A BRIGHTER CHRISTMAS

Atlas Missile Might Be First Vehicle To Put Man Into Space

BERNARD GETS NINETY DAYS

BERNARD GOLDFINE

BOSTON (UPI) — Industrialist Bernard Goldfine today was sentenced to three months in prison for contempt of court.

Federal Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. indicated he would have sentenced Goldfine to a longer prison term, but said a longer term might make the textile tycoon a victim of "political discrimination."

The judge said a longer term, such as one year in prison, would give the President the right to deny early parole.

Mildred Paperman, Goldfine's chief assistant and secretary, received a 10-day sentence.

Both were convicted Friday of refusing to obey Wyzanski's order to deliver business records to Internal Revenue Service agents prior to a Dec. 8 deadline.

Imprisonment was deferred for both until Jan. 7. Wyzanski said he purposely delayed imprisonment to allow both Goldfine and Miss Paperman to spend the Christmas holidays at home and to allow them time to appeal their convictions.

The judge said a prison term of one year for Goldfine would give an "executive the right to deny you the possibility of release." This was an obvious reference to Goldfine's role in the political storm last summer which led to the resignation of White House staff chief Sherman Adams.

Adams admitted receiving gifts and favors from the Boston millionaire but denied that he had attempted to influence government agencies with which Goldfine was having difficulties.

Goldfine was charged with contempt of Congress last week for refusing to answer questions before the House subcommittee on

Satellite Exceeds Fondest Hopes Of US Scientists

By CHARLES W. CORDDRY
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The giant Atlas missile, already performing brilliant communications job as a satellite, appeared likely today to become the U. S. vehicle to put a man into space.

The success of the Atlas satellite, launched into orbit Thursday night, in transmitting and relaying messages from the earth apparently exceeded the fondest hopes of military scientists.

It received seven copies of President Eisenhower's Christmas message at the same time Sunday from ground radio stations and successfully beamed them back to earth.

The seven teletypewriter signals were transmitted from the station at Ft. Stewart, Ga. The Defense Department said the station received excellent teletype copy back from the four-ton satellite.

The experiment was repeated, with variations, by other stations at Corona, Calif., Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and Fort Huachuca, Ariz. Messages were fed into the satellites recorder and then broadcast back on a "triggering" signal from the earth.

The Defense Department said that the experiment was "another of the various types of communications tests intended to be conducted" during the expected 20-day life of the artificial moon.

Roy W. Johnson, director of the Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency, said further experiments using the Atlas would give this country communications facilities "far greater than we have now."

Spaceman Project

It was Johnson who tagged the Air Force missile for use in the spaceman project. He said the Atlas "undoubtedly would be the vehicle to put a man into space" when the United States reaches that point.

FIVE INJURED IN TWO SUNDAY ACCIDENTS

Five persons, involved in two separate automobile accidents, were rushed to Highland General Hospital here Sunday.

Suffering minor injuries in a two-car smash-up which occured about 1:30 a.m. Sunday at the intersection of Murphy and Finley streets, were J. D. McFatridge, 836 Gordon; and Raymond Estrada of Canadian.

McFatridge was a passenger in a 1953 sedan being driven by Airman W. V. Trask, 28 of El Paso. Damage to the Trask vehicle was estimated at $725. Estrada was riding in a 1946 sedan being driven by Pedro M. Torrez, 23, of Canadian. Damages to the Torrez auto were set at $350.

Both Torrez and Trask were issued tickets by investigation officers for exceeding a safe speed and failure to yield the right of way respectively.

BOND IS DENIED

Pampa Youth Is Charged For Rape

JIMMY D. REXROAT
...held in Amarillo

AMARILLO — Rape charges were filed here Monday morning against a Pampa teen-ager, Jimmy D. Rexroat, 19, who confessed raping one woman and trying to rape two others, all within a few hours during a wild outbreak of drunken violence late Saturday night and early Sunday morning.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Mrs. Bonita Potter, Rexroat was denied bond. He waived examining trial.

Rexroat was denied bond, District Attorney Wayne Bagley stated, adding that the youth's case will in all probability be reviewed by the Potter County Grand Jury on Dec. 30.

Besides the charge of rape, the grand jury might review two possible charges of assault with attempt to rape and two break - in counts, and return indictments on Dec. 30.

The case will then be set for trial in all likelyhood on the call of docket here on Jan. 26.

Rexroat was arrested by three Potter County sheriff's department officers early Sunday morning Sheriff Paul Gathier pointed out here to newsmen Monday morning.

Rexroat, who lives at 1020 Neal Road in Pampa, came to Amarillo Saturday with two other youths. He formerly lived in Amarillo and is now employed by an oil well supply company.

The woman Rexroat confessed raping was the last one he attacked Saturday. She was asleep and was awakened by a person pounding on the door. Rexroat told police it was he.

He said he smashed the glass in the woman's front door, reached through the hole in the glass and turned the latch. Then he went in.

Blames Drinking

"I won't hurt you or your children if you cooperate," the woman said he told her. She said she clutched her baby to her breast as he entered her dark bedroom.

As he left by the back door, the woman said, she asked him to turn on the light. He did, but she wasn't able to see his face. After Rexroat confessed, his pregnant wife and his father and mother visited him in jail.

"The only explanation I can give is that I was drinking," he said.

Rexroat said his first attempt upon a woman was on the Amarillo-Borger highway. He and two other young men were sitting in a parked automobile when a young woman drove by.

He said he knew her; she was from Lubbock and on her way home after going to a wedding in Borger. He ran her down, forced his way into her automobile, struggled with her and cursed her, but she got away.

Attacks Housewife

Half an hour later, he said, he kicked in the back door of a northeast Amarillo home and attacked a 26-year-old housewife. She also struggled and he tore off nearly all her clothes, trying to make her submit.

Finally, she broke away and dashed into her yard, screaming for help. Neighbors poured out of their homes to help her and her attacker barely managed to escape two men who chased him down an alley.

Two hours later, two blocks away he caught the young woman alone in her home with her children.

Rexroat's two friends also were arrested. The other two were charged with being drunk.

Whoopee Look What I Got Dad!

A roomful of toys never disappeared faster than they did here Sunday afternoon as an estimated 400 needy youngsters scrambled for hundreds of free Christmas toys at the V.F.W. — American Legion Hall.

Legion officials called the crowd of youngsters, most of them from underprivileged families — the largest ever.

The wide-eyed and laughing boys and girls began crowding the Legion Hall shortly after 4 p.m. and by the time Santa Claus put in an appearance at 5:30 they were getting more restless by the minute.

Before the rush for toys began Sheriff Rufe Jordan led a prayer for a brighter Christmas, and a quartet of Junior Red Cross girls led the youngsters through a number of Christmas songs.

Most of the toys, donated by numerous Pampa families, were re - painted and repaired by Pampa firemen. The annual toy-giving event was established to make Christmas brighter for Pampa's underprivileged youngsters.

Contract Let For County Office Building

W. L. Stark, head of the Pampa Home Improvement Co., was awarded a county contract this morning to build the new county office annex.

Stark's bid was $61,396. His bid was about $2,500 lower than the next lowest bid by the Hogan Construction Co.

County Commissioners, meeting in the county court room, opened bids from six construction companies. Bidders included the Lyle K. Stout Co.; Timmons Construction of Amarillo; Doyle Construction of Amarillo; and the Pre-Fab Structural Co., also of Amarillo.

The Hogan bid was $63,909, and the Stout bid was $65,839.

NINE KILLED IN COLLISION

BELLE GLADE, Fla. (UPI)—Excessive speed at a dangerous curve has been blamed for a two-car collision which killed nine persons and hospitalized another.

The Highway Patrol said a car containing nine Puerto Rican laborers was going 85 to 95 miles an hour early Sunday when it spun out of control and slammed into a car driven by an off-duty policeman.

Woman May Have Been Buried Alive

By JOHN D. KENDALL
United Press International

VENTURA, Calif. (UPI) — Police said today Mrs. Olga Duncan, 30, an expectant mother may have been buried alive by two men allegedly hired to kill her by her husband's mother.

The body of the attractive Canadian nurse was uncovered Sunday in a shallow, hand-dug grave in a construction area about 10 miles north of here. She was clad only in a nylon bathrobe.

Augustine Baldonado, 25, who broke down under intensive questioning, told police Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan, 54, hired him and Luis Moya, 22, for $6,000 to kill Olga. He led police to the grave, covered by six inches of dirt.

"Maybe she was alive when we buried her," he said. "I don't know. We strangled her and I think we killed her before we put her in the ground, but I'm not sure."

Authorities said it appeared the bizarre case developed from a triangle between Olga, her husband, Frank, and his mother who was afraid of losing her son, a prominent Santa Barbara attorney.

Only last week the often-wed mother confessed to police that she carried out a bold plot of posing as her own daughter-in-law and getting her son's marriage annulled.

District attorney Roy Gustafson questioned Mrs. Duncan late Sunday night but he refused to say if the woman denied Baldonado's charge that she hired the two men to kill her daughter-in-law.

Moya Denies Charges

Moya denied the charges, police said. He buried his face in his hands and muttered, "I don't see why he (Baldonado) would say I had anything to do with it."

In Benito, Manitoba, Canada, Olga's mother, Mrs. Jessie Kupcyzk, was reported to have collapsed from shock and a heart attack when she learned that her daughter had been slain.

Elias Kupcyzk, 61, Olga's father, refused comment on the brutal slaying. He said he planned to leave for here shortly to arrange burial for his daughter.

Duncan was unavailable for comment.

Bus Flips; 72 Dead In Worst

OAXACA, Mexico (UPI)—A bus loaded with Christmas shoppers overturned on the Pan-American Highway 40 miles southeast of here Sunday, killing 72 persons and injuring two in the worst traffic accident in Mexico's history.

All of the victims were believed to be Mexicans.

The speeding bus overturned and plunged over a six-foot bank paralleling the road when the driver swerved in an effort to avoid two persons walking down the highway. The two pedestrians and 70 of the 72 persons aboard the bus were killed.

The only survivors, the conductor of the bus and a 15-year-old Indian girl passenger, were seriously injured.

Sixty of the bus's passengers were Indians returning from a Christmas-shopping tour of nearby Tlacolula.

The bus had a capacity of 38 to 40 persons. But since Sunday was market day in Oaxaca, dozens of extra riders climbed all over the outside of the bus, including the roof and hood—a usual sight on market days in small towns of the interior.

NOTHING TAKES PLACE OF MISSING N.Y. NEWSPAPERS

By ROBERT R. METZ
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (NEA)—With one eye on the clock and another on the near-empty newsstand, the harried New York commuter snatched up the only paper available and asked the dealer: "How much?"

"I don't think you want that," the dealer answered, "that's a scratch sheet."

The commuter's mistake was understandable, for with nine newspapers closed by a deliverymen's strike for over a week, New Yorkers were reading anything that resembled their favorite daily—and quite a few things that didn't.

A fortunate few thousand were able to pick up copies of the three Philadelphia dailies which increased their distribution to key spots in the city. The famous "out-of-town" newsstand in Times Square did a rushing business in papers from Washington, Baltimore, Newark, Springfield and Boston.

The National Enquirer, a New York weekly of somewhat unrestrained editorial content, added straight news and sports and published three times a week. The city's Spanish-language papers, El Diario and La Prensa, added a page of English news and increased their distribution by 20,000 and 10,000 respectively.

The major news magazines—Time, Newsweek, and U. S. News and World Report—sold out throughout the city.

The enterprising lads of the Harvard Crimson sent down 7,000 copies one day and gave them away in mid-town spots. And the Dallas News flew in 100 copies daily for prominent Texans in the city.

The NBC radio and TV stations in New York distributed 150,000 copies daily of a one-page news bulletin that attempted to summarize the day's top events. The New York Central handed out a mimeographed page to its commuters, but it was a rush job that was difficult to read.

All the radio and TV stations increased their news coverage by from 100 to 200 per cent, which kept the city aware of what was happening in the Berlin crisis—and how negotiations on the strike were going.

But in subways, buses and trains, most New Yorkers sat grim-faced and bored, seeing their neighbors for the first time in years, and missing very much the 5,500,000 newspapers that are distributed each day in the city.

What show or movie to see? What Christmas present to buy? What TV show to watch? These were some of the questions that went unanswered.

One enterprising department store went after customers with printed sheets slapped on subway train windows reading:

"There may be no newspapers, but there still are bargains at S. Klein's."

Other retailers bought time on radio and TV stations—where time was available—to get their sales messages across. With the Christmas shopping season on, the buyers were in the stores, but without ads to guide them they didn't know where things were and what was on sale. Mail and telephone orders fell sharply.

The producers of a new play, "The Gazebo," which opened during the strike, bought a half-hour of TV time and read the reviews that newspaper critics had written but were never printed. The big Broadway hits were not affected, since they are usually sold out months in advance. Movie houses turned to radio announcements.

TV stations stepped up their on-the-air promotion of their own shows. TV Guide was quickly sold out throughout the city.

Newspapers like The World-Telegram & Sun used radio announcements to keep their names in their readers' minds, and to remind them of what they were missing by missing their papers.

The New York Times, only paper with its own radio station, increased its news coverage using taped stories from correspondent overseas and in Washington and other U. S. cities. Working with NBC, the paper took part in an hour-long show seen in New York and Washington that summarized the mammoth Sunday Times.

WNEW, a leading independent station, invited nationally-known columnists like Bob Considine and Earl Wilson to read their columns. Other stations had announcers read the columns that never saw print in New York.

Just about the only group that benefited from the strike was the city's sanitation men. Without any newspapers, the trash-baskets of New York were a lot emptier.

PLENTY TO READ—BUT NO NEWS: Only publication resembling a newspaper available at this stand during New York's newspaper famine was the Women's Wear Daily.

Mansfield, Mrs. D. Crosby Give Birth

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI)—Dr. A. C. Meitus had a busy day Sunday—first he attended Dennis Crosby's wife while she gave birth to a son, and one hour later he was with Jayne Mansfield who also gave birth to a son.

Dr. Meitus said the two mothers and their babies were doing well at St. John's Hospital.

"It's a boy," Mickey Hargitay, a former Mr. Universe, shouted as he emerged from Miss Mansfield's bedside at the hospital. "Now we've everything we ever wanted."

Hargitay said the 9½-pound baby was named Miklos after him. He had taken his olonde wife to the hospital about nine hours before the birth. The baby was due to be born on Dec. 9, he said.

"That is rough on the nerves, waiting like that," the jubilant muscleman said. "I was positive it would be a boy but still it was a surprise."

Miss Mansfield said from her hospital bed: "I feel wonderful. He's a dream of a baby."

She has a daughter, Jayne Marie, 8, from a previous marriage.

Pat Sheehan, 26, former Las Vegas showgirl and wife of Dennis Crosby, gave birth to an 8-pound 14-ounce ooy. He was named Dennis Michael Crosby Jr.

Dr. Meitus said both Mrs. Crosby and Miss Mansfield and their babies probably would be able to go home in time for Christmas.

Ingrid Weds Millionaire

CHOISEL, France (UPI)—Ingrid Bergman, 43, defied the Italian courts Sunday in London and married Swedish producer Lars Schmidt, 41, a millionaire. They were honeymooning here today in a red roofed converted mill.

Miss Bergman and Schmidt were married in secrecy at London's old, red-brick Caxton Hall although an appeal is still pending in Italay against the annulment of her marriage to Roberto Rossellini. They flew here, their arms full of Christmas presents.

By coincidence, Rossellini was en route to Paris today to spend the Christmas holidays with Renzino Rossellini, his 17-year-old son of his first marriage.

The blonde movie star was married previously to Dr. Peter Lindstrom, a Hollywood surgeon. That marriage was shattered on the rocks of volcanic Stromboli Island off the coast of Italy when she fell in love with Rossellini while making a film.

It was eight years ago that Miss Bergman shocked the world by giving birth to a boy and announcing it was the son of the Italian director. She was still married to Lindstrom at the time. Soon afterwards she was divorced from Lindstrom and married Rossellini.

OK Pal, Fork Over My Ball

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House:

It was November before subfreezing weather made golf imposible for President Eisenhower at his Burning Tree Club in suburban Maryland just outside Washington.

A man who lives not far from one of the fairways of exclusive Burning Tree swears on a stack of old congresional records that while he was working in his yard, getting the shrubbery ready for winter, he heard a young boy cry through the trees:

"I don't care what you're president of—that's STILL my ball."

Another current story about Burning Tree where service roads run fairly close to some of the fairways. (This story incidentally originated at Palm Springs, Calif., when the President toured the luxuriant links there a few years ago.)

A man was driving along the road with the window of his car down. A golfer hit a powerful tee shot and hooked badly. His ball zoomed into the car, striking the man in the temple.

When an interne revived the man in the ambulance, the poor fellow fluttered his eyelids and murmured, "Thank you, Mr. President."

The President feels a definite sense of confinement in this chilly season when the nearby courses are too frozen for anything resembling comfortable or accurate playing. True, this is his busy season when he puts together his important mesages for the opening Congress, but here ally misses the exercise in being able to get out two or three afternoons a week.

Therein could lie a remote possibility of changing Christmas plans. Right now, his plans are to remain in the White House for a family Christmas, thence to Gettysburg for the Yuletide week and probably New Year's.

But should the weather continue to keep most sensible people indoors during their leisure hours, Augusta, Ga., still is only two hours away by plane.

Man Swims 600 Miles

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — French frogman Louis Lourmais, 38, was taking it easy today after making an unprecedented 600-mile swim down the Fraser River to prove a point.

Scarred and bruised after 17 days in the icy river, Lourmais said Sunday night he had "double proved" there was a place for frogmen in the cold, fast water of British Columbia.

Lourmais, who began his swim at Prince George, B.C., arrived at tidewater in New Westminster, B.C., Sunday morning. He was met by the provincial labor minister, Lyle Wicks, two New Westminster aldermen and a crowd of several hundred well-wishers.

He said later that when he came to British Columbia from eastern Canada 18 months ago, everyone told him the water was too cold for frogmen. He said he planned his swim down the Fraser to prove that there was a future for frogmen here.

"Nowhere in the world are there bigger sea mammals, octopi, sea weeds, sharks or crabs than off the British Columbia coast," he said. "The waters hold untold wealth in both minerals and food, but we know nothing about them. We have never studied them."

DeGaulle Elected French President

By ARTHUR HIGBEE
United Press International

PARIS (UPI) — Gen. Charles de Gaulle proved again today that he is first in the minds of his troubled countrymen by sweeping to election as president of France for a seven-year term.

De Gaulle won four out of five of Sunday's electoral college votes just as he won four-fifths of the popular vote for the constitution of his new Fifth Republic last Sept. 28.

He thus became the most powerful constitutional chief of state in France since Louis-Napoleon, who was elected 110 years ago. Louis-Napoleon later staged a cou d'etat and proclaimed himself Emperor Napoleon III.

No such stunts are expected of De Gaulle who frankly remarked last spring: "Do you think I would try to become a dictator at the age of 67?"

De Gaulle was elected president by an 81-754-man electoral college made up of assembly deputies, senators, departmental general councillors, mayors, municipal councillors, and for cities over 30,000 population, specially-designated supplementary delegates.

His opponents offered only token resistance. The Communists presented George Marrane, 71, mayor of the Paris "Red belt" suburb of Ivry, and the non-Communist left put up Albert Chatelet, a 75-year-old professor of science at Sorbonne University.

Final official figures showed De Gaulle got 77.5 per cent of the vote in metropolitan France, 81.45 per cent in the overseas departments and 97.04 per cent in the overseas member states of the French Community of Nations which he also will head.

De Gaulle received 62,338 of the electoral college ballots, Marrane 10,354 and Chatet 6,722. Unofficial returns from French Polynesia gave De Gaulle all 54 of the ballots cast there.

De Gaulle, now 68, will take office about Jan. 8.

Amarillo Has Murder, Suicide

AMARILLO, (UPI) — Amarillo police were tipped off about a murder and suicide early Sunday in one of Amarillo's best residential sections by a telephone call from Bloomington, Ill.

The call was from Mrs. Blanche Moore, sister of Clarence W. Sutton, 65. Sutton was a suicide. He murdered his wife in bed with a single-shot, .22 caliber rifle.

Mrs. Moore said he had telephoned her, "I just killed my wife and I'm going to kill myself."

Make Candy for Christmas!

FOR GIFTS, OR FOR TREATING GUESTS, here's a candy with a wonderful combination of flavors. It's a creamy fudge that calls for coconut, honey and instant coffee.

Use the same tender, flaked coconut for another interesting candy idea: Melt ½ pound marshmallows in double boiler; dip ¼ pound walnut halves into the mixture. Roll at once in flaked coconut, tinted or toasted.

COCONUT HONEY COFFEE FUDGE

3 cups sugar
2 tablespoons instant coffee
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup light cream or evaporated milk
2 tablespoons honey
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups (1 can) Angel Flake Coconut

Combine sugar, instant coffee, and salt in saucepan. Add cream, honey, and milk and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Wipe sugar crystals from side of pan with a fork wrapped in a damp cloth. Then continue cooking, without stirring, until a small amount of mixture forms a soft ball in cold water (or to a temperature of 236°F.). Remove from heat and add butter and vanilla, without stirring. Cool to lukewarm (110°F.); then beat until mixture begins to thicken and loses its gloss. Stir in coconut. Spread in lightly greased 8x8-inch pan. When cold, cut in squares. Makes about 36 pieces.

Orient-Inspired Holiday Dessert

FROM THE ORIENT COMES THIS WONDERFUL IDEA of topping fluffy vanilla tapioca pudding with the tantalizing, sweet-sharp taste of diced candied ginger. A treat at any time of year, we recommend it highly as the perfect finish to a hearty holiday meal.

CHRISTMAS PUDDING

1 egg white
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg yolk
2 cups milk
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon vanilla
⅓ cup whipping cream
Diced preserved ginger
Nuts, coarsely broken

Beat the egg white until foamy. Add 2 tablespoons sugar and continue beating with egg beater until meringue stands in soft peaks. Set aside.

Mix egg yolk, milk, quick-cooking tapioca, salt, and 2 tablespoons sugar in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a full boil (5 to 8 minutes). Pour a small amount of hot mixture gradually into meringue, blending well. Quickly stir in the remaining tapioca mixture. Add vanilla. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes; stir. Then whip cream and fold into tapioca cream. Chill. Serve in sherbet glasses. Sprinkle with diced preserved ginger and nuts. Garnish with additional whipped cream and a cherry, if desired. Makes 5 or 6 servings.

Christmas Sauce Alaska Style

Lots of pies, puddings and fruited desserts, both hot and cold are served at Holiday time. This year be very smart – be way ahead of the others and serve this Alaska style sauce atop your baked goodies.

Here it is on a familiar plum pudding for old time's sake but the sauce is equally delicious atop any dessert whether home-baked or bought. It's cool since it is frozen, has a rich creaminess and the luscious flavor of eggnog. It is a breeze to make, stores well in the refrigerator and adds more than just a festive touch to all sweets. Made with Imperial margarine for extra goodness, it is sure to compliment your dainties and earn compliments for you. Imperial makes any sauce taste better.

1 egg
2½ cup sugar
½ cup Imperial margarine, melted
¾ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Beat egg until thick and very light in color. Beat in sugar gradually. Add margarine gradually, beating constantly. Add vanilla and nutmeg. Fold in whipped cream. Turn mixture into ice-cube tray, sprinkle with fresh-grated nutmeg, and freeze until firm (several hours or overnight).

COOK'S NOOK

Deck the Halls and Crown Roast of Pork With Holly

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor

Regal, succulent, different, a royal crown roast of pork brings a special note of elegance and wonder to the family Christmas feast.

ROYAL CROWN ROAST of PORK
(Serves 6)

Twelve-rib crown roast of pork, salt and pepper, flour, quilted heavyweight foil, 6 cups hot, seasoned, mashed yams; 6 cooking apples, 1½ cups water, 2 sticks cinnamon, red food coloring, green food coloring, ¾ cup mincemeat.

Ask your butcher to prepare a festive crown roast of pork, allowing 2 ribs per person. (Be sure to place your order several days in advance.) Wipe roast with damp cloth, then season inside and out with salt and pepper. Dust lightly with flour. Line shallow pan with quilted foil, or prepare a gondola of foil and place it on a cookie sheet. Insert meat thermometer between 2 ribs of the roast. Place crown rib-ends down on heavyweight foil. Roast 30 to 45 minutes per pound in preheated oven at moderate heat (325 to 350 degrees F.) or until interior temperature registers 185 degrees F. on the thermometer.

To make fruit frills: Cut 12 strips of quilted foil 1½x8 inches. Fold in half lengthwise, then cut fringes 1-inch deep along fold. Separate foil carefully and smooth out the center crease slightly. Bring edges together without creasing fold. When placing frills on ribs, start at the top and wind around in a spiral-fashion; secure with cellophane tape.

Holly Leaves: Cut from quilted foil six holly leaves for apples.

Red and green apples: Place 2-3 cup sugar, 2-3 cup water and 1 stick cinnamon in each of 2 saucepans. Boil for 5 minutes. Tint one syrup red, the other green. Wash, peel and core apples. Simmer apples, one or two at a time in each syrup, until tender (test with toothpick), about 15 minutes. Turn and baste apples during cooking. Fill centers with mincemeat; keep warm. Boil down syrups until they fall heavily from spoon, then pour over apples.

When roast is done, invert on heated chop plate. Place quilted foil frills on ribs. Spoon mashed yams into center of crown. Surround roast with apples, alternating red and green, and tuck quilted foil holly leaves between them.

CHRISTMAS DINNER: Fresh grape and grapefruit cup, royal crown roast of pork, garnished with mincemeat stuffed apples, mashed golden yams, gravy, brussels spouts, braised baby carrots, rolls, butter or margarine, celery, black and green olives, salted nuts, peppermint chocolate chiffon pie, coffee, tea, milk.

Banana Ambrosia Says "Happy Yule"

As many a Southerner can tell you, Ambrosia practically comes right out and says "Merry Christmas" to you. If you've never actually made Ambrosia, this Christmas might be a good time for you to discover how good it is. The modern version of Banana Ambrosia is so easy to do, that it isn't necessary to save this dessert for once-a-year festivities. It involves no cooking and no elaborate preparations. Banana Ambrosia is simply a matter of peeling and slicing bananas and oranges and arranging the slices in layers, sprinkling with sugar and topping with coconut. It should be made an hour or so before serving so that the delicate banana flavor can properly blend with the orange and coconut.

To give your Banana Ambrosia a truly festive look, arrange it in a pretty cut glass dish, or another favorite serving piece. Traditionally, in the South, it is accompanied by tiny wedges of fruit cake.

BANANA AMBROSIA
2 medium-sized oranges
2 ripe bananas
½ cup shredded coconut
Sugar (optional)

Peel and slice oranges and bananas. Arrange alternate layers of orange and banana slices in a large shallow dish. Sprinkle each layer with sugar, is desired. Top with shredded coconut. Chill about 1 hour before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

HOME Pointers

Lend distinction to your holiday gifts by using colorful, strong materials not usually thought of as gift wrappings.

Some of the newer drawer linings are excellent for this purpose. The decorative covering material called Marvalon is especially easy to work with because it is tear- and water-resistant. It comes in a variety of smart colors and patterns.

Swedish Meat Balls In Chafing Dish Form Relaxed Service for Open House

Let a buffet table be the pivot around which your holiday party revolves.

It's a lot less demanding than the more formal settings. In fact, with this relaxed kind of service you don't need your most elegant china and linens.

In recent years the trend has been to serve guests in this manner, where simple pottery dishes, paper napkins and sturdy mugs or glasses are more fitting.

No set arrangement for a buffet table is required either. Just be sure there is an orderly placement of tableware so that guests can serve themselves conveniently.

Arrange small stacks of plates and napkins at both ends of the table too, to eliminate unnecessary tends to overshadow the food. Keep it low and simple — a few reaching.

Avoid a large centerpiece which Christmas balls or holly leaves should do.

Last, even though you limit your menu to a few choice foods, try to introduce one hot and hearty dish that will meet with general approval.

It could be these succulent, little Swedish meat balls. They are simple to serve. With a chafing dish or electric skillet they can be kept at serving temperature throughout the festivities. Just spear them with handsome picks and keep the paper napkins handy for the rich gravy is a bit messy.

SWEDISH MEAT BALLS
IN CHAFING DISH
(8 to 12 servings)

1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground prok
¼ cup minced onion
¾ cup soft bread crumbs
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon salt; dash pepper
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
Butter for frying
GRAVY:
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups consomme
½ cup light cream
Salt and pepper to taste

Have meatman grind the ground beef and pork together twice. Saute onion in a little butter until golden. Combine all ingredients for the meat balls, mixing with your hands to achieve a smooth mixture. Add a few drops of water if necessary to keep mixture moist. Form into balls about the size of a walnut, using as little pressure as possible. Brown meat balls evenly in butter in large, heavy skillet, then remove balls and make gravy.

For gravy, melt butter and gradually add flour, stirring to a smooth paste. Add consomme gradually, stirring constantly to avoid lumps. Slowly add cream and seasonings. Bring to a boil. Return meat balls to gravy, cover and simmer 40 to 60 minutes.

When ready to serve, reheat balls in gravy and pour into chafing dish. Insert a pick into each ball.

Nearly 2,000 species of shrimp exist.

Matter of FACT

During the American Revolution the name "cowboy" was given to some American Tories who stole from the colonists. No one knows when the term was first applied to men whose work was tending cattle. It has, however, become the popular name for men who take care of cattle, particularly on western ranches.

FURR'S

DEAR ABBY...

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am so ashamed of myself I could just die. I just sent my 10-year-old daughter to school without breakfast because she was slow getting dressed. I told her I didn't care if she ever came back. It all started when she didn't put her clothes out and couldn't find anything in the morning and was almost late for school. I acted like a maniac, screaming and banging things. I said horrible things to her and pushed her out the door. When she left I sat down and cried like a baby. I am miserable. I've done this before and promised myself I wouldn't do it again, but here I am! Are there other mothers who act like that. What can I do to help myself, Abby?

SAD MOTHER

Dear Sad: If it is any comfort to you, you are not alone. I suggest you seek professional help. A good doctor could teach you how to relax, control your temper and live agreeably with your family.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 16 years if you can call this a marriage. He is a husband six days a week but on Saturdays he is not married at all. He goes off early in the morning with his shaving kit and I don't see him until church time Sunday mornig. He puts 200 miles on his car and who knows where he went? He says marriage is a JOB and everybody gets one day off a week from his job and Saturday is his day off from his marriage. Am I crazy or is he?

SIX-DAY WIFE

Dear Six: Marriage is a seven-day-a-week job and any man who can talk his wife out of a "day off" from his marriage could sell sand to the Arabs.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband retired six years ago our three married daughters urged us to move to the city where they live. We have never been invited to any of their homes when they've had guests for cocktails, dinners or an evening. We evidently don't "fit in" with their friends. We are very much in demand however as "sitters" but it never occurs to them to invite us to their homes as "guests." This situation has hurt us both badly.

DO NOT FIT

Dear Do: If you don't "fit"—don't "sit."

DEAR ABBY: You hear from many men whose wives do not understand them, but I am one man who doesn't understand his wife. She attended summer school last year and became acquainted with a foreign student. She has invited him to make our home his home away from home, and I think things have gone too far. He calls my wife, "Honey" and "Dear" and this is all covered up with a mother-son relationship. She is old enough to be his mother. I am not suggesting that anything out of line has taken place, but I want to be sure it doesn't. Should I bar him from our home? We've been wed 23 years.

HUSBAND

Dear Husband: Your wife may be old enough to be his mother, but this lad is old enough to get along WITHOUT a mother. Ask your wife to introduce him to someone his own age and call the friendship to a halt.

Confidential to "Hep Cats": If mutual fidelity in marriage is "SQUARE" when you "tie the knot" I recommend the SQUARE KNOT.

For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this paper. Enclose a self - addressed, stamped envelope.

If you want a collection of Abby's best letters and answers in one book, ask your bookdealer to get "DEAR ABBY" for you.

MATURE.PARENT

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE

The staid little eastern seaboard town, my newspaper said, had been aroused by outbreaks of teenage drunkenness, "sex parties" and hooliganism. It told its police to get the situation under control.

Late one night a police officer spotted a loitering youth who should have been home in bed. Saying so, he got a "lot of lip." So he bundled the boy into the patrol car and drove him home.

When he got there, the boy's moter was outraged. She said, "My son doesn't do wrong things. You have no right to bother him."

What she meant was "You have no right to bother me."

Boil down all the learned studies on juvenile delinquency by psychologists, social workers, probation officers and sociologists — and they all add up in the end to parents who say, "You have no right to bother me."

If, like the young loiter's mother, we reject aid indignantly, we need to know that we are claiming absolute self-righteousness.

Johnny has not ridden his bike over the neighbor's lawn because our perfect training has rid him of all carelessness.

Nancy couldn't possibly have been seen at that road - house because our example of respectability has been flawless.

Janey couldn't have called the other little girl dirty names because our lessons in "nice talk" have been so well taught.

Parents' unconscious need to present an appearance of virtue to themselves is what forces them to close their eyes to children's faults — and makes all correction of them impossible.

A prison chaplain once said to me, "Usually a criminal's mother says only one thing to me. She tearfully protests, 'Why is Billy here? He was always a good boy.' Yet on my desk is the record which demonstrates that Billy has been a bad boy for a long, long time."

This blindness is considered the beauty of maternal love.

It isn't beautiful and it isn't love. It just says, "My child is perfect because I'm so perfect."

And I wish that cheap poets and songwriters would stop sentimentalizing such arrogant nonsense.

HOME FOR HOLIDAYS

Five young cowhands from Cal Farley's famous Boys Ranch will be spending the Christmas holidays in Pampa. They are, left to right, Doyle Morris, Jimmie Schmidt, Gordon Brooks, Charles Morris and Duane Turner. Boys Ranchers are encouraged to keep whatever home ties they have, and since the boys especially want to see their relatives at the Christmas season, arrangements are made each year for them to go home. Many of the 250 boys who call Boys Ranch their home have no actual homes of their own, and some of these go with buddies who do have homes, or with people from the Top 'o Texas area with whom they have become acquainted. Those who have no place at all to go are taken on a trip by the Ranch so that they, too, will have something to talk about at the end of vacation. The youngsters will spend the holiday season here and return to the Ranch on January 3.

Policy On Labor Vague Like Musical Chair Ground Rules

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The policy of the Eisenhower administration on big, rich and ambitious organized labor seems to be somewhat vague, like the ground rules for playing musical chairs or, maybe, squat tag.

Between the administration's labor policy and squat tag there is another resemblance—all hands can get into the act at once. For example: Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield was in New York the other day speaking before an assembly of manufacturers about what he called the reckless wage and political demands of a few union leaders.

Summerfield also discussed the problem of currency inflation which began under FDR, continued with Harry S. Truman and is being carried on, more slowly, under President Eisenhower. Summerfield said one of the causes of inflation "is found in the demands of union bosses—the new monopolists—for wage increases not warranted by productivity gains."

Urge Antitrust Principle

Summerfield continued:

"To prevent the extension of these inflationary wage increases, we need legislation to restore democracy and responsibility in our labor unions, to curb the present powers of the union dictators, and, no less necessary in the public interest, to redress the balance of power as between unions and management.

"The principle of antitrust (the Sherman Act) should be applied . . .to this labor-boss monopoly. America today teeters on the precipice of a labor-bossed Congress. I think it is high time that the American people demand that the political activity of organized labor be brought within reasonable bounds, and clearly governed by law."

The question arises, for whom was Summerfield speaking and, further, will he take that bold stand when the Cabinet shortly considers the labor sections of Eisenhower's message to the new Congress on the state of the nation? Another question: If Eisenhower's message rejects absolutely—which it surely will—Summerfield's call for bar-knuckled labor legislation, what will Summerfield do? Will the postmaster general seize his hat, resign from the Cabinet and return to Michigan to see first hand how Democratic Gov. G. Mennen (Soapy) Williams and Walter P. Reuther are doing?

How to Keep in Line

Summerfield could leave now for equal cause. Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell challenged and repudiated the postmaster general's labor policy the moment it appeared. Mitchell said Eisenhower would make his own labor policy.

That is reasonable enough. But, after the President has made his policy, how will he keep his Cabinet associates in line? Mitchell and Summerfield are so far apart on labor that one of them might as well be on the moon.

Perhaps Eisenhower and Summerfield are less far apart although not likely. Eisenhower did say during the campaign in California that corrupt unions should be fumigated. He did not repeat that line, however, when he campaigned in New York — tip-toed through New York, as one reporter put it. Nelson A. Rockefeller, running then for governor, pointed up that omission when asked about the fumigation remark. Rockefeller said he would not have used the word.

Whisper, Lack Of Undies Make MM!

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Marilyn Monroe, back in New York after completing a new movie, may go down in filmland annals as one of the great philanthropists of Hollywood history.

It wasn't her money, but thanks to Marilyn's chronic tardiness, the cast and crew of "Some Like It Hot" earned twice as much as expected.

Joan Shawlee, a buxom blonde with a flair for off-beat humor, is indebted to Marilyn for providing three months work instead of the scheduled month and a half.

"I was putting thousands of dollars in the bank" Joan grinned. "I didn't mind all the delays, but everyone else was infuriated.

"Marilyn's working habits bought me a new car, a new house, furniture and some new dresses. Besides all that, I watched her like a hawk and learned more things than I could in a drama school."

Plays Orchestra Leader

Joan plays the leader of an all-girl orchestra in the picture, and most of her scenes were played with the four-alarm glamour girl.

"When I say I studied Marilyn, I meant I wanted to learn how to become a woman, not an actres," Joan laughed. "Three big reasons for her success are her whispering voice, her helplessness and lack of underwear.

"When you speak in a whisper everybody has to get close to you so they can hear what you're saying. It makes for intimacy. When you're helpless all the men in the vicinity break their necks trying to help a girl out. And I've thrown out all my lingerie. That keeps everything wiggling at the same time."

Joan said Marilyn was friendly, but distant on the set.

"She was very sweet to me, but she never knew who I was—even after we'd worked together for three months.

Had Hair Trouble

"Sometimes she forgot who Jack Lemmon was, too. One day he walked up and said, 'good morning Marilyn, how are you:' Marilyn answered, 'yeah.'

"My hair was the same color as Marilyn's when the picture began. But she made sure I changed it. After nine bleaches and four different color experiments almost all my hair fell out. It was 7 inches long when I started, and I ended up with only an inch and a half.

"I was afraid of becoming a female Yul Brynner.

"I'll never forget the day our director, Billy Wilder, tried to tell her how to play a scene. Marilyn said, 'please don't talk to me. I'll forget my lines.'

"Billy walked away muttering, 'don't mind me, I'm only the director.'

Joan paused briefly, frowning.

"Gee, I don't want to sound critical of Marilyn" she exclaimed. "I'm deeply grateful for all the money she helped me make.

"The next time she comes out here to make a movie I just hope I'm in the cast. A few more like 'Some Like It Hot' and I'll be able to buy a flock of apartment houses."

Retiring Teacher Still Has Memories Of Letter To Santa

By H. D. QUIGG
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sixty-one years ago Virginia O'Hanlon wrote one of the world's most famous letters. In it she asked the question—is there a Santa Claus?

"I am ready to retire," said the gentle, blue-eyed lady today. She spoke with only the slightest quaver, in sure, cultured cadences.

"Next July, I will be 70 years old, and I've been teaching in the New York public schools roughly 43 years. I intend to finish out the spring term. Retirement is mandatory at 70."

One short half-term as a junior principal and then retirement in a quiet apartment in Manhattan, the island that has always been home for Mrs. Lura Virginia O'Hanlon Douglas. She was born in Manhattan July 20, 1889, not far from the spot where Clement Clarke Moore wrote the verse that begins "'Twas the Night Before Christmas."

Her father, Dr. Philip F. O'Hanlon, a physician and surgeon, later moved his family uptown into a four-story brick house with brownstone trimming at the front. Her room had a fireplace ing on Christmas Eve. The tree was in the parlor downstairs.

Uses Old Ornaments

"One of my earliest memories is of the sound of the bells on the sleighs outside — a lovely sound in winter—I'm sorry children don't hear them now," she said. "And I still have the old-fashioned ornaments we used on our Christmas tree. They are used to help decorate the tree of my seven grandchildren every year."

One day, when Virginia O'Hanlon was eight, she came home from Public School 93 with word that some of her little friends were saying there is no Santa Claus. She put it squarely up to her father.

"My dear father was always a great pal of mine. I felt he was being equivocal in the way he was answering—he wasn't saying yes with conviction, and he wasn't saying no. I told him I was going to ask our family newspaper, the Sun. Papa was delighted—it was an out for him."

Virginia got a sheet of the family's best heavy writing paper. She went to her father's second-floor office, took a stub pen, and wrote a letter starting "dear editor" and ending: "Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?"

Editorial Widely Used

The answer, an editorial written by Francis B. Church in the Sun, has been reproduced all over the world and is held to be the most famous editorial article ever written.

"My family used to write the Sun about such things as pronunciation of words," she said, "and when I wrote my letter I never expected there'd be anything but a yes or no answer.

"Our first word of the editorial came when a lovely gentleman, Mr. Matthews, an officer of the Actor's Fund, met my father and said: 'Did you see today's answer to Virginia's letter?'"

The famous answer assured Virginia, that there is indeed a Santa Claus—"he exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist... thank God he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

Oil Man Holding 'Guarded Optimism' For '59 Prospects

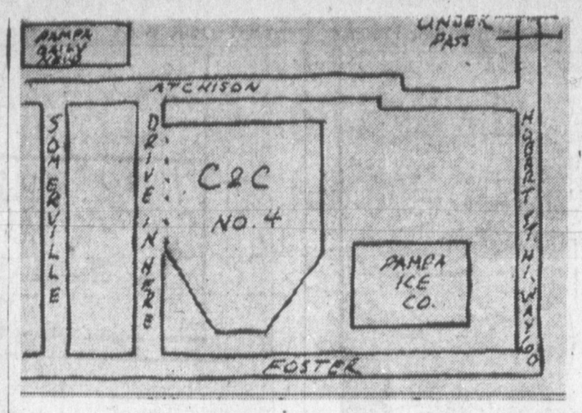

HOUSTON (UPI)— A top domestic oil man has stated he looks forward to industry prospects in 1959 with "guarded optimism."

L. F. McCollum, president of Continental Oil Co., said the industry's situation has improved because of the business recovery and the improved balance between inventories and demand.

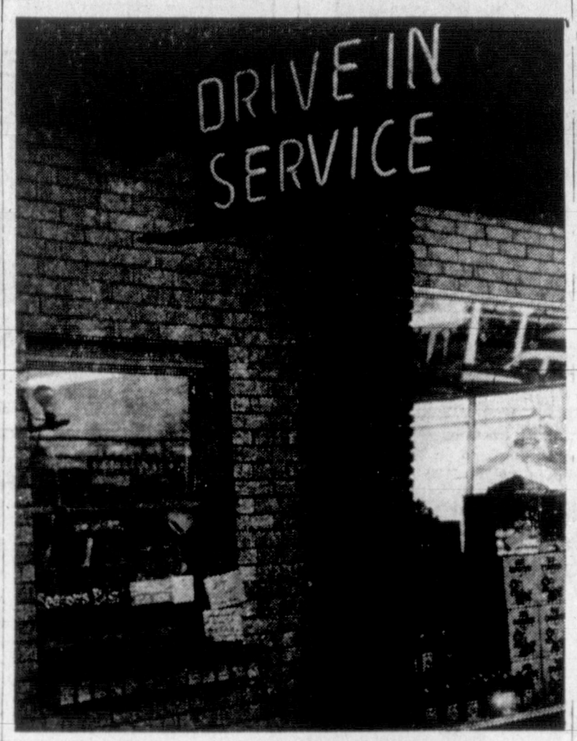

In a year-end statement he predicted a demand increase of 4 to 5 per cent in 1959. Combined with cessation of inventory liquidation and adequate restraints on imports, this should permit domestic crude oil production to increase about 7 per cent, he said.

McCollum listed as the industry's most outstanding accomplishment of 1958 the reduction in inventories to more workable levels.

He noted that largely as the aftermath of the Suez crisis total inventories on Jan. 1, 1958 were 62 million barrels of 8 per cent above the 1957 level. By the end of November inventories of crude oil and refined products were 35 million barrels or 4 per cent below the 1957 level, he said.

FIRE VICTIM'S PARENTS BELIEVE 'GOD'S WILL'

By MARGUERITE DAVIS
United Press International

CHICAGO (UPI) — "God's will be done."

These are the worlds, not "Merry Christmas," heard most often this holiday season in the Our Lady of the Angels parish, where 89 children and three nuns perished in a school fire Dec. 1.

Parents now take what comfort they can from their church's condolence, "It was God's will."

Tradesmen say that is what they hear most often when the grief-numbed parents discuss the fire.

This reporter spent a day in the West Side community which still mourns its dead, and never once heard a Christmas greeting.

No Holiday Tinsel

A little shop is doing a comparatively brisk business in "thank you" cards, but there isn't much demand for Christmas tinsel.

Mothers whose children never again will come home from school like to stop in at the shop. They inquire about the proprietor's son, critically hurt in the fire, and hear the report, "still critical." They choose a card or two at the section devoted to "thank you for your sympathy" messages, and then leave.

Other years, merchants have decorated the streets with holiday streamers, but not now.

It was easy to find the manager of the ten cent store in the Our Lady of the Angels parish. Business dropped for the first time this year the week of the fire, he said, and never has recovered.

The record player in a neighborhood tavern is mostly silent. The proprietor said business has dropped from $80 a day to $5 or $10, "if I'm lucky."

No Bitterness Apparent

Streamers of black and purple frame the American Legion Alamo Post No. 885. Two of the post's three Christmas parties have been cancelled. The third is scheduled only because it also is a benefit for the poor.

Masses formerly held in the school chapel have been transferred to the neighborhood movie theater. The manager, of the Lutheran faith, is on hand each Sunday morning in time to open the theater for the 8:15 o'clock Roman Catholic mass.

Employes remembered the children more by face than name.

"That pretty little girl I scolded for running," the candy counter concessionaire said, her eyes bright with tears. "She's never come back."

The ticket seller recalled how she watched terrified mothers race past the theater toward the burning school.

"I pray that no one will be bitter," she said.

If there is bitterness, it is not apparent.

"It was God's will."

180 Texans To Die Over Holidays!

AUSTIN (UPI)— Violent death will claim the lives of 180 persons in Texas over the Christmas-New Year holidays, beginning Dec. 24, the Department of Public Safety has predicted.

The forecast compares with an actual death count of 203 persons, two less than the prediction, over the 12-day holiday period last year.

Of the 180 violent deaths anticipated this season, 95 were expected to involve traffic accidents. This compared with a traffic toll of 102 last year.

For the nine-day period starting next Wednesday, DPS Statistician N. K. Woerner, estimated 46 persons would be victims of homicide or suicide, and 39 others would die in non-traffic accidents. This would be in addition to the 95 statistically doomed on the streets and highways.

Col. Homer Garrison, Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, said all available state police will be assigned to the highways.

In his orders to patrol commanders, Garrison cut out off-duty days for all traffic personnel. In addition, the regular patrol force will be supplemented by patrolmen from the DPS license and weight division, as well as the motor vehice inspection division.

For Texans planning a holiday trip on the highways, Garrison suggested:

"Allow plenty of time in the schedule for rest stops, coffee breaks, heavy traffic and bad weather. Do not drive while fatigued, sleepy or tipsy, and avoid night driving if possible."

Students Get Chance To Die For AGVA

NEW YORK (UPI)—College students are getting a chance to do-or-die for dear old AGVA.

The American Guild of Variety Artists, a union for professional entertainers, launched a drive recently to enroll college - based groups that are paid for entertaining on commercially-sponsored shows.

In four months, AGVA has enrolled four grous: The 30-member Purdue University glee club, now called the Collegiate Singers; the Blue Bells, another Purdue vocal group; the 30-voice Columbus boy choir of Princeton, N.J., and the 30-voice Tuskegee Institute choir of Tuskegee, Ala. Agva charges $50 per member as an initiation fee, plus percentages of pay.

The other entertainment unions, American federation of Musicians, Actor's Equity, American Guild of Musical Artists, and the American Federaiton of Television and Radio Artists, are not pursuing the college entertainer, a United Press International survey showed.

In explaining his union's unique approach, AGVA National Administrator Jackie Bright said, "many glee clubs appear at affairs in which tickets are sold and money is paid, thereby depriving our members of work. We're not interested in enrolling college groups that entertain only at college functions. It's the ones that are more professional and commercial that we are going after."

Ike, Mamie To Spend Christmas At White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President and Mrs.. Eisenhower will spent a quiet family Christmas at the White House.

They expect to go to their Gettysburg, Pa., farm later, possibly the next day, and remain through New Year's Day.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the President and Mrs. Eisenhower, as they did last year, chose to remain in town on Christmas so that aides and newsmen who must accompany them can spend the day at home with their families.

Joining the President and Mrs. Eisenhower around the White House Christmas tree will be their son, Maj. John Eisenhower, his wife, and their four children, David, 10, Barbara Anne, 9, Susan, 6, and Mary Jean who will be 3 Sunday.

TOKYO (UPI) — The imperial household has announced that Crown Prince Akihito's marriage to Michiko Shoda, the pretty, 24-year-old daughter of a flour-mill executive, will take place in the spring.

Most adults of the shrimp family apparently spawn only once and have a life span of one year.

Panhandle Outdoor Life

By STARKEY WHITEHORN

Getting them in the sack is one thing, while watching them on the wing is another. The dog points, you walk up, flush the covey and empty the gun and how many birds are down?

It isn't so bad to draw a blank once in a while but finally it will cause a violent man to cuss a little whenever all the blame is placed upon him and he can't do anything in the way of killing a bird on the wing. After all, if the legal limit is 12 quail and the breadwinner is out to bring home game to show his wife and children, he is under a strain if he can't hit the side of a barn.

There are always several factors that enter into the hunting excursion. Ideal shooting figures probably less than thirty percent. Many times the shooter is in sunflowers head high and he doesn't have a sporting chance to shoot at the birds boiling up all around him.

Sometimes the bird flies into the sun and the hunter is blinded. Occasionally a wild bird will flutter up under his feet and he is maybe lighting a cigarette or tying his shoe string. Most shooters that I have observed will shoot at quail when they well know that they haven't the slightest chance of dropping the bird. This might be brought on because sometime in the past they did make some phenomenal shots and perhaps they might be duplicated.

Blame Gun For Misses!

When an average shooter makes several clean misses or maybe just feathers the birds, it would be my guess that the gun is at fault. At least, that is what I blame poor marksmanship on. Maybe the gun is an open bore or too full. Maybe the hunter is shooting 6's instead of 7½'s. The kind of ammo used in the type of choke employed will certainly make a difference in the shooting average.

I have been shooting a 20 ga. Remington with a Cutts compensator adapted to a spreader tube and my luck has been very poor, to say the least. After consulting with a gunsmith it was learned that the spreader wasn't designed to kill birds with. I feathered many birds, which amounted to the fact that the predators cashed in on the game instead of me.

Losing cripples is humiliating to any hunter. I now have an improved cylinder choke on order which should arrive about a week before the current season is over, if the order is promptly filled. I don't intend to shoot my prize shotgun any more until it will either make a clear miss or a clear kill.

However, the gun doesn't deserve all the blame on a hunt. Once I shot exactly seventeen times consecutively without bagging a quail. I was talking to Wildlife Biologist A. S. Jackson about the luck and we decided to give the gun another chance. The first covey up Jackson dropped three out of the flight and handed the gun back to me with a smirk on his face and said, "It's more in the hunter than in the gun."

Taking to the field with gun and dogs is simple enough. Placing twelve bob whites in the bag is something else. There is more than just loading up, going hunting and coming back to make up a successful hunt. Expert marksmanship figures in on more than 50 percent of a day's hunting success.

Guessing from the average hunter's comments, it will take at least four shells per bird. Some hunters can kill twelve birds with sixteen shoots, while others will shoot more than a box and a half of shells and not kill the limit. Any time a person fires over a box of shells and comes home with less than eight or ten birds, it should be assumed that the birds are plentiful and the marksmanship is off.

Some Bird Hunting Tricks

However, some of these veteran quail hunters who know the habits of wild game can usually succeed over some of the rank amateur hunters. For example, a veteran, upland game bird hunter from Amarillo said last week while hunting on the Duncan Ranch, "I had rather hunt blue quail than bobs." When asked why, the answer was simple, "Just take three or four pie plates with you. When the blue starts to run, sail a pie plate or two in the air. The quail seem to think the plates are hawks and will freeze to the ground."

There have been very poor conditions, it seems to me, for pointing dogs to display their noses this season, with the exception of the last thirty minutes before sunset. Instead of having "choke bore" noses, the ones that have been observed have had the "spreader" type and usually end up with losing the scent altogether.

The snow, which looked so promising, didn't assist the dogs much. After all, the central part of the Panhandle is just dry even though the atmosphere seems to be damp.

The season is not more than half over and we might have moisture yet. If we don't, it will be an advantage to the birds in that the food and cover is more than bountiful and there will be a large amount of brood stock survive the hunting pressure.

With good conditions next spring and summer we can expect a terrific amount of quail next fall. If the scenting conditions improve, we will still have an adequate amount of brood stock on the ranches to furnish the Panhandle with a very high population of birds, provided the nesting season is wet. D. T. Fuller, veteran quail hunter of Borger, said the other day that dogs could smell a hundred percent better in Wheeler County than they could in Hutchinson. Farther east, with a lower altitude and possibly more moisture in the terra firma might spell the difference.

My Palamonium female, Palamandy, is due to whelp soon after the first of the year. The pups will be by Sam's Wahoo Ranger (Tex). I have bred these pups to be strictly gun dogs deluxe. Both dam and sire are tops in the bloodlines of pointerdom but are on the close working and obedient type. I have attempted to raise the kind of highclass pointing dogs that would be ideal for quail hunters to gun over. It will be sometime before we will know how many will be offered to the hunters. I intend to keep two and let Jack Woodford have two.

7 Panhandle Gridders Are All-Staters

FORT WORTH (Spl) — Seven Top O' Texas schoolboy gridders from three high schools — White Deer, Lefors and Perryton — have been given all-state recognition here on the annual Class A and AA squads picked by the Fort Worth Star Telegram.

Two members of Coach Otis Holladay's state championship Class A White Deer high outfit were named to the first all-state team and two other Bucks were given honorable mention.

Tailback Hershel Powell, and End Jeff Bearden, a pair of 17-year-old seniors, landed on the Star-Telegram's Class A all-state team. Both were instrumental in paving the way for the Bucks to snare the Class A crown, 44-22 over Elgin Saturday night.

The two Bucks gaining honorable mention all-state rating are Ronnie Cade and Tackle Scott Barnes.

Two Lefors players, Quarterback Tommy Johnson and Guard Calvan Stracner also were honorable mention all-staters.

In the Class AA balloting, Perryton's rugged tackle, Charles Lovett, received honorable mention recognition by the Star-Telegram.

TERRY BRENNAN

Terry Brennan Gets Booted As Notre Dame's Grid Coach

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame's Terry Brennan, a major college football coach at 25 and Coach of the Year at 27, was out of a job at 30 today and everyone looked to whom the Irish would try next.

Eyes first focused on Washington Redskin Coach Joe Kuharich, a South Bend native who played for the Irish in 1935-1937, was freshman coach in 1938 and makes it a well-known secret that he would like nothing better than to someday return to his alma mater.

Kuharich, however, still has four years to run on a five year Redskin contract.

Notre Dame announced Brennan's firing Sunday night and said his successor would be named soon.

According to Brennan, the successor already has been picked "from outside the present Notre Dame staff."

This would rule out former Indiana Coach Bernie Crimmins, one-time Notre Dame All-American who assisted Brennan this past season.

Board Recommends Change

Brennan first received his pink slip in a just-before-Christmas meeting of the university's faculty board in control of athletics. He said the board called him in "a couple of days ago" and told him he was through.

"I had no indication this was going to happen," Brennan said. "All they said was they were going to change the coaches. They didn't say they weren't satisfied and there wasn't any discussion."

Brennan, who took over the Notre Dame football helm when Frank Leahy retired in 1954, had been working on a year-to-year basis since 1957. In five seasons with the Irish, his alma mater, he won 32 and lost 18.

Notre Dame president Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh said he accepted the board's decision to fire Brennan "with great reluctance."

In a letter to Brennan, Hesburgh said: "As you know from our conversation of Dec. 16, the faculty board in control of athletics has recommended to me that a change be made ..."

Issues Statement

Brennan's only official answer was a 90-word statement saying it was "an honor" to have coached the Irish and expressing "appreciation" to "alumni and friends for their help."

"If they want to change things, that's their right," he said later.

Speculation immediately began that Brennan, a native of Milwaukee, might fill the football vacancy at Marquette University. This was spiked, however, by Marquette officials who said they didn't even know Brennan had been fired.

Brennan's team won six and lost four this season, losing to Army, Purdue, Iowa and Pittsburgh, while defeating Indiana, Navy, Southern California, North Carolina, Duke and Southern Methodist.

Kuharich is New Mentor

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI)—Joe Kuharich, head coach of the Washington Redskins of the National Football League and former Notre Dame guard, today was named football coach at Notre Dame, succeeding Terry Brennan.

Kuharich's appointment was announced by the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, Notre Dame executive vice president and chairman of the faculty board in control of athletics.

Release of Brennan, Notre Dame's coach for the past five years, was announced Sunday by university officials.

Father Joyce said that Kuharich has been given a four-year contract.

Since 1954 Kuharich has been coach of the Washington Redskins.

The new Notre Dame mentor, who is a native of South Bend, actually began his coaching career at Notre Dame in 1938, the year of his graduation, when he served as an assistant freshman coach while taking graduate studies.

Giants Shut Out Browns For East Division Title

By EARL WRIGHT
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — "I'm scared to death of the Baltimore Colts," Coach Jim Lee Howell said today. But how can you believe him after what his New York Giants did to the Cleveland Browns during one of the National Football League's finest comebacks?

The Giants, two games behind the Browns after the 1958 season was only five weeks old, topped their late-season surge Sunday by shutting out Cleveland in a playoff for the Eastern Division title, 10-0.

That triumph, only the second shutout recorded against Cleveland in its 13-year history, gave the Giants the right to entertain Baltimore's Western Division champions for the league crown next Sunday at Yankee Stadium. And although the Giants whipped the Browns on successive week ends to reach the championship game for the second time in the last three years, the oddsmakers backed Howell's appraisal of the Colts.

Bookies Favor Colts

The bookies immediately established Coach Webb Ewbank's high-scoring Colts 13-10 choices to defeat the Giants and win their first NFL championship.

The Giants forced Sunday's playoff when they tied for Eastern honors by edging the Browns here in a snowstorm in the final regular season game a week ago, 13-10. New York's defensive unit starred in that game. Sunday, with the players battling for a jackpot that could hit $200,000 for next Sunday's winners, New York's defense really sparked in 25-degree weather.

Roosevelt Grier, Andy Robustelli, Dick Modzelewski and Jim Katcavage on the front line and linebackers Sam Huff, Cliff Livingston and Harland Svare were the huskies who wrecked Cleveland's bid or its eighth Eastern title in nine seasons.

Cheer Defensive Stalwarts

While hundreds of thousands of TV and radio fans watched and heard the action, the 61,274 rooters in Yankee Stadium gave those defensive stalwarts and their buddies a booming cheer each time they ran off the frozen turf. The Giants limited the Browns to 24 yards on the ground and 62 in the air.

Charley Conerly, gray-haired and oldest player in the NFL at 38, scored the game's only touchdown. Pat Summerall, whose 49-yard field goal with 127 seconds to go a week ago forced the playoff, booted an extra point and a 26-yard field goal.

But defense put the Giants into the title game because the New York offense was shackled most of the game by Cleveland's defensive unit.

New York's defensive linemen charged so fast and with so much power and skill that Milt Plum and Jim Ninowski, Cleveland's quarterbacks, were thrown for losses totalling 52 yards while trying to pass. With Cleveland's passing game nullified, the Giants had no trouble stopping Jim Brown, the 228-pound Cleveland fullback who set an NFL rushing record of 1,527 yards during the season.

Muff Scoring Chance

Jim gained only a net of eight yards on seven rushes. He had minus 12 yards until he blasted 20 to the New York four late in the third period. The Browns started this drive when Gene Hickerson recovered Don Maynard's fumble of a Cleveland punt.

The whole outlook of the game might have changed if the Browns had scored then and cut New York's lead to three points. But the New York defense stopped Brown cold on his next blast from the four and threw Plum for a 12-yard loss on the next play. On the first play of the final period Plum threw directly over center. Huff was the only man in the area. He intercepted to end Cleveland's only serious threat.

After Junior Wren and Vince Costello intercepted two Don Heinrich passes in the first quarter, Conerly replaced Heinrich at quarterback. He guided the Giants from their 16 to the Cleveland 18 in 11 plays.

Conerly then started a double reverse that befuddled the Browns and produced the game's only touchdown. Conerly handed off to Alex Webster, who was moving to the left. Webster handed off to Frank Gifford. Gifford gained eight yards while racing off his right tackle, then lateraled to Conerly. Conerly ran the final 10 yards around end, galloping like a spry youngster rather than a veteran of 11 NFL campaigns.

Several minutes after Summerall booted his second-period field goal, fullback Mel Triplett of the Giants went berserk when he was gang-tackled by the Browns. He came up swinging and was thrown out of the game.

Howell said he was afraid of the Colts because "they have the best blocking in the league and a great passer in John Unitas."

Coach Paul Brown, who doesn't have to start planning for a championship game for the second time in 13 pro campaigns in two leagues, said New York's defense wrecked his Brown.

"When they shut you out, you know they must be superb," Browns said. "They simply overpowered our men individually, gentlemen."

The Giants handed the Browns their only other whitewashing in 1950. The Giants won both regular season games with the Browns that year just as they did this season but lost a playoff for the Eastern crown, 8-3.

The Giants wouldn't be denied this time, handing the Browns two defeats in a row for only the fourth time since they were organized in 1946.

Hawks Coast In NBA Race

United Press International

Clyde Lovellette, who used to grab headlines regularly, is giving the St. Louis Hawks a triple-threat scoring punch that is making a shambles of the National Basketball Association's Western Division race.

Lovellette looped in 27 points against Philadelphia Sunday as St. Louis lashed the luckless Warriors, 98-86, for a six-game lead over the Detroit Pistons. Bob Pettit's 23 and Cliff Hagan's 14 provided additional power Philadelphia couldn't overcome.

Philadelphia opened an 8-0 lead in the opening minutes and moved to 23-21 at the end of the first period. St. Louis bounced back before the half-time intermission to take a 53-44 margin. The Lovellette, Pettit and Hagan trio then checked a second-half Warrior drive to wrap up the game. Paul Arizin and Tom Gola were Philadelphia's high men with 21 points each.

The New York Knickerbockers spoiled Dolph Schayes' record-breaking day by defeating the Syracuse Nationals, 108-94, in the only other NBA game.

Harvesters Grab Big 2½ Game Lead

Lubbock and Borger both lost a pair of games last week, so the Harvesters now hold a 2½ game lead over the runnerups, in unofficial District 3-4A season standings.

The Harvesters captured the Lawton Tournament last week, by beating Duncan 62-55 and Bowie 66-56; and ran their season record to 9-0.

Lubbock dropped a 64-62 decision to Seminole and lost a 74-61 contest to Odessa. Borger lost a pair to Norman, Okla., 68-53 and 71-54. Both teams now stand 7-3, in a second-place tie.

Amarillo and Plainview, as well as the Harvesters, did well in tournaments. Amarillo won the Vernon tournament consolation, topping Snyder 54-32 and Vernon 52-43 after dropping a 47-40 decision to Quanah.

Plainview went to the finals of the Howard - Payne tourney at Brownwood before bowing to South San Antonio, 50-48.

Only Pampa has a heavy schedule this week. The Harvesters play three games. Plainview, Lubbock, Borger and Monterrey are idle all week, and only one game is on the schedule for Amarillo, Tascosa and Palo Duro.

Landry Credited With Victory

NEW YORK (UPI)—Texan Tom Landry really did the job up brown and all that the triumphant New York Giants asked today was that he do an encore against the Baltimore Colts next week.

From head Coach Jim Lee Howell on down to the water boy, the Giants all credited Sunday's 10-0 playoff victory over the Cleveland Browns to Landry, a tall, silent technical-minded ex-halfback who serves as New York's defensive coach.

"I've never seen a team play a better defensive," Howell said, "and Tom Landry was the key to the whole thing.

"Tom had Jimmy Brown defensed so well he never had a chance to go any place. I've never seen a defense so completely overpower another team that was supposed to be equally good."

In other Sunday night games, the Buffalo Bisons crushed the Cleveland Barons, 7-2 and the Rochester Americans nosed out the Providence Reds, 4-3.

'Sinister Change'

A "sinister change" in the kind of writing which is being done by college students is seen by a Princeton professor.

Prof. Willard Thorp says that many students seem no longer to be able to write their native tongue. They strive to communicate in a gibberish which the professor calls "No - English" in an article written apparently at white heat for the Princeton Alumni Weekly.

"We are now too often presented," he says, "with a kind of prose — if that is the name for it — which is inviolable. A red pencil used against it becomes as potent as a sword in a folk tale which had a spell put on it.

"Sometimes this prose resembles a bad translation from a foreign language. Sometimes it suggests that the writer has squeezed together under pressure the jagged ends of several assorted ideas. The writer of No - English is unconscious of the fact that his pages resemble nothing else under the sun. If you say to him, "This is not English. You must tear this up and try again,' he will answer plaintively 'But you know what mean, don't you?' "

We will quote only one of Professor Thorp's horrible examples of No - English but it is enough to send the language lover groping for the booby hatch exit:

"When Twain was writing Huckleberry Finn he decided to implement the voyage as a cohesive catalyst. Twain used a general local. Faulkner has a restrictivelocal, and Thoreau wrote for everybody in the universal."

There is something chillingly elusive in this student writing that bothers us. Somewhere we've heard that kind on nonsense-talk uttered with the pomposity of high authority.

We may be on the verge of tracing the source of the professor's "sinister change" in American undergraduate writing style. Was it a speech by a Madison Avenue public analysis tycoon? Was it a government directive from Washington? Was it military orders from brass to brass during World War I?

Or was it all three? Who can blame the poor college boys for intransignately implementing the gobbledegook of their elders by cohering to linguistic constructions obviously weighted with the approbation of the successful community?

Don't blame the kids. Let's set them a better example by talking plainly.

How else can we develop in future men like Milton, whose simple words still define the rules of free inquiry, of Jonathan Swift who spoke for enslaved men, or Tom Paine, whose flaming words were more useful to Washington than 10,000 soldiers?

States-Rights

Critics of the U.S. Supreme Court will renew their efforts in 1959 to pass a sweeping states-rights bill that was barely defeated last Ausust according to Congressional Quarterly, a Washington reporting agency.

Rep. Howard W. Smith (D.Va.), author of the controversial measure designated as HR 3, told Congressional Quarterly that he planned to reintroduce his proposal in January. But the Nov. 4 election, he acknowledged, had not improved the bill's prospects.

The leading opponent of HR3, Chairman Emanuel Celler (D.-N.Y.) of the House Judiciary Committee, told CQ that he would continue his efforts to "curb the Court curbers." He, too, feels that the mid-term election indicated lack of support for HR 3.

CQ's own analysis shows that the bill's proponents may have lost as many as 35 votes in the House and 10 votes in the Senate. If so, HR 3 might still pass the House in 1959, but would almost certainly be defeated in the Senate.

Rep. Smith first introduced HR 3 in 1955, after hte Pennsylvania Supreme Court had reserved the conviction of Steve Nelson under the state's sedition act of 1919. The court held that Congress, by passing the 1940 Smith Act, had prempted the field. The U.S. Supreme Court affirmed the decision in 1956, saying federal laws concerning sedition and subversion showed there was "a congressional plan which makes it reasonable to determine that no room has been left for the states to supplement it."

Smith and other critics of the court denied that Congress had intended any such thing. They differed, however, on what to do about it. Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.) backed a limited measure designed to re-validate the anti-sedition laws of 42 states rendered moot by the Nelson decision. But Smith saw the Nelson case as only a "symptom of a dangerous disease that threatened to destroy completely the sovereignty of the states."

Under the broad terms of HR 3, unless Congress expressly preempts a field of legislation or there is an irreconciliable conflict between federal and state law, 'no act of Congress shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress to occupy this field in whcih such act operates, to the exclusion of all state laws on the same subject matter."

Opponents of HR 3 argued that, if enacted, it would produce chaos in long-settled areas of federal-state relations, such as labor law and the reulation of commerce. When the bill reached the House floor July 17, 1958, Democrats split almost evenly along North-South lines. The bill passed 241-155 (D 100-109; R 141-46), with only five non-Southern Democrats voting for it.

Among the 141 Republicans who voted for the bill were 30 whose seats went to Democrats on Nov. 4. Another five GOP members whose seats will switch hands announced in favor of the bill. But of the 46 Republicans who voted against HR3, only 10 will be replaced by Democrats. Assuming that Democrats outside the South will continue to oppose HR 3, these figures indicate 30 to 35 fewer votes for the bill if it reaches a showdown in 1959.

HR 3 came before the Senate, in indirect fashion, on the eve of adjournment, when a bill similar to Rep. Walter's reached the floor. Sen. John L. McClellan, (D-Ark.) then proposed substituting the broader HR 3. A motion to table McClellan's proposal was rejected, 39-46 (D 25-19; R 14-27). But the Senate then agreed, 41-40 (D 27-17; R 14-23), to recommit the more limited bill, leaving HR 3 for dead.

The only non-Southern Democrat who opposed tabling HR 3 was Frank J. Lausche (Ohio), while J. Allen Frear (Del.) was the only Democrat outside the South who opposed recommital. But of the 13 Republican senators whose seats will be held by Democrats next year, nine opposed both motions, while only two supported both. The remaining two opposed the first motion, but supported recommital. If the incoming Democrats — all non-Southerners — stick with the party majority, then the opponents of HR 3 can count on none of 11 additional votes — enough to kill any similar measure that might still pass the House.

More than 100 billion folding paper boxes are consumed annually in the United States.

"Oysters Or Eagles?"

"Essays On Liberty," issued by The Foundation for Economic Education, Inc., has an essay on "Oysters Or Eagles?" written by the Rev. Kenneth W. Sollitt Rev. Sollitt is minister of The First Baptist Church, Midland, Mich.

The article was especially interesting to me because on my eightieth birthday I had just been presented by the Freedom Club a beautiful metallic eagle as representing the emblem of the United States.

Here is how Rev. Sollitt compares oysters and eagles:

"The oyster is endowed with a ready-made house to live in. All he has to do is to open the door of his house to take in his food and close them again to keep out his enemies. He has perfect social security. Yet he is the easiest fish in the world to catch, crush, and cook. He always ends up in the soup. So what does his vaunted security really amount to?

"The eagle, on the other hand, is peculiar among created things in another respect. When a severe storm strikes, all other birds either hide from the storm or try to fight it as long as their strength holds out. The eagle neither fights nor runs away. He simply sets his wings so the fury of the storm itself lifts him above the storm where the sun is shining, and there he remains, 'free as a bird,' until the storm is over. And only a fool would pity the eagle because he isn't an oyster.

"The road to freedom in America must begin with the decision as to what kind of freedom we want. Is it freedom from something or freedom for something?

"To our forefathers, freedom meant the right to risk capital in the hope of a return on their investments; the right of unlimited expansion of their businesses; the right to let the people, in true democratic fashion, cast their ballots in the cash registers of the nation for the businesses which served them best. Freedom to them was a positive thing, and they wisely chose the eagle as their national emblem.

"More recently we have been indoctrinated with the negative idea that by 'freedom' we mean freedom from taking risks and making our own choices and decisions. This negative attitude toward freedom exhibits itself in the very expressions we use. Instead of freedom for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, we speak of freedom from want, worry, and war (and work too, if possible). And we have been so busy fleeing from these specters that we have turned a corner and run right into their arms.

"We have sought freedom from fear so avidly that all it has gotten us is a fear of freedom. We are fast becoming a nation of oysters. Instead of following the time-honored custom of honest men and enjoying the freedom to work for, save for, and buy the things we want, we have thought that it would be easier to elect men to Congress who would give us what we want at the expense of others.

We Must Choose

"And so our new immoral freedom to take by law that which belongs to another has destroyed the old freedom to enjoy unmolested the fruits of our ingenuity and toil. First, we must decide which kind of freedom we want in the years ahead, the freedom of oysters or the freedom of eagles, the freedom of parasites or the freedom of noble men, the freedom of pirates or the freedom of honest persons.

"Second, if it is the freedom of honest persons that we hope to enjoy, we must resist all tendencies toward further socialization, for socialism is piracy. Socialism is robbing the man who earns for the benefit of the one who doesn't. It is in every sense a system of 'the survival of the sickest' because it robs the ambitious of their initiative and keeps the people who never had any initiative from developing any.

"Socialism has demonstrated four facts over and over again:

"1. You can't multiply wealth by dividing it.

"2. It does no good to get rid of a few little monopolies by creating a big one called 'government.'

"3. The government can't give what it does not first take away.

"4. It can never take away enough to supply the ever increasing demands of those who are led to believe they are getting something for nothing when they get it from Uncle Sam.

"If we want to be a free people, we must begin to do what we ought to do because we ought to do it and not just when we are forced to it. This demanding that we be forced to be good before being willing to behave, is the root of much of our trouble. Burton Parks in 'Better Homes and Gardens' put it this way: 'We'll never reach maturity in America until we get over the idea that whatever is legal is also moral.'

"No people can long maintain their freedom unless they are morally worthy of it. The only alternative to the imposition of controls from without is the exercise of controls from within. The only alternative to being forced to do what we ought, which is a form of slavery, is to do what we ought because we want to — and this is the only basis on which freedom can be built.

"Let us here dedicate ourselves to showing that covetousness doesn't pay, that liberty is never license to do as we please but only freedom to do as we ought, and that freedom is only for those who will accept the responsibilities that go along with it."

Pull Over For Siren

Robert Allen Reports:

Policy Makers Are Confused Over 'Blasters'

WASHINGTON — Inner Administration policy makers are at loggerheads over what to do about church and school dynamiters.

Decision is being reached on whether to ask the new Congress for legislation giving the federal government power to act. Justice Department authorities are encountering trouble trying to draft effective legislation.

Attorney General Rogers disclosed this backstage problem in the briefing of GOP congressional leaders on the Administration's new civil rights program. He told them more time is needed to resolve 'grave questions of policy."

Primarily these deal with federal versus local responsibility for law enforcement in this field.

Roger explained to the GOP leaders he is convinced something drastic must be done to put an end to these bombings before a school full of children is blown to bits. However, he stressed that there are two sides to the argument over the federal government's power to act in such problems.

One Justice Department group argues this issue as follows:

There have been 47 bombings in nine states in the past two years. None of these cases has come within the scope of federal criminal law. There have been no successful prosecutions in any of the states. Except in the Atlanta instance, no individual has been arrested.

These Justice officials are proposing the enactment of a law which would extend federal jurisdiction over interstate conspiracies to commit crimes against a state. If pased, this Act would enable the Justice Department to proceed in cases involving individuals outside the state where bombings occurred.

State and local authorities still would have sole power to act where only their residents are involved.

According to these Justice attorneys, authority for such a statute is contained in the commerce clause of the Constitution.

THE OTHER SIDE —The Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, however, is advising a go-slow policy.

Assistant Attorney General W. Wilson White is urging more study, because of two basic considerations:

He points out that a shift of could be used by local officials to relax their own efforts.

He also argues that a federal law might add fuel to the fire, and holds out a hope that communities may unite against violence and bigotry if given no chance to evade responsibility.

What, if anything, will be done about an anti-bombing bill will be decided by Attorney General Rogers after he again confers with GOP leaders — before the January 6 meting between the President and the bipartisan leaders of Congress.

However, one thing is certain. Whatever the Administration may decide to do, it is definite that federal legislation will be proposed by Senator-Elect Kenneth Keating (R.,N.Y.). He is preparing a bill authorizing federal action against school and church dynamiters.

EXISTING POWERS — Even under existing laws, the Justice Department can now give some help to state enforcement agencies.

All facilities of the FBI Laboratory and Identification Office are available for states that ask for such assistance. Also, consultation with skilled and experienced federal officials is readily available for the asking.

Further, where leads indicate a crime may have interstate angles, the FBI will cooperate in running them down, even though it can make no arrests.

Attorney General Rogers has deftely decided to ask Congress for two new civil rights measures. He wants to give the federal government power to issue subpenas for voting records, where investigation is called for. He also wants the life of the present Civil Rights Commission extended.

Lawyers Good Fortune Spoils The Day Slightly

Nothing in years has so spoiled my day as the story from Chicago about those two lawyers who spent $2,200 for three little paintings, and had them turn out to be worth $1,500,000.

The sporting thing to have done, on reading of the good fortune of the Chicagoans, would have been to have cried, "Well done, lawyers!" or, "Attaboy, barristers!" but I didn't even come close to such congratulatory shouts.

Indeed, the best I could muster in the way of congratulations was "Lucky bums!" and that was mumbled from a corner, where I sat sulking and pouting.

Before you brand me a poor sport, or upbraid me for my jealousy, you should know a little of my background. Then you might understand my feelings better.

To begin with, I have been looking for bargains like the one the lawyers ran across for more than twenty years. They found theirs right in their home city, probably only a streetcar ride away from their offices, while I have wandered over half the earth for mine.

I don't believe I am exaggerating when I say that I have turned over and examined half the junk in Europe and Asia looking for a hidden, overlooked treasure.

Damascus has seen me on my hands and knees, rutting under the counters of all the streets from the one named Straight, to the one named Crooked. There isn't an empty ink bottle in the Istanbul bazaar that I haven't examined in the hope of finding a dirt-encrusted, jewelled snuff box.

Every dishpan in the Rastro, Madrid's thieve market, has been turned over by me in the hope of finding a golden salver.

I wish I had a nickel for every old painting I have stared at until I was cross-eyed in Italy, Germany and Holland. Always there was the mad hope that I'd come across something like those lucky Chicagoans did.

And what do I have for my bloodhound persistence, my ever burning hope, the wear and tear on my hands and knees? Junk. Or items so close to junk that they speak the same language and dress alike.

We have a pitcher in our home now that we bought in Coblenz from a dear old lady who said she was almost positive that it was one of two of its kind in the world, and worth fifty times more than she was asking.

She was right on one count. I am sure there isn't more than one more like it, for only a fool would have gone to the trouble to make as many as three. I'll be glad to swap my "treasure" for a workable syrup pitcher with a slide top. Or a plastic measuring cup in good condition.

But I haven't given up. That story from Chicago only served to keep my hope alive. Somewhere, thrown in a corner, and covered with dust, is one of Leonardo's notebooks. And I'll buy it for ten cents, sell it for a million, and spend the rest of my life perfecting putting the seven ball in the side pocket.

Looking Sideways

By Whitney Bolton

NEW YORK — For a long time he has been what is commonly called a movie star. He is graying now, pushing well into his 50's, and he is still a movie star. In years past, he had his share of volatile escapades, transatlantic didoes and even a few not too awful miscreances. Once, he was probably the top of the heap, depending on what you consider the top of the heap. He set hearts pumping, dominated men's fashions, married a raging beauty, passed through the customary gamuts of being a male movie star. He could not have been less personally touched by the nonsense if Indians had shot arrows at him from a mile away. At all times and at all levels, he remained an Indiana boy, mud - toed from the farm.

We sat in his small house in East Side Manhattan the other night, two graying fellows with a small, cheerful fire at our feet and an unexplosive glass in our hands. It was an innocuous aperitif wine, and we sipped it like two codgers who didn't know any better than to take an afternoon wine in the late evening.

Once, and only once, since the telephone number of this prim, three-storied private house is known to about six persons outside the telephone company, the sleek, black talking instrument rang I turned, involuntarily.

"Let it ring," he said. "My claws have been blunted. I feel like an old lion in the African sun, watching the cubs tumble about. It's probably Lady Emerald Clutter, suggesting tea. Delightful woman. I mean it. But tonight I'm in a Josie Smith mood."

"Who is Lady Emerald Clutter?"

"Any New York or London or San Francisco woman with too many fur coats and too many friends and too many restless nerves shrieking for excitement. I liked her. I still do. In minescule doses of about 13 flat seconds each. But Josie Smith. That was the one."

"Who was Josie Smith?"

"She was from Canton, Ohio, and the first girl I ever bobbed for apples with. She moved to our town when her father bought the local hay, grain and feed store. She was 11 years old and every buck of that age with calluses on his heels and freckles on his face fell in love with her. Me, too. Josie was the warm afternoon sun on a millpond, she was the first ex-[illegible] of late October, the sweet, warm and unforgettable scent of fresh hay cut for a hayride, with the kids singing songs under the moon and getting themselves spiritually drunk as skunks on something we now know was beauty at its summit. Then, we just thought a hayride and songs were fun.

"I'm getting real old, real old. All I think of is the schoolyard and apple bobbing and hayrides, the wonderful Thanksgiving smell of a wood-floored, barn - sized kitchen with a scarred old table and six rickety chairs and the air like magic with the smell of a roasting turkey and a pungent mince pie, both inside a wood-stove that never roared. It purred. I remember it purred. Maybe, who knows, it didn't. I think of my mother in an apron as big as a spinnaker dashing from the water pump at the sink to the table to the stove to the cooling loaves of bread, the odor of hot yeast rising from them in waves, and she was humming 'Onward Christian Soldiers.' My father would clump in with some stove wood curled in his arms and plop it back of the stove, by the wall, and say, 'Bash Nelson is joining us, too, Ethel. Got room? Ida had her baby this morning and Bash'd starve to death unless we took him in." Did you ever smell clover so thick it was like a carpet?

"Josie grew up with the rest of us and when she was 17, her ears hurt one day and three days later she was dead. You never hear of mastoid trouble any more. Antibiotics cure it, prevent it. I haven't seen a mastoid scar in maybe 15 years. We all went to her funeral in the Baptist church there, and we went on to the grave. Something went out of our lives that day, something that was of such tearing beauty of soul that to this night it hurts me to think of it. We didn't put it that way, of course. It's taken me just over 40 years to use words like that. But that was it. No telling what Josie would have become. Maybe a farmer's wife, happy in her way. I certainly never thought I'd make much money and be known even in Indianapolis. I had mud on my toes from three years back, unless my mother grabbed me and held me under the pump outside. I've been lucky in a lot of ways. God gave me a great woman for a wife, a little money, some fame. But He held out the best. I've never liked what I do. I don't hate it, but I don't like it. Every time things get crowded around me and people shove and push, I think of Josie Smith, a face out of Heaven looking at me across a wooden tub with water in it and apples bobbing on the water."

The Doctor Says:

Dr. Edwin P. Jordan

Nearly everyone now knows that the chances of cure are better when cancer is found early. Unfortunately, there are still far too many people who delay in the presence of warning symptoms until the disease has passed the stage when it can be attacked successfully.

One reason for this is that some people seem to be terribly afraid of having the doctor tell them they have cancer and, therefore, postpone the visit, the diagnosis and the treatment until too late.

Unexplained bleeding from any of the body openings is a warning symptom. It does not necessarily mean cancer, but it certainly should not be ignored and a diagnosis should not be delayed any longer than necessary.

Pain of unknown origin which persists, loss of weight which cannot be explained by diet, any lump, and anemia are other signs which should suggest an immediate and careful examination to be sure that cancer is not present.

There is more cancer in the digestive system (stomach and intestines) than in any other one part of the body. The next most common locations for cancer are in the breasts and in the uterus or womb. Any lump in the breast is reason for examination. Any change in the nature of bleeding from the womb or any discharge also require investigation.

Cancerous growths can develop in other places, such as the lungs, bladder, kidney or the mouth. Sores in the mouth or on the tongue or the skin which do not heal quickly may be cancerous.

Lumps appearing anywhere on the body should always be suspected.

When a patient consults a physician with any of the sumptoms mentioned, examination has to be complete and careful. In some cases X-ray pictures have to be taken. A small piece of the suspected tissue or lump is often removed and examined under the microscope.

Abnormal fear of cancer is common. Some people constantly think that they have the disease, but that it just can't be found. Such unreasoning fear is called cancerophobia. The suffering which such people undergo is real and their distress is great.

In order to keep their minds as free from fear as possible, they need to be reassured periodically that they do not have cancer. Once they have been thus encouraged, they would be wise to forget their worries and return for re-examination only at such intervals as the examining physician advises.

Treatment is constantly improving and the great "breakthrough"—a medical rather than surgical method of treatment — may be closer than we think.

DICKENS BROUGHT UP TO DATE

Charles Dickens visited the United States for the first time in 1842. Describing his visit to Washington, D. C. he wrote, in his "American Notes":

'Spacious avenues, that begin in nothing, and lead nowhere; streets, mile-long, that only want public buildings that need but a public to be complete; and ornaments of great thoroughfares, which only lack great thoroughfares to ornament—are its leading features. . .

"Such as it is, it is likely to remain. . ."

If only Dickens had been somewhere near right in his prediction! But so far wrong was he that today, only a little more than 100 years later, Washington is not only full (largely of Federal employees) and running over into Virginia and Maryland but the number of Federal employees scattered over the rest of the country actually exceeds the number in the Washington metropolitan area!

It is as though a small colony of locusts kept under control pretty well for the first 150 years, had in the past 25 or 30 years, swarmed out to become a veritable plague on the whole country.

If Dickens could return to Washington today, he might revise his "Notes" somewhat as follows:

"Spacious policies, that begin in nothing, and lead nowhere; deficits, mile - long; public buildings, large and numerous, and with Federal underlings replete; and ornaments of great statesmanship, which only lack great statesmanship to ornament — are its leading features. Such as it is, it is likely to remain."

GRANTS SPACE RIGHTS

CHICAGO (UPI) — James T. Mangan, self-styled ruler of the space nation "Celesia," has granted the U. S. Defense Department a one-year extension on its license to use outer space for its rockets and satellites.

Mangan, who holds a deed for ownership of outer space, said he extended the lease — due to expire Dec. 31 — so the new Atlas satellite wouldn't become "an outlaw in the sky."

Matter of FACT

Asbestos has been known for centuries. In ancient temples it was used for torch wicks and to protect altar fires. The Romans used it 2,000 years ago for winding sheets to preserve the ashes of the dead when bodies were cremated. However, it was only the very rich who could afford such a ceremony and it was only after the 19th century that its price was reduced to the point where it could be used for fire prevention and fireproofing.

Tinsel Town In Banner News Year

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tinsel Town had a banner year in 1958—banner headlines, at least — as scandals, romances, deaths, births and marriages jarred the movie colony to the roots of its palm trees.

It began with Mike Todd's death in a flaming New Mexico plane crash, gained momentum with the Lana Turner - Cheryl Crane-Johnny Stompanato knifing and burst like a bomb in the Debbie Reynolds - Eddie Fisher - Liz Taylor whoop-de-do.

Other stories, too, had the world shaking its head in bewilderment at the shenanigans of Zanyville by the blue Pacific.

Sarah Churchill was arrested for drunkenness, Marilyn Monroe returned to her old haunts to make her first picture in two years, Elvis Presley had his sideburns harvested and was packed off to the Army.

Levant Gets "Shoed"

Then there was Oscar Levant's hilarious battle with his wife, June, in which the pianist claimed he was skulled by a shoe.

And Hollywood won't soon forget General Trujillo's invasion accompanied by lavish gifts to Zsa Zsa Gabor and Kim Novak. Gary Cooper made the news with a purported face-lift and Rouben Mamoulian was axed as director of "Porgy and Bess," shortly after a costly fire burned the entire set and sound stage.

Death claimed the lives of Tyrone Power, Ronald Colman, Robert Donat, comedians Joe Frisco and Harry (Parkyakarkus) Einstein, producer Sam Zimbalist, and movie pioneers Harry Cohn and Jesse Lasky.

Equally heart breaking was the death of Richard Skelton, Red's little boy.

Divorces rocketed to startling proportions. Among marriages splattered on the rocks during 1958 were Eddie Fisher and Debbie Reynolds, Marlon Brando and Anna Kashfi, Rock Hudson, John Barrymore Jr., Terry Moore, Ernest Borgnine, Mamie Van Doren, Rhonda Fleming, Esther Williams, Diane Varsi, Peggy Lee, Jeff Chandler, Pier Angeli and Vic Damone, Marie McDonald, Ingrid Bergman, Sammy Davis Jr.

Bing A Dad

There were marriages aplenty, too.

Bing Crosby's twins, Dennis and Phil, took the plunge with Las Vegas show girls. Jayne Mansfield and Mickey Hargitay tied the knot, as did Tyrone Power, Jack Webb, Debra Paget, Rita Hayworth and TV cowboy Ty Hardin.

The baby crop kept the stork hovering over Beverly Hills as Debbie and Eddie became parents, along with Bing and Kathy Crosby, Gregory Peck, Brando, Rosemary Clooney, Nanette Fabray and Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh.

Romances blossomed, too. Esther Williams and Jeff Chandler were hand-holders. So were Borgnine and Katy Juardo, George Sanders and Benita Colman, Dorothy Malone and Jacques Bergerac, and, of course Liz and Eddie.

A promising courtship that fell like an infantryman's arches was the Lauren Bacall-Frank Sinatra embroglio.

1958 is a year to remember in Hollywood. It had all the comedy, pathos, tragedy and gladness of a Cecil B. DeMille epic in Cinemascope.

State Chamber Sets Opening For January

AUSTIN (Spl) — Operation of a Texas State Chamber of Commerce will be initiated in January, with headquarters here.

Organization of the State Chamber by the four regional chambers of commerce in Texas was announced jointly last week by officials of the regional chambers. The four regional chambers are the East Texas Chamber with headquarters at Longview, the Lower Valley Chamber at Weslaco, the South Texas Chamber at San Antonio and the West Texas Chamber at Abilene.

"The growth and complexity of tax problems confronting the citizens of Texas and of legislation regarded as restrictive on the growth of industrial development have created the need for urgent action at the state level on thsee matters where a common viewpoint may exist," the announcement said

The regional chambers will continue work in the fields of economic promotion of their own areas of the state, but will "exert unified influence" through the newly-created organization —

1. For economy in government,
2. For a more effective and broader citizenship participation in public affairs,
3. For the preservation of a proper climate for the creation of new jobs in business and industry, and
4. To encourage appropriate restraint on increases in the government-imposed costs of doing business in Texas.

RESCUE FISHERMEN

YOKOSUKA, Japan (UPI) — A U.S. cargo ship rescued 24 Japanese fishermen from the "standing room only" raft on which they had drifted for 29 hours and transferred them to a sister fishing boat, it was announced today.
