Police accident

BIG SPRING — An on-duty police officer and a local man avoided injury early Sunday morning in a two-car accident.

According to the accident report, Officer Ralph Rollins, 28, was driving west on Third Street in his patrol car using both lights and siren. George John Solis, 25, 207 E. 18th, was traveling south on Gregg Street and did not yield to the emergency vehicle, the report said, causing the patrol car to hit him.

No charges were filed and no citations issued, according to the report.

Unidentified driver

BIG SPRING — An man who has refused to give his name to police was involved in a one-car accident Sunday night.

According to police reports, an unknown man was traveling east on the Interstate-20 and Birdwell Road south service road. The car, a 1971 Oldsmobile owned by Antonio Torres of Big Spring, went off the road and struck a railroad utility pole, the report said.

The man, who had not been identified by Monday morning, was taken by ambulance to Scenic Mountain Medical Center with non-incapacitating injuries. He was charged with driving while intoxicated and failure to identify.

Damage to railroad property was estimated at more than $2,000.

Murder trial

BIG SPRING — Jury selection for the murder trial of Janice Clark Brown begins today in 118th District Court. Brown, 32, is charged with shooting and killing her husband, Lonnie Brown, at their home in the Tubbs addition on May 31, 1989. The trial is scheduled to begin tomorrow.

Bus driver hit by sniper fire

By RANDALL DICKERSON
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Incensed by a sniper attack that could cost a bus driver his arm, Greyhound says it won't bargain with its striking employees until a week has passed without violence against the company.

"No American worth his salt negotiates with terrorists," Greyhound chairman and chief executive Fred G. Currey said at a Greyhound terminal Sunday on a visit from Dallas to see the wounded Southeastern Trailways driver.

David E. Bryant, 58, of Cincinnati, was critically wounded by a shot fired through the front window of his bus Saturday night from a pickup truck that pulled alongside, police said. None of the 46 passengers on the Louisville-bound bus was injured.

Southeastern Trailways is carrying passengers on some Greyhound routes under a pooling arrangement that existed before the strike, a company official said.

"It's an open-and-shut case of terrorism," Currey said at a news conference.

Striking drivers said they don't believe any of their group would shoot another driver.

Doctors at Vanderbilt University Medical Center operated for six hours trying to save Bryant's left arm but won't know for several days whether they succeeded, said Wayne Wood.

"If everything goes perfectly, his arm will not need to be amputated," Wood said.

Currey was not able to visit Bryant, who was recovering from surgery when the executive

WHITE HOUSE, Tenn. — Sgt. George Dittfurth of the Tennessee Highway Patrol guards a Greyhound bus, the latest victim of violence in the nationwide bus strike. The shot, fired Saturday night, injured the driver, David E. Bryant, 58, but he managed to stop the bus on Interstate 65 near White House, 30 miles north of Nashville.

Storm brings rain, wind

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Sunday's brief thunderstorm brought heavy rain and blowing winds — and even a little bit of hail — but no injuries or major damage were reported.

Rainfall reports varied from less than two-tenths north of Big Spring to almost an inch in the southern portion of town. Hail also was reported in the Alamesa Drive area, but it was considerably smaller than the one-inch hail reported in Odessa.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Agricultural Research Station north of Big Spring said the facility received .19 of an inch of rain Sunday. That amount brings the area's year-to-date total to 4.05 inches, notably more than the normal YTD total of 2.12 inches.

The northern areas of Howard County seemed to escape the brunt of the storm. Mrs. John Couch of the Luther area reported that she received .2 inch of rain Sunday. Her area is still experiencing a wet year, though, as it has received 6.35 inches of rain so far this year, she said.

Rainfall totals generally increased further south in the area, as evidenced by the following reports:

• Tommy Hart, 1750 Purdue Ave., reported .58 inch of rain Sunday, bringing his year-to-date total to 3.95 inches.

• B.G. Barber, 1409 Settles St., reported .8 inch Sunday, 4.3 inches so far this year.

• Red Thomas, 107 E. 13th, received .7 inch of rain Sunday.

The precipitation, though heavy at times, caused only momentary power outages, a spokeswoman for TU Electric said today.

The above-average rainfall the area has been receiving can only serve to help farmers and ranchers, said Don Richardson, Howard County agricultural extension agent.

Although some areas of the county are dryer than others, Richardson said the moisture situation is "the best it's been in several years."

"It's unusual to receive this much rain in March," Richardson said. "Usually it's windy and dry. Well, it's been windy, but we've received some rain, also."

The precipitation's main benefit right now is to replenish sub-soil moisture that's been depleted by almost two years of drought. Adequate sub-soil moisture helps plants weather extended dry spells, Richardson noted.

May 10 is the traditional target date for area farmers to plant their cotton crop. If another inch or two of rain is received between now and then, the prospects for a bumper crop will increase, he added.

More rain is possible today.

Mitchell County eyes prison

HERALD STAFF REPORT

COLORADO CITY — Mitchell County Commissioners Court is expected on Tuesday to approve participation in a proposal to locate a prison workcamp in the county.

The idea has the approval of the Colorado City Industrial Team and the Mitchell County Board of Economic Development.

The workcamp would be built by the county with Private Prisons of America, Limited acting as the proposed operator of the facility, said County Judge S.L. "Mac" Morris. It would generate between 150 and 175 jobs in the area.

Under state specifications, the minimum-security workcamp would serve prisoners whose residence is within 100 miles of the workcamp. The inmates would have to have more than one but less than two years left in their sentence before being eligible for parole.

In a plan put forward to the county by PPAL, a 500-bed workcamp would be built about 13 miles southwest of Colorado City, between Lake Champion and Lake Colorado City, said Sonny Emerson, director of operations for the Midland-based PPAL.

The workcamp would be 100 acres in size and would manufacture Waffle-Crete structural precast concrete modules, Emerson said. The 7,000-acre site contains 40 million tons of sand and gravel for production, he said. Inmates would be paid the prevailing wage for their labor.

The county has until April 27 to send its proposal to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

If approved by the county commissioners, the Mitchell County proposal will be one of from 10 to 20 workcamp proposals in the state. The Texas Department of Criminal Justice is expected to approve one proposal by October, Emerson said.

Morris said the Criminal Justice Department requires counties to submit their own timetables for construction, but he assumes the facility would be built fairly

Water without borders

EAST GERMANY — Thousands of East and West Berliners, as well as citizens of the surrounding areas, fill the Havel River in their boats as they pass the Glienicke Bridge to enjoy the first day without border marking buoys on Berlin's waterways Sunday. For the first time in almost 30 years the water sportsmen could paddle and dock where they wanted on Eastern or Western rivers and lakes and their shores.

Latest finance plan exempts best schools from mandates

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

BROWNFIELD — As many as 10 percent of the state's best schools could become exempt from certain state mandates in an effort to save money in a restructured state school finance plan, said a local state representative today.

The Legislature was scheduled to convene at noon today for a second 30-day special session to again try and come up with a new finance plan. In October, the Texas Supreme Court declared the present system unfair to poorer school districts.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said this morning that a rebuilt House Bill 1 could require an estimated $400-$450 million in extra funds that will come from a lottery and or a tax increase. Rudd, whose district includes Martin county, said it may feature exemptions to certain schools on state mandates that require costly monitoring.

In the last 30-day special session which ended Wednesday, Rudd voted against House Bill 1, even though he was listed as a co-sponsor, saying that it was too expensive. It was defeated by the House 101-45.

"The bill I introduced and the bill that came out of the (House Public Education) Committee were different," he said. "It just cost too much money basically."

The upcoming bill will attempt to cut costs in the area mandates.

"What we tried to do is lessen some of the mandates," he said. The exemptions will apply to school's that are "recognized as excellent," Rudd said.

Mandates that schools currently must adhere to involve 22-1 student-teacher ratios, textbook items and teacher salary guidelines.

"Those that take money to monitor will be pulled out," Rudd said. "I don't know which ones will be."

Schools affected will be among those that have done well on the TEAMS test, have good dropout ratios and have never been in trouble with the Texas Education Agency, he said.

"West Texas generally has a good tradition of having good schools," Rudd said. "What you're looking at here are probably about 10 percent of the schools in the state."

Clements has said that he does not want a tax increase to fund a new plan. Rudd has never favored a lottery before but said, "I may have to."

Victim: Assailant quoted Williams

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams is refusing to comment on a report that a woman was sexually assaulted at knifepoint by a man who quoted Williams' comment last weekend comparing foul weather to rape.

According to the police report, as the man unclothed the woman he told her she should "relax and enjoy it." Like Clayton Williams said, it's inevitable.

Bill Kenyon, Williams' press secretary, on Sunday said: "This violent incident is so awful and appalling that out of respect for the victim we have no comment."

On March 24, Williams told cowhands and reporters waiting for a roundup at his ranch that the foggy, drizzly weather was like rape. "If it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it," he said.

Williams apologized after harsh criticism from Democrats and women's groups.

The woman, 30, was bound and sexually assaulted by the man, who broke into her apartment and waited for her to return home Thursday night, Austin police Sgt. Hector Reveles said.

Police say they have no suspects in the woman's attack.

Historic building under wraps

AUSTIN (AP) — The former General Land Office — the oldest state government office building in Texas — is under wraps to remove asbestos from the outside walls and roof.

The 133-year-old building located on the State Capitol grounds east of the Capitol was covered Monday with a black polyethylene shroud as workers began the removal process.

The cover was necessary "so there's no danger of any fibers blowing around," said Capitol Architect Allen McCree.

McCree said the building's stucco exterior was given an undercoat of paint in the 1960s that contained 2 percent to 5 percent asbestos. The roof shingles also contain asbestos, he said.

Work to remove the asbestos will cost approximately $143,000 and take about one month, he said. The building, which housed the General Land Office until 1911, is scheduled for a $3.6 million renovation as part of the $154.5 million restoration of the Capitol.

The building was vacated in November after having served as a museum for the Daughters of Confederacy and Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

Insurers predict increased costs

AUSTIN (AP) — Some insurers predict costs will escalate since the state has begun requiring coverage of treatment for drug addiction, and the State Board of Insurance is considering guidelines to control the expense.

Legislation that took effect Jan. 1 requires all Texas employers offering group medical insurance to cover treatment for addiction to drugs, in addition to the alcoholism addiction treatment previously required.

"It's really tough for the small employer out there," said Bob Blevins, executive director of the Texas Life Insurance Association, which also offers health insurance.

The State Board of Insurance meets Tuesday to discuss proposed cost-containment guidelines, including recommended length of treatment.

Blevins estimated premiums would increase by 5 percent to 15 percent, even with such guidelines in place.

But Robert Spellings, a lobbyist and lawyer who drafted the treatment legislation, said the insurance industry has failed to provide adequate documentation that costs would rise.

Lawmakers return for another session

AUSTIN (AP) — It's the same song, second verse: Lawmakers stymied in efforts to reform public school finance and judicial selection in one 30-day special session returned to the Capitol today for another try at the job.

But this time, leaders say they're changing the tempo.

Speaker Gib Lewis, whose House was unable to pass a school finance reform bill despite a court order for change, said he expects legislation to be approved and sent to a conference committee to work out differences with a Senate measure within 10 days.

Lewis, whose staff compiled a list of possible ways to slash other budget areas to raise money for education and for human services deficits, said he expects lawmakers in the House to consider such cuts this week. He did not endorse a reallocation of funds.

House committees also have been put to work looking at ways to raise new revenue through taxes or a state lottery. The chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, said one reason lawmakers gave for voting against a bill to put $511 million more into public schools in 1990-91 was they didn't know how it would be financed.

Senators, who near the end of the last session passed a $1.2 billion bill, will pass the same measure before the first week of this session is out, predicted Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

But Gov. Bill Clements hasn't changed his tune on such a costly measure. He has repeatedly vowed he will not allow new state taxes to finance education, estimating the additional amount that can be spent on public education next school year by reallocating current expenditures at $200 million to $300 million.

The Texas Supreme Court, which found glaring disparities in funds available to property-rich and poor school districts, last year gave lawmakers a May 1 deadline for devising a fairer system. The current $13.5 billion-a-year system relies on a combination of local property taxes, state aid and some federal funds.

Meanwhile, judicial selection has been relegated to the background after the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals gave lawmakers some breathing room in addressing a federal judge's order that the at-large system of electing state judges in nine urban counties violates the Voting Rights Act.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said minority voting strength was illegally diluted by the countywide election of judges in Dallas, Harris, Bexar, Tarrant, Travis, Lubbock, Midland, Ector and Jefferson counties.

But the federal appeals court, which earlier halted Bunton's order that special elections be held this year in Travis County, said last week that lawmakers don't have to act until after an appeal in the case has been decided.

Although lawmakers get a respite from that crisis, another has taken its place. A budget shortfall in the Texas Department of Human Services has caused Hobby to predict the welfare agency is near disaster.

Solving that shortfall and preventing cuts in programs to the needy is even more important than school finance reform, said Hobby, a Democrat who is retiring this year.

Rob Mosbacher, board chairman of the welfare agency and the Republican nominee to succeed Hobby, said last week the shortfall is $550 million instead of the $851 million previously stated and can be covered without cutting services or increasing taxes.

A spokesman for state Comptroller Bob Bullock, Mosbacher's Democratic opponent for lieutenant governor, questioned the adjusted numbers.

While Mosbacher said his agency's deficit can be addressed by borrowing money from next year's budget — then replacing it by better using state money to maximize federal matching funds — Bullock spokesman Tony Proffitt said Mosbacher wants to raid the funds of other state agencies.

The list of possible cuts distributed to House leaders by Speaker Lewis's staff and obtained by the Austin American-Statesman showed how to raise $981 million without new taxes to meet school finance and welfare requirements. Among the possibilities listed were canceling a proposed 3 percent raise for university faculty members and taking money set aside for restoring the Capitol.

Inmate: Death penalty is not working in Texas

RICHMOND (AP) — After a decade on death row, Roger Leroy "Animal" DeGarmo said it's "obvious" the death penalty is not working in Texas.

ROGER DEGARMO

DeGarmo, 35, a former California mechanic, was sentenced to death for the Jan. 8, 1979, kidnap-slaying of Kimberly Ann Strickler, a 20-year-old Houston medical technician.

But a series of delays and appeals has kept DeGarmo and about a third of the other death row inmates awaiting the ultimate punishment for more than eight years.

"I'm not laughing out of a morbid sense of humor," said DeGarmo. "I'm laughing because you people are so damn gullible. It's obvious the death penalty's not working in Texas."

DeGarmo, who confessed to Ms. Strickler's slaying on the witness stand and threatened to kill his jurors if they did not sentence him to death, now is appealing his conviction and sentence.

"There's no logical reason why a person with the death penalty should be alive after eight years. I've been here 10 years flat," DeGarmo told the Houston Chronicle. "Are you going to pay for my existence for another 10 years?"

Ms. Strickler's parents also are upset by the system.

"If an open and shut case is this difficult, what happens to the really complicated ones?" asked Shirley Parish, 56, the victim's mother.

DeGarmo is seeking a new trial based on alleged deals former Fort Bend County prosecutors made with his accomplice, Helen Leydalia Mejia, 32.

Ms. Mejia was sentenced in September 1988 to 40 years in prison after a judge ruled she violated terms of her 10 years deferred adjudication, a form of probation that would have allowed her a clean record if successfully completed.

DeGarmo and Ms. Mejia were accused of kidnapping Ms. Strickler while attempting to steal her car. She was shot in the head as she lay bound in the trunk of her car on a rural Fort Bend County road.

Shortly before DeGarmo was scheduled to die in March 1986, attorneys persuaded him to appeal.

In a 1987 evidentiary hearing, Houston attorney Greg Gladden argued Ms. Mejia was offered immunity, dismissals of pending felony charges, drug rehabilitation and other considerations for her testimony against DeGarmo. Former prosecutors said the only deal offered was that she wouldn't get the death penalty if she testified.

Nearly 2½ years after the hearing, the court of criminal appeals has not issued a decision.

"Money runs the courts, not justice," said Wayne Strickler, 59, the victim's father. "The system is there to produce money for defense attorneys."

Defector plans to sue KGB

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet defector Alexander Ushakov outwitted two carloads of KGB gumshoes to make a daring escape to the West six years ago. Now he's plotting another humiliation for the Soviet secret police.

Ushakov says he's suing the KGB.

The former Soviet navy commander plans to haul his former tormentors into court — possibly before an international tribunal in London — to recover books, manuscripts and other documents seized by KGB agents during a raid on his wife's apartment in Odessa in 1984.

Ushakov is seeking not only the return of his anti-communist writings, but monetary damages for the emotional suffering he and his wife, Irina, endured.

According to experts in international law, Ushakov would be the first person ever to sue the KGB. Ushakov is confident he'll win, but the experts say the odds are overwhelmingly against him.

Plane plows into neighborhood

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Investigators worked to sort out parts and lawn equipment from a piece of a small plane that crashed and exploded in a neighborhood, demolishing a home and garages and killing at least one person.

The twin-engine plane flew out of control from the foothills at up to 150 mph Sunday afternoon, plowing into one of the most densely populated sections of this city of about 100,000 situated 30 miles from Denver, authorities said.

"The plane hit a good-size tree and disintegrated," city spokesman David Grimm said.

One body, burned beyond recognition, was pulled from the wreckage, and authorities were working to determine whether the victim was Bill Layne, listed on the flight plan as the pilot, Grimm said. The flight plan indicated there may have been a passenger, but investigators saw no immediate signs of another body.

The crash destroyed a vacant home up for sale, six parked cars and at least four garages, authorities said.

One person on the ground was injured and National Transportation Safety Board investigator Verlin B. Tranter said it was "pure luck" there weren't more deaths and injuries.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

Blockade of Mohawk land remains

ALTONA, N.Y. (AP) — State police with shotguns blockaded a Mohawk Indian community Sunday for a third straight day since gunfire forced down a Vermont National Guard helicopter and wounded a doctor on a medical mission.

While the blockade of the Ganienkeh Mohawk Territory continued, negotiators were trying to work out an agreement to investigate the shooting, which wounded a civilian doctor aboard the helicopter.

The Indians, insisting that a police investigation would be an invasion of the Ganienkeh territory, said they would die to protect the sovereignty of their community near the Canadian border, about 150 miles north of Albany.

Hundreds of troops were outside the community. State police said several armed Mohawks, several with AK-47 assault rifles, were seen inside the isolated and secretive traditional Indian community where an estimated 40 families live.

State police failed again Sunday to persuade the Indians to allow investigators into the area, but said they would resume the negotiations Monday.

VILNIUS, Lithuania — Soviet soldiers stand on one of the many armored military vehicles that arrived on a train transport in Vilnius Sunday. The move was the latest attempt by Moscow to persuade the Baltic republic to rescind its March 11 declaration of independence.

Show of force follows Gorbachev's warning

MOSCOW (AP) — A day after Mikhail S. Gorbachev offered talks if Lithuania repeals its declaration of independence, Moscow stepped up the pressure by moving dozens more armored personnel carriers into the republic's capital.

But leaders of the Baltic state stood firm, refusing to back down from their March 11 declaration despite the Soviet president's warning that pressing on with secession could result in "grave consequences for all of us."

Lithuania's deputy prime minister, Kazimieras Motieka, told reporters in the capital, Vilnius, that his government "remains ready to negotiate and discuss any questions with the Soviet Union except that of independence."

The republic's president, Vytautas Landsbergis, said Gorbachev was demanding "impossible things."

Lithuania's Parliament was to meet this morning to forge a response to Gorbachev's appeal, and Landsbergis said he would send negotiators to Moscow today to try to set up a meeting with Soviet officials.

"It cannot be now demanded that we annul everything that we bore in our hearts," he said in comments carried Sunday by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

The last Western correspondents were ousted from Lithuania on Sunday night on orders of the Soviet government, leading some Lithuanians to express fears of an impending military crackdown.

Last week, Gorbachev said he would use force only if lives were threatened. But Soviet troops subsequently rounded up several dozen Lithuanians who had deserted the Red Army. The troops also seized several buildings Friday, taking over the Lithuanian prosecutor's office and the main newspaper printing plant.

Many people worried that martial law would be imposed within days.

"I fear they are going to start shooting," one middle-aged Lithuanian woman said Sunday.

Western reporters counted nearly 30 armored vehicles being unloaded from trains that arrived near the Vilnius airport on Sunday. Others drove through the city, their treads slicing into the asphalt, apparently on their way to a nearby base.

Gorbachev, in his first formal appeal since the Lithuanian crisis began, said Sunday that the republic's chosen path towards independence was "ruinous and will only lead to a dead end."

In an 18-line statement addressed to Lithuania's Parliament, he charged Lithuanian leaders with taking steps that "are openly challenging and insulting to the entire (Soviet) Union."

"I propose that the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet immediately annul the illegal acts it has adopted," Gorbachev wrote in the appeal.

Fleet kills 330 whales for 'research'

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's whaling fleet returned from the Antarctic Ocean after catching 330 small whales in the third season of a controversial research program aimed at counting the whale population, officials said today.

Japanese whaling officials say the mammals must be killed to accurately determine their age, sex, diet and health. But anti-whaling groups call the research a veiled form of commercial whaling and say skin sampling and other non-lethal research methods are available.

Environmental groups have charged that Japan's research program is actually commercial whaling in disguise.

The same boats and facilities are used in commercial whaling, and the meat obtained by the research program is sold for food, as permitted under the commission's regulations.

Japan halted commercial whaling in the Antarctic at the end of the 1986-87 season, when it caught 1,941 whales. It then began a program of research whaling, which it says is aimed at assessing whale stocks.

Iraq warns Israel against attack

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — President Saddam Hussein today admitted that Iraq has sophisticated binary chemical weapons and warned that if Israel attacked it Iraq will retaliate and destroy half of the Jewish state.

In a speech broadcast by the state-run radio, Saddam denied Iraq had nuclear weapons and that sophisticated devices bought from the United States were meant for nuclear weapons development.

He lashed out at Western criticism of what U.S. and British authorities said were clandestine efforts by Baghdad to smuggle parts for nuclear weapons and over the March 15 execution of British-based reporter Farzad Bazoft on spying charges.

"I categorically deny that we have any atomic bombs, but let them (Iraq's critics) hear here and now that we do possess binary chemical weapons, which only the United States and the Soviet Union also have."

These weapons contain two relatively safe compounds which are mixed shortly before release to create lethal toxic gases.

In a clear reference to Israel, believed to be the Middle East's only nuclear power, Saddam said: "Those who are threatening us with nuclear bombs, we warn them that we will hit them with these binary chemical weapons."

It was believed to be the first time the Iraqi leader has admitted that his country possesses binary weapons.

Guards control part of prison

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Guards today regained control of half a 19th century prison devastated by hundreds of prisoners who set fires and smashed windows in rioting that left 47 guards and prisoners injured.

The medium-security Strangeways prison — one of Europe's most crowded — looked like the scene of a bombing after Sunday's mayhem, said Ivor Serle, a chapter chairman of the Prison Officers' Association.

Inmates were still on the roof at daybreak. The Home Office said throughout the night prisoners continued to surrender and by late morning only 133 inmates remained on the loose.

"The prison is wrecked inside and will have to be virtually rebuilt," he said. "It is like a building that has been blitzed."

Strangeways, an imposing red-brick and sandstone facility, was built in 1868 for 970 men and three inmates are often crammed into a cell meant for one.

There was no clear indication of what caused the rioting, which began during Sunday morning service in the prison chapel.

Census questions: Why the government is asking you all that stuff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Why do they want to know all that stuff, anyway?

That's the question on millions of lips now that most Americans have sent in their Census forms. But government officials say there's a reason for the questions they're asking.

The Census has grown from its original intention of counting the population so seats in the House of Representatives can be distributed among the states.

Knowing that the nation was going to be counted every 10 years, officials couldn't resist the urge to ask some questions. And once the questions were being asked, officials started using the answers to design social programs and distribute money.

"In many respects the Census is an index to our quality of life," said

John G. Keane, dean of the business school at Notre Dame University and former head of the Census Bureau. "The Census shows us anew where our nation hurts and needs help. We realize the national agenda and we realize how its resolution is directly or indirectly rooted in Census data."

Nonetheless, each Census finds opposition to answering the detailed questions, evidenced this year by resistance from the American Civil Liberties Union and the Libertarian Party.

"They already know too much about the citizens," complained Leslie Williams of the Vermont ACLU, who objected to questions about household relationships, whether a home has complete plumbing and whether anyone in a home is disabled.

The Libertarian Party urges that answering the Census be made voluntary. It is encouraging people to send in cards with their Census forms stating either that they refuse to cooperate, are doing so under threat or law or will only answer some questions.

Census officials point out that the law requires people to answer the Census, although prosecutions rarely occur.

The more detailed questions on the long form — sent to one family in six — are necessary, the bureau said.

In fiscal 1988 there were 82 federal programs that allocated $38.7 billion in money and other assistance based on Census information. The programs are based not just on the number of people, but who they are, their ages and incomes, jobs and relationships to one another.

The Transportation Department topped the list at $16.6 billion, the vast majority of it highway planning and construction money distributed according to Census results. The Education Department hands out $7 billion based on Census figures.

The $5.5 billion from the Department of Health and Human Services helps illustrate changes in social trends.

The agency used Census population information to distribute $26 million to aid runaway and homeless youths, $269 million for services for the aging, $345 million for nutrition programs for the elderly and $239 million for child welfare programs.

Census population data provides statistical proof when city officials apply for money to establish day care centers.

Racial and ethnic information can be used to determine if communities comply with voting rights laws. For example, minority residents of a city could use Census data in a suit seeking to redistrict local city council seats to provide more balanced representation.

During a severe summer heat wave, officials in St. Louis, Mo., used census data to locate areas with large numbers of elderly residents. City workers then went door to door, telling the elderly about cooling centers where they could go for relief.

Outside the government, Big Brothers of America has used census information on the characteristics of city populations to estimate where it might best find volunteers for its programs to help youths.

In Newport News, Va., a church official used age data in planning a new church building. A high proportion of elderly in the area resulted in a decision to build a one-story structure instead of two.

Many businesses have become avid users of census information using it to design products and services to specific audiences, locate stores and plan for future growth.

Partner notification fails to halt syphilis

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Efforts to notify the sex partners of syphilis patients is unlikely to control the spread of the disease because many of those infected have multiple anonymous partners, according to a study released Sunday.

The results, reported in Monday's issue of the Annals of Internal Medicine, suggest that efforts to fight AIDS by notifying patients' partners is likely to fail, too, said an accompanying editorial in the journal.

The 1988 study, conducted by Oregon health officials and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control focused on 146 syphilis-infected adults treated over four months. Overall the patients were able to identify an average of just one in five of their sexual partners, according to the report.

Twenty-eight percent of the patients reported exchanging sex for drugs or money, and that group accounted for 72 percent of the unlocatable sexual partners.

"A strategy of controlling syphilis which relies solely or mostly on partner notification is doomed to failure because it is — at most — only 20 percent effective," said one of the study's authors, Dr. David Fleming of the Oregon Health Division.

Oregon state law requires that syphilis cases be reported to county and state health officials.

Each patient had an average of five sex partners during the study period whom they could not identify sufficiently for partner notification, the study found.

Syphilis, a chronic, sexually transmitted disease, is at its highest national rate in 40 years, infecting about 16 people out of every 100,000. In 1988, 39,000 cases were reported, according to the CDC.

The high cost of quotas

Why, one might wonder, would anyone spend good money to put an ad on TV — week after week, year after year — telling us how cheap sugar is?

The answer ... is that it isn't true.

Political action committees affiliated with sugar producers hand out about $1 million each election year to sweet-toothed congressmen on key committees. No connection, of course, but Congress has imposed very strict quotas on sugar imports, the kinds of quotas American trade representatives complain loudly about when the Japanese put them on beef, citrus fruit and rice.

According to Citizens for a Sound Economy, a free-trade lobby, Americans pay the highest price for sugar of any western nation — three times the average of what the rest of the world pays. A Department of Commerce study shows that sugar quotas cost American consumers ... $3 billion a year.

The quotas also keep the prices of artificial sweeteners and other sweeteners such as corn syrup about $2 billion a year higher than would otherwise be the case, according to a Congressional Research Service report. And the quotas hurt Third-World sugar producing countries, many of which receive U.S. economic aid that wouldn't be necessary if they could sell us their sugar.

No government censorship

The Bush administration did credit to itself last week by striking a blow against government censorship.

Ignoring the demands of Sen. Jesse Helms and other right-wing activists, the administration told Congress it opposed legislation to control the content of art supported with federal funds.

Fine. Whether or not the federal government should be subsidizing art projects in the first place is open to argument. But once subsidies are authorized, the government ought not to get into the business of dictating the specifics of artistic output.

To place restrictions on the content and form of art to be supported amounts to government censorship.

A way to slow art thefts

(The) ... theft from Boston's Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum is sad indeed. ... We hope the museum will bolster its security to protect the master pieces that remain.

Art thievery will grow more brazen as long as the market value of art escalates. But if people could purchase a copy of a painting as easily as they can buy a book or a musical recording, this crime might decline.

(We) recently viewed copies of paintings by Claude Monet. ... They were "painted" by computer. Such copies, reproducing even the texture of brush strokes, are quite expensive, but prices could decline if consumer demand creates a lucrative market.

This could revolutionize the art world: Aside from making virtual duplicates of art available to hang in the average aesthete's living room, this process could moderate the value of original works.

The broccoli brouhaha

A reporter in our newsroom the other day asked: Why all this fuss over something as insignificant as broccoli?

The reason, we suspect, is this: Broccoli is something every American can understand. We either like it or we don't like it. It's, ugh, something we can get our teeth into. Therefore, every one of us has an opinion about broccoli. We understand it. We can talk it over and argue about it at the family dinner table.

But consider really weighty problems of the nation, like the multi-billion-dollar federal savings and loan bailout. That financial mess probably is the worst misuse, abuse and waste of taxpayer money in U.S. history. It will cost $200 billion, maybe $300 billion to fix it.

In other countries, governments would fall over such a scandal. Congressmen and senators should be voted out of office because of it. Here's a subject taxpayers really ought to be upset about, not broccoli.

But the fact is, the savings and loan controversy is so complex, it came about because of so many complicated reasons — including bad judgment by Congress — the American people don't really understand the high cost or know where to place the blame.

It's a lot easier, and more comforting to argue about broccoli.

GEPHARDT TESTS HIS "BROCCOLI IS KRYPTONITE" THEORY

Pollution without solution

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

The environment is supposed to be the main issue of the '90s, and Congress is already hard at work trying to figure out a way to do absolutely nothing about it.

I normally don't get involved in environmental issues, however, because they take too much thought.

It is much easier for me to sit around being concerned about celebrities falling off motorcycles, the spring training lockout, and whether or not Andy Rooney is a racist.

(I think celebrities who fall off motorcycles deserve it, there are a lot of sportswriters up North who are going berserk because they are not in sunny Florida on expense account, and that Andy Rooney doesn't have a mean bone in his body until he is confronted by a paper clip he doesn't like.)

But if the environment is, indeed, going to be the primary issue of the '90s, I cannot sit idly by writing about mush while others are pondering the air we breathe, the water we drink, and whether or not the sun will say the hell with it one morning and not come up.

But if I am going to get into this thing, I want to get into it with both feet.

Sure, I know there's a hole in the ozone layer, tropical rain forests are disappearing and trees pollute, but have you considered the following:

Second-Hand Alcohol Breath: If you are on an airplane for instance, and the person next to you is pouring down double scotches you could get liver damage breathing this person's intoxicating exhalates. The solution to this problem is to not allow Ted Kennedy on commercial flights.

Polyester Pollution: Most people have gotten the word by now that polyester leisure suits are tacky, and they are taking theirs out into the back yard and burning them.

The fumes go into the atmosphere and turn the rain purple and that's why we are getting such freaks of nature like Prince.

Fat Clouds: Everybody is losing weight these days. Where does this weight go? It goes up into the atmosphere too and forms big fat clouds, and if you were to be on top of a mountain and walk into one, you could come out with all that weight Oprah Winfrey lost, for instance, and suddenly have a rear end the size of a Buick.

Depletion of the Pull of Gravity:

It's happening. If it wasn't, how could Don King's hair stand up straight like that?

The Silent Sparrow Syndrome: If we don't do something to curb those car stereos that blare out music loud enough to be heard in three states, birds are going to quit chirping. What's the use? Who can hear them over 2 Live Crew and their latest repugnant hit?

The Bo-Knows-Where-it-Burns-and-Itches Problem: In the coming years we all will have watch 7 million Bo Jackson commercials on television, and the entire country could develop serious cases of jock itch through some rare form of electrical osmosis.

The Bull-Hockey Factor: Scientists say that people who like to hear themselves talk, such as members of Congress, will have uttered approximately 17 septillion trillion pounds of bull-hockey by the year 1995, which can seep into your house through your air-conditioning ducts.

If we don't do something about that, nobody will be saying anything of substance by the turn of the century, and we will all sound like members of Congress talking about the progress of their latest environmental bills out of one side of their mouths while accepting lavish dinner invitations from oil industry lobbyists out of the other.

Who will monitor U.S. elections?

By GEORGE GEDDA

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In Panama last year and Nicaragua this year, the demand from Washington was unambiguous: hard a free and fair election. It's hard to imagine elections anywhere that were scrutinized more closely.

Now comes a book by Robert Caro suggesting one of the most important U.S. elections of the post-war era was, in fact, rigged by Lyndon Johnson.

Caro makes the case that the outcome of the 1948 Senate Democratic primary race in Texas did not reflect the will of the voters because Johnson stuffed ballot boxes with 35,000 phony votes, giving him an 87-vote margin over Coke Stevenson.

Johnson, of course, went on to become Senate majority leader and president. The course of history was altered by what happened in 1948, assuming Caro got his facts straight; thus far, credible evidence to refute him has not surfaced.

That election is not the only one about which questions have been raised. The public probably will never know whether John F. Kennedy actually beat Richard Nixon in 1960 because of strange happenings on election night in Illinois.

The furor over Caro's book, arising as Nicaraguans were preparing to vote, raises the question: Does the U.S. have the moral authority to demand purity in foreign elections in light of the spotty record at home?

The election run by Daniel Ortega was certainly more honest than the Texas primary Caro describes. Perhaps Ortega, soon to retire, should offer to monitor U.S. elections to ensure the will of the American people is not trampled on.

Can you envision Ortega paying a visit to Sen. Phil Gramm, D-Tex., on election night next November and asking him to respect the outcome of his bid for another term?

"To do otherwise would strike a blow at the democratic process," statesman Ortega might counsel Gramm.

Kidding aside, the founding fathers got it right: government can't be trusted. There are pious moralisms in public statements and, at times, an anything goes attitude behind the scenes.

All governments, for example, are very selective about when to express indignation.

When an anti-communist is slain, say, in El Salvador, the U.S. government is quick to blame leftist guerrillas. When someone from the left is killed, U.S. officials invariably say they are puzzled about who did the deed.

For years, the United States had been saying the big problem in Afghanistan was the Soviet military presence. Well, the Soviets have been gone for more than a year but the fighting persists, partly because U.S. weapons deliveries are still going to the Afghan rebels.

John F. Burns, a New York Times reporter, writes that rebel rocket attacks killed an estimated 1,000 people in Kabul, the capital, last year and several times that many across the country.

Among Afghans, Burns writes, "the damage to American prestige has been immense." They now look on the United States as a distant power that sanctions "the routine killing of civilians," he says.

The State Department attitude is to say as little as possible about the rebel abuses. On the other hand, virtually every election abuse committed by the Sandinistas last winter was dealt with as a matter of utmost gravity.

The U.S. government, of course, has no monopoly on hypocrisy and probably comes out better than most countries. Many Latin American presidents who attended the recent presidential inaugural in Chile took steps to avoid being photographed with the departing Augusto Pinochet. A dictator is one thing, but being associated with an unelected president was too much.

But that high principle was set aside last year when the same Latin American presidents rallied behind Cuba for one of the coveted hemispheric seats in the U.N. Security Council. There are almost 20 countries in Spanish-speaking Latin America. Cuba is now the only one without an elected president, but now sits proudly in the Security Council.

Of course, Cuba itself sometimes leaves itself open to allegations that it deviates from high principle. Government propagandists call Cuba "the first free country of the Americas." Anyone who disputes that claim runs the risk of imprisonment.

Around the rim

Prejudice comes in all shapes

By RUTH COCHRAN

City Editor

Prejudice sometimes intrudes on life with all the subtlety of elephants parading down Main Street. Sometimes though, it glides in on little cat's feet, unrecognizable as the beast it really is.

It's an ugly monster because prejudice occurs in so many ways. Is there anyone who hasn't witnessed at least some prejudice based on skin color? Who hasn't at least heard of prejudice because of gender? Then there's prejudice against religions, and prejudice against age — both young and old.

What is particularly hideous about prejudice is how often it occurs in everyday life. In El Paso recently, a police union newsletter included a column that said "Physically, the police broods just don't get it!"

Federal officials deemed the item sexist and degrading to women. No kidding.

Of course it took those officials a while to figure that out. A sergeant with the El Paso Police Department filed a complaint two years ago with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission charging that she and other female officers were subjected to "sexist, degrading, insulting, humiliating and derogatory remarks" that had been printed since 1987 in the officers' association newsletter.

Perhaps the officials don't read well — or quickly.

Recently a man was convicted of attempted rape in Georgia, where he already is serving a life sentence in another case. When the jury decided the man was guilty of attempted rape, they also convicted him of aggravated assault, robbery and false imprisonment.

What is so striking is that the man, who had pleaded guilty to a 1988 rape, was acquitted of a sexual assault a year ago because the Florida jury thought the victim had "asked for it." The victim was wearing a lace miniskirt and no underwear.

According to the jury, the victim was guilty because she wore provocative clothes. I say she's guilty of poor taste in clothing and nothing more. Women do not "ask" to be raped, and that jury was guilty of an age-old prejudice against women.

Racial prejudice works a lot of ways — some subtle and some not so subtle. I can remember my grandmother saying that my notoriously neat sister should get along well with her new roommate, "Orientals," my grandmother said, "are such clean people."

Now granted, as a prejudice goes, at least it's a nice one. But it's still an assumption based on a person's genes and not her individual character.

That shows that racism works more ways than just whites against Afro-Americans — the only racial prejudice people seem to recognize these days. Blacks are quite capable too.

Film director Spike Lee, who is black, said before this year's Oscars that the movie "Driving Miss Daisy" was acceptable to whites because it put blacks in a subservient role. Lee, who specializes in thought-provoking movies that explore racial stereotypes, admitted he hadn't even seen "Driving Miss Daisy."

Lee theorized that whites were "comfortable" with the film because it depicted black actor Morgan Freeman as a chauffeur for white actress Jessica Tandy during the 40s and 50s in the deep South. I can't speak for anyone else, but this white was distinctly uncomfortable witnessing the indignities Freeman's character endured — as well as the prejudice Miss Tandy's Jewish character faced.

Of course I have a my own theory about Spike Lee. He's pretty good at his own brand of prejudice for one simple reason: he's had some pretty good teachers — and they weren't Afro-Americans.

Festival will offer more personal items

Approximately 160 artists and craftspeople from throughout Texas and New Mexico will be in Big Spring April 7-8 to participate in the first Spring City Arts and Crafts Show. The two-day event, which will be held on the main floor of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, will be open to the general public Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m. And, like its predecessor the Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival, will be free of admission charge.

Mel Prather, founder of both events, said the time for a spring show had arrived. "There has been an increasing number of requests from artists and patrons alike for a spring show. Many simple felt having only one a year was not enough."

And, while the Spring City Arts and Crafts Show will follow many of the guidelines set by the nationally recognized Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival, there are some differences. The major one being that the newly formed show will be restricted to the main floor of the coliseum.

Talking about the smaller show, Prather said he did not want the Spring City Show to become a scaled down version of the fall Festival. "The Big Spring Festival has achieved its recognition by developing a distinct personality and I feel the Spring Show will do the same. Actually, they're entirely two different arts and crafts shows. For one, more than 75 percent of the April show is new. These are artists and craftspeople who have not shown their works in Big Spring before. For another, it will feature more personal items and furniture than the fall Festival."

The Spring Show, which will open to the public filled to capacity, will display such items as jewelry made out of cloth, ceramics, brass, copper, pewter, silver, sea shells and other material. Women's and children's clothing will also be featured in several booths. Materials used in the clothing include the popular denim, cotton,

Easter decorations and bunnies will be among the items to be featured in the Spring City Arts and Crafts Show April 7 and 8. The small basket and soft sculpture rabbit are by Pearl Armstrong. Liz Young made the cloth Easter baskets and the wood bunnies were the work of Pearl Shifflett. The porcelain-faced rabbit is by Dot Tidwell.

suede, silk and many other fabrics. Some of the designs are sewn into the fashions, others are embellished.

Furniture will be available in either finished or unfinished form. Shelves, plant stands, children's furniture, lawn chairs, VCR cabinets and end tables will be offered. Wood decorations will be readily available in either the traditional country style or the popular Southwest form.

Since the show falls the weekend before Easter, many participants will be offering Easter baskets and decorated hats and clothing. Others will feature rabbits made out of everything from ceramics and wood to cloth and porcelain. Decorated Easter eggs and wreaths can also be seen.

Among the more unusual items to be offered include hardwood replicas of antique cars and ceramic sculpture. In addition, there will be dinosaur wastebaskets, hubcap clocks, wood dolls, quilted wall hangings, crochet hats, potpourri chips, collars and bows, Wa Hoo boards, wooden baskets, wood and fabric pot plants, and doll furniture. There will also be quilted animals, lace flower arrangements, wood puzzles, hair dryer racks, wooden jewelry, sand candles, clothes pin cows, book covers, Easter door pieces, cutting boards, and much more.

The first annual Spring City Arts and Crafts Show will be held April 7-8 on the main floor of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Hours for the show are Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Corporal punishment generally supported

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I go along with your answer to Jimmy Dunne, president of P.O.P.S. (People Opposed to Paddling Students Inc.). I, too, am opposed to using corporal punishment in order to discipline children in school — and at home.

I raised two children, a boy and a girl. They are in their 20s now. As young children, they were very hard to discipline. I got tired of spanking them, until I came up with the idea of making them write a sentence, such as, "I must clean up my room now." For the first offense, they had to write the sentence until they had filled 25 pages. For the second offense, 50 pages. Each page was from a notebook that was 10 1/2 by 8 inches — 31 lines to a page — which meant writing that sentence 1,550 times.

I assure you, Abby, that after spending three hours in their room writing, instead of playing with the neighborhood kids, watching television and doing their homework (which had to be done anyway), they did not forget the offense for which they were being punished, and they never had to be punished for the same offense twice!

My children are both married now, and they told me that they respected my disciplinary measures. Instead of wearing out my hand with spanking, I let them wear out their writing. — DONALD O. CURTIS, HOUSTON

DEAR MR. CURTIS: My mail has been running 10-to-1 in favor of paddling. Read on for a typical paddling letter:

DEAR ABBY: Since when is it not OK to punish a child by paddling, if all else fails to show the child that unruly behavior will not be tolerated?

Yes, paddling does create a sense of fear. I was paddled only twice in elementary school (it was legal in Michigan). I remember it well, and I never felt abused. My self-esteem was not lowered and it made me remember that what I did was wrong, and I never did it again. You are right, Abby, when you say that teachers and principals should not be expected to do the work of parents, but we both know that many parents do not discipline their children. It's a fact that most children spend more time with their teachers than they do with their parents. Most parents know what their children are like, yet they feel that they are the teachers' responsibility as soon as they walk out the front door of their home. If a teacher were to give a disobedient child a paddling, that teacher would be slapped with a lawsuit from parents screaming "child abuser!"

How sad our society has come to consider paddling a form of child abuse. Since capital punishment has been abolished in many states, our crime rate has soared to an all-time high.

Why should the young cons care? They know they will either get probation or sentenced to a couple of years, depending on the crime, and they'll probably be released in just a few years, because our prisons are so overcrowded that they can't keep them all.

Perhaps if they had been paddled at school, they would have thought twice about committing a crime, knowing that they would be punished. — S.K.S., DETROIT

DEAR ABBY: One of the biggest lies I ever heard was when my father turned me over his knee and gave me a good, hard spanking. He said, "This hurts me more than it hurts you." — TOM IN MARYVILLE, TENN.

AUSTIN — Rodney Fluker won first place in the Invent Austin! contest with this seat belt designed to restrain a sleeping child in the back seat of a car.

Austin 8-year-old likes inventing

By ENEDELIA J. OBREGON

Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — It's a tough decision for a soon-to-be-8-year-old: whether to follow in the footsteps of great inventors like Alexander Graham Bell and Thomas Edison, or to turn away from the world of science, dress in black and become a Ninja warrior. So, until it's time to make such career decisions, Rodney Fluker, a second-grader at Blanton Elementary School, continues dabbling in the world of invention.

His most recent creation — a sleep belt for the back seats of cars — won a blue ribbon and a certificate in the Invent Austin! contest.

For the second year, the event was sponsored by the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. and the Austin Independent School District's AIM High Program.

Rodney won first place in his grade level with an invention that allows a child lying down in the back seat of an automobile to be comfortable and safe at the same time. The V-shaped belt buckles at the bottom of the seat instead of at the folds of the seat.

"It's pretty ingenious," said his teacher, Mary Smallwood. "If a child rolls off, he'll be safe."

Rodney said he got the idea after his family was involved in a car accident. Rodney, who always wears his seat belt, wondered what would've happened to him if he'd been lying in the back seat without a seat belt.

"My mama's always talking to me about lying down," he said, adding that it's uncomfortable to lie down while wearing a seat belt. "So I wrapped the shoulder belt and wrapped it around me and then used the middle (lap) belt and wrapped it around me, too. Then I showed my mom and dad."

The award isn't the first for the budding inventor. He took first place honors at last year's competition with his car door umbrella holder.

Laurie Fluker, a journalism professor at Southwest Texas State University, thinks the youngster got his creativity from his father. Rodney, an administrator with Austin Community College.

"He (Rodney Sr.) is good with his hands," Laurie Fluker said. "But most of the family is involved in education, and I think that stimulates his thinking."

Their inventions will be on view at the Austin Children's Museum beginning in late April. Winning inventions will compete at state, regional and national levels.

Republicans broaden abortion stance

By the ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm are among state Republican leaders working to broaden their party's stance on abortion in an effort to attract more voters in November, a Houston newspaper reported.

Williams and Gramm have talked since the March 13 primary about adding more exceptions to the Republicans' anti-abortion view, the Houston Post reported Sunday.

But Williams said, "We don't have a decision on it yet."

A position paper expected to be released in the next two weeks will provide a package of anti-abortion statements. Republican leaders hope will create "broad support" among Texas voters, party leaders told The Post.

Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said there is little chance the party would unite on an abortion stance.

"There is general agreement on the platform at the time that it's passed, but it never is the exact position of every person in the party," Meyer said. "The votes on the party platform are never unanimous."

In 1988, Texas Republicans adopted a "one-exception" party plank on abortion, allowing abortions only when the mother's life is in danger.

The new proposal is expected to have three exceptions: When the mother's life is threatened and in cases of rape and incest.

"I think it's intended to try and help the ticket deal with a likely attack on individual candidates or collective issues from the Democrats in the fall," said Rob Mosbacher, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, who has joined in drafting the position paper.

"I think we're better served by trying to find areas ... that will have a broad base of support," he said.

Gramm's spokesman, Larry Neal, said the senator has never "tried to differentiate between all the hairsplitting on the issue. When he's been asked where he stands on abortion, he has always answered he's pro-life."

Gramm's Democratic opponent, state Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth, already has challenged Gramm's abortion stand in a series of radio advertisements accusing him of forcing rape and incest victims into becoming mothers.

Pro-choice stances in New Jersey and Virginia are believed to have contributed to the defeat of Republican gubernatorial candidates last fall.

In Texas, Democratic gubernatorial contenders Ann Richards and Jim Mattox, who face one another in the April 10 party runoff, are both pro-choice. Williams has said he favors the three-exception approach.

But the proposed platform change could have trouble passing the GOP delegation at the state Republican convention in Fort Worth June 28-29.

"This is not something that's going to be given up without a major fight," said Bill Price, president of the 100,000-member Texans United for Life, the state's largest anti-abortion group.

Price said he would be "tremendously surprised" and upset if Gramm joined forces with Williams and stepped away from the one-exception stance "because Phil Gramm is one of the few who has been unwavering in his support for that position."

Price said if Gramm "backslides, I don't know, maybe I'll give it up. Perhaps I'll just decide it's not worthwhile."

Sheriff's log

The Howard County Sheriff's Office reported the following incidents:

• Troy Hoyt Melton, 66, Midland, was released on $1000 bond after being arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated.

Heart group drops labeling

DALLAS (AP) — The American Heart Association, under pressure from the federal government, will discontinue a food labeling program designed to help consumers quickly identify products considered best for the prevention of heart disease, a spokesman confirmed Monday.

The HeartGuide program, an attempt by the heart association to identify and label low-fat, low-cholesterol, low-sodium foods, came under attack by the federal Food and Drug Administration, which opposed endorsements by non-government groups.

"The FDA has made it clear it is against third-party endorsements," Howard Lewis, director of health and science news for the heart association, said Monday. "The government's only concern was that they did not like third party organizations entering into an area where they had legal responsibility."

Lewis emphasized that only the labeling program will end. Nutrition education and other aspects of the program will continue.

The program was launched in January.

HeartGuide was proposed in 1987 as an attempt to uniformly identify foods with certain levels of cholesterol, fat and sodium.

The foods were to be identified with a HeartGuide seal of approval — a heart with a checkmark — on the package.

Consumer groups, such as the Center for Science in the Public Interest, expressed concern that consumers would be lulled by the label into believing that HeartGuide-approved foods were actually health foods.

Those groups also complained about the fairness of the ratings, because the heart association planned to charge between $15,000 and $600,000 a year to companies participating in the program. The fees were to be used for a toll-free hotline and nutrition awareness programs, the association said.

Lewis said independent labs performed the food analyses after companies submitted applications to have foods considered.

He said the heart association was encouraged that the FDA plans to overhaul the government's labeling program.

"The FDA has stated a commitment now to completely change the way food labeling is done in the country and to challenge and get rid of and set standards for such claims as low cholesterol, high fiber, 'lite,' things like that," Lewis said. "We're very happy that after 17 years, the government will move ahead — 17 years after promises to do something about food labeling."

A formal statement from the heart association's president was expected later today.

"We're not far enough along for it to be much more than just street rumors at this point," he said. "You're always subjecting the county to some liability due to civil rights suits, prison escapes, that sort of thing. And there are those people who would object to bringing a large number of prison inmates into a minimum-security facility in this county."

About 6,300 Greyhound drivers went on strike March 2 over wages and job security. The company has reported 29 shootings of buses, 70 bomb threats and more than 100 other incidents since then.

The company had said it would meet with the union today, but on Friday canceled the session, citing continued violence.

No arrests were made in the shooting.

Hawks win twinbill

BORGER — The Howard College Hawks ran their region baseball record to 8-4 by sweeping a doubleheader from Frank Phillips here Sunday.

The two teams will complete their series today with a single game this afternoon. Tom Leahy will start on the mound for the Hawks.

HOWARD 10, FRANK PHILLIPS 1

The Hawks bats were very hot in the opener, banging out 18 hits. Meanwhile Howard pitcher Steve Walter scattered seven hits. It was the Crafton, Md. sophomore's third win in as many decisions. He walked two and fanned six, losing his shutout in the last inning.

Howard scored five runs in the third inning, thanks to five consecutive hits. In the sixth, Howard got four consecutive hits, accounting for three more runs.

Howard scored two runs in the seventh, and three consecutive hits were responsible for that.

"We had our hitting clothes on," said Howard coach Bill Griffin. We got 18 hits, but we struckout 11 times, so we were definitely taking our hacks."

Tim Demerson, David Wallace and Sean Teague led Howard with three hits each. Mike Hughes, Jeff Schulz, Richard Ackley and Todd Toledo got two hits each.

HOWARD 7, FRANK PHILLIPS 6

The Hawks held a comfortable 7-1 lead going into the bottom of the seventh, but Frank Phillips made things interesting by score five times.

The game ended with reliever Mike Copple getting the last out with the tying run on second base. Copple relieved Curt Schmidt, who picked up his sixth win of the year.

"We fairly well had the game in hand going into the bottom of the seventh. I think Curt just ran out of gas," said Griffin.

Again Howard hit well, banging out 14 hits. Andy Banks led the way, going three-for-three and driving in two runs.

Howard scored a run in the second when Schulz singled, and scored on Banks' single.

Howard scored four times in the fourth on five consecutive hits.

Howard added two more runs in the sixth, taking a 7-1 lead.

Demerson led all Howard hitters in the doubleheader, getting five hits in nine at-bats. Ackley, Schulz and Wallace each had four hits.

Howard is now 30-8-1 for the season.

Baseball booster meet

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Baseball Booster Club will meet Tuesday directly after the Big Spring-San Angelo Lake View baseball game at Steer Field.

The game begins at 4 p.m. All club members and parents of the players are urged to attend the meeting.

Musburger gets ax

DENVER (AP) — Tonight's NCAA title game between UNLV and Duke marks the end of the college basketball season — and the end of Brent Musburger's career at CBS Sports.

Musburger, who had become as big a CBS symbol as the trademark eye, was let go by the network Sunday after they failed to agree on a new contract.

"I was surprised, but it was a great run and I have a million memories, and I leave behind a lot of good friends," Musburger said in a statement released by Jimmy Tubbs, his personal assistant.

The move stunned Musburger's colleagues, some of whom thought it was an April Fool's joke.

"I'm shocked," sportscaster Greg Gumbel said. "I think most everyone assumed that Brent was going to continue to be the primary voice of CBS Sports."

Musburger's 5½-year contract with CBS, which reportedly paid him about $2 million per year, expires in July. Pilson said money wasn't a major factor in the negotiations, but he wouldn't name the key issues in the contract dispute.

Ted Shaker, executive producer of CBS Sports, said the network wanted to cut back on Musburger's heavy workload and give more assignments to other reporters.

Stanford women Queens of Court

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Stanford basketball star Jennifer Azzi returned home to Tennessee a few days ago as the nation's No. 1 player. By the time her visit ended, she was part of the nation's No. 1 team.

Playing 20 miles east of her home in Oak Ridge, Azzi helped Stanford win its first NCAA championship. The Cardinal defeated Auburn 88-81 in Sunday's title game with record 3-point shooting by Azzi and Katy Steding in front of a record crowd.

And in an ending straight from Hollywood, Azzi was voted the outstanding player in the Final Four.

"I'm just feeling so many things right now," said Azzi, a 5-foot-9 senior who earlier received the Naismith Award as the nation's outstanding player.

The victory capped a 32-1 season for Stanford and concluded a five-year climb for the program under Coach Tara VanDerveer.

She took over in 1985-86 after Stanford had gone 5-23 and 9-19 in the two previous years. Her first team struggled to a 13-15 record, but the Cardinal have improved every year since.

Their only loss this season was an 81-78 decision at Washington and they were second in the final Associated Press poll.

Steding led Stanford's 3-point assault with six baskets from that range and Azzi added four. The previous record for a women's championship game had been two 3-pointers by Auburn's Ruthie Bolton against Louisiana Tech in 1988.

Sonja Henning, who led Stanford with 21 points, also made a 3-pointer to give the Cardinal 11 for the game and a record 28 for the tournament. Stanford set the old record of 22 3-pointers in 1988.

It certainly was well enough to hand Auburn its third consecutive loss in the championship game. The Lady Tigers (28-7) were beaten by Tennessee in last year's finals and lost to Louisiana Tech in 1988.

Auburn prides itself on its all-out pressure defense, but Stanford simply had too many scorers for Auburn to guard.

"We changed up as much as possible on defense," Auburn coach Joe Ciampi said. "We made a run, but they had three people out there thinking about shooting the three."

"Every adjustment we made, they countered with their great offensive weapons."

Steding finished with 18 points. Azzi scored 17 and each had five assists. Center Trisha Stevens complemented the outside shooting with strong play inside, scoring 16 points and grabbing 10 rebounds.

Stanford's ability to handle Auburn's press in the second half also was critical. After committing 11 turnovers in the first half, Stanford had only two in the final 20 minutes.

And when the Cardinal beat the press, Azzi or Steding had an open 3-point shot.

"In the first half, we were fouling a lot and stopping the clock and they were scoring, so we were always going against their pressure," VanDerveer said. "As the game opened up a little bit, they might have gotten a little tired and the press wasn't as effective and we started beating it."

Carolyn Jones led Auburn with 24 points, 16 in the first half. Chantel Tremiere, who had been averaging only 4.4 points, scored a career-high 17 and C.C. Hayden scored 15.

The game drew 16,595 to Thompson-Boling Arena from ticket sales of 20,023. That broke the old championship game record of 15,615 at Austin, Texas, in 1987.

Totals for the Final Four of 39,490 paid and 34,196 actual also were the most ever.

The record gathering saw Stanford go eight minutes without a field goal in the first half and turn the ball over five straight times in one stretch. Auburn capitalized by taking a 41-32 lead after Stanford had led 22-11 early.

But the Cardinal scored the final nine points of the half to tie it at 41, then got control of the game early in the second half. With Auburn leading 46-43, Steding hit a 3-pointer from the left of the key to start a 9-0 run that put Stanford ahead to stay.

"I think if you press the whole game, you're bound to get kind of tired," Azzi said. "I think at the right moment, we took advantage of Auburn being tired and got our running game going."

Stanford outscored Auburn 22-7 to open a 65-53 lead on Henning's jumper with 10:13 left, and Azzi's last 3-pointer made it 70-57 with 7:54 to go.

Auburn managed to pull to 70-64 on Linda Godby's basket with six minutes left, but Henning and Steding countered with back-to-back 3-pointers to return the lead to 12 and put Stanford out of danger.

"We haven't been pressed very much all season and basically for a reason," VanDerveer said. "We might turn it over occasionally, but it opens things up for 3-point shooting."

Azzi says it doesn't matter who's making those 3-pointers, as long as they go in. Azzi may be a star player, but she says there are no star personalities.

"We all really care a lot about each other and I don't know if you find that on a lot of teams," she said. "That's why I think everything this year has meant so much to me."

Villa seeking national boxing crown

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — This time, he came back the champion.

That was the outcome last week at the State Golden Gloves Tournament in Fort Worth for Big Spring's Rene Villa, who dethroned Trey Harris of Houston to win the welterweight title. The win advances Villa, a 18-year-old senior at Big Spring High School, to the Golden Gloves Nationals May 7-12 in Miami, Fla.

It was a very sweet victory for the Wildhorse Boxing Club member. In his short two-year boxing career, he had competed in several big tournaments and always came back with the silver medal.

For instance, he was runner-up at the National Police Athletic League tournament last year in Commerce, Calif., and runnerup in the National Junior World Cup Games in Marquette, Mich. This year, he lost a close decision to a British fighter in England.

When he began boxing two years ago, Villa won the Regional Golden Gloves tour-namment and advanced to state. He was ousted in the semifinal round in Fort Worth.

Last year he was beaten in the regional GG competition, but rebounded by easily winning regional this year. At state he polished off Kevin Jackson of East Texas and Victor Aranda of El Paso to get to the finals against Harris.

Villa said he felt a lot better being at the state tournament this year, as opposed to two years ago. "This year I was more relaxed, in a more positive mood," said Villa. "When I was 16 I was nervous, I just wanted to get it over with."

Although Villa has boxed much more experienced opponents, he said that facet doesn't bother him. "I fought one guy that was 29, and another one that was 31. The age really doesn't bother me," said Rene.

At stake if Villa wins the national GG welterweight crown is an automatic spot on the team for the Goodwill Games. The Goodwill games will be in Seattle in June.

A goal one would think unreachable, for a young man who's had so little experience.

But trainer and dad Manuel says he knew his eldest son was something different, once he stepped into the ring.

Final Four floor leaders are the walking wounded

DENVER (AP) — If you're looking for adversity at the Final Four, you need to go no further than the guards.

A broken jaw. Diarrhea. Bruised hip and stomach cramps. Even a battered ego on the mend.

Three of the four starters from Duke and UNLV take some form of medical problem into tonight's NCAA title game, and the other one didn't even know if he'd be with his team this season.

UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian feels the subject should begin with 'Greg Anthony, the Runnin' Rebels' point guard.

"I think the greatest sports story of the year is Greg's playing with a broken jaw — and the way he plays," Tarkanian said Sunday.

The 6-foot-2 junior broke his jaw in two places when he tumbled onto the floor while driving for the ball Feb. 12 against Fresno State.

"A lot of guys wouldn't play with a broken jaw," Tarkanian said.

Badgers hockey champs

DETROIT (AP) — Wisconsin's fifth NCAA hockey championship since 1973 will go down as a gift from the class of 1990.

Seven seniors, six of them drafted by NHL teams, propelled the Badgers to a 7-3 win over Colgate on Sunday in the NCAA title game before 15,034 at Joe Louis Arena.

"I knew this group of seniors deserved to win it somewhere along the line, and it's great to have them go out this way," Wisconsin coach Jeff Sauer said.

"We didn't have all the ingredients the last few years — an injury here or player there with inexperience in a certain position. But we were building toward it," Sauer said.

One of those seniors, John Byce, had three goals, including two before the game was four minutes old, to lead the Badgers to their first title since 1983.

Another senior, Chris Tancill, had both Wisconsin goals in the Badgers' 2-1 semifinal win Friday over Boston College.

Colgate, meanwhile, saw its surprising season end with a 31-6-1 record. The tiny upstate New York college (enrollment 2,700) was the regular season and playoff champion in the ECAC. Colgate beat Boston University 3-2 Friday in the semifinals.

Colgate coach Terry Slater said the big building and large number of Wisconsin fans may have intimidated his players.

The only other time Colgate made the 12-team NCAA playoffs was 1981, when it lost to Minnesota in the first round.

The Red Raiders played much of the first period shorthanded, and Wisconsin scored three power-play goals and one shorthanded goal to take a 4-1 lead after the first period.

Colgate wasn't able to get on track until the third period, when it outshot Wisconsin 14-3. Still, the Red Raiders could muster only one third-period goal.

The loss was the first in 20 games for Colgate goalie Dave Gagnon, who is 18-1-1 in that span.

Lakers turn off all that Jazz

By The Associated Press
What could have been a peak week for the Los Angeles Lakers ended with them playing at their peak.

Los Angeles led Utah by just 1 1/2 games and Portland by two after the Trail Blazers roughed up the Lakers 130-111 on Tuesday night, a rout that concluded with Magic Johnson on the bench with an ankle

On Sunday, after Johnson had 33 points and 13 assists in their 119-103 victory over Utah, the Lakers are safely in front again in the Western Conference.

The convincing defeat of Utah followed the Lakers' 135-106 turnaround victory over Portland on Friday.

Los Angeles improved its NBA-best record to 54-17, two games ahead of Detroit. Utah, which grabbed a club-record low of 24 rebounds, still leads the Midwest Division by two games, but trails the Lakers by four in the Western Conference. Portland is 3 1/2 behind Los Angeles in the Pacific Division.

The Lakers, who have won eight straight games at home, managed to bottle up Karl Malone, the league's No. 2 scorer, with double-teaming. Malone led the Jazz with 25 points, but 18 of those were in the second half, when the Lakers already were in control.

The Lakers led 47-37 with 5:44 left in the second quarter before pulling away with a 13-5 run, and the Jazz got no closer than 11 the rest of the way.

Byron Scott added 25 points and James Worthy 23 for Los Angeles. John Stockton had 15 points and 15 assists for Utah, which was outrebounded 18-8 in the first half as the Lakers shot 62.5 percent from the field. The Jazz didn't get their ninth rebound until there was 4:39 remaining in the third period, and by then they trailed 76-58.

76ers 141, Suns 112
Philadelphia won its seventh straight and stayed three games in front in the Atlantic Division as Charles Barkley continued his red-hot shooting against Phoenix.

Barkley scored 31 points on 13-for-16 shooting, giving him 69 points on 27-for-32 shooting in two games. Mike Gminski added 19 points and 13 rebounds for the 76ers.

Kevin Johnson had 23 points and 15 assists and Mike McGee 21 points for the Suns, who fell behind 79-59 at halftime, with the 76ers hitting 31 of 52 shots.

Celtics 133, Magic 125
Boston handed Orlando its 10th loss in 11 games behind Larry Bird's 36 points and Reggie Lewis' 29.

In its first game at Boston Garden, the first-year expansion team played the Celtics even for 2 1/2 quarters before an 18-6 Boston run made the score 101-90.

Bulls 111, Heat 103
Michael Jordan scored 28 of his 47 points in the second half against Miami, leading Chicago its 10th victory in 12 games.

Jordan, who scored 69 and 49 in his previous two games, had 14 points in each of the third and fourth quarters.

Sherman Douglas kept the Heat in contention with 17 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter, but Miami had only four free throws in the final 3 1/2 minutes after leading 99-94 with 3:42 left.

Hawks 142, Warriors 116
Dominique Wilkins scored 37 points and combined with Moses Malone for 41 of Atlanta's 78 first-half points against Golden State.

The Hawks, who stayed a half-game ahead of Cleveland for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference, broke a 53-53 tie with a 25-6 run, taking a 78-59 lead with 28 seconds remaining in the first half.

Cavaliers 121, Pacers 91
Larry Nance had 24 points and 13 rebounds as Cleveland ended Indiana's five-game winning streak.

A baseline jumper by Chuck Person, who led Indiana with 17 points, got the Pacers within four with 3:40 left in the first half. But they didn't have a field goal for the rest of the quarter, and Nance's layup started a 13-4 spurt that gave Cleveland a 62-49 halftime lead.

The Cavaliers, who have won nine of 12 games overall and nine of 10 at home, trail seventh-place Indiana by two in the Eastern Conference.

Mavericks 86, Bucks 72
Dallas won for the ninth time in 11 games as Roy Tarpley had 24 points and 25 rebounds and led a second-quarter charge against Milwaukee.

Tarpley had seven field goals — three on tip-ins — and eight rebounds in the second period as the Mavericks turned a 22-18 deficit into a 48-35 halftime lead.

With leading scorer Ricky Pierce injured and Alvin Robertson serving a one-game suspension for fighting, the Bucks were held to their lowest scoring output of the season, under their previous low of 79.

Clippers 104, SuperSonics 103
Los Angeles trailed by 14 points in the fourth quarter, but came back to beat Seattle when Winston Garland scored his only points on a 22-foot fallaway jumper with 7.8 seconds left.

Danny Manning led the Clippers with 22 points, and he blocked a layup by Michael Cage at the buzzer to preserve the victory.

Bullets 105, Nets 97
Washington's Darrell Walker had 14 points, 11 rebounds and 12 assists at New Jersey, his second straight triple-double and third in four games.

Bogey-less Sills victorious

THE WOODLANDS (AP) — It wasn't the seven birdies that gave Tony Sills a hint that this could be a special day. It was a par-saver on the seventh hole.

PGA

Sills had no bogeys in a 7-under 65 that helped him win his first tournament, the Independent Insurance Agent Open.

But it was a par saver on No. 7 that highlighted Sunday's final round in the rain-shortened 54-hole event.

"That was the key hole," he said Sunday, shortly after beating Gil Morgan on the first playoff hole. "I hit it heavy and it hits the water and skips on the water, just over the wood pilings. God knows how. It was just luck."

Then I stubbed my putter on the back swing and had to back away. Then I sank the 10-foot putt, so instead of hitting 6, I hit 4.

Sills finished regulation play at 204, 12 under par, with Morgan, who shot a 5-under-par 67 in the final round.

They returned to the par 4,

428-yard 10th hole for the playoff and Sills sank a 15-inch par putt after Morgan had bogeyed to secure the $180,000 first prize. Morgan earned $108,000.

Seve Ballesteros, who missed the 54th hole that cost him a shot at the playoff, finished at 205 with a 68, joining a group of eight players.

Brad Bryant, Ian Woosnam, Larry Mize, Bruce Lietzke, Scott Simpson, Fred Couples and second round co-leader David Peoples tied with Ballesteros at 205 and earned $39,062 each.

King holds on for first win

RANCHO MIRANTE, Calif. (AP) — Quite unintentionally, Betsy King provided a bit of drama for the finish of the Dinah Shore tournament.

"I was a little concerned, to say the least," King said Sunday after she held on to win by two shots after losing most of a six-stroke pad on the back nine.

"I was disappointed; I wanted to have a big lead coming down the stretch and be able to relax and enjoy it."

"It didn't work out that way, but I did play well enough to win and that's what it's all about."

Kathy Postlewait, who put pressure on the leader over the final holes and wound up in second-place tie with Shirley Furlong, figured that King played just as well as she needed.

"She did what she had to do," Postlewait said. "If it had been any tighter at the end, Betsy would probably have pulled up on her bootstraps and said, 'See you later.'"

"When we started the day, I said, 'You just can't give Betsy King that kind of a lead,'" Furlong related. "I think she had it under control all the way."

After losing the bulk of her six-stroke pad with four bogeys in five holes beginning at No. 12, King settled down to par the final two holes and win the Dinah Shore title for the second time in four years.

She shot a closing 75, including a 4-over-par 40 on the back nine, to complete the tournament at 5-under-par 283.

Postlewait, who pulled to within two shots of the lead on No. 16 then settled for pars on the final two holes, shot a par 72 for the final round at Mission Hills Country Club.

Furlong, who finished earlier in the day, had a 68.

Wounded

"He never misses a practice, never misses a game. And not only did he not miss a game, but he played with unbelievable courage. He takes charges, he's on the floor, all that."

Tarkanian originally was told Anthony would miss up to six weeks, but he was back at practice the following day. Doctors arranged so that Anthony's jaw is wired shut during games and that the wiring is reduced between games to allow him 30 percent mobility in his mouth.

"He's shown more courage than anybody I've ever been around," Tarkanian said.

Anthony shrugs it off, saying he's merely doing his part to help the team toward its goal of a national championship.

Anthony's statistics have improved since his injury. He had 14 points and five assists Saturday and hit three of four attempts from 3-point range as the Runnin' Rebels earned their berth in the title game with a 90-81 victory over Georgia Tech.

"Our heat pump keeps the house comfortable all year long. And saves us money, too."

NEW YORK (AP) — For better or worse or until billions do them part, says the lawyer for Ivana Trump.

IVANA TRUMP

Mrs. Trump's lawyers said in papers filed Monday that she does not intend to file for divorce, despite allegations that Trump in 1987 "was engaging in adulterous relationships... including the notorious relationship with Marla Maples."

"She wants to preserve the family unit," her attorney, Michael Kennedy, said at an afternoon news conference.

Lawyers for Trump refused to comment on the allegation of adultery and said the papers were "legally and factually deficient." They have 20 days to file a response.

Domestic Relations Law. Trump attorneys Jay Goldberg and Stan Lotwin called the action a "low blow."

They denied Kennedy's assertion that Trump had forced his wife to accept Levner as her lawyer. Levner declined to comment.

Goldberg said Mrs. Trump's claim to be a "worldly, wise and knowledgeable woman" who made significant contributions to the Trump empire was inconsistent with her assertion that she was unaware of her rights when she signed a 1987 post-marital agreement.

Kennedy denied reports that the contract called for Mrs. Trump to receive $25 million in the event the marriage broke up.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

TUESDAY,
APRIL 3, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Eddie Murphy, singer Doris Day, entertainer Wayne Newton, actress Marsha Mason.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finances require careful handling. Grab every interesting opportunity that comes your way. New professional alliances are indicated. Patience will help reduce stress in a personal relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Happily, your energy level is highest in late morning. Schedule interviews and auditions accordingly. Mull over your long-term goals. Realize that, to truly forgive, you have to forget. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Heed your intuitive feeling about a monetary matter. Unusual ideas arouse the interest of important people. A promotion or pay raise is in the offing. Be very careful who you share confidences with.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A great day for career and business matters. Avoid haste. An influential higher-up is impressed by your conservative approach. You meet someone new in the most unlikely place! Finances should be looking good.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An aggressive manner pays off in business, but not in romance. Consideration and understanding are your greatest allies in affairs of the heart. Play your cards carefully. Loved one may be testing you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get out and about today. Make the most of influential social contacts. The support of a prominent associate convinces you that you are on the right track at last. Look ahead with confidence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bewary of too many coincidences where a financial matter is concerned. Make a special effort to repay a past favor. A friend who discusses personal problems really wants sympathy, not advice!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A financial question must be resolved without delay. A creative project could boost your income. Get in touch with influential friends who might help you. A relationship needs overhauling.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A no-nonsense attitude will sit well with those who matter most right now. Give top priority to insurance and tax matters. A new friend pays you a well-deserved compliment. Accept it gracefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A work project should get top priority today. Curb an urge to rest on your laurels and daydream. A change of plans may irritate mate or partner. Explain the urgency of the situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A conversation with a warmhearted relative cheers you. Someone who cares will urge you to be more adventurous. Think about it. Inspiration could come from an unusual experience. Romance is thrilling.

Coahoma bookworms rewarded with class pizza party

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

The reward was tasty for Patricia Wilson's 23 second graders at Coahoma Elementary, who read the most books in the area in a recent competition. The bookworms read 1005 books and wrote 1005 book reports from October to February, winning a pizza party for the whole class from Pizza Hut's Book-It contest.

Each student read and wrote about at least eight books a month, earning a total of 113 personal pan pizzas — one for each month in which eight books were read.

Justin Phillips and Robert Rister devoured books with an especially voracious appetite. Justin read 85 books and Robert read 62, well above the 40-book minimum. They won $5 gift certificates from Ms. Wilson, which they spent at the school's book fair.

Ms. Wilson noticed marked im-

Chelsea Ferguson, John David Newton, Buddy Murray, Taylor Bristow, Shawn Simmons and Billy Kinsey.

In the second grade, winners were Robert Carey, Amanda Breyman, Chris Rios, Casey McCullough, Stephen Tilley, Shae Sauncy, Blake White, Kenny Smith, Josh Spencer, Lisa Blevins and Tonnie Loera. Third grade winners were Stephanie Canales, Jason Mims, Shana Self, Valencia Curry, Amy Rogers, Cory Walker, Baline Roman, Jason Anderson and Jerrad Fishback.

Fourth grade winners were Sarah Kennemer, Dondi Brewer, Kristina Lane, Nikki Ellis, Travis Womack, Michael Baldwin, Terra Proctor, Dawn Parker and Cody Fruer. Fifth grade winners were Leslie Osburn, Dale Ahler, Cody Carlile, Christina Gunnels, Gloria Carmona, Robert Hillger, Veronica Serrano and Mandy Usserv.

Teacher of the year

Gayla Williams, associate professor of business at Howard College, was named District 18 TBEA teacher of the year at a brunch in Midland March 24.

Williams has taught at the college for four years and previously taught at Coahoma and Colorado City high schools. She earned her associate of arts degree at Howard College, where she was a cheerleader, and earned her bachelor and master of business education degrees at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Williams has sponsored the Business Professionals of America Association for the past three years. The organization won sweepstakes two of those years and has had several students place in national contests each year.

As district teacher of the year, Williams is a nominee for the state teacher of the year.

At the brunch meeting, Mary Deats, professor of accounting at the college, was honored for 20 years of continuous membership in the Texas Business Education Association.

President's honor roll

Blain R. Callison of Big Spring made the president's honor roll for the winter quarter at Texas State Technical Institute in Waco. He is studying aircraft pilot training technology at TSTI. A Big Spring High School graduate, Callison is the son of Howard Callison.

Play wins awards

Big Spring High School's one-act play, "The Rimers of Eldritch," has advanced to UIL area competition. Director Timothy Haynes, the school's drama coach, said this was the first time in at least 17 years that a BSHS one-act play has emerged from district competition.

Howard College tries marketing strategies

BIG SPRING — Marketing has become an important part of college and university programs. This year, for example, recruiters contacted over 1600 high school students in an effort to lure them to Howard College.

The college's dean of students Dusty Johnston started the effort last September by determining his market area.

In November Howard College hosted a College Day which included other colleges but gave the student the opportunity to see the campus and get a feel for the college atmosphere.

"We like to follow up by sending out posters and postcards to the students. It lets them know we are still interested in getting them to Howard College," said Johnston.

In early April a new marketing technique for Howard College, telephone recruiting, will begin. This method uses a group from Howard College to contact each

In the district level performance, held at the high school Thursday afternoon, Josh Free won best actor, Tonya Painter and Angela Reed won all-star cast and Russ Roten, Ken Noble and Vanna Walker won honorable mention. "Rimers" and Snyder High School's "The Taming of the Shrew" will compete against two other plays as yet undetermined at area-level competition at Snyder High School on Friday.

Members of the Big Spring cast include Josh Free, Tonya Painter, Bree McDaniel, Marci Weaver, Lee Baker, Sunny Fraser, Vanna Walker, Ken Noble, Russ Roten, Angela Reed, Cindy Paschael, Rob Woolvorton and Balae Horn.

"Rimers" crew members include Johnny DeLeon, Pam Ferguson, J.P. Shanks and Brandon Haney. Doug Logan, Kaysie Sparling, Rayla Myers and Dwayne Partain are alternates.

Junior Honor Society

Runnels Junior High School Principal Tom Henry inducted new members into the National Junior Honor Society at a ceremony

March 22. Students are invited to join on the basis of their scholarship, citizenship, service, leadership and character.

New members include Shay T. Adams, Amy L. Alexander, Heather M. Atkinson, Brandy I. Bedell, Rachel S. Brown, Jaye J. Burt, Stephanie M. Calvio, Kendra D. Carey, Amy N. Cook, Keri S. Cotton, Debbie S. Late start

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For a while, it looked like the joke was going to be on the pranksters at the 11th Annual St. Stupid's Day Parade, which got off to a late start because half the participants forgot to set their clocks ahead.

But once the gang gathered nearly an hour after the official starting time, the ritual celebration of April Fools' Day was under way.

One participant wore a wedding dress and carried a drum. Patrick Campbell wore a blanket and a Donald Duck safari hat.

Founder "Bishop Joey," a fat, balding man in red leotards, arrived to a drum roll and handed out kazooes.

"I am Bishop Joey, head of the Church of the Last Laugh, the world's fastest growing snack religion!" yelled the bishop, who is also known as actor Ed Holmes of the San Francisco Mime Troupe.

"Wise up! It's later than we think!" he said, leading the crowd down Columbus Avenue.

George isn't here

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — George slept here, but he's not in now.

Dozens of people received telephone messages Sunday with a number and instructions to call George back. Upon dialing the number, they learned the George they were looking for had left — quite some time ago.

That's because "George" is George Washington. And the messages to call him were left by practical jokesters up to a traditional April Fools' Day ruse.

The phone number belongs to Washington's Headquarters State Historic Site in Newburgh, north of New York City. George and Martha Washington lived at the site for 16½ months as the Revolutionary War drew to a close.

"When people call for George they don't know it's George Washington they're asking for," said site manager Tom Hughes. "We try to gently clue them in that George is George Washington and that he hasn't been here for a long, long time."

Hughes said the calls have been pouring in every April Fools' Day for 20 years.

No more labels

DALLAS (AP) — The American Heart Association, under pressure from the federal government, will discontinue a food labeling program designed to help consumers quickly identify products considered best for the prevention of heart disease, a spokesman confirmed Monday.

The HeartGuide program, an attempt by the heart association to identify and label low-fat, low-cholesterol, low-sodium foods, came under attack by the federal Food and Drug Administration, which opposed endorsements by non-government groups.

City hopeful more teams will 'play ball'

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — In an effort to draw in some softball tournaments, the city has decided to move an outfield fence back on a softball field so that it will adhere to tournament standards.

Moving the fence and light poles back on the Tommy Walker Field on the south side plus other improvements to the facilities should help draw softball teams to local tournaments, which would bring more money into the city, said City Administrator Paul Lively.

"Right now the field is too short to be sanctioned," Lively said. "It has to be 300-feet from the home plate to the fence. It's about 270-feet (right now)."

Helping efforts has been TU

"Right now the field (at Tommy Walker Field) is too short to be sanctioned. It has to be 300-feet from the home plate to the fence. It's about 270-feet (right now)." — Stanton City Administrator Paul Lively.

Electric, which donated free of charge the equipment and the workcrew to move back the 70-foot light poles, which are planted 14 feet in the ground. The work began Thursday and was completed Friday.

"We don't normally do that kind of thing," said Manager Terry Blair of Lamesa. "This kind of deal benefits the whole community. We're trying to help them out a little bit."

Lively said the city will begin moving the fence back some time next week. He estimates that moving the fence will take about two weeks. Work on the fence and rewiring the light poles should not exceed $1,000, he said.

Club where the idea was first discussed.

"They've been limited in the past because of the fence," he said. "That park was originally built for pony league baseball."

"That's just too short a park," he said. "You get higher classification teams in there and they can just hit home runs like I can hit them out of a little league park."

He said the Evening Lions might put on a tournament. "Some of us have discussed it," he said.

Tournaments may also be held in behalf of the Convent Foundation said Cox who is a member of that organization also. "We'll probably have one or two tournaments to help raise money for the convent," he said.

"I'd like to see us get some more here," Lively said. "It'd bring some money in here."

Other improvements to the field will include putting roofs back on the dugouts and fixing the bathrooms which have been vandalized in the past, Lively said.

"I know of two times that somebody's gone in there and broke a bunch of stuff and tore up things," he said. "We're going to try one more time."

Gramm, Williams seek broadening of GOP abortion stand

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm are among state Republican leaders working to broaden their party's stance on abortion in an effort to attract more voters in November, a Houston newspaper reported.

Williams and Gramm have talked since the March 13 primary about adding more exceptions to the Republicans' anti-abortion view, the Houston Post reported Sunday.

But Williams said, "We don't have a decision on it yet."

A position paper expected to be released in the next two weeks will provide a package of anti-abortion statements Republican leaders hope will create "broad support" among Texas voters, party leaders told The Post.

Texas GOP Chairman Fred Meyer said there is little chance the party would unite on an abortion stance.

"There is general agreement on the platform at the time that it's passed, but it never is the exact position of every person in the party," Meyer said. "The votes on the party platform are never unanimous."

In 1988, Texas Republicans adopted a "one-exception" party plank on abortion, allowing abortions only when the mother's life is in danger.

The new proposal is expected to have three exceptions: When the mother's life is threatened and in cases of rape and incest.

"I think it's intended to try and help the ticket deal with a likely attack on individual candidates or collective issues from the Democrats in the fall," said Rob Mosbacher, the Republican nominee for lieutenant governor, who has joined in drafting the position paper.

"I think we're better served by trying to find areas ... that will have a broad base of support," he said.

Gramm's spokesman, Larry Neal, said the senator has never "tried to differentiate between all the hairsplitting on the issue. When he's been asked where he stands on abortion, he has always answered he's pro-life."

Gramm's Democratic opponent, state Sen. Hugh Parmer of Fort Worth, already has challenged Gramm's abortion stand in a series of radio advertisements.

Pro-choice stances in New Jersey and Virginia are believed to have contributed to the defeat of Republican gubernatorial candidates last fall.

In Texas, Democratic gubernatorial contenders Ann Richards and Jim Mattox, who face one another in the April 10 party runoff, are both pro-choice. Williams has said he favors the three-exception approach.

But the proposed platform change could have trouble passing the GOP delegation at the state Republican convention in Fort Worth June 28-29.

"This is not something that's going to be given up without a major fight," said Bill Price, president of the 100,000-member Texans United for Life, the state's largest anti-abortion group.

Greyhound violence escalates; driver wounded in shooting

By RANDALL DICKERSON
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Incensed by a sniper attack that could cost a bus driver his arm, Greyhound says it won't bargain with its striking employees until a week has passed without violence against the company.

Related story, page 6-A.

"No American worth his salt negotiates with terrorists," Greyhound chairman and chief executive Fred G. Currey said at a Greyhound terminal Sunday on a visit from Dallas to see the wounded Southeastern Trailways driver.

David E. Bryant, 58, of Cincinnati, was critically wounded by a shot fired through the front window of his bus Saturday night from a pickup truck that pulled alongside, police said. None of the 46 passengers on the Louisville-bound bus was injured.

Southeastern Trailways is carrying passengers on some Greyhound routes under a pooling arrangement that existed before the strike, a company official said.

"It's an open-and-shut case of terrorism," Currey said at a news conference.

Striking drivers said they don't believe any of their group would shoot another driver.

WHITE HOUSE, Tenn. — Sgt. George Dittfurth of the Tennessee Highway Patrol guards a Greyhound bus, the latest target of violence in the nation-wide bus strike. Gunfire injured the driver, David Bryant, but he was able to stop the bus without further incident.

Medical Center operated for six hours trying to save Bryant's left arm but won't know for several days whether they succeeded, said Wayne Wood.

"If everything goes perfectly, his arm will not need to be amputated," Wood said.

Currey was not able to visit Bryant, who was recovering from surgery when the executive arrived.

About 6,300 Greyhound drivers went on strike March 2 over wages and job security. The company has reported 29 shootings of buses, 70 bomb threats and more than 100 other incidents since then.

The company had said it would meet with the union today, but on Friday canceled the session, citing continued violence.

No arrests were made in the shooting.

"Let the facts speak for themselves. Whatever comes out of it, if it ends up being strike-related it is; if it isn't, it isn't," said Bill Holt, spokesman for the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation.

Joe Semmes, a local union executive, blamed "demented people."

"They hear Mr. Currey won't negotiate while this violence continues and they say, 'Here's a good chance I can stir up a lot of trouble,'" he said.

Rudd: Some schools may be exempt from state mandates

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

BROWNFIELD — Up to 10 percent of the state's best schools could become exempt from certain state mandates in an effort to save money in a restructured state school finance plan, said a local state representative today.

The Legislature was scheduled to convene at noon today for a second 30-day special session to try again to come up with a new finance plan. The Texas Supreme Court in October declared the present system unfair to poorer school districts.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said this morning that a rebuilt

House Bill 1 could require an estimated $400-$450 million in extra funds that will come from a lottery and/or a tax increase.

Rudd, whose district includes Martin County, said it may feature exemptions to certain schools on state mandates that require costly monitoring.

In the last 30-day special session which ended Wednesday, Rudd voted against House Bill 1, even though he was listed as a co-sponsor, saying that it was too expensive. It was defeated by the House 101-45.

"The bill I introduced and the bill that came out of the (House Public

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said this morning that a rebuilt House Bill 1 could require an estimated $400-$450 million in extra funds that will come from a lottery and/or a tax increase.

Education) Committee were different," he said. "It just cost too much money basically."

The upcoming bill will attempt to cut costs in the area mandates. "What we tried to do is lessen some of the mandates," he said. The exemptions will apply to school's that are "recognized as excellent."

Mandates that schools currently must adhere to involve 22-1 student-teacher ratio's, textbook items and teacher salary guidelines.

"Those that take money to monitor will be pulled out," Rudd said. "I don't know which ones will be."

Schools affected will be among those that have done good on the TEAMS Test, have good dropout ratios and have never been in trouble with the Texas Education Agency, he said.

"West Texas generally has a good tradition of having good schools," he said. "What you're looking at here are probably about 10 percent of the schools in the state."

Rudd, who was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements in November to the Governor's Task Force on School Finance, said he and other representatives will look at a lottery and a half-cent sales tax as sources of funding for the plan. Clements has said in the past that he does not want a tax increase to fund a new plan. Rudd has never favored a lottery before but said, "I may have to. We're not left with much choice."

The Supreme Court ordered the Legislature to come up with a new plan by May 1. State Comptroller Bob Bullock said that state funding could be cut off after that.

The present finance system, which depends on a combination of state and federal aid and local property taxes, totals about $13.5 billion a year, Bullock said.

Poindexter case to jury

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jury in John M. Poindexter's trial began deliberating today whether the former national security adviser was guilty of withholding details of the Iran-Contra affair from Congress.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene instructed the jury of eight women and four men to ignore the merits of President Reagan's policies of helping the Nicaraguan rebels or selling arms to Iran in an attempt to free American hostages.

"It's not for you to decide who was right in political disputes between Congress and the president, between Democrats and Republicans or between liberals and conservatives," Greene told the jury.

"You are not called on to decide if the president's policy toward Iran and the American hostages was a wise or unwise policy," the judge said. He told them instead to focus on any evidence of "particular crimes ... as distinct from broad policy."

Poindexter, who was Reagan's national security adviser from late 1985 to November 1986, is accused of conspiring with former White House aide Oliver L. North and others to obstruct congressional inquiries about covert assistance given the Contras and U.S.-Iran arms sales.

He also faces charges of obstructing Congress and making false statements to lawmakers.

In final arguments on Friday, defense lawyer Richard Beckler told jurors that Poindexter, a retired Navy rear admiral, was not part of "some grimy little conspiracy that the prosecution would have you believe."

He tried to suggest that North went behind Poindexter's back, saying, "There was absolutely many things that Admiral Poindexter didn't know Oliver North was doing."

Beckler told jurors that Iran-Contra prosecutors produced as a witness only one of Poindexter's alleged co-conspirators, Fawn Hall, and that the former White House secretary testified she only had a nodding acquaintance with the retired Navy rear admiral.

But Greene told jurors it was not necessary for prosecutors to prove that all the conspirators knew each other or that Poindexter knew everything that other members of the alleged conspiracy were doing.

Prosecutors must show that "the defendant knew or had reason to know" a conspiracy existed.

A chronology of violence in Greyhound bus strike

DALLAS (AP) — Here are major incidents of violence recorded by Greyhound Lines Inc. since the bus drivers strike began March 2, according to company attorney Melanie Scofield and other reports.

The company has reported at least 70 bomb threats, at least 24 shootings and numerous other incidents of threat or vandalism, such as vacant buses set on fire.

The union denies a role in the violence and cites at least 60 violent incidents by replacement drivers against strikers. One striker, Robert Waterhouse, was killed March 3 on a Redding, Calif., picket line when he was crushed by a bus driven by a replacement. But the driver was not charged.

Here are the major attacks on buses listed by Greyhound:

March 2 — Two shots fired into Greyhound's main Chicago terminal. No injuries.

March 3 — Driver reports hearing a loud noise like an explosion about a mile northeast of Wytheville, Va. An inspection of the vehicle reveals a bullet hole in the lower left corner of the windshield. No injuries.

March 3 — Shot fired at bus as it leaves another bus station in Chicago. Two people slightly injured by flying debris.

March 3 — A bus en route to Cleveland is fired on at a toll gate in Indiana. The shot penetrates a radiator screen on the back of the bus. No injuries.

March 9 — Three shots fired at a bus carrying 29 passengers from Cleveland to Louisville, Ky., on Interstate 71 between Columbus, Ohio, and Cincinnati. Passengers transfer to another bus and continue on to Cincinnati.

March 9 — A driver en route from Phoenix to Los Angeles hears a "pop" and finds a bullet hole in the door of the bus. The driver says a car in front of the bus begins flashing its lights moments before the shooting. No injuries.

March 11 — Shot hits a bus traveling from Detroit to St. Petersburg, Fla., about 12 miles south of Jacksonville, Fla., injuring eight people.

March 12 — A bus traveling from New York to Boston via Hartford, Conn., is shot at as it travels on Interstate 84. A single bullet penetrated the middle hatch of the baggage bin. No injuries.

March 12 — A Greyhound-owned Trailways bus parked in a storage yard in Fresno, Calif., is set on fire with a road flare. No injuries.

March 13 — A sniper opens fire on a moving Greyhound bus in Chicago, hitting the door with one bullet and a front window with another. No injuries. Passengers are transferred to another bus bound for Memphis, Tenn.

March 14 — Two shots strike a window of a Greyhound bus carrying 48 passengers traveling outside Chattanooga, Tenn. No injuries.

March 18 — A bus was fired on in downtown Cleveland. No injuries.

March 19 — Glass shattered in front door of Tallahassee, Fla., terminal by pellet or BB.

March 20 — Two shots hit driver's front window, and one hits passenger front window while bus with 50 passengers passes through Roanoke, Va., en route to Christianburg terminal. No injuries.

March 21 — A single shot strikes the right passenger door of a bus carrying 30 passengers in San Antonio. No injuries.

March 21 — A bus is pelted by rocks while traveling near Las Vegas. An elderly passenger was slightly injured by flying glass.

March 22 — In St. Louis, Mo., three shots strike at the driver's window of a bus carrying 19 passengers. No injuries.

March 22 — Four shots fired at bus carrying eight passengers in Collinsville, Ill.

Raisins, walnuts and prunes, among this country's favorite foods, were popular long before the debut of microwave cooking. Though old in years, all three have remained young in spirit, and proved naturals for their new role as microwave stars!

The time seemed perfect to look at Sun-Maid Raisins, Diamond Walnuts and Sunsweet Prunes in new ways and put them to the test in a microwave audition... offering trusted, exciting flavor and nutritional assets to the time-conscious microwave cook.

The microwave oven has reached stardom after nearly two decades of standing in the wings as an understudy. Presently more than 75% of homes have at least one microwave oven. It is expected that within the next ten years, 50% of all American households will be "two microwave homes."

Changes in lifestyles, work habits, family size and structure, and changing food preferences have been key factors affecting consumer acceptance of microwave cooking. All have combined to create a wave of new microwave interest.

Prunes, a main attraction in kitchens across the country, have a number of outstanding qualities which add to their appeal. High in fiber and a rich source of vitamin A and potassium, prunes perform well with a variety of foods. Their natural sweetness is a perfect flavor contrast for savory chicken in Starlet Prune Medley.

With other fruits, a small amount of raisins and minerals, and cholesterol-free, walnuts add a mellow, distinctive flavor to many different foods. When toasted, they provide extra-crunchy texture to the sauce which earns rave reviews for Spotlight Walnut Fettuccine.

Raisins, a traditional and beloved ingredient used around the world, appeal to today's cooks because of their unique good taste and versatility. A natural source of pure food energy, they provide important minerals and are virtually fat and sodium-free. Raisins take a bow when presented in a delectable sauce with Center Stage Raisin Salmon Salad.

Whatever your choice, you're bound to be pleased with this trio of classics in their new role as microwave stars.

Presenting... QUICK MICROWAVE TIPS

PRUNES

- ★ To stew, combine 1/2 cup liquid per cup of prunes. Cover microwavable dish with plastic wrap, venting one side. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 3 minutes; stir. Cover and let stand 3 to 5 minutes.

RAISINS

- ★ To plump, add 1 tablespoon water per cup of raisins. Cover microwavable dish with plastic wrap, venting one side. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 30 to 60 seconds; stir. Cover and let stand 2 to 3 minutes.

WALNUTS

- ★ To toast, place 1 cup walnuts in 9-inch glass pie plate. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4 to 5 minutes, or until toasted, stirring every 2 minutes. Cool.

Center Stage RAISIN SALMON SALAD

The goodness of raisins in a zesty citrus dressing delivers unexpected and delicious taste to this warm entrée salad.

- | | |
|----------------------------------|--|
| 1 tablespoon cornstarch | 1/2 teaspoon dill weed |
| 1 cup orange juice | 1/4 teaspoon salt |
| 2 2/3 cup Sun-Maid Raisins | 4 salmon steaks or white fish (about 1 3/4 pounds) |
| 2 tablespoons sliced green onion | 8 cups assorted salad greens |
| 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard | 1/2 cup shredded carrot |
| 1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger | |

Blend cornstarch with orange juice in 2-cup glass measure. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 2 to 3 minutes, stirring every minute until thickened. Stir in raisins, green onion, mustard, ginger, dill weed and salt; mix well. Set aside.

Place fish in 2-quart rectangular baking dish; cover with plastic wrap, venting one corner. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4 to 5 minutes, or until fish flakes easily, rotating dish halfway through.

Toss salad greens with carrots and place on serving plates. Top with fish and drizzle with raisin dressing. Makes 4 servings.

Spotlight WALNUT FETTUCCINE

Microwave-toasted walnuts provide that special crunch and mellow flavor in this guaranteed-to-please pasta favorite.

- | | |
|--|--------------------------------|
| 6 cups hottest tap water | 1 clove garlic, minced |
| 1 tablespoon vegetable oil | 1/3 cup all-purpose flour |
| 1 teaspoon salt | 1 1/2 cups milk |
| 9 ounces spinach fettuccine | 1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese |
| 1 cup Diamond Walnuts, coarsely chopped, toasted | 1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese |
| 6 tablespoons butter or margarine | 1/8 teaspoon white pepper |
| 1/2 cup sliced green onions | 1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg |

Place water in 2-quart batter bowl; cover with plastic wrap, venting spout. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 8 minutes, or until water boils. Stir in oil, salt and fettuccine; cover. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 6 to 8 minutes, or until tender, stirring halfway through. Drain; cover. Set aside.

To toast walnuts, spread in single layer in 9-inch glass pie plate. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 5 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes; set aside. Place butter, green onion and garlic in 4-cup glass measure. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 2 minutes. Blend in flour. Stir in milk; mix well. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4 minutes, stirring every minute. Blend in Swiss cheese, Parmesan cheese, pepper and nutmeg. Fold in 3/4 cup of the walnuts. Heat fettuccine 2 minutes, if needed. Place on serving dish and pour walnut sauce over fettuccine. Garnish with remaining 1/4 cup walnuts. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Starlet PRUNE MEDLEY

Flavorful, moist prunes complement this succulent chicken main dish. Serve it with Golden Polenta, a cornmeal side dish accented with cheese.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1 pound chicken breast, skinned and boned | 1 can (16 oz) stewed tomatoes |
| 1 onion, cut into chunks | 1 can (7 oz) whole green chiles, cut into chunks |
| 2 cups small mushrooms, halved | 2 tablespoons cornstarch |
| 1 clove garlic, minced | 2 tablespoons water |
| 1 teaspoon chili powder | 1 1/2 cups Sunsweet Pitted Prunes |
| 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin | Golden Polenta (recipe follows) |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | |

Cut chicken into chunks. Place chicken and onion in 2-quart round casserole; cover with lid or plastic wrap, venting one side. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4-6 minutes, stirring halfway through. Stir in mushrooms and garlic; cover. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4 minutes; drain. Stir in chili powder, cumin, salt, stewed tomatoes, green chiles, cornstarch dissolved in water, and prunes. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 6 minutes. Serve with Golden Polenta. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Place butter, green onion and garlic in 4-cup glass measure. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 2 minutes. Stir in milk. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4 minutes or until simmering. Gradually add cornmeal and salt, stirring constantly. Microwave on HIGH (100%) 4 minutes, stirring every minute, or until thickened. Blend in cheese. Serve warm. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The Road

Britain goes batty over bats

Nature-loving Britons received considerable publicity recently when they launched a campaign to prevent toads from being crushed by automobiles. Now, according to International Wildlife magazine, they have found another much-scorched creature on which to focus their affections—bats. International Wildlife is a publication of the National Wildlife Federation.

For centuries, Britons have despised these flitting, crepe-winged mammals. But now, Her Majesty's subjects have gone batty over bats. Scores of Brits are hanging bat roosting boxes in their gardens. Many more have joined one of the 60 or so bat-conservation groups around the United Kingdom. Others are buying bat guano (50 pence per 2 ounce bag from the Cornwall bat group) for the enrichment of flower beds. And armed with a tough bat-protection law, British conservationists are starting to reverse a longstanding decline in native bat populations.

Not surprisingly, a batlash has developed. "If I had the time," claimed writer Auberon Waugh, "I would agitate for a law to make it an imprisonable offense for anyone to succor or even smile at a bat."

Clergymen with bats in their belfry are also feeling uncharitable toward bats these days. Major Harry Porter, church warden at St. James in Birlingham, Worcestershire, complained that the organist there can no longer tell the black keys from the white ones because of the ceaseless rain of bat droppings. When Porter resorted to placing a stuffed owl on a windowsill in an effort to frighten away the bats, he was severely reprimanded by one letter writer to The Times for illegally annoying the roosting animals.

In Kent, however, the pendulum has swung very far the other way. Not long ago, a group of bat enthusiasts there persuaded Britain's Concrete Pipe Association to donate 50 feet of 6-foot-diameter pipe to the cause. The pipe was hauled down from the Midlands, and the bat lovers buried the pipe sections in a deep trench. They then built up brick columns inside for a touch of homey texture and closed off the pipe ends with iron grillwork.

This stupendous labor, of course, was merely intended to give some beleaguered creatures of midnight a corner of Kent to call home. But in the annals of Brit meets bat, it may be their finest hour.

Peanuts attract birds, squirrels

By CRAIG TUFTS

If you'd like to give the local birds and squirrels a bit of variety in their diet, go to the local supermarket and buy a bag of peanuts. There's no need to provide gourmet food. The basic peanut roasted in the shell will do for starters. Peanuts are a treat for many wildlife species. Offer them and you'll be treated to exceptional performances as your birds and squirrels encounter and partake of this new food.

Left in the shell, ground and tree squirrels, chipmunks, jays, magpies and many woodpeckers will make off with all you can offer. Picture a diminutive chipmunk trying to stuff a three nut unshelled goober into his cheek pouch. Jays hide the peanuts in strange places. Next spring, you can go on a treasure hunt, the course charted by the birds.

Hang a batch of unshelled peanuts in an onion bag, suspended well out of the reach of squirrels (if you succeed in doing this, let me know) and you'll create a nifty feeder for small woodpeckers and titmice. How a downy woodpecker knows that it should land on plastic netting and, with nearly surgical precision, extract a peanut kernel from the shell, I'll probably never know. I never lose interest in watching the process however, and perhaps someday I'll come up with an explanation.

For weaker billed birds, shelled peanuts are the bill of fare. Buyer beware however. The seed mix or bulk seller of bird seed that tries to convince you that the little bitter peanut hearts are the peanut food of choice is either trying to dupe you or more likely, just doesn't know what tastes good to the birds you wish to attract.

Dr. Al Geis, who headed the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's excellent research program on songbird feeding preferences, found that pieces of peanut kernels were the favorite food of bluejays, tufted titmice and whitethroated sparrows. The hearts however, the peanut product most commonly found for sale in bird feeding specialty stores, were highly attractive only to starlings, a species many find unwelcome at the feeder.

Chopped peanut kernels are terrific sources of protein and fats for some birds that infrequently visit feeders. Thrashers, thrushes, creepers, wrens, some warblers and some of the smaller sparrows will search diligently for small bits of peanut at your feeders or on the ground.

So, try adding peanuts to your feeding menu. Wildlife will appreciate the occasional special snack and I can guarantee that you'll be entertained by their visits.

Craig Tufts writes a column called "The Backyard Naturalist" for the National Wildlife Federation.

Creative wallcovering turns bedroom into adventureland

With the introduction of a brand new children's room decorating product called Decorate-It!™, getting sent to your room may no longer be a punishment.

Decorate-It!, the first removable room decorating system featuring familiar Post-it™ brand adhesive, may also help cut down on the number of walls adorned with jumbled, but unwanted, crayon drawings. This revolutionary product combines the ease and flexibility of 3M's removable Post-it brand adhesive with art from top children's illustrators—a combination which lets children literally play on the walls with their parents' blessing.

"Decorate-It! is the first product that really allows children to be involved in the decorating process, a step that many child psychologists are suggesting is important in childhood development," says Frances (Frankie) Martinez, a California mother of three who invented Decorate-It! "It also develops interaction between parents and children. And, since each system has a list of characters and an open-ended story line, it can also be used to stimulate the imagination."

"It's great from a parent's standpoint, since it allows you to decorate your child's room without having to worry about making a mistake or having the child outgrow the design before you're finished," says Frankie. "You can just peel the system off the wall and start again."

Each of the Decorate-It! theme kits contains a 15-foot pre-cut "Story Border" and more than 125 pre-cut colorful characters and props. Every applique and border is as permanent or as temporary as you want, and since no paint or paste is ever needed, each piece can be easily moved around again and again to create new story lines.

Parents and children can choose from six visually appealing room kits created by some of Los Angeles' top graphic artists, illustrators and designers. For newborns, Carole Etow's Hares & Bears!™ offers a world of wonder, with teddy bears and bunnies floating on puffy clouds. Cheri L. Strole's Fun For All!™ kit includes characters that complement the Dream Machine™ bedroom coordinates and other pastel bedding.

Popular children's book illustrator Rhonda Voo has created a kit that appeals to all ages with The Voo Zoo!™. This system features bears with banjos, flying cats, pink elephants and a musical monkey. Designer Eddie Young takes children on an enchanting journey through the world beneath the sea with Sea-nanigans!™, which introduces such interesting characters as the dolphin teacher, Miss Quote, Bruiser the Shark, and Bernie the Friendly Whale.

The Lost West!™, Joel Nakamura's imaginary world of new-age dinosaurs and cowpokes, gives new meaning to the term "blazing saddles," while imaginative designer Kate Knudsen adds some spice to desert life with Prairie Tales!™.

"We've found that parents avoid decorating their children's rooms for a number of reasons," says Angel Martinez, Frankie's husband and president of Decorate-It! "First, they're afraid their children will outgrow the designs almost as soon as they've finished decorating. Second, they're hesitant about the prospect of having to live with something after they've placed it on the walls—especially if they find they don't really like it. And finally, they don't think they have the time, money or expertise to do a good job. Decorate-It! fulfills all these needs and concerns and in addition, it makes decorating a fun activity—which most people would consider a rare experience!"

Decorate-It! fits nicely with the cur-

Knowing CPR techniques could help you save a pet

CPR is a technique that combines artificial respiration and heart massage to revive human heart attack victims. Pet owners often have difficulty handling their pet when it loses consciousness, but CPR should work. The animal version of CPR can be used when a pet loses consciousness due to cardiac arrest, injury, trauma, or smoke inhalation, for example.

When a pet has heart failure, the owner should avoid three reactions:

1. Do not panic. It is up to you to convey a sense of calm not only to your animal, but also to those around you.
2. Do not waste time. Make immediate arrangements to transfer the animal to a nearby veterinary hospital.
3. Do not handle the pet unnecessarily. Administer first aid or CPR to avoid further injury and to save its life.

Keep pets calm

Keep the animal comfortable, stable and calm. Observe and evaluate the situation constantly, talking to your pet slowly as you would talk to a child. Approach an injured animal slowly and carefully, because even a pet with absolute trust and confidence in you may attempt to bite or scratch when this is the only way it knows how to communicate fear and apprehension.

The first step in CPR is to restrain the animal by muzzling a dog or wrapping a cat in a towel or blanket. Next, use a blunt instrument or cloth to clear the animal's mouth of foreign objects, blood, or mucus. Never use your fingers for this procedure because the animal may bite them.

Inflate the lungs by blowing short breaths into the animal's nose, not mouth, until the chest expands. You may use a handkerchief if you prefer.

CPR technique

The air passageway through an animal's nose is better than the mouth because it creates a closed system which enables the lungs to expand. Blow 15 times per minute. At the same time, apply heart massage with your free hand about 60-80 times per minute.

There is no time limit for applying CPR. The technique may be used until the animal begins breathing and the heart is beating or until the owner is certain that the patient is beyond help with no chance of survival.

CPR could be a first line of defense in saving an animal's life. It is temporary treatment meant to sustain life until professional care is available. It is by no means a cure and should be followed up with a visit to a veterinarian. Check with your veterinarian on proper CPR techniques or for pet CPR classes in your area.

The American Animal Hospital Association is an international organization of more than 10,000 veterinarians who treat companion animals such as dogs and cats. Established in 1933, the association is well known among veterinarians for its standards for hospitals and pet health care.

Secret to riches revealed by 'instant millionaire'

Donald Trump, move over. Millionaire Mark Fisher is about to unlock the secrets that made him rich—incredibly rich.

Less than ten years ago, this young Canadian advertising executive found himself in a dead end job, making very little money and having very little fun. Fisher gathered all his courage and what meager financial resources he had and walked out—determined to make his first million in six years.

He was wrong. It took only five. Now a wildly successful publishing magnate and property developer in Montreal, Fisher has given us the formula that worked for him in a charming new book, The Instant Millionaire, a light-hearted look at his odyssey into material and personal wealth.

Already a bestseller in France and England, The Instant Millionaire is becoming the "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" of the business world in this country. Fisher's story is a delightful fable about a young man who seeks advice from an eccentric old millionaire.

The old gentleman is a master of tricks and gives the young man a series of frustrating instructions that seem to lead everywhere except to the secret of riches. But the young man does learn.

He learns that he holds the key to his own success and that the correct mental approach is what he needs to unlock the treasure trove of wealth.

This is Fisher's own history. "I hung it on a little story because people find it easier to digest in story form," the author said.

Part of The Instant Millionaire's formula is the repetition of catch-phrases that carry the message Fisher endorses, such as, "Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better"—the words of French physician Emile Coué.

In addition to these "money mantras," The Instant Millionaire imparts specific financial formulas, giving the reader explicit targets to aim for.

"Millionaires don't have better educations than other people. They aren't better looking and they may even have less appealing qualities than the average guy, but they have this belief that they deserve something better and that they should get it," Fisher said.

The Instant Millionaire is available in local bookstores, or it may be ordered for $12.95, plus $1.75 postage and handling, from New World Library, P.O. Box 13257, Northgate Station, San Rafael, CA 94913.

Even Donald Trump can't afford not to read this book!

To Howard County Voters of Precinct 4

The friends of DAVID (SHORTY) BARR want him to know how much we appreciate his hard work in representing us as COUNTY COMMISSIONER for the past twelve years. We would like the citizens of Howard County to know him as we do.

SHORTY is a very conscientious, honest, hard working, Christian person. He is a very successful businessman, farmer, and rancher who has represented the people of Precinct 4 as their COUNTY COMMISSIONER very conservatively and honestly. He is the type of person who is always ready to help anyone in need and has worked as a youth leader in supporting all 4-H programs, Little League, Teenage Baseball, Church Youth Organizations, has been a host parent for Foreign Exchange Students, and is a Deacon in the Vincent Baptist Church.

SHORTY has always been interested in the economic growth of our County and City. He is a strong supporter of the Law Enforcement Agencies and Fire Departments. He is one of the persons responsible for the City of Big Spring Fire Departments responding to a structure fire in the rural areas of our county.

Let's keep DAVID (SHORTY) BARR as our COUNTY COMMISSIONER and show him the support he deserves.

$40,000 in prizes for women who want to make over their lives

Women who are trying to "make over" their lives can win up to $25,000 in a national contest co-sponsored by Maybelline and Ladies' Home Journal.

To enter the Lifetime Makeover Contest, a woman must write a 500-word essay telling about herself, her goals and what concrete steps she has taken to reach those goals.

"Women today are choosing a variety of options they might never have dreamed possible only a few years ago," noted Myrna Blyth, editor of Ladies' Home Journal. "They are starting their own businesses, going back to school to earn degrees, cultivating artistic talents, working for charitable causes and tackling many other challenges."

Through the contest, the cosmetics company and magazine are giving deserving women a helping hand in reaching their lifelong goals.

"Maybelline recognizes achieving women in its slogan—'smart, beautiful, Maybelline'—and our magazine is written for women who want to achieve all they can," says Blyth.

Further information about the Maybelline/Ladies' Home Journal Lifetime Makeover Contest is available in the April issue of the magazine.

Don't throw them away:Old cans worth up to 10,000!

Old tin cans are eaten by goats in comic strips, but in real life they decorate kitchens and dens across America.

Tobacco, coffee, and talcum tins made between 1890 and 1940 have become valuable collectibles, prized for their colorful designs.

Cans featuring baseball players like Ty Cobb and Cy Young sell for more than $2,000. Birds, animals, comic characters, politicians, buildings, transportation, and Santa Claus are among many other subjects worth top money.

Brands like Stetson, Sun Cured, Lookout, Loving Cup, Red Indian, Green Goose, Totem, Sweet Violet, Paul Jones, Prexy, Buster Brown, Old Rip, Hi-Ho, Peggy O'Neil, Taxi, Scissors, Moonshine, and Torpedo are among hundreds of tins worth $250 or more.

A 3-inch long Sweet Owen purchased at a Massachusetts house sale for $1 was resold to a collector one week later for over $7,000.

Colorful signs and cigar boxes also have some value to decorators.

If you'd like to cash in on your tins, cigar boxes, and old signs, contact Dr. Tony Hyman of the Tin Can Collectors Assn., Box 699, Claremont, CA 91711. Hyman has been collecting tins and boxes for 40 years.

To get a free evaluation (and perhaps a large check), send a photocopy of the top and sides of cans and/or the inside lid of cigar boxes. Also include a long self-addressed stamped envelope.

Cans must be in good condition, Hyman advises, since "tin can collectors are fussy folks."

Worthless brands include Prince Albert, Dial, Middleton, Sir Walter Raleigh, Velvet, Kentucky Club, Chesterfield, Union Leader, Bond Street, Half & Half, Model, Buckingham, Revelation, Holiday, Stag, RedJacket and Edgeworth.

"Don't take chances," Hyman warns. "Have us check all pre-1940 U.S. and Canadian tins, signs, and boxes."

A new book for animal lovers

Animal lovers are often ridiculed and viewed as sentimental simps by people who have never loved a pet. The stereotypical animal lover is a doddering lonely old lady or a shallow, giggly girl who is always exclaiming "Isn't it cu-u-u-u-u-u-u-u-u-u!"

This makes it especially hard for men to show love for their animal friends because returning love to the creature who perhaps deserves it most is seen as un-macho. Murdering or torturing animals on the other hand, such as in bullfights or cockfights, is considered manly.

That such unenlightened thinking endures is upsetting to animal lovers. Yet compassion for all living things is an idea that will be kept forever alive by caring, thoughtful people. Among these blubbery sentimental half-wits are Albert Einstein, Tolstoy, Abraham Lincoln and Ghandi, not to mention sissies like Schopenhauer, George Bernard Shaw, Mark Twain, and Shakespeare.

The words of these and many other animal lovers can be found in The Extended Circle: A Commonplace Book of Animal Rights (Paragon, $24.95). The work takes its title from a statement made by Albert Schweitzer: "Until he extends the circle of his compassion to all living things man will not himself find peace."

How to control fleas and ticks

What are pyrethrins? The term "pyrethrins" refers to the active ingredients found in the extract of the daisy-like pyrethrum flower, which is a distant relative of the chrysanthemum. Pyrethrins are one of the only safe, effective, natural insecticides recommended by veterinarians, environmentalists and consumer groups.

How do pyrethrins work? Pyrethrins paralyze insects on contact, producing what is known as the "knockdown effect." Synergists enhance their ability to kill insects.

Where do pyrethrins come from? For thousands of years, the pyrethrum flowers were grown and harvested in Persia. After the First World War, Japan began production of the flower. Kenya became the principal cultivator after the outbreak of World War II. Currently, two thirds of the world's supply is produced on small, individual farms in Kenya, while the remainder is grown mainly in Tanzania, Rwanda, Ecuador and New Guinea. Today, there is a world shortage of pyrethrins due to drought conditions and shifting agricultural patterns in these regions.

Why are pyrethrins important? Recent findings by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency have reinforced the importance of safe, natural ingredients. Pyrethrins, which are extracted from the chrysanthemum plant, are therefore important for their proven safety and effectiveness.

Why are pyrethrins necessary? Fleas and ticks are dangerous to pets and many humans. Their bites cause untold misery if untreated. Ticks spread Lyme disease and Rocky Mountain spotted fever. Fleas can cause severe allergic reactions in pets and, in fact, were responsible for spreading the Bubonic plague. Only insecticides can kill these parasites, known as the "vampires of the insect world."

Why do veterinarians recommend pyrethrins? Veterinarians, according to a 1988 survey conducted at the American Animal Hospital Association's annual meeting, prefer pyrethrins-based products two-to-one (66.7 percent) over all other ingredients combined. In another nationwide survey, 76 percent of the veterinarians regarded pyrethrins as the safest ingredient for use in flea and tick-killing products. Both surveys were conducted by independent research firms under the sponsorship of the Scratchex Center for Flea Control.

Pure pyrethrins have almost no known toxicity to people or pets. They are biodegradable and do not harm the environment. Insects have developed no recorded resistance or immunity to pyrethrins in over 2,000 years of use.

Like humans, however, pets can have allergic reactions to anything, whether it's milk, medication or insecticides. If in doubt, check with your veterinarian.

How do consumers find pyrethrins? Despite a world-wide shortage, consumers can still find pyrethrins in Scratchex products. Scratchex, in fact, is the only major brand available in food, discount, drug and pet stores to still use pyrethrins in its shampoo, aerosol spray and powder. Scratchex shampoo, dip, dust and spray are safe for both dogs and cats.

Ask Dr. Pearle

Dr. Stanley Pearle answers your questions about Eye Care.

Dear Dr. Pearle: I enjoy spending time outdoors in the summer, but I'm worried about the sun's rays harming my eyes. Do sunglasses offer enough protection?

While ordinary sunglasses may make your eyes feel more comfortable by cutting down on bright light, they don't necessarily protect your eyes from the sun's damaging ultraviolet (UV) rays. In fact, since sunglasses allow the pupil to relax and let in more light, the wrong kind of sunglass lenses can pose an even greater risk than not wearing sunglasses at all.

The same UV rays that lead to sunburn and skin cancer can damage the retina, too. UV rays are responsible for about 10 percent of cataracts and other serious eye disorders.

Plan ahead for fun in the sun. Look for sunglasses that block out 99 to 100 percent of the sun's harmful rays. Not only will this help prevent damage, it can also reduce eyestrain and the discomfort caused by light sensitivity and glare.

Ask your eyecare professional about protective coatings that can be easily applied to both sunglasses and regular prescription glasses for those times when you don't wear sunglasses.

As an added safeguard, choose sunglasses with a green or gray tint—these do the best job of blocking light. Fishing or sailing enthusiasts will prefer a yellow tint which cuts water glare.

One final tip: If you can, plan outdoor activities for early or late in the day. More than 50 percent of solar UV radiation occurs between 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.

Dear Dr. Pearle: My daughter and her friends often use each other's makeup—even mascara. I don't think this is a good idea... is it?

Definitely not. Eye makeup should never be used by more than one person; otherwise, there's a risk of passing harmful bacteria from one person to the next. And that can lead to serious eye problems like irritation or infection.

Encourage your daughter to establish healthy makeup habits early. Here are a few recommendations:

- Use only fresh makeup. Old makeup can invite bacteria, and that can cause problems. Toss out mascara that's more than six months old, and sharpen eye pencils frequently to keep them clean.

- If makeup develops a strange odor or color, throw it away.

- Wash applicators such as sponges or brushes often with a mild soap. Rinse well and let them air dry.

- Make sure makeup containers are kept closed when not in use to discourage bacteria growth.

- Many people are sensitive to makeup. If any makeup causes eyes to become red or irritated, stop using it immediately.

- If eyes become easily irritated, look for hypoallergenic, ophthalmologist-tested cosmetics developed for sensitive eyes. There are some brands created especially for contact lens wearers.

- Avoid using makeup on the inner rims of the eyes, where it can irritate delicate tissue.

- Be sure to remove all eye makeup thoroughly each night. Old makeup left on eyes can cause problems.

HAPPINESS IS A WARM PUPPY... A free booklet, Puppies, Parents and Kids, is available from the ALPO Pet Center. It provides guidelines on what to expect from every family member, including your new puppy.

How to make your new puppy part of one big happy family

A new puppy is like a new baby, with all the responsibilities, the chores, and the fun. A free booklet entitled Puppies, Parents and Kids, available from the ALPO Pet Center, provides guidelines on what to expect from every family member, including the new puppy.

Written by noted pet author Mordecai Siegal, the 16-page booklet answers many of the questions new pet owners have about raising a puppy. Topics discussed include the human-animal bond and communicating with your dog; instinctive pack behavior and how to use it in communication and training; creating a secure "den" with a puppy crate; and basic obedience training. What should be expected from children of different ages and the sharing of responsibilities is also discussed, as well as preventive medicine, grooming, and exercise.

The booklet is available free of charge from the ALPO Pet Center, P.O. Box 4000M, Allentown, PA 18001. Please include a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope.

Careers of conscience for a healthier environment

© The 1990s may well be termed the "environmental decade." Every day, as newspapers warn us about global warming, oil spills and the destruction of the rain forests, people are more aware than ever of the repercussions their actions may have on the planet.

"You can't just close your eyes to the fact that we're poisoning the world in which we live," said Dave Rich of Wolfsboro, N.H. "People have to be willing to re-evaluate their lifestyles and career choices and accept the responsibility for effecting a change."

Rich speaks from experience. In 1971, he was running a store on the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee in New Hampshire when he became concerned about the potential pollution problems caused by the household cleaners he carried. His search for a biodegradable cleanser led him to the Shaklee Corporation, a leading direct sales marketer of high-quality consumer products, and his new career in direct sales.

"I was attracted by the Shaklee philosophy of living in harmony with nature, which directly paralleled my own views," said Rich. "Shaklee provided me with the opportunity to follow my conscience and build my own successful business selling products I truly believe in."

Shaklee manufactures biodegradable household products, the Bestwater® Purification System, vitamins and personal care products, and is recognized as a corporate leader in environmental concerns.

Dave Rich isn't alone in wanting to combine his ecological interest with his career. Today, many Americans are looking at the long-term effects their career choices have, not only on their families, but also on the environment. Careers of conscience are replacing the yuppie "money and power" quests so prevalent in the '80s.

For some, this means a career selling and promoting the importance of biodegradable products through such companies as Shaklee. For others, it can mean choosing to work for a noted "green" company. These companies actively support environmentally sound practices and make them an integral part of their corporate policies.

Concern for the environment has also drawn more people to careers in environmental law, toxicology, the natural sciences and government positions which offer the opportunity to act on problems affecting the health and future of their communities and the globe.

With the environmental issue foremost in everyone's mind, people are also asking what they can do at home to make a difference. "Recycle, conserve water, use biodegradable products—there are hundreds of simple lifestyle changes that we can all make that would make a significant difference to the environment," said Dave Rich. "It's simply a matter of dedicating yourself to doing the right thing, for both the planet and for future generations."

New Roof Requires A Careful Application

When a roof of standard shingles passes its 15th or 20th anniversary, it becomes a candidate for reroofing. If you can't determine the actual age of the roof, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association, look for cracked, curled or missing shingles.

To get an expert opinion on the roof's condition, call in a professional roofer who will conduct a thorough, on-the-roof inspection. Start by contacting your local roofer's association for some recommendations. Or phone the National Roofing Contractors Association by dialing 1-800-USA-ROOF for a list of NRCA contractors.

Work Required

The roofing contractor can give you advice about how much a new roof should cost, the amount of work required and the materials to use. Consider the roof's annual cost, not just the initial expense of reroofing. Shingles with a longer design life, for instance, may turn out to be more economical in the long run because the cost of labor and material is amortized over a longer period of time. And, don't forget that the cost of labor for application is often the same regardless of the design life of the shingle.

For good reasons, asphalt shingles are the material of choice when reroofing in more than 80 percent of the cases. That's because they are attractive, durable, economical, easy to care for and offer the benefit of fire safety.

Those with a fiber glass base or an organic base come in a range of styles and colors. Especially popular are multi-layered asphalt shingles in eye-catching earthtone shades of browns and beiges that link a home with its environment. Designed to last 25 years or more with little maintenance, their dimensional appearance creates ruggedly handsome shadow lines.

Safety Requirements

Most communities now require roofing that meets the fire safety requirements of Factory Mutual Research Corp., or Underwriters Laboratories. Most asphalt shingles now carry a Class C or better fire-resistance label which assures that the roofing has been thoroughly tested against fire exposure and will not ignite easily, contribute to the spread of flame over the roof area or emit burning brands that could set off new fires.

For additional information, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope for a copy of "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing" to ARMA, Box 3248, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163-3248.

Reroofing Improves Appearance

More and more homeowners are replacing their roofs before they wear out. Why? For esthetic reasons. One reason is to improve a home's appearance; another is to assure that a home retains its value.

The assistance of the professional roofing contractor can prove invaluable for those who decide to reroof prematurely. In addition to a thorough on-the-roof inspection, a professional roofer can offer some useful information about longevity, costs, and how modern roofing manufacturers use color and dimension to improve the looks of a home.

Asphalt shingles, the most widely used in reroofing and new construction, are attractive, durable, economical and offer the added benefit of low maintenance. A newer generation of asphalt shingles includes fiber glass-based and organic-based as well as dimensional shingles in a broad range of eye-catching styles and colors.

Especially popular are the earthtone shades of brown and beige that help set a roof off from others in the neighborhood. At the same time, they create dramatic, bold shadowlines to give a roof a dramatic, random appearance. Multi-layered shingles are designed to last 25 years or more. All asphalt shingles require little maintenance.

Limit Choices

When selecting house colors, the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association suggests that you limit your choices to three: one for the roof, one for the siding and the third for the trim. Because of its durability, pick a roof color you can live with for years.

Safety is another aspect to cover when talking with a professional roofer. Fiber glass-based asphalt shingles have a high fire rating—Class A. This means the shingles meet the highest standard for resistance to ignition and spread of external fire. Organic asphalt shingles with a Class C rating meet most building codes.

For more information on reroofing with asphalt shingles, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope for "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing" to ARMA, Box 3248, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163-3248.

Though this is a new home, it emphasizes the role that the roof plays in both protection and exterior design. The roof of attractive asphalt shingles serves to enhance the design of this contemporary home.

Avoid Premature Headaches With Preventive Maintenance

Even in good weather it's fairly safe to say that many homeowners seldom think about or take a look at their roofs until something goes wrong; a stain on the underside of the deck in the attic, some peeling wallcovering in an upstairs room or a stain on the ceiling that spreads every time it rains.

Such a circumstance doesn't mean disaster. With luck, the problem might be minor. It could be that one or two shingles have worked their way loose and need to be nailed down. This is often the case with a roof that's fairly new. That's why it's important to know the age of the roof.

Nonetheless, it's a condition that should be looked into before major problems develop. One way to avoid such problems, is to conduct twice yearly inspections, indoors and out. Another, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association, is to have a professional roofer take a look at your roof every two or three years, especially if the roof is approaching its 15th anniversary.

Signs of Age

A roof of standard shingles between 15 and 20 years old is a prime candidate for reroofing. Signs of a roof in need of replacement include curled, cracked, blistered or missing shingles. Contrary to popular belief, the worst damage isn't caused by wind, rain or snow, but by the heat of the sun which causes the shingles to dry out and the protective mineral granules, which also give the shingles their color, to roll down into the gutters and downspouts whenever it rains.

Don't get up on the roof to conduct the inspection. Walk around the house while looking for the signs of age. If you need a closer look, use a pair of binoculars. Going up on the roof is dangerous. Roofs can be slippery and you could damage the shingles. Instead, call in a qualified roofer who will conduct a thorough, on the roof inspection.

Should reroofing be indicated, consider the cost of reroofing, the material to be used, its design life and the color you'd like. In some cases, you can save yourself some money. For example, asphalt shingles can often be applied over the old roofing eliminating the cost of tearing off the old roof.

Designed to Last

In addition, three-dimensional asphalt shingles have a design life of 25 years or more. This could mean the choosing a longer lasting shingle will be less expensive over the long term because the cost of the materials and labor in reroofing is amortized over longer period of time.

Available in attractive earthtone shades of browns and beiges that help to relate a home to its environment, multi-layered asphalt shingles also create ruggedly attractive shadow lines to give a roof added dimension. When choosing the color, remember that once it's installed, you'll be living with it for some time. So pick a color that won't clash with the other exterior color elements of the house.

For additional information, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope for a copy of "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing" to ARMA, Box 3248, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163-3248.

Another booklet that homeowners should find useful is "Buying a New Roof." It's available free from the National Roofing Contractors Association, One O'Hare Centre, 6250 River Road, Rosemont, IL 60018.

A good way to determine the condition of the roof is to take a walk around the house with a pair of field glasses. Look for cracked, curled or missing shingles, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association. They are signs that the roof may need to be replaced.

Roofing Industry Is Looking Up

At the start of 1990, the Census Bureau estimates there were 63.9 million single-family homes in the U.S. Of these, about 70 percent, or nearly 45 million, were built before 1970.

Most of those homes are or soon will be in need of some major home improvement. This is probably the major reason why remodeling spending reached an estimated $100-billion in 1989 and should climb to about $103-billion in 1990, according to the National Remodelers Council of the National Association of Home Builders.

Reroofing alone, says the National Roofing Contractors Association, should account for $4.33-billion in home improvement spending this year. That represents more than four percent of the $103-billion Americans are expected to spend on home improvements this year. NRCA is a co-sponsor with the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association of National Roofing Month in May.

Share Rises

Asphalt's share of the reroofing market in the form of fiber glass-based or organic-based shingles should total more than $3.46-billion in 1990, up $820-million from 1989's estimated $2.62-billion.

Though the aging of the nation's housing stock is certainly the prime reason for so much reroofing, it isn't the only one. Many homeowners are opting to reroof before the old roof has worn out for a variety of reasons.

One, says ARMA, is because many homeowners like a nice-looking house, outdoors as well as indoors; another is to give the house a facelift prior to resale; and a third reason is a new generation of shingles that last longer and require little maintenance—both features that working couple families appreciate.

These up-to-date asphalt shingles with an organic or fiber glass base are as economical as they are attractive and come in a range of styles and colors. Especially popular are three-dimensional asphalt shingles in earthtone colors of browns, reds and greens that blend or contrast with the natural colors of siding and trim. They also establish ruggedly handsome shadow lines.

Consider Cost

Consider the probable annual cost of a new roof rather than its initial price when reroofing. The costlier shingle may prove the more economical in the long run because the costs of material and labor are amortized over a longer period of time. To get an estimate, add the cost of labor and materials and divide the total by the design life of the shingle.

For more help in selecting a roof to suit your needs, send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope for a copy of "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing" to ARMA, Box 3248, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163-3248.

Honeymoon spots for baby boom fleas: as close as your own home

Fleas, like people, want a piece of the American dream.

And newlywed fleas, according to a leading expert, love large families and a good place to raise them.

"While most Americans might look for a home close to transportation and excellent schools, all it takes to make a flea happy is a nice, warm-blooded dog or cat," says Dr. Herbert Lapidus, Ph.D., who heads the Scratchex Center for Flea Control in White Plains, N.Y.

"Fleas thrive in hot, humid areas, especially when they're close to rivers, lakes and oceans. The damper and more uncomfortable the climate for humans, the more romantic and promising for fleas," says Dr. Lapidus, who points out that fleas do their best breeding in hot, sticky weather.

"Given the right climate, the average flea couple can produce 3,000 offspring in a month, and 250,000 in less than a year," adds the pharmacologist, whose work has led him to study the breeding and biting habits of fleas for over 30 years.

Fleas, Dr. Lapidus reveals, are pioneers, who are now homesteading in formerly flea-free areas such as New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado. Although they've been around for over 30 million years, fleas love exploring new places. Increased real estate development in formerly arid areas has created oases in the proverbial desert. People who cultivate gardens—creating humidity as they water their lawns—also cultivate fleas.

Dr. Lapidus says some people think once the weather turns cool, fleas disappear. "That's a big mistake," he warns. "Fleas don't need a trip to the Caribbean. A nice, warm house makes a perfect winter retreat. The minute the central heating or fireplace goes on, fleas curl up and settle in for a nice cozy stay."

"While we humans may fantasize about lolling on a sun-kissed beach, warmed by the tropic sun, fleas dream of snuggling up in a closet full of fluffy coats or on a thick shag rug near the hearth," he says. Even if the house is relatively cool, he adds, fleas can remain dormant for as long as a year without a single bite to eat. In dry, cold climates, humidifiers make fleas delicious with joy.

To keep your house from being a resort for fleas, Dr. Lapidus recommends these simple steps:

1. Be alert to the problem. If your pet begins to scratch, or develop "hot spots," fleas could be the problem.
2. Arm yourself with a pyrethrins-based flea and tick shampoo, dust and spray. Of all major brands, only Sulfodene/Scratchex makes a flea-killing shampoo, aerosol spray and dust containing the safe "flower power" of pyrethrins, a natural insecticide recommended by veterinarians, veterinary dermatologists and consumer advocates.

3. Get a flea collar containing safe Longban (Dursban) to keep fleas at bay for a full 11 months at a time. Scratchex makes one for dogs and for cats.

Finally, Dr. Lapidus recommends a free booklet of practical information for the embattled pet owner. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to "Fighting the Flea," Scratchex Center for Flea Control, P.O. Box 328FF, White Plains, NY 10602.

How our diet affects our animals

Not many kids grow up in a big house with a swimming pool in the shape of an ice cream cone. But for John Robbins, former heir to the Baskin Robbins fortune, it seemed only natural. Ice cream was the family's bread and butter.

After a lot of soul-searching combined with scrupulous research, Robbins refused the family business and the fortune that came with it to devote his life to worthy causes. In his book, Diet for a New America (Stillpoint Press), Robbins documents the deplorable living conditions of many animals raised on so-called "factory farms" and the cruelty they suffer from human hands and machines.

His thesis, that American over-indulgence in animal products is killing humans as well as animals, is supported by some astounding evidence. The book is fascinating reading for both friends of animals and the health-conscious.

PET POINTS

The three R's are effective in your dog's education

There are few things more frustrating to a pet owner than a dog who is disobedient. If Spot refuses to come, sit, or stay on command, try the three "R's" of obedience training.

According to Dr. Ian Dunbar, of the Center for Applied Animal Behavior in Berkeley, California, the basis of dog obedience training involves request, response, and reward. Dogs that receive a reward for responding appropriately to a given request will continue to perform the desired behavior. For example, if a pet owner makes a request, if the dog responds favorably, and the owner rewards the dog, then the dog will continue to perform the behavior upon request. But, it is important that the request, response, and reward repeatedly occur in the same order so that the dog understands why it is being rewarded.

"Rewards must be effective, immediate, and not too exciting," says Dunbar. "Punishments must be effective, immediate, instructive, not too overbearing, and administered every time the dog misbehaves. Reward-training, therefore, is easier, more efficient, more effective, and more enjoyable compared with punishment training."

According to Dr. Dunbar, praise is the most efficient reward, and instructive reprimands are the most efficient punishments. It is important to warn the dog before using additional punishment. If the dog is not warned beforehand, it cannot learn the meaning of the warning.

In the art of dog training, a lure is often used to entice the dog to perform a desired response. The lure may be food or a toy. It can be used to entice the dog into the preferred place or position. The dog hears the request, sees the lure, and responds appropriately. The lure is often given as the reward.

The American Animal Hospital Association is an international organization of more than 10,000 veterinarians which will study obedience training at a conference this summer.

BUSINESS REVIEW

See Hester's for all gift occasions

From Easter cards to wedding gifts, Hester's is ready for all the gift occasions coming up in the next few months. Easter is almost here, quickly followed by graduation, Mother's Day, Father's Day and June weddings.

"We have gifts for every occasion," says Noel Hull, co-owner. "And, of course, gift wrapping is free. We want to be your one-stop gift-shopping headquarters."

Hester's is the only downtown merchant stocking a large display of greeting cards for all occasions. Hull notes. The firm also stocks the popular new "egg wraps" for quick and easy decorating.

Launch your favorite high school graduate with Cross pen and pencil sets, portfolios, photo albums and scrapbooks. These can be personalized to make them even more special.

For Father's Day, Hester's suggests Bibles — personalized in 14kt. gold free of charge. Some are fine leather, some indexed, others in large print.

Why not surprise mother on her day with a family photo, framed from the selection at Hester's. Pick wood, old timey tin look, ceramic, brass, lucite and a new Southwest-inspired frame. Bibles are Hester's biggest seller on Mother's Day.

If there's a June wedding in your family, remember Hester's has order books for engraved wedding invitations and personalized napkins. And a stock of wedding books by C.R. Gibson.

Other gifts for any occasion are desk sets, address books, pocket dictionaries, Webster's Book of Facts and Webster's Medical Dictionary, baby books, and novelty calendars.

Hester's, of course, is not only a gift headquarters. The store has been famous for its full selection of office supplies for over 40 years — literally everything from paper clips to office desks. Desks are available in metal or wood, with compatible executive or secretarial chairs.

Hester's carries filing cabinets and filing supplies; computer supplies, chalk boards, organizers, rubber stamps, wastebaskets and 1001 items for the office.

For your office or gift needs, always check first with Hester's Office Supply at 209 Runnels. The store is open 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

GREETINGS — Hester's Office Supply is the only downtown merchant stocking a complete supply of greeting cards for all occasions. Genifer Dean and Noel Hull stand behind a section of the card display featuring greetings for Easter — humorous, traditional and contemporary as well as cards for children and relatives.

Better FM reception is as American as "Pi"

America moves and relaxes, contemplates and makes its decisions, all to the sound of FM stereo. Millions of dollars are spent on FM radios, FM stereo receivers, tuners and related hi-fi equipment. Yet the fact is most FM stereo is received over a cheap piece of wire thrown in a heap behind the stereo.

Commonly called a dipole antenna, this villain is probably the number one reason why many stations sound so bad or can't be picked up at all. And if you're hooked up to most cable TV systems for your FM, you should know that the FCC does nothing to regulate the quality on cable.

Enter a company called Terk Technologies of New Rochelle, New York, a manufacturer of quality FM antennas that look great and reduce FM hiss, while also increasing the number of FM stations that can be enjoyed.

Their latest FM antenna is nicknamed "Pi" and is perhaps the best effort to date in providing outstanding FM reception in a compact, high design, say experts.

This disc-shaped antenna is the same diameter as a compact disc, which allows "Pi" to fit easily into any shelving configuration. The disc-shaped portion of the antenna rests on a non-skid rubber "boot," and is available in white or gray matte finish.

Larry Scholtz, noted digital FM tuner designer/inventor, is responsible for the electronics in "Pi." After all, who better to design an FM antenna than the man responsible for FM digital tuners by such companies as Nakamichi, Proton, NAD, Crown, Sherwood and Tandberg?

A new radical design, along with an exciting low-noise, state-of-the-art amplifier by Scholtz, provides 30 dB gain. Use the antenna horizontally for omnidirectional reception or vertically to tune in weaker-powered FM stations.

"Pi" is easy to use. Just plug it into a stereo antenna input and a 110 volt wall outlet. "Pi" comes with its own matching transformer to accommodate hookup to any receiver. Terk has eliminated a gain control from "Pi," so you can listen instead of fiddling with controls.

"Pi" is available at audio video specialty stores at a suggested retail of $79.95.

T9890163

THE BEST-PERFORMING COMPACT FM ANTENNA on the market today may be Terk Technologies' "Pi" FM antenna (pronounced "PIE"). This unusual, disc-shaped antenna is about the size of a compact disc and rests in the horizontal position for omni-directional reception or vertically to tune in weaker-powered FM stations.

Mobile listening with wireless headphones

Chances are your spouse, significant other or even another family member and you, occasionally have exchanged "words" over incompatible TV-watching or music-listening schedules and tastes. Some like it hot and loud and late at night, when others prefer quiet and early to bed.

Or, if you've solved the family feud over TV or audio system listening, you then find yourself faced with a personal war with the equipment itself, tortured by messy wires and cords.

Headphones, particularly the typical wireless "infrared" type, solve part of this problem but restrict your audio-listening to the same room as your system, according to the experts at Datawave, a Tarzana, Cal. based firm.

With the introduction of Datawave, Inc.'s evolutionary Private Waves™ wireless headphone system, all these problems are solved. Datawave's Private Waves headphones offer private, portable, cord-free music or TV sound.

Everyday chores become fun with the addition of cord-free music. Dance without tripping over wires. Work in the garden or on your favorite hobby while listening to the TV soap stars or your favorite compact disc recording—without the cord.

Datawave's Private Waves relies on RF (radio frequency) wireless transmission rather than the usual infrared-type technology.

Compared to other so-called wireless

ENJOY MUSIC IN PRIVATE—Datawave's Private Waves wireless headphones make your music private, mobile and cord-free. Since Private Waves uses FM signal transmission, you can listen to your favorite TV shows or music indoors or out.

headphones that are restricted by line-of-sight use, Private Waves offers range and sound quality that is far more sophisticated, including a wide frequency response of 80-15,000 Hz.

Since RF signals travel through walls, which infrared does not, you have the mobility to listen to your favorite music or TV show indoors or out, up to 75 feet away from your sound source.

Datawave's Private Waves add to your private music enjoyment. Just connect the stylishly designed transmitter to the audio out or headphone jack of your TV, home stereo or compact disc player. Then clip its compatible miniature receiver to your clothing.

So do your aerobics, or dance to music as loud as you want. Enjoy Johnny Carson's late-night monologue without disturbing anyone. For, finally, there's a wireless headphone that lets you enjoy TV sound and music the way you like—totally in private. Datawave is located in Tarzana, Cal., at 19611 Ventura Blvd., 91356.
