

Storm claims 13th victim in U.S.

David pounds Northeast

By The Associated Press

Gale winds and driving rains from tenacious Tropical Storm David tore into the urban Northeast today, sending hundreds fleeing their homes, knocking out power and closing highways and schools.

Tornadoes spawned in David's system touched down in scattered areas from Virginia to New Jersey. Rivers were rising toward flood stage and "major flooding" was expected on the Monocacy River at Frederick, Md.

Heavy rain and winds gusting to 53 mph buffeted New York City, creating rush hour traffic snarls.

Schools were closed throughout most of New Jersey, where about 100,000 homes and businesses were without power, and classes were also cancelled in much of New York and southeastern Connecticut.

Three more deaths were attributed to the storm, bringing the number of U.S. casualties to 13. David, one of the worst Caribbean storms of the century, has caused more than 900 deaths since it was spawned in the Caribbean last week.

At 9 a.m. EDT, David was centered at latitude 42.0

north and longitude 76.0 west, near Binghamton, N.Y., about 120 miles northwest of New York City. It was moving at a brisk 30 mph with sustained winds of 45 mph along the coast and out over the Atlantic.

Gale warnings were up from Cape Hatteras, N.C., to Eastport, Maine.

In the meantime, Tropical Storm Frederic, still in the Caribbean, dumped torrential rains on Hispaniola and Puerto Rico, islands still saturated from the furious passage of Hurricane David.

At midmorning, Frederic, with winds of 45 mph, was squarely over the Dominican Republic, which occupies the eastern two-thirds of Hispaniola.

As David made its way north early today, about 800 to 1,000 people were evacuated from their homes in Maryland.

The storm lost its hurricane force over land Wednesday as it passed through the southern Atlantic Coast states, leaving behind a trail of downed trees and eroded beaches.

David has caused damage estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars in its rampage through the Caribbean and the Southeast. The storm was blamed for $60 million in damage and six deaths in Florida where it first struck the U.S. mainland with hurricane winds earlier this week.

Two people were killed Wednesday in Virginia, where Gov. John Dalton declared a state of emergency after 10 tornadoes caused heavy damage.

Officials said one person died in a traffic accident caused by rain-slick roads near Wytheville, Va., while another was killed when a tornado hit a house in Fairfax County. Fourteen people were injured and at least 350 evacuated as floodwaters rose and tornadoes formed over the northern part of the state.

Newport News officials said tornadoes caused an estimated $2 million in damage to that city.

High water and winds caused a temporary halt in some rail and air service in the Washington, D.C., area, and Maryland officials said five storms that appeared to be tornadoes smashed into the counties around Baltimore, slightly injuring two people.

A 63-YEAR-OLD MAN died in the collapse of this home Wednesday in Great Falls, Va. The house collapsed during a tornado spawned by the remnants of Hurricane David.

Pileup

A distraught Jimmie Davis (right) observes the scene of an accident she was involved in Wednesday afternoon at the intersection of North Cuyler Street and Francis Avenue. A 1978 Pontiac Safari station wagon driven by Davis, who lives at 717 Sloan, and a 1974 Mercury Comet driven by Debra Rapstine of 1601 Fir collided at the intersection. Davis was traveling south on Cuyler, and Rapstine was westbound on Francis. After the cars collided, the station wagon reportedly swerved and struck two parked cars on Cuyler. No citations have been issued by police in connection with the accident.

At Davis trial

Video evidence entered

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jurors have viewed the two components that make up the most damaging piece of physical evidence in the state's murder conspiracy case against Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

Jurors first heard an audio tape then watched a silent videotape of a crucial Aug. 20, 1978, meeting between Davis and key prosecution witness David McCrory.

Prosecutors said they planned today to show the synchronized audio and videotape of Davis and McCrory discussing the "murder" of Judge Joe Eidsen.

"I got Judge Eidsen dead for you," McCrory said on tape.

"Good," Davis replied. "I'll get the rest of them dead for you. You want a bunch of people dead, right?" McCrory continued.

"All right," Davis said. McCrory's testimony and the tapes form the crux of the state's case against Davis.

accused of soliciting the murder of Eidsen.

At that time, the 61-year-old jurist was presiding over Davis' turbulent divorce from Priscilla Davis.

The 45-year-old defendant maintains he was framed in a plot put together by Priscilla, McCrory and former Fort Worth karate instructor Pat Burleson.

The videotape, made by FBI agents hidden in a nearby surveillance van, shows McCrory and Davis looking at a .22-caliber pistol and silencer in the trunk of Davis' Cadillac. McCrory has testified that Davis asked him in an earlier meeting to get the gun.

McCrory also said Davis gave him $25,000 at the Aug. 20 meeting to pay off the "hitman" who "killed" Eidsen.

The judge was not harmed and was hidden in a Fort Worth motel at the time of the meeting. He had, however, posed as dead in a photograph that McCrory told jurors was his proof of the "murder."

Davis claims he never saw the photograph.

Prosecutors also played for jurors the tape of a 3 a.m. phone call McCrory made to set up the Aug. 20 meeting with Davis. Prosecutor Jack Strickland asked McCrory why he seemed so vague in the phone call.

"If I'd come out and said 'Cullen, the man has killed the judge and he wants his money' the phone would have gone 'click' and that would have been the end of it," McCrory said.

"Cullen, for God's sake, don't leave me hung out on this," McCrory pleaded just before the 3 a.m. phone call ended.

"Why did you say that?" Strickland asked.

"If he (Davis) didn't follow through, the hit man was going to turn to me for the money and I didn't have any money to pay him," McCrory said.

"I had to make it look real and to make it sound real."

Teacher walkouts spreading fast

By BARRY HANSON
Associated Press Writer

School officials struggled to hold classes today and some strikers faced judges' return-to-work orders as walkouts by more than 32,000 teachers spread to 16 states, including Alaska.

More than 700,000 pupils nationwide enjoyed an extended vacation or showed up for classes taught by administrators, non-strikers or substitutes, some paid as much as $100 a day.

One school in Daly City, Calif., a suburb of San Francisco, closed after only nine minutes Wednesday when more than 350 teachers struck the 6,600-pupil Jefferson Union High School District.

"It looks like we have a very effective strike," said Tom Fitzpatrick of the American Federation of Teachers Local 1481.

Pickets went up around the 52 public schools in the Anchorage, Alaska, area Wednesday after rejection of an offer that would bring the average salary for the 1,900 teachers to $26,979 this year. The teachers wanted a boost to $27,944.

No further negotiations are planned and classes for the district's 38,000 pupils were conducted by substitutes and volunteer teachers.

A New Jersey Superior Court judge issued an order Wednesday barring the 1,700-member Paterson Education Association from continuing its strike affecting about 26,500 pupils. Union officials did not say if they would obey the order.

In Rutland, Vt., a judge Wednesday night ordered an end to the week-long walkout by 240 teachers in Vermont's second largest city. Teachers had no comment on the ruling, but School Board Chairman Dorothy Plue said she hoped the order would speed up settlement of the dispute over salary increases.

The Oklahoma Supreme Court refused Wednesday to tamper with a lower court order barring the Oklahoma City school board from negotiating with striking teachers. But it did order a speedy hearing on more arguments in the case, which could clear the way for the school board to ask for an injunction to get some 800 teachers back to work.

Other strikes were reported Wednesday in Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Washington.

Strikes also spread to the university level Wednesday. A walkout halted about three-fourths of Wednesday's first day of classes at Rhode Island University and a strike by clerical workers disrupted opening day for 25,000 students at Boston University.

Teachers were also off the job at Fairleigh Dickinson University in New Jersey and at two smaller colleges in the state.

Federal aid available for factory workers

By DAN LACKEY
Of The Pampa News

An estimated 220 Marie Foundation workers laid off from the Pampa and McLean plants will be eligible for federal compensation under the 1974 Trade Act, the U.S. Department of Labor has announced.

The Trade Act provides what is known as "worker adjustment assistance" for workers who have been totally or partially separated from employment as the result of increased imports.

The compensation was approved by the Department of Labor Aug. 8 following a June 12 application for a certificate of eligibility from three workers at Marie Foundation in Pampa.

The federal worker assistance is designed as a supplement to state unemployment payments and will be administered by the local office of the Texas Employment Commission.

The worker assistance supplement will pay up to 70 percent of a worker's average weekly wage, but will not exceed the national average weekly manufacturing wage, which is presently $250.

Charles Vance, employment interviewer for the TEC office in Pampa, said a team from Austin will arrive in Pampa within the next week to 10 days to instruct local TEC staff members in the administration of the program. Vance said the local office had never handled Trade Adjustment Allowances before and that it would be from three to four weeks until his offices were prepared to process worker claims.

Texas Unemployment compensation ranges from $16 to $96 weekly, and is not based on a percentage of the worker's former salary.

Under the terms of the eligibility, all Pampa Marie Foundation workers laid off on or after June 6, 1978 are eligible for the compensation if they worked six months out of the year preceding their separation from their jobs.

Workers for the McLean plant are eligible if they were laid off on or after March 3, 1979 — and worked six months out of the year previous to separation from their jobs.

Beside the cash readjustment allowances, workers are eligible for special assistance in looking for another job, including financial assistance in moving.

The compensation is designed to last for a maximum of 52 weeks, or until other employment is found. Persons over 60 at the time they were laid off can apply for an additional 26 weeks of assistance, the Department of Labor said.

Persons who were receiving job training at the time of the layoffs may also be eligible for additional weeks of assistance.

The Marie Foundation, which manufactures brassieres and girdles under the corporation Form-O-Uth manufactures, closed the bulk of its Pampa and McLean operations in late May, citing increased imports as the reason for the cutback.

The Labor Department investigation preceding the Trade Adjustment Act compensation for Marie Foundation workers concurred that increased imports had led to the closing of the two plants.

Meanwhile, city officials in McLean and the Pampa Industrial Foundation, in conjunction with Southwestern Public Service' representatives, continued their search for a replacement for the gap left by the Marie Foundation closing.

City officials in McLean reported last week that at least one manufacturer has expressed interest in the facilities at McLean formerly occupied by the Marie Foundation.

Burk Manufacturing of Dallas, a manufacturer of work clothes and jeans, contacted McLean Mayor Sam Haynes two weeks ago to express interest in the McLean location.

In response to the call, McLean city officials conducted a poll to ascertain the number of prospective employees for a proposed new plant.

City Secretary Stella Lee said that as of Tuesday approximately 25 persons had responded to a request ad in various area newspapers.

In Pampa, the Pampa Industrial Foundation and SWPS mailed out 300 letters to prospective small manufacturers last week concerning the Marie location. A second set of letters was scheduled to be mailed to the same manufacturers Friday, according to Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Despite the promises bureaucracy grows

Sometime ago Jimmy Carter set the stage for the creation of a new cell of the federal bureaucracy when he nominated Bob Krueger of Texas as ambassador-at-large for Mexico.

The nomination must be confirmed by the Senate, but Krueger says he is not worried about opposition to his appointment.

He said he has no doubt he will be able to show the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the new position is necessary.

If he does it will be an indication that the committee itself is a faithful unit of the bureaucracy.

The country doesn't need Bob Krueger or anyone else as an ambassador-at-large to Mexico on a permanent basis such as has been planned by the administration for the former congressman. If there is a need, which would be arguable, for a temporary position of that kind, one would reason it would be more practical to appoint someone from the existing government personnel with much more experience in the field than Krueger.

That, however, is not the way politics works, and especially during the see-saw administration of James Carter.

One realizes, of course, that Carter is indebted to the liberal Krueger for his support in the past and that the nomination is in essence part of the pay-off. Carter apparently wants to keep his man in the fold for future purposes.

Krueger, one may recall, was defeated last fall in his race for the Senate by incumbent Senator John Tower.

It was Jimmy Carter himself who in his enthusiasm along the campaign trail when he was running for the job he now holds said he aimed to trim the fat off the federal bureaucracy. Instead, he is, in his nominating Krueger, adding to the nation's bureaucratic fat, for Krueger will have to have a big staff, naturally, and a considerable amount of money for the operation of the office and the functioning of his new post, if he gets it.

Carter people — Carter included — have made quite a mess of this country's relations with Mexico, and one wonders whether there won't be continued bungling in that area of our international relations throughout the remainder of the Carter administration.

James Carter had a plank in his platform of effecting economy in government, but it appears that was just the way he talks. The adding of the Krueger cell to the fat and swollen federal bureaucracy will be another onus on the taxpayers, but the increase of the burden will not end there. Carter in time will find excuse, likely, to initiate gas rationing authority which will add another large cell to the cancer-like bureaucracy. Nearly all phases of his new energy "program" calls for adding more cells to it. Where it will end, nobody knows, for 1980 is still a few months away and may by that time not mean what we think now it will mean, anyway.

We read comments by numerous writers on the political scene recently, and some suggest that despite the failures of the President and his obvious lack of leadership at this point, we should not let him quit or kick him out in some manner, for, after all, people elected him to four years, etc., etc. Be that as it may. The problem is, with his continued building of the federal bureaucracy in mind, can we afford him? Hopefully, the Senate will get this message to him by refusing to confirm the nomination of Bob Krueger.

Let Drivers make safety choices

Neil Goldschmidt, the man nominated by President Carter to be the new secretary of transportation, could give prompt evidence of his common sense by cancelling his predecessor's directive mandating air bags in millions of new automobiles beginning in 1982.

The air bag, as Goldschmidt will discover if he reviews all the available studies, is far more expensive and far less effective than the combination lap and shoulder belts already required on every automobile sold in the United States.

Indeed, the only real argument for the air bag is that 86 percent of those who drive and ride in automobiles in this country don't bother to buckle up.

Rather than tolerate this freedom of choice, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the Department of Transportation have been intent on forcing the adoption of so-called passive restraint — the air bag and the cumbersome "automatic belt," an exotic device attached to car doors that would pin passengers and drivers to their seats.

We believe that those who choose, for whatever reasons, not to utilize lap and shoulder belts should be free to make that decision. And those who avail themselves of the belts should not also be required to pay for air bags they do not need. This is a matter of simple equity.

Acid rain damaging

That business about clouds and linings may have some application even to clouds of pollution.

A source of environmental concern of late has been the crop-damaging effects of acid rain, which returns to earth chemical particles spewed out by industrial operations and absorbed by the atmospheric moisture.

Now comes a report from the Department of Energy's Argonne National Laboratory suggesting that acid rainfall in moderation may be not only tolerable but beneficial to one important cash crop.

During two years of experiments at the laboratory, plots of soybeans treated with simulated acid rain of the strength of household vinegar not only survived but registered improved yields.

The finding, although still tentative and subject to continuing research, is regarded as of special significance to the shaping of a national energy program. Coal, seen as the primary replacement for imported oil, is also a primary source of the sulfur dioxide emissions that contribute to acid rain.

It's some consolation to know that the earth below will still be fruitful if, as the price of energy independence, we must smoke up our spacious skies.

But somehow the prospect of coast-to-coast soybeans doesn't quite raise the spirits as did those old-time amber waves of grain.

No one can tell what future holds

By Oscar Cooley

Always people are worried about the future, but these days they are more worried than usual.

One of the nation's major corporations, Chrysler, is in financial distress. The Gross National Product is falling and there are still other indicators that the economy is in a recession. People wonder how severe and how long it will be.

Some are reported to be stashing savings away in the form of gold and diamonds, stamps and other antiques. Others are hoarding nonperishable food. A few are buying large tanks and filling them with gasoline, ready for the evil day, already threatened, when the precious fuel will not be available.

Then there are the optimists. They are confident the recession will be mild and brief and that the economy soon will begin to boom. Sensing prosperity just around the corner, they are buying common stocks, which means they are buying an interest in future production. This has given the stock market an upward surge.

Which are right, the pessimists or the optimists? No one knows. The future is an enigma, as it always has been. In early October of 1929, no one foresaw that within the month stocks would plunge, ushering in a decade of deep depression. Three weeks ago, how many anticipated the Dow Jones industrial average would rise 30 points in a fortnight?

We know no more about the future course of business than we do about the future weather pattern. Did anyone foresee that the summer of 1979 would be warm and moist, a superbly good growing season in most of America's bread basket, producing crops of corn and soybeans such as the American farmer has never seen? (Those crops may still be laid low by early frost, such are the fortunes of weather.)

It is the part of wisdom not to bet heavily on the future, either economic or meteorological, but always to be as well prepared as possible for whatever may come.

For example, the prudent investor diversifies his investments. He does not put all his eggs in one basket, for that one basket may be one that will fall. He does not buy many shares of any one stock but rather a few shares of each of several stocks, taking care that they are not all in the same, or even related, industries.

Also, he may buy some bonds or money market certificates to give him safety and current income, though not capital gain. And he very likely keeps a substantial sum in a savings account for ready use.

Some, not attracted to stocks, buy houses, land or gold. During the last decade these have done very well. However, those who a decade ago invested in land or gold did not know these would rise in value as they have. Their investment was just as fortuitous as that of the stock buyer. The wisest of them took care not to put all their savings into land and/or gold, but to diversify. They realized their confidence in land and gold was not infallible.

In a lifetime of collecting stamps, Marl Haas assembled a hoard of philatelic treasures that he recently sold for $10 million. He does not reveal what he paid for them but presumably he made a substantial gain. It is our guess that he, too, diversified, making other investments rather than putting all his eggs in the stamp basket.

Life itself is uncertain and getting more so, if we are to credit the daily reports of kidnappings, rapes and killings. There is no sure protection against crime. It behooves people to be on the alert, to avoid solitude, to distrust strangers.

Accidents are frequent and occur at random. One is confident that his life and limb are safe, but he cannot be sure. Many a person has left home in the morning, hopeful and debonair, only to become a casualty of the road. Sensing this possibility, we buy accident insurance. It does not ward off the pain of accidents but eases the pain of paying for them.

All insurance rests on the principle. Recognizing that everyone's future is unforeseeable, insurance is a way — a very ingenious way — of making disasters economically easier to bear.

Apparently, we human beings like to take chances, otherwise, why do we patronize the slot machines and bet on the horses?

No one can foresee the future. Yet we go to great lengths to try to do so. Our intentions are good. We want to improve upon it.

If we cannot afford retirement, what?

The number of Americans 65 and older is increasing every year but retirement dollars are shrinking.

If you figure you can comfortably retire tomorrow on an income of $10,000 a year — you can't.

Hopefully you are going to live at least another decade — but within 10 years it will take $18,000 a year to maintain today's standard of living.

Some economists are about to decide — the Russians have already decided — that, individually, few can ever afford to "retire to do nothing" and that, as a matter of national policy, no country can afford to support such a large and growing segment of unproductive people.

Already we hear from the respected Brookings Institution that our nation can no longer afford to continue providing medical care for everybody; that medical care is going to have to be "rationed" to the "most needy."

In Russia, they have decided that everybody should keep working as long as he or she is able. Let's see what's happened there.

Under the Soviet system, historically, workers have been allowed to retire on a pension at age 60 for men, 55 for women.

The pension, however, amounted to the barest subsistence.

So in Russia, more than two-thirds of all "retirees" continue to work.

More than a thousand factories in Russia are especially designed to provide jobs for pension-age workers — mostly light industry where they turn out toys, knitwear, dresses, baby clothes.

A reasonably competent seamstress — with both her retirement income and her salary — may make as much as $400 a month.

That is an upper echelon income by historic Soviet standards, but Russia has suffered inflation altogether as punitive as ours.

Of Russia's 110 million workers, one in 10 is a working pensioner.

In the United States as of this year federal law protects Americans against mandatory retirement before age 70; inevitably our nation eventually will eliminate age discrimination altogether.

Americans do not want enforced retirement. The most recent Louis Harris survey shows that 88 percent believe nobody should be forced to retire.

Thus the politicians have no problem with this first step — the elimination of obligatory retirement.

Their next step will take more courage. Next the lawmakers must recognize that Americans are living longer, that government support of the unproductive decreases our productivity and increases inflation — so that the lawmakers and the administrators of union pension plans will desist in their efforts to keep increasing retirement pay and benefits — and will instead promote a new policy — which was our nation's "old policy" of encouraging everybody to work as long as he can.

Then what's to look forward to? Perhaps, as our fathers did, we can learn to find satisfaction and pleasure in work itself.

Perhaps, as the Russians have, we will need to designate specific work places for pensioners.

But idleness never did prove to be all it was cracked up to be anyway.

Briefly noted . . .

Currently stopping off in Paraguay in his search for a politically congenial place of exile, former Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza says he has no doubts as to why he is now a has-been.

Jimmy Carter was responsible for his downfall. Which just goes to show that contrary to popular political opinion there is something good to be said about the Carter performance these days.

The dry luck of the Irish

Pope John Paul II will be stopping off in Ireland for only three days enroute to the United States this fall, but the Irish are going all out to make them memorable.

Events will include an open-air mass in a Dublin park that will be fitted out with a 100-foot-high steel cross and an acre of specially woven white carpet.

The cost of these and other elaborate preparations will be an estimated $4.4 million, which the clergy hopes to raise in a special collection at masses.

That will probably be the easy part. The real challenge for many of Ireland's 3.5 million Catholics is likely to be the hierarchy's request to go easy on the drink for two weeks preceding the Pope's arrival.

Fortunately, the Irish are a people of unshakable faith. Otherwise, such a challenge might be enough to drive them to Protestantism.

Put that in your pipe and play it

What do space and bagpipes have in common?

Some people — non-Scots, of course — may think the former the best place for the latter. But otherwise, a connection is not obvious.

There is one, though. It is the silicon chip, a development of space technology that is about to revolutionize what is in the view of some people — Scots, of course — the world's most unusual and stirring musical instrument.

A wire report discloses that one George Smith, an innovative piper from Mull in the Inner Hebrides, has used the chip to produce a new model of pipes dispensing with the traditional bag and lung-challenging blowing and — for the first time in the 1,500 years that loch and glen have echoed to the squeal of the pipes — making possible volume control. All without sacrificing quality — if that's the word for it — of sound.

Sounds like quite a technological as well as musical achievement. Not that that's likely to much impress a people who practically invented the industrial revolution — James Watt, developer of the practical steam engine, being one of their own.

A Glasgow firm is gearing up to produce a thousand of the electronic pipes a year with a thriving market anticipated not only at home but in the United States, Canada, South Africa, Australia, Pakistan and other points around the globe where the clans have established outposts.

Once mass production is under way, the price of pipes is expected to drop from the current $1,600 or more to something like $200.

Now there's something to impress a Scot.

Bell financially troubled

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone's assistant treasurer says the company would be in financial danger if the Texas Public Utility Commission denies Bell's $145.2 million rate increase request.

R. McRae Geschwind of St. Louis, Mo., testified Wednesday before commission examiner Phil Ricketts. The commission expects to make a decision in early November.

Geschwind was cross-examined at length by Ray Besing, attorney for Microwave Communications, Inc., which competes with Bell for long distance business and also buys local service from Bell.

Microwave opposes any increase for Bell. "I don't think they are entitled to a goddamned dime," Besing said in a short interview during a break in the hearing.

Geschwind said in his pre-filed testimony that the entire Bell system, operating under the American Telephone & Telegraph umbrella, isn't making enough money to retain its traditional attractiveness to investors.

"The investment community does not see AT&T as a high-yield, low-risk stock," Geschwind said.

"You may disappoint an awful lot of little old ladies with that answer," Besing rejoined.

Geschwind said the return to AT&T investors from Bell's Texas operations has been 9.97 percent, compared with the 12.35 percent allowed by the commission.

He said Southwestern Bell had not reached the allowed rate of return because its revenues were not enough to offset rising expenses and interest rates on borrowed money.

"Do you say Southwestern Bell is in jeopardy here today, sir?" Besing asked.

"Yes."

Proposed increases outlined

If Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. receives rate hikes it is currently requesting from the Public Utility Commission, base rates for residential Pampa users will increase from $5.25 to $6.80 per month, according to Gary Stevens, local Bell manager.

The company is seeking approval of rate increases that would raise its revenue by $145.2 million a year. Two-thirds of that raise would come from a $1.55 monthly increase in one-party service for residential customers. The other third would result from increases in business rates, special telephone equipment and services, and charges for connecting, changing and moving telephones.

The increases would be uniform throughout the state.

One-party business rates in Pampa would increase $4.65, from $11.25 to $15.90, Stevens said. The charge for installing a telephone in a residence would go up from $4.25 to $9.45, he said. Wiring charges would increase from $6.40 to $7.80, and jack charges would increase from $2.10 to $5.30.

Long distance charges, which Stevens said "pretty well support the residential service," are not included in the proposed rate hikes.

The PUC staff has recommended a $136.4 million increase for Bell. A PUC economist Wednesday proposed that Bell lower the $1.55 residential monthly increase and make up for it by charging higher prices for so-called "vertical services" — things like "Touchtone" telephones and special equipment. That would supposedly limit the residential increase to between 75 cents and $1.10.

"When you talk about these vertical services, we've got to be concerned about pricing ourselves out of the market," Stevens said this morning. "It's a very competitive field. Decorator sets, for example, are very competitive."

He said in some parts of the state, such as Dallas and Houston, Bell is now facing stiff competition in long-distance service from companies that are building microwave towers similar to the one Bell recently put up in Pampa.

"That's one of our pet peeves — they're not regulated and we are," Stevens said.

Shipwreck treasures eye permanent home

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The National Park Service may be ready to get on line with Texas universities and museums that want to house a unique collection of artifacts from sunken, four-century-old Spanish ships.

"It's been recommended very highly that we accept this unique collection," said Bob Whistler, chief naturalist for the Padre Island National Seashore.

Whistler told the Texas Antiquities Commission Wednesday that National Park Service officials in Washington have not yet decided to seek the exhibit. But he said officials seem responsive to the idea.

The commission is looking for a permanent home for a vast and varied collection of treasure gathered off the Texas coast. Divers working through the commission brought the find to the surface in 1975. The collection, remnants of Spanish ships sunk in an April 1554 storm, belongs to the state.

Some of the items are now included in a traveling exhibit. Others are being stored in a University of Texas laboratory. The collection includes silver that was being shipped to Spain from Mexico City.

Whistler said the National Park Service would probably need special federal funding to build the type of facility the commission wants for the exhibit.

Commission Chairman Fred Wendorf said "three, maybe four" Texas universities also want to house the collection. Several museums also may be interested, he said.

The chairman voiced support for the park service.

"The commission has said in the past that possibly the best home for this collection would indeed be on the national seashore. The National Park Service has the appropriate staff, funds and permanence we could use as a vehicle to solve what has been a very difficult problem for us. We don't want to go into the museum business," Wendorf said.

However, no action was taken on the matter. The traveling exhibit is booked through 1980, and commissioners said a permanent home for the collection will not be needed for several years.

Fund established for Ennis infant

A fund to help offset the medical expenses of Kristina Ennis, 18-month-old daughter of Derek and Carla Ennis of Pampa, has been set up at the First National Bank.

Kristina is battling leukemia at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, and the medical costs are staggering. Anyone wishing to donate to the fund may contact Glenda Anderson at the bank.

Kristina's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Ennis and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Fleming, all of Pampa.

Free puppies, anyone?

A Skellytown woman who says she saved six puppies from starvation Wednesday at the Pampa Animal Shelter plans to give them away to interested dog lovers.

Pansy Richardson of 401 Lindbergh in Skellytown said she found the puppies in the stray pen at the shelter. They looked like they were starving, she said, so she decided to take them home and feed them.

The pups, which she said are unweaned, appear to be part German Shepherd.

"They're not going to be too big because their feet are pretty small," Richardson said. Anyone interested in a free puppy can call Pansy Richardson "anytime" at 848-2589.

Construction picks up

The city received $3,106.20 in building, electrical and plumbing permit fees in August, bringing the year's total so far to $6,528.45.

The August figure compares quite favorably with a July total of $1,758.25 in fees, and is a good indication that residential construction in Pampa is picking up again after a slump during the first half of this year.

City officials made 181 building, electrical, plumbing and miscellaneous inspections in August, an average of six per day, in comparison with 139 inspections in July, an average of 4.6 per day.

A total of 462 inspections have been made during the year to date, an average of five per day.

Martin fund started

Friends wishing to contribute to a fund in memory of the late Michael Ray Martin may do so by contacting Glenda Anderson at First National Bank, 100 N. Cuyler.

Martin died Monday at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo of injuries received the night of Aug. 28. He was found unconscious the next day in the basement of Jay's Lounge in Pampa by a lounge employee. Police are investigating his death.

Martin was born at San Angelo and was a Pampa resident for seven years before moving to Michigan in 1972. He moved back to Pampa with his parents in 1975 and graduated from Pampa High School in 1976.

Fenwick was driving a mud truck which reportedly crossed the center line, colliding head on with a pickup driven by Kritzer.

Kritzer was killed instantly, and Fenwick and two passengers in the mud truck sustained minor injuries.

Court news

A 24-year-old Indiana woman was sentenced to two years in the Texas Department of Corrections after being found guilty of theft by two checks, totalling $210 Wednesday in 223rd District Court.

Noami Ruth Job of Muscatine, Ind. was convicted of passing worthless checks to Gibson's Discount Store on July 10 and 20 of this year.

In a second case in 223rd District Court, repeat offender Clinton Hunter, 43, of Leigh, Okla. was sentenced to seven years in the Texas Department of Corrections after being found guilty of burglary of an automobile.

Hunter was charged in connection with the theft of a shot gun, rifle and pistol from the car of a Canadian man while it was parked at the Catalina Club on Barnes Street January 7.

Plane crash kills Montana couple

GARDEN CITY, Kan. — A Montana rancher and his wife, both formerly of Canadian, were killed yesterday afternoon when their single-engine plane crashed and burned four miles northeast of Garden City.

Frank Mathers and his wife, the former Betty Rathjen, died after he tried to land their Cessna Citation on a county road and the plane struck a small structure housing a natural gas meter. It continued a short distance before plowing into a county road embankment, where it burned.

Family members in Canadian last night confirmed identification of the couple, both believed to be in their mid-50s.

The pilot, flying at about 7,700 feet, reported fire in the cockpit about 12:38 p.m., according to Joseph Frets, regional public affairs officer of the Federal Aviation Administration. The accident occurred at 12:45 p.m.

The Mathers, who lived in Miles City, Mont., were on their way to Canadian, where they planned to visit relatives before going to Lubbock to watch Mrs. Mathers' nephew, Ron Reeves, quarterback the Red Raiders in Texas Tech's season opener against the University of Southern California.

Both Frank and Betty Mathers were born and reared in Canadian. The son of Mr. and Mrs. G.B. Mathers, Canadian ranchers, he was the first president of the Canadian chapter of the National Honor Society in 1942, his senior year of high school.

Mrs. Mathers was the daughter of Harry Rathjen of Canadian, and the late Mrs. Rathjen. Rathjen is a former Hemphill County sheriff and former Canadian postmaster.

The couple is survived by three daughters, all of Montana.

Other survivors of Mr. Mathers include his parents, two brothers, Ben, a Canadian rancher, and Bill, a Montana state senator, of Miles City.

Besides her father, Mrs. Mathers is survived by a sister, Mrs. Anne Griffin of Lubbock, and two brothers, Fred Rathjen of Lubbock and David Rathjen of Midland.

A memorial service will be conducted in Miles City, but the time has not been set, according to family members.

Coastal residents mad at Mexico

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, TEXAS (AP) — The shops and businesses in this tourist-dependent town used to consider Mexico a friendly neighbor whose wealthier citizens helped support the local economy.

That was until a runaway Mexican oil well dumped messy brown crude on South Texas beaches and chased away perhaps millions of dollars in summer revenues.

About 250 frustrated merchants and taxpayers turned out Wednesday to discuss how to recover those losses. Some leaned toward suing the Mexican national oil monopoly, Pemex, which operated the faulty well.

Others proposed special travel packages with the airlines to attract business during the usual lean period until Christmas.

"We're giving aid to Mexico, aren't we?" asked one voice in the crowd. "Why don't we just subtract that from the losses here?"

That would be one way to get it back."

Texas Attorney General Mark White sent a representative who could give few definite answers on if the state will sue Mexico or Pemex as a last resort. Even if the state files for damages, private businesses might not be covered under a future court award, said Assistant Attorney General Jim Marston.

It would be difficult to force Mexico to pay damages from a U.S. court judgment, conceded Marston.

The town residents shared more problems than solutions at the public hearing of the South Padre Island board of aldermen.

Many are upset that the Small Business Administration is limiting its oil spill disaster loans to $100,000 at 7 1/2 percent interest.

"I don't think borrowing is the ultimate answer," said Bill Heinz, a businessman in Port Isabel across the causeway. "When you add a debt load to a debt load, you can't build a business and survive."

South Padre Island Mayor Glen McGehee agreed.

"I think everyone here knows that we could be faced with a much more serious problem," he said of the possibility of oil washing ashore for several months.

Beaches here are relatively clean. But Mexican crude continues flowing from a Bay of Campeche well and workers say it will be another week or more before they can shut it down. Oil already in the Gulf of Mexico poses a threat to the coast for several months, scientists have predicted.

McGehee said he was disappointed at response to his request for aid from state and federal officials.

The governor had asked the SBA to charge only 3 percent interest on the disaster relief loans.

Egyptian president heading for home

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — President Anwar Sadat returns to Egypt today after a brief summit meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin that maintained the momentum of the peace process and produced agreement on three issues.

However, no progress was reported on the key problem of autonomy for the Palestinians living under Israeli occupation, and Sadat and Begin also were still split on the emotional issue of Jerusalem's future.

The summit, scheduled for only 49 hours and including only about three hours of face-to-face talks between the two leaders, was filled with warmth and expressions of optimism but news conference about the chances of Jordan and other Arab states joining the peace process.

He said he expected them to join "by the end of this year, Inshallah (God willing)."

He also expressed optimism that the autonomy talks would achieve results despite the current slow pace and the lack of agreement on the future of Jerusalem.

"We need more time, more careful study for the whole thing," Sadat said of the Jerusalem problem.

Egypt contends Jerusalem's 100,000 Arabs should be part of the autonomous Palestinian area, with voting rights to elect a self-governing council. Israel, which annexed predominantly-Arab East Jerusalem after capturing it in the 1967 war, says the city will not be divided again.

But Begin told the news conference: "Jerusalem is the capital of Israel. It is indivisible."

Although the two leaders discussed autonomy for the 1.2 million Palestinians in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, Sadat said: "We don't work on details. Our ministers are working on the details of elections and so on, but we discussed principles rather than details."

Test of wills taking place between borrowers, lenders

NEW YORK (AP) — A remarkable test of wills, like that in a poker game, is taking place between lenders and borrowers. So far, neither one is revealing many signs of weakness, even though the stress has been building relentlessly. Lenders keep raising their rates. Borrowers keep paying the rates and asking for more. Aren't higher interest rates supposed to discourage borrowing? That's what the books say, but it hasn't been working out that way. And that in itself is discouraging more than a few economists.

In fact, as borrowing continues you can hear the critics grouching that the Federal Reserve has it all wrong — that people and companies are borrowing because they have to, not because they want to.

There's a difference, they say. If borrowing were a matter of choice, they say, then raising interest rates might indeed discourage such choices. When it's needed people will borrow at any rate.

And if that is so, they continue, high interest rates merely add to the cost of manufacturers, distributors, retailers, consumers and others, becoming in effect an inflationary factor themselves.

They add that so long as the country has 13 percent inflation the Federal Reserve's 10.5 percent discount rate and the banks' 12.25 percent prime lending rate are poor deterrents to borrowing.

In fact, this school of thought observes, it can even pay to borrow. In many instances, 13 percent inflation effectively cancels out borrowing costs. But those "costs" still are tax-deductible.

The issue is indeed a confusing one, and even today, 50 years after the beginning of the Great Depression, "experts" still argue about whether the correct monetary policy was pursued during the 1930s.

The traditional view is that loose money encourages economic activity and that tight money restricts it. But, as some economists say, these are not traditional times.

The ingredient not fully understood, they assert, is the brand of inflation. Some maintain we shouldn't even use the inflation label to describe some of today's rising prices. It's misleading, they say.

Gold soars amid heavy Arab buying

LONDON (AP) — Gold soared more than $11 to a record $341.50 an ounce in Zurich today amid signs of heavy Arab buying. The dollar dropped, depressed by gold's burgeoning value.

The massive overnight leap was one of the biggest single jumps in gold's year-old climb. The closing figure in Zurich Wednesday was $329.875 an ounce — the previous high.

In London, gold opened at $337.625, up $9.75 from Wednesday's close.

The British pound strengthened and was pegged in morning trading at $2.2490. It cost $2.2429 to buy a pound Wednesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 220.715 yen, down from 221.725 Wednesday.

Dollar quotes elsewhere, compared to Wednesday:

Paris — 4.2310 French francs, down from 4.2465

Frankfurt — 1.8140 Marks, down from 1.8203

Zurich — 1.6426 Swiss francs, down from 1.6531

Milan — 812.60 lire, down from 815.05

Amsterdam — 1.9925 guilders, down from 1.9995

Dealers reported indications of heavy Arab buying in what appeared to be a distinct move away from the troubled dollar.

Arab oil producers hold vast amounts of dollars, the currency used in oil deals.

TEXAS

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham said Wednesday securities registered for public sale in Texas in the last fiscal year totalled over $4.5 billion — almost $2 billion more than the previous high year.

State Securities Board figures show that issues of stocks, bonds and other securities regulated by the Texas Securities Act added up to $4,689,499,616 in the fiscal year that ended last month.

The previous high year was fiscal 1978 when stocks, bonds and securities totalling $2,753,577,297 were handled by the board.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Civil Defense officials are considering the purchase of 40 airboats to be used as rescue vehicles during floods.

John Caswell, assistant civil defense director, said the airboats would cost about $240,000.

Mayor Jim McConn said, "When boats have been needed for evacuation or rescue during floods like we had earlier in the summer we have always gotten what was needed from citizens. I think now is the time for the city to have its own boats."

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Richard T. Eastwood will retire soon as the chief executive officer of the Texas Medical Center in Houston.

Eastwood, 66, said Wednesday he will remain on the job until a replacement is hired.

Eastwood has headed the medical center for the past 17 years.

HOUSTON (AP) — And the bloody death count in Houston, the nation's fifth largest city, continues.

Five pesos were murdered Tuesday night. That put the homicide total for the year at 437.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Six regional meetings will be held next week over the state to inform truckers and shippers of the action the state plans to take against overweight trucks, the attorney general said Wednesday.

On Monday, Sept. 10, there will be a 2 p.m. session at the South Texas College of Law, Houston, and a 7 p.m. meeting in the Dallas City Council Chamber.

Tuesday, the hearings will be at 1 p.m., George Mahon Library, Lubbock, and 7 p.m., Midland College.

On Wednesday, there will be a 2 p.m. meeting in the Frost National Bank, San Antonio, and 7 p.m. at Baylor Law School, Waco.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A county sheriff has no duty to place a person in the county jail when the person was arrested for violating only a municipal ordinance, the attorney general said Wednesday.

The opinion was asked by Harris County Attorney Joe Resweber.

*Level refers to version of BASIC language: Level I is a beginner's language, while Level II is very advanced. Level and memory can be expanded. All systems include 232-page users manual and game cassette.

Two years ago, Radio Shack introduced the TRS-80: The wired, tested, UL listed and ready-to-run microcomputer that more people have bought than any other single computer in history. TRS-80 is like a big computer, but it stores less data and runs at a lower speed. It has proven ideal for uses in school, business, lab and home, where a large computer is impractical.

Thousands with no computer experience — just like you — have discovered computers with a Level I system. Many are using our dozens of ready-to-run cassette programs, while others have learned to program TRS-80 themselves. Level I's manual makes programming easy and fun to learn. Then you can convert to the powerful Level II language for more advanced capabilities.

Your system will include everything pictured — everything you need — plus the manual. And it's waiting now, less expensive than ever, at your nearest Radio Shack store or participating dealer.

Meet TRS-80's Big Brother!

The New TRS-80 Model II

We've added a bigger, more powerful "brother" to the TRS-80 family. It's TRS-80 Model II — a completely new microcomputer for business applications. Its capabilities begin where TRS-80 Model I approaches its upper limits. Storage capacity from 1/2 megabyte to 2 megabytes!

Tanner shocks U.S. Open with upset of Borg

NEW YORK (AP) — The setting couldn't have been more dramatic.

Lightning flashed in the distance. Jets flew through the fog overhead with booming regularity. Raindrops fell intermittently and a near-capacity National Tennis Center crowd roared with each shot. And lurking just a few miles away was a tropical storm.

It was Roscoe Tanner's rockets, those serves that can travel at better than 150 mph. It was Bjorn Borg's Swedish thunderbolts, at times traveling faster than Tanner's cannonballs.

And it was so much more, for this was the new Tanner, the model that covers the court like a rain squall, volleys with precision and constantly applies pressure.

At the end, when Borg's backhand service return was wide, the fifth-seeded Tanner clenched his fists skyward. Hurricane Roscoe had struck Flushing Meadow.

Tanner, who lost a thrilling five-set final to Borg at Wimbledon, won perhaps the biggest match of his career Wednesday in the U.S. Open His 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 7-6 quarterfinal victory was accomplished with the aid of 11 aces, 17 service winners and Tanner's unflinching confidence.

Tanner appeared anything but lucky when, serving at 5-3 in the fourth set and after slamming his 11th ace of the match to save a break point, one of his serves hit the net and the net collapsed. A seven-minute delay followed while a new net was put in place.

When play resumed, Tanner immediately hit a service winner for his first match point. After a long rally, Borg hit a short lob and Tanner extended heavenward for the overhead smash that would win the match, but he mistimed it and it soared into the first row of seats.

Tanner got another match point when Borg hit a backhand out but he hit a forehand into the net for deuce and Borg passed him twice to draw to 4-5.

Borg then held serve, his seventh ace securing the 5-5 tie.

Both held serve again to head into the tiebreaker. Borg made four clear errors in the tiebreaker, which Tanner won 7-2.

Tanner next meets the winner of tonight's Vitas Gerulaitis - Johan Kriek quarterfinal.

Jimmy Connors still is thinking about defending his title here after an easy 6-2, 6-1, 6-1 victory over a tired Pat DuPre. DuPre, who felt he had been done an injustice by having to play again Wednesday after suffering severe leg cramps following a five-set victory over Harold Solomon Tuesday, clearly was fatigued. He held serve just three times in 11 games.

Connors' semifinal opponent will be the winner of today's John McEnroe-Eddie Dibbs match.

Two women reached the semifinals Wednesday, top seed Chris Evert and No. 9 Billie Jean King. They'll play in a semifinal after Evert topped No. 5 Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia 7-5, 6-2, and King defeated longtime rival Virginia Wade of Britain, the No. 4 seed, 6-3, 7-6.

Second seed Martina Navratilova has a quarterfinal encounter with No. 8 Kerry Reid of Australia tonight while Tracy Austin, the third seed, played unranked West German Sylvia Hanika.

BILLIE JEAN KING hits a backhand return to long-time rival Virginia Wade during U.S. Open tennis action Wednesday. King won the match.

6-3, 7-6 and will now meet Chris Evert Lloyd in the next round of play.

Writer favors USC, Alabama in debuts

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"Who's No. 1?"

"We're No. 1."

It's a question — and response — that inspires passion among college football buffs. They start spouting it with a hoist of index finger the first week in September and don't lower it until the final tabulations after the bowl games.

Even then, controversy continues to sizzle. The "Big Two" in the pre-season poll make their debut Saturday against reputable — but not awesome opponents — and you can expect talent-loaded Southern Cal and defending titleholder Alabama to escape unmarked.

Southern California 33, Texas Tech 10. It should be a romp unless Charles White (1,760 yards and 13 TDs in 1978) takes a trip to China.

Alabama 24, Georgia Tech 14. A bitter rivalry that once had to be suspended out of fear of violence. Wishbone lightning.

Purdue 31, Wisconsin 7. A new look in the Big Ten, thanks to a 6-5 quarterback named Mark Herrmann and a slew of slick receivers.

Michigan 49, Northwestern 6. The Wolverines' problem will be trying to keep the score respectable without making it too obvious.

Stanford 28, Tulane 7. On one condition — that new coach Rod Dowhower can keep his young stags off Bourbon Street.

Florida State 33, Southern Mississippi 6. The Seminoles were all dressed up (8-1 last year and nowhere to go. They're bowl hungry).

Michigan State 46, Illinois 13. On probation last year, the Spartans could play it loose. Now they have to bite the bullet.

North Carolina State 20, East Carolina 14. The Wolfpack may be the best in their league, but Pat Dye can be hard on the molar.

Washington 30, Wyoming 10. Joe Steele, Tippecanoe and Tyler, too (Toussaint Tyler, that is — he runs over and around you).

Texas A&M 23, Brigham Young 7. This is one the Aggies will have to win with their shoes on. Barefoot kicker Ron Franklin is now a pro.

King wants another win

NEW YORK (AP) — Just 10 years ago she was viewed the world over as a revolutionary — fondly by some, with mistrust and disdain by others.

But time has mellowed the public's perception of Billie Jean King. Now she's the Old Lady. Now she's the valiant woman who scrapped and screamed to put women's tennis on a comparable footing with the men's game.

"People have caught up with women's tennis," she says. "People who used to think I was a radical think I'm part of the establishment now."

And time has battered the knees of Billie Jean King, slowed her down physically and let others become champions in her place.

"I'm tired of losing," she says in this year when she has made another comeback from surgery. It's been three knee operations now, and most recently surgery on her heel.

"I know I'm going to have to pay the price to keep going," she says. "If you ask me now I'd say 'Yes, I'm willing to pay.' I want to win another major championship — Wimbledon of the U.S. Open."

U.S. wins 3 golds in World University Games

MEXICO CITY (AP) — American swimmers enjoyed their finest night of the 10th World University Games, briefly tied the Russians for the overall lead and were congratulating themselves on winning three of four finals.

Those three golds, of course, represented the Americans heaviest harvest yet in these multi-sport games for college-age athletes.

But the total fell short of the one-man accumulation by a 19-year-old Russian, Bogdan Makouts.

The physical education major at a Ukrainian university won four gold medals and a bronze in the six late-night men's gymnastics events. Earlier, he'd won the men's all-around title, giving him a horde of five golds and a bronze, although the Games have more than a week to run, stamping him as the likely candidate for outstanding athlete honors.

Makouts won the parallel and horizontal bars, vaulting and side horse and took the bronze in floor exercises.

Serguoi Khjniakov took the other two golds, in floor exercises and rings, giving the Russians a sweep of the six golds, though two of the first place awards were shared, Makouts with Kiory Yamawaki of Japan in vaulting and Khjniakov with Alexandre Cheiches of Rumania in rings.

That gave the defending champion Russians a total of 13 gold medals and 28 overall.

The United States, which sent a full delegation to these games for only the second time and had some hopes of breaking the Russian dominance, was a distant second with seven gold and 18 total. Rumania was next in the 88-nation competition with a gold-total count of 3-9, followed by Hungary at 2-5.

The Americans have been almost as dominant in swimming — despite the lack of many of their best performers — as the Russians have in gymnastics and Coach Jim Montrella expects more of the same.

"It was a good night," he said after the victories by Mike Bottom, Ron Neugent and Corrina Weinkofsky. "We have a great opportunity to do well from here on out."

Four more swimming and diving finals are scheduled tonight, but so are four more gymnastics, the Russian stronghold.

The American men's and women's basketball teams both won. The men destroyed Sudan by the unlikely score of 173-14, marking the third consecutive game they'd won by more than 100 points. That finished the preliminary action and sent them into the final field of eight.

Cougars need no reminder of '78 season opener

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman observed recently that as one gets older, it takes longer to forget a loss.

The veteran UH coach was talking about last January's last-second loss to Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl, but the theory also applies to the 1978 season opener against Memphis State.

The Cougars, who recovered from a 17-3 embarrassment against Memphis State in the season opener last year to win the Southwest Conference title, start the 1979 campaign Saturday in Los Angeles against the UCLA Bruins.

But Memphis State is still on the Cougars' minds.

"The kids are ready to play, they'd better be, but I don't feel we've jelled yet," Yeoman said. "We don't want to go through anything like Memphis State again this year."

"I hope we'll be able to look on the backside of two or three games and say we're a pretty good football team."

Yeoman keeps reminding the Cougars that "99 per cent of the game is played in the head," but it may not be necessary.

"You don't have to remind me," said offensive guard Dennis Greenawalt. "I still have nightmares about that team."

Yeoman expects Bruin quarterback Rick Bashore to test Houston's defensive secondary early in the game. The Cougar secondary was burned often last season, finishing last in the SWC in pass defense.

"I'm sure we're going to have to stop the pass before we stop the run," Yeoman said. "Rightly or wrongly, we feel we may be able to do well against the run. We've shored up in the secondary too and I think we'll do a better job of pass defense."

Houston will have basically the same personnel in the defensive backfield as last year, but they'll be better, Yeoman said.

"We've worked hard in the defensive secondary and our people are much better, concentration-wise, than we were a year ago," Yeoman said.

Yeoman will start Terald Clark and John

Newhouse at the running back positions but they'll get plenty of relief, from David Barrett, Allen Polk and Lonell Phea. Delrick Brown will be the quarterback.

"I've been encouraged with Delrick's performance in the last two scrimmages," Yeoman said. "Our throwing won't scare anybody at the start of the season but as time goes on we'll be a lot better."

The Bruins are coming off an 8-3-1 season, including a 10-10 tie against Arkansas in the Fiesta Bowl.

Houston defeated UCLA 17-13 in the Astrodome in 1977 in the only other meeting between the two teams. In that game, Bashore made his first start at quarterback and completed 16 of 27 passes for 245 yards and one touchdown.

PAMPA DOLPHIN SWIM CLUB

Small crowds greet Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros are in the middle of their first real pennant race in 10 years, but a casual observer wouldn't be able to tell by looking at the recent attendance.

The sixth smallest crowd of the season, just 12,592 loyalists, watched Houston take a 4-3, 10th-inning victory over San Diego Wednesday when loser John D'Acquisto served up a two-out, bases-loaded walk to Enos Cabell.

The Astros have drawn more than 1.65 million to the Astrodome this season, but only 103,447 saw the six games in this home stand, an average of just 17,241.

The poor attendance perturbs the management and angers some players, but other Astros say the lack of fans doesn't concern them.

"I don't care if the fans come or not," said third-baseman Enos Cabell. "All I'm worried about is winning."

All-Star relief pitcher Joe Sambito said he couldn't understand why Houstonians wouldn't come to see the Astros play even when they were facing a non-contender like San Diego.

"They should be coming to see us, not the team we're playing," he said.

Houston general manager Tal Smith said he was surprised and disappointed by the lack of support in the final stretch.

"I'm sure it's disappointing to the players," he said. "The interest and enthusiasm has waned and it should be building. This should be a fever pitch, the countdown."

Those fans that stayed for the finish of Wednesday night's 3-hour, 36-minute marathon saw the Astros hang onto their slim, 1/2-game lead over second-place Cincinnati in the National League West with the win.

But both teams threw away several scoring chances during the game, with Houston leaving 17 men on base and San Diego stranding 11.

The Padres scored single runs in the third and fourth innings, including Gene Tenace's 15th homerun of the season, but their 2-0 lead quickly evaporated under a 3-run Houston onslaught in the bottom of the fourth keyed by Jose Cruz' RBI triple.

San Diego tied things up in the eighth inning when catcher Bill Fahey, who had five hits on the night, singled home Paul Dade.

The Padres threatened to end it in the 10th when Dave Winfield singled and moved to third on a two-out base hit by Fahey. But pinch-hitter Joe Wilhelm flied out to end the inning.

The Astros sent pitcher Joe Sambito to the plate in the bottom of the 10th, and he promptly drew a walk, then moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Cesar Cedeno.

Craig Reynolds flied to right, but Terry Puhl was walked intentionally and Jeff Leonard ran the count to 3-and-2 before taking the fourth ball to load the bases for Cabell, who then watched D'Acquisto throw four straight balls.

SF fires Altobelli

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Altobelli, last year's National League manager of the year, was fired early this morning as the manager of the disappointing San Francisco Giants by owner Bob Lurie, who said he "felt the club should have been a contender."

Veteran manager Dave Bristol, who was the team's third base coach, was named interim manager by Lurie and San Francisco General Manager Spec Richardson.

"There's not any one thing that brought it to a head," said Lurie, who told Altobelli he was being relieved in his hotel suite hours after the Giants lost to the Cincinnati Reds, 6-5, on Wednesday.

"I thought if we didn't win it (the National League West), we'd be close. We're disappointed. Things just kept getting worse," Lurie said.

San Francisco, picked as one of the favorites in the West this year, is in fourth place with a 61-79 record, 18 1/2 games behind first-place Houston.

The Giants have been beset with poor pitching and injuries; only two players — first baseman Mike Ivie and third baseman Darrell Evans — who started opening day were healthy enough to start Wednesday.

The team was 4-17 in the last three weeks and 16-32 since the All-Star break.

Lately the team had been troubled with dissension. Pitcher Vida Blue, 10-13 with a 5.18 earned run average, made threats against writers for being critical of the team's performance. And John Montefusco, a disappointing 3-7 on the mound, threatened to quit the team after being fined for drinking on the team plane.

Preston believes in intangibles

DENVER (AP) — Dave Preston isn't one to flaunt his ability as a football player.

"Honestly, I'm too slow and I'm too short," says the Denver Bronco running back. "I'm not big enough to run inside, or fast enough to run outside."

"I'm no Earl Campbell — I won't break six or seven tackles on a play. I'm not strong enough to block the blitzing linebacker. And I won't win any foot races either. All those things that make the ideal running back, I'm not."

With Rob Lytle still not 100 percent because of a knee injury and Otis Armstrong ailing with a bruised sternum, the 5-foot-11, 198-pound Preston is the Broncos' only healthy halfback as they entertain the Los Angeles Rams tonight in a nationally televised game — the first of three special Thursday night games this season.

"I'm very surprised to be starting this early in the year. Since my goal was just to make the team again," said Preston, who was the third-to-last player drafted in 1977 and who "got caught in the numbers game" at New England before signing with Denver as a free agent in 1978.

National Football League computers, which measure an athlete's vital statistics and rate him accordingly, probably wouldn't even acknowledge Preston's existence.

"But the computer doesn't read the amount of heart, intelligence, will to win or guts a person has," Preston says. "Those intangibles are what makes the difference between a guy who can play and one who can't. I've had to adapt, to make the most of my ability."

Preston has adapted so well that he's earned a starting spot at running back for the Broncos, and after one game he's the team's leading rusher with 70 yards on 10 carries.

An I-back in college at Bowling Green, Preston had little experience in blocking or catching the ball. But he has labored on both aspects of the game, and last year he led Denver's running backs in receptions with 24 catches for 199 yards. In a 10-0 victory over Cincinnati last Sunday, Preston caught a 6-yard pass from Norris Weese for the game's only touchdown.

Los Angeles comes into tonight's game smarting from a 24-17 loss to Oakland last week. The Rams suffered two blocked punts, a fumbled punt return and three interceptions in an uncharacteristic performance.

"The Rams are a super team," says Preston. "They had the top defense in the NFL last year, and a lot of that was due to their explosive offense. I suspect they'll really be fired up for this game. They don't have a tradition of losing."

Los Angeles quarterback Pat Haden completed 21 of 41 passes for 229 yards and a touchdown against the Raiders. Lawrence McCutcheon, showing signs of recovery from an injury-plagued 1978 season, rushed for 65 yards on 15 carries.

DAVE PRESTON, running back for Denver, has earned a starting berth in the Bronco backfield, but to hear him tell it, talent has nothing to do with it. He is the leading rusher for the team after one game with 70 yards. (AP Laser photo)

ABC opens 14th year of college football

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

OK, students. Time for our weekly television quiz. Who will be doing college football this year?

(a) ABC. (b) ESPN. (c) Chris Schenkel. (d) Woody Hayes.

If you answered the first two, you deserve a varsity letter.

ABC, the network with the roving eye for top-rated cheerleaders, will be doing the NCAA's glamour games for the 14th straight season. ABC gets first crack at the major college games and will be doing 13 national broadcasts and 45 regional telecasts live on Saturday.

ESPN (the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network) has a hand in the college game for the first time. ESPN will get ABC's leftovers and will be doing those games at odd hours throughout the rest of the weekend. ESPN, a distributor of sports events for cable TV, plans to have 24 hours of sports by Jan. 1, 1980, reaching a potential audience of five million homes.

This weekend, for example, ESPN plans taped broadcasts of four college games, including Chuck Fairbanks and Colorado against Oregon at 1:30 a.m. EDT and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Schenkel, a fixture on ABC's college football telecasts since 1966, has been dropped from the squad. He will be sharing the College Football Scoreboard assignment with Dave Diles, and he's not at all happy about the demotion. But the move was inevitable.

Schenkel is from the "gee-whizz" school of journalism, and the broadcasting game seemed to have passed him by. While today's best announcers can honestly critique a bad performance, Schenkel was much more at home calling every player a credit to his school, family and country and commenting on the caliber of ABC's "honey" (cheerleader) shots.

Woody Hayes, longtime coach at Ohio State, won't be on the college scene either. The irascible Hayes was fired last Dec. 29 for punching Clemson player Charlie Bauman, who had had the audacity to intercept an Ohio State pass late in the Gator Bowl game.

That infamous interception and punch in Jacksonville, Fla., caused numerous problems for ABC's main play-by-play announcer, Keith Jackson. He was bombarded with charges of covering up the incident because he never mentioned it on the air.

Jackson, who says he never did get along with Hayes, explained that the crowd of players, coaches and hangers-on cluttering the Ohio State sideline obscured his view of the punch. He never saw it on the field and couldn't see it on replay on his monitor, either.

Jackson will have his live feed Saturday in Atlanta when Alabama meets Georgia Tech on national TV in ABC's season opener. Former Notre Dame Coach Ara Parseghian will handle the commentary.

ABC's 4-year, $118-million contract with the NCAA is broken down into two 2-year periods. No team can have more than five regular season appearances in either two-year period. Last season, the first year of the contract, ABC went wild and put most of the major schools on three times. Among the top schools, only Oklahoma, Arkansas, Michigan, Ohio State and Purdue have three appearances left.

Foot Notes

By RANDY LIGHTFOOT
News Sports Editor

There are two things which are inevitable when the fall football season finally gets underway. One is the office football pool and the other is "expert" predictions on the outcome of the weekend games.

Both can usually be counted on about as much as a calm day in Lubbock during April.

Nevertheless, I am not one to break with tradition, so here is my version of what will probably be happening this weekend in the gridiron wars:

Hereford at Pampa. Neither the Harvesters in 3-AAAA nor the Whitefaces in 4-AAAA have been given much of a chance to produce this season in most preseason polls. Hereford should be a better team than most people think but their district is so tough they may still end up near the cellar. Pampa has been looking better all the time and after the way they manhandled Canyon in last Friday's scrimmage must be considered the favorite. Pampa by 5.

White Deer at Vega. Trying to reverse a trend that has seen them go 1-19 over the past two seasons is hard enough and doing it on the road against a perennial football powerhouse makes it even tougher. That's exactly what White Deer is up against, however, and unfortunately the score may show it. Give the Bucks some points for desire, though. Vega by 14.

Wheeler at Shamrock. A state title and a runner-up spot in two years says it all. You go with the winner until they lose. Wheeler by 27.

Phillips at Canadian. There's some big folks in the city by the river just waiting to embarrass the preseason prognosticators. Canadian by 11.

Perryton at Miami. Perryton will not have their regular starters in this Thursday night game and the Miami backfield should cover a few acres. Miami by 14.

Groom at Claude. Both teams are painfully thin in the ranks, but have some quality people back from last year. Claude has the home field advantage, but Groom wants it the most. Groom by 1.

In the first full weekend of college games look for North Texas over Oklahoma State, Georgia Tech over Alabama in the upset of the week and Houston over UCLA. SMU will begin flexing its new running muscle early in a romp over Rice. West Texas State will prove last week's victory was no fluke with a tight win over UT - Arlington and Texas A&M will probably humiliate Brigham Young.

In the feature game of the week, James Hadnot will stage a tremendous rushing duel with Charles White as his Texas Tech Red Raiders start off by hosting the top ranked team in the nation, USC. Hadnot will take the rushing title for the game, by USC will keep him out of the end zone more times than not. USC by 18.

It is only the second week of the regular NFL season, but there are already some key games on tap. Foremost among these is Pittsburgh and Houston. The "Earlars" will take it in a mild upset. In the NFC Central, Minnesota will attempt to hang on to divisional supremacy, but Chicago will prove to be an inhospitable host.

Naturally, Dallas should handle San Francisco in their usual fashion and Oakland will roll over San Diego.

Keough snaps long lasting loss skein

By the Associated Press

This may be September, but as far as Oakland pitcher Matt Keough is concerned, it's the start of a new baseball season.

"The way I look at it, I'm 1-and-0," said the tough-luck pitcher after finally gaining that hard-to-catch first victory of 1979.

Actually, Keough is 1-14 after Wednesday night's 6-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers, but you can pardon his lopsided view. The triumph allowed him to escape the dubious distinction of tying the American League record for most consecutive losses over two seasons. He had 18 before he beat the Brewers.

He had already tied the record for the worst season start by a major league pitcher with 14.

"They're all behind me now," said a euphoric Keough, celebrating the occasion with champagne.

"I never gave up," added Keough, who played in last year's All-Star Game before going sour. "If I did, I wouldn't have been able to look myself in the mirror."

The A's backed Keough with a 12-hit attack in snapping an eight-game winning streak by Milwaukee pitcher Mike Caldwell. 14-6. Dwayne Murphy drove in four runs with a third-inning single and a three-run homer in the sixth.

California 9, Chicago 8

Merv Rettenmund's two-out single in the seventh inning drove in two runs and rallied California over Chicago. With two out in the seventh, Angels catcher Brian Downing beat out a single and Bobby Grich walked. Larry Harlow then bounced a ball behind second base. Downing scoring from second while Grich and Harlow moved up a base on second baseman Tim Morrison's wild throw home.

Guy Hoffman was then called in from the bullpen to replace Randy Scarbery, 2-8, and after walking Rick Miller, gave up the single to Rettenmund.

Twins 8, Royals 3

Ron Jackson drove in three runs with a triple and a single to pace Minnesota over Kansas City. Jackson tripled in the first inning to score Bob Randall from second base and put the Twins ahead 1-0. Jackson's single in the sixth knocked in two more runs.

Winner Dave Goltz, 13-10, scattered 10 hits.

Red Sox 5, Yankees 0

Butch Hobson knocked in three runs with a triple and a homer and Bob Stanley scattered seven hits as Boston broke a four-game losing streak by beating New York. Stanley, 14-9, recorded his third shutout and eighth complete game this season.

Boston reached Yankees starter Tommy John, 18-7, in the second inning for two runs on five hits, including Hobson's RBI triple. The Boston third baseman later hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

Tigers 9, Indians 3

Ron LeFlore's ninth-inning triple broke a 3-3 tie and ignited a six-run rally that carried Detroit over Cleveland.

Loser Victor Cruz, 3-9, walked Alan Trammell leading off the ninth. LeFlore followed with a line drive that bounced past charging Bobby Bonds in right for a three-base hit. Pinch-hitter Al Greene walked and Steve Kemp followed with an RBI single.

Aurelio Lopez, 8-4, got the victory with three innings of shutout relief.

Pirates 7, Cards 5

Darold Knowles, who had come on in the 11th inning for St. Louis with the bases loaded to face John Milner, tried instead to pick Bill Robinson off first base. He hit him instead, the ball bounded away and two runners bounded across home plate, giving the Pirates a victory over the Cardinals that kept them two games ahead of Montreal in the National League East.

It was the second time this year that a bad pickoff throw by Knowles has cost St. Louis a game. It also happened June 8 against San Diego.

Reds 6, Giants 5

In Cincinnati, homers by George Foster and

Ray Knight and Dan Driessen's decisive RBI-double in the seventh inning helped Fred Norman of the Reds beat San Francisco for his 100th major league triumph. Lurie then made his decision and gave Altobelli his walking papers. In 1978 Altobelli was the NL Manager of the Year — but the Giants, 80-60 and just four games out of first place a year ago at this time, are 61-79 and 18½ games off the pace now.

The job was handed to third base coach Dave Bristol, who has managed for nine seasons in the majors with Cincinnati (1966-69), Milwaukee (1970-72) and Atlanta (1976-77).

Expos 4, Cubs 3

"People are saying we've got a young team and that the pressure might make us crack," Montreal Manager Dick Williams said after the Expos stayed within two games of Pittsburgh by chalking up their ninth straight victory. Tommy Hutton's two-out single in the ninth inning drove in Dave Cash from second base to snap a 3-3 tie and hand the Cubs their sixth straight loss.

Dodgers 5, Braves 3

Atlanta's Gene Garber, who set a major league record for relievers by losing his 15th game of the season last Monday night, lost No. 16 this time when Von Joshua singled to open the Dodgers' 10th, took second on a grounder and scored on Steve Garvey's two-out single.

Garvey also had an RBI double in the eighth. The Braves scored all their runs in the eighth, two on Mike Lum's pinch-homer.

Jenkins ties club mark by giving up nine walks

SEATTLE (AP) — While Seattle pitcher Rob Dressler was improving his control, Fergie Jenkins of the Texas Rangers was losing his.

The result in Wednesday night's American League pitching duel was a 1-0 victory for Seattle as Willie Horton singled home Julio Cruz, who had walked and stolen second, with two out in the first inning.

Dressler, 1-2, and Jenkins, 13-12, each gave up only three hits, but Dressler gave up only two walks before departing in the eighth inning while Jenkins issued nine walks to tie a club record.

"That's the neatest nine walks I've ever seen. He never threw a ball above the batter's waist," Dressler said.

"I've really cut down on my walks," the Seattle right-hander said. "The times I got behind on the hitters, I came back."

It was Horton's 93rd RBI of the season and Cruz's 40th stolen base. Texas Manager Pat Corrales was ejected by second-base umpire Jerry Neudecker after Seattle's Joe Simpson stole second on a pitch-out in the second inning. Soon afterwards, Jenkins picked Simpson off second.

Jenkins said his problem was "just bad control, that's all."

His young catcher, Greg Mahburg, said Jenkins "has just had a problem with that last couple of starts, plus the new catcher. He didn't really miss that badly."

The shutout snapped the Rangers' four-game winning streak and the Mariners' three-game losing streak.

"I hated to think about going the whole season without a win," Dressler said. "I just want to get another one as soon as I can."

With the Rangers hitting the ball on the ground most of the night, "Julio (Cruz) had a great game at second and Mario (Mendoza) did too at short," he added.

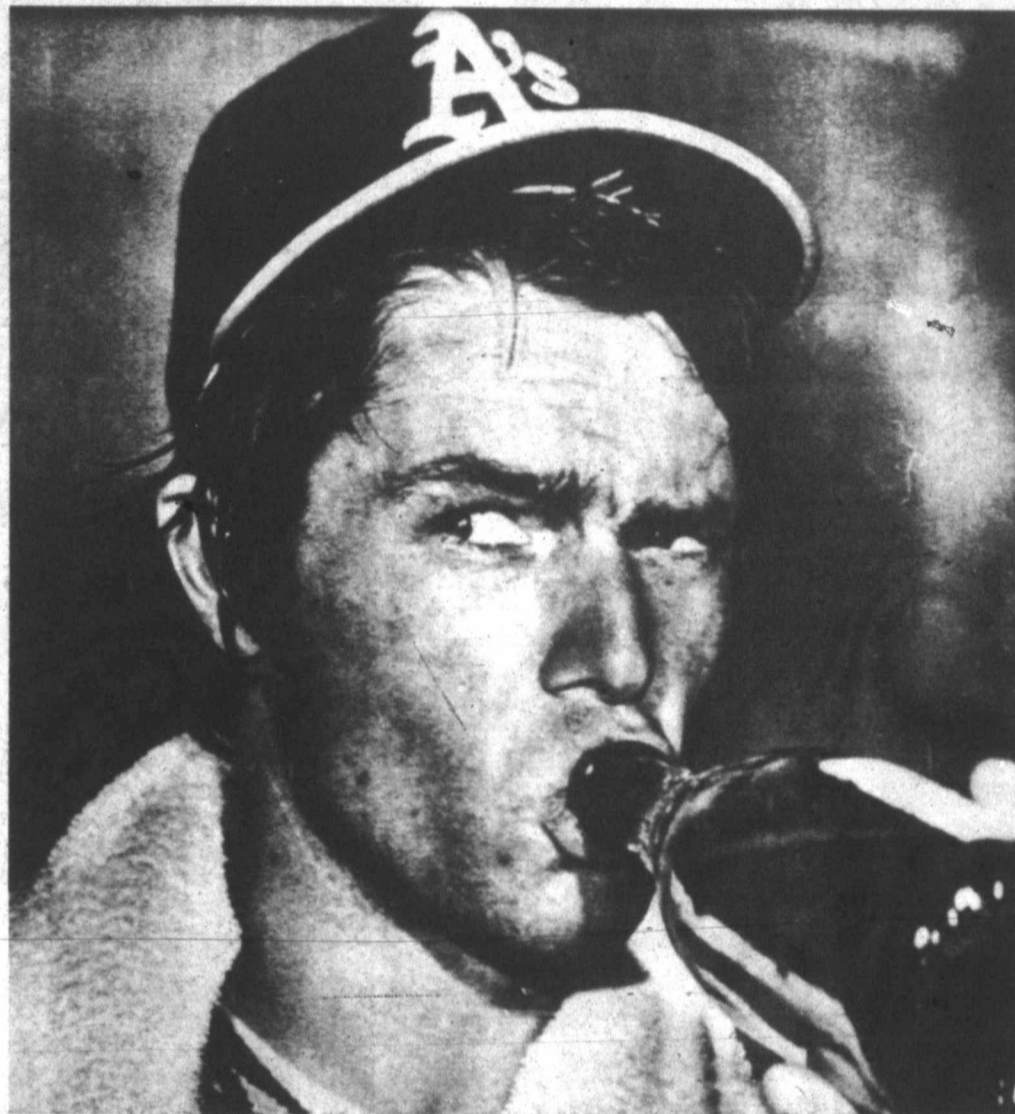

Bump Wills, the hottest

Ranger against the Mariners this season, said Dressler "just had good stuff. He had good velocity on his fast ball and was keeping it away from the hitters."

After Pat Putnam opened the Texas eighth with a double and John Grubb followed with a walk in the eighth inning, Byron McLaughlin replaced Dressler and retired the Rangers to record his 12th save.

With a one-run lead, Dressler said, "every man that gets on is the tying run. You don't want to let him get over second."

"With a man on first, I tried to come in with a sinker and tried to get the double play. We got some excellent defense. I was very aware of trying to keep men from getting in scoring position."

MATT KEOUGH takes a sip of champagne after pitching the Oakland A's to a 6-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday night. It was Keough's first win of the season after 14 straight losses. He was within one loss of setting the all time record for most consecutive losses from the start of the season.

Davis Cup captain tabs McEnroe, Gerulaitis

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe and Vitas Gerulaitis will represent the United States against Argentina in Davis Cup play next week, team captain Tony Trabert announced.

BASKETBALL
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Olympic and UCLA basketball star Ann Meyers signed a contract with the NBA's Indiana Pacers, becoming the first woman player in the history of the league.

Meyers will report to the Pacers' rookie-free agent camp in Indiana on Sept. 10. Meyers, a 5-foot-9, 135-pounder, who led UCLA to a national collegiate championship in 1977-78. Her brother, Dave, is a former med Pitcher of the Month.

BASEBALL
NEW YORK (AP) — All-Star outfielder Fred Lynn of the Boston Red Sox was named the American League's Player of the Month for August, while Rick Langford of the Oakland

A's was named Pitcher of the Month.
Lynn hit .416 in August (.37 for 89) with 10 homers and 25 runs batted in. Langford was 5-1 for August, hurling complete games in all six of that month's starts. He yielded only 42 hits in 53 innings pitched, and compiled a 2.45 earned run average over that span.

Area squads show promising futures

Editor's note: Friday marks the beginning of the 1979 football season for Pampa and surrounding towns and this year looks to be at least equal to any other in the amount of quality teams in the Top 0' Texas area. Members of the News staff have been visiting with the head coaches of the various schools and here is the first of two short previews of what to expect this season.

WHITE DEER: Over the past two campaigns, the Bucks have had to live with a 1-19 record. With the arrival of new head coach Earl Byerly from Dumas, White Deer has been erasing the past and starting anew from the fresh paint on the locker room walls and new carpet on the floor to the attitude of players and students.

"Our defense is looking good, but our offense has a long, long way to go," Byerly states. "In our scrimmage with (state finalist) Wheeler, we held them two times inside our 10 on four downs. They had it on the three once and on the eight the second time."

"It is taking awhile for everybody to get the offense down," he added. "We'll be running out of a total of something like 42 formations. We are going to be giving the scouts quite a bit to look at."

The Bucks start off the season in formidable fashion against consistent winner Vega on the road and the experience of four offensive and five defensive regulars from last year will be heavily drawn upon.

WHEELER: A state championship in 1977 and a state runner-up trophy in 1978 would satisfy most teams, but the Mustangs and their head mentor Joe Allen came away from last season feeling as though they should have won their second straight state title.

Now Wheeler must regroup for their last run at the state Class B title since they will be moving into Class A next year. The Mustangs lost three All-State performers to graduation, but Allen doesn't think his charges will miss a beat.

Gone is running sensation Marvin Grimes, but big fullback Benny Baker (6-0, 205 junior) is back to add to the 800 yards he gained last year. Tailback Willie Valencia, also a junior, will handle the outside running and Allen says Valencia "is a better open field runner than Grimes was."

"We won't have as much talent overall as we did last year, but individually we have as much or better talent," Alley said. "Our weakest point is our lack of speed. We're going to try to run right at the people we play and make them try to stop us."

MIAMI: With only 18 players reporting for daily practices, Miami coach Dennis Anderson is understandably concerned about depth and the toll injuries can take in a season.

"We'll have plenty of two-way starters — probably 11 of them," he said with a grin.

But his troops, who were 4-4 a year ago in Anderson's first year at the Warrior helm, return nine starters from that campaign, including standouts Brad Billingsley and Randy Stone.

Billingsley, a 6-4, 215-pound tackle, was an All-District selection in 1978, as was Stone. Stone gained 868 yards in the short campaign last year and figures to anchor the Warrior running attack from his fullback position.

While lack of depth appears to be the major stumbling block in the Warriors path, Anderson claims good backfield depth and overall quickness as his team's chief assets.

Tomorrow the News looks at McLean, Groom, and Canadian.

Rain delays Pleasant Valley Classic

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — The scheduled first round of the $250,000 Pleasant Valley Golf Classic was washed out today after nine groups had teed off.

Tournament officials announced that the first round of the 72-hole tournament will be played Friday, with the second round on Saturday and the final 36 holes on Sunday.

Defying the odds, play started on schedule after an all-night rain. However, when rain began falling again in the morning and the weatherman forecast a heavier downpour later in the day, the round was postponed.

For pro golfer John Mahaffey, it's the years, not the days that matter. "Winless for nearly five years, gathering prize money less than $10,000 in 1977, Mahaffey was given a special sponsor's exemption to play in the 1978 Pleasant Valley Classic. Then, he suddenly shocked the golf world, winning the PGA championship. After taking a 24-hour breather, he hit the road to fulfill his agreement with the late Cuz Mingolla of Pleasant Valley.

All jazzed up, Mahaffey went on to make it two victories in a row, setting a Pleasant Valley record of 270 for 72 holes and adding $45,000 to his bankroll.

"Things are a little different this time around," Mahaffey said Wednesday after tuning up for the $250,000 tournament.

"I could have won playing in a swimming pool last year," the 31-year-old Texan said. "Now I'm not all that fired up and I haven't been playing well for the last month and a half. I just haven't been making key shots and putts."

"However, I had moments out there today when I made some real good shots. I'm happy the way things are starting to fall into place again. I don't think that I'm that far off."

Alaskan state employees may get out of federal program

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaska's state employees — who have grumbled for years about Social Security's bite vs. its benefits in this high-cost state — will find out next week if they are getting out of the federal program.

If they do, they will be the first state-employed workers in the 50 states to do so, although state and local governments have through the years threatened to withdraw — and more and more local governments appear to be doing so.

State workers had until last Tuesday to return mailed ballots on the issue. The ballots will be counted next Monday, and if a majority of those who returned them voted to opt out, the entire force of 14,451 state employees will be out of the program on Jan. 1.

This year, 98 government bodies of various types have told the federal government they intend to withdraw from the Social Security program, Social Security Administration officials say.

That means 43,400 government workers in 16 states will drop from the program unless they change their minds by Dec. 31.

At least 147 governmental bodies around the country employing 63,035 workers have given notice they will withdraw in 1981. Since only 20,000 workers were removed from coverage in 1978, there seems to be a trend toward withdrawal, at least by small government employees.

In Alaska, the 20 city workers in Haines withdrew from the system in March. Under notice that they will withdraw unless they change their minds are 17,036 workers in eight Alaskan communities — including the workers of North Pole — Social Security officials say.

The Alaska Legislature earlier this year approved a measure calling the state employees' election. A state-run program would replace Social Security if the vote is to drop the federal program.

The election comes at a time when Congress is considering mandatory coverage for all public employees, including federal workers who rebelled against the proposal in 1977. It also coincides with a Congressional Budget Office warning that inflation and recession could seriously affect the soundness of the program, financed by contributions by employers and workers.

Alice M. Rivlin, director of the budget office, has suggested that part of Medicare, financed by Social Security, could be financed out of general tax revenues. And, Social Security Commissioner Stanford G. Ross has said "painful adjustments" are needed in how Social Security is supported and what it pays if it is to remain solvent.

Six states — Colorado, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Nevada and Ohio — are now without Social Security coverage for state workers. State workers had been precluded from coverage from 1939, when the program went into effect, until 1954, when voluntary coverage was extended to public workers.

The number of public employees choosing to get into the federal program grew rapidly; today about 70 percent of the country's 12 million state and local employees now are covered by Social Security, according to the Assembly of Governmental Employees.

The decision facing Alaska's workers is irreversible — once a government withdraws from Social Security coverage of its workers, it cannot rejoin. So the decision by the state employees who vote will bind their non-voting colleagues and future state employees.

On the other hand, if a study due to be completed soon recommends mandatory, universal coverage of public employees, and Congress acts on it, employees could find themselves forced back into the system that now pays monthly benefits to 35 million Americans.

Alaska workers have complained for years about Social Security benefits and the higher cost of living here. The U.S. government recognizes the higher prices in its 25 percent cost of living differential to worker transferred to the state. Alaska pays its state workers more than other states, which means higher payroll deductions to support Social Security workers say.

Yet, when they HE SAME BENEFITS A WORKER IN Mississippi gets — but with decreased purchasing power.

"You get 5 percent less and pay 25 percent more is what it amounts to," says Pat Murphy, executive director of the Alaska Public Employees Association.

Farmers may be forbidden to grow certain vegetables

WASHINGTON (AP) — A relatively unnoticed bill near the bottom of this year's farm legislation agenda could make it illegal for small farmers to grow certain varieties of common vegetables, a group of rural activists says.

Of more far-reaching concern, the bill could further encourage a genetic uniformity in the vegetable world that might undermine modern agriculture's advances, the National Academy of Sciences has said.

The bill would amend the 1970 Plant Variety Protection Act and extend patent laws to cover tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, celery, carrots and okra. Those holding the patents could control which varieties were grown and, critics charge, thousands of varieties could be banned.

Nine years ago, when the act was adopted, major soup companies and other food processors successfully urged that those six crops be exempted. They contract with vegetable growers for specific amounts of specific varieties.

Sponsors of the amendments, led by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, say the exclusions put the United States out of step with European countries, which have been tightening their plant patent laws since the early 1960s.

The Agriculture Department supports the proposal, saying it will permit U.S. participation in an international organization coordinating such laws.

The National Sharecroppers Fund and other opponents of the measure are calling for greater discussion and a USDA study of the European experience.

In Europe, a system of "legal" and "illegal" plant varieties is being phased in to reduce a confusion in the seed business and scientific classifications. The confusion stems, in part, from the botanical fact that no two plants are exactly alike, so greater variety means greater confusion.

Under that system, illegal varieties cannot be sold by commercial seed companies. A cross-pollinating vegetable cannot be grown near a commercial farm, even by a backyard gardener. Fines range up to $800 in Great Britain.

With more than 2,100 varieties due to be banned June 30, 1980, three-quarters of Europe's vegetable varieties may be extinct in a decade, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has estimated.

An article in the current issue of "ruralamerica," a publication of a non-profit lobbying group of the same name, says the existing plant patent laws "make seed companies attractive targets for takeover by large corporations."

Patent-holders profit from the use of the seed and limits on other varieties, and only large companies can afford the research staffs needed to develop new varieties for patent rights, it says.

A subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee conducted hearings in mid-July on the bill, but Senate hearings have yet to be scheduled. It is the sort of measure typically considered quickly in the closing weeks of a congressional session.

At the July hearings, Barbara Schlei, administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service, said independent U.S. farmers would not tolerate seed laws that would put them at the mercy of large corporations.

USDA officials added that patents have been widely distributed within the seed industry, even though "ruralamerica" said that 79 percent of the bean patents are held by four firms.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The coffee crop in Puerto Rico was wiped out by Hurricane David, with total farm losses on the island tentatively estimated at more than $53.8 million, the Agriculture Department says.

James C. Webster, director of the department's Office of Governmental and Public Affairs, said Wednesday that the estimate is expected "to exceed that by a considerable margin" when all the losses are counted.

Rebel leaders flee Iran

The leaders of the Kurdish rebellion have fled from Iran to neighboring Iraq, a Tehran newspaper reports, and the state radio says the Kurdistan region is "completely calm" after weeks of bloody fighting.

The Kurdish spiritual leader, Sheikh Ezzedin Hosseini, sought political asylum in Iraq Sunday along with his brother and Abdol Rahman Qassemu, secretary-general of the outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party, the Tehran Times reported.

Kurdistan, scene of a five-month-old uprising against the Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, is "fully covered by the army," Radio Tehran said in a report monitored in London.

Kurdish sources in Iran were not available to confirm or deny the reports. Khomeini's government on Tuesday closed The Associated Press office in Tehran, ordered its correspondents out of the country and barred them from filing any more dispatches before they left.

The government expelled another foreign correspondent Wednesday, Radio Tehran reported. He was Terry Povey of the London magazine Middle East, and he was the 16th foreign journalist told to leave the country since Khomeini overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February and became the de facto head of state. The broadcast said Povey was expelled because of an article in his magazine this month.

Despite the claims that the Kurdish rebellion was under control, the tribal warriors fighting for autonomous home rule were expected to continue guerrilla warfare in their mountainous region of northwest Pakistan.

There have been four major clashes between the Kurds and Khomeini's forces since March, in the cities of Sanandaj, Paveh, Saqqez and Mahabad. Each resulted when the ayatollah's revolutionary guards and the Iranian army moved in to regain control of key points the Kurds had taken over in the power vacuum that followed the collapse of the royal regime.

Although the Kurds supported Khomeini against the shah, Qassemu called last week for an "all-out war" to make Kurdistan "the graveyard" of his regime.

The rebel forces abandoned Mahabad on Monday after scattered fighting, carrying their howitzers and heavy armaments into the surrounding mountains, and Kurdish sources said a stand would be made at Sardasht, another mountain town near the Iraqi border that was reported to be packed with armed Kurds.

On Tuesday, the commander of government forces in Kurdistan told Radio Tehran radio his troops had driven the rebels from a mountain pass on the way to Sardasht.

Increased information exchanges predicted

LONDON (AP) — Increased British-Irish exchanges of information on IRA activity are predicted as a result of a meeting between Prime Ministers Margaret Thatcher of Britain and Jack Lynch of Ireland following the funeral of Earl Mountbatten.

Mrs. Thatcher and Lynch announced after a five-hour meeting Wednesday they had "agreed on their determination to stamp out terrorism" and that "recent events require that the present extensive cooperation between the authorities of the two countries must now be substantially improved."

They declined to say how this would be accomplished, but informed sources said there probably would be greater exchange of intelligence between security forces on guerrilla activities of the Irish Republican Army, which blew up Mountbatten's fishing boat in Donegal Bay Aug. 27, killing him and three other persons, and later the same day killed 18 British soldiers in a double bombing in Northern Ireland.

Lynch said "a number of suggestions" were made that will be "actively followed up" in the next three weeks. But he added that "the best way to get results is to keep these matters confidential," and he said he didn't think there would be any "dramatic announcements."

The Irish government chief, wary of a backlash in the voting booths at home, already had turned down British demands for the right of "hot pursuit" of guerrillas who flee from Northern Ireland into the republic and for the extradition of IRA men wanted in Northern Ireland.

"There's no way on earth that Lynch can be seen to hand over what some people see as Irish patrimony, the so-called successors of men who fought for Irish independence, to the former colonial power," an Irish source said.

Lynch had hoped to get Mrs. Thatcher to launch a new political initiative in Northern Ireland to get the Protestant majority to share power with the Catholic minority in a coalition government. Their joint statement said she agreed political moves would be "made at the appropriate time."

Mountbatten was buried Wednesday afternoon at Romsey Abbey, near his country estate 80 miles southwest of London, after Britain's most impressive funeral since Sir Winston Churchill's in 1965.

Thousands watched the two-mile funeral procession to Westminster Abbey of troops and veterans from the forces of Britain, the United States, Canada, India and France paying homage to the 79-year-old World War II hero and last viceroy of India.

Headed by Queen Elizabeth II, Mountbatten's cousin, and her family, the 1,400 invited mourners in the abbey included three reigning monarchs and four deposed kings, the largest gathering of European royalty since the death of the queen's father, King George VI, in 1952.

Mother nature treats nightowls to eclipse

Mother nature treated nightowls in North America to the continent's last total lunar eclipse of this decade early today, but it didn't raise much interest in the scientific community.

At Kitt Peak Observatory near Tucson, Ariz., a spokeswoman called the 3 1/2-hour astronomical phenomenon "no big deal."

Paul Roques, an astronomer at Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles, said the eclipse was visible "over half the world that was in darkness, except the areas near the edge where the moon may not have risen."

"A lunar eclipse is visible to at least half the earth when it occurs," Roques explained. "We got all of it, but the eclipse didn't begin for the East Coast until two hours before sunrise, and the moon was down before much of it could be seen."

"They would therefore see a copper eclipse moon framed against the dark blue sky of morning twilight," said the Kitt Peak spokeswoman, who refused to give her name. A lunar eclipse occurs when Earth moves between the moon and the sun, casting the mother planet's shadow over the lunar surface.

The Earth's shadow first touched the moon at 2:18 a.m., PDT, Roques said. "The total phase, when the moon was completely covered, was at 3:31 a.m., the total ending at 4:17 a.m. and the moon cleared the Earth's umbra at 5:31 a.m."

The next total lunar eclipse will be visible from Los Angeles on Jan. 9, 1982, said Dr. Ed Krupp, director of the Griffith Observatory.

According to Roques, "the last one that we could see here was 1975."

The eclipse was clearly visible over Denver, and the next total moon eclipse over Colorado won't occur until July 6, 1982.

Astronomers at Gates Planetarium in Denver said the eclipse began there at 2:21 a.m., MDT and the moon was completely covered for about 46 minutes.

Yearbook pictures to be taken

School pictures will be taken at Pampa High School beginning Monday, Sept. 10. The school photographer, Koens Studio, will be at the high school building for two weeks, Sept. 10 through Sept. 21.

A schedule has been set up so that students will have time during English classes to have their pictures made. Seniors who are not enrolled in an English class will have open times to be photographed.

The photographer will be set up in the classroom adjoining the Girls' Gym.

A deposit of $2.25 will be required for each student. $1 is a proof deposit and will be refunded when proofs are returned.

The schedule for pictures will begin with the senior English classes and then the other classes will follow.

Southwestern Bell to improve system

Southwestern Bell will link communications between several Panhandle areas with a $1.5 million microwave transmission system.

The system is the second digital microwave communications relay to be completed by Southwestern Bell in Texas and will include transmission equipment in Amarillo, Panhandle and Pampa.

"Continuous growth and modernization prompted Bell to decide that the digital transmission system would be more economical, more efficient and would expand our facilities most readily to meet the communications demand of the area," according to Gary Stevens, Pampa manager-business official.

The system will add more than 1300 voice paths to the existing facilities.

The digital system will pick up calls and change the voice communication into computer signals, which are transmitted through the microwave system. These signals are picked up by receiving facilities, such as in Amarillo, and are then transformed back into voice communications.

Customers in the Panhandle are not to be aware of the switchover from the audio to digital transmissions, Stevens said.

Southwestern Bell locations such as Allison, Canadian, Lefors and Skellytown will be fed directly into the radio system for Amarillo service, according to Stevens. Independent telephone systems may be connected directly to the system later or be set up back to back to the system.

Through the automatic switching, the system will be more economical and will require less maintenance than other cable facilities. Transmissions from the original caller to the receiver will be entirely automatic throughout the Panhandle through the relay system when electronic switching equipment is added to the Amarillo facilities in 1983.

Hyperbaric oxygen: Help or hype for patients?

Editor's note: Staffer Dan Lackey has spent the last two weeks examining local inventor Aubrey Morrison and his home-built hyperbaric oxygen chambers. Today, Lackey looks at Morrison, his battles with the Pampa medical community and the promises and claims of hyperbaric oxygen treatments. He also had the opportunity to follow one patient through Morrison's treatments. That story appears elsewhere on this page.

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

The big fly in Aubrey Morrison's ointment is the apathy and anger of the Pampa medical community.

"If I could get just one doctor to go in with me, just one, I'd have it made," says Morrison, owner of the Lamex Corporation on Francis Street.

Lamex is more or less a one man band — Morrison — who designs, makes, hopes to market, and operates for patients with various maladies a medical device known as a hyperbaric oxygen chamber.

Since the fall of 1977, Morrison has assembled seven such chambers. And two of them, the latest designs, prominently displayed and used in the clean-carpeted Lamex lobby, are nine-by-four-foot fiberglass capsules, each containing a six-and-a-half-foot vinyl "bed." Locked inside, a patient can breathe 98 percent pure oxygen at pressures up to three times the normal atmosphere at sea level.

"But the doctors say, 'Why, hell it won't do anything' because they don't know what it's about and they don't want to know what it's about," Morrison says.

What the hyperbaric oxygen (HBO) chamber is all about is still in the process of being discovered by scientists and physicians in established medical research centers in Galveston, San Antonio, Long Beach, St. Louis, London, and Lauderdale-by-the-Sea, Florida.

But what the device could do for a budding medical career is obvious to Morrison, who built his first HBO chamber in his garage on Craven Street and actually administered an estimated 1500 "treatments" there before moving to his present location.

"Oh, some of the younger ones (doctors) go for it," Morrison says. "I told one young fellow (from another city) he could have all the praise for the curing of these diseases! I said, 'You'd better think about it, you'll be able to be one of the big time.' But his wife didn't want him to do it. I could have cut him a pretty good deal, too."

Business aside, hyperbaric oxygen, which is regarded as the standard treatment for decompression sickness or "the bends" often suffered by divers, has been used and tested as a device for the treatment of a variety of diseases since the 1950s.

Established as an important supplementary therapy for treatment of a bone disease known as osteomyelitis, HBO is also regarded as a standard treatment for gas gangrene if accompanied with appropriate antibiotics and surgery.

Breathing of pure oxygen at an increased atmospheric pressure multiplies the amount of oxygen in the blood plasma 15 to 20 times, according to Morrison, who claims the process "cleans the system" generally.

Yet the one malady which could encourage the proliferation of HBO devices across the country — possibly making it part of the emergency medical "furniture" — is carbon monoxide poisoning.

According to one of the country's leading HBO researchers, Dr. Richard Neubauer of the Ocean HBO Center in Lauderdale-by-the-Sea, Fla. (quoted in the March 1979 issue of the health magazine "Let's Live!"), "Every city of any size should have a hyperbaric oxygen chamber for emergency cases...each year 25,000 persons die of carbon monoxide poisoning. We could save these lives if these people were immediately brought to a hyperbaric oxygen chamber."

And Morrison, the self-taught medical technician and HBO entrepreneur, more than echoes Neubauer, the scientific researcher.

"In another year there will be a chamber in every town of any size," he says. "And I have medical reports that will show you — that hospitals being built today and not allowing for hyperbaric oxygen chambers, why, they're being built obsolete!"

Meanwhile, among the some 3500 articles about HBO in the medical literature, are documented attempts of researchers to test the therapeutic value of the device for such usually irreversible conditions as multiple sclerosis, senility, and strokes.

Neubauer has reported encouraging results with an

"He's advertising that it cures everything from corns to making your breasts larger. He's practicing medicine without a license. And I think it's $70 a treatment for pure hoax."

—Dr. Joe Donaldson of Pampa uncontrolled study of 25 MS patients, though he cautions that "(a)...retrospective study of 25 patients cannot be considered conclusive." Reporting "excellent results with nine of the 25 patients treated with HBO, he says, "We think the evidence merits further study."

Other researchers have made similar tentative statements in reviewing results of tests involving senile patients and stroke victims.

In all, according to a lengthy medical brochure published under the Lamex logo but apparently the work of the Lauderdale-by-the-Sea researchers, HBO treatments can be applied to as many as 70 ailments.

Yet hyperbaric oxygen has also been touted as a cancer cure, a "fountain of youth," an aid to one's sex life, a way to increase the IQ, and a help for growing hair. And Morrison believes such things are susceptible to HBO treatments.

Yet among the doctors and HBO technicians who scoff at claims of increased IQs and new-grown hair, there is also some skepticism about HBO treatment of senility and multiple sclerosis.

Gerald McClure, Hyperbaric Supervisor for the Marine Biomedical Institute in Galveston, says of senility treatments. "With the question of senility, you take a group of old people who have received minimal care and then through this treatment make them the center of attention. Why, anybody will respond to that because, now, somebody suddenly cares."

"This is difficult to describe...there are things that affect people psychologically that have no clinical basis," McClure says. "The hyperbaric chamber has been treated as a miracle machine by various people but it is not. It is just an adjunctive (supplementary) therapy. Combined with the proper medical and surgical care it can be effective, but it's not even effective in all of these cases."

Others have questioned the value of increased oxygen for stroke victims. The HBO treatments, they suggest, slow circulation and therefore cancel out the value of increased blood oxygen. Brain cells destroyed by a stroke, physicians point out, can never be replaced. But HBO therapists say increased oxygen may be helpful if received immediately following the stroke.

But the treatment "doesn't grow hair and it doesn't make you look young again," McClure says emphatically.

Yet whatever the device can or cannot do, Morrison is having a slow time doing it in Pampa — at least through the established medical channels — though he counts among patients or customers persons from several southwestern states. People

"I can't knock it. They (patients) should be able to try it if they want. If it doesn't help, they shouldn't go back."

—Dr. Malouf Abraham of Canadian from Oklahoma, California, and Florida, and a number of returning patients from surrounding Panhandle towns, especially Canadian, have all provided him business.

"I get calls every day or two," says Morrison, who promotes the treatments with evangelical zeal. "And someone will say, 'My sister is here in town from out of state, and she says there's this oxygen treatment that helps people, and how come I didn't know about it and I've been living here all my life?' Well, we don't have advertising, it's all by word of mouth."

Morrison claims that during January and February of 1978 he was treating from 14 to 16 patients a day at his Craven Street garage before business began to level off.

Morrison charges $70 per treatment — usually an hour in length — with a minimum of three treatments required.

The former Humble Oil master machinist and inventor admits, however, that Pampa doctors will not write prescriptions for the use of the device, though he says some will not discourage its use.

"Some people come in and ask me about the treatment, you know," Morrison says. "And I give them some of the literature and I say, 'Take that by to your doctor and see what he thinks,' and so they come back and say 'He said don't get in that thing it won't do you no good!' So I found out pretty quick what the doctors thought."

In fact, the local hyperbaric oxygen treatments — and Morrison himself — have been sources of a subdued controversy in the Pampa medical community since early last year, the News has learned.

Staff doctors at Highland General approved a letter of "complaint" to the State Board of Medical Examiners in the "early part of last year," Dr. Joe Donaldson, then Chief of Staff, said last week. Enclosed with the letter were copies of Lamex advertising, Donaldson said.

Donaldson would not say who drafted the letter and over whose signature it was delivered but indicated that the letter to the state board was the result of staff doctor discussions at Highland General concerning Morrison and his product.

The letter apparently contained allegations that Morrison was practicing medicine without a license.

An investigator for the State Board of Medical Examiners, John Sartore, confirmed that his office had "received information" early last year that persons at Lamex were "practicing medicine without a license."

Sartore said he contacted "one or two" persons who had taken the hyperbaric treatments. But he said investigators had failed to find anyone "willing to go to the courthouse (to testify). That's one of our problems. I don't feel I could put any of our (undercover) investigators in the position of being guinea pigs (by taking the treatment)."

The Lamex Hyperbaric Oxygen Chambers were registered as a medical device with the Food and Drug Administration last spring following a March FDA investigation of the company, Morrison said.

Morrison said he had regarded the HBO chambers as a "health device — like a steam bath" until an FDA investigation shortly before the registration.

Sartore said he did not know of any relation between his investigation and the investigation of the FDA.

Donaldson said Highland staff doctors had not pursued the complaint to the state board and had not learned of the results of any investigation.

"He's advertising that it cures everything from corns to making your breasts larger," Donaldson said. "He's practicing medicine without a license. And I think it's $70 a treatment for a pure hoax. It's like taking cabbage juice for an ulcer. A lot of things in medicine are helped by psychology, that's why there's so many cures for arthritis."

Donaldson, the most emphatic Pampa critic of Lamex, says, "He (Morrison) is just interested in making money, not in human welfare."

However, Dr. Malouf Abraham of Canadian, who will write prescriptions for the HBO therapy, says some of his patients have been helped by the treatment.

"I don't know all that much about it," Abraham said. "A few of my patients with circulatory problems and strokes say it's helped them. I can't knock it. They should be able to try it if they want, if it doesn't help, they shouldn't go back."

Compared to many Pampa physicians, Abraham, an allergy specialist, is cavalier about the treatment.

"If it makes somebody feel better then it's alright with me," Abraham says. "I'm certainly not going to call it any sort of quackery — there's lots of uses for it. If you say it (the effect) is

"We're not trying to take the doctors' business."

—Sharon Chandler, Morrison's assistant

just psychological — well, a lot of medicine is just psychological. A lot of prescriptions we give are just psychological. I'm not going to stand in the way of anyone who wants to feel better."

But many Pampa doctors, while not standing in the way of HBO therapy, are not encouraging its use locally.

"I think it's very close to a hoax," says Dr. Raymond Laycock. "Not the device itself, but this fellow that's running it with no medical background. There's a place for it (HBO)... but this fellow's trying to profit from it. I think he's got his gimmick and he's going to cash in on it."

Dr. Wilber Whitsell says the HBO treatments are "being touted rather unrealistically. There are only very limited clinically sound uses for it. If someone asks me about it, I say 'Don't do it.'"

"Someone has to make a diagnosis before he can make a treatment," said one Pampa physician who asked not to be named. "Who is going to make that diagnosis? And should something go wrong — who is there qualified to help them? If it does no harm, that's one thing — people just lose their money. But sooner or later someone's going to get hurt, and that's when you're gonna see all the agencies come in..."

Morrison, however, says that "in over 3,000 treatments we haven't had any serious trouble at all."

"The doctor's didn't mind us as long as we were down in the garage," says Sharon Chandler, Morrison's secretary and assistant. "But then we moved up here (to Francis Street) and got

"I don't charge if the treatment is not successful."

—Aubrey Morrison

respectable that made them mad.

"Really, if the doctors would just try to work with us," Mrs. Chandler says. "We're not trying to hurt them. There's lots of people we send back to the doctors. We're not trying to take the doctors' business."

"I try anything that anybody comes in here with," says Morrison. "And if I can't help them I don't want their money. I don't charge if the treatment is not successful."

Morrison says he has given away over $50,000 worth of treatments, but Mrs. Chandler says the figure is closer to $32,000.

"It's the safest treatment known today," Morrison often says. "And definitely the most enjoyable treatment that you could possibly take."

Treatments make undefined ailment 'feel better'

Fred Andrews is having a hard time breathing. His face is puffed and red, and bears traces of two weeks of sleepless nights.

"It's been like this for about the last two months," he tells L.A. Morrison, an athletic-looking white haired man of about 65, and Morrison's assistant, Sharon Chandler, a slim dark-haired woman with glasses.

Andrews has heard about Morrison's hyperbaric oxygen treatments at the Lamex Corporation on Francis Street from neighbors in Canadian. He knows the treatments are $70 an hour. Desperately short of breath, he's eager to give it a try.

"Sometimes it can get to the point," Andrews says, "where I just kind of have to snap back my head to catch my breath."

Seated in a folded chair next to one of Morrison's man-size fiberglass chambers, Andrews bends over to endure another coughing fit. His chest sounds deeply congested — it seems as if he's choking.

Morrison, Mrs. Chandler, Andrews' wife Lois, and a reporter stand for what seems like an hour of helpless sympathetic silence.

"You gonna live?" jokes Mrs. Chandler, to break the embarrassment.

"I'm gonna live 'til I die," manages Andrews, trying to exhale. "Sometimes he just sits on the bed at night for hours at a time and coughs," his wife comments — more accustomed to the misery than the others.

After an awkward pause, Andrews says, "I'll be glad to get to that eternal home."

"Oh, don't say that in front of him," says Sharon, whose friendly contralto voice does a lot to make potential patients feel at home at Lamex. Pointing to Morrison, she adds, "He wants to live to be 5,000."

"Well, it's the most enjoyable treatment you could possibly take," Morrison says, tapping the side of the chamber. "In five minutes, they all say, 'Is it all right if I go to sleep?' You just get so relaxed... You'll go to yawnin' in five minutes in there, and in a half hour you'll be asleep."

Soothing news to a man who hasn't had a decent night's sleep in two weeks. Andrews seems ready to take his first treatment now. But it's already been scheduled for tomorrow afternoon.

"One thing we don't take around here is aspirin," Sharon says. "The chamber works wonders on migraines."

"It'll start to clear up some of that — some of that congestion down in there, break it up, clean it out once you get in there," Morrison adds, pointing to his own chest and then to Andrews.

"Anything that's not right in your body, it's gonna try to correct it," Morrison says. A man with uncontrollable energy, he continuously taps an incessantly nervous foot. "So it's gonna cure your athletes foot, warts are gonna fall off you, and everything else." "We have to be real careful of what we say like that," amends Sharon. "Because the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) says we can't advertise or say we cure anyone."

When the two describe the value of HBO treatments to the potential patients and reporter, Mrs. Chandler often works in rhythm with Morrison, amending his statements here and there, scolding him for "outrageous" remarks, tucking in the shirttail of an occasional sloppy claim.

When Morrison says "It wasn't a week before we got that lady out of a wheel chair," Sharon adds, "She never could walk; but she did stand up."

And when Morrison tells of the girl with the fungus inside her mouth and stomach — "We cleared it up just like that" — Sharon adds, "Of course, 'You don't know how long it will last.'"

Morrison says that he prefers to take prescriptions for his treatments but admits that he quit asking for prescriptions when it became clear that doctors in Pampa would not write them for the HBO treatments.

"But they usually have one (a prescription)," says Sharon. "Or if they don't have one we know we can easily get one."

Fred Andrews, however, does not have a prescription. But like all Lamex patients, he is required to sign a liability waiver which states that he is taking the HBO treatments at his own risk and that he has "provided Lamex Inc. with a written prescription from his physician."

The waiver also states that the patient agrees to three treatments at $70 each. There is no release in the waiver from payment if the treatment fails to be effective, although Morrison claims he will not ask for money if the patient is not satisfied.

Morrison says that he removed a sign requesting prescriptions after an FDA consumer safety officer Ralph Godfrey, told him they were not an absolute necessity.

"He said, 'Now you don't have to have a prescription,'" Morrison quotes Godfrey. "But I sure would feel better if you all had them."

An investigator for the State Board of Medical Examiners, John Sartore, however, says he thinks the prescriptions are a definite legal necessity.

"I don't see any exceptions... except in some cases it will depend on what the device is used for," Sartore says. "I don't think a prescription would be required in the case of decompression illness (the 'bends' often suffered by deep sea divers). But if they're treating specific illnesses, I think prescriptions are required."

But Godfrey told this reporter he does not know if a prescription is legally required or not, thus emphasizing the legally gray area in which Lamex is apparently operating.

Without a prescription or a copy of a doctor's diagnosis, it is difficult to tell what Fred Andrews is being treated for. On the day before Andrews' first treatment, Morrison and Sharon alluded only to "the clearing out" of Andrews clogged sinuses and heavily congested lungs.

At least two local physicians, however, say that increased blood oxygen would be unhealthy for anyone with bronchial congestion since expanded lung cells would aggravate the condition.

And chief HBO technician at the Marine Biomedical Institute in Galveston, Gerald McClure, says treatments are postponed for patients who have developed any lung congestion.

Before beginning treatments, Andrews tells Morrison that his condition has been recently diagnosed as an allergy to certain kinds of foods such as spinach, tomatoes and green beans. He says doctors have recommended surgery for the removal of a polyp in his nose.

"I don't have medical insurance," Andrews says. "So I'd probably have to be scheduled for a time at the VA hospital in Albuquerque. I don't want to go through all that trouble (surgery and travel) if I can get the thing taken care of this way."

Ironically, one of the few conditions Morrison says HBO won't help is allergies.

"One thing it won't help is allergies," Morrison told an Amarillo newspaper last October. "And there are a few people we can't treat

Reflections

Final battle is hard-fought

By Nancy Ellis

Pearls, earrings, high-heeled shoes and a dress — even at age 92 she wanted to be ready each morning for whatever the day might bring.

Most of them brought nothing in particular, and she would sit in her armchair reading romantic novels from the library across the street and watching birds feed outside her window.

She lived in the same century-old house she had shared with her husband, dead now for over 20 years.

Her orderly days included three square meals and an occasional trek to the nearby grocery, hairdresser or bank — her tiny feet shuffling along the walk across the village green.

Despite her deafness, she was delighted to entertain whenever visitors dropped by. There would be no endless monologue about the past, but rather a genuine interest in the present.

She did not speak often of the loneliness. But, she once confided, she was ready to die — here, in this house, while I am still independent.

Yet, in contradiction, she eluded the end for two more years, through several major illnesses, on to a retirement home a thousand miles away but near her only child, and finally, into a hospital bed.

Here, despite her professed desire to "let go", she struggled maddeningly against the inevitable.

In a final, incoherent middle-of-the-night phone call to her exhausted daughter, she pleaded impossibly for company on her journey into darkness.

She died later that morning. An autopsy showed she had suffered three major heart attacks over the years, only one of which the family had been aware.

She lived gracefully, and it always seemed that she would die with grace. Yet in the end — body frail beyond belief — she fought it with incredible strength.

Perhaps even after 94 years, she still was very much in love with life.

DEAR ABBY

Needs priestly confession of allergy

DEAR ABBY: You had something in your column about people who were allergic to fragrances. Well, that's my problem. Only I am not allergic to all fragrances, just one.

When I go to confession, as soon as the priest's clog or after-shave hits me, I become nauseated. I tell you, I nearly pass out.

Abby, it's not easy to tell a priest what to do, so how do I solve this problem?

NAUSEATED ON SUNDAY

DEAR NAUSEATED: Tell your priest that you have an unusual "confession." Then confess your allergy to his fragrance, and pray for ablation for him — and absolution for you!

DEAR ABBY: I must comment on a letter signed GRACE. When she complained to a friend that she couldn't find a dress she wanted to buy, she was told not to worry because at her age (70) nobody cared what she wore anyway.

I cannot let that go unchallenged. My mother-in-law is 91 and I wish you could see how she dresses! She wears good-looking, beautifully made clothes that are becoming to her. She begins her day by grooming herself in the morning and putting on pretty lingerie. She says just because nobody sees it is no reason for her not to wear what she likes. She puts on a fresh, lovely dress every day whether she's at home alone or planning to go somewhere. She lives alone and keeps a large house in excellent order, too.

Whenever I see an older woman who is beautifully dressed I never fail to tell her how nice she looks whether I know her or not. It is always so much appreciated.

ELLEN IN PA.

DEAR ELLEN: Thanks for a delightful letter. I've committed your last paragraph to memory and will henceforth follow your generous example. (P.S. And why not tell a well-groomed elderly man how nice HE looks, too.)

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle a slight dispute between my husband and me?

We live in a quiet, residential, middle-class area of one-family homes. My husband and I both work. He prefers mowing our lawn as early as possible on the weekend.

I think we should wait until 11 a.m. Our lawn mower is a noisy electric job.

M.W. IN BAYSIDE, N.Y.

DEAR M.: I'm with you. A "quiet, residential neighborhood" doesn't need a noisy lawnmower going at 7 or 8 a.m. on a Sunday morning.

Ham 'n raisins in sauce hail Mexican Independence

Our Mexican neighbors south of the border celebrate their independence from Spain each Sept. 15th with shouts of "Viva!" and, you can be sure, with quantities of delicious Mexican foods. Americans can share in the festivities by serving food with a fiesta flavor right at home.

For a hearty Mexican-style meal serve an entree of Ham and Raisins in Spiced Sauce, prepared by home economists of Gebhardt Mexican Foods. Accompanied by Mexican Eggs — eggs in enchilada sauce — and a side-dish of fluffy, hot rice, the dish makes a great way to say "Viva!" to freedom whichever side of the border you come from.

HAM AND RAISINS IN SPICED SAUCE

- (6 servings)
- 4 fresh, frozen or canned corn tortillas
 - cooking oil
 - 2 cans (4 oz. each) Gebhardt Taco Sauce
 - 1/2 cup chicken broth
 - 2 tablespoons red wine
 - 1/4 teaspoon allspice
 - 1 cup raisins
 - 3 cups cubed cooked ham (about 1 1/2 pounds)
 - 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
 - 2 tablespoons cold water

Cut tortillas into thin strips and crisp in hot oil in skillet. Drain on paper towels and reserve.

Combine taco sauce, chicken broth, wine and allspice; cook over low heat until hot. Add raisins and ham; continue cooking until heated through. Blend cornstarch with cold water; stir into ham mixture. Cook until sauce thickens. Serve immediately, garnished with crisp tortilla strips, and accompanied by hot cooked rice.

TWEEN 12 AND 20

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 17-year-old girl who has problems with my stepfather. My mother recently married and before she did, I was having a great time.

My mother trusted me but my stepdad doesn't. Now, his rules are that I can't date unless I double date and that if I come home one minute after my curfew, I'm restricted for one week.

I have been dating this boy for two months and my stepdad suggested that I should take the "pill." I was shocked. I'm innocent and don't need contraceptives.

I feel no respect or trust for my stepdad. I love my mom but she goes along with whatever my stepdad says.

I would appreciate any suggestions. — Lana, Garden Grove, Calif.

Lana: Your stepfather appears not to have much experience as a parent. He is making many mistakes with you. Thank goodness you are 17. If he doesn't change, you can leave home when you graduate.

Dr. Wallace: My problem is that my parents do not trust me.

When I walk to my friend's house, which is about a mile away, I must tell my mom when I leave my home, call her when I get there, call her when I leave there and let her know when I get home.

How embarrassing — I've tried talking to her but, all she says is, "You're our baby." Help! — Millie, Pottstown, Pa.

Millie: I don't think that your parents are showing lack of trust. They are doing it because they care about their daughter. Don't be embarrassed. Be proud.

Nasal sprays are addicting

By Joe Graedon

Q. I had an allergy in 1964 and I have been using nasal sprays ever since.

I've tried to quit, but I just can't. My nose and sinuses stop up completely, my ears feel like they are popping and cracking and my head feels like it's swelled up. As soon as I use the nasal spray all this goes away completely and I'm fine.

Is there any pill or other way I can get off the nasal spray? I want desperately to stop.

A. Your story wins the prize. We have received many letters from people "addicted" to their nasal sprays but 15 years is some kind of record!

The side effects you experience when you try to stop are probably due to a "withdrawal" reaction. Doctors give this ailment the elegant name "rhinitis medicamentosa", which means a stuffy nose caused by your medicine.

Nose drops and nasal sprays work by constricting the small blood vessels in your nose. This shrinking action reduces stuffiness, temporarily. When used only once or twice a day for no more than a few days at a time there is rarely any problem. However if used for more than four days it can cause "rebound nasal congestion" each time the medication starts to wear off. As a result, the drug ends up causing the very symptoms it was supposed to relieve.

As you have discovered, it can be very hard to break this vicious cycle once it gets started. If you go "cold turkey" the congestion may last for days and makes life so miserable that you start spraying again.

There are no simple solutions to getting unhooked, but here are a few tricks that may make your discomfort easier to bear.

If you are in good health and don't suffer from high blood pressure, a thyroid disorder, diabetes or heart disease, you may want to try an ORAL decongestant. Pseudoephedrine, phenylephrine, or phenylpropanolamine are all reasonably effective ingredients.

While you continue using the nasal spray in one nostril, stop applying it to the other so you can give half your nose a chance to recover. When you can finally breathe again on the side without medicine you should eliminate the spray altogether. (Be prepared to wait a week or longer for signs of improvement.) Gradually phase-out the oral decongestant.

If this plan doesn't work you should discuss the problem with an ear, nose and throat specialist. He might consider a temporary course of steroid-type drug like Prednisone.

Q. I would appreciate an explanation of the chemical "dioctyl sodium sulfosuccinate" (DSS) which my doctor recommended as a laxative. How does it work and what are the harmful side effects, if any?

A. If you have to use a laxative, DSS is probably one of the safest ingredients available. It acts a little like a detergent by making water wetter. Instead of irritating or stimulating the digestive tract, DSS softens the stool and helps prevent constipation.

DSS is available in many over-the-counter laxatives including Afko-Lube, Colace, Comfolax and Regulol.

No-laxative should substitute for a diet high in fiber and roughage. Lots of liquids, exercise and bran will go a long way towards preventing constipation in the first place.

Q. How much does the average prescription cost and what does the pharmacist make on it?

A. The Albany College of Pharmacy has been monitoring prescription prices for 23 years. They found the average cost to the consumer last year was $6.11, up 10.5 percent from the year before. According to the survey, published in Medical Marketing & Media, the pharmacist averages $2.45 gross profit on each prescription, or 40.1 percent of the retail price.

Rural women -- untapped labor force

COLLEGE STATION — Rural women, roughly one-third of the female population, represent the greatest untapped labor force in America today, shows a study by a Texas A&M University sociologist.

While the resource is great, few women participate in jobs outside the home even though many farm incomes are operating at or below the poverty level. Why don't they participate?

"You've got to have the opportunity first," explains the researcher, Dr. Elizabeth Maret. "There are just fewer job opportunities for women in rural areas and the jobs are relatively low paying."

Dr. Maret stresses that rural women represent a tremendous reserve of potential and, given the opportunities, could become a viable part of America's supply of labor.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column regularly and need some assistance. I was recently diagnosed as having low blood sugar and the doctor suggested that I eat protein snacks between meals as well as high-protein meals.

I do feel better but have gained weight and now feel like a healthy sausage. I would like to know what I can eat that will give me the needed protein without the increase in weight.

DEAR READER — I wonder how many of my readers have ever questioned the popular concept that a high-protein diet causes you to lose weight when people like you tend to gain weight when they eat proteins.

The truth is that proteins are just carbohydrates and fats with ammonia attached to them. The ammonia part of the amino acids in the protein is simply stripped off and the excess protein becomes fat and carbohydrate. The extra ammonia is converted to urea and eliminated in your urine.

There are plenty of high-protein foods that are relatively low in fat. The problem is that many people choose foods that they have been told are high in protein but that also contain lots of fat and therefore lots of calories. A good example is whole milk; about half its calories really come from fat.

Meat is an excellent source of protein but you must use lean meats if you want to avoid a lot of fat calories. A good example would be lean round steak with all the visible fat removed.

Chicken breasts or turkey breasts are good sources of protein without fat, particularly if you remove the skin. The purpose of the high-protein meals and snacks is that they are emptied more slowly from the stomach than are carbohydrates, particularly the concentrated carbohydrates such as sugar. They are absorbed a little slower. As a result, they don't tend to raise your blood sugar and cause you to have rebound low blood sugar reactions.

You can accomplish the same results by being sure your diet contains more bulk. This should come from the bulky vegetables such as leafy salads or raw vegetables. You can even use raw apples since they're fibrous, slowly digested and won't raise your blood sugar very much.

To give you a better understanding of what low blood sugar really is and what you should be doing about a diet, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-9, Low Blood Sugar: Hypoglycemia. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents in check or coin with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

UNFINISHED PIECES have become an unlimited avenue for self-expression in casual homes, as shown with a chest of drawers and table. The design on the table was drawn by home furnishings experts with pencil and then finished with felt-tip pens. The design on the chest was taken from a drapery pattern and traced onto the drawers by hand, then completed with paint. Covering the surfaces of these designs with lacquer or another clear finish will protect them and preserve their beauty.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

By Louise Pierce

When you were in grade school, didn't somebody tell you that good digestion depended on good rapport with fellow diners? A tousled towhead once told me that if you fed a cat and sicced a dog on it, then rescued the feline and X rayed its insides, you'd spot a completely undigested meal. That may have been childish exaggeration by imaginative playmates. But it's the indisputable truth that if we get mad enough at meal time, we get sudden and serious indigestion. And that can ruin our dispositions and our compatibility, even our desire to hold our mature marriage together.

I believe we older couples who have lived all our adult lives together are convinced that extreme anxiety usually takes away our appetites. And you will also agree, I believe, that anger can do the same thing before a meal — and will upset a stomach unmercifully if it develops during or after eating.

All the child psychology and family counseling books I've read, and I've gone through most of them, beg for meals to be happy times — for the kids' appreciation of parents, for everybody's healthful digestion. "Don't rant and rave or scold and sob while you're eating", they admonish us.

Otis and I have never quarreled at the table, with each other or with relatives or friends. But I've known people who saved up their grievances for special airing with cheeseburgers and apple pie. When we were spectators at such a marital fight, I quit eating and excused myself to cough elsewhere. Since everybody knew I was an asthmatic, I was excused and forgotten while the fuss continued. I remember one pair of dear friends of years ago who picked on each other so often at breakfast, lunch and dinner that they started eating separately and then sleeping alone and finally living apart, resulting in their divorce. Though, to my knowledge, neither of them ever remarried, they never spoke to each other again. They appeared to be compatible at all times except when they ate together. And their separation could have been avoided. Serenity while dining and digesting your food cannot be over-emphasized.

DEAR LOUISE: My husband always used to take our children apart and put them back together his way — at every evening meal. He went to work before they were up and was gone at noon. So the only time he saw them was at dinner. They tattled on each other lots of times and he spanked one or two or all five of them, almost every day. Many nights I went to bed hungry or sick to my stomach — and so did the kids. Now my husband is treating our grandchildren the same way when they visit our ranch in the summertime. I stood it through one generation and never tried to change him. But I won't endure it through another bunch of kids. Shall I tell the grandkids not to come to see us next year? Worried Sick.

DEAR W.S.: Don't do that until you first try to change your husband. Hold a heartfelt discussion with him, several hours after a meal. Tell him plainly how you feel about his turning meal time into a corrective center. Make him understand that you're both lucky your own kids grew up healthy (or did they develop ulcers?) and that you are not going to tolerate your grandchildren's endurance of his temper tantrums while they're eating. Write a letter to the youngsters, saying they can't visit you any more because Grandpa won't let them enjoy your good cooking. Show the letter to your husband and tell him you're going to send it the next day. If he doesn't try to stop you, send it. And if he picks a quarrel with you while you're eating, have your meals apart from his, in mid morning and mid afternoon. If he doesn't understand the picture yet, explain it to him. I believe he'll value his family, and his wife, enough to reform, at least a little.

Teenage expenses for school clothes

Back-to-school wardrobe expenditures for teenage girls last fall amounted to more than $6.5 billion, a magazine research study shows.

Teens in high school and college purchased nearly $3.8 billion worth of coats, jackets, suits, dresses, skirts, shirts and blouses, sweaters and pants. Footwear amounted to almost $663 million and the bill was $454 million for such accessories as handbags, wallets, sunglasses, umbrellas and gloves.

The favorite shopping place, the research revealed, was department stores, followed by boutiques and specialty stores. The young women reported they were most interested in style, followed by comfort.

Are women in sports unladylike? No, they're 'positively feminine'

By the editors of Psychology Today

In schools and colleges this fall, and outside them as well, thousands of women will be joining in sports that once were considered "unladylike." Yet many people worry about the trend: will sports "masculinize" females?

They may indeed give women some personality traits that previously have been associated with men, according to the hints contained in recent studies compiled by Joanna Bunker Rohrbaugh, a psychologist at the Harvard Medical School. Such a change could be a good thing, Rohrbaugh concludes. The traits involve psychological strength and confidence that are quite appropriate for women.

Rohrbaugh is the author of a book, "Women: Psychology's Puzzle", that will be published this fall.

Sports are not likely to masculinize women's bodies, however. For example, Rohrbaugh cites studies done by others that compared 275 college undergraduate women who were not athletes with 328 college women who were. The athletes either participated in the 1972 Women's Intercollegiate Championships, in a variety of sports, or in the 1972 Olympic tryouts in gymnastics.

Rohrbaugh calls the differences "hard, y dramatic." The women athletes were one inch taller than the nonathletes, on the average, and three pounds heavier.

"Nor is there any truth to the so-called 'muscle myth,'" Rohrbaugh says. "When women engage in organized swimming, or even in weight-lifting programs the major changes in body composition involve decreases in subcutaneous fat. No matter how often a woman lifts weights, she won't look like a scaled-down Arnold Schwarzenegger."

When it comes to feelings, however, sport seems to make a difference. The same study that compared female college athletes and nonathletes also asked the two groups how they felt about their energy levels, appetites and health, as well as about 18 different body parts or aspects of physical appearance. The researchers, sociologists Eldon Snyder and Joseph Kivlin, found that the athletes rated their bodies much more positively than the nonathletes.

Repeating the survey with 556 high school girls, Snyder found that athletes again had more positive images of their bodies than nonathletes. "Perhaps most dramatic of all," Rohrbaugh points out, "the high school athletes actually rated themselves as equally or even more 'feminine' than the non-athletic students."

To be sure, the female athletes may have felt positively about themselves even before getting involved in athletics. Whatever is behind it, Rohrbaugh cites two studies showing that the connection involves more than just "body image."

In one, students at a variety of Southern colleges who had participated in high school sports before they arrived on campus scored higher on tests of self-confidence. In the other survey, female college athletes seemed more sure of themselves.

"Compared with nonathletic college women," Rohrbaugh says, "the athletes were less dependent on the opinions of others, held more growth enhancing values, were more flexible in applying those values, were more sensitive to their own needs and feelings, were more apt to see people as essentially good, and were able to see the opposites and contradictions in life as meaningfully related to each other."

"Thus," Rohrbaugh adds, "the female athletes were more self-actualized—surer of themselves, their work, and of their ability to relate meaningfully to that world."

Athletics is not the only kind of activity that can build confidence, of course. Rohrbaugh says high school musicians have also shown higher than average levels of self-satisfaction.

But if athletics do build confidence in women, Rohrbaugh wonders, "who's to say what will happen as more and more women begin to feel the strength of their bodies and hence, the courage of their convictions?"

Novelist's life has many facets

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Evelyn Konrad could be a character in one of her own novels.

She is the author of the recently published "Indiscretions." She is the wife of a busy New York City businessman and the mother of four children. She has completed all the course work and examinations for a Ph.D. at the New York Graduate School of Business. And, since 1958 she has been the head of her own management consulting firm.

"I think the more different things you do, the better you feel, but if you're constantly doing the same thing, that's hard," Ms. Konrad said with a smile. "I cannot be without activity. I did a new business presentation the day of the night my older girl was born."

Ms. Konrad was born in Vienna and lived in 10 European countries before settling in the United States. She speaks German, French and Italian fluently and "can get along in a number of other languages."

She started her own company, Evelyn Konrad Associates, because she wanted to be in corporate public relations. "Nobody would give me a job. Corporate PR, not for a girl, they'd say."

"I talked to one guy and he asked me what accounts I had. I told him that if I had any accounts, I wouldn't need a job, but that if he hired me, I knew I could get the accounts for him."

"Then I thought, gee, why am I going to do this for him? So I had a big announcement in the newspapers about being in business and the day it came out, I got my first account," she explained.

She said her business had gradually shifted from corporate public relations to management consulting. Today, her firm works mainly in the financial and other service fields on strategies to increase profits for corporations. One of her firm's specialties is developing new markets overseas.

Ms. Konrad had her first short story published in "Seventeen" magazine when she was 18 years old. She has written hundreds of business articles for magazines such as "Fortune" and "Business Horizons," but hadn't considered writing a novel until an agent promised she'd sell it.

Her first novel, "Indiscretions," is the story of a brilliant and beautiful Wall Street executive named Francesca Curry. Her second novel is to be published in 1980.

Ms. Konrad says that when she works on a novel, she writes during the early morning hours, then goes to her office. After office hours, she either goes to school or does volunteer work. She says her husband is equally busy, "but we do, generally, at least, three, four, or five times a week, have dinner together at 7:30."

Ms. Konrad has no recipes for success. "I think we all have dimensions and many abilities and we can develop them," she says.

She avoids the "dress for success" prescriptions but believes in the fine points of diplomacy and self-assertion for women who want to enjoy the success she has.

"What you do," she said, "is to find out what qualifications are needed for a job and you go out and get them. You've got to have skills. You need training and you need to knock on a lot of doors."

"Success comes when you know your material, know your stuff, understand the needs of the people you're dealing with, and present it wisely and well," she said.

("Indiscretions" is published by The Dial Press.)

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Sept. 7, 1979

This coming year could be more enterprising and resourceful than you may have been in the past. This could be partly due to the influence of an aggressive person who comes into your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be dependent upon anybody else's financial support or help today. Have faith in yourself. You are quite capable of achieving things on your own. Discover with whom you best get along romantically by sending for your Astro-Graph Letter that begins anew with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Guard against a tendency today to dominate those with whom you associate. Your inner resolve could make you a trifle more overpowering than you'd like to be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) No grass will grow under your feet today. You are a bundle of energy and will use every bit of it to get all your tasks out of the way efficiently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might begin your weekend a little early because of a strong desire to socialize today. If you can't find pals in the regular places, you'll have no qualms about looking for new playgrounds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you are feeling a bit high-strung today, don't take it out on the family. Instead, try to busy yourself with projects utilizing all that energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your mental faculties are active and alert today. Put them to good use on your correspondence or communicating in other ways.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Material goals should be your primary target today. Express yourself by seeking ingenious or creative ways to obtain your desires.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Boldness and determination make you a force to be reckoned with today. Once you set your mind to something there isn't too much that'll stop you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In your own quiet way you can get more done today than a lot of people who have more push and shove. Your unpretentious strategy is the answer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Better look for your more active and daring friends to pal around with today. You won't be in the mood to sit around doing nothing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A strong will and desire to get ahead urges you to tackle bold activities today. It wouldn't hurt, however, to seek the cooperation of others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There won't be any doubt as to how you stand on issues today. You have strong opinions and will make no bones about expressing them.

Joanna Lumley in 'The New Avengers'

LONDON (AP) — Although it has been two years since "The New Avengers" ceased production, Joanna Lumley can't escape the shadow of her character, Purdy. But rather than complain about type-casting, she laments the two couldn't stay together longer.
 Miss Lumley filmed 26 episodes of the series with Patrick Macnee, who played dapper super-sleuth John Steed, and Gareth Hunt, who portrayed agent Mike Gambit. The show was filmed on three occasions in the 1960s, with Macnee operating opposite female agents Honor Blackman, Diana Rigg and Linda Thorson.
 "I'd love to have done another 13 and really cracked it," Miss Lumley said in a recent interview at her apartment in London's Holland Park area. "All three of us would have loved to — under very different circumstances. We wanted script control."
 The cast was disturbed that "a lot of the spoof humor" had been written out of the series, which began in 1963 with Macnee and Miss Blackman taking a highbrow poke at James Bond-type films.
 There have been rumors aplenty that "The New Avengers" would be resurrected, but so far nothing concrete. "BS was said to be considering additional shootings for its 'Late Movie' package, but later decided on "The New Saint," based on the popular 1960s series starring Roger Moore.
 Macnee's Steed hasn't changed since 1963. He was always impeccably dressed, complete with cane and steel bowler, and abhorred weapons. "So that left Gareth and me endlessly blasting people's heads off," Miss Lumley said.
 "I was awfully angry that we tried to kind of sneak into the 'Starsky and Hutch' area," she added. "The Avengers" has got to be British and umbrellas and rain and OK behavior, and I thought we'd rather gone off the feeling that Diana and Patrick got, with very tight scripts and very bizarre sort of things."

because of the danger it would subject them to. Morrison, however, admits that there is no fool-proof way of screening potential patients without a doctor's prescription or diagnosis.

"If they have a bad heart — sometimes you go ahead and treat them anyway without a prescription," he says. "Sometime they bring their doctor along with them — well, that's the first thing you ask them when they come in (rare you well) — hate to say this, but what we might go by is really how bad they'll feel."

Though there may be some doubt about Fred Andrews' ailment, there is no doubt about how bad he feels. And on Aug. 22 he takes the first of what will be 10 consecutive daily hour-long hyperbaric oxygen treatments.

Depending on the treatment day on which they are asked, Morrison and Sharon Chandler tell this reporter that Andrews is being treated for bronchial and sinus congestion, Hodgkin's disease, emphysema or asthma.

The next day, as Mr. Andrews prepares for his first treatment, he hands his wife his watch and pocket change. Before he removes his shoes, Morrison drops down in front of him and pulls up Andrews' pant legs and pulls down a sock.

"Have you ever had any trouble with circulation?" Morrison says. "Look here —" he points to some bluish veins — "Look, all of this will be gone in a few days. The increased oxygen will get all that."

Before Andrews enters the chamber for the first time, Sharon takes his waist measurement, though she does not write it down. "The treatments should bring down the swelling in the middle," she says.

Morrison also tells Mrs. Andrews that the treatments will remove the "crow's feet" from around her eyes.

Locked in the chamber, Andrews is slowly taken "down" to an equivalent of about 29 feet below sea level. Like many patients, he has a bit of trouble "equalizing" — which means the increased atmospheric pressure hurts the eardrums for a while.

Once Andrews is settled and breathing fairly comfortably, Mrs. Andrews tells Morrison, this reporter, and Sharon Chandler that Mr. Andrews was diagnosed for Hodgkin's disease five years ago. She says he spent five weeks in an Amarillo hospital before there was a remission of the disease.

The reporter asks Morrison what Hodgkin's disease is. When Morrison indicates that he does not know, Mrs. Chandler fetches a medical dictionary and reads a definition, which describes Hodgkin's as a disease "of unknown etiology producing enlargement of the lymphoid tissue, spleen and liver, with invasion of other tissues."

After Mrs. Chandler finishes the reading, Morrison nods slightly and says, "It'll all correct itself."

During the hour that Fred Andrews — with an occasional break for spasms of coughing — is breathing pure oxygen, Morrison turns from therapy to business.

He tells Mrs. Andrews that the hyperbaric oxygen chamber sells for only $37,400 and that there would be no problem in finding a Canadian physician to "sign for you" if they wanted to purchase it.

Registered as a medical device, federal law restricts the sale of the device to physicians or licensed health care professionals.

"Well," says Mrs. Andrews, "we have talked about how convenient it would be to have one of our own."

"You could put it in a room there, right in the corner of your (appliance) store," Morrison says. "You'd get your money back on that thing in three or four months. Dr. Abraham would send you patients. And don't they have a nursing home there? You could get a lot of that business, too."

Although many local physicians recoil at Morrison's mix of therapy and salesmanship, many of his patient-customers find nothing unethical in the combination of roles.

James Bowers, a former Panpan now living in Phoenix, and a paraplegic who has been confined to a wheelchair for four years, braved the cold to become one of Morrison's first patients at the Craven Street garage in the winter of 1977-78.

Bowers was treated without success, but he said he paid Morrison $16,000 down on an HBO chamber, which he took to Phoenix, hoping to establish a treatment therapy similar to Morrison's.

"He thought it would improve the circulation in my legs," says Bowers, who said he stopped after about 12 treatments. "It didn't help me much. I think if I'd taken 30 treatments like he said, it might have helped me."

Bowers says he took the HBO chamber he purchased from Morrison to Arizona, thinking that the large number of senior citizens in the Phoenix area would provide a steady clientele.

But the operation didn't take hold. Like Morrison, Bowers found that local doctors wouldn't co-operate.

"They didn't go much for it," he says. "You know how these doctors are — they're kinda funny that way... if they can't cut in on something."

Bowers says he lost his $16,000 down payment to Morrison plus another $9,000 trying to make the device take hold in Phoenix. He eventually returned the chamber to Morrison, who, he says, refused to give him his money back.

"I asked him about that," says Bowers, who says he has no hard feelings over the incident. "But he wouldn't give it back. It was my own fault. I really thought it would go over, but it never took hold."

Meanwhile, the Andrews', while not ready to purchase a chamber of their own, are sold on the treatments after the first day.

And after the second treatment, Andrews reports that he "slept like a baby" for the first time in almost two months. "It was worse after the first treatment," he says. "But that's the way they said it would be. It'll take at least three treatments to make a difference."

The exact number of treatments Andrews will have to take before he is effectively treated at Lamex is as variable as the ailments for which he is supposedly being treated.

After the first treatment, Morrison suggests a necessary three treatments; after the second treatment, he says "five or six." Andrews third visit brings an estimate of eight from Morrison. And after Andrews' fourth treatment, Morrison suggests "about ten — to get all that infection cleared out of there."

Asked how he explained the daily change in the recommended number of treatments, Morrison explains that he did not know until after the second treatment that Andrews was suffering from Hodgkin's disease.

"The same thing happened with this lady who came in here with Parkinson's disease," he says. "First she told me she just had a nervous condition, and I said, 'Oh, it's just nerves.' I said, 'Man, that's a cinch — three is all you need.' So I give her two treatments, and then they say, 'You know she has Parkinson's disease, you know, and that's the first I ever heard about it. Same thing with Andrews. Same damn thing.'"

"They came here, asking for treatment for emphysema, see?" says Sharon.

"Yea, emphysema," says Morrison. "And I said, 'Listen, it's not gonna cure it, but it's sure gonna make it feel a hell of a lot better.' Then after the second treatment, they came up with that Hodgkin's disease — well, that's a different story altogether."

Morrison, however, was informed about the Hodgkin's disease on the first day of treatment. And during Andrews' third treatment, Mrs. Chandler told this reporter that Andrews was being treated for asthma.

Andrews says, however, that he has never been diagnosed as having asthma or emphysema. Yet whatever his ailment, he reports, after seven treatments, that he "feels a whole lot better. I'm not gaspin' for breath anymore. And I feel like when I cough there isn't that little irritation in my chest before the cough," he says.

After his 10 treatments, Andrews says, "I still get to coughing quite a bit, but I'm pretty good. I'm a whole lot better than I was."

Andrews says, however, that he is going to have the surgery to remove the polyp from his nose. But he thinks the treatments have been effective and says he may return "for one or two more" to "keep in shape."

Andrews, like many of Morrison's patients, has less confidence in the medical profession than the medical profession has in Morrison. To him, the treatment is relative.

"Doctors will charge you for practicing, too," Andrews jokes with an edge of seriousness. "They're practicing physicians. They practice on you to see if you get well. They charge you to practice. Only they get a license to do it."

DALLAS (AP) — The superintendent of the Dallas Independent School District wants to fire one school official, has the resignation of another in hand and plans to give lie detector tests to eight others, according to a Dallas newspaper.

The Dallas Times-Herald said Superintendent Linus Wright has made plans to discuss the situation with the school board in a closed session Friday.

The moves are part of an ongoing investigation within the school district, concerning allegations of irregularities at the DISD service center, awarding of contracts without competitive bids and improper gifts to school employees.

Wright said any evidence of criminal activity among school officials or employees would be turned over to the district attorney after a school board review, according to the newspaper.

DALLAS (AP) — Three school officials have testified the Dallas Independent School District does a poor job of educating Mexican-Americans, and admitting illegal aliens would only make the problem worse.

The trio testified in federal court Tuesday supporting DISD's argument against the proposed enrollment of school-age children who are in the U.S. illegally.

The trial stems from a lawsuit filed in April by 19 illegal aliens, challenging state law and DISD policy prohibiting illegal aliens from attending public schools.

School officials have estimated there are 5,000 such children in the Dallas area. Plaintiffs in the suit say the number is closer to 2,000.

DALLAS (AP) — Four investigators with the U.S. Postal Service have joined an investigation into alleged corruption in a Dallas housing project, according to a federal prosecutor.

The postal inspectors are working with FBI agents to investigate the federally-funded project, said assistant U.S. attorney Dan Guthrie, who is directing the investigation.

Guthrie said the first duty of the postal inspectors will be to subpoena 116 contracts awarded by the Dallas Housing Authority during the project.

"Because of the widespread allegations and, I might add, indications of fraud, I felt it was necessary to commit additional personnel to the investigation," Guthrie said.

The federal investigation began last fall with questions about possible fraud within the DHA security force, then was expanded to include the authority's entire program dealing with federally-subsidized rental units.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M engineers are trying to save some of winter's cold and release it during the summer as a new form of air-conditioning. Researchers tried it during the past winter and summer by pumping cold water into underground aquifers during the winter and then pumping it out again during the summer to cool things off.

But scientists say the first year of the experiment was only a partial success. For one thing, heavy rains caused warm water from the surface to flow into the aquifer and mix with the winter water. The project recovered only 20 to 25 percent of the cold water's energy, while 40 to 45 percent was hoped for.

Engineers will try again this winter.

DALLAS (AP) — A grand jury has indicted Julia Belle Williams of nearby De Soto on charges of shooting to death her husband, a Dallas policeman, in July. The victim in the case, Sgt. Elton Wayne Williams, was the most decorated police officer on the Dallas force.

Mrs. Williams was released on $15,000 bond.

Williams, 41, had patrolled Dallas streets since he joined the force in 1958 and was known by fellow officers for his heroic exploits. He was shot several times with a .44-caliber Magnum revolver in his bedroom.

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Court of Civil Appeals has denied the appeal of a blind woman trying to retain custody of her 4-year-old daughter. The court ruled Tuesday that Linda Joyce Rains cannot properly care for the little girl, Sarannah, who has been in the custody of Mrs. Rains or her Arkansas parents since a 1976 divorce.

"We appreciate and commend Linda's desire to bring up her daughter, but the difficulties lie in the mother's blindness and in the child's extremely tender age," the appeals court said. Mrs. Rains said she would appeal to a higher court.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The city got an unexpected present Tuesday. The Federal Community Development Agency mailed Lubbock a check that was supposed to be for $43,000. But city officials were amazed when they saw that the amount was blank.

A quick call to Austin confirmed the mistake, and Treasury Department officials requested the blank check be returned immediately by registered mail, marked "Do not open in mail room."

City Manager Larry Cunningham said he will deliver the check personally.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Travis County grand jury Tuesday returned no indictment against two white Austin policemen and said "excessive force was not used" during their fatal struggle with Gril Couch, a black man.

The grand jury report, which came after a five-week inquiry into the East Austin incident, said the death of Couch, 41, from a broken larynx was accidental.

Couch choked to death Aug. 1 outside an East 11th street cafe during a struggle with Claude Hooker and Dunny Donovan, two out-of-uniform policemen. The officers said they were attempting to arrest Couch after he caused a disturbance in the cafe.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state's newly formed Aircraft Pooling Board has decided that the state should own instead of leasing aircraft.

The board held its first meeting Tuesday after receiving legislative authority to bring uniform control to the almost two dozen airplanes owned or leased by various state agencies.

Bob Cargill, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's representative on the board, was named by Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, board chairman, as "a committee of one to work up some guidelines" for the pooling board to go by.

Cargill said one immediate step would be an information-sharing service where state agency planes headed for various destinations with seats available would make that fact known to other agencies.

DALLAS (AP) — Two jail prisoners remained at large today after overpowering a deputy and escaping from a Dallas County sheriff's van.

The deputy was robbed of $12 and left in the van bound in his own handcuffs, a sheriff's department spokesman said. He was not injured.

The sheriff's office identified the escapees as Cecil Marrs, 25, and Lionel Craig Young, 29. Marrs was awaiting transfer to Huntsville on a burglary conviction and Young was awaiting trial on charges of auto theft.

A sheriff's office spokesman said the two fugitives were helping unload a laundry truck when they jumped deputy Michael J. Fotherree about 10:15 p.m. Tuesday.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Chairman John Poerner of the Texas Railroad Commission said Wednesday proposed federal regulations on underground water injection could cut oil production by 24 million barrels a year in North, North Central and East Texas.

Poerner said the loss in production would cost the Texas treasury $24 million a year. It also would reduce gasoline production by 1.2 million gallons a day, he added in a statement.

Poerner made his assessments after reviewing proposals by the Environmental Protection Agency on the injection of water into formations beneath oil producing areas.

The commission staff has stated the EPA proposals are "too broad and inclusive when compared to the requirements of the (federal) Safe Drinking Water Act."

Storms that have changed history

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mangled bodies, smashed homes and ruined crops are the products of Hurricane David, now clawing at the Atlantic Coast. But it is only the latest chapter in a chronicle of violent storms that have altered American history.

The United States has been relatively lucky so far this year, but in the past the tragedy visited on the Dominican Republic by David has been equaled or eclipsed in this country.

The worst occurred on Sept. 9, 1900, when waters from the Gulf of Mexico, driven by a hurricane, swept over the city of Galveston, Texas, taking an estimated 6,000 lives.

That storm reduced Galveston to "a city of wrecked homes and streets choked with debris sandwiched with six thousand corpses, a city...with the slime of the ocean on every spot and in every house," according to Clarence Ousley of the Galveston Tribune.

The hurricane that swept away much of that gracious southern city, like David and others, originated over the Atlantic, swept through the Caribbean then, unlike David, turned west to Texas instead of north.

That doesn't mean Florida is immune from the deadly storms, as 1928 was to show.

That year an early September hurricane swept out of the Atlantic, turned north and crashed into Florida northwest of Palm Beach.

The National Weather Service says 1,836 Americans died in the Lake Okechobee hurricane as it was christened in the days before such storms were given the names of women and men — and throughout the Caribbean the death toll has been estimated as high as 5,000.

A decade later, New England lost 600 lives as a hurricane swept north. Other hurricanes have taken a heavy toll throughout the eastern United States.

Indeed, Don Sarreals, a weather service meteorologist in Washington, expressed fear Tuesday that residents of the Appalachian mountains may not be sufficiently wary of David.

While coastal residents have heeded warnings and taken shelter, he said, David will also bring heavy rains and possible flash flooding along the Appalachian chain and a severe hazard may exist there.

The effects of hurricanes, nature's greatest storms, have reached beyond their immediate tragedy in the past.

For example, a hurricane in 1766 crushed the farms on the Caribbean island of Martinique, ruining the once-wealthy planter

Joseph-Gaspard Tascher. His daughter returned to France to seek her fortune and met and married an ambitious young military officer.

So a hurricane led one young woman to leave colonial life and become Empress Josephine, wife of Napoleon Bonaparte.

It was also a hurricane that brought Alexander Hamilton into history. His description of such a storm in a letter to his father so impressed local planters in the Caribbean that they collected money to send the young man to America.

And in the late 1770s and early 1780s a series of storms devastated British warships operating along the coast of the rebellious colonies. Some historians have suggested the final British surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown was in part due to British navy's reluctance to engage the French fleet off Yorktown, during the fall hurricane season.
