truck driver, told of having overheard a conversation in a Hilltop restaurant on Monday morning, Feb. 11, 1929, between a number of men, one of whom was described as Savell had described "Shortie." The man was commonly known as "Blackie," however, according to the witness. He said the men were talking of some kind of trouble in which they had been involved on Sunday night, including a car stuck in a ditch, and that they were preparing to leave the community at once.

Ernest R. Fain, E. C. Hall, S. T. Gladden and Valjean Barton were introduced by the defense as character witnesses, all testifying that Donohoe enjoyed a good reputation in the Wilbarger county oil fields. The same witnesses impeached the character of Whittenberg, the state's first witness.

Donohoe was arrested on the day the body of Walden was found, and was tried in March of 1929 at Vernon, receiving a penitentiary term of 25 years at the hands of the jury. The case was reversed and remanded, however, and in the second trial, held last February, a hung jury resulted. The case was brought to Wichita county on a change of venue won by the state.

to make a definite commitment on just how congress stands.

To every member of congress he sent a telegram in which he said in part:

"I do not wish to press any member for reply as to his views if he prefers not to give them at this time, yet if you are favorable to the proposal . . . it would undoubtedly aid in the negotiations now in progress if you could inform me thereof."

Thus far the replies sent to the White House show an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the plan by both Republicans and Democrats.

SHERIFF GETS CERF AWARD

$1,600 Paid for Arrests After Kidnaping

CORSICANA, Texas, June 23. (AP)—The major portion of the $2,000 reward posted by I. N. Cerf, Corsicana banker and father of Robert Cerf, who was kidnaped last December, today was paid when Police Chief Will S. Knight gave Sheriff Rufus Pevehouse of Navarro county a check for $1,600. Sheriff Pevehouse requested that the remaining $400 be retained by Chief Knight until Oliver Clapp, the fifth man indicted in connection with the kidnaping, has been arrested. Cerf posted the money with Chief Knight.

Four men were arrested and two have been tried and convicted in connection with the abduction and ransoming of young Cerf. Currie Caldwell was convicted of assault upon a person while masked or in disguise and was given a 12-year sentence. Jimmie Nash pleaded guilty to like charges and was given a seven-year sentence.

It was reported that Sheriff Pevehouse uncovered the first clue that led to the solution of the kidnaping mystery but what that clew was has never been made public. Even the fact that the elder Cerf had posted the reward soon after the kidnaping was not revealed until today.

'Aw, Judge!'

"Vagrancy and disorderly conduct—ten days!" "Half-Pint," a juvenile delinquent of Washington, took the sentence without a murmur, and when this picture was taken he was on his way to serve his time in the district pound for biting 7-year-old Catherine Alsop. "Half-Pint" was not represented by counsel at the hearing, or it might have been brought out that he is still on a milk diet because his teeth are so tiny. However, hundreds of capital residents have sprung to his defense with promises of the $2 bail and a good home when the puppy has paid his debt to society.

Nocona Death Case To Wait Action of Grand Jury July 1

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, Texas, June 23.—Olin Roberson, peace officer here who is charged with murder in the death of V. A. Lyles, Montague county farmer, last week, has waived preliminary hearing, and will await the action of the grand jury which convenes at Montague in July, his attorney announced today.

Bond of $3,000, set immediately following the death of Lyles Sunday morning, remained unchanged.

Robert K. Crain, of Davenport & Crain, Wichita Falls law firm, said that Roberson has no statement to make in connection with the case at this time.

It had been originally planned to hold a preliminary hearing of evidence in the case before D. M. Painter, Nocona justice of the peace, some time this week.

The officer was charged with murder Sunday after Lyles died of two gunshot wounds inflicted Saturday night in the shooting, which occurred in the heart of the business section here. Lyles was said to have resisted the officer's attempt to arrest him.

Funeral services for the farmer were held here Monday.

West Texas Wheat Farmers Find New Uses for Under-Priced Crop

NEW CROP

Quanah Man Ships Horned Toads to Market in Kansas

QUANAH, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Perhaps Texas is to see the rise of a new industry—that of producing horned frogs for the market. V. W. Kelley recently received an order for horned frogs from Clay Center, Kan., and soon had captured six and sent them on their way.

Horned frogs have become popular throughout the North and East since Old Rip was discovered sleeping in the Eastland courthouse cornerstone a few years ago.

AMARILLO, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Small wheat farmers of the Panhandle country are looking for new outlets for their grain, discouraged from placing it on the market at present low prices.

In Hardeman and Childress counties and other sections that are not generally considered as wheat producing areas, but where wheat was planted for winter pasture, much of the crop is being cut and baled for hay. Especially are dairy farmers, who have considerable need for roughage, adopting this plan.

It is estimated that five or six tons of hay can be cut from one acre. The objection has been made by some that cheaper hay can be grown, but considering the winter pasture benefits, county agents generally say the undertaking is wise.

Small farmers in other sections of the Panhandle and South Plains are planning to feed their wheat to livestock and poultry.

E. R. Eudaly, special county agent in Floyd county, has expressed the belief that farmers can realize 65 cents a bushel for wheat and about 54 cents a bushel for barley by feeding it to hogs. He recommends buying feeder pigs weighing from 50 to 75 pounds. He is furnishing farmers of his county with balanced rations for feeding projects.

Scattered feeding projects throughout the Panhandle last year brought reports of prices that doubled the market for grain.

Eight-Year-Old Musical Prodigy To Appear in Amarillo Recital

AMARILLO, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Vesta O'Dell, 8-year-old music prodigy, who is described by Amarillo music teachers as having "absolute pitch," will be presented in public recital at the Amarillo College of Music June 26.

Vesta will play 22 piano numbers from memory on the evening of her recital, according to Emil F. Myers, head of the college. Myers, who claims the distinction of "finding" Mary McCormic, famous operatic soprano, declares Vesta is the most talented student who has ever come under his observation during 20 years of teaching.

"The child was discovered two years ago, before she had studied music," Myers said. "She could sit anywhere within sound of a piano and detect every false note in any composition. She can sit in an adjoining room and name any note on the piano keyboard from sound. We assign her difficult numbers and she memorizes them overnight. She also has a good sense of harmony and pitch, and plays like an artist."

Vesta is the daughter of a farmer living west of Amarillo.

Like the Weave in a Persian Rug... the Best Gasoline is Blended

IN an ancient Persian village the rug-maker sits, tying the countless knots which bind together the richly dyed threads composing his almost priceless handiwork. Generations before him have handed down the secret of the dyes, the traditional patterns, the color-harmony which distinguishes the sought-after Ispahans, Kashans and Namazliks. The skill of this blender of color means everything. Because he KNOWS HOW, the rug he weaves will become the treasured possession of some wealthy connoisseur.

The art of blending is equally important in the making of good gasoline. Just as the rug-maker uses his several rich colors to create the finished rug, so must the several types of gasoline be blended and balanced to create a fuel of the desired qualities. No one type of gasoline can be satisfactory, for no one type possesses all the required attributes.

So CONOCO uses: Natural Gasoline, for flashing performance . . . Straight Run Gasoline, for power and mileage . . . Cracked Gasoline, for its anti-knock qualities.

Anyone with fairly deft fingers can take dyed yarn and make a rug. Anyone can mix the three types of gasoline, but only the expert can obtain the proper blend in perfect balance . . . and CONOCO men are experts. Their skill produces the triple-test motor fuel, CONOCO Balanced-Blend Gasoline. Assert yourself as a connoisseur of gasoline. Drive to the nearest Red Triangle service station and fill the tank with this blended motor fuel.

RECIPES

Cantaloupe Shells Filled With Fresh Fruit

Cut chilled cantaloupe in halves, remove the seeds and fibrous substance and sprinkle salt over the inside of each melon half. Fill with diced, fresh pineapple, allowing one-half a cup for each service, sprinkle with powdered sugar, and over the top pour crushed strawberries mixed with sugar.

Broiled Tripe

Fresh honeycomb tripe is best for broiling. Wipe as dry as possible, dip in fine cracker dust and olive oil or melted butter, draining off all fat that is possible, and again dip in cracker dust. Place in a greased broiler and broil five minutes, cooking smooth side of tripe the first three minutes. Place on a hot platter, honeycomb side up, spread with butter, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Broiled tripe is at its best when cooked over a charcoal fire.

Jellied Tomato and Chicken Bouillon

Jellied tomato and chicken bouillon is made of two jellied soups, both pressed through a potato ricer. Serve in glass cups, a portion of tomato in the bottom and of chicken on the top. Garnish with a small spoonful of whipped cream and a sprinkle of paprika.

Veal Steak With Pineapple

Use a thick slice from the leg of veal; brown on a hot pan on both sides in bacon fat, then place in a casserole on a bed of sliced, grilled sweet potatoes, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Spread over the top a cup of shredded pineapple, either fresh or canned, pour over all one-half a cup of chicken stock or water, and bake for an hour at 350 degrees Fahrenheit. The steak should be a good inch in thickness. Serve from the baking dish, after adding another cup of shredded pineapple and juice, slightly thickened with a tablespoonful each of flour and butter.

Cherry and Cheese Salad

Large, black canned cherries.
One small cream cheese.
One-fourth cupful thin cream.
Lettuce.
One-half cupful finely chopped walnuts.
One-eighth teaspoonful salt.
Dash paprika.
Mayonnaise.

Remove the stones from the cherries, allowing six to eight for each serving. Combine the cream cheese, cream, chopped walnuts, salt and paprika and form into tiny balls. Chill the stoned cherries thoroughly and fill with the cheese balls. Serve on white lettuce leaves garnished with mayonnaise. Serve with buttered, hot unsalted whole wheat crackers.

Ice Cream Layer Cake

The cake part of this may be any layer cake mixture which has been baked in three layers. The following recipe makes a fine-textured, well-flavored cake but requires a great deal of beating. Beat a cupful of butter until white and "horned"; add a cup of granulated sugar and beat the whole until the mixture is smooth, shining and like satin in texture. This initial beating is important. Then add four unbeaten eggs, one at a time, alternately with two cupfuls of sifted cake flour, adding one egg and one-half a cupful of flour at a time; beat the mixture until shining and of satin texture after each addition. After the last egg is beaten in beat for 15 minutes more while adding the grated yellow rind of one lemon. This mixture is known as Genoese paste. Bake in three layers.

Ice Cream Filling for Cake

Mix three tablespoonfuls of flour with one-half a cupful of sugar until neither flour nor sugar can be distinguished apart. Add this to a cup and one-half of hot milk in a saucepan, and stir over the fire until it boils. Mix the yolks of three eggs with one-fourth a cup of corn syrup and one-half a teaspoonful of salt, stir quickly into thickened milk, remove from fire and beat in the stiffly beaten whites of the three eggs. Add flavoring of lemon or clove, cool, add three-fourths of a cup of cream after it has been beaten stiff; divide the mixture into the three-layer cake pans used for the cake after these have been rubbed clean and cooled. Freeze in an electric refrigerator, and use between layers of the refrigerator-chilled cake. Pile shredded cocoanut over the top for a non-conductor, and place in the refrigerator until serving time. The cake will stand without melting for at least 30 minutes. It will soak a little into the layers, but only to improvement of the layer.

Dipped Strawberries

Select perfect strawberries and wash carefully, leaving on the hulls for "handles." Drain and chill. Shortly before serving, dip the tips in uncooked fondant (made by mixing confectioners' sugar with a little water). Arrange around a center of green leaves.

Jellied Bacon and Eggs

Broil until crisp six slices of lean, tender bacon. When cold, cut into narrow strips the width of the slices. Hard-cook six eggs and allow to cool, then separate the yolks and whites and chop them coarsely—do not put through a grinder. Make a rich, well flavored soup stock and dissolve in the stock two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, previously softened in cold water, using three cupfuls of the stock. Strain and allow to cool; when nearly set, cover the bottom of the mold with bacon, then add a layer of yolk, then of white and repeat. Pour the stock over all and chill thoroughly. Individual molds are very attractive. In serving, sprinkle with chopped parsley and garnish with potato salad.

Grape Mallebet

Twenty marshmallows.
One cupful gracejuice.
One-fourth cupful orange juice.
Two tablespoonfuls lemon juice.
One tablespoonful sugar.
One-fourth cupful egg whites.

Melt marshmallows in the grapejuice over hot water, add other juices and set aside to stiffen. Add sugar to egg whites, whip them stiff and combine with foundation, mixing thoroughly. Pour into trays of a mechanical refrigerator or pack in ice and salt and freeze without stirring.

Mincemeat Cookies

Three-fourths cupful butter.
Two cupfuls sugar.
Two eggs.
One cupful chopped nuts.
One package mincemeat.
Two and one-half to three cupfuls flour.
One teaspoonful soda.
One teaspoonful cream of tartar.

Cream butter and sugar, add well beaten eggs, mincemeat (separated), and nuts. Sift flour with cream of tartar and soda. Add to first mixture. The dough will be very stiff, as no liquid is used other than that which is in the eggs. The amount of flour will depend upon the size of eggs used. Shape in a roll, wrap in waxed paper, and let stand in ice box overnight. Slice and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until golden brown.

When Melons Are Ripe

The melon harvest reaches its height during the month of July. Melons are not only most plentiful at this time but the quality is nearest perfection.

Maturity is one of the most troublesome problems with melons as many green melons are rushed to the market prior to the Fourth of July and after the middle of the month overripe melons are offered.

If a watermelon is carefully examined the degree of ripeness may be fairly well determined. The under side changes from white to pale yellow, lemon or ivory color and small pimples or warts appear on this surface as watermelons ripen; the green ground color on the top side also takes on a faint yellowish cast in place of the bright clear green of immaturity. An immature watermelon when thumped with the fingers, rings with a metallic sharpness, while a ripe melon emits a duller and more muffled sound. If the thumbnail is run over the surface of a ripe watermelon, the thin epidermal layer of green skin peels off like loose paint, while an immature specimen will not peel in this manner. Overripe melons may be distinguished by their dull, dead appearance and the large amount of yellow mottling on the green surface. Often retail dealers "plug" melons for their customers. If this is done the flesh should be bright red, crisp and juicy wellout to the rind, while underripe melons have a hard, pale pink flesh and overripe ones tend toward mealiness.

Large watermelons are superior to small ones and usually cost more pound for pound. Round or long watermelons are equally good but those which are badly misshipen, gourd-necked or that taper too abruptly toward the ends should be avoided. The color of seeds ranges from white to brown or black according to variety and has no bearing on maturity.

The best cantaloupes, regardless of variety, are well formed, large and heavily netted with veins which stand out like whipcord. When fully ripe the ground color under the netting becomes yellow or golden, the melon is slightly soft at the blossom end and has a pleasing aroma. If the entire stem still clings the cantaloupe was picked too soon and will never have full sweetness even after it softens. Cantaloupes picked at a stage where the stem splits usually ripen normally, but the best specimens are those picked when the entire stem separates readily, leaving only the scar.

Small cantaloupes are often picked from dead or diseased vines and hence are inferior. Ill-shaped or badly scarred cantaloupes seldom acquire normal flavor. Cantaloupes vary from long oval to oblate in shape and are pink, salmon or green fleshed, but this has little bearing on quality.

Melons are served either for the "beginning" or the "finish" of a meal. Small melons should be washed, wiped, chilled and cut in halves, from stem to blossom end. Remove seeds and objectionable stringy portion, and serve to each person half a melon placed on a small plate (with or without paper doily). Pass sugar on a tray, and salt and pepper also, if they are not on the table between every two colors. The flavor is preserved if the melon is perfectly chilled, but is lessened or destroyed if pieces of ice are served in it.

Watermelon should be served very cold and may be served in a variety of ways. If a melon is served with the rind on, wipe, cut in halves and trim the rounded end of each half so that it may stand flat and firm on the serving dish. Then the host may remove the red portion with a large spoon, in egg-shaped pieces, and place on individual plates. The melon may be cut in the pantry in slices three inches thick; then the rind cut off in circular pieces, and the edible center (rounds of pink pulp) removed to a chop plate or silver platter of ample size. To serve, cut in wedge-shaped pieces. Another way is to remove the pink center of the melon in the pantry with a spoon, in egg-shaped pieces, and arrange on a large glass or silver dish, with cracked ice. A few green leaves or a few sprigs of mint may add to the attractiveness of the dish.

RECIPES

Melon Balls in Grapefruit Juice

One-half watermelon or two honeydew or casaba melons.
Two cans chilled grapefruit juice or two cupfuls fresh chilled grapefruit juice.

If using honeydew or casaba melons cut them in halves and remove the seeds. Then scoop out the balls from the edible portion, using a special tool for this purpose, or the one-fourth teaspoon in your measuring set. Arrange about a half dozen balls in each sherbet glass and cover each with about one-fourth cupful grapefruit juice. Chill thoroughly before serving, garnishing with mint. Fresh grapefruit juice may need to be slightly sweetened. Serves eight.

Pineapple and Watermelon Conserve

Watermelon and pineapple blend well together, making a mildly sour-sweet conserve, delightfully colored. Pare away the hard skin from the outside and the red meat from the inside of the watermelon rind, leaving only a thin layer of red for the sake of color. Cut into pieces two inches long and an inch wide and let stand overnight in a salt-water solution, using one-quarter of a cupful of salt to every three quarts of water. In the morning rinse thoroughly, cover with fresh cold water, and heat gradually to the boiling point. Drain and replace on the fire in hot water to cover. Cook gently until nearly tender, about 50 minutes; then measure the cooked fruit and juice separately and add as much sugar as fruit, several sticks of whole cinnamon and a small bag holding a tablespoonful of whole cloves. For each two quarts of melon add also one small lemon and one orange, both thinly sliced; half a cupful of vinegar and one quart of raw pineapple cut to match the melon pieces. Heat all the fruit in the liquid from the first cooking and thoroughly boil five minutes, then pack into sterilized jars and seal.

Watermelon Melange

Watermelon melange makes an attractive first course. Cut balls of or dice pink watermelon, green honeydew and salmon-tinted cantaloupe and chill well, arrange in sherbet glasses so that all the delicate colors are displayed, sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar and pour over a few spoonfuls of orange juice, border the glasses with fresh mint leaves and place a bright cherry or berry in the center of each.

Watermelon Preserve Sandwiches

Mix one-half cupful watermelon preserve, chopped fine, with one-fourth cupful nut meats cut fine and spread between thin slices of buttered bread. Cut in fancy shapes for serving.

Garden Writer Tells How To Grow Lilies In Texas

By BERTHA McKEE DOBIE

The lily is pre-eminently a flower of the field—of Bermuda, where the gathering of lily bulbs is a chief industry; of the volcanic slopes of Thibet and Japan; of the valley of Palestine; of swamps in North America. The genus is limited to the northern hemisphere, and comprises 80 known species. The hybridizer has been able to do very little with the lily, and gardeners find it one of the most tantalizing subjects for their culture. When it becomes established, it thrives, but getting it established is the rub. Yet in its native abodes it grows in careless abundance. The Regal lily growing in Thibetan valleys encompassed by mountains blooms, so writes the late E. H. Wilson, its discoverer for western gardens, "not in twos and threes; but in hundreds, in thousands, aye, in tens of thousands." When the writers of Judea sought an image, they turned to the lily, not only for its beauty, fragrance, and unconsidering ease, but also for its luxuriance: "I will be as the dew unto Israel," reads a promise in Hosea; "he shall grow as the lily."

Difficult to Grow

Some of those who have tried to raise lilies in their occidental gardens may have difficulty in realizing the measure of this promise. "With no class of flowers do amateurs succeed less," writes Mr. Wilson. In "Aristocrats of the Garden" he enumerates some causes of failure and tells how lilies may be made to thrive under conditions natural to them. No other American has ever known so much about what those natural conditions are. It is the lilies of Asia that we chiefly grow in gardens, and to many of these Mr. Wilson introduced the western world.

The first essential to growing good lilies is securing good bulbs. A bulb of moderate size if solid and firm, will grow more thriftily and produce finer flowers than a very large, but loose and flabby, bulb. "The bigger the better" is not necessarily true in this instance. Then a difference in rooting habit among lilies must be understood. Some lilies are base-rooting only; these should be planted shallowly, not more than two inches below the surface, and placed on the side instead of top up. Other lilies—and indeed most lilies—are stem rooting as well as base rooting; that is, they throw out from the stem above the bulb secondary roots, which help to anchor and to feed the plant. These lilies should be covered with soil to twice their own depth. Thus a bulb three inches thick should be planted so that it is covered with six inches of soil; its base will be nine inches down. Some of the most common base-rooting lilies are L. candidum (Madonna Lily), L. canadense, L. grayi, L. pardalinum, L. philadelphicum, and L. superbum. Nearly all others are stem rooting also.

The Madonna Lily is frequently called the poor man's lily, because in the south of England, where it is much grown, it is the pride of many a cottager's plot and as often the despair of a squire's estate. In this fact is a lesson. The poor man has neither time nor money to coddle his lilies—and they thrive. Lilies dislike being moved, and the poor man has little time for wheelbarrow gardening. The enemy of lilies, as of all bulbs, is rot, and an over-enriched soil induces rot. Raw manure and high-powered commercial fertilizer should never be allowed near a lily bed. Lilies like leafsoil. Some growers recommend a layer of well-composted manure deep below the bulbs.

Good Drainage

Poor drainage is another prime mover of rot. The dry-land lilies of China and Japan grow in open, porous soil, generally of volcanic origin; even the swamp lilies of North America rest their bulb upon a stone or in gritty sand, so that water cannot stagnate immediately around it. This requirement of good drainage may be met by deep digging the incorporation of much sand with the soil, and the insertion of short, clean sand immediately below and around the bulb. An Austin amateur whose success is the inspiration of her friends says that lilies die for her unless she grows them in elevated beds. The elevation need not be more than two or three inches, just enough to allow surplus water to run off immediately. A slope provides good natural drainage. Sulphur and charcoal sprinkled about a bulb when it is planted tend toward off mold. It is obvious that lilies can be over watered. Yet, like all other plants, they require much moisture to produce flowers. They should bewatered well during their growing and flowering season, and then no more even during the dry summer.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

I stood at my door and watched a neighbor working in her little garden. There were about 30 stalks of corn; three rows of Irish potatoes; two sturdy tomato plants; a trellis covered with bean vines; a bed of greens and a healthy row of beets with lettuce going to seed and only a few onions left in the ground. But it was worked as beautifully as any trained gardener's plat. The dirt was pulverized and it had been watered at just the proper time and in the proper way.

There are hundreds of these little gardens all over the city; and there are pantry shelves where glasses of ruby and golden jelly, glowing strawberry preserves and canned things left over from last year make a picture worthy of an artist's time.

There are flower gardens on many plats. If there is no space for a garden, there are beds and rows of flowers and little gorgeous boxes beneath the windows.

From my south windows, I can see smooth green back yards with brilliant camp chairs on the lawn and in the evening, families gather there and chat; laughter mingles with the far faint songs of birds and the notes of insect life.

It is all home. And beneath tiles and shingles and costly and economical roofs, the leaves of life unfold. America lives.

The echo of the words, "An America Plan," keeps ringing in my memory. Few Americans would dream of life as it is lived in Russia. America is builded on the theory of equal rights. There are no royalists and military classes and serfs in this country to boil into revolution and do away with home.

The Italian peasant loved his home; but the Italian has never known the freedom of the American; education was not open to all the people in the country; from the village up to the leaders in the national capital, the majority of American people choose their makers and keepers of law.

No dictator could take the reins in America. Nothing could destroy the home. Those people who have a line of pioneer ancestors to look back upon with reverence will not destroy the honor of the family.

Laws—yes. America has too many laws too poorly enforced. Little, unnecessary, gnat-like laws that restrict the spirit of independence. Laws that do not take life and love and nature into account. Laws that must be enforced without allowing a judge to delve into the soul of the person who violated them.

I wonder often how many people sit alone at times and think. Not think definitely of the means of life and people about them, but forget the world and remember that which is eternal. The great forest trees are nothing in the span of time and the little life we have is an infinitesimal thing. But home and family are eternal things; generation following generation in the search for the best way to live and the real reason for life.

PATMAN WOULD OUST MELLON

Texan Says Secretary Holds Post Illegally

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 23. (AP)—Congressman Wright Patman of Texas told the national convention of Disabled American Veterans of the World War today that when congress meets he would introduce a resolution seeking removal of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon.

Patman criticized Mellon in connection with legislation for financial relief for veterans and said he would seek his removal on "the theory that he is holding office illegally."

Representative Patman said he based his claim that Mr. Mellon is holding his office illegally on the ground that the law says no secretary of the treasury should have connection with any interest owning property such as seagoing vessels. He said it is common knowledge that Mr. Mellon holds stock in a company which operates 34 vessels.

Variety of Lilies Prove Suitable in Gardens of Texas

mended by all growers is shading the ground in which lily bulbs are planted. In a state of nature, lilies grow among low shrubs and herbs, thrusting their heads of bloom up to the sun, but keeping their roots cool in the shaded earth. Lilies may be planted in bays of evergreens, among annuals and perennials that come on late after the lilies have flowered, or with a creeping ground cover. When lilies are planted alone in a bed, they should be planted so thickly that their own growth shades the ground; after the stems die down, a protective mulch of leaves or grass clipping should be applied. All lilies profit by a mulch of rotted leaves or thoroughly composted manure in fall, by which fertility and porosity are maintained. In North, Texas, where the ground freezes, such a mulch has also a protective function.

Rapid Increase

Over much of Texas lime-tolerance is a matter of importance. The American varieties, L. canadense, L. grayi, L. philadelphicum, and L. superbum and L. arratum, the glorious gold-banded lily of Japan, require an acid or at least a neutral soil. Others will thrive in soil containing some lime. Mr. Wilson says, however, that to none is its presence essential. Not all lilies can be successfully grown under the same conditions. Some require shade; some, sun. It is best to accept the conditions one has, and select species that thrive under them. Most lilies will grow in the southern United States if soil and drainage are right. By a proper selection of varieties we can have lilies from February to October. Some gardeners insist that lilies should not be allowed to bloom the first year after the bulbs are planted. A good plan is to pinch out the bud on weak stems and allow those on strong stems to develop.

Once lilies become established, they multiply rapidly by offshoots from the main bulb. They grow readily from seed also. The seed of a few varieties can be purchased; since the bulbs are quite expensive if grown in sufficient quantity to make a show, many people find this the more practicable method. Regal lilies will bloom the second year from seed. Some lilies, notably the Tiger Lily, produce small aerial bulbs, called bulbils, in the axils of leaves. By planting these secondary bulbs, which are about the size of peas, one can within a few years have a very large bed from a start of half a dozen bulbs.

Beginners with lilies usually want to plant species comparatively easy of culture. This is Mr. Wilson's list: L. Tigrinum (the well-known Tiger Lily, which is the one lily that grows anywhere), L. umbellatum; L. hansonii, L. paradalinum, L. superbum, L. candidum, L. croceum; L. henryi; L. regale; L. sargentiae; L. auratum (the Japanese gold-banded lily); L. speciosum; L. testaceum; and L. Thayerae. To these must be added the Bermuda Easter lily (L. harrisii); or longiflorium; which Mr. Wilson did not include because it not hardy in Boston. For Texas it is one of the best varieties. Of all the varieties Mr. Wilson names, perhaps the most beautiful are the regale, the speciosum, and the auratum. The first two are known to do well in Texas; the third is more difficult but the most beautiful of all. L. candidum is much planted and L. corceum has succeeded. Some growers have succeeded with L. elegans in its several varieties, L. Leonard Joerg being particularly handsome.

Day lilies, though they do not belong to the genus Lilum, do belong to the lily family. They are the thrifities things alive, and should be planted more generally than they are. Recent hybridizations have resulted in some splendid forms, greatly superior to the old day lilies. It is just as easy to plant finest varieties of all flowers as inferior varieties and they take up equal room. The gardner should be awake to the new, which in horticulture is very often the best.

Amaryllis is not a lily at all, but is commonly thought of as such. Many people who do not care for the hard red variety so much planted will be delighted with the flaring, soft-colored hybrids of this flower from South Africa.

Ten Killed as Blast Wrecks British Plant

TRINITY CANAL PLAN ON 'TRIAL'

Economics Hearing Leads To Smart Scrap

FORT WORTH, June 23. (AP)—Heated remarks between proponents and opponents of the proposed canalization of the Trinity river, characterized the opening session today of a hearing to try the economics of the project at the chamber of commerce.

Shortly after the hearing was opened, T. H. Tallichet, Houston, attorney for the Southern Pacific lines, stated that he desired to know who called the hearing and termed newspaper publicity stating that it was being held at the request of the railroads as "untrue."

John M. Founts, general manager of the Trinity River Canal association, retorted that it "certainly was not called by the association; and that if the railroads would agree, the association was agreed that the hearing should end."

Tallichet replied that "this is no time to make bargains."

The discussion was quelled by Major Milo P. Fox, United States army engineer, who is conducting the hearing, who stated that it had been called by United States army engineers.

Ireland Hampton, attorney, was the first witness for proponents of the project and Fox again was compelled to quiet discussion from the floor as to whether the railroads should receive a copy of his written testimony, which it was agreed by both sides was too long to read. It was decided that both Hampton's written and oral testimony would be kept for both sides.

A new commandant will be chosen to succeed the late W. M. Green and a design for a rangers' monument will be selected.

Early Arrivals at Stamford Reunion Indicate Big Crowd for Cowboy Meet

STAMFORD, Texas, June 23.—The number of early arrivals of out-of-town people in Stamford during the forepart of the week for the second annual program of the Texas cowboy reunion of Thursday, Friday and Saturday indicates that the attendance will be considerably larger than last year, officials of the organization declare.

Several ranch outfits were in and camped on the reunion grounds Tuesday and others were expected Wednesday morning. Camp fires at chuck-wagons were glimmering over the prairie and the picket line of horses about the various camps were reminders that the cowboys were here.

Ready for Opening

Scores of cowboys who will enter the rodeo contests are in town; groups of pioneer cattlemen are to be seen on the streets and the general public is well represented about the town and on the reunion reservation.

All details for the opening of the affair Thursday morning are in good shape, W. G. Swenson, president and general manager of the association, reports. The rodeo arena, corrals and chutes have been considerably improved since last year. The new arrangement will allow putting on the contests in a faster manner, he thinks. All the fences and buildings have been painted white and blue and the new grandstand is ready for use.

The open-air dance pavilion where the cowboy dances will be staged each evening after the close of the rodeo program is in shape. New lights have been provided to make the show in the evening, which will start at 8 p. m., as easy to see as the one in the afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The initial feature of the affair will be the formal opening of the reunion with a public program at the Stamford city autditorium at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. All men and women who saw actual services on the ranges prior to 1895 will be registered and provided with special badges which will entitle them to numerous courtesies.

At 1 p. m. Thursday afternoon the opening day parade will be staged. This will be lead by the young lady sponsors from a large number of towns and cities, all of whom will be mounted. There will be bands, mounted cowboys, the pioneer cattlemen and cattlewomen, chuck-wagons, decorated cars and floats, soldiers, and other things in the line-up.

Town Decorated

The first rodeo performance will open at the reunion arena at 3 p. m. Thursday afternoon and the evening show will go on at 8 p. m. The same order will prevail during Friday and Saturday.

Friday morning at 9:30 in the city auditorium the old fiddlers' contest will be staged under direction of H. F. Jackson. On Saturday morning the Pioneer Cattlemen's association will hold a business meeting in the auditorium at 10 o'clock.

Col. R. L. Penick, chairman of the invitation and reception committee, has a number of entertainment items arranged for the pioneers and he reports that there will be at least 500 of those in attendance.

Stamford has been all dressed up in holiday decorations for the reunion. The officials of the organization sponsoring the reunion report that the entire populace of the town is ready to help make the thousands of visitors who are expected feel at home.

Kansas Cuts Wheat Under Hot Suns

WICHITA, Kan., June 23. (UP)—Combines were whirring throughout southwestern and central Kansas today as farmers took advantage of the perfect weather for cutting their wheat.

The harvest has been on in Kansas for the past four days and is now in full swing in the southern part of the state.

Farmers are optimistic about the quality of the grain, although not so much about the price. Wheat was selling at 40 cents a bushel at the elevator yesterday.

It is too early yet to tell much about the yield, but individual farms have reported yields ranging from 15 to 30 bushels to the acre.

In some sections wheat has suffered for lack of rain, but as a whole the state has had good conditions.

BARBER WEEPS IN DEATH TRIAL

Slain Woman's Picture Brings Tears

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 23. (UP)—Norman J. Smith, facing death in the electric chair in the slaying of his wife, Mrs. Neola Smith, wept during his trial today.

Oblivious to the packed courtroom, the 45-year-old barber covered his face and cried when morgue pictures of his slain wife were shown to the jury.

Mrs. Smith was slain April 21 while riding with her husband on the Edmond highway.

The trial was stopped temporarily at noon when S. T. Holland, missing defense witness, was discovered in the courtroom. He was sworn as a witness when he explained he did not know he had been listed as a witness.

Witnesses today, including Pete Donaldson, highway patrolman, and C. H. Mercer, filling station operator, told of Smith driving to the Mercer station with the body of his wife. They told how Smith explained her death as caused by two bandits.

Donaldson told of finding a gun near the place of the shooting.

Confronted with this evidence, Smith had changed his story and admitted his wife was shot during a quarrel.

Late in 1930, the Cadillac Motor Car Company, Division of General Motors Corporation, announced the greatest manufacturing program in its history—calling for the production of four complete lines of motor cars: the La Salle, the Cadillac V-8, the Cadillac V-12 and the Cadillac V-16. Each of these cars has been so well received, and has met the preference of so many people, that all four lines will remain as members of the Cadillac family.

Texas Facts

By BILL EDWARDS

Texas has the highest average condition of all its growing crops in many years with a noticeable increase in feed crops of all kinds. A noteworthy feature is the absence of "spotted" conditions, the averages over the state being uniformly high and with small variances between different sections.

HELPING BUILD TEXAS

More miscellany, just to show that Texas is going forward steadily if somewhat more slowly than in the past year . . . Southern Pacific is spending $1,000,000 on improving its San Antonio-El Paso division, new bridges, heavier steel, new ballast . . . Texas & Pacific is hopeful of a favorable answer to its petition to extend into San Angelo; hasn't abandoned hope of a favorable report on its 333-mile extension from Big Spring northward into West Texas and the Panhandle . . . Longview, advantaging from oil, installed 3,000 new meters during the first three months of the year, claims 18,000 population now and expects 25,000 by Jan. 1 . . . With a petroleum building for oil men, a cotton exchange building for cotton factors, a medical arts building for dentists and doctors, Dallas is planning another "class" building—a "legal tower" for lawyers . . . Fal-furrias and Alice are to have new hotels, four-story 60-room and five-story 75-room, respectively . . . Texas & Pacific has moved into its new eight-story $2,000,000 freight terminal at Fort Worth, work nearing completion on $5,000,000 passenger terminal and office building.

Son-in-Law Gets 40-Year Term on Slaying Charge

SAN ANTONIO, June 23. (AP)—J. C. Escobar was found guilty of the murder of his father-in-law, Thomas Donavan, and was sentenced to 40 years imprisonment today. The jury had deliberated nearly 17 hours.

Escobar appeared stunned by the verdict.

"I don't know whether I'll carry the case any further," he said. "I haven't much money."

The indictment charged that Escobar shot Donavan with a pistol June 20, 1930. State witnesses testified that Escobar shot Donavan three times, and that no weapon was found on the dead man.

Defense witnesses testified Escobar had been threatened by Donavan on several occasions and that Donavan attacked the defendant with a knife at the time of the shooting.

Remodeling to Ease Crowding in Capitol

AUSTIN, June 23. (AP)—Badly overcrowded conditions in the state capitol and the state office building will be relieved, at least temporarily, with the remodeling of the old Travis county courthouse by the state. The work will start about Sept. 1 and will require about three months to complete, according to the board of control.

War story in brief: Preparations; rations; reparations.

A movie is like a war; success often depends upon the effectiveness of the "shots."

On With the Music

WHETHER or not the drum and bugle corps of Pat Carrigan American Legion post wins first place in state competition at El Paso in August, and whether or not the next state convention comes to Wichita Falls, local citizens are going to be proudly pleased with this band of music-makers, for they represent a job well done.

Observation of the part played by the buglers and drummers Saturday in welcoming back the Spudders alone would have shown the hold they already have upon the public. Without any wild yen to shoulder an Enfield and be off to the war, John Doe and Richard Roe like the vibrant, stentorian boom-booming of the big bass drums, the rat-a-tat-tat of the snares, and the clarion call of the sweet-voiced trumpets. So do the Doe and Roe families, one and all, as was so plainly manifested at Spudder park Saturday when the inter-inning intervals gave the musical legionnaires opportunity for repeated outbursts.

But the organization has an appeal more than that of the kind of music it puts out: it has done its job well. It has pushed its membership up to 45; it has trained arduously; it has donated its services gladly for this and that public event.

Local bands have also given unstintedly of their services and time. Acknowledgement of the new organization implies no lack of appreciation for those formerly established. The ex-soldiers who comprise this new legion group have won the Wichita Falls citizenship by the excellent brand of martial music they produce, and by the generosity with which they dispense it for the community.

Why They Listen

THE Southern Ohio bituminous coal fields seem to be following Pennsylvania's lead. There have been strikes and rumors of strikes, near-riots and threats of violence, arrests and deportations, until the situation has become extremely ugly. Complicating everything is the fact that the Communists are making strong efforts to enroll the miners in their union.

Now Communism, admittedly, is an ugly thing. By and large, Communistic agitators undoubtedly have done the American workman a great deal more harm than good. The appearance of these agitators in the mine fields will properly disturb many Americans.

However, it does no one any harm to try to understand things; and when one strike leader remarks casually that thousands of miners are now "living on dandelions" and that many of their children "went barefoot on the coldest day last winter," one can at least understand why the miners are listening to these men. To try to stamp out Communism in the mine fields without, at the same time, trying to alleviate the situation that made the workers willing to listen to the Communists will be futile.

For Better Diplomats

THE federal government has taken a long step forward by putting into effect the provisions of the recently-enacted Moses-Linthicum bill, providing for a new regime in the foreign service of the state department.

Under this regime, young men of modest means can enter the foreign service with the knowledge that their lack of private funds will not hamper them. Regular salary increases are provided for efficient workers, and living allowances will make it possible for the young diplomats to do the necessary amount of entertaining in foreign capitals without drawing on their own funds.

Heretofore it has been hard for a man to make a good career in the foreign service unless he had means of his own. This new system should do a great deal to increase the quality of the nation's representation abroad.

A Futile Effort

TENNESSEE will keep its anti-evolution law for a while longer. An effort to repeal the law was defeated in the Tennessee house by a large majority, after one Representative Matthews had remarked that "if this here evolution is right the Bible is wrong, and we'd just as well close our Bible and let the country go to hell."

Yet, for all that the law remains on the statute books, one is compelled to wonder just how much effect it will have. Ambitious young Tennesseeans who want an education that will put them in touch with modern thought and modern scientific progress can hardly be thwarted by a law of that kind. The state borders are not hermetically sealed. Young Tennessee, it is a safe bet, will go on finding out about the evolutionary theory despite the protests of backwoods legislators.

Quotations Worth Noting

Congress will not provide for unemployment and old age insurance if industry does not create the need. If industry does not want government's interference in business, it must prevent the need.—Senator James W. Couzens of Michigan.

Ah-sho-looly!

The things that you say when you're stewed, boys,
Are the things that you mean when you're not.
But you haven't the gall to say them, that's all,
Until you've made whoopee a lot.

The things that you say when you're stewed, boys,
Are the things that are close to your heart.
An' I'll just bet a ten, if you start something then,
It is something you wanted to start!

So here's to the brew as it stews, boys,
An' here's to the stews that it brews!
The courage you get, when you're plumb soaken wet
To say any damb thing that you choose!

Pardon His Shove

Not all the paragraphs here give Mr. Holtz the sort of break he prefers. This sort, frixample. It was in Reuben's the other 2 a. m., and Lou was all hopped up because his show's business suddenly picked up.

"Yes, indeedy," he chirped with a grin, "you can put in the paper that 'You Said It' absolutely sold out tonight!"

"Is that considered good?" asked Lloyd Phillips, a broker.

"Is it good?" howled Lou, "I said we sold out!"

"So what?" snapped Lloyd, 'Band Wagon' sold out its lobby!"

Gag

Take it from Alf Friedman, two actors, victims of sound, as a last resort, accepted jobs as doormen at a fashionable country club.

After the first long day of appearing in formal attire, opening and closing doors, one of them dashed over to the other and said: "What do you think of this job?"

"Marvelous!" he ejaculated, "the stage was never like it. I've taken 50 bows so far."

A Form of Criticism

Bert Hanlon, speaking of a certain actor, who always permits himself to be outfumbled, when the check comes, says: "That feller has been arrested three times for carrying concealed money!"

The Morning Mail

"Dr. Mr. Winchell," writes a person named Fred Allen, "when the meek inherit the earth what will they do about Chicago?

"Have you heard about the two Scots who went into that restaurant featuring 'all you can eat for 60 cents'? Well, they went in Monday and were carried out struggling on Friday!"

A Fool and His Money

The millionaire Indian that directs traffic voluntarily every day at Wilshire and Rossmore in Hollywood has been adjudged crazy by the natives. He has done this job daily for the past 20 years from 8 in the morning till sundown, and although he resides in a mansion nearby his only pleasure in life is to take his place in the middle of the street and make believe he is a traffic cop. His antics have made him a landmark that is now history up and down the coast.

According to Marc Lachmann, who has seen them come and go in the three weeks he has been on the coast, this Indian is not so crazy, for he probably is the only man in Hollywood who actually knows just where he is going to be tomorrow.

Hehehe!

On the East Side of the town there is a club hotel for young women, reports Willard Keefe. It is a strict place, and the girls must retire early; they cannot smoke cigrets, get plastered or cuss.

"The place really has a twin purpose," reports Willard. "It protects young girls, strangers in the city, from evil, and it protects the city from the girls, who are no longer strangers in town."

Great Scotch!

Earl Griggs of Atlanta, Ga., reports that Simon & Schuster's new book of Scot gags doesn't contain this one.

Sandy and his gal were on a park bench in the moonlight. He was moody. A penny for your thoughts," she said.

"I was just thinkin'," said Sandy, "that I would like a kiss."

"And why not?" she said as she Let Him Have It.

A few seconds later Sandy was pensive again. "And now what are you thinking of, Sandy, another kiss?"

"Naw," was the reply, "I was thinkin' of that penny you owe me."

I Catch On

They were discussing the difference between London and New York audiences. George Jean Nathan interrupted to sum it up in a single sentence.

"In London," said The Actor's Best Friend, "they do not put a chain on the dime-in-the-slot opera glasses."

Nifty

Two of the Stem's dandies were discussing a third who had stolen a mutual pal's Favorite Person.

"Was he very sore?" asked one of them.

"Was he sore?" interrupted Bugs Baer, "he was as sore as a porcupine with ingrown quills."

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

"OLD ABE," THE EAGLE THAT WENT TO WAR—"Old Abe," a living specimen of the U. S. emblematical bird, was captured by the Indians of the Chippewa river and purchased from them by an Eau Claire, Wis., regiment in 1861. The company, known as the "Badgers" of the 8th Wisconsin regiment which was then forming, promptly adopted "Old Abe" as its pet. The eagle was "sworn" into the United States service by a symbolical decoration and started on its military career. Borne aloft with the regimental colors, it participated in 50 battles and skirmishes. After the civil war it returned to Wisconsin and became an honorary charge of the state. It died in 1881 and its stuffed body was one of the war relics of the state of Wisconsin.

$20 A WEEK

by ROB EDEN

THE STORY SO FAR:

Sally Blair has advanced from a $20 a week typist to private secretary for Harvey Davidson, millionaire. Unable to have Peter Douglass, with whom she is in love, she plans to win Mr. Davidson. Mac Tierney, husband of her former roommate, Ann Seymour, thinking his wife is at Sally's apartment, comes to find her not there. Sally realizes that to keep her position, Ann has probably gone out with her boss. John Warner. Sally wonders what Mac will do when he learns the truth.

CHAPTER XXX

Sally knew what had happened as soon as she got home the next noon, and saw Ann sitting on the couch, two unopened bags on the floor beside her.

A pale, wan Ann. A frail ghost, whose eyes burned in the hollows of her face, whose lips were blue and bloodless.

"Oh, you've come," and she rose, only to totter back on the davenport. Her voice was hoarse, and the eyes which she turned on Sally were vague, unseeing. "The landlady let me in—I asked her to—"

Sally took her in her arms, but the body she held was tense.

"Mac—sent me away, Sally. He doesn't want me any more—so I packed and came here—I didn't have any place else to go—"

"Hush, don't talk about it."

"I have to talk about it. I lied to him. Told him I was coming here, and he came to get me—"

"I know." Why did she have to tell about it? Why couldn't she try to forget?

"I was out with Mr. Warner, Sally, I'd been out with him once before, and Mac didn't know. He wouldn't have known last night if he hadn't come here. Oh, it was terrible, Mac raving at me, telling me that he didn't want me—that I'd killed his love. He saw the car drive up, Sally—saw Mr. Warner, then he accused me, as I came in the lobby. I tried to explain but he wouldn't listen—"

"I know," Sally patted the shivering shoulders.

Mac Is Angry

"I couldn't help it, Sally. I had to go with Mr. Warner, when he asked me that second time. I didn't know what to do. I was scared to death. I did what I thought was right—and it was all so wrong, so horribly wrong. Mac says he'll never forgive me—that I can't ever come back to him." She was sobbing, and her sobs were pitiful, heart-rending.

"You didn't go to work today, then?"

"I'm never—going to that office again—"

Somehow Sally got her clothes off and put her to bed. It was clear that Ann had had no sleep the night before, and that her nerves were at the breaking point.

"I was trying to do my best," she repeated, a little calmer now that she was lying down, "and everything's so muddled up. I knew Mac would be furious if I told him I was going out with Mr. Warner, so I had to lie. Sally, what if he never forgives me? I can't live without him—I'd die. Tell me he'll take me back!"

"I'm going to see him as soon as you get to sleep, Ann."

"Oh, will you? I tried to tell him, but he wouldn't listen. Maybe he'll listen to you. Going out with Mr. Warner was bad enough, terrible. I was frightened to death both times—he is a beast—and now this—this is much worse with Mac not loving me, hating me—"

"Mac does love you," Sally said patiently.

"He doesn't now. He hates me. The things he said," a shudder passed through the little body, and the reddened eyelids shut tightly.

"He's angry, that's all."

Sally Talks to Mac

"I shouldn't have gone out with Mr. Warner, but I didn't know what to do. I did what I thought was best. Sally, you'll go now, to Mac? Don't wait for me to go to sleep. And tell him I'm sorry. I tried to make him see I was, but he laughed at me. I got down on my knees to him, but it didn't make any difference—"

"You sure you'll be all right if I leave?"

"I'll be fine, but I want you to go now."

There were more instructions as to what Sally was to tell Mac. More tears, more apologies. Finally lowering the bedroom blind, she slipped out, promising that if she could she would bring Mac back with her. Ann seemed calmer after that and told Sally she'd try to sleep.

Because she wanted to get to the Tierney apartment as soon as possible she took a taxi, and then when she was in it wondered why it was crawling along so slowly.

Poor Ann, trying to help Mac, and making a mistake. Poor Mac, loving Ann, and sending her away, torturing himself during her absence. For he would, his thoughts of her would do that. Children, both of them. But Mac would get over his anger. He loved Ann too much, Sally assured herself, to stay away long. She'd bring him back with her, and everything would be all right.

Mac opened the door for her, glowering, his clothes unpressed, his face unshaven. An ash tray on the couch held dozens of cigaret stubs, some of them half consumed, and others smoked to the tips. Evidently Mac had had no rest, either. His face was haggard, and his jaw was set in the same stubborn way that Sally had learned to dislike. Not that she didn't like Mac. She did. But in his stubborn moods he was difficult. This interview was not going to be as easy as she had thought.

Mac Is Relentless

"You came from Ann, I suppose," Mac started right in the subject.

Sally nodded as she sat down.

"Well, you needn't have come. I told Ann last night that I was through with her and I mean it. I don't want to see her again." He lighted another cigaret and started consuming it quickly.

"There's no use feeling like that, Mac. Ann's sorry. She only did what she thought was right. She doesn't like Mr. Warner. She hates him—"

Mac laughed, a short laugh with no mirth in it. "She told me that, too, but I don't believe it."

"You must believe it! It's true! Ann adores you, and you adore her."

Mac interrupted her rudely. "When you love a man you don't

'DUDE' SLEUTHS GIVEN FAVOR

Woodcock on Way to Texas For Introductions

NEW ORLEANS, June 23. (UP)—A new type of prohibition agent, college bred, well mannered and inspired with ambition to advance in the ranks, is one of the chief aims of the federal prohibition bureau, Col. Amos W. Woodcock, national director, said today.

"These men must be efficient in their work; have the foresight to make cases presentable to the courts when they make arrests and, more important, must respect the rights of innocent citizens," Colonel Woodcock explained.

Deplores Gunplay

Commenting on what he termed one of the sorest spots in prohibition enforcement, undue gunplay on the part of officers, the director said agents are supplied with guns only to be used in defense of their lives.

"They are under strict orders never to take the offensive with a weapon," he said. "For a time, two or three years ago, the bureau was besieged with complaints against killing of citizens by overzealous agents. We have remedied that situation now, however, and the criticisms have almost ceased."

Colonel Woodcock, a small, professional type of man, shuns spectacular enforcement methods.

"The so-called liquor drives or roundups are not desirable. They detract from the department's prestige. I much prefer methodical and skillful work."

To Visit Texas

He also gave his reassurance that no offensive was planned in the south, as had been anticipated, when 350 new agents are added to the bureau July 1.

"The coast, especially the gulf coast, has always been difficult to handle, but we will maintain the same policy in enforcement here that we do in all other parts of the country," he said.

The director left for Beaumont, Texas, today, continuing a tour of the south which, he said, he is making for the sole purpose of meeting the personnel of the department and establishing a contact with their problems in various sections.

Amarillo Statue To Honor Pioneers

AMARILLO, June 23. (AP)—A bronze statue dedicated to pioneer citizens of the Panhandle will be erected on the courthouse lawn soon after the completion of Potter county's new $450,000 courthouse, county commissioners have announced.

It is planned to combine the statue with an electric fountain which will be located in the center of a scenic park. The courthouse, an office-building type, is being erected on the properly line at the east edge of the square, and faces the west. The block will be beautified when the old buildings have been torn away.

The statue probably will consist of a buffalo hunter, cowboy and pioneer farmer.

Farmers Market Big Bean Crop at St. Jo

Special to The Record News.

SAINT JO, Texas, June 23.—According to Tom L. Duffey, secretary of Saint Jo Truck Growers association, 3,750 pounds of green beans were sold Monday by members of the association. Green beans are being brought to Saint Jo only twice a week, but the farmers are realizing a nice profit from their first attempt at truck farming. The continued hot weather will soon end the truck season if a general rain does not come soon.

Conrad Nagel Ordered To Add to Income Tax

WASHINGTON, June 23. (AP)—Conrad Nagel and the government are at odds over the amount of income tax the movie star owes for 1927.

Nagel reported his total salary for the year at $121,833, but filed separate returns for himself and his wife under the California community property law.

The internal revenue bureau, however, informed him his salary should have been filed in his name and ordered him to pay $2,895 in addition to the $15,717 already assessed.

In taking this action, the bureau said the community property law, which would reduce the amount of tax, was enacted July 28, 1927, and that the income reported for Mrs. Nagel was received before that date.

Wales' 37th Birthday Passes With Still No Bride in Sight

LONDON, June 23. (UP)—The Prince of Wales observed his 37th birthday today, still unmarried.

For nearly 20 years, ever since the prince approached a marrying age, public opinion has expected him to wed. Almost every eligible girl in the world has been suggested as his bride. He has turned them all down, and today is as far from married bliss as he ever was.

From sources close to the royal court, The United Press understands there is growing concern about the prince's apparent lack of interest in marriage.

King Is 66

Briefly, the situation is this: King George is 66 years old. Partly due to his age and partly to illness he can no longer take the active interest in affairs of state that he once did. There is considerable opinion that the time is not so very far distant when the British throne will be vacant.

The question is, will the Prince of Wales become king? It is well-known that he is not very fond of the idea that one day he must become a ruler. The British constitution does not provide that the king must marry, but there is an unwritten law that he should do so, if only to carry on the line of succession.

Public Divided

Observers believe that if the prince is ever going to marry it must be soon because he is very near the dividing line between youth and middle-age, and because it would be a matter of policy to mount the throne accompanied by a queen.

On the other hand there is a fairly large section of the public that is convinced the prince will never marry and will never become king. With absolutely no official basis for its theories, it believes that when the time comes the prince will abdicate in favor of his brother, the Duke of York.

'Chiggers' Attack Texas Timber Land

AUSTIN, June 23. (AP)—The ordinary "chigger," which causes such great physical pain and mental anguish to persons with a penchant for picnicking, is causing serious loss to owners of cedar timber lands this summer in central and west central Texas.

J. M. Del Curto, chief state entomologist, said a recent inspection of several trees disclosed the "chiggers," or red spiders, had established themselves by the thousands on several trees around Austin and were rapidly sucking away the sap of the cedars. Trees most heavily attacked have started turning brown and are dropping, Del Curto said.

The chigger is visible to the eye only through a microscope and its presence is discernible only when it has caused serious damage to the trees. This is the first summer in eight years that cedar trees have been affected, Del Curto said.

He advised use of a sulphur spray on days when the temperature was high as the best method of ridding trees of the pests.

Gangdom's Guns Seen In Chicago Slaying

CHICAGO, June 23. (INS)—Police believed they were confronted with a gangland murder following the discovery today of the body of an unidentified man, about 30, under a railroad viaduct.

The man had been shot three times. The condition of his clothing indicated he had put up a struggle before he was killed. Police expressed the opinion that he had been "taken for a ride."

SPECIALISTS FIND WAY TO WIPE OUT EPIDEMIC OF "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

You may be a victim of the widespread infection commonly called "Athlete's Foot," and still not know what ails you. That is the way authorities explain the fact that over ten million people in the country today have this disease.

If your toes itch with tiny blisters, if the skin between them turns red or white, becomes thick and moist, or develops a scaly dryness—don't take chances on serious complications. Any of these symptoms indicate the presence of this insidious form of ringworm.

Douse ABSORBINE JR. on your feet twice a day. It not only safeguards against dangerous infection, but actually kills the germs wherever it penetrates.

For after extensive tests, specialists of a famous New York laboratory found that this soothing, yet powerful, antiseptic is especially deadly to the tinea trichophyton germs which cause "Athlete's Foot."

It is wise to use ABSORBINE JR. after every exposure to wet surfaces—in public places and even in your own bathroom. For the tiny parasites breed and lurk simply everywhere, and are always ready to attack. At all drug stores, $1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Mass.

MURRAY HITS INSURANCE CO.

Rate Increase Plea Brings Cross Action

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 23. (UP)—Gov. William H. Murray today threatened an Oklahoma insurance company as he instructed Atty. Gen. J. Berry King to file a cross petition asking for lower compensation insurance rates in answer to a plea made by the company for higher rates.

The governor said that insurance and security companies had been threatening state banks that they would withdraw from the state and leave them without protection.

In reply to the threat, Murray issued the following statement:

"We have captured nearly all the bank robbers. Just the other day, the bureau captured one before he could wash his hands after burying the money. No, as a matter of truth, the insurance company rates are too high, so I have directed the attorney general to file a cross petition.

"I will give notice now that they aren't going to scare me. Let the state go into the insurance business and insure the banks and laboring men alike. We will not stand for an increase in rates again."

Health and Diet Advice

Why You Should Perspire

No one should be ashamed of a good healthy perspiration. Alexander the Great was said to have stated that his army could never be conquered as long as his soldiers were required to perspire every day. A good daily sweat is one of the most valuable health measures.

You will undoubtedly remember that I have told you in these columns that the body has four ways of eliminating poisons: the lungs, kidneys, skin and bowels. For those who wish to get well and those who wish to retain their health it is important that they learn how to eliminate poisons through the skin. The healthy skin is always throwing off impurities.

Perspiration may be in two forms; one is the sweat or beads of moisture which you see; the other is in the form of insensible perspiration which you do not see. You lose most perspiration through the latter method. We usually underestimate the value of the skin in throwing off wastes. The normal body has about two and a half million pores through which impurities are constantly being shunted. If all of the pores could be blocked, a person would die in a few minutes because of the extreme toxemia or poisons which result because the pores are no longer open to throw out wastes.

Some pores of the body throw off more perspiration than the others. The hands especially tend toward excessive perspiration. Some diseases are accompanied by heavy night sweats which are always a sign of severe body poisoning and a blocking of some of the other eliminative channels. Every once in a while I get a letter asking about perspiration which stains the clothing brick red. This coloring comes from a certain type of bacteria which infect the sweat glands and can usually be cleared up by using daily baths and rubbing on dry epson salts while the skin is still moist.

I would suggest that you get a good daily sweat not only during the summer but every day in the year. Such sweats are helpful in keeping the pores of the skin active. Those with diseases such as rheumatism, neuritis, obesity, insomnia or any of the diseases not associated with extreme enervation should learn to take daily sweats to purge the body of poisons.

The best way to work up a good sweat is to take exercises such as walking rapidly or running or vigorous setting up exercises. To take a good sweat bath at home try using the hot foot bath. You will get results by first taking a few exercises, then sitting on a chair next to the bath tub with the body wrapped in a woolen blanket and your feet in the hot water. A sweat bath given in bed is valuable in fevers such as influenza and for colds.

There is no doubt that a free sweating of the body eliminates large amounts of waste and brings about rapid recoveries in many disorders. However, the person in good health should also make sure of a daily sweat in order to keep in the best condition.

Excessive perspiration is always a sign of toxemia or a blocking of some of the other channels of elimination. It is better not to suppress this perspiration with chemicals. It is usually a good plan to have a complete examination in order to determine the cause if the perspiration is excessive, or has a bad odor.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Psoriasis

Question—J. D. writes: "I have been troubled with psoriasis for a number of years, and have tried electric treatments, salves, ointments, lotions, etc., which have done no good. Even several skin specialists have failed to help me."

Answer—Your trouble can be entirely cured if you will follow the correct dietetic regimen. Space does not permit me to print the complete instructions, but if you will write to me again, sending your name and address, and a large stamped envelope, I will be glad to forward such information to you.

Sweet Potatoes

Question—Mrs. H. writes: "My children are very fond of sweet potatoes? Are they good for them?"

Answer—Sweet potatoes I place in the "not so good" class, although when properly prepared by roasting or boiling instead of serving "candied yam" fashion with the addition of sugar and fat, they may be used as the starch part of a meal in combination with the nonstarches, such as spinach, string beans, asparagus, etc.

Loose Jointed

Question—T. D. asks: "What makes the joints of a young man's entire body turn out of place? For instance, the wrists, hips or knees can be made to loosen and move about or back and forth. Is it that the joints are not settled, or the ligaments weak?"

Answer—Probably the ligaments are loose. X-ray photographs would determine whether or not the joints are properly formed.

Police Beat Gang To $100,000 Store Of Counterfeiters

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23. (AP)—Because secret service operatives were one jump ahead of a band of hijackers, six men and a woman were under charges of counterfeiting today.

Officers said they comprised the largest counterfeit gang on the Pacific coast in years.

Capt. Thomas Foster, secret service chief, reported word of their plans to flood California with worthless paper had reached both government operatives and a band of Southern California hijackers last Friday.

When five of the asserted counterfeiters went South, Captain Foster related, hijackers were waiting in Los Angeles to relieve them of close to $100,000 in cleverly forged paper. The five escaped the hijackers because government agents intercepted the asserted counterfeiters at Santa Barbara and Santa Rita.

HUSTLING DEFENSE GIVES SPUDS 5 TO 4 VICTORY OVER BUCS

PIRATES POUND STEENGRAFE

'Lefty' Martin and Bell Star For Visitors

By FRED THOMPSON

Lefty Reinhart of Galveston turned in a better pitching job than Milton Steengrafe of the Spudders Tuesday afternoon, but Buccaneer fielding could not compare with that of Williams' gang, and the Spudders won—with difficulty—5 to 4.

Steengrafe started off unsteadily and Galveston had a run before three minutes had elapsed. Reinhart likewise got off to a rocky start and five Spudder hits drove in three runs. With the exception of the third inning, when the Spudders scored their remaining two runs, Reinhart steadied down and pitched good ball the rest of the way, while Steengrafe hardly ever was out of trouble, having things easy in only three innings.

Lefty Martin Stars

They battered Steengrafe for 13 hits, while Reinhart yielded only nine. And who should have a perfect day at bat for the Pirates but E. K. (Lefty) Martin, the brilliant Spudder prospect of the spring training days, who recently was signed by Galveston. Martin blasted out three singles and drew a walk in four times up and led the hitting parade along with Bell, who smote a double and three singles in five times at the plate. Martin, according to Skipper Pratt, had not been hitting since joining the Pirates. He took a long step in the direction leading out of the slump Tuesday, however. Also, he looked the part of a veteran at first.

Coasting along with a three-run lead, Steengrafe almost saw the game swept away from him in the eighth inning, when four Pirates singled in succession, and it was the brilliant work of the Spudder infield that prevented more than two runs crossing the plate.

And more than once the outfield patrol of Garms, Gullic and Fuss came to Steengrafe's rescue. The throwing of Gullic and Fuss was exceptionally good, heaves from the pasture either keeping men on base who otherwise would have scored, or nipping the runners out at home. It was a wild game in spots.

Ted Gullic drove out two doubles and a single to lead the home hitters. He was closely followed by the veteran Bud Hungling, who got two singles in three trips, his blows coming when they were most needed.

The nose-out victory, in addition to being a credit to the hustling defensive spirit of the team, gave the Spudders a start toward squaring accounts with the Buccaneers. The series closes today. A victory today will balance the loss of the series to Galveston the last time Skipper Pratt's boys were here. Lester White probably will start for the Spudders, while Pratt likely will start Dumovich.

Pirates Score in First

Steengrafe made an ineffective start and the Pirates scored easily in the first. Ballew walked, was sacrificed to second by Wilson, took third on Bailey's infield out, and scored on Bell's single down the left field foul line. Martin walked, but Speer popped up to Stanton in shallow right.

In a wild exhibition of baseball, the Spudders scored three runs in their half of the first. Garms, first up, grounded out to first unassisted. Allday singled through second. Stanton dropped a single into left, Allday taking second. Then Gullic hit a line drive to left. It looked like an easy out, so Allday and Stanton held their bases to see what the left fielder would do about it. The ball escaped Bailey, Pirate left fielder, hitting the fence and bounding back into the park. Allday took out for third and Stanton went to second. For some reason Gullic also went to second and was trapped between first and second. He eluded his pursuers, however, and went to second and Stanton headed for third as a play was made for Allday, who had started for home. Allday slid into home safely, and then a play, this time successful, was made for Stanton at third. Stanton was out, catcher to third. With Gullic on second, Hungling singled to left center, scoring the center fielder. Fuss doubled to center, scoring Hungling from first. Scharein lined out to short to retire the side.

Spuds Add to It

The second went scoreless, three men going down on each side. In their half of the third, the Spudders scored two more. Allday walked. Stanton fouled out to third. Gullic doubled to left center, Allday taking third. Hungling singled through second, scoring Allday and Gullic. Fuss struck out and Hungling was doubled at second, catcher to short.

The Bucs tallied in the fourth on Bell's double, followed by Martin's single. Speer forced Martin at second, Euller to Allday. Speer stole second and Molesworth flied out to Garms. Borreani walked. Reinhart singled to right, but Bob Fuss pegged to the plate and Speer was tagged out by Hungling.

The fifth passed quietly. Another close play came in the sixth. Bell singled to center. Martin also singled to center and Bell headed for third. Gullic's throw to Euller was bad, the ball hitting the grandstand near the dugout, but Euller recovered it on the bounce in time to hrow Bell out at the plate. Martin took third on the play. Molesworth flied out to Garms.

Gullic's Third Hit

Gullic opened the home half of the sixth with his third hit of the day, a double to left, the ball dropping between three Pirate players in the shallow part of the field. Hungling lined out to left. Fuss grounded to short and Gullic was run down between second and third, Fuss taking second during the scramble. Scharein grounded out, third to first.

With two out in the seventh, Ballew and Wilson singled, but Bailey flied to Garms. With two Spudders down in the home half, Garms doubled to right but was thrown out at third, right field to short to third. It was probably Les White's fault. White was coaching at third and motioned to Garms to keep on running when the ball already had been thrown in from right.

Hard on Steenie

Steengrafe let up in the first of the eighth and Bell, Martin, Speer and Molesworth singled in succession, driving in a run. With the bases packed, Borreani hit into a double play, Allday to Scharein to Stanton, Martin scoring on the play. Reinhart grounded out, Allday to Stanton, to retire Galveston, with the Pirates only one run behind. Reinhart set three Spudders down in order in the last of the eighth.

The Pirates were still warlike in the ninth, but the rally failed. Ballew popped up to Allday. Wilson singled, but Bailey hoisted to Gullic and Bell grounded out, Scharein to Stanton.

Burke Beats Jones' Score With New Ball

SCIOTO COUNTRY CLUB, Columbus, Ohio, June 23. (AP)—Bill Burke, New York professional, gave the new balloon ball advocates something to shout about today when he finished his 72 hole tour in the struggle for extra berths on the American Ryder cup team with a sizzling 289, one over par for the distance.

The score, turned in despite an adverse wind and hot weather, clipped exactly four strokes off the 293 that Bobby Jones scored to win the national open crown over the same course, in 1926 with the old ball.

Burke's performance gave him the lead by five shots over Wiffy Cox of Brooklyn, who registered 74 and 75 for a grand collection of 294 shots. Craig Wood of Buffalo landed third with a 299, while three others, Densmore Shute of Cleveland, Henry Cuici of Bridgeport, Conn., and Frank Walsh of Chicago tied for the fourth and last place on Walter Hagen's team with 302's. They will play 18 holes tomorrow for the extra spot on the team, which tackles the English team in the tournamental match over Scioto Friday and Saturday.

Three Tie for Medalist At Dallas Country Club

DALLAS, June 23. (AP)—Medalist honors in the qualifying rounds of the Dallas Country club's seventh annual invitation tournament were split three ways today as B. A. Schriever of San Antonio, R. D. Gore, Tennison park, Dallas, and David Goldman of the Dallas Country club tied at 75.

Gore shot sensationally to card seven trays and overcome a seven on the third hole. Goldman, playing consistently, went one above par on each nine while Schriever shot two over par on the first nine, but staged a rally on the back stretch to come in with a 36.

The initial championship flight will get away early tomorrow with R. D. Gore paired with Dennis Lavender of the Cedar Crest club, Dallas. In rapid order will follow 15 pairs.

Browns Win 12-Inning Nightcap, 5-4 After Athletics Take First, 3 to 0

ST. LOUIS, June 23. (AP)—Philadelphia and St. Louis split even in a double-header here today while Washington was winning two from Detroit and gaining a full game on the pace-setting Athletics.

The Athletics won the opener 3 to 0, behind Bob Grove's two-hit pitching and the Browns took the nightcap 5 to 4 in 12 innings. Scores:

CHICAGO, June 23. (AP)—The New York Yankees swept both ends of a double-header from the White Sox today winning the first game 8 to 6, on a ninth inning rally then scoring an easy 9 to 4 victory in the second.

DETROIT, June 23. (AP)—Washington remained close to the heels of Philadelphia by winning both ends of today's double-header with Detroit, the first being a slugfest, which was taken 10 to 3, and the second, a brilliant 10-inning hurling duel between Fred Marberry and George Uhle, ending 4 to 0.

BUFFS' HOPES RUINED

DALLAS, June 23. NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, June 23. (AP)—In contract with yesterday's extreme activity, cotton here today was comparatively quiet, but in spite of an early recationary trend, held most of Monday's advance of nearly $3.50 a bale, and closed at net declines of only 3 to 8 points.

Lower cables, easier stocks, uncertainty over France's attitude to the Hoover international debt proposal and profit-taking, coupled with liquidation by recent buyers on the theory that a reaction was due, brought declines of 12 to 13 points, which later widened to 27 to 30 points. Equal to about $1.50 a bale.

Around mid-session, the market steadied and with only temporary reactions rallied sharply, regaining most of the earlier dip, due to shorts covering with contracts scarce.

Liverpool came in 12 to 13 penny points worse than due and private cables stated that the continent and Bombay sold and one cable stated that the market was somewhat uncertain after the rapid advance and some setbacks appeared likely. Manchester cabled that there was a moderate business in cloths and yarns and there is a disinclination to follow the advance.

The three most active months closed 7 to 8 points net lower for the day.

Port receipts 8,555; for week 11,664; for season 8,814,007; last season 8,690,310. Exports 15,119; for week 30,387; for season 6,580,298; last season 6,341,968. NEW YORK, June 23. (AP)—Cotton opened steady, 9 to 15 points lower.

The more urgent demand stimulated by the debt payment proposals appeared to have been supplied on the excited buying of yesterday and a disposition to take profits on recent purchases was promoted by relatively easy cables and the lower opening of the stock market. Prices worked off to 9.37 for July and 9.98 for December, or about 19 to 24 points net lower by the end of the first half hour.

Liverpool cables said there had been continental and Bombay selling together with realizing in that market. Egyptian cotton in Alexandria was 7 to 18 points lower and the Indian spot quotation in Liverpool showed a decline of 2 points.

Futures opened steady today: July 9.40; Oct. 9.88; Dec. 10.11; Jan. 10.22; March 10.41; May 10.61.

The decline extended to 9.32 for July during the middle of the morning when active months showed net losses of about 23 to 26 points. There was enough buying to absorb offerings on this reaction, however, and the market later turned steadier following reports of renewed steadiness in the stock market.

Prices recovered several points, with the midday market comparatively quiet around 9.38 for July and 10.00 for December. There was a little more talk regarding need of rain in the South. July liquidation was active but was again absorbed by trade buying against sales of the later deliveries.

Futures closed very steady, 3 to 5 points lower; spot quiet; middling 9.70.

Liverpool Cotton

LIVERPOOL, June 23. (INS)—Spots cotton opened quiet today with prices barely steady. Sales amounted to 5,000 bales, and receipts totaled 4,000 bales.

Prices Slip Slightly as Stock Market Sobers From Big Spurt

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, June 23. (US)—On a greatly reduced turnover the stock market today performed in more sedate fashion and prices on the average worked somewhat lower. This was also true of most other markets, domestic and foreign, which had enthusiastically greeted the debt-holiday proposal but apparently lacked the stimulus of additional cheerfulness.

Nevertheless, an unbiased observation would concede that the stock market rather impressively maintained its advance since the declines were generally modest, and especially so, when contrasted with the vigorous advance of the preceding two market days.

Profit-taking was rather general in all markets, particularly in stocks and a reaction was almost universally conceded as logical and, in fact, to be desired if harmful effects of an exaggerated market celebration were to be avoided after the initial outburst of optimism over the revival of hopes for solution of the international financial problems a more calm and conservative view was to be anticipated.

Dealings on the stock exchange were two million shares under the previous day's total of 4,600,000.

The international prospects which inspired the rapid recovery having lessened as a market influence, the domestic situation quite naturally assumed greater relative importance and the disclosure of a further sharp decline in steel operations, car loadings declining greater than seasonally, helped to sober the market. Then, too, it was more fully appreciated that an indiscriminate advance in prices was hardly warranted by the continuance of unfavorable conditions in industry, even though the long-pull prospects may have been improved by the debt-holiday proposition.

Furthermore, it was recognized that the French answer to the debt proposal, admittedly holding the key to the entire proposal, may not be a complete compliance with the Hoover request. A conditional or modified acceptance would reintroduce the element of doubt which might undo most of the good already accomplished by the remainder of the world's enthusiastic acceptance of the debt-holiday. In any event, it is to be recognized that the debt suspension must be considered a prelude to debt revision. There is nothing to prevent Germany's request for additional delay at the expiration of the one-year lapse in payments.

The debt proposal still is to be considered primarily in the psychological sense. A revival of activity and accompanying strength in the oil stocks today led to reports that important conferences have been resumed in this industry, with a view, according to one version, toward reaching an agreement which would prevent selling below production costs. The industry's leaders have tried for months, and even for years, to reach some basis for stabilizing conditions, up to date have made little progress.

The California situation, to be sure, looks more promising, but other spots in the situation, such as East Texas, have not improved.

Speculation rather than investment accounts for the occasional spurts of strength in the oil industry. Investors will wait for concrete evidence of fundamental improvement.

Copper shares as a group opposed the general market's trend, with Anaconda, Kennecott and other coppers showing net gains on strengthening in the price of the metal, which was advanced one-quarter cent a pound to 8¼ cents. There is little question but that the copper trade would be an immediate and substantial beneficiary of any improvement in world conditions and the metal is accepted by some of the most astute economic students as one of the most reliable of all indices to industrial conditions and prospects.

The Anaconda dividend is to be considered Thursday and some observers read the stock's firmness as an indication of the maintenance of the $1.50 payment, but the yield of 5½ per cent seems to reflect only moderate confidence.

Various directorates meet to consider dividends tomorrow and Thursday and they have a grand opportunity to testify concretely to their faith in the business outlook by maintaining their distributions for another quarter at least.

The Westinghouse meeting tomorrow will be closely watched for directors' views. The most widespread expectation was that the rate will be lowered to $2, with the extremists among the bears forecasting complete omission. The Westinghouse company is fairly well supplied with cash resources and the directors, if they feel reasonably confident of the outlook, would make another distribution, perhaps at a smaller rate than the current $4 basis. The stock was firm today despite bear pressure.

Other meetings of importance tomorrow and Thursday include Baltimore & Ohio, Gold Dust, Pennsylvania Railroad, Electric Power & Light, U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

Steel common sold down two points on the lower operations; it was surprising that the big corporation's decline amounted to 4 per cent whereas the independents were down only 2 per cent. American Can and other leaders were also lower.

Pool favorites made the best display and it is considered almost certain that reasonable firmness in the market will encourage many additional pool activities.

BOSTON WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, June 23. (AP)—Wool prices showed a marked general strengthening tendency. Several houses have advanced, asking prices 1 cent a pound in the grease, on the finer grades of Ohio and similar fleeces and in a few instances the higher prices have been realized on sizeable quantities. On western grown wools asking prices are stronger than last week with sales mostly on the high side of the last week's price ranges.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 23. (AP)—Tumbled down by farm board announcements of unaltered selling policy and by word that an allied organization was selling, wheat prices today collapsed 2¼ cents. The Farmers National Grain company, a government sponsor body, was reported to be selling June wheat at Minneapolis, notwithstanding Minneapolis arrivals of new wheat from Oklahoma. Harvesting of domestic winter wheat in the Southwest was reported making rapid progress, with yields above expectation.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1⅛@1⅝c down, corn 1@1⅝c off, oats at ⅜c decline, and provisions unchanged to 7c setback.

Sharp breaks in wheat prices came as soon as trading started. Denials that United States government sponsored wheat holdings of upwards of 200,000,000 bushels would be withdrawn from the market were at hand, as well as news of quick odwnturns in Liverpool wheat quotations. Bears laid stress also on fear expressed abroad that France would not agree to President Hoover's moratorium proposal. There were advices too, that Russian spring wheat seeding had reached a total of 60,000,000 acres, compared with 50,400,000 a year ago.

Although selling orders came in a big wave during the early dealings, it was not until the final hour that the day's lowest price level for wheat was reached. Lack of buying power in the market became acute just before the close, owing partly to the fact that primary arrivals of new wheat totalled 332 cars, including some here and at Minneapolis. Another bearish influence was that North American wheat export business appeared to be at almost a complete halt.

Drouth news from Canada and from parts of the American northwest was ignored, and 7,194,000 bushels decrease of world stocks of wheat received likewise but scanty notice.

Corn and oats gave way with wheat and as a result of highly auspicious corn belt weather conditions.

Closing indemnities: Wheat, July 56⅝@56¾, 58⅜c; Sept. 57⅞@53⅝, 59⅝@59⅝c; Dec. 61⅞@62, 63⅝@64c. Corn, July 57¼, 58⅝c; Sept. 55½, 57c; Dec. 48⅝, 49⅝c.

PIT NOTES

CHICAGO, June 23. (US)—With an extremely heavy arrival of new wheat at southwestern markets this early in the season, unusually heavy hedging pressure before the first of the month seems likely. Washington's denial of any change in the farm board's selling policy will undoubtedly continue to check any undue buying enthusiasm. However, feeling is more friendly.

Kansas City papers are headlining "Harvest Is On" and "Combines Lead Way." This from Southwest Kansas, which is running 15 bushels to the acre and test weight high. Farmers are getting 40 cents for wheat.

Broomhall reports North American shipments of wheat and flour last week at 7,798,000 bushels, compared with 6,444,000 the preceding week, bringing the total since July 1 last to 361,476,000 bushels, against 312,962,000 a year ago and 533,947,000 two years ago.

LUCEY ASKS IMPORT CUT

Oil Leader Appeals to Lamont for Curb

DALLAS, June 23. (AP)—Capt. J. F. Lucey, chairman of the East Texas oil arbitration committee, said today he had written Secretary of Commerce Lamont requesting that he endeavor to obtain a further reduction in the amount of crude oil being imported into the United States.

He pointed out that oil imports at present are being restricted to 75 per cent of the former volume through a voluntary agreement among importers, arranged by Secretary Lamont.

Captain Lucey said that while he did not ask for any specific reduction, he hoped the commerce secretary would obtain another 25 per cent, bringing the new volume to 50 per cent of its former total.

The Cranfill plan of voluntary production reduction to 300 barrels per 20-acre unit in the East Texas field was presented yesterday by Captain Lucey's committee to the state railroad commission, with the request it be issued in the form of a commission order.

Captain Lucey said the committee had no further steps in prospect if the commission decided not to issue an order embodying the plan when it meets to pass new proration orders next Monday.

Senators Walter Woodul of Houston, W. A. Williamson of San Antonio and Clint Small of Wellington have publicly declared themselves in favor of a special legislative session to consider oil legislation and Representatives Charles McCombs of Dallas and Ray Holder of Lancaster have made similar expressions.

Newcastle's Ancient Mother City Plans Historical Pageant

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, England, June 23. (AP)—This ancient city of the North country, which lends its name to 18 American towns, one of them in Texas, is going to live again some of its splendid days.

Newcastle is older, really, than the days to which its pageant will return July 20-25, for the pageant picks up the story in 122 A. D. and Newcastle had learned a lot by that time.

Divided into eight episodes, the pageant opens with the arrival of the Roman emperor Hadrian, who commanded the building of the Roman bridge across the Tyne.

Ameilduna, queen of a tribe at Newcastle, ventured to defy the Pictish king, figuring the Romans would rescue her. She is saved by the Sixth Roman legion just as the Picts are about to do her in. In the pageant the Newcastle Royal Grammar school is providing the entire Roman army.

The second episode deals with the bringing of St. Cutchbert's body to Newcastle, after it had been taken to Ripon to escape the fury of the Danish invasion, A. D., 995.

The other episodes deal with stirring incidents in Britain's history which took place at Newcastle, ending with a reproduction of an 18th century fair.

Some 6,000 performers will take part in the pageant, and there will be a chorus of 500 and an orchestra of 100.

And to add a modern touch there will be a jazz band contest in which 72 bands will compete.

Lampasas County Plans 75th Birthday Fiesta

LAMPASAS, Texas, June 23. (AP)—Lampasas county's 75th birthday will be observed with a three-day celebration Aug. 6, 7 and 8.

Ball games, athletic contests, pageants, a bathing girls' revue, an Indian fight and a giant barbecue are among the events on the program.

The development of the county will be depicted in the pageant, the highlight of the spectacle being the Indian fight in which 150 persons will participate. The county was established in 1856.

State officials have been invited to attend the birthday observance.

'Dog Days' Are Myth Says Texas Doctor

AUSTIN, Texas, June 23. (AP)—A simple plan for eliminating rabies in dogs has been advanced by Dr. Sidney M. Bohls, director of the state Pasteur institute. Dr. Bohls annually treats hundreds of Texans who have been bitten by mad dogs.

Rabies could be stamped out by muzzling every dog in the state for one year, Dr. Bohls stated. By this method, each dog affected with rabies would die without transferring the disease, which is communicable. Rabies in England was eliminated in this way, he said.

The next best plan for stamping out the dreaded malady is the inoculation or vaccination of dogs.

Doctor Bohls said the number of persons treated for mad dog bites showed a steady decline in the past few years, attributing the decrease to the hesitancy of persons to pick up stray dogs and bring them home as playmates for their children. Another reason for the decrease was that persons are becoming more cautious and when a person is bitten by a dog, the canine is tied up for 10 days to determine if it has rabies.

Doctor Bohls exploded an ancient belief when he said there are more cases of rabies in the colder months of winter than in the supposedly hot "dog days." He attributed the belief to an ancient negro superstition, claiming the theory has been disproven without controversy. "As a matter of fact, more dogs go mad in the winter because the cold weather lowers their resistance to the disease," he said.

run around with the first man who asks you out. Well, that's what Ann did, and nothing else matters to me."

"Won't you listen to reason?"

"There's no reason in it at all, that I can see. I lose my job, laid off for a month, and promptly my wife starts going out with another man."

"It wasn't that, Mac. Ann would have been fired if she hadn't gone out with Mr. Warner and she didn't want to lose her job—you know Mr. Warner—"

"Yes, I've heard enough about him—and that's what sickens me—that Ann should have gone with him—"

"You're going to come back with me," Sally insisted, "and see Ann. She's at my apartment."

Again Mac laughed the same harsh laugh that went through Sally like a knife. "I? You're wrong, Sally. I have no intention of coming back with you—and no intention of seeing Ann again. You could give her a message from me, though, if you will." He was pacing the floor very fast, throwing cigaret ashes on the floor as he walked.

Sally sat holding her breath, wondering what was coming. From his face there was no hope. It was as relentless as ever.

Sally Is Unsuccessful

"You might tell her again that I never want to see her again, never want to talk to her again. And that, if she wants a divorce she can get it. I won't bother. I'm through with her, with everything. Tonight I'll pack up whatever she has here—she only took her clothes because I packed them for her, and made her take them—and I'll send them to your apartment."

"You don't know what you're doing—"

"Of course I do. A man loves a woman, and the woman fails him, just when he needs her most. If you were a man you'd see my viewpoint, but you aren't a man. You're a woman like Ann, and you'd probably do the same thing she has. I idolized Ann. No man ever loved a woman more than I loved her—and now it's over. All of it. I'll never be able to forgive her, so that's the reason I sent her away. I'd never be able to trust her again."

"You're going to ruin both of your lives—"

"What difference does that make? Mine is ruined already."

Sally saw it was useless arguing with him any more, so she got up to go.

"Will you give her that message?"

"No, I won't, Mac."

"Then I'll write to her and tell her—"

"No!" Sally was frightened. "Don't write. I'll—tell her." She wouldn't but Mac needn't know that. She couldn't have him writing to Ann, breaking her heart all over again.

Sally Sees Peter's Mother

On paper his words would be terrible. Better to promise that she'd tell Ann and then when she got to Ann, concoct some story, tell her Mac wasn't at home when she got there. That was it. That she'd waited, and Mac wasn't there.

She didn't take a taxi back, but walked to the subway slowly, thinking over what Mac had said, worrying about what she would tell Ann. Dreading to see her, because of her failure. She had done her best, and that had been no good. Mac was so blind, Why were men so blind? If he only would forgive Ann, take her back, everything would be fine. Ann wouldn't err again, Sally knew.

Sighing, she slid into a seat, and closed her eyes. When she opened them again with a start, thinking she had gone past her station, she saw a woman in black beside her. The figure was vaguely familiar. Those pearl beads around a chalk white throat. Sally couldn't see the woman's face because it was turned the other way.

Then she knew, without seeing the face. The woman was Peter's mother.

Mrs. Douglas must have felt her start, for she looked around.

"Oh, it's Miss Blair—" the voice was friendly, affable. "How nice to see you again."

Sally mumbled something thinking of the last time she had seen Mrs. Douglas. That call she had made. How furious she had been. And now she was saying quite calmly, "How nice to see you again."

Sally, worried about Ann's heartbreak, has her own wound opened again at the sight of Peter's mother.

O. C. DRAWING ON STORAGE

Production for Week Fails To Meet Demand

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., June 23.—So great has become the demand for oil in the Oklahoma City field by purchasers of crude oil, that 92,798 barrels were withdrawn from the steel storage in the field over the week-end to take care of requirements.

Production Sunday totaled 148,836 barrels of oil from 90 wells, while Monday the field gauged 153,431 barrels. Sunday pipe line runs totaled 203,231 barrels and Monday 192,836 barrels.

The only well completed during the week-end was the Phillips Petroleum company's No. 2 Highland, in the southwest of the northeast of 10-11-3w, which was completed to flow 5,164 barrels of oil in three hours and 15 minutes, together with a gas flow of 34,000,000 feet. The well is bottomed at 6463 feet with the six-inch pipe at 6304 feet.

American Oil company's No. 1 Washington, in the southwest of the northwest of the southwest of 35-12-3w, is connecting up to complete at a total depth of 6357 feet.

Morgan Petroleum company's No. 1 Stout-Gibbons, in the northeast corner of the southeast of 34-12-3w, is expected to complete today at a total depth of 6460 feet. The top of the sand was found at 6240 feet with the six-inch pipe at 6243 feet.

S. M. Stauffer's No. 1 Jones, in the northwest corner of 2-11-3w, set the nine-inch pipe at 6380 feet with a total depth of 5383 feet after finding the checkerboard lime at 5325 feet.

Jack Shaffer's No. 1 Detterding, in the northeast of the southwest of the northwest of 10-11-3w, set the nine-inch pipe at 5445 feet with a total depth of 5473 feet after finding the checkerboard lime at 5464 feet.

Nine persons, seven of whom were children of 6 to 17 years of age, were examined for tuberculosis at the Wichita General hospital Monday, when the first free tuberculosis clinic was held by the Wichita County Tuberculosis association.

Of the group there were two cases where suspicious symptoms were found, according to Miss Mary Quinn, executive secretary of the association, and they will be subjected to a second examination later when X-ray equipment can be arranged for the clinic. Several of the remaining persons examined are to be kept under observation and will return for examinations at the end of three months.

The clinic was conducted by Drs. F. R. Collard and Austin F. Leach. About 15 minutes were required to examine each person. First examinations were made with the stethoscope to determine chest and lung irregularities. In cases so warranting, it is hoped to provide later a supplementary X-ray examination.

Clinical examinations are given only to persons who are unable to pay regular physicians for the service. Clinics will be held every fourth Tuesday of the month hereafter, it was announced.

RITES SAID FOR BULLET VICTIM

J. E. Holman Buried In Seymour Cemetery

Special to The Record News.

SEYMOUR, Texas, June 23.—Funeral services for Johnny E. Holman, 51, lifelong resident of Baylor county who was found shot to death in the barn on his farm home near Mabelle Monday, were held here today.

Many of his numerous friends and acquaintances residing over this section attended the services which were held at the Seymour cemetery. Rev. E. C. Cargill of the First Presbyterian church officiated.

A coroner's verdict, after an inquest over the body Monday, was that death was caused by self-inflicted gunshot wounds. Two shots had been fired from a .22 rifle found near the man on the barn floor. One shot, apparently the first, pierced the man's ear and grazed the skull. The second bullet entered the skull just above the eye. A blood-stained handkerchief in the man's pocket indicated the first wound had been cleaned before the second shot was fired. A suicide cause could not be determined.

Holman was borh and reared in Baylor county, and at the time of his death operated a 500-acre farm a few miles south of Mabelle.

Among those attending services other than close relatives, were Oscar Holman of Vernon, a cousin; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Carr of Alpine, Texas, parents-in-law; Joe Carr of Texon and Brantley Carr of Houston, brothers-in-law; and Mrs. Sam Lucas of Houston, sister-in-law.

In addition to the widow, he is survived by three sons, J. C., J. E., and Phillip Holman who resided with him on the farm; three sisters, Mrs. Cody Tucker and Mrs. Bob Reeder, also residing on the farm, and Mrs. F. Tucker of Seymour; and one brother, Oscar Holman, of Los Angeles, Calif.
