Mine detonates

SUEZ, Egypt — Three children died and 10 were wounded when a landmine from the 1973 Arab-Israeli war detonated as they were playing with it, a police official said Sunday. He said the children, from a town northeast of Cairo, were playing soccer when they found the mine. Not knowing what it was, they picked it up and started playing with it.

'B.C.' party

ROCKFORD, Ill. — Ever wonder what your wake will be like? Irene "Tippy" Lathom has been to hers — and she had a great time. Ms. Lathom, 72, invited nearly 200 relatives and friends to a "B.C." or "before cremation" party Saturday night. The soiree was billed in a flier as the "premiere show" before the "grand finale." Ms. Lathom said her three daughters got upset recently when she told them she wanted to be cremated in Florida, where she was living at the time, and that she wanted no wake. Under a compromise, Ms. Lathom agreed she would be cremated in Rockford and her remains would be placed in an urn atop her mother's grave. And she would have a wake, but only if she could attend.

Plane slams into building

Israeli cargo jet engines malfunction

■ Aircraft crashes into apartment complex; Dutch police fear up to 200 people may have died.

Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — An Israeli cargo jet with engine trouble crashed into an apartment complex Sunday night shortly after takeoff and triggered a firestorm that raced through a crowded suburb.

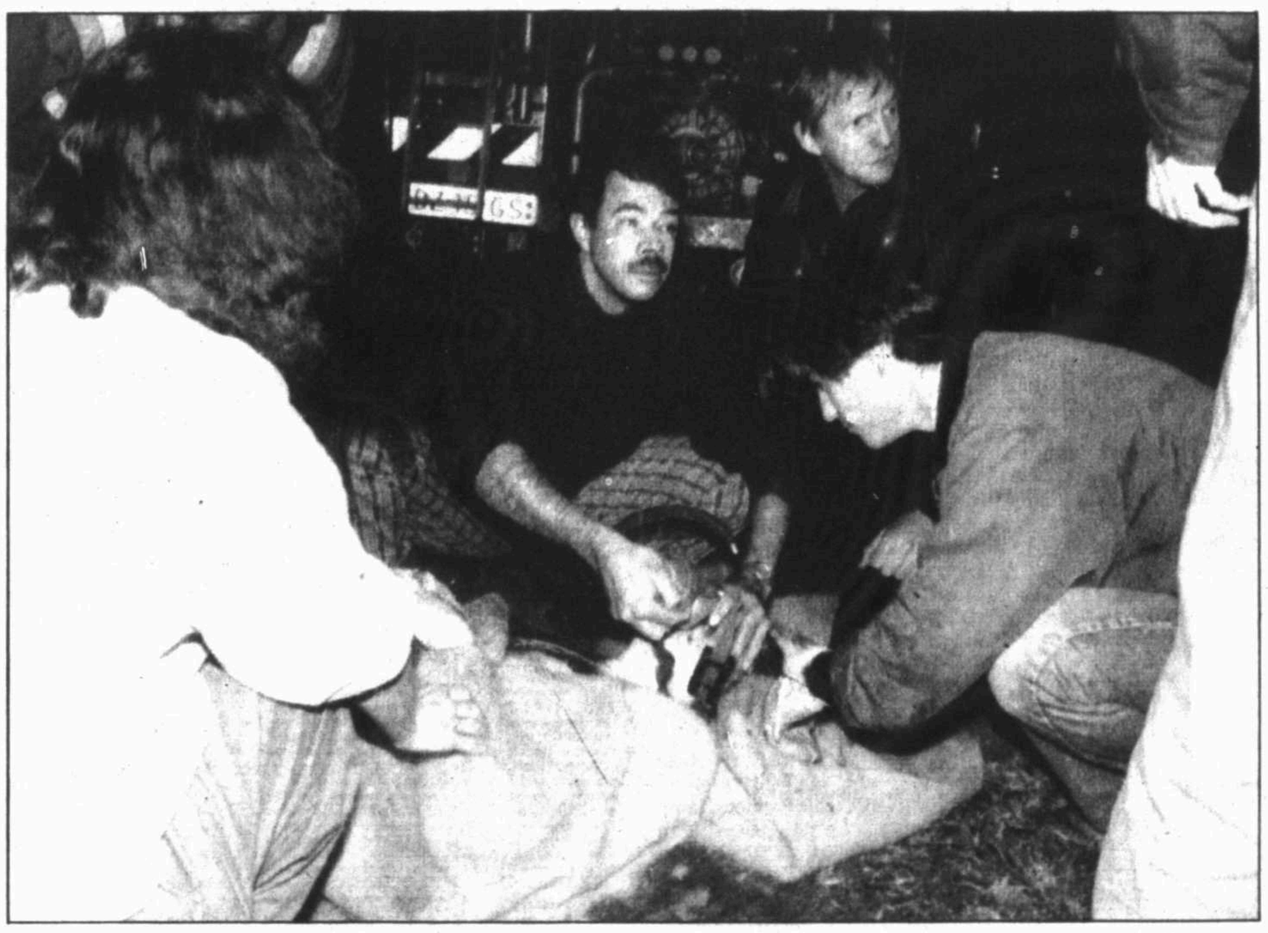

At least 12 bodies were recovered, but Dutch television said police feared up to 200 people may have died. The El Al Boeing 747 carried a three-man crew and one woman passenger, all of whom were killed, the carrier said.

It was the Netherlands' worst air disaster and the first crash in El Al's 44-year history, an airline spokesman said.

The pilot was trying to wrestle the jumbo jet back to Schiphol Airport after both engines on the same wing died, airline officials said. An official refused to rule out sabotage as a possible cause.

Local pro-life supporters form chain

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Pro-life supporters peacefully stated their case Sunday afternoon by standing along Midkiff Road while holding anti-abortion signs.

The local "Life Chain" of about 50 people joined an estimated one million others from across the country and 100,000 in Canada.

Isidro Chavez stood in the chain with his wife, Flora, and two daughters, Angelica and Amy.

"We believe in the fundamental rights of life. We are Christians and we feel that God created us for a reason. Abortion is flat-out murder," he said.

Organizer Steve Becker said the chain "is an opportunity to take a prayerful, peaceful, legal stand for life and against the killing of unborn children."

The demonstration started at 2:30 p.m. Sunday after the crowd gathered in the Midland Park Mall parking lot.

Jane Hellinghausen, director of Education and Community Development at Planned Parenthood, called the pro-life supporters unrealistic.

Microsoft's Bill Gates tops Forbes' richest list

■ Midland's Scharbauer, Wagner and Brown are once again on the list.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Computer software inventor and college dropout Bill Gates replaced entertainment mogul John Kluge atop the Forbes annual list of richest Americans, the magazine said Sunday.

At age 36, Gates becomes the youngest person to reach the No. 1 ranking. The founder of Microsoft Corp., the world's largest personal computer software company, makes money from each machine that uses MS-DOS, the most widely used personal computer software.

Midland's richest includes oilman and rancher Clarence Scharbauer Jr., 67, with $375 million; oilman Jack E. Brown, 67, with $350 million and oilman Cyril Wagner Jr., 58, with $350 million.

Gates' $6.3 billion fortune grew by $1.5 billion this year, while Kluge's net worth dropped about $400 million to $5.5 bil-

Perot leads the list of wealthy Texans

Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot heads a magazine's annual list of richest Texans that also includes an investor in the city and a Fort Worth family of investors.

Forbes magazine released the names Sunday of the Texans who made the publication's annual list of richest Americans.

Perot, who entered the presidential race last week as an independent candidate, heads the Texas list with $2.4 billion, the magazine said.

The 62-year-old Perot is the founder of Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems. After selling EDS to General Motors in 1984 for $2.5 billion, Perot started a new computer service company in 1988 called Perot Systems.

Perot is also involved in real estate and other investments through a holding company called the Perot Group.

Legislators are unsure if Bush will sign tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators waited Sunday for a signal from President Bush on whether he would accept a compromise tax bill with expanded Individual Retirement Accounts, new urban aid programs and some relatively minor tax increases.

Although the $27 billion bill includes several provisions that he favors, there were indications Bush would use the tax increases as a reason to veto the measure. The campaigning president has renewed his promise not to raise taxes and daily criticizes Democratic nominee Bill Clinton's record of agreeing to comparable packages.

Two of Bush's senior advisers sidestepped opportunities to endorse the bill.

White House Budget Director Richard G. Darman referred to the bill as another Democratic effort to raise taxes. He declined on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" to say whether the legislation will become law.

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Sunday "technically I was right" in insisting last fall that the nation's economy was not in recession but said he should have acknowledged then that "there's a hell of a lot of people hurting."

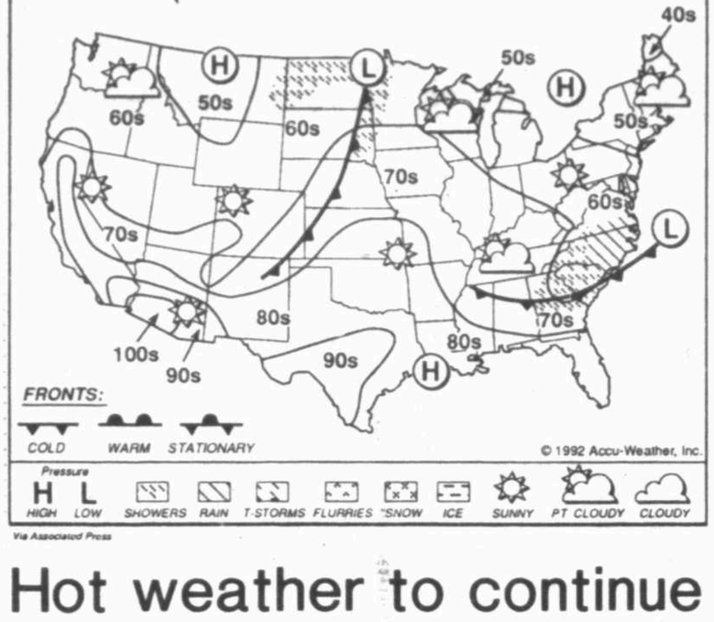

Speaking in an interview taped at the White House for CNN's "Larry King Live" talk show Sunday night, the president also asserted that Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton "got ahold of" an Iraqi ambassador, at a point prior to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, to encourage Saddam Hussein to buy U.S. grain on credit.

CRASH: Mayor says 2 buildings set ablaze, at least 50 apartments gutted apartment building, spewing flames and burning wreckage over a wide area of Duivendrecht (pronounced DOW-ven-drecht), six miles short of the airport south of the city.

Residents searched frantically for family members in the hellish landscape of fire, smoke and chaos that shattered a clear and cool evening. Some people jumped out of the windows of their apartments to escape the inferno, radio reported.

The fire was under control but still burning five hours after the crash.

"It crashed right into the building. I saw the wings and all ignited. It exploded into one huge sea of fire," said resident Mark van der Linden.

The plane tore a hole six apartments wide and nine floors deep at the juncture of the two wings of the complex and set them ablaze. Mayor Ed van Thijn said at least 50 apartments were gutted.

Helicopters with searchlights illuminated the scene for hundreds of rescue workers. Police reported looting in a nearby shopping mall.

The Amsterdam Medical Center Hospital said it treated at least 27 burn victims.

Airline officials dismissed early suspicion of a terrorist strike, which could have jeopardized sensitive Middle East peace talks.

But asked about sabotage and terrorism, El Al spokesman Nachman Klieman later said it was too soon to rule out any possible causes of the engine failures. "We have no details, the investigation has not taken place yet and until it does we cannot say anything," Klieman said.

The pilot reported breakdowns in engines No. 3 and 4 on the same wing minutes after taking off for Tel Aviv, said Rafi Harlev, El Al's executive director, at a Jerusalem news conference.

The pilot was given permission to return to the airport, about 10 miles south of Amsterdam, Harlev said.

The plane was carrying 114 tons of cargo, he said. Yisrael Cherbin, cargo manager for El Al in Amsterdam, said it was "a regular commercial load."

Harlev said the plane was "in very good condition" and had had no previous problems. It was made in 1979, the most recent jumbo model belonging to the airline, he said.

Jack Gamble of Boeing Commercial Airplane Group in Seattle said the 747-200 cargo plane had landed 9,873 times and logged 44,736 flight hours by the end of June, "about normal" for a freighter.

Gamble said the plane had been fitted with Pratt & Whitney JT9D-7J engines, the standard model. He said it had no history of problems that required the manufacturer's attention.

"That airplane really is flyable on one engine," Gamble said. "They should be able to maneuver (on two). I don't know how tightly, though."

The plane flew over a lake to dump fuel and crashed about 6:30 p.m. (12:30 p.m. CDT) on the turn to make a new approach to Schiphol, one of Europe's busiest airfields.

"I saw the plane going nose-down with the left wing up and the right wing down behind the next flat (apartment) building," said a witness to the crash, photographer Peter de Neef.

"The engines were smoking," de Neef said, "and then I heard the pilot trying to pull up and then I didn't see it and I saw sparks coming in the air."

Israeli Transport Minister Yisrael Kessar was setting up a joint airline-government commission to investigate, Israel TV reported.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin sent a message of condolence to Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers. "Our hearts are with you at this moment and we mourn the Dutch and Israeli casualties," Rabin said.

Rescuers search area for survivors

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — By the eerie illumination of helicopter-borne strobe lights, rescuers searched the flaming rubble of apartment buildings after an El Al cargo jet crashed in a fireball into a residential suburb.

Most residents of the Groeneveen and Kruitberg apartment blocks had just finished dinner when the Boeing 747 plunged out of the night sky Sunday and sheared a nine-story canyon through the junction of their V-shaped complex.

The impact shortly before 6:30 p.m. crumbled 80 apartments, shooting a tangle of steel and concrete into a courtyard behind.

"It exploded into one huge sea of fire," said resident Mark van der Linden.

The fireball raced through the 239-apartment complex in the working-class suburb of Duivendrecht (DOW-ven-drecht). The hellish scene quickly became a tangle of rescue and fire vehicles, onlookers and frantic relatives searching for loved ones.

'It exploded into one huge sea of fire.'

— resident Mark van der Linden

Against the background roar of the flames could be heard the screams of hysteria, and a pall of choking white smoke blanketed the area.

While police fought to keep back onlookers and desperate relatives, others took advantage of the chaos to loot a neighboring shopping center.

Dutch Navy helicopters clattered overhead beaming flood lights on the wreckage as rescue workers dug around the fringes of a mountain of rubble for survivors. Chemical fires smoldering under the heap slowed the rescuers.

Survivors huddled in shock at a shelter set up in another one of the drab concrete apartment blocks that make up this low-income housing district.

Municipal authorities made an emergency call for blood donations.

Jane Benschop had left her three children in the apartment complex to make a telephone call down the street.

"All of a sudden I heard it and then there was this fire and smoke and then I thought 'My God, my children are in there,'" she said.

She rushed back to her apartment, 10 doors down from the impact point, and pulled her children to safety.

Other residents were jumping from their balconies to escape the flames.

Molly Maulabaks, who lives in an adjacent apartment block, saw a woman throw an infant from a fourth story apartment into the arms of a rescue worker.

"This is horrible. It could have easily happened to me," said Maulabaks.

Keith Stevens just moved last week from Brighton, England, into another neighboring building, and was watching a video film about a plane disaster, "then the real thing happened."

Many of the thousands who rushed to the area were looking for excitement.

"I was in a video store looking for something exciting and behind me on the television they said that this happened," said Jack Tiben.

Television news bulletins frequently interrupted normal programing to give updates on the nation's worst-ever air disaster.

lion, the magazine estimated.

Kluge, 78, had held the top spot on the magazine's annual list for three years since Wal-Mart stores founder Sam Walton split his wealth among his family in 1989.

Five members of the Walton family, whose patriarch died in April, occupied spots three through seven with $5.1 billion each.

Presidential candidate Ross Perot, 62, who built his fortune providing computer services, landed in 19th place on the list with an estimated net worth of $2.4 billion. That's up from the magazine's $2.2 billion estimate last year.

Others have estimated Perot's net worth at $3.3 billion, a figure his campaign staff has called accurate. Forbes said it believes the higher estimate is inflated.

The magazine that celebrates wealth, offering advice on how to invest money and spend the returns, has been compiling the list for 11 years.

Overall, the richest Americans got an average $31 million richer last year and the total net worth for the top 400 rose 4.3 percent to $300.7 billion, Forbes said. By comparison, wages and salaries for Americans in general rose 2.9 percent in the past year, slightly less than inflation, according to the Labor Department.

BUSH: President predicts that Cuba's Castro will fall

pressed for more loans to Iraq despite information that Iraq was using foreign help to develop nuclear weapons, Bush attempted — without offering details — to pull Clinton into the controversy.

"Do you know who wanted to make loans, grain credit loans, and got ahold of ... the Iraqi ambassador, on grain credits? Gov. Clinton," Bush said. He added: "I think he met with him and wanted, you know, was pleased that the U.S. agricultural loans, we were making agricultural loans."

Bush did not elaborate.

Clinton quickly denounced Bush's accusation as "pathetic." He said he had met with the Iraqi ambassador to the United States in September 1986 when the ambassador paid Clinton a courtesy call while he was in Little Rock to give speeches to the Arkansas Rice Council and the Little Rock Committe on Foreign Relations.

"That shows you how desperate and pathetic they are," Clinton said at the Kinston, N.C., airport. "They will not take responsibility for what they have done. It is a sad day that he is so desperate that he would equate a few minutes courtesy call by an ambassador six years ago that occurred before the facts in question."

In discussing the U.S. economy's role in the presidential campaign, Bush said that the general public has a mistaken impression about the economy's strength.

"Yes, things have been tough, but they haven't been that tough," he said. "There's been some encouraging things. I can click them off for you: interest rates down, inflation down, businesses ready, poised for recovery."

"So when I said there isn't a recession last fall, technically I was right. But I should have done it recognizing that there's a hell of a lot of people hurting, and I feel it and I knew it then and I know it now," the president added.

Bush was referring to the technical definition of a recession: two consecutive business quarters of decline in the Gross National Product, the widest measure of economic activity. He said GNP has grown anemically for five straight quarters.

Bush acknowledged that voters' discontent with the economy is hurting him in the polls.

"Technically I was right, but don't tell that to the guy that's unemployed, or don't tell it to the family that has a job and wonders if they're going to have it tomorrow. So I could have handled that better," Bush said.

The hour-long interview was taped in the East Sitting Room of the first family's private quarters. King said Bush had agreed to appear on his show at CNN studios sometime before Election Day for a live interview that would include calls from viewers.

Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Al Gore, are scheduled to appear on King's show and take viewers' calls this evening.

Earlier Sunday, in comments aimed at Hispanic voters, Bush said that in a second term he would increase U.S. pressure on Cuba to abandon communism. He predicted that Fidel Castro "will fall of his own weight."

"He's still denying human rights there, he is still putting the arm on his people and crushing them down, and he can't go on," Bush said in an interview with a Spanish-language television talk show to be broadcast by Telemundo today.

On Cuba, Bush said that with the Soviet Union gone — and with it Castro's main source of economic and political support — "he can't stand against the tide, he can't swim against the tide, he can't survive. And so he will fall of his own weight."

Bush said that after the fall of Soviet communism he received "a lot of counsel" to meet with Castro or make some gestures of compromise designed to ease the economic strain on the Cuban population. He didn't say who offered the advice.

"And I say no, we're going to keep the pressure on, we're going to increase it until Cuba has exactly the same opportunity and freedom that other countries in this hemisphere have gained since I've been president of the United States," he said. Bush did not specify how he would increase pressure on Cuba.

year-old Sid Richardson Bass. The men, both of Fort Worth, are investors with $1.7 billion each, according to the magazine.

abuse victims," she said. "Abortion is an unfortunate reality of this world. But as long as there are women experiencing unplanned pregnancies, we need to provide them this alternative."

"Our groups do more than what the life chain does. We provide these women services and education."

National Life Chain Sunday '92 was expected to be America's largest pro-life event in history. Each chain was organized by local Christian leaders and united local churches, both Protestant and Catholic.

And although the chain is religious-based, all pro-life supporters were encouraged to attend.

Please Let Me Live, a pro-life group based in Yuba City, Calif., formed the nation's first chain in 1987. According to founder Royce Dunn, the life chain is not a rally or political event but rather aims to minister to the victims.

Cindy McCann carried a small sign reading "Consider Adoption" while walking to the rally.

"I think it's important for women to have someone to talk to. Women who have had abortions need support," she said. "Abortion is a heavy burden for one person to shoulder alone. I'm here to provide more shoulders."

TAX: Increases would fund programs

(From 1A)

Reminded that the bill contains more than two dozen tax increases, Darman said, "It isn't a tax increase bill if he's going to sign it. ... The president will not raise taxes. ... Period."

Housing Secretary Jack Kemp said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" that the bill's urban-aid program, designed to respond to the Los Angeles riots, "isn't going to get the job done. ... It's too little, too late."

The official word from a White House spokesman who would not be identified: "We have to see it to evaluate it before we come out with a position."

Clinton told reporters he, too, has not had a chance to analyze the bill but added, "There are a lot of good things in this bill. But it does raise taxes to pay for good things ...."

"There's no question that if he (Bush) signs it, it's inconsistent with his position, which is that he is not going to raise any taxes, even though we all know he's raised a slew of them," Clinton said.

Negotiators, led by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., agreed on major outlines of the bill Saturday night and worked out final details Sunday. They dropped two Senate-passed tax increases on the well-to-do in an effort to meet Republicans' most obvious objection.

That still left numerous targeted tax increases in the bill, including a few that Bush himself had proposed last winter. Among the tax increases recommended by Bush were those accelerating the estimated tax payments from corporations and higher-income individuals and requiring securities dealers to pay tax on the market value of their inventories.

Congress added many of its own tax increases. They include delaying a scheduled drop in top estate-tax rates; limiting deductions for moving expenses, and raising withholding from some gambling winnings.

The tax increases would pay for dozens of special tax reductions and improvements in social programs. They include: designating 50 "enterprise zones" and rewarding investors and businesses that create jobs there; liberalizing tax-deductible IRAs, and renewing a dozen business and individual tax breaks that expired in June 30.

The bill also would repeal the luxury tax on expensive yachts, planes, furs and jewels — but not the tax on high-priced cars. As Bush proposed, it would relax tax rules for investors in real estate and simplify the corporate alternative minimum tax.

Negotiators dropped another Bush proposal, which would have given a $2,500 tax credit to some first-time home buyers.

In every other major tax bill written in recent years, the administration, through Treasury Department officials, played an active role. But this time Treasury took no part at all.

"I haven't heard anything from them from the beginning," Bentsen complained.

Even before Democrats worked out the final terms of the catchall bill, Republicans were showing their discontent.

Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, had shrugged off taking a hand in writing the compromise, saying, "I've been on this committee ... long enough to recognize when a train is moving out."

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas served notice there could be an effort by the GOP to block a final Senate vote on the bill, which could spare Bush the trouble of vetoing it.

Bush ready for spending frenzy as race draws near end

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush has as much as $20 million more than Bill Clinton to spend in the campaign's final month and plans to use his carefully hoarded funds to bankroll an unprecedented month-long media blitz.

Clinton's campaign insists it still has plenty of reserve cash for a final volley of its own — and so does Ross Perot, who is unbound by any legal limits on campaign spending.

An Associated Press review of campaign spending shows that Bush began October with about $49 million left of the $65.5 million the Republicans are allowed to spend on the fall election. Clinton, meanwhile, had between $27 million and $32 million left.

The difference is explained by three factors:

—Clinton by law had to begin spending his legally limited fall campaign money a month earlier than Bush, since the Democrat received his party's nomination in mid-July and the GOP convention wasn't until mid-August.

—Clinton's strategy called for spending more money early on to build a high profile — one that helped him grab the lead he now holds.

—Bush's strategy called for husbanding campaign resources for a $30 million advertising blitz in the final month.

The Clinton campaign says it's spending is right on schedule.

■ More national news/6A

Aides said the Democrat prepaid some of October's media expenses and also will benefit from an unprecedented Democratic Party get-out-the-vote drive and millions of dollars in generic vote-Democrat ads.

"I don't think they'll be running out of money over there. We'll just have a little more to spend down the stretch," said Charles Black, a senior adviser to Bush's campaign.

Spreading a legally limited bankroll over the fall election campaign is an inexact science that historically has caused campaign strategists to pull at their hair, especially in the crucial final days.

"When you start there's always a debate and infighting over how much you spend early on and how much you save until the last weekend. And in the end, you always wish you had more," said Leslie Dach, a senior aide to Democrat Michael Dukakis' failed 1988 bid for the White House.

Bush and Clinton are bound by a $65.5 million spending limit — $55.2 million in government money and $10.3 million from their respective parties. Each agreed to the limit when they accepted full taxpayer financing of their fall campaigns.

Perot's spending is bound by no legal limits because he is personally bankrolling his campaign. Early on, he talked about spending $100 million or more on a White House bid.

Perot, who re-entered the race last week, has been negotiating with the networks to buy half-hour blocks of television time in coming weeks.

"No matter how they budgeted, the question of whether the president or Bill Clinton saved enough money for the end may very well end up depending on how and where Perot spends his money," said Herb Alexander, a University of Southern California campaign finance expert.

Already, the major-party candidates' spending patterns diverge greatly from the 1988 race, when Bush and Dukakis each unleashed about two-thirds of their campaign treasuries in the final month.

Bush, trailing in the polls, is planning a "backloaded" campaign in which money has been saved for a final $30 million advertising campaign, two senior advisers said.

"We're calling it the 30-day blitz," said one Bush adviser, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"We observed a very volatile electorate," said a senior Bush campaign official. "All these polls ... have indicated more voters than ever will be making up their minds in the last two weeks and we believed that and planned a strategy around it."

The Bush campaign reported to the Federal Election Commission that it spent $1 million of its campaign kitty in August. Sources said it spent another $15 million in Reports filed with the FEC show Clinton spent about $10 million of his $55.2 million through August, while the Democratic Party dished out $8.3 million of its $10.3 million in coordinated expenditures.

New polls show Clinton's lead slipping due to Perot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest national polls released over the weekend showed Ross Perot's renewed campaign attracting the support of one in 10 voters, Bill Clinton slipping slightly and President Bush's percentage frozen in the 30s.

Cable News Network reported Sunday that Bill Clinton lost 5 points in a tracking poll that began Sept. 28 — going from 52 percent in the first three-day average to 49 percent and finally to 47 percent.

The candidates' average standing over the weekend in the CNN-USA Today-Gallup Poll was 47 percent for Clinton, 35 percent for Bush and 10 percent for Perot. Clinton's 12-point lead over Bush in the latest tally compared to a 17-point spread registered in the first three-day average when Clinton had a 52-35 advantage over Bush and Perot stood at 7 percent.

The rolling poll of registered voters, which continues daily through the election, has a 3-point margin of error.

A Newsweek poll Thursday and Friday of 752 registered voters put Clinton ahead of Bush 44 percent to 36 percent, with Perot at 14 percent. That 8-point Clinton lead over Bush compared with a 9-point spread registered in the previous week's Newsweek poll — not significantly significant in a poll with a margin of error of 4 points.

Clinton also had comfortable leads in new polls in the battleground states of Michigan and Illinois, which together have 40 electoral votes.

The only new poll with Bush leading was in South Carolina, which no Democratic presidential candidate has carried since Jimmy Carter in 1976. And Bush's 2-point lead there was well within the poll's margin of error.

Here are details:

South Carolina: Bush 41 percent, Clinton 39 percent, Perot 10 percent. KPC Research of Charlotte, N.C. polled 466 registered voters on Sept. 26-29 for The (Columbia) State newspaper and WIS-TV of Columbia. The margin of error is 4.5 points.

Valencia, Baker should get nod

Two important local elections will be decided by Midland County voters this November — who will serve as commissioner of Precinct 3 and who will be the county treasurer.

In the Precinct 3 race, voters have to choose between incumbent Commissioner Louisa Valencia who is completing her first term on the court and Jo Ann Carr, who promises to work toward getting all county departments to work together as a team.

It's no surprise that Ms. Carr has been accused of being handpicked by Sheriff Gary Painter to seek the Precinct 3 position as a way of possibly exerting a measure of control over the Midland County Commissioners Court, which has been at odds with the sheriff's office in recent years, but she says that is not the case. She acknowledges that her husband does work for the sheriff's department.

Rather, she says, she is motivated to run by the allegedly poor service Ms. Valencia is giving to the precinct's residents and by her own six years of experience with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Since taking office four years ago, Ms. Valencia prides herself in representing taxpayers in a conservative fashion on the court. She notes that she was responsible for getting printouts of bills proposed for payment at each commissioners court meeting at least the week prior to the meeting date so that commissioners may give the proposals adequate study. Prior to taking office, she says, the commissioners received the printouts the morning of the commission meeting.

She also says she was a driving force behind a nepotism policy adopted by the court earlier this year and for starting an employee recognition award for the county, through which retiring employees are given a plaque and small cash gift.

But Ms. Valencia takes the most pride in serving the people of Precinct 3 impartially and conservatively, and she asserts she has done that. We agree.

Louisa Valencia has served her precinct well for four years and should be returned for another term.

County Treasurer

After the resignation earlier this year of longtime county treasurer Dee Thompson, Carol Jean Baker was appointed to serve out Ms. Thompson's term. Now Ms. Baker is seeking her first full term in the office.

Although Ms. Baker didn't have an opponent in the primary election, Mary Wilson filed as an independent candidate and is seeking the position, contending she could not run as a candidate on the GOP ticket in the primary because of Ms. Thompson's decision to not resign her position until after the filing deadline.

The major contention in Ms. Wilson's campaign is that the treasurer's office is still operating on handwritten ledgers and that the efficiency of the operation could be vastly improved if they would computerize their operations. Ms. Wilson says her 20-plus years of experience in accounting would benefit the treasurer's office.

Ms. Baker says she has upgraded the operation to put it on computers and that with a staff of three people, giving her office a total of four employees, she has been able to do the work the office used to perform with five employees.

She also notes that before serving as Ms. Thompson's chief deputy for four years, she was employed in the county auditor's office where she gained invaluable experience in the collection of payments by various county departments before that money is funneled to the treasurer's office. That knowledge has benefitted her in the treasurer's office.

Voters should elect Carol Baker to a full term as county treasurer and utilize that experience and knowledge.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Oct. 5, the 279th day of 1992. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

One hundred years ago, on Oct. 5, 1892, the Dalton Gang, notorious for its train robberies, was practically wiped out while attempting to rob a pair of banks in Coffeyville, Kan.

On this date:

In 1813, the Battle of the Thames was fought in Upper Canada during the War of 1812. The British troops were soundly defeated, and their Indian ally, Tecumseh, was killed.

In 1830, the 21st president of the United States, Chester A. Arthur, was born in Fairfield, Vt.

In 1921, the World Series was broadcast on radio for the first time, with sports writer Grantland Rice describing the action between the New York Yankees and the New York Giants (who won the series).

In 1937, saying "the epidemic of world lawlessness is spreading," President Franklin D. Roosevelt called for a "quarantine" of aggressor nations.

In 1942, 50 years ago, the St. Louis Cardinals won the World Series, four games to one, defeating the New York Yankees by a score of 4-2 at Yankee Stadium.

In 1947, in the first televised White House address, President Truman asked Americans to refrain from eating meat on Tuesdays and poultry on Thursdays in order to help stockpile grain for starving people in Europe.

In 1953, Earl Warren was sworn in as the 14th chief justice of the United States, succeeding Fred M. Vinson.

In 1962, 30 years ago, the Beatles' first hit, "Love Me Do," was first released in the United Kingdom.

Five years ago: Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork suffered new setbacks as Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd and Republican Sens. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut and John H. Chafee of Rhode Island declared they were opposed to his confirmation.

Arizona senator heats up POW rise

WASHINGTON – If there was a Richter scale for sleazy political campaigns, Arizona would be experiencing what is known in earthquake parlance as "the big one."

Independent U.S. Senate candidate Evan Mecham -- the impeached and disgraced former governor of the state – is accusing Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., of "selling out his fellow POWs" by aiding a federal government cover-up. Mecham says McCain has "knowingly supported the official government policy of deceiving MIA families and the public in general."

Anderson

McCain currently serves on the Senate's Select Committee on POW/MIA affairs, and during his decade-long involvement with the issue in Congress McCain has been an outspoken supporter of releasing intelligence reports on live POW sightings. He also helped negotiate the opening of a U.S. POW/MIA investigation in Hanoi.

But McCain has angered the fringe element of the POW movement by questioning their operations and fund-raising practices. "You see there is an honor code that you never abandon your people to the enemy ...," Mecham has said about McCain.

Few people however, bear McCain's scars – and it goes beyond his nearly six years of torture and confinement to a 12 foot by 12 foot unventilated cell. Recently declassified documents by the POW/MIA Committee indicate that in 1968, then-POW McCain could have walked out of the Hanoi Hilton a free man – but refused so that he would not leave his fellow POWs behind.

The story of uncommon valor that McCain recounted to us recently began on Oct. 26, 1967, when Naval aviator McCain was flying a mission in his A4 Skyhawk off the carrier Oriskany. His plane was struck by a North Vietnamese missile and he parachuted into a lake in Hanoi with two broken arms and a broken leg. After his capture, he was bayoneted and brutally beaten by the North Vietnamese.

Things got worse when they learned that McCain's father was the commander of the Pacific Fleet, which meant that he was ordering the daily bombing of North Vietnamese forces.

A previously secret State Department cable dated Sept. 13, 1968, reveals that the North Vietnamese tried to "release Admiral McCain's son as one of the three pilots freed recently, but he had refused." U.S. officials speculated in the cable that McCain was spurning the offer "because he did not want people to think that he had been released because of his father's position."

After repeated entreaties by his captors, McCain bypassed freedom until other Americans captured before him were released. McCain believes that the offers for freedom were designed to make the North Vietnamese look humane by releasing the injured son of a top U.S. officer. He also believes that it would have increased North Vietnam's leverage in trying to force other American POWs into revealing military secrets.

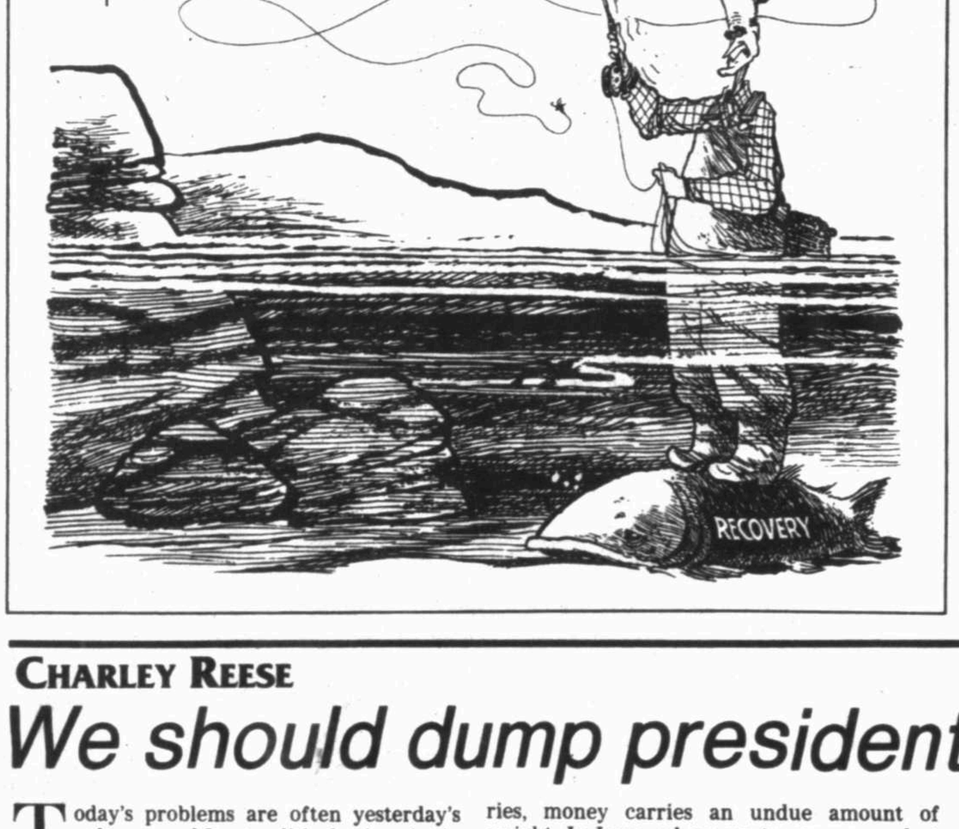

His resistance posed such a serious threat that his captors threw him into solitary confinement, lest his fellow prisoners follow his example. As he sat in solitary confinement, McCain memorized the names of all 335 of his fellow prisoners of war at that camp.

Nevertheless, Mecham plans to unseat McCain based on the odd contention that McCain has forgotten his fellow POWs. McCain calls this attack, "the kind of contemptuous lie which the people of Arizona have sadly come to expect in any of Mecham's political campaigns."

Many political observers in Arizona believe that Mecham is running in order to seek revenge on McCain because he was one of the first politicians to call for Mecham's resignation in 1988. McCain, who leads in the polls, is also being challenged by Democrat Claire Sargent.

For the most part, Mecham's political career has been punctuated by inflammatory rhetoric, such as the following 1990 statement: "I guess (Martin Luther) King did a lot for the colored people, but I don't think he deserves a national holiday."

CHARLEY REESE

We should dump presidential primaries

Today's problems are often yesterday's reforms, and I put political primaries in that category. We ought to get rid of them.

Reese

Primaries — elections in which members of a political party nominate a candidate by voting — originated in the reform movement around the turn of the century. It was designed to give people, instead of party bosses in backrooms, the power to choose their party's nominees.

But times alas change and today we routinely see a miserably low voter turnout in most party primaries. Furthermore, roughly a third of American voters today are registered as independents and, of course, can't vote in party primaries.

Primaries, which in many states involve a second runoff primary election, add tremendously to the cost of campaigning and stretch out the campaign system almost beyond endurance.

This is especially true in the presidential primaries, which have had the added result of rendering the national conventions about as interesting to watch as a re-run of a bad sitcom.

Furthermore in these presidential primaries, money carries an undue amount of weight. In Iowa, where party caucuses select the nominees, campaigning can be relatively inexpensive, but the so-called Super Tuesday — same day primaries in several Southern states — requires big bucks for a candidate to have any chance at all. It is a huge area geographically and comprises multiple media markets — all expensive.

All this has resulted in a sort of perpetual campaign in which after every election day, successful primary candidates and their prospective foes begin raising money for the next race.

So if we truly do wish to diminish the impact of big money in American politics, one step in that direction would be to replace the primaries with state caucuses. Another alternative would be to put all the names on the general election ballot and let the people choose. In other words instead of having a choice of only one Democrat or one Republican, we could vote in November for any of all the Democrats or for any of all the Republicans who choose to become candidates.

These are just ideas to stimulate your noodle, but the main point is that the system we now have is not working very well. It is not a system cast in iron. We can change it. And we ought to change it in ways that will encourage more Americans to participate in the process.

The power to make these changes exists with the Republican and Democrat National Committees and with the state legislatures. It would be a good idea to let them know we are not satisfied with the present system and at least get a debate started.

I'm convinced that a lot of voter apathy is directly attributable to the length of the campaigns. Reasonable people can concentrate on politics for six to eight weeks, but they are turned off by month after month of political rhetoric. In the case of political candidates, absence probably would make the heart grow fonder.

Certainly no one can look at the low turnouts in most primary elections and say that the people want them.

Another advantage of switching to state caucuses would be that it would revitalize the political parties at the grassroots level. Today, political parties are not much more than fan clubs and fund-raising machines. But if active participation in a political party meant you would have a chance to effect the outcome in a tangible way, then I believe more people would choose to get involved.

Politics, for all the bad rap it gets, is really wonderful — when you consider that every other alternative is terrible. So each of us should recognize that we have a vested interest in politics and in designing a political process that people can believe in and be enthusiastic about.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Polster opens whole new bucket of eels

MOBILE, Ala.— You've heard of the Washington Post-ABC Poll and the Times-Mirror Poll and the CBS-New York Times Poll and all those other polls that tell us Democrat Bill Clinton is leading President Bush in the race for the White House anywhere from 21 to 9 points.

Grizzard

I have no idea how these polls are conducted, but I do know this:

Never in my life has a political pollster asked me who I was voting for in an election. You would think they would finally get around to me, because there are so many polls and so many elections.

But not once have I been called or stopped on the street and asked: "If the election were today for whom would you vote?"

If I were asked such a question, I think it might be fun to lie.

Maybe if more people lied to pollsters there would be more drama to elections, more startling upsets.

This is incredible," Dan Rather might say on election night. The polls showed an overwhelming base of support for Politician A but Politician B is pulling off a major upset. Hey, none of you lied to the pollsters, did you?"

Since none of the polls have contacted me, and I really don't trust them anyway, I decided I would conduct my own poll just for the fun of it.

The Grizzard Poll was here in Mobile, where I was speaking to the Alabama State Realtors Assn., the people who sell houses.

When the economy goes sour, so do the sales of houses.

Do these people blame the president for that and want to give Bill Clinton a chance?

My poll was very scientific. There were may be 500 people in the audience, and I said to them, "I'm taking a poll. If the presidential election were held today, how many of you would vote for Bill Clinton? Clap your hands if you're for Bill Clinton."

Near silence. Maybe three claps. Maybe four. I couldn't give you the exact number of Alabama Realtors who were for Bill Clinton, but I think more would have clapped for 25 percent mortgage rates.

"Okay." I said. "How many of you would vote for George Bush?"

It was nearly unanimous for the president.

So, you may be asking what does the Grizzard Poll indicate?

For one thing, it indicates that if Bill Clinton runs into any Alabama Realtors he'd better take Tipper Gore with him. He might need something wide to hide behind.

I think it also indicates that the Realtors may be afraid interest rates, now the lowest in years, might go up al a Jimmy Carter if Clinton is elected; that Clinton would put a heavy tax on the wealthiest Americans who buy the most expensive houses, and they might back off from real estate.

Or, they aren't supporting Clinton because they think he is a draft-dodging womanizer who is slicker than a bucket of eels.

I did manage to collar one Realtor who was still in the hall when I came out from backstage.

I asked her if she had applauded for the president, and she said that she had. I asked her what she didn't like about Bill Clinton.

"I don't like his hairdo," she said.

I'll soon be speaking to the American Society of Barbers at their annual convention in Vitalis, Okla., and I'll poll attendees on this issue.

That's what's great about being in the political polling biz. You just never know when somebody is going to open up a whole new bucket of eels.

Islands criticize Japan's plutonium shipments

TOKYO (AP) — For decades, Japan has claimed moral high ground in the fight against nuclear proliferation as the only victim of an atom bomb attack. On Sunday, Pacific islanders invoked their own history to accuse Japan of reckless nuclear practices.

The criticisms, delivered at an anti-nuclear conference in Tokyo, were part of a growing, if muted, movement to stop Japan from shipping a ton of plutonium — enough for about 120 nuclear bombs — from France this fall to fuel its commercial nuclear power program.

The shipment, the first of dozens planned over the next two decades, has raised fears among nations along the route that an accident or terrorist attack could leave their waters poisoned for tens of thousands of years.

Since the summer, Indonesia, Malaysia, South Africa, Hong Kong, Chile and Singapore have either refused the freighter passage through their waters or asked that it be rerouted. The ship is en route and expected to arrive this month to pick up the plutonium from a French reprocessing plant.

Speakers at the conference pointedly reminded an audience of about 100 of the mid-Pacific's past as a nuclear testing ground and dump site.

"For more than 40 years, the Pacific islanders have had cause to resent the use of their land and ocean as a nuclear playground," said Sen. Marilyn Manibusan of the U.S. territory of Guam. "Today, once again, the great nations of the world are threatening our small islands."

Resource-barren Japan, which has long sought energy independence, is one of the few nations still aggressively pursuing a plutonium-fueled commercial nuclear power program. It is the only one planning to ship plutonium on the high seas.

Opponents contend Japan is contributing to a dangerous surplus of world plutonium stocks, particularly with Washington and Moscow dismantling nuclear weapons. They hold scant hope that France will not approve a license for the shipment, even though it stands to earn millions by selling reprocessed fuel to Japan.

Just as significant as the nations protesting the shipments, however, are the ones that aren't, including such Asian powers as China and South Korea, European nations and the United States.

The Bush administration, which retains informal veto power over Japan's nuclear imports, has said it has no objection to the plan.

The silence of these governments, critics agree, is a testament to Japan's enormous economic leverage and lobbying efforts.

"There's somewhat of an intimidation problem," acknowledged Tim Bruce, the special legal counsel to Gov. Lorenzo I. De Leon Guerrero of the Northern Marianas, a U.S. territory that opposes the shipment.

"The Japanese drive our economy," Bruce said. "They invest in buildings, hotels and so on. Ninety percent of our tourists are Japanese."

Japan has insisted the shipment is going ahead and sent no government officials to the three-day gathering.

World in brief

■ Looting halts Red Cross Somali airlift

MOGADISHU, Somalia — The Red Cross suspended food airlifts Sunday to the western town of Belet Huen after gunmen looted a kitchen and clan warriors threatened aid workers, an official said.

The attack and threats underscore the difficulties faced by aid groups trying to feed the starving in Somalia, which is rife with banditry, looting and clan disputes.

Belet Huen is one of about six towns targeted by international groups trying to stave off further starvation in Somalia. The Red Cross estimates there are about 200,000 people in the town.

One person was killed and one wounded in the attack on the feeding kitchen Saturday, said Gregoire Tavernier, spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross in Kenya. The looters stole about 440 pounds of rice, beans and vegetable oil.

Earlier, a clan that lost a feud over the contract to transport Red Cross food issued death threats against the agency's workers, said Tavernier. The dispute was being negotiated by clan elders, he said.

■ Bad weather hampers aid in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — More humanitarian flights arrived in Sarajevo on Sunday, but rainy weather hampered the aid effort to help people in the shattered capital survive the coming harsh winter.

Relief officials fear the harsh Bosnian winter could claim hundreds of thousands of lives unless there are adequate supplies of food and fuel to feed residents of the besieged city.

Power cuts have frequently left about 80 percent of Sarajevo without electricity. People run to line up at water trucks, and on Sunday many put out pails to catch rainwater running off the roofs.

Warehouses in the city are empty, the only working bakery is producing only enough bread to supply the military and hospitals, and a lack of fuel is hampering distribution.

"I have nothing," said Mark Vachon, a U.N. refugee coordinator in Sarajevo. "I can't keep stocks in the warehouse, I would be shot dead. People are hungry."

Sarajevo has been relatively quiet in recent days, but fighting flared in several towns in northern Bosnia on Sunday.

■ Damaged Turkish warship returns to port

GOLCUK, Turkey — Seamen wept and relatives crowded the dock Sunday as the damaged warship Muavenet was towed to port with its flag at half-mast for the five sailors killed by a U.S. missile fired during NATO war games.

NATO and Turkish panels are investigating the Thursday incident to see if human error or technical malfunction led to the firing of two Sea Sparrow missiles from the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga in the Aegean Sea.

But NATO's supreme commander, U.S. Gen. John Shalikashvili, ruled out the possibility alcohol or drug abuse played a role.

At least one — but possibly both — missiles hit the bridge of the Turkish destroyer, killing a captain and four crew members. Twelve sailors were injured.

A tarpaulin partly covered the ship's wrecked bridge as it was towed into port, about 70 miles east of Istanbul. Many sailors on board burst into tears and hundreds of family members surged onto the dock after waiting hours for the ship.

■ Chess game ends in third successive draw

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky played to their third successive draw Sunday in the 15th game of their $5 million chess rematch, leaving Fischer with a 5-3 lead.

The players agreed to a draw after 33 moves.

Spassky, a Russian-born French citizen, decisively won Wednesday against Fischer, narrowing the American's lead to 5-3. But in the two subsequent games, Thursday and Saturday, the two former chess champions drew. Draws do not count and games cannot be adjourned under previously agreed game rules.

Mozambique, rebels sign cease-fire

ROME (AP) — Mozambique's government and rightist rebels signed a formal cease-fire Sunday, ending 16 years of civil war that took 600,000 lives and paving the way for peace throughout southern Africa.

The accord, and the free elections that are to follow in one year, would formally end the last shooting war of a region where ethnic and political tensions escalated into Cold War conflicts.

President Joaquim Chissano, an ex-Marxist, and Renamo rebel leader Afonso Dhlakama called each other "dear brother." They embraced repeatedly to the applause of the presidents of Zimbabwe and Botswana, and mediators from Italy, the United States, France, Britain and Russia.

The cease-fire will go into effect once the Mozambique national assembly ratifies it. A vote is expected within the month.

The signing came at a time of increasing democracy in southern Africa, when countries such as Angola and Namibia were throwing off the thrall of single-party rule and South Africa was reversing some of its apartheid policies.

Reached after two years of negotiations and two days of last-minute wrangling, the pact is expected to let desperately needed aid reach the 15 million residents of the famine-stricken country and allow free U.N.-supervised elections in October 1993.

No warning as Florida twisters leave 3 dead

PINELLAS PARK, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay area mobile home park residents got no warning before tornadoes ripped through their lightweight trailers, killing three. The National Weather Service said Sunday it would convene an inquiry.

As the same storm system brought more tornadoes to the Jacksonville area on Sunday, Gov. Lawton Chiles toured of the damaged areas where more than 100 homes were destroyed in the storms Saturday. Fifty-three people were injured and six were hospitalized.

Heavy rains were blamed for a train derailment near Jacksonville. There were no injuries. Tornadoes tore roofs off businesses and damaged nearby mobile homes and an apartment house, said fire department spokesman John Peavy.

About 300 trailer park residents evacuated when an earthen dam broke, but there were no injuries Sunday, Peavy said.

Senior meteorologists in Miami determined on Friday that the huge mass of stormy weather bearing down on Florida in the Gulf of Mexico was likely to generate tornadoes, said Paul Hebert, the state's top weather official.

But tight rules restrict tornado warnings to confirmed touchdowns and lesser tornado watches to conditions that precede Midwest tornadoes, Hebert said. Criteria include cold, dry air mixing rapidly with warm, moist air.

"But when's the last time you had cold, dry air in Florida in the middle of the summer?" said Hebert. "There isn't any but we still have tornadoes here."

No date was set for the inquiry planned to determine why no warning was issued from the local weather office in Ruskin, located across Tampa Bay from two communities north of St. Petersburg where the tornadoes did their worst damage.

"Tornadoes are things that we can very seldom pick up with our radar," said Chuck Eggleton, the meteorologist on duty when the tornadoes began touching down about 10:30 a.m.

"Even severe thunderstorms weren't detected, and severe thunderstorms are something we would normally warn for," he said. "They just weren't that strong."

At 11 a.m., however, he said he issued a "severe weather statement" that said a brief tornado had touched down in the Largo area. Twenty minutes later technical difficulties knocked him off the air for more than an hour.

Most of the damage occurred in three mobile home parks. The twisters, packing winds of up to 150 mph, also slammed into two subdivisions, leveling some homes, damaging others and shoving cars and trees into dwellings.

Two victims died when their mobile homes toppled in Pinellas Park and outside Largo. The third was killed by debris in the garage of her house in Pinellas Park.

The tower crane that looms above the construction site at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center is silhouetted against the early morning sky.

Operator D.J. Harris peers from the cab of the crane, 100 feet above the jobsite, as he moves material for workers below.

IT'S LONELY AT THE TOP

Above, the view from above as Harris does his work. At right, Harris walks back to the cab after straightening the flags that fly above the counterweights at the rear of the boom. Harris retrieves his water jug, at far right, from the block after workers on the ground filled it.

"I'm the guy who everybody sees, but nobody knows," crane operator D.J. Harris said as he watched workers unhooking the spreader cables from a load of reinforcing steel.

Sure enough, Harris' vantage point above the Memorial Hospital and Medical Center expansion project gives him a high profile. He can see — and be seen from — a country mile.

But while other workers gather at a picnic table in the shade to have lunch and swap stories, Harris dines alone in the crane rather than repeat the 100-foot climb that takes him to work each day.

"It can be kinda lonely," he said.

His perch is the operator's seat of a Liebherr 290HC tower crane. The bottom of the boom is 115 feet above its 20-foot-square concrete foundation.

The German-built crane can lift 4,500 pounds at the end of its 213-foot-long boom and 25,000 pounds with the trolley pulled up next to the tower. The 3-year-old crane is leased by Faulkner Construction, the general contractor of the hospital project.

Tower cranes take up less space than mobile cranes, engineers and workers at the project said. Since it doesn't have to be moved, time is saved as well.

After moving a load of reinforcing steel, Harris used binoculars to watch a physical education class run laps at Memorial Stadium.

"I was watching football practice over there the other day," he said, indicating the practice field next to the stadium.

"The little kids play soccer over there," he said, pointing toward another nearby field.

"This is what makes a day seem like a week up here."

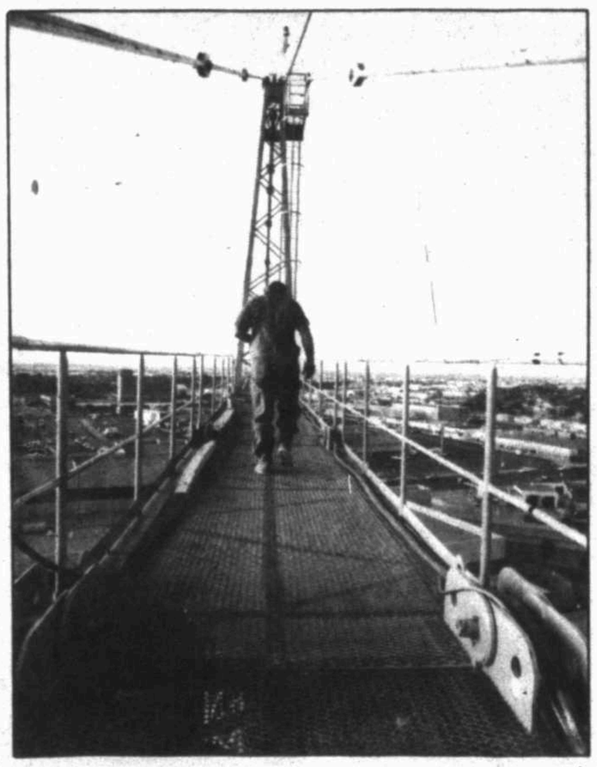

But not for long.

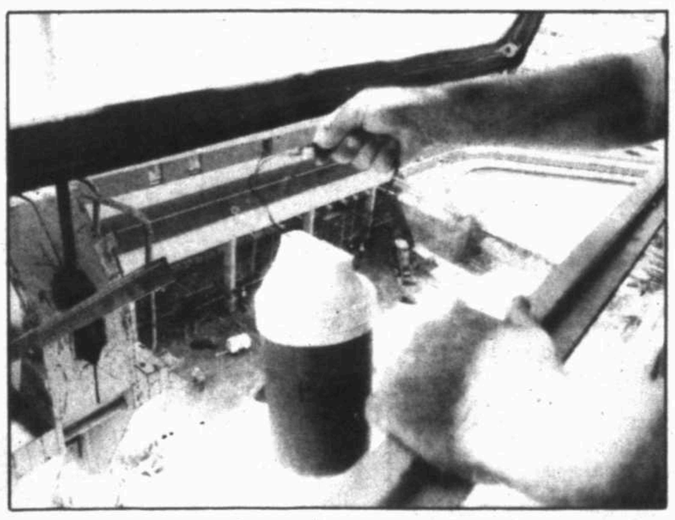

"David," came a voice over the hand-held radio hanging beside Harris' throne-like seat. "We need to get this toilet outta here."

A chemical toilet is in the way of one of the many tasks that make up a construction project. Harris' crane is the quickest way to move it so progress can continue.

The radios make directing the crane seem easy.

OCT 05 29

D.J.: Harris gets bird's eye view of work, city

(From 1B)

"Swing right," the voice commands; Harris swings the boom to the right, using one of the two joystick-like controls on either armrest.

"Trolley out," and Harris runs the trolley away from the tower toward the end of the boom.

"Comin' down, comin' down, comin' down," and the load touches down.

Later, Harris lowered reinforcing steel into a pier hole as ironworkers signaled by hand.

Reading the hand signals is somewhat more difficult. From the cab of the crane, the workers are about the size of your thumb.

The signals are precise. If there is any doubt in Harris' mind which way to go, "I just shut it down."

The rebar cylinder, about six feet long and several feet across, will later become the skeleton of a concrete column.

Harris lowers it gently into the hole, where it hangs there as a worker crawls down out of Harris' sight.

Moments later, the ironworkers cut the crane loose and Harris was free to admire the view or listen to country music on his FM clock-radio until duty called again.

Of the fascination heavy equipment seems to hold for boys and men, country singer Guy Clark opines:

Could be the money, could be the power,
Could be I love the way it feels,

Why does Harris spend his days lifting tons of steel with a pair of joysticks that look like they were robbed off a video game?

"Money," is Harris' answer. "When I was a little kid, it mighta been fun. But now it's just a job."

When Harris has finished moving pieces of the puzzle around and everyone has what they need to get some work done, he sits and waits.

If he's bored with sightseeing, Harris' mind might turn to thoughts of fishing for bass and channel catfish on Black Cypress Bayou near Lake Caddo in East Texas.

"That's God's Country," he said.

It's also where he said he learned to run a bulldozer when he was 12, and later worked with his cousins for his father, Smoky, and his uncle, Cap Harris.

"We was either working with Daddy clearing land or digging ponds or working with Uncle Cap hauling logs,"he said.

He also passed the knowledge along to his own son, Jeremy Scott, 12, who lives "back home" with his grandparents as Harris and his partner and soon-to-be-wife Peggy Sue Roe move from job to job.

"That way he gets to be with the same kids every year instead of having to move every year or so," Harris said.

He pulled a weathered snapshot of the bayou from his wallet. The photo showed countless lilypads in the foreground, floating on dark water, stretching back towards a horizon ringed with tall trees.

"That's where I'd like to be," he said.

Criswell leaves pulpit to work at college

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. W.A. Criswell, senior pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas, announced Sunday he would step down from the pulpit to work full time for Criswell College.

Criswell, who is also chancellor of the college in addition to his church leadership role, made the announcement during worship services at one of the nation's largest Southern Baptist churches, where another leader resigned last week.

"That has been in his (Criswell's) plan a good while," said Bo Sexton, who chairs a deacons' committee at the church. "He announced he plans to be at the college full time."

For the time being, however, Criswell retains the title of senior pastor, said church spokesman Ron Harris.

"He said he is taking the assignment at the college effective immediately, and that his preaching assignment will be at the discretion of the pastor, or in his absence, the elected deacon leadership," Harris said Sunday afternoon.

The move was an aftershock to the news last week that Criswell's associate, Dr. Joel Gregory, was quitting.

"He announced he wanted to develop his role to be full time with the college," Sexton said of Criswell. He said deacons began meeting in private at 4 p.m. Harris said Criswell was not at the meeting.

Another deacon at the church confirmed the move.

"Dr. Criswell wants to move out to the college and devote his full efforts there instead of his role now as both chancellor and senior pastor," said the deacon, who declined to be identified.

The 82-year-old Criswell has served as the 28,000-member church's pastor for 47 years. He also served two terms as the Southern Baptist Convention's president.

Sexton stressed that the purpose of the deacons' meeting was informational only and that it was not open to other church members or the media.

"Dr. Criswell said that his future involvement would be with the college," he said. "We want more information from him on his plans."

Of Gregory's earlier resignation, Criswell had said only that he "is one of the best preachers ever heard in this generation. He is a sweet friend and prayer partner."

Gregory stunned hundreds of church members by walking out of a weekly prayer meeting after expressing disappointment over the pace of his advancement in the church.

A leadership committee that includes deacons and committee heads voted late last week not to accept Gregory's resignation.

"He has not contacted us at all," said Sexton, who denied that Criswell's announcement was related to Gregory's resignation.

Named after Criswell and operated by First Baptist, the college is a four-year religious institution with both bachelor's and master's degree plans.

Jehovah's Witnesses fight daughter's surgery

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The attorney for two Jehovah's Witnesses said Sunday medical alternatives to blood transfusions are not being explored to treat the couple's ailing premature infant.

John O. Miller, the attorney for Marco and Lenora Abasta, will appear in state district court today to continue the couple's fight over medical treatment for their daughter Nina, born Sept. 23.

The court hearing today will determine whether the state keeps emergency custody of Nina.

Miller, who is also an elder in one of Corpus Christi's 20 Jehovah's Witnesses congregations, said the Abasta's would agree to other methods, such as a type of dialysis, which would clean the blood and return it to the girl's body.

"We would not object to that," Miller said.

Nina suffered a perforated intestine Thursday. The Abastas refused to agree to surgery that involved blood transfusions, which go against their religious beliefs.

State District Judge Mike Westergren on Friday ordered Driscoll Children's Hospital to turn over Nina's records so her parents can find treatment that doesn't involve blood transfusions.

But State District Judge Robert Blackmon signed an emergency order anyway, allowing Driscoll surgeons to operate. Blackmon awarded temporary custody of the girl to the state.

"The operation needed to be done within 30 minutes — that was the representation," Blackmon said. "I respect the beliefs of the parents, but the state ... had an obligation to protect and perhaps save a life."

In Friday's motion before Westergren, the Abastas said they need the records so out-of-state physicians can evaluate the case to determine if Nina can be treated without blood products.

Hospital officials had told them it would take at least one week to produce the records, according to court documents.

Members of the Jehovah's Witnesses movement say that blood, which they consider the property of God, is a holy element that cannot be transferred from one body to another. There are also medical considerations, Miller said. Too many diseases are transferred through transfusions, he added.

"I simply do not accept the premise that blood transfusions are ever needed," Miller explained. "Only sloppy medicine requires blood."

Deaf children learn to speak in special classes

By Shawn Foster
Associated Press writer

BROWNSVILLE — Seven-year-old Erica Sandoval is almost completely deaf. If a bomb went off next door, she would not hear it.

But when asked, "How are you?" she answers, "Fine."

Erica is one of 85 students at the Regional School for the Deaf at Egly Elementary School. All 85 students are learning how to speak.

Not all the success stories are as dramatic as Erica's. Each day is a struggle for little victories.

John Bond, a second-grade teacher at the regional school, has been working for several days with one of his students, trying to get him to say the "D" sound.

Bond and the other teachers at the school wear amplifiers that broadcast their voices over an FM radio frequency to receivers the children wear. The system blocks out background noise and is the equivalent of a teacher speaking loudly in the student's ear.

"Let's practice our speech. Remember we were working on a 'D' sound?" Bond said to 6-year-old Jesus Carreno.

"D-D-D-D," Bond said, as he coaxed Jesus.

Bond grasps Jesus' hand and puts it on his own throat so Jesus can feel the vibration that a "D" sound makes.

"I need you to hear your voice. Your voice sounds like this," Bond said. "Try to use your voice more."

Jesus let out a loud "D" sound.

"Excellent job, good," Bond said. "This is a battle we've had for three days and now he's doing it."

After Jesus' success, excited students hugged and kissed their teachers and visitors in the classroom.

The curriculum at the regional school is grueling for both teachers and students because the children must learn not only their ABC's but the skills to speak them at the same time.

Teachers use a "total communication" approach that uses all the children's senses — including any hearing that they may have — to teach them to speak.

Teachers say most people think that all deaf students have the same amount of hearing — none.

"The biggest misconception is, 'Oh, they're deaf, they can't hear anything,' " said Toma Councilman, a veteran teacher at the school. "We can teach them to hear with the residual hearing that they have left."

Most students have some hearing and wear hearing aids to increase the hearing they have.

Those who are completely deaf learn to read lips and interpret other vibrations.

The regional school uses a program called Visual Phonics that teaches students the alphabet and symbols that represent the sounds letters make.

The symbol for "F" looks like air blowing over teeth.

A computer program helps students learn how to speak at normal frequency and how to position their tongue and lips.

"They think that Visual Phonics is the missing link, the link missing in the brain in the neurological path of how sounds are made," said Susan Moody, the school's speech-language pathologist.

Teachers also sign when they speak, using signed English, instead of American Sign Language.

American Sign Language is not a transliteration of English words and syntax, but an entirely separate language that can be learned on its own. American Sign Language leaves out many parts of English speech, such as articles and some verb tenses, which makes it difficult for students to learn written English, critics of the system say.

Teachers acknowledge that learning to speak is a Herculean task for deaf children, much harder than learning to sign. But they say they believe in the arduous path because it ultimately will be easier for the children to live independently as adults.

Egly teachers support signed English despite a movement to recognize American Sign Language as the primary method of deaf education.

Standardized tests have shown that the average hearing-impaired 18-year-old reads at a third- or fourth-grade level.

Poor performance among hearing-impaired children has kicked off a debate among teachers of the deaf about which of three methods is best — signing, speech alone, or a combination of the two: the total communication method.

Teaching speech to deaf children will work only for a handful of students, according to research conducted by Robert Johnson, chairman of the linguistics department at Gallaudet College in Washington.

"Most deaf people don't learn to speak very well," Johnson said.

Johnson advocates teaching American Sign Language before English speech. Deaf children can acquire language more readily using American Sign Language, Johnson said.

Bonilla unveils TV ad

Staff report

Henry Bonilla, Republican candidate for the 23rd Congressional District, unveiled his first television ad during a Sunday press conference in Midland.

At the press conference, which was held at Jumburrito Restaurant, 908 S. Midkiff, Bonilla showed the ad, which will begin airing today. It features people from the Permian Basin saying that Bonilla is the candidate with a plan for West Texas oil and gas and the candidate who will help small businesses create jobs.

"My opponent has been part of the problem in Washington," Bonilla said of Democratic incumbent Albert Bustamante. "My first television ad features people who are part of the solution, people who understand what we must do to create jobs in West Texas and America.

"The Permian Basin needs someone in Congress to fight for small businesses to create jobs and for the oil and gas industry," Bonilla said. "I have a plan that will put people to work in West Texas."

"We need Henry Bonilla in Congress to create jobs and opportunities for us in the Permian Basin," said Midland City Councilman Jose Cuevas, who owns Jumburrito Restaurant and who is featured in the ad. "Henry understands the people of the Permian Basin, and he will be a friend of ours in Congress."

In the ad, Cuevas mentions that Bonilla has the support of the National Federation of Independent Business, while Rob McAlpine, an independent producer, stresses that Bonilla will be good for the oil and gas industry.

Group aids criminals' families

FORT WORTH (AP) — Relatives of prison inmates say they can suffer as much as victims' families.

Many members of the national group called Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants held its statewide meeting in Fort Worth over the weekend.

They said widespread news coverage of cases such as that of former death row inmate Kenneth McDuff exacerbate their pain.

McDuff's parole and later indictment in other deaths triggered a statewide debate over early release of prisoners.

"Hold your head up and don't be afraid to say you have a relative in prison," said Lois Robison, whose son, Larry Keith Robison, was convicted of murder.

"A lot of people are shocked when they find out two schoolteachers have a son on Death Row," she said.

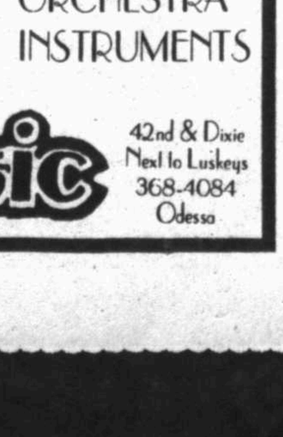

Members of the group founded in San Antonio in 1972 promises help for criminals' relatives, who actually have much in common with those of crime victims, they say.

"If it's someone in my family who did it, I'm hurting twice as much," Dorothy Bartholomew of Fort Worth, a CURE board member, said.

The meeting of CURE members, which ended Sunday, marked the group's 20th anniversary and included testimonials from relatives of suspected and convicted criminals. They reflect frustration, pain and anger over the criminal justice system.

Families of prisoners often feel both the victims' pain and the public shame for a crime in which they were uninvolved, Ms. Bartholomew said.

"We try to help the families through a difficult situation," she said. "We say: 'You haven't done anything.' "

A hint of Mexico was in the air during Smash Fiesta '92 Saturday evening at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. Decorations of multi-colored tissue flowers, balloons, ribbons and confetti filled the ballroom, creating a festive look, and replicas of the the Smash Fiesta logo of a cactus wearing a sombrero could be seen on almost every table as well as in wall hangings by Jo DuFo.

Approximately 700 people attended the annual fund-raiser sponsored by the Special Children's League to benefit the Bynum School, formerly the Developmental Disabilities Center.

"We believe we raised close to $70,000 to go to the school after expenses," said Maureen Wheeler, publicity chairman for Smash Fiesta.

"Everyone just really opened up their hearts to us," said Lisa Burlas, co-chairman for the event. "With the economy the way it is, you just never know, but this has been just great."

The event began at 7 p.m. with silent auction bidding and a Fiesta buffet, with margaritas, beer and wine served throughout the evening. The buffet included beef and cheese enchiladas, tacos and all the fixings, beef and chicken fajitas and all the fixings, refried beans, Mexican rice.

The silent auction featured 46 items ranging from portraits from Sam Hollis Studio and Lisa Frosch Studio to a custom-designed children's chair from Van Stavern Interiors. Jewelry designed by David Yurman from Sam L. Majors and a Jo DuFo one-of-a-kind original canvas were other major items included in the silent auction.

THE LIVE auction began around 9 p.m. with auctioneer Mark Denny working to raise the bids for each of the five items. In keeping with the Fiesta mood, the top selling live auction item was a one-week trip for two via American Airlines to Puerto Vallarta, staying in a casita on the beach with private swimming pool, and personal cook and maid, compliments of Joe and Kathy Young.

Other trips in the auction included a week-long Purgatory, Colo., ski vacation for six compliments of Joseph and Jan O'Neill; a trip for four to Dallas to see "Phantom of the Opera" with dinner at the Crystal Terrace, a stay at the Doubletree Hotel at Campbell Centre and air from American Airlines; and a baseball weekend for four with the Texas Rangers compliments of Tom Brown Inc., with a day at Six Flags Over Texas, dinner at Outback Steakhouse and accommodations compliments of the Radisson Hotels International.

An 11-week-old male labrador retriever with field champion pedigree was the hit of the auction. Compliments of Kay and Rufe Bynum, the pooch package included private basic obedience lessons compliments of Sgt. Ed Nicks. The pup was bought and donated back to be auctioned again.

Masters of ceremonies were Joe Lauria, Kathryn Pritchard, Pat Monacelli and John Butler of KOSA-TV, who helped show off the live action items during bidding by donning costumes depicting the events.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

During the live auction, Kathryn Pritchard dons a Mexican sombrero, sun glasses and snorkel and "plays beach volleyball" to depict the trip for two to Puerto Vallarta being auctioned off.

FOLLOWING THE live auction, the TFC Band took the stage and Fiesta-goers quickly filled the dance floor dancing to the sounds of songs such as "Let's Go Do the Hop," "Elvira," "Achy Breaky Heart," and "Under the Boardwalk,"during which the band had a sing-a-long with the audience.

"I usually don't like to book the same group two years in a row," said Dennis Grubb of Wemus Entertainment who produced the show, "but Kay (Bynum) said everybody liked them so much last year that they wanted them back this year."

The Bynum School is named after its founder and director Kay Bynum, and has grown from eight students to 40 in just eight years. The projected enrollment by year-end is 50 students. It is a privately funded, nonprofit school which provides special teaching needs to disabled children to help them enter mainstream society. All proceeds from Smash Fiesta remain in the Permian Basin.

The main goal for 1992-93 is to consolidate all the Bynum School programs into one location. The capital campaign for the new location and building is under with a $1,200,000 goal.

PAULA MORRISON, president of the Special Children's League, wrote in a program message, "Even in these times of economic uncertainty, so many people have come forward to support Bynum School. With this support, more kids are able to receive the diverse special educational and vocational training not readily available elsewhere in the Permian Basin."

Mrs. Burlas and Kim Hatchett were Smash Fiesta chairmen, aided by a committee of Special Children's League members.

Grand Slam sponsors were Fred and Kathy Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Davidson (in memory of Chris Davidson) and Joseph and Jan O'Neill.

Champion sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. H.M. Bettis, Frances and Jack Brown, Tom Brown Inc., Mr. and Mrs. Rufe S. Bynum, Kay and Rufe Bynum, Mr. and Mrs. Earle M. Craig Jr., Enron Oil and Gas, Rosalind and Arden Grover, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Insalaco and Ann A. Morrison.

Special contributors were American Airlines, Doubletree Hotel, KOSA-TV, Reporter-Telegram, Outback Steakhouse, Radisson Hotels International, Six Flags Over Texas and Tom Brown Inc.

DEAR ABBY

Don't use cops to threaten kids

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with the gentleman in the Atlanta airport waiting to board his flight when a young mother pointed her finger at him and said to her small child, "If you don't sit down and be quiet, that man is going to grab you and throw you in the river!" Of course the child became terrified and began to scream, and everyone wondered what he had done to the child. Here's my story:

Van Buren

I am a uniformed police officer with the Indianapolis Police Department, and you would be amazed at the number of people who threaten their children with what a policeman will do to them if they don't behave.

On one occasion I was having lunch at a snack bar when a young mother pointed her finger at me and loudly told her child, "If you don't eat your vegetables, I'm going to have that policeman arrest you and take you to jail!"

Abby, I am sick and tired of that line. Just the other day, I was at a firehouse when the firemen were showing off a fire truck to a small boy. I asked the boy's mother if perhaps her son would like to see a police car. I was rewarded with a tongue-lashing about how intimidated children were of the police. She ended her tirade with, "I don't want my son to have anything to do with the police!"

I walked away with a lump in my throat. — OFFICER BILL WEBER, INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR OFFICER BILL: Perhaps the young mother had a bad experience with a police officer. However, most people know that the majority of police officers are "good guys." They daily risk life and limb protecting law-abiding citizens.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are very friendly with another retired couple we have known for many years. The four of us go out for dinner together at least once a week. Now for the problem:

The other gentleman blows his nose at the table — and he is not very subtle about it. Believe me, when he blows, it's a real honker! He honks that way whether we are at a restaurant or in someone's home. I find this very unappetizing.

I mentioned this to his wife once, and she said she would speak to him about it. Well, he is still honking, so I doubt that she mentioned it to him. Otherwise, they are a charming couple and we enjoy their company.

Is there some way I can get my point across to this otherwise considerate gentleman? While his "honking" is rather unsettling, I wouldn't want it to spoil our friendship. — HONKER'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Since you have been friends with this couple for many years, wait until the honker honks again, then tell him good-humoredly, but in all sincerity, that his honking at the table is somewhat unappetizing, so would he kindly put a mute on it.

Maxus readies for high-stakes trial

■ Ivan Boesky, Martin Siegal are the focus of multibillion-dollar lawsuit filed by Maxus Energy Corp.

Associated Press

DALLAS — The go-go ways of the infamous Wall Street takeover strategists Ivan Boesky and Martin Siegal are the focus of a multibillion-dollar lawsuit that goes to trial this week in a state court.

Maxus Energy Corp. is seeking $2.2 billion in a case against Siegal, Boesky and the New York investment house of Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Maxus accuses them of defrauding its predecessor, Diamond Shamrock Corp., when it tried to buy Natomast Co. in 1983.

All the defendants have denied any wrongdoing, and for years Kidder tried to kill the Dallas action, giving up only after the U.S. Supreme Court declined to intervene.

Pretrial hearings will begin today before Judge Adolph Canales of the 298th State District Court. If it goes the distance without a settlement, the case could take seven weeks.

In another corporate takeover case, Pennzoil Corp. won the biggest jury award in history from Texaco Inc. — $10.5 billion — in Houston in 1985. If Maxus wins anything near what it seeks, it would rank high on the all-time list.

"This is a significant case," one nationally recognized authority on insider trading and securities law told The Dallas Morning News. "There'll never again be anything as exciting as Texaco-Pennzoil, but if that was an A-plus, this is an A."

He and several other scholars asked the paper not to be identified because they expect to be called as expert witnesses.

Analysts say a large award or settlement could be a boon to Maxus. The company has posted losses every year except one since 1985. And it is under pressure to pay down $796 million debt and finance an exploration program in Bolivia, Ecuador and Colombia.

A big payoff "could really turn the company around," says John Herrlin, an analyst for Lehman Bros. in New York.

Among the defendants, Siegel's wealth is thought to be limited despite a luxurious home in Florida. Boesky, even after surrendering $100 million in fines and illegal profits to settle a federal civil action several years ago, has lived well. But a pending divorce has raised questions about the size of his fortune.

Kidder Peabody's parent company, General Electric Corp., ranks fifth in the Fortune 500 and annual sales exceed $60 billion. It clearly wouldn't be ruined by an adverse judgment, analysts say.

"It's not something I lose sleep over," said Howard A. Rubel, an analyst who follows GE for C.J. Lawrence Inc. in New York. "But it (the lawsuit) is one of the last vestiges of the go-go 1980s on Wall Street."

Experts say the case already has opened a potential new venue for insider-trading litigation. Such suits are usually tried under federal securities laws. Maxus has successfully shunned those in favor of state common law covering fraud, contracts and ordinary business relationships.

Facing demands, Japanese toughen their patent stance

TOKYO (AP) — For Sanyo Electric Co. Ltd., going to court to thrash out a patent dispute once seemed like a declaration of animosity to be avoided at almost any cost. Not anymore.

Sanyo recently abandoned its reticence and countersued Texas Instruments Inc. after refusing the Dallas semiconductor maker's requests for royalties on a disputed patent.

"In the past, Japanese companies were willing to spend extra money to settle patent disputes to avoid conflicts with other companies," said Sanyo spokesman Koshiro Tamura. "But Japanese are becoming more assertive, and are moving toward the American way of doing business."

In recent months, a slew of highly publicized patent disputes, most initiated by U.S. companies, has convinced many Japanese firms to be more aggressive in defending themselves from such lawsuits and in protecting their own patents.

Many are beefing up patent divisions, training employees in international law and coaching researchers in patent issues.

And as they see U.S. companies demanding steeper royalties, more are viewing patents as a source of income, not just a means of limiting competition or obtaining technologies through cross-licensing.

With Japan now receiving 20 percent of all U.S. patents, that could spell trouble for American industry in the future.

The Japanese corporate offensive so far has been most visible in Asia, said Norman Neureiter, a director of Texas Instruments Japan. "They're starting to sue."

Fujitsu Ltd., Hitachi Ltd. and NEC Corp. recently negotiated large royalties from South Korea's Samsung Electronics, while Dai Nippon Printing Co. Ltd. asked for licensing fees from foreign and Japanese electronics makers for its liquid crystal display manufacturing techniques.

This is new ground for corporate citizens of a society that tries to minimize conflict and litigation. But now, says Sanyo's Tamura, "even smaller companies are becoming very careful about protecting their patents and trademarks."

Last spring, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Ltd., Japan's largest consumer electronics maker, launched a new patent program in response to the increase in disputes.

Matsushita has about 310 employees dealing with intellectual property rights, twice the number it had five years ago. Employees are trained in patent issues and receive prizes for discoveries that result in patents, said Akira Kokaji, director of the company's intellectual property center.

Callers tell TEC they're cheated

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 1,000 Texans have been jamming phone lines daily at the state's employment agency with complaints they've been cheated at work.

A recent ad campaign by the Texas Employment Commission caused the outcry from people who believe they have been illegally denied wages or benefits.

The numbers show a big problem exists — and the public just needed to know where to complain, said employment commissioner Mary Scott Nabers.

One caller was Elizabeth Hodges, who said she lost three weeks' pay when Braniff International Airlines shut down July 2.

The day Braniff closed was pay day and, for Ms. Hodges, rent day and car payment day.

A 1989 state law requires employers to post signs that feature a phone number to call to complain about unpaid wages, Ms. Nabers said. Complainants can also file claims for unpaid wages at TEC offices across the state.

Every month, between 1,600 and 1,700 back wage claims pour into the agency. Employees win about 60 percent of the time.

Texas employees have filed 35,000 wage complaints since 1989. So far, the agency has collected $4.2 million in overdue wages.

Ms. Hodges and the other 102 Braniff employees who filed unpaid-wages complaints might not be so lucky.

The agency can do little about unpaid wages when a company has filed for bankruptcy protection. Bankruptcy rules preclude any debt collection attempts by unpaid workers, said Greg Carlson, a program administrator for the TEC's Labor Law Unit.

Ms. Hodges has since found a job with another airline but has not heard from the bankruptcy court regarding the $900 she says Braniff owes her.

State court to hear Exxon case

AUSTIN (AP) — Some business leaders fear a case going before the Texas Supreme Court this week could lead to the state's becoming fertile ground for disaster trials that have little connection to Texas.

The court is scheduled Tuesday to consider a Singapore widow's lawsuit against Irving-based Exxon Corp.

Chick Kam Choo and her four daughters want $3 million in damages from Exxon, which owned the ship where Leong Chong was killed March 24, 1977. A metal spindle fell and hit Leong, 37, as he worked about the Esso Wilhelmshaven in drydock in Singapore.

Texas is a long way from the witnesses who would be called to testify. But lawyers for the woman say they simply want the case tried in Exxon's backyard.

The Texas Supreme Court will be deciding whether foreigners should be able to sue multinational companies in Texas courts for damages arising from incidents that occur outside the state.

The Singapore case already has been rejected in the U.S. federal courts.

If the state Supreme Court rules in favor of the widow, the case will be tried in a Texas court under Singapore law.

What her lawyers see as simple justice, business leaders view as highway robbery. One group, Jobs for Texas, says out-of-state businesses would shy from Texas out of fear of being sued easily.

Jobs for Texas has filed court papers opposing the so-called Alfaro ruling of 1990. In the Alfaro case, justices ruled 5-4 that Costa Rican farm workers who said they were injured by an American-made pesticide could sue the manufacturers in Texas.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Visits will help locate more personable bank

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: As the result of inheritances, I am now a millionaire. My money is in investment management accounts at a bank's trust department, but the money is mine to use as I see fit.

The bank has done a much better job of investing and record keeping than I could do on my own. My problem is I have no contacts with the bank, other than periodic account statements and an annual greeting card from my investment officer. I believe $1 million is insignificant to the bank, which was used by my deceased relatives and is in a different state.

One periodic statement showed more than $100,000 had been received from an inheritance. But the only way I learned about it was by reading the statement. Honest!

I need a different bank. But how do I find one that is more willing to help? Are there any rankings or ratings in publications to guide me?

A: A number of statistical organizations track the performances of bank investment management and trust departments and publish the results, typically ranking the banks from excellent down to poor. You should have no trouble finding the results on file in the reference sections of public libraries — especially business libraries in big cities.

The trouble is that those rankings are incomplete. They usually give the investment results of "common" or "commingled" accounts handled jointly for many investors. They do not give the results of all individual accounts. That would be an impossible task.

Furthermore, you're put off by lack of individual attention and service. No study can accurately report which banks are good at providing tender loving care.

If you are bound and determined to make the switch, my suggestion is to visit a number of banks and talk to trust and investment officers. Explain your "problem," which most people would love to have. Ask what kind of personal service each bank would provide for your million-dollar account.

Q: This year, my husband will be 65 and I will be 63. We hope to work two more years. We have lived frugally and saved faithfully. We estimate our home is valued at $150,000.

Our other assets, totaling $316,000, include $130,000 in money market deposit accounts and six-month certificates of deposit, $11,000 in Series E bonds, $57,000 in my husband's 401(k) retirement plan, $30,000 in annuities, $43,000 in bank individual retirement accounts at low interest and $45,000 in insurance company stock purchased when my husband was an employee.

We project a monthly retirement income of $2,000 from Social Security benefits and my modest pension.

At this late stage, should we consider investing in mutual funds, collateralized mortgage obligations, bonds, etc., or just leave everything in low-interest bank accounts?

A: At your point in life, which is not a "late stage," you could make a big mistake straying from Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage. I advise against taking on that risk.

Anyway, "everything" you have is not in low-interest bank accounts. Your E bonds are accumulating interest at a guaranteed 6 percent. The 401(k) plan and annuities should be earning reasonable interest if they have been invested wisely. If the dividend on the insurance company stock increases occasionally, it will help offset inflation.

If pinched for cash, you can start making withdrawals from the 401(k) and IRAs, as you will be required to do after passing age 70 1/2.

While far from rich, you are not poor. You'll be in better financial shape than many retired folks. Even though you don't come out and say so, the tone of your letter indicates your home is mortgage-free. You should be able to live comfortably — but not excessively — on what you have.

Harvey retires

HOUSTON — Doug Harvey completed his 31-year National League umpiring career Sunday by calling balls and strikes in a 1-hour, 44-minute game, the league's shortest since July 4, 1989.

At the conclusion of the Houston Astros' 3-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers, the 62-year-old Harvey tossed a handful of dirt on home plate. He umpired his first NL game on April 10, 1962.

"I knew there would be an expanded strike zone today," Astros manager Art Howe said. "I told our guys just to be aggressive."

"He called a strike on me," Houston pitcher Pete Harnisch said, "and then he looked at me and said, 'That pitch wasn't even close.'"

Maradona back

BILBAO, Spain (AP) — Diego Maradona returned to competitive soccer for the first time in 18 months and assisted on a goal Sunday as Seville lost 2-1 to Athletic of Bilbao in the Spanish League.

Maradona, 31, had not appeared in a formal match since Napoli, his former team, played Internazionale of Milan in the Italian League on March 24, 1991. Maradona, Argentina's captain in the 1986 and 1990 World Cups, was suspended that April 6 for 15 months following a positive test for cocaine. Napoli sold his contract to Seville on Sept. 22 for $7.5 million.

"It was a very good experience," Maradona said. "But there's always a bad taste in your mouth when you lose."

Baseball finally over for Texas teams

Astros break even with 81-81 record

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pete Harnisch matched his career high with 12 strikeouts as the the Houston Astros beat Los Angeles 3-0 Sunday, completing the Dodgers' first last-place season since 1905.

Houston finished at 81-81, reaching .500 for the first time since May 6, when the Astros were 13-13. It was the first year the Astros didn't have a losing record since 1989, when they were 86-76. It was also the last game for NL umpire Doug Harvey, who called the game from behind the plate.

Pedro Astacio (5-5) gave up three runs and eighth hits in seven innings, struck out seven and walked two for the Dodgers, who finished at 63-99. It was their most losses since going 53-101 in Brooklyn in 1908, a season in which they finished seventh.

Harnisch (9-10) won for the fifth time in six starts, allowing five hits in eight innings and walking none. Doug Jones pitched a perfect ninth for his 36th save in 42.

Jeff Bagwell drove in two runs with a pair of doubles as Houston finished the season with eight victories in nine games and a 33-17 record since Aug. 10. It was the Astros' seventh consecutive victory over Los Angeles.

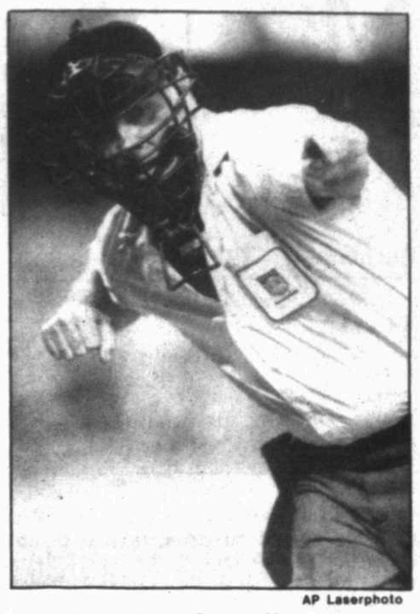

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the first. Craig Biggio started the inning with a leadoff single and moved to second on a single by Steve Finley. Both runners advanced on a groundout by Luis Gonzalez before Bagwell's double.

Harnisch doubled in the seventh and scored on Biggio's single.

Minutes after the Dodgers completed their first last-place season since 1905, Los Angeles manager Tommy Lasorda said he wants to come back for 1993.

"I don't want it to end," he said. "This has been my job for a long time and I love it. But this season has been a stressful thing because of the circumstances."

ANAHEIM — Juan Gonzalez won the major-league home run title, hitting his 43rd homer, and Kevin Brown got his 21st victory to lead the Texas Rangers to a 9-5 victory over the California Angles.

Gonzalez, who drove in three runs to finish with 109 RBIs, broke his tie with Oakland's Mark McGwire with a soaring drive to left-center off Bert Blyleven.

Gonzalez became the first in franchise history to win a home-run title since Frank Howard hit 44 for the Washington Senators in 1970.

Blylven (8-12), who gave up 12 hits and six runs in 4 2-3 innings, leads all active major-league pitchers with 430 homers allowed.

Dolphins remain unbeaten

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Louis Oliver stole the ball and the game from the Buffalo Bills. He also stole the show from Keith Jackson.

Oliver had three interceptions, returning one 103 yards for a touchdown, to tie an NFL record as the Miami Dolphins beat the Bills 37-10 Sunday in a battle of unbeaten teams.

Dan Marino threw three touchdown passes, one to Jackson, the All-Pro tight end who signed a four-year, $6 million deal with the Dolphins last Monday after being declared a free agent. The former Philadelphia star finished with four catches for 64 yards after missing all of training camp and the first quarter of the season.

Coach Don Shula was happy with Marino and Oliver, ecstatic with Jackson.

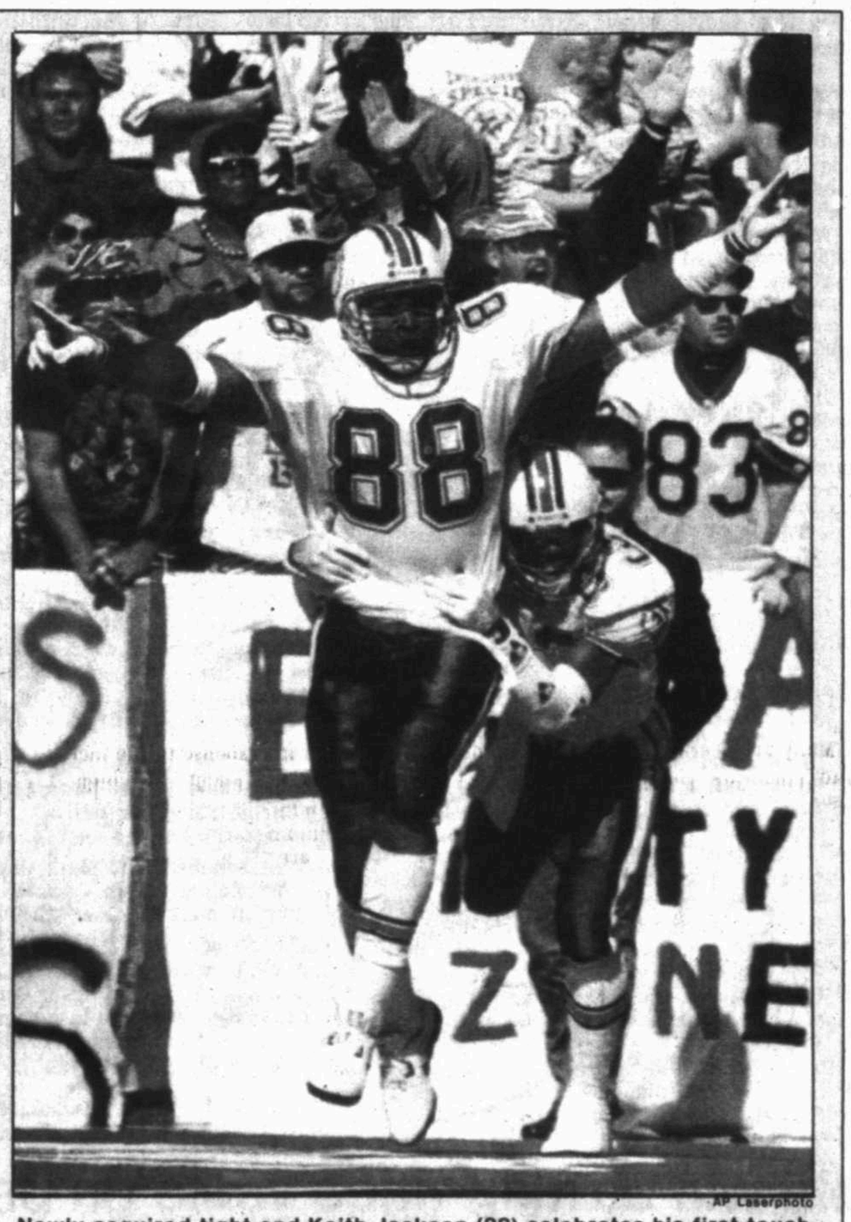

"In a limited amount of time, he did a heck of a job," Shula said of his new tight end. "It was outstanding for a guy that didn't play any preseason or training camp. He handled the mental end of it as well as the physical."

But if he was the difference, it was in a subtle way — almost as if Jackson had brought the Eagles' league-leading defense with him against a team that had averaged 38 points in its four victories and 40 points against the Dolphins in their previous three meetings. Sunday, the Dolphins forced five turnovers, four of which led to scores, as they used five defensive backs and two down linemen much of the way against Buffalo's no-huddle offense.

Oliver got three of those turnovers, as the Dolphins won for only the second time in their last 12 meetings with Buffalo and took over first place in the AFC East from the Bills — 4-0 to 4-1. His 170 yards in returns were the second most in a game in NFL history.

"I've seen their routes for three years and it was about time I started breaking on them," Oliver said.

Oliver wasn't the only hero for the Miami defense as the Dolphins broke a 17-game AFC East winning streak by the Bills.

Washington still No. 1

Associated Press

Despite its dramatic win over Florida State, second-ranked Miami failed to gain much ground on No. 1 Washington in Sunday's Associated Press college football poll.

Washington, which took over the top spot last week following Miami's 8-7 win over Arizona, received 42 first-place votes and 1,528 points after beating Southern Cal 17-10.

Miami, which beat Florida State 19-16 Saturday when the Seminoles missed a last-second field goal, got 16 first-place votes and 1,497 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

That means Washington (4-0) lost two first-place votes and Miami (4-0) gained four from the previous week. There had been speculation that Miami might close the gap more with a win over Florida State, which was ranked No. 3 at the time of the game.

The Hurricanes will get another chance to impress voters next Saturday when they visit No. 7 Penn State. Consecutive victories over Top 10 opponents would probably move Miami even closer to Washington, which plays No. 24 California next.

Michigan (3-0-1) moved up a notch to No. 3 after whipping Iowa 52-28, and Tennessee (5-0) climbed three spots to No. 4 with a 20-0 victory over LSU. Michigan received one first-place vote and Tennessee got two.

Texas A&M (5-0) remained No. 5 after edging Texas Tech 19-17. Alabama (5-0), which received one first-place vote, jumped three places to No. 6 after routing South Carolina 48-7.

Penn State (5-0) rose one spot to No. 7 after beating Rutgers 38-24, and Florida State (4-1) dropped to No. 8 after losing to Miami for the seventh time in eight years.

Idle Colorado (4-0) moved up one place to No. 9, and Virginia (5-0) jumped four spots to No. 10 after downing Wake Forest 31-17.

California, unranked the past three weeks, rose to No. 24.

Harbaugh makes wrong audible

■ Bears' quarterback changes one play at the line of scrimmage and Chicago loses.

Associated Press

Jim Harbaugh messed with Mike Ditka's team. And, Ditka says, it won't happen again. Or else.

The Chicago Bears had a 20-0 fourth-quarter lead, the Metrodome crowd was completely out of the game and the Minnesota Vikings appeared to be beaten.

Then Harbaugh, who had played almost perfectly until that point, changed a Ditka-called, first-down play at the the line of scrimmage — the quarterback's only audible of the game.

Harbaugh's bad pass intended for Neal Anderson was intercepted by Todd Scott, who went 35 yards for the touchdown that ignited Minnesota's 21-20 victory Sunday.

"I'll just say this: If it happens again, there will be changes made and they will be definite and they will be permanent," Ditka said. "I'm not going to put 47 players' futures in the hands of one player who thinks he knows more than I do."

After Scott's interception with 14:03 to play, the Bears managed only two first downs. Meanwhile, Minnesota's offense, which had sputtered and had committed four turnovers, caught fire against a Chicago defense that entered the game as the NFL's worst.

Rich Gannon completed all seven passes he threw during two touchdown drives, the latter capped by Roger Craig's 1-yard run, as the Vikings took sole possession of first place in the NFC Central.

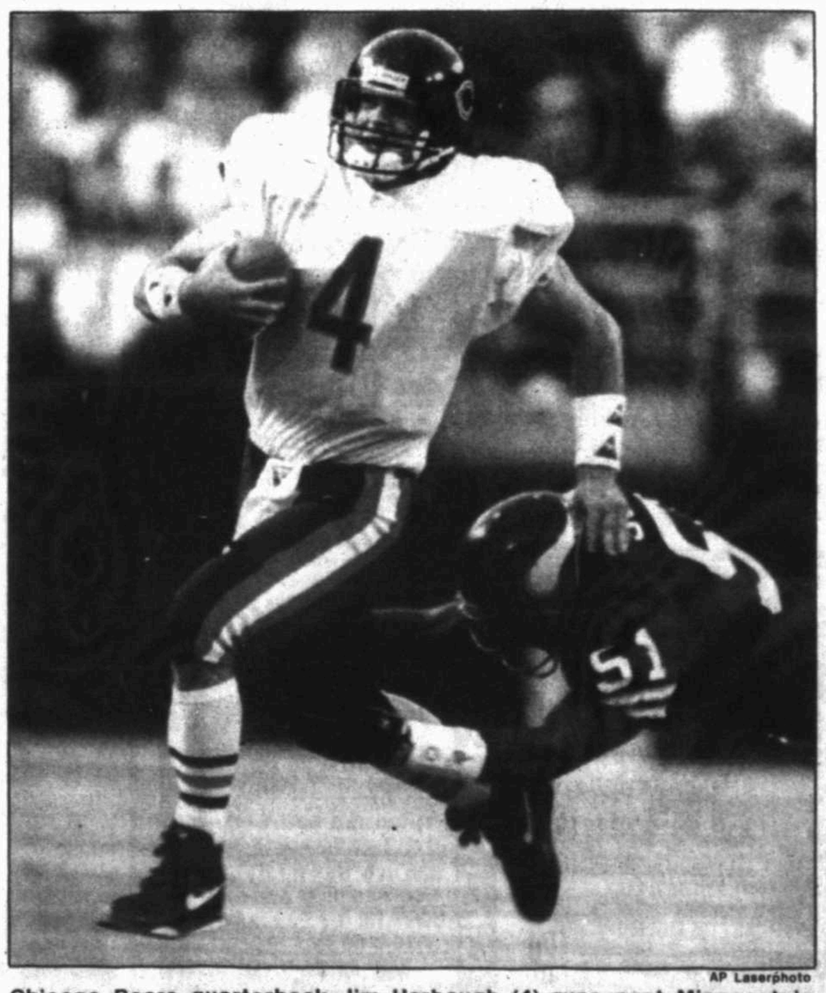

Minnesota is 4-1 for the first time since 1977. Chicago (2-3) has a losing record after five games for the first time since 1983, Ditka's second year as coach. The Bears have been outscored 100-34 in the second halves of their last three games.

Gannon, whose two interceptions almost put the Vikings into an inescapable hole, empathized with Harbaugh.

"He played a great game," Gannon said. "He just made one bad mistake. He didn't go back out there on defense and give up two touchdowns."

But Ditka didn't blame the defense. And he didn't wait until after the game to let Harbaugh know how he jors, despite jamming three fingers on his pitching hand knocking down a line drive in the fourth inning. The injury forced Brown to leave after six innings, after he'd allowed seven hits and four runs, walking two and striking out five.

Brian Downing, in the last at-bat of his 19-year career, singled in the first. Rafael Palmeiro also singled before Gonzalez singled to score pinch-runner Jeff Frye and put Texas up 1-0.

In the third, David Hulse doubled and scored on Palmeiro's single, then Gonzalez homered to make it 4-0.

Athletics 7, Brewers 1

OAKLAND — AL West champion Oakland tuned up for the playoffs with a victory over Milwaukee, breaking the 10-game winning streak of Brewers' rookie Cal Eldred.

Rickey Henderson got his 2,000th hit and Henry Mercedes hit a tie-breaking triple for Oakland.

The A's travel to Toronto to face David Cone in the opening game of the AL playoffs Wednesday night. Dave Stewart will start for Oakland, which won its fourth AL West title in five seasons.

Orioles 4, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Jeff Tackett hit a sacrifice fly in the 13th inning, giving Baltimore a win over Cleveland before the largest season-ending crowd at Cleveland Stadium in 44 years.

The crowd of 30,187 was the most for a season finale in Cleveland since 1948, the year of the Indians' last World Series championship. The Indians completed a 19-game turnaround from 1991, when they lost a franchise-record 105 games.

The Orioles' improvement was even greater, 22 games ahead of last year. Baltimore ended in third place at 89-73, while Cleveland tied for fourth at 76-86 with the New York Yankees.

Twins 6, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY — George Brett singled and doubled in his final two plate appearances, and Kirby Puckett went 1 for 2 with an RBI single in what may have been his last game for Minnesota.

Five pitchers combined to shut out Kansas City and leave the Royals with their worst record since 1970.

The Twins, who won the 1991 World Series, finished at 90-72 and second to Oakland in the AL West. It was the ninth time in club history that Minnesota won 90 or more games.

Puckett is eligible for free agency after completing a $9 million, three-year contract.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 4

TORONTO — David Cone pitched two scoreless innings in a tuneup for his start in Game 2 of the playoffs, and Toronto finished off the regular season with a festive victory over Detroit.

The AL East champion Blue Jays begin the playoffs Wednesday night at home against Oakland. The teams split 12 games this season, and Jack Morris will start for Toronto in the opener against Dave Stewart in a matchup of two of baseball's best big-game pitchers.

A crowd of 50,421, the 68th sellout of the year at SkyDome, pushed Toronto's attendance to a major-league record of 4,028,318. This was the third straight season the Blue Jays have set the mark, and when the total was announced on the scoreboard, indoor fireworks exploded and the players came out of the dugouts to applaud the fans.

Red Sox 8, Yankees 2

BOSTON — Boston enjoyed a rare afternoon of satisfaction to end a season of misery, defeating old rival New York.

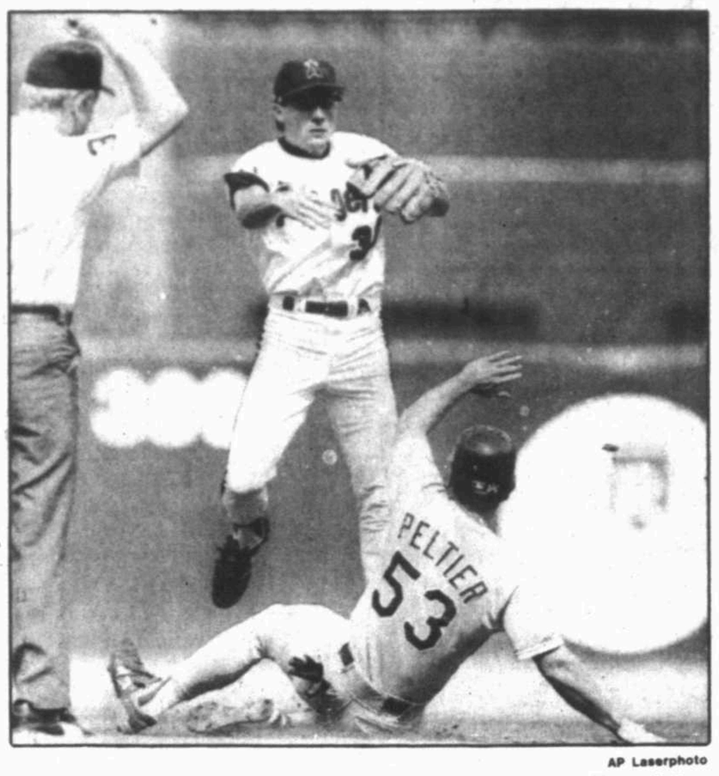

It couldn't entirely ease Boston's season, however, as the Red Sox finished 73-89 and in last place for the first time since 1932.

Bob Zupcic had a pair of run-scoring singles and the Red Sox scored five runs in the seventh inning to defeat the Yankees, who finished 76-86, a five-game improvement from 1991.

Mariners 4, White Sox 3

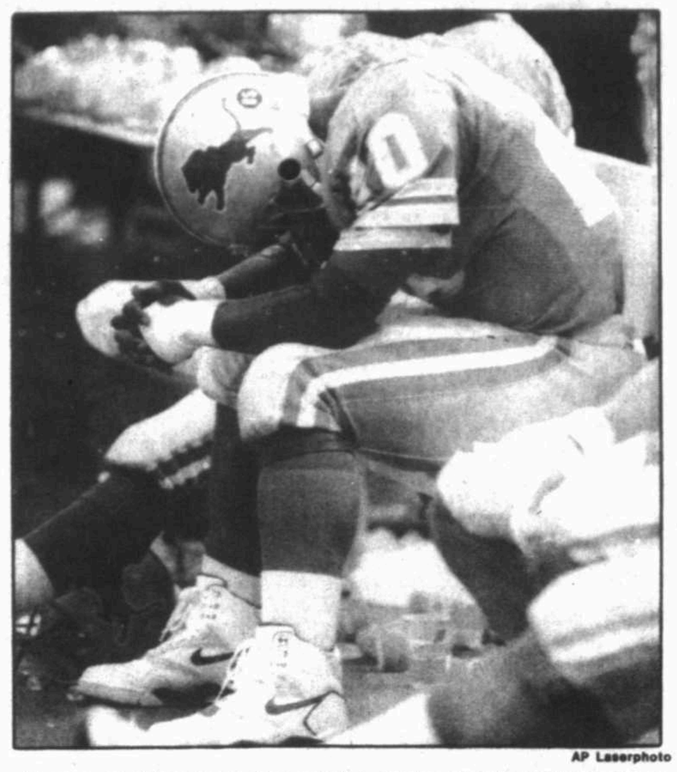

SEATTLE — Seattle scored four runs in the third inning to end Jack McDowell's chance for his 21st victory and cap an unsuccessful season with a win over Chicago.

McDowell (20-10) lost for the third time in his fifth start since winning No. 20 on Sept. 8. He's had two no decisions in that span and failed to catch Jack Morris of Toronto and Kevin Brown of Texas for most victories in the majors.

felt.

Immediately after Scott scored, Ditka was in Harbaugh's face — cursing, screaming and gesturing wildly. Ditka's tirade was shown on the Metrodome scoreboard as the crowd roared with delight.

While Harbaugh's teammates didn't blame their quarterback, Harbaugh made no excuses.

"It was a bad call, a bad audible," he said. "It was my fault."

Broncos 20, Chiefs 19

John Elway, the master of late-game heroics, enhanced his reputation by throwing two touchdown passes in the final two minutes, including a 12-yarder to Vance Johnson with 38 seconds left, as the Broncos rallied to beat Kansas City (3-2) to take sole possession of first place in the AFC West.

The Broncos (4-1) trailed 19-6 after Nick Lowery's fourth field goal of the game with five minutes left. Then Elway drove the Broncos 80 yards in 14 plays, capped by a 25-yard scoring pass to Mark Jackson with 1:55 remaining. After a Kansas City punt, Elway hit Johnson for the TD and David Treadwell's extra point skimmed the upright to give the Broncos their 10th straight victory over Kansas City at Mile High Stadium.

49ers 27, Rams 24

Steve Young scrambled for two fourth-quarter touchdowns, then directed a 77-yard drive that ended in Mike Cofer's 21-yard field goal with 1 second left as San Francisco (4-1) retained first place in the NFC West.

The winning march came after the Rams' Jim Everett hit Willie Anderson with a 9-yard scoring pass with 1:50 remaining, tying the score 24-24. Earlier in the period, Young ran 39 and 8 yards for TDs — both times after turnovers by Los Angeles (2-3).

Cardinals 27, Redskins 24

Phoenix (1-3) ended an 11-game losing streak by rallying from a 24-6 fourth-quarter deficit as Robert Massey returned two interceptions for TDs and Chris Chandler threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Larry Centers with 41 seconds remaining.

The Redskins (2-2) had a chance to tie the score and send the game into overtime, but Chip Lohmiller was wide right on a 40-yard field goal attempt as time expired. Earnest Byner ran for two Washington touchdowns.

Raiders 13, Giants 10

The Raiders (1-4) snapped their eight-game losing streak, edging the Giants (1-3) on Jeff Jaeger's career-long 54-yard field goal with 7:15 left. Jaeger had missed eight field goals this season, including two in the first half against the Giants, before connecting from 26 yards in the third quarter and his game-winner.

Saints 13, Lions 7

New Orleans' stingy defense limited Barry Sanders to 36 yards on nine carries and the visiting Saints had six sacks, including two each by Pat Swilling and Wayne Martin. New Orleans (3-2) has yielded an average of less than 10 points per game.

The key play was Frank Warren's fumble recovery of a fumble at the Detroit 14 in the third quarter. Four plays later, rookie Vaughn Dunbar, who had 70 yards on 22 carries, scored from the 1 to put New Orleans ahead 10-7. Morten Andersen kicked field goals of 50 and 22 yards for the Saints as Detroit fell to 1-4.

Falcons 24, Packers 10

Atlanta's Chris Miller outdueled his former understudy, Brett Favre, at the Georgia Dome by connecting for three touchdown passes — 10 and 21 yards to Andre Rison and 2 yards to Mike Pritchard — as the Falcons (2-3) ended a three-game losing streak.

Colts 24, Buccaneers 14

Jeff George, playing his first game of the season after missing three games with a thumb injury, threw second-half scoring passes of 34 yards to Jesse Hester and 14 yards to Kerry Cash, rallying the visiting Colts (2-3).

Chargers 17, Seahawks 6

Rookie coach Bobby Ross got his first victory as the Chargers (1-4), who had scored only 29 points in four games, finally got their offense untracked against the Seahawks (1-4). The key to the offense was Anthony Miller, who caught nine passes for 142 yards.

Jets 30, Patriots 21

Even without their two best pass-rushers, New York had too much defense for anemic New England.

The Jets won their first game after four straight losses, sacking Hugh Millen seven times for 59 yards in a 30-21 decision.

NL: Padres sink Braves to protect third place

(From 1C)

Padres 4, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine missed a chance for his 21st victory, and Paul Faries hit a run-scoring single in the 12th inning as NL West champion Atlanta finished the regular season with a loss to San Diego.

Glavine, who finished tied with Chicago's Greg Maddux for the NL victory lead at 20, allowed one hit in five innings but lost a chance to win when Jeff Reardon gave up an RBI single to Guillermo Velasquez in the ninth, tying the score at 3-all.

Despite the loss, the Braves finished with the best record in the majors at 98-64. The begin the NL playoffs at home Tuesday night, with John Smoltz (15-12) pitching against Pittsburgh's Doug Drabek (15-11).

San Diego finished one game ahead of Houston for third place.

Pirates 2, Mets 0

NEW YORK — Barry Bonds hit his career-high 34th home run, and Tim Wakefield and three relievers combined on a three-hitter as NL East champion Pittsburgh finished the regular season with a victory over New York.

Bonds, who hit 33 homers in 1990, homered in the seventh off Bret Saberhagen (3-5). Center fielder Pat Howell sprained his right knee when he crashed into the fence attempting to catch the drive, and left the game.

Wakefield (8-1), the scheduled Game 3 starter in the playoffs against Atlanta, made his 13th start of the season and won his fifth consecutive decision. He struck out three, walked one and gave up only a fourth-inning single to Dave Gallagher.

Giants 6, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — The Giants extended their San Francisco stay by at least a few innings before Greg Litton's pinch grand slam in the 13th inning gave them a victory over Cincinnati.

Litton's first career grand slam came off Scott Ruskin (4-3) and made up for a blown eighth-inning lead. It also made Lou Piniella a loser in perhaps his final game as manager of the Reds.

The Giants may move to St. Petersburg, Fla., after completing their 35th season in San Francisco. The National League has given a Bay area group time to make a counteroffer to keep the team in California, but no vote has been scheduled yet.

Reds owner Marge Schott has given no indication whether she wants Lou Piniella back as manager.

Cardinals 6, Phillies 3

ST. LOUIS — Ozzie Smith had two infield hits in what could be his final appearance for St. Louis and Ray Lankford hit a two-run homer in a victory over Philadelphia.

Smith also stole a base and drove in a run for the Cardinals, who closed the season by winning five of six. Smith, who led the team with a .295 average, is eligible for free agency after the season and is expected to go that route although he hasn't ruled out returning to the team for a 12th season.

Lankford homered with Smith aboard in the first off Tommy Greene (3-3), becoming the first to hit 20 home runs and steal 20 bases for St. Louis since Lou Brock in 1967.

Cubs 3, Expos 2

CHICAGO — Andre Dawson's 399th career home run, a three-run shot in the third inning, helped carry Chicago over Montreal.

Ryne Sandberg and Mark Grace both had two-out singles before Dawson hit his 22nd homer off Mark Gardner (12-10).

It was Dawson's first home run since Sept. 18 and tied him with Al Kaline for 25th all-time. Dawson, in what could be his last appearance with Chicago, is second in homers among active players behind Dave Winfield's 406 and one ahead of Eddie Murray.

Dawson, with the Cubs since 1987, is eligible for free agency after this season.

Martinez, Sheffield win batting titles while on bench

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Edgar Martinez and Gary Sheffield won their first batting titles Sunday while sitting the bench, and Cecil Fielder became the first player to lead the majors in runs batted in for three consecutive years.

Fred McGriff was one of the new names among the leaders, winning the NL home run title with 35, the lowest total for an NL leader in a complete season since 1946.

Among the new names were a few familiar ones, like Boston's Roger Clemens, who won his third consecutive AL ERA title and his fourth overall. Clemens is the first AL pitcher to lead in ERA for three straight seasons since Lefty Grove of the Philadelphia Athletics from 1929-32.

Martinez hit .343 and became the first Seattle Mariner to win an AL batting title, finishing 14 points ahead of Minnesota's Kirby Puckett. It was the highest batting average in the AL since Boston's Wade Boggs hit .366 in 1988.

Sheffield, who flirted with a run at the NL triple crown, finished at .330 for the San Diego Padres, six points ahead of Pittsburgh's Andy Van Slyke.

Martinez's season ended after surgery to remove bone spurs from his right shoulder on Sept. 19. Sheffield missed the end of the season after fracturing his right index finger Tuesday night.

McGriff, who reached 30 homers for the fifth straight season, had the lowest total for an NL leader since Mike Schmidt hit 31 in the strike-shortened season of 1981. Not counting that year, it's the lowest total to lead the NL since Pittsburgh's Ralph Kiner hit 23 in 1946.

Juan Gonzalez of the Texas Rangers won the AL home run title by hitting his 43rd Sunday, beating Oakland's Mark McGwire by one. Gonzalez, 23, is the team's first home run champion since Frank Howard hit 44 in 1970, when it was the Washington Senators.

Fielder topped both leagues in RBIs with 124, becoming the first player to lead that category in the majors for three straight seasons since RBIs became a statistic in 1920.

Darren Daulton of the Philadelphia Phillies led the NL with 109 RBIs, while Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds led in runs with 109 and Atlanta's Terry Pendleton and Van Slyke tied for the lead in hits with 199 each. Pendleton led last year with 187.

Marquis Grissom of the Montreal Expos won his second straight NL steals title with 78, while Kenny Lofton of Cleveland led the AL with 66. It was only the second time since 1980 that Rickey Henderson didn't lead that category, and it was the first time a Cleveland player led since 1906, when Elmer Flick tied Washington's John Anderson at 39.

Tony Phillips of Detroit topped the AL in runs with 114, the first Tiger to win that category since Ron LeFlore had 126 in 1978. Puckett won his fourth hits title with 210; he led in 1988 and 1989 and tied Kevin Seitzer for the lead in 1987.

McGwire led the AL in slugging percentage at .585, while Chicago's Frank Thomas led in on-base percentage at .439 going into his final game.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Domestic life could have its problems today. Take your time when making decisions. Your business instincts are right on target. Private dealings could spell tremendous financial success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends and relatives are a source of good news or valuable advice today. A boss may overlook your efforts; if so, be patient. Appointments and important details must not be left dangling.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An opportunity to serve others will give you more pleasure than you can imagine. Help your community. Doing something spontaneous will make any depressing thoughts vanish into thin air!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Feel free to pursue your career and romantic aims. There is no mountain high enough or valley deep enough to keep you from reaching your dreams.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What seems like a good financial idea might not be, even if friends promote it. Look beneath the surface. Although it takes a lot of backbone to stand tall, the results will be rewarding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finalize travel plans before reservations disappear. Romance becomes more meaningful when you act more attentive. Resolve any conflicts by peaceful means.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Manipulative behavior will not get you what you want. Refuse to give in to feelings of jealousy! Put your many talents to work on a wonderful new project. Watch a classic movie tonight.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q753 ♡KQJ4 ◇A8 ♣A83
Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—With a balanced 16 points, there is a tendency to jump to 3 NT. However, such action should be taken only with an absolutely flat hand. Here, the doubleton diamond means that, if a 4-4 major-suit fit can be located, the trick-taking powers of this hand are considerably enhanced. Respond one heart, and await partner's reaction.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠65 ♡K107 ◇7 ♣AK86532
In first seat, what is your opening bid?
A.—With 2 1/2 quick tricks, this hand is too good for any pre-emptive action. Our choice would be to open one club, planning to rebid clubs as often as necessary thereafter to describe the distributional nature of the hand. This is not the sort of hand which warrants passing now and backing in later—the auction might be too high and the quality of the suit lacks something.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠43 ♡KQ10952 ◇Q762 ♣6
Your left-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
A.—If you play weak jump overcalls, this hand is perfect, though minimum at this vulnerabilty, for a leap to two hearts. If not, we would overcall one heart despite the fact that the intervention might cause partner to take some unhappy action later, expecting more in the way of defense from us.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK9832 ♡A7 ◇1072 ♣K3
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Shame on you for thinking we're trying to trick you! By no standard is your hand worth a jump shift to two spades—neither the high-card strength nor the suit quality is sufficient. Respond one spade and see what partner rebids.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠42 ♡J873 ◇KJ754 ♣42
Partner opens the bidding with one spade and the next hand passes. What action do you take?
A.—We know many players would respond one no trump in the hope of finding a red-suit fit, especially those playing forcing no-trump responses. However, our experience is that it is best to pass this type of hand—it gets ugly when partner rebids two clubs.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ4 ♡3 ◇AQ987 ♣AJ94
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with four hearts. What action do you take?
A.—Hardly a robust hand, and only three spades to boot. However, should you pass the auction will surely end right there, and the opponents could be stealing you blind. By and large, a double (for takeout, of course, though partner can convert) stands to gain more than it loses in the long run.

Brokaw ponders politics; Liz's husband battles DUI

CORONA, Calif. — An attorney for Larry Fortensky, Elizabeth Taylor's husband, has asked a panel of judges to overturn his 1987 drunken driving conviction.

Fortensky

Lawyer Richard Moore argued Friday that California Highway Patrol officers had no right to stop Fortensky because a tip about an erratic driver was anonymous.

The officers, Moore said, shouldn't have stopped Fortensky unless they saw for themselves that something was wrong. Arrest reports said they hadn't.

Moore didn't dispute test results that said Fortensky was intoxicated.

Fortensky, 40, pleaded no contest to driving under the influence and driving with an open container of alcohol the night of Oct. 26, 1987. He was given three years' probation, fined $1,178 and ordered to attend an alcohol abuse program.

Three Riverside County appellate judges are expected to rule this week on Fortensky's appeal.

Fortensky and Miss Taylor were married in October 1991. They met while undergoing substance abuse treatment at the Betty Ford Center.

RADNOR, Pa. — NBC News anchor Tom Brokaw may run for U.S. Senate when his contract expires next year, TV Guide reported.

Brokaw

He could run in Montana, where he now spends a month each year, the magazine reported in its Oct. 10 issue. A Senate election is scheduled there in 1994. A seat comes open in his native South Dakota in 1996.

Brokaw denied any political ambition and his attorney said talks about extending his contract have begun with NBC.

"I love my country too much to entrust it to me," Brokaw said, laughing.

But long-time news executive Av Westin, now with Time Warner Inc., said there's been "considerable talk" at NBC about a Brokaw candidacy.

GLASSBORO, N.J. — Robert Hegyes, who played Juan Epstein on television's "Welcome Back Kotter," is back.

The 41-year-old Hegyes (pronounced hej'-yes) is a visiting professor at Rowan College, called Glassboro State College when he graduated in 1973.

"I'm giving something back, and I am appreciated," he said.

He received a bachelor's degree in speech-theater and secondary education. He went on to become one of the stars of the ABC series that ran from 1975 through 1979.

Hegyes, married with two children, is instructing students in screenwriting, directing and acting. He said he is working on two screenplays and developing a comedy for Warner Brothers Television.

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II made Akio Morita, the chairman of Sony Corp., an honorary knight.

Morita

Morita, 71, was given the award at the British Embassy in Tokyo by Welsh Secretary David Hunt, who is leading an investment mission to the Far East.

The knighthood was in recognition of Morita's contributions to British industry, exports and Anglo-Japanese relations, the Welsh Office said Sunday.

Morita and fellow engineer Masaru Ibuyka founded Tokyo Telecommunications Engineering Corp. in 1946, adopting the name Sony in 1958.

In the 1950s, the company bought rights to an American invention called the transistor and used it in a way its originators never imagined — in radios. Sony went on to shrink all kinds of electronic equipment and build an empire.

"If you go through life convinced that your way is always best, all the new ideas in the world will pass you by," he wrote in his 1986 autobiography, "Made In Japan."

NEW YORK — Madonna's "Erotica" video won't be broadcast on NBC's "Friday Night Videos" or shown on a giant screen at Times Square because its bondage imagery was deemed too racy.

The video made its debut Friday on MTV. It includes Madonna using whips and chains, kissing women and performing oral sex on a doll.

"Friday Night Videos" won't show the five-minute video, but it will report on it, said producer Pearl Lieberman. "It's very stimulating," he said.

Sony nixed radio station Z-100's plan to show the video on the Times Square screen, which Sony owns, because of its content, said Steve Kingston, the station's program director.

MTV doesn't think "Erotica" is too hot to handle — at least late at night. It showed the complete video at midnight.

Fuel gamble turns into victory

Bobby Rahal owns IndyCar points lead with only one race left

NAZARETH, Pa. (AP) — Bobby Rahal won when he had to, gambling on fuel Sunday and beating Michael Andretti to the checkered flag in the Bosch Spark Plug Grand Prix.

The victory boosted Rahal, who had lost the top spot by failing to finish the last two races, back into the IndyCar PPG Cup point lead with only the Oct. 18 race at Monterey, Calif., remaining.

His fourth victory of the season — third on a one-mile oval — gave Rahal a 12-point (182-170) lead over defending champion Andretti. Al Unser Jr. finished 11th and slipped to third in the points standings.

Emerson Fittipaldi finished three laps down in seventh and fell out of the championship battle.

Rahal, the 1986 and 1987 series champion, pitted for the second and last time in the 200-lap race at Pennsylvania International Raceway on lap 115 during one of four caution periods in the race.

He took the lead on lap 155 during the last of those cautions when Andretti, who had led most of the way after starting from the pole, made a pit stop — his third of the race — to top off his fuel tank.

At the end, Andretti's Lola-Ford Cosworth was chasing Rahal's Lola-Chevrolet and simply couldn't catch him in the heavy traffic on the tight oval. But the big question was whether Rahal could go 85 miles on one tank of fuel — about 15 miles further than expected.

"We just took a chance and we knew it was going to be close," said Carl Hogan, co-owner of the winning team with Rahal. "After we were committed to it, we had to go for it. I doubt if we have more than half a gallon left, but what we had was just enough."

"I would have liked to have gotten a big lead and been able to baby it, but, with the traffic so bad, I had to run hard all the way," Rahal said.

Andretti, set to drive in Formula One in 1993, was disappointed in his finish before the home crowd.

"We had enough to get Bobby, but we just made that one extra pit stop. The guys told me to stay out, but I didn't hear them," he said. "Then, when I came in, they didn't wave me back out. If they had, I probably would have won it. But I stayed in and topped it off and that was the race. It's too bad."

Andretti led from the start until he pitted during the first caution flag after John Jones of Canada crashed on the backstretch. Jones was not injured, but in the ensuing stops by the leaders, both Fittipaldi and John Andretti lost laps.

Michael Andretti came back out in front and stayed there until Ted Prappas had his engine blown on lap 113, bringing out the second yellow and sending most of the leaders back to the pits.

Paul Tracy, Fittipaldi's 23-year-old Canadian teammate, stayed on the track and took the lead.

On the restart, Dennis Vitolo spun coming off turn two and, in the smoke and chaos of cars diving for openings, John Andretti ran into and under Vitolo's car. One of Vitolo's tires hit Andretti's helmet, leaving a black mark, but he was not injured.

Scott Goodyear still had not made his second pit stop and the series of cautions allowed him to get back on the lead lap.

Tracy led until he pitted on lap 149 under green, giving up the top spot to Michael Andretti, with Rahal second.

Mike Groff's blown engine on lap 155 was the setting for Andretti's final stop, and the rest of the race was run under green conditions, with Rahal beating Andretti to the finish by 0.788-second.

Tracy wound up third, passing fellow Canadian Goodyear four laps from the finish. Mario Andretti, Michael's father and teammate, was a lap down in fifth, followed by Raul Boesel of Brazil two more laps behind.

Rahal averaged 128.848 mph, leading only the final 44 laps. Michael Andretti led three times for 117 laps.

Once ahead of the game, SWC now MIA

By Galyn Wilkins
N.Y. Times News Service

It has almost reached a stage. The whining, pound-the-walls stage. The tantrum stage. Almost the stage where I consider commuting to Ann Arbor or Birmingham on the weekends.

I've found myself sleepless in the middle of the night reading through old game programs, gazing wistfully at players seen long ago through binoculars from the press box. Great players, great teams, great Saturdays, great weeks of anticipation.

Gone. Faded memories. My game is gone, and I want it back.

Who broke into my neighborhood in the middle of the night, or the middle of the last decade, and stole college football? Who hijacked it to faraway regions of the country?

I wander around the TV games and see marvelous plays being made in Miami, in Michigan, in California, by fast, strong expatriates from Texas high schools. No reason to stick around this neighborhood. No big games here. Crowds dwindling. Poll votes dwindling. Coaches moving around. Teams moving.

I can't remember a game talked about for weeks before and talked about for weeks afterward. Can't remember a SWC quarterback on an All-America team in the past 15 years. (There has been only one, Andre Ware of Houston in 1989.)

I want my game back, my Saturday afternoons back with something more on the table than Texas vs. North Texas or Tech vs. Oregon or Baylor vs. Utah State. I want something that would fill Amon Carter Stadium. The Walk of Frogs? I want to see them good enough to walk through a stadium wall, and into something more exotic than Western Michigan or Oklahoma State.

I think of college football in my neighborhood like historian William L. Shirer thought about the country. "Every time I get depressed about it, every time I think the country is in deep trouble, something encouraging happens," he said once.

There hasn't been many encouraging events lately. John Jenkins, for example, appeared to be a bright, space-age coach with a revolutionary offense at Houston. Turns out to be revolutionary only against those rural colleges from Louisiana. At Miami or Michigan it is a space-age dud.

Still, Houston is only one of two SWC teams to have finished in the Top 10 in any of the past seven years. The other was the Aggies in 1987. Texas hasn't been there in nine years.

This isn't like walking into a familiar room and noticing that a picture on the wall is crooked. It's not like I can just straighten it and Saturdays will look the same again. No, the picture itself is missing.

It's odd, by the way, how the perspective of a guy looking at his game through press-box binoculars changes. In the 1960s when Texas and Arkansas were thrashing their way through the league with mild opposition, I thought they made the league top heavy and out of balance. They were too powerful, with the limitless scholarships. Now, I'd give a lot to be looking forward to one of their high-stakes battles. A lot to be counting down toward a match of ranked Sooners and Longhorns on Saturday.

Something encouraging. Maybe, the boss said late last week, it could happen in College Station.

And it did. Sort of. The Aggies' 19-17 victory against a desperate Texas Tech was a throwback to the old days, a game of playmaker artists, a game with a dazzling winning drive in the last minutes, a game with only one turnover and one 5-yard penalty. Big crowd, Nice day. A rare, old-fashioned day.

Will there be more of these? Probably not. A&M won't meet a ranked team until the Cotton Bowl. Meanwhile, Tech will be lucky to break even, SMU is in trouble with the law again, Baylor has been invisible, TCU is starting over again and Texas might not show up in the Top 10 for another 10 years.

My game. I'd like it back. And I'm willing to wait at least another week.

Is Ozzie Smith out at St. Louis?

ST. LOUIS (AP) — If Sunday was Ozzie Smith's final game with the Cardinals, he can remember five standing ovations from his St. Louis fans.

The 37-year-old shortstop led the team with a .295 average and 43 stolen bases. He is eligible for free agency, and the Cardinals haven't indicated what offers they'll make to sign him.

"I'd like to be here next year, but that's not up to me," Smith said after the Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-3.

He went 2 for 3 with an RBI and a steal. His first ovation from the crowd of 32,475 came when he caught the ceremonial first pitch from actor Tom Selleck. Fans cheered again when Smith performed his traditional backflip at the start of the game.

Smith tipped his cap, bowed and waved to the crowd when he left at the start of the sixth.

"I've done all I can do," Smith said. "As a ballplayer, the only things you can control are the things on the field."

Smith wants a two-year deal, while the Cardinals say they want to sign him for one year at a time.

"There are no talks planned that I know of," Smith said. "I'm going to listen to what offers are out there."

Smith said he was ready for the emotional display.

"I've had a lot of time to get prepared this game," he said. "This whole situation has been lingering for two years. These are the greatest fans in the world."

Cardinals manager Joe Torre said he wants Smith as his shortstop next year.
