Heath Unseats Wilson In Upset

COULD POLLUTE WATER

Panhandle Officials Protest Pesticide Use In New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI)—Three Texas officials here to prevent Northeastern New Mexico ranchers from spraying range caterpillars with toxaphene, said the Texas Panhandle was "unwilling to take the chance" on the residual insecticide.

The three, Tom Curtis, district attorney for the Panhandle district, Texas attorney general for water Roger Tyler and Joe Teller, executive director of the Texas Water quality control Division, indicated they may file legal action to halt the proposed spraying.

"We are conferring about what course to pursue," Curtis said. "If the weather turned rainy, the spray could damage the Panhandle's drinking water, and the Panhandle is unwilling to take the chance."

Curtis said testimony had been aired in New Mexico that the possible spraying of the Union-Harding-Colefax area could filter into Lake Meredith, Tex., and contaminate water supplies in 11 West Texas communities. Curtis said it was "not just a matter of (New Mexico's) grass or our water, because there is an acceptable substitute, dibrom."

New Mexico cattlemen earlier said they got "erratic" results with dibrom. Curtis, however, said agriculture tests "run on dibrom for caterpillar control in New Mexico resulted in 97.2 percent mortality in four days."

Curtis said the spraying of the area with toxaphene during 1967 produced no ill effects for Texas because "the weather held." "If the weather held, they could spray (again) and get away with it," he said. "But if the weather turned rainy, the spray could damage the Panhandle's drinking water."

Ag Commissioner Expects Approval For Substitute Spray

SANTA E. N. M. (UP)—State agriculture commissioner Dallas Riersen said he expected approval today for use of a substitute pesticide to kill caterpillars in Northeastern New Mexico and replace a chemical authorities said would pollute drinking water.

Riersen, speaking here Thursday, said the approval of the substitute, dibrom, would probably be made in a federal-state spraying program.

Pampa Man Charged With SWC

Jerry Carver, 1147 E. Harvester, was released on $1,500 bond this morning after being arraigned on charges of issuing a worthless check in the amount of $900.

The complaint was lodged against Carver by R.W. Waddell, 1227 Christine. The complaint charged Carver with "making, drawing, uttering, and delivering a worthless check with intent to defraud."

The check was written on April 13 and was drawn on the account of Meadows East Apartments, of which Carver was manager until June 1. The account is with Fritch State Bank in Fritch.

New Captain Takes Over SA Post

Salvation Army Captain L. Z. Sullivan arrived in Pampa Thursday to take over duties at the army headquarters at 701 S. Cuyler, recently vacated by Capt. Jess Duncan, who was transferred to North Carolina.

Capt. Sullivan has held the rank of captain since 1963. He has had assignments in Tulsa and Seminole, Okla., and in Plainview and Longview.

His most recent post was in Longview, where he served two years.

The post officer said today he is getting squared away in his new post and is looking forward to his assignment in Pampa.

Capt. Sullivan and his wife, who also holds the rank of captain, reside at 2104 Lynn with their four children.

Pathologist Asks To Inspect Bullets

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI)—Dr. John M. Nichols, a pathologist at the University of Kansas Medical Center, has filed a federal suit to examine the bullets which killed President John F. Kennedy and wounded former Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

Nichols said he wanted to subject the bullet fragments to "neutron activation analysis" to determine if the metals in the fragments match and therefore came from the same weapon. He filed the suit Wednesday against U.S. archivist James B. Rhoads and Navy Secretary John H. Chafee.

ONE of the most popular concessions at the Pampa High School band's festival is the dunking tank located on the Coronado Center parking lot. Director Harris Brinson sportingly posed this shot for the Pampa Daily News photographer and found it rather pleasant in view of Thursday's soaring temperatures. Brinson will also be a target tonight along with Jackie Gindorf, Kim Gilbert, John Warner, Jerry Sims. Saturday's targets will be Dan Cameron, Floyd Watson and David Robertson. (Photo by Mike Casey)

House Passes Measure To Overhaul Post Office

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House has passed a bill to overhaul the post office for the first time in its 187 year history. But two senators have hinted they may filibuster the Senate's bill because it would permit the union shop.

The matter of union membership threatened to be the biggest point of contention between the House and Senate versions of postal reform.

The House bill, passed 359 to 24 Thursday night, contains a "right to work" amendment that would prohibit compulsory union membership. The Senate bill contains the agreement the Nixon administration reached with the postal unions, providing for collective bargaining rights and compulsory arbitration as well as permitting the post office into an independent government agency called the U.S. Postal Service.

Sens. Paul J. Fannin, R-Ariz., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., have indicated they may filibuster the bill if it contains allowance for the union shop. An attempt is sure to be made on the Senate floor to attach a "right to work" amendment.

The House action came after three days of bitter debate and voting on nearly 40 amendments.

Postmaster General Winton M. Blount gave reluctant backing to the measure. "While it is not a perfect bill, it is a good bill," he said. "We hope the Senate acts quickly."

The House bill would convert the post office into an independent government agency called the U.S. Postal Service. It would be operated by an 11-member commission including the postmaster general, who would lose his cabinet status.

A separate rate board within the commission could set postal rates, subject to a veto within 90 days by a majority vote of either house of Congress.

The bill includes an 8 percent pay raise, retroactive to April 16, for the nearly 700,000 postal workers at a cost of $606.6 million. The workers also could reach their top pay scales in eight years instead of the present 21.

Housewives Revolt

Brings Labor Loss

LONDON (UPI)—Conservative party leader Edward Heath unseated Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson today in a general election upset blamed in part on a housewives revolt against the soaring cost of living under the Wilson government.

Wilson asked for an audience with Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace to hand in his Labor Party government's resignation and with it his hopes of being the first prime minister in British history to win three consecutive five year terms, as predicted by public opinion polls.

It was possible the polls predicting a big Wilson victory had led to complacency and non-voting by Laborites.

By nightfall Heath would be in power in the biggest political upset in Britain since Labor Party leader Clement Attlee threw out the government of Prime Minister Winston Churchill at the close of World War II.

At 1:55 p.m. (8:55 a.m. EDT) Heath's conservatives topped the figure of 316 in Parliament seats and thus won an absolute majority in the new 630-member House of Commons. It is party strength in the House which determines who is the prime minister.

Wilson had waited until this moment before conceding formally, although in television interviews earlier he left no doubt that he knew he was a beaten man.

Within minutes Wilson's No. 10 Downing St. office announced: "Following the announcement that the Conservatives have secured more than half the seats in the new House of Commons the prime minister has asked for an audience of her majesty to tender the resignation of his government."

At almost the same moment a furniture moving truck pulled up outside 10 Downing St.

At 2:30 p.m. (9:30 a.m. EDT) Heath stepped out of the door of the fashionable Albany apartment house where he has a bachelor flat and made his first public appearance as prime minister-elect.

Heath, normally a shy, retiring figure, stood on the doorstep in the sunshine waving and smiling with undisguised delight at crowds cheering and clapping him.

He stepped into his car and was driven to the Conservative central office where another large crowd cheered him.

After thanking his supporters, Heath told them in more serious vein, "We put forward the right policies and we have convinced the country they are the right policies. We are going to provide them with the right government and that government is going to provide for a better country tomorrow."

In the belief of British politicians, commentators and of Wilson himself, a housewives' revolt against rising prices was the only plausible explanation of Labor's defeat, or at least a major factor in it.

More than 1.5 million British teen-agers voted for the first time in this election but it still was not clear how they had cast their ballots or whether they tipped the scales in Heath's favor.

Polls taken of teen-agers before the election appeared to indicate that in general they probably would vote more or less along the same lines as their parents.

Later it was announced Queen Elizabeth was hurrying back to London from Ascot race course and would receive Wilson at 6:30 p.m. (1:30 p.m. EDT) to accept his resignation.

Heath was expected to be summoned soon afterwards to the palace to be named prime minister.

Air Force Shoots Secret Satellite

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The Air Force rocketed a secret satellite toward a distant orbit today in a project believed testing an advanced early warning system against missile attacks.

The Air Force refused to discuss the nature of the mission or the satellite's intended orbit. It said only that an "experimental payload" had been launched on an Atlas-Agena rocket.

The shot, however, was believed to be a repeat of two earlier launchings that sent satellites into near-stationary "dwell" orbits that remain over one broad area of earth.

IN COUNTRY CLUB

Lions Beef Up Installation With Prime Roast, Awards

Roast beef, presentation of awards and installation of new officers highlighted the Pampa Noon Lions Club banquet held Thursday night at Pampa Country Club.

District 2T-1 Governor Ed Flood, Amarillo, was on hand to install the new officers and directors.

Installed as president was Glenn D. "Red" Wedgeworth, president Max Presnell presented Cox with the gavel and president's pin.

Succeeding Cox as first vice-president was J. A. Martindale. Martindale held the position of Tail Twister last year.

Installed as second vice-president was Paul Brown. Brown succeeds Jim Hughes to the post.

John Rosenberg was installed as secretary, replacing O. K. Flood, a former Pampa, is a past president of the club.

In a speech preceding the installation ceremonies, Flood told the club members how district officers appreciated the efforts of both Pampa clubs in "hosting the greatest convention in the history of this district."

The Governor said the Pampa clubs were also responsible for turning a significant amount of money budgeted for the convention back to the district treasury.

Following the installation, Cox presented Presnell with a plaque as testimonial of appreciation and with a past-president's ring.

Special entertainment for the banquet was presented by PreDetta Chambliss.

E. O. "Red" Wedgeworth, convention chairman, made the presentation.

Texas Speaker Predicts Concern For Water Pollution, Education

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — House Speaker Gus T. Mutscher of Brenham says the 1973 Texas Legislature will be more concerned with water pollution and educational finances because of the shift in population over the last 10 years that transformed Texas from a rural to an urban state.

However, Mutscher said the redistricting of the state which will be accomplished next year will not have as radical an effect on the Texas House as did the one-man-one-vote court ruling three years ago.

"It's going to be a big problem," Mutscher said of the redistricting chore next year's legislators must face. "I think we'll have to do all we can to get prepared for it."

Mutscher said Thursday he will assign three or four legislators next week to a committee assigned to begin working with a legislative council to establish alternative plans for redrawing district lines.

"We talk in terms of exactness and computer-like theory," Mutscher said. "But when you get down to it, you have to consider individual and local government entities."

Mutscher said the legislature probably will divide the state into four sections and then draw new district boundaries within each section.

"You don't just pick one area and say it's going to absorb all the loss," Mutscher said.

Since the redistricting will be done by the 1973 legislature the first group to be effected by the changes will be the 1973 legislature. He doubted the more urban oriented body would try to challenge his leadership.

"I think I've enjoyed one of the finest combinations of rural and urban backgrounds," the speaker said. Mutscher lived and worked in Houston and then returned to Brenham to run for the legislature.

"I don't think there's going to be anything especially difficult about working with the House members elected under a redistricted plan," he said. "I've never in my politics tried to pitch rural against urban members."

He said the longrange effect of the redistricting "can't help but lend itself toward emphasizing metropolitan type issues."

He said the redistricted legislature would place greater importance on issues such as city taxes, water problems, pollution and educational finances. But he said the impact would not be as great as that felt when the Supreme Court ordered massive redistricting in 1967.

"I don't think we'll experience anything in modern times like the original Baker vs. Carr redistricting decision," he said.

The President of the Texas Chamber of Commerce said he was unhappy over the preliminary census figures which gave Texas a population of 10,966,257. He said the chamber would try to force some recents.

"We are going to do our best to come up with some that have not been counted that will warrant a recount," Quentin Abernathy said. "It's inconceivable that we could increase 2.5 million in the 1950s and increase less than half that between 1960 and 1970 with so much industrial growth."

Regional Census Director Percy Mallard said the figure announced Wednesday was only "preliminary" and enough figures could be added before the final count in the fall to put Texas over the 11 million mark.

Abernathy said he sent out a questionnaire in East Texas asking community officials if they were happy with preliminary totals and "More than 63 per cent of the replies we have received are very unhappy and 25 per cent are not completely happy."

Joyce Newman, office manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in Abilene, said that office also sent out questionnaires and "85 or 90 have come back (out of 178) and the vast majority is unhappy."

SC To Decide Constitutionality Of Texas Abortion Law

DALLAS (UPI) — The fate of Texas' abortion law will be decided finally by the U. S. Supreme Court.

Both state Attorney General Crawford Martin and Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade announced Thursday they would appeal the ruling of a three-judge federal panel that ruled the law unconstitutional.

"I do not agree with the court decision that the Texas statutes are overbroad and vague," Martin said.

Wade said his office will continue to prosecute under the abortion law. The federal judges—U.S. Circuit Judge Irving L. Goldberg and U.S. District Judges Sarah T. Hughes and William M. Taylor Jr. — said law officers could keep enforcing the law until the Supreme Court rules on it.

The judges ruled the statute unconstitutional in suits filed by an unidentified woman who wants an abortion and a doctor who is charged with performing two of the illegal operations which would produce criminal liability.

The Texas abortion law is written to deprive single women and married persons of the opportunity to choose whether to have children," the ruling said.

"The fundamental right of single women and married persons to choose whether to have children is protected by the 9th amendment through the 14th amendment. The Texas abortion law infringes upon this right."

Manson Proclaims Murder Innocence

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Charles Manson, the hippie chieftain charged with the murder of Sharon Tate and seven others, proclaimed his innocence Thursday at an impromptu courtroom news conference.

"I know what I've done and don't have any guilt," Manson, 35, told a courtroom filled with newsmen, photographers and spectators.

With jury selection in the Tate-LaBianca murder trial recessed until Monday, Manson and co-defendant Susan Atkins appeared in Superior Court here for pre-trial motions in the Gary Hinman murder, in which they also are accused.

Turning around to smile amiably into the television cameras, the slight, long-haired Manson said, "You're the jury. You're the court. You're the whole thing. If you stand for it, if you contribute to it, then you're part of it."

"I've paid my debt to society," Manson said. "I've given it 22 years of my life. Just so you can walk the streets and ride your bicycles, I've lived in your reform schools and your orphanages."

Manson's attorney, Irving A. Kanarek, sat beside him while Manson answered reporter's questions and later asked Superior Court Judge Laurence J. Rittenband to permit regular press conferences for the cultist.

Rittenband denied the request, observing Kanarek was "articulate" and capable of presenting Manson's views to the news media.

Residents Asked To Make Way For Seal-Coating
City Manager Charles Hill today issued an appeal to residents on streets in the area of Pampa's 1970 seal-coating program.

The city manager requested all automobiles and other parked vehicles or obstructions of any kind be removed from the streets.

This, the city manager stated, will enable the seal-coating contractor to cover the streets from curb to curb.

City Engineer B.M. Wofford described the general boundaries of the project as follows:

Harvester St. on the north, Hobart on the west, Atchison on the south and Tignor (city limit) on the east.

The work already is underway from the east and is progressing westward. Residents were advised to watch the progress and be prepared to clear the streets.

Completion of the job is expected one week from today.

Approximately 215 city blocks are included in this year's program. This adds up to about 20 miles or one-fifth of the total paved streets in Pampa.

Geologists Gives Oil Industry Crisis Blame
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Houston geologist Michel T. Halbouty told oilmen Thursday the United States faces an oil crisis and the oil industry is to blame.

He told members of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen the Soviet Union is gaining control of countries where most of the world's oil is located. He said the United States was losing out because of self-serving communications from the industry to the general public.

"We have been concentrating on propaganda and promotion when we should have been concentrating on facts and the industry story, while keeping an ear to the ground for reasonable viewpoints," Halbouty said.

He listed the signs of crisis for America's oil industry as the "bold and open advocacy of nationalization," the serious threat of the Soviet Union utilizing petroleum resources with which to control world economy and politics, the absence of a free trade policy with Canada, and President Nixon's proposal to renounce ownership of hundreds of billions of barrels of oil and thousands of trillion cubic feet of natural gas."

Friendship Is Fleeting
The mystery of the four mag wheels and tires and the generator reportedly taken from a 1932 Ford Roadster June 14 has been solved by Pampa Police.

According to police reports, the daughter of the woman reporting the missing parts told officers that she and two of her boy friends removed the parts from the old car and sold them for $30.

The excuse given by the daughter was that she and her friends were trying to raise the money to get another friend out of jail.

However, instead of using the money to free their incarcerated friend, the girl reportedly told police she and her other friends decided to use the money for a "beer bust."

Officers said the mother refused to prosecute and the case was closed.

Resident's Asked To Make Way For Seal-Coating
City Manager Charles Hill today issued an appeal to residents on streets in the area of Pampa's 1970 seal-coating program.

The city manager requested all automobiles and other parked vehicles or obstructions of any kind be removed from the streets.

This, the city manager stated, will enable the seal-coating contractor to cover the streets from curb to curb.

City Engineer B.M. Wofford described the general boundaries of the project as follows:

Harvester St. on the north, Hobart on the west, Atchison on the south and Tignor (city limit) on the east.

The work already is underway from the east and is progressing westward. Residents were advised to watch the progress and be prepared to clear the streets.

Completion of the job is expected one week from today.

Approximately 215 city blocks are included in this year's program. This adds up to about 20 miles or one-fifth of the total paved streets in Pampa.

Geologists Gives Oil Industry Crisis Blame
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Houston geologist Michel T. Halbouty told oilmen Thursday the United States faces an oil crisis and the oil industry is to blame.

He told members of the American Association of Petroleum Landmen the Soviet Union is gaining control of countries where most of the world's oil is located. He said the United States was losing out because of self-serving communications from the industry to the general public.

"We have been concentrating on propaganda and promotion when we should have been concentrating on facts and the industry story, while keeping an ear to the ground for reasonable viewpoints," Halbouty said.

He listed the signs of crisis for America's oil industry as the "bold and open advocacy of nationalization," the serious threat of the Soviet Union utilizing petroleum resources with which to control world economy and politics, the absence of a free trade policy with Canada, and President Nixon's proposal to renounce ownership of hundreds of billions of barrels of oil and thousands of trillion cubic feet of natural gas."

Soyuz 9 Mission Completed
MOSCOW (UPI) — The two-man Soyuz 9 spacecraft parachuted to earth in the Soviet Union today at end of an 18-day earth orbit mission that far surpassed the former space endurance record held by U.S. astronauts, informed space sources said.

Cosmonauts Adrian Nikolayev and Vitaly Sevast'yanov had blasted off from Baikonur Cosmodrome in their two-room slier Soyuz T 10 p.m. (3 p.m. EDT) June 1, passed the old space endurance record of America's 1965 Gemini 7 mission last Monday and remained in flight nearly 18 days.

Astronauts Frank Borman and James Lovell, the Gemini 7 co-pilots, had remained aloft 13 days, eight hours and 35 minutes from blast-off to touchdown.

In advance of an official Soviet announcement, there were no firm details on the soft-landing.

US Bombing Halt Demand Rejected

VIENTIANE (UPI)—The Laotian government Thursday rejected a Communist demand that U.S. bombing in this country be halted, but said it was ready to meet Pathet Lao leaders any time, anywhere and at any level for peace negotiations.

Justice Minister Impeng Souvannay, speaking for the Laotian cabinet which met Wednesday, said a Pathet Lao offer of "serious and urgent" peace negotiations if the U.S. halted bombing in Laos was unacceptable.

The offer was made Sunday by Pathet Lao leader Prince Souphanouvong, a half-brother of Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma, and a copy of it was formally handed to Souvanna Tuesday by the Pathet Lao representative in the Laotian capital of Vientiane.

Impeng said the cabinet decided the new offer was nothing more than a rebash of previous peace feelers that have always been conditioned on the government abandoning the U.S. support that is its mainstay.

Impeng said the government would send a reply to the Souphanouvong message later, proposing a peace meeting on any level and any place the Pathet Lao choose, but without preconditions.

Premier Souvanna has constantly taken the position that he would "ask the Americans to stop bombing as soon as North Vietnam withdraws its troops from Laos" including those on the Ho Chi Minh Trail to South Vietnam.

The Pathet Lao have made no offer to negotiate without such conditions since they withdrew from the government in 1964.

Kennedy Says Raise In Taxes Or Tax Cut Postponement Likely

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy said Thursday the administration is likely to ask Congress in January either to raise taxes or to postpone some of the tax cuts approved last year.

A most likely candidate for postponement is the tax cut reflected in the increase in the personal exemption income tax to become effective Jan. 1, 1972. The exemption, now $600 for each taxpayer and each of his dependents, will rise to $650 on July 1 and is to jump to $700 in 1972.

Kennedy, after he testified before the Senate Finance Committee, told reporters that no decision has been reached on what form of tax increase would be recommended if it is found to be necessary.

"A possibility—even a likelihood—exists" that President Nixon will seek a tax increase in the budget he will send to Congress in January for the 12-month fiscal year starting July 1, 1971, Kennedy said.

The current business slump has driven down the government's tax collections and Congress has rejected some spending cuts sought by Nixon, resulting in a 1970-71 budget deficit now estimated at $1.3 billion. This could lead to a decision to defer scheduled tax cuts next year or to seek a tax increase of another form.

Kennedy said the Treasury is "studying various forms" of tax increases.

ABM System Dealt Setback

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Safeguard antiballistic missile system (ABM), keystone of the Nixon administration's nuclear arms strategy, has been dealt its first major setback from an unexpected source—the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The committee voted Wednesday to junk President Nixon's plan to expand Safeguard into a nationwide population-defense system and decided to confine its mission to protecting missile silos and bomber bases.

Foreign News Commentary

As West German Chancellor Willy Brandt toured Lower Saxony in the windup phase of a state election campaign, he drew his loudest cheers at mention of his efforts to improve relations with the Communist East.

And it was in this atmosphere of euphoria that on June 8 Brandt and his foreign minister, Walter Scheel, welcomed to Bonn the Polish representative with whom they were to complete exploratory talks leading to a new era in West German-Polish relations.

The "go slow" sign erected not only by the voters of Lower Saxony but also those of North Rhine-Westphalia and Saarland less than a week later came therefore as an unpleasant surprise.

And to Brandt's coalition partners, the Free Democrats, it came as an especially unpleasant surprise because for them it could be the beginning of the end of their party.

The Free Democrats failed to win the required five per cent of the total vote in Lower Saxony and the Saarland and were eliminated from the parliaments of those two states.

They just squeaked by in North Rhine-Westphalia.

Profiting by the government's misfortune were the rival Christian Democrats who achieved gains of up to five per cent.

The results calked into question both the future course of Brandt's negotiations with the Poles and the Soviet Union and of his own Socialist-Free Democratic coalition which has an operating margin of only 12 votes in the Bundestag, the German government's lower house.

The Moscow and Warsaw talks have progressed even faster than Brandt could have hoped.

Both have gone past the preliminary stage. Formal negotiations on a treaty renouncing use of force are expected to begin soon between Bonn and Moscow, and the end of July has been seen as the beginning of negotiations between Bonn and Warsaw.

Defense Rests In Paprskar Case

FORT WORTH (UPI)—Final arguments by both sides were all that remained after the defense rested its case Monday in the trial of Michael Joseph Paprskar Jr., accused killer of two men and a 4-year-old child.

The state is asking that Paprskar, 29, be sent to the electric chair. The ex-convict and motorcycle gang leader is charged with ordering the murders of Daniel Ramirez Jr., 4, his father Daniel Sr., 22, and his uncle Samuel Ramirez, 26.

Truman Answered Communist Thrust 20 Years Ago

Twenty years ago this month President Harry S. Truman answered a Communist thrust across the 38th Parallel into South Korea with the dispatch of American troops to the Asian mainland.

More than 50,000 American troops are still in South Korea. It is perhaps noteworthy that after 20 years, there still is one phrase common in other parts of the world but not heard in South Korea. It is:

"Yankee, go home."

In fact, the South Koreans currently are going through what is becoming an annual case of the jitters over the possibility that the Yankees might go home far earlier than the Koreans would wish.

Wants Americans to Remain
South Korean President Park Chung-hee wants the Americans to remain as insurance against another invasion from the Communist North.

As a reason for wanting to pull at least one Army division out within a matter of months, the United States cites "budgetary" pressures and President Nixon's warning to Asian nations that they must take over a greater share of their own defenses.

Recent Cabinet Changes Bring Liberal Voices To White House

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The recent changes in the Cabinet, the first since President Nixon took office, have brought two liberal voices into the White House. How loudly they will speak remains to be seen.

Coming on the heels of his most serious domestic crisis, the shuffle apparently stems, at least in part, from the President's conviction that he needs a broader representation of the political spectrum among his top advisers.

Both Robert H. Finch, leaving the Health, Education and Welfare Department to become counselor to the President, and George P. Shultz, leaving the Labor Department to head the newly created Office of Management and Budget, are widely considered to be more in tune with the disaffected segments of society—students, blacks and the poor—than any other Cabinet members.

Finch, whose association with Nixon goes back over more than 20 years, had not fared well at HEW and his leaving did not come as a surprise.

Dissension among lower level HEW officials who felt Finch had not sufficiently used his influence to press for domestic priorities flared embarrassingly into the open recently.

As counselor to the President, Finch will have no staff working for him and his influence will be measured by how well he can get the President's ear and press his views. His areas of concern will be education, youth and politics.

Shultz, on the other hand, has emerged in the past 17 months as one of the more influential men in the Cabinet. A soft-spoken, tough-minded economist, he played a key role in putting together the family assistance plan that the President looks on as the landmark proposal in his domestic legislative program.

As head of the Office of Management and Budget, a sort of super budget bureau, Shultz will have extraordinary powers to help shape federal programs and establish the administration's priorities and also will be charged with continually evaluating the efficiency of the various federal departments.

The changes appear to indicate two things: That the President is hoping to get better control of the vast federal apparatus through his domestic reorganization; and that he is attempting to answer his liberal critics who claim that his generally conservative White House staff have isolated him from the more liberal segments of his own party.

W. A. (TACK) TACKER Jr. received the degrees of Doctor of Medicine and Doctor of Philosophy in physiology at the June 12, 1970, commencement exercises of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. In July, he will begin an internship at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. Dr. Tacker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Helton of Wheeler.

Kids Learn Stocks From Cartoon Book

By FREDERICK H. TREESH
United Press International

Andy wanted a bicycle for his 12th birthday. What his grandfather presented him was 12 shares of stock in a company that manufactures bicycles.

The next day, Andy and his grandfather visited the downtown Manhattan headquarters of the American Stock Exchange, the marketplace where the shares in the hypothetical bicycle company are traded.

Thousands of other youngsters, 6th and 7th graders, are going along with Andy because his experiences at the Amex are recorded in a cartoon book prepared by the exchange for distribution to schools.

The students learn, as Andy is informed, how stocks differ from bonds, how securities are bought and sold, what is a broker and a specialist and how to read a stock table.

The American exchange believes its picture book "Journey Through A Stock Exchange" fills a significant void in economics curriculum for the middle school grades. Economics is a subject that until recently was rarely taught in the public schools at that level and even now curriculum materials are in scarce supply. Amex is trying to inform, not recruit future investors. But Robert A. Coplin, the exchange's vice president for information services, concedes many young people today "look upon business with a jaundiced eye."

"The capitalistic system from which they benefit is not really understood or appreciated," Coplin said.

"We have attempted to devise a teaching aid, that provides the necessary knowledge and dispels misconceptions," Coplin said of the 23-page booklet illustrated by popular artist James Flora.

"Journey Through A Stock Exchange" one of several educational materials prepared by the American Exchange.

"Market for Millions" is a more comprehensive paperback book for senior high school and adult educational use.

The exchange also is preparing films and film strips for secondary schools and has a simulation and gaming curriculum aid in the works for high schools.

It involves students in making decisions as a one-man business expands, requiring decisions on forming a partnership, selling stock, publicly marketing the securities and finally listing on a stock exchange.

Holleben Describes Kidnaping

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—West German Ambassador Eberhard von Holleben said Wednesday left-wing terrorists who kidnaped him a week ago wore Ku Klux Klan-like hoods, chloroformed him and caged him in a wooden box.

Von Holleben described his 123 hours in captivity at a news conference one day after being freed by antigovernment terrorists in exchange for 40 prisoners who were flown Monday to exile in Algiers.

He said the kidnaping was carried out so swiftly he thought his chauffeured limousine had been involved in a traffic accident until he heard the shots that killed one of his bodyguards and injured two others.

Almost immediately after he heard the first shots, the 61-year-old career diplomat said, pistol barrels were jammed into his ribs and a chloroform-drenched rag was pressed over his face.

He said he was forced into the kidnapers' car about 200 yards from his residence. Later he was transferred to another car that contained a wooden box in which he was ordered to crouch.

He said he believed the box was made especially to transport him to the kidnapers' hideout. It was slammed shut and he was driven for about an hour to the house where he was held for five uneasy days.

"When the lid was opened, I was in a garage," Von Holleben said. "I was taken to a bedroom and then to another room with doors leading into it. From my watch, I calculated that we arrived at the house of captivity in about one hour."

Von Holleben said although the kidnapers prevented him from seeing their faces, he could tell one was a woman.

He said he refused to write a note urging the government to meet the kidnapers' demands and they did not insist.

Asked whether he was afraid, Von Holleben said, "It is a difficult question to answer."

WHAT'S WRONG with Australian men? In what could be called a social experiment, Simone Harris, a 21-year-old model, stood for a half hour in a Sydney street. Simone had $20 to give the first person asking her why she was wearing a bikini in the city, but nobody asked.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Burt Bacharach, the hottest composer around, showed why Wednesday night when he hosted an hour on NBC-TV's "Kraft Music Hall" that featured many of his tunes.

It was the second successful collaboration of the "Kraft" series and Bacharach within a year. The first show, last November, won much acclaim—Emmy and otherwise.

Wednesday night's hour, like Bacharach's distinctive modern sound, had a nice, soft, understated, droll tone—because his three talented guest performers were old friends of the composer.

One was Dionne Warwick, the chief and best singer of Bacharach's songs. They had a string of hits together—with, of course, lyricist Hal David.

Joey Grey is Guest. Another was singer-actor Joel Grey, who gained fame in "Cabaret" on Broadway. Years ago, when he was doing the club circuit, Bacharach was his accompanist.

The third guest was French singer Sacha Distel, whom Bacharach has known since touring as accompanist for Marlene Dietrich.

Bacharach, a pleasantly handsome fellow, was a charming low-key host Wednesday night—conducting, playing the piano, participating in duets with each of his guests.

The hour was shot in London, and marked another high point in a very good week for Bacharach. He's also on the cover of the current Newsweek.

The highlight of the show might well have been a song the composer sang himself: "Make It Easy on Yourself."

Miss Warwick joined in but it was really his number.

Goos Great with Bourbon

He has, in fact, recorded it with his uniquely attractive tw o-o'clock-in-the-morning voice. And it goes great with Bourbon.

Distel did a nice job on his own composition, "The Good Life," and then teamed well with Bacharach for the host's big new hit, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head."

Grey was exceptional with "Bridge over Troubled Water," by Paul Simon of the singing team Simon and Garfunkel.

One surprisingly good sequence illustrated to some degree how Bacharach may work with Miss Warwick when he has a new tune for her. This kind of enactment can often be affected and pretentious, but the composer brought simplicity and genuineness to it. The song, by the way, was lovely: "Loneliness Remembers."

Honeymoon Survival Kit

Nineteen or 39, men will be boys — especially when they're about to take the plunge and tie the marital knot.

That's when — no matter how strongly they protest it — they're nervous, frightened, forgetful and apt to behave just like little boys. That's why the best man is left to take care of some such important details as the ring and the wedding license. At the same time, you, the bride, find yourself left holding a bouquet of his last-minute details and dress-rehearsing for the years of caring for him during those hectic pre-wedding weeks.

There's really no telling what an anxious groom is going to do in those weeks before that walk down the aisle. But you can be sure that he's going to be especially forgetful, particularly when it comes to getting set for the honeymoon. In the rush and crush of events, for instance, he's likely not to pack such shouldn't-be-forgotten things as razor, blades, shaving cream and toothbrush. That's why it's a good idea for you to fill up a honeymoon survival kit a few days before you leave on your honeymoon. Filled with the toiletries, first-aid items and other essentials you're both apt to overlook, this will later form the basis of a sagely stocked medicine cabinet.

The first things to go into the kit are a razor, blades and his favorite brands of shaving cream and aftershave lotion.

For That Airport Look Be Selective

You've probably spent weeks or even months planning your wedding day. But, don't forget, wedding plans shouldn't end with the ceremony.

The best is yet to come when you leave on your wedding trip. Whether you're driving a short distance, taking a cruise; or catching a plane to a distant honeymoon paradise.

Professional travelers agree, the best way to go anywhere is to travel light—even on a honeymoon. Lots of luggage crammed with things that "might come in handy" only serve to complicate your trip and stretch your husband's patience. Your honeymoon is the time for you and your husband to get to know one another and enjoy being together—it's not the time for you to be changing, packing and repacking.

But there are some things a woman shouldn't do without—like cosmetics and personal-care items.

You might keep these essentials in mind when you plan your packing: clothes brush, tweezers, razor blades, nail polish, polish remover, emery boards, nail scissors, hair pins and curlers, aspirin, toothbrush and paste, sanitary needs, needle, thread, sunglasses, safety pins, shampoo, hairbrush, hair spray, shower cap and, don't forget, quickie bandages. Of course, you'll also want to include makeup needs.

To help you keep your beauty secrets right at your finger tips, The traveler is the perfect grooming aid with its illuminated mirror housed in a roomy travel case. The extra large mirror (7½" x 6") reverses for magnification, is removable, and has shadow-free illumination without glare for professional makeup application.

Practical and yet elegant, the appliance comes in a lightweight durable vinyl case that has the look and feel of real leather. It's lined in rayon with quilted top and bottom, and there are special fittings to hold bottles and jars along with a zippered pouch for smaller cosmetic needs (and there's room to spare—so why not toss in your bikini and nightgown in case you luggage is lost).

Comes in a handsome bone shade, this beauty aid costs under fifty dollars. Happy Honeymoon.

Fire To Stop Romance End

SALZBURG, Austria (UPI)—A 45-year old hotel porter set fire to the apartment of his 60-year-old girl friend today to keep her from breaking off their romance, police said.

They said Juliane Kappeler is in critical condition from burns after Franz Hagenauer set fire to her flat.

"I always loved Juliane and I still love her," Hagenauer told police after his arrest. "But when she wanted to break up the romance I decided that nobody else should have her."

Police said Hagenauer poured gasoline through the mail slot at Juliane's door, then lighted it.

MARRIAGE

The age of eighteen is the best time for women to marry, and the age of thirty-seven, or a little less, for men.

—Aristotle

DEAR ABBY: My husband is very good looking and is on the lying side of 50. He doesn't look like the swinging type, but I wouldn't put a thing past him. He gives a rather attractive, youngish divorcee, who works in his office building, a ride home nearly every evening. He doesn't accept any pay, but he does sometimes stop at her apartment for a drink (he says) now and then.

He's never more than half an hour late in getting home. Do you think he could be unfaithful to me in half an hour?

CAL'S WIFE: I don't know. He's your husband, lady. Could he?

DEAR ABBY: Leonard and I have been married for 2 years. We plan to go East this summer (we live in California) to visit my grandparents and other relatives who have never met Leonard. They are good, but very conservative people. My problem: Leonard has hair almost to his shoulders. I think he should cut it before he goes east. His hair has never been a sore point between us, but I feel that if he cuts it before he goes, he will make a better impression on my relatives. Leonard and I talked about it, and he doesn't want to cut his hair. He says if I loved him I wouldn't ask him to cut his hair. I say it will grow back in time, and it's not too much to ask. Can you help us reach a decision?

CALIFORNIA: DEAR CAL: Since Leonard doesn't want to cut his hair, don't "ask" him to cut it. For the sake of making a "better" impression, you are asking him to make a false one.

DEAR ABBY: I have some friends on the mainland who give my name and telephone number to every Tom, Dick, and Harry from their hometowns who come here on vacations.

When these strangers call me with "regards" from our mutual friends, I am always very friendly on the phone, but I know they are disappointed when I don't offer to "show them around" or entertain them in some way. But Abby, I just can't do it. I have enough relatives and friends of my own who come here, and with a busy husband and four children (two toddlers) can't be an unofficial tourist guide for strangers. Although I feel no obligation to people I don't even know, I feel guilty when I say "goody-bye."

How would YOU handle this situation?

BUSY IN HONOLULU: DEAR BUSY: Just as you're handling it. And you needn't feel guilty. It's presumptuous for one to give your name and telephone number to every "Tom, Dick, and Harry" without your permission.

"Every woman should marry—and no man."

—Benjamin Disraeli

VIRTUE: Virtue is like a rich stone—best plain set.

SATURDAY, JUNE 20
Your birthday Saturday: Independence of spirit is essential in the coming year. Going it alone is not quite feasible, so perhaps the philosophic equivalent will suffice. The breaks are sudden and, once passed, irretrievable. Romance comes and perhaps goes abruptly. Saturday's natives are more talented than most. Gemini's special gift is for emulation and imitation. ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romantic attraction appears without warning and provides some interesting situations. Family affairs become complicated no matter what is happening. TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Saturday's experiences include some novelty, some excitement. Self-improvement programs are very productive. Make it a sort of holiday evening. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Arrange matters of long range security. The most tempting use of the day is the pursuit of pleasure, sentimental expressions, romance. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Argument should be avoided at least through Saturday. Use forbearance to bridge the gap between what you want and when it can be had. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Outline Saturday's doings and stick with it despite temptations to switch back and forth between different activities. Simplicity is best. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Early disagreements fade as this interesting and exciting day wears on. Contacts made LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The unexpected incident is normal in Saturday's love story. Attend the problems of older people. Arrange to make your home more convenient.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You find yourself with more things to do than there is time. Begin promptly. Some earnings opportunity might well be lost in the service of basic needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Nothing turns out quite as planned, but with any luck at all, it's a happy and rewarding experience. Take the time at night to reflect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Saturday there is just enough opposition to stimulate you. Fresh encounters bring meaningful relations and opportunities for earnings too.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Coping with the quick tempers of other people is part of your adjustment formula Saturday. With patience, it all works out well by evening.

Shower The Bride With Home Gifts

There's a special time in a girl's life when every day is like Christmas. And, no matter how harried or pressured the bride may be with wedding plans, the pleasure of receiving gifts and being honored at shower parties is an exciting and memorable experience.

What to give the bride is a question, if not a problem to her many friends as well as for the family. For the thoughtful who want to give a different gift, we suggest decorative accessories. Lamps, objets d'art, or even an accent table can be a distinctive and welcome gift.

For those who like to explore to find that special gift, the market place has never been more open. One collection of accessories and lamps from Tyndale, named after the Indian festival of lights when thousands of candles lit late into the night illuminate the wares of Indian merchants at their market, is called Divali. The Divali festival is a wild, beautiful time of warm friendliness. What could be more appropriate.

Inspired by this festival, the collection features tables, plaques and wall accessories, floor and table lamps. The designs are keynoted by bold carving, delicate flagstone and delightful ceramics which coordinate to achieve a total look. Used individually, they provide a most striking accent. Pottery, native sculptures and painted furniture carved with Taj Mahal motifs are included.

Christian Science

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" This question is the title of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Christian Science churches this Sunday.

The creation of man and the universe is ascribed to God rather than to a chain of material reactions, according to

Isaiah: "I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded."

Also in the lesson from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy are the pertinent questions: "Did man, whom God created with a word, originate in an egg? When Spirit made all, did it leave aught for matter to create? Ideas of Truth alone are reflected in the myriad manifestations of Life, and thus it is seen that man springs solely from Mind."

First Christian Church

The Rev. Shelby H. Anglemyer will deliver a Father's Day Message entitled "My Father," with scriptures being taken from John 14:1-10. The Choir, under the direction of Miss Rosemary Lawlor and accompanied by Mrs. John Gill, will present the Anthem entitled "Our Father, By Whose Name All Fatherhood Is Known."

Sunday Evening we will not have Snack Supper. Youth Groups nor Evening Vesper in order that we may have a Fellowship Dinner for the entire Church beginning at 6:00 p.m. It will be a covered dish dinner.

Mr. Kenneth L. Teegarden, Executive Minister of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) in Texas, from Fort Worth, will be the Guest Speaker at the Fellowship Dinner. Dr. Teegarden is well known in our Brotherhood. He has held positions as Executive Minister of Christian Churches of Arkansas, and was associated with the International Convention before coming to his present position.

Harold Comer, chairman of the membership committee of the church will preside over this meeting.

Monday through Friday from 9:00 until 11:30 a.m. will be our Vacation Church School. Mrs. Harold Comer is chairman of our Vacation Church School this year.

Ten Juniors will leave this week for Church Camp. They are Kelly Williams, Phyllis Reynolds, Nick Williams, Kelly Nite, Sherry Skidmore, Leanne Hall, Heidi Cash, Debbie Rogers, Jamie Winborne and Dee Cunningham. Duane Cash and Miss Jennifer Cunningham, summer youth director, will attend as adult counselors.

The Church Cabinet will meet Wednesday, at 8:00 p.m.

First Baptist Church

The pastor, Rev. Dan B. Cameron, will be in the pulpit for both services of worship Sunday in the First Baptist Church, Pampa. He will continue preaching the series of sermons on "The King and I," with Sunday's message entitled "The King's Enemies."

MUSIC for the Morning Worship, under the direction of David Campbell, minister of music, includes the Choral Worship sung by the Sanctuary Choir, "I Will Extol Thee," and a duet, "Only Jesus," sung by Roy Korneagy and Campbell.

Miss Eloise Lane, organist, has chosen "I Need Thee Every Hour."

The Ordinance of Baptism will be observed at the beginning of the Evening Worship at seven o'clock. The pastor will preach on the subject, "Spoiled Clay." The Ladies' Chorus will occupy the choir loft and sing special music, "Intermezzo," and the organ offertory selection.

Vacation Bible School begins Monday morning and goes through July 1. The school will meet each morning at 8:45 and close at 11:45. Mr. Korneagy invites all from four years of age through the ninth grade to be present. A faculty of over one hundred will work in the school. The church bus will pick up children at designated places each morning and bring them back during the school.

The Wednesday prayer meeting begins at 6:15 p.m. and the pastor will continue teaching the book of Matthew. The Prayer Meeting is preceded by the Fellowship Supper from 5:30 until 6:15.

First Presbyterian Church

"Our Desperate Need" will be the sermon at both the 8:30 and 11 a.m. worship services this Sunday by Rev. Martin Hager.

Liberal Commentary On Gensis Recalled By Southern Baptists

By LOUIS CASSELS, UPI Religion Writer

A battle over the Bible has brought America's largest Protestant body to the brink of possible schism.

The denomination in travail is the 125-year-old Southern Baptist Convention. The SBC, which long ago outgrew the regional boundaries implied by its name, is a nationwide body with 11.4 million members.

Traditionally conservative Southern Baptists have managed to remain aloof from many of the controversies that have shaken other churches in recent years. They've never joined the National Council of Churches, so there's no internal dissension over that organization. And neither social action nor situation ethics have enough supporters in the SBC to qualify as serious bones of contention.

But the quarrelsome spirit which seems to pervade all aspects of American life these days has finally surfaced in the SBC around the one issue that will always incite Baptists to choose up-sides and fight—the authority of the Bible.

At their annual convention in Denver this month, Southern Baptist delegates voted 5,394 to 2,170 to recall and rewrite a commentary on Genesis which already had been published and distributed to bookstores by the denomination's publishing house, Broadman Press.

Critics charged that the commentary was tainted with theological liberalism.

The "taint" is not readily apparent to readers familiar with the dominant themes of modern biblical scholarship. By comparison with the views of most Protestant and Catholic scholars, the suppressed Baptist commentary takes a very conservative view of the Scriptures. Its "liberalism" consists of stopping short of an insistence on the literal accuracy of every statement in Genesis.

The Rev. W. A. Criswell, Dallas pastor who was president of the SBC until his term expired this month, is an outspoken advocate of biblical literalism, and has suggested publicly that anyone who differs with this view should get out of the denomination.

The handwriting on the wall, to use a biblical metaphor, must now be clearly visible to any Southern Baptist scholar, pastor or lay leader who finds himself unable in good conscience to give assent to the doctrine of biblical liberalism. The message is: Get in line or get out.

The history of Protestantism's doctrinal quarrels suggests that some at least, and perhaps many, will take the latter option.

Jehovah's Witnesses

Convention Slated

Members of the Pampa congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses have been invited to assist in pre-convention activities in Amarillo where the four day "Men of Goodwill" District Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses will be held July 23-26.

More than 6,500 delegates are expected to attend the 4-day convention, according to Lyman Pinard, presiding minister of the Pampa congregation. It will be held in the Civic Center with bilingual sessions planned in English and Spanish.

Mr. L.M. Dugan, veteran organizer of large conventions, will manage the convention in Amarillo, and has invited the local congregation to assist due to the tremendous work load in housing the thousands of delegates that are expected to attend.

"An initial planning session is scheduled for Saturday night, June 20th, at 8 p.m. in the Stephen F. Austin Junior High School Auditorium in Amarillo," stated Pinard, who will coordinate between Watchtower Convention headquarters in Amarillo and the local group. "Additional personnel will be needed to assist in pre-convention activities and the members here feel that they too would like to volunteer their help in searching for rooms for the thousands of delegates expected."

The Weekly Message of Inspiration... St. Paul United Methodist Church

J. W. Rosenberg
Pastor

Our Christian Faith is determined greatly by our impressions concerning the philosophies that motivated the teaching and activities of Jesus. I wish to speak to this in a few words, realizing that they may not at all be in agreement with the impressions of others, but that they may cause us all to think.

The one thing that Jesus was least interested in was the spectacular. In the wilderness, preparing for his ministry, he was enticed to do the spectacular. Turn stones into bread, leap from the temple, or don a crown. He realized that the bread would not bring permanent satisfaction of hunger, nor the daring leap a permanent admiration, nor the crown of authority a permanent reign.

So he turned his ministry in the opposite direction. The things he did were not little things, especially as we view them from this distance, but they were personal and eternal. When He called the little children to him he said of them, "of such is the kingdom of heaven." When he met the Samaritan woman at the well he said to her, in effect, the water in this well will give temporary satisfaction, but I can give you water to drink that will satisfy eternally. He healed the sick and even lifted the dead, but it was for the benefit of those who felt this touch, not that he might be glorified. He said it himself, that he came, not to be ministered to but to minister to others.

The philosophy of Jesus, and it must become the philosophy of all Christians, was to bring light, life and happiness into the world, and this was to be done through a ministry of love. We speak of obligation and opportunity when we speak of our Christian service. The ministry of Jesus was motivated by desire. He saw things that needed to be done and he wanted to do them, and He did them, even though they were not always popular with the people of his day. Even so must we serve.

Learn From The Past

Protesting youth across the land have missed the point.

One of the real advantages of advanced years, which will not be apparent to the young until they too have aged, is memory. Education must, to a large degree, be self-obtained. And the memories available to those of us who are "over 30 and then some" are a help in the process.

We can, for instance, remember that from the time of the end of World War I until Pearl Harbor, the prevailing sentiment in this country was what came to be called isolationism. American people had it with the constant, costly conflicts indulged in by the other nations of the world. We wanted nothing so much as to be left alone to till our own fields in peace and we determinedly set out to do just that.

There were voices raised among us that such isolationism would be our undoing and that we had an obligation to become "involved" with our fellow world citizens and their problems. They raised warnings that Hitler and his ilk would not simply go away by our ignoring them and that appeasement would lead to catastrophe.

And it did. We eventually ended up in World War II and all it meant in bloodshed, tragedy and destruction.

Following World War II the American people had had it with isolationism and its dire consequences. We became enamored of the idea that we must take an active part in rebuilding and saving the world from more such dreadful and futile wars. We earnestly and eagerly embarked upon such programs as the United Nations and the Marshall Plan and various other programs of aid to all who needed it. We entered into some kind of treaty or agreement to aid nearly every nation on earth.

And there were voices raised among us that such involvement in foreign affairs would be our undoing and that our only obligation was to tend to our own problems, that the best way to help others was to keep ourselves free and independent of all foreign entanglements and by our example, demonstrate how other nations could achieve peace and prosperity for their peoples. They warned that this wholesale involvement in the problems of other nations would lead to catastrophe.

It's Also Syphilis Capital

Add to the crime picture in our nation's capital one more disgrace. It has been revealed that Washington now has the highest syphilis incidence rate in the nation.

The statistics were compiled by the American Social Health Association in cooperation with six leading public health and medical organizations, including the American Medical Association.

Of the various diseases loosely termed "VD," syphilis is the deadliest and most horrifying killer of them all. Because syphilis is almost entirely contracted by sexual contact, it is seldom mentioned. People die from heart attack, cancer or TE—but when did you ever see a death notice "Died from VD?"

Within a matter of hours after sexual contact, the deadly spirochete enters the bloodstream and spreads throughout the body. It may take from 10 days to 10 weeks for any visible sign of the germ to appear. Because it's painless in the early stages, it is easy to miss, but unless destroyed by medical treatment, it will remain alive longer than the victim.

The second stage symptoms begin to appear in about six weeks—headaches, pains in Yeah, Can You?

The wooden sewing thread spool is going the way of the whalebone corset. Spools are now being made of lighter, cheaper plastic.

This is good news, says a University of Wisconsin home economist, because it will not only help keep the price of thread stable but will help conserve the nation's wood supplies.

Maybe so, but one suspects that not until the toothpick manufacturers cease their depredations will our forests really be safe.

Anyway, the question in the minds of millions of us kids is: Can you notch a plastic spool to make a decent Halloween window-rattler?

'The Kids': A Deception
Of all the sham techniques in the liberal-leftist bag, nothing is more shabby than the endless references to "the kids," meaning the campus demonstrators and protesters.

In the first place, the radicalized element in the country isn't made up of children—the group to which the label "the kids" truly belongs. We have today in this country a new class of professional or permanent students, as Latin America has had for generations. Many of today's militant "students" are in their late twenties, thirties or even forties. University fellowships and grants are so abundant that a shrewd, once-yearly people manage to hang around college and university campuses for years and years. They "study" revolution and disruption while millions of other Americans, who have to work for a living, are employed in offices, in factories and on the farms of the nation.

These "old" youths affect the wears and manners and dress of college students and speak in a special jargon that is supposed to be youthful. The cult of youth is carefully developed by many individuals whose own youth has long since passed. This kind of posing is tragic in a sense and also hurtful and misleading, for it involves deceit.

Then, too, this element with its artful poses also has produced a new breed of sympathetic commentator whose endlessly repeated slogan is "youth." Nothing is more absurd than the over-age TV commentator attired in extreme "mod" fashion and whose thinning hair is dressed by a youth stylist.

The liberal-leftist references to "the kids" are deliberate and purposeful. They are aimed at promoting the idea that there are two Americas with utterly different sets of values—the young Americans who want radical change and the middle-aged and older Americans who allegedly represent a dying society. One hears this theme stressed on television all the time. It is what has been called the Big Lie technique.

The condition of anarchy facing some parts of the country today isn't the result of American youth turning its back on America. Actually, the current disorders have their roots in the old radicalism of the '40s, '50s and '60s. Many of the planners of contemporary protests are men and women who have been involved in communist and fellow-traveling organizations since the 1930s.

David Dellinger, one of the notorious "Chicago 7," is one of these individuals. As for the doctrines of the New Left, these are Russian anarchist and nihilist notions first enunciated a century ago in Czarist times. The New Left hasn't turned up a single really new social or philosophical doctrine.

What is so wrong and misleading about the use of the term "the kids" is that it suggests all American young people belong in the radicalized camp. Some of them are in that camp, especially the affluent protesters who can afford to attend Ivy League schools and travel around the country to various trouble spots, using credit cards supplied by permissive parents.

But millions of young people—the real youth of America—believe in the national ethic of work, saving, home ownership, a happy marriage, and service to community and nation. You don't read about these responsible "kids" in Look Magazine. You don't find them getting the attention of Time or Life or the TV networks. Almost all the space and network time are reserved for the kooks, the haters, and the destructionists.

The liberal pundits aren't interested in the example of youth achievers young businessmen who are creating new enterprises. They would rather talk in sympathetic terms about those who threaten to burn down everything if they don't get their way.

Ask yourself how many interviews you have seen on TV with young construction workers marching in support of the President? How many interviews have been taped showing patriotic "Strike Back" students on campus who back their country and who oppose opposing closing down universities?

The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs hopes to put a series of small but costly roadblocks at each step of the road from Turkey on through the chain of interlocking illegal organizations through which the opium-morphine-heroin moves to the U.S. addict.

We Want It Clearly Understood—

WASHINGTON

Drug Traffic May Slow Down If 'Take' Is Cut

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)—No official this reporter has talked to has any hope for a quick end to the heroin trade in the United States.

But one long-range approach holds promise.

It is based on the thesis that the underworld men in the heroin traffic, besides being criminals, are hard-headed businessmen—and that they will drop a product (heroin) if it doesn't pay off.

This approach involves a series of piecemeal attacks, at making operations so costly for the worldwide complex of smugglers, "bankrollers," contact men and processors that they'll turn to other, more profitable lines.

Experts say they've seen this kind of shift in the past.

The first step is to make heroin harder to get and therefore more costly where it's grown.

By agreement, Turkey (source of 80 per cent of U.S. heroin) is cutting back on the provinces in which opium may legally be produced.

This won't reduce opium output. But it will make growing illegal in the border provinces. Policing could be more effective with legal production limited to a relatively small region in the center of the country.

The U.S. government is also doing what it can to help Ankara buy and store the opium crop immediately at harvest.

The delay between harvesting and government purchase for medical use is an active period for smugglers.

On paper, these steps should make the job of the smuggler more difficult. But this may not work so well in practice.

It's not the money the Turkish farmer makes. Opium may account for but $50 out of an annual income of something more than $1,000. But it is a handy cash crop farmers can grow in the off-season. More importantly, opium growing and smuggling are old traditions, ones the farmers won't give up easily.

The U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs hopes to put a series of small but costly roadblocks at each step of the road from Turkey on through the chain of interlocking illegal organizations through which the opium-morphine-heroin moves to the U.S. addict.

Congressional Comedy:
Annual Ceiling Biting

JOHN GOLDSMITH
ROBERT ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Congress in a legislative maneuver right out of Alice in Wonderland, is solemnly adjusting the spending ceiling it imposed last year to accommodate subsequently increased outlays under funds which it does not control.

Another ceiling is being imposed on the administration for the year beginning July 1. It is an elastic ceiling too, and it will have a bigger built-in "cushion" designed to avoid a similarly embarrassing adjustment a year hence.

At first glance there is something laughable about the House and Senate saying, by law, that the spending ceiling initially set at $191.9 billion will be lifted, after the fact, to realistic $197.9 billion. That is what is accomplished under the supplemental appropriations bill which is now pending.

With that sort of recent experience, there would seem to be very little usefulness in the new, adjustable spending limitation, keyed to the budget submitted by President Nixon in February and set at $200.8 billion.

Actually, however, there are two lessons to be learned from what seems to be a bit of congressional Mad Hatterism. One is budgetary, and the other is procedural—a footnote on how Congress does its business.

THE "UNCONTROLLABLES"—Every sixth grader knows that Congress controls federal spending through the power of the purse — by voting and withholding funds. The trouble is that the sixth-grade civics lesson is not true—not true by half.

A—The normal range for PBI is 4 to 8 but persons with an overactive thyroid may have readings of 20 or more. Your level shows a moderate increase but any increase would be more likely to cause a loss rather than a gain of weight.

Q—What causes an enlarged thyroid and what can be done for it?

A—An exophthalmic or toxic goiter is caused by an overactive thyroid. A nontoxic goiter may be caused by an iodine deficiency; such drugs as thiocyanates, para-aminosalicylic acid and butazolidine; or pituitary failure. In some cases no cause can be found. The treatment would depend on the cause.

Q—Without wearing lighter clothing what would make me feel colder than others in the same room?

A—The most likely cause is an underactive thyroid or poor circulation.

Q—What is the cause of myxedema?

A—This is a type of swelling of the tissues caused by an underactive thyroid.

Q—My doctor says I have an underactive thyroid. He is giving me Proloid. What are the side effects?

A—Proloid is a purified thyroid extract. If the dosage is properly adjusted there should be no side effects. Too large a dosage may cause nervous tension, insomnia and a fast pulse.

Q—I have a thyroid deficiency. Will I have to take thyroid pills all my life? If I get pregnant will I miscarry?

A—You will probably need some form of thyroid supplement indefinitely. A dosage tailored to your need should enable you to go through a normal pregnancy and have a normal baby but careful readjustment of your thyroid dosage during pregnancy may be necessary.

Q—My doctor says I have Hashimoto's disease. What causes it? What are the symptoms? Can it be cured?

A—This is a chronic inflammation of the thyroid. It may be caused by an infection but in many cases no cause can be found. It is most common in middle-aged women and is characterized by a painful swelling of the thyroid. In the early stages cortisone or X-ray treatments may help. Later, if there is a deficiency of thyroid hormone, thyroid extract may be given. Complete cure is the rule.

Under those circumstances, it is not surprising that the two appropriations committees have now appropriated the spending ceiling—as their very own. There is an implicit threat that the House Ways and Means Committee will act again if the appropriations committees don't do so.

THE PROBLEM—What is important is that the so-called congressional spending limitation will do nothing to help in meeting the real budgetary problem. That problem is a $1.3 billion deficit in the federal government's "unified" budget.

In February, as we reported it, it was estimated that a $7 billion deficit in the regular federal funds would be offset by a surplus of more than $8 billion in the government's trust fund accounts which are supported by contributions to Social Security, Medicare, the civil service retirement fund and the like.

That paper surplus is out the window now. If Congress wants to hold down federal outlays and thus dampen inflationary pressures its members will have to act to withhold funds from individual federal programs, and all of those programs have their supporters.

For "supporters" read "potential voters" in this election year.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION:—Is it proper for a county to use tax money in an attempt to reduce alcoholism?

ANSWER: We do not believe it is any more proper for the county to spend tax funds to try to cure alcoholism than it would be for the county to use tax money to force everyone to take a glass of wine every day for medicinal purposes.

No one really knows what causes alcoholism. There is one school of thought that holds it is a chemical deficiency or imbalance in certain individuals which makes them highly susceptible to alcohol. Others claim it is a purely psychological problem. Still others say it is a combination of these two that makes a person an alcoholic. But until the cause is known, we don't see how any program can be effective in treating it.

Alcoholics Anonymous has had a higher level of success than anyone else in helping these people. Their experience has shown that until the individual really wants to help himself, nothing imposed on him by others is going to do much good. But once he wants to help himself, it is not so much fancy buildings and expensive medical treatment that he needs as it is moral support, good diet, and absolute avoidance of alcohol plus a faith or confidence in some force higher than himself upon which he can draw for help. We don't see how the spending of tax is going to provide this, which the individual has to, ultimately, provide for himself.

We believe that the use of tax funds for such a project as the proposed county alcoholism service is simply a way to expand the power of the politicians.

They can take money from all the people, including the widows and orphans, the poor, the aged and the handicapped, and they can say: "Oh, we're doing such a good thing with this money you really don't mind going without new shoes in order to try to help the poor alcoholic, do you?"

Then they will have the excuse to expand and expand and to take more and more in taxes from all the people.

Cowboys Make Biggest Drive In West

By DICK KLEINER

WAWONA, Calif. (NEA)—Bob Barnett and his boys have the horses back up to Yosemite now, and what is probably the biggest horse drive left in the West is done until next fall.

They use 300 horses and mules during the summer season in and around Yosemite National Park, whose elevation is in the 9,000-foot range. A lot of snow falls there in winter, so the horses are driven down to warmer pastureland around Lake McClure, 85 miles west. Then, in the spring in a three-day drive reminiscent of the old West, the cowboys escort them back up to their summer home. Although there are a few differences in today's big horse drive, it still relies on men in the saddle to do the job. Bob Barnett, lead cowboy, has been working horses for 35 years. He has six other men with him. They love the job.

"They don't notice the hard work and the long hours," Barnett says. "They would rather do this than any other way of life. Maybe we're so happy because all our brains have been bounced around riding."

They start out, as they've always have, yelling "Hi! Hi!" and the animals snorting as steam rises from their backs in the chilly dawn. They trudge east on a dirt trail and then along a small road. One of the cowboys rides ahead of the main body, putting up string across road crossings and gate openings. This serves a dual purpose—keeping others from getting in the way of the herd and creating a "mental block" so the horses and mules won't stray onto side trails.

They move slowly—four miles an hour—but steadily. The country side is lush and green after the spring rains and the spring rains and the thaw. The weather is cool and the cowboys enjoy the feeling of freedom.

"A horse is like a woman," Barnett says in an aside. "The best-looking ones don't always make the best wives."

The first night, they settle the horses down in a pasture outside the old town of Hornitos, once the home of the bandit, Joaquin Murietta. "The Bloody Bandit of the Mother Lode."

It has been hot, dusty work, so the men head into town. "Got to wash away that Corral No. 5," Barnett says. But it isn't like the shoot-'em-ups. They want a good meal and then a bed and shower in the motel, which is a modern trail-drive refinement.

They eat well—"Takes plenty of groceries to hold a man in his saddle," Barnett says—and sleep well in order to hit the trail early. "Up and at 'em," Barnett says, knocking on the doors of his cowhands. "Lotta people die in bed! Dangerous place to be!"

Out of Hornitos, they stick as much as possible to back roads and the open country of the Guadalupe Valley. But it's hard, in 1970, to avoid highways, and the herd once in awhile crosses one. For a stretch of about 3 1/2 miles, they are forced to move along Route 140. One of the cowboys rides ahead, another behind, warning motorists, who stop and watch the 300 head move along the highway.

Yosemite's horses are chosen for their even disposition and calm demeanor. Barnett says they're generally a mixture—some Morgan, a bit of quarter horse, perhaps a little Palomino or Arabian. They are purchased all over the West.

The men eat lunch in the saddle—fat sandwiches stuffed with cheese and bologna and spiced with red-hot Mexican peppers. They skirt towns—Mariposa, Mt. Bullion, Mormon Bar—and spend the second night near Bootjack. They reach Yosemite about noon of the third day and drive the horses into the Wawona corral. Their job is done. Next fall, they'll drive them back down to Lake McClure again.

"We were probably born 50 years too late," Barnett says. "But it's the kind of occupation we like. There are lots of doctors, lawyers and businessmen we wouldn't trade with."

Washington Window

WASHINGTON (UPI)—It is possible but improbable that the Constitution will be amended in time to provide for direct popular election of the President in 1972.

Interest in the amendment has been reawakened by George C. Wallace's victory in Alabama and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy's public musing about the likelihood of a new liberal party running a presidential candidate. Backers of the amendment see it as a safeguard for the two party system. The proposed amendment now awaiting action in the Senate would have to finish its route through Congress and be ratified by 38 state legislatures by next April 15 to apply to the 1972 election.

The states needed only 10 months to ratify the 20th amendment, repealing prohibition, and nine to approve the 23rd, giving a vote for President to the District of Columbia.

Wallace's vote as a third party presidential candidate in 1968 and the 46 electoral votes he collected gave a new push to the old campaign to abolish the electoral college system of electing the President.

The House approved its version of a constitutional amendment for popular election last year by a vote of 339 to 70.

No such margin is expected in the Senate. There are doubts that the Senate would give the amendment the necessary two-thirds vote and greater doubts that 38 legislatures would agree by April 15, 1971.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., manager of the senate version, viewed Wallace's victory as a call for the senate to move quickly. He said the nation could not afford to have a minority-party president elected by bargaining among presidential electors, chosen by the states, or by the house, where each state would have one vote regardless of size.

McCarthy, who rattled the teeth of the Democratic Party as an antiwar candidate for its presidential nomination in 1968, speculated about the formation of a new liberal party in the June 7 New York Times magazine.

DOUG SANDERS
... all-time champion

PRO: Frank Beard On The Golf Tour Social Side

(Fourth of 12 Pieces.)

By FRANK BEARD
I guess I know what Doug Sanders goes through now. I was taking a lot of razzing about a pretty girl who followed me on the course. She was a real knockout, but she wasn't following me for my good looks. She's an old friend of mine and Patty's, and she came out with her boy friend, Chuck Cottier, the baseball player.

I don't have a reputation for being one of the playboys on the tour. We've got some pretty good ones — Doug Sanders will admit he's the all-time champion, if you ask him, and Ray Floyd's got to be a contender — but even though I played the tour for three years as a bachelor, I wasn't much for running around. I wasn't a saint. I just wasn't any good at meeting girls.

I met Patty on a blind date that Tony Lama arranged. The Lemas and Patty lived in the same apartment house in Dallas, and the first time I saw Patty, at Tony's place, she watched television and didn't pay any attention to me at all. I was used to that.

Raymond Floyd's never quite achieved his potential on the tour, and a lot of people think it's because he's got too many distractions. He does like to have a good time.

I think you can divide the players on the tour into five different categories. In the first group are the out-and-out swingers, almost all bachelors, who drink and date and get all the goodlooking broads, and do it all out in the open. Then you have the guys who do the same thing, more or less, but do it quietly so that no one hears about it, especially their wives. Class three includes the guys who like to drink a little or run around a little, but don't make a career out of either.

In four are the guys who rarely have a drink, who want 10 to 12 hours of sleep every night, and who don't want too much on their minds except golf. In five are the out-and-out saints, who don't do any drinking or chasing or swearing, who just go to church and play golf and watch a little television. Most of the guys fall into the third and fourth categories.

Outside the fact that he went to the University of Arkansas, no one knows too much about Miller Barber's background. He goes around with Doug Sanders and Ray Floyd, the social set. His nickname on the tour is "The Mysterious Mr. X," which started when some of the fellows began noticing that they never saw Miller after dark.

A few years ago, after Miller took the early lead in some tournament in Texas, he walked into the locker room, and somebody said, "How'd you do, X?"

"I'm not X any more," Miller said, very seriously. "I'm Super-X."

Indians Trip Senators, 6-3

By United Press International
Tony Horton and Curt Blefary may have finally decided to quit posing as sluggers and begin acting like them.

Both delivered key homers Thursday night. Horton, who hadn't hit a homer since May 24th, belted a three-run blast the eighth inning to lift the Cleveland Indians to a 6-3 victory over the Washington Senators and Blefary, who had managed only one homer in 146 at bats, clouted a solo shot to help the New York Yankees defeat the Boston Red Sox, 3-2.

Those two contests were the only American League games scheduled, but home runs also played an important part in the only two National League games. Ron Fairly's grand slam sparked the Montreal Expos to a 10-7 victory over the Atlanta Braves and homers by Billy Williams and Ron Santo helped the Chicago Cubs beat the San Francisco Giants, 6-0.

Horton's three-run shot came off reliever Dick Such's first pitch and enabled the Indians to win their fifth game in a row. Grait Nettle and Ray Fosse also homered for Cleveland while Aurelio Rodriguez connected for Washington.

Jacklin Nets Lead

By JOHN G. GRIFFIN

UPI Sports Editor

CHASKA, Minn. (UPI)—England's Tony Jacklin set sail

today into the second round of the U.S. Open golf championship with a two-stroke lead, and unless the violent winds change, the Yanks floundering in his wake may never catch up.

"It can blow even harder if it wants to—I don't care," declared the slender British Open champion who shot a one-under-par 71 in Thursday's opening round while not a single other player in the field of 150 could match or break par in the teeth of 41-mile-per-hour wind gusts.

Jacklin, who found Thursday's swirling gusts "just like the seaside courses back home," had a two-stroke lead at the start of the second round

over Mason Rudolph, Julius

Boros, and Juan "Chi Chi"

Rodriguez, and another stroke over three longshots in the field

—Bobby Mitchell, Ray Crawford, and Tony Evans.

Sixty-nine players failed to break 90 in the "wind tunnel," among them Gary Player, who shot even 80 for the worst U.S.

Open round of his career, and Jack Nicklaus, who had an 81, the worst open round of his

T. Jeremiah Beam. Part of the Beam family art for 175 years.

Son of the famous Col. Jim Beam, T. Jeremiah is the fifth generation of the only Kentucky family that's made the same Bourbon since 1795. As a matter of fact, 1970 marks the 175th anniversary of the year that Jacob Beam, founder of the Beam clan, sold his first barrel of Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey.

That's a mighty long time for one family to make one product, according to one formula.

So the next time you sip Jim Beam, savor its quality and its light taste. That's what we mean when we say it's a 175-year-old family art.

Trojans Defeat FSU in 15 Sets

OMAHA, Neb. (UP)—Southern California baseball coach
Rod Dedeaux was the proud possessor today of his fifth College World Series championship, but said his Trojans were "lucky to win" over Florida State's Seminoles, 2-1, in the title contest Thursday night.

The Seminoles took a 1-0 lead in the fifth, saw the game tied in the seventh and finally lost out in the last of the 15th when the Trojans put together two walks and two infield hits for the game-deciding tally.

Southern Cal's Jim Barr, making his third series appearance, relieved starter Greg Widman at the beginning of the eighth and was locked in a stout pitching duel with Mac mainder of the game. Scarce,

Hollywood In Review

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — They're going to call it "Mary Tyler Moore."
Not "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."
"The second title sounds as if it should be accompanied by a blare of trumpets and a long drum roll," said the pert brunette. "I mean it gives the impression of a great big deal. It's larger than life, and I'm not."

Next season Miss Moore will star in her own weekly half-hour television show after having taken several years off for a go at the movies. Aside from "Thoroughly Modern Mil-," her films were bombs.

It would appear television is Mary's milieu. For five years she combined sex appeal and chunky home goodness as Laura Petrie on "The Dick Van Dyke Show" (let's hear that drum roll).
Can Dyke, too, attempted movie stardom and fell short of, say, Mickey Rooney.
Mary is somewhat intimidated in the knowledge that she must carry the burden of the show without the strong comic talent of Van Dyke for support.
"I'm going to be leaning on six wonderful members of the cast," she said. "But I'm still nervous about having my name in the title.

"My son, Richard, said it sounds conceited. And I guess it does. We tried to come up with some other names for the show, but none of them were suitable."
Mary will play an associate producer of a television news show on a fictitious station in Minneapolis-St. Paul who gets the job by agreeing to take a $15 weekly pay cut when she fails to land a stenographer job.
"I'll be acting naturally and instinctively in the role," the vivacious, leggy actress said. "Just as I did on the Van Dyke show. I reacted on situations and people as I would off-screen."

And therein lies the best hope for Miss Moore's new CBS series.
She is a low-pressure, low-key performer who is not too pretty nor too animated for the living room audience. If the show is a success it will be because viewers are able to identify with Mary.
Mary is well aware that no matter how good—or bad—the series, she must win a loyal audience on the strength of her own personality.

Smith To Dedicate State's Largest Dam

GRANBURY, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Preston Smith will stand atop an observation point overlooking the state's latest dam and reservoir Friday and dedicate the project "to the people of Texas."
Granbury Lake and Cordova Dam are the latest additions to a system of eight major reservoirs in the central part of the Brazos River basin. The dam is named after Jacob De Cordova, an early booster of Central Texas. The lake is named after a city which sits on the banks of the lake 30 miles upstream from the dam.

The lake contains 155,000 acre feet of water and extends 3 miles upstream from the dam. The reservoir project will be operated and maintained by the Brazos River Authority which also constructed the project.
A. L. Brooks, president of the authority, said the project is unique because it was constructed and will be operated without any tax money. The authority gets its operating funds through the sale of water and electricity.
The dedication ceremonies will begin at 4:00 p.m. and should last an hour.

Hollywood Reports

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Who'd have dreamed a few short years ago that "The Christine Jorgensen Story" would reach the screen as a motion picture with an X rating?
Christine's story, in fact, is almost puerile compared to many pictures released in the past year.
Miss Jorgensen's story of sex transformation will beat "Myra Breckinridge" to the theaters by a matter of days.
It is a simple case of females getting the best of males once again. Christine was surgically transformed from a man to a woman 20 years ago while Gore Vidal's fictitious Myra went the other way, so to speak.

Christine, blonde, bosomy and apparently as feminine as one may perceive by superficial observation in the Brown Derby at lunchtime, is somewhat satisfied that her life story is not causing a furor.
"Attitudes have changed. An awful lot of attitudes have changed in the past few years," Christine said in a voice not unlike the late Tallulah Bankhead's.
"The picture isn't rated because it's not dirty. We show what happened surgically with charts. There are a few shocking scenes, but nothing vulgar."
"It's a factual account of my life. There is some literary license taken, just as there was in my book."

Christine plays nightclubs now and then, acts in road company plays and now is writing a screenplay. But the freak show attitude of her early appearances has evaporated.
In this day of "Oh Calcutta," "Hair," and sex pictures from Denmark, Christine's story is as controversial as "Snow White."
Christine is a talkative individual, hip, and delighted that the operation she underwent has become more or less commonplace with sex transformations taking place in hospitals in the United States.

Attitude Is Female
Asked if she preferred being a female to having been a male, she responded: "I really don't know. I was always a female in my thinking and attitudes."
"This movie couldn't have been made five years ago," she said. "But the kids want to push back barriers."
"I have a percentage of the picture, and supervised the dialogue and screenplay. I worked so hard I really didn't think of the film as my own biography until it was finished and I saw the complete picture."
Her reaction?
"Some of it really shook me up," Christine concluded.

Soviets Claim Success For Soyuz Mission

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet scientists said Thursday the two-man Soyuz 9 mission, approaching its 18th day in orbit, had broken the barriers against long-term life in space and helped open new vistas for secure interplanetary travel.
Commenting in various Soviet newspapers, they predicted the health of future cosmonauts would be diagnosed entirely by the computer, space ships would rotate to create artificial gravity, and cosmonaut physi-

Miss Remick Named In Divorce Suit

LONDON (UPI) — American actress Lee Remick was named as the "other woman" Thursday when British actress Valerie Gearon won a divorce from director William Gowans in the London divorce court.
The judge granted the decree on the grounds of Gowans' alleged adultery with Miss Remick, 33, whose own marriage to Bill Collier was dissolved in Mexico last year.
Gowans and Miss Gearon, 30, were married in November, 1962, and separated in May, 1969. They have two daughters.
Private detective Peter Dallimore gave evidence of Gowans' adultery with Miss Remick, who now lives in Chelsea.
Miss Gearon recently appeared as Ann Boleyn's sister in the film "Anne of the Thousand Days."

BENTSEN SHOWS LETTER

Majority Of Texas Delegation Say Democratic Party Not Split

KINGSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Senate candidate Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr. displayed a letter signed by most of the Texas congressional delegation Wednesday and said it proved the Democratic party was not split over his candidacy.

The letter was signed by 19 of the 23 congressmen representing Texas in the House of Representatives. The letter was signed by 19 of the 23 congressmen representing Texas in the House of Representatives.

who did not sign are Republicans. The other is Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., a liberal who supported Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex. Yarborough was defeated by Bentsen in the primary.

Rep. George Bush, R-Tex., the Republican running against Bentsen, said he would gain a lot of votes from liberal Democrats who are splitting from ough lost.

Bush specifically indicated he would be helped by the Democratic Rebuilding Committee, an organization formed by liberal Democrats to elect Republicans when the Democratic candidate is a conservative. The committee, which was instrumental in re-electing Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., four years ago, says it wants to make Texas "a two party state" so voters can have a choice between liberal Democrats and conservative Republicans in general elections.

The committee works on the theory if Republicans are elected in general elections more conservatives will vote in the Democratic primary to vote in Republican races.

BUSH SAYS

Controlled Economy Unfair To Workers And Businessmen

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI) — U. S. Rep. George Bush, R-Tex., said Wednesday he is glad President Nixon did not suggest wage and price controls to help regulate the economy.

Bush is running against Democrat Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr. for the U. S. Senate.

"I am delighted that President Nixon did not listen to the siren song of some of our opponents who suggest wage and price controls to solve our economic problem," Bush said.

"We don't need a controlled economy," he said. "It is unfair to the working man, unfair to the businessman. It results in incredible red tape. It results in rationing and black marketing."

Bush said "just a cursory look at history" revealed wage and price controls have been "ineffective, unfair to the working man and have put unreasonable restraints on business."

Bush said he also agreed with the President's program of having social security benefits increase with the cost of living.

The Republican candidate said Bentsen's statement about Nixon wanting the Republican to win in November was "the understatement of the year."

"Bentsen also said that the people of Texas don't want outsiders coming in, referring to the President of the United States. I don't think anybody, Republican, Democrat or Independent, affluent or humble, will consider the President of the United States an outsider in the great state of Texas."

US Says North Viets Have Blocked Talks

PARIS (UPI)—The United States said today Communist Vietnamese peace negotiators have distorted and denigrated all allied peace offers and blocked all progress at the Paris peace talks by putting forward demands for unilateral concessions.

The charge was made by U.S. delegation leader Philip C. Habib at today's 71st weekly Vietnam conference session highlighted by new North Vietnam conference session claims that President Nixon is expanding the war in Indochina to seek a position of strength. Habib said Communist statements demonstrated "once again that you are not yet willing to discuss the relevant issues before us in a way which can lead to a negotiated settlement." He said the United States was not prepared to accept Hanoi's and the Viet Cong's demands for unilateral U.S. military pullout and the overthrow of the Saigon regime.

"As long as you maintain that attitude, no progress is possible that this meeting table. The way to progress lies in give-and-take discussion" on all fundamental issues, Habib told Hanoi negotiator Nguyen Minh Vy and the Viet Cong's Nguyen Van Tien.

forces from South Vietnam which is fundamental—not your demand for the unilateral withdrawal of U.S. forces. It is a political settlement that gives the South Vietnamese people the right to determine their own future which is fundamental—not your demand for the imposition of a government of your own choosing."

North Vietnamese delegate W. Gilmore, court reporter, spends her own money and buys $7 worth of candy a week for reporters, police and the judge.

He said the Nixon administration planned to keep Cambodian territory under unlimited South Vietnamese occupation with support of the U.S. Air Force.

"I like a peaceful atmosphere," she said Wednesday.
