Say it's not so

Scholarly studies have found that more than 100 paintings and drawings by Vincent Van Gogh — art worth millions of dollars — may be fakes, a leading art journal says. The Art Newspaper said the alleged fakes include one of the Dutch master's famous Sunflowers series — sold by auctioneers Christie's to a Japanese firm in 1987 for $39.5 million — and two self-portraits, including one owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Emergency landing

Five hours after Delta Airlines Flight 2035 made an emergency landing Friday afternoon at Midland International Airport midway in its Dallas-to-El Paso run, the Boeing 737 aircraft resumed its journey, according to a spokeswoman for Midland's airport operations. Pilots of the twin-engine airliner reported a low oil-pressure reading on the left-wing engine. The pilot shut down the engine in flight for precautionary reasons and landed in Midland at 4:45 p.m. After mechanics corrected the problem, the flight took off for El Paso about 10 p.m., the airport spokeswoman said.

NASA's Pathfinder OK after reaching surface

By Matt Crenson
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — The Pathfinder spacecraft tumbled to a halt Friday on a boulder-strewn plain, ending two decades of inactivity in Mars exploration and launching a new campaign to search for clues of past life on the red planet.

To scientists, the cold and barren landscape revealed in Pathfinder's first color photos looked like paradise.

"Today is a glorious day," said Peter Smith, who leads the team operating the camera. "Those are the rocks that may hold clues to the history of Mars."

A glitch slowed the progress of NASA's mission Friday night, as managers struggled to retract a deflated airbag that had draped itself over one of the spacecraft's petal-like feet. The bag was blocking the path its remote-controlled rover, Sojourner, was to take onto the Martian surface.

Aside from that problem, scientists jovially pronounced the Independence Day landing a huge success.

"The little engine that could, did," said chief flight engineer Rob Manning. "This has been very exciting, and we're getting there."

After a 309 million-mile voyage, NASA's Mars Pathfinder is set to inaugurate a new era of Mars exploration. With a systematic program that will send a probe to Mars every two years over the next decade, NASA hopes to resolve the question of whether life ever got started on the red planet.

Pathfinder settled on a desolate, reddish-brown plain after bouncing in a cocoon of giant airbags as high as 50 feet above the Martian surface Friday morning. It appeared to have landed near a chain of divots chopped into the Martian surface by debris from distant meteorite impact.

Independence Day

Midland celebrates its freedom

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The freedom that America holds as dear as life itself and the patriotic symbols of Old Glory's red, white, and blue, were honored Friday on Independence Day.

About 100 reveling youngsters joined in a patriotic parade of bicycles, tricycles, wagons, and marching gear around the Midland County Courthouse square. U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm saluted freedom and paid homage to America's veterans, including a 91-year-old World War II patriot.

"A people that forget those who have sacrificed to preserve its life will themselves be forgotten," Gramm declared at the American Legion Hall in Midland. "We do remember people who have sacrificed to preserve the life of our nation."

In proclaiming that "freedom is the key in the success of America" — and in honoring those warriors who "pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor" to ensure freedom since 1776 — Gramm recognized all veterans, including Alexander "Colonel" Haroz.

"By being Americans, we get to share in the glory of those who made America and those who kept it free," Gramm said.

Focusing on Haroz, he said that by "honoring you, (there is) honor (accorded to) veterans all over our state."

Sen. Gramm presented Haroz with a folded Old Glory.

With cane in hand, the Midland soldier was aided to the lectern by Boy Scout Brandon Strubberg and by a Haroz family friend, Foy Cox.

"I am honored to be a soldier in World War II," said Haroz who, by World War II standards, was an "old man" in his mid-30s when he served in a tank-destroy-

Winner of three Peabody awards and 10 Emmys, Kuralt also wrote several books: "To The Top of the World," "Dateline America," "On the Road with Charles Kuralt," "Southerners," "North Carolina Is My Home," and "A Life on the Road.

NEW YORK — Charles Kuralt, the avuncular CBS newsman whose "On The Road" reports celebrated offbeat America — from unicyclists to horse traders to gasoline-pumping poets — died on the Fourth of July. He was 62.

Kuralt died at New York Hospital from complications from lupus, an inflammatory disease that can affect the skin, joints, kidneys and nervous system.

"He connected to the essence of America better than any woman or man of his generation," former CBS News president Howard Stringer said. "It's a totally inappropriate death, but on a most appropriate day."

Kuralt made a career of searching for the insignificant and elevating it to prose and visual poetry. He kept pitching the idea of "On the Road" at CBS until the network agreed to a three-month trial in 1967.

The first stop was Vermont for a piece on the fall foliage, with this Kuralt narration:

"It is death that causes this blinding show of color, but it is a fierce and flaming death. To drive along a Vermont country road in this season is to be dazzled by the shower of lemon and scarlet and gold that washes across your windshield."

Yeltsin says back wages to be paid in three months

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's economy has turned the corner after six years of decline, President Boris Yeltsin declared Friday. He then sent his aides scrambling by promising to end Russia's wage crisis in three months.

"The slump has been stopped," Yeltsin said during a nationwide radio address in which he reviewed the first year of his second term in office. "We have reached the point from which production can go up."

Later, during a Kremlin meeting with regional governors, Yeltsin said billions of dollars in back wages that the government owes Russian workers would be paid in three months.

The remark startled First Deputy Prime Minister Anatoly Chubais, a chief architect of Yeltsin's economic program, who was sitting at his side.

"Three months is a very tough deadline, Boris Nikolaevich, we won't be able to meet it," Chubais said.

Yeltsin persisted, saying the debts must be paid off before winter.

Chubais returned to the subject a few minutes later, saying, "There are regions which ... will meet this deadline. But for all regions, the country as a whole, this task is simply unrealistic."

Yeltsin pushed further, responding, "So we have to find other ways, search further. ... Let's try some foreign sources."

Yeltsin didn't explain what he meant by that.

In his radio address, Yeltsin referred to the health problems that sidelined him, or kept him working at less than full capacity, for most of the past year.

"This year has been probably the most difficult in my life," said the 66-year-old Yeltsin, who was re-elected to a four-year term on July 3, 1996. "But it has been a remarkable, exceptional one in other things as well. I couldn't imagine that at my age a person can change. It turned out, one can."

Yeltsin has made a strong recovery in recent months. He maintains a full schedule and his health is not presently a day-to-day concern.

His remarks about the economy followed those of Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, who said earlier this week that Russia's gross domestic product was up 1 percent in the first six months of 1997. Chernomyrdin called it the first evidence of real growth since Russia began its free-market reforms more than five years ago.

"Some growth, albeit not impressive, has started in certain regions," Yeltsin said. The Russian people "will be able to feel the economic rise when it starts in most regions."

The Russian economy has been shrinking since the Soviet collapse in 1991, including a 6 percent contraction last year.

Thousands of Palestinians clamor for revenge over leaflet

Associated Press

NABLUS, West Bank — Outraged by a Jewish extremist's anti-Muslim leaflet, 30,000 Palestinians thronged the streets of Nablus on Friday, clamoring for Israeli blood and burning an effigy of an ultra-Orthodox Jew.

"We want more attacks!" the crowd chanted to beating drums in a rally organized by the Islamic militant group Hamas. A banner carried by marchers read: "We (will) knock on heaven's door with the skulls of the Jews."

The leaflet, pasted on Arab shop doors in the West Bank town of Hebron last week, has ignited a week of clashes between Palestinian stone throwers and Israeli troops. It depicted the Muslim prophet Mohammed as a pig stomping on the Koran, the Muslim holy book.

The Jewish extremist who drew the caricature was indicted Thursday on charges that could put her behind bars for 24 years. But the indictment did little to appease Palestinians.

On Friday, Palestinians in Hebron threw stones, firebombs and a homemade explosive at Israeli troops who fired live ammunition and rubber bullets.

At least 29 Palestinians were injured, including one in critical condition after being shot in the head by a rubber bullet. Six people were wounded by live bullets, which Israeli troops began using Wednesday after a soldier was seriously injured by a pipe bomb.

A pipe bomb injured another Israeli soldier Friday, but apparently the injuries were slight. The soldier limped away after the bomb, which was thrown from a rooftop, exploded near him.

Israeli troops have been under orders to aim at the legs of assailants, but an Israeli army commander, Maj. Gen. Gabi Ofir, warned of harsher measures.

"Anyone who throws a bomb with the intent to kill, his end will be death, too," Ofir said Friday.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu accused Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat of doing nothing to prevent the Hebron clashes and of organizing similar confrontations in the Gaza Strip.

On Friday, he told his Cabinet that peace talks with the Palestinians could not resume as long as the riots continued. "We have sent very harsh messages to the Palestinians on this issue," Netanyahu said.

Arafat has denied orchestrating the riots.

As for the accusation that the Palestinian Authority has done nothing to stop the violence, Arafat's police commander in Hebron said Friday that Palestinians have a right to protest Israeli policy.

The Nablus rally was a huge show of force for Hamas, Arafat's largest political rival and an opponent of Israeli-Palestinian peacemaking. The Hamas chief in Nablus, Sheik Jamal Mansour, pledged to avenge what he said was "the humiliation of our prophet."

"This is the beginning of a new uprising," Mansour told the cheering crowd, referring to the violent six-year Palestinian uprising that ended with the first Israeli-Palestinian peace accord in 1993.

On a nearby rooftop, Hamas activists burned Israeli and U.S. flags. The crowd's excitement grew when an effigy of an ultra-Orthodox Jew, with sidelocks, a black hat and black coat, was doused with kerosene and set on fire.

"Allahu Akbar!" — "God is great!" the protesters chanted, shaking their fists in the air and waving green Islamic flags.

Mansour warned that Hamas' response to the leaflet would be even deadlier than the group's reaction to the 1996 assassination of its chief bomb maker, Yehiyeh Ayyash, whose death was widely attributed to Israel. Hamas retaliated by setting off four bombs in Israel, killing 64 people, including the four assailants.

"When they humiliate the prophet, who is more important than Ayyash, this shall cost them more lives," Mansour said.

After the rally, about 1,000 demonstrators tried to march toward Joseph's Tomb, a tiny Israeli enclave in Nablus. They were blocked by Palestinian police.

Earlier Friday, Israeli troops ordered Jewish seminary students to leave the enclave.

A Christian nun who refused to give her name tries to stop Israeli troops firing during clashes in the West Bank city of Hebron Friday. Older Palestinian activists tried and failed to prevent the clashes that ocurred when some 30,000 Palestinians took to the streets clamoring for Israeli blood in retaliation for a leaflet insulting the prophet Mohammed.

More than 100 works thought Van Gogh's could be fakes

LONDON (AP) — Scholarly studies have found that more than 100 paintings and drawings by Vincent Van Gogh — art worth millions of dollars — may be fakes, a leading art journal says.

The Art Newspaper said the alleged fakes include one of the Dutch master's famous Sunflowers series — sold by auctioneers Christie's to a Japanese firm in 1987 for $39.5 million — and two self-portraits, including one owned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

The Metropolitan Museum's offices were closed for the July 4th holiday Friday, and no one was available to comment on the report.

In its latest edition, out Friday, the journal said two other works, "The Garden at Auvers" and "The Arlesienne," may also be fakes, along with a portrait of Dr. Gachet, the physician who cared for the troubled artist before his suicide in 1890. That work hangs in Paris's Musee d'Orsay.

Another study of the doctor set a world record price for a picture in 1990 when it was sold to a Japanese collector for $78 million.

The Art Newspaper said there are no contemporary sales records to help authenticate Van Gogh's works, because he sold virtually nothing during his lifetime. In the decades after his death, the popularity of his works soared.

"By the 1920's the price of his work was already high, and this was actually the period when most of the Van Gogh pictures which have been questioned now emerged and came onto the market," said art writer Martin Bailey, who researched the story.

The journal added that "greedy fakers were helped by the publication of Van Gogh's diaries, in which they could read the artist's descriptions of work-in-progress which they could then counterfeit."

The Art Journal said the latest edition of "The New Complete Van Gogh," a catalog by the scholar Jan Hulsker, lists 45 paintings as being fakes.

"He has very strong doubts about the authenticity of many more works," The Art Newspaper said.

Agent who killed 2 Palestinian hijackers gets government job

JERUSALEM (AP) — A former Shin Bet agent who admitted killing two captured Palestinian hijackers has been named to an important anti-terrorism post, a newspaper reported Friday.

Ehud Yatom told the Yediot Ahronot daily last year after he left Israel's internal security agency that he killed two bus hijackers in 1984 by crushing their skulls after they were beaten by other officers.

Yediot said Friday that Yatom was turned down for a job as school principal after leaving the Shin Bet last year and that several lawmakers opposed his appointment as an aide to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's terrorism adviser, Meir Dagan.

The revelation in 1984 that the two Palestinians died in custody rattled the Shin Bet, which originally claimed they were killed as the bus was stormed by Israeli security forces.

The lie was exposed when a newspaper published photographs showing the two men alive in custody.

FOURTH: Sen. Gramm honors local veteran

(From 1A)

er battalion in Europe.

"We won the war," Haroz uttered slowly and deliberately, "to keep the people of the country safe. I thank you very much."

Midland counselor Alex Rose, one of Haroz's seven children, said that she is "very proud of him ... very proud of what he has done for his country. And I am very proud of how he has raised his children."

"I respected him all of my life," said his granddaughter, Karen Weeks, "because of the way he has raised his kids and the way he has treated us, his grandkids and his great-grandkids.

"He is always there and always has a smile, always laughing, and always has something good to say, always positive ... and (sometimes) stubborn. I think he is wonderful."

Haroz thanked the patriots for participating in the celebration that commemorates the day in 1776 when a group of American colonists, including Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, adopted the Declaration of Independence. But it wasn't until 1783 when America won its independence from Great Britain.

"We remember those who have defended our nation and kept it free," said Gramm, who declared and the United States is "the greatest nation in the history of the world."

In surveying America's history and the nation's influx of immigrants, Gramm said that Americans are ordinary folks — not special or aristocrats or blue-bloods.

"While some of us came over on the Mayflower, most people came to America because they were failing in the Old World," Gramm said. "America is not a great and powerful country because those brilliant and talented people in the world came to live here. As people of the world go, we are pretty plain ... people. People like us in any other country in the world would be peasants."

However, America's greatness was brought about by "ordinary people like us who have had more freedom and more opportunity than any other people who have ever lived in history. And with that freedom and with that opportunity, ordinary people like us have been able to do extraordinary things.

"The genius is America, not where we came from."

Gramm said that it would be well for all Americans to "dedicate ourselves to the principle that we are going to preserve (freedoms) for future generations of Americans."

Despite Americas' problems, including funding Medicare and maintaining the Social Security program, Gramm said that "there is only one thing that I am really concerned about and that is preserving freedom and all of its essentials."

America can solve its domestic and international problems "if we preserve freedom and opportunity where people can work hard and succeed and deal with problems for themselves and their family and their children," Gramm said. "If we can preserve freedom in all of its essentials, then I don't think there is any limit to the American people."

As Gramm was preparing to fly out of Midland continuing his West Texas tour, at least 100 children — from babies to age 12 — were sporting the nation's colors for the 35th annual July 4th Children's Sidewalk Parade, which is sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution's Col. Theunis Dey Chapter in Midland.

"I just don't think you can start too young in learning to be a wonderful American," said Gayle Dodson, who coordinated the event, which began as a neighborhood celebration and later was adopted by the DAR and was brought to the courthouse square.

"The minute they get into this world, we need to start telling them what a wonderful place we live in," Ms. Dodson said.

Among the youngest in the parade were a 3-day-old child and his brother, Alex Mata, and 2-month-old twins.

"You can't start too young in honoring the red, white, and blue," Ms. Dodson exhorted of the colors, which traditionally reflect courage, purity, and loyalty. "You're never too young to be a great American."

Colorful holiday signs proclaimed such wishes as "Happy Birthday, America,' Love, Erica & Blair,'" and "God Bless America."

Sisters April Brown, 16, and Kristen Brown, 14, marched while carrying Old Glory and the Lone Star flag.

"Aren't they darling!" observed Patty Smith, director of social studies for Midland public schools. "This is wonderful."

She and her husband, retired principal-teacher Joe Smith, were lured to the parade not just for patriotism's sake but to watch their granddaughters, April and Kristen.

"It gives the boys and girls a leg up on thinking all the right things about the old red, white, and blue," Smith of the children in the parade. "God bless America."

"They're cute," 14-year-old Andra Luck said of the parade's participants, while her father, Terry Luck, held her close and dear. "God Bless America," Luck said tenderly.

MARS: Earthlings still fascinated by Red Planet

(From 1A)

Soon after receiving a faint signal at 10:07:25 a.m., flight controllers declared the mission off to a successful start and scientists at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory leaped to their feet and cheered.

"We're there, and we couldn't be happier," Manning said.

Pathfinder sat flat and upright within 30 miles of the bull's eye that mission controllers were shooting for. The Sojourner, which will creep about the area studying geology, was in good shape, according to instruments.

About 4:30 p.m., the spacecraft began transmitting photographs of rocky terrain stretching out to the horizon, as well as its unfolded petal-like solar panels and the air bags that softened its landing.

The photographs showed crisp views of hulking boulders, hardly the grainy shots that scientists had warned reporters to expect.

"It's pretty awesome," said Linda Martz of Norco, who brought her three young children to watch the pictures on a 25-foot television screen at a nearby convention center. "It's wonderful to see how big God is."

The photographs, intended to show whether Pathfinder was on stable ground and all of the air bags had deflated and retracted, revealed the pesky bulge of airbag in Sojourner's path.

Engineers planned to raise one petal off the ground and pull the airbag underneath and out of the way, clearing the way to deploy a ramp for the rover to drive down. Late Friday night, it was unclear if the operation had been successfully completed.

The operation appeared likely to delay the start of the rover's trip until Saturday afternoon.

As small frames that would be assembled into that picture came in, mission managers cheered and gasped over views of the rocky plain surrounding the landing site.

Pathfinder is the first mission to transmit images from the Martian surface since the 1970s, when NASA sent the two Viking landers to Earth's nearest planetary neighbor.

The craft's touchdown in the pre-dawn Martian darkness came slightly sooner than predicted, suggesting the atmosphere was thinner than believed, Manning said.

"This is our first interplanetary celebration of the birth of our nation. So it's a proud moment," flight systems manager Brian Muirhead said. "I couldn't hope for a better beginning."

Ninety minutes after Pathfinder came to rest on Martian soil, radio signals confirmed it was not far from its intended target and was working.

"This is nirvana for us space guys," Muirhead said.

President Clinton called the landing "another exciting milestone in our nation's long heritage of progress, discovery, and exploration," and congratulated scientists: "Their success in developing the Pathfinder mission is a testament to the ingenuity and 'can do' attitude of the American people."

At a convention center in Pasadena, cheers went up from a standing-room-only crowd that packed in to watch on a giant TV screen.

"I never thought people would be so excited about seeing rocks. But what we had to go through to see these rocks is amazing," said Michael Hicks, a Stanford student who drove 400 miles to see the huge display.

The mission's primary goal, to characterize the geology of at least a few dozen square yards on the Martian surface, is the first step in a new NASA effort to search for ancient life on the red planet. The program is inspired in part by last summer's announcement that possible signs of life may be present in a Martian meteorite found in Antarctica.

Chris Cantrell, 6, of Utah, studies a picture of Mars at the Planetfest '97 in Pasadena, Calif., Friday. The three-day festival is featuring live images from Mars Pathfinder, updates on Galileo's journey through the Jupiter system, and astronauts Buzz Aldrin and Story Musgrave.

Though Pathfinder carries no instruments designed to detect life, NASA hopes it will find minerals that could hold microscopic fossils or chemical remains of ancient microbes. Future missions would collect rocks of that type and return them to Earth for the detailed analysis required to identify life.

Since 1976, when the Viking missions failed to extract any signs of life from the Martian soil, biologists have insisted they need a carefully selected sample from Mars to determine if life ever existed there. NASA plans to collect that sample and return it to Earth in 2005.

NASA officials seemed undaunted by Mars' notorious reputation as a difficult interplanetary destination. Fewer than half of the 20 missions sent there in the last 25 years have returned any useful data at all.

NASA's last major attempt, the Mars Observer, simply disappeared in August 1993 just before arriving at Mars.

"Mars is a very tough place," NASA administrator Dan Goldin said.

Sojourner, the first mobile spacecraft humans have ever put on Mars, carries its own 3-D camera and an instrument designed to help geologists identify the minerals in Martian rocks and soil.

Pathfinder is being trailed by the Mars Global Surveyor, which was launched in November and will reach the planet in September. Surveyor will orbit Mars for the next few years, mapping the entire surface of the planet in preparation for more detailed reconnaissance in 1998, 2001 and 2003, and finally the 2005 sample return mission.

KURALT: Beloved newsman dies

next 13 years, logging up to 50,000 miles a year on back roads and byways with a two-man camera crew, wearing out half a dozen campers. Then he brought the same outlook and sensibility to CBS's "Sunday Morning" for 15 more years.

"All good television is about telling stories," said "60 Minutes" executive producer Don Hewitt. "Nobody told 'em better than Charles Kuralt."

Bald, pear shaped and rumpled, Kuralt wedded his elegant prose to a warm, deep baritone voice with a hint of the twang of his native North Carolina.

As he spoke with the lumberjacks, whittlers and farmers he met along the way, he chatted the same way you would talk over a backyard fence, uncovering stories the reporters on the airplanes and superhighways sped past.

He found a butcher who could hold 30 eggs in one hand, a swimming pig in a water-ballet show, a light bulb that had stayed lit in a firehouse since 1901.

He did pieces on a school for unicyclists, gas station poets, horse-traders and a 104-year-old entertainer who performed in nursing homes.

"The kind of stories I like best are light and funny ones," he said. "People overcoming obstacles — a farmer who builds a yacht to see the world, or a man who's irritated there isn't a straight road from Duluth to Fargo and spends 25 years building one."

Walter Cronkite said Kuralt's reports "remind people that all is not lost, that life goes on much the same for a lot of people."

Kuralt retired from CBS in 1994, after 37 years, saying, "I aim to do some traveling and reading and writing."

But earlier this year, he returned to television to be host of the syndicated "An American Moment" — a thrice-weekly series of 90-second slices of Americana — and for the CBS cable network "I Remember," a weekly one-hour examination of a significant news story of the last 30 years.

Winner of three Peabody awards and 10 Emmys, Kuralt also wrote several books: "To The Top of the World," "Dateline America," "On the Road with Charles Kuralt," "Southerners," "North Carolina Is My Home," and "A Life on the Road."

His brother, Wallace, who runs a book store in Chapel Hill, N.C., said Kuralt "had continued to work very hard, even though he wasn't feeling very good."

Born Sept. 10, 1934, in Wilmington, N.C., Kuralt was showing his way with words for a national audience at age 14. He won an American Legion "Voice of Democracy" essay contest, went to Washington to meet President Truman and had his entry read on CBS radio by Edward R. Murrow.

At the University of North Carolina, he edited the student newspaper and after graduating in 1955 went to work for the Charlotte News, where he won an Ernie Pyle Award for his offbeat, human interest columns.

After joining CBS, he quickly impressed his bosses, with one describing Kuralt as "the next Ed Murrow." The self-deprecating

AP Laserphoto

Kuralt dismissed such praise as "ridiculous."

Kuralt moved quickly from rewrite to on-air correspondent, covering the 1960 presidential campaign before taking over as head of CBS' newly established Latin America bureau, and eventually became a roving correspondent.

He did four tours in Vietnam and visited "all the tropical trouble stops," he once said. But after bouncing around the world, Kuralt decided in 1967 that he wanted out of hard news.

"I was always thinking, 'How can I get out of this?' he said. "With my temperament and physique, I wasn't suited to deadline pressure."

DEATH NOTICES

John Stuckley III

John "Trey" Stuckley III, the son of Midlanders Bob and Linda Stuckley, died Friday, July 4, at a local hospital.

Services are to be 1 p.m. Monday, July 7, at Midland Lutheran Church with the Rev. Glenn E. Kramer officiating. Burial is to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He was born Feb. 27, 1986, in Odessa.

He had just finished the fifth grade at Greathouse Elementary School. He was a member of Greathouse Cub Scout Pack, where he earned his arrow of light; a member of the Suburban Lions Club Boy Scout Troop 109, where he earned his First Class Badge; and a member of the Midland Lutheran Church.

Other survivors include a brother, Chuck Stuckley of Midland; a sister, Ameri Stuckley of Midland; and his grandparents, Ruthie Lewis of Fort Stockton and Martha Stuckley of Torrance, Calif.

The family requests memorials be directed to Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave. 79701.

Catherine Weidler

Catherine Elizabeth Weidler, died Thursday July 3, at a local care center.

Services are set for 10 a.m. Tuesday, July 8, at Zion United Church of Christ in Decatur, Ind., with the Rev. Don Brown. officiating. Burial is to follow at Decatur Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home and Haggard & Armes Funeral Parlor in Decatur.

She was born Feb. 3, 1910.

She taught German at the high school level for 43 years at Monmouth and Belmont high schools in Decatur. She was a member of the Zion Reformed Church and the Research Club, both of Decatur. She moved to Midland four years ago from Indiana.

She was preceded in death by her two sisters, Margaret Kirkpatrick and Marie Preussen; and by six brothers, the Rev. Carl Weidler, Otto Weidler, Fred Weidler, Adolph Weidler, Oswald Weidler and Theodore Weidler.

Survivors include two brothers, the Rev. Victor Weidler of Tripoli, Iowa, and the Rev. Edwin Weidler of Cloudcroft, N.M.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Zion United Church of Christ in Decatur, Ind., or to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, 79702.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 4:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

Lt. Gov. Bullock hangs up gavel in wake of GOP Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — When Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock hangs up the gavel, he says it's so he can spend more time with friends and family. Others suggest he also may have glimpsed Texas' increasingly partisan future.

The highest-ranking Democratic officeholder in the nation's second-largest state, Bullock never lost a race in a public service career spanning four decades.

After 140 days presiding over the state's first Republican-dominated Senate in more than a century, he's retiring.

Republicans have made huge advances in a state once solidly Democratic. They've seized top offices, including governor, held by the popular son of the former president, George W. Bush. The GOP has 17 of the 31 Senate seats and is within nine seats of taking over the 150-member House.

"He's been seeing this sea change in Texas politics," George Christian, political consultant and former press secretary to Lyndon B. Johnson, said of Bullock.

"It takes more work, more trouble, more energy and everything else to make things work. Having a split Legislature is not that much fun. ... The likelihood that Austin's going to become Washington, D.C., does not appeal to him at all," Christian said.

Bullock, winner of six statewide elections, including four as comptroller, has made clear his disdain for party politics.

When leading GOP senators dared to suggest how the Senate should be run, Bullock blew up, saying he would not countenance partisanship in what had been a clubby chamber.

"We have seen what happens in Washington when they do that. It will be over my dead body before that ever happens in this state," he told The Dallas Morning News at the time. Bullock refused requests for an interview for this article.

Texas is one of the few states without a system that mimics Congress.

Of 49 states with two-house legislatures, there are only five in which one or both chambers have not formally designated majority and minority party leaders — Texas, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina, said Brian Weberg of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Investigation of carjackings not complete, officials say

AUSTIN (AP) — Brandon Shaw, the son of former NASA space shuttle chief Brewster Shaw Jr., was a popular architecture student and enthusiastic guitar player.

Juan Cotera worked in the city's human resources department and was the son of an architect known for his efforts to revitalize low-income East Austin.

They weren't acquainted, but they drowned together in the trunk of Shaw's parents' car after both were victims of separate carjackings, police said.

Austin police were holding two 17-year-olds on aggravated robbery charges. Derrick Williams of Round Rock was being held on $500,000 bond; Ahmad McAdoo of Austin on $200,000 bond.

"As far as we can tell at this point, it was just a random situation. There was no connection," Lt. David Parkinson said Friday. "They just unfortunately happened to be in a location where these, our alleged offenders, were committing crimes and just fell victim to them."

Police said they believe Williams and McAdoo began their attacks last Saturday, when Christopher Vidauri was abducted in a parking lot, then released after he withdrew $10 from an automated teller machine. The machine's camera captured a clear image of a man police identified as McAdoo.

Police say the same men resumed their attacks Monday.

Cotera was walking a female friend to her car late Monday when both were abducted. Officers say the woman was sexually assaulted and tied to a tree before the suspects disappeared with Cotera in the woman's Geo Prism.

Soon after, police believe, the suspects rammed Shaw's 1982 Volvo with the Geo. After the teens ordered Shaw and Cotera into the trunk of the Volvo, they pushed it into Town Lake, a part of the Colorado River that runs through Austin just south of downtown.

Police said an intensive investigation led them to Williams and McAdoo, who were arrested without incident. One of them led police to the submerged car on Wednesday, but his identity has not been released.

Police may upgrade the charges to capital murder, which is punishable by lethal injection, after consulting with the Travis County district attorney's office. As long as the suspects are held on bond, law enforcement officers can take their time preparing charges, Parkinson said.

"It was an absolutely horrendous event — it would be a cliche to even call it a tragedy," he said. "But why at this point would we want to rush something through just for the sake of doing it and risk making a mistake that we would later regret?"

Winner of Mexico City mayor's race may inherit curse rather than prize

■ News analysis

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Governing this monster of a city — with its overwhelming traffic jams, suffocating air pollution and runaway crime — doesn't seem like the kind of job many people would fight for.

But eight candidates are battling to become the first elected mayor of this chaotic Latin American capital, a post viewed by many as a springboard to the presidency. The obvious draw is the instant prestige that comes from running the country's political, economic and cultural center.

But whoever wins Sunday's elections will be handcuffed, because much of the mayor's decision-making power remains with the federal government, which has appointed all of Mexico City's leaders since 1928.

In short, the next mayor could inherit more of a curse than a prize.

"The complexity of the city is enormous," said analyst Luis Rubio of the Center for the Study of Development. "(And so is) the potential for political suicide."

Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the stoic son of one of Mexico's most beloved presidents, was favored in recent polls to win the right to rule over the unruly city of 8.5 million — larger than most Caribbean and Central American nations.

The other top candidates are Alfredo del Mazo of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party known as the PRI, and Carlos Castillo Peraza of the center-right National Action Party.

The job will be high-profile, especially for someone like Cardenas, a lanky 63-year-old who has spent the past decade running for president, losing to PRI candidates in 1988 and 1994.

He still claims the 1988 election was stolen by the ruling party through large-scale fraud. Authorities deny the charges, but concede that Cardenas, who represents the Democratic Revolution Party he helped found, won in Mexico City, with 41 percent of the vote.

The new mayor will be in charge of executing federal laws, introducing bills in the assembly, managing city agencies and appointing his department heads.

In that role, he will simultaneously be trying to usurp some of the president's power while working to remain on his good side. That could lead to conflicts, particularly in the event of a victory by Cardenas, who regularly criticizes the PRI, calling it corrupt, authoritarian and undemocratic.

Cardenas on Friday promised a "collaborative" relationship with President Ernesto Zedillo if he is elected. "I do not see any animosity in this case," he said.

Despite reforms giving Mexico City greater autonomy, health and education will remain under federal control, Zedillo will continue to nominate Mexico City's police chief and have the power to veto the mayor's choice for attorney general.

The new mayor will receive a $4.5 billion city budget already approved by his predecessor.

The incoming mayor's budget proposals in subsequent years will require approval by Congress, which the PRI has always controlled. The ruling party could lose its legislative majority during congressional elections, also being held Sunday.

Still, the mayor will have some say over spending.

"The federal power for the first time is going to share the budget of public works in the city," said Jorge Legoretta, director of Metropolis, a center for the study of the capital. What was once a purely federal process "is going to be radically altered."

If Cardenas is elected, his party plans to lobby Congress to declare Mexico City a state and push to give the mayor broader gubernatorial powers.

The person sworn in as Mexico City mayor on Dec. 5 will receive only a three-year term, not much time to tackle the capital's overwhelming problems of crime, pollution, drainage and transportation. Subsequent terms will be for six years.

Since urban sprawl began in the 1930s, Mexico's mayors have tried to rein in the city's plagues with a range of tactics. But success stories have been scarce.

"If Cardenas wins and governs well, it will contribute enormously to the Mexican political transition and the rebirth of the modern Latin American left," noted political analyst Jorge Castaneda wrote recently in the Los Angeles Times.

"But if he wins and governs poorly, it could abort the first and help to bury the second," he said.

Tanker might have run aground to avoid other vessels

TOKYO (AP) — The supertanker that spilled oil into Tokyo Bay apparently strayed from an established shipping lane while trying to avoid other vessels and became caught in strong tides, its owner said Friday.

The Panamanian-registered, Japanese-owned Diamond Grace scraped a well-marked reef just inside the bay off the port of Yokohama on Wednesday, gashing its hull and leaking 390,000 gallons of light crude oil.

The ship was carrying nearly 76 million gallons to the nearby city of Kawasaki from United Arab Emirates.

Captain Hidenori Tsunematsu may have been trying to avoid two nearby fishing vessels or other tankers after failing to follow a curve in his own traffic lane, said Koji Toyoda, president of Nippon Yusen, which owns the supertanker.

Following seafaring rules that require ships to turn right to avoid a collision, the ship headed toward a shallow, rocky area where the tide's force on its hull, extending 64 feet underwater, increased, Toyoda told reporters.

He said the company was still trying to determine the cause of the accident and added that a single cause was unlikely.

"Wherever it turns out the blame lies, we are taking full responsibility as the owner of the ship," he told reporters. "I am deeply sorry."

Maritime Safety Agency investigators, meanwhile, questioned Tsunematsu — who has nine years' experience as a supertanker captain — and his crew for possible negligence, and said poor communications might have contributed to the accident.

Toyoshige Okawara, an investigator for the shipping company, said the accident may have been inevitable.

"Facing a very complex crisis like this, with options limited by seafaring safety rules, a captain could make all the right decisions and still get into an accident," he said at a news conference.

'With 600 to 700 ships, including 100 tankers, transiting Tokyo Bay each day, the government should have assumed an accident like this was inevitable.'

— editorial in the Nihon Keizai Shimbun, Japan's largest economic newspaper

Tokyo Bay is well-known for its crowded conditions.

"With 600 to 700 ships, including 100 tankers, transiting Tokyo Bay each day, the government should have assumed an accident like this was inevitable," said an editorial Friday in the Nihon Keizai Shimbun, Japan's largest economic newspaper.

At one point, the spill covered one-sixth of the 15-mile wide, 35-mile long bay. The mess was expected to be cleaned up by the end of the week.

An initial government estimate said the cost of the spill could reach $190 million, NHK television reported.

Some 300 coast guard and navy ships, along with dozens of private fishing boats and three U.S. Navy vessels, have been mobilized for the clean up.

Benzene and other chemical compounds in the crude make the accident potentially more harmful to marine life than the 1.2 million gallon spill from a Russian tanker in the Sea of Japan six months ago.

Happy birthday U.S.... and alien watchers... and bikers

(AP) — As America marked its 221st birthday with the usual cookouts, fireworks and flag-waving parades, two 50th anniversaries also brought people forth: the alleged flying saucer crash in Roswell, N.M., and the so-called Battle of Hollister — the riotous biker party in California that inspired the Marlon Brando movie "The Wild One."

Beauty queens, a phalanx of sailors, and eight drum-and-bugle corps participated in the nation's oldest continuously held Fourth of July parade in Bristol, R.I.

Historic, but not tradition-bound, the 2.6-mile parade — started in 1785, as a prayerful walk to celebrate independence from England — now includes teams of aerobic dancers in spandex and a trumpet-playing Elvis.

"I get goose bumps every time," said 72-year-old Clara Pinhero, who's gone to the parade with her family for as long as she can remember.

Other Independence Day celebrations Friday included Philadelphia's ringing of the Liberty Bell and a concert featuring Ray Charles and the Philly Pops orchestra.

At naturalization ceremonies that have been a July 4 tradition at Monticello, Va., since 1963, Colin Powell urged 64 new citizens to become involved with community associations, to read and watch the news and to share their views with their leaders.

When Jodi Maxey and her husband brought their four adopted children to receive their naturalization papers at Thomas Jefferson's estate, Powell gave Mrs. Maxey a hug.

"He told us we had done a wonderful thing," said Mrs. Maxey, who adopted the children from South Korea. "I just started crying."

In Roswell, crowds that had been steady but sparse through the first three days of the six-day festival were visibly larger on Independence Day. Organizers said 600 to 800 people were entering the exposition each hour.

At the International UFO Museum and Research Center, visitors studied exhibits on crop circles, alleged abductions and, of course, the so-called Roswell Incident, which alleges a flying saucer crashed in the New Mexico desert in 1947.

Scientists begin advanced tests of melanoma vaccines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Among the thousands of Americans who get melanoma every year, only a few have a natural immune reaction that keeps this deadliest of skin cancers from coming back.

Now scientists are bottling that protection, testing hundreds of melanoma patients with an experimental vaccine they hope will keep the killer at bay.

"When people recur from melanoma, they're extremely likely to die," explained Dr. Robert Israel of Progenics Pharmaceuticals, which manufactures the vaccine. "We're looking to keep them from recurring, and ultimately to survive."

It's too early to predict how well the vaccine called gm2 will work. While initial experiments suggest it is potent, doctors only recently began Phase III testing — the biggest hurdle any medicine must pass — with 850 patients.

But scientists once frustrated by repeatedly failing cancer vaccines now are cautiously excited.

New immune system discoveries have led to "approaches that were not possible even five years ago," said vaccine hunter Dr. Steven Rosenberg of the National Cancer Institute. His agency is funding the Progenics experiment and a trial of a competing melanoma vaccine — Ribi ImmunoChem's Melacine.

"We're beginning to understand for the first time the molecular basis of how the immune system of a patient responds to their cancer," Rosenberg said. "It's a very exciting time."

Melanoma strikes about 40,300 Americans every year, and kills over 7,000. Sun exposure is the main cause, and the most at risk are people who had even one bad sunburn as a child.

Surgery often cures early melanoma. But up to 30 percent of early- to intermediate-stage patients will suffer a recurrence in a few years — because the surgery missed tiny cells waiting to grow into new, even deadlier tumors.

The idea is for these patients' immune systems to catch and kill the leftover melanoma cells before they become a threat. Dr. Philip Livingston of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center discovered that a few of his patients — about one in 20 — could do that naturally.

Their immune systems developed antibodies to gm2, a substance on the surface of melanoma cells. The antibodies track down this so-called antigen and then kill its host cells. So Livingston purified gm2 to give to patients whose immune systems don't react to the antigen on their own.

An early study of 122 patients, unveiled last month at Australia's World Conference on Melanoma, found those vaccinated with gm2 remained cancer-free for 33 months vs. 17 months for unvaccinated patients.

The study was too small to be statistically significant. Still, after Livingston made some changes to further boost the vaccine's potency, the results prompted NCI to finance the 850-patient trial that could settle the issue by 1999.

Ribi ImmunoChem is trying a different attack, a vaccine made from pieces of melanoma cells grown in a laboratory. Such vaccines are often considered less potent than more targeted vaccines. But Melacine has an advantage: it provides many more melanoma antigens for the immune system to hunt, explained Ribi vice president Kenneth von Eschen.

In the NCI-run trial of 689 patients, Ribi should know in late 1998 whether Melacine effectively prevents melanoma from recurring.

But Ribi also wants to sell Melacine to treat the sickest melanoma patients, not just as a possible prevention.

In a final study of late-stage melanoma, 70 Melacine patients lived 11 months while another 70 who got standard chemotherapy lived 12.4 months — a difference too small to be significant.

But Melacine caused only one serious side effect compared to 86 chemotherapy caused, so Ribi this fall will seek Food and Drug Administration approval to sell Melacine as a safer alternative for advanced melanoma.

For patients still hoping to keep melanoma at bay, however, Livingston acknowledges his first vaccine needs improving. First, nobody knows how long patients need vaccinations. And his naturally protected patients seem to make antibodies indefinitely, while vaccinated patients lose the antibodies weeks after their shots stop.

Nevertheless, any success with melanoma, a cancer fairly easy to study, could prompt vaccines against other killers like breast cancer, whose cell surfaces also bear a variety of antigens.

"Everything we see from experiments ... so far suggests antibodies should be able to make a difference," Livingston said. "This trial will answer that question."

Part of historic wave, more than 5,000 take citizenship oath

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (NYT) — Inspired by a love of America and a fear of her fickleness toward immigrants, more than 5,000 people from 108 countries raised their right hands Friday to take the oath of citizenship on a sun-drenched football field here on Long Island. They are part of a historic wave of citizenship seekers whose numbers have quintupled in five years to an anticipated high of 1.8 million this year.

Maria Aracelly, 55, who came to the United States from Colombia 26 years ago and toils past midnight most nights vacuuming, dusting and cleaning Manhattan office buildings, said she decided to become a citizen after all these years because of her devotion to this county and her worries about what would become of her if she were disabled by a heart attack. She had heard about a law to cut off benefits to old and sickly immigrants who have not been naturalized.

"I'm very happy, all the time working," she said. "But my heart is no good."

Anxiety over laws to deny food stamps and Supplemental Security Income to most legal immigrants who have not become citizens has helped spur the extraordinary rush of applicants for citizenship. By this spring, more than one million immigrants nationally — almost 200,000 of them in New York City — were caught in a backlog of those awaiting naturalization. The wait in New York has grown from up to five months last year to as long as a year now.

The reasons for the delay include not only the huge surge in applications, but new procedures instituted by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service to screen out those seeking citizenship who have criminal records. Immigration officials say within a few weeks they will ask Congress to approve the use of fees immigrants pay the government for various services to beef up the program, including citizenship processing.

The thousands who took the oath Friday were in a happy mood, singing along with the national anthem and placing their hands over their hearts for the Pledge of Allegiance. When an immigration official announced that they were American citizens, a soft, joyous murmuring rose from the crowd gathered on the field. Many gave voice to an old-fashioned kind of fervent patriotism for their new homeland.

"I'm very happy today," said Yu-Zhen Liu, 34, of China, practicing her newly acquired English. "I have my baby," she said, pointing to her pregnant belly, "and I like America because in America there is a future for my baby, me and my husband."

Next campaign to reform welfare takes aim at rich and powerful

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's only fair: the poor may lose benefits under the new welfare law, so the rich should be removed from the federal dole as well.

That's the premise behind legislation in Congress that would target corporate welfare programs — the subsidizing of American business ventures — for extinction.

In the House, Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, Budget Committee chairman and one of the architects of the balanced budget deal, is leading an odd coalition of fiscal conservatives, environmentalists and citizens' groups in pushing a bill that in one swoop would kill 12 federal subsidy programs.

Taking a different approach, a Senate committee has approved a proposal by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., to set up an independent commission, modeled after the military base closing commissions, to recommend corporate welfare programs for reform or termination.

"We're going to raise some Cain about this," Kasich said in a recent Fox "News Sunday" interview. He said the time had come to see whether lawmakers from both parties "are really willing to put their money where their mouth is in terms of getting rid of corporate welfare."

First, though, they must decide what corporate welfare is.

Most define it as a program that benefits a private enterprise more than it does the general public whose taxes are used to underwrite it. But that can be a fine line to draw, particularly when it involves the special interests of lawmakers. The problem, said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., is that "the nomenclature of corporate welfare is a broad and inflammatory term that reaches across good programs and bad programs."

Livingston's home state of Louisiana has a large shipbuilding industry that has benefited from federal help and "for reasons of national security I would not be inclined to cut back on programs that encourage ship building."

The CBO has estimated direct federal support for business at $30 billion a year. The Cato Institute, a private think tank that promotes a smaller federal government, has identified programs that subsidize industry at $85 billion a year. Big business is also said to benefit from some $30 billion a year in tax loopholes.

Kasich's package would eliminate $11.5 billion in spending over five years. "It's only a bare beginning," said Gene Guerrero of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen, one of the nine groups in the anti-corporate welfare coalition formed last January.

The welfare law passed last year and signed into law by President Clinton will save the government $54 billion through 2002, and Congress should extract at least that much from corporate benefactors, said Scott Hodge of the conservative Heritage Foundation. "Congress should do no less with the corporate community: they should be ashamed of themselves if they don't."

But even the program that's at the top of nearly everyone's kill list, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, is expected to put up a strong fight for survival.

Critics argue that OPIC, an independent federal agency that offers project financing and political risk insurance to American businesses investing in developing countries, is a boon to large corporations and a potential burden to taxpayers. "The taxpayers are guaranteeing these companies and if they take a risk and lose, they get their money back," said Jim Campi of Citizens Against Government Waste.

But Mildred Callear, acting president of OPIC, said her agency is self-sustaining, operating on premiums and fees with no net cost to taxpayers, and as such shouldn't qualify as a corporate welfare candidate.

OPIC earned $209 million last year, she said. "It's quite a deal for the taxpayers, so I really don't see how corporate welfare, whatever that means, gets involved." Callear said OPIC, which must compete against far larger investment aid programs run by European and Japanese governments, has the strong support of the administration.

Tim Galvin of the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the administration also will defend the market access program, another on the list of 12. The program, aimed at helping food product groups promote their goods overseas, has been criticized for subsidizing advertising for such giants as Sunkist and Ocean Spray Cranberries.

But Galvin said the program has already reformed itself, trimming its budget from $200 million a few years ago to $90 million and phasing out, by next year, all funding for advertising by large brand-name companies.

Teachers union affirms support for affirmative action plans

ATLANTA (AP) — The nation's largest teachers union renewed its support of affirmative action Friday in the midst of congressional and legal challenges, including a pivotal Supreme Court case involving schools.

Delegates at the union's annual assembly agreed by voice vote after little debate to urge local unions to endorse preferential hiring of women and minorities in education to cure past discrimination or assure diversity among employees.

Many of the 9,000 members of the National Education Association had left the convention before the vote because of the late hour on the national holiday.

'They (local unions) can opt for affirmative action, they can opt for seniority, they can opt for a combination of the two.'
— Bob Chanin, National Education Association top attorney

Local unions will still be free to take their own positions, especially when trying how to reconcile demands of affirmative action with those of seniority.

"They can opt for affirmative action, they can opt for seniority, they can opt for a combination of the two," said Bob Chanin, the NEA's top attorney.

NEA president Bob Chase said the recommendations from a special committee on affirmative action give a sharper focus to the union's stance. The affirmative action policy is now a patchwork of different statements issued over the years.

On the eve of the vote, Chase told reporters that delegates "will have to make some specific decisions whether or not this is the way we want to move, especially at a time when affirmative action has been under the spotlight for some time."

Congressional Republicans are pushing legislation that would remove race and gender criteria from federal employment, contracting and other programs.

Critics say that affirmative action plans cause racial division. Supporters say racial, ethnic and gender barriers remain in a country whose ethnic mix is changing.

In 1995, the Education Department said that only 13 percent of America's estimated 2.6 million teachers belonged to minorities, while a third of public school students were.

A case that the Supreme Court recently agreed to consider will put the union to a test.

The court agreed last month to hear arguments whether the Piscataway School Board in New Jersey unlawfully laid off a white teacher to protect an equally qualified black teacher who had been hired the same day.

The school board, making cuts, laid off business teacher Sharon Taxman, who is white, while keeping Debra Williams, who is black. Williams was the only minority in the 10-teacher department. However, the school district overall has an affirmative action plan and a diverse group of employees.

The appeals court in the case said employers cannot favor minorities simply to keep racial diversity in the workplace.

"Our policies say affirmative action should be used for that purpose," Chase said. He said union executives will have to decide what role the NEA should play in the Supreme Court case. Although it's not a party, the union can file court papers giving positions.

But the committee was less clear on another point. It said the decision to use affirmative action should be made case-by-case when the issue is the number of ethnic minorities or women in a building or department rather than the workforce as a whole.

Likewise, the national union will take part in lawsuits involving affirmative action and seniority only with approval of union executives, directors or national delegates.

Windows 95 test

Microsoft Corp. said it expects to release next week a test version of its updated Windows 95 operating system, although the company said it still hasn't set a ship date for the finished product.

Microsoft said the ship date would depend in large part on when the update of its Internet Explorer browser, which will be included in the next version of Windows, is released. The new browser is slated to ship by the end of August.

Microsoft also said it is considering releasing the new version of Windows 95 to stores before computer makers are able to ship computers equipped with it, even though this could undercut PC-makers sales.

The updated Windows 95, codenamed Memphis, uses the next version of the Internet Explorer browser. The browser is used to navigate the Internet as well as parts of the operating system, including files and directories. By combining the two, Microsoft is hoping to cause more people to use its browser and to protect the popularity of its operating system by adapting it to the Internet.

"The operating system is a point of differentiation — it's a reason why people would use IE (Internet Explorer)," said Brad Chase, a Microsoft vice president, speaking in Bellevue, Washington at a conference where the company was demonstrating Internet Explorer. "If we don't do it, we won't be a competitive as an operating systems maker."

Microsoft demonstrated features in Memphis designed to make it faster to shut down the computer and to get programs running. The company also demonstrated how the software can be used with specially-equipped PCs and satellite transmissions or certain broadcasts, to receive and play TV shows on the PC.

Companies that didn't adopt Windows 95 because they found it difficult to install across a network, or that it had design faults, will probably quickly adopt Memphis, said James Conrad, a consultant for Mastering Computers, which trains companies how to use Windows software.

Companies that did adopt Windows 95 during the past year probably won't switch for another year, he said.

Analysts have said that Memphis is less important to Microsoft's revenue than Windows 95 was, or the recent version of the Office suite of spreadsheet, word-processing and database software is.

Apple accounts

Apple Computer Inc. said it's putting its advertising account up for review, prompting its longtime advertising agency, BBDO West, to resign.

Apple said it's reassessing its advertising needs under its overhaul. In the past 18 months, Apple has lost almost $1.5 billion amid two restructurings and uncertainty about its strategy. Sales and market share for the No. 4 PC maker have plunged.

The Apple account represents 20 percent of BBDO West's billings. The agency said it created award-winning advertising for Apple for 12 years, constituting the longest-standing major agency partnership in the computer industry.

"For the past few years, we have stretched our people to their limits to be responsive to Apple's needs during continuing crises," said Allen Rosenshine, chairman and chief executive of BBDO Worldwide, BBDO West's parent.

Largest Web media network launches NewsWorks

From Staff Reports

New Century Network, the first national network of local newspaper Web sites, launched its NewsWorks web site this week (www.newsworks.com).

The site is supported by the collective strengths of over 125 daily newspaper Web site affiliates from nine newspaper corporations, including the Hearst Corp., parent company of the Midland Reporter-Telegram and its online presence (www.mrt.com). The network's launch is the largest to date of a Web-based network featuring information from multiple local affiliates.

"The site combines the power of a high quality search engine, a talented editorial staff and the unrivaled quality on our affiliates' sites," said Lee deBoer, Chief Executive Officer of NCN. "Once again, the Web is making possible a unique form of media delivery and helping bring the power and scope of newspaper content to a new generation of readers."

NewsWorks, an easy-to-navigate, topical, daily updated site, combines the strengths of over 25,000 journalists who report for the affiliate newspapers; features "from-the-source" reporting on news, business, lifestyle, sports/ science/technology and the arts, and is the first targeted search vehicle delivering highly qualified searches of news and information content found daily in the newspapers that participate in the network.

"Our goal, via our affiliates," deBoer said, "is to provide the reader with many perspectives and an organized guide to the rich content newspapers offer."

John Papanek, NCN's Senior Vice President for Content and Editor-in-Chief, says NewsWorks' role is to make reader access to the immense amount of in-depth information across the affiliate network easy, logical and valuable.

One of NewsWorks' highlights will be its daily News Package. Each package explores a topic in-depth by combining the best from-the-source reporting, expertise from the nation's leading journalists and views and commentary from around the country.

NCN is also developing and hopes to have in place by year's end, event-based content to further enhance its value to the reader. Third party content providers are also being developed.

Clinton to seek ways for public to police Internet

By Scott Shepard
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Hours after the federal law against Internet indecency was struck down by the Supreme Court on Thursday, the White House announced plans for a conference on how the private sector can police cyberspace.

President Clinton announced the planned meeting of computer industry leaders, parents, teachers and librarians after the court invalidated portions of the Communications Decency Act, in effect extending First Amendment free-speech rights to cyberspace.

"We can and must develop a solution for the Internet ... that protects children in ways that are consistent with America's free speech values," the president said.

The White House has not said who would be invited to participate in the conference, expected to take place as early as next week.

Meanwhile, advocates of the Communications Decency Act pledged to press for new legislation to control children's electronic access to objectionable material, but it was not clear what form it would take.

Don Hodel, president of the Christian Coalition, one of the major forces behind the act, said his organization will seek "remedial legislation" that will meet the high court's constitutional objections.

"We are not going to accept the Supreme Court's decision denying protection to the children of America as the final word," Hodel said.

Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., who authored the 1996 act, accused the justices in a news conference of defending "immediate, unrestricted access of children to pornography" on the Internet. But he made no mention of introducing a new bill.

In fact, said Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., one of the few Internet experts in Congress, there is "not much hope of another Communications Decency Act" passing in the wake of the Supreme Court ruling.

Like many of the Internet leaders who hailed the court's ruling, Cox suggested that any attempt to regulate the Internet at this stage could hinder its development.

"Don't think of the Internet as if it is 18th or 19th century technology," Cox said.

The Internet Content Coalition, formed by the online industry to fight the Communications Decency Act, welcomed the court's decision but warned of other challenges.

"The decision frees us momentarily from the threat of federal action," said Maria Wilhelm, a coalition co-founder. "But the Act spawned many offspring in states and jurisdictions below the federal level, making it potentially even more difficult to run a content business that is by its nature glob-

Debunking the Incident

Even the government is getting onto the Internet to present its explanation on the Roswell incident, 50 years hence. At least 30 sites pertaining to Roswell exist, most with a pro point of view on UFOs and aliens, and most that support the theory that aliens crashed in the New Mexico desert, 75 northwest of Roswell near the town of Corona. The 50th anniversary is being recognized by UFOlogists and other enthusiasts this week. Over 60,000 are expected to descend this week.

Checking on the kids

Cameras mounted in classrooms at The Children's Corner send captured still images every 30 seconds which can be viewed through an Internet connection.

Despite resistance, telecommuting takes hold

By Maggie Jackson
AP Business Writer

Larry Madsen, a father of eight, has spent seven years working out of his home for AT&T. He's had to teach his children to knock at the study door.

And although he's happy to help out at times, he's had to gently tell his neighbors that he can't always help start their cars or drive all the car pools.

"You have to get used to it," said Madsen, a sales manager in suburban Salt Lake City. "But I love the freedom of having my office here at home."

Despite entrenched resistance from many managers, more and more companies are allowing telecommuting, and more Americans are taking them up on it, according to surveys released this week.

Eleven million Americans are telecommuting at least one day a month — a 30 percent increase in the last two years, according to a survey released Wednesday by Telecommute America, an advocacy group.

HISTORY COMES TO LIFE

Try brushing up on American history by spending some time with one of this country's most interesting people: Benjamin Franklin. Did you know that Ben Franklin wasn't just an American Founding Father, but a scientist, inventor, musician, philosopher and publisher? And his life isn't only history, because we still use lots of his ideas and discoveries today. You can now hang out with this multitalented man at http://sln.fi.edu/franklin/rotten.html. The best part about learning history this way is that the site is interactive. You can see a short movie of his life, hear sound effects, make music and try experiments based on the same ones he did more than 200 years ago. History has never been so futuristic—or so fun!

Dear Amy: What is the difference between http://, ftp:// and gopher:// Internet addresses? —Troy, Cedar, MN

Dear Troy: If you can believe it, there is even more information on the Internet than just what you get from the Web! Before the Web, Gopher and FTP servers were the main sources of information. Because you won't see any pictures on these servers, they are not as popular now. These servers are important, and most browsers can access them. You might go to one of them for things like software updates or for access to a huge archive like a university library. Since these servers use different protocols, their location addresses begin with the characters "gopher://" or "ftp://" instead of the World Wide Web's "http://".

Dear Amy: I would like to have a home page with sounds and moving pictures and chat, but since I have WebTV I don't know how to do it. —Linda, East Hartford, CT

Dear Linda: To surf the Web with WebTV all you need is a television, a phone line and the WebTV Internet terminal. WebTV is not a normal computer so you can't use the software you will need to write the words, handle the pictures and code the HTML in order for you to make a home page.

In praise of (gasp!) solitaire: not such a worthless game after all

By Lonnie Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

Perhaps you think solitaire is a pointless card game for wasting time. It's pretty easy to draw that conclusion after wasting time with Klondike, the pointless solitaire game that came packaged with Windows 3.x, or playing any of the other versions.

I expected to take a quick look at this solitaire game, then wipe it from my computer. It's still there. I'm still playing Klondike Pro — mainly because I found out that solitaire can be played competitively against computer opponents (or against a friend using a modem).

I am about to praise a software card game. That, in itself, is a rarity. More unusual: This program is freeware. You won't find it in stores. You'll have to get it off the Internet or obtain it from a friend. It runs in DOS (and runs well under Windows 95). Its graphics aren't flashy, but they are more than adequate, and its players don't make cute remarks. They don't even talk.

What Klondike Pro does is allow you to play duplicate solitaire and find out how good a player you really are. You play a game, and at the end of it are given a point value, based on the number of cards you moved to the "ace row" and the number of times you went through the deck.

Then, in a matter of seconds, the computer takes the same layout, using the exact same sequence of cards, and replays the game. It does that for nine opponents it controls. When the dust clears, you rank from one to 10.

Here's the interesting part: Say you ranked third. You want to see how the two other players managed to get ahead of you. Simply click on their names, and the computer walks through the game, card by card. You'll soon find out where your game took a wrong turn.

In match play, you'll do this six times. At the end of a match, if you rank in the top three, you'll be awarded points. Earn enough, and you'll move up a ranking in a 10-step ladder. As the ladder is climbed, the computer opponents become a bit more savvy (yes, there are actually strategies involved in solitaire) and it's more difficult to earn points.

Brooke Boering, 70, has attained the top ranking of Gold Wizard in Klondike Pro. "I've won the gold leaf several times," he says from his California home near Santa Cruz. It's a tough ranking to get, even for Boering: He wrote the program.

Programming, from which he has semiretired, is his second profession. He was an accountant. "I was good with numbers," he said. "For a programmer, that's important — more important than being good with math." He has worked extensively with Apple computers, and developed a computer language for driving an art program. A few years ago, he hit upon an idea for solitaire familiar to bridge players: duplicate bridge.

"Why not the same thing with solitaire?" he asked. "Players get the same deck of cards, the same layout. They try to outplay each other."

There is a lot of attention to detail here. Players have clever names, and also have little biographies to make them a bit realistic. You'll discover they have playing styles, and you'll pick up some tips for increasing your score.

In Microsoft Windows' Klondike solitaire, a player "buys" the deck for a certain number of points, then is given points for cards placed on the ace row. Boering takes a slightly different approach. Instead of buying the deck upfront, players pay for each "flop" of three cards from the deck. So, if you keep flopping when all the productive plays are gone, you can give away the gold nuggets you've accumulated. To come out on top, you must "know when to fold 'em."

At first, Boering decided to have the competing players' games housed on a computer at "Klondike Central." But with today's computing power, Boering found the "players" could be housed right in the computer itself.

There is a "Klondike Central," but its purpose is to keep the rankings of players who play Klondike Pro. It's a simple matter to call Boering's Klondike Central, and, in a minute or two, find out where you rank nationally.

"I don't have a lot of rankings now, but Klondike Pro has only been around for a few months," says Boering. You may also download the games played by "The Old Soul" (Boering's name for his solitaire-playing ego) and "duel" against him to see if you can tie or better his score.

You can also exchange files with friends and "duel" them, or play against humans over the modem.

Boering hasn't gotten a large number of callers because this program hasn't gotten a lot of press. It isn't flashy, doesn't do Windows 95, doesn't have high-rez graphics, doesn't have Internet play, and can fit on one 3.5-inch disk.

But it does all I think a good software program needs to do: It entertains.

If you like it, send The Old Soul a few bucks for it out of kindness. May his tribe increase.

The file is available for downloading at this Web site: http://www2.cruzio.com/~yagabond.

TELECOMMUTE: Clinton gives boost to work-from-home idea

(From 1B)

On average, telecommuters work 19 hours a week from home, spending other time in the office, said the survey, the first national polling of the trend in two years.

When Sage Publishing, a Los Angeles academic book publisher, couldn't find enough top-notch editors on the West Coast, it reluctantly turned to telecommuting.

The company now allows editor Catherine Rossbach to work out of a rented business suite in the New York City suburbs — a situation she loves but one which the company still calls an experiment.

"If you want to be a global company and the talent is in the eastern part of the country, go where the talent is," said Nancy Hammerman, a vice president and director at Sage. But because workers need face-to-face contact and support from colleagues, "we still don't think it's always a good idea," she said.

The telecommuting survey didn't include workers like Rossbach who rent office space, or those who work full-time at home but no longer have a corporate office. Including such workers, the ranks of telecommuters are even higher.

For employers from the federal government to small businesses, telecommuting provides a way to boost productivity, save on real estate and attract good workers in a competitive labor market.

"We've heard from employees that the flexibility that teleworking provides them certainly has been a benefit to them," said Sue Sears, project director for telecommuting at AT&T.

One in four Fortune 1,000 companies now have employees who regularly telecommute either part-time or full-time, according to another study by KPMG, a human resources consulting firm.

President Clinton, as well, has given the issue a push. Up to 25,000 federal workers — or about 1.5 percent of the federal work force — telecommute nationwide, and the government is aiming to have 15 percent working from home by 2002.

AT&T was one of the first major American companies to formally promote telecommuting, introducing a policy in 1992. Now, 55 percent of the company's managers in the United States telecommute, up from 38 percent two years ago, Sears said.

Not everyone is happy about that.

The 600,000-member Communications Workers of America, the largest union at AT&T, has not allowed its workers to telecommute until it receives more written guidelines, said James Irvine, a CWA vice president.

"What if a child trips over the computer cord and gets hurt? What if the worker spills coffee in their laptop?" he said. "We can't get answers to that stuff."

Despite the difficulties in setting up a telecommuting life, converts like Rossbach think it's worthwhile — and productive.

"I work in a more focused and uninterrupted fashion than they do," Rossbach said of her California colleagues, whom she flies out to see every few weeks. "For one thing, I don't go to meetings!"

POLICE: Congress urged against any further restrictions

(From 1B)

al."

News organizations cautioned lawmakers against any further attempts to restrict the Internet.

"Let's hope Congress gets the message ... and drops its futile efforts to regulate speech on the Internet," said Steve Geimann, president of the Society of Professional Journalists, which joined the legal challenge to the act. "This country is founded on a basic right to free speech, and lawmakers must no tamper with that basic right."

Sen. Russ Feingold, D-Wis., said less restrictive alternatives to the Communications Decency Act are already available to concerned parents, including so-called "screening" software that allows parents to prevent their children from viewing certain Internet sites.

In passing the Communications Decency Act, Congress "failed in its efforts to protect children on the Internet while simultaneously trampling on the rights of all Americans to free speech," Feingold said.

Clinton has suggested the possibility of a rating system for Internet sites similar to rating systems for movies and television programs.

But Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., suggested that a rating system would be impractical for the Internet, which is constantly changing and which has millions of sites around the world.

"This is not like 200 movies coming out each year," he said.

Osteoporosis is a disease that gradually weakens bones so they become fragile and more likely to break.

The broken bones that result can lead to pain, height loss, difficulty moving around, a backbone that curves forward (sometimes called a "dowager's hump", and, possibly, permanent disability and dependence.

Many women feel that osteoporosis won't affect them, since they exercise, get enough calcium, and have no symptoms. But osteoporosis is a "silent" disease: women may have it for years and not find out until they break a bone.

Internetters comment on Tyson-Holyfield

By Charles Stough
N.Y. Times News Service

The first wisecracks hit cyberspace only minutes after the police went into the ring at Saturday's Mike Tyson-Evander Holyfield fight. If Mike Tyson doesn't like being laughed at, he'd better keep his dukes up for life.

In the Usenet newsgroup rec.sport.boxing it went like this:

"At least Andrew Golota was smart enough to throw low blows instead of bite (Riddick) Bowe," a contributor said.

"Main result: Mike Tyson .... empties his magazine into his foot," another said. "I have never seen a boxer come so completely unglued. Our ability to improve ourselves is limited, but our ability to destroy ourselves is total."

"I still can't believe what I saw Saturday night! I'm sure Tyson is finished. He's done. He has turned into the worst villain in sports history!"

Sports villains? Hey, it works for pro wrestling. Tyson's rape conviction and prison sabbatical start to make sense.

"Thank you, (Tyson promoter) Don King," another rec.sports.boxing contributor posted. "We now return you to the real world."

"Mike Tyson knew at the start of the round that he had no chance. That is why that he tried to leave his corner at the start of the round without the mouthpiece."

"Tyson has been sparring lately with Lassie and Rin Tin Tin," said another.

"Regardless of the Gospel fighter alias, Holyfield fights as dirty as the best of them," a Tyson defender said. "He was unmistakably trying to hold Tyson's left hand, to avoid getting hit with Tyson's infamous left hook. He knew perfectly well that were he to maintain distance, Tyson would hit him, bad. His plan was to tie him up and he did just that."

"There's nothing illegal in a clinch," an opponent countered. "Holyfield was smart to do what he did. He did it the first fight and no one complained so much, including Tyson."

"Now in addition," another fan added, "Holyfield has a 6.5-inch reach advantage to Tyson. He would draw Tyson in and then he lowered his head and HEAD-BUTTED him straight in the face!"

"Referee Mills Lane acknowledged that it was a head-butt. To say it was intentional, you'd have to see Holyfield doing nothing but just ramming forward with his head. Because of Holyfield's height and strategy, it was easy for him to head-butt and his big head allowed him to bust Tyson up. But I think it was pathetic on the part of Tyson to comment and make that as an excuse for what he did."

What Tyson did was chew an inch off Holyfield's right ear, lose the fight, get suspended from boxing and have his purse seized, at least temporarily. Usenet contributors had to laugh.

"Tyson should've just given him an elbow or low blow. A bite is too obvious and too STUPID to try and do in the ring."

"I feel sorry for him. He was fighting strong and I do believe that he would have knocked Holyfield clear across the ring, had the fight gone on longer."

"Tyson just gave up and took the easiest way out...."

"Tyson is contemporary boxing. Without him, boxing is no more. It'd be a sport that one would find under bowling. Tyson has defined boxing. After Ali, he is the only one that turned this sport around from the doldrums that it had been in, with 'champs' no one will bother looking up in a boxing almanac anytime soon."

"True, without Tyson, boxing will not get the idiotic fans who don't know a damn thing about boxing anymore.... Hopefully, without Tyson, boxing will become more legit. But knowing Don King and the rest ... in the game, Tyson will fight again for money- making reasons and economic prosperity."

As for a rematch, the boxing fans of Usenet thought of that too. One posted:

"In this fight, Evander will wear a rubber bumper apparatus on his head (to minimize the effect of his headbutts) and Mike will wear a muzzle. Ain't life simple?"

A better way to use the Web

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

I once owned one of those do-everything knives. It had a blade or attachment for almost everything you can name. There were saws, screwdrivers (both phillips and regular), pliers, a corkscrew, even a tiny magnifying glass.

All of it worked and none of it worked very well.

If you're new to the Internet and are still using the software that was furnished by your Internet Service Provider, you are in the same boat. For many of you, that means using your Web browser — whether it is Internet Explorer or Netscape Navigator — for e-mail, chat, newsgroups and the Web.

There's a better way. Instead of using a single do-everything program, you can use programs that are designed specifically for each task. And here's the good news, you can find all those programs — free for the taking — on the Internet.

I can take you on an online shopping trip and help you find these programs. We'll start with the most common — and to most folks — most important Internet application: e-mail.

Whether you use a Macintosh or an IBM compatible PC, one of the best choices for an e-mail program is called Eudora. You can download a free copy of a basic version of Eudora at http://www.eudora.com. If you like the program as much as I do after trying it, you'll be able to order a more powerful commercial version of the program from the same Web page.

If you're really new to the Internet, you may not yet know about the newsgroups. The newsgroups are comprised of separate topic areas on almost every subject — no matter what you're interested in, beekeeping or epoxies, you'll almost certainly find a newsgroup devoted to that topic.

As is true with the other programs I recommend, there are several different sites that offer copies of News Xpress. One good place to find it — along with some of the other programs mentioned today — is at a page called Everything You Need to Surf the Net — for Free! at http://www.primenet.com/~tcp/.

You may be using your browser to download these programs. That works fine but there is a better way. There are programs called FTP clients that do the job better and give you more control. My favorite is called WS_FTP. You can also find this program at the "Everything You Need" site mentioned above.

Newcomers almost invariably want to try computer chat. That fascination usually dims after a while, but — whether you are a one-time visitor to one of the Net's chat areas or decide to become a regular — you'll like a chat application called MIRC. You can find the program at the page mentioned above, along with some choices if that one doesn't suit you.

Unfortunately for Mac owners, this excellent chat program doesn't come in a version for that machine. You can find some pretty good Mac chat programs at a page called Internet Relay Chat at http://www.echonyc.com/~andrewj/ircframe.html however. Of those listed, Ircle is my favorite.

Now that you've downloaded the programs, you may be worried about installing them. Don't be. These programs all come with installation programs that do the work for you.

In some cases, the programs are free. With others, you are expected to pay a small fee if you decide to keep and use the program after trying it out. No one will come knocking on your door if you decide not to pay. But, paying is a good idea. After all, the small payment is a way of making sure that the Net continues to offer low-cost software.

A Wink allows you to talk back

By Tom Abate
N.Y. Times News Service

Some cable TV subscribers may soon get to "talk back" to their sets, when NBC starts using an Alameda firm's software to insert trivia quizzes and polls into prime time shows.

The software, developed by Wink Communications, lets viewers use a remote control to answer multiple-choice questions. NBC has not yet said which shows will contain the quizzes, only that they will start the experiment this fall.

Industry sources said cable viewers in Sunnyvale will be among the first in the nation to use the new software when TeleCommunications Inc. tests Wink's technology later this year.

Wink Marketing Director Barak Kassar said the questions will be broadcast to TV sets in the same part of the television signal now used to display captions for the hearing-impaired.

NBC might ask viewers, for instance, whether a character in a TV drama is guilty. To answer, the viewer presses a button on the remote control. That sends a signal via the cable set-top box to the cable operator's central computer. A computer at Wink would aggregate all the cable companies' signals, and send the message to NBC. Wink will collect an undisclosed fee from NBC for the service.

Kassar said cable companies are also interested in using the software to sell interactive commercials.

Funeral home, cemetery to pay for burial of most-married man

BLYTHE, Calif. (AP) — Glynn "Scotty" Wolfe, the world's most-married man, is getting a funeral, although he may not have many mourners.

Wolfe will be laid to rest Thursday in his hometown, courtesy of a cemetery and funeral home that decided to pay to keep him from an unmarked public grave.

None of Wolfe's 29 wives and few, if any, of his 19 children were expected to attend the service at Palo Verde Cemetery, which donated a burial plot.

Sidney Presley, owner of Frye Chapel and Mortuary, said she decided to donate her $2,300 services because it was the right thing to do.

"We're a small town," she said. "We care about what goes on here, and the son didn't have the money to do it and the wives didn't either."

The flamboyant minister, who held the Guinness Book of Records title for most-married man for more than 35 years, died June 10 of coronary heart disease at age 88.

Wolfe paid for a burial plot before he died, but did not cover the costs of funeral services or a grave marker.

His widow said she could not afford services, and the San Bernardino County coroner's office had planned to cremate him and bury with other unclaimed bodies in an unmarked public grave.

Wolfe's 33-year-old son, John, who couldn't pay for the funeral with his $5-an-hour job at Burger King, then began a public lobbying campaign to raise the money.

Death toll rises to 16 after storm

DETROIT (AP) — After a storm knocked out their electricity and flooded their basement, three children and their grandmother died in a house that filled with carbon monoxide from a portable generator.

The bodies of of Maude Priester, 55, Darrell Hughes, 11, Tiera Hall, 6, and Jordan Burns, 6, were found by a relative Friday, increasing the death toll to 16 from storms that tore through southeastern Michigan on Wednesday.

Neighbors said Mrs. Priester's husband, Benjamin, had the generator running outside to power lights and the refrigerator but brought it in the house to pump water out of the basement.

"It's believed the generator being used to supply the home with electricity filled the home with carbon monoxide gas," said police Officer Allene Ray.

Damage from the violent storms — which spawned heavy rains and several tornadoes — continued to be tallied Friday. Michigan State Police said almost 1,000 homes and businesses had been damaged or destroyed. Nearly 400 people were stranded and there were 104 reports of injuries.

Utility crews were scrambling to restore power to 120,000 customers. Detroit Edison Co. spokeswoman Lorie Kessler said.

U.S. Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., toured the hardest-hit areas Friday, including the Detroit enclaves of Highland Park and Hamtramck.

"This is the worst storm to hit metropolitan Detroit in my lifetime."
— U.S. Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich.

"This is the worst storm to hit metropolitan Detroit in my lifetime," he said, calling on churches to ask their congregations Sunday to volunteer to help clean up and repair devastated areas.

The deadliest hit came in the affluent Detroit suburb of Grosse Pointe Farms, where two children, their mother, a cousin and an aunt died of multiple injuries and drowning after the wooden pavilion they were huddling in for shelter was swept into Lake St. Clair.

In nearby Oakland County, one woman died at a trailer park near Holly. A 79-year-old man was electrocuted as he worked on a sump pump in his flooded basement.

A woman died when a tree fell on her near Flint. In Detroit, a lawn service worker died when a mower brushed by a bush hiding a live wire, and a woman died when the car she tried to move during the storm pinned her against her garage.

Other deaths included a man who had a heart attack while clearing debris and a man who suffered massive head injuries when a tree fell on him.

Congressional delegation has front row at NATO ceremony

"It's not political, not partisan, not posturing. It's working through some very complicated and substantial questions about the future of NATO."
— Jeremy Rosner, special adviser to Clinton and Madeleine Albright on NATO expansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — First on President Clinton's agenda when he arrives in Madrid on Monday for the NATO summit with other allied leaders: a meeting with lawmakers from back home.

By giving two bipartisan congressional delegations front-row seats at the historic conference, the administration hopes to persuade them to support NATO expansion when the Senate votes on the treaty next spring.

"They felt it's important to be there as some of these key decisions are being made," said Jeremy Rosner, special adviser to Clinton and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on NATO expansion. "And we agree."

"It's not political, not partisan, not posturing. It's working through some very complicated and substantial questions about the future of NATO," he said.

The Senate NATO Observer Group, already known in Washington by its acronym SNOG, was created in April by Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., to shepard expansion through Congress.

But the 28-member group also includes naysayers, including Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, who aren't sure it's wise to admit newly democratic — and in many ways still struggling — Eastern and Central European countries.

Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic are expected to be admitted to the 16-member NATO alliance.

Even those in favor of expansion want to hold down costs and assure that the United States and NATO can meet future commitments. American taxpayers could pay anywhere from $150 million to $1.2 billion annually for the next 13 to 15 years to expand NATO. And U.S. troops would be obligated to defend new members just as they have the old.

"There are many issues the Senate will examine ... how costs will be shared by current and future NATO members, the relationship with Russia, reassurance to those not invited at Madrid," Lott said ahead of the Madrid summit. "Our trip is a beginning to that examination."

Lott, making his first tour of the continent as Senate majority leader, met in Brussels this past week with NATO Secretary General Javier Solana and the 16 ambassadors to the alliance.

The Senate leader won't be in Madrid for the NATO summit on Tuesday and Wednesday. Instead, he's sending his NATO observer group, chaired by Sen. William Roth, R-Del., which meets with Clinton on Monday afternoon.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is vice chairman of the delegation. Sens. Robert Smith, R-N.H., and Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., also are members. Hutchison, who had planned to go to Madrid, canceled because of a schedule conflict.

Leading the House delegation is Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., chairman of the House International Relations Committee. Other members include Reps. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., and Norman Sisisky, D-Va.

An unabashed NATO expansion advocate, Gilman authored the 1996 law declaring U.S. support for enlarging the alliance and identifying criteria for new membership: civilian control of the military, police and intelligence agencies and economic and political reforms.

"What you're seeing is the culmination of years of work. There's a long way to go, but this is a major benchmark and members of Congress wanted to be there to see it," said Gilman spokesman Jerry Lipson.

Roth, who this year is president of the North Atlantic assembly, the alliance's parliamentary arm, will work with other NATO representatives to write protocols of accession — or rules for joining. The full North Atlantic Council, which Roth addresses on Tuesday, has a ministerial meeting in December to approve the rules for new members.

From there, parliamentary bodies — including the Senate — must amend the 1949 Washington treaty that set up NATO to allow members to join in 1999.

Lott predicts the Senate can muster the two-thirds vote required to approve treaties. "I remain confident," he said.

But no one is predicting an easy vote, especially since the question of the future of Bosnia and NATO's costly role there will likely get mixed in the debate as the July 1998 U.S. troop withdrawal date nears.

The 31,000-member NATO peacekeeping force includes 8,500 Americans. The United States has spent $6.5 billion to help keep a shaky peace in the former Yugoslavia, where still-separated ethnic groups threaten new violence.

"To the extent that we can prevent future Bosnias, this would be a very wise, sound investment," Defense Secretary William Cohen told reporters about bringing more nations under the military security umbrella.

Former mayor set for capital murder trial

ROCKPORT, Texas (AP) — Mark Crawford sauntered into the courtroom, pinstriped suit perfectly pressed, engaging smile firmly in place.

Cool. Confident. Charming as ever.

Friends remember Crawford — the ex-mayor of Ingleside, a small coastal town north of Corpus Christi — as "easygoing" and "well-mannered."

Prosecutors describe a less enchanting man. The words they use are embezzler, money launderer, murderer.

Their Mark Crawford is accused of kidnapping a business partner, forcing him into a metal toolbox and suffocating him with carbon monoxide as he begged for his life.

Crawford faces capital murder charges in Texas and more than 30 federal counts of murder, wire fraud, embezzlement, money laundering and perjury in California. If convicted, he could face the death penalty in both states.

With the Texas case scheduled for trial Monday, the question may finally be answered: Was the charming politician and successful businessman also a ruthless, greedy killer?

Swiveling his chair around to peruse the audience at his pretrial hearing, the 41-year-old Crawford was asked by a reporter whether he was innocent.

"Completely," Crawford whispered.

By his account, Crawford left home at age 15, finding work where he could. He picked oranges, trained as a welder and eventually landed a construction job in Ingleside, a mostly blue-collar town of about 8,000.

In 1988, with no previous political experience, he was elected mayor.

"He ran for mayor and it seemed like everything went uphill from that. He became a pretty successful guy," says Albert Diaz, who worked with Crawford in construction and describes him as "a gentleman."

Crawford also opened several businesses, including a temporary-employee service, construction company, convenience store, audio store, and car dealership. It wasn't long before the cash was flowing and he was driving a convertible Jaguar and a Mercedes. He collected antique cars and Harley-Davidsons and purchased a sprawling bayside home.

Some residents wondered how he had made so much so fast. Others simply believed he was an adept businessman.

His wealth notwithstanding, Crawford remained down-to-earth, some say, playing baseball with children and cheering his son at high school basketball games.

After leaving office in 1992, Crawford lost in the Democratic Party primary for a state Senate seat.

He went back to his businesses, and the money kept rolling in.

"That's the American way, as long as everything is done legally," says Dick Richards, editor-owner of the Ingleside Index newspaper.

Federal authorities say it wasn't.

Last year, they indicted Crawford and several business partners on charges of embezzling $180,000 from an employee benefit trust that provided health coverage in California. The money was funneled through an insurance company Crawford owned and left more than $500,000 in unpaid claims, the indictment alleges.

Among those charged was Nick Brueggen, a Crawford employee who met voluntarily with federal authorities before the indictment was handed up, says Mark Cullers, a federal prosecutor in Fresno, Calif.

By the time the indictment was filed May 30, 1996, Brueggen was nowhere to be found. His body would later be discovered in a shallow grave.

"Brueggen was about to spill the beans. He was going to rat on Mark, and that's what ticked him off," state prosecutor Anita O'Rourke said before a gag order was imposed.

A government witness, Kirk Johnson, has testified that on May 6, 1996, he and another man, Michael Beckcom, drove Brueggen to a warehouse Crawford owned near Ingleside. Crawford was already inside, Johnson said.

"Mark told him that he had screwed him for the last time," Johnson said. "Mark told him, 'Well, you're going to get that one-way ticket to overseas somewhere.'"

Crawford handcuffed Brueggen and forced him at gunpoint into a 3-by-4-foot metal toolbox, Johnson testified. Crawford and Beckcom then left and returned a half-hour later with a cooler full of sodas, pistachio nuts and candy bars, Johnson said.

Crawford and Beckcom left several more times and finally returned with duct tape and a water hose, which Crawford taped inside the toolbox where Brueggen "was crying for his life," Johnson said.

Beckcom backed a Ford Explorer into the warehouse, the hose was attached to the Explorer's exhaust pipe, and Beckcom began revving the engine, Johnson said. Fifteen minutes later, he said, Brueggen was dead.

Man would give up $30 million for safety plan

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A Victoria man says he'll give up $30 million in punitive damages if an oil company will devise a safety plan so no one else will experience what happened to him.

John Caballero, who was injured in an oil well blowout near Beeville, made the offer after a jury ruled in his favor Thursday in litigation he filed against Esenjay Petroleum Co. of Corpus Christi.

The court would have to give its approval.

"What I expected to gain (from the lawsuit) was to have a safety policy or safety procedures so that no one else have to endure the pain, suffering and disfigurement I have gone through," Caballero said. "I wouldn't wish this on anyone in the world."

In addition to the $30 million in punitive damages, the jury awarded $12.8 million in actual damages to Caballero, who suffered multiple injuries when the well blew out Oct. 27, 1995.

Esenjay officials declined to comment, and defense attorney Charles Watson of Houston could not be reached.

Rene Haas, who represented Caballero, said the company agreed to start negotiations on the safety plan after the verdict was issued.

Two other defendants, Dirks Engineering and Fish Oil Well Service, settled with Caballero for $2 million each before the first verdict was rendered.

"This is the way the system really should work," Ms. Haas said of her client's offer to release Esenjay from $30 million in punitive damages in exchange for a safety plan.

"The purpose of punitive damages is to protect the public, and in this instance the public will be protected if they take us up on this offer and institute a safety program," Ms. Haas said.

Caballero was literally scalped by the blast when fluids and gas under extremely high pressure blew him 30 feet into a stand of pipe.

Caballero also suffered brain damage, vision and hearing loss, broken vertebrae in his neck and back, a crushed foot and ankle, and a dislocated hip, Ms. Haas said.

Caballero, a triathlete who was planning to compete in an international "Ironman" competition in Hawaii at the time of the accident, will suffer physical problems for the rest of his life,, Ms. Haas said.

"It's kind of hard," he said. "I was a very competitive triathlete, and I can't bicycle any more. I can't run. All I can do is swim, basically."

Dying man willing to give away possessions for last good time

DALLAS (AP) — Ed Gordon is looking for one last good time before he dies.

Anyone willing to give the 77-year-old former banker and used car salesman $60,000 for his last hurrah would inherit Gordon's house near Hollywood Heights, his minority interest in two acres of East Dallas property and what remains of a $10,000 insurance policy. The three-bedroom house just south of Lakewood Country Club and property are assessed at $104,000, but need extens e renovation.

Gordon has serious medical problems, including high blood pressure, skin cancer, glaucoma and emphysema, but he would not use the money for medical expenses.

"First, I'd buy a late-model car," said Gordon. "Then, I'd go Los Vegas, then play the horses a little bit."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 5, 1997:
The unexpected occurs this year; you have to make constant adjustments. An associate or friend could be deceptive, but you can see it before the fact. Be direct in your interactions. Use the utmost of care with finances. The unusual occurs with partners. You communicate with finesse, but others do not always receive your message clearly. If you are single, be skeptical about new friends and acquaintances. You can't always read people accurately. If attached, your relationship could become confusing; your partner might go through a mini identity crisis. CANCER understands you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Communicate directly. Someone you feel confident about might disappoint you. Your efficiency is tested, but you get a lot done. The unexpected occurs during a meeting. Do not let confusion reign; keep asking questions until accord is reached. Tonight: Chat up a storm.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Your more possessive side emerges. Be clear with another. A shocking scenario occurs with someone who is at a distance. Creativity and high energy merge. Because of your intelligence, you are likely to take advantage of a prime offer. Tonight: Keep to your budget.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You are full of inventive enthusiasm. Your personality shines. Be direct with others; they could have a change of opinion that tosses plans in the air. A partner isn't clear. Laugh, be easygoing and do your own thing. Tonight: Smile.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Be centered about what is going on. The unexpected occurs in a fun conversation. You come from a grounded point of view. An idea lingers in your mind. Pace yourself, as you could become fatigued. Listen to your inner chatter. Tonight: The more mystery, the better.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You are full of happy energy. Your perspective is unique. Others seek your assistance in pulling together plans. As usual, your organizations skills are needed. Listen to a friend's feedback. A child could be demanding. Tonight: Get together with the gang.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You are in the limelight. Make the most of an opportunity another offers you. Confusion surrounds the home front. Pressure is intense because of what someone shares with you. You give this person a lot of power. Enjoy a flirtation. Tonight: Head out and about.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Liberate yourself, and enjoy. Your ability to take off in an unexpected direction adds to the liveliness of the moment. News comes your way that encourages a shift in plans. A partner wants time with you; make it your pleasure. Tonight: A broad smiles says it all.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ The unexpected occurs with a friend and a party. Be quick to take corrective action. Listen to what a partner shares. A financial matter is subject to wild twists and turns. Go with the unusual. Tonight: Be up close and personal.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Consider what is going on with a friend. Finances veer out of control. Try to make sounder decisions. Someone needs time to chat. Make time for him, and get together with a group of friends. Tonight: The holiday spirit continues.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You are mellow and direct with everyone except a friend or relative who is at a distance. You are confused by what you hear, and it causes you to adjust your schedule. Much talk revolves around a planned event. Others seek your ideas. Tonight: Get plenty of R&R.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Allow more of your hidden self to come forward. Your friendly ways emerge with a partner. One-to-one relating is the natural result. Share your news with a child or loved one. A friend adds an element of confusion to the day. Tonight: Be your loving self.

Michael Jackson wants to build first amusement park in western Poland

WARSAW, Poland — Michael Jackson may soon realize his "dream of returning to the world of childhood" at an old military airport.

The King of Pop wants to build a $100 million amusement park at the old Bemowo airport in northeast Warsaw.

"We are treating it as a serious proposal, especially since there is no big amusement park in Warsaw or even in this part of Europe," said city council spokeswoman Jolanta Kalka, noting that the project is a long way from being approved.

Last week, two of Jackson's representatives came to inspect the airport, where 100,000 fans heard him give his first Polish concert in September.

Jackson said during a visit in May he wants to build the amusement park to make real his "dream of returning to the world of childhood."

NEW YORK — Lyle Lovett isn't afraid to put his emotions out there.

The singer-songwriter said he knew listeners to his latest album, "The Road to Ensenada," would think some weepy songs about lost love are about the breakup of his marriage to actress Julia Roberts.

Lyle Lovett is not worried about his new album.

"It didn't really concern me, because it was consistent with my writing all along. I've always written about that subject," the 39-year-old Texas native told the New York Post.

Lovett also gave his opinion about the tastes of today's country music listeners.

"I genuinely think that Garth Brooks is what the country radio audience wants now," he said. "Maybe my songs require a bit more from the listener. Maybe they really aren't as good for mainstream country radio as much as they are for other types of radio."

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — You'd never know President Nelson Mandela was 79 from the people he invites to his birthday parties.

"This is one of the happiest moments in my life," said Mandela, who hosted 900 children Friday for a fiesta of face-painting, playing with building blocks and shooting baskets with the Harlem Globetrotters.

The youthful guests at the Culemborg Exhibition Center aren't unusual; Mandela spent last year with disabled children and had a party for street children in 1995.

Mandela won't be 79 until July 18, but he'll be out of the country until then.

"I can see the dream of a rainbow nation emerging before our eyes," said Mandela, who later gave the children his rendition of "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star."

PHILADELPHIA — It was freedom from the usual controversy for Ted Turner this Fourth of July.

The CNN founder was awarded the Liberty Medal Friday, following in the footsteps of four Nobel Peace Prize winners, including South African presidents Nelson Mandela and F.W. de Klerk and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

Ted Turner received the Liberty Medal in Philadelphia.

The panel of international leaders that gave the medal said CNN International provided fair and accurate information to people who may have no other source of unbiased news coverage.

"The power of ideas often relates to incredible sea change in the ways that nations operate. And in that regard, CNN has given power," Mayor Edward G. Rendell said before presenting Turner the $100,000 prize.

Turner said Americans' attitude toward the rest of the world has changed, and noted that 20 years ago foreigners arriving at New York's Kennedy Airport were directed to an area labeled: "aliens."

"Now if you go to Kennedy Airport, if you come from oversees, it still says U.S. passports on one sign, but the other sign says visitors," he said.

———

NEW YORK — Dyan Cannon is such a big Los Angeles Lakers fan that her cheers often turn to tears.

"I've walked out of there crying," she says of the basketball games, where she has floor seats next to retired star Magic Johnson.

The 60-year-old actress, who's co-starring with Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau in the new film "Out to Sea," says she only missed five or six home games out of 41 last season.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Choir completes tour

Spirit Wind, the youth choir of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, has completed its tour of the Texas Panhandle.

The choir is on an East Coast tour that includes a concert at First UMC in Decatur, Ga., and four days in Washington, D.C., where the group will perform a mini concert on the Potomac in front of Mount Vernon. Sunday, the choir will sing at Washington National Cathedral.

The tour will end in Charleston, W. Va., where the group will perform in the capitol rotunda and at Emmanuel Baptist Church.

On the way home, choir members will tour an exhibition coal mine and attend the outdoor drama, "Hatfields and McCoys," at Theater West Virginia.

Bible school set

"Wild Frontier Bible Theme Park: Where Jesus is the Main Attraction," is the theme for this year's Vacation Bible School at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

The school is set for July 13-17 from 5:30 to 8:15 p.m. There will be activities and classes for the entire family. On July 13, there will be a "kick-off" pot-luck dinner from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m. and snack suppers each of the following evenings.

To register or for more information, call the church office, 694-5321, or Shelly Copeland, 697-1432, at night.

The public is invited to attend.

Jubilee today

A Gospel Jubilee is set for today at the Midland Suburban Lions Club, 2550 Flynt.

Food is served from 6 to 7 p.m. Singing is from 7 to 9 p.m. The buffet, served by the Midland Suburban Lions, includes all you can eat, dessert and tea or coffee for $3. Proceeds go toward the club's community projects.

The Gospel Jubilee is held the first Saturday of every month. No admission is charged. For more information call Pat Merritt, 682-9844, or Leonard Hanson, 684-7233.

Pastor named

Hollowell United Methodist Church has announced the appointment of the Rev. Gilbert T. Cowley as pastor for the coming year.

The announcement was made by Bishop Alfred Norris at the 88th Session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference in Abilene this June.

A reception is planned for the Cowleys at 3 p.m. July 13 at the Fellowship Hall of Hollowell UMC, 400 S. Marshall St.

The public is invited to attend.

Cowley has pastored for 28 years. Previously, he served churches in Mississippi, Georgia, Marshall, Houston and Dallas. He has a bachelor of science degree from Rust College, Holly Springs, Miss., a master of science from Philip's School of Theology of the Interdenominational Theological Center, Atlanta, Ga., and an honorary doctorate from MT Hope Bible College, Houston.

Selassie to speak

The Rev. King Haile Selassie II, patriarch of the Ethiopian/Oriental Coptic Church, will be the guest speaker at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Corinth Baptist Church, 2403 E. California Ave.

His speech will be on "We Must Speak the Truth."

All are invited to attend.

Meeting scheduled

SAN ANGELO — The West Texas Camp Meeting 1997, sponsored by Faith Teaching Ministries, Inc., is set for July 17-19 at the San Angelo Convention Center, 500 Rio Concho Drive.

Speakers include Markus Bishop of Panama Beach, Fla., Dennis Burke of Arlington and Jerry Roach of San Angelo. Special music will be provided by Staci Michaels of Tulsa, Okla. and the Victory Praise team of San Angelo.

Meetings are set for 2 and 7 p.m. all three days and 10 a.m. as well on July 18 and 19.

A children's Ministry is planned evenings only for ages 4 through 11. For more information call Linda Roach, 1-915-944-2075.

Tournament set

The Knights of Columbus third annual Class D Softball Tournament is set for July 26 and 27 at Hogan Park.

First, second and third place awards will be given. Entry fee is $110 per team. Deadline is July 23.

The Knights of Columbus is a non-profit Catholic men's organization. Monies raised will go to charity.

Concert planned

STANTON — Stephen Vincent Harley of American Praise Inc., will be in concert at Stanton Care Center at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. The Midland native is a graduate of Sul Ross State University and Christ of the Nations Bible Institute.

He has ministered in concerts, for revivals, church services, youth rallies, weddings and other sacred events throughout the Southwest.

Special service set

A special Independence Day service is planned at Second Baptist Church, 3125 Travis, at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Along with patriotic hymns and specials, children also will participate in a flag-waving pledge of allegiance to the American flag. The public is invited to attend.

Seminar planned

The Rev. Billie Hanks Jr. will be conducting an areawide New Member assimilation and Christian Mentorship Seminar for pastors and church leaders at the Midland Hilton and Towers from 9 a.m. to noon July 28.

Hanks, a native of San Angelo, is regarded as "an international authority on the personal care of new Christians and the spiritual development of church members," said a release from International Evangelism Association.

The West Texas Regional Seminar series is co-sponsored by Nelson/Word, the nation's largest Christian publisher, and the Texas-based International Evangelism Association.

In July, the seminar is being held in Midland, San Angelo, Amarillo, El Paso, Abilene and Lubbock.

Interested parties are asked to register by calling 1-800-779-7570. Cost is a $10 donation at the door to pay for refreshments and the facility.

Guest to speak

ODESSA — Unity Church of West Texas, 210 E. 12th St., is hosting a guest speaker from Unity Village at 11 a.m. Sunday and holding a potluck lunch afterward.

Carla Cambron, licensed Unity teacher, and former Midlander, is presently the acting manager of the Country Club Clubhouse at Unity Village and worked in the Silent Unity Prayer Ministry for several years. Ms. Cambron is serving as Unity of West Texas's spiritual leader and will be giving the Sunday lectures several times throughout the year.

Other regularly scheduled events include 9:30 a.m. Sunday study group on "Introduction to Unity" taught by Pamela Davis through July with "Lessons in Truth" taught by Jeannie Raff beginning in August; meditation at 7 p.m. Wednesdays followed by tape class; 11 a.m. Sunday church service, meditation, lecture and music; and "A Course in Miracles" moderated by Jeannie Raff from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Sundays.

Classes offered

Exercise classes for older adults are being held from 11 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday at First United Methodist Church, downtown at Main Street and Ohio Avenue.

The exercises are being led by Evelyn Glover of Nurses Unlimited in the Fellowship Hall. Classes are open to the public at no charge.

Bazaar scheduled

The Holy Cross Lutheran Church Women's Guild is preparing for its Fifth Annual Fall Bazaar.

Booth are still available for the bazaar, set for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 20 at the Midland County Exhibit Building. The 10 by 10 booths are $30. For more information on renting a booth call 520-3194.

Joint service set

Grace Presbyterian Church and Mt. Calvary Missionary Baptist Church will hold a joint worship service at 5 p.m. Sunday in the Mt. Calvary sanctuary, 303 E. Shandon.

The service, entitled "One Faith, One Spirit, One Father of All," will be led by the Rev. Robert Lathan of Mt. Calvary and the Rev. Bill Clark of Grace and will feature special music by a massed choir of vocalists from both churches, a combined men's chorus, the Mt. Calvary Sanctuary Choir, the Mt. Calvary Youth Choir and Grace Presbyterian's handbell choir, Celebration! and vocal ensemble, "Eternity."

A love offering will be collected, with the monies being contributed to the Habitat for Humanity's Miracle on Jackson Street project.

The public is invited to attend.

New meeting site

The Bethel family, a United Methodist congregation, will not meet Sunday at the Alamo YMCA. Instead, the Bethel congregation will gather at the Hollowell United Methodist Church, 400 S. Marshall St., for a combined service beginning at 11 a.m.

The Rev. Hadley R. Edwards, pastor of Hollowell, will preach his farewell sermon before leaving to paster in New Orleans. K.C. Blackketter is the pastor of the Bethel family.

Vacation Bible Schools

First Christian Church, Disciples of Christ, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., will hold its annual Vacation Bible School from 9 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday.

Children, 2 years old through the sixth grade, are invited to attend and learn about "Stories Jesus Told." Preregistration is available in the church office. Registration will be taken the first day of VBS. For more information call the church, 682-2541.

Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road, will hold its annual Vacation Bible School from 9 a.m. to noon June 16-20.

Children ages 3 and a half to sixth grade will be passengers on board a train bound for fun and fueled by Bible stories. To register early call the church, 697-3221.

Tucker signs

Former Midland Lee Rebel Ryan Tucker has come to terms with the St. Louis Rams.

Tucker, a standout center at Texas Christian University, was selected by the Rams in the fourth round of this April's National Football League Draft. Terms of Tucker's contract were not announced.

Tucker played three different positions on the Horned Frogs' offensive line, spending the last two seasons as the center where he earned All-WAC honors.

Pikes Peak race

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Rod Millen of New Zealand repeated as champion in the unlimited division of the Pikes Peak International Hill Climb, and again fell short of the 10-minute mark.

Millen, who lives in Newport Beach, Calif., piloted a Toyota Celica up the 12.42-mile course to the mountain's 14,110-foot summit in 10 minutes, 4.54 seconds.

That was just shy of the overall race record of 10:04.06 established by Millen in 1994, the closest anyone has come to 10 minutes in the 75-year history of the event.

"We tried," Millen said. "The Toyota ran great. The road was a little slippery in places. I struggled for traction. I wasn't 100 percent sure what the grip was going to be. This is not a place to take chances. Maybe next year we'll break the 10-minute barrier."

Millen's chief rival, Japan's Nobuhiro Tajima, encountered engine problems and parked his car two-thirds of the way up the road. Veteran sports car driver Elliott Forbes-Robinson of Sherrills Ford, N.C., drove a modified 1937 Chevrolet Sedan Legends Car to second in the unlimited division at 13:24.50.

The annual Independence Day event is a race of car and driver against the clock and the mountain's gravel road, beginning at 9,500 feet. The road course snakes around 156 turns before reaching the summit.

Gary Lee Kanawyer of Pismo Beach, Calif., won his third consecutive open wheel championship, racing a Gene Pacheco-prepared Wells Coyote to the finish in 10:40.25.

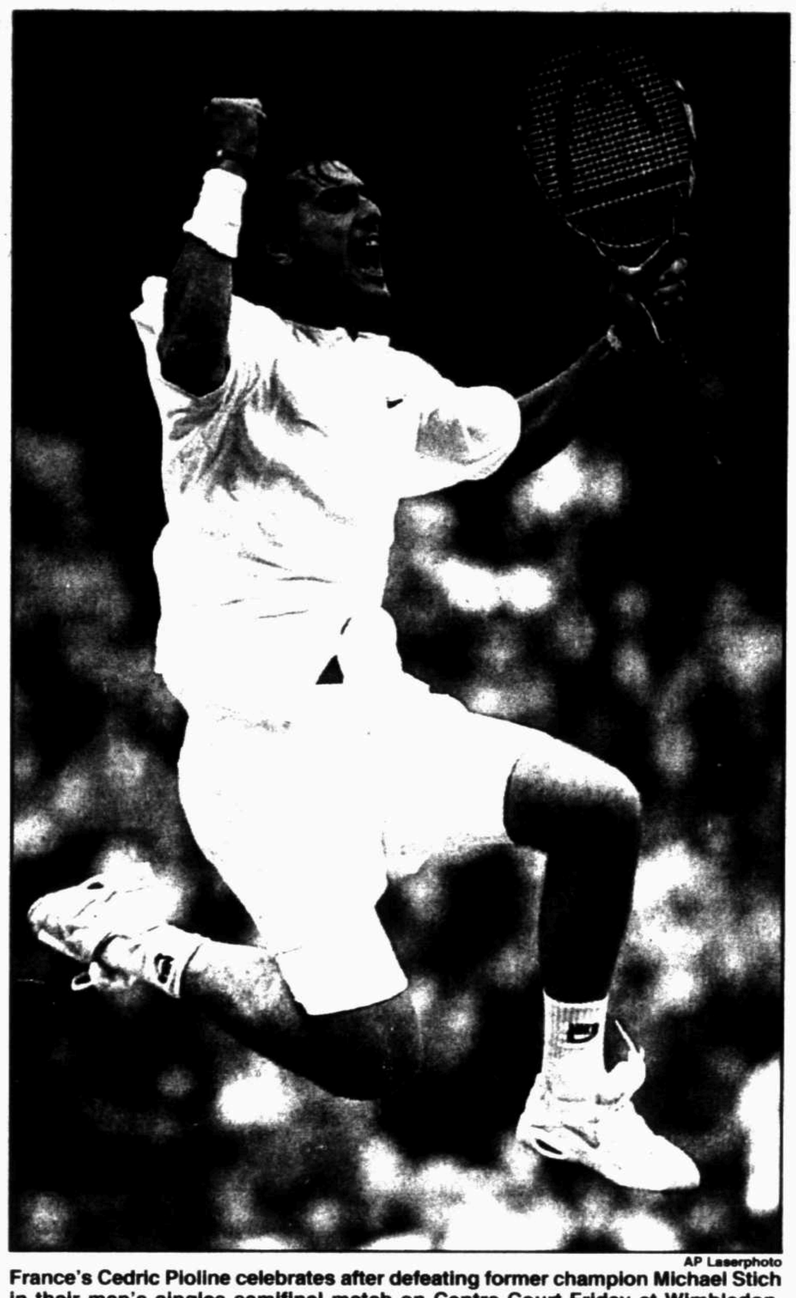
Pioline earns shot at Sampras



AP Laserphoto

France's Cedric Pioline celebrates after defeating former champion Michael Stich in their men's singles semifinal match on Centre Court Friday at Wimbledon. He won, 6-7 (2-7), 6-2, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4, and will meet Pete Sampras in Sunday's final.

■ Unseeded Frenchman enters Wimbledon final against man who whipped him in 1993 U.S. Open final.

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Cedric Pioline is the first Frenchman to reach the Wimbledon final since Yvon Petra won the 1946 title, which raises two questions.

1. Who is Yvon Petra?
2. Who is Cedric Pioline?

Petra, a 6-foot-5 Parisian who died in 1984, was the last Wimbledon champion to wear trousers.

Pioline, who plays in shorts, beat 1991 champion Michael Stich 6-7 (7-2), 6-2, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 Friday and advanced to his second Grand Slam final. He is best remembered — or forgotten — for losing to Pete Sampras 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 in the final of the 1993 U.S. Open, one of the most lopsided recent Grand Slam finals.

They meet again Sunday for the Wimbledon title, and the unseeded Pioline (pronounced Pee-oh-LEEN) will again be a big underdog.

The top-ranked Sampras has won their seven previous matches, dropping just three sets. Last year at Wimbledon, Sampras beat Pioline 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 in the round of 16.

"I'm tired of this player," Pioline joked. "Maybe this time will be different. You never know."

Pioline, ranked 44th, has won only two career titles — at Prague in May and at Copenhagen last year. But he is now a two-time Grand Slam finalist, and only the third unseeded Wimbledon finalist since the Open era began in 1968.

Pioline described the victory over Stich as perhaps the biggest of his career.

"To reach two Grand Slam finals, there are not so many players who can do that," he said. "So I'm flying."

Although Pioline has been his country's top player for several years, he is not as popular in France as such predecessors as Guy Forget and Yannick Noah. But his cheering section Friday at Centre Court included French pop singer Patrick Bruel, and an entire nation will likely be watching Sunday.

Athletic and acrobatic, Pioline seized an opening when Stich double-faulted on break point in the first game of the final set. The Frenchman held serve the rest of the way, slammed a service winner down the middle on match point, then leaped into the air in celebration.

When Petra won Wimbledon 51 years ago, he jumped over the net. Don't expect Pioline to duplicate that move Sunday.

Sampras quickly disposes of Woodbridge, enters final

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Even flat on his back at the baseline, Pete Sampras refused to concede a point, and Todd Woodbridge knew his only hope of winning would be to call doubles partner Mark Woodforde down from the stands.

Sampras will play for his fourth Wimbledon title and 10th Grand Slam championship Sunday precisely because he pursues perfection so doggedly, as he did Friday in a 6-2, 6-1, 7-6 (7-3) semifinal victory over Woodbridge.

"Today I played one of the greatest players, playing great," Woodbridge said, adding that he could have used Woodforde "to help cover some ground because there were winners flying all over the place."

As Sampras seeks to tie Bill Tilden for the most majors won by an American, and move closer to Roy Emerson's record 12, he will face France's Cedric Pioline, a 6-7 (7-2), 6-2, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 winner in the dusk over 1991 champion Michael Stich.

A day after fellow German Boris Becker said farewell to Wimbledon, Stich quit the sport completely. Stich embraced Pioline at the net and told him of his decision, as Becker did with Sampras after their match.

Novotna gets another chance at title

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — If the Duchess of Kent plans to attend the women's final Saturday at Wimbledon, she'd be wise to bring an umbrella.

Jana Novotna is back.

It's a fitting climax to one of the wettest Wimbledons in history. Pitted against top-ranked Martina Hingis, Novotna makes her first appearance in a Grand Slam final since 1993, when her composure dissolved in tears on Centre Court at the All England Club.

One point from a 5-1 lead in the final set against Steffi Graf, Novotna double-faulted, then lost the next five games and the match. In the championship ceremony that followed, Novotna sobbed on the Duchess of Kent's shoulder.

The breakdown saddled Novotna with a reputation for collapsing in the clutch. Now, at 28, she tries again for her first Grand Slam title.

"She's been there before when she had a chance," rival Arantxa Sachez Vicario said, "and she choked."

Novotna, seeded third, beat Sanchez Vicario in the semifinals Thursday to set up an intriguing final against the 16-year-old Hingis. The matchup presents a contrast in age, playing style and — perhaps — poise.

"It's going to be my second time," Novotna said. "I'm a bit older, and I think I'll enjoy it more.

"In '93 I still had to prove — not only to myself but to everybody — that I am a good player. Sometimes I wanted it just too much. Over the years, I think that my outlook toward tennis has changed a lot. I have realized that it is not the most important thing in life."

Novotna said she learned that lesson when her father first became ill a couple of years ago. He'll watch Saturday's match from a hospital in the Czech Republic.

His daughter has a good chance to win, if she can keep her cool. Novotna's serve-and-volley game is best suited for the Wimbledon grass, while Hingis' mediocre serve makes her vulnerable on a surface she has quickly grown to dislike.

"I hate grass because you have to think differently on this surface," Hingis said. "The court is not very nice — a lot of mis-hits, and not very nice bounces."

Hingis is 3-2 against Novotna, winning their most recent match in three sets at the Lipton Championships in March.

But they have yet to meet on grass. The fast court should make it easier for Novotna to chip, charge and challenge Hingis' repertoire of shots.

"I don't want to give her too many chances to get to the net," Hingis said.

"We will see a contrast of styles," Novotna said. "It's

Tour de France spotlights battle between teammates

By Salvatore Zanca
Associated Press Writer

ROUEN, France — The Tour de France begins Saturday with defending champion Bjarne Riis facing a potential challenge from his own Telekom teammate, Jan Ullrich.

The Dane and the German finished 1-2 last year.

Riis is the team leader, and his teammates — including Ullrich — are expected to work for him with the overall victory important.

"Ullrich is not an opponent," Riis said. "He is a teammate. We will ride together and try to win."

Ullrich downplays his chance to win the world's most prestigous cycling race.

"My role will not change this year," he said. "It's clear this is nothing between us even if others want to try to oppose us.

"The only problem is we put the bar very high in 1996 ... It will be tough to do it again."

But Ullrich has his sights set on the top eventually.

"When you finish second in the Tour de France one time, you are capable to climb one day to the top spot on the podium," he said.

The race begins with a short time trial around Rouen, the hometown of five-time winner, the late Jacques Anquetil. Anquetil won his first tour 40 years ago.

Another five-time winner, Miguel Indurain, is not competing this year afer win-

Struggling slugger Greg Vaughn was traded Friday by the San Diego Padres to the New York Yankees for infielder Mariano Duncan and pitcher Kenny Rogers.

Padres deal Vaughn to Yankees for Duncan, ex-Ranger Rogers

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — The San Diego Padres dealt struggling slugger Greg Vaughn to the New York Yankees for Kenny Rogers and Mariano Duncan on Friday night in the second multi-player deal between the teams in 2 1/2 months.

The deal is contingent upon Vaughn and Rogers passing physicals on Saturday. The Yankees also get minor league pitchers Kerry Taylor and Chris Clark, and the Padres get minor-league pitcher Kevin Henthorne.

Vaughn returns to the American League, where he hit all but 20 of his 189 career home runs. Rogers and Duncan leave Yankees owner George Steinbrenner's doghouse, going from the World Series champs to a Padres team that will be hard-pressed to repeat as NL West champion.

Rogers and Duncan shook hands with teammates before leaving the Yankees dugout during Friday night's game at Toronto. Vaughn was at the stadium but didn't dress for San Diego's home game against Los Angeles. He spent time talking with teammates and talking on the phone.

Vaughn's last at-bat with the Padres was a memorable one, a pinch two-run homer Thursday night to give the Padres a 10-8 win over the Seattle Mariners.

"Until they say I'm a New York Yankee, I can't worry about it," Vaughn said Thursday night. "I like the Yankees. I have a lot of good friends on that team. I like all the history behind the ballclub. It's the Big Apple. It's pretty exciting."

The trade solves San Diego's awkward left-field situation and assures that Rickey Henderson will finish

Titanic HR again sinks Astros

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — In the first 32 years of the Astrodome, only seven balls were hit into the upper deck. This week, it's been done twice.

"I knew I hit it really well," Willie Greene said with a bit of understatement after his three-run homer led the Cincinnati Reds over the Houston Astros Friday night.

Cincinnati, which extended a winning streak to five for the first time in nearly a year, trailed 2-0 in the fourth. Tommy Greene (0-1) walked Curtis Goodwin and Lenny Harris and Willie Greene sent a 1-0 fastball into the upper deck in right field for his 12th homer of the season.

"I couldn't find it, then I finally saw it hit in the upper deck," said Greene, who wasn't aware that his was just the ninth to reach that level.

It was the second upper-deck shot in a five-game span. Cleveland's Manny Ramirez hit an upper-deck shot to left Monday off Blas Minor.

Cincinnati is on its best streak since winning six straight last July 22-27. Houston has lost four of five.

"It was a monumental blast," Reds manager Ray Knight said. "I saw Ramirez hit one here earlier this week, I played here three years and I don't remember one except Andre Dawson (in April 1983). Willie has the ability to drive in runs in response to situations. He's beginning to be our clutch guy."

Bret Boone, who entered in a 1-for-33 slump, hit a pair of doubles for the Reds.

Mike Morgan (3-5) won for the third time in four decisions, allowing two runs and five hits in five innings. Scott Sullivan and Jeff Shaw finished with hitless relief, with Shaw getting three outs for his 18th save.

■ NL Roundup

Cubs 9, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Pitcher Terry Mulholland drove in the go-ahead run with the first of his two doubles as the streaking Chicago Cubs beat Philadelphia, handing the Phillies their 11th consecutive defeat.

Ryne Sandberg went 3-for-5 with a homer and two RBIs, and Dave Hansen had two hits and drove in two runs for Chicago. The Cubs have won five straight games — their best streak since an eight-game run in 1995.

The Phillies' run of futility is their worst since they lost 11 straight in 1989. Mulholland (6-9) had lost five straight decisions.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 5, 10 innings

ST. LOUIS — Mark Smith hit a two-run homer off Dennis Eckersley in the 10th inning, and Pittsburgh extended its winning streak to five games.

With two outs in the 10th, Dale Sveum doubled off the center field wall before Smith hit the first pitch from Eckersley (0-3) over the right field wall for his second home run of the season and third hit of the game.

Marc Wilkins (6-1) pitched a scoreless ninth to pick up the first win by a Pirates reliever since June 6. Rich Loiselle got his 10th save.

Braves 6, Expos 3

MONTREAL — Mark Lemke broke a 3-3 tie in the ninth with a two-run triple off Ugueth Urbina (2-6), sending the Braves to their fourth straight win and ninth in 10 games.

Brad Clontz (4-1) pitched one inning of relief for the win. Mark Wohlers got three outs for his 19th save.

Mets 6, Marlins 2

NEW YORK — Todd Pratt hit his first home since July 22, 1994, and drove in three runs as New York stopped a four-game losing streak.

The Mets, outscored 41-17 during their slide, fell behind on Gary Sheffield's two-run homer in the first inning. But Rick Reed (6-4) and two relievers blanked the Marlins the rest of the way.

Dodgers 5, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO — Pedro Astacio pitched 6 1/3 strong innings, and Greg Gagne and Tripp Cromer each had two-run doubles for Los Angeles.

Astacio (5-7) gave up seven hits and two runs to win his second consecutive start for the first time this season.

Injury to sideline Thomas

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Chicago White Sox first baseman Frank Thomas will not play Tuesday in the All-Star Game, saying he needs time to rest sore rib muscles.

"I have declined the offer to the All-Star team," Thomas said Friday. "The bottom line is, I'm not 100 percent. And that's all I have to say about it."

Thomas, 29, chosen as an American League reserve, was to make his fifth consecutive All-Star appearance. He missed last year's game because of a stress fracture in his left foot.

White Sox trainer Herm Schneider said Thomas, on the disabled list in mid-June with a strained oblique muscle, would risk possible further injury if he played.

■ All-Star Notes

"He needs a lot of extra time to get loose," Schneider said. "He felt he wouldn't know when he'll pinch-hit so he wouldn't have enough time to prepare."

Thomas played in his 1,000th career game Friday when the White Sox played host to Boston. He ranks among the team's single-season and career leaders in virtually every offensive category.

He entered Friday's game ranked second in the AL in batting with a .371 average and first in on-base percentage at .486.

Left fielder Albert Belle will be Chicago's lone All-Star representative, although there was some question whether he would go because of rude treatment by fans during a Chicago-Cleveland series June 3-4.

White Sox general manager Ron Schueler said Friday the AL already has contacted him regarding security at Jacobs Field.

"The league's taken care of it (security) completely," Schueler said.

Caminiti may miss All-Star game

SAN DIEGO — San Diego third baseman Ken Caminiti said a back injury could prevent him from playing in Tuesday's All-Star game.

Caminiti, voted a starter for the first time, didn't start Friday's game against the Los Angeles Dodgers and may miss the final two games of the series.

"I'm going to play it by ear," Caminiti said. "I'm going to take the next three days off unless things get considerably better."

Caminiti, who came out of Thursday's game against Seattle in the third inning with a sore back, said he recently found out he has a crooked spine.

Caminiti, the 1996 NL MVP, visited Dr. Brian Wofford after Wednesday night's game against Seattle and X-rays revealed the problem.

"I just know that things are not right," Caminiti said.

Caminiti said he has received at least two treatments a day from Wofford since Wednesday. Although the treatments are helping, Caminiti said he couldn't even get out of bed Friday morning.

San Diego manager Bruce Bochy said Caminiti will be reevaluated Saturday.

"If he is not feeling right to play here, I don't think we'd want him to play the All-Star game," Bochy said.

Caminiti, a three-time All-Star, is hitting .247 with six homers and 47 RBIs.

"If I get up tomorrow and I'm fine, I'll play," he said. "The All-Star game is such an honor. I'm so concerned with what I've done this year, which is absolutely nothing. I'm concerned with helping the ballclub. Right now, I need to get twice-a-day treatments."

Anderson bruises leg, may miss All-Star game

DETROIT — Brady Anderson was hit twice in the left leg with pitches in Baltimore's doubleheader split with Detroit on Friday night and left the second game in the third inning.

"He might miss the All-Star game," Orioles manager Davey Johnson said. "He definitely won't play tomorrow."

Anderson, voted an AL starter by fans, was hit by Omar Olivares to lead off the second game. He also was hit Greg Keagle in the fourth inning of the opener.

Stevens almost hits for cycle as Rangers beat Athletics

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Lee Stevens came within a single of becoming the second Texas player to hit for the cycle as the Rangers beat the Oakland Athletics 7-6 Friday night for their third straight win.

Stevens, who matched his career high with four RBIs, went 3-for-4. He hit an RBI triple in the second, a three-run homer in the third and doubled in the seventh. He also grounded out in the fifth.

Oddibe McDowell is the only Texas player to hit for the cycle, accomplishing the feat against against Cleveland on July 23, 1985.

Fireworks night drew a crowd of 46,934, the largest regular-season crowd at The Ballpark in Arlington. Will Clark added three hits as the Rangers moved over .500 (42-41) for the first time since June 22.

Ken Hill (5-5) won for the first time since May 29, allowing four runs and eight hits in 6 2/3 innings with five strikeouts and three walks.

John Wetteland, who had blown three of his previous five save chances, pitched the ninth for his 18th save in 23 opportunities.

Steve Karsay (2-8) was tagged for seven runs and nine hits in 4 1/3 innings.

Texas took a 6-2 lead in the third on RBI singles by Rusty Greer and Will Clark, and Stevens' 10th homer.

Oakland closed to 6-4 in the fifth, getting some help from sloppy fielding. Jason McDonald tripled with one out on a ball that could have been caught by either Greer in left or Damon Buford in center, then scored on Scott Brosius' groundout.

Greer homered in the bottom half, but Oakland scored twice in the eighth, closing within a run on RBI single by pinch-hitter Mark Bellhorn and Scott Spezio's long sacrifice fly.

Rangers third baseman Dean Palmer was scratched from the lineup after fracturing his nose while taking grounders prior to batting practice. He is day-to-day.

■ AL Roundup

Twins 13, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Greg Colbrunn went 4-for-6 with a double, homer and four RBIs, and the Minnesota Twins got 23 hits as they handed the plunging Milwaukee Brewers their fifth straight loss.

The hit total was one short of a club record, last accomplished on June 4, 1994 against Detroit. The Twins' 13 runs tied a season high.

Minnesota's Dave Stevens brought a 17.05 ERA into the game — having allowed 12 runs in 6 1/3 innings since being recalled from the minors on June 22. But in just his third career start out of 132 major league appearances, Stevens (1-2) allowed a a run on seven hits in five innings.

Blue Jays 1, Yankees 0

TORONTO — Juan Guzman and Kelvim Escobar combined on a two-hitter and Orlando Merced homered in the sixth inning for Toronto.

The victory was just the Blue Jays' second in 10 home games and fourth in 17 games against the Yankees at SkyDome. It also ended New York's four-game road winning streak.

Guzman, who left after five innings in just his second start since coming off the disabled list, gave up one hit, struck out eight, and didn't walk a batter while facing just two over the minimum. Escobar (2-0) gave up one hit, struck out three and walked one over the final four innings.

Indians 7, Royals 6

Cleveland catcher Sandy Alomar was 2-for-4 to extend his hitting streak to 29 games, tops in the majors this season and longest by an Indians player in 95 years.

With the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth, Marquis Grissom lined a sharp one-hopper to Howard. The ball bounced hard off the infielder, a tough error that allowed Williams to trot home.

Brian Anderson (3-1) went eight innings and got the victory, despite allowing Craig Paquette's tiebreaking two-run homer in the top of the eighth. Hipolito Pichardo (2-4) took the loss.

Orioles 4, Tigers 3
Tigers 11, Orioles 8

DETROIT — Brian Hunter hit his first career grand slam and the Detroit ended an 11-game losing streak to Baltimore, overcoming 5-0 and 8-5 deficits to gain the doubleheader split.

Lenny Webster singled to break a fifth-inning tie as the Orioles won the opener to stretch their winning streak to five.

Jose Bautista (2-2) won the second game with 2 2/3 shutout innings, Bob Hamelin hit his second homer of the day and Todd Jones got three outs for his 12th save. Loser Alan Mills (1-1) was tagged for four runs in 1 2-3 innings.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 5

CHICAGO — Heathcliff Slocumb (0-4) hit a batter and threw two wild pitches in the ninth as Chicago came back after Roberto Hernandez (5-1) wasted a 5-2 lead in the top of the inning.

With the score 5-all, Ozzie Guillen doubled off Slocumb (0-4) leading off and took third on a wild pitch.

Purser named to academic team

Rusty Purser, a 1995 graduate of Greenwood High School, was named to the Academic All-Big 12 track and field team.

Purser maintained the required Grade-Point Average of 3.3-4.0 in addition to finishing 14th of 38 throwers in the discus and 17th of 34 in the shot at the Big 12 Championships at Baylor University.

District 3 playoff action continues

Midland Northern defeated Midland North Central 7-6 in the only District 3 Major League All-Star Tournament matchup of Tall City teams.

Northern's Tanner Welch tied the game with a two-run homerun in the bottom of the fifth and Northern added another to pull out the win. North Central's Justin Caines also homered.

Midland Eastern defeated El Paso Frank Manning 7-5 behind Edward Rodriguez' 2-for-4 and three RBI night. Eastern also hammered five doubles in the win.

Midland Mid-City lost to Odessa North Ector, 4-3, despite a five-hit, eight-strikeout showing from Cole White. Midland Tower also lost to an Odessa team, falling 4-2 to Floyd Gwin. Tower's Phillips Mancha homered. Both Mid-City and Tower will play Monday.

In other action, Greenwood, who will play Midland Northern on Monday, used a one-hit performance from pitcher Shane Moody and a homer from Justin Sowder to defeat Kellus Turner 12-3.

Big Spring National also moves on behind a two home runs from Wesley Longorio in a 5-4 win over El Paso Socorro. Big Spring plays Monday versus Tower.

Angels recover with 7-2 win over Drillers

Staff Report

TULSA, Okla. — The Midland Angels returned to the win column after two straight losses with a 7-2 victory over the Tulsa Drillers Friday at Drillers Stadium.

The pitching of Midland's Scott Schoeneweis and some timely Angels' hitting were the keys in the Angels' seventh win in nine games.

Schoeneweis (5-3) looks to be returning the form that made him Anaheim's No. 4 prospect, according to Baseball America. The left-hander went 5 2/3 innings, and equaled a season-high nine strikeouts. Schoeneweis has allowed three runs in just over 10 innings of work since coming back from a rib injury.

The Angels (12-8) also got an outstanding outing from reliever Chris Hook, who went the last 3 1/3 innings to pick up his first save. Between the two Angels hurlers, they allowed 11 hits, but kept the base runners from crossing home plate. Tulsa (7-10) left a hefty 10 men on-base.

More importantly, the pitching complemented the semi-explosive offensive production by Midland, which had 10 hits on the night.

In the third, Randy Betten got things started with a bang. His first home run as a Midland Angel cleared the right-field fence and made the score 1-0. The Angels added three more in the top of the third as Aaron Guiel drove in Jed Dalton with a bloop single. Then, Bret Hemphill had a two-out, two-run single to left field to complete the four-run inning.

Jamie Burke, Danny Buxbaum and Dalton added RBIs over the next three four innings to stretch the lead to 7-2.

Tulsa's Keiichi Kojima fell to 1-7 with the loss.

VICTORY ANGELICS: Midland's Fausto Macey (4-2, 8.00) and Tulsa's Ted Silva (7-8, 4.29) will be the starting pitchers for today's game. First pitch is scheduled for 7:35 p.m. KCRS (AM 550) air time is 7:15 p.m.... Aaron Guiel has an 11-game streak is hitting 18-for 38 (.474) during that time. This season alone, Guiel has separate streaks of 11, 12 and 13 games...

Scout accused of sexual misconduct fails to show for meeting with Dominican prosecutor

The Associated Press

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — A former San Franciso Giants scout accused of demanding sex from young players did not meet with a prosecutor as scheduled Friday.

Luis Rosa had been ordered to return to the Dominican Republican and appear before the prosecutor in San Pedro de Macoris, the 60 miles west of Santo Domingo, where the sexual abuse complaint was filed against him in court by eight players.

The Dominican players, ranging in age from 18 to 21, accused Rosa of demanding sex from them. When they refused, they were kicked out of the training camp, they alleged.

Rosa, 51, has denied the charges, and told a Dominican television station last week he was willing to return "to clear my name."

The suit also accused Rosa of withholding pay and signing bonuses from the players to put additional pressure on them to submit to his sexual demands.

Rosa is known for recruiting several star major league players from his native Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, including Sandy and Roberto Alomar, Carlos Baerga and Jose Guillen.

Rosa resigned from the Giants on June 13. Both the Giants and Major League Baseball are investigating the allegations.

Rosa is known for signing major league players such as brothers Roberto and Sandy Alomar, Juan Gonzalez and Carlos Baerga of Puerto Rico, and Dominicans Amaury Telemaco and Jose Guillen.

In addition to working for the Giants, Rosa has scouted for Montreal, Baltimore, Seattle, San Diego, Texas, San Francisco and the Chicago Cubs.

Leonard leads Western by two strokes over trio

By Mike Nadel
AP Sports Writer

LEMONT, Ill. — Justin Leonard saw the pairings and knew he was going to enjoy the first two rounds of the Western Open.

"I was playing with two of my buddies," he said, referring to Jeff Sluman and Davis Love III. "I said to my caddy, 'Remind me to keep score and not to pick my ball up.' I was real relaxed out there today. It felt like a practice round."

All rounds — practice and otherwise — should be as successful as Leonard's was Friday. He birdied nine holes, including four of the last five, to shoot an 8-under-par 64 and take a two-stroke lead.

Tiger Woods also liked his playing partners — Mark O'Meara and John Cook — but couldn't fashion another round like his 67 of Thursday. He was at even par and felt fortunate to be only four strokes behind Leonard in the Motorola-sponsored tournament.

"I should have been a few under, but it could have been a disaster," Woods said. "There are still 36 holes to go, and I'm still in it."

Leonard excelled on an unseasonably chilly day at Cog Hill Golf & Country Club. Of course, excelling on the club's Dubsdread course is nothing new for Leonard, who finished second in the 1995 Western, eighth last year, 25th as an amateur in 1993 and 29th in '94.

"It's a course I'm really comfortable with," he said. "I'm in good position to win this one. It's up to me in the next two days."

The three golfers closest to Leonard, who won the Kemper Open last month for his second PGA Tour victory, were Billy Andrade, Mike Hulbert and Michael Bradley.

Sluman, a Chicago-area native, and Jay Delsing were another stroke back. First-round leader O'Meara, Ted Tryba, Scott Hoch, Brent Geiberger and Tommy Armour III joined Woods four back at 5-under.

After playing well Thursday, Woods said he felt rejuvenated because he had taken a week off from the rigors of being the PGA Tour's most popular player.

Friday, however, "I didn't seem to have the same intensity level," he said. "It was a frustrating round."

It also wasn't easy playing in the sometimes-rainy, sometimes-sunny, 65-degree weather.

"It seemed like we went through three seasons out there," Woods said.

He missed a 2-foot birdie putt on 15, a par-5 that produced seven eagles, and followed with a bogey on 16 when he drove the ball into a bunker and blasted out behind a tree. He got back to even for the day by making a 14-foot birdie putt on 17 and saving par with a 10-foot putt on 18.

Only two of Woods' last 14 rounds have been under par. Before that, he had 11 consecutive rounds in the red — a stretch that included victories in the Masters and Byron Nelson Classic.

Woods' fellow pros expect him to make a run over the weekend.

"He probably will, but I can't be worried about Tiger Woods because I know he's not worried about me," said Andrade, looking for his first win since 1991.

Robbins' record-tying round puts her ahead

SLYVANIA, Ohio (AP) — Kelly Robbins tied a course record with a 7-under-par 64 and built a two-stroke lead Friday midway through the Jamie Farr Kroger Classic.

Robbins was at 11-under-par 131 after two tours of the 6,319-yard Highland Meadows Golf Club, two better than first-round leader Karrie Webb of Australia, who shot a 68.

Robbins had seven birdies Friday, including four on putts of 15 feet or longer. She closed out her round with birdies on three of the final four holes, including a 25-foot putt on the 16th hole and a 35-footer on the par-5 17th after exploding out of a bunker.

"When you go through and make long putts, it's great," said Robbins, the 1994 Jamie Farr winner. "You take those and move on. I'm pleased with how I was rolling the ball today."

Robbins dropped a 15-footer at No. 6 for her first birdie and completed the front nine with a 30-footer.

Webb opened with a 15-footer for birdie on No. 1 but thereafter ran off eight straight pars to run in 1-under. An 18-footer produced a second birdie at No. 10 but Webb didn't score again until dropping a 3-footer at No. 18.

"My ball-striking wasn't as good today manily because I wasn't hitting as many fairways," Webb said.

"That birdie on 18 was good because I will be in the last group," said Webb, the 1996 rookie of the year. "The way Kelly's been playing, I'll be able to watch her. It's better to know what you have to do than to see on the leaderboard or hear it from the crowd."

Webb said she'd also be paying attention to Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez, whose 66 brought her to 134.

"She's been playing well the last eight months," Webb said. "She's definitely in the hunt to win. I'm sure she'll be hungry to win as well."

Lopez's round was highlighted by three straight birdies after her only bogey of the day, that on the par-4 16th when she missed an 8-footer for par.

She followed up with a 5-footer at No. 17, a tap-in on No. 18 and, after making the turn, a 10-footer at No. 1. Birdies at Nos. 6 and 7 brought her to three strokes behind Robbins.

"I missed the cut at Rochester and it was because of putting," Lopez said. "I went home and practiced, tried to build my confidence. I had to get the speed down. It feels comfortable now.

"I always felt if I wasn't hitting the ball well, I need to hit balls. Putting is what I've been focusing on after my rounds. I'm going to the putting green today."

MEN: Sampras aims for fourth title

(From 1C)

"I made up my mind after the match right away that that was going to be my last match," Stich said, after playing one of the most compelling matches of the tournament.

"I just said, 'Thanks for making it exciting.' Obviously I would have loved to win, but he played his part, and he played great. He brought the best out of me, and that's what I was hoping for this match, to feel that atmosphere."

Sampras beat Pioline in straight sets at the 1993 U.S. Open final, and has won all seven of their matches, dropping only three sets along the way. Pioline, the first Frenchman to reach the Wimbledon final since Yvon Petra won in 1946, didn't sound too confident about upsetting Sampras.

"I'm tired of this player," Pioline said. "But he's not a machine."

Woodbridge wasn't so sure. When someone began a question, saying Sampras is human, Woodbridge said, "Not by much."

Sampras' performance gave Pioline little reason to be hopeful.

"I couldn't play any better," said Sampras, who had 10 aces and 23 service winners. "I've been getting better with each match. I don't remember a Wimbledon that I've served as well as I have this year."

Unbroken in 97 straight service games from his first set of the tournament until early in the third set against Woodbridge, Sampras served so sublimely that the Australian considered himself lucky to get his racket on returns. And when Woodbridge did return serves, Sampras raced to the net so quickly there was little opportunity for a rally.

"He was coming up with volleys a couple of inches inside the line," Woodbridge said. "He just wasn't giving me the chances on any of the second shots to do anything."

They began the match under a sky the color of a nasty welt on three sides of Centre Court, with the sun poking through a patch of blue on the other side. Sampras closed out the first set in 30 minutes, then served a pair of aces and a service winner while taking the first game of the second set before the inevitable rain came in one of the wettest of Wimbledons.

After nearly an hour's interruption, Sampras broke Woodbridge immediately upon their return and closed out the second set in only 24 minutes. Though Woodbridge was getting beaten badly, he found himself perversely enjoying the experience.

"It was a pleasure to be out there playing against him today," Woodbridge said. "Not many people get to appreciate how good a player he is because they're not on the court with him. I, at least, got to see that side of it."

Woodbridge has made his mark in tennis as half of the "Woodies," one of the greatest doubles teams in history. They're into the semis in pursuit of their fifth straight Wimbledon title, and have won the doubles twice at the Australian Open and twice at the U.S. Open.

As a singles player, the 37th-ranked Woodbridge never had reached the semifinals in a major before this tournament. His goal for the year is to crack the top 20, a modest aspiration compared to Sampras' desire to retain the No. 1 spot for the fifth straight year.

Though Sampras certainly has more power and greater skills, it was the relentless manner in which he competed for virtually every point that so impressed Woodbridge. Nothing illustrated that more than the way Sampras scrambled to his feet from the slippery, threadbare turf after falling during a rally at 30-love with Woodbridge serving in the first game of the third set.

Sampras rolled over, got up and kept the rally going with four more shots, finally stabbing a winning volley against the awed and exasperated Woodbridge.

"He was up and running and on to one of those famous running forehands straightaway," Woodbridge said. "That was the type of thing that I was up against today.

"I felt, 'Oh, no. Can you give me something? At that stage, give me a couple of free points, give me something for nothing.' And he wasn't going to do that."

So intense was Sampras that he scolded himself for the mildest of lapses, such as failing to put away an easy volley even while leading 40-love in a game.

Sampras had won 88 straight service games going into this match. He won nine more in a row when he went to serve with a 2-1 lead in the third set. At 30-30, a man in the crowd yelled, "C'mon, Pete, before we get rained on." Maybe that spooked Sampras, because he lost the next two points, ending one of the best serving runs of his career.

Annoyed at himself, he didn't let that lapse faze him long. He held the rest of the way and easily closed out the tiebreaker.

Sampras welcomed the day off he has before the final, saying he was a little drained from the past week's rain-plagued matches.

"Mentally, it's up and down," Sampras said. "You get psyched to play and then it rains for 10 minutes. So I've played every day since Monday, and my body could use a day off."

WOMEN: Hingis faces Novotna

nice to see serve-and-volleyers against baseliners. Hopefully, it will bring the best out of us."

Hingis' best is very good. She's 43-1 this year, with her only loss to Iva Majoli last month in the French Open final.

The Swiss sensation became the youngest Grand Slam champion in this century when she won the Australian Open in January. Now she's the youngest finalist at Wimbledon since Charlotte "Lottie" Dodd won the title in 1887 at 15.

Although Hingis hates grass, she appreciates the importance of Wimbledon. After all, she's named for Martina Navratilova, who won the tournament nine times.

"She just loved Wimbledon," Hingis said. "Hopefully, I will love it one day too."

Novotna's fondness for the place might hinge on Saturday's result. She wants to be remembered for a jubilant smile instead of tears.

TOUR: Riis faces challenge from Ullrich

(From 1C)

ning from 1991-95 before faltering last year.

Indurain replaced Greg LeMond as the Tour's top rider after LeMond won for the third time in 1990. LeMond has been out of the sport for three years after being diagnosed with a muscular disorder.

Indurain retired Jan. 2, saying he had dedicated enough time to professional cycling.

A big challenge for the eventual champion could come from Abraham Olano from Spain, who was billed as Indurain's successor. Indurain thought so highly of Olano that Indurain worked to protect Olano's lead at the 1995 World Championships.

The French have their hopes on Laurent Jalabert, ranked No. 1 on the basis of victories and high placings — even in smaller races — and Richard Virenque, the top climber of last year's Tour and third overall.

Others top contenders include Yevgeny Berzin of Russia, who beat Indurain at the Tour of Italy one year; Ivan Gotti of Italy, this year's Tour of Italy winner, and Peter Luttenberger of Austria, last year's surprise fifth-place finisher.

The U.S. Postal Service, the only American team on the Tour, has some top riders in Vyacheslav Yekimov of Russia, Jean-Cyril Robin of France and George Hincapie of the United States.

Chris Boardman of Britain is a speed specialist who specializes in time trials.

The opening time trial is about 4.5 miles around Rouen. The first stage is 119 miles. The second stage begins on the northern coast at St. Valery-en-Caux and sends the riders south. They'll hit the Pyrenees by Bastille Day, July 14.

After the Pyrenees and a rest day, the second part begins with a time trial at St. Etienne July 18. Then it's off to the Alps and a quick trip through Switzerland.

A few more stages over eastern France and the riders head to Disneyland Paris, where there's a 39.1-mile time trial on the next-to-last day.

When the cyclists cross the finish line on the Champs Elysees in Paris, they will have completed 21 stages and about 2,455 mles.

TRADE: Vaughn glad to get opportunity

the season as San Diego's left fielder and leadoff hitter. Henderson, baseball's career steals leader, has been on the trading block since Vaughn accepted arbitration in December, but is on a hot streak that relegated Vaughn to the bench.

"I'm happy because he's happy," said Padres third baseman Ken Caminiti, who became close friends with Vaughn, who was acquired in a trade with Milwaukee last July 31. "He gets to play every day. Of course, I want him as a teammate. He's a great player and he's capable of doing a lot of things. He just never really got jump-started here."

Bruce Bochy said trying to keep Vaughn and Henderson happy "has been the most difficult task I've had as manager. Both continued to work hard, but it's hard to be fair to both because you can't put both of them out there."

Vaughn is batting .224 with 10 home runs and 24 RBIs. Going into Friday's game, Henderson was hitting .281 with 11 stolen bases and an on-base percentage of .442.

On April 22, the Padres sent highly touted Japanese pitcher Hideki Irabu to New York along with three minor leaguers for injured outfielder Ruben Rivera, pitcher Rafael Medina and $3 million.

The trade talks might have been speeded because Yankees left fielder Tim Raines, on the disabled list since June 2 with a strained left hamstring, had another setback in Tampa, Fla. Raines was taking ground balls in the outfield at the Yankees' training complex when he felt something. He was scheduled to play in a game Sunday, but that has been pushed back, according to manager Joe Torre.

Rogers, who threw a perfect game for Texas in 1994, and Duncan have both been in Steinbrenner's doghouse.

Rogers never got into a groove after leaving the Rangers as a free agent and signing a $20 million, four-year contract with the Yankees in 1996. Duncan led the Yankees with a .340 average last year, but Steinbrenner ordered him removed as the starting second baseman earlier this year after he made some bad defensive plays and struggled at the plate.

Coincidentally, Irabu will take over the starting spot vacated when Rogers (4-4, 5.90 ERA) was demoted to the bullpen on June 14. Irabu is scheduled to make his first start Thursday against Detroit at Yankee Stadium.

Vaughn, acquired by San Diego for the stretch run last season, signed a $15 million, three-year deal in February.

Vaughn had 41 homers and 117 RBIs last year, with 31 homers and 95 RBIs coming with the Brewers. He hit only .206 in the last two months after being traded to San Diego.

Former pharmacist has share of lead at Kroger

By Terry Kinney
Associated Press Writer

MASON, Ohio — Bob Eastwood took a week off and rediscovered his golf game. David Ojala made a more startling find.

"I don't want to jinx it," Ojala said, refusing to disclose his secret after shooting a 6-under 65 to tie Eastwood in the first round of the Kroger Senior Classic on Friday.

Whatever it was, it had something to do with getting Ojala's swing "on plane," as he put it, and left him, at least for one day, a co-leader in a $1 million Senior PGA Tour event.

"Hopefully, things will get better for me the rest of the year," Ojala said.

Ojala, a provisional qualifier playing in only his eighth tournament in three years, was playing a qualifying round Monday when he learned that he would get into the Kroger because Gene Littler withdrew.

The former pharmacist and bond broker started Friday's round with a bogey but then put together five birdies on the front nine and finished with two more on the back.

Eastwood had skipped the U.S. Senior Open last week to freshen his game.

"I needed a break after eight weeks in a row," Eastwood said. "I felt a lot more relaxed this week. I got off to a good start today and hit a lot of good shots. The hole just kept getting in the way."

Jay Sigel and Jimmy Powell were one stroke back, followed at 67 by Al Geiberger, Calvin Peete, Hubert Green and John Schroeder.

Geiberger, just back from taking three weeks off, started with a bogey and then hit the cart path on No. 2. But he ended up with a birdie there after his tee shot bounded 305 yards.

"After three weeks off, you're either rested or rusty. I started off rusty," Geiberger said. "That bogey got my attention. Sometimes that will wake you up, give you a jolt and make you more aggressive. All bogeys aren't bad."

Graham Marsh, who won the Open a week ago and the Nationwide Championship the week before that, was in a group at 2-under 69. Marsh has a chance to become the first player to win three consecutive events on the senior tour since Lee Trevino in 1992.

Eastwood, 51, joined the senior tour a year ago and got his first victory this May in the rain-shortened Bell Atlantic Classic.

"I like being there at the top," said Eastwood, who was all alone until joined later by Ojala, one of the late finishers. "I'd like to get stuck on that number for two more days. That would be just fine with me."

Ethiopian women breaks record in 10,000-meters

By Stephan Nasstrom
AP Sports Writer

OSLO, Norway — Haile Gebrselassie broke the 10,000-meter world record with a time of 26 minutes, 31.32 seconds, in the Bislett Games Grand Prix track and field meet Friday.

Less than an hour after the 24-year-old Ethiopian chopped almost seven seconds off the previous record, Morocco's Hicham El Guerrouj missed the world mile mark by only .51 seconds, clocking 3:44.90.

The pacemakers dropped out early in the 10,000, leaving Gebrselassie alone against the clock with about 6,000 meters remaining. But the near sellout crowd of about 20,000 gave him the support he needed.

"It wasn't easy," he said. "I was a little afraid when the pacemakers left after 4K. But the fans helped me. They were in front of me.

"In the last few laps I knew I would set the world record. I still had some power left in my legs at the finish line."

Salah Hissou of Morocco set the old mark of 26:38.08 last year at Brussels.

It was the 51st world record at the stadium, and the third in the men's 10,000 since 1993.

The 1996 Olympic champion and 1993 and 1995 world champion, Gebrselassie also set the 10,000 record of 26:43.53 in 1995 before Hissou broke it last year.

Meet director Svein Arne Hansen said the race had been planned since October 1996.

"Sprinters have dominated international track and field," Hansen said. "At Bislett we have a tradition in middle and long distances. So we have planned this opportunity to prove that the fans lvoe longer distances."

Hansen said Gebrselassie would receive a $50,000 bonus for breaking the world record.

In winning the "Dream Mile," El Guerrouj just missed Noureddine Morceli's world record of 3:44.39 set in 1993.

Allen Johnson of the United States and Cathy Freeman of Australia clocked world seasonal bests in other events.

Running in perfect weather conditions, Johnson won the 110-meter hurdles in 13.14. The 1995 world and 1996 Olympic champion, Johnson had recorded the previous fastest time this year of 13.17 Wednesday at Lausanne, Switzerland.

"It was a good race," Johnson said. "I'm in very good shape. After my 13.17 in Lausanne, I now have the two fastest times this year, so I'm confident that I'm getting into my best shape in time for the World Championships" (at Athens, Greece, next month).

Freeman, the Olympic silver medalist, won the women's 400 in 49.39.

"I didn't think I was that sharp," Freeman said.

Canada's Donovan Bailey, the 100-meter Olympic champion and world record-holder, switched to the 200 and won in a wind-aided 20.14.

"This is not my event," Bailey said. "I just wanted to see what I could do tonight.

"I'm sorry about the wind, but that's one of the things you can't do anything about. I never thought the last 80 would take so long."

Bailey's previous fastest time was 20.39 and he said this race told him that he definitely can run a sub-20.

"I think I can do that in my next 200," he said.

The Swiss meet is part of the Golden Four, a series of Europe's top Grand Prix meets with the other stops at Brussels, Berlin and Zurich.

Athletes going unbeaten through the series collect more than 44 pounds of gold bars in addition to prize money at each meet.

Technology Drives New 'Vette Sounds

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. _ By now, everyone's had a chance to look — or at least see a picture — of Chevrolet's all-new Corvette. One of the hottest sports cars to roll off an assembly line this year, the '97 Corvette is a technological wonder in many regards. But as impressive as it looks and drives, it also has a ``lean and mean'' sound system'' that lives up to the 'Vette reputation. Part of the Corvette technology is a state-of-the-art Bose music system specially fitted for the new vehicle.

Pure Listening Pleasure

``The Corvette is an icon which represents pure driving pleasure,'' said Brandon Westley, general manager of the OEM division at Bose. ``We are very pleased that a Bose music system is now standard equipment in the new Corvette as it is only natural that a great ride and superb musical performance go hand-in-hand.'' For the fifth-generation Corvette, Bose designed a new system and reproduction technology that utilizes the latest advancements in lightweight design and materials. ``There is only one other vehicle with this technology,'' said Westley, ``the new, fifth generation, $30 million Gulfstream V business jet.'' The music system uses Bose's unique Timpani speaker technology, which provides tremendous bass reproduction, dynamic range and power handling from a lightweight and thin profile speak. Bose Timpani woofers are mounted in the doors of the Corvette, effectively turning them into powered bass modules.

Power in the Placement

Instead of placing the speakers in the rear of the vehicle — where conventional woofers would be mounted — the performance of door-mounted speakers is significantly better. The low profile Timpani woofer is eight inches in diameter, yet is thin enough to fit within the tight confines of a packed door. Not only is it much liter than an equivalently sized woofer, it can also handle more continuous power. Like all Bose automotive systems, this is acoustically tailored for the vehicle. Working with prototypes and specifications from the automotive engineers, Bose engineers were able to make thousands of acoustic measurements of the vehicle and then design the system around the Corvette's interior and materials. The Bose system for the Corvette includes two speakers and a patented 100-watt, two-state modulation amplifier in each door. In addition to the Timpani woofer, there is a 3.5-inch hybrid tweeter/midrange speaker to provide the rest of the musical spectrum, add realism, and enhance the acoustical image in the car. In each of the rear quarter panels, a 6.5-inch wide-range speaker is installed and precisely angled to insure lifelike sound at all frequencies.

Getting the Signal

The new Corvette also features Bose's signal processing module that is located under the steering column. It includes active equalization networks, signal processing and compression circuitry. The active equalization network electronically tailors the music system's frequency response to the passenger cabin's acoustic environment. The result is lifelike musical performance and accurate tonal balance, said Westley. So the next time you're marveling at the how hot the new Corvette looks or how they were able to put so many horses under the hood, just remember that's only part of the story. Even if you never get to drive a new Corvette out of the showroom, at least turn on the radio and enjoy the sounds of new technology.

Nissan Sentra scores in comforts and economy for a small car

By Bob Plunkett
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

When comparing the current array of subcompact sedans designed for economy in both purchase price and the long-term cost of operation, one particular label pops to the top of any list.

Nissan, it seems, provides an extremely likable 4-door design with Sentra.

This curvy car with interior space for five and fuel numbers that reach as high as 40 mpg measures smaller than Nissan's flagship mid-size Maxima and the compact Altima.

Park a Sentra between these two larger sedans and you may detect styling cues borrowed from both — particularly overall fluidity in the design and softly rounded comers.

Previous iterations of Sentra, which traces back through three generational issues at Nissan, seemed unremarkable, evoking unflattering concepts like boxy, cramped, sluggish and small.

Yet at mid-year in 1995, Nissan's subcompact sedan reappeared in a fourth generational design with top-to-bottom revisions. Compared with the former model, Sentra's wheelbase was increased by four inches and its platform widened by another inch so riders gained interior space.

The new design wrapped Sentra in sensuously smooth sheetmetal. It measured larger, performed better and actually felt bigger than the dimensions of a subcompact would suggest.

For 1997 issues, Sentra extends all of the improvements effected in 1995 and still manages to hold a hard line on prices, which begin around $12,000.

At a glance, you could easily mistake Sentra for the larger Altima. A strong C-pillar statement flows forward into an expanse of glass that meets the sharp slant of Sentra's front hood. Curved headlamp clusters highlight the front, while at the rear in a blunt tail treatment the lamps wrap around each side.

Drive a Sentra, as I did in a week's worth of home tests, and you too may discover that its stylish exterior shape is only the first of many assets.

Climb aboard, and we'll go for a spin.

As you settle into the front bucket, note that both front seats feature contoured styling and concealed pelvic and lumbar arch support elements which work in concert to stem body fatigue. Seat upholstery, ranging from woven or knit fabrics to fancy velour in higher trim editions, looks sharp and feels good too.

Also, check out the amount of room you get for head, shoulders, knees and legs. With Sentra's wheelbase of 99.8 inches and a platform that's 66.6 inches wide, riders end up with plenty of room.

Specifically, in the rear seat there's more than 32 inches for knees and legs, plus shoulder room of 53 inches and 36.5 inches for head space.

Now buckle up and we'll try some pavement tricks.

As we power up and move out, Sentra draws on an efficient 4-cylinder engine, compact in 1.6-liter format with four valves in each cylinder and twin cams on top. It produces 1 15 hp and musters enough torque so you feel a kick in the pedal when moving through lower gears.

Off-the-line acceleration feels snappy with a 5-speed, although most buyers pick a Sentra equipped with optional 4-speed electronic automatic shifter. Tests using the automatic show that it's friendly, smooth and efficient, but Sentra s stick-shift zippiness diminishes slightly, as do the fuel economy numbers.

Sentra performs as an efficient set of wheels, by the way, scoring as high as 40 mpg with the manual transmission.

It also stocks a number of safety assets, beginning with a chassis which incorporates fore and aft crush zones to absorb impact forces from crashes. Steel beams in each door guard against side crunches, while the dash design conceals airbags for both front riders.

Still, the most significant suspension contribution comes at the rear, where Sentra uses a multi-link beam borrowed from Maxima. The compact form of this beam permits the extension of Sentra's wheelbase, which in turn generates more rear seat room and a larger trunk.

Power rack and pinion steering puts a lively snap in this car's wheels -you'll appreciate it most in the curvy stuff, as Sentra performs with an assurance that makes it seem almost sporty.

My original tests of Sentra in various trim editions occurred over rolling Texas back routes surrounding suburban lakes northwest of Dallas. Then I spent a week living out of a Sentra GXE, the trim version which accounts for a majority of all sales.

That Sentra, rigged with popular equipment, lists for less than $16,000 with automatic transmission aboard.

This basic Sentra also includes convenience items like tilting steering column, tinted glass, rear window defogger and secondary power point.

Sentra XE adds air conditioning, power steering and AM-FM stereo sound with a cassette deck, plus intermittent windshield wipers, remote releases for fuel and trunk lids, and dual exterior mirrors.

The best-selling GXE Sentra packs extra equipment such as cruise control, power windows and door locks, a rear seatback that splits and folds to increase trunk cargo space, as well as exterior bodyside moldings.

An ultimate edition — Sentra GLE — covers seats in plush velour upholstery, then installs a remote keyless entry device, theft-deterrent system, tachometer and larger tires with alloy wheels.

Options for Sentra GLE include a power sunroof and 4-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock system.

Other options for all models range from a compact disc player and 3-disc changer to floor mats and a rear spoiler.

Loaded with all options, Sentra GLE totals to $19,000.

Sleek & Smooth: Eagle Talon coupe

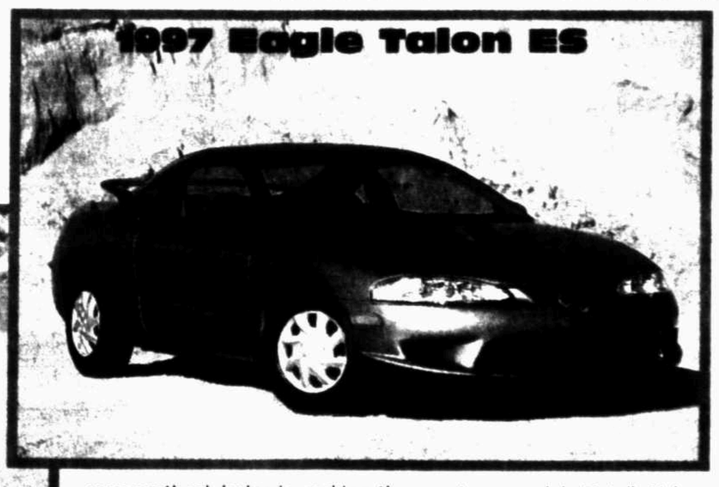
By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

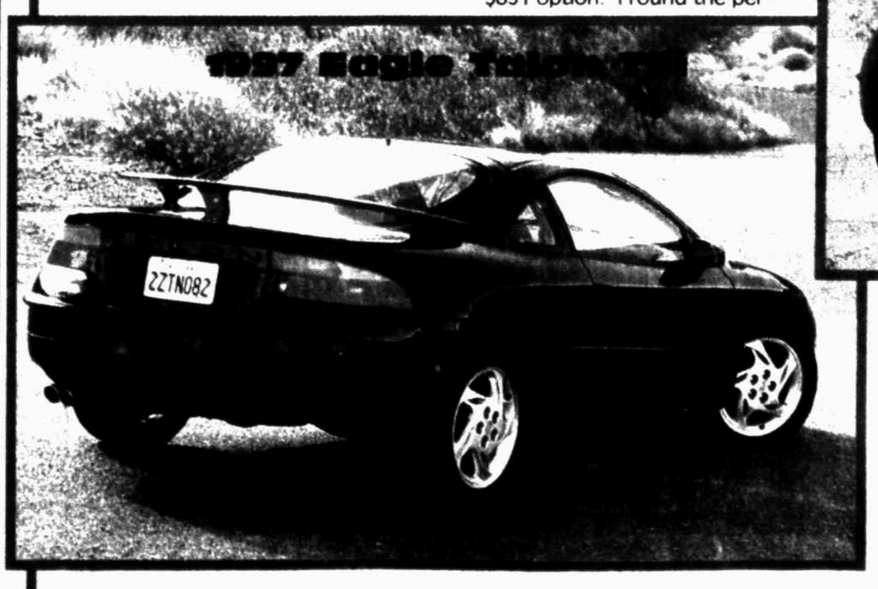
Wheelin'&Dealin'

It seems that the Eagle marque is the Rodney Dangerfield of the automotive industry. With last year's merger of the Chrysler-Plymouth and Jeep-Eagle divisions, Eagle's demise seemed almost sealed. However, Chrysler has promised a new replacement for the flagging Eagle Vision sedan when the LH four doors are replaced in '98. A coupe that has been largely overlooked in the Eagle carline is the front drive Eagle Talon. Launched in 1988 as an import fighter, this attractive coupe was one of the first models built by the then Diamond-Star Motor Company in Normal, Illinois (now called Mitsubishi Motor Manufacturing of America). The Mitsubishi Eclipse coupe is its mechanical twin, built in the same plant. I recently test drove a Talon ESi to see if it could still hold its own.

Can This Eagle Fly?

Available in Base, ESi, TSi, and TSI AWD (all wheel drive) equipment packages, the base powertrain is a 2.0L four cylinder engine mated to a five speed manual transmission. I drove a Talon equipped with the four speed automatic, a $891 option. I found the performance of this powertrain to be average, having to put my foot into it in order to get it going upto speed. Buyers desiring more power might consider opting for the five speed manual instead of spending more for the automatic. Handling and performance was nimble, solid and predictable. I never felt unsafe at speed, even in the twisties. Displays and controls are good, with a decent view from the driver's seat. The single piece fold down rear seatback helps in making the most of the limited available cargo space. If you think that you will be able to carry adults in the rear seat — forget it. Consider that space more of a shelf for cargo than for people. Engine compartment fluids are easy to get to but are not clearly marked. My few gripes include: the rear spoiler blocks the visibility out of the rear window, the hatchback has a high liftover height, and the molded cupholders are of limited use.





Talon by the Numbers

Standard safety equipment includes: dual airbags, side impact door beams. Four wheel anti-lock brakes are a $649 option, and traction control is only available as a $266 option on the Talon TSi AWD model. EPA fuel economy ranges from 22 city/33 highway for the base 2.0L four cylinder/five speed manual to 19 city/25 highway for the 2.0L four cylinder turbo/four speed automatic on the TSi AWD model. Retail sticker prices range from $14,059 to $20,271 for the TSi AWD model. Destination charge adds $535. Eagle is offering a $1,500 rebate on the Talon coupe that expires July 7th. Supplies of the car are light, so ask your local dealer to locate and/or order one for you.
