Coming Sunday

Preschool

Each year thousands of children enter the school system for the first time. Read how attending a preschool can help many of these youngsters ease into school in Sunday's Lifestyle section.

Halloween

Real-life "monsters" have been putting a scare into Halloween trick-or-treating in the past few years. In Sunday's "Speaking Out" column, Odessan Mrs. William L. Quillen tells how residents can be assured of a safe Halloween.

Politics

Melissa Hirsch and Jan Fisher are just two of several women who are taking leadership roles in Odessa and Ector County politics. Read about them in Sunday's Local section.

Ferraro: No faith in polls

NEW YORK (AP) — Enjoying big crowds at many rallies, Geraldine A. Ferraro doesn't put much faith in polls that show the Democratic ticket trailing badly. So she takes her own, "unbiased, scientific poll" at campaign events and somehow the Mondale-Ferraro ticket always wins big in those samplings.

"Are we going to win this election?" she asked rallies from Akron, Ohio, to Raleigh, N.C., this week.

The crowd always roared back "Yes."

The Democratic vice presidential candidate professes not to believe the polls, which show President Reagan leading just about everywhere across the country, with the national margin hovering between 15 and 20 percentage points.

At a Raleigh fund-raiser this week, the New York Congresswoman related an interview she had just had.

"I was talking to a reporter and she said, 'What about the polls, the polls?' " Ms. Ferraro told the crowd of about 300. "And I said, 'You saw the enthusiasm here today.' "

"But what about the men?" the reporter said.

"And I said I think they're OK," Ms. Ferraro replied.

"Well, what do you think they think about you?" the reporter continued.

"They seem enthusiastic," Ms. Ferraro replied, "but maybe they are such gentlemen they wouldn't tell me otherwise."

The vice presidential candidate then described the rally in Raleigh, where she drew more than 5,000 people in a state were the ticket is far behind the Republicans.

"The enthusiasm that you saw this afternoon is enthusiasm we see throughout the country," she said. "I've never seen so much energy as we're seen in the last two months. It is very exciting, a little bit intimidating, I must say."

And then in Atlanta, she drew a crowd that came close to 20,000 at lunchtime and then a packed house of 4,000 in Memphis — with the Rev. Jesse Jackson along as well. And in Harrisburg, 2,500 filled the hall for her and hundreds more stood outside the building, unable to get in but listening on a public address system.

But while she professes not to believe the polls, Ms. Ferraro made a long trip to Belvidere, Ill., this week to find out why one particular poll is so disappointing.

She went to a Chrysler plant outside of Rockford, Ill., and asked the workers directly why one-third of the members of the United Auto Workers union say they will vote for Reagan.

It was a gamble, various staff members conceded privately, but it was a gamble that seemed to pay off.

"I don't know if it's orthodox politics to do this," she told the workers, "but I don't care about orthodox politics...So could someone, anyone let me know why we are losing one-third of the UAW workers?"

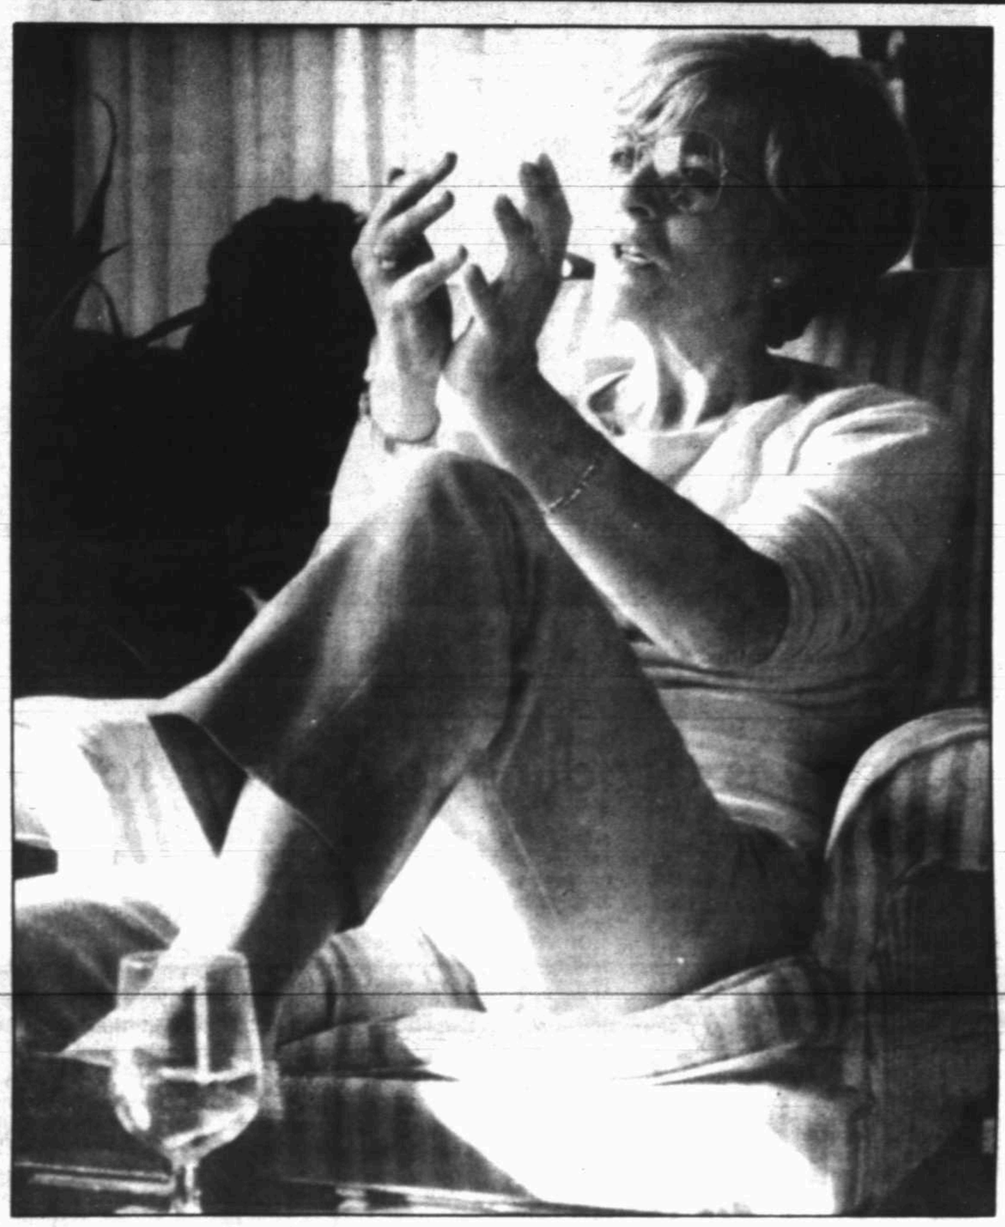

At first there was no response and Ms. Ferraro urged, pleaded and implored the workers to tell her.

And gradually, she teased some tough questions out of the mostly male workers — Jimmy Carter, Iran, inflation, tax cuts, abortion were all on the minds of the usually Democratic workers thinking about voting Republican.

To one — who said a woman had said she receives several government benefit checks a month — Ms. Ferraro said: "I have to say I just don't believe it."

But she told the man to give her staff the name of the "welfare cheat" so action could be taken.

And Ms. Ferraro said over and over again that things are looking up and that the debate Sunday between Walter F. Mondale and Ronald Reagan will be a turning point.

Legislature stalled over spending bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislators failed to meet their goal of adjourning for the year Friday as they struggled to clear the last two obstacles to ending the 98th Congress — major bills to keep most of the government in business and allow the Treasury to borrow another $250 billion.

House and Senate negotiators adjourned until Tuesday morning after conference committee members found themselves in a stalemate over aid to U.S.-backed rebels in Nicaragua and other items in the Pentagon budget.

"It appears we cannot come to an agreement at this point in time," said Rep. Joseph Addabo, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee's defense subcommittee.

Presidential politics and the threat of a veto also complicated the bargaining.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, prodded the negotiators to finish work, saying Congress might still be arguing over the emergency money bill until late October. He added, "In all likelihood, if we're here until that period of October, we can look forward to a (post-election) lame duck session."

While action bogged down on the omnibus spending bill, Congress passed a stopgap measure that would temporarily provide money to government agencies through midnight Tuesday. That would avert disruptions of government operations such as those that occurred Thursday when some 500,000 workers were sent home at midday.

The House, by voice vote, passed the stopgap bill and sent it to the Senate, which also agreed to it on a voice vote. The measure then went to the White House, where a spokesman for the president, Anson Franklin, said President Reagan will sign it. Franklin said it is unclear when he will sign it, but that committing himself to signing it is sufficient to keep the government operating. A stopgap bill already in place — the measure that ended Thursday's shutdown — expired at 6 p.m. Friday.

Meanwhile, the Senate stalled in its effort to increase the government's borrowing authority — the national debt — to $1.823 trillion from its current level of $1.573 trillion. Final action on that, too, was put off until next week after senators insisted on attaching unrelated amendments to that piece of nearly veto-proof legislation.

A 55-42 vote defeated an amendment calling for a verifiable freeze on U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons. But Senate leaders failed, 62-30, to kill an amendment calling for a full debate early next year on whether a freeze on all federal spending is the proper way to reduce the deficit.

Waiting in the wings was a plan to attach to the debt-limit bill a new tax break for the real estate industry by watering down tougher rules enacted earlier this year that discourage cut-rate interest on seller-financed real estate transactions.

Faced with a promise from House leaders not to accept any amendments to the debt measure, Senate leaders put off the whole bill in hopes a solution can be reached over the weekend.

In a wood-paneled room off the Senate floor, negotiators from the House and Senate argued over an omnibus money bill, the so-called continuing resolution necessary to provide most government departments and agencies with money for the fiscal year that began on Monday.

But they decided late in the afternoon to adjourn until Tuesday morning. Congressional leaders had planned to recess the House and Senate by Friday night in observance of Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, and there was no way for the negotiators to meet that deadline.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The conferees can and should get down to business this afternoon and provide us with a clean CR (continuing resolution)... This can and should be done."

But it was easier said than done because problems erupted over military spending provisions of the bill.

At issue was a previous agreement between House and Senate leaders on an overall Pentagon budget. House negotiators said the agreements were subject to further bargaining in the current conference. Senate negotiators said they were not.

Among the problems were disputes between the two chambers over language relating to military aid the administration wants for Nicaraguan rebels as well as an anti-satellite weapons system sought by the Pentagon.

Other sticking points remained over whether the Reagan administration would accept water projects that have been tacked onto the bill.

"We do not want a continuing resolution with this pork barrel" of water projects, Speakes said.

The conferees did agree late Thursday that federal employees sent home on Thursday should be paid for a full day's work.

In addition, Republicans suggested that Democrats were stalling completion of the negotiations so that Reagan would not be able to veto a bill and use the action as a political prop during his debate Sunday with Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale.

"I suspect that everybody is a little conscious of the debates," said Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the assistant GOP leader in the House.

"Maybe the Democrats did not want to complete action on this CR (continuing resolution) and allow the president to veto it," Lott said.

Lesser-known presidential aspirants can air views

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

STONY BROOK, N.Y. — James Yager is running for president on a platform that calls for more community treatment centers for non-violent federal inmates. He has a personal interest in that plank.

Yager, a federal prisoner and one of 222 lesser-known presidential aspirants this year, doesn't have his name on any ballot. But he'll get a chance to plump for his platform when he participates via telephone today in a college radio station's daylong forum for the forgotten candidates of 1984.

"I'm just curious as to why they are running," said Eric Corley, who arranged the forum as special projects coordinator for WUSB-FM, which is affiliated with the State University at Stony Brook.

Alternative candidates "bring up issues that need to be brought up," Corley said.

He set up the forum by mailing invitations to each of the 224 people — including Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale — who have registered as presidential candidates with the Federal Election Commission. Of 50 who responded, 30 said they would participate in some fashion. They include:

— Merrill Riddick of Philipsburg, Mont., who said he is nearly 90 and running under the banner of the Puritan Ethic, Prohibition and Magnetic Hydro Dynamic Party. He sees a "definite link between mining and politics."

— Robert Gary Stout, 34, of Royal Oak, Mich., who described himself as a laid-off Chrysler Corp. worker who would make nuclear disarmament and decriminalization of marijuana his key issues.

— Isabell Masters, 69, of Topeka, Kan., who says she is a teacher, counselor and evangelist and is running because of "a divine revelation."

— Charles Dieterle, 34, of Boulder, Colo., who claims to be the "first mentally retarded person to run for public office." He said he got 1,000 votes in a losing race for a city council seat in 1981.

Sims will be proposing program to eradicate thirsty mesquite trees

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

With a projected population of 24-30 million by the year 2000, the State of Texas will be forced to educate several million more students than what it is handling today. And an even greater problem is providing enough water for their needs, according to State Sen. Bill Sims.

Speaking to the Midland Jaycees at their noon luncheon Friday, Sims said the State Legislature will be looking at a way of setting up another fund for universities and colleges not covered under the Permanent University Fund. And he is proposing a program that would eliminate mesquite, the single biggest drinker of water in Texas.

He also warned that the education bill passed in last summer's special session won't be amended next year.

The PUF was set up to finance the University of Texas and Texas A&M University and their adjoining medical schools. But the state now has many other colleges, such as the University of Houston, which need money for new construction.

The State Legislature will look at a proposal to set aside $100 million from the General Fund for these other universities for capital development, Sims said.

When the fund would build up to $1 billion, then the State Legislature would quit putting money into it and the schools would draw off the interest.

Sims criticized previous state legislatures for ignoring some schools, such as Prairie View A&M, a predominantly black college, over the years. "It has been abused and they let a lot of the buildings go down. The state now has pledged $70 million over the next seven years," he said.

Sims pointed out that water is necessary for all communities to thrive. If San Angelo and Midland had had better water sources, he said each city should have a population today of 125,000 to 130,000. San Angelo — with its area sheep and goat raisers — at one time was considered a good location for textile mills. But the idea died for lack of a good water source, he said.

DHR revokes license of day care center

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Human Resources Thursday revoked the license of a Midland day care center "for violations of minimum standards and/or the licensing statute," according to a DHR spokeswoman.

Day Star Day Care, 3117 Travis, had been the target of a three-month long investigation stemming from charges of child abuse and neglect.

The probe began after statements allegedly were made by children attending the center to not say anything to their parents about activites there because "it would hurt them," the Reporter-Telegram reported Aug. 17.

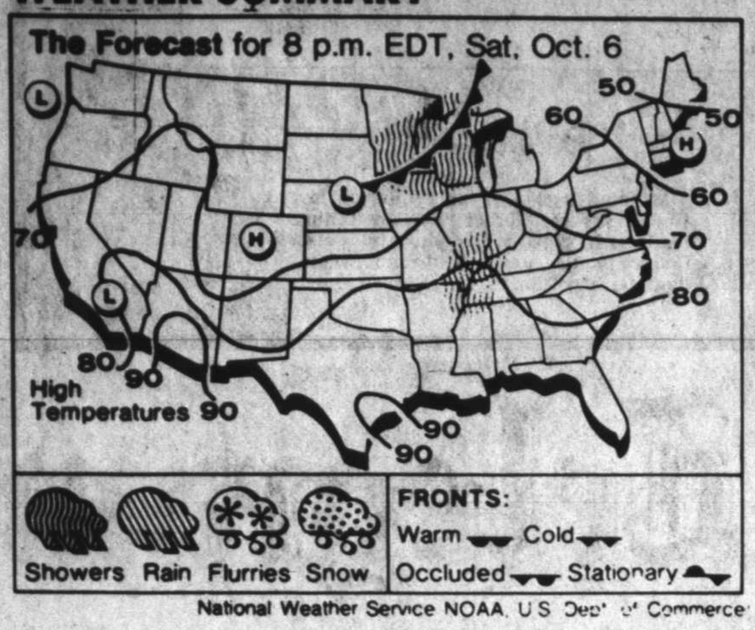

DHR day care licensing supervisor Lela McClung declined early in the investigation to comment on the charges, but the director of the center said in August she welcomed the investigation.

According to Phyllis Richardson, the center was investigated for alleged child abuse after parents of a 2½-year-old boy said he had learned inappropriate sexual behavior at the center. Ms. Richardson contended the child had learned the behavior elsewhere.

Another charge leveled at the center was neglect, the center's director said. DHR investigators came to the facility to look into the charge and a teacher left her children unattended while she went to look for Ms. Richardson, she said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dep't of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for today for parts of the Midwest and the Missouri valley into Alabama.

Warm afternoons, cool evenings expected in area

Warm and breezy afternoons and cool evenings are expected this weekend in the Permian Basin, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Ariport.

Under partly cloudy skies, temperatures should climb into the lower 80s today and Sunday, dipping into the middle 50s tonight.

Winds will be southerly today at 10-15 mph.

Friday's high of 81 was 17 degrees cooler than the record high of 98, set in 1937. The overnight low of 60 was 19 degrees warmer than 1932's record low for the date of 41.

STATE

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms developed over the coastal plains northeast of Corpus Christi and in East Texas on Friday, and forecasters predicted more isolated rainfall through this weekend.

Afternoon skies were mostly cloudy over the eastern half of the Lone Star State. In the western half, drier air behind a low-pressure trough kept skies mostly sunny.

High temperatures reached the 80s over most of the state, with the 70s in far West Texas and in the Panhandle and mostly 60s in mountain areas, the National Weather Service said.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected by early today in North Central and Northeast Texas, with mostly cloudy skies and a chance of light drizzle.

Lows were expected to range from the 70s along the Gulf coast through the 60s over much of the state and to the upper 40s in the Panhandle and western mountains to the 70s along the coast.

The weather service predicted a chance of drizzle today morning in the Waco vicinity, with a 30 percent probability of thunderstorms Sunday. Skies should be partly cloudy from this afternoon through Sunday.

Southerly winds were expected at 10 to 20 mph Saturday and near 10 mph tonight.

NATION

Snow continued to fall Friday in the mountains of Colorado, and began blanketing the ground in parts of northern Maine.

About 10 inches of snow fell at Echo Lake, Colo., by Wednesday afternoon and wet snow, carrying moisture from Hurricane Polo, was reported over several mountain passes.

Snow began falling at Caribou, Houlton, Limestone and Presque Isle, Maine, Friday afternoon.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the plains and the Mississippi Valley, and skies were partly cloudy throughout the rest of the country.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 35 degrees at Loring Air Force Base in Limestone, Maine, and at Houlton, to 91 degrees at Alice, Texas. The low Friday was 27 degrees at Massena, N.Y.

The forecast for today called for showers and thunderstorms over the Great Lakes and the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, with showers over the Pacific Northwest.

Temperatures were expected to be in the 40s and 50s over New England, in the 80s from the South Atlantic Coast states across the lower Mississippi valley to the southern Plains and southern Plateau, and into southern California. Highs will be in the 90s over parts of the desert Southwest, and in the 60s and 70s throughout the rest of the country.

Jury finds man not discriminated against

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The federal jury in David S. Thayer's age-discrimination suit against El Paso Products Co. found that Thayer was not "demoted" as he had alleged and that he was not discriminated against on account of his age — 61 — when he was "involuntarily retired" in 1983.

Thayer, a chemical engineer, had sought $139,052 in damages.

"This age-discrimination case was the only one to come out of the large (about 600) personnel cutbacks at the Products Co.," Elton Gilliland, attorney for El Paso Products Co. in Odessa, said Friday, "and the company was glad to win the case."

Thayer, now 62, was retired at age 61 in 1983 because his and other staff jobs were abolished "out of economic necessity," the company had maintained.

Extensive cuts in the work force and in management were to help the Odessa plastics company survive in a time of economic crisis and to salvage jobs.

The work force had been reduced from 1,800 to 1,200.

Thayer said El Paso Products Co. violated the federal Age Discrimination In Employment Act of 1967.

He cited the company's retaining R.D. "Dee" Martin, then 34 and now a company officer, and giving him "more favorable treatment" than Thayer.

"When Mr. Martin is 61," Thayer's Dallas lawyer, Hal K. Gillespie, told the jury in U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court, "he doesn't (won't) have any job security (unless the age discrimination act is enforced). He would have been a rising star who rose and fell."

Thayer was hired by El Paso Products Co. in 1969 as manager of strategic planning. On May 6, 1983, his job title was changed from director of chemical planning and business analysis to manager of business analysis. His pay remained unchanged, but Thayer viewed the change as a demotion.

On Aug. 31, 1983, he was retired and was awarded $42,602 in termination pay, according to evidence.

By then, El Paso Products Co., which is in the "highly competitive" plastics industry, already had lost $54 million in 1982 and was to lose $25 million in 1983. The company had eliminated its air fleet and had reduced expenses by $30 million in employee pay cuts in its network of plants in Odessa, Bayport, Corpus Christi and elsewhere.

In January 1983, Burlington Northern Inc., the railroad-energy company, gained control of The El Paso Natural Gas Co., parent company of the 1955-founded El Paso Products Co., and decided to shut down or sell the plastics company.

Major cuts into the plastics company started. And at the outset of 1984, El Paso Products Co. was under new ownership — a group of Odessa investors headed by Bill Noel, retired El Paso Products Co. chairman, and O.R. Clements.

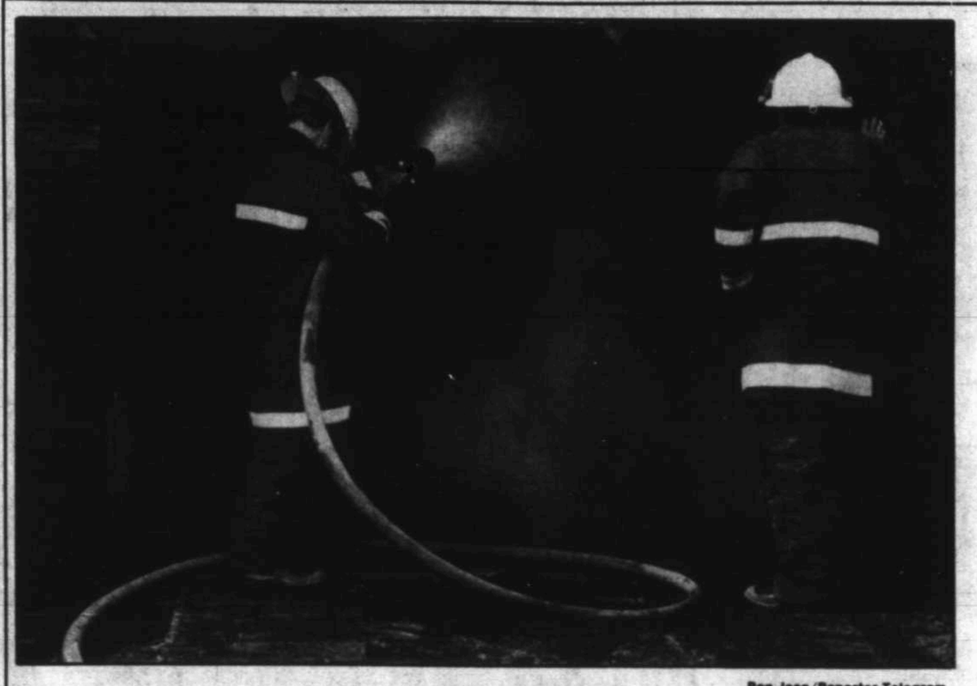

Gillespie said Thayer had a "marvelous record" with the company and that both Thayer and Martin had received "commendable ratings" from management.

Gilliland said age discrimination had nothing to do with Thayer's forced retirement.

He said Martin, who holds a doctorate in economics and finance, had qualities which El Paso Products Co. crucially needed to survive in 1983 and to find a buyer: expertise in computers and finance and a background in negotiations.

The company no longer needed five-year plans and business analyses such as those prepared by Thayer but needed to sell plastics, Gilliland said.

"That's part of the fat that had to be rendered."

Midland firemen battled a blaze at 315 E. Pine, believed to have been started following a burglary.

Fire allegedly set after house burglarized

From Staff Reports

A fire at a northeast residence Friday afternoon, believed to have been set following a burglary, continues to be investigated by both Midland police and fire officials.

According to Sgt. Tom Hyde, a pistol and assorted jewelry valued at about $2,300 were missing from the Cecil Franco residence at 315 E. Pine.

The burglars apparently piled clothes in the garage and set fire to them following the burglary, Hyde said.

Nine firemen responded to the fire, which caused extensive fire and water damage to the garage and den area; and heavy smoke and heat damage to the remainder of the house.

George Woody, Midland Fire Department batallion commander, said no one was in the residence when the fire broke out. There were no reports of injuries or a dollar estimate of the total damage.

Sunday is deadline to register for November election

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

For unregistered voters who have been saying that "someday" they'll get signed up for the November general election, that "someday" has arrived.

The deadline for registering to vote is midnight Sunday. And the Elections Adminstrator's office won't be open again until Monday.

Volunteer deputy registrars will be setting up tables at stores throughout Midland today to register those citizens who have been putting it off until the last minute.

Locations and times for registering are: Wal-Mart, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; McDonald's, 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.; Furr's Supermarket on North Big Spring Street, noon to 8 p.m.; Midland Park Mall, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; K-mart, noon to 6 p.m.; and Sakowitz in Midland Park Mall, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Volunteer deputies can let the citizen fill out a card. The deputy will sign it, date it and then give a receipt to the citizen certifying he or she has registered, according to Janeice Builta, elections administrator.

Or citizens have the option of mailing in postage-free applications. These, however, must be postmarked by midnight Oct. 7. Ms. Builta said the applications should be mailed at the Main Post Office, 200 W. Wall St.

But she advised those last-minute citizens to "be protected. Take an extra five-10 minutes today" and register with one of the volunteer deputies.

She also advised citizens that if they have a blue voter registration card with a valid date until January 1986, they don't have to register again.

On Friday morning, the Elections Administrator's office saw a steady stream of Midlanders coming in to register. Pat Stovall said there had not been long lines, but the employees were "consistently busy." And the postage-free applications were arriving in stacks.

By Friday evening, Ms. Builta estimated Midland County had almost 50,000 registered voters. And she expected to pick up another 2,000 over the weekend, putting the total at a record high.

"This is the biggest registration we've had," she said. "I think the last one was 44,000."

The interest in voting absentee also appears higher than usual, according to Ms. Stovall.

"The interest is more than normal for past elections," she said. "We're having a good response, especially from senior citizens and college students."

Absentee voting starts Oct. 17 and ends Nov. 2. Midlanders can cast their ballot from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday during those days at the Elections Administrator's Office, 701 W. Washington Ave.

Sample ballots should arrive in the office by next Friday, Ms. Stovall said.

CANDIDATES

Each candidate will be given 30 minutes to air his or her views and to take questions from callers and from the student audience.

Corley said Reagan did not respond and the Mondale campaign sent a noncommittal letter. Mondale plans to be in Kentucky today and Corley said they will read the letter if Mondale does not show up.

Unlike Mondale and Reagan, most of the fringe candidates never get on any ballot. Of the 224 registered with the FEC, only 18 are listed on one or more state ballots, according to commission spokesman Fred Eiland.

In 1980, 274 people registered with the commission and this year's total may approach that because there is no cutoff date for filing.

SIMS

Water in West Texas comes from either rainfall or one of two aquifers. Sims said the aquifers aren't being replenished and he remembered a time when the Concho River was so wide his grandfather couldn't cross it on a horse.

Until the idea of fencing cropped up, cattle and sheep were grazed all over West Texas, letting one pasture recoup while another became the grazing ground. Then fences were required and the ranchers tried keeping the same amount of livestock in a small area that had once roamed the entire southwest.

"I overgrazed my ranch and the mesquite trees came in," Sims said.

A program the State Legislature will consider focuses on ways to get rid of that mesquite, but Sims warned it would require several million dollars over a period of years.

He estimated there are 100 million acres that need to be cleared, and the cost now of mechanically removing the mesquite is $50-75 per acre.

Only one chemical has been found to kill mesquite, 2-4-5-T, and it was banned by the Environmental Protection Agency because the chemical contained some dioxin, also known as Agent Orange.

Roots on mesquite have been found to grow as long as 200 feet, he said. "You can't kill the damn thing" unless the roots are removed.

To people already complaining about last summer's education bill, Sims said, "It will be extremely difficult to amend any part of it. It's Gov. White's bill and he's so proud of it. I voted against the bill; there were many parts I didn't agree with."

Some parts of the bill are good, he said, but he would have preferred to give HB246 a chance to work first.

He also looked at the ⅛ of 1 percent sales tax which was implemented Monday.

"My wife came in that first day and told me I was an idiot for passing that," he said. Because of the ⅛, he said, several stores in San Angelo are forced to buy new cash registers.

Jewelry, pistol taken in burglary

From Staff Reports

About $2,260 worth of jewelry and a pistol were reported taken in a burglary of the Stephen Kinzer resident, 2501 Idlewilde. According to reports, Kinzer and his wife had gone shopping for an hour and returned at 1:30 p.m. Friday to find their stereo overturned and the bedrooms ransacked. Entry apparently was gained by forcing open the front door.

David Hall of 4000 W. Illinois returned home early Friday morning to find everything missing from his apartment. Taken were a bookshelf, radio receiver, waterbed, dresser, dishes, coffee table, couch, clothes and a vaccuum cleaner. According to reports, tracks found indicated the burglars made several trips to a vehicle that was backed up to the door and the waterbed apparently took a couple of hours to drain. There was no sign of forced entry. Total loss was valued at $1,700.

A homemade trailer worth $900 was taken from behind the Fina Service Station at 2401 S. Midkiff. According to Jake Melton of the station, the trailer was taken between 6 p.m. Thursday and 7 a.m. Friday.

Darren Warren of 2810 Cimmaron, reported a cassette stereo and speakers were taken sometime between Thursday night from his pickup, parked in his driveway. Damage to a vent window, broken to gain entry, was placed at $50 while the items stolen were valued at $280.

David Michael Velarde of 1407 S. Main, told police items of unknown value were taken from his house during a burglary. Reported missing were a video game, cartridge, television cable converter with remote control and a gold wedding band.

CENTER

The DHR then filed a non-compliance complaint against the center and the teacher was reprimanded.

The year-old facility was licensed to care for 102 children, according to DHR licensing division reports.

Specifics about cases under investigation cannot by disclosed by the DHR staff, said Ann Bradford, DHR area operations manager. The state agency does have the option of putting a center on probation rather than revoking the license, she added.

Under state regulations, if the DHR revokes a license, certification or registration, the center is notified in writing what standards or provisions of the law are allegedly being violated and given instructions on how to request an appeal.

The center must request an appeal of the decision within 30 days of being notified.

An advisory review board made up of persons who hold the same kind of license as the one appealing the revocation hears the case, according to DHR regulations. The board makes recommendations to the director of licensing and a committee made up of the director of licensing, a person from the licensing branch who develops standards and a representative from the local department then review the case.

If a person who appeals the revocation does not agree with the decision on appeal, they may challenge it within 30 days after being notified of the decision by filing suit in a district court.

Ms. Richardson could not be reached Friday evening for comment on the license revocation or the possibility of filing an appeal hearing.

DEATHS

Wilbur Casbeer

Services for Wilbur Isaac Casbeer of Greenwood will be at 1:30 p.m. today at the Greenwood Baptist Church with the Rev. Ron Hathcoat, pastor, officiating. He will be assisted by the Rev. Joe White of Odessa.

Burial will follow at Greenwood Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Casbeer died early Friday morning at his home.

He was born April 5, 1921 in Colorado City, moving to Midland in 1923. He served in the Army during World War II and was in the Pacific Theater. Following his discharge he returned to Midland and began farming in the Greenwood area. He married Astrid Bratt Feb. 14, 1942 in Midland.

He was a member of the Greenwood Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; three sons Michael R. Casbeer, Wilbur R. Casbeer and Jimmy E. Casbeer, all of Midland; two daughters, Patricia Smyres of Little Rock, Ark., and Beverly Jane Haney of Midland; two brothers, Dan Casbeer and Virgil Casbeer, both of Midland; eight sisters, Bessie Wilson, Evie Dunn, Fay Vasbinder and Nora Thornhill, all of Midland, Mary Trice of San Angelo, Lotte Flourney and Opal Betz, both of Benair, Calif., and Leona Hargroves of Jonestown; and 11 grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Glen Simpson, Chris King, Alvey Bryant, Jerry Don Stuard and Roy Graham.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland or the American Cancer Society.

Ike jacket designer relishes Army career

Morris Pinter

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Probably the most famous garment to come out of World War II was the "Eisenhower Jacket," worn by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who later became the 34th president.

However, if the snug, waist-length jacket had been named for its designer, it would have been called the "Morris" or "Pinter" jacket, after the army corporal from New York City who created it.

At 64, Morris Pinter has put on a few pounds and lost a little hair since he was a soldier, but he continues his profession as a tailor.

"I was a tailor before I was born," he joked in the custom shop he's operated since moving here from New York City in 1960.

Pinter relishes the four years he served in the Army and he's particularly proud of his service in the 30th Infantry Division, which took part in the 1944 invasion of Normandy.

Soon after joining the 30th in England in early 1942, he was appointed a tailor.

"I was the only regimental tailor in the U.S. Army," he said, showing a photo of his pup tent with its official tailor's sign in front. Pinter made uniforms for the officer corps, including Maj. Gen. L.S. Hobbs, division commander.

"Gen. Hobbs introduced me to Gen. Eisenhower. I took his measurements because he wanted a different uniform," Pinter said.

That was when Pinter created the jacket Eisenhower wore for the rest of his military career. Pinter, however, won't take full credit for the garment that gained such poularity. He says he simply embellished the design of a short jacket worn by the British military.

Eisenhower was so pleased with the jacket that when he was re-elected president, he remembered the Polish immigrant tailor and invited him to his inauguration in 1957. The invitation remains prominently displayed at Pinter's shop.

Despite his success with the "Eisenhower" or "Ike" jacket, Pinter says another piece of clothing he designed later in the war means more to him.

When Allied troops fighting on European battlefields were crippled by frostbite, Hobbs asked Pinter to design something to protect the feet of fighting men at the front.

Using discarded army blankets, he sewed several thicknesses together and designed what became known as "Pinter's booties." The oversized sock-like item went halfway to the knee and could be worn inside or over combat boots.

"They would carry them under their jackets and put them on before going into battle," Pinter said, adding that the British army saw the advantages of his creation and adopted it for their foot soldiers.

Pinter was discharged in 1945 and established Pinter's Tailors Inc. in New York City. After 34 years at the same location, high rent forced him out and he came here.

Over the years, he's maintained contact with wartime buddies and attended annual reunions of the 30th Infantry Division. This year, he returned to France, Holland and Belgium for the 40th anniversary of the Allied invasion of France.

He happily displays a wartime scrapbook filled with photos and mementos, but in the back room, there's a large photo of a small boy that customers don't see. It's a picture of his son, who died in a Nazi gas chamber along with his first wife and over three dozen members of his family.

Pinter was born in Lukow, Poland. He arrived alone in the United States in 1937 and was drafted in 1941.

He says he lives by a basic philosophy: "If you do the right thing, you can handle anything. The secret is patience."

Cassette tapes help car owners diagnose vehicles' ailments

WACO, Texas (AP) — The main tool John Monroe uses to help people avoid car breakdowns is not a wrench, but a cassette tape.

Monroe has recorded automotive sounds ranging from suspension squeaks to carbon deposit knocks to clue drivers in on the causes behind those seemingly inescapable car noises. One tape alone consists of 42 various sounds to teach people that a mechanical grind could be more serious than a growl.

AP Laserphoto

John Monroe holds a sample tape of automotive sounds he devised to warn motorist of impending car trouble. Monroe has recored 42 automotive sounds ranging from suspension squeaks to carbon deposit knock in order to clue motorist on the causes behind car noises.

Since Monroe opened Audio Diagnostics Inc. of Waco in February 1983, he has sold his narrated tapes in states from Florida to Alaska.

"If you name a state, we've sold tapes there," Monroe said.

Most of his tapes have been sold in Kentucky and Tennessee, but he doesn't have the slightest idea why that particular section of the country has been most responsive.

Thus far, Monroe has managed to keep his cassette tape business lucrative and his marketing strategy simple.

"We let people know they were available," he said. "The need has been around for a long time."

Monroe said he realized about three years ago that the tapes could be a successful commercial item upon learning that two-thirds of all car owners work on their cars to some extent.

Furthermore, Monroe discovered that many technical schools train student mechanics only to fix car problems, not prevent them by recognizing warning signals. Some of Monroe's best customers are technical schools throughout the country that have incorporated his cassette tape instruction into their curriculums. Texas State Technical Institute uses the tapes, he said.

Monroe said the concept of using taped sounds to detect car trouble had never been utilized for teaching until he introduced it.

"No one has ever before produced undesirable noises," he said. "We manipulate these sounds like car parts, only we don't need wrenches. The noises are meaningful and we learn from them."

The collection of cassettes Monroe sells to technical schools consists of exercise, review and test tapes.

"The students pay attention more when they're being tested," Monroe said. The tapes, often sold in a set of 20, sell for $335. A set of nine tapes costs $135.

Monroe has labeled the 20-tape collection the "25-year-set" and the nine-tape assortment the "seven-year set." He equates the specified years with on-the-job experience.

"In order for a person to recognize all of these sounds, he needs to be on the job that long," he said.

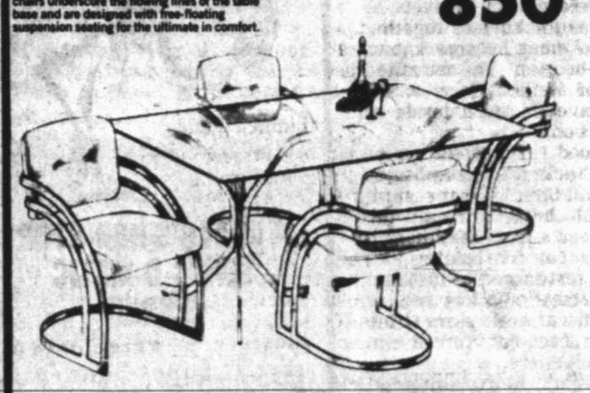

The U.S. Army has been another consistent buyer of Monroe's tapes.

Ambassador threatens to issue warning

STATE

Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE — U.S. Ambassador to Mexico John Gavin told two Texas couples who were attacked by bandidos that Mexican authorities are "upset" with him for threatening to issue a warning about violence on Mexico's highways.

John Gavin

Gavin met Friday with Norman and Jewel Strain of Granbury and Robert and Freda Stone of Brownsville in the Stone's Brownsville home, located a few hundred yards from the Rio Grande.

In a private meeting that lasted about 40 minutes, both couples told Gavin of their terrifying encounters with the highwaymen who posed as federal police.

"The Mexican authorities are very upset with me," Gavin told the Strains, the Stones and family members who had come to express concern.

Following a series of attacks on American tourists last August, the embassy sent a letter to Mexico's tourism department expressing "deep concern." A draft of a U.S. travel advisory was also being circulated among Mexican authorities, U.S. officials said.

Gavin said Meixco fears tourist dollars will be lost if the advisory is issued. Tourism, which generates about $1.5 billion annually, is the second largest source of foreign income for Mexico after petroleum exports.

The ambassador said he would be meeting with Mexican tourist officials next Tuesday to seek a solution to the increased violence.

Gavin suggested that for the moment, Americans travel in caravans when going by car into the interior of Mexico. He also advised against traveling at night or sleeping in vehicles on the roadside.

"One good thing would be a system of checkpoints with signs in English and Spanish that said this is an official checkpoint and do not stop between signs," Gavin said.

Stone, a former Border Patrolman, suggested to Gavin that the Mexican army might begin patrolling highways as a method of increasing security.

"Tourism is very important to Mexico's economy and Mexico's economy is very important to us," Gavin said in a meeting with reporters.

Gavin said he was hopeful that Mexico would attempt to beef up security when faced with the possibility of an official U.S. warning to tourists.

But Mrs. Strain said she was less hopeful after meeting with the ambassador.

"He was very cordial, nice, polite and said all the right things, but it doesn't change anything," she said. "I don't think the State Department wants to do anything like that (issue a travel advisory) and I don't think the situation in Mexico will change."

Both couples said they would never travel in Mexico again. Stone said that since news stories of their attack were published earlier this month he had received nearly two dozen calls from other Americans saying they had had similar experiences.

Since early August, six Texans have been attacked in two northern Mexican states near the city of San Luis Potosi.

The Stones, who were traveling in 1978 Chevrolet van to pick up family members in San Miguel d'Allende, were ambused Aug. 31 by weapon-toting Mexicans posing as federal police.

Stone was forced out of the van in the desert and tied up. Mrs. Stone, a 53-year-old grandmother, was raped. The bandits then drove away in the van, leaving the couple tied up the desert.

The day before the Stone's attack, the Strains, traveling with John and Edith Beyer of Stephenville, Texas, were headed for Queretero in the Strains' 1983 Dodge van.

The were stopped by a car varrying several armed men identifying themselves as police. Three of the men piled in and kidnapped the occupants, but Mrs. Strain threw herself from the van onto the highway.

"I was sure we were going to be killed. I didn't think, I just jumped," she said.

The bandits robbed the remaining occupants and fled in a vehicle that had been following.

Mrs. Stone's brother, Fred Rusterberg, president of International Bank of Commerce in Brownsville, said word of violence has spread along the border.

"It's had a big impact already on the border, from here to Laredo," Rusteberg said. "People are traveling to Mexico less."

State tax policy may change, group says

AUSTIN (AP) — Unless the Texas Legislature tailors state spending to the reduced flow of oil and gas taxes, major changes may be required in the way the state collects taxes, according to the Texas Research League.

A state income tax is not beyond consideration, the privately-financed research group said in a special report.

The report pointed out the recent session of the Legislature voted $5.2 billion in additional taxes the next three years, but that may not be enough.

In August, State Comptroller Bob Bullock announced that still an additional $1 billion may be needed for the next two-year budget, depending on the spending of the 1985 Legislature.

Three things could happen, the League said:

— State revenues could take an unexpected spurt to produce more money than now estimated for 1986-87.

— The Legislature could approve a hold-the-line, no-growth budget, which some legislators favor.

— Or the 1985 Legislature could pass another tax bill.

"Clearly the 1970s era during which the state's revenue system produced double digit growth and billion-dollar surpluses has closed," the League said. "The 1980s challenge will be to tailor state spending to new growth patterns. The alternative could be significant changes in state tax policy."

In discussing possible new tax policy for Texas, James W. McGrew, Texas tax expert and consultant to the League, said the state sales tax undoubtedly will remain the state's chief revenue raiser for the forseeable future.

But questions already are being asked over how high can it be raised.

The recent increase in the sales tax, effective Oct. 2, was from 4 to 4.125 cents on the dollar statewide, plus local sales and special levies.

"The combined sales tax now being paid by one out of five Texans — those who live within the area covered by the Houston and Dallas metropolitan transit authorities — is 6.125 cents," McGrew said.

Democrats: New voters may give Mondale win

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats said Friday their voter registration drive, which they called "a phenomenal success," — could add up to a win in this crucial state for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

"This sea of new registrants will confound the pollsters on Election Day," said Dwayne Holman, Texas campaign manager for Mondale-Ferraro.

As many as 500,000 "new Democratic voters" have signed up, according to Holman.

"These pollsters working from the old voter registration lists better prepare themselves for a shock when we turn out hundreds of thousands of voters that they never included in their samples," said Holman.

Texas voter registration for the November election ends today.

Reagan-Bush officials here were unimpressed by the Democratic claims of an "upset in November."

"I think that's their fondest hope and dream," saiv Linden Kettlewell, executive director of the Texas Reagan-Bush campaign.

She said the GOP voter registration drive has added 400,000 "new Republicans" to the voter rolls.

"I have every reason to believe if we turn out our vote on Election Day we are going to be able to win Texas handily. The key is turning out our vote," she said.

"The fear I've had since the beginning in Texas is that people feel so good about their government now and they are so confident that their person — Ronald Reagan — is going to be re-elected that they think the election is over. It's not," Ms. Kettlewell said.

Holman said Texas Republicans are trying to "discourage voter registration and voter turnout."

"When Republicans say they only want the 'right people' to register, we know what they mean — they only want wealthy whites," he said.

Dan McClung, organizer of the Democratic voter registration drive, attributed the "phenomenal success" of the Democratic registration drive to an effort that included 500,000 phone calls and the distribution of 500,000 registration cards.

Juror misconduct leads to dropped charges

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge Friday threw out manslaughter charges against three policemen in the death of a graffiti artist because a grand juror pursued his own investigation, serving as an "unsworn witness" against the officers.

The prosecutor immediately said he intended to bring new indictments in the racially charged case against the officers, and attorneys said it was the first time they could recall indictments being dismissed because of juror misconduct.

The juror, Ronald Fields, "went beyond investigating and presenting lines of inquiry to the assistant district attorney," said state Supreme Court Justice George Roberts. "He went beyond advocating his view of the evidence. He became, in effect, an unsworn witness against the defendants."

The case involved the death of Michael Stewart, a 25-year-old black man who was arrested while allegedly scrawling graffiti on the wall of a New York City subway station on Sept. 15, 1983.

After his arrest, Stewart lapsed into a coma and died 13 days later. The city medical examiner at first ascribed the death to natural causes, but later said Stewart had died of a neck injury suffered while in police custody.

The case raised a furor in the black community. The three defendants — Officers John Kostick, Anthony Piscola and Henry Boerner — are white, and Stewart's parents and supporters claimed Stewart was the victim of a racially motivated attack.

In the course of the grand jury investigation, Fields wrote to Professor Richard Uviller of Columbia University to ask about the duties and limits of grand jury service. He took pictures at the scene of the incident, clipped newspaper articles on the case and taped pertinent television broadcasts and showed them to other grand jurors.

Roberts said he questioned all 23 jurors and found that at least two others had visited the scene of the incident. He also said the actions of Fields and some others had resulted in "impossible prejudice" among the panel.

Former FBI agent placed in protective custody

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former FBI agent accused of conspiring to sell secrets to the Soviet Union for $65,000 in gold and cash was brought to Terminal Island prison before dawn Friday and placed in special protective custody to "make sure nothing happens to him," a prosecutor said.

Richard W. Miller, the first FBI agent in history to be arrested on espionage charges, was placed in the same maximum-security cell block with his two Russian co-defendants after being driven here from San Diego before 5:30 a.m., said Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Kendall.

Svetlana Ogorodnikov, 34, and her estranged husband, Nickolay, 51, have been at Terminal Island since their arrests Wednesday. Government sources have said Mrs. Ogorodnikov and Miller, who worked in counter-intelligence in the FBI, may have been lovers during the months he allegedly passed classified documents to her, but there has been no official confirmation.

Miller may need extra security because of publicity about the case, Kendall said.

Miller would not appear in court again until at least Oct. 15 and more likely Oct. 22 after an indictment is sought from a federal grand jury. He and the Russian couple are being held without bail.

In an affidavit released Wednesday, the FBI said Miller conspired to sell government secrets to the Soviet Union for $50,000 in gold and about $15,000 in cash. Los Angeles FBI chief Richard Bretzing said Miller had been having financial problems and money was believed to be the motive.

A couple who sold Miller the land on which his Valley Center home was built in 1976 elaborated on the Millers' financial woes. Glenn and Donna Generaux said Miller and his wife, Paula, were threatened with foreclosure when they fell five months behind in monthly mortgage payments of about $450.

Miller, who has eight children, reportedly earned "well in excess of $40,000 a year" in his FBI job, according to the Los Angeles Times.

Meanwhile, the fallout from Miller's arrest was taking its toll at the 420-agent Los Angeles office.

"The L.A. office is not as tight as it should be," a Washington source told the Times. "It is not the best office in the bureau."

Israelis start Yom Kippur fast

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel ground to a halt Friday as people began the Yom Kippur fast to atone for their sins, taking time to reflect on the same date 11 years ago when Arab armies attacked on Judaism's holiest day.

The Jewish calendar date of Yom Kippur falls on Oct. 6 this year for the first time since the 1973 war, a coincidence that stimulated bitter memories of the war which taught Israelis their army was not invincible.

The Yom Kippur fast began at 5 p.m. and will end at 6 p.m. today. Public transportation stopped running at noon, stores shut down and the country's international airport closed.

Police urged Orthodox Jews not to stone emergency vehicles or private cars on the usually deserted roads, as has occurred in the past.

"A woman may be rushing to the hospital to have a baby," police traffic chief Eytan Yehoshua said on Israel Radio. "Let the cars through. Last year some people didn't make it to the hospital in time."

Orthodox Jews believe that public and private transportation violates the spirit of the holy day.

Yehoshua said Palestinian-owned cars from the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank of the Jordan River would not be allowed to enter Israel during the fast day for security reasons.

The crossings from north Lebanon into the Israeli-occupied south and from Lebanon into Israel were closed at noon Friday and will be reopened Sunday morning, an army spokesman said.

The crossings are closed every Israeli holiday to prevent terrorist infiltration and to enable Israeli soldiers to go home on leave.

AP Laserphoto

Jews, some of them wearing prayer shawls, pray at the Wailing Wall, Judaism holiest shrines shortly before the start of Yom Kippur. No cars except emergency vehicles will travel on Israel's streets and many people will fast for 24 hours. There will be no TV or radio for 24 hours and smoking is not allowed for the religious.

Even non-religious Jews, who make up the majority of Israel's population, observe Yom Kippur. Synagogues are packed with worshipers asking God to forgive their misdeeds.

The national radio and television stations went off the air for the fast day after a countdown on Israel Radio that announced hourly how much time was left until the fast began.

Israel Army Radio aired the nationwide broadcast made by the late Prime Minister Golda Meir on Oct. 6, 1973, telling her people that Israel was at war. Her address was interrupted periodically by announcements of the code names of reserve units being mobilized for war.

Editorials noted Israel now is involved in another war completely different from the one in 1973.

"New wars don't push away the memory of old ones," wrote the Davar daily. The editorial said that in the Yom Kippur War, "the state's continued existence was at stake," but that the invasion of Lebanon in 1982 "was a war of choice."

Maariv columnist Shalom Rosenfeld wrote that the sight of "young men springing directly from the synagogue to change their prayer shawls for khaki uniforms will never budge from our collective consciousness."

Shultz, Syrian minister discuss U.S.' role

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Syria's foreign minister met with Secretary of State George P. Shultz on Friday and then said Syria would endorse a U.S. mediation role aimed solely at removing Israeli forces from Lebanon.

Farouk Sharaa, the Syrian foreign minister, stressed any such U.S. initiative should have some kind of United Nations framework, and said a resulting agreement should place no conditions on Lebanon.

Sharaa met with Shultz for 45 minutes in a hotel across from U.N. headquarters. Afterward, the Syrian said the two discussed "the responsibility and the role — the contribution — of the U.S.A. to help Lebanon in ridding itself from the Israeli occupation."

There was no immediate State Department reaction. Shultz and other officials have indicated a reluctance to get deeply involved in the problem unless Syria, Lebanon and Israel show more flexibility.

Asked if a U.S. mediation role, as suggested by both Lebanon and Israel, would be acceptable to Syria, Sharaa replied:

"We believe that, since the American administration bears some responsibility for the Israeli invasion in the first place, it should do something to pull the Israeli forces from Lebanon. So in this context, it is clear the United States, with the help and the framework of the United Nations, can facilitate the full Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon without any conditions on Lebanon."

Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982, pushing northward to the capital city of Beirut. In May, 1983, Shultz helped mediate a troop withdrawal accord between Israel and Lebanon.

However, Israel made its pullout conditional on a simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian forces from Lebanon. And under Syrian pressure, Lebanon later abandoned the accord.

Syria has had troops in Lebanon since 1976. On Friday, when a reporter started to ask Sharaa about the possibility of an eventual Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon, but the Syrian foreign minister merely replied, "Thank you," and headed for his limousine.

Shultz indicated more flexibility by Lebanon, Israel and Syria would be needed before the Reagan administration would again become deeply involved. "We don't have any current plan to undertake a major diplomatic initative," he said.

"Whether the key people involved are ready to do the things that are needed...is still a very open question," he said, adding that he thought direct talks between Israel and Lebanon — as proposed by Shamir — would be helpful.

Mrs. De Lorean wants divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cristina Ferarre De Lorean, who stood by her automaker husband, John Z. De Lorean, through a five-month cocaine conspiracy trial, filed for divorce Friday, less than two months after his acquittal.

"It's regrettable," said De Lorean's attorney, Howard Weitzman. "He's sorry it had to happen. He believes, like all of us do, that it is all a result of what the government has put the two of them through.

"He knows the pressures she's been going through," Weitzman said. "Obviously, he regrets it."

De Lorean, 59, is living at the West Los Angeles home of his wife's mother, Weitzman said. Mrs. De Lorean, 34, is living at a separate residence nearby.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mayor William Donald Schaefer put his money where his mouth is and came up $1,183 richer on a $1 wager in the Maryland Lotto game.

And when he walked into the state Lottery Commission office on Wednesday with a ticket correctly matching five of the six winning numbers drawn Sept. 8, "they almost fell on their faces," Schaefer said.

The mayor said he buys about 10 Lotto tickets a week and $1 a day on the daily lottery because the state's distribution formula calls for local governments to share directly in the 9-month-old lottery's weekly earnings.

"I guess I've spent over $500 for lottery tickets since the first of the year," Schaefer said. He said he's promised part of his winnings to help a church pay for a new heating system.

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Trial attorney Melvin Belli and his San Francisco law firm are being sued for more than $60 million by a man who claims his lawsuit was filed in the wrong court, an attorney said.

The suit, filed Thursday in Ventura Superior Court, claims that Belli should have filed Dennis Richardson's 1981 lawsuit against two life insurance companies in Georgia, instead of California, said Jim Hawkins, Richardson's current attorney.

Belli's firm also refused to return Richardson's $60,000 fee, Hawkins said Thursday.

Richardson, who trains and recruits insurance salesmen, was suing Massachusetts Indemnity and Life Insurance Co. and A.L. Williams Associates for $60 million, alleging the companies had failed to pay him, Hawkins said. He could not have the suits filed later in the correct court because he did not have the funds after paying Belli's fee.

Belli did not return a reporter's telephone call seeking comment.

• • •

MORA, Minn. (AP) — Tony Sandler, who teamed with Ralph Young in the mid-1960s to form the popular singing duo Sandler and Young, is being sued by his brother for part of his $4.6 million Minnesota farm and business.

Pierre Santele alleges that Sandler owes him a one-fourth interest in the 835-acre farm and peat-processing firm near Ogilvie for his role in operating the enterprises since 1969. He also seeks reimbursement for serving as plant manager and president of a meatpacking company.

"It's a classic example of a family feud," Sandler, 51, said in a telephone interview Thursday from a Las Vegas hotel where he was performing. He called his brother's accusations "frivolous and unfounded."

Santele claims Sandler persuaded him to move from Belgium in 1969 by promising him a 25 percent interest in the farm and other businesses, but paid him only $110 to $220 a week plus free room and board before firing him in February.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Althea Flynt, wife of Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, had her probation revoked after tests found she had used illegal narcotics, a judge said.

U.S. District Court Judge Francis C. Whelan ruled Thursday that Mrs. Flynt had violated terms of the five years' probation she received after pleading guilty to assaulting a U.S. marshal in Los Angeles and destroying government property in Springfield, Mo. Whelan scheduled new sentencing for Oct. 15.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Modisett told the judge that Mrs. Flynt had checked into a drug detoxification program.

Horseman will play host to the queen

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — William S. Farish III, who will play host next week to the queen of England, is accustomed to rubbing shoulders with the rich and famous.

While Farish's wealth may not match Queen Elizabeth II's, he is one of America's richest men. Other visitors to his 1,400-acre Lane's End Farm just outside nearby Versailles have included Vice President George Bush and former President Ford.

Farish's investment firm, W.S. Farish & Co. manages the vice president's financial affairs under a blind trust established when Bush and President Reagan took office in 1981.

His grandfather founded an oil company, and Farish has been competitive both in the board room and on the polo field. In fact, he met the queen in 1973 while Farish was playing in the Queen's Cup in England.

It was their common interest in the sport that led to his invitation to the queen to stay at his home for her first visit to Kentucky, a spokesman for the British Embassy said.

Farish, a 45-year-old oilman and financier who has turned his full-time attention to horses in recent years, has been dodging the press ever since Buckingham Palace announced last spring that the queen would spend 5½ days in the Bluegrass State. She's scheduled to arrive Sunday.

"There's quite a lot of excitement," is about all Farish will say. Such reticence makes him a perfect royal host, and satisfies British officials who have emphasized the privacy of the trip. "Sorry that I can't answer more questions ...but, as her host, I feel obligated to honor that request," he says.

Associates describe Farish as reserved, straightforward and considerate. Some were surprised when Forbes magazine recently estimated his net worth at $150 million. His grandfather, William S. Farish Sr., was co-founder of Humble Oil Co., now a part of Exxon.

"He's one in 50 billion, the best," said Neil J. Howard, who trains about a dozen thoroughbreds for Farish at Kentucky race tracks. "I've always found that he likes to keep a low profile ...he's a very considerate person. He just likes to do his thing and let the chips fall where they may."

Above all, Farish is a horseman. A member of the Jockey Club and a Breeder's Cup director, he breeds and races thoroughbreds, jumpers and steeplechasers and has become a leading consignor at Keeneland's elite July Selected Yearling Sale.

Since moving here from Houston several years ago, Farish and his wife, Sarah, have settled into the Lexington horsey set and Farish plays polo frequently.

Elizabeth also breeds and races thoroughbreds and loves to ride, so she and Farish will have plenty to talk about during her first tour of the area where many great names in racing were bred, born and broken.

The queen has sent mares to Kentucky for breeding for the past 20 years.

A few glittering social occasions are on the agenda for Elizabeth, but she's expected to spend most of her time examining horses and farms, and she will drop in on the races at Keeneland one afternoon.

Mary Tyler Moore leaves treatment center

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Actress Mary Tyler Moore was released Friday from the Betty Ford Center where she was treated for alcohol problems related to diabetes, her publicist said.

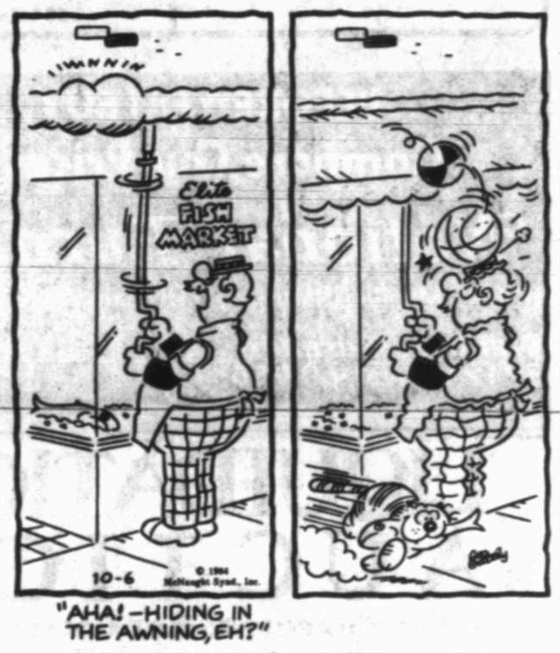

"She's feeling terrific and fine and is anxious to get back to work," said Jackie Becher in a telephone interview from New York.

Miss Moore, an Emmy-winning actress who starred in the TV situation comedies "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show" on television, headed home to New York after her release Friday, Ms. Becher said.

Miss Moore was admitted to the drug treatment clinic at the Eisenhower Meical Center on Sept. 4. The clinic 100 miles east of Los Angeles is named after the wife of former President Gerald R. Ford.

Miss Moore was a social drinker, Ms. Becher said, but was required to seek treatment because she is diabetic.

NFL Films 'reel' success

MOUNT LAUREL, N.J. (AP) — Football is artistry through the rose-colored lenses of NFL Films Inc., which has won 33 Emmy awards and boasts one of the longest-running syndicated sports programs on television.

"We try to package professional football the same way Hollywood does fiction. We not only document the game, we celebrate it. We emphasize romance," said Steve Sabol, 41, executive vice president and son of the founder.

"We look at the game the way the fan does," he said. "We are not news gatherers; we're filmmakers. We're not journalists; we're storytellers. It's a game, the toy department of life."

NFL Films, a wholly owned subsidiary of the National Football League, produces about 150 highlight pieces a year. It does a 30-minute promotional film on each NFL team, shoots half-time highlights for ABC's Monday Night Football, prepares pregame shorts for CBS and produces a game of the week and a feature on football legends each week for Cable TV's ESPN.

The company also syndicates two weekly shows — "NFL Pro! Magazine" and "NFL Week In Review." The latter first aired in 1967 and is carried nationally by 101 stations. Only "ABC's Wide World of Sports" has been on the air longer, Sabol said.

"People say that football is overexposed and has reached its saturation point, but we have more shows on television than we ever had," said Sabol, a native Philadelphian who has personally won Emmys for editing, writing, cinematography and producing-directing.

His father, Ed Sabol, a former overcoat salesman, founded the forerunner of NFL Films in Philadelphia 22 years ago in a cramped, two-room office.

His only filmmaking experience was shooting his son's football career with a Bell & Howell camera he had received as a wedding present. He bought the film rights to the 1962 NFL championship game for $5,000.

Sabol impressed league officials so much that he shot title games the next two years. And in 1964, each of the league's 14 franchises put up $20,000 to officially start NFL Films.

Today, the company grosses $10 million a year and earns a $400,000 profit shared by the 28 NFL teams. It is the largest 16mm film company in the world, and is the nation's second-largest film user behind the Army, according to the younger Sabol.

Philadelphia newsman John Facenda, the original voice of highlight films, died Sept. 26 of cancer. His apocalyptic baritone was a trademark of football films, and NFL Films plans a tribute to him in future shows.

"There will never be another voice like his," said Sabol. "Somebody once said he could make the coin toss sound like Armageddon. I called it his 'retreat from Dunkirk voice.'"

THE BETTER HALF

"If we can post-date all the checks for January 1, 1992 we'll be fine!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, October 7, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The movies' girl-next-door June Allyson, actress Martha Stewart and singer Al Martino celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Vice President Henry Wallace, music's Vaughn Monroe, atomic physicist Niels Bohr, religious leader Elijah Muhammad and poet James Whitcomb Riley. A natural calm envelops you now. A mature, "take charge" image helps you climb to new heights. Family members offer encouragement. A crisis reveals your true friends. Money decisions become easier. Singles should look for romantic partners who are ready to settle down. Travel brings a fresh perspective and some new goals. Save your money for investment purposes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for both work and recreation. Deal with accounts and correspondence during morning hours. Relatives play a major role in your social plans. Consult mate or partner regarding specific arrangements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family members are willing to help you with a special plan or project. Make an effort to get in better shape. A busy work week lies ahead. Someone you love deeply loves you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spend some time alone planning for the future. Call relatives or friends before dropping in to visit. Travel is best postponed. Include loved ones of all ages in your social life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A church service gives you food for thought along with an opportunity to meet people. Do whatever you can to repair a damaged relationship. Forget past grievances. A Sagittarian plays a romantic role.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend more time with family members and close friends. The pieces of a puzzle fall into place following a heart-to-heart talk with romantic partner. Keep costs down when entertaining.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day for instilling new life into something that has gone stale. Focus on your personal relationships. Although your relatives are willing to cooperate, romance could be tricky.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be persistent when taking on a new challenge. Creative ventures require lots of hard work. Look for a more effective way to deal with people who waste your time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Move ahead with your plans for promoting a pet project. Read up on subjects that will make you an expert in your field. Travel is favored. Give top priority to family obligations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seize an opportunity to right a domestic wrong. Loved ones are willing to let bygones be bygones. An attractive Scorpio gives you new hope for a happy, lasting romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to give free rein to your imagination. Go ahead and explore uncharted territory. Family members are eager to help with any problems. Romance a charming Taurus!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay as close to home base as possible today. A real estate venture looks very promising; get expert advice before purchasing, however. Curb a tendency to go overboard when entertaining.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Seeing old friends will help you get out of a rut. Gentle noncommital responses work best with meddling relatives. Refuse to lose your temper. The outlook for romance is bright.

Mrs. De Lorean wants divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cristina Ferarre De Lorean, who stood by her automaker husband, John Z. De Lorean, through a five-month cocaine conspiracy trial, filed for divorce Friday, less than two months after his acquittal.

"It's regrettable," said De Lorean's attorney, Howard Weitzman. "He's sorry it had to happen. He believes, like all of us do, that it is all a result of what the government has put the two of them through.

"He knows the pressures she's been going through," Weitzman said. "Obviously, he regrets it."

De Lorean, 59, is living at the West Los Angeles home of his wife's mother, Weitzman said. Mrs. De Lorean, 34, is living at a separate residence nearby.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mayor William Donald Schaefer put his money where his mouth is and came up $1,183 richer on a $1 wager in the Maryland Lotto game.

And when he walked into the state Lottery Commission office on Wednesday with a ticket correctly matching five of the six winning numbers drawn Sept. 8, "they almost fell on their faces," Schaefer said.

The mayor said he buys about 10 Lotto tickets a week and $1 a day on the daily lottery because the state's distribution formula calls for local governments to share directly in the 9-month-old lottery's weekly earnings.

"I guess I've spent over $500 for lottery tickets since the first of the year," Schaefer said. He said he's promised part of his winnings to help a church pay for a new heating system.

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Trial attorney Melvin Belli and his San Francisco law firm are being sued for more than $60 million by a man who claims his lawsuit was filed in the wrong court, an attorney said.

The suit, filed Thursday in Ventura Superior Court, claims that Belli should have filed Dennis Richardson's 1981 lawsuit against two life insurance companies in Georgia, instead of California, said Jim Hawkins, Richardson's current attorney.

Belli's firm also refused to return Richardson's $60,000 fee, Hawkins said Thursday.

Richardson, who trains and recruits insurance salesmen, was suing Massachusetts Indemnity and Life Insurance Co. and A.L. Williams Associates for $60 million, alleging the companies had failed to pay him, Hawkins said. He could not have the suits filed later in the correct court because he did not have the funds after paying Belli's fee.

Belli did not return a reporter's telephone call seeking comment.

MORA, Minn. (AP) — Tony Sandler, who teamed with Ralph Young in the mid-1960s to form the popular singing duo Sandler and Young, is being sued by his brother for part of his $4.6 million Minnesota farm and business.

Pierre Santele alleges that Sandler owes him a one-fourth interest in the 835-acre farm and peat-processing firm near Ogilvie for his role in operating the enterprises since 1969. He also seeks reimbursement for serving as plant manager and president of a meatpacking company.

"It's a classic example of a family feud," Sandler, 51, said in a telephone interview Thursday from a Las Vegas hotel where he was performing. He called his brother's accusations "frivolous and unfounded."

Santele claims Sandler persuaded him to move from Belgium in 1969 by promising him a 25 percent interest in the farm and other businesses, but paid him only $110 to $220 a week plus free room and board before firing him in February.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Althea Flynt, wife of Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, had her probation revoked after tests found she had used illegal narcotics, a judge said.

U.S. District Court Judge Francis C. Whelan ruled Thursday that Mrs. Flynt had violated terms of the five years' probation she received after pleading guilty to assaulting a U.S. marshal in Los Angeles and destroying government property in Springfield, Mo. Whelan scheduled new sentencing for Oct. 15.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Modisett told the judge that Mrs. Flynt had checked into a drug detoxification program.

Horseman will play host to the queen

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — William S. Farish III, who will play host next week to the queen of England, is accustomed to rubbing shoulders with the rich and famous.

While Farish's wealth may not match Queen Elizabeth II's, he is one of America's richest men. Other visitors to his 1,400-acre Lane's End Farm just outside nearby Versailles have included Vice President George Bush and former President Ford.

Farish's investment firm, W.S. Farish & Co. manages the vice president's financial affairs under a blind trust established when Bush and President Reagan took office in 1981.

His grandfather founded an oil company, and Farish has been competitive both in the board room and on the polo field. In fact, he met the queen in 1973 while Farish was playing in the Queen's Cup in England.

It was their common interest in the sport that led to his invitation to the queen to stay at his home for her first visit to Kentucky, a spokesman for the British Embassy said.

Farish, a 45-year-old oilman and financier who has turned his full-time attention to horses in recent years, has been dodging the press ever since Buckingham Palace announced last spring that the queen would spend 5½ days in the Bluegrass State. She's scheduled to arrive Sunday.

"There's quite a lot of excitement," is about all Farish will say. Such reticence makes him a perfect royal host, and satisfies British officials who have emphasized the privacy of the trip. "Sorry that I can't answer more questions ...but, as her host, I feel obligated to honor that request," he says.

Associates describe Farish as reserved, straightforward and considerate. Some were surprised when Forbes magazine recently estimated his net worth at $150 million. His grandfather, William S. Farish Sr., was co-founder of Humble Oil Co., now a part of Exxon.

"He's one in 50 billion, the best," said Neil J. Howard, who trains about a dozen thoroughbreds for Farish at Kentucky race tracks. "I've always found that he likes to keep a low profile ...he's a very considerate person. He just likes to do his thing and let the chips fall where they may."

Above all, Farish is a horseman. A member of the Jockey Club and a Breeder's Cup director, he breeds and races thoroughbreds, jumpers and steeplechasers and has become a leading consignor at Keeneland's elite July Selected Yearling Sale.

Since moving here from Houston several years ago, Farish and his wife, Sarah, have settled into the Lexington horsey set and Farish plays polo frequently.

Elizabeth also breeds and races thoroughbreds and loves to ride, so she and Farish will have plenty to talk about during her first tour of the area where many great names in racing were bred, born and broken.

The queen has sent mares to Kentucky for breeding for the past 20 years.

A few glittering social occasions are on the agenda for Elizabeth, but she's expected to spend most of her time examining horses and farms, and she will drop in on the races at Keeneland one afternoon.

Mary Tyler Moore leaves treatment center

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Actress Mary Tyler Moore was released Friday from the Betty Ford Center where she was treated for alcohol problems related to diabetes, her publicist said.

"She's feeling terrific and fine and is anxious to get back to work," said Jackie Becher in a telephone interview from New York.

Miss Moore, an Emmy-winning actress who starred in the TV situation comedies "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "The Dick Van Dyke Show" on television, headed home to New York after her release Friday, Ms. Becher said.

Miss Moore was admitted to the drug treatment clinic at the Eisenhower Meical Center on Sept. 4. The clinic 100 miles east of Los Angeles is named after the wife of former President Gerald R. Ford.

Miss Moore was a social drinker, Ms. Becher said, but was required to seek treatment because she is diabetic.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The movies' girl-next-door June Allyson, actress Martha Stewart and singer Al Martino celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Vice President Henry Wallace, music's Vaughn Monroe, atomic physicist Niels Bohr, religious leader Elijah Muhammad and poet James Whitcomb Riley. A natural calm envelops you now. A mature, "take charge" image helps you climb to new heights. Family members offer encouragement. A crisis reveals your true friends. Money decisions become easier. Singles should look for romantic partners who are ready to settle down. Travel brings a fresh perspective and some new goals. Save your money for investment purposes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for both work and recreation. Deal with accounts and correspondence during morning hours. Relatives play a major role in your social plans. Consult mate or partner regarding specific arrangements.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family members are willing to help you with a special plan or project. Make an effort to get in better shape. A busy work week lies ahead. Someone you love deeply loves you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spend some time alone planning for the future. Call relatives or friends before dropping in to visit. Travel is best postponed. Include loved ones of all ages in your social life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A church service gives you food for thought along with an opportunity to meet people. Do whatever you can to repair a damaged relationship. Forget past grievances. A Sagittarian plays a romantic role.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend more time with family members and close friends. The pieces of a puzzle fall into place following a heart-to-heart talk with romantic partner. Keep costs down when entertaining.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day for instilling new life into something that has gone stale. Focus on your personal relationships. Although your relatives are willing to cooperate, romance could be tricky.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be persistent when taking on a new challenge. Creative ventures require lots of hard work. Look for a more effective way to deal with people who waste your time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Move ahead with your plans for promoting a pet project. Read up on subjects that will make you an expert in your field. Travel is favored. Give top priority to family obligations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seize an opportunity to right a domestic wrong. Loved ones are willing to let bygones be bygones. An attractive Scorpio gives you new hope for a happy, lasting romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to give free rein to your imagination. Go ahead and explore uncharted territory. Family members are eager to help with any problems. Romance a charming Taurus!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay as close to home base as possible today. A real estate venture looks very promising; get expert advice before purchasing, however. Curb a tendency to go overboard when entertaining.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Seeing old friends will help you get out of a rut. Gentle noncommital responses work best with meddling relatives. Refuse to lose your temper. The outlook for romance is bright.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Rebels sentenced to death for Kabul Airport bombing

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A court in Afghanistan has sentenced nine rebels to be executed in connection with the bombing at Kabul Airport that killed at least 30 people, the Afghan government radio reported.

Another rebel was sentenced to 15 years in prison, Kabul radio said Thursday night in a broadcast monitored in New Delhi. The broadcast said "American bombs" were recovered from one of the guerrillas.

A bomb ripped through the airport Aug. 31, killing at least 30 people and injuring about 200 others.

Four mummies unearthed

PEKING (AP) — Four mummies wrapped in white shrouds have been excavated from a city abandoned 600 years ago in the deserts of Inner Mongolia, the official news agency Xinhua reported Friday.

The bearded, black-haired mummies were found in the ruins of the ancient silk road city of Harbot on the northwestern edge of the Badain Jaran desert, Xinhua said. The city was built during the Western Xia dynasty of 1032-1227 and was dominated by Tibetan tribesmen. The change of a local river's course led to its abandonment.

The best-preserved mummy was 5 feet, 11 inches tall. It has been taken to a museum for study.

Xinhua said archaeologists found 60 ancient tombs, including earthen pits, domed brick enclosures and wooden coffins.

Men held in bombing

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A judge on Friday ordered two Arabs held on suspicion of involvement in the bombing outside the building housing the Israeli Embassy.

The two men were identified by their passports as Azmi Hussein Mahmoud Salah, 22, a student from South Yemen, and Salam Moustafa, 28, a computer trainee from Iraq.

The defendants' only statements in court were objections to the order that they be remanded to custody.

Police inspector Sotiris Pafitis told the court "there is reasonable suspicion" they were involved in Thursday's explosion of a bomb-filled car in the parking lot of a six-story building on Nicosia's main shopping street.

Admiral visits Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The Soviet Union has been building up its military force in Vietnam, and now has about 20 ships there, the commander of the U.S. 7th Fleet said Friday.

Vice Admiral James R. Hoggs told reporters in Penang that the first Soviet ship went to Cam Ranh Bay, a former U.S. base in Vietnam, in February 1979. Most of the other Soviet ships are also at Cam Rahn Bay, he said.

Hoggs, who was in Penang to see the state's acting chief Minister, Abdul Rahman Abbas, said Soviet air power in Vietnam has also been stepped up, including many fighter aircraft.

Fingerprint law protested

TOKYO (AP) — About 1,200 South Korean women and young people rallied Friday to protest a law requiring foreign residents in Japan to be fingerprinted, a rally organizer said.

President Bah Soon-hi of the Korean Women's Association said the protesters were determined to see the law repealed. The association, which she said represents 200,000 Korean women living in Japan, plans to keep a registry of South Koreans who have decided to refuse to be fingerprinted when they renew their alien registrations.

The government maintains fingerprinting is logical and necessary to keep track of aliens in Japan.

Gromyko to speak at German celebration

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrived in East Berlin on Friday to deliver a speech celebrating the 35th anniversary of Communist East Germany.

The official East German news agency ADN said Gromyko flew in from Moscow and was greeted by members of the East German Politburo.

Informed sources in East Berlin said Gromyko and East German President Erich Honecker will speak today at a ceremony before a selected audience of Communist Party stalwarts.Gromyko is also expected to attend the East German military parade Sunday, marking the formal anniversary.

In a speech Friday at an awards ceremony for workers, Honecker hailed what he called the "close trust, which continually becomes firmer and deeper" among the East German Party, government and people.

The East German government is among the Soviet Union's most loyal supporters in Eastern Europe, and the country has achieved the highest living standard in the Soviet bloc since its founding in 1949.

Honecker has sought to dispel any suggestions that East Germany and West Germany could be moving toward a long-range goal of reunification.

The East German Party leader emphasized the separation of the German states in an article Friday in the Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda, declaring he would "not allow any concessions" on that issue.

Honecker, who canceled what was to have been his first official visit to West Germany under what officials in Bonn said was intense Kremlin pressure, also stressed East Germany's "indissoluble links" to the Soviet Union and endorsed Moscow's deployment of new nuclear missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Gromyko held talks last week in the United States with President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz — the first high-level meetings between U.S. and Soviet officials since January.

Shultz met East German Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer on Thursday in New York for talks described by the ADN news agency as "substantial, weighty and calm in tone."

Lamesa edges Andrews, 14-13

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — The pre-season experts all said Lamesa's Golden Tornadoes should expect no better than a seventh-place finish among the eight teams in District 2-AAAA.

Well, look who's in first.

Lamesa looked for real here Friday night in winning the district opener over Andrews 14-13. The Tors did it with a number of weapons, including the pinpoint passing of quarterback Doug Warren.

By Lamesa's biggest bonus in 1984 has been defense. Although the Tors average 156 pounds per man in their regular lineup, Coach Clyde Noonkester has assembled a wrecking crew of hit men that has surrendered only 37 points in four contests.

"We played great defense again," said second-year coach Noonkester, who has turned this program completely around from the 1-19 disaster of 1981-82. "They're a pretty exciting little bunch."

Exciting they were, but for most of the first half the excitement Lamesa created came from improbable bobbles. The Tors took the ball into scoring territory three times in the first half but scored on only the third go-round.

Lamesa couldn't shake mistakes early on. On their first possession, a fumbled snap to punter-quarterback Warren resulted in a completion for a loss of seven yards, and the Mustangs took over on the Tor 18.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Lee defender Tom Denton sticks Abilene Cooper fullback Kevin Shipley during Lee's 28-7 victory Friday night.

Cougs just Pusseycats

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee coaching staff saw something in Abilene Cooper game films last week they were able to use for great gains in Friday night's District 4-5A battle at Memorial Stadium, a fight in which Lee came out on top by a 28-7 count.

What the coaches saw was a weakness in Cooper's right side front line defense and they wanted to take advantage of it. The Rebels did and fullback Randy Ellis and halfback Tyrone Thurman reaped the benefits as they rushed for 183 and 111 yards respectively.

"Well, that's what we've been doing all year (running attack) and we certainly didn't want to change anything," said head Reb Jack Tayrien. "We felt like we found some things on their defensive right side we could take advantage of and that's why Walter (Jones) didn't carry the ball as much. They were much stronger on the left side."

Jones, one of the leading rushers on 4-5A stat sheet, carried the ball 15 times for only 54 yards. Ellis, who went down with an ankle injury in the fourth quarter, carried the ball 25 times while Thurman took it another 13. In all, Lee rushed for a whopping 373 yards.

"Walter should be commended for a super job of blocking," added Tayrien. "His stats weren't great because of what they did trying to shut him down but because we didn't give him the ball."

As to Ellis' injury, which came on a 21-yard run — one of several long ones for the 175-pound fullback — neither Lee trainer Jeff Bass nor Tayrien are sure of the extent of the injury as yet.

"We won't know until we have a chance to check him out," said Bass as he was helping Ellis onto the team bus.

"They'll check his injury tomorrow and see," said Tayrien. "It doesn't look real good."

According to Ellis, "I fell on my ankle (after being driven out of bounds on a sweep left play) and it popped a bit."

Before the injury, Ellis "felt like I played a pretty good game," he said. "I've had good success up to now. I'm going to try and get better this week so I can play against Permian Friday."

THE REBELS notched a pair of first quarter touchdowns to jump out to a 14-0 lead. The first, following the opening kickoff, was a five-play, 75-yard drive, capped when Thurman took a pitch from quarterback Dirk Bergoon and went around left end for a 52-yard score. Craig Kamradt missed the extra point.

Two possessions later, Lee again moved the ball down field, largely on the success of Ellis who covered 43 of the Rebels' 70 yards in the drives with 29 yards coming on the first play.

Tight end Anthony Dickens made it 12-0 when he hauled in Bergoon's six-yard pass deep in the end zone and Jones added the two-pointer on another pass from Bergoon.

It was the end the scoring in the first half but not the end of the threats.

The Cougars, who were silent on offense most of the first half, recovered a Rebel fumble on their own 23 yard line and proceeded to march down field, getting as close as the Rebel five before D.C. McDonald was hauled down for a loss of eight yards by Lee's Terry Powell.

On the next play, linebacker Donny Rivas intercepted quarterback Doug Hadley at the goal line and ran the ball out to the 24. Lee ran out the clock, escaping a Cooper threat and holding onto its 14-0 advantage.

THE COUGARS wasted only 50 seconds getting the touchdown back in the third quarter. Tailback Jay Tollison, who was the game's second leading rusher with 177 yards on 24 carries, busted a 73-yarder for a score. Scott Anderson added the extra point to cut Lee's lead to 14-7.

"I wish we could have done a little better tonight," said Tollison. "We really didn't get after them like we could have, like we should have. We didn't do a good job in the first half. We got started slow. The offensive line blocked real well for me. They blocked Lee super and our receivers and fullback were blocking well down field and that helped out a lot."

But, the Rebels were up for the challenge. Taking the kickoff back to their own 31, the Rebels mounted a drive that ended in a two-yard scoring plunge by Ellis. Kamradt kicked the PAT.

Two possessions following the TD, the Rebels struck again after Hadley was intercepted by Pool Webb. Jones picked up a quick nine yards and then Bergoon hit wide receiver Dexter Traylor for 45 yards to the Cooper two. Jones finished the final steps for his first score of the game. Kamradt's second PAT made it 28-7.

THE COUGARS weren't without a few scoring opportunities of their own. Twice in the second half, Hadley put up what looked like sure touchdown passes only to see the ball fall to the ground. The first, to a wide open McDonald along the left sideline, was never touched. The second, a 27-yard pass to Chris Cromley, looked to be caught at the five yard line but he bobbled it and then dropped it while going into the end zone: Incomplete.

"We were fortunate," said Tayrien. "We were lucky, we really were. Hadley is a good passer. We had a pretty good pass rush on him but I don't think we sacked him many times."

Lee didn't. They hit him hard on several occasions but by the time the defender got to Hadley, the ball was already on its way toward a receiver.

Midnight strikes for Cinderella Bulldogs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ABILENE—Abilene High's bad mood Eagles swooped out of the fourth quarter sky here at Shotwell Stadium Friday night and stole Cinderella's glass slipper from the Midland High Bulldogs, 15-13.

The Bulldogs, off to their best start since the mid-1950s, finally tasted defeat as Abilene High used an Eagle who flew the Odessa High coup quarterback John Bowser, an OHS transfer who was making his first start of the year, dialed Daniel Brewer for a 22-yard TD strike with only 2:37 left in the game to give the 3-2 Eagles their first taste of of District 4-5A victory.

Bowser, who replaced Nicky Russell at quarterback after two losses to state powers Longview and Odessa Permiana, guided the Eagles 78 yards in just seven plays to erase Midland's 13-9 lead, which had just been posted on the Bulldogs' previous possession.

THE BULLDOGS had marched 67 yards to post the lead and the way the MHS defense had been playing, it looked like Cinderella's slipper would stay on a Bulldog foot for at least one more week.

But no sooner had Jake Madrid capped what appeared to be a winning drive with a one-yard TD plunge with 5:39 left in the game, than Bowser went to work.

Tailback Guy Sims started the AHS drive with a 15-yard run and Bowser followed with a 34-yard bomb to Derek Hood, who had MHS' Mark Johnson draped around his neck at the 28. The Dogs held three downs, but on fourth and four, Bowser hit Brewer in the back of the end zone and the glass slipper was shattered.

BULLDOG Coach Doug McCutchen, however, would not the blame the loss on that one play.

"I really didn't see where we broke down, but we didn't get the man (Brewer) covered. Still, that play is not why we lost the game. We had other opportunities to win the game."

And McCutchen was right. The Bulldogs came out after a dreadful first half offensive show and put together a long drive to the AHS 11. But on a second down play, junior quarterback Matt Marcum was slightly injured and had to be pulled for one play for backup Jeff Alsup, who couldn't complete his pass effort and Richard Fry missed a 30-yard field goal attempt with a hook off the tee.

"That's a bad spot to have to put Jeff in since that was his first time at quarterback this year," noted McCutchen.

"He did everything you could ask of him. He took the snap, read the defense and made a good throw. We just didn't complete it."

AHS held a 9-7 halftime advantage with golden gifts from a stuttering Bulldog offense, which added four more turnovers to a growing list.

In the first period, Abilene's Abelardo Jasso recovered a Marcum fumble at the Midland 36 and three plays later Bowser took it in from 12 yards out.

In the second, a Mark Johnson interception set up a 52-yard Midland drive that was kept alive by a fumbled punt by Abilene at the AHS 12. Madrid later cashed in from the two for a 7-6 margin, but what the Midland defense giveth, the Midland offense giveth away.

Let's get scientific about ratings

Forget the writers' polls and the coaches' polls, here's something scientific that will settle the question of who's No. 1 once and for all, I think.

Briefly, it is a system devised by a mathematician and it is an extension of what standings would be if all the listed teams could play each other. Each team is assigned one point for a win, and one-half for a tie, and the playing schedules are compared. For example, if two teams play identical schedules through games played Jan. 2, the team with more wins is ranked higher.

The ratings appear in USA Today and on the surface seem flawless.

Surprisingly enough, and you'll see why shortly, Texas is ranked No. 1. The rest of the top 10, in order: Washington, Penn State, Florida State, South Carolina, Michigan, Rutgers, Ohio State, Miami, Georgia Tech. The second 10 is Syracuse , Vanderbilt, Georgia, Oklahoma State, Oklahoma, LSU, SMU, Auburn, Arkansas, Mississippi.

A few surprises, huh? Perhaps, you are wondering what happened to: BYU—21st; Nebraska—24th, Clemson 28th, Boston College 31st, TCU 37th, Notre Dame 40th.

It probably isn't too surprising that system is the brainchild of a mathematics prof at Penn State, all of which verifies the old adage that "Figures never lie, but...."

Anyway, laugh on...

Last week our endeavors to beat the line resulted in a 9-3-1 college record and a 4-3 pro mark.

The SWC...

Rice plus 29 at Texas—Longhorns should win by more than 29, but coming between Penn State and Oklahoma, the Owls might be able to keep Steers within hailing distance...Maybe, if everything breaks in their favor.

Texas Tech plus 10 over Texas A&M—If Raiders can just play tough in the last quarter for a change...

TCU plus four over Arkansas—Frogs have been as good as gold against the line this year.

Baylor minus nine over Houston—Maybe the Cougars can get a post-season match against Nothrwestern or Columbia.

The Others...

Georgia even over Alabama—Georgia-Alabama pick 'em, that sounds like a giveaway.

Air Force minus 11 over Navy—Service academy grudge match.

Auburn minus 9½ over Mississippi—Tigers make up for early season disappointments.

Army minus 16 over Harvard—Not since the days of Pete Dawkins have the Cadets commanded this kind of respect.

Clemson minus 15½ over North Carolina—Tar Heels couldn't stay with Tigers even when UNC was good.

Florida minus 11½ over Syracuse—At least my wisecrack about what Nebraska would do to Syracuse didn't come back to haunt me. I didn't pick that game and may wish I hadn't picked this one.

Oklahoma State plus 9½ over Nebraska—No way the Cowboys can win this and after what Syracuse did to Huskers last week, OSU will pay this week...still, sticking with the form sheet....

USC minus 3½ over Washington State—Only 3½ points, Trojans must really be lousy, again.

Wisconsin plus five over Illinois—Who knows how to pick these games, so give me the points, thank you.

Penn State minus 7½ over Maryland—Lions may not be able to win big ones, but they can win these.

Virginia minus five over Duke—George Welsh has done wonders with Cavaliers.

Miami minus one over Notre Dame—It's at South Bend, but Hurricane, after the schedule they've played, is tough as nail.

Oregon plus 7½ over Arizona—Webfoots, forever, or at least until next week.

Florida State minus 10½ over Memphis State—Beware of the letdown.

The Pros...

Cowboys minus 6½ over Cards—Cowboys ease by another.

San Diego minus three over Green Bay—Packers aren't so tough.

49ers minus 3½ over Giants—Judging by the Rams game, the Good Ol' Giants are back.

New Orleans plus three over Chicago—Payton catches Jim Brown, but it still won't be enough to catch Saints.

Redskins minus 7½ over Indianapolis—Washington is rolling.

SWC blessed with quality coaches

AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS — The Southwest Conference is blessed with quality football coaches.

All you had to do recently was watch Texas Coach Fred Akers befuddle Penn State with an unbalanced line. Or note Southern Methodist Coach Bobby Collins' tricky wingback around attack against Texas Christian.

There's sleep being lost in SWC football laboratories as coaches like Akers and Collins discover new gimmicks and map out strategy.

But coaching football is a thankless profession. You can lose your genius status rather quickly.

Ask Akers, who's being hailed as the upcoming Bear Bryant after back-to-back victories over Auburn and Penn State. But wasn't there some sniping at his ability after a 10-9 loss to Georgia in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day?

So it goes.

No coach is perfect, not even the late and great Bryant, who was the first to confess to an off-day.

"I got out-coached," Bryant would growl. "Blame the coach for this one."

Alumni usually do if things don't go well, and no coach is 100 percent safe.

Ask Tom Wilson, who was fired at Texas A&M after defeating archrival Texas twice, of all things.

Some SWC coaches are doing great jobs this season and some just average. Here's an early report card on the nine SWC coaches:

GRADE A: Akers of Texas and Collins of SMU.

The Longhorns are ranked No. 1 for the first time since 1981. Akers found a way to replace eight defensive starters and picked the right quarterback in an unsettled situation. Akers also handled an injury-decimated running back situation well.

SMU also lost eight defensive starters, and Collins had to groom green quarterback Don King into something special. The Mustangs are much more solid than many thought they would be going into October.

GRADE B: Arkansas Coach Fred Hatfield, Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker and Baylor Coach Grant Teaff.

Arkansas seemed confused defensively in its opener against Mississippi, but the Razorbacks appear on the verge of getting the hang of Hatfield's aggressive style of play. His "Flex-Bone" offensive is a nightmare to defend.

Wacker has the Horned Frogs motivated and moving. His offense has improved dramatically in just the second year of his tenture at TCU. However, his defense still has undisciplined lapses such as the 3rd-and-33 touchdown pass by SMU.

Teaff was hoodwinked good by Brigham Young, and the Bear secondary looked lost. However, the Bears were respectable against Oklahoma and Teaff worked some magic against Texas Tech. The man can motivate.

GRADE C: Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill, Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore, Rice Coach Watson Brown and Houston Coach Bill Yeoman.

The Aggies got off to a 3-0 start and looked dreadful doing it. The offense was jittery and jerky and the defense gave up too many big plays. Now Sherrill has his genius put to the test with his No. 1 quarterback out for the year.

Texas Tech folded in the fourth quarters against both Texas Tech and Baylor. A coach with As or Bs on his report card doesn't let that happen.

Same thing goes for Houston. The Cougars looked good in the first half against Washington but collapsed. They built a 28-7 lead against Louisville and blew it. Coaching decisions have to play a part in it somewhere.

Brown has won a game at Rice. But he's already playing musical chairs at quarterback. Isn't all that supposed to be settled before the season begins?

Final grades to come at the end of the semester.

Padres pinning hopes on park

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The vast differences between San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium here and Wrigley Field in Chicago have added another element to the National League Championship Series, which resumes Saturday with the Cubs clinging to a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five set.

The differences in size between the two parks have been widely recognized. The alleys in Wrigley are 355 feet; they're 370 in Jack Murphy. And when the wind blows out at Wrigley, fly balls become home runs.

"We've been awesome in Wrigley Field this year," says Cubs third base coach Don Zimmer. "Our club is more suited to Wrigley. We have a lot of guys that loft the ball. They've got guys that hit line drives and ground balls, like Alan Wiggins and Tony Gwynn."

And therein lies an even more important difference between the two ballparks — the way in which the two infields are maintained. At Wrigley, the infield grass grows lush — like the rough on a U.S. Open golf course — and ground balls roll slowly to the infielders. At Jack Murphy, the infield is hard and the grass is cut short, making it play more like Astroturf.

"It's done for a purpose," says Padres General Manager Jack McKeon. "They can't cover much ground out there in the infield, so they don't want the balls to get through. Everybody doctors their own field to suit their own purposes. It's part of the game."

The grass is especially long on the left side at Wrigley Field to protect 36-year-old third baseman Ron Cey and 38-year-old shortstop Larry Bowa. The Padres, meanwhile, have Gold Glover Graig Nettles at third, still superb at the corner despite his 39 years, and fleet-footed Garry Templeton at shortstop.

"Our field is suited to our club," Templeton says. "They have a slow infield. I saw two balls up the middle here last night that wouldn't have gotten through in Chicago, one by Terry Kennedy. Our infield's a lot faster than theirs, and that's to our advantage."

Did Chaps win?

From Staff Reports

The Western Junior College Athletic Conference held its final fall tournament at Green Tree Country Club Friday and nobody knows who won.

In fact, it could be almost spring when the WJCAC competition resumes before anyone finds out. That's if it develops into a full-blown rhubarb. But chances are a decision will be reached in a couple of weeks at most.

The outcome remains unresolved because of a protest on a rules violation by a Midland College player.

Midland College, which went into the tournament tied with New Mexico Military Institute, could finish first or tied for second in the tournament. It all depends on a final ruling from either the conference athletic committee or the National Junior College Athletic Association.

The Chaparrals posted the low team score of 284, but MC golfer David Pritchett was ruled to have gone back on the course after his round, in violation of conference rules. Pritchett fired the low round of the day, a three-under-par 58 on the par 71 course.

WJCAC rules says returning to the course is a no-no. But the rules do not specify the penalty to be imposed, if any. Conference rules do specify penalties of one stroke, two strokes, or diqualification for unsportsmanlike conduct. With other players still competing, the rule prohibits a player who has finished from returning to the course and coaching or encouraging teammates.

If Pritchett's score is allowed, Midland College would have a 284 team total. If a two-stroke penalty is assessed, MC would have 286. Either total would be enough to win the tournament.

If Pritchett is disqualified, MC would have a 292. That would give Odessa College the win with a 289 and put MC into a tie for second with NMMI.

Midland College—Randy Winn 81, John Sundberg 76, Steven Venter 73, Chris Gomez 72, Raymond cole 71, David Pritchett 68 (?)—284-286-292.

Odessa College—Mike Ketcham 72, Bill Bell 70, Terry Budzinski 77, Mario dela Cabada 75, Tom Presby 73, Don Tannahill 74—289.

NMMI—Mikael Krantz 75, Mitch Young 71, Tom Vollan 74, Eric Luschei 72, Gregor Hannah 77, Charlie Costell0 80—292.

New Mexico JC—Donny Yrene 69, Marty Sanchez 77, Greg Marchese 75, Phil Plautz 77, Toby Crockett 76, Mark Schmidt 83—297.

Colbert eagle good for lead

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Veteran Jim Colbert holed a fairway shot for an eagle two that propelled him to another 5-under-par 65 and a three-stroke lead Friday in defense of his title in the $350,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Colbert, 43, reached the tournament halfway point with a 36-hole total of 130, 10 shots under par for two trips over the 6,525 yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

"That 65 just kind of snuck up on me," Colbert said, then grinned. "Of course, when you make two on a four-par, that tends to help a little."

The eagle came on the 463-yard 15th hole, which was playing downwind. Colbert hit a six-iron from 189 yards out on the fairway.

"It took one hop, hit the stick, crawled up the pin about three feet, then dropped back down, hung on the lip for a while, then fell in," he said.

Mark O'Meara, who has won once and been a runner-up five times this season, and former Texas Open champion Ron Streck shared second at 133, seven under.

Legal Notice favorite in Messenger Stakes pace

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Legal Notice, the runner-up in the Little Brown Jug and a world record holder, is favored to win tonight's $379,343 Messenger Stakes for 3-year-old pacers, since the winners of the first two legs of pacing's triple crown won't be competing in the third.

Detroit closes out Royals, 1-0

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers, with Milt Wilcox teaming with Willie Hernandez on a three-hitter, completed a three-game sweep of the Kansas City Royals with a 1-0 victory Friday night to advance to the World Series for the first time since 1968.

The Tigers, baseball's most dominant team during the regular season, were heavy favorites in the American League Championship Series and coolly eliminated the Royals on a cool, crisp October night.

They will now open the World Series on Tuesday night against either the Chicago Cubs or the San Diego Padres. Chicago leads the National League playoffs two games-to-one with Game 4 scheduled for Saturday in San Diego.

Wilcox symbolized the Tigers' efficiency, allowing just a fourth-inning single to George Brett and an eighth-inning single to Don Slaught. Wilcox, who did not complete any of his 33 starts this year, got a second-inning run on an RBI-forceout by Marty Castillo and made it stand up, walking two and striking out eight in eight innings. Hernandez allowed the final hit, an infield single by pinch-hitter Hal McRae with two out in the ninth.

The Tigers finished with just three hits off Royals starter Charlie Leibrandt, who walked four and struck out six.

A capacity crowd of 52,168 jammed Tiger Stadium, chanting louder and louder as each Royals batter fell, and those fans were ready for the kill. So were a horde of policeman, who emerged on the field at the start of the eighth inning and ringed the field, crouching against the wall in foul territory.

Officials were determined not to see a reccurrence of the night the Tigers clinched the AL East crown, when legions of fans stormed the field and savaged the surface, resulting in two dozen arrests.

However, fans poured over the 20-foot fence in left and right-center field and policeman orderly tried to get them off the field and herded those on the field into a group in center field.

The closest Kansas City came to scoring was in second, and it would have been a tainted run. With two out, Steve Balboni walked and was running on a full-count pitch that Frank White popped into short left field. Shortstop Alan Trammell and center fielder Chet Lemon both called for the ball and each backed off before Lemon caught it in the tip of his glove.

Leibrandt, like Wilcox a castoff of the Cincinnati Reds, didn't allow a hit after the third inning. But two of those hits came in the second, it was the left-hander's downfall.

Barbaro Garbey led off with a shot up the middle that Liebrandt deflected but couldn't stop, and it went for a single. Lemon forced Garbey at second, before Darrell Evans singled sharply to left-center, putting runners at the corners.

Castillo then hit a bouncer to shortstop Onix Concepcion, who flipped the ball under-handed to second baseman White to force Evans at second. But White's relay to first was a shade late as Lemon scored the game's only run.

Detroit right fielder Kirk Gibson, who went 5-for-12 with one home run in the series was unamimously selected as the Most Valuable Player.

McCamey zips Golden Cranes

McCAMEY—McCamey's Badgers remained undefeated by scoring in every period to defeat Crane, 24-0, here Friday night.

The Badgers are 5-0 while the sophomore-laden Cranes are 1-4.

Rodney Terry put McCamey ahead for good with 5:22 left in the first period on a 35-yard run and Nandy Zarate toed the extra point.

In the second period, Quarterback Heath Stephens scored on a four-yard run and Zarate converted.

Zarate's 30-yard field goal was the line score of the third period, but Stephens got loose on a 15-yard run with 1:13 left in the game and Zarate again was true.

McCamey posted an 18-3 edge in first down and outrushed the Golden Cranes 315 to 31.

REBELS

"We had plenty of opportunities," said Cooper coach Mike Garrison. "I did a poor job of coaching. When you're down on the goal line, you should be able to score. It wasn't the kids' fault. They played hard. Lee did a good job defensively. Our passing game never really got in synch and that's a tribute to Lee. We dropped some passes and made some bad decisions, but that's high school football."

And, about Tollison, Garrison said, "Jay played well. He's a great football player. He's getting better, a lot better. He's a competitor and a competitor will make up for some of those things he lacks. He could line up with some of these guys (the sprinters like Jones) and not be able to keep up but he'll compete with them."

Greenwood makes it 5-0

RANKIN—Greenwood's Rangers continued to roll impressively, defeating outmanned Rankin, 41-12, here Friday night in a non-conference football game.

The Rangers, now 5-0, charged to a 28-0 lead at halftime and led 41-0 before the Red Devils, now 1-3, crashed into the end zone for third and fourth period scores.

Quarterback Chad Longley passed for three touchdowns, the first coming on a 43-yarder to Tony McCollum with 8:23 gone of the first period. Terry O'Steen converted.

Before the quarter was over, O'Steen erupted on a 54-yard scoring run and with 7:10 left in the half Abel Mireles broke loose on a 38-yard TD romp with Longley passing to John Ellis for the two-pointer.

With two minutes left in the half, Longley found Ellis on a 38-yard pass and then with 6:25 left in the third period, Longley drilled Mireles with a 12-yard TD pass.

Greenwood's last touchdown came with 2:33 left in the third period on a two-yard run by Mitch Russell.

Rankin fullback Chris Beeman returned a kick 95 yards for a touchdown and with 1:07 left in the game Beeman punched over from the one.

O'Steen's 102 yards in seven carries led the Rangers while Beeman gained 87 yards in 23 attempts.

Greenwood swings back into action next Friday against Wall, a district opener.

Seagraves' air raid tops Stanton, 28-6

SEAGRAVES—Seagraves defeated Stanton, 28-6, here Friday night as Chad Floyd's passing paced the Eagles to a non-district victory.

A blocked punt by Mark Martinez with 8:02 left in the half broke a scoreless tie. Quarterback Floyd then lofted a 57-yard touchdown pass to tailback Russell Davis with 5:45 left in the half.

Lloyd's one-yard run gave the Eagles a 14-0 halftime lead.

Stanton clicked for a touchdown when quarterback Kevin Glaspie passed 10 yards to winback Auggie Ramos with 7:48 to go in the third period.

Floyd's 16-yard pitch to end Daniel Barrera made it 20-6 with 3:24 left in the third period.

The final touchdown came when defensive halfback Russell Davis converted the Buffaloes' attempt to catch up into a 35-yard interception return with 1:31 left in the game.

Stanton is now 2-2-1 heading into district play next Friday when the Buffs host the Eldorado Eagles.

In Friday's game, Seagraves outgained Stanton 291 yards to 82 and amassed 15 first downs to seven. It was enough to offset 14 penalties for 110 yards and three lost fumbles.

BULLDOGS—

With just over a minute left in the half, Keith Byrd fumbled at his own 11 and Eagle Troy Bowland kicked a 22-yard chip shot with only inches to spare for a 9-7 lead. That turnover proved to be a knotty problem in the final scheme of things for MHS.

Midland had a puny offensive attack in the first half, making only two first downs and 56 total yards.

Now the Bulldogs face 4-5A survival against Odessa High next week. Undefeated no longer applies and the Bulldogs will now have to find out in a hurry what it's like to wear street shoes instead of glass slippers.

TORS

Andrews quarterback Danny Neighbors gained 11 yards on third and six from the 14, then All-District fullback Jeff Tidwell rolled over for the score on two plays to give Andrews a speedy 7-0 advantage.

Kenneth Williams has gained over 500 yards rushing already this year, and finished Friday with 25-103, but twice had fumbles snatched by Andrews out of mid-air to end Lamesa first-half threats.

Early in the second quarter, Lamesa had a first down at the Mustang 13, but Warren was dumped twice and the Tors didn't tally.

After Williams' second fumble, Andrews was driving. When Neighbors hit wingback Ronnie Elmore on a flare pass, he rambled 25 yards, but fumbled on the hit. Lamesa's Jade Froman recovered and the Tors averted a challenge.

Instead, Lamesa did the damage, driving 63 yards in 13 plays to score on Warren's keeper right from three yards away with nine seconds remaining.

One other thing the Tors had going for them was a little luck. It's a commodity that often finds a home on winning teams. On the last play of the first half, Neighbors completed a pass to Rodney Buck on the left sideline. Buck got past the initial defender and seemingly had a clear path to the end zone, but he stumbled and fell as the half ended, 38 yards from paydirt.

Lamesa established their cause by taking the second half kick and going 77 yards in nine plays to go on top 14-7. Williams had a big gain of 19 yards and Warren dashed left end a play later for 36 more to put Lamesa at the Andrews 15.

Williams carried in from the one six plays later.

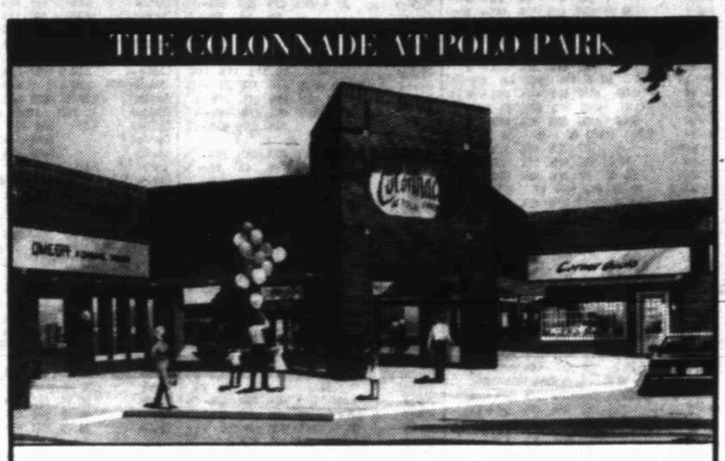

But Andrews courageously stormed the length of the field immediately after to set up the final score. All ten plays on the 69-yard march were on the ground, and Tidwell got his second TD of the night on a student-body right sweep from the three.

Andrews coach David Visentine elected to try and take back the lead, but Neighbors was swarmed under by Randy Culp on the option keep right short of the goal.

Culp was the biggest hero defensively. On Andrews' next drive, he ran down Neighbors from behind for a six-yard loss to force a punt.

On the final Andrews' possession of the game, Culp, Froman and Greg Hogg all combined to stop Tidwell dead in his tracks on a fourth and two situation, and the game was over.

A year ago, Andrews creamed Lamesa twice, 33-7 and 35-0. But the W&W double-you duo of Warren and Williams was too much. "Doug Warren was super," said Noonkester. "He can throw the football. And our offensive line did a super job on the pass blocking."

Ford offers raise in pay

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. offered its 115,000 blue-collar workers a pay raise Friday in a labor contract proposal that the United Auto Workers union said could avoid a strike in a week.

However, UAW President Owen Bieber admitted being troubled by reports that four large union locals, in early balloting, had voted down the tentative contact reached across town two weeks ago with General Motors Corp.

Bieber delivered a stern warning to the 350,000 UAW workers at GM that if the agreement is defeated, "we'll be in a nationwide strike against General Motors." Voting no, Bieber said, "doesn't make sense," given the wage raises and job protection provisions of the GM accord.

Only a fraction of the GM workers at 149 locals have voted, and most ballots are to be cast next week.

On the Ford issues, the mood was brighter, with chief Ford bargainer Peter Pestillo saying the proposal covers all contract areas and great bargaining progress can be made.

"I think we can bargain from this offer," Bieber said. He did not disclose the amount of the wage offer or any other specifics, but said the document provided a favorable start to the coming week's negotiating.

The union has set what it calls a tentative strike deadline of noon Oct. 12, although both sides say the bargaining could continue past that date if progress is being made.

"All I can really tell you at this point is that it does go in the right direction, although it doesn't go nearly far enough," Bieber said at news conference at Ford headquarters.

Pestillo wouldn't say how much the Ford proposal resembled the GM pact. "It represents a departure in some areas," Pestillo said. "It has a perfect consistency in some others."

The GM pact would provide wage increases and cost of living allowances that — when combined with profit sharing and $1,655 in lump payments — would earn the average UAW worker $12,000 more pay over three years, according to union figures.

The average rate of pay at GM would rise from $12.67 an hour to $12.82 immediately and stay there for three years. The rate at Ford is now $12.68.

Bieber's mood swung greatly depending on which set of negotiations he was talking about.

He was optimistic enough on the Ford talks to poke fun at his actions two months ago when he ripped apart Ford's original contract offer in anger and tossed it over his shoulder.

Pestillo, Bieber joked, said Ford would grant the UAW "anything it wants" if Bieber could rip the thick, new proposal.

The union leader, who stands 6-foot-5, then placed his huge hands on a thick sheaf of papers, tore them to shreds and pitched them over his head, to the delight of reporters.

Maybe umpires should have called balk

Baseball umpires occupy a place in the hearts of their fellow Americans somewhere between that of Benedict Arnold and John Wilkes Booth. The Krupp family gets a better press.

"Kill the umpire!" is as familiar an American batle cry as "Remember the Alamo!"

Umpires are the loneliest of men. They can't fraternize with anyone but each other. They can't go to places where the ballplayers go. They lead the league in room service. They have to have the hide of a rhinoceros. They have to be cantankerous and antisocial. They have to judge the world on the basis of whether it is fair or foul, a strike or a ball, safe or out.

They have to have an adversary relationship with the players. If they have favorites, they can't say so out loud. Their stock in trade is truculence. Their role is stern, keep the player in his place, keep the game from getting out of hand. Their sarcasm is legendary. Once, when a rookie pitcher screamed that a pitch he had thrown to Ted Williams that was called a ball was really a strike, the umpire told him to "Shut up and pitch." On the next throw, Williams hit a 500-foot home run. The umpire was sweet. "See, son? Mr. Williams will let you know when you throw a strike."

THE CRUSTY old Tim Hurst hated managers, John McGraw in particular. One day when a McGraw star was pitching, Tim called the first pitch a ball. McGraw reacted as if he had stoned a pulpit. "Call that a ball, you blind old bat?!" he roared. "It split the plate!" The pitcher wound up, threw another. "Strike!" roared Tim Hurst. From the dugout came the dulcet tones of McGraw. "The first one was better." "OK," said Hurst. "Ball two."

It is of passing interest that no scandal in baseball history has ever involved an umpire. This is a remarkable statistic. Gamblers used to fix pitchers, outfielders, infielders, even World Series. But they never got to an umpire, which would seem to be the most logical fix of all. And, maybe the easiest.

Umpires made Caesar's wife look reproachable. They kept baseball above suspicion. Baseball's gratitude was not unalloyed. "He's fair," a ballplayer once said of an umpire under fire. "He makes lousy calls for both sides."

But, if you consider this unremarkable, consider other sports. In basketball, the notorious "home-court advantage" for years was nothing more than intimidated officials, fearful of their jobs, the crowd, the owners, seeing to it the home team won. Football was little better. For years, we had spectacles in the Rose Bowl of Big 10 officials marching off penalties against Pacific Coast teams – and vice versa. It took a brave official to call a holding penalty on Notre Dame on a winning touchdown at South Bend. Pac-10 officials often ignored the fact that the home team didn't have the ball when it went into the end zone for the winning score.

ONE OF the bravest calls I ever saw in any sport was that of umpire Ed Hurley in the 1965 World Series at Minnesota. It was the seventh game of the World Series and Sandy Koufax was pitching a shutout for the visiting Dodgers when Minnesota shortstop Zoilo Versalles got a hit and stole second with a batter named Joe Nossek at the plate. Suddenly, Ump Hurley stepped out from behind the plate, ordered Versalles back to first and declared Nossek out for interference. I don't believe Dodger catcher John Roseboro had even protested. The rally, instead of having a runner at second and none out, suddenly had a man on first and one out. And 50,596 people reached for a rope.

It is this kind of integrity that baseball umpires bring to the current strike. They want their place at the trough. Television is unloading truckfuls of money on the grand old game and the umps want their share.

It's hard to argue with a working man trying to get all he can for his labor. In fact, it's un-American.

But it is a fact that umpires don't especially care what their fellow citizens think of them. That's why they're umpires. And their tactic of striking the playoffs and World Series is in the best traditions of that attitude.

It's also in the best traditions of labor warfare to strike an employer at his most vulnerable. If the game won't capitulate on the eve of the game's greatest showcases with millions watching and millions in the till, when will it capitulate?

ONLY, BASEBALL didn't capitulate. It has taken the almost contemptuous tactic of getting its umpires out of the Yellow Pages, rounding up makeshift, motley crews from the sandlots to officiate these holiest of rites, the post-season playoffs and World Series. The umps, for a change, have run themselves out of the game.

It may be one strike they shouldn't have called. If the people they call "scabs" don't make any disastrous mistakes, if you can get through the most sacrosanct of ceremonies without the union label, who needs it for the regular season? Any union leader could tell them of the pitfalls.

Next year they'll get their product, umps, from Japan or Korea like every other self-respecting industry from the garment to the automotive to the electronic.

The Summer of 1945

Old Cubs recall THE year

By RICHARD E. GOLDSTEIN
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — It was a Saturday afternoon, the next to last day of September. Harry Truman was in the White House, the atomic age was less than two months old, and a world war had just ended.

At Forbes Field in Pittsburgh, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Pirates, 4-3, in the first game of a doubleheader to clinch the 1945 National League pennant.

The way the Cub outfielder Peanuts Lowrey figured it then, plenty of pennants lay ahead at Wrigley Field:

Looking back the other day on that autumn at the close of baseball's wartime era, Lowrey, now 66 years old and living in Inglewood, Calif., remembered: "After we won the pennant with Charlie Grimm in '45, I didn't think anybody could beat us."

But just about anybody has — until this year, when the Cubs, losers since World War II, captured the National League East title.

A GLANCE at the 1945 season that produced the last Wrigley Field winner reveals a time that was truly bizarre.

Wartime travel restrictions forced the ballclubs to train in the North and brought cancellation of the All-Star Game. With scores of players in the armed forces, the big-league teams made do with draft rejects and players too old for military service. Pete Gray played center field for the St. Louis Browns, though he had lost an arm in a childhood accident. The Dodgers brought Babe Herman out of retirement at age 42. Despite the draft, the '45 Cubs had a nucleus of genuine big leaguers — Claude Passeau and Paul Derringer on the pitching staff, Phil Cavarretta at first base, Stan Hack at third, and Lowrey, Andy Pafko and Bill Nicholson in the outfield.

It was not easy for them to get into shape. The Cubs held spring training, such as it was, at French Lick, Ind., 280 miles south of Chicago, staying at a spa resort and using a golf course as a ballfield. Much of the time, the Lost River flooded its banks, leaving the field unplayable. When it wasn't wet, it was frosty.

"BOY, IT was cold," said Cavarretta, reminiscing from his home in Palm Harbor, Fla. "But it was wartime, and things weren't easy. Whatever they asked of us, we did. I was thankful just to be in spring training. Think of those kids who had to get into the service."

Charlie Grimm, the manager, didn't let the conditions get the best of him. One day when the wintry Indiana weather kept the team indoors, clown it up. One time, he had the lineup card, and we were being beaten pretty good, so he buried it in the third-base coaching box. Then all of a sudden we started hitting and getting a lot of runs, and boy, he went on his knees and started digging it out and kissed the lineup and put it back in his pocket."

On July 25, the Cubs lost an exhibition game to a bunch of sailors. But they need not have been embarrassed. The Great Lakes Naval Training Station pitcher who beat them 1-0 on a three-hitter happened to be Bob Feller, just back from service in the Pacific.

THE NEXT day, the Cubs made a move that was a key to their winning the pennant. They bought Hank Borowy, already a 10-game winner, from the Yankees for $100,000. Borowy went on to post an 11-2 record with the Cubs, and it was he who pitched the pennant-clincher on Sept. 29.

Victorious over the Cardinals by three games, the Cubs faced the Tigers in the World Series. Borowy pitched a six-hit shutout in the opener, but the Tigers won the second game behind Virgil Trucks, who had been discharged from the Navy in late September.

Then Passeau beat the Tigers, 3-0, yielding only one hit, a second-inning single by Rudy York.

"It was just one of those days where things were going right. I relied on my fastball, which would sail," recalled Passeau from his home in Lucedale, Miss. "Rudy told me later that the ball fooled him, but he hit it over the shortstop's head, it was a soft single."

The Tigers eventually won the Series, taking the seventh game, 9-3, behind Hal Newhouser, who had been routed in Game 1.

How do the players on the 1945 team feel about the '84 team?

The 76-year-old Passeau, who devoted many more years to his tractor business than he did to baseball, said he hoped the Cubs would win the pennant, but displayed something less than a sense of urgency. "I shouldn't say this," he said, laughing, "but I'm not too much of a baseball fan. It was a job for me."

Lowrey was more enthusiastic. "I'm pulling for the Cubs, I always have," he said. "I was brought up in the Cub organization and I coached for the Cubs under Durocher and Herman Franks. I follow them all the time."

CAVARRETTA, who played with the Cubs for 20 years and managed them in the 1950s, is also rooting for his team. And he would like nothing better than a World Series victory over the Tigers.

He remembers a recent old-timers' game between the players from the '45 Cubs and the '45 Tigers. His contribution, Cavarretta recalled, was "a little dribbler down to first base, off Hal Newhouser." The old-time Cubs went on to lose.

Amateurs will never do

Ump Evans disappointed in subs

AUSTIN (AP) — Jim Evans of Austin, president of the Major League Umpires Association, says the amateurs manning the bases in the baseball playoffs will "never replace major league umpires."

Two of the substitutes for the Detroit-Kansas City series during the umpires' strike — Randy Christal and Jon Bible — also are from Austin, and Evans says, 'I'm disappointed in them. It's a shame they don't understand our cause.

"I would never have told them not to work, though. That's their decision, a decision they have to make in their guts. If they have a gut feeling that they want the money or the glory, well ... let me say this — they'll never replace major league umpires," Evans said.

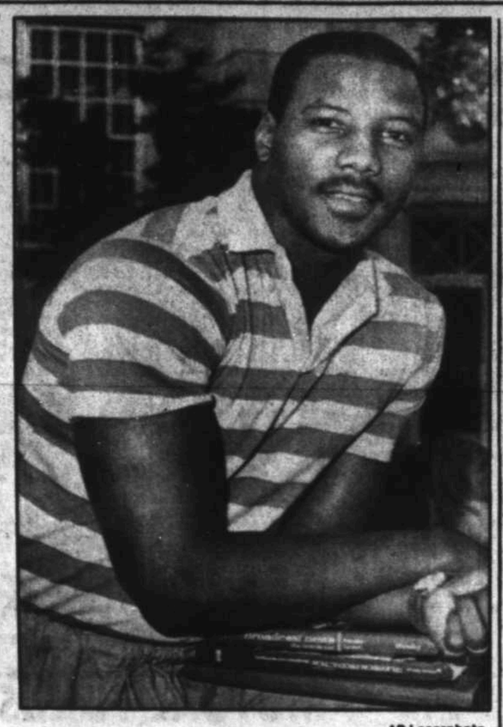

Evans said in a 1982 agreement, National and American leagues "said if they made a good financial television deal, then they would start a money pool for the umpires. If not, then it says we can strike. It's black and white.

"They signed a $1.2 billion television contract with the networks in 1983 for six years, yet they refused to do anything for us except make token increases. Our current contract runs through 1985, but it also gives us the right to strike," Evans said.

Bible has umpired for 18 years, including stints in the minor leagues 11 years ago. Christal has called for 17 years, and umpired during the Olympics in Los Angeles.

"Randy and I were both nervous at first," Bible said. "But after we got out there, it was really a lot like being out at UT (University of Texas)."

One advantage, Bible said, is "the announcers in Chicago are being unfair, and ours aren't. It sounds as if (ABC announcer Don) Drysdale is on a seek and destroy mission.

Quarterbacks take lumps

It has been a rough season for Southwest Conference quarterbacks, and at least four teams are expected to be directed Saturday by players who weren't starters when the season began.

Texas A&M lost Kevin Murray for the season when he broke an ankle in last week's 22-21 victory over Arkansas State.

TCU lost Anthony Sciaraffa for a month in the Horned Frogs' 62-18 victory over Utah State in the season opener.

Arkansas' Brad Taylor was sidelined with an ankle injury and had to miss last week's 33-10 victory over Navy.

Texas Tech's Perry Morren injured a hand against New Mexico week before last, and got in last week's Baylor game only to hold for extra points and field goals.

One result is that the league's two leading passers this week are substitutes — Craig Stump of A&M with an efficiency rating of 190.1 and Danny Nutt of Arkansas with a rating of 176.2.

Stump and Nutt were expected to be at quarterback again this weekend. Anthony Gulley will be TCU's quarterback, while Tech is expected to go again with a shuttle between freshman Aaron Keesee and sophomore Monty McGuire.

In Saturday's full slate of games:

— No. 1-ranked Texas (2-0) is a 29-point pick by Las Vegas oddsmakers to beat Rice (1-2) in a 7 p.m. game at Houston;

— Texas A&M (3-0) is a 9-point favorite over Texas Tech (1-2) in an 11:30 a.m. confrontation at College Station;

— Arkansas (2-0-1) is a 3½-point pick over TCU (2-1) in a 2 p.m. game at Fayetteville; and — Baylor (1-2) is favored by 8½ points over Houston (1-2) in a 7 p.m. contest at Waco.

Southern Methodist, the nation's No. 10 team, is idle.

Several streaks are at stake Saturday.

Arkansas has beaten TCU 24 of the past 25 years, and has not lost to the Horned Frogs in Fayetteville since 1955.

Texas has beaten Rice 18 straight times and will be trying to give coach Fred Akers his eighth successive 3-0 start since becoming the Longhorns' head coach.

Texas Tech will be trying to go a perfect 3-0 against A&M head coach Jackie Sherrill since he took charge in 1982.

OSU better be prepared

The quote from Nebraska defensive tackle Rob Stuckey is posted at the entrance to Oklahoma State's football offices.

"All I can say is that Okie State better hook it up because we're going to shove the ball down their throat," Stuckey said following last week's 17-9 upset loss to Syracuse that knocked Nebraska from its No. 1 ranking to No. 8.

Stuckey has much support for his remark. The Cornhuskers lost the first two games of their series against Oklahoma State, but that was back in 1960-61. Since then, Nebraska is 22-0-1 against the Cowboys, and the last two times they met at Lincoln the margins were 48-7 and 48-10.

But for the first time in 16 years, Oklahoma State catches Nebraska coming off a defeat and, for precedent-watchers, the Cowboys' last victory in the series 23 years ago followed a Cornhuskers' loss to Syracuse. Oklahoma State, ranked No. 9, is 4-0 for only the third time in 38 years and hasn't been 5-0 since 1945.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said the good thing about last week's loss to Syracuse "maybe is that Nebraska fans and players got a good dose of reality. I opened the door (at home) Saturday night and got one straight hour of 'What happened?' "

What happened, Osborne concluded, was that Syracuse "was the stronger football team and they deserved to win. On balance, we got outplayed and probably outhit a little bit."

Saturday's clash with Oklahoma State marks the start of Big Eight Conference play for both teams, and it will be hard for the winner not to begin studying travel schedules to Miami at Orange Bowl time, a trip Nebraska has taken the last three years.

Osborne warns that "most of the people they (Oklahoma State) have coming back are key operators. They have a three-year starter at quarterback (Rusty Hilger), an all-Big Eight running back (Shawn Jones) and a great kicker (Larry Roach). They have great overall team quickness and speed. Most of their defensive linemen are back and they were the best we saw last year."

Saturday's only other pairing of teams from The Associated Press Top Twenty finds No. 14 Miami at No. 16 Notre Dame. Meanwhile, top-ranked Texas visits Rice for a night game, runner-up Ohio State is at Purdue, and No. 3 Washington plays at Oregon State.

Prehistoric canoe believed oldest ever found in state

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A prehistoric canoe excavated from the banks of the Red River has been dated at almost 1,000 years old and is believed to be the oldest ever discovered in the state.

Rose Kelly of Dixie, whose family found the 31-foot cypress canoe a year ago, said official word on the date came Wednesday from the University of Georgia.

Through radiocarbon dating on two samples, the canoe was placed at the year 1005 from one sample and 1065 from another.

Philip "Duke" Rivet of the state's Division of Archaeology said that is the "earliest confirmed date" for a canoe excavated in Louisiana. Rivet said that since the two dates are so close it is a good sign that the testing is accurate.

Dr. Clarence Webb, who excavated Indian mounds at Belcher and Mounds plantation nearly 50 years ago, and Rivet, had estimated that the canoe was about 1,000 years old.

"We're looking at the time where the Caddo Indians pretty much got established. They had their own identity and a distinct culture," Rivet said.

Webb said the discovery "fits nicely with the date of the big site at Mounds plantation, which is dated between 1050 and 1090. The canoe probably was from those people," he said.

The canoe was excavated in September 1983 by the Kendall Kelly family between Dixie and Belcher, about three miles downriver from the Mounds plantation.

"The important thing I think about it is that the 1000-1100 period was the greatest for ceremonial acts and trade, almost all of it by river," Webb said.

He said the canoe could have easily been involved in trade from Texarkana to Natchitoches, where 40 to 50 sites were located at that time.

Webb said sea shells used for decoration came from the Gulf; greenstone to make ceremonial ornaments was sent from Kentucky and Tennessee; and a variety of flints made their way from Oklahoma.

Quartz, bauxite to carve pipes and possibly copper came from Arkansas, he added. Webb said dugouts have been made in the Southeast for 3,000 years.

Three common symbols characterize the restlessness of our lives. They are the "blinking" neon sign, the can opener, and the aspirin bottle

The neon signs betray our constant search for amusement. The can opener reflects our pursuit of convenience. The aspirin bottle indicates that, to many of us, life is a splitting headache in a noisy, busy street.

There is more to life than that. Discover with us what else life has to offer.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Christian educator joins St. Luke's Methodist

Reinhardt

St. Luke's United Methodist Church has announced that Wilma Reinhardt has been hired as minister of christian education. Mrs. Reinhardt comes to St. Luke's from St. Luke's UMC in Odessa.

Previously, she worked at Asbury UMC in Odessa. She has also been involved in campus ministry at Casper Community College, Casper, Wyo. She and her husband served as dorm parents for fifth, sixth and seventh grade boys at Navajo Methodist Mission School, Farmington, N.M.

Mrs. Reinhardt has training in sociology, religious education, psychology, education, behavioral science, counseling and Bible education. She is a deaconess in the United Methodist Church, a certified director of Christian education and a consecrated diaconal minister of the United Methodist Church.

Her responsibilities at St. Luke's will include oversight of the Christian Education Program and supervision of the Child Development Program.

Miller series screened

The trouble with traditional approaches to evangelism, says author Keith Miller, is that "we wind up with a bunch of strange words that don't smell or taste like life."

Miller stresses this point in a new film series, "New Wine: Evangelism as a Biblical Way of Life." A film from the series will be shown at 10 a.m. Sunday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave.

The 6-part series, being shown Sundays through Oct. 28, calls for a re-thinking of conventional ways of presenting the Christian message. Miller warns against making Christianity into a rational system of theology. Referring to research distinguishing between the brain's right and left hemispheres, he urges Christians not to reduce the faith to left-brained rationalism. Actually, he believes, the Bible is a "right-brained book," with its poetry, imagery and emotional elements.

Miller will speak in person on evangelism on Nov. 11 at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Single parents group set

All single parents who still have children at home are invited to attend the first meeting of a new group set for 9 a.m. Sunday at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois Avenue. The meeting will be a brunch served in the parlor from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

The purpose of the brunch is for single parents in the Midland area to get acquainted with one another and discuss plans for this group. The group will begin as a Sunday School class meeting at 9:20 a.m. Sundays. Other activities will be decided on by the class.

The Rev. Steve Edwards, director of Senior Services of Midland, will be the teacher for the first series of Bible lessons. He will be present at the Sunday brunch to introduce the studies he will be conducting.

The church will provide the food and child care. Sunday School classes for all ages begin at 9:20 a.m. For more information call the church office, 682-3701, today between 10 a.m. and noon and talk to the Rev. Bill Weir.

Lay member to speak

Cal Adam, a lay member of the Permian Church of Religious Science, will speak on "How to Get the Lull Out" at Sunday's 11 a.m. service.

An engineer with Mobil Oil, Adam graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1944 and received his bachelor of science in petroleum engineering from Kansas University in 1959. During World War II, he spent a year in China where he met, he says, "people without material goods but with perpetual smiles." While he was with Mobil, he spent four years in Columbia, two in Venezuela and 19 here.

The church meets at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Guests are welcome.

Communion service set

The Rev. Jean Pierre Meshew, archdeacon of the Diocese of the Southwest of the American Anglican Church, will celebrate Holy Communion for St. Paul's American Episcopal Church at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Services are held in the chapel of Ellis Funeral Home. The 1928 Book of Common Prayer is used by the congregation for all services.

FGBMF to convene here

The Midland and Odessa chapters of Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International will be holding their 1984 convention at the Midland Hilton Nov. 8-10.

The public is invited to attend. For reservations call Leroy Linney, 1-756-3688, or Pete Petri, 686-0893.

WCC makes new grants

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The World Council of Churches' controversial Special Fund to Combat Racism has made new grants totaling $400,000, the bulk of it to southern African groups opposing white-minority rule in South Africa and Namibia.

Critics have regularly assailed such grants as supporting violent revolutionary movements, but terms of the grants ar that they may be used only for humanitarian aid for refugees and defense of prisoners.

Schools: Panel sees ills but not answers

RELIGION

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — A panel of Christian specialists, deploring the general blackout on religion in the public schools, offers mixed answers on what could be done about it.

While some say restoration of moments of prayer in public schools would help, others doubt it, contending that the main need is for quality teachers who exemplify high standards and uphold discipline.

Joyce Vedral, an English teacher in a New York high school who teaches a popular course on the Bible as literature, contends that such courses are a legal and effective way of instilling moral values in students.

"Our basic values are in the Bible," she says. "In teaching it, you don't tell students what to believe or not believe. But by the time they finish the course, their basic ideas are changing around because they read values in the Bible.

"Many times, Christians try too hard to preach. But God reveals himself. It happens in class."

The forum on public education and Christianity was sponsored by the interdenominational monthly Christian Herald, one of America's oldest continuously published periodicals, begun in 1878.

Participants included some top conservative and mainline church experts.

Among them were Lynn Buzzard of Chicago, head of the Christian Legal Society; Robert Dugan, public affairs director of the National Association of Evangelicals, and Dean Kelly, church-state specialist for the National Council of Churches.

They generally agreed that moral standards have plunged in the country, with religion often shoved aside, and blame for much of the overall problem was heaped on public schools.

"Recently the general tendency of the whole society has been to marginalize, privatize and put to the periphery people's religious concerns and convictions," Kelly said.

"What the remedy is, I don't know. But people have the right to express their religious concerns and convictions anywhere, anytime, including in the public schools, so long as the power of the state is not used for it."

However, the courts have not agreed, and recent rulings have eliminated scheduled periods of prayer or Bible reading, or expressions of faith by teachers.

POSITIVE THINKING

Marriage needs that 'we' feeling

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Marriage, perhaps more than any other relationship, requires compromise. Marriage has no place for compulsive, uncontrolled self-centeredness on the part of either husband or wife.

The heart of a good marriage is the "we" feeling; everything really depends on it. If two people love each other in such a way that they think of themselves as "we" instead of "I" or "you", then they have the power to solve almost any marital problem that comes along — money problems, sex problems or in-law problems. They know how to solve their problems together as mature, reasonable people.

The "we" couple grows along together as circumstances bring new viewpoints and interests. One partner never lags behind while the other goes ahead. And marriage is not a contest of wills, but an euqal partnership in which each must share and share alike, the rewards as well as the sorrows.

I recently received a curious letter from a woman who feels her marriage is going to pieces. This woman, who has been treated in too tender a fashion all her life, has seemingly brought very little to the marriage. Unfortunately she is childish and self-centered and not willing to compromise. Having been under her parents' wings far too long, she is filled with fear and apprehension. She writes:

"My husbnd is in debt and this disturbs me greatly because I am terrified of poverty. I have always been used to being pampered and am afraid of being out on my own. I am terrified of responsibility and of the fact that if we move I shall be in complete charge of my children. They are really lovely, but I had little experience with children until I had my own. At the present time we are living with my parents and are under their direction. But my husband wants to move his business where he feels he can be more successful. I am very mixed-up and do not want to move away from here."

This poor woman certainly isn't giving her husband or herself the change they deserve. She does not trust in his ability or in her own to live their own lives. Only mama and papa can do that it seems. That represents infantile thinking.

Moving away from parents would be a good thing in this case. Then she would learn to rely on her husband and on herself and not childishly fall back on her parents. When any of us grows up from being an emotional child to a mature person, marriage will grow too. Only grown up people who live and work as a team are really ready for marriage.

Perhaps of all social institutions, marrigae is in the greatest state of flux and is also the most complex, but it is at the same time the greatest challenge and also the most rewarding. When a couple makes it a "we" relationship, they can overcome all hazards together.

Our Savior's Lutheran celebrating anniversary

Allen

Otterness

Preas

Our Savior's Lutheran Church will celebrate the first anniversary of its formal organization as a congregation Sunday. Our Savior's Lutheran Church is presently meeting at Grace Presbyterian Child Care Center, 5200 W. Illinois Ave.

The occasion will be celebrated with special festivities at the 10:30 a.m. worship service Sunday. The Rev. James Otterness will be the guest preacher. Following the service a congregational dinner and brief program, inviting the participation of local and national Lutheran leadership, will be held.

Beginning initially as a Bible study fellowship organized by Otterness and the Rev. John V. Halvorson of Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord, Odessa, with a nucleus of about 40 people affiliated with the Odessa church living in Midland, the group held its first worship service on Ash Wednesday in 1983.

Meeting regularly for worship 10:30 a.m. Sundays and for Bible study 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays, the fellowship formally organized itself as a congregation on Oct. 2, 1983, at a dinner where it elected a church council and officers. Those elected at that time were Cecil Preas, president; Gary Gibson, vice president; T.L. Newman; Clyde Chynoweth; Troy Colley; Mike Farris; Skip Hedgpeth; David Herman; and Bill Martin.

In July, the church called John W. Allan, a May 1984 seminary graduate, to serve as pastor and continue the development of its Christ-centered mission and program. By offering a wide range of family-oriented opportunities for worship, study and fellowship, including shared sponsorship of the program "Simple Secrets of the Kingdom" on KOSA at 10 a.m. Sundays, the membership has grown to more than 110 people.

Candidates' debates not likely to contain surprises

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — When President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale debate on Sunday, the Democratic challenger is sure to ask how the president plans to balance the budget, while Reagan is equally certain to wonder aloud whether the American people want to return to the days of Jimmy Carter.

In large part, the debate will echo the rhetoric of their campaigns; the lines of attack aren't likely to contain many surprises.

"What's your plan, Mr. Reagan?" is a refrain Mondale has sounded recently to dramatize his contention that the president is unwilling to say what he would do during a second term.

By contrast, the president often recalls that the last two years of the Carter administration — when Mondale was vice president — were "back-to-back years of double-digit inflation" and also brought "the highest interest rates since the Civil War."

The first of two debates between the presidential candidates, the confrontation in Louisville, Ky., will concentrate on domestic policy. When Reagan and Mondale debate two weeks later in Kansas City, Mo., the subject will be defense and foreign policy.

Mondale and Reagan were spending the days leading up to their debate in intensive preparation that included watching videotapes of each other's performances in earlier debates. They also were poring over thick briefing books containing the points they want to make and the attacks they can expect from each other.

The economy is certain to dominate the Louisville debate with the candidates sparring over taxes, budget deficits and what 1985 is likely to bring.

Mondale makes no bones about his belief that a tax increase is needed to help reduce the federal budget deficit regardless of who wins the election.

"Mr. Reagan will raise taxes and so will I," the Democratic nominee told his party's convention in July. "He won't tell you, I just did."

Mondale offered a plan to cut the budget deficit by two-thirds during his first term as president, a proposal that called for raising $85 billion through tax increases on upper-income people and cutting spending by about $75 billion.

The Democratic nominee said his plan would not raise taxes for families earning less than $60,000.

Reagan has said that Mondale wants to tax Americans "from here to eternity." The president said he wants to simplify the tax system and that "a tax increase has always been for me a last resort."

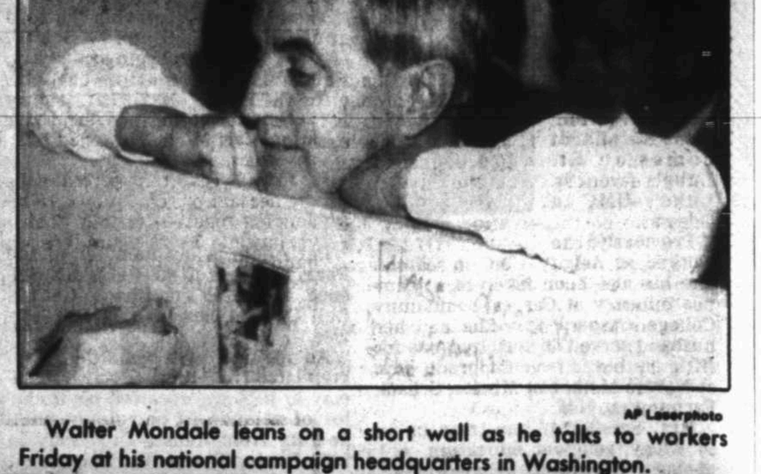

Mondale cites the record budget deficits during the Reagan presidency as the cause of the economic problems of farmers and the imbalance in trade as well as certain to lead to economic distress in the years ahead.

The Reagan view is that the answer to the deficits is "continuing our economic growth and...reducing wasteful government spending."

As for Democratic demands that he come up with a plan to cut the deficits, Reagan argues that the opposition party controlled Congress "for 42 of the last 50 years...and for almost all of those 50 years, deficit spending has been their deliberate policy."

Both candidates will vow to protect Social Security.

Mondale will predict that if reelected Reagan will try to cut benefits, while the president will counter that the reduction of the high inflation of the Carter years has made life easier for retired people.

Reagan to travel through Ohio on same railway car Truman used

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a symbolic appeal for the votes of Democrats, President Reagan embarks on a five-city whistle stop tour through Ohio next week along the route taken by President Harry S. Truman in 1948 and in the same private railway car Truman used.

The Trumanesque train trip is the latest White House campaign-season bow to a Democratic hero.

Reagan, a Republican convert, recently visited Waterbury, Conn., where he invoked the memory of the late President John F. Kennedy in the same public green where Kennedy drew a crowd of 30,000 people at 3 a.m. in the exhausting final days of his 1960 campaign for the presidency.

In September, Reagan invited the family of the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, his present opponent's mentor, to the White House Rose Garden where he presented Humphrey's widow with a congressional gold medal bearing her husband's portrait.

And he staged another White House ceremony to honor the late Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

The trend hasn't escaped the notice of Reagan's campaign foes.

Presidential rival Walter Mondale, recently listing reasons for Democratic campaign-season anger, said, "We are mad because they are trying to steal our heroes."

Vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro told a crowd in Boston, "I resent it when Ronald Reagan lays claim to the memory of President Kennedy and pretends that he has anything in common with that good man."

And Sen. Edward Kennedy, the late president's brother, said at that same rally, "I wonder why he doesn't quote Richard Nixon. After all, Mr. Reagan was a Democrat for Richard Nixon in 1960" when Kennedy won the presidency.

The Reagan election-year homage to Democrats continues next Tuesday when Eleanor Roosevelt's portrait is moved from the First Lady's Corridor on the ground floor to a place of prominence in the East Room.

At Waterbury, Reagan made clear that in invoking the memory of Kennedy, Truman, Roosevelt and other Democrats, he is appealing to the votes of registered Democrats whose party, he contended, "has abandoned the good and decent Democrats of the JFK, FDR and Harry Truman tradition."

At rallies around the country the president often tells his audience that as a former Democrat he remembers those presidents fondly. But he claims that the present leadership of the Democratic party has abandoned its historic roots.

Dance Theater presents beautiful new 'Giselle'

A Review

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dance Theater of Harlem on Wednesday presented its beautiful new "Giselle," being called a "Creole Giselle," with which it opened its three-week season at the City Center last week.

The costumes and scenery are extraordinarily beautiful. It's danced well, too. Only a season ago, this company looked best in "story ballets," where the acting was important and the dancing could be mostly ignored. "Giselle" tells a story but it's an important Romantic-era ballet requiring real dancing. It got that on Wednesday.

Virginia Johnson, star ballerina since the company began in 1969, danced a Giselle of sweetness and charm. Eddie J. Shellman, a native of Tampa, was able to combine fine dancing and acting. In a traditional "Giselle," he's a prince. Shellman conveyed immediately that he was a superior person, above the farm girl Giselle in social status at least. Not every "prince" can do that.

Also, when Giselle and Cassdandra Phifer, in an elegant dress with a train, both claim to be his fiancee, Shellman was able to look like a man staying totally out of that and at the same time extremely interested.

The setting is Louisiana after the Civil War. The act one set has Giselle's mother's house at the left and a shed at the right, as traditional. But the trees are moss-hung. And the costumes are in beautiful pastels, the most lucious shades of peach, apricot and plum predominating. Carl Michel designed sets and costumes.

Judy Tyrus and Joseph Cipolla, in the peasant pas de deux, were better dancing together than in their solo variations. Keith Saunders was a handsome Hilarion, quickly vindictive, determined that if he couldn't have Giselle, nobody would.

In act two, Lorraine Graves was a strong leader of the Wilis, engaged girls who have died unmarried.

Mondale offered a plan to cut the budget deficit by two-thirds during his first term as president, a proposal that called for raising $85 billion through tax increases on upper-income people and cutting spending by about $75 billion.

The Democratic nominee said his plan would not raise taxes for families earning less than $60,000.

Reagan has said that Mondale wants to tax Americans "from here to eternity." The president said he wants to simplify the tax system and that "a tax increase has always been for me a last resort."

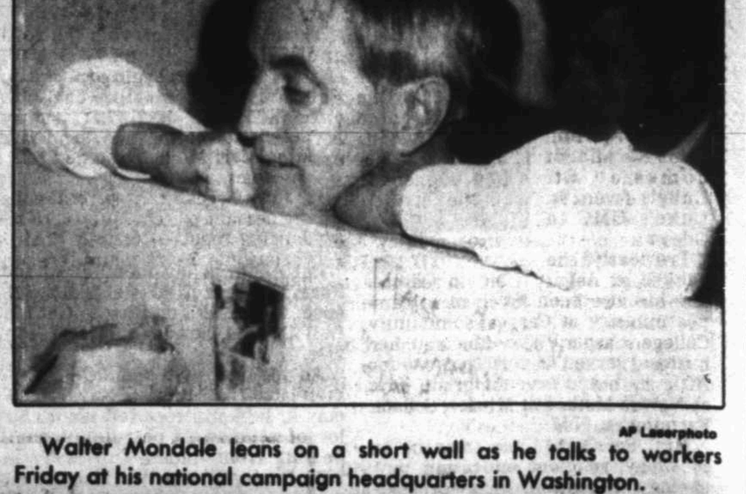

Mondale cites the record budget deficits during the Reagan presidency as the cause of the economic problems of farmers and the imbalance in trade as well as certain to lead to economic distress in the years ahead.

The Reagan view is that the answer to the deficits is "continuing our economic growth and...reducing wasteful government spending."

As for Democratic demands that he come up with a plan to cut the deficits, Reagan argues that the opposition party controlled Congress "for 42 of the last 50 years...and for almost all of those 50 years, deficit spending has been their deliberate policy."

Both candidates will vow to protect Social Security.

Mondale will predict that if reelected Reagan will try to cut benefits, while the president will counter that the reduction of the high inflation of the Carter years has made life easier for retired people.

Reagan to travel through Ohio on same railway car Truman used

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a symbolic appeal for the votes of Democrats, President Reagan embarks on a five-city whistle stop tour through Ohio next week along the route taken by President Harry S. Truman in 1948 and in the same private railway car Truman used.

The Trumanesque train trip is the latest White House campaign-season bow to a Democratic hero.

Reagan, a Republican convert, recently visited Waterbury, Conn., where he invoked the memory of the late President John F. Kennedy in the same public green where Kennedy drew a crowd of 30,000 people at 3 a.m. in the exhausting final days of his 1960 campaign for the presidency.

In September, Reagan invited the family of the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, his present opponent's mentor, to the White House Rose Garden where he presented Humphrey's widow with a congressional gold medal bearing her husband's portrait.

And he staged another White House ceremony to honor the late Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

The trend hasn't escaped the notice of Reagan's campaign foes.

Presidential rival Walter Mondale, recently listing reasons for Democratic campaign-season anger, said, "We are mad because they are trying to steal our heroes."

Vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro told a crowd in Boston, "I resent it when Ronald Reagan lays claim to the memory of President Kennedy and pretends that he has anything in common with that good man."

And Sen. Edward Kennedy, the late president's brother, said at that same rally, "I wonder why he doesn't quote Richard Nixon. After all, Mr. Reagan was a Democrat for Richard Nixon in 1960" when Kennedy won the presidency.

The Reagan election-year homage to Democrats continues next Tuesday when Eleanor Roosevelt's portrait is moved from the First Lady's Corridor on the ground floor to a place of prominence in the East Room.

At Waterbury, Reagan made clear that in invoking the memory of Kennedy, Truman, Roosevelt and other Democrats, he is appealing to the votes of registered Democrats whose party, he contended, "has abandoned the good and decent Democrats of the JFK, FDR and Harry Truman tradition."

At rallies around the country the president often tells his audience that as a former Democrat he remembers those presidents fondly. But he claims that the present leadership of the Democratic party has abandoned its historic roots.

Dance Theater presents beautiful new 'Giselle'

A Review

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dance Theater of Harlem on Wednesday presented its beautiful new "Giselle," being called a "Creole Giselle," with which it opened its three-week season at the City Center last week.

The costumes and scenery are extraordinarily beautiful. It's danced well, too. Only a season ago, this company looked best in "story ballets," where the acting was important and the dancing could be mostly ignored. "Giselle" tells a story but it's an important Romantic-era ballet requiring real dancing. It got that on Wednesday.

Virginia Johnson, star ballerina since the company began in 1969, danced a Giselle of sweetness and charm. Eddie J. Shellman, a native of Tampa, was able to combine fine dancing and acting. In a traditional "Giselle," he's a prince. Shellman conveyed immediately that he was a superior person, above the farm girl Giselle in social status at least. Not every "prince" can do that.

Also, when Giselle and Cassdandra Phifer, in an elegant dress with a train, both claim to be his fiancee, Shellman was able to look like a man staying totally out of that and at the same time extremely interested.

The setting is Louisiana after the Civil War. The act one set has Giselle's mother's house at the left and a shed at the right, as traditional. But the trees are moss-hung. And the costumes are in beautiful pastels, the most lucious shades of peach, apricot and plum predominating. Carl Michel designed sets and costumes.

Judy Tyrus and Joseph Cipolla, in the peasant pas de deux, were better dancing together than in their solo variations. Keith Saunders was a handsome Hilarion, quickly vindictive, determined that if he couldn't have Giselle, nobody would.

In act two, Lorraine Graves was a strong leader of the Wilis, engaged girls who have died unmarried.

In new film, Martin performs physical comedy

By BILL HAGEN
Copley News Service

A Review

HOLLYWOOD — Steve Martin and Carl Reiner are nothing if not dogged — an apt word in the wake of some of their earlier efforts — in their intention to keep collaborating on movies until they get it right.

Well, with their latest venture, "All of Me" — Martin as star, Reiner as director — they come much closer than they have before to putting on the large screen a truly funny comedy. It would be unfortunate, and a little sad, if it's too little, too late.

Unfortunate, sad, but not totally unjustified. With Martin, Reiner and, in this instance, co-star Lily Tomlin, it's almost a case of "Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me." And Martin, Reiner and Tomlin have fooled audiences more than twice with some dreadful movies.

"All of Me," however, isn't one of them. This one almost fulfills all the promises attached, deservedly or not, to three such renowned emigres from television. Maybe it's just that it took them a long while to learn that what works in television doesn't necessarily work in movies, that an audience that has to pay for the pleasure of their company is a little more discriminating, a little more demanding.

"All of Me" is a frothy, funny fantasy that begins with the imminent demise of Edwina Cutwater (Ms. Tomlin), a very rich woman whose life has been severely limited by a lifelong heart problem. Edwina has made arrangements to rectify this wrong.

An Eastern guru (Richard Libertini, a delight in these wacky roles) has a method of assigning Edwina's soul to another, healthier body the instant she expires. The body chosen is that of Victoria Tennant, playing the daughter of one of the help; visibly a laudable selection. It's a plan to which both parties have agreed, but Ms. Tennant has secret plans of her own.

Into this somewhat eccentric environment steps a discontented lawyer named Roger Cobb (Martin), who feels slighted because he's not yet a partner in the prestigious firm for which he works, even though he's engaged to the senior partner's daughter. What else can a man do to ensure success?

Sure enough, Edwina shuffles off her mortal coil, which is about the only thing that goes according to plan. Through a slight mishap, her soul winds up in Roger's body, which understandably sets up a little inner turmoil. Each spirit controls half of Roger's body.

Not only is it a funny premise, but it also allows Martin to indulge in some marvelous physical comedy, which is probably what he does best. Edwina and Roger are in a stubborn battle for control, which results in lapses into femininity at very awkward times for poor Roger. During passionate moments with Ms. Tennant, for example, or during a visit to the men's room.

But a relationship that begins in acrimony gradually mellows into friendship, and perhaps even something beyond that, for Edwina and Roger. And they join forces, as though they had any other choice, to thwart the duplicitous Ms. Tennant and transfer Edwina's soul to the body in which it belongs.

"All of Me" has a lot of the style and texture of madcap romantic comedies of an earlier era, when people knew how to write and make funny movies — an art, with a few exceptions, now largely lost.

Reiner also gets some fine work from Libertini, as well as gravelly voiced Selma Diamond; old pro Dana Elcar, who has his best role in some time as the libidinous senior partner; and Madolyn Smith, deliciously vindictive as the spurned fiance.

"Some people only live this way two weeks a year."

Welcome to vacation living all year long. Welcome to Saddle Club Apartments. Saddle Club isn't a resort-we just look like one. We offer you 2 sparkling swimming pools, 2 lighted tennis courts, 2 indoor racquetball courts, a universal gym, indoor and outdoor jacuzzis, and wet and dry saunas.

Once inside a Saddle Club apartment home you can cozy up to a warm fireplace, relax on your own patio or balcony and enjoy the feeling of luxury living.

There's privacy here, but if you want activities, we have planned resident get-togethers.

Rent beginning at $309. We're located only minutes from major businesses, recreation, fine restaurants and entertainment. We're probably only a few minutes away from where you work.

So if you feel like taking a vacation that never has to end, take a drive over to Saddle Club and let us show you how.
