CP&L rate hearing to reconvene

Following a meeting of the Texas Municipal League in Refugio Wednesday night, June 16, Rockport's city council will reconvene a public hearing on a proposed Central Power & Light rate increase during the city's June 28 council session.

Rockport City Administrator Herman Johnson represented the city at Wednesday's TML meeting in which the company retained by TML to study the CP&L rate request recommended that a much-reduced rate increase be granted to the utility company.

The six-part recommendation by Touche Ross and Company was as follows:

CP&L would be allowed annual revenue requirements of $72,862,000. This is a little less than half of the $156,020,642 being asked by CP&L and represents an approximate increase to consumers of 22.67 percent in base rates and 8.72 percent in total revenue. The CP&L request would result in a 48.54 percent increase in base rates and 18.68 percent in total revenues.

The rates would not go into effect until after July 29.

The rate design would be proposed by CP&L so the residential consumer would bear the least proportionate burden of the request.

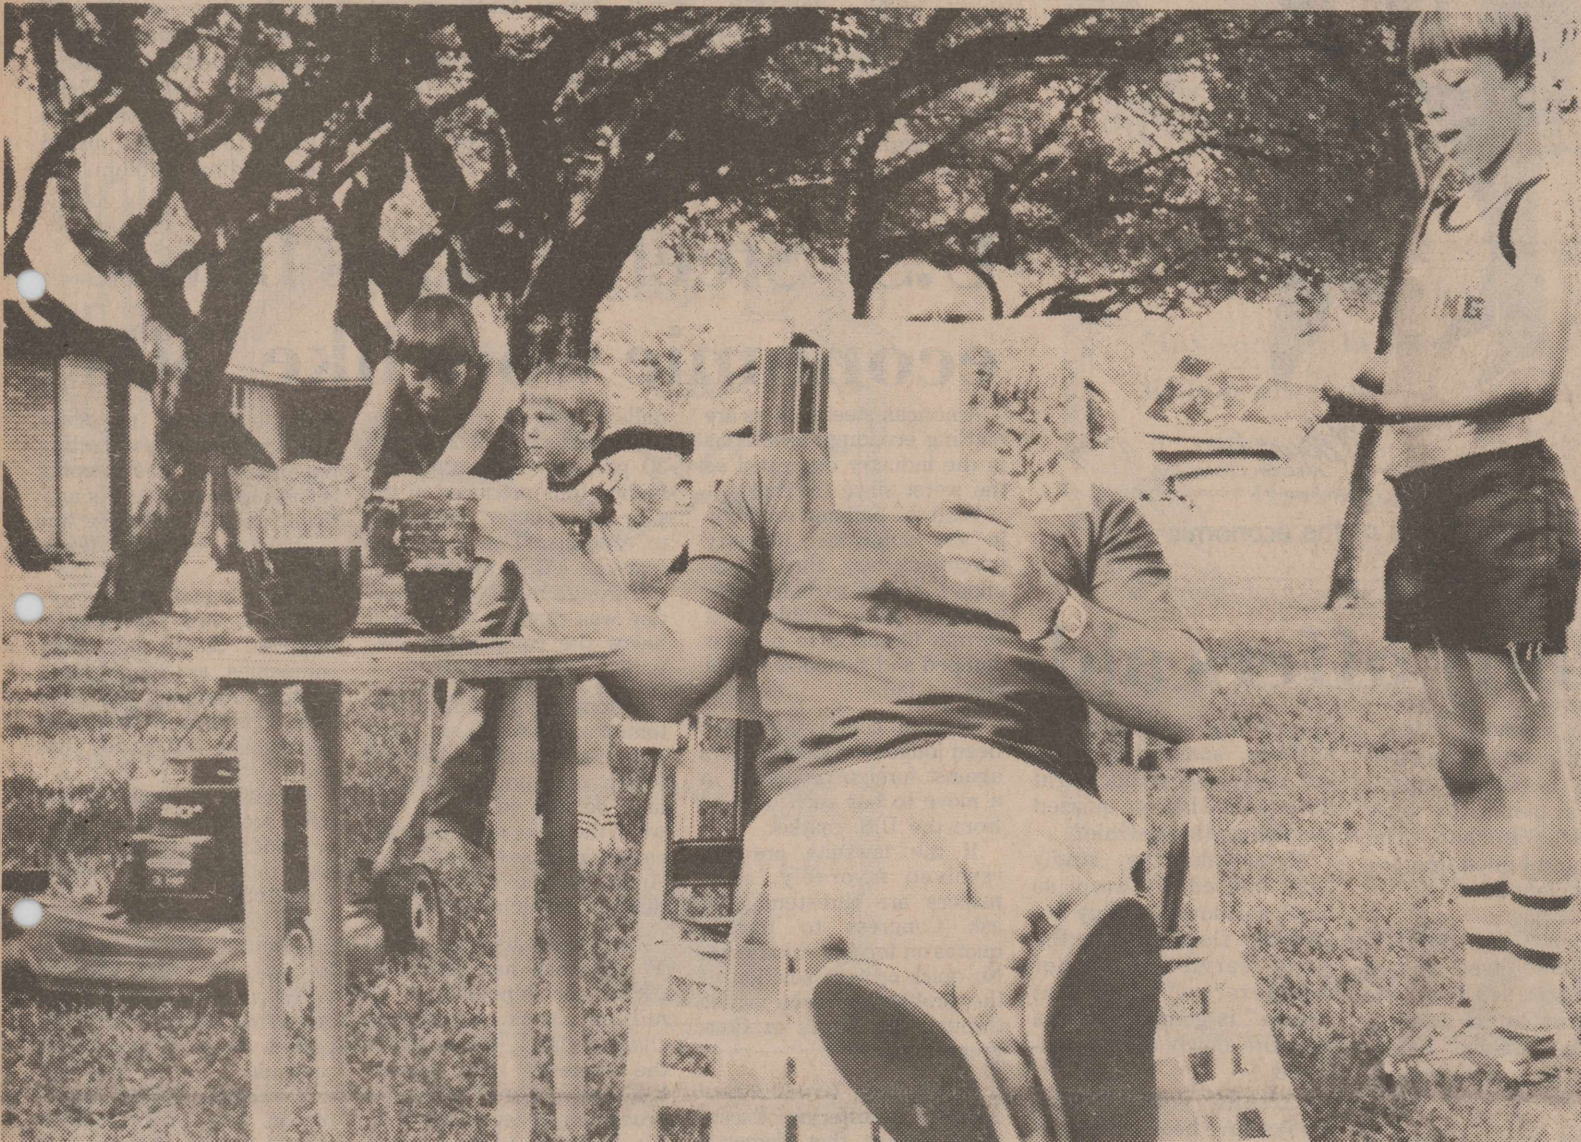

The four percent municipal franchise fees would not be surcharged but would be allocated on a system-wide basis.

An amount recovered from the controversial South Texas Project through litigation would be passed on to the ratepayers after costs of the litigation are deducted.

CP&L would be allowed to recover 60 percent of its Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) through the rate increase instead of 100 percent of the CWIP as the company requested.

The TML steering committee on the rate increase and its executive committee recommended that cities in the League reconvene their recessed public hearings and pass an ordinance or resolution adopting the Touche Ross recommendations.

The Public Utility Commission will hold its final hearing July 29 on the CP&L rate increase request. If no decision is made at that time, CP&L may put the rate increase in effect by putting up a bond covering the additional revenues.

Ed Armstrong first charter candidate

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

Ed Armstrong, who was on the 1979 Rockport charter commission, became the first person to file as a candidate for the second city charter commission that officials hope will be elected on Aug. 14.

A two-part ballot will be presented to resident Rockport voters on that date, with citizens asked first to vote yes or no on the question, "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a new charter?" If the answer to that question is "yes," the voter is then asked to cast his or her ballot for 15 candidates to serve as a charter commission and draft the document.

City officials emphasize that any person who wants to vote in favor of a city charter for Rockport must mark an answer to that first question. "If this first question doesn't pass," says City Administrator Herman Johnson, "the rest of the ballot doesn't matter."

Filing is open now at City Hall for candidates to serve on the charter commission if the charter proposal is adopted. In order to qualify as a candidate for the commission, a person must be a resident of Rockport for at least six months preceding the 31st day before the election, must be a U.S. citizen and registered voter at least 30 days prior to the election and must not have been convicted of a felony.

Deadline for filing is July 14.

The charter election date was set in last Monday's, June 14, city council session after officials received a report from the home rule steering committee that Rockport's population has been determined to exceed 6,000. A minimum of 5,000 is sufficient for a city to adopt a charter.

City officials want a charter for Rockport so that the city's government will have more control over its own affairs. "The state dictates to you what you do now," says Rockport Mayor Burt Mills referring to Rockport's current status as a general law city.

A general law city operates under general law statutes under the Texas Legislature, Johnson elaborated, adding the same statutes apply to all general law cities "whether they have a population of 500 or 5,000 (or 6,000), a budget of $100,000 or $2 million."

"A home rule city (which Rockport would become with adoption of a city charter) writes its own charter — which is basically a constitution," Johnson said. "Within that charter, you will abide by state statutes, but not the same statutes that govern a general law city."

A charter gives a city more options in running its own affairs, Johnson and Mills [See First, page 12]

Phillip Hewett new ACISD band director

By BECKY WERHAN
Staff writer

The recent resignation of high school band director Roland Zapata led Band Boosters, represented by president Clouis Fisher, to appear at the county school board meeting on Monday, June 14 with a request "for some positive thinking when the new director is hired."

Apparently the board had already exercised some positive thinking prior to the Booster's appearance, since a new, highly qualified band director, Phillip Hewett, was hired during the executive session later that night. The actual vote on his hiring was accomplished in the board's open session following their executive meeting.

In Fisher's statement, concern was

3 charged with illegal shrimping

Charges of shrimping in closed waters were filed against three persons Thursday morning, June 17, in the Aransas County Clerk's office, County Courthouse.

Named in the charges were Hubert G. Halmark, cited for a May 26 offense; Romano Vidovich, for a June 8 offense; and Eddie O. Freeze for a June 13 offense.

Charges were on file shortly after 11 a.m. against the three. Conviction on the charges carries a fine between $2,500 and $5,000, according to Dave Selstrom with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's law enforcement division.

expressed as to whether the new director would be able to take the band to band camp in Arlington this summer. The Boosters had already made a deposit on the camp and were concerned with possible loss of money.

According to Joe Randow, Superintendent of Schools, Hewett had been informed of the camp and will be taking the band to Arlington.

Randow, a former band director, became enthusiastic in his description of Hewett, saying, "We are lucky to have a man of this caliber." Hewett's credentials include several high school sweepstakes bands, extensive clinician experience in schools and colleges all over the country, director of the honor band at the Tri-State Oklahoma Festival and 14 years directing the Kansas State University Marching Band, which for the last two years has been voted the outstanding marching band in the Big Eight conference. Hewett has also directed the Dallas Cowboy Band, has been musical director of many beauty pageants and an active member of the Ft. Worth symphony. He will take the high school band to camp this year.

Four other new employees were contracted by the board Monday. They are Sharon Richter, Cheryl J. Pena and Bess L. Smith, all former employees of the school district, and Bradley D. Jett, a new teacher to the district, replacing junior high school coach Alan Hildebrand.

Besides Hildebrand's, other resignations accepted by the board Monday night were those from Roland Zapata, Judy Seaberry, Gloria Zapata, Philip Stovall, Alex Bindas, Anabel Hoyt and Vernon Denman.

The deadline for submitting resignations was June 1 and according to the administration office spokesman, 26 resignations were submitted to the board at the

'Dubbs' was cited, not charged

FULTON — A headline on the June 16 Rockport Pilot front page that said "Civil charges filed on shrimper" was incorrect. It should have said "Civil citations filed on shrimper."

Coast Guard Chief Vega in Port Aransas, who boarded the 38-foot boat on Wednesday, June 9, said the citations are technically for violations — which are a civil matter — rather than charges, which refer to criminal offense. A Coast Guard spokesman had been quoted in the June 16 Pilot story as saying the citations issued against the boat, owned by Lou LeBlanc, "are all civil charges carrying civil penalties."

Originally five citations were issued against the shrimper, "Dubbs." Chief Vega said one of the citations, for failure to have lifejackets on board, was subsequently dropped.

"All the others stand," he said Thursday morning, June 17. Violations cited were failure to have the signed-on master aboard, no air in the tank to blow the boat's horn, no bell on board and only one fire extinguisher on board instead of the two required for a boat the "Dubbs" length.

Chief Vega said the Coast Guard "conducts a lot of law enforcement patrols" of boats that dock in Port Aransas, "looking for illegal shrimpers and smugglers."

According to LeBlanc, "There were three fire extinguishers on board Dubbs but the crew refused to show the Coast Guard where they were."

LeBlanc contacted the Pilot Thursday morning and said, "No charges have been filed."

Delimma at city pound

Dogs must be adopted or they'll be destroyed

"Someone could get themselves a good, healthy dog," says Rockport Animal Control Officer Doug Wilcox — "or several good, healthy dogs will have to be destroyed."

That's the delimma being faced at Rockport's city pound right now where the dog runs are overcrowded — and nowhere to take the overflow.

"I called the Gulf Coast Human Society," Wilcox said. "They can't take the dogs either. They don't have space."

The current population includes 10 dogs, one of which is a cowdog with six puppies about 11 days old. "She'd be a bargain for someone," Wilcox said, "since whoever adopts her will get the puppies for free."

In addition to the cowdog and pups, Wilcox said, there are also some mixed terriers and a couple of Labrador retrievers or lab-mix that would make good dogs for someone.

The main thing, he emphasized, is that he wants to find homes for these dogs.

"If I can't find homes for them, I have to destroy them," he said. "I don't want to do that. They're good dogs."

U.S.S.R. economy gets the squeeze

Despite an embarrassing incident involving a U.S. vote on a U.N. Security Council resolution, President Reagan won a compromise with major U.S. allies to put the squeeze on Russia's economy by reducing export credits.

This would severely hamper Soviet trade with the West as far as the nation's purchase of advanced technological goods is concerned. The new policy would not affect profitable commercial ventures between Western nations and the Soviet Union. Nor would Soviet grain purchases be curtailed.

President Reagan was one of seven heads of state attending a two-day economic summit conference in Versailles, France, aimed at developing common strategy to beat inflation and put the seven nations' economies on the road to recovery.

In return for the hard-won compromise to close the "open door" policy of trade with the Soviet Union, President Reagan pledged efforts to reduce what the allies termed "unacceptably high" U.S. interest rates and to become more involved with solving economic problems of emerging Third World nations.

The communications breakdown that embarrassed Reagan came hours before the opening of the summit sessions when U.N. Ambassador Jean Kirkpatrick voted with Britain to veto a Falkland war ceasefire resolution in the Security Council.

Then, when she received new instructions from Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Ambassador Kirkpatrick announced — too late — the U.S. would have preferred to abstain. Had it not been for the sensitive atmosphere pervading the economic summit, the mixed signal incident might have been corrected in time to avoid embarrassment to the President, who was unprepared for questions about the U.N. vote while having lunch with the other six summit leaders.

Although he didn't get everything he sought at the conference, President Reagan emerged a winner, according to diplomats and foreign affairs analysts. He managed to salvage most of his proposals after an uneasy start when it appeared the U.S. could not hope to win trade restrictions against the Soviets.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan summed up the summit:

"There was a lot of give and take. The major U.S. victory was the provision in the final communique to pursue a prudent and diversified economic approach to the USSR and Eastern Europe, consistent with our political and security interests."

"We have agreed to handle cautiously financial relations with the USSR and other East European countries in such a way as to ensure they are conducted on a sound economic basis, including also the need for commercial prudence in limiting exports."

"This will limit the amount of credit to them (Soviets). How to define limit will be left up to the experts. In other words, it's not an open door anymore. It's not an open book."

It is expected that the new trade agreement among the world's most highly industrialized nations will help strengthen President Reagan's hand when he meets with Russian leaders later this month to talk about arms control.

The Rockport Pilot has always opposed exporting of technological goods to the Soviet Union, which doubtless has contributed to the rapid buildup of sophisticated military weapons that now threaten the West.

'Counting down to the beginning of the economic turnaround'

Charming lady offers aid

IT WAS EARLY AFTERNOON when the sloop "April" secured at the Marina in Adams Bayou, near Orange. A pleasant sun-tanned lady greeted us. She knew we were coming because the crew aboard "Courageous", another South Texas boat, had told her about us.

"Did we need stores, anything in town, any place we needed to go?" I took it upon myself to thank her because from an earlier trip I knew there was a grocery within half a mile. She replied by telling us that she could take us to a supermarket where we could find "everything," and besides,

"the 'Courageous' people were already there and she had promised to pick them up." We suddenly discovered that besides groceries someone wouldn't mind finding a bank, the post office, a grog shop. The Skipper and I piled into her rather ancient car.

Charming lady. She and her husband lived aboard their 40 foot sail boat. He had a job in Orange and was acquiring a stake before heading for more tropical climes.

Despite being a town of less than 30,000, Orange must have the heaviest early afternoon traffic of any town I have ever visited. I was reminded of a drive through the Holland Tunnel into New York many years ago. Cars were so bumper to bumper I am sure that had my engine failed I'd simply been carried along by the other vehicles without any one being aware of the circumstances. Never mind the traffic.

We quickly learned that before getting to the grocery we were to have a tour of the town. "Must give 'Courageous' time to finish shopping," our friend said.

Orange is attractive and can claim its share of Texas history. And the lady knew it all, despite having been there for only six months. In truth I am certain that she knows more about the place than the majority of even the older residents. People are that way.

Even today I am confident that I can tell you more about New York or Baltimore than most natives. But don't ask me about Washington D.C. I grew up within 50 miles of the capital and there is no counting the numbers of times I have been there, but I have seen and visited very little of it.

Something I could do anytime, sometime. Wonder what our friend might have replied had we quizzed her about Akron, Ohio?

Meanwhile the kindly lady refused to even so much as allow us to buy her gasoline. Does she offer the same service to other voyagers? If so, that "stake" is going to build a bit more slowly than anticipated.

"THERE ARE WARS, always have been wars, and there always shall be wars." The quotation is from the Book of Revelations, according to a distaff neighbor. If my wording is not correct it doesn't much matter since the King James version of the Holy Writ has been so shamefully fouled up by recent modernists.

In any case the words have been brought to mind by the antics of the anti-nuclear people. Needless to note, I am opposed to wars as anyone. Never has there been a war that made any sense, never a war that accomplished any real good. Yet none of this denies that there are wars that have had to be fought. Perhaps that last sentence should be in bold print.

My objective in these observations is to point out that however well intentioned the anti-nuclear people may be they are either badly informed or misinformed — or both. More important, they do more to destroy peace and encourage aggressive nations than they know. Unluckily that is a thought that doesn't occur to them, one they would never acknowledge.

I can join them in only one thought, wishing that the world's destructive weapons extant had never come into existence.

Legislature's action has served notice on courts

Gov. Bill Clements and the Texas Legislature deserve commendation for quick handling of important legislation in the five-day special session.

Almost from the beginning of the session, members of both houses buckled down and came up with reasonable solutions to at least two pressing problems: prison reform and state college construction funding.

Under federal court mandate to relieve crowded conditions in state prisons, the Legislature approved an appropriation of $55.5 million to finance an expansion program, leaving details to the Texas Board of Corrections and other officials.

Texas Department of Corrections Director W.J. Estelle had urged legislation to approve $85 million he said was needed to finance the first step in a $1 billion plan to add 26,000 cells by the end of 1985.

Although funds approved by the Legislature will soon become available, this will not solve the immediate problem of overcrowding at every unit in the prison system.

Not only are state prison facilities overcrowded, but most county jails face a similar dilemma.

Tackling the college construction program, the Legislature quickly eliminated a fund for that purpose and voted to give 17 state schools $151.5 million for buildings.

The special session was called by Gov. Clements to repeal the state property tax, a constitutionally mandated levy that had provided money for buildings at state colleges that do not share in the Permanent University Fund. This fund pays for construction at most Universities of Texas and Texas A&M system colleges.

Gov. Clements asked the Legislature to give the 17 colleges that had relied on the property tax as "Catch-up" fund to complete current construction projects and make repairs.

The property tax has not been collected since 1979, when the Legislature reduced it to a .001 percentage assessment ratio. Midwestern State University sued the state to collect the tax, contending the Legislature's action lacked legal basis.

Gov. Clements responded by calling the special session to repeal the tax. Prison overcrowding and other items were added to the session agenda after it started.

There was criticism in some quarters, especially by the governor's political enemies, that the state property tax did not exist and therefore it was a waste of time and money to call a special session to repeal it.

The Legislature's quick action stopped the litigation and served notice on the federal courts that the state is trying to solve the prison overcrowding problem.

U.S. Steel makers battle economic woes like '30s

American steel makers are battling economic conditions in the industry described as the worst since the 1930s.

With the national economy in the doldrums, industry executives say they favor import quotas to help solve some of their problems if current litigation to prevent dumped and subsidized steel imports fail.

Federal court suits have been lodged by steel makers against foreign producers in a move to bar such imports from the U.S. market.

If the lawsuits are not resolved favorably, steel makers are threatening to ask Congress to impose quotas on foreign shipments. No quick or easy solution to the problem is seen either through the courts or Congress.

Meanwhile, domestic steel industry is suffering. Executives project that domestic shipments this year will plunge to the 70-78 million ton level from 87.01 million tons shipped in 1981.

U.S. mills poured 23 million tons of steel in the first quarter of 1982, nearly 30 percent below the 32.4 million tons produced in the year ago quarter, according to American Iron and Steel Institute (AISI) figures.

Through mid-May production was running 33 percent below the comparable 1981 period, AISI reported.

"Hopefully, we have bottomed out and will see some improvement in the third and fourth quarters of 1982 as auto dealers sell more cars when the federal tax package comes into play," said D.S. Arnot, executive vice president of Bethlehem Steel.

U.S. Steel Chairman David M. Roderick has estimated 1982 steel shipments at 78 million tons. Roderick charged nearly a quarter of the domestic steel market has been captured by foreign producers because the U.S. "is forced to trade in what amounts to a rigged ballgame."

Foreign governments, through direct and indirect subsidies, "have used their steel industries to solve social problems by exporting unemployment and keeping their employment levels artificially high even if there was no market demand," Roderick said.

Roderick and William J. Williams, vice president of Republic Steel, said their companies are considering lodging dumping or duty suits on additional producers and against additional countries.

Because of imports and other problems, little growth is predicted in the American steel industry by its leaders until 1983.

The Rockport Pilot hopes the industry will be successful in its fight against excessive imports. We are not being realistic when we permit situations like that to continue.

"We cannot think of a good reason why import quotas should not be imposed, not only on steel but other goods, when it becomes evident such shipments are detrimental to the welfare of American industry."

Shock probation is unjustified and unwise

So-called "shock probation" is a legal gimmick whereby judges may give some defendants the shock of a jail term but release them if they appear to be rehabilitated.

Rehabilitation of criminals is not something that happens overnight in most cases. It is usually thought of in terms of years instead of days, weeks or months.

Shock probation has been used to some extent in nearby Harris County. One of the most publicized cases in recent years involved a district judge sentenced on a bribery charge and released after a few weeks.

The theory behind this kind of probation is that justice could be better served if some first-time criminals were jolted into full realization of what they had done by putting them in prison. Then if it was decided to free them on shock probation, the probability they would commit another crime was considered remote. This kind of probation, of course, could be considered legal guesswork since Harris County has not had enough experience with it to determine whether the practice is productive.

Most judges are reluctant to grant shock probation because of public criticism. Since most judges are subject to election, only a few are brave enough to risk unpopular experiments.

There was another notable shock probation case not long ago when a state district judge released a former security guard sentenced to prison for indecency with a child.

The abuse incident took place at a day-care service operated by a Houston man and his wife, who were both convicted of molesting young children and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

State District Judge

Patricia Lykos granted shock probation to John Tholen, 30, convicted of indecency with an eight-year-old girl, but refused to release Tholen's wife.

The mother of children abused by Tholen and his wife cried when told of the shock probation. "I can't see how anyone could let a person who has done something like that out of prison in such a short time," she cried.

Judge Lykos ordered Tholen not to contact the abused children or anyone from their family. She ordered him to stay on intensive probation for the remainder of his 10-year sentence and report to his probation officer more than the average probationer.

The Rockport Pilot strongly disagrees that shock probation, especially in cases such as described above, is justifiable — or wise.

Ice cream trucks are a good place to get together

We really did hate to read a newspaper story that city leaders in South Charleston, W. Va., have begun a cold war that threatens to drive ice cream operators out of town.

The operators contend over-regulation by the city will put the trucks out of business and end an institution symbolic of summer and childhood.

Whoa, say officials of industrial South Charleston on the Kanawha River, those musical, colorful ice cream wagons are more than a nostalgic American tradition — they're a hazard.

The city council has proposed an ordinance that would require ice cream truck drivers to install flashing warning lights, pull over to the curb and shut down their music while selling ice cream, and get off streets by sundown.

The trucks "are coming down after dark, they're coming one after the other, they're parking in the street and they're blocking traffic," said a councilman who proposed the ordinance after receiving about 15 complaints.

There were also complaints from shift workers that ice cream operators were playing loud music at night keeping them awake.

Here's the other side: The owner of several ice cream trucks says his business has been off because of bad publicity about the trucks and if they're regulated it will mean more than just the loss of ice cream.

"You know, ice cream trucks are an American institution...it's a time when the whole neighborhood gets together."

ON THIS DAY: June 17, is the tenth anniversary of the Watergate break-in. June 18, 1977 was the first manned piggyback test flight of Enterprise. Lou Gehrig was born on June 19, 1903.

An idea for reducing the cost of the next summit meeting

Editor's note: The Live Oak Peninsula Philosopher on his grassy farm takes a sidelong glance at the recent summit meeting.

Dear editor: According to the best estimates, it cost $12 million to fly President Reagan and his 300 advisers, guards, helicopters, bullet-proof cars, 800 telephones, etc. to the summit meeting in France, put them up in hotels at $125 apiece per room, and then get everybody back home.

What it cost the other six nations is hard to guess, but say we put down Japan for a million, Canada for about the same, along with England, West Germany and Italy.

That comes to $17 million, not counting the cost of thousands of policemen and soldiers needed to protect the leaders. Probably the whole thing cost at least $20 million.

As I understand it, the seven leaders passed four resolutions, mostly deploring a worldwide economic situation nobody had an answer to.

That comes to $5 million per resolution. Now I don't know when or if another summit meeting is scheduled, but if one develops I'd like to contract to put the thing on for one-fifth the current cost. We've simply got to bring the cost of resolutions down.

For $5 million, payable in advance since all the countries are operating on borrowed money and their credit may be a little risky, I'll arrange a summit meeting that doesn't need a single bullet-proof car. Not over half a dozen policemen will be needed, or hotel rooms or helicopters. I'll guarantee not a single heckler or protest marcher will be on hand, and all seven leaders can get to bed on time every night.

All I'd do is hire a ship, park it in mid-ocean, and tell the leaders to show up. Probably wouldn't cost each one more than a few thousand dollars. I'd like to see some heckler try to get there in a row boat.

Of course there'd be television cameras on board, or otherwise who'd show up?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The youngest son of famed crooner Bing Crosby can't sing, can't act and doesn't smoke a pipe — but he's a real chip off the old block on the golf course. Nathaniel Crosby, 20, is one of the hottest young golfers on the amateur circuit.

Last September, he captured the prestigious U.S. Amateur Championship in his hometown of San Francisco while wearing a medallion his famous father won on the links years ago. "The thing that gave Dad the greatest satisfaction in the world was playing 18 holes of golf, going to a bar, sitting down at the piano and singing for the people," says Nathaniel. "To him, that was greater than all the standing ovations he re-

Although he has no interest in following in Bing's celebrated footsteps, Nathaniel is acutely aware that success is taken for granted in the Crosby family. His mother Kathryn is a successful actress in her own right, and his 22-year-old sister Mary shot to overnight stardom as sexy, scheming Kristin Shepard on the TV series Dallas. "I had to win the tournament, because I come from a successful family," he says. "My father was successful, my mother was successful, my sister shot J.R. — I just had to win it."

We've been hearing for ages that George Steinbrenner is fed up with the Yankees, that he wants to sell, that he'd love to buy a hockey team and operate it out of the Meadowlands, and so on. Now the latest, supposedly authoritative, rumor is that George wants to buy a National Football League franchise, namely that of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, and to the devil with everything else.

Makes sense on one level: George lives much of the year in Tampa Bay.

The New York Yankees' Dave Collins may be vacillating, temporarily, in his request to be traded, although the former Cincinnati Reds' outfielder still isn't playing as much as he'd like. "I'm kind of in a wait-and-see situation," said Collins, who signed a multiyear, $750,000 annual contract before the season. "The biggest disappointment to me is that I haven't played up to my capabilities, and starting to get on top of my game now."

Collins has been sitting most of the season, behind Dave Winfield. "Yankees vice president Bill Bergesch has said to me that he'll make a deal when everybody gets healthy, if I still want one. We'll wait and see what happens," Collins said.

Ferragamo, who rejected a three-year $750,000 offer from the Rams to take a $2.5 million contract from the Montreal Alouettes a year ago, may return with just $1,578.40 for his Canadian experience. Ferragamo received $450,000 for the first year of his Montreal contract and paid $129,693.60 in Canadian federal and Quebec provincial income taxes.

In addition, his former agent, Paul Caruson is suing the quarterback for $50,000 in legal fees and Ferragamo is being billed $50,000 for legal fees by another agent. Early this year, Revenue Canada rejected Ferragamo's claim of corporation status — "Big Vinnie Inc." — and assessed him an additional $218,728 in taxes, including interest and penalties.

Golfer Tom Watson says American courses are all right for the tournament player, but he wouldn't want to play them if he was just a weekend golfer. "American golf courses give the high-ball hitter too much of an advantage," Watson said. "Too many bunkers and hazards block direct approach to the greens."

A golfer should never be penalized for hitting the ball straight, but that happens a lot on courses in this country."

After being out of work for more than a year, former professional basketball star Rick Barry is hoping to return to broadcasting. "I love being in front of the camera or being behind the microphone," Barry said. "I can't wait to get back into it." Whether he will get the opportunity or not is debatable. Barry was bounced as a CBS analyst after he made his now infamous "watermelon grin" remark during an NBA telecast while working with Bill Russell. His verbal error came after CBS directors decided to surprise Russell by showing black-and-white photographs of him with the U.S. Olympic team in 1956. "I am not a racist and it's unfortunate that such a big to-do was made of it," Barry said. "The remark was just...that the man's smile was a watermelon smile to me, with total disregard to the man's color."

Commission seeking comments

AUSTIN — In an effort to further reduce losses of waterfowl to lead poisoning, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has established an expanded nontoxic shot zone for the 1982-83 waterfowl hunting seasons, and now is asking for comments on a proposal for an additional expansion for the 1983-84 seasons.

During the upcoming fishing

COPANO CAUSEWAY PIER — Fishing has been very good at the pier and was exceptionally good Thursday evening with lots of nice speckled trout being landed. The fish were biting on both live bait and worm near the bait stand and one this week and has been landing some nice stringers

KLEINES'S RATTLE SNAKE POINT — With the water temperatures rising some of the big fish have left the area but some trout, lots of school trout, a few flounder and some nice butterfly drum are being caught. Not to much action with the sailfishing now but still a few around. Plenty of fresh dead bait is available, 729-2892.

COPANO CAUSEWAY PIER — Fishing has been very good at the pier and was exceptionally good Thursday evening with lots of nice speckled trout being landed. The fish were biting on both live bait and worm puzzlers. Live and dead bait of all kinds is available for the weekend, 729-8633.

SEA GUN MARINA — Lots of trout and school trout being caught, six boats were out Thursday and it looks like the boats will be booked up over the weekend. Plenty of live bait available, 729-2341.

PALM HARBOR — Fishing has been very good all week but it was exceptionally good Thursday and Thursday evening. Lots of nice size reds and trout being caught. Some of the reds going to three pounds. Plenty of live bait for the weekend, 729-8540.

FULTON HARBOR BAIT — Things are really good in this area, night fishing off the pier is just fantastic. One angler landed about five nice trout off the wall near the bait stand and one of the fish weighed in at three pounds. Little red are being caught just as fast as you wet the hook but not many keepers. Plenty of live bait of all kinds available for the weekend, 729-5881.

SANDOLLAR — Lots of flounder and nice trout were being caught off the pier. Joe Williams has been trying his luck for most of this week and he has been landing some nice stringers of fish every day. Fishing from the seawall is running hot and cold. Plenty of live bait is available for the weekend, 729-8562.

1982-83 seasons, the zones will include all or portions of seven Southeast Texas counties, plus portions of five mid-coast counties near Corpus Christi. For 1983-84, the zones are proposed to be combined into a single coastwide zone which also will include much of the coastal prairies west of Houston (see map).

Within nontoxic shot zones, hunters are prohibited from possessing lead-loaded shot shells while hunting waterfowl. Studies have shown that waterfowl pick up and ingest spend lead shot while feeding. Biologists believe this is a significant factor in waterfowl mortality.

The proposed zone would comprise an area which is responsible for an estimated 48 percent of the duck harvest and 92 percent of the geos harvest annually in the geos.

Establishment of nontoxic zone boundaries is based on research by Parks and Wildlife Department biologists who have examined gizzards of thousands of ducks and geese taken by hunters in Texas. Using this data, they have been able to identify areas where the highest incidence of lead ingestion occurs.

Biologist Charles Stutzenbaker of Port Arthur said steel-loaded shot shells were available in sufficient quantities during the past waterfowl seasons in Southeast Texas, and he added that arms manufacturers have indicated they will be able to furnish shells for the expanded zones.

He also said hunters are beginning to overcome doubts about the effectiveness of steel shot shells. "Arms manufacturers have made some tremendous technological strides in the past few years in the design of steel loads," Stutzenbaker said. "Extensive field tests have shown the new loads are comparable in efficiency to lead loads, and they will not damage modern shotguns. An improved shot cup design contains the shot until it leaves the barrel, keeping it from contacting metal to metal," he said.

He added that by shopping prudently well before the season opens hunters can find steel loads which are only about $2 per box above the price of premium lead loaded shells.

Comments on the proposal to expand the 1983-84 zones may be submitted to William C. Brownlee, Migratory Game Program Director, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744, (512) 479-4973.

TP&W offers awards

AUSTIN — If you catch a big fish in Texas, you may be eligible for a "Big Fish Award" from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Department officials said many anglers apparently are unaware of the program. Records show that at least eight largemouth bass over 12 pounds have been caught from Texas lakes, but only three of the anglers applied for the big fish certificates.

"Both the fisherman and the department benefit from this program," noted Inland Fisheries Branch Director Ernest Simmons. "It gives recognition to the angler and helps the department monitor the progress of its fishery programs."

Simmons said minimum weight requirements have been established for the various species. For instance, the minimum requirement for largemouth bass is eight pounds, striped bass is 15 pounds and channel catfish 12 pounds. Five saltwater species also are included. Qualifying fish must be caught on hook and line in Texas waters, measured for total length and weighed on an inspected scale certified by the Texas Department of Agriculture. The statement of weight must be signed by a witness.

Application forms for the awards are available from department offices across the state and at some fishing license outlets. The forms also may be obtained by writing the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744, or by calling toll-free 1-800-792-1112.

COLLEGE STATION — An updated version of "Hurricanes on the Texas Coast," a 48-page book published by the Texas A&M University Sea Grant College Program, is available for the 1982 hurricane season. The book is distributed free to coastal residents or anyone interested in hurricanes.

Designed to help coastal residents understand, prepare for and recover from the effects of hurricanes, the book describes Texas' most notable storms of the past 20 years, including Carla, Beulah, Celia, Claudette and Allen. Probability of hurricane occurrence, guidelines for individual responsibility, checklists to help residents plan for safety and action taken by governmental and civilian agencies before/during/after a hurricane are discussed.

A companion brochure, "Hurricane Warning!", is written in story form for children and includes a checklist of do's and don'ts when a storm threatens.

Both publications can be ordered from the Marine Information Service, Sea Grant College Program, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

Glasscock speaks at area meeting

"I spend as much time telling people what a land commissioner does as I do running for office," Woodrow (Woody) Glasscock, Republican candidate for the Texas Land Commission, said during a meeting at Live Oak Center in Rockport Thursday morning.

Glasscock was in Rockport to address a meeting of the Aransas County Republican organization at 10 a.m. The meeting was open to the public.

"If you walk down the street and ask 50 people, 'What's a land commissioner?' 49 won't know we have one," Glasscock said.

But, he continued, the land commissioner is responsible for managing some 22.5 million acres of state-owned property in Texas, including state beaches, oil and gas leases, riverbottom land as well as other land throughout the state.

These state-owned lands generate a little over $7.5 million per year in revenue, Glasscock said, and this money is primarily channeled into two funds — the permanent school fund which is currently at about $3.5 billion, and the permanent university fund which is about $1.5 billion.

"These two funds together are the largest endowment fund in the world," Glasscock said.

As to "what the land commissioner does," Glasscock said — "It's what I do for a living."

A native of San Antonio and mayor of Hondo for six years until he resigned to begin his campaign for the Texas land commission, Glasscock said he is a third generation farmer and rancher.

In addition, he said, he has been involved in residential and commercial construction, retail lumber and hardware, has handled rental properties and is organizer and has served as director of the Community National Bank of Hondo.

He feels his background qualifies him to serve on the land commission. Glasscock will go up against Democrat Garry Mauro in the November general elections.

Healthful hints

By Jean Glowka

Q. My mother who is 68 reads your column regularly and takes what you say much more seriously than what I say! I'd like to see her taking a calcium supplement and have mentioned it to her several times. Could you say something about the importance of calcium for older people?

A. Getting enough calcium is an important consideration at any age. Because 99 percent of the body's calcium is in its 206 bones and 32 teeth, there's 238 good reasons right there for making sure we get enough of it.

It is surprising to note that statistics show at age 65, about 45 percent of the people in the United States have lost all their teeth. Almost 100 percent of the people over age 45 exhibit periodontal disease.

These figures are pretty startling, yet many people as they get older reduce their intake of calcium-rich foods, such as milk and other dairy products. Therefore, taking a good calcium supplement makes a lot of sense, particularly for older persons.

Q. Can a zinc deficiency be a factor in retarded growth in children?

A. Yes. Researchers have correlated lower height and weight in zinc-deficient groups of children in the U.S.A. The same groups of children also showed a Vitamin A deficiency.

Please send questions to: Jean Glowka, Rt. 1, Box 437, Rockport, Tx. 78382.

Happiness Is...

There's a great satisfaction in surf-fishing at sunset. Why?

Is it because happiness is the serenity of the evening hours or is it because happiness is serenity?

Our moods as well as our interests determine what happiness is for each of us. And our emotions, our longings, our appreciation of nature—all play a part.

What we believe makes a difference, too. There are countless individuals for whom happiness is faith. And there are others who lack this spiritual ingredient and they wonder why they aren't happy.

A scene like this gains new dimensions when you think of the sea as God's creation... and of man as God's child.

Summer — a time to rest after spending some time in the heat of a summer day.

Summer — a time when many think about vacations and getting away from it all. Summer — a time when children are home from school and we hear the sounds of their laughter and play (and sometimes sounds we don't like to hear). Summer — a time when God still calls us to rest in Him.

Jesus reminded the people of His day: God did not create man for the Sabbath, but the Sabbath for man.

What about your summer worship? Do we take a vacation from God or do we take it with God? A few thoughts about worship may be appropriate. Worship is an act of faith — a statement of our dependence on God. When we fail to worship God the Bible tells us that we will begin to worship the things that we create or our own selves.

Worship is an act of sacrifice. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that you present your bodies as a living sacrifice...which is your spiritual worship." (Romans 12:1).

Worship is what we bring to our relationship in Christ. It is not an escape from life, but a living of it in Christ. Worship is directed toward God with an attitude of praise and response. Therefore, "going to church," is not just going to get something, but to give of ourselves.

Worship is always done by community. The Bible speaks to the community. As one Church Father said, Tertullian (who died about 220 A.D.), "A Christian in isolation is no Christian."

God called us to be His holy people (1 Peter 2) and in our baptism He placed us into His family. To maintain our identity we gather to remind each other who we are and whose we are.

Worship is therefore a witness. Families and individuals who get dressed on Sunday morning and leave to go to church are giving public testimony to their neighbors of their values. Cars in a church parking lot are a public testimony. But in worship we also witness to each other. We may believe we don't need to worship, but our presence is needed for others.

Which is a reminder that we have family responsibilities. Members of the family are aware of the needs of others rather than just their own. Worship moves us away from self to God and others. Thus we worship together the God who first loved us.

Summer — a time to worship.

The Youngs and friend

Youngs and friend conduct revival here

Assisted by their friend "Tommy," the husband-wife team of Jerry and Peggy Young will lead special revival services at the Calvary Baptist Church, 123 S. Doughty, beginning Sunday, June 20.

Services will be at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. for the remainder of the week.

The Youngs have served in more than 400 churches with their evangelism which incorporates Gospel music arrangements and ventriloquism programs with "Tommy, the children's friend."

Services are open to the public.

Peace Lutheran Church announces dates for VBS

Vacation Bible School will begin at Peace Lutheran Church Monday, June 28, and continue through Friday, July 2.

Theme for this year is "The Lord is My Shepherd" and the week-long program includes singing, Bible study, arts and crafts for children ages three through 12 years.

Registration, open for all children in those age groups, will start at 8:45 a.m. on June 28. Vacation Bible School classes will be from 9 a.m. until 11:30 daily.

Schoenstatt 'Walk to Lamar' set for July 9-10

On July 9 and 10 a group of South Texas boys will walk 43 miles in a "Walk to Lamar" walk-a-thon.

The walk-a-thon, which will involve between 30 and 40 members of the Schoenstatt Boys' Movement, will cover a course between Corpus Christi and the Lamar community near Rockport. The walk-a-thon will begin at 5 a.m. on Friday, July 9, when the group leaves from their starting point at 2309 Marguerite Street. The course will cross the Corpus Christi Harbor Bridge and then continue to Aransas Pass where the boys will spend the night. The final stretch will be completed the following day when the group walks from Aransas Pass to the Schoenstatt Shrine in Lamar.

Refreshments will be provided along the way by friends and family of the boys although the group is still working out the details of meals along the route.

The walk, which will involve boys of ages 10 through 18, is an annual tradition dating back to 1970 in the Schoenstatt Boys' Movement.

Specialization is our business
Jerre Bardin

"Service from a creative point of view." These are the words Jerre Bardin uses to describe what etc. specialty services has to offer.

From interior remodeling to pier and dock work to specialty lattice trim work to landscaping and of course, lots of etceteras, etc. specialty services - a company comprised of Bardin and his family, has handled it. They've handled it creatively and efficiently, leaving customers who wanted specialized, quality service completely satisfied.

"We handle every job individually, one job at a time," says Bardin, who is on every job site himself. "But I want all I can handle of customers who want and allow me to create a construction, rather than just build it. The beauty of it, and giving those people something that's uniquely theirs, is far more important to me than just building. I'm convinced there's people in town who appreciate that."

The specialty service company is "the culmination of a lifetime dream for din. After a successful career in accounting that had him traveling cross-country constantly, Bardin was "frustrated." He got out of the grind, came to Rockport and began "to do what I wanted to do," he says.

Working for Wagley Lumber Company, Bardin eventually became general manager of the organization. Having garnered an extensive knowledge of the building business and adding it to his own capabilities as a builder and seasoned accountant, Bardin began etc.

Bardin performs specialty service. Routine painting jobs, routine plumbing jobs, routine roofing jobs, et al, Bardin refers to local tradesmen he knows and trusts. "That's part of my service to the customer," he states. "That's taking care of his total needs. There may be me and a roofer and a plumber all at one house, and we're all working together. The job is totally accomplished in a time frame agreed on earlier."

At the outset of each job, Bardin prepares a proposal. This paper is a total outline of the job to be performed, estimated cost and the time involved in finishing the job. "The customer knows exactly what I'm going to do before I step foot on the site," says the specialty contractor. "He knows beforehand what I'm doing for how long and for how much money."

Working on jobs with Bardin are his sons Andy and Shawn. "We get down and do the dirty work. We really work. It's a total family effort," emphasizes Bardin. Working hard at home, where Bardin has his office and shop, is Nema, his wife. She types proposals, answers the phone and makes business contacts and inquiries. Also at home are the Bardin's two younger children, Chad and nine-month old Laney. "People who live in Rockport come here because they want to - it's where they want to be. That's why I'm here too," says Bardin. "I am living where I want to be and doing what I want to do. This is my life."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

The Coastal Bend Council of Governments has completed a study entitled "A Wetlands Nutrient Absorption Study for the City of Rockport, Aransas County, Texas." The study was authorized for funding with a seventy-five percent grant by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in July 1980 under Section 208 of Public Law 95-217, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1977. The City of Rockport committed local funds for twenty-five percent of the project cost. Most of the work within this study was performed by consultants under contract with the Coastal Bend Council of Governments (CBCOG). The CBCOG is the designated areawide water quality planning agency for this area and is responsible for conducting such studies. This study of wastewater discharge and rainfall runoff impacts on Little Bay in Aransas County was identified as a potential project in the earlier wastewater management plan for the area.

Citizen participation is encouraged in the review and formulation of plans and studies. In this respect and in conformance with the Federal Public Participation Regulations, a public meeting will be conducted on July 19, 1982, at 7:30 p.m. in the Rockport City Hall, Council Chambers, 319 North Broadway, Rockport, Texas. This public meeting will be conducted to receive comment on the draft report entitled

"A Wetlands Nutrient Absorption Study for the City of Rockport, Aransas County, Texas. Any comments received will be taken into consideration before the final report is submitted to the Environmental Protection Agency. Individuals and/or organizations are encouraged to attend this meeting to learn about the study and its findings and to offer comment. You may contact the Council of Governments, 2910 Leopard Street, Corpus Christi, Texas 78408, or telephone (512) 883-5743 if you wish additional information. Copies of the draft report are available for review at the CBCOG office during normal business hours. Copies are also available at Rockport City Hall, 319 North Broadway, Rockport, Texas and the Aransas County Public Library, Aransas County Courthouse, Rockport, Texas.

Fulton zoning committee to meet Tuesday

FULTON — The committee appointed to draft a zoning ordinance for the city of Fulton will hold its second meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 22, in Fulton City Hall.

Subcommittee chairmen named in the committee's first meeting on June 9 are expected to present preliminary drafts of various sections of the proposed ordinance which will establish zoning classifications and districts for Fulton. Also to be covered in the zoning ordinance are such matters as off-street parking requirements, minimum lot areas and widths, yard size and building height regulations.

The committee, chaired by Charles Belaire of Fulton, has set July 7 as target date for legal review of the ordinance with public review and adoption tentatively looked for before the end of August.

Members at the June 9 meeting expressed a desire for haste in adopting a zoning ordinance so city officials will have some control over developments now pending on Fulton Beach Road.

All meetings of the committee are open to the public, Belaire emphasized at the June 9 session, and residents of Fulton are being encouraged to attend and express their views on the proposed ordinance.

The zoning committee was appointed by Fulton's city council at its meeting on June 8.

Howard is June 'Artist of Month'

Helen Howard is the Artist of the Month for June at First National Bank.

The bank exhibit of Howard's work highlights some of her favorite subject matters — flowers. The large watercolors of flowers — "they're portraits of flowers, actually," says the artist — are a Howard specialty. "I just love painting flowers and people," she says, though her subjects vary widely.

She does oil portraits on commission and can be contacted about such work through the Estelle Stair gallery.

Howard will have a booth at the upcoming Rockport Art Festival in July 3 and 4. In addition to Rockport sales, her work has sold in California.

She and her husband Dwight moved to Rockport some two and a half years ago. A native Texan, the artist is originally from Victoria.

Water patrol begins

Rockport's water safety patrol program got under way in May with 21 warnings issued and eight assists given to vessels, according to a report presented to the city council by Police Chief Joe Hinojosa Monday.

Six warnings were issued to boaters for going in the wrong direction and five to water skiers without an observer in the boat, Hinojosa said. Four warnings were issued to sailing vessels in the Ski Basin.

Other warnings were issued for speeding in a "no wake" area, three; swimmers in the Ski Basin, two; and one no life jacket.

Boat Patrol Officer John Robert Parker assisted seven disabled vessels and one vessel that had run aground during the month. The life guard was called once during the month in reference to a possible body in the water but the call was unfounded, according to the report, and there was one report, also unfounded, of a speed boat in Little Bay harassing sailboats.

said — and the charter, unlike the general law statutes, can be amended by the city as it grows and changes.

As one example, Johnson said, under general law, a city's government is restricted to four council members and a mayor who has no vote except as needed to break a tie on the council.

A home rule city sets up its own government which may have as many as six council members and a mayor who may or may not have the authority to vote, who may be elected directly by the people or may be elected by the council from among its own members.

"There are four different types of governments that can be set up under home rule," Johnson said, listing strong mayor, weak mayor, a commissioners' type of body and a council-manager form of government. throughout Texas, Johnson added, only 39 cities that have home rule have a strong mayor form of government and only three have a commissioners government.

Referring to fears that contributed to the defeat of Rockport's first city charter proposal in 1979-80, Mills declared, "Taxes won't go up because the city adopts a charter and we won't start annexing everything."

"We're not interested in raising taxes or annexing more land unless we can take care of it," Mills continued.

Under state law, a home rule city is allowed to annex up to 10 percent of its acreage each year — but the city must provide all available city services to that area within two years or the area can be disannexed.

"Annexation is not as lucrative as you may think," Mills pointed out.

But, he added, one advantage the annexation power would give Rockport is the opportunity to "square off" its city limit lines.

A general law city cannot annex land unless the property owner requests that annexation — which has resulted, Johnson said, "in an erratic city limit line" with tracts of land outside the city that are surrounded, or almost surrounded, by city land.

"There are only two police officers that know exactly what's in and what's out of the city," Mills said, pointing up one of the problems that come with the city's odd-shaped boundaries.

Mills and Johnson emphasized that if voters approve the charter question and elect a charter commission in August, the document the commission drafts must come again before city voters for their decision on whether it will be adopted.

And, Johnson said, a copy of the proposed charter would be mailed to every voter in Rockport prior to such an election. He and Mills pointed out all meetings of the charter commission while they work on the charter would be open to the public.

"We hope to have speakers at various clubs prior to the Aug. 14 election," Johnson said, to explain to as many Rockport residents as possible what home rule would mean for the city. "We'll arrange a speaker for any organization that wants one," he added.

Environment course is registering now

COLLEGE STATION — June 30 is the registration deadline for those interested in Special Topics in the Natural Environment, a three-week graduate course scheduled July 9-29. The course (EDCI 689H) is offered through the Texas A&M University Department of Educational Curriculum and Instruction.

Intended for those who want to learn more about field trips, the course includes beach work, cave and cavern observation, insect collecting, fossil collecting, hunting for insectivorous plants, and walking on sphagnum bogs and through salt marshes.

Classwork begins July 9 at the Texas A&M campus, followed by 12 days in the field. The field trip extends from Sonora Caverns in Del Rio to Marble Falls, Saratoga, Sabine Pass and Galveston.

The course offers three semester hours of graduate credit; fees, which include food, transportation and lodging, are $280. Application forms and additional details are available from Dr. John Hunt.

Burglars take furniture from storage

Nearly $1,100 in furniture and lawn care items were taken when a storage room in Rockport was burglarized between Tuesday, June 15, and Wednesday, June 16.

The incident was reported by Mrs. Kelly Murphy of Key Allegro. Police were told items taken included two night stands valued at $300, a dresser mirror at $250, table and chairs valued at $200, a $200 coffee table, an antique table valued at $50, shelf set valued at $60 and a "weed eater" valued at $30.

and placed under $500 bond after his car allegedly went through a stop sign, struck a fence and came to rest in a ditch on North Street at Bronte last Saturday, June 12.

Pena was also ticketed for failure to furnish proof of liability insurance.

A simple assault charge was filed against Raymond E. James following an incident in a parking lot on South Austin about 7:45 p.m. Tuesday. A personal recognizance bond of $106 was set.

Theft of services was reported at a Rockport Motel and a service station in separate incidents this past week.

A Motel owner told police two men and their families rented a room then left owing a $138 bill.

And a service station attendant said an Anglo male and female had repair work done on their car for which they then said they could not pay. They left and the car was locked up but was subsequently reported missing.

In other action, police made one arrest on a warrant for outstanding fine, five arrests on charges of public intoxication and two other arrests on charges of DWI.

Pet talks

Room temperature best

By Dr. Hap Lutz

Dear Dr. Lutz,

In one of your previous Pet Talk articles, you wrote it is always advisable to feed a dog food at room temperature. We humans desire our food hot, cold or warm. Is there a reason to feed dogs at room temperature?

Signed,

Palm Harbor Canal Resident

Dear Canal Resident,

Most dog food manufacturers have conducted exhaustive experiments and tests on this subject. Their conclusions are food for dogs should be fed at room temperature because that is the optimum palatability for the canine species. More of the food was eaten without any digestive upsets.

Signed,

Dr. Hap Lutz
