El Paso truck driver Ronald Wayne Panchot, 34, died Thursday after his semi-tractor trailer catapulted off the rain-slickened west-bound lane of Interstate Highway 20 east of Midland about 6:15 p.m., smashing into a concrete embankment near the service road of U.S. Highway 80. A similar truck accident occurred on a rainy Sept. 10 in the eastbound lane of the overpass. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Interstate 20 overpass claims another victim

A 34-year-old El Paso truck driver was killed late Thursday on the same rain-slickened Interstate 20 overpass that two weeks ago claimed the life of a 38-year-old Dallas trucker.

Donald Wayne Panchot was killed at 6:15 p.m. Thursday when the 18-wheeler he was driving plunged off Interstate 20 5.2 miles east of Midland where it crosses over U.S. 80. His truck crumpled into a twisted mass of metal on the U.S. 80 service road below.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, Panchot was traveling west on the interstate "at an apparent high rate of speed" when he struck the guard rail, went over, became airborne for about 150 feet and then crashed to the service road below.

The driver was pinned inside the wreckage of the truck. Panchot was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice John Biggs. His body was then taken to Newline W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Unlike the truck accident two weeks ago, Panchot's 18-wheeler did not burn after it crashed. It was travelling the opposite direction from the truck driven by Dale Scroggins of Dallas Sept. 10 when it crashed off the same overpass and burst into flames.

But in virtually all other respects, the two accidents were alike. On both occasions the interstate was slickened by heavy rains. Both trucks struck the guard rail, then plunged over to the service road below. And both drivers apparently were killed on impact.

Both drivers also were trapped inside the cabs of their trucks.

Now Reagan won't debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan has once again rejected a chance to debate President Carter, but this time he's turned down the League of Women Voters — the very organization whose sponsorship he embraced the first time around.

After repeatedly chiding Carter for ducking what then turned out to be a two-man contest between himself and independent John B. Anderson, Reagan declined Thursday night a league proposal for two more presidential debates, one pitting him solely against Carter and the last to include Anderson.

Carter had quickly accepted the proposal, an apparent attempt by the league to compromise between his insistence that he meet Reagan alone and Reagan's desire to bring Anderson onto any platform shared by the president.

The league specifically invited Reagan and Carter to meet one another the week of Oct. 12 in Portland, and then to wind up the series with a three-way debate to include Anderson in Cleveland during the week of Oct. 26.

But Reagan, who was himself in Portland Thursday night, declared he wouldn't agree to any proposal "for a series of presidential debates that would preclude John Anderson" from full participation.

A Reagan spokesman said today that Bush would not participate in the vice presidential debate. The spokesman said it would be inappropriate for Reagan's running mate to take part in any debate that is not part of a series of presidential debates. Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Patrick Lucey, John B. Anderson's No. 2 man, had agreed to participate in the vice presidential debate, slated for next Thursday in Louisville.

It wasn't immediately clear whether Bush's refusal to debate would result in withdrawals by Mondale and Lucey, or whether the league would withdraw its invitations for the event.

Bush, however, told reporters in Manchester, N.H., that he would be willing to debate Mondale and Lucey if other problems with the presidential debates can be ironed out.

"It is caught up, properly in my view, in the presidential debate," Bush said as he arrived at the Manchester airport. "The main thing is getting satisfactory arrangements for the presidential debate. Governor Reagan, in principle, is staying with his commitment and that's exactly what he should do."

"The league seems now to be carrying the water for the White House," Bush added.

Reagan's press secretary, Lyn Nofziger, said he doubted that Bush would participate "unless there are presidential debates. I don't think that's satisfactory."

Jim Hall and his car features of United Way drive kickoff

Jim Hall and his Indy 500 winning Chaparral car will be the feature attraction at this year's United Way campaign kickoff from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

The "Salute to Midland" will be held in Midland Center, 105 N. Main St. Admission is free and open to the public.

On display will be the bright yellow Pennzoil Chaparral race car, which won the Indianapolis 500 this year with Johnny Rutherford at the wheel. The car and Chaparral racing team have had five wins and three second place finishes out of nine races this season.

In addition to the appearance of Jim Hall and the Chaparral car, results of the United Way pilot campaign will be announced.

The pilot fund drive began Aug. 22 and included 13 local employers.

The "Salute to Midland" will also include presentation of awards to the winners of the United Way "Name the Little Man Contest" and displays representing the United Way member agencies.

The goal for this year's United Way campaign is $1,150,000, a 12.3 percent increase over last year.

The campaign will be completed by Nov. 13.

War edges toward mediation

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq claimed today the fall of Iran's burning oil refinery city of Abadan was imminent while both countries appeared moving toward mediation of their border conflict. The two Persian Gulf oil giants dueling with heavy artillery across their border waterway on the fifth day of the war, setting off fires in oil installations on both sides.

Both countries have indicated they will accept Islamic mediation, according to Pakistani Foreign Minister Aga Shahi, a key figure in the 40-member Islamic Conference of Nations. He spoke with reporters in New York in advance of a meeting of U.N. delegates who also are members of the Islamic conference.

Baghdad radio broadcast a statement by Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadeh saying Iraq would "welcome any discussion" to end the fighting but warning that "any assistance offered to the Iranian regime, especially in the field of spare parts, will be considered an act of aggression against Iraq's security."

There have been reports, denied by Washington, that Iran might seek spare parts for its American-made planes in exchange for release of the 52 Americans it has held hostage since Nov. 4.

Iran reported "very heavy" civilian casualties in Abadan and Khorramshahr, two major ports on the Shatt al-Arab waterway. Tehran Radio quoted Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr as denying Iraq's claim that it had captured Khorramshahr. It said he visited the front Thursday and went within four miles of Khorramshahr.

Tehran radio said "the brave people" of Khorramshahr had set up defenses on all sides of the city and were fighting in the streets and on the rooftops. It broadcast a military communiqué saying part of the Abadan refinery had been put out of operation and part of it was on fire.

The Iraqi military said earlier Iraqi forces had captured Khorramshahr and were closing in on Ahwaz, the capital of Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan Province 70 miles to the north. The claim fueled speculation Iraq was trying to seize all of Iran's 24,000-square-mile oil heartland.

A spokesman in Paris for a French oil company said the Iraqi national oil company had told its customers it had halted "all oil exports." He declined to elaborate but the Iraqi decision was understood to mean it had stopped shipments through the pipelines to the Mediterranean as well as through the gulf.

Government sources in neighboring United Arab Emirates said more than 30 cargo ships carrying goods bound for Iraq and Iran were anchored just outside the Persian Gulf, apparently afraid to enter the war zone.

Baghdad radio broadcast a claim that Iraqi anti-aircraft brought down 11 Iranian planes that raided the cities of Mosul and Kirkuk and economic and military installations elsewhere. Informed sources said there was heavy damage to the small oil refinery in Kirkuk and to the larger refinery in the southern port of Basra, which Iranian jets pounded Thursday.

The Iraqi command said three of its planes were lost, but did not confirm any damage to its refineries.

A group of reporters who traveled to Basra from Kuwait drove to a small village on the banks of the Shatt opposite Abadan. The reporters said they could hear outgoing Iraqi artillery from both the Iraqi and Iranian sides of the waterway toward Iranian positions near Abadan.

"It looks like all of Abadan is on fire," said London Times correspondent Robert Fisk. "The column of smoke from Abadan refinery is billowing for miles into the air. Even the sound of incoming shells passing overhead was deafening."

Rose Kennedy lively, strong

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy delivered three books to his mother as she rested from her second intestinal operation in a year and later predicted the 90-year-old family matriarch will be "up and going very soon."

"Mother's very lively, strong and vibrant. You can't keep her down," the Massachusetts Democrat said after visiting Rose Kennedy at New England Baptist Hospital on Thursday.

Hospital officials said Mrs. Kennedy was walking briefly and was in "very good spirits." Her condition was listed as satisfactory.

Mrs. Kennedy entered the hospital late Wednesday for surgery to remove a blockage in her intestines.

Jean Kennedy Smith, youngest of Mrs. Kennedy's daughters, said her mother had been "sitting up in a chair. She seems very cheerful and optimistic that she'll be here just a few days."

Mrs. Kennedy had slept most of the day and had asked for a copy of a biography of columnist Walter Lippman, she said.

Dr. Russell Boles, one of the physicians who performed the surgery, said Mrs. Kennedy will stay in the hospital for seven to 10 days. The nearly hour-long operation was routine for elderly patients with intestinal blockage, he said.

Hospital administrator Raymond McAfoose said Mrs. Kennedy was "convalescing very nicely and making satisfactory progress. She's resting well and is in very good spirits."

He also said after her transfer from the recovery room to a private room that she had walked briefly.

Last September, Mrs. Kennedy was hospitalized for a week at New England Baptist to have a small part of her intestine removed.

Her late husband, Joseph P. Kennedy, was a business magnate and a U.S. ambassador to Great Britain. Two of their sons, President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, were assassinated.

No joking matter

All this saber-rattling on President Carter's part is curious indeed, giving logical men and women real reason to ponder their future security.

Before anyone screams "inconsistency," we do not believe it's inconsistent to, on the one hand, chastise Carter for failing to be a strong enough commander-in-chief and, on the other hand, to criticize him for hinting at the possibility of using nuclear weapons in some instances.

That's exactly what the president did. Recently in a press conference, Carter said that if necessary, he would use nuclear weapons to defend Western Europe.

The president, while obviously trying to regain some of the stature he has lost during his first four years in office, apparently is confusing the recent hawkishness of Americans with a desire to plunge headlong into a nuclear holocaust at the first provocation. That is not the case by any means.

Rather than running blindly toward that destiny, Americans are seeking logical, orderly, intelligent military leadership from their president and their Congress. They want strength, they want honor and they want responsible leadership.

Threatening the use of nuclear weapons — either on a tactical basis or long-range basis — is a last resort step not to be taken without careful consideration, particularly not during the heat of an election campaign.

Use of nuclear weapons is something of a one-way street, the experts say. Even a limited use of such weapons quickly could escalate into a devastating exchange of intercontinental ballistic missiles by the United States and the Soviet Union.

Americans want the United States to regain its lost stature as much as does President Carter. Threatening the use of nuclear weapons, however, is not a campaign tool and should not be used as such. The Soviets count tanks and men; they don't shudder merely from campaign rhetoric.

Certainly Western Europe must be defended at virtually all costs. We all know that. But there are other options, like first beefing up our conventional forces.

But Carter had better be willing to accept responsibility for a full-fledged nuclear holocaust if he toys around with nuclear weapons at any level. That's what the result could be.

Another federal victim

The federal bureaucracy recently claimed yet another victim. This time it was a hospital in North Carolina that needed to replace two X-ray machines.

Hospital officials realized they needed federal approval for the replacement machines so they filed for the correct forms.

Then came the catch: It took more than 160 hours to complete the required paperwork. When finished, those documents weighed in at approximately 47 pounds.

It really makes one begin to wonder whether we have created a monster that now threatens the maker's own existence.

Has the government of the United States become too removed from the interests of the people it was created to serve? Can it be made more efficient? Can it be redirected to our benefit once again?

Those are questions only the voters of this nation can answer.

INSIDE REPORT:

Kim death sentence threatening South Korean stability

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

SEOUL, South Korea — The tight-lipped insistence by the men who run South Korea that a discredited dissident must die, no matter how much revulsion in the West it excites, is building toward a climax with tragic consequences for U.S. interests.

It is by no means assured that the death sentence imposed on Kim Dae Jung will be commuted by President Chun Doo Hwan. To the contrary, presidential advisers say Chun must hold firm or this country will never achieve true stability; dissidents, they say, will perpetuate political turmoil here by using Washington as a court of last appeal.

This advice fails to appreciate the consequence for South Korea of executing a former presidential candidate on sedition charges. While top officials here told us they can weather U.S. economic reprisals, they fail to realize that hysteria spawned by the execution could undercut the U.S. commitment to defend South Korea — upsetting all security considerations in Northeast Asia.

The winner would then be North Korea's Stalinist dictator Kim Il Sung and his campaign to isolate South Korea. After the execution of Kim Dae Jung, the siren song from Pyongyang — that his communist garrison state would not harm its Southern brothers if only those 39,000 American troops get out — might sound sweet in Washington.

Evans

Novak

It is ironic in the extreme that the 30-year-old U.S.-Korean alliance, forged on bloody battlefields and honed by political stress, could be imperiled by the fate of Kim Dae Jung. He may be viewed as a lion in certain Washington and Tokyo circles. But in Seoul, even opposition figures write off Kim as an opportunist and incorrigible intriguer, whose reprehensible conduct following the assassination of President Park Chung Hee last October helped provoke the army takeover.

The deeper irony is that save for the Kim Dae Jung case, prospects are good for the new regime to achieve a blend of stability and democracy. Western diplomats and opposition figures, while not happy about the regime's more repressive aspects, see Chun Doo Hwan as a therapeutic leader.

The 49-year-old career officer who seized power last December and took over as president this month has the potential to achieve what Park Chung Hee lacked in 18 years of rule: Genuine

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Fired Rockwell employee fighting back

WASHINGTON — Ray Sena is a gutsy, dedicated man. A little over a year ago, he was fired by Rockwell International after 24 years with the company.

Sena says he was fired because he refused to falsify expenses on Rockwell contracts with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "I refused to participate in this 'Aerospace' and now I'm paying the price for being an honest man," he said.

Sena's lonely battle against the aerospace conglomerate has borne fruit. His charges that Rockwell misappropriated nearly $500 million of taxpayers' money have resulted in investigations by the FBI, NASA's inspector general, the Defense Contract Audit Agency and Rockwell's own internal security division. The results of the FBI probe will be handed over to U.S. attorneys in California for possible criminal or civil prosecution.

Sources in California and Washington showed reporters Carol O'Connor and Eric Yoder confidential documents that support Sena's charges of high-level chicanery at Rockwell.

The documents indicate that since 1977 top Rockwell executives ordered that certain expenses of an Air Force contract be charged to a NASA space-shuttle project. The reason for the illegal juggling act was that the Air Force contract was for a fixed price, while the NASA contract was on a cost-plus basis. Thus any cost overruns on the Air Force contract would have to be swallowed by the company, while extravagance on the NASA contract would be paid by Uncle Sam.

However that particular bit of corporate sleight-of-hand is resolved, the investigations sparked by Sena's charges have produced a spinoff of still-secret revelations about Rockwell's cavalier attitude toward government contracts. To Rockwell, apparently, "cost-plus" translates into "anything goes."

Here's how Rockwell squandered some of the money it got from taxpayers for the space-shuttle pro-

— Because the project was moved from California to Florida before installation of heat-resistant tiles was completed, the company has about 600 employees working around the clock, and collecting overtime pay, to finish the tile work. They are also getting $45 per day in benefits.

— One employee was reimbursed by the company — and ultimately the taxpayers — for transporting his live-in girlfriend and her two dogs from California to Florida and back again. He also was allowed $1,200 a month to rent a beach cottage in Florida, $250 a month to hire someone to look after his house in California and $550 a month for rental of two cars.

— One employee's wife made a Florida-Air Force round trip at company expense, charged off to NASA, to take her master's degree examination.

— Two Rockwell employees made a seven-day visit to London and Paris to see "Moonraker," a James Bond space movie. They took the trip to London ostensibly to "do an in-depth analysis and evaluation of certain movie studios' capabilities to produce and distribute films on space program benefits." Then they went to the movies in Paris. The junket included a trip on the luxury class Concorde and cost the taxpayers $8,272 on Rockwell's cost-plus contract.

Footnote: A NASA spokesman said that "in general, (Rockwell's) overall travel expenses (and) costs were reasonable under difficult circum-

CHARLEY REESE

Carter can't be trusted to tell Americans the truth

What I dislike most about President Carter is his dishonesty. His claim to have strengthened the nation's defenses is a flagrant example of cold-blooded, premeditated deception.

Sometimes when you come out hard against a politician, people dismiss it as partisanship, but my contempt for most politicians is bipartisan. If the Republican Party has the virtue market cornered, it certainly did a masterful job of hiding it during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

Nor is my dislike of Carter based on policy differences. I can live with people who have different ideas about economics and foreign policy. If I thought I had all of the answers to all of the questions, I'd run for president. What I can't tolerate is a liar.

And neither should you. If you think about it, lying is one of the worst things one human being can do to another. Lying is not saying something you believe to be true and later discover is not true. That is a mistake. Lying is when you say something you know is false at the time you are saying it. A liar has a deliberate intent to deceive.

We humans are social creatures and basic to any social structure or system is communication. Our brains are our basic means of survival and we depend on the flow of information. To lie is to disrupt that flow, to attempt to prevent us from having access to reality, to manipulate us, to treat us like puppets instead of human beings.

More specifically, the basis of self-government is accurate communication so the people can make the proper decisions. Liars subvert democracy and I have no use for them at all. In my opinion there is never any excuse for a government to lie to its own people. If national security must be protected, they can just keep silent.

When Carter made a big ceremony out of signing the military pay raise bill, he lied, because he had vigorously opposed that very same bill and reversed himself 180 degrees only when he realized the Congress was going to pass it in spite of his opposition.

His claims of strengthening our defense are lies. He knows what he has done. He knows that he killed the B-1 bomber, shut down our last missile production plant, killed the neutron warhead, delayed the Trident program, delayed the cruise missile program, delayed the MX missile program, refused to seek proper funding for nuclear warhead production, killed a communications system necessary for our submarines, vetoed a nuclear carrier (his own Democratic Congress over-rode him), cut the Navy's ship-building program in half, and jiggled the numbers to give a false impression of a larger budget.

Carter knows that our armed forces are short of ammunition, short of spare parts, short of fuel, short of transport, and short of tactical aircraft. He knows that training has been cut back, that quotas have been reduced and standards lowered to make it appear the volunteer concept is succeeding. He knows that guard and reserve units have been robbed of equipment even though, under the volunteer concept, they are supposed to be ready for mobilization.

To justify killing the B-1, he talked about the cruise missile which he was delaying and planning to limit in the SALT II treaty. That was deception. He said the missiles from one submarine could devastate the Soviet Union. That was a lie. He knows that thanks to his delays there will be no MX missile, no Trident fleet, and no cruise missiles in the numbers we need until late in this decade which may well be too late.

All of these things Sen. George McGovern would have done if we had elected him. At least, however, McGovern does not pretend that he is a big advocate of a strong national defense.

I could fill up this page with other examples of Carter deliberately deceiving us and this is why I believe it is imperative to get him out of the White House. We can't trust him to tell us the truth. We can't decide if we agree with him or disagree because we don't know what it is he really believes. We can't decide if we like his plans because we can't be sure he really intends to carry them out. His word is so untrustworthy it's useless to even listen to him.

Compared to Carter, Nixon is George Washington re-incarnated.

Englin's last refugees flying to Fort Chaffee

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — Florida's Eglin Air Force Base was being emptied of Cubans today with its last 300 refugee residents flying to Fort Chaffee, the new home for still-homeless refugees who have been held for months at processing centers across the country.

The latest arrivals were joining nearly 300 others who came from Eglin on Thursday in the start of the airlift to bring all unsponsored refugees to Chaffee.

"Fort Chaffee is a good place," said newcomer Isacio Garangel, 43.

World Airways raises its fares

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The airline that spawned intense competition by sharply cutting its coast-to-coast air fares has announced a fare increase.

World Airways said Thursday it is raising one-way fares on routes between New York and Los Angeles or Oakland to $125 from $109, with round trip fares climbing to $240.

Spokesman Robert Dewey Jr. said approval of the increase on the Oakland route by the Civil Aeronautics Board is expected within a few days and that the new Los Angeles-New York fare had already been approved.

"Eglin was a good place, too. But they're both in a free country, away from the communists."

Later today, some of the 3,500 Cubans at Fort McCoy, Wis., were to start for Chaffee, which is equipped for winter. Next month, the transfers will be complete when 2,000 to 2,500 refugees arrive from Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. In all, 6,600 refugees are to come here.

The State Department hopes refugee relocation operations, which have placed more than 100,000 Cubans with sponsors, can be finished and Chaffee closed by Dec. 31.

The refugees were searched by federal marshals with guard dogs as they prepared to leave Eglin, where as many as 10,000 refugees once were housed. A disturbance at the camp May 24 left six people injured.

"I think everybody is glad to see it over," Maj. John Toner said. "The Cubans in the camp certainly couldn't have been happy with the arrangements of living in tents in the heat of a Florida summer."

Security was tight for the first newcomers as they stepped off planes at Fort Smith airport and walked to a waiting bus for the five-mile ride to Chaffee, site of several summer disturbances.

Strike ends, clearing way for new filming

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Roll 'em" are words that will soon fill empty sound stages and get the fall television season under way if striking actors end their 9½-week walkout and move quickly to ratify a tentative agreement on a new contract.

However, TV executives say that even if new shows begin to hit the airwaves by mid-November, the shows will not get their usual multi-million-dollar sendoffs.

New shows will be dribbled out a few at a time and TV audiences won't get all the usual pre-season hoopla in which ABC, CBS and NBC line up a dazzling array of movies and specials.

"We're polling all of our producers right now, assuming that the ratification will take place, to find out when they will be able to deliver shows to us," CBS Programs Vice President Bud Grant said Thursday. "We'll put the shows on the air just as soon as they're ready to go on. There will not be a week where all shows will premiere the same week. The classic premiere week, I think, is gone."

Asked if the new season's program lineup would suffer from this approach, Grant said "In a funny way they may benefit because if we're premiering, say, 10 shows in one week, (as) in the past, those 10 shows would have to share the on-the-air promotional availability. Now those 10 shows will be premiering over a period of time and I think each show will get proportionately larger share of the on-the-air promotion pie."

Estimates vary as to how long it will take to channel regular TV series into homes presumably hungry to know who shot nasty oilman J.R. Ewing on CBS' hit series, "Dallas." But the betting is that it will take weeks, maybe months.

Members of the Screen Actors Guild and American Federation of Television and Radio Artists will need up to 2½ weeks to complete mail-in balloting on a new three-year agreement reached early Thursday with film and TV producers, according to a SAG spokeswoman.

Executives at ABC and NBC on Thursday held to their earlier predictions that an additional three to six weeks would be needed to get new shows on the air. But Grant said half-hour taped comedies will be broadcast as they become available — possibly two to three weeks after actors return to the sets.

Rock drummer found dead

LONDON (AP) — An autopsy was ordered today to determine what killed John Bonham, the drummer of the rock music group Led Zeppelin who was found dead after a party at which police said a "large quantity of alcohol" was drunk.

"There are no suspicious circumstances," a police spokesman added.

Authorities said the band's bass player, John Paul Jones, discovered Bonham's body Thursday at the Old Mill House, the $2-million home of the group's lead guitarist, Jimmy Page. The mansion is on the Thames River 30 miles west of London and is 500 yards from Windsor Castle, one of the royal family's favorite homes.

"There seems to have been something of a party the night before and a large quantity of alcohol consumed," a police source said.

Bonham, known as "Bonzo" and considered the clown of the band, was known as a heavy drinker and once rode a motorcycle through a hotel while on an American tour. He lived with his wife, Pat, and two children on a farm in his native Worcestershire, northwest of London, and had been with the "heavy metal" rock group since its formation in 1968.

Police gave his age as 30, a spokesman for the distributor of the group's records said he was 32, and a rock-music reference book says he was 31.

Led Zeppelin completed a successful European tour in July after not performing publicly for some time. Cancellation of one concert in Nurem-burg, West Germany, was attributed to Bonham's "physical exhaustion."

John Bonham

Led Zeppelin for years has been near the top of the British-American rock world in popularity and critical favor. The group has sold over 20 million albums, but has never had a hit single. The group's latest album, "In Through the Out Door," was released last year.

A Mall-velous time

The only sour note inside the mall Thursday came when a spill-sport in the crowd tossed a nickel at Bob Specia's domino arrangement, setting part of it off prematurely. Specia reworked the maze-like creation, but would probably liked to have done more than play "42" with the culprit. (Staff Photos by Edward McCain)

Unless you were a balloon pilot or a domino expert, Thursday's Midland Park Mall "Extravagrandza" grand opening was the ideal party.

Stores in the new mall gave away prizes, the Lone Ranger fired off a few salvos and Jim Ryun ran circles around everyone.

Sporadic showers and an honest-to-goodness heavy rain spoiled the scheduled race between 20 hot air balloons. The "hare and hound" chase may be rescheduled for a later date, according to a mall spokesman.

But with the likes of Meadowlark Lemon and Lou Goldstein, not to mention Miss Texas, Terri Eoff, the mall's big bash was still a success.

You just can't have balloons at every party.

Police seeking '.22-caliber killer'

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A ".22-caliber killer" has been stalking black men in the Buffalo area, police say, and authorities are worried that the white gunman could trigger a black backlash.

Three black males were killed and a fourth seriously wounded in shootings over a 36-hour period beginning Monday.

All four were shot in the head with .22-caliber slugs and shell casings recovered indicated the same gun was used in at least three of the shootings, according to Leo J. Donovan, chief of the homicide squad in Buffalo, the state's second-largest city.

Several witnesses have identified the assailant as a white youth.

"Somehow he's developed a deep, burning hatred toward black males," Donovan said Thursday. "Maybe it was something in his family or had something to do with a girlfriend."

Donovan said he feared a black backlash. "I expect there'll be some flak," he said. "I just hope some black psychopath doesn't start taking his own revenge."

In nearby Niagara Falls, where Joseph McCoy, 43, was killed by a gun concealed in a paper bag, police reported that a white man had to be rescued from a crowd of blacks because he was carrying a paper sack with a handle sticking out. The sack contained a hacksaw.

Two of the killings occurred in Buffalo, a city of 357,000 that is about 22 percent black. There has been little racial tension recently and a court-ordered school desegregation plan has been calmly carried out over the last three years.

Donovan said he was hoping for a message from the killer.

"If he would talk, maybe we could get him to realize that he's not going to come to any harm here, but he has to stop hurting innocent people," the police officer said.

Glenn Dunn, 14, of Buffalo, was the .22-caliber killer's first victim. Detectives said he was shot to death Monday in a supermarket parking lot as he sat behind the wheel of a stolen car. Police have refused to say whether they believe he was involved in the theft.

Harold Green, 32, was wounded Tuesday while eating lunch in a car in suburban Cheektowaga. He is in critical condition at St. Joseph Intercommunity Hospital.

Emanuel Thomas, 31, was shot to death Tuesday on a street near his Buffalo home. McCoy was slain Wednesday on a Niagara Falls street.

Donovan said no shell casings were found at the scene of the McCoy slaying, so it could not immediately be determined if the gun used in the other three shootings was used there.

Slugs taken from McCoy's body are being compared with the slugs from the other shootings to see if they were from the same gun, Donovan said, but results will not be available for two or three days.

Police had feared that a black man whose body was pulled Wednesday from the Niagara River near Niagara Falls was a fifth victim of the killer, but Coroner James Joyce said X-rays of the body gave no indication of violence.

Girl saves boy with television technique

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — A boy who touched electrified metal as he tried to climb a billboard was revived by an 11-year-old girl who imitated a technique she saw on television, slapping him until he began breathing.

Darlene Kirby will get a plaque from the city, Mayor Thomas Dunn said Thursday.

"We're very proud of her. She's a true hero," said Police Director Joseph Brennan.

Miss Kirby, 14-year-old Guy Gallagher and Debbie Tucker, 11, were trying to climb a Conrail billboard on Saturday when Gallagher touched metal electrified from the billboard's lighting and fell five feet to the ground.

When Miss Kirby could detect no pulse and no breathing, she slapped Gallagher's back between the shoulder blades until he groaned and started breathing, said policeman Paul Solt.

She began screaming for help and a motorist alerted Solt, who was on duty at a nearby supermarket.

It's a gas to Arizona youths

PATAGONIA, Ariz. (AP) — Youngsters toss matches to the ground to watch puffs of dust and flame erupt in this little Arizona town, where 40-year-old natural gas pipes began leaking 18 months ago.

Adults pitch cigarettes out the back door of a tavern to watch the little fireworks in the alley.

And David Ochoa's store buckled in the middle when a pocket of natural gas erupted beneath the floor. He had dropped some coins and was searching for them with a cigarette lighter.

It's been a gas in this city of 700 people some 50 miles south of Tucson since the pipes began wearing out 18 months ago. Fun sometimes, but dangerous, too, city officials said.

The leaking heating fuel smells, residents complained. And while it poses no health problems, it is a fire hazard, officials said. So city manager Maxine Crehan finally bundled up her file of complaints and called the state fire marshal.

"A lot of people were frightened," she said Thursday. "We're getting some action now."

A Southern Utilities Gas Co. crew arrived Tuesday, bit into the ground with a backhoe to repair the latest leak and hit the main water line.

"We had a 150-foot stream of water going into this brand-new house," said Jim Leather, city water and sewer manager. "He didn't check with us at the water department."

The town water supply had to be shut down for five hours and a reservoir had to be drained before Leather and his crew could repair the damage.

"If there had been a fire, the whole town would have been wiped out," Leather said. "The town would have burned to the ground."

Despite the shaky start, Leather and Ms. Crehan believe the utility's owner, Al Kinder, will make the needed repairs.

"At first we couldn't get anything done, but now everybody's getting on that gas line," said Leather.

The Arizona Corporation Commission's utilities division in Phoenix has given Kinder an Oct. 31 deadline for surveying the pipes system for leaks.

Kinder, who lives in Tucson, plans to have a Los Angeles consulting firm survey the Patagonia gas system in mid-October. And he's trying to sell his one-man utility to a bigger gas company.

Jury hears Clayton accepting $5,000

HOUSTON (AP) — An FBI informant counted out $5,000 for Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and told him, "This is just peanuts," according to a secretly recorded tape played for jurors hearing charges stemming from the undercover Brilab investigation.

The rustle of the bills as Joseph Hauser said "one, two, three, four, five" was audible on the recording of a Nov. 8, 1979, meeting.

Clayton's taped reply was, "Well, let me tell you we appreciate the heck out of it."

The speaker says he considered the $5,000 a campaign contribution and he intended to return it. Prosecutors say the money was a bribe for Clayton's influence in reopening bidding on a $76-million-a-year state employees health insurance contract.

Clayton, labor leader L.G. Moore and lawyers Randall Wood and Donald Ray were indicted by a federal grand jury June 12 on charges of extortion, racketeering, bribery and conspiracy in an alleged insurance kickback scheme.

Clayton, Wood and Ray are in the second week of their trial in U.S. District Court here. Moore will be tried later.

The recordings, made by Hauser, are the heart of the government's case against Clayton, a 20-year veteran in the Legislature.

Prosecutor Ron Woods said the jury would hear more recordings, but the defense soon would have a chance to cross-examine Hauser, a convicted felon who became the central figure in the FBI undercover operation.

Hauser, under prosecution questioning, said Clayton handed the money to his administrative assistant Russell "Rusty" Kelly and said, "you know where to put it."

After the meeting, Moore called Kelly and said, "pick up the phone and call me for whatever you need in those Houston House races."

Then Moore called Wood and said, "We made a contribution to Clayton and he accepted it. No problem."

The tapes played Thursday also had this conversation:

Moore: "Let me tell you something now, Billy. Let me tell you what my commitment is to you. ... He (Hauser) wants the business. He can do a better job. My commitment is, we will put, I will, in your, whatever you want to run, a $100,000 going in and we can be prepared to put up a half million."

Hauser: "Now that's for every year, every year, you understand that?"

Clayton: "Well, let me tell you, anytime you can show me where you will save the state money ... well by God, I'll go to battle for you ... you know I think that is what part of my job is ... try save the state money."

Two sentenced in conspiracy

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston attorney and an insurance adjuster received probation sentences in an alleged conspiracy to collect on false worker's compensation claims.

Attorney Donald A. Hecker, 35, pleaded no contest Thursday to a theft charge. He was given 10 years probation and fined $5,000 by State District Judge Jimmy James.

Hecker's license to practice law also was revoked and will be held by the court during his probation.

William Alfred Reed, an insurance adjuster with Employers Insurance of Wausau, pleaded guilty to a theft charge. James sentenced Reed to five years probation and ordered him to make $970 restitution.

Clayton Moore is Lone Ranger

By BILL MODISSETT
Staff Writer

Clayton Moore, television's original Lone Ranger, rode into Midland Thursday for the grand opening of Midland Park Mall and rode away — as the sun was setting — with several "kemo sabe."

In case you're not too "up" on the Indian tongue, "kemo sabe" means "faithful friend" and was a line made famous by Moore's television series sidekick, Jay Silverheels, who played "Tonto."

Moore, now in his 60s, travels around the country leaving silver bullets behind in the form of all the things he stood for as the Lone Ranger — truth, justice, fairness and honesty.

He's been hampered somewhat since the Wrather Corp., which owns all Lone Ranger rights, took his mask away from him. But, true to form, he's out there fighting injustice, attempting to get the mask back. And he's not alone. More than two million fans have signed petitions hoping to help him regain the mask.

"I have a lot of faithful friends right here in Midland, Texas — the great state of Texas," Moore told media representatives during a news conference at the mall Thursday morning.

"I was shocked when they did it, to tell you the truth," Moore said. He talked about the Wrather Corp.'s court ruling barring him from wearing his Lone Ranger mask in public because he's "too old" and "too fat" (Moore's 10 pounds lighter now than when he played the Lone Ranger on television). He talked about his philosophy in life, the struggle to regain his mask and about the dark glasses he wears now instead of a mask.

He wants to get the mask back "for my fans." He doesn't want them to have to wonder "Who was that 'glasses' man?"

Moore was chosen to play the original Lone Ranger character in 1949. During the time they filmed, Moore appeared in 169 television productions and two feature-length movies. In all, he was "that masked man" for 30 years. He's worn the dark glasses for a year now.

He was "sort of a stuntman" before he won the Lone Ranger role in 1949 and he and Silverheels, who is deceased, trained their own horses and did most of their own stunts.

"It was a lot of work, a lot of fun. We worked hard and we played hard," Moore reminisced Thursday.

Why is the Lone Ranger so popular?

"It's part of Americana. It's history. It's good for the boys and girls of this country," he opined. "We need heroes, particularly now."

Westerns today incorporate too much violence, too much slang, too little that is virtuous.

Moore wants to be a "hero" for the youngsters because "they'll be running the country someday."

He has adopted the habits of the Lone Ranger character he played so long. He believes in fair play, honesty and law and order.

The Lone Ranger character stood for law and order, Moore said. "Anybody who is a good guy is law and order. That's the way I look at it," he noted.

When he was playing the Lone Ranger, the Wrather Corp. gave Moore a list of rules to live by — never take off his mask in public, never go into a bar, etc. In 31 years he never broke one of those rules, Moore said.

"Yet, after 31 years they unmasked me," the actor added.

Moore says he won't take the mask back, even if it's offered, until he can obtain a California court ruling to that effect. He doesn't want the Lone Ranger to be unmasked again. He wants to remain masked for the sake of his fans.

Has the character Clayton Moore played so long — the character that Clayton Moore actually became — been good to him in the last 31 years?

"Oh yes!" Moore sighs.

And then, in an instant, he's back astride his horse and it's "Hi-yo, Silver, away!"

State won't make customers pay for TMI cleanup

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — State regulators, contending that those who back nuclear energy should shoulder the burden, say they will not budge from their order that customers not be made to pay for the cleanup from the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident.

Voting unanimously Thursday, the Public Utility Commission turned down Metropolitan Edison Co.'s request that the Sept. 18 order be postponed to allow for the preparation of objections.

Met Ed, operator of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, has said the order not to use revenue from customers in the plant recovery prevents it from proceeding with the cleanup — including further entries into the radiation-frenzied containment building.

Halt the cleanup would violate state and federal law and threaten public safety, Met Ed said.

PUC Chairman Susan Shanaman, telling the utility to rely on shareholder and insurance funds for the cleanup until some form of federal aid is obtained, said it would be unfair to make customers shoulder the recovery costs.

According to the chairman, it is more appropriate for the shareholders of Met Ed, who chose to invest in nuclear power, to bear the costs of the nuclear accident than a family who happened to live in an area served by Met Ed.

The federal government also must take responsibility, she said, because it has encouraged development of commercial nuclear power and controls where and under what conditions a nuclear plant is built.

Commission James Cawley cited the costs of the cleanup, estimated at between $800 million and $1 billion, for the PUC's stand.

"It's a question of imposing a tremendous financial burden on (Met Ed customers) which would far exceed a reasonable increase in their rates over a short period of time," said Cawley.

The commission also left the door open for possible future action on a proposal to halt annual dividend payments of $10 million to preferred stockholders of the plant operator.

The PUC turned down a request by a lawyer for an Easton-area foundry that the dividends be halted immediately, but said it would be willing to consider the proposal later.

Roland Morris, representing Victaulic Co. of America, said a group of about 15 to 20 industrial customers of Met Ed were joining to fight dividend payments of $10.3 million annually.

Policy changes in store for New Mexico prison system

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)

Gov. Bruce King says he intends to push for changes in the state's corrections policy in response to a report that a hard-line attitude by officials helped spark a February riot at the state penitentiary in which 33 inmates died.

King said he would like officials to have more authority to reward inmates for good behavior. That could be achieved through more flexible policies on sentencing, parole and prisoner classification, he said.

The report, issued Thursday, said that the groundwork for the riot was laid four or five years ago when rehabilitation programs were cut and inmates were coerced into "snitching" on other convicts.

The report said many of the inmates killed in the riots were slain for being informants.

The report was challenged by Clyde Malley, who was warden five years ago. Malley, contacted in Austin, Texas, said rehabilitation programs had not been cut. He said he expanded "every program in the institution" and allowed women inmates to attend college for the first time.

Malley said he was tougher on inmates than his predecessors because "the inmates were running the place."

"It was a pig pen. The inmates wouldn't work. The place should have been condemned by the board of health," Malley said.

The report, prepared by the state attorney general's office, made two recommendations — that the governor and Legislature set up an incentive-based inmate corrections policy, and that the state hire stable, professional management to put the policy into effect free from political interference.

Acting Corrections Secretary Bill Giron said he believes changes should be made in the state's sentencing law, which provides for a flat sentence for an offender and puts tight limits on the amount of time that can be deducted from sentences.

"In order to provide incentives within that law, we need to have broader authority to award additional time off from a sentence," Giron said.

He also said inmates should be rewarded for participating in school and job programs.

In a related development, a white former penitentiary inmate said a "white power" group at the prison had considered killing 20 to 40 black inmates about two months before the riot.

Darrell Stelly, who has been placed at a federal prison for his own protection, testified Thursday at a preliminary hearing for Harmon Lee Ellis, one of 10 inmates facing trial on escape and conspiracy charges in a December breakout.

Stelly has already pleaded guilty to escape.

Stelly said the white power group planned to take over the prison gym and kill the black prisoners there.

The group also planned, Stelly said, "to take the hospital and the psych unit, hold the guards hostage and shoot up all the dope. I said the whole thing was crazy."

Security stepped up in Afghanistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghanistan's Marxist regime and its Soviet defenders have beefed up security in Kabul in response to fears of a new wave of Moslem rebel attacks following the sabotage of a power substation in the capital, Western diplomatic sources said.

Soviet forces, sent into Afghanistan last December to help the pro-Moscow government battle anti-communist Moslem tribesmen, deployed five armored personnel carriers outside the Kabul Radio headquarters, the sources said Thursday. Other government offices also got increased protection, they added.

The Western informants said the attack on the substation near the Kabul university campus appeared to signal a possible new wave of guerrilla attacks in the capital after a lull of several months. They attributed the lull to the successful infiltration by Afghan government agents of the underground groups working in the capital.

It was not known when the reported sabotage occurred or how much damage was inflicted on the substation, and there was no independent confirmation of the report.

In another development, the sources said Soviet forces began a successful offensive on Sept. 16 against a rebel camp near Paghman, about 15 miles west of Kabul. Twenty-five guerrillas were killed in the attack and dozens were captured, the sources said. No Soviet casualties were reported.

Meanwhile, China's official Xinhua news agency reported the defection to Pakistan of Kabul Radio director Sayed Fazle Akhtar. It said he defected because he could no longer keep up "anti-Islamic and anti-Afghan propaganda" broadcasts over the radio.

There was no immediate confirmation of the Xinhua report from Islamabad.

Punitive damage ruling appealed

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. corporations will flee certain states in "the greatest migration since the Irish potato famine" if they are made to defend themselves against punitive damage claims in wrongful-death suits, a lawyer for McDonnell Douglas Corp. contends.

The companies would move to states with more favorable laws governing liability in cases where products cause death to consumers, Norman J. Barry said.

He was arguing Thursday before the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which is hearing three cases stemming from the 1979 crash of an American Airlines DC-10 here that killed 274 people.

He urged the three-judge panel to overturn a lower court ruling that the DC-10 manufacturer may be sued by victims' families for punitive damages because its corporate headquarters is in a state allowing such suits.

"If this court is to adopt the rule suggested by the district court," Barry argued, "you would create the greatest migration since the Irish potato famine."

At stake are millions of dollars in damages Douglas could be forced to pay if lawyers for crash victims' families prove the manufacturer made mistakes in design or manufacture that led to the nation's worst air disaster.

The National Transportation Safety Board ruled last December that the probable cause of the crash was "maintenance-induced damage" that resulted in the left engine tearing loose from its mounting while the plane was taking off for Los Angeles.

A trial on damages is months away, but an appellate ruling will determine if the families can seek punitive damages or only compensatory damages, which generally bring much smaller awards.

Compensatory damages are awarded to compensate for an injury or injuries, while punitive damages are awarded to compensate for a gross wrong over and above compensatory damages.

The lower court based its ruling on the fact that McDonnell Douglas's corporate headquarters are in St. Louis, and Missouri allows punitive damages in death cases.

The same court ruled in May that American Airlines was not liable for punitive damages because its headquarters at the time of the crash was in New York City. New York does not allow punitive damages, it found.

American says it moved to Texas three months after the crash but crash victims' lawyers dispute the date of the move. Texas, like Missouri, allows punitive damages in death cases.

"Why would the State of Missouri have an interest in imposing on its largest single employer the onus of responding to punitive damages (in the DC-10 cases)?" Barry asked.

Lawyers for victims' families argued punitive damages are intended to deter corporations from improper behavior.

"A state's interest in allowing punitive damages is in controlling conduct," argued Lee S. Kreindler, a New York City lawyer representing a group of victims' families. "Corporate decisions whether corners should be cut or care should be taken are made in St. Louis," he said.

The American DC-10 that crashed was assembled by Douglas Aircraft Co. at its Long Beach, Calif., facility. Douglas was merged into McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Unmarried man seeks custody

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP)

— A 21-year-old serviceman who was adopted himself has filed a paternity suit in an effort to gain the custody of his illegitimate 13-month-old son.

Airman 1st Class Jeff Claypool said he filed suit after he learned that the boy, Michael, was about to be put for adoption.

"I could not see my son go out into this world not knowing his parents," said Claypool, who is stationed at Moody Air Force Base.

A hearing on the suit was being held today in Superior Court in Anne Arundel County, Md.

Claypool was asking the court to declare him the father of the boy, said his attorney, Morton Fowler of Washington, D.C.

"When I filed the action, the clerks were sort of scratching their heads," said Fowler. "They didn't know whether a father could sue to have a declaration of paternity."

A paternity action filed by a father is rare, if not unheard of, said Fowler.

"Everytime I go home on leave and see him I just can't help but cry ... because I think he knows who his father is," said Claypool. "And every-time I go see him it is just out of this world. It is just something that makes your whole body feel so good, knowing that there is somebody with your own blood out there in this world."

Claypool said he asked his 16-year-old Maryland girlfriend to marry him when he learned in March 1979 that she was pregnant, but she refused. Since the suit was filed, Michael's mother has decided to withdraw her consent to the scheduled adoption and is fighting Claypool for custody of the child.

Man gets 15 years in hijack try

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The 25-year-old man who wanted to force a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner to Iran to rescue the American hostages has been sentenced to 15 years in jail.

Stephen Bilson of Ceres had been charged with attempted air piracy after he tried to hijack the PSA jet while it was on the ground in Stockton.

U.S. District Judge Milton Schwartz also gave Bilson five years for use of a firearm, but the sentences run concurrently.

Bilson climbed over a fence at Stockton Airport on May 1, boarded a Boeing 727 and held flight engineer Alan Romatowski at gunpoint for five hours. There were no passengers aboard. Romatowski later disarmed him.

Bilson had written a play about a young man who kidnaps a U.S. senator and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in an attempt to free the hostages.

Florida wants feds to pick up tab for refugees

MIAMI (AP) — Two-thirds of the 123,000 Cubans who've landed on U.S. shores this year are still in South Florida. Residents have put up with the resultant headaches — increasing crime, social tensions, housing shortages — but want someone else to foot the bill.

The "someone else" they suggest is the federal government.

Miami and Dade County officials make near-weekly trips to Washington to lobby for federal help, and the refugee costs are becoming an issue in the presidential campaign.

Republican nominee Ronald Reagan drew enthusiastic praise here Monday night by saying, "The federal government must share the financial burden (the Cubans) have brought."

"This is the No. 1 issue in the state of Florida," said Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Miami, author of a $100 million appropriation bill for reimbursement of state and local government costs.

FRANK MOSS, controller for the State Department's Cuban-Haitian Task Force, says Washington is already committed to spending $370 million for costs incurred by the Coast Guard and Navy, whose continuing patrols of the Cuban "Freedom Flotilla" cost more than $700,000 a week; the Army and Air Force, which run refugee holding camps in four states; immigration agencies processing the aliens, and other federal groups.

Fascell's $100 million bill is still pending in Congress. "That will only be a start," said Dade Metro Mayor Steve Clark.

Still unpaid are millions of dollars for food stamps, medical care and housing for the refugees, as well as education costs for the 20,000 refugee children enrolled in South Florida schools.

Bills are also piling up in other affected areas. In Arkansas, for example, Gov. Bill Clinton wants the federal government to pay the $213,000 state and local costs of the riots at Fort Chaffee; the Fort Smith airport wants $500,000 for runway damage officials say was caused by the heavy planes carrying refugees.

State and local officials put costs in Wisconsin at about $100,000, including expenses for chasing refugees who run away from Fort McCoy and vandalize local residences. Pennsylvania officials expect the bills from Fort Indiantown Gap to run into the thousands, too.

IN TINY KEY WEST, the docking point for the boatlift, officials want federal disaster relief to offset a tourism decline blamed on news about the refugee arrivals. "The economic impact has been devastating," said Mayor Charles McCoy.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Florida, says some of his colleagues don't want any part of approving taxpayers' money for the controversial refugee influx in this election year.

"It's been one fight after another,"

Chiles said. "They like to say, 'It's your problem.'"

"But this is clearly not Florida's fault. These are not people we invited here. My state is the victim, and it's not fair for my local governments to pick up the tab for this conscious or unconscious policy on the part of the federal government," Chiles said.

The future financial burden of the 80,000 refugees now living in South Florida can only be guessed at.

Linda Berkowitz of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services said almost 45,000 food stamp households have been added in Dade County alone since the boatlift began.

"We're talking about 84,000 people. That's the size of the entire food stamp caseload in a lot of very large cities. We get a couple of thousand every week," she said.

Ms. Berkowitz said housing vacancies in Dade are a fraction of 1 percent. And police officials say they need more officers to combat crime increases at least partially attributed to jobless refugees.

Florida's congressional delegation says the state can't afford to pay for food stamps and medical assistance for refugees. Currently, the federal government foots 53 percent of the bill and leaves the other 47 percent to Florida.

State officials say the federal government should pay 100 percent.

Chiles said the costs of caring for the "disabled, sick and mentally ill people sent over by (Cuban President Fidel) Castro will be there until they meet their maker."

MILLIONS MORE WILL be needed if the Cubans are granted official refugee status, which would entitle them to additional employment and welfare benefits.

The estimated 800,000 Cubans who came to this country in the 1960s were helped by a generous federal government that spent almost $2 billion to ease their way.

But Chiles notes a difference in the nation's mood almost two decades later: in the 1960s, the arriving Cubans had been prescreened and were welcomed as anti-Communists seeking freedom.

But the boatlift refugees, a less-skilled, less-educated group that includes thousands of former prison inmates, are not viewed the same way.

"You didn't have people who were pouring gasoline on stewardesses and hijacking planes, you didn't have all the stories about the number who are criminals, who are homosexuals, who are deviates," Chiles said.

"There's a feeling in Congress, like there's a feeling by the people in Florida, that it's running amok," he added. "The hard part is delineating between what you're doing to ease the burden, but not doing something to trigger more. That's a hard line to walk."

Mexican vanilla extract has toxic ingredient, court told

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Health has asked a court to allow it to seize and destroy 16 bottles of Mexican vanilla extract from a San Antonio merchant.

The agency says the vanilla extract contains a toxic ingredient known as coumerin that is used to enhance flavor in Mexico but used in the United States as rat poison.

The extract contains coumerin, a drug that thins the blood, says Assistant District Attorney Mike Hodge.

Coumerin, used commercially as a rat poison, kills rodents by causing internal bleeding, Hodge said. It also is prescribed as a medication to thin the blood, he said.

Coumerin makes Mexican extracts more flavorful than American brands and therefore is popular among American consumers, he added.

Health Department inspectors located the controversial Mexican extract at various grocery and produce stores in San Antonio after being alerted by the Federal Food and Drug Administration, Hodge said.

All the merchants carrying the product voluntarily agreed to destroy their supply, Hodge said, except for Castillo's Produce, located in the farmers' market in San Antonio.

Hodge filed a suit in Bexar County Court-at-Law on behalf of the health department seeking a court order to destroy the 16 bottles the company has on hand.

New poll shows little change among candidates

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans say they couldn't pick a clear winner in the first presidential debate between John Anderson and Ronald Reagan, saying both men scored points in the nationally televised confrontation, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

President Carter's refusal to take part in that first debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters on Sunday drew strong disapproval from many likely voters.

But Carter's refusal, the debate and the other events of the past month left the presidential candidates not much different from where they stood in mid-August. Reagan is up just a bit, while Carter and Anderson are essentially unchanged.

Approximately 1,500 likely voters across the nation were interviewed by telephone Monday through Wednesday for the latest AP-NBC News poll.

Each was asked whom they would vote for if the presidential election were held today.

Reagan was the choice of 42 percent and Carter of 33 percent. Anderson was named by 13 percent. One percent mentioned others and 11 percent said they were undecided.

In the AP-NBC News poll taken Aug. 15-16, Reagan was the choice of 39 percent; Carter, 32 percent; and Anderson, 13 percent.

Because these figures are based on error margins of either 3 or 4 percentage points, the changes in Reagan's and Carter's figures are not significant.

But these current standings say little about the outcome of the election on Nov. 4. Many voters may change their minds.

About three of five likely voters said they have now made up their minds whom to vote for in November, while about two of five said they had not firmly decided on a choice.

The current presidential preferences of those who have made up their minds show slightly greater commitment of Reagan and Carter voters than Anderson backers. Forty-eight percent of this group said they backed Reagan and 39 percent Carter. Only 11 percent named Anderson. The rest said they were undecided, even though they said earlier they had made up their minds.

Many of those who had not firmly decided on a candidate still expressed a preference for one candidate if they had to choose now. Reagan was the choice of 32 percent of this not-firmly-committed group and Carter mentioned by 25 percent. Anderson was named by 17 percent, 2 percent chose others and 24 percent were not sure.

The AP-NBC News poll asked likely voters if they had seen or heard the debate Sunday night between Anderson and Reagan. Fifty-eight percent of the likely voters said they had not seen the nationally televised debate. Forty-two percent said they had.

Asked who did the better job, the likely voters who saw the debate split — 38 percent said Anderson did, while 35 percent said Reagan. Twenty-three percent said they did equally well and 4 percent were not sure.

Asked specifically about how well each candidate presented his stands on the issues, Anderson outpointed Reagan by a 45-30 margin. But asked to judge how well the candidates did explaining the kind of president he would be Reagan got the nod, 44-28. The debate had a similarly balanced effect among likely voters in terms of their estimate of the influence of the debate.

About three in five voters said the debate did not change their minds either about voting for Anderson or about voting for Reagan. And the remaining likely voters split almost evenly on whether the debate made them more likely or less likely to vote for either man.

President Carter refused to take part in the Sunday night debate, saying he wanted to debate Reagan one-on-one first.

Chase Manhattan hikes prime rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan Bank raised its prime lending rate one-half percentage point to 13 percent today, one day after the Federal Reserve announced it had raised the cost of funds it lends to its member banks.

A spokesman for Chase, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, said the bank's prime rate increase was "essentially a reflection of the cost of funds" it borrows.

The prime rate is a bank's charge on loans to top-ranked corporations. It is not linked to rates on consumer loans or home mortgages, but its movements do signal general changes in the cost of borrowing.

The Federal Reserve late Thursday announced it was raising its discount rate a percentage point to 11 percent as part of a plan to "discourage excessive growth" of the money supply.

Fed's new interest rate expected to slow recovery from recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest rates Americans pay for various types of loans are expected to rise in the wake of the decision by the Federal Reserve Board to hike its key bank lending rate from 10 percent to 11 percent.

The action Thursday by the seven-member board also raises the likelihood that the nation's recovery from the current recession will be slowed.

Spokesmen for both the housing and auto industries have warned that a new increase in interest rates could cause a premature end to the improvement in sales in those two industries and tip the scales of the nation's economy toward recession again.

But the board was apparently more worried that a rapidly expanding supply of money could worsen the nation's inflation rate.

A statement by the board said the action was "part of the continuing policy of the Federal Reserve to discourage excessive growth" of the nation's money supply.

Because most economists believe an excessive growth of the money supply contributes to inflation by putting more money in the hands of consumers and businesses, the board obviously felt it had to act. Higher interest rates discourage borrowing, and thus slow the growth in the money supply.

Interest rates have generally been on the rise in recent weeks, and Thursday's action by the board appeared likely to continue the trend. Several major banks increased their prime lending rate last week to 12.5 percent, the highest level since mid-June, although still well below the April peak of 20 percent.

Home mortgages also have been edging up in recent weeks. The government increased the allowable rates for mortgages backed by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration to 13 percent on Monday. In California, home mortgage rates of 14 percent are common and are spreading through the rest of the nation.

One indicator of the jump in mortgages was a report Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that the value of mortgages closed by federally insured savings and loan associations in August was almost 40 percent higher than in July.

These lenders wrote $8 billion worth of mortgages in August, the third straight monthly increase, and raised the volume to the highest level since last fall, even though the total was still 18 percent under August 1979.

However, Jay Janis, chairman of the board, said, "further increases will be heavily dependent on a continuing improvement in savings inflow, and this will be substantially influenced by changes in market interest rates, which have recently risen further."

It was the first time since March that the Federal Reserve Board has raised the prime discount rate, which is the amount of interest charged on loans from the federal reserve to the nation's bank.

The last change in the federal discount rate came July 28, when it was lowered from 11 percent to 10 percent. That was during a period when interest rates were generally falling.

But with a number of key indicators showing that the current recession is apparently drawing to a close, the nation's money supply has been growing at an exceptionally rapid annual rate of more than 12 percent, well above the board's target for a growth of 7 percent in the current year.

A full percentage point increase in the discount rate is an indication that the board means business, as changes in the discount rate are usually only a quarter or a half a point.

Senate rejects bid to consider tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, siding with President Carter over its own tax-writing committee, is holding firm against considering a tax cut before the November election.

Senate Democrats handily turned back a Republican effort Thursday to force a vote on a $39.8 billion tax cut approved almost unanimously last month by the Senate Finance Committee.

The GOP move was rejected 54-38 with only five Democrats joining the Republicans.

Meanwhile, Democrats in the House and Senate also defeated Republican attempts to force immediate action on a binding federal budget for fiscal 1981, which starts next Wednesday.

Despite losing the tax cut vote, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., vowed to try again next week to attach the measure to pending Senate legislation. Dole termed Thursday's vote "just a preliminary bout."

However, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., a primary tax cut advocate, conceded that the vote "pretty much forecloses the possibility to do anything before" Congress recesses next week for the Nov. 4 election.

Carter has urged Congress to wait until next year to act on his $27.6 billion tax cut plan, saying pre-election pressure could lead to passage of unwise tax legislation.

However, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., indicated that the Senate might consider a tax cut bill during a post-election session scheduled to begin Nov. 12.

Byrd denounced the Republican proposal for an immediate vote as a "purely political gimmick," but said rejection "does not mean the Senate will not act (on a tax cut) this year."

However, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, supported the Republican demand for immediate action on the bill, saying that otherwise the tax cut would be delayed until next year.

"If we don't get it to a vote before the election, it will never get as far as the president's desk," Long said.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., also said immediate action was needed on the budget.

God willin' and the creek don't rise, St. Ann's Family Fair will still go on.

The event is scheduled for Saturday on the school grounds and organizers say that, rain or shine, they plan to continue the thirty-two year tradition.

This year's fair will feature over 40 activities, including booths of arts and crafts, handmade items, Christmas handcraft and gift items, a Mexican dinner and games.

New additions this year include a green plant booth, Christmas booth, photography booth and a dunking booth.

Rides for the entire family will be open today until 10 p.m. and all day Saturday on the school grounds beside the Parish Center.

Several outstanding prizes will be awarded from a drawing, including a 1980 Ford Mustang, a gourmet dinner for six and a handmade quilt. More information can be obtained about the drawing from members of St. Ann's Church.

The Mexican dinner will be served from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday. Entertainment will be provided by Lucky Parker, the singing waiter, and Jim Whiteed, a one-man band, both appearing through the compliments of Broken Spoke Restaurant; and Spanish dancing performed by St. Ann's Girl Scout Troop 149.

Just a few of the merchandise booths are arts and crafts, balloons and cascarones, a book stall, costume jewelry, odds and ends, sewing, and souvenirs.

Served in the food booths will be burritos, nachos, cokes and coffee, corn on the cob, cotton candy, ice cream and beer.

Game booths include baseball pitch, basketball pitch, bean bag tooss, bingo, cake wheel, coin pitch, darts, football throw, gold mine, golf, gun shoot, horse race, ring toss, tic tac toe, shrimp boat, dime-a-dish, fish pond, photography and dunking, grab bag and face painting.

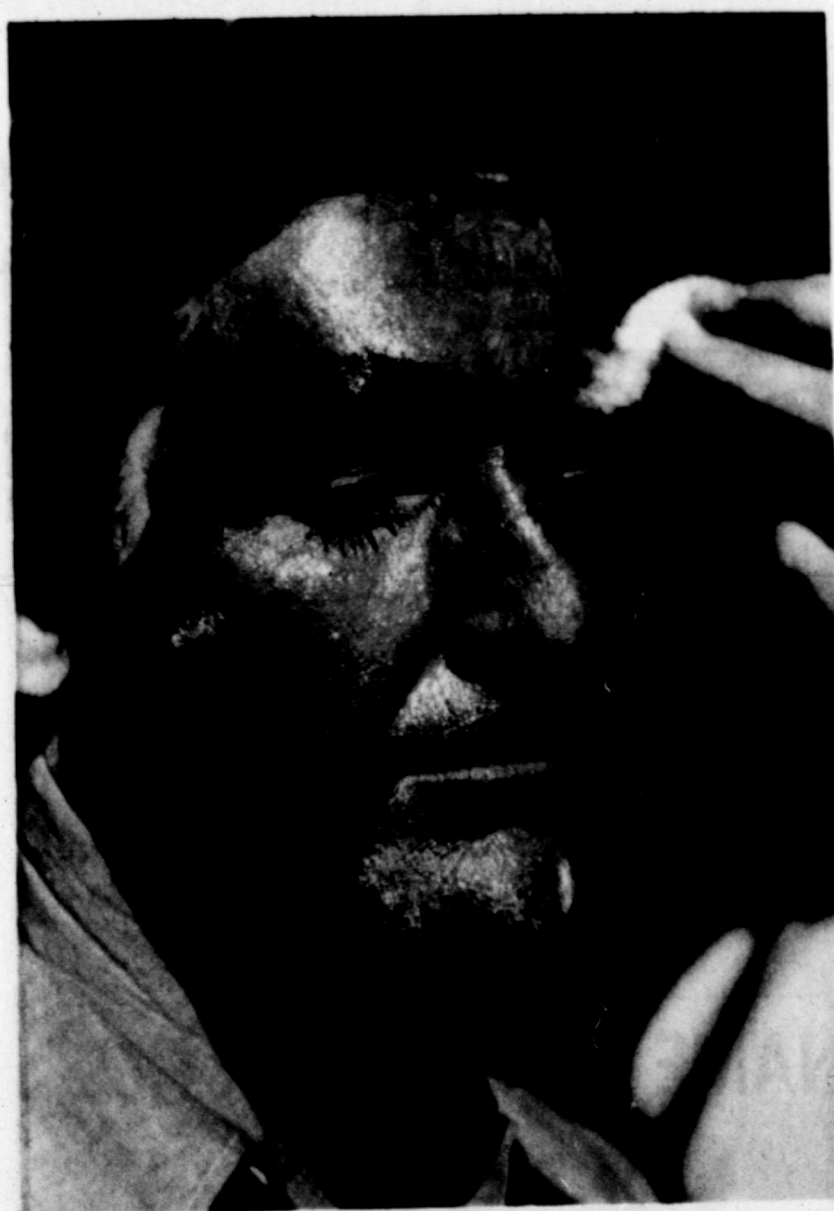

General chairmen of the fair are Enrique and Olivia Farias. Co-chairmen are Ken and Elaine Kurc.

Designers' styles featured at PDAP's fall fashion show

By SANDI BREEDEN
Lifestyle Writer

Rain didn't dampen the spirits at Midland Country Club Thursday when Grace Jones of Salado presented the Palmer Drug Abuse Program's second annual style show.

Some 300 women attended the show, with the benefits going to PDAP.

Fashion colors were mostly muted, although some bright reds and purple sneaked in the styles which seemed to be designed more for the 30-plus aged woman.

Drab olive green, better known as army-green, was a popular color in the styles, and gold, white, black, grey, purple and red were not ignored either.

Geoffrey Beene's designs seemed to be Ms. Jones' favorite and other designers featured were Galanos, Triggere, Mary McFadden, Bill Blass, Nancy Pallock, Vera Maxwell and Hanae Mori.

Also featured were Puncaldi, Pringle of Scotland, China Machado, Shamask, Morty Myles, St. John Knits, Adolfo, Mollie Purnis, Gunter, Jean Louis, Michael Vollbrach, Oscar de la Renta, Koos Van den Akker, Sandor Wittlin, Flandoca and Joan Vass.

The beginning of the show caught the audience by surprise with the models, including famed Elsa Rosborough of Houston, in a prance-like run in matching Mohair sweaters, leotards and ballet shoes in various shades of red, green, purple and black. The models showed their signs featuring caricatures of Carter and Reagan by Peggy Redmon of Midland with strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again" playing in the background.

"All of you are aware this is the year of election," began Ms. Jones, "so we're going to have a show chocked full of selection."

Casual wear was shown with one outfit featuring a bright blue pair of gabardine pants and a blue and yellow sweatshirt.

A pair of denim pants lined in cotton plaid with a cuff was also popular with the audience of women. A fur lined denim jacket and cotton plaid blouse completed the outfit.

Pleated skirts seemed to have found their way back into the fashion world in knee-length skirts as well as the long skirts. One of the more popular skirts was pleated black culottes highlighted with a light gray silk blouse and jacket.

Capes are also popular again, and the audience seemed partial to a gray pants outfit completed with a gray blouse and gray cape.

Another eyepleaser was a moonstone color dress of sheer wool with long sleeves.

Tiers of ruffles in purple highlighted a dress to remind women the feminine look is the look.

And of course, the western look was presented in a silk, which looks like suede, brown top and pants with black and white fringe completing the outfit.

Perhaps the most popular outfit was a pink, green and black sequined long dress. Long, narrow sleeves, V-neck and front slit completed the suave look.

After the style show, Ms. Jones said there was no one certain color for the fall. "There's never one color in fashion," she said.

Ms. Jones, who owns and operates her Salado shop which features only well-known designer styles, said she stayed in the small town, which is between Waco and Austin, for several reasons. "It is not possible to have a true specialty store in a large city," said the woman who piloted fighter planes between bases in the United States during World War II. You must be able to give special attention to customers and stock and the store must be small and well controlled in order to this.

"We truly give the attention needed to dress our customer," said Ms. Jones, who rarely presents shows, with this being one of two this season. "We coordinate wardrobes — it takes a lot of time because we do not duplicate."

Bob Savage, Permian Basin regional director of PDAP, before the show thanked the audience for their response and presented some statistics on Midland's PDAP.

According to Savage, the organization is four times the size this year it was at the time of last year's style show. "This time last year we had 27 young people involved and it had grown beyond our greatest expectations. Well, look at us now," he added.

Savage said the program has 100 young people involved now and has had 1,000 contacts with young people during the last year. "Our objective is to work with young people who want help," he said about the program. "I can't make anybody straight, they must want help."

Helpful nail care ideas

Copley News Service

Very few women have nails that grow well without special attention. Yet nail care can be very time-consuming and costly.

If your nails aren't as strong or as long as you'd like them to be, there are several things you can do to help them without investing in professional manicures and without going through a lot of fuss.

For instance, do you file your nails into a rounded shape? This weakens them tremendously. Instead, leave corners on nails as they grow out and shape only a slight curve at the tip. These straight-edged sides will add strength to the whole nail.

In addition, you may be filing with a heavy hand or sawing the file back and forth. Form the habit of filing in one direction which helps prevent separation of the nail layers.

Coating nails with many layers of polish also helps strengthen them, but a big problem with polish is that it chips easily and then has to be redone. To avoid this problem, try Andree Acrylic Shield Nail Color. It's so strong that it's guaranteed to stay chip-free for three days at a time, no matter what you're doing.

Furthermore, you may want to try "Tip Dip" a product from one of New York's top manicurists, Annette Gordon. A protein lacquer, it secures nail tips against polish chipping and helps prevent nail breakage. You merely dip the tip of your nail in the solution (or brush it on a short nail), let it dry and then touch each nail with your thumb, which leaves an imprint. It's this "tire mark" that grips the polish. The first product of it's kind, it holds a manicure for two weeks! To order, send $5.75 to Annette Gordon Ltd., 770 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10021.

Nail hardeners can also help strengthen because they contain fibers which act like an additional nail layer. However, they also contain formaldehyde which some women are allergic to. If your nails start peeling when you apply hardeners, discontinue use immediately.

Hardeners aren't the only culprits in prompting allergies. Of all the cosmetics women use, nail polish causes the most reactions. If you're sensitive to polish, then you can even get rashes where your nails touch your face or eyes! (Frosted polish, by the way, causes more allergies than nonpearlized.)

So if you can't or don't want to use polish, you may like this idea — coat your nails with clear iodine. It helps strengthen them, it doesn't show and it certainly doesn't chip.

If your nails themselves are cracking, peeling or chipping, you may be lacking in vitamins A or D, or you may not be getting enough protein. Nails are made of keratin, like skin and hair, which is a type of protein. Many women think that gelatin or calcium tablets will help nail problems. Unfortunately, they're mistaken. Neither one has any beneficial effect on nails.

Finally, use gloves when your hands are submerged in detergent water. It's vital to keeping nails strong and you can use this opportunity to give your hands and nails a quick beauty treatment. Rub a little olive or baby oil into hands and cuticles before putting on the gloves. When you take them off, your hands will be soft and your nails intact.

Hospital Auxiliary plans purchases

Nada Baulch, projects chairman of the Ladies Auxiliary of Midland Memorial Hospital, presented new projects to be purchased from that group's general fund during their monthly meeting in the hospital cafeteria.

Approved purchases include a $7,200 van for the Blood Bank and a computerized Plethysmograph which would be used by the cardiopulmonary department for $33,000.

From the memorial fund, members agreed to purchase a Dinamap Machine for $2,395. This machine records a continuous blood pressure reading and would be used in the Critical Care Ward.

Mrs. Jerry Cappadonna, reported the auxiliary has 177 members, 170 which are contributing members and six honorary members. Peggy Parr, coordinator of volunteers, announced 126 members worked 1,375 hours in August and that 15 new members had been oriented.

New members are Pat Humes, Betty Spry, Judy Bresnahan, Kaylene Burgard, Pat Semple, Reva Kilgore, Sylvia Brown, Sue Ellison, Cindi Furrow, Grace Jordan, Jessie Loach, Ruth Newton, Modele McCright, Jan Cole and Helena Gatton.

Candystriper chairman Charlene Culpepper announced Vickie Wedner had the most hours for the summer. Ms. Culpepper also announced four candystripers are working during the school year.

It was also announced the auxiliary had two blood drives during September for a total of 12 hours.

Rate of Caesarean childbirth increased during last decade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rate of Caesarean childbirth has increased threefold in the last decade and doctors should consider nonsurgical alternatives during troubled labor if the fetus is in no immediate danger, experts say.

A panel convened by the National Institutes of Health said Wednesday that in the absence of fetal distress, such as indications the unborn child may not be getting enough oxygen, "there is room for clinical decision-making."

Options in troubled labor with a normal-sized fetus may include resting the mother, sedating her or attempting to induce the birth artificially prior to considering a Caesarean, the committee said.

However, these options may not be open when dealing with premature infants or those abnormally positioned in the womb, it added.

THE PANEL ALSO said that if a woman has one Caesarean childbirth, it may be unnecessary for her subsequent children to be delivered surgically, as is common.

But the panel recommended that normal deliveries in these cases should be attempted only in hospitals prepared to perform emergency Caesarean surgery in the event of complications.

Doctors are reluctant to let women who have had Caesareans go through normal labor and delivery for fear that the strain could rupture the old incision. But the panel said most surgical deliveries in this country are done in a way that may permit normal labor and delivery later.

Dr. Mortimer G. Rosen of Case Western Reserve University, who headed a task force which studied Caesareans, said 90 percent of the operations now are done with a horizontal, lower abdomen incision.

This procedure, called a low segment transverse incision or "bikini cut," appears less likely to rupture under the strain of labor. Rosen said this incision generally has replaced vertical and T-shaped cuts commonly used before the 1950's.

FOLLOWING A CAESAREAN delivery, over 98 percent of women in the United States undergo a repeat Caesarean for any subsequent pregnancy," the panel said in a statement.

"Data from national and international sources suggest that labor and vaginal delivery after a previous low segment Caesarean birth is of low risk to mother and fetus in properly selected cases," it continued.

The panel, composed of doctors, lawyers, consumers and others, was charged with determining the reasons the number of Caesareans has been rising and to make recommendations to the medical profession.

"During the 1970's, the Caesarean birth rate in the United States increased about threefold, from 5.5 percent in 1970 to 15.2 percent in 1978, and appears to be continuing to increase," the panel said.

The group said Caesareans are increasing because of increased demands by society to reduce the infant mortality rate, as well as medical advances that greatly reduced the risks of the operation.

EASIER AND MORE frequent diagnosis of abnormal labor, often with the help of electronic fetal monitoring, also contribute to the trend, it said.

The practice of repeat

Caesareans for later births also drives up the numbers, the panel said, accounting for 30 percent of total surgical deliveries.

The group said deaths of mothers after normal childbirth had dropped to 9.9 per 100,000 by 1978 and maternal mortality following Caesareans also had dropped drastically.

However, the risk of death after Caesarean delivery, although very low, still is about four times greater than that with vaginal delivery, it said.

The panel said it found no reliable data to prove, so far, that the rate may be going up because of doctors practicing defensive medicine against malpractice suits or because they made more money doing the surgery. Critics have suggested these might be factors.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Vinegar the crease away

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a question about the use of vinegar to get out the crease when a garment is lengthened. Your instructions are: "Dampen the crease line with white vinegar and press with a moderately hot iron, using a press cloth."

Question: Do you wash or clean the garment before or after using the vinegar and is the vinegar applied to the right or wrong side of the garment?

Thanks for all your help. — T.R.B.

To answer the first part of your question the garment should definitely be cleaned before applying the vinegar.

Heat, many times, will set a stain should there be one on the garment and if the hemline crease is soiled, you will have a line around the edge of the garment that will show after letting the hem down.

Too, ironing the soil in will only make it more difficult to remove later.

As to whether the vinegar should be applied to the right or wrong side of the garment it makes no difference at all.

The vinegar may circle some fabrics, but in that the side used is immaterial. You may want to test a hidden spot for this on your garment first.

There is no need to wash the garment afterward, unless the vinegar has circled, as the odor disappears in a short time.

Also, on some hemlines, even though the crease line will be gone, a line will still be visible due to fading or wear.

Should this be the case, devise some way to cover it up such as stitching, lace, rickrack, or a colored marker to match, etc.

By doing so, you'll get a few more miles out of the garment (and stretch the old budget a bit more, too). — Love, Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

We have recently purchased an old, historical home. The windows had been neglected for years and the film on the old glass was tremendous. No amount of various and sundry cleaners would remove it.

I had about decided replacement of the glass was the only remedy when I happened to think of oven cleaner.

I sprayed the windows with it, wiped them off and off came the old filmy, gray spotted areas on the glass. (CAUTION: Spray only on the glass and follow instructions for good ventilation.)

DEAR HELOISE:

I have to drive the car a lot: to work, chauffeuring the children, etc. To avoid making a lot of unnecessary trips, thereby saving gas, I clip a number of clothespins to the sun visor to use to remind me of various things.

I'll clip one on the gear shift to remember to buy gas; one to a long sleeve to "bother me" so I will remember to stop for bread. I clip notes to the pins — anything to help me to remember.

I also clip one on the keys when I turn on the car's lights, so I'll remember to turn them off when I stop.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Charles and I met on a blind date, and we hit it off beautifully. I'm 36, divorced and not hard up for dates. Charles is 40, a lawyer with a terrific personality. He claimed he was a great cook, and invited me to his apartment for a gourmet dinner.

When I arrived at his tastefully furnished bachelor high-rise, he greeted me warmly and handed me a cocktail. Then his phone rang. I'm sure it was a woman. He went into another room to talk privately and, Abby, he left me alone for 30 minutes! When he returned he didn't even apologize! I did my best to hide my anger.

We resumed our conversation—then his buzzer rang. (Someone was calling from the lobby.) He said, "No, don't come up. I'll be right down." Then he said to me, "Excuse me, I'll only be a minute." After sitting alone for another 30 minutes, I decided I had had enough, so I left. When I reached the lobby, I saw my "host" engrossed in a very animated conversation with a young woman. I simply said, "Goodbye, Charles, I am leaving." He grabbed my arm and held me while he told the other women to "go home, and please don't do anything foolish."

Then he asked me to please come upstairs with him so he could explain everything. I told him there was nothing to explain, his rudeness was inexcusable, and I never wanted to see him again. (His response was unprintable.) Abby, was I justified for leaving as I did? And how would you have handled it?—MANHATTAN

DEAR MANHATTAN: You hung around longer than I would have. I'd have left when my host became a "ghost" for 30 minutes and then offered no apology.

DEAR ABBY: How long should a woman stay with a man who says he is not ready for marriage?

I'm 34, single, successful and sophisticated. Dave (not his real name) is 32, sweet and shy. We've dated steadily for seven months, and I would like to get married.

Dave is looking for "fireworks"—which our relationship lacks, but they may come later. If they don't if wouldn't bother me because I think what we have is better and more lasting than fireworks.

We really do care for each other, but I'm terrified of wasting time. —What do you think? Should I set a time limit?—BIOLOGY IS DESTINY

DEAR BIOLOGY: If it's fireworks he wants, give it until the 4th of July.

DEAR ABBY: Five months ago my wife began studying karate at a women's martial arts center and, shortly thereafter she bought some weights to lift at home.

At first I found it rather amusing, and when she would practice her karate on me, I could still easily pin her shoulder to the floor. Lately, however, her karate kicks and punches have begun to really hurt, and last week she finally was able to beat me up!

At first I thought it was just luck, but since then, she's succeeded in pinning me down five times in a row, each time with more ease and a lot more bruises for me.

Our sex life remains exciting, but do you think a marriage can last if the wife is physically stronger than her husband and can beat him up?—BRUISED HUSBAND

DEAR BRUISED:

Why not? It would be a sad state of (marital) affairs if the durability of a marriage depended on the physical strength of either party. Make love, not war!

Thank you, Midland, for making our Grand Opening a success. We hope to continue supplying you with ceiling fans and accessories.

Cookbook section, food contest set

It's time to dig up that favorite recipe for The Midland Reporter-Telegram's annual recipe contest and cookbook section, "Recipes '80."

This year's edition will be published as a tabloid supplement to the newspaper Sunday, Nov. 16. It will feature scores of recipes submitted by readers.

Valuable prizes and cash awards for winning entries will be given in each of eight categories. Watch the newspaper for details to be announced.

The categories of recipes will be: (1) Salads; (2) Meats, Fish and Fowl; (3) Casseroles, Vegetables and Side Dishes; (4) Breads; (5) Cakes; (6) Pies; (7) Candy and other Desserts, and; (8) Miscellaneous.

Winners will be announced in "Recipes '80" on Nov. 16. Deadline for entries will be Oct. 16.

All entries will be judged by a panel of professional home economists not connected with the newspaper. The judges will select the best recipe in each category.

Readers are asked to submit only one entry. Entries should be typewritten and all measurements and instructions clearly stated. Any recipes that are unclear will be disqualified.

Each entry should be clearly labeled at the top with the entrant's name, address, telephone number, the name of the recipe and category entered.

Send entries to "Recipes '80," The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P. O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702.

Due to space limitations, recipes will be accepted for the special edition on a first-come, first-serve basis. Therefore, duplicate recipes will not be accepted, so send your recipe in NOW.

The contest is open to everyone in The Reporter-Telegram's retail trading zone except employees and agents of The Reporter-Telegram and their families.

Rate of Caesarean childbirth increased during last decade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rate of Caesarean childbirth has increased threefold in the last decade and doctors should consider nonsurgical alternatives during troubled labor if the fetus is in no immediate danger, experts say.

A panel convened by the National Institutes of Health said Wednesday that in the absence of fetal distress, such as indications the unborn child may not be getting enough oxygen, "there is room for clinical decision-making."

Options in troubled labor with a normal-sized fetus may include resting the mother, sedating her or attempting to induce the birth artificially prior to considering a Caesarean, the committee said.

However, these options may not be open when dealing with premature infants or those abnormally positioned in the womb, it added.

THE PANEL ALSO said that if a woman has one Caesarean childbirth, it may be unnecessary for her subsequent children to be delivered surgically, as is common.

But the panel recommended that normal deliveries in these cases should be attempted only in hospitals prepared to perform emergency Caesarean surgery in the event of complications.

Doctors are reluctant to let women who have had Caesareans go through normal labor and delivery for fear that the strain could rupture the old incision. But the panel said most surgical deliveries in this country are done in a way that may permit normal labor and delivery later.

Dr. Mortimer G. Rosen of Case Western Reserve University, who headed a task force which studied Caesareans, said 90 percent of the operations now are done with a horizontal, lower abdomen incision.

This procedure, called a low segment transverse incision or "bikini cut," appears less likely to rupture under the strain of labor. Rosen said this incision generally has replaced vertical and T-shaped cuts commonly used before the 1950's.

FOLLOWING A CAESAREAN delivery, over 98 percent of women in the United States undergo a repeat Caesarean for any subsequent pregnancy," the panel said in a statement.

"Data from national and international sources suggest that labor and vaginal delivery after a previous low segment Caesarean birth is of low risk to mother and fetus in properly selected cases," it continued.

The panel, composed of doctors, lawyers, consumers and others, was charged with determining the reasons the number of Caesareans has been rising and to make recommendations to the medical profession.

"During the 1970's, the Caesarean birth rate in the United States increased about threefold, from 5.5 percent in 1970 to 15.2 percent in 1978, and appears to be continuing to increase," the panel said.

The group said Caesareans are increasing because of increased demands by society to reduce the infant mortality rate, as well as medical advances that greatly reduced the risks of the operation.

EASIER AND MORE frequent diagnosis of abnormal labor, often with the help of electronic fetal monitoring, also contribute to the trend, it said.

The practice of repeat

Caesarians for later births also drives up the numbers, the panel said, accounting for 30 percent of total surgical deliveries.

The group said deaths of mothers after normal childbirth had dropped to 9.9 per 100,000 by 1978 and maternal mortality following Caesareans also had dropped drastically.

However, the risk of death after Caesarean delivery, although very low, still is about four times greater than that with vaginal delivery, it said.

The panel said it found no reliable data to prove, so far, that the rate may be going up because of doctors practicing defensive medicine against malpractice suits or because they made more money doing the surgery. Critics have suggested these might be factors.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Vinegar the crease away

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a question about the use of vinegar to get out the crease when a garment is lengthened.

Your instructions are: "Dampen the crease line with white vinegar and press with a moderately hot iron, using a press cloth."

Question: Do you wash or clean the garment before or after using the vinegar and is the vinegar applied to the right or wrong side of the garment?

Thanks for all your help. — T.R.B.

To answer the first part of your question the garment should definitely be cleaned before applying the vinegar.

Heat, many times, will set a stain should there be one on the garment and if the hemline crease is solid, you will have a line around the edge of the garment that will show after letting the hem down.

Too, ironing the soil in will only make it more difficult to remove later. As to whether the vinegar should be applied to the right or wrong side of the garment it makes no difference at all.

The vinegar may circle some fabrics, but in that the side used is immaterial. You may want to test a hidden spot for this on your garment first.

There is no need to wash the garment afterward, unless the vinegar has circled, as the odor disappears in a short time.

Also, on some hemlines, even though the crease line will be gone, a line will still be visible due to fading or wear.

Should this be the case, devise some way to cover it up such as stitching, lace, rickrack, or a colored marker to match, etc.

By doing so, you'll get a few more miles out of the garment (and stretch the old budget a bit more, too).

— Love, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

We have recently purchased an old, historical home. The windows had been neglected for years and the film on the old glass was tremendous. No amount of various and sundry cleaners would remove it.

I had about decided replacement of the glass was the only remedy when I happened to think of oven cleaner.

I sprayed the windows with it, wiped them off and off came the old filmy, gray spotted areas on the glass. (CAUTION: Spray only on the glass and follow instructions for good ventilation.)

DEAR HELOISE:

I have to drive the car a lot: to work, chauffeuring the children, etc. To avoid making a lot of unnecessary trips, thereby saving gas, I clip a number of clothespins to the sun visor to use to remind me of various things.

I'll clip one on the gear shift to remember to buy gas; one to a long sleeve to "bother me" so I will remember to stop for bread. I clip notes to the pins — anything to help me to remember.

I also clip one on the keys when I turn on the car's lights, so I'll remember to turn them off when I stop.

Just doing my bit to save energy. — Doris Small-

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Charles and I met on a blind date, and we hit it off beautifully. I'm 36, divorced and not hard up for dates. Charles is 40, a lawyer with a terrific personality. He claimed he was a great cook, and invited me to his apartment for a gourmet dinner.

When I arrived at his tastefully furnished bachelor high-rise, he greeted me warmly and handed me a cocktail. Then his phone rang. I'm sure it was a woman. He went into another room to talk privately and, Abby, he left me alone for 30 minutes! When he returned he didn't even apologize! I did my best to hide my anger.

We resumed our conversation—then his buzzer rang. (Someone was calling from the lobby.) He said, "No, don't come up. I'll be right down." Then he said to me, "Excuse me, I'll only be a minute." After sitting alone for another 30 minutes, I decided I had had enough, so I left. When I reached the lobby, I saw my "host" engrossed in a very animated conversation with a young woman. Catholic synod likely to affirm church tradition

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II's first synod of Roman Catholic bishops opens today with expectations that it will break no new ground and will reaffirm the church's traditional opposition to birth control, abortion, divorce and extra-marital sexual relations.

"Don't expect any changes in doctrinal matters, because these things simply cannot be changed," said Archbishop Jozef Tomko, secretary-general of the Sixth World Synod of Bishops.

"Our objective is to help Catholic families who must live in an ambience which pays little heed to their Catholic principles. The family in such circumstances needs help if it is to defend its religious values and live by them in the face of pressures from without and confusions within," Tomko said.

In addition to dealing with the basic tenets of the church, and drafting guidelines for dealing with Catholics who ignore them, the bishops will, for the first time since the 1962-65 Vatican Council II, try to find common views on a wide range of other issues facing the world's 760 million Roman Catholics, including the changing role of women, sex education, consumerism and drug addiction.

Birth control appears to be the most controversial issue facing the 216 invited bishops meeting in the historic Sistine Chapel. In a series of speeches setting the tone for the synod, Pope John Paul emphasized his unyielding opposition to contraception, abortion and divorce.

The pontiff reaffirmed the church's rejection of all birth control devices and chemical contraceptives such as the pill. He said artificial contraception violates human and Christian ethics and is unworthy of civilization.

Vatican officials acknowledged that the pontiff's strong stand against birth control has been questioned by several bishops, and is ignored by large numbers of Catholics, including an estimated 80 percent of the Catholic couples in the United States.

The pontiff has lined up marriage and family-planning experts to address the synod on the so-called "sinless" or rhythm method of birth control endorsed by the church. Among them will be Drs. John and Evelyn Billings, an Australian couple who developed an improved rhythm method sanctioned by the Vatican. The basic rhythm method calls for sexual abstinence during the most likely time of ovulation.

John Paul also has invited 16 couples, most of them active in promoting "Christian ways of life," to address the synod. They will try to show, based on their experiences, that there are means to rescue a troubled marriage without resorting to divorce.

After their deliberations, the bishops will vote on individual issues and then on a final document before it is submitted to Pope John Paul. Their report, however, is not binding and the pope may reject or rewrite any part or all of it.

'Red terror' vs. 'White terror' ended

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The bodies are no longer piled up in the gutters. Gunfire has virtually stopped and groups of heavily armed men have vanished from street corners in the capital of this East African nation.

"Red terror" vs. "White terror" that began after the downfall of Emperor Haile Selassie in 1974 appears to be over.

The government of Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, once challenged by a variety of leftist and rightist groups, is firmly in power, according to diplomats here, and has outwardly relaxed its campaign against dissidents.

"The hysteria of the 'Red terror-White terror' days has certainly decreased," commented one diplomat. "I don't think people as a mass are generally afraid now of what is going to happen to them the minute they stray out of doors."

"The situation is calm. The purges and mass arrests continue against covert parties, but it is more discreet and aimed primarily against individuals."

In 1977, just three years after Marxist military officers toppled the emperor's regime, organized opponents of the government set off a series of assassinations and street battles in Addis Ababa. The government, branding them counter-revolutionaries and their campaign the "White terror," answered violence with violence.

Bands of soldiers, policemen and neighborhood defense committeemen roamed the streets, gunning down suspects, attacking political party offices, rounding up university students and, sometimes, killing innocent people in the process. The number of deaths was believed to be in the thousands.

Today, armed soldiers are seen only around the presidential palace, government buildings and military installations. Markets are again crowded with shoppers, stores are open for business and hotel ballrooms packed with dancers who receive 50-percent discounts on room rates if they stay beyond the midnight curfew.

Informed sources claim Mengistu, chairman of the governing Provisional Military Administrative Council, also called the Dergue, has effectively smashed opposition in the capital.

Civilian opposition groups have been "co-opted, decapitated and penetrated" — effectively blocking any possible coup attempt from non-military quarters, sources say.

Mengistu appears also to have pre-empted any possible threat within the armed forces. Military officers are routinely transferred to preclude a buildup of support among their troops, promotions and pay raises are frequent and only trusted aides hold positions of high authority.

As added security, the army has been thoroughly penetrated by Soviet, Soviet-bloc and Cuban advisers, whose governments have a high stake in Mengistu's retaining power.

According to informed sources, Mengistu is undisputed leader of the Dergue — which means committee in the Amharic language — and is never opposed on policy positions.

No political factions exist among Dergue members, these sources claim. Plans to establish a civilian Communist Party in Ethiopia pose no visible threat to Mengistu.

"Mengistu is supreme," said a diplomat. "He dictates all policy."

"They (Dergue members) are riding the tiger. In the old days a man could retire from government and return to private life. Today, no one leaves the Dergue — to try to do so would be a death sentence."

When the emperor was overthrown on Sept. 12, 1974, Mengistu was an army major — a U.S.-trained ordnance officer. Selassie was kept under arrest and he died at the age of 83 in 1975.

"There is a striking parallel between Mengistu's style of leadership and that of the emperor," a Western source said.

"The politics of the country have changed, but the way Mengistu runs things is based on the only system of government and governing he ever knew."

"The language of the new regime is different, everyone shakes fists in the air rather than kisses the hands of noblemen, but it is the same old authoritarian system — maybe just more ruthless."

Sources said the government is continuing summary arrests of suspected dissidents in Addis Ababa.

The latest target: prominent or activist members of Ethiopia's Oromo Tribe.

The Oromos, conquered by Emperor Menelik II in the 1890s, live south of Addis Ababa and make up about 50 percent of the national population of almost 30 million. In the southern Oromo region, the people are Moslem and shepherds. In the north, Christian and farmers.

In both areas independence-minded guerrilla groups — the Somali Abo Liberation Front in the south, and the Oromo Liberation Front in the north — have been active militarily against the government, which fears rebellion may spread throughout the region.

In February, sources said, hundreds and possibly thousands of Oromos and other suspected dissidents were rounded up in this capital, including the former Ethiopian minister of justice.

Although firmly in control of Addis Ababa, sources said, Mengistu's government faces serious threats from rebel secessionist groups in Eritrea Province, the Ogaden, Tigre Province and the Oromo national homelands. These areas, conquered by Ethiopia's Amhara rulers, comprise about 70 percent of Ethiopia's territory.

Teen charged with suffocating baby

MIAMI (A.P.) — Rather than risk enraging her father by admitting she was pregnant, a 16-year-old girl gave birth in a back room, suffocated her baby as her mother watched and had her three brothers dump the body in the Atlantic, authorities say.

"They were all afraid of the father," Assistant State Attorney David Waksman said. "The brothers said the father would've gone crazy and killed them all if he found out his daughter had gotten pregnant."

The body was found a few days after the baby girl's death, but it took detectives 19 months to identify it.

Agdely Abella, now 18 and married, and her mother Irene, 40, were charged Wednesday with first-degree murder in the baby's death Feb. 10, 1978.

Neither woman was arrested immediately. Police located one brother in Houston and another on the Florida Gulf Coast.

A phone call from a neighbor who overheard the brothers talking about the baby gave police their key clue, officials say.

"The phone call was a shot in the dark and it worked," said Detective Charles Major. "If not for that, it would have been all over."

Neither Manaces Abella Sr., 61, who came from Cuba 17 years ago, nor his sons had known the 10th grader was pregnant. "Every one just thought she was gaining weight," said Major.

Police and prosecutors gave this account of the incident:

David Abella, 22, heard his sister crying in her bedroom when he returned from work on Feb. 10, 1978, and his mother said the girl was having a baby.

Mrs. Abella later called David and her other sons, Peter, 25, and Manaces Jr., 21, inside, where they saw Agdely smothering a baby in a red blanket.

The brothers went outside and talked of leaving home. Their mother summoned them, and they drove off in the family van with the baby's body, wrapped in a pillowcase and two plastic bags.

One brother tossed the body into the surf at Haulover Beach.

Abella, then a night security guard at Miami International Airport, slept through the incident. When he awoke and found the van's engine hot, he yelled at his wife for letting the boys drive it.

Three men pulled the body out of the ocean some 3 1/2 miles off the beach after they spotted a tiny hand protruding from the flowered pillowcase.

The infant had been born healthy at eight months, the Dade County Medical Examiner's office said.

Before David Abella left home, he told his father about Agdely's baby. Abdella was "so mad I thought he was going to kill me," the youth told Waksman.

"You sell bad dope and they kill you. You mess with someone's girl friend and they kill you. You bump up against someone in a crowded bar and they kill you," Waksman said. "But you show me what this little baby did to get killed."

Tiny North Texas town completely out of water

PETROLIA, Texas (AP) — The 600 citizens of this tiny North Texas town have run out of water because of a balky pipeline and a parched lake, a city spokeswoman said.

Citizens have turned to the Texas National Guard for two 400-gallon tank trucks to bring drinking water from wells in an irrigation field here, city secretary Pat Haney said Thursday.

The small Clay County town has been rationing water since March 4, she said, but a cutback in average daily consumption from 120,000 gallons to 85,000 gallons has not helped.

The hot, dry Texas summer dried up on Aug. 27 the lake that supplied Pretolia's water, Mrs. Haney said.

The city then installed 7,200 feet of pipe from its existing well field to a three-well irrigation field where more water could be purchased.

The long-awaited line was completed Monday, Mrs. Haney said, but when it was turned on the pressure broke the line.

"We repaired it and tried it again Tuesday and it broke, so we repaired it and tried again Wednesday and it broke," she said.

Crews were working on the pipeline again Thursday, she said, and planned to turn the water on Friday morning.

Pretolia had been squeaking by on what could be pumped from four water wells, but problems developed with the wells.

"The wells we've been using are failing and were unable to keep an ample amount of water in the water tower," Mrs. Haney said. "We've just overworked the wells. We have to let them rest so water can rise, but we've been trying to pump them continuously."

"For a while we were able to pump the tower full during the night when people were asleep and during the day when they were at work," she said.

The tower couldn't be filled even during those quiet hours in the past week, she said.

"There's just no water pressure at all," she said. "A trickle now and then so you can flush the commode and that's about it. Last night, my family all piled in the car and went to my sister's in Byers, Texas so we could all take a bath. And it's not just us. Others are going to Henrietta and Wichita Falls."

Solar, gasohol development urged

'Petroleum age coming to an end,' Brown says

AUSTIN (AP) — An energy advisory council has recommended proposals to develop solar energy — at a cost of billions a year — and to stimulate production of gasohol.

"Whether we like it or not, the petroleum age is coming to an end in Texas," said Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, a member of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council.

The council Thursday also recommended setting up a low-level nuclear waste dump on state-owned land.

A subcommittee report adopted by the council recommended that only nuclear waste generated within Texas be stored at the site. No specific site was mentioned.

Attorney General Mark White, a council member, warned that restricting waste disposal might not work.

"I don't think you can rely, going into this venture, on not getting other states' waste," said White. "Sometimes if you flaunt it — saying you won't accept another state's waste, they will try you on, and you often come out second in those fights."

The report left the option of accepting nuclear waste from other states if a multi-state disposal agreement is negotiated and approved by the Legislature.

"Solar energy is one of this nation's good energy bets, and sun-rich Texas can help lead the way in its development and use." — Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace

"Since it will require three to four years to get a site operational, it is necessary to have legislation on this issue during the (1981) Legislature," according to a staff summary. "The high-level waste issue is a much longer range proposition, and we have time to act later if needed. Another subcommittee is now working on high-level waste."

The advisory council, which also includes Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, adopted a recommendation by Brown's subcommittee to exempt gasohol from the five-cent per gallon motor fuel tax until 1987. At that time, one cent per gallon would be added to the price of gasohol each year until the tax on gasoline and gasohol — which is 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol — was the same.

Brown's subcommittee recommended state loans to build fuel alcohol plants and a requirement that state agencies spend at least 10 percent of their fuel budgets on gasohol and/or alcohol fuels as they become available at competitive prices.

Dr. Jack Howell of The University of Texas at Austin said solar resources could provide up to 15 percent of Texas' energy needs in the year 2000. "I'm not saying it will but it could ... with the proper incentives," said Howell.

This would be the equivalent of 400 million barrels of oil or two trillion cubic feet of natural gas a year.

To develop solar energy to this extent, however, would cost "billions of dollars per year toward the late 1990s," the report said.

The Solar Advisory Committee recommended the recognition of "solar easements" — rights to access to sunlight, a requirement that all new state structures built after Aug. 31, 1981, use solar energy except where it would not be in the public interest and creation of the Texas Wind Center. The advisory committee also recommended establishing a non-profit corporation to provide low-interest solar loans, exempting solar companies from the franchise tax and a single statewide license for contractors installing solar energy systems.

"Solar energy is one of this nation's good energy bets, and sun-rich Texas can help lead the way in its development and use," said Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace, chairman of the solar committee.

"I am convinced that solar must be developed throughout Texas and the United States as an integral part of the total energy mix," he said.

Wallace reported briefly on a telephone call from Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, in which the congressman reportedly said "the so-called oil glut would be totally consumed within three months" as a result of the Iran-Iraq war unless Saudi Arabia and Kuwait increase production.

Wallace said Wilson, who had sat in on a CIA briefing, told him and Hobby that Iraq "could control all the Iranian oil fields within days if that is its objective."

Wallace said the outlook as a result of the war is for a shortage of home heating oil in the Northeast and "price increases across the board" in petroleum products.

Silo fumes made town sick

GUY, Ark. (AP) — A fog that looked like a "light snow" blew into this tiny community shortly after a Titan II missile silo exploded five miles away last week, and officials say about two dozen residents, including the mayor, have been sick ever since.

The residents are complaining of nausea, burning sensations in their noses, throats and lungs, and dry, salty lips, although none apparently has become ill enough to be hospitalized.

Benny Mercer, mayor of the community of 200, puts the blame squarely on the toxic fumes that seeped from the silo.

Lt. Gen. Lloyd R. Leavitt, vice commander of the Strategic Air Command, said Wednesday that Air Force calculations indicated toxic fumes had not reached Guy and in fact had not gone more than one mile from the silo.

But Mercer said Thursday that the fog, which arrived about an hour after the explosion, melted within 15 minutes and the Air Force did not take measurements soon enough to detect it.

The silo blew up last Friday after a wrench socket dropped by a workman ruptured a missile fuel tank. One person was killed and 21 were injured. The warhead from the missile was ejected from the silo and was later taken to a weapons plant in Amarillo, Texas, to be analyzed or disassembled.

Mercer said he was awake early Friday because he had been alerted to the explosion by a firefighter and was conferring with other community leaders on whether to order an evacuation.

Before the town was evacuated, Mercer said, the fumes started to roll in.

"A little after 4 a.m., it started moving in here like fog," he recalled. "We could see ash falling, little particles. In the mercury lights, it really showed up, like a light snow. You could step out in it, breathe it, and it would just burn your nose plumb to your lungs."

Mercer said he and his wife, Daisy, 36, and two of his children stepped out into the fog and came down with symptoms that afternoon. Two other children did not get in the fog and aren't sick, he said.

"I'm still nauseated," he said. "The lung congestion seems a little better, but it comes and goes. At times I can breathe fairly well, at times not so well."

Richard A. Hinkle, an area physician, said eight or nine people from Guy had come to him with the symptoms.

"The wind apparently carried it in a narrow strip from the missile site up to and through a strip of Guy," Hinkle said. "As far as I can recall — I know where most of them live — I believe it could be plotted out as a pattern with the wind flow."

"Don't get me wrong," he said. "The people I saw were not all that sick. Of course, I haven't seen most of them since they first came to me. I'm presuming they're getting better. And I don't know what effects it might have later on."

Mercer said that about two dozen people had the symptoms and "more are turning up all the time."

Col. Thomas J. Hughes, a doctor at Little Rock Air Force Base, examined Mercer, Guy Fire Chief Bill Poole, and Guy fireman Richard Kincaid on Wednesday, Mercer said.

Hughes could not be reached for comment, but Sgt. Larry Vales said that only Mercer and Poole were examined.

They showed "no specific toxic reactions," Vales said, but "had signs and symptoms of being exposed to combustible materials." He said such exposure "could have been anywhere, by any fire."

Woman's meteoric rise merited, says chairman

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — William Agee, chairman of Bendix Corp., has denied that his friendship with a young female executive had anything to do with her meteoric rise in the company.

Agee told 600 Bendix headquarters employees that Mary Cunningham's rapid promotion to vice president for strategic planning was due to her ability and not to her friendship with him.

The company said Thursday that Agee, 41, who is married, and Ms. Cunningham, 29, who is single, today would make a joint "major announcement" and separate announcements about their relationship.

Ms. Cunningham, who was promoted by Agee on Wednesday to vice president for strategic planning, joined Bendix last year as Agee's executive assistant. From there, she went to vice president for corporate and public affairs.

"I know there have been a lot of questions. For once and for all, I want to slow down the rumor mill," Agee said at the Wednesday meeting. "Her rapid promotions are totally justified."

"It is true that we are very close friends, and she's a very close friend of my family. But that has nothing to do with the way that I and others in this company evaluate performance."

Ms. Cunningham, who graduated from Harvard Business School and previously worked for Chase Manhattan Bank, said Wednesday that gossip about her and Agee was sexist.

"Unfortunately, we're culturally bound by norms that preclude in many minds the existence of someone like myself," she said.

Agee also told the workers that, contrary to rumors, he would not leave Bendix to work for Ronald Reagan if Reagan is elected president.

Bendix is the nation's largest independent automotive supply company.

Abducted officer found unharmed

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A city policeman was found unharmed early today after a seven-hour abduction by two men wanted for questioning in Illinois and considered armed and dangerous, officials said.

Patrolman Sidney J. Yardley, 24, telephoned police from an east Lincoln home shortly after 1 a.m. when his captors fled. He had been missing since 6 p.m. Thursday and held in the house of Kenneth and Sandy Classen since 7 p.m., said Lt. John Packett.

The Classens had returned home to find Yardley and his abductors in their house. Classen and Yardley had been handcuffed together, and Mrs. Classen was bound with chains, said Lt. Don Wilkins. The Classen's 3-year-old daughter, Lindsey, was not tied up. None was injured, Wilkins said.

State and city police, county officials and FBI agents had mounted a search for Yardley on roadways and by helicopter.

The suspects, who were still at large, were armed and dangerous, police said.

Both were wanted for questioning in connection with armed robberies at Peoria, Ill., fast-food restaurants, authorities said. One is a former policeman who allegedly shot his way out of the Peoria County Courthouse in May before he was to be sentenced for armed robbery, according to officials.

Yardley disappeared after contacting the police department and asking for a license check on a suspicious car. Residents told police they heard shots, and witnesses reported seeing an officer dragged into a maroon Buick Regal, the car Yardley had radioed about.

Police identified the suspects as Donald Reynolds, 28, and Edward A. Miller, 25, both from Illinois.

On Sept. 13, a fast-food restaurant in Lombard, Ill., was robbed of about $800 in cash, and police are seeking Reynolds and Miller for questioning.

Lesbian soldiers discharged

ATLANTA (AP) — Four female soldiers at Fort McPherson have been granted honorable discharges by officials who allege the women exhibited homosexual "tendencies and acts."

Base spokeswoman Lulu Croft said the dismissals at the southwest Atlanta base this week came as a result of an inquiry by the Army's Criminal Investigating Division. The investigation was checking allegations of homosexual behavior, she said.

"The allegations ... were substantiated in each case by the investigation," Ms. Croft said.

She said charges were pending against two other soldiers, an enlisted woman and a female officer.

No other such discharges from the Fort McPherson base have occurred within recent years, Ms. Croft said.

Each of the four enlisted women received an "honorable discharge" based on her previous performance of duty and military record, she said.

The four were "roughly 22 to 30" years of age and worked in clerical jobs. At least one was in the military police.

The women were dismissed "since homosexual persons are considered unsuitable for military duty and are not permitted to serve in the armed services in any capacity," Ms. Croft said.

The women's names were not released. Ms. Croft said such action "would be inappropriate and it might be an invasion of privacy."

The Army discharged 198 men and 104 women in 1979 for alleged homosexual activity.

Fort McPherson houses the Army's Forces Command, which controls combat troops in the United States, Panama and Puerto Rico. With nearby Fort Gillem, the installation employs 2,000 military and 4,000 civilian personnel.

Cornea transplants most successful

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you help settle a friendly argument? Which organ transplant procedure is considered to be the most successful? — Brian

Dear Brian: Corneal transplants are probably the most successful. About 10,000 such procedures are performed in the United States each year.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My sister has told me of a youngster in her community who was bitten by a dog and given rabies shots in the arm. As someone who remembers all too well the painful series of rabies injections I was subjected to as a child, I would like to know more about the vaccine. Is it a new product, or is it only the method of administration that is new? — Dottie

Dear Dottie: A safer and more effective anti-rabies vaccine recently was approved by the Food and Drug Administration. It is produced from viruses grown in cultures of human cells, and provides immunity after five injections in almost everyone who is bitten by a rabid animal. The vaccine it replaces, which was developed in the 1950s, was produced in duck eggs. The old vaccine was less efficient even though it required 23 injections. Moreover, the new product results in fewer adverse side effects.

The new vaccine also can be used to immunize people at high risk of being bitten by rabid animals, such as veterinarians and animal handlers. Pre-exposure immunization requires only three inoculations. If the person is exposed at some later time, only two more shots are needed. As you note, the new vaccine is administered in the arm, unlike the old vaccine which was administered in the abdomen.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Both by grandmother and mother had cancer of the ovaries. In view of this, would it be advisable for me to have my ovaries removed even though I am having no difficulty? I am 43 years old. — Mrs. A.L.

Dear Mrs. L.: A decision to undergo any form of surgery should be made only after thorough discussion between patient and physician, with a second and even third opinion obtained if the situation warrants. Such discussion is particularly important when the contemplated operation is prophylactic in nature — that is, designed to prevent disease — rather than for treatment of an existing condition.

Having said this, I should add that some physicians do recommend prophylactic oophorectomy (removal of the ovaries) in women with a family history of ovarian cancer. Mr. M. Steven Piver, associate chief of gynecological oncology at Roswell Park Memorial Institute, urges extensive evaluation of patients from families in which two or more women in two or more generations had ovarian cancer. He recommends that women from such families have their ovaries removed routinely after their child-bearing years.

Such a decision, however, should be made on an individual basis, and I suggest you arrange to discuss this matter thoroughly with your gynecologist.

Town of Benton Harbor is rotting

By BRIAN TUCKER
Associated Press Writer

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Benton Harbor is rotting.

The downtown area of the once-prosperous factory town nestled on the shore of Lake Michigan is a crumbling shell of boarded-up windows and empty parking lots. Only three stores are open on Main Street.

Security guards roam corridors in city schools, which are under a federal court order to desegregate.

Unemployment claims nearly 26 percent of the town's workers. Plants stand empty and silent; Whirlpool Corp. is the only major employer left in town.

In less than a year, Benton Harbor has staggered through five "payless paydays," postponing payrolls until state-approved loans came through or willing merchants paid their taxes early.

The town's plight can be traced back through two decades of "white flight" and civic mismanagement.

Benton Harbor's 15,000 population is 80 or 90 percent black, a reflection of what happened when the town, in an unfortunate coincidence, began an urban renewal project just as racial violence ripped through America's cities.

The project took over a large area which had been home to most of the city's black population. The displaced scattered, and Benton Harbor's white residents fled.

Left behind were the blacks who couldn't move away, more and more of them out of work as the factories closed and the national economy suffered. Benton Harbor's woes only worsened through the years because of fiscal mismanagement. That problem, in turn, was heightened by political infighting on the nine-member city commission.

"They (the commissioners) would approve a budget, which was a completely useless document, and then do what they wanted with city funds," said Paul McCauley, the city's fourth manager in the past five years.

McCauley, 45, came to Benton Harbor in March, several months after the city took its first step toward reorganization by hiring a new financial director, Bryce Weeks.

"What I found here was unbelievable," said Weeks, 50, a retired Army finance officer who took the Benton Harbor job after holding a similar post in suburban Denver.

"There was no cash, no investments and a $400,000 overdraft," Weeks said. "You couldn't find this bad a financial example in a college textbook. Nothing was routine, everything was a crisis."

McCauley said his predecessors paid the salaries of an inflated workforce with federal revenue-sharing funds intended for physical improvements. No money was budgeted for capital improvements and nepotism was commonplace in city hiring, he added. Weeks agreed.

"Shortly after I got here, I looked out of my office one day and I saw two feet sticking out from under the copying machine," Weeks said. "It was the (former) city manager, Mel Farmer, changing the toner in the machine. This is the man responsible for running the city."

McCauley and Weeks have made some changes, cutting travel by city commissioners, increasing water rates and traffic ticket fines. They have laid off 110 of the city's 250 employees and hope to reorganize the town's seven departments into three. Voters recently approved a tax increase of six mills.

"I'm impressed with McCauley," said Leon Gideon, 78, president of Barentsen Candy Co. and a past mayor and city commissioner. "If the commissioners leave him alone, he could do a good job."

Gideon blames many of Benton Harbor's problems on Michigan's welfare laws, which dole out checks to new residents shortly after they arrive in the state. Benton Harbor is in extreme southwestern Michigan, near both the Indiana and Illinois borders.

"We got the bottom of the barrel, the people that couldn't make it somewhere else," Gideon said. "But I don't blame them. I'd go somewhere else, too, if I knew I'd get more money."

Another problem is the makeup of the city commission, says Terry Kelly, editor of The Citizen, a weekly newspaper geared to black readers.

"You have a city that's 80 to 90 percent black with 50 percent on welfare and a city commission that's 60 percent white and 100 percent middle class," she said.

Developer John Dickey, who moved from Chicago and bought several downtown buildings here, says he's optimistic about the town's future. He points to a recent order by Gov. William Milliken that all state offices must relocate downtown, and the conversion of an eight-story hotel on Main Street to a federal Job Corps training center.

"I've been to cities and seen the rehabilitation. I know what can happen," Dickey said. "All we need to do is get the people back down here — and they're coming."

African musicians given contracts, visa extensions

HOUSTON (AP) — Fifteen former members of a South African musical troupe stranded in the United States without valid visas have been given extensions, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

Six-month extensions and entertainment contracts from a Houston-based import-export firm were approved Thursday, said Assistant INS Director Bob Strauss.

Income tax repealed in Alaska

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — The state of Alaska, overruled in its first attempt to share oil profits with its residents, is mailing out $185 million in tax refunds authorized by a new law that also repeals the state income tax.

Gov. Jay Hammond signed the bill Wednesday, just hours after the state Legislature met in special session to pass the measure, which replaced a similar law struck down by the state Supreme Court a few weeks ago.

While the first version would have abolished the income tax for residents who had filed returns for three years, the new law eliminates the tax for everyone. It also refunds 1979 and 1980 income tax payments, with the average 1979 refund estimated at $211.

Hammond said he was sorry that court action had delayed refunding some of the billions of dollars in oil money — profits from exploration of the rich oilfields in the Prudhoe Bay — that have been glutting the state treasury.

"After all, the oil wealth belongs to the citizens of the state, not to the government," Hammond said.

State Revenue Commissioner Tom Williams said 90,000 refunds would be in the mail by Friday. An additional 40,000 were being processed.

"We'll work all evening and past midnight to get them out," he said. "It's just going to matter how good your mail carrier is."

Acting on a complaint by an Anchorage couple who arrived in the state in 1978, the state Supreme Court said the first law was unconstitutional because it discriminated against short-term residents and newcomers. The law called for a taxpayer's liability to be reduced by one-third for each year he filed a tax return. That meant three-year filers would be exempt from paying any tax.

The court decision prompted Hammond to order the Legislature into a special session to come up with a new tax relief plan. The income tax had been on the books for 31 years. Only one of the state's 60 lawmakers voted against tax repeal — the lame-duck president of the Senate, Republican Clem Tillion.

"I do not approve of outright appeal," he said. "That's the tax I resent the least...If I have a bad year, I don't have to pay as much."

The special session adjourned shortly after the tax-repeal measure was adopted, signaling the death of another share-the-wealth plan passed by the Senate, but opposed by House lawmakers.

Fear, distrust fuel feud

CIMINA, Italy (AP) — A 14-year feud in this tiny southern Italian town has claimed 36 lives — nearly one-fifth the male population — and neither the townspeople nor the police can stop the bloodshed.

Police arrest murder suspects in vain. Villagers refuse to testify, partly out of fear they will be the next victims, partly out of distrust for a government which they say has abandoned and forgotten them.

"They have their own codes, their own laws which have nothing to do with normal laws," said frustrated Police Chief Milazzo Antonini.

The deaths are blamed on the "Ndrangheta," the Calabrese Mafia. The Ndrangheta is powerful all over Calabria — police report 900 murders in the region last year — but in Cimina it grips the town. Everyone has been forced to side with one of two factions to survive.

The two clans, the Romanos and Barillaros on one side and the Polifrons and Francos on the other, want to control the markets, the patronage jobs, the protection money paid by anyone who wants to do business in town — in short, almost every aspect of town life.

The smallest transaction — even selling a chicken at market — is controlled by the Ndrangheta. "If you want to come to this town and sell two chickens for 2,000 lire (about $2.40) you have to give half of it to the Ndrangheta," Antonini said.

"The people accept it, not because they like it but because they are afraid," he said.

Cimina is hidden in the Calabrian hills in the tip of the Italian boot. Most who lived here 15 years ago have left, some to find work in the North, some to escape the feud, or "faida." The population has dropped from 1,000 in 1965 to about 400 in 1980.

Half the houses are abandoned. The streets are empty and silent. No one ventures out. There are almost no cars and the only sound at night is the ringing of church bells.

The graveyard is crowded with the faida's victims, all men, most in their 20s and 30s. Graves are stacked three-deep, with the photos of the men who have died framed and attached to the granite markers.

Antonietta, a 28-year-old widow, lives with her two daughters and her parents. Her husband was killed in March as he played cards in the town's only tavern. The bartender was blinded in one eye; a young boy playing with them was paralyzed in the cross fire.

Antonietta agreed to be interviewed only if her real name and her husband's name were not used. She is dressed in traditional mourning, a black dress, black stockings and a black scarf covering her hair. She smiles as she talks, but lines in her still-young face betray her pain.

"We don't know why he was killed," she said. "He started bringing home bad company. I said be careful but he said not to worry, to be calm."

She twists her gold wedding ring around her finger. "What can you do? It is useless to become angry after someone is lost," she said.

Police believe her husband was killed because he tried to persuade his friends to release a pharmacist they had kidnapped from a nearby town. The victim had nothing to do with the kidnapping; he was killed because he opposed it.

The spiral of violence began in June 1966 with the murder of Francesco Barillaro, area chief of the Ndrangheta and boss of the Romano-Barillaro clan.

Barillaro's murder was followed by a string of vendetta attacks, each clan trying to make the other "pay" for its crimes. Some of the murders were triggered by banal disputes — in one case by the theft of a goat — but most were part of a bitter struggle for power.

The Mafia in Calabria, as in Sicily, began about 200 years ago as a mutual aid society to arrange burials, care for the poor and take care of other social services in the absence of a local government.

They took part in petty crimes and "Robin Hood" thefts — taking from the rich and giving to the poor — but were relatively peaceful. Each clan had a clearly defined territory and more or less kept to itself.

Starting in the mid-1960s, however, the clans moved into big-time crime, including lucrative kidnappings and drug traffic. "As the stakes got bigger, the crimes got bigger," said Giuseppe Geratieri, a resident of the nearby town of Locri.

People in Cimina blame public corruption for many of their troubles. They claim the ruling Christian Democratic Party buys votes from the Ndrangheta, that government aide to Cimina falls into Ndrangheta hands and that local judges look the other way when crimes are committed.

"Their attitude is: As long as they just kill each other, so much the better," said one man who refused to be identified. "Even the judges are afraid of the Ndrangheta."

Antonini admits the people have reason to distrust the government, but he also tells them that until they testify in court there's no chance to end the bloodshed.

Housing bill compromise accepted

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators, working under the pressure created by the upcoming congressional recess, have welded a fragile compromise on a $38 billion housing program extending through the 20th Century.

UTPB awards given to six

ODESSA — Six former Midland College students have been named recipients of The University of Texas at Odessa's 1980-81 academic year at UTPB in Odessa.

Heidi Govel, Judy Littlefield, Johnnie Moritz, Della Munro, Robin Newsum and Linda Weaver were chosen among the 15 students who received the honor this year.

The $250 per semester award is available to students ranking in the top 20 percent of their class at a participating community college. The students must also be recommended by the president of the college.

Tentative approval came after days of wrangling that ended Wednesday night when House negotiators agreed to drop a controversial plan that would have extended, for the first time, federal rent subsidies to certain middle-income Americans.

House negotiators also agreed to drop their proposal to exclude cost-of-living adjustments given to pensioners and Social Security recipients from the formula that determines if a person is eligible for low-income housing.

In return, Senate negotiators gave up a proposal that would have reduced the eligibility for low-income rental assistance. Currently, persons whose income is less than 80 percent of the median income in their area are eligible for low-income rent subsidies.

The Senate had proposed reducing this to 65 percent of the median income.

The middle-income subsidy program, the only new housing initiative in the proposal, had been expected to create problems for the negotiators and it lived up to that expectation. The House adopted the proposal with little dissent but the Senate rejected it. The proposal would have created a pilot program of 40,000 rental units of newly constructed or newly refurbished units. Persons with an income up to 150 percent of the median income in their area would have been eligible for federal rent subsidies if they lived in these units.

Proponents argued that the program was needed to spur housing development for middle-income people, some of whom cannot afford to pay the prices developers must charge to make a profit on their buildings.

Soviets snipe at Polish unions

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist Party daily Pravda, quoting from the works of V. I. Lenin, today criticized the "bourgeois" concept of "free" trade unions and said unions in a socialist country must be under political party leadership.

The article made no direct reference to the mass strikes last month in Poland, which ended with workers getting the right to establish unions independent of the Communist Party's labor movement. But Pravda indicated serious Soviet Cardinals forget flag dreams to play spoiler role in NL

By The Associated Press

When you have nothing else in September, you can play the spoiler. It's not a role anybody relishes, particularly the St. Louis Cardinals, who had better things planned for the fall when they began playing baseball in the spring.

Jim Kaat has been in the majors since 1959. He's been to one World Series with Minnesota in 1965 and played on two division championship teams — Minnesota in 1970 and Philadelphia in 1976. At 41, he's had a lot of practice punching holes in other people's pennant hopes. But he says it's a small consolation.

"I've said all along we shouldn't take too much delight in being spoilers," said Kaat Thursday night after he scattered 11 hits in pitching the Cardinals to a 10-2 victory over the fading world champion Pittsburgh Pirates. "If we were playing the kind of ball we are capable of, we'd be in contention."

The Cards' Ted Simmons, one of the most consistent hitters in baseball over the past decade, has never been to a playoff or World Series. After knocking in six runs on a solo homer, grand slam and a single Thursday night, he could only hope for a more significant forum one day.

"I'm looking forward to a September when I have a big game like this and it helps us win our division," he said. "Now we can only hurt Montreal."

St. Louis plays Montreal next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Montreal fell out of first place in the National League East, slipping one-half game behind Philadelphia after the Phillies edged the New York Mets 2-1 and the Expos lost to the Chicago Cubs 5-4.

Philadelphia hosts Montreal for a three-game series beginning tonight.

The Pirates, meanwhile, are 4½-games back, and the fans seemed to have given up hope. Only 6,805 came out Thursday night.

"We've got to win them all now," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, whose team has nine games left — all of them against sixth-place Chicago and the fifth-place New York Mets.

The Houston Astros broke a first-place tie with Los Angeles in the NL West. The Astros beat Atlanta 4-2 while the Dodgers fell to San Francisco 3-2 and dropped a game behind Houston. Meanwhile, Cincinnati, a 5-3 winner over San Diego in 10 innings, is just 2½-games back and starts a three-game series in Houston tonight.

Giants 3, Dodgers 2

San Francisco's Ed Whitson downed Los Angeles with his pitching then boosted them up with a prediction. "The Dodgers are still the class of the division. Houston doesn't have their hitting," he said.

Terry Whitfield and Darrell Evans slammed homers to back the pitching of Whitson and reliever Gary Lavelle. Whitson, 11-11, pitched 7½ innings before Lavelle came on to record his eighth save.

The Giants beat Burt Hooton, 13-8, for the first time in 11 decisions.

Reds 5, Padres 3

The Cincinnati Reds are glad Vic Correll isn't following doctor's orders. "The doctor told me I wouldn't play at all this season," said Correll, who was disabled with an injured left Achilles tendon.

Correll smacked a two-run double in the 10th inning to lift the Reds over the Padres. Since returning to the lineup, Correll has picked up eight hits in 16 at-bats. His previous hits were all singles.

Phillies 2, Mets 1

Rookie Lonnie Smith replaced the slumping Greg Luzinski in the Philadelphia lineup and contributed the winning hit, an RBI single in the fifth. Smith is hitting .336 to Luzinski's .232 but doesn't have the Bull's home run power.

"I wanted Bull to take one whole day and go swing the bat in the cage," said Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green. "I felt it would be better in the long run if he found one or two things wrong that would help him in the Montreal series."

Cubs 5, Expos 4

If the Expos can pick up tonight against Philadelphia where they left off against Chicago, they'll be happy. Down 5-1, the Expos rallied for three runs off Cubs ace reliever Bruce Sutter in the ninth. But Dick Tidrow came in with runners at first and third and retired Rodney Scott to end the game.

Haunted house looms for Bears

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Jones Stadium is a haunted house to the Baylor Bears.

And the Bears get to visit it again Saturday night a month before Halloween.

Baylor hasn't won at the home of the Texas Tech Red Raiders in Lubbock since 1966.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff has made this fact required historical reading of his squad preparing for Saturday night's Southwest Conference football game before an expected 44,000 fans.

The Raiders are 13-9-1 over the Bears in Lubbock matchups.

"The last time up there we got embarrassed, and humiliated," said Teaff. "I'd love to carry a team to Lubbock and play well. That's a great place to play."

Baylor was a two-point pick over the Red Raiders, who have lost only to North Carolina.

In other games this weekend, Arkansas was a 21-point nod over Tulsa, Texas was a 30-point choice over Oregon State in Austin, Houston was a 20-point selection over North Texas State in the Astrodome, Georgia was a 14-point pick over Texas Christian in Athens, Southern Methodist was a four-touchdown pick over Texas-Arlington in Texas Stadium, and Rice was an 11-point underdog to Louisiana State at Rice Stadium.

Baylor's offense is the best in the SWC thanks to the passing of quarterbacks Jay Jeffrey and David Mangrum and the running of Walter Abercrombie, now the all-time career rushing leader in school history.

Texas Tech Coach Rex Dockery said "You have to be concerned with Baylor's overall speed. And Jeffrey has been very impressive."

He added "a pro scout told me during the spring that Baylor had the best physically-looking talent he saw in the SWC at that time."

The Red Raiders have been impressive on defense and quarterback Ron Reeves has given them a top passing threat.

"I'm one of Reeves' biggest fans," said Teaff. "He's a winner."

Teaff said "The Red Raiders outweigh us 30 pounds per man. I'm concerned about making a yard."

Two Aggies wait for board ruling

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A Texas A&M football player suspended from the team Tuesday was reinstated after he argued the "drugs" found in his room were pills prescribed by a team doctor.

Sophomore defensive back Darrell Adams was cleared by an A&M disciplinary hearing board Thursday.

"Being cleared by the committee does not mean a player is automatically back on the team, but we called (head Coach Tom) Wilson's office, and he said he would reinstate Adams because there's essentially no accusations against him any longer," an A&M spokesman said.

The board said its decision on the two other players suspended — senior defensive back Elroy Steen and junior linebacker Cal Peveto — would be announced sometime today.

Peveto and Steen would have until Tuesday to appeal the decision and any punishment by the board. The appeal would be heard by a university disciplinary appeals panel made up of four faculty members and three students.

Dr. H. Dwayne Lagan, the team physician, confirmed he prescribed heart medicine and nerve pills for Adams during the summer and said neither drug is harmful or illegal.

"They took the wrong action against me," Adams said Wednesday. "They can tell the pills had the doctor's name on it."

Adams apparently also was reported to have some marijuana "roach clips." He said the objects were "things" he got in a workshop for his industrial education major.

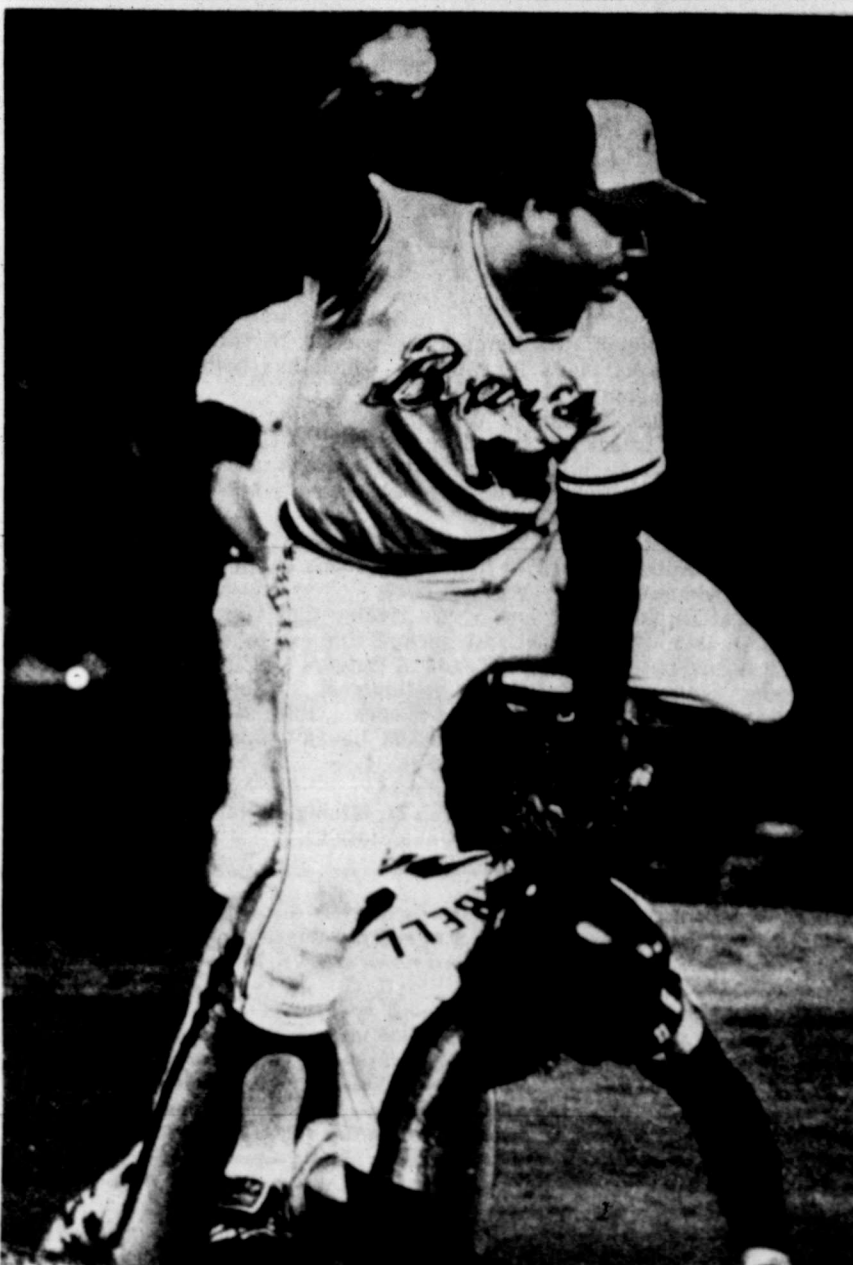

Steen was arrested Tuesday afternoon and charged with possession of a controlled substance after university police told him they had found marijuana in the tape deck of his car. Wilson said drugs were found in Peveto's room.

Adams said Peveto told him a single "black molly," an amphetamine, was found in Peveto's room. His teammate was going to use it for a four-hour drive home, Adams said.

Wilson announced the suspensions Wednesday afternoon for "disciplinary violations," but Adams and Peveto claimed they were being made scapegoats for the Aggies' poor start this season. The team lost to Georgia, 23-20, and Penn State, 25-9, but won their first game over Mississippi, 23-20.

Adams told The Fort Worth Star-Telegram that rooms of five players, including the three who were suspended, were searched Tuesday after a team meeting Monday night in which Wilson warned that drug use "would not be tolerated."

In the meeting, Adams said, Wilson told the team he was aware that certain players were using drugs and would be caught soon.

Astros accomplish nine-day mission

ATLANTA (AP) — The Houston Astros accomplished their nine-day mission — returning from a road trip in first place in the National League West race.

But, their work is not over.

"It's gonna be close," Manager Bill Virdon said of the race following Houston's 4-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves Thursday night, a triumph that gave the Astros a one-game edge over second place Houston and a 2½-game lead over Cincinnati.

"It's gonna be tough," Virdon added. "Nothing will be decided until the last couple of games."

The Astros return home for a three-game series with Cincinnati, follow that with three more against the Braves and then close the season in a three-game set at Los Angeles.

Joe Morgan supplied all the offense Houston needed Thursday night when he drilled a two-run homer off Phil Niekro, 15-16, in the third inning and delivered a tie-breaking check-swing single in the fifth.

The Astros added another run on the seventh when Enos Cabell singled home Jeff Leonard following his pinch-hit single.

"That just shows the character of the ball club, winning one you have to," Morgan said. "That's three times we've done that on this road trip when we had to, winning after a loss. This was very, very important to our ball club."

Concerning the race, Morgan said, "I feel confident playing the Cincinnati Reds and I feel confident playing the Los Angeles Dodgers. May the best team win, and I think we will. "I think we've been confident all along," Morgan said. "We're probably the most underrated team. We felt we were going to win coming out of spring training."

Nolan Ryan, 10-9, went five innings to pick up the victory before leaving with a muscle spasm in his back.

"It's bothered me before," Ryan said. "I've had a back problem but I don't expect it to be a factor. Virdon just didn't want to take any chances tonight."

Ryan says the close race is exciting "but there's a lot of pressure on you. It's going to be a real tough race. Every game means a lot."

The Astros again went to rookie reliever Dave Smith, who recorded his eighth save while working three shutout innings.

"When we left on the road trip our goal was to come back in first place, and we are," Smith said. "We've just got to keep doing what we have been."

Lee Rebels to enter cross country meet

The Midland Lee cross country team is entered in the Odessa College Invitational meet Saturday at Floyd Gwynn Park.

Coach Sam Volpe will run Robert Schooler, Joey Odum, Orlando Padilla, Raymond Urias, Carl Piccolo, James Chauncey, Darrell Holmes and John Hill in the varsity competition.

Junior varsity entries for Volpe will include Cruz Velasquez, Greg Bell, Chris Johnson, Ector Reyes, Gregg Lissio, Lynn Nabi, Manuel Valdez and Gary Carr.

MTC schedules qualifying tourney

A qualifying men's singles tournament Saturday will mark the prelude to the 20th annual Midland Tennis Club Fall Tournament next week, marking the transition from what amounted to a college-invitational in past years to the Penn Circuit of the United States Tennis Association.

The USTA-Penn Circuit encourages the development of promising talent by providing an opportunity to play competitively and eventually to move up to the Volvo Grand Prix Tour, encompassing the world's major tournaments such as Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

Tournament headquarters will be at the Midland High Tennis courts when the MTC tournament proper gets underway Tuesday and the finals will be at the Midland Racquet Club the following Sunday.

The top 16 players in Saturday's meet will join 48 internationally ranked players in next week's tournament.

Competition will be conducted in both singles and doubles.

Tournament officials expect players from 13 foreign countries, 23 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico in next year's field, based on the entry list for the El Paso edition of the Penn Circuit.

While the tournament will bring a lot of new faces to Midland, not all will be strangers. Rick Iskersky, with an ATP ranking of 248, lost to Bill Matyastik in the MTC Invitational finals in 1976. Iskersky, a native of Ohio, was a three-time All-American at Trinity University and teamed up with Ben McKown to win the NCAA Doubles championship in 1979. In singles, he lost to Texas' Kevin Curren in the finals.

Randy Crawford, ranked 212, is no stranger in West Texas either. An All-American at TCU in 1977, Crawford has twice reached the finals of USTA-Penn play, losing to Van Witsky at Orlando, Fla., and Mel Purcell at St. Joseph, Mo.

Tim Garcia, a 1976 NCAA semifinalist while attending the University of New Mexico in 1976, also ranks among the pretournament favorites. Garcia won the 1976 Southwestern Sectional Singles championship and then lost to English Davis Copper Buster Mottram in the first round of the U.S. Open.

Waits sticks arm into pennant race

NEW YORK (AP) — Once again, Rick Waits seems bent on sticking his left arm into the middle of a pennant race. On the final day of the 1978 regular season, the Cleveland southpaw defeated New York and forced the Yankees into that memorable one-game playoff with Boston.

Thursday night, he was back at it again, blanking the Yankees 5-0 on a seven-hitter and reducing their lead over idle Baltimore to 4½-games with nine remaining.

The Yankees have seen just about enough of Waits for the time being, but he will be heard from again. He is scheduled to start against them in Cleveland next Tuesday and against the Orioles in Baltimore the following Saturday.

"I pitch pretty good against Baltimore most of the time," Waits said. "But I have confidence in knowing that I can't lose against the Yankees. I just have a feeling I'm going to win against them."

It has been a frustrating season for Waits, except where the Yankees are concerned. He is 3-0 with a 1.03 earned run average against them, 9-14 and 5.17 against the rest of the league.

The Yankees had Waits on the ropes in the first two innings. They loaded the bases with one out in the first but Rick Cerone bounced into a double play on the first pitch after Waits walked Eric Soderholm without throwing a strike.

"I threw four pitches to Soderholm with nothing on them," Waits said. "I was trying to relax too much and I lost my aggressiveness, so I really tried to pop the first pitch to Cerone."

It was a fast ball that really sank at the last minute.

An inning later, Waits made Bobby Brown one of his six strikeout victims, again with the bases filled. He also survived Bob Watson's leadoff double in the third inning and a pair of walks in the fifth.

"We had our chances early and didn't get anything," said New York Manager Dick Howser. "We had him where we wanted him in the first inning and he got a double play when he needed it."

"Man for man, Baltimore is just as good, but the bench is so much better here and the over-all pitching is better," he said. "I see the Yankees going on and winning it. Plus, we've got to play Baltimore six times and we'll beat them. The Yankees are a good club; I don't think they'll have any trouble winning."

The Indians quickly scored the only run Waits needed when Miguel Dilone opened the game with a triple and scored on a wild pitch by loser Gaylord Perry. Dilone also beat out a bunt to start the third and eventually scored on Mike Hargrove's sacrifice fly and Cleveland added three runs in the eighth.

"I don't think there's any secret at all," Waits said. "It's just a matter of throwing strikes. I just enjoy coming here and pitching in this park. I do get psyched against them, definitely a little more than against some other clubs. When you enter a game 11-14 and pitch a shutout against the best team in baseball, it makes you feel good."

Mariners 7, Rangers 6

Rookie Dave Edler's two-out, bases-loaded double in the 11th inning scored three runs and lifted Seattle over Texas. Trailing 6-4, Bruce Bochte and Tom Paciorek both singled. Jerry Narron walked to load the bases before Edler's decisive hit.

The win was the fifth in a row for the Mariners while Texas dropped its seventh straight.

Texas Manager Pat Corrales protested the game in the ninth when Coach Frank Funk visited Dave Heaverlo on the mound. Corrales claimed the visit was illegal because Heaverlo had not finished facing the first batter.

Bump Wills of Texas and Seattle Manager Maury Wills made major-league history as the first father-and-son combination to face each other. The only other father-son combination on record was Connie Mack of the Philadelphia A's, who played his son Earle in five games, the final two in 1914.

White Sox 6, A's 4

Mike Squires hit a two-run single in the ninth inning to break a tie after Chicago had scored four runs in the second inning without a hit. The bizarre inning had three walks, three errors and a wild pitch. Mike Proly, 5-10, picked up the victory with two innings of relief and Brian Kingman suffered his 20th loss of the season. He has won seven.

changed lineups at home plate. Maury, however, left happy with a victory over the Rangers. (AP Laserphoto).

Freedom rings clear as Cup returns home

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Freedom skipper Dennis Conner had just completed a two-year mission to defend the America's Cup, and he was not ready to start talking about 1983.

"First, I'm going to have to decide if I'm ready to give up two years of my life or three years, because that's what it's coming to," said Conner, who brought a new level of dedication to the triennial yachting event.

"It'd be easy to get caught up in the euphoria of it right now and say I can't wait until 1983," he said. "But I can't do that."

Conner trounced the challenger Australia by three minutes, 38 seconds Thursday to take his fourth victory in the best-of-seven cup finals and turn back the 24th threat to the New York Yacht Club's hold on the top prize in sailing.

But Alan Bond, head of the Australian campaign, already is making plans for the 25th challenge. He said he will return in three years with two new 12-meters.

"We've had a very good lesson, and I can tell you not to take us lightly," said Bond. "We're a country and a people who keep on trying."

The 1980 campaign was the third mounted by Bond and the fifth straight by an Australian boat.

His resolve to invest in two yachts reflects the impact the Freedom effort has had on this elite sport. The U.S. defense campaign was actually carried by two yachts, Enterprise and the year-old Freedom.

Conner decided only in May to go with the newer boat after trying both off Newport and off his home in San Diego for the past year. It was an investment of time and money by the sponsoring Fort Schuyler Foundation unmatched in the cup's 129-year history.

Bond also said he will stay with the so-called "bendy mast" introduced to cup competition this summer by the British yacht Lionheart and copied by the Australians before the start of the finals.

He and Australia designer Ben Lexcen, who will draw the plans for the two new yachts, said every boat vying to defend or challenge for the cup in 1983 will sport such rigs, which have a flexible top that allows more sail to be exposed to the wind and still conform to the 12-meter design rules.

Australia skipper Jim Hardy, who scared the Americans by winning one race in the finals and leading in another only to have the time limit expire, said his three turns at the wheel of a challenging boat are enough.

"I'll not sail an America's Cup challenger again ... I'm just a wine-maker and a weekend sailor. The parttimers are finished. Dennis Conner has proven that," said Hardy, one of Australia's major vintners.

Australia, foreground, circles Freedom as both work to get into the best starting position Thursday in the fifth race of America's Cup competition. Freedom, however, won the race and captured the cup title. (AP Laserphoto)

Nebraska picked to survive Penn St.

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

There is a growing feeling in college football circles that Nebraska may just have the best team in its history. And that history, you'll recall, includes consecutive national championships in 1956 and 1957.

The 1979 Cornhuskers ran off a 10-0 record before dropping their regular-season windup to Oklahoma 17-14 and then losing to Houston in the Cotton Bowl by the same score. Along the way, they shellacked Penn State 42-17 in Lincoln ... after trailing 14-0 at the end of the first period. The rematch takes place Saturday in State College, Pa.

"They're not even close to last year's team," says Penn State Coach Joe Paterno. "They're better on offense, and you know how great they've been. They may be as good an offensive team as we've ever played. They run the trap game as well as anyone we've ever faced and that Jarvis Redwine can outrun anybody. It's a home run once he gets in the secondary."

"Their defense is also better than it's been. They get the ball back all the time. They were solid last year, but not as dominant as they are now."

Meanwhile, Nebraska's Tom Osborne calls Paterno's crew "a typical Penn State team, very good and sound. They're quicker and more capable of the big play than they were a year ago. They don't appear to be as big as last year on the defensive line, but they might be quicker and more mobile."

Don't forget agile and hostile and ... Nebraska 27-17.

Last week's score was $5 right, 15 wrong and one tie for a .786 percentage, boosting the season's count to 125-45-2-735.

Arizona State at Ohio State: The Sun Devils can give you a pretty good rundown on national powers a week from now when they face Southern Cal on the heels of ... Ohio State 31-14.

Maryland at North Carolina: Do you know what a Terrapin is? A Tar Heel? They're playing in this one ... North Carolina 17-10.

Vanderbilt at Alabama: Bama is a 39-point (count 'em, 39) favorite. OK ... Alabama 39-0.

Stanford at Oklahoma: Stanford couldn't have been looking ahead last week when it lost to Boston College, could it? The Cardinals will put the ball in the air. Oklahoma usually puts it on the ground ... Oklahoma 35-24.

Southern California at Minnesota: While Arizona State plays Ohio State and Southern Cal, Minnesota does the reverse. The Golden Gophers lost to Ohio State 47-0 last week and now comes ... Southern Cal 35-13.

Florida State at Miami, Fla.: Florida State's Bobby Bowden says the Hurricanes may be the most improved team in the country. Bobby wouldn't kid us none. Upset Special of the Week ... Miami 21-17.

Oregon at Washington: Washington is coached by James, Oregon by Brooks. James Brooks plays for Auburn, which has nothing to do with this game ... Washington 21-14.

Wisconsin at UCLA: Offensive coordinator Homer Smith was hired to open up the Bruins' attack and he's done just that ... UCLA 31-7.

South Carolina at Michigan: The Wolverines get a crack at stopping high-stepping George Rogers. They probably won't, but they might stop Carolina ... Michigan 24-17.

Tennessee at Auburn: Hard to figure either one of these teams. Strictly on the home-field advantage ... Auburn 20-17.

Princeton at Rutgers: The end of the rivalry that started all this madness back in 1869. If you recall, we picked Rutgers to win 6-4 and that's the way it turned out. Nothing's changed ... Rutgers 6-4.

Mississippi State at Florida: Gators getting good ... Florida 24-21.

Iowa State at Iowa: This one's no can o' corn ... Iowa 28-21.

Second Upset Special: Duke 21, Virginia 14.

Third Upset Special: Western Michigan 24, Michigan State 17.

Fourth Upset Special: Rice 22, Louisiana State 21.

Dooley thinks Frogs are thirsty for win

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Texas Christian may be winless after two starts this season, but the Horned Frogs have certainly captured the attention of Coach Vince Dooley of the 10th-ranked Georgia Bulldogs.

"We can't afford to take them lightly," said Dooley, who has steered the Dogs to three straight victories.

Dooley said the Frogs have dropped a pair of three-point decisions to two outstanding teams, Auburn 10-7 and Southern Methodist 17-14. He noted that TCU missed two field goals against Auburn and had two blocked against the Mustangs.

"They very easily could be 2-0 as opposed to 0-2," Dooley said. "The point is that we could be in for one heckuva football game Saturday. TCU has been on the verge of victory, and they're really thirsty."

A capacity crowd of 59,000 is expected in Sanford Stadium for the 1:30 p.m. EDT kickoff with Georgia, led by freshman sensation Herschel Walker and quarterback Buck Belue, generally regarded as a two-touchdown favorite.

"It's a thin difference between us being 1-2 and TCU being 2-0," Dooley said, referring to Georgia's narrow victories over Tennessee and Clemson to go along with a 42-0 thrashing of Texas A&M, a Southwest Conference neighbor of the Horned Frogs.

This will be only the second meeting in history between the two teams, and the first in regular season competition. Georgia downed TCU 40-26 in the 1942 Orange Bowl game.

Coach F. A. Dry says Georgia is worthy of its national ranking.

"Talent — plenty of talent," Dry said. "That freshman running back (Walker) concerns me because he doesn't run like a freshman. Defensively, they've got some aggressive people. We'll need to mix our offense and make some big plays. Our defense must improve to contain Georgia's offense."

Walker, a 220-pound speedster, leads the Bulldog offense with five touchdowns and 350 yards rushing in three games. He is averaging 5.1 yards per carry. Belue has hit on 14 of 31 passes for 278 yards and two scores, both to leading receiver Amp Arnold.

TCU's attack has been geared to the passing of Kevin Haney, who has hit on 21 of 39 for 268 yards and two scores. The top Frog runner is Marcus Gilbert with 110 yards on 24 attempts.

Senior place kicker Rex Robinson provided the margin of victory over Clemson with a pair of field goals and two more extra points.

Madison Avenue could love football

By The Associated Press

A Madison Avenue type attempting to market Saturday's college football offerings would have little trouble selling the element of surprise to Arizona State, less trouble with revenge for Penn State and no problem peddling survival to Vanderbilt.

"I think about it everyday," said Penn State running back Curt Warner, who played a minor role in the 42-17 shelling his team took last season at the hands of Nebraska. "But it's a different ball game this year. We'll find out if we're a big league team."

Indeed they will, along with a national television audience and a crowd of 85,000 expected to pack the Nittany Lions' Beaver Stadium to watch 11th-ranked Penn State seek revenge against the third-ranked Cornhuskers. Both teams are unbeaten at 2-0.

"We've got a big score to settle, and that's at the top of the list," center Bob Jagers said of the charge that Joe Paterno's Lions are nothing more than a big fish in a little pond — Eastern football.

"I think there are five or six teams who are certainly in the caliber of being national champions," Paterno said, adding that Tom Osborne's Cornhuskers are among them.

In other games involving Top Ten teams, top-ranked Alabama hosts Vanderbilt, No. 2 Ohio State entertains 20th-ranked Arizona State, No. 4 Oklahoma is at home against Stanford, 5th-ranked Southern California visits Minnesota, No. 6 Pitt hosts Temple, 7th-ranked Texas entertains Oregon State at night, No. 9 Florida State travels to Miami, (Fla.), and 10th-ranked Georgia is at home against Texas Christian. No. 8 Notre Dame is idle.

Also, No. 12 Missouri is at San Diego State, 13th-ranked Washington hosts Oregon, No. 14 North Carolina entertains 19th-ranked Maryland, No. 15 Arkansas is at home against Tulsa, 16th-ranked UCLA hosts Wisconsin,

No. 17 Michigan entertains South Carolina, and 18th-ranked Auburn is at home against Tennessee.

"We might surprise a few people," said Arizona State Coach Darryl Rogers, whose 2-0 Sun Devils did just that in upsetting and knocking Houston from the Top Twenty two weeks ago. "It's a phenomenal challenge."

The Sun Devils have outscored the opposition 71-17 while recovering seven fumbles and intercepting seven passes in routs of Houston and Oregon State. But Rogers, former head coach at Michigan State, knows how tough it is to win at Ohio Stadium, where the 2-0 Buckeyes have sold out 72 straight times. Michigan State lost there twice under Rogers by 49-21 and 42-0 scores.

"It's always a privilege to play that team in that stadium before that crowd," said Rogers, who said the artificial turf won't bother his players after two games on natural grass. "I'm not worried about the surface. I'm worried about some of the people OSU will have running on it."

Foremost among them is quarterback Art Schlichter, the Buckeyes' Heisman Trophy candidate.

"He's a true passer, but his running ability can hurt you as much as anything," said Rogers.

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce is not selling Arizona State short by any means.

"It's very evident they have good players when you look at their films," said Bruce. "The problem is that people who do some predicting don't look at any film."

There is some film Vanderbilt Coach George McIntyre would rather not see too often. It shows unbeaten Alabama doing its usual routine of stomping on opponents with 0-2 Vanderbilt the unanimous choice to become victim No. 3 this season and No. 299 in the career of Crimson Tide Coach Bear Bryant.

McIntyre said the Commodores, losers of 25 straight Southeastern Conference games, will have to run the ball quite a bit against the two-time defending national champions.

Lee Trevino predicts victory

EPSOM, England

(AP) — Lee Trevino, buoyed by his spectacular start in the Bob Hope Classic, forecast he was playing well enough to win the $240,000 tournament and shoot about 20-under-par for the 72-holes while doing it.

Trevino, fresh from his Texas Open victory, bagged seven birdies Thursday en route to a first round 66 which put him two shots behind frontrunner Eamonn Darcy of Ireland.

"I am certainly in good enough shape because this course is just like the one at San Antonio," Trevino said. "It is short and demands good wedge play and that is where I am really strong right now.

"I hit 500 wedge shots a day preparing for the Texas Open, so I have done all the homework I need for this week."

The 40-year-old American, winner of $425,000 this year, made only one mistake and it probably cost him a share of the lead.

The 294-yard 5th is an obvious birdie hole, where most of the long hitters can drive the green.

Chip Beck fights for PGA survival

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw and Tom Watson, who have won more than $700,000 between them this year, have a low-key approach to Napa's annual golf tournament.

But 24-year-old Chip Beck, tied with Crenshaw for the lead after Thursday's first round, is in a fight for survival on the PGA Tour.

"I'm 161st on the money list and I know I have to move up a little bit," the struggling pro from North Carolina said after posting a 6-under-par 66 on the Silverado Country Club's South course.

After making that understatement, Beck added, "I know my wife was glad to see those putts dropping today."

His four winnings this year total $8,939, and if he doesn't reach $12,000 he'll lose his PGA tournament players card. After the Napa tournament, the Anheuser-Busch Classic, there are only two more events this year.

Crenshaw and Beck were one stroke ahead of four golfers who posted 67s Thursday — Gary Hallberg, Mark Hayes, Jack Renner and Scott Watkins. Watson was at 68, in a 10-way tie for seventh.

Those tied with Watson included Mike Reid, Tom Weiskopf, Johnny Miller and Lon Hinkle. A group at 69 included Andy Bean and Rod Curl, and at 70 was defending champion John Fought, Napa's own Mark Lye and many others.

Beck had six birdies and no bogeys for his 66, while Crenshaw, playing the slightly longer North course, had seven birds and on bogey.

"I'm looking to make this a nice yeav-ending event," said Crenshaw, winner of $183,727 this year despite no tournament titles.

"I'm playing well and I'm relaxed," said Watson, the No. 1 money winner with $513,408 in tour earnings plus $59,250 for the British Open title. He also is winding up his play in this event, where he joined the tour in 1971.

Lenapah wins one for Waite

LENAPAH, Okla. (AP) — "The kids played their hearts out. This one was dedicated to Kyle," said Lenapah football Coach Donnie Woodson after his team defeated Foyil, 50-24, Thursday night.

The victory came just two days after Kyle Waite, the team's starting quarterback, collapsed and died during a practice session.

"It was definitely hard to play this one, but the players wanted to," Woodson said. "I told them we'd respect the family's wishes. Mr. Waite told us he wanted us to play — and we won. The good Lord took care of us."

Kyle's father, Ralph, and his brothers, Buck and Shane, were presented the game ball in special ceremonies.

The funeral will be held Friday at 11 a.m. in the school gymnasium and representatives from surrounding football teams are expected to attend.

Odessa Permian's talented sophomores took a 29-0 victory over the Midland Lee sophomores at the Lee practice field Thursday afternoon.

The game was switched from a 7 p.m. start at Memorial Stadium to the 5 p.m. kickoff at Lee due to the rain.

Mojo used balanced scoring in taking a 15-0 lead at halftime and then added 14 more points in the rain in the second half to remain unbeaten in three games. The loss for Coach Ernie Johnson's crew was their first to go with a pair of victories.

Permian took a 6-0 lead in the first period when Bill Rogers scored from seven yards out. The snap on the extra point was high and Mojo was turned away on that attempt when a pass was attempted, but fell short.

The Panther's Bobby Knott picked off a Paul Cox pass and raced 75 yards to an apparent touchdown only to have it called back on a clipping penalty. Permian went ahead to score later on when Knott booted a 31-yard field goal to make it 9-0 midway in the second period.

Richy Keller, 189-pound fullback, then set up the next Panther score with a determined run to the Lee nine where on the next play, Rogers scooted the final nine yards to paydirt. The snap was high again and it was 15-0 in favor of the Odessans as the two teams went to the dressing room at intermission.

A heavy rain fell during halftime, then let up for the early part of the third period when Mojo marched in for another score. The big play on the drive was a fake punt with fourth and 11 needed at the Lee 38. The play went to Jeff Harrington who took the short snap and banged out a 13-yard pickup. A few plays later, quarterback Brent Kelley went over from the one. This time, Knott booted the extra point to make it 22-0.

Permian added another TD in the final period when Rogers scampered 25 yards untouched on a wingback counter play, giving him three touchdowns for the afternoon. Knott's PAT made it the final 29-0 reading.

Permian had two other drives that fell short as the game ended with the Panthers on the Lee 26-yard line.

Fumbles and interceptions hurt Lee throughout the wet contest.

Lee's next game in sophomore competition comes on Oct. 9 against the Pecos sophomores at the Lee practice field while Permian plays the Midland High sophomores next Thursday at 4 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

Score by periods:
Permian Sophs 29
Lee Sophomores 0
Permian: Bill Rogers, 3-yard run. (Pass failed).
Permian: Bobby Knott, 31-yard field goal.
Permian: Rogers, 9-yard run. (Run failed).
Permian: Brent Kelley, 2-yard run. (Knott kick).
Permian: Rogers, 25-yard run. (Knott kick).

Vandeweghe rejects Mavs

DALLAS (AP) — Kiki Vandeweghe, the UCLA All-America center and first-round draft pick of the Dallas Mavericks, has rejected the team's contract because it didn't give him a requested trade option, Maverick officials said.

The 6-8 star asked Thursday for a contract clause saying he could insist on a trade to another NBA team after a year of play.

Maverick officials said it was too early in the game to change the contract. Vandeweghe's father had been quoted previously as saying the offer was "more than fair," they said.

"We put our original contract offer on the table, and he rejected it so he won't play with the Mavericks this year," said team spokesman Allen Stone.

Vandeweghe flew from Los Angeles to Dallas Thursday to renegotiate his contract. He met with Norm Sonju, general manager, and Rick Sund, the team's director of player personnel.

Vandeweghe failed to report in early September with other rookies and with players the franchise obtained in the expansion draft. Sonju said Wednesday the Mavericks would withdraw their offer if he didn't report by 6 p.m. Thursday.

Vandeweghe then phoned team officials and said he was flying to Texas to talk to them. He had already indicated the Maverick's offer wasn't good enough.

He has enrolled in UCLA, but will remain the property of the Mavericks, who indicated they will try to trade him before the 1981 draft next spring.

"It's a shame. I regret it. Kiki made a horrible decision. I like him, but I think he made a terrible mistake," Sonju said.

Sims gives Lions new hope

By The Associated Press

In 1956, Billy Sims was learning how to walk. Now, as we know so well, he can run, too — and if he runs the way he's been running so far this year, he'll be a part of something the Detroit Lions haven't achieved since 1956.

That's the last time they managed to win their first four games in a season. In fact, they won their first six, en route to a 9-3 record which left them one-half game behind the Western Conference champion Chicago Bears. They won the National Football League championship the next year — and haven't won a title since.

The Lions already have won more games this year than they did in all of 1979, when they were 2-14. The 3-0 mark matches their 1970 start, the last time they made the playoffs (as the National Conference's wild-card team in the Central Division).

Minnesota, which narrowly beat Detroit in the teams' two meetings last year, is 2-1 and tied with defending division champion Tampa Bay.

Sunday's other games are: Philadelphia at St. Louis, Chicago at Pittsburgh, Cleveland at Tampa Bay, Dallas vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Houston at Cincinnati, Los Angeles at San Francisco, the New York Jets at Miami, Oakland at Buffalo, Atlanta at Baltimore, San Diego at Kansas City and Seattle at Washington. Monday night's game is Denver at New England.

The Vikings will be trying to do to Sims what they did to Walter Payton last Sunday. They slammed the door on the defending National Conference rushing champion, limiting him to just 39 yards (his fewest since the 1978 season) and holding the entire Chicago ground game to 93 yards in a 34-14 runaway over the Bears.

Sims didn't exactly have an explosive day in Detroit's 20-7 triumph over St. Louis, gaining 95 yards, 13 of them on a touchdown run midway in the final period. But a 7-yard touchdown sprint in the second period was wiped out by a holding penalty. Had it stood up, Sims would have become the first player in NFL history to gain at least 1,000 yards in each of his first three games. Nevertheless, he's still the NFL's rushing leader with 382 yards, 55 more than Wilbert Montgomery of Philadelphia.

The Eagles, who have scored the most points (104) and allowed the fewest (16) in the NFL this year, haven't had a start like this since they went 4-0 back in 1954. Dick Vermeil's players pushed him past the break-even point last Monday night when their 35-3 trouncing of the Giants gave him a 32-31 pro coaching record.

Buffalo, San Francisco and San Diego also will be trying to keep their records unblemished through four weeks while the Jets, New Orleans, St. Louis and Kansas City will be looking for their first victory of the season.

Sale of Mariners is nearly complete

SEATTLE (AP) — Canadian businessman Nelson Skalbania says his purchase of the Seattle Mariners American League baseball team is nearly complete.

Skalbania of Vancouver, British Columbia, was in Seattle Thursday to work out details of the purchase for a reported $12.2 million.

"The offer was modified by two or three minor things," Skalbania said. "All they have to do is be confirmed by telex."

Earlier in the week Skalbania's lawyer, Grant Macdonald, met with agents of the five current owners. At the time, Les Smith, one of the owners, said Skalbania's basic offer was acceptable with some minor changes.

"We agreed with everything they came back with," Skalbania said Thursday. "So all it is a formality unless something else comes up."

Skalbania toured the Kingdome while the Mariners were taking batting practice before their 7-6 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"I am optimistic about the potential of baseball in Seattle," he said.

Steers continue 5-5A streak

The Big Spring Steers continued their march toward the District 5-5A first half volleyball crown Thursday with a 15-5, 15-13 victory over the Midland Lee girls.

Lee fell to 0-4 in the first half chase while Big Spring is now 4-0, but Lee pushed the Steers to the limit in the second set, a narrow 15-13 margin.

Rozena McCabe and Sharon McLaughlin led the Lee serving in the second match while McCabe and Lori Breeding had excellent defensive outings.

Lee also dropped the junior varsity outing, 15-5, 15-8, to Big Spring.

Lee hits the road for two games next week. Tuesday the Rebels travel to Odessa Permian and then will travel to Abilene High Thursday.

Bulldogs' hopes dashed by Bobcats

SAN ANGELO — Midland High's hopes for winning the first half of the District 5-5A volleyball race were all but dashed here Thursday night as the San Angelo girls ripped the Bulldogs 15-10, 15-6.

"If we ever had a worst game, this was it," said MHS coach Linda Jolly. "I just don't think we were prepared mentally to play. We got ahead 4-1 and then San Angelo just played great from then on."

The loss leaves MHS at 2-2 in loop play while San Angelo stayed in the thick of the race with a 3-1 reading.

The MHS junior varsity also took it on the chin to San Angelo, losing 15-10, 15-9.

Midland High returns home Tuesday to face Odessa High with the JV game to begin at 6:15 p.m. at the MHS gym. The Bulldogs will host Abilene Cooper Thursday.

Alamo girls capture basketball victories

Alamo Gray and Alamo Red teams took opening round victories in the Girls City 8th Grade Basketball Tournament Thursday.

Gray blasted San Jacinto White, 53-16, while Red posted a 52-43 win over Goddard Black. In the other game, Goddard White took a 43-34 win over San Jacinto Green.

The consolation finals are set for 9 a.m. Saturday and the championship game at 10:30 a.m.

Knicks obtain Russell in trade with Cavaliers

NEW YORK (AP) — His former coach describes him as a crowd pleaser who because of his "show business" style of play will become a favorite in New York; but the management of the Knicks acquired veteran forward Campy Russell for many more reasons.

"Campy will be like a guy who committed murder and while he was in jail he won the lottery," said Boston Celtics Coach Bill Fitch, who had Russell in Cleveland. "He'll give (Knicks Coach Red) Holzman a dimension that the Knicks will be pleased with."

The Knicks got Russell from the Cleveland Cavaliers Thursday in a three-way trade also involving the Kansas City Kings. The Kings got New York's center-forward Joe C. Meriweather and a first-round 1981 draft choice and sent forward Bill Robinson to Cleveland.

'Cosmos' 13-part series triumph of imagination and technology

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When America landed two robots on Mars in 1976, reporters covering the Viking mission quickly learned to seek out a young astronomer from Cornell University when in need of color to enliven their stories.

While other mission scientists spoke in skeptical tones of finding even microbial life on Mars, Dr. Carl Sagan fancied giant Martians dancing and frolicking in front of the Viking cameras.

Not likely, he said, but possible.

Sagan has the rare knack, forged by a spectacular intelligence and a childlike curiosity, of revealing science as an adventure. Only Sagan could dream up a television series endeavoring to explore "all that is, or ever was, or ever will be."

Only Sagan could bring it off. His "Cosmos," a 13-part series on PBS beginning Sunday, is a triumph of imagination and technology. But mostly, it is a triumph of Sagan's uncanny ability to make the unknowable seem knowable.

The structure of the show is sometimes a little goofy, as you might expect when PBS and a scientist make a TV show.

Sagan takes us aboard his "Spaceship of the Imagination" for a computer-animated tour of outer space. The cameras occasionally shoot to a close-up of Sagan's face, astonished by the wonder of it all, or, through the glass bottom of the ship, which Sagan magically opens with a parting of his hands.

It's a bit "Captain Video," but the good stuff — Sagan's explanations and conjecture — prevails. The viewer is charmed by Sagan's intoxicating way with words.

A globular cluster that passes below the ship isn't just a cluster of old stars, it is "a swarm of bees bound by gravity, each bee a sun." Asteroids are "shattered and broken worlds"; all that sky-stuff up there comprises "worlds of ice and stars of diamond."

Sagan doesn't waste any time in getting to one of his favorite themes — extraterrestrial life.

"There are a hundred-billion galaxies and a billion-trillion stars," Sagan says as he maneuvers the spaceship back to Earth. "Why should this modest planet be the only inhabited world? To me, it seems far more likely that the cosmos is brimming with life and intelligence."

Sagan is an accomplished showman, but he is first a scientist, and as such, is subject to a peculiar trait all scientists seem to share: He appears more at ease when discussing matters outside his own field.

Back on Earth, Sagan is a compelling. He visits a 2,000 year-old lighthouse near Alexandria where Eratosthenes first measured the Earth, and contemplates the long-lost Alexandria library, repository of all the knowledge of the ancient world.

Finally, he introduces the Cosmic Calendar, the best part of Sagan's act. It is the layman's cosmic Rosetta Stone, enabling a simple understanding of where our species stands in relation to all that is or ever was.

Sagan pretends that the history of the cosmos is one calendar year. In the first instant of January 1, creation occurred. Life did not appear until September. Human beings did not appear until December 31 at 10 p.m. On the cosmic calendar, man's cities didn't appear until 30 seconds ago.

It's an astonishing demonstration, not original to Sagan but perfected by him. And, it is the perfect way to end the first "Cosmos" — like Frank Sinatra closing a concert with "My Way."

Next week, Sagan journeys to the center of a cell, where he examines deoxyribonucleic acid. You can wager he'll make a show of it.

Gambler bets $777,000 on one throw and wins

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — There's no doubt the player was a high-roller — he dumped $777,000 on the crap table at Binion's Horseshoe Club, risking it all at once. And there's certainly no doubt he was lucky — he walked out $777,000 richer.

The player, who remained unidentified, won his $777,000 bet Wednesday on the third roll of the dice in a craps game at the popular club in Las Vegas' glittering downtown Casino center.

The casino, home of the annual big-money World Series of Poker, has claimed for years that no bet is too big and gamblers are told they can risk whatever they can afford.

The guy called previously about betting anywhere from $200,000 to $1 million, Horseshoe Club president Jack Binion said Thursday. "We said, 'Yeah, you can do it.'"

Binion said he had had no further contact with the gambler, described only as a Southerner in his 20s, until he showed up Wednesday.

"He had two little suitcases, one full one and one empty one," Binion said, "and he left with two full ones."

He said the man had the $777,000 in cash — $100 bills in $10,000 bundles — "and we paid him off in cash."

The man plunked his entire bet down on the "don't pass" line. The woman who was rolling the dice threw a six, which became the "point," then a nine and on the third roll threw a seven, which meant the house lost.

"Three rolls and it was all over with," said Binion.

Brown looking for record contract

NEW YORK (AP) — Oscar Brown Jr. began performing at age 15 as a radio actor. He's since written musicals, directed and produced. But he's best known as a fine jazz singer, lyricist and composer.

He's had a few jazz hits, notably "Work Song" (his lyrics, Nat Adderly's music) and "Dat Dere," in which, using a Bobby Timmons tune, he sings of a child's curiosity about the world around him.

He's singing this week at a club here, the Grand Finale. Reviews and business are good. And soon, he'll be on public TV, hosting "From Jumpstreet," a 13-part series on the history of black music.

Things are cooking. All should be well in his world. But no, he says he's "a little discouraged" by something — the fact he's not currently under contract to a record label.

He doesn't know why. It may be music moguls don't think he's commercial enough. But Brown, who's cut 10 albums, some now collector's items, isn't waiting for them to call.

He's thinking of taping his songs, sending the tapes to people he knows with the idea they'll make copies to send to their friends, who in turn will do likewise.

Radical, yes, but he's not doing it for money. He just wants his stuff heard. He realizes that somewhere along the pike some sharpie may make copies, sell them, and pay him not cent one.

He doesn't care. "I'm not trying to sell it," says Brown, 53, a tall, lean Chicago native whose songs have been recorded by the likes of Diana Ross, Lena Horne and Mahalia Jackson.

"You can't pirate (make unauthorized copies) what I'm giving away...I want my stuff pirated. I'd be better off if I had a million pirated tapes out there than I am having nothing out."

"At least I'll build the audience and hopefully develop a familiarity with my music."

The sound of frustration. Oddly enough, you don't hear any of that in his 14-song club act, which is on the upbeat side, what they'd call a celebration of life.

Amour plays a large part in his music, too, whether he's holding forth on lechery in his rollicking "A Ladies Man" or playing a creaky old codger who wistfully sings, "What Was That We Used to Do?"

Unlike many vocalists, he acts while singing, becomes the character of the song at hand. He took this tack after drama studies with Frank Silvera, "a marvelous character actor I met in Hollywood," and a Swedish director friend, Dan Lipschutz.

"Dan was very helpful in showing me the sort of European approach to singing," he said. He defines the approach thusly: "I simply enact a song."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, September 27, 1980

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mixing business with pleasure is a realistic possibility, but do not depend on promises made over lunch or at a cocktail party. Someone who means well has a very short memory. Travel is under favorable auspices.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Draw on the instincts of a trusted friend if hoping to move in a better direction. Needless worries and suspicions will only complicate life. Soft-pedal any strong political views when talking with new acquaintances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be careful not to be drawn into a dispute between two family members. Some ideas discussed casually today will be useful at work next week. Pay more attention to the needs of loved ones. An older relative may be feeling neglected.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do what you can to assist an old and loyal friend. There may be some conflict with mate, romantic partner over weekend plans. Be fair and a compromise may be reached sooner than expected. Love looks lively tonight!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): People are inclined to gossip very freely today. Try to escape to a quiet spot. Someone may press you to reveal where your loyalties, affections lie. The romantic picture is cloudy. Refuse to be drawn into a familiar argument.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be required to go beyond the call of duty because of a family emergency. Keep quiet about a troubling domestic situation and happiness will eventually return on the home front. Work behind the scenes for best results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your faith in someone's good intentions will be restored by an act of kindness today. Make this a day of celebration for loved ones. Include children in any afternoon social plans. An older relative may make an interesting revelation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Continue community endeavors. Your stock in the rise with those who really count. Worries about finances could prove unnecessary. Write a long overdue letter. A former associate's advice could prove very helpful now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to calm a loved one who worries too much. Browsing in small stores can be very enjoyable. Go ahead and splurge a little on an item of clothing. You will want to look your best when attending a major social event.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be working too hard lately and need a change. An inclination to be temperamental can upset some social plans. Try to recover your sense of humor! Something a younger person says is too funny to be really upsetting.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do a favor for someone who is under the weather or confined to home. Personal finances show signs of improvement. Consider new investment opportunities. Individuals with negative attitudes are best avoided.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try not to tackle more household tasks or home repair work than you can comfortably handle. A loved one may be temporarily out of reach and unable to offer assistance. Go slow where a new friendship is concerned.

Today's hand may be the bargain of the year, for it illustrates two themes without the need to purchase a second newspaper. It is an object lesson in defensive play and logic all wrapped up in one tidy bundle.

The auction was textbook. North had a minimum opening bid and South's jump to two no trump showed a balanced hand of 13-15 points. With a balanced minimum, North had no desire to rebid his five-card spade suit, so he correctly raised to the no trump game.

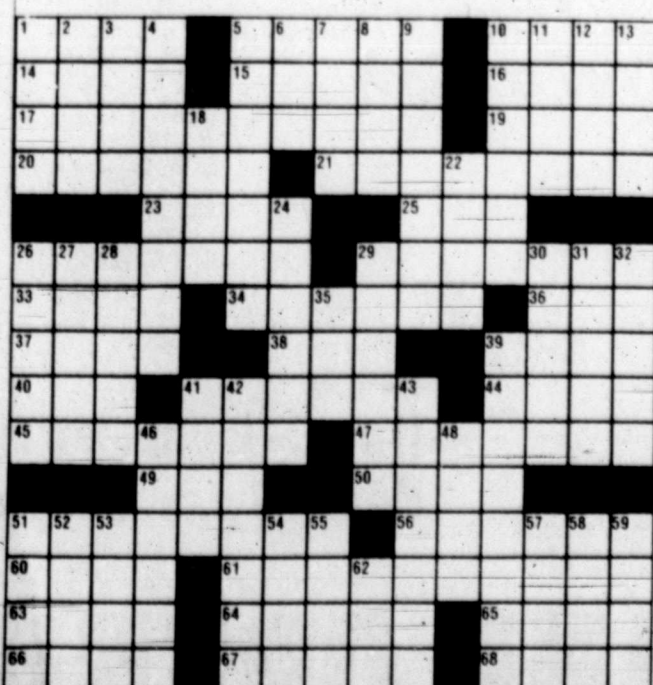

West's opening lead is the technical lesson. The lead of the ace against a no trump contract carries a very precise message to partner. It says: "Partner, please play your highest card to this trick." You hope partner will unblock an honor, but if he cannot, he is supposed to show the number of cards he has in the suit by echoing with an even number or by playing his lowest card with an odd number.

Arkansas firm wins lease fight

By The Associated Press

Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. has won a court battle with Texas Oil and Gas Corp. over $1-an-acre oil and gas leases on 33,000 acres at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Federal Judge Joyce Green ruled in Washington on Thursday that Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus had acted within his authority when he cancelled the oil and gas leases awarded to the Texas firm last year without competitive bidding.

Arkla had filed lawsuits to block the leases to Texas Oil and Gas, which with three other companies has planned to build a new interstate gas pipeline through the Arkoma Basin in eastern Oklahoma and western and central Arkansas.

Arkla has been fighting the proposed pipeline. Andrus contended in a trial that began in July that the awarding of the $1-an-acre leases on the Fort Chaffee land was an "administrative error" and that he had the power and the duty to correct mistakes by his department.

Appeals from Judge Green's court go directly to the U.S. Supreme Court. There was no immediate word whether Texas Oil and Gas planned to appeal the ruling.

Arkla President Sheffield Nelson said late Thursday

he was "ecstatic" about the judge's ruling. He predicted that competitive bidding on the leases will result in $150 or more an acre in revenues for the federal government, which currently is using Fort Chaffee to house Cuban refugees. Arkla is expected to be a bidder.

Nelson praised Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., for his help in the Fort Chaffee lease dispute.

Bumpers forced the issue to a hearing before a Senate subcommittee where he insisted it was incorrect to award leases on land surrounded by producing gas wells without taking competitive bids.

Competitive bids had not been required by the Interior Department because the Fort Chaffee land — although surrounded by producing wells — is not classified as a "known geological (oil and gas producing) structure."

Texas Oil and Gas charged that Andrus had been subjected to improper political pressure because of a letter urging cancellation of the leases. The letter was from Bumpers and Sens. Russell Long and Bennett Johnston, both D-La.

However, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and House Majority Leader Jim Wright, both D-Texas, were among members who lobbied Andrus on behalf of Texas Oil and Gas.

Frost Belt energy aid moderated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move to give a bigger share of low income energy assistance to the Frost Belt at the expense of Texas and other Sun Belt states has been moderated, says Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

The Texas Democrat said Thursday that a compromise formula adopted by a Senate committee would direct $57.4 million in Energy Assistance Act funds to the state during the next fiscal year.

A formula adopted by the House would distribute $38 million to Texas, he said.

The bill goes next from the Senate Appropriations Committee to the Senate floor, probably before the congressional recess begins next week.

The House and Senate bills then would have to be reconciled.

Bentsen said if the formula in existing law were not changed Texas would receive about $60 million next year.

He said the formula has a clear bias to send more money to the North for help with heating bills, despite last summer's fatal evidence that heat can be a health hazard as well.

"I am continuing to fight in the Senate to eliminate all traces of regional bias in the Energy Assistance Act, but I am pleased that we were able to persuade the Senate Appropriations Committee to beat back efforts to worsen an already bad regional bias in this program," Bentsen said in a statement.

Synthetic fuels hits snag

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's new synthetic fuels program has run into a temporary roadblock on Capitol Hill: election-year politics.

The Senate confirmation process of a board to oversee the government's multi-billion dollar Synthetic Fuels Corp. became embroiled Thursday in a dispute over the number of directors President Carter should appoint before the Nov. 4 election.

The quasi-governmental firm, created earlier this year, has been given authority for up to $88 billion in loan and price guarantees for the development of alternative fuels in an effort to help end U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

Democrats on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee pushed through a recommendation that the Senate confirm Carter's nomination of Deputy Energy Secretary John Sawhill to serve in the full-time position of chairman of the corporation's seven-member board.

At the same time, they approved five nominees to the part-time positions of board directors.

Voting along party lines, the committee rejected a Republican proposal, endorsed by GOP presidential nominee Ronald Blonde 'Woolly Bears' sign of moderate winter

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Herb Krone says his "Woolly Bears" are "blonde as Dolly Parton" these days and that means the winter of 1980-81 will be "moderate," although there will be a rash of extremely cold and unseasonably warm spells.

Krone, longtime weather prophet and retired newsman, made the prediction recently with the help of the fuzzy autumn caterpillars.

At age 85, Krone still communicates with the caterpillars in spite of a stroke which paralyzed his left side two years ago.

Krone inspected their hairy hides for tell-tale colors he says are clues to forthcoming weather.

According to folklore, the darker the caterpillar's coat, the better chance for a bitter and miserable winter. Variations in shading and color are the nuances which the forecaster learns over years of experience.

Krone has been applying the skill, originally learned from a Pennsylvania Dutch grandmother in York County, for more than half a century.

"This time," Krone reported, "the Woolly Bears were all as blonde as Dolly Parton and Marilyn Monroe. However, some were brassy blondes. This led me to believe that the weather would be moderate, rather than downright mild."

Krone says that he sees "spasms" of weather over the winter period which will include sudden shifts from extreme cold spells to unseasonably warm temperatures and back again.

"This next winter," he predicted with a solemn surety, "will have some of the most puzzling weather conditions seen in over a century."

Did the caterpillars give any indication of what kind of Christmas weather was on tap?

Krone says as near as he can tell, there could be a "very light dusting of snow — nothing measurable — during the holiday week," and that a short warm spell could "sneak in" around the first of the year.

"I feel we can expect a fairly early autumn," he said, "and that spring will come a little early, too. Spring will probably sneak in during the later part of March with an unexpected, but more than welcome, warm spell."

Hearst acquires drug center assets

NEW YORK — The Hearst Corporation has acquired certain assets of the National Drug Data Center from the Health Systems Institute of Burlingame, Calif., it was announced today by Gordon L. Jones, vice president of Hearst Books/Business Publishing Group.

"Our new addition will be part of the American Druggist Division and has been renamed the American Druggist Blue Book Data Center," Jones said. "The activity will continue to be headed by Joseph Hirschman and will remain in the San Francisco Bay Area."

The Data Center provides computerized information on drug products and Hearst intends to expand into other areas of providing data to the health care industry. "We initially will be concentrating on rapidly changing health related information required for decision making," Jones added.

Database information for the Data Center is furnished to state Medicaid agencies, private health insurance companies, federal agencies, chain drug stores, hospitals, service bureaus and pharmacy computer system vendors. The database contains product information on over 50,000 prescription drugs and 12,000 over-the-counter drugs.

In addition, the Center also provides prescription label warnings and unique drug-drug interaction software packages for pharmacy computer systems.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

I can do anything that I want to do

I can do anything I want to if Christ has not said no, but some of these things aren't good for me. Even if I am allowed to do them, I'll refuse to if I think they might get such a grip on me that I can't easily stop when I want to.

For instance, take the matter of eating. God has given us an appetite for food and stomachs to digest it. But that doesn't mean we should eat more than we need. Don't think of eating as important, because some day God will do away with both stomachs and food. But sexual sin is never right; our bodies were not made for that, but for the Lord, and the Lord wants to fill our bodies with Himself.

And God is going to raise our bodies from the dead by His power just as He raised up the Lord Jesus Christ.

Don't you realize that your bodies are actually parts and members of Christ? So should I take part of Christ and join Him to a prostitute? Never!

And don't you know that if a man joins himself to a prostitute she becomes a part of him and he becomes a part of her? For God tells us in the Scripture that in His sight the two become one person.

But if you give yourself to the Lord, you and Christ are joined together as one person.

That is why I say to run from sex sin. No other sin affects the body as this one does. When you sin this sin it is against your own body.

Haven't you yet learned that your body is the home of the Holy Spirit God gave you, and that He lives within you? Your own body does not belong to you.

For God has bought you with a great price. So use every part of your body to give glory back to God, because He owns it.

catching on in Brazil

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Automobiles that run on pure alcohol are beginning to catch on in Brazil — especially since gasoline went up to $2.61 a gallon and alcohol remained at $1.24.

Taxi driver Joao Paulo Goncalves wheels a new alcoholic Volkswagen Beetle around Sao Paulo, Brazil's biggest and most car-congested city.

"It's great. No problems," he said. "I don't get the same mileage, but alcohol is so much cheaper, it's worth it."

Goncalves gets 16.5 miles to the gallon with alcohol and used to get 20 with gasoline in his old taxi.

A new alcohol VW Beetle costs the equivalent of $3,640 — just 3 percent more than the gasoline version. It is almost exactly the same as the gas-burning model, except that the engine and the fuel system have been treated to withstand the higher corrosiveness of alcohol.

Brazil is turning to alcohol as an alternative to gasoline because of the cost of importing petroleum — $10.5 billion this year. It also is studying the possibility of using vegetable oil as a substitute for diesel fuel.

Adapting engines to run on the pure alcohol is not difficult, and sales of pure alcohol cars are taking off, leaving a trail of would-be buyers behind on month-long waiting lists.

This country, with a population of 123 million in an area slightly larger than the continental United States, decided to exploit its tropical climate to grow petroleum substitutes. Already one of the world's top sugar producers, it opted to distill alcohol from sugar cane to use as fuel.

This year Brazil will produce 1 billion gallons of alcohol. In 1985, when total investment in the program will reach $6 billion, it aims to make 2.8 billion gallons.

Although some of the alcohol is used by the chemical industry, most of it is burned as fuel, and in 1985 there should be enough to run 6 million cars for a year. Brazil now has 8 million cars.

The first step in adapting to alcohol was to make widely available a mixture of 20 percent alcohol and 80 percent gasoline — "gasohol," which is being produced on a much lower scale in the United States. Any car can run on gasohol after minor tuning changes.

The next step was to build cars with engines that can run on pure alcohol.

Running cars on pure alcohol presents two problems: Alcohol has to be available at service stations, and auto-makers, after developing the necessary but relatively simple technology, have to produce the alcohol cars.

Out of a total of nearly 20,000 service stations in Brazil, 1,200 now have at least one pure alcohol pump, according to the national automakers association. By year's end, the association added, 3,000 stations will be pumping alcohol. These stations are clustered in different areas of the country, such as the state of Sao Paulo, where it is now possible to take a weekend trip in an alcohol car with just a little planning.

As for the cars themselves, the automakers — subsidiaries of Volkswagen, General Motors, Ford, and Fiat — started selling alcohol cars to the general public earlier this year. At first people were lukewarm, wondering if there really would be enough alcohol and how the cars themselves would hold up.

Taxi drivers, most of whom operate their own vehicles, were the first to buy alcohol cars. The government's increase in the gasoline prices to $2.61 a gallon seemed to convince them.

To further encourage the purchase of "alcohol cars," the government has slashed the federal annual re-licensing tax on non-petroleum cars and has facilitated credit buying for them. It also allows them to fill up on Saturdays, when gasoline pumps must remain idle.

After initial doubts dissipated, alcohol car sales in Brazil took off in early August.

The automakers' association reported that in August 21,705 alcohol cars were made, bringing the nationwide total to 71,967. The association's president, Mario Garnero, said in an interview, "We will produce 200,000, maybe 220,000 alcohol cars by the end of the year."

He predicted Brazil's million-vehicle-a-year auto industry, the seventh largest in the world, will convert 45 percent of its production to alcohol by the end of 1981.

Army brings order to troubled town

GULTEPE, Turkey (AP) — The army has "retaken" this suburb of slums in the hills outside Istanbul, whitewashing political slogans from the walls and establishing the state's presence after months of effective control by leftist extremists.

One of half a dozen towns in a belt around Turkey's biggest city that the far-left called "liberated zones," Gultepe will provide a test of the junta's ability to deal with political terrorism in the long term.

By day, the soldiers who moved in here after the Sept. 12 coup patrol the pot-holed main street in pairs carrying NATO-issue M-14 rifles. At midnight, when the nationwide curfew takes effect, Gultepe is sealed off by tanks.

But stamping out the violence in a town that has seen 50 deaths in the past two years may take some time. Despite the heavy military presence, residents say they have heard the crack of rifle fire at night, presumably by snipers.

"In guerrilla warfare, guerrillas retreat into the mountains. Here it's the side-streets," said a 21-year-old medical student pointing to the maze of narrow, dirt roads between the grimy, concrete, two-story buildings. He asked that his name not be used.

Gulpepe, which means Rose Hill in Turkish, is only a half-hour's drive from downtown Istanbul but provides a stunning contrast to the stately mosques, museums and mansions in the former capital of the Ottoman Empire.

In the past 10 years Gulpepe's population has swelled to 150,000 with the migration of rural Turks seeking jobs in the nearby light-bulb, textile and cable factories.

About two years ago, according to residents, right-wing and left-wing terrorist groups moved in to try to politicize the workers. They battled openly in a series of hit-and-run shootings in coffee-houses, bombings and sniper attacks on homes.

Most residents, without any political leanings, stood by helplessly. The terrorists were often better armed than the police.

The left, led by the Dev-Sol, Turkey's most feared leftist terrorist gang, prevailed. Municipal authority broke down.

"I used to see the Dev-Sol sitting in front of a coffee-house. Nobody challenged them," said Kazim Mutlu, 46, who moved here with his three children from Sinop on the Black Sea and opened a tiny grocery shop.

"They came to me twice a month and demanded protection money. I paid."

The mayor was a member of former Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit's left-of-center Republican Peoples Party, but residents alleged the mayor tolerated the extremists.

The Dev-Sol set up neighborhood committees to satisfy demands for basic services such as water, electricity and transport and promised protection against any right-wing terrorist attacks. They also provided legal advisers to intervene on behalf of residents in cases against the state, and tried to block the appointment of non-leftist school teachers.

Since the coup, there have been scores of arrests here, reportedly including the local Dev-Sol leaders. Mayor Celal Altinay was ousted.

As elsewhere in Turkey, the calm has brought people back on the streets again in the evening. Stores which used to close at dusk are now staying open until 10 p.m. in some cases.

The army sent squads of youths into the streets to whitewash over the political graffiti, although one can still see posters put up on a telephone booth declaring political martyrdom for three leftists who were hanged in 1972 after the previous military intervention, the last executions in Turkey.

Home celebrates 85th anniversary

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Methodist Home for Unwed Mothers — founded in 1895 by a former prostitute — has placed babies with 8,000 adoptive parents during its history.

This weekend, the home celebrates the 85th anniversary of its founding.

Originally located in the red light district of San Antonio, the rescue mission home was begun when Madam Volino, head of a house of prostitution, was "converted to the Christian faith and opened her house for religious services and many of the girls who worked there confessed their sins and embraced the Christian way," according to the United Methodist News Service.

"From this rescue mission emerged the idea of the Methodist-sponsored mission home," a spokesman said. "During the 85 years the home has placed for adoption in Christian homes in Texas and New Mexico more than 4,450 babies."

In 1979, the home 200 women and placed 125 babies for adoption. Officials said that contraception, abortion and more social acceptance of out-of-wedlock pregnancies has decreased the demand for the home's services.

Today the home has a second ministry, an educational program for deaf and hearing-impaired adults, located on the same campus.

COULD YOU USE $8100 TO FURTHER YOUR EDUCATION?

With tuition costs at colleges and vocational/technical schools at an all-time high, many high school graduates are finding themselves able to meet admission standards, but unable to afford the tuition.

The Navy wants all qualified candidates to achieve the goal of higher education. And we can help, through a dramatic new program called the Veterans Educational Assistance Plan.

Under this plan, Navy men and women can save from $50 to $75 each month, and their savings will be matched 2 for 1! If you save $2700 over a three year period, the Government will match this with $5400 - for a combined saving of $8100!

Get all the facts. Just call your nearest Navy recruiter. He can tell you how to get ahead in the Navy. And how easy it is to save $8100.
