5,000,000 English Workers Strike

ENTIRE NATION PARALYZED BY LABOR'S ACTION

Untold Suffering to Follow Walkouts, Experts Believe

MAY USE TROOPS

Thousands Volunteer To Distribute Food To Children

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—Organized labor of Great Britain is in revolt.

Five million men are backing up the miners' demand for what they consider a living wage and proper working conditions. At midnight a general strike of the industrial workers became effective throughout the country.

This widespread demonstration will unless speedily terminated, cause untold suffering, with the loss of millions in money.

The last hours before the general strike call went forth were anxious ones, thousands of citizens assembled in parliament square and the adjoining streets while within the house, ministers of the crown and former ministers, representing labor, battled in support of their respective contentions.

Premier Baldwin criticised the labor leaders, on the ground that, in ordering the general strike, they were threatening the basis of orderly government and were nearer to proclaiming civil war than Great Britain has been for centuries.

Ramsay MacDonald, the labor leader, said the country faced a situation whose end and evolution not even the keenest observer could visualize.

Sees Divided Authority

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, asserted that if this conflict were fought out to its conclusion, it could only mean the end of parliamentary government or its decisive victory.

From a kind of apathy the people of Great Britain and particularly of London the central point of the struggle, turned to anxious speculation as it became apparent that the negotiations for a settlement were to fail, for even the lowliest citizen realized what a widespread strike of th[illegible] and meant with stoppage of railw[illegible] transportation services, the cessation of all building operations, the possible suspension of shipping, a breakdown in the distribution of food supplies, the rationing of fuel and light, suspension of the newspapers and interference with all business.

The government has made preparations, backed by thousands of volunteers to continue what are known as the vital services, the distribution

Pennsylvania Oil Wanted For State Engineer Instructs

AUSTIN, May 3.—(AP)—Ed Estes, equipment engineer for the state highway department, Tuesday wired to the state board of control which company would receive the contract for furnishing his department lubricating oils for twelve months, he said late today.

Only two companies followed specifications and submitted oils of a paraffine base. Representatives of a number of Texas companies submitting oils of asphalt base have threatened court action should the contracts not be awarded to Texas companies, Roy I. Tennant, a member of the board of control said. Most of the paraffine base oils come from northern mid-continent and Pennsylvania fields.

MISS WICHITA IN HER FIRST SPOTLIGHT BOW

15 Contestants Start At Olympic Monday In Beauty Contest

11 APPEAR AGAIN

Second Showing Tonight; Finals to Be Held Wednesday

A circle of white light on the stage of the Olympic theatre Monday night patterned the first door through which two Wichita Falls girls will step into the greatest brilliance of Galveston's annual beauty revue May 15, 16 and 17.

The spotlight's glare last night opened full tilt on 15 young women, two of whom will be selected Wednesday as "Miss Wichita Falls" and "Miss Wichita County"—and to them will be accorded all the flourishes and emoluments befitting two beauty queens carrying the banners of this section into one of the most famous events of its kind in the nation.

At the Olympic.

It all started at the Olympic where that theatre and the Record News are conducting the city's first bathing girl revue and beauty contest. Elimination work was started last night, four of the original 15 entries being ruled out by the three judges. The remaining 11 will come back Tuesday night for further inspection and six will be eliminated this time. Wednesday night will be the grand finale with the five remaining young women competing for the two premier honors.

These 11 Wichita Falls girls remain in the running for the title of "Miss Wichita Falls" and "Miss Wichita County." Six of them will be eliminated Tuesday night at the Olympic theatre and three more eliminated Wednesday night, leaving the two victors to go to the Galveston revue.

Here they are: Miss Ara Gregg, Miss Alice Darnell, Miss Maudia Mayo, Miss Zetta Frizzell, Miss Francis Rutledge, Miss Mary Margaret Lewis, Miss Gladys Engle, Miss Carmel Ferris, Miss Marguerite Wooten, Miss Mary Banks, Miss Francis Oden.

Insofar as prizes are concerned, they will be about on a parity. Both will go to Galveston with all expenses paid by the Olympic and the Record News. They will travel in style befitting queens and will have official recognition—one as "Miss Wichita Falls" and the other as "Miss Wichita County." At Galveston, of course, they will compete with representatives from 40 or more cities of Texas and nearby states, as well as with three or four representatives from Cuba, Mexico and Canada.

Prize List Arranged.

A valuable prize list has been arranged, however, and to the prize winners will go some suitable wearing apparel.

Bathing suits of all colors flashed out on the stage of the Olympic when the first appearances were made Monday. The first two girls to enter wore masks and declined to doff these or reveal their names. They were accordingly ruled out by the contest managers, leaving 13 others. All of these sailed in regally to be greeted by applause from the crowd. They appeared individually at first and later were swept by the spotlight as they stood in line.

The three judges, all prominent business men here, were in the audience where they took notes and made their selections. Their decision was made by ballot and the results announced from the stage a few minutes after the revue closed.

Big Crowd Coming.

A capacity house is expected at the Olympic tonight and Wednesday when the affair will be wound up.

As an extra added attraction Wednesday night, a public award will be made of the Venus Art prize, also being offered by the Olympic and the Record News to the girl most closely approximating the physical measurements of Miss Faye Lamphier, "Miss America" of the Atlantic City beauty pageant. This is to be a handsome green bronze statue modeled from a larger one presented to Miss Lamphier by Paramount pictures.

First aid measures were resorted to after the wire had been cut and Allen's body lowered, but failed.

How the fatal circuit was established has not been explained.

Texas Loses $90,000 Each Month By Bond Stagnation

Investment Bankers Pass Up State Securities

DALLAS, May 3—(AP)—Texas tax payers are losing about $3,000 daily or $90,000 a month special session of the legislature for all time delayed in calling a to validate bond issues cast in doubt by the Archer county suit, investment bankers of Dallas announced Monday as their conservative estimate.

If the delay is prolonged until the regular session of the legislature next January, this actual cost in dollars and cents will run well over $108,000,000, not including the great damage to the credit of the municipal, county and district governments in the future, it was said.

These figures on the cost of delay are based on reduced market prices that bond issues all over Texas are suffering where any sale is at all possible, while hundred of thousands of other bond issues are lying idle on the market with no bidders at all.

While the supreme court decision in the Archer county suit was directed at road district bonds, every county and municipal issue in Texas including school bonds, street, sewer, water works and other improvements bonds is suffering from the same disturbed condition inthe market.

The public improvement bond market, as far as Texas is concerned, has been thrown into a chaotic condition, the largest factor being pyschologicial, local investment bankers point out, and nothing short of statewide action by the legislature at the earliest possible date can restore confidence.

The city of Corsicana, as one example, will offer $325,000 worth of improvement bonds shortly. Advance queries from Texas brokers brought this response Monday from one of the largest trust compahies in the east: "Not interested in Corsicana or any other Texas issue in present state of affairs."

"Passing up all Texas issues until situation is cleared up," another firm wired Monday to Dallas investment bankers. These Corsicana bonds are not created under a road district and are as valid legally as ever, but will undoubtedly suffer from the "pysochological" disturbance in the entire Texas bond market unless the legislature acts before the issue is placed on the market.

Due to the virtual withdrawal from Texas of out-of-state buyers representing a buying market of $40,000,000, competition in the purchase of all Texas issues has slumped to the point where tax payers are getting about 2 per cent less than the value of the securities.

The city of San Angelo about two weeks ago voted $500,000 worth of school bonds and this issue, local bankers declare, will realize between $10,000 and $15,000 less than it would with the situation cleared up. Other striking instances are noted over Texas.

"The investment bankers of Texas resent highly the charge that they are using the disturbed condition in the market to beat down the value of Texas securi-

Weeks Wires Sartin Of Change In Court Injunction

Action that, it is believed, will enable work to begin immediately on the free bridge across Red river was taken n Austin Monday, according to word yesterday from Fred Weeks, local attorney retained by Wichita county to represent it in the litigation now pending. A message from Mr. Weeks received by County Judge B. D. Sartin Monday afternoon stated that the injunction decree granted last week by Judge George Calhoun had been modified to permit the building operations.

Details of the transactions in Austin were not known here, but Judge Sartin said that Mr. Weeks' message gave assurance that work could be started immediately. A special meeting of the county commissioners court has been called for Wednesday, Judge Sartin said, at which time Mr. Weeks will be here for a conference with the commissioners and officials of the Austin Brothers Bridge company, contractors on the job.

A permanent injunction was granted last week by Judge George Calhoun of the 53rd district court in favor of Harris, et al, owners and operators of the Devol toll bridge with which the new free bridge will compete.

3000-Foot Crash Kills One, Hurts 2 Plane Occupants

CORPUS CHRISTI, May 3.—(AP) Mrs. J. D. McCaskill was killed, Adolph Emmert was probably fatally injured and Pat Love, pilot, was injured when a commercial plane went into a tail spin at a height of about 2,000 feet over the outskirts of the city this evening.

The plane almost buried itself in slimy mud which had been dredged from the turning basin. Rescuers were forced to crawl on hands and knees for about two blocks in order to reach the scene, and it was more than an hour after the plane had fallen before the first of the victims could be put in a waiting ambulance.

It was necessary to drag the victims to the ambulance in rudely constructed stretchers, the stretcher bearer floundering about in waist deep mud and crawling where the surface was too thin to bear their weight.

COPS UP FOR MORE STUDY

City Dads In Secretive Mood As They Talk Things Over

The status of Wichita Falls' police department and next steps to be taken in the possible enlargement of the city hall were studied Monday night by the city council in star chamber session folowing the regular meeting of the commissioners. It was not an executive session, Mayor R. E. Shepherd said in clearing the room, but simply one in which the council wanted to talk over some matters itself.

The police department, which has been the subject for considerable council debate in the past few weeks, came up for some additional attention in which vociferous arguments arose several times. The exact nature of these was not disclosed, however.

No One Talks

While none of the city officials have volunteered direct information concerning steps being taken for expansion of space for the city hall, it is known that something is to be done in a short time. The present quarters have long been overcrowded, and additional room is to be provided whereby scattered offices of the municipality may be brought under one roof.

The water department, for example, rents quarters in the basement of a downtown office building and the health and inspection departments use space in the court house. A considerable saving can be affected, it is thought, by enlarging the city hall and providing the needed room there.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE PROVIDED BY HUGE SUMS

Three Issues to Care For Streets, Sewers And Water Extensions

JUNE 5 ELECTION

Ordinance Passes First, Second And Third Readings

An election to obtain authorization for three bond issues totalling $1,450,000 for water, street, and sewer extension in Wichita Falls was ordered for June 5, by the city council at its meeting Monday night. The major issue to be voted on will be for expansion and renovation of the water supply system, involving an expenditure of $1,200,000, as recommended by the water committee of the chamber of commerce in its report a week ago. The second issue is for $150,000 for street improvement, and the third an issue of $100,000 to provide funds for needed sewer extensions.

Ordinances authorizing the election on the three issues were all read and passed with an emergency clause on their first, second and third readings.

As originally contemplated the election was for authorization only of the water expansion issue of $1,200,000. The other two issues of $150,000 and $100,000 for street and sewer extension were determined upon by the council, subject to ratification at election, upon the representation by Street Commissioner J. W. Hunt and Sanitary Commissioner J. H. Patton that funds for extensions during the coming year were practically nil, and that the need for such was increasing almost constantly.

Election officials named by the council were for the court house, J. N. Prothro, presiding judge; W. S. Abbott, J. M. Bland, and J. M. Williams, assistant judges; city hall, F. B. Mashburn, presiding judge, P. H Leath, R. W. McCulloch and Lou Jennie, assistant judges.

Strike In England Hikes Rubber Cost

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The possibility that London shipments of crude rubber to this country for May delivery may be interfered with seriously in the event of a prolonged general strike in Britain caused an advance of seventy points and an excited rush of buying during the last few minutes of trading on the rubber exchange today.

May, which is the first delivery month, has sold as low as 49.10, but advanced steadily and at the close of the market brokers were bidding at fifty cents with no offerings at this price. Spots quoted today at 50.30 are expected to go to a sharp premium is the strike program is carried out.

"HER MAN"

--By Beatrice Burton--

READ THIS FIRST:

SYLVIA STARR has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS for a year when he asks her to free him, because he's fallen in love with her chum, FAY SHIRLEY.

Heartbroken, Sylvia gives him up, much to the satisfaction of her AUNT AGONY, the shrewd old maid who reared her. Aunt Agony says Ranny will never be true to any woman for very long. Her opinion seems to be correct, too. For suddenly he drops Fay and Sylvia marries him, after all.

Their married life is not happy, to start with. For Ranny hates to be "tied down" and gradually he returns to his bachelor habits—having love affair after love affair, and gambling and drinking with his old cronies. He spends so much money on himself that Sylvia has to give music lessons to keep things going.

When the baby is born, Sylvia has to turn the dark little breakfast-nook of their tiny flat into a bedroom for him. And after he finally dies, she refuses ever to go into the place again, sure that the baby would have lived if he had had enough fresh air and sunshine. She blames Ranny because he bought a new car with the money he should have paid down on a house, she thinks. And she broods over it so much that she has a nervous breakdown, and refuses to live with him again.

But when she's better he comes to see her at Aunt Agony's house, and assures her that she's the only woman in the world for him, and promises that things will be different if she'll return to him. At last she does, and they buy a little house, where the second baby is born. Ranny pays attention to his work with his father's real estate firm, and Sylvia begins to think her troubles are over.

Then she has a letter from BABS DELANO, an old friend, who is coming to town to take charge of a branch library. The minute she sees Ranny she is attracted by him, and tells Sylvia that he's the handsomest man she's ever seen. Sylvia begins to feel sorry that she asked Babs to stay at their house, for even a few days. Especially as Ranny has to go to his mother's house to sleep, while she's there.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER I.

Babs dropped down into a low, flowered chair in front of the merry grate fire that crackled and sang in the grate. She took out a green enamel vanity case and carefully rouged and powdered her face.

Then she leaned back, crossed her silk-stockinged legs and lit a cigarette.

Sylvia could scarcely believe her eyes, as she watched her. She couldn't believe that this handsome, worldly creature was really the plain Babs Delano she had known at library school four years ago.

"Babs, if I hadn't been expecting you today, I'd never have known you," she exclaimed, "You've changed so."

Babs puffed a long gray plume of smoke at the ceiling.

"All women have changed the last four or five years, Sylvia," she said slowly, "We've all taken to doing a lot of things that we shouldn't do—painting our face, smoking cigarettes, taking a cocktail now and then, and other things."

Sylvia shrugged her shoulders, "I don't smoke or drink," she answered, rather sharply, "I guess I'm old-fashioned—" She frowned, as she wondered what the other things were that Babs didn't mention. She wondered if one of them was falling in love with other women's husbands.

Ten minutes afterward she saw that that was exactly what Babs was doing.

When Ranny, in a clean shirt and his newest necktie, came down to supper, she turned her chair toward his and smiled at him, flirtatiously.

"So I don't look like my photograph, Ranny?" she asked him so coyly that Sylvia could have slapped her face. She had always liked Babs very much, but suddenly she hated her as only a mild, gentle woman knows how to hate.

Ranny shook his head. "You have two eyes, one nose, and one mouth," he said, "so has the face in the photograph. That's the only resemblance I can see."

Babs rose, with a silken swish of her skirts, and picked up her photograph where it was standing, propped against a silver vase. Suddenly she tore it in two, and threw the pieces down on the dancing flames in the grate.

"That picture was taken when I was twenty," she pouted, "and I declare it makes me look older than I am now, at twenty-four."

At twenty-four. Sylvia stared at her in blank amazement. She knew that Babs was thirty, if she was a day.

She saw then what had happened. Babs had fallen in love with Ranny, with the suddenness and recklessness of an old maid when she finally does fall in love—and she didn't want him to know that she was older than he was. Hence the fib about her age.

"Oh, the silly things," Sylvia thought looking at her as she leaned toward Ranny with a smile on her mouth. She seemed almost to have forgotten that Sylvia was in the room.

But Ranny didn't think Babs silly evidently. He listened to the flow of small talk that flowed from that smiling mouth, with the smoothness of oil, as if he had never heard anything so entrancing.

"I like the way you look at things, Miss Delano," he said, when the meal was half over, and Babs shook a playful finger at him.

"Now, don't you dare call me 'Miss Delano' again. You call me 'Babs.' I want you to call me 'Babs',' she told him.

After supper Sylvia pulled out a little smoking table, and then wheeled the tea wagon out into the kitchen. As she slipped out of the room, their chairs were drawn close together beside the fire, and their faces were turned toward each other as they talked eagerly.

While she washed the cups and plates, she could hear little bursts of laughter from Babs every now and then, and Ranny's deep voice saying things she couldn't hear. She wondered what they were talking about.

But when she went into the living room, Babs was leaning back in her deep chair, with closed eyes, while Ranny smoked in silence.

"Sleepy, Babs?" she forced herself to ask cheerfully.

Babs opened her eyes and smiled at her, "Awfully sleepy after my journey," she confessed. "But tomorrow I'll be ready for a good time, though."

Sylvia jumped. Ready for a good time, eh? Ah, Babs expected to be entertained then. She hadn't thought of that, when she heard that she was coming.

But the old Babs hadn't been the sort who would want to be given parties and thrills. The old Babs would have settled herself down in a corner with her shell-rimmed glasses and an armful of books, and have been content.

"I hope you're going to find me a beau," the new Babs was saying now, with a coy sidewise glance at Ranny, "I want you to introduce me to some lovely bachelor with lots of money."

Sylvia blushed. The only bachelor she knew was Peter Wilk. He had that showed a great deal of her shoulders, and all of her arms. She filled the room with the odor of the spicy perfume she used, and she talked every minute.

At the table she sat next to Peter. He had hurt his hand and it was bound up in gauze bandages, so she cut his meat for him, leaning so close to him that her hair brushed his cheek.

"You helpless baby," she said to him, giving him one of those coy glances from under her lashes. "You need someone to take care of you. You are the most helpless things in the world—you bachelors."

Peter grinned and looked extremely ill at ease.

"You don't have to feel sorry for Peter, Babs," Sylvia told her sharply. "He has the loveliest sister in the world, who takes such perfect care of him that he's never felt the need of taking a wife, who'd sew on his buttons for him, and put his clothes

"Sarah, What Am I Going to Do?"

lots of money, too—but somehow, she knew that he wouldn't care much for Babs. However—

"Well, I do know a bachelor," she said slowly, "his name is Peter Wilk, and he's rather a dear. I know you'd like him."

Babs nodded her head, with its permanently waved hair. "All right, bring him, I'll do the rest," she said with all the self confidence in the world. There was no doubt that she considered herself something of a siren.

Ranny turned in his chair, and looked first at Sylvia and then at Babs. "Don't let her kid you about Peter Wilks, Babs," he said grinning cheerfully, "he may be a bachelor, and one with money, but he's Sylvia's own special property. He's only waiting for me to die, to step into my shoes."

Sylvia's blush deepened to the dark rose color of a sun-kissed peony. "Why he is not!" she cried, but Babs only laughed easily.

"Let me have a look at him, anyway," she said, "ask him to dinner tomorrow night, and I'll see whether I want him or not."

And so it was that Peter Wilk came back into Sylvia's life.

Peter came to dinner at the Little White House the next night.

It was the first time Sylvia had laid eyes on him for more than a year, and he seemed thinner and taller and more serious to her than ever before.

When she came downstairs and found him standing in front of the fire, he seemed curiously embarrassed. He said "How do you do?" to her as if she were a stranger, but his eyes were the eyes of an old friend and a good friend, just as they had always been.

They asked her how she had been this last year? And she smiled up into them, as if she wanted to tell him how happy she had been, and how happy she was now.

"I've missed you, Peter, all this time," she said to him, and just then Babs came into the room.

Babs had on a black chiffon dress away in camphor balls."

Then she was sorry she had said it. For Peter gave her a quick look that made her realize that he still remembered that day in the woods when he begged her to marry him, and she had refused.

The worst of it is that Babs saw that look of his, too.

"Your Peter Wilk man is in love with you, just as Ranny said he was,' she tod Sylvia accusingly, as they were getting undressed for bed that night, "I don't stand a chance with him when you're around."

There was bitterness in her voice. For what Babs Delano wanted more than anything was a husband—a rich husband. And Peter, who was rich, was her idea of everything she would wish for.

"That's perfect nonsense, Babs," Sylvia naswered sharply, "Peter's an old friend of mine, and nothing more. Don't get wild ideas into your head."

But Babs was a woman of one idea, and she had made up her mind that Peter was in love with Sylvia.

She took to calling him "Sylvia's beau" when he was not around. And Sylvia was powerless to stop her.

"I wish Babs would find a place of her own and go to live in it," she said one night to Ranny, as she made up his bed on the living room couch, "I'm awfully tired of having her around. And I know you are, too, aren't you?"

To her astonishment, Ranny shook his head. "No I don't mind having her around at all," he said calmly. "I enjoy having her here, just the way you enjoy having Wilk around, I suppose."

Sylvia knew then that Babs had been talking to Ranny about her and Peter—and it seemed to her that the goodnight kiss that Ranny gave her a minute later was very abort and cold.

A week later the storm broke. It was on Wednesday night. Peter had come over to play cards, at the Little White House.

At twelve o'clock the game was over and Sylvia went out into the kitchen to make some sandwiches and coffee.

After a few minutes Peter got up and lounged out of the room. When Sylvia wasn't around, Babs made eyes at Ranny, and Peter hated to watch her.

He disliked Babs as any red-blooded man dislikes a woman who throws herself at him. He knew that she was trying to marry him for his money. He knew that she wasn't in love with him, as she pretended to be.

He knew that she was in love with Ranny Phelps.

Too many women in their time had tried to marry Peter for any woman to pull wool over his eyes now. He knew all their pretty tactics and all their little wiles and shams. He was as clever as a veteran fox, was Peter.

He opened the door of Sylvia's little white and blue kitchen, and stepped inside. "Let me help you with those sandwiches," he said to her.

She shook her head at him, her face dead white. She was looking down at her fingers, all blood where she had cut them with the bread-knife she still held in her right hand.

He reached in his pocket for a clean handkerchief and began to bind it around her bleeding hand.

It was at that precise moment that Babs Delano pushed open the door and looked in. She took a long look.

Without a sound she closed the door, and tiptoed back to the living room, where Ranny sat staring into the grate fire as he smoked. The smile on her face was most unbeautiful.

"My beau and your wife are holding hands out in the kitchen," was all she said, but it was enough.

Ranny got up, put down his pipe slowly and carefully, and walked out of the room. He was so blind with his own sudden rage that he didn't see that Peter was bandaging Sylvia's hand. All he saw was that the two of them were standing very close together beside the kitchen table.

"Get out!" he said to Peter with a low growl like thunder in the distance, "Get out of my house!"

Peter looked up at him in blank astonishment.

"Well, just wait until I finish with Sylvia's hand," he said very quietly.

And then Ranny saw that they were not holding hands, after all.

"Huh! I beg your pardon, I thought you were fussing Sylvia," he said grimly, and went out of the room.

But the seed of suspicion had been sown in his soul, just the same.

The next morning Sarah Wilk telephoned for Sylvia.

"I've got to talk to you, and I'm laid up with rheumatism, or I'd come over there," she groaned over the phone. "I won't keep you but ten minutes."

Sylvia left Ranny and Babs over their breakfast and took a cab to Sarahs' home.

She found her smelling of arnica and wintergreen oil and groaning with her pain. "I feel like a old fool, sending for you this way Sylvia, but I've got to talk to you about Peter. You must leave him alone—you mustn't keep bothering him. Last night he came home and walked the floor for one solid hour after he'd been at your house."

Sylvia looked at her with unhappy eyes.

"What do you mean? That he still likes me? she asked, and went on without awaiting for an answer. "Oh, Sarah, what am I going to do? It would be foolish never to see Peter just because he once asked me to marry him. That was ages ago."

The chances were that she'd not see him again for a long time, anyway.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Babs finds a flat and moves into it. She tells Sylvia her version of married life.

ELECTRA

FAIR BY SEVENTH GRADE

The students of the low seventh grade of the Waggoner ward school directed an industrial fair, at the City Garage Saturday afternoon, with the aid of Miss Vera Graham, a teacher. This industrial fair was a strictly geography project, with ten booths, each displaying some Texas product, with the food stuffs being demonstrated during the afternoon. Upon entering the building your attention was attracted to two typical scenes, the first being the complete lay-out of the Texas Oil and Producing company, with their storage tanks and pumping oil wells. This booth was arranged by Raphel Wilson and Clyde McCreary. The next was the Belle of Vernon flour, and the Belle of Wichita flour, with steel constructed mills for each. Ancel Vaught had charge of this booth. The Portland cement which was carefully laid around two small houses, was arranged by Misses Velma Matthews and Helen Scott.

Other Texas products advertised were: cocoa, Campbell's soup, rice, baked beans, crackers, Maxwell House products, the Bert Bean coffee, White Swan products, and many others. Each of the wholesale merchants sent samples for the fair, which were distributed to the customers, with literature urging them to use Texas products.

Some of the students who deserved special credit for the attractive displays are: Lola Faye Seale, Birdie Phillips, Ethel Hamilton, Lois Chambers, Helen Scott, Velma Matthews, Florice Johnson, Juanita Farris, Nina Sanders, Paul Coke, Finley Braceen, Raphel Wilson, Clyde McCreary, Ross Head, Lavonia Cooper, and Miss Graham.

Little Misses Elain Crawford, Mary Berta Lee, Cleo McClendon, Elizabeth Hanks and Dorothy Bell Riggs, all read, while Misses Elain Crawford, sang the "Prisoner Song," and Dorothy Vandeventer, Cleo McClendon, Darline and Pauline Henson sang also.

After the delightful picnic lunch, which was spread, the children enjoyed more swinging until late in the afternoon when the picnic broke up. Those of the class attending were: Little Misses Mae Ethel Byrd, Viola Mae Brasher, Cleo McClendon, Elizabeth Hanks, Maudie Mae Kirchner, Dorothy Bell Riggs, Elain Crawford, Mary Berta Lee, Ethel Mae Adams, Berwin Birch, and Darline Henson, with the guests being Pauline Henson, and Dorothy and Truman Vendeventer, with Mesdames Crawford and Vendeventer.

Mrs. George Ragland chaperoned the party.

AROUND THE CAMPFIRE

The Nalwisti Group of Camp Fire Girls met at the club room. Before the business, the credo, the law and cheer of the fire was given. Under new business the first thing taken up was the adoption of a mascot. Much discussion came up under this but it at length decided to adopt a bull pup, and the president appointed a committee, composed of Misses Thais Newburn, Doris Laughlin and herself to choose the animal and bring him to the next meeting for approval. Plans for the club room were discussed at some length.

SENIORS HAVE HAY RIDE

Members of the senior class enjoyed an old fashioned hay ride when about fifty members of the class gathered at the Methodist church at 7 o'clock and motored to the Beaver Creek bridge, where they were met by Raymond Guthrie, a member of the senior class, with a wagon loaded with hay. Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."—Mrs. [illegible] RIESSINGER, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear, and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose?

Wealth? It's a transient thing that brings its own cares.

Happiness? It's an elusive thing which we keep by giving away.

Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you better health.

Maskat Temple Shrine circus opens.

HOOVER FOR POTASH DEVELOPMENT

SECRETARY HERBERT HOOVER is strong for government aid in exploring for sources of potash in the southwest. Senator Sheppard of Texas obtained an appropriation of $2,500,000 for research work for five years. His bill was sent to the house. There it was reduced from $550,000 to $100,000 a year, and then refferred to a sub-committee for redrafting.

This fund would be expended by the department of commerce and interior. Secretary Hoover was responsible for the reduction to meet the objections of the president and the budget bureau. He is for the research work. He told those concerned that the United States has the largest potential potash field in Texas, New Mexico and Utah in the world, and that the country take steps to free itself from the Franco-German potash monopoly, wherein the German government fixes the price for the United States.

Asked why private capital had not developed the land, the secretary of commerce said that private interest feared competition from foreign sources. Otherwise private capital would not go in on a heavy scale until the richness of the beds is demonstrated.

Representative Claude Hudspeth is authority for the statement that in one place in South Texas potash of 18 percent is found at a depth of 800 feet. Representatives of the bureau of mines said the German potash ranges from eight to 11 percent and is profitably produced from a depth of 3,000 feet.

Those who know are fond of telling their friends that the potash deposits of Texas are in lands controlled by the university. If potash development is ever made the order of the day in Texas, the royalties that will flow into the permanent fund of the university will make the petroleum royalties shrink like a catfish shrinks 10 hours after having been taken from the water. Why not break the Franco-German monopoly?

BRITISH MINERS ARE IDLE

BRITISH coal miners are on strike. British coal mining industy is paralyzed. More than a million miners were locked out by their employer. This is one-fifth of the highly unionized men of Great Britain.

A year ago Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin affected a settlement. He paid a subsidy of a hundred million dollars to the miners and the mine owners to prevent a strike. This year it was impossible for the prime minister to continue the subsidy. It was impossible for him to get the mine owners and the miners together. They were far apart.

Miners demanded higher wages and better conditions of mining life. Mine owners refused to make them their concession. Then, they ordered a lockout. Coal placed Great Britain where she is today. Then they ordered a lockout. Britain mistress of the seas.

There are many miners and too many mines in England, too many workers and the improved machinery found in the mines of the United States is not found in the mines of England.

John Bull is facing another crisis. John Bull has faced many crises, economic and otherwise, in a hundred years. He always landed on his feet. Now what will he do with this crisis?

THE DRIVE OF NECESSITY

Five expeditions are about to look for the only unknown section of the world's surface. The need for parking space is certainly an incentive to activity.

MILLIONS FOR TEXAS U.

THERE is money in oil for the state university as well as the titans of the petroluem trade. Land Commissioner J. T. Robison is responsible for the following:

With much undeveloped but proven territory in the universal oil fields of Reagan county, present estimates of geologists are that the potential capacity of the field is a hundred million barrels, which would net the university $12,000,000 to $20,000,000 in royalties for the permanent fund. This estimate is based on the production of the present wells and acreage proven but undeveloped.

There is no reason why the University of Texas should not take rank with the highest in the world some day. This was what the fathers of Texas intended should happen in the fullness of time, but they did not know a thing about petroleum, its uses or possibilities.

MUSCLE SHOALS TO BE LEASED

MUSCLE SHOALS is to be leased to the Associated Southern Power company. The leading measure was placed on the senate calendar instead of being referred to the senate agriculture committee. This was a clean cut victory for the senators who favored the leasing proposal, and a knockout for the government operation advocates.

Twenty-six republicans and 13 democrats and one farmer labor senator voted for the government operation proposal. Senator Sheppard and Mayfield voted for government operation.

Now the prediction is made that the leading proposal bill will die in the calendar. The two Alabama senators, Underwood and Heflin, voted for the leasing proposal. They know what they want. Tennessee and Alabama are linked together economically as well as politically. They are becoming important manufacturing states.

Political birds of a feather flock together. Government operation of public utility is not popular just now. For instance, the government attempted to operate the merchant marine. According to the wise men who have studied the figures government operation has been a dismal failure.

A TEXAS PROPHET OF PROSPERITY

THERE is a great building boom coming to Texas. R. E. Jordan, president of the Houston real estate board told delegates from 10 cities that by next fall he expects the greatest building activities in the country to begin in Texas, an activity which will surpass the great growth of California and Florida.

He advised against a wildcat boom.

Of course, men are saying that the Florida boom has slumped, but it did not slump until more than $400,000,000 northern capital had been invested in the Everglades state, and the bulk of the men who invested money in Florida know how to get it out with dividends added.

They played the game with their eyes open. Californians played it with their eyes open years ago and they reaped their harvest.

WAR LOANS AND THEIR COST

NOW all the nations with two minor exceptions, indebted to the American people in loans in war times, have funded their debts and promised to pay. These nations owed, principal and interest, $12,000,000,800

Those who made the agreements on the part of American people whittled this debt down to $7,000,000,000 in round numbers.

And yet, Eureopean statesmen and writers say that the American God is money and that Uncle Sam is a harsh creditor.

All that has been lopped off will be paid by the American people, the most generous people on the face of the earth in their dealings with all the nations of the earth

MONEY IN STRING BEANS

THERE is money in the growing of string beans down in the Magic valley. A young woman in a business office at Harlingen corresponding with a friend in another Texas city, told of a farmer, who planted four and one-half acres of string beans.

He picked and marketed his string beans and made a net profit of $2,400 or more than $500 an acre for a single crop. This should be wire casted to Florida where they are going to spend millions in the draining of the Everglades. There isn't a place like Texas under the shining sun for the men who plow and hoe.

A HUGE SUM FOR ROAD WORK

MORE than a billion dollars will be expended this year in the United States for public highway construction. This is a huge sum of money. It should be shorn by those who have charge of the expenditure of all graft, honest or itchy. This money is taken from the pockets of the people. A legitimate profit for road builders is all right. An illegitimate profit for those who dwell in the invisible zone in the 48 states of the American Union, is all wrong. Those who pay taxes are entitled to a square deal and economical expenditure of the dollars taken from their pockets.

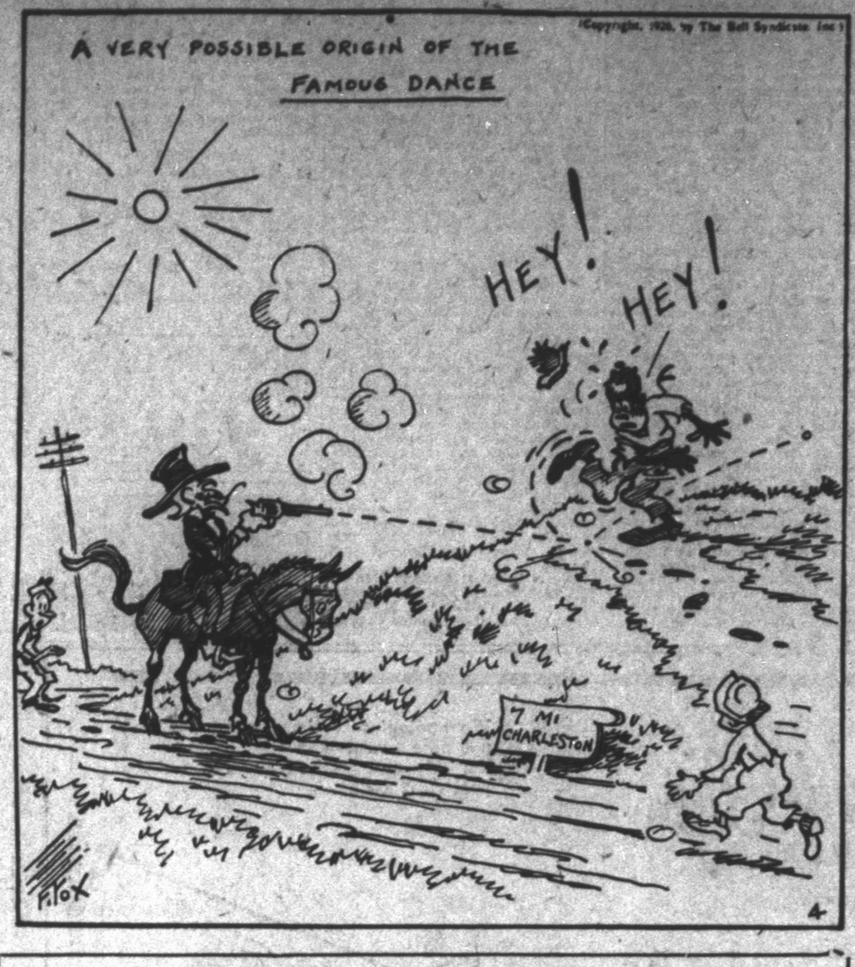

NOT MUCH USE

The trouble with public opinion is that there is so little of it when it is really needed, and so much of it when it isn't.

OBSTINATE IDIOT

A road hog is man who simply won't give you three-quarters of the highway.

Questions From the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

The Gay Young Blade Who Thinks He's Beaten At 25.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man 25 years old. I am poor and, what is more, I have always been poor, and, what is still more, I always will be poor, meaning poor in the poorest stage. No one, perhaps, is to blame but myself, though not any of my people have ever accumulated anything. We are the most fun-loving bunch in the world, popular with the girls, good fellows, but that's all. I don't know how to do anything well, except dance the Charleston.

Now I have fallen in love with the sweetest girl in the world, but I would be a fine meal ticket for a wife, what? I am down and out and beaten, and know that I am beaten. What shall I do? JUST POPULAR.

ANSWER:

Beaten at 25? Why, the very idea is absurd. All of the knocks that you get up to that time, all of your experiences, are just a part of your education, and the very fact that they have driven you to despair is a good sign. It shows that they have taught you how many different kinds of a fool you have been and how silly and purposeless a life of pleasure is.

Now you have had your lesson. Profit by it. Cut out all the old butterfly friends who want you to spend your life making merry with them. Roll up your sleeves and go to work. Learn how to do something that is more profitable than the Charleston.

At 25 you are young enough and adaptable enough to make anything you please out of yourself. And the whole world is before you to choose.

You say that you are poor, and always have been poor. You are not responsible for that, but if you continue to be poor the remainder of your life, that is your own fault. It will be because you are too lazy and shiftless to work, and too self-indulgent to deny yourself the gratification of the passing moment.

Ninety percent of the millionaires in this country had no more at 25 than you have. At least three-fourths of the rich and prosperous men who live in fine homes and ride around in limousines and smoke fat cigars and go south for their golf in winter were born and were poor and were still poor at 25. But they didn't like poverty and they fought out of it.

You have just as good a chance as they had. The door of opportunity is there for you just as it was for them, but they didn't sit down before it and whine they couldn't get it open because they didn't have the king in their hands. They banged and kicked on it until they forced their way through, just as you can do if you have the grit to do it.

Because your forebears have been thriftless is no reason for you to be. Heredity is the most overworked excuse in the world. It isn't always a justification of our course. Just as often it is a warning for us to watch our steps, and because we may have inherited a tendency toward some weakness to guard particularly against it.

Just because your family are of the happy-go-lucky, ne'er-do-well sort, who never let their work interfere with their pleasure and who have holes in their pockets, it is the more important that you nail yourself to your job and become a nickel nurser.

As for your gay temperament and ability to make friends, that is a gift of the gods, or a curse as you use it. You can waste your whole life just being a good fellow and the life of the party for a lot of loafers who want you to entertain and amuse them who will kick you out when you get old and dull and lose you vivacity.

But, on the other hand, a man can have no greater asset than a cheerful spirit and a pleasing personality and in business he can cash in popularity in dollars and cents. Even to know how to dance well is an advantage, and in choosing your life work I would suggest that you pick out some line in which your talents as a mixer will find a profitable outlet, instead of being wasted, as they are now.

Don't say you are beaten at 25! Don't think it! Why, at 25 you are just ready to begin to fight!

The Whip Discovers Art

BY MEIGS O. FROST

blocks down the street. Tell him it is Edouard Cartier who sends. This that has stricken me—it is paralysis, I fear."

Outside the door of Edouard Cartier's studio, an hour later, the Whip and the doctor were holding converse, low-voiced and earnest.

"Hopeless," the doctor said. "He may live a few years more. He may drop off tonight. Judging from appearances, the old man hasn't had much to eat lately, either. Charity Hospital case, if he can't afford a nurse. Incurables' Home after that, I guess. Almost complete paralysis. Helpless as a baby. Hasn't any relatives either, he said. Just a few pupils he teaches to paint. You're a friend of his, I take it?"

"Sort of," said the Whip, non-committal.

"Well, I'll have the corner grocery send him up some milk, on my way home. Feed it to him. Take your time. Stick by him till morning, anyway, won't you? I'll be around then and we'll see what we can do. I've got half a dozen more cases to visit tonight."

"I'll hang around, doc."

The doctor departed. The Whip reentered the studio and looked at his patient.

The faded blue eyes were closed. The emaciated figure lay limp on the couch-bed. The Whip stepped softly. Better let the old bird get all the sleep coming to him.

For the first time since his first swift glance of appraisal, the Whip looked about the studio. Queer bunch of junk. Easel. Old black wooden furniture. Ragged rugs. Tattered draperies. Looked like a Halstead Street second-hand shop.

Then the Whip's gaze centered, grew riveted, upon a canvas on the wall opposite. Fairly clear it shone in the light of the gas-jets to which the Whip had touched match. Long and earnestly he gazed.

Hot pup, but that was classy stuff!

The Whip didn't know a bayou from an estuary. Live-oaks with trailing beards of Spanish moss—green reaches of fields shot through with the mists of a southern sunrise—these were to him unknown by their proper names. A plantation, even, to him, was some vague place mentioned in popular songs

But this thing—this picture—this was a farm!

A little piece of some kind of pond or other and some big trees and a white house in the distance and, yes, by Gawd, some cows under a tree, chewing their cuds or whatever a cow's stuff was.

He studied it out for a while. He looked at the other pictures. His gaze swung back to his first love.

"How much is it worth?" asked the Whip.

The Whip had heard of comic supplement artists who had made their million and raced their own stable. And this was no comic strip stuff. The real thing. That farm!

"How much is it worth?" the old man asked bitterly. "More than this generation is willing to pay."

That line seemed to get granddad peeved, the Whip noted. He welcomed the diversion of the arrival of the milk, paid for it, and fed his patient.

"You'll be stepping to jazz in a couple of days," he informed him cheerily.

The tone was recognized, if the words were bizarre. Edouard Cartier smiled wearily.

"No," he said. "You are kind, but this is the end, I know."

Under bushy white brows he regarded his nurse.

"Can you stay until the doctor comes in the morning?" he questioned weakly. "I am too ill to think well. I will make some arrangement then."

"Sure I'll stick," the Whip assured him. "You lie back and get some sleep, granddad. These things always look better in the morning."

Toward dawn the Whip drowsed, but awoke, alert, open-eyed, to the creaking of the ancient stairway outside. This was too early for the doctor, he knew.

Came a light tap on the door. He moved swiftly and soundlessly to one side. The grayish light of dawn was just beginning to flood the sky, he could see through the slanting panes of glass on the studio's south wall.

The door swung gently open. A head peered through.

"Gee," whispered the Whip softly, in breathless worship. Here was class if ever there was class, he told himself. Here was the glorified farm-girl of his dreams.

It was a head of gloriously fluffed, bobbed blonde hair. Beneath that aureole of golden silk peered a piquant face. Blue eyes centered on the shaggy white head of Edouard Cartier, resting on the pillow of the couch-bed across the room.

A moment's pause, and then she stepped across the threshold. If farm girls dressed like this, thought the Whip, all Broadway and the Loop would go farming.

In satin-slippered feet she tiptoed. Young shoulders, rising slim and firm from the chiffon froth of a dancing-frock, gleamed with ivory tints through a length of gauzy wrap wreathed carelessly about them.

Behind her came another head—sleek and black and masculine, this—as a youth in dinner-jacket tip-toed in on thin-soled dancing shoes.

What was this lounge-lizard doing here with a girl like that, this time of day, the Whip wondered, as he stepped forward with warning, "Shhhhh."

A little stifled exclamation came from the girl as she saw him. The youth of the varnished black hair scowled and halted.

"The old boy's on the ropes," the Whip whispered hoarsely, raising cautioning hand. "Paralysis. Flops outside my door 'crost the hall. I been with him all night. Don't wake him up. I'm staying till the doc comes back this morning. Promised him—see?"

A pitying "Oh!" came from curved and crimson lips.

And then, as there was a slight stir on the couch-bed, and weary old blue eyes opened in the lined face of Edouard Cartier, the slender young figure swirled across the floor and was seated on the edge of the bed, smoothing his forehead with white fingers.

"What's the lay?" he queried. "You his friends?"

"Miss Rutherford and I were just coming from a dance," he said "Her studio is in this building. We frequently drop in on Mr. Cartier and have coffee with him in the early morning. He is her old painting master. My name is Anthony Seldon. Studio in this building too."

He extended a conventional hand. The Whip took it, conventionally, and dropped it with a chill. "Pleased to meet you." He was thinking.

"You say you live here?" asked Seldon.

"Yeh," said the Whip coldly. "'crost the hall."

"I don't believe I caught your name," persisted Seldon, courteously. He hadn't. The Whip hadn't mentioned it.

"Henry Smith," said the Whip shortly.

The awkwardness of the silence that ensued was broken by Kathie Rutherford herself.

She stood framed in the doorway.

What Do You Know About It?

DAILY SCIENCE SIX

1. What is the longest day in the year?
2. What is the shortest day in the year?
3. What is the lunar month and how long is it?
4. Is our year of 365 days the same as the solar year, that is, the length of time it takes the earth to complete an orbit around the sun?
5. What is meant by equinox?
6. What had Julius Caesar to do with the calendar?

Answers to these questions in tomorrow's Record News.

Russian Calendar

In the year 1582, Pope Gregory XIII reformed our calendar. This had already been done several times in history, because it was seen that the civil or legal year was not keeping pace with the seasons, and spring was shifting back into what should be winter weeks. Gregory was the first, however, to establish a regular system for keeping the calendar in order. He dropped ten days out of that year, and decided that thereafter leap years should have an extra day, except the years that opened the centuries unless divisible by four. The Russians however, and for a long time too the Swedes, did not adopt this calendar, probably for religious reasons. The result is that the Russian calendar is diverging more and more widely from ours; it is now 12 days different, and in the next century will be 13, and so on.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to yesterday's questions:

1. Wheat is attacked by the Hessian fly.
2. The boll weevil comes from Mexico.
3. The codling moth is very harmful to apples.
4. The white pine is seriously menaced by the pine weevil.
5. The substance produced by insects which we eat is honey.
6. The substance produced by insects which we wear is silk.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE

TAURUS

Today's planetary aspects are actively favorable, and denote mind inspiration and energetic impulses. They are exceptionally auspicious for all work along lines of constructive effort, even though new enterprises may be involved or changes of a radical nature. Commercial pursuits would appear to be most profitably affected by the influences although everything, except speculation, that savors of betterment of present conditions, will be benefited. The evening, when stimulating vibrations will be sensed, presents an excellent occasion for the "plighting of troth," and any engagements entered into today, promise to culminate in enduring happiness and lasting love.

Children born today will not enjoy, during their infancy, that degree of health that all parents desire for their offspring. They will suffer from a variety of ailments, some of which will, undoubtedly, cause alarm. Proper nutrition will, of course, do much to rob these ailments of many of their perils. In character, they will, at an early age, develop evidences of strength and they are all destined to possess exceptional will-power, which will be reflected in compelling personalities. They will scorn evasion, and never resort to "alibis." They will always be prepared to "face the music," no matter what discordant notes may be played. They will, with very few exceptions, make successes of their lives.

If today is your birthday, you are not very virile although possessing many traits that invite affectionate regard. If a man, you are altogether too dependent on others. If a woman, you are of the "clinging" type. Is is very difficult for you to reach a decision unaided, on any given subject. You always appeal to others, and owing to the multiplicity of opinions, quite frequently adopt an attitude of inaction. You are never disposed to take a chance and elect, on many occasions, to do nothing rather than take a chance of committing an error. In your home life, your gentleness, unselfishness, and helplessness, appeals to those around you, and you, possibly, secure more assistance and affection than if you were cast in a sterner mould.

Gurdon Buck, surgeon.

A STARTLING COMMUNICATION
From the Mother's Club.

Dear Editor:
Our Mothers' Club.
Has just learned you're unmarried!
We're worried, and we're wondering
Why thus long you have tarried.
'Tis clever men like you who owe
Society a duty
To wed some maid, the mother kind,
Not some wild, flippant Cutie.

We fear you are like many men,
You love your work unduly,
Though we all think THE FUN SHOP is
Much to be proud of, truly;
But when you're old and tired out
You ought to have a youngster
Who has been trained to run THE SHOP,
A chip from the Old Father!

Here's where we think our Mothers' Club
Can very well assist you,
Till on her breast a lovely wife
Has pillowed you and kissed you.
So you just write and let us know
What kind of a girl you'll marry
And we'll get busy right away!

Kiwanians Urged To Obey Signals

An appeal was made Monday by Ira L. Cain to members of the Kiwanis club and their employes who drive trucks or cars to stop at signs given by the junior traffic officers at crossings in the city. Mr. Cain spoke to the club at the regular meeting at the Kemp hotel and brought his message following interviews with members of the safety council, the Boy Scouts and the schools which are promoting the work of the junior officers.

"The boys are being brought into a sense of responsibility," Mr. Cain said, and he asked Kiwanians to teach them a better idea of citizenship by obeying the traffic rules and not ignore them. The boys have been made officers through the police department and when drivers do not obey their "stop" signal, the numbers of the cars may be taken and reported.

TAX GATHERING COSTS MOST IN ANNUAL PROBES

Internal Revenue Bureau Keeps 15,000 Busy On Check Up

By WILLIAM P. HELM, JR.

Routine investigation of business interests by the government, as distinguished from special investigations, grows to its finest flower at Washington in the case of the tax-collecting agency, the bureau of internal revenue. More than 15,000 employes of that bureau devote their entire time to checking and investigating tax returns. The number of investigations runs from 600 to 1,000 a day.

An average of more than 500 income tax investigations alone were concluded and settled out of court every business day during the past fiscal year, the total comprises of this character running to nearly 160,000 for the entire year. Many of these investigations were minor; others occupied the attention of field agents and officials for months. In some big cases, government auditors spent weeks in going over the books of taxpayers before reaching their final conclusions.

Other Inquiries

In addition to the 160,000 income tax cases the bureau investigated and compromised about 70,000 cases involving the capital stock, estate, sales and other taxes, making a grand total of nearly 230,000 tax cases settled out of court last year. Nearly 1,800 investigations conducted by the bureau reached the courts however, in civil cases, and another batch of 1,315 cases involving fraud were uncovered by the bureau. In those cases 430 criminal actions were begun in the courts.

According to this showing approximately 233,000 taxpayers were investigated during the past fiscal year by Uncle Sam's tax collectors. In the cases settled out of court the government collected about $2,000,000 in additional taxes. This amounts to somewhat less that $9 for each investigation which resulted in a compromise.

Of the mammoth force required to check and investigate tax returns, about 6,200 person are employed at Washington and nearly 9,500 are in the field including investigators attached to the offices of the various collectors. The cost of maintaining this force amounted in 1925 to about $25,000,000. The figure does not include the prohibition force which also is under direction of the bureau and which consists of 3,000 persons. The prohibition unit's maintenance cost about $11,000,000 a year.

Nearly every large taxpayer in the country has come in contact with the bureau's investigators and has turned over its books to them for the audit, in some respect, during the period in which the income tax has been in effect. Hundreds of cases of fraud or attempted fraud have been uncovered and thousands of cases additional have resulted in attempt to collect more taxes than the sum which the taxpayer calculated in good faith was due to the government.

Additional Penalties

In a single year investigators have assessesed additional taxes and penalties running higher than $300,000,00. Until two years ago the taxpayer had no choice to pay the additional assessment. If he felt that he did not owe the money, his only recourse was to sue in the courts to get it back, or to file claim after the decision by the United States supreme court of a test case involving the principle upon which his claim was based.

Some of the additional tax assessments stood, but hundreds of millions collected this way by the government have been returned to the taxpayers as the result of court decisions or further investigations. Such refunds last year ran to the total of $158,000,000, the highest recorded. In 1924 they reached $127,000,000 and in 1923 they totaled more than $125,000,00. The budget estimates carried $151,000,000 available for this kind of refund during the fiscal year.

These huge refunds, totaling more than $500,000,000 for four years are due in considerable part to excessive seal on the part of the bureau's investigators was to assess every possible additional dollar. This policy has worked hardship on business firms, in many cases, which cannot be measured by the amount of refunds returned months or years later.

At the present time, however, the taxpayer has a check against what he considers undue additional assessments. Under the revenue laws of 1924 and 1925 the taxpayer is not required, under certain conditions, to pay the additional assessment when it is levied, but may appeal to the board of tax appeals and is required to turn the assessment into the treasury only if the board decides against him. Decisions of the board may be appealed to the courts but the onerous burden of paying heavy back taxes into the treasury months or years before final decision of the courts is mitigated.

Investigators of the internal revenue bureau themselves were investigated recently by the Couzens committee of the senate, to which reference has been made in previous articles. For many months this committee raked he records of the bureau in an effort to uncover facts which had hitherto been known only to the taxpayers interested and the bureau's officials.

In the Couzens committee report of what it found—published in three pamphlets of about 600 pages of type containing more than 500,000,000 words—hundreds of large taxpayers are mentioned by name and in scores of individual cases, the committee's findings are given. Each of the taxpayers was investigated to the extent of auditing his return, at least, by the committee. Thus these business firms were doubly investigated on the same subject and in some instances the investigations went back for years.

Some of the Big Ones

Among the prominent firms treated to the double investigation as to their taxes were the United States Steel corporation, the Anaconda Copper Mining company, the Ayllis-Chalmers Manufacturing company, the American Locomotive company, the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, the Texas company, the entire anthracite industry, the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Pacific Steamship company, the Midvale Steel & Ordnance company, the Ford Motor company and the General Electric company.

No double investigation of this sort is in sight at the present time, but the routine investigations of the bureau of internal revenue continue space. As these lines are read, somewhere a tax investigation is being ended by a compromise and somewhere a new investigation is being begun. Old investigations of this kind go on the shelf and new ones are begun at the combined rate of about three a minute every working hour of every business day of the year.

NAPOLEON DIES IN EXILE HOME

Cousin of Emperor And Throne Pretender Passes On

BRUSSELS, May 3. — (AP)— Prince Victor Napoleon, 64, Bonapartist pretender to the throne of France, died today. He was stricken at his home last week.

The exact nature of the illness of the prince was not revealed.

With the arrival from Geneva last week the Prince Louis Napoleon at the bedside of his brother, Brussels became alive with rumors as to what action the leaders of the Bonapartists would take in the event of the death of Prince Victor. While the heir of the house is Victor's son, Louis, 12 years old, it is thought his age will preclude his taking an active part in the party's councils. The belief has been generally expressed that the Bonaparte family will proclaim a regency with either Princes Clementine, Victor's widow, or Louis Napoleon actually taking the leadership.

Prince Louis has had military experience as a general in the armies of Russia. He has executive capacity and is popular with the French imperialists, many of whom have not yet given up the dreams of a member of the Bonaparte house being recalled to the throne of France.

Belgium is expected shortly to have another pretender to the French throne as a guest. This is the Duke of Guise, who recently succeeded the late Duke of Orleans as royalist claimant of the throne.

Victor Napoleon was born in Paris in 1862, grandson of King Jerome Bonaparte and cousin of Emperor Napoleon III. He never renounced his claim to the throne of France and in 1886, like the late Duke of Orleans and the Duke of Guise, was banished from the land of his birth. Like the Duke of Orleans, Victor made his home in Belgium.

He married Princess Clementine of Belgium, daughter of the late Leopold II, after a clandestine courtship.

During the world war, like the late Duke of Orleans, Victor offered his services to the French government and they were refused.

of food, bread and milk for children, and for a continuance as far as possible of the means of transport, and the big places of business and corporations have arranged to provide sleeping and eating quarters for their employes, so that the necessity of returning home by day or night will be obviated.

Nevertheless there is certain to be a tremendous tie-up in all the big cities and an immediate cessation of many forms of labor dependent upon the greater industries comprised in the trades union congress.

Troops Are Ready

Troops already have been sent to various sections where disturbances are most to be feared, but it is the expressed intention of both authorities and the labor leaders to do nothing of a provocative nature. The men necessary to keep the mines from flooding will be held at their run skeleton services and the transports. The railway managers will Atlantic steamship companies have promised to maintain their sailings if that can possibly be done. The labor men have agreed also to aid in bringing food supplies to the people, having emphasized that their fight is not against the people, but against the attitude of the government in the present crisis.

London has now the unusual experience of a partial stoppage of the newspapers on account of the strike, a thing heretofore almost unheard of in England. The printers strike is largely the outcome of the Daily Mail incident. That paper succeeded in publishing its Manchester edition Monday but as it contained the editorial the London printers objected to, orders went from London and refusal to print any more editions followed.

The king came to London from Windsor yesterday afternoon and received first hand information of all phases of the crisis.

ties," P. E. Garrett, chairman of a special committee of the Dallas Investment bankers, said Monday.

"An official of the West Texas chamber of commerce recently made such a charge. If this were true we would be the last persons, from a selfish point of view, to want any legislative action that would restore the bond issues to normal values.

"As a matter of fact, the bond buyer is always acting in a dual capacity, both as a buyer from the issuing party and a seller to the investing public. The investing public create the market price and until the stabilizing factor of the state through its legislature acts to validate bonds, this market will sink even lower."

HOUSE TAKES UP FARM BILL

Measure to Have Inning After Six Months In Anteroom

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Farm relief legislation waiting in the anteroom for six months, will have its days in court beginnig tomorrow when the house takes up three bills reported by its agriculture committee.

Under a special rule providing four days of general debate, the Haugen price stabilization bill, will be called up and the other two measures—the Tincher credit plan, supported by Secretary Jardine and the Curtis-Aswell national commodity marketing proposal—will be in order as substitutes. Debating time will be controlled equally by the authors of the three bills.

As last minute conferences of various house factions were held today in an effort to line up support for one bill or another, endorsement of the Haugen bill was announced by Representative Rainey of Illinois, chairman of an official committee appointed at a meeting of 50 house democrats, to investigate farm relief legislation. Mr. Rainey explained, however, that he was not speaking for the committee which had not yet reported. He said an advisory report for the information of democratic members probably would be made tomorrow although there was no intention of holding a party caucus on the question.

Democratic members of the house agriculture committee said it was not a partisan issue and they also saw no reason for a caucus. They are divided on the pending bills.

ELECTRA, May 3.—According to Ed. C. Wilson, the local registrar of births and deaths in Electra, there seems to be little chance of race suicide in this city, although the number of births and deaths were somewhat lower than in April, 1925. There were 28 births recorded, of which 19 were boys, and nine girls. There were eight deaths recorded.

There is little sickness in the city for this time of the year, Dr. Cramer, the city health officer reports.

Latest Film Is Sills' Chance to Stage Come Back

"The Making of O'Malley," now showing at the Mission theatre, proved the re-making of Milton Sills.

With his elevation to stardom by First National recently Sills was given a new test of his versatility.

Although still the "he-man," Sills' hole in the first starring vehicle, which Earl Hudson produced, is a departure from the society roles and woman-hating characterizations of his last successes.

It is the agreed belief of Sills, Hudson and First National officials that the public generally prefers the star in roles whose virility is tempered with close-to-the-heart drama. His plays in the future, therefore, will give him less the aspect of the stern, forbidding man and more of the warmth and geniality of the man who loves humanity.

"The Making of O'Malley" is the first of this type. "The Comeback," from M. D. C. Crawford's novel, which will follow his current production, is another, and this will be followed by a drama of the steel mills, "Men of Steel."

"The Making of O'Malley," is an adaptation of a short story of the same name by Gerald Beaumont. Sills has the role of a New York policeman.

Bengals Bunch Wallops to Clip Sox Win Streak

Whitehill Allows Eight Hits In 3-1 Detroit Victory

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Detroit bunched hits in the first and second innings today and broke Chicago's winning streak of five in a row, 3 to 1. Manush's circuit drive, Cobb's single and Heilmann's triple put the Tigers in the lead and they were never headed. The feature play of the game was the doubling of Ty Cobb at the plate when he attempted to score on a long fly lifted to Mostil in the ninth. Barrett, White Sox right fielder, wrenched his knee in going after Heilmann's drive in the first and was forced to retire. The score:

Mack Barrage Routs Shawkey

Athletics Smash Yankees' String of Victories, 8 to 3

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—(AP)—The Yankees' eight game winning streak came to an abrupt end today when the Athletics took the series opener, 8 to 3 coming from the rear to knock Shawkey from the mound in the sixth with a four run barrage. Grove, the winning pitcher, was the first man to go the route against the Hugmen this year and came out on top. The score:

BOSTON, May 3.—(AP)—Steady twirling by Ogden coupled with ineffective pitching by Ruffing in the early innings was responsible for the Senators' 6 to 2 victory over the Red Sox today. Flagstead starred for Boston in the outfield. Goslin hit a homer for the visitors in the fourth. The score:

Is Braves' Second Sacker Tiny? A Bit: Look This Picture Over

Here we have, on the right, ladies and gentlemen, the smallest second baseman in baseball. In fact, ladies and gentlemen, the smallest player in the game. He is Walter Gautreau of the Braves. He is standing alongside Eddie Brown, large sized outfielder with the team. Notice, in addition to the difference in height, the difference in the size of the hands. An infielder should have large hands but Gautreau seems to be able to stop grounders with what he has.

Speed, Accuracy Needed in Tennis Pa Lenglen Says

Father of Suzanne Boasts Of Success of French Net Star

PARIS, May 3.—(AP)—Speed and accuracy are the secrets of success in tennis, Papa Lenglen has told L'Auto, the French sporting paper, in an interview on the success of his daughter Suzanne.

"When Suzanne was young, she was frail and delicate," Papa Lenglen said. "I wanted to develop her physique. I first thought of swimming but remembered that I had been a tennis player in my youth and began to give her 15 minute lessons daily.

One day, he said, the Bordighera club invited the Nice club to send its best players to a tournament. Mme. Lenglen and Mlle Suzanne went to the tournament, Suzanne being then about thirteen. The secretary of the club received the pair and asked Mme. Lenglen to get ready for play.

"I am not going to play, it is my daughter," she said. The secretary grimaced and answered: "The Nice club must be hard up for players to send out children."

"Well the little girl won everything to the surprise of the secretary," continued Papa Lenglen. "Another day at the casino I asked a fortune teller if my daughter would become champion of France. The woman smiled and replied 'better than that. Oh, yes, much better than that.' After that I had nothing to say against those who foretell the future."

FORT WORTH, May 3.—(AP) Fort Worth's high school rifle team, competing against 75 other teams, finished in eighth place, after eliminating all other schools in the Eigth corps area, it was learned today by Captain George Munteanu, U. S. A., in charge of the cadets here.

Southeastern high school,—Detroit, took first place with 988 points out of a possible 1,000. St. Johns' Military academy, Delafield, Wis., won the military school trophy with a score of 998.

White Says He Wants To Meet Winner of Hull-Ewing Embroglio Carded For Arena Thursday

St. Paul Welter Declares He'll Wallop His Houston Opponent, Then Clean Up On Tommy

Althought bounced out of legion graces with his southwestern championship trophy forfeited, Tommy White, the Texas City welter, will be on hand Thursday night to challenge the winner of the Hull-Ewing ten-rounder to be staged here by the legion, White announces.

Clyde Hull, the St. Paul welter who was awarded a disputed decision over Wildcat Ewing of Houston last week, meets Ewing again Thursday night in the Eleventh and Ohio arena for the specific purpose, he says of erasing any doubt that may exist as to his ability to tag it on Wildcat.

Hull expects to whip Ewing in decisive fashion, he declares, and then wants another match with White, declaring again that he'll clean up on the Texas City infighter.

Is It Winner-Take-All?

It is generally understood Hull and Ewing will fight on a winner-take-all basis. Both are confident of victory. Bad blood exists between the two millers over that verdict of last week. Hull believes that he had it all over Ewing in that mill. Ewing declares (quite erroneously, we assure you) that he can lick Hull any day in the week and twice on Sundays.

Dope based on the comparative showing of the two scrappers, barring that fisticuff of the past week, points to a victory for Hull, possibly by a wide margin. But there are many who can't see it that way and won't until Hull proves the assertion by stepping out and lacing Wildcat to a fare-the-well.

If Hull is anything like his former self Thursday night he will be capable of doing just that thing, and in being capable to do so, should do so, of course.

Cossey vs. Rivers.

Bat Cossey, the Wichita Falls bantam, has been carded with the speedy Johnny Rivers of Fort Worth in a six-round semi-final. George Story, Oklahoma City welter, meets Johnny Sherrod of Fort Worth, in a special six-rounded, announces Dick Griffin who as a rule serves as Matchmaker Don Wofford's connecting link with the newspapers and Clyde Hull's spokesman wherever Barney Morgan pipes down long enough for him to get in a word.

COUNCIL STRIKES

Austin Commission Walks Out As Protest on Paving.

AUSTIN, May 3.—(AP)—The Austin city council staged a walkout today when the members learned that an alleged agreement had been made by one of the members with a construction for the retreating of some city pavement.

The council refused to consider a deficiency request by Commissioner George Seabright to be paid the Miller Construction company for retreatment because the members had not been notified the company was to do the work.

SPORTING NEWS THE RECORD NEWS FIRST ACCURATE COMPLETE

Ed Hughes' Column

Can phenomenal athletic ability be linked, these days, solely with a sheer, unalloyed pride in the triumphant effort. It doesn't seem so, and the impression is driven home more convincingly with the arrival of every new star in the track and field firmament. The latest case is that of Charlie Hoff, greatest pole vaulter of all time. Serious charges have been made by Western papers to the effect that Hoff received $600 for his work in the Kansas relays, with a $200 boost for ornamenting the Drake relays.

Such revelations and charges are generally serious only for the moment. Officially, seldom anything happens to the accused in the matter of punishment. Such affairs are generally glossed over after superficial "investigations," accompanied by shrill wails of "contemptible discourtesy to a foreign athlete and a gentleman." Once in a while the offense is too flagrant or the technique of "getting" so faulty that it can not be condoned, as in the case of the unfortunate Jim Thorpe. Jim's "crime" was a small change cashing of amateurism compared to some that have been rumored. The marvellous Indian accepted a paltry few hundred for playing summer baseball in a secluded bush league town. But his "sin" found him out and Thorpe forfeited his "simon pure" amateurism along with his precious Stockholm Olympic trophies. Every one felt sorry for Jim, for those were the days when "business managers" of athletes were unheard of.

In the old days, when business methods of star athletes were in their infancy, the "take" was much smaller and the proceedings considerably more open to conviction and punishment. Expense bills were "padded" a comparative trifle here and there, and the performer himself had to transact his own "business." Today the money-getters posing as amateurs are shrewd enough to operate, in most cases, with a "go-between." Thus they receive the pelf only indirectly, thus perfecting a redoubtable defense against charges of professionalism which frequently ensue.

Scandalous rumors of grafting have become familiar to the eardrums these days, but convictions are as scarce as hens' teeth. The "third party" has been successful in sport, if not in the field of politics. If you're interested, delve into the misty past and note the number of severe punishments meted to prominent athletes of the pre-business manager era. Abel Kiviat, one of the greatest as well as one of the squarest of athletes, was set down for seven of the best years of his athletic career—practically banned for life. His offense, compared to present-day operations, was comparatively dwarfish—a mere bagatelle.

Some time ago this writer—in all seriousness, recommended that so-called "amateur" sport be erased from the slate, so far as its classification was concerned. "Simon pure" amateurism is really a luxury reserved only for the wealthy, who can afford to pay their own expenses in the realm of sport. All the rest who can not boast of fat bank rolls are, in reality, keenly interested in a financial return for their sportive services. All of which is natural and true to form as nature orders things in this life.

This incentive to gather gelt for services rendered in no way affects the genuineness of competition. Competitively it is pure enough for the most discriminating, which also argues that the athlete can love sport for itself and also gain aterially by this love at the same time. Most folks in this advanced, liberal age of thinking, believe that such entertainers as Nurmi and Hoff, for instance, should be reimbursed for their feats.

It is not the semi-commercialism of the thing that annoys, but rather the hypocritical pose of amateurism—with greenbacks sticking out of back pockets and shoe tops in full view.

Yours for the S. P. A. U.—Semi-professional athletic union. Legitimatize the reasonable demands of sterling entertainers of track and field, as well as of other sports not monopolized by the millionaire classes. There shouldn't be any Rogues' gallery in the realm of sport.

Babe Ruth An Obliging Hero.

One of the most commendable qualities any public hero can possess is the obliging disposition, the willingness to be close to his worshippers. Babe Ruth has it, which is one sound reason for his immense popularity apart from his towering prowess as a slugger and topnotch fielder. There is nothing hoity-toity, aloof, about the Bimbino, though we can think of many other athletically famous who did not always unbend without effort.

Ruth has one of the most cordial, accommodating natures we have ever gazed upon. He has never yet been known to refuse his much sought signature to man, woman or child. The Babe has autographed thousands of baseballs, souvenirs of various descriptions, with never so much as a scowl. Not long ago he set a record on the coast by inscribing his name on more than a hundred baseballs within a half hour. It all seems trivial enough, but apart from the generous element of the act there is an accumulated strain attached which is not to be sniffed at.

Wherever the emperor of the home run goes he is beseiged for the coveted handwriting, and usually there is no way out, no peace for the pen-weary. The writer sat at the same table with the immortal diamond hero at the boxing writers' dinner and witnessed the stady stram of autographers descend upon him. Babe must have scrolled his name on at least fifty different objects without so much as a whimper.

"I like to oblige 'em if I can," vouchsafed the Bambino, "but it tires a fellow out sometimes. They pay my salary, support the game, and I figure it's coming to them. Of course, I have to dodge sometimes, but if I'm cornered I always come across. If I didn't jump into a taxi after a game why I guess I'd be kept at the ball park until midnight signing scorecards, baseballs and every old sort of thing. That wouldn't do, would it?"

In general Babe is considerably more of a philosopher than most people have been led to believe. He has the soul of Peter Pan, right enough, but he can do some first-class meditating betimes. Ruth is far from being simple, even though often influenced by glib talkers. Some years back, when Babe was with the Boston Braves, the big fellow took it into his head that he could shine as a prize fighter. Recalling this, I asked him:

"Would you rather be what you are today, Babe, or the heavyweight champion of the world?"

"I'm satisfied with being Babe Ruth and I guess Dempsey is just as proud he's Dempsey. Jack can't hit home runs and I can't slam guys around the way he can. It's about even up, I guess, and we both made good at the thing we were cut out for. It's a bad thing to try something you're not supposed to do. In that respect I guess Dempsey has been a bit wiser than me. I once really thought I could fight, but Dempsey has never seriously tried to oust me from my job."

"What prevented you from becoming heavyweight champion?" we prodded.

"Well, it was this way," explained Babe, smiling. "I thought I could lick Gunboat Smith when I was with the Braves. I was big and fast and I could hit a bit. I calculated that would give me a chance. So I went into training. One of my helpers was a big colored fellow who was a bear at tossing the medicine ball. How he could send 'em in! That fellow was a regular Walter Johnson with that big ball. You could hardly see 'em come, big as the thing was.

"That boy's speed with the medicine ball killed any idea I ever had of being the heavyweight champion."

"How come?"

"Well, one day he whirled one at me so fast that I was afraid to put my hands out for it. Just knew that it would crash through and soak me in the face. So I ducked and the blame thing banged me on the top of the head. It knocked me cold, and they had to drag me to a cot to bring me to. I got the idea I had a glass jaw and couldn't take it around the head. That cured me of ever wanting to stop one of Gunboat Smith's swings—and I've stayed cured."

SPUDDER NINE BACK IN TOWN WITH SHIPPERS

Plumage Tangled up a Bit, But Domestics Still Proud

Our noble Spudders, shaken up pretty badly, their haughty plumage bedraggled and awry as result of their brief but exceptionally disastrous road jaunt, nevertheless, still a proud aggregation of ball maulers, return to defend the citadel today against attempted inroads by Jeems Galloway's bouncing Beaumonters.

Initial encounter with the first of the southern detachments who invade Wichita Falls over a span of 11 days is booked at 4 bells.

Williams looks like Brainard's probable pitching selection today.

The Spudders are back following a four-day visit with the Panthers and Steers. They were shaded 8-7 in a hectic melee at Cowtown Friday, then jumped to Dallas for a three-day stand and lost every game. Ineffectiveness of Wichita Falls' pitching staff, afflicted by a sore-arm epidemic, proved the biggest cause of the Spudder defeats. Beaten to the punch in almost every game, the Spudders fought back sturdily, nevertheless. Yesterday's ninth inning rally after the game was lost stands out as one clear cut display of the Spudder fight. Although hopelessly overwhelmed, the Brainard outfit never slowed down, but kept battling until in the final round the boys bludgeoned over four runs.

The morale is still at its best. Every man is confident that sooner or later the club will get started and make it tough on the rest of the loop banded together.

One pleasing feature of the trip was the hitting of Lyman Lamb. The midget port gardner who had been in a bad slump all spring, got started at Fort Worth and has been pounding the pill at a mean clip each day since. He connected for only one safety yesterday, but several of his drives were well smacked, lining into the hands of awaiting fielders.

Galloway's outfit is leading the league with the stick at present although not in games won. Wichita Falls fans are in for three days of free-hitting contests. That's how long the Shippers will be in town. Waco follows Beaumont here.

Drake was derricked in the second after he had filled the bases with free passes and then walked another for Houston's first run. Fillingim was very effective through the remainder of the game. Prisoners Turned Over to Oklahoma

AUSTIN, May 3.—(AP)—Four men, two wanted for highway robbery and two for automobile theft at Ardmore, Okla., left here today in custody of Oklahoma officers. They waived extradition proceedings.

The two charged with highway robbery were reported to have robbed and shot a man, and then taken his automobile.

WAREHOUSE BURNS

Fire Destroys $50,000 Worth of Paper in San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, May 3.—(AP) Fire completely gutted the east end of a one-story tile construction warehouse occupied by the Alamo Paper Stock company, tonight. The loss was estimated at $50,000.

A fire-wall separated the east section of the warehouse from the west section, in which were stored 1,500,000 pounds of paper.

Home runs beat the Wichita Falls Electric company nine in Byers Sunday afternoon. The Wichita Falls club dropped the game by a score of 10 to 6. The game was tight until the waning innings, when the two clubs began to pound the balls over the fence.

Bill Andree, Whitten and Kollman did the hurling for the Electrics.

The Electrics and the Security National Bank teams hook up this afternoon on the Twilight league diamond for the next game of the Twilight league scheduled at 5:30.

Eddie Kollman and Gabe Harris probably will be brought together in this game.

Both ball clubs probably will use the same lineup unless the Electrics should come back with Lynch on third base instead of Currin Brown. Brown has been playing a great brand of ball in the field but has not hit his stride at the bat.

* * *

The Water department team has released outfielder Hughes to make room on for Harry Geyer, hard hitting pitcher and outfielder, of the Frieberg team. Geyer has piled up somewhat of a record as a home run slugger in the games at Frieberg. Last year he collected seventeen home runs in twenty-four ball games.

He has hit seven or eight home runs this year.

With the addition of Harry Geyer, the Water department team believes that they have plugged up part of their weakness. The club has been very weak at bat and Geyer is expected to add some hitting.

* * *

The signing of Bill Andree by the Electric company team after he was granted his release from the American Refinery Eagles has taken a cut in the hopes of the Water department.

Andree is one of the best players in the Twilight league and is one of the few who can play all the positions on the field well and add to this with good hitting.

Andree was one of the men Ray Martin had planned on adding to his Water department team to bolster it for the pennant chase. Andree could fit into the first base job of the water boys with ease.

Campbell has been playing the position well in all of games but Martin is anxious to get him on the hill as a pitcher.

* * *

Campbell last year won 17 games in the city league at Oklahoma City and should be able to win a good many games here this year.

Nocturnal Marked Off, Calaries Looks Better For Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3.—(AP) Removal of Nocturnal, a "dark horse," from the list of probable starters in the Kentucky derby on May 15, and revival of speculation concerning Calaris, Cofforth handicap winner, were outstanding local developments today as trainers entered upon the last fortnight of preparation for the race.

An infection on the right front foot eliminated Nocturnal his trainer and owner Joe Hawkins said today. Calaris declared "out" ten days ago, because of an unhealed injury to his right hand hock, has recovered and was put into training today. Kraft has said that he would not point the colt for the derby.

W. T. Anderson, owner of the colt, said no attempt would be made to rush the colt for the Kentucky derby, but he would be trained slowly for his other engagements in the Fairmon and Latonia derbys.

Several of the derby eligibles were given stiff workouts over slow tracks today. Recollection stepped the derby route of a mile and a quarter in 2:11 2-5, the best time of the season for the distance. He went a mile and an eighth in 1:57 3-5 and galloped out the additional eighth.

ART IN CHICAGO

Impressionists Win Awards In Annual Windy City Exhibition.

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—The same impression is that which has been elbowing its way into art for more than a decade is again the motive of the international water color exhibition which opened today at the Chicago Art institute.

Both principal award winners show strongly the impressionistic influence and the score for careful detail and both are the work of Philadelphians. Robert Riggs won the $200 Frank G. Logan award, with his "Orchestra, Siam" and Pull L. Gill the $100 William H. Tuthill award with "Low Tide."

Bob Turner Pulls Stakes and Exits

Bob Turner, Spudder infield recruit, who recently caught a line drive on the nose, thereby shattering the nasal organ almost as bad as a busted window pane, pulled up stakes yesterday afternoon and departed these environs for his home in Minneapolis. Freddy Dorman, the Spudders' one-legged man, loses a roommate.

The Minneapolis youngster was disheartened by a series of tough breaks the biggest of which was the accident in his olfactory protuberance, so he bid Wichita Falls farewell Monday and jumped a rattler for his home where he intends to rest up before venturing on a baseball diamond again.

Colorful Londos, Velcoff, Olson, Mantell Arrive in City Today For Wrestling Tiffs Wednesday Night

Greeks to Entertain Jimmy After Match With Nick, Looks Like Dutch Set For Drubbing

Jimmy Londos, king of the Greeks; Nick Velcoff, the Bulgar; Charley Olson, the Canadian Swede; and Dutch Mantell, the Clumbus Irishman, all are expected to arrive in Wichita Falls today in readiness for their matches Wednesday night under the auspices of the Wichita Falls wrestling association in the Eleventh and Ohio arena, said Matchmaker Alec Rose yesterday.

Wednesday marks the open air

Wednesday marks the open air wrestling season starter in this city. The program on the whole stacks up as the heaviest drawing card ever billed by the association.

Londos alone draws bigger than any other wrestler in the game today. His matches pull better than even those of Joe Stecher, world's heavyweight champion.

Greek Colorful.

One of the reasons for this perhaps is the color surrounding the Greek grappler. He is not only ranked as just about the cleverest heavyweight in the game but is a wonderful acrobat, tumbler, swimmer and all-around athlete. Pictures and stories about Londos have appeared in physical culture magazines month in and month out for years. He's had his turn in vaudeville and the movies. The Greek was declared the finest physical specimen of manhood in the world by critics at Bernarr McFadden's "body beautiful" tournament held in Madison Square garden. The tourney was open to the world at large. Londos won the gold trophy awarded by McFadden for first place honors.

Jimmy meets Nick Velcoff in finish match Wednesday. After the bout he is to be banqueted at Veros' cafe by a number of his fellow countrymen who reside here. Included on the committee attending to plans for the Londos fete are Carley Veros, Pete Anatos, P. H. Karr, Nick Anagnos, George Anagos, Ed Fell, John Covanes and Nick Pappas.

Nick Banqueted, Too.

Velcoff is going to be feasted on Bulgarian butter milk by the wrestling promoter at some down town soda fountain. Can't afford to leave Nick in the cold.

Incidentally, though Londos rules the favorite to win as far as wrestling fandom is concerned, many of the wrestling fraternity exuress belief he may throw a surprise into Londos and all his cohorts. Ad Santel and a number of men who have tangled with the Bulgarian say he has the making of a champion. Some matmen go so far as to hazard that same day Nick will dethrone the king of them all, Joe Stecher. At any rate, should Velcoff beat Londos it is generally granted he certainly should have first call over the rest of the heavyweights for a match with Stecher.

The affair Wednesday on the whole appears to be one of the most evenly matched battles ever carded in the heavyweight ranks.

Charley Olson tackles Mantell in a 40-minute limit bout. The Canadian middleweight is the most formidable opponent Dutch has been carded with in this city, not barring Matsuda. Olson is bigger and stronger than the Jap, also tougher. He has to be in order to stand the gaff with the Columbus wildman. Olson is a topnotch middleweight, Dutch a welterweight. Looks bad for the monkey-man.

Magnolias Win Fourth Straight

Texas Hardware Blanked In Electra Twilight Set-to

ELECTRA, May 3.—The Magnolia baseball team won its fourth straight game by defeating the Texas Hardware nine here this afternoon, 3 to 0. Roy Reynolds pitched a great game for the Mags, allowing but one hit, a single by Freeman.

Conyers also pitched good ball, but the Mags combed his slants for four safe blows, three of which were doubles. The Hardware crew started to make it tough in the fifth inning but Reynolds tightened up and held them in check. Freeman led off with a single and took second on a wild pitch. He went to third on an infield out and died there when his mates failed to deliver. Score:

More Truth Than Poetry

ALL ACCOUNTED FOR

I'd have walloped the pill half way over the hill
And have got on the green in a two;
There wasn't a chance with my swing and my stance
That I'd miss on the old follow through.
I'd have started my score with a nice birdie four,
Which I might have chalked up in the ring,
But the whole shot went bad for the caddie I had Cleared his throat when I started to swing.

I'd have cleared my hook past the bunker and brook—
I was hitting them pretty that day,
I could drive every trip like the crack of a whip
In the same professional way,
But I swung at it twice and then pulled off a slice
And I finished the hole like a dub,
For I couldn't help see as I stood on the tee
That the caddie was swinging a club.

Though I landed kerslap in the midst of a trap
I have not any shadow of doubt
That, my niblick in hand, I've ploughed through the sand
And sent the ball beautifully out.
But my score was sixteen when I got on the green,
Which is more than my record last year,
For that caddie of mine stood just off of the line
And was busily scratching his ear.

I always have found when I made a bad round
That the club-toting kid was to blame
For the shots that go bad, as he drives me half mad,
And of course I go way off my game.
When I lam at the ball and don't hit it at all
Or clout it above or beneath,
My caddy stands there, with his blasting red hair
Either grinning or picking his teeth!

Westmoreland In Substantial And Steady Increase

Reports on an exceedingly optimistic color were made Monday night to stockholders of the Westmoreland Park company, developers of a high class restricted residential subdivision west of the city, when a banquet and business meeting was held at the Kemp hotel.

The addition has been developed and marketed on a sound and progressive basis, reports of the company's officers showed, and prospects for its future were declared to be exceptionally bright.

A number of plans were discussed for new development, among these being consideration of a bathing pavillion and beach in the park.

Rivercrest Park In Good Start

An unusually successful start has been made in the launching of Rivercrest Park addition to the city, it has been stated by J. C. Crane and W. P. Willis, real estate men who are developing a high class subdivision on the Seymour road.

The tract, lying on the high ground to the north of the Seymour pavement, was first opened to the public and put on sale Sunday. Over $50,000 worth of real estate was sold the first day, the agents declared, and sufficient inquiries were received to give assurance of many other tracts being taken in a short time.

Paving Is O.K'd.

Three of four open hearings before the city council on paving projects were closed at its meeting Monday night and the paving authorized. The fourth hearing, that on Grace, Ninth to Thirteenth streets, was postponed until next Monday night. Considerable opposition to the paving as projected now on that stretch developed at last night's meeting of the council, only on block of the four appearing to be in accord in wanting the paving done, that being the block between Ninth and Tenth streets. Upon the possibility of a settlement of the differences between other of the property owners on the street the hearing was postponed.

Hearings were closed on Seventh street, Polk to Sunset Drive; Sunset Drive, Sixth to Seventh; Sixth street Polk to Sunset Drive.

Sick Ones Taboo

Sick dogs, pole cats, coyotes, et cetera, must go, the city council says; "ont in the country maybe, but not in town!"

Such was the formal action taken by that body Monday night upon the representation by property owners of one section of the city that a neighbor was keeping large numbers of sickly dogs, "pole cats," coyotes and other animals about his residence. The howls of the animals at unseemly hours of the night often prevent sleep and constitute a nuisance, the petition to the council said.

The matter was referred to Commissioner J. H. Patton with instructions to remedy the situation at once.

TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE.

The Red Cross organization of the city will hold open house at the court house Thursday morning from 10 to 12 o'clock and from 2 to 4 Thursday afternoon in observance of Child Health week.

Consultation with parents on the care of babies will be held by Miss Rosa Lee Harkin, visiting nurse, and Miss Beatrice Hall, city nutritionist, will advise on matters of diet. There will be a health inspection and weighing for babies and children of preschool age. Children with defects will be referred to the family physician. Mrs. Walter J. Daugherty, chairman of nursing for the local Red Cross, is in charge of the plans.

ELECTION SUPPLIES IN.

Supplies for the school bond election to be held Saturday at Valley View for the purpose of authorizing a $40,000 bond issue for construction of a new brick school building there have been received and are ready for the election, it was stated Monday by County Superintendent Burl Bryant.

Elections will be held the following Saturday at Pleasant Valley to authorize a $10,000 issue for similar purposes there, and at City View to authorize a $20,000 issue.

TRIP RAINED OUT

On account of the heavy rain Sunday, members of the Wichita Falls Optimist club who were to have gone to Seymour Monday to organize an Optimist club there, had to postpone the trip, it was announced by the president of the local club, Solon R. Featherston. Around 15 members had planned to make the trip and as soon as the roads are passable original plans will be carried out.

ORDINANCE PASSED

The third and final reading of the amendement to the city's plumbing ordinance to raise the fee for plumbing contractors in the city from $10 to $100 was withheld by the city council at its meeting Monday night, upon the representation that a number of the plumbers wished to be heard before final disposition was made.

TRUSTEE ELECTED

In a second rural school district trustee election held Saturday of last week in the Beaver Creek district No. 6, Guthrie was elected trustee over E. C. Ellis by a vote of 11 to 7. In the first election held more than two weeks ago a tie vote of eight to eight was recorder, with the result that the second election was called.

COUNCIL DEFIED ON BUILDING

Avenue F and Harrison To Have Filling Station

Whether or no a permit is forthcoming from the city, the southwest corner of the intersection of Avenue F and Harrison Street is soon to have a filling station and store, according to the terms of an ultimatum read the city council at its Monday night meeting from G. J. Thompson, owner of the property.

The ultimatum from Mr. Thompson was the outgrowth of refusal by the council to grant a permit for the filling station at that point, the council taking the action following protests from 30 or more property owners of the neighborhood who stated in a petition that the filling station would be both a nuisance and a detriment to their property.

A statement from Mr. Thompson was then read by his daughter in which attention was called to the decision of the three judges last week with regard to construction of the Floral Heights Baptist church in the Floral Heights district of the city. The right to build on property on which there was no restriction specified in the deed was upheld at that time. The statement further declared that regardless of action of the council in refusing the permit for the station it would be built.

Railroads Cannot Sub Bus For Train

AUSTIN, May 3.—(AP)—The I. and G. N. railroad will be compelled to continue operating a passenger train on its Calvert branch, and is not authorized to operate a motor bus in lieu of its present electric car, according to an opinion rendered the Texas railroad commission today by the attorney general.

The I. and G. N. sought to place a motor bus in operation on its Calvert branch because the revenue has been only $21.90 a month, with the expense of operating the electric car being $660.27. P. J. Neff, vice president of the Missouri-Pacific lines, contemplated putting 12 passenger automobiles into commission to supplant the electric car.

Socialists Plan Radio Broadcasting

PITTSBURGH, May 3.—(AP)—Establishment of a radio broadcasting station to carry the party's appeal over land and sea to supplant the street orator was proposed today at the national convention of the socialist party of America.

The convention voted to refer to the national executive committee for final action a recommendation to empower the committee to set machinery in motion for the creation of a centrally located party-owned radio broadcasting station, including the raising of national funds to make possible the station. Some delegates doubted whether the party could obtain license to broadcast matters pertaining to the Socialist movement.

WRIT REFUSED

A writ of error was refused by the Texas supreme court Monday in the case of Mart Robinson versus the City of Wichita Falls, suing for invalidation of the city's abattoir ordinance, according to a telegram received by W. E. George, city attorney.

The writ of error was asked for by Robinson's attorneys following the Fort Worth court of civil appeals' reversal of a decision by Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court invalidating the ordinance. The supreme court's refusal removes the last barrier to enforcement of the ordinance it is stated.

Financial

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—Reactionary price movements swept over all financial and commodities markets today, in relflection of the apprehension aroused in reflection of the apprehension aroused Britain.

Stock prices opened one to five points lower, but rallied briskly on the appearance of strong buying support, coincident with the lowering of the renewal rate on call money. Fresh selling broke out during the early afternoon when Wall street received extracts from the speech of Premier Baldwin, most of the active issues being forced down below their morning lows, the extreme declines in scores of issues running from three to 10½ points. A closing rally, inspired by the more optimistic tenor of the ltae cables, wiped out part of the earlier losses, net declines ranging from one to seven points.

Wall street's time-honored maxim "never sell stocks on strike news" was disregarded in this case, presumably because of the seriousness with which the present labor conflict was taken in British official circles. Premier Baldwin's reference to the government finding itself challenged by an "alternative government" having a depressing effect on speculative sentiment. Among bankers, the ability of England to maintain the gold standard if the strike was of long duration, was the principal subject of discussion and while no attempt was made to minimize the seriousness of the situation there was a rather general feeling that the crisis would be of short duration.

General Electric was the hardest hit, breaking 10½ points to 311½ and then rallying to 315. United States Steel common dropped nearly three points to 120¾ but snapped back to 121. Net losses of four points or more were recorded by such widely diversified industrial issues as Atlantic Refining, Case Threshing Machine, DuPont, Mack Trucks, South Porto Rican Sugar, United States Cast Iron Pipe, United Drug and Woolworth.

Rails yielded with the industrials although the losses generally were not as large. Atlantic Coast Line fell nearly eight points to 195, and then rallied to 196½ while Chesapeake and Ohio, Chicago and Northwestern, Delaware and Hudson, New York Central and a few others lost two points or more. Demand sterling fell nearly ½ cent below last week's high figure which was in striking distance of parity to $4.85½. French and Belgian francs touched record low levels at 3.27 and 3.28 cents, respectively, but both made slight recovery. Norwegian exchanges ruled over ten points higher around 21.86 cents but most of the other European rates showed moderate recessions.

Call money renewed at 3½ per cent as against 4½ Friday, holding steady at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

NEW YORK MONEY

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Call money easier; high, low and ruling rate 3½; closing bid 3½; offered at 3¾; call loans against acceptances 3. Time loans steady; 60-90 days 4; 4-6 months 4; prime mercantile paper 4@4¼.

TEXAS PRODUCE

SAN ANTONIO, May 3.—Account of heavy rains over the week-end at most of the loading stations of south Texas vegetable rollings were light consisting Saturday of 11 Texas cars of potatoes, 12 cabbage, 3 cucumbers, 24 mixed vegetables, 36 onions and 2 string beans and for Sunday 18 cars onions and 1 cucumbers. The pick up for the 30th consisted of 12 cars Texas potatoes, 7 cabbage, 4 onions and 16 mixed vegetables.

Shipping point markets on onions are stronger with rollers selling fob Laredo usual terms for $1.50 for yellows and $1.90 for Crystal wax. The cash market was mostly in the neighborhood of 1.40 for yellows and $1.75 for wax. The plan of growers and shippers to restrict shipments to the 100 car mark became effective last Tuesday. Cabbage at Brownsville was firm around $15@18.00 per ton for number one stock on usual terms basis; beets were in good demand at 1.25 per bushel in mixed cars; carrots were the same as beets and taring beans were stronger at 2.75 per bushel hamper with the season now closed on this commodity.

Eggs are somewhat easier both at Texas points and in the markets of New York and Chicago this morning. Poultry is about unchanged.

San Antonio, hens 23@25c; fryers 25@30c on small, 30@35c on large; roosters 12c; turkeys 25c pound live weight basis. Eggs fresh gathered firsts to producers, per case of 30 dozen $6.75.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Sudden breaks in the price of wheat today followed an official statement referring to the British labor crisis as nearly an approach to civil war. On some transactions the drop in values amounted to almost five cents a bushel from the day's top level. Closing quotations were nervous 1⅝ to 3¼c net lower, May (new) 1.61⅜ to 1.61⅝ and July 1.40⅛ to 1.40⅝. Corn finished unchanged to ½c down, oats ⅛@¼c to ⅝@½c off and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 40c.

Corn and oats were affected chiefly by the action of wheat. Substantial decreases in the visible supply of corn and oats as well were something of a counterbalance.

In the provision market realizing sales tended to offset the bullish influence of light stocks of lard.

Cotton

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—While British labor news had an unsettling effect on sentiment in the cotton market today, it found comparatively little reaction in prices which fluctuated irregularly within a range of ten or twelve points. After selling up to 18.25 early, July eased off to 18.15, but closed at 18.19 compared with 18.22 at the close last week. The general market closed steady at net declines of two to seven points.

Early cables from Liverpool were weak under liquidation attributed to the strike situation, but the market there rallied before the local opening and first prices here were steady at a decline of three points to an advance of one point.

Buying on reports of rains in the south and prospects for lower temperatures, sent the price of May up to 18.70 and October to 17.37 in early trading or about two to six points net higher. Part of this demand seemed to come from houses with Liverpool connections and there was considerable covering but fresh buying was probably held in check by the uncertainties of the British outlook. After early buyers had been supplied, prices turned easier.

Several reports reaching here claimed that the showers reported in the south had been beneficial in some places and that temperatures were higher. These advices led to liquidation by recent buyers which was probably accelerated by early afternoon reports that there seemed no chance of averting a general strike in England. May sold off to 18.59 and October to 17.25, net declines of six to nine points but prices later steadied up again on renewed covering. There also was a renewal of liverpool buying in the last half hour, accompanied by rather more optimistic labor reports from London. There also may have been some demand for near months on the talk of larger exports.

A local newspaper report published before the opening said the prospects were for an acreage of 97.5 to 100 per cent of last year but that it was still too early for definite figures.

Exports today 9,379, making 7,105,629 so far this season. Port receipts 18,798. U. S. port stock 966,476.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—(AP)—The cotton market developed a fair volume of trading and after a steady opening which advanced new crop months two points over the close of Saturday developed a progressive but moderate decline which despite occasional brief rallies persisted to the close the lowest prices of the day developing right at the end, the market closing at the bottom, nine to 14 points net down for the day.

The market at the beginning was sustained by the bad weather over the belt over Sunday but an easier tone soon developed owing to the proposed general strike in Great Britain. The depressing influence of this news on the stock market was reflected in lower prices for cotton. The decline was helped in a measure by an official forecast for fair weather in the belt tomorrow.

As Liverpool was much lower than due at the opening the market here opened practically unchanged and in the early trading October sold at 16.73 and December at the same figure, or two to three points above Saturday's close.

The market soon started to ease off and continued on the down grade for the rest of the session, reaching the lows of the day right at the end with July at 17.88, October at 16.60 and December at 16.60, or 13 to 14 points under the highs of the morning. The close was barely steady and at the lows.

Exports for the day totalled 9,580 bales.

Chicago Commuters To Get Fast Train

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—It will be possible for Chicagoans to live twenty-eight miles from the business district and still be but forty-six minutes from their office when the Illinois Central railroad completes electrification of its surburban service, President C. H. Markham announced today. The Illinois Central is the first road to electrify its Chicago terminal.

The new surburban schedule, effective July 1, when the road supplants steam with electricity, include trains between Matteson, a southern suburb, and the Chicago loop district which call for a 28-mile run in 46 minutes.

Lowden Stirs Up Hornet's Nest Of Farmers and Now Coolidge Thinks He Knows His Big Political Menace

Former Illinois Governor Cements Backing of Nation's Agricultural World and Presents Greatest Threat Coolidge Has Yet Faced

LOWDEN STIRS—x ....

BY ROBERT T. SMALL.

Special Correspondent of The Record News. Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who turned the vice presidential nomination down flat at Cleveland two years ago, visited Washington this past week, ostensibly as a member of the national commission which is seeking to prevent crime. The word ostensibly is used advisedly for it would seem that the governor's visit started a riot on Captol Hill which may result in political mayhem or murder.

Governor Lowden aroused the farm bloc to action. He breathed farm courage into a half dozen "standpatters" of the Grand Old Party. And what are the results? Half the senate is shaking its fist at the White House and otherwise defying the president of the United States. Governor Lowden said "Stand by the farmers," and immediately a lot of senators who had been guilty of nothing more radical all sesion long than pussyfooting, got out their pitchforks and started on a rampage.

Trouble For Cal

Governor Lowden gave the farm movement such an impetus that the senators are threatening to bowl over the president, the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of the treasury and all others who stand theoretically or actually in the way of granting direct aid to the farmers of the country through government financing of surplus crops and the stabilization of prices.

President Coolidge is deeply interested in crime prevention. He thinks the national movement an excellent thing, but he would be far happier today if Governor Lowden had not been a member of the commission which visited the capital.

Everything was progressing smoothly in Washington until Frank Lowden came. The wheels of congress were grinding slowly but smoothly and there were visions of an adjournment some time after the middle of May. The administration goose was hanging high. There were mutterings in the farm bloc but no one took them seriously. Everybody was making plans for a quiet and profitable summer. Then along came Lowden.

"Rally around the haystack, boys," called the former governor, and the way the boys rallied was a caution. They began to sing 'London Bridge Is Falling Down," and "Ring Around the Cornstalk," and although the governor has departed he left about as much trouble behind as Mrs. Riley's cow did when she kicked over the lamp at Chicago.

A Looming Threat

There no longer can be any doubt that Governor Lowden is the only original, dyed-in-the-wool candidate of the farmers for the republican presidential nomination in 1928. When the governor gave up the certainty of being vice president of the United States he knew full well he had other fish to fry or other ears of corn to husk. By his action in Washington he has thrown himself completely into the arms of his "brother farmers" and while millionaires usually are anathema to the son of the soil, Frank Lowden is the exception that proves the rule. He calls himself a dirt farmer and has got a fine farm to prove it.

President Coolidge contemplates the republican party as the party of business—business big and business little. Governor Lowden contemplates it as the party of the embattled farmers. The viewpoints are widely divergent. There is no doubt that President Coolidge and Lowden are the formidable political figures of the moment. The play between them during the next two years will be interesting to watch.

Blanton's Promise

Representative Tom Blanton of Texas who is always making the welkin ring in the house of representatives and who boasts the longest auto-obituary in the congressional directory, has been in congress more than nine years, but has not yet accomplished the reform which is said to have won for him his first nomination back in 1916.

According to the story which has been told about the capital from time to time, Representative Tom got that nomination by promising his constituents that he was going to make congress go to work at 8 o'clock every morning and not knock off until after sundown.

"What time do you suppose those congressmen and senators up there at Washington go to work every day?" asked the aspiring young congressman-to-be. "Not at sunup, like you and me, not at six o'clock or 7 o'clock or 8 o'clock. Maybe you won't believe me but I tell you it is true—they don't go to work until noon—not until you and I are quitting work for dinner."

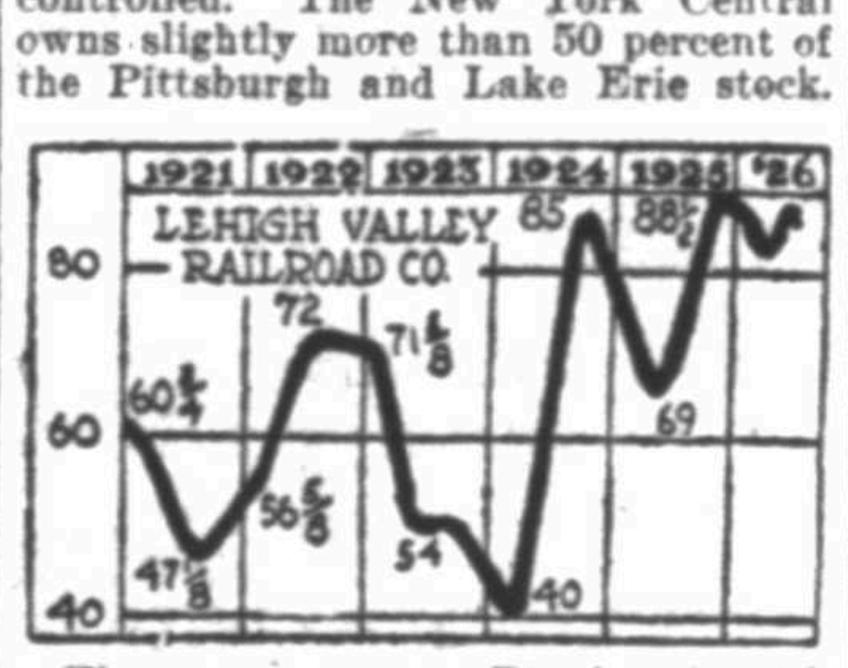

The story says a good deal more was related as to the night habits of the solons, which probably required them to sleep late in the morning. But in any event Uncle Tom promised that when he got to Washington there was to be a change of working hours. It is not to be denied the gentleman from Texas has raised many ructions since he has been in congress but thus far the dawdling lawmakers still start their sessions at noon—and with a lot of tardy boys and absentees at that.

General Henry M. Lord, director of the federal budget, is being accused once more of standing parsimoniously in the way of progress. Probably it is just a little joke at the general's expense, but they are whispering it about the corridors of the capital that the budget head has turned down flat an appeal for an appropriation from a certain bureau in the navy.

The money was to be used in cross-breeding carrier pigeons with parrots—the idea being that the pigeons in the future could deliver their messages verbally.

The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad has the heaviest operating revenues per mile of any system in the United States but much of its value lies in the fact that it give entrance to the Pittsburgh district to the New York Central by which the road is controlled. The New York Central owns slightly more than 50 percent of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie stock.

The road connects Pittsburgh with Youngstown, O., and the corporation operates some 232 miles of track. It owns or leases several subsidiary roads and has equipment including more than 300 locomotives and 35,000 freight cars. Revenue freight tonnage is about 90 percent of all traffic. Coal, ore, iron and steel products constitute the main items carried.

The company is capitalized for $50,000,000 in shares of $50 par of which $35,985,600 is outstanding. Funded debt consists of $8,803,696 with the nearest maturity in 1928. The profit and loss surplus is considerably in excess of the capital stock liability.

The company has a high earning power. In 1924, it earned over 17 percent on its capital stock and in 1925 almost 25 percent. Since 1891, the dividend rate has never fallen below 10 percent annually and many liberal extra dividends have been paid. The present rate is 10 percent. Total income for 1925 was $10,097,898. The stock is listed in the New York curb market.

OSCAR STRAUS DIES IN GOTHAM

Former Diplomat, Member Of Cabinet And Philanthropist

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Oscar Straus, former diplomat, cabinet member, philanthropist and financier, died at his home at 1010 Fifth Avenue today at the age of 76. He had been in ill health for some time, suffering from a complication of diseases.

Coming to this country as a Jewish immigrant, Mr. Straus entered his public career when in 1887 he was appointed minister to Turkey by President Cleveland. His life thence forth was devoted to public service. In 1906 he became the first member of the Hebrew race to enter the cabinet.

He then was appointed secretary of commerce by President Roosevelt, in which capacity he had supervision of immigrants.

His public service included honors by five presidents of both major political affiliations and in 1912 he was nominated progressive candidate for governor of New York.

His domestic political duties were varied for 18 years by attendance at The Hague, where he served six three-year terms beginning in 1902.

He gave generously to many charities.

Mr. Straus returned two weeks ago from Florida where he had spent the winter for his health. His end was entirely peaceful and his wife and son were with him when he died.

"He was an old man," relatives said, "and his life just came to end."

It was said that funeral services probably would be held Wednesday afternoon at Temple Beth-el.

Enraged Mother Raids Still, Puts 'Leggers to Flight

SAN ANTONIO, May 3.—(AP)—Prohibition law enforcement took on a new angle today when a Fest street mother appeared at the detective bureau and told of having made a very successful raid against an alleged bootlegging headquarters near her home.

The woman's anger toward the place became so great after three jelly-beans took her daughter there and got her intoxicated, that she took the law into her own hands, and single-handedly with the daughter as a guide, literally wrecked things. She destroyed several dozen bottles of beer and beer making equipment. Two operators of the place fled.

100,000 GIRLS HELD IN HAREM

Bishop Declares Christians Forced to Become Turkish Wives

NEW YORK, May 3—(AP)—More than 100,000 Christian women and girls are held captive in Turkish harems, in the belief of Bishop William T. Manning.

Ratification of the Lausanne treaty, he told the girls' friendly society at its annual meeting yesterday, would mean that "the United States assents in silence to these abominations."

He said that the figures as to the Christian women and girls were contained in official reports of to the league of nations.

"These women, whose husbands have been murdered, are held by force among the wives of the murderers," he declared. "Little girls whose Christian parents have been massacred are for sale to anyone who will buy and are subject wholly to the will of the purchasers.

"Christian girls, as refined and educated as any in America, with no fathers and brothers left to protect them, are living in slavery far worse than death."

Mustapha Kemal has actually destroyed a larger number of Christians and has done infinitely more toward the extirpation of Christians in the near east than any Turkish regime since the birth of the Ottoman rule in 1258," Bishop Manning added.

Philley Loses In Plea For Change

A plea of privilege on the part of W. W. Philley asking that trial of the suit of C. M. McFarland vs Philley be tried at Montague in Montague county was overruled by Judge P. A. Martin in the 30th district court Monday morning and the case, a suit for damages resulting an alleged unfulfilled contract, set down for the second Monday in June. The defendant in asking for the change of venue represented that it was his privilege to be sued in the county of his residence. In his ruling, however, Judge Martin took cognizance of the contract between Philley and Judge McFarland which was executed by Philley in Wichita county, with no statement of actual residence elsewhere.

The case is a civil action growing out of work contracted for on McFarland's residence last year. Philley is also charged by indictment with an attempt to poison McFarland in connection with the affair. The civil suit is for recovery of approximately $7,000 and names Philley's bondsmen as co-defendants.

J. W. Chancellor and J. M. Donald of Bowie argued the case Monday for the defendant and Eugene Mathis for the plaintiff, McFarland.

16 Woodrats Are Found In Yard

A litter of sixteen wood rats is the latest animal report in the city. A. A. Moser, 1508 Harrison Street, was cleaning up his back yard Monday night and discovered the nest of rats concealed under a pile of boards. Neither of the "old ones" was around. The sixteen youngsters all seemed in good shape when discovered.

Those versed in biology say a litter of sixteen from a member of the rat family is most extraordinary, eight to ten being considered large.
