Main attraction

Although balloons and clowns have become common in Midland as apartment owners and managers try to attract tenants and fill vacancies, the potential renter is most interested in one thing: lower rental rates.

Owners try giveaways, gimmicks

...But they can't seem to give away apartments

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

A free trip, microwave oven or balloons for the kids may get the apartment hunter's attention, but reduced rent is what gets his signature on the dotted line.

Midland is now a renters' market. And Midland apartment owners and managers are scrambling to attract residents. Incentives, ranging from vacations to kitchen appliances, came into full view about the beginning of the year.

But the clowns, barbecues, pony rides and drawings haven't seemed to attract as many renters as expected.

People are seeking rent reductions, not free goodies.

Although some complexes began lowering their rents last November, others offered "freebies." Because the gimmicks came at a time when people were leaving the oilpatch, apartment owners didn't have much luck filling their empty units.

But now the market is highly competitive. According to apartment managers, people are slowly moving to Midland. Almost all apartment complexes have trimmed a portion off the rent and many others are offering giveaways.

A random survey of apartment managers last week showed renters are watching for bargains, not freebies. "Giveaways are not working," said Earl Johnson, supervisor for Benchmark Properties. "They don't bring in the long term residents. Rent reduction has been the most attractive incentive."

Two years ago — at the peak of the oil boom and consequent housing shortage — some people flocking to the Tall City were living in tents and cars.

Midland was a sellers market. Apartment complexes were 100 percent full and there was no other housing available. At times, there weren't any "for rent" ads in the newspaper classified section. And rents continued to rise.

Today, it's a different story. Apartment hunters have the luxury of leisurely scanning two and three pages of ads, choosing locations and rent rates.

Apartment seekers seem to be looking for reasonable rents with a combination of amenities. Apartment owners and managers are learning to hustle, offering incentives to fill their buildings.

According to the Midland Apartment Association, Midland's complexes are only 67 to 70 percent full. The manager of a newer complex with some 300 units said her building is 55 percent occupied. The Midland Chamber of Commerce's May apartment survey shows there are 8,553 units available. Using the 70 percent occupancy rate, there are about 2,566 empty apartments throughout the city.

Consequently, apartment managers have a myriad of incentives to attract residents.

One apartment manager said the rent reductions "have helped considerably, but we don't look for it to be really hard market until next year."

"People in the apartment industry could choose who they wanted living in their complexes — that's changed," the manager added. "Renters are now taking advantage, choosing where they want to live."

Pam Crocker, manager at Chaparral, 4201 Garfield, said "specials attract undesirable people, so you have to be selective."

She added that many people "make no bones" that they moved into a complex to get the microwave or trip.

"Our rents are so low and our square footage is larger so that we don't need to offer incentives," said Ms. Crocker, referring to the 124-unit complex which is about 85 percent occupied.

U.S. ready to cut off Afghan arms

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The United States is ready to help stop the flow of arms to Afghanistan if the Soviets agree to withdraw their troops and allow the Afghans to form a non-aligned government, a U.S. official said Saturday.

A senior U.S. official traveling with Secretary of State George P. Shultz told reporters neither the estimated 100,000 Soviet troops nor the Moslem insurgents could gain the upper hand in Afghanistan.

"What we face is a prospect of a continuing stalemate with an increasing level of casualties on both sides," he said.

He said the Soviets apparently are convinced the United States and Pakistan can turn off aid to the insurgents or control them.

Most of the arms are funneled to the rebels through Pakistan, which is allied with the United States, and most insurgents have bases on the Pakistan-Afghanistan border.

Although the United States denies Soviet allegations that it is arming the rebels, it supports the guerrillas' cause.

"I think the insurgency is self-starting and self-continuing," said the official, who briefed reporters on condition his name be withheld.

"I think if you cut off support you would damage the insurgency but not end it."

And yet, the official said, the insurgents might be persuaded to stop fighting if the Soviets made an agreement to get out quickly.

In that event, he said, "I don't think there is any problem of guaranteeing (an end to) what the Russians define as outside interference (arming the guerrillas) if that is done simultaneously with a Soviet withdrawal which is specific and irrevocable in a fairly short time period."

Earlier, Shultz pledged U.S. support for Pakistan's efforts to mediate between the Soviet-backed government and the Moslem guerrillas.

Pakistani Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, who met with Shultz twice Saturday, was in SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is sending Secretary of State George P. Shultz to the Middle East in a renewed effort to win the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon, the White House announced Saturday.

In a two-sentence statement issued in Santa Barbara, where Reagan is spending the Fourth of July holiday at his ranch, the White House press office said Shultz telephoned Reagan on Saturday morning from Islamabad, the capital of Pakistan, "to report on and discuss his current talks in South Asia as well as where matters stand in the Middle East."

"Based on these talks, the president has directed that the secretary make an effort to stop in the Middle East before returning to the United States," the statement said.

Moscow last month and attended U.N.-sponsored talks in Geneva between Pakistan and the Soviet-backed government in Afghanistan.

Pakistan has taken in about 2 million Afghan refugees since the Soviets intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the pro-Moscow regime battle anti-communist guerrillas. Pakistan urgently wants peace talks to begin between the rebels and the Kabul government.

Meanwhile, Shultz was awaiting word from American mediators on whether he should undertake a new mission to the Middle East.

U.S. officials said Shultz would fly there next week instead of returning home only if there is a good chance of persuading Syria to enter negotiations with Lebanon over a troop withdrawal.

Israel has already agreed to get its forces out, and Shultz said the United States would not request they leave without arrangements for a pullout by Syrian and Palestine Liberation Organization fighters.

Air travel a way of life for Midlanders

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first article in a six-part series detailing commercial airlines — what they can do, how consumers should use them, how a travel agent can help, and more.

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Seven cities in Texas have more commercial airline boardings than Midland but the city ranks 23rd in population in this state. Midland Regional Airport, owned by the city and located 10 miles from downtown, boarded 672,674 passengers in 1982. A decade ago airline boardings were a mere 171,782.

Commercial airlines are booming in Midland. Bargains await the intelligent consumer at every turn. In fact, almost 90 percent of passengers flying the airlines traveled on discounted fares from January to March this year.

"Super Saver" fares (for roundtrip passengers on a 7- to 14-day stay) and economy one-way fares (still cheaper than one-way coach) can bring airline prices down to affordable level. Pleasure class weekend and night fares on some regional carriers (Muse, Southwest) can save money over the already-low executive fares on weekdays.

Residents of Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, and the surrounding towns are highly mobile and tend to ride the airlines for business, pleasure and necessity.

There are 34 daily departures from "MAF" — that's the abbreviation for Midland Regional Airport — up from 31 flights leaving daily in 1981. Bus travel, by contrast, is less popular. Buses hold fewer passengers than planes and only 26 of them leave Midland daily.

American Airlines is the largest air carrier operating here. But more people travel to and from Midland on smaller, regional Southwest Airlines — which made $34 million last year while major airlines were hemorrhaging funds.

The number of airlines in this market is growing: Now the group includes American, Southwest, Muse Air, Continental Airlines, Trans-Central Airlines, Air Midwest and Wise Airlines.

Wise Airlines won't be providing service from Midland until Sept. 1 at the earliest — and their only destination announced so far is San Angelo. The sponsoring company is N.M. Mitchell Inc.

Chief executive Malone Mitchell said the two round-trip flights planned for morning and evening will be handled through another carrier for ticketing and baggage. Mitchell said the airline is new to scheduled-service business and started small because "...starting with 20 flights going different places every day — we just don't think that's very wise."

Fixed-base operations like the new Memphis Aero facilities at the airport service private aircraft. At last count, 200 private planes — from jet to single-prop — were based at Midland Air Park near North Loop 250. Charter service is also available from Tiger Charter, Petro Jet and other services based at either Midland Airport or Air Park.

But most people fly the scheduled airlines. One airline executive said, "Make no mistake: It's always going to be cheaper to fly a commercial jet than it will be to use a private aircraft," because private airplanes entail high charter fees or expenses for the plane, pilot, upkeep and fuel.

With the airport doing so well, one would think travelers would have an easy time finding a flight to their destination. This is not always the case.

Some passengers are still forced to fly to point X or even to points X,Y and Z to get to the place that they really wanted to reach.

But some of the most popular points flyers want to go to are Dallas Love Field, DFW, Houston, Austin, San Antonio, Los Angeles and El Paso. These cities are served by single-plane flights that may stop briefly in other cities to board or let off passengers.

Many nonstops, notably to Los Angeles, Houston, Mobile, Ala., and Baltimore-Washington, have been introduced by the air carriers.

Other cities with single-plane service (short stops) include Washington, D.C.; Tucson; Phoenix; Lubbock; New Orleans; Denver; and Corpus Christi.

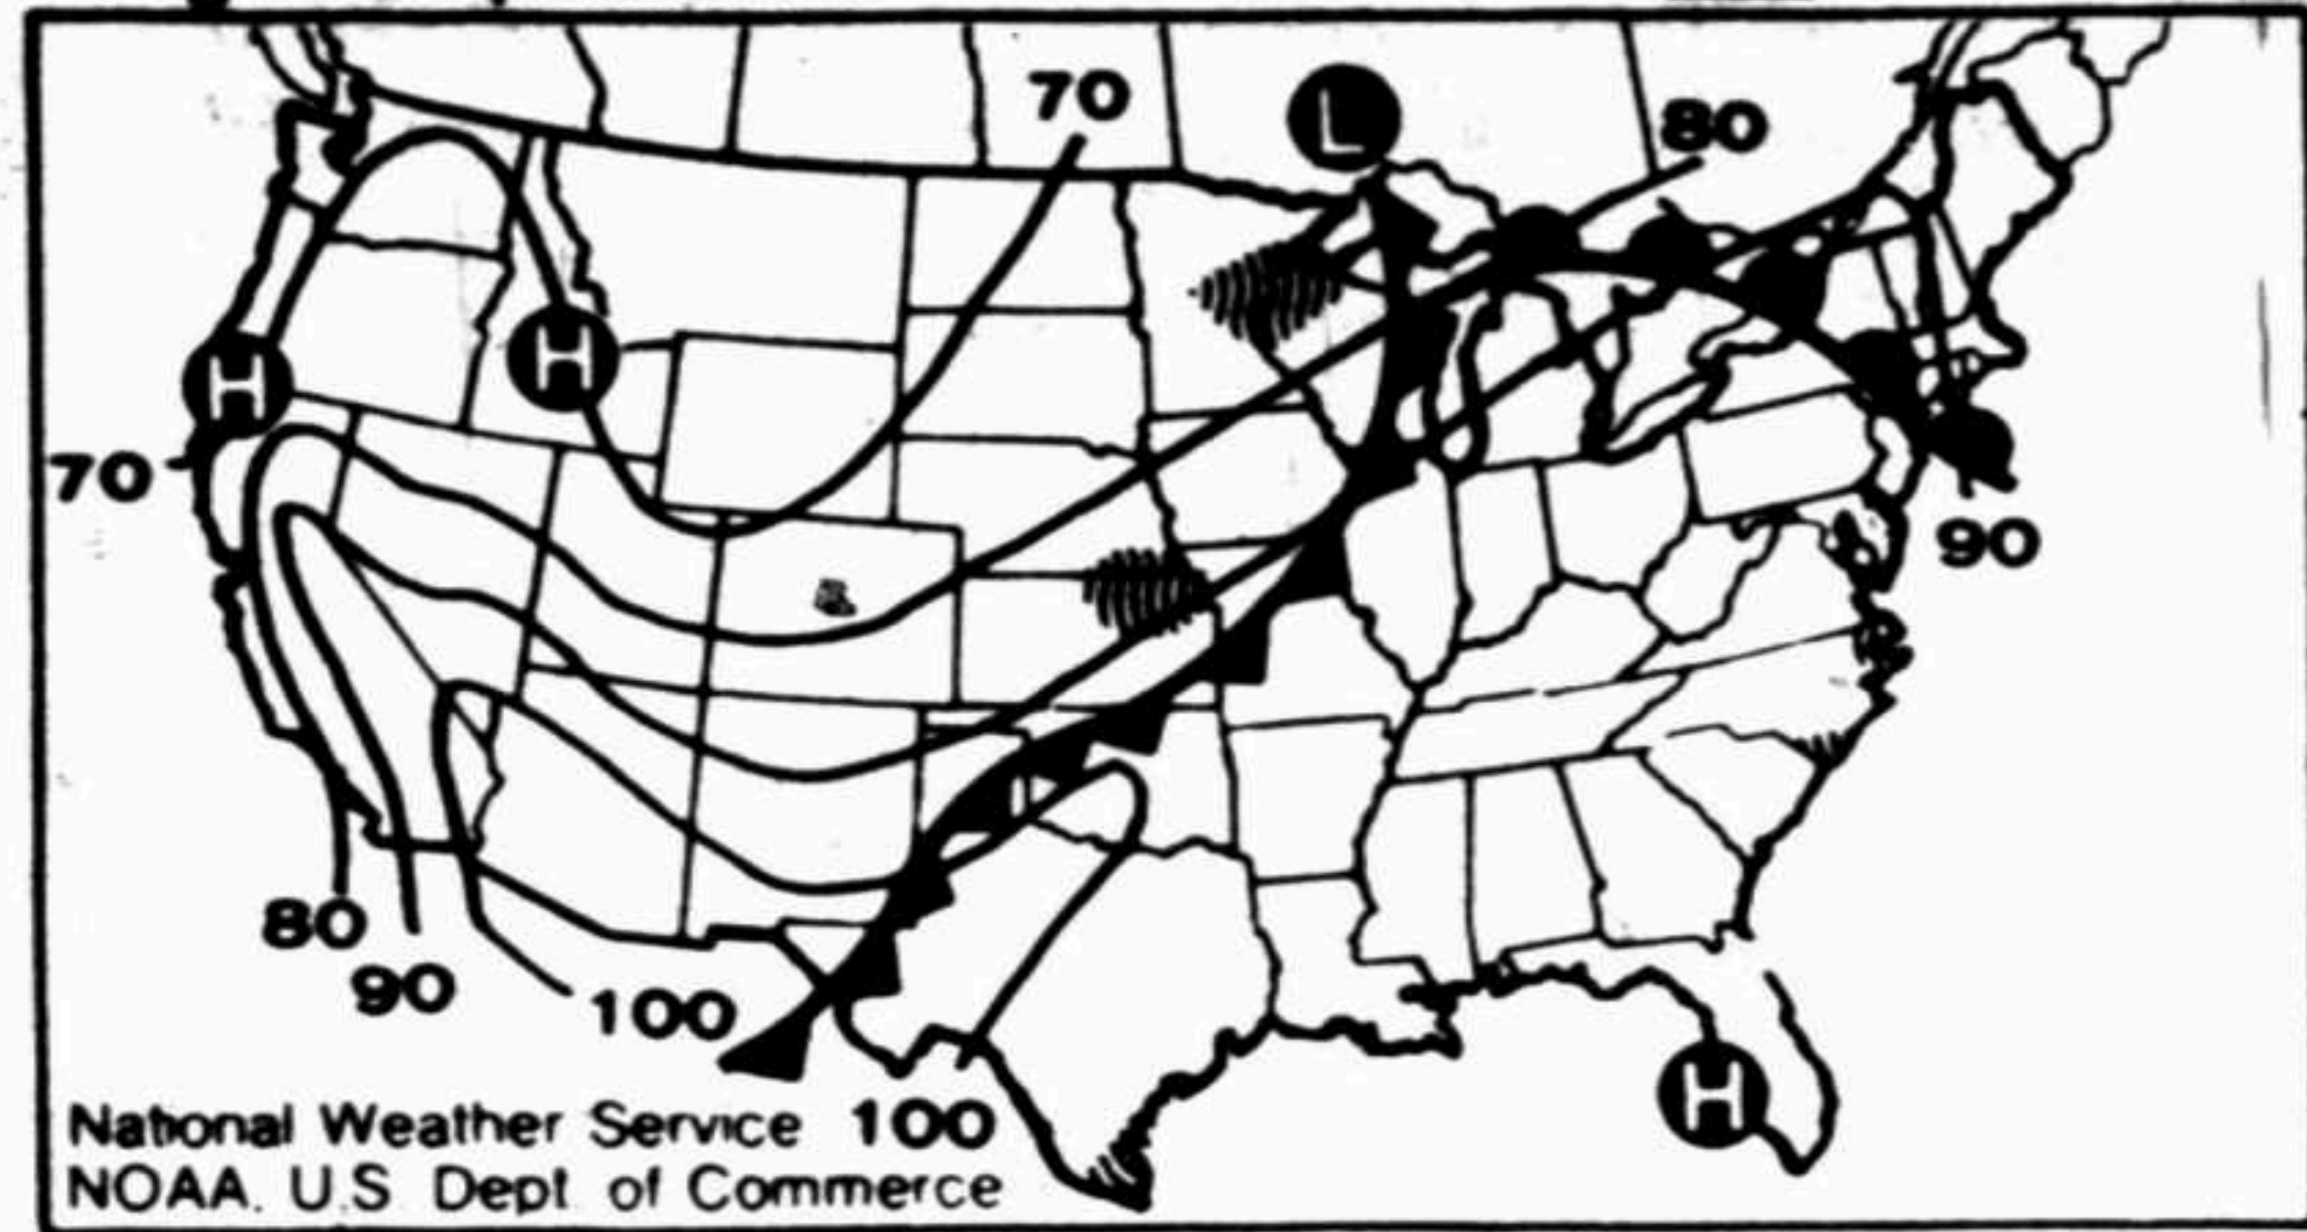

American, the air behemoth, flies most passengers through its two hubs: Dallas-Fort Worth and Chicago. So most flights out of Midland on that airline will first go to Dallas under flight numbers 482, 470, 600, or 354. These leave from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day.

Major airlines — including American — have reported heavy losses during the recent fare wars. These carriers lost $2 billion from cutting fares below the break-even point. By contrast, Southwest and Muse are two airlines operating here that have incredible moneymaking potential, because they are relatively young and have low costs of operation.

Heat to have hot time on July 4

Some firecracker-popping weather to befit an Independence Day week-end celebration is in store for Midlanders today and Monday. However, the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport tentatively promises brief relief from the 102-degree temperatures: isolated thunderstorms. But the chance of rainfall is only 20 percent. Since the first of the year, only 2.63 inches of rainfall officially has been recorded at Midland. The normal rainfall through June is 5.84 inches, while the normal for the year is 13.70 inches, said the weatherman. Midland's last significant moisture was via snowfall and freezing rain in mid-January, when the National Weather Service reported 1.14 inches of moisture. "It's been very dry ever since," said the weatherman. The peak temperature Saturday was 103 degrees, while the record high for a July 2 is 104 degrees in 1964. The overnight low was 74 degrees. The record low for a July 3 was 61 degrees in 1942.

Guatemalan leadership cracks down, makes concessions

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
 Associated Press Writer
GUATEMALA CITY — Discontent is rising against the government of born-again Christian Gen. Efraim Rios Montt, and the regime is simultaneously cracking down and trying to appease its critics. The government imposed a "state of alert" and suspended certain civil liberties last week to head off threats to oust Rios Montt, then made concessions — such as announcing a date for elections — to try to cool things down. The unanswered question is whether the concessions will satisfy the military officers and civilians Showing off a souvenir of her hijacked flight to Cuba is Gloria de la Cuesta. She and 60 other persons aboard a Pan Am flight from Miami to Orlando were returned to the U.S. Saturday after their surprise detour.

Pan Am jetliner back from Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — A Pan Am jetliner carrying 61 people was hijacked to Havana on Saturday by two men who shouted "Go to Cuba!" and flicked cigarette lighters near a bottle of gasoline, FBI agents and passengers said. No one was hurt, and the two Cuban hijackers were arrested by Cuban police. The Boeing 727, originally bound from Miami to Orlando, returned to Miami at 3:36 p.m. EDT, after 3 1/2 hours at Havana's Jose Marti International Airport. The hijackers told crew members on Pan Am's Flight 378 that they had come to Miami on the 1980 Mariel boatlift and left relatives behind in Cuba, FBI agent Jim Freeman said. Freeman tentatively identified the hijackers as Angel Martinez, in his 40s or 50s, and Omar Merida, in his 30s, saying they were the only passengers who did not come back to Miami. The jetliner, carrying 55 passengers and a crew of six, had just taken off for Orlando and was 20 miles northwest of Miami when the hijackers made their demands, FAA spokesman Jack Barker said. As soon as the plane started, a man pulled out a small bottle, a Woolite bottle, filled with gasoline," said passenger Yezid Delacuesta of Miami. "We could smell it. The man As that man, who seemed to be drunk, flicked a cigarette lighter near the bottle. Freeman and Delacuesta said, the other hijacker went forward in the cabin carrying a pear-shaped object that resembled a hand grenade wrapped in tape. He too, carried a lighter, which he snapped on and off near a fuse, Freeman said. "Another flight attendant spoke Spanish and conversed with the younger man," the FBI agent said. "He told the flight attendant in Spanish that he had a wife, a 9-year-old son and a 5-year-old daughter in Havana." Delacuesta said Cuban soldiers came onto the plane, threw the hijackers to their knees and searched them roughly before leading the men off. "One of the hijackers said, 'Viva la revolucion,'" said Delacuesta. It was the fifth hijacking of Cuba of aircraft flying South Florida routes in the past nine weeks. All four previous hijackers were taken into custody by Cuban authorities. On May 1, a hijacker on a Capitol Air flight from San Juan to Miami and Chicago tossed leaflets across the cabin complaining of "hunger, unemployment, misery and grief." He then barricaded himself in the lavatory and threatened to blow up the plane unless it went to Havana. A woman armed with a plastic flare pistol hijacked the same Capitol flight to Havana on May 12. On May 19, a widely gesturing man claiming to have explosives forced an Eastern Airlines jet to Cuba from a Miami-New York flight. Passengers said he had several sticks of dynamite, but FAA officials later said there was no bomb.

U.S. economy out of its recession

But how long and how strong is recovery?

By ROBERT FURLOW
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — The latest economic facts and forecasts bolster the belief that the economy has emerged from its recession, but there's still no consensus on the strength or length of the young recovery. "America's economy is beginning to sparkle," President Reagan said last week after a new report showed business expanding at the fastest pace in more than two years. Even his critics agree the 1983 recovery will be brisk enough to revive many companies' profits, encourage production increases and bring down the unemployment rate, which rose to its highest level in 40 years during the 1981-82 recession. But more and more concerned voices, including at least one from the White House, are being raised about whether the nation will enjoy the lasting economic revival that Reagan and most of his officials are predicting. Martin Feldstein, chief White House economist, said recently, "Although the recovery is likely to continue at a solid pace for several years, there is a risk of about one chance in three that the high real interest rates caused by large budget deficits will cause the recovery to falter next year or decline to an unacceptably slow pace." Reagan, in another speech last week, agreed that deficits which are now predicted to hit $200 billion or more a year must be chopped if the recovery is to become more than "just another blip on the economic boom-and-bust rollercoaster we've been riding for years." Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan complained Wednesday that "there are still some (who) focus on interest rates and the federal deficit to the exclusion of other factors which make this recovery unlike others in the recent past." But the White House mixture of celebration tinged with caution is also typical of the views of many private economists. Their comments are filled with "howevers" and "on-the-other-hands." Here's a sample: —Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, said, "I don't think there's a lot that can go wrong with this recovery this year, barring some unforeseen shock." But for the long term, he cautioned, "There's much to be worried about." "The administration, along with the Congress, is responsible for these deficits," he said. Administration officials "have not been so outstanding (on controlling the deficit), and they seem to be following a course of just getting through the 1984 election before they change anything." —Donald Straszheim, vice president of the private Wharton Economics, said, "There's a good bit of momentum in the recovery, it's sure not fragile any more." But he, too, cautioned that huge deficits "are an important influence that I'm afraid is going to be out there for years to come." They could mean "a premature ending of the recovery" after another year or 18 months, he said. —Thomas Thomson, chief economist at Crocker National Bank, pointed out that inflation, the administration's main economic foe, apparently is still in check. "It's hard to make a case that inflation will spoil the party very quickly," he said. "It's too early to start talking about an aborted recovery."

Renter's market prevails in Midland

 Ms. Ohliger noted that a February barbecue at Polo Park resulted in 60 new leases for the 184-unit complex. Midland Elms, 3601 Andrews Highway, also offered a barbecue on its property a couple of weeks ago. Although not as successful in the number of leases signed — 12 out of 75 people who stopped by — the 189-unit complex has only one vacancy. "People have a choice now, so we try to make their little community," said Midland Elms manager Margo Tedder. "We will be having a drawing for a free trip to the Caribbean today, but they don't want free trips, people want to save money." On Thursday, Saddle Club, 5101 N. A St., held a drawing for two trips to Mexico. "We held one for the residents, another for newcomers," Lynette Lasater, resident manager said. Residents who rented apartments before incentives came into play are grumbling. Some of the established residents interviewed by The Reporter-Telegram said "it was unfair to offer rent reductions to newcomers and not to old residents." But a number of apartment managers said when their established residents' leases expire, they will be able to re-sign a lease with a rent reduction. Although Ms. Lasater said she could not release the occupancy rate for the 320-unit Saddle Club complex, she did note that "before we lowered our rents to people off the street, we lowered rents for our residents." Johnson, who works for a company that owns seven complexes in town, said many of the apartment dwellers do not understand that from the newest to the oldest, complexes have mortgages. However, Johnson noted that now there is a price range "for just about everybody." "It was a fluke market — back in the boom — we'll probably never see again," he said. "Rents were real high, but salaries were high too." "The biggest problem in Midland is that we're almost in the position of being overbuilt. What would hurt us is more apartments. I think we could cope with the number of apartments we have right now. By next summer we should be in a good economy again."

67,000 air passengers board in Midland

 in the cities it serves. Muse Air has lower costs than major airlines because of new, fuel-efficient, two-crew jets. But it provides "major" services — assigns seats, gives free drinks on business flights and flies quiet DC-9 Super 80 jets with leather seats. Leisure Class Muse Air to Dallas leaves at nights and on weekends for a "beautiful" $30 fare, says the company. Its business-class fare on weekdays is $45. These fares will rise by $5 soon if they haven't already. This bears out Michael Muse's statement that he is not fond of "giving away" a good product. Southwest Airlines has similar low fares, but none of the revolutionary Muse marketing. M. Lamar Muse was fired as president of Southwest a few years ago, and his abilities are still strong. Southwest makes money. But its "Love" concept has been around 10 years and has aged with little change — except that flight attendants wear long pants or below-the-knee skirts now instead of hotpants. Southwest also operates low-cost, fuel-efficient jets (Boeing 737 200-300 series) and thus charges lower fares. It also is the sole practitioner of the "10 minute turnaround" that loads passengers, provisions, fuel and baggage in a real hurry so that planes fly more and gates at airports are used to the fullest extent.

Democrats favor Mondale, Glenn

AUSTIN (AP) — The presidential race in Texas shows signs of being a two-man contest among the Democrats — Walter Mondale and John Glenn.

The former vice president from Minnesota may be better known in the state but, at the present, the Ohio senator may be more successful in raising campaign funds.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California has made claims recently that he is running third nationally behind Mondale and Glenn, but so far there is little indication of that in Texas.

Meanwhile, Texas Republicans say they are confident President Reagan can carry the state in 1984 as he did in 1980.

At a recent University of Texas seminar, two Democratic pollsters, George Shipley and Roy Spence, both of Austin, predicted an easy Reagan win if the election were held today.

But the primary balloting is almost a year away, and the general election 17 months.

The front-runners in the Democratic race are being pushed and led by some top state officials and party leaders.

Mondale's top strategists, although their names do not appear on any stationery, are Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple and Calvin Guest, former state Democratic chairman. Current State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman is a strong unofficial supporter.

Much of the successful fund-raising for Glenn has been inspired by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, one of Glenn's earliest supporters.

Gov. Mark White says he will not take an official stand until after the Democratic primary.

Slagle has said that if Mondale is the Democratic nominee, there is a 50-50 chance he will choose Texas' U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as a running mate.

"We feel that Mondale is way out in front with the grass roots," said Guest, "but money-wise they are much closer, mostly because of Hobby's efforts for Glenn."

Guest predicts there will be no "real movement" in presidential campaigns in Texas until after Labor Day, the traditional kickoff for general election campaigns. He said Mondale has tentative plans for another visit to Texas in August or September.

"It's sure as heck a two-man race across Texas," said Jim Callaway of Houston, treasurer of the Glenn campaign, "and Glenn is pulling closer to Mondale in Texas. There is real enthusiasm for him in this state."

Callaway said Glenn has made four trips to Texas and tentatively plans to return this month.

Bernard Rapoport of Waco, a key aide in the state and nationally for Cranston, is enthusiastic about the California senator's showing in several recent straw polls, particularly at Democratic conventions in California and Wisconsin.

"There is no question he is moving up the ladder," Rapoport said. "There is a euphoric spirit in the candidate and the campaign. We're in the top three now. It's Mondale and Glenn right now but this will allow us to close the gap."

Backers of Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado don't agree, however.

'Military commissaries should be closed'

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — All military commissaries in the United States including five in San Antonio, should be closed to save taxpayers' money, a presidential commission of big businessmen named to study cost controls, announced Wednesday.

Of 4,000 military installations, only 312 are worthwhile and should be retained, said the chairman of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, Peter Grace, head of the W.R. Grace shipping firm. He blamed "pork barrel" in Congress for maintaining these bases.

He expects to present his findings to the President formally in the fall but for months he has been handing out volumes of studies of government agencies made by corporate heads whom he termed "brilliant men who can contribute many bright ideas to government."

He used around 1,300 executives and their paid employees to study all parts of government (except research and development). They spent around $67 million of their own money to do this.

Between $300 and $400 billion in savings are possible under these studies, he said, "enough to wipe out the deficit."

He was highly critical of the Veterans Administration which he said was 50 percent overstuffed and which is spending far more money to maintain hospital beds than private hospitals. He said the veterans' hospitals ought to be turned over to private enterprise.

He advocates complete reshuffling of the military retirement system, painting one example whereby a man could get $180,000 yearly in retirement pay.

Military retirement pay which starts as early as 37 years with benefits after 20 years equal to half of terminal base pay or more "is unaffordable for the nation," said Grace. He suggested as an alternative that there be an earned income offset to retirement income, similar to Social Security.

Men take 'weird' trip to Vegas

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Mark Jackson and Scott Davis had nothing to do one Friday night, so they accepted free tickets to see a major league baseball game.

By midnight, they were in Las Vegas, Nev., each carrying a new toothbrush and $500 cash.

The Rangers and Delta Airlines offered a trip for two to the holder of the winning ticket to the June 24 game at Arlington Stadium — as long as the winners left directly from the ballfield, midgame.

The two gambled a little as soon as they arrived in Las Vegas, losing about $60. On Saturday they decided to replace the cut-offs and T-shirts they had worn to the game with bright shorts, Hawaiian shirts and "punk-rock" sunglasses.

Democrats favor Mondale, Glenn

AUSTIN (AP) — The presidential race in Texas shows signs of being a two-man contest among the Democrats — Walter Mondale and John Glenn.

The former vice president from Minnesota may be better known in the state but, at the present, the Ohio senator may be more successful in raising campaign funds.

Sen. Alan Cranston of California has made claims recently that he is running third nationally behind Mondale and Glenn, but so far there is little indication of that in Texas.

Meanwhile, Texas Republicans say they are confident President Reagan can carry the state in 1984 as he did in 1980.

At a recent University of Texas seminar, two Democratic pollsters, George Shipley and Roy Spence, both of Austin, predicted an easy Reagan win if the election were held today.

But the primary balloting is almost a year away, and the general election 17 months.

The front-runners in the Democratic race are being pushed and led by some top state officials and party leaders.

Mondale's top strategists, although their names do not appear on any stationery, are Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple and Calvin Guest, former state Democratic chairman. Current State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman is a strong unofficial supporter.

Much of the successful fund-raising for Glenn has been inspired by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, one of Glenn's earliest supporters.

Gov. Mark White says he will not take an official stand until after the Democratic primary.

Slagle has said that if Mondale is the Democratic nominee, there is a 50-50 chance he will choose Texas' U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as a running mate.

"We feel that Mondale is way out in front with the grass roots," said Guest, "but money-wise they are much closer, mostly because of Hobby's efforts for Glenn."

Guest predicts there will be no "real movement" in presidential campaigns in Texas until after Labor Day, the traditional kickoff for general election campaigns. He said Mondale has tentative plans for another visit to Texas in August or September.

"It's sure as heck a two-man race across Texas," said Jim Callaway of Houston, treasurer of the Glenn campaign, "and Glenn is pulling closer to Mondale in Texas. There is real enthusiasm for him in this state."

Callaway said Glenn has made four trips to Texas and tentatively plans to return this month.

Bernard Rapoport of Waco, a key aide in the state and nationally for Cranston, is enthusiastic about the California senator's showing in several recent straw polls, particularly at Democratic conventions in California and Wisconsin.

"There is no question he is moving up the ladder," Rapoport said. "There is a euphoric spirit in the candidate and the campaign. We're in the top three now. It's Mondale and Glenn right now but this will allow us to close the gap."

Backers of Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado don't agree, however.

"Cranston is not really a factor in Texas," said John Poulard, a Dallas attorney who is a Texas organizer for Hart. "The straw poll (in Wisconsin) hurt the heck out of Mondale, but I don't think he has lost the lead to Glenn. But his support is paper-thin in Texas."

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A South Texas congressman told the House of Representatives that he would rather see groups of U.S. Citizens take the message of democracy to people of other countries than the Central Intelligence Agency.

For this, Rep. Kika de la Garza, D., Mission, was lauded in an editorial in the Washington Post.

The discussion arose over a proposal wanted by big Labor groups, the U.S. State Department and the Reagan administration to set up the National Endowment for Democracy. It would operate out of the Voice of America, an independent agency with close affiliation to the State Department. A fund created by groups and individuals in the private sector would be used to disseminate democratic principals in other countries. The money would be spent in those countries. When U.S. citizens thought that Democracy was not being carried out in those foreign countries, these U.S. citizens would seek to correct this.

The Post editorial pointed out that "the CIA has been known to use its resources secretly to bolster democracy abroad."

Police arrest two teen-age suspects

HOUSTON (AP) — Two teen-age suspects were arrested Saturday and a third was being sought in the stabbing deaths of four young employees during the robbery of a miniature race track and video game center, a homicide detective said.

A 19-year-old former employee of Malibu Grand Prix and a 16-year-old minor were in custody, but no charges had been filed, according to a detective who asked to remain anonymous. An arrest warrant was issued for a 20-year-old male, the detective said, refusing to elaborate.

The detective said police also had recovered part of the money taken in the robbery, which was discovered Friday morning. Police have estimated the total amount stolen at less than $5,000.

Service considered for Midland

AUSTIN — A Texas Aeronautics Commission hearing examiner says he will release a "proposal for decision" within 45 days on an application from N.M. Mitchell Inc., doing business as Wise Airlines, for an air carrier certificate to provide passenger service between Midland and San Angelo.

Judge accused of bad deal

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney for two grandsons of Hugh Roy Cullen has accused Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who oversees the Howard Hughes estate, of approving a partial settlement of claims to the Cullen fortune so the judge could benefit from a real estate deal.

The Cullens are one of the nation's richest families, reportedly worth several billion dollars. Two grandsons, Baron Enrico diPortanova, 49, and his brother, Ugo, 46, currently receive about $1.2 million a month from trusts set up by their grandfather.

But the diPortanova brothers claim their relatives denied them a rightful share of stock in the profitable Quintana Petroleum Co. founded by the famed Texas wildcatter and owe them damages that court officials say could exceed $2 billion.

NEW YORK attorney Roy Cohn, who represents the diPortanova brothers, filed a motion Friday calling for the removal of Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who for the past seven years has presided over the courtroom battle for Hughes' vast fortune.

Cohn, who represented the late U.S. Sen. Joseph McCarthy and aided his hunt for communist subversives in the 1950s, said Gregory "took a complete dive" for the Cullens when he arranged a previously undisclosed out-of-court settlement two weeks ago.

Gregory declined to comment on the allegations but said he would set a hearing later this week.

Joe Jamail, an attorney for the Cullen family, denied a settlement had been reached.

"There's no way full settlement could be reached unless Cohn and all the trustees had signed it," Jamail said.

COHN SAID two Houston firms appointed by the judge to serve as guardians for Ugo, who was declared mentally incompetent several years ago, participated in the "sellout." Under the settlement, Cohn said, Ugo would receive only about $50,000 from the Cullen estate.

James Patrick Smith, an attorney appointed by Gregory to represent Ugo's interests was attending an out-of-town convention and unavailable for comment.

BY AGREEING to the settlement, the motion said, Gregory was allowed to participate in a real estate venture of "substantial value" and to seek advances or loans from attorneys benefiting from the pact.

Cohn refused to provide details of the alleged venture, saying only that "the motive is a lay-down for the Cullens. The Cullens apparently wield a big stick in Texas."

The diPortanova brothers contend the Cullen heirs cut their mother, Lillie Cullen diPortanova, out of her share of company stock that would have passed to them after her death in 1966.

THE CASE has been scheduled for trial July 18.

Cohn's motion also argued Gregory should disqualify himself because Jamail previously acted as an attorney for a member of Gregory's family. Jamail said he had represented Gregory's son after a car accident but added, "That's no disqualification. I've represented many judges in Texas."

Shadow of CIA hangs over Radio Free Europe, Radio Liberty

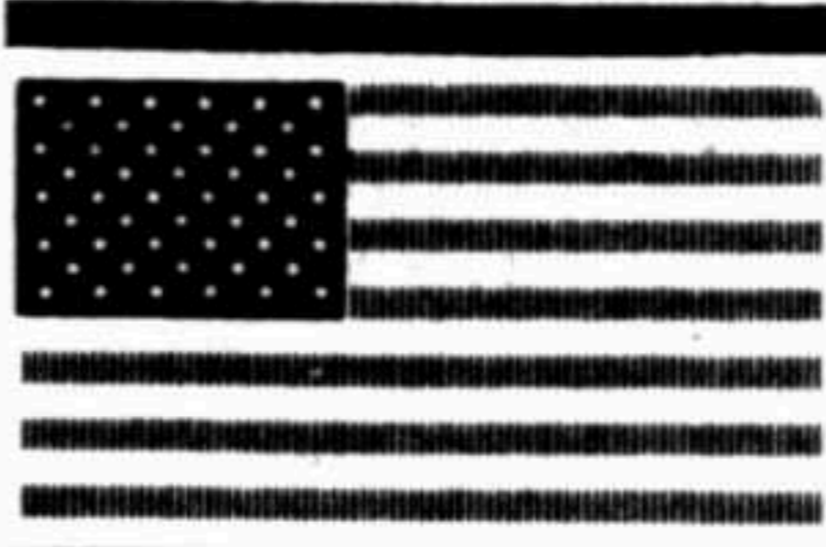

WASHINGTON (AP) — James L. Buckley, the conservative former senator from New York, is struggling to exorcise a cloak-and-dagger ghost hanging over Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty.

Now president of the private corporation that runs the two stations, Buckley said the image of the radio systems is unjustifiably darkened by the shadow of the Central Intelligence Agency, a dozen years after Congress abruptly threw the CIA out of the international broadcasting business.

Until 1971, the CIA made available operating money for the broadcasts which are beamed in 21 languages to an estimated 47 million listeners in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. Now the money comes directly from Congress.

Buckley, who left a high-ranking position at the State Department, said in an interview Saturday that the CIA taint is almost as serious a problem as the "massive and expanding" campaign of electronic jamming used by the Soviet Union in an attempt to prevent the broadcasts from being heard. "It's a ghost I want to dissipate," he said. "We unfortunately have been tainted by the fallout of the revelation in 1971 that we had been financed by the CIA in a covert fashion," Buckley said. "We were founded by the CIA and even though they didn't interfere in the editorial part of the operation, it was tainted."

nation

"The CIA has been out of the picture since 1971 and the last thing you want is any vestige of their return," he added. "But there is a constant suspicion."

He said that because of that suspicion and controversy the official policy of the stations since 1971 has been "to lay low." As a result, he said, the radio stations haven't had as much money or employees as they wanted.

Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty seek to report on internal events within the countries in the Soviet sphere. They claim an audience of 35 million in Eastern Europe and 14 million in the Soviet Union.

Refuges face worst threats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's 410 national wildlife refuges — home to endangered species like the whooping crane and the bald eagle — are facing greater threats now than they have in their 80-year history, a major environmental group asserted Saturday.

The National Audubon Society said the wildlife preserves are being squeezed by tight budgets strained by the need to handle 26 million annual visitors. At the same time, the society said, the Reagan administration is pushing for more oil and gas drilling and other economic development detrimental to wildlife.

The society said problems on the 90-million-acre system, located in every state except West Virginia, began long before Interior Secretary James Watt took office. But Watt's policies are increasing the pressures, it said.

"After years of physical decay, degrading commercialization and crippling political abuse, the refuge system is in the hands of a development-oriented administration that seems determined to wring out every last dollar it can," the society said in its published report on the refuges.

THE SOCIETY SAID Watt and his deputies have made economic development on the refuges a top priority — pressing refuge managers to increase the amount of oil and gas drilling, timber cutting, commercial fishing, fur trapping and other activities to bring in more revenue.

The push for more development is coming at a time when the preserves are already facing major threats to wildlife, the society said, quoting from an unreleased review done by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which manages the refuge system.

The wildlife service found that more than half the refuges are plagued by problems of poaching, vandalism, soil erosion, water and air pollution, commercial development and other wildlife disturbances.

"In some cases, this degradation or loss of resource is irreversible," the wildlife service's draft review said. "It represents a sacrifice by a public that, for the most part, is unaware that such a price is being paid."

WILDLIFE SERVICE officials did not dispute the reported findings of the survey, but they maintained that the Audubon Society was painting too bleak a picture in its report.

"We feel the outlook for the national refuge system is the best it has been in a decade," said Alan Levitt, a wildlife service spokesman.

WILDLIFE SERVICE officials also said that commercial activities ranging from oil drilling to beekeeping have long been allowed on many of the refuges and the push to expand these activities will not take place if they would harm the primary purpose of the refuges, to provide havens for wildlife.

Audubon Society President Russell Peterson said while Watt has been allocating more money for roads and buildings he has cut back on habitat protection, wildlife management and research, leaving many refuges critically understaffed.

Largest number of countries represented at Scout Jamboree in Canadian Rockies

KANANASKIS COUNTRY, Alberta (AP) — This wilderness tract in the shadow of the Canadian Rockies bursts into a colorful international city this week when teenagers from around the world pitch their tents for the 15th World Scout Jamboree.

More than 13,600 scouts and adult scout leaders from 105 countries have registered for the 12-day jamboree, which opens Tuesday in a mountain pass of western Canada's Alberta province. That's the largest number of countries ever to attend a world jamboree, the premier celebration of scouting held every four years.

Argentina is sending the smallest contingent, two scouts, and the United States is sending the largest, 3,600.

Among other countries, Libya is sending 18 scouts and Kuwait 20. Australia will have 108. Trinidad 186, France 308, Switzerland 459, Germany 786, the United Kingdom

1,242, and Canada 3,525.

The jamboree-bound scouts range in age from 14 to 18, and about 5 percent of them are women, from countries where scouting is co-educational.

"I'm very excited to see kids coming from more than 100 countries, to see the different customs and to see how this mixture of youngsters get along together," said Donald M. Deacon, the jamboree's camp chief.

"To have it in Canada's beautiful mountains makes it special. It is so different from anything these scouts would experience anywhere."

The campsite, at an altitude of 4,000 feet, is in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, about 50 miles west of Calgary in Alberta's Kananaskis Provincial Park. A few miles west are the glaciers and snow-capped peaks of Banff National Park, which straddles the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia.

For 12 days, Kananaskis Country will be the eighth largest city in the province of Alberta. On a tract covering two square miles, it will have five food markets, a 32-bed hospital, a bank, an American Express office, a post office, a ham-radio station, a camera repair shop, a movie theater, a newspaper and a trading post.

Scouts and their leaders will cook all their own meals on outdoor stoves with provisions they pick up daily at distribution centers. Special provisions have been made for food storage to keep bears away from the site, according to the host scout group, Scouts Canada.

Scouts will have their pick of outdoor activities including mountain climbing, river rafting, hiking, backpacking, trap shooting, archery, bronco riding and pioneering projects.

They'll also be meeting scouts from other lands, trading patches, sharing hotdogs, singing traditional scouting songs around the campfire and writing letters home.

Among the 3,000 jamboree staff members, most of them volunteers, will be interpreters, hikemasters, program leaders, bank tellers and cooks. Foreign ministers and ambassadors have planned visits during the jamboree.

The world jamboree has been held every four or five years since 1920 with two exceptions. The 1979 jamboree, scheduled for Iran, was canceled because of the volatile situation there. World War II forced the cancellation of a jamboree in the 1940s.

Planning for this year's event began two years ago, when Canada held its national jamboree on the site. Scouting organizations in each country interviewed and selected participants among thousands of applicants. Then the scouts began raising money to pay for their mid-summer journeys.

The first world jamboree was in England, which has been the site for three jamborees.

Priest, churchmen wounded at church

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two men opened fire on a car outside a downtown church, wounding a priest and two churchmen, and the gunmen remained at large Saturday while police said they had no motive for the shootings.

Police initially theorized that the gunmen intended to rob the church counselors.

Murderer's appeal to be heard

DENVER (AP) — The Colorado Supreme Court has agreed to hear an appeal from convicted wife-murderer Clarence Burns, whose work-release sentence was changed to a prison term by a district judge after a public outcry.

The court on Friday gave District Judge Alvin Lichtenstein 10 days to answer a brief filed by Burns' attorneys and explain why Burns' original sentence should not be reinstated. That sentence consisted of two years of probation with Burns spending his nights and weekends in Denver County Jail for two years.

Avenal wants state prison

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — State prisons can be like ugly ducklings — but not to the citizens of Avenal. They want one.

State Corrections Chief George Denton told representatives from the city of 4,200 on Friday that he was heartened by their request.

The department normally locates prisons in metropolitan areas to take advantage of a ready work force, and the Legislature has ordered development of Southern California sites because of the concentration of prisons in the north. Avenal is in central California.

After meeting with Denton on Friday, Avenal City Manager Homer Bludau said, "It's obvious that they need the sites and that they are hard-pressed to find them."

City may be key factor in race

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Democratic mayoral candidate W. Wilson Goode says Philadelphia will be a key factor in the 1984 presidential race.

"If there is going to be a Democrat in the White House in 1985 Philadelphia will have a significant role in that choice," Goode said Friday, noting there are 887,000 Democratic voters in the city.

Goode said he has been meeting with several of his party's presidential candidates, but is staying neutral. In the last week he met with former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. He had breakfast Friday with Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and planned to meet soon with Sen. Ernest Hollings Jr., D-S.C.

PLO mutineers, loyalists battle before declaring new ceasefire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mutineers and loyalist guerrillas in Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization battled for six hours Saturday in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley then proclaimed a new ceasefire, the second in a week, the PLO and Lebanese police reported.

Police said six combatants were killed and 10 wounded in clashes between warring factions that erupted at midday and ended at 6 p.m. when the new truce took hold.

A communique from Arafat loyalists in their military operations center in north Lebanon's port of Tripoli said three loyalists were killed and four wounded in the fighting, which shattered the two-day-old previous truce.

The communique claimed rebel guerrillas commanded by breakaway PLO Col. Saed Mousa mounted four tank-supported assaults on loyalist bases in the towns of Taanayel and Bar Elias in the Bekaa Valley near the Syrian border.

"But all four onslaughts were repulsed at heavy dissident losses before the new cease-fire was enforced," the communique said.

It accused Syrian and Libyan troops in the valley of providing tank-fire cover for the attackers.

There was no immediate report on the fighting or the new cease-fire from the mutineers, who have headquarters in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Arafat has been fighting the mutiny for nearly two months. The rebels claim he has mishandled the campaign against Israel since the Israelis invaded Lebanon 13 months ago and has appointed aides based on loyalty rather than skill. Arafat has led the guerrilla organization since 1969.

Police and the PLO communique said most of the new fighting flared on the outskirts of Bar Elias and Taanayel, where loyalists maintain artillery bases just north of the Beirut-Damascus international highway near Chtaura, 10 miles west of the Syrian border.

Both cease-fires were said to be mediated by leftist Lebanese groups allied with the PLO. The previous stand-down was enforced Thursday night after four days of battles in which the rebels drove Arafat's loyalists out from almost all their bases south of the highway facing Israeli lines.

In Tunis, Tunisia, a six-man PLO team flew to Damascus on Saturday after a 24-hour delay on a mission aimed at resolving the conflict between Arafat and Syrian President Hafez Assad. The team had planned to leave Friday but was delayed because of mechanical problems with the private jet used by high-ranking PLO officials.

Assad evicted Arafat from Syria last month after the PLO chief accused him of openly supporting the guerrilla rebellion. Since then Arafat has been based in Tunis, cut off from loyalists in Lebanon, the PLO's last front with Israel.

In Beirut, U.S. negotiators held lengthy talks with Lebanese government leaders in an effort to break the deadlock on foreign troop withdrawals from Lebanon. There was no sign of a breakthrough.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who flew in from Jerusalem, met Lebanese leaders in an effort to overcome Syria's rejection of the Lebanon-Israeli troop withdrawal agreement signed May 17.

UNCTAD attacks U.S., Israel, wrestles with aid questions

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The U.N. Conference on Trade and Development attacked the United States and Israel Saturday and wrestled with a request by poorer nations for at least $90 billion in extra aid from the richer ones.

The month-long meeting was to have ended Thursday but was extended in an attempt to come closer on trade disagreements between the developed and developing nations.

Among resolutions adopted in Saturday's plenary session was one prompted by a recent U.S. decision to reduce its sugar imports from leftist Nicaragua. Delegates from 81 countries — mostly of the Third World — voted for the motion, which denounced coercive economic measures applied for political reasons. There were 18 votes against, generally from the ranks of the industrial nations, and seven abstentions.

A resolution condemning Israeli policies towards the Palestinian people was adopted 84-2, with 20 abstentions. Israel and the United States cast dissenting votes.

Elections test Mexico's governing party

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's governing party faces a severe test in municipal elections Sunday in the northern state of Chihuahua, where three have died in pre-election violence. The state's governor has asked for army troops to guarantee peace.

Local officials of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has governed Mexico for more than 50 years, have accused the United States of meddling in the election by aiding the conservative National Action Party — a charge the United States denies.

The opposition National Action Party is expected to demonstrate its strength throughout Chihuahua, which borders Texas and New Mexico, in the wake of two shooting deaths allegedly ordered by a mayoral candidate of the government party in the city of Ciudad Camargo.

A few hours after the two men were slain Tuesday night, a 72-year-old woman was killed by a shot fired from a passing vehicle through the window of her home near the city's National Action Party headquarters.

Fire aboard plane forces its evacuation

MILAN, Italy (AP) — An engine of a French-made Caravelle jetliner caught fire shortly before takeoff Saturday, forcing the emergency evacuation of all 89 people aboard, most of them Italian teenagers.

Officials at Milan's Malpensa airport said some of the passengers suffered minor cuts and bruises in the rush to escape but there were no serious injuries.

They said most of the passengers were Italian youngsters, ranging in age between 13 and 16, who were taking the chartered Altair jet to London to study English.

Germans debate controls

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Conservative cabinet members are proposing new laws to crack down on street demonstrators, a week after hundreds of youths threw rocks at Vice President George Bush's motorcade.

The conservatives say broader police powers are needed to cope with anti-war marchers who plan to blockade military bases this autumn to protest NATO plans to deploy new U.S. nuclear missiles in West Germany.

But liberals say the new laws would be impossible to enforce and would only make protesters more defiant and violent.

Hundreds of youths — some wearing black masks and helmets — pelted Bush's motorcade with rocks, bottles and other objects June 25 during celebrations in Krefeld saluting German-American friendship. More than 100 police and demonstrators were hurt.

The Cabinet is divided on what course to take, and deputy justice and interior ministers are to meet Monday in Bonn to work out a compromise.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who leads a coalition government of Christian Union conservatives and centrist Free Democrats, hasn't taken sides publicly in the debate.

Jan and Dean reunite for series of 'test date' holiday concerts

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The surfing pop duo of Jan and Dean reunited for a series of holiday concerts that are "test dates" for possible future joint appearances.

Jan Berry and Dean Torrance opened Friday at the San Diego Wild Animal Park before an enthusiastic crowd of about 6,500 people, who cheered such 1960s favorites as "Little Old Lady From Pasadena," "Surf City" and "Barbara Ann."

The singers, both 42, have split up several times since the 1966 automobile accident that left Berry partly paralyzed and with brain injuries. A speech impediment noticeable when Berry speaks was scarcely discernible when he sang.

Backstage, they were optimistic they could continue to work together. "It's up to Dean," Berry said. "I like Dean and the band is good."

Torrance said he regards the concerts as test dates to see how things work out. "I want to be able to enjoy myself," he said.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — It has been more than 12 years since Air Force Col. Robert Standerwick was lost over Laos, but his daughter, Lynn, says she will keep searching until she knows her father's fate.

She did some investigating in the early years after her father's plane was shot down on Feb. 3, 1971, but early in 1982, she decided to "devote all my resources" to learning about her father, who is among nearly 2,500 men still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

It was then that she met former Green Beret Lt. Col. James "Bo" Gritz, who has led two search missions into Laos for American MIAs.

In November she helped operate a high-powered radio in Nakhon Phanom, a Thai village near Laos to relay messages to and from Gritz and three colleagues as they operated across the border.

Gritz's group encountered hostile fire and withdrew. Miss Standerwick and the other radio operator, former Green Beret Lance Trimmer, were fined $130 for using an illegal radio, "a slap on the wrist," she says, from basically sympathetic Thai officials.

Special art show opens at MC

A special art show opens at Midland College's McCormick Gallery Tuesday. The exhibit closes July 28.

The 1983 Texas Watercolor Society Show includes 80 works by present or former residents of Texas. The touring show was selected by Lawrence Calcagno from more than 500 slides submitted for consideration.

Fifteen of the 80 works chosen were given awards. One of the award winners is Midlander Warren Taylor, art instructor at MC. Taylor is a Fellow of the American Watercolor Society.

For this show, the McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Grand Ole Opry, 'Hee Haw' become country music siblings

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Grand Ole Opry and "Hee Haw" — kismet cousins in the country music field — are becoming siblings as a broadcasting company completes arrangements to buy the Opry.

Gaylord Broadcasting Co. of Dallas, which already owns the firm that produces the syndicated country music television show "Hee Haw," has agreed to buy the Opry from American General Corp. of Houston.

The Opry, "the mother church of country music," is a live radio show broadcast over WSM-AM, which the Gaylord firm also is buying. The show has been presented every weekend since 1925, making it the longest running radio show still on the air.

In those 58 years, it has survived the Depression, World War II and various changes in musical style including Big Band, rock 'n' roll, disco and New Wave.

"Hee Haw" is one of the longest-running syndicated television shows. The hour-long program has been on the air since 1969, first on the CBS network and, since 1971, on a syndicated basis.

Several country music stars appear regularly on both the Opry and "Hee Haw," including Roy Acuff, Minnie Pearl, Archie Campbell and Grandpa Jones.

"I hope these people buy the place," the cigar-smoking Campbell told a reporter at the Opry two weeks ago, referring to Edward L. and Thelma Gaylord. "They're good people."

The Opry radio show can be heard over much of the country every Friday and Saturday nights on 50,000-watt WSM. The show is presented in a 4,400-seat auditorium at the Opryland U.S.A. entertainment park 10 miles northeast of downtown Nashville.

The radio audience is estimated in the millions. The live audience is 900,000 each year — a full house for most shows.

It has long been the mecca of country music and the greatest singing stars in country music history have performed on the show. Current regular performers on the show include six members of the Country Music Hall of Fame — Acuff, Miss Pearl, Jones, Ernest Tubb, Hank Snow and Bill Monroe. Opry announcer Grant Turner also is a member.

"Hee Haw," co-starring Roy Clark and Buck Owens, is shown on 217 stations reaching 11 million households. Even if it were to go out of production, the show has stockpiled 14 years of programs for reruns.

Along with the Opry and the radio station, Gaylord is buying Opryland U.S.A., the Nashville Network on cable television, a hotel and WSM-FM. The purchase price was not announced, but published reports placed it at around $270 million.

In announcing an agreement in principle Friday for the purchase, officials said the transaction should be complete in 30 to 60 days.

American General Corp. of Houston, a diversified financial group, said it put the Opry and related properties up for sale to concentrate on its insurance and related businesses.

The Gaylord Broadcasting Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Oklahoma Publishing Co. of Oklahoma City. It owns and operates television stations in seven major cities, two newspapers in Oklahoma City and a newspaper in Colorado Springs.

"This is a historic day in the history of WSM," said E.W. "Bud" Wendell, chairman of the board of WSM, Inc., which was under the corporate umbrella of American General.

Gaylord, 64, chairman and president of Gaylord Broadcasting, said, "We want to be one of the best corporate citizens we can be."

"We think it (the Opry) will be (even) more successful in the future," he added.

Museum of Southwest offers film festival

The Museum of the Southwest is offering a "Musical Delights" film festival this summer beginning July 14 with the 1945 release "State Fair" by Rogers and Hammerstein.

The series includes the 1945 release "A Star is Born," July 21; the 1955 release "Daddy Longlegs," July 28; and the 1945 release "Top Hat," Aug. 4.

Films will be shown at 7:30 p.m. at the museum, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Suggested donation for any film is $1. For more information call the museum, 683-2882.

Exhibit composed of items loaned from area museums

ODESSA — More than 50 items from 23 West Texas museums and organizations have been collected together in the Presidential Museum's special show — "PBMI Collects: 1960-82." The exhibit closes Friday.

The show contains a broad range of items recently received by art and history museums in the region. Included are paintings, prints, sculpture and historical objects such as wooden printing type, military buttons, World War II ration books and a baby's christening gown.

Works from four Midland institutions — Midland County Historical Society, Museum of the Southwest, Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library and the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum — are included.

The museum is open Monday-Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and 1-5 p.m. at no charge.

Fans submit scenarios for next fall's 'Dallas'

By LEE MARGULIES
 The Los Angeles Times
 Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — When we last left "Dallas," J.R., Sue Ellen, Ray and young John Ross were unconscious as flames threatened to engulf them and burn Southfork to the ground. In the Los Angeles Times recently, reporter Peter J. Boyer speculated that come fall, J.R. will save his three relatives, enjoy a brief fling as a good guy and ultimately wind up in the electric chair, falsely convicted of killing Cliff Barnes.

Readers were asked to submit their own versions of what will happen when "Dallas" resumes its sixth season this fall. Among the more unusual scenarios:

"DRY WELL" STARTS A WAR: Suddenly, the Ewing home fire-prevention sprinkler system comes into action, drowning the flames and waking the unconscious victims. Sue Ellen stumbles from her room to get John Ross as J.R. gets up to run downstairs and save Ray. J.R. and Ray look at each other and fall into a warm embrace, calling out, "Brother!"

Sue Ellen vows to give up drinking and talks Miss Ellie into letting her redecorate the house in a combination of Art Deco and '50s kitsch. Lucy is so devastated at Mickey's death that she goes on a diet.

As the season continues, Miss Ellie marries Clayton Farlow and he moves into Southfork. His first act as new clan patriarch is to lock up the liquor cabinet. This starts an all-out war — Bobby, Pam, J.R., Sue Ellen, Ray and Donna are all on the same side for the first time. The thought of a dry Ewing BBQ is too much even for Miss Ellie and she sides with her children. Clayton can't stand the heat so he moves into a Winnebago parked in the front yard.

Meanwhile, the Canadian oil deal comes through and Bobby takes over Ewing Oil, only to run it into the ground. J.R. doesn't care because after Sue Ellen's success at decorating the Ewing house, she starts her own decorating business and makes more money than Ewing Oil ever did. Recognizing that he can't compete with his wife's business acumen, J.R. quits working to ride horses with Ray on the back 40.

Pam, tired of running her boring aerobics studio and seeing all the money Sue Ellen is making, starts a fashion design business, specializing in Cowboy New Wave.

Eventually Sue Ellen and Pam have a merger and form a multimillion-dollar design house. Once Bobby gets Ewing Oil well into the red, he sells it to Cliff Barnes. Feeling sorry for Bobby, Pam and Sue Ellen sign him to an exclusive contract to model Ewing fake leopard-skin jeans. Lucy, still dieting, is insulted when Pam and Sue Ellen tell her she is too fat and short to be a model.

Singer-composer Peabo Bryson uses language of a gentle man

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

The tone of his voice is perfectly in keeping with his image of sensitivity. Singer-songwriter Peabo Bryson uses the language in a manner bespeaking a gentle man.

Bryson, who will be onstage along with Franklin Ajaye tonight at 8 at Chaparral Center, credits his childhood in South Carolina with molding his outlook on life.

"I'm what's appropriately termed a southern gentleman," Bryson said in a recent telephone interview. "I come from — there're four children and out of a household primarily dominated by women. So my perspective, my concept of women, is a bit different from the everyday male chauvinist attitude."

"I'm not totally into ERA. I don't believe women should bear arms in the Army. I think they should probably have the right to do anything that anybody else does." Pausing, he added, "I've always felt that way."

"My grandfather gave that kind of respect to my grandmother. She handled it well. She handled that whole responsibility."

"HE CARED ABOUT WHAT she thought and what she believed and took that to heart as well as what he could perceive himself. He was a very intelligent man himself, but she had a feel for things that he didn't have. He would bounce things off her head, and I thought that was the way it was supposed to be and always was."

"Consequently a lot of women like the perspective I write my songs from. It's a bit different. It's something that's not contrived. It's me, it's part of my heritage."

Although Bryson sounds self-assured, he has not always had the confidence in himself that his manner today reflects. He has actually spent much of his 32 years working at overcoming his shyness.

"It's a bad trait for an entertainer to have," Bryson said, laughing as he added, "I'm not shy all of the time. It's just that when you are onstage in front of 10,000 people, it's no time to be shy. You have to be personable."

"AND I DON'T HAVE PROBLEMS relating to interacting with people at that point, but if you were to get me in the room with three strangers and say, 'Play that song for me,' he paused for a long moment before adding, 'I might have a problem with that.'"

His voice taking on a more serious tone, he said, "In close environment and one-on-one, I'm fairly quiet. When I talk one-on-one, I seem to come off a little too serious for a lot of people."

Bryson began performing professionally at 14, but he took time out for a short-lived academic career.

"I went to this small college in my hometown of Greenville, S.C., and the college went broke after my first quarter. So I moved to Atlanta and decided to pursue my career full-time 100 percent. It was an omen. It was time to go."

IN ATLANTA, GA., BRYSON recorded an album on a small independent record label, Bang Records, which led to his being signed "as a solo act on a major record label, Capitol Records."

Since signing with Capitol, Bryson has recorded, among others, "Reaching for the Sky," "Cross Wind," "Best of Friends" with Natalie Cole, "Paradise" and "Don't Play with Fire." And he has just cut his second album with Roberta Flack. Most of the albums have gone gold.

Bryson, who believes that "love is forever," said of his music, "It's about life and relationships and that kind of thing from my perspective in which I play several different parts. I'm the bad guy, the good guy, the victim, the victimizer, and the recipient of all good or bad of all my little stories that I write about. I write 99.5 percent of everything I do."

"I've suffered in romance and in life. I don't mind people knowing about it, either. I've been through all sorts of uncomfortable things, painful things. It's all there in my songs, in my style. If you show you feel things, you're only saying you're human. The macho men still don't understand that."

FOR SOME TIME BRYSON was typecast as a woman's singer. Today, he feels that is changing.

"In the beginning it was a kind of a comical competition that was being created mediawise and imagewise inadvertently between myself and the male populace. They made it seem like my music only appealed to women, and that was true."

"I like to think of me as being the gentlemen's representative. At this point in my career most men perceive me that way." Bryson was quick to point out, "I'm not trying to make myself the ultimate man. I'm not trying to portray myself in any way that's not consistent with who I really am."

BRYSON DESCRIBED HIS AUDIENCE today as "diversified. It's one-third white, two-thirds women and one-third men. Sometimes it's 50-50. There are a lot of couples who come to my

Actors, producers reach agreement

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A stunt and safety package negotiated after the deaths of three actors during filming of "Twilight Zone: The Movie" is part of a tentative three-year contract between actors and producers.

The agreement, reached Friday night after a 36-hour bargaining session, also includes a 21 percent boost in basic wages, a substantially bigger cut of profits from the home video market and new money for unions' troubled health plans, said Kim Fellner, spokeswoman for the Screen Actors Guild.

The guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists had been negotiating with the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers. The contract covers feature films and prime-time TV.

The two unions have a combined membership of 86,000.

Stunt and film-set safety issues were a hot issue because of the July 23, 1982, filming accident that killed actor Vic Morrow and two children on the "Twilight Zone" movie set. Five men, including director John Landis, have been indicted for involuntary manslaughter by a Los Angeles County grand jury in those deaths.

"It was a really tough, hard-nosed negotiations, but we feel the deal we achieved is one we can confidently recommend to the members," said SAG President Ed Asner.

Nicholas Counter, chief negotiator for the producers, termed the pact "fair to all parties."

Negotiations on the new contract began May 17, and the old contract expired at midnight Thursday.

The sharing of home-video profits was a major issue in the talks, just as it was in 1980 when actors, writers and off-screen personnel struck for 10 weeks.

concerts. The ages range anywhere from 8 to 80. I don't know what it is about what I do and me and my work that appeals to such a wide audience."

Perhaps a part of it can be attributed to dedication.

"After 18 years and having worked all over the world, it is apparent that I love what I do. When I'm onstage working, my sole objective is to break down that wall between myself and my audience. To do that you have to reach out and touch people. That's my thing."

"I've been pretty successful at establishing a rapport between my audience and myself that makes us one. When we're one, I feed off all their energies. And at that point, I'm capable of doing more than I'm normally capable of as an individual. Using their energies I can do anything short of flying."

The Drs. Rhode share interesting journey

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

They've been married for almost a year to the date. They share responsibilities such as household arrangements and financial plans.

They lead a busy life and only recently were able to get away for a 10-day half-honeymoon and half-anniversary trip.

Their first year consisted of 24-hour days spent together — because they also share an office.

Dr. Carolyn Creighton met Dr. Joseph Rhode at a medical convention in Florida about five years ago.

She was a family practitioner in Michigan — he in Virginia.

Tired of a long-distance romance, they got married last July and moved to Midland the next day — as Dr. Rhode and Dr. Rhode — or Dr. Carolyn and Dr. Joe — or Dr. C and Dr. J.

"Some of our patients confuse it," Joseph said. "I'll be Dr. Rhode and Carolyn will be Mrs. Dr. Rhode. She almost kept her maiden name but the social confusion would be more of a problem than the professional confusion."

"Or an embarrassment," Carolyn laughed.

Actually, the two said being a husband and wife doctor team has advantages. Their patients see them as "really family practitioners," according to Joseph.

As far as sharing patients — they don't.

"There are some patients who see me exclusively, or they see Joe, and there are some that don't care and go back and forth," Carolyn said. "Sometimes we (treat) members of the same family."

"It's always the patient's choice," Joseph agreed. "That's part of the philosophy we agreed on. But if she gets called away and I can accommodate the people in the waiting room, I'll do it. If they want me to re-schedule an appointment, I'll do that."

When asked about disadvantages of working together, the two doctors were silent.

"Who's going to touch that one first?" Carolyn finally laughed, looking at her husband slyly.

"We're very aware of the potential for strain from working together and housekeeping at night," Joseph said. "We pretty much try to stick to minding our own business. But in terms of the amount of time we are able to be together, it's like we're on counter-rotating merry-go-rounds."

"We see each other frequently, but sometimes we just wave," Carolyn said.

"You've got to remember, we're not just putting in fulltime hours — we're also putting in fulltime days," Joseph said. "We're still waiting for a pause so we can catch our breath."

Following their first meeting, the relationship between the two was linked together by Joseph's pilot's license. Carolyn's interest eventually flew from him to the sky and he, as an instructor, gave her her first flying lesson. She finished up under another instructor.

Having a pilot's license made communication between the two easier and although Joseph still tries to sleep every once in awhile, the plane they sold in Michigan before moving to Midland grounded Carolyn's flying for awhile.

"I've been too busy to miss it," she said. "And I had more of a purpose when I lived in Michigan to fly."

Joseph was three hours away in Virginia while flights to her parents were only 45 minutes long.

"I used to fly 15 to 25 hours a month," Joseph said. "Now, I get up maybe once a month. If I don't get up any more than that, I'll probably just give it up. It can range from a useful skill to sort of dangerous dabbling."

While operating their own medical practice takes flying time away, the two say it's worth it.

They moved from a small town between Lansing and Detroit, Mich., to Midland intending to establish their own practice.

"We both worked for a large group in Michigan," Joseph said. "It was a different setting; the two of us just working for one large company. Now we are the company."

Located on Andrews Highway, their office has expanded from the two and a transcriptionist to two fulltime nurses, a fulltime family nurse practitioner, two fulltime office personnel and a part-time receptionist.

"We're getting toward the end of the building stage," Joseph said. "We're not just being doctors but we're being building constructors and financial entrepreneurs."

While some couples may not be able to pull it off, Carolyn said, "I can't imagine one family investing in two separate offices. From a financial standpoint, it just couldn't be done. The disadvantage is both of us getting to take vacations together."

Former owner of dance studio comes under fire

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

J.E. "Rico" Rotolone says he's having some misgivings about a business deal he made last month.

On June 15 he bought Metropolitan Dance Center Inc. in San Miguel Square — lock, stock and barrel.

Rotolone is a 42-year-old career dance instructor. So he's not all that concerned about his ability to run the studio, even though he says it's the first business he's ever owned.

BUT WHAT HE FOUND at the bottom of the barrel does bother him.

For instance, there's the $50,000 consumer fraud suit lodged against the studio and its former owner, 42-year-old Howard Harper.

Filed on behalf of an 81-year-old Midland widow June 13 — two days prior to Rotolone's purchase of the studio — the suit alleges that a "dance test" the woman took last December was actually a sales technique used to gain her confidence and induce her to buy lessons.

The woman was ultimately "flattered, cajoled and pressured" into signing contracts for dance lessons worth in excess of $6,000, according to the suit.

THE SUIT GOES ON to claim Metro employees exploited the woman's "desire for companionship" and took advantage of her "lack of knowledge, ability, experience and capacity to a grossly unfair degree" in obtaining the contracts.

One set of lessons would not be completed, says the suit, before the woman found herself subjected to "intense, emotional, and unrelenting pressure" to buy additional lessons.

"If additional lessons were not purchased immediately," the suit continues, she'd find herself the victim of "ostracism and total neglect by the instructors."

The woman's attorney, Al Schorre Jr., says he contacted Harper about a refund and filed suit only after being offered "a pittance" of what the woman believes is due her.

Rotolone claims he didn't know about the suit until after he bought the studio — despite the fact he worked for Harper "on and off" since arriving in Midland from Baton Rouge, La., last fall.

Rotolone also says he wasn't aware that another Midland widow has lodged a formal complaint against Harper with the sheriff's department, a complaint that's been forwarded to the consumer affairs division of the Texas attorney general's office.

ALTHOUGH ROTOLONE has never been named in any civil litigation or attorney general investigations, authorities say such is not the case with Harper and some of the other people he's been associated with throughout the South during his 20 years in the dance business.

On Nov. 14, 1980, for example, the consumer affairs division of the Arkansas attorney general's office obtained an injunction barring "certain trade practices" of Entertainment Dance Center Inc., which did business as Society Dance Center of Little Rock, according to Assistant Attorney General Tom Gay.

In addition, Gay said officials of the Arkansas firm — J.L. Want, William E. Sanders and Anthony Batista Salas — agreed to pay pro-rata refunds to any students who wanted their money back.

The company filed bankruptcy, however, and Gay said it had not been determined by his office if any reimbursements were ever made.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE is the May 1982 complaint lodged with the consumer affairs division of the Mississippi attorney general's office against one of Harper's associates, Doug Carroll.

That complaint was filed by a woman seeking a $15,000 refund on dance lessons she had purchased from The Academy of Ballroom Dancing in Tupelo, Miss., doing business as Dance Management Inc. of Memphis, Tenn.

Carroll was listed as owner of the Tupelo studio, according to Carmen Castilla, an attorney for the Mississippi consumer affairs office. But he sold it "and disappeared" after the complaint was filed, she noted, and it's not known if the woman's claim was ever honored.

Pointing out the difficulty of pursuing such cases in court, Ms. Castilla said: "These people flit from state to state. It's frustrating as all get out."

Although Harper wasn't cited in the Mississippi and Arkansas investigations, he has been involved with three of the parties who were: Want, Carroll and Salas.

In fact, Harper blames Want for his current legal problems in Tennessee. They include a federal bankruptcy case, a state attorney general's investigation and at least two civil suits.

THE BANKRUPTCY PETITION was filed by Harper in Memphis on July 6, 1982 — about four months prior to his moving to Midland last fall. The name of the company listed in the petition is Dance Management Inc. of Memphis, Tenn.

The petition also lists Harper as secretary of the firm. Listed as president was Doug Carroll, the man who had vanished from Mississippi a month or so earlier.

Sixty-nine unsecured creditors with claims totaling $221,000 were named in the petition. Many of the creditors are women who had either invested money in the firm or paid for dance lessons they never received.

"Harper and Carroll are not trustworthy persons," said one Memphis woman listed as an unsecured creditor in the petition. "My $57,000 is down the drain. I really believed in them at one time."

One of the two civil suits pending against Harper in Tennessee was filed on April 21, 1981.

It names "Harper & Want Enterprises" among the defendants and seeks to recover $60,000 for the estate of a 77-year-old Memphis widow who died before completing more than 1,000 dance lessons she allegedly had been "fraudulently induced" into buying, according to the suit.

INCLUDED IN SEVERAL complaints filed in connection with the Tennessee attorney general's investigation of Harper is the affidavit of a 51-year-old Memphis divorcee.

She claims she lost $4,000 to Harper and one of his colleagues, 27-year-old Randy Barnett, a 1974 graduate of Midland's Lee High School. Barnett was the woman's instructor at a studio operated by Harper in Memphis.

Dated May 31, 1983, the affidavit says: "On Oct. 23, 1982, Randy Barnett telephoned me at home and asked me to meet him at Howard Harper's house."

"When I arrived, Harper and Barnett began talking about opening another studio in Memphis. (All the other studios had closed.) They said if they could open a studio, they would honor all the hours that ladies had purchased at other studios Harper and Barnett had been involved with in Memphis."

"They asked me to loan them some money to help them open this studio. Barnett said he would personally see to it that I was repaid. I advanced them $4,000 at this time, by a check made payable to Randy Barnett."

"I didn't hear from Barnett or Harper after that. I subsequently learned they had left town and gone to Midland, Texas."

On April 27 of this year the woman's attorney filed suit against Harper and Barnett in Memphis.

Barnett, who is now employed by a Tyler dance studio, has known Harper about six years. Asked to comment on the woman's allegations, Barnett said:

"I wouldn't call it a loan." He declined further comment over the phone, yet failed to keep an appointment for a personal interview.

HARPER CAME TO MIDLAND last October and soon engaged in a "loose partnership" with 26-year-old Jim Richmond, who operates a dance studio on North Big Spring Street.

On Dec. 29, according to Midland County Sheriff's Department records, Harper was arrested on a misapplication of funds complaint lodged by Richmond.

He was released from custody after posting $20,000 bond. The felony charges were later dismissed by the district attorney's office for lack of sufficient evidence, however.

Harper opened Metropolitan Dance Center Inc. in February of this year.

Although no written complaints had been lodged against Metro at the time of Harper's application for membership in the Permian Basin Better Business Bureau this spring, the application was put on hold "because of the trouble he had when he was affiliated with Mr. Richmond," said BBB spokesman Ron Forest.

"As membership director, I felt it best to take a wait-and-see attitude until he could establish a local track record," Forest added.

'Unacceptable behavior' in eye of the beholder

That aspect of the human drama called "unacceptable behavior" often gets accepted — reluctantly or willingly. The shame is our willingness to accept it.

When we do, we betray ourselves. My friend Harry did. His behavior was amiss. He was not alone.

Unacceptable behavior is sometimes glorified, as in war. War to save democracy, to preserve freedom, to satisfy a maniac's insatiable desire for power. Ribbons, medals and other decorations are generously bestowed. Flowers and flags are given, and eulogies are made. Still, all is not well.

Maybe it's on the job. If your boss blows smoke in your face and sneers or pinches your behind and smiles, what do you do? Do you bow or curtsy and say, "Thank you, sir, that certainly felt good. Could I get you a hot toddy or something?" You could ignore him, ask for his leave (or yours), or forthwith confront him with his actions and await the consequences.

That happened to a friend of mine. He got pinched, so to speak, but did nothing.

He was in his office and was tidying up just before he was to go on a field trip at company expense.

His sexy supervisor walked in.

"Harry," she said, "you've been with me, with us, a long time."

Seven years.

Harry got tense. He noticed his boss, Ms. Pert, knocked before she walked in. She never did that. Lately, though, she had been somewhat distant — even outside the office.

Ms. Pert (he called her "Peppy") slipped on his polished hardwood office floor. A leg flew up. He noticed a run in her stockings. He was surprised her stockings would be so audacious as to dare to develop a run.

She regained her balance and composure, though her voice was higher than usual.

"Yes, ma'am?" he said. He knew she never liked the "ma'am" bit, but he wanted to remind her she was a woman, a "madam." The obvious wasn't good enough.

She huffed, and gave a quick smile. Had she smoked, she probably would have lit up a whole pack at once.

"You've done us a good job. Exemplary at times."

"Oops," Harry thought. He knew a promotion wasn't coming; he was just one step below her in rank and two in pay. Raises were frozen; the company was cutting back on expenses.

He didn't say anything. He wanted to be assertive, to stand up, to confront her and say: "Miz Turk (she'd loathe that), you're an overbearing wench who ought to be restructured." He wondered why he suddenly resented her after all these years.

That would fix her. He knew her vanity was acute. She was careful in her dress and makeup. Even her bra was nice. On that day, it was laced in black. He wondered why and why she allowed even the lace to show during office hours.

But he was silent, nervous and apprehensive. He now wished she hadn't walked in. Better, he wished he had left earlier. But the confrontation was bound to happen.

He wondered why but really knew.

"Harry," she said, "you've been loyal."

He wanted to utter a barrage of words and counter her strategy, which was so obvious Harry already was speculating how soon she expected him to clean out his desk.

He was wondering if she wanted her gifts back: the gold choker, the gold-plated lighter, the midnight cologne, and other things which really weren't returnable.

"And you've been a good friend."

"Friend?" he murmured.

He knew love, lust and politics didn't fit too well in an office, anyway.

"But, you know how 'things' have been," Ms. Pert said. "The economy and other things."

She didn't mention the relationship, which they had enjoyed, he thought, for months.

"We've decided to let you go. There's a severance check at book-keeping."

He desperately wanted to ask about the "we" — the decision-makers who decided to axe him. But he knew. It wasn't the job.

"Profits are down," she explained, "and, you understand, we won't need you around 'til we've found a replacement. We've, er, got somebody else."

Well, he wondered just how good the new "replacement" would be and if he could please her.

Ms. Pert turned around and left.

As Harry was clearing out his desk, he knew what he wanted to say to office queen. He was bitter. He didn't care if she owned the place. "Miz Turk," he would have said, "why don't you get yourself a gigolo?"

But, he thought that might be unacceptable to her.

Harry, of course, failed to examine his own behavior, which was as unacceptable as hers. He wondered how she'd like the new guy.

DEATHS

F.B. McPherson

Services for F.B. McPherson, 66, of 3113 W. Golf Course Road, are set for 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Newline W. Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

McPherson died early Saturday morning at a Midland hospital.

He was born April 14, 1917, in Knox City. He attended school in Abilene and worked for CIT before entering the Navy in 1943. After his discharge, he was associated with Commercial Credit and then with United Transports. He moved to Houston in 1960 and was associated with T.E. Mercer when he moved to Midland in 1965. He went to work for the Western Co. in 1975 and was with them at the time of his death.

He was a member of the Baptist Church, the Permian Basin Petroleum Assn., the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the American Petroleum Institute.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Bobbie McPherson of Midland; a daughter, Mrs. Sheila Boswell of San Antonio; a brother, Bryan McPherson of Idyllwild, Calif.; two sisters, Mrs. Lita Pearlie Harper and Thelma McPherson, both of Abilene; and one grandchild.

Memorials should be directed to the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center or Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Tx., 79702.

F.B. McPherson

Al Lancaster

BIG SPRING — Al Lancaster, 76, of Big Spring, died Friday in his home following an apparent heart attack.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Nalley-Pickie Rosewood Chapel. Burial will be in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

Lancaster was born Dec. 17, 1906, in Comanche County, and was married to Alma Nettie Wheeler on June 2, 1934, in Big Spring. His wife died in 1967.

He lived in Hayward, Calif., for 45 years and worked as a carpenter and bricklayer. Ten years ago, he returned to Big Spring but worked six months of the year in Ruidosa, N.M., where he was a supervisor in the city's Parks and Recreation Department. Lancaster was a member of the Carpenters Union Local No. 22 in California.

Survivors include a daughter-in-law, Margaret Lancaster of San Bruno, Calif.; two granddaughters, Linda Lancaster of San Bruno and Lori Lancaster of Chico, Calif.; five sisters, Minnie Tredaway of Midland and Myrtle Williams, Eldora Caughy, Johnnie Railsback and Marie Chapman, all of Big Spring; a brother, Marion Lancaster of Lyons, Ore.; and nieces and nephews.

Cook infant

STANTON — Graveside services for Matthew Wayne Cook, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Wayne Cook, will be at 2 p.m. today at Evergreen Cemetery with the Rev. Lennox Hester, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Stanton, officiating. Services are under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home in Stanton.

Other survivors include a sister, Kara Cook of the home; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Cook and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Flanagan, all of Stanton; and great-grandparents, Mrs. Bill Polk of Stanton and W. O. Tucker of Stephenville.

Teens held in deaths of arcade employees

HOUSTON (AP) — Two teen-agers were arrested Saturday and a third person was being sought in the stabbing deaths of four young employees during the robbery of a miniature race track and video game center, a homicide detective said.

Richard James Wilkerson, 19, a former employee of Malibu Grand Prix, was charged with capital murder and ordered held without bond, a spokeswoman for the district attorney's office said. An arrest warrant was issued for Kenneth Ray Ransom, 20, charging him with capital murder, the spokeswoman said.

A 16-year-old was also taken into custody but was not charged. The spokeswoman, who would not give her name, said prosecutors would ask at a hearing Tuesday to try him as an adult.

Detective Tom Ladd said one of the two suspects had made a confession, but he declined to elaborate.

Police have recovered "a small part" of the money taken in the robbery, which was discovered Friday morning, Ladd said. He estimated the total amount stolen at $1,000 to $2,000.

Wilkerson was fired from the center two weeks ago, Ladd said, but police doubt that the killings stemmed from a vendetta. "It is my belief that the motive was strictly robbery," he said.

The arrests came from a tip, Ladd said. A third person taken into custody with the two suspects and released after questioning knew of the killings but did not participate, he said.

Anil Varughese, an 18-year-old pre-medical student at Houston Baptist University and night manager at the center, was found dead Friday morning in the facility's business office.

The office had been ransacked, a safe opened, two cash trays emptied and video game tokens spilled on the floor. A knife blade was found under Varughese's body and a bloody footprint was left on a sheet of paper, police said.

Two employees were found slumped in restroom stalls and the fourth victim was lying nearby on his back, police said.

The three victims who worked as track attendants and serviced the machines were identified by police as Arnold Pequeno, 19, and his brother Joe, 18, and Rod Harris, 23, a Houston Baptist music student who had worked only two nights at the center.

Varughese and two other victims who were not identified had their throats slashed, Harris County medical examiners said. All had died of multiple stab wounds to the chest, head, face, arms and torso.

The bodies were found by a delivery man and a female employee at the track, detectives said. The delivery man, whose name was withheld, found the door to the arcade open, police said. When the female worker arrived at about the same time, the two went inside and found the bodies.

Police said it was the city's worst mass killing committed in a single incident. The worst previous such killing occurred in July 1979 when three youths were shot to death and a fourth was wounded at a Houston bowling alley.

Ernest Jaramillo, 29, the center's assistant manager, said no firearms were kept in the building because "we didn't think we'd need one."

Texas congressman favors citizens as 'messengers'

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A South Texas congressman told the House of Representatives that he would rather see groups of U.S. citizens take the message of democracy to people of other countries than the Central Intelligence Agency.

For this, Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, was lauded in an editorial in the Washington Post.

The discussion arose over a proposal wanted by big labor groups, the U.S. State Department and the Reagan administration to set up the National Endowment for Democracy. It would operate out of the Voice of America, an independent agency with close affiliation to the State Department. A fund created by groups and individuals in the private sector would be used to disseminate democratic principals in other countries. The money would be spent in those countries. When U.S. citizens thought that Democracy was not being carried out in those foreign countries, these U.S. citizens would seek to correct this.

The measure passed the House after de la Garza's ringing speech: "Do not let the CIA disseminate what democracy is," he said. "Let the people who make it work do it."

The Post editorial pointed out that "the CIA has been known to use its resources secretly to bolster democracy abroad."

The AFL-CIO wants to build unions abroad and numerous other groups seem to like the idea of working for democracy abroad. However, the House denied authority for the two major U.S. political parties in this country to use funds overseas.

The measure has been approved by the Senate committee but has not yet been acted upon in the Senate.

The proposal failed in Congress last year but these plans are for 1984 and '85.

In a June 3 interview with the Reporter-Telegram, Harper said he had operated an independent studio in Memphis about four years and didn't have any trouble until he became co-owner of Fred Astaire franchise rights for the state of Tennessee.

HARPER PURCHASED the half-interest from J.L. Want in the fall of 1979. Want, who retained the other half-interest, is one of the men who ran the Little Rock studio which came under fire from Arkansas authorities a year later.

Want "disappeared" in December 1979, according to Harper, shortly after two Fred Astaire studios closed in Memphis. "As soon as I signed on the dotted line, he became very scarce," said Harper.

Despite an "indemnity clause" in his purchase agreement with Want, Harper said Fred Astaire officials held him responsible "for all the services and dance lessons sold in the state of Tennessee" — including those of the two studios that had just closed.

"The closing of the studios upset many students and they began filing lawsuits," said Harper. "I was left holding the bag because Want was gone."

"I wasn't financially able to honor those contracts or answer the lawsuits. Fred Astaire (officials) said it was my 'tough luck' and told me to find Want."

"I had not sold any of the lessons I was being held liable for. I was a pawn, the guy who took the rap. I have been used, manipulated and harassed by certain people in the Fred Astaire organization."

EVEN HIS PROBLEMS in Midland, Harper said, "are being quarterbacked by Fred Astaire. If they can destroy me here and take away my income, I can't fight them in Tennessee."

But Timmy Felix, regional director for Fred Astaire operations in Texas, scoffs at Harper's scapegoat claim and refers to him as "a gifted talker" who "will run when there's pressure."

"There are 15,000 independent and chain studios in this country that are run by legitimate operators," said Felix in a June 9 phone interview from his Dallas office.

"But there are a handful of people who go around creating problems for everyone. They hit and run. They never stay."

"Harper spent a week here last November trying to talk us into giving him a Texas franchise. I told him it would be impossible, to go back and clean up the mess in Tennessee first."

Asked if he knew Want's whereabouts, Felix said: "I have no idea. Like Harper, he's been drummed out of Fred Astaire. It was such a mess I asked Mr. Casanave (Fred Astaire National President Chester Casanave) to help straighten it out."

Casanave says he wound up cancelling Harper and Want's franchise in Tennessee and another one Harper was involved with in New Orleans.

Told by the Reporter-Telegram that Harper had sold his Midland studio amid mounting legal difficulties here, Casanave said: "That's part for the course. He gets his name off everything."

Rotolone — who has not been accused in any of the litigation or investigations that dog Harper and some of his associates — said in a June 22 interview that he didn't meet Harper until coming to Midland and going to work for him as an instructor when Harper was affiliated with Richmond's studio on Big Spring Street last fall.

Barnett, Carroll and Salas worked for Harper at the time, according to Rotolone, who says Salas — a "close friend" for 20 years — called him and said Harper needed teachers here.

DESPITE THEIR LONG friendship, Rotolone claims he and Salas had lost touch over the years and he wasn't aware that Salas had been named in the 1960 Arkansas attorney general's investigation of dance studio operations in Little Rock.

Rotolone further claims that although he "had heard" about some of the allegations against Harper, he was not aware of their scope until after he bought the studio. Had he known beforehand, said Rotolone, he would have "looked into things a little deeper."

As part of the purchase agreement, Rotolone said he is responsible for all the debts and dance contract obligations incurred by Harper while he operated Metro.

Rotolone says he intends to honor that commitment, but claims he will give "serious reconsideration" to another part of the agreement: letting Harper stay on as a supervisor. "I hope to rebuild," said Rotolone. "I like Midland and I want to run a legitimate operation."

Harper was scheduled for a second interview with the Reporter-Telegram on June 20. He cancelled the appointment, however, and could not be reached after selling the studio five days earlier.

British immigrants gather for funeral

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The family of a slain 11-year-old English girl huddled together in an Arlington funeral home Saturday as a minister called the child's killer "warped, twisted and sick."

Julie Fuller was buried at Moore Memorial Gardens after a funeral service donated by Moore Funeral Home.

About 80 mourners, many of them British immigrants like the Fullers, attended the service.

The child's body was found in Fort Worth last Tuesday, the day after she disappeared from the Arlington motel where her family was staying. She had been raped and strangled.

"The human mind and tongue is so limited and incapable of saying what needs to be said to bring comfort," said Pastor M.T. Bishop of the Arlington Christian Center. "In our society we have a few — very, very few — with warped, twisted and sick minds. Most of us are like the little 9-year-old who sent the letter to Fuller family that said 'we are sorry about the little girl.'"

After the 45-minute service, the procession moved to the gravesite, adjacent to the funeral home. The child's parents, Colin and Janet Fuller, huddled together with their 13-year-old son, Lee. The three held hands.

The Fullers had immigrated to the United States from Essex, England about a month ago.

Members of the congregation of Parkview Baptist Church in Arlington attended, as did members of a group called Transatlantic Brides, which was started in World War II when soldiers brought English brides home with them.

Ruben Puentes, an Arlington detective assigned to the case also attended, as did other detectives.

Police say they have no leads in the child's slaying.

The girl was last seen alive about 6 p.m. Monday when she carried the trash out of their apartment at the Kensington Motor Lodge and Apartments in Arlington.

Police said they were questioning people in the area, but that they think the girl was killed somewhere else.

Proposed air carrier studied

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Texas Aeronautics Commission hearing examiner says he will release a "proposal for decision" within 45 days on an application from N.M. Mitchell Inc., doing business as Wise Airlines, for an air carrier certificate to provide passenger service between Midland and San Angelo.

The new airline would be allowed to operate on an interim basis until the commission issues a final decision if the examiner's proposal is favorable.

Carolyn said she would advise medical couples to consider several things before jumping into practice together — it isn't just medicine. There is also running the office, handling personnel, managing finances and household arrangements.

"We were helped by the fact that we'd both been in practice separately," Joseph agreed. "We had time to develop all of these things independently and come to the consensus together."

At home, they share domestic chores. Whoever leaves the office first does the cooking while the other cleans up. Carolyn, being involved in obstetrics, is called out during the night more than Joseph.

However, the two sons of Carolyn's, adopted when she was single, don't think of their doctor-parents as medical personnel.

"When my little one gets sick, he says, 'Mama, take me to a real doctor,'" Carolyn admitted with a laugh.

There is no need to use pink or blue to distinguish a feminine from a masculine room. While men tend to gravitate toward the darker colors, such as navy blue, a woman's taste is often defined by light, airy points with deep, dark colors reserved as accents. Texture, too, can bespeak a room's gender. For instance, the textural contrast of combinations of tweed, wool and rough-surfaced fabrics often denote a man's presence. A woman's room accents texture in favor of smooth fabric and plush piles. Furniture, too, can impart a feeling of gender. While a club chair and ottoman can be viewed as masculine, a canopy bed is decidedly feminine.

Students attend conference

Students from Lee and Midland high schools participated in project competition during the National American Industrial Arts Students Association (AIASA) Conference, held in Houston June 15-17.

Best in Division winners included Tim Hunter, Bobby Wells, Gary Fullen, Mark Deal, Innocente Casteneda, Fred Franklin, Scott Hurt, Mike Betteridge, Vince Winslett, Brad Cobb, Tressa Cunningham, Elizabeth Yeager and Latiefa Saughl, from MHS, and Matt Jones and Charles Diaz from LHS.

Second place winners included Steve Stone, Tony Miller, Gary Fullen, Charles Morse, Christen Cobb, Sharon Harton, Tressa Cunningham, Jimmy Lopez and Arthur Rhyne, of MHS. Third place winners were Tony Miller, Steve Delone, Roger Cobb, Steve Mann, Jody Higgins, Doug Harwood, Kevin Wilson, David Salas, Keith Phelps and Brian Wilson, of MHS, and Chris Johnson of LHS.

Fourth place winners were Mike Mashburn, Tony Eiland, Tony Miller, Clark Moore, Billy Lewis, Robert Vaughn and Tom Brown, of MHS.

Earning honorable mention were Bryan Schley, Randy Estes, Robert Vaughn, Chris Yates, Tony Miller and Troy Eiland.

I live in about the middle of the city and I am a senior citizen. What I want to know is what can be done about the excessive firing of firecrackers during the July 4th week? For the past two years we have had a neighborhood teen-ager who never seems to run out of firecrackers, firing them from sun-up to 10 and 11 o'clock at night. Not only is the noise nerve-racking for us, it is nerve-racking for our dog. She only wants to stay indoors and hide, refusing to eat her meals, etc.

We dread the July 4th week and are always glad when that time is over. I am sure I speak for many, many citizens. So what can be done about this situation? Would a plea to parents not to buy their youngsters excessive amounts of firecrackers help? Many parents are at work during the day and do not know their children are firing firecrackers all day. — H.H.

ANSWER: In the first place, according to the Midland Police Department, it is against the law to shoot fireworks within the city limits. A spokesman with the department suggests that when the illegal shooting of fireworks begins, notify the police department, 683-4281. A squad car will be sent to the neighborhood in hopes of locating the person or persons shooting the fireworks. Usually, the person will stop shooting fireworks when they see a police car in the neighborhood. However, the police can advise the person of the consequences of his actions if the person registering the complaint has the information as to his identity, etc., and files a written complaint.

ANSWER: Midland Tool Specialty at 918 S. Main St., telephone 682-6647, tells Answer Line that they repair electric tools.

When is something going to be done so that the people in Midland will have decent viewable cable TV? We have read a lot about how they are working on the lines so as to have much better cable TV. It is not better at all, in fact the reception is worse and the cable keeps going off and when you call to report it, you cannot reach them as they must take the receiver off the hook, as all you get is a constant busy signal. If you do reach them all you get is the run-around.

We were recently notified the rates had gone up again, and this is for inferior cable. Since no satisfaction comes from contacting the local cable company, will you please print in your column where one can write or contact to report this poor service?

Have viewed cable TV in both Odessa and Wichita Falls, and it is great, and they receive much more for what they pay. I resent having to pay for something that we don't receive. — Disgruntled Cable TV Viewer

ANSWER: The person to contact is Terrie Everritt, customer operations manager with Times-Mirror Cable TV in Midland. Her address is P.O. Box 4247, Midland, Texas 79704.

Ms. Everritt says the company acknowledges certain problems at the present time due to the building of a new system and the transfer of former cables to the new system. In response to your letter, she requests that you write to her with more details as to your address, the times of day of the poor reception, etc. She also says that telephone calls about service should be made the same day as problems arise. The company maintains 24-hour stand-by repair service.

streets in this area have at least three Dumpsters. Why do these streets have just two? What can be done to get another one? — C.W.

ANSWER: The Operations Department of the city of Midland says that the procedure for providing Dumpsters is as follows: One container for every four to five houses. According to a department spokesman, the two Dumpsters are adequate for the number of residences you mention.

Texan says he's trying to shift power in state

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas millionaire Clinton Manges, who made sizeable contributions to an array of Democratic politicians in last year's campaign, says he delved into the political arena to help shift the power to newer faces.

"This state has been controlled by such few people," Manges said in a rare telephone interview with the Fort Worth Star Telegram. "Oil companies, major law firms, insurance companies, banks."

"And there's been such a shakeup in Texas politics. You're seeing a complete fight by the old establishment to destroy the new politicians because they didn't support them and they can't buy them."

Manges said this is the reason why Attorney General Jim Mattox is being investigated by the Travis County district attorney, why there is a motion to prevent two Supreme Court justices from participating in a lawsuit involving his oil interests, and why the rumor mill has it Manges is being rewarded for his contributions.

Practice deep watering

Midland County is hot and dry, and that means homeowners must give careful attention to watering their yards and gardens.

Here are some tips on getting the most from irrigation water so as to keep plants and lawns healthy while keeping water costs down.

1. Practice slow, deep watering to allow roots to penetrate deeper so that plants become more stress-resistant.
2. Soaker hoses and drip irrigation systems work well on trees and shrubs. It's more efficient to water at night or early in the morning because evaporation is less. However, nighttime watering can promote more disease problems.

3. Too much water can be as detrimental or even worse than not enough. The rate at which water is applied should be no more rapid than the rate at which the soil can absorb it. Never fertilize landscape plants when soil is dry. It's best to water the area one day, apply fertilizer the next day, and then water again. Fertilizer will do no good unless it is dissolved and moved down into the soil.

4. Shrubs and trees near foundations, under eaves or on southern and western exposures need frequent watering because they often get less benefit from rainfall and have to deal with heat reflected from walls.

5. Plants on mounds or slopes suffer from drought stress more easily than those on level areas, so these require more frequent watering.

6. Use an organic mulch of pine bark, chopped straw, hay or similar material to reduce irrigation needs.

7. Treat water as a valuable resource. Use it to water plants when needed, but do not waste water. Although considered a renewable source, good water supplies are becoming scarce in Texas.

Union station worries growers

By CATHERINE WILSON

WOODLAKE, Calif. (AP) — The music is from Mexico. Recent news programs have featured stories on amnesty for undocumented farm workers, warrants for immigration raids, United Farm Workers contracts and Hispanic politics.

Tiny 870-watt KUPW-FM, a Spanish-language radio station supported by a UFV union pension fund, began operations in May from a storefront office in Tulare County. It plans to switch to an all-news format within a year.

And some growers in the fertile San Joaquin Valley are worried by its news broadcasts and the station's union connection.

"There's been a lot of talk about what they're going to do," said Clark Biggs of the California Farm Bureau Federation. "Our general attitude is the fact we don't think it should be abused with political propaganda."

AGRICULTURE

"We are not here to agitate people," said Victor Aleman, the station's development director.

"Our main purpose is to inform the farm worker, and up until now there's no other station in the country that concentrated on farm workers," he said.

Biggs and Ed Thomas, spokesman for a table grape growers group, the South Central Farmers Committee, raised the possibility that the station would run strike announcements.

"I'm highly suspicious. It's an inescapable suspicion," said Thomas. "Let's suppose for example that the union wants to strike. The station becomes a tool by which they can do that and reach a maximum number of people."

In response, Aleman said, "We're not going to say, 'Go strike.' I don't think the station could tell people, 'Go and strike.' We're going to inform."

Thomas opposed issuing a broadcast license and said he may protest to the Federal Communications Commission if he considers broadcasts "flagrant and detrimental to us."

However, content is not subject to FCC control beyond the right of response under the so-called fairness doctrine.

"We have no control whatsoever over what goes on over the air. Stations program as they choose," said Milton Gross, chief of the FCC's fairness-political programming branch.

Planting cut back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Responding to government acreage programs, farmers have cut corn plantings this year to an estimated 60.1 million acres of corn, down 27 percent from 1982 — the smallest acreage in more than a century.

However, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday that the latest estimate, based on surveys made about June 1, was 2 percent larger than the 58.8 million acres indicated in April.

Sharp declines also were shown for some other grains and cotton — also the smallest in more than a century — as farmers cut back under the government's 1983 payment-in-kind program.

Under PIK, producers of wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton will get huge quantities of surplus commodities in return for reducing their acreage. This year's federal commodity programs are expected to cost around $21 billion, up from $12 billion last year.

Other planting indications: —Soybean plantings, the smallest in six years, were estimated at 63.3 million acres, down 12 percent from last year and 4 percent below the April estimate.

—Sorghum plantings were estimated at 11.6 million acres, down 28 percent from 1982 and the smallest since 1949. The estimate also was down slightly from the April estimate of 12 million acres.

—Cotton plantings, at 8.3 million acres, were reported down 27 percent from 1982. Officials said that would be the smallest U.S. cotton acreage since 1869. However, the new estimate was up from the April indication of 8.1 million acres.

—Tobacco plantings were indicated at 808,000 acres.

Bill will aid West Texas cotton growers

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Farmers in Far West Texas and New Mexico who grow long staple cotton will benefit by a bill passed by the House of Representatives, says Rep. Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture committee.

"The bill will benefit not only the area's economy but also the U.S. export trade," he said. "The bill will give farmers more freedom to make production plans and a broader opportunity to sell their crop on domestic and world markets. It also preserves a basic system of protection against overproduction and depressed prices and will make American-grown cotton more competitive on world markets where the U.S. long-staple grower had lost out in recent years."

Long staple cotton is used mainly in some sewing thread, high-quality knit shirts, sheets and towels. Total U.S. production last year was 99,000 bales, compared with 11.9 million bales of the major type of cotton produced in West Texas and other sections of the country, known as Upland cotton.

farm-ranch roundup

Stanton youth junior champion

CLARENDON — Jeff Brandenberger of Stanton won the champion junior individual award in the recent live-animal evaluation contest in the Clarendon Class Junior Hereford Field Day. The event was sponsored by the Texas Junior Hereford Association at Clarendon Junior College.

The field day was preceded by a tour of several Texas Panhandle Hereford ranches.

Tracy Meadows of Weatherford captured the senior individual division trophy, and Jake Hess of McLean won the adult individual division.

Winning the top junior livestock judging team honors were Jessica and Judith Oman of Midland; Rene Stewart of Sterling City, and Caryn Brandenberger of Llano.

The first-place senior team consisted of Lesia Fuston of Panhandle; Lee Haywood of Canadian; Brett Barber of Channing, and Chad Breeding of Miami.

Ox Bow Ranch of Memphis was judged the top ranch team.

Kim Saunders of Marfa will be the Texas Hereford princess in 1983-84.

Ranchers to gather in August

SAN ANGELO — Ranchers from across the United States and several countries will convene here Aug. 1-5 for the Third Annual International Ranchers Roundup in the San Angelo Convention Center.

The Roundup, which will be keyed to the theme "Innovative Management," will feature general sessions of interest to ranchers and landowners plus three days of intensified concurrent sessions on beef cattle, sheep and goats, grazing management, wildlife, marketing, business management for the ranch family, and on computers.

Keynote speakers will include Dub Waldrip, president of the National Cattlemen's Association; U.S. Congressman Tom Loeffler; Cas Maree, South African rancher, and Dr. Arthur G. Hansen, chancellor of the Texas A&M University System.

Ranchers at the conference may choose from four ranch tours to be conducted Aug. 5. Tours will be to West Texas ranches noted for innovative management practices in beef cattle, sheep and goats, grazing systems and to the scenic wildlife Texas Hill Country near Kerrville.

Altogether, 85 ranching experts are to address the Roundup, which is to be attended by up to 750 ranchers and other landowners.

Mashburn memorial established

STANTON — A memorial fund in memory of David Mashburn is being established by the Stanton Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapter.

Mashburn, a 1983 Stanton High School graduate, was killed in a recent one-vehicle accident. He was a champion student in judging grass, range, and pastures and land.

"David was outstanding in all three fields," said Nolan Parker, FFA chapter adviser and the youth's mentor. Mashburn was a member of the Texas state winning teams in grass and range judging and was a member of two national teams in range, pasture and land judging, said Parker.

Plans call for a fund to facilitate the awarding of a plaque at the annual Stanton FFA Awards Banquets to the outstanding FFA chapter member who excels in grass-range-land judging.

Checks to fund the effort may be made out to the David Mashburn Memorial Fund and may be mailed to Nolan Parker, FFA chapter adviser, P.O. Box 969, Stanton, Texas 79782.

Cotton Council seeks new bids

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Strong support for a bill requiring the U.S. Department of Agriculture to reopen bidding on 1982 loan cotton for use in the payment-in-kind (PIK) program was voiced here by a National Cotton Council official.

The bill is designed to forestall the use of 1983 crop cotton to fulfill government obligations under PIK contracts with cotton producers. The bill would provide unlimited bidding for at least two weeks. However, an added requirement would be that USDA accept bids up to the amount needed so long as bids do not exceed the maximum accepted under the feed-grain program.

Cotton Council spokesman John S. "Duke" Barr III, an Oak Ridge, La., cotton farmer, told a U.S. House agriculture subcommittee that USDA's earlier bid program for cotton contained a 7 percent cap.

Price estimates reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decline in prices farmers got for their commodities during June, the first such drop this year, has apparently led Agriculture Department analysts to reduce earlier projections for overall farm prices this year.

Despite the Reagan administration's surplus reduction efforts, continued global economic weakness means "price gains for major crops in 1983-1984 will be limited," the analysts say.

In separate reports issued Thursday, the department:

— Said prices farmers received for their raw products dropped 2.2 percent from May to June, ending a five-month string of steady increases. At the same time, the prices farmers had to pay to meet expenses remained unchanged from a month earlier and still 2.6 percent above year-ago levels.

— Dropped by three index points the year-long average price it expects farmers to get for their goods. After projecting that index a month ago to run at 135 percent of the 1977 base for the year over-all, analysts said Thursday it now won't exceed 132 percent.

That would be two points below the declining index for June and a point below the 1982 average. Most of the year-long loss was blamed on weakening livestock prices, the analysis indicated.

The department also lowered its projection for farm exports this year by $500 million to $35 billion, primarily due to the continued strong dollar, the global economic problems and contracting trade with the Soviet Union.

The report said farm trade with the Soviets could fall by almost half this year, dropping to $1.2 billion from $2.3 billion a year ago.

The decline in farm prices from May to June, according to the monthly Crop Reporting Board report, was caused by lower prices for wheat, cattle, hogs, soybeans and tomatoes. Those reductions were more than enough to offset increases in the prices for lettuce, broilers, corn, cotton and barley.

Overall, farm prices stood 3 percent lower than in June 1982.

Weed control emphasized

PANHANDLE — The prospect of dependable and consistent control of field bindweed and other perennial problem weeds attracted West Texas farmers to a recent series of field days in Panhandle, Spearman, Dalhart and Childress.

Bindweed infests thousands of acres of West Texas farmland and renders the land unprofitable for crop production.

The farmers discussed Between-Cropping Application (BCA) of herbicides to control the weed.

Lion not biggest cat

What's the largest member of the cat family? If you think it's the lion, you're wrong. It's the tiger, which can measure as much as 9 feet from nose to tip of tail.

Navratilova defeats Jaeger to defend Wimbledon title

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova served and volleyed her way past 18-year-old Andrea Jaeger 6-0, 6-3 Saturday and won the Wimbledon Tennis Championships for the fourth time in six years.

The top-seeded 26-year-old was merciless — completing the first set in 15 minutes, losing nine points, and wrapping up the singles' title in just 54 minutes.

Jaeger, facing the atmosphere and ceremony of center court on finals day for the first time, settled down to later make some fine strokes. But even the sympathetic cheers of the 14,500 fans could not help her to more than three games.

"I have no doubt now that I'm the best woman player in the world," Navratilova said — and nobody in a packed press interview room disagreed.

"I have played in four Wimbledon finals and won them all," she said, "and that is pretty special. It has not been done many times."

Navratilova later collected another title when she and Pam Shriver beat Rosie Casals and Wendy Turnbull 6-2, 6-2 in the final of the women's doubles.

JOHN MCENROE and Peter

Fleming won the men's doubles title for the third time in five years when they beat the Gullikson twins, Tim and Tom, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4.

McEnroe was expected to collect another title today, when he faces unseeded Chris Lewis of New Zealand in the men's singles final.

NAVRATILOVA previously won nine tournaments out of 10 this year, losing only to Kathy Horvath in the French Open. She won Wimbledon without losing a set and dropped only 24 minutes.

The left-hander's path to the title was eased when second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, suffering from a stomach upset, was eliminated by Kathy Jordan in the third round.

Lloyd had won the U.S., Australian and French Opens and appeared on course to be a Grand Slam winner.

"I was disappointed she didn't make the final," Navratilova said. "I wanted to be the one to stop her."

The Czechoslovakian-born American never looked in danger of losing her title, but in the opening game she almost lost her skirt.

She held it up with one hand, hit a volley with the other and then went to her chair and tied the belt tighter.

Jaeger, of Lincolnshire, Ill., said afterward: "I chased that volley, then I looked up and saw her skirt was down. I thought 'Gosh, this is going to be some match.'"

Jaeger was the youngest finalist since Maureen Connolly in 1962, and was probably the most cheerful loser in the 106-year history of the famed championships.

LAUGHING AND joking after the match, she said: "I looked at the clock and thought I had better make the changeovers as long as possible, because the match was going too fast."

When Navratilova won the first set in 15 minutes she had a slim chance of setting a Wimbledon record. The shortest final was in 1911, when Dorothea Lambert Chambers walloped Penelope Boothby 6-0, 6-0 in 25 minutes.

But in the second set Jaeger found her confidence and broke Navratilova's service, to a roar of encouragement from the crowd.

Navratilova broke right back, but Jaeger battled on and appeared unlucky in the sixth game, when the champion broke again for a 4-2 lead.

At deuce a shot by Navratilova was called in. Jaeger and most of the crowd thought it was out.

"Some chalk came up, but that was from the baseline. The shot was wide," Jaeger said.

It gave Navratilova advantage point, and she went on to get a vital break.

NAVRATILOVA WON 42 points in the second set and Jaeger won 37. But Navratilova, who resides in Dallas, Texas, was a regal figure as she advanced to the net, and though her young opponent hit some superb shots past her, she remained generally in command.

Jaeger frequently tried lobs, but never succeeded. Either they were not deep enough, and Navratilova got under the ball and smashed, or they landed beyond the baseline.

When the Duke of Kent, cousin of Queen Elizabeth, presented the trophy and medals at the end, Jaeger lost her way and headed toward the locker rooms.

"I couldn't figure out what was going on," she explained later.

"Martina went up to be presented with the trophy. I thought a gentleman told me to leave the court, so I walked in that direction. But then I realized they were going to give me my little medal."

She turned back, went up to the Duke, and forgot to curtsy. Wimbledon finalists have curtsied to the royalty for the last 100 years.

Navratilova, standing with her trophy, looked hard at her and bent her knees slightly as a signal. But Jaeger did not see her.

Martina Navratilova clenches her fist and shouts after match point against Andrea Jaeger to win the Wimbledon title.

Cubs take two-game lead with 8-3 win over El Paso

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs may be the hottest thing in baseball this side of Chicago, the Chicago Cubs, that is.

Darryl Banks notched his ninth win of the season and Tom Lombarski and Jay Loviglio belted homers as Midland defeated El Paso, 8-3, Saturday night to open a two-game gap in the Texas League West race.

The Cubs, after winning 8-of-12 on the road, are now 9-4 for the second half. Midland finished the first half with a 7-of-9 rush and the Bruins now have won 15 of their last 21.

With several key hitters fighting slumps, it was primarily pitching that enabled Midland to win four of six at San Antonio and Banks, with ninth inning relief help from Jim Gerlach, turned in another fine effort.

"He really didn't have his best stuff," said Manager Tommy Harmon. "His location was good, but he didn't have the good velocity and he was having trouble getting his slider over."

YOU'D NEVER have guessed this wasn't vintage Banks as he retired the first 11 batters, mostly on ground balls, before Ernest Riles doubled off the scoreboard in left with two out in the fourth.

Banks, 9-5, lost his shutout in the fifth when Eric Peyton tripled and scored on Bill Max's grounder to third. Mike Felder opened the fifth with his eighth homer, a well-tagged liner to right. Juan Castillo beat out a bunt single, went to second on a wild pitch and raced home on Riles' second double. After that Banks gave up just two hits the rest of the way. He whiffed five and walked only one.

It was his fourth win, without a loss, over the Diablos this year.

"Our running backfired on us and took us out of a couple of innings," Harmon said. It also led to the Cubs first run when Jay Loviglio greeted Rene Quinones, who brought a 6-1 record into the game, with a single, stole second, took third on the overthrow and scored on Bill Hatcher's single.

THE CUBS added three more in the second. Carlos Lezcano and Don Hyman walked, and A.J. Hill doubled home one run while Hyman was cut down trying to score from first.

Loviglio then rifled his first homer as a Midland Cub over the left field fence for two more runs.

Lombarski continued his batting binge with home run No. 11, after Hatcher was hit by a pitch, in the third to give Midland a 6-0 lead, more than enough runs to win.

Hill tripled and scored on Loviglio's single in the fourth. And in the fifth, Randy LaVigne tripled into the right field corner and circled the bases when the throw at third sailed into the Cub dugout.

Ken Pryce, 5-0, will go tonight as the Cubs seek to make it four in a row in the resumption of this six-game series. Pryce last won June 13 against San Antonio.

Both Loviglio and Hill had three hits each. Hill had two doubles and a triple and was thrown out on his second double.

"I grabbed the bag with my hand, but slid by. My hand came off and I had to do something," he said. Something was get up and try for third, but he was an easy out.

Still, it was the first multiple hit night since June 18 when A.J., who came over to the Cubs organization after six years with the White Sox, singled and double to knock in three runs against San Antonio during the midst of a 13-game hitting streak.

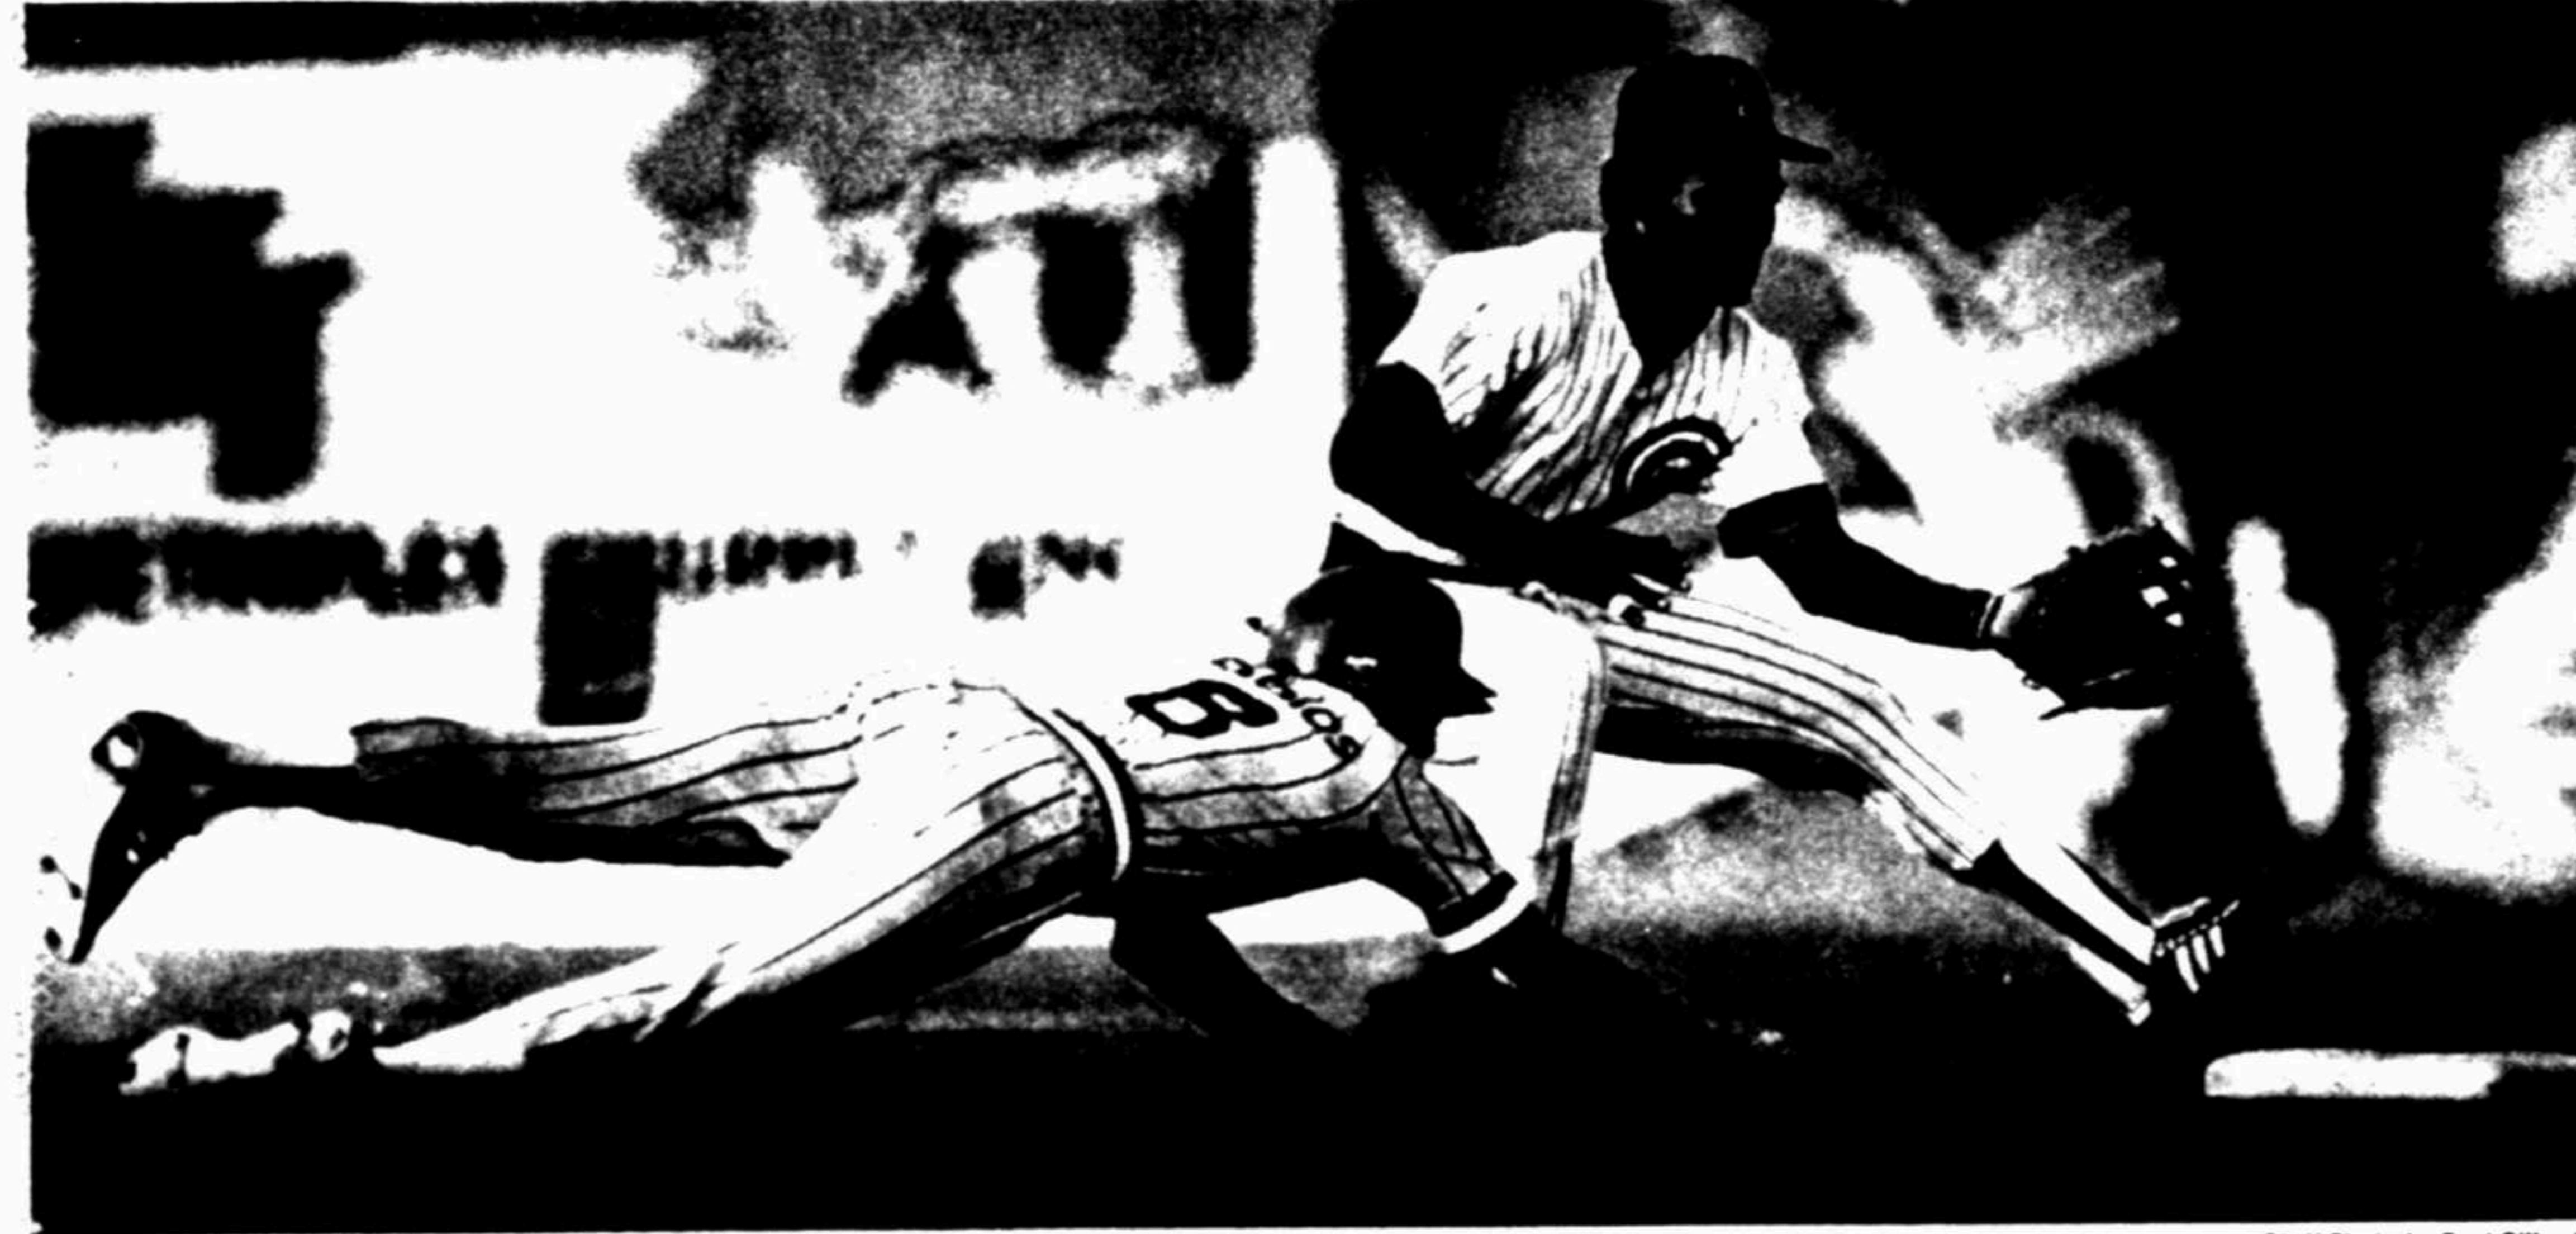

CUB PRINTS—Lombarski now is 9-for-14 after collecting two hits Saturday night. His two rbi also raises his league-leading total to 90 for the season. Starting time for the July 4 game is 7:30 p.m. and not 6:30 p.m., as listed on the season tickets.

Jabbar leaving L.A.?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Free-agent center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers, the second-leading scorer in National Basketball Association history, says he's "lost all optimism" about staying with the Lakers.

Abdul-Jabbar also termed "ludicrous" the statement by Lakers' owner Jerry Buss that meeting his salary demands would require raising ticket prices to Lakers' games at the Forum in nearby Inglewood.

"That kind of thinking wears on my sense of reality when you figure the Lakers made more money than any other team in basketball last year," Abdul-Jabbar said Friday.

Meanwhile, representatives of the Chicago Bulls will meet next week with the agent for Abdul-Jabbar, who reportedly wants $2 million per year for each of the next two years for his client.

The 36-year-old center, who made $1.1 million a year on his last contract, said the Bulls are "definitely... sincere" about negotiating with his agent, Tom Collins.

"They've been out front from the start about everything," said Abdul-Jabbar, who has helped the Lakers win two NBA titles in the last four seasons. "They said they were interested but had to take a little time to deal with the draft, and then they'd get back to us."

Other teams that have reportedly expressed interest in Abdul-Jabbar since he became a free agent at the conclusion of the 1982-83 NBA Championship Series are the Atlanta Hawks and the San Diego Clippers.

Abdul-Jabbar has made it clear he would rather stay with the Lakers. However, Buss has reportedly offered him $1.2 million for one year.

1912 — Rube Marquard of the New York Giants extended his record to 19-0 by beating the Brooklyn Dodgers 2-1. His first loss would come in his next start, five days later against the Chicago Cubs.

Stallions beat Bandits

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Bob Lane passed for two touchdowns and set up another to lead the Birmingham Stallions to a 29-17 victory over Tampa Bay Saturday night, killing the Bandits' chance for the United States Football League playoffs.

It was the final game for both teams in the inaugural USFL season, and left Tampa Bay with an 11-7 record and Birmingham at 9-9.

The league's other 10 teams end their regular season Sunday.

A crowd of 20,300 watched as Birmingham avenged a 45-17 loss to the Bandits a month ago. Birmingham averaged 22,052 for its nine home games.

Lane's touchdown passes went to Greg Anderson for 50 yards and Jim Smith for nine as the Stallions moved to a 23-10 halftime lead. Lonnie Johnson scored the first Stallion touchdown on a 2-yard run, set up by a 36-yard Lane pass to Smith and 32-yard keeper by Lane.

After Johnson scored, Tampa Bay promptly moved 73 yards, 46 of them on a Jimmy Jordan pass to Eric Truvillion, scoring on Gary Anderson's 2-yard run up the middle.

The Bandits added a field goal and a touchdown on a 1-yard pass from Jordan to Truvillion in the second half.

Despite a 337-yard passing night by Jordan, the Bandits were handicapped by 106 yards in penalties and poor field position much of the game.

Rader 'ripping mad' at lack of Rangers on All-Stars

Texas Rangers Manager Doug Rader is "ripping mad" because only one of his players was picked for Wednesday's Major League All-Star game.

He points out that five California Angels were picked and Texas, he notes, is tied with the Haloed ones for first place in the American League West.

The fans didn't vote anybody on the team and AL Manager Harvey Kuenn, after pitcher Rick Honeycutt was selected, didn't name any Rangers among the non-elected players. Now, that's a genuine snub guaranteed to raise the neck's short hairs.

THE INITIAL reaction is, why the fuss? It's just a mid-season exhibition game.

BATTLES

appointment is more understandable than Rader's outrage. The All-Star game affords the opportunity to play against major leaguers and it's a challenge and opportunity any minor leaguer would relish.

You may have noticed, if you are an American League fan, that the last is a dig, demonstrating just how cruel unfeeling sports writers can be.

If you are a National League fan, you are probably nodding. "How true, how true."

Actually, I'm not anti-American League. I like the Red Sox, White Sox, sometimes the Orioles, when they are battling and beating the Yankees. And instead of pining "Joe Dimaggio, where have you gone?" I miss the Washington Senators, St. Louis Browns and Philadelphia A's, cases of futility that knew no bounds.

But facts are facts. Last time the American League won one of these things, I think I was still wearing knickers. In fact, in those days, it seemed like the National League would never win one. Talk about suffering.

BUT THE Americans have won only six since 1950. It seems like the only time the Americans win is when Reggie Jackson or Ted Williams lifts a four-wood shot over the right field roof at Briggs Stadium. Long-in-tooth NLers remember the feeling of despair back in 1941 when Williams tagged Claude Passeau for that game-winner. It ruined the season.

But with players shuffling from team-to-team and league-to-league, the All-Star game isn't the emotional crisis it once was. About the only curiosity it arouses nowadays is how the Nationals will win, or, if they don't win it, how will the Americans lose it.

Then, too, the fans voting is atrocious. Most, nowadays, don't even bother to check to see who is having a good year. The votes are on past reputation. The exception is Bill Madlock. Even his past can't help. He turns up on the team every year, but it's no thanks to fans that the three-time NL batting champion makes the roster. His average is so prominent the manager just can't afford to ignore Bill when he picks the "reserves."

ACTUALLY, being selected, as a starter is more of an honor than anything. Since practically everybody picked plays, it's comforting to have some of that overlooked talent in the dugout for the late innings.

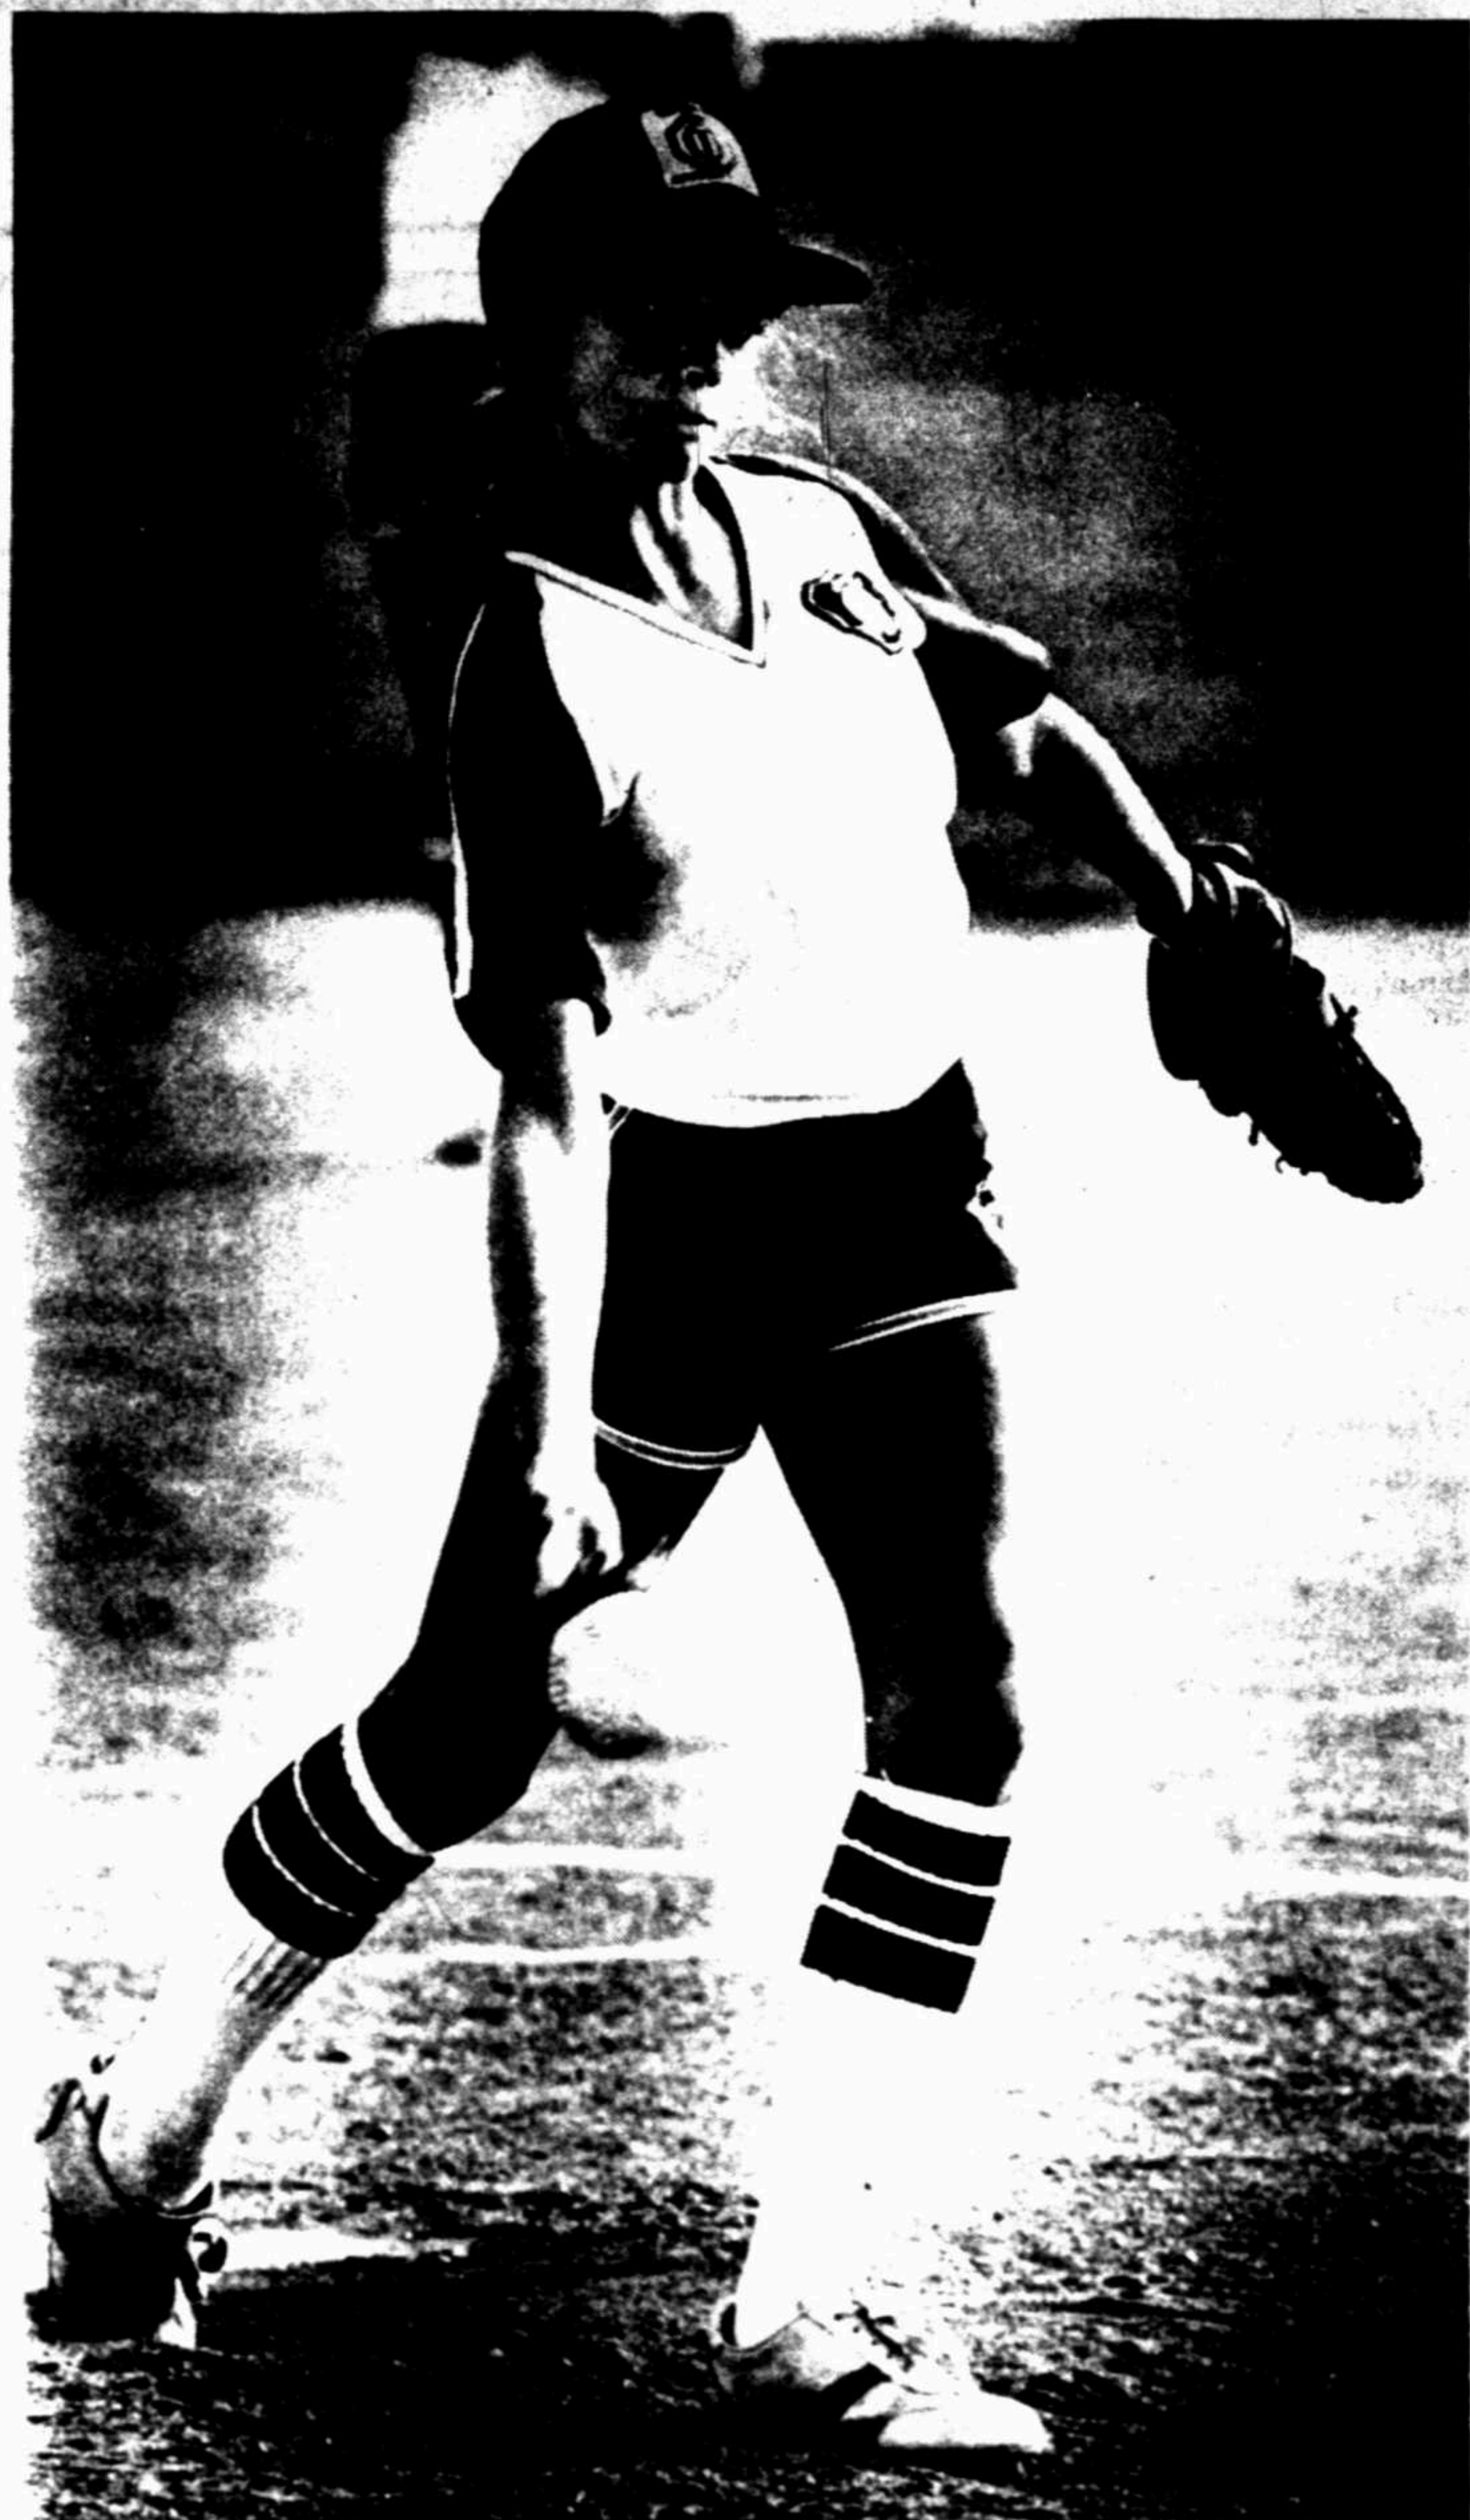

Pitchers aren't voted to the team. Bruce Sutter, the ex-Midland Cub, even if he were, would never start, but he has been involved in more wins and saves in recent years than any other pitcher.

This year's game returns to Comiskey Park in Chicago, back where it all started in 1933. It was believed, at the time, to be a one-shot affair with a Century of Progress (World's Fair) setting. In fact, it was billed as the "Game of the Century."

Today, 50 years later, it is bigger than ever, but has diminished in importance and stature. That is due to the growth of other sports and the fact that all have all-star games. Then, too, the players don't seem to consider it quite the honor to play as they did in the old days. They'd rather have three days off.

As All-Star games go, it's still the best, or would be if the National League could did up some competition.

Girls softball... MUGS

Text by Ted Battles

They may be young, but these lasses will enthusiastically endorse the contention that "Diamonds are a girl's best friend".

Midland United Girls Softball began in 1972 with 80 girls and today MUGS numbers 400 girls and is licking its lips in anticipation of its own six-diamond, lighted complex.

MUGS provides fast pitch competition for girls eight-to-19 years of age in four divisions. The divisions are divided: I—for 8-9-10 year olds; II—11-13; III—14-16, and IV—17-19. In the latter category, Midland fields only two teams, so most of the competition is against area teams.

One of the features of MUGS is that every girl in the association is required to play a minimum number of outs in each game. It varies according to division, but in Division I each girl must play two full innings.

But the thing that has the MUGS officials excited is the new diamond complex to be located at Ulmer Park.

"We had hoped to have it ready for this year's City Tournament, enthuses President Ray Failes, "but that now seems a little ambitious.

Not only will the complex include six lighted diamonds, but a permanent concession stand, bleachers and playground area.

"The land was supplied by the city of Midland on an old land-fill area," says Failes, "and it has been leveled off. The Midland Parks and Recreation Department has a limited budget, so most of the financing has come from donations."

Actually, things are going better than expected. "The estimated cost was $500,000," says Failes, "But we are running a little under that because of the donations." The lighting and piping for the fence have been donated.

Once finished, the Midland P&R will maintain the field, as it does other parks throughout the city.

The MUGS season runs from May 2 to July 2. Each team plays two games a week in all divisions. At the end of the season, a city tournament is conducted. All-Star selections are made in each tournament and these are the girls who compose the team that go to state. This year state will be held in Odessa in the latter part of July.

However, before state, district will be held in Abilene.

League officers are Joe Campbell, president; Ray Bailey, vice president; Joe Phillips, second vice president; Glenda Shores, secretary, and Sandy Ward, treasurer.

Jackie Forsythe is the coordinator, Sherry Coplen, the player representative; for Division I; Sharon Moore, coordinator, and Phylis Slough, player rep, for II Shirley O'Neal, coordintaor, and Rick Farias, player rep, for III; and Don McGaha, coordinator, and Sara Watson, player rep, for IV.

Teams are formed from a citywide draw. Girls are rated on the ability shown the previous year. All girls are then separated into groups. Each team is allotted a specified number of draws from each ability group. The idea is to provide balance.

All Star selections are made by the opposing coaches and umpires who are permitted to pick five players in each game. At the end of the season, the points are totaled and the all-stars selected, so it's consistency that counts.

Although umpires are paid, coaches and assistant coaches, who may be either male or female, are volunteers. The team manager, who handles the team's paper work, and the team chaperone must be females. Coaches and assistants must be approved by a board consisting of MUGS officers.

Until the new complex is ready, the girls play at Lancaster Park. Games start at 6:30 p.m. Division one plays Tuesday and 10 a.m. Saturday. Division II plays Wednesdays and Fridays; Division III plays Mondays and Thursdays and Division IV plays Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Soldering is an efficient way of permanently joining pieces of metal or wire. The strength of a soldered joint is second only to that of a welded bond. The basic items of equipment needed for soldering are an electric soldering tool, spools of solder and solder flux. Solder comes in various thicknesses for use on pieces of different sizes and weights. Some solder already contains flux, the adhesive ingredient which makes the solder stick to other surfaces. If, however, the solder does not contain flux, it must be applied. Heat the solder wire before dipping it into the can of flux.

A workman is only as good as his tools and the final result of any job displays the quality and knowledge of such a person. Now you can do the job using the same equipment that the professionals do. ## BOWLING BEAT Canales hits 11 for 278-740

BY RANDY ISENBERG
 Randy Canales was the top bowler last week in Midland, recording an 11-strike, 278-740 in the Dellwood Scratch Classic League.

Mike Lloyd, meanwhile, continued to make loud noise in the Early Mixers League with a 245-653 June 12 and a 223-627 the following week.

Midlanders fared well at the Texas State Bowling Association's 51st state tournament recently completed in Lubbock. J&A Specialties took first in the team event. Duane Robertson and Ross Graham took first place individual honors at tournament. Total results will be published in the next issue of Bowling Beat.

Exciting events are coming up for West Texans with the KMID-TV and Dellwood WT championship in October, guaranteeing $3,000 in each tournament. The final four matches will be televised.

Honeycutt hurls Rangers to win

By The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Texas left-hander Rick Honeycutt allowed five hits in eight innings to pick up his American League-leading 11th victory and the Rangers pounded Oakland pitchers for 19 hits in a 13-3 rout of the A's Saturday.

Honeycutt, 11-4, allowed three runs, none of them earned, to lower his ERA to 1.52. He struck out six and walked two. John Butcher pitched the final inning as the Rangers won for the 10th time in 12 games.

Every Texas player had a hit and scored at least one run. Jim Anderson had four hits and Larry Parrish had three while George Wright hit his second homer in two days, his seventh of the season, to highlight a three-run Texas first.

Blue Jays 7, Mariners 6

TORONTO — Barry Bonnell singled with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning to drive in Lloyd Moseby with the winning run as the Toronto Blue Jays overcame a six-run deficit to beat the Mariners 7-6.

With two outs, Moseby singled off Bill Caudill, 1-5, and then stole second on the first pitch to Bonnell, who lashed a 1-2 pitch down the right-field line for the game-winning RBI, his first of the season.

Orioles 7, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Eddie Murray drove in three runs with a home run and a double and Scott McGregor pitched a six-hitter to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Rich Dauer and Jim Dwyer also homered for the Orioles, who handed Detroit its fourth straight defeat.

Red Sox 10, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Jim Rice blasted a pair of mammoth two-run homers — giving him five homers and 10 RBI in his last three games — and Carl Yastrzemski hit the 444th of his career Saturday night, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 10-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

The 13-hit attack by the Red Sox, who have piled up 30 runs and 43 hits in their last three games against New York, enabled Bruce Hurst to beat the Yankees for the fourth time in his career without a loss.

Brewers 6, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Cecil Cooper slammed his 16th home run and reliever Pete Ladd helped Milwaukee hold off a ninth-inning rally as the Brewers downed the Cleveland Indians 6-5 Saturday night.

Milwaukee starter Moose Haas, 6-2, and Jerry Augustine had scattered 10 hits through eight innings as the Brewers took a 6-1 lead into the ninth. But with one out, Alan Bannister doubled, Manny Trillo reached on shortstop Robin Yount's error and Mike Hargrove singled in Bannister.

White Sox 4, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Rich Dotson allowed five hits over 7 2/3 innings while Greg Walker drilled a two-run homer and Jerry Dybzinski also drove in a pair of runs as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Minnesota Twins 4-2.

Dotson, 8-5, recorded his fourth straight victory and has not lost since May 23. He struck out nine and walked four.

Scratchpad Rain delays Western again

Compiled From AP Wire Reports

Heavy overnight rains forced the cancellation of second round of the $400,000 Western Open Golf Tournament Saturday for the second straight day. The Butler National Golf Club Course in suburban Chicago received more than two inches of rain from an overnight storm, and several holes were flooded. The schedule now calls for a single round of 18 holes on Sunday and a double round of 36 holes Monday.

Tom Watson, twice a winner of this title and seeking an end to a season-long slump, held the first-round lead with a 5-under-par 67. Buddy Gardner was alone in second at 68. Bruce Fleisher, Midland's John Adams and Australian Greg Norman had first-round 68s, three under par...

Football

All-Pro running back Joe Cribbs announced Saturday he is leaving the Buffalo Bills and "coming home" to play for the Birmingham Stallions of the USFL. Cribbs, a native of Sulligent, Ala., and a former standout at Auburn University, is in his option year with the NFL team. He said he will play the 1983 season with Buffalo and then move to Birmingham in time for the 1984 season.

Bicycle Racing

Frits Pirard of the Netherlands led a sprint to the finish and won the first leg of the Tour de France cycling race Saturday, a 99-mile run through the Paris suburbs from Nogent-sur-Marne to Creteil. Belgian Eric Vanderaerden, the victor in Friday's prologue, retained the yellow jersey as overall leader in the race. Pirard and the pack covered the distance in a time of 3 hours 49 minutes, 38 seconds. The winner's time with bonus points was reduced to 3:49:06.

Basketball

The defending champion United States beat New Zealand 63-52 after leading 37-28 at halftime in first-day action of the William Jones Cup men's basketball championships Saturday. Jeff Turner led the Americans with 20 points, followed by Phil Cox with 13. Taiwan's Chung Hua team trounced Thailand 109-69 in another game Saturday. Fourteen teams from 13 countries are divided into four groups. Taiwan entered two teams.

Baseball

St. Louis pitcher Joaquin Andujar was not in uniform at Saturday night's game with the Pittsburgh Pirates and won't be for the three remaining games in the five-game series between the two teams, a Cardinals spokesman said. Andujar pitched against the Pirates Friday night under a death threat he received Thursday by letter.

Auto Racing

A three-man CART appeals court was named Saturday to rule on the disqualification of Tom Sneva as winner of last month's Rex Mays 150 at Milwaukee. Sneva was disqualified as winner of the Milwaukee race when his car failed to pass a post-race technical inspection. Al Unser Sr., who finished second to Sneva, then was declared the winner.

Ryan No. 1 again; Astros win, 3-1

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Nolan Ryan fired a five-hitter and passed Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the all-time strikeout lead as the Houston Astros downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 Saturday night.

Ryan, 7-1, won his sixth straight game while striking out eight and walking two.

The 36-year-old righthander struck out pinch-hitter Ron Roenicke in the eighth inning to tie Carlton on the all-time list with 3,560 strikeouts, then fanned No. 3,561 when he cut down Derrel Thomas after Steve Sax tripped to lead off the ninth.

Jose Cruz slammed a three-run homer and a double and Ray Knight had three hits, including two doubles, to pace the Astros.

Cubs 5, Expos 2

CHICAGO — Jody Davis cracked his 13th homer of the season Saturday and reliever Warren Brusstar pitched four strong innings as the Chicago Cubs defeated the Montreal Expos 5-2 for their fifth straight victory.

Davis' homer came in the seventh inning off loser Charlie Lea, 6-4. Chuck Rainey, 8-7, went the first five innings for the victory.

Mets 5-4, Phillies 6-3
PHILADELPHIA — Ron Hodges drove in two runs and Ed Lynch and Doug Sisk combined on a seven-hitter as the New York Mets defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 in the second game of a two-night doubleheader, snapping a five-game losing streak.

The Phillies won the first game 6-5 when Bob Dernier scored from third on Keith Hernandez's wild throw with two outs in the ninth. The play originated with Mike Schmidt intentionally getting caught off first base on a throw from pitcher Jesse Orosco.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 1

PITTSBURGH — Bill Madlock drove in two runs and John Candelaria pitched a six-hitter to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 3-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The win ended Pittsburgh's four-game losing streak and also stopped the four-game winning streak for the Cardinals.

Braves 4, Reds 2

ATLANTA — Biff Pocoroba batted in three runs with a double and his first home run of the year and Pascual Perez out-dueled Cincinnati's Mario Soto for the second time in five days 4-2 before Atlanta's largest home crowd of the season.

Soto went seven innings, allowed nine hits and all four runs.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Lawmakers discuss next session

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Even before lawmakers could get out of Austin after the first special session for the 68th Legislature...

Speaker Gib Lewis warned House members not to "get too comfortable at home" since "we may be back in two or three months."

Lewis might also have warned lawmakers that the next special session isn't likely to be as quick, or as relatively painless, as the four-day gathering in June.

The reason is that the next session is expected to take on the question of teacher pay raises and related public education matters...

And in order to provide for those pay increases, and other changes, new taxes likely will have to be levied.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, shortly after the "sine die" gavel fell on the special session, announced that the first special session for the 68th Legislature also would be the last...

higher taxes." Bullock says the special session managed to spend over $15.4 million, leaving "an anticipated balance" of $36,886 dollars for the biennium.

"Out of a $30.9 billion state budget," Bullock commented, "we are looking at a $36,000 reserve."

Bullock calculates that legislative sessions cost taxpayers about $20,000 a day — so that lawmakers can meet for about a day and a half without having to come up with some more money.

Bullock, of course, already has announced that he wants to move into the Governor's Mansion, and he's not going to shed any tears if Gov. Mark White is the man who has to call on lawmakers to raise taxes.

Speculation has been that White wouldn't call lawmakers back before the end of August, in hopes that some more money would be available without a tax hike.

August 31 is the end of the state's fiscal year, with the new biennium starting on Sept. 1.

If Bullock's calculations are wrong, or if the economy accelerates, there could be some funds available this fall to be carried forward to the 1984-85 biennium, or to be used for other purposes, such as a teacher pay raise.

Of course, Bullock will be the man who will report what's left over, if anything is left over, so that White will be in the somewhat curious position of seeing if an expected political rival for 1986 will be helping him make good on a campaign promise from 1982.

White's position on tax increases has been — to borrow the phrase of his predecessor, Bill Clements — flexible.

Earlier this year, White became miffed with reporters over accounts that he was supporting increasing gasoline taxes to provide more funding for highways, and to free up general revenue funds for other purposes, including education.

White argued that he hadn't endorsed increasing gasoline taxes — that it was just one of the options he and his staff were considering.

Since then, White has told the Texas Motor Transportation Association that he thinks the state must upgrade its highway system, "even if it means raising taxes" to do so.

Just what taxes he would propose to raise apparently still remains under consideration, although the Texas Good Roads/Transportation Association, at its recent convention, again called for an increase in the gasoline tax to provide more funds for highways.

White has indicated he still favors his "sin tax" approach — with higher taxes on items such as alcohol and tobacco products — while opposing increased severance taxes on oil and gas, because of the economic difficulties being experienced by the oil and gas industry.

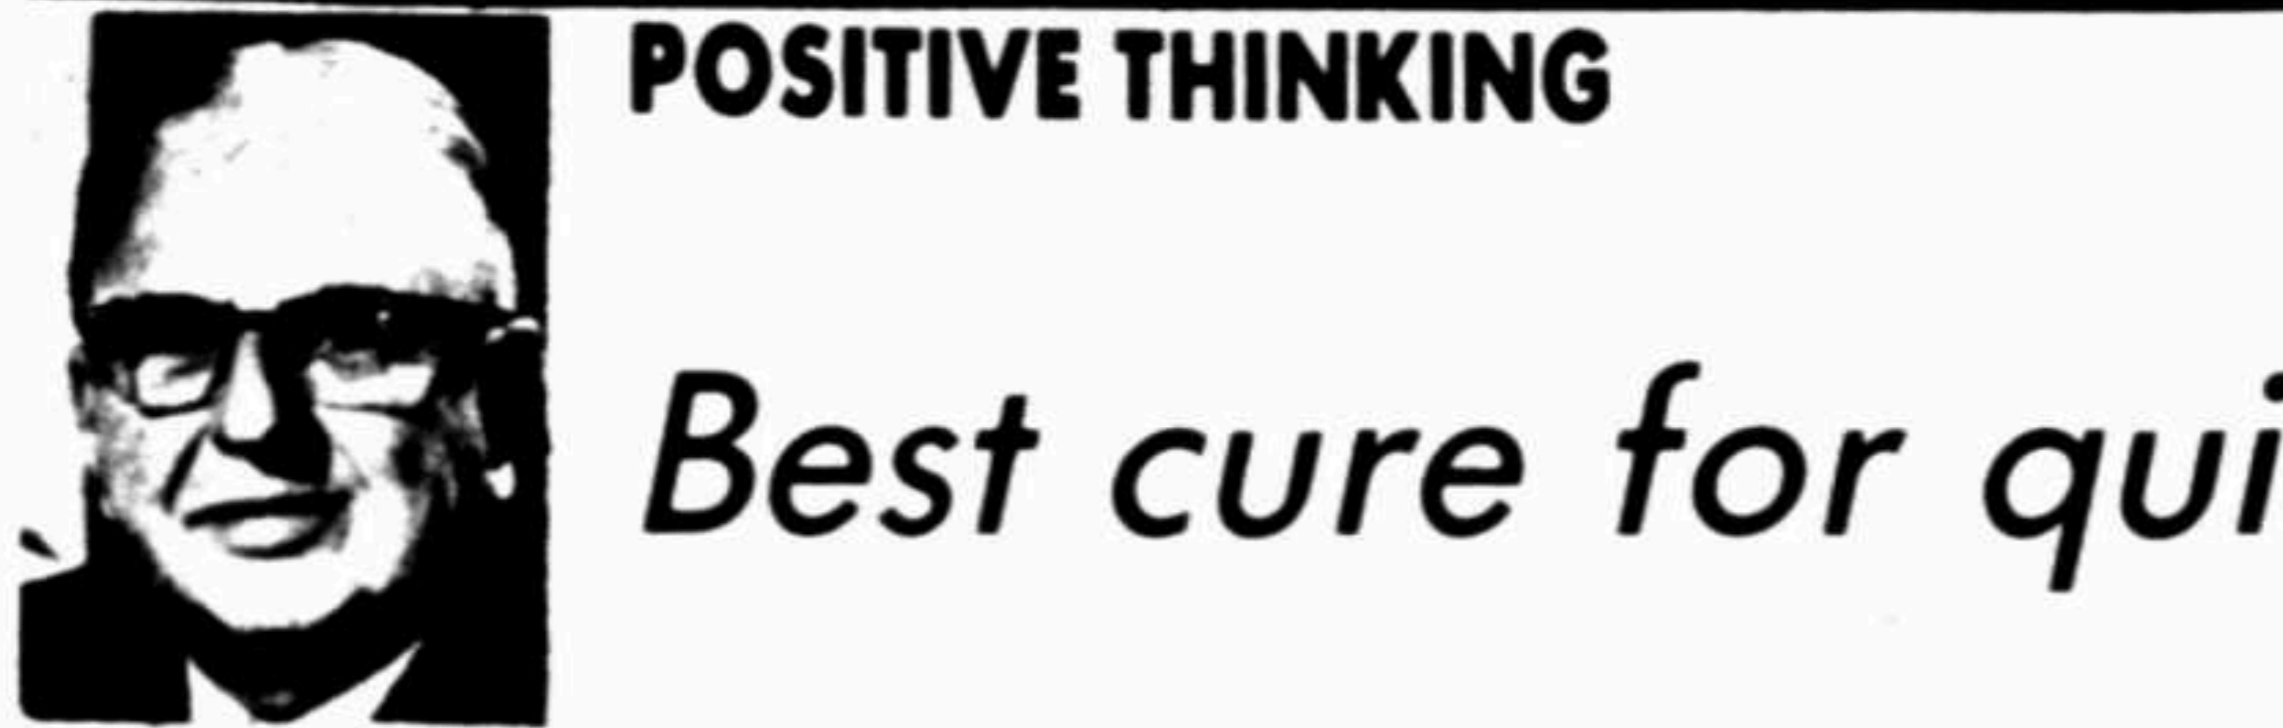

Just what direction future efforts on education, and perhaps taxes, will take should become somewhat clearer after the Select Committee on Public Education makes its recommendations.

That panel, which was created to deal with the questions of teacher pay and other education topics, is to hold its first meeting Thursday (July 7).

But whatever is recommended won't be guaranteed smooth sailing through the Legislature, particularly if it requires increasing taxes to implement.

Legislators aren't even eager to tax, and most are aware of the talk around the Rotunda (attributed to Bullock and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby) that the 1985 session could have to raise up to $5 billion in order to keep state government at the level approved by the 1983 session.

That prospect isn't likely to make the lawmakers comfortable at home, or anywhere else.

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Anger is an extremely unpleasant characteristic, almost guaranteed to cause you to lose friends and even to make enemies. Suppose you know you have a quick temper — a short fuse, as they say.

I was asked to serve on a committee that was set up to study how we could help to further the cause of world peace. A meeting was held and it was certainly the most unpeaceful committee meeting I have ever attended.

had very firm ideas about the subject of peace, and if those ideas weren't accepted, they got very hostile about it. It became a super-heated meeting. Voices were raised. Tables were pounded.

"I'm feeling fine," the man said. "I just noticed I was getting mad, that's all. And I have found that it is difficult to get mad lying down."

with him. Another nonsuccess quality is irritability, which often seems to be a combination of exasperation and impatience.

"That is the trouble with this meeting," the man on the couch said. "Too much speaking up too loudly. You can't argue in a whisper. Then he drew attention to his hands, which were resting limply with fingers spread and relaxed."

Well, I never did forget that man. He imaged himself out of a state of hostility and aggressiveness, and he carried the rest of us right along

The Richardsons: A family of seven which shares one room in America's poorest city

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Henry Richardson, his Mexican wife and their five children share one bed in a 12-foot by 12-foot room for $85 a month.

The Richardson family also take turns killing cockroaches that nightly invade their tiny residence and commiserate over the fact that they are poor in the nation's most impoverished large city.

"We live in sub-human conditions. I'm not proud of it. We used to have a lot of mice, too, but we finally got rid of them," said Richardson, an unemployed hospital orderly.

The Richardsons are suffering like many others in El Paso, a city of 480,000 which has the lowest per capita income — $7,360 — of any metropolitan area, according to statistics compiled in 1981 by the U.S. Commerce Department.

Richardson's only income comes from selling candy on the streets during days when he doesn't babysit his children, aged 3 to 9. He makes about $20 a week, which pays the rent.

He has refused welfare. His dark-haired wife, Maria Guadalupe, supplements his income by working as a maid for $10 to $15 a day. Naturalization papers which would allow the Spanish-speaking woman to live and work legally in the U.S. are pending.

But the Richardsons' earnings hardly compare with the nation's average income of $10,495, or $201 per week. Each week, the average American worker earns about four times what the Richardsons pocket.

Mrs. Richardson, 42, is among the estimated 3 to 5 million undocumented aliens that reside illegally in the United States. Hispanics such as Mrs. Richardson make up 30 percent of the aliens living illegally in America, former Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Leonel Castillo said.

She bypasses the law by working on the sly for cash. Two to four times a week, Mrs. Richardson travels by bus to cleaning jobs arranged by other Mexicans who work in El Paso. Hispanics make up 62 percent of El Paso's population.

The Richardsons used to live in Juarez, a city of nearly 1 million across the shallow Rio Grande, but moved to El Paso "so Maria wouldn't have to swim the river every day she worked," her husband said. He is bilingual.

The family lives three blocks from the international bridge in a second-floor tenement above El Rapido Cafe. Home is Room 17, which has peeling blue walls and a plastic figurine of Christ that is nailed to the wall opposite the one bed.

Richardson usually sleeps on the floor so his children can sleep with their mother. There are two chairs in the room and two wire-mesh windows, one fitted with a $15 fan. Toilets and a washroom shared by other residents are down the hall.

"This is a helluva place to raise kids," he said.

Richardson has no intentions of expanding his young family. "I'm real careful now. I don't want any more children—the last one was an accident," he said softly, pointing to his three-year-old daughter. She plays quietly on the wood floor with a small plastic spaceman.

Richardson admits he "had a drinking problem that cost me my job, but I've been dry seven months. Still, no one wants to hire someone who used to have a drinking problem." Out of work since December, Richardson makes up 12.2 percent of the El Paso labor force that is jobless.

Richardson, 43, also is nearing the end of his five-year probation for smuggling aliens. Richardson was arrested by the U.S. Border Patrol with four Mexican aliens he was being paid $800 to drive to Morton, near Lubbock, Texas. The aliens were bound for Chicago.

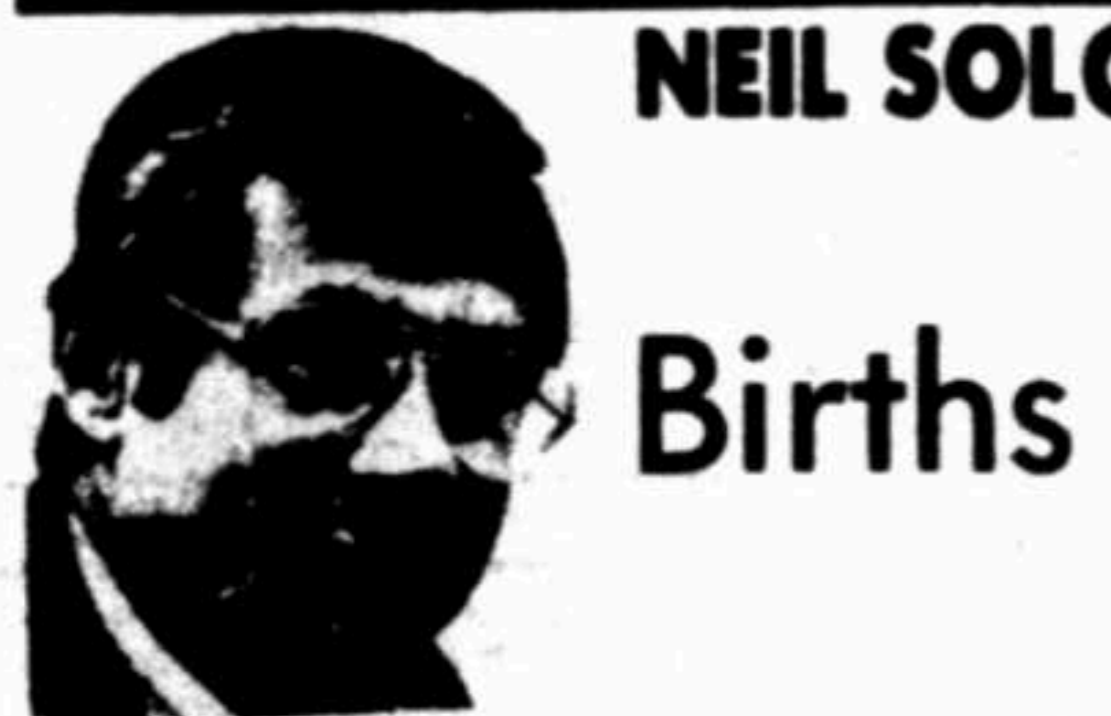

"My in-laws got me into it. But even if you get good money — some get $450 to $500 per person to take (aliens) by van to Denver — being arrested is not worth it," Richardson said, wringing calloused hands that have worked on migrant farms from Texas to California.

Three young Richardson children appear pensive in their room where seven live in an El Paso tenement. Their father is unemployed, but won't accept welfare. Their mother is a maid. The seven share the 12-by-12 foot room and all sleep in the same bed. El Paso is the nation's poorest large city, according to U.S. statistics.

Richardson, vowing to straighten himself and set a good example for his children, has refused food stamps and other benefits, even in America's poorest big city.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was an only child and so was my husband, and we both decided when we were first married that we would have at least two children. But since I had my first child about four years ago, I have had two spontaneous abortions. Does that mean that I won't be able to have any children? — Mrs. M.M., Cincinnati, Ohio abortion does not rule out the possibility of having additional children. Dr. Joe Leigh Simpson, of Prentice Women's Hospital in Chicago, estimates that the incidence of a second spontaneous abortion — or even a third or fourth — is about 25 percent for women who have had at least one child. The risk of additional spontaneous abortions is somewhat higher for women who have never had a live-born infant.

You should be aware that more than half of all first trimester spontaneous abortions are due to chromosomal abnormalities. In view of this, you might want to discuss with your physician the advisability of having chromosomal studies for both yourself and your husband.

Dear Mrs. U.: If you think your child has been in contact with poison ivy, wash the exposed area with soap and water as soon as possible. This can reduce the possibility of spread. If, despite your efforts, large blisters begin to form or there is an infection, have your youngster seen by a doctor.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

SO PROUDLY WE HAIL!

Let us renew our dedication to this great country on this Independence Day. Let's salute our flag proudly; it is symbolic of our precious heritage of freedom and democracy, hard fought for over two centuries! Vibrant as ever are the ideals we hold dear as a nation: concern for our fellow man, honest enterprise, mutual respect for all, and Liberty, Justice and the Pursuit of Happiness!

Happy America!

Husband-wife team operate overseas:

Their Mission is health

Text by Diane Booth

On a typical weekday at 6 a.m., Dr. John Adams and his wife, Martha, a registered nurse, pedal bicycles 3½ miles to a hospital in Nairobi, Kenya where they see an average of 80 patients a day and then prepare operating equipment before conducting surgery as a team.

The physician and nurse, who have spent a total of 19 years in Africa working in Southern Baptist Mission hospitals, are on leave in Midland, Mrs. Adams' hometown.

The couple plans to return to Nairobi, but they are not sure when because of family considerations.

Nearly 20 years ago, Adams decided to give up his general practice in Seminole. "We felt we wanted to do something more than what we were doing," he said.

The Southern Baptist Mission board assigned the doctor from Wichita Falls to a tuberculosis hospital in Mbeya, Tanzania in East Africa for four years. It was a general hospital that specialized in the treatment of lung diseases.

Adams not only worked in the hospital but also went into the bush areas to bring people in to the hospital for care.

The doctor said he was sent to help the Africans "to stop the suffering by limiting disease, lengthening their life spans and limiting family size."

While Dr. Adams worked in the hospital, Mrs. Adams taught the couple's five children, Steve, Jim, Linda, Cinda and Chipper (John Jr.).

The family went to Kisumu in Western Kenya for a year. Dr. Adams filled in for a doctor on leave. The physician supervised African practitioners in five clinics before moving his family to Nairobi in 1971.

"We didn't have all the tools we were used to and we were far from the source of supply," Dr. Adams said. "But we learned those things are really not all that important anyway."

They enjoy their "low pressure" practice — week-ends off, no night calls and no ringing telephones. But the Americans especially appreciate the people.

"We enjoy their friendship and fellowship very much," Mrs. Adams said. "We have a good, close relationship with the people. We can communicate quite well."

The Adams speak fluent Swahili, the official language of the region. Because they work with people from a half dozen tribes, Adams said, the people try to converse in their own dialect but he said, "we insist they compromise and speak Swahili."

But learning to speak

Martha Adams, left, and Dr. John Adams, who now live in Africa, are visiting Midland to spend time with their family. The couple met at Baylor University when she was studying nursing and he was a pre-med student.

Some of the treasures from the Adams' collection include a carved ebony trunk trimmed in brass from Zanzibar, a clay sculptured bust made by a West Kenyan artist and a Masai tribe weapon.

the language wasn't easy, Mrs. Adams said. "One time I told the yard boy to put milk on all the flowers instead of water, but he seemed to know what I wanted."

Aside from learning to speak the language, Mrs. Adams said the family has made numerous adjustments to life in East Africa. In Tanzania all the food was fresh. "It was like living on a farm," she said. She baked her own bread.

But the mission tries to make life as comfortable as possible, Dr. Adams said. The couple said the mission board's philosophy is it is "too difficult" for Americans to live in "primitive circumstances."

"They provide housing and take care of our family's needs. Nobody gets rich but we're very comfortably take care of."

Asked if he regrets leaving a financially successful practice in the U.S. to work overseas, Dr. Adams said, "It is so little a consideration; when one's needs are taken care of you don't want those things."

The missions and mission families are supported by contributions governed by the Southern Baptist Mission board, Adams said.

The family practice clinic deals primarily with children's diseases caused by lack of good food and clean water and people from the slums of the Mathare, Nairobi's melting pot of people from all over Kenya. They are treated mainly for gynecological problems and venereal diseases, Adams said.

People come to Nairobi from outlying villages attracted by foreign assistance funds and jobs, Dr. Adams said. But the assistance has hurt the people more than aided them, he said. "The money has helped to break down some of the tribal cultures and order they had back in their villages." Most of the jobs the people come to the city for are menial positions, he said, and they end up living in slums.

Dr. Adams, who left his practice in Seminole 20 years ago, examines a patient at the Nairobi hospital as a native Kenyan watches. Photo, courtesy the Adams' family album.

Jewelry made by Turkana and Masai tribes includes white beads crafted from fish backbones and bracelets fashioned from copper telephone wire.

"They are underemployed. They would really be better off if they were back in their home situation."

People from the bush and tribal villages cared for at the clinic suffer from malnutrition, parasites, malaria and worms, Mrs. Adams said.

The clinic provides family planning and birth control education, immunization programs, dental hygiene instruction, prenatal and postnatal care, care for children under five years and health and nutrition education. Any surgery which can be performed under a local anesthetic is done at the clinic.

The clinic has no beds so people who undergo surgery must go home to recuperate, Mrs. Adams said.

The nurse and doctor team have no one to assist them in the operating room. "We have to make sure everything is lined up and ready before we start," Mrs. Adams said. Mrs. Adams' job is to sterilize all equipment before surgery begins.

No hospital supplies or surgical tools are thrown away after use but are sterilized and reused, she said.

"It is my business to see there are no infections and we never have had one," she said. "We do first rate surgery and care under different circumstances." She recalled one time a door had been opened for ventilation during an operation and a rooster walked in.

"We don't wear gowns during surgery. We aren't as strict as a regular hospital. We don't have all the frills necessary in this society. People there have better resistance to disease. We are able to do major surgery under local anesthetic because we have the complete cooperation of the patient."

After the couple sees an average of 80 patients daily, they perform any necessary surgery to correct problems detected during the day's examinations, Mrs. Adams said. The reason for immediate surgery, she said, is "patients aren't real good about coming back."

Only necessary tests are performed at the clinic, Dr. Adams said. "We don't have to have extra tests done there. We put all our resources into helping suffering people. We don't spend extra time doing extra tests to avoid legal entanglements."

No matter what a patient is treated for, from abdominal surgery to pulling a tooth, it costs about 80 cents. Although that would be a bargain compared to U. S. medical care costs, Mrs. Adams said, to Kenyans, 80 cents is not cheap, but is affordable.

It is important to charge a token amount for the services the people receive, she said. "Free medical aid can ruin a program because you take away self respect and make the people dependent on you. If something is free, humans have the feeling it is not valuable."

If a patient needs attention the Adams can't provide, such as x-rays or orthopedic care, they refer him to the government system. "Most Africans don't know what is available to them," Mrs. Adams said.

Although the couple is dedicated to providing the best possible health care to each patient they are especially committed to family planning. "We realized one of the greatest things we could do for Kenyans was family planning," Mrs. Adams said. The country's annual birthrate of 4 percent is among the highest in the world. The average size family has 11 children, she said. Since agricultural production increases by 2 percent or less annually, she said, "That spells disaster. Overpopulation will be the downfall of the world." The couple's family practice clinic helps women with family planning. They have developed a female sterilization technique that can be performed with a local anesthetic. "Men have so many taboos about birth control," Dr. Adams said. "Women are the only ones who are serious about it." There are many single mothers in Nairobi, Mrs. Adams said. "The man takes no responsibility for raising the children." For example, men fear intrauterine devices, Dr. Adams said. Birth control pills do not prove effective, he said, because they are more complicated to use overall. "IUD's are more effective. We put them in by the thousands out there." After several years of work, the couple feels they are making progress in family planning. "We are finally getting a foothold so we can help. If the birth rate isn't controlled, any program, whether it is sponsored by governments or churches, will be wiped out. Whatever is out there has to be divided too many ways." Africa depends on the U.S. and Western Europe for its survival, Mrs. Adams said. The past seven years the Kenyans have not been able to feed themselves. If the rains don't come one year it is a disaster, because there is no storage to hold surplus grain, she said. "Even under the best circumstances they can't feed themselves." Mrs. Adams teaches Kenyan women to breastfeed their children for the first two years. "We had to re-teach mothers who have the idea the civilized way is to bottle-feed a baby." If a baby is weaned before the age of 2, she said, it will get sick or die because there is no way to sterilize bottles, milk is not available and even when it is, she said it isn't the right milk for youngsters. It is customary for a nursing mother who becomes pregnant to wean the baby and hand it over to an older daughter. Older sisters assume responsibility for the youngsters.

"Commercial milk companies are killing babies by the thousands in developing countries," Dr. Adams said. "They (mothers) don't know how to use it and they can't sterilize bottles." "We have lived with this for years," Mrs. Adams said, "we know what we're talking about."

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN MCKNIGHT HARRISON

Dorothy (Mrs. Alfred N.) Sharrick and Fay (Mrs. Tom S.) Edrington recently spent three-and-a-half weeks on a thrilling travel adventure that took them halfway around the globe to the Orient.

Flying from Midland to Los Angeles, they joined a tour group of 19 (one-third of them Texans) for the holiday, which began in Japan's ultra-modern city of Tokyo. They enjoyed an extraordinary ride through the Japanese countryside on the famed "Bullet Train" from Hakone to Kyoto. Their travels also took them to Taipei, Taiwan; Manila, the Philippines; Bangkok, Thailand; Singapore, the lovely island of Bali in Indonesia, and Hong Kong.

The entire trip was a series of memorable experiences, from tropical dances to stylized tea ceremonies, snowcapped peaks to balmy beaches and ancient monuments to modern skyscrapers. It also proved to be a shopper's paradise, with all the luxury goods of the East, and a traveler's delight accommodation-wise. Five of the hotels at which they stayed were recently included in a list of the world's top ten by a British business publication.

The Midlanders returned with a new appreciation of Singapore, remembered from Humphrey Bogart movies as a dark and sinister place, but in reality a charming, cosmopolitan and extremely clean city. Hong Kong, with its "wall-to-wall" people and great displays of wealth next to abject poverty, left a lasting impression.

MIDLAND FREELANCE WRITER Mary Frances (Mrs. Jim) Beverley returned Saturday from a swing through the Texas Panhandle, where she spent the week gathering material for her book, "Home-Town Restaurants of Texas." She has been commissioned by Gulf Publishing Company of Houston to write the book for inclusion in its Lone Star guidebook series.

Mary Frances will be traveling throughout the state for the next six months visiting as many home-owned restaurants as possible, and using certain criteria, selecting the ones for the book, which is scheduled for 1984 publication. Her writing has appeared in numerous local, regional and state publications, including "Texas Highways" magazine. Last year she published her cookbook and guide to party-giving, "The Entertaining Woman."

TO CELEBRATE the 80th birthday of Vesta (Mrs. T.I.) Coleman, thirty-four members of her family have gathered in Midland over the Fourth of July weekend for a reunion. Festivities included a backyard picnic Friday at the home of Vesta's son and daughter-in-law, Tom and Margaret Coleman, and a birthday dinner Saturday evening in the Garden Room of Midland Country Club.

Besides the one son, Vesta has two daughters, Frances (Mrs.

Ken) Lansdowne of San Francisco and Carolyn Coleman Carpenter of Mission Viejo, California, who are present for the occasion. Also here for the weekend are her ten grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

A Midland resident since January of 1982, Mrs. Coleman was born in Florence, Alabama, on July 10, 1903. She received her teaching credentials from Florence State University (now the University of North Alabama) when she was 18 and taught school prior to her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman operated a building contracting firm in Dallas, where they watched "their" city grow from around 100,000 population to its present size.

After her children completed their college education, Vesta earned her MA degree from North Texas State University and then taught history at Irving High School for 12 years. While there, she served as head of the History Department, organized the American Heritage Study Club and was a pioneer in teaching an enriched curriculum for superior and talented students.

KATHRYN AND MAX CRUNK had as recent guests their daughter and son-in-law, Kathryn and Russell Laughlin, from Houston. Russell, who is a landscape architect and planner for CRS Inc. of Houston, was in town to visit the site of the new Gulf Building in ClayDesta Plaza. He is providing construction administration for this project.

The son of Thelma and Van Laughlin, Russell recently returned from trips to Europe and the Middle East, where he joined a consortium of international architects to discuss projects for the Saudi Arabian Ministry of the Interior and University of Petroleum and Minerals. This fall he will enter SMU to begin work on his MBA. Kathryn is marketing officer for Texas Commerce Bank-Tang-ewood.

NOW IN ITS 58th year, Camp Waldemar, located at Hunt in the heart of the Texas Hill Country, continues to attract a number of Midland girls.

Adams...

The clinic nutrition program is also an important part of their work. Mrs. Adams said. Many Kenyans suffer from protein deficiency. Before she moved to Africa the Midland native decided she would eliminate the problem by teaching people to raise chickens and eat the eggs.

But African taboos rule out eating eggs, she said. "Men believe they will become sterile if they eat eggs and women think they won't conceive. I told the people in Tanzania not to give their eggs away but to eat them. When I left they gave me a dozen eggs. You can't change taboos like that."

After their years in East Africa, the Adams, although proud of their American citizenship, have more of an international perspective than an American outlook.

Most people in Nairobi ride bicycles or walk, Dr. Adams said. "Only recently have Americans realized they can drive smaller cars."

Large vehicles are used indiscriminately in this country, he said. A physical fitness buff, Dr. Adams laughed at some Americans' idea of exercise. "People get in their big cars to go to the running track."

The doctor praised Africans for their ability to use and recycle their resources. "Seeing dumpsters full of stuff is overwhelming. So many items in the U.S. are all packaging and waste."

At the Nairobi hospital all materials are recycled through sterilization including needles, thermometers and surgical drapes.

"People live on short energy supplies in Africa," Dr. Adams said. "They live on farms and there is no banking, insurance or pensions. Society takes care of these things. You really feel more free with their simple way of life than this heavily industrialized one."

The Adams, who met as students at Baylor University, found Africa a wonderful place to raise their five children. Graduates of international schools, their parents find them "internationally inclined."

All five kids helped their parents in the different clinics. Mrs. Adams said. But only the twins, Linda and Cinda, have chosen work in the medical field as nurses.

Linda and Cinda, both 22, graduated from Baylor University's nursing school this spring. Linda and her new husband, a Baptist preacher, plan to go on an overseas mission. Cinda also hopes to volunteer for a medical mission. The two older sons, Steve, 26, and Jim, 24, want to work in business abroad and the youngest, Chipper, 20, is studying airplane mechanics to train for a career as a bush pilot.

The family has traveled extensively throughout Europe and Africa and to the Middle East. Outdoors enthusiasts, they discovered Africa has a lot to offer the athletically-oriented. They enjoy mountaineering, caving, rockclimbing, running, cross-country skiing, camping and backpacking.

Total involvement in their work and satisfaction with their accomplishments has kept the couple in Africa for nearly two decades.

"I am able to apply my training to help a needy people with the support we have here (in the U.S.)," said Dr. Adams.

During their leaves in the U.S. every three or four years, Dr. Adams said he and his wife evaluate their family situation and changes before making a decision to return to Africa.

"We're in a place we have come to know," Dr. Adams said. "The Kenyans are a wonderful, friendly, grateful people."

His wife added, "It would be difficult to learn another culture so different from ours. It would be easier to stay in the culture we best know. We love overseas work."

Dr. John and Martha Adams treat an average of 80 patients a day in Nairobi. This toddler, photograph courtesy of the Adams' family album, was a patient at the hospital where the Adams' work.

New column announced

"Better Business," a locally written column written by Linda Truitt will be featured weekly beginning next Wednesday in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram.

Hot tub business suffers

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Although there hasn't been a case of AIDS reported in Marin County, fear of the deadly disease has apparently thrown cold water on the hot tub business.

Some hot tub operators in this affluent suburb north of San Francisco said business was off by as much as 40 percent in June, blaming it on a misconception that Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome can be transmitted in the spas.

"These people are freaking out, literally," said Michie Shiota, general manager of Floating World Spa. "People are extremely cautious."

She said business is also off elsewhere in the San Francisco Bay area.

Richard Quinn, a communicable disease specialist for the Marin County Public Health Department, said it's unlikely the disease could survive the high temperatures and chlorine used in the hot tubs.

Carbohydrates defended

Carbohydrate foods like pasta, potatoes, corn and bread are often portrayed as the fattening "villians" in American diets, but they are actually full of energy, nutrients, fiber and protein, and not all that fattening, according to a foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Mary K. Sweeten.

"Many people don't realize that carbohydrates contribute four calories per gram to their diet — which is the same amount of calories per gram contributed by protein," she said. By contrast, fat contains nine calories per gram. Sweeten reported.

"So carbohydrates are not the fattening foods they have often been called," she declared.

Research has shown that obese people do not necessarily eat excessive amounts of carbohydrates, but they often eat more fat than do people of normal weight. Sweeten added.

FABRIC SECRETS

A French tack is an easy way to hold two pieces of material loosely together. It can be used at the bottom of the lining of a coat where it attaches to the inside of the coat at each side seam. To make a French tack, take four stitches between the two pieces of material at the point where they are to be held together. Over this loose row of stitches, sew a row of blanket stitches, close together, over the full length of the exposed threads. A blanket stitch is a buttonhole stitch that is not so tightly sewn. In this way, a firm link is formed between the two garments.

Although summer has just about begun LEGGETTS FABRICS would like to remind you that now is the time to start thinking about your fall and winter wardrobe. Many find sewing very relaxing so why not come on by, pick up a pattern and material and then begin to create. You'll find us located at 1541 Parkway, Odessa, 362-8255 and in the No. 9 Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield at Wadley in Midland 683-3101. "Quality. Your Only Real Bargain". Hours: Mon.-Sat. 10-6.

Most save money with own phones

Most consumers can save money by purchasing their own telephones, according to a family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Bonnie Piernot.

Consumers have had the option of buying their own telephones since 1968. Although 25 million people acquired leased telephones last year, only five million purchased them. One reason for the lack of purchases, Piernot said, is that few people realize they are paying rental fees on their telephones.

That cost is included in the monthly service charges and is seldom listed as a separate item.

"Consumers who do nothing more than buy a phone like the one installed in their home can save money," said Piernot, "but they should consider service, repair costs, the cost of novelty phones and any special charges before making that purchase."

Electronic telephones are becoming an increasing popular choice for those who do buy their phones, she said.

Realities of cyclists clarified

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES -- Mike Stubblefield was winding along a condominium and park-filled neighborhood in Oakland, Calif., on his 1976 Honda 750 motorcycle this April. The expert 36-year-old rider was cruising easily at about 40 mph when the van backed out and filled the road 100 feet ahead. "I locked up the front brakes on purpose and it pitched me over the handlebars," recalls Stubblefield. Sliding along the ground like a hockey puck, Stubblefield was smacked by his 450-pound bike just as he rolled to a stop in front of the van.

When the van driver tentatively walked back to see him, Stubblefield said he wanted to contact the police about making a report. "You didn't hit me," said the van driver, who drove away before the aching but not-seriously-hurt Stubblefield could get up. "I could've been dead or injured and he wouldn't have cared," said Stubblefield, an editor at the Los Angeles-based motorcycle publication Rider. "The thing about motorcycle riding is, it doesn't matter whose fault it is. You have to be responsible for everything that might go wrong. You simply have to be a stone-cold paranoid about cars to survive riding the streets."

Such are the dangers faced by cyclists and motorists who coexist in an atmosphere of mutual paranoia. For the motorcyclists, the streets are mean places where they -- vulnerable, warm, fragile and exposed -- must negotiate between 80,000-pound trucks and 4,000-pound cars that think they are invisible. For cars, the motorcycles are erratic irritants who scare them by swooping into unexpected places.

Lured by the 12-month-a-year rideable weather, Southern California is a paradise for cycle riders and therefore has more of them than anywhere else in the country. The hell is that more of them are killed in Southern California, too. Last year 681 motorcyclists were killed in California, and 183 were killed in Los Angeles County alone. With only 4.5 percent of the total registered vehicles in the state, motorcyclists accounted for 18.5 percent of the vehicle operator and passenger deaths in California last year. California Department of Transportation statistics say you are nearly six times more likely to die riding a motorcycle than driving a car.

However, state statistics also say that motorcycle rider deaths and injuries dropped 10 percent in 1981, part of a steady 18.6 percent decline in deaths and injuries in the state since 1979. Officials say that by analyzing and learning from some of the myths and ignorant attitudes about cycles and cars shared by both four and two-wheel operators, the situation could even get better.

A sampling of the myths and realities: Myth: Motorcyclists are out to get motorists in only slightly milder fashion than the rednecks who shotgunned Peter Fonda and Dennis Hopper in "Easy Rider."

Reality: Of the 900 cases studied in depth in California, there were only two incidents of motorists deliberately going after the motorcycle riders. Doug Pitts, head of the Los Angeles area Motorcycle Safety Foundation rider-training programs, said "In almost all cases, there is no actual malice. Psychologists have studied the problem and note that motorists just aren't trained to watch for motorcycles."

Myth: Freeways are the most dangerous place for motorcycles. Riders must go inches away from steel behemoths at 55 mph, and instant death is a second away.

Reality: "The safest place for a motorcyclist in Los Angeles is the fast lane of the freeway," said Pitts. Statistics and further studies on accident reports from the California Highway Patrol have shown that only 10 percent of all motorcycle accidents occur on the freeways.

Myth: Motorcyclists cause most of the accidents, ignoring lanes and rights of way.

Reality: Two-thirds of the car-motorcycle accidents occur at surface street intersections. And 84 percent of those are caused by cars violating the right of way of the cyclist. The primary cause of motorcycle accidents is excessive speed. According to a state report, the average speed of the cyclist when a problem is perceived was 29 mph. The median impact speed was 21 mph.

Myth: Motorcyclists don't believe in helmet laws and are therefore on a death trip.

Reality: The report found by on-site observation that 50 percent of motorcyclists were wearing helmets. In the accident cases studied, 40 percent of riders were wearing helmets.

AT WIT'S END

Benefit of teenage drivers a myth

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every once in awhile you'll meet a mother who says, "I can hardly wait until Michael learns how to drive. I know I'm being selfish but it will be easier for me."

Usually, a mother says this when she is mellowed out on Mother's Day and two valiums.

Trust me, the "perks" just aren't there.

There are a lot of myths surrounding the teenage driver. One is that all boys love to tinker with cars and can save you a lot of bucks by tuning up your engine and changing the oil. I had a son who solved the problem of a radiator boiling over by pouring a can of Orange Crush into it. I was shocked. I would have been willing to bet he didn't know where the radiator was. He certainly never found the gas tank.

Another myth is that they save you time and energy by running errands for you. Would that it were true. I once had dry cleaning that rode around in the back seat for so long waiting to be dropped off it went out of style. Besides, for the first few years after your child learns how to drive your car is a blur. It never actually stops, but is only a relay vehicle circling slowly around the drive or cruising in front of the house, but never really coming to a complete stop.

More importantly, there is no such thing as a teenager without his or her own wheels. You may think it's going to be a "sharing experience," but you are wrong. You are not saying hello to a new driver, but goodbye to your car. One innocent mother once said, "Now that my son drives I have peace of mind just knowing he isn't driving around with some crazy-out-of-control weirdo at the wheel."

We didn't know how to tell her that her son was the crazy-out-of-control weirdo at the wheel that every other mother feared.

A father once figured out what it cost to send his son out for a half gallon of skim milk. When he averaged the insurance, the license, the gas, the cost of the dumpster which the son backed into, the towing charges and the court costs, he could have bought his own dairy farm.

Windsor to speak at lunch

"Through The Looking Glass" will be the topic of Mrs. Claire Windsor, the keynote speaker at the Midland Christian Women's Club luncheon Wednesday.

Mrs. Windsor, of Abilene, is originally a native of Birmingham, Alabama. She has been active in the Fort Worth PTA and the Abilene Woman's Club. She is a mother of four and grandmother of 15 and spends her time traveling with her husband or at home in Abilene raising registered Black Angus cattle at her and her husband's farm.

The mother-daughter duet of Charlotte and Valerie Cooke, accompanied on the piano by Carol Hisey, will provide the music.

Diana Hewett, an interior accessory designer and custom art consultant, will present a special feature explaining the use of paintings, framing, matting and other accessories for the home or office.

The luncheon is from noon to 2 p.m. at Midland Country Club and the cost is $10. A free nursery will be provided at Memorial Christian Church, to which children should bring a sack lunch. Reservations can be made by calling 682-5851 or 683-7074.

The interdenominational club has no formal membership and is open to all interested women.

Heating can dangerous

Preparing caramel custard by placing the can of sweetened condensed milk in a pan of boiling water is dangerous, according to Mary K. Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University. Sweeten said several popular cookbooks recently published by clubs and organizations in Texas contain recipes that recommend heating condensed milk in the can. This method may cause the can to overheat and explode and should be avoided because of this risk.

Newman 50th anniversary

Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Patt C. Newman

Lt. Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Patt C. Newman are celebrating their 55th wedding anniversary today with a family gathering.

The Newman's were married in Oklahoma on July 3, 1928 and spent thirty years in service with the U.S. Army located in various posts in the United States and in Japan during the occupation following World War II. They have two children, Lowell R. Newman of San Angelo and Mrs. Bob McCruiston of Midland, five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Rice, mussels nice combo

PILAF WITH MUSSELS

- 1 tablespoon oil
- 1 tablespoon chopped garlic
- 1 tablespoon chopped shallots
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 cup white rice
- 2 cups chicken stock
- salt, to taste
- juice of 1 lemon (optional)

2 lbs. mussels, cleaned and bearded.
Heat the oil in a large saucepan. Sauté the garlic, shallots and paprika without browning them. Stir the rice into the oil to coat it well. Add the stock, salt and lemon zest. Cover the pan tightly, bring the mixture to a boil, reduce the heat and let it simmer until the liquid is almost completely absorbed, about 15 minutes, or until the mussels open. Garnish the pilaf with chopped parsley.

Yucatan rockfish

Hearst Feature Service

- 1 tablespoons achiote
- 1/4 teaspoon black peppercorns
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano
- 1/4 teaspoon whole cumin
- 2 or 3 cloves of garlic
- 1/3 teaspoon paprika
- pinch of cayenne
- juice of 1 lemon, 1 lime,
- 1 orange and 1 small grapefruit
- 1 1/2 pounds rockfish fillets
- black bean paste (recipe follows)
- 12 corn tortillas

Grind the whole spices. Place them in a blender and add the garlic, paprika, cayenne and juices. Blend to a smooth paste and spread over fish in a bowl. Set aside for several hours if possible to marinate.

Grill the fish over charcoal, gas or electric grill. Serve with tortillas and black bean paste.

BLACK BEAN PASTE
1/2 pound black beans
5 cups water
1/2 onion, peeled and stuck with a few cloves a few ounces bacon
1/2 teaspoon dried savory

2 or 3 small dried chiles
2 to 3 tablespoons fat
In a large, heavy saucepan or casserole, cover beans with at least an inch of water. Add remaining ingredients except fat. Bring to a boil, cover and reduce heat. Simmer beans until they are fully cooked, adding enough water to keep them from drying out. Salt to taste.

Puree beans, together with their broth, in a food processor or blender. Heat fat in a large skillet. Fry bean mixture over moderate heat until a thick paste is formed.

Even though they do not accept the coffins, glass eyes, false teeth or herds of goats they have been offered, more items than ever are flowing into Midland's pawnshops because of harsh economic conditions, according to some local pawnbrokers.

"Our loans are up probably 100 percent over this time last year," said Darrell Logsdon of Alamo Pawn Shop, Inc. He also said, however, that his retail sales of unredeemed goods were down "a good 50 percent."

Jon Dunagan of Big-Tex Pawn said he is no longer accepting some of the most commonly pawned items, such as car stereos and CB radios, because he already has more unredeemed ones than he wants.

"You get backed up in that stuff," he said. "Everyone is having to dig a little deeper."

In the past some individuals have dug a little too deeply. Among the items Dunagan has been offered for pawn loans were false teeth, a coffin — apparently unused — and a glass eye mounted in a silver ring.

"Needless to say, I didn't make a loan on that," he said.

Alamo Pawn Shop has been offered, and has turned down, a herd of milk goats, car titles without the car and income tax forms which were supposed to receive a tax refund.

"Some people don't think they even have to bring anything in," said Joyce Munn of Gold Star Pawn Shop.

Such persons evidently do not understand how pawn shops function. A person has to bring in something of value. The pawnbroker offers him a loan for a percentage of what the broker estimates the item is worth. Depending on the shop, the maximum loan available locally varies from $100 to $270.

The person receiving the loan then has one calendar month to repay it along with a fixed amount of interest, which are set by the state. For example, a $50 loan under present rates would be charged $10 interest, so $60 has to be paid to redeem the item.

After that calendar month there is a sixty-day grace period, during which the interest is prorated on a daily basis,

Pawnbrokers have suffered from a poor reputation ever since Shakespeare gave Shylock, the moneylender, a bad image in his 16th century play "The Merchant of Venice," said Darrell Logsdon of Alamo Pawn Shop Inc.

"I've always wanted to help people," Lisa said. "You can help them out here when they need money the most."

such as 3 1/2¢ a day on a $50 loan. If the loan and interest have not been repaid after the grace period, the broker can sell the pawned item for any price he wants.

All the pawnbrokers agreed there really isn't a particular type of person who seeks pawn loans.

"My clients run the gamut in ages from 18 to their 80s," said Dunagan. "They're all types, all classes, all races."

Logsdon said he has had customers who cross the country on foot and others who drive up in Cadillacs.

The most common items pawned are jewelry, firearms, tools and stereo equipment. On one typical day this week, the goods Alamo Pawn Shop accepted included a power mower, a record turntable, a portable television and a guitar.

Dunagan said he has had "more of the big ticket items brought in in the last several months."

Joann Bradford, manager of C.I.C. Finance,

Furniture and Pawn, was the only local pawnbroker who said she has seen no recent increase in pawn loans or decrease in redemptions.

Pawn loans are "more or less a sideline for us," she said. C.I.C. is unusual since it generally accepts only jewelry for pawn.

"You don't have to worry about 'will it work?' or 'will it start?'," she said.

Her pawn items — mostly rings — are "high quality" and "most of them are redeemed," Ms. Bradford said. "Most of my customers are repeat customers. They know it (the jewelry) will be safe here."

All the pawnbrokers stressed the integrity of their business.

"Any shop with P-A-W-N," Dunagan spelled out, "on the window is licensed by the state."

To obtain a state license they must prove to the Office of the Commissioner of Consumer Credit they have $75,000 in net assets readily available. They also must not have been convicted of or be under indictment for theft, fraud or other crimes of "moral turpitude."

Pawnbrokers have to pay the state a $500 investigation fee to check their eligibility for licenses. Once the brokers have their licenses, an annual fee of $100 is required.

They have to meet city and county requirements. If their shops carry guns, as most do, they also must meet federal regulations for dealing in firearms.

"We're more closely regulated than banks," Logsdon said.

Logsdon said he felt that pawnbrokers have long suffered from a poor reputation, which he traced back as far as the bad image Shakespeare gave the moneylender Shylock in his 16th century play "The Merchant of Venice."

"The pawnbroker is never glowingly portrayed in any of the media," Dunagan said.

"We're not fly-by-night operations," he said. "It represents a healthy investment."

"We try to cooperate closely with the police. We don't want thieves running around out there either."

Pawnshops...

An officer from the Midland Police Department picks up pawn tickets from the shops daily. "They are checked very closely," said Midland police Detective Lt. Earl Luckey.

"A pawnshop is the first place the police look," said Lisa Munn, who works with her mother in the Gold Star Pawn Shop.

Logsdon said that since pawnshops require photo IDs to make loans and keep careful records, if someone does bring in stolen goods "we have all the paperwork to substantiate it."

He said police love to find stolen goods in a pawnshop since the shop's records can make finding the thief much easier.

Of all the items pawned, Logsdon said, "less than one-tenth of one percent turns out to be stolen."

He also stressed that pawnbrokers are a "service to the community just like a bank."

"We're the poor man's bank," Dunagan said, since he deals in loans smaller than those most banks want to bother with.

"We're kind of a hybrid between a bank and a discount store," he added.

Coincidentally, Dunagan's shop has a telephone number that is only one digit different from that of RepublicBank Midland, and receives many misdialed calls for the bank.

"Most people think pawnshops are crooks," said Lisa Munn.

Mrs. Joyce Munn's late husband, Joe Munn, wanted to improve the pawnbroker's image.

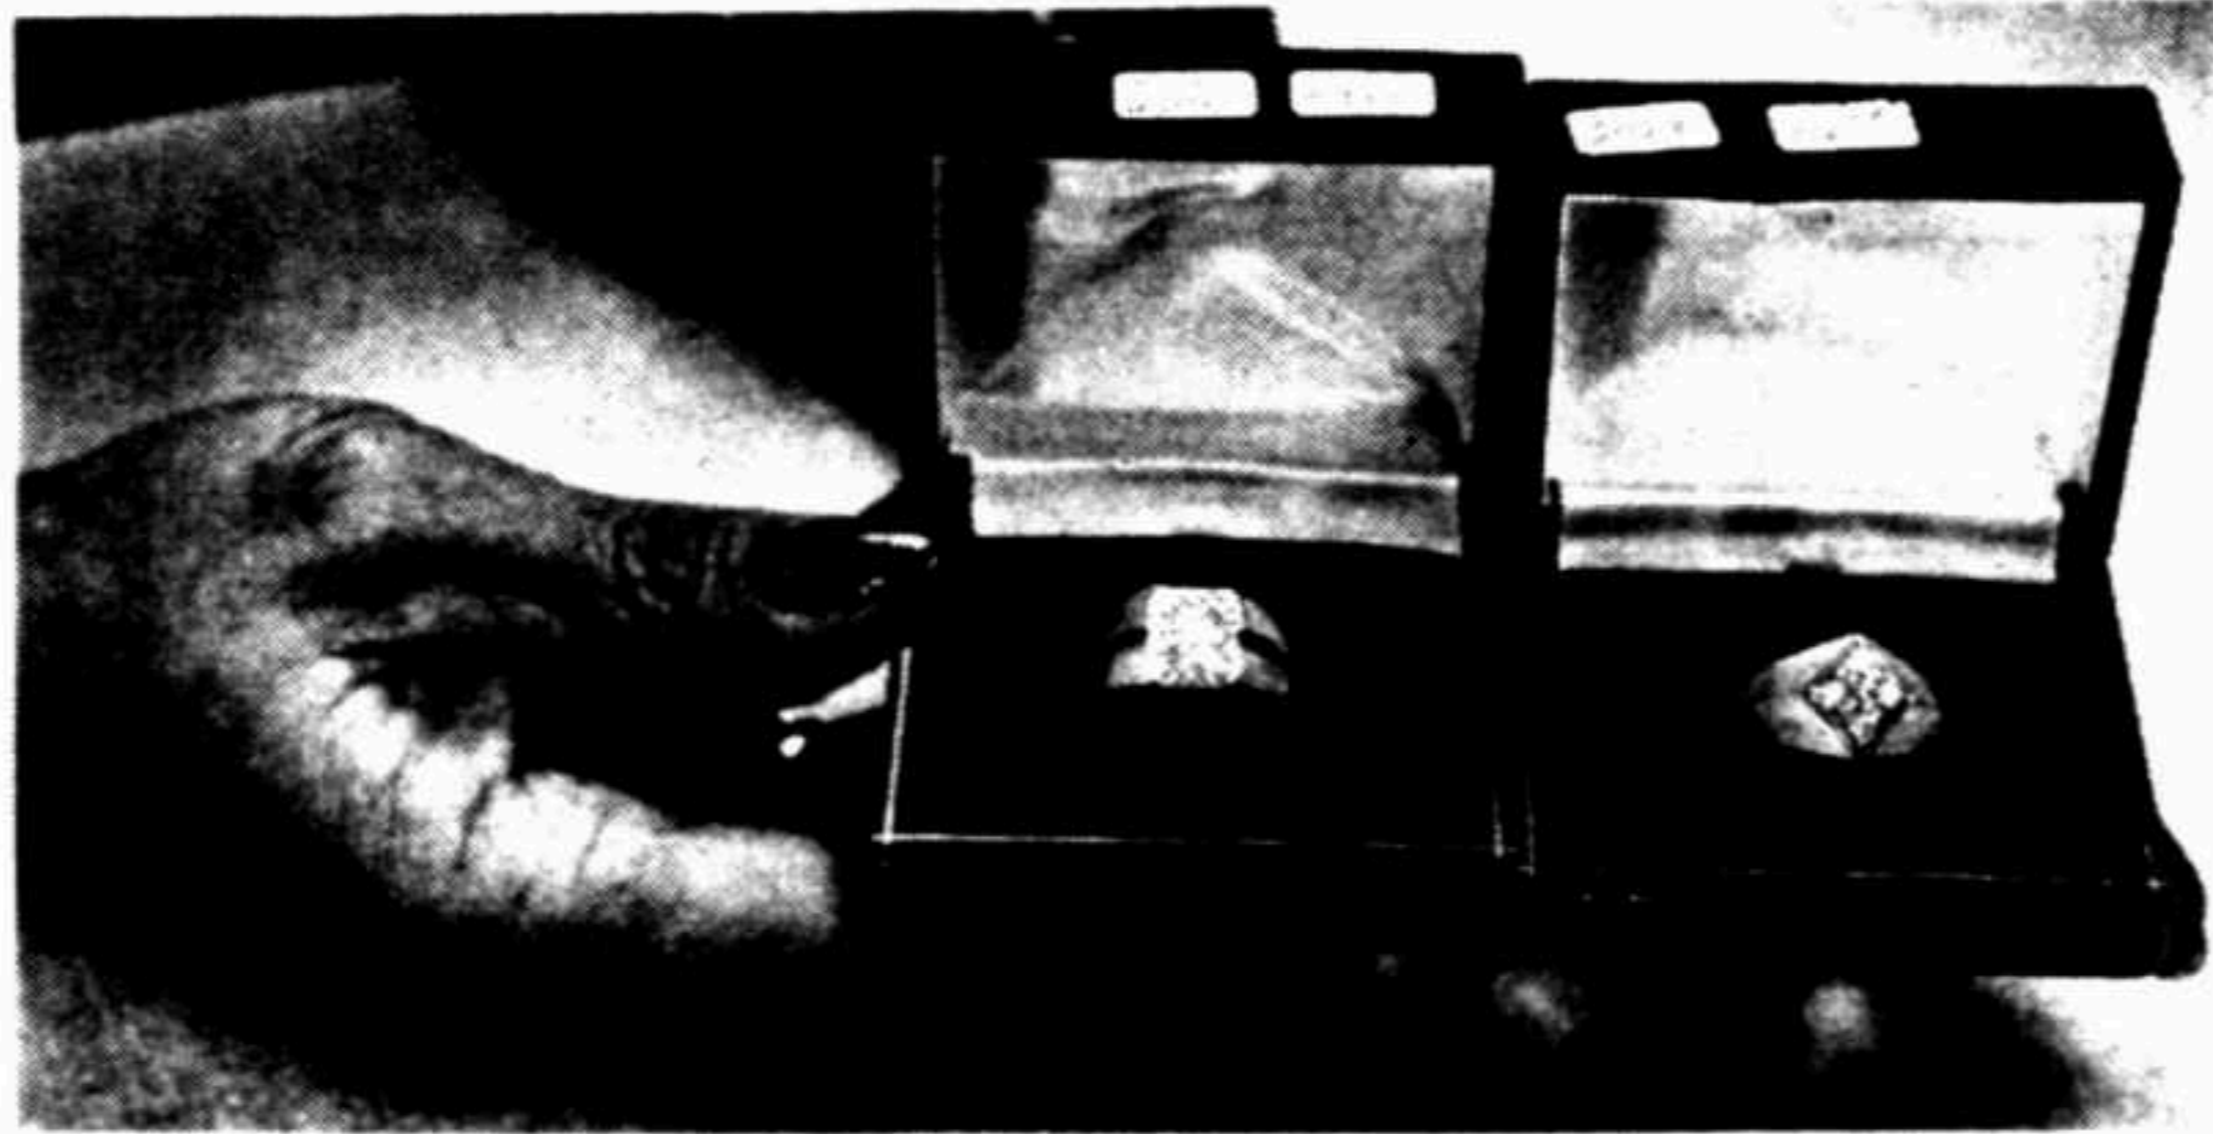

"He tried to change it to where a family could come in," Mrs. Munn said.

The Gold Star Pawn Shop is a family business. Mrs. Munn believes her daughter Taresa probably became the youngest person in Texas to receive a license enabling her to fill out pawn tickets at age 12. A person has to be 18 to get a pawn loan.

The older sister, Lisa, plans on keeping the shop in the family after she inherits it.

"I don't think I could ever walk in here with someone else running it," Lisa said. "I've always wanted to help people. You can help them out here when they need money the most."

As this sign in Big-Tex Pawn Shop states, owner Jon Dunagan does not accept checks for pawn redemptions. He also has not accepted the more bizarre items — false teeth and a coffin — he has been offered for pawn loans.

Rings are the most common pawn items at C.I.C. Finance Co., which usually accepts only jewelry for pawn loans.

Stress affects eating

Hearst Feature Service

Stress leads to high blood pressure and heart disease, causes ulcers and headaches, affects our ability to think, and, some experts say, promotes cancer. But there's more: It also eats into our nutrition.

For most people, this isn't news. We all know people who can't eat when they're upset or under pressure — or who can't seem to stop putting food in their mouths under the same circumstances.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF RETIRED PERSONS

The American Association of Retired Persons met recently with 73 members and 9 visitors present. President Chester Powers called the meeting to order. The invocation was given by W. L. Rasure followed by the flag salute. Bea Covert read a poem, "A First Visit to Texas."

Glenda Pruitt, Don Richard and Lynn Alexander entertained the group with songs accompanied by the guitar. A short business session followed with reports from several committees, including the legislative chairman, Bea Tyner and the service committee chairman Muriel Nelson. John Aitchison gave a report on the meeting in Odessa.

Aitchison was in charge of honoring the fathers for Father's Day. W. L. Rasure was the oldest father present at 91 years of age. A C. "Shorty" Reeves was the father present with the most children. Nine are living. Each father was given a gift. Guests

DEAR ABBY Spoiled brother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 27-year-old self-supporting woman. My problem is my 20-year-old kid brother. I'll call him "Chuck." He's handsome, charming and spoiled rotten. Chuck was always the favorite, and he sure knew how to get what he wanted. For his 16th birthday the folks gave him an expensive new car, which he totaled three weeks later, so they got him another one!

Chuck's grades were only fair, but Dad pulled some strings and got him into a junior college. He flunked out in one semester and came home. He couldn't find a job because he didn't look very hard, so Dad pulled some more strings and got him one. Two weeks later, Chuck was sacked.

A psychiatrist friend of Dad's told him to throw Chuck out of the house and let him sink or swim, so that's what Dad did. Chuck's been hanging out with some crummy characters and living from hand to mouth. I'm sure he's into drugs, too, and I'm afraid he's dealing. He came to my apartment spaced out and asked if he could stay with me.

My parents say if I take Chuck in, he'll get the idea that someone will always be there to rescue him and he'll never stand on his own feet. Also, if I help him, they'll never speak to me again. What should I do? - SIS

DEAR SIS: Your parents, though well-intentioned, contributed to making Chuck the loser that he is. I can't imagine a psychiatrist advising parents to use the sink-or-swim technique on a child who was never taught to swim.

Tell Chuck he can stay with you on the condition that he finds a job, puts himself into the hands of a therapist and makes an effort to straighten up, clean up his act and get his head together.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were recently invited to the home of friends for a dinner party. Their teen-age son played his stereo at full volume most of the evening, making it impossible to carry on a conversation.

Later, when I suggested (politely) to my hostess that she ask her son to kindly turn the stereo down a little so we could visit, she told me that in his home he was top priority and could do as he chose. She added that if we didn't like it we didn't have to come again.

What do you think of such behavior toward one's guests? - OFFENDED IN CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR OFFENDED: I think the son must have inherited his manners from his mother.

DEAR ABBY: One day I stopped at a gas station to have my tank filled, and on the way home I noticed my purse was not on the seat beside me, where I always keep it, so I rushed back to the gas station. The cashier had my purse and demanded a $25 reward! I'm sure he removed it from the car.

He emphasized that if I had lost all my credit cards, cash, etc., it would cost me a lot more than $25, so I figured a $25 reward was really not too much. I wasn't able to give him the $25 at the time, so I promised to give it to him the next time I came by.

The following day I talked to my co-workers about my story. They all told me to report him either to the headquarters of that filling station or the police. So far I've done nothing and have not visited the station since then.

What would you have done if you were in my place? - ANNOYED IN ORANGE COUNTY, CALIF.

DEAR ANNOYED: I would have notified the police.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Designer wants to make life story a musical

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mr. Blackwell, who gained world fame with his annual Worst Dressed list, says he's cutting back on designing to seek a life-long dream — "I will live to see my life done as a musical on Broadway."

The former child actor and perennial fashion advocate of feathers and sequins has begun to write his life story and says it's a hum-dinger.

"It has a tremendous story," he says. "It's about a boy who went from ghetto to palace; it's about the suicides of women who loved me, about the beds I've climbed out of, about the nights I've danced till 3 in the morning."

"It's about instant success and instant failure," he says with a final dramatic flourish.

Drama might be Richard Blackwell's middle name. It's what makes his annual Worst-Dressed announcement a headline grabber. There's always a surprise — this year it was Princess Diana as the worst of the worst — accompanied by caustic comments from Blackwell's waspish tongue.

It's show biz, baby. And this designer knows how to put on a show.

"It's 90 percent of what I do," Blackwell concedes. "Show business gives me a sense of taste, a sense of presentation, a sense of beauty."

It also gave him the publicity sense to know a great idea when he heard it — the Worst Dressed List.

Miami is businessman's dream, tourist's paradise

Copley News Service

MIAMI — A housewife sits on her rocking chair, her floppy hat covering her with shade.

On a street, a drunk lies on his shirtless back.

In Little Havana, merchants drum up trade with the beat of music from sidewalk loudspeakers.

The temperature is 80 degrees. The humidity is the same.

"WELCOME TO MIAMI," say the vacation posters. "Your home for sun and fun."

The promise is easy living, good food and sandy beaches fringed with palm trees waving in the balmy air under sunlit skies.

For some it's true.

On the sands of Miami Beach, swimmers lounge under color-clashing umbrellas fending off the sun. Offshore, the fortunate loll on the decks of cruise vessels about to slip away to the Caribbean.

At Miami Beach's Fountainbleu Hotel, money-logged vacationers dangle gold jewelry from idle wrists. Bellhops manage the luggage. Dollar tips are taken in stride.

THE LESS-AFFLUENT visitor delights in less-imposing activities. He can spend a few hours at the Indian village, where natives entertain; the parrot jungle, where trained birds perform; the Everglades, where alligators snap; the serpentarium, where deadly snakes wiggle, or the seaquarium, Flipper's hometown.

Those are visitor activities. For those who live and work in Miami, the days follow another routine.

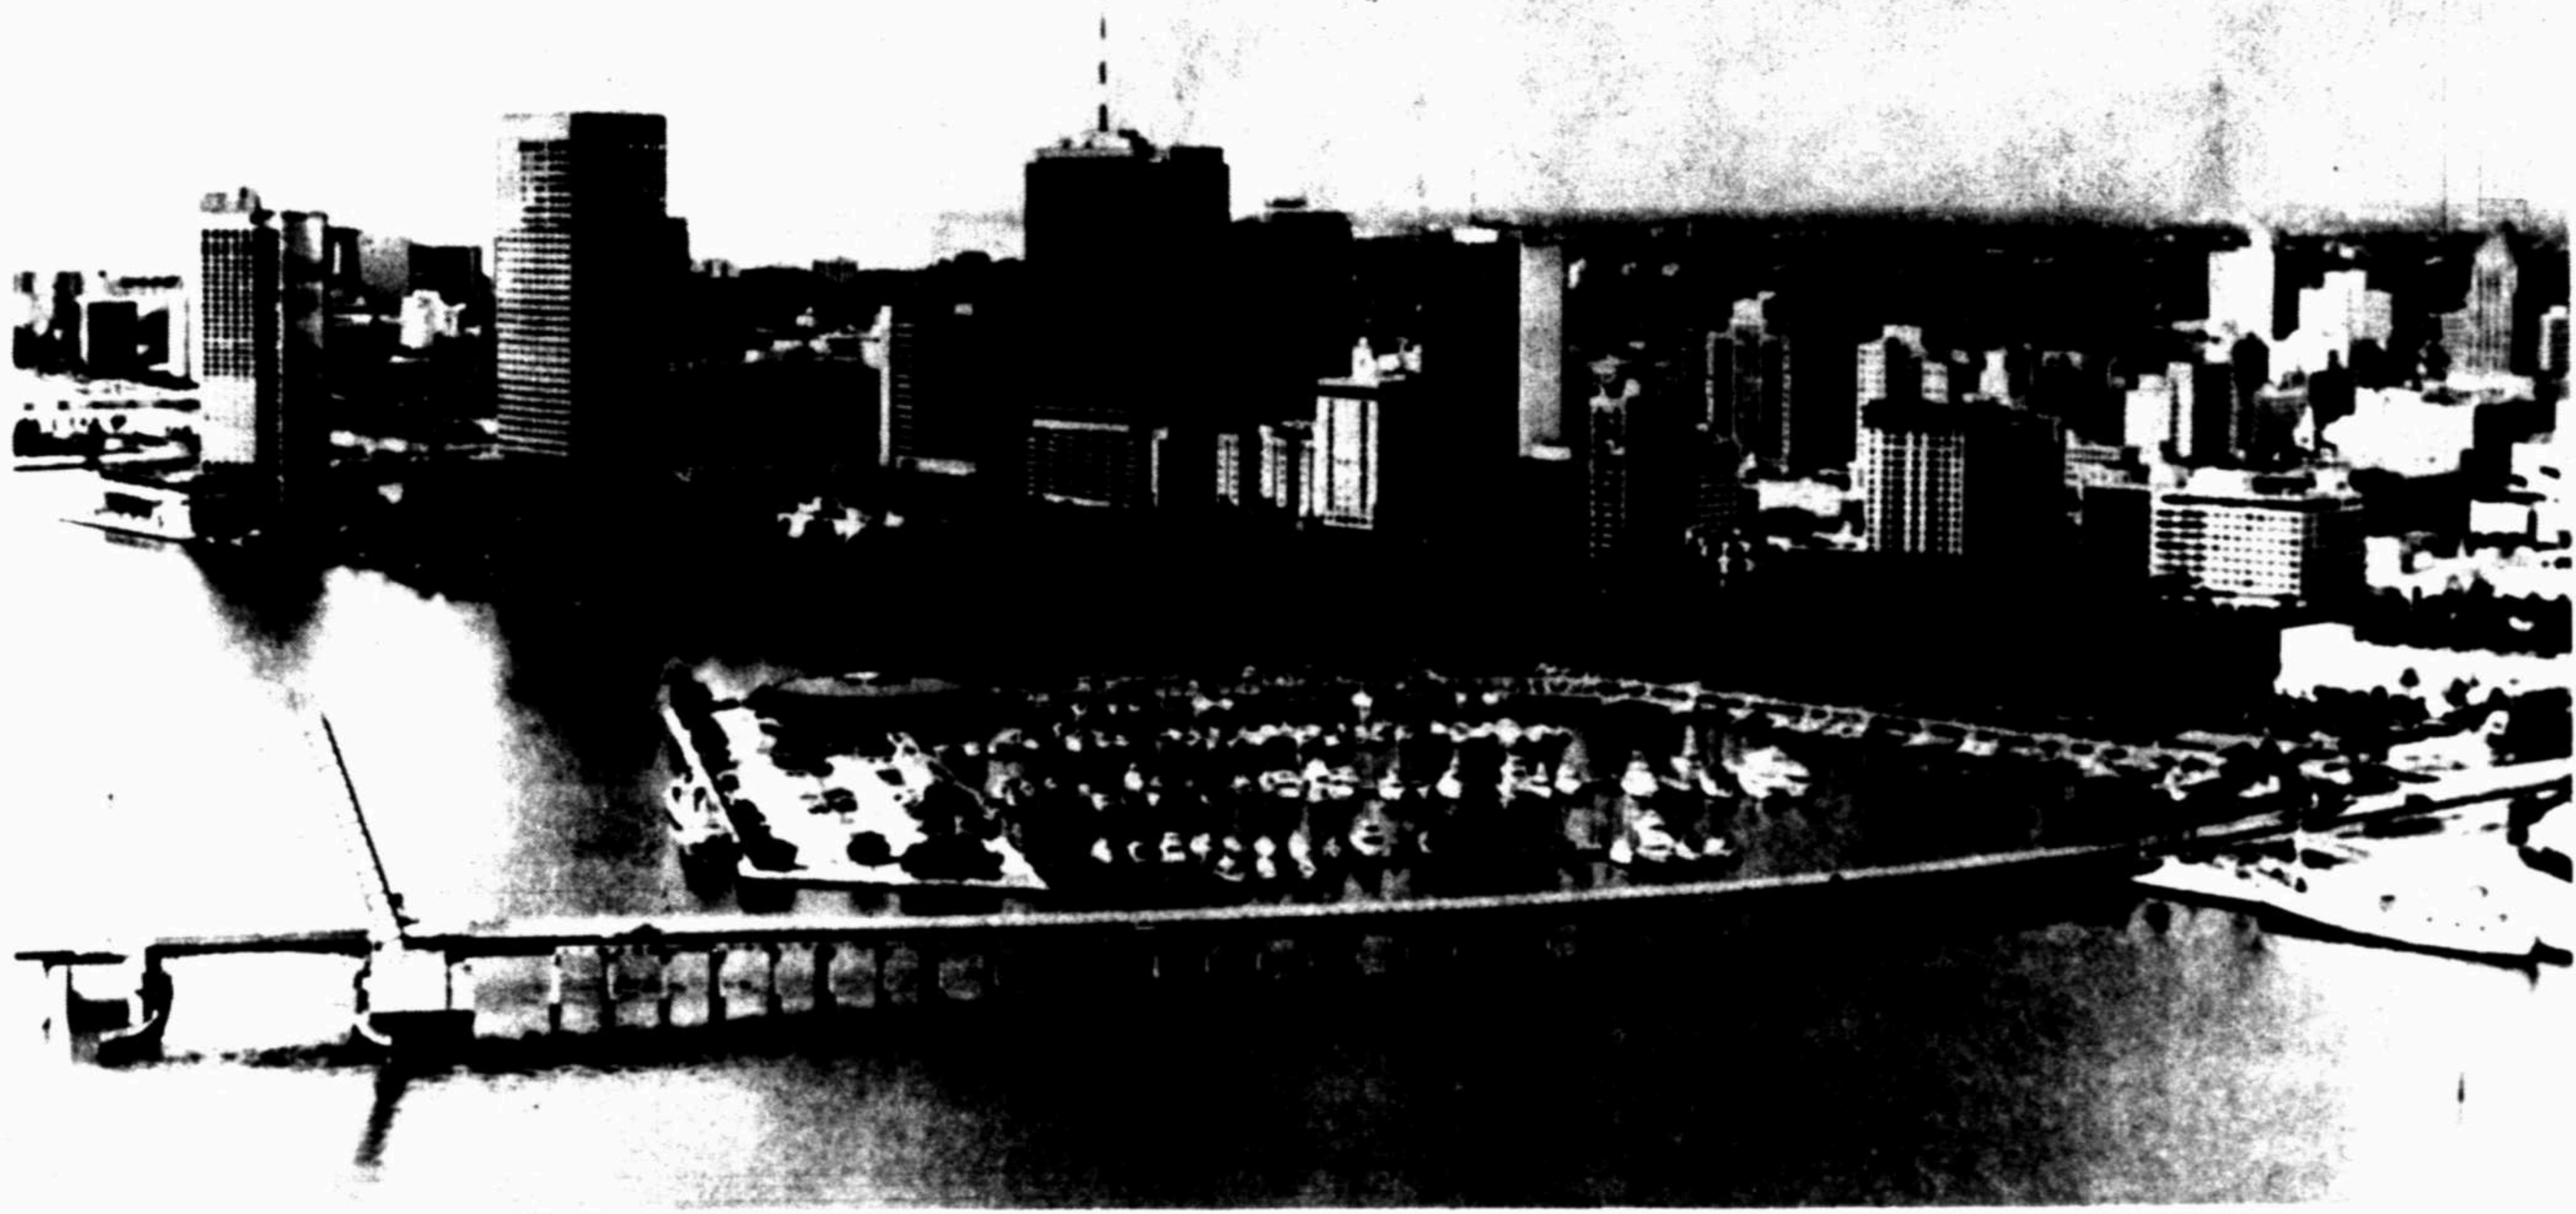

Police officers stand on downtown street corners carrying walkie-talkies in their vigil against crime. Cabbies fight traffic, newstand hawk peddle papers, street cleaners push dirt and beggars seek handouts.

On another social level, doctors cure diseases, engineers plan buildings, lawyers seek to acquit their clients and secretaries take dictation.

Like New Yorkers who never visit the Statue of Liberty, the parrot jungle is probably not foremost on their minds. It is for the tourist to shun all thought of labor. Office workers, professionals and laborers must toil daily for their livelihood.

SOME OF WHAT they do is clearly evident and reflects Miami's recent economic resurgence of economic activity despite the national recession.

Their accomplishments are newly built or under-construction hotels and office skyscrapers: steel and cement testimonials to this city's growing rank as a center of international banking and trade.

Miami's famous downtown skyline serves as a picturesque backdrop to Miami marina, located on Biscayne Bay. The Magic City is the nation's fastest growing area for international tourism, trade, finance and commerce.

Miami still depends on tourism, but it has more than ever going for it now. The new Hyatt Regency Hotel, on the north bank of the Miami River, beckons not only tourists, but the increasingly important businessmen from other U.S. states and from Latin American nations to the south which seek to expand trade links.

Miami is, therefore, not only a businessman's dream and a tourist's paradise, but the Gateway to the Caribbean.

Consequently, it is in a rapid stage of transition on both economic and social levels. Stepping out of the past and into the future, the city is an incongruous mix of today's skyscrapers and yesteryear's stubby brick buildings. The transformation is not yet complete.

MORE BILINGUAL THAN ever, Miami also gives the impression of being a Central American city. More than 750,000 Haitians, Cubans, Colombians and other Latins add to the city's business and cultural life, imparting a stronger-than-ever international flavor.

Because of its favorable geographical position as a center for trade, banking and tourism, Miami International Airport is one of the busiest in the nation. More than 20 million passengers and tons of cargo annually are accommodated by 80 scheduled airlines. Because of the growing traffic, a $1 billion airport expansion program is underway.

For the tourists who come, some to escape winter's storms, Miami's ready with a cornucopia of alternatives that makes choice difficult.

The Metro Zoo captivates by featuring cageless animals. The centerpiece is the Bengal tigers, who can be seen before a replica of an ancient Asian temple.

The Miami Wax Museum waxes eloquently by depicting a history of Florida. It features likenesses of gone-but-not-forgotten figures, among them Ponce de Leon.

TOURIST NOW TRY to find what De Leon couldn't — the fountain of youth. They can get it, too. Vicariously. The Fairchild tropical garden is a world of ageless majestic palms. Villa Vizcaya holds timeless works of art, and the sands of time sift slowly on the beaches. The effect can be rejuvenating.

Miami, of course, is the end of the line for many vacation-bound visitors. But it's also a jumping-off place for other delights — jaunts to Cape Kennedy, excursions along Key West and mini-cruises to the Bahamas and other Caribbean ports of call.

But not before seeing Miami first, its amenities, its hospitality.

Miami is typically Miami. Stately palm trees line famous Biscayne Boulevard. A waterfront park is dotted with statues of early New World explorers. On Miami Beach, beautiful girls add convincingly to the city's charm. A tourist's paradise, just as the posters say.

But for the Miamians, ordinary life goes on, just as in any other American city.

THE HOUSEWIFE IN the floppy hat rises from her rocking chair and shuffles into her house as the sun goes down.

The drunk on the street begins to stir. Office workers wrap up their chores.

The cops change shift and Little Havana merchants turn up their raucous music to boost last-minute sales.

U.S. discovers bed and breakfast

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Bed and breakfast began as a pleasant European custom and for years it remained just that. Travelers, weary of hotels and crowds, sought out the little pension, the quiet wayside cottage, the friendly rooming house, and there they partook of hospitality and warmth, a cozy room and simple fare.

But it has never been America's way to take an idea and simply copy it. Entrepreneurs in this land of the great frontier, having belatedly discovered the attractions of B&B, leaped aboard the bandwagon with a gusto that would stun the innkeepers of yore.

Some of them write books — among them are "Bed and Breakfast American Style," "Bed 'n' Breakfast Ski America," "The Southern Guest House Book."

Others organize networks of B&B lodgings, which they oversee, or convince existing B&Bs to get in on their reservation service to keep their rooms full, for a fee, of course.

PT International has a network of cooperating B&Bs. Clyde Perkins, the firm's originator and chief officer, first sold his service to travel agents whose clients wanted B&B accommodations. When a travel agent's customer wants a B&B or a small out-of-the-way inn, likely as not PT International will get the call.

Perkins says he can book travelers into more than 25,000 rooms in 11 countries. The service costs the innkeeper 20 percent (or the travel agent 10 percent) and the traveler not a penny more than the going cost of the room, he says.

Most of the B&Bs and inns that PT International uses also book their own rooms directly. "But if it's a matter of having an empty room or paying us 20 percent, well, naturally they are happy to accept our clients," Perkins says. In recent months the firm has expanded its service to deal directly with the public as well as through travel agents. The toll-free number is (800) 547-1463.

It should be noted that there is a difference between small inns or B&B hotels and the type of bed-and-breakfast lodgings that many travelers seek — the comfortable room in a private "host home."

That is the bailiwick of dozens of organizations, one of the oldest of which is Bed & Breakfast International, 151 Ardmore Road, Kensington, Calif. 94707. In business for six years, its founder Jean Brown says this is the organization that "brought bed and breakfast to the United States."

"We are a reservation service for private homes," she said. "We visit all our host homes, they are available only through us, we match the traveler and the host home, arrival times, whether someone has an allergy that needs to be considered, whether they want to stay in an old Victorian, a secluded cottage, and all sorts of considerations. And we work full time at it."

In the New York City area, Brown gives high marks to Urban Ventures, 322 Central Park West, New York 10025. It offers more than 200 rooms in the Big Apple, in apartments, town houses, studio lofts, and some nice old brownstones in Brooklyn. Hosts include teachers, theater people, retired couples, singles, artists. Rates range from $28 to $60.

One of the attempts that has been made to organize information about B&B offerings is the brainchild of Ellie Chastain who runs Sweet Dreams & Toast, which represents 90 homes in Washington, D.C., and Annapolis, Md. For $2 she'll send you a list of more than 200 names, addresses and phone numbers, everything from private homes to major listing agencies, organizations and publications.

The address is Sweet Dreams & Toast, P.O. Box 4835-0035, Washington, D.C. 20008.

Gulf beaches with something for everyone

Corpus Christi, Texas is miles and miles of gulf beaches, all open to the public, free of charge. Yet sometimes it seems everybody wants to set up a temporary shelter on the same square yard. This sparkling city by the sea gets a lot of its sparkle from all that surf coming in from the gulf. The City limits include almost all of Mustang Island and much of Padre Island.

One explanation for the crowding frequent at certain spots is that local high school and slightly older young people go to the beach to meet their friends rather than swim or fish.

Tourists note the crowd and probably think it must be the best place and join them. It actually becomes unsafe in case of emergencies with all the crowding of cars and people.

A young adult recreation area is under construction that will spread out the young people. Major parts of it will be ready soon and the rest by Labor Day.

It's the pet project of County Commissioner J. P. Luby, whose Precinct 4 includes much of the beach.

The site selected is only 3/10 mile north of the condominiums where the young crowds gather at the seawall. Sixty acres have been leased from the state and another 200 acres adjoin it. It's a washover area so there no dunes to damage and no other type of construction is ever likely.

A pavilion 60 feet in diameter will be usable soon and there will later be 20 cabanas surrounding it.

Texas events

The following are a few of the recreational opportunities selected by the Texas Tourist Development Agency which are offered by communities across the state.

No day 'normal' at supermarket

"There is no such thing as a routine day," at Albertson's first Midland supermarket, manager Bob Bell said last week. He could have freezer cases thawing out accidentally, or his store may be hit by a sudden loss of electric power. He could even be asked for an interview by a local newspaper.

Much of the manager's time, though, is devoted to seemingly small matters of customer needs and customer convenience. These aren't small matters at all. Bell said "These stores were not made for the managers and employees.

"The stores were built with the customer in mind — we're just fortunate enough to come along and get a job with this company," he said.

Since its first store opened in 1939, Albertson's "has always emphasized consumerism ... and considers itself a buying agent for the customer rather than a selling agent for the manufacturer," according to its corporate profile.

ALBERTSON'S HAS 22 stores in Texas and a total of 416 stores in the West and Florida. The company made $58.4 million dollars net earnings last year, including a 13 percent increase in sales that was outstripped by a 20 percent earnings rise.

Bell wears the distinctive gold jacket of an Albertson's "store director." He is easily identified, and, it's emphasized, he is available to help customers at all times.

Still, much of Bell's time has to be spent training employees and communicating with them — sometimes about personal problems. As manager, he has 245 to 275 employees. Many of these are under their own sub-managers.

"Any one man can't run a store like this by himself," Bell said, praising his management team and employees. "We employ people from all walks of life. A degreed geologist works as our night manager since he wanted job stability — he likes the job a lot."

In addition to these managers, the store has a retinue of assistant managers, perimeter department managers, front-end (checkout) managers, snack bar managers, and produce managers.

IT IS TRUE IN any business, he said, the time factor varies for success. He has seen 16-year-old sackers become managers by age 20. These were self-motivated persons with a strong desire to be in the retail business, and an even stronger desire to make it big.

Managers make money. Albertson's compensation is "better than anyone else in the field." Bell said of the grocery chain, "It's a very excellent opportunity to get into management — for someone who is really into retailing."

The company profile says Albertson's "strives to give its 32,000 employees every opportunity to be self-motivating. More than any other single aspect of Albertson's, it is this characteristic that management feels is behind the company's extraordinary success and unique promise for the future."

Any retailer has to "be dedicated to serving the customer — and be dedicated to be the very best at doing that," said Bell.

A day in the life of a supermarket manager

"Some shop for price, some for quality. The retailer needs to offer both because both have advantages," Bell said, in his store filled with red, white and blue streamers and plywood displays stretching to the ceiling, holding summertime items.

ALBERTSON'S AVOIDS using any obstructive displays in aisles — which might cause customers trouble getting through. They use tall, end-of-aisle displays for "holding power" to intensify their stock of certain popular items. There otherwise might not be enough room on shelves for such things as sun tea-making bottles.

In Albertson's, all types of green beans or other food stuffs will be placed in one area for easy selection, including generics and house brands.

Generic, white-labeled items with black letters — a hot growth area for supermarkets, according to their trade publications — are placed among the products they compete against.

"I'm not saying low-priced merchandise (generics) will be inferior. But name brands are time-proven," Bell said.

In general, he said, the customer "...is near and dear to us. We must treat the customer as we would like to be treated ourselves." He knows many of the store's customers personally.

BELL BROKE OFF THE conversation for a moment to help a woman who couldn't find a package of a favored dog food in the size she had bought before. Blue-and-white and green-and-yellow packages of two other brands seemed to have swallowed up the space. There was a tag on the shelf for the smaller-sized bag of the brand, but it just wasn't there.

Bell sent help to the warehouse to find the requested product right away, as the woman continued her shopping.

"You've got to like serving the customer," Bell said. "A person that gripes about having to serve customers after work — if they really don't have the desire, ability, and motivation — they are not going to make it in retail management."

The 24-hour store is stocked and cleaned at night. Bell's day begins early in the morning.

"Sometimes we walk out of the store in the evening, and it's a little messy," he said. "There may be some holes (empty shelf space). By the time we get back the store is stocked and in excellent shape for the morning."

THE STORE IS "very big on basics," in Bell's view. Additionally, the store has specialized areas like a bakery, delicatessen, snack bar, and butcher shop.

Sales of certain items are seasonal. Right now sidewalk sales at the store are emphasizing lawn and garden items like lawn chairs, fertilizer, and garden hoses.

The manager has to sense trends in his community's buying habits. He watches the floor, looks at stock levels and inventory figures, and makes special displays — through various department managers — to increase on-shelf stock of certain hot summer items.

As he strolled Albertson's aisles, Bell took the time to check with David Jones, of Mass Merchandisers Inc., a company supplying 50 percent of the store's non-food stock.

Jones was in the store for a second time in less than a week to restock a Corning Ware display — the fast-selling pieces were all at half-price. Bell commented, "The items are selling well, and this is a really eye-catching display."

JONES SAID IT WAS aimed at people buying gifts for the summer bride.

The priority in his top-level management, Bell said, is quick service for customers. "In the departments, there should be someone available for the customer to ask questions. And hopefully, there will be no waiting at the checkout counters (although there sometimes is)."

Bell said all his checkout staff members are trained to ask the customer key questions at the counter like: "How are you? Did you find everything?" In the departments of the store, it's "Can we help you?"

Albertson's Inc. was named number one grocery store chain for its return on equity by Forbes magazine this year — with an average 24.3 percent return for each of the past five years. Its president recently said he wants the stores' sales to double — and reach the $8 billion mark — in the next five years.

Its growth to two stores in Midland (one is under construction) affirms the company's strategy as one that fits the Midland market.

Midlander Malcolm Abel named Mr. TIPRO

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

Malcolm D. Abel

Malcolm D. Abel may be no Don Quixote, but for more than 20 years the Midland independent oil producer has heroically tilted at the windmills of government intervention in the energy business.

More times than he can count, Abel has trekked to Washington, D.C., or Austin, sat down before the microphones and given legislators the oil and gas industry's view.

Usually Abel backs up his opinions with statistics provided by the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association (TIPRO), with which he has long been involved.

"The battle will be won, but we don't know how the war is going to come out," Abel said recently while leafing through a stack of updates on state and federal legislation that may affect the industry.

rent struggle with the natural gas decontrol issue.

"I hate to keep harping on it," he said, "but the most frustrating thing (about being an oil producer) is government regulations. The so-called natural gas decontrol bill is decontrolling some of it, and re-controlling others. It seems to be more complicated even than the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978," which Congress now says it wants to change.

One industry friend said of Abel: "Knowing him, you are impressed with what one man can do."

What he has done is operate a successful oil and gas business for 23 years in Midland. He also serves as general manager and vice president of UNC Texas Inc., the exploration and production arm of UNC Resources; and as a director of Sentry Manufacturing Company in Chickasha, Okla.

In addition, the able Abel has always been active in industry advisory groups. He was TIPRO president from 1964-66; a member of the industry advisory committee for the Texas Railroad Commission, Federal Power Commission (forerunner of Federal Energy Regulatory Commission), and National Petroleum Council; and served on several advisory councils at the University of Texas at Austin College of Engineering.

In fact, Abel said he has only taken two vacations in the last 20 years, other than a few well-placed three-day weekends for hunting and football season.

In 1964 he was interrupted by business during the first vacation he'd taken in 10 years.

Abel was in Hawaii on a holiday because he had just sold all his energy producing properties to Standard Oil Company of Ohio. "The people's price looked right," he said with a laugh.

While there, he received a telephone call from TIPRO's R.L. Foree at 4 o'clock in the morning, asking him for permission to nominate him for TIPRO president.

Abel said yes, not really thinking he would win the nomination. He did.

During the 1960s, he was very active in TIPRO affairs. While TIPRO president, he helped draft the Pooling Act of 1965, which passed the Texas House and Senate "without their changing a punctuation mark," he said.

There has been so much legislation through the years affecting the industry, Abel said, that oil men must serve on advisory boards to advise "the novices in the bureaucracy" who administer the laws.

But whether it is 1965 or 1983, bickering within the industry is the same, Abel said. "This industry is made up of a lot of independents — all chiefs and few Indians," he said. "To get a consensus is very difficult."

Almost 20 years to the day before his colleagues named him Mr. TIPRO, Abel appeared in Washington before the Federal Power Commission at its Permian Basin Area rate hearings.

The June 19, 1963, edition of the Reporter-Telegram described his testimony. "Malcolm D. Abel... appeared to request a price of between 17 and 21.8 cents per thousand cubic feet of natural gas sold in the West Texas-Southeast New Mexico region.

"Abel urged the commission to look forward to the nation's future needs for natural gas, and not backward to historical prices paid, in determining a just and reasonable rate for the Permian Basin."

Abel has been in the oil business since he was a 15-year-old roughneck on one of his father's rigs.

In 1947 he graduated from UT-Austin; in 1975, the school gave him the Distinguished Graduate Award from the College of Engineering.

Although his father was a tool pusher and drilling superintendent, Abel wanted to take a different route to oil patch success. "I looked at the guy out there with the company car and the supervisory position and decided that was for me," Abel recalled.

West Texas Chamber will tour West Coast

West Coast industrialist will get a chance to learn about the benefits of locating business and industry in West Texas during the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Tour Sept. 19-22.

Targeting Los Angeles, Santa Clara (Silicon Valley) and San Francisco, the tour combines the efforts of large and small communities in selling West Texas as an industrial location site. Tour participants from West Texas will visit with representatives of area industries who have a potential for expanding or relocating their facilities.

Last year, tour participants hosted 189 representatives of manufacturing and distribution companies in New York, said Gary L. Bowling of Fort Worth, WTCC Tour Chairman.

"This was a record turnout of industrial representatives," he said. "We are looking forward to hosting a large number in California this year and invite anyone interested in participating to contact the WTCC for details."

Twenty-one West Texas cities were represented on the 1982 tour by 67 participants, also a record for the tour. Tour officials are extremely encouraged by the interest firms are taking in West Texas.

The tour provides a tangible pool of prospects that each participant or city represented can maintain contact with.

The cost of the tour is $995 per person, which includes air fare between D/FW, Los Angeles, San Francisco and return D/FW, three receptions and luncheons, three nights lodging (double occupancy), ground transportation and related costs. Deadline for reservations is August 19 and will be accepted on a first-come basis.

For additional information, contact WTCC Development Director Phil Neighbors at the West Texas Chamber office, P. O. Box 1561, Abilene, TX, 79604; 915/677-4325.

Explaining confusing, abusing tax shelters

By Hearst
Feature Service

Within the complex world of investment, nothing seems as confusing, sometimes amusing, and more often than not abusing than the old-fashioned tax shelter.

It's good that many investors remain confused, for then they won't touch shelters. Shelters can lead to disaster.

The endeavor could go belly up, taking investors' funds, or the Internal Revenue Service could crack down, demanding return of the sheltered money, plus interest. Those are the risks taken by the unwary.

But if you're sick to the point of nausea over Uncle Sam's voracious bite from your paycheck, you may want to consider ways to beat the system.

If so, there are two rules of thumb to keep in mind:

— Do not seek a shelter unless you're in a 40 percent to 50 percent tax bracket and are quite sure you can maintain a high level of income.

— Ignore shelters that hold no promise of return some day in the future, as you would in any other investment.

Thus, the IRS may snarl at an investment in an iron mine that's waiting around for higher prices so it can be sold at a profit, or idle farm land, or oil and gas properties where there is no intention to drill. Another tip: Be wary of promoters emerging from the woods at year's end, offering a 3-to-1 write-off on a Jo Joba bean ranch in Cuba or a penguin-raising franchise in Kenya.

Shelters are a result of the entangled tax laws that curse the land, stumping even lawyers and accountants. To write a law is one thing; to interpret it is often quite another. Unless something like a flat tax is voted — an unlikely occurrence — shelters will continue to abound. If you make enough money to employ a shelter, chances are you also have enough to employ professional advice. Yet, if you want to look into it yourself, there are two new books on the market —

"Tax Shelter — The Basics," by Arthur Andersen & Co., and "Shelter What You Make, Minimize the Take" (Reston/Prentice-Hall). These are entry-level books for the neophyte in shelters.

A Checking Account You Can Smile About.

Free Checking

Sure, everyone likes something free, and free checking is no exception. But there's a catch, right? Wrong. When we say free checking we mean there's No Monthly Service Charge. That's right, it wouldn't really be free if there was. And at First Federal, there isn't. Aha! Then there must be a minimum balance. Wrong again. At First Federal free checking means no monthly service charge and

No Minimum Balance

No Strings attached... there simply isn't a minimum balance of any kind. So what could be better than that? How about Free Checks. Right again, with First Federal's free checking you also receive a supply of imprinted checks at no cost.

Still smiling? Then you must already have a First Federal checking account!

Bell Services sells stock

Bell Petroleum Services Inc. said Thursday it sold 360,000 shares of common stock in a private placement to a major institutional holder of its shares.

It also announced an agreement in principle to acquire Logwell Inc. of Ada, Oklahoma.

Logwell is an independent open hole and cased hole logging company based in Ada and Henryetta, Oklahoma, with sales of approximately $2,000,000 annually.

This sales total is equal to approximately 14 percent of Bell Petroleum's fiscal 1983 revenues of $14.2 million.

In the securities sale, Life Insurance Company of Virginia increases its interest in Bell to 19.7 percent.

The purchase was made for investment purposes only; Life Insurance of Virginia said it desires no board representation or control of Bell.

Closing bid for Bell's common stock Thursday on the over-the-counter market was 37/8, making the transaction worth more than $1 million.

Proceeds of the sale will be used to increase working capital, reduce long-term debt and finance acquisitions, said Bell President E.E. Runyan.

Closing of the agreement between Bell and Logwell is subject to all necessary approvals and the drafting of final closing documents.

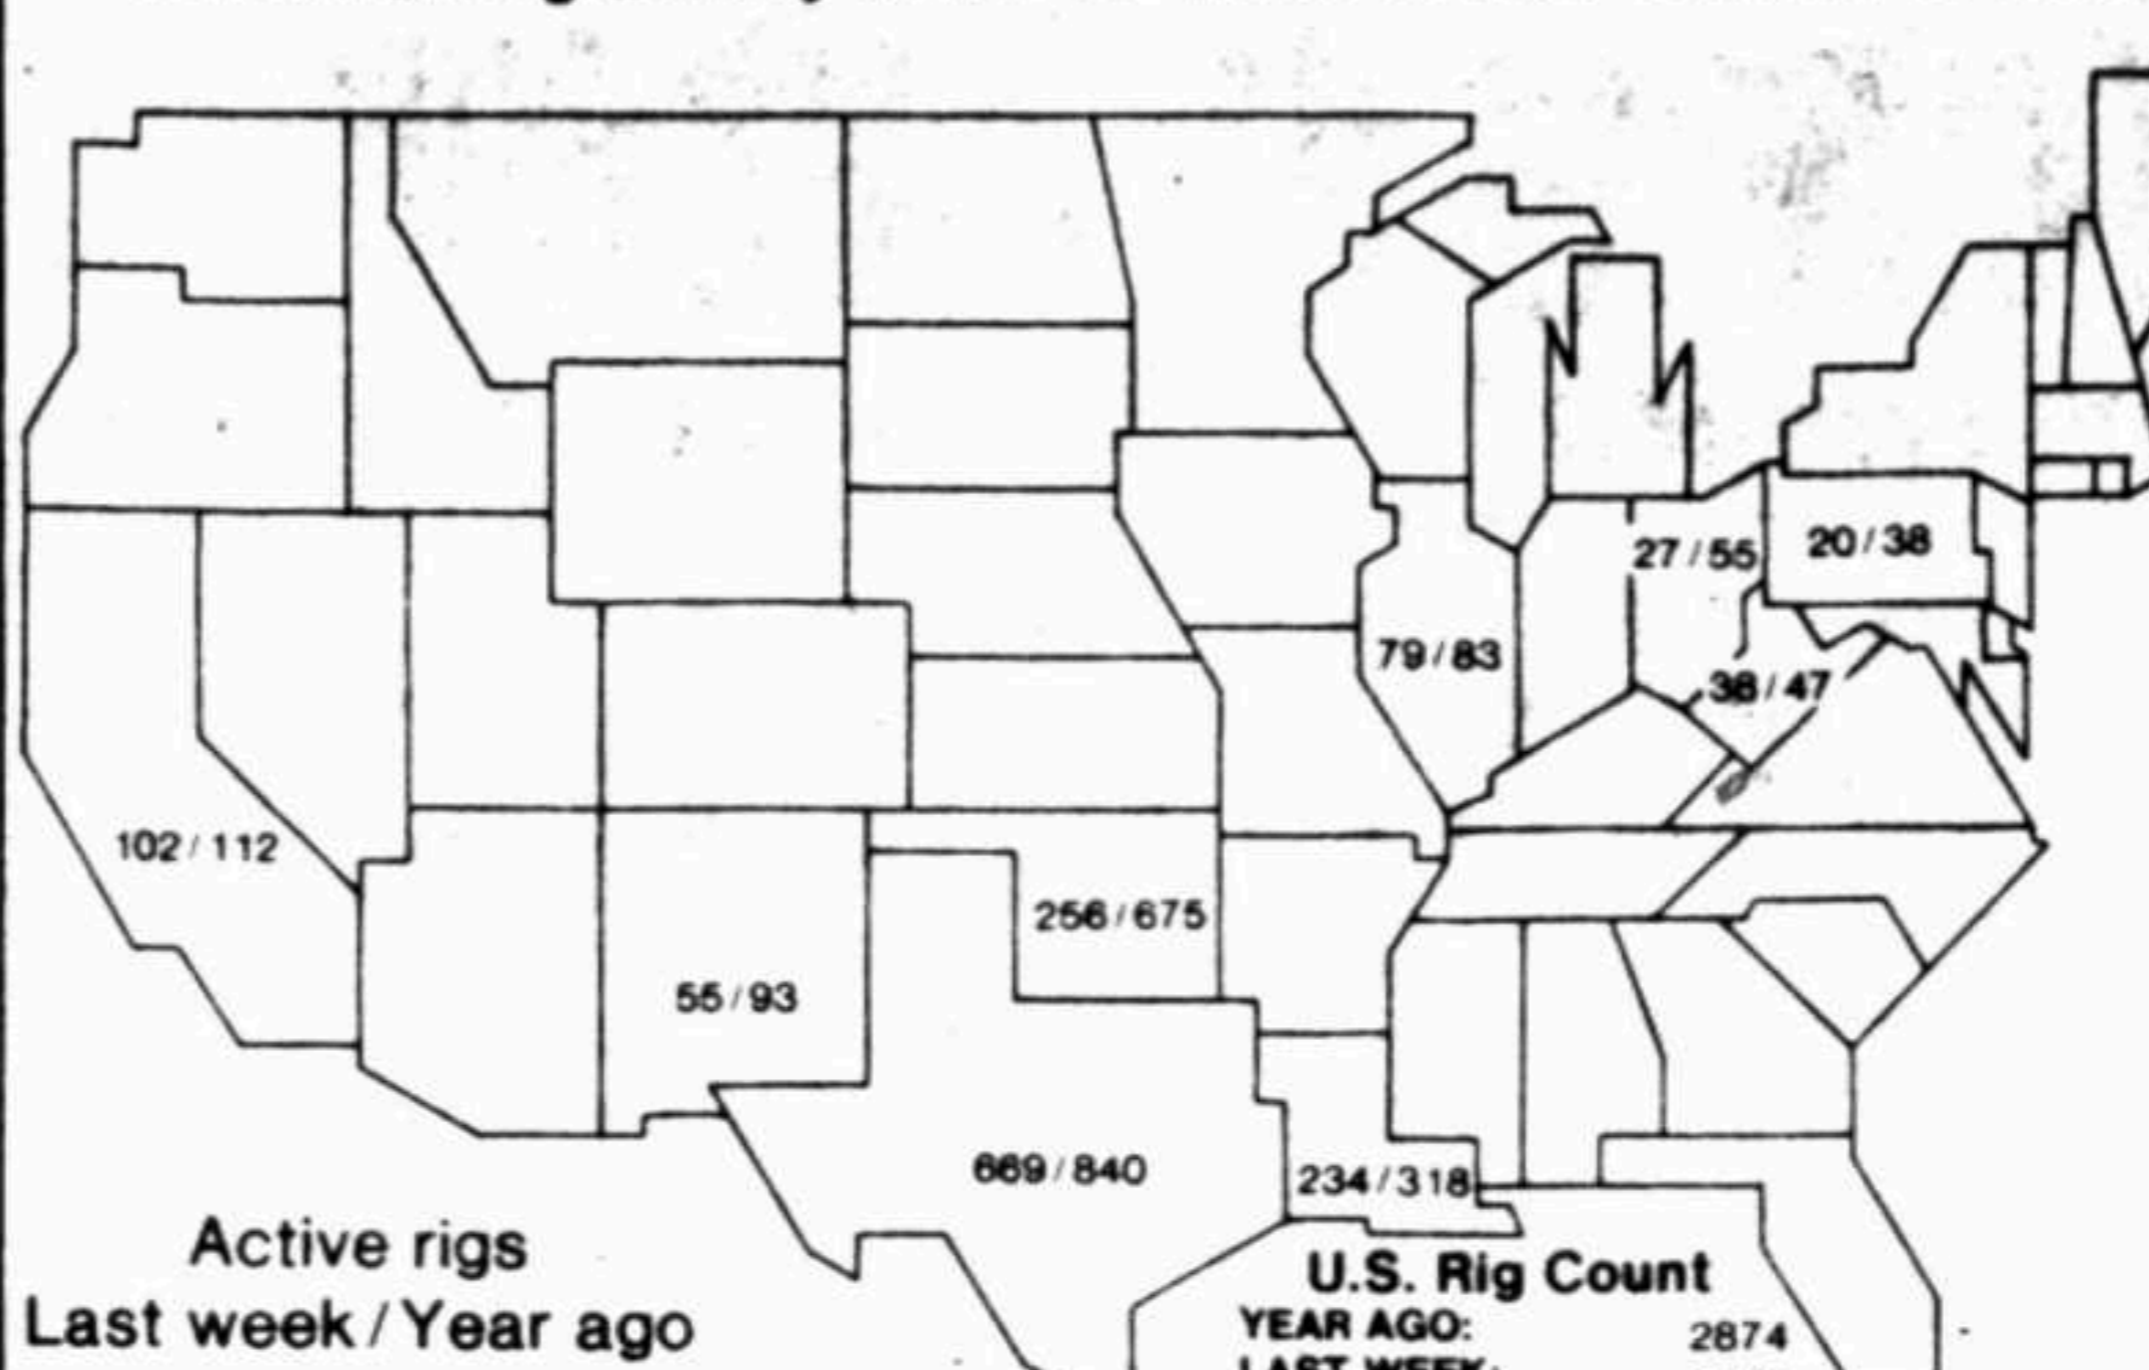

Actual closing is anticipated by August 1, 1983. Once the acquisition is completed, Logwell will become a part of Bell Petroleum's Bell Surveys Division which specializes in well completion services, including open and cased hole logging.

Runyan described the acquisition as part of Bell's ongoing plan for geographic expansion of its existing product and service line. He noted that the Logwell acquisition represents a major step in Bell's entry into the Oklahoma logging market.

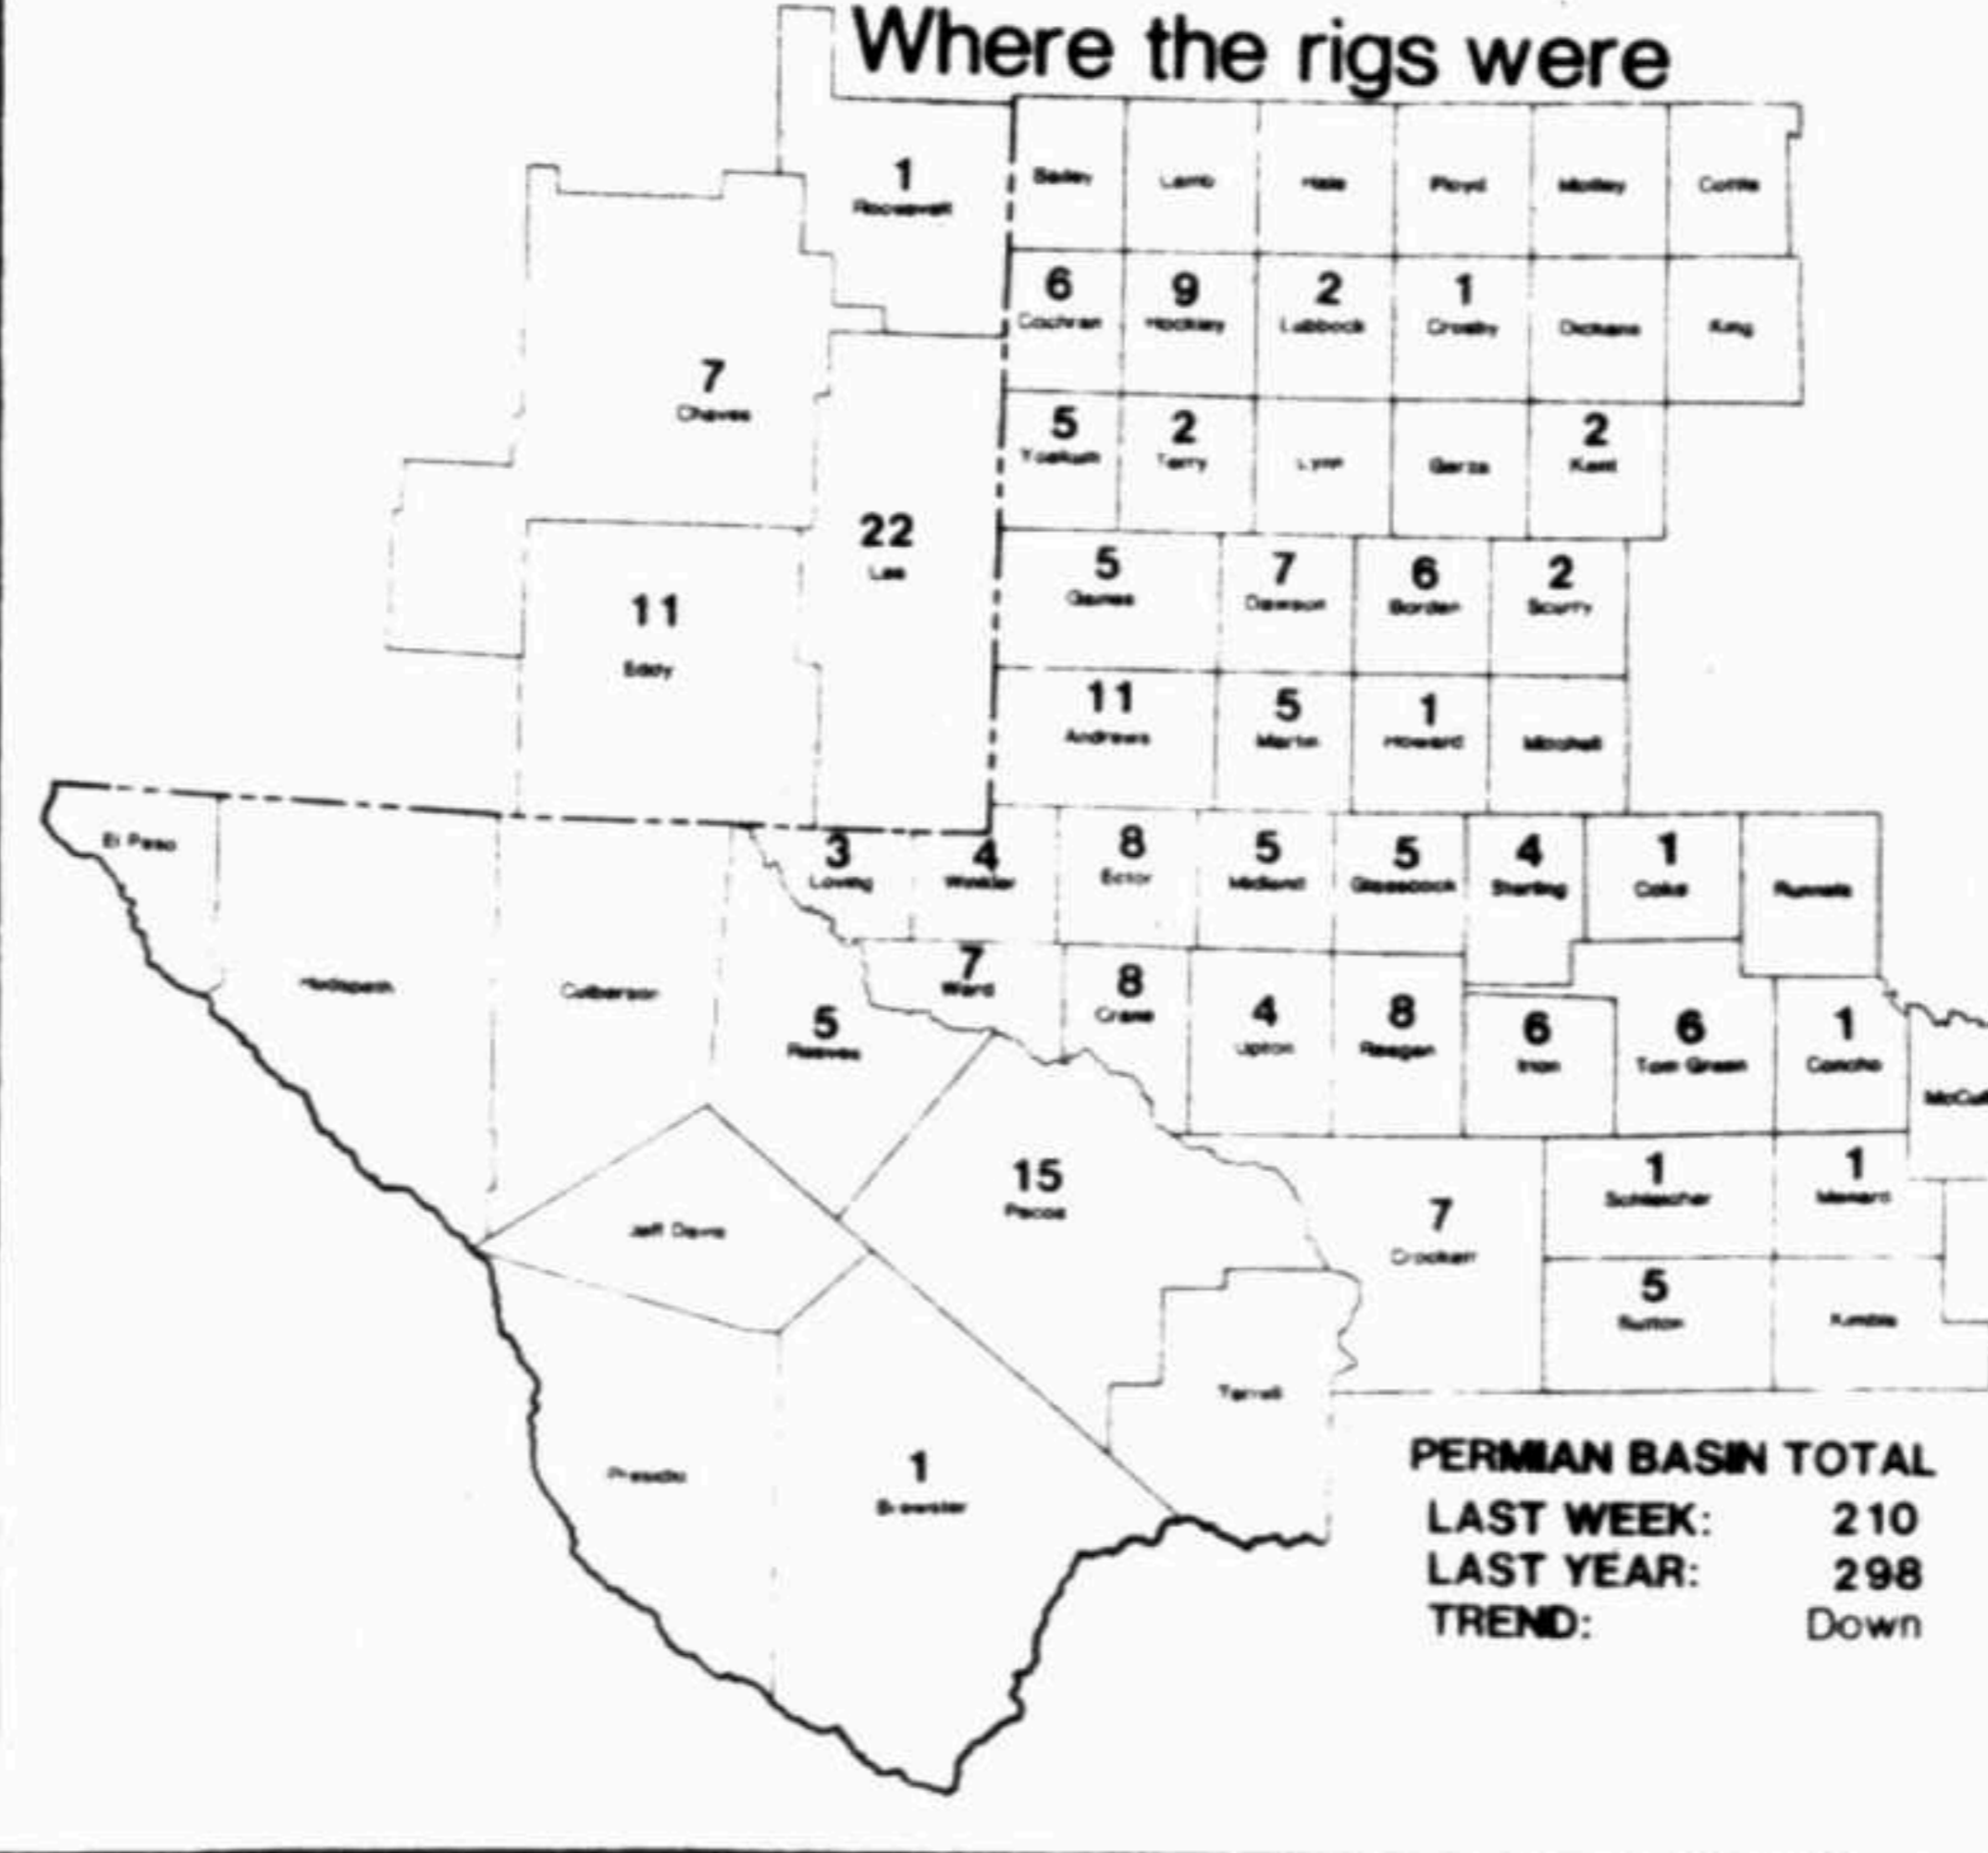

Bell Surveys recently expanded in West Texas by opening a San Angelo Station.

TXO will acquire one-third of Terra Resources

DALLAS — Texas Oil & Gas Corp. announced today that it has signed a definitive agreement to acquire an undivided 30 percent interest in the producing properties and undeveloped acreage of Terra Resources, Inc. for approximately $100 million. TXO's agreement was signed with Pacific Lighting Corporation and is subject to consummation of a definitive agreement to purchase 100 percent of Terra's common stock which Pacific Lighting has signed with Terra's parent, Farmland Industries, Inc.

Terra has properties in 18 states with its major oil and gas producing properties located in Alabama, Louisiana, Texas and Wyoming. Terra owns some 600 net producing oil and gas wells and 1.4 million net undeveloped leasehold acres. Current production averages about 8,600 barrels per day of crude oil and condensate and 30 million cubic feet (MMcf) per day of gas with capacity to produce gas at a rate of 70 MMcf per day.

Texas Oil & Gas Chairman William L. Hutchison and Forrester E. Hoglund, President and Chief Executive Officer, said, "This acquisition not only offers TXO the opportunity to acquire long-life reserves and undeveloped acreage at an attractive rate of return, but we believe there are excellent opportunities for further development on the properties acquired."

Store's sales up

Carl and Marion Covalt — owners of the Wicks 'N' Sticks shop in Midland Park Mall — were recently given a merit award for sales increases at their store in 1982. The Covalts were recognized for their shop being included in the top 20 shops for sales-percent-age increases in 1982.

The award was presented recently at the annual company convention in Coronado, Calif.

Approximately 580 people representing 204 Wicks 'N' Sticks shops across the nation attended the convention and merchandise show.

TITLE INSURANCE OPTIONAL

When closing the sale of real estate, property insurance is mandatory. The lender insists on it because he wants his investment protected. When it comes to title insurance on the other hand, that is strictly optional because it protects "only the buyer". But if you are "only the buyer", you can use a little protection too.

Title insurance provides payment for legal defense against title attacks and settles any valid court-ordered claims. Examples of title defects include: forgeries, improperly probated wills, fraud, missing heirs, and even mistakes in record keeping.

A homeowner's title insurance policy when issued at the settlement, is usually available for a reasonable one-time premium. You may find that the peace of mind from title insurance warrant the additional expenditure to cover YOUR interests. It's payment will normally be treated as part of the expenditure made during the closing.

Permian Basin High employs Apple II

Use of a computer enables faculty members at Permian Basin High School to work on an individualized basis with students. Many of the teachers work extensively with the students on the Apple II computer which was obtained in 1982. "We feel that the computer is an incredibly flexible machine and a valuable teaching tool," said Glen Walton, administrator. "We can use it for a wide range of learning experiences to supplement our regular one-to-one classroom situation. "Any computer knowledge our students obtain will be an enrichment to their future, whether it in college classes, business professions or for personal enjoyment," added

Walton. Teachers at the school devise their programs and also use commercially prepared programs. Many were taught the use of the computer at an in-service training workshop. The programs are varied and many. In the foreign language department, for example, programs are available for working in French, Greek and Latin. Programs are also available in mathematics to predict biorhythms, calculate loan payments and interest, for practice drills, for flashcard practice, to make statistics calculations and to figure powers of integers. In language arts, the computer can be used to increase reading speed. Science students use the computer to learn conversion to the metric system, periodic tables for chemistry, significant figures and vocabulary terms. One teacher is currently preparing a program which will simulate an actual biology experiment of putting plants under different growth situations. Factors which have been programmed into this experiment include temperature, sunlight, nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, humidity and water. This will enable students to learn growth of plants without actually conducting the experiments. The computer is available to all students in the individualized curriculum available at Permian Basin High School. Midland's only private alternative education is a one-to-one learning concept, with students offered a choice of curricula: general or college preparatory. Both require 16 credits for graduation. Five academic disciplines are taught at the school, including language arts, social studies, mathematics, sciences and foreign language. Business classes are also available. The school is located on the second floor of Building E, 3100 North "A" St., across from the Mabee Memorial Swim Center. Phone 683-4448 for more information.

Senior Adriane Hillin, daughter of Bobby and Margaret Hillin and sophomore Sonnie Prewitt, daughter of Bill and Sandi Prewitt of Odessa, work with instructor John Banfill on the Apple II computer. Both girls are students at the Permian Basin High School.

Shop offers Pennyrich Bras

Jo Smith, owner of Midland's Pennyrich shop, stresses the importance of a well fitting bra. She explains that certain breast diseases could be prevented if women learned to adequately support and protect their breasts. The custom-fitted Pennyrich bra provides good circulation, ample support and a comfortable fit. In 1950, Penny Rich designed the first patented suspension basis bra. Today, 33 years later, the Pennyrich Bra and Lingerie Shop offers 300 different bra sizes in two suspension basis style bras. Sizes range from 26 jr. a to 46 ii. The Pennyrich custom-fitted bra allows comfort, support and a natural appearance. The breast is composed of adipose tissue (fat), glandular epithelium, blood vessels, ducts, lymph vessels, supporting fibers and the covering skin. This is all superimposed upon the musculature of the chest wall. The breast, though, is on top of these muscles and is probably as soft and pliable as any tissue in the entire human body. To protect this soft tissue, a woman needs to wear a proper orthopedic type bra that is custom fit to allow for proper support.

BUSINESS/INDUSTRY NOTES

TOTAL CONTENT PAID ADVERTISING A SERVICE OF THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM CALL 682-5311, EXT. 153

An introduction to the page

The Business/Industry Notes are published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin and beyond.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry Notes (B&I pages): a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month contract (26 weeks), businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisements, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 weeks, can only promote interest to help a perspective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numerous. Currently, the B&I pages are graced with businesses such as an Executive Charter Service, numerous restaurants, lingerie shops, auto shops, camera shops and a Behavioral Hypnotist.

Any and all businesses are encouraged to join the Business/Industry Notes, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, private and corporate are invited to consider the opportunity.

For further information, contact the Advertising Department of the Midland Reporter-Telegram at (915) 682-5311. The staff would be happy to quote prices and discuss potential story material. Call 682-5311 and let the Business/Industry Notes work for you.

I pledge allegiance to the flag...

The Airline Child Care Center, located on Interstate 80, is playing its part in the Independence Day celebration. Recently, the Airline Child Care Center installed two flags: an American flag and a Texan flag.

Through the addition of these flags, the children are learning the importance of patriotism. The children are fully responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of the flags. This daily responsibility is shared with enthusiasm.

Proper flag maintenance and etiquette was demonstrated by an older Boy Scout who met with the three and four year olds at the Airline Child Care Center.

The Airline Child Care Center, "a truly caring environment", is open to all children in the Midland/Odessa area. Enrollment is not restricted to children living in the Airline Mobile Park. Currently there are several openings in the classes for children ages three and four.

The Center, a state licensed agency, is planned to serve the community in a meaningful way by providing quality and nurturing care for children ages infants through 10 years. Enrollment is open to any child regardless of race, religion, sex or cultural background, provided the Director feels the Center can meet the individual needs of the child and his/her family.

Airline Child Care Center strives for a close liaison between the parents and teachers. Reports are sent home and parent conferences are encouraged as well as parent visits to the classroom. Parents tell the staff that they feel totally comfortable leaving their child, knowing that he will be loved, stimulated and well cared for during his hours away from home. This is the greatest compliment the Airline Child Care Center can receive as it proves that it is really "A Truly Caring Environment."

When a crying child exclaims, "I don't want to go home", rest assured your child will be happy and well cared for at "the truly caring environment" of the Airline Child Care Center.

Owners Carl and Bonnie Stewart encourage parents to leave their child at the Airline Child Care Center for a day to see if the child would be comfortable in this environment. This would be available at no charge to the parents.

The Airline Child Care Center has experienced tremendous success during its first year here in the Midland/Odessa area. Much of the success is due to the dedication and enthusiasm of the 16-member staff.

Airline Child Care Center students, aged four, demonstrate their patriotism by raising both the American and the Texan flags. This duty is performed with true American enthusiasm.

The program is designed to meet the needs of individual children in all areas of development: social, emotional, intellectual, physical and nutritional. Activities are planned that will enable the child to gain a positive self-concept, and a sense of independence. Children are placed in an individual age group, which will be most appropriate for their age and meet their individual developmental needs.

Any parent living in Midland and working in Odessa, or visa versa, is invited to check out the Child Care Center.

For further information call (915) 694-1686. The Airline Child Care Center is located in the Airline Mobile Park off Interstate 80. Look for the big yellow Mobile America sign.

Matlock Furniture offers super values

Matlock Furniture is a name many Midland residents have grown up with. Family owned and operated for 44 years, Matlock Furniture offers the finest in name brand furniture at prices at fit any budget.

Located out of the high rent district at 805 S. Big Spring, Matlock consistently offers lower prices than most while still stocking a wide selection of quality furniture and accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. T.M. Matlock began Matlock Furniture 44 years ago. This tradition has been carried on by daughter and Vice President Ann Matlock Hopkins. T.M. Matlock's grandson, John-Bob, works part-time at the store. The Matlocks are strong believers of "continuing the 44 year-old tradition of customer service" which has been practiced by the family.

Donny Rains is acting manager of Matlock Furniture. Wife Sharon, Tommy-John and Kristy are also active participants of the home-owned business. Donny's nephew, Mike Norris, and "adoptee" Ken Lovelady round out the friendly staff.

Matlock Furniture is currently offering a half price sale on all Sealy Posturepedic mattresses. Ann Hopkins describes Matlock's as "the oldest Sealy distributor in West Texas." Sealy Posturepedic mattresses are top of the line in bedding.

Twin, full, queen and king sized Sealy's are now in stock. They are available in various degrees of firmness: extra firm, super firm and luxury firm.

Aside from Sealy products, Matlock Furniture offers many other fine name-brand home furnishings. Choose from such names as Broyhill, Universal, Berkline and Bench Craft.

Matlock Furniture offers free delivery in the Midland area. Catalogues of available stock are supplied by the Matlocks in order to provide home furnishings not found on the floor.

Mastercard and Visa are both acceptable, as well as bank rate financing.

Stop by Matlock Furniture at 805 S. Big Spring Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and see why a family tradition of 44 years will continue to flourish in Midland.

Japan trade uneven

Nation ends car-import restraints

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige warned Friday that Japan's decision to end voluntary restraints on its automobile exports to the United States will add to congressional pressure for a law to require U.S.-made parts in imported vehicles.

Commenting at a breakfast meeting with reporters on an announcement Thursday by a Japanese official that the voluntary controls which have held shipments to 1.68 million cars annually will end next March 31, Baldrige speculated that it was brought up now to avoid becoming an issue during the U.S. presidential primaries.

"Perhaps it was an effort to get the issue addressed beforehand," the secretary said. "The fact is, we are a long way from the end of the third year (of the voluntary restraints) and I am not sure we should take this as a definitive statement."

Although conceding that proposed legislation to require a minimum of domestically manufactured parts in imported cars will get a boost from the Japanese move, Baldrige said he doubts the bill will pass. The proposed law is opposed by the Reagan administration.

Japan is the heaviest debt in the United States' portfolio of trade imbalances. We owed the tiny nation $16.8 billion in the most recent year.

Warning against yielding to protectionist sentiment, the secretary said, "This country has gained more from freer — not free — because there is no such thing — trade than any other country and would lose more if we lose it. Declining foreign trade would endanger the jobs of 20 percent of American industrial employees and perhaps 40 percent of farm workers.

"It's easy to wave your fist, but the fact is that as a nation we are better off the more free trade there is."

Baldrige recommended that instead of retaliating with protectionist measures, the United States should enforce existing fair trade laws. He called for strengthening of inspection and enforcement staffs, acknowledging that remedies are slow for dealing with the dumping of subsidized foreign goods.

Baldrige delivered a generally optimistic economic forecast, with the Commerce Department's estimate of growth in the gross national product for the last quarter of 1983 having been moved up from 3.5 percent to 5.5 percent. He said the recovery has now broadened into all sectors after the initial surge in housing and automotive statistics.

"But if we don't get the deficit down to the $100 billion range we are going to have trouble," the secretary said. With a larger figure — the 1984 estimate is around $200 billion — he said federal borrowing would absorb too much of the national savings, creating new inflationary pressure when private industry seeks investment for expansion.

Marriage and property

By PHILIP R. LEHMBERG

the spouses so that community property is treated as separate property.

Because Texas is a community property state, effective tax planning requires careful consideration of its unique aspects of property ownership that are markedly different than that of non-community property states. Community property laws can affect tax planning before, during and after a marriage as well as at death and during the resulting administration of the estate.

Separate property in Texas generally is considered to be all real and personal property owned before marriage — or acquired thereafter by gift, devise or descent. All other property obtained by either spouse during marriage is presumed to be community property.

Separate property may be commingled with community property such that the property loses its separate identity. The failure to keep adequate records eliminates the ability to trace its character.

The tax effects of community property laws can be significant. For example, on the death of a spouse, the community half of the deceased is taxed at its fair market value and accordingly its new tax basis in the hands of a beneficiary is that fair market value. The ownership of the other community half of that same property still belonging to the surviving spouse is also stepped-up to the new fair market value (since the entire amount of community assets are included in the deceased's estate and a tax is levied on only one-half that amount).

Appreciation of the surviving spouse's one-half community property escapes taxation in any subsequent sale. Also, after the death of the spouse and before the distribution of the estate, the estate and the survivor can each report half of the income of the community property on separate returns.

Occasionally, there are advantages afforded to married couples if each files his or her respective return under the status of "married filing separately." A married individual in Texas must report half of the community income on a separate return and, in some specific instances, income which the spouses agreed would be treated as separate property.

Where there is a large disparity in the income that would be reported by each individual (an example might be a large capital gain generated by the sale of separate property), the difference in resulting taxes could make filing separate returns beneficial. An additional example where separate returns are filed is the increase in charitable deductions and medical deductions which are limited by percentages of adjusted gross income if income is effectively shifted from one spouse to another.

Texas community property laws can be manipulated by marital property divisions between Marital property may be divided in three ways. The first is by agreements made prior to marriage. Couples contemplating marriage may partition property that already exists or that is to be acquired. Although property brought into a marriage usually is, by definition, separate property, items coming into existence in the future may also be partitioned.

The presumption under Texas law usually is, income produced from separate property is community property (interest on C.D.'s, etc.) and that income produced solely by effort during the marriage is also community property (wages, etc.).

Thus, couples may, before the marriage, desire to call all of any portion of those income items separate property instead of community property. The same concepts may apply to tangible property acquired before or during the marriage.

The second manner of dividing marital property concerns those voluntary partitions during the marriage itself. Community property divisions made during the marriage by definition must be equal. Couples desiring greater flexibility in the division of property should make their divisions prior to the marriage. Any type of property, including wages, salaries and gifts, may be partitioned in a marriage agreement.

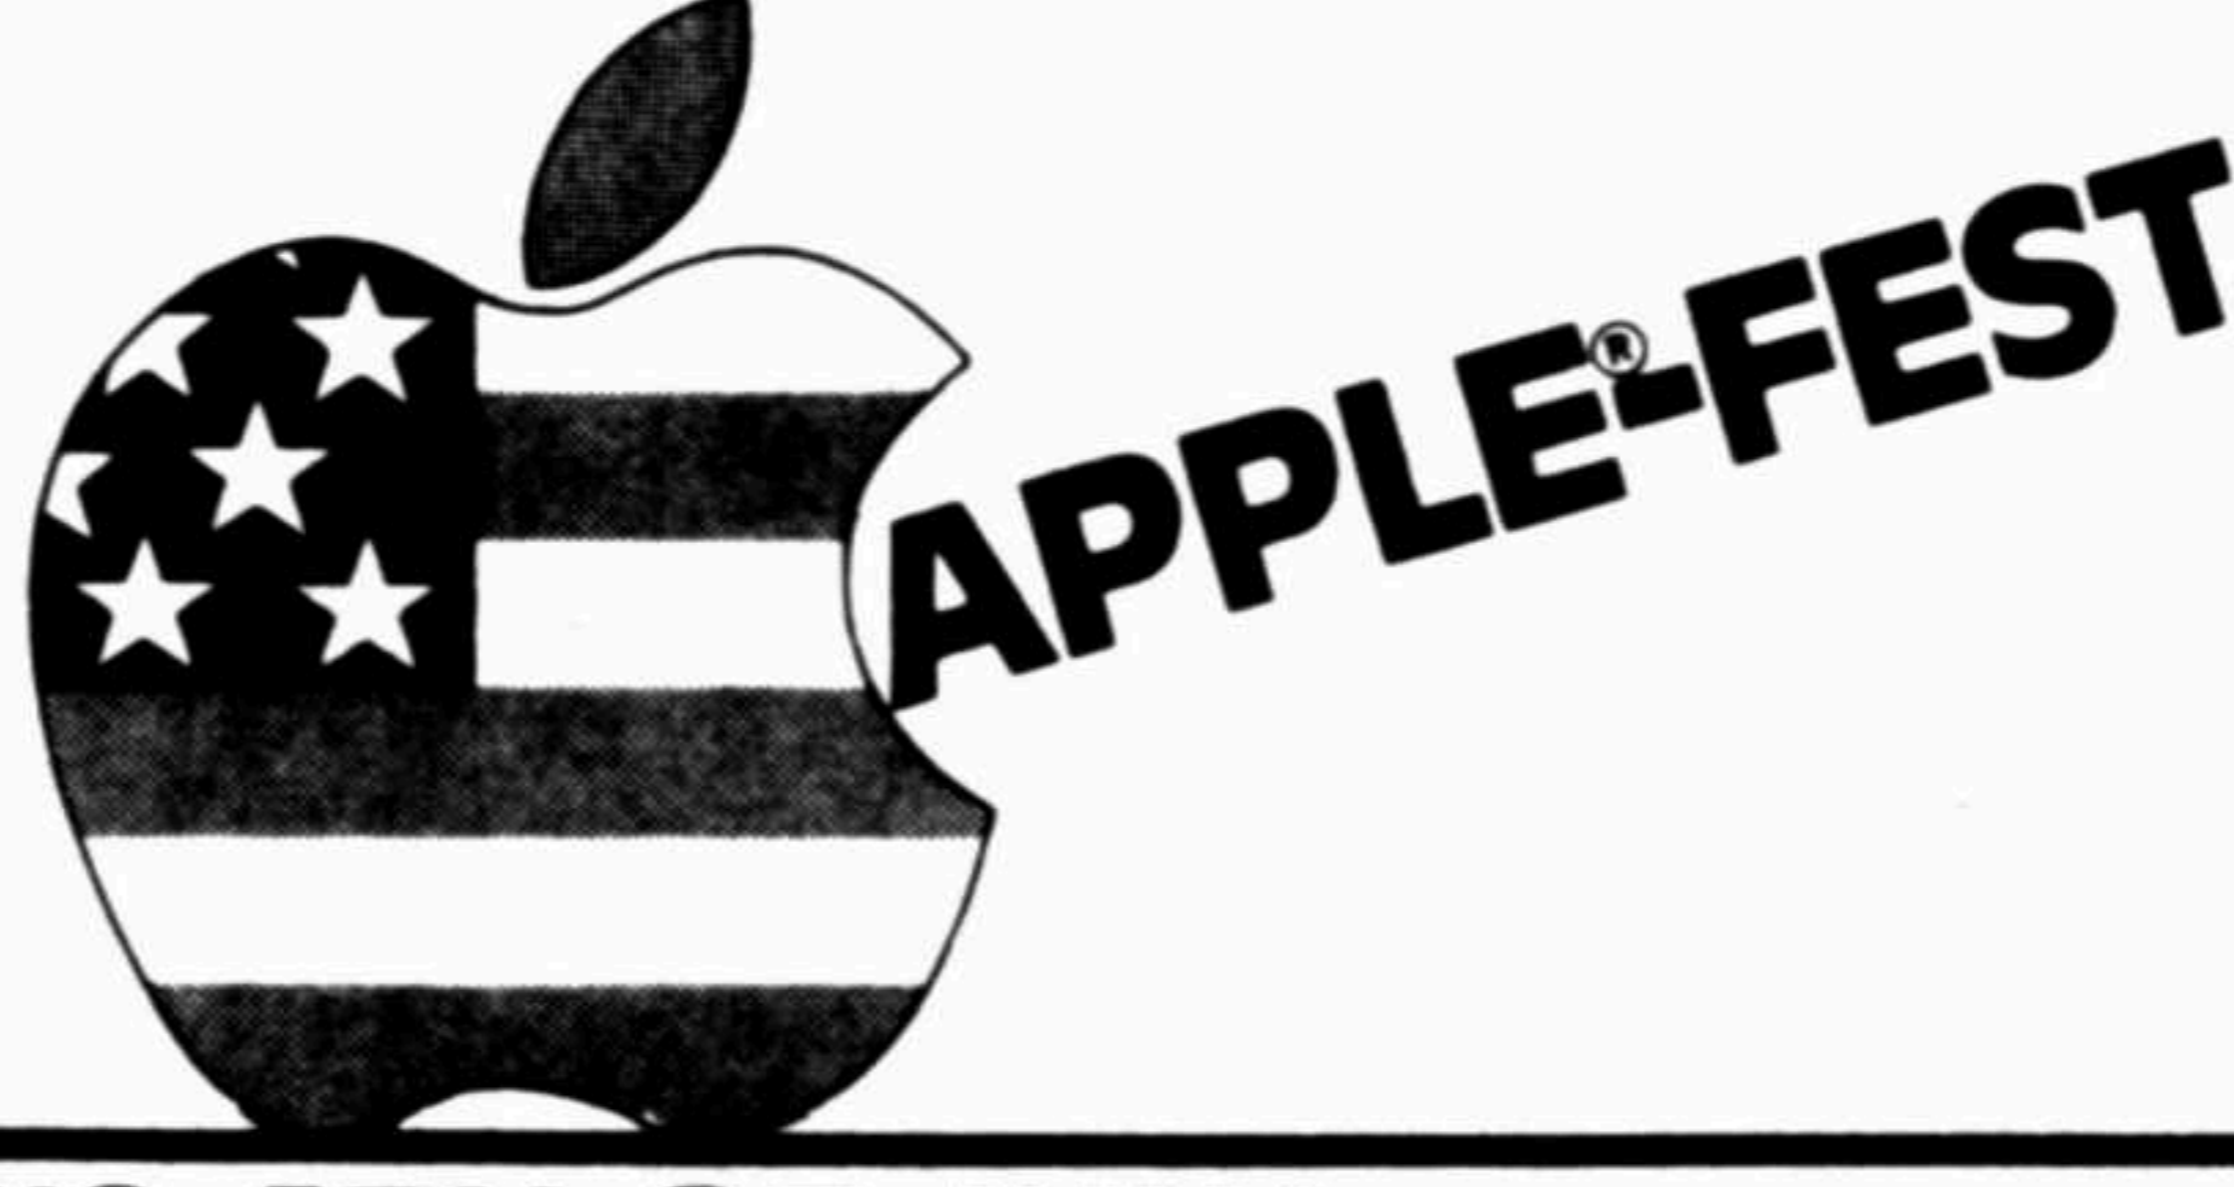

The third type of settlement occurs during permanent separation or divorce.

In creating or terminating marital rights, Texas law allows couples to make binding agreements "as they desire" concerning property even if it is acquired during the period of separation or after the divorce.

Spouses should note that a presumption now exists that a gift of property from one spouse to the other spouse of separate property estate includes any income or property arising from that gift. No written agreement is necessary in order to effectuate the transfer of income arising from that gift as would be required with a gift of income-producing property from some third party to one of the spouses.

Manipulation of the marital ownership of certain types of property in Texas historically has been for reasons other than tax considerations. It should not, however, be done without examining both the current income tax aspects as well as the eventual estate tax consequences.

Richards seeking new rules for bank applications

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Treasurer Ann Richards has recommended new rules regarding charter applications for State-chartered banks and automated teller machines to the State Banking Board.

Richards said the proposals were prepared by Jorge Gutierrez, general counsel to the State Treasury. They include a recommendation that the hearing officer on a bank charter proposal give approval or denial of the application.

Currently, board members read the transcript of hearings by the hearing officer, with no recommendation having been made as to approval or denial.

Richards argues other agencies such as the Savings and Loan Department use procedures similar to what she is proposing, and the change would be "a step forward" for the board.

However, Banking Commissioner Robert E. Stewart said he hadn't had time to study the proposals and asked that action be delayed until the board's July 28 meeting.

Richards agreed, and the board is expected to consider at that time whether to publish the proposed changes for comment.

In other action, the board withdrew its proposed rules dealing with point of sale terminals for electronic funds transfer between accounts of customers and retailers, due to new legislation passed in the regular session of the Legislature this year.

Department of Banking general counsel Archie Clayton was asked to look at any new rules which may be needed, and to report back at the board's next meeting.

Clayton said he believes the provisions on use of such terminals are to be "liberally construed," with the intent being customer convenience.

Some point of sale operations are expected to be operating later this summer, Stewart and Clayton reported.

The board also is looking at changes in rules due to other legislation passed by the 1983 Legislature.

State Board of Insurance postponed indefinitely a hearing requested by Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office on changes in the personal auto policy and coverage rules and forms.

A question regarding procedures was raised by a representative of the Texas Car and Truck Rental Agency, and the matter was delayed.

A study committee appointed by SBI to monitor the policy when it was implemented two years ago has been working for some months on amendments intended to eliminate ambiguities and to broaden coverage.

Texas Board of Health members approved revisions to rules on municipal solid waste management and hazardous waste management which were proposed earlier this year.

The changes are to meet revisions by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency in its program, which Texas has been delegated authority to administer.

Some revisions were made to the rules as originally proposed as a result of comments received at the hearings.

They include exclusion of water treatment plant sludges as "special wastes," clarification of record-keeping requirements, limiting land applications of sludges, clarification of groundwater monitoring requirements and providing procedures for agencies charged with maintaining public access routes to comment on routes serving proposed facilities.

Texas is seeking to complete delegation from EPA; a hearing on delegation of landfill authority is set for July 7 in Austin.

SBI has completed a nine-page agenda for the July 14 hearing on rules and rate changes on worker's compensation insurance.

A number of the items are described as "housekeeping" changes. However, one item not on the agenda — but reported as due for consideration as "unfinished business" — is elimination of the $300 weekly payroll limitation in ratemaking in favor of use of total payroll.

That change was proposed by the National Council on Compensation Insurance in October, 1980, and received strong opposition at a special hearing.

Texas Association of Business, Associated General Contractors and others argued that the change would result in increased rates; NCCI contended the change would lower rates.

SBI rejected the change in December, 1980, but the item reappeared at the 1981 hearing, and was taken under advisement.

There was no consideration of it at the 1982 hearing, and it hasn't been set for this year's hearing — but some SBI officials indicate that the matter could be raised at the session.

Local businessmen form telephone company

A new corporation, West Texas Telephone Company, is being formed by a group of local businessmen. The company will provide cellular mobile telephone service and other specialized radio telephone services in Midland, Odessa and the Permian Basin.

Stockholders for the new venture are George Bush Jr., Cy Wagner, Jr., Jack E. Brown and John Dunagan of Midland, and W. D. Noel, John Ben Shepperd & Steve Late of Odessa. Others are Granville Hahn, Big Spring; Pat Ramsey, Monahans; and U. S. Telephone Inc., a long distance common carrier based in Dallas, which serves the entire United States with calls originating from over 100 cities. W. D. Noel was elected president.

According to Dr. Guy Montalbano of U. S. TEL's Research and Development, the proposed specialized mobile radio service, or SMRS, will have a stronger, clearer signal than the typical mobile phone. It will also have the capability to perform for a fleet, dispatch service with the ability to reach several cars simultaneously. Also offered will be an innovative new service of "queuing" or waiting which makes the system immediately accessible.

PBGC annual rig tour set

Here comes LULU!

Every community — even Midland — has them. Local governments have been plagued with them for decades. Now, finally, we know what to call them. They're LULUs.

What's a LULU? The jail-stockade Midland County talked about last year was one. So is the city's sewage treatment plant and the planned asphalt plant some of the city's residents got up in arms about a few months back. So are salvage yards, strip mines, toxic waste dumps, adult bookstores and halfway houses for recovering drug addicts. They're "locally unwanted land uses."

Frank J. Popper, a scholar at the Resources For the Future think tank, identified them and named them LULUs. In the RFF newsletter, Popper writes that the typical LULU is something most people don't object to — as long as it isn't in their backyard. "A LULU always threatens its surroundings," he writes. The way to tell when a proposed project becomes a LULU is when an organization is formed to oppose it.

Popper says that "any given LULU is not an undivided evil for everyone. It is a LULU only for people who regard it as one."

LULUs don't remain the same. They can change with the economic times. Prisons — typically LULUs — are a good example. He cites the fact that when the State of Illinois announced plans to build a new state prison last year, 21 towns with high unemployment rates competed to be chosen as the site.

What happened, says Popper, is that the Illinois prison stopped being a LULU and became a LWLU or locally wanted land use.

Now that local governments know what LULUs are, what they've got to try to do is first find out how to change them to LWLUs — and then learn how to pronounce them!

Unusual silence

The Moscow meeting of the Warsaw Pact nations, which was expected to produce thundering accusations against the United States and NATO, turned out short (four hours) and relatively sweet (no threats).

In fact, the only allusion to the proposed deployment of new American nuclear missiles in Western Europe was contained in an official statement issued at the close of the session which set forth: "The states participating in the meeting declare that they will in no case allow military superiority to be achieved over them." Then it went on to call for renewed negotiations to reduce nuclear arms.

The subdued atmosphere of the Soviet bloc meeting and the absence of any invective against the United States have been credited by some observers to the influence of Nicolae Ceausescu, the Romanian leader and a comparative moderate.

Ceausescu conceivably could have blocked adoption of a harder position on the missiles. It is more likely, however, that the Eastern leaders were distracted by such immediate problems as Poland and Afghanistan. Or they might have decided, for the moment, to keep the West off balance.

In any event, it was a distinct relief not to hear the tired old denunciations of "imperialist America" which customarily are chanted at these sessions.

Another View: Star of Africa

Diplomats won't say so publicly but they know many "developing African republics" are neither republics nor developing. Many are ruled by dictators who live lavishly while their countrymen eke out marginal existences.

An example is Ghana, which in 1981 tried to solve its deficits problem by increasing its money supply 55 percent. It did this by simply printing more money. In the inflation that resulted, a pack of cigarettes today costs 10 times the average daily salary, one egg costs more than a day's wages and a school book costs 20 days' wages.

Another basket case is Tanzania, ruled since its independence in 1961 by Julius Nyerere. His collectivization of farms has Tanzania avoiding bankruptcy only by extracting billions in foreign aid from capitalist nations, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

Nigeria and other African states are just as bad off.

One problem is Africa's 20-year flirtation with socialism and the Soviet bloc. The Soviet Union gave African nations overpriced, unreliable arms in exchange for minerals, fishing rights and votes in the United Nations. What Africa needs most — capital, technology, commercial know-how and access to markets — the Soviets didn't supply.

The African-American Institute is another problem. American taxpayers gave it $9 million, about 90 percent of its total budget, to train African leaders. But by its own accounts, AAI often recruits students from the most radically Marxist groups in Africa.

Also it is dedicated to the so-called New International Order, by which resources from the United States and other Western nations would be redistributed among poor countries, a concept that ignores that wealth is created by work and a sound political and economic system that encourages risk-taking, individual initiative and private investment.

An exception to the dismal African picture is the Ivory Coast, whose President Felix Houphouet-Boigny recently ended a 10-day visit to the United States and Canada. Between 1960 and 1980 it averaged an amazing 7 percent real economic growth and successfully absorbed thousands of immigrants from neighboring nations.

The Ivory Coast, economically, is the star of Africa. Houphouet-Boigny credits this to his stress on liberty. Foreign investments are welcome and private business and farming are encouraged. Unlike many African countries, the Ivory Coast buried resentments of its former colonial ruler, France, and some 80,000 Frenchmen are employed in key jobs in industry and government.

Houphouet-Boigny says wealth can't be divided until it is produced and it can't be produced without incentive and investment. In essence, that's Reaganomics, if you will, and it's working well in the Ivory Coast. Some of the other African leaders would do well to drop their strident, pro-Marxist rhetoric and take note. Rhetoric can't feed or clothe the people; production can.

ART BUCHWALD To Poland on the wings of prayer!

The Polish Central Committee had an emergency meeting as soon as the Pope's plane took off from Krakow to return to Rome.

"All right," one of the high officials said. "Who came up with smart idea to have the Pope visit Poland?"

Art Buchwald

Someone pointed his finger at Panowski.

Panowski threw up his hands. "I thought it would be good for tourism. You have to admit we got great press all over the world."

"Especially in Moscow," one of the members said. "Do you realize what you've done, Panowski? You brought all the Solidarity people back together again, you allowed them to have demonstrations in the street, and we may have to lift martial law."

"How did I know there were that many Catholics in the country?"

"You could have asked us, Panowski. Would you mind telling us exactly how you got us in this mess?"

"Well, last winter I got a call from the Vatican and the man said the Pope would like to visit his homeland. I thought he wanted to go to the village where he was born and have a few days rest at a monastery. I didn't know he was going to use the trip to bring a message to the Polish people."

"You think the Pope just goes around the world looking for a place to take a vacation?"

"I expected him to say Mass, but I didn't realize anybody would show up for it."

"Only ten million people showed up, Panowski."

"But they all didn't take communion."

"I think you're missing the point, Panowski. Until the Pope's visit we had the unions under control, the people were dispirited and had lost their will to fight us and we looked like we were in control. Now everything is changed and we're back where we started from. The Pope gave everyone a shot in the arm, which is something we didn't need at this time."

"So I underestimated his appeal as a spiritual leader. We all make mistakes."

"Is that what you want us to tell Moscow?"

"Why do we have to tell Moscow anything? We're an independent country."

"No reason except they have six million troops on our border. You better come up with a good story when the Kremlin calls us, which should be every minute now."

"Why don't we say he came here on a trade mission to buy Polish hams, in exchange for Vatican wheat?"

"I'm not sure the Soviets will buy that one, not after the speeches he made from the pulpit."

"We could say the Western press exaggerated the visit and made it into a political spectacle to further their warlike intentions towards the Warsaw Pact nations."

"That's better, but it's still not good enough. The Soviets are going to ask why we let him come in the first place."

"Because we needed the hard currency to buy oil from the Russians?"

"It won't fly, Panowski."

"The phone started ringing. 'It's them Panowski. Why don't you answer it?'"

"Hello, yes, Comrade. This is the Central Committee. Before you say anything, he's gone. We kicked him out of the country before he could do any damage. No, no. Everything's quiet in Poland. Do you think one priest could be a threat to the great Polish Communist Party? ... Who told you the whole country turned out to hear him? ... That's disinformation put out by the CIA. The man didn't even fill up one small church. A few old ladies turned out to see him. You have my word for it. Listen to me. We don't need any troops. He didn't influence any of us. So help me God!"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Influence-buying gets a wink

WASHINGTON — Scandalized by the spectacle of American businessmen shelling out millions of dollars in bribes to foreign officials — with predictably embarrassing results — Congress in 1977 passed the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. It forbids payments to get business favors on overseas contracts.

For six years, corporate captains have been whining about the handicap they claim to be saddled with when they compete with companies whose governments wink at such under-the-table deals. And the corporate grumblers now have a friend in the White House.

Jack Anderson

Two administration-backed bills will be coming up for floor votes in the House and Senate shortly. If they are passed, the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act will be gutted.

What's wrong with a little back-sheesh here and there, if it wins a lucrative contract for an American company? Opponents of the bills offered my associate Indy Badhwar several examples.

When the crooked deals are eventually exposed, they can have effects on U.S. foreign policy that are far more costly than the potential loss of a few industrial contracts.

For example, the revelation of Lockheed's multi-million dollar bribes to Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan between 1972-1974 caused that friendly government to topple and threatened the very fabric of democracy in our Pacific ally.

Other Lockheed payments shook the governments of the Netherlands and Italy. Exxon's disbursement of more than $50 million to cooperative politicians in Italy played right into the hands of the Italian Communist Party.

Many of the dollars wound up back in this country — in the campaign chests of friendly U.S. officeholders.

Some 300 companies admitted making illegal donations to Richard Nixon's 1968 and 1972 campaigns by dipping into the same offshore accounts from which foreign officials were paid off.

During the disclosures that led to passage of the anti-corruption act, about 450 U.S. corporations admitted having bribed foreign officials. Several of the more flagrant offenders signed consent decrees with the Securities and Exchange Commission, promising to stop making such payments.

But not all the companies lived up to their pledges. One that signed a consent decree was Ashland Oil. As I've reported, Ashland's internal documents clearly show that high company officials authorized questionable payments and investments that were intended to win favorable treatment from the Sultan of Oman.

Ominously, this apparent violation of the law was known to the SEC for more than two years, yet the supposed watchdog agency didn't investigate the situation until after I made the details public. The SEC's failure to act for so long reflects the Reagan administration's view that Big Business should be allowed to go its merry, freebooting way without bothersome interference by federal regulatory agencies.

The legislation being considered on Capitol Hill would sanctify transactions like Ashland's and relieve the reluctant SEC bureaucrats of any need for embarrassing investigations of bribery. The reasoning behind the push for effective repeal of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act is that the law went too far, and has handcuffed American firms trying to grab a share of the world market from foreign competitors.

But the House Communications and Finance subcommittee, headed by Rep. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., has spent more than a year investigating the effect of the law on U.S. firms. It concluded, after reviewing all the evidence it could find, that "one simply cannot make a case for the argument that U.S. trade has suffered measurably as a result of the act."

Even William Brock, the U.S. trade representative who is the chief administration salesman for repeal, had to admit to the subcommittee that U.S. trade problems could not be blamed on the anti-corruption law.

But Brock still urged crippling changes in the act, so he was asked to produce an independent report giving specific examples of businesses hurt by the law.

But subcommittee investigators discovered that Brock's "independent" report was based on information provided by the organization that has lobbied most enthusiastically for repeal of the anti-bribery law: the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. In fact, seven of the 19 examples were lifted verbatim from a 1981 Chamber of Commerce pamphlet.

When committee staffers asked for the raw data on which the chamber's seven cases were based, they were first told that the material was confidential, then that the documents had been destroyed.

GEORGE F. WILL

Justices' heads must rule hearts

WASHINGTON — A South Dakota law and a fraudulent check have led to a Supreme Court ruling with this interesting aspect: the theory on which the majority opinion rests — a theory about objective criteria — is refuted by the mere fact that four justices vigorously dissent from it.

When Jerry Helm was arrested for writing a "no account" check for $100 he had six felony convictions — three for burglary, one for obtaining money under false pretenses, one for a third-offense driving while intoxicated, one for grand larceny. South Dakota's recidivist law authorizes a judge to impose a sentence of life imprisonment without parole on an offender with three previous felony convictions. The judge in the bad check case sentenced Helm to life without parole.

George F. Will

The Eighth Amendment proscribes "cruel and unusual punishments." Until last Tuesday the Supreme Court had never held that a prison sentence alone was, because of its duration, cruel and unusual. But last Tuesday a bitterly divided Court held that the sentence given Helm was unconstitutionally disproportionate.

Justice Powell, joined by Justices Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun and Stevens, held that the principle of proportionality has always been implicit in the Eighth Amendment and applicable to all punishments because the principle is explicit in the Magna Carta and the English Bill of Rights, from which the Eighth Amendment was derived.

The Court's majority seems complacent about the flood of appeals now certain to rush toward the judiciary. The majority says appeals of prison sentences should be disposed of by applying three "objective criteria." They are:

1. Is the harshness of the punishment reasonably related to the gravity of the offense? Are more serious crimes subject to the same or lighter punishments? Do other jurisdictions impose the same punishment for the same crime?

2. Five justices consider these criteria "objective." Four justices consider the criteria an invitation to the judiciary to make many subjective judgments better left to legislatures.

Chief Justice Burger, joined in dissent by Justices White, Rehnquist, and O'Connor, says the majority has undermined the rule of law by disregarding a decision rendered just two terms ago. In a 1980 case the Court held that a life sentence (with possibility of parole) imposed after three nonviolent felony convictions was not cruel and unusual punishment. Now the Court says that life without parole (but with commutation by the governor still possible) is cruel and unusual. By doing so, the Court opens the judiciary to nobody-knows-how-many challenges of prison sentences on proportionality grounds.

Did the crime that resulted in sentence X in Vermont receive a similar sentence in Utah? Was the crime really quite the same? How similar is sufficiently similar? Is crime Y comparable to crime Z? Is it comparably "serious"? The Court's majority is content with its "objective criteria" for rendering such Solomonian judgments. But four-ninths of the Court hotly dispute five-ninths of the Court concerning even the seriousness of Helm's crimes, and the right of states to identify habitual criminals and remove them from circulation.

Five justices minimize the seriousness of Helm's record, referring to his crimes as "nonviolent." Four justices say that four of the crimes (the three burglaries and the third offense, driving while intoxicated) "had harsh potentialities for violence." Four justices ask: If the majority says that life without parole is disproportionate for seven felonies, how about for eight? Twelve? By what other "objective criteria" will courts now second-guess state legislatures?

Burger says that the most accepted doctrine is that the "cruel and unusual" clause was intended to prohibit the kind of torture meted out during the reign of the Stuarts. In any case, until now the Court has held that the clause concerns "only the mode of punishment and not the length of a sentence of imprisonment." Hitherto, the length of a sentence has been considered purely a matter of legislative prerogative. Henceforth, any sentence can be challenged on one or more of the majority's "objective criteria" — criteria which four justices say pose more problems than they solve.

Even if it is humane to conclude that Helm's sentence is unjustly severe, it is impermissible to conclude that therefore the sentence is unconstitutional. The Constitution enumerates, allocates and — the chaos of illimitable judicial intervention in society — regulates government powers. Chaos results if the Constitution is read as a guarantee that every use of power shall be just. That is why justices often have a vocational duty to make their heads overrule their hearts. Five seem to have failed to do that in this case.

Reagan badgered about Carter's briefing papers

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — President Reagan is in California enjoying a July 4th holiday break like the rest of us after a White House news conference badgering him about briefing papers supposedly slipped to his staff in 1980 from people around ex-President Jimmy Carter. I thought that President Reagan did exceedingly well in trying to defuse the issue but his media and political critics won't let it go away. Quite a few of them even sneer about a looming "Reagagate," as they search for the proverbial smoking gun. The president, though, disarmed most of them by saying that he instructed the Justice Department to get to the bottom of the problem. Still, persistent critics at his 18th televised news conference kept at the Carter papers which the president asserted he never saw and didn't use in any form during his debate with the then-incumbent president.

EDITOR'S REPORT

As a result, the half-hour Q-and-A session thrust some good news, reported by President Reagan on the economy, into the background and elicited lots of generalities on the vital issues relevant to Central America. So today I thought I'd like to recall a few important presidential points. For example, President Reagan said the economy was beginning "to sparkle." His administration was revising, he declared, its projection "upward" of our economic growth from 4.7 to 5.5 percent, quite a feat for the country and the president. The president added confidently that our economy is growing more rapidly than expected in 1983. That must induce cheers in most areas because an improved economy leads to more jobs. The improved American economic status will encourage Western industrialized nations whose economies rise and fall with ours. Remember, a sound economy is the first line of defense. Where Central America was concerned, the president rebuked members of Congress who used sharp corners on requests for military aid to El Salvador and other friendly governments. The president wondered whether this knife-cutting meant instant death or dying slowly by bleeding away. The president observed that he had no plans to send combat troops to the embattled regions where Cuban and Soviet "instructors" are thickly in the ground. He did remark quizzically though that "presidents never say never" on combat units, refusing to be drawn further on the comment. On Poland, the president asserted that if Polish authorities permitted a revival of free trade unions, the U.S. would "turn back" some of the sanctions we imposed when martial law was imposed in 1981. He declared that he had no special data on private talks between Pope John Paul II and Communist Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski or the pope, and Lech Walensa, head of the banned Solidarity movement. But the president was repeatedly drawn back to the Carter papers by questioners. He summed it up succinctly, I felt, when he told one questioner that he wanted the Justice Department to find out if anyone broke the law. Now on this long weekend, I don't want anyone to break the law whether it's speeding, doing a barbecue in the wrong place at the beach or by shooting off illegal fireworks. It's a great holiday, celebrating our independence and freedom, so relax and enjoy it.

SPEAKING OUT

'Diabetic personality' difficult to cope with

By MRS. J.W. KELLY

Mrs. J.W. Kelly has lived in Stanton most of her life and is a retired secretary.

The "Diabetic Personality" is often referred to, but there are no textbooks, classes or courses available. Parents are generally unable to relate it to others; and their behavior is often as puzzling to the "outsider," as is the child's. Most are considered over-indulgent and over-protective. Some are, but most take tremendous risks of which no one else is aware.

The diabetic child, above all else in the world, wants to be just like everybody else! Parents are guilty of wanting this also, so the parent and child rapidly adapt a version of "faking it," which creates a different problem. When the appearance is that there is no difference, outsiders naturally expect the same actions and reactions that you would normally expect. There are times when this is possible, but the longer the facade must be maintained, the more difficult or impossible it becomes.

The average person is unaware that diabetes is a "twin" disease. You cannot "see" diabetes and the internal invisible process that is taking place, only the symptoms, which are very elusive and further confusing, because they do not follow a pattern and reactions vary so greatly.

THE "GOAL" is to strike a balance of insulin, diet and exercise, and to be able to maintain this goal internally, i.e. blood-sugar level. Any deviation from this formula will have direct results on the personality and performance of the child. The more this balance is disturbed, the more pronounced will be the effect.

A very emotional or exciting experience will sometimes trigger uncontrollable hyperactivity. This in turn may cause a rapid burnup of sugar, creating a potential for insulin shock. This can happen rapidly and the child will become uncoordinated, sleepy and listless-appearing (limp) with a short attention span and may even appear to be a discipline problem. Food in this situation will bring about an almost miraculous change in personality. A drastic chemical process has taken place internally — this time with visible results. Unfortunately, these chemical changes do not take place at the convenience of the program in which the child may be involved. Also, they may come on so gradually, that the child (as well as the people around them) is unaware of what is happening. Past a certain point, they become incapable of recognizing their own symptoms; even though they may carry a snack for just this purpose. A child engrossed in a game will sometimes be totally unaware that their eating time has passed; or simply refuse to stop and eat.

SLEEPY IS normal. Inattentiveness is normal. Rowdy is normal. Even the long-experienced parent is not always able to quickly distinguish the difference.

Or, you do not know in what manner the balance has been disturbed and fail to calculate the proper balance of food intake. In the middle of the night they go into shock and the next morning, you can't wake them up! It can range all the way from mild shock to total paralysis (including speech). If you can get the situation under control in time, you are off to school for a "normal" day. The child is inattentive and pressured to conform and here comes that over-protective parent again.

High blood sugar has similar symptoms, but the internal process is quite different. This also effects a personality change, but will not deteriorate nearly as rapidly into an emergency situation. Both affect the child's ability to adhere to a desired standard of conformity. At times they will function above normal. At other times they are totally incapable, regardless of their struggle and desire to please you.

AT TIMES discipline is necessary, but you do not come down "hard" without careful consideration of the consequences and the root cause of the observed behavior. It is not a simple matter of conduct-discipline-desired behavior. It is a very complex situation with unpredictable results, both physically and emotionally. Stress and undue pressure to conform could, and does, have a very devastating effect! And, if maintained over a long enough period of time, could render complete inability to cope, along with a completely out-of-control disease for which very little can be done except to change the environment, and then it is a slow process. You can expect a great deal of cooperation and help. Such youngsters want to take care of their own problems and assume their own welfare, and most of the time do it remarkably well. This is just a glimpse of the daily strivings "to be just like everybody else" and the related problems. It is true, that there are different types and degrees of diabetes. Some much more controllable than others. And that these and other combined factors help create the "diabetic personality."

"Speaking Out" columnists are invited to submit articles on subjects of their choice. They should be limited to 850 words or less.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dogs destroyed?

To The Editor: The more I think about June Dotson's article in the June 19th paper named "Unwanted Dogs," the more concerned I really get, not only this article but others that have been printed over the months.

She has made several comments about destroying animals, including those involved in the pit fights. At the time of the auction she had her mind made up to overbid everyone out there and then find a home for each one of the pets "to keep from being destroyed."

I know a few people that would have loved those dogs and taken good care of them. But have you noticed that we haven't heard where the dogs have gone or if they were given a proper home? Would it surprise you to know she had all the dogs put to sleep? Well, she did and from what I heard nobody had a home good enough for these pets.

I can agree that she wanted to make sure that they would be taken care of because I would want the same. And I agree about spaying or neutering a pet, but I don't agree that she put herself in a judge and jury's place and sentenced those dogs to death. They could have taken the time to find a proper home for those pets, especially since three were in good health considering. I am sure there are still some good homes around.

To the editor: I would like to publicly thank and laud Mike Butler of the city of Midland Operations Department. In recent dealings with Butler, he proved to be most courteous and a man of his word. It was indeed a pleasure to work with him. The city is fortunate to have Butler as an employee.

Gracious man

To The Editor: Your mini-bio-sketch of Newnie W. Ellis Jr. in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram (June 26, 1983) was a gracious picture of a most gracious man. The compassion he has exhibited to me and my family through a quarter century is unexcelled. Midland may well be proud of him.

Dancing sinners

To The Editor: Regarding the letter concerned about sinners dancing in the streets right here in River City (which referred, I presume, to the stage play "The Best Little Oh-My-Stars in Texas"), the Bible says, "What is this uproar?" (1 Samuel 4:24). The Bible also asks, "Does the wild ass bray when he has grass..." (Job 5:3). I guess all this merely proves that what the Bible says is true: "The

Casting stones

To The Editor: I address my remarks to those wonderfully sinless citizens of Midland who feel compelled to go on and on about the appearance of Whorehouse at the Yuca. Would that all the world were so perfect as you. I feel sure that had you been Christ, you would not have forgiven the lady of ill repute, but would have cast the first stone...and then another, and another.

The play does not condone whores or their houses, but, is rather a fanciful interpretation of facts. After all, the Chicken Ranch was closed down and "good" did triumph over "evil." Would you also cast stones at those who watch black Otello smother his white wife Desdemona? Would you boycott a local production of Duncan's murder by MacBeth? Would you not watch Lost Weekend on television? I guess not. Most every play written is a "slice of life" in a dramatic setting. I see Whorehouse as nothing more. True, it is not Bambi, but then neither is Streetcar Named Desire, Faust, Medea or the current movie Octopussy. Whorehouse is a morality play and if you believe otherwise, then you must have seen or read the play. If so, shame on you.

The show is over and done. I doubt that it will return to Midland for quite sometime. Let's just put this whole thing to bed. I am sure you will take issue with my choice of words!

BILL MODISSETT

U.S. threatened by building wave of immigration

people who are wanting to make "the good life" in this country their own. When the wave rolls up on Texas beaches, life here and in the rest of the nation will be changed forever.

For more than two centuries, this nation maintained an open-door policy to immigration. After all, this nation was built by immigrants, made great by immigrants, defended in time of war by immigrants and their children. Who are we to deny this country's wonders to others hoping to forge a better life?

Well, here are the sobering facts: — The International Labor Organization has projected that between 1980 and the year 2000 the labor force in the developing world will increase by 600 million to 700 million people. The increase will be larger than the entire current labor force of the industrialized world, including the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, Western Europe, North America, Japan and Oceania.

— The labor force of Mexico and Central America, now 27 million strong, will double in the next 20 years.

What does all that mean to you? What it means is that the steady flow of immigrants from Western Hemisphere nations to the United States — including the stream of illegal aliens from south of the Texas border — will become a flood before the decade ends. The reason is simple: jobs. As bad as economic conditions are in this country, it still offers hope for those from the less developed nations of the world; it's still the promised land.

Now the United States is reconsidering its open-door immigration policy and K.C. McAlpin of Washington, D.C., Southwest program director for the Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR), says it's time.

"Mass migration is no longer a viable option for solving economic problems," says McAlpin, who grew up in the Houston area and during the 1970s spent six years in South America and the Caribbean. He's seen what's coming first-hand and he's the first to admit that "we're running into the limits of what we can sustain."

There is no reason to expect assistance from Mexico, Haiti and other Western Hemisphere nations. Our immigration problems are our problem; they have their own. Of course, in a way our immigration problems are theirs too because all too often for the very people who migrate to this land are the middle-class business people needed to develop their own economies and to pull their nations up by their own bootstraps.

But the tragedy of nations without jobs continues and the flood increases. During the first seven months of this year, the U.S. Border Patrol apprehended 650,000 illegal aliens. Border Patrol officials estimate that for every illegal alien they catch, four to five slip past and weave their way inside the U.S. in search of jobs.

It's easy to empathize with the immigrants; what they're seeking is to better their lives. But the competition for jobs is expected to heighten in coming decades worldwide. Reducing the quality of life in this nation is no way to help those in other nations. Even if they can get here, what have they got once they arrive?

And the influx is reducing the quality of life by increasing costs. In Los Angeles County, California, alone it costs $415 million a year just to provide public education for the children of illegal aliens. In Texas, it's expected to cost $50 million next year. And, remember, you foot the bill.

But that cost is nothing compared to what it'll be at the end of 20 years if the United States takes no action to stem the flow of immigration — illegal or not. As it now stands, the money the United States funnels to other Western Hemisphere nations for economic development is mostly pie-in-the-sky stuff because it's used for petrochemical plants and the like when what's really needed is for those recipient governments to use the funds to encourage agricultural development, basic industries and the like. As the economic pictures of those nations improve, there would be less urgency for their people to look to this country as the only way to improve their lot.

Putting out the message that the United States' door isn't open any longer, not like it was, eventually will begin to discourage migration here. In the long-run, that probably will help other nations in this hemisphere more than any single other step we can take.

The start, of course, is to adopt a realistic immigration policy. The Simpson-Mazzoli bill, which includes penalties for employers who knowingly hire illegals, additional manpower funding for the Border Patrol and a cap on immigration at 425,000 a year, is a start. It's now being considered and McAlpin says a bill can be enacted this session. The Senate version is stronger and more preferable than the House version, but a compromise committee can forge a respectable measure. At least it marks a start toward immigration reform and that's more than we have now.

An open-door policy is everybody's cup of tea. It worked well in this nation's early years. But how much of a good thing can we stand? If action isn't taken to stem the tide of immigrants, the promise of a better life for all those who come to this country — and those of us already here — will become more and more meaningless.

Dowdco Announces Sponge Coring for Well Completions

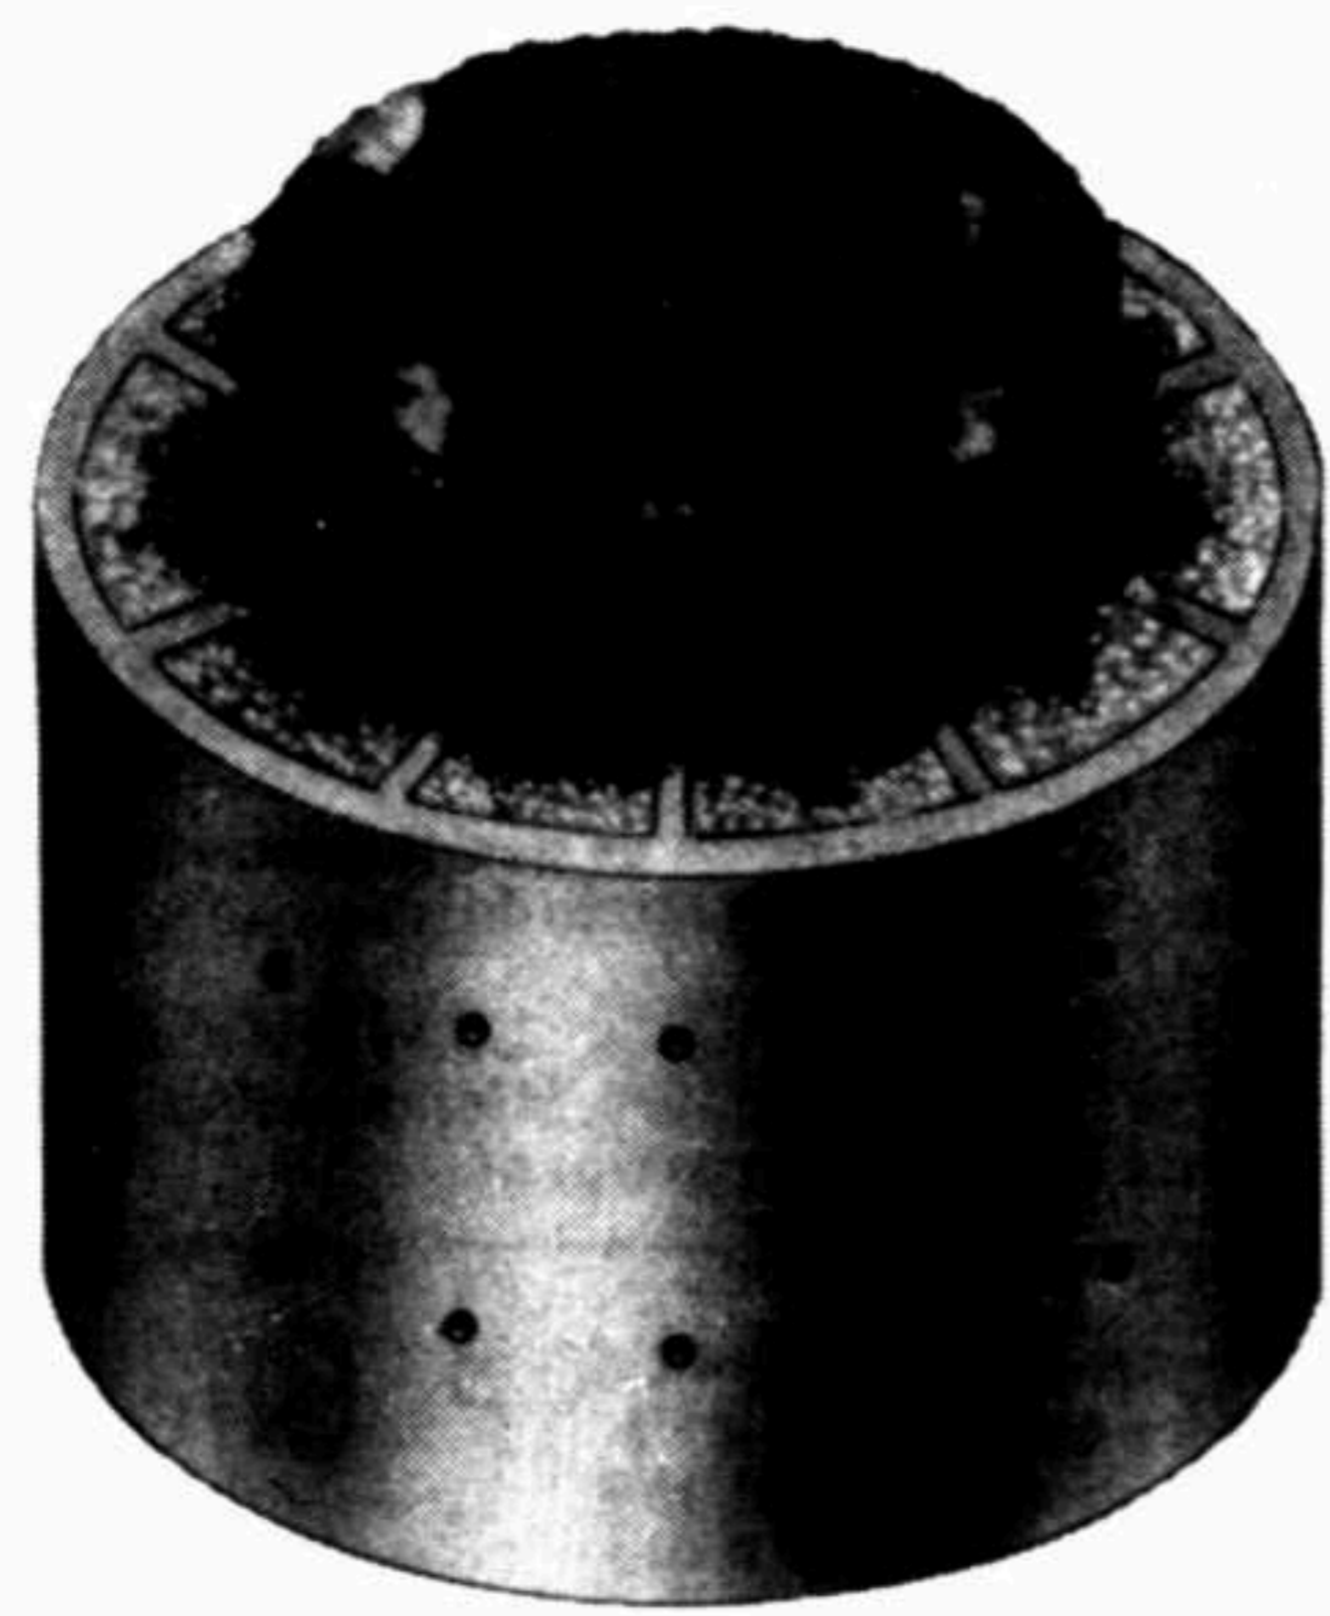

Cores "bleed" when brought to the surface, due to the expansion of core fluid when released from bottom hole pressure. As much as 50% of the core fluid can be lost due to bleeding.

To overcome this core fluid loss, Dowdco has developed The Sponge Core System, a simple, economical method of obtaining more accurate oil saturation data. The system utilizes polyurethane sponge lining for the inner barrel of the conventional core barrel. This "oil wet" liner is highly absorptive to oil, and receives and completely envelopes the core as it is cut. Any oil that bleeds from the core is caught and retained by the sponge liner.

The sponge and core are analyzed foot-by-foot. The oil from the sponge is reconstituted into the porosity of the rock, resulting in a higher and more accurate oil saturation figure.

The sponge coring technique has been used successfully over the years as a tool for reservoir evaluation or field services. More recently, it has been recognized as a valuable tool to be used for well completions. The following factors make this possible:

1. Sponge core data is usually available from the core analysis lab within 24-48 hours.
2. The unique nature of the sponge core data measures oil that "produces" from core on a foot-by-foot basis.
3. Sponge data differentiates between oil and water productive zones.
4. In addition to providing accurate oil saturation data, sponge core data provides direct measurements of permeability, porosity and lithology.
5. Sponge core data can identify mobile or "free" oil zones in very thin oil producing areas.
6. Sponge coring is cost efficient.

DOWDCO can provide additional reports which assist in an evaluation of the validity of the sponge core data. Various cross plots of sponge core data can give an indication of the degree of flushing of the core by the mud filtrate.

Uses of Sponge Core Data

Sponge core data has many uses, both to the reservoir engineer or geologist who need the data for reservoir evaluation as well as to determine the best way to complete a well. The following data illustrations give examples that are excerpts from actual well data. The data is from sponge core analysis from wells in San Andres formation, Ector County, Texas. The wells are part of a project that has been under a waterflood for over twenty years.

Water Zone

This is a zone where the core factor indicates a good quality rock. There was very little oil in the sponge and a corresponding low percentage of mobile oil. Even with total oil saturation in the 20-42% range, since the oil was not mobile, the zone would probably produce water.

Oil Zone:

This is an example of sponge core data indicating a large amount of oil in the sponge with a high degree of mobility. This zone would probably produce oil.

Production Index Report

DOWDCO has developed three reports to better illustrate the contribution of the sponge to the total oil saturation. As illustrated below the "PRODUCTION INDEX REPORT" provides laboratory measurements of the core's depth, permeability, porosity and water saturation in tabular form. It also provides three oil saturations including sponge oil, core oil, and total oil saturations.

The illustration below of the "PRODUCTION INDEX REPORT" is an excerpt from actual well data. It demonstrates the use of sponge core data to differentiate between oil and water producing zones. The core intervals from depth 4624-5 feet and 4633-4 feet are examples of oil producing zones. Both have high amounts of mobile or "produced" oil. The mobile oil from the sponge contributed from 30.7% to 36.9% of the total oil recovered. This is significantly higher than the interval from 4628-30 is an example of a water producing interval. This zone had very little mobile or "produced" oil.

Sponge Core Graph

Cross Plots

Cross plots of oil saturations to core factor can be used to determine the amount of flushing or washing of the core by the mud filtrate during the coring process. If there was excessive flushing, sponge core data would be of little value to locate mobile oil productive zones. A cross plot of oil versus core factor of a badly flushed core would show that as rock quality improved, oil saturations would decrease. In these illustrations the mud properties were planned and well-controlled at wellsite. Consequently there was little flushing of the core in the better samples. In the illustration, as the rock quality improves, the oil saturation line levels indicating that the oil was not washed out of the better quality rock.

The above illustrations alone do not tell the entire story. Throughout the entire cored interval of the wells there were several oil versus water productive intervals and other oil-water contacts. This was due to the heterogeneity of the San Andres formation. Sponge core data is of particular benefit in areas or formations where electric logs or offset well information has been inconsistent or unreliable in locating oil productive intervals.

Cost Effective

The DOWDCO sponge core can be cost effective at wellsite and throughout the entire productive life of the well. By using sponge core data to set perforations, salt water production and disposal can be reduced to a minimum. Reducing the cost of salt water disposal and maximizing oil production can very quickly offset the small additional cost of sponge coring.
