The Northwest Texas Press Association is to hold its meeting at Memphis today and tomorrow. We are in receipt of a very courteous and urgent invitation from the commercial club of Memphis to attend and they promise to give the newspaper men better entertainment than that accorded them at the meeting there last year, which is saying a great deal, for last year it looked like every consideration was given the press men. It is with the deepest regret that the writer will not be able to attend.

OUTLOOK GOOD

Recent good rains over nearly all of the Panhandle and Plains country has perceptibly brightened the outlook for The Panhandle State Fair, to be held at Amarillo October 6th to 11th, and the Fair management is more enthused than ever over the prospect for a notable first year's success.

Those who have visited the old Glenwood Park near Amarillo in the past will rub their eyes when they look upon it in October. An army of workmen have been busy for weeks constructing the substantial stock barns, hog and sheep pens, main exhibition Hall, special County Agricultural Hall, lunch rooms, grand stand, etc.

The new half mile track was in excellent condition before the rains, but now it is packed solidly, harrowed, rolled and in almost perfect shape.

Several large silo companies will exhibit models on the grounds, many machinery houses have taken space, the ladies textile department promises to eclipse anything ever seen in Texas before, and entries (Continued on last page)

TABOGA ISLAND AND PORTO BELLO

BY E. W. PICKARD
PHOTOS BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

1—Remains of One of the Spanish Forts at Porto Bello. 2—Native Village on Taboga Island.

"Down verdure-clad slopes and terracing reaches Where orange and mango and pine apple grow,
One wanders through Eden to ocean-washed beaches—
An Eden that only the sun-children know."

Thus James S. Gilbert, the late lamented poet of Panama, wrote of Taboga Island. It was so enticing that I determined to be one of the sun-children for a day or two and so steamed away in a little launch twelve miles out into the Pacific to that beauty spot. It is all that Mr. Gilbert called it, and more, and it is no wonder that the sanitarium, established there by the French canal company and reopened by the Americans, is so well patronized. If you are a canal employee—white—and have been ill, the doctor may be kind enough to send you over to Taboga for two weeks to recuperate. If you are a mere visitor you can put up at the unpretentious little hotel conducted by William Jones, the American six-footer who looks like a miner and dances like a cotillon leader. In either case you will be fortunate, for you will find those "verdure-clad slopes" gorgeous with flowers and alive with brilliant birds, and the "ocean-washed beaches," the finest places in the world for a swim. You can sail about the pretty bays with the native fishermen, or you can climb up the hills where the boys are vociferously driving the kine home to be milked, or you can merely lie in the shade and dream dreams of the Spanish galleons and the buccaneers. A more delightful place for rest and the repair of shattered nerves would be hard to find.

Taboga has a history, too, small as it is. De Laque, the second bishop of Panama, looked upon the island, saw that it was good and established there his country residence. In fact he maintained a household there the year round, for, like many another churchman of the old days, he did not adhere closely to the rule of celibacy. His memory is preserved by a bathing place in a stream that runs down the mountain side, called the Bishop's Pool. It was reserved for the use of him and his retinue. Above it is the Family Pool, for women and children, and still higher up is the Pool of the Letters, for the men. The last one derives its name from the inscription "J. F. B., Ohio" carved on a near-by rock. This is a reminder that in 1852 the Fourth Infantry, U. S. A., crossed the isthmus en route for garrison duty in California, having sailed from New York on the United States mail steamer Ohio. Cholera was prevalent at the time in Panama and the American soldiers and the sailors from the Ohio were attacked by the disease, about eighty of them dying. Some of the sick were left on Taboga Island to recover, and evidently one of them did recover sufficiently to climb up to the bathing pool and leave the record that is a mystery to the native inhabitants of this day. Incidentally U. S. Grant, then a captain, was with the Fourth Infantry on that trip.

If you climb up the hill, following this stream most of the way, you will come to a place at the summit of a pass called Las Cruces. There, set in cement, are three small crosses commemorating the most exciting incident in the island's history. According to a Spanish work written early in the last century, a shipload of Peruvian pirates came sailing up the coast in 1815 and decided Taboga was a good place to loot. They landed and drove the small Spanish garrison out of the village and up the mountain. But in the pass the soldiers rallied, the inhabitants came to their assistance and there, says the chronicler, a most bloody combat raged for hours. Finally the pirates were routed and fled to their ship, leaving three men dead on the field of battle!

The isthmus reeks with history, some of the most interesting passages of which have to do with Porto Bello. But the visitor who goes there with mind full of the mighty fights and great trade of the old Spanish days will be woefully disappointed by the town as it now is. Romance, commerce, everything attractive has fled long ago from that place and Porto Bello is nothing but a dirty, immoral little village, full of low cantinas, slatternly natives and mangy curs. At each side of the town is the ruin of a Spanish fort, its picturesqueness marred by fishermen's nets and the local washing hung up to dry.

Thus the work of man has decayed, but Nature is as kind as ever to Porto Bello. Its bottle-shaped harbor is one of the prettiest to be found, with promontories guarding the entrance, beautiful hills on both sides and entrancing little rivers meandering down from the mountains and through the jungle into its upper end. One hill opposite the town boasts the remains of three unusually interesting Spanish forts. One is at the water's edge, another several hundred yards up the slope, and these two were once connected by a covered stone stairway the ruins of which still provide the easiest means of ascending. On the summit of the hill is the third fort, a mighty square tower surrounded by a deep moat. The walls are almost intact but the roof has fallen in and the fortress is full of trees and shrubbery.

With these three forts, two others protecting the harbor entrance, the two at the ends of the town and another just above it, Porto Bello might well seem to have been impregnable, yet it was taken twice by the English. Sir Francis Drake planned to capture it in 1596, but just as his ships were about to begin the attack Drake died and was buried in the mouth of the harbor. Dispirited by the loss of their leader, the English sailed away, but Capt. William Parker took up the project in 1602. With two ships he got past the first forts at night and after a desperate fight captured and sacked the city, carrying off 10,000 ducts' worth of plunder.

The second taking of Porto Bello was the first notable exploit of Henry Morgan, the famous buccaneer, as an independent commander of a fleet. Sailing into what is now Colon harbor, he took his men up a river in canoes, landed at a place called Estera Longa Lemos and marching through the jungle, attacked the city from the rear. First capturing the castle above the town, he shut the garrison in one room and blew them and the fort to pieces with gunpowder. The governor, the citizens and the rest of the soldiers, surprised and terror-stricken, were soon driven into one of the other forts and for hours they bravely withstood the assaults of the buccaneers until, as Esquemeling tells us, Captain Morgan began to despair of the whole success of the enterprise. Finally he had a number of ladders made and forced the priests and nuns whom he had captured to set them up against the walls. Many of these poor creatures were killed by the defenders, but at last the ladders were placed and the buccaneers swarmed up them carrying fireballs and pots of powder which they kindled and hurled among the Spaniards. The garrison surrendered at discretion, but the gallant governor defended himself so obstinately that the English were forced to kill him. Morgan remained in Porto Bello several weeks, plundering the place and torturing the citizens to induce them to reveal the hiding places of their riches.

Though an important place in the transshipment of gold from the west coast of South America, Porto Bello never was a large town, but for several weeks each year it was very populous. This was at the time of the annual fair, when the galleons from Spain were in the harbor waiting for the mule trains to bring the gold from Panama. Then merchants and adventurers from all that part of the world gathered in the village and trade was brisk in the big building now called the custom house, whose ruined walls still are standing. Merchandising, drinking and fighting divided the time until the galleons set sail for Spain with their golden cargoes.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY EVENING

Entered as second-class matter Aug. 25, 1909, at the post office at Wellington, Texas, under the act of March 3, 1879.

Friday Evening, Sep. 19, 1913.

Leader Printing Co., Owners

A gentleman down in Cottle county has announced as a candidate for congress against Hon. John H. Stephens. All we have to say is that he is going to have to run some if he keeps in sight of the fog of the track where Stephens runs.—Memphis Herald.

Yes, and then run some more.

Senator Morris Sheppard is one of the brilliant speakers of Texas, and his speeches are not only brilliant but they are full of wisdom. He made a tariff talk a few days ago that is looked upon as one of the best made in the United States senate in years. The argument he advanced cannot be answered and will not be by either the republicans or his opponents in Texas. Texas did proud in electing Hon. Morris Sheppard to the senate.—Childress Index.

And no section of the state rolled up a bigger vote for him than did the Panhandle, and our people rejoice over the fine record he is making.

My how we would enjoy boxing the ears of those silly girls who stood under Thaw's window at the jail last Sunday and tried to get him to notice them by calling his name and waving bouquets at him. If girls ever needed spanking, those girls certainly did. That sort of girls do not stop to think what they are doing. Flirting with a decent man is bad enough, but to carry on, or try to carry on, with a debased man like Harry Thaw is going some.—Higgins News.

Chairman Lindsey's investigation of methods of distributing agricultural products in the German Empire presents many important lessons to the Texas farmer. His report shows that through organization and government supervision, the German farmers receive 25 to 30 per cent more for their products and yet the consumer pays less than in markets where the American methods prevail. The farmer can neither help himself nor be helped by others until he organizes and it is up to the Texas farmer to perfect the Farmers' Union in co-operative work. In union there is strength and in co-operation there is profit.

The National Farmers' Union in session at Saline, Kansas, has asked for a square deal from congress on the marketing of farm products. The Federal Government has been spending millions of dollars annually in urging the farmer to increase production, but little attention has been given to the marketing side of the question. It is a well known paradox that the larger the crop, the less the value and a stimulant to production without corresponding aid in marketing, loses much of its worth to agriculture. The Nation is fast awakening to the fact that marketing, and not production, is the problem of the farmer.

The wild Indians of the plains—the genuine blanket-wearing, feather-decorated red men of the prairies—are almost a thing of the past. Where they have not been decimated by disease and living under conditions for which their nature unfits them, they have lost their distinctive character through contact with civilization. They have learned to dress like the white man and they have absorbed the white man's ways. The Wild West shows have undoubtedly done a great deal to civilize the Indians. They have brought the Indian in contact with the white man's world by travel and by association; and no matter how aboriginal an Indian may be, a season or two "on the road" will change his character and give him many of the ideas and aspirations of the white man—and sometimes his faults. While this civilizing process is beneficial in the majority of instances, it destroys for the public the romance of the Indian character. The public prefers to see the real Indian, fresh from his wild state on the reservations, and not the Indian whose only claim to being an aborigine is his color and an Indian dress which he may doff after the show.

The manager of the Oklahoma Ranch Wild West show, which exhibits in Hollis on Saturday, September 27th, have, it is announced, made a successful effort to gather together a congress of real, wild Indians—Indians who have never before been identified with an amusement institution, and who are now coming in contact with the white man's civilization for the first time. This, it is evident, serves to give the performance a character for genuineness that is absent from the usual Wild West exhibition. These Indians have been selected from some of the Oklahoma tribes as well as from the reservation of the Northwest. There are splendid specimens of the Sioux, Nez Perces, Pot-Bouille, Flathead, Cheyenne, Apache, Comanche and other tribes. The braves are accompanied by their squaws and papposes, and the Indian camp, with its tepees, its ponies and its semi-barbaric decorations is one of the most interesting features of camp life on the grounds of the big show. The Indians are utilized in the battle scenes and in the picturesque street parade which takes place at 10:30 on the morning of the exhibition.

Col. Zack Mulhall, the famous Oklahoma ranchman, and his no less famous daughters, Lucille and Georgie; thrilling auto polo, and other big features are announced for the show.—Adv.

.22 RIFLES

The Little Rifles—Big in Quality

YOU are going to buy a .22 calibre rifle, single shot or repeater—you'll find that many well known crack shots started with a Remington-UMC .22. Their advice now would be "By all means, get a Remington-UMC" because they know that there is a tendency in some quarters to look upon these models as only "a small boy's rifle" and to cheapen them so that they can be sold at a price.

You have just as much right to expect full shooting value in your .22 calibre arm as in your $75 big game rifle.

You want the Remington-UMC single shot at from $3 to $6, .22, .25-10 or .32 calibre, made by the same people who make the famous Remington-UMC Autoloading Rifles.

Or, if you prefer the repeating rifle, the Remington-UMC slide action .22 repeater with its easy take-down and special safety features, shooting .22 short, .22 long or .22 long rifle cartridges, at $10 and up, is your arm. Sold by live dealers of this community—the most popular small calibre rifles in America.

Pure Food.

T. H. Johnson of Austin, pure food inspector, was in the city the first of the week looking over the town and examining the stores and performing the various duties pertaining to his office.

Among other things, Mr. Johnson recommended that the various stores in the city, when buying eggs, candle every egg that is purchased. He says that it is strictly against the law for anyone to offer eggs for sale that are the least degree tainted. It is a crime for the farmer to market such eggs, and it is also a crime for the merchant to offer the same for sale.

Primarily the marketing of good eggs depends on the farmer, and Mr. Johnson makes some recommendations on this subject that ought to be of interest to every farmer in the country.

Among other things Mr. Johnson says:

Produce infertile eggs. Prevent loss from bad eggs.

The loss to the farmers of the United States from bad methods of producing and handling eggs is estimated at $45,000,000 annually.

It is also estimated that $15,

000,000 of this loss is due to blood rings.

Every dollar of this loss from blood rings is directly preventable on the farm.

Blood rings are a certain stage of chick development in the egg.

Heat develops the germ until it becomes a blood ring.

Blood rings often develop in the nest and in an unheated room in the house during the hot summer weather.

Blood rings—mark this passage well—can not be produced in the infertile egg.

Blood rings are troublesome only in hot weather.

Infertile eggs are eggs laid by hens that are not allowed to run with a male bird.

The infertile egg is the quality egg; therefore produce it, by removing the male birds from the flock and realize more money for better eggs.

The removal of the male birds has absolutely no inducement on the egg production.

Farmers are urged to adhere strictly to the following rules in handling their poultry and eggs.

1. Keep the nests clean, provide one nest for every four hens.

2. Gather the eggs twice

WATER! WATER!

The Discovery of Subterranean Lakes and Impounding of Rainfall Reclaiming Arid Regions.

The cry of Water! Water! as it echoes throughout the arid regions of the state and this abundant liquid gushes to the surface to moisten the parched earth, is a welcome sound to every farmer. Subterranean lakes are so frequently discovered and rainfall so easily impounded, that water has become largely a question of effort.

Water has caused more trouble by its abundance or scarcity and has more often become a welcome or a disagreeable guest, than any other element in nature. Its proper distribution has baffled even the skill of divinity and getting it in the right place at the right time is one of the greatest problems that confronts the people of today.

The solution of this important problem insofar as human ingenuity has been able to solve it, will be demonstrated at the exhibits of irrigating machinery at the State Fair of Texas at Dallas, Oct. 18th to Nov. 2nd. Machinery adapted to every need and condition from pumping water into the kitchen sink to irrigating a league of land will be shown and its utility proved.

These exhibits are as interesting to the housewife as to the ranchman. Drawing water from the well is one of the most back-breaking of household duties and the shifting of this burden to machinery is one of the educational features of the Fair. There are a million homes in Texas that should be equipped with the latest modern conveniences in these labor-saving devices.

We have 5,238 farms under irrigation in the State, containing 451,000 acres. The bulk of our irrigated lands is devoted to the culture of rice, the total acreage devoted to this cereal being 287,000. Alfalfa is the second important irrigated crop and 13,780 acres are devoted to its culture while corn takes third place with 9,068 acres. The cost of construction of Texas' irrigation systems is estimated at $18,500,000 by the Federal Census Bureau. It costs approximately an average of $3.50 per acre to irrigate land, depending upon the character of the crop. The yield per acre of crops under irrigation approximates 45 per cent higher than that of those raised under natural methods.

3. Keep the eggs in a cool, dry room or cellar.

4. Market the eggs at least twice each week.

5. Sell, kill, or confine all male birds as soon as the hatching season is over.

THERE IS NO EXCUSE FOR A ROTTEN EGG.

There is no way to preserve eggs legally except by refrigeration. Eggs will keep in this hot climate, however, if the hens and roosters are kept separate after all eggs are obtained for the "setting" season. Eggs afterwards laid are not fertile. Then the infertile eggs will keep a week or two in this hot climate.

A FERTILE EGG can not be preserved with "water glass." It is unfortunate that the authors of physiologies and books of agriculture have advised that this is an effective preservative

MILLION BARRELS OF FOREIGN FLOUR IS SOLD IN TEXAS ANNUALLY.

Texas Millers Heavy Purchasers of Oklahoma and Kansas Wheat.

Industry Susceptible to Marvelous Development.

The flour mills of Texas constitute one of the most important industries in the State. According to the Federal census report of 1910, we have 233 mills, employing 1,899 people and representing an investment of $13,219,000. The industry has shown an increase of 118 mills and an increase of investment during the past decade of $9,236,000 and now ranks third among our industries as to capital and second in value of its output.

We have a flour milling capacity of 7,800,000 barrels annually. The average consumption per capita is about one barrel per annum or approximately 4,000,000 barrels, leaving 3,800,000 barrels to seek an export market. A few mills not able to enter the export trade have been compelled to shut down for want of a market, although a million barrels of foreign flour are sold in Texas each year. The patronage of home industry would open these mills and give employment to 500 people and increase the demand for wheat raised by the Texas farmers.

The miller is perhaps the only manufacturer in Texas that has outgrown the raw material produced on our farms. We produced last year 11,025,000 bushels of wheat which is 25,000,000 below the annual capacity of the mills. The Texas millers are heavy purchasers of Oklahoma and Kansas wheat. A number of the Texas mills have built up an extensive export trade with Central America, Cuba, Porto Rico, and quite a few of them go to England and the Continent with a considerable bulk of their output.

The opening of the Panama canal will enlarge the marketing zone of the Texas output and call for an increase in the area of our wheat fields, but both the farmer and the miller need the friendship of the consumer in building up our flour industry.

of eggs. When a fertile egg—and practically all commercial eggs in Texas are fertile—is warmed to our summer temperature, the chick germ in the egg will grow until the oxygen in the egg is consumed. Then it will die. Then the egg contains dead animal matter. You know what dead animal matter will do at our summer temperature. It is unwholesome food for human beings.

Notice.—Information on the care of poultry and eggs may be had by writing the Bureau of Animal Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The Big Men.

The big men dare and the big men do; they dream great dreams, which they make come true. They bridge the rivers and link the plains and gird the land with their railway trains; they make the desert break forth in bloom, they send the cataract through a flume to turn the wheels of a thousand mills and bring the coin to a nation's tills; the big men work and the big men plan, and, helping themselves help their fellow man. And the cheap men yelp at their carriage wheels, as the small dogs bark at the big dogs' heels. The big men sow while the cheap men sleep, and when they go to their fields to reap, the cheap men cry, "We must have a share of all the grain that they harvest there! These men are pirates who sow and reap and plan and build while we are asleep! We'll legislate till they lose their hair! We'll pass new laws that will strip them bare! We'll tax them right and we'll tax them left, till of their plunder they are bereft; we'll show these men that we all despise their skill, their courage and enterprise! So the small men yelp at the big men's heels; the fake reformers with uplift spiels, the four-eyed dreamers with theories fine, which bring them maybe three cents a line, the horn grafters who always yearn to collar coin that they do not earn. And the big men sigh as they go their way; they'll balk at the whole blamed thing some day.—(By Walt Mason.)

This Company, since commencing business in September 1906, has paid out five annual dividends to the stockholders, amounting to forty-four per cent interest on the capital stock.

This Company has grown up during the past seven years in the midst of competing companies, many of which had a large surplus to spend in securing business. While there are other good life insurance companies in this state, a number of them started with a large surplus fund contributed by the stockholders, THE GUARANTEE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY started with a paid up Capital Stock of $100,000 and a very small Surplus of $25,000, and by work, close attention to business and economy, has built up a large surplus fund, which on January 1, 1913, was assigned and unassigned $172,000, all of which was derived

If you were going to deposit your accumulations of years in a savings bank for the benefit of those dependent upon you after you had gone, which institution would you select; one that had started with very little money and had grown to be very strong as a result of many years of hard work, close attention to business and economy to management, or one that had started with lots of money which was contributed by the stockholders, and whose existence was of short duration and experience very limited? Isn't it true that men who save and safely invest their own accumulations are most likely to safely invest and preserve the money of others entrusted to their care?

Exposition of Border Life

Although it is claimed for the Oklahoma Ranch Wild West that it is one of the most complete and interesting expositions of real border life ever organized, there is an evident desire on the part of the management to give the public even more than its money's worth. This is evidenced by the addition of the thrilling triple somersault-turning automobile to the already long list of features announced for the big show. Aerial automobiles that turn a single somersault in mid-air have been more or less familiarized by the circus, but those who attend the performances of the Oklahoma Ranch Wild West show when it exhibits in Hollis, Oklahoma, on Saturday, September 27th, will have the novel and enlivening experience of seeing an auto polo match, in which racing machines are utilized instead of ponies. The act is a sensational one, and, according to preliminary reports has created a furore wherever the show has exhibited. This big act is evidently not allowed to interfere with the general magnitude or Wild West character of the show. The Mulhalls, Col. Zach, Lucille and Georgie, famous riders, ropers and ranchers from Oklahoma; champions from the Pendleton Round-Up and Calgary Stampede; scores of blanket Indians in picturesque border dramas; sports and pastimes of Cowboy Land, Mexican life, rough riding by wild Cossacks, and many other features keep the interest at fever heat. The parade that inaugurates Wild West Day is said to be novel to an unusual degree.

Lutie Happenings.

We are indeed glad to report the biggest rain in five years. The large Seacord tank filled up and ran over.

John Darrow happened to a serious accident. A 1600 pound machine bull wheel fell on his thigh. His son James who was about 300 yards away ran to his assistance and rolled the wheel off. No bones were broken.

Daddie Seagraves team got frightened at some hogs Sunday and broke the tongue into, one end of the tongue jammed through the dashboard and struck Mr. Seagraves, knocking the breath out of him for awhile.

Say, Mr. Coffee, couldn't you toll those girls around to the singing class Sunday? You might toll a single one better than so many. How about it?

The Union meeting commenced here Sunday and is expected to run this week. Rev. Tucker preached at 11 a. m. and Rev. Ingram at 3:30 p. m. A splendid crowd was present. Decorum prevailed, which bespeaks well for Lutie, or any place.

One of the Worst Crimes.

The evidence in the trial of the Diggs-Camenetti cases is such to lead one to believe that this is one of the very worst crimes aired in the public prints in many years. The fact that these two married men led these young girls into the escapades that they did is serious enough to make those who love the home and reverence all the sweet associations that cling around it grow sick at the revolting testimony.

The serious part of the whole affair is the fact that the father of one of the girls testified that Camenetti visited his home frequently, and paid court to his daughter under an assumed name, and he thought that he was a worthy young man whose attentions were honorable. Can you conceive of anything in the category of human derelictions more heinous than this act of this married man? Is there any punishment too severe for such as he? His crime was worse than murder, which only destroys the body. The home is the most sacred place in the world, and the married relation is the closest relationship that can exist in a human way. American people should not, and The Enterprise believes that they will not, tolerate such open opposition to everything upon which the home is founded, and that out of these cases will grow a more watchful care of the home, and a closer scrutiny of those who enter its sacred portals.—The Cleburne Enterprise.

Advertised Goods.

Goods that are advertised are usually priced to give the merchant the percentage of profit that he deserves and also suit the customers pocketbook.

Unadvertised goods, while of the same quality, have to be sold at a much larger price in order to overcome the higher cost of doing business.

When the merchant sells fewer goods he must make profit on each sale and as a consequence, the buyer is sometimes charged an unfair price.

Advertised merchandise offers the merchant his best opportunity to make money and the customer also profits by lower prices and has satisfaction of generally obtaining better quality.—(By W. Holt Harris.)

Ex County Clerk Geo. W. Lee who returned last week from an extended trip to his old home in Alabama, has accepted a position as bookkeeper at the McCauley Dry Goods Co. where he invites his many friends and the public to call on him. He is a splendid accountant and will render the above firm most excellent service. We regret to learn that while away on his trip, Mr. Lee was quite sick for some fourteen days, however he reports a fine trip, otherwise.

Bring me your chickens on Saturday September 20 and Monday September 22. I will have a car here to receive them on these dates, and will pay 9 1-2 cents per pound for hens, 11 cents per pound for fryers and 4 1-2 cents per pound for old roosters.—Bill Goforth.

Messrs J. M. Black, H. S. Black, W. H. Griffiths and E. M. Dukeminier, returned first of the week from a trip to Hemphill and Wheeler counties, where they had been to look at some cattle. We learn they purchased some 360 head which they will divide out among each other, and immediately put on feed. The cattle purchased were three and four year old steers, and will be fattened on ensilage from these men's silos, each of who have from one to two. We predict that these men will find the silo to be a feed saver and therefore a money maker.

THE FAMOUS

"THE HOUSE OF QUALITY"

Wedding Bells.

On Sunday afternoon, September 14, 1913, at 5 o'clock, at the home of the brides parents about a mile and a half north of Wellington. Mr. Robert Leonard and Miss Tassie Patterson were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Rev. R. S. Garrard officiating. Only relatives and a few very close friends of the contracting parties were present. The decorations for the occasion were all of natures own, and very picturesque indeed. The ceremony was performed in the yard among the trees and evergreens. The groom is a very industrious and provides youth and popular, while the bride is one of Wellington's prettiest girls, and highly esteemed for her true worth by her numerous friends. The Leader joins their host of friends in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous life together.

Home Destroyed By Fire.

The handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Anderson, located in the south part of town, was destroyed by fire shortly after day light yesterday morning. The fire caught from a gasoline stove and did considerable damage, and it was thought the flames were extinguished, but while Mr. Anderson and family were taking breakfast at a neighbors, the fire caught again and the home was entirely destroyed. Part of the furnishings were saved. We understand some insurance was carried, but not near enough to cover the loss. The entire community deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Anderson in the loss of their splendid home.

To Cotton Raisers.

The report to the effect that we have sold out to or in any way have any connection with any oil mill is absolutely unfounded and positively false. No oil mill people or any one else outside of the firm name have any connection whatever with the Hall & Harrison Gin. Anyone having any idea that we have any such connections are invited to inspect our partnership papers at the First National Bank.

The business is being, and will continue to be, conducted as it always has been. We truly appreciate the patronage of the cotton farmers and at all times endeavor to give the very best service. Bring us your cotton to gin. 7-4t. I. N. Harrison.

We trust each one will be there and bring up their part, there is always a way to do right no man or woman in the world has more to prompt him or her to do right than a Baptist has. There is a way for all the Baptist of Wellington to do right and work together, it is of the utmost importance that each one for him or her-self finds that way. Human life is short and opportunity to do what God commands will soon be gone, lets be up and working. We will expect a small offering.
